School Bus Rams Apartment

RALEIGH (AP) — A Garner man and his 3-month-old daughter were rudely awakened Wednesday morning when a Wake County school bus crashed into their apartment, lodging its nose in the living room amid rubble from a crumbling wall.

"That was the worst alarm clock that I've ever had," said Denis D'Emidio as he surveyed the damage. "The whole living room and dining room are demolished."

D'Emidio, 26, and daughter Cammy escaped without injury from their upstairs bedroom. One of the eight North Garner Junior High students on the bus reported a scrape, but the others reported to classes, said Arti Davis, bus supervisor for the area.

D'Emidio's wife, Tammy, had left for work at about 6:45 a.m. The bus went through the parking space she had vacated before jumping the curb and hitting the apartment, officials said.

The driver, Phyllis Deon McCullers, 17, apparently lost control of the bus as she turned left, Davis said.

"She said she came around the corner and she couldn't straighten the bus up," she said. "The students said the same thing."

School officials backed the bus out of the house about 8:40 a.m., after the foundation and ceiling were secured.

Damages to the home were estimated at a minimum of $10,000 to $12,000. An estimate of damage to the school bus was not available.

Board Meets Sept. 30 To Start Hunt For Site Of Waste Dump

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Fifteen nuclear scientists, engineers and laymen soon will begin a three-year search for a community to receive the state's least coveted prize: low-level radioactive waste.

The group represents a broad cross-section of professions, communities and opinions about nuclear waste. Its members are especially qualified in the fields of nuclear power and radiation safety.

A handful of the group's 15 members are environmentalists, although none of the environmentalists who were most active on nuclear issues are in the group.

The new N.C. Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority will hold its first meeting Sept. 30. Its chairman will be Merrill Eisenbud of Chapel Hill, an internationally known expert in radiation safety.

Eight other members of the authority also are from the Piedmont, and two each are from the east, the northwest and the mountains. And nine are, like Eisenbud, experts in nuclear energy, radioactivity or geology.

The authority's job will be to find a site by Nov. 15, 1990, for the disposal of low-level waste. How much waste will be disposed depends on whether the state remains in the Southeast Interstate Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Compact, which wants North Carolina to take the entire region's waste for 20 years.

Environmentalists in the General Assembly want the state to withdraw from the compact. Most members of the authority said that they want the state to stay in, but that decision belongs to the legislature.

The members were appointed by Gov. Jim Martin, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

Nader Group Criticizes Utilities

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light Co. were among utilities whose nuclear plants ranked in the top 20 for the number of emergency shutdowns in 1986, according to Ralph Nader's Public Citizen group.

Three of the worst near-accidents in the "1986 Nuclear Power Safety Report" occurred at nuclear plants operated by Duke Power. Those accidents, classified by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission as "unusual occurrences," are those the NRC considers most significant and includes in an annual report to Congress.

In addition, the group's report says Duke Power's two Catawba plants ranked eighth and 11th in number of emergency shutdowns while CP&L's Robinson 2 plant in Hartsville, S.C., ranked 16th.

"I think Duke Power has an undeservedly good reputation," said Joshua Gordon, a nuclear analyst for Public Citizen's Critical Mass Energy Project. "It does not live up to its reputation and does not operate its plants any more safely than other utilities across the country."

Paul Viggiano, a spokesman for Duke Power, said none of the incidents cited endangered the public health.

"We feel Mr. Nader's report misleads the public," he said. "Utilities are required to report many things to the NRC, and they may, indeed, have no bearing on the safety of the plant."

Duke's McGuire plants were listed 18th on the group's list of the 19 worst-managed nuclear plants, based on an NRC rating system including such factors as plant operations, controls, emergency preparedness, fire protection, outages, licensing and training.

State Ranks 21st In AIDS

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — North Carolina ranks 10th in the United States in population but 21st in the number of reported AIDS cases, a state health official says.

There are more than 100,000 acquired immune deficiency syndrome cases worldwide, including more than 60,000 cases in the United States, Dr. Rebecca Meriwether of the Communicable Disease Control Branch of the state Division of Health Services told about 75 people at the Association of North Carolina Boards of Health. North Carolina has 258 cases, she said.

Blacks account for 42 percent of AIDS cases in the state, although they make up only 22 percent of the state population, Dr. Meriwether said.

Overall, North Carolina is doing a good job of providing AIDS testing, Dr. Meriwether said. Initially in 1985, 93 of the state's 100 counties set up alternate testing sites, which are now in all 100 counties.

Awareness of the disease and how to prevent its spreading needs to increase, she said.

"Everyone needs to protect himself," Dr. Meriwether said. "If you're not infected, you need to follow the guidelines so you won't get infected, and if you are infected and you follow the guidelines you won't infect anyone else."

People should limit the number of sexual partners they have, not exchange body fluids, not share needles for taking intravenous drugs and not share personal items that can come into contact with blood, such as razors and toothbrushes, Dr. Meriwether said.

"Also, we advise people known to be infected to notify others," she said.

AIDS is a household word today, yet many myths about the fatal disease still exist, she said.

"AIDS cannot be transmitted by mosquitoes," she said. "The evidence for that is becoming more and more clear."

Also, acquired immune deficiency syndrome cannot be transmitted through tears, saliva or casual contact, she said.

However, there has been one reported case of AIDS being transmitted through breast feeding, she said.

Child Death Accidental

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — The death of a 2-year-old Clinton girl who was left in a parked car for eight hours was accidental, and no charges will be filed in the case, Sampson County authorities say.

"We feel it was accidental, and no criminal intent was involved," Leonard Thagard, a Sampson County prosecutor who reviewed the case with police, said Wednesday.

The victim, Brittany Marie New, died of heatstroke Sept. 9 after temperatures reached 130 degrees in a car parked outside her grandmother's work place.

Clinton Police Chief Robert Wingate said his department's investigation indicated that the girl's grandmother, Joyce Hatcher of Clinton, did not realize the child was asleep in the back seat of the car when she drove it to work at a West Point Pepperell Inc. plant. He said Mrs. Hatcher has been hospitalized and unavailable to be interviewed since the day of the incident.

The girl was in the car from about 7:45 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Wingate said the girl's mother apparently left Brittany in the backseat so that Mrs. Hatcher could take her to a baby sitter as she did on occasion. But he said Mrs. Hatcher was late for work and did not follow her normal routine.

"Normally, when she did take the child to the baby sitter, the child was sitting in the front seat in the baby seat," he said. "This time, the child was in the back seat asleep."

Break-In Arrests

Greenville police arrested three people on breaking, entering and larceny charges Wednesday.

Stacy Lee Davis, 17, of 1912A Norcott Circle, Derrick Duan Edwards, 16, of 1619B Hopkins Drive, and Gregory Todd Stancil, 17, of 1804 Kennedy Circle were taken into custody between 7:03 a.m. and 7:40 a.m. police said.

Officers K.L. Jones, M.R. Benton and J.E. Williams said the three were charged in connection with a June 18 break-in at the Fast Fare on Hooker Road where two cases of beer were taken.

Assault Charge

Spencer Preston Ellis, 18, of 188 Aycock Dorm was arrested by Greenville police Wednesday on charges of simple assault and attempting to purchase alcoholic beverages with a fictitious identification.

Officer W.S. Heath said the charges resulted from an 8:42 p.m. incident at the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard.

Parade Planning

Planning has begun for the Ayden

Richard Eakin; Ellis Hall, general chairman of the tournament, and Sen. Kenneth Royall of Durham, champion of the first two tournaments. About 24 legislators were expected to play in the contest, according to Warren. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Ms. Worthington said that those wishing to volunteer for the parade should call her or Mayor Marvin Baldree, parade chairman.

Solicitation Permits

The Greenville Police Department has granted three solicitation permits for fund-raising projects.

Permits were issued to: the Eastern Elementary School PTA allowing fund raising Sept. 25 to purchase school supplies and for use in teacher appreciation; Rofelt Pasha Court No. 108 Isiserettes allowing fund raising until Sept. 25 to support activities and charitable obligations, March of Dimes and Education Fund, and to Xi Gamma Xi chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi allowing fund raising in October for Cerebral Palsy.

Friday Recital

Mezzo-sopranos Annette Vick of

Wilson and Jennifer Grum of Charlotte, both senior voice students in the East Carolina University School of Music, will perform in recital Friday in the Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

The joint program will begin at 7 p.m.

Ms. Vick is a candidate for the bachelor of music education degree, while Ms. Grum is pursuing bachelor of music degrees in voice pedagogy and voice performance. Both are students of Gladys White.

Ms. Grum will sing six of the Brahms "Zigunelieder," Milhaud's "Chansons de Negresse," an aria from Saint-Saens' opera "Samson et Delilah" and two American songs: "Simple Gifts" and "At the River."

Ms. Vick's portion of the recital will include songs by Richard Strauss, Schubert and Berlioz, the "Habanera" from Bizet's "Carmen," an aria from Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors," three of Holst's "Songs for Voice and Violin," and Hindemith's "Whistling Thief."

Together the two will sing two duets by Mendelssohn: "Gruss" and "Ich wolt meine Liebe." Piano accompanists will be Alisa Wetherington and James Gilliam. Assisting will be violinist Carol Moore.

Grant Awarded

For the second consecutive year, the Children's Trust Fund, a division of the state Department of Public Instruction, has awarded the School of Education at East Carolina University a grant for Project PARENTING (Proactive Assessment and Regulation of Environmental Nurturing and Teaching Interventions for Normal Growth).

Project PARENTING is an educational program designed to teach parenting skills to selected adolescent mothers enrolled in Pitt County schools.

"Being a parent can be stressful to individuals of all ages," said Becky H. Taylor, program director. "The sudden change in lifestyle as well as the burden of new responsibilities can be difficult to adjust to. This adjustment is even more difficult for adolescent parents who are coping with the tremendous changes occurring emotionally, physically and mentally during the adolescent period."

The $40,000 grant, combined with a $9,500 contribution from the United Way of Pitt County, covers the salaries of Taylor and a part-time social worker, as well as travel, telephone and supply costs.

Sample drills with the Marine Corps Air Station Crash Fire and Rescue Section on reserve weekends and had nominated Greenwaldt for the certificate.

Both Sample and Greenwaldt are employed by Mackenzie Security Inc., which provides security for Hatteras Yachts. Present for the certificate presentation was R.W. Mackenzie Jr., president of the security firm.

The Reserve Augmentation Unit is composed of drilling Marine Corps reservists who perform their training with their active duty counterparts at the Marine Corps Air Station.

New BFPC Location

The Bethel Family Practice Center of the East Carolina University School of Medicine has moved to a new location and has gained another physician.

The center's new location at 113 Railroad St. across the street from the old office area was once the medical offices of the late Dr. C.G. Garrenton, a longtime Bethel physician.

The new center houses the offices of Drs. Richard Rawl and Paul James, the BFPC's newest physician. The office area also includes six examination rooms, a treatment room and a laboratory.

The center's staff also includes two nurses, a lab technician, a secretary-receptionist and a medical transcriptionist.

Patients seen at the center are residents of Bethel, Stokes and surrounding areas of northern Pitt County.

Special Olympic Winners Are Endless Winners

The track was 30 meters long. To the athletes, it was Mount Everest on a slippery day.

A boy named Ron took 7 minutes, 37.3 seconds to get to the end of it... in his wheelchair.

A 7-year-old girl became so excited, she lost her way in the race and wandered into the crowd. She was blind.

A child sat at the starting line and threw a small ball 30 meters. He could not stand up without crutches.

I defy anyone to view a Special Olympics and not be changed by it.

I have written before about the parents of these special people... their anger, their frustration, their guilt, their doubts about themselves, and their open love for this child who was given to them for a reason they hope to find.

And I have heard some parents of handicapped children criticize these events that to them seem cruel. Why would you put handicapped children in a competitive arena? Do they feel the thrill of victory? The agony of defeat? Do they ever know where they are?

I don't have the answers any more than they do. But suppose, just suppose the guttural cries that make no sense were really saying, "I did it!"

Suppose behind the vacant, empty eyes, the gold medal on the red, white and blue ribbon dazzled them and meant something.

Is it possible that the mouth that

At Wits End

could not control saliva was willed by the brain to smile, but the muscles just couldn't do it?

As in any competition, I watched the winner and immediately went to the contestant in last place to watch for a reaction. There wasn't any. He didn't seem to know he had lost a gold medal, only that he was struggling for something that pushed him beyond anything he had ever known. He never gave up.

Something else was missing. Unlike U.S. Olympic events, there were no tears of disappointment, no excuses for coming in last, no rhetoric on how they did it or how they felt.

We are a strange society. We talk to babies, never knowing if they understand. We talk to animals like they are Harvard scholars. We even talk to recordings all day long, pouring out our deepest concerns.

Yet, some are ready to write off a mind that somehow got trapped inside of a body that is less than perfect.

Pearl S. Buck once said, "The test of a civilization is in the way that it cares for its helpless members."

How much longer can the helpless go on making us look good?

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Vigorous Hearing Correct For Bork

The U.S. Senate is correct to conduct a no-holes-barred confirmation hearing for Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork.

The sharp questioning Bork has faced at the hearings is appropriate. The Senate has a responsibility to carefully scrutinize all aspects of the nominee's background, especially his record as a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals judge and his conduct in the so-called Saturday Night Massacre in 1973.

If the president takes a nominee's philosophy into consideration when nominating, the Senate should weigh that same ideology when confirming that nominee.

The confirmation process is the safeguard of the fairness of the court's philosophy. As the Senate questions Bork and considers his answers, it must reflect on the purpose of the court, and weigh Bork's judicial integrity.

Individuals who sit on the high court need the ability to look at facts, then seek to do justice fairly. The Senate must examine Bork with the belief that a supreme court justice must, in addition to being well-grounded in law, understand the intent, not just the letter, of the Constitution.

A supreme court justice needs a creative and open mind capable of expanding as long as it is required to. On that basis, the Senate is right to vigorously probe into the background and philosophy of Bork. There is danger that an ideologue — one who knows what he knows and doesn't want to be distracted by reason or facts — could disrupt the balance and reason so important to the court's correct function.

Bork deserves a fair confirmation hearing. The U.S. Supreme Court requires only the most capable, fair, justices. There is strong evidence in Bork's judicial record and background to suggest he cannot provide this type of leadership.

There is little question he is the representative and leader of a right-wing school of thought. He has worked out an overarching legal and constitutional philosophy he says should govern all decision-making. An examination of his decisions as a circuit judge shows he consistently supports the executive branch of the government in key decisions.

The key question facing the Senate as it assesses Bork is whether the nominee can put his philosophy in perspective when he puts on a robe as an associate justice on the U.S. Supreme Court?

Only with the type of energetic hearing in progress can this question be satisfactorily answered.

Alive, Well

It's caused more debate, sanctioned more rabble-rousing, created more confusion and stirred more upheaval than perhaps anything in history.

It's also safeguarded more liberty, protected more rights and astounded more scholars than any other piece of writing.

The U.S. Constitution commemorated its 200th birthday today with the same vitality with which it was born.

The Constitution is a living document. After two centuries, it remains responsive to the needs of a complex society — a vastly altered populace from the one surrounding its birth. The Constitution has weathered sharp changes in political atmosphere. It has survived the development of a huge bureaucratic government. Its effectiveness has withstood the evolution of America from a simple society to a diverse citizenry. Today, the document still protects the rights and serves the needs of that citizenry, just as it did 200 years ago.

For the Constitution to survive another 200 years will require its guardians understand the spirit in which it was proposed, in addition to the letter of the law it provides. One of the document's strengths is its flexibility — it has the ability to adapt to situations its authors never anticipated. This versatility allows constant interpretation of the Constitution — as the needs of the society demand.

Liberty and individual rights were mere notions until the Constitution's words made them tangible. Despite the document's articulation of these concepts, they remain meaningless without sharp, judicious interpretation.

The Constitution is a dynamic force in American liberty. It remains the cornerstone of Democracy by safeguarding citizens' rights. The Constitution was a far-reaching vision that requires broad and constant interpretation. While the nation proclaims the document's birth, it should also celebrate its continued vigor and the liberty it affords.

A Nation In Search Of Leaders

'Our democracy depends on people and their faith in this murky process. It requires citizen participation. Voters, believe it or not, still want to hear about issues.'

PHILADELPHIA — This week we celebrate the 200th birthday of the framing of the Constitution.

Nothing is more central to the constitutional process than popular participation in elections for public office. But unfortunately, public opinion surveys suggest more and more Americans look for a box to check on their ballots that says, "None of the Above." In most of these instances, citizens don't vote because they're turned off by either the candidates or the conduct of campaigns.

