Former Head Of Islamic Movement Executed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A relative of Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, the designated successor of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, was executed by a firing squad in Tehran at dawn today, Iran's official radio reported.

Mehdi Hashemi, a clergyman who ran Montazeri's office in the holy city of Qom until last October, had been charged and convicted of being "corrupt on earth," the most serious crime under the Islamic Shariaa, or Islamic law.

"The death sentence passed on (Hashemi) ... was carried out today at 6 a.m.," said the Tehran radio broadcast, monitored in Nicosia.

It repeated the list of crimes he allegedly committed, including murder, kidnapping, plotting to overthrow the government and smuggling arms.

Until his arrest last October, Hashemi headed the Global Islamic Movement, which was in charge of exporting the Islamic revolution. One of his main duties was to funnel arms and weapons to Shiite Moslem militants in Lebanon.

Hashemi's brother Hadi, Montazeri's son-in-law, also was arrested. There has been no word of his conviction.

Mehdi Hashemi was convicted by a religious court in a three-day trial in August. Before the trial, he appeared on television and admitted involvement in subversive activities.

In 1973, Mehdi Hashemi was convicted of strangling Ayatollah Shamsabadi, a clergyman loyal to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. He sentenced to life imprisonment, but was released after the shah was overthrown by the Islamic Revolution in 1979.

His recent arrest cast doubt on the political future of Montazeri, who the 87-year-old Khomeini has chosen as his successor as Iran's top leader.

Mehdi Hashemi used his association with Montazeri to build his own militia.

But his problems began when he tried to confront the powerful parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani.

Before his arrest, Mehdi Hashemi told the Lebanese magazine Ash-Shiraa that the U.S. had sold arms sales to Iran. He apparently made the disclosure in hopes of discrediting Rafsanjani by exposing his contacts with the Americans.

It was Ash-Shiraa that first made the arms sales public, saying the U.S. sold the arms to Iran to obtain the freedom of American hostages in Lebanon.

Diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, say Rafsanjani obtained Khomeini's approval before dealing with the Americans, and that Rafsanjani arranged for Mehdi Hashemi to be jailed.

In Tehran, executions generally are carried out within a few days of sentencing. In Mehdi Hashemi's case, the executions was put off for six weeks. No explanation was given for the delay.

Mudslide Leaves Over 100 Dead, 500 More Reported Missing

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP) — Weary workers dug into 20 feet of red mud this morning after a landslide crashed into Colombia's second-largest city and killed at least 120 people, including 43 children.

Some residents estimated as many as 500 people were missing after tons of mud and rocks entombed the Villa Tina slum district on Sunday. But Mayor William Jaramillo Gomez told the radio chain Todelar it would be impossible to calculate the number of people unaccounted for without taking a census.

At least 43 of the 120 bodies recovered were children, the director of the Medellin morgue, Oscar de Jesus Gomez, said in an interview with radio Todelar. Some of the children who died were attending first Holy Communion parties.

Five children were killed in a party at one shack, Archbishop Alfonso Lopez Trujillo told radio Todelar. Two of 25 children at another first communion party also were killed.

The names of the victims were not made public. About 200 people were injured, Jaramillo Gomez said.

A few survivors were pulled from the mud Sunday afternoon, but no one was found alive in the mud last night or this morning, the mayor said.

There was another small slide this morning, but no one was injured, Jaramillo Gomez said.

Sunday's mudslide covered more than 60 houses in Villa Tina, a poor neighborhood at the foot of Sugar Loaf Mountain. Up to 10 people live in each shack in the area, which has an estimated total population of 1,000. Houses in the area are made of scrap lumber, tarpaper and old tires.

"We heard the noise that sounded like an explosion and soon afterward a huge mass of rocks and mud descended upon us," said Mary Mosquera, who lost three daughters in the avalanche. "They were trapped by huge rocks and we couldn't do anything to rescue them."

"I thought an airplane had crashed on the side of the mountain," said Alirio Garcia, who helped rescue his wounded neighbors and recovered several bodies. "It was horrible."

Casey's Wife Says Reporter Lying

By LAWRENCE NEUMEISTER
Associated Press Writer

ROSLYN HARBOR, N.Y. (AP) — The widow of CIA Director William Casey doubts claims that her husband knew of a diversion of money to the Contras and called "absolute blasphemy" a report that he had criticized President Reagan as "lazy and distracted."

"He's lying about that," Sophia Casey said Sunday of journalist Bob Woodward's account of an interview with the hospitalized Casey, in which the CIA director reportedly acknowledged knowing about the diversion.

Woodward said he stood by his story.

Mrs. Casey called her husband "a team player" and "a great patriot who would never do anything to harm his president."

Woodward said in his forthcoming book, "Veil: The Secret Wars of the CIA," that Casey told him on his sickbed he knew about the diversion of funds obtained from arms sales to the Iranians. The money went to the Contra rebels seeking to overthrow the leftist Nicaraguan government.

Mrs. Casey, who lives in this Long Island town, said she doubted her husband knew about the diversion, but she never discussed it with him and "can't be sure either."

Mrs. Casey also challenged Woodward's depiction of her husband as a man who "found (President) Reagan strange" and felt that Reagan seemed to be "lazy and distracted."

"It's absolute blasphemy. My husband loved the president," she said, adding that she was outraged when she read Woodward had written that her husband was "struck by the overall passivity of the president."

"Bill would never say that about the president. Bill loved Reagan and they were very close," she said. "It's been very hurtful. It is terrible for the family. You can imagine how Reagan feels."

Casey died May 6 of pneumonia after suffering from brain cancer.

U.S. News & World Report, which obtained an advance copy of the book published by Simon & Schuster, said Woodward visited Casey in the hospital "and asked, almost rhetorically, whether he knew all along about the Contra diversion."

"Casey nodded a frail yes," according to the magazine's account of Woodward's book.

But Mrs. Casey said she is confident that Woodward never got to Casey on his sickbed.

"He was never in the hospital," she said. "I am refuting that Bob Woodward got into the hospital to see Mr. Casey."

Woodward, an assistant managing editor at The Washington Post, issued a one-sentence statement

Gulf Sea Lane Reported Closed After Mines Seen

By NABILA MEGALLI
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A major sea lane in the southern Persian Gulf was closed to commercial shipping today after several mines were spotted in the area, shipping executives reported.

Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit in London meanwhile confirmed that Iraqi warplanes hit four shuttle tankers over the weekend, killing a crewman aboard an Iranian government-owned tanker.

In Cairo, U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger called for a speedy United Nations arms embargo against Iran.

The shipping executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the deepwater channel 20 miles off the busy United Arab Emirates port of Dubai would remain closed to navigation until U.S. Navy and British warships swept for mines in the area.

Other sources, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said the United States believed Iran seeded

Labor Party To Review Policy

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Britain's opposition Labor Party, struggling to regroup after three successive election defeats, today voted overwhelmingly to launch a radical policy review.

Party leftists accused Labor leader Neil Kinnock of planning to abandon Labor's socialist beliefs in pursuit of the yuppie and blue-collar voters who helped Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher win a third five-year term in elections June 11.

But delegates to the week-long annual party conference, the first since the June elections, nonetheless endorsed the Kinnock-backed policy review document, titled "Moving Ahead." It is aimed at drumming up support among the better-off.

"The truth is that unless we change ourselves, the Conservatives are likely to dominate the politics of the '90s as they dominated the politics of the '80s," Labor legislator Charles Petrie warned the 4,000 delegates.

Big trade unions, which wield huge blocks of votes at the conference, supported Kinnock to defeat leftist demands that the party organize anti-Thatcher street demonstrations and that its legislators disrupt parliamentary proceedings.

The 45-year-old Kinnock flanked by deputies and seated on a platform decorated with the Party's red rose symbol, took no part in today's debate.

In a British Broadcasting Corp. interview to be broadcast tonight, Kinnock indicated for the first time that Labor may ditch its pledge to scrap Britain's nuclear weapons unilaterally. A transcript of his remarks was released early today.

Kinnock said it was inadvisable "to absolutely screw in attitudes and say that they are utterly permanent fixtures."

"The permanent fixture is the need to defend our country properly, the need to be effective allies and the need to meet those duties," he said.

"The systems of weaponry that evolves round — that is subject to change as the superpowers have currently demonstrated," he added.

The United States and the Soviet Union agreed in principle this month to eliminate shorter- and medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe. That would mean the withdrawal of American cruise missiles from Britain.

But the agreement will not affect U.S. F-111 nuclear bombers and nuclear submarines also based in Britain, or this country's own long-range nuclear missiles.

Earlier, Labor deputy leader Roy Hattersley described the anti-nuclear policy as "the major vote-loser" and said it must be reviewed.

Hattersley, on the right of the party, has opposed the anti-nuclear policy since its adoption in 1980.

Another left-wing legislator, Brian Sedgemore, launched a scathing personal attack on Kinnock and the party leadership, saying they inspired "all the confidence of Napoleon's army in retreat from Moscow."

After eight years of Mrs. Thatcher's rigorous brand of conservatism, Labor territory is now virtually confined to its depressed northern heartlands and rundown London boroughs.

"We should not shy away from arguing for our own policies in the language of individual self-interest and prosperity," said the policy review document adopted today.

Gaskins-Leslie Building on the Pitt County Memorial Hospital grounds.

The membership is composed mostly of persons who have had heart surgery and their families. The meeting is open to the public.

Ensley Trained

Dr. Donald Ensley is one of five people in eastern North Carolina selected to train and instruct human services professionals in abuse protection for the elderly and disabled.

Ensley, an associate professor of community health in the ECU School of Allied Health, will be working in a program funded by the Administration on Aging.

Along with other trainers, Ensley will instruct about 50 human services professionals in the eastern and Wilmington Area Health Education region in the program scheduled for February, 1988.

The program is being operated through the N.C. Division of Social Services. It is a statewide project, one of nine across the country, funded to develop a community-based model for dealing with and preventing abuse to the elderly and disabled.

College Program

Duke University will have an evening college program for students and parents Tuesday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Sheraton, Greenville. Admission requirements and financial aid programs will be discussed. Slides of the campus will be viewed, and information on educational opportunities will be provided by the admissions office staff, Duke faculty members, alumni and current Duke students.

SAT Improvement

Pitt County seniors improved in all areas on the 1986 Scholastic Aptitude Test, according to Rod Whitley, testing analyst for the schools.

There was a 5 point increase in the verbal area and an 8 point increase in math. Female scores contributed to the increase in both areas, as they did with both national and state trends.

"The increase this year has enabled Pitt County to meet the state average of 438 in the math area and to come within two points of the 400 average in the verbal area," he said. "We continue to be somewhat below the national average in the verbal and math areas, however, our scores continue to improve."

There are several reasons for increased scores, Whitley said. Parents and students participate more in the SAT to achieve the best possible score, and there has been increased emphasis in the schools on test-taking skills. Students also are provided with SAT workshops.

Body Found

WILLIAMSTON — A badly decomposed headless body was discovered along a logging trail in Martin County Friday afternoon, according to Martin County Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff Deputy Jerry Beach, who also serves as the Martin County coroner, said an employee of Weyerhaeuser Company found the remains in a drainage ditch along a Weyerhaeuser timber trail off N.C. 171 south of Jamesville.

"The body is so badly deteriorated that it was impossible to determine by on the spot observation if it was male or female," Beach said. "The head to the body was found some distance from the main portion of the body, but that could have been the result of some animal having dragged the head away."

The body was taken to Regional Medical Examiner Stan Harris in Greenville. Results of the inquiry were pending early today.

The Martin County sheriff's office and officials of the State Bureau of Investigation are conducting an investigation into the incident.

Thefts Investigated

Police said 11 thefts — one of them involving about 200 shirts — were reported to the Greenville department over the weekend.

Officer J.K. McCarthy said the shirts, including 30 to 40 blue "Coke" sweatshirts, a box of yellow "Coke" pullovers, a box of red "Wearable and Coke" pullovers and 100 dark blue "Prince" shirts, were reported taken from the Carolina Imprints warehouse at 715 Albemarle Ave. in a break-in reported at 7:19 p.m. Sunday.

Officer J.W. Corbett said $140 in cash and $24 worth of food stamps were taken from 807 Douglas Ave. in a break-in reported at 10 a.m. Sunday, while Officer F.G. Pruitt said a bicycle was taken from 601 Roosevelt Ave. in an incident reported at 1:15 p.m.

Officer J.W. Isenhour said a motorized bicycle was taken from Ringgold Towers on Cotanche Street in an incident reported at 9:57 p.m., while Officer R.J. Brewington said a video cassette recorder was taken from a car parked at the Piggly Wiggly supermarket at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Hooker Road in an incident reported at 10:14 p.m.

Officer Pruitt said a wallet containing $6.50 was taken from a vehicle in an incident reported at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, while Officer J.A. Bartlett said a shotgun valued at $365 was taken from 115-N. Jarvis St. in a break-in reported at 5:35 p.m. Saturday.

Officer M.J. Nobles said a wall mirror, a television set and a plastic bird cage were taken from 1307A E. Second St. in a break-in reported at 6:08 p.m., while Officer R.G. Mendenhall said a license plate was taken from a car parked at 210 N. Elm St. in an incident reported at 9:50 p.m.

According to Officer Isenhour, a license plate was taken from a motorcycle parked in the Crows Nest parking lot at the intersection of 10th Street and Charles Boulevard in an incident reported at 9:55 p.m. and three television sets, a video cassette recorder, a microwave oven and a quantity of jewelry, with a combined value of $1,400, were reported taken from 1001 E. Third St. in a break-in reported at 11:12 p.m.

'Friends' Auction Successful

Approximately $40,000 was raised at the fifth annual auction held Friday to benefit the Boys Club of Pitt County.

In conjunction with the auction, a "Friends of the Boys Club" program was announced. The program is designed to provide the organization with continuous operating income.

"The auction was very successful, a sell-out affair with something like 250 people in attendance," according to Chet Emerson, the club's executive director.

"Once again, individuals, various groups and businesses in Greenville and Pitt County generously donated merchandise, art and other items for the auction."

The funds raised, Emerson said, "will be used for two major purposes, for the club's operating expenses and for capital expenditure."

In announcing the "Friends of the Boys Club" program, Cordell Avery, Boys Club president, said the program is a continuing one allowing interested individuals, agencies, groups or businesses to help the club by underwriting memberships for boys.

To get the program under way, Dr. D.H. Taylor and Spence Cosby, treasurer of the Rotary Morning Club, presented a check in the amount of $2,500 as the major kick-off contribution for the program.

"The Friday night auction and Rotary Club contribution again has given evidence that people in Greenville and Pitt County are generously responsive to the needs of the Boys Club program," Emerson said.

Prostitution Charges Levied

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — Most of the 32 people arrested on prostitution charges in a weekend raid on the Cotton Club have been released on bond, authorities said.

About 30 law enforcement officers from the sheriff's department and State Law Enforcement Division swarmed club in the Camp Croft area at about 2 a.m. Saturday, abruptly ending Men's Night activities.

Capt. John Blackwood of the Spartanburg County Sheriff's Department said three women and 29 men were charged. Many of the charges were for participating in lewd acts for pay, Blackwood said.

Blackwood said the department had been receiving complaints for several weeks that the dancers were performing lewd acts with customers.

During the past few weeks, undercover SLED officers, working with the sheriff's department, visited the club.

According to Blackwood, the undercover officers observed dancers removing portions of their clothing for a price and performing lewd acts with the customers, also for a price.

Blackwood said Linda Annette Diaz, 25, of Conyers, Ga., and Joann Downs, 25, of Atlanta, were being held late Sunday in lieu of $12,000 bond.

Madalis Matthews, 26, of East Point, Ga., had been released on bond, according to jail records.

Blackwood said the three women, performers in the club, were each charged with indecent exposure and nine counts of prostitution. Downs and Matthews also were charged with drug law violations.

Blackwood said William D. Curry,

41, the owner of the club, and Ricky R. Coleman, 27, the club security guard, each were charged with three counts of prostitution and permitting an obscene show.

Blackwood said the arrests were made peacefully. No one was injured and no minors were involved. Bystanders in the club were not arrested.

DECODERS AVAILABLE

Families with deaf children from infancy through age 21 are encouraged to apply for telecaption decoders for their television sets. The decoders are being provided through a new program sponsored by the National Captioning Institute and the North Carolina Department of Human Resources.

Tony Schreiber of the program for hearing impaired students at East Carolina University, is director of this activity known as Project Dare. He will determine which families with deaf children in this area are economically eligible to be provided a decoder at virtually no cost.

Decoders are devices which can receive and translate closed television signal broadcast along with regular programs on network and cable television. Words in dialogue and narration are printed as subtitles on the television screen for the use of deaf children.

Anyone who believes his family qualifies for participation in this program is asked to call Schreiber at 757-6729.

