Judge Says Tyson Negligent, But Dismisses Suit

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Judge Donald Smith late this morning dismissed a $2 million lawsuit against Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson, saying the plaintiff's lawyer "failed to establish any liability under the law."

Smith's action came after Tyson's lawyer, Richard Rice of Winston-Salem, made a motion to dismiss the case after lawyer Marvin Blount Jr. of Greenville completed the presentation of evidence for the plaintiff shortly after the trial resumed today.

The ruling came on a suit filed by Michael Keith Braswell, who contended Tyson was negligent in not protecting his mother, Lillie Braswell, after she reported threats made by his father, then-Deputy Billy Braswell, in 1982.

Mrs. Braswell was shot and killed on Sept. 27, 1982. Billy Braswell, who was found with a chest wound after her death, was convicted in 1985 of murder and sentenced to life in prison for the attempted murder-suicide effort.

On Monday, an expert witness said that Sheriff Ralph Tyson should not have been expected to provide protection for Mrs. Braswell. But he said Tyson should have pressed an investigation into threats made on her life by Billy Braswell.

Judge Smith, after the motion to dismiss the suit was made, told the court that there was "ample evidence for the jury to find negligence or proximate cause" on the part of Tyson, but he questioned whether, under North Carolina law, Tyson was liable.

After hearing arguments from the lawyers involved, Smith ordered the suit dismissed.

He then told the jury that the plaintiff "failed to establish any liability under the law."

"Generally, there is no liability to provide police protection," Smith said. He said there was no evidence that Lillie Braswell relied on the sheriff for protection.

"In my mind there is no question of negligence," Smith said, but "I don't make the law, I just apply the law."

Blount gave notice of appeal to the N.C. Court of Appeals.

During the course of the trial, which began last week, witnesses described how Mrs. Braswell's body was found beside a rural road near Farmville and how, later, officers found the wounded Braswell at the family home in Farmville.

Blount introduced a letter written by Billy Braswell to his son, found by Mrs. Braswell before her death, which suggested he intended to kill his wife and himself, and asked that his son make sure the couple was buried beside each other.

Other witnesses have testified that they had been shown the letter by Mrs. Braswell, had read it and advised Mrs. Braswell to take it to her lawyer.

There was also testimony that sometime before the shooting, Braswell had put a gun to Mrs. Braswell's head and threatened to shoot her.

And according to a portion of a deposition taken from Tyson on Feb. 6 of this year, which was read to the jury by Blount last week, Tyson said Mrs. Braswell told him of the inci-

Senate Salutes Crew For Halting Iranians

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, in the midst of a partisan fight over President Reagan's Persian Gulf policy, today praised the U.S. military personnel who took part in last week's attack on an Iranian ship caught laying mines.

The Senate voted 96-0 to add to a pending defense budget bill an amendment saluting the U.S. soldiers and sailors. There was no debate prior to the vote.

The amendment, sponsored by Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the Sept. 21 attack, "by serving notice on Iran that the United States will react decisively and effectively to such (mining) activity, may lead to a reduced risk to American interests and armed forces from such activity."

The vote came as the chamber resumed consideration of a bill authorizing $302 billion for the Pentagon budget for the fiscal year starting Thursday.

Senate Republicans are opposing restrictions on Reagan's Persian Gulf policy, while the chamber's Democrats are complaining that the White House is misrepresenting their party's position.

The Persian Gulf controversy involves Reagan's plan to reflag Kuwaiti tankers and having them escorted by Navy warships through the war-torn waterway. A Democratic-backed amendment would end those operations 90 days after the bill becomes law, unless both the House and Senate approved the policy.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., complained Monday that "we do not want to pull all our ships and sailors out of the Persian Gulf and our amendment doesn't do that as our opponents have said it does. It does provide for a review of that (escort) policy and that's all it does."

"There is either a gross misunderstanding at the White House or else there is a deliberate effort on their part to confuse the situation," said Byrd, chief author of the amendment.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., who is leading the GOP opposition, cast the debate in different terms.

"The question is will the Congress continue to support the president or will the Congress pull the rug from under the president and say that those ships should be brought home," said Warner.

Byrd said, "there's no question in my mind that there have been hostilities" and he said that means Reagan should invoke the 1973 War Powers Act. The act provides that U.S. troops must be brought home from areas of "imminent" hostilities unless Congress approves the deployment. Reagan has refused to invoke the law, claiming it does not apply to the Persian Gulf situation.

"The War Powers Act has been triggered by the events that have occurred, in my judgment," said Byrd. He referred to the U.S. military's attack last week on an Iranian ship caught laying mines, and to the May 17 Iraqi attack on the Navy frigate Stark, which killed 37 U.S. seamen.

More Mines Line Route Of Tankers

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. warships today escorted a Kuwaiti tanker through the Persian Gulf toward a shipping channel where the Navy spotted at least three floating mines, gulf-based shipping executives said.

British mine sweepers began searching for explosives today in the channel off Dubai about 100 miles from the Strait of Hormuz, the gulf's only outlet, sources said.

Iran vowed to retaliate for the U.S. strike on one of its ships in the gulf and a Pentagon official said American forces may attack any vessel found to be carrying mines.

Iran reported meanwhile that Iraqi warplanes today bombed an industrial complex in the suburbs of Tehran, the Iranian capital. Tehran radio, monitored in Nicosia, did not elaborate on the target or give a casualty figure. Iraq's official media did not report any raids by the air force today.

A U.S. source who spoke on condition of anonymity said a convoy was under way, but would not say which ships were involved.

But officials of the state-run Kuwait Oil Tanker Co. said U.S. warships were escorting the 46,723-ton Gas Prince down the 550-mile waterway from Kuwait toward the Strait of Hormuz.

The officials, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said the convoy left Monday.

The U.S. source said the voyage, which normally takes two to three days, might take longer because of the new mine alert in the channel in international waters off Dubai, which the convoys regularly use.

U.S. warships began to escort 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers last July to protect them from attacks by Iran, which considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

The British mine sweepers Brecon, Brocklesby, Bicester and Hurworth were "busy at work" off Dubai, a bustling United Arab Emirates port, said diplomats and executives who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In London, the Ministry of Defense confirmed British mine sweepers had entered the gulf for the first time since the four vessels gathered outside the strait on Sept. 22. The mine sweepers were the Royal Navy's contribution to a multinational operation being organized to find explosives believed planted by Iran.

Deep-draft tankers were steering clear today of four areas marked with buoys by Dubai port authorities after three "possible" mine sightings were reported by a U.S. warship on Sunday.

A U.S. military source said the sightings were considered "nearly certain," but denied published reports that the U.S. Navy had taken any mines out of the water.

HENRY FORD II

Ford Auto Heir Dies

DETROIT (AP) — Henry Ford II, who took over his grandfather's foundering company at President Roosevelt's urging in 1945 and over 37 years restored Ford Motor Co. to profitability, died today after a battle with pneumonia. He was 70.

A Ford company statement announced the death, saying it occurred at 7:21 a.m.

Ford had been admitted to Henry Ford Hospital on Sept. 12 for treatment of pneumonia, but his condition had deteriorated as he developed heart and kidney problems. He had become ill while in Europe.

During his tenure, Ford won recognition for his advocacy of corporate contributions to social progress, for his backing of Detroit's Renaissance Center and for his tempestuous dealings with such corporate lieutenants as Lee Iacocca, whom he fired as company president in 1978.

Ford Motor ran a steady second to GM during Ford's years as president and chairman.

Council Will Fund Effort For All American City Tag

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council has agreed unanimously to appropriate $10,000 for use in pursuing an All American City designation.

The city, which will be seeking the award for the first time since its unsuccessful bid in 1971, will likely end up spending more than the money appropriated, City Manager Gregory Knowles told council members at a workshop Monday night.

"In my experience with the All American City award, the amount of money that's going to be incurred will be greater than $10,000 because there is probably going to be a number of indirect costs that are never going to show up, such as staff time," Knowles said.

However, Knowles said receiving the designation would be a valuable advertising tool.

"The amount of money aside, I think the effort of getting the All American city award will be equivalent in advertising worth of over $100,000 if you were going to go out and try to put the equivalent number of ads in national papers that the designation of being an All American City would get you," he said.

"When that comes out, it gets into just about every publication there is. Every developer sees it, all the big businesses see it and it does in fact generate the interest of businesses that are considering locations. The problem is you can spend this money and have nothing. You have to be willing to take the gamble."

Seeking the designation is a logical step in marketing the city, Bill Clark, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said at the meeting.

"We've successfully implemented the room tax to be able to really do

Trent Faces New Indictments

A former Greenville physician whose 1985 convictions on charges of rape and taking indecent liberties with a minor were overturned recently by the North Carolina Supreme Court was indicted Monday on rape and sexual offense charges.

A Pitt County grand jury returned indictments charging Lee R. Trent III, 43, a family doctor, with illegal activities in 1981. Trent, who had been serving concurrent life and three-year prison terms, recently was released from prison on an appeal bond. As of mid-morning, he had not been arrested on the new charges.

James A. Wynn Jr. of Greenville, one of Trent's attorneys, said Trent would continue to fight the charges.

Wynn said Trent's license to practice medicine had not been taken away from him because the charges against him had not been settled by the courts, but he said Trent has not been practicing medicine.

A Pitt County Superior Court jury convicted Trent in 1985 of first-degree rape and taking indecent liberties with a girl under the age of 13. He was sentenced to life in prison on the rape charge and three years on the indecent liberties charge.

In an order filed Sept. 3, the N.C. Supreme Court said the 1985 rape indictment was "fatally defective" and should have been quashed because it charged the defendant with the rape of a child "under the age of 13 years." The court said the law had been amended in October 1983 by substituting the phrase "a child under the age of 12 years or less" and that that wording should have been used.

Monday's indictment included a refiled of the rape charge and a new sexual offense charge. The indictment charged that the alleged rape occurred during "the academic year of 1981" and said the victim was "a child under the age of 12 years or less."

Officers Asked To Apply

Greenville City Manager Gregory Knowles plans to look within the city's police department as well as search nationally for a new police chief.

"There are pros and cons from hiring within and there are pros and cons hiring from without," Knowles said today. "My position is that someone outside has to be head and shoulders above these people to be seriously considered."

"The gist of it is that there may be somebody out there super qualified and interested and I owe it to the city to see if that's the case."

Knowles said he has asked members of the Greenville Police Department who are interested in the job to supply him with some additional information.

"I've invited them to apply, and I am going to ask them to provide me with information regarding their major accomplishments they've had in the department, how they would reorganize the department, and their goals and objectives along with resumes and applications."

The three captains in the department — Randy M. Nichols, who is serving as acting police chief; Nelson Stator, interim assistant chief, and David Bullock, acting captain of the department's uniform division — have been asked to apply.

The search is expected to take a few months, according to Knowles, who said he has started to run ads for a new chief nationally.

Former Greenville Police Chief Floyd H. "Ted" Holmes resigned July 17 to accept a similar post in Goldsboro.

Reagan Supports 3rd World Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today called for stepped up lending by multinational banks and commercial institutions to assist indebted Third World nations, saying a cooperative approach by both prosperous and poor nations "is the only real answer" to the red-ink problem.

Reagan, in a speech to the joint meeting of the 151-nation World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, its sister organization, also renewed his opposition to a tide toward protectionism in the Congress and urged once more the elimination of agricultural subsidies worldwide.

"The huge debt burden carried in the Third World is not just their problem," the president said. "It is our problem. And today, let us pledge: We will solve it together."

Reagan told the international financiers gathered not far from the White House that "a number of proposals to strengthen the IMF's ability to promote growth-oriented reform will be advanced soon. But this will not be enough."

"Leaders in debtor nations have tough decisions to make," he said. "Our slogan must be, 'It can be done.'"

Reagan boasted that the economic policies his administration has pursued since he came into office in 1981 ought to serve as a guide for debtor nations trying to stimulate their economies. The moral of the Reagan economic story, he told the audience, is that economies flourish under democratic systems where the central government lowers its profile and gives incentives to private business.

At the same time, he said, "the central themes of our relations, especially with developing countries, have been, and should continue to be, trade rather than aid, mutual benefit rather than charity, a hand-up rather than a hand-out."

"Overcoming the obstacles to progress in these poorer nations is, perhaps, the greatest management challenge in the world today," he said. "A cooperative solution to the debt problem is the only real answer."

The dominating theme of the plan for assistance to Third World nations, advanced by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, has been that lending activity should be stepped up, but that these loans should be made conditional on the acceptance by the leaders of these countries of reforms intended to spur economic growth.

Baker conceded in advance of Reagan's speech that selling Congress on the heightened lending activity by the World Bank will be difficult.

On Monday, Baker told a World Bank panel that "significant progress" has been made in a 2-year-old initiative bearing his name and intended to help ease the debt crisis of developing nations, particularly in Latin America.

But, Baker said, the bank should play an even more active role in the future in helping the major debtor nations.

He said the administration supports a proposal by World Bank President Barber Conable to increase annual lending by the organization to $20 billion a year by the 1990s, up from the current $17 billion.

"We anticipate that this will not be an easy issue to present to our Congress," Baker said. "However, we are committed to press for these funds as necessary to the continued efficient operation of the bank."

City Seeks Title

some things about promoting the city," he said. "I think this All American City is just another step in that direction."

Clark said the city needed to step up its efforts to promote Greenville.

"I feel like the private sector, up until this time, has carried Greenville, I think it has promoted Greenville," Clark said. "Most cities do spend money on promotion. The private sector here is carrying the major part of that load."

"We have estimated through the chamber that we spend somewhere around $25,000 a year mailing out information about Greenville to people who write in about Greenville. That may not sound like a lot of money, but it's a big part of our budget, and the private sector is paying that for us."

Council member Ed Carter also said the city needed to take a more active approach in marketing Greenville.

"I have a real deep interest in Greenville becoming an All American City," Carter said. "I really am somewhat embarrassed over the fact that that $25,000 the Chamber of Commerce spent last year I think a check of the record would show that we appropriated $2,000 towards marketing Greenville."

"I think we have been remiss as a council in terms of the importance of marketing this city. I believe that this council is going to have to assume more of a leadership role in marketing Greenville than we have done in the past."

The timing is right for pursuing the designation, according to Bill Hopper, chairman of the chamber's All American City Committee.

"I think this is definitely the optimum time for us to go, we have so many things going for us right now," Hopper said. "You have to go on things you are currently doing and working on. We have identified areas which I think will make us a shoe-in."

"We're talking about the medical facilities and services, the children's hospital, Ronald McDonald House, EastCare. We're talking about community planning and development. We've got Evergreen — it's made a lot of difference in the appearance of Greenville. We're talking about recreational and leisure activities. We've got River Park North — there's not anything else in the state right now like that — and we're going to have it in Greenville. All of these things are all going on right now. Now is the time to strike while the iron is hot."

In other business, the council approved a $40,000 grant agreement with the Greenville Community Life Center for use in the acquisition of the old Agnes Fullilove Elementary School and cafeteria on Chestnut Street.

The facility, which will be purchased from the Grace Baptist Church, is to be used as a shelter for the homeless.

The $40,000 will be used as a down payment on the property and will allow the group to begin additional grant processes, according to Council member Lorraine Shinn.

Meanwhile, Rudolph Alexander, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Tourism Authority, gave council members an update on the progress of the panel charged with promoting the area with the use of money collected from the occupancy tax.

Alexander said the authority anticipates collections from the occupancy tax to average $20,000 per month.

After hearing the report, the council instructed Alexander to make a similar presentation to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and then have Knowles and County Manager Kramer Jackson meet with the authority to discuss budget expenditures.

The council also received a proposed street addressing ordinance designed to improve public safety activities.

"The city staff has been working for some time now on developing an ordinance to regulate the display and assignments of street addresses," Knowles said in a memo to the council.

"Before this ordinance is presented to the councils for adoption, the staff will be soliciting input from various organizations and community groups because of the impact the ordinance will have on all citizens."

Knowles said the ordinance will come back before the council in November.

Following an executive session, the council voted to give Knowles a $400 per month car allowance and a credit card for maintenance and gasoline for his car.

The board also agreed to rename the position of deputy finance officer to chief accountant and add the position of programmer-analyst.

At the conclusion of the meeting, council members and staff people visited Guy Smith Stadium to examine cracks in cement blocks at the base of steel girders supporting the stands.

The council, which has appropriated $120,000 for use in stadium renovations, voted to hire a structural engineer to examine the facility.

Gorbachev Ends 7-Week Absence To Greet French Delegation On TV

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev greeted a French delegation at the Kremlin today, ending a seven-week absence from public view.