As one who spends much time around politicians, I'm often reminded of the inertia that paralyzes our electorate. Last week I encountered voter contempt in this City of Brotherly Love while Mayor Wilson Goode was speaking to a group of community activists at a town hall meeting arranged by the staff of consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Parched during the mayor's presentation, "Protest and the Constitution," I rushed outside to purchase a soft drink. On the street, I bumped into four separate groups of citizens, each of which independently asked me what the "official" cars and police were doing outside the building from which I'd exited. I explained that the mayor of their fair city was inside, speaking to the public, and they should hear him.

In each case, the citizens laughed at me. For the record, two couples made faces and then laughed. Another couple immediately started running down the block as if I'd informed them their mayor had contracted AIDS.

It doesn't take much intelligence to understand why many citizens in Philadelphia, or any other big city for that matter, find their public officials repulsive. All too many of the people's representatives are uptight, timid, shallow pawns of high-price political consultants and campaign aides, as even Mayor Goode has demonstrated.

Last week, for example, his aides refused to let Goode take questions directly from an audience of community activists organized by Nader's group. They insisted that questions be written down on index cards, which the staff would approve in advance. Questions deemed too controversial were discarded. Without these ground rules, the mayor wouldn't appear, the Nader crowd was told.

Not surprisingly, Goode's audience was looking for the real thing. It started shouting out questions, to which he responded in an adequate manner, much to his aides' amazement. Meanwhile, his staff protested vehemently over this change in plans, threatening to remove their man from the premises.

While watching this juvenile posturing, I was struck by how pitiful our political process has become. A nervous Mayor Goode, like President Reagan, was being shielded by aides from an impromptu defense of his record.

Permitting candidates or incumbents to speak for themselves is not something that's in the cards in an era of high-priced political consultants. Almost everything in a campaign has to be prearranged. Little is left to chance. As a result, voters see a cautious crop of candidates, ever willing to surrender their claim to intellectual political leadership.

Anyone who has attended any of the Democratic Party presidential cattle shows this year can attest to the fact these candidates sound so similar. Why, for the most part, are they hiding their passion and outrage? Don't they realize they have to personalize issues?

The other night in Los Angeles, I heard Sen. Paul Simon (D-Ill.), who is bright, put a carefully-selected group of Hollywood stars and money moguls to sleep in a matter of minutes. Speaking in long, rhythmic sentences about the threat of nuclear war, Simon's message got lost in the smog of Los Angeles.

Being oneself and knowing why you're running is a dilemma shared by Mayor Goode, Sen. Simon and dozens of other candidates. Anyone, for example, who has spent time with Vice President Bush can swear that someone else must be wearing his clothing when he delivers a prepared text.

Granted, campaigning has become an unbelievably tough business — too tough — almost distasteful for most of us. Beyond investigations into a candidate's sexual history, public office-seekers must watch themselves get pigeon-holed by their opponents into an ideology that is not their own. Furthermore, they are forced to sign off on direct mail letters that use caustic rhetoric penned by some ambitious aide.

Our democracy depends on people and their faith in this murky process. It requires citizen participation. Voters, believe it or not, still want to hear about issues. And they deserve campaigns in which candidates make their case on their qualifications and well-thought-out solutions to the nation's problems.

Sadly enough, on this bicentennial week, the number of public officials who take risks are in short supply. One sometimes risk-taker is Sen. Joe Biden (D-Del.), who recently told a group of anti-Bork supporters that he was going out on a limb for them by opposing Bork against the advice of his aides.

But courageous Joe, like so many other ambitious politicians, has also shown himself to be one who is easily distracted and usually interested more in the sound of his voice than the substance of his text. He, like so many, is a creature rather than a leader of his staff. Did the Founding Fathers have such leaders in mind when establishing the Executive?

U.S. Power And The Persian Gulf

PARIS — The armada the United States has assembled for Persian Gulf duty has served a modest but useful purpose. It has persuaded American friends and adversaries abroad that the Reagan administration is still in business.

To note this is to thank heaven for small favors, in the hope of encouraging more and larger blessings.

Now comes the hard part. Having demonstrated that it can still wield power despite the Iran-Contra affair, the Reagan presidency must show that it can wield power effectively. The original mishaps and accidental nature of U.S. policy in the gulf did not encourage confidence on this score.

The U.S. warships have served as a kind of policy bludgeon, focusing the attention not only of Iran but also of America's European allies, the Soviet Union and the perpetually apprehensive Arab states of the gulf on U.S. power.

But these are temporary and fragile gains. It would be dangerous to mistake them for enduring cooperation or acquiescence. The reality is that the United States is more alone in the gulf than it appears.

Five European countries have finally agreed to send their own warships to the gulf area, but only because of intense diplomatic pressure from Washington.

The pressure worked, but officials in Britain, France, the Netherlands, Belgium and Italy now wonder how America will extricate itself — and them — from the Iran-Iraq crossfire.

The Europeans are practicing their own version of a "flexible response" strategy on the United States in the gulf. They are being as vague about how they would react to military escalation there as the United States is about its eventual nuclear response to a Soviet invasion of Europe.

The Europeans have insistently kept their ships under national command, remaining independent of U.S. logistical support and operational decisions. Obviously, they do not want a repeat of the disaster that joining the Reagan administration in Lebanon brought them four years ago.

"It simply wasn't worth continuing to fight the United States on this," explains a senior official in one of the five governments. Adds an adviser to another leader who agreed reluctantly to go along with the American request not only to send ships but also to publicize the intention to do so:

"So far so good. But how long do we have to stay out there? What is it that will get the Americans out? We don't get answers when we ask Washington this."

Moreover, West Germany and Japan have declined to associate themselves with the American effort in the gulf. There is mounting concern in allied capitals that Bonn is seeking a separate peace with Tehran, in order to get Iranian help in freeing the one remaining West German hostage in Beirut and to protect Germany's privileged trading position in Iran.

West Germany thus joins the Soviet Union and China as question marks in the U.N. Security Council vote on mandatory sanctions against Iran that the United States will seek now that the U.N. effort to get a gulf cease-fire has failed.

The Soviets have been made aware that Washington sees the vote as a test of the new "pragmatism" that Moscow has been advertising in its Middle East policies. A cooperative attitude on the gulf in the U.N. vote would be an element in fashioning a successful summit later this year.

More fundamental to the White House calculation must be a sense that the Soviets see the U.N. process as the best way to reduce the trouble-ing American military buildup, which is "precisely the circumstance that Gorbachev's Middle Eastern initiatives aim to prevent," as Israeli scholar Galia Golan notes in the current issue of Foreign Affairs magazine.

If this analysis is correct, the Soviets will not try to broker a solution to the Iran-Iraq war on their own. Nor will they maneuver to dig the U.S. deeper into a dangerous pit of its own making.

Strength For Today

Is money of anything?

It certainly is — a measure of achievement. It is not, however, a measure of success. Money measures certain things that admit of quantitative measurement, but it never measures the quality of anything.

A man dies and leaves a large fortune. This measures the achievement of his efforts. It is an open question, however, whether the man was successful or not. If people hated him while he lived and rejoiced when he died, he was not successful. If his family disintegrated and his children grew up despising him, he was not successful. If he gained the whole world and lost his soul, he was not successful.

Success has to do with the quality of one's life, and this cannot be measured by money or any earthly standard.

Anti-Tobacco Forces Want FDA To Control Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tobacco, along with cars, airplanes and several other categories of products, has long been exempt from the regulatory powers of the Consumer Product Safety Commission. But some congressmen want to change that.

Anti-smoking forces mounted a new campaign Wednesday, urging Congress to put the tobacco industry under the regulatory powers of the consumer commission and the Food and Drug Administration, which could subject tobacco to regulations treating it as a health hazard.

New legislation also proposed a federally mandated minimum age of 18 years to buy tobacco products. Sales to minors are allowed in 26 states.

In testimony to the House Commerce consumer subcommittee, industry spokesmen argued with anti-smoking forces about the federal regulatory reach, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

Rep. Jim Bates, D-Calif., author of legislation to repeal the current exemption of tobacco from the jurisdiction of the consumer products commission, called tobacco "the most exempted product on the market" from federal safety standards.

But Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., a leader of tobacco forces, said tobacco already was a heavily regulated agriculture product.

"I think our founding fathers would be aghast at how we regulate the lives of our people," said Rose, on a day when Congress celebrated the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution.

However, Rep. Bob Whittaker, R-Kan., sponsor of legislation introduced Wednesday to put tobacco under the FDA, said, "It is ironic that the FDA had the authority to remove saccharin from the market based on a few animal studies but is powerless to regulate additives used in tobacco."

Although industry officials appeared confident the Bates and Whittaker bills could be stymied in committee, it was unclear what might happen should they pass.

Scott D. Ballin, vice president of the American Heart Association, told reporters that Bates' bill could give the consumer products commission authority to ban smoking. Bates said that a ban was not his goal but that he hoped for regulations forcing public disclosure of tobacco ingredients and greater ease in bringing product liability lawsuits against the industry.

Former Rep. Charles Whitley, a lobbyist for the Tobacco Institute, said he doubted Bates' bill could lead to a smoking ban or much help in the lawsuits.

Ballin said Whittaker's bill to give the FDA jurisdiction over tobacco stopped short of authority to outlaw the sale of the product. However, the FDA would be required to study and disclose the ingredients and additives in cigarettes.

The bill also would set the national smoking age at 18, ban the public distribution of free samples and require a new warning label on cigarettes that the product is addictive.

Doctors Say New RJR 'Smokeless' Cigarette Still Has Health Dangers

By The Associated Press

Smokers who turn to R.J. Reynolds' new "smokeless cigarette" still will be exposed to the same amount of nicotine and carbon monoxide, and some people will probably end up smoking more because they think the new product is safe, doctors say.

"It's like saying, 'What do you recommend, strychnine or arsenic?'" said Charlotte pulmonary specialist Carmine Dalto. "That's silly. Both are medical hazards. Either way, you're in trouble."

monoxide as conventional cigarettes. Those two by-products of smoking, inhaled and released into the body, are linked to heart disease, strokes and circulatory problems.

RJR says health threats from smoking haven't been scientifically established.

"I think it is very unlikely that this cigarette will represent a major health benefit," said Dr. Howard Ozar, associate director of clinical research at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's Lineberger Cancer Research Center.

"I think it is probably a poor attempt by the tobacco company to do what is really needed — eliminate smoking altogether. It is very possible that people may interpret this as a safe cigarette and wind up smoking more," Ozar said.

Atlanta-based RJR Nabisco isn't pushing its product — still in the testing stage — as a "safe cigarette," said David Fishel, a company spokesman.

Nonsmokers probably will like the new cigarette because it won't smoke when laid in an ashtray and, after a few puffs, won't emit a side stream of smoke that affects nonsmokers, RJR says.

But such doctors as Ozar, Dalton and Charlotte pulmonary specialist John Gardella say RJR's development of a smokeless cigarette is an attempt to salvage the struggling tobacco industry.

"The smoker is still subject to nicotine exposure and carbon monoxide exposure, as well as whatever else he inhales," Ozar said. "People smoke as much for nicotine as taste. They may wind up smoking more of these new cigarettes to satisfy their cravings."

The new cigarettes will have less tobacco, Gardella said, "but people will still be exposed to a dose which is known to be harmful. While the individual may be getting a smaller dose of various toxic compounds, I don't see it as a solution to the public health problem."

And, he said, the problem keeps growing.

"My specialty is lungs, and not a week goes by that I don't see a new patient who has an incurable disease," Gardella said. "I am just one doctor, in one clinic, in one city. Multiply that by a few thousand-fold across the country and you see how serious the problem is."

HOT SPARK PLUGS

It's not unusual for an engine to lose pep, power and smoothness because of the wrong spark plugs. This is particularly true when engine speed and mileage demands are such that plugs tend to run too hot.

Hot plugs are a fairly common cause of a spacious engine condition known as preignition. This means the fuel and air mixture in one or more cylinders is being ignited prematurely by the heat of the plug firing ends, or before the plug actually fires a spark. When preignition becomes severe, engine noise (detonation) develops. This signals a dangerous situation which can quickly result in engine damage.

If you suspect preignition problems, have the spark plugs inspected. Blistered, eroded or distorted electrodes (firing points) indicate plugs are too hot for your driving needs. The cure, of course, is to change the plugs for ones in a lower heat range.

RJR Nabisco says the new cigarette is virtually smoke-free and ashless and uses 35 percent less tobacco than old-fashioned ones.

By heating instead of burning tobacco, the new cigarette eliminates or greatly reduces most compounds, including tar, that "are often associated with the smoking and health controversy," the company said. "Simply put, we think this will be the world's cleanest cigarette," said Edward Horrigan, RJR's chairman and chief executive officer. "We feel this product addresses the desires and perceptions of many of today's smokers."

Horrigan acknowledged that the smokeless cigarette contains about the same level of nicotine and carbon

Leaf Exports Push Output

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. cigarette production is expected to increase this year because of a rise in exports, but per capita use by Americans will show another decline, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

Overall, U.S. cigarette consumption is expected to decline by 2 percent from last year. That would reduce per capita use from last year's average of 3,274 cigarettes, about 164 packs of 20 cigarettes each, the department's Economic Research Service said.

The per capita figures are a statistical reference only, since they include smokers and non-smokers alike, and exclude people under 18 years of age.

Per capita cigarette use peaked at 4,345 — about 217 packs — in 1963 but has generally tilted lower since then because of health concerns, rising prices and, more recently, public policies restricting smoking.

Smoking Ban Pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of a House-passed bill that calls for a smoking ban on most domestic airline flights are encouraged by an endorsement of their goals by the chairman of a key Senate subcommittee.

Dozens of members of health and consumer organizations lobbied senators Wednesday on behalf of legislation that would prohibit smoking on airline flights of two hours or less, which represent about 80 percent of all domestic trips.

Before they visited lawmakers' offices, the supporters received from Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate transportation appropriations subcommittee, his written agreement with their goals, although he left open the question of whether he might offer somewhat different legislation.

The two coaches who matched wits in the New Peach Bowl last December will meet again this weekend when North Carolina State faces Wake Forest in Atlantic Coast Conference football action.

Dick Sheridan, looking to get the Wolfpack out of an early-season rut, meets Bill Dooley, who is in his first year as head of the Demon Deacons but who led Virginia Tech to a 25-24 victory over N.C. State in the New Peach Bowl.

Sheridan hasn't opened a season with two losses since 1979, when Furman lost its first five games, but won five of the next six. He said he isn't about to panic over the Wolfpack woes.

"The tendency in athletics is if something is not going well, a lot of people just junk what they're doing," he said. "We've basically used the same offense and defensive system for many, many years and have confidence in it and an investment in it. We believe in execution. We don't believe in throwing the baby out with the bath water."

Sheridan did say the performances in practice are not getting to the field on game day, and that has him puzzled.

"My first impression is (the coaches) aren't doing the job preparing them," he said. "It's shaken our confidence a little. We haven't been in that situation in a while."

Wake Forest is 1-0 under Dooley after last weekend's 24-0 victory over Richmond. Saturday's game also marks Dooley's first ACC action since 1977, when he was the head coach at North Carolina. He points to the Wolfpack quarterback situation as the source of its problems — Erik Kramer is gone and his replacement, Shane Montgomery, didn't take a snap last season and was fifth on the depth chart.

"Any time you lose a quarterback like Erik Kramer, it takes a lot out of your offense," Dooley said. "State's young quarterbacks are going to get better."

Dooley feels far more confident with his own quarterback, Mike Elkins.

"Mike is a very unselfish player," he said. "He's a good passer and he handles the offense well. He can see things out there on the field. I'm glad we have him."

North Carolina, which might be without tailback Torin Dorn for the second straight week, travels to Georgia Tech in the only other ACC battle.

Outside the league, No. 8 Clemson meets No. 18 Georgia in Death Valley, West Virginia is at Maryland, Virginia Tech is at Virginia and Vanderbilt visits Duke in the league's only night game.

The Tar Heels finished tied for second in the ACC last year, and to attempt to improve on that mark, they must start on the road.

"Every game is obviously important," North Carolina football coach

Dick Crum said. "But this is an especially big one for a couple of reasons. We need to get back on the right track after last week and it's an Atlantic Coast Conference game."

Crum admits that he will have to step up his running attack, but the absence of Dorn may make that difficult. Freshman Kennard Martin will take Dorn's place.

Only twice in Crum's tenure at North Carolina have the Tar Heels been shut out — last weekend's 28-0 loss at Oklahoma and a 31-0 beating by Georgia Tech in 1985. Bobby Ross, the new head coach at Georgia Tech, doesn't expect the same result this time.

"Carolina used to be somewhat one-dimensional. They used to be a running attack type of football team, offensively speaking," Ross said. "But now they've changed. With Mark Maye in there at quarterback, they have one of the premier throwing quarterbacks in the entire country. That presents us a problem."

Clemson is unbeaten after two games, but not without some problems. The Tigers have been plagued by penalties, 10 each in the two games.

