Bork Hearing Opens

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford praised Judge Robert H. Bork as "uniquely qualified" for the Supreme Court as the Senate Judiciary Committee opened politically charged confirmation hearings today, but a leading opponent said Bork is "itching to overrule" historic decisions.

In an extraordinary appearance for a former president, Ford declared that Bork's "record has been exemplary" since he took a place on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals five years ago.

Ford added that Bork, who was seated at his side before the committee, acted "with integrity" in 1973 when Bork carried out then-President Nixon's order to fire Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox in the so-called Saturday Night Massacre.

But Sen. Edward M. Kennedy declared at the nationally televised hearings, "In Robert Bork's America there is no room at the inn for blacks and no place in the Constitution for women. And in our America, there should be no seat on the Supreme Court for Robert Bork."

Kennedy, D-Mass., did not say what decisions he believes Bork is anxious to overturn. But he said, Bork has "shown that he is hostile to the rule of law and the role of the courts in protecting individual liberty. He is instinctively biased against the claims of the average citizen and in favor of concentrations of power, whether that power is governmental or private."

Bork, whose nomination has sparked a ferocious lobbying war between liberal groups opposed to his appointment and conservatives who favor it, sat quietly at the witness table while Ford and then Senate

U.N. Peace Trip Ending

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar left for New York today, concluding a peace mission during which Baghdad called for international sanctions against Iran and Tehran insisted that Iraq be condemned as the aggressor.

He told reporters at the airport he discussed in detail in Tehran and Baghdad "an outline of a plan for the implementation of the (U.N. Security Council) resolution" calling for a truce in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

"I did not arrive empty-handed," the U.N. chief said.He refused to elaborate.

A U.N. source, who briefed reporters earlier on condition of anonymity, said Perez de Cuellar found that Iran has moderated its stance regarding a cease-fire.

"There seems to be a certain like movement, maybe not enough but at

Pitt Board Limits Exemptions To Seniors

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Seniors in the Pitt County schools may be exempt from some exams through the current policy, while ninth through 11th grade students will not be exempted from exams, the Pitt County Board of Education decided Monday night during its regular meeting.

Board member Frank Grooms moved that the exam policy be tabled for all students except seniors. "If we have an attendance problem, we should talk about attendance. We may be attacking the wrong problem," he said.

Under the current policy, seniors are required to take six exams during the senior year. As those requirements are met, seniors with A averages are allowed five absences, those with B averages four absences, those with C averages three absences and those with D averages two absences in a class before they have to take the final exam. Three days of excused absences are allotted for death in the immediate family, hospitalization or judicial matters. With 10 or more absences, all exams are required.

The board also granted seniors two more days of absences to allow them to visit colleges. Visitation has to be verified by the college attended.

The board made its decision after listening to appeals by Stephanie Hewett, a senior at Rose High School, and Ed West III, representing student leaders at Ayden-Grifton, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central, J.H.Rose and North Pitt high schools.

Ms. Hewett questioned the effectiveness of basing exam exemptions on grades and attendance as was proposed by a previous policy, and she said she was concerned with how well high school exams prepare students for college exams.

West asked the board to consider college visitation when forming exam exemption policies for seniors.

In personnel matters, the board named Dr. Chester Preyar of Cincinnati as associate superintendent of personnel development services and Dr. Julia Mobley as director of vocational education.

Also, Robert Lee Jr. of Ayden was named interim board member for Walter Gaskins, who resigned after the meeting Monday for personal reasons. Gaskins was recognized with a plague for his services.

Lee is employed with Buehler Products, Kinston, and is the son of Robert Lee Sr., a former principal of Robersonville High School in Martin County.

It was noted that Thomas Craft Jr., associate superintendent of operational services, is resigning after 36 years of service to the schools.

In other matters, the board agreed to wait until a study is conducted by the University of North Carolina at Greensboro on the racial balance in the Pitt County schools before determining criteria to be used in accessing the feasibility of a 15 percent deviation as opposed to a 20 percent deviation in racial balance.

A 10-year study was approved for accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools for kindergarten through seventh-grade schools in the J.H. Rose attendance area.

A bread contract with Franklin Baking Co. Inc. was approved for 1987-88 along with a milk contract with Carolina Dairies.

Barry Gaskins, public information officer, and Tony Cates, principal of H.B. Sugg School, were recognized for receiving awards for effective communication from the North Carolina School Public Relations Association. Gaskins will receive an award for the "Superintendent's Personal Message" video and Cates will receive an award for the "H.B. Sugg School Radio Show."

Items to be submitted for board approval at the October meeting include a policy for employees on communicable diseases, policy on naming school facilities and policy to govern ad hoc committees in areas of instruction, personnnel and operations.

Ayden OKs Housing Units

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — Approval for construction of 28 housing units in Ayden was given Monday night at the September meeting of the Board of Commissioners.

The multifamily dwellings, of four units each in seven buildings, are to be constructed on a 3.7-acre site located on East Third Street between East College and Edge roads.

Commissioners, following input from town citizens, approved a conditional use permit for Freedom Constructors of Dunn to build the units. The Ayden Planning Board had previously recommended the issuance of a conditional use permit.

Shelton Weeks, representing Freedom Constructors of Dunn, explained that the units will be built to meet the specifications of the Farmers Home Complex, a financing agency which Weeks said had more stringent stipulations for construction and occupancy than most other housing agencies.

The housing group will be a mixture of one and two bedroom units, some one story, others two stories, of frame and masonry construction. Monthly rents will be determined on the incomes of occupants, with a minimum of $235 for a one bedroom apartment, $250 for a two bedroom apartment, ranging on up to $375 and $395, respectively. Two units will be designed for handicapped renters, and the complex will have a tot lot with playground equipment.

A manager will be at the complex to oversee ground maintenance and to handle any complaints that may arise. Occupants will sign contracts that will permit termination of a rental contract in the event of disorderly conduct on the part of an occupant.

Weeks said construction was contingent on approval by Farmers Home Complex for the proposed construction and that construction likely would not begin until 1988.

Action was taken by commissioners to terminate the lease with Jason Bowen for a metal building north of Ayden within 45 days. The building is needed for the storage of town equipment prior to cold weather.

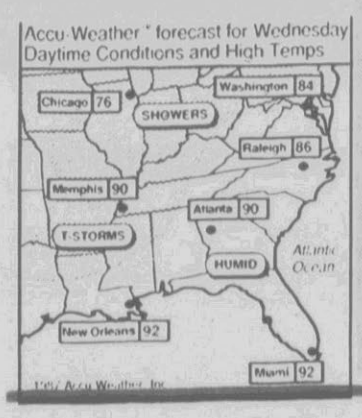

A request to donate $150 for an advertisement in the Ayden-Grifton High School yearbook was approved.

GUC Turns To Radar Weather

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Utilities Commission employees will be looking at the weather more closely now — on a computerized weather radar screen — in an effort to more accurately predict when to begin load management operations.

The utility has, for severa years, attempted to shave peak electric demands in an effort to save money on wholesale power costs. From January 1985 through the end of August, the load management program — including the use of radio-controlled "Beat-the-Peak" switches on water heaters and central air conditioning units, voltage adjustments and cogeneration at GUC's water plant and Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co. — has resulted in a net billing reduction of some $4.05 million.

Some 44 percent of the savings has been realized through voltage adjustments while 54 percent of the savings has resulted from the commission cutting off customers' water heaters and air conditioning units for short periods during peak demand conditions.

And the monthly savings through load management have ranged from a low of $2,660 (in May 1986 when the peak was partially missed) to a high of $187,557 in February of this year. But no savings were realized in June and November 1985 because the peak was missed entirely.

In order to receive the billing reduction, GUC's load management program must be operating at the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's monthly peak.

Malcolm Green, GUC'S general manager, said that the weather radar unit, installed at the commission's operations center last Friday, will help staff members "see" summer rain storms and other weather that have the potential to change when the CP&L peak will occur.

Roger Jones, director of electric systems for the GUC, said that summer peaks usually occur between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m., while winter peaks are normally between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m.

But weather and other things may vary the peaks. Jones said, "last Wednesday, a thunderstorm made CP&L peak between 2 and 3 o'clock."

Among tools that the utility uses to determine when CP&L's peak will occur are monthly CP&L projections,

ECU Employees Unit Win District Honor

Delegates representing state employees at East Carolina University were presented District of the Year honors last week in Winston-Salem at the annual convention of the State Employees Association of North Carolina.

District 97, whose membership is composed entirely of ECU employees, was recognized for "overall excellence of achievement and outstanding effort" on behalf of the association, district chairman Margaret Sullival said.

Mrs. Sullivan and 13 other delegates from ECU attended the three-day convention, where delegates, representing more than 51,000 state employees, acted on issues facing state employees and heard speeches from Gov. Jim Martin, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and presidential candidate Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee.

In addition to the District of the Year award, District 97 also received awards given for numerical and percentage growth in membership during 1986-1987. The district added 312 new members during the year, an increase of 82 dpercent. The district now had 691 members.

Two district members won individual honors at the meeting: Ann Huggins was cited as winner of the association's People's Award for behind-the-scenes effort and cooperation. Eastern regional delegates elected Carrie Lin Gurganus to a one-year seat on their Employees' Political Action Committee.

Both Ms. Gurganus and Ms. Huggins are employees of the ECU school of Medicine.

Legislators' Golf Tournament Slated

The fourth Legislative Appreciation Day will be held here Thursday, with some 108 golfers scheduled to take part in a tournament at the Greenville Country Club off Memorial Drive.

Ellis Hall, general chairman of the 14-member committee making arrangements for the event, said there will be "18 legislators who will be playing golf and another 12 will be here but won't play."

Both Sen. Kenneth Royal, champion of the first two tournaments, and Rep. Bob Hunter, last year's champion, are scheduled to play Thursday, Hall said.

"(Rep) Ed Warren started the thing initially," according to Hall, assistant dean for administration at the East Carolina University medical school. "The idea is to get together and have a good time and let the legislators know we in eastern North Carolina appreciate what they do for us ... an opportunity to get them down here to see us."

In addition to the golf tournament, which is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m., events scheduled include a reception at ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin's home from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Wednesday, a 9 a.m. continental breakfast at the country club on Thursday, and a cocktail party, awards presentation and steak cookout at 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

In addition to the General Assembly members, about 50 individual sponsors and 31 corporate sponsors are scheduled to attend.

Last year, according to Hall, the Legislative Appreciation Day committee donated an $800 scholarship to Pitt Community College.

This year, Hall said, any money left over will go to the ECU medical school for a scholarship, and in 1989, "it will go to the university (ECU)."

"The idea is not to make money," Hall said. "Anything left over we give to scholarships."

First Timothy Church

Nightly services are under way through Friday at 7:30 p.m. at First Timothy Free Will Baptist Church, 1104 Douglas Ave.

Leaders and church groups scheduled to conduct services are: tonight, Elder Horace Joyner and Mount Shiloh FWB; Wednesday, Elder George Carmon and mixed chorus; Thursday, Elder Richard Blow and Jordan Chapel, and Friday, Elder J.H. Wilks and Burnice Chapel.

Election Information

A program on election districts will be held tonight to familiarize area voters with changes in the county-city election system.

Speaking at the 8 p.m. meeting at First Presbyterian Church, corner of 14th and Elm streets, will be DeWitt McCarley, Greenville city attorney; Phil Dixon, attorney for the Pitt County Board of Education, and Margaret Hardee, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections.

The program, sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County, is designed to provide an understanding of upcoming Pitt County Board of Education and Greenville City Council and mayoral elections.

Association Speaker

Charles Lawrence, local collector of comic books, will address the American Association of University Women Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The group will meet at the Humber House, 117 W. Fifth St.

Graudates of four-year colleges are eligible for membership in AAUW. For information call 355-5025.

Auto Union Reopens Talks With Ford, Strikes Chrysler

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. and union leaders drew back from the brink of a walkout and resumed talks today on a contract for 104,000 workers after "substantial progress" was made just before the strike deadline.

But 10,000 workers at Chrysler Corp.'s four Canadian plants went on strike at their Monday midnight deadline, forcing the shutdown of Chrysler's Belvidere, Ill., assembly plant, which employs 4,500 people.

United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber announced late Monday that the Ford contract, which was to expire at 11:59 p.m., had been extended until midnight tonight and a decision on further extensions would be made each day.

"We wouldn't be taking this course of action if we didn't believe it was still possible to reach agreement within a reasonable period of time," Bieber said Monday. "This means that we have made substantial progress on our central issue of job security. It does not mean that there aren't major issues left to be resolved."

Peter Pestillo, vice president of the nation's No. 2 automaker, praised the UAW for its willingness to continue talks.

"I think it is important to note the courage that it sometimes takes for a trade unionist to extend an agreement when the typical behavior is one of no contract, no work," Pestillo said.

Ford spokesman Tom Foote said he could recall no previous extension of the UAW's contract with an auto company that was its main strike target.

Neither Ford nor UAW national officials would say why they decided to continue talking, but Richard Downey, president of UAW Local 897 in Buffalo, N.Y., said he was told by union representatives close to the talks that Ford made a new offer on job security and it will take time for union officials to analyze it.

"It looks pretty decent," Downey said. "It will take that long to sift through it, but it looks pretty good." He declined to give details of the proposal.

The strike at Chrysler Canada Ltd. began after Canadian Auto Workers President Bob White rejected a second contract proposal by the company's chief negotiator, Bill Fisher.

White said Chrysler Canada's proposal on indexing pensions to inflation was "so small that our retirees wouldn't recognize it if it happened."

Chrysler spokesman John Guiniven declined to speculate on the full impact of the strike on the automaker's U.S. operations, but said layoffs in addition to those at the Belvidere plant were possible today.

In the Ford talks, job security has been a central issue for the UAW, which wants guarantees that its members will be protected from the export of jobs overseas and the use of overtime and outside contractors to cut the workforce. Ford has resisted job guarantees, saying management needs flexibility to compete internationally.

Some workers were relieved not to be walking the picket lines early today.

"I feel that if they are coming to a point where they are going to make some progress soon, I'm all for that, even though I voted for the strike deadline," said Rich Prusak, a 32-year-old tool-and-die worker, as he left Ford's Rouge plant in Detroit at the end of his shift.

At least two workers at the Rouge plant walked off the job despite the contract extension, however.

One, standing in the shadows of a plant gate, identified himself as a metal finisher with 15 years at Ford and said he had walked out because "if you're not getting what you want, you ought to."

The man said he would "have to answer for this tomorrow" and spoke only on condition he not be identified.

"It's good we're not striking," said Frank Howe, chairman of UAW Local 862 at Ford's heavy truck plant in Louisville, Ky. "We're here to work and to make a living. But if necessary, if it is necessary, we're willing to go and we're ready."

The UAW's last strike against Ford, in 1976, lasted 28 days and involved 160,000 hourly U.S. workers, over the union's demand for paid personal holidays and wage increases.

Negotiations between the union and both Ford and General Motors Corp. opened in July. The union chose Ford as its target in pattern bargaining, a tactic in which the union negotiates a contract with one automaker and seeks to impose it on the other.

GM's contract has been extended until a new deadline that will be set once Ford workers begin voting on a settlement.

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze opened talks today with Secretary of State George P. Shultz that they hoped would pave the way to a superpower summit despite lingering differences over arms control, human rights and Afghanistan.

There were signs of flexibility in the U.S. effort to nail down a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles and to reduce more potent strategic arsenals, as well.

The three-hour meeting at the State Department preceded a White House session with President Reagan and the signing of an agreement to establish "nuclear risk reduction centers" in the two capitals to lessen the chance of accidental war.

The two sides offered downbeat forecasts before the talks opened. But this did not disguise the fact that their shared hope was to accelerate a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles for signing at a summit meeting.

Several issues remain unresolved. But in an effort to close the gap, U.S. negotiators in Geneva offered also to ban missiles in that range that are capable of carrying non-nuclear charges, a U.S. official told The Associated Press.

The Pentagon had objected to the concession but was overridden, said the official, who demanded anonymity.

In another nuclear area. the official said, Shultz was prepared to take a "flexibile" stance on the heavy land-based missiles that are at the heart of Soviet nuclear power.

Specifically, he will offer to increase the limit initially proposed by the United States on multiple-warhead ICBMs if the Soviets step up negotiations on an overall 50 percent cutback in strategic weapons.

On other fronts, Shultz is trying to persuade the Soviets to adopt more lenient emigration procedures and to agree to withdraw 115,000 troops from Afghanistan over a few months' time.

Shultz posed for photographs with Shevardnadze in a seventh-floor sitting room outside his offce. "We always have a handshake on these occasions," Shultz reminded his guest. Shevardnadze readily complied.

The handful of American and Soviet reporters permitted to watch the picture-taking were admonished in advance that they should not ask any questions.

Consequently, no questions were put to Shultz or Shevardnadze as they chatted amiably through American and Russian interpreters.

Shultz informed the foreign minister that his morning habit was to have a cup of coffee, glance at the newspapers and take a swim.

"My team is the St. Louis Cardinals," he told the foreign minister. "They're in first place, but their lead has been diminishing."

Shultz also exulted in the Chicago Bears' 34-19 victory Monday night over the New York Giants and the fact that the San Francisco Giants were in first place in the Western division of the National League.

The agreement to set up risk reduction centers apparently is the only certain positive outcome of Shevardnadze's visit and his discussion of a wide-ranging agenda with Reagan and Shultz.

A senior Reagan administration official, briefing reporters Monday at the White House under rules of anonymity, doubted that the treaty could be wrapped up during Shevardnadze's visit or a date set for Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to come to Washington for a summit meeting.

The foreign minister brought with him a letter to Reagan from Gorbachev, however, and the U.S. official acknowledged: "We do not know what is in that letter. I do not preclude that he knows he's got dates in that letter."

Gennady Gerasimov, the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, declined Monday to say exactly what was in the Gorbachev letter, but he said he thought it was an assessment of U.S.-Soviet relations and how to improve them.

Asked in an AP Radio interview if Gorbachev wants to come to a summit in the United States, Gerasimov said he does but only with a "centerpiece" on the table.

"This centerpiece must be some agreement, important agreement, for instance about (the) missiles," Gerasimov said, adding that agreement may not be far off.

The agreement to set up risk reduction centers was inspired by Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and John R. Warner, R-Va..

Rep. Michel To Request Contra Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican Leader Robert Michel said today he will move in a few days to seek continued aid for Nicaraguan rebels and believes he has President Reagan's support.

Speaking to reporters after a meeting of GOP congressional leaders with the president, Michel said he would propose the aid be continued as part of a short-term overall spending bill.

The spending measure is expected to come to the floor of the House later this week, Michel said. He said it continues government spending at current levels, except for aid to the Contra rebels.

Michel said the aid would be specifically designated for humanitarian aid, communications assistance and delivery of military equipment.

"Out of a trillion-dollar budget, the Democratic leadership is cutting only the $8 million that would be provided to the Contras," Michel said in a news release accompanying his announcement. "They want the Contras to wither on the vine even before we can get a peace plan implemented."

The $8 million figure is based on the assumption that the spending measure will cover 30 days. Michel said it might be written for 45 days, which would make the figure slightly larger.

The appropriation for the current fiscal year is $100 million.

The administration has said it would not seek further aid to the rebels until after the beginning of the new fiscal year Oct. 1, to allow time for negotiations under two peace plans: one endorsed by President Reagan and House Speaker Jim Wright, and the other put forward by Central American leaders.

Michel at first endorsed the Wright-Reagan plan but said today he has "more skepticism ... than what Jim Wright has" about it.

The GOP leader said that when he told the president of the plans, the president did not respond directly, but said, "You know that I have made no bones about my continuing support for the freedom fighters' - Reagan's name for the rebels fighting Nicaragua's Marxist-led government.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Important Agenda

Injecting education policy as an issue for presidential hopefuls to debate could be the best thing that could happen to education and the electorate.

The candidates' forum in Chapel Hill successfully placed the important issue of education in the forefront of the 1988 presidential campaign. Granted, many statements were general and few concrete proposals were stated by the candidates, but the forum accomplished one significant thing. It demanded candidates place education in a priority position on their political agendas. It forced the hopefuls to consider, face to face, the education world and its problems.

Nine of the men deemed by those who know them as qualified for the nation's leadership job were subjected to a barrage of opinions on the topic from experts.

They had former Governor Jim Hunt reminding "it all goes back to economics ... if we want to have good jobs that pay high salaries, we've got to learn to think for a living."

And there was William Friday, retired president of the University of North Carolina system observing that "I've not seen a survey in the last year that education was not the first or second (most important) issue" in the upcoming presidential election.

The word accountability kept popping up from candidates, Democrat and Republican. The hopefuls correctly agreed that both the teaching profession and education in general requires some form of accountability, although they sharply disagreed on the method. They also agreed teachers need more money — but again, no specific proposals arose.

