Aquino Son Wounded In Bloody Coup Effort

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Troops loyal to President Corazon Aquino pounded mutineers with air strikes and mortar fire today in an attempt to quell the most serious coup attempt of her administration. Mrs. Aquino was safe, but her only son was wounded in the combat. The rebels, who numbered in the hundreds, had seized key military installations. By nightfall, loyalist forces had gained the upper hand in and around Manila, but the rebels were reported entrenching in Cebu City, the country's second largest metropolis. Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel Ramos fired the Cebu area constabulary commander, Brig. Gen. Edgardo Abenina, after hearing of his support for the mutiny. Military and hospital sources said at least 23 people were killed and 175 wounded, including Mrs. Aquino's son, in clashes that began about 1 a.m. when rebels led by a former aide of Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile launched attacks near the presidential palace, military garrisons and broadcast stations. The rebels, who called themselves

"idealistic young officers," seized a half dozen media and military facilities around Manila and a constabulary garrison in Pampanga province. Marines and elite scout rangers backed by air strikes by World War II vintage bombers stormed the armed forces general staff headquarters at Camp Aguinaldo in suburban Quezon City, which rebels had seized early in the day. The three-story armed forces general headquarters building was heavily damaged before the rebels withdrew to the eastern end of the sprawling camp. It was still burning by nightfall. Armed Forces spokesman Col. Honesto Isleta said six soldiers were killed and 39 troops and civilians were wounded in the assault on Camp Aguinaldo. There was no breakdown on rebel and government losses. Ramos said a total of 350 mutineers had been arrested and he expected 200 more to give up within a few hours. Ramos said troops set up roadblocks around the city to apprehend mutineers still at large. Hundreds of civilians gathered near the main gate of Camp

Aguinaldo and cheered pro-government troops as they launched their attack. Bursts of automatic gunfire sent them scampering. Explosions, either from misdirected mortars or air strikes, rocked streets in the area and sent huge chunks of concrete flying into the air. In Cebu City, 350 miles south of Manila, local reporters said most military commanders joined the mutiny. Garrisons flew the Philippine flag upside down, a sign of mutiny support, while troops disarmed private security guards and took over municipal buildings. Cebu City Mayor Jose Cuenco issued a statement saying the military had placed him under house arrest. In a nationally televised speech, Mrs. Aquino, facing the gravest crisis of her 18-month administration, said her 27-year-old son, Benigno III, was wounded and three companions were killed when they were caught up in the fighting while returning to the presidential residence. The dead included many other civilians caught in the crossfire, including two news photographers — a (See FILIPINO, A-11)

Audit Challenges Leave, Salaries

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The former director of the department of intramural and recreational services at East Carolina University received a formal letter of reprimand last year for making personal long distance telephone calls from university telephones and for taking three days off without charging the time to annual leave, according to a state audit report released this week. The report also took issue with the allocation of some salaries in the athletic department and the medical school, saying some coaches and some medical school employees were paid too much from state appropriated funds. Steven Cohen, who came to ECU as intramural-recreational director in August 1985, resigned at the end of the spring semester to accept a job at Wesleyan College in Rocky Mount.

The report said auditors "examined allegations" concerning the misuse of telephones and the failure to account for all leave taken after receiving a call through the state auditor's "Hot-Line." "The director began making personal long distance calls on Aug. 13, (See OFFICIAL, A-11)

Three Inmates Executed, Fourth Death Postponed

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer
Three convicted murderers, including Utah's "Hi-Fi killer," were executed today by electrocution or lethal injection, the first time since the Supreme Court ruled capital punishment legal in 1976 that three people were put to death in the U.S. on the same day. A fourth scheduled execution was stayed by the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta. Beauford White, 41, who stood guard while six people were shot to death in a robbery in a suburban Miami home, was pronounced dead at 7:11 a.m. EDT today at Florida State Prison near Starke. Earlier, Wayne Eugene Ritter, 33, died in Alabama's electric chair and Pierre Dale Selby was executed by lethal injection in Utah. Ritter had been convicted in the killing of a pawnbroker; Selby, 34, was convicted in the torture-murders of three people during a robbery at a stereo store. Serial killer Gerald Eugene Stano, 35, who has claimed responsibility for killing 41 women, had been scheduled for execution in Florida at 1 p.m. EDT, but received an indefinite stay.

Ritter, Selby and White became the 20th, 21st and 22nd inmates executed in the United States this year, passing the 21 put to death in 1984, the most since the landmark 1976 Supreme Court decision restoring capital punishment. The last multiple-execution day in the United States only last month, when there were two executions on July 8, one in Texas and one in Mississippi. The pace of executions worried Robyn Cassidy, director of the Florida Clearinghouse on Criminal Justice, an anti-death penalty group. She noted that new policies in Florida are speeding up the process and Gov. Bob Martinez is now signing death warrants three at a time. "I worry because what he's doing is flooding the courts and the defense attorneys. I don't feel the courts will give the cases the attention they need," she said. Wendy Nelson, president of the League of Victims and Empathizers, said today she believed the death penalty was the best punishment for the worst kinds of crimes when it was applied with regularity and dependability. "There can be no hope of deterrence with the kind of time delays we have now," said Ms. Nelson. The man who killed her 10-year-old daughter who was kidnapped and killed. At Point of the Mountain, Utah, about 150 death penalty opponents held lighted candles in silent protest as Selby was executed. Nearby, 50 supporters of capital punishment sang mock dirges. But in Florida, only eight opponents and one death penalty sup-

Council Delays Manager Choice

The Greenville City Council postponed today's expected decision on a new city manager so council members could meet with prospective candidate William Veeder's wife. "The council met with the wives of the first two candidates, and we just felt it would be only fair to meet with Mr. Veeder's wife before making a decision," Greenville Mayor Les Garner said in announcing the postponement of today's executive session. (See CITY, A-3)

City To Announce Selection Of New Manager Monday Morning

The council is scheduled to meet behind closed doors Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall, according to Garner, who has scheduled a news conference Monday at 9 a.m. in his office to announce the decision. Council members plan to meet with Jean Veeder some time over the weekend.

Veeder, a former Charlotte city manager, made a day-long visit to Greenville Thursday and was the last of the three remaining candidates to be interviewed by the council.

Gregory Knowles, city manager of Inkster, Mich., a Detroit suburb, visited the city Wednesday, while a third candidate, who has requested his name not be released for job security reasons, met with council members Tuesday.

During Thursday's visit, Veeder attended a luncheon at the Greenville Hilton where he met with community officials and leaders, including Pitt County Manager Kramer Jackson and D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County branch of the NAACP.

Veeder, who is senior vice president of Pension Plans Inc. in Charlotte, said he was anxious to return to local government management.

"It's not little old Greenville, it's growing Greenville and it's growing Pitt County," Veeder said in a news conference prior to the luncheon. "It's a growing Pitt County. It's a major community in eastern Carolina. It's got quite a lot going for it, and, quite frankly, I just miss local government."

The problems facing Greenville should be similar to ones in Charlotte, according to Veeder, who served as city manager in Charlotte from 1959 to 1970 after working in a similar capacity in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"It's same problems, different scale," he said. "Every city's got different problems, maybe some different priorities, but the issues are always there. The issues and problems here are basically ones that must be put in perspective by the mayor and council. It's up to the manager to figure out ways to follow through on those priorities."

Despite a 17-year absence from city government management, Veeder said he has been involved in some other government functions.

"I've been away from it for a good number of years now," Veeder said. "I haven't been away from government, but I've been away from city management. I'm involved a little bit on the state level in a variety of things, but I have been away from local government longer than I wanted to be."

Revenue problems should be handled systematically, according to Veeder, who has worked in local government for about 20 years, including over four years as city manager in Fort Lauderdale.

"I'm not sure the revenue crunch has been that significant in the context of Greenville, maybe it has, but I'm not aware of it, but it seems to me the tax rate has remained rather stable here," Veeder, 63, said. "I think probably some additional efficiencies in government have taken up some of the slack, and I'm impressed with some of the things I've seen that suggest that to me."

"But every city, including Greenville, is going to have continuing problems on revenue — that's nothing new. It needs to be addressed on a continuing basis there are no instant answers. You've just got to devise a plan and work the plan. Every thing isn't going to work, but you have to try some things to see if they are going to work, and then if it doesn't, you've got to go back and change."

In addition, Veeder said user fees seem to be the wave of the future.

"You're sure going to see a lot of use of user fees in cities around the nation, and I expect over the long haul Greenville will be no different," he said.

Meanwhile, Knowles, who has served as Inkster's chief executive since 1984, said at a new conference Wednesday he has the ability to find revenue sources.

"Every city is adversely affected by the federal Revenue Sharing loss," said Knowles, 40, a Virginia native and graduate of Virginia Tech. "A reason cities have people like me is I find money. In the 3½ years I've been at Inkster, we've never raised taxes."

"I've given everybody raises and found money somewhere else. I think that's what the city is looking. They're looking for somebody who can help find replacement for federal Revenue Sharing without going back to the taxpayers all the time."

Knowles, who has worked in city government for about 13 years, said Inkster, a city with a population between 35,000 and 38,000 people, is independent of neighboring Detroit.

"It is a suburb of Detroit, but it is an urban city," he said. "It is not a suburb in a sense of a bedroom community. We have our own industry, we are self-sufficient."

As part of his training in Michigan, Knowles said he participated in an unusual instructional program.

"I was put through a management training program that was fairly unique," Knowles said. "We spent 24 hours a week with every department in the city in addition to normal duties."

"I drove a tractor at a landfill, been on fires with firemen, made felony arrests with police officers, fixed water main breaks in February, thrown garbage in garbage trucks. I've done just about every job there is to do in a city. It helped prepare me to be a manager."

Knowles said he sought the Greenville city manager position for several reasons.

"I went to VPI and Virginia Tech is playing (East Carolina University) this October, that's one thing. I like the East Coast. I like the North Carolina, Virginia area. I have a lot of friends down here."

"I really like what I see here. This town has a lot. There's a lot of positive things that are just super. There's a couple of things that I see need attention."

The search for a new city manager began following the the March 16 dismissal of Gail Meeks. Both candidates said they were not concerned with the past situation.

"That's council prerogative," Knowles said. "All managers are basically at the pleasure of the council. It is their right and responsibility to the city to take what action is necessary and proper."

"It goes with the territory," Veeder said.

As a businessman and a parent, Smith said he considers himself a prime candidate for the position. "My platform is I believe in honesty, openness, involvement, meaning keeping information out in the open and sharing it with the people in our district so that we together can make the right decisions to improve the quality of education for all our children."

"I believe in preserving the grandfather clause (for attendance line changes) and equal allocation of funds based on student needs, interest, not student enrollment," he said.

Owens is a candidate for District 3, Seat B, which represents parts of east Greenville, and Simpson, Grimesland and Paoctolus townships. He is a resident of Simpson and is a minister at Salem United Methodist Church.

Married to Beverly Owens, he has three children, Cliff, 6, Shannon, 9, and Ryan, 11.

Owens said his experience as a teacher in Wake, Wayne and Guilford counties for six years will benefit the children in the county. He also is a volunteer football coach at East Carolina University.

"I have a desire to help children throughout the county," he said.

Ms. Allen is a candidate for District 5, Seat B, which represents southern Greenville and the Winterville township. She is a resident of Winterville, who said she wants to improve education in the county.

"These are challenging times for Pitt County Schools," she said. "Being a mother of three children, I am very concerned about the changes that are taking place in our schools today."

She is a member of the Winterville Recreation Commission, the Winterville Christian Church and D.H. Conley Booster Club.

Married to Tim Allen of Winterville, her children are Tim Jr., 14, Ted, 11, Tyler, 5.

porter turned out. In Alabama, there was a vigil near the governor's mansion but no demonstration near the prison.

When White was asked if he had any last words, he shook his head and said, faintly, "No, sir." A black rubber hood was drawn over his head.

The power, 2,000 volts, was turned on at 7:07 a.m. by a black-hooded executioner paid $150. White jerked back in the chair and his hands clenched, then sagged in the chair before jerking back again.

White was condemned for his role in the 1977 shootings of eight people, six fatally, during the robbery of a small-time drug dealer's home in the Miami suburb of Carol City. White didn't participate in the killings, but stood guard while the victims were shot.

Appropriate Move

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission should be applauded for its approach to planning the city's southern expansion.

By scheduling a joint meeting with the Winterville Planning and Zoning Commission and Pitt County's planning staff, the city is promoting cooperation and reciprocal agreement. This is the appropriate way to plan development of areas on the fringes of a municipality.

Greenville's growth affects the county, especially those entities closely bordering it, such as Winterville. Both the city and these impacted areas have a great deal to lose from one-sided, slipshod planning. Cooperation is the correct way to identify and solve potential problems and ensure the needs of both concerns are satisfied.

Planning is important to smooth growth of any municipal area. It is also essential to surrounding entities. As expansion occurs, a system of interdependence and interaction between a city and nearby communities develops.

Winterville and Greenville are good examples of this relationship. Because of the proximity of the two communities, many of Winterville's residents work and shop in Greenville. Burgeoning residential growth in the constantly-shrinking gap between the two entities demands attention be focused on this area by planning officials if development is to be systematic and harmonious.

The relationship of Greenville and Winterville could be compared to Raleigh and Cary. As Raleigh's population exploded during the past decade, Cary — and other outlying Wake County communities — bore the brunt of residential growth. This circumstance created growth-related problems — specifically traffic and commercial development. Expansion in these areas could have been more orderly and beneficial if officials had intervened more promptly with joint planning.

Greenville's Planning & Zoning officials are side-stepping the possibility of this occurrence by asking for input and help from affected parties in planning the city's southern expansion. The mutual approach is a sound solution to dealing with growth-related problems and providing well-ordered development in key areas.

Possibilities

Will Gary Hart Return?

The saga continues, perhaps at this point even upstaging the Jim Bakker drama.

Hart was the frontrunner in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988 when the Miami Herald revealed the visit of actress-model Donna Rice. The propriety of that incident is still debated in journalism circles. Nevertheless it led to the withdrawal of Hart from the presidential race after contributions to his campaign dried up. It meant instant fame for Donna Rice. Hart went in seclusion and off on vacation.

Last weekend Hart's former campaign manager Bill Dixon threw out the possibility that Hart might reactivate the campaign.

That sent reporters on Hart's trail again in Ireland and this week he left the door wide open for speculation on his return to the United States.

"I don't have any kind of comment to make this evening (Tuesday)," Hart told reporters. "I want to get together with my family and get caught up on the news of the last few days and find out what has or has not gone on...."

"Then I will cover all the points that need to be covered in a comprehensive way. I don't think the circumstances today or tonight are the way to do that. I'll have something to say pretty soon."

It wouldn't be so simple as merely picking up the campaign for Hart. A former aide said he would have to make a statement about the events that led to his withdrawal. That would lead to endless questions as he resumed a campaign.

However, his former campaign manager said if Hart did resume his run it would be more to focus on issue than to win.

It is obvious that a Hart campaign at this point would be run through a political minefield. How many people would talk about past involvements now that his personal life is a clear issue?

In the end, of course, the decision will be made by Hart. He may reason that everything is now in the open and contriteness on his part could put the questions behind him. They won't go away that easily, of course, but in American politics anything is possible.

Soft Words Can't Ease Struggle Ahead

Ronald Reagan is confounding his left-wing critics and infuriating his allies on the right. Unless something now goes terribly awry, he will soon conclude his first arms-control treaty with the Soviet Union.

Mikhail S. Gorbachev, leader of the "evil empire," will appear in Washington for a summit and signing ceremony that will trigger the first-ever agreed destruction of a whole class of nuclear weapons — the so-called Euromissiles. Yet unless Reagan is both prudent and wise, he will score a triumph at home but Gorbachev will emerge as the net winner abroad.

This week, U.S.-Soviet negotiations on intermediate-range nuclear forces in Europe have gone from expectations to end game. Concessions by Washington and Bonn, the latter clearly at U.S. behest, have removed the last two apparent obstacles to agreement. Before the ink is dry and the seals are affixed, it is risky to say that all is over and done with. But if the Soviets raise new objections they will tarnish their newly burnished peacemaker image in Western Europe.

Under White House pressure to conclude an agreement, the Pentagon was forced finally to admit something that the arms-control community has argued for years — that the United States already has a considerable capacity to verify Soviet compliance with agreements. Faced with Gorbachev's willingness to accept intrusive on-site inspection in both countries, it was U.S. intelligence agencies and not the KGB that balked. It became apparent that the Soviets have more to learn from inspecting U.S. military installations and high-tech factories than we do from inspecting theirs.

Meanwhile, the government of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl decided that it could not afford to stand between the United States and an arms agreement. Late in the game the Soviets had raised a new and obscure issue: West Germany's ownership of 72 aging Pershing 1-A ballistic missiles, topped with U.S. nuclear warheads. "These must go," the Soviets demanded. They sought to cause mischief between a U.S. government anxious for agreement and a West German government still reeling from a year of East-West diplomacy in which the terms and degree of the U.S. commitment to European security have been cast in doubt.

From Kohl's perspective, the destruction of both long- and shorter-range INF missiles would leave only short-range battlefield weapons. These, in a phrase that has telling political effect in the Federal Republic, would "kill only Germans" — in either East or West. Keeping the Pershing 1-As would provide some ballistic-missile reach beyond East Germany's eastern border. They would also stand as a mute plea to Washington to give pledges of its steadfastness. Now, on the destruction of U.S. and Soviet weapons, the German missiles will go, too.

The Soviets have, always understood that the object of the Euromissile negotiations has been to affect Western European opinion and to determine relative U.S. and Soviet influence there. With the signing of a Euromissile treaty, Gorbachev will gain the lion's share of credit on the Continent. In terms of promoting European security, the Soviet Union is seen as the prodigal son while the Americans are the children who remained loyal — and who resent the affection lavished on the prodigal.

Public euphoria over the fact of any U.S.-Soviet arms-control agreement — the details hardly matter — will not last long, however. Then the United States must prove its mettle in outmaneuvering the Soviets. Even though many U.S. nuclear weapons will remain on the Continent, Moscow will press its line that the Euromissile agreement means the progressive denuclearization of Western Europe and the weakening of U.S. security guarantees.

In his speech on Wednesday, Reagan blended a tone of cordiality toward the Soviet Union with proposals on human freedoms that would in essence require a dismant-ing of the Soviet system and the trammeling of its power. With the prospect of a Gorbachev visit, uttering a soft word was the neighborly thing to do. Expressing hope on strategic issues was also part of selling a treaty to a Senate in which the president can count more on his political enemies than on his allies.

Paradoxically, to offset Gorbachev's gains in Western Europe, Reagan must be more active, tougher in deed even while he is conciliatory in word. In the face of West German misgivings, he must elevate the importance of the U.S.-European relationship from the nadir that it has reached in this administration.

Miners Need Support

The strike by more than 300,000 black miners in South Africa is in its third week, making it one of the most successful job actions by blacks in South Africa's history. Miners have rejected the latest settlement proposal and have reiterated their demands for a 30 percent pay increase, hazard pay, increased death benefits, improved working conditions and the acceptance of June 16 (Soweto Day) as a paid holiday.

Support for the strikers has come from all over the world. The American people, through national and community organizations, are beginning to respond much in the same manner as they did to the Solidarity movement in Poland. Yet one voice is silent. The president of the United States, who lit the candles and gave ringing speeches in support of the Polish workers, has curiously chosen to ignore this momentous development in South Africa.

Ironically, the action by the brave miners is quite consistent with the policy direction favored by the Reagan administration in South Africa. In opposing economic sanctions against South Africa last year, administration officials asserted that continued American investments in South Africa would empower black workers. They frequently pointed to the growing strength of black trade unions as evidence of the correctness of their policy.