French television, which had a camera and correspondent present during a photo session, showed Gorbachev smiling and gesturing during a meeting with the leader of the delegation, former socialist Premier Pierre Mauroy.

Gorbachev, whom Soviet spokesman have said was on vacation, greeted Mauroy's group of 370 politicians, clergymen, cultural figures and other members of the Initiative '87 visit to Moscow.

Mauroy told The Associated Press after the meeting that Gorbachev seemed "in excellent health and in good form." He said the Soviet leader remarked that he had been working on a book during his vacation.

The former French premier said the meeting with Gorbachev lasted about two hours, during which the Communist Party general secretary spoke of the changes taking place in the Soviet Union and answered questions from the group.

Official Radio Moscow also reported the meeting took place but gave no details.

"The general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party Mikhail Gorbachev is meeting a delegation of the French public in Moscow," Radio Moscow said in its English-language broadcast.

Until August, the 56-year-old Gorbachev had been constantly in the public eye since taking charge of the Kremlin in March 1985.

But he had not been seen on television or in public since Aug. 7, when he met in the Kremlin with a group of American teachers of Russian. His absence prompted speculation about his health, a possible Kremlin power struggle or the health of his wife, Raisa.

In the past, changes in the top Kremlin hierarchy have been preceded by the prolonged absence of the Communist Party general secretary.

Soviet officials insisted nothing was wrong. Foreign Ministry spokesman Boris Pyadyshev told reporters last week that the Soviet leader "is on vacation and that he is in good health — excellent health."

News reports about Gorbachev's absence began a week ago with a report in the West German newspaper Bild that he suffered an attack of food poisoning while on vacation. Bild said the food poisoning may have been an attempted assassination. It cited no sources for its story.

State Governments Increase Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — State government spending grew by 6.3 percent in fiscal 1987, with most states simply maintaining current services and adding few new programs, according to a nationwide survey.

The National Governors' Association and the National Association of State Budget Officers released the survey results on Monday. They called the 6.3 percent figure modest because it was not adjusted for inflation.

The groups' report also said states grabbed only about one-fifth of the windfall that was potentially available to them as a result of federal tax changes.

Twenty-two states made major changes in their tax codes after Congress approved a sweeping federal tax measure last year, and another nine states were reviewing their tax systems, said governors' association executive director Raymond C. Scheppach.

Projected state government spending for fiscal 1988 shows most states once again holding the line, he said.

"The word that most aptly describes state budgets ... is 'frugal,'" said the summary of the 50-state fiscal survey.

But state spending growth varied widely from region to region.

The Rocky Mountain, Southwest and Plains states, hurt by struggling oil and agricultural economies, tended to show small increases or even decreases in state expenditures, the survey said.

"The fiscal situations in certain regions of the country were clearly distressed," the survey said.

The New England and mid-Atlantic states, on the other hand, "continue to be the model of a flourishing economy," said Gerald Miller executive director of the budget officers' association. Their spending was well above the national average.

Nearly half the states were forced to compensate for decreased revenues by cutting their budgets after the spending plans had already been enacted. When the budget ax fell, governors generally tried to shield education programs, the survey noted.

Some states could face eventual damage to their bond rating by leaving little in the state coffers at the end of the fiscal year, the survey said.

Control Needed

An international agreement outlawing the dumping of plastic trash at sea is on the verge of becoming international law. Only Senate ratification is needed and it will presumably come soon.

President Reagan sent the agreement to the Senate in February ... the Soviet Union ratified the treaty in July and with approval of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week, little seems to stand in the way. It will be the first step toward protecting the oceans from becoming a waste dump.

Anyone contemplating the size of our oceans might wonder at how so much damage could be caused by so relatively few humans, but we are a destructive force and the oceans have been a dumping ground for waste since the first sea-goers came on the scene.

The new international law, however, does not ban all waste from being dumped into the oceans. It is aimed at plastics. Texas Senator John Chafee says an estimated 6.4 million metric tons of plastic wastes is tossed into the oceans annually — mostly from ships. Once in the water, it becomes poison for sea life.

Environmentalists have lobbied for the plastics dumping ban for a number of years. One House subcommittee report noted as many as a million seabirds and 100,000 marine mammals are killed annually by choking on the floating junk they mistake for food or by becoming tangled in it. The world simply can't afford to lose these creatures just for the convenience of throwing plastic over the side of a ship.

The world's beaches have been often spoiled by oil spills, but plastic junk is a familiar litter on the sandy shores. It is equally as destructive and damaging as petroleum, as well as aesthetically unappealing.

The international law is on its way to being implemented domestically (the House version is moving faster than the Senate bill). Rep. G.E. Studds (D-Mass) has a measure in the works that already has subcommittee approval and cleared the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee last week. Floor action is expected soon.

The Studds measure would bar over-the-side disposal of plastic trash by U.S. commercial and recreational vessels worldwide, and dumping by foreign vessels within 200 miles of the U.S. coast. There is also a proviso covering Navy and other government ships within five years.

SAT Hang-Up

American educators seem to have a collective hang-up over Scholastic Aptitude Test scores.

The annual report by the College Board is an occasion for torrents of criticism and complaints. Critics of the SAT would be perfectly happy to live without it. They claim bias on the lines of sex and race is primarily to blame for disparities that are all too obvious.

The College Board, which sponsors the college entrance exam taken by 1.1 million youngsters each year found good news in that the scores could have been worse (given the sharp increase in those taking the test), and blacks and other minorities continued to improve scores at a pretty good rate.

The board also found results less than satisfying in that minorities and women still have far to go to close the gap with white male students. Too, test scores rise appreciably with family incomes among all groups. It's enough to keep the SAT results embroiled in disputes for a long time to come, but there are still more complaints.

The annual state-by-state comparisons of SAT averages from the U.S. Department of Education can and do add to the confusion. An example: Mississippi children averaged 487 in the verbal and 521 in math for 1987. Were they getting a better education than Connecticut youngsters who averaged 439 verbal and 473 math?

The difference really lies in the fact that 69 percent of Connecticut high school seniors take the SAT compared with 3 percent of Mississippians who mostly make up the academic cream of the student population.

It is only reasonable to see the annual debate and confusion surrounding SAT reports reflect continuing acceptance of their importance as an academic measuring tool. It is an imperfect tool, yet the best we have to provide some of the answers educators, along with parents and governments, need for evaluating effectiveness of their schools.

The surest byproduct of the statistical material is that the accompanying debate nourishes the SAT's interest and attractiveness to the general public.

Debtor Countries Need A Break

'Since 1982 the debt burden on developing countries in Latin America and the Philippines has condemned most to falling standards of living, plummeting real wages and little or no net investment.'

WASHINGTON — As finance ministers gather for the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund, the Reagan administration is about to lose this country's last chance to get political credit for a solution to the international debt crisis.

Since 1982 the debt burden on developing countries in Latin America and the Philippines has condemned most to falling standards of living, plummeting real wages and little or no net investment. The collapse of markets for U.S. goods in developing countries and the need for these nations to export at any cost has sentenced more than 1 million U.S. workers and farmers to unemployment lines. The failure to resolve the dilemma has needlessly prolonged doubts about the stability of many U.S. banks.

The solution is targeted interest-rate relief and partial debt cancellation — for debtors who implement growth-oriented reforms. Creditors should offer relief. For many debtor countries politically risky reform programs that make the economy more efficient and more equitable are the one chance for economic recovery and democratic renewal. But the reformers need a partner for growth. There are some reformers to whom creditors should offer deep interest-rate relief on all debt for several years. For others, a part of the debt should be cancelled. There may even be some reformers who deserve both some interest relief and partial debt cancellation.

Why is relief in exchange for reform the only and inevitable solution?

•It is the usual and practical way serious debt problems have been resolved by lenders and borrowers. Debt relief is the basis of U.S. bankruptcy law, which stands as the model for all nations. If I can't pay my credit card bills, my bank cuts its losses; it doesn't increase my credit line. Banks that lend countries money solely to pay interest sentence themselves and their borrowers to a stalemate. The credit line increases every month, but the debtor gets no closer to growth and the bank no closer to repayment.

•It may be the only way to avoid world recession. The United States cannot continue to provide the market for world economic growth without becoming overindebted itself. As the United States buys less from debtor countries, those countries will no longer have enough dollars to pay interest. Japan's rapidly aging population may stimulate demand for the health-care business but not for other goods in the world market. Germany's declining birthrate means it will buy less from the rest of the world. The explosion in Latin labor forces — Mexico's work force will increase 50 percent by the year 2000 — and their need for job-creating investment must sustain world growth in the coming decade. But Latin countries and the Philippines can't invest enough for growth and job creation while at the same time servicing debt at the rate of 7 percent of GNP.

•It is smart politics. Debt relief allows fledgling democracies to spend money on infrastructure, health and education instead of just servicing, with money gotten from the sweat of a free people, the debt of a former military dictatorship. No opposition party can assail a leader who makes tough choices toward reform if the choices bring debt relief from creditors. On the other hand, the government that blindly reduces living standards upon policy advice from creditors while piling new debt on old begins to look like the juntas that accumulated so much debt in the first place. Governments with no alternative to new loans for paying old debt will abandon reform rather than become easy targets for opposition parties.

•It is sound banking practice. Emergency loans contaminate banks' books. They finance interest payments instead of factories or farms, and they widen the gap between a bank's paper claims and the real value of its holdings. People who advocate new loans to pay interest on existing debt seem to be arguing that if we make the problem worse, it will go away.

Industrial countries see their exports continue to drop as the United States remains wedded to a policy of new loans. Indebted developing countries ask whether patience is really a virtue when the United States urges nothing more than a decade of recession. When the U.S. trade deficit diminishes in real terms, as it will necessarily, the problem can only worsen. Nobody outside the United States and few within it believes that current policies will resolve the problem; they only postpone the day of reckoning, and do so at great human cost.

Like the economies of debtor countries, the world's financial system needs a breath of fresh confidence. Only interest-rate and debt relief will bring the necessary reforms in debtor countries. Consider what would be possible in three of the smaller debtor nations if America would lead.

The Philippines, our ally through the better part of a century, must deliver on its long-delayed promise of economic opportunity for all Filipinos. There is no way the Philippines can restructure its economy and meet all its debt obligations. Without restructuring, long-term military security in the Philippines will become extremely difficult to attain. Creditors should say up front how much relief they could provide to enable the Aquino government to lay the foundations for broad-based economic growth. The administration should coordinate and lead that effort.

Ecuador, a country that has followed responsible policies throughout its recent economic troubles, gets little help from its creditors. Before the government leaves office next January, its creditors should offer the relief that the country's sound policies have long deserved. If we fail to do this, we necessarily teach other Latin governments the lesson that sound policy doesn't pay.

Costa Rica continues its long democratic tradition on an isthmus in crisis. It is a bitter irony that the burden of Costa Rica's debt could destroy Costa Rica's relative calm without any provocation from neighboring Nicaragua. In the past, its creditors have refused even to consider Costa Rican proposals for debt relief. If they do not soon offer relief they cannot expect the government always to value negotiation above unilateral action.

New Ideas Abound In State Governments

RALEIGH — It may be tough to find a new idea in the speeches of the dozen or so presidential candidates, but there are plenty to be found in the reports coming out of state and local governments. A perusal of State Legislatures magazine proves that. Let's look at a few examples.

•Bank card welfare payments. At first it sounds like a frivolous luxury. But Ramsey County officials in St. Paul, Minnesota, think their pilot program will reduce overhead costs and welfare fraud.

Welfare recipients are issued magnetic stripe cards and a personal identification number. They then use the cards just as any bank customer would at an automatic teller machine.

Tom Fashingbauer, the county's director of human services, says the technology could provide "a major breakthrough in the struggle to streamline the delivery of welfare benefits."

With the automatic tellers, the county saves money by eliminating the costs of writing and storing checks, of buying envelopes, paying postage and paying staff to perform a number of "arduous tasks."

The Minnesotans also hope to reduce welfare fraud because there won't be any checks to forge and payment can be stopped immediately on lost cards.

•Vanity license plates (the personalized message plates) are big everywhere, especially in places like North Carolina where the added cost is not very high ($10). Tennessee figured that out and since dropping their fee from $50 to $25 has seen a tremendous increase in vanity plate usage.

Tennessee has also created a new kind of vanity plate that might drive sales even higher. The Volunteer State will soon be offering a plate that identifies the car's owner by his alma mater. The funds to be realized from these new plates will be earmarked for cultural activities.

•Northeast Missouri State University may not be as well known as that state's more prestigious University of Missouri, but it has developed a program that is turning the heads of major universities across the nation. The 6,500 student school has become the model of accountability in higher education.

Fifteen years ago, the school began testing freshmen, sophomores and seniors to determine how much they'd learned during their college years. It's called the "value-added" program. The intricate testing program took a while to find its mark, but it has shown NMSU administrators the school's strengths and weaknesses. As adjustments were made, and scores rose, it also made the political battle of gaining state funds easier, the magazine says.

The virtually unknown school was given permission in 1985 to totally revamp its curriculum. The result is that admission is becoming much more competitive as more students seek a proven product.

•There are parts of Iowa that are as isolated year 'round as are North Carolina's small mountain and coastal communities in the winter. That creates a problem for students and businessmen who want to stay close to home, but still get the advantages of a good university system.

The University of Northern Iowa is establishing a satellite television link with the state's community and private colleges and public television stations to begin bringing more classwork to small communities.

In this area, Iowa is considered to be one of two leading states. The other is North Carolina. In a future column, the state's efforts to beam TV coursework via satellite into small public schools will be discussed.

Strength For Today

Many years ago, when the Coulee Dam was being built, it became necessary to pass a heavy chain through a long pipe laid horizontally through the masonry construction. How was this to be done? The pipe was too small for a man to crawl through it.

Finally it was decided to tie a string about the body of a cat and encourage the animal, in a number of ways, to make the trip through the pipe. This the cat did. After the string was through the pipe, it was easy to draw a piece of rope, and finally the chain, through it.

Every skill is the result of beginning with something simple and working onward toward something more complex, just like the string and the chain. From weakness to strength, from awkwardness to skill, this is the highway, although arduous to follow.

Too Little Interest In Central America's Oppressed Journalists

The Sandinista government is allowing La Prensa in Managua to reopen without censorship, but another La Prensa — in Panama — remains closed down by Panama's military strong man, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

"It is not only closed, but occupied by troops," said I. Roberto Eisenmann, editor and publisher of the Panamanian La Prensa, in a telephone interview from Miami, where he is living in exile.

Panama erupted with protests against the Noriega-controlled government last summer, which led to the shutting of La Prensa and two other independent newspapers. Since then, the only voices heard in Panama have been those of three government newspapers and two government-controlled television stations.

One of the unfortunate developments in recent weeks, said Eisenmann, is that the protests continue but the foreign press, including the American news media, have departed for stories elsewhere in Central America, mainly to Managua and Costa Rica to cover the Central American peace plan. The story is just as pertinent today as it was back in June and July, but has been left hanging. As one journalist told Eisenmann, with breathtaking shallowness, "It's just more of the same."

The concession by Nicaraguan president Daniel Ortega to permit the Managua La Prensa to resume publishing, and the Catholic radio station to begin broadcasting again, has captured front-page headlines, but there is not enough interest in oppressed journalists elsewhere in Central America to go around.

Yet if "no man is an island," neither is any newspaper. What has happened in Panama continues to be

Attack Encourages Arabs

MANAMA, Bahrain — The American helicopter attack on an Iranian mine-laying vessel this week has bolstered the confidence of Arab states already working closely with Washington, but is less likely to change the cautious diplomatic attitudes of Arab leaders whose populations and national fortunes live within missile range of their large and bellicose neighbor.

According to a sampling of Arab and western diplomats in the region, the U.S. strike on the Iran Ajr was universally cheered in private by Arab leaders. Many were skeptical of Iran's peace-making intentions even as the Iranian president traveled to New York to address the opening session of the United Nations General Assembly.

But while the United States and western maritime powers enjoy widespread private support for their deployment of a 70-ship naval flotilla to protect shipping in the gulf, there is no consensus for an open break with Iran or a unified military stand on the Arab side of the waterway, officials said.

"We are waiting for one more attack by the Americans, if you can do it," said one Bahraini official, who said the attack showed "that no one can face America (militarily) in this region."

But another government official here said U.S. policy makers in Washington had demonstrated a fundamental lack of understanding of the revolutionary character of the Iranian regime and the inability of its religious leaders to compromise revolutionary objectives that have been articulated by Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

"These people do not think as you do in the West," this official said, referring to Tehran's hierarchy. "And I'm afraid that won't change even after Khomeini is gone."

But most officials emphasized the positive impact of the attack in deterring military aggression by Iran against the smaller and militarily weaker Arab states of the gulf.

