Democrats Look On Debacles With Wonder

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Their presidential field thinned and bloodied, Democrats are shaking their heads with wonder and asking whether the series of debacles has already diminished their 1988 chances.

"Usually the Democratic Party commits suicide in presidential elections," said Claiborne Darden, a Southern political pollster based in Atlanta.

"Now we find the individual candidates are quite capable of doing that to themselves. That's quite a delightful change, or entertaining at least," added Darden.

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale reflected the thinking of most Democratic insiders interviewed last week when he said there remains plenty of time for the party to recover. The election is still 13 months away, and it is clear much of the public has not begun to focus on the campaign.

"I think this will be ancient history long before even our convention," Mondale, the 1984 nominee, said. "It's always painful, but I think out of the process we will select a strong candidate."

"These guys are self-immolating," was the way Joseph Napolitan, a Democratic political consultant, put it. "But once a candidate is chosen, I don't think it will have any effect on him."

But the disasters that have wrecked Gary Hart and Joseph Biden, and robbed Michael Dukakis of his political brain trust, may underscore in voters' minds what some see as the party's problem: that its candidates are a largely untested and unfamiliar group, relatively lacking in national stature.

"People cannot help but start to see the beginnings of patterns, the beginnings of some kind of systematic failing and lack on the part of the candidates," said Mark Mellman, a Democratic pollster.

"Thankfully, these things are occurring far enough in advance," he said. "By the time voters go to the Iowa caucuses, New Hampshire primary and Super-Tuesday, I think most of this will be long forgotten.

"It's a disease, but we can be cured," Mellman added.

Delivering a harsher assessment was David Garth, the New York media consultant to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and others. He said Dukakis has been "severely damaged" because of the intensity of press coverage on the problem — and he said the scrutiny is bound to fall on the Republicans at some point.

"I think it has a pretty nasty effect on the entire political scene," said Garth. "I don't think anybody's going to come out of this that's not hurting. Eventually the Republicans are going to be hurting too."

In the South, where the campaign rapidly turns after the New Hampshire primary next Feb. 16, the cumulative effect may hurt Democrats, said Merle Black, a University of North Carolina political scientist and Southern political specialist. In many Southern states, Democrats face the possibility of voters crossing over on March 8 and voting in the GOP primary instead.

"There may be some openings now for others in the race, but for Democrats in general it really is a problem," said Black.

"When it looks like the whole field is getting weak, there may be a feeling that no matter who the Democratic nominee is you may not be able to win this year," he said.

Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, suffered the latest setback when he acknowledged Wednesday that it was his campaign manager John Sasso who provided some news organizations with an "attack video" against Biden, the Delaware senator.

That videotape, showing how Biden borrowed remarks without attribution, was the tug of thread that unraveled his candidacy. It brought further charges of plagiarism and untruthfulness.

Passing dirt on an opponent is hardly an unheard of act. But the Sasso admission came two days after Dukakis had denied any role by his campaign, and Dukakis had positioned himself as a candidate above petty attacks.

Dukakis hesitated in handling the Festival Survives Weather

BETHEL — Several thousand area residents flocked to Bethel Saturday despite cool temperatures and some wet weather for the annual Harvest Festival — an event marking the beginning of autumn.

The festival, which was launched with the 1987 Harvest Queen pageant Friday night, ended with a day of contests, arts and crafts and entertainment.

"I thought the day went very well," Frances Young, co-coordinator of the event, said Saturday. "We were pleased with the crowds and the participation.

"We consider it a family day for people in Bethel and surrounding communities. It's an opportunity for people to get together and enjoy activites."

Some heavy rain in the Bethel area did send some residents home early, according to Ms. Young.

"We had sunshine in the morning, but it started to rain, making some stir quickly," she said. "We had a couple of thousand people though. Most of the crowd stayed around (after the rain).

"But the crowds were excellent in the morning, and I thought it would have continued if it hadn't been raining."