Perhaps the administration expected that black workers would be grateful and content with their jobs, regardless of working conditions or political developments in the country. If such was the expectation, the miners' strike has proved them wrong.

The South African trade unions are moving responsibly to fill the gaps created in the anti-apartheid movement by the widespread detention and brutal assassination of political activists. Black workers have unequivocally demonstrated that they are prepared to jeopardize their relative economic security where necessary to protect fundamental human rights.

The question now is whether the Reagan administration is prepared to support them at this crucial moment. The black miners who perform the most dangerous mining functions want a 30 percent pay increase instead of the 15 percent to 23 percent offered by the companies. Given that they make less than one-fifth the average wage of whites, is this unreasonable?

The miners are also asking for hazard pay, and death benefits equal to five years' wages for their survivors. In light of South Africa's horrible mine-safety record, is this not a reasonable demand?

Strength For Today

A family had a cat which had just given birth to kittens. Then someone gave this family a puppy. The puppy was lonely and tried to make friends with the cat and her brood. But every time he came near, the cat arched her back and snarled and spat.

One day the cat's head got scratched. While she moaned in pain the puppy came over to her again and began to lick the scratch.

The wound soon healed and the cat and puppy became fast friends. When the puppy became big, the cat often slept curled up against him.

If cats and dogs can be friends, so can we. It should be easier for us because we can communicate. As Jesus said, "Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, that ye may be children of your Father in heaven."

Swallowing Soviet Violations Is Real Issue For U.S.

WASHINGTON — The true threat to Senate ratification of an intermediate-range nuclear (INF) treaty is not the shift away from on-site inspection but Senate anger that Moscow continues to violate existing treaties, including a potentially grave new ABM treaty violation now under White House study.

The prospect that an INF treaty might collide with the 34 Senate votes needed to defeat it next year has been the subject of several private warnings from conservative Republicans. The most recent came in a confidential letter to President Reagan last month from Sen. Jesse Helms, senior Foreign Relations Committee Republican.

Helms' classified letter, according to Senate colleagues, squarely raised this issue: Without Soviet agreement to end current violations of existing treaties, ratification of any new treaty can not be counted on.

Reagan mentioned the compliance issue, but in unusually low-key terms, in his Los Angeles speech Wednesday. He said only that "we need to seek compliance with existing agreements all too often violated by the U.S.S.R." He made no mention of the new issue that went to his desk only this week.

This mild treatment of the compliance issue, which was elevated by the Reagan administration to unprecedented prominence starting in 1984, was uncharacteristic. That may reflect the president's intentions not to let any barrier build up that might block an INF treaty from being signed in the next few months.

Only last March 10, the president was far more forceful. In his obligatory annual report to Congress on the compliance issue, Reagan said, "we have deep, continuing concerns about Soviet non-compliance with the ABM (anti-ballistic missile) treaty." Referring to what is probably the single worst Soviet violation, the giant radar now being completed not near a Soviet border, as required under the treaty, but near the Siberian city of Krasnoyarsk, Reagan said "the Soviets have not corrected their outstanding violation."

The administration's decision to relax its earlier demands for extensive on-site inspection to assure compliance with an INF treaty demonstrates nothing in terms of expectations of future Soviet performance. It simply means the on-site inspection system devised by arms control director Kenneth Adelman lost its relevance when Moscow agreed to total elimination of all its SS-20 intermediate-range missiles.

If 100 warheads had been allowed to remain on each side, as the Soviets originally insisted, ACDA's inspection system would have been essential. Inspectors would have checked production lines for spare parts or even new replacement missiles.

They would have watched the warhead population in missile housing centers, called "garages."

But that task eased considerably with the decision to destroy all Soviet SS-20 missiles and all American Pershing II and ground-launched intermediate-range missiles.

IN THE STATE

Autopsy

SOUTH HILL, Va. (AP) — An autopsy performed on a Lindenhurst, N.Y., truck driver whose body was found beside his rig on Interstate 85 failed to reveal the cause of death.

A spokesman for the state medical examiner said Thursday there were no gunshot wounds, bruises or other signs of foul play on the body of Thomas R. Riecker Jr., 23. Laboratory tests will show whether a drug or anything else foreign was present.

About 5 a.m. Wednesday, police found the body behind the tractor-trailer in the southbound lanes of I-85 about two miles north from the North Carolina line in Mecklenburg County.

Two other truck drivers reported seeing two men arguing near the truck, hearing shots, then seeing a man fleeing into the woods. Police used helicopters and a canine unit to search the area but found no one.

Marijuana

CREEDMOOR, N.C. (AP) — Drug enforcement officials say nearly $4 million worth of marijuana plants found at a Granville County "plantation" is the biggest seizure in the state this year and the largest ever in the county.

Some 2,400 marijuana plants were seized Wednesday by agents on farmland near the Grissom community adjacent to the Wake County line.

North Carolina SBI Deputy Director Charles Dunn said 1,800 plants were found growing in the wooded field, while 561 harvested plants were found lying nearby.

Rescued Eagle

RALEIGH (AP) — A young bald eagle found starved and drowning by a fisherman on Jordan Lake Aug. 16 may have been poisoned by an insecticide, a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agent says.

Poisoning could have hampered the eagle's ability to fly by destroying certain specialized brain cells, special agent Thomas Bennett said Thursday.

Bennett credited the insecticide theory to veterinarian Stuart Porter of the Virginia Wildlife Rehabilitation Center, where the eagle was taken Wednesday after recuperating at N.C. State University's veterinary school.

Bennett said that Porter thought the eagle would recover enough to fly in two to four weeks, and probably had picked up the poisoning by eating a bird or rodent that had consumed insecticide-tainted grain.

Pistol Case

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Mecklenburg district attorney's office has dismissed a case against a 17-year-old Charlotte youth charged earlier this month with pointing a water pistol at a passing motorist.

John Craighill Redwine Jr. was scheduled to appear in court Tuesday. He arrived to find that the case against him had been dismissed by Assistant District Attorney Deborah Brown.

Redwine was charged with misdemeanor assault after 41-year-old Cheryl McGovern of Charlotte told police that two youths in a red Jeep Wagoneer pointed a gun at her Aug. 11 while she was riding on Woodlawn Road. Police later discovered the weapon was a water pistol.

Brown says Redwine's case was dismissed for a combination of reasons, including its "less-serious" nature and Redwine's clean record.

Memorial

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The fund-raising chairman for a Vietnam War memorial near Lexington says work has been delayed because his committee has raised less than half of the $550,000 needed for the project.

Lt. Gen. Walter F. Ulmer blamed the problem on lack of publicity. Ulmer is fund-raising chairman for the N.C. Vietnam Veterans Leadership program.

The memorial is to be built off Interstate 85 northeast of Lexington and will bear the names of the 1,607 North Carolinians who died or were missing in action. The park around the memorial is designed to have a wall with names engraved on it inside a circle of trees surrounded by a second wall.

The project was set for completion by Veterans Day in November, but the completion date now is Memorial Day 1988 because the sponsors are about $300,000 short of their goal, Ulmer said.

UNC Raises

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Protests, letters and complaints paid off for secretaries and clerks at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill who won raises that had been authorized but not granted.

UNC Chancellor Christopher Fordham said in a letter dated Aug. 21 that the university had found a way to pay the raises that the state personnel office authorized last year. The personnel office approved increased minimum salaries for clerks and 10 percent raises for other clerical employees.

But the state didn't provide money for the raises. UNC raised the minimum pay but didn't implement the 10 percent raises, saying the money couldn't be found.

Fordham said the General Assembly didn't provide money for the raises but it did take action allowing the school to transfer money from any account. The salary increases will be retroactive to Aug. 7, the date the Legislature ratified the clause allowing the fund transfer.

Rand Campaign

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, has picked Raleigh attorney John McArthur as his campaign manager and says he will announce in early October his candidacy for lieutenant governor.

Rand said Thursday he will travel to every major city in the state on a two-day flying trip, beginning in Asheville on Oct. 5 and ending in Fayetteville on Oct. 6.

McArthur was head of a group of Gary Hart supporters who had been picked to lead Hart's presidential campaign in North Carolina until Hart dropped out of the race after disclosure that he had been romantically involved with Donna Rice.

Higher Fees

GREENSBORO (AP) — Many North Carolinians will pay higher fees this fall for continuing education courses taken through the community college system, officials say.

"The cost of classes will definitely be more than in the past," said M.H. Branson, president of Randolph Technical College. "I think you'll find this true throughout the 58 colleges in the system."

At Guilford Technical Community College, for example, fees for some non-credit courses will jump from $17 to $30, or 76 percent.

In addition, the system's full-time curriculum students will see tuitions increase from $66 to $75 per quarter for state residents and from $504 to $702 per quarter for out-of-state students.

Many of the increases were prompted by the General Assembly's approval of a college funding proposal to make continuing education courses self-supporting.

Freedom Ends

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A 52-year-old man, running from a life sentence for killing a man in Baltimore with a hammer 35 years ago, was arrested at his High Point home Thursday, officials said.

Alvin Thomas Tyson Jr. was sentenced to life in prison for murder in 1952 and escaped from a Maryland prison in 1973.

Davie Awards

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Board of Trustees presented William R. Davie Awards Thursday to a longtime North Carolina educator, a former director of the Campus Y and a former chancellor.

The recipients — Anne Queen of Canton and Arnold King and J. Carlyle Sitterson, both of Chapel Hill, were honored at a dinner on the UNC campus.

Murder-Suicide

WILMINGTON (AP) — Sheriff's detectives believe two bodies found Thursday morning in a New Hanover County home are the result of a murder-suicide.

Penny Lynn Richards, 17, and Terrence Kevin Ezzell, 20, were found dead at Miss Richards' home in a Wilmington subdivision after family members heard two shots fired in her bedroom.

Democratic Official Says Martin Claiming Credit For Legislation

By JOHN FLESHER

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin is misleading the public as he prepares to seek re-election next year, taking credit for Democrats' accomplishments and trying to hide his flaws, the state Democratic chairman says.

Martin "has not been an activist governor," Jim Van Hecke said. "He wants to take credit for good things that came out of the Legislature. ... I think it's a little tough to convince folks that he was having an impact across the sea."

He referred to Martin's decision to take a Virgin Islands sailing vacation earlier this month while the Legislature was in session. He returned shortly before adjournment.

Alan Pugh, Martin's chief political aide, said Van Hecke "has raised political hypocrisy to an art form."

"If Mr. Van Hecke is going to blame Governor Martin for everything (bad) including the weather, Governor Martin ought to have the same right to take credit for some of the good things happening in the state," Pugh said.

Van Hecke, who called a news conference at the state Democratic headquarters, said he was reacting to a mass mailing by Martin's campaign committee. It requested donations and included a survey about his job performance "full of loaded questions designed to make the governor look good," Van Hecke said.

The letter, over Martin's signature, refers to his opposition as "the liberals across this state (who) would naturally prefer a governor who will rubber-stamp each and every piece of pork-barrel legislation they can think of." Pugh said 150,000 voters received the letter.

Van Hecke distributed what he called his response to Martin's survey.

One question says Martin's welfare reform program "has offered real hope to recipients by creating a 'workfare' program to give them jobs and an opportunity to become productive members of society" and asks whether the person answering the survey endorses the plan.

Van Hecke wrote that the program started under former Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat. While helpful, it doesn't replace "a top-notch education system which enables people to break the cycle of poverty," Van Hecke said.

To another question asking whether the survey participant supports Martin's tax cutting program, Van Hecke responded Martin opposed a Democratic school construction plan that include abolishing the inventory tax. Martin called for eliminating the tax in 1985, when the Legislature reduced it.

"The survey credits Martin with making the state's unemployment rate lowest in the Southeast. Van Hecke said Hunt laid the groundwork for most of the new jobs about which Martin boasts.

"While legislative leaders were hammering out a bill to protect Burlington Industries from a corporate takeover, Jim Martin was at the Kentucky Derby," Van Hecke said. "He has no discernable economic strategy."

Pugh said Van Hecke falsely claimed most of the jobs created under Martin were low-paying service jobs instead of well-paying manufacturing positions. The number of manufacturing jobs in North Carolina has risen the past two years, Pugh said.

"He needs to ask the hundreds of thousands of people who are working now and were unemployed when Jim Hunt left office what they think of Jim Martin's economic strategy," Pugh said, noting that the state jobless rate has fallen from 7 percent to 4.5 percent under Martin.

Van Hecke said Martin could take credit for "running a Correction Department that brought us to the brink of a federal takeover before the General Assembly came to the rescue" and for "paying off his political cronies and family members with fat-cat government jobs."

No Sentence

BURGAU, N.C. — The mayor of Topsail Beach has been given no sentence after pleading no contest to a charge that he held an illegal fireworks display at his fishing pier July 4.

Part of the Kip Oppegaard's fishing pier collapsed during the fireworks show, dumping about 30 people into the water and sending more than two dozen people to hospitals.

Oppegaard himself was hospitalized for five days after suffering chest pains when he was helping rescue people who had fallen into the water.

After accepting Oppegaard's no contest plea Thursday in Pender County District Court, Judge Charles E. Rice III entered no judgment against Oppegaard. Instead, Rice gave Oppegaard a "prayer for judgment continued," meaning no sentence was imposed but the case may be reopened if another offense occurs within a set time. Oppegaard's lawyer, Clifton L. Moore Jr., said it is unlikely that would happen.

The charge carries a $500 fine, six months in prison or both.

Oppegaard's "no contest" plea meant he neither denied nor pleaded guilty to the charge.

Town officials said after the accident that the fireworks display was not a town event, but had been sponsored by the pier for the last two years.

Candy Scam Brings Huge State Fines

RALEIGH (AP) — An Eden woman accused of violating child labor laws in operating a "candy scam" has been assessed civil penalties of $84,500 by the state Department of Labor.

The department's Wage and Hour Division levied the penalties against Regina Ayler, 30, and the same amount against Patrick W. Saxton of Rockingham County. Ms. Ayler was arrested Wednesday in Durham on eight counts, including contributing to the delinquency of a minor, misleading customers and soliciting contributions without a license.

"I want all these profiteers to see that the days of exploiting North Carolina's children for a fast buck are over," Labor Commissioner John Brooks said in a written statement Thursday.

Both have 15 days to appeal the penalties to Labor Department hearing officers. If they lose, they can appeal in the courts.

Ms. Ayler is believed to be a "crew chief" who traveled from Eden in a van or car, picked up children in Durham, and drove them to other cities to sell candy, allegedly for charitable purposes, according to Taylor McMillan, chief deputy labor commissioner.

The scam operated in Raleigh and officials suspect it also reached Carboro, Chapel Hill, Fayetteville and Greensboro, he said.

The Labor Department and the state Attorney General's office also filed a civil suit against Ms. Ayler and Saxton, an alleged confederate. The suit, filed in Wake County Superior Court, asks that they be ordered to stop their activities and pay a $5,000 fine "for each knowing violation" of state consumer protection law.

In Eden, Ms. Ayler has eight charges pending against her — three for forgery, three for uttering, one for simple possession of marijuana and one for possession of drug paraphernalia, police said.

The criminal warrants indicate she wrote checks on the accounts of two New Jersey couples and tried to cash them at several local banks using a fictitious name.

Eden Police Det. Gary Moore said he could not discuss those charges because they are still pending.

Ms. Ayler was the target of another investigation in 1984 that resulted in a court order to halt her actions, McMillan said.

Kannapolis Marks 100th Birthday Of Cannon Mills

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — The Cannon family no longer owns Cannon Mills, but in this consummate company town the 100th anniversary of the mills' founding is reason enough for a grand, weeklong party.

Birthday cake for 10,000 will be served Saturday when the governor comes to visit. Even commemorative towels have been designed for the festivities.

"The company was the town," said the Rev. Kenyon Meeks Jr. of Bethpage Presbyterian Church. "It has made and shaped and given identity to this town."

In addition to the tens of thousands of workers hired for the family towel and sheet factories, the Cannons owned the millworkers' houses, helped build their schools, donated money for the area hospital and bankrolled local YMCA's.

The family influence changed somewhat in recent years when the business was sold to out-of-town owners, who have since sold it again. Last year, Fieldcrest Mills in Eden bought the company and changed its official name to Fieldcrest-Cannon.

Everyone seems to be sporting a blue button that says "Celebrating Cannon, 100 years." A giant Cannon ornament floats in a lake near the mill. The Daily Independent in Kannapolis published a special 28-page supplement labeled "Happy 100th Birthday Cannon Mills."

"The first structure here was the plant," said Thomas Dayvault, vice president of the Kannapolis Chamber of Commerce. "We all grew up around it. Whether you've ever worked there or not, it is part of your life in this area."

The birthday bash started on Sunday in area churches, where ministers cited those who worked at Cannon Mills. At Bethpage Presbyterian, for example, more than half the congregation stood up when it was time to recognize Cannon employees.

On Monday — the company's actual anniversary day — church bells and chimes rang promptly at noon. Students at area elementary schools have prepared birthday cards for the company. Tonight, marching bands from the city's two rival high schools are to join forces on the football field for a unified performance honoring Cannon.

A special movie and historical exhibit have been on display all week at the city's downtown visitors center. These outline how 35-year-old J.W. Cannon founded his textile business in 1887, ran the company until 1921, and then turned it over to his son, "Mr. C.A." who ran it until he died in 1971.

The climax of the week's activities will come Saturday, when Gov. Jim Martin arrives to issue a proclamation for the company, fireworks are displayed, and descendants of the Cannon founders participate in a ceremony.

Esther Plott, 72, has been recruited to cut the first piece from an eight-foot-high birthday cake. Ms. Plott has worked at Cannon for 55 years, the longest tenure of any current employee.

Tobacco Stocks Rise With Favorable Court Ruling

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Recent court decisions favoring the tobacco industry have lessened investors' doubts about the industry and led to increased stock prices that analysts say have been artificially low because of a cloudy legal future.

Stocks began rising a week ago only hours after a federal appeals court in Atlanta issued a decision backing the industry. The climb was boosted Tuesday by an even more favorable decision from Boston and continued until Thursday when profit-taking absorbed some, but not all, of the gains made during the week.

"The (tobacco) stock prices are reacting to a change in reality.

They've been really, really cheap — absurdly cheap — due to the litigation threat," said Kurt Feuerman, a tobacco analyst with the investment firm Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York.

"For a long time, investors have been very uneasy about litigation risks," Feuerman said. "What's happened in the last week is the litigation outlook has improved dramatically. You can't rule it out yet, but you're much closer to being able to do so."

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta ruled Aug. 21 that American Brands Inc. could use the so-called pre-emption defense in a lawsuit brought by a Florida woman, who claimed the company was responsible for her husband's death because it had not adequately warned him of the dangers of smoking.

The First U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston followed Tuesday with an even broader ruling supporting the industry in a case involving Liggett and Myers Tobacco Co.

A third decision involving similar issues is pending in the Sixth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. About 120 cases remain in various lower courts.

RJR Nabisco Inc., which had opened on Aug. 21 at $61.50 a share, gained 14.4 percent through Wednesday to $70.37½. The stock was down $2.25 to $68.12½ after Thursday's trading.

Other tobacco stocks, their Aug. 21 opening, Wednesday close and Thursday close were: Philip Morris Companies Inc., $106.75, $122.37½, $118.37½; American Brands, $52.50, $59.62½, $58.62½; and U.S. Tobacco, $28.25, $31.87½, $31.

"The stocks are merely correcting upward and we think there's a lot longer to go," Feuerman said, adding he expects RJR Nabisco to reach about $84 per share and Philip Morris about $160.

Feuerman also suggested that the industry may change as tobacco companies use their heavy cash flow to diversify and restructure. He said the threat of huge damage awards would have made such moves difficult to finance.