"The fact that there was somebody laying mines was a very definite threat," said Bahrain's minister of information, Sheik Tariq Moayyed, "and the fact that somebody stopped them was very positive. If you know that people are alert and will stop you, then you might think twice before doing it again."

In the short run, the U.S. military may wring additional concessions out of Oman, Bahrain, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait for joint use of air and naval bases. Some support has been provided for some time without public acknowledgement.

But, as Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger told U.S. Navy crewmen aboard their ships anchored north of Qatar Friday, "We need a lot more ... and the allies coming in need more basing facilities, and we're trying to get all we can."

Weinberger said he expected the level of Arab military cooperation to improve in the next four to six weeks, and he based his confidence in part on the successful demonstration of U.S. military capabilities in thwarting the mine-laying mission of the Iran Ajr.

"The other Arab countries are basically very aware of what a danger Iran is to the civilized world," Weinberger said, "and they are all for what we're doing, and they're going to tell us that privately."

"But whether the (Gulf Cooperation Council states) or all of the Arab states will together condemn Iran or not, I don't know. They've come very close to it, much closer than they ever have before."

But converting secret military assistance on the Arab side of the gulf into a western-Arab alliance to isolate Iran and cut off its arms supply still appears a distant and unlikely prospect in Arab capitals, officials and diplomats said.

There has been a strong and persistent sense in the conversation of leaders of Arab gulf states that they will have to continue living with Iran long after the western fleets go home.

Even Weinberger referred to the intransigent nature of the Iranian regime when he accused it of conducting a campaign of terror since it seized power in 1979. "That's the kind of government they are, and I don't think we can expect very much in the way of change of behavior there until we get a better government."

Analysis

the status quo in many Latin countries and could even be said to have its echoes, however subtle and faint, in the media here. News appears to be in a gradual metamorphosis under the relentless pressure of a right-wing government, right-wing ownership and right-wing critics.

In its coverage of the Iran-Contra story, for example — and the entire Contra controversy, for that matter — network television news has shown an appalling timorousness, all but abdicating its responsibility to inform and challenge. There is considerable stridency and posturing, which give the appearance of probing journalism but lack its substance. Lesser publications are taking the lead in raising the kind of questions which the major newspapers once would have done. The inclination is to think of Latin America as backward in its approach to the press; it may be that the backward has become the avant-garde.

The reopening of Managua's La Prensa will be a significant event, but the reality is that the Sandinista government has put up with this opposition voice before, and presumably can do so again without too much difficulty. The Chamorros who run it notwithstanding, it will be operating in an anti-democratic environment and it remains to be seen whether it has been chastened by the experience of 14 months of non-publication. The Sandinistas have two government-controlled newspapers to counteract it, as well as access to the hearts and minds of Nicaraguans through a rigid educational system and control over the country's television.

The Panamanian La Prensa's experience under Noriega's strongman rule is strikingly similar to La Prensa's under the Sandinistas, which demonstrates that anti-democratic regimes of whatever stripe have much in common. Both were at constant odds with their governments. Both had to cart their front pages over to the government censor before they could go to press; both were forbidden to run white space so as not to call attention to stories that had been cut, and both were finally closed down when things got hot.

Panama's La Prensa had a cir-ulation of 30,000, which peaked at 55,000 daily when demonstrators and police began clashing in downtown Panama City last June and protesters began waving white handkerchiefs to show their defiance of the regime. In the past year or so, it has had some of its machinery damaged by government troops and its reporters have been beaten and jailed, as have other independent journalists in Noriega's Panama.

Charges of corruption and political murder hover about Noriega, surfacing first more than a year ago in The New York Times, and again this year from one of Noriega's own retired colonels, Roberto Diaz Herrera. Diaz Herrera has since been arrested and is being held incommunicado.

Eisenmann, who was in the United States when the Times story broke, received a death threat and was warned by colleagues not to return to Panama. He was denounced as a traitor by Noriega, who accused him of being the source for the Times story.

He believes that Panama's own military will eventually see Noriega as a liability and depose him somehow. In the meantime, there are continued protests and continued government violence. "Only last Sunday," he said, "there was a protest and one person was killed and many wounded, yet you don't hear about that at all. Panama has dropped to second or third priority" as far as coverage goes.

The Committee to Protect Journalists, the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the U.S. embassy and the Inter American Press Association all have protested Noriega's shutdown of Panama's free press, but have been ignored. La Prensa, which means "the press," is still in trouble in Latin America.

Sanford Says Reagan View Of Budget Misleads Public

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford says President Reagan's claim that his desire for a balanced budget has been squelched by a spendthrift Congress is an "outright and deliberate distortion," and that Reagan has never submitted a balanced budget to Congress.

"Leadership in a democracy comes from the executive," Sanford said Monday at the Broyhill Forum on Economic Issues, sponsored by Appalachian State University. "The president has been telling the public in his worrisome way that if Congress would only stop its wasteful spending, if only he had a line-item veto, if only he had a balanced budget constitutional amendment, he could stop piling up this awful debt."

"In other words, he is saying every chance he gets that he would balance the budget if only Congress would let him," Sanford said. "There is no truth in that contention. It is an outright and deliberate distortion."

"Everyone who knows how the budget process works recognizes the falsity of the president's words. But not enough citizens know how the budget is made up," he said.

Sanford said Reagan has a form of line-item veto early in the budget process and has the power to submit a balanced budget to Congress but never has done so, usually proposing "more spending than Congress has been willing to go along with."

Sanford proposed that the federal government create a debt budget so the national deficit can be attacked separately from the nation's operating budget.

"The danger of this national debt to the security of this nation is far greater than the threat of the Soviets. ... Quit confusing the regular budget," he said.

"Move all the self-sustaining funds — Social Security, highway, airport and a number of others," he said. "They have no effect on the deficit. ... Create a debt budget, a debt account. Put it out by itself where we can see it and work on it."

Sanford, who also said he was for a balanced budget amendment to the constitution, said the federal budget could be balanced "in the first year we make these changes."

The state's junior senator also called the Gramm, Rudman, Hollings deficit reduction act, which Reagan signed Monday, "a fraud, but it is all we have."

Seeing Double Could Be Easy

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — For teachers at Arlington Elementary School and for statisticians, it's an oddity. But for some of the three sets of twins in the 54-student kindergarten class, it's no big deal.

"What's a twin?" asked Natascha Adams, sister of Nerissa Adams. "Everybody says I'm a twin."

But Michael James, brother of Mitchell James, said being a twin is "very special."

Why?

"It just is," he said, smiling and thinking for a moment. "We both like green."

Four sets of twins attend the 457-pupil school. Three sets are in the 54-member kindergarten class.

"I've never seen that many twins in such a small classroom," said Dr. Nancy Segal, assistant director of the Minnesota Center for Twin and Adoption Research, when asked about the kindergarten class.

Ms. Segal has been studying twins for 10 years.

Nationally, twin births occur in one out of 88 births. In Gaston County, the figure is about one of every 100 births, according to the North Carolina Division of Health Services.

"If you just look at that number, then there should be no twins in a group of 54 children," Ms. Segal said. "Here's a situation where there are three sets."

The twin kindergartners are

Rodriguez and Tyriquez Lindsay, Shannon and Sherry Skinner and the James brothers. The first graders are the Adams sisters.

Justice Department Clears Judicial Redistricting Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department has cleared a redistricting plan for the state's Superior Court judges that creates nine judicial districts in which non-whites make up the majority of registered voters.

"The law has been cleared along with the new districts that were created and the configurations of the districts," Franklin Freeman Jr., director of the state Administrative Office of the Courts, said Monday.

The plan, which was adopted by the General Assembly after federal lawsuits alleged that the current system discriminated against blacks, was designed to increase the ability of non-whites to win election to the bench.

Under the Voting Rights Act of 1965, such changes have to be approved by the Justice Department.

The changes are scheduled to take effect with the 1988 primaries and elections for terms beginning Jan. 1, 1989. The News & Observer of Raleigh reported. As under current system, judges will be nominated by districts and elected statewide.

But an attorney for one group of plaintiffs who had challenged the state's current judicial election system said Monday that the Justice Department action would not automatically end the group's lawsuit.

"I will have to assess it and look and see where we are," said Angus B. Thompson of Lumberton, general counsel for the N.C. Conference of Branches of NAACP. The lawsuit still may be going on."

The nine newly created judicial districts include eight with one judge each and one with two judges.

The new plan will increase the number of Superior Court districts from 34 to 60 by carving out numerous single-judge districts and eliminating staggered terms for judges within a district.

Thompson said his group still opposed statewide election of Superior Court judges in the general election.

Shooting Arrest

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The husband of a 22-year-old woman shot to death through a window while babysitting has been charged with murder and conspiracy to commit murder, along with two other people, authorities say.

Cabarrus County sheriff's deputies on Monday arrested Frank McMillian, 20, of Harrisburg, the husband of Sharon Ravencraft McMillian, who was shot to death Friday night. Also arrested were Timothy Michael Propst, 19, of Concord, and Lisa Lavon Wilkins, 20, of Mecklenburg County, said Cabarrus County Sheriff Robert Canaday.

They are being held without bond in the Cabarrus County Jail.

McMillian is charged with allegedly hiring Propst, a friend, to kill his wife of six months, Canaday said. Canaday said Ms. Wilkins is charged with driving the white Ford Escort from which authorities believe the fatal shot was fired.

Bakker Number

NEW YORK (AP) — Using a national 900 phone number, Jim and Tammy Bakker will offer their side of the various scandals that shook their PTL empire this year, the phone service announced Monday.

Starting today, callers can hear the Bakkers talking about charges of misuse of PTL funds, the Jessica Hahn incident, their plans for the future — as well as Tammy's record album and her recipe for sloppy joes.

Callers will be charged $1.50 for the first minute and 35 cents for each additional minute of the messages, which will run two to three minutes and change daily, according to Fred Weiner, vice chairman of Phone Programs, a New York-based company.

The Bakkers will "share in the revenue," Weiner said, but he would not reveal what percentage they would receive.

Manager Resigns

WILMINGTON (AP) — Gary Parker, who became Carolina Beach's town manager about a month ago, resigned Monday citing personal reasons and the burden of investigating uncollected town development fees.

Parker became town manager Aug. 10. His resignation is effective Oct. 28.

One day after Parker arrived in Carolina Beach, the Town Council disclosed that the town had failed to collect between $200,000 and $400,000 owed to it by developers for construction in 1983 and 1984. The higher figure has since been reduced to $300,000.

Parker said Monday the investigation has taken up 50 percent of his time as town manager.

Parker said he has accepted a job as a department head in North Lauderdale, Fla. A native of Massachusetts, Parker was raised in the Fort Lauderdale area.

Site Selection Of N.C. Waste Plant May Be Delayed Until November

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Following a ruling by state officials that a Thursday deadline to pick a site for a hazardous-waste treatment plan is unenforceable, the commission choosing the site might add new, less controversial properties to the 13 sites it now is considering, the head of the commission says.

"We can make a decision on the sites we have" by Oct. 1, the deadline set by the General Assembly, Deborah Parker told the Charlotte Observer Monday. "We just needed a chance to evaluate some others."

Monday's ruling by the state Attorney General's Office may mean that a final decision is postponed until November, said Ms. Parker, chairwoman of the North Carolina Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission.

The seven counties contained on the list of 13 sites — Davie, Durham, Guilford, Iredell, Lincoln, Rockingham and Rowan — are the reluctant finalists in a search that began last year with 500 sites statewide.

Public meetings in the counties drew thousands of angry residents who protested that the plant would pollute their air and water and increase the risk of toxic chemical spills. Many residents demanded that the plant be on a large, isolated property.

Ms. Parker would not say which counties contain the possible new sites.

The commission probably will make its final site decision at its regular Nov. 9 meeting, Ms. Parker said.

"We've got to give any new counties a chance to hold public meetings," Ms. Parker said. "They deserve the same consideration as the others."

The plant would treat 90 million pounds of hazardous waste a year, the amount N.C. industries now ship out of state. Commission members say the plant is necessary to ensure safe disposal of industrial waste and to prevent federal officials from cutting the state's toxic-waste cleanup money.

GSX Challenges State Regulations

RALEIGH (AP) — A waste-treatment company has asked federal regulators to strip North Carolina of its authority to regulate the handling of hazardous wastes, but the sponsor of the toughened regulations says the company is only using "more of the same old tactics."

"They don't care about the environment," Rep Dan DeVane, D-Hoke, said Monday of GSX Services Inc, which wants to build a plant in Scotland County.

"The only thing they care about is the money they will make when they come to the state to operate," DeVane said. "It's a tactic to force themselves on the people of North Carolina."

In a petition filed Monday with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, GSX charged that the "arbitrary and discriminatory" law "sets a precedent that states can act in a piecemeal fashion to halt any locally unpopular permitting effort in order to satisfy political demands."

"It was obvious (during legislative debate) and it's obvious now that the real basis for the act was community pressure to prohibit GSX from obtaining a permit ... not because of any legitimate human health or environmental concerns," said Nelson Mossholder, the company's vice president for business development.

GSX officials said the petition was necessary to overturn a state law passed by the General Assembly over the summer.

"As a result of this arbitrary and discriminatory action, GSX has been deprived of its fundamental rights of equal protection and due process of law," Mossholder said.

EPA officials said after the law was enacted they were considering revoking the state's regulatory powers.

Pat Schroeder Says 'Not Now' To White House

By CARL HILLIARD
Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) — Rep. Patricia Schroeder said today that her late start, bias against women candidates and slower than hoped-for fund raising all played a part in her decision not to seek the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination.

Speaking today on the "CBS Morning News," Mrs. Schroeder said the money troubles stemmed from her late emergence as a potential candidate, rather than being a woman, but that she realized from polls that there was a core of voters who would never accept a woman candidate.

"I think the bottom line is this: People keep forgetting it's not one man-one vote, it's this whole really incredibly convoluted delegate system, of which there are papers stacked to the ceiling trying to figure out how to do it in each state. And it's really too late to get into that process."

On being the only woman among both parties' hopefuls, Mrs. Schroeder said, "If you start with a hard core that say 'No way. I'll never vote for a woman. I don't care who she is,' and you're starting late on top of that, and then you don't — the money comes in but it's coming in slow, or not as fast as you'd like, you can't jump-start the campaign, and that's exactly what we've asked at the very beginning."

She did not throw her support behind another candidate, saying she hadn't had time to think about it.

Mrs. Schroeder's tearful announcement Monday that she would not seek the presidential nomination was met with disappointment but understanding by her supporters.

Within an hour of her announcement here, presses in Ohio started stamping out campaign buttons saying, "Schroeder. Whenever."

The senior woman in Congress, whose biting wit hit some of the male Democratic candidates as often as it did President Reagan, said she would not enter the race because "I could not figure out how to run and not be separated from those I served."

An estimated 1,500 people gathered at noon in the outdoor Greek Theater in Denver's Civic Center Park to hear Mrs. Schroeder announce her intentions, which she had revealed to advisers and friends only 90 minutes earlier.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, one of the six remaining Democratic presidential hopefuls, said Mrs. Schroeder had made "a very personal decision, and I respect her for it. I think she would have been a good addition to the Democratic presidential contest."

Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois expressed regret even though he thinks he'll be a major beneficiary of her decision.

"It will be a loss to the nation's dialogue on arms control, women's issues and sensitivity to disadvantaged," Simon said in Chicago.

Mrs. Schroeder, 47, who pinned the term "Teflon president" on Reagan and has referred to the announced Democratic contenders as "a bowl of unset Jell-O," urged her supporters to "build on gains we have made and not lose them."

She said there must be a way to marshal the grassroots support she tapped this summer "and find out some way to do it at the presidential level."

Pat Murphy, president of the National Organization for Women in New Hampshire, said Mrs.

Schroeder had appealed to feminists, peace groups and military families, the latter because of her efforts on their behalf as a member of the House Armed Services Committee.

"She attracts people who are not traditional Democratic Party activists," said Murphy.

The Colorado congresswoman's press aide, Andrea Camp, said she got wind of the Ohio campaign buttons soon after Mrs. Schroeder's announcement.

Camp said political and financial considerations were part of Mrs. Schroeder's decision.

"I could not bear to turn every human contact into a photo opportunity," she said.

Welfare Of Pregnant Prisoners Poses Problems

(EDITOR'S NOTE — A pregnant woman behind bars poses difficult problems for prison officials who must weigh concerns about security against concerns about the welfare of the unborn child. However, some prisoner advocacy groups contend not enough has been done on behalf of expectant inmates and have taken their cause to court.)

By MARYANN MROWCA
Associated Press Writer
FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Rhonda Woods' baby was due two weeks before her parole date and she didn't want the child to be born behind bars.