Christy Angle, a junior at North Pitt High School, was selected 1987 Harvest Queen at the pageant Friday night. Kelly Briley and Tina Harris, both juniors at North Pitt, were named first and second runners up in the competition.

Seven contestants were judged in casual wear, evening gowns, talent and question on stage in the competition.

Gore Joins List

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Presidential candidate Sen. Albert Gore Jr. exaggerated his record as an investigative reporter during an interview with an Iowa newspaper, a Memphis newspaper reported Saturday.

The Tennessee Democrat told the Des Moines Register that he "got a bunch of people indicted and sent to jail" while a reporter in the mid-1970s, according to a story in that newspaper Sept. 27.

But the Memphis Commercial Appeal said Saturday that only two people were indicted as a result of Gore's investigative work while a reporter at The Tennessean in Nashville, just one of them was convicted, and he did not serve time.

Gore, when asked by the newspaper about the discrepancies Friday, apologized for the inaccurate statements.

In a telephone interview Saturday from Winston-Salem, N.C., Gore said his misstatement was "a careless statement that was unintentional."

"But it was an honest mistake. The essential fact remains that the story itself resulted in the conviction of a crime for which a jail sentence was meted out."

Gore wrote a series of stories about alleged corruption in the Nashville Metro Council. Councilman Morris Haddox was indicted on bribery charges and acquitted in 1976. Councilman Jack Clariday, also indicted on bribery charges, was found guilty and sentenced Feb. 14, 1975, to three years in prison.

Clariday was given probation and never served time.

Wave Of Iranian Boats Diverted

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Low-flying aircraft scared off Iranian speedboats from a joint Kuwaiti-Saudi Arabian oil port Saturday after scores of the attack vessels darted from bases in the Persian Gulf, salvage executives said.

At the southern end of the gulf the 10th escort of a U.S.-registered Kuwaiti tanker moved safely through the Strait of Hormuz and entered the Gulf of Oman.

American warships escorted the liquefied gas carrier Gas Prince on its journey through the gulf, and the U.S. Central Command in Tampa, Fla., said the trip was uneventful.

One U.S. warship, however, broke away from the convoy and sailed toward the area where the speedboats were sighted, but officials said there was no confrontation.

In another incident, Pentagon spokesman Lt. Col. Keith Schneider in Washington confirmed reports from the gulf that an Iranian warship locked its radar on a U.S. Navy ship in the gulf and after a verbal warning "secured" the radar.

Western diplomatic sources said more than 50 speedboats, of a type usually manned by Revolutionary Guards, left Friday night from Iranian bases in the northern gulf.

They said that by dawn Saturday, some were about 20 miles off Khafji, a facility in a so-called neutral zone controlled by Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. Unidentified warplanes, believed to be Saudi Arabian and Bahraini, scrambled to scare them away, the sources said.

Schneider confirmed the report by shipping radio monitors in the region about the two U.S. and Iranian warships. The monitors said the U.S. ship was heard delivering a "final warning" to the Iranian vessel. The monitors, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the warning was delivered after the Iranian vessel was told "your gunpower is all secured." It was not clear what that meant.

They said bad reception made it difficult for them to make out other details of the conversation.

They also could not tell whether the incident occurred in the 550-mile expanse of the gulf that U.S. Navy warships patrol.

Law Forces Cut In Highway Funds

RALEIGH — Urban highway projects worth more than $50 million, including $7.2 million designated for Greenville road improvements, have been shelved by the state Department of Transportation, state officials say.

DOT officials, already receiving complaints from cities about placing the 15 projects in limbo, said their action Friday had been forced by a new law that changes the traditional balance betwen state and city road projects. Because it limits the amount of money a city can contribute to a state project, the law is likely to result in less state roadwork inside corporate limits.

Fair Opens 6-Day Run On Monday

By CHERIE EVANS

For the 68th time, it's getting bigger and better. The Pitt County Fair will light up its midway for the first time this year Monday.