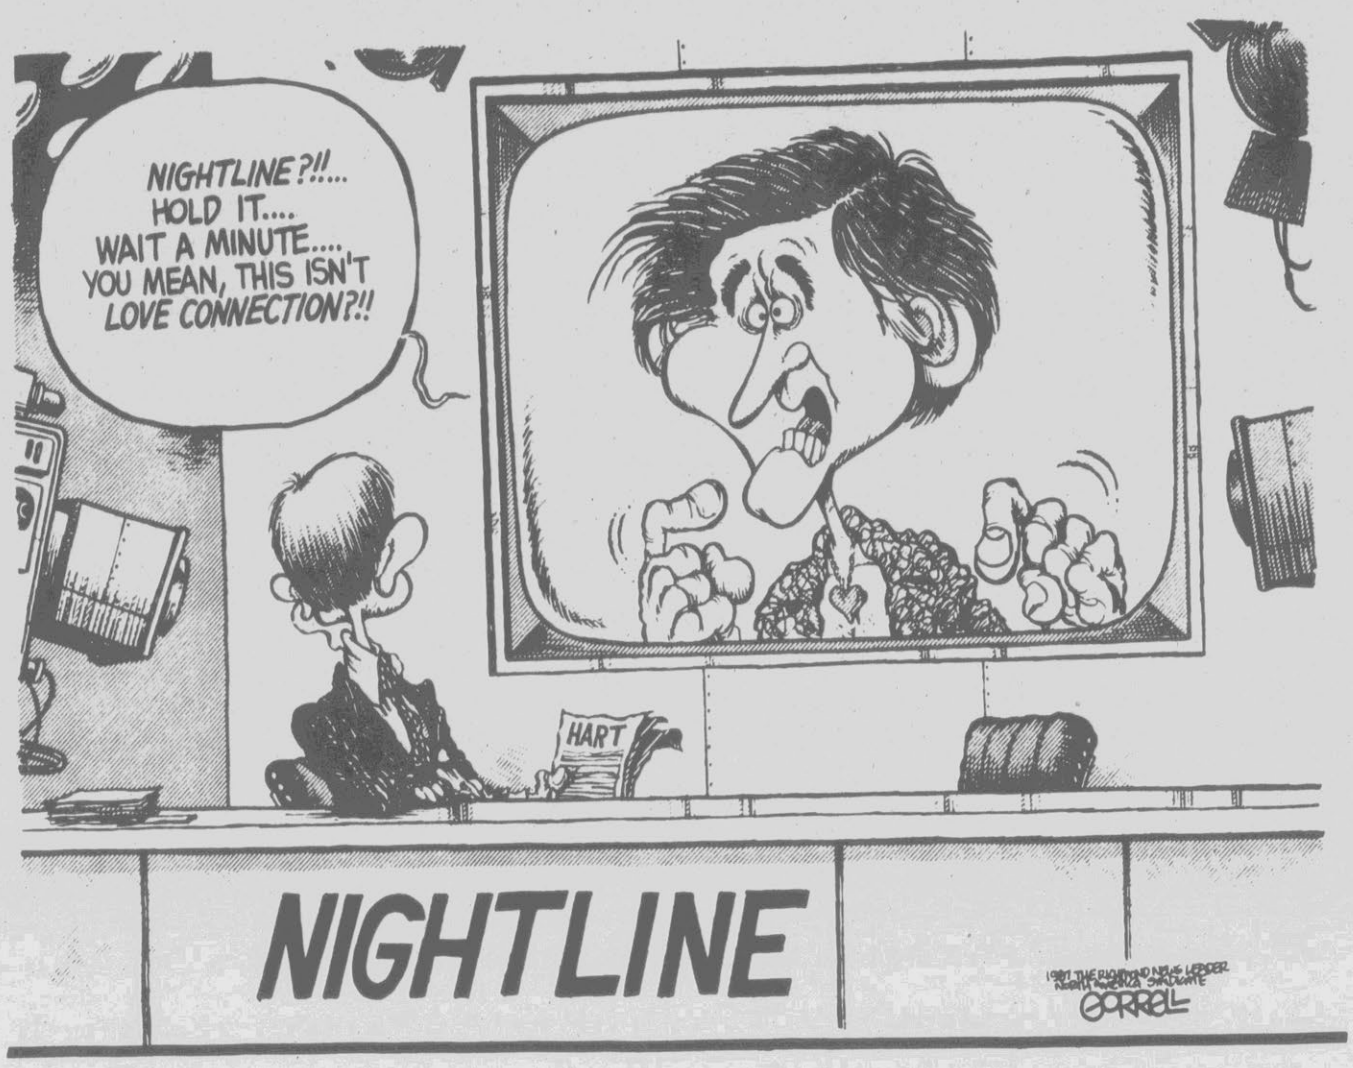

Republican Pete Dupont defended the flawed voucher system proposal that would allow parents to choose which school they want their children to attend — public or private. That notion is one that would be divisive and detrimental to the public school system and should be avoided.

Education Secretary William Bennett says he expects another $300 billion-plus federal education budget and wants candidates to say what they're going to do with that kind of money.

Carnegie Foundation president Ernest Boyer urged professional accountability, terming an incompetent teacher worse than an incompetent surgeon because a surgeon can only cut up and hurt but one person at a time.

The candidates' forum in Chapel Hill turned out to be a shining hour in North Carolina's contribution to "Super Tuesday". There was a topic that is of nationwide concern, there were ideas launched in volleys ostensibly aimed at would-be candidates but actually reaching the nation at large.

It certainly turned the focus to education. All that input may, in coming months, result in a consensus and course of action to bolster the country's education program.

Lower Class Alienated From College

'The apparent hardening of social class lines is particularly worrisome for its effect on minorities, who are more likely to be poor. The rate of college attendance among blacks and Hispanics has dropped nearly a third in the past 10 years ... .'

WASHINGTON — As millions of college students settle into their campus routines, a collective cry of warning is rising from many who care about America's commitment to higher education. Despite today's unprecedented emphasis on learning, the college experience seems to be growing less, not more, accessible to youngsters of moderate and modest means.

Analysts from diverse points of view are coming to agree on a painful proposition: The upward social mobility encouraged by ballooning college enrollments in the 1960s and early 1970s is begnning to wither. Colleges and universities today, charges Joseph Murphy, chancellor of the City University of New York, "are part of a re-establishing of a more rigid class structure."

Even conservatives express dismay at the trend. Welfare critic Charles Murray told my reporter, Kyle Chadwick, that he is very frightened "of a rising racial and class antagonism due to the segregation of these groups in the college system." The right-wing Heritage Foundation and the White House both are paying lip service to improved public education, aimed at raising the college enrollment of poor and minority students.

While there is less agreement over the causes of the problem, many look first to plain financial facts. As the upper- and lower-income segments of the population grow in relation to the middle; as college costs outpace inflation; and as financial aid is squeezed tight, borrowing to finance education is swelling. The average public college student graduates nearly $7,000 in debt, up about 75 percent in a decade.

Lower- and middle-income students continue to attend college in large numbers, but researchers say their incidence of dropping out is on the rise, and many are attending schools less prestigious than those for which they are qualified. Too, many are settling for vocational schools. The net result is that our four-year colleges are starting to look like schools for the kids of the rich.

A recent article in the Chronicle of Higher Education described how monetary disparities among students are growing more obvious. At many schools, students driving Porsches and BMWs outnumber those with part-time jobs.

The apparent hardening of social class lines is particularly worrisome for its effect on minorities, who are more likely to be poor. The rate of college attendance among blacks and Hispanics has dropped nearly a third in the past 10 years, even as the high school graduation rate inches up.

But as clear as the financial reasons for the trend seem to be, one suspects that money may not be the entire story behind the collegiate crisis of social class.

Many observers suggest that poor and minority students may lack, most of all, the role models and encouragement to succeed at college. A recent survey shows that Americans tend to believe college is more expensive than it actually is; and the average college loan burden remains about 5 percent of a graduate's starting salary — not an outrageous figure.

"Most colleges," said the director of an Hispanic education advocacy group, "do not understand why (minority) kids are less likely to enroll. If you come from a middle-class family, your brothers and sisters and cousins go to college and so do you, but most Hispanic kids don't have those role models."

A black education leader says young adults he talks to do not understand why they should attend college when they can earn more (in the short run) at a job. While the spoken excuse is financial, this suggests a deeper alienation on the part of these youths from the values and "the ropes" of society.

Such alienation appears in college students as well. And a recent State Higher Education Executive Officers study harshly criticizes colleges for failing to ensure that poor and minority enrollees actually graduate. Says T. Edward Hollander, chairman of the Officers panel, minority youths are apt to drop out, then "tell their younger brothers and sisters not to even try to attend college."

Clearly, it is time for a reaffirmation of the importance of sending every qualified person to college, and keeping him there. Without prompt attention, experts are warning, colleges could revert to the elitist class reproduction of eras past.

Shaving, Saving

The Greenville Utilities Commission has decided that a 2 percent wholesale power cost increase will be absorbed rather than passed on to the customers. That means $1 million in additional wholesale power charges will not show up on customers' bills in the next six months.

The cost came down from the North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency as a part of the Shearon Harris nuclear plant costs. It was feared the increase could have been as much as 8 percent but the final figure turned out to be less.

GUC passed on its last electric rate increase in November 1984. It is anticipated now that the rates will remain the same for another year. Predictions, however, are for an additional 7 percent increase in rates in about a year which GUC officials say they will not be able to absorb.

The local utilities purchases power wholesale from the N.C. Eastern Municipal Electric Power Agency which shares in the ownership of the Shearon Harris nuclear plant with Carolina Power & Light.

GUC has actively promoted load management programs which have shaved its cost of serving electric customers. Included is Beat-the-Peak, in which customers agree to have their water heaters and air conditioning shut off briefly during periods of high peak demand. Peak shaving has also been accomplished through use of generators at the GUC water plant and at the Procter & Gamble plant.

It is an auspicious occasion for customers when GUC can absorb a wholesale increase. The commission should continue to study additional ways it can operate more efficiently. The savings can be passed on to customers either through absorption of wholesale increases, or in other ways. Maintaining reasonable electric rates while providing quality service is important to the people who live here, as well as to attracting new industry and business. It is most important that GUC keep electric rates on an even keel. The decision to absorb the recent wholesale increase is correct.

The Deplorable State of Education

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leaves are turning, Congress is back and the Yankees are fading fast in the American League East. It's autumn in America, time again to reflect on the deplorable state of our children's education.

This is easily done, because every September, to mark the beginning of school, the education establishment unburdens itself of a year's worth of self-flagellating research.

Last week, the experts turned in a veritable blizzard of data. Raise your hand if you can answer these questions:

1. One study found that 68 percent of 8,000 American 17-year-olds polled could not place the Civil War within the correct half-century, and 64 percent couldn't identify the author of the "Canterbury Tales." What percentage failed to name Walt Whitman as author of "Leaves of Grass"?

a) Only 8 percent got it wrong; at least these teen-agers know Whitman.
b) 60 percent got it wrong.
c) 33.3 percent got it wrong.
d) This is a trick question, Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote "Leaves of Grass."

ANSWER: 60 percent. Chairwoman Lynne Cheney of the National Endowment for the Humanities lays the blame for these results on textbooks and teachers who "emphasize the process of learning rather than its content."

2. Quality preschool programs for disadvantaged youngsters yield a $4.75 return for every $1 invested, mainly through eventual savings in such programs as special education, welfare and even crime control. The fraction of those eligible who are enrolled in Head Start?:

a) 72 percent.
b) 50 percent.
c) 20 percent.
d) Obviously, it's low or it wouldn't be news: 8 percent.

ANSWER: Low enough, at 20 percent. Of $288 billion spent nationwide on education last year, only $1 billion was spent on children 5 or under.

"The (Committee for Economic Development) report suggests the earlier the education the better," Education Secretary William J. Bennett remarked. "We're happy to take a look at this and consider redeploying some of our funds at that early level."

3. In 1970, over 90 percent of U.S. 9th graders knew how long it takes to travel to the moon. By 1986, it was only 55 percent, according to a study that said American science students compare poorly with the English and the Japanese. OK, so how long does it take to get to the moon?

a) A few days.
b) Ten days.
c) It took many millennium.
d) Neil Armstrong's three-day trip to the moon took place in 1969. No wonder everyone knew the answer in 1970.

ANSWER: a, c and d. Yet a more helpful explanation for the overall slippage in scientific competency might be this: U.S. youngsters were found to be doing one to two hours less homework per week last year than their 1970 counterparts.

4. In Chicago, where 430,000 students were idled by a teacher strike, a memo bobbed up in which a school financial officer says a 16-day strike would save the school district ...

a) $1.05 million.
b) $4 million, more or less.
c) $7.5 million, but it would be wrong.
d) $7.5 million.

ANSWER: d. Union spokesman Chuck Burdeen found the memo "outrageous," but school board spokesman Ken Masson said, "The memo says what it says, but for the union to portray this as shocking is unfair. These kinds of savings have been discussed in previous contract disputes."

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, parent of the striking Chicago affiliate, told reportrs last week that although the number of teachers' strikes has dwindled in the 1980s, some school boards "use a strike as a way of balancing their budget."

5. "Some states seem afraid of having a great university for fear that it will become a political threat or an expensive habit," says Frank Newman, president of the Education Commission of the States. How many of our 50 states have no interest in maintaining a top-quality state university, according to Newman's interviews with government and academic leaders.

a) Just six.
b) 16
c) At least half the states.
d) Newman lost his notes and can't remember the answer.

ANSWER: c. Newman says Ohio is working in the right direction. The state, rebounding from a loss of industrial jobs, will invest $133 million in a "selective excellence" program by 1989.

Jonathan Wolman is a) assistant bureau chief for AP in Washington, b) author of the "Canterbury Tales." Answer: a. Chaucer is the author of the "Canterbury Tales."

Strength For Today

Newspaper reporters once interviewed a man on his hundredth birthday. "You've seen many changes take place, haven't you," asked the reporter. "Yes," replied the old man, "and I've opposed every one of them." He probably felt that he was a noble patriot, defending humanity against the folly of innovations superficially conceived. On the other hand, the people who grasp everything new and proclaim it to be the ultimate are doing themselves and everybody else a tremendous disservice.

Satisfactory living arises from balance. The fact that we are able to walk about and not fall off our feet involves complicated nervous and muscualr mechanisms which make computers seem very simple. What is true in the physical world is true also in the mental. Our best decisions are always arrived at after a terrific struggle between the pro and con.

The Two Germanys Frame Long-Term Agenda For Barriers

BONN, West Germany — The two Germanys agreed last week on the broad outline of a long-term agenda for gradually lowering the political, psychological and physical barriers that have divided them since the onset of the Cold War.

The landmark visit to West Germany by East German chief of state Erich Honecker laid a diplomatic foundation for what could become the most substantial improvement in inter-German relations since the heady days of former chancellor Willy Brandt's Ostpolitic in the early 1970s.

Honecker and his host, Chancellor Helmut Kohl, achieved a tentative consensus on how to handle the two most emotionally charged issues in the inter-German relationship: East Germany's closed border, and reunification of the nation.

On the border, they signed a communique obliging East Germany to ease its travel restrictions. They also appear to have agreed that such a relaxation ultimately could lead to a situation where the communist government's border guards no longer shoot at its citizens when they try to escape to the West.

That was the message implicit in Honecker's unprecedented statement Thursday that the border is not "as it should be," and that it could become a "normal" one if the two Germanys continue the peaceful cooperation begun during his trip.

Analysis

It was a dramatic statement, though carefully hedged, from the 75-year-old communist leader, who supervised the construction of the Berlin Wall in 1961.

The West German government, politicians and media commentators unanimously warned against "utopian" hopes regarding the border. But they strongly welcomed Honecker's declaration.

"Expectations have been raised more than was expected," an editorial in the Munich daily Sueddeutsche Zeitung said.

On reunification, which Bonn wants and East Berlin opposes, Kohl conceded that the issue "is at present not on the agenda of world history."

More important, he gave Honecker a red-carpet welcome. It showed that West Germany was willing to treat its neighbor as an equal in practice despite Bonn's official insistence that East Germany is only a separate "state" in a German "nation" that someday will be reunited.

Three bilateral agreements were signed in addition to the communique, and together they clear the way for a small but discernible jump in cooperation in diplomacy, science, trade, sports and cultural affairs.

Kohl reported to parliament that the results had been "considerable," and expressed optimism that "this will become clearer in the next months." Honecker said when he departed Friday that there had been "a row of positive results."

The inter-German thaw is risky for both sides, and it could easily be chilled, according to Bonn officials, diplomats and other observers.

In particular, a downturn in U.S.-Soviet relations would force the two Germanys to back off. Historically, they have been able to move closer only when the overall East-West climate was relatively relaxed.

East Germany's leadership probably will move cautiously to avoid raising expectations at home.

Tobacco Industry Attacks Anti-Smoking Drive

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The Tobacco Conference of the States has mounted a strong defense of the golden leaf, disputing health damage attributed to passive smoking and laying the groundwork for battling smoking restrictions.

Several speakers at sessions Monday warned that overly ambitious smoking foes were usurping the rights of smokers. Jim Goss, assistant to the president of the Tobacco Institute, even offered a joke on that theme, asking the audience, "How do you save a drowning anti-smoking zealot?"

When the audience said, "I don't know," Goss replied, "Good."

"There's a firestorm of anti-tobacco sentiment out there. A firestorm," said James Savarese, president of James Savarese and Associates and a consultant for the Tobacco Institute, an industry lobbying group.

Savarese said it's important when fighting restrictions on smoking in restaurants or the workplace to appeal to local interests.

"If we just say we're representing the Tobacco Institute, we're dead ... once you leave Tobaccoland," he said. "We try to say what is the economic impact of a smoking restriction ... on people who live in that state, not the tobacco industry."

By emphasizing the problems that businesses might have accommodating anti-smoking laws, lobbyists can at least imply there is an economic impact, Savarese said.

"We argue that there's enormous productivity problems if you don't let people smoke in their workplace," he said. "They're going to be away from their desk a whole lot more than if they were allowed to smoke at that desk. ... But the owners of the workplace have to come in and make the argument."

The industry also can successfully use labor unions and minorities to carry the message.

"Minorities smoke much more than Caucasians; blue-collar workers almost 3-to-1 over white collar; lower income working women 4-1 over other women," Savarese said. "These people in the Northeast or the Midwest belong overwhelmingly to labor unions and they have labor contracts and smoking in the workplace is a condition of working."

Those people often are ardent suporters of the "liberal labor Democrats" who sponsor anti-smoking bills, he said.

Savarese's presentation was typical of the upbeat approach of the conference. Nearly all of the speakers had ties to the Tobacco Institute.

Mark Reasor of the West Virginia University Medical Center's Department of Pharmacology and Toxicology, said a group of scientists sponsored by the Tobacco Institute had found flaws in studies linking smoke exposure to non-mokers with higher cancer risks.

"These reports have a number of scientific weaknesses and we feel that these weaknesses make this conclusion rather questionable at the present time," he said his "unbiased, objective" review had found.

Kentucky state Rep. Butch Burnett said the tobacco industry should brace itself for more reports about health risks.

"I see some reports on TV that will just scare you to death and it seems to me like sometimes that's what the surgeon general wants to do," he said.

Peter Bennie, vice president for ACVA Atlantic Inc., a consulting firm also employed by the Tobacco Institute, said studies of hundreds of buildings indicated tobacco smoke in the air was a problem in fewer than 4 percent of buildings in which employees had health complaints. He said the problem was nearly always lack of proper ventilation.

Leyton Davis of the Tobacco and Health Research Institute in Lexington, Ky., told participants in the conference that the tide of anti-tobacco sentiment is beginning to turn. He guaranteed people would still be using tobacco products 100 years from now and said the proper focus for research is on reducing the risk for people who smoke.

Davis, whose institute is funded with a half-cent cigarette tax, said he was concerned about credibility.

"That is one of the problems that we have to overcome," he said. "Here we are right in the middle of the second-largest tobacco producing state in the United Stats and we've got a program on tobacco and health. How can we ever be sure we're going to have anything credible come out of it?"

But Davis said grant proposals must go through two review boards, including one outside the state. And he added, "Our investigators are published in the same journals as those in Michigan or Massachusetts."

Davis said another curb to false claims was the trouble that could be generated by a mistake.

"We better be right in this, because if you make a change in that cigarette today, it's going to be 20 years before you know whether or not that decision was correct, at least in terms of lung cancer."

State Officials Say Smokeless Cigarette Will Help Industry

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Although a new smokeless cigarette will use only about 70 percent as much tobacco as standard brands, North Carolina officials say the new product could help the industry and make smoking more socially acceptable.

"Potentially, it could reverse the decline in consumption," said Carlton Blalock of the North Carolina Tobacco Growers Association.

The cigarette would heat tobacco rather than burning, producing no ash, little odor and virtually no smoke, officials of R.J. Reynolds said in announcing the product Monday. The smokeless cigarettes produce only a slight odor of smoke and did not start a fire when laid on a paper tablecloth.

"We believe it could be an important advancement to our industry and, perhaps, to some of our critics," Gene Ainsworth of R.J. Reynolds told the Tobacco Conference of the States Ainsworth also said the smokeless cigarette would address growing complaints from nonsmokers who fear their health may be harmed by cigarette smoke.

Bob Jenkins, director of the North Carolina Farm Bureau, said the new product would provide an alternative for smokers.

"I can see it as an alternate chance for people to use," he said. "It would be a safer cigarette for people concerned about tar. And there may be people who were considering quitting smoking because of all they've heard. This could keep the level of tobacco being consumed from dropping."

"For those who enjoy smoking, this is a good direction," said Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., in a prepared statement. "Doubtless, other companies will follow."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said "the technology of this innovation was undoubtedly costly to the company, but it is an investment in the future of a multitude of citizens in North Carolina and other tobacco states."

"It is also an eloquent answer to some of tobacco's most vehement critics," Helms said in a prepared statement. "The new cigarette does not burn. It does not produce smoke. And it will not cause fires."

Gov. Jim Martin emphasized the project is still under study, adding, "... it is too early to tell whether this product and its revolutionary concept will fare well in the marketplace and prove acceptable to consumers.

"It is gratifying, however, to see such an effort being made in North Carolina to address, in an innovative way, the health concerns of many smokers and nonsmokers."

Reginald Lester of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee congratulated Ainsworth on the product, particularly for eliminating the threat of cigarette-sparked fires.

"It may reduce a lot of pressure on the fire-safe cigarette legislation," Lester said. "I'm not sure we can say good-bye to it. I imagine the bulk of cigarettes that will be sold in the near future will continue to be traditional cigarettes or cigarettes as they're being manufactured today."

Officials were optimistic that the smokeless cigarettes would find acceptance among smokers.