"I never had to leave a baby in the hospital and go back to jail," says Ms. Woods, 23, of Boston, whose six-month sentence for disorderly conduct kept her at the Massachusetts prison for women during much of her pregnancy.

She is one of hundreds of pregnant women or new mothers nationwide who pose a problem for prison and jail officials faced with balancing concerns about the safety of society and those for an unborn child.

"Some states are more enlightened than others, but I would say that prison pregnancy is systematically a widespread, very serious problem," says Ellen Barry, a lawyer with Legal Services for Prisoners With Children, a San Francisco-based national advocacy group for women prisoners.

Ms. Barry and several other prisoner advocates are involved in a spate of lawsuits against correctional systems pressing for better diets, improved health care and help with custody issues for pregnant inmates.

In California, advocates negotiated a settlement in a class-action lawsuit that accused prison officials of denying pregnant women adequate diets and medical care.

In Connecticut, officials are negotiating a new agreement to replace one that expired last year in a similar lawsuit brought by the Connecticut Civil Liberties Union.

Massachusetts prisoner advocates, who have also filed a suit, are working with state and local leaders to provide alternatives to prison cells for pregnant women accused or convicted of crimes.

Other states have adopted such innovative programs as maternity leaves for pregnant prisoners and rejuvenated old programs such as prison nurseries.

In some countries, judges are barred from putting pregnant women behind bars. In Italy, for example, a 42-year-old woman avoided serving a 10-month sentence for 10 years by repeatedly getting pregnant.

Judges in the United States tend to avoid sentencing pregnant women or mothers of small children to time behind bars, legal and correctional officials say. Sometimes, however, the sentence may be imposed out of concern for the baby, whose imprisoned mother often may be a drug addict.

"Actually, what the judge did helped me," says Janet Jacques, 25, of Worcester, Mass., a pregnant cocaine addict who is serving six months for drug trafficking. "I don't want to say I like being here because it's a prison, but it has, if nothing else, helped my baby."

She said she had been eating better, taking prenatal vitamins regularly and staying off drugs — unlike when she was pregnant and on the streets with her daughter, now 4.

For other pregnant women in prison, however, the outcome has been different.

The federal class-action lawsuit filed in California in 1985 claims prison officials failed to respond to some pregnant women's emergencies and complications.

In one case, the suit alleged, a woman who was bleeding and suffering abdominal cramps was told her pains were normal until she went into labor and was transferred to Riverside General Hospital, where her son was born and died two hours later.

Another woman who doctors said might need a Caesarean delivery allegedly was taken back to prison when correctional officers decided she was not dilated enough to be at the hospital. When she returned 7½ hours later, shackled and strapped to a bench in a security van, doctors said it was too late to perform the surgery. The baby suffered oxygen loss and was born with disabilities, the suit alleged.

Suits elsewhere claim pregnant women were placed in cells or medical units with inmates who had not been examined and may have been carrying contagious illnesses that could affect the developing fetus.

Others allege drug-addicted prisoners were forced to go through withdrawal "cold turkey," without relief from dangerous side-effects such as seizures.

Prison officials say they are doing the best they can in overcrowded institutions and that many of the health problems stem from the mothers' poor medical care before arriving in prison. Most women inmates are poor; many are drug addicts.

"The fact is most inmates have not been exposed to quality medical care before they get to prison," says Robert Gore, assistant director of the California Department of Corrections, who declined to comment on specific charges in the California lawsuit.

Six percent of the nation's female prison population and 10 percent of the women in county jails, which tend to house inmates for shorter periods of time, may be pregnant at any given time, Ms. Barry estimates.

Many problems, she says, stem from "glitches and a lot of ill will." She recalls an inmate whose baby was coming quickly but who had to wait 45 minutes at the prison gate while guards processed the paperwork for her to be put in an ambulance.

But security concerns must come first, prison officials say.

"This is a prison first and when we forget that, we'd better find new jobs," says Martha Rice, program director at the Framingham prison. She recalls one pregnant woman who was placed in maximum security.

"None of us will pretend that maximum security is the optimum place for a pregnant woman," she says. "But she tried to climb the fence."

Activists, however, claim some of the security practices have been unnecessary and dangerous.

In Connecticut, for example, one woman was shackled as she was taken to the hospital to give birth a few years ago.

"They took the leg irons off as the baby was coming out," says Martha Stone, legal director for the Connecticut ACLU, which fought for a strict policy outlining when leg irons could be used.

In Massachusetts, there is only one prison for women, for offenders ranging from drunk drivers to murderers. Often they must travel across the state for court appearances and may miss hot meals, relying instead on bag lunches that activists claim may not be as nutritious.

"Even in the best support systems, the prison environment is not a place for a pregnant woman," says Betsey Smith, director of Social Justice for Women, an advocacy group in Boston.

As recently as four years ago, some pregnant prisoners in Massachusetts faced problems getting maternity clothes, nursing bras and information about custody issues, she says.

At Framingham, where the average sentence for a woman is 4.7 months, about 50 pregnant women go through the institution each year. Last year, 17 gave birth while in prison.

About 3,100 women are serving sentences in the California prison system, the largest in the country, and about 42 are pregnant in any given month. Last year, 120 babies were born to California women prisoners.

Pregnancies behind bars tend to have more complications than those spent in the community, according to a study by Prison MATCH, a prison mothers advocacy group, done for the California Health Department in June 1985.

"With pregnancy, you have an innocent victim in there who has not been convicted who might lose his life," says Carolyn McCall, Prison

Match program director.

Once the baby is born, prison officials and activists agree, comes the big problem: what to do with a baby who needs immediate care but whose mother might have a few more months to serve.

In some parts of the country, they are getting the women into halfway houses.

In Georgia, a maternity reprieve program gives qualified pregnant inmates a 60-day furlough 30 days before their due date so they can deliver their babies outside the prison.

The seven-year-old program also allows women prisoners some time to bond with their infants before the new mother must return to prison. Other pregnant Georgia prisoners, like those in many states, return to their cells 40 to 72 hours after giving birth.

Officials at other prisons are taking another look at prison nurseries, which were once common in women's reformatories in the United States. The nurseries, places behind the prison fences where women could care for their babies, fell victim to budget cuts and concern about the possible effects of growing up behind bars.

Today, the nation's only active state prison nursery is at Bedford Hills in New York, where 18 mothers care for their children in rooms on one floor.

"The babies are with their mothers and that's where they belong," says Sister Elaine Roulet, who directs the nursery.

The babies sleep in cribs in their mothers' rooms and play in the nursery during the day. The mothers win, by good behavior, the privilege of having their children with them, says Joan Koch, a prison nursery spokeswoman.

Some activists, like Ms. Smith, say the nurseries are "not a vision of the future but a thing of the past" and new solutions must be found.

In Massachusetts, a program established late last year encourages judges to sentence women who would normally be ordered to serve time at Framingham to perform community work, make restitution to victims and undergo treatment programs.

In addition, the Incarcerated Expectant Mothers Task Force is building a center in Boston to house about a dozen pregnant women who need the structure of a residential program in order to overcome drugs or other problems that led to their arrest.

The task force hopes to open the center, which will also provide prenatal care nearby, this winter, Ms. Smith says.

"Why would you want a child to go into prison when a mom can safely go into a community?" asked Lily Austin of Social Justice for Women.

Fine Scissors Require Proper Care, Treatment

Homemaker's Haven

Evelyn Spangler

The possession of fine scissors or shears represents an investment. It should be recognized that instruments which have a long life potential are also sensitive to damage from improper care. Following is advice from manufacturers.

•Wipe the inside blade surfaces clean frequently (and this is very important in working with polyester and other synthetics) because of the abrasive effect of accumulated lint on the cutting edges. Exercise caution to avoid finger cuts.

•Oil the pivot area lightly on a periodic basis (around the screw head and between the blades at the pivot area). Avoid any build-up of oil which can cause fabric stains.

•Avoid the use of force in cutting. The most important rule in the care of scissors and shears is seldom considered. It is simple — one should never complete a cut if the fabric offers heavy resistance. Struggling through a cut means that the instrument being used is too light for the task of the cutting edges are dull. In either event, forcing the cut can severely damage the blades. If the gentle pressure of thumb and fingers is not enough, then it is best to make certain that the cutting edges are sharp and to cut through fewer thicknesses at one pass.

•Avoid careless handling which can result in the instrument being dropped. Always place the scissors/shears in a "safe" position on the work surface when not in use so that they will not be covered by fabric and dragged onto the floor. Exercise care always to avoid cutting into pins.

•Establish a proper storage place for scissors and shears between sessions. Select a dry, secure, child-free spot. The use of a sheath or close fitting container can assist greatly in protecting the instrument from accidental damage.

•Because all scissors and shears become dull through normal wear and use, they require sharpening.

What's the Difference?

Can you distinguish a pair of scissors from a pair of shears? If you cannot, you're not alone. Shears first appeared in Third Century B.C. (records and at least one museum specimen would seem to support this). This was a one-piece instrument similar in construction to the sheep shears or ice tongs of today. In approximately the First Century A.D., scissors came into being (here an assembled two-piece instrument in which two blades are made to pivot toward each other by hand action on two connected handles).

Today, the term shears has been expanded to include a pivoting-type cutting instrument which is greater than 6 inches in length and/or which has handle bow or loops designed for the thumb and for two or more fingers.

Scissors then may be defined as a pivoting-type cutting instrument which has two identical bows or loops, a finger bow and a thumb bow, and which does not have a length greater than six inches.

It should be understood that there are many six-inch scissors and many six inch shears. There are no seven inch scissors ("scissors" become "shears" when they exceed six inches in length). There are also patterns of shears which are shorter than six inches.

Thoughts About Scissors

•The ancients believed that a gift of a pair of scissors was unlucky unless a coin changed hands. Payment by a coin prevented scissors from cutting friendships.

•Sidney Smith said in Lady Holland's Memoirs: "Marriage resembles a pair of shears, so joined that they cannot be separated; often moving in opposite directions, yet always punishing anyone who comes in between them."

Students Fare Poorly In Map Drawing Drill

By PETER PEGNAM
The Tucson Citizen

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Assignment: On a blank piece of paper draw a map of the world from memory. Label all countries and include any other features of interest or importance. Time limit: 30 minutes.

Thomas F. Saarinen, a University of Arizona geographer, put that proposition to college students as part of an unprecedented worldwide survey.

Among the 4,277 maps drawn by such first-year students in 54 countries was one putting Australia at the top of the world. Another world map showed only the Philippines, surrounded by an unknown world where sea dragons lurk.

The students, who had no advance warning of the assignment, averaged about 30 countries per map — fewer than one-fifth of the independent countries in the world, Saarinen said. The 640 U.S. students who were tested ranked about average.

The maps are the largest collection of world sketches ever assembled, Saarinen said.

One of Saarinen's theories holds that world problems grow from simplistic notions — that decisions are made on the basis of people's ideas about the world.

"If you don't have knowledge of the rest of the world, how are you going to make decisions?" he asked. "Before we can have a shared world image we have to understand what images are present and why."

Saarinen selected a cultural cross section of students enrolled in introductory geography courses. "If they don't know how to draw a map of the world, who does?" he said.

Saarinen's biggest surprise was the "perceived importance" of Europe. Eighty percent placed Europe in the center of their worlds. Many exaggerated its size.

He cited the colonial legacy, at least in the educational system.

"Our mental images don't seem to have caught up with the reality of a world of free and independent nations," he said.

Small European countries such as Great Britain showed up on most maps. And maps from faraway places such as New Zealand contained detailed information about the mother country.

With the exception of certain European countries, the nations most often included were the Soviet Union, Canada, China, the United States, Brazil, India and Australia.

Saarinen said he expected countries closest to home to be drawn in detail with those farther away sketched as "vague blobs with lots of blanks."

But he found that language and cultural and political ties often made distant places better known.

Other observations:
— Africa generally was sketched smaller than it should have been, with lots of blank spaces where countries should have been. That reflects a lack of awareness of the Third World.

— Postage-stamp countries were most often left off maps, especially countries in Central America, West Africa, Southeast Asia and Europe's Balkan peninsula.

— Hungarian maps, the product of an educational system that stresses learning all the countries of the world, were among the best.

Some students couldn't resist adding a little humor: Exploding maps, rockets bursting between the United States and the Soviet Union and lightning bolts flashing over world trouble spots.

Saarinen, at the University of Arizona since 1965, personally administered the classroom test in 30 of the countries surveyed last year. His research assistant, Charles MacCabe, helped with the other countries.

The project was sponsored by the International Geographical Union and financed by the National Geographic Society.

The task ahead is analyzing the maps and getting the information into a computer. One problem has been lining up 14 translators.

Down the road probably is a book that would be available to geography teachers around the world.

One geography lesson Saarinen proposes is for teachers to inform students that other nations "are not perverse or evil because they don't look at the world the way we do."

Designer Children Need To Hear 'No'

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

In the galaxy of human relationships, a baby has always been the center around whom all other planets revolve.

Never has that little light shone brighter than during the last 10 years. That is because they have become "designer" babies ... exclusive ... shown by appointment ... only one to a family!

The speculation is that they're the most pampered, spoiled, indulged babies ever born. And why wouldn't they be? Some have two sets of parents, four sets of grandparents, and enough pseudo aunts and uncles to last a lifetime. They come from a two-paycheck family of professionals who only want the "best" for their offspring.

The "best" has seen the emergence of an infant line of clothing that includes a basic black dinner dress for toddlers and lame diaper covers for infants, a pre-kindergarten school designed to have your child physically and mentally fit by age 5 and a trend back to diaper services for discerning parents who perceive paper is for the bottom of a bird cage.

It's not only the babies wearing a made-in-America label. Family planners in China, who penalized couples having more than one child and rewarded those who adhered to the rule, were among the first to notice the problems of "designer" children. They were growing up spoiled, self-centered and unyielding.

The solution seems to be, how can you raise an only child like a member of a large, Italian-Catholic family of a decade ago? There are ways.

First, never get the kid's name right on the first call. After you go through the names of all the apostles, plus Vinnie, Michael, Immaculata and Rosalie, grab him by the throat and say, "Number six! I'm talking to you!"

Dress him in clothes that fit him perfectly for about 15 minutes. All the other times, have them either two inches too short in the sleeves or nine inches too long in the hems. This always gives a child an incentive to either grow into something and get out or outgrow it and amount to something. A boy oughta wear girls' boots at least once in his life to give him something to recover from.

Keep him busy. If you have to, send him to the store every two hours for something you don't need until next week and make sure he hurries. Never look at him without punishing him for what he is thinking or he'll think you don't like him.

Give him something he's responsible for, like a puppy, a fish, or a hamster ... something that if he screws up and lets get sick, you'll remind him of for the rest of his life. He needs to be around something that is as important as he is.

Oh, and at least once a day say "no." I know, you want them to have the best of everything, but if kids don't hear "no" once in a while ... they have nothing.

Couple Celebrates 60th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William Highsmith of Bethel celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary Monday.

The couple has seven children, William Highsmith Jr., Leroy Highsmith, Billy Highsmith and Kenneth Highsmith, all of New Haven, Conn., Barbara Crisp and Margaret Andrews, both of Bethel, and Janie Beach of Parmele. They have 43 grandchildren and 34 great-grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Highsmith were married in Bethel. They are members of Mt. Zion Holiness Church in Bethel where he is a deacon chairman and she is a mother of the church and past president of the Senior Choir. He is a retired farmer.

Hairdresser Pulls Wool Over Her Eyes

DEAR ABBY: I met this guy when I accidentally got a wrong telephone number. I asked for Larry and got a Gary. He liked my voice and I liked his, so we decided to meet. We liked each other a lot, and since then I've been seeing him.

All I know about him is that he is a hairdresser who owns a car with a phone in it. I know all his numbers — his home, his car and the beauty salon, which he owns.

He never talks about himself. When I ask questions, he changes the subject to how much money he makes or how tired he is.

Abby, how can I find out more about this man? I don't even know how old he is or if he's married. I have really fallen for him, but I don't want to fall any deeper until I know more about him. Can you help me? — FALLEN ANGEL

DEAR ANGEL: You could have him investigated by a detective agency — but it's not inexpensive. My best advice would be: If you have to ask Dear Abby how to find out what kind of man you're dating, perhaps you shouldn't be dating him.

DEAR ABBY: My son has been dating a girl (exclusively) for two years. Recently I introduced them to friends of mine as follows: "This is my son, Jeffrey, and his friend, Karen."