"If the weather's pretty good, we think we're going to have the biggest fair we've ever had," said Elvy Forrest Sr., fair manager. "Things are really looking up."

The Pitt County Fair ranks about eighth in size of the state's 55 fairs, said Louis May, secretary of the fair. "We think we have the fastest growing fair in North Carolina.

"Our goal is to have an attendance of 100,000 people," he said. "We've never had that."

The fair, sponsored by the American Legion Posts of Greenville, Farmville and Ayden, is scheduled through Saturday at the Pitt County Fairgrounds. Numerous activities have been added to the fair this year, Forrest said.

"We're bringing in a mini-circus and it's free of charge," he said. The attraction, Herriott's European Trained Circus, is sponsored by Greenville's Coca Cola Bottling Co.

Property Owners Seek New 'Beat'

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Several property owners have banded together to plan ways of injecting new life into downtown Greenville, a one-time cornerstone of the city's business activities, representatives of the organization say.

"My dream is to see the heart of downtown Greenville beating again," said Peggy Corbitt, who co-chairs the Downtown Greenville Property Owners Association with George Coffman, owner of Coffman's Men's Wear on Evans Mall.

The group assembled at meetings in December 1986 and again in mid-September to discuss revitalization efforts.

"It's primarily a group of property owners that are involved in this central business district area," Coffman said.

"That district area on a map would cover from the (Tar) River to 14th Street or the railroad although there's a core area that certainly would encompass eight to 10 blocks between the university and the courthouse. But as a practical thing, it runs down Dickinson (Avenue) and in that area."

While other non-profit organizations have initiated efforts to improve downtown Greenville, the association is trying to fill a void, Mrs. Corbitt said.

"Evergreen addresses the marketing and development of the area, while the Downtown Greenville Association addresses the promotion of existing businesses," she said. "Our goal is to make studies and create a plan to rejuvenate downtown.

"It will be necessary for the private sector and the city to cooperate to bring about the revitalization of downtown."

The formation of the Downtown Greenville Property Owners Association marks a change in thinking for the landowners, according to Coffman, a downtown property owner for about 30 years.

"I think what happened here is that through the years there was never any effort on the property owners' part to become involved very much in their properties simply because it was all rented and, for the most part, the tenants were responsible for the upkeep of the building," he said.

"There was very little interest on ownerships' part except to collect the check on the monthly rent. There wasn't any need to go any further. For the most part, owners didn't feel the need to go any further.

"Today, this situation is somewhat different. We do have some buildings that aren't occupied and I think that has caused a need to get building and land ownership involved in the future of what's happening."

The future may include a change of complexion for the downtown area, Coffman said.

"You're not going to see downtown Greenville bounce up and down with retailers, and you honestly may never see rents approach the level they were at one time when they had retail activities in the area," he said. "I think you're going to see a little different type of complex down here.

"I don't think you're going to see a resurgence of retail activity in the downtown area because I don't think you can just point your finger at an area and say 'hey, that's going to be retail, because we think it should be retail.' That isn't going to happen.

"However, the central business district area here in Greenville is anchored by two very important institutions — one's the university and the other is the county. With the growth of the county and the city, you can certainly see more development from that standpoint."

The needs of the two entities need to be considered in the revitalization effort, Coffman said.

"To start with, you are going to have things develop that would serve one of those two institutions, either a lawyer's office or some type of planning activity or something like that which would be related to the university or to the county," he said.

"With that and with additional people over a period of time, you might see some smaller shops and retailing come back or some food places or something of that kind. But I think the possibility of some residential (growth) occurring is certainly not out of the realm of possibility."

The property owners have started to realize they need to start catering to service-related businesses, according to Coffman, who said about 35 people attended the September meeting of the association.

"I don't think the immediate direction of this group is necessarily related to pure retail as such," Coffman said. "It is more related to what can be done with that building ... and how can it be utilized in the future to its best advantage."