GROWING NEW BONE

If you have suffered bone loss in some of your teeth or supporting bone because of gum disease, we may recommend treatment with one of the new synthetic bone grafting materials. One of these, called Synthograft, is a resorbable ceramic material. Tiny granules are packed into the spaces left by missing or lost bone, providing a resorbable matrix or mold that is shaped to fit the missing bone. This has been shown to encourage the growth of new or regenerated bone, thus stabilizing the teeth and helping to restore them to health.

Gum disease comes on so gradually that unless you get regular checkups from your dentist it may have already caused serious damage before treatment begins. Caused by bacteria that attack your gums and teeth, gum disease has several stages.

Occasional bleeding of the gums is one of the symptoms of this disease. Left unchecked, however, gum disease eventually reaches your supporting bone and teeth and begins to destroy them. Your best protection from this disease is regular checkups by your dentist.

NOTE: We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S., P.A., Evans St., Family and General Dentistry. Greenville 752-5126

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Rudy Schulte

SHOULD YOU STAY OR LEAVE?

When you decide to sell your home, should you continue living there until it sells, or go ahead and move, leaving the house unoccupied? Which way will the house be most attractive to buyers?

Why not step into a buyer's shoes for a moment? The first house you see is occupied by a family with five children, a substantial collection of family photos on the walls, knick-knacks galore, and some massive traditional sofas and overstuffed chairs. You, on the other hand, live a spartan life with a few precious pieces of contemporary furniture. Do you think it will be difficult for you to picture yourself living in the home with your own belongings?

The second house you enter was vacated last week by the previous owners. There's no clutter, and the home is sparkling clean. In fact, all you see is four walls, a ceiling and the floor. Your mind draws a blank. Try as you may, it seems an impossible task to mentally place all your furniture and personal effects around the home. It's really an overwhelming task.

The truth is, there's no easy answer to this dilemma of whether to move or stay. Probably the best solution is to take the action which benefits YOU the most. Then, based on your decision, try to create the best possible selling atmosphere within the house.

BCBS Trims Backlog Of Medical Insurance Claims

RALEIGH (AP) — A backlog of 190,000 medical claims by state workers earlier this month has been cut to nearly 80,000, but it could be mid-October before the claims system is operating normally, officials of the state health plan say.

North Carolina, a not-for-profit insurance company with headquarters in Durham, won a $35 million, six-year contract to administer the state's self-insurance plan in November, but did not begin processing claims until July. The plan pays about $250 million a year in benefits and provides insurance to 375,000 state employees, teachers and their dependents.

Durwood F. "Butch" Gunnells III, executive director of the State Employees Association of North Carolina, said the problems appeared to be caused mainly by the transition and said Blue Cross might be able to bring claims handling up to par.

"The test is going to be: Can they iron this out, and how much time is it going to take them," Gunnells said. "I am trying to give them the benefit of the doubt."

"We do think this is a short-term problem," said Allen Feezor, acting executive administrator of the plan and the state's chief deputy commissioner of insurance. "Quite honestly, we had anticipated about a 60-day period of which there would be normal transition problems for any program of this size. But because of a couple of things, it is probably going to take about 90 days before things are going to get back to normal."

Assembly. Claims received after July 1 were not paid until after lawmakers adjourned Aug. 14 so that any changes in benefits made by lawmakers could be accounted for.

Harry Reynolds, who directs the handling of claims for Blue Cross, could not be reached for comment and did not return telephone messages, The News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

Under the contract with the state, Blue Cross is supposed to process 85 percent of the claims within 10 working days, a rate that would leave the plan with a daily claims inventory of about 35,000. Feezor said he expected no penalties to be assessed against Blue Cross.

"Given the number of things that happened in the first two months of the contract, neither the backlog nor the service is out of line with what was expected," Feezor said. "That is not to say that we are pleased with the delays in answering the phone or the backlog."

Nor are the workers on the health insurance plan pleased. Seven months after her husband was hospitalized by a heart attack, Jean P. Muse, a clerk for the state Department of Transportation, is waiting for the February doctor's bill to be paid by the state health plan.

She knows the claim was lost twice by EDS. But she hasn't been able to find out why a third filing hasn't been paid by Blue Cross and Blue Shield, which received it July 6.

"Seven to eight working days," Mrs. Muse said she was told at the time. On Friday, 10 weeks later, the bill had not been paid.

"This has been the longest seven or eight days I have ever spent," she said.

Increasing Mrs. Muse's frustration was her difficulty in reaching Blue Cross's Chapel Hill office by phone during her lunch hours and breaks. At one point, when she got past the usual busy signals, she was put on hold for 22 minutes.

The claims backlog clearly was a main reason for the jammed telephone lines, Feezor said. Other factors included confusion over new claim forms and benefit changes, an open enrollment period in early September when employees were allowed to switch health maintenance organizations, and questions about a 47 percent increase in the costs of coverage for dependents.

More Academic Witnesses Ready For Bork Testimony

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Law school professors, given a forum to address a national audience instead of a class, are flocking to the Senate Judiciary Committee to pronounce their verdict on the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Bork.

The parade of professors continued today, with more than a half-dozen academics set to testify at Bork's confirmation hearing before a still-divided Senate panel.

Another scheduled witness is former Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., a Bork opponent who will address the nominee's view that courts should reject Congress' right to sue the president in order to curtail his powers.

Former Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh, who served with Bork in the Justice Department in the early 1970s, is to testify in Bork's favor. So are other former department colleagues.

Academic witnesses and prominent private lawyers have dominated the witness list since Bork finished five days of testimony. They have produced diametrically opposed conclusions from Bork's writings and legal opinions.

Bork's supporters repeatedly have cited statistics showing the Supreme Court never has reversed the federal appellate judge, who participated in more than 400 opinions.

Bork's opponents counter that the Supreme Court has not yet reviewed any of these decisions.

Another dispute has centered on Bork's writings as a Yale professor, compared with his court rulings and his legal briefs as solicitor general.

Opponents cite Bork's articles as examples of his extremism. For instance, he has written that only political speech deserved constitutional protection; that the 14th Amendment's guarantee of equal protection only applied to blacks, not to women; that demonstrators who advocated violence but did not actually break the law did not deserve protection under the free speech section of the First Amendment; and that it would be a mistake to force desegregation of public facilities.

He since has changed those views, in some cases doing so for the first time during his committee testimony.

But Bork's supporters said the Senate should ignore old articles that were "ranging shots" and academic exercises.

Senators should concentrate instead on Bork's opinions and legal briefs, which show — according to backers — that Bork upheld women and minorities, and championed press freedom.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., a Bork supporter, said the concentration by opponents on the nominee's old articles will have a chilling effect on law professors who want to become prolific writers. They now realize, he said, that controversial writings could jeopardize their chance of ever being confirmed for the Supreme Court.

Meanwhile, a Louis Harris Survey taken Sept. 17-23 of 1,249 adults found 57 percent opposed to Bork's confirmation and 29 percent in favor.

And a New York Times-CBS News poll reported that of 836 adults surveyed Sept. 21-22, after Bork testified, 26 percent said they had an unfavorable opinion of the nominee; 16 percent had a favorable opinion; and 57 percent were undecided or had no opinion.

When the same question was asked Sept. 9-10, before the hearings began, 12 percent said they had an unfavorable opinion of Bork; 11 percent had a favorable opinion; and 77 percent had no opinion.

A Washington Post-ABC poll completed last week showed no significant difference in those who approve of Bork's nomination, from 45 percent on Aug. 5 to 44 percent in the latest poll. But it showed 48 percent disapproving, compared with 44 percent in the earlier survey, with the number of those with no opinion dropping.

The Times-CBS and Post-ABC polls have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points. The margin of error in the Harris survey was not reported.

Hahn's Taxes Said Probed

NEW YORK (AP) — A state grand jury is focusing on possible tax fraud in an investigation of the reportedly lavish lifestyles of former church secretary Jessica Hahn and her boss, the Rev. Gene Profeta, a newspaper said today.

Two people who identified themselves as Miss Hahn's former lovers say they were called to testify before the grand jury in Albany last week, the New York Post reported. They told the newspaper they testified Miss Hahn was in love with Profeta and that her lifestyle seemed far above what she could afford on her $80-a-week salary.

One of the witnesses refuted Miss Hahn's repeated assertion that she was a virgin when she had a sexual encounter in 1980 with former PTL head Jim Bakker and another minister, the paper said.

Miss Hahn said Sunday through her attorney, Dominic Barbara, "There are a lot of vicious people out there who want to hurt me and they're spreading a lot of ugly rumors and I'm not going to dignify any of them."

Profeta, pastor of the Full Gospel Tabernacle Church in Massapequa, said he did not know either of the two men interviewed by the paper and that rumors of a romantic relationship between him and Miss Hahn "are not true."

The two men, Barry Hawkins, 34, and Dinh Nguyen, 22, testified before the grand jury as part of an investigation being conducted by the Tax Investigations Division of the state Department of Taxation and Finance and Attorney General Robert Abrams' office, the paper said.

Hawkins, a musician who said he was married when he became Miss Hahn's lover in 1984, told the Post he spent nearly two hours testifying.

"The questions were purely financial," he said. "They asked me particular questions about Jessica Hahn and Gene Profeta. They wanted to know about their lifestyles and what my impression was of them."

Hawkins said Miss Hahn told him she was not a virgin when she had sex with Bakker.

Nguyen said he met Miss Hahn at a dinner party in July 1984, slept with her that night, eventually moved into a basement apartment in her building and continued the affair for a few months.

He also told the paper that Profeta stopped by Miss Hahn's apartment "sometimes four, five times a week."

Both he and Hawkins said Profeta confronted them about their relationships with Miss Hahn.

Hawkins said his relationship with her ended when Profeta called him and told him: "Stay away from Jessica" in what he said was "a threatening tone."

He added, "(Miss Hahn) has been in love with Profeta for many years. ... He was all she wanted."

A Tax Department spokesman told the Post he could "neither confirm nor deny" the existence of a grand jury.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Stable Economy

The Greenville area has a balanced economy which has remained stable over the past four years, says Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce President Bill Clark.

He expects the stability to continue. Housing prospects here are positive and such factors as good climate, friendly people, cost of living and less expensive land and labor than Piedmont cities give the area an edge.

Clark cited excellent medical care, cultural events, university atmosphere, shopping, low tax rates, a cosmopolitan flavor and a diversity of home styles for making the area attractive.

He cited the combined city and county new construction valuation of $45,650,979 for the first eight months of 1987. This compared to $32,899,501 for the same period in 1986.

Chambers of Commerce tend to boost their areas, but we totally agree with Clark. We do have a unique economic and livability situation here and we should savor it.

We can't, however, sit back and relax. If we want Pitt County to be a great place to live in the 21st century we will have to be vigilant.

We must continue to develop a school system second to none. We must protect our air and our water supplies. After a decade of cleaning up slums we must guard closely against older areas turning into slums. Pitt County must work to keep its dominance as a medical, cultural and shopping center in the east.

Transportation will be important, both public and development of roads.

The chamber should work immediately to restore the thruway concept to the new U.S. 264-west which will soon open. Although it was designed as a thruway the interchanges were stripped from it during the administration of Jim Hunt. If that isn't corrected the state might be looking at construction of another thruway sometime after the year 2000.

It's going to take much effort to finance the schools that we all want and know that we need.

Keeping the Tar River, Greenville's water source, clean is not always going to be a popular task.

We deserve a pat on the back for what we have done. We cannot rest, though, if we want the best for the future. There is much work and considerable fighting ahead.

AIDS Concern

If the dread disease Acquired Immune Deficiency is not rampant in this area certainly concern for it is affecting our lives.

A major concern about AIDS is the possibility of contracting the disease through blood transfusions. That has led to confusion about contracting AIDS through the donation of blood. Since sterile syringes and other equipment are used that is not a danger.

The recipient of AIDS contaminated blood, however, is considered at risk. Tests have been devised which identify the AIDS virus in donated blood. There is, nevertheless, a nagging concern about receiving of blood during operations and following accidents.

Medicine has responded to this with "autologous blood donation programs" as a part of which prospective surgical patients can give their own blood over a period of time to be used as it is needed during the surgery.

Now pathologists at Pitt County Memorial Hospital are considering a directed donor program under which future surgical patients could choose their own donors from friends or family and this "safe" blood would be used. Obviously this program will increase the cost of providing the needed blood for an individual who chooses to participate.

Instead of reaching into a blood bank supply the case would require scheduled times for the donors and then careful storing and record keeping to assure that the blood went to the intended recipient.

None of this fits the most efficient way of providing needed blood throughout our society. It is, rather, the sad result of the concern many people feel now that a baffling new disease is making itself felt in our society.

We cannot oppose the directed donor program or the autologous blood donation program. They are but alternatives being developed to accommodate society's most recent medical problem. Still it should be remembered that with present testing the chances are only one in 250,000 that the AIDS virus in incubation would be in a unit of blood.

Any of us face the possibility of needing blood immediately in the event of emergency surgery or accident. The choices are sobering but there is no question that, along with any alternative programs, a general supply of blood will have to be maintained.

Democracy By American Push And Shove

When President Reagan speaks of spreading U.S.-style democracy around the world, as he often does, Marxist regimes are clearly what he has in mind. He not only proposed a peaceful "crusade for freedom" in 1982 but has also supported anti-Communist insurgencies in Nicaragua, Afghanistan and Angola.

After nearly seven years in office, however, Reagan can name only one nation where communism gave way to democracy on his watch: the tiny island of Grenada, after U.S. paratroopers and Marines used overwhelming military force to depose the leftist government.

But while the high-profile campaign to roll back communism languishes, the administration can point to some remarkable successes for a quiet and low-visibility strategy of persuading pro-American dictators to give way to democracy.

When South Korea's authoritarian President Chun Doo Hwan agreed in July to allow his successor to be chosen by a direct popular election, he was responding primarily to domestic factors. But U.S. officials believe that steady American pressure to open the political process may have convinced Chun that he could not successfully resist popular demand for change.

As in Haiti and the Philippines last year, the administration carefully avoided harsh public criticism of the South Korean government while delivering an unmistakable private message.

While there are few similarities among Haiti, the Philippines and South Korea beyond the fact that they were ruled by authoritarian regimes, the general U.S. strategy was the same in all three situations. Washington supported the existing government until it began to waver in the face of growing domestic opposition, then weighed in on the side of the opposition.

When Reagan took office, he subscribed to a theory advanced by Prof. Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, later the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, that right-wing authoritarian governments were preferable to Communist totalitarian regimes, both for the people of those nations and for U.S. foreign policy.

Reagan clearly maintained that distinction when he proposed in a speech to the British Parliament in 1982 that the West join in promoting democracy throughout the world to "leave Marxism-Leninism on the ash heap of history."

Only recently has the administration broadened its democracy message to include nations with right-wing, autocratic governments. In Haiti and the Philippines, right-wing dictators fell to forces that promised democracy, and in South Korea a rightist regime now pledges major democratic reforms.

Robert G. Neumann, a senior adviser at the Center for Strategic and International Studies and a former U.S. ambassador, said: "I think the Reagan administration has very lately discovered that just being anti-Communist isn't enough."

U.S. officials say that authoritarian governments of either political extreme can be toppled only if there is a recognized local opposition strong enough to seize power on its own. But, they add, American intervention can make the transition more stable and less bloody. And, if all goes according to plan, the resulting regime is less likely to be anti-American.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz describes U.S. influence as limited but often important. "You've got to help them (local opposition leaders) pull the answers out of their own environment," Shultz said recently. "We can't snap our fingers and have people do whatever we think ... We try to be there and give counsel, to use our influence to see that these transitions take place in a peaceful and orderly way and in a way that is as consistent as possible with democratic principles."

"We've had a few cases where it didn't work," he said. "It didn't work in Nicaragua; it didn't work in Iran. We pay a heavy penalty when it doesn't work."

Even the last three successful results could still go sour: In South Korea, the government has pledged a democratic election, but only time will tell if that promise will be kept. In Haiti, protests have broken out against the transition regime that followed the ouster of dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier. In the Philippines, the democratic government of President Corazon Aquino has had to fight off a series of attempted military coups. Moreover, a determined communist insurgency menaces the Aquino government, just as it did the authoritarian regime of deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Some non-government experts argue that the administration was lucky rather than skillful in all three countries.

"In the end, the administration played a positive role in the Philippines," said Piero Gleijeses, a professor at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies. But he contended that "it was forced to play a positive role" by people like Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., who was Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman through last year.

"I don't think there is a strategy,"

Gleijeses added. "It was a very ad hoc response ... Eventually, they contained the damage that would have come from the previous strategy."

Neumann said the key question is how the administration can encourage authoritarian governments to move aside without creating chaos. "I foresee that in some of those places it will go wrong," he said. "It is impossible to fine tune. But, so far, in a number of places, the Administration has made the switch in time."