"We're not a good first-and-25 ball team," Clemson coach Danny Ford says. "I don't know anybody who is. If we can't get 10 out of our system, maybe they could all hold on to somebody at the same time and get it over with."

Defensively, Clemson will have to stop a Bulldog offense which is averaging 388 yards per game en route to a 2-0 mark. The Tigers have shut down their two opponents, allowing 16.5 yards per game.

Maryland squeezed out a 21-19 victory over Virginia last weekend to even its record at 1-1, but Coach Joe Krivak says things just aren't clicking yet for quarterback Dan Henning.

"Maybe he feels added pressure to make things happen, rather than let them happen," Krivak said. "He just doesn't appear to be in sync like he was a year ago."

Virginia is winless after two starts and questions are beginning to arise regarding Coach George Welsh's decision to play two quarterbacks, graduate student Scott Secules and redshirt freshman Shawn Moore.

"Shawn has handled the passing game better than we thought he would coming out of preseason practice," Welsh said. "And he has the added dimension of being able to run."

Duke's last 3-0 start was in 1982, and it ended with a 6-5 season. First-year coach Steve Spurrier admits the two victories this season haven't come against top-flight competition, but he says it could be the stepping stone to a good year.

"We have not played real sharp yet, not a complete game," Spurrier said. "Hopefully, that will be to our advantage. When our opponents get better, we should rise to the occasion."

Gooden Rebounds To Hurl 'Best Game Of Career'

By The Associated Press

Dwight Gooden followed one of his worst starts ever with what he called "the best game of my career."

On Saturday, St. Louis tagged Gooden for six runs and five hits in two innings to send him to his earliest exit in 120 career starts.

Gooden returned to the mound Wednesday night to beat Montreal 10-0 with a three-hitter that kept the New York Mets 1½ games behind first-place St. Louis in the National League East. The Cardinals beat Pittsburgh 8-5.

Len Dykstra hit a grand slam and Darryl Strawberry added a two-run homer to support Gooden.

Gooden, 14-6, struck out 11 and walked two as he pitched his sixth complete game, third shutout of the year and 16th of his career. It was the 35th time in his four-year career that Gooden has struck out 10 or more batters in a game.

"I'd have to say that was the best game of my career," Gooden said. "I had command of all my pitches, I had good velocity and I was hitting my spots."

Catcher Gary Carter agreed. "Of all the games I have caught Dwight, this was one of the best," Carter said. "He had control of all three of his pitches. He really had his change working, too."

Gooden improved his lifetime record at night to 53-11, compared to 19-14 during the day.

"Dwight still had the effects of a head cold, but the additional rest helped," Carter said.

Elsewhere in the NL, San Francisco beat Houston 7-1, Philadelphia beat Chicago 8-5 and San Diego blanked Atlanta 3-0. Cincinnati and Los Angeles were not scheduled.

The Mets scored three runs on wild pitches, two by Montreal starter Charlie Lea, 0-1. Lea was making his first major-league appearance in three years.

Lea, called up from the minors last Saturday, lasted only one inning and was replaced after the first two batters reached base in the second.

Lea, who missed all of 1985 and 1986 while recovering from a torn rotator cuff, gave up four runs on four hits.

"His fastball and his arm were fine, but his other stuff wasn't together," Rodgers said of Lea. "He couldn't get his breaking ball over."

The last time Lea pitched in a game, Carter was the Montreal catcher.

"Charlie had a little more velocity tonight," Carter said. "He was able to run the fastball in."

Dykstra capped the scoring when he homered with the bases loaded in the eighth against Bob Sebra to give the Mets a 10-0 lead.

"I knew it was gone as soon as I hit it," Dykstra said. "It's always nice to hit one with the bases loaded, but it's especially nice when it's in a pennant race."

Strawberry, who was hit in the ribs by a Joe Hesketh pitch in the second, was removed from the game in the fourth. He was taken to the hospital for precautionary X-rays.

"Nothing's shown up on the X-rays yet, but it may be cracked and sometimes they don't show up right away," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "Right now it looks like he won't play through the weekend."

Cardinals 8, Pirates 5

Tony Pena's two-run double capped St. Louis' four-run third inning as the Cardinals beat Pittsburgh at Three Rivers Stadium.

John Tudor, 7-2, survived two solo home runs by Mike Diaz and was relieved by Ken Dayley in the eighth inning. Tudor is 5-1 since coming off the disabled list July 30 after breaking a bone in his right knee in April.

Two Cardinals — Jack Clark and Willie McGee — now have at least 100 RBI and Terry Pendleton has 92. The last NL teams with three 100-RBI men in a season were the 1970 Chicago Cubs and Atlanta Braves.

Giants 7, Astros 1

Dave Dravecky pitched a four-hitter and Will Clark hit a pair of two-run homers as San Francisco beat Houston at Candlestick Park for its fifth straight victory.

The Giants took a 7½-game lead over idle Cincinnati in the NL West and the third-place Astros fell 8½ games behind.

Dravecky allowed three singles and Gerald Young's first major-league home run, with two outs in the sixth inning. Dravecky, 10-10, won for the seventh time in 10 decisions since the Giants acquired him from San Diego on July 4.

Houston starter Mike Scott, 15-12, who retired the last 26 Giants he faced on Sept. 7, allowed three home runs in five-plus innings, the first by Eddie Milner leading off the game.

Phillies 8, Cubs 5

Jeff Stone's three-run pinch double off Chicago reliever Lee Smith capped a seven-run Philadelphia seventh inning at Veterans Stadium.

Trailing 4-1, the Phillies put together their biggest inning of the season, sending 11 men to the plate and taking advantage of three straight walks by Smith, including one to Greg Gross with the bases loaded. Stone, pinch-hitting for pitcher Mike Maddux, 2-0, opened the inning with a walk.

Juan Samuel singled and Milt Thompson hit into a force play, sending Stone to third. Stone scored on Von Hayes' single, making it 4-2 and Smith, 4-10, yielded a two-run double to Mike Schmidt to tie the score.

Three walks by Smith pushed across another run, setting up Stone's double.

Padres 3, Braves 0

Mark Grant pitched a two-hitter for his first major-league shutout and Benito Santiago extended his hitting streak to 20 games with a run-scoring single in the first inning as San Diego beat visiting Atlanta.

Grant, 7-7, acquired from San Francisco in a mid-season trade, also had a career-high nine strikeouts en route to his second complete game.

Boone Sets New Record

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Call it durability, call it toughness — Bob Boone set a record with it.

Boone crouched down behind the plate Wednesday night against the Kansas City Royals in his 1,919th game as a catcher, breaking the record for games caught set by Hall of Famer Al Lopez.

It gave the soft-spoken, play-with-pain Boone a sense of history.

"The number is irrelevant. I don't know what the number means," he said. "I don't know where it's going to end. What is relevant to me is the last couple of years when I saw the people I passed on the top 10 or 15 on the list. All of those catchers, who were not only outstanding catchers but outstanding players ..."

"I think what's special to me is the fact somewhere my name will be linked to Mickey Cochrane, Gabby Hartnett, Johnny Bench, Yogi Berra and Al Lopez. To me, I think that's something very special because I don't think of myself in the same category as those people."

Boone's offensive statistics may deny him a place in the Hall of Fame.

Reagan Launches Celebration, Calls For Unrestrained Judiciary

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — President Reagan called for an independent and restrained judiciary today as he joined in celebrating the bicentennial of the Constitution while the Senate weighs the views of his Supreme Court nominee on the nation's basic document.

In a speech at Independence Hall, Reagan acclaimed the framing of the Constitution 200 years ago as a milestone "that would profoundly and forever alter not just these United States but the world."

"In a very real sense, it was then — in 1787 — that the revolution truly began," he said. "For it was with the writing of our Constitution... that the hopes and dreams of the revolutionists could become a living, enduring reality."

Reagan did not directly refer to the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on his conservative nominee to the Supreme Court, Judge Robert H. Bork, who has argued that judges must not substitute their views for those of the framers and ratifiers of the Constitution.

Related Stories, Photos On B-6

But Reagan did say: "Checks and balances, limited government — the genius of our constitutional system is its recognition that no one branch of government alone could be relied on to preserve our freedoms. The great safeguard of our liberty is the totality of the constitutional system, with no one part getting the upper hand. That is why the judiciary must be independent. And that is why it must also exercise restraint."

Reagan, whose support for forces fighting Marxist governments in Nicaragua and elsewhere has aroused controversy, also invoked George Washington and said the first U.S. president "knew... that the guiding hand of providence did not create this new nation of America for ourselves alone, but for a higher cause — the preservation and extension of the sacred fire of human liberty. That is America's solemn duty."

On Wednesday, speaking at a Capitol ceremony honoring the Constitution, Reagan said, "Times have changed, but the basic premise of the Constitution hasn't changed. It's still our blueprint for freedom."

Reagan quoted Daniel Webster, James Madison and Grover Cleveland and invoked the memory of Washington in his three-minute talk. He declared that — as Cleveland said 100 years ago — the principles of the Constitution "have met every need and national peril."

Reagan led the Pledge of Allegiance at Wednesday's tribute, called "A Celebration of Citizenship." Moments later, thousands of red, white and blue balloons were released over the Capitol.

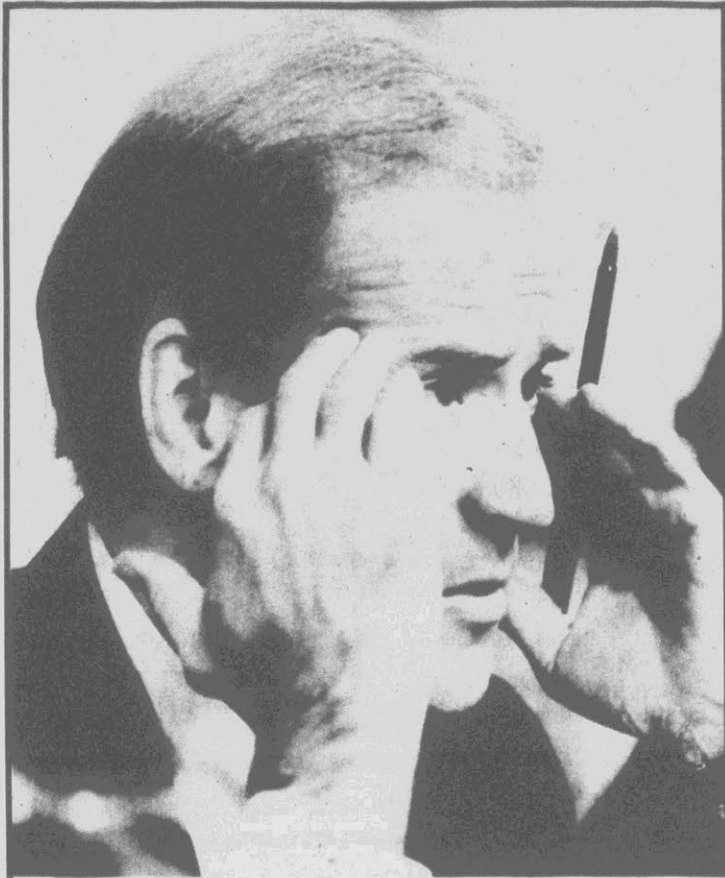

"All of us have an obligation to study the Constitution and participate actively in the system of government that it establishes," the president said. "And there is no better time than right now, during the next four years of the bicentennial, to rededicate ourselves to the Constitution and the values it contains."

Arguments over the Constitution were also expected in Philadelphia. Events scheduled included a discussion on "Women and the Constitution," a forum on the relationship between the Constitution and American blacks, and a parade including such diverse organizations as gay rights and anti-abortion groups.

In a later speech at a fund-raising lunch for Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., Reagan predicted that Bork will be confirmed, that the next president will be a Republican and that the GOP will regain control of the Senate in next year's elections.

"Whoever is the Republican presidential nominee in 1988, our candidate will be a darn sight better than any one of the pack vying for the other party's nomination who want so much to take us back to the failed policies of the past," he said.

"In these next 15 months," he added, "party unity will be essential. And there is much left to do: Confirming Bob Bork on the Supreme Court; accomplishing real, credible budget reform; seeing to our national security, and supporting those who struggle for freedom."

PLAGIARIST? — Senate Judiciary Chairman Joseph Biden of Delaware, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president, admitted today he had committed plagiarism as a first-year law student. ## Biden Admits Plagiarism As First-Year Law Student WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential hopeful Joseph Biden admitted today that he committed plagiarism in his first year in law school, but decried as "frankly ludicrous" the current controversy over his failure to credit others for parts of his campaign speeches.

The Delaware senator released his law school records, saying "I did something very stupid 23 years ago" but had expunged the wrong by retaking the course.

Biden also admitted several mistakes in failing to credit others for parts of his rhetoric in recent speeches.

He said he did not know that one section of a California speech in February used a quote from Robert Kennedy without credit. "It was my mistake," he said.

Biden said he will continue to use rhetoric from British Labor Party Leader Neil Kinnock — which he was criticized for using without attribution — and said a dispute over where he got those quotes was just "a matter of extra exuberance."

The chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee said "it is no coincidence" that this controversy broke out as he began to chair the intense hearing on President Reagan's nomination of Judge Robert Bork for the Supreme Court.

Biden said he did not know who had been spreading information about the sources of his rhetoric, but said he had heard it might be Democratic or Republican opponents.

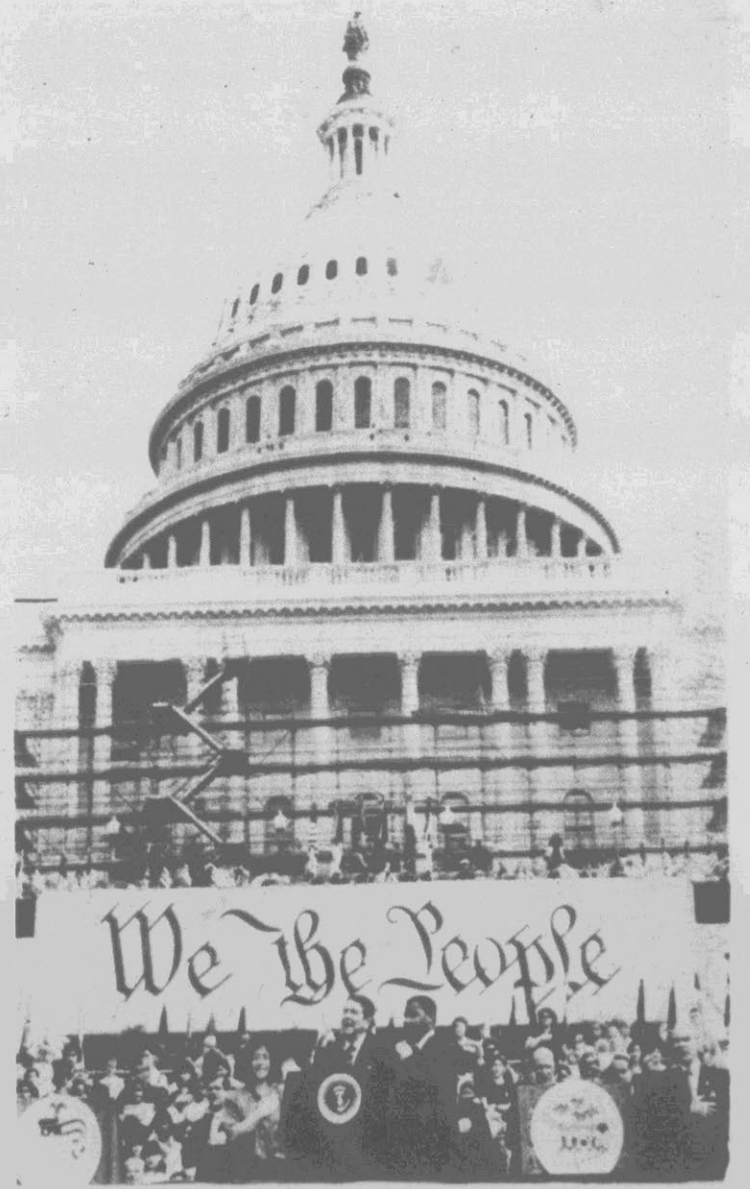

He revealed that he discussed the law school plagiarism with the members of the Senate committee on Wednesday.

'Star Wars'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 58-38 today to restrict tests of President Reagan's "Star Wars" system to make sure the trials comply with the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

The vote, which went generally along party lines, was the first major decision as the Senate writes a Pentagon budget bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. It settled a fight that had touched off a Republican filibuster and kept the bill off the Senate floor for the past four months.

The decision was on a motion to table, and thus kill, a proposal stripping the restrictions out of the bill, meaning they remained part of the legislation.

Police, ECU Officials Developing Plan To Prevent Student Clashes

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville police and East Carolina University officials have proposed a plan they hope will prevent police-student clashes such as occurred on Biltmore Street last month, according to Nelson Staton, interim assistant chief of police.