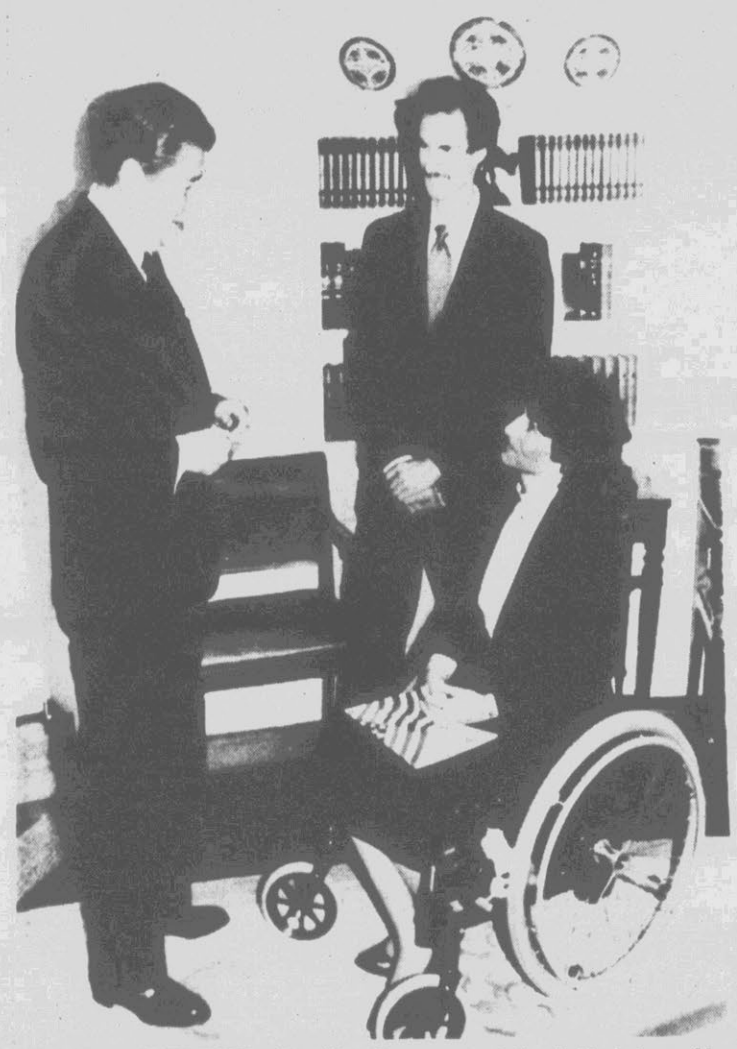

"There will be a period of time required to see if smokers accept this product, although I am sure R.J. Reynolds would not release a product they have not thoroughly researched and tested," said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

"I assume test panels have found it acceptable, or it wouldn't have gotten this far," Blalock said.

Ainsworth said the cigarette "eliminates or greatly reduces most of the chemical compounds produced by the burning tobacco." He emphasized to growers that 100 percent of the burley and flue-cured tobacco to be used would be U.S. grown, although some Turkish tobacco would be included.

"We consider this exciting new cigarette ... the most significant advance ever achieved in the cigarette industry," he said.

No price has been determined for the new cigarette, Ainsworth said.

Analysts Say RJR On Track

By PETER COY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A smokeless cigarette under development by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. could improve the image of smoking and aid an industry that has been in steady decline, financial analysts say.

"They have taken the cigarette manufacturing process to a new level," said Lawrence Adelman, a senior vice president at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "One cannot underestimate the significance of this."

The smokeless cigarette supplies the flavor of tobacco without burning it and gives off less than 10 percent of the harmful substances such as tars that are created in the combustion of tobacco. It does give off nicotine and carbon monoxide.

The cigarette emits almost no smoke, lessening the annoyance to nearby people, and is unlikely to ignite most materials when lying flat.

Stock in RJR Nabisco Inc., the parent company, fluctuated Monday after a jump of $2.87½ a share on Friday that was fueled by rumors about the smokeless cigarette. Up $1.87½ a share early in the day, the stock sagged later and closed down $1 a share to $66.75 a share in consolidated New York Stock Exchange trading.

Cigarette consumption in the United States peaked at 640 billion cigarettes in 1981 and has been declining close to 2 percent a year since. Consumption last year was 584 billion cigarettes.

"It's going to take time to begin to influence that decline," Adelman said. "But you might bring back some smokers who stopped smoking, you could increase per capita consumption of existing smokers, and you might even bring in new smokers."

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., based in Winston-Salem, N.C., produces about one-third of the cigarettes sold in the United States. Its brand names include Winston, Salem, Camel and Vantage.

Regional test-marketing is scheduled to begin next year. RJR Nabisco gave its progress report Monday because news had been leaking out and it wanted to set the record straight.

R.J. Reynolds said smokers who tried the new cigarettes had gotten full satisfaction. But even if they are as good as regular cigarettes it will take a while for them to catch on, said George Thompson, an analyst for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

"Smokers are a very independent lot. They're very brand loyal," he said. "If it's successful, of course, it's a big plus" for the company, he added.

Red Wolves Freed On Dare Mainland

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — In the swampy woodlands near the tiny village of East Lake on Dare County's mainland, an experiment in survival has begun for a pair of endangered red wolves.

After months of delay and anticipation, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials opened the gate Monday of a 2,500-square-foot wire pen holding the wolves on the Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge.

The task was carried out casually, without the fanfare that had accompanied the arrival of four mated pairs of red wolves in last November.

"We wanted them to leave at their own leisure," said John Taylor, manager of the 127,000-acre refuge, which stretches from mainland Dare to Tyrrell and Hyde counties. "We didn't want to spook them at all."

Warren Parker, coordinator of the red wolf project, fed the wolves a 10-pound breakfast of road-killed deer about 9:30 a.m., tossing the meat into the pen from behind a plywood screen as usual. He then opened and secured the gate, said Taylor, who videotaped the moment.

By late afternoon, the wolves were "either still in the pen or so close that we can't tell the difference," Taylor said.

"They are hanging right around the pen, which is what we wanted them to do for the next few days," Taylor said.

Wildlife officials say they hope the wolves gradually expand their territorial range on the refuge as they learn to hunt and feed. If they had "bolted" from the pen, they could have separated and disrupted the experiment, Taylor said.

The red wolf project is the first attempt in the history of wildlife management to reintroduce into North America a species extinct in the wild. The shy wolves, smaller cousins to the gray timber wolf, once roamed throughout most of the southeastern United States and Canada and as far west as Texas and Oklahoma.

IN THE STATE

School Funding

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Three state organizations have asked the North Carolina Supreme Court for permission to file briefs in a Lumberton lawsuit questioning the legality of the state's system for funding public schools.

Eric Prevatte, head of the Robeson County Citizens After Responsible Education, which filed the lawsuit, said the requests were made by the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners, the state chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Law Students Civil Rights Association of Campbell University.

The case is now before the Supreme Court.

Grade Change

WILMINGTON (AP) — A Pender High School student's final grades from the last school year — which the school principal changed without consulting teachers — have been changed again, this time back to failing, officials say.

Principal Rowe Sawyer's decision to change failing grades so a student could pass two classes was "inappropriate," said Superintendent Haywood Davis, who ordered the grades changed back.

Davis notified Sawyer and the two teachers involved last week that the grades were to be reinstated. The notice came several days after the Board of Education met in secret for more than four hours to investigate the matter.

"Following that meeting, it was the consensus of board members that an inappropriate action had been taken by the principal," Davis said on Monday. "They instructed me to have the grades ... reinstated."

Textiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the House prepares to consider legislation that would sharply limit imports of cloth, clothes and shoes, a new study says the proposal could cost consumers more than $14 billion a year by 1996.

The proposal would cost $62,887 for every U.S. job it created, according to a study prepared by William R. Cline for the Institute for International Economics, financed largely by the (West) German Marshall Fund.

Overall, the legislation would cost the U.S. economy more than $14 billion in 1996, concluded Cline, a former deputy director for development and trade research at the Treasury.

Such estimates have been challenged by the textile industry. A study done for the Fiber, Fabric and Apparel Coalition for Trade says the bill would increase the total value of U.S. production by $1 billion this year and by $1.7 billion in 1988.

The cloth and shoe industries point to thousands of jobs lost to American workers because of imports.

Phony Bills

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — Several counterfeit $20 bills have been discovered in Elizabeth City and Nags Head, and police said they are looking for two suspects who apparently are passing the phony money.

Wachovia Bank in Elizabeth City discovered three counterfeir bills last Wednesday in deposits made by two stores. The bills had the same serial number and appeared to have been duplicated on a copy machine, said Police Chief W.C. Owens.

First Union Bank also found two bills with the same serial number on Wednesday, Owens said.

The incidents may tie in with reports of other counterfeits found in Nags Head, Tidewater, Va., and South Hill, Va., Owens said.

Pender Support

BURGAW, N.C. (AP) — They might be a little late — almost 200 years late — but the Pender County Commissioners want to lend their support to the state's ratification of the U.S. Constitution.

They'll gather on the courthouse square Wednesday in Burgaw to adopt a resolution supporting the Constitution. The 5 p.m. meeting will be nearly 198 years after delegates at a state convention in Fayetteville voted for its ratification, making North Carolina one of the last states to accept it.

Of course, Pender has a good excuse for its tardiness. The county didn't exist in 1789. Pender split from New Hanover County in 1875.

Will Forging

RALEIGH (AP) — A former Wake County justice of the peace, already serving a 23-year prison sentence on charges stemming from the falsification of his brother's will, has pleaded guilty to forging wills of his brother and a former tax attorney.

Robert Castleberry faces a maximum penalty of 10 additional years in prison during sentencing Tuesday in Wake County Superior Court by Judge F. Gordon Battle of Hillsborough.

State Program Becomes National Model

RALEIGH (AP) — A North Carolina program in which businesses are urged to reduce and recycle their wastes before they become pollution — the first of its kind in the country — is being used as a model for a nationwide program.

The Evironmental Protection Agency has borrowed Roger Schecter, head of the state's Pollution Prevention Pays program, to develop the nationwide program.

"EPA has been trying to formulate a pollution prevention program for some time now patterned after North Carolina's program," R. Paul Wilms, director of the N.C. Division of Environmental Management, told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

"And they requested that Roger come up under the Intergovernmental Personnel Act to work with them for three months to a year in developing the program," Wilms said.

"Pollution Prevention Pays is an outreach program," Wilms said. "It is much more prudent and much less expensive to avoid generating waste in the first place than to treat the waste. And it helps protect the environment."

The program, started in 1984, operates on an annual budget of $180,000. Wilms said the program received more than twice as many requests for help than it had the money to fund.

"Our requests for assistance in the first six months averaged about 25 a month," he said. Now it averages about 80.

"Of the 30 firms we gave assistance to in 1985, they realized a savings of about $12 million. In 1986, we helped about 24 firms and their first year savings were about $14 million. For every dollar that we've invested... we've seen about $2 returned," Wilms said.

A key element of the program, Wilms said, is that technical advisers are not involved in enforcement, even though the Division of Environmental Management is the basic agency for enforcing water and air pollution laws.

"Pollution prevention is in that agency, but it is totally divorced from our regulatory program," Wilms said. "And that's an essential ingredient. They've got to know, when we go on site, that we are not regulatory enforcers."

Although the program typically works with smaller-scale operations, staff members say they have assisted businesses and industries of all sizes.

"We help anyone who comes in our door," said Gary E. Hunt, acting director of the pollution program.

Some examples of waste reduction efforts under the two programs are:

— Ilco Unican Corp. of Rocky Mount, one of world's largest manufacturers of keys, estimated it would save $36,000 a year in waste-disposal costs by installing a system for recycling metals. The additional equipment would pay for itself in seven months.

— Maola Milk & Ice Cream Co. of New Bern estimated it would save more than $300,000 year in disposal costs by stopping leaks and finding new uses for leftover milk. Costs would be paid back in less than a year. — GSH Corp., a manufacturer of rubber gaskets in Snow Hill, estimated it would save $30,000 a year in disposal costs by installing an oil-recycling system. Costs would be paid off in about a year.

Pleads Guilty

Miller Says He'll Testify At Trial

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal prosecutor has hinted that the guilty pleas of former White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller on two federal charges might lead to the indictment of other men captured with him in Missouri in April.

"This is a very significant plea agreement because Glenn Miller is at the very top of the (White Patriot) organization," acting U.S. Attorney Douglas McCullough said. "No one else in a leadership position has talked."

Miller pleaded guilty in federal court Monday to a charge of mailing a threatening communication, and he said in an agreement with the government that he also would plead guilty to a weapons charge in Missouri.

He also agreed to testify against others members of his defunct organization.

Miller appeared calm as he politely answered questions asked by U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt. He told Britt that he understood the charges against him and realized he could face a maximum penalty of a $250,000 fine and five years in federal prison.

Under the terms of the plea bargain agreement, prosecutors will recommend a five-year active sentence for the two charges combined. The charge to be filed in Missouri, of possessing unregistered firearms, carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

GLENN MILLER

Miller was arrested in Missouri in April after a 10-day search that started when officials realized he had left Virginia, where he had recently moved from Angier with his family. Shortly after he disappeared, a letter apparently signed by Miller and declaring "total war" against the government, blacks and Jews was sent to about 5,000 white supremacists.

Federal agents found Robert E. Jackson, Anthony Wydra and Douglas Sheets with Miller when they stormed and teargassed a mobile home in Ozark, Mo.

In the home and a nearby van, authorities discovered hand grenades, automatic weapons, thousands of rounds of ammunition, C-4 plastic explosives and $14,000 in cash. They also found a copy machine and about 1,000 copies of the "declaration of war."

Miller was free pending appeal of a contempt-of-court conviction when he fled from Virginia to Louisiana in early April. There, he apparently purchased a van and issued the declaration of war before driving to Missouri.

After his capture, Miller recanted the document, terming the action "just another Glenn Miller bluff that got out of hand."

He said he issued the declaration to focus attention on "perceived injustices and crimes committed against myself and the White Patriot Party over several years."

The neo-Nazi group said it had about 2,000 members and sympathizers in the state until 1985, when a series of criminal and civil court actions began that would eventually destroy the organization.

The first of those actions was brought by Alabama civil rights attorney Morris Dees, who argued that the group harassed a black prison guard seeking a job promotion. That suit resulted in a consent agreement in which Miller and the White Patriot Party agreed not to operate a paramilitary organization.

Dees filed another suit against the group last summer, successfully charging that the group violated the agreement by conducting secret paramilitary training sessions with stolen military equipment.

Eight Indicted On Porn Charges

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Eight North Carolina residents have been charged with receiving child pornography in a two-year "reverse sting" operation that has prompted a nationwide crackdown on sexual exploitation of minors.

The eight felony indictments were announced Monday in Charlotte, at the same time the U.S. Justice Department announced in Washington that more than 100 others have been indicted in two nationwide child-pornography operations.

Those operations targeted people who answered advertisements that offered materials depicting child sex.

The eight in North Carolina were charged with ordering child-pornography videotapes or magazines from a fictitious South Carolina company set up by the Charlotte office of the U.S. Postal Inspection Service.

Techniques used in investigations in Charlotte, Cleveland and Tampa prompted the national operations, said R.M. Hazelwood III of the U.S. Postal Inspection Service in Charlotte.

The indictments bring to 21 the number of people indicted or arrested in North Carolina and South Carolina since the undercover investigation began in May 1985. At the same time, another 24 people — including a Craven County deputy sheriff — were arrested in other investigations for dealing in child pornography or hard-core adult pornography.

More indictments are expected, Hazelwood said.

"There is a problem out there with people who deal in child pornography," Hazelwood said. "It could be your neighbor, your school teacher or your minister.

"Postal inspectors are sending a message that the use of the U.S. mails to traffic in child pornography and perpetuate the sexual victimiza tion of children will not be tolerated," he said.

If convicted, the eight face up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine for violating a federal law that prohibits the publication, shipping or receiving of explicit sexual materials involving people under 18 years old.

Those arrested were charged with receiving child pornography materials, not producing them. Many of the magazines and video tapes originated abroad and were seized in other investigations, Hazelwood said.

Investigators found no evidence of an organized child-pornography business in the two-state region, Hazelwood said.

"Some of them did offer to sell to our undercover officers," he said. "But I would define it more as sharing. They like to add to their collections.

"There is no real organized distribution of child pornography," he said. "It's mainly a lot of individuals who maintain a list of people they know and trust."

Indicted were: Ricky Gene Murph, 33, of Burlington; Larry Cobb Richardson, 40, of Burlington; Wilson B. Dickens, 43, of Reidsville; John William Coffey, also known as William Kauffman, 42, of Chapel Hill; and Moffett Hunter Spencer, 55, of Roxboro. Also indicted were Phillip David Swanger, 51, of Hickory; David Rocklyn Kanipe, 39, of Newton; and William Maxwell Shaheen, 57, of Blowing Rock.

In the investigation in North Carolina and South Carolina, postal inspectors set up a fictitious company known as F&H Associates in Columbia, S.C. The company offered child-pornography contacts and other information to people trying to buy, trade or sell child pornography.

Youth Care Challenged

DURHAM (AP) — Many adolescents are needlessly placed in psychiatric institutions, partly because of aggressive marketing by for-profit facilities and insurance companies that cover a larger portion of inpatient than outpatient costs, two psychologists say.

"What's going on is damn near criminal," Greensboro psychologist John Rowell said. It is now too easy for a parent to hospitalize a rebellious youngster "to get rid of a headache — at least for the moment," he said.

Rowell said financial incentives, combined with hospital advertising that pushes "sad, weepy stories" and a parent's natural inclination to get the most help available for a child, have caused a bad situation. And a psychologist at Duke University agreed.

"Corporations are spending increasing amounts for mental health, and what they end up with is an incentive to use inpatient care," said Dr. Rodney Loman, director of corporate mental health programs at Duke.

Insurance plans may cover 50 percent of outpatient psychiatric counseling, but pick up 80 percent or more of the tab for psychiatric hospitalization, said Margot Lester, spokeswoman for Blue Cross-Blue Shield of North Carolina.

That's because outpatient services tend to be abused, Lester said, adding, "Since you can't diagnose mental health under a microscope, it's hard for an insurance company or an employer to say 'You really didn't need to go.'"

A report this year by the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment notes that adolescent admissions to private psychiatric hospitals have nearly tripled since 1970.

Martin To Lead New State Trade Mission To Far East

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin will lecture Japanese university students on biotechnology, talk trade with Korean businessmen and promote North Carolina's ports to Chinese officials during a Far East trip trade mission next month.

The 18-day trip starts Oct. 1 and ends Oct. 18 and includes about 100 North Carolina businessmen who will pay their own way, said Sam Taylor, spokesman for the state Commerce Department. It will be Martin's third trade mission as governor and his second trip to the Far East.

The trip will cost taxpayers $4,000 to $5,000 for each state official making the journey, Taylor said.

In addition to Martin, there will be three security guards; Commerce Secretary Claude Pope; William R. Dunn, deputy commerce secretary for economic development; and Karen Hayes Rotterman, Martin's communication director, making the entire trip. Taylor will travel only to Japan and Korea.

Taylor said Martin's wife, Dottie, also would be on the trip, but said he didn't know who would pay for her travel. Taylor also declined to identify the private business executives on the trip.

"The falling values of the dollar, combined with growing pressure on Pacific Rim companies to invest in the United States, is going to make the next 12 months a watershed period for American business opportunity in the Far East," Martin said in a statement. "This mission is designed to position North Carolina to capture its share of that opportunity."

In 1980, Japanese companies invested $49 million in North Carolina, creating 230 new jobs, Taylor said. Last year, Japan's investment more than tripled to about $177 million and 849 new jobs.

The delegation will spend seven days in Japan, where Martin will deliver a lecture to Yokohama City University students on the use of biotechnology in the development of fifth generation computers. The group also will spend three days in South Korea and four days in China. A second group of state officials, led by N.C. State University Chancellor Bruce Poulton, will join Martin in China Oct. 13, where they will celebrate the signing of a cooperative agreement between N.C. State and China's Northeast Institute of Technology.

At Montes Claros, in Brazil's Atlantic forest, muriqui (wooly spider monkey) males mate with females in the presence of other males, with no competition evident, says National Geographic.

New Sentence

RALEIGH (AP) — The man who held law enforcement officers at bay for four days aboard an Amtrack train five years ago was sentenced to an additional two years in prison Monday, authorities said.

Mario Evangelista Navas-Villabona, 34, from Columbia, South America, is already serving a life sentence for killing his 8-month-old niece aboard that train. On Monday, he was resentenced for the conviction of involuntary manslaughter in the death of his sister-in-law, also on the train.

Wake County District Attorney Colon Willoughby said Navas could have been given 10 additional years in prison, but because of his mental state during the crime, only two more years were added to his life sentence. Navas is serving his time at Central Prison in Raleigh.

The state Supreme Court ordered a new sentencing after Navas appealed his sentence.

Navas was convicted in February 1984, of first-degree murder in the death of his niece, after the baby died of dehydration while on the train.

Island Accepted

WEST ONSLOW BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Forced indoors by thunder and lightning, Gov. Jim Martin formally accepted Permuda Island into the state estuarine sanctuary system Monday.

The governor, however, found himself facing a storm of his own over the protection of Stump Sound.

The $1.7 million to buy Permuda Island "will be wasted and the productive water around the island lost, if the land around Stump Sound is developed without adequate controls," Lena Ritter told Martin. "The state needs to spend more time protecting the water."

Specifically, Mrs. Ritter called for stricter stormwater runoff regulations and enforcement, pushing the governor to oppose what she called the "knee-jerk" and "weak" stormwater regulations adopted by his Evironmental Management Commission.

Martin said he would to consider her suggestions.

Pope Meets American Indians, Moves To L.A.

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Pope John Paul II today carries his message of "one human family" from a tiny but devoutly faithful segment of his American flock to the country's largest Roman Catholic diocese.

He leaves Phoenix for Los Angeles with the memory of a unique demonstration of Roman Catholic faith by descendants of the original Americans. The pontiff called the encounter "for me and all of us, a deep experience."

He used the occasion Monday — a meeting and prayer service with representatives of American Indian tribes — to plead for brotherhood. American Catholics, he said, have not always lived up to their Christian responsibilities in the past but "we commit ourselves to overcoming their present effects."

In Los Angeles, he was to have the only two-day stay of his nine-city tour. More than 2.6 million Catholics, nearly 5 percent of all the Catholics in the United States, are concentrated in the three counties that make up the Los Angeles diocese.

To prepare for the visit, authorities made a pre-dawn sweep Monday to remove the homeless that inhabit the area around St. Vibiana's Cathedral where the pope will stay.

The cathedral is on the fringe of Skid Row, and the Union Rescue Mission next door — which feeds 2,000 destitute people a day — was ordered closed temporarily.

Church officials say the Secret Service and police insisted on the actions for the pope's security on grounds that a terrorist might hide among the homeless.

Traffic problems were predicted and extensive use of helicopters was planned for the pontiff.

He had a busy schedule — 10 events, including a downtown parade and two stadium Masses. The official welcome was at St. Vibiana's Cathedral, named for the third century virgin martyr who is the patron saint of the diocese. The invited guests were representatives from each of Los Angeles' 284 parishes and 27 missions, including seven founded by Franciscan Junipero Serra in the 18th century.