Lawrence Adelman, an analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in New York, said tobacco firms have been "very good profit companies," with strong earnings and dividends, but undervalued stock prices.

He cautioned, however, that the tobacco industry's growth rate will gradually decline because of the drop in smoking.

"We don't think the legal cases are going to change the consumption patterns," which have declined in the last 20 years, he said.

Even anti-tobacco groups admit the fight is getting tougher.

"Every time you get a favorable decision, it sort of lightens the liability threat," said David Gidmark, editor of a newsletter for the Tobacco Products Liability Project in Boston. The project was established in December 1984 to foster products liability litigation against the tobacco industry and to remove or restrict the product in the market.

Gidmark said tobacco liability cases will still be tried.

"There are millions and millions of people who have read the publicity in the last couple of days who are going to be very surprised eight weeks from now when a tobacco trial opens in New Jersey," he said.

Gidmark insisted that "it's not over yet," despite the two recent decisions and a similar ruling earlier from a federal court in Philadelphia.

But Dean Witter's Adelman said, "Litigation seems to be down for the count ... They (the companies) are winning at the higher levels, which is the key."

Drexel's Feuerman said, "The warning label has been upheld now by three appeals courts. It's going to make it tough for plaintiffs to sue. The risk reward just changed pretty sharply in favor of the industry."

Nunn, Laxalt Withdrawals Expected To Have Only Slight Impact In N.C.

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Democratic Party leaders say they still have good candidates despite the announcement by Sen. Sam Nunn that he will not enter the presidential sweepstakes, while Republicans say the exit of Sen. Paul Laxalt will scarcely cause a ripple.

Nunn, a Georgia Democrat and chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, announced Thursday he would not seek his party's nomination because the campaign would reduce his effectiveness as a senator. Laxalt, a Nevada Republican who had been exploring a presidential bid since last spring, announced his withdrawal Wednesday, citing a lack of funds.

Many Southern Democratic leaders had urged Nunn to enter the race, viewing him as the potential candidate best able to win the support of their moderate to conservative constituents.

But Jim Van Hecke, state Democratic chairman, said Nunn's decision was not a blow to Southerners' hopes for a presidential ticket to their liking.

"We've got a lot of good horses," Van Hecke said in an interview, adding that it was far from certain Nunn could have captured the Democratic nomination. He said where the nominee hails from is less important than his philosophy and style.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, attending a conference in Vermont, issued a statement saying many people were disappointed by Nunn's decision.

"Yet it is also important at this critical time in our nation's history that Senator Nunn continue his strong leadership" in Congress, Jordan said. "This further clears the air and allows voters to focus more definitively on those already announced candidates."

State Republican Chairman Jack Hawke said Nunn likely would have disappointed Southern Democrats as a presidential candidate.

"I don't think he had the charisma or staying power to be president," Hawke said. "On paper, (Ohio Sen.) John Glenn looked like the best Democrat in 1984, but once he got in he just didn't spark any interest. Nunn had the best voting record of any of the (potential Democratic nominees) but I don't think he had the personality to fire up the troops."

Laxalt's withdrawal probably will be even less significant than Nunn's, North Carolina politicians said.

"I'm not sure his campaign ever got off the ground in North Carolina," Hawke said. Although Laxalt made a good impression when he visited the state GOP convention in May, "he had no staff, no organization, no chairman here that I knew of."

Most of Laxalt's supporters in North Carolina likely will line up behind Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., or the Rev. Pat Robertson, Hawke said.

"I'd assume most of the people who would have supported Laxalt were longtime Reagan supporters who would remember him from chairing Reagan's campaigns," Hawke said.

State Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, chairman of the state steering committee for Vice President George Bush's campaign, said Laxalt was the only potential GOP nominee who could have claimed to be closer to President Reagan than Bush.

"Nationally, it (Laxalt's absence) should help Bush, particularly in the West," Cobb said. "But in North Carolina, I honestly don't think Laxalt had much organization."

Snake Experts Find Folk Remedies Just Don't Work

RALEIGH (AP) — Spreading sulfur to keep snakes away works just as well as reciting "Gunga Din" or wearing polyester leisure suits, say North Carolina experts who tested folk remedies for repelling the reptiles.

None of them worked.

"Most of the people I talked to have heard of something to get rid of snakes," said N.C. State University extension agent Gary J. San Julian, a herpetologist who recently completed a study of popular anti-snake measures. "I started keeping a record."

He and research assistant David Woodward used a black rat snake in a long plywood box for the experiments.

Among the items tested, San Julian said, were mothballs, sulfur, garlic, onion and cayenne pepper liquid mixed together, Bird Tanglefoot, gourd vines, coal tar, creosote oil, sisal rope, cedar oil, crushed lime, eastern king snake musk, Liquid Smoke, and a product called Stench, "which is the closest chemical derivative I can find with the odor of a skunk. That was tough testing."

None of these remedies worked, either.

Cowboys in the wild West encircled their sleeping bags with ropes to repel the legless beasts. Confronted with this challenge, the black rat snake in the testing box slithered right over the rope.

San Julian said he and Woodward did not try the potentially dangerous folk techniques of burning rags or old shoes, or of burning sulfur, which creates toxic gas.

San Julian said the best way to repel snakes is to get rid of the shelters they like, such as wood or trash piles, and to put tight-fitting screens over open basement windows and crawl spaces. He added that snakes prefer the same habitats as rodents, their favorite prey.

"The two are closely associated," he said Thursday. "They're probably better rattlers than a cat in the barn. Many farmers leave black snakes in the barn, and king snakes as well, because they do such a good job."

He said that of the 37 snake species in North Carolina, only four are poisonous: rattlesnakes, copperheads, coral snakes and cottonmouths. The rest are not only beneficial, but avoid human contact whenever possible.

San Julian said that most people have an unnatural fear of snakes and that some drivers often will go out of their way to run them down.

Martin Says Youthful Offender Camp Isn't Going To Buncombe

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A proposed forestry camp for youthful offenders will not be built in Buncombe County, despite an invitation from the county commissioners, Gov. Jim Martin says.

Martin cited public opposition and a pledge not to place another Department of Correction facility on land already chosen for a new Craggy Prison in a letter dated Thursday to Curtis Ratcliff, chairman of the Buncombe County commissioners.

Martin wrote that he is "aware of strong feelings among Buncombe residents about this facility."

"I want to make it clear that while the youth forestry camp is a positive, worthwhile initiative that will benefit youthful offenders, Buncombe County is not the appropriate site," Martin wrote.

Reagan Pledges To Keep Aid Flowing To Contras

By Lou Cannon
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — President Reagan Thursday assured leaders of the Nicaraguan Contras that "we intend to see that you have adequate funding until a cease-fire is in place and a verifiable process of democratization is under way" in Nicaragua.

Reagan gave his pledge of continued support for the Contra cause in a prepared statement read at a photo-taking session here with leaders of the rebels, who have been seeking to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinistas regime.

He then met for an hour with the six political leaders of the Contras and their military commander, Enrique Bermudez, to hear their proposal for continued U.S. assistance.

The Contras asked that they continue to receive "humanitarian aid" of foodstuffs and other supplies when their present appropriation expires Sept. 30 and that military aid be appropriated but placed in escrow until the Sandinistas carry out their promised democratic reforms.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater and Alfredo Cesar, one of the six Contra leaders who met with Reagan, said the president reacted favorably to the proposal but did not make a final decision. A senior White House official said Reagan likes the idea of an escrow account, but also intends to abide by his commitment to House Speaker James Wright, D-

Texas, not to seek aid of any sort before Sept. 30.

"The escrow account looks like the best approach we've seen," said a senior White House official. "It demonstrates our support for the peace plan, keeps pressure on the Sandinistas and would put a humanitarian-aid proposal before Congress that might be approved."

Cesar said the Contra leaders would discuss their escrow-account proposal Friday at a meeting with Wright in Dallas and hope to win his backing for the plan.

"If we achieve the democratization of Nicaragua, and if we achieve peace, which is what the resistance wants, we would ask the United States to use the (escrow) money to feed the Nicaraguan people ..."

Cesar said at a news conference after the meeting with Reagan. In advance of the meeting, White House officials told reporters that the president intends to honor his commitments to Wright, the Contras and the pending Central American peace plan initiated by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, which Reagan has praised without formally endorsing it. One senior official agreed this was "a balancing act," but "we haven't lost our balance."

In his public photo session with the Contra leaders, Reagan praised them for forcing the Sandinistas to the bargaining table.

"We have much to thank you for," Reagan said. "The political and military pressure you apply I think is showing results. The Sandinistas have now signed a peace agreement based on democracy and we'll be watching carefully to see if they really comply."

The president said that, without the pressure exerted by "the freedom fighters," the Sandinistas would have "no incentives to implement the measures they've said they will implement."

Contra leaders said at their news conference that they had sufficient arms and ammunition to continue the struggle until Nov. 7, the date a cease-fire would take effect under the Arias plan.

"Our people will be in the field fighting until Nov. 7, unless there is a cease-fire," said Pedro Chamorro, one of the Contra leaders.

Reagan's highly publicized meeting here with the Contra leaders had the dual purpose of reassuring them and domestic conservatives who have been expressing concern that the administration is about to abandon the Contras, White House officials said.

But the meeting also drew attention from opponents of continued Contra aid. Before Reagan and the Contras met, Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., held a news conference in another room of the Century Plaza Hotel here and said it was "totally contradictory" of Reagan to support both the Contras and the Nicaraguan peace plan.

He was accompanied by Edgar Chamorro, a former Contra leader who broke with the resistance in 1984, but Thursday credited first lady Nancy Reagan with encouraging her husband to explore the possibilities of peace in Central America.

Across the street from the hotel, more than a thousand protesters chanted "no Contra aid" and waved banners opposing U.S. involvement in Nicaragua. They in turn were picketed by a much smaller group of demonstrators who supported the Contras.

But on a pleasant sunny California day the demonstrators on either side did not linger long. Long before Reagan met with the Contras, most of the protesters had disbanded, prompting one official to say that it was "beach time in California once again."

Poindexter Wants To Retire With Three-Star Admiral's Rank

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, the pivotal witness in the Iran-Contra investigation, plans to resign from the Navy this fall to avoid having the service tainted by an expected indictment, according to Pentagon sources and a close associate.

As he requested the resignation, however, Poindexter injected what is bound to be an element of controversy by asking that he be retired at the three-star vice admiral rank he held while at the White House, instead of the two-star rear admiral title he reverted to after leaving as the affair unraveled last November.

Such a request would put President Reagan on the spot, since he would have to approve the move, as would the Senate, Poindexter testified that he shielded Reagan from knowledge of the diversion of Iran arms sale money to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Some members of the congressional investigating committees say they have lingering doubts about Poindexter's story, and that the question of whether Reagan knew about the diversion may never be put to rest.

The Navy on Thursday confirmed that "Admiral Poindexter has announced his intention to retire" but refused to give details.

Pentagon sources, however, said Poindexter disclosed his decision to top officials Wednesday, specifying a desire to step down effective Oct. 1 after nearly 30 years service.

According to the Navy, a two-star rear admiral with 29 years of service can retire with a pension of $52,764 a year. A three-star vice admiral with the same amount of service can retire with a pension of $53,016 a year.

Efforts to contact Poindexter were not successful.

Since he resigned his post as presidential adviser, Poindexter, 51, has been a special assistant to the chief of naval operations for long-range planning.

Retired Adm. Clarence A. "Mark" Hill Jr., a Poindexter friend who is trustee of the admiral's legal defense fund, said Thursday that Poindexter is "very concerned about the image of the U.S. Navy."

Hill said Poindexter wants to leave the service before Iran-Contra independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh obtains grand jury indictments, which Hill said he expected would name Poindexter.

"He said he left the hearings with his head held high," Hill said. "He's in the position to do that from the Navy now. ... I think it makes good sense."

He said it would be "extremely difficult" for Poindexter to remain in the Navy and try to regain any job that would restore his three-star status, because of the role he played in the Iran-Contra affair and the opportunity senators would have to block his appointment.

Iran Says It Has Produced Airplane

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran scoffed at the threat of a United Nations arms embargo, saying it has flight-tested its first home-produced plane and vowing to press its seven-year-old war with Iraq to victory.

Meanwhile, sandstorms blowing across the Persian Gulf on Thursday reduced visibility and made it difficult to determine the location of the latest northbound convoy of reflagged Kuwaiti oil tankers and U.S. Navy warships.

Sources in Kuwait and Washington on Thursday denied reports the convoy was off the coast of Saudi Arabia or had arrived in Kuwait.

In another development, Pentagon officials in Washington said the aircraft carrier Ranger and eight escorting warships arrived Thursday in the northern Arabian Sea, south of the gulf, to relieve the carrier Constellation.

The scheduled turnover will enable the U.S. Navy to continue providing air cover for convoys of Kuwaiti tankers and their U.S. escorts through the Persian Gulf, where Iran and Iraq have targeted commercial shipping.

Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi, speaking at a meeting Thursday of officials in charge of Iran's war effort, urged them to "be fully prepared" for a "direct conflict" with the United States in the gulf, Tehran Radio reported. "All the country's resources should be mobilized for this cause," Musavi said in a Tehran Radio report monitored in Cyprus. Musavi was quoted as saying the war with Iraq was at "its most critical juncture."

Prison Talks Continue

ROME (AP) — Judicial officials negotiating with six convicted murderers holding 21 people hostage in an island prison today reported "good dialogue" in the attempt to end the four-day siege.

They said the rebel inmates were still demanding a helicopter and the right to keep two hostages to escape from the prison on Elba, the island in the Tyrrhenian Sea where Napoleon was exiled more than 170 years ago.

"But we are waiting for an act of good will and hope good sense will prevail," said Giacomo Randon, one of the three prosecutors engaged in telephone talks with the inmates armed with pistols and knives.

"We had a good dialogue, and given the circumstances, we have an atmosphere that is conducive to dialogue," he told two Italian reporters on Elba. He did not elaborate.

Authorities have insisted that the inmates first release their only woman hostage, 29-year-old social worker, Rossella Giazzi.

Outside the prison, a group of people gathered under a banner, "a helicopter for life," to collect signatures for a petition to urge the government to accept the inmates' demand.

Mining Firm Puts Strikers On Notice: Work Or Be Fired

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The nation's largest mining company, which has fired more than 25,000 striking black miners, said 31,000 more will be sacked if they do not return to work Saturday.

The ultimatum came Thursday from Anglo American Corp., the company worst hit by the 19-day-old strike, after it fired about 18,400 gold and coal miners for defying back-to-work orders. Anglo last week fired 7,000 strikers.

The company has said it is hiring short-term replacements, but has declined to release any figures. Anglo, which produced more than 39 percent of South Africa's gold last year, employs about 180,000 black miners.

Also Thursday, the country's largest black labor federation, the Congress of South African Trade Unions, said it was considering a national strike and other "solidarity action" unless the miners' wage demands were met.

The miners' union members voted Wednesday to reject an industry proposal that offered slight improvements in benefits but no additional pay.

The union said it would accept a 27 percent pay raise, instead of its previous demand of 30 percent, but the Chamber of Mines refused to alter its already implemented increase of 15 to 23 percent.

The miners' strike, which began Aug. 9, is a legal walkout, but under South African labor law, companies may fire workers if they do not show up for work. The union says 340,000 men are on strike at 44 coal and gold mines, while the Chamber of Mines says 210,000 miners are striking at 29 mines.

The miners' strike is seen as a challenge to the apartheid system since blacks are demanding a greater share of what they produce. By law and custom, apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which the 25.6 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

The 18,400 miners dismissed by Anglo on Thursday included 3,000 men who staged an 18-hour sit-in inside the company's Western Deep Levels gold mine. Anglo did not say why the men staged the protest, but the National Union of Mineworkers said they were forced underground Wednesday night by mine security.

The strikers were brought to the surface Thursday afternoon, given their final paychecks and driven off the mine compound in buses, some miners said.

Summit May Be Set For November

LOS ANGELES (AP) — White House officials, responding to a spate of reports of a possible summit meeting between Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and President Reagan, said today the likeliest time for such a meeting this year would be late November.

However, they said no plans for such a meeting have been set in motion.

"In our minds, we all say to ourselves that if all this happens, it will probably happen in November, but that doesn't mean we are talking to the Soviets about it," said an official with the vacationing President Reagan in California. The official spoke on condition he not be identified.

The Washington Post, quoting diplomatic sources in Moscow, said in a report published today that Gorbachev has reserved the last week in October and, as an alternative, the second half of November, for a possible summit.

But it also said, in a separate story from Los Angeles, that the administration is operating on the "working assumption" that a U.S.-Soviet summit will be held in the United States late in November.

Dates for a summit are tentative and won't be set until Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze meet in September, the Post said.

Unidentified diplomats in Moscow told the Post that Moscow tentatively favors late October for the summit, and Soviet diplomats have postponed trips to the Soviet Union by Australian and Portuguese leaders that were to have taken place then.

The alternate time preferred is the second half of November, the Post's sources said. The first half of November will be occupied with a major celebration of the 70th anniversary of the Soviet revolution.

Soviet officials have said West German Chancellor Helmut

Kohl's offer to scrap the 72 obsolescent Pershing IA nuclear missiles based in his country has helped clear obstacles to a U.S.-Soviet arms agreement, which both sides have described as a prerequisite for a summit.

"Of course, after Kohl's statement, the situation has changed for the better," Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov told reporters Thursday.

U.S. and Soviet diplomats are meeting in Moscow and further sessions are scheduled for other European capitals in preparation for a summit, the Post said.

South Korean Protesters Battle With Police

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of protesters hurling firebombs and rocks and screaming "murderers" battled riot police today after the government banned rallies to mourn a worker slain in an earlier clash.

Hundreds of people were arrested and many others were injured in the vicious fighting, but police officials declined to provide any figures.

For weeks, South Korea has been gripped with hundreds of labor strikes that have idled thousands of workers and threatened the export-oriented economy.

Crowds of students, workers and dissidents fought running street battles with a massive riot police force in southern Seoul in the worst political violence in the capital since major anti-government riots in June.

"Down with the military dictatorship that murders workers!" the enraged protesters shouted as they pelted riot police with rocks, bricks and firebombs that exploded in showers of blazing gasoline.

Mobs of enraged students armed with sticks and poles blocked streets during the evening rush hours and charged police.

Thousands of riot police clad in dark green battledress and black visors and carrying shields charged the protesters repeatedly as fighting swirled through the streets of the working class Yongdongpo area.

Riot police clashed with the protesters after the government charged that leftists were trying to use nationwide labor unrest and strikes to stage a violent revolution. The government said it would not tolerate disorder.

Police bombarded the crowds with tear gas grenades.

Japanese Palace Fired On

TOKYO (AP) — At least three homemade rockets were fired at the Imperial Palace compound, but none exploded and there were no reports of injuries, police said.

The metal projectiles landed Thursday near a dormitory of the Imperial Household Agency inside the compound about 770 yards from the palace and in a park less than a mile away, said a police spokesman, who would not give his name.

The 86-year-old Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako were away at their villa in Nasu, north of the capital, he added.

The projectiles were fired through a hole in the roof of a refrigerator truck that police believe was stolen, he said. Witnesses heard five explosions at 8:20 p.m., and the truck subsequently burst into flames, said the spokesman. He could not confirm reports that police had found a fourth projectile.

A passenger car in a parking lot less than a mile from the truck burst into flames about an hour after the attack, and police were investigating whether there was a connection between the two incidents.

The spokesman said the attack apparently was meant to protest the emperor's scheduled visit this fall to the island of Okinawa, a bloody battleground in World War II that stayed under U.S. administration after the war until its return to Japanese rule in 1972. It would be the first visit there for Hirohito, who shed his semi-divine status after the war and now is a constitutional monarch with no political power.