The textbook example was in the Philippines. For the first four years of his presidency, Reagan's relationship with Marcos was extremely close. About a year before Marcos fell, the U.S. government began warning him that he would have to move toward democracy or risk losing everything. In the meantime, Washington continued to express public support for Marcos as the recognized leader of his country.

After Marcos proclaimed himself the winner of a discredited election on Feb. 7, 1986, however, the United States shifted sides abruptly. Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., one of Reagan's closest friends, dramatically urged Marcos to "cut and cut quickly." A U.S. Air Force plane was provided to whisk Marcos to exile in Hawaii less than three weeks after the election. U.S. officials say Mrs. Aquino's "people power" revolution probably would have prevailed even without American help. But, by throwing its weight to the opposition, the United States convinced Marcos that the situation was hopeless, causing him to give up without what could have been a bloody fight.

Peace Appears In Our Time

It appears we have an agreement with the Russians to remove medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe. The negotiations were tough, and both sides worked hard to put a deal together.

How did it happen? One of the Americans on the delegation, said to be a CIA man, went to a Soviet delegate and said to him, "You might as well make a deal. We know for a fact your medium-sized missiles don't work."

The Soviet delegate, certain to be a KGB man, cried, "You've been spying on us! That violates the Geneva convention."

"Don't get so excited," the CIA man said. "Ours don't work either."

"You're sure?" "We couldn't even light a Christmas tree with one. For years we knew your missiles were no good - but it was only recently we found out ours are bummers."

"How can I believe you?" the KGB man wanted to know.

"Don't take my word for it. Inspect our contractors' spare parts. If that doesn't convince you the missiles won't work nothing will."

The KGB man was suspicious. "Why are you telling me all this?" "Because we want an arms treaty and the only way to get one is to convince you that what we are both taking out of Europe doesn't matter since they won't fly anyway," the CIA man said. "If we took ours out unilaterally the political fallout would be awful. If you take yours out alone you get the same flak. We have to remove them together so there will be peace in our time."

"Wait a minute," the KGB man said. "What about the Pershing missiles in West Germany? If both of us give up our missiles and the Germans keep theirs, Bonn could become the biggest threat to Europe."

"Don't worry, comrade. The German missiles don't work either."

"How can we be so sure each other's medium-sized nuclear weapons don't work?" the KGB man asked.

"As part of the treaty we will test-fire every missile as it is removed from its hole."

"At what target?" "Iran. It's always good for a soft landing. If for some reason the missile isn't a dud, then it's "Bye-bye Tehran."

"So what are you saying?" "We sign a treaty and remove all medium-sized weapons from Europe."

Then we go out and buy white tie and tails to wear when we get the Nobel Prize."

"Let's drink to glasnost and Gorbachev."

Strength For Today

"Timber!" We hear the cry in movie and television productions as the great tree starts to fall. Then it hits the ground with a noise like a thunderbolt.

But that is not the end of the matter. As a result of its fall the giant has crushed little trees which are now broken and will be utterly decayed in a few months.

Like a falling tree, every time we do evil we not only hurt ourselves, but others also. For example, when a great man in some high position plunges from his pinnacle of influence, he crushes many others in his fall.

Although we may not be in these high positions, we should remember that no other person falls into disgrace without dragging others with him. Family, friends - someone will be hurt, and perhaps fatally.

Finding The Way To Strategic Arms Control

Analysis

Attention naturally focuses on news that agreement has virtually been reached on a treaty to eliminate all Soviet and American intermediate-range nuclear (INF) missiles, to be signed later this year at a summit between President Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Both leaders have reason to be pleased, and so do both countries. U.S.-Soviet relations, and arms control, seem back on track. The climate is better, the rhetoric is civilized and arms reductions are welcomed by most people.

But what else does it mean? Does it consolidate a modest step in arms control or does it open up greater opportunities? Does it stabilize U.S.-Soviet relations so that we afford to turn to other things or does it mean there are new opportunities to pursue? Is it, in short, the end of a pull back from confrontation or the beginning of a new era of relaxation of tensions?

Reagan holds one key to answering these questions. He, alone, cannot make the eventual outcome into the "historic achievement" he has prematurely promised, but it cannot occur without his direct engagement. He may conclude that with an image of ability to deal with the Soviets, a disarmament agreement to demonstrate dedication to peace and a summit in Washington this year to display statesmanship, he should stop while he is ahead. On the other hand, he may see the INF agreement as the stepping stone to a larger strategic-arms agreement and a more secure place in history, validating this administration's approach based on "strength, realism and negotiation." He will make the decision—whether through considered choice, or through piecemeal actions without regard for coherence, significance or consequences.

The future of U.S.-Soviet relations depends on Soviet decisions and actions as well as American ones. Gorbachev does not have a countdown of the months to his retirement. While conceivably (though improbably) he could leave the scene before Reagan, he may well be the Soviet leader to start the 21st century. He can wait for the next U.S. administration, or the one after, if necessary. But he is eager and concerned that movement in development of military technology may foreclose opportunities for arms agreement, so he does not wish to wait.

Gorbachev has taken the bigger steps in moving to reach the INF agreement. To remove the deployment of U.S. missiles in Europe, he has to give up four times as many Soviet warheads as the United States. And he has had to accept Reagan's "zero option" of 1981 — an offer first fashioned by those in Washington who only wanted to embarrass the Soviet Union when it would have to reject the lopsided deal. Moreover, Gorbachev has had to agree to this arrangement with no constraint (or restraint) on a U.S. "Star Wars" program that threatens to compel the Soviet Union into a new upward spiral of the strategic arms competition.

Gorbachev has accepted the INF agreement for four reasons: He has been determined to start the process of reducing nuclear weapons; The Soviet Union has feared that the preemptive capabilities of the Pershing 2 missiles would make it more difficult to prevent escalation to nuclear war in the event of any outbreak of hostilities in Europe; an agreement would give impetus to improved Soviet-U.S. and Soviet-European relations, and agreement would give new legitimacy to the arms-control process. The last may be the most important.

If the Reagan administration were to leave office without having reached an arms agreement with the Soviet Union, its legacy would place a heavy burden on its successor: No agreement reached in 10 years; the expired SALT 1 interim agreement and unratified SALT 2 treaty abandoned; no resumption of negotiations on nuclear testing or anti-satellite devices, broken off by the United States in 1980; a bogus "re-interpretation" gutting the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, and official charges of Soviet arms control violations widely circulated and believed (although, in reality, greatly exaggerated). All these problems, of course, remain. But their impact would be greatly diminished if the same administration responsible for them had, itself, negotiated, signed and (preferably) ratified an arms agreement — any arms agreement — with the Soviet Union (INF was the most available). Under Gorbachev's more flexible "new thinking," to reopen the arms-control process was well worth a few hundred INF warheads.

Gorbachev and colleagues were, however, well aware that Reagan might well be content to settle for an INF agreement and a Washington summit—avoiding the hassle and complaints from the right wing of his own constituency for pursuing further negotiations and improved relations. Hence come Soviet efforts to induce the administration to adopt a broader arms-control agenda, something well worth yet more Soviet concessions. As a result of this month's meeting between Secretary of State

George P. Shultz and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, negotiations on limited nuclear testing constraints will now begin. Agreement may yet be reached on a ban on chemical weapons. Another summit in Moscow, in the late spring of 1988, might yet occur. Finally, the big stakes, for all, are the possibility of an agreement on strategic arms reductions.

Reagan has now declared that seeking strategic arms reductions of 50 percent is our main goal; Gorbachev has suggested such an agreement would be possible in the first half of next year. Shevardnadze brought Soviet concessions on some disputed strategic-arms points plus an indication that the Soviets would drop their insistence on linking more far-reaching constraints to the Strategic Defense Initiative, if only the United States would recommit itself to a strict observance of the ABM Treaty.

There remain several substantial unagreed points in the strategic arms reduction talks, but these differences do not appear insurmountable. Verification provisions must still be worked out, but no longer appear a major problem. The question of the Soviet — and American — stands on the issue of strategic defenses and space weapons has, however, appeared to block agreement. Now the matter is coming down to a bedrock issue: Is the United States — in effect, is Reagan — prepared to accept a continuation of the existing U.S.

commitment under the ABM Treaty? He can keep Star Wars on the basis that he himself set for it, consistency with the traditional interpretation of the obligations of the ABM Treaty (a treaty of unlimited duration), if he will now accept that commitment for 10 years. Even the length of that commitment may be negotiable.

Raymond L. Garthoff, a senior fellow at Brookings Institution, was one of the principal negotiators of the ABM Treaty, and is author of the just published "Policy vs. the Law: The Reinterpretation of the ABM Treaty" (Brookings).

Soldier Dies In Copter Incident

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — One soldier was killed and seven others injured when they were thrown from a helicopter during a training exercise at Fort Bragg, Army and Air Force spokesmen say.

"They were in a training exercise and something happened to the helicopter," Lt. Col. Rick Kiernan, a Fort Bragg spokesman, said Sunday. "While it was up in the air, something happened. ... It's easy to say if a plane crashes. But it didn't. The pilot was able to put it on the ground safely."

"The initial report indicated that while the soldiers were about the aircraft, something happened to change the attitude of the aircraft," said Capt. Rick Guidry of Hurlburt Field in Florida, where the Air Force MH-53H helicopter was based. "Several of the soldiers fell to the ground, sustaining their injuries."

Guidry said he could not say or did not know how many of the soldiers were thrown from the helicopter or how high the helicopter was when the accident occurred Friday night.

Kiernan said none of the Air Force crew on the twin-rotor troop transport helicopter was injured and the vehicle landed safely.

"One soldier was killed ... when something caused the helicopter to change its attitude, left or right, up or down," Kiernan said.

The dead soldier was listed as Sgt. Frank D. Winters, 22, of West Palm Beach, Fla., according to Capt. Thomas Nickerson of Fort Stewart, Ga. The injured included Sgt. Mark Andrews, Spec. 4 Jeffery Curran, Spec. 4 Jose Gonzalez, Pfc. Raoul Gutierrez, Sgt. Victor Oates, Spec. 4 Chris Tennington and Spec. 5 Anthony Riala. No ages or hometowns of the injured were available, Nickerson said Sunday.

The cause of the mishap is not known, Kiernan said.

The helicopter returned to Hurlburt, which is located near Eglin Air Force Base, where officials will investigate the cause of the accident, Kiernan said.

The soldiers were Rangers from Hunter Army Airfield at Fort Stewart, Ga., near Savannah, authorities said. They were from 1st Batt., 75th Rangers.

They were transported by U.S. Army air ambulances to Womack Army Hospital at Fort Bragg, where five remained in serious condition Sunday, Kiernan said.

Two of the soldiers, who were "very seriously injured" Kiernan said, were transferred to Cape Fear Hospital in Fayetteville, where they were being treated for head injuries.

Guidry said an Air Force panel will be formed to investigate the incident and that it is unlikely any more details beyond the names of the victims will be released until that is completed.

Elizabeth Dole Preparing To Open Charlotte Office

By The Associated Press
U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Hanford Dole is cleaning out her desk in Washington again, this time to open the Southern regional office for her husband's presidential campaign in Charlotte.

"I love this job," said Mrs. Dole, who leaves her Cabinet post Wednesday after 4½ years. "It's a very tough, challenging assignment. ... No one is saying you have to leave. Certainly I don't have to."

"It happened that the campaign staff came to me and said that if we had more of your time, we'd like for you to be on a 12-state Southern swing," said Mrs. Dole, who graduated from Duke University and got a law degree from Harvard. "If we had more of your time, we'd like you to open a regional campaign office and do some work out of there."

So she will open that office soon in Charlotte, 40 miles from her old home, and spend the next few months hop-scotching through the South trying to persuade fellow Southerners to vote for her Midwesterner husband, Sen. Robert Dole, in the March 8 regional presidential primary to be known as Super Tuesday.

"The career is not set aside," Mrs. Dole told the Greensboro News & Record. "Just because you don't have an employer for a while, or just because you are not drawing a pay check doesn't mean your career isn't going forward."

"I mean this is a challenging assignment to be discussing national and international issues with the press and the public. I will be lucky if I get to see Bob very much at all. It is not just standing at his side and smiling."

Mrs. Dole, 51, who grew up in Salisbury, married Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., the Senate minority leader in 1975 when she was 39 and a member of the Federal Trade Commission. The next year she took a leave as a commissioner to campaign for the Gerald Ford-Robert Dole presidential ticket.

In 1979, she resigned from the commission to work as a volunteer in her husband's failed campaign for the GOP presidential nomination.

Mrs. Dole wants to be remembered at the Transportation Department as the "safety secretary," a nickname she believes is deserved. Despite all the publicity about near midair collisions, she says airline travel has been the safest ever during the past three years. The railroads had their safest year. And the highway fatality rate the past two years has been the lowest ever, she says.

On other transportation fronts, Mrs. Dole takes credit for transferring government enterprises to the private sector, including the Alaskan Railroad and the sprawling northeast freight system known as Conrail. She's proud that she opened outer space to the private companies, abolishing NASA's monopoly.

But others disagree with Mrs. Dole's assessment of her term as transportation secretary.

"In the area of auto safety, we think she has been a poor transportation secretary," says Clarence Ditlow, executive director of the Center for Auto Safety, founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader. "I think her heart is in the right spot but she doesn't like confrontation."

Ditlow said his staff tried to meet with Mrs. Dole to discuss major safety defects in Audi and Ford transmissions but got detoured to lower level aides.

"If you compare her to Harry Truman, you would have to say the buck never gets to Elizabeth Dole," he said.

But many in high places praise her.

"She did an outstanding job as secretary," says Democrat Edward Breathitt, former Kentucky governor and now senior vice president of public affairs for Norfolk Southern Railway. "She had great skill in dealing with members of Congress. She was an articulate spokesman for the administration and her department."

IN THE STATE

More Awareness

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The deaths of 21 people in 31 air ambulance accidents last year has drawn attention to safety, and helped cut the accident rate for helicopters based at hospitals to less than half of what it was last year, aviation officials say.

"The fact is, there is a greatly increased awareness of the problems," said John Galipault, the president of the Aviation Society Institute, a private organization in Columbus, Ohio. "They're all singing from the same choir book now. They may be singing different songs, but at least they've been forced to sit down and think about safety."

According to the Aviation Safety Institute, there were 15.7 accidents involving medical helicopters for every 100,000 hours of flight last year. That was twice the rate of other types of helicopters and 2.5 times the rate of small planes and other non-commercial aircraft.

It was an awful record, even for an inherently risky business like medical helicopters, which fly at night and in weather that keeps other aircraft on the ground, and it prompted investigations by the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board.

Galipault said that so far this year, the rate is down to 6.7 accidents for every 100,000 hours.

The number of deaths, however, has increased. Twenty-three people died in 11 accidents during the first six months of the year. That includes the four who were killed when a helicopter from East Carolina University Medical Center crashed near New Bern in January.

"But we've gone about 108 days since the last aeromedical accident," Galipault said Friday. "That's pretty good. Let's hope it keeps up."

FBI Recruits Women

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The FBI is looking for a few good women, and agents are going to unusual lengths to find them.

Two weeks ago at the Southern Women's Show in Charlotte, a couple of FBI agents found themselves surrounded by people hawking the latest in cooking, women's fashions and baby wear.

It was an unusual place to find FBI agents. But then again, they also had something to sell: careers as special agents.

Agents may retire at age 50; they are required to leave the FBI at age 55.

Currently, of the 9,100 agents, only 800, or 8.8 percent, are women. Four percent are black, another 4 percent are Hispanic and 1.5 percent are Asian-American, according to Richards.

Richards, 46, said there is a need for women and minorities in the FBI because of the nature of investigatory work.

The long application process is designed to weed out everyone but the most qualified candidates.

Once accepted, candidates will spend 16 weeks training at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va.

Starting pay is $24,700, rising to $31,000 after graduation, Richards said.

Candidate Shortage

WILMINGTON (AP) — Three months before candidates begin filing for the 1988 elections, Republican leaders say they are having problems finding candidates to oppose Democratic congressmen in the eastern part of the state.

"I have no idea who, if anyone, will run," 7th District Republican leader Marie Moore said when asked who might oppose Rep. Charles Rose in 1988. "I don't know who will want to do it."

Last year, Rose trounced his most well-financed and best-organized opponent ever, beating back former Southport grocer Tommy Harrelson by 28 percent of the vote — even as he was dogged by charges he had improperly used campaign funds.

This year, the House ethics committee, which has been investigating the charges against Rose, could make a statement on what it has found. But Republicans seem to be betting that Rose — who denies the allegations — will be cleared.

Harrelson has given up his Southport grocery store and accepted a high-ranking job in the state Department of Transportation. He has not mentioned another run for office since February, when he told a gathering of Republicans he wanted to take on Rose, the Wilmington Morning Star reported.