Church officials fear that publicity about anticipated traffic jams and discomfort may discourage people from coming to see the pope. Warnings of traffic problems and bad or extremely hot weather have been blamed for smaller-than-predicted crowds for the pope in the South.

There was no lack of attendance, however, in Monday's Mass in Sun Devil Stadium at Arizona State University. The pope had a full house, 80,000 people, for the first time on the tour.

Earlier, at the meeting with the Indians, the pope was blessed in the tradition of the Pima nation. Emmett White, a third generation Catholic, medicine man and spiritual leader of the tribe, presented the pontiff with a white eagle feather he used for the blessing.

The Indians, many dressed in tribal garb, welcomed the pope with dances, drums and rattles. He appeared so delighted with his reception that he walked around the arena for 15 minutes, bestowing blessings.

He recalled that Junipero Serra, an 18th-century Franciscan priest, frequently clashed with civil authorities over the treatment of Indians.

"Unfortunately, not all the members of the church lived up to their Christian responsibilities," said the pope.

"We all belong to one human family, and are meant to walk and work together in mutual respect, understanding trust and love," he said, adding:

"I encourage you ... to preserve and keep alive your cultures, your languages, the values and customs which have served you well in the past.

"Your respect for the dignity and worth of every human being, from the unborn to the aged, and your stewardship and care of the earth; these things benefit not only yourself, but the entire human family."

Vatican Clarifies Sanctuary Stance

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A spokesman for Pope John Paul II has denied that the pope meant to endorse the sanctuary movement in a speech this week to Hispanic Roman Catholics here.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service said Monday it wanted the Vatican to clarify the pope's remarks of the previous day.

The pope praised the "courage and generosity" of those who aid refugees "arriving from the south." These helpers "have sought to show compassion in the face of complex human, social and political realities," the pope said.

Joaquin Navarro-Valls, the Vatican's top press officer, denied that the pope had endorsed the sanctuary movement in his address.

"He was not addressing any specific moral movement" but rather wants Catholics "to implement the full message of the Gospel," Navarro said.

Although the pope did not specifically mention the sanctuary movement, which assists illegal aliens fleeing political and social turbulence in Latin America, some interpreted his remarks as being supportive of it.

Immigration officials disagreed.

"I don't see anything in his statement that would encourage anyone to violate the federal statutes of the United States," said Duke Austin, spokesman for the agency in Washington.

But he said the INS had asked U.S. diplomats at the Vatican to request a clarification.

Austin said even a blanket papal endorsement of the movement would not cause many problems for immigration officials. He said only 300 churches are openly involved in the movement, and many of them are not Catholic.

"What we will probably do is get a further reading from his party, the people he is traveling with, to find out more about the things he said," said Silvestre Reyes, chief agent for the INS Border Patrol's McAllen Sector, which includes Brownsville.

"In our opinion, he's talking about doing things within the framework of the law," Reyes said. "I don't think he would advocate any violation of the law."

San Antonio Archbishop Patrick Flores, who has not vocally supported the sanctuary workers, said he interpreted the pope's remarks as an endorsement of humanitarian aid for all refugees.

Pontiff Has Special Blessings For Children In Phoenix Center

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Brooke Johnson is only 2½ months old and weighs less than 3 pounds, but her mother believes Pope John Paul II changed the prematurely born infant's life.

The pontiff held the child, who had been given only a 10 percent chance of survival at birth, and kissed her forehead Monday as he chatted with her parents.

"From the very beginning of her life, it's been miracle after miracle and this was one more," said Debby Johnson, the mother. "When she gets older I'll explain to her just how special she is."

The pope blessed other seriously ill children at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center, lauded doctors and nurses for their work, and took time to talk with a Polish pediatrician, Dr. Boguslawa Hyziak, whom he had confirmed while still an auxiliary bishop of Krakow.

The emotional walk through the children's wing was part of the pope's focus on health care during the fifth day of his U.S. visit.

To the parents of children he touched, the pontiff's blessings brought hope for their families and insight into a man they found gentle and caring.

"I know that he is going to help me go through this," said Tracy Fleming, a 13-year-old suffering from a spinal deformity. "I gave him a little banner and some flowers and he kissed me on the forehead."

Forteen-year-old Bryon Carpenter, who suffered a cerebral hemorrhage 11 days ago, said he is anxious to return to junior high school in Mesa with stories to tell of meeting the pope.

"I thought it was great, beautiful. The guy shook my hand," Carpenter said. "When the guy who talks to God meets you — that's cool."

Ann Roseman, child life coordinator at the hospital, said the pope surprised staff members and organizers by trying to touch every child and nurse he saw.

"The Secret Service could not keep him away from those children," she said. "It was very moving to see how the children responded to him and how he responded to them."

Issie "Lottie" Velasquez, the third child visited by the pope, has been hospitalized since April when she was paralyzed from the neck down as the result of a traffic accident involving a drunken driver.

Later, at the news conference, Lottie clutched a rosary the pontiff gave her. Her wheelchair still was decorated with papal flags.

"We believe in his blessing and that he will get her well," said Norma Romero, Lottie's mother. "I would think she will be closer to God."

Before entering St. Joseph's Children's Health Center, the pope mingled with the crowd for about 10 minutes, shaking hands and bestowing impromptu blessings.

One woman, breathing with the aid of a respirator, began to weep after the pope touched her and whispered a few words.

As he left the children's center, a waiting crowd of about 3,100 hospital employees and their families greeted him with a Polish phrase meaning "may you live to be 100."

"That's not so easy to accomplish," the pontiff responded during brief impromptu remarks. "But if it can be possible, it is only possible through love. It's possible not only to live 100 years, but also for the whole eternity when this eternity is charity, when this eternity is love."

Speakers Presented Remarks In Advance For Pope's Visit

By RUSSELL CHANDLER

PHOENIX, Ariz. — In order to add a little "give and take" to many of Pope John Paul II's presentations during his 10-day U.S. tour, a variety of persons, ranging from high-school students to bishops, were chosen to speak to the pontiff just before he gives his speeches.

Some have pleaded special causes for the pope's attention; others, ever so respectfully and subtly, have asked him to consider changes in church positions or policies.

But the exchanges are anything but spontaneous or off-the-cuff.

The "limited structural dialogues," as papal-trip planners call them, consist of a prepared speech or speeches to the pontiff, followed by a prepared response from him. The pope received the texts of all the messages, with one exception, by late June. Thus he had plenty of time to reflect upon and draft his responses.

"There is no real spontaneity between the two partners to the dialogue," conceded Russell Shaw, communications director for the U.S. bishops, who were instrumental in setting up the dialogue meetings for the pope's nine-city U.S. trip.

"But," said Shaw, "that doesn't spoil the effect. It's a real presentation of two points of view from two parties expressed over a period of time. It's kind of like an exchange of letters."

If so, those of the pope are crafted with unusual care. Ideas for John Paul's talks were culled from drafts proposed many months ago by priests and bishops in this country. These suggestions were then reviewed by a planning committee in Washington, D.C.

Rough drafts of the papal remarks were transmitted to the Vatican, where they were reviewed under the direction of Archbishop Justin Rigali, a Los Angeles native who now heads the Vatican diplomatic school. John Paul himself, officials say, wrote much of the material in the 49 speeches he is delivering on this trip.

Some of the 40 persons addressing the pope, like Alfretta Antone, a Pima Indian who spoke Monday about the concerns of Native Americans, represent specific interest groups.

Others, like Sally Davis, a high school senior in New Orleans, won out in competition against 20 of her peers to be one of several young people to speak to the pope at a youth rally in the Superdome.

None of the speeches to the pope was censored, Shaw said. Staff members of the National Council of Catholic Bishops, and, in some cases, the head of the committee or group involved in the dialogue, read the texts beforehand. Sometimes suggestions were made, according to Shaw.

"Frankly, many of the texts were too long and had to be shortened," he said.

No similar dialogue process occurred during the pope's 1979 pastoral visit to the United States, although several leaders made brief speeches to the pope.

One, Sister Theresa Kane, president of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious, departed from a short prepared text to challenge the pope to consider allowing women priests. Her impromptu remarks shocked church leaders and drew a brief, but pointed, rebuttal from the pope, who indicated that women's ordination was not an option.

So far, talks to the pope on this journey have been polite but frank.

Many of the speeches have represented a consensus of thinking by the group the speaker represented. The Rev. Frank J. McNulty, the New Jersey priest who told the pontiff in Miami about the "joys, concerns, worries and hopes" of U.S. priests, received suggestions from priests' councils in each of the nation's 185 dioceses. But McNulty, vicar for priests in the Archdiocese of New Jersey, personally drafted the talk.

In Los Angeles, when four of the nation's bishops address the pope on assigned topics at a closed meeting Wednesday, they will summarize ideas gleaned from other members of the hierarchy.

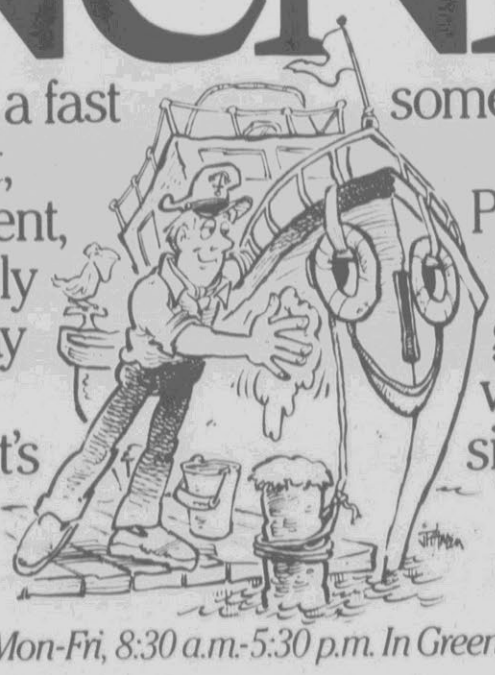

But, he added, it is possible that during the several hours John Paul and the 380 prelates are together at Our Lady Queen of Angels Seminary in Mission Hills, Calif., "some spontaneous remarks may flow back and forth."

Robertson Says He's Past Goal, Will Run

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — Television evangelist Pat Robertson, fresh from an upset victory over his Republican rivals, said today he has exceeded his goal of 3 million signatures in support of his presidential campaign and will formally enter the race on Oct. 1.

Robertson also said he has received more than $10 million in contributions.

At this southern Virginia community where he has his campaign headquarters, Robertson recalled in a prepared statement that a year ago he began an effort to determine "if there truly exists a grassroots groundswell of support for a candidacy by me for the Republican nomination for the presidency of the United States."

Standing in front of bundles of petitions, many headed "Go for It Pat," Robertson said his campaign "has to my satisfaction accumulated the names of an estimated 3.3 million Americans to encourage my candidacy."

He said he would try to obtain another 4 million names before the first primaries are held in 1988.

Earlier on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," Robertson said his campaign "looks like it is a go," but that he didn't want to take any steam away from his formal Oct. 1 announcement.

Robertson's prospects got a boost on Saturday when he stunned frontrunners Vice President George Bush and Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas by winning a straw poll at a Republican meeting in Ames, Iowa.

The event was thought to be a battle between Bush and Dole, who are running neck and neck in most polls in Iowa where precinct caucuses next February will be one of the earliest tests of the campaign.

But when the straw votes were counted, the surprise winner was Robertson with 33.6 percent of the votes. Dole was second with 24.9 percent and Bush third with 22.4.

The Robertson campaign pulled off its biggest coup a year ago when it out-organized Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York in a contest to select thousands of party delegates in Michigan. While the exact breakdown of that contest won't be known until party meetings next January, it is generally conceded that Robertson finished first, Bush second and Kemp third.

Robertson also has made strong showings in South Carolina and Florida.

"I've won four out of four and if that isn't electable I don't know what is," he said after the Iowa vote, responding to claims that even if nominated he could not win a general election.

Bush conceded, "We've got a lot of work to do."

At a news conference Monday in Milwaukee, the vice president said, "Pat Robertson came on like gangbusters."

"I was impressed," said George Wittgraf, Bush's Iowa campaign manager. "There was a lot of hard work and a lot of discipline. He is a serious candidate and this is another indication of the seriousness of his candidacy."

"He got a lot of respect tonight from the other candidates," said Steve Roberts, a Des Moines lawyer active in Dole's campaign.

"He's a force to be reckoned with. Our hats are off to the Robertson organization."

At a rally in Constitution Hall one year ago, Robertson said:

"If by September 17, 1987, one year from today, 3 million registered voters have signed petitions telling me that they will pray — that they will work — that they will give toward my election, then I will run as a candidate for the office of president of the United States of America."

The 53-year-old evangelist said, "If that many people were truly active in support of any candidate, it would virtually guarantee victory."

Founder of the Christian Broadcasting Network, which he describes as the nation's fifth largest cable television network, Robertson developed a large following as the host of CBN's "700 Club."

Court Case?

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state Republican committee meets tonight to settle a delegate seating dispute deemed crucial to presidential campaigns, but backers of Vice President George Bush and Pat Robertson say they'll go to court whatever the decision.

"We win either way," said Peter Secchia, a co-chairman for Bush's Michigan campaign and a Republican National Committee member. "If we lose the vote, we'll win the lawsuit."

The 101-member Michigan GOP committee must decide whether an ambiguous state law allows about 1,200 Republican officeholders and unsuccessful candidates, mostly Bush supporters, to be seated automatically as at-large delegates at Jan. 14 county conventions.

Bush activists and state party Chairman Spencer Abraham say it does. A conservative coalition of backers of Robertson and Rep. Jack Kemp, which controls 55 to 60 seats on the committee, contends it doesn't.

The county conventions will elect delegates for the Jan. 29-30 state convention at which 77 national convention delegates will be chosen.

Schroeder Undecided Over Race

By T.R. REID
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

DENVER — With two weeks remaining before the deadline she gave herself for a final decision on whether to seek the presidency, Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., has reached a fairly common political position known as "Second Thoughts."

All the analysts and all the indicators are giving Rep. Schroeder the message she hears in chanted form at rallies around the country: "Run, Pat, Run." Her direct mail experts say that the money to run a full-scale campaign can be raised. Various opinion polls show that she stands roughly in the middle of the crowded field of Democratic presidential contenders. Volunteers are calling in from all 50 states.

But in the midst of this seemingly inexorable tide stands a candidate who declares forcefully that she is still not quite sure that she wants to be a candidate. She has not yet decided, she says, that she wants to spend the next six months of her life flying from Iowa to New Hampshire and back for the daily ritual of speeches and rallies, rallies and speeches.

"I have to keep asking myself why I am in politics," she said last weekend during a political swing through western states. " ... And one sure thing I know is that I don't have any interest in being a presidential candidate like all the other guys I see out there.

"I'm not a normal candidate," she continued. "I've never been a traditional candidate. If I had a traditional campaign manager, I would drive them nuts, and they'd drive me nuts. I keep asking, can somebody give me a model of a non-traditional way to run a campaign?"

To date, she said, nobody has come up with such a model.

Rep. Schroeder said she has already decided that she wants a campaign manager who has worked with her in politics before, one who will "tolerate" her outspoken style. "I don't want to spend the whole time arguing with my campaign manager," she said.

To date, the de-facto campaign manager and chief strategist of the Schroeder candidacy has been her husband, James Schroeder, an international lawyer in Washington. But some long-time friends who have worked on Rep. Schroeder's congressional campaigns, such as Pam Solo, of Cambridge, Mass., are already working almost full-time on her presidential plans.

While Rep. Schroeder debates with herself about how she would run for president, all the trappings of a campaign seem to be falling into place around her.

A test-the-waters direct mail effort aimed at 80,000 likely Rep. Schroeder backers — active feminists and others with a history of contributing to liberal candidates — drew a strong response, according to fund-raisers Tom Mathews and Roger Craver, who had previously worked on the 1980 presidential campaign of Republican-turned-independent John Anderson.

Dole Says Resignation Was 'Personal Choice'

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole said today that her decision to resign and join her husband's presidential campaign was a personal choice to take on another cause.

"I loved the job" because of the opportunity to make a positive difference for people, she said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America." But, she added, her goal now is to see that Sen. Bob Dole is elected president.

There are serious implications in this effort to select the leader of the free world, Mrs. Dole said.

She announced her resignation Monday, leaving office at a time when her department is under fire from critics who are complaining about airline performance and safety.

She said she will leave office Oct. 1 to enter her husband's campaign fulltime, beginning with a 12-state campaign swing through the south. She said today that she expects to campaign separately from her husband, for the most part.

In a letter to President Reagan, she said the decision to resign came "with considerable soul searching" but that she no longer felt she could give her job top priority and still help the Dole campaign effort.

"I have always put the department first. ... Now I want to put the campaign first," Mrs. Dole, a soft-spoken, Harvard-educated native of North Carolina, told reporters.

Her departure creates a major Cabinet vacancy with only 16 months left in Reagan's term and as the Transportation Department has been in the spotlight this summer because of rising complaints from airline travelers and concerns about air safety.

Critics have blamed Mrs. Dole in part because the department has approved a string of airline mergers which has concentrated much of the industry in about a half-dozen large carriers.

Last month, the department announced new requirements for the airlines to disclose delays, but the effort was criticized by some members of Congress who vowed to pursue legislation that would impose broader restrictions on air carriers.

The new disclosure requirements were described by Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., as "too little, too late" from a department that often needs congressional prodding to take action.

Meanwhile, the airline industry has sharply criticized Mrs. Dole for becoming too involved in the activities of the Federal Aviation Administration. The Air Transport Association, which represents the major airlines, has intensified a campaign to have the FAA separated from its parent department.

After Mrs. Dole announced plans for tighter restrictions on private planes, the Aircraft Owners and Operators Association put advertisements in major newspapers calling for her resignation. Mrs. Dole this year called for the hiring of more air traffic controllers. But her congressional critics said she only did so after Congress made clear it would require more controllers to be hired anyway.

It is likely that James Burnley, the department's deputy secretary, will assume Mrs. Dole's job temporarily, although sources suggest he is unlikely to be appointed on a permanent basis.

With Mrs. Dole's departure, the administration has no women of cabinet rank. An early name to surface as a possible successor was Patricia Goldman, a moderate Republican who is vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

Mrs. Dole has made no secret in the past that she enjoys her job as the country's eighth transportation secretary, the first woman to hold the post, and the highest ranking woman in the Reagan administration.

"She wanted to stay as long as she possibly could," an aide to Mrs. Dole said. "But she came to the realization this is about as long as she can stay and still give her husband all the help she wants to give him."

"She obviously was torn," said the aide, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified by name. Her final decision was not made until Sunday when she called the president and asked to meet with him Monday morning.

According to sources in the department and in the Dole campaign, Mrs. Dole, a greatly sought-after speaker, has been urged for some time to quit the department and devote more time to campaigning for her husband.

Mrs. Dole has traveled extensively this year, often in key presidential primary states. Last month she spent 21 days on the road, many of them on campaign trips for her husband.

She defended the purely politial trips, saying they amounted to the equivalent of 11 working days — all either vacation or her weekends, which she considers her own time.

Dole, the Senate minority leader, is expected to formally announce his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination early next month.

While pressure has mounted from Dole campaign strategists to get Mrs. Dole to join the campaign full time, aides to Mrs. Dole insisted Monday that no suh pressure came from the candidate himself.

Readers Want To Keep 'Star-Spangled Banner'

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — Americans should "get their woolies out" this winter, says the editor of the 1988 Farmers' Almanac, whose readers say they favor retaining "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem.

Midwesterners can expect to shovel more snow, and brisker temperatures will be the rule across much of the nation, according to the almanac's 171st edition, just off the presses.

The coming cold season will be "the first in a series of two to three fairly rough winters" said Ray Geiger, who has edited the folksy publication for more than half a century. "We suggest people get their woolies out."

The almanac's elusive prognosticator, who calls himself Caleb Weatherbee, bases his predictions on "sunspots, the position of the planets and the tidal action of the moon."

This year's almanac, with a circulation of nearly 6 million, contains the usual melange of calendar data, household hints, one-line jokes, inspirational messages, puzzles and recipes.

It also reports the results of a readers' poll that found "America the Beautiful" to be a strong contender to replace Francis Scott Key's "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the preferred national anthem.

About 34,000 readers' ballots showed 54 percent favoring "The Star-Spangled Banner," while 46 percent picked "America the Beautiful," by Katherine Lee Bates.

In a similar survey last year, USA Today found 55 percent voted to keep Key's anthem, while 30 percent preferred "America the Beautiful." The also-rans included "God Bless America" to Bruce Springsteen's "Born in the U.S.A."

Medicare Premiums Going Up

By WAYNE DAVIS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration blames skyrocketing doctor bills for a projected 38.5 percent increase next year in the premiums paid by the nation's 31 million Medicare recipients.

"We're looking at an increase of that magnitude, given the cost of doctor bills to the program," said Chuck Kline, a spokesman for the Department of Health and Human Services.

The premium increase in the Medicare "Part B" program is calculated each year by HHS under a formula set by Congress, Kline said Monday.

The calculated increase has not been approved formally by the department secretary, Otis R. Bowen, or the Office of Management and Budget, but the projected figure "is probably very close to what the final one will be, if not the final one," Kline said.

Kline said the final figure will be published in the Federal Register by Sept. 30.

The Medicare program was created in 1965 and now provides insurance for about 31 million people, most of them elderly.

Their monthly premiums would increase more than a third, from $17.80 to $24.80, beginning in January unless Congress alters the formula or makes an exception, Kline said. The annual cost to each individual would go from $214.80 to $297.60.

Bob Hardy, a spokesman for the Health Care Financing Administration, an arm of HHS, said the administration has no leeway in calculating the figure, which is based on the claims experience of the program.

"These are tentative figures; they still have to go through OMB," Hardy said. "But under the Medicare law, we must take a look at what should be charged."

Medicare recipients do not pay premiums under the other portion of Medicare, Part A, which pays for hospitalization, but they do pay a deductible for the first day of hospitalization. That amount is now $520 and Kline said he expects that to go up "a little bit."

The Washington Post said in today's editions the department planned to announce a $20 increase in the deductible.

Kline said the Part A increase will not be close to the magnitude of the Part B premium hike. He said the increase in doctor bills paid under Part B has been the fastest growing burden on the Medicare program this year.

By law, premiums paid by Medicare beneficiaries must cover 25 percent of the Part B expenses, Kline said.

"It is determined by the cost in the previous year," he said. "Using that formula, you come up with those numbers."