The Marxist Middle Core Faction, an opponent of Japan's retaining the emperor, has vowed that its major goal this year is to stop him from making his trip to Okinawa.

Leftist radicals occasionally fire homemade mortars at the imperial palace and at police, government and U.S. military and diplomatic targets.

Last year, radicals shot projectiles over the welcoming ceremony of the Tokyo summit of industrial countries, injuring one policeman.

American inventor James Rumsey is not popularly credited with inventing the steamboat. But he designed a water-tube boiler in the 18th century that eventually became the world standard for all steam engines, from power plants to ocean liners, says National Geographic.

Six Dead In Fiery Accident

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — A tractor-trailer went out of control in a New Jersey Turnpike construction area, triggering a fiery, nine-vehicle pileup that killed six people and injured at least 13, police said.

"The people that weren't burned were laying all over the side of the road and the highway," said fire photographer James Bonner, one of the first rescuers to arrive. "We saw the cars all on fire. It was just unbelievable."

Bonner said one of the injured Thursday was a young girl who told him: "I just saw my parents burn to death in our car."

The 2:48 p.m. accident closed southbound lanes for about three hours, and northbound lanes for nearly eight, said state police spokesman Capt. Joe Kobus.

Autopsies were scheduled today for the six fatalities, some of whom were burned beyond recognition. At least one of the 13 injured was hospitalized in critical condition, hospital authorities said.

In addition, a cameraman for a Philadelphia TV station broke his leg on a guard rail while covering the story, Kobus said.

No charges were filed in the accident, which involved two tractor-trailers and seven cars and started at a point where traffic was directed to merge into the right lane because of construction ahead, Kobus said.

Kobus said a tractor-trailer driven by William Lovette, 42, of Mechanicsville, Va., rammied the back of a car, which became wedged under the truck and burst into flames, killing all three occupants.

The truck hit other cars and another tractor-trailer as it careened down the highway, Kobus said.

A young girl thrown from the wreckage of one car tried to pull her parents to safety but the couple died when the car caught fire, Kobus said.

Savinder Singh Oberoi, 36, of New York, said a tractor-trailer passed his rented truck. "I was driving about 50, 55, and he must have been doing 80 or 90," he said. "He tried to apply his brakes but they wouldn't work."

Oberoi said the tractor-trailer swerved from lane to lane, hitting cars.

WCAU-TV cameraman Chuck Williams was treated for a broken leg, station spokesman Martin Blair said. "He was apparently running and he tripped," he said. "He sat and continued to shoot footage until we could replace him."

FAA Chief Cautions Chief Pilots Vigilance Needed

By LAURA PARKER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

KANSAS CITY — Federal Aviation Administration chief T. Allan McArtor lectured the chief pilots of the airlines Thursday to maintain vigilance at the boring and routine times that disaster can catch them unaware, but the pilots complained privately that it was futile to discuss such a sensitive subject under the glare of television lights.

"I'm worried about that fourth landing of the day. Sun setting. Clear skies. Routine," McArtor said at a meeting purported to be the first time in 30 years that the airlines' chief pilots have been called together by the FAA.

"How do you stay professional? How do you stay vigilant? How do you maintain that razor's edge?" McArtor asked. Some attendees complained that such sensitive issues were being discussed in public.

The meeting was hastily assembled after the Aug. 16 crash of Northwest flight 255 in Detroit that killed 156. Early indications from the National Transportation Safety Board investigation are that the plane's wing flaps were not in the proper setting before the plane taxied down the runway to take off.

"I'm not sure this forum is the most-constructive way to attack any problem," said Lloyd Berry, vice president of flight operations for United Airlines, referring to the 240 executives and aviation specialists in the meeting room and the 40 reporters who watched the meeting on closed-circuit television in the room next door.

At a news conference immediately afterward, McArtor said he called the meeting because "that's my style. I wanted to talk eyeball-to-eyeball, face-to-face."

McArtor said in the meeting that he was "picking on the pilots."

He cautioned that the meeting should not indicate he was "prejudging" the cause of the Northwest crash, but he added: "Our nation is watching and they're concerned. We must recapture the confidence in a system we in this room know is a safe system."

William Hoover, a vice president of the Air Transport Association, set a congenial tone for the meeting by praising the FAA and offering the airlines' support. But he pointed out the glacial pace at which the FAA develops new rules for pilot training.

Henry A. Duffy, president of the Air Line Pilots Association (ALPA), noted that the FAA and the industry already developed a "human-factors program" in 1985 with 23 recommendations for new programs and new research. Only a tenth of the $10 million estimated to be needed over three years has been funded so far.

"We do not need to reinvent the wheel," Duffy said. "This document has some marvelous things in it. We need to get at it."

McArtor, who has been on the job less than a month, has faced a string of near-collisions involving commercial jetliners, a near-collision between President Reagan's helicopter and a light plane and the second-worst aviation disaster in U.S. history in Detroit.

McArtor turned his attention to pilot training the day he was sworn into office. He assigned a special team of FAA inspectors to review Delta Air Lines' pilot-training program after Delta experienced a string of unrelated incidents in which pilots landed in the wrong city, on the wrong runway, almost collided with a jumbo jet over the Atlantic.

Monsanto Fined For Asking To Keep Juror In Long Trial

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — The judge in one of the longest trials in U.S. history slapped Monsanto Co. with a $10,000 fine for asking that he reinstate a juror dismissed after sitting on the $135 million negligence case for 3½ years.

St. Clair County Judge Richard Goldenhersh ruled the request "improper" Thursday and also fined a Monsanto lawyer $1,000 and ordered the chemical company to pay court costs of $500.

Under state law, a judge may impose fines if a motion is made for "any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation."

Monsanto asked that Goldenhersh reconsider dropping Barbara McCann from the jury. She was dismissed 45 minutes before deliberations began Wednesday.

Sixty-five residents of Sturgeon, Mo., are seeking $100 million in punitive damages and $35.4 million in compensatory damages for ailments they blame on a 19,000-gallon spill of wood preservative during a 1979 derailment.

The spill contained a teaspoonful of the toxic substance dioxin. Mrs. McCann, a mother of five, said she was told the dismissal was because of a conflict of interest. She said a relative is a defendant in a lawsuit involving the law firm for the plaintiffs in the Monsanto case.

However, Monsanto lawyers contended in their motion that she was dismissed because of facial expressions that the judge interpreted as hostile to the plaintiffs' lawyers.

Goldenhersh denied the motion in a closed hearing. Jury deliberations, suspended for the brief hearing on Mrs. McCann's status, resumed Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. McCann, a 49-year-old mother of five, said she "cried all the way home" after being dismissed on the 621st day of the trial.

She said she had informed the judge of a possible conflict when it developed about 17 months ago, an account confirmed by Monsanto attorney David Sniely.

Ex-Airman Sentenced

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A former Air Force sergeant drew five years in prison for trying to pass intelligence information to an FBI agent posing as a Soviet spy.

U.S. District Judge Stanley Weigel on Thursday said Allen John Davies' actions did not constitute a "major spy case." He could have received up to 10 years in prison.

Davies, 33, of San Jose, pleaded guilty May 27 to a reduced charge of attempting to communicate secrets to an unauthorized person.

He originally was charged with trying to deliver military secrets to a foreign agent, which is punishable by life in prison, but prosecutors allowed a plea bargain to avoid disclosures about Air Force intelligence gathering at trial.

"This case, then, unlike other recent cases, is not one in which the defendant has endangered the lives of any Americans nor one which has involving providing to a foreign nation information detrimental to the interests of the United States," Weigel said.

"The actions of the defendant in this matter were best described by one of the generals (consulted for a damage assessment) as being childish," the judge said.

Davies in May admitted passing along details to an undercover FBI agent about an intelligence-gathering program he worked on at Rhein-Main Air Force Base in Germany in 1983 and 1984 in his last two years in the Air Force.

The program was designed to gather information, much of it secret, on Warsaw Pact military preparedness.

Prosecutors said Davies had left a message on the answering machine of the Soviet consulate in San Francisco in 1986.

He later met with an undercover FBI agent posing as a Soviet operative and told him he was angry with the Air Force for denying him promotions during 10 years of service.

Grumpy Sea Otters Reach New Home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Divers are keeping a close watch on two dozen young sea otters transplanted to Southern California in a move officials hope will spawn a colony of the furry, bewhiskered animals.

The growing but otherwise healthy otters splashed into floating cages off San Nicolas Island on Thursday after being captured earlier in the week by workers from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

They are being kept in 12-by-12-foot cages 200 yards offshore until they adjust to their new surroundings.

The otters "were certainly nervous" when they arrived, Skipp Ladd of the wildlife service said.

"They were a bit aggressive. They were doing a little growling and squealing," he said. "But they settled down quite well," he said, adding, "Everything went just smooth as glass."

Divers feed the animals every six hours, and they are being guarded by state and federal law enforcement officers because the service received several anonymous threats against the playful creatures, Ladd said.

"A few people have made some pretty serious threats and we're prepared for that," he said. Fishing industry representatives have complained the otters could destroy valuable shellfish beds in the area.

Zeke Grader, director of the Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations, which represents about 3,000 California fishermen, said at least 235 commercial fishermen work around San Nicholas Island; 210 of them are after lobster, abalone and sea urchin, also said to be on the sea otters' menu.

In 1985, the last year for which figures are available, fishermen caught $1.3 million worth of shellfish around the island, Grader said.

The 24 relocated otters, mostly youngsters weighting 30 pounds or less, are the first of 70 animals officials plan to bring to the 9-by-3-mile island this year to bolster the sea otter population.

They were caught as they swam off the coast of Central California between Monterey and Morro Bay and released after getting clean bills of health at the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

Wildlife officials hope the otters, plentiful off San Nicolas Island until aggressive 18th and 19th century fur hunters wiped them out, will help start a thriving colony.

The state's entire sea otter population fell to as low as about 300 by 1911, when an international treaty was signed to protect the species.

The colony off the Central California coast has increased to about 1,650, but conservationists want a second colony established in case an oil spill or other ecological disaster wipes out the main population.

Filipino Rebels Entrenched

 Filipino and a New Zealander.
 Mrs. Aquino ordered Ramos to "terminate this mutiny immediately" and ruled out any concessions to "these traitors."
 Associated Press correspondent James Hutton, reporting from outside Camp Aguinaldo, said two air force planes mounted air strikes against the rebels. Hutton said he counted at least nine bombs dropped on the rebels.
 Private radio station DZRH said helicopters fired on the Camelot Hotel in Quezon City after mutineers took over the building.
 The mutiny was led by Col. Gregorio Honasan, former security chief for Enrile. Mrs. Aquino fired Enrile as defense minister after a coup attempt last November.

 Col. Oscar Florindo, secretary of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, quoted Col. Frank Acosta, a captured rebel officer, as saying Honasan took off from Camp Aguinaldo in a helicopter bound for an unknown destination.
 Honasan was a key figure in the Feb. 1986 mutiny that led to the downfall of President Ferdinand Marcos and brought Mrs. Aquino to power. He told reporters early Friday that the attacks were aimed at restoring national unity and he accused Mrs. Aquino of losing "political will" in face of numerous national problems.
 Efforts to contact Enrile were unsuccessful. His telephone was not working and guards turned away reporters from his home.

 "We are quite confident that we shall be able to bring normalcy to the metro Manila area by early (Saturday) morning," Ramos told reporters. "We are now involved in some mopping up operations."
 Mrs. Aquino's government has weathered several coup attempts and conspiracies since Marcos fled to Hawaii on Feb. 26, 1986.
 Marcos said from Honolulu, where he lives in exile with his wife, Imelda, that he wasn't involved in the uprising.
 "Everyone knows this took everybody by surprise, even those in Manila," he said in a telephone interview today with NBC. "I still maintain that even if we did not use violence, the government of Madame Aquino will collapse."
 Marcos said he had not talked to rebel leaders or fighters.
 "I do not want to make it look like I am very eager to go back as president of the Philippines," he said. "I am very eager to help our country. If by that, there is need for me to assume the legitimate presidency from which I was taken away forcibly, then I would certainly be happy ... to serve."
 In Los Angeles, President Reagan today condemned the coup attempt.
 "I wish to make absolutely clear America's unqualified support of President Aquino," he said.
 Ramos said hundreds of mutineers, believed to have come from Fort Magsaysay in northern Luzon, joined the attacks.
 Elsewhere, military sources said mutineers also took over a Philippine Constabulary regional headquarters in San Fernando, 40 miles north of the capital.
 The U.S. military confined its 40,000 troops, civilians and dependents to their bases except for those with urgent business or those who live off post. Most U.S. troops are stationed at air and naval bases within a 50-mile radius of Manila.
 Rebels were still holding out in the Air Force headquarters at Villamor, next to Manila International Airport. The airport was closed this evening and Philippine Airlines cancelled domestic flights.

Citing Age, Proxmire Says He Won't Seek Re-Election

By HELEN DEWAR
 L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the third most senior member of the Senate, chairman of its banking committee and a maverick who reveled in the role of penny-pinching custodian of the public purse, announced Thursday that he will not seek a sixth term next year.
 Describing a senator's life as "the best job in the world," he told reporters at the Wisconsin State Capitol in Madison that he was nonetheless abandoning it because he would be 79 when a new term ends.
 "I think that's too old," he said later in a telephone interview. "Too many people stay too long ... It's better to leave early than stay too late."
 The announcement by the 71-year-old lawmaker, whose career was marked by crusades on issues ranging from government waste to arms control and human rights, was made on the 30th anniversary of his upset victory in a special election to succeed the late senator Joseph R. McCarthy, R-Wis.
 It also marked the beginning of what could be one of the most hotly contested 1988 Senate races, giving Republicans a break in their otherwise uphill campaign to regain control of the Senate, which they lost to the Democrats last year. A dozen or more candidates from both parties are understood to be considering the race.
 Proxmire was perhaps best known as creator of the "Golden Fleece Award" to call attention to excessive government spending. But he also made a mark in other areas, most recently including Senate ratification of the long-delayed anti-genocide treaty, which he championed in daily speeches on the Senate floor for 19 years.
 Asked Thursday what was his proudest accomplishment in the Senate, Proxmire said, "holding down spending." Asked what disappointed him most, he said, "not being more effective at it." He also listed passage of the truth-in-lending and foreign corrupt practices act and defeat of the U.S. civilian supersonic transport as among the highlights of his career and said he regretted his early support of the Vietnam war. It was before a Proxmire subcommittee in 1969 that Air Force efficiency expert A. Ernest Fitzgerald disclosed a $2 billion cost overrun in the Lockheed C5 aircraft program.

 The stubborn Proxmire lived by the same skinflint rules that he sought to impose on the government.
 He refused to travel at government expense, returned more than $1 million to the Treasury by cutting the size of his staff and ran successful reelection campaigns on loose change. He reported spending $177.75 in 1976 and $145.10 in 1982, winning both elections by 2 to 1 or better.
 If this made many senators green with envy, they turned other colors when Proxmire zeroed in on their pay and perquisites of office. When Proxmire blocked construction of a fancy new gymnasium in the Hart Senate Office Building several years ago, they retaliated by closing a smaller shower room that Proxmire used after running to work.
 Proud of his personal as well as political eccentricities, Proxmire ran the four miles between his house and the Capitol every day, stood rather than sat at his desk, got a hair transplant, ate health food before it was fashionable and holds the Senate record for making roll-call votes: 21 years without missing one. He never takes vacations, returns to Wisconsin nearly every weekend and estimates that he shakes hands about 200,000 times a year.
 As chairman of the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, Proxmire oversaw passage of the first major restructuring of banking laws in five years.
 The decision to retire was a "tough call," and he kept it a secret from family and friends, he said, although there had been speculation in political circles for some time that he might not run again.
 The second senator to announce his retirement this year, following Sen. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., Proxmire is outranked in seniority by only Sens. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., 86, and Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.), 84.
 The author of five books, Proxmire said he intends to write and teach after his term expires in January 1989.

Official Reprimanded

1985, his second day with the university and continued through November 1986, the latest telephone bill available," the audit report said.
 "Interviews with other employees indicated that they began making personal calls shortly after the director indicated the practice was permitted.
 "We identified several frequently called numbers to the northern New Jersey-New York City area where the director previously resided. When asked," the report said, "he identified the calls as being to relatives and other personal calls. He volunteered to examine all telephone bills ... and to reimburse the university for all personal calls.
 "As a result ... he repaid $384.09 on Jan. 29 and 30, 1987. He also requested other employees in the department to re-examine the telephone bills to identify personal calls made by them that had not been previously reimbursed. Their review resulted in additional payments of $96.94."
 The report also said "we were advised that the director was not at work from June 30 through July 25, 1986, seven days in September and October 1986, and frequently left early to officiate college basketball games.
 "According to his leave records, annual leave was charged from June 30 through July 25, 1986, but there was no other annual leave charged during 1986.
 "Upon questioning the director about the possibility of any unrecorded annual leave," the report continued, "he acknowledged he took time off Oct. 3, 6 and 13, 1986, and did not charge the time to annual leave. He also acknowledged taking time off to officiate college basketball games, but that the time off was compensatory time for frequent overtime. However, there were no records maintained to document the compensatory time," the auditors said.
 "We recommend that the director of intramural and recreation services be appropriately disciplined for the improper use of the university telephone and for the failure to properly record annual leave in accordance with university personnel regulations."
 According to the document, the university's response to the findings included: the letter of reprimand; a reminder to all departments "not to make any personal long distance calls at university expense," and the proper recording of all annual leave records.
 In addition, the audit report said university department heads "will be required to approve and certify that all long distance calls on departmental monthly telephone bills were for official university business."
 Saying the Office of State Budget and Management requires that state appropriated funds not be used to pay Medical Faculty Practice Plan operating costs, the report said the school of medicine "proposes to reimburse the general fund $21,072" for salary and fringe benefits paid to the secretary of the director of the MFPP and "as of April 1, 1987," charge 100 percent of the position to the MFPP fund.

 The report also said the medical school will develop a plan to allocate other costs of the division of fiscal affairs of the school of medicine to the MFPP.
 "A comparison of teaching duties ... and other duties ... to the payroll distribution records revealed that portions of 10 coaches' salaries amounting to $126,703 were paid by the General Fund but should have been paid by the Athletic Fund (while) the General Fund was undercharged $6,744 for a portion of two other coaches' salaries" for a net overcharge of $119,929, the audit report said.
 In addition, the report said "there was no indication of teaching or other academic responsibilities to justify the General Fund salary charge of $10,235 for 1985-1986" for the director of athletics.
 Recommending that the funding source be carefully reviewed to determine the proper source of payment based on actual job responsibilities, the audit report said the university's response was that "it has been the practice ... for the last 15 plus years to transfer salaries for coaches paid from the academic budget over to the Athletic Department budget.
 "This process made significant strides," the report said, "until approximately 8 years ago (when) the chancellor in office at that time (Thomas Brewer) decided to augment the athletic budget by placing additional coaches of non-revenue sports on partial academic funding.
 "The university still makes a determined effort to apportion, insofar as fiscally feasible, the salaries equitably based upon job responsibilities (and) this endeavor will continue into the future," the report concluded.
 Commenting on the report Thursday, C.G. Moore, ECU's vice chancellor for business affairs, said "I don't think anybody's pleased when there are some recommendations that need to be accommodated." The audit report for the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1985, contained no findings or recommendations.
 But Moore suggested that some of the things (recommendations) have been set right already.
 "The part concerning payrolls for athletics. I know from first hand experience for 17 years the university has made an effort to move as many coaches as possible from the academic to the athletic budget ... pay them where they work.
 But he said the practice "got out of kilter" when Brewer, wanting to boost the athletic budget, "mandated" that more of the coaches' salaries be picked up by the academic budget.
 "We've not been able to move them all back. We've been trying ever since then to set it right."
 Moore noted that this is "the first time ever" that an ECU audit report has addressed the misuse of telephones.
 "It has happened before" Moore said, "but has been corrected internally" before state auditors became involved.