I was informed later that Karen thought she should have been introduced as Jeffrey's "girlfriend" instead of his friend. My thinking was, since she was physically present, it was obvious that she was a girl, so that word was redundant. Or was I being insensitive in not making her feel "special" enough? — JEFFREY'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: These days, the word "friend" covers a multitude of relationships. I suspect Karen was piqued because she felt that you were attempting to minimize (or deny) the seriousness of her relationship with Jeffrey. Were you?

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: This is my first time to write. I, too, am one of those "pop in" preachers. I always try to make it at a convenient time. I thought perhaps you would like to share the following with your readers:

OUR MINISTER NEVER STOPS
"Occasionally someone will say, 'Our minister never stops by to visit us.'"

"If your minister never stops at your home, you should probably thank God. It means death has not struck, that no serious illness has laid you low, that the surgeon's knife has not been necessary, that you have no serious family problem, or that you are not a spiritually delinquent member.

"As a rule, your minister does not have time for a 'social call.' Not that he wouldn't enjoy it; it's just a matter of priorities — putting first things first.

"However, you may be sure of this: Your minister is willing to come to the hospital or your home, the jail, the street corner, or anywhere at any hour of the night or day — wherever or whenever he is needed. So, call him if you need him. Otherwise, he will not know of your need until it is too late.

"For the moment, thank God you have not needed your minister. One day you may need him, and he will heed your call." — PREACHER IN NORTH LITTLE ROCK

DEAR ABBY: All women look ladylike and elegant in long gowns. Now they are showing tight, above-the-knees dresses for evening wear. They make a woman look like a tart. It's cheap and degrading. If the men who design women's fashions want to see knees, why don't they shorten men's pants above the knees?

My friends and I intend to wear the long gowns we have hanging in our closets. We refuse to buy those tacky, short ones with puffs and ruffles across the par' of our anatomy that doesn't need ar padd' s.

We want elegant and figure-flattering apparel that gives us comfort and confidence. Thank you. — NO SLAVE TO FASHION

DEAR NO SLAVE: Just because hemlines are being shown four inches north of the knee does not mean that "every woman" must follow suit. Wear what you feel most comfortable in because, frankly, my dear, nobody really gives a damn.

DEAR ABBY: We have been seeing references to "the late" Franklin Delano Roosevelt since we were kids in the '50s. The most recent one was in June of this year.

Could you please ask your experts and let us know just how many years must go by before one is just plain dead rather than "late"? — LINDA AND DAVID S. IN BAKERSFIELD

DEAR LINDA AND DAVID: According to my expert, Letitia Baldrige (author of "The Complete Guide to Executive Manners"): "When referring to someone who was famous and is now dead, one need not say 'the late.' (Franklin Delano Roosevelt would qualify.) But in referring to a person who was not well-known, 'the late Mrs. John Jones' would indicate that she is no longer living."

DEAR ABBY: I was amazed to learn that you had a collection of snappy comebacks for the question: "How come you never married?"

Please add my favorite from a dear old Quaker lady to her inquisitive neighbor, George.

"Thee knows, George, it takes a mighty fine man to be better than no man." — STILL CHUCKLING IN ORANGE CITY, FLA.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say?)

Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

TRY GRAPE JUICE FOR A 'TRANSFUSION'

NEW YORK (AP) — Bartenders at country clubs in New York are offering athletes energy-releasing potassium through "transfusion."

Transfusion is a non-alcoholic beverage made with a tall half glass of ginger ale and New York concord grape juice over ice cubes. Grape juice is a natural source of potassium, which the body needs after exercise, according to the New York Wine and Grape Foundation.

The National Grape Cooperative at Westfield, N.Y., says the increasingly popular beverage has been in the Welch recipe book for years. It has been served to golfers on the 9th and 18th holes during Seniors Golf Tournaments sponsored by the company, says Jim Weidman, vice president.

Judge Dismisses Suit Against Tyson

 sent on Wednesday (Sept. 22, 1982) before she was killed on Monday.

Lila Joyner of Farmville, who told the court Thursday that she had read the letter from Braswell to his son, said her impression was that the letter said "that he (Billy Braswell) was going to kill her (Mrs. Braswell)."

Ms. Joyner also said that Mrs. Braswell told her that she went to Tyson "asking for protection," but that Mrs. Braswell said Tyson told her "he (Billy Braswell) was not going to hurt her" and that "he (Tyson) did not deal in domestic affairs."

Sworn testimony given by Tyson in Braswell's criminal trial was read to the court Monday. In one portion, Tyson said he sent then-deputy Lee Pascasio to "stay with Braswell" at one point, and another time sent Deputy Ivan Harris to "go to Deputy Braswell's house to see how he was."

According to Tyson's testimony, both Pascasio and Harris reported that Braswell "didn't appear homicidal or suicidal."

But Dr. George Kirkham, a criminologist at the University of South Florida at Tallahassee, who specializes in police standards and procedures, said "yes," when asked by Blount if Tyson's "actions ... or inactions" violated nationally accepted standards and procedures of the law enforcement profession.

Kirkham said that, "based on the sheriff's own account that Lillie Braswell expressed to him her fear of her husband," Tyson's failure to call Braswell in, talk to him and press an investigation, "fell far short of professional standards."

Reports that Braswell had assaulted his wife on several previous occasions and the information contained in Braswell's letter to his son "should have run up red flags all over the place," Kirkham said.

But under cross-examination by Tyson's lawyer, Richard Rice of Winston-Salem, Kirkham said Tyson had "no probable cause to arrest Billy Braswell for anything" prior to the shooting.

And Kirkham said Tyson's failure to provide protection to Mrs.

Braswell "did not violate any standard." The expert said providing protection for any individual was "not feasible ... particularly in a small department."

But Kirkham again said the information Tyson had should have caused him to "press an investigation with all vigor."

Kirkham testified that he was being paid $5,000 plus expenses for appearing as a witness in the trial.

Dr. Sam Williams, a Greenville psychologist, said that the "intent indicated in that letter," from Braswell to his son, indicated that Braswell was "both suicidal and homicidal."

Michael Braswell testified Monday that the relationship between his mother and father was "very poor," but said, "I had a very good relationship with my mother."

Braswell, now 26, said he moved out of his parents house when he was 21, but he said his mother, who helped him buy a house, continued to help him maintain his checking account, wash his clothes, clean and cook for him.

"My dad was quick-tempered, cursed a lot ... a violent person," Braswell testified, adding that Billy Braswell had "10 to 12 pistols, two shotguns and a rifle" at the house.

Braswell, who said his mother was afraid of his father and "felt like she was in danger," said, "I was pretty much afraid of him also ... afraid to approach him about this matter."

Saying he depended on his mother, Braswell testified, "There was nobody else I could talk to, turn to, depend on ... there was just nothing left of my life after my mom died." She was "very kind, very understanding, a good person to talk to ... probably the most perfect person I've ever seen on the face of the earth."

Braswell, who was married in January of this year, also testified that since his mother was killed, he has been arrested for possession of marijuana and assault on a female.

Double Play Touches Off Celebration As Minnesota Clinches Western Flag

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Kirby Puckett could barely muster the energy to stand, but he had enough strength to hug Bert Blyleven.

"I love you, man, I love you," Puckett said. "We did it, man, we did it."

It was one of the most subdued — yet one of the most touching — scenes from the Minnesota's champagne-soaked dressing room Monday night after the Twins clinched their first American League West title in 17 years.

Both Puckett and Blyleven have known their share of losing over the years.

"It's been a long time for Minnesota," Blyleven said after a 5-3 victory over the Texas Rangers made the Twins the first team to clinch a division this year. "I hope this is the first stepping stone to the World Series."

"This is great, just great," Puckett said. "But I'm tired, man. I didn't know winning makes you this tired."

The atmosphere of celebration began to mount during the bottom of the ninth inning, as Minnesota players climbed to the top step of Arlington Stadium's visiting dugout in anticipation of bullpen ace Jeff Reardon retiring the Rangers.

The players retreated a few inches when Oddibe McDowell singled with one out. But when second baseman Steve Lombardozi caught Geno Petralli's liner and fired to first baseman Kent Hrbek to double up McDowell, they streamed onto the field, trampling dozens — perhaps hundreds — of Texas-sized crickets en route to the middle of the diamond.

Reardon, who picked up his 31st save, ran straight toward Hrbek and jumped into the big first baseman's arms.

"I went directly to him because he was the last one with the ball," Reardon said. "With me being the stopper, that was my dream the last two months."

While Minnesota players hugged and danced just to the right of the pitcher's mound, first-year Manager Tom Kelly simply stood in the dug-out, quietly observing the moment.

"I did that in Orlando when I was managing there and we beat the Nashville Sounds in the Southern League (1981)," Kelly said. "I just watched my players jump up and down. That's very rewarding for me as a manager. That was my fun."

The celebration then moved inside the dressing room, where champagne corks popped and beer and bubbly doused everyone and everything in sight.

"I thought it would be total bedlam. And it is!" Tom Brunansky shouted over the din.

"Incredible, incredible," said Lombardozi, who drove in four runs and capped the night by turning the game-ending double play. "I never had as much fun in my life."

Lombardozi later showed off the inside of his cap, where he had attached a picture of the Metrodome, Minnesota's home ballpark. The Twins had baseball's best home record, 56-25, but will enter the AL Championship Series as the worst road team (29-47) ever to win a division championship.

"That's the Dome, that's the Dome, man!" he screamed, pointing inside his cap. "I feel a little more comfortable when I'm playing under the Dome!"

Dan Gladden wore sunglasses that flashed green and red lights. On two consecutive second-inning plays, the left fielder threw out Texas baserunners trying to stretch singles into doubles.

"I never had this feeling before," said Gladden, who came to the Twins in an off-season trade with San Francisco. "It's what you work all year for. This is great."

Gary Gaetti, normally one of the most emotional Twins, could barely speak. He was one of a half-dozen players who were brought up to the big leagues in 1982 and endured some hard times until this season.

"I'm just drained," he said. "I just want to walk around, take it all in."

Divisional Champs

Giants Rejoice In First Western Title In 16 Years

SAN DIEGO (AP) — In a locker room wet with champagne, the San Francisco Giants celebrated their first division title in 16 years.

Players shouted, "We did it" and exchanged hugs and doused each other with the bubbly after the Giants clinched the National League West crown Monday night with a 5-4 victory over the San Diego Padres.

In the heady atmosphere of the clinching victory, San Francisco Manager Roger Craig predicted that the division title was just the beginning for a team that two years ago lost 100 games (62-100 in 1985).

"We're going to win it all. We've got an outstanding ballclub," said Craig, who is in his second full season as Giants' manager.

The Giants are only the fourth club since 1900 to finish first in a full season two years after losing 100 or more games.

"We always won the crucial games when we had to, like tonight because (second-place) Cincinnati had won," Craig said.

San Francisco will play the survivor of the NL East scramble among St. Louis, New York and Montreal for the right to play in its first World Series since 1962. St. Louis is leading New York by two games with Montreal third, three back.

Reliever Don Robinson, acquired by the Giants in a July 31 trade with Pittsburgh, pitched the final five innings to pick up the win and delivered a bases-empty homer in the top of the eighth to provide the victory margin.

Robinson, 11-7, said he had a feeling he was going to get a pitch to his liking from Lance McCullers, 8-10, the fourth of five San Diego pitchers.

"I was looking for a breaking ball and I got it," said Robinson, who hit his seventh career homer and first since a grand slam on Sept. 12, 1985.

"Before I batted, I told Roger I knew he was going to throw me a slider and if he did I was going to hit it out of the ballpark. I knew when I hit it, it was gone."

Robinson, who came on in the top of the fifth in relief of starter Dave Dravecky, worked out of a jam in the ninth when Tony Gwynn led off with his third hit of the game, a single. He moved to second on a sacrifice by Shane Mack and advanced to third on Stan Jefferson's ground-out, but John Kruk's deep fly to left field was caught by Jeffrey Leonard.

The final out ignited a five-minute on-field celebration by players who were mobbed by scores of Giants fans racing passed security guards.

"This is the most excited I've ever been. It may not look like it, but I am," Craig said.

Before Kruk's at-bat, Craig went to the mound to confer with Robinson.

"He told me the champagne was on ice," Robinson said. "I told him 'you got it.'"

The Giants went 42-26 since the All-Star break in claiming their first division title since 1971. San Francisco also clinched that title in San Diego by beating the Padres on the last day of the season.

"I feel good, but I know there's still a long way to go. This is just the first step," said Leonard, who had a two-run pinch homer for San Francisco in the fourth.

Chile Davis added a second pinch homer in the fifth as the Giants tied a major-league record for the most pinch homers in a game.

The homers were the 100th for both Leonard and Davis.

"We're the National League champions. We're the best," Davis said.

Candy Maldonado's RBI single in the third produced the Giants first run.

For San Diego, Benito Santiago had two hits, including a run-scoring triple in the seventh. Santiago extended his consecutive hitting streak to 30 games, an all-time record for rookies.

He is only the 29th player in major league history to hit in 30 or more straight games.

The Padres' other runs came on a solo home run by Randy Ready and RBI singles by Gwynn and Carmelo Martinez.

Gwynn's final hit gave him 214 for the season, a personal and club record. He had 213 in 1984.

"I knew midway through the season I had a chance to break it," Gwynn said. "I wanted to get it tonight. I wanted to spoil their party. But they went out and beat us. You've got to take your hat off to them."

San Diego Manager Larry Bowa said of the Giants: "I felt watching them that two years ago this was a team that lost 100 games, that it's not that impossible to turn that around quickly with a young team."

"Maybe some of our young kids will watch this, work a little harder, so we can obtain a goal we all want — to win," he said.

The Padres are in last place in the NL West at 64-92.

Eagle Defense Caused Buc Problems, Led To Switch

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

A change in the defensive scheme expected from Georgia Southern caused some confusion in the first half of Saturday's football game, but that wasn't the only problem the Eagles presented to East Carolina's Pirates.

"I thought Erk Russell and his staff did an excellent job of preparing their team. And they were in a much better frame of mind than our team. And, frankly, I don't understand it. We had an excellent week of preparation and I was surprised by the way we took the game," ECU coach Art Baker said. "I don't see how we could have taken them lightly."

"They had an excellent plan of attack on offense and defense," Baker said.

The Pirates prepared for an eight man front, but Georgia Southern made some moves out of the alignment that the Pirates were unprepared for. "They came out and shot their defensive tackles to the inside to stop that part of the game and let their linebackers and corners take care of the pitch," Baker said. "That was not what they had been doing in the past and we were not prepared for it."

Baker said that the offense was off the field only for a few moments when Georgia Southern scored quickly on their first offensive play of the game, giving the coaching staff no time to make any adjustments. It was really an afterthought at the half that caused the Pirates to switch to the I-formation with two tight ends, getting ECU on the move.

"There were four reasons that we won," Baker said. "First of all, our defense played hard. They stretched at times and gave up a lot of yards, but they only allowed that one touchdown on the trick play. They got close, but we forced them to go for the field goals."

"Second, Anthony Simpson, who always turns in a good performance, made up his mind to do what had to be done to win. He had a couple of very key runs — the one for a touchdown and another down to the one yard line that were absolute beauties. He's the kind of runner that all (the defense sees) is a hat and a set of shoulder pads coming at them through the hole."

Baker said another factor was that, as poorly as the Pirates played on offense for the majority of the game, they did what they had to do at the end. "We had a 70-yard drive that was aided by a penalty, but penalties are a part of the game. I don't think it was a backhanded win — I think we deserved it. Maybe Lady Luck was on our side. There have been plenty of times when she wasn't."

Finally, Baker said, the most important things was the attitude of the team. "In the past two years, the players would have found a way to lose the game. This year, they found a way to win. That, to me, is a sign of the change in attitude of our players."

Baker lauded Simpson as the offensive player of the week. He rushed for 112 yards and scored two touchdowns. Baker listed him as grading out 80 percent, adding 25 yards to his rushing after initial hits, and having broken seven tackles.

"The only other offensive player to grade a winner was (tackle) Grant Lowe, who was at 67 percent," Baker said.

"Travis Hunter (quarterback) made some mistakes, but he also came up with some badly needed throws at key times in the game," the coach added.

On defense, Baker said he thought the front four played better than they have previously. "Ron Gilliard is finally at full speed. He has six tackles, one sack and two tackles for losses. He also caused a fumble and was our defensive player of the game."

Baker also said that Mike Applewhite was improved in his line play and that Willie Powell was the best among the linebackers.

Reggie McKinney was selected as the top special team player, running back kickoffs for over 125 yards.

And Baker says that he is still seeking more ways to get the ball into McKinney's hands. "I understand that he's averaging about 11 yards a carry in all-purpose running. But he did have a costly fumble that hurt us down there on the goal line."

Baker said that McKinney's fumble and another by Simpson were the biggest disappointments in the game, costing the Pirates two scoring opportunities.