Meanwhile, Coffman said the entrance of the land owners into the redevelopment cause is a move in the right direction.

"To my knowledge, this is the first time that there has been a concerted effort by actual ownership to do anything with their properties — that's a positive thing," he said. "That's the one element that's different from any other type of activity that's ever been pursued down here.

"We've had redevelopment and other things that were set up to assist downtown to some degree. But today, I think there's a more positive force working than there ever has."

Representatives of other revitalization groups have said they need input from the property owners.

"Sometimes, I have been discouraged by efforts that have been made by certain groups because one of the catch terms always is 'we can't do anything without the ownership of the property,'" Coffman said.

"It's always been a second group not related to the owners. It's the first time I've seen ownership of property involved in any kind of revitalization or rehabilitation activity as it may affect downtown Greenville."

In addition, the city of Greenville would benefit from a resurgence of the downtown area, according to Coffman, who said the association has begun laying groundwork for a possible joint effort to study the area.

"To some degree, the city government has a real responsibility to ensure the continued development of this area, not only from the city appearance standpoint, but from a tax base standpoint," he said. "If they just allow this area to become nothing, they certainly erode their tax base.

"I understand the new city manager has some very special interest in this type of activity because he sees how beneficial it would be to the city's government from the standpoint of tax revenues.

"Though nothing's settled or even at a point of final discussion, I certainly would envision the possibility of some mixture of either the county, the property owners. the city and the Evergreen people developing some type of plan they might work toward."

The research is a necessary stepping stone before any specific efforts can be initiated, according to Coffman, who said the group plans to meet again within the next two or three weeks.

"Before you can get down to a positive marketing of the area, you have to do some kind of study, and what's on the floor right now is the method to approach this," he said.

Coffman also said property owners need to be willing to put some money into their property to make it more attractive to potential businesses.

"There are some properties downtown that won't have much done with them until there is some money spent on them," he said. "One of the objectives of this group would be to help property ownership realize they can't just sit there and do nothing with it and expect it to produce revenue."

Festival

Saturday's festivities included face-painting, string art, cookie decorating, color wheel, bean bag throw, darts, bicycle decorating contestsand a buble gum blowing contest.

Youth entertainment was provided by Jo Jo the Clown and McGruff the Crime Dog. In addition, the festival included a petting zoo, pony rides, hay rides, train rides and a fun-run. Bingo and a dunking booth were among the adult activities.

The day's entertainment also included a demonstration of martial arts, the Steve Myott Show, Craven County Cloggers and a classic car show. A street dance with music by Take Five was also scheduled for late Saturday.

The Powell Brothers Gospel Group had been expected to perform but was forced to cancel when it couldn't set up equipment because of the rain, according to Ms. Young.

Featured in the children's art show were contributions from the North Pitt attendence area, including work from Bethel Elementary, Stokes, Pactolus, Belvoir, Wellcome Middle School and the high school. Entries from preschoolers at Bethel's Tender Loving Care also were featured.

"For most of these cities, it would be a lick that they are in danger of losing these projects that they thought they had secured money for," said Frank Price, DOT's engineer for long-range planning. "I think this is going to result in a closer look at what is legitimate state responsibility and what is legitimate city responsibility."

Included in the list of road projects put on hold were $5 million designated for Evans Street and a $2.2 million package for Arlington Boulevard.

State officials said they weren't giving up on the projects. The money still would be set aside for the projects and a way found to squeeze them back into the nine-year Transportation Improvement Program.

The projects were shelved because of a little-noted section of a new highway law pushed through the Legislature this year. The bill included a provision to limit the amount of money cities could pump into state projects within their boundaries:

But it also included a section with a more strict definition of which state highway projects would be undertaken inside corporate limits.

Other cities affected by the law include Raleigh, Durham, Gastonia, Charlotte, Rocky Mount, Winston-Salem, Hendersonville, Oxford, Monroe, Roanoke Rapids and Asheville.

affair, first saying he wouldn't accept Sasso's resignation. Four hours later, Sasso and political director Paul Tully were gone from the campaign.