Dean's List
 Nancy Sneed and Beth Wasson of Greenville, students at Peace College, Raleigh, have been nominated to the National Dean's List for their academic achievement for the spring, 1987, semester. The two graduated from Peace in May this year.

Lebanese Rioters Protest Increasing Cost Of Living

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rioters and Shiite Moslem gunmen today blocked the airport highway and chanted "Death to America!" to protest the plunging value of the Lebanese pound and the soaring cost of living.
 Children smashed supermarket windows shouting "O God, we are hungry, we want to eat."
 Demonstrators stoned cars that approached the roadblocks of burning tires on the highway in south Beirut.
 Other demonstrations were staged in Moslem west Beirut, where 7,500 Syrian troops are in charge of security. Syrian soldiers fired in the air to disperse at least one demonstration.

 The protests erupted Thursday after the Lebanese pound fell to a record low of 300 to the dollar in a nation that imports at least 85 percent of its basic needs. The fall of the pound against hard currencies makes imports more expensive.
 Demonstrators tried to storm the Central Bank on Thursday but troops fired in the air to turn them back.
 Gunmen armed with automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenades joined the protest in the south Beirut slums, stronghold of pro-Iranian radicals, including factions that hold 24 foreign hostages.
 Some of the rioters waved posters of Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and of Nabih Berri, leader of the mainstream Shiite Amal militia. Traffic was held up at the airport highway for four hours before it was reopened at 11 a.m. Some departing flights were postponed because passengers could not make it to the airport.
 In west Beirut, shock troops of the Syrian Special Forces fired their Soviet-made automatic rifles in the air to disperse about 30 bearded rioters who tried to block traffic by burning tires.

ABRAM-IN-EGYPT
THE EGYPTIAN PRINCES HAVE NOW LEARNED FROM MERCHANTS THAT AN EASTERN BEAUTY IS LIVING IN THE LAND—JUST SUCH A THING AS ABRAM HAS FEARED MIGHT HAPPEN, IS HAPPENING....

WE MUST SEE THIS BEAUTY FROM THE EAST WITH OUR OWN EYES!

...AND ABRAM FINALLY HEARS THE APPROACH OF THEIR HORSES....

...SO NOW, BEING HIGH-PORN NOBLES, THEY ENTER ABRAM'S CAMP, DEMANDING TO SEE THE BEAUTIFUL WOMAN....

...AND ALONE, A STRANGER IN THE LAND, ABRAM CAN DO NOTHING BUT COMPLY!

HOW TRUE! HOW TRUE! BY ALL THE GODS OF THE LAND THIS IS A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN! THESE PRINCES ARE MOST APPRECIATIVE OF BEAUTY AND APPRECIATIVE OF OPPORTUNITY ALSO! THE PHARAOH WILL SURELY REWARD ANY MAN WHO CAN LEAD HIM TO A PRIZE SUCH AS THIS! AH, YES, THIS BEAUTY BECOMES EVEN MORE SO IN THE EYES OF THESE BEHOLDERS....

Next Week
PHARAOH'S PLANS!

Special How-To Course Takes Aim At Marriage

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When it comes to marriage, Margaret Kent means business. In fact, it is her business.

Kent is a Miami lawyer who specializes in taxation, international law and divorce law. She also teaches a course for women on how to get married.

Since 1969, more than 400 clients have completed her course and, she says, every single one of them has gotten married — most within two years.

Her clients come in all shapes and sizes, and from all kinds of social and economic backgrounds. Many are in their early 30s, Kent said in an interview here.

But she doesn't let everyone into her course. There's a waiting period for those newly divorced or widowed, to allow for an emotional transition from marriage to being single.

And Kent says she'll accept only those women who are willing to "deal in reality."

And what is that reality?

— That love and marriage are too important to be left to happenstance.

— That competition is fierce.

— That women shouldn't expect magic.

She says, "if you want anything else in life, you know you have to work for it, not wait for Santa Claus. The same is true when seeking a husband."

"The odds were greatly in your favor during your teen-age years, but if you are past 25, the odds are increasingly against you. You cannot sit around like a beached whale, waiting for the tides to come in. All you'll get is dead fish and seaweed."

Kent says mental attitudes are important. To women who want to get married, but who don't believe it could happen to them, she says: "Look around you. Is every married woman you see 18 years old, thin and beautiful? Of course not. So, what do they know that you don't?"

She says the answer lies in self-awareness, male-awareness and the application of some basic psychology.

Kent says choosing a man for marriage requires considerable effort.

"To marry well, you need to make good use of your time and abilities. Since you cannot sift men through giant colanders, you must sift them through your life by learning about them. Then you can pick and choose the best," she says.

Kent is the daughter of an American father and Cuban mother. Her dreams of a diplomatic career ended when Castro seized power in Cuba in 1959 and her mother's large family arrived in Miami from Cuba needing assistance.

It wasn't until 1967 — after finishing graduate school in Mexico and working as a language teacher in Miami — that her thoughts and plans zeroed in on getting married.

One of her evening students in a Spanish language program was George Kent, a lawyer and psychiatrist who had a number of Spanish-speaking patients and clients. She says Kent asked her to be his translator.

"As an attorney, George had a number of female clients who had been left by their husbands after long marriages were dissolved and were distressed about their prospects. As a psychiatrist, George had a number of patients who were single women and dependent over their marriage chances. As I worked with George, I realized that there was a pattern to these marriage problems and their solution.

"By this time, I had fallen in love with George. I decided to turn these patterns into a strategy and use them to catch him."

She says she put her plan into effect in September 1968. They were engaged on Valentine's Day in 1969 and married that June.

As a result of her experience, she put together a marriage course for six of her friends, and they each married about six months after the course ended.

She started teaching her course in 1969. As word of her successful approach spread, she began lecturing on the subject.

The course material was privately published in 1985 in a paperback edition that sold for $95. The book came with a money-back guarantee if the purchaser had not married within three years. Kent, who has sold 2,000 copies of her manual, says that, so far, she has yet to refund any money.

Now a publisher has come out with a hard cover version of the book titled, "How to Marry the Man of Your Choice."

Kent's husband died in 1979. She began law school in 1980, graduated in 1983, and became an attorney in Florida. She met Robert Feinschreiber, a tax expert, on Dec. 30, 1981. They started dating 18 months later and were married on Dec. 30, 1984.

Kent says she applied the techniques of her course to meet and marry Feinschreiber — and he knew it. "He is so smart he sensed it."

Catalogs Are Convenient

By VERA HALLER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If the shopping bug hits — beware. You can now buy that Benetton sweater or those khaki pants from the Banana Republic in the comfort of your own home.

From designer labels in Spiegel to L.L. Bean's outdoorsy clothing, more and more people are putting together their wardrobes by picking up the phone or mailing in their orders.

Convenience and reliable service are the main reasons people shop by catalog, says Charles Tannen, publisher and editor of Catalog Age, a trade publication.

"If you look at all the consumers, 30 percent like shopping by mail. The others just need to be enticed, need to try it once and have a good experience," he says. "The companies who offer returns, who reassure customers not to worry about anything and who offer fast service are the ones that are growing stronger."

Tannen also notes that the employees who take in phone orders are "many times much more knowledgeable than clerks in stores." He says that at Talbot's, there are racks of merchandise right next to the telephones so shoppers can immediately know if a certain style is cut small or large or whether their order is in stock.

With more women working, shopping by catalog has an added appeal because it saves time. "People just want to be able to pick up a phone at 10 at night and order something," Tannen says.

At Spiegel, the toll-free phones are open 24 hours a day. R. Joseph McLaughlin, vice president of marketing at Spiegel, says buying clothes by catalog is "a preferred alternative to the hustle and bustle of traditional retail shopping."

He says sales at Spiegel have approximately tripled in the last 10 years, to more than $750 million annually, he says.

"The reason that mail-order fashion has grown so much over the past decade is the advent of the working woman," McLaughlin says. "I can describe that customer in two words: she's busy."

Francesca Dall'Ollma Riley, catalog director for Benetton, says her company began catalog service in 1965 to reach consumers in parts of the country where it had no stores.

But others soon began shopping Benetton by catalog. "We find that people who buy through catalog are usually people who are too busy to go to the store or people who don't like buying in big stores," Ms. Riley says.

She says Benetton catalog sales total approximately $2 million annually. She did not know how that figure compared to nationwide sales at Benetton, which has 700 stores across the United States.

The Limited also recently entered the catalog market. Its first issue was mailed nationwide in mid-February. The 20-page, color catalog is packaged to look like a fashion magazine.

An interesting side development to catalog shopping is the videolog, a catalog that is created on videocassette and distributed to customers owning VCRs.

Royal Silk is one of a few apparel companies to have one. Its first 1987 videolog covers 60 of the print catalog's 80 items.

The video includes a nine-minute segment showing models wearing different styles; 20 minutes are devoted to close-ups and freeze frames; the last six minutes offer tips on how to care for silk.

The company charges $5.95 per videolog and includes a copy of the print catalog. The cost of the video is deducted from the price of the first order.

Any Words Are Right Words To Those Who Suffer Loss

DEAR ABBY: A year ago our daughter was raped and stabbed to death. Words cannot express our horror and pain. It was bad enough to lose our daughter, but it seems we also lost our friends. Friends we had known for years didn't call or come to see us. We were shunned as though we had some kind of terrible disease — and just when we needed their friendship most. Now, when we run into former friends, they act embarrassed and say, "We would have called or come over, but we didn't know what to say."

Abby, I belong to a support group called Parents of Murdered Children, and at each meeting, some time is spent on just this subject. Most members say their friends have dropped them.

Abby, you have publicized our group in your column, and I thank you for that. Now, please, tell your readers, all they have to do is call and say, "I heard the news, and I am sorry." Or come over and say it in person — and just be there to help the suffering parents get on with their lives as normally as possible. — MICHELLE'S MOM, JOHNSTOWN, COLO.

DEAR MOM: My heart goes out to you and to every other parent who has lost a child. The message in your letter is not news to me. I have read it many times from many grieving parents. So, let me send this very important message to my readers: If you have friends who have lost a loved one in death — please don't abandon them. They don't need to lose you, too.

DEAR ABBY: I recently received a wedding invitation to be held in a neighboring state. On the bottom corner was stated: "Reception: Covered dish dinner immediately following ceremony."

Surely that doesn't mean that they expect us to drive that distance and bring a covered dish, does it? I've never heard of such a thing. I always thought the bride's family gave the reception, and it could be either very lavish or simple punch and wedding cake if they couldn't afford much.

What would you interpret that to mean? And what is your opinion of that? Please hurry your answer as several others can't figure it out either. — INVITED GUEST, PORTSMOUTH, OHIO

DEAR GUEST: Seldom, if ever, does a wedding invitation state what will be served following the ceremony, so it is safe to assume that the guests are being solicited for "covered dishes." But just to be sure, either write or phone, and inquire.

DEAR ABBY: You said: "A pox on those folks who dial a number and if their party doesn't answer after the fourth or fifth ring, they hang up. Many people (especially those who are on in years) cannot spring to the telephone in 10 seconds, so give them a break and let the phone ring at least 10 or 12 times."

Do you know that MCI charges for calls over five rings whether or not the party answers the phone? I have paid twice before I realized that this is their policy. I thought you would like to know. — EVA GALLA, BILLERICA, MASS.

Beginning Day Held Tuesday

Eta Delta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi had a beginning day salad supper Tuesday evening at the home of Linda Bradford.

Summer experiences and activities were reviewed. A vacation auction was held.

The next meeting will be held Sept. 8 at the home of Linda Patterson.

DEAR EVA: My staff checked with MCI and was told it is not MCI's policy to charge for calls whether the party answers or not. A spokesperson said: "Some tone difference (static in the background, picked up while dialing) could record as 'completed' on our equipment — even when a call was not completed. So check your phone bill, and if you are charged for an uncompleted call, ask for credit and you will receive it." And have a nice day!

Programs To Focus On Women's Issues

Women in 1987 are women in transition. Their roles have changed over the past decades, both in their personal and professional lives. Along with these transitions, come new responsibilities, health issues and challenges that are unique to women.

The Pitt County Women's Interest Group has joined with other local organizations to sponsor "Women in '87," a series of programs focusing on women's changing roles and health care needs," said Jennifer Congleton, chairperson of the interest group.

Co-sponsors of the series include Pitt County Memorial Hospital, Women's Network, Pitt County Women's Commission and the N.C. Council on the Status of Women.

Nine programs will be presented by professional women, a health fair and banquet will be held at local places Sept. 10-11.

Wanda Lancaster, one of the program presenters and a registered nurse at Greenville Psychiatric Associates, P.A., says it is important for women to understand the transitions they face as well as the effects these transitions have on their health, personal growth and development.

"All of us function in some kind of group system. Families are the most familiar group to most, so it is logical to involve family members when seeking solutions," Ms. Lancaster said. She will delve further into the issues surrounding women in transition during a brown bag luncheon Sept. 11.

Byllye Avery will join her at lunch. Ms. Avery is founder and executive director of Black Women's Health Project in Atlanta, a self-help organization which focuses its efforts on improving women's health care. Avery will discuss developing a self-help organization for women and the benefits of organizing community resources for the betterment of women's health.

Avery has been a women's health care activist for 10 years, developing a national forum for the exploration of health issues of black women. Prior to her entry into the health care arena, she taught special education and emotionally disturbed students, and consulted on learning disabilities in public schools and universities. She co-founded the Gainesville Women's Health Center and BIRTHPLACE, an alternative birthing center, both located in Gainesville, Fla.

The series will end with an evening social and banquet Sept. 11 at the Sheraton-Greenville. The keynote address "Is Our Lifestyle Killing Us?" will be given by Ms. Avery. Banquet reservations must be made by Sept. 4.

The series will start Sept. 10 at 11:30 a.m. at the Ayden Senior Citizens Center with "Recreation for the Time of Your Life," a look at the benefits of recreation and leisure activities. "Cancer: Risk Factors and Warning Signs" begins at noon at the Farmville Community Building, offering information on risks factors and detection. "Making Your Dollar Work for You" begins at 4:30 p.m. in the auditorium at PCMH, offering tips on how to maximize resources.

A wine and cheese reception at the Greenville Museum of Art begins at 6:30 p.m. and features watercolor paintings of women artists. "AIDS: The Health Dilemma of the 1980s and '90s" will start at 7 p.m. at Greene Hall on the ECU campus. Also offered at 7 p.m. is "The Impact of Separation and Divorce" at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

On Sept. 11, the series will continue at 9 a.m. with "Domestic Violence and Abuse," featuring a panel discussion on the social, legal and psychological aspects of domestic violence. "Recreation for the Time of Your Life" will be offered at 11:30 a.m. at the Greenville Senior Citizens Center.

A brown bag luncheon will begin at 11:30 a.m. in Room 2-West-40 of the Brody Medical Sciences Building featuring two talks "Women in Transition: Psycho-social Issues Affecting Growth and Development" and "Organizing for Your Health."

A daylong health fair will start at 9 a.m. and continue through 6 p.m. at The Plaza, designed to address health issues related to women.

Prior to the banquet, the social hour will provide networking opportunities as well as a chance to meet representatives from the League of Women Voters, Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service and Business and Professional Women's Club.

For further information concerning the series call 551-2481 or 551-4466.

Parents Urged To Check Safety Of Playgrounds

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Every two minutes somewhere in the United States a child is injured on a playground and receives emergency hospital treatment, according to data compiled by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Serious injuries are occurring at a rate of 200,000 per year and more than three fourths of the reported cases involve children under 10.

"Young children should be able to play and develop without taking unnecessary risks," says Dr. Joe Frost, Parker Centennial professor at the University of Texas and U.S.A. national representative of the International Association for the Child's Right to Play.

The association is an international non-governmental organization, founded in Denmark in 1961, whose members include people of all professions working for or with children.

"While it may be impossible to protect children from all injuries, park officials should make every effort to protect against major injuries, such as those to the head," Frost says. "The real tragedy is that many playground injuries can actually be prevented."

Being hit by moving equipment or being caught between moving and fixed components in playground apparatus are cited as frequent causes of injury, but about 70 percent of all playground accidents result from falls to hard surfaces and can range from minor scrapes to brain injuries and death, statistics show.

"How many people know that if a child falls from only 3 inches, a head-first fall onto concrete can be fatal?" asks James Donovan, president of a Milwaukee-based company that manufactures protective playground surface. "Or that if the play area is over grass, the surface can eventually become 'packed earth,' posing the possibility of serious injuries from falls of only 4 feet or less?"

What can parents do to help ensure their child's safety?

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission has compiled a list of some of the dangers that parents should check for at their local playgrounds:

- Any visible cracks, bending, warping, rusting or breakage of any components.
- Worn swing hangers and chains.
- Deformation of open hooks, shackles, rings, links, etc.
- Exposed ends of tubing that should be covered by plugs or caps.
- Hard surfaces, especially under swings, slides, etc.
- Possible areas for head entrapment.
- Lack of lubrication on moving parts.

— Shearing actions in moving mechanisms.

— Accessible hard edges or points. "Playground equipment is used heavily," Frost points out, "and even if it's not abused it wears out. Look at the equipment, and if something does not look safe, contact the parks department or your local community board immediately.

"As a parent or baby sitter, you should not take anything for granted," he says. "You have to watch children and teach them how to use the playground equipment. Also, be sure your child is old enough to use the equipment. Most parks have facilities for different age groups and children should be instructed and guided by their parents as to which equipment they're allowed to use."

Adds Donovan, president of Breakfall Inc., "We should relate playground safety to the progress made in children's automobile restraints.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market showed a broad loss today, extending the decline of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 9.88 to 2,665.18 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 332 up, 773 down and 416 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 28.84 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said a wave of profit-taking had been set in motion this week by renewed weakness in the dollar and rising interest rates that pushed yields on long-term government bonds above 9 percent.

Those circumstances raised fears of a replay of the market's substantial drop last spring, when the dollar was slumping and interest rates took a sudden jump.

International Business Machines, a prominent casualty in the recent selling, dropped 1/2 to 165 3/4 in active early trading today.

Tobacco stocks ran into profit-taking for the second straight session. Philip Morris fell 1/4 to 116 3/4 and RJR Nabisco 7/8 to 67 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .79 to 184.47. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .79 at 360.23.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 26.79 to 2,675.06, bringing its drop since it hit a record closing high on Tuesday to 47.36 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 530 up, 1,034 down and 411 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 163.61 million shares, against 196.19 million in the previous session.

Award-Winning Film Director-Actor John Huston, 81, Dies In His Sleep

MIDDLETOWN, R.I. (AP) - Director John Huston, who lived as hard and at times as dangerously as the characters in "The Maltese Falcon," "Prizzi's Honor" and other films which he created in a long and honored career, died today. He was 81.

Huston died in his sleep at a home he was renting here during the filming of "Mr. North," said Patty Raya, production coordinator for the movie.

Huston had been released last week from a hospital in Fall River, Mass., after he was hospitalized for three weeks for emergency treatment of pneumonia complicated by his long-time emphysema.

When he collapsed and was hospitalized, he had been on his way to start filming a role in "Mr. North," which is being directed by his son, Danny, and co-starring his daughter Anjelica. The movie is being filmed in nearby Newport.

He was forced to turn over the role to Robert Mitchum, but planned to remain as executive producer.

During his half-century in film, Huston ventured deep into a jungle for "The African Queen," pulled together misfits and outcasts for "The Volcano," drank, caroused, befriended such mavericks as Ernest Hemingway and flourished in a Hollywood that cut most rebels down to size.