On Aug. 29 police broke up an unauthorized block party involving ECU students on Biltmore Street between Fifth and Fourth streets. Three arrests were made, and some students claim the police used excessive force in those arrests.

The proposal involves a mutual aid agreement, better student identification and liaisons between city police and ECU public safety, Staton said.

Under the mutual aid agreement, city police could give ECU public safety officers authority to make arrests off campus in special situations.

The second part of the proposal calls for Greenville police to try to eliminate on-site arrests except in extreme cases. Instead they would take students' identification cards and refer them to proper university authorities. Students would then face the university's Honor Board, the judicial branch of student government.

The final proposal would have an ECU public safety officer serve as a liaison with the city police and ride with them when they are called to a situation involving students.

Staton said the third proposal might also make it easier to identify students. In addition, students might respond better to campus police who represent the authority of the university, he said.

Staton said he, interim Police Chief Randy Nichols and the city attorney met with Ron Speier, associate dean of student affairs, SGA President Scott Thomas, top ECU public safety officers and other university officials on Sept. 2 to develop the plan.

Staton said he was pleased with the results of the meeting. "I think they (the proposals) are going to be kind of proactive measures rather than reactive ones," he said.

Noise permits and the role of alcohol in the incident were also discussed, Staton said. He said Biltmore Street residents did not qualify for the noise permit they applied for, and that they had never formally applied to have the street blocked off.

According to Brenda Saulter, head of the records division, representatives of the group picked up the proper application, but it was never completed and returned. Staton said officers found the application at the site, filled out by students and signed "Chief Big Mouth."

He said the group felt last year's change in the drinking age to 21 may mean more parties like this one since many students can not drink in bars.

ECU legal advisers are looking at the proposals and will report soon to the city attorney, Staton said.

Staton said an internal investigation into students' allegations is nearly complete. Witnesses have been interviewed on tape, he said, and transcripts from those tapes will

Wright Hints At Contra Cease-Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright today raised the possibility that a Central American cease-fire could take effect before a scheduled Nov. 7 deadline and said that U.S. humanitarian aid should be continued for Nicaragua's Contra rebels until at least that date.

A cease-fire "may occur prior to Nov. 7," Wright said, adding that he had spoken to the leaders of two Central American countries in the past week. He did not specify which leaders.

"If that does occur, obviously food, clothing and medicine should be supplied to those people (the Contras)," he told reporters.

Wright, D-Texas, confirmed that he had reached "agreement in principle" with House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois to include about $3.5 million in humanitarian Contra aid.

POW Balloons Floated On River

NAKHON PHANOM, Thailand (AP) — A group of Americans seeking U.S. prisoners of war in Indochina today floated plastic bags down a river with messages offering $2.4 million to defectors who bring POWs with them.

The seven Americans, led by former U.S. Rep. Bill Hendon, R-N.C., had wanted to send 2,500 balloons over the Mekong River into Laos today and Friday. But a dozen policemen detained them when they arrived in the border town of Nakhon Phanom, 375 miles northeast of Bangkok.

"This river goes for 700 miles to the ocean. It passes through Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam, the very countries where our men are being held," said Elizabeth Stewart, a Washington, D.C., attorney whose father was shot down in Indochina 21 years ago.

Other members of the group also lost family members during the Indochina war. About 2,400 are still listed as missing in action, or MIA, and 544 of these were lost in Laos.

The balloons were to have carried the plastic pouches with offers — in Laotian and Vietnamese — of a $2.4 million reward for anyone who whisked an American POW out of Communist Indochina.

The reward offer also includes a cartoon of an Indochina peasant secreting an American out of his homeland and getting a bar of gold in return.

Friday's launch was to have coincided with ceremonies in the United States marking a national POW-MIA Recognition Day.

Officers who detained the Americans escorted them to the provincial police headquarters, where they were shown a letter from the Interior Ministry forbidding the balloon launch.

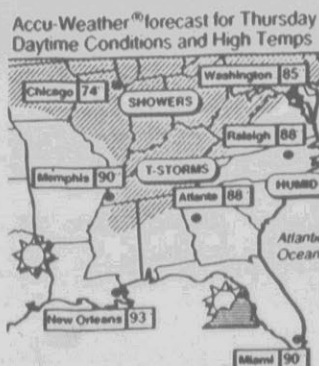

But after discussions, the police allowed a river launch. Three MIA family members dropped the bags into the Mekong and tried to prod them towards the main current with sticks and by pushing water forward with their hands.

After the group was detained, Robin Owen Bell of Fuquay-Varina, N.C., whose father was listed as missing in action in Laos in 1968, broke down and cried when reporters asked him to comment on the aborted balloon launch.

Hendon proposed the alternate

Education Students Hold Mass Session

In a show of strength and a display of confidence in the future of teaching, more than 500 undergraduate elementary and middle grades majors and students seeking special certification from the East Carolina University School of Education met this week in a revival of the traditional departmental class meetings.

Along with information about deadlines, dates, procedures and aspects of the elementary teacher education program, the students were also told of the role ECU plays in preparing elementary education teachers for school systems in North Carolina.

"We are the largest producer of certified public school instructors in North Carolina," said Dr. Charles R. Coble, dean of the school of education. "The elementary education department alone produces more teachers than 39 other institutions in North Carolina who produce teachers."

Another reason for the mass meeting, according to Dr. Patricia C. Terrell, chairman of the department of elementary and middle grades education, was to permit newer students and those of other classifications to hear questions and answers from a cross-section of the school.

"Some of the sophomores are interested in the advance of things that they will later be interested in as seniors," Dr. Terrell said. "They will also have a better idea of what the department has to offer."

Students were given information about scholarships, certification, interviews, student teaching and some of the programs available from cooperative education to elementary education students. Presidents of the student Middle Grade, Intermediate and Early Childhood Clubs were on hand to report on their club's activities and offerings.

In addition to 730 undergraduates enrolled in the elementary education program, the department serves 600 graduate students.

Michelle Richardson, Middle Grade Club; Laurie Beck, Intermediate Club, and Stephanie Culbertson, Early Childhood Club. The gathering was a revival of the traditional departmental class meeting. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Tony Rumble).

Fatal Cave-In

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — A construction worker installing utility pipe at Carowinds Theme Park died when a 10-foot deep trench caved in and trapped him for 25 minutes Wednesday.

Ronald Weldon McDowell, 49, of Paw Creek suffocated under the crush of almost 2 feet of dirt, York County Coroner Jim Chapman said.

The accident occurred at the construction site of Whitewater Falls flume ride on the park, which straddles the North Carolina-South Carolina border.

Recall

WILMINGTON (AP) — A formal complaint filed with the state superintendent of public instruction has started a legal process that could result in the removal from office of Pender County school board member Brenda Rivenbark.

A Pender County resident has filed a formal complaint against Mrs. Rivenbark with State Superintendent of Public Instruction A. Craig Phillips, Associate State Superintendent William Peek said. The complaint charges that Mrs. Rivenbark was involved in some "wrongdoing" in connection with grade changes a high school principal made to allow her daughter to pass two classes.

The school board recently reinstated the girl's failing grades. The complaint offers no proof of the charges against Mrs. Rivenbark, Peek said. He would not specify what "wrongdoing" she is accused of committing.

Lawsuit

RALEIGH (AP) — James S. "Jack" Gregory, fired in June as sports director of WPTF-TV, has filed a lawsuit accusing the station's corporate owner of breaching a contract and intentionally subjecting him to emotional distress.

Gregory filed suit in Wake County Superior Court against Durham Life Broadcasting Inc., the owner of WPTF-TV. In the complaint, Gregory said his termination and outbursts by the company's general manager had been "unprivileged, willful, malicious and made and done with the intent to cause ... severe mental pain and distress."

Gregory said in the complaint that he had been unable to find work in his field, and he asked for compensatory and punitive damages in excess of $10,000.

Wildlife

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — North Carolina must continue efforts to restore and protect its water resources or face the loss of some of the most extensive estuaries in the world, Gov. Jim Martin said Wednesday.

Martin told the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies that the Albemarle and Pamlico Sounds are among the areas with problems.

"This water resource has been giving us clear signs that it needs help," he said. "We have recently begun a 5-year, $5 million study of this estuarine system. Through the state and federal study, we hope to learn what we need to know to improve the water quality, reduce the nutrient levels and restore the vast estuaries that are so important to us."

Inversion

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials say an atmospheric inversion may have been responsible for a sewer smell over downtown Raleigh Wednesday.

"The wind probably brought the odor in from a pulp mill," said Bryson Jenkins, public information officer for the Division of Environmental Management. "There's nothing around here that emits that type of odor."

"It's kind of like you had a skunk in a football stadium," she said. "It doesn't take very much to clear the whole place."

Mike Sabones of the National Weather Service said an inversion happens when a warm patch of air hovers over the cooler ground, trapping pollutants. As the ground warms, the air mixes and the inversion disappears.

Mrs. Jenkins said the closest paper mill is about 80 miles away from Raleigh.

John Paul Is Standing Firm On No Women Priests, Abortion, Dissent

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leaving U.S. bishops with a firm directive to bring their independent-minded flock into line, Pope John Paul II turned his attention today to a city where dissent is as much a part of the landscape as the Golden Gate Bridge.

Before his arrival in San Francisco, where Jews, feminists and homosexuals planned protests, the farmlands and missions of Monterey awaited the papal entourage.

"I'm going for the same reason the others are going. I'll get good advice, guidance, and learn how to be a better human being," said Martha Zendejas, 24, a farm worker who is being given the day off to see the pope at an outdoor Mass this morning in Monterey.

The message which John Paul gave to 320 bishops assembled at Our Lady Queen of the Angels Seminary on Wednesday was not new: He said no to women priests; no to divorce; no to contraception, and no to those who disagreed.

"We have more work to do to convince people on what they should do," said Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, who had told the pope that Americans were accustomed to questioning authority.

"Dissent from church doctrine remains what it is, dissent," John Paul said. "As such it may not be proposed or received on an equal footing with the church's authentic teaching."

"It is sometimes claimed that dissent ... is totally compatible with being a 'good Catholic' and poses no obstacle to the reception of the sacraments," the pope said. "This is a grave error ..."

"I don't think the pope is saying everybody who practices birth control stop going to communion, leave the church, get out of our way," Archbishop Daniel E. Pilarczyk of Cincinnati said after the session.

The bishops were blunt in their messages to the pope. They portrayed American Catholics as energetic, involved in their church and unafraid to be skeptical.

Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco said the bishops "recognize that we cannot fulfill our task simply by an uncritical application of solutions designed in past ages for problems which have qualitatively changed or which did not exist in the past."

Bernardin told the pope: "We live in an open society where everyone prizes the freedom to speak his or her mind."

Bernardin alluded to the dissension that has developed in the American church in cases such as that of the Rev. Charles Curran, who was ousted from Catholic University in Washington for questioning some of the church's teachings on sex.

"When someone questions how a truth might be better articulated or lived today, he or she is sometimes accused of rejecting the truth itself or portrayed as being in conflict with the church's teaching authority," he said.

He said it was painful to be cast as the Vatican's adversary. "We must be able to speak with one another in complete candor, without fear," he said.

Pilarczyk said the church is running out of priests, in part because of the rule of celibacy.

Archbishop Rembert G. Weakland of Milwaukee described the "pain on the part of so many competent women today who feel they are second-class citizens in a church they love. That pain turns easily to anger and is often shared and transmitted to the younger generation of men and women. Women do not want to be treated as stereotypes of sexual inferiority."

The pope dealt firmly with each point of controversy:

— "Women are not called to the priesthood ... the teaching of the church on this point is quite clear."

— Homosexuals are entitled to pastoral care, including an explanation of the church's teaching "which by its nature is unpopular" — that homosexual acts are sinful.

— On contraception, "Those couples who choose the natural methods perceive the profound difference between anthropological and moral — between contraception and natural family planning."

— More priests are needed, but prayer, not a change of the rules, "remains the primary way to success."

The meeting with the bishops dominated a busy day, which continued with a talk to elementary school students.

Lorena Vega, 14, was so caught up in the emotion of the moment that she cried. The pope reached out to her.

"He came up to me, hugged me, kissed me, told me he loved me and that we'd pray together," she said. She was still crying 10 minutes after John Paul had gone.

SECRET LOVE — Famed artist Pablo Picasso had a secret love affair with Parisienne Gabrielle Depyre Lespinasse, the House and Garden magazine reports in its October issue. ## Historian Reports Secret Picasso Love

NEW YORK (AP) — Pablo Picasso devoted a series of sketches and paintings to a secret lover with whom he was having an affair while his avowed lover was dying from tuberculosis, according to a published report.

House and Garden, in an article released Wednesday, said Picasso had the affair in 1915-16 with Gaby Lespinasse, a Parisian woman who eventually rejected him and married American engraver and poet Herbert Lespinasse.

The article was written by John Richardson, an art historian and friend of Picasso's from 1949 to the early 1960s who is writing a four-volume biography of the painter.

The magazine received permission to publish the art works given to Miss Lespinasse during the affair. The collection, owned by William McCarty Cooper, will be exhibited for the first time in November at the Kunstmuseum in Basel, Switzerland.

On the frame of a drawing dated Feb. 22, 1916, was a scrap of paper inscribed, "I have asked the good God for your hand," according to Richardson.

Richardson said Picasso had "hitherto shown no interest in marriage" and always denied a belief in God. Richardson said it was "a denial that this heartfelt little prayer once and for all contradicts."

In a blue watercolor, titled "The Provençal Dining Room," Picasso wrote in French:

"Gaby my love my angel I love you my darling and I think only of you ... To take your mind off things look at the little dining room ... you know how much I love you ... 'Til tomorrow my love it is very late at night with all my heart Picasso."

Other handwritten inscriptions were erased by Miss Lespinasse before they were sold in the late 1950s, leading Richardson to conclude they were erotic.

"In several cases, the last words — de tout mon coeur (with all my heart) — and the artist's signature are all that remain," Richardson said.

The affair with Miss Lespinasse, who used her future husband's name before marrying him, was kept secret even from Picasso's close friends, Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas.

Richardson said this may have been because Picasso was supposed to be deeply upset about his lover Eva Gouel, who was dying of tuberculosis, or because Miss Lespinasse was "involved" with Lespinasse.

Miss Lespinasse was born Gabrielle Depyre in Paris in 1888 and was 27 when she met Picasso, who was seven years older.

Richardson said it was clear Picasso, who later married twice and

Strip Search

WILMINGTON (AP) — A Pender High School teacher conducted a strip search of more than 30 boys in a ninth-grade physical education class earlier this month in an attempt to find a gold necklace that a student reported stolen, school officials say.

The teacher had the boys strip to their underwear in a school locker room and then took each boy to a private area "to show the teacher that he did not have anything in his shorts," Superintendent Haywood Davis said Wednesday. The teacher had hoped to find a gold necklace that a student said was stolen during the class, Davis said.

Two other teachers witnessed the search.

Davis said the search was "totally out of order." He would not name the teacher but said he is a "good" teacher with a "good deal of experience."

The teacher has apologized to the students, and Pender High Principal Rowe Sawyer has called all the students' parents to apologize, Davis said.

Strike Likelihood Is Increasing

NEW YORK (AP) — With the deadline for an NFL players strike less than a week away, the rhetoric on both sides is escalating. So is the likelihood of the second walkout in five years.

The owners flatly rejected Wednesday the latest union proposal, with chief negotiator Jack Donlan describing it "very, very discouraging," and calling a strike next Tuesday "a very good possibility."

Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, agreed.

"Oh, yeah, there's going to be one because they forced it," Upshaw said. "It's like they had an agenda to force a strike and break the union. They started this way back in April when they sent out memos to the owners (on the non-union player contracts)."

Donlan suggested that the only way out would be an impartial mediator.

But the NFL Players Association flatly rejected a mediator, noting that having one has never worked in previous strikes. And one union source, asked if the strike deadline might be extended while negotiations continue, replied: "That's not going to happen."

No further negotiations have been scheduled, and Upshaw was scheduled to meet today with Lane Kirkland, executive director of the AFL-CIO.

Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, said he thought full negotiations would be futile at this point without mediation, although he called Upshaw in hopes of scheduling a one-on-one meeting. Dick Berthelsen, the union's chief counsel, said he relayed Donlan's message to Upshaw, but there was no other response from the NFLPA.

As it stands now, the strike will begin following Monday night's game between the New York Jets and New England Patriots at Giants Stadium. That was also the site of the meeting between the Green Bay Packers and New York Giants, the final game before the players walked out for 57 days and seven games in 1982.

The union's latest proposal came Tuesday, when it backed off its call for total free agency and limited it to players with more than four years' experience.

