U.S. Plans To Destroy Seized Iranian Vessel

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said today that the Iranian vessel attacked by U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf would be "destroyed in the most effective way possible."

Weinberger made the comment during an interview aboard a U.S. navy frigate in the gulf, where he flew by helicopter hours after arriving in the region for a five-day visit.

"The ship will be destroyed. It certainly will not be handed back so that it can engage in further activities," the Pentagon chief said. Asked how it would be destroyed, he said, "In the most effective way possible."

He told members of a Pentagon-organized pool of reporters that the area where the 1,662-ton Iran Ajr was attacked by U.S. helicopters Monday had been "charted" and that "several more" mines were found.

Weinberger did not say when the destruction would take place, only that it will be announced "as soon as it's finished."

The United States said the Iran Ajr was planting mines in international waters of the gulf. Iran has acknowledged the boat was a naval vessel but denied it was sowing mines.

"When the locations are all known, and we're pretty close to that now, then the normal (mine) sweeping operations would commence. We're quite hopeful and reasonably confident that all the mines that this particular ship laid could be destroyed," Weinberger said.

Five Iranians were killed and 26 others taken into U.S. custody after the attack on the Iran Ajr. The survivors are to be returned to Iran on Saturday, U.S. officials said.

Weinberger described the alleged Iranian minelaying as "one of the grossest violations of which the Iranians have been guilty ... this putting

White House Gets Major Victories For Pentagon

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate handed the White House victories on two issues Thursday as it rejected an effort to halt underground tests of all but the smallest U.S. nuclear weapons and turned back efforts to delay the production of new chemical weapons.

The decisions came as the chamber worked toward approval of a bill authorizing the Pentagon's budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

By a 62-35 margin, the Democratic-controlled chamber voted to table, and thus kill, a call for a two-year moratorium on tests of all but the smallest nuclear weapons. The moratorium is sought by advocates of a comprehensive ban on all testing and is part of a companion House bill.

Later, the chamber killed, by a 52-40 margin, a proposed one-year moratorium on the final-stage assembly of new chemical weapons and it then voted 49-48 rejection of a separate proposal calling for a halt in production of the "bigeye" nerve gas bomb.

The nerve gas votes were the latest round in one of the longest-running fights over a weapons system during President Reagan's nearly seven years in office. Reagan has said the United States should begin producing chemical weapons for the first time since 1969.

Earlier, the Senate approved a series of minor, non-controversial amendments that were passed on voice votes.

Still pending was the question of whether to take action on President Reagan's Persian Gulf policy in the wake of the Navy's attack on an Iranian ship caught laying mines in the war-torn waterway.

The Senate has spent the past two weeks trying to write its version of a Pentagon budget bill and isn't expected to finish before next week at the earliest.

The bill proposes to authorize $302 billion worth of defense spending. When Senate action is complete, the bill will have to be reconciled with the different, companion measure passed last May by the House.

There are major differences between the bills. For example, the House proposed $288 billion for the Pentagon and also includes both of the controversial arms control restrictions, along with another provision that would halt most underground nuclear tests. Reagan strongly opposes all those proposals.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., introduced the proposal calling for a two-year moratorium on explosions of all nuclear tests above one kiloton.

Hatfield noted that open-air tests are now prohibited by the 1963 test ban and said both the United States and the Soviet Union should work

Everett Re-Elected Chairman At PCC

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt Community College Board of Trustees re-elected its current officers for the 1987-88 academic year during its meeting Thursday morning.

Clifton Everett will continue to serve as chairman of the board, while Kay Whichard will serve as vice chairman, and Mary Langston will serve as secretary-treasurer.

Trustees R.E. Davenport Jr. and Raymond Reddick took their oath of office during the meeting, after being reappointed by the Pitt County Board of Education and the Pitt County Commissioners, respectively. Carolina Moreno, Student Government Association president, also was sworn and will serve as an ex-officio member of the board.

Dr. Charles Dettor will succeed Willard Finch as assistant dean of instruction, Ms. Whichard, chairman of the personnel committee, reported to the board. Finch retires Oct. 31 after serving 23 years at PCC.

Dettor has taught biological science at PCC since 1983.

It also was reported that John R. Buck was approved by the committee as a biological science teacher. He is a graduate of East Carolina University and has about 12 years in community college experience.

The board approved the drainage project submitted by A.B. Whitley, building committee chairman. It also was briefed on the Humber Building renovations and initial drawings of the Whitley Building.

Budget resolutions of $691,302 for the 1986-87 fiscal year were adopted, thereby increasing the budget to $9,320,780 from the original budget of $8,629,477.

Budget resolutions for the 1987-88 year also were adopted with a total budget of $10,087,337.

SBI Checks Pitt Memorial For Data On Nurse Charged In Patient Death

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The State Bureau of Investigation has requested data from Pitt County Memorial Hospital in the investigation of a former PCMH employee charged with murder at another North Carolina hospital, officials said today.

Anthony George Shook, a 36-year-old nurse charged in connection with the death of a Lexington furniture inspector in N.C. Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, worked at Pitt County Memorial Hospital from May 28, 1985, until Nov. 9, 1985, PCMH President Jack Richardson said.

The Winston-Salem patient, Peggy Lou Epley, 36, died Oct. 9, 1986, because of "hypertension due to the withdrawal of medication and with contributing factors," said Dr. John Butts of Chapel Hill, the acting chief state medical examiner.

SBI officials visited Greenville earlier this week and asked to see hospital records, according to Richardson, who said Shook worked in various departments at PCMH, including its intensive care unit.

"When they (investigators) found out he worked in other places, they requested past patient record information," Richardson said. "We had a request from the SBI as part of their investigation to look at eight to 10 records."

Shook, who is being held without bond in the Forsyth County Jail, was arraigned Monday in Superior Court. He was an intensive care unit nurse when Ms. Epley died.

Ms. Epley was comatose and in critical condition in N.C. Baptist Hospital's intensive care unit when she died, the hospital said.

She was transferred to the hospital from a Davidson County facility after her kidneys failed following an operation for an intestinal obstruction, Butts said.

She was not expected to survive but the timing of her death aroused suspicions among hospital personnel. Shook was suspended the day of her death, authorities said. Police were called the following day.

Emily Hits Bermuda With 93 MPH Gusts

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Emily swept over Bermuda this morning with gusts up to 93 mph, causing some damage and shocking one forecaster who said its strength and speed "defies ... the concept of meteorology."

Emily's eye passed over Kindley Field in Bermuda at 7:45 a.m. EDT, according to the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

"We've had very high winds and quite a few of the roofs have blown off," Doreen Monk, a resident of Hamilton, Bermuda, told CBS News. "The cruise ship Atlantic apparently broke loose. They've now taken it out to sea to ride out the storm."

"All the businesses in town are closed. All schools are closed. Buses are not running. Ferry services are not running. They're now calling out all the public works crews to clear up all the damage."

"Generally, there's no major damage at the moment, just houses and properties have sustained roofs being lifted off and trees uprooted and things," David Bellingham, desk clerk at the Princess Hotel, told Associated Press Radio. He said the hotel was operating normally and guests were eating breakfast.

The island was hit with sustained winds of 70 to 80 mph and some gusts of 93 mph. Emily then continued racing northeast at an unprecedented 40 to 45 mph, according to Bob Case of the NHC.

"What has taken place in the last 12 hours defies our knowledge and the concept of meteorology," he said. A system moving forward at that speed should have weakened in force, not strengthened, Case said.

The hurricane should be well to the northeast of Bermuda by early this afternoon, he said. Earlier, Case said Emily did not threaten the U.S. mainland. A high pressure area over the Southeast was keeping the storm off the U.S. coast.

Case said the storm could no longer be called "purely tropical," since it

Dixon Will Head Chamber's Board

Phil Dixon, a partner in the law firm of Dixon, Duffus and Doub, was elected chairman of the board for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

Phil Dixon received a bachelor's degree in business administration from East Carolina University and his law degree from the University of North Carolina.

Dixon also serves as the school board attorney for the Pitt County School System, commission attorney for the Greenville Utilities Commission and local counsel and past chairman of the board of Peoples Bank & Trust.

Dixon is past chairman of the Pitt County Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Center, 1987 executive vice chairman of the Chamber, past president of the Greenville Noon Rotary Club and is vice president of the Greenville Museum of Art. He and his wife Mamie have three sons.

Other chamber officers elected were Chris McCoy of Planters National Bank as chairman elect, and Mavis Butts of Mavis Butts Realty as vice chairman of budget and finance.

Airport Funded

RALEIGH — State Transportation Secretary James E. Harrington has approved $250,000 in state aid for improvements to the Pitt-Greenville Airport. The airport's request for aid was recommended to Harrington by the N.C. Aeronautics Council.

Funds totaling $100,000 will be used for land acquisition, $4,000 for acquisition of a runway sweeper, and $146,000 has been earmarked for terminal expansion. The projects require a commitment of matching local funds before construction begins.

Theft Reported

Greenville police said a theft at the Fresh Way Food Store on East 10th Street was reported at 2:31 a.m. today.

Officer W.T. McCarter said a quantity of sandwiches worth $10 was taken from the store.

Property Taken

Three thefts were reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said change was taken from two coin operated machines at Rountree's Lounge, 623 Albemarle Ave., in a break-in reported at 8:35 a.m., while Officer K.D. Lingerfelt said a money bag containing between $150 and $200 in cash was taken from 1804 Myrtle Ave. in a break-in reported at 4:30 p.m.

A purse, radio and three cassette tapes were taken from a car parked on Carlton Street in an incident reported at 6:59 p.m., according to Officer R.J. Brewington.

Larceny Arrest

Joseph Morning, 25, of 503 Rawl Road was arrested by Greenville police on a larceny charge Thursday.

Officer J.A. Felton said Morning was charged in connection with the theft of $26.97 worth of merchandise from Nichols Discount City on Greenville Boulevard that was reported at 6:50 p.m.

Traffic Fatality

Jeffrey Massey, 27, of Tarboro died early Thursday as the result of a one-vehicle accident four miles south of Hamilton in Martin County, according to investigating officers.

The pickup truck driven by Massey overturned several times before coming to rest in a field near the road, officers said.

The accident was not discovered until 7 a.m., investigators said. Massey, who had visited a friend, was en route back to his home in Tarboro when the wreck occurred.

Annual Gathering

The Most Worshipful Prince Hall Grand Lodge of free and accepted masons of North Carolina and jurisdiction will have its 117th annual communication in Charlotte Thursday through Oct. 3 at Adam's on McDowell Street.

Zoning Endorsed

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce adopted a resolution Thursday endorsing proper zoning for the Pitt-Greenville airport's future needs.

The resolution says that the airport is important to Greenville's continued growth. Because the airport is now restricted in lengthening present runways, the resolution requests that that "city of Greenville officials give proper and immediate attention to the adequate zoning in the vicinity of the Pitt-Greenville Airport for present and future needs for expansion."

Ribbon Cutting

A ribbon cutting ceremony Thursday marked the grand opening of Kash and Karry No. 8 at the corner of 14th and Charles streets.

The fifth Kash and Karry in the Greenville area, it is part of a chain operated by the Kash and Karry Co. based in Kinston. Charlie L. Hardee of Grifton founded the company in 1975.

Ron Evans, general manager of the corporation, said Dee Freeman will manage the new store. He said the store specializes in hot foods, snacks and convenience items, and gasoline is available. The store is open 24 hours a day, he said.

Family Reunion

The William Lafayette Clark family will have its annual family reunion on Sunday at 1 p.m. at Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church. A covered dish picnic is planned.

Members Initiated

Sarah Allen, president of the Alpha Iota Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, led the initiation for new members Nannie Sue Fields and Doris Cox at a recent meeting.

Events were planned for Alpha Delta Kappa Week set for Oct. 11-17.

Members discussed upcoming fund-raisers, the international convention in Atlanta, and plans for the state convention to be held in Greenville in April.

Criminal Justice

"Corrections: Crisis and Opportunity" was the topic for the annual meeting of the N.C. Association of Criminal Justice Educators today in Greenville.

The meeting, hosted by the department of criminal justice in the East Carolina University School of Social Work, was held at the Greenville Hilton beginning at 9 a.m.

Keynote speaker for the program was H.G. Moeller, an ECU professor emeritus of corrections and a former consultant to the United Nations on corrections. Moeller was also deputy director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons and was the past president of the American Correctional Association.

Penland Event

"Experience Penland in Eastern North Carolina" is the theme of an event to be held Saturday in Wilson and Bailey.

A series of events are planned to acquaint residents of eastern North Carolina with the Penland School of Crafts in western North Carolina. Activities begin at 1 p.m. at Atlantic Christian College with ACC President James Hemby and Mrs. Hemby hosting the opening of a Penland art exhibit at the college.

Entertainment will include music by a string quartet and the guitar/violin duo of Barney Pilgram and Don Mertz. Activities will culminate with a party from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. at Finch Nursey & Blueberry Hill Pottery in Bailey.

School Visitors

Ken Marsh visited Stokes Elementary School recently and lectured on Indian art and traditions.

Marsh shared his talents in sculpturing, pen and pencil sketches, craft work in woods and leather and drawings. He is a visiting artist with Pitt Community College.

W.L. Owens Jr., safety and rural supervisor for CSX Railroad System, also visited Stokes and shared his experience with students about trains and how they operate. His visit was the result of an extension of a lesson on transportation provided by Teresa Stainback, a teacher at Stokes.

Foodservice Meeting

The Pitt County School Foodservice Association will meet Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. in the Greenville Middle School cafeteria. Eugene Zallen will speak on "How To Be A Good Supervisor and How To Be Supervised."

Students Honored

Mark Dumais, Laura Hough, Penny McLawhorn and George Selby, students at J.H. Rose High School, have been designated "Commended Students" in the 1988 National Merit Scholarship program.

The students will receive a letter of commendation in recognition of outstanding academic promise.

Martin Objecting To Budget Changes

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin today criticized budget reforms proposed by State Auditor Ed Renfrow, saying they would do little, if anything, to speed up the process of adopting a state budget.

"I just see it as prolonging the agony instead of speeding it up," Martin said of a plan Renfrow unveiled Thursday. It called for expanding the membership and powers of the Advisory Budget Commission and setting deadlines for estimating revenues and enacting a spending plan.

Martin, a frequent critic of the Legislature's handling of the budget, said at a news conference changes were needed to make the process more efficient and more open to public scrutiny.

He said there were some improvements in this year's session, but that adding members to the Advisory Budget Commission would be a step in the wrong direction.

Renfrow proposed that the 10 members of the Council of State and the ten Cabinet secretaries be members of the ABC, along with several other officials, including the presidents of the University of North Carolina and state community colleges systems.

Currently, the ABC consists of 15 members appointed by the governor and legislative leaders.

Renfrow said his plan would allow top officials to work out turf fights before the budget reaches the Legislature and said those officials now get too little input into budget preparation.

Martin, however, disagreed.

"They have a full opportunity to present their case" before the ABC and legislative budget committees, Martin said. "I just don't think (the Renfrow plan) is a very useful proposal."

Parents Day At ECU

Mothers and fathers and other relatives and friends of students will converge on the East Carolina University campus this weekend for the university's third annual "Parents Day" celebration.

At least 2,500 parents of ECU students are expected, according to Ron Speier, assistant vice chancellor for student services. Speier said 1,100 individual reservations have been made.

Chancellor Richard R. Eakin and his staff will host a reception Saturday from 9 a.m. until 10:30 a.m. at Mendenhall Student Center. Faculty members and university officials will attend to meet members of the students' families.

Tours of the campus and information sessions also are scheduled, Speier said.

Chicken and barbecue will be featured at a picnic at Ficklen Stadium from 11:15 a.m. until 1:15 p.m., prior to the football game between ECU and Georgia Southern University Saturday afternoon. Speier said 1,700 picnic tickets had been distributed by Wednesday and 2,450 football game tickets have been ordered by parents attending the festivities.

STUDY

People with chronic athlete's foot are being sought to volunteer for a drug study at Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem.

The study will evaluate the safety and effectiveness of naltrexone gel, says Dr. Joseph Jorizzo, chairman of the schools' department of dermatology.

The drug has been shown to be effective against tinea pedis, the fungus that causes athlete's foot. It is the first member of a new class of synthetic antifungal agents, the allylamines. Studies have shown it to have low toxic potential.

About 30 volunteers, 18 or older, are needed for the six-week study. For information, call Bob Corman, 748-3926.

lethal weapons, mine systems, in international waters." He said the United States would destroy any other such vessels.

"We're very hopeful that this one episode will be a sufficient warning so that they will stop it, but we are not going to go on the basis of hopes," he said.

Weinberger said the Monday incident had provided "absolutely incontrovertible proof" that the Iraqis were laying mines in the gulf.

Weinberger arrived under tight security and went to the USS Hawes, a guided missile frigate that is among the U.S. warships escorting U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers through the gulf.

The defense secretary told the 200-member crew of the Hawes, in a speech from the bridge, that they were doing "the most important military duty" for the United States at this time.

He said he brought greetings from President Reagan, who "wanted me particularly to let you know how important the works are that you're doing, not only for the United States, but for our allies and indeed for all the countries interested in freedom."

The 3,585-ton Hawes is a sister ship of the USS Stark, which was struck by an Iraqi missile May 17. Thirty-seven Americans died in that incident, which Iraq said was accident.

"I would hope that the political will of the United States is as strong as the men out here defending us. And I would hope that everybody recognizes that there are going to be some risks involved in this operation, and that means there will be good days and bad days," Weinberger said.

"But what we saw with the destruction of this Iranian minelayer and the gathering of this absolute evidence of what they were doing, was regarded by the men who did it as a routine daily effort, and we regard it as an extraordinarily effective achievement."

SBI

A Forsyth County medical examiner and Butts' own office ruled in February and March that Ms. Epley died of natural causes.

Butts said he was aware the death was viewed suspicious when he ruled in March that it was the result of natural causes. Because it was not clear how long other studies of the case would take, he said he decided to make the ruling so the case would not remain open.

He said he realized he might later change his findings if new information was revealed.

Butts said it was only when the SBI presented new analysis earlier this month that he decided to rule the death a homicide.

Investigators found that the intravenous fluids that Ms. Epley was receiving showed epinephrine, a drug prescribed to maintain blood pressure, was missing from the drugs she was being fed through a tube, Butts said.

"Her blood pressure was being maintained by medication," he said. "The removal of (it) would cause her blood pressure to fall out and that is what, in our opinion, happened."

"She had been a very sick lady. Her death was not a surprise to anyone. It's just the timing of her death raised suspicions," Butts said.

The N.C. Board of Nursing has opened a disciplinary file on Shook, said Anita Chesney, a case specialist with the board.