The search for a challenger to 3rd District Rep. Martin Lancaster of Goldsboro, who won handily last year, has also disappointed the GOP.

Bush Balancing On Political Tightrope In Poland

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW (AP) — Vice President George Bush is paying continued homage to the outlawed Solidarity movement and simultaneously cementing ties with the Communist government as he conducts a diplomatic balancing act in troubled Poland.

"I just want to thank those that we've met with all day long, whether it's the government or the church or in the evening with (Solidarity leader) Lech Walesa and his associates," Bush said Sunday.

His remarks capped a day in which he met with Polish leaders in 17th century splendor and offered help in easing the nation's long-term debt problems, and also witnessed a public outpouring of support for Solidarity.

The vice president planned to follow the same sort of balanced itinerary today. In the third day of a four-day stay, he arranged to tour a churchyard where pro-Solidarity priest Jerzy Popieluszko was buried after being murdered by secret government police.

A few hours later, the vice president was expected to sign a science and technology agreement that is evidence of improved relations between the United States and Poland.

Bush, the highest-ranking American official to visit Poland in a decade, also was promised an extraordinary opportunity to make a five-minute live address to the Polish nation on television.

Bush was not the only one trying to find a balance.

The government made no attempt to prevent Walesa from attending a dinner in his honor held by the Americans. But police detained an opposition activist who took part in an anti-government demonstration in Krakow after a Mass commemorating Bush's visit, according to anti-government sources.

For his part, Walesa said he was grateful for the support Bush had shown Solidarity. Still, he said, "I'm thanking you for what you've done so far and asking for more."

A statement by the banned union issued late Sunday said the activists had told Bush that deep economic reforms and greater democratization "are indispensable steps" for Poland to avoid a "tragic civilizational regression."

According to the statement, Walesa expressed the hope that the United States would support its program for economic reforms and increased trade union freedoms.

Bush hosted the dinner for Walesa and other Solidarity officials at the home of John Davis, the ranking American diplomat in Poland.

"We've got great affection for you and support you," Bush said in one of a string of gestures designed to show his support for the banned independent labor movement.

Earlier, he appeared to flash a "Victory" gesture that Solidarity supporters favor, and told an estimated 2,000 worshippers in a Sunday Mass that Americans "have watched and suffered with you."

A Bush aide, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said he assumed Bush knew what was meant by the gesture.

Bush told his Polish audience, "We are confident that you will not merely survive the present difficulties but that you will prevail."

The Mass ended with the singing of a traditional hymn, with many of the worshippers making the "Victory" salute that has become a symbol of anti-government feeling.

But even as he supported Solidarity, Bush and his aides sidestepped a question about whether the United States favors legalizing the movement that has been officially banned since 1981.

"I think the U.S. position is so clear in encouraging pluralism and in encouraging recognition," the vice president told reporters with Walesa at his side.

Earlier, Bush met for more than two hours with Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the country's chief leader. Bush aides, also speaking on condition they not be identified by name, said the vice president had agreed the United States will support Poland's request for debt consolidation from the Paris Club, a group of western creditor nations.

They said the decision was part of a "step by step approach" to improved relations that Bush is determined to pursue.

These aides said they were pleased with the outcome of two days of talks.

"We think there has been progress. We think there's a long way to go," said one aide, indicating Bush's desire to see additional steps toward economic reform and greater human rights.

Despite the upbeat assessment, the aide said Jaruzelski complained that Solidarity's proposals showed a "suicidal incompatibility" with the vice president's call for economic reform.

This aide also said Jaruzelski told the vice president that "artificial acceleration of the process (of reform) could prove harmful in the long run."

Schroeder Agonizes Over Choice

By CARL HILLIARD
Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) — Rep. Patricia Schroeder acknowledged last-minute doubts as she returned to the city she has represented in Congress for 15 years to announce her decision today about a presidential candidacy.

"I make my mind up one minute ... and then I don't know what to do. I only need 'on one hand,' but there's always 'on the other hand,'" Mrs. Schroeder said Sunday, according to The Denver Post, which had a reporter on the flight the Democratic congresswoman took from Washington.

Mrs. Schroeder, 47, promised an announcement today in Denver's Civic Center Park after nearly four months of testing the political and financial support she could garner for a presidential campaign.

The Post said there were no signs of readiness to launch a campaign at Schroeder's Denver headquarters this weekend, and that she had raised only half of the $2 million she once said she needed to run a credible campaign.

The senior woman in Congress backed off the specific finance target recently as her supporters began to bring in contributions through the mail and showing of a Schroeder videotape at small gatherings around the country.

The "Run, Pat, Run" fund-raisers held nationwide on Sept. 20 were expected to draw as much as $700,000. National Organization for Women members, at their July convention in Philadelphia, pledged more than $350,000 toward a Schroeder presidential bid.

Besides finances, the major reservation expressed by Mrs. Schroeder was a reluctance to give up independence to political advisers.

"The minute I start talking to anybody professional in Washington, I start shuddering," she said two weeks ago. "They start talking about how you have to look presidential, how you've got to have at least 10 guys around you and they've got to be giving everybody body checks and throwing them out of the way."

Her exploratory campaign depended almost exclusively on volunteers to schedule appointments, plan fund-raisers and handle her arrangements in the 50 cities she has visited.

"When you totally turn it over to them, people have really made it happen," Mrs. Schroeder said recently. "What they're saying is, they're so pleased that someone trusted them enough to put on an event." Mrs. Schroeder's political career started with the slogan — "She wins, we win" — and a 1972 victory over incumbent Republican Rep. Mike McKeivitt.

She won by 8,099 votes that year in the heavily Democratic district. Last year, her re-election margin was more than 56,000 votes.

She has accused President Reagan of a "Rambo" mentality in dealing with Libya and Iran, and has said the administration is "into this mindset where you operate with your glands and not your brains." Mrs. Schroeder coined the term, "Teflon president," and has called Reagan a leader who relies on "happy talk" and needs a "rendezvous with reality."

She also has referred to the announced Democratic presidential hopefuls as resembling "a bowl of unset Jello," and as "wing-tip moderates."

Mrs. Schroeder has said she has superior experience on military and arms control issues from her membership on the House Armed Services Committee.

Near Miss Noted

NEW YORK (AP) — A twin-engine plane came within several hundred feet of President Reagan's helicopter because of communication problems at an air traffic control tower, a newspaper reported today.

The close call came Sept. 21 near the Statue of Liberty as Reagan was flying to Air Force One at Newark (N.J.) International Airport after addressing the United Nations, the New York Post reported.

Reagan's helicopter was at an altitude of about 500 feet either over Newark Bay or the New Jersey Turnpike when the private Beechcraft trying to land came within several hundred feet, the paper said.

"The airplane is almost on top of us!" the president's Marine pilot desperately tried to tell the control tower, according to an unidentified source quoted by the paper.

But controllers could not hear the pilot because they weren't monitoring the right frequency. The pilot finally reached the tower on a regular, unsecured frequency, the source said.

Gore, Dukakis Trade Barbs At Candidate Debate

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore Jr. is trying to turn the heat up in the Democratic presidential race and separate himself from his rivals by branding as "wildly unrealistic" their proposals on defense and foreign policy.

During a debate Sunday sponsored by an arms control group, Gore clashed with Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri.

"Get your facts straight," snapped

Dukakis when Gore said the governor had called for removing U.S. troops from Korea and stationing them in Japan.

"This is a real bad idea," Gore said of a Gephardt proposal to halt flight testing of missiles.

After the debate between the six Democratic presidential contenders, Gore, of Tennessee, told reporters: "We have to have a candidate who can win. The American people know that some of these ideas that were thrown around here this afternoon are just wildly unrealistic."

Also participating in the debate were Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona and civil rights activist Jesse Jackson.

The candidates doffed their jackets and debated in shirtsleeves in the auditorium of the Des Moines Women's Club located in a 19th century mansion.

The confrontation was broadcast live on Iowa Public Television as well as on several stations in other states.

But the critical audience for the participants were the people who will attend the Iowa Democratic caucuses Feb. 8, the first step toward choosing delegates to the party's nominating convention.

The debate was sponsored by STAR-PAC, a bipartisan political action committee that describes itself as campaigning to "make peace a winning issue" in 1988.

Dukakis said he never advocated pulling U.S. troops out of South Korea.

"I said that unless there is progress toward democracy, we might have to consider that," he added.

The Massachusetts governor said that historically when the United States has given unquestioning support to authoritarian regimes, "it invariably results in radical leftist revolutions." He cited Cuba and Nicaragua and said there was a danger of such a revolution happening in South Korea.

Gore's aggressive approach in the debate reflected his standing in the field. The latest Iowa Poll, published Aug. 30 in The Des Moines Register, had Gephardt leading the field with support of 18 percent of Democrats questioned and Dukakis running second with 14 percent. Gore brought up the rear with 2 percent.

A month ago when the candidates debated at the Iowa State Fair, Gore and Dukakis clashed when the senator questioned how much credit Dukakis deserved for the economic boom in Massachusetts.

multiple warhead missile on the face of the earth."

Simon said fewer than 2 percent of missiles tests were to check reliability. He said the overwhelming majority were for development of new missiles.

On the proposed agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles, Jackson was lukewarm.

He called the proposal, expected to be signed at a summit meeting this fall between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, "a short step for mankind, and a giant step for Ronald Reagan."

Des Moines, Iowa. Dukakis, the governor of Massachusetts, and Gore, a U.S. senator from Tennessee, were taking part in a debate concerning arms control. (AP Laserphoto)

Price Of Gas Down

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average retail price of gasoline dropped by nearly a penny during the past two weeks and the decline may continue, an analyst says.

The average price of all grades including taxes for the period that ended Friday was $1.0134 per gallon, a drop of 0.08 cent from the Sept. 11 survey, according to the nationwide Lundberg Survey of 13,000 gas stations.

At self-service stations, prices were: regular unleaded, $0.9488 regular leaded, $0.9158; premium unleaded, $1.0848.

At full-service stations, prices were: regular unleaded, $1.21; regular leaded, $1.1701; premium unleaded, $1.3071.

"Retail drops may continue in coming weeks as a result of a turnaround at the wholesale levels, responding to a strong pull in the spot markets," analyst Trilby Lundberg said Sunday.

Sentence

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County Jail inmate has been sentenced to 12 years in prison after pleading guilty to second-degree sexual offense stemming from another prisoner's charge of homosexual rape.

Dwight Daniel Epps, 24, changed his plea from innocent to guilty of the lesser charge during jury selection for his trial in Wake County Superior Court. Judge Wiley F. Bowen of Dunn gave him the presumptive sentence for the offense.

Epps and another inmate were indicted after a 19-year-old man told authorities he had been pulled into a bunk after midnight March 12 and sexually attacked.

Anderson Photo Is Released By Shiite Faction

By RODEINA KENAAN
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A photo of American hostage Terry A. Anderson was released today by a Shiite Moslem group together with a threat to kill Tunisian leaders if they allow the execution of seven fundamentalists.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, issued the threat in a typewritten note delivered with the photo to a Western news agency in Beirut.

Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is the longest-held of the 23 foreign hostages missing in Lebanon. He was abducted March 16, 1985.

Anderson's photo apparently was included to authenticate the note.

The black-and-white closeup showed a haggard, clean-shaven Anderson wearing a dark striped shirt and looking straight at the camera. The picture was similar to five other Anderson photographs released from November 1986 through February 1987.

Photo editors in Beirut say the new picture is the sixth from that sequence. It was taken from a slightly different angle than a photo released by the kidnapers on Feb. 14, 1987, which showed Anderson wearing the same shirt.

Two other pictures of Anderson have been released: one on March 17, 1985, showing him in the white shirt he was wearing the day before his kidnapping; and another on Aug. 2, 1987, which showed him with a bushy beard in a gray track suit.

In addition to claiming responsibility for Anderson's abduction, Islamic Jihad says it holds another American and at least three Frenchmen. The statement released today made no threats against the 23 hostages.

Also missing is Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, who vanished Jan. 20 in Beirut while trying to mediate the release of hostages.

"The price for the execution of our struggling brothers will be big heads of the leaders of the Tunisian oppressive regime," the statement said.

Tunisia's state security court on Sunday sentenced to death seven Shiite Moslem fundamentalists accused of trying to overthrow the Tunisian government with Iranian help. Two of them are in prison, and the other five were tried in absentia and are at large.

"We consider this step as a declaration of war on Moslems not only in Tunisia but throughout the world," Islamic Jihad's statement said of the sentences.

Salomon Stock

NEW YORK (AP) — A company headed by investor Warren E. Buffett has agreed to pay $700 million for a 12 percent stake in Salomon Inc., the parent company of Wall Street's largest investment banking house, a newspaper reported today.

Salomon, parent of Salomon Brothers Inc., said it would sell 700,000 shares of a new issue of preferred stock to Berkshire Hathaway Inc. of Omaha, Neb., and a company controlled by it for $1,000 a share. The New York Times reported today.

The new stock, which represents 12 percent of Salomon's total voting rights, will pay a 9 percent annual dividend and is convertible into Salomon shares at $38 a share after three years. Salomon's stock closed Friday on the New York Stock Exchange at $32 a share.

We can help you find the money you've been keeping in your home.

First Federal's home equity loans let you use your home equity to secure longer terms, lower payments and, often lower interest rates on an interest deductible loan for most any purpose.

Since First Federal has made more mortgage loans in Pitt County over the past 50 years than any other financial institution, it's only right that we show you how to make your home's equity work for you.

So, if you need a substantial loan for a car, a boat, a vacation, remodeling or even an investment, we can show you how to spread your payback period over a longer term with a home equity loan. Since there are more payment periods available with a home equity loan, your monthly payments will be lower, often at lower interest rates than conventional loans. And with a First Federal home equity loan, you may be able to retain your interest deduction, even under the new tax law.

When it's time to let your home pay you back for all your monthly mortgage payments, talk to the people at First Federal about a home equity loan. You'll be surprised at all the money you've been keeping in your house.

Women Started Oldest Library

Couple Celebrates 40th Anniversary

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer
DEFUNIAK SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — The once-tiny library in this Florida Panhandle town has grown in size and historic significance since it was built, mainly as a tourist attraction, a century ago.

A state historical marker proclaims the Walton-DeFuniak Library to be the "oldest structure in Florida built as a library and still serving that purpose."

Several additions have been skillfully meshed with the architecture of the original white-painted wooden building — the latest addition hidden partly below ground.

As a result, the original building appears just as quaint as it must have looked the day it opened, Dec. 20, 1887.

The men of Walton County then were too busy with other things so the task of starting a library in the recently founded railroad town was taken up by the women, said Dorothy Teelin, a former library board chairman and author of a brief history of the library.

The Ladies Library Association held dinners and ice cream socials to raise $580 for constructing a one-room building, only 24 by 16 feet, on the shore of Lake DeFuniak, one of the world's few perfectly round lakes.

"That was quite a luxury for a little town to have," said Librarian Marilyn Coe in a recent interview. "There was more going on then in proportion to the population than there is now."

DeFuniak Springs has grown from only 300 inhabitants to nearly 6,000 in the past century.

Yet in 1885, the tiny town had become the winter headquarters of the Chautauqua educational movement that started in New York State and swept across the country in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

The Florida Chautauqua was promoted by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, headed by the town's namesake, Fred R. DeFuniak.

People would come from near and far on the railway in late winter and early spring to hear oratory, take lessons on everything from cookery to literature and enjoy entertainment.

The library gave Chautauqua visitors something to help fill their leisure time, Mrs. Teelin said.

The library's major historic significance rests in its creation as an instrument of economic development, said Ron Blazek, a Florida State University library science professor.

Blazek discussed the library's origins in an article for the Journal of Library History titled "Adult Education and Economic Opportunity: The Library, the Chautauqua and the Railroads in DeFuniak Springs."

"Its presence served to reinforce the town's reputation as a cultural beacon for privileged classes, a first-rate selling point for entrepreneurial interests," he wrote.

Blazek added that linking commerce and culture was rare in 19th century America, particularly in Florida.

"That this (library) was a result of the designs of DeFuniak's founders is obvious, and the fact that their motives may not have been entirely altruistic neither surprises us nor diminishes the accomplishment," he wrote.

In addition to its history, the library is notable for a collection of swords and other weaponry collected by Kenneth Bruce when his father, Wallace Bruce, was ambassador to Scotland in the late 19th century.

"He didn't care whether it was authentic or not," Mrs. Teelin said. "Some isn't worth a cent. Other pieces are quite valuable."

The collection ranges from spears and swords used at the time of the Crusades to rifles of the Daniel Boone era.

The family came here in 1890 when Wallace Bruce was named president of the Florida Chautauqua.

The younger Bruce became a professor at now-defunct Palmer College and left the collection to that institution in his will. The college was in debt to the city when it closed in the 1930s, so the collection was turned over as partial payment.