Kline said the calculated increase could affect a final decision on other proposals, including legislation that would create a new government insurance program covering the costs to treat catastrophic illnesses. The administration opposes a House-passed catastrophic illness bill, saying the government cannot afford the additional cost.

"When you look at the multiples involved (in the existing programs), catastrophic would add another major increase on top of that," Kline said.

Israel, Hungary To Trade Envoys

By CHARLES P. WALLACE
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

JERUSALEM — Israel and Hungary signed an agreement Monday for their first exchange of diplomats in 20 years, continuing a general thaw in relations between the Israelis and the nations of Eastern Europe.

The accord, signed in Berne, Switzerland, fell short of Israel's desire to re-establish full diplomatic ties with the Budapest regime. It provides for Israel and Hungary to set up "interest sections" in each other's country, with envoys assigned to represent the interest of each without setting up an actual embassy or holding the rank implied by formal relations.

Diplomatic ties were broken off by Hungary in June 1967 in the aftermath of the Six-Day War.

Monday's agreement was similar to one reached between Israel and Poland last October to exchange interest sections. Romania is the only East Bloc country to have full diplomatic relations with Israel.

A joint communique made public here and in Budapest said that the new agreement was reached "with the intention of promoting economic, commercial, cultural and human relations, and in order to facilitate consular matters between their two countries."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman noted that Hungary has the second largest Jewish population in Eastern Europe after the Soviet Unon.

The spokesman said that an improved Hungarian attitude toward Israel and the Jewish community was evident in the decision to allow the World Jewish Congress to hold its most recent meeting in Budapest in May.

The rapprochement between Israel and Hungary followed the visit to Israel in July of an official delegation from the Soviet Union, the first such visit since the 1967 War.

Ostensibly, the official purpose of the visit was to check on land here belonging to the Russian Orthodox Church and to renew the passports of about 2,000 Soviet citizens living here, most of them non-Jewish women married to Jewish or Arab men.

But, in a broader sense, the visit was regarded by many in Israel as the first step on the way to re-establishing relations between Moscow and Jerusalem.

The effort to repair relations with the Soviet Union is widely believed to be the result largely of efforts by Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, who hopes to convene an international conference on the Middle East with the participation of the major powers despite strong opposition from Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

In the last two weeks, Soviet authorities have reportedly told nine refuseniks — Soviet Jews who have been refused permission to emigrate — that they will soon be given permission to leave. Loosening the strictures on Jewish emigration has long been demanded by Israel as a condition for improving relations with the Soviet Union.

Public Likes Frozen Spuds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Instead of buying fresh potatoes to boil, bake or fry, Americans are turning more to potato products that have been frozen, dehydrated, canned or chipped, an Agriculture Department report says.

Moreover, according to the analysis, U.S. potato production is steadily shifting from the Northeast to irrigated areas of the Pacific Northwest.

The annual per capita consumption of potatoes remained about the same at slightly less than 122 pounds from 1970 to 1985. But fresh potato consumption dropped almost 20 percent during the period, from 61.4 pounds to 49.3 pounds.

The per capita consumption of processed potato products rose a corresponding 20 percent, from 60.4 pounds to 72.5 pounds.

The biggest gainer during the 1970-85 period was frozen potato products such as french fries. Overall, per capita use of such products rose 45 percent, from 28.9 pounds to 42.1 pounds.

Eugene Jones, an assistant professor of agricultural economics at Ohio State University, said in his report for the department's Economic Research Service that rising consumer income affects the mix of potato consumption.

According to his study, per capita fresh potato use falls 4.2 percent for each 10 percent rise in income.

China Steps Up Executions

L.A. Times-Washington Post

BEIJING — Police executed eight convicted criminals in a single day last week, according to official press reports, and observers said that more executions can be expected as part of China's current morals campaign leading up to the national day holiday on Oct. 1 and a major Communist Party congress scheduled for Oct. 25.

Executions regularly precede important holidays in China, and the need to impose discipline before the congress has apparently added impetus to a crackdown on crime.

A senior attorney from China's Supreme Procuratorate, the country's highest prosecutorial body, announced this week that while cases of arson, murder, rape, theft, and gambling had decreased, cases brought to court dealing with bombings, smuggling, assault, robbery, and the abduction of women and children had increased.

Executions in China are usually administered by a policeman firing a single bullet into the back of the neck.

Western sources, including the London-based human-rights organization, Amnesty International, estimate that thousands of people were executed after a major crackdown on crime began in September 1983.

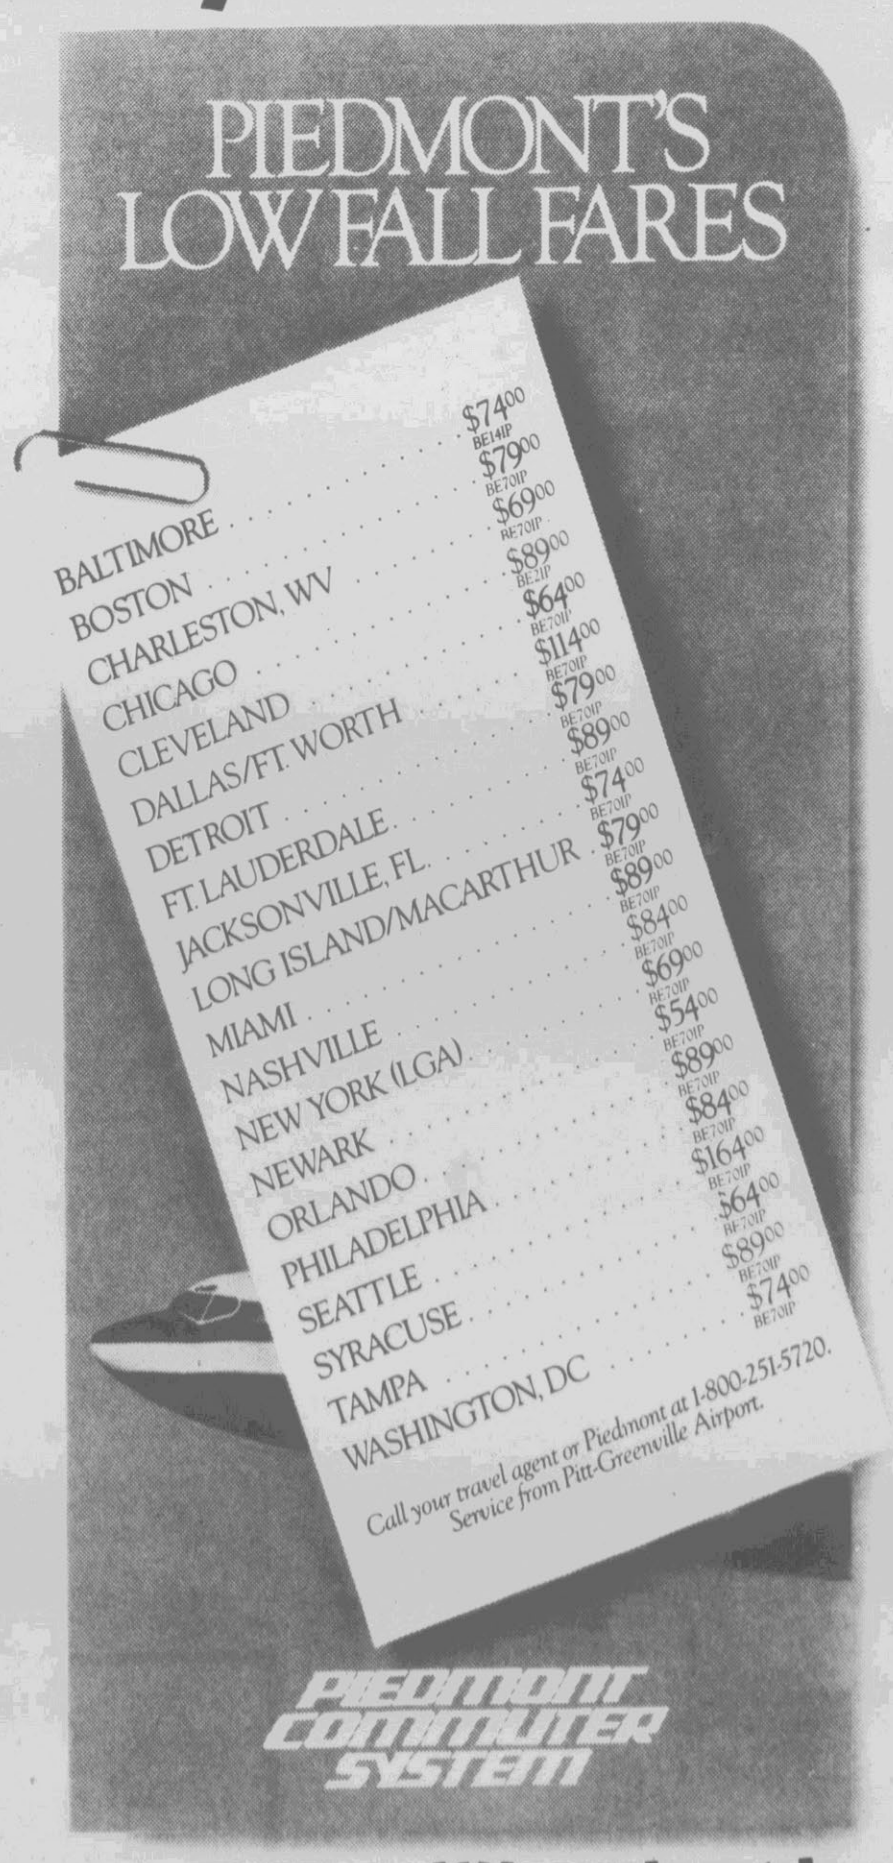

Amnesty has accused the Chinese government of carrying out summary executions, in some cases without trials.

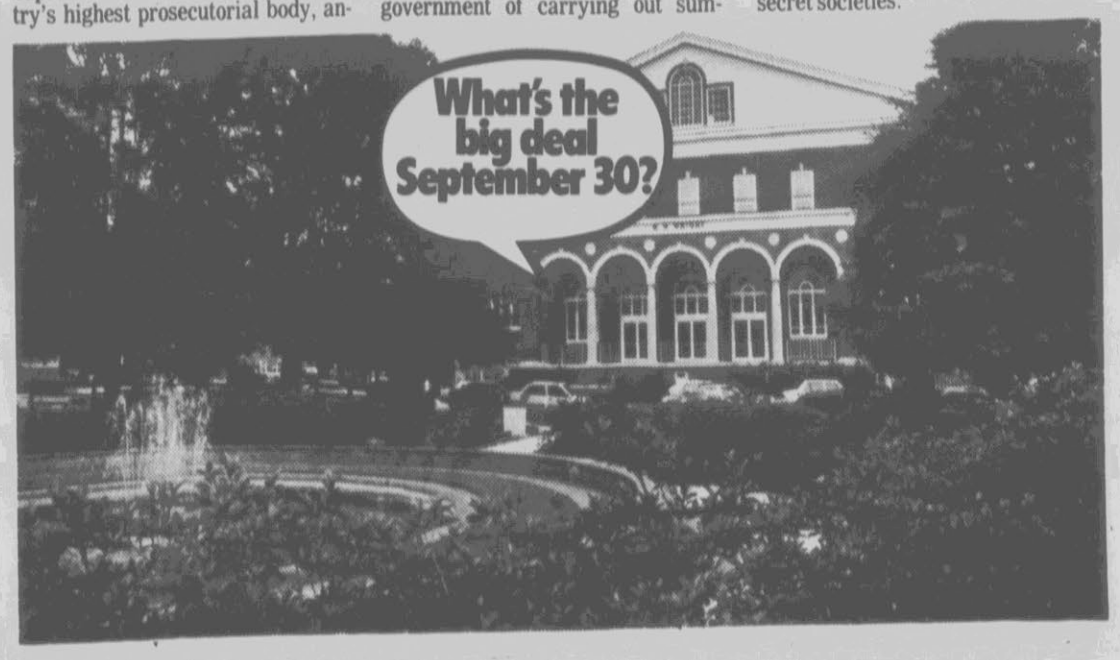

In contrast with this view, a book of talks and speeches by China's top leader, Deng Xiaoping, published here earlier this month provides an unusual insight into the thinking of Chinese leaders on the use of capital punishment.

In the book, Deng calls for the death penalty for hardened criminals who refuse to reform, corrupt officials who cause heavy financial losses to the state, and "the worst proprietors of brothels."

The Chinese leader also calls for the execution of "some of those people" who organize superstitious and secret societies.

Jihan Sadat Writes Autobiography, Teaches, Lectures

LOS ANGELES — In the six years that have passed since assassins killed her husband as he was reviewing a military parade, life has changed utterly for Jihan Sadat, the former First Lady of Egypt.

Anwar Sadat is gone; her children and grandchildren are half a world away. Not quite a stranger in a foreign land, certainly not an expatriate in exile, she lives, nevertheless, in a country not her own, making only periodic visits to the family, friends and memories that are in Egypt.

"I continue my life, enjoying it as much as I can, being an active person, doing something, working, teaching, lecturing. The best thing is to feel you are doing something."

Sadat, at 54, is serious, animated, pleasant, even stately at times, but above all, she reveals a zest for life.

Simon & Schuster has just published her autobiography, "Woman of Egypt," and the book is, in essence, a description of one who has made the most of her circumstances.

It would be difficult to imagine passivity or defeat in anyone who writes and speaks so freely and unabashedly of destiny, vision, God's will, mission and who seems so convinced that her husband and, at least by extension, herself were called to a great place in history. Sadat makes clear that she still has a two-fold mission: to do what she can to promote peace and to assure her husband's place in history.

"I love traveling," she explained in Los Angeles, "but especially when I know my daughter is there waiting for me with my two grandchildren, I want to go back."

"Back" is to Virginia, to the house she bought near Washington several years ago, a place where her three daughters and one son, all married, occasionally visit with their families.

The life she has made for herself centers there. Although she has a doctoral degree from Cairo University in Arabic literature and said she would love to teach in her field, she lectures on "women in a changing world" and teaches on the status of women in the developing world, especially Egypt.

Until she took a leave of absence to write her book, Sadat had been giving such courses at American University in Washington, Bradford University in Virginia and the University of South Carolina.

There was a brief controversy at the latter when some of the faculty, investigating the financial arrangements, protested that her fees and expenses were abnormally and unjustly high.

Controversy, however, is something she constantly faced in her former life. Moslem fundamentalists felt she went too far and in too outrageous and immodest a fashion. Certain feminists, socialists and others said she didn't go far enough and that she was in it for personal gain. She lived with the charges as First Lady. But some of the attacks on her husband's regime after his death shocked her, she said, especially those coming from people who used to publicly praise him.

When she was First Lady, she not only pressured her husband to promote family planning and the Personal Status Laws that made divorce more equitable for women, she often consciously sought to use her role to set an example, according to her book.

Thus, she went back to school at age 41, enrolling at Cairo University. She earned her bachelor's degree, and defended her master's thesis on live television.

"Jihan showing off," her critics said.

"Jihan showing the women of Egypt they can do it," Sadat herself explains.

For similar reasons, she said, she ran for office and was elected to two very active terms on the Munufiyya Peoples Council, the province of her husband's native village, Mit Abul-Kum.

She still sees herself as setting an example. This is the time when the Western world sees only setbacks for Moslem women and retreats from progress, setbacks that are real but exaggerated here, she said. At such a time, and in spite of the small government pension she is given, she presents herself as a widowed grandmother, on her own and self-supporting for the first time in her life.

"I'm not complaining. It was a challenge. I wanted to do it — teach, earn a living. I'm very proud of it. I have not asked any favor of anyone."

She very definitely sees herself as having a mission. "That's what gives me the strength. Otherwise, I would have rested at home in Giza in Cairo, having my friends. This is not the way I wish to continue.... I have the feeling I am giving the right image for the Egyptians, which I am very proud of. So Americans will understand us more."

The rest of her mission has to do with her husband's place in history. She continues to speak about him and his accomplishments as a visionary and man of peace wherever she goes.

And while she tends not to deal directly with his apparent and immediate fall from favor in Egypt, she insists he was loved and appreciated by the Egyptians.

That she is living outside Egypt has much to do with her husband's memory there, which she diplomatically dismisses by saying it is best she not live there "for a certain period."

She was adamant, however, that she had not left Egypt: "This is my country, Egypt, which I would never leave."

She returns every year for the anniversary of his death, Oct. 7, and said she has noticed with satisfaction that each year more Egyptians are at his tomb, "thousands of thousands of men and women coming to share with me these moments."

In time, she said, she is certain Egypt will be ready to establish a museum for her husband that is in her dreams.

"I am dying to see something like that," she said. "I've visited the Kennedy Center, the Johnson Library. I am dying to have something much smaller like that in my country, dying to have the new generation know what he did, not only for my country but for the whole world."

All The Konkles Are Firefighters

By CINDY L. DAVIS
Williamsport Sunday Grit

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Volunteer service to the Montoursville Volunteer Fire Department runs in the veins of all five members of the Konkle family.

The entire family — Donald Sr., Faye, Donald Jr., Scott and Craig Konkle — say volunteer work with the fire department is an important part of their lives and, because of this common interest, their family bond is tightened.

The Konkle men perform volunteer work with both the firefighting and the ambulance crews, while Mrs. Konkle focuses her volunteer time strictly on ambulance duty.

Donald Sr., a customer-service representative for the Schnadig Corp., Montoursville, first became a volunteer fireman at Pennsdale. Later, when the family moved from that Lycoming County community to nearby Montoursville, he joined the borough's fire department. The senior Konkle has served as a firefighter for 20 years and has attained his Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) certification.

Konkle says he volunteers his spare time to the fire department, "to help other people ... somebody has to do it!"

Other members of the Konkle crew have followed in his footsteps.

Mrs. Konkle, an office manager and insurance agent at Cooper-Everett Insurance Agency, Montoursville, was the second woman to join the Montoursville Volunteer Fire Department about seven years ago. Since then she, too, has attained her EMT certification.

"At that time, the Emergency Medical Technician program was not that old. I could see a need for women, especially in the ambulance crews," she explains. "I was pleased with the male members of the department and their acceptance of the woman members. That was quite a change when you have a 100-year old company, but I felt they accepted and helped us as much as they could."

Mrs. Konkle notes that other crucial support she and her family receive in their volunteer work comes from their employers in Montoursville. She, her husband and son Craig, a press operator from Paulhamus Litho Inc., Montoursville, are employed within the borough and their employers allow them to leave work in case of an emergency call.

Regarding her work with the borough's ambulance unit, she says, "The biggest reward to me is to help not only people I don't know, but so many people I do know. It's nice to see the look of relief on their faces when they see someone they know walk in the door."

Although the age requirement to join the Montoursville Volunteer Fire Department is 21, Craig was able to join when he was 18 because he had achieved EMT certification in high school.

Craig is now 22 and is the ambulance crew captain.

"I grew up in a fire house and enjoyed it. I can remember being a little kid over at the Pennsdale Fire Hall, pulling on the chains to open up the doors."

Craig admits the department work takes up a big amount of his time, but believes helping people in trouble is well worth it.

"There's great satisfaction when you look back after putting out a fire. If someone happens to die in a fire, there's times when you wished you could've done something but it was impossible. Working on the ambulance is rewarding too. People thank you and really appreciate what you're doing."

Scott, 23, is a telecommunicator for the Lycoming County Department of Emergency Services, Williamsport. If someone calls the Emergency 911 telephone number in Lycoming County, Scott might be one of the helpful people answering the call.

He has also attained his EMT certification. Scott says family members are often called out on the same emergency. Because they're working together and have the same interest, it helps bring the group closer, he says.

Donald Jr., 26, a press operator for Interform Corp. of Lock Haven, has also been a fireman since he turned 21. He's the only member of the family who does not have his EMT certification.

There are about 70 active members in the Montoursville Volunteer Fire Department. Mrs. Konkle says there are 12 women members, at least four husband-wife teams, and one father-son team.

Salvation Army Locates People for Other People

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

WIth Its Missing Persons Locator Service

Thank you so very much for your article on the Salvation Army finding lost relatives.

Because of your article my mother, Earlene Fay Haynes Click of Santa Fe, Texas, and my grandfather, Earl Haynes of Owensboro, Ky., were reunited after 42 years!

Our whole family would like to thank everyone who helped make this possible. You've really made my mother happy. -- EARLENE'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Glad I was able to help.

Readers, the Salvation Army operates a Missing Persons Locator Service in 86 countries of the world. This is available to the public. Those interested in this service should be aware of the following basic guidelines:

1. The inquirer should be searching for a near relative.

2. The inquirer must be able to provide essential information about the missing person.

3. The Salvation Army reserves the right to accept or reject any request for services based upon considerations of reasonableness, feasibility or motive.

4. The inquirer is asked to pay a $5 non-refundable fee.

5. The inquirer may secure information and/or a missing persons inquiry form by contacting the nearest Salvation Army office in his area or by contacting the nearest Territorial Headquarters.

Addresses: 860 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60610-3392; 120 W. 14th St., New York, N.Y. 10011; 1424 Northeast Expressway, Atlanta, Ga. 30329-2088; 30840 Hawthorne Blvd., Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif. 90274.

DEAR ABBY: I must comment on the letter from "Hurt and Insulted" whose father-in-law said, "Please do me a small favor and change your brand of perfume; I had to go outside to keep from choking."

How I wish I had the courage of that father-in-law. There are several expensive fragrances on the market today that smell exactly like insecticide, and they affect me in the same way. My eyes water, I start to sneeze and my throat closes up. I have had to change my seat at the movie theater, and leave plays and concerts because of certain fragrances worn by both men and women.

Abby, is there a polite way to tell friends you see frequently that you can't tolerate their perfume? -- NO NERVE IN JERSEY

DEAR NO NERVE: Yes. Say, "I have an allergy to the fragrance you are wearing," and if that person is considerate and well-mannered, she (or he) will remember not to wear the offending fragrance in your presence again.

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to you before. However, when I read the letter from "Crying in Monroe, Mich.," it brought back some terrible memories, as I had also lost a beautiful Siamese cat in a clothes dryer. I since have learned that many others also lost a cat that way, as cats go where it is warm. Everyone with a washer-dryer should always look inside before turning it on. All you hear is one thump. Thank you. -- ALSO CRYING (IN MARYLAND)

Closets Are Fertile Places

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Editor's note: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. This is one of her all-time favorite columns.