Shook, a 1981 graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, had no prior disciplinary problems in the state or in Florida where he was licensed before coming to North Carolina, Ms. Chesney said. She said Shook was licensed in North Carolina in April 1985.

Gifts were accepted by the board from Empire Brushes Inc., $75; Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters, $100; H.P. Streeter, 1972 Chevrolet Estate Wagon, and the Bachelor Benedict Club, $200.

Dr. Edgar Boyd, dean of students, briefed the board on enrollment, which was increased by 115 students from 3,057 in 1986 to 3,172 this year. Full-time students increased by about 158 students, while "night enrollment stayed about the same as a year ago," he said.

Enrollment in three-quarter time students (nine to 11 credit hours) increased by 24 while half-time students decreased by 10 and quarter-time students (one to five credit hours) decreased by 57.

There was 4.2 percent and 7.2 percent growth in technical and college transfer students, respectively. But, there was a 3.1 percent decline in vocational students. Enrollment fell sharpest in cosmetology in that category, Boyd said.

PCC President Charles Russell briefed the board on General Assembly actions relevant to the college. He also noted the college will receive a federal grant of $600,000 to update curriculum and equipment. It also will receive a state grant of $30,000 to develop an agricultural program.

Reagan Says Gulf Incident 'Is Closed'

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has rebuffed congressional calls to limit U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf, defending the attack on an Iranian mine-laying vessel and saying he considers "this incident as closed."

The president sent a report on Monday's ship attack to Capitol Hill as lawmakers negotiated behind the scenes on legislation dealing with U.S. policy in the vital region and the War Powers Act.

"The actions taken by U.S. forces were conducted in the exercise of our right of self-defense ...," Reagan said in a letter to the House and Senate.

Critics are fearful that the president's policy of placing Kuwaiti oil tankers under the U.S. flag and escorting them with Navy warships will draw the United States into the Iran-Iraq war.

Reagan's report was the formal response to congressional calls for implementation of the War Powers Act. All week, the White House has argued that efforts to curb the U.S. role in the gulf were unwarranted and an infringement on the president's authority.

Reagan termed the latest incident as "limited defensive actions" taken in accordance with international law and his position of commander-in-chief. He also faulted the constitutionality of the War Powers Act.

Since Monday's attack, Democrats have considered pushing an amendment that would invoke the act, the 1973 law limiting a president's authority to commit U.S. military forces into situations of "imminent involvement in hostilities."

Under the law, the White House must send Congress a written report within 48 hours after the forces are committed. Within the following 60 days, the troops must be brought home unless Congress approves their presence.

By Thursday afternoon, the Democratic-backed proposal had gone through at least four drafts, ranging from mildly critical to a cutoff of funds for military operations under certain circumstances.

The final Democratic proposal, which was introduced in the Senate late Thursday, would halt the reflagging or U.S. convoys within 90 days after the law takes effect unless Congress specifically votes for such actions.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said, "this proposal is the right answer to a very difficult set of circumstances where there are no good answers."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said, "this hasn't been cleared with anyone at the White House."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said Republicans and the White House had dropped efforts to work out a bipartisan proposal because "we concluded that nothing could be worked out that we could support." He said the Democratic measure would be "a warning shot across the bow" of every U.S. ship in the gulf.

But no vote was scheduled for the Persian Gulf vote before Friday.

The Democrats hope to attach the measure to the bill authorizing the Pentagon's budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The Senate voted 91-4 approval late Thursday of a move by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., saying the United States is justified in sinking any Iranian vessels which threatens an American warship.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Sound Approach

A North Carolina pollution prevention program that's being used as a model for a nationwide project is a sound approach to a problem that demands public attention.

The program — Pollution Prevention Pays — encourages businesses to reduce and recycle their waste before it becomes pollution. It is a credit that North Carolina implemented this progressive idea — the first of its kind in the nation — and ran it effectively enough to capture national focus.

The concept of managing wastes to prevent them from becoming pollutants is one that should be praised as an example of how public policy and funds can impact a serious situation.

It is more prudent and less expensive to avoid generating waste in the first place. Preventing substances from becoming harmful byproducts of manufacturing is a move that protects the environment.

Waste and pollution are facts of life. They are realities that must be dealt with, and dealt with soundly. The crisis created by a throwaway society — one dependent on chemicals and manufacturing that produces potentially harmful substances — is a dilemma that must be faced squarely in the last decade of the 20th century.

Pollution Prevention Pays points the correct course these efforts should take. The program is a blend of public direction and private cooperation. It eases the problems of pollution by keeping harmful substances from becoming waste.

In addition, data on the program's two-year history indicate it is effective, both at reducing waste and saving money. In 1985 the 30 firms the program assisted realized a savings of about $12 million; in 1986, 24 participating firms saved $14 million — all this on a budget of $180,000. For every dollar the program invests, program officials estimate a return of $2.

The program's impact has been felt nearby — Ilco Unican Corp. of Rocky Mount, a manufacturer of keys, says it will save $36,000 a year in waste disposal costs by installing a system for recycling metals. GSH Corp., a Snow Hill rubber gasket manufacturer, said it would save $30,000 a year in disposal costs by installing an oil-recycling system.

Obviously, that's good business and good environmental stewardship. The concept of pollution prevention should be praised as progressive spending — money invested in the future.

State and local officials should take a cue from the program's emphasis on intervention and recycling when planning other pollution-focused projects. The issue of how to dispose of harmful wastes will grow more urgent as the state's economy grows more diverse and industrial.

Bashing Congress

Congress-bashing came to the fore again in Washington and the topic was explored by Sen. William Proxmire whose "Golden Fleece Awards" were treasured nuggets of criticism for many years.

Proxmire observed Congress-bashing has almost always been a national pastime; he added the only time he hears anything pleasant at all about Congress is in the morning prayers of the chaplain of the Senate.

He claims that for more than 30 years in the Senate he has been listening to members ridicule, deride and scorn Congress. Proxmire said this is reflected in what he hears on his frequent trips home.

Even so, if people don't seem to care for Congress as an institution, individual members must be generally popular. More than 97 percent of the members running for re-election last year were re-elected.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd says the Proxmire lament is all too true. Congress has always been a target and, like Proxmire, he marvels at the trait of members to "foul their own nest". Not only that, but "everybody likes to attack it — the columnists, the editorialists, the cartoonists. It is just something everybody can jump on."

Byrd says he finds it a bit strange that many of the complainers are people who would do almost anything to be elected to Congress and stay there once elected.

"There is not a senator here who would not have given his right arm or his left arm ... depending on whether he is right-handed or left-handed ... to come to this Senate or the House," he added.

He had more to say:

"They would get down and eat dirt to be elected. They would willingly run their heads into that wall just to get to the Senate ... almost anything to become a member of Congress."

And once there, they can begin criticizing.

Opinion

Hello, Bob, And So Long, Joe

WASHINGTON — The word "irony" is much abused, but in the matter of Sen. Joe Biden and Judge Robert Bork, the word applies with remarkable precision. As chairman of the Senate's Judiciary Committee, the junior senator from Delaware proposed to examine the judge's record. His idea was to destroy Bork's chances for winning confirmation to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The hearings had scarcely begun before the senator found his own record under examination. He now has destroyed his chances for winning the Democratic nomination. Biden had hoped the hearings would launch him to the heights. He has toppled to the bottom. How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle! O Joseph, thou wast slain in thy high places. (Not my line. See 2 Samuel 1:25).

The ironies are compounded by chronological parallels. Much of the case against Robert Bork rested upon an essay the judge wrote in 1963. The first charges against Biden rested upon a law school paper the senator plagiarized in 1965. More serious are charges that Biden quite recently has embroidered his academic record.

Not much remains to be said about the Bork nomination. His accusers had charged that he is some kind of conservative extremist, that he is out of the mainstream of jurisprudence, that if confirmed, he would vote to reverse a whole body of established constitutional law. The charges went off like damp rockets. They fizzled before they popped. Bork's record as a member of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia provides overwhelming evidence to the contrary. If Bork at last fails of confirmation it will not be because of his qualifications or his philosophy. The vote will turn on politics, pure politics. If senators wish to grovel for the support of liberal pressure groups, they will grovel. Bork can do nothing about it.

Biden's problems are more serious. In confessing the 1965 incident at Syracuse University, the senator agreed that he had done "something very stupid," but his assertion that his plagiarism was "unintentional" is unimpressive. One might unthinkingly plagiarize a phrase or a simile, but five whole pages? In a 15-page paper? It strains credulity.

In charity — the kind of charity most of us would pray for — let me suggest that stupidity at the tender age of 22 should be forgiven. Other matters are not so kindly resolved. At the Iowa State Fair on Aug. 23, Biden swiped an eloquent peroration from a speech by Neil Kinnock, leader of Britain's Labor Party. Was this a ghostwriter's gaffe? No, indeed. This was an idea that had struck him "as I was coming over here." Plainly it was not so.

Challenged for the theft, Biden at first said that a tape recording of the Kinnock speech had been given to him by British political leader Dennis Healey. This was not so. The recording came to Biden from a friend at the American Enterprise Institute.

Biden insists that his presidential candidacy is still alive, but this is bravado. The gentleman has attractive characteristics, but he has lost that quality of credibility which is like virtue in a woman. Meanwhile, Judge Bork, for his part, has gained in stature. In the combat of two strong men, Bork wins hands down.

Was There Sabotage?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political insiders are waging a finger-pointing debate over who provided the first shove in the presidential campaign debacle of Sen. Joseph Biden.

Biden himself, in Iowa and New Hampshire on Thursday to thank campaign workers a day after he withdrew as a Democratic candidate, insisted that he blamed no one but himself for the exaggerated claims and plagiarism that, when reported, were his undoing.

"Nobody did this to Joe Biden," he said. "There had to be something there for that to stitch together."

But rumors and reports persisted that a presidential rival or other opponent, including the White House, fed reporters information and fanned the flames of frenzy that ultimately engulfed Biden's campaign.

All were denied. But speculation was so intense that Biden himself called one rival, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, to discuss the matter.

"Rumors are all over the place," said David Doak, a campaign consultant to Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt, another of the remaining presidential contenders.

"This is the most fascinating story around town — everybody's talking about it," Doak said.

Biden ended his campaign Wednesday after two weeks of increasingly damaging reports. The first were that he had lifted without attribution chunks of speeches by British politician Neil Kinnock, and later Robert F. Kennedy and others.

He later acknowledged reports that he had committed plagiarism in a law school paper more than 20 years ago and, in the final blow, that he had made false claims about his academic record in a heated exchange with a voter in New Hampshire in March.

Gephardt's staff was most frequently mentioned in speculation over the original tip on the Kinnock quotes that touched off the succession of stories.

Gephardt, Doak and other Gephardt aides denied any involvement. Angry over what they said was the unfair mentioning of Gephardt, the aides demanded that their accusers step forward.

The Gephardt forces suggested the allegations were grounded in a long-simmering dispute between political consultant and pollster Patrick Caddell, an adviser to Biden, and his former business partners Doak and Robert Shrum, both now with Gephardt.

"There's not a shred of evidence that we did it other than a rumor Pat Caddell started," Gephardt spokesman Mark Johnson said.

"Pat Caddell used to be in business with me and he hates me and my partner," Doak said.

Caddell, a controversial veteran of the presidential campaigns of George McGovern, Jimmy Carter and Gary Hart, did not return a reporter's call Thursday.

Fingers also were pointed toward the Reagan White House, which stood to gain from political damage to Biden while he is chairing the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings into the controversial appointment of Judge Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court.

CBS News reported that unidentified Republican sources said the White House had conducted "opposition research" on Biden in preparation for the Bork hearings. That research included a look into his law school records and exaggerations of his academic accomplishments, the network reported.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said of the report: "Malicious gossip. Totally untrue."

CBS and the Chicago Tribune reported last week that sources pointed the finger at Gephardt representatives. The New York Times, which printed one of the original stories alleging plagiarism two weeks ago, denied the story was planted by the Gephardt campaign.

Jim Kilpatrick, a spokesman for Simon, said Gephardt campaign director Bill Carrick had told a newspaper reporter that Simon's campaign might have been spreading the story.

Biden, learning this, called Simon at his home in Illinois, and Simon told him his campaign was blameless, Kilpatrick said. Carrick called the Simon campaign and apologized, he said.

The Biden story began with a videotape of Kinnock's British television commercial and a speech by Biden in which he repeated Kinnock's moving, personal account of being the first member of his family to attend college. Tapes juxtaposing the two were delivered to several newspapers and TV networks, the campaigns agree.

Reports then followed in which other Biden passages were said to be unattributed quotations. A Robert F. Kennedy quote was identified by N. Jeffrey Lord, associate director of political affairs at the White House, who called the New York Times, the newspaper reported.

Then came reports that Biden's law school records showed he had committed plagiarism as a student. Biden immediately held a news conference to admit it. The Legal Times, a weekly trade journal, reported later that former Syracuse Law Dean Craig Christensen revealed the details at a dinner with school officials and others, one of whom tipped a reporter.

The final and most damaging blow came with the surfacing of a videotape made by the cable public affairs television network C-SPAN. Biden falsely claimed to have graduated in the top half of his class and to have had degrees and scholarships he did not have.

The show aired April 10 and 12 but didn't touch off national news stories until Newsweek asked the network for a copy of the tape and reported it last Sunday.

Strength For Today

Knock's College. There is such a place. It has tens of thousands of alumni. Its colors are black and blue. People win their diplomas from Knock's College by taking life as it comes and meeting the events of everyday life with a courageous spirit and an open mind.

There is something very suggestive in the term Commencement Day, for our education really begins — not ends — with the award of a diploma. The important education is what we get when we leave school.

There are some people who never stepped inside a high school or college who are splendidly educated. They are educated because they could be taught. Perhaps the only college they ever attended was Knock's College, where they came out of many an illuminating experience black and blue.

Reagan Gets Needed Boost

WASHINGTON — In barely more than a week, President Reagan has received a badly needed lift from a series of triumphs and positive developments in the field of foreign policy, capped by the successful U.S. attack on an Iranian naval vessel as it sowed mines in the Persian Gulf under cover of darkness.

Catching the Iranian ship seemingly red-handed, coupled with the seizure of an accused Lebanese terrorist by FBI agents in the Mediterranean and the nearly completed negotiations with Moscow on eliminating intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Europe, comes as a welcome change of fortune for a White House battered by months of reverses — from the Iran-Contra scandal to the tragic and embarrassing Iraqi attack on the USS Stark.

White House staff members, Reagan allies in Capitol Hill and analysts outside the government agree that the recent successes cannot by themselves sweep away the problems of a president nearing his final year in office with his personal credibility tattered and both houses of Congress controlled by the opposition.

"Does the fact that this week, things haven't gone badly mean that people in Washington won't treat him like a lame duck anymore?" asked University of California, Berkeley, political science professor Nelson W. Polsby, an expert in presidential relations with Congress. "I guess not."

Nonetheless, while Iran has threatened retaliation and Congress continues to press its institutional argument with the president over the War Powers Resolution, the recent successes are likely to strengthen Reagan's hand at least temporarily with Congress, the public and U.S. allies.

Many members of the House and Senate responded positively to the carefully managed surveillance and attack on the Iranian vessel. And there was evidence that the operation met with strong public approval.

"It was a ten-strike and people are pleased in this country when that occurs," said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind. "It has been a big plus for the president. Before long people will be writing once again how lucky he is."

Even Democrats in Congress who have been highly critical of Reagan's policy in the Persian Gulf expressed strong approval of the U.S. attack on the Iranian ship, and Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., acknowledged that the success of the operation would probably help defuse congressional criticism of the reflagging mission that has brought a fleet of U.S. vessels into the gulf to protect Kuwaiti tankers and assure the vital flow of oil to Western Europe and Japan.

And, despite the possibility that the Senate debate over the likely U.S.-Soviet treaty banning medium-range nuclear weapons will become entangled in the dispute between Democrats and the Reagan administration over the future of the "Star Wars" missile defense program, the president is certain to show at least a short-term gain in public opinion surveys — and among allies — as a result of the arms control progress, in the White House view.

"The key word to me is consistency, and consistency pays off not only here but abroad, as other countries look to see if the United States is going to vacillate," said Thomas C. Griscom, the president's director of communications.

"There has always been a tendency for people to try to count this president out way too early," he said. "He is showing once more he is the shaper of the debate. What it shows is a president who has remained active and will continue being active during the time he is serving as president."

Foreign policy and political analysts say the episode in the Persian Gulf Monday, in which the crews of U.S. Army special forces helicopters used night-vision devices and rocket fire to spot and then halt what the Pentagon says was an Iranian mine-laying operation, is likely to help the administration in at least three ways:

—For the American public and U.S. allies, capturing the "smoking gun" serves to validate Reagan's portrayal of Iran as an active threat to vital Persian Gulf shipping.

—After the trillion-dollar Reagan defense buildup that has on occasion been marred by such tragedies as the Beirut barracks bombing, the attack on the Stark and weapons procurement scandals, the episode helps restore the image of the armed forces as an effective military instrument.

—In the wake of the Iran-Contra scandal, setbacks in Congress, and running battles over the budget, it helps counter the impression that the Reagan administration is wallowing and ineffectual.

The impact of the Persian Gulf incident may be especially important for U.S. allies, who reluctantly and only belatedly joined in the effort to protect gulf shipping.

The performance of the military forces is important to the public's assessment of Reagan's performance and its view of the effectiveness of a crucial element of his presidency — the Pentagon buildup, said a former Reagan adviser who has kept in touch with his old White House colleagues.

"The whole question of defense spending — when there are so few occasions when our people and systems are battle-tested, it's important that they perform well," he said.

Unlike the attack on the Stark, in which 37 sailors were killed while sophisticated defense systems sat idle, and a more recent confrontation in the Persian Gulf when a U.S. jet is said to have fired two costly missiles but failed to hit what was believed to be an Iranian fighter, the capture of the mine-laying ship appeared to go like clockwork.

So did the carefully orchestrated mission that brought Fawaz Younis, the Middle East terrorist suspect, to the arms of the FBI, which brought him to the United States to face charges in connection with the 1985 hijacking of a Jordanian airliner on which four Americans were traveling.

The gulf episode is seen as helping Reagan in his confrontation with Congress over the War Powers Resolution; the resolution would require the president to seek Congressional approval for the deployment U.S. forces where hostilities are imminent but Reagan — like other chief executives before him — has resisted the requirement as an unconstitutional intrusion into presidential authority.

Although many members of both parties have been critical of the administration's decision to send Navy units into the Gulf, Congress has been extremely reluctant to tie the president's hands.

Congressmen Slow To Support Piedmont Merger

By The Associated Press

Piedmont Airlines officials say the airline faces "chaos" if it isn't allowed to merge with USAir, but North Carolina's congressional delegation appears wary of the merger because of the public's uncertainty over the deregulated airline industry.