And as to the future of the I in the Pirate plans, Baker continues to stick with the run-and-shoot.

"We used the I for a specific purpose," Baker said, "to get them back into the defense we had planned for. We will continue to put McKinney or (Jarrod) Moody into the I at times and take advantage of the talents of Ben Billings at tight end, too. But it will depend on what the defense is doing and what we're getting. We will continue to work on it and we will be ready to use it when we feel it necessary."

The Pirates, now 2-2, travel to Morgantown, W. Va., to face West Virginia University on Saturday. Kickoff is set for 1 p.m.

Woody Peele

We erred, and we apologize!

In Sunday's edition of the Daily Reflector, we reported that only one penalty was marked off against Georgia Southern when the team was charged with face-masking and with an unsportsmanlike conduct call against Eagle coach Erk Russell.

Russell had commented in post-game interviews that he felt the call helped the Pirates score their go-ahead touchdown to win the ball game.

What transpired on the play was this. Facing a third and five situation at the GSU 26, Pirate quarterback Travis Hunter rolled out to pass, but found himself under a rush.

He scrambled first to his left, then back to the right, then back to the left, finally being hauled down out-of-bounds between the 32 and 33. A flag was thrown on the tackle for face-masking.

Now face-masking can be one of two different penalties, a 5-yarder, if incidental, and a 15-yarder if flagrant and/or deliberate.

At the same time, Russell ran on to the field on the opposite side making a protest, and was flagged by another official for unsportsmanlike conduct.

We saw the referee give the signal for face masking and spotted the umpire standing at the 26, from where he marked off half the distance to the goal line.

The NCAA 1987 Football Statisticians' Manual makes the following statement concerning penalties: "The basic enforcement spot for fouls when the run ends behind the line of scrimmage before a change of possession, is the previous spot."

Thus, it would be assumed that the first penalty is marked off from the point where the play began, in this case, the 26-yard line. Therefore, we, as the game statistician, believed that the penalty being marked off was for 15-yards for face-masking, and that no other penalty was marked off. Officials do throw flags and later withdraw them.

However, in talking with an official Monday, we learned that face-masking is considered a dead-ball penalty, and, according to the NCAA Rulebook, is marked off from the spot of the foul regardless of where it occurs. If behind the line of scrimmage it does not return to the previous spot, as the Statisticians' Manual says.

The officials — erroneously — marked off six yards for the face-masking, which brought it back to the original line of scrimmage — and then added the half-the-distance penalty for unsportsmanlike conduct.

The fact that the first penalty brought it back to the original spot added to the confusion. We went by the book and the book was wrong, leading us to a false conclusion.

The manual, by the way, has grown from about an eight or 10 page booklet when we first saw one 20-odd years ago, to one of nearly 40 pages now, covering all sorts of situations which might arise. Those situations have been added as they have arisen and been reported to the NCAA.

Time for another report and revision.

Sooners Lose Ground In AP Poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Despite a 65-0 rout of Tulsa, the Oklahoma Sooners lost ground in today's Associated Press college football poll, although they remained No. 1 for the fifth week in a row.

The Sooners received 44 of 60 first-place votes and 1,181 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Twelve first-place ballots and 1,136 points went to Nebraska, which has been No. 2 every week this season. The Cornhuskers defeated Arizona State 35-28.

Last week, Oklahoma led Nebraska 53-7 in first-place votes and 1,193-1,129 in points.

Miami of Florida became the first team in three weeks other than Oklahoma and Nebraska to get a vote for No. 1. The Hurricanes received the other four first-place ballots and 1,088 points in climbing from fifth place to third with a 51-7 drubbing of Arkansas that knocked the Razorbacks, No. 10 last week, out of the Top Twenty.

Miami moved ahead of Auburn and Louisiana State, last week's No. 3 and 4 teams, which played tie games and slipped three places in the rankings to sixth and seventh, respectively.

Florida State jumped from sixth to fourth with 965 points by defeating Michigan State 31-3. The Seminoles entertain Miami on Saturday.

"It's too early to really pay much attention to the rankings," Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson said. "I'll know more about what kind of team we have after Saturday."

Notre Dame shot from eighth place to fifth with 890 points following a 44-20 triumph over Purdue.

Auburn, which played a 20-20 tie with Tennessee, fell from third to sixth with 859½ points. Ironically, the come-from-behind tie was good enough to push Tennessee from 11th to 10th.

LSU's 13-13 tie with Ohio State dropped the Tigers from fourth place to seventh with 821½ points. Clemson moved up from ninth to eighth with 810 points following a 33-12 victory over Georgia Tech.

Ohio State skidded from seventh to ninth with 775½ points and Tennessee rounded out the Top Ten with 636½ points.

The Second Ten consists of UCLA, Michigan, Arizona State, Penn State,

Texas A&M, Washington, Alabama, Iowa, Florida and Georgia. Alabama and Iowa finished tied for 17th.

Last week it was Tennessee, Arizona State, UCLA, Michigan, Penn State, Texas A&M, Alabama, Washington, Iowa and Georgia.

Florida, which raised its record to 3-1 by defeating Mississippi State 38-3, made the Top Twenty for the first time since the preseason poll. The Gators replaced Arkansas, which had been in the ratings each week this season.

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, record through games of Sept. 26, total points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 and last week's ranking:

Warren Captures Football Contest

Garland E. Warren of Rt. 2, Box 280B, Robersonville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Warren correctly picked the winners in 27 of the 32 games listed in last Tuesday's contest pages.

His victory, however, came on the basis of his point total guess. His guess of 75 was closest to the actual total of 72 scored in Houston's 38-34 win over Sam Houston State.

Second place went to Chip O'Rear of Rt. 3, Box 74, Greenville. He also correctly picked 27 games correctly, but was further off in his point total guess with 83.

The two tie games, Ohio State and Louisiana State, and Auburn and Tennessee, were counted wrong if a team was picked since rules all "Tie" to be picked.

The next contest in the weekly series appears in today's Daily Reflector.

Washington Girls Remain Unbeaten

CAMP LEJEUNE — Washington's girls' cross country team took first place in a four-way meet held at Lejeune High School Monday. Washington's boys finished third among five teams in their race.

Washington's girls finished the day with 25 points, while the hosting Lady Devil Pups had 50, New Bern had 81 and White Oak was fourth with 154.

Washington's Deanna Davis took top individual honors, winning in 20:58. Teammate Marshal Wells was second with a time of 21:15, while Denise Wehernberg took fourth in 22:40.

Other Washington recorders included Missy Purgason, 8th in 24:02; Stephanie Pittman, 10th in 24:53; Jennifer Smith, 11th in 25:12; Ashley Jones, 15th in 25:43; Anne Green, 20th in 26:49; Christie Moler, 21st in 26:51; Dawn Wehernberg, 26th in 28:19 and Michelle Hylton, 30th in 29:07.

In the boys meet, New Bern finished first with 37 points while Lejeune had second with 65, Washington, third with 76, Jacksonville, 79 and White Oak, 100.

Washington's Jeremy Hill led the Pam Pack with a fifth place finish in 18:10. Gene Wozny took sixth in 18:17 while Kary Hindlsey was eighth in 18:20.

The girls are now 10-0 on the year while the boys are 6-5. The Pam Pack returns on action on Thursday at Eastern Wayne.

State Now Looking Toward Title

RALEIGH (AP) — How quickly a mood can change. After losing the first three games of the season and then beating Maryland, some football players at North Carolina State are talking about the Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

"All we have to do is win the rest of our games and we can win the conference," said Preston Poag, who started his first collegiate game Saturday and led the Wolfpack to the 42-14 victory.

The red-shirt freshman quarterback completed 15 of 21 passes for 116 yards, throwing for one touchdown and running for another.

Sheridan said he decided to give Poag the starting opportunity over junior Shane Montgomery because of Maryland's five-man defensive front.

"Primarily we changed because of Maryland's alignment," Sheridan said. "Preston executes the option better and we felt like we needed to run the option more against Maryland. Of course, there is no way to anticipate such immediate success, but I'm proud of the way Preston performed."

Sheridan said the victory Saturday has loosened things up around Finley Stadium.

"We played with a recklessness we have not played with all along," Sheridan said Monday at his weekly press conference. "We let some of those emotions out and let them out in a reckless way. That is what you always aim for."

"There's just a more lighthearted atmosphere overall," Sheridan said. "No player or coach is in a completely depressed state of mind anymore. A win makes everybody feel better."

Poag, who is currently listed as the top quarterback against Georgia Tech, led the Wolfpack to 28 first quarter points and 492 yards of total offense.

As the Wolfpack, now 1-3 and 1-1 in the ACC, prepares for Georgia Tech, Sheridan says the team doesn't need to be reminded of last season, when the Yellow Jackets handed the Wolfpack its first loss of the season.

And Sheridan says he hasn't mentioned the 59-21 loss.

"I don't have to," Sheridan said. "They all remember it."

Earnhardt Closer To Championship

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt moved one step closer to the NASCAR Winston Cup championship by finishing second to Darrell Waltrip in the Goody's 500.

Earnhardt, who is looking for his second straight and third overall Winston Cup title, moved out to a 568 point lead over second-place Bill Elliott with his good showing in Sunday's race. Earnhardt has 3,961 points and Elliott has 3,393.

By finishing 30th or better in each of the remaining five races this season, Earnhardt would clinch the points title. He could wrap up the title with victories in the next two races.

The battle for positions behind Earnhardt remained close, though, after Sunday's race. Terry Labonte is third with 3,266 points, followed by Waltrip with 3,207; Ricky Rudd with 3,168; Neil Bonnett with 3,167; Rusty Wallace with 3,148; Richard Petty with 3,070; Kyle Petty with 3,004; and Ken Schrader with 2,915.

Earnhardt leads the circuit in money-winnings with $1,274,495. Elliott is second in winnings with $1,029,680. Labonte is a distant third with $540,390.

No Progress In The Talks

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Upshaw continues to zig-zag the nation to buck up the players. The owners meet in New York. And the NFL strike stays stalemated, almost sure now to reach the ultimate gamble for both sides — next weekend's slate of games among replacement players.

Upshaw, who went from Washington to Los Angeles to meet with West Coast players Sunday, was in Cleveland and Chicago on Monday, and was due in Atlanta and Newark today. In Cleveland, he suggested resuming negotiations under the glare of live television, a move he later seemed to back off and one management said violated labor regulations.

The executive committee of the NFL Management Council scheduled a meeting today in New York.

Meanwhile, Commissioner Pete Rozelle says he hopes for a quick settlement of the strike to reduce the potential long-term damage to the league. But, in his first full-scale interview since the strike began last Tuesday, Rozelle told the Dallas Morning News today that to predict when the walkout would end would be a guess.

But despite all the activity, both sides remained adamant in their position on the key issue — free agency.

And while Dick Berthelsen, the union's executive counsel, suggested that talks might resume Thursday, the owners seemed in no hurry.

Management Council spokesman John Jones said Monday that for negotiations to resume, the union needs to "substantially reconsider its proposal." Citing statements made Friday by Jack Donlan, management's chief negotiator, he added:

"I think Jack made the point that meeting for meeting's sake is pointless. Whenever the union has reconsidered its proposal, we can sit down again."

Donlan, meanwhile, suggested that the games to be played this weekend by free agents and castoffs might create the first pressure point of the strike. Management hopes the games will tempt strikers to return to camp; the union hopes that public apathy or scorn will turn off advertisers and cost the league substantial television revenue.

"I think that if we play on Sunday and we're successful, that does create additional pressure on the players," Donlan said. "By the same token, if we're unsuccessful, we'll probably have a little egg on our face because we tried to play."

"But where are the players? The players are still out and the owners are still not going to give up free agency if the games on Sunday don't get off the ground. A week will go by, or two or three, and they still don't have paychecks."

Upshaw's had said televising the hearings would bolster the union claim that it's the one who's working toward a solution.

"We have nothing to hide by putting them on television," Upshaw said in Cleveland. "We think the public should see that we are making movement at the table and they could really see what the owners think and do at the table."

Later in Chicago, Upshaw said that when serious talks resume and the union presents its new offer, "We will do so in a closed meeting room and not before the media."

Jones said such a meeting would be defined as an unfair labor practice by the National Labor Relations Board. Each side has already filed complaints against the other with the NLRB.

The lack of progress seemed to ensure that games will go on this weekend with what the union calls "scab teams," and will, the NFL insists, count in the regular-season standings.

CBS has said it will televise its regular games Sunday; ABC said it will broadcast next Monday night's game between the San Francisco 49ers and the Giants; and NBC is still undecided.

Four more veterans said they would play this weekend — wide receiver Walter Murray and defensive back Jim Perryman of the Colts, center Stan Eisenhooth of Seattle, and linebacker Reggie Williams, who said he will play for the Cincinnati Bengals against San Diego on Sunday.

"I hope I'll be playing with the guys who are on this field today," he said as the striking Bengals worked out at a high school. "But if I'm not, then I'll play with whatever players are wearing the Bengals uniform."

Upshaw said the union is solid.

"We are prepared as a union to stay out as long as it takes," Upshaw said in Chicago. "Our agenda is to march side by side and step by step."

In Foxboro, Mass., 23 members of the Patriots met with union officials, among them executive board member Dan Marino of Miami, and reaffirmed their support for the strike. However, more than half the players didn't attend, and two who have been critical of the union, guard Ron Wooten and cornerback Raymond Clayborn, left quickly without answering questions.

"We realize that there are a lot of rumors floating around," tight end Greg Baty said. "I think we're more united after the meeting. Having Dan Marino there really helps."

Rozelle told the Morning News he is communicating with negotiators for both sides, but he is not yet prepared to sit down at the bargaining table.

"Maybe if something gets close, I can be helpful," he said by telephone from his New York office. "But I don't want to project myself as a potential hero. It would upset the players and the owners and it wouldn't be true."

"I will continue to monitor the situation and stay as close as I can. And when I can, I will help them move," he said.

Rozelle's role thus far has been limited to getting the two sides together.

He said he persuaded Upshaw during a four-hour meeting in Washington to attend an owners' meeting in Chicago on Sept. 10.

Playing Under Dome Helps

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Steve Lombardozi found a way to help the Minnesota Twins clinch the division title on the road ... by playing under the Metrodome wherever he goes.

Lombardozi, batting under .240 for the season, had four runs batted in, including the go-ahead run with a single in the eighth inning, as the Twins clinched the American League West with a 5-3 victory Monday night over the Texas Rangers.

Taped inside Lombardozi's hat during the game at Arlington Stadium was a picture of the Metrodome, where the Twins finished 56-25 this season.

"I feel a little more comfortable when I'm playing under the Dome," said Lombardozi, whose three-run homer in the fourth wiped out a 3-0 Texas lead.

Seattle's 5-1 victory over Kansas City would have given the Twins the title had they not prevailed over the Rangers.

"We were hoping Kansas City would come back and win because we wanted to do this ourselves," Lombardozi said. "It's especially good to win one on the road like this."

Minnesota's road record is 29-47, worst ever for a division-winning team.

In other AL games, it was New York 9, Boston 7; Baltimore 3, Detroit 0, and Milwaukee 6, Toronto 4.

Twins reliever Juan Berenguer, 8-1, was the winner with 1 2-3 innings of pitching. Jeff Reardon, who picked up his 31st save by pitching the last inning, said being in the game at the end "meant a lot to me."

"With me being the stopper, that was my dream the last two months," he said.

With the score tied 3-3, Kent Hrbek started the eighth inning with a single and moved to second on a groundout. Randy Bush singled, but was thrown out trying to stretch the hit into a double, with Hrbek stopping at third.

Rangers starter Jose Guzman, 14-13, was lifted for Jeff Ruzell, who walked Tom Brunansky before Lombardozi, who had only one hit in his last 15 at-bats before the game, singled home Hrbek, with Brunansky taking third. Reliever Mitch Williams then balked Brunansky home forec insurance run.

"I was in a rut for quite a while now," Lombardozi said. "But it was great to get a couple hits and win a game this big. It's a dream come true, a real fantasy."

Twins Manager Tom Kelly said he had a premonition about Lombardozi.

"I had a feel about Lombardozi all day," he said. "I just knew he was going to do something tonight. I even told a couple of people that."

"Then he comes through for us on a night like this. His last time up I had a pinch-hitter ready, but I decided to stick with my hunch."

Texas scored its three runs in the first inning with the help of Minnesota starter Joe Niekro's wildness. Niekro walked one and had two wild pitches, Larry Parrish had a sacrifice fly and Pete Incaviglia singled in a run.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 4

Toronto stayed 2½ games ahead of Detroit despite the loss to Milwaukee, which held the Blue Jays to five hits.