A half-dozen of his 40 feature films were considered classics, including "The Asphalt Jungle," "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," and "Key Largo."

Orson Welles once said Huston was "playing Mephistopheles to his own Faust." For his part, Huston, in his rich, deep voice, repeated his father's advice: "Don't work at anything simply for money. Choose your profession as you would choose your wife: for love - and for money."

The business was in his blood. He was the son of Walter Huston and the father of Anjelica Huston, and made film history by directing each of them in movies that won them Oscars. He won his own for writing and directing "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre."

When he wasn't behind the camera, Huston was narrating commercials and documentaries, writing screenplays or acting - in perhaps his best-known role, he played the corrupt father in "Chinatown."

He rarely trimmed his pace, though he suffered in later years from emphysema that forced him to wear tubes leading to an oxygen tank. This summer, he completed his last film as director, the as-yet-unreleased "The Dead," based on a James Joyce story and starring Anjelica. In order to get insurance, the producers, who included his son, Tony, had to have another director on standby.

"Recently I heard myself described as a living legend," he remarked upon receiving an award for his achievements in 1985. "My doctors assure me that the first wintry blasts would almost certainly change my present status."

John Marcellus Huston was born Aug. 5, 1906, in Nevada, Mo. His father was then a utility company engineer, his mother a traveling reporter. He made his stage debut at the age of 3, reciting "Yankee Doodle Dandy," and spent much of his childhood shuttling back and forth between parents, who split up when he was 6.

He was a frail child, and at age 12 was placed in a sanitarium because of an enlarged heart and kidney problems. But he would sneak out at night to swim a creek and ride it over a waterfall, discovering a joy that banished fear.

"Action, and the most vivid possible use of the immediate present, were his personal salvation; they have remained lifelong habits," said a friend, writer James Agee.

After grade school, Huston became a boxer, then moved on to study painting. Huston worked briefly as a screenwriter, newspaper reporter and editor before joining Warner Bros. as a writer in 1935. There, he worked on such films as "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," "Juarez," "High Sierra," and "Sergeant York."

He got his first directorial assignment in 1941 with "The Maltese Falcon." He wrote the screenplay himself from Dashiell Hammett's novel, and cast Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor, Sydney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre. It is considered one of the greatest films in the detective genre.

He had five children, Anjelica and Tony by Miss Soma; Danny by Zoe Sallis; and Allegra and Pablo, whom he adopted.

JOHN HUSTON

Bryn Smith Lets Inspiration Carry Him To Victory

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Montreal's Bryn Smith wasn't sure he could pitch at all when he took the mound. Then inspiration got the best of him.

Spurred on by a come-from-behind victory 24 hours earlier and the race in the National League East, the right-hander overcame a sore shoulder and became just the second Expos starter to win this month.

Smith, who had elbow surgery in the off-season and hadn't started in eight days because of an aching shoulder, checked the San Diego Padres on four hits over five innings Thursday night for a 3-0 victory.

"The shoulder's basically kind of worn down. Now, it's back in the rebuilding phase," said Smith, 8-6. "It seems to be coming back real good. There was no pain."

Smith, who hadn't won since July 29, said he and Expos Manager Buck Rodgers had decided prior to the game to pull him after five innings.

"The main thing was to find out if I could pitch," Smith said. "The last two times out I was giving up five runs a game. I was not doing myself or the team any good."

Elsewhere, Atlanta beat Chicago 5-2 in the first game of a doubleheader. Chicago led the nightcap 8-6 when it was halted by darkness in the eighth inning. No other games were scheduled in the NL.

The only other Montreal starter to win this month was Dennis Martinez, who beat New York on Aug. 10.

Rodgers was thrilled with the victory, which gave the three-game series to the Expos, 2-1. It pushed the third-place Expos within five games of St. Louis and a half-game of New York.

"This is an important road trip," Rodgers said. "We'll know at the end of this trip whether we're a contender or not."

The Expos moved on to Los Angeles where they begin a three-game series against the Dodgers tonight. They face San Francisco and Atlanta before returning home to meet the Cardinals.

Rodgers said the team went into the game fired up by its come-from-behind win the night before. The Expos scored three runs in the ninth inning Wednesday to tie the score at 5-5, then overcame a bases-loaded situation in the 11th, and finally got the winning run in the 12th on Tim Wallach's single.

Thursday's victory gave the Expos a 9-3 record with the Padres this season.

"This loss doesn't bother me anymore than any other one," Padres Manager Larry Bowa said. "I just don't like losing."

Padres starter Jimmy Jones said he thought he pitched a good game, but regretted walking Hubie Brooks in the sixth. Brooks scored on two consecutive singles to secure the lead.

"I would have liked Brooks to earn his base," said Jones, 6-5.

Montreal scored a run in the second when Tim Wallach singled and scored on Tom Foley's double. Andres Galarraga had an RBI single in the sixth and Tim Raines made it 3-0 with a run-scoring single in the seventh.

Smith allowed four hits, struck out two and walked none.

Joe Hesketh, Bob McClure, and Andy McGaffigan pitched the final four innings for Montreal, with McGaffigan getting his ninth save.

Braves 5, Cubs 2

Dale Murphy's two-run homer, his 35th, backed the six-hit pitching of Zane Smith gave the Atlanta the victory in the opener.

The second game will have to be completed at a later date, although the two teams are not scheduled to meet again this year. All the records count, including five home runs by the Cubs. Major-league league Andre Dawson hit his 42nd for the Cubs in the nightcap.

Leon Durham homered twice for the Chicago in the second game. Keith Moreland and Jerry Mumphrey also cleared the walls at Wrigley Field.

Smith, 14-7, walked one and struck out three as the Braves stretched their winning streak to five games in the opener.

Morrison Case Is Appealed; Records Saved

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The state Supreme Court has overruled an order by a family court judge to destroy records in the child support suit brought against University of South Carolina football Coach Joe Morrison, according to reports from a newspaper and a television station.

Barbara Button this week filed an intent to appeal a settlement of the case with the state Supreme Court, according to The State and WIS-TV.

The Lexington County woman also asked the court to protect records of the case.

Sources told The State the records were ordered shredded by Family Court Judge Samuel Mendenhall of Rock Hill, who was serving on the bench in Richland County earlier in August. Mendenhall would not return phone calls to his residence Thursday night.

WIS-TV reported Thursday that the high court ordered that Richland County Clerk of Court Barbara Scott preserve records of the lawsuit and said files on the appeal will be open for inspection, the station reported.

Button has retained new counsel. Her former attorneys, Brian Dumas and James Rollison, filed a motion with the court Friday asking to be relieved as her attorneys and the motion was granted.

Family court officials have not allowed reporters to view documents concerning the case.

Scott said she could not comment on the case.

A hearing is scheduled for next week on whether to unseal the records in the case. The hearing was requested by several news organizations to release the records and to lift a gag order imposed by Family Court Judge Carol Conner.

The suit was settled in Richland County Family Court about four weeks ago, according to The State. University athletic department sources told the newspaper that under the terms of the settlement, Morrison agreed to provide regular payments to support his daughter. The sources did not reveal the amount of payments.

All terms of the suit and settlement have been withheld by Ms. Conner's order.

Morrison fathered the child, now 5 years old, while he was head football coach at the University of New Mexico, and the mother and child followed Morrison to Columbia after he was hired in 1982 to head the South Carolina football program.

Button filed the suit to ensure that child support payments would be made directly to her after Morrison began to pay the child's bills himself rather than give the money to Button, sources told the newspaper.

Button, 29, lives in a $30,000 condominium owned by television production company MO-JO Inc., of which Morrison is president, records show. Button and Morrison have refused to comment on the suit.

San Francisco Rips Chargers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — With Joe Montana throwing to Dwight Clark, the San Francisco 49ers' offense had a familiar look, and the home fans loved it.

"The reaction from the crowd really pumped me up," Clark said after his 1987 playing debut, which included one 20-yard reception in the first half of Thursday night's 17-3 NFL preseason victory over the San Diego Chargers.

"I feel great. Three months ago, they said I wouldn't even play."

Clark, the 49ers' all-time receiving leader, and Montana broke into the NFL together in 1979. When this summer's training camp opened, Coach Bill Walsh indicated it was doubtful if Clark, who had several knee operations in the off-season, would be able to continue his career.

"It was great having him back in there," Montana said. "I missed him in the end zone, though. I really wanted that one."

In the second period, with San Diego leading 3-0 on the strength of Vince Abbott's 41-yard field goal in the first quarter, Montana overthrew Clark on a pass from the Chargers' 23-yard line. The 49ers settled for a Ray Wersching field goal and went ahead just before halftime by driving 81 yards and scoring on Montana's 7-yard pass to Mike Wilson.

San Francisco, 3-1 in pre-season games, got a 3-yard scoring run from rookie Terrence Flager late in the game and finished with a 395-116 yardage advantage over San Diego, 1-2. Dan Fouts made his first playing appearance of the year for the Chargers, completing only three of 11 passes, and leading rusher Barry

Redden totaled 16 yards on 15 carries.

The game was the first in the third full weekend of preseason play.

Tonight, Seattle tries for its first victory of the exhibition season when its hosts 1-1 Detroit at the Kingdome.

On Saturday, New England (0-2) tries to break through at Minnesota against the 1-1 Vikings.

In games Saturday night, it will be Washington (2-0) at Tampa Bay (1-1), Miami (0-2) at Philadelphia (1-1), Pittsburgh (0-2) at New Orleans (1-1), Cincinnati (1-1) at Green Bay (0-2), Cleveland (1-1) at Atlanta (1-1), Buffalo (1-1) at Kansas City (2-1), Houston (1-1) at Indianapolis (1-1), the New York Jets (1-1) at the New York Giants (2-0) and Denver (2-1) at the Los Angeles Rams (1-1).

The Los Angeles Raiders (0-2) will visit 1-1 Dallas on Sunday night.

On Monday night, St. Louis (1-1) hosts Chicago (2-0).

"We didn't make any turnovers, which was a positive thing for us," Chargers Coach Al Saunders said, looking at one bright point in the loss to San Francisco. He didn't count two interceptions by the 49ers, since both came on long passes in the final seconds of each half.

"We just couldn't get untracked rushing the football, but the San Francisco defense had a lot to do with that," Redden said.

San Francisco registered five quarterback sacks for a total of 62 yards.

Clark admitted he needs a lot more practice time to reach top form and said, "I don't know what my role will be. Maybe I'm too old to be a starter."

"Mike Wilson is playing great, and Tony Hill made one of the best catches I've ever seen."

Hill, the former Dallas star, gained 44 yards with a diving catch of a deflected pass to set up the game's final touchdown.

"All I can do is praise him. That was great concentration on his part," said Louis Brock, the rookie defensive back who thought he had beaten Hill on the play.

Tight end Russ Francis, another 49er veteran, missed the game because of a sore Achilles tendon.

"Ron Heller is a force to be reckoned with at his position," Walsh said of the 24-year-old player who started in place of Francis.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Hired to provide the leadership to bring Kansas City a division title in 36 games, John Wathan got the first one out of the way dramatically.

Wathan watched as former teammate and roommate George Brett homered with two out in the bottom of the tenth inning Thursday night to give him a 3-2 victory over Texas in his managerial debut.

"It's an exciting feeling to win close games," Wathan said. "I think that's what we're going to have to do, win close games."

Wathan succeeded Billy Gardner, who was fired as the Royals struggled to a 62-64 record. The job went to Wathan after hitting instructor Hal McRae declined the opportunity to become the fourth black manager in major league history, saying he would not accept an interim role.

Despite playing under 500, the Royals trail the Minnesota Twins by only three games in the American League West.

"It is our belief that the club still has an opportunity to win the pennant with the talent and commitment that it has," General Manager John Schuerholz said.

"We feel that with John Wathan's knowledge of the organization and especially his knowledge of the people on this team and more especially his feel for what the Royals organization means that he is the man most qualified to get the season on track, albeit with a short time remaining," he said.

A decision about who will manage next year will be made later.

McRae has said since he retired earlier this season as a Royals player that he wanted to spend more time with his family.

"I know it's a tough job and you have to make a strong commitment to it," McRae said. "To me, the most important people are the players. I didn't want to be in a position of protecting myself, always trying to save my job. I wanted to create an environment where the players could work and get their jobs done without worrying about wins and losses."

The offer to McRae followed co-owner Ewing Kauffman's announcement this spring that the Royals would develop a plan to move minorities into management positions.

Kauffman's statement followed remarks on national television by Al Campanis of the Los Angeles Dodgers that black "lack the necessities" for management positions. Thase remarks cost Campanis his job and called attention to the lack of blacks in front office and management positions throughout baseball.

Wathan has been in the Royals organization for 17 years as a player, coach and manager. He was a catcher, first baseman and outfielder in 10 big league seasons with Kansas City.

"Even though I have limited experience as a manager, I think the way I played the game and the way I studied the game is in my favor," said Wathan, who was managing the Royals' AAA affiliate at Omaha. "This is what I've always wanted. I've been in the Royals organization for 17 seasons and that is not something that too many ballplayers can say."

Brett said he noticed an immediate change in the team.

"I think we played with more enthusiasm tonight," the first baseman said. "There was more hustle, there was more cheering on the bench. I think it's just great to see him get a chance and it's great to see him get his first win."

Wathan said he had held a meeting with several key players with whom he played, including Frank White, Jamie Quirk, Brett and Willie Wilson.

"We talked a little bit about the situation," Wathan said. "I was a teammate, now I'm the manager. We just have to have a working relationship and get this thing done and win ..."

Wathan had not completed even one year of managing, guiding the Omaha Royals to a 62-70 record in the American Association. He retired as a player in 1986 and served as a coach for the major league club before getting the Omaha position.

"We've played poorly at times, we've played great at times," Wathan said. "I think we'll get back to the old style of running, a little bit more hit-and-run instead of just waiting for something to happen."

"I regard this as a golden opportunity," said Wathan, who played on every Royals championship team, including the 1985 World Series winner. "I have confidence in my ability that I will be back to manage next year."

Gardner was fired because the team had the talent to play better than it had, co-owner Avron Fogelman said.

"The team wasn't jelling," Fogelman said. "We had to do something to get it to jell. The concept of winning has to be the driving force."

"We felt that we had a better team on paper than what our record is. We haven't had our offense, we haven't had our closing pitching. The commitment of the Kansas City Royals is to winning."

Gardner took over the Royals on Feb. 23 when the late Dick Howser resigned because of a brain tumor. Gardner had been hired in the off-season to be third base coach with the expectation that he would manage if Howser was too weak to do the job.

Gardner's only other big league job was with the Minnesota Twins, where he was 268-353 before he was fired June 20, 1985.

Johnson Hopes To Change Relationship

ROME (AP) — When Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson ponders past performances in major world events, neither his own nor those of American rival Carl Lewis offer much reassurance for this week's World Track and Field Championships.

Despite being the top 100-meter sprinter over the last two seasons, Johnson's medal box looks relatively empty, with only two bronze medals from the 1984 Olympic Games compared with Lewis's four gold medals from the 1984 Olympics and three from the 1983 world championships.

"That's the past," Johnson said when asked of his comparative failures in big meets.

As athletes continued to congregate for the nine-day championships, which opens Saturday, organizers announced that the 10,000-meter run would be contested as a final with no preliminaries and also set tough standards for qualifying in the field events.

Nevertheless, talk centered on the clash in the 100.

The lack of gold medals doesn't worry Johnson, who says it counts more that he has beaten Lewis in their last four meetings, including once this year.

"I don't feel any pressure," Johnson said. "I'm ready to go."

In the earlier meetings with Johnson, "I definitely haven't been in best shape," Lewis said. "I wasn't as focused mentally so they (the losses) have no bearing whatsoever" on Sunday's final.

The clash has also reignited rumors of animosity between the two.

"I really don't think it's a big deal," Lewis said. "Ben is trying to be the best in the world and so am I.

... Whatever he feels he has to do to attain that is his business; whatever I have to do is my business."

Johnson's business is to get a fast start, while Lewis will look to come back in the second 50 meters. Explaining his explosive start, Johnson was philosophical.

"When it comes, it comes," he said. "When it doesn't, there is nothing I can do about it."

Lewis is more methodical and deliberate in his approach, hoping for "a more smooth, a more accelerating race. I have a strong finish."

Johnson, a 25-year-old Canadian, has threatened Calvin Smith's 1983 world record of 9.93 seconds several times, missing it twice by only .02 seconds.

Lewis, 26, has taken a low-key approach to his main test of the year.

"The ultimate goal is to see how many gold medals I can win," he said.

Lewis is also going in the long jump and the 400-meter relay. While a world record is the only thing that has eluded Lewis in his six-year-international career, Johnson is still looking to make a mark with either a record or a world title. His only golds came in last year's Commonwealth Games, which were hit hard by a boycott, and the 1985 World Cup competition.

While the Johnson-Lewis duel dominates the pre-race hoopla, an outsider might well run off with the laurels.

"You cannot rule out anyone," Lewis said, mentioning fellow American Mark Witherspoon as a possible winner.

Other outsiders include Ray Stewart, who ran a wind-aided 9.89 in the Pan Am Games earlier this month, and Nigerian Chidi Imoh, who ran 9.92, again with too much wind, at Nairobi.

Titles, not times, will be important on Sunday, Lewis said.

The 10,000 final, originally scheduled for Monday, will be held Saturday night, in the same time slot that had been allotted for the qualifying heats, organizers said Thursday.

The qualifying heats were eliminated because of an insufficient number of competitors. The final will be held with 28 runners.

The tough automatic qualifying standards for field events were established by the meet's technical committee.

For the men, the standards are 7 feet, 6 inches for the high jump, 18-2½ for the pole vault, 26-1 for the long jump, 55-3½ for the triple jump, 66-11¼ for the shot put, 213-3 for the discus, 251-0 for the hammer throw, and 252-7 for the javelin.

The women's standards are 6-4 for the high jump, 21-7¼ for the long jump, 62-4 for the shot put, 205-1 for the discus and 210-0 for the javelin.

Any competitor meeting those standards during qualifying competition, which begins Saturday, automatically will qualify for the final.

There must be at least 12 finalists in each of those events. If 12 do not meet the standards during qualifying, the next competitors, in order, will be added to the field to reach that number.

Woody Peele

Wow! Where did the time go. Football season is upon us once again and it seems like only yesterday that the previous season wound up.

Seven of our 11 area high school teams return to the playing fields tonight, with the other four joining in next time around. The four with open dates include Jamesville, Greene Central, Roanoke and Conley.

Next weekend, too, the collegiate ranks begin their season and with their return, our panel will also return to battle it out for another season.

Tom Morris is the defending champion of the group and this year the other members have vowed that Morris will be relegated to a lower ranking — the time of beginners' luck is over.

Meanwhile, we'll kick off the 1987 high school season with these predictions.

Rose High School's Rampants take on Eastern Wayne in a road game. This is an early opening for the Rampants, who usually take the first week off, then go into 10 straight weekends of play. Coach Chip Williams wanted to have the team's open date the week before conference play starts this year to see if it will help the rest of the way.

Rose didn't get a chance to see Eastern Wayne scrimmage this year but the Warriors got a full report on the Rampants, scouting their scrimmage. (Rose was not told by school officials on which day the Warriors would scrimmage.)

However, unless Rose has some key injury in the game, they should have the stuff to push past Eastern. We look for Rose to take a 21-13 victory.

Ayden-Grifton goes on the road to Wallace-Rose Hill. The Chargers return a strong crew from last year's Eastern Plains co-championship team, but Wallace-Rose Hill was one of the state's top teams last year and appears strong again. The home field could tell the difference. Our pick in the game will be Wallace-Rose Hill by a slim 22-20 score.