With sexual promiscuity running rampant, I could not believe a letter I received from a woman this week who said she could not get her coat hangers to reproduce.

"I know how much success you've had and wondered how you did it," she said. "I've tried everything from hanging Burt Reynolds on the wall to spraying sexy perfume to hanging a nightie from Frederick's of Hollywood on a hanger. Nothing. Since you are obviously a sex therapist for inanimate objects, maybe you can tell me your secret. The future of my closet hangs on your answer."

Good grief! Didn't your mother tell you anything?

Sexually active coat hangers are at their peak when they are in a small closet. The smaller the closet, the better. We once lived in an apartment with a closet so small it couldn't support a rod ... just two nails. Within a week (the shortest gestation in the history of coat hangers) we had 37 of those little suckers.

Don't look for fertility among satin-covered hangers or sturdy metal skirt hangers with the clamps. The rich hangers that can afford to produce never do. It's the lower economic hangers (like the wire ones that bend over double when you put a silk blouse on them) that are bearing.

The ones that do best in my closet are the ones with no visible means of support ... the ones with the top made out of piano wire and the bottom of rolled-up cardboard. I call them one-night stands. They're totally useless, but who has the heart to throw them out?

Hangers left in cars do well, especially the ones that take lodging under the brake pedal or hook over the seat belt and flap out the window.

You have to know that hangers in captivity never reproduce. You know, the ones that are welded to the rod in posh hotels. I don't know how it works, but I think they're neutered when they affix them so you can slide them out of the groove, put your jacket on them and fit them back into the slot.

Some people have tried to trick hangers into reproducing by installing hooks and putting as many as 26 garments on the doorknob. Most coat hangers are too smart for that.

If you're looking for a hanger orgy, just open your closet and announce, "I'm moving next week." You'll get a population explosion you won't believe.

I've told you all I know. The rest you'll have to get from the gutter.

Bridge Championships Held

Duplicate bridge club championships were held last week.

During the Wednesday morning championship, Mrs. Zeb Cummings and George Martin took first place with 62 percent. Graham Davis, Dave Proctor, Dorothy Barnhill and Betty Ann Poindexter tied for second and third. Mrs. Sidney Skinner and Mrs. Stuart Page took fourth place and Mrs. Everett Pittman and Mrs. John McConney placed fifth.

During the Wednesday afternoon championship, Mrs. Cummings and Martin against took first with 62 percent. Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Lee Hastings were second; Mrs. Frank Moseley and Mrs. M.H. Bynum, third; Mrs. Effie Williams and Jeff McAllister, fourth; Mrs. C.D. Elks, Mrs. C.F. Galloway, Mrs. David Stevens and Mrs. William McConnell, tied for fifth and sixth; Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts and Mrs. Lacy Harrell, seventh, and Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Mrs. E.J. Poindexter, eighth.

During the Thursday Club Championship, Mr. and Mrs. George Martin wre first with 62 percent; Dr. Charles Duffy and Ken Baxter were second; Mr. and Mrs. Everett Pittman were third, Sibyl Basart, Bertha Jones, Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Betsy Warren, tied for fourth and fifth; and Graham Davis and Ned Kinsey, sixth.

Saturday afternoon north-south winners were Mr. and Mrs. Jeff McAllister, first with 64 percent; Mrs. Lacy Harrell and Mrs. J.W.H. Robert, second; Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Beulah Eagles, third; Mrs. Ray Gunderson and Mrs. Gene McKemie, fourth.

Saturday afternoon east-west winners were Mrs. C.F. Galloway and Estelle Eastwood, first with 57 percent; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crandall, second; Mrs. Harold Forbes and Mrs. Zeb Cummunigs, third; and Margo Ainsworth and Lois Sawyer, fourth.

A club championship will be held Sept. 19. To celebrate ACBL's 50th anniversary, U.S.A. Pairs Games will be played Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. Hand records and analyses will be distributed after the game.

Patient Circle Presented Call

The Patient Circle of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons was presented a call to its state convention in Raleigh October 10.

The St. Luke's Circle of Raleigh will host.

The Chautauqua Department was reported on.

The circle met in the Hortense Forbes Moye Lady's Parlor at Cypress Glen Retirement Community.

Don Egolf Develops, Names Shrubs For The Nation

By EUGENE L. MEYER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Services

WASHINGTON — The Washington power game is played in many ways: There is political power, military power, judicial power. And then there is shrub power, which is the game Don R. Egolf plays in a field in far-northeast Washington.

Egolf is the U.S. National Arboretum's shrub specialist, a man who develops new breeds that are sold commercially.

More than that, he is the man who names names.

In fact, he is the international registrar of lagerstroemia, pyracantha and viburnum blooms. In 30 years at the arboretum, he has developed 60 new plants that have been marketed, with 20 more on the way this year and next.

The four strains of large-flowering hibiscus plants he has named for Greek gods and goddesses. But most of his plants — he has 23 varieties of crape myrtles to his credit — he's named after Indian tribes.

There's the Tuskegee, the Apalachee, the Comanche, Osage, Sioux and Yuma, Chippewa, Hopi, Pecos, Zuni, Natchez and Shoshone, among others.

Egolf offers no involved explanation for his choices. "I wanted something American that would be associated with the National Arboretum," he said.

Another consideration is to "select names not too difficult to pronounce or spell." Occasionally, there is more to it than that: He named his first shrubs after Indian tribes native to upstate New York because he started working on them when he was a student at Cornell University.

"People stay away from working with shrubs," Egolf said. "Commercial breeders prefers annuals. You can grow a lot of petunias in a little bed."

But shrubs take years. Egolf toils over the new breeds at the arboretum before sending them to 100 others-individuals, nurseries, researchers-who report back annually on how the plants are doing in their respective locales.

After as long as five years, Egolf sends them next to nurseries to grow for another two years before they are declared worthy of the marketplace.

"A plant has to be better than what's already grown, based on its disease-resistance, hardiness and fruitiness or it's not worth introducing," Egolf said. His current efforts include work on a lilac that he hopes is mildew-resistant and suitable for this steamy Southern climate.

Crape myrtle, which has blooms in shades of pink or white through much of the summer, is in its northernmost home here, while lilacs don't fare well farther south. "In Baltimore, you lose a lot of Southern species," Egolf said. "In Norfolk, you lose a lot of Northern species."

His work is not without occupational hazards. In 1981, he received a tick bite while working with crab apple trees at the arboretum. The bite gave him a debilitating case of Lyme disease, which can cause loss of the use of muscles. At one point, his right arm and leg were paralyzed.

His therapy included work on lily hybridization, which he did while wearing braces in his yard at home. This involved the usual procedures: hand pollination, transplanting seedlings, evaluating plant progress. Having regained his health, Egolf returned to work full-time in May 1984.

Occasionally, the man who names shrubs rubs shoulders with powerful people from other walks of life. French Ambassador Emmanuel de Margerie is a regular at the arboretum. About to leave for home for August, the ambassador stopped by to inspect crape myrtles in bloom.

"The French ambassador is a very good gardener," Egolf said. "He has restored a chateau in France and is creating a formal garden to go with the residence, using crape myrtle as the key. He spends many Sundays here."

Not surprisingly, Egolf is also a very good gardener. His 3-acre homestead outside Upper Marlboro, Md., contains a formal garden in back and countless bushes and shrubs in front, a landscape undergoing change.

"The plants were starting to grow together. getting too large," said Egolf, whose idea of time off from work is more of the same. "I'm thinning it out. We were feeling a little too private."

He works in his garden nights and weekends and seldom travels far. His wife Sarah stays busy "canning, preserving and maintaining the household." They met outside what he calls "the plant world" and have three children, 19-year-old twins studying forestry and horticulture at Virginia Tech, and a 21-year-old son studying agronomy at the University of Maryland.

"They're all in agriculture," Egolf said. "They got it from the grass roots." So did their father. Egolf grew up on a dairy farm in Bedford County, Pa., won the Sears, Roebuck Foundation Heifer Award in 1944 and a raft of Future Farmers of America medals from 1944 to 1947. He was 1947 Poultry Boy of the Year and won an agricultural scholarship to Cornell.

He had a Fulbright fellowship in England and holds honorary life memberships in the American Hibiscus Society, Potomac Lily Society and International Lilac Society. A quiet, self-effacing man of 59, he has published 106 articles. While making shrubs, he could make a mint.

But other than his government salary, he makes no profit from his propagation of the species. It is simply his job for the U.S. Agricultural Research Service.

"The test of any research is the end product," he said. "It's good to see the items you've produced getting into the trade, serving the consumer."

Expectant Moms May Travel With Care

From NYU MEDICAL CENTER

Expectant mothers need not forego travel as long as sensible precautions are followed and certain increased risks at particular stages of pregnancy are taken into account, says a physician at New York University Medical Center.

"Obviously, pregnancy is not the time to undertake an inherently hazardous venture," says Dr. Bruce K. Young, professor of obstetrics and gynecoloy at the medical center. "By and large, however, conventional modes of travel are reasonably safe."

Young noted that in midpregnancy and thereafter, the increasing size of the uterus begins to compress some of the vessels which carry blood back toward the heart, specifically the large veins of the pelvis. "It is important for pregnant women to encourage blood flow through the veins," he noted.

He suggests wearing loose, nonrestrictive clothing, not crossing the legs and shifting position frequently. "Get up and walk around every couple of hours," he advised. "If traveling by car, for example, stop at intervals and take a brief stroll."

The middle trimester — the third to sixth months of pregnancy — may be the best time for travel, he said, "because, in general, the chance of miscarriage is higher during the first three months, and during the last two months there is the possibility of premature labor." Pregnant women may wish to maintain closer access to their physicians during these stages.

A mother-to-be who has a chronic condition, such as diabetes, which could complicate her pregnancy (or which might pose problems unconnected with the pregnancy) may opt to avoid all long-distance travel in order to remain close to a doctor or doctors with whom she is familiar.

Young emphasized that when traveling by car, pregnant women — like everyone else — should be sure to use their seatbelts.

HOSA Display

Health Occupations Students of America at Ayden-Grifton High School entered a display Saturday in the Ayden Collard Festival Parade.

The display demonstrated clinical skills of taking blood pressures and temperatures, and how smoking is detrimental to health.

School Activities

Stokes Elementary School will have historial notes and minilectures read over the intercom this week in celebration of the Bicentennial of the United States, said Roscoe Locke, principal

The school will recite together the Pledge of Allegiance in a flag ceremony and sing traditional American songs. Classes will discuss and display historical works and paintings throughout the week, which will culminate with students viewing television specials and having birthday cake for lunch Friday.

Strike Averted

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Fayetteville's Kelly Springfield Tire Co. plant officials reached a tentative contract agreement with union negotiators Sunday, averting a threatened strike.

A union spokesman said the new contract must be ratified by 1,900 union members before it becomes final.

Ford Calls For Bork's Approval

least you can talk about things which a year ago when we were there (in Tehran) the first time we were not even able to discuss," said the source.

Perez de Cuellar took off from Baghdad airport at 3:15 p.m. aboard a private jet.

Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz was at the airport to see him off.

Aziz today renewed a call for punitive measures against Iran for failing to respond to the July 20 U.N. resolution.

The resolution calls for an immediate, unconditional cease-fire, withdrawal of troops to internationally recognized borders and an exchange of prisoners. Iran would have to withdraw from Iraqi territory.

"We welcomed the Security Council resolution 598 not because . .. we don't have our points of view about this or that element in it, but because we accepted it as a binding resolution taken by the authority in this world which is in charge of peace and order," Aziz said in English.

He said Iraq would reject any changes in the resolution and that Iraq hopes the council "will abide by its own resolution, its spirit and its sequence."

Aziz met twice with Perez de Cuellar during his two-day stay in Baghdad.

He said that "we hope ... the Security Council will not waste any time in reaching and drawing the right conclusion about the situation and then head toward the second stage." That was a reference to a call for punishment of any side that fails to abide by the resolution's provisions.

Asked about Iran's demand that Iraq be branded the aggressor and punished, Aziz said: "Iran is the aggressor ... If anybody is going to be punished for that, it is the Iranian regime."

Iraq invaded Iran in September 1980 after border clashes. Iraq says the war began two weeks earlier when Iran shelled border towns.

Perez de Cuellar flew into Baghdad Sunday after a two-day visit to Tehran.

He met with President Saddam Hussein and Monday. Foreign Ministry officials said he and Aziz conferred again today before he left for home.

In the Persian Gulf, where Iran and Iraq have observed an undeclared truce in their tanker war since Thursday, two Kuwaiti tankers with U.S. warship escorts moved north toward Kuwait today.

U.S. sources said military intelligence reports indicated Iran recently reduced the area threatened by its Silkworm anti-ship missiles in the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the gulf. The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, did not give details.

The U.N. source traveling with Perez de Cuellar said the U.N. chief managed to "nail down the positions of the governments" of Iran and Iraq on the cease-fire resolution.

He said Tehran's leaders had for the first time been willing to discuss a truce.

Hussein on Monday urged "punitive measures" against Iran for failing to embrace the resolution.

The Reagan administration said last week it would seek an international arms embargo against Iran if Tehran did not accept the resolution promptly. The administration earlier this year agreed to reflag 11 Kuwaiti tankers to protect them from Iranian attack.

Iraq has been attacking Iranian ships since 1984, trying to throttle Iran's oil exports. Iran attacked ships of other nations in the gulf in retaliation. It focused on ships serving Kuwait, accusing Kuwait of aiding Iraq.

The latest convoy to enter the gulf included the supertanker Bridgeton, bound for Dubai, United Arab Emirates, for repairs. The tanker was damaged during the first convoy July 24 by a mine the Pentagon says Iran planted.

At dusk Monday, another U.S.-escorted convoy left the Strait of Hormuz at the gulf's mouth.

Belgium decided Monday to send mine sweepers to the Persian Gulf to help maintain free navigation. British and French navies already operate in the gulf. Holland will send ships to protect vessels in the oil shipping lanes.

U.N. Official Returning To N.Y.

Republican Leader Bob Dole endorsed him. Committee members were not expected to begin questioning Bork until afternoon.

President Reagan has campaigned vigorously for Bork's confirmation since nominating him in July and said on Monday he hoped critics "will be candid about why they oppose him and not fabricate excuses for attacking him personally."

Neither opponents nor supporters have been willing to predict the outcome of the confirmation battle, but there was little disputing the observation Dole made as he echoed Ford's endorsement:

"There are going to be some tough questions. Judge Bork knows that and Judge Bork expects that."

Members of the divided committee said prior to the confirmation hearings they hoped the sessions would cut through the contentious rhetoric of recent weeks and demonstrate whether the judge is fit to join the high court.

"I hope we're finally getting through the smoke and the hype and the hoopla and the hyperbole and find out who Judge Bork is, instead of the babbling that is coming up on both sides," Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Bork was "definitely not the man I would have chosen to go on the Supreme Court," but added that he's anxious to hear Bork's testimony. Both Leahy and Simpson were interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Bork, 60, has been a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia since 1982. The bearded jurist has described his ideology as one of following the intent of the framers of the U.S. Constitution. Bork believes judges should not create new rights under the law or attempt to become legislators.

His application of this theory in cases involving civil rights, free speech, privacy, anti-trust and other subjects has won him acclaim from the right and scorn from the left.

But by all indications, senators holding the balance remain somewhere between the two ends of the political spectrum. Still, all senators agree that the court is at a crossroads, because retired Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. was a swing vote on abortion, affirmative action and other crucial issues.

Virtually all committee members have publicly stated the nomination should go to the full Senate, although a furious battle may be fought over what kind of recommendation the panel will make.

The nomination could be advanced with a positive or negative recommendation, or none at all.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., interviewed today on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program, discounted charges that Bork's record reveals dangerous extremist views, calling him a "sound judge" who's well qualified for the post.

Radar

historical data and "CP&L current loads on a 'real time' basis."

But if the weather radar helps GUC staffers hit the peak just one month, it will pay for itself. So far, the unit has cost the commission about $10,500. And when completely operational, the total cost will be between $12,000 and $13,000.

Jones said the radar unit has the capability of providing weather information from any National Weather Service radar installation on a "real time" basis. And the unit has the capability of providing "time lapse" pictures of the movement of a storm.

In addition to use in the load management program, Jones said the unit may help GUC supervisors determine whether to release line crews at the end of the day or hold them if a major storm is approaching the area.

Rather than releasing crews and having to call them back in after a storm hits, Jones said crews could be held and dispatched after a storm to shorten response time to problems. Or, Jones said, crews could be sent into an area expected to be hit by a storm even before the storm arrives.

Green said CP&L and Duke Power both use weather radar in their operations. But he said, "I don't know of another small utility (in North Carolina) that uses it.

"It's just a tool to help us do a better job," Green suggested.

Ayden

Resolutions were approved for a public hearing at the October meeting on the annexation of a property on West Third Street and a revision is being requested for an annexation request for a single lot in the North Hill subdivision.

A total of tax releases amounting to $245, and the addition of tax listings totaling $519, were approved. A motion to accept the audit on the Housing Authority was approved with a copy to be forwarded to HUD.

The board was informed that proposals on the administratin of the Community Development Block Grant program had been sent to five firms. Responses from the firms are due by Sept. 21 on which date the board will meet to consider the proposals.

State Sen. Tom Taft made an unofficial visit at the board meeting. He spoke briefly about the legislative action taken during the past session and asked town officials to keep in touch with him and other area state officials on issues and needs of interest to Ayden residents.

Shallotte Fires

SHALLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Fires that destroyed two medical offices on the opposite sides of Shallotte on Monday appear to be the work of a single arsonist, fire officials say.

"There is enough similarity in the circumstances surrounding the two fires to lead us to believe they were both intentionally set and probably by the same individual," Dave Marshall, head of the State Bureau of Investigation's regional office in Jacksonville, said Monday.

Correction

The article in Sunday's paper relating to the forthcoming Bethel Festival should have given the dates of Oct. 2-3 for the festival.

Bears Make Their Point With Win Over New York

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Tomczak, Dennis McKinnon and the Chicago Bears defense had something to prove. They did it with such vicious determination that they left the Super Bowl champion New York Giants dumbfounded.

Tomczak threw touchdown passes of 42 and 56 yards, McKinnon came off of a one-year layoff with a team-record 94-yard punt return for a touchdown and the defense registered eight sacks for losses of 53 yards in a 34-19 rout of the Giants Monday night.

The much-heralded battle of the two previous Super Bowl champions turned into an unexpected rout.

"Take away the blocked punt and the interception and what did they have?" said McKinnon, who sat out 1986 because of a knee surgery.

In explaining his punt return, which eclipsed the previous team record of 89 yards by Ray "Scooter" McLean back in 1942, McKinnon said "I crawled for 20 yards, made a move and hit the end zone. That play sealed the coffin."

It came shortly after Terry Kinard intercepted a Tomczak pass and returned it 70 yards for a touchdown that cut the Bears' lead to 24-13 and gave the Giants a brief ray of hope.

"They beat us real good," said Giants' Coach Bill Parcells. "We haven't been beat like that in a long time. It's obvious they did whatever they wanted to against us. Their quarterback was excellent considering it was his first start in a game of this magnitude."

The vaunted Giant defense did little to harass Tomczak, while the Bears were all over Giants' quarterback Phil Simms, who had his bell rung several times and twice had to leave the game to clear the cobwebs.

"They said hello to me a couple of times and I took some shots," said Tomczak, who nevertheless was not sacked once and threw touchdown passes of 42 yards to Ron Morris and 56 yards to Willie Gault in the third quarter.

"Give the offensive line credit," said Tomczak. "The Giants have some studs but our line kept them off of me."

Tomczak also sneaked a yard for a touchdown just before halftime and finished with 20 completions in 34 attempts for 292 yards.

"The greatest thing about this game is we got the football season started," said Bears Coach Mike Ditka, who apparently had his fill of the hype that centered around the contest ever since the NFL first announced the 1987 schedule.

"It was one of the hardest hitting games I've seen and you expect that when two good teams get together," said Ditka. "Our offensive line did a helluva job. No sacks. They gave Tomczak great pocket protection."

The Giants took the opening kickoff and Simms quickly put the offense into gear as the Giants marched to the Chicago 10-yard line. Then came a sack by Todd Bell and Simms fumbled with Wilber Marshall recovering.

The Bears were forced to punt, but it was blocked by Erik Howard and Tom Flynn recovered in the end zone for a 7-0 New York lead.

Kevin Butler kicked a 24-yard field goal for the Bears before the quarter ended and then the Bears took charge after that with the defense repeatedly sacking Simms.

An 80-yard drive which ended with Tomczak's 1-yard sneak with :08 left in the half gave the Bears a 10-7 lead.