"I'm not enthusiastic about the merger," said Rep. Stephen Neal, a Democrat who represents Winston-Salem, home of Piedmont's corporate headquarters.

"I don't see it as my duty to fight for merger," said Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C. "I think Piedmont is a great North Carolina company and I've just not been enthusiastic about seeing them absorbed."

Sanford later told a press briefing that he would lobby the Transportation Department to approve the merger of Piedmont and USAir, but added he was not convinced that the public has benefited from merger mania.

"There has been a trend; instead of getting more competition, what we're getting is less competition," Sanford told a news briefing.

Sanford had declined earlier this year to sign a letter from the North Carolina delegation endorsing USAir Group's proposed $1.59 billion takeover of Piedmont, citing doubts about how the merger would affect Piedmont jobs in the state.

But Sanford told the Winston-Salem Journal that he has agreed to a request by Piedmont, relayed by his staff, to ask the department to overrule a hearing judge's opinion Monday that the merger should be stopped because it would weaken airline competition.

"I'm considering that, and I might make a call today," Sanford said. "I'm simply going to raise their concerns."

Piedmont wants lawmakers to speak out against an administrative law judge's recommendation to reject a proposed $1.6 billion acquisition of Piedmont.

Rep. Alex McMillan, R-N.C., has written a letter of support for the merger. But a McMillan aide told the News and Observer of Raleigh on Thursday that only Republican Reps. Cass Ballenger and J. Howard Coble have agreed to sign it.

Neal said he was undecided on McMillan's letter and remained concerned about the possible loss of jobs and air service.

Neal said he doubted congressional lobbying would have much impact on the federal Department of Transportation's final decision.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said he was not likely to support the merger.

"A lot of my Piedmont employee friends are having second thoughts," Rose said, "and I sense the flying public is having second thoughts about these dinosaur-sized airlines."

Don McGuire, Piedmont's vice president for public affairs, said Thursday the airline was seeking congressional support to show the DOT that the merger "is not a politically distasteful thing."

McGuire said USAir has bought half of Piedmont's stock and blocking the merger could lead to "great confusion and chaos." He said that could lead to a hostile takeover of Piedmont by a company less committed to expanding air service in the state.

"I think most of the North Carolina delegation is with us," he said.

Irene Schecter, an aide to Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., said Hefner is supporting the merger at Piedmont's request. "He thinks it is better to go this way than to see a hostile takeover," she said.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., said he supported Piedmont and thought a merged airline would provide better service to eastern North Carolina.

"I frankly think the mergers have gotten out of hand, not only in the airline industry but the corporate world in general," said Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-N.C.

In a related matter, America West Airlines is willing to drop its opposition to USAir Group's proposed merger with Piedmont if USAir sells the Phoenix-based carrier gates or landing slots at two East airports, according to America West's founder.

Edward Beauvais, now the airline's chairman, told The Charlotte Observer that "it's quite possible" America West would drop its opposition to the merger in exchange for access to Washington National and New York's LaGuardia airports.

"We're an airline and we have a right to compete," Beauvais told the newspaper. "The applicants have the wherewithal to permit us entry by allowing us to use some of the slots that they have. But they refuse to do so. As long as they refuse to do so, there's a strong possibility that that merger will not be approved."

USAir's attorney said, however, that the airline would not give up takeoff and landing slots in New York or Washington to obtain approval to merge with Piedmont.

"We have no intention at this time to do that," attorney Lee Hydemann said. "It's blackmail. Why should we pay blackmail?"

Cities May Face More Road Work

RALEIGH (AP) — State Transportation Secretary James Harrington says a new state law limiting municipalities' contributions to state road projects could mean that the state will build and maintain fewer roads within city boundaries.

Harrington cited a lesser-known section of the law that says the state shall maintain only major streets and highways to move traffic from beyond the corporate limits to major destinations inside the cities.

"Until now, it's been up to negotiations between the cities and the state," Harrington said. "It's going to redefine the gray area of which street belongs to whom."

Harrington said that the provision could mean more road work for cities, but he stressed that measuring the impact of the law remained a slippery task.

"We don't have the wiggle room we used to," Harrington said. "But I don't think you can draw a fixed conclusion to it at this point."

A long-term state highway plan now being written will contain only a handful of new urban projects, Harrington said.

The newest version of state's nine-year Transportation Improvement Program, scheduled to be unveiled in November, also will reflect some difficulty caused by the likelihood of less city money in the state road program, Harrington said.

"You'll see some new projects,"

Harrington said. "But you won't see many new urban projects."

The law grants cities new power to protect future road corridors — and thus to control right-of-way costs — a change that Harrington had sought. But by limiting the amount of money cities can contribute to speed a project, Harrington says that lawmakers killed local governments' motivation to keep the right-of-way costs low.

DOT's reaction to the law began this month when the state Board of Transportation wiped out or scaled down 15 of 67 urban projects previously slated for construction. Harrington will not identify the projects because he hasn't yet "identified the next of kin," officials in the cities affected by the changes.

Cities statewide are struggling to measure the impact of the new law and regulations. David E. Reynolds, executive director of the N.C. League of Municipalities, said his staffers had been meeting with DOT officials "to sort all that out." Reynolds said the turn to more city maintenance of roads within municipal boundaries would be a fairly significant change and said his organization was unaware that the new law would result in that sort of shift.

"That's what we don't understand," Reynolds said. "I don't think we anticipated that would happen as a result of the legislative session."

DENIAL — Evangelist John Wesley Fletcher reads from a prepared statement after testifying before a federal grand jury in Charlotte Thursday. Fletcher, who was granted immunity in exchange for testimony in an investigation of the PTL ministries, denied Jessica Hahn's statement that he forced her to have sex with him. (AP Laserphoto)

Fletcher Granted Immunity In Probe

CHARLOTTE (AP) — John Wesley Fletcher, the evangelist who introduced Jessica Hahn to Jim Bakker, says he told "the whole truth — painful as it is" to a federal grand jury investigating how Bakker's PTL television ministry raised and spent money.

Fletcher testified for about three hours Thursday after U.S. District Judge Robert Potter granted him limited immunity.

"If he were going in there to sneeze, I'd ask for immunity," Allen Bailey of Charlotte, one of Fletcher's attorneys, said earlier in the day.

The grand jury is investigating former PTL President Bakker and his top aides for possible mail, wire and tax fraud. One focus is the $265,000 in PTL funds the ministry provided in 1985 after Hahn complained about the sexual episode with Bakker.

Fletcher told reporters he introduced Ms. Hahn to PTL founder Bakker, but he said he did not know if Bakker forced himself on her during a 1980 meeting in a Florida hotel room. And Fletcher said he did not force Ms. Hahn to have sex with him, as Ms. Hahn said in a Playboy interview.

"Much of what has appeared in magazines and other media has been only half-truths," Fletcher said in a prepared statement after testifying. "I told the whole truth, painful as it is."

"I did introduce Jessica Hahn to Jim Bakker, but I have no personal knowledge of what happened after I left," said Fletcher, a Durham native. "I forced no one to do anything."

While not discussing further the events of 1980, Fletcher did say, "Seven years ago, I confessed all to my God, my family, and my church. They each forgave me, and I went on with my ministry."

Fletcher was asked on his way into the courthouse for a response to Miss Hahn's comments in Playboy that he was "a sick man" who attacked her. Fletcher did not respond, but his attorney, John Norman, sought out the reporter who asked the question after Fletcher had testified.

"When Jessica said that about John Wesley — did she have her clothes on or off?" Norman asked, referring to Miss Hahn's seminude photographs in the magazine. "And was it before or after she got her million dollars?"

Fletcher refused to answer questions, but said in his prepared statement he testified only because he was under court order to do so.

"At every turn, I have avoided public comment because of the great harm it causes to the Body of Christ," Fletcher said. "Only because I was subpoenaed and required to, I have now given my sworn testimony to the grand jury."

He said he would not answer questions because his statements might impair the grand jury's investigation and because the Bible "warns us to avoid godless chatter which causes others to lose their faith."

Helms Committee Seeks 1990 Funds

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms has allowed his strategists to send out a fund-raising letter for a possible re-election bid, hinting that he might face a rematch with former Gov. Jim Hunt, but Hunt is playing down any senatorial ambitions.

"I am giving absolutely no thought to that," Hunt said Thursday. "I'm too busy doing other things."

The Senate race — if either Hunt or Helms is in it — is not until 1990. But a re-election committee for Helms has asked supporters to donate $60,000 a month through the end of the year.

R.E. Carter Wrenn, a key Helms strategist and executive director of the National Congressional Club, Helms' political organization, told the News and Observer of Raleigh Thursday that Helms had given permission to send out the letter.

"It does not mean he has unequivocally decided he is going to run for re-election," Wrenn said. "It means he has allowed us to set up a committee in the event he decided to run for re-election. Obviously, if I didn't feel he should run and have high hopes that he would run, I wouldn't be involved in it."

Helms could not be reached for comment, but he said last month that he would not decide whether to seek re-election for another year.

"Please help us re-elect Jesse Helms," Tom Ellis, the Raleigh lawyer who is honorary chairman of the re-election committee, wrote in a letter dated Sept. 16. "We can't afford to lose his leadership on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee."

Diversification

DURHAM (AP) — Liggett Group, the parent company of Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., wants to be doing half of its business in products other than tobacco within four years, company officials say.

Liggett's diversification may include buying into a candy company and a pharmaceutical company, company president K.V. Dey told more than 100 Durham business people.

He said the company has "signed a letter of intent to look at a candy company," which he declined to name. He also said Liggett has looked at a pharmaceutical company, which he also declined to name.

Bingo Suit

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) — A lawsuit brought by Cherokee Principal Chief Robert S. Youngdeer against the former owners of the high stakes Cherokee Bingo game has been settled out of court.

Youngdeer filed suit in April 1986, asking the former owners and managers of the games to make a full accounting of all money received since 1982. He also asked that the U.S. District Court order all bingo funds paid to the management of the games be recovered and paid to the U.S. Treasury and to Youngdeer.

According to the settlement Thursday, Youngdeer will be paid $35,000.

His attorney said Youngdeer forced McCoy, Young and Associates to relinquish control of Cherokee Bingo in favor of it becoming a tribal enterprise and that the tribe now receives all profits.

Civic Center

TRENTON, N.C. (AP) — A proposed Jones County civic center has been touted as a way of bringing people together in this sprawling rural county in eastern North Carolina. But it is encountering opposition from some black residents who think that believe scarce county money should be spent on needy residential neighborhoods.

County and civic leaders have strongly supported the $600,000 facility as a way to provide a central meeting place for community and social functions and as a showcase for arts and entertainment. Currently, large audiences can be accommodated only in the auditorium of a condemned school building or a school gymnasium.

But critics, led by Daniel J. Willis of Trenton, said county money should be used to pave streets and provide water and sewer services in several residential areas near Trenton. He charged that the civic center has been funded at the expense of programs benefitting black and elderly residents.

CRASH — This Cessna 150 crashed Thursday near Greensboro's Smith-Reynolds Airport soon after takeoff. The pilot, Moses Walton of Tomsville, Va., was en route home after attending a mobile home convention in Winston-Salem. Walton, a developer and building contractor, underwent surgery Thursday night for minor injuries and was reported in stable condition. (AP Laserphoto)

Teacher Appeals

WILMINGTON (AP) — The New Hanover County school board has approved promotions for four of 10 teachers originally denied advancement under the pilot career ladder program.

Among the four teachers promoted are the head of the local chapter of the North Carolina Association of Educators and the president of the local American Federation of Teachers chapter.

At stake in the move from Career Status I to Career Status II was a 9.6 percent merit pay raise. Under the system, being tested in New Hanover and 15 other North Carolina school systems, principals decide who gets promoted following several evaluations of the teacher's classroom ability by full-time "trained observers."

Hairdo Snafu

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County Superior Court jury has awarded $70,000 to a Raleigh woman who testified that a hair dye applied at a hair-styling school had left her partially bald.

"I just can't explain it, I'm so happy," Frances Alton said Thursday after the trial, in which she took off her wig to show jurors her bald spots.

Ms. Alton testified that her baldness was the permanent result of an allergic reaction to a hair-coloring treatment she had received in March 1985 at the Raleigh Institute of Cosmetology. In her lawsuit, she accused the school's owner, Grady Perkins, and instructors Ray Monk and Roveta Allen of negligence.

Soybean Supports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The price support loan rate for soybeans harvested in 1987 has been officially set at $4.77 per bushel, the lowest level allowed by law, Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng announced Thursday.

Lyng said the final setting at $4.77 was unchanged from the preliminary announcement on Aug. 3. All producers of the 1987 crop of soybeans will be eligible for the support.

The basic support set by law is $5.02 per bushel, but Lyng has the authority to reduce that level by 5 percent to maintain price competitiveness in the world export markets.

The loan rate is the amount farmers can borrow from the department's Commodity Credit Corp. by using their crop as collateral.

Maine Town Wants Klan To Pack Up And Go Away

By GLENN ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
RUMFORD, Maine (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan is coming to this scenic, papermaking town in western Maine, and officials and normally taciturn townfolk just wish the whole thing would go away.

"I haven't had any time to do any town manager work for a couple of weeks now," said Rumford Manager John E. Madigan Jr., who has been preparing the town for anti-rally crowds and trying to defuse potential trouble.

The Maine State Police, Justice Department and FBI have been notified of the rally, Madigan said Thursday, but, "we don't expect even a handful of Klan people" to show up.

The KKK is not welcome, Madigan said, asking protesters to stay away from the rally site on a farm outside of town, and instead write letters to the town office to vent their anger.

A counter-rally described by organizers as non-confrontational is planned for noon Saturday, two hours before the KKK gathers, about 15 miles away, at Rumford High School.

Rumford, which sits on the Androscoggin River, is home to about 9,000 people, most of whom earn a living farming or working at the vast Boise Cascade Corp. paper mill.

Normally closed-lipped, residents were not shy about speaking out about the rally, many blaming counter-protesters and publicity about the event for throwing Rumford into the spotlight.

"We've got so many groups coming in to harass the KKK," said a woman who lives near the site and asked that her name not be used.

Another neighbor, who also asked not to be identified, expects to see "lots of curiosity seekers, a lot of people," largely because of widespread publicity on the rally.

Dozens of people have written to Rumford Town Hall, some applauding Madigan's suggestions that protesters keep away and one bitterly chastizing officials for allowing the rally.

James W. Farrands, the imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the KKK, said white-robed Klansmen will be at the rally, which he said will include a picnic, antique sale, speeches and a cross-burning.

"No matter what you've heard, we are not a bunch of armed vigilantes or mercenaries," Farrands said in a telephone interview from his Shelton, Conn., home.

"More than likely, they're (Klansmen) going to be there with their family, their wives. This is not the Klan of 1869 or the 1920s."

Farrands said there was no particular reason why Rumford was chosen for the rally site, although there was some speculation the KKK was trying to capitalize on bitter feelings left by a paperworkers' strike last summer in Rumford, and one that has dragged on since mid-June, 25 miles away in Jay.

Maine has a large Franco-American population, but no other sizable minorities. Blacks comprise three-tenths of 1 percent of the state's population of 1.1 million.

The KKK is not active in the state, although its rolls swelled to an estimated 20,000 during its heyday in the 1920s, when its main targets were immigrants and Roman Catholics who streamed into mill towns.

Farrands, who is Catholic, says the church is no longer on the KKK's hate list.

The rally will be held on land outside of town owned by farmer Gerald Cote, who has said he is renting the property so he can pay his taxes. The rural site, liberally marked with fluorescent "no trespassing" signs, is along a stretch of woods and fields.

Counter-rallies are planned in a half-dozen other Maine communities, and the Maine Council of Churches is encouraging public buildings and churches statewide to ring their bells in protest.

Groups such as the National Organization for Women, the conservative Christian Civic League of Maine and the Maine AFL-CIO have lodged protests, as have Republican Gov. John R. McKernan Jr. and the Democratic leaders of the state Legislature.

Senators Reject Embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has voted to tell the Soviet Union to tear down a new Soviet Embassy built in Washington and rebuild the structure in an area of the city where it can't be used for espionage.

The decision Thursday night came after State Department officials told Congress the new U.S. Embassy under construction in Moscow is so infested with listening devices that it cannot be occupied.

The decision by the Democratic-controlled chamber came when it voted 69-27 approval of an amendment offered by Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, ordering Reagan to void the current U.S.-Soviet agreement for construction of new embassies.

The amendment was attached to the Senate's version of a Pentagon budget bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The final disposition of Symms' proposal is unclear because no such requirement is part of the House version of a Pentagon budget bill and the final defense measure will be put together by a House-Senate conference committee.

In addition, Reagan has threatened to veto the Senate bill because he is unhappy with its restrictions on his "Star Wars" anti-missile program.

Symms' amendment said that "Soviet espionage agents have installed listening devices in the structure of the new American embassy in Moscow in blatant defiance of the spirit of the embassy agreements and certain recognized norms of international relations."

He noted that the Soviets are building a new embassy on a hill in northwest Washington which, at 350 feet above sea level, is one of the highest points in the capital.

His amendment said "the location of the new Soviet Embassy is ideal" for highly sophisticated electronic surveillance of U.S. government offices.

Bush To Discuss Arms Pact Plans

ROME (AP) — Vice President George Bush, in the first stop of a nine-day European trip, said today that he hopes to make sure the United States and Western allies are "on the same wave length on arms control."

Speaking with reporters aboard his Air Force jet shortly before his arrival in Italy, Bush said he was carrying "no special instructions" from President Reagan.

"The purpose of the trip is consultative in Western Europe," the vice president said. "We'll be discussing principally the INF agreement and what follows on after that," he said of the prospective agreement with the Soviet Union to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

The vice president met briefly at the Rome airport with the president of Italy's Senate, Giovanni Spadolini, and arranged talks with Prime Minister Giovanni Goria and President Francesco Cossiga during his 18-hour stay in Rome.

Bush's itinerary includes stops in West Germany, France, England and Belgium, but the highlight of his trip is expected to be four days in Poland, where he will assess the state of improved relations.

Bush also told reporters he expects the tensions in the Persian Gulf to come up in his talks with Western leaders. "We've had if not universal, very wide support for our action in the international waters against the Iranian mine layer," he said.

Bush, an unannounced candidate for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination, also is seeking political gain from his trip overseas. His campaign has arranged to have a camera crew record many of his activities for possible use in future campaign commercials.

The front-runner in the race despite recent setbacks, Bush will formally announce his candidacy on Oct. 12, nine days after returning home from Europe.

On the diplomatic side of the ledger, Bush will be the highest ranking American official to visit Poland since Jimmy Carter went there as president a decade ago. The Reagan administration has recently loosened many of the restrictions it imposed in 1981 when the Pole were placed under martial law.