For years it gathered dust in the city's firehouse, a Boy Scout building and City Hall.

"Some of the politicians came along and picked up some of the pieces of armor that were in pretty good shape and took them home," Mrs. Teelin said.

The rest eventually was cleaned up and put on display at the library as a civic project by the Pilot Club.

Mrs. Teelin said the library always has struggled for financial support.

It is funded now by the city and county, but in the beginning patrons paid fees. The women charged themselves 10 cents, but the men had to pay 25 cents, Mrs. Teelin said.

In 1893, The Ladies Library Association asked Fred R. DeFuniak to donate toward the first small addition to what then was called the DeFuniak Library. He never responded.

"They said, 'Ok, we'll just take his name off the library,'" Mrs. Teelin chuckled. "Isn't that just like a woman?"

The library has long since stopped being exclusively a women's project, but DeFuniak's name remains banished from the sign above the entrance. It still is inscribed only with the word "LIBRARY."

Mr. and Mrs. Maynard L. Summerlin, of Route 6, Greenville, were honored Sunday at a luncheon in honor of their 40th wedding anniversary.

Hosts and hostesses were their children, including Mr. and Mrs. Wade Jones Jr. of Pinetops, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Dwayne Summerlin, Mr. and Mrs. Roy G. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Rawes, all of Greenville, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ringold of New Bern, Michael C. Summerlin and Tony L. Summerlin, of the home. The couple has four grandchildren.

The luncheon was held on the lawn at the home of the honorees. A yellow and white color scheme was used. Approximately 50 guests attended.

Tobacco-Chewing Players Strike Out As Good Examples

DEAR ABBY: You will probably receive letters from both doctors and TV cameramen on this one. I happen to be one of the former.

"Disgusted Ex-Fan" complained about baseball players who chew tobacco and disgust TV viewers by spitting on the field. You explained that the players chew tobacco to keep their mouths moist and to relieve tension. "Don't chew out the players," you said. "Blame the cameramen who bring it into our living rooms. Spitting is not only unsightly, it's a health hazard."

Abby, spitting is much less a health hazard than chewing tobacco. "Smokeless tobacco," including snuff and chewing tobacco, is a major cause of cancer of the mouth and tongue. Unfortunately, our young people admire the ball players they see on TV and tend to imitate them. Also, there are better ways to keep one's mouth moist and relieve tension.

As for the cameramen, their job is to televise the ball game. They're not allowed to limit their shots only to the non-chewing and the non-spitting players.

So go ahead and chew out the players, Abby. They could do better by our kids. — DANIEL S. BLUMENTHAL, M.D., ATLANTA

DEAR DR. BLUMENTHAL: Forgive my bloom'n' error. You're absolutely right. I was off base on this one. Send me a bill. I have Medicare.

DEAR ABBY: There is a young woman in our office (I'll call Maggie) who orders merchandise from catalogs with the understanding that the merchandise can be returned if the customer is not completely satisfied within a certain number of days.

Maggie wears an outfit once and then returns it, and everyone at the office wonders how she can have such an extensive wardrobe on a working girl's salary. Then it was discovered she had been ordering clothes on approval, wearing them once and returning them!

If there is nothing illegal, immoral or unethical in such a practice, please let us know, since the rest of us would like to be "fashion plates," too. — OLD DUDS IN OKLAHOMA

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR OLD DUDS: This practice is not new, and everyone in the clothing business is aware of it. It is indeed illegal, immoral and unethical, and the cheaters seldom get away with it for very long.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that may seem trivial to some, but it has become a source of irritation to all concerned.

My husband's brother and his family come to our home quite frequently, and I always love to see them, but before I let them in, I ask them (especially their children) to please check their shoes, and if they're dirty, to please remove them, as we have light-colored carpets throughout our house. We have lots of animals and muddy areas around our house.

This family always put their feet up on my furniture with their shoes on. I don't mind if they put their feet up, as I do it myself, but I ask that they remove their shoes before doing so.

Although they have never been refused admission, it is quite obvious by the irritated expressions on their faces that they think I am being too picky. I feel that by now they should know that I don't want my carpets soiled and I shouldn't have to remind them every time they come over.

Tell me, am I rude to ask them to check their shoes? Or are they rude to act irritated and imposed upon when I ask them? — DON'T TREAD ON ME

DEAR DON'T: There's nothing rude about asking guests to please check their shoes — if you ask them in the proper tone. This family should know by now what's expected of them, so if they act irritated and imposed upon, THEY'RE RUDE.

Giorgi-Overman Vows Solemnized

NEW BERN — Broad Street Christian Church was the setting for the Saturday wedding ceremony of Cynthia Lynn Overman and Stephen John Joseph Giorgi. The Rev. C. Frank Speight conducted the double-ring ceremony at 4 p.m.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mrs. John P. Overman of New Bern and the late Mr. Overman and Mr. and Mrs. George Giorgi of Wayne, Pa.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John P. Overman Jr. of New Bern. Martha Mitchell of Humacao, Puerto Rico, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Tammy Boone of Atlanta, niece of the bride, Susan Bona of Edison, N.J., sister of the bridegroom, Ginger Symons of Greenville and Stella Moore of Rocky Mount.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Kevin Pain of Kill Devil Hills, Drew Spaeth of Oceanide, Calif., Jimmy Marchini of Wayne, Pa., cousin of the bridegroom, and Jimmy Ward of Garner, nephew of the bride.

Wedding music was presented by Mickey Wagemaker, organist, and Kim Craft, vocalist, who composed the music.

The bride wore a gown of bridal taffeta styled with a Victorian neckline accented with alencon lace and seed pearls. The long sleeves were enhanced with alencon and schiffli lace with seed pearls. The flowing skirt ended in a ruffle edged in alencon lace and extended into a chapel-length train. Her fingertip veil of tiered illusion had a hand-rolled edge. It was attached to pearl filaments interspersed with white silk flowers and pearl sprays. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses, gypsophila and ming fern.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore royal silk chantilly lace over taffeta gowns fashioned with short sleeves, sweetheart necklines and satin back bows. The honor attendant carried three long-stemmed red roses and each of the attendants carried a single long-stemmed red rose.

A dinner reception was held at the Sheraton-Greenville given by the mother of the bride. Mrs. Pug Rhodes greeted guests.

The bride and bridegroom graduated from East Carolina University. She is a loan officer at N.C. National Bank and the bridegroom is an account executive with NCR.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to San Diego, Calif.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner at the

Christmas Show Set For November

CHARLOTTE — The 29th annual Southern Christmas Show will herald the arrival of the Christmas season from Nov. 12-22 at the Charlotte Merchandise Mart.

Included in the show will be specialty ornament makers, original glass blowers, weavings and hand-spun items and handpainted baskets.

For the first time the show will have an official poster and limited edition print designed by North Carolina artist Allen Montague. The painting depicts an old-fashioned toy shop, and out through the window a frosty winter scene.

Show hours are 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. weekdays and Saturdays, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sundays.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose sharply today, inspired by hopes for a stable dollar in foreign exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks jumped 32.15 to 2,602.32 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by 5 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Volume on the Big Board came to 30.98 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

A.C. Moore, analyst at Argus Research Corp., said investors were heartened by the results of a weekend meeting of the Group of Seven industrialized countries in Washington.

There had been conjecture last week that the group might seek a lower level for the dollar in foreign exchange.

But instead, it reaffirmed its commitment to an agreement made last February to try to keep the dollar stable, apparently near its present levels.

Salomon Inc. led the active list, up 3 1/2 at 35 1/2. The firm bought out Minerals & Resources Corp. as its largest shareholder, and announced plans to receive a new infusion of capital from Berkshire Hathaway Inc., whose chairman, Warren Buffett, is widely known as a shrewd investor.

Point-plus gainers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, up 1 1/2 at 157 1/2; General Electric, up 1 1/2 at 62 1/2; Ford Motor, up 1 1/4 at 98 1/2, and Mobil, up 1 1/4 at 50 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 1.95 to 181.09. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.65 at 356.15.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average edged up 3.75 to 2,570.17, finishing the week with a net gain of 45.53 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE, with 676 up, 773 down and 479 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 137.95 million shares, against 162.15 million in the previous session.

Zaccaro Trial Starts

NEW YORK (AP) — John Zaccaro's attorney says he may try to have his client's trial on influence-peddling charges moved because of a "scandal atmosphere" and publicity accorded the defendant's wife, Geraldine Ferraro.

Zaccaro is accused of working with the late Queens borough president, Donald Manes, to extort a bribe from a cable television company that wanted the contract for the borough in 1981. Manes killed himself in March 1986 as the corruption cases unfolded.

Jury selection in Queens was set for today.

"We're ready to go," Ferraro, the 1984 Democratic vice presidential nominee, said Sunday. "We're anxious to get it over with. We're anxious to get this all behind us so we can go on with the rest of our lives."

But her husband's lawyer, Robert Morvillo, said: "You'd have to be insane not to be concerned about whether or not the jurors can put aside the publicity that has been attracted by my client, my client's wife, the companion cases and the scandal atmosphere in general."

"I feel confident on the facts and on the evidence," he said Friday. "I am leery about the atmosphere."

Zaccaro's case is one in a string of corruption trials tied to New York politicians in the last 20 months. The 54-year-old businessman has denied wrongdoing. At his arraignment 11 months ago, he said he is "simply and completely innocent."

the grand jury investigating Zaccaro, and a public relations consultant guilty in another cable TV bribe attempt with Manes.

Dick Piperno, spokesman for the prosecutors, declined to comment on the case, and Morvillo declined to outline his defense. But in March, he told Justice John Thorp that the case was riddled with "speculation, gaps and holes."

The indictment alleges that Zaccaro asked CableVision Systems Development Corp. to pay an unspecified sum, put at $1 million in news reports, to get Manes to approve a contract for the company to wire Queens. The money was not paid, prosecutors said, and the company did not get the contract.

Mudslide Kills 100

The disaster occurred at 2:30 p.m. following several days of heavy rains, the mayor told Radio Caracol, Colombia's largest radio network.

Relatives of the dead and missing wandered through the area this morning looking for their loved ones. Other people tried to find belongings lost in the mudslide.

Hospitals said Sunday they had treated more than 150 people, most of them children with multiple fractures and lacerations.

Despite the danger of new landslides, rescue workers dug under spotlights through the night, looking for people trapped in the mud.

Jaramillo Gomez said the avalanche occurred when mountain creeks burst their banks following heavy rains and sent a river of mud and rocks down the mountain. The slide apparently was the result of people

'Pizza Connection'

NEW YORK (AP) — A prosecutor says he's confident the conviction of a Mafia boss will stand despite a reported recantation by a former hit man who helped convict the mobster in the "Pizza Connection" drug trial.

"There was an overwhelming amount of testimony" against Salvatore Catalano, said U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani, who supervised the prosecution.

The New York Times reported today that the witness, Luigi Ronsisvalle, voluntarily sought out Catalano's lawyer to provide a sworn statement that his trial testimony was untrue.

During the first meeting between Ronsisvalle and the lawyer, Ivan S. Fisher, Ronsisvalle said: "Mr. Fisher, I want you, please, from the bottom of my heart, I want you to accept my apology for what I done to Toto Catalano. I swear to God, I feel so bad, I feel like crying," according to the newspaper.

Fisher said he planned to present the waterway with explosives in retaliation for last week's attack on an Iranian vessel.

The latest mines were spotted Sunday morning by the American missile destroyer Kidd, one of the warships of the 11-ship Middle East Force patrolling the gulf, the shipping sources said.

The shipping executives said at least three and as many as six mines were sighted at three different locations.

They said the mines were believed to have been dropped at night from small boats operating from the Iranian-held island of Abu Musa.

At least two U.S. warships were in the vicinity today, said journalists who saw the scene from a helicopter. They said a Navy helicopter was scouting the area for mines but so far had discovered only a "black plastic garbage bag."

The executives said four British mine sweepers that arrived outside the gulf on Sept. 22 would soon move into the area.

Western diplomatic sources said "discussions are now under way in London on cooperative moves to retrieve the mines for identification. It depends who is closest to be in a position to collect them and sweep the area."

Lloyd's, which monitors shipping around the world, issued its own notice to shippers that three mines had been found and said a buoy was set out to mark one of them.

The mines did not damage any vessels, but the shipping executives said the channel was one of the busiest and is parallel to an "exclusion zone" that Iran has declared around Abu Musa.

"What has happened now is that these tankers cannot sail further north nor can they sail further south unless they adjust their loads," said a Kuwait-based shipping executive. "It is a clever tactic by the Iranians."

Kuwait's shipping community maintains a close watch on developments in the waterway because of Iran's attacks on its ships and threats against Kuwaiti tankers.

The U.S. Navy began in July to escort 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers to protect them from Iran, which considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

Mrs. Keel, a native of Edgecombe County, was a member of the First Baptist Church of Farmville.

Surviving are her husband, Earl Keel of the home; two daughters, Deborah Jo Keel of Greenville and Susan Skinner of Farmville; a son, Earl Lee Keel Jr. of Farmville; three sisters, Annie Ruth Skinner of Wilson, Nora Boone and Frances Tolson, both of Rocky Mount; four brothers, Marvin Price of Thomasville, Ala., Harvey Price, John Price and Clarence Price, all of ed vessels, said no tanker convoy was under way today.

The salvage sources and Western diplomats said the explosives were contact mines, the same type found aboard the Iran Ajr, which the Navy said it attacked and captured a week ago while it was laying mines.

Iran has been blamed for laying mines in the northern gulf close to Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, which it also accuses of backing Iraq. Iran also reportedly has dropped some mines near the Strait of Hormuz, the only gateway to the gulf.

But it was the first time mines have been reported off the United Arab Emirates, which has maintained good relations with Persian Iran despite the war with Arab Iraq. Dubai is the largest and busiest port on the 600-mile gulf.

The last mine casualty in the gulf was reported last week, when the Marissa 1, a small research vessel, hit a floating charge in the northern sector of the gulf, not far from Iran's Farsi island. Four of the seven Greek crewmen were killed.

The reflagged Kuwaiti tanker Bridgeton struck a mine July 24 as it was sailing through the gulf with U.S. Navy escorts.

Lloyd's said one crew member was killed, six to eight were wounded and 17 were injured in an attack on the Iranian shuttle tanker Shirvan off Iran's Kharg island terminal around 11 a.m. Sunday.

It said the Shirvan and three other shuttle tankers were hit over a 20-hour period during the weekend and one of them, the Cypriot-flag Coral Cape, was hit twice.

The official Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said the attacks "underscore Iraq's determination to chop off Iran's economic lifeline." Oil exports help finance the war efforts of both countries.

Europe's Victory Erases Any Trace Of U.S. Edge

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — The intimidation factor is gone and with it the American domination of the biennial Ryder Cup Matches, golf's premier international team event.

"The significant thing is that they aren't frightened anymore," European captain Tony Jacklin said of his players Sunday after they scored a 15-13 victory. "We know we can win now."

The defeat marked the first time the Americans lost the Ryder Cup in consecutive matches and the first time they were beaten on American soil in the series that began in 1927.

The Americans, 21-5-1 in the series, held the cup for 28 years before the Europeans regained it in England in 1985.

"After you learn to hit the ball, golf is 95 percent between the ears. Either you handle it or you don't," Jacklin said.

American captain Jack Nicklaus seemed to agree after a last-ditch American rally fell just short.

"The difference was the 18th (hole)," he said. "I don't think we won the hole all day. That's where I expected our guys to win it. It didn't work out that way. ... Our guys just weren't quite as tough as their guys."

But the Americans came close. Down 10½-5½ going into Sunday's 12 singles matches (each worth one point) they needed nine points.

They got 7½, winning six matches and halving three. The other 1½ points they needed were squandered with bogeys or worse on the par-4, 437-yard 18th hole.

Nicklaus declined to single out the critical matches or individuals — "I'd prefer to think they got beat instead of thinking they lost," — but it was there on the scoreboard for all to see.

Dan Pohl, Masters champion Larry Mize and Ben Crenshaw each lost the 18th hole, and with it each lost one-half point. It was the difference between a 14½-13½ victory and a 15-13 loss.

Pohl, playing against Howard Clark of England, went to the 18th in a tie, which would have been worth one-half point. Pohl made double bogey and lost the hole and the match to a par. No points instead of one-half there.

Mize was 1-up on Sam Torrance of Scotland going to the 18th. But Mize drove into trouble, had to take a penalty drop, made bogey and lost the hole to a par. The match was halved. One-half point instead of one there.

Crenshaw, who had broken his putter by slamming it into the ground after 3-putting the sixth, came back from 3-down to Eamonn Darcy of Ireland and, using a 1-iron to putt, was even going to the 18th.

Crenshaw drove into the water, however, made bogey and lost the hole and a match to a one-putt par by Darcy. No points instead of one-half point there.