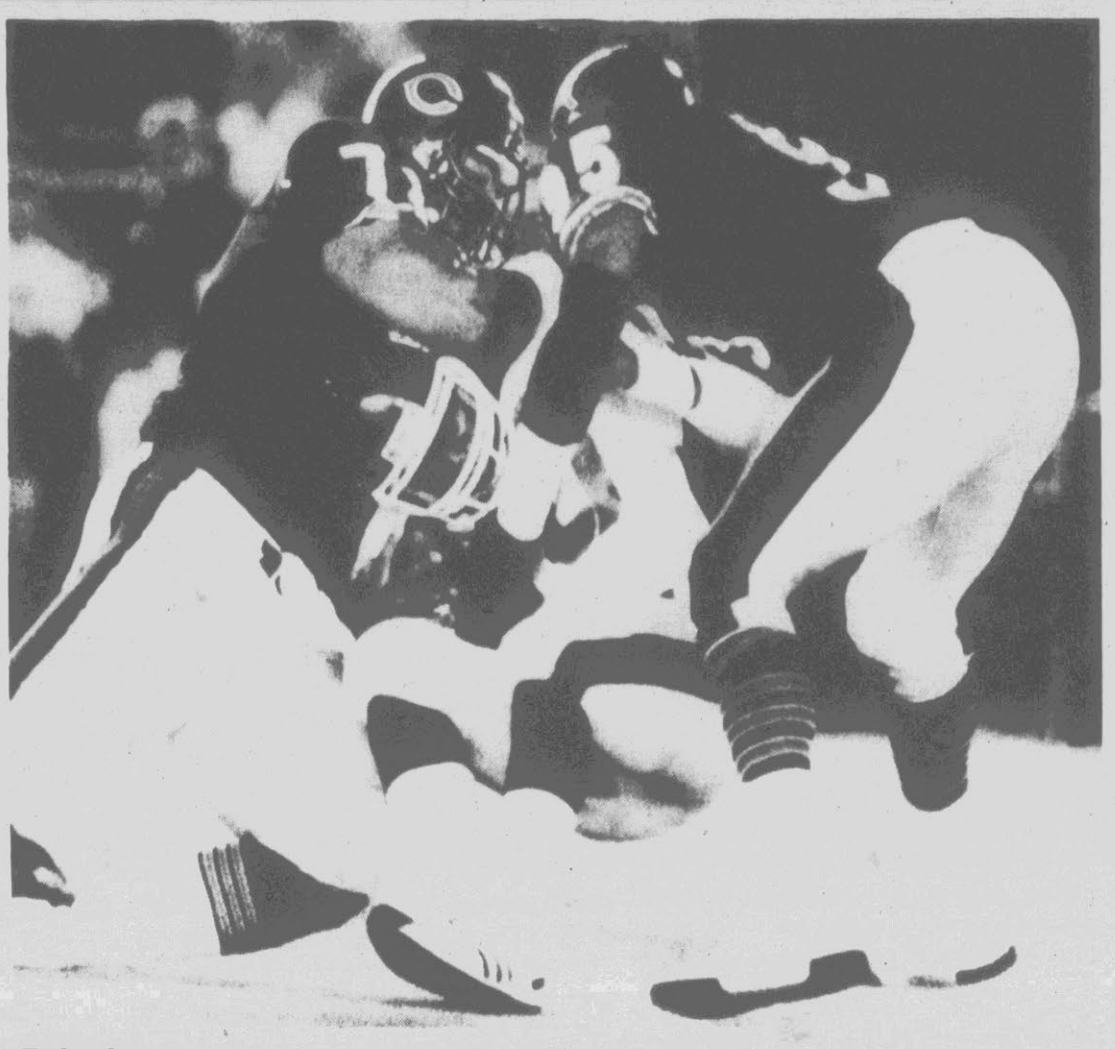

On Chicago's second possession in the second half, Tomczak hit Morris with a 42-yard touchdown pass. The next time the Bears got the ball, he threw a 56-yard touchdown pass to Gault on the first play.

"The game dictated that we throw more, we now have burners on both sides," said Tomczak of Morris, a rookie from SMU, and Gault.

"They are not a one-dimensional offens," said Giants linebacker Carl Banks. "They have big play capabilities and they caught us off guard tonight."

Simms could have blamed his pro-

Lendl Surprises Himself With Win

NEW YORK (AP) — No one was surprised Ivan Lendl won his third straight U.S. Open championship — except Ivan Lendl.

"I just can't believe I won this one," a flu-ridden Lendl said after his 6-7, 6-0, 7-6, 6-4 victory over Mats Wilander Monday. "I was out of juice for the last 3½ sets. It was strength of mind and a little bit of luck."

And the most relentless game tennis has seen since Bjorn Borg was in his prime.

"He's just steadier than anyone else," Wilander said. "If I don't play well the whole match, he plays the same and he wins."

Lendl joined John McEnroe as the only men to win three successive titles in the Open era.

"It's something I never dreamt of, it's unbelievable," said Lendl, the top seed who dropped only the one set to Wilander in the entire tournament and won his sixth Grand Slam crown — he has three French Open titles. "If somebody told me three years ago that I would win three in a row after losing three straight finals here, I wouldn't have believed it. I would have said that person was crazy."

Anyone who suggested that Wilander, a classic baseliner from Sweden and the third-ranked player in the world, would attempt to serve-and-volley in the Open final might have been accused of the same thing. But Wilander felt "it was the only way I could win."

"I think I played the way I have to," said Wilander, 23, who has two French Open and two Australian Open championships. "I was the one who was attacking, but you can't attack all the time. I can't attack any more for my style. I don't have that good a volley and he passes so well."

Martina Navratilova, who won the women's singles for the fourth time, beating Steffi Graf on Saturday, added the women's doubles and mixed doubles titles on Monday. That made her the first player since Billie Jean King at the 1973 Wimbledon to win the triple.

Navratilova, whose three championships made her the only player to collect at least $1 million from the Open — it took her 15 years to do so — teamed with Pam Shriver for the doubles crown and Emilio Sanchez of Spain in mixed.

She has won 48 Grand Slam titles.

Lendl didn't think he did anything particularly well, except survive.

"I've been in bed, feeling lousy, for four, four and a half days," he said. "If this was another tournament, I would not have played Saturday (in the semifinals against Jimmy Connors) or today.

"I had no strength for almost 3½ sets. I played on emotion."

Lendl, 27, of Czechoslovakia, has been accused of lacking emotion on the court.

"I tried to keep my emotions up because my strength was going up and down," he said. "I felt like I was falling over on two or three points ... then I felt stronger.

"When I lost my strength, I felt quicker and able to move better.

"I'm not as flashy as they are," he said of some of his tour opponents. "I don't have as much talent as others but I work very hard on my game and I'm steadier."

Bertie Defeats Tigers, 26-12

BERTIE — Lester Outlaw ran for 112 yards and scored one touchdown and also had an interception as Bertie took a 26-12 win over Williamston in high school football action Monday night.

Bertie opened up the scoring when Marshall Cherry picked off a fumble out of midair and rambled 66 yards for the score. The kick was no good and Bertie led, 6-0.

Williamston got right back in the game as Guy Spruill returned the ensuing kickoff 90 yards for the tying score. The kick failed and the teams were knotted at 6-6.

Bertie went back in front when Delwin Clark scored from 21 yards out on a run, but the kick was no good, leaving Bertie ahead, 12-6.

Tyrone Bland followed with a 95-yard kickoff ruturn for a touchdown for Williamston. The kick was no good but the score was tied, 12-12.

Bertie went ahead to stay in the second quarter on Outlaw's 67 yard run that was set up by his own interception of a Williams pass.

The Tigers had driven down to the Bertie 18, where they faced a fourth-an-10 situation. Outlaw picked off the pass at the nine-yard line to end the threat. He then scored the game-winner on the long run. Clark ran in the two-point conversion for a 20-12 Bertie lead.

Williamston added another score in the second quarter when Pedro Cherry returned an interception 65 yards for a touchdown.

The Tigers fall to 2-1 and take on Greene Central Friday at home.

The game was postponed from Friday night.

Buc Turnovers Foiled Effort

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's inability to hang on to the football was one of the key factors in the Pirates' 44-3 loss to nationally ranked Florida State Saturday, Coach Art Baker believes.

"We passed up too many opportunities to score with our turnovers," Baker said at his weekly press conference Monday. "I think if we could have held onto the ball more, we might have surprised some people."

The Pirates fumbled the ball 10 times along the way, losing five of them. East Carolina also had one pass intercepted by the Seminoles. Two of those, deep in ECU territory, were turned into scores by the Seminoles, one a field goal and the other a touchdown.

"We were stopping ourselves during good drive and also giving them excellent field position," Baker said. "We also had about five passes that were dropped that could have moved the ball well for us."

Of course, the coach added, Florida State's abilities also contributed. "We played an excellent football team, a team I believe will be ranked near the top at the end of the season for a couple of reasons. They have a great team and their schedule is to their advantage."

FSU actually plays only a few teams that could be called of national caliber, Miami, Auburn and Florida.

"Florida State is a lot like the Miami team of two years ago. They have many ways to score from any part of the field. They are explosive. (Sammie) Smith can do a lot. He's as big as some of our linemen and has great speed. He outran some of our defensive backs."

The Pirates, with their mistakes, both offensively and defensively, hurt themselves too often, however. While they got off several good drives — or seemed to have them going — the turnovers proved to be too costly.

"And surprisingly, I thought our defense played better in the second half than they did in the first," Baker said. It was the offense, turning the ball over as it did that gave FSU so many more opportunities, keeping the defense on the field a long, long time. Florida State held a nearly nine minute advantage in time after the first period of play.

Baker said that, in general, the Pirates did not execute as well as they did at N.C. State, where they claimed a 32-14 victory a week earlier. "We weren't as sharp and we missed a lot more assignments. "Smith's run (83-yard touchdown just before halftime) took a lot out of us too. Three people had shots at him at the line of scrimmage and let him get away.

"And we missed too many blocking assignments. We had people open for passes, too, and didn't get the ball to them. We had two long passes that could have helped us, but one was thrown too late, and the other wasn't thrown at all."

Baker did express pleasure at the kicking game, saying that the Pirates just missed blocking an FSU punt, avoided having one of their own blocked by the strong Seminole rush, and had a couple of good kickoff returns.

"Our effort was good, but we were not as excited as we were against State. And, too, mistakes take away from excitement, motivation and morale," the coach said.

Baker did praise the play of offensive lineman John O'Driscoll and the whole offensive line, saying they played better than at State. He also noted that Vinson Smith (13 tackles),

Cards Miss Error As Phils Get Win

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Von Hayes and Greg Jelks almost pulled a boner that would have made New York fans forget Fred Merkle.

Mike Schmidt hit a fly-ball single over a drawn-in outfield in the bottom of the 11th inning Monday night, giving the Philadelphia Phillies a 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Monday night.

But the Cardinals missed an opportunity to get out of the ining without a run being scored when they failed to notice that Hayes and Jelks, on first and second, failed to advance one base before leaving the field.

That's the same mental error that Merkle made in a game on Sept. 23, 1908, ultimately costing the New York Giants a pennant.

The umpires stayed on the field, giving the Cardinals a chance to tag the runners and nullify the gae-winning run, but St. Louis never made a move. Finally, Hayes and Jelks went back and touched the respective bases.

"I've told these guys a hundred times, they've got to touch the bases," Schmidt said. "It's not too tough to touch the next base, but guys forget to do it."

The loss by the Cardinals cut their lead to 1½ games over the Mets in the National League East.

Schmidt said that his fly ball to center field normally would have been an out.

"I didn't do anything but hit a fly ball," Schmidt said, then smiled and added, "It will look good in the box score tomorrow."

Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog looked back to the ninth inning as the reason St. Louis lost the game.

"Two out and nobod on in the ninth inning," Herzog said, referring to the Cardinals' 2-0 lead in the ninth, when the Phillies rallied to tie the game on Juan Samuel's two-run double.

Mets 6, Cubs 5

New York overcame three Chicago homers as Gary Carter, Darryl Strawberry and Keith Hernandez drove in two runs apiece for the Mets, who climbed within 1½ games of the Cardinals in the NL East.

Rick Aguilera, 9-2, pitched six innings for his sixth straight victory, five of them since being activated from the disabled list on Aug. 24. Jesse rosco allowed onehit in the final three innings for his 15th save.

Andre Dawson hit his 44th homer, a three-run shot, and Leon Durham followed with his 27th for a 4-1 Cubs lead in the third inning. Jody Davis hit his 19th homer in the sixth, pulling Chicago within 6-5.

Giants 4, Padres 3

San Francisco took a 6½-game lead in the West when Jose Uribe lined a one-out homer in the bottom of the ninth inning to beat San Diego.

Uribe, who now has four homers, broke a 3-3 tie with the homer to right field on a 1-1 pitch from Lance McCullers, 7-8.

Craig Lefferts, 4-5, was the winner in relief, pitching two perfect innings.

Eddie Milner homered in the first for the Giants, and Carmelo Martinez homered for the Padres.

Expos 6, Pirates 4

Hubie Brooks lined a two-run double in the 14th inning as Montreal pulled within two games of St. Louis and ended Pittsburgh's seven-game winning streak.

Mike Fitzgerald started the 14th with a single off Bret Gideon, 1-5. After a sacrifice, Tim Raines was intentionally walked, setting rooks' double to left-center off Tim Drummond.

Andy McGaffigan, 5-2, was the winner despite giving up a 13th-inning homer to Bobby Bonilla that tied the score after Tim Wallach gave the Expos a 4-3 lead with a homer in the top of the 13th. Jeff Parrett pitched the 14th for his fifth save.

Astros 8, Dodgers 1

Houston broke an eight-game road losing streak and moved into secod place in the West as Kevin Bass drove in four runs with a two-run homer and three singles and Gerald Young had four hits and four stolen bases against Los Angeles.

The Astros, who finished with 16 hits, took a 3-0 lead in the first against Dodgers rookie Shawn Hillegas, 2-3, on run-scoring singles by Bill Doran and Bass and a sacrifice fly by Craig Reynolds.

Houston added three more runs in the fifth on an RBI single by Glenn Davis and Bass' 18th homer.

Nolan Ryan, 8-14, allowed one run and eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. His nine strikeouts gave him the major-league lead with 235 in 182 2-3 innings.

Braves 3, Reds 2

Atlanta got two runs in the seventh inning on Albert Hall's run-scoring double, his stolen base and Dale Murphy's sacrifice fly, and the Braves held Cincinnati to four hits.

With the score tied 1-1, Ken Griffey opened the seventh off Guy Hoffman, 9-10, with a pinch-hit double advanced to third on Dion James' sacrifice and scored on Hall's double to center. Hall then stole third and scored on Murphy's sacrifice fly, an insurance run the Braves needed in the ninth.

Tom Glavine, 2-3, allowed four hits in seven innings for the victory. Jim Acker pitched the final inning for his 11th save despite giving up an RBI grounder to Kal Daniels in the ninth.

Alexander Keeps Rolling Along

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Since coming to Detroit in an Aug. 12 trade, pitcher Doyle Alexander has been a real Tiger.

"As long as you're hitting the corners like Alexander is, he's going to be successful," said Boston outfielder Jim Rice, who went hitless in three at-bats against Alexander in a 3-0 loss to the Tigers Monday night. "He doesn't have to challenge you. He keeps the ball in play and those guys get him some runs. That's the way to play it."

Alexander scattered eight hits and twice worked out of bases-loaded situations in seven innings to improve his record to 6-0 since the Tigers acquired him from the Atlanta Braves. The right-hander got hitting and fielding support from Kirk Gibson, who drove in Detroit's first run and cut down two runners at the plate from left field.

"It was a struggle tonight," Alexander said. "Kirk made two outstanding plays to help us win."

Alexander struck out four and walked four before getting relief help for the last two innings from Mike Henneman, who earned his fifth save.

Blue Jays 18, Orioles 3

Ernie Whitt hit three of Toronto's major-league record 10 home runs as the Blue Jays rolled past Baltimore.

Overshadowed in the Blue Jays' hitting binge was the end of shortstop Cal Ripken's consecutive-inning streak for Baltimore. That was stopped at 8,243 when he was replaced defensively in the eighth inning.

The Blue Jays hit three homers in the second inning, two in the third, one in the fifth, one in the sixth, two in the seventh and one in the eighth in breaking the record of eight homers in a game set by the 1939 New York Yankees and tied by six other teams. Whitt hit solo homers in the second and fifth and added a three-run homer in the seventh.

Brewers 6, Yankees 4

Ernest Riles and Dale Sveum each hit solo homers and reliever Dave Stapleton won in his first major-league appearance as Milwaukee defeated New York.

The victory moved the Brewers one-half game in front of the Yankees and into third place in the American League East.

White Sox 8, Twins 2

Dave LaPoint pitched four-hit ball over 8 2-3 innings and Greg Walker knocked in four runs, three with a double in the fifth inning, as Chicago beat Minnesota.

Royals 8, Angels 5

Bill Pecota's fifth-inning double snapped a tie and reliever Bud Black stopped California for six innings as Kansas City beat the Angels.

Pecota's double off reliever Jack Lazorko, 4-6, scored Willie Wilson, who had started the inning with a bunt single and then stole his 48th base of the season.

Rangers 2, Athletics 1

Oakland reliever Steve Ontiveros walked Darrell Porter with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning, giving Texas its victory over the Athletics.

Indians 11, Mariners 8

Brook Jacoby drove in three runs and Jay Bell hit a two-run homer to lead a 16-hit attack as Cleveland beat Seattle.

The win overshadowed a fine performance by Seattle's Mickey Brantley, who went 5-for-6 with three homers and seven RBI.

Illini Next Up ...

Ernie Logan, Walter Bryant and Ed Brodgen played improved games.

"I thought Anthony Simpson had a good night and Reggie McKinney ran the ball well. We've got to find a way to get the ball to him more," Baker said.

Logan was the only Pirate to sustain a limiting injury in the game. He suffered a knee injury and was to be 'scoped Monday afternoon. He will probably miss at least two weeks.

Baker also announced that Charlie Libretto, the Pirates' backup quarterback, had rejoined the team after announcing last week that he was considering quitting. "He was upset over his situation, and left the squad on Tuesday," Baker said. "Wednesday, he talked with me and asked if he could come to a final decision by Friday, which I okayed. He decided then to rejoin the team and will be back out today."

Baker said that Libretto will return as the number three quarterback, Brad Walsh having moved up to number two. "He'll have to earn his way back up," Baker said.

The coach also said that the distractions of Libretto leaving the team and the hubbub over the post-game melee at N.C. State between fans and security guards, which resulted in several injuries and over $7,000 in damages, was a big problem for the Pirates.

"Anytime you have distractions, they don't help you," he said. "Instead of being able to enjoy their victory, all they saw and heard was the aftermath of the game."

The Pirates take to the road again on Saturday, playing at the University of Illinois. It is the first meeting of the two schools and it marks the first time that the Pirates have faced a Big Ten team.

Kickoff is set for 4 p.m. EDT.

GCC News

The Greenville Golf and Country Club held several tournaments this past week.

The team of Danny McNally, Ray Edwards, Mickey Herrin and Malcolm Williams won a "Turkey Shoot" tournament.

On Ladies Day, low net honors went to Joan Hooper while Pat Norris was second and Della Dayson, third. Harriette White shot low gross and Nancy Monroe had low putts.

The team of Dick Evans, Alice Evans, Tom Norris and Janice Whitaker took first place in a Couples Captain's Choice Tournament. Second place went to the team of Reid Hooper, Harriette White, Myrt Leslie and Frank Saunders. Third were John Wooten, Jane Joyner, Joan Hooper and Alex White, followed in fourth by Connor Merritt, Molly Tefluk, Vertie King and Ed Monroe. Fifth place went to Don Dempsey, Kathy McCoy, Marge Parrish and Roscoe King.

No Film

Art Baker couldn't say a whole lot about his upcoming foe at his news conference Monday.

The films of the Illini's first two games had not yet arrived in Greenville.

"Somewhere between St. Louis and Greenville, they've disappeared," Baker said. "It's the first time something like this has every happened to us."

Baker said that normally, game films arrive sometime on Sunday and coaches spend Sunday and Monday breaking down the films for the scouting report.

"But the coaches have just been sitting around drinking coffee today," Baker said. "We're still waiting on the film to get here."

GCA Falls

RALEIGH — Friendship Christian Academy of Raleigh took a 15-7, 15-7 win over Greenville Christian Academy in a high school volleyball match Monday.

The leading server for GCA was Tina Stiltner with four. Christie Hardison had five spikes. Amber Tripp had 19 bumps.

GCA falls to 1-2 and returns to action today against Falls Road Christian at home.

Sileo Will Sue To Play In NFL

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Defensive tackle Dan Sileo, declared ineligible at the University of Miami, wants to play for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and is going to court to try to force the NFL team to honor a free-agent contract.

The lawsuit, filed in circuit court on Monday, asks the Bucs to honor the agreement reached with Sileo on Sept. 6. It also names the NFL as a defendant and asks that the league not interfere with Tampa Bay fulfilling terms of the contract.

"Dan Sileo is being prevented from making his living at that which he does, play football," said attorney Joe Martinez.

He filed the suit in response to the NFL's decision to withhold approval of the contract and place Sileo in a supplemental draft scheduled for Wednesday.

"He is upset," Martinez added. "He doesn't understand what's happening."

Sileo, a 6-foot-2, 282-pound nose tackle, was ruled ineligible to play at Miami Sept. 4 because the NCAA determined the five-year period he had to complete his college eligibility expired after the 1986 season.

Sileo contacted the Bucs and signed with the team two days later on the contention that he is a free agent because he was eligible for last spring's regular NFL draft and was not selected by any team.

Martinez said he has received calls from several NFL teams interested in Sileo.

"I didn't know what to tell them. I still don't," the attorney said. "He's under contract and he doesn't want to rush off and run 40 yards for anybody. This is very complex. I am still thinking of our next options."

Bucs Attorney Richard McKay said the team and owner Hugh Culverhouse would have no comment on the case since it is in litigation.

When the NFL withheld approval of the contract last Friday, McKay said: "We have yet to receive any satisfactory explanation as to why the contract has been disapproved and thus will take any action necessary o preserve our contractural rights with Dan Sileo."

McKay said Monday that options available to the team "are still under consideration." He said the team has not decided if it would participate in the supplemental draft.

The case was assigned to Circuit Judge Morton Hanlon. Defendants have 20 days to reply.

Earnhardt In Big Lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt is making it hard for anyone to catch him in the NASCAR Winston Cup battle because he keeps winning races.

His victory in Sunday's Wrangler Indigo 400 at Richmond (Va.) Fairgrounds Raceway was his third straight and 11th of the season. It enabled him to expand his lead to 608 points over second-place Bill Elliott.

Earnhardt has 3,706 points compared to 3,098 for Elliott.

The lead is the largest any driver has enjoyed since Richard Petty held an 882-point margin in 1975, the first year the current points system was used.

Terry Labonte is third in the standings with 3,024 points, followed by Rusty Wallace with 2,942; Darrell Waltrip with 2,893; Ricky Rudd with 2,878; Neil Bonnett with 2,842; Richard Petty with 2,808; Kyle Petty with 2,772; and Ken Schrader with 2,658.

Meanwhile, Elliott became the first driver in motorsports to win more than $1 million in three seasons, using a fourth-place finish in the Wrangler 400 to up his 1987 winnings to $1,000,535.

GCA Loses

RALEIGH — Ty Brewer scored four goals as Friendship blasted Greenville Christian, 7-1, in a high school soccer match Monday.

Chris Gross scored the game's opening goal and later had another gaol and two assists. Tom Warner added the final goal and also ad two assists.

Frienship led 4-0 at the half.

GCA scored its lone goal when Christian Haddock, on an assist by Clint Parker. Friendship had 46 shots on goal while GCA had 13.

Friendship goalie Michael Jordan had eight saves. GCA's Brad Dixon had 24 saves.