Officials said they doubted there would be any formal announcement of an exchange of ambassadors during Bush's trip, although that step is expected relatively soon. They said Bush would probably sign a cooperative agreement on science and technology while in Poland and press the government for economic reforms.

Polish officials are expected to urge the vice president to assist the government in gaining access to greater credit from international lending institutions.

Bush is expected to meet twice with Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Polish leader, and is expected to "share some of our concerns on a variety of issues from human rights to Soviet influence," as well as express support for recent steps to loosen restrictions within the country, an aide said.

But another aide said Bush, out of deference to diplomatic niceties, likely would not appeal directly to Jaruzelski to legalize Solidarity.

The vice president's Polish schedule calls for one day in Krakow, where he will visit the Auschwitz and Birkenau Nazi concentration camps.

Rebels Say They'll Seek Cease-Fire

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A top Nicaraguan rebel leader said Thursday he will propose a cease-fire with the leftist Sandinista government early next month as part of his group's compliance with a Central American peace plan.

In El Salvador, leftist rebels on Thursday also proposed a halt to fighting to allow peace talks with the government there.

Adolfo Calero, the head of the rebel coalition known as the Nicaraguan Resistance, which is based in this country, refused to give details when asked in an interview.

But he said his group "will decree a cease-fire beginning Oct. 4 after Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, president of the Nicaraguan Episcopal Conference, negotiates the opening of a bilateral dialogue with the Managua regime."

He also said the Contras plan soon to release 30 Nicaraguan soldiers they captured, as another gesture of goodwill.

Calero's statement appeared to be an indirect response to an announcement by the Sandinista government Tuesday of a partial cease-fire to start unilaterally.

President Daniel Ortega did not specify a timetable for his government's truce plan but said: "We are working on concrete actions to make known the first zones where the cease-fire will be declared."

In El Salvador, leftist rebels proposed a halt to hostilities while both sides talk Oct. 4 about a longer truce.

The proposal came in a communique by the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the organization of five guerrilla armies fighting to overthrow the U.S.-backed government, and the leftists' political coalition, the Democratic Revolutionary Front.

The groups suggested that the cease-fire begin two days before the meeting in San Salvador and last until two days afterward. The government did not respond immediately.

Soviets Ahead In Space Race

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Soviets will beat the United States to Mars, probably landing cosmonauts on that planet by the end of the century, according to NASA administrator James Fletcher.

"They probably would win a race," Fletcher told the San Francisco Chronicle on Thursday.

A cooperative flight to Mars with the Soviets "is a possibility that should be examined," added Fletcher, who was in San Francisco to address the Commonwealth Club.

Fletcher, head of NASA in the early 1970s, came back to direct the agency after last year's Challenger disaster.

The American space program is "solidly on the road back to reliable operations," he said, but added the program must be rebuilt on a "steady, step-by-step basis."

Church Takes Stronger Political Stand

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church of Paraguay is increasingly criticizing the authoritarian regime of President Alfredo Stroessner. His government is striking back.

The Catholic radio station Caritas and weekly newspaper Sendero have risked censure by providing airtime and news space to government opponents.

In response, Stroessner's ruling Colorado Party is branding both and many church leaders as subversives.

The rift is widening as Paraguay prepares for a visit in May by Pope John Paul II, his first to this nation of 3.6 million people, 90 percent of whom are Catholics.

The Caritas staff includes reporters from the independent Radio Nanduti, which suspended operations in January because of financial losses from transmissions that were repeatedly and mysteriously jammed.

Station owner Humberto Rubin charged the government with the jamming. The government denied the charge, saying it had no idea who was doing it.

Workers at Sendero include several journalists from the banned newspaper ABC Color, shut down by the government in 1983 for publishing what the regime called subversive articles.

The sole remaining opposition newspaper, the Revolutionary Febrerista Party's weekly El Pueblo was closed by the government Aug. 28 after officials charged its cartoons and "offensive" language endangered stability.

The Colorado Party's official newspaper Patria said in a recent editorial that society must "defend itself from extremists and subversives, be they dressed in ties, tunics or cassocks."

A statement Aug. 28 from the National Team of Layworkers, composed of lawyers and other church activists, countered, "Denouncing injustices and the violation of human rights is not subversive."

The Paraguayan archbishop's office more recently denounced what it called the "painful and evident escalation of police violence in the form of beatings and detentions" during a series of weekly rallies against Stroessner, who has led this landlocked country since 1954.

The communique also assailed as "denigrating" the behavior of headline government supporters who attacked a pastor and opposition figures in a rural parish hall in Col. Oviedo, 90 miles southwest of Asuncion.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Genesis intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times

ABRAM IN EGYPT

ABRAM HAS ACCEPTED THE GIFTS OF PHARAOH, AND NOW, PHARAOH HAS SENT HIS MESSENGER TO ABRAM, ASKING THAT SARAI, HIS BEAUTIFUL "SISTER," BE BROUGHT TO PHARAOH'S PALACE....

...HAVING ACCEPTED PHARAOH'S GIFTS, ABRAM CAN NOT REFUSE THIS ROYAL REQUEST....

ALL THAT I HAVE FEARED HAS COME TO PASS!

...AND SO, WITH A FORLORN HEART, ABRAM WATCHES HIS WIFE, KNOWN TO PHARAOH AS HIS "SISTER," LEAVE....

...AND GREAT SORROW EXISTS IN THE TENTS OF ABRAM....

BEHOLD, O PHARAOH-LIVE-FOREVER, THE BEAUTIFUL WOMAN FROM THE EAST HAS ARRIVED!

LET JOY AND SONG REIGN IN MY HOUSE, FOR THIS IS A HAPPY DAY!

...WHILE THERE IS MUCH REJOICING IN PHARAOH'S ROYAL COURT....

Even For Oldsters, Jewish Holiday Means New Start

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For the old, too, it's a time for newness among the world's Jews, for fresh beginnings. "I can close my eyes and almost be a little girl again with grandma," says Yetta Bauer, now 89.

It's a "new chapter in life," she says. "Who knows what wonderful new adventures are in store for next year?"

Such was the mingling of memories and expectations among residents at the Daughters of Jacob Geriatric Center in the Bronx, most aged 80 to 100, as Thursday and the start of Jewish high holy days approached.

Rosh Hashana, the Jewish new year, was signaled by a call to conscience — the piercing blast of a ram's horn — at Thursday morning services, with well-wishers saying, "May you be inscribed for a good year."

Jewish tradition holds this is when one's destiny for the year ahead is inscribed in God's Book of Life, which is sealed at the finish of 10 "Days of Penitence" on Yom Kippur, the "Day of Atonement," Saturday, Oct. 3.

"For on this day shall atonement be made for you to cleanse you," says Leviticus 16:30 in prescribing the observance. "From all your sins you will be clean before the Lord."

Called the "Sabbath of Sabbaths," that culminating holiest of days comes after the intervening period of self-examination and repentance for wrongdoings and of determination to do better.

In worship services and in homes, the dominant theme is rejuvenation, a doing away with past failures and a restoration to a bright, fresh start, no matter what the age.

"It's a very special day for our residents," said Claire Vogelman, president of Daughters of Jacob, which runs the geriatric center, providing nursing care for 515 senior citizens.

"Bitter sweet memories of family ... experiences and traditions are shared," she said. "It is a time of renewal, of beginning a new year with new challenges."

Remembering such past observances, Rosa Chappel, 91, Russian born, recalled that "sometimes our family would suddenly double. I always looked forward to seeing who papa (a rabbi) would bring home for dinner."

"It was such fun," she said.

Meyer Haspel, 77, an immigrant from Austria, said, "Our children are grown now and we are no longer young," but "sharing prayers, our many memories and regrouping around our new family here is enormously helpful."

That kind of benefit is what Sutton Place Synagogue in Manhattan tries to provide at the other end of the age spectrum, for the young Jewish singles away from home and detached from any synagogue.

"During the high holy days, singles can sense an acute feeling of separation from their families" and an "almost desperate feeling of isolation," said Rabbi David B. Kahane, leader of the synagogue.

It arranged services at the Waldorf Astoria hotel celebrating Rosh Hashana Thursday and Friday mornings this week and Yom Kippur, Friday evening, Oct. 2, and Saturday, Oct. 3, with about 1,300 people taking part.

They need "a place to reaffirm their religious and ethnic identity," Kahane said, to "share the Jewish experience with others like themselves" and be part of that kind of "Jewish family, at least for the holiday."

Similarly, the American Jewish Heritage Committee is using advertisements, storefront tables near subway and bus stops and other tactics to draw unaffiliated Jews back into communal activity.

"We have more and more Jews, especially young Jews, who are disappearing through assimilation caused by indifference and disaffection," said Rabbi William Berkowitz, the committee's national president.

"We can no longer shrug our shoulders and ignore the disturbing statistics of dwindling identification with our Jewish institutions."

He urged "one-minute reflections" daily for American Jews to begin a personal inventory of their individual and communal commitments.

A positive assessment of Jewish life came in a Rosh Hashana message from the American Jewish Committee's president Theodore Ellenoff, who hailed recent gains in interreligious understanding.

"There is a lot to rejoice about this year," he said, citing Jewish meetings with Pope John Paul II in Italy and Miami, and steps among Protestants to recognize the validity of Judaism.

He also pointed to signs of "new hope" for Soviet Jews wanting to leave that country.

A committee-sponsored National Jewish Religious Dialogue Group, formed two years ago by representatives of all branches of Judaism to deal with sharpening conflicts among them, said in a holiday message:

"There seems to be a growing recognition of the danger of divisiveness" but "there is also a great cause for continued concern."

Child Abuse Has Emotional Side

By DON OLDENBURG
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — A teen-age mother, frustrated and feeling trapped at home with her 3-year-old daughter, routinely screams at the child, "I wish you were never born." A 5-month-old boy is left unattended in his crib day after day until the back of his head is worn bald. A Maryland father holds a pistol to his 8-year-old son's face to teach him a lesson he'll never forget.

There are none of the bruises, blood and broken bones sometimes found in child abuse cases involving beatings and sexual molestation that scream so often these days from newspaper headlines. Rarely does child abuse that scars only the mind make the news. The most severe cases occasionally attract attention of the authorities. But the vast majority go quietly unnoticed — except by the victim. Despite growing recognition by mental health and legal experts that "psychological maltreatment" of children, as it has now been labeled, is an insidious and largely invisible assault on the minds of the nation's next generation, the problem proves difficult to identify, even harder to define. When the target of abuse is gray matter alone, issues and answers get stuck in a murky gray area of controversy.

"We don't have any consensus. We can't agree. That's the heart of this problem," says Dr. James Egan of the intensifying debate among experts on what constitutes psychological abuse and how to remedy it. As head of psychiatry at Children's Hospital in Washington, Egan says virtually all of the psychologically abused children he identifies come to him for other complaints. It's a fact, he says, that indicates the intangible nature of the evidence of mental harm.

"If you take a child that has had a cigarette burn put on by a parent ... the major reason that is damaging is not the damage to the skin," says Egan, who argues that psychological abuse is the "dominant part" in most physical abuse cases. "To break an arm skiing is not generally considered damaging to a child. The same broken arm caused by a parent is considered an unthinkable condition. The difference between those two broken arms has to do with the psychological meaning of the experience."

Egan says the array of abusive conditions he sees every day is enough to boggle the mind. They regularly exceed manageable and practical definition of a problem he thinks threatens family life and social stability in the United States. Recently, a woman who brought her 13-month-old child to Children's Hospital admitted to doctors that her family name and her child's name were different because the child wasn't really hers. "She said she only liked little babies, and her sister liked older children," recalls an angered Egan. "So she gave her sister her own 30-month-old in exchange for her sister's 13-month-old."

"Why isn't that neglect and abandonment? It's child abuse in my judgment. The child has been abandoned at will by the parent, and not because the parent was ill or infirm or incarcerated or any of the other situations. Those children's experience was that the parents didn't want them. That makes it very damaging."

But is it illegal? "No," he answers.

Another incident Egan recently witnessed may, indeed, have been illegal — but not because of its psychological injury to the children. While driving on a local highway, he spotted a blue Chevette traveling at about 60 miles an hour with its hatchback open. Playing on the platform near the open hatch were two small children. Most would recognize the senseless physical danger the children were subjected to, says Egan. But the implicit message to the children calls into question their value to their parents. Again, to Egan, that constitutes psychological maltreatment.

"These kinds of things would strike me as being unthinkable if I didn't see it literally every day," he says, "if I didn't see it in supermarkets, on the street corners. ... In the last 20 years, we've seen the psychological maltreatment of children increase."

We've also seen more suicides, more eating disorders, more academic problems, a higher percentage of out-of-wedlock pregnancies among children. The children are showing the signs of serious disorder."

But Douglas J. Besharov, resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute who served as the first director of the then Department of Health, Education and Welfare's National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect, argues that such cases go beyond an operational definition of mental abuse to children. To include them, and other incidents like them, is to blur society's focus on the more urgent and serious cases that injure children.

"If you define it broadly enough, it is everywhere," says Besharov, who resists what he calls a movement among some mental health professionals to see it that way. "Most of the impetus for this broadening definition comes from a well-meaning, good-faith desire to protect children ... but there are big sufferings and little sufferings."

"The trouble is that there isn't great agreement on what emotional abuse is," says Besharov. "There are clear cases of emotional abuse and neglect. Anybody who says there is no such thing is engaging in the same kind of extremist hyperbole as those who say it is all around us and we've got to take action now."

Most experts, including Besharov, do agree that an increasing number of serious abuse incidents fall through the cracks between ambiguous definition and the lack of a clear-cut solution. But how many is debatable. Since Congress almost inadvertently included "mental injury" (with no further clarification) in the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1974, states have been required to report cases of emotional abuse and neglect. But using what amounts to a "know-it-when-you-see-it" approach means the tally of actual cases remains as fuzzy as the definition. Counting state and research figures, an article in the February issue of American Psychologist estimated "conservatively" that about 200,000 incidents of strictly emotional abuse take place in the United States every year. Some experts scoff that that is the tip of the iceberg, pointing out that it is probably inherent in what some estimate to be a million-plus cases of physical abuse and neglect of children each year.

"The truth of the matter," says Besharov, who is an attorney, "is that fewer than 2,000 children die of abuse and neglect every year. That makes it the fifth most common cause of death among children under 14, and obviously a cause for national concern. It doesn't make it a case for national crisis or for a no-holds-barred emergency response."

But for the problem to gain public and media attention, contends Besharov, cynics would require a million incidents a year. "The way to build up the incidents to a million," he says, "is to include all forms of child neglect and all forms of emotional abuse, including shouting and belittling children. Only when you include all forms of emotional abuse do you get anywhere near a million."

"Serious psychological abuse cases amount to 200,000 a year," he says. "That is a serious enough problem and we ought to do something about it. We just don't have to exaggerate it."

Stuart Hart, a professor of educational psychology and director of the national Office for the Study of the Psychological Rights of the Child at Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis, is halfway through a two-year project sponsored by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to develop an operational definition of emotional maltreatment. He sees the emotional abuse of children as "a powerful challenge to our culture" that demands a comprehensive remedy and not a "fragmented, crisis-only, quick fix."

Working with psychologist Marla Brassard of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Hart is attempting to draw the line that separates what is and isn't emotional abuse. "If you consider treatment of children as a continuum with highly positive and supportive interaction on one end and severely damaging acts on the other," explains Hart, "we're looking at things that fall from the extremely negative point to some neutral point — in other words, the mildly to moderately to severely destructive."

Extreme acts of emotional abuse and neglect are easily identified — by experts and by the courts. For punishment, a child is locked in a dark closet for hours, or even overnight. A child is tied to a bedpost while the parent goes to the store or to work. Failure to thrive — children who aren't emotionally nurtured enough start losing weight and can even die — is considered emotional neglect. Hart adds to this list acts of continual humiliation (hanging the sheets of an adolescent bed-wetter from his window), isolation from outsiders and peers, constant degrading and terrorizing.

But, in its milder forms, what appears to be psychological maltreatment to some experts is considered by others simply poor parenting. Among actions that Hart includes as emotional abuse are setting low expectations for a child, failing to give a child attention, putting unfair pressure on a child, using coercive discipline and punishment, even milder forms of put-down and rejection ("He's the clumsy one in our family" or "She's the slow one").

Sometimes what parents brush off as just talk, some mental health experts believe is abusive and damaging language: "The parent that says, 'Why don't you go live with your father,' or 'I'd go crazy if I had to stay home and take care of you,'" says Egan. "That's just routine talk in many homes. ... Most parents, even when they do things that we would consider damaging, have the notion that they are doing something useful for their child."

But where Dr. Egan contends that a parent who fails to use a seat belt for a child is harming the child mentally, Besharov argues for a distinction: "It is very dangerous behavior. But we don't use the family court system to deal with that. We fine people. We give them tickets. These people don't need a social worker once a week. They need to be told, 'Don't do that anymore.'"

"What happens," adds Besharov, "is some use the extreme stuff to justify government intervention in other cases where the problem isn't so obvious, where the amount of harm to the child isn't that great, what we could call 'inappropriate child-rearing.' Constant belittling of a child, shouting at a child. ... We know it is not good for them. But we don't know how bad it is."

"We know you shouldn't park a child in front of a television for 12 hours. But it isn't child abuse. It's bad child-rearing. ... Sadly, there has been this tendency recently to call this kind of thing psychological abuse. My answer is that's a little like going out to fill potholes when you've got gaping holes in the bridges."

HEADER — Sometimes hands, er, paws just aren't enough when you're trying to get that last little bit from the bottom of the bowl. That's when drastic measures are called for and you have to dive head first into things, as this squirrel on the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill campus demonstrates with a bowl of frozen yogurt. Millions Suffer From Allergies

By REDBOOK
A Hearst Magazine

The air you breath is filled with millions of microscopic particles that can make you feel miserable.

They are the substances that may provoke an allergic reaction and, according to an article in the current issue of Redbook, some 20 million Americans suffer from allergies to airborne particles.

In up to 90 percent of these cases, the reactions — runny nose, tearing eyes, scratchy throat — can be controlled or eliminated.

Allergies to airborne substances often are referred to as hay fever if they occur in the fall and rose fever in the spring. These are misnomers, according to Dr. David A. Mathison, an allergy and immunology specialist at the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in La Jolla, Calif. Allergies to hay and roses are virtually nonexistent.

Doctors call the condition allergic rhinitis. If the symptoms occur at certain times of year, it is seasonal allergic rhinitis. All-year allergies are perennial allergic rhinitis.

The real culprits in allergic reactions are the pollens released by weeds, trees and grass, mold spores, animal dander, feather pillow and dust mites — microscopic members of the spider family that live in rugs, bedding and upholstered furniture.