Farmville Central takes on North Edgecombe. The Warriors are a power every year in the 1-A Tobacco Belt, while Farmville is still rebuilding from its championship year two seasons ago. The Jaguars probably don't have quite enough to handle the Warriors, who will take a 20-7 decision.

North Pitt visits West Craven in another EPC opener. The Panthers are picked as the eventual winner in the Eastern Plains while West Craven is a power in the 3-A Coastal Conference. This should be an outstanding game, and we'll pick North Pitt to slip past the Eagles, 13-12.

In the other area games, it will be Chocowinity over Camden, Williamston over Manteo, and Washington over Belhaven.

JV Eagles Roll To Win

BETHEL — West Craven High School's junior varsity showed no mercy and took no prisoners Thursday night as it ran to a 60-6 football victory over North Pitt.

The Panther Cubs were totally bottled up much of the evening, netting only 17 yards rushing as compared to 221 yards rushing by the Eaglettes.

The lone Panther score came in the final minutes of the game when Marcus Purvis pulled in a seven yard pass from Al Roberson.

North Pitt, now 0-1, travels to North Edgecombe next Thursday.

West Craven.....	22	14	24	0-60
North Pitt.....	0	0	0	0-6

The two teams were really marching up and down the field in the 1985 Super Bowl. The winning San Francisco 49ers made 31 first downs and the Miami Dolphins had 19.

Wathan's Debut More Like Reunion

By The Associated Press
John Wathan's first game as manager of the Kansas City Royals was more of a reunion than a debut.

On Thursday afternoon, the Royals fired Billy Gardner as manager and named Wathan as his replacement for the rest of this season after coach

Hal McRae turned the job down. Wathan, 37, played catcher and outfield for the Royals from 1976-85 and was manager of their Class AAA Omaha team this year.

For one night anyway, he is 1,000 as a big-league manager thanks to a former roommate.

George Brett homered with two outs in the bottom of the 10th inning to lift Kansas City over Texas, 3-2.

Brett hit his 17th homer on a 2-1 pitch from reliever Dale Mohorcic, 6-4, who came off the disabled list earlier in the day. John Davis, 3-0, pitched 1 1/3 innings for the victory.

"I started playing with him (Wathan) in 1971 in the instructional league and I played with him in the minors," Brett said. "I roomed with him in spring training. It's just great to see him get a chance and it's great to see him get his first win."

Wathan's best season for the Royals came in 1980 when he hit .305, drove in 58 runs and stole 17 bases for the American League champions.

"I think the nicest thing I heard was 'Congratulations skip, that's number one,'" Wathan said. "I think all the guys were excited at the win, but they were also excited for me. That made it a special, gratifying moment."

The victory moved Kansas City (63-64) past California into third place in the AL West, three games behind Minnesota.

Elsewhere, Toronto beat Oakland 9-4, Baltimore defeated California 9-5 and Milwaukee edged Cleveland 4-3. Seattle at New York was rained out.

Wathan also got a big hit from a struggling Bo Jackson, who entered the game with one hit in 19 at-bats, but went 2-for-4.

With two outs in the bottom of the ninth, Jackson hit his 21st homer, against Texas starter Paul Kilgus. Texas had taken a 2-1 lead in the top of the inning when Oddibe McDowell walked with the bases loaded and two outs.

"I think we played with more enthusiasm out there. There was more hustle, there was more cheering on the bench," Brett said.

Steve Balboni, Frank White, Willie Wilson, Bud Black, Bret Saberhagen, Charlie Leibrandt, Mark Gubicza, McRae and Dan Quisenberry were all teammates of Wathan.

"I called in all the players that I played with," Wathan said. "It went real well, we had a talk. We talked about the situation. I was a teammate, now I'm the manager. We just have to have a working relationship and get this thing done and win it for the Kansas City Royals."

Blue Jays 9, Athletics 4

George Bell drove in five runs with a grand slam and a double and Jimmy Key pitched two-hit ball for six innings as Toronto defeated visiting Oakland.

The victory moved Toronto into a virtual first-place tie with idle Detroit in the AL East while the A's slipped a game behind Minnesota in the AL West.

"We're in a pennant race and we've only got 35 games left," Key said. "Anytime you can get a win, that's great."

Key, 15-6, allowed two hits and four runs in the first inning before getting an out and then retired 18 straight batters. He missed his last start because of a "tired arm." Mark Eichhorn, Jeff Musselman and Tom Henke pitched the last three innings, allowing no hits.

Trailing 4-1 in the fifth, Fred McGriff and Nelson Liriano walked against starter Steve Ontiveros and reliever Greg Cadaret, 3-2, walked Tony Fernandez to load the bases. Bell followed with his 39th homer. He established a single-season team record with his league-leading 109 runs batted in.

Orioles 9, Angels 5

Eddie Murray went 4-for-4, including his 303rd career home run to equal Boog Powell's club record, and Ray Knight and Cal Ripken drove in three runs each, leading host Baltimore past California.

Murray, who also had three singles, led off the second inning with his 28th homer of the season to tie the score 1-1.

He added an RBI single in the fourth, following a leadoff double by Ripken, and Knight followed with his 11th homer to put the Orioles ahead 4-3.

Mike Flanagan, 3-6, allowed 10 hits en route to his fourth complete game for Baltimore.

California's Doug DeCinces had a two-run double and a two-run homer.

Brewers 4, Indians 3

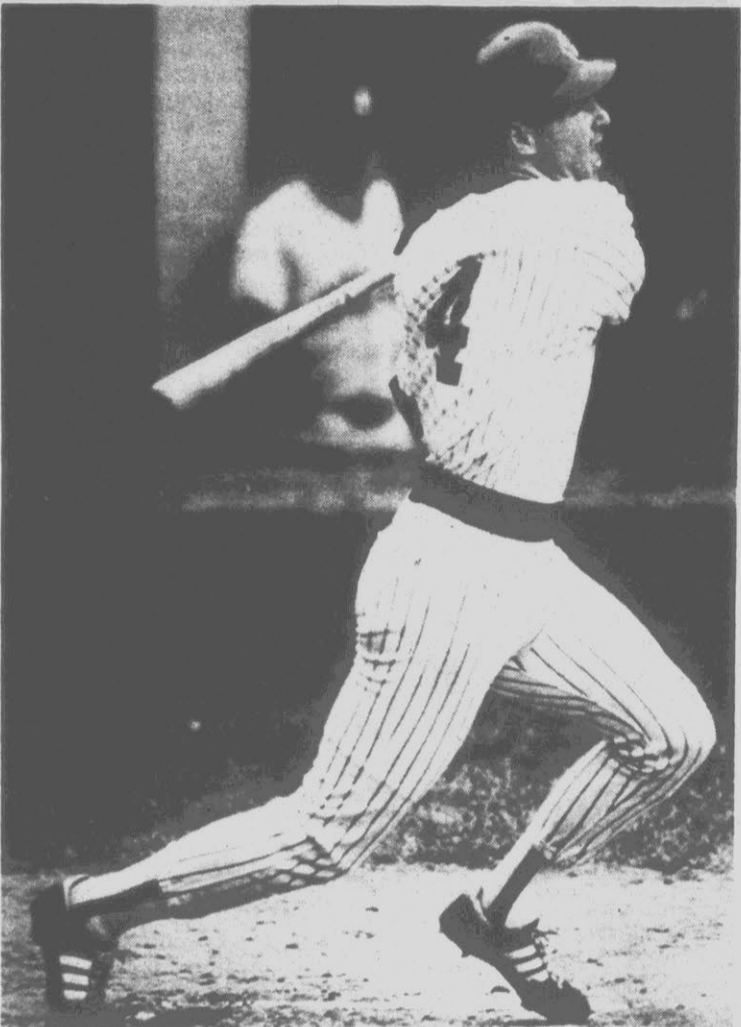

Mike Felder keyed a four-run fourth inning with a bad-hop triple and also made two fine defensive plays as Milwaukee beat Cleveland at County Stadium.

Brewers designated hitter Paul Molitor, whose 39-game hitting streak was stopped Wednesday night, had a double and a single.

The Brewers, 27-15 since the All-Star break and 11 games over .500 for the season, completed a three-game sweep of the Indians and moved within seven games of first place in the AL East. It was the Brewers' seventh victory in eight games.

Milwaukee reliever Mark Knudson, 4-4, went 2 1/3 innings, giving up a run in the sixth, before being replaced by Jay Aldrich and Chuck Crim.

LPGA Amateur Set To Claim Top Spot

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) — Kay Cockerill, the only amateur in the elite field of 12, says she feels no pressure in her bid to become the first amateur champion of an LPGA event since 1969.

"It's a neat experience to come out and play and not have to worry about anything," Cockerill said Thursday after posting a 3-under-par 69 to take the first-round lead in the $250,000 World Championship of women's golf.

"This tournament is different than most pro tournaments," the 22-year-old UCLA graduate said. "There's no cut after two days. There's really no pressure on me."

JoAnne Carner was the last amateur to capture an LPGA event when she won the Burdine Classic at Miami in 1969.

Facing 11 of this season's top performers, Cockerill's odds of winning probably aren't very good, despite her exceptional effort Thursday on a muggy, 95-degree day.

The 69, highlighted by an eagle-3 on the 16th hole where she rolled in a 35-foot putt, gave the two-time U.S. Women's amateur champion a one-shot advantage over Ayako Okamoto of Japan.

"It really hasn't sunk in yet since I made such a strong push at the last few holes," said Cockerill, who informed the LPGA on Monday that she will attempt to qualify for the Tour next month.

"I sort of haven't realized what I've done yet. I'm just happy I had a solid round today."

Cockerill said she was physically and mentally exhausted for a week after winning her first Amateur last year. The second one came last Sunday in Rhode Island, but she said the prestige of this event "kept me pumped up."

Only three other players managed to break par on the hilly, 6,073-yard PineIsle Resort course along the shores of Lake Lanier — Cindy Rarick, Laurie Rinker and Betsy King, this year's leading money winner.

The pros are playing for $81,500, the richest first prize in LPGA history.

After scoring the eagle on 16, Cockerill rolled in an eight-foot birdie putt on the par-3 17th and narrowly missed an 18-footer on the final hole.

Her only two bogeys came when she missed the green on Nos. 2 and 14. She birdied No. 12 from 12 feet and No. 13 from 10 feet.

"This has made me feel much more confident," said Cockerill, who didn't begin playing golf until she was 12 years old.

Okamoto, fighting a summer cold, had her only bogey when she missed the green at No. 7. Among her three birdies was a 30-foot chip-in on the par-3 No. 6.

"I'm very satisfied with 2-under today," Okamoto said.

Defending champion Pat Bradley, who has only one victory since her Player of the Year season last summer, struggled in with a 74.

U.S. Open champion Laura Davies of England shot even-par 72 and Colleen Walker and LPGA Champion Jane Geddes, a winner of five tournaments this year, were tied at 73.

Chris Johnson, seventh on this year's money list, shot 76, Patty Sheehan had a 77 and Jody Rosenthal, winner of the du Maurier Classic, 79.

Rose, Warriors Play To 2-2 Tie

Rose High School and Eastern Wayne battled to a 2-2 tie in a soccer match Thursday at Eppes Field.

All of the scoring came in the first half of the match. Eastern scored first, getting a goal after 5:51 of play. Scott Didio kicked it through with an assist from Byron Adkins and Stewart Vickery. Eastern then came back to add its second goal at 14:20.

Mike Heston got the score with an assist from Adkins and Rocky McAluff.

Rose then rallied to knot it up. David Allen, assisted by Dallas McPherson, scored at 15:40 and Jon Bolen, also assisted by McPherson, kicked in the tying goal at 23:07. Both of the goals came on free kicks.

After neither team scored in the second half, it was agreed that no overtime would be played.

Rose took nine shots on goal while Warrior goalie Marlon Foster had seven saves. Eastern had six shots with Rose goalie Brian Wille having six saves.

Wille blocked a penalty shot at 35:00 to preserve the tie. Coach Will Wiberg cited both Wille and McPherson for their play, also noting that Bobby Weisenberger, Richard Lewis and Lloyd May played well.

Rose, now 0-1-1, travels to New Bern on Tuesday to compete in the New Bern Tournament. Rose will play Havelock at 5 p.m. while New Bern faces West Carteret at 7:15 p.m.

The consolation game will be Wednesday at 5 p.m. with the championship match at 7:15 p.m. All games will be played at Craven Community College.

Bears Favored No Matter What

CHICAGO (AP) — With or without Jim McMahon, the Chicago Bears figure to win their fourth straight title in the Central Division of the National Football Conference.

No team in the division has come close to challenging the Bears the last two seasons, when they went 15-1 and captured the Super Bowl and last season when they went 14-2 and lost in the playoffs to Washington.

But McMahon, who missed the second half of last season, remains a question mark. He underwent shoulder surgery last December and the Bears were so concerned about his condition that they made Michigan quarterback Jim Harbaugh their No. 1 selection in the draft last spring.

That gave them five quarterbacks and at the time, Coach Mike Ditka said "We'll keep three."

Even before the preseason started, the Bears were down to that number — McMahon was unable to throw in training camp with any regularity and Steve Fuller went on injured reserve after undergoing shoulder surgery.

McMahon could miss the entire season or he might be ready for the season opener against the Super Bowl champion New York Giants in the first Monday night nationally televised game Sept. 14. With him, nobody knows.

That leaves Chicago with Mike Tomczak, Harbaugh and Doug Flutie, the 5-foot-9 former Heisman Trophy winner. Tomczak, who made seven starts and won them all last season, appears to be the top candidate for the job if McMahon isn't ready.

If so, he'll be operating with one of the best supporting casts in the league, a team that's led the league in rushing the last four seasons and in total defense for three years.

Walter Payton, the NFL's all-time rushing leader, is back for another season to add to his NFL career record 16,193 yards. Neal Anderson and Thomas Sanders figure to cut into Payton's playing time.

Willie Gault leads the wide-receiving corps that could use a healthy Dennis McKinnon and the Bears have a veteran, but young, offensive line led by Jimbo Covert and Jay Hilgenberg.

Richard Dent, Dan Hampton, Steve McMichael and William Perry, all familiar names, are the main men up front on defense.

Behind them are linebackers Mike Singletary, Wilber Marshall and Otis Wilson. Cornerback could become a problem with Mike Richardson a holdout, but the safeties are solid with Dave Duerson and Todd Bell, who will ease veteran Gary Fencik into a backup spot.

If the Bears trip over their commercial activities or something unlikely happens, the Minnesota Vikings could take over.

Quarterback Tommy Kramer, who makes the Vikings a constant threat, recently spent a month in an alcohol treatment program after being arrested for drunken driving, but Coach Jerry Burns figures it won't affect the veteran quarterback's play this season.

"He's always been a very smart player and a guy who stays in excellent condition," says Burns. "It's just a matter of regaining his timing."

Last season, Minnesota became the only team in the division to beat the Bears over the last two years with a 23-7 victory at Minneapolis. Throughout his career, Kramer has had some of his greatest games against the Bears.

"As long as Tommy Kramer's at quarterback, healthy or not, in a program or out of a program, I know he can beat us," Fencik said recently as the Bears were being polled on which team they fear the most in their division.

Kramer heads a sound Viking passing game. His receivers include Anthony Carter and Leo Lewis along with tight end Steve Jordan.

The Bears might not fear the Green Bay Packers but they'd better respect them. The two teams are involved in one of the keenest rivalries in the league, one that's included pushing, shoving and outright brawls over the past two seasons.

Randy Wright passed for 3,247 yards and 17 touchdowns last season to convince Coach Forrest Gregg that he's the No. 1 quarterback.

James Lofton is gone but Wright has exceptional receivers in Phillip Epps and Walter Stanley. Kenny Davis showed promise last year as a running back and the Packers fortified the running game by making Auburn's Brent Fullwood their No. 1 draft choice.

Defense will be the major problem for the Packers, who had one of the poorest pass rushes in the league last season, although second-year man Tim Harris, a defensive end-linebacker, could become a star.

Gregg is optimistic because the Packers won three of their last six games in a 4-12 season and played well in losses to the Bears and the Washington Redskins.

The Detroit Lions could be the surprise team in the division after going 5-11. They have decided to give second-year quarterback Chuck Long a shot at the starting job.

"We want to see if we have something here. We think we do," Coach Darryl Rogers says of Long.

Long will operate behind a solid line made up of Keith Dorney, Harvey Salem, Steve Mott and Lomas Brown. If Chris Dieterich recovers from surgery, all the better.

Defensive end Reggie Rogers was the No. 1 draft choice of the Lions to strengthen the line. The linebacking is sound and safeties Devon Mitchell and Demetrious Johnson are excellent.

Tampa Bay had a 2-14 year. The Buccaneers hired Ray Perkins as head coach and made quarterback Vinny Testaverde their No. 1 pick.

Testaverde could give the Buccaneers a quick fix. Perkins also is counting heavily on other rookies and thinks 12 or 13 could make the roster. Tampa Bay had one of the best and deepest drafts in the league.

But Testaverde is the key. In Tampa Bay's opening 31-30 preseason loss to Cincinnati, Testaverde came off the bench in the final quarter and threw three touchdown passes.

His top receivers will be Gerald Carter and Phil Freeman and his presence along with rookie running back Don Smith, will make things a lot easier for tailback James Wilder.

Walters And Bloom Issue Needs To Be Resolved

By The Associated Press

Jobs being as scarce as they are and the American workforce being what it is these days, it's time one of the more candid NFL owners came forward with a good word or two for Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.

Walters and Bloom, you'll recall, are the two very inventive, very abrasive and very controversial New York-based sports agents whose much-chronicled dirty dealings have cost five college athletes their senior year of eligibility.

They did this by handing out money in exchange for signed, post-dated contracts in which the athletes agreed to be represented in any subsequent negotiations with professional teams by — who else? — Walters and Bloom.

This practice may or may not be against the law. That possibility is being investigated by a federal grand jury in Chicago. But the practice definitely violates NCAA laws.

And for that reason, two-time All-America receiver Cris Carter of Ohio State, one of those young men who succumbed to Walters' inducements, may become a major breadwinner before his time.

Carter's status is up in the air after the NFL's one-week postponement of a special draft for his services. He might be able to regain his eligibility by appealing to the NCAA. But the whole affair has ticked off his university in particular and the guardians of amateurism in general.

This fact also disturbs a few high-minded NFL people. People like Chicago Bears player personnel director Bill Tobin and San Francisco 49ers Coach Bill Walsh who, wringing their hands while counting their blessings, worry whether drafting Carter and those like him will jeopardize their special relationship with college football.

They worry that to do so is to wink at the NCAA rules that Carter violated, that it tells others tempted to do the same that punishment for breaking the rules is a shot at making your fortune a year ahead of schedule, and that it amounts to slapping the face of the league's own golden goose, the colleges that groom these future pros at no cost.

But for anybody naive enough to think this will dissuade some NFL owner from drafting Carter and trying to get a leg up on his brethren, think again.

Earlier this week, the Big Ten filed a lawsuit asking a federal court to force Walters and Bloom to disclose their clients and stop them from repeating the practice in the future.

"We'd like the owners to be courageous enough to realize the consequences, but we also recognize the NFL is breaking no law in doing so," Big Ten lawyer Byron Gregory said. "The NFL could go and get these kids directly out of high school if they wanted to."

"But drafting these kids now just promotes false hopes for countless others that athletics is their way out of the ditch when we all know the only way most of them will ever climb out is with an education," Gregory said.

"There is sound judgment supporting one side of the argument and greed on the other. And we're not encouraged."

Which brings us back to Walters and Bloom. In the past year alone, they have admitted handing out enough money to clients to keep a small savings and loan solvent. They have generated enough legal work to subsidize a medium-sized law firm, either by suing six ex-clients for breach of contract or by being sued in turn by the Big Ten. That, in addition to putting a drain on the resources of the U.S. Attorney's office in Chicago.