Dukakis' stumble followed by a week the departure of Biden, itself a political shock after the disintegration of Hart's frontrunner candidacy amid questions about his relationship with a young Miami model.

Democrats voiced frustration that, in their view, Republicans were not being held accountable in the same way their candidates have been.

"I wish the press would give the same prominence to misrepresentations by the president," Mondale said in a telephone interview. "He's been getting away with murder for six, eight years ... He's outstanding at saying things that don't happen to be true."

Several Democrats voiced the view that there is a limit to how much more the party can endure.

"The Democratic candidate field has reached the stage where the public is waggling it's head, collectively, and I wouldn't want to see any more of that," said former Iowa state chairman Art Davis. "If nothing else happens, this is October and people go on to other subjects. If there's more to come, it starts to rattle pretty deep."

The problems have increased speculation about the Democrats who opted not to enter the race, although there was no evidence any would change their mind and become a candidate at this late date.

and Domino's Pizza and will give two shows nightly beginning Tuesday for about 45 minutes each.

The Commerfords Petting Zoo and Circus Menagarie, a fair attraction two years ago, will be here again this year, Forrest said. "And, we're having cloggers every night this year" except Saturday. The Buck Swamp Kickin' Cloggers will give free peformances on the outdoor stage at the midway entrance. In the same area will be the antique carnival band organ and the Carousel Queen.

There also are new demonstrations in the exhibit building this year, said Bettie Sue Forrest.

"We are sponsoring a pumpkin-carving contest, (and) the children will bring those in and be judged," she said.

There will be a seafood demonstration Monday, while apple and sweet potato ideas will be demonstrated by the North Carolina Department of Agriculture Tuesday.

"Wednesday is 'Senior Citizens' Day," Mrs. Forrest said. There will be a quilting and craft demonstration in addition to the program.

Soapmaking will be demonstrated at the W.C. Eagles Farm Homestead Wednesday and Thursday at 6 p.m., and quilting will be demonstrated Friday in the exhibit hall.

Displays in the exhibit halls will highlight the talents of Pitt County citizens through agriculture, industry, science and education. Eagles Farm also depicts family life of the early 1900s.

On the midway, Amusements of America will provide more than 30 rides. Jack Kitchman's auto show, "Hollywood Stunt World," is a new show on the strip.

Fire-Rescue Personnel Plan Series Of Activities For Prevention Week

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Visits to schools, day care centers and malls by fire-rescue personnel will highlight Fire Prevention Week activities in Greenville beginning Monday.

Capt. Michael Branch, fire prevention coordinator for the city's Fire-Rescue Department, said fire and rescue equipment will be taken to 24 schools and day care centers during the week for fire drills and demonstrations.

He said the department's 85-foot snorkel and rescue equipment will be on display at Greenville Square Shopping Center on Greenville Boulevard from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday and at Carolina East Mall on Memorial Drive from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Friday. And on Thursday and Friday, from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m., Fire-Rescue Department emergency medical technicians will offer blood-pressure checks and distribute fire safety material, Branch said.

In addition, Branch said the department will have a display at The Plaza mall on Greenville Boulevard from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday. The display will feature a fire survival film, mats for youngsters to practice "Stop, Drop and Roll" procedures, and balloons for children.

The department's snorkel and rescue equipment will also be on display at The Plaza Saturday.

He said coloring books, stickers and pins will be distributed in the schools during the week.

Fire Prevention Week, which began in 1922, marks the anniversary of the Chicago fire of 1871 which killed more than 200 people.

Although the week is used to stress fire safety, Branch said fire prevention should be a year-around job, because each hour, on the average, there are 300 fires which destroy $300,000 worth of property, take one life and cause injury to 34 others, nationwide.

Branch said 80 percent of all fires are in houses and a third of all fires are started by children — either accidentally or on purpose.