But Donlan, who suggested it looked like the union proposal was inviting a strike, dismissed it as little more than a variation on the original NFLPA position, first put on the table April 20.

"A cursory look at the proposal showed that it was little more than a restatement of their opening proposal with a few cosmetic changes," Donlan said at a news conference Wednesday. "This proposal is not a framework for settlement. We can't get there with this proposal."

Upshaw, meanwhile, continued to look for someone in management to make a deal. "We don't need a mediator, we need a negotiator," he said.

Berthelsen added: "The way the NFL works, the mediator becomes a kind of shield for management."

Upshaw has said several times he would accept Commissioner Pete Rozelle as a deal maker but not as a neutral mediator. He has also spoken with Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers and a member of the Management Council's executive committee.

Rooney, with the help of Paul Martha, a lawyer and former Steeler, was instrumental in ending the 1982 strike.

In another development Wednesday, the Management Council disclosed it had filed with the National Labor Relations Board an unfair labor practice complaint against the union, accusing it of refusing to bargain in good faith. Council officials conceded, however, that the action was little more than a token gesture that could not have any effect before the strike deadline.

Although the two sides met 17 times between April 20 and the Aug. 31 contract expiration date, little progress was made. On Aug. 31, the NFLPA executive committee set a strike date of Sept. 22, a decision ratified eight days later by the 28 player representatives.

The two sides met for 4½ hours Sept. 3 and again last Saturday and Sunday with little indication that they were anything but far apart.

NFL owners, meanwhile, say that in the event of a walkout, they plan to play with "whatever players are available."

League sources say that only about 100 players have been signed to the $1,000 retainers being offered by teams, indicating that some owners are hoping to convince their roster players not to walk out. On Monday, Upshaw flew to San Francisco to discuss the situation with the 49ers, one of the teams reportedly considering not striking.

Under the owners' plan, the teams would miss a week, then resume play with the fourth week of the schedule.

Donlan, however, said he knew little of those plans.

"I'm concentrating on just one thing and that's getting a settlement," he said. "My head is into contract proposals."

On free agency, the owners have insisted on sticking to the framework of the current system under which only one player has changed teams in a decade.

They have liberalized the system in their current proposal, although it provides that a team that signs a fourth-year player for $240,000 — $10,000 above the current average salary — would be required to give his old team a No. 1 draft choice.

But Donlan also expressed frustration with the players' demand that the pension program be doubled from $12.5 million to $25 million. Owners have proposed to increase both pensions and severance across the board on an escalating scale.

CBS Looks To Alternatives

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

CBS says it is considering numerous possibilities, from auto racing to triathlons, to fill broadcast time if there is a strike by National Football League players next week.

NBC is keeping quiet about its plans.

"We have no comment on strike contingency plans. We'll just wait and see," NBC spokesman Kevin Monahan said Wednesday. "We hope that they continue to negotiate and a strike is averted."

During the 1982 strike, ABC showed movies during the "Monday Night Football" slot and likely would do it again.

CBS spokesman Mark Carlson said on Wednesday there "are a whole lot of things under consideration," if the NFL tried to play in the face of a strike.

"We probably are obligated to do games if they (the NFL) can play them," Carlson said.

"There are all sorts of things being investigated," he said. "If there are no games, we are investigating possibly doing College Football Association games, moving them from Saturday to Sunday."

In order to do that, the colleges would have to agree to such a move.

The current network contract with the NFL has provisions for rebates to the networks if there is a strike.

NBC had no comment on reports that the PGA offered its weekly tournament finals to the networks.

Ted Higuera pitched a six-hitter for his sixth victory in as many starts, while Glenn Braggs' seventh-inning triple broke a 4-4 tie and climaxed a three-run seventh inning against New York.

Braggs tripled off reliever Tim Stoddard, 4-3, as the Brewers rallied from a 4-2 deficit in the seventh. Stoddard's wild pitch brought in the first run of the inning, and Robin Yount added an RBI single.

Among the hits allowed by Higuera, 17-9, were homers by Bobby Meacham and Don Mattingly. Higuera walked three and struck out six while pitching his 13th complete game, five of them in winning his last six decisions.

Mariners 5, Indians 3

Seattle beat Cleveland when Rey Quinones hit a two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning.

Quinones' 11th homer, off Sammy Stewart, 4-2, followed a walk to Edgar Martinez with one out.

Bill Wilkinson, 3-3, was the winner in relief, pitching two-thirds of an inning.

In the fourth inning, Cleveland's Joe Carter stole second base, his career-high 30th, to become the ninth major leaguer to reach the 30-homer, 30-stolen base plateau. Carter, who has 31 homers, is third player to reach the milestone this season, joining Eric Davis of Cincinnati and Howard Johnson of the New York Mets.

Why others always compare themselves to Mercedes-Benz.

Those makers who commend their cars as substitutes for a Mercedes-Benz know what they are doing.

There is always a market for the product that is a bit less technologically ambitious, a bit less mature in design, a bit less quality-obsessed. Because these shortfalls allow it to be sold for a bit less money. And there are always more people in search of the lowest price than there are people in search of the best automobile.

But for those whose personal automotive equation is purer—who cannot abide second best—this argument is no argument at all.

It is to serve the demands of people like these that authorized Mercedes-Benz dealers exist. Their language is our language. Their standards are our standards. And their idea of automotive excellence is ours: Mercedes-Benz.

Other makers will continue to compare themselves with Mercedes-Benz, in hopes that this reflected glory may add the lustre their own names lack. It may even bring crowds of people to their showrooms.

And of these, some will drive away with a so-called bargain. Meanwhile, at our showrooms, discerning individuals will be driving away in their Mercedes-Benz.

Like no other dealers in the world.

The Constitution Ratified

The construction of a new form of government for the United States under the Constitution had taken months of hard work, argument and compromise. Yet the task was not complete; nine of the 13 states had to ratify or accept the new document in order for it to become law.

Leaders in the various states took sides. The Federalists wanted the constitution accepted as drafted, while anti-Federalists had points of opposition.

Even some of the men who helped write the document were opposed to its passage. Some refused to sign and others left Philadelphia before the constitution was finished, thinking the work useless.

The task of getting state conventions to ratify was largely taken on through "The Federalist," a series of articles printed in newspapers and written by James Madison, John Jay and Alexander Hamilton.

After nine months of dialogue, the ninth state accepted the new constitution and it became law on June 21, 1788.

North Carolina was the 12th state to ratify in 1789 after the Bill of Rights had been added. Finally in 1790, Rhode Island, which had not sent delegates to help construct the Constitution, became the last of the states to accept the new form of government.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Sept. 18

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Show more affection for those who mean a great deal to you. It is not a good idea to try forcing your opinions on anyone. Formulate a good plan first. Drive carefully today.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Morning is the best time to solve a troubling family matter. Don't let a friend hurt your feelings with comments which are unintentional. Don't entertain guests.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't be annoyed by gossip or criticism which should be ignored. If going on a trip, leave early since heavy traffic will annoy you. The evening brings happiness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Get a financial difficulty settled early. You'll feel confused and distracted later. Look around your home for possible repairs, but don't begin them.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): A charming attitude this morning will get you some favors you need. It would be most unwise to criticize a friend this afternoon. Avoid socializing this evening. Get some rest.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't let your happiness over a private matter prevent you from handling outside duties. Take no unnecessary risks. Avoid hurting your mate's feelings.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): An early morning surprise will please you, but your mood could be brought down by friends. Postpone those social engagements; relax and get some rest.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): The morning is the best time to ask for favors from a superior. Handle a credit matter in a most precise and businesslike manner. Don't lose your temper today.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Reply favorably to a letter from afar. Later, continue operating sensibly, and make no changes in your routine. Postpone that little trip until a later time.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Settle an outstanding account, and show those you deal with that you keep your word honorably. Should your mate feel frantic, you must remain calm and poised.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't become involved in any alliances which you don't feel comfortable about. If you must handle any public affairs, strike while the iron is still hot.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You can accomplish a great deal today if you begin with home improvements and then move on to outside matters. Stay at home this evening and be happy.

The male ego received a setback at the recent Central American Championships. The award for the best defense went to a woman, Vivian Cahn Speyer of Colombia. Incidentally, her father at 69 still plays well enough to merit a place on Colombia's Open team.

North-South reached three no trump on an unrevealing auction, and Ms. Speyer made the normal lead of her fourth-best heart. East won and returned the suit to West's king, and a third heart cleared the suit as East parted with a spade and declarer let go a club.

The outlook was not too bright. It seemed the best shot was to play East for both missing club honors—a line that would have succeeded. However, there was one extra chance, and declarer went for it. At trick four she cashed the ace of diamonds, and West's queen looked like the answer to a maiden's prayer.

Suddenly it seemed an impossible contract was about to come home. By finessing the nine of diamonds, declarer could make four diamond tricks, three spades and a trick each in hearts and clubs. With the location of the ten of diamonds "marked," declarer gave no thought to any other line. She confidently led a diamond to the nine, and West as confidently won the ten and cashed three more heart tricks for a two-trick set.

The play of dropping the queen in such a situation is not new. Finding it at the table, however, is something else, and fully justifies the award.

House Passes Bill Curbing Textile Imports; White House Veto Likely

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A plan to curb textile, apparel and shoe imports, fresh from gaining House approval, still faces what sponsors concede is a hard fight to win enough support to override an expected presidential veto.

"We have an uphill battle," Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., said after Wednesday's 263-156 vote. "But we can do it. I'm not telling you it's going to be easy, but it's possible."

The House approval vote was well short of the two-thirds needed to overcome a presidential veto. And the administration, highly critical of the measure, made it clear an override vote would be needed if the bill is to become law anytime soon.

"If this bill ends up on the president's desk, a veto is inevitable," U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter said in a statement. He called the bill "public policy-making at its worst."

Congressional opponents said the size of the vote spelled curtains for the measure, which has been a major focus of the trade debate for more than two years. They said a veto override was now beyond hope for textile forces.

"There's just no way that they can do it," said Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee's trade subcommittee and a leading opponent of the textile bill.

The Senate has not acted thus far on the bill, which would limit other countries to 1 percent annual increases in textile and apparel imports and freeze shipments of non-rubber footwear at 1986 levels.

Textile forces, however, are expected to win easy Senate approval of the legislation, which is a modified version of an import restraint bill that won congressional approval in 1985 only to be vetoed by Reagan. An override attempt failed last year.

Consumer costs of the measure are unclear. An industry study said it would add 1 percent to the average price tag. A report released by the Washington-based Institute for International Economics on the eve of the vote said current restraints cost $20 billion a year and that figure would double by 1996 under the legislation.

In the three-hour debate, lawmakers dusted off familiar arguments.

Farm lawmakers said the measure would guarantee swift retaliation against U.S. exports which provide jobs in agriculture. Some Pacific Coast lawmakers also said employment on the docks would suffer.

"This is not a bill whose time has come — oh, no," said Rep. John R. Miller, R-Wash. "It is a bill that is past its time and should be defeated."

Rep. Elizabeth J. Patterson, D-S.C., declared it was not "in the best interest of the United States to lose over 300,000 jobs since 1980 ... to have 10,000 textile plants close."

"It is not in the interest of the United States to be importing textiles and apparel from Iran at the same time that country is threatening American sailors in the Persian Gulf," she said.

Rep. James A. Traficant, D-Ohio, said the Reagan administration is to blame for not being tougher with Asian trading partners.

He said Reagan "won't be satisfied until he has a full-grown rice paddy on the east lawn of the White House."

Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., whose constituents include two major shoe importers, declared that the textile industry was attempting to dictate to consumers.

"What right do you have to legislate what the American people can put on their feet?" he said.

Milliken Supports Curbs On Imports

ATLANTA (AP) — Roger Milliken, who has built one of the nation's largest private companies, continues as the textile industry's public defender because "I have a role to play in the industry."

But, "I don't talk about my company," the 72-year-old chairman and chief executive officer of Milliken & Co. said Wednesday.

Spartanburg, S.C.-based Milliken releases no information about its sales or operations, but textile industry observers estimate it has annual sales in excess of $2 billion, second only to Burlington Industries.

A recent leverage buyout of Burlington, however, will likely result in Milliken taking over as the nation's largest textile company.

Milliken is chairman and founder of the Crafted With Pride in U.S.A. Council, a trade group which sponsors a multimillion-dollar advertising campaign with celebrities touting the "Made in U.S.A." label.

He is also a key advocate of legislation limiting textile imports that passed the House Wednesday. The bill would permitting each country a 1 percent increase over 1986 levels of shipments of textile goods and apparel to the United States and a 1 percent increase each year thereafter.

Milliken, in Atlanta for a trade show, has been conducting interviews with reporters to discuss the textile and apparel industries and the problems they face.

That is an about-face from his normal operations when even interviews that would likely result in positive coverage are declined.

Asked if such a public posture is uncomfortable, Milliken said, "I don't think it's ever uncomfortable when you're defending something you stand for."

And Milliken stands for U.S. stores

selling U.S.-made apparel manufactured from U.S.-made cloth, even if it means raising trade barriers.

"I happen to be very optimistic that you're going to see the textile bill go all the way through," Milliken said in an interview at his company's display at the 1987 Bobbin Show.

The bill passed the House 263-156 Wednesday and is expected to win Senate approval next month.

President Reagan vetoed a similar textile import bill two years ago, and an effort to override the veto fell just short.

Milliken said threats of a veto for the latest bill are coming from "the president's people," not Reagan himself.

"The administration and free traders are shocked" because the trade deficit has not improved as they had believed, Milliken said.

The U.S. Commerce Department says textile and apparel imports reached $21.2 billion last year, when the overall trade deficit was $156.2 billion.

Last month, the department said the trade deficit in July was $16.5 billion, and $168.7 billion for the first seven months of the year.

"We've got to realize the country can't go along as the greatest debtor nation in the world and expect foreign nations to buy up our debt and pay for us living beyond our means," Milliken said.

"If nothing changes, by 1995, the country will have a foreign debt of $1.5 trillion and a $120 billion debt service. That can't happen without total bankruptcy of our currency and our civilization."

"There's a growing resentment of our running this deficit which has allowed foreign nationals to keep buying up all our real estate," Milliken said. "I don't enjoy seeing foreign nationals buying up all the real estate in New York, and I hear of more and more people not appreciating it."

So, if you need a substantial loan for a car, a boat, a vacation, remodeling or even an investment, we can show you how to spread your payback period over a longer term with a home equity loan. And with a First Federal home equity loan, you may be able to retain your interest deduction, even under the new tax law.

When it's time to let your home pay you back for all your monthly mortgage payments, talk to the people at First Federal about a home equity loan. You'll be surprised at all the money you've been keeping in your house.

Sean Penn Released

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pugnacious actor Sean Penn walked out of jail today, released early for good behavior after serving more than half of a 60-day sentence for violating probation by punching a movie extra.

Penn, 27, wore dark glasses as he hurried out of the front door of the Central Jail shortly after 1 a.m. He was accompanied by his brother, Christopher, and an unidentified man. All wore black leather jackets.

Penn's early release was approved Wednesday because of good behavior during his custody.

Penn, the star of "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," "Bad Boys" and "The Falcon and The Snowman," served 32 days, the minimum possible for a 60-day sentence with time off for good behavior.

Deputy City Attorney Alice Hand, who prosecuted the actor, said she was satisfied with the shortened jail term.

'Laugh-In' Type Comedy Series Makes Debut On 120 TV Stations

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stand-up comedy is one of the most precise art forms and one of the most fragile, according to producer George Schlatter.

Schlatter, the man who gave birth to "Laugh-In" 20 years ago, has a new syndicated series called "George Schlatter's Comedy Club."

The show, which makes its debut on 120 stations this week, is a fast-paced mixture of comics and specialty acts in the quick-cut tradition of "Laugh-In."

"A joke is a melody," said Schlatter. "It's got a rhythm, a lyric and a thought. You have to understand it and it requires an audible indication of intellectual appreciation and an acceptance of the thought and delivery."

In other words, a joke must be delivered in a precise manner and the audience must laugh.

"The stand-up comic is the most vulnerable artist in the entertainment business," said Schlatter. "Nobody ever says to a singer, 'I've heard it before.' To a comic those jokes are precious and anything can throw him off. What he does is so perishable. You have to laugh at a comic. If you don't, he's dying and anything can disturb his rhythm."

He said he also sees comics as a release valve. "They express some of the outrage we feel," he said.

Schlatter has been working with comics since his days as a nightclub booker in Los Angeles and Las Vegas. One act he booked into the Frontier Hotel was Ronald Reagan and the Continentals. "It was his only nightclub appearance," Schlatter said. "He sang, he danced, he was wonderful."

Later, he produced such shows as "The Dinah Shore Chevy Show," "The Andy Williams Show," "The Judy Garland Show," "Laugh-In" and "Real People."

Schlatter is also preparing an ABC special saluting the 75th anniversary of Las Vegas.