With Darcy's victory Europe led 13-9. Bernhard Langer of West Germany halved with Larry Nelson and the European team clinched it with Seve Ballesteros of Spain registering a 2-and-1 decision over Curtis Strange.

Saturday afternoon, East Carolina University's Pirates struggled against Georgia Southern, a team which came into the game as the number one Division I-AA defensive team in the country.

But we have to think that all of the problems the Pirates encountered Saturday were not caused by Georgia Southern. We have personally seen three games played by the Pirates, and from what we understand, this was the worst of the four this season. Naturally, Georgia Southern gets credit for some of that.

But at the same time, we — along with many others — are wondering if the Pirates are, truly, taking the right path on offense.

Is the run-and-shoot offense the one East Carolina needs to be running at this time?

First of all, that offense — as witnessed by those who run it — takes a quarterback who can open the game up with his passing to any part of the field. He must also be able to handle the option offense.

Certainly, East Carolina has, in Travis Hunter, someone who can work the option well. But there remains the question of his passing ability. This past Saturday, he was seven of 13, but that was perhaps his best day passing this year. Charlie Libretto, the backup, who has seen action in only two of the four games, is supposed to be the better passer, but lacks the option abilities of Hunter.

That leaves the Pirates in somewhat of a quandary. They have the passer and they have the runner — but that don't have them in the same body.

Saturday afternoon, in the second half, the Pirates came out in the I formation. They used it some last year, but didn't perform that well in it.

Against Georgia Southern, the Pirates moved the ball with greater ease than they did in the run-and-shoot, however. Only a couple of fumbles inside the 10 yard line kept the Pirates from turning the close game into a possible runaway.

Reggie McKinney is the type back who can run well from the I formation, as is Jarrod Moody, who is somewhat hampered by injuries at this time. Anthony Simpson is a proven runner at fullback.

Coach Art Baker has said on several occasions that he would like to get the ball into McKinney's hands more often. He doesn't see it much in the run-and-shoot, and would get more of an opportunity in the I.

Both of the top quarterbacks, too, would seem more suited to the I formation.

We're not the coach, and it's easy to second-guess. Perhaps the mixture of the two formations may be the best thing for the Pirates. We do admit that in the second half, when the Pirates mixed the two, they moved the ball more consistently.

It will be interesting to watch over the coming weeks.

Rose High School's new Daniels Field is nearing completion. Friday night, the second game was played on the field, despite the fact that the stands and press box are still incomplete.

However, after a better look at the stadium on Friday, we believe it is one of the finer facilities in the state. Certainly there are few that we have been in that can compare with it.

Those who worked so hard on the project and those who donated the funds for its construction are to be congratulated.

Rose, however, goes on the road this Friday to face arch-rival Rocky Mount. Both teams go into the contest unbeaten and highly ranked in the state. Rose was ranked eighth and Rocky Mount sixth last week. Both will probably be about the same this week.

The winner will certainly be considered the team to beat for the Big East title, while the loser will still be considered in the race for one of the league's three playoff spots.

The big question is — how long has it been since Rose won a regular season game at Rocky Mount? For that matter, has Rose ever won a regular season game at Rocky Mount?

With the NFL strike underway, and the league owners attempting to put together "teams" to continue the season, at least two former East Carolina athletes have been placed on the roster of two teams.

Calvin Adams, a defensive back, was listed on the roster for the New Orleans Saints, while Clint Harris, a safety, was on the lineup for the Minnesota Vikings.

Strike Claims 2nd Week, Makeup Games Unlikely

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL strike will claim its 14th game tonight when the Denver Broncos won't play the Browns in Cleveland, and a top NFL executive says it's unlikely any of the games will be made up.

While picketing lost steam over the weekend, striking players for many teams expected to be back on the lines this morning when the strike enters its seventh day. Some players, attending a West Coast meeting with union boss Gene Upshaw, said they expected a long strike.

With little hope of a quick settlement, owners said they planned to go ahead with preparations for replacement games, using non-striking rookies and free agents. These games will begin Sunday and will count in the standings, the NFL said.

"We will proceed with these games, and they must count," Pittsburgh Steelers President Dan Rooney said. "We've told everybody they will count, and they will."

So far, the NFL has received only one commitment, from CBS, to televise the replacement games. NBC and ABC have not confirmed their plans yet.

In Tampa, Fla., Buccaneers President Hugh Culverhouse, chairman of the NFL's executive committee, said chances were remote that any of the missed games from Sunday or tonight would be rescheduled. The executive committee meets in New York Tuesday to decide the issue.

Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, met for 2½ hours Sunday in Los Angeles with representatives from six West Coast teams — the Los Angeles Rams and Raiders, San Francisco 49ers, San Diego Chargers, Seattle Seahawks and Denver Broncos.

Initially it was thought Upshaw had gone to Los Angeles to try to quell a reported player revolt among the Raiders, but it later was learned the meeting had been scheduled well ahead of time. The Daily Breeze of Torrance, Calif., reported Sunday that four to six prominent Raiders may join other players in crossing picket lines today.

Upshaw said he didn't believe the newspaper report, adding: "I have players from the Raiders here. I don't think we have to discuss our solidarity. It's there. We are on strike and will remain on strike until we sign a collective bargaining agreement."

Raiders backup quarterback Marc Wilson crossed picket lines last Tuesday along with three injured-reserve linemen, Mickey Marvin, Chris Riehm and Curt Marsh.

A similar regional meeting was scheduled in Chicago today with other meetings in Atlanta and East Rutherford, N.J., on Upshaw's schedule later in the week.

In San Francisco, 49ers starting quarterback Joe Montana, who was critical of the 1982 players strike, also indicated he might consider crossing picket lines. Appearing on KFOG radio, Montana was asked if he would play in replacement games, and he replied: "There's always that possibility."

"Maybe as this thing drags on, players will cross," Raiders defensive end Sean Jones said at the Los Angeles meeting. "That was never an issue here, though. We're one of the stronger teams in the league as far as the strike is concerned. I'm anticipating a long strike. That's what I've said all along."

Some union players hinted there could be a price to pay for defying the strike.

Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton was asked on CBS-TV what would happen if the striking players scrimmaged against non-strikers. He said "... they'd have to use a lot of body bags."

Coach Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins, meanwhile, admitted the replacement teams will not be "as sophisticated" as the regular teams.

"We've got some players who just missed making our team," Shula said. "These should be high caliber players. But we have others who are not in the best shape and others who are not good enough to play in the NFL. Certainly, we're going to have to gear down."

Few teams had picket lines in place over the weekend, but most said they intended to resume today.

Niekro Gets Final Shot

ATLANTA (AP) — Phil Niekro has thrown his last knuckleball in major league competition, ending a 23-year career the way he always desired — wearing an Atlanta Braves uniform.

"I couldn't think of a better way to retire than with an 'A' on my cap," Niekro said Sunday after pitching in to the fourth inning of San Francisco's 15-6 victory over the Braves, a triumph that nailed down at least a share of the National League West title for the Giants.

Niekro made it official at a packed news conference following the game.

"I'm officially announcing my retirement today," he said. "I've been thinking about this for three or four months, not just the last few days. It wasn't a tough decision to make."

Niekro, one of the most popular sports figures in Atlanta history, received seven standing ovations from a crowd of 26,019, the last a prolonged four-minute salute when he was removed from the game by Manager Chuck Tanner after the first five Giants reached base in the fourth inning.

Pearl Sandow, who has attended every Braves home game since the team arrived in Atlanta in 1966, said, "I'm emotional like everybody else. I'm so glad that he came back, even if it's just for one day."

Niekro had originally turned down an offer from the Braves to pitch one last time in Atlanta but reconsidered and started against the Giants.

Niekro departed with a 5-2 lead and the bases loaded, but reliever Chuck Cary was greeted by Candy Maldonado's pinch grand slam that put the Giants ahead to stay.

Niekro got out of bases-loaded jams in the first and third innings, but showed the effects of a long layoff, being out of the game since he was released by the Toronto Blue Jays on Aug. 31. He gave up five runs, six hits and walked six in the three-plus innings he worked.

He spent 18 seasons in Atlanta before he was released by the Braves following the 1983 season. He pitched two years with the New York Yankees and then went to Cleveland, staying with the Indians until he was traded to Toronto on Aug. 9.

"The Atlanta Braves have been the foundation of the Niekros in Georgia," the 48-year-old pitcher said. "Other than Lansing (Ohio, his childhood home), Atlanta has always been No. 1 in my heart."

His wife, Nancy, and two sons, John and Michael, were by his side when he announced his retirement.

He bowed out of the game ranked 12th on the all-time victory list with a 318-274 record. He finished with 3,342 strikeouts and a 3.35 career earned run average.

Niekro said he would have liked to have gone out with a victory, but it was good enough just to go out wearing his familiar No. 35, a number the Braves retired when he was released four years ago.

"I was not embarrassed because I got beat around out there," Niekro said. "I've done that before."

Tanner was loudly booed when he went to the mound to remove Niekro, but the pitcher wasn't upset about that.

"I told Chuck before the ball game to manage like he would any other game," Niekro said. "I was struggling from the first inning on."

"I was hoping he would go five (innings) and get the win," Tanner said. "My heart was set on not letting him get the loss. ... I couldn't see him going out with a loss against his name."

Tanner kept Niekro on the mound until Cary arrived, and then the two strolled toward the dugout.

Tigers Top Jays, Move Within 2 1/2

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Win or lose, Sparky Anderson is proud to be manager of the Detroit Tigers.

"I don't know what will happen now and I don't care," Anderson said after the Tigers pulled within 2 1/2 games of first-place Toronto in the American League East by beating the Blue Jays 3-2 in 13 innings Sunday. "These men have showed me all I ever want to see."

Anderson was impressed with the way the Tigers, after losing each of the first three games of the four-game series by one run, came back from a 1-0 deficit in the ninth.

"You have never witnessed a club that has stood up to more pressure than this club here, and no club showed more character," Anderson said. "These guys had their behinds nailed to the wall and they won this game."

The Tigers forced extra innings when Kirk Gibson homered off Toronto relief ace Tom Henke in the ninth. Detroit, which led 2-1 in the 11th on Darrell Evans' 33rd homer only to see Jesse Barfield's RBI single tie it again, finally won in the 13th on a bloop single by Gibson.

In another AL game with pennant-race importance, Minnesota clinched a tie in the West with an 8-1 victory over Kansas City. In other games, it was California 11, Cleveland 8; Baltimore 9, New York 5; Milwaukee 9, Boston 6; Chicago 5, Oakland 0; and Seattle 5, Texas 3.

Anderson said the Tigers needed the victory to give themselves a chance when they play host to the Blue Jays for the last three games of the season next weekend. Detroit has four games with Baltimore and Toronto plays Milwaukee three times before the final series.

"This means that we are still breathing, and we don't have to depend on Milwaukee," Anderson said. "I don't think it's fair to ask Milwaukee to help us by beating Toronto."

Although he didn't win his ninth straight decision since coming to Detroit from Atlanta on Aug. 12, Doyle Alexander played a key role for the Tigers.

Alexander allowed one earned run and six hits in 10 2-3 innings. Barfield's game-tying single came after an error by Detroit shortstop Alan Trammell.

"I was going until they knocked me out or he took me out, whatever came first," said Alexander, who had never trailed in any previous game he pitched for Detroit.

"He had no business being out there that last inning," Anderson said, "but we haven't had a lot of success (with the Detroit bullpen.)"

Gibson's game-winning single in the 13th scored Jim Walewander, who was walked by Jose Nunez, 5-2, and went to second on Lou Whitaker's sacrifice.

Mike Henneman, 10-3, pitched 1 2-3 innings for the victory and Dickie Noles got the last out for his second save.

Toronto starter Jim Clancy, shut out Detroit on five hits in seven innings and did not allow a runner past second base. But Henke, trying for his 35th save, couldn't hold the slim lead.

Alexander surrendered George Bell's RBI single in the first inning, then retired the next 13 batters.

Twins 8, Royals 1
Minnesota clinched a least a tie for their first West Division title since 1970 as Bert Blyleven pitched a five-hitter and Kirby Puckett, Gary Gaetti and Kent Hrbek homered in a five-run first against Kansas City.

The Twins' first-inning outburst followed second baseman Al Newman's stellar defensive play in the top of the inning.

With runners on first and third with no outs, George Brett grounded sharply to Gaetti at third, who to Newman at second. Newman quickly fired a strike to the plate, nailing Wilson for the unusual double play.

The only run Blyleven, 15-11, allowed was Danny Tartabull's 32nd homer in the fourth.

Royals starter Charlie Leibrandt, 15-11, lasted 19 pitches in the first inning. The Twins just missed a fourth homer when Newman doubled just inches from the top of the left field wall.

Orioles 9, Yankees 5
Baltimore snapped an eight-game losing streak and finished with a 31-51 home record, worst in the majors, by rallying for five runs in the seventh inning against New York.

The rally came after the Orioles fell behind 5-3 in the top of the seventh by allowing three unearned runs on two errors by shortstop Cal Ripken Jr.

Carl Nichols and Pete Stanicek tied the score 5-5 with RBI singles off Pat Clements, 3-3. Rene Gonzales followed with the first of his two RBI doubles, putting the Orioles ahead before Ray Knight capped the comeback with a two-run single off Neil Allen.

The Orioles had taken a 3-1 lead in the fourth on a two-run homer by Larry Sheets, his 30th. Rickey Henderson's 16th homer made it 3-2 in the fifth.

Brewers 9, Red Sox 6
Milwaukee came back from a 6-1 deficit to defeat Boston as Robin Yount capped a four-run sixth inning with a two-run single.

The Red Sox, behind Jody Reed's two-run double and RBI single, took a 6-3 advantage into the sixth inning, but reliever Wes Gardner walked the bases loaded and was replaced by Bob Stanley, 4-15.

Paul Molitor, who homered earlier, singled to make it 6-4 and another run scored on Mike Felder's grounder. Yount's two-run single gave him 100 RBI.

The victory went to Milwaukee reliever Ray Burris, 2-2, who took over in the fifth for starter Teddy Higuera, who was trying for his 19th victory but was replaced after giving up eight hits and six runs.

White Sox 5, Athletics 0

Dave LaPoint pitched a two-hitter for his first shutout since 1985 and Ivan Calderon hit two homers as the White Sox completed a four-game sweep of Oakland.

LaPoint, 5-3, who had never allowed less than six hits in a complete game, gave up a single to Terry Steinbach in the fifth inning and a double to Mike Gallego in the eighth.

It was LaPoint's first shutout since May 5, 1985, when he pitched for San Francisco against St. Louis.

Donnie Hill and Carlton Fisk also homered for the White Sox.

Mariners 5, Rangers 3

Seattle completed a three-game series sweep and handed Texas its sixth consecutive loss on pinch-hitter Dave Hengel's three-run homer in the eighth inning.

The Mariners trailed 3-2 when Jim Presley singled and pinch-hitter Gary Matthews walked, setting the stage for Hengel's home run off Mitch Williams, 8-5. It was the second major-league homer in 77 career at-bats for Hengel.

Mike Trujillo, 4-4, who walked Jerry Browne with the bases loaded to give Texas a 3-2 lead in the eighth, was the winner despite pitching only one-third of an inning.

Mickey Brantley went 4-for-4, including his 13th homer, a triple and two singles, for the Mariners.

Angels 11, Indians 8

California outslugged Cleveland as Mark McLemore drove in four runs with a pair of bases-loaded singles and Don Sutton earned his 320th career victory in his first relief appearance since 1980.

Sutton, 10-11, who is in 11th place on the all-time victory list, gave up three runs and four hits in 4 1-3 innings.

McLemore, who was 4-for-4, singled with the bases loaded to break a 2-2 tie in the second inning against loser Ken Schrom, 6-12, and added another bases-loaded single in California's three-run fifth that made it 9-3.

Brian Dorsett hit his first major-league homer in the eighth and Carmen Castillo hit another two-run homer in the ninth for the Indians.

Wait Over For Twins, Fans

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Kent Hrbek is an eternal optimist, but even he wasn't sure he'd live to see the day when a record Metrodome crowd would beg the Minnesota Twins to make a curtain call.

"After five, six years of struggling ... I've been looking forward to this for a long time, finally getting to celebrate out there," Hrbek said Sunday after 52,924 fans spurred on an 8-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals that clinched Minnesota at least a tie for the American League West title.

"I would have liked to have been a fan out there myself," said Hrbek, who grew up only a few blocks away from old Met Stadium, the Twins' home before they moved into the Metrodome in 1982. "Everything (the fans) did, they did on their feet. It hits home with the guys. When we got on the field, we could just feel the atmosphere."

The fans gave the Twins a three-minute standing ovation before they stepped onto the field. The fans made noise all game long. And after the game, they stood for five minutes, roaring for the Twins to take a curtain call. The players and Manager Tom Kelly obliged, doffing their caps to the appreciative crowd. Dan Gladden threw his glove and cap into the stands.