Blue Jays starter Mike Flanagan, 6-8, gave up homers to Rob Deer and Paul Molitor before Dale Sveum gave the Brewers a 5-1 lead with a bases-loaded double, keying a four-run fifth inning.

Bill Wegman, 11-11, allowed four hits and two runs in 6 1-3 innings before giving way to Paul Mirabella, who allowed one hit in two innings. Mark Clear got the last two outs for his sixth save despite his throwing error that allowed two runs to score.

Deer struck out twice, giving him 185 strikeouts for the season, equalling Incaviglia's AL record.

Orioles 3, Tigers 0

Detroit lost a chance to close ground on Toronto as Baltimore rookie John Habyan pitched a five-hitter for 8 1-3 innings.

Jack Morris, 18-11, gave up eight hits in eight innings and lost his third straight start. Morris, who is 6-7 since the All-Star break, struck out 10, but he walked five and threw his 23rd wild pitch, in the sixth inning, breaking the major-league record set last year by Bobby Witt of Texas.

Habyan, 6-6, took a three-hit shutout into the ninth, but he was relieved by Tom Niedenfuer when Kirk Gibson and Alan Trammell singled with one out. Niedenfuer got the last two outs for his 12th save.

The Orioles scored two runs in the third on Pete Stanicek's RBI single, his stolen base and a run-scoring single by Fred Lynn.

Mariners 5, Royals 1

Seattle won its fourth straight as Lee Guetterman and Jerry Reed combined for a six-hitter and Phil Bradley drove in two runs.

Guetterman, 10-4, allowed four hits in six innings before Reed pitched the last three for his sixth save.

The Mariners took a 2-0 lead in the second off Kansas City starter Mark Gubicza, 12-18, on an RBI single by Donell Nixon and a sacrifice fly by John Moses.

After giving up two singles with two outs in the second, Guetterman retired the next 11 batters. Then Kevin Seitzer, whose first-inning single made him the 13th rookie to get 200 hits in a season, tripled in the sixth and scored when George Brett grounded out.

Bradley singled home a run in the seventh and added an RBI double in the ninth.

Yankees 9, Red Sox 7

New York scored six runs in the ninth inning to complete a rally from a 7-0 deficit against Boston.

Mike Easler's homer off Calvin Schiraldi, the fourth Red Sox reliever in the ninth, broke a 7-7 tie forged when pinch-hitter Jerry Royster had a two-run single off loser Joe Sambito, 2-6. Don Mattingly had a sacrifice fly and Dave Winfield a run-scoring double earlier in the ninth for the Yankees.

Bill Fulton, 1-0, allowed one hit over the last two innings for his first major-league victory.

The Red Sox led 7-0 after four innings. Boston scored five runs in the first on a two-run double by Mike Greenwell and a three-run triple by Jody Reed.

Sam Horn hit a 440-foot homer for the Red Sox in the fourth.

The Twins capped their locker room celebration by dumping a bucket of water on Kelly, a la the Super Bowl champion New York Giants dumping Gatorade on Coach Bill Parcells after victories last season.

"I've played a lot of years, and Tom Kelly is the most personable manager I've ever met," said Joe Niekro, the 42-year-old knuckleballer who held Texas to three runs in 6 1-3 innings. "He's still young (at 37, the youngest manager in the majors) and he's still learning. He makes some unusual moves and, technically, he might not be the smartest manager in baseball. But as far as keeping things on an even keel, he's the best I've ever been around."

Relief Pitching, Home Run Led To Giants' 5-4 Victory

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

The San Francisco Giants got both long relief and the long ball from Don Robinson.

The combination made short work of the San Diego Padres, leading the Giants to a 5-4 victory Monday night and their first National League West championship in 16 years.

"I was looking for a breaking ball and I got it," said Robinson, who hit the game-winning homer in the eighth inning on top of giving the Giants five strong innings of relief pitching.

Robinson's homer off San Diego reliever Lance McCullers gave the Giants an insurmountable lead over the second-place Cincinnati Reds, who earlier beat the Atlanta Braves 6-5.

"This is the most excited I've ever been," Giants Manager Roger Craig said. "This is just the first step. You can't win the World Series until you win the division title."

In other NL action, it was New York 1, Philadelphia 0, and Houston 11, Los Angeles 5.

Robinson, 11-7, led off the eighth inning with his homer off McCullers, 8-10, to provide the game-winning hit for the Giants, who last won a division title in 1971. The 1971 Giants also clinched in San Diego by beating the Padres on the last day of the season.

The Giants also got pinch-hit homers from Jeff Leonard and Chili Davis, the 100th career homer for each.

San Francisco was in third place starting play Aug. 7, five games behind the Reds. Since then, the Giants have gone 33-15.

The Giants are only the fourth club to finish first in a full season two years after losing 100 or more games.

San Francisco lost 100 games for the first time in the franchise's history in 1985. The Giants finished in third place last year at 83-79 in Craig's first full season as manager.

San Diego tied the game for a third time in the seventh inning on Benito Santiago's RBI triple off Robinson, who came on in the fifth for starter Dave Dravecky.

Santiago earlier had extended his rookie record consecutive game-hit

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Panel Chief Ties Casey To Shift Of Iranian Funds

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House panel investigating the Iran-Contra affair says he believes late CIA director William J. Casey was "a primary actor" in the diversion of Iran arms sale money to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said Monday he had come to that conclusion gradually since former White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North testified this summer that the diversion was largely Casey's idea, even though investigators have no other direct evidence of Casey's involvement.

"Yes, I believe he was aware of the diversion," Hamilton said, adding that Casey had deceived him about the scheme in numerous conversations while Hamilton was chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

He pointed to North's words in describing a "self-sustaining, off-the-shelf" covert action capability, "words that were not characteristic of a combat infantryman, and seemed to me more the vocabulary of a New York corporate lawyer," as Casey was. "You can hear Casey talking there."

"Bill Casey probably knew about the diversion far before he indicated that he did know" to investigators, and was "a primary actor in the diversion," Hamilton said.

Hamilton's Senate counterpart, Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, said he would not be surprised if Casey were in on the diversion, but said that question will not be of primary importance in the committees' final report, due out in late October.

"We'll never know, because he's no longer with us," Inouye added. Casey died in May of a brain tumor.

The issue of Casey's knowledge has been revived with publication of a book by Washington Post assistant managing editor Bob Woodward, in which Woodward contends Casey admitted knowledge of the diversion in a brief hospital interview before his death last spring. Casey's widow, Sophia, denies that such an interview could have taken place.

The House panel met for less than an hour on Monday for an initial review of the 1,000-page draft, and its senior Republican, Rep. Dick Cheney of Wyoming, said afterward that GOP members already are at work on a separate section reflecting their dissenting views.

He did not specify areas of disagreement, but those areas are believed to include the applicability of the Boland amendment, Congress' proscription against Contra aid from the period October 1984 to October 1986; and whether Attorney General Edwin Meese III tried to get the facts out, or to cover them up, during his investigation of the affair last November.

The Senate committee was meeting today to hear the first comments from its members on the draft narrative.

Summing up, Hamilton said the 41 days of hearings, more than 500 witnesses and 300,000 pages of documents reviewed by investigators lead to several general conclusions: That there was a lack of accountability in the administration; an overemphasis on covert action as a tool of foreign policy; an obsession with secrecy; a misuse of intelligence, and a contempt for Congress.

But both Hamilton and Inouye said they expect there to be few recommendations in the report for changes in the law, other than perhaps a tightening of congressional oversight of intelligence activities and a strengthening of weapons export law.

"Solutions lie much more in proper attitudes than they do in new laws," Hamilton said.

Hamilton had harsh words for President Reagan, who he said, while ignorant of many of the improper activities of his subordinates, was ultimately responsible for them.

"The president of the United States should have known about these activities," Hamilton said. "After all, the president is the official who is responsible. It is he who sets the climate within his administration."

Progress Reported In Reviving Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and Canadian officials are reporting progress in reviving stalled talks on a "free trade" pact between the two nations, even though an 8½-hour high-level meeting failed to produce an agreement to resume negotiations.

"We've made a lot of progress over a lot of ground. But we have to evaluate the progress we've made and we'll make our recommendations tomorrow," Canada's trade minister, Patricia Carney, told reporters on Monday evening.

"We have reviewed all the options," Ms. Carney said after she and Canadian Finance Minister Michael Wilson spent most of the day meeting with Treasury Secretary James A. Baker and U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter.

The two Canadian officials said the next step was up to Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and the Canadian Cabinet. They will be briefed on the latest U.S. proposals later today, the officials said.

Mulroney, who proposed the free-trade agreement in 1985, has staked much of his political future on the outcome of the talks.

With two-way trade last year of $130 billion, the United States and Canada are the world's largest trading partners.

The proposed trade agreement would remove most remaining trade barriers between the two countries. But negotiations on the pact collapsed last Wednesday when the Canadians walked out, claiming an impasse on the key issue of how trade disputes would be settled in the future.

Congress has set an deadline of next Monday for the agreement to be submitted for approval.

Bush Backs Legal Status For Solidarity

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Vice President George Bush, pressed repeatedly to say whether he favors legalization of the outlawed Solidarity trade union, said today, "if the vote was put to me, the answer would be yes."

Bush's comment, at a news conference on the final day of his four-day trip to Poland, marked the first time since he arrived in Warsaw that he gave a direct answer to the question.

Several times earlier in his trip, including twice in his 30-minute session with Polish and American reporters, the vice president avoided giving a direct answer.

"We have made very clear before we got here our interest in free trade unionism, no question about that," he said in response to an earlier question at the news conference.

Asked again whether he would address the question of Solidarity specifically, he said, "I just addressed it. I've been talking about it since I've been here quite a bit."

Asked a third time, he said, "Yes, if the vote was put to me, the answer would be yes. Thanks for putting it so succinctly."

Bush also said he believed his trip to Poland, in which he met with Polish government and church leaders as well as Solidarity figures, had contributed to better relations between the two countries.

But he indicated that strong differences of opinion emerged in his two sessions with Poland's ruler, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski.

"I will spare you the details," Bush said. "The differences were aired

B-1B Pilot Reported Hitting Flock Of Birds Before Crash

By NANCY BURKHART
Associated Press Writer

LA JUNTA, Colo. (AP) — Three crewmen parachuted to safety but three others were killed when an Air Force B-1B, the nation's newest strategic bomber, crashed and burned after birds were sucked into the engines, authorities said.

The unarmed, $230 million bomber was flying at about 500 feet on a low-level practice bombing run Monday when the pilot reported striking a flock of birds, Air Force and Federal Aviation Administration officials said.

The pilot immediately began climbing and reached an altitude of roughly 15,500 feet, said Bob Buckhorn, an FAA spokesman in Washington, D.C. The pilot then radioed air-traffic controllers that two right engines had caught fire because of "bird ingestion," Buckhorn said.

"We're going down," the pilot radioed, according to Laurie King, spokeswoman at Dyess Air Force Base, where the plane was based.

The four-engine bomber then crashed, spraying 50 acres of flat, eastern Colorado rangeland just south of La Junta with shards of metal, most of them no bigger than a few inches in diameter.

"It was just a heck of an explosion," said Greg Ricken, who witnessed the falling plane from his dairy ranch 20 miles away. "It sounded like a sonic boom. It looked kind of like an atomic bomb."

The crash was the first involving a production model of the B-1B, the nation's newest long-range bomber.

The survivors were being treated for minor injuries at the U.S. Air Force Academy hospital in Colorado Springs, and were in good condition, Air Force Master Sgt. Al Dostal said late Monday.

"The other three crew members ... are all dead," he said.

The Air Force said the cause of the crash would not be officially listed until an investigation was completed. But officials expressed no doubts that birds could disable a low-flying aircraft.

The Air Force says birds caused about $18 million in damage to its aircraft in 1986, including the loss of an F-4E and an F-16. The Air Force said there were 2,765 reported incidents of bird strikes last year, mostly during daylight hours at altitudes below 3,000 feet.

"If you get a large enough bird, or many of them, into the turbines, it can cause problems," said a spokesman for Rockwell International, the plane's manufacturer, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The spokesman at Rockwell's North American Aerospace Operations factory in El Segundo, Calif., said birds "can be ingested into commercial airline engines, too."

Rockwell has a contract to build 100 B-1Bs for the Air Force and has delivered more than 60. The more than $20 billion contract to replace aging B-52 bombers has been controversial because of concerns that their technology will soon be outdated.

The plane that crashed at 9:34 a.m. Monday had taken off a little more than 1½ hours earlier from Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, Texas, where it was attached to the 96th Bombardment Wing.

Ricken said he watched the plane spout flames from its right rear side for 45 seconds before it crashed over some hills on the horizon.

Appeals Court Says Schools Have Right To Post Assignments

BOSTON (AP) — A U.S. appeals court has limited a judge's control of Boston's schools in the 13-year-old desegregation case that led to forced busing, tentatively returning the assignment of students to school officials.

City officials hailed the ruling, but a plaintiff's attorney said he plans to ask the federal judge to continue his control over the student placements.

"It appears that the defendants have demonstrated that they have met their constitutional obligation to desegregate the student bodies of Boston's public schools," the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Monday.

"We therefore find it difficult to see any basis for the perpetuation of an injunction requiring adherence to a particular formula for student assignments."

The court said U.S. District Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. should hold a hearing to determine whether, in fact, the schools are desegregated.

If he finds they are, his system for assigning students will no longer be in effect.

If Garrity finds they remain segregated, he may issue a new order, the court said.

The court ruled on appeals by the Boston Teachers Union and the School Committee. The committee had appealed Garrity's decision to keep "standby" jurisdiction over the assignment of students and to keep intact the quota system.

"I think it's probably the most important decision that has come down (in the school case) in the past 10 years," said School Committee President John Nucci. "It's very very obvious that the Court of Appeals feels that our mission is accomplished."

Schools Superintendent Laval Wilson said the order could lead to a school assignment plan next year that would give parents a choice in which schools their children attend.

Thomas I. Atkins, an attorney for the plaintiffs, said he will ask Garrity to continue his involvement in student assignments.

"We will demonstrate that while we agree there has been substantial progress, there has not been sufficient progress," he said.

"To the extent people are popping champagne corks thinking this is a mandate to return to ... neighborhood schools, they're probably prematurely celebrating."

The teachers' union appealed a minority hiring order that has been in effect since the mid-1970s but has not been met. The appeals court sided with Garrity, leaving in place his order and standby jurisdiction over it.

The judge ordered that no less than 25 percent of the city's teachers and school staff be black and that no less than 10 percent be members of other minority groups.

Garrity took control of the Boston public schools in 1974 after finding the committee had violated black students' rights by assigning them to predominantly black schools.

One of Garrity's orders established the quota system designed to achieve racial balance, which led to busing of students and a spate of violence. Another required "perpetual adherence" to racial formulas in assigning students to schools.

Garrity returned control of the schools to the committee on Sept. 3, 1985, although his final orders left him jurisdiction in areas including student assignment and minority hiring.

In 1985, the state Board of Education said that in the 1984 school year only three of the 14 high schools were out of compliance with Garrity's order. However, none were out of compliance by more than two percentage points; the problem the schools encountered was too few white students.

The board found that of the 26 middle schools, 11 had enrollments out of compliance, three of them because of too few black students.

Johnny Carson Marking 25th Anniversary As Bio Appears

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson's 25th anniversary as host of NBC's "Tonight Show" will be marked with the usual prime-time special — and publication of an unauthorized biography.

Carson, along with sidekick Ed McMahon and band leader Doc Severinsen, will appear on a 90-minute retrospective Thursday, the anniversary date.
The book, "Carson: The Unauthorized Biography," by Paul Corkery and published by Randt & Co., is a look not only at Carson's time on the show but his entire life and career, as well as his four marriages.

Corkery, a former reporter for the Los Angeles Herald Examiner and People magazine, said he first became interested in Carson after seeing him in the rarefied and wealthy social whirl of Bel Air.

"I began to get curious as to why a man who was so funny and irreverent and in touch with Middle America on television was also at home in this social atmosphere," he said.

Corkery said he had "astounding luck" getting interviews with Carson's first three wives. "Wife No. 3, Joanna, had never given an interview before on their life together," he said in a telephone interview from New York. "His first wife, Jody, had not been interviewed in 25 years. It took us six months to find her. His second wife, Joanne, is more accessible. The first and third wives gave some great insight into the man."

Publicity-shy Carson was not interviewed. The 256-page book is the first biography of Carson, although several other books are rumored to be in preparation.

Much is made of the fact that it is an unauthorized biography. However, there's little in the book that is not already public knowledge. It appears to have been written largely from previously published material.