The idea for the "Comedy Club," originally called "Laugh Machine," came before Schlatter's first annual "American Comedy Awards" on ABC last spring.

"I've wanted to do this show for as long as I can remember," he said. "All three networks turned it down. They said you can't do just comedy. This is built around an environment. It's not a club, it's not a studio. There's nothing to distract the comic."

Schlatter said, "If there's a show business phenomenon today, it's the comic. When I started I don't think there were more than 70 comics in the whole country. Today there are several thousand. And they're damned good. But there's no place for them in television except on Johnny Carson and David Letterman and pay television."

"There's a whole new breed of comics out there and they don't have a pipeline to mainstream television. That's one of the things hurting network television today. The new, exciting, innovative things are now happening on pay television."

Schlatter said the new show attempts to capture the essence of the comics, rather than having them burn up a five- or six-minute routine that took months to polish.

"It's a high-energy show," he said. "Sometimes we'll have 10 people on the show. Sometimes only four. We'll have some comics come back, but we don't have any contracts or any holds on any of them. The show draws them because they don't have an arena."

Schlatter said about three years ago he began preparing for the show by taping every segment of "The Tonight Show," "Late Night with David Letterman" and the pay cable comedy shows. He did so to build up a file of comics, who were entered into a computer file.

His daughter, Maria Schlatter, and Donn Hoyer, who had edited "Real People," are co-producers of the new show.

"Donn grew up in Montana and Maria grew up in Beverly Hills," he said, "so you have a combination of cultures there, plus my superannated compulsion to laugh at myself and everyone else."

Schlatter noted that unlike in the 1960s the current generation of comics are not into political humor. "They're mostly into lifestyles," he said. "Maria says it's because most young people felt betrayed by recent presidential administrations and left out."

He said "Comedy Club" sets up a form that he believes will allow the comics to emerge and become well-known, the way "Laugh-In" did with its unknown performers.

"Laugh-In" was probably the last breakthrough in form," he said. "There hasn't been anything new since then. But this new breed of comics grew up on that. They picked up the pace, the irreverence. Now they're saying, what's next?"

Gorbachev Forecasts Accord On Arms Pacts

By GARY LEE

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said today a U.S.-Soviet treaty eliminating medium- and shorter-range missiles should be achieved by the end of this year and could lead to another accord with the Reagan administration in early 1988 to reduce strategic weapons.

Gorbachev also used an article published in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda and the government newspaper Izvestia to propose a United Nations commission to monitor compliance with arms control accords and lessen military tension.

The article, billed as a major Soviet statement on global security as the U.N. General Assembly opened its 42nd session this week, coincided with the second day of talks in Washington between U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

U.S. officials said the discussions have "cleared away some significant obstacles" toward final agreement on banning medium- and shorter-range missiles. Shultz and Shevardnadze are expected to complete the current round of talks today.

Gorbachev suggested that West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's decision last month to forgo modernizing Bonn's 72 short-range Pershing IA missiles had improved the chances for a U.S.-Soviet treaty. "The government of the Federal Republic of Germany assumed a stand which is conducive to a certain extent," Gorbachev said.

In addressing the questions of verification and the West German Pershings, Gorbachev focused on the two issues Moscow has listed as key obstacles to the arms treaty under negotiation and indicated that both are resolvable.

By timing the release of his remarks on the final day of talks in Washington between Shultz and Shevardnadze, Gorbachev appeared to suggest that any details the two men could not resolve there could be worked out at a later date.

"The Soviet Union is proceeding from the premise that a relevant treaty could be worked out before the end of the current year," Gorbachev said.

In the most positive Kremlin assessment of the prospects for an accord to reduce strategic weapons, Gorbachev said, "This treaty on medium- and shorter-range missiles would be a fine prelude to a breakthrough at the talks on large-scale-50 percent-reductions in strategic offensive arms in conditions of the strict observance of the Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

"An accord on that matter could become a reality as early as the first half of next year," he added.

Previously, Soviet officials had said that the Reagan administration's insistence on proceeding with space weapons research damaged prospects for a strategic accord.

Gorbachev's statement reflected some of the optimism heard recently from Reagan administration officials on chances for a strategic weapons deal. Max Kampelman, the chief U.S. negotiator at the Geneva arms talks, recently said that there was good cause to believe new progress could be achieved on reducing strategic arms following the conclusion of a treaty to eliminate medium- and shorter-range missiles.

In an apparent attempt to allay concerns on both sides about the verification of such a "double zero" arms treaty and other agreements, Gorbachev said that "it could be possible to set up under the aegis of the United Nations a mechanism for extensive international verification of compliance with accords to lessen international tension, limit armaments and for monitoring the military situation in conflict areas."

According to a Soviet study, both sides' nuclear arsenals could be reduced by 95 percent without "disrupting security," Gorbachev said, adding, "We believe that the 5 percent should not be retained either."

Gorbachev's article, his first major appearance in nearly three weeks, was prompted by this week's opening of the General Assembly, the Kremlin leader said.

Among the other wide-ranging proposals he made were:

— A multilateral center for reducing the risk of war, with the U.N. headquarters to be linked up with offices in the capitals of the Security Council members. (Shultz and Shevardnadze have signed an agreement for risk-reduction centers in Washington and Moscow.)

— More use of U.N. peace-keeping forces in cease-fire observation and troop disengagement.

— U.N. cooperation in combating international terrorism.

Gorbachev also used the article to respond to President Reagan's challenge in a recent speech to reveal the Soviet defense budget, which has never been publicized. A comparison of the levels of defense spending by the United States and the Soviet Union should be possible in two to three years, he said.

But he also dismissed the views on maintaining security popularly held in the West as "outdated." He called the concept of nuclear deterrence "the road to an abyss."

Instead, he said, "It seems that it is more correct to say that a world war has been averted despite the existence of nuclear weapons."

Arroyo Leaving Cabinet

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino announced today that her closest adviser, Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, was leaving the Cabinet, but said the government would "hold fast" to ideals he represents.

Arroyo's removal was long demanded by business executives and military groups, including one that led a bloody aborted coup on Aug. 28. The military claimed Arroyo was sympathetic to Communist rebels, a charge he denied.

The announcement came after Mrs. Aquino met with Gaston Sigur, U.S. assistant secretary of state for East Asia and Pacific affairs. He gave her a letter from President Reagan reaffirming U.S. support of her government.

Mrs. Aquino called the Arroyo's departure "our loss and the nation's." The 61-year-old human rights lawyer was widely believed to be the second most influential figure in the administration after Mrs. Aquino.

Arroyo resigned along with the rest of the 25-member Cabinet on Sept. 9, but it had been expected many officials would be renamed to their posts.

Officials said the Cabinet resignations were aimed at allowing Mrs. Aquino to reorganize her government following the coup attempt, which plunged the 18-month-old administration into its gravest political crisis.

The president named Catalino Macaraig, Arroyo's deputy, as her new executive secretary. Before joining Mrs. Aquino, Macaraig, 60, was President Ferdinand Marcos' deputy justice minister and vice president of a mining company.

Mrs. Aquino also announced today that speechwriter Teodoro Locsin, who has also been criticized by the military, had resigned as special legal counsel. She said he would remain as a government consultant.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Aquino accepted four resignations, including those of Vice President Salvador Laurel as foreign secretary and Finance Secretary Jaime Ongpin. Laurel said he would refuse to accept another Cabinet post because of "fundamental differences" with the administration.

FAT MYTH

NEW YORK (AP) — The belief that exercise will change fat to muscle is a myth, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

Dr. Peter Francis, associate professor of physical education at San Diego State University, says: "Fat and muscle are two entirely different substances. Fat cannot change to muscle and muscle cannot change to fat. If a person with nicely developed muscle tissue stops exercising the muscle itself will become smaller (atrophy) from lack of use."

The bureau notes that if you stop exercising but maintain the same eating habits, you're likely to gain body fat. On the other hand, a person with a high level of body fat who begins an exercise program and proper eating habits, will lose body fat and gain muscle tissue.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, leveling off after the sharp drop of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.47 to 2,531.66 in the first half hour of trading.

But losers outnumbered gainers by about 9 to 8 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 487 up, 556 down and 465 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 28.63 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The government reported today that housing construction edged down 1.5 percent in August, the fifth decline in the last six months. The Commerce Department said that new homes and apartments were built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.58 million units last month, the slowest pace in more than four years. The August decline followed a small increase of 1.3 percent in July. That gain, however, had followed four consecutive monthly declines.

The weakness in housing construction this year has been blamed on a sharp jump in mortgage interest rates. Fixed-rate mortgages, which had fallen to a nine-year low of 9 percent in late March, have risen by almost 2 percentage points and stood last week at 10.9 percent.

Hospital Corp. of America rose 1 1/2 to 46 1/2 in active trading. The company, which is selling 104 of its hospitals to Healthtrust Inc., announced plans to buy back 12 million of its shares through a tender offer.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .16 to 176.35. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .64 at 352.13.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 36.39 to 2,530.19, bringing its loss over the last two sessions to 82.85 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 509 up, 1,014 down and 452 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 195.74 million shares, against 136.24 million in the previous session.

"If we do find that some inappropriate action was taken by our officers, the disciplinary action would not be public information," Staton said.

Following the meeting with university officials, Staton said, Nichols met with representatives of ECU fraternities and sororities to clear up questions about noise ordinances and permit applications. Four to five permits were granted for that next weekend, and there was no trouble at any of the parties, he said.

"I feel they (the fraternities and sororities) represented the university well," Staton said. "To my knowledge we had no complaints whatsoever."

The U.S. State Department said Wednesday that the balloon launch could hurt efforts to account for the missing. It said government-to-government cooperation was the most effective way of resolving the issue.

Bork Makes Third Trip Before Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork submitted to a third straight day of questioning today as a key undecided member of the Senate Judiciary Committee said he is not yet satisfied that the 60-year-old jurist deserves to be confirmed.

"I'm still not clear" on the rationale that Bork would rely on in deciding sex discrimination cases, as opposed to race discrimination, said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz. shortly before the nationally televised hearings resumed.

DeConcini said that mail to his Senate office is still running heavily in favor of Bork's confirmation, but less so than before the hearings began Tuesday. He said the mail is now about 2-1 in support of Bork, compared to 3-1 or 4-1 earlier.

Bork, whose nomination has set off a ferocious lobbying struggle between liberals opposed to his confirmation and conservatives who favor it, chatted amiably with Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., the committee chairman, before the gavel sounded.

Once the session began, however, Biden questioned Bork closely about his views on privacy and freedom of expression.

When Biden asked whether the Constitution provides a right to marital privacy, Bork replied, "I don't know, it may well." But Bork added that he agrees with "the concept and

The Turbo That's Going To Save You Up To $3,000

PRESENTING THE PEUGEOT 505 TURBOS.

Car and Driver recently described the 150-hp Peugeot 505 Turbo S as a car with "instant launch capabilities."

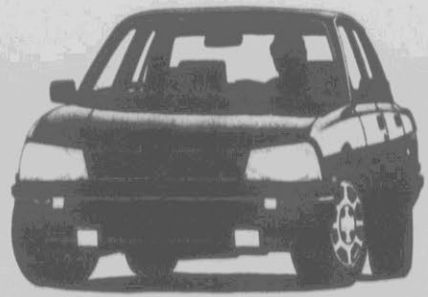

And now, these cars are about to rocket out of the showroom. Because until September 30th, you'll get as much as $3000* in cash when you buy a Peugeot 505 Turbo S sedan or wagon. You can take the money and run, or use it as a down payment. You can even use it as a down payment on a lease or financing.

But besides $3000, you'll also get a car with standard features and amenities (like ABS) only available from Saab and Volvo at extra cost, if at all.

So stop in for a test drive. You'll see what Saab and Volvo are worried about.

*See us for details. Manufacturer's suggested retail prices do not include destination, taxes and title charges.

One of ChemLawn's 800 Custom Lawn Care programs will help you get rid of weeds and make your lawn thick, green and beautiful, guaranteed.

ChemLawn's Custom Lawn Care offers many ways to weed out problems.

There are over 60 different weed types out there just waiting to sink their roots into a lawn. And, unfortunately, weed controls that work on some weeds are ineffective against others. Furthermore, the time of year and even the time of day many formulas are used determines their effectiveness against certain weeds.

ChemLawn realizes that knowing the differences in weed types is necessary for proper weed control. This is one of the reasons why our specialist examines your lawn thoroughly before treating it. He'll then recommend a custom lawn care program that's guaranteed to make your lawn thicker, greener and more weed-free, or your money back.

Your customized program will include weed controls that are right for your particular weed problem. Treatments that are properly scheduled and always applied at the right time. And, if you have any problems, your specialist will come back between scheduled visits at no extra charge.

Your specialist will also offer lawn care suggestions (such as watering frequency and mowing height) that will help your lawn protect itself against weeds. And, of course, nothing crowds out weeds more effectively than the thicker, greener lawn your full custom lawn care program guarantees.

It all begins with a free lawn analysis.

In order to evaluate your lawn's condition, a trained ChemLawn Specialist will take all the variables into account that may affect your lawn. He'll start by doing a complete lawn analysis, free of charge.

Your lawn analysis will cover not only weed problems, but soil conditions, grass type, and insect problems. Based on the results of your analysis, he'll then determine which of our customized programs is right for your lawn.

After your program begins, your ChemLawn Specialist will continue examining your lawn on an ongoing basis. He'll make sure your program keeps up with the changing needs of your lawn.

And, if you notice any problems, you can always call us. We guarantee your specialist will respond within 48 hours, free of charge, until the problem is solved.

ChemLawn values environmental safety as much as we value beautiful lawns.

Even as we work to enhance the beauty and health of lawns, trees and shrubs, ChemLawn sets the industry standard in protecting the environment and the health and safety of our employees and customers. The ChemLawn Program uses only materials which have passed scientific review of their safety and effectiveness. All pesticides used are registered with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and appropriate state agencies.

All ChemLawn applications equal or exceed the safety of lawn care products sold in retail stores. ChemLawn's liquid applications are applied in dilute solutions. This eliminates the need for customers to handle, mix or store concentrated materials in their homes and prevents the potential for accidents, misuse or improper disposal by homeowners.

Custom lawn care for half the price you'd think.

Most people think a professional lawn care service costs twice what it actually does. Which is why they're so surprised at how little our custom lawn care costs.

When you consider what you're getting: a customized lawn care program and ongoing service, not to mention all the personal time and effort you'll be spared, ChemLawn Custom Lawn Care is one of the best bargains you'll find this spring.

No one has a stronger guarantee.

ChemLawn guarantees to give you a thicker, greener, more weed-free lawn. If you have any problems, we guarantee to come back at no extra charge. What's more, we'll keep coming back as often as it takes, until the problem is solved. And, even after all that, if ChemLawn hasn't given you complete satisfaction, we'll still give you a complete refund.

So with ChemLawn Custom Lawn Care you get weeds under control. You get a free lawn analysis. And you get a guaranteed thicker, greener, more weed-free lawn. All you have to do is get the enclosed reply card into the mail.

First, you'll get a written analysis of your lawn's condition. It's free, and puts you under no obligation.

Your specialist is always there to help you with any problem that pops up.

CHEM LAWN GUARANTEES

'Wearer Of Many Hats' To Conduct Workshop

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Jeanette Thomas says she "wears several hats" in her employment by the Edgar Cayce Foundation of Virginia Beach, Va.

Mrs. Thomas, who will be in Greenville Saturday, is assistant to the president of the Cayce Foundation and to the president of Atlantic University, Dr. James Windsor.

Her reason for the Greenville visit is to conduct a workshop titled "Dreams and Their Role in Conscious Evolution." It is being held from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., with an hour lunch break, at Planter's National Bank's downstairs meeting room.

She is also administrator of records, acting as a research consultant to authors and other researchers in the Cayce readings. In this capacity, she acts as manager of a project to computerize the Cayce readings, a task she expects will take five word processors not less than four years to complete.

She has designed a new way of researching the readers, which gives statistical information on specific maladies or other subjects that Cayce addressed for different people for whom he did spiritual readings. For instance, one booklet that has come out of this method of research is on psoriasis, a skin disorder. Remedies most often recommended by Cayce for the many people who consulted him about psoriasis are given in the booklet.

Mrs. Thomas talked about the Edgar Cayce Foundation. Founded in 1948, it is the owner of the readings of Edgar Cayce, a man who diagnosed illness, made planetary and personal predictions, shared knowledge of history, and otherwise shared with others information he could not possibly know consciously. He did his readings while in a sleep-like trance and remembered little or none of it when he was awake.

Mrs. Thomas never worked directly with Cayce himself, but she worked seven years as assistant and confidential secretary to Gladys Davis Turner, who had been Cayce's personal secretary. She said that Mrs. Turner "was the records of the Edgar Cayce readings. Mr. Cayce lay on the couch and talked. She did the rest."