Saying most fires are the result of carelessness and neglect, Branch suggested that homes and workplaces should be inspected for fire hazards.

Some safety tips:

— Never store gasoline or cleaning fluids in the home, and if they are in a utility building outside, they should be kept in a safety can, never in a plastic jug or bottle.

— Never store clothes, boxes, toys or other items in the top portion of closets. If they are too close to the light, enough heat could be generated to start a closet fire.

— Never pile excess "junk" in an attic or basement. Instead, old papers, magazines and clothing should be thrown out.

— Keep matches out of the reach of children, and never use matches or candles to check inside a dark closet.

— Use ash trays for cigarettes, make sure they are out before leaving them in ash trays, and never go to bed with a cigarette.

— Have a qualified electrician install heavy-duty appliance, and buy only appliances with the Underwriters Laboratories (UL) label on them.

— Don't have electric cords running underneath rugs or strung over nails, and don't use appliances with frayed wires or broken plugs.

— Allow air space around the television and stereo to prevent overheating and always use a metal screen in front of a fireplace.

— Watch a stove constantly while broiling or frying, turn pot handles away from the stove edge so children can't pull them down and you can't accidentally bump them, and never pour water on burning oil or fat — it spreads the flames. Smother a flaming pan with a lid or use a fire extinguisher or baking soda (bicarbonate of soda — not baking powder, which contains flour or starch and could spread the fire).

— In the event of fire, leave the building in a quiet and orderly manner and call the fire department as soon as possible, giving the exact location and if possible the extent of the fire.

According to Branch, who said smoke detectors reduce life loss in house fires by 50 percent, all homes should have smoke detectors in them to warn residents of fires (one on each level of multistory homes and outside sleeping areas.

He said the fire-rescue department will install individually purchased battery-operated smoke detectors for home owners. And he said the department will make free home inspections upon request.

Woman Says Doctor Treated Wrong Foot

So in June 1986, she got outpatient surgery at Wake Medical Center — only it was on her right foot.

Mrs. Lyons, 39, of Pitt County, said in a lawsuit filed Thursday in Wake County Superior Court that she still has pain and decreased motion in both feet. The condition is permanent and will worsen as she becomes older, her complaint said.

Named as defendants were Dr. Thomas E. Castelloe, who performed the operation, Raleigh Orthopaedic Clinic, with which Castelloe is associated, and the Wake County Hospital System. The lawsuit for unspecified damages accuses the three of negligence.

"Current standards of practice indicate that doctors and operating room personnel must identify the correct foot prior to proceeding with any surgery," the complaint said.

Castelloe said Friday the mistake had happened after X-rays on Mrs. Lyons foot were reversed.

"She basically had a bunion, and I was going to operate on a bunion," Castelloe said. "I made an incision on the wrong foot and then found it was not the right foot, and we sewed the foot up."

Castelloe said he did not think that the error had permanently disabled Mrs. Lyons' right foot.

Martin Urges Japanese To Foster Cooperation

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin Saturday urged the cooperation of education, government and the private sector — and of nations — to encourage the development of the fifth generation of computers capable of pattern recognition and artificial intelligence.

As a model for such cooperation, Martin detailed the success of the Research Triangle Park in North Carolina and the North Carolina Board of Science and Technology founded in 1963

"The public-private partnership between academia, government and industry through these and other such organizations has led to the development of new technology, a stronger climate for research and healthier economic growth in the state," Martin said in remarks prepared to be delivered at 9 p.m. EDT Saturday, or 10 a.m. Saturday in Japan.

Martin, who is a doctor of chemistry with a degree from Princeton, addressed a consortium of scientific researchers at Yokohama City University to become the first American governor to deliver a scientific paper in Japan. The address was attended by researchers from that school and scientific management research personnel from major Japanese corporations.

The governor's presentation, titled "Biotechnological Images and Public Policy," was accompanied by similar talks by professors at North Carolina State University and Bowman Gray Medical School.