"They couldn't wait for us to get on the field before the game ... and they didn't want us to leave the field after the game," Al Newman said. "It was just an unbelievable feeling."

Bert Blyleven, Sunday's winning pitcher who was a rookie in 1970 when the Twins last won the AL West, said he couldn't recall being so inspired by a Minnesota crowd.

Expos Top Phils, Point To Cards

By The Associated Press

The four-game series the Montreal Expos have been thinking about for weeks is one day away. They will meet the Cardinals in St. Louis with first-place on the line.

The Expos have won 10 of 14 games with the Cardinals this season and all they wanted to do was arrive at Busch Stadium with a chance in the National League East.

The Cardinals gave the third-place Expos that opportunity Sunday by dropping a 7-3 decision to Chicago while Montreal beat Philadelphia 5-3 to move within three games.

The second-place New York Mets start a three-game series in Philadelphia tonight, trailing the Cards by 2 1/2 games. The Mets and Cardinals finish the season with three games in St. Louis, and the Expos close out the year with three games against Chicago at home.

"Ideally I would like to have been two down going into St. Louis," Montreal Manager Buck Rodgers said. "But the bottom line is that we've got to win (in St. Louis). The brass ring is out there. We got to grab it."

The Expos will start Martinez and Bryn Smith against Greg Mathews and Joe Magrane in Tuesday's doubleheader. Martinez is 11-3 and the Expos are 19-3 in his 22 starts. On Wednesday, Perez will take his 6-0 record against St. Louis.

The Cardinals again will be without home run and RBI leader Jack Clark, who is sidelined with an ankle injury.

"I thought we'd be 40 games out now with all the injuries," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said.

The Mets, who beat Pittsburgh 12-3 Sunday, also have had injuries, but they have also had plenty of chances to catch the Cards.

"We've been in the hangman's noose for a week now," Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez said, "only nobody yet has kicked the horse."

The Mets moved to within 2 1/2 games of first-place St. Louis on Aug. 20, fell back to 5 1/2 on Aug. 31 and moved to within 1 1/2 on Sept. 9.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 3

Bob Dernier, a last-minute replacement in the starting lineup, had a home run and scored twice to lead host Chicago over St. Louis as the Cardinals' magic number for clinching the East remained at five.

Homers by Dernier, Rafael Palmeiro, Keith Moreland and Andre Dawson gave last-place Chicago a league-leading 203 homers this season. It marked the first time in major-league history that four teams hit 200 or more in the same year. Baltimore, Detroit and Toronto reached the mark earlier in the American League.

Expos 5, Phillies 3

Tim Lincecum hit a bloop double that was lost in the sun and scored on a wild pitch to break an eighth-inning tie, and Montreal went on to beat Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium.

The score was tied 3-3 when Raines led off the eighth against Mike Jackson, 3-9, with a routine fly to center field that Milt Thompson lost in the sun and Raines wound up at second base.

Mitch Webster beat out a bunt single, advancing Raines to third, and Raines scored when reliever Kent Tekulve's 0-1 pitch sailed past catcher Lance Parrish to give Montreal a 4-3 lead. Hubie Brooks, who had four runs batted in, then singled to left-center field, scoring Webster.

Mets 12, Pirates 3

Bob Ojeda won his first start since coming off the disabled list on Sept. 1 after missing three months, and Kevin McReynolds hit a three-run homer as New York defeated Pittsburgh.

A sellout crowd of 48,588 for the season's home finale at Shea Stadium gave the Mets their single-season record attendance of 3,027,121. New York is only the second team to draw three million. Los Angeles has topped the three-million mark on seven occasions.

Ojeda, 3-5, who went on the disabled list May 9 and underwent surgery on his left elbow on May 23, gave up three runs, two earned, on six hits over six innings. Jesse Orosco pitched the last three innings for his 16th save.

Giants 15, Braves 6

San Francisco spoiled the farewell of Phil Niekro at Atlanta Stadium as the Giants chased the 48-year-old knuckleballer with a six-run fourth inning.

Niekro signed to pitch one final game for the Braves, but he wound up allowing five runs on six hits with six walks in three-plus innings and got a no-decision.

Niekro failed to hold a 5-0 lead and left the mound with his head bowed to a four-minute standing ovation, his seventh of the day from 26,019 fans on Atlanta's final home date of the season.

Niekro is 12th on the all-time victory list with a 318-274 record and holds most of Atlanta's career pitching marks. He went 7-11 earlier this season for Cleveland and then 0-2 for Toronto before being released by the Blue Jays Aug. 31, ending his hope of pitching in the World Series for the first time.

Reds 4, Astros 2

Buddy Bell's two-run triple highlighted a four-run eighth inning that carried Cincinnati past Houston at Riverfront Stadium. Cincinnati rallied in the eighth off starter Bob Knepper, 8-17, who took a three-hitter into the inning. Singles by Dave Collins, Dave Concepcion and Tracy Jones scored Cincinnati's first run and Knepper left after inducing Dave Parker to force Jones at second.

Bell lined a pitch from reliever Larry Andersen to center field, and the ball eluded a charging Billy Hatcher as Bell raced to third with a triple. Bo Diaz's sacrifice fly scored Bell.

Dodgers 4, Padres 3

John Shelby hit a bases-loaded double with two outs in the eighth inning to lift Los Angeles over visiting San Diego. The Padres' Benito Santiago extended his rookie record hitting streak to 29 consecutive games with an eighth-inning single.

Player Of The Week

In a week of superlative performances, Rose High tailback Timmy Moore turned in the top showing to be named the Daily Reflector Player of the Week.

Moore, a 5-9, 210-pound junior, ran for 195 yards on 14 carries against Northern Nash and scored three touchdowns to lead the Rampants to a 33-16 Big East Conference win.

He scored on a pair of runs that covered nine and 32 yards and added a two-yard blocked punt return for the third score.

Moore and his backfield mates found running room all night long as the Rampants rushed for 451 yards.

Prep Honor Roll

Ayden-Griffon running back Eric Blount: Blount ran for 106 yards on only six carries and scored three touchdowns. Two came on runs covering 41 and 31 yards, respectively. The other score came on an 80-yard pass from quarterback Darryl Moye. In addition, Blount had two other scores called back due to penalties.

Farmville running back Gary Moore: Moore had four touchdowns and 134 yards rushing on 14 carries as the Jaguars defeated South Lenoir, 33-8.

Moore's scores came on a 65-yard pass reception from quarterback Andre Bandy. The other three were on runs covering

Timmy Moore

40, four and three yards each.

Williamston fullback Francisco Clifford: Clifford carried 14 times for 119 yards and scored on a 54-yard run as the Tigers defeated Northampton East, 41-20.

Williamston quarterback Mark Williams: Williams tossed a 32-yard scoring pass to William Matthews and also scored on a one-yard run in the Tigers' aforementioned win. Williams hit on three of five passes for 81 yards.

Chocowinity running back William Haywood: Haywood rambled for 156 yards in the Tribe's 36-14 win over Belhaven Friday.

Haywood keyed a strong Indian running attack that totaled 319 yards. Haywood scored two times, going in from five yards out and from 26 yards out.

Nicklaus' Advice Aids Stephenson

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Some advice from Jack Nicklaus has done wonders for Jan Stephenson's golf game — and her bank account.

Stephenson credited some words of wisdom from Nicklaus with helping her regain her confidence after a May auto accident in St. Petersburg, Fla., sidelined her for two months. On Sunday, Stephenson put the advice to good use, shooting a final-round 65 to win the $300,000 San Jose Classic, the last U.S. stop on the 1987 LPGA schedule.

It was the second straight win for Stephenson, who captured the previous week's tournament in Kent, Wash. Her winning score of 11-under-par 205 was a tournament record.

Stephenson played with Nicklaus in a Skins Game exhibition about one month ago, after she recovered from four broken ribs, two cracked ribs and pulled back ligaments suffered in the accident.

"I was pretty down after I was injured," Stephenson said. "I used to cry a lot after it happened. I don't think I've ever been at such a low point in my life. That's why playing with Jack was so important. I asked him a million questions and he really helped me."

"One of the things (Nicklaus) told me was to practice (to overcome) my weakness. Now I try to prepare for every tournament as if it's a major championship. I watched the way he applied himself to the game. He told me to be patient. I learned from that. I'm inspired from that man."

Stephenson birdied six of the first 10 holes, including the last four in a row, and added another birdie on 14 on the way to her five-shot victory at the par-72, 6,303-yard Almaden Golf and Country Club course.

Amy Alcott shot a 70 Sunday to finish second at 210, one shot ahead of Shelley Hamlin and two in front of second-round leader Juli Inkster, Ayako Okamoto and Chris Johnson.

It was Stephenson's 16th career LPGA victory, and the $45,000 first prize increased her season's earnings to $222,283 and her career earnings to $1,487,726.

The tournament was the final domestic event on the tour for 1987. The schedule has one more official tourney, the Japan Classic, to be played Nov. 6-8.

Martha Nause, who barely made the cut for Sunday's final round, won a $51,000, BMW 735 when she scored a hole-in-one on a par-3, 177-yard 13th hole with a 3-iron.

Nause, who finished her round with a 70 and a 54-hole total of 217, said she probably will give the car to her mother.

Players Try New Activities

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Faced with their first NFL-less Sunday of the season, football players went to a new playbook.

Shut out at stadiums by their second strike in six years, NFL players put themselves into another gear as they rushed around to find new activities on a rare Sunday off.

Some of the striking players staged picnics or clinics in parks with their fans, some served as guests on television shows, some went to concerts and baseball games, others went to church and still others just stayed home with their families and watched TV.

"We just felt that with it being a Sunday and a scheduled game day and we weren't working, it was an opportunity for us to give something back," said St. Louis Cardinals guard Joe Bostic, who joined with some teammates in giving a clinic in a city park.

"We just felt that as visible people in the community," Bostic added, "we had an obligation to the children."

Bostic and his teammates, some of whom are members of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, spoke to about 100 young fans at Forest Park in St. Louis about the importance of getting an education and staying away from drugs and alcohol.

Meanwhile, about two dozen New York Jets enjoyed themselves at a picnic with some 400 fans at Eisenhower Park, about a mile from their training facility at Hofstra University.

The Jets signed autographs, cooked food and talked football. All of them admitted they'd have preferred being on the field at Three Rivers Stadium, facing the Pittsburgh Steelers as scheduled.

However, Jets' center Joe Fields said: "This is a nice way to spend a Sunday. You get to do something with the family that normally would be impossible."

In Seattle, Seahawks defensive back Kenny Easley and quarterback Dave Krieg fielded questions from the strikers' perspective before an audience of some 1,270 people at a special edition of KOMO-TV's "Town Meeting" program.

Answering questions via TV for the owners was Dan Rooney, of the NFL Management Council. Seattle's $11 million rookie, Brian Bosworth, was supposed to appear with Krieg and Easley but the TV show host said "something came up" and Bos was unable to make it.

Several other Seahawks also took questions from the audience. The weekly local show, which features a topic, experts on several sides, and audience questions, was moved from its regular studio to the Seattle Center Flag Pavilion to accommodate Sunday's crowd.

Other players hit the airwaves, too. Tight end Doug Cosbie, the Dallas Cowboys' player representative, appeared on national television for an interview and later on a Dallas radio call-in show.

For Detroit Lions wide receiver Mark Nichols, Sunday was a day for dinner at the in-laws' house, and an Eddie Murphy concert in Detroit at night.

It Still Goes Down As A 'W'

It wasn't pretty but for the East Carolina football program, where victories have been scarce lately, players and coaches alike agreed a win is a win.

The Pirates defeated Georgia Southern, 16-13, Saturday to even their record at 2-2.

The win broke a two-game losing streak and equaled the number of wins the Pirates have had in each of the last three seasons.

"Many times in the past three years, we've stood in this locker room and talked about a game we should have won," said ECU head coach Art Baker.

"Today, I'm sure Georgia Southern is saying that in their locker room." Still, with a schedule such as ECU's, there are some games that are just must-win situations. Saturday's game against Georgia Southern was such a game.

With contests remaining to be played against strong schools such as West Virginia and Virginia Tech as well as traditional-power Miami, a loss to the Eagles would have been quite a hole for the Pirates to climb out of.

Coming off a disappointing 20-10 loss to Illinois, a loss to the Eagles would have left ECU at 1-3 heading into a road game against West Virginia.

"Basically, this game was very important," said ECU running back Reggie McKinney. "We needed to get back on the winning track. We knew what our mistakes were last week. Last week we were in the same predicament (a close game). The mistakes that we made last week we tried not to make in this situation. We just capitalized on our chances."

The Pirates struggled at times Saturday, but the difference between this game and ones in the past is that they won despite struggling.

"It shows us that we can win close games," said ECU cornerback Ed Brogden. "It means a lot going into the next game 2-2. It was important because of our record. We needed a win. If we had lost this game, I don't know what the effect would have been."

And while Georgia Southern is a 1-AA school, it is the defending national champs for the past two seasons.

"We knew Georgia Southern basically ran the same kind of offense we did and they really have some good backs," said ECU linebacker Vinson Smith. "They run the option as well as we do. We knew it was going to be a tough game and we had the utmost respect for them."

"All the games are important. (But) I think it (Saturday's win) gave a lot of guys a lot of character that we've been missing. I'm hoping that it will help us as we go into other games."

ECU's switch to the I-formation in the second half helped revive what has been a lethargic offense.

It also put a smile on the face of McKinney, a natural tailback who played slot in the run-and-shoot scheme.

Baker has hinted about using McKinney more for the last two weeks but Saturday was the first time the junior saw the ball extensively.

"When we went to the I, we had a lot of stunts on the end where we couldn't get out (side) with our personnel in the run and shoot," McKinney said. "So we went to the big guys on the outside, our double tight ends, so we could run the ball. They didn't know which way we were going."

Tom Morris

McKinney ran for 53 yards on 10 carries, the majority coming in the second half.

"We concentrated on that a little bit (the I formation) more this week," McKinney said. "We were hoping to get it into the game, which we did. The offensive line did a great job. I like to run out of the I. We've been working on it all week to try to get it into (Willie) Lewis and (my) hands. Today, we finally got it into our hands and let us run."

Better late than never. It's a saying Vinson Smith can take to heart.

Following Anthony Simpson's go-ahead two-yard scoring run, GSU took over first and 10 at its own 34 with just over two minutes remaining.

As Eagle quarterback Ken Burnette called signals, ECU had only 10 players on the field. Missing was an inside linebacker.

Smith raced back onto the field as the play began and somehow came up with the big play — recovering a fumble by Burnette.

"At the time, I thought our other linebacker, Essray Taliaferro, was out there," he said. "Apparently I was supposed to be in. Once I got out there the play was going on. I saw Medrick Rainbow hit the center and he bobbled the ball and I just jumped on it."

On the Eagles' first play from scrimmage, a halfback pass from Ernest Thompson to Tony Belser suckered the ECU secondary. The play went for 68 yards and helped GSU jump out to an early advantage.

"It was perfect," said Brogden, who was the closest defender on the play. "I never saw the play. That was my mistake. I'm the one who got beat on it. Everybody was there (at the line). No one was in centerfield."

Sports Notes

ECU Golf Takes 11th

AUGUSTA, Ga. — East Carolina University's golf team finished 11th in a field of 15 teams at the Augusta Invitational Tournament at Forest Hills Country Club in Augusta.

The hosting Augusta College team took first place with a score of 895, followed by Furman at 904, Huntington (Ala.) at 905, Florida Southern at 911 and Tennessee-Chattanooga at 917.

The Pirates came in with a final team score of 928. The only other North Carolina team in the field was UNC-Charlotte, in at 13th with a 949 total.

Jon Kies of Marshall took top individual honors with a 214 score, followed by Roger Rowlan of Augusta at 218. Chris Greenwood of Virginia Tech was third with a 219, followed by Alex Hamilton of Augusta, David Cothran of Huntington and Chris Smith of UT-C, all tied at 220.

East Carolina, which used three freshmen among its five players, was led by Chris Riley with 80-78-73—231. John Chapman had 75-75-83—232 while Mark Hidley had 77-80-79—236. Simon Moye finished at 75-81-78—234, while Brian Connor had 80-81-77—238.

East Carolina returns to action on Oct. 9-10 at the John Ryan Memorial Tournament at Duke University.

Conley Game Time Changed

MOREHEAD CITY — The game time for this Friday night's football game between D.H. Conley and West Carteret has been changed to 7 p.m.

The Coastal conference game will be played at the West Carteret field at Morehead City. Conley brings a 2-2 record into the game while West Carteret is 1-4.

East-West Coaches Selected

GREENSBORO (AP) — Bobby Poss of Fayetteville 71st and Bruce Hardin of West Charlotte, coaches who met in last year's 4-A state football championship, have been named to coach in next summer's East-West All-Star football game.