GCA falls to 0-3 overall and 0-1 in the conference. GCA returns to action today against Falls Road Christian of Rocky Mount.

Hughes Wins

Thomas J. Hughes of Rt. 7, Box, 222, Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Hughes correctly predicted the winners in 28 of the 32 games listed in last Tuesday's contest pages. His victory, however, came on the basis of his point total guess. His guess was 72 while the actual total was 71, scored in Washington State's 43-28 win over Wyoming.

Second place went to Glenn Forbes of 1307 N. Overlook Dr., Greenville. Forbes also had 28 games right, but was further off the point total with a guess of 82.

Jeff Jarvis of 310-J Horseshoe Dr., Greenville, also had 28 correctly picked, but was still further off the point total with a guess of 84.

The third weekly contest appears elsewhere in today's Daily Reflector.

tection for breaking down, but said, "a couple of times I should have gotten rid of the ball earlier. I would have liked to gone deep down the field.

"I expected the game to be physical," added Simms, who was the MVP in the Giants' 39-20 Super Bowl victory over Denver. "Early-in the game we made some key mistakes and you can't do that against the Chicago Bears."

But in the end it was the Bears' defense that prevailed. The Giants managed only 75 yards rushing and 128 net yards passing.

Much had been made of which team had the better linebackers.

And for this game, the Bears' linebacking corps of Mike Singletary, Otis Wilson and Marshall all had a hand in the sacks.

"I don't know and I don't care," said Singletary when asked if he thought the Bears had the better linebackers. "The important thing is the three of us know who we are.

"At the beginning, Simms was very confident and kept us off balance," said Singletary. "So we sucked it up and began to execute the way we know we could."

Defensive coordinator Vince Tobin said "It is very difficult to single out individuals, but I felt we could have had a shutout."

WEEKLY PRIZES
1st Prize $25.00
2nd Prize $15.00

CONTEST RULES

1. Thirty-two football games are placed on these pages. Pick the winner of each game (not the score) and write the team name opposite the advertiser's name on the entry blank. The entrant picking the most correct winners each week will be awarded $25.00. Second place $15.00.
2. Pick a number which you think will be the most number of points scored by both teams in any one of the week's games listed and write your answer in the space provided on the entry blank. This will be used to break ties. In the event of a further tie the money will be equally divided between the winning entrants.
3. Only one entry per person per week. The contest is open to all except employees of The Daily Reflector and their immediate families.
4. Entries must be in The Daily Reflector office not later than 5:00 p.m. Friday or postmarked not later than Friday, 7:00 p.m. Address entries to: FOOTBALL CONTEST, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27835. (Reasonable facsimiles also accepted).

Seiko introduces the world's first analog quartz chronograph.

With this superb quartz achievement, Seiko also sets a world record for the most accurate analog chronograph: the only one with readings to 5/100 of a second. And the world's thinnest, and surely the handsomest. Water resistant, with tachymeter, in stainless steel.

DUNKEL INDEX
COLLEGE FOOTBALL

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Newsmagazines, Anchors May Be Up For Changes

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsmagazines face landmarks, both good and bad, this television season.

CBS' ratings bulwark, "60 Minutes," is beginning its 20th year on the air, while ABC's more modestly successful "20-20" makes a timorous move into a tough, new time period on Friday nights.

CBS' baby "West 57th" is still toddling in the ratings and could be removed from the schedule once again if doesn't prosper on Saturday nights.

NBC is out of the prime-time newsmagazine business for the time being. Its "1986" of last season didn't last out the year for which it was named.

"The idea of doing a newsmagazine like 'West 57th,' '20-20,' '1986' or '60 Minutes,' I think, is not one that has any appeal to us at this point," NBC News President Lawrence K. Grossman told reporters last month. "It's clear that the air is saturated with newsmagazines and saturated with news pieces."

Without elaborating, he promised some "exciting" new ideas for prime-time news programming, though.

Meanwhile, instead, NBC is expanding its "Today" to Sunday mornings, where it will compete in many areas of the country with the long-running "CBS Sunday Morning."

A shake-up in the news ratings toward the end of last season spawned speculation that CBS' Dan Rather might find himself in a revamped show with a co-anchor this season.

CBS News President Howard Stringer has said there will be changes in the broadcast — he refused to describe them — though he did rule out a co-anchor for Rather for now. He said some of the changes would be cosmetic, some substantial.

"What we want to do is improve the broadcast qualitatively and let the quantity take care of itself," Stringer said. "There isn't a quick fix because of the ratings. That would involve something stupid and we don't want to do that."

In any event, Rather's ratings problems may be over once Nielsen's new "people-meter" ratings system is up and running.

A people meter is a more sophisticated hardware that Nielsen says is more accurate. The networks disagree because of the relative complexity of the new system compared to the old.

Under the new system, viewers have to punch in and punch out each time they watch television. Under the old system, a gizmo on the set automatically reported what channel was watched — though not who was watching.

According to experimental people-meter figures, "CBS Evening News" and "NBC Nightly News" would have tied last season instead of NBC winning, as it did under the old Nielsen system.

NBC might also suffer in the morning under the people-meter system. According to preliminary figures, ABC's "Good Morning America" edges out the long-time No. 1 "Today."

"CBS Evenings News" and ABC's "World News Tonight" got new settings last season. "NBC Nightly News" got new theme music.

Some major news personalities will be missing this season.

Bill Moyers departed CBS last summer after expressing unhappiness with the way the division was being managed. He returned to public television. Roger Mudd left NBC after executives canceled "1986." He also went to PBS, as a correspondent on the "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour."

Van Gordon Sauter was ousted by CBS management last summer as president of CBS News. NBC "Today" show executive producer Steve Friedman left after seven years. Over at his competition, "Good Morning America" — an entertainment division show, not a news division show — David Hartman left as host after 11 years.

"West 57th," CBS' splashy newsmagazine, has had an on-and-off existence since its debut last year. It was removed from the schedule last year with a promise that it would return. It did earlier this year, only to be given a difficult Saturday-night time period and a mandate to do a 16 share — or percentage of the viewing audience — or be canceled again.

After three weeks in the new time period, it edged over the "magic number" and CBS News announced it would be on the fall schedule. However, the ratings axe still hangs over its head.

"20-20," on the other hand, had developed a loyal following in its length run on Thursday night. But ABC decided to mess with success and move the show, hoping its audience will follow and give ABC some ratings leverage on Fridays against NBC's new "Private Eye" and CBS' "Falcon Crest."

"I think "20-20" is going to be fine," said ABC Entertainment President Brandon Stoddard. "Let's put it this way. The show is a really important show, and ABC has made it really clear, if this show is in real jeopardy, we'll find a place where it will do well."

PBS Will Insert Comedy In New Television Card

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A bathroom sink is overflowing with water. A young women desperately tries to open the drain. Shrieking violins from the shower scene in "Psycho" cover the gurgling of running water. This is public television?

It's "Trying Times," something a little different amid the thought-provoking and culturally significant fare on PBS this season.

The comedy experiment is but three hours in the PBS lineup, which also features Sir David Attenborough visiting "The First Eden" in the Mediterranean, Spiro Kostoff pondering architecture in "America by Design," and "Oil," a history of the industry which has been so good to PBS via endowments by Mobil and Exxon.

What's missing this season is anything highly controversial, such as last season's "The Africans," denounced in some quarters as anti-American propaganda.

But who knows? Maybe the Republican candidates debate, under the auspices of William F. Buckley Jr.'s "Firing Line," will generate a little heat.

The aforementioned panicked bathroom scene is from the first episode "Trying Times," with Rosanna Arquette and David Byrne starring in a comedy written by Pulitzer-winning playwright Beth Henley ("Crimes of the Heart.")

Episode two stars Teri Garr as a woman trying to solve a mid-life crisis by learning to drive, in a script by playwright Wendy Wasserstein. Other episodes star Steven Wright, Catherine O'Hara, Candice Bergen, Jeff Daniels, Julie Hagerty, Swoosie Kurtz and Spalding Gray.

The first two episodes, at least, do not shatter any television conventions or put any of the best commercial sitcoms to shame, but they are good scripts.

It's impressive, though, what can be done in the seven or so minutes which would otherwise be lost to commercials. Call it the PBS edge.

For the most part, PBS viewers aren't notorious thrill-seekers, and they'll find the new season's lineup as comforting as a fine old quilt.

"Great Performances" will include the Houston Opera Company production of Aida, a two-part salute to George Gershwin, and a celebration at Wolf Trap featuring Tony Bennett, Judy Collins, Roberta Flack and Andy Williams.

The New York City Opera's new production of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" will air on "Live from Lincoln Center," which will also have the opening night of the New York Philharmonic and a New Year's Eve gala featuring soprano Kathleen Battle.

"Masterpiece Theater" features "The Bretts," an eight-part saga of theatrical life in 1920s London, and an adaptation of Jane Austen's "Northanger Abbey."

"Mystery!" has six more Miss Marple cases with the delightful Joan Hickson, and three cases from the files of Dorothy Sayers' wry and dapper sleuth, Lord Peter Wimsey.

"The Story of English," a hit last season, will take an encore this year, and so will "The Adams Chronicles," first seen 11 years ago.

For those awkward years between "Mr. Rogers" and "Masterpiece Theater," PBS has scheduled 13 episodes of "Degrassi Junior High," a serious attempt to deal with the problems of adolescents while still being entertaining.

Tribute To Warhol

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The late pop artist Andy Warhol is being honored with a 14-by-48-foot billboard done in his style that features four Warhol faces and the words "Pittsburgh Remembers Andy Warhol, 1928-1987."

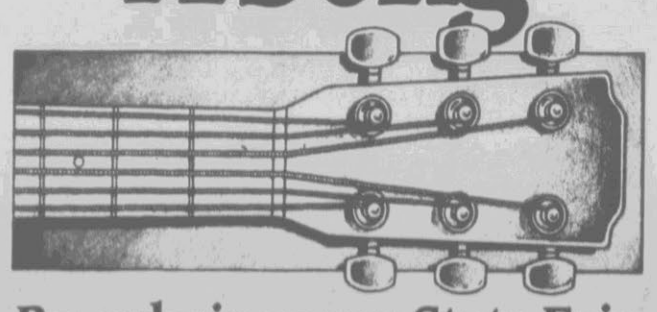

Warhol, whose real name was Andrew Warhola, was born in nearby McKeesport and died in February in New York City following gall bladder surgery. He is buried in a suburban Pittsburgh cemetery.

The tribute was produced by Pittsburgh billboard artist Greg Puchalski. His employer, Patrick Media Group Inc., provided the space and may donate the work to a museum, said art director Ron Senovich.

Warhol "was able to produce art with a sense of humor, and he had a knack of taking something out of context and making it work," Puchalski said.

He said Warhol's brother, Paul Warhola, called and said he liked the billboard. "That was a nice surprise," Puchalski said.

'Elvin' Gets Permanent Slot In 'Cosby Show' Cast

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Geoffrey Owens remembers his first time on the set of NBC's hit "The Cosby Show," when memories of a prior meeting with Sabrina Le Beauf helped relieve a bad case of nerves.

As an undergraduate at Yale, Owens had approached Le Beauf to congratulate her on a Drama School performance. Now she was playing Sondra, eldest Huxtable daughter, and he was playing Elvin, her soft-spoken but macho-thinking beau.

He said he told her he thought they had met before, back at college.

Oh, really?

Didn't she remember?

Well, no.

He went back to studying his script.

"When I was on the set for first time, whatever connection with anyone was nice to have," said Owens. "I was so scared."

But the young, stage-trained actor needn't have been. The producers of "The Cosby Show" liked Owens' characterization of Elvin so much that he has become a member of the family. This season, Elvin and Sondra are married. And now, Owens said, he and Le Beauf are pals, eagerly discussing their mutual love of the theater between takes.

Owens, 26, as quietly articulate as his TV character, though considerably more with-it, recounted in an interview the brief career that preceded his role in the No. 1 network television show.

After graduating from Yale, where he majored in English literature, he traveled for a year, to France, Italy and Greece, then came home to start looking for acting jobs, but was "afraid to start, really. I was procrastinating seriously for another eight months."

He finally started auditioning and landed small stage parts. When his agent sent him to audition for a one-time guest shot on "Cosby," he had no film nor television credits.

"It happened really fast," Owens said. "I was very excited. I was so excited, I was numb. I still am in a way. I still don't believe that I'm part of it. It's nothing I ever expected, really. I mean, I expected to get well-established in the theater first and primarily, and that's my great hope still. I mean, that's where my heart lies — the stage.

"But this came out of the blue, and I doubt if I've yet adjusted to it, or accepted it fully."

Owens comes from an upper-middle-class Brooklyn family not terribly unlike the Huxtables. He has two brothers — one older, one younger — and professional parents, now divorced. His mother teaches college music and literature. His father is U.S. Rep. Major Owens. D-N.Y.

"I think the Huxtable family is closer to a kind of idealized nuclear American family than I grew up in," Owens said. "Mine had a lot of particular problems and tensions, and happinesses, too. The 'Cosby' show is based on a certain kind of typicality in a way, and it has to be."

The challenge of playing Elvin, said Owens said, was to keep him real, not a buffoon.

"Bill (Cosby) told me at one point, 'I don't want him to be a jerk,' which is the best thing he could have told me, because really, when you look at his lines, when you listen to some of the things he says, he could easily be a jerk.

"So the challenge of the role for me from day one has been to work against letting him fall into stupidity, too much naivete. And on a certain level, the writers often write things that I think, 'Oh, my God, how am I ever going to say this?' It might come out well on the show, but it's a big struggle to me to say those things so they're believable and have some kind of purpose, sense of character behind them."

Owens counts a stint with a multi-racial Shakespeare company directed by Estelle Parsons at the Public Theater in New York as his most important work prior to "Cosby."

He's a big admirer of such British actors as Lord Olivier, Sir Ralph Richardson and Sir John Gielgud and of the British classical theater repertory groups.

"That whole world is something I greatly admire and hope to come into contact with somehow, someday," he said.

Among American actors, he counts Sidney Poitier as his greatest inspiration and, along with Poitier, Cosby.

"He's great to work with — very generous, very warm, very open about ideas. He'll actually discuss a scene with me, how it could work better, really on an actor-to-actor level which is great," Owens said.

Rob Reiner Turns To Film Fairy Tale

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Princess Bride" marks a large step forward in the directorial career of Rob Reiner, the former Meathead of TV's "All in the Family." It also is going to be a tough sell for 20th Century Fox.

His first three films have been modest though well received: "This Is Spinal Tap" ($2.2 million); "The Sure Thing" ($4.5 million); "Stand by Me" ($8 million). The new film, a medieval fairy tale shot in England, was budgeted at about $17 million.

"It's a soft title, and on the surface you don't know what's going to grab the audience. It's a tough film to market, but every audience we screened it for goes nuts for it. Hopefully, the word of mouth will help us," Reiner said in an interview at the Century City offices of his Castle Rock Productions.

"When you see the film three or four or five times, it really starts to get good. Lots of stuff goes on in there that you can't get all at once.

"I think Fox is going to try to sell it as a very special, important picture and not try to pigeonhole it in any category. To sell it as a comedy would be a mistake, because there's more to it than that. To sell it as a romance would be selling it short. Calling it an action-adventure would be a mistake, because I think the audience would feel cheated. It really is a mixture of those things."

The movie has received excellent responses from preview audiences, Reiner said.

William Goldman, novelist and screenwriter ("Marathon Man," "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," "All the President's Men"), started writing "The Princess Bride" for his children 14 years ago, but it turned into a romantic fantasy that many adults cherished. Including Reiner.

"For 14 years he's been trying to get this (film) off the ground with various studios and various directors," Reiner said. "It really is a hard picture to pull off. But I think we did it.

"The thing that is most important to me is that Bill loves the film. This is his favorite piece of writing, and the fact that he loves it is enough for me."

When Reiner was looking for a film project, he remembered his fondness for the Goldman book. He admitted that he had to "audition" for the author, who admired Reiner's films and perceived his good intentions. The film was backed by Rob's old "All in the Family" boss, Norman Lear, who had also sponsored "Stand by Me." Fox entered the deal during pre-production.

The Philadelphia Convention

Delegates to the Philadelphia convention on the Articles of Confederation were late in arriving. Some of North Carolina's representatives were there, but not enough delegates were present for a quorum. Eleven days later (May 25, 1787), enough men had arrived. After selecting George Washington to lead convention deliberations, they got to work.

Much to the surprise of those attending, Gov. Edmund Randolph, one of Virginia's convention delegates, suggested a whole new form of rule with a strong central government composed of three branches.

Heated debate began, despite the absence of some state representatives. Of the 74 delegates nominated, about two-thirds were actually there during the early weeks of discussion. The average age of representatives was 40, with Benjamin Franklin the oldest at 81.

States large and small debated representation with equal force, raising questions over length of term in office and division of power.

Finally, after approximately four months of argument and compromise, the Constitution of the United States was signed on September 17, 1787, by 39 of the approximate 73 delegates attending.

TOMORROW: North Carolinians Sign

Horoscope — From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY Sept. 16

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Get to work fixing up your home today, but don't invite anyone in to visit. Avoid becoming involved in an argument between a family member and an ousider.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Take time out from your routines to work on your appearance. Plan some amusements which will lighten your spirits. Work on finding needed information.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Work on establishing more harmony at home. Don't take any risks if you go out with your mate this eveing. Put pleasures aside for now and be practical.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Leave home early today and get started on shopping and visiting, but only for constructive purposes. Be well prepared with data for some important writing.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Drive carefully, and be sure to count your change when shopping. Do something to improve your property, and set up a new budget. Postpone a visit for now.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't let yourself become confused over monetary affairs. Use your fine sense of humor to please some good friends later today. Carefully consider your situation.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): It would be wise to listen to suggestions from a superior since your ideas are not so good now. Be sure your mate agrees with your plans for a splurge tonight.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Don't permit anyone to involve you in a crooked scheme, or you could get into a good deal of trouble. Get out socially with a good friend and have fun tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A pal could unwittingly give you the wrong advice, so don't rush blindly into anything. Plan carefully before introducing your mate around.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't try to wrench a favor from a superior, but join an associate at some new kind of activity. You may be foregetful today, so jot down notes on important matters.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Avoid a new contact who has an eye on your assets, and keep busy with those who are helpful to you. Do something nice for your mate, but be practical about it.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Forget those dull routines, and find some new activity which can bring you advancement. A little risk may work out fine today, but be sure not to push your luck.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a very analytical mind and the ability to always rely on his or her own judgment. Outside influences could easily distract your progeny, so teach him or her to focus the attention on the project at hand. Your child could excel at nearly any profession, so don't push any certain idea. Let free choice reign.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♡

Proponents of one method or another are quick to tell you what advantages their system confers. They are not as fast at pointing out the drawbacks. This column tells it like it is—no single bid or method is a panacea for all ills. You must weigh each one, decide on the pluses and minuses and how it suits your style.

Those who favor light opening bids profess how beneficial it is to get in and out of the bidding quickly; how you disrupt the opponents' constructive bidding by stealing the opening bid from them. What they forget to state is that, when you don't buy the contract, you have often drawn a blueprint for declarer of the lie of the cards. This hand comes from the recent North American Summer Championships in Baltimore.

South's jump to three no trump was a practical solution to a difficult bidding problem. After the lead of a heart, it seemed that nine tricks were there for the taking, but declarer received a shock at trick two when he cashed the ace of diamonds and West discarded a club.

The normal way to go for the contract would be to take two spade finesses. However, East's opening bid marked him for at least the king of spades, and possibly the queen as well. In addition, since East surely had at least nine red cards, there was also the possibility that he was short in spades. So at trick three declarer led a spade to the ace, and was gratified to see the king drop.

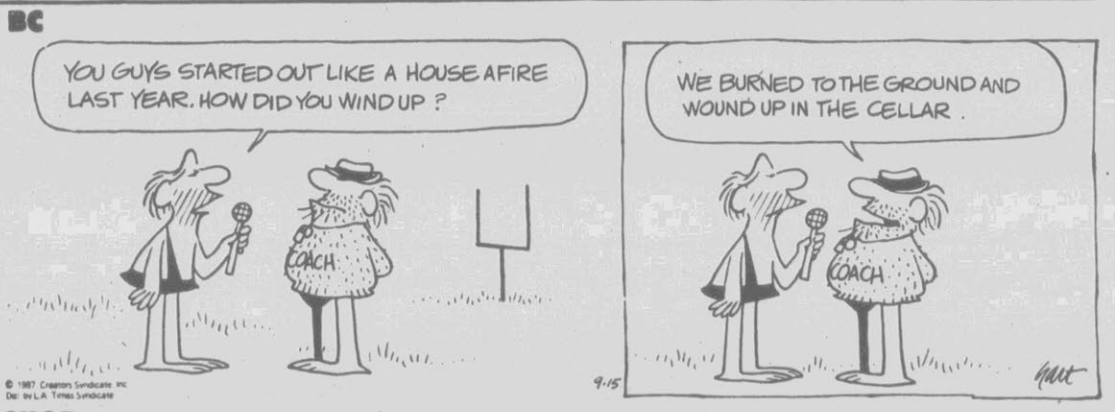

On the continuation of the jack of spades, West could not afford to win the queen without setting up the suit. But once declarer had a second spade trick, he was able to concede a diamond and score his nine tricks via two spades, two hearts and five diamonds.

GREAT PRODUCTS & PRICES

10% Low Price Guarantee Policy:

Lowe's guarantees our everyday low prices. If you find an identical advertised item at any retail competitor currently priced lower than ours, simply bring us written proof of that price. We'll match that price PLUS give you an additional 10% of the difference between the two prices when you buy from us. It must be an identical in-stock item. Closeout, discontinued and other clearance type sale items are excluded from this offer.

Satisfaction Guarantee Policy:

Lowe's guarantees that you will be satisfied with your purchase. If you are not completely happy with your purchase, simply return it along with your original sales receipt to any Lowe's store. We'll repair it, replace it, or refund your money.

Lowe's Raincheck Policy:

If an advertised item is temporarily out-of-stock, we will gladly issue a raincheck (except for items marked limited quantities, discontinued or closeout). When we restock you will be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price. Some stores may not stock all advertised items; however, every item shown can be ordered for you.

Lowe's Fair Purchase Policy:

In order to provide fair purchase opportunity to all our customers, Lowe's reserves the right to limit quantities sold to individual customers. No dealers, please.