When people with allergic rhinitis inhale anything to which they are allergic, their immune systems mistake these harmless particles for germs and react by launching defensive reactions to destroy them. The body produces histamine, which in turn produces allergic reactions.

Dr. Allan Giannini, assistant clinical professor of allergy and immunology at the University of California's San Francisco Medical Center and co-director of its allergy clinic, said people inherit a potential for allergies, which may show up from childhood through young adulthood.

The best line of allergy defense is to avoid allergens.

To avoid tree, grass and weed pollen, don't schedule outdoor activities between 4 and 10 a.m.

"Pollen counts are at their highest during these early morning hours," said Dr. Wellington Tichenor, of the allergy department at St. Clare's Hospital in New York City.

Indoors or in your car, keep windows closed and air-conditioners running. Make sure to clean your air conditioner filters frequently and replace them as needed.

For maximum filtration at home, you might want a HEPA or High Efficiency Particulate Air Filter. They cost several hundred dollars but are worth it for severe allergies.

To avoid dust mites, live without rugs or replace shag rugs with shorter pile carpeting. If housekeeping aggravates your allergy, wear a dust mask. Use a silicone-treated dust cloth.

Keep your mattress enclosed in a zipper plastic case, or vacuum mattress and box spring frequently.

To avoid mold spores, stay away from damp areas as much as possible. In a damp climate, use a dehumidifier. Mold thrives in bathrooms so scrub often with a solution of equal parts vinegar and water.

Replace feather pillows, consider a new home for your dog or cat or, at least, keep your pet out of the bedroom.

Over-the-counter drugs often provide significant relief to allergy sufferers, particularly antihistamines, but they also can produce drowsiness and, when taken for a few weeks, may stop working, Giannini said.

He said decongestant nasal sprays relieve nasal stuffiness, but are not recommended for use longer than three days.

"For many allergy sufferers, avoidance of allergens and OTC (over the counter) medication work fine," Mathison said. "But if these remedies don't prove effective or if antihistamines cause unacceptable drowsiness, then it's time to see an allergist for allergy testing."

Giving Seminars On Work Choices Is Part Of Job

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Linda Ford-Tellis travels for a cosmetic company speaking on women being self-employed, women who want to be self-employed and work alternatives.

"Women are realizing it's difficult to juggle family and career. They are looking for work options that best fit their lifestyle and therefore, a lot of them are looking to self-employment," said Ms. Ford-Tellis, who conducts seminars on the subject.

"Today, self-employment provides women with four basic needs — an opportunity to be her own boss, to make as much money as she wants, to set her own hours and to work out of her home," she said.

"Information we have gathered from various sources — Fortune Magazine and U.S. Today — have indicated that parents want less demanding jobs and jobs that don't interfere with their family life. So if an individual is self-employed, it affords them a work alternative that best fits their lifestyle," she said.

"We have found that women tend to feel guilty about leaving their children and are concerned about social problems such as peer pressure, drug and alcohol abuse and childcare facilities. Self-employment then becomes a very attractive work option for a woman that wants to place more emphasis on her home and family," she said.

"Self-employment for this woman allows her to take her children to the doctor, attend school programs and be there for her family. There is also the single head of household that may need to supplement her income in addition to working a full-time job. She can take on a self-employment venture on a part-time basis," she said.

"Self-employment in many ways can build a woman's self-esteem and self-confidence, once we realized there are transferrable skills that we often take for granted, like communication, budgeting and organization skills. The qualities and abilities necessary to succeed in business are often the same ones women develop or perfect through life's experiences," she said.

Ms. Ford-Tellis suggested the following tips for self-employment success: develop a schedule; set goals; be dependable; develop good relations; invest in business; present a good image; think long-term, and don't give up.

"To succeed in any endeavor, you must enjoy what you do, have a desire to succeed, be willing to work and believe in yourself," she said.

Ms. Ford-Tellis is a public relations manager and lives in Atlanta.

Shy Unicyclist Wows Audience

By JENNIFER HALPERIN
The Champaign-Urbana News Gazette

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — He calls himself shy, but when David Winston hops on his unicycle or picks up his juggling pins, he becomes a true performer, capturing the attention of everyone around him.

He twists, jumps, tosses pins under his legs — all while balanced atop his single, spinning wheel.

And he makes it look easy. Though his talents may astound and amuse, he's by no means a clown. In fact, he resents those who view unicycling, his forte, as a circus sport.

"Somewhere along the line, unicycling took on a circus role," Winston said. "The circus has a lot of mystique, but it gave unicycling a black sheep image. People associate the unicycle with clowns and freaks."

Far from freakish, Winston's ideas on unicycling border on the profound and inventive.

"Unicycling is a good, creative outlet. It's a way to invent in an area that hasn't really been tapped. And it's a way of expressing myself as an individual in an unusual art form."

The infinite number of tricks possible on a unicycle provides riders with "a terrific mental challenge" as they strive to conquer the old and create the new, he says.

But Winston admits that the attention and recognition he receives while on his cycle provide some inspiration.

"I don't think unicycling would be worth my while with no audience," he said.

"It gives me an excuse to perform. But the unicycle can also serve as a kind of crutch. Riding is a way to get a rise out of people without fully exposing myself."

"I can be a ham sometimes. The feeling you get knowing you are doing something that barely anyone else can do is indescribable."

This is visibly true in the expressions on people's faces when they see Winston in action. Children murmur "cool" and "wow" as they watch him.

But surprisingly, Winston talks more about the negative feedback he gets from people who see him riding.

"I get looks every day I ride this thing," he said.

People sometimes sing circus tunes, or yell such things as, "Where's your other wheel?" — actions he sees as hostile.

The emotion behind the hostility is intimidation, Winston speculates, especially from "jocks" who are accustomed to being proficient at feats of physical fitness.

"Jocks see me riding and think, 'Here's some kid that doesn't look very strong, but he's doing something that I can't so I'll give him a hard time,'" he said. "At times I've considered giving it up."

Fortunately, Winston decided against giving up and has forged ahead toward lofty heights in the unicycling world.

At the recent unicycling championships in Tokyo, Winston took third in the freestyle event in the over-19 category. At last year's competition in New York, Winston took second place in the same group.

"I was not happy with my routine," Winston said of this year's performance. "I fell a lot because I was trying to do stuff I knew wasn't rock solid."

But he said, "There were a few tricks I did that no one else is doing yet. I did them successfully and I was happy about that."

Unicyclists worldwide would like to see the sport eventually attain Olympic status, but they realize they'll have a long wait.

Not only is the Olympic committee strict on adding new sports, but an Olympic event needs to have 40 or 50 countries participating. Unicycling currently has about 12, Winston said.

Boyd-Bennett Vows Spoken In Virginia

HAMPTON, Va. — The wedding ceremony of Barbara Ann Bennett and Thaddeus Nathaniel Boyd Jr. took place Sept. 12 in Buckroe Baptist Church. Eddie G. Heath conducted the double ring ceremony at 2 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Lenora Bennett of Greenville and the late James Bennett. The bridegroom is the son of Thaddeus Boyd Sr. of Hampton.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, James Bennett.

Vera Ames of Newport News was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Cheryl Harris of Hampton, sister of the bridegroom; Phyllis Gresham, cousin of the bride, and Sandra Hall, both of Newport News, and Doris Forbes Brown of Raleigh, N.C. Tagita Ames of Newport News was flower girl.

Aaron E. Wallace was best man and the ring bearer was Sir Chadwick Harris, nephew of the bridegroom. Both are of Hampton.

Groomsmen were Norice Boyd and Andrew Boyd, brothers of the bridegroom, John Green, James Hinton Jr., cousin of the bridegroom, Abraham Taft Jr., uncle of the bride, and Harry Watson, all of Hampton.

A program of wedding music was presented by Franky Nelson of Newport News, organist. Vocalists were Margaret Reid and Phyllis Gresham.

The bride wore a gown of ivory and gold lace styled with a semi-fitted tunic with a back neckline slit, extended shoulders and long sleeves. The crepe de chene bodice had T-straps and the flair skirt had an underline of crepe de chene which extended into a train. The hemline of the sleeves tunic and res were of gold lace. She wore a matching veil and carried a bouquet of blue roses with ivory baby's breath.

A reception was held at Phoebus Elks Lodge in Hampton. Daffie

MRS. BOYD

Branch greeted guests and gifts were received by Karen Johnson. Ann Moore, cousin of the bride, served cake.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and N.C. State University. The bridegroom graduated from Kecoughton High School in Hampton, Va.

Consult Lawyer About Your 'Ex'

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Fifteen years ago I had a whirlwind romance with a young man from South America. I married him, only to find out a month later that he was in the United States illegally and was only interested in obtaining residency by marrying a U.S. citizen. I was hurt, packed my things and left him. Shortly after that, he went to his country's embassy. They put him on a cargo plane and sent him "home" at his request.

The problem is, we were never divorced because I was never able to get in touch with him after he left this country. After several months of trying to locate him, I gave up.

Seven years ago, I met a truly wonderful man who wanted to marry me. I said yes, and we were married and now have three children. I finally told him I had never been divorced from my South American husband.

We both want to correct this, but my husband is in the military and I'm afraid it might hurt his military career should this come out.

To whom should we go to talk confidentially, and what are the consequences involved for my husband, me and our children? There is no way of getting in touch with my "ex." He disappeared from the face of the earth. Please help me. — WORRIED IN TEXAS

DEAR WORRIED: Talk to a lawyer. Since your marriage to the South American was based on fraud, it could be considered invalid and, therefore, easily annulled, in which case a divorce would not be necessary.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl who is currently going out with a guy who will be 19 very soon. I've been dating him for over a year, and in all that time he has never brought up the subject of sex. I think we have a good relationship.

On our last date, he said that he has a really nice night planned for his birthday and he wants me to stay the night. He told me that he would take care of the protection, so I wouldn't have to worry.

I don't know if I am ready for that kind of relationship, but I'm afraid I will lose him if I don't make love to him. I really love him and want to stay with him. What should I do? — TEMPTED IN UTAH

DEAR TEMPTED: I'm glad you asked. You are far from ready for that kind of relationship. And if you lose him because you don't make love to him, you are well rid of him. Both of you should be aware that sex with a 15-year-old girl in your state is a crime, making the adult male guilty of unlawful sexual intercourse with a minor.

Bridge Winners Are Announced

Chris Jones and Beulah Eagles were first place North-South winners in the duplicate bridge game played Wednesday afternoon at the Senior Center. Their percentage was .60.

Others winning were Kathleen Metz and Mrs. Stuart Page, second; tied for third were Mrs. M.H. Bynum and Mrs. Eli Bloom with Mrs. Zeb Cummings and Mrs. Harold Forbes.

East-West winners were Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Mrs. E.J. Poindexter, first with .71 percent; Dave Proctor and Graham Davis, second; Evelyn Forbes and Maureen Henley, third.

Tied for first in the morning game were Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts and George Martin with Mrs. Zeb Cummings and Sally Kirkwood with .62 percent; Mrs. Everett Pittman and Mrs. John McConney, third; tied for fourth were Mrs. Roy Hadden with Mrs. Sam Jones with Maggie Gentile and Roseann Pellatt.

Multimillion Dollar Bias Suit Settled

CHICAGO (AP) — Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. will pay up to $10 million for lost wages and make 342 jobs available to women over five years under a settlement with the federal government of a sex discrimination lawsuit, attorneys said Thursday.

"This settlement is historic for its cooperative disposition of a major lawsuit," Charles A. Shanor, general counsel of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, said at a news conference announcing the agreement with the Ohio-based glass manufacturer.

The settlement still must be approved by a federal judge.

The EEOC filed the lawsuit in 1978 after receiving a complaint from a woman who said she had been denied a job at the company's Ottawa, Ill., plant because she didn't meet minimum height and weight requirements, he said.

Under a 16-year-old policy, the company required factory employees to be at least 5 feet, 4 inches tall and weigh at least 110 pounds.

About 1,700 women were refused work at eight Libbey-Owens-Ford plants, and probably three times that many refrained from applying because they knew the company's policy, said Margaret L. Herbert, an EEOC attorney who worked on the case.

All would be eligible to benefit under the proposed settlement, to be advertised in five states where the company operates plants and in three where it once did, said EEOC attorney John P. Rowe.

"LOF's position is that its hiring requirements were job-related and necessary for the safe and efficient operation of its plants," said Byron Quandt, a company spokesman.

"We felt at the time that ... certain jobs in glass manufacturing and fabricating require a certain level of reach, strength and stamina in order to be safely performed," he said in a telephone interview. "The key thing was safety."

Quandt added that the height-weight requirement was used by the company under terms of a 1971 consent decree, reached in federal court in Toledo to set hiring guidelines.

Under its new agreement with EEOC, "the LOF has denied any liability for any violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act but has agreed to the terms of the settlement to avoid the cost of any further time-consuming litigation," he said.

Title VII prohibits employment discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

Under terms of the settlement, outreach programs will be established to try to locate women excluded from jobs because of the company's height and weight requirements, EEOC attorneys said.

That will include five areas where the company operates plants: Toledo, Ohio; Ottawa, Ill.; Sherman, Texas; Mason City, Iowa; and Lathrop, Calif. Also included will be areas in which it operated plants that since have closed: Brackenridge, Pa.; Charleston, W.V.; and Clinton, N.C.

Other U.S. plants and plants in Canada and Mexico are not covered by the settlement, Ms. Herbert said.

The company has 8,300 employees in North America.

White House Wins

toward a comprehensive ban on all tests.

"The real issue here is weapons development that fuels the arms race and threatens the future of unborn generations and the very future of our planet," he told his colleagues.

But Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., opposed the restriction, calling it "the wrong idea at the wrong time."

Exon noted that both superpowers announced last week they would begin talks aimed at reaching a comprehensive ban on nuclear tests.

The halt in nerve gas production was also proposed by Hatfield, who said, "what do we lose by waiting one year?" He said "a breather of one year in no way affects" the current U.S. nerve gas stockpile.

Emily Hits Bermuda

was being fed by temperature differences that usually affect other types of storms.

"It's become a hybrid," said Case.

"It couldn't do this on its own."

Case characterized Emily as "a very small, very tight-knit storm."

Overnight, Emily's winds increased from 70 to 80 mph and it picked up forward speed, racing northeast at 45 mph at dawn, according to forecaster Hal Gerrish of the NHC.

"The reason it's moving so very fast is because there is a strong (high pressure) front along the eastern coast of the United States and along that front is a flow of air from the southwest to the northeast. Emily is caught up in that flow," NHC meteorologist Joel Cline said earlier.

The National Weather Service issued a special cyclone bulletin at 2:45 a.m. after an Air Force reconnaissance plane clocked winds inside the storm at 1 mph over 74 mph — the defined strength of a hurricane, Gerish said.

Emily began as a hurricane Tuesday, plowing into the Caribbean island of Hispaniola, shared by Haiti and the Dominican Republic, and leaving three dead. But the mountainous island broke up the system, reducing it to a tropical storm.

On Wednesday, Emily swept north through the Bahamas and the Turks and Caicos Islands with reduced 60 mph winds, leaving the chain relatively unscathed.

Emily is the second hurricane of the 1987 Atlantic season, which runs June 1 to Nov. 30. It was the first hurricane in the Caribbean since Katrina in 1981.

Tough Day On The Picket Line

NFL Substitutes In Tough Spot

By The Associated Press
Players called to replace striking NFL regulars are running a gauntlet of eggs, taunts and raised fists.

Epithets were the order of the day on picket lines Thursday, but the efforts to stop the substitute players from joining teams grew violent at training sites for the Los Angeles Rams, Indianapolis Colts, New England Patriots, Philadelphia Eagles and New York Jets.

Charles Martin, who was waived by the Green Bay Packers earlier this week and then picked up by the Houston Oilers, was arrested in Green Bay for throwing an egg at a car that apparently belonged to a replacement player.

Sgt. William Parins said Martin, a defensive lineman, was taken into custody for throwing the egg. Martin said it was an accident and that he just dropped the egg. Parins said.

Martin was charged with disorderly conduct and released on $99.10 bond, according to Lt. Larry Gille of the Green Bay police department.

Last season, Martin was suspended for two games by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle for slamming Chicago quarterback Jim McMahon to the turf.

Team management used vans to bring 28 non-union players to the Rams' training facility, and a backseat window of one of the vans was shattered, sending glass into the vehicle. No injuries were reported, but Samuel Johnson, a free agent wide receiver from Prairie View A&M, was sitting next to the window and had glass fragments sprayed on to him.

Robert Cox, a second-year tackle from UCLA, admitted breaking the window but claimed he didn't mean to do it.

"It was an accident; we were just shaking the car," the 6-foot-5, 258-pound Cox said. "Nobody's out here to do anything violent."

In Indianapolis, striking players broke two windows in a bus and pelted it with eggs after the replacement players finished their first practice. Colts starting quarterback Gary Hogeboom is one of the NFL players to have crossed the picket line.

Striking New England players threw eggs and a beer bottle at some of the newly recruited players as the replacements were dropped off at a Sharon, Mass., motel by Patriots coaches following a practice session.

The bottle, thrown by nose tackle Toby Williams, landed a few feet from a car driven by offensive backfield coach Bobby Grier.

In Mount Laurel, N.J., striking Eagles blocked two busloads of their replacements at a hotel driveway, then shouted obscenities when the non-union players climbed from the buses and crossed their makeshift picket line.

The Philadelphia management had managed to get 53 substitute players into Veterans Stadium for a practice before any picket line was in place.

"I wouldn't be surprised if they sneaked them in last night and had them sleep there," said wide receiver Mike Quick, the assistant player representative for the Eagles.

At the Jets' training facility in Hempstead, N.Y., the car of defensive lineman Mark Gastineau, who crossed the picket line to play with the replacements, was egged along with a van carrying free agent players.

"It's all in fun, right?" asked Gastineau, before he was attacked by the eggs. "Hey, I understand them. If I didn't feel the way I felt, I'd be throwing eggs, too. They're nice guys."

"What does he think, that he's in the majority of the human race?" the Jets' Joe Klecko asked. "God bless him."

Non-union players reported to all 28 teams except the Minnesota Vikings, who will conduct tryout camps this weekend in Memphis, Tenn.

Vikings General Manager Mike Lynn said he waited until Sunday's games were officially called off Thursday before signing substitute players.

Strike Talks Not Progressing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Talks to end the NFL strike are, instead, slowly ending hopes for a quick settlement in the four-day walkout.

Though both sides would meet again today, little progress in the past 48 hours already has chased two key management negotiators home and prompted the league to call off this weekend's games.

The holdup: free agency.

"Any thoughts that it would be a one week, two-week or a three-week strike is probably wishful thinking, or someone is being misled," said Tex Schramm, the Dallas Cowboys president, who left the talks Wednesday along with Dan Rooney, the Pittsburgh Steelers' president.