Walters and Bloom have sold newspapers — the Atlanta Constitution broke the story this past spring and has provided lurid detail after detail on an almost daily basis.

They have allowed legislators to exercise their lungs and their indignation in no less than seven states, three which have passed laws restricting agents activities and four others where similar measures are being considered.

They have even provided extra work to such diverse segments of society as NFL scouts, who accepted extra payments to keep tabs on prospects Walters and Bloom were interested in; syndicate hit men, whom the two allegedly promised would visit the new agents of ex-clients, and even Walters' own son, Gary, a lawyer who joined their muchbeleaguered defense team.

But do they get any thanks for all this?

"I haven't been contacted yet about the Iran scam or the Iraqi bombing of our boat (in the Persian Gulf)," Walters said in a recent interview. "I'm a businessman. I'm not a thug."

Wadkins Leading World Series Golf

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Bobby Wadkins had a fine old time in the opening round of the $800,000 World Series of Golf, and not just because he shot a 6-under-par 64 that gave him a three-shot lead.

His playing partner was his brother, Lanny Wadkins, whose first son was born earlier this week in Dallas.

"Lanny and I were walking along, talking about the new baby, having a good time," Bobby Wadkins said. "Lanny didn't play very well (he shot a 76), but that's what you expect from a new daddy."

While Lanny Wadkins' thoughts may have been back in Dallas with wife, Penny, and the baby, Bobby's thoughts were ever more farther away.

"With all the foreign players here, I was trying to pretend that this was a foreign tournament — like I was in Akron, Japan or something like that," he said.

He had good reason to think of foreign shores. He is yet to win in 13 seasons on the American PGA Tour, but he has won tournaments abroad. He won the European Open and twice has won the Dunlop Phoenix in Japan. It was his second Dunlop victory last fall that gained him entry into the World Series.

"It just hasn't been my time to win yet, and I sure am getting tired of waiting" Wadkins said. He has been in title contention several times this year, including in the recent PGA.

"But I think I've got my game to a level of consistency now that sooner or later it's going to come," said Wadkins, who tied a tournament record with a string of four consecutive birdies and matched his best round of the year on the tough Firestone Country Club course.

"You never complain about a 64 but, realistically, it could have been a couple of shots better," he said. Wadkins missed a three-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole shortly after returning to the course following a 40-minute rain delay, and also missed two putts of 10 feet or less.

Masters champion Larry Mize, who holed a 141-yard nine-iron shot for an eagle-2, and Kenny Knox had 67s to share second in the 43-man field.

D.A. Weibring, Davis Love III and Mike Hulbert were at 68. The only others under par were PGA titleholder Larry Nelson, Mac O'Grady and Paul Azinger, all at 69.

Nelson birdied his last three holes and O'Grady rallied from an opening double bogey with another record-breaking string of four consecutive birdies. Tom Weiskopf set the record in the 1977 World Series.

NFL Postpones Supplemental Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL has avoided what seemed like an unavoidable confrontation with college football by postponing the supplemental draft of Cris Carter and Charles Gladman to allow them to appeal their suspensions to the NCAA.

Following a meeting Thursday with a group of athletic directors, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle removed both players from the draft. At the same time, he extracted an agreement from Ohio State Athletic Director Rick Bay that he would back Carter in his appeal.

There will, however, be a draft today for four little-known players not involved with agents.

Carter, an All-American wide receiver, was suspended for his senior season by Ohio State after acknowledging that he accepted $6,800 from agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom while still eligible for another year of college football.

Gladman, a running back, was ruled ineligible by Pittsburgh for refusing to cooperate with an investigation into agents.

Rozelle, who had been under fire from college coaches and administrators for "reluctantly" agreeing to the draft under threat of a lawsuit, cited the NCAA's decision Wednesday to reinstate Teryl Austin, a Pitt defensive back who acknowledged taking $2,500 from Walters and Bloom. Austin will be required to repay the money, sever his ties with the agents and sit out two games.

Carter, considered a possible first-round pick next year, has said his first preference was to return to Ohio State. But he said he had been kept from appealing the suspension because the university would have to join in such an action.

Bay, who had been opposed to the appeal, changed his position after the reinstatement with Austin and the meeting with Rozelle.

"I think everyone felt that the NCAA would not restore the eligibility of the other Pittsburgh player," said Bay, who like other college coaches and administrators was highly critical of the NFL's decision to allow Carter and Gladman to be drafted.

"Now they've taken the position that they will restore the eligibility with some penalty, two games, if the player in question can repay the money and get a release from the agent with whom he signed the contract. Given that set of circumstances, which is totally different than what we understood, it is now incumbent upon Pittsburgh and Ohio State to go back and reexamine our cases with the other players."

Later Thursday, in a telephone interview with WTVN-TV of Columbus, Ohio, Bay appeared to back off from his earlier statement. Asked if he expected Carter to play for Ohio State again, Bay said he would "leave a crack in the door" but "I don't see that as a probability at all."

Rozelle's meeting was with representatives of the National Association of Directors of Collegiate Athletics, who have felt that by drafting players who had violated college rules, the NFL was rewarding wrongdoing.

The NFL agreed to allow the players into the draft because it did not think it could win a lawsuit by players who could argue that they had been declared professionals and therefore had the right to earn a living. It said that if they are not reinstated, there will be another draft for them on Sept. 4.

"It is a very difficult situation to try and do what's right and at the same time avoid pitfalls elsewhere," Rozelle said after Thursday's session. Asked whether the league should amend the draft system to admit underclassmen, he replied:

"I can only say that there is no club in the National Football League that wants that to come about."

Both Bay and Ed Bozik of Pitt were present at the meeting along with Michael Cleary, the group's executive director; Carl Miller of Pacific, its president; Carl Ullrich of Army; Harvey Schiller, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference and Phil Hochburg, the group's counsel.

The statement from the NFL cited Austin's reinstatement at Pitt.

"Carter and Gladman and their institutions, Ohio State and Pitt, now have the opportunity to pursue similar appeals for reinstatement to the NCAA," it said. "If either one of the players choose not to appeal the recent loss of eligibility either or both will be included in a supplemental draft on Friday Sept. 4 based on special circumstances of players involved."

Lew Cryer, commissioner of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and chairman of the NCAA Division I Eligibility Committee that reinstated Austin, said other cases would be decided on an individual basis.

"I have no idea where Cris Carter stands," Cryer, contacted at his Irvine, Calif., home, said. "Because Mr. Austin got his eligibility back doesn't mean everyone else will. It's up to Ohio State to make the appeal ..."

"What the results of the appeal will be, if they appeal at all, I don't know," Cryer said. "Every case is different."

Cryer said his committee would step in "if they (Ohio State officials) follow the procedures necessary — the things they have to do through the NCAA office."

The draft wasn't popular with many NFL teams. More than half of the 28 teams had said by Thursday that they wouldn't select either of the two players. Some said they were making the statement on principle, others because they didn't need or want them.

Carter had been ruled ineligible for his senior year for taking a $5,000 loan and later another $1,800 from Walters and Bloom, the subjects of a federal grand jury investigation in Chicago for their activities in attempting to sign undergraduates.

"I think he's a very good player," General Manager George Young of the Giants said Thursday of Carter, whose main drawback is a recorded time of 4.7 in the 40-yard dash, quite slow for an NFL wide receiver. Young said his decision would be determined by "football considerations."

But the ardor for the two had diminished markedly among NFL teams, particularly since there are just two weeks left until the start of the season and the newly drafted rookies would be about six weeks behind. The team that takes a player would get a two-week roster exemption, then would have to decide whether to keep him or cut him.

Moreover, as with all supplemental drafts, a team using a pick loses the pick in that round in next year's regular draft. If everyone passes on the first round, the draft then continues with the second and goes down through the 12th.

There four players in today's draft are Dan McFadden, a defensive back from Miami; Paul Miller of Illinois Valley Community College, position unknown; Marquis Pleasant, a wide receiver from Southern Methodist and Chester Savoie, a defensive back from Nicholls State.

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Five Winston Cup NASCAR drivers were at Darlington Raceway on Thursday to test their cars in preparation for the Southern 500.

Defending Winston Cup champ Dale Earnhardt, who won the Trans-South 500 at Darlington in the spring in his Chevrolet, turned the fastest lap Thursday at 31.87 seconds, an average speed of 154.301 mph.

Other drivers who tested included Cale Yarborough of Sardis, 31.90, 154.156 in an Oldsmobile; Brett Bodine, 32.03, 153.531 in a Chevrolet; Florence native Buddy Baker, 32.09, 153.244 in an Oldsmobile; and Morgan Shepherd, 32.24, 152.531 in a Buick.

Rusty Wallace and Terry Labonte are expected to test Friday.

The Southern 500 will be run Sept. 5.

Men Rule TV Hiring

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women have increased their presence in the television industry, but men continue to hold the powerful jobs that control hiring and program content, according to a new study.

The study, "Prime Time Power," by the private National Commission on Working Women found that with just a few exceptions, women hold few producing, directing or writing jobs on top TV shows.

The group's report likened the challenges facing women in the industry to "scaling a snow-covered cliff."

The study looked at producing, directing and writing jobs "because these are the decision-makers that influence not only the content of a program but who gets hired in the rest of the jobs," Cindy Marano, executive director of the commission's parent group, Wider Opportunities for Women, said in an interview Thursday.

The commission tallied the number of women in six jobs — executive producer, supervising producer, producer, co-producer, writer and director — on 10 randomly selected episodes of each of the 20 highest-rated prime-time programs of the 1986-87 season.

TV Offers High School Diploma

By MIKE EMBRY
Associated Press Writer
LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Educational television is offering more than enlightenment these days. It's also a way for high-school dropouts to earn their diplomas.

Kentucky Educational Television, in conjunction with the Mississippi Authority for Educational Television, has produced a 43-part program airing nationally called "GED on TV," to help adults pass the high school equivalency exam, the General Educational Development test.

Cookie mogul Wally "Famous" Amos, who earned his GED while in the Air Force, serves as national spokesman and is host of five segments on reading. Others appearing in the programs are astronauts Sally Ride and Story Musgrave and Nobel Prize-winning physicist Sheldon Glashow.

Approximately 72 million Americans do not have high-school degrees, and that figure is growing by an estimated 1 million a year, according to the American Council on Education.

"Right now we're losing more through dropouts than (are) taking the GED," said Sid Webb, president of KET Enterprise. "It's a losing battle."

About 25 percent who enter school do not graduate, and only 2 percent of the dropouts come back each year to earn a GED diploma.

"We know in Kentucky that the number (of GED graduates) is up 28 percent, and we know that's directly attributable to the programs on KET," he said. "We know that if they're used with a reasonable amount of promotion, it will make a difference."

The series has been carried on the Public Broadcasting System since October, with 137 licensees representing 251 broadcast outlets in 45 states airing the 30-minute programs that cover reading, writing and mathematics.

It took nearly four years and $2 million to produce "GED on TV." Kentucky produced the reading and math sections, at nearly $1.5 million, and Mississippi handled the writing segment.

The programs focus on learning skills instead of trying to cover all the information a student gets in high school. Three textbooks guide the TV student through the 22 hours of study.

The course is designed to give students skills to analyze and understand literature, social studies and science; solve everyday problems in basic math and write clearly and effectively.

"One reason the programs work so well is because a person can go at his own pace in adult learning centers," Webb said. "With adults, the time available to study is very erratic. Some don't like the regimen of classes."

KET temporarily waived its copyright during a "freeview" airing over PBS, giving stations unlimited broadcast rights from Oct. 25, 1986, to Sept. 30, 1987.

Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins had the programs sent to other governors, urging them to promote the series in their states through television and learning centers.

"She thinks it's important and she's real proud of it," Webb said.

The GED tests were created in 1942 by the American Council on Education to help U.S. military personnel earn high-school equivalency diplomas.

The tests are designed to measure the application of knowledge and skills gained in four years of high school.

Between 1971 and 1981, nearly 4 million adults passed the test.

KET produced an earlier version of "GED on TV" in 1972, aimed primarily at Appalachian states, which is still widely used in learning centers and prisons and on military bases.

"Ever since we released the first GED program we got feedback from people on the content and other things," said Webb. "But it had really lived its life and was dated."

Webb thinks students should be told that it will take a reasonable effort to pass the tests.

"We need to tell that it's no easy undertaking so they won't have an unrealistic view about the tests," he said.

"People who have a sixth-, seventh- or eighth-grade education will have a lot more trouble and will have to work harder than a person who dropped out in high school. They may have to spend a year or two of studying if they're really serious about it."

This metal tub was the most common type of bath in the early 1800s. While it may have been short on comfort, it was eminently practical. Handles enabled bathers to move it from room to room when necessary. Today, however, most Americans have abandoned the bath in favor of the shower. One reason for the switch may be the time savings involved. Most people who take showers say they're done in 10 minutes. Bathers often take 20 minutes or more to wash up.

 Many are familiar with the Sea-dummy's nine. East won with the king!

 Declarer did not know spades were going to split 3-3. What was a "certainty" was that West held the jack of spades. Therefore, South won the heart return and confidently led a spade to the ten. East gratefully took the trick and persevered with hearts, and the five tricks the defenders garnered (two spades and three hearts) were just enough to break the contract.

In keeping with modern practice, North-South were employing two clubs as their game force, along with weak two-bids and 21-22 point two no trump opening bids. Therefore, the auction was routine.

West led the queen of hearts, and when dummy appeared declarer could count seven fast tricks. Since he couldn't afford to give up two tricks in the minors in an attempt to set up long cards there, his only hope was to develop the spade suit. Lack of dummy entries prevented him from taking two finesses through East, so at trick two declarer immediately led a low spade to what would happen if, instead, East were to routinely win with the jack. Declarer needs three more spade tricks, and the only practical way to get them would be to cross to the board with the ace of diamonds and run the queen of spades. Whether or not East covers would be immaterial; the contract would sail home peacefully.

PACs Funnel Millions To Defense Panel Members

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of congressional committees that deal with defense spending and policy received nearly $3 million from political action committees sponsored by the nation's top 10 defense contractors, a study by Common Cause says.

The liberal lobbying organization, in a report released Thursday, cited records showing 41 percent of the $2.9 million in contributions from those 10 defense PACs in the last congressional election went to members of the House and Senate Armed Services committees and the Appropriations defense subcommittees.

Common Cause analyzed the contribution patterns of PACs affiliated with the 10 companies that received the most money in Pentagon contracts in 1986: Boeing, General Dynamics, General Electric, General Motors' Hughes Aircraft, Grumman, Lockheed, McDonnell Douglas, Raytheon, Rockwell International and United Technologies.

Citing Federal Election Commission and Pentagon records, along with information from Congress and the companies themselves, the survey said six of the contractors — General Dynamics, Grumman, Hughes Aircraft, Lockheed, McDonnell Douglas and Rockwell — obtained more than 60 percent of their 1986 business from the Pentagon.

In 1985, five of them — General Dynamics, Grumman, Lockheed, McDonnell Douglas and Raytheon — earned 80 percent or more of their operating profits from U.S. government contracts, it said.

Election law limits PAC contributions to $5,000 per candidate per election, compared with a $1,000 cap on individuals' contributions. Common Cause contends the PAC system

Hefner Ranks Third In Income

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., ranked third among members of Congress in income received from major defense contractors for personal appearances from 1981 to 1985, according to a study by Common Cause, the citizens lobby.

Hefner, chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Military Construction, was paid $26,500 in honorariums during the period by the 10 defense contractors with the largest Pentagon contracts in fiscal 1986, the study said.

Rep. William Dickinson, R-Ala., the ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee, led Congress in such fees with $32,500, followed by Rep. C.W. Young, R-Fla., at $29,000, the study said.

allows too much special interest influence in politics.

not in response to special pleadings by special interests."

The group's president, Fred Wertheimer, said in a statement: "It is essential for Congress and the administration to base defense decisions on sound public policy grounds,

In addition to the direct PAC contributions, five of the defense contractors provided $95,000 to candidates in the 1985-86 election cycle through a controversial but legal practice called "bundling."

Bundling allows a PAC to collect contributions from individuals, but that money does not count against the $5,000 limit because the money is "bundled" and forwarded directly to the candidates as money from the individuals rather than a PAC donation.

Legislation is pending in Congress to limit the total amount of PAC money a candidate may receive. Several Senate candidates topped $1 million in PAC receipts in the 1985-86 election cycle.

Lockheed's PAC gave more to candidates than any other defense PAC, with a total of $425,671 in contributions during 1985-86.

Federal law bans corporate contributions to congressional candidates, but permits the companies to set up PACs to which employees and others may contribute voluntarily.

The study said that in addition to the PAC activity, the 10 defense contractors provided members of Congress with $236,163 in honoraria for speeches in 1985. That compared with $26,100 in honoraria they paid in 1981.

Unlike PAC donations, which go to a candidate's campaign fund, honoraria are paid to the lawmaker personally.

More than 70 percent of the honoraria paid to members of Congress by the 10 contractors studied from 1981 to 1985 went to those on the Armed Services committees and Appropriations defense subcommittees, the study said.

During the 99th Congress, which covered the 1985-86 election cycle, the Senate Armed Services Committee had 19 members and the Appropriations defense subcommittee had 17. In the House, Armed Services had 47 members and the Appropriations defense subcommittee had 13.

Ground Equipment Failure Delays Shuttle Test Firing

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer
BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — A rocket booster test considered critical to the space shuttle's future has been reset for Saturday after "nuisances," including a broken water main and cranky ground control equipment, delayed the firing.

Morton Thiokol Inc. engineers twice carried the countdown to within seconds of ignition Thursday before ground equipment failed. Another attempt was halted just three minutes from ignition.

The booster was redesigned to eliminate the flaws that caused the Challenger to explode last year, but the new system must pass a series of ground tests before shuttle flights can resume.

Thursday's failed test will not affect the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's plans to resume shuttle flights next June, but the schedule is tight, said Richard Truly, the agency's chief of space flight.

"One day or one week doesn't make a difference," Truly said.

The test failures were caused by "nuisances" not associated with the motor, said John Thomas, director of the booster redesign program for NASA.

The firing was to be the first of the redesigned rocket using the full 1.2 million pounds of solid propellant.

About 500 space industry officials stood in the bright Utah sun from 1 p.m., when the first attempt was stopped, until 4:57 p.m., when the final countdown was aborted, peering up at the 126-foot-long white rocket perched 9,000 feet away on the side of a brown hill.

A highway beside the Thiokol test site was lined with spectators for two miles, but the crowd thinned as the long afternoon wore on and the mood among officials went from upbeat to grim.

The first countdown started at midnight and "everything was just nice" until 10 a.m., Thomas said.

"The first nuisance was a six-inch water main that failed," he said. The water is used to cool the rocket casing after it has fired. The countdown was held and a plumber called.

The pipes were fixed in 90 minutes, said Thomas, and the countdown resumed just after noon, an hour before the planned ignition.

Preparations proceeded smoothly and continued to within 10 seconds of ignition when the water system failed at another connection.

The countdown was stopped while repairs were made and then resumed toward a new firing time of 3 p.m.

Just three minutes before the appointed hour, a computer checked test equipment and the results "looked strange to us so we held for three minutes," Thomas said. "We couldn't explain the problem to our satisfaction so we aborted and cycled back to one hour."

At this point, some of the Thiokol technicians had been working for more than 12 hours straight. Truly visited the blockhouse and told them that if they were tired the attempt could be halted.

Truly said the engineers were eager to resume and he agreed, provided the test would be canceled for the day if one more problem occurred.

That problem came just 12 seconds before ignition, when the ground control computer determined that a rocket turbine was not up to proper speed.