A fascination with the readings is what brought Mrs. Thomas unexpectedly into her work with Mrs. Turner. Soon after she and her husband, a masonry contractor, moved from Michigan to Virginia Beach, they joined a Cayce study group. Having been a real estate and insurance agent in Michigan, she was looking for a lighter work load when she moved south. So she was working as a volunteer office manager at a Friends (Quaker) School when a strange telephone call came. She was invited to interview for a job as the assistant to Mrs. Turner.

"I went there planning to be Mrs. Cool," she said. "I didn't think I qualified and I didn't want that kind of responsibility. But Mrs. Turner let me read one letter of Edgar Cayce and I knew instantly, "This is my work. I will never be anywhere else."

For the next seven years she shared the prodigious work life of Mrs. Turner. Mrs. Turner died in February 1986, and now it's all hers. "Mrs. Turner raised me in the work. I came up like a child," she said. "I don't have the direct experience with Mr. Cayce that she did, but I love it as she did."

Now, years later, she says of her work, "I feel like a kid at a picnic, doing exactly what I want to do."

In addition to giving workshop on dreams and their role in conscious evolution, Mrs. Thomas teaches massage according to the methods of Dr. Harold J. Reilly. She was in England recently to conduct a massage workshop and plans to go back next spring to conduct another just about the time she expects the English gardens to be the most beautiful.

In her dream workshop, she leads the audience in seeing how their dreams reflect the emotional and attitudinal changes in themselves that are a part of spiritual growth. She shares Cayce's advice about meditation, prayer, diet, exercise, spinal alignment, journaling and dream study as ways to grow spiritually.

A question and answer period will be held and those attending are invited to share one of their own recalled dreams. She emphasized that she is not a dream interpreter and the workshop is not about dream interpretation.

Co-Workers Control Cool, Leaving Other Person Cold

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I work in a three-person office. My two co-workers like the temperature "cool." However, what they consider "cool" is too cold for me. Consequently they are always switching the thermostat to regulate the temperature to suit themselves.

Today my fingers were so cold I had to put gloves on. (Ever try to type with gloves, Abby?) I complained to the boss, and he said, "If you are cold, put a sweater on — the other two workers are more valuable to me."

Any suggestions? — ONE AGAINST TWO

DEAR ONE: Now that you know how you rate with your boss, you have two choices: Dress for Siberia or find another job.

DEAR ABBY: I got married three months ago to a wonderful lady. I am 31 and she's 26. The problem: She insists on sleeping in the same space that I sleep in. I thought it was kind of cute at first, but now I am annoyed. She practically sleeps on top of me. I can't sleep with somebody touching me, let alone using me as a human pillow. She says she's not able to sleep any other way.

I have tried everything including begging and pleading; I've pushed her to one side of the bed only to wake up later with her on top of me again. I've tried cuddling with her until she falls asleep, then moving to another bed, but she awakens and comes over to join me. She slept on my arm one night and it was nearly useless for two full days!

We've had numerous arguments about this. I asked her what she did when she was single. She said she slept alone because she had to, and does not intend to sleep alone now that she has a man to sleep with — correction — sleep on.

If this keeps up, I may have to rent a motel room to get a good night's sleep.

What a way to start a marriage! I love her, but wonder if this woman needs some psychiatric attention. What do you think? — SLEEPLESS IN PALO ALTO

DEAR SLEEPLESS: Nowhere is it carved in stone that, once married, a person must give up his/her right to a good night's sleep to please the other. Your bride appears to be spoiled, selfish and immature. Buy her an in-flatable life-sized man to sleep on, and stand your ground. And yes, she does need counseling if she can't compromise.

DEAR ABBY: About 55 years ago, Will Rogers said: "What's the matter with this country? No country ever had more, and no country ever had less. Ten men in our country could buy the whole continent of North America, and 10 million can't buy enough to eat." — FRAN KROIS, ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR FRAN: Nothing is the matter with this country. It's the distribution that's out of whack. So what else is new?

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Engagement Announced

Carolyn B. Hoots and Dr. William R. Hoots Jr., both of Greenville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Rachel Elizabeth, to Donald Richard Oatfield, son of John Curno Oatfield of Louisville. An Oct. 17 wedding date is planned.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

MAKING MUSIC

CHICAGO (AP) — Americans enjoy playing their own music mostly for relaxation, according to respondents to a recent national survey by the American Music Conference, with headquarters in Chicago.

Of those polled, 96 percent indicated they play musical instruments because it's relaxing. Among other reasons: it's fun; it helps to relieve stress; it gives them a sense of personal accomplishment; it's a good mental exercise.

Personal

Josephine Wilson of Winterville and daughter have returned from a vacation in Freeport, Grand Bahamas.

Reception Held At Peace College

RALEIGH — A semi-formal reception was given for freshmen students recently at Peace College. Dr. S. David Frazier, college president, gave the welcome.

NOW Conference Opens Saturday

WINSTON-SALEM — The North Carolina NOW Conference will be held Saturday at the Winston-Salem YWCA starting at 9:30 a.m.

Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, will be keynote speaker. The conference title is "Taking the Power."

A panel of female elected officials will talk about their decisions to run, their campaigns and experiences serving in elected office. Patricia Ireland, vice president executive of National NOW and an attorney, will discuss current legal situations of American women.

Blue Jays, Tigers Get Just What Need For Wins To Remain In Deadlock

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Toronto Blue Jays and Detroit Tigers are showing they have more in common than a share of first place in the American League East for four consecutive days.

Both teams, whose 88-57 records are the best in either league, got outstanding performances from their ace pitchers and their cleanup hitters Wednesday night.

Jack Morris pitched a three-hitter and Alan Trammell drove in two runs with his 26th homer and a double as the Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox 4-1.

Jimmy Key shut out the Baltimore Orioles on six hits for seven innings and George Bell knocked in two runs, giving him a major league-leading 124, as the Blue Jays blanked the Baltimore Orioles 7-0.

"I keep plugging along and whatever happens, happens," said Trammell, whose 98 RBI from the No. 4 spot in the batting order is exceptional for a shortstop. "My success is somewhat of a surprise, I will admit it. I guess I never really dreamed that we'd be battling for first place with me hitting fourth."

Morris, 18-8, didn't allow a hit for the first five 1-3 innings. He allowed one unearned run, walked two and struck out four while pitching his 12th complete game.

"That's as fine a game as I've seen Jack pitch," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "You have to get to him early."

In other games, it was Seattle 5, Cleveland 3; Milwaukee 5, New York 4; Chicago 13, Minnesota 10; California 6, Kansas City 4, and Texas 4, Oakland 1.

The Blue Jays and Tigers will play each other in seven of their remaining 17 games. The seven games will be played from Sept. 24 through Oct. 4.

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said Morris would start every fourth day for the rest of the season, beginning Sunday against Milwaukee.

"It's a lot of pitching," Morris said. "I don't want to jeopardize my career, but I don't think I will."

Kirk Gibson hit a two-out single in the first inning, stole second and scored on Trammell's double, giving Detroit a 1-0 lead. Lou Whitaker hit an RBI double in the second and Trammell homered in the third.

The Red Sox got an unearned run without a hit in the fourth when Marty Barrett walked, stole second and scored on a sacrifice fly by Wade Boggs.

Boston starter Jeff Sellers, 7-8, gave up three runs on seven hits in five-plus innings.

Blue Jays 7, Orioles 0

Tony Fernandez had three hits and three RBI as Toronto kept pace with Detroit and handed Baltimore its ninth consecutive loss.

"There's no law against us not continuing like we have been," said Jesse Barfield, who is batting .424 for the Blue Jays in the last eight games. "It's just a fact that a few guys are starting to hit the ball who didn't hit it before, and the guys who have hit it consistently all year are continuing to do so."

Key, 17-6, struck out four, did not walk a batter and got the Orioles to hit into three double plays. Mike Boddicker, 10-9, gave up 10 hits and seven earned runs in 5 1-3 innings.

Toronto, which has scored 48 runs in its last five games, scored three times in the sixth inning for a 7-0 lead. Fernandez singled home two runs and later scored on a single by Bell.

Bell also knocked in Toronto's first run with a groundout in the first.

White Sox 13, Twins 10

Chicago swept its first three-game series from Minnesota since 1979, but the Twins stayed 3 1/2 games in front of Oakland and Kansas City in the AL West.

Harold Baines and Ozzie Guillen led a 16-hit attack with three hits apiece for the White Sox. Baines knocked in four runs with a two-run double and a two-run homer, while Guillen had three of Chicago's seven doubles and had three RBI.

The White Sox scored five runs in the fifth inning and seven more in the sixth to take a 13-3 lead, then held off late rallies by the Twins, who got home runs from Dan Gladden and Greg Gagne.

Homers by Baines and Greg Walker, whose 25th was a career high, highlighted the seven-run sixth that gave the White Sox four straight victories for the first time this season.

Rangers 4, Athletics 1

Texas kept Oakland from making up ground on the Twins as Charlie Hough pitched a three-hitter and Darrell Porter and Larry Parrish homered for the Rangers.

Hough, 17-11, who recorded his 11th complete game, walked three and struck out seven. Only one knuckleball got past catcher Geno Petralli, but it was his 34th passed ball of the season, a major-league record.

Oakland right-hander Dave Stewart, 19-11, failed for the second time in his bid to become the first 20-game winner in the majors.

Ejected From Game

Stewart allowed five hits in eight innings.

Parrish's homer, a solo shot in the sixth, was his 31st of the season, a franchise record and a career high.

Angels 6, Royals 4

Bill Buckner had three hits and drove in two runs and Ruppert Jones had two RBI for California Angels against Kansas City.

Greg Minton, 4-2, who relieved starter Chuck Finley, benefitted from Jones' RBI double in the sixth that broke a 3-3 tie against Bret Saberhagen, 17-9. DeWayne Buice went 2 1-3 innings for his 16th save despite allowing a bases-loaded walk to George Brett in the ninth.

The Angels added two runs in the

Vikes Seek Second Straight Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

D.H. Conley's Vikings have a chance to take a big step toward respectability Friday night when they play host to Farmville Central in another cross county tieup. Kickoff is set for 8 p.m. at Viking Field.

Last season, Conley defeated

Farmville, 12-6, and won only one other game the whole season. It also marked the first time that a Conley team had even defeated one from Farmville.

This year, Conley can equal its victory mark of a year ago with a second straight win over the Jaguars.

Conley is coming off its first win of the season, a hard-struggle 7-0 overtime victory over another county foe, North Pitt.

Rose High School, meanwhile, following its 21-0 romp over Terry Sanford of Fayetteville, has an open date this Friday while it prepares to enter the Big East wars.

The victory was a big one for the Vikings. "You've got to feel good about it," Coach Steve Craft said. "We feel like our kids put together four good quarters, plus the overtime. That was one of our goals (to put a whole game together) and we did it."

"Our defense did a tremendous job the whole game and while our offense didn't to what we wanted it to, you've got to give North Pitt some credit. They have a pretty good defensive team themselves."

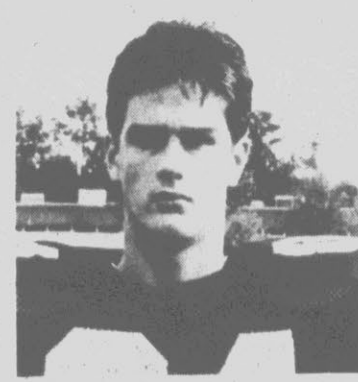

Craft said he felt fortunate to come away with the win. "I'm very happy that we didn't hang our heads when things went wrong, but just kept getting after that. I feel good about that."

Craft said that it was difficult to pick out individuals as standouts in the game. "After the game ended, someone asked who had scored the touchdown, and one of the kids said, 'We did,' and he was right. It was a true team effort."

Craft did, however, cite his defensive linemen for their play against the Panthers. They include defensive tackles Martin Patrick and Jason Hamby and guards tackle, Anthony Perry, Darryl Simpson and Kevin Daniels. "All of them were around the football all night long," Craft said. "We also got some big plays out of individuals, like Donte Williams on final play. And when North Pitt driving and Bronswell (Patrick) came through with big hit to cause fumble and stop their drive late in the game."

DHC's Martin Patrick

Farmville Central will present some different problems for the Viking defense. "They are a good inside and a good outside running team," Craft said. "You can't set up to stop them one way and not give away something at the other. You have to be prepared to play a total game against such a diversified team. They haven't thrown a lot, but when they have, it's been off the run, creating the passing game with the run, which makes it hard to get a handle on them."

Craft also cautions against the Jaguar defense. "They have good people and they move them around. (Gary) Moore is a as good a defensive player as he is an excellent offensive player. They have a good team concept with veteran people.

"This is a big game for us with the conference race staring next week. It's our last non-conference game before we start. I'm worried about Farmville Central, but I'm more worried about what we our, our execution."

Execution in the passing game also has to be an area of concern for Craft. The Vikings hit several receivers right in the hands against North Pitt, only to have them dropped. "We can only do the same thing we do every week as far as reps. We had some breakdowns as far as running patterns and we've worked on them. We have young receivers, and I think it's there, it's just a question of developing our confidence. It will come with game experience."

Rose coach Chip Williams was quite pleased with nearly every aspect of the win over Fayetteville Sanford. It was the first shutout against Sanford in 37 straight games, and the Rampants held the Bulldogs to only 70 total yards.

"I was pleased with the crowd and just glad to get our first home game in our own stadium," Williams said. The contest was played on Percy Daniels Field in the Farley-Minges Athletic Complex even through the stands on the home side of the field were still incomplete. "Nothing could have been better to have a good win like that on our own field in our first game," the coach said.

Williams said scoring 21 points against a team like Sanford was a good thing. "And in comparison to New Hanover (a 23-7 winner over Sanford the week before) our points came a good deal easier. That should give us some confidence as we go into our conference games. And the 87-yard run that Buddy Barnhill got off will probably a stadium record for some time."

Williams also noted that the Rampants have improved their downfield blocking, as evidenced by that on Barnhill's run. Jeff Mahoney, a wide receiver, threw the key block to open up the run.

"Defensively, we had a shutout and they didn't pick up too many yards. To shut them down as much as we did is a big plus for us," Williams said.

The kicking game was a good one for the Rampants, too. "We covered well, and we blocked another punt.

That's three in three games, and I thought maybe we could have gotten another one."

Punter Tom Moye also got off a booming 63-yard kick — all in the air — that helped keep Sanford in a hole in the second half.

If there was a sour note in the game, it was the fact that the Rampants suffered 17 penalties for over 140 yards. "After looking at the films, I'm not real concerned with that," Williams said. "Of course, we did make some mistakes and we've got to try and correct them."

With the open date, the Rampants are using the time to try and get over some nagging injuries or to adjust to them and to try and find a little depth. "We are still very thin in the offensive line, and I can't say that we've found any until we really get into a game and test it."

"Right now, we are just preparing for our conference games."

Williams said that the attitude of a minority of the players concerned him too. "They are living off the accomplishments of others and not concentrating on the job they have to do. The majority, however, are accepting what has come to them (a #8 ranking in the state) and working to improve."

Illini Hungry For Victory

The University of Illinois will be a hungry football team when it welcomes East Carolina's Pirates to Memorial Stadium in Champaign Saturday afternoon.

Kickoff in the game — the first-ever meeting of the Pirates and a Big Ten football team — is set for 4 p.m. Eastern time.

The Pirates go into the game with a 1-1 record, after losing to seventh-ranked Florida State, 44-3, this past weekend. Illinois comes in with an 0-2 mark, having fallen to nationally ranked Arizona State, 21-7. It was the home opener for the Illini.

While the Pirates were plagued by their own mistakes, turning the ball over six times, Illinois saw its hopes of victory vanish in the final period.

Illinois battled Arizona State to a scoreless tie in the first half, and then took a 7-0 lead before their foe rallied for three fourth quarter touchdowns.

For the Illini, it will be an opportunity to gain some revenge against the state of North Carolina. In their first game of the season, the Illini held a lead over North Carolina in Chapel Hill before the Tar Heels, sparked by a broken play on a punt, had a long run and got back into the game. The Heels went on to roll up a 34-14 win in that contest.

The Illini are paced by sophomore quarterback Brian Menkhausen, 6-4, 205. He has connected on 25 of 60 pass attempts for 253 yards, but has had five picked off.

His top target has been wide receiver Darryl Usher (5-8, 168, Sr.), who has pulled in five for 90 yards.

Leading the ground game is tailback Lynn McClennan (5-11, 190, Jr.), with 22 carries for 97 yards.