Corkery's book offers little insight into Carson or the phenomenon of his appeal and staying power. It does deal with his failed marriages and a few other legal problems he's had, but the overall tone of the book is laudatory.

Corkery notes Carson's emergence as political commentator, but skips any critical appraisal of his place in television or the American culture.

From the Kennedys to Nixon to Reagan, through all the traumatic upheavals, Carson has been there with a quip.

In an interview for his 20th anniversary, Carson said, "I think 'The Tonight Show' is really a kind of chronology of what the hell has happened in this country. It's topical. It's every day. It has to do with comedy. It has to do with what's happening politically and socially in this country."

He declined to be interviewed for his silver anniversary. Requests for interviews started coming in last spring, but Carson said he did not want to do a few and have to turn down all the rest. His publicist, Jim Mahoney, said he even turned down cover stories for virtually every major magazine.

Still, even when Carson has given interviews, he rarely reveals much about himself, Corkery points out.

In reality, Carson has probably been more revealing on "The Tonight Show." That is where he feels at home, that is where he is in control. His likes, his dislikes, his piques, have all been displayed. He enjoys giving young comics a break. Yet, when Joan Rivers quit as permanent substitute host to start her own show on the Fox Broadcasting Co. he was extremely unhappy. He said he was annoyed because she did not tell him before her public announcement.

"The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers" premiered in late-night a year ago, and like every other Carson competitor in the past 25 years, it bit the dust. Merv Griffin, Dick Cavett, Alan Thicke, Joey Bishop and others all took on Carson with the same result.

A generation has grown up since Carson took over "The Tonight Show" on Oct. 1, 1962. The country has changed. And Carson, of course, has changed. He has gained enormous confidence and developed an instinct for the right comment. And when a joke doesn't go over, he is still able to milk laughs by his reaction or comeback line.

Leopard Nips Juliet Prowse On Neck During Rehearsal

By MICHAEL CONNELLY
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Dancer and actress Juliet Prowse was bitten on the neck by a leopard Monday while rehearsing for an upcoming "Circus of the Stars" television show, but she suffered only a minor injury before a trainer quickly punched the 80-pound animal and pushed it away.

Prowse, 51, was driven by the producer of the "Uncaged Leopards" act to a hospital after the attack and received five stitches to close two puncture wounds, one of which was "very close" to her carotid artery, said hospital spokesman David Hughes.

With a bandage around her neck, Prowse was released from the hospital and returned to the rehearsal site at California State University, Northridge. She petted the five leopards involved in the act, including Sheila, the 5-year-old that bit her, and continued with the rehearsal of portions of the show not involving the animals.

"I'm fine but very lucky," she said. "I don't think Sheila was playing. She actually bit me. She sank her teeth right into me."

Phil Braverman, producer of the animal acts for each of the 12 annual "Circus of the Stars" shows, said the attack was the first like it on the show. "We have never had a real honest-to-God bite like this," he said. "There is no reason for it. There is no way of telling why an animal does what it does."

Monday was the start of the fourth week of rehearsal for the show, which will be taped in early October for an early December broadcast on CBS, Braverman said.

Prowse was bitten shortly after leading the five leopards out of their pens and placing them on individual pedestals where they were held by leashes.

"I said good morning to Sheila and she licked my hand," Prowse said. "I turned my back on her to move to the next cat and she grabbed me from behind."

Prowse and Braverman said the leopards' trainer, Jilda Cristiani, who was standing within a few feet of Prowse, quickly moved to Prowse's side, hit the leopard on the nose and pulled open her jaws.

"She got that cat off of me in a matter of seconds," Prowse said.

The entertainer said later Monday that she would continue rehearsing with Sheila and the other leopards Tuesday morning. When the act is taped in a Hollywood studio next month, it will be her first appearance on the show which each year places entertainers in unusual circus acts.

"This whole thing is kind of funny," Prowse said, "because they had asked me to be on the show before to do something on the trapeze or on roller skates, but I always said no because I could get hurt. But when they had this animal act I said 'yes' because I love working with animals."

CAROL AND CARRIE SHOW — Carol Burnett and her actress daughter, Carrie Hamilton, have begun filming in Toronto on their first made-for-TV movie together. CBS-TV has scheduled "Hostage," the tale of a lonely widow kidnapped by a teen-age fugitive, for release later in the year. (AP Laserphoto)

CBS Axes 'Morning Program'

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News is getting another chance to launch a morning show against "Today" and "Good Morning America."

CBS announced Monday that "The Morning Program" is no more, effective Nov. 30. Co-hosts Rolland Smith and Mariette Hartley and producer Bob Shanks will not be involved in the new broadcast.

The return of the time period is a victory for the news division, which had tried in vain for years to make ratings inroads against NBC's "Today" and ABC's "Good Morning America."

Monday afternoon, CBS News President Howard Stringer sent out a division-wide memo saying: "This is more a time for planning and hard work than celebration. We have a lot to do in a few weeks, and it will take the resources of the entire news division to help get us ready for this new effort."

"Today" is a news division show. "GMA" is an entertainment division production, though its format is similar to "Today's."

"The Morning Program," also an entertainment show, complete with a studio audience and stand-up comics, premiered Jan. 12, replacing the "CBS Morning News" in the time period from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. EDT. The "CBS Morning News" continued with hard news in the 6-7:30 a.m. EDT time period.

"The Morning Program" was an attempt to draw new viewers to morning television rather than compete directly for "Today" or "GMA" viewers, but it had even lower ratings than its predecessor.

Miss Hartley will return to California in December to star in a made-for-television movie for CBS.

Stars Join AIDS Benefit

CHICAGO (AP) — Peter Allen, Colleen Dewhurst and Angela Lansbury led a cast of celebrities in a $1 million benefit performance for AIDS victims.

More than 3,000 people turned out to see the stars and show their concern Sunday.

Also featured during the two-hour sell-out performance were Oprah Winfrey, Jerry Herman, Chita Rivera, Leslie Uggams and five Chicago choirs.

The benefit was dedicated to Fritz Holt, a Broadway producer who helped organize it before he died of acquired immune deficiency syndrome last summer.

"In the past year, I have lost five people close to my life from that same illness," Ms. Lansbury told the crowd. "It has and will touch every man, woman and child throughout the country."

The event was sponsored by Marshall Field's department stores to raise money for the AIDS Foundation of Chicago and the American Foundation of AIDS Research.

SNL Member

NEW YORK (AP) — Comic Kevin Nealon joins the rest of the regulars as a full-fledged cast member on "Saturday Night Live" when it begins its 13th season Oct. 17.

The show, thrashed by critics for several seasons, made a comeback last season with the return of original producer Lorne Michaels and a mostly rookie cast. The same cast is returning for the first time in almost a decade.

Regal Rats' Nests
 Not even Dolly Parton's wigs can compare with the ones in use in the 1700s. British women then sometimes wore wigs four feet high. These elaborate hair pieces were decorated with birds, model ships, fruit or flowers. But because they were also matted with lard to keep them from falling apart, the wigs often attracted mice and insects. Rat-resistant caps made of gilt wire were common accessories. After 1795, a costly hair-powder tax helped end the popularity of wigs.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Try to use a creative talent to improve your vocations activities. Take better care of your health this evening.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Steer clear of an associate who daydreams too much and is never realistic. Don't permit a co-worker to talk you into a trip.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Before you commit yourself, find out how much time and money an amusement with a friend will require. Be practical today.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Focus your attention on advancing some personal matters. Don't go off on any tangents which could be risky, as well as expensive.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Sit down with an expert and get some financial advice. Someone will suggest a trip which is only self-serving, so forget it.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Postpone that meeting with business associates, and lend assistance to a friend who is in dire need of help this morning.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will need to have a comfortable home in which to grow up, and will have just that early in life. But changes will come up later on, so provide your progeny with an education which will forge self-reliance. In this way your child will never be lacking for good shelter, food and the better things in life. Teach him or her cooperation.

Some extra chances are hard to spot. However, we would expect all our readers to find the winning line on this hand at the table.

If South found his partner's one club opening bid hard to believe, the three-spade raise was a dream come true. He could just envisage an opening bid that did not contain either the ace or king of diamonds, so he gave his partner room to cue-bid before launching into Blackwood. When North showed both missing aces, South went all the way.

West made his natural opening lead of the king of diamonds, and the dummy was a little disappointing. It seemed that the fate of the hand hinged on a club finesse, not good enough odds to venture a grand slam. But there was an extra chance available that made the venture a rather more palatable proposition. If either defender held the queen of hearts guarded no more than twice, the jack could be established and the suit would provide two discards.

After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer came to hand with the king of trumps and cashed the king of hearts. A trump to the queen drew the last of the enemy's teeth and provided the entry for a heart ruff. Declarer crossed back to the table with a diamond ruff and cashed the ace of hearts, discarding a club from hand.

When the woman in red appeared on this trick, the club finesse was no longer needed. Declarer sluffed his last club on the jack of hearts and claimed his slam.

Last WWII Marine Vet Leaving Active Duty

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Marine Corps' last active-duty combat veteran from World War II is retiring after a career that included two bloody South Pacific engagements and a North Vietnamese rocket attack.

"The Marines have been my life," Chief Warrant Officer Charles B. Russell said Monday in a telephone interview from Camp Pendleton, where he is stationed.

"I liked everything I did, practically. Now I've reached that magic age of 62 and, without an act of Congress, why, you've got to go home," Russell said.

Russell, who has worked in ordnance dispersal, safekeeping and recovery since re-enlisting in the Marine Corps in 1954, officially retires Friday, ending a 35-year career. He will be presented with a meritorious service medal during ceremonies at the base 40 miles north of here.

"When he retires, the Marine Corps will no longer have an active duty Marine with World War II combat service experience," said base spokesman Cpl. Paul Hermann.

A native of Ottumwa, Iowa, Russell was drafted in December 1943 and reported to San Diego for boot camp. He was trained as an amphibious vehicle driver and sent to the South Pacific, where he was involved in landing Marines during the invasions of Peleliu, near the Solomon Islands, and Okinawa. "It was very heavily reinforced by the Japanese. In fact, it was one of the most vicious battles fought in the South Pacific area," Russell said of Peleliu, where there were 7,919 U.S. casualties, including nearly 1,500 killed.

At Okinawa, there were 48,000 American casualties, 12,500 of whom died.

"I was very fortunate that with all the action I was tied up in (during WWII), I was never hurt," said Russell, who also ferried supplies to the South Pacific beaches and transported casualties to hospital ships.

Russell went back to his hometown in Iowa and started his own business when he was discharged in 1946. He re-enlisted 8½ years later after a meat-packing plant strike hurt Ottumwa's economy. Russell said he overextended himself by loaning money to friends left jobless by the labor dispute.

"I went broke. I was bankrupt. Meantime, the Marine Corps had contacted me about coming back because they had a place for me," Russell said.

Russell, who spent most of his career at Camp Pendleton, was sent to Vietnam in 1969, where his tour of duty was cut short by a North Vietnamese rocket attack.

"I had a little bad luck in Vietnam," he said. "I was there the last part of '69 and the first part of '70. I was the officer in charge of ammunition supply at Da Nang. It was a rocket attack. It put me in the hospital for 90 days."

Russell said he finds it hard to believe so many years have passed.

"It seems like only yesterday I was doing all those things, but there's a lot of difference between being 18 or 19 years old and being 62," he said. "It's been a good life. I think the Marine Corps has been very fair to me."

Russell said he will continue living in Fallbrook in northern San Diego County after he retires. He plans to look up old friends in his hometown and see more of his wife, Karol, and their two children.

"I haven't been back to Ottumwa in 10 years," he said. "Really, I don't have anything planned, just see some friends and neighbors, do some traveling, you know, just to say, 'Hi.'"

Former White House Doctor Says Reagan Never 'Faded'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's former physician is challenging Bob Woodward's portrayal of a wounded president who "faded mentally and physically" in the weeks following the 1981 assassination attempt.

Daniel Ruge, in a telephone interview from his Denver, Colo., home, said Monday that he believed Reagan's recovery was "superb."

In his new book about the CIA, Woodward says Reagan was able to feign a speedy recovery for the cameras, but actually was disoriented and slow to recover.

"I never saw anything like that," said Ruge, who retired in 1985 from his post as physician to the president. "It's certainly news to me and I was there most of the time. I think his recovery was superb."

In "VEIL: The Secret Wars of the CIA, 1981-1987," Woodward says that the morning after the president returned from the hospital, he "limped ... with the hesitant steps of an old man. ... Those who observed were frightened."

The president used an inhaler to help him breathe, Woodward says. He "could concentrate for only a few minutes at a time, then he faded mentally and physically, his wounded lung dependent on the inhaler."

Woodward, assistant managing editor of The Washington Post, says in his book that Reagan's senior aides "were intent on protecting this terrible secret and their own uncertainty, at least until the prognosis was clearer. ... These men sensed that more than the president had been wounded."

Rugge was wounded in the March 30 assassination attempt by John Hinckley Jr. The president left the hospital two weeks after undergoing surgery to remove a bullet that had lodged an inch from his heart.

Rugge said he was not aware of any attempt on the part of White House officials to cover up Reagan's condition, or to embellish his recovery. He pointed to Reagan's ability to joke as evidence of his good spirits.

"All these wonderful one-liners that came out that first morning ... weren't enough to run the country but they were certainly a sign of some intelligence and sense of humor," the physician said.

"I was there and I thought it was absolutely remarkable," Rugge said. "It's true, he was tired, ... but my gosh, he was marvelous."

Rugge said he lived at George Washington University Hospital for the two weeks the president was there. He also spent two days at the White House after the president's return, he said.

The physician said he would help Reagan walk down the hall in the White House as part of his post-operative treatment and that Reagan used an inhaler "once or twice a day ... to keep the air passages clear."

"It was part of the treatment. It's no great deal. It might not have even been necessary, but after all, he got shot in the lung," the doctor said.

Eastern Jetliner Rocked By Turbulence, 41 Hurt

NEW YORK (AP) — Passengers arrived here early today dazed after a turbulence-rocked Eastern Airlines flight from Puerto Rico that sent people flying out of their seats, injured 41 and forced a landing in Bermuda.

"We had just finished eating," Nelson Gonzales, 21, of the Bronx recalled as he arrived at Kennedy International Airport. The plane "just dropped and it just kept on dropping. People were screaming, going hysterical. A lot of little kids were flying all over the place."

About 10 passengers were wearing neck braces when they arrived here about 3:15 a.m. One passenger disembarked in a wheelchair and some had blood on their shirts.

The passengers were put on a second plane that was diverted to Bermuda so the L-1011 that hit the turbulence could be cleaned and inspected.

The original flight, carrying 129 passengers and 10 crew members, took off from San Juan on Monday afternoon bound for New York when it encountered turbulence at 33,000 feet, about 180 miles west-southwest of Bermuda, said Robin Matell, an Eastern spokesman in Miami.

"It was very scary," said Randy Schwartzman, 24, of Queens. "We hit a bump and bounced. Before we knew it, everybody hit their heads."

He said he clung to his fiancée, as neither was wearing seatbelts and they both bounced out of their seats and hit a wall. Neither was seriously injured.

Kathleen Bergen, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration's regional office in New York, said seat belt warning lights were on.

But as for the turbulence itself, "there was no warning," passenger Kevin Stokes of Queens said. "I was on the floor. I thought the plane was going down."

Passenger Eusevivo Fontanez, 54, of Queens, said: "The plane was a mess. Dishes all over, people on the floor, people were screaming, they were praying. It was a mess."

Applause broke out, even from those injured, when the plane finally landed in Hamilton, Bermuda, about 6:15 p.m. EDT, according to Alberto Bartolomei, 47, of Puerto Rico.

Matell said 28 of those injured were checked at the airport dispensary and 13 taken to a hospital. Of those hospitalized, 10 were passengers and three were flight attendants, he said.

"Ten are serious as far as we know, and this is preliminary: two with fractured skulls, two with fractured legs, two with fractured ribs, four with neck injuries," said Ms. Bergen.

One of the three injured attendants suffered broken ribs, she said.

However, Dr. Roger Norwich, the duty physician at King Edward VII Hospital, said 30 to 40 occupants of the plane had been treated there and released.

Norwich said that when he arrived at the plane, he found one of the flight attendants unconscious. Ceiling panels had been dented, apparently when struck by passengers' heads, he said.

He said two people were admitted to the hospital, one with a suspected fractured spine. Most of the injured suffered whiplash or other head and neck injuries, he said.

Eastern Airlines' Bermuda manager, Ervin Fairies, said 26 people were treated at a U.S. Navy dispensary and seven were sent to King Edward VII. He said he had no details on the injuries.

It was not possible to immediately reconcile the conflicting reports.