"If this is the only issue that is prolonging the strike, then it could be a long one."

The last NFL strike, in 1982, lasted 57 days and wiped out seven weeks of the season.

It wasn't any prettier on picket lines.

Some players, once again, hurled eggs, tossed beer bottles and smashed windows of vans carrying their replacements to workouts. Charles Martin, formerly of Green Bay and now with Houston, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. Police said he threw an egg.

Jack Donlan, management's chief negotiator, threw some players when he said that six to eight weeks of hard bargaining remained even if the free agency issue is resolved.

"That's just Donlan trying to intimidate us until the next offer comes out, hoping we'll jump at it," said Neil Olkewicz, the Washington Redskins' player representative.

"They're just trying a scare tactic, trying to make us compromise more. That's just Donlan blowing smoke," said the Redskins' Dean Hamel.

"Jack's wrong," said Doug Allen of the players' union. "It can be done quickly if both sides are committed to doing it quickly by bargaining."

Donlan also said that while it might take as long as two months to finalize a new contract, the strike could be settled immediately if an agreement in principle is reached.

"We've got to get to work, but that doesn't mean players can't be playing," he said. "I'd love to see them back."

Union chief Gene Upshaw, however, said the owners were unwilling to move on any of the issues.

"Management has taken the position they will not compromise at all," Upshaw said. "Hopefully, we can reach an agreement, but the time is not now. We haven't accomplished anything so far."

And Donlan said they probably won't on the free agency issue.

Pirates Take On Eagles

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The history of the East Carolina-Georgia Southern series is a brief one, but the feathers have flown in each of the two previous meetings.

The two collide again on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Ficken Stadium as the Pirates play their second home game of the season, attempting to get back on the winning side of the ledger.

East Carolina comes into the game following a 20-10 loss on the road to the University of Illinois this past Saturday. The week before that, in the Pirates' home opener, the Bucs fell to highly-regarded Florida State, 44-3.

East Carolina opened the season with a 32-14 victory over N.C. State in Raleigh.

Georgia Southern brings in a 2-1 record, all against fellow Division I-AA schools. The Eagles defeated Catawba, 27-0, then fell to Florida A&M, 17-14. This past weekend, Georgia Southern defeated Middle Tennessee, 17-13.

"If people want to see a team that can move the ball, this is it," East Carolina Coach Art Baker said. "And Erk Russell is a great defensive coach and his team this year is doing an outstanding job."

The Eagles lead the nation in pass defense among Division I-AA teams, allowing but 56.3 yards a game. They also stand third in total defense, giving up 176.3 yards a contest. No team this year has gained over 200 yards on the Eagles.

Georgia Southern fullback Joe Ross — only a freshman — is 13th in the nation in rushing, gaining 104.3 yards a contest.

And Baker has a healthy respect for the Eagles, who are twice defending national champions in Division I-AA.

"They have about half of their defense back from last year and are a very hard-nosed team," Baker said. "They are coming off a tremendous win this past Saturday for them. And our game is important for them in that they are an independent and winning against us would do a lot for them in their hopes of getting back into the playoffs."

But if there is one thing the Pirates can be glad about, it's that Tracy Ham won't be at quarterback this year.

Three years ago, in the first ECU-GSU game, Ham threw and ran the ball all over the field, setting four offensive stadium records. The Eagles collected 35 first downs, threw 52 passes, gained 403 yards through the air (tying a mark), and ended up with 103 total offensive plays for 645 yards.

East Carolina still managed to pull out a victory, 34-27, but only because it had built up a big early lead in the game before Ham stared the Eagles on a comeback.

Last year, in the second game between the two, the Pirates came in winless and posted their first victory of the season. Ham, now a senior, lead a comeback that erased a 15-0 Pirate lead and knotted the game at 18-18 at intermission. Then, the lead changed hands twice in the second half before ECU took a 32-25 lead with eight minutes left to go.

Ham again led the Eagles on a drive, moving 89 yards for the go-ahead score, giving Georgia Southern a 33-32 lead with 2:59 to go.

But the Pirates were not to be denied that day, coming back to win on a 47-yard Chuck Berleth field goal with 12 seconds left in the game.

With Ham gone, the Eagles have been searching for the right quarterback to replace him. They started

"I think all the issues are doable except free agency," he said.

The union wants unrestricted free agency for players with more than four years experience; the owners have only offered to reduce the compensation. "We have an absolute difference of opinion on that issue," Donlan said. "It won't be different tomorrow."

The walkout by Schramm and Rooney came just hours after Commissioner Pete Rozelle announced that the weekend's games were off.

"The 14 National Football League games scheduled for Sunday and Monday Sept. 27 and 28 will not be played because of the players strike," he said in a statement.

The league said it was unsure if those games would be canceled altogether or played at a later date, and the NFL's 28 teams continued with plans to use replacements for games beginning Oct. 4-5. In 1982, one of eight games each team lost during the walkout was made up at the end of the season.

Donlan hinted Thursday that these talks may be headed for an end.

"It's a mistake if you're meeting just for the sake of meeting," he said. "At some point in time ... the parties might have to pull back and evaluate their prospective positions."

Upshaw, however, said he wanted to talk until there is a deal.

"We are going to continue to bargain if it takes two hours, two days, two weeks," he said. "We want to reach an agreement."

In Green Bay, Wis., Martin, who was waived by the Packers earlier this week, was charged with disorderly conduct for allegedly throwing an egg at a non-striking player.

In Anaheim, Calif., Rams offensive lineman Robert Cox pushed his fist through a window of a van carrying replacements. Defensive end Doug Reed splattered the van with eggs and shouted, "Go home, strikebreakers."

"It's hard to be out there and see people take your job," Rams linebacker Mel Owens said.

It was practically the same thing in Indianapolis, where striking Colts threw eggs at a bus.

At the New York Jets' camp in Hempstead, N.Y., striking players concealed about five dozen eggs in a baby carriage and threw them at their replacements.

Among those being pelted was defensive end Mark Gastineau, who chose to cross the picket line.

In Sharon, Mass., Patriots nose tackle Toby Williams tossed a beer bottle that landed a few feet from a car carrying replacements. There were no injuries.

with Ken Bullock, but Ken Burnette came on to earn a starting berth against Middle Tennessee. Bullock did not play at all in that game, and not listed on the two-deep chart for this Saturday. Instead, Raymond Gross has moved up to number two behind Burnette.

Burnette has hit on 12 of 28 attempts for 137 yards, with one interception. Gross has thrown only three times, hitting one for 13 yards.

East Carolina's offense is led by quarterback Travis Hunter, who has rushed for 161 yards and passed for 150, hitting 15 of 39 with two interceptions.

Fullback Anthony Simpson paces the rushing with 191 yards per try while Reggie McKinney has 92 yards on 11 tries and Jarrod Moody has 89 on 12 carries.

Baker has been looking for ways to get the ball into McKinney's hands more often. However, under the run-and-shoot offense, the defense dictates many times which of the two slotbacks — McKinney or Moody — will have a chance to carry the ball, according to Baker. "It depends on how they set up. We go to the side we feel we can make the most yardage against with the play called," he said. The quarterback indicates in his signals at the line of scrimmage which way the play goes.

Baker went to some I-formation plays last year in an attempt to get more "tailback" rushing in to the game, and said that this is one option he might consider this year to open up McKinney and Moody more.

Just because the Pirates won last year doesn't mean they can sit back and relax in this game, Baker warns. "We need this win. We've got to go out and earn it."

VanSant Tabbed

Henry VanSant has been named associate athletic director for internal affairs at East Carolina, ECU athletic director Ken Karr announced.

VanSant, who will begin duties on Oct. 1, has been the Pirates' administrative assistant to the athletic director for the past two years.

The Hampton, Va., native was a center and linebacker for ECU teams from 1959-61. He was the 1960 recipient of the E.E. Rawl outstanding student-athlete award. He was an assistant football coach for the Pirates from 1962-1970.

He was ECU's freshman coach from 1962-66, as his squad was the only undefeated freshman team in ECU history. He also assisted head coach Clarence Stasavich as ECU won back-to-back Tangerine Bowl titles in 1954 and 1965.

VanSant was also a head football coach at the high school level in North Carolina, as well as head coach at Guilford College and Lenoir-Rhyne College.

Dr. VanSant received his undergraduate degree and Master's Degree from ECU in 1961 and 1962, respectively.

He received his doctoral degree from the University of Alabama in 1975.

Top Teams Set For Battles

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

There are no playoffs for college football's national title, but four games south of the Mason-Dixon line Saturday have the look of a championship elimination series.

No. 2 Nebraska will be at No. 12 Arizona State, No. 3 Auburn is at No. 11 Tennessee in a Southeastern Conference game, No. 7 Ohio State travels to No. 4 Louisiana State and No. 5 Miami of Florida is at No. 10 Arkansas.

The four nationally televised games involving eight of the nation's top 12 teams are sure to cause a reshuffling in the Top 20.

"I told the players the other day this is one reason they came to the University of Miami, to play in games like that," Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson said. "We get excited when we have an enthusiastic crowd. I enjoy it. I think the players enjoy it."

Johnson said he has no qualms about facing a partisan crowd at Little Rock, remembering his team's success on the road against Notre Dame, Oklahoma, Florida and Florida State.

"Packed houses that scream and holler, it fires up our team as well as the home team," he said. "During the last few years, we've probably been on television more than any team in the country."

In other games involving ranked teams, it's No. 1 Oklahoma at Tulsa; No. 6 Florida State at Michigan State; No. 8 Notre Dame at Purdue; Georgia Tech at No. 9 Clemson; Arizona at No. 13 UCLA; Long Beach State at No. 14 Michigan; No. 15 Penn State vs. Boston College at Foxboro, Mass.; No. 16 Texas A&M vs. Southern Mississippi at Jackson; No. 17 Alabama at Vanderbilt; Pacific at No. 18 Washington; Kansas State at No. 19 Iowa; and South Carolina at No. 20 Georgia.

Nebraska-Arizona State is on ABC, LSU-Ohio State on CBS, Miami-Arkansas on ESPN and Auburn-Tennessee on WTBS, all in the afternoon.

Miami hasn't played since routing Florida 31-4 on Sept. 5 as quarterback Steve Walsh, the sophomore successor to Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde, completed 17 of 27 for 234 yards.

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield said senior Greg Thomas will start at quarterback even though he played little in last week's 30-15 victory over Tulsa because of an injury.

"We don't go in saying, they'll play 50-50," Hatfield said. "We go in and play situations, knowing both of them will play."

Arizona State will be an underdog at home for only the fourth time in 12 years when they play host to Nebraska, which outscored UCLA 42-33 two weeks ago.

"I haven't gone into a game yet where I felt we were going to get beat," Arizona State Coach John Cooper said. "I think we got a chance. I don't care who we play. I anticipate us playing an excellent football game — as well as we're capable of playing. But we got to play better than we did in the first two games this year."

Arizona State, 2-0, opened with a 21-7 victory at Illinois before beating Pacific 31-12. Nebraska also is 2-0 after crushing Utah State 56-12 and beating UCLA behind Steve Taylor's school-record five touchdown passes.

Coach Tom Osborne of the defending Sugar Bowl champion Cornhuskers said he expects a tough game out of the Sun Devils, who won the Rose Bowl last Jan. 1.

"They are well-coached and they don't make many errors," he said. "They mix it up well on offense with veteran running backs and a big strong quarterback and they will try to establish the run and then work in the pass."

Redshirt junior Daniel Ford has completed 20 of 38 passes for 310 yards and three touchdowns in his first two career starts for Arizona State.

In order to accommodate television, LSU is playing its game against Ohio State in the afternoon, a rare occurrence at Baton Rouge, where Saturday night football is a tradition.

Not since a 1980 victory against Mississippi has LSU won an afternoon game at home. Since then, the Tigers are 0-4-1.

The key matchup could be sophomore running back Harvey Williams, who has carried the ball 31 times for 302 yards in three games, against the Buckeyes' Chris Spielman, a 235-pound linebacker who has 34 tackles in two games.

The Auburn-Tennessee game could turn into a defensive struggle.

Numerous Changes For Leaders

Woody Peele

There were, indeed, several changes among the leaders on our panel of experts this past week as a group of tight games came out with varying results.

At any rate, Vickie Spivey has moved to the top of the heap, causing all of the male egos to shrink considerably. Spivey is a game up with a 28-8 record, while Tom Baines, Tom Morris and Don Reuter are packed in behind her at 27-9.

Joe Jenkins has escaped the cellar with a 25-11 mark, while a horrible week thrust this writer into Joe's accustomed place at 24-12.

Ah, well, the season is still young.

Our high school picks this past week saw several upsets as well, and we finished at 3-2, taking us to 17-9 on the year.

Better things surely lie ahead.

Most everyone on the high school level takes on conference opponents this week, and that brings us to several local games.

Rose High School will be back at home to play host to Northern Nash. The Knights are 0-3 on the year while Rose is 3-0, so it should look easy. It probably won't be. The Knights have been a thorn in the side of the Rampants for several years now, spoiling their league debut. This time, however, the Rampant defense should be ready.

We pick Rose, 21-7.

Ayden-Grifton plays host to Pamlico in a key Eastern Plains game. The Hurricanes have been making noises like a contender, while the Chargers have been gaining wins over teams ranked above them for the most part. Pamlico will have to play outstanding defense to shut out the Charger herd of running backs. And they probably won't be able to. Our pick is Ayden-Grifton, 22-12.

Farmville Central plays host to South Lenoir in another league effort. The Blue Devils have been looking more like a doormat than a contender so far this year. However, Farmville is coming off a frustrating evening against D.H. Conley last week. Unless the Jaguars overlook the Devils, they should claw their way back into league contention. Look for a 28-6 Farmville win.

Closing out the Pitt County games, Conley travels to Havelock for a Coastal game. The Vikings have won two in a row, but 4-0 Havelock is a horse of a different color. They are strong on defense and have a newly found passing attack. The Vike streak ends here as the Rams roll up a 35-14 win.

In other area games, it will be Jamesville over Creswell, Williamston over Northampton East, Greene Central over C.B. Aycock, Chocowinity over Belhaven, East Carteret over Washington and Roanoke over Plymouth.

Turning to the panel and East Carolina's game for this weekend. The Pirates take on defending Division I-AA champ Georgia Southern in this one. The Eagles, however, are without Tracy Ham, who has moved onto professional play. However, they do have an outstanding defensive unit that no one has gained 200 yards on in three games.

This will be the game. Our pick is ECU by 28-17, with the panel picking the Pirates right down the line, all six in favor.

Our other consensus picks: North Carolina over Navy, Duke over Virginia, Auburn over Tennessee, Texas over Oregon State, Georgia over South Carolina, Clemson over Georgia Tech, Maryland over N.C. State, Wake Forest over Appalachian State, LSU over Ohio State, Baylor over Texas Tech, and Florida State over Michigan State.

Redbirds Increase Lead

By The Associated Press

With the kind of running game the St. Louis Cardinals have, pinch-hitter Lance Johnson figured it was best to keep the ball on the ground.

Johnson's bases-loaded force play grounder with no outs scored Willie McGee with St. Louis' second run of the ninth inning as the Cardinals beat Pittsburgh 3-2 Thursday night at Busch Stadium.

The victory increased St. Louis' lead to 3½ games over the second-place New York Mets in the National League East and reduced its magic number to seven for a third divisional title in six years. The Mets lost 5-4 to Montreal in New York.

"I was just trying to hit the ball hard," Johnson said. "Basically, I wanted to hit the ball on the ground or hit a line drive through the infield — as long as I made contact."

Dan Driessen grounded a single to right field off reliever Jeff Robinson, 8-9, to start the Cardinals' ninth. Curt Ford pinch ran for Driessen and advanced to third when McGee singled off second baseman Jose Lind's glove into center field. Jim Gott relieved, and Terry Pendleton hit a double to tie the score 2-2.

After John Morris was intentionally walked to load the bases, Johnson, who was pinch hitting for Tony Pena, hit a hard grounder to third.

Darnell Coles made a diving stop, but his only play was to force Pendleton as McGee scored to give the Cardinals their 49th come-from-behind victory of the year.

"I'd rather win 15-0," Pendleton said.

Elsewhere, it was Cincinnati 5, San Diego 4; Philadelphia 3, Chicago 2, and Atlanta 8, Houston 7.

Robinson said the bad-hop single by McGee was the key to the Cardinals' winning rally.

"I made the pitches I wanted to when I wanted to," Robinson said. "In this case my luck just ran out, but that's the way it goes."

Ricky Horton, 8-3, picked up the victory for St. Louis.

Bobby Bonilla's two-run pinch double in the seventh inning had given the Pirates a 2-1 lead.

Driessen's one-out RBI single gave St. Louis a 1-0 lead in the sixth against starter Bob Walk.

Expos 5, Mets 4

Andres Galarraga hit a two-run homer and Dennis Martinez beat New York for the fourth time this season as the Expos took the Mets at Shea Stadium.

Martinez, 11-3, pitched five innings, allowing four hits as Montreal moved to within a half-game of the second-place Mets. Martinez, in his 22nd start since being acquired from Indianapolis on June 8, got his fourth straight victory. The Expos are 19-3 in games Martinez has started.

The Expos trail St. Louis by four games.

Andy McGaffigan followed with two innings of two-hit relief, Tim Burke pitched 1 1-3 innings, Bob McClure got one out in the ninth, and Randy St. Claire got Gary Carter to ground out to third with bases loaded to end the game.

Reds 5, Padres 4

Barry Larkin's double snapped a sixth-inning tie and lifted Cincinnati over visiting San Diego despite a record-tying single by rookie Benito Santiago.

Santiago hit safely in his 26th consecutive game to tie the modern major-league mark for rookies set by Guy Cartwright of the Chicago White Sox in 1943. The all-time rookie streak was set in 1899 by James Williams, who hit in 27 games for Pittsburgh.

"For me it means a lot of things," Santiago said. "It's my rookie year, so when I put that kind of number out there, I have to feel good."

Phillies 3, Cubs 2

Darren Daulton led off the 11th inning with his third home run as Philadelphia beat Chicago at Wrigley Field.

Daulton's homer into the right-field bleachers came on a 3-2 pitch from reliever Jay Baller, 0-1. Steve Bedrosian, 5-2, picked up the victory, pitching hitless ball over the final three innings.

Braves 8, Astros 7

Dale Murphy's run-scoring infield single with two outs in the ninth inning lifted host Atlanta over Houston, eliminating the defending NL West champion Astros from the race.

Murphy also had a two-run homer, an RBI double and a single in the game as he reached the 100-RBI mark for the fifth time in six seasons.

After the Braves tied the score with four runs in the eighth, Albert Hall was hit by a pitch from Jeff Heathcock, 3-2, with one out in the bottom of the ninth. Dion James sent Hall to third with a single and Murphy followed with a single to shortstop.