Top defenders include Mike Piel (6-5, 256, Sr. DE), with 18 tackles, including four for a total of 26 yards in losses, one a quarterback sack for eight yards; Scott Davis (6-7, 267, Sr. DE), with 11 tackles, four for losses of 14 yards and a 10-yard quarterback sack; Keith Taylor (5-11, 197, Sr. CB) with 10 tackles and four pass interceptions, returned 37 yards; and Gabriel de la Garza (6-2, 243, Sr. LB) with 12 tackles, one for a loss.

"Illinois has played two outstanding football teams the past two weeks in North Carolina and Arizona State," ECU Coach Art Baker said. "They should have gone into the locker room at halftime with the lead against North Carolina, and they were ahead of Arizona State, 7-0, in the third quarter."

"Their defense is quite possibly the strongest we will face all season. They are extremely big and strong."

U.S. Celebrates 200th Year Of Constitution

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Constitution, "the single greatest work of government the world has ever seen," is 200 years old today and its hometown kicked off a bell-ringing, flag-waving, star-spangled bicentennial birthday party.

"I promise you, the people are in for a terrific, terrific time," said Willard Rouse III, chairman of the organizing We The People 200 committee.

The day of superlatives began on a solemn note as Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Gov. Robert P. Casey helped lay a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Revolutionary War Hero near Independence Hall.

"This ground is as hallowed as those graves at Arlington National Cemetery," Weinberger said.

The ceremonies continued with the beginning of a $3.5 million, six-hour parade featuring 30 floats, more than 20,000 marchers and 1,500 white doves fluttering skyward. About 750,000 spectators were expected, including President Reagan.

Bands ranged from colonial-style fifes and drums to Dixieland, from bagpipes to kazooos. Marchers included 39 descendants of the signers of the Constitution, skateboarders from California, two 1,700-pound oxen and two teams of certified public accountants in blue business suits twirling briefcases.

Reagan, who led the nation's 68 million U.S. schoolchildren Wednesday in a televised Pledge of Allegiance, was scheduled to address the nation and ring the Centennial Bell atop Independence Hall.

Also beginning was a four-day picnic along the Delaware River for about 1 million people who are expected to consume 250,000 hot dogs, 50,000 hamburgers, 144,000 slices of pizza, 400,000 buckets of popcorn, 25,000 soft pretzels, 300,000 scoops of ice cream, 10,000 cotton candy cones, 25,000 pieces of Pennsylvania Dutch funnel cake, 500,000 sodas and 1,000 gallons of coffee.

This afternoon, former U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger was to ring the Centennial bell, cast from Revolutionary and Civil war cannon and modeled on the long-silent Liberty Bell.

His signal at 4 p.m., the hour the Constitution was signed 200 years ago, will trigger 200 seconds of bell-ringing around the globe for the world's oldest constitution, what Burger called "the single greatest work of government the world has ever seen."

That work, accomplished over four hot summer months, concluded with the signing of the Constitution by 39 of the 55 delegates who shaped it. It became law nine months later when New Hampshire became the ninth state to ratify it.

In another ceremony today, 214 new Americans from 41 countries were scheduled to take the oath of citizenship before another American institution, a baseball game between the Philadelphia Phillies and the Chicago Cubs.

Suong Dang, a 29-year-old Vietnamese refugee who came to the United States in 1981, was among those to be sworn in as a 247- by 122-foot hand-held U.S. flag was unfurled on the field for the Pledge of Allegiance.

"Before, I felt like I didn't have a country or a nationality. I was a nobody. Now, I'm an American," Mrs. Dang said. "I have a country of my own, an identity."

Other events include a black-tie celebrity gala and a $150,000, 30-minute burst of fireworks above the Delaware River after 592 spotlights illuminate the Benjamin Franklin Bridge linking the city with Camden, N.J.

Wednesday was preamble, a daylong history and civics lesson called as "Celebrate the Constitution Day."

In Philadelphia, 108 schoolgirls stood on the flight deck of the aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk to recite the Pledge of Allegiance. Construction workers in Boston put down tools and hard hats to join in. The New York Stock Exchange stopped trading briefly while traders waved flags and cheered.

"The Constitution is not a hollowed-out, dry piece of history. It's for the here and now," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd. "The Constitution is very much alive today. It lives for you and me, and if we keep it safe, for generations to come."

A New York City teach-in explained the Constitution, and red, white and blue lights crowned the Empire State Building. Long lines formed at the National Archives in Washington, D.C., to view the original Constitution.

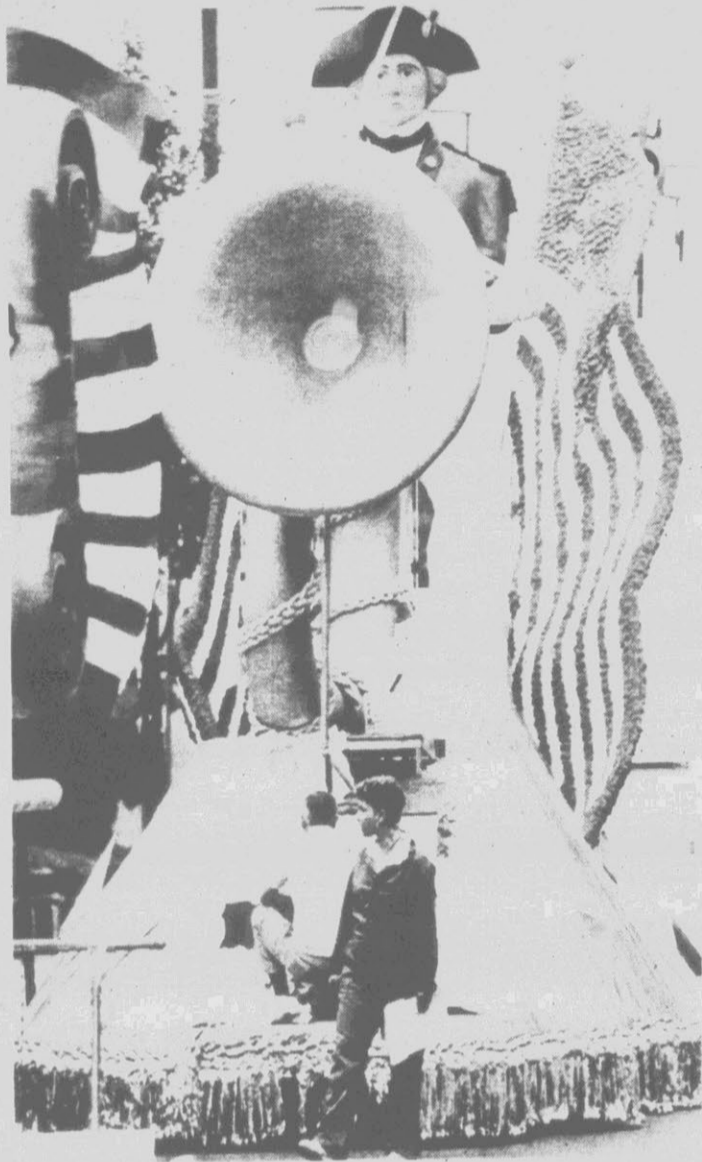

In South Bend, Ind., a dozen elementary school girls carried signs, one reading "Women Demand Equality," and marched in the halls because only boys were allowed to participate in a re-enactment of the signing of the Constitution, also an all-male affair.

Teacher Nancy Mills said the girls were excluded for authenticity and to highlight the struggle for women's rights. Principal Virginia Calvin said the protest "put some excitement in this school. It has brought real examination of the Constitution."

In Philadelphia, more than 600 descendants of the signers gathered at a champagne reception to sign each other's copies of the document.

Weldon Wilson, descendant of delegate James Wilson, who also signed the Declaration of Independence and served as a Supreme Court justice, brought eight relatives from Sherman Oaks, Calif.

"It will be great for my granddaughters to say 80 years from now: 'I was at the 200th anniversary of the Constitution,'" he said.

Painting Depicting Signing Of Constitution On Exhibit

By LISA LEFF
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

PHILADELPHIA — It has taken 200 years, but Independence Hall finally has an accurate picture of that historic hour when the Constitution was signed.

A 4-by-6-foot painting called "Signing of the Constitution" went on display Wednesday at Independence National Historical Park. Commissioned by three local chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the painting is believed to be the most realistic portrayal of the event to date.

"There have not been many artists through the years who have tried to depict that scene because it was a closed meeting," said Hobart C. Cawood, the park superintendent. "Not that many people knew what the room or the signers looked like."

In addition to secrecy, Ron Thomson, a U.S. Park Service ranger and historian, pointed out that artists have been hampered by creative interior decorating.

Early paintings were done after the room had been remodeled several times. During the last 20 years, historians and architects have restored the room to its original design.

Accuracy has also been hampered by popular notions of the Founding Fathers that "elevate these men to the highest levels," Thomson said. The portrait in the U.S. Capitol, painted in 1937 by Howard Chandler Christy to commemorate the Constitution's 150th birthday, mistakenly shows the signers in elaborate dress and striking lofty poses.

"These men were obviously important, but they had also been working in a hot stuffy room for four months. They would not have dressed up in those Halloween costumes," Thomson said.

The new painting shows the 39 men who signed the Constitution as well as the three delegates who refused to sign and a secretary. Artist Louis Glanzman strived to illustrate them all in more human terms.

For instance, one signer, William Samuel Johnson of Connecticut, was a notorious slob. Glanzman painted him with his vest unbuttoned and with a spilled snuff box in front of him. Another, John Dickinson of Delaware, had been ill the day of the signing, and he is shown slumping miserably in a chair.

Despite such attention to detail, the painting may not provide the last word on truth in art.

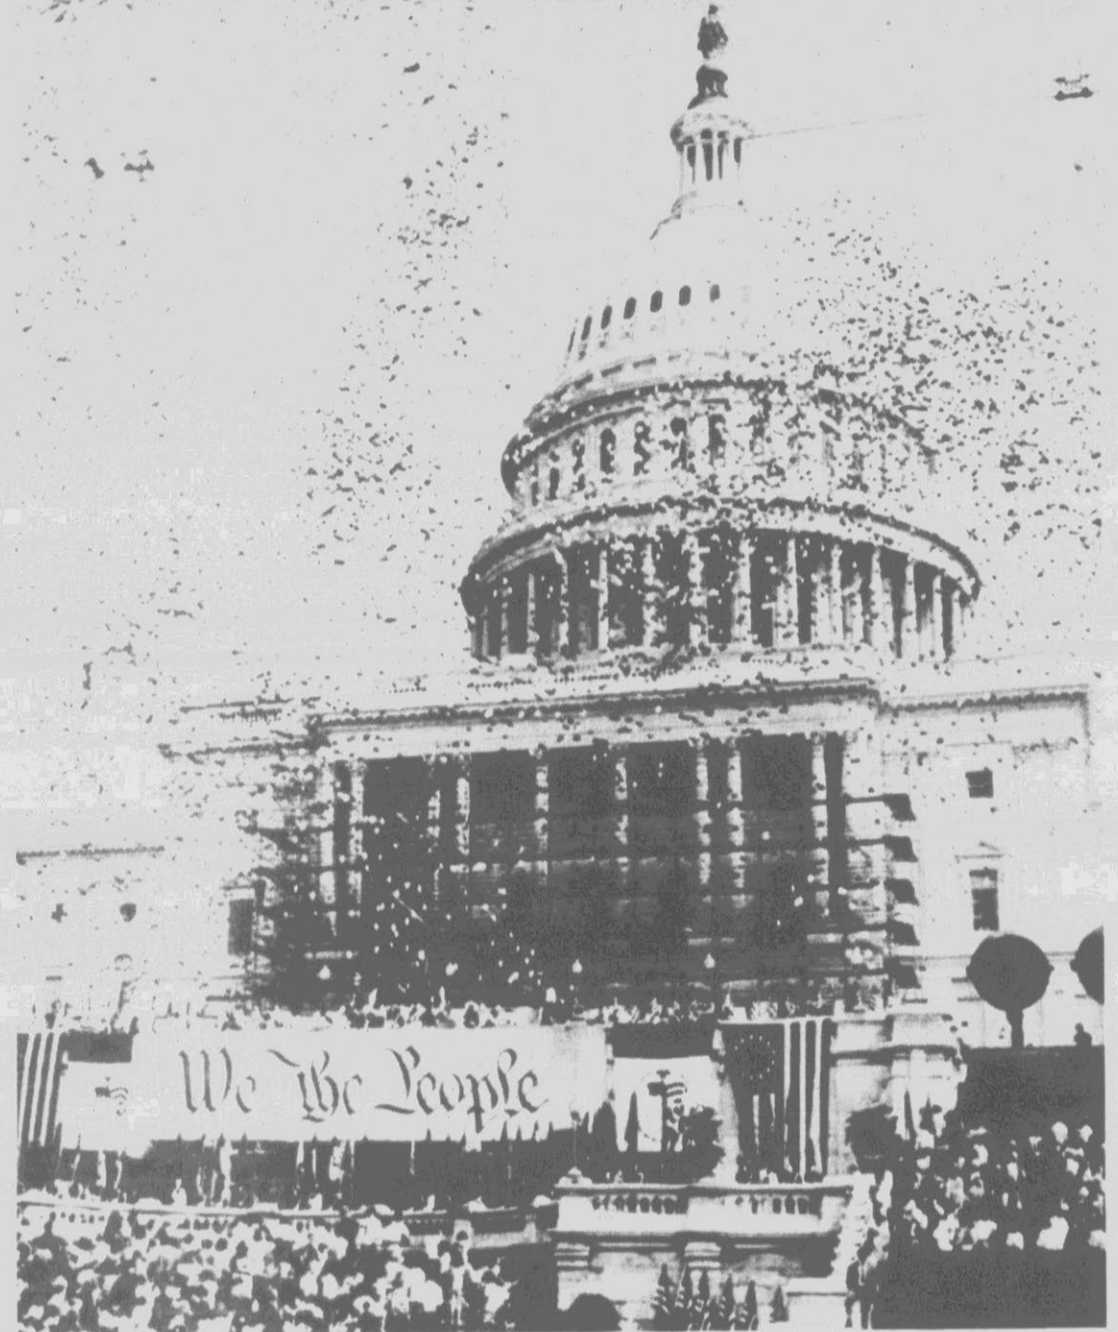

"We fully expect that in 50 or 75 years, someone is going to come along and say, 'Hey, you got it wrong,'" Thomson said.

The roughly 3,000 people who turned out Tuesday night to honor the First Amendment's freedom of religion clause provided some energy to what so far has been a comparatively low-key celebration.

Following a candlelight procession from 12 Philadelphia churches, choral and patriotic hymns floated through the air, still misty with rain, as the interfaith ceremony convened across the street from the Liberty Bell.

Among the more than 50 clergy members bowing their heads in communal prayer were a pair of Buddhists in flowing pastel-colored robes, some rabbis in top-hats and yarmulkes, a Sikh wearing a tuxedo and red turban, and a Greek Orthodox primate in black vestments.

The event's keynote speaker, the Rev. Leon H. Sullivan, author of the principles that have guided U.S. business dealings in racially divided South Africa, electrified the peaceful gathering with an impassioned indictment of America's "de facto segregation."

CELEBRATION — Some 100,000 red, white and blue balloons are released over the U.S. Capitol in Washington Wednesday after a Celebration of Citizenship ceremony was held. ## Europe Talks Up American Constitution Celebration

LONDON (AP) — As the United States celebrates the 200th anniversary of the signing of its Constitution today, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is helping launch a drive to save Benjamin Franklin's run-down house in London.

Elsewhere in Europe, talk shows and newspaper and magazine articles discussed the Constitution and its crises, and U.S. embassies arranged seminars on constitutional topics to mark the anniversary.

Although the Soviet Union has congratulated the United States on the anniversary, Soviet news reports used the occasion to attack the U.S. record on humanitarian issues.

Mrs. Thatcher was to kick off the effort to save Franklin's home with a visit there this afternoon with other invited guests.

Franklin lodged in the four-story brick house at 36 Craven St. when he was the representative in London of the Colony of Pennsylvania.

The house, behind Charing Cross railroad station near Trafalgar Square, was grand in Franklin's day, but the street now is frequented by winos, and the house narrowly escaped destruction in a fire started by squatters in 1984.

The house may be the last of Franklin's homes still standing.

The statesman and scientist moved in soon after he arrived in London in 1757, and left in 1775 when the first shots were fired in the Revolutionary War, ending his dream of keeping the American colonies in the British fold.

Instead, he helped draft the Declaration of Independence in 1776 and later the Constitution.

Since 1984, the building has been owned by a group intent on restoring it.

Stephen Sinnott, the Briton managing the effort, said nothing was done before because of a cash shortage but the group now has backing from the United States. He said the group also has the support of former U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger, head of the Federal Commission on the Bicentennial.

STANDING READY — The Liberty Bell and the tower of Independence Hall stand ready Wednesday night in Philadelphia for today's celebration of the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution. A parade that included President Reagan was planned between the two historic sites today. (AP Laserphoto)