The event will be held at Grimsley's Jamieson Stadium in July and marks the 40th meeting of the state's top 60 high school seniors. The coaches were selected by the North Carolina Coaches Association.

Hardin was slated to be an assistant coach for the North Carolina team in last year's North-South Shrine Bowl football game. But because his team faced 71st in the 4-A championship the night before the game, he had to relinquish his duties.

"After missing out on the Shrine Bowl, I really didn't think I'd get another opportunity to coach in an all-star game this quickly," said Hardin, who will lead the West. "I just feel really fortunate to be selected."

'Algonquin Round Table' Airing On PBS Stations

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Tucker and Jill Eikenberry, the real-life husband and wife who play lovers on "L.A. Law," become homicidal spouses in "Assault and Matrimony," an NBC comedy with all the subtlety of a Road Runner cartoon. Tucker and Eikenberry, each with a long list of admirable screen credits, are the hottest TV duo since Bruce Willis and Cybill Shepherd. For them to do a mindless trifle like this, there's either a severe dearth of good material or they had a burning desire to get silly.

Here's the plot, such as it is: Edgar and Sylvia are pillars of the community. He's an accountant. She's a member of Daughters of the American Revolution.

He wants to sell their colonial mansion to a mysterious buyer willing to pay twice what it's worth. She thinks owning the house is her patriotic duty.

She complains. He daydreams. He tampers with the brakes on her car. She careens wildly down a steep road, then inexplicably shows up safe and sound at a gas station.

She dons streetwalker attire as a disguise, although the get-up draws stares from everyone on the street, and tries to hire a hit man.

He pushes the chimney off the house while she's gardening below. He misses. She buys a gun and follows him to his favorite fishing spot. She misses.

You can miss this. Eikenberry and Tucker get much better material on "L.A. Law."

Why not turn over to the PBS station for some real wit? In another edition of its wonderful "American Masters" series, public television brings us "The Ten-Year Lunch: The Wit and Legend of the Algonquin Round Table."

This is a wonderfully entertaining biographical sketch of a literary heritage. It's very funny at times, but also somewhat sad, to think these great minds are gone now, and in the electronic age, writing talent will probably never be so esteemed again.

Some of the quips are familiar, but who doesn't want to hear them again?

Like Dorothy Parker, asked to use the word "horticulture" in a sentence: "You can lead a horticulture, but you can't make her think."

Or Robert Benchley's wire home upon his arrival in Venice: "Streets full of water. Please advise."

The group of about 10 men and women — including George S. Kaufman, Edna Ferber, Robert Pierce Adams, Harold Ross and Heywood Broun — set the literary standards of the nation for decades to come.

Broun's son, Heywood Hale Broun, is the narrator and host, lending a personal touch to reminiscences about his father's legendary dishevelment and the early feminism of his mother, Ruth Hale.

There are interviews with the only surviving member of the Round Table, Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Marc Connelly, and also with Helen Hayes and the late Ruth Gordon and the late Margalo Gilmore.

Marshall Efron and Roberta Maxwell read the parts of Alexander Woolcott and Parker over a montage of old photographs and New Yorker-style caricatures.

The Round Table began in 1919 as a "roast" of boastful New York Times drama critic Woolcott at the Algonquin Hotel, on West 44th Street, near Times Square.

Such a good time was had by all that the mutual admiration society flourished and the lunches became a daily affair.

"Outspoken and outrageous, they quoted each other freely in their daily columns," says Broun. "They shared an irreverent view of life and an appreciation of malice."

Then there's an assortment of famous quips:

Query: "Mrs. Parker, have you heard the news? Calvin Coolidge is dead."

Parker: "How can they tell?"

Woolcott: "All the things I like are either illegal, immoral or fattening."

Ferber: "Being an old maid is like death by drowning. Not an altogether unpleasant sensation, after you cease to struggle."

Unidentified Round Tabler: "I like your bald head, Marc. It feels like my wife's behind."

Connelly: "So it does. So it does."

The New Yorker magazine was born at that table. Harold Ross, its editor, hired Parker and Benchley as critics.

After the crash of Wall Street, members of the group began to break away to find new avenues for their talents.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vladimir Feltsman's first American concert just might be his most memorable.

After waiting eight years to leave the Soviet Union, the Jewish pianist played his first concert in his new country in the White House on Sunday.

President Reagan hailed him as "a hero of the human spirit."

Feltsman opened his concert with "The Star-Spangled Banner" and wound it up with an encore performance of Scott Joplin's "Maple Leaf Rag."

In between, he played a program of Schumann, Beethoven, Liszt, Rachmaninoff and Debussy before an audience of about 150 in the East Room. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, National Security Adviser Frank C. Carlucci and actress Helen Hayes attended.

"Your request for emigration led to artistic exile in your homeland and long, difficult years," the president told Feltsman. "That you manifested no bitterness is proof that you are not only a great musician; it is proof that you are a hero of the human spirit."

Game Shows Look For Personality, Poise In Players

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Lured by the sparkle of spotlights and the promise of wealth, some 650,000 Americans are applying every year to become contestants on television game shows.

Yet despite the ever-growing number of applicants, game show producers are complaining they lack qualified players who combine poise with an outgoing personality, and skill with speed.

Some of the 25 game shows broadcast almost daily on U.S. television stations have even begun to look farther afield for qualified contestants.

For example, "Jeopardy!" is going to West Germany this year to look for English-speaking contestants.

"The lack of qualified applicants is the biggest frustration of game show producers," says Gregg Silverman, a media buff who co-authored a new "how to" book which takes star-struck and stage-frightened enthusiasts by the hand from their living rooms to the studio stage.

Only 11,000 of those who apply get on the air, according to the new book with a title that says it all: "How To Become a Game Show Contestant — an Insider's Guide."

Another 100 million Americans watch along at home, says Greg Muntean, Silverman's co-writer who, as contestant coordinator for "Jeopardy!" has interviewed more than 75,000 applicants.

Some shows conduct contestant searches around the country, while others pick applicants from among their audiences. One can also apply for an audition by writing or calling some shows.

Step No. 1, the authors prescribe, is to target the game you then best and feel best suited for. Know play along at home. Some of the programs even have inspired board games that can be played in the living room.

One committed applicant got a buzzer system to practice speeding up her response time; another invited friends over every night to practice with them.

The authors also provide tips on how to walk, talk and dress (as you would for a job interview) during your interview and, if you make it, on the show.

Prizes vary from $25 gift certificate consolations for the losers to $1 million for the biggest winners. But don't get too excited; the big prize doesn't come in a lump sum. It's divided into annual payments, sometimes over 30 years.

Leslie Gershman, a housewife from the Midwest, played "Super Password."

"My best friend dared me," she recalls in the book. She went through two interviews and was called back for the taping session two weeks later. "It was a difficult two weeks. At times I felt confident. Then insecurity surfaced. I thought: I'll freeze up, I'll act stupid, I'll look stupid, I am stupid. To make a long story short, I won $53,000."

Why do people do it?

"Would you subject yourself to 15 minutes of stardom? Financial security for years? A brand spanking new car with no payments?" the authors ask.

But there's more to it than that. Alex Trebek, the long-time host of "Jeopardy!" contends that game shows embody the American dream. "If you have the right combination of desire, skill, luck and opportunity, you too can be rich and famous," he said in an interview.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Sept. 29

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You'll have some fine new ideas, but don't get bogged down by details and forget the main points. Avoid any boring routines today.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't waste your time investigating pleasures which you know are too expensive. Show your mate your devotion-vocally.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Leave the house early and see the prominent people who can help you to become more affluent. Public work can be very beneficial.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): This is a fine day to handle some important activities which you've been putting off. Handle your correspondence tonight.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Think about some amusements you've enjoyed in the past and get into them again now. Take your mate out for a good time tonight.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Try to help some family friends attain their ambitions, and put aside your own wishes for now. Invite an interesting guest into your home.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): This is a fine day for accomplishing much in the business world. Be more positive when dealing with others. Enjoy a hobby.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Focus your attention on increasing your income by forgetting pleasure for a while. Steer clear of friends who may distract you today.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): This is not the day to ask a favor of a superior. Try to be more self-reliant, and don't depend on friends to pull you out of a jam.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Steer clear of a new contact who could easily get you into some very big trouble. Your greatest happiness can come from your mate.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): The company of a long-timem friend and some relatives will help you forget your worries. Avoid an argument with your mate tonight.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Tend to your credit affairs which have some hidden problems. A superior will be quite receptive to granting you a needed favor today.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KQ983 ♥Q1062 ♦75 ♣83

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South
 3 ♣ Dbl Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—When partner makes a takeout double of an opposing preempt, he expects you to produce about 6-7 points. Therefore, with no more than that you would normally just bid your best suit. Here, however, your intermediates and the fact that you could have a double fit suggest being more aggressive. We recommend a cue-bid of four clubs, then pass whichever major suit partner bids, or correct to spades if he bids diamonds.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠5 ♥AKJ942 ♦83 ♣AK64

Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?

A.—You have a pretty good hand, but experience shows that it is wrong to jump shift with a two-suiter. Respond one heart, and show your power by jump-shifting at your next turn.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K6 ♥AKJ432 ♦KQ7 ♣K8

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—No sense in pussyfooting around with this one. How many tricks you can make depends only on how many aces opener has. The simple way to find out is to wheel out the old Black and settle for a grand slam if partner has three aces, a small slam if he has just two, and only five if he has a shabby opening with only one ace.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AQ983 ♥AK ♦J532 ♣84

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You can reach the correct answer by a process of elimination. To bid two spades in this situation would suggest a six-card suit, so that eliminates one possibility. You do not want to declare no trump since you have only one tenace position and a tenuous diamond stopper, which removes another. So that leaves only two diamonds to show the two-suited nature of your hand.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠95 ♥J3 ♦AKJ972 ♣984

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—There is a way to describe a sub-minimum two-over-one response based on a one-suited hand—you rebid your own suit at the three-level. This hand rates to play better at diamonds than any other suit contract, because you reckon to make about five tricks in your own hand with your suit as trumps.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠95 ♥J63 ♦AKQ982 ♣K7

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—As we have seen above, three diamonds now would show a weak one-suited hand. You are full value for your two-over-one response, so you can't make that bid. We suggest two no trump if you play that as forcing, to give your partner a chance to rebid his hearts below game should he hold a five-card suit. If two no trump can be passed in your methods, you must jump to three no trump.

IF YOU'RE NOT INTERESTED IN SAVING YOUR MONEY, GO DIRECTLY TO THE PART ABOUT SAVING YOUR LIFE.

The really nice thing about saving money on your power bills is that it's very, very simple. And we'd like for you to consider this ad as a sort of user's manual for electricity.

THE PART ABOUT SAVING YOUR MONEY.

The big energy users in your home are heating and cooling systems. It therefore makes sense to spend a little extra up front and get energy-efficient models. Because, in the long run, they can end up paying for themselves.

See Figure 1 on how to read the ENERGYGUIDE before you buy any major appliance such as a water heater or refrigerator.

Remember also to maintain all your energy using appliances. Whether it's a heat pump or an electric pencil sharpener, it will work more efficiently if it's operating according to its original specifications. To find out what they are, read the operations manual carefully or call the manufacturer.

The largest percentage of your energy dollar is spent keeping you warm in the winter. So the first thing you should do is try to find a home that is well insulated, or hire an expert to come in and insulate your current one for you.

Keep your doors and windows closed, and open them only when necessary. Close radiator valves, block drafts, and weather strip your windows and doors. Storm windows save significant amounts of energy and home inside-storm-window kits can be installed for very little cost. These kits are plastic strips you attach to your window. They will last a full winter, and they're easy to install.

You can even insulate electrical outlets with inexpensive plastic foam gaskets.

Reflectors behind radiators increase efficiency during the winter. Radiator covers decrease heating efficiency and should be removed when they are in use.

Close fireplaces during the winter as they tend to draw warm air from the house and send it up the chimney. Arrange your furniture so that you sit near heat sources, and dress warmly. This allows you to keep the room temperature down and save considerably during winter months.

During the summer, insulated houses also greatly reduce power bills.

Keep the house cool by drawing shades during the day and using a window fan to bring cool evening air into the house when everyone is sleeping at night. Dress loosely and lightly when the weather is hot and humid.

Do as little cooking during the summer as possible, or at least plan cooking during the cooler hours of the day. As always, use an exhaust fan in the kitchen close to the source of heat.

Heating water consumes a lot of energy so its best to buy a tank that is right for the size of your household. You might also spend the money to buy a tank with extra thick outer insulation. If not, you can purchase home tank insulation kits yourself. If you have a dishwasher, set your water temperature at 140 degrees. If not, you can save money by keeping it at 120 degrees which is fine for showering.

Wattage	Incandescent Bulbs	Fluorescent Tubes
15	2,500	9,000
20	N/A	9,000
25	2,500	7,500
40	1,500	20,000
75	750	12,000
100	750	12,000

You can save on water heating by turning off the water heater when you plan to be away for extended periods. Consider taking quick showers instead of baths. And always see that the water heater's efficiency is not being adversely affected by sediment inside its pipes. Check it regularly. If you don't know how, call the manufacturer, the service department of the store where you purchased it, or call North Carolina Power.

There are plenty of ways to save money on power bills by controlling the use of your lights.

See Figure 2 for information on typical light bulb life expectancy in hours.

Use daylight instead of electric light. Arrange furniture to take advantage of light from windows.

Use dimmer switches, and if possible switch to fluorescent lights. They utilize only a quarter of the power of incandescent lights.

Use high intensity task lamps instead of lighting the whole room. Clean bulbs when they become covered with grime and vapors from the kitchen. And use lower wattage bulbs when possible.

When cooking, use aluminum or copper bottom pans. Put lids on food to cut down cooking time and keep heat in. Make it a practice to thaw foods in the refrigerator before cooking. And use a pressure cooker when you can.

Various Foods	In Conventional Oven	In Microwave Oven
Baked chicken (1 1/2 lb.)	1.5	0.5
Baked potatoes (4 potatoes)	0.8	0.5
Green vegetables* (4 servings)	0.3	0.2
Apple pie (9-in.)	1.8	0.4

Figure 3

When baking, resist the urge to check periodically on your meal. Every time you open the oven door the temperature drops 25 degrees.

See Figure 3 on how many kilowatt-hours you save by cooking with a microwave oven.

THE PART ABOUT SAVING YOUR LIFE.

Simply stated, treat every wire you see as live and dangerous.

Much of the "insulation" you see on power lines is nothing more than aluminum oxidation. Don't touch those wires or put anything on them because they are live. That means don't put ladders on or near live wires and watch very carefully before you put up a TV antenna. Any metal (or wet objects) such as CB antennas, a piece of pipe, a tree limb or wire would be deadly to anyone holding it if it were to come in contact with overhead power lines.

If you must put up an antenna, a safe distance away from the line is twice the height of the antenna and mast assembly. Work only in dry weather and never on a windy day.

Call North Carolina Power before you trim trees near power lines. They'll do it for you.

Never let hoses or sprinklers wet power lines. Sailboats should also be kept away from power lines.

Don't fly kites near power lines.

Always use non-conductive string when flying kites, and if a kite becomes entangled in power lines, do not try to retrieve it.

Don't go after pets that are up in trees which are near power lines.

Don't touch or go near a fallen line.

If a fallen line hits your car, try to drive away.

Before you dig a hole to plant a tree, a bush or perhaps a post, call 1-800-632-4949 to find out where power cables are. It's the law. It's free. And it's your life we're protecting.

Use the utmost caution whenever using power tools that run on electricity. Watch the cord, avoid wet places, and use only extension cords that have Underwriters Laboratory approval.

Use insulated fuse pullers when replacing a blown fuse. And remember that a fuse blows because something is wrong with the circuit. Try to determine what the problem is before replacing the fuse. And replace it with a fuse of the same amperage.

If you smell or see smoke while using an appliance, unplug it or turn off the main switch immediately. Never pour water on an appliance that is plugged in.

If a fire is small, use a Class C fire extinguisher on it, or throw baking soda on it. If you can't control the fire, get out and call the fire department. Save lives, yours and your family's first if you can.

Use a smoke alarm.

North Carolina Power offers a number of services you should know about. One of them we call the Gatekeeper Program. Our employees are trained to pay particular attention to the homes of our elderly customers. If they see any signs of neglect they'll report it to the proper authorities. And if you would like to sign up for it, or know someone who should, simply call your local business office.

You can get a detailed version of all the information you see here and more in our consumer information booklet that's called BRINGING THE FACTS TO LIGHT. It's full of facts about budget billing, our Gatekeeper Program and more. Some that'll save you money. Others that'll save your life. And it's free from North Carolina Power.

Just call us toll-free at 1-800-882-8919.