Jays Dump Detroit; Lose Fernandez

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Toronto Blue Jays won the game but lost a lot more. And they were as mad as dogs about it.

Tony Fernandez, Toronto's All-Star shortstop and offensive catalyst, was sidelined for the remainder of the season Thursday night after a hard — some said illegal — slide by Detroit's Bill Madlock in a game the Blue Jays won 4-3.

Toronto extended its lead to 1½ games over the Tigers in the American League East by taking the opener of a four-game series. Fernandez's fractured right elbow, however, had some Blue Jays talking about more than winning.

"Hard play and dirty play is different," Toronto rookie second baseman Nelson Liriano said. "(Detroit shortstop Alan) Trammell's got to take care now."

The play that could most influence Toronto's season came in the third inning after Madlock led off with a single. Kirk Gibson grounded into a forceout at second base, and Madlock appeared to go out of the basepath and crash into Fernandez.

Fernandez's elbow came down on a wooden border that separates the artificial turf from the dirt sliding area at Exhibition Stadium. The game was delayed for six minutes while Fernandez was examined on the field, and he was taken to Mount Sinai Hospital, where surgery was performed to wire his elbow back together.

"It was not a dirty play. Aggressive, yes. Dirty, no. The umpire was right there and saw the whole thing," said Madlock, nicknamed "Mad Dog" for his tough style. "I was just trying to break up two and get us an extra out."

No interference was called. Madlock, who also left the game after being hit in the chest by Fernandez's knee, was booed loudly when the replay was shown on the scoreboard.

Twins 4, Rangers 0

Frank Viola and Minnesota kept winning at the Metrodome as the Twins beat Texas for their sixth straight victory and closed in on their first division title since 1970.

Viola, 17-9, pitched three-hit ball for eight innings and won his ninth straight decision at home. The Twins have won seven in a row at the Metrodome and are 55-23 at home, the best mark in the majors.

Viola struck out 10 and lowered his earned run average to 2.88, second-best in the league. Juan Berenguer pitched a hitless ninth, striking out three more Rangers.

Charlie Hough, 17-12, gave up six hits in his 12th complete game. One of those hits was Greg Gagne's third career inside-the-park homer. It was a soft liner that skipped under the glove of charging center fielder Bob Brower and went for a two-run homer.

White Sox 4, Athletics 2
Floyd Bannister continued his late surge with a five-hitter as Chicago won in Oakland.

Bannister, 14-11, won for the 10th time in his last 12 decisions. He extended his string of scoreless innings to 28 1-3 before Dwayne Murphy homered with two outs in the eighth. Bannister struck out seven and walked none in his 11th complete game.

Mark McGwire hit his 47th home run, tying him with Toronto's George Bell for the major league lead, in the Oakland ninth after striking out in his previous three at-bats.

The White Sox scored three times in the fourth against Storm Davis, 1-1. Steve Lyons had an RBI single and Ozzie Guillen hit a two-run single.

Brewers 7, Red Sox 6

Mike Felder singled home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning and Milwaukee beat visiting Boston.

B.J. Surhoff led off with a double against Joe Sambito, 2-5, and took third on Ernest Riles' sacrifice. Felder then met reliever Calvin Schiraldi with a single to right field.

Mark Clear, 8-5, got the final out in the top of the ninth for the victory. Clear retired Wade Boggs, the AL's leading hitter, on a grounder in his only pinch-hitting appearance of the season with runners on first and second and two outs.

Rose Soccer Blanks Kinston, 4-0

Rose, behind two goals by Bobby Weisenberger, shutout Kinston, 4-0, in a Big East soccer match Thursday.

Rose scored all of its goals in the first half.

Richard Lewis and Russell Beane assisted Weisenberger on his first goal.

John Person and Scott Wester assisted his second goal.

John Beasley and Lloyd May scored the Rampants' other goals.

Beasley's goal came at the 22 minute mark while May got his goal at the 33 minute mark. The goals were assisted by John Person and Ed Norris, respectively.

Brian Willie had his fifth shutout of the season for Rose while Kinston goalie Wood Turner had 11 saves.

Rose outshot Kinston 19-2.

The Rampants are 4-3-2 overall and 3-1 in the conference and return to action Tuesday at Wilson Fike.

Bethel, Cox, Aycock Post Wins

AYDEN — Bethel Wellcome defeated Ayden-Middle School, 6-0, in junior high football action Thursday.

Derrick Brown led Bethel with over 100 yards rushing and a 35-yard touchdown run in the third quarter.

Defensively, Bethel was led by Terry Lamm, Mark Copeland, Reggie Perkins, Russell Brown, Reggie Cox, Mike Sheppard and Chris Sheppard.

Bethel is 1-0 and plays Chicod-Whitfield Thursday.

A.G. Cox defeated Frink Junior, 22-0, in junior high football Thursday.

Anthony Barrett scored on a one-yard run and ran in the two-point conversion. Aaron McKinney scored two times, from 29 yards out and 12 yards out. He also added a two-point conversion.

Cox is 2-0 and returns to action Thursday at Savannah.

E.B. Aycock defeated Nash Central 28-8 to win its opening game of the season Thursday.

Anthony Love scored three times to lead Aycock. The first score was 37-yards on a pass from Terrance Smith. The second score was a two-yard run and the final score came on a 34-yard run.

Darryl Edwards recovered a fumble and returned it 12 yards for another score.

Smith and Mike Aldridge had the conversions, on a run and a pass respectively.

Aycock returns to action Thursday against Rocky Mount at home.

Chicod-G.R. Whitfield and Whittington played to a 14-14 tie in junior high football action Thursday.

Eric Doscher scored all 14 points for Chicod, one on a 40-yard run.

Chicod is 1-0-1 and returns to action Thursday at Bethel.

Jaguar JV Rolls To Win

SOUTH LENOIR — Farmville Central rolled to a 41-0 win over South Lenoir behind the running of Jeff Tyson in JV high school football action Thursday.

Farmville's first score was by Shawn Ford on a 13-yard interception return.

Morris Foreman had the two-point conversion on a run.

The next score came on a 18-yard run by Anthony Foreman. Morris Foreman had the conversion run. Jeff Tyson added another Jaguar score on a 20-yard run. Morris Foreman hit Reggie Barrett for the conversion.

Calvin Jordan scored on a 46-yard in the third quarter and Daniel Herrin hit the kick for the conversion.

Jimmy Vines had a 26-yard scoring run in the final quarter. Lavonzell Payton kicked the extra-point. Payton added a 15-yard field goal to close the scoring out.

Farmville is 1-1 and returns to action at home against C.B. Aycock Thursday.

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose took a 10-6 win over Northern Nash in JV high school football action Thursday.

Rose scored in the third quarter when Harold Little blocked a punt and returned it 65 yards to the two-yard line. Ty Ficklin kicked a 26-yard field goal for the first score.

Maurice Hines added the other score on a 17-yard run. Hines had 118 yards rushing to lead the Rampants.

Rose improves to 3-1 and returns to action Thursday at home against Rocky Mount.

D.H. Conley defeated Havelock, 12-7, in JV high school football action Thursday.

Trailing 7-0, Conley evened things up in the second quarter on a 35-yard pass from Junior Farrow to Fred Streeter. The extra-point run failed.

Conley went ahead in the third quarter on a 40-yard run by Farrow.

Farrow and Streeter both had over 100 yards rushing for the Vikings.

Conley stopped Havelock four times inside the two-yard line in the fourth quarter.

Conley, 4-0 overall and 1-0 in the Coastal Conference, returns to action Thursday at home against West Carteret.

ACC Unlikely To Go On Sunday

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference commissioner Gene Corrigan says it is "very unlikely" that the league will switch football games from Saturday to Sunday to accomodate the television void created by the NFL players strike.

Officials at CBS and ABC have suggested Sunday college football as an alternative to NFL telecasts, which have been placed in doubt by the strike.

Corrigan said he and the ACC athletic directors discussed possible Sunday play 10 days ago during a telephone conference.

"There was very little sentiment for going to Sunday," Corrigan said. "I doubt that we get involved in that sort of thing. The only possibility would be a non-conference game away from home. All of our athletic directors said they don't like the idea of shifting home dates to Sunday."

Faculty Must Take Charge

RALEIGH (AP) — Faculty members at major colleges and universities must take a greater role in keeping watch over athletic programs if the current trend of scandals is to end, a Duke University law professor says.

John Weistart, writing in the current issue of Academe, the journal of the American Association of University Professors, says recent reports of academic and recruiting violations in big-time athletic programs shouldn't be surprising.

He adds, however, that faculty members should be upset when they learn of those violations through newspaper accounts, when they could have acted to prevent the problems.

"Imagine you're sitting in Georgia or Kentucky and after 10 or 15 years of being told by the university that these athletic programs are the greatest things going, there are educational deficiencies that haven't been addressed before," Weistart said in a telephone interview.

In his writings, Weistart says many faculties are reluctant to serve as monitors for football and basketball players.

NBC Takes News Division On Road For Trip To China

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tonight Tom Brokaw will be broadcasting live tomorrow from the Forbidden City in Beijing, China.

For the "NBC Nightly News" anchor, it will be early in the morning, a day ahead of the evening news in the United States.

NBC News has taken all its shows on the road to China for a week, as it did in 1984 to the Soviet Union.

"NBC Nightly News with Tom Brokaw," the "Today," the new "Sunday Today" show and "Meet the Press" will all originate beginning this weekend from such exotic locations as Beijing, Shanghai and the Great Wall.

"It's a very interesting country that is changing quickly, and we will be there just before the important party congress meetings where they will be debating the future of the country," said "Nightly News" executive producer William Wheatley before embarking on the trip.

Brokaw will anchor "Nightly News" from the Forbidden City in Beijing until next Tuesday. He'll be in Tiananmen Square on Wednesday, then move to the waterfront in Shanghai for the rest of the week.

The "Today" show will begin Monday with broadcasts from the Great Wall, Beijing and Shanghai. Even Willard Scott will be doing the weather from China.

Brokaw and several other NBC correspondents spent most of August taping remote segments. Brokaw did an interview in Tibet with the Dalai Lama. Boyd Matson went to Inner Mongolia and from one end of the Great Wall to the other. For one NBC correspondent, the China trip is a sentimental journey. Connie Chung is making her first trip to China, 42 years after her family left the country. Chung was born a year after they arrived in the United States, in Washington, D.C.

For a segment on the Saturday edition of "Nightly News," she will interview her own relatives — her father's cousin, an architect, and two of her own cousins, one a university professor and the other an accountant.

Boyd Matson will anchor the second edition of the network's new "Sunday Today" from Shanghai. He said one of the realities of covering China became a story itself — train travel.

For his camera crew to get a shot of the western end of the Great Wall, they had to spend 68 hours on trains in order to spend six hours shooting.

Luckily, he said, he and the crew could afford "soft sleepers" for their often 24-hour trips. Others have to sit on hard benches.

"So we could at least shut the door at night and sleep," Matson said. "Then we would walk from one end of the train to the other, taking pictures and shooting out the window, shooting the people on the train. The people are very friendly and cooperative, especially once you get out of the major cities. They're still somewhat enthralled by the sight of westerners."

Especially tall, blond westerners. Matson and his crew are all well over 6 feet.

"One time I was taking a still picture, because I thought, 'Boy, isn't this Chinese person interesting,' and I feel something on my arm, put the camera down and look, and there's a Chinese standing beside me rubbing the blond hair on my arm with his finger. He points and smiles."

"So we had a mutual curiosity society going in China."

Stylish NBC Comedy Features Acting Couple From 'L.A. Law'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Tucker and Jill Eikenberry, the real-life married couple whose "L.A. Law" characters raised bedroom temperatures last season, switch to a chillier relationship in a new NBC movie about marriage and murder.

"She's gardening next to the house," said Tucker, "and I'm on the roof with an auto jack trying to topple the chimney onto her. Instead, I fall off the roof. I compare it to 'The Roadrunner and Wily Coyote.'"

"Assault and Matrimony," which NBC will telecast on Monday, is a stylish comedy of mishaps and mayhem. Edgar Chalmers dreams of escaping his wife's incessant nagging. His wife, Sylvia, blames him for her unhappiness.

"It's a nice change of pace," said Eikenberry. "Usually, movies of the week are about diseases and tragedies. We hope this starts a trend toward comedy."

Tucker said it's the first movie the couple has starred in together. "In the old days we did small parts together. We were both in 'An Unmarried Woman' and 'A Night Full of Rain.'"

The movie also stars John Hillerman as their next-door neighbor and Michelle Phillips as a woman who hires Edgar as her accountant.

Eikenberry is also co-starring with James Farentino in an upcoming CBS movie called "Family Sins."

Tucker and Eikenberry, actors for nearly 20 years, suddenly became famous this past season as Stuart Markowitz and Ann Kelsey, the seemingly mismatched but loving lawyers in NBC's "L.A. Law." The show was created by Steven Bochco ("Hill Street Blues") and Terry Louise Fisher ("Cagney & Lacey").

Their affair has been one of the highlights of the hit show. The question they're most asked is the secret of the "Venus butterfly" — a bedroom secret Markowitz supposedly learned from a bigamous client. The only secret is that it's simply something the writers made up.

After a morning on the 20th Century Fox set of "L.A. Law," Tucker and Eikenberry talked about their movie and the new season of the series.

"I have two cases in the first three episodes that take me to court," said Eikenberry. "They're very controversial and deal with attorney-client privilege. Very meaty. Now we're getting into our wedding plans."

"It looks like it's going to be a rocky road on the way to the altar for Stuart and Ann," said Tucker. "I really don't know if they're going to get married. At the beginning of the season they're planning the wedding. But it soon becomes clear it isn't going to happen soon."

"Both characters have a lot of blocks about getting married," said Eikenberry. "Stuart is 42 and has never been married. We explore that."

Ann is reluctant to put herself in a situation where she loses control. She's worried about losing her independence because Stuart is very wealthy."

"That's Markowitz the character who's wealthy, not Tucker the actor," Tucker quickly added.

Until "L.A. Law," Tucker and Eikenberry, who have been married since 1973, had been primarily New York stage actors.

Award-Winning Writer Turns Director For N.Y. Film Festival

NEW YORK (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright David Mamet makes his directorial film debut at the 25th New York Film Festival.

He is one of the "new discoveries" at this year's annual celebration of movie magic which opens today at Lincoln Center with Nikita Mikhalkov's romantic caravan of Chekhov stories, "Dark Eyes." Mamet's "House of Games" closes the festival on Oct. 11.

The festival commemorates the 10th anniversary of Roberto Rossellini's death by presenting "Joan of Arc at the Stake," starring the late Ingrid Bergman, and "The Human Voice," starring Anna Magnani in the Jean Cocteau telephone monolog about a woman about to be deserted by her lover.

"Dark Eyes" is a rich tapestry of Russian stories and stars Marcello Mastroianni as a charming fraud, Silvana Mangano, Marthe Keller and Elena Sofonova.

Starring Lindsay Crouse, "House of Games" is the chilling story of a psychologist who comes up against a group of confidence men and their sinister leader (Joe Mantegna).

Mamet, who won a Pulitzer for "Glengarry Glen Ross" and who wrote the screenplay for the movie "The Untouchables," also wrote the screenplay for "House of Games."

Half of the 24 movies to be shown at this year's film fete are by newcomers to the festival, according to Richard Roud, director of the festival.

"There are a number of real 'discoveries,' such as Leos Carax's dazzling 'Bad Blood,' only the second film by the talented young French director," he said.

Carax's "Boy Meets Girl" was shown in the festival in 1985. "Bad Blood" is a continuation of new wave filmmaking and stars Denis Levant and Juliette Binoche.

'Miami Vice' Will Broaden Content For New Season

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Miami Vice" bows in for its fourth season tonight, and executive producer Michael Mann promises a wild season.

There will be "broader contrast, a much greater range in content, darker darks and brighter brights," Mann said in a recent interview. Some critics complained last season that the show seemed flat and humorless.

Mann stressed that he wasn't going to yuck it up this year, though.

"We've got some really heavy episodes coming up. The difference between this year and last year, last year a lot of stuff was coming out of headlines, which I liked. This year, it's mostly wilder, more flamboyant, having a ball with the show."

He said one episode will concern a conflict within the Roman Catholic Church about AIDS hospices. In another, Crockett's long-lost wife and son return, with his wife's new husband seeking to adopt the boy and change his name.

Mann said another episode about a TV evangelist is "totally off the wall." Then there's a "real scary sci-fi episode."

There's also the ballyhooed marriage between Crockett and a rock singer that's expected to last only a few episodes. Look for real-life celebrities in the background of the wedding scene. Producers have been calling around lining up famous faces as guests.

In the season opener tonight, Crockett is jailed on contempt charges when he refuses on the stand at a mob boss's trial to identify the informant he's been assigned to protect.

The lines are blurring between comedy and drama in the half-hour form, but tonight's premiere of "I Married Dora," on ABC doesn't seem to fit any mold other than perhaps black comedy. The premise, in fact, is a felony.

Architect Peter Farrell (Daniel Hugh Kelly) works in a typical sitcom office, lives with typical sitcom kids in a typical sitcom house and has a typical sitcom housekeeper, Dora (Elizabeth Pena).

His typical sitcom wife, we are told in title cards, died after impulsively boarding a flight to Rome that was hijacked and disappeared, with all aboard presumed lost.

Five years later, Dora is running the household when she gets word that the government intends to deport her to Central America. In between sitcom quips, she breaks down and tells Farrell she's afraid to go back because the death squads who killed her sister will be looking for her.

At the point in the episode when Farrell agrees to marry Dora so she won't be deported, the producers put up another title card: "Warning: Marrying an illegal alien to avoid deportation is a federal offense punishable by fines and/or imprisonment. Do not try this in your own home."

Yes, this is supposed to be a comedy.

In between these odd sitcom events, there is some good sitcom dialogue, and Kelly and Pena are certainly sitcom star material.

But it's hard to tell where the producers are going with the show. If it doesn't settle down soon and find a niche, it may be going nowhere fast.

On Saturday, it's treat time for folks who still remember when TV heroes had names like Matt Dillon instead of Sonny Crockett. "Gunsmoke" is back.

The 2-hour movie airing Saturday on CBS is, thankfully, not one of those cringe-producing forced reunions that just show how old everybody has gotten, but an entertaining tribute to the old series and the TV western tradition.

James Arness returns as Dillon — a few more lines in his face, but still the same enigmatic good guy. Amanda Blake is back as Kitty Russell, looking great, with only a slight speech impediment apparently left from the mouth cancer she conquered a few years ago. Buck Taylor returns as blacksmith Newley O'Brien, now marshal of Dodge City. Sadly missing is the late Milburn Stone as Doc Adams. The producers didn't attempt to replace him. Dennis Weaver, who played Chester in the show's early years, had other commitments, like his own new ABC series "Buck James." Ken Curtis, who played Festus, reportedly couldn't strike a deal with the producers.

The movie is set years after Dillon has retired to become a fur trapper in the mountains. Now, some of the bad guys he put away over the years are getting out of prison and coming after him.

The movie was shot in Calgary,

Canada, and directed by Vincent McEveety, director of 35 original "Gunsmoke" episodes.

"Gunsmoke" ran from 1955 to 1975 after three years as a radio show. It was television's longest-running western and the longest-running, prime-time series with continuing characters. The movie proves they can still make 'em like they used to.

People Meters Aid Some Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Cosby Show" wasn't the No. 1 show in every Nielsen ranking last week.

That's when Nielsen switched to its new people-meter ratings system that gives advertisers and networks more information about who's watching what.

This week the networks released lists of the top shows among the top two demographic groups — women 18-49 and men 18-49.

CBS' "Wiseguy," a male-oriented crime drama, was 21st in the overall audience rankings, but it was a top-10 show, at seventh, among men 18-49.

NBC's "St. Elsewhere" was a top-10 show among women 18-49, who placed it eighth. With overall audiences, though, it was 16th. It was only 21st with males 18-49.

"The Cosby Show" was the top-rated, prime-time show overall. It also ranked first with women 18-49. But with men 18-49, it was only fifth. Among men 18-49, the No. 1 show of the week was ABC's Monday Night Football.

The game, ranked second overall, wasn't even in the top 10 among women 18-49. They ranked it 17th.

The people-meter is a new, handheld device that viewers punch in on when they watch TV. The device, according to Nielsen, will more accurately and more detailed information about the age and sex of viewers.

Because advertisers like to target their commercials at the biggest-spending demographic groups, a show that does well with them can be considered a success by the network even if its overall rating is low.

Some shows received surprise renewals for the fall based on projected figures from people meters. "Sledge Hammer!" on ABC and "Crime Story" on NBC do well with male audiences, but don't get high overall ratings.

Last week's episode was a rerun, but "Sledge" moved up eight notches to 42nd in ranking among male viewers compared to its overall ranking at 50th. "Crime Story" was preempted last week. It started its new season this week.

"Golden Girls" made the overall top 10, apparently on the strength of older viewers, because it was not a top 10 show among either male or female viewers 18-49. The same went for the "Miss America Pageant," which ranked 6th overall but was 18th among male viewers and 13th among female viewers.

Fijian Strongman Stages 2nd Coup In 5 Months

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Military strongman Sitiveni Rabuka today staged his second coup in less than five months, saying he wanted to safeguard the rights of the minority ethnic Fijian population.

Rabuka, a 39-year-old ethnic Fijian who appointed himself head of the army at the time of his May 14 coup, announced in a nationwide broadcast that his forces had "reasserted their authority over the government of Fiji."

There were no immediate reports of injuries.

When he mounted the coup in May, Rabuka said he deposed Prime Minister Timoci Bavadra and his Indian-dominated Cabinet to restore political power to ethnic Fijians, a 47-percent minority. Indians, descendants of British indentured sugar plantation labor, make up 49 percent.

An interim government was appointed after the May coup, but Rabuka said he staged today's takeover because he was unable to alter the constitution to protect the rights of ethnic Fijians.

"I will be taking immediate steps to bring about the desired constitutional changes in a manner which will bring about lasting peace and prosperity in our beloved country," Rabuka said.

"I wish to assure all citizens, irrespective of race or creed, that the rule of law will be maintained," he said. "I appeal to everyone to remain calm and not to cause any disturbance."

Rabuka announced a nationwide 8 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew, the Australian Associated Press said.

Armed troops took control of the country's two daily newspapers and a commercial radio station at 4 p.m. (midnight EDT). Rabuka announced the coup on the radio 50 minutes later. Staff members at the newspapers and stations were forced from office buildings at gunpoint.

It was not immediately clear how many soldiers participated in the coup.

Telephone lines to the South Pacific nation of 715,000 were disconnected.

Governor General Ratu Sir Penia Ganilau, who represents Queen Elizabeth II in this former British colony, had headed the interim government assisted by a council of advisers that included Rabuka.

Ganilau was reported to be safe today at the Government House in Suva, where he was not being detained, according to Australian High Commissioner John Piper, who said he had spoken to Ganilau.

Bavadra was arrested by soldiers, according to Channel 9 in Sydney, Australia, and the Australian Associated Press.

The AAP, quoting an unidentified security guard, said Bavadra was arrested 25 miles west of Suva while driving to his home on the island of Viti Levu and held at an undetermined location.

The news agency reported that soldiers ransacked Bavadra's home in Suva, firing shots into the ceiling and terrifying the family, but that family members were not injured. It said troops left the house about 30 minutes later.

Rabuka retook control of the government following a week of increased racial tensions and an announcement Wednesday by Fiji's rival political parties to form a bipartisan government next Tuesday to be known as a council of state.

The 20-member council was viewed as a major step to restoring democratic processes to Fiji. Rabuka in his broadcast made no mention of that plan.

The council was to be run by Bavadra, a 52-year-old ethnic Fijian, and Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara, the prime minister defeated in April elections that brought Bavadra to power. Ganilau was to have acted in a prime ministerial capacity.

During the past week, ethnic Fijian youths have gone on smashing and looting sprees of Indian-owned shops in Suva.

Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke said he was "shocked and saddened" by today's coup, adding that his Labor government would immediately review its bilateral relations with Fiji.

New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange announced the Royal New Zealand navy ship Monowai would leave Saturday for Fiji in case New Zealanders need to be evacuated. He said there were about 1,000 New Zealand tourists in Fiji but said none of them appeared to be in imminent danger.

Chinese Economic Liberals And Go-Slow Rivals Reach Compromise On Leadership

By DANIEL SOUTHERLAND
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

BEIJING — Senior Chinese leaders advocating rapid economic change have reached a compromise with their go-slow rivals on changes in the top leadership that are to be endorsed at a Communist Party congress next month, according to diplomats and analysts here and in Hong Kong.

These sources say party elders who are apprehensive about the scope, pace and side effects of economic reforms introduced by senior leader Deng Xiaoping have given their qualified support to continued economic reforms and to the promotion of a number of younger leaders. But in return, the elders, who are sometimes described as conservatives, or traditionalists, will retain a number of key positions and continue to exert influence, the diplomats and analysts said.

The compromise, these sources said, will fall short of a breakthrough hoped for by Deng's reformists. But it is likely to guarantee China's opening to the outside world — and to foreign investment — for years to come, they said, because the factions largely agree on these matters.

For the Chinese people, however, it is likely to mean more power struggles and ideological conflicts. Within this framework, Deng, 83, will remain the final arbiter in many decisions, the analysts said. But they added that Deng will also be constrained by rivals and by his conservative instincts on certain political issues.

Chen Yun, 82, one of the major figures in the Chinese communist movement and Deng's most eminent aging rival, is expected to replace Deng as chairman of the party's central advisory commission following the congress, to be convened Oct. 25, the sources said. The ailing Chen's continuing influence at a high level is the strongest sign yet that a compromise has been struck between economic reformists led by Deng and the conservatives, whose most prestigious representative is Chen.

The advisory commission ostensibly serves only to advise the party. But a number of its members played an important role in forcing the ouster of then-party general secretary Hu Yaobang on Jan. 17. Hu was accused of weakness in dealing with student demonstrators who called for democratic reforms.

At the October party congress, Deng's allies, such as acting party general secretary Zhao Ziyang, are expected to announce an acceleration of economic change. At the same gathering, Zhao is expected to be made permanent party secretary. But the sources said the compromise will mean that Deng and his allies will have to move cautiously in introducing reforms.

The aim is to transform a Soviet-style, centrally planned economy into one that brings more free-market forces into play. Chen Yun is said to have agreed to resign, along with Deng, from the five-member standing committee of the party Politburo. But Deng is to retain the chairmanship of the party's military commission, which controls the army.

In a public appearance two months ago, Chen appeared feeble. But Chinese sources say his mind is sharp and he is consulted by orthodox Marxist ideologues who fear the "capitalistic influences" that have accompanied economic reform.

Foreign analysts in Hong Kong tend to differ with those in Beijing in their view of Chen. The Hong Kong analysts see a struggle for power in Beijing in which Chen challenges

Deng. Beijing analysts argue that Chen avoids open challenges to Deng and sometimes sides with him. Although the two leaders do not have a close personal relationship, they have cooperated well in the past, analysts here say.

Chen advocated the beginnings of some of the current reforms, but Deng has carried them further. He has favored rapid development while Chen has emphasized balanced development. One analyst, David M. Bachman of Princeton University, describes Chen as someone who "favors centralized control over economic processes somewhat more strongly than Deng and Zhao do."

Although he works mostly behind the scenes, Chen Yun, in a widely publicized speech two years ago, criticized party cadres who "put money above all else" and voiced concern over farmers who prefer to grow lucrative cash crops instead of grain.

Chen is said to favor the appointment of Vice Premier Li Peng to the key post of premier, and diplomats say that all signals now point to Li's appointment to that post in either a permanent or acting capacity early next year, if not sooner.

Most Observers Say Iran-Iraq War Stands Ready To Escalate

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The Iran-Iraq war is likely to escalate in the coming weeks, according to diplomats and Western military analysts, despite a U.N. effort to end the 7-year-old conflict.

Iraq has stepped up its air war and at the same time is bracing for another Iranian offensive, according to Western and Arab diplomats in Baghdad, Iraq's capital.

Western military analysts have reported signs of an Iranian buildup in the southern sector of the 730-mile battlefield over the past few days.

The Iranians also have increased weapons purchases in recent months and have boosted domestic production of missiles, anti-tank weapons and artillery, sources said.

"That could mean another push against Basra," an Iraqi city at the northern end of the Faw Peninsula near the Iran border, said former Canadian army Maj. Bob Elliott of the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies.

"But there could also be thrusts in the center and around the Faw Peninsula as well," he said. "The key question is Iraqi morale — will it hold? They're not prepared to take casualties, but the Iranians are."

Iranian Revolutionary Guards battled to within six miles of Basra in fierce fighting in January and February. Iranians captured a large chunk of the Faw Peninsula a year earlier.

Iran's state-run media, monitored in Nicosia, has reported that an estimated 20,000 to 30,000 troops have been sent to the front in the last two weeks.

The Iranians have been making limited thrusts in the central sector, where the frontline is only 80 miles northeast of Baghdad.

"An escalation in the war is inevitable," said one Western diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Many sources who believe an escalation is inevitable cite Iraq's impatience with Iran's failure to accept a July 20 U.N. Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire.

Iraq has said it will accept the cease-fire only if Iran complies with the U.N. resolution in full.

Tehran has made clear it will not agree to a cease-fire until Iraq has been condemned as the aggressor and punished.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier

Perez de Cuellar's visit to Baghdad and Tehran earlier this month in search of a cease-fire "hasn't achieved anything, it seems, and it looks like the war is going to go on," said a well informed Arab diplomat in Baghdad who spoke on condition he not be identified.

China Ties

RALEIGH (AP) — A delegation of administrators and faculty from North Carolina State University will travel to China next month to establish formal ties with five universities in the country's Liaoning Province.

The group, led by Chancellor Bruce Poulton, will be joined during the trip Oct. 8-15 by Gov. Jim Martin and state businessmen on a three-nation tour of the Orient.

Taiwanese Seeing Radical Changes With Martial Law A Thing Of Past

By ANNIE HUANG
Associated Press Writer

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Taiwanese have seen some radical changes since the Nationalist Chinese lifted martial law that has been in effect since they established a government here 38 years ago.

People now can go into a bookstore, for example, and find works by some mainland-Chinese authors. They can fly directly to Hong Kong. They find it easier to buy property overseas.

The Kuomintang, as the Chinese Nationalist Party is known, has eased its longstanding policy of no contact with communist China and is expected to soon allow reunions of families split since the end of the Chinese civil war in 1949, when about 2 million Chinese fled here from the conquering forces of Mao Tse-tung on the mainland.

Taiwan has experienced an unprecedented summer of change since the martial-law restrictions were lifted in July, but the political opposition says a lot more has to come before the Kuomintang can soothe discontent in many quarters over its one-party rule.

The lifting of martial law came after dissidents received about one-fifth of the vote in legislative elections in December and as the growing middle class clamors for a less restrictive society.

President Chiang Ching-kuo, 77, has been behind the change, hoping to solidify popular backing for the Nationalists before his term ends in three years.

"The public is anticipating more and faster reforms," said Nationalist lawmaker Huang Chu-wen. "If we fail to respond quickly, we may lose considerable public support."

Signs of the new times are visible everywhere. Demonstrations, once severely restricted, occur nearly every day as retired servicemen, laid-off workers, farmers and political dissidents take to the streets to press their demands.

Workers in many factories, once forced to keep their grievances to themselves, are finding that their complaints are no longer ignored.

In early August, for example, about two dozen union representatives of the Formosa Plastic Group, Taiwan's largest conglomerate, were called to a meeting with the chairman for the first time in 20 years.

Government censors, who once had little tolerance of harsh social or political criticism, have permitted the showing of "Daughter of the Nile," a movie that depicts Taipei as a wealthy but decadent city with youngsters running away from school, male prostitutes, gamblers and thieves.

Meanwhile, real estate brokers report Taiwanese are rushing in to inquire about real estate in the United States, Canada and Australia now that they can go to any bank and buy as much as $5 million worth of U.S. currency in one year.

Before July, Taiwan residents had to buy foreign currency on the black market if they wanted to invest more than $5,000 overseas.

One of the most unpopular aspects of Nationalist rule has been its strict policy of no contact with mainland China, even though most of Taiwan's 19.5 million people are ethnic Chinese and thousands still have relatives on the mainland.

That policy is changing, too.

The government has lifted a ban on direct flights from Taiwan to Hong Kong. The ban was imposed to prevent Taiwan's Chinese from going there and secretly crossing into China to see relatives. Some went anyway, although they had to take expensive, circuitous routes.

A ban on publishing works by mainland Chinese authors has been scrapped. A collection of essays from it

Serbian Party Chief Kicked Out

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serbia's Communist Party today ousted the Belgrade party chief after an unprecedented public debate that demonstrated conflict among the republic's Communist leadership.

The ouster of Dragisa Pavlovic was made in the early morning at a meeting of the Serbian party's Central Committee. The decision preceded a meeting of the national party's Central Committee on corruption in Yugoslavia and the implications of a banking and financial scandal.

The wrangle over Pavlovic exposed a long-rumored feud between the head of the Serbian party, Slobodan Milosevic, and the ambitious young president of the republic, Ivan Stambolic. Serbia, one of six Yugoslav republics, has a population of 9.3 million in a country of 23 million.

Pavlovic was fired by the Serbian Central Committee and pictures in Belgrade newspapers showed that 60 to 80 members of the 100-plus Serbian Central Committee supported the ouster.

Belgrade residents who watched much of the party debate on television said they could not recall such a public airing of leadership quarrels since the Communists came to power after World War II.

Pavlovic had publicly criticized Belgrade newspapers for printing articles that he said fueled ethnic tensions between Serbs and Albanians in the troubled Kosovo province, which borders Albania.

Milosevic called for Pavlovic to be fired and Stambolic supported him.

Several speakers in the two-day debate expressed frustration that the Communists were arguing while Yugoslavia faces an economic and social crisis.

Dusan Catovic, a blue-collar worker on the Central Committee, told his comrades Thursday he was offended because so much time was wasted discussing the Pavlovic issue.

On this day in 1513, Spanish explorer Vasco Balboa crossed the Isthmus of Panama and became the first European to see the Pacific Ocean. Balboa expected his discovery, along with his findings of gold and pearls, to earn him a governorship. But news traveled slowly, and King Ferdinand appointed another to rule the region. Jealousy between Balboa and the new governor grew. In 1518, the governor falsely accused Balboa of treason and sentenced him to death.

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Sept. 26

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is not a Saturday for lounging around and getting nothing done. Focus your attention on making realistic plans for future accomplishments. Plan your time and efforts carefully.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Confer with an expert before making any changes in your present mode of operation, then you'll have much more confidence.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Listen to, and understand, the ideas of others, although they may be radically different from your own. Don't dwell on the past.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If you are thinking of making any changes in business affairs, give your co-workers an idea of what they should expect.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Change your usual attitude toward close friends and family and you'll create much more happiness in these areas.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Shop around and find what you need to make your home more attractive, then you can invite friends in and feel quite proud tonight.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Get your financial affairs in good order this morning, making sure to budget in room for amusements and hobbies which you enjoy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Today is the perfect time to follow through on business matters which have been waiting. Cut down on extravagances and waste.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Be kind to your mate this morning, as he or she may be in a bad frame of mind. Stay around friends who you are particularly fond of.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Make your own needs secondary and concern yourself with the feelings of your loved ones. Watch out for obstacles in your path.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): If you confide in a principled friend, you can gain the assistance you need to make an idea a reality. Be sure to drive carefully.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): If you look from a new perspective, you'll see how you can improve your position in the business world. Be practical and exacting.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Know what your mate expects of you in order to avoid blunders. Learn more about the monetary aspects of your business.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
3 ♥	Pass	4 ♥	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠

If we can believe the tales we're told, half the world's bridge players are walking the streets barefoot because they forgot to draw trumps. The other half are going about unshod because they drew trumps too soon.

Since South's heart rebid in this sequence promised a six-card suit, North liked his hand, so he was able to get in a mild slam try early with his strength-showing diamond bid. He could then afford to simply bid four hearts, secure in the knowledge that he had already shown his extra values.

Declarer captured East's king of clubs with the ace and immediately drew three rounds of trumps. That cost him his cowboy boots. When he continued with a low spade, West followed low and, although dummy's queen won, declarer found he had no quick entry back to his hand to lead another spade. In the hope that the opponents would err, declarer exited with a club. West overtook his partner's jack, cashed the ten and then shifted to a diamond. Declarer vainly attempted the finesse, and East's king completed the defensive book. West still had to make his ace of spades for down one.

What declarer failed to realize was that dummy's trumps could have served a vital purpose—a line of communication between his hand and dummy. He could not afford to cash even one high trump in hand, since both of dummy's hearts might have been needed as entries to set up a long spade if East held the ace and West had no readily available entry to attack dummy's diamonds.

Suppose that, as before, West plays low. The queen wins, and now declarer can draw trumps, then lead his remaining spade. As the cards lie, West must take his ace and both clubs or else declarer will score at least one overtrick. When West shifts to a diamond, declarer simply rises with the ace and discards his losing diamond on the high spade. Declarer must come to ten tricks whenever West has either the ace of spades or the king of diamonds.