Martin also suggested that similar cooperative efforts could provide the basis for increased research among nations. Martin proposed that Japanese and American scientists coordinate their efforts in collaborative research ventures, stating that " ... the best of relations will depend upon mutual cultural understanding and collaborative rather than exclusive research efforts."

Martin's presentation was designed to draw attention to North Carolina's technical strengths, especially in biotechnology and microelectronics.

His paper focused on the potential application of biotechnology and biochemistry to the development of fifth generation computers capable of pattern recognition and artificial intelligence.

"The revolution generated by the new biotechnology offers a new horizon for possible solutions of how to achieve a flexible artificial intelligence required for the fifth generation of computers," Martin said. "This biochemical process of pattern recognition may well solve the problem of how to design a computer capable of expressing an expert system closer to that of human intelligence."

Martin's address was part of a two-week North Carolina trade and business development mission to Japan, South Korea and China, which began Thursday. The mission includes business meetings with leading corporations in Japan and Korea, trade talks with Chinese government officials and reverse investment conference in Tokyo and Seoul.

Tar Heels Say N.C. Unlikely Choice For High-Level Waste Repository

ASHEVILLE (AP) — An announcement that the federal government has renewed its search for a high-level radioactive waste repository in North Carolina brought assurances from Rep. Jamie Clarke and the Republican he defeated that the site probably won't be located in the western part of the state.

Clarke said it's "conceivable" that a site that includes parts of Buncombe, Madison and Haywood counties could be selected, "but very unlikely, because our area, I think, is far less suitable than an area like Nevada. And it's certainly highly likely that we will end up with just one site, at least until well into the 21st century."

Former Rep. Bill Hendon, who lost to Clarke in a race highlighted by debate over the waste site said, "The bureaucrats can jump through all the hoops they want to. But I can assure you that will never lead to nuclear waste being stored under the Great Smoky Mountains.

"The reality is people don't need to worry," Hendon said. "Everybody knows it's going out in the desert where nobody lives. It ain't coming to North Carolina, now or ever."

On Friday, the U.S. Energy Department renewed a search for a permanent burial site for high-level nuclear wastes. Thirteen locations in seven states are on the list, including two sites in North Carolina: a 105-square-mile rock formation west of Asheville and a formation centered on Rolesville in Wake County.

In a letter to the governors of 17 states, including North Carolina, Energy Secretary John S. Herrington said the department is resuming the search he suspended indefinitely in May 1986 because Congress has failed to enact legislation that would settle the matter.

The DOE will take 12 to 18 months to review 60,000 public comments it received in response to a draft report that recommended the possible locations for burial of spent fuel rods from nuclear power plants and other highly radioactive waste, Herrington's letter said.

Clarke said legislation he is cosponsoring in the House should resolve the matter by taking it out of the hands of the "highly political" Department of Energy.

But Hendon said the DOE's move is mere bureaucratic manuveuring.

Hendon said Friday the DOE wasn't playing politics, as Clarke charged, when it suspended the Eastern site selection process during the 1986 campaign. He said the resumption of the search is actually just the DOE "going through the motions of shutting the search down."

The question of the repository's location emerged as the primary issue of the campaign after Herrington's announcement earlier that year that the search had been abandoned.

Hendon, a Republican, brought Interior Secretary Donald Hodel to Asheville to back up his assertion that the search was a "dead issue," while Clarke maintained that a law Congress passed in 1982 mandated that a repository be built in the East. Hendon later attributed his defeat to the issue.

"We've never really had any kind of scientific study of the matter," Clarke said.

Mountain Snow

By The Associated Press

Snow was reported Saturday at North Carolina's Grandfather Mountain in Avery County, and at West Jefferson in Ashe County, but no accumulation was reported.

"It's snowing real hard at this time," said Tom Huskins Jr., general manager at Grandfather Mountain, Saturday afternoon. "It's 26 degrees right now."

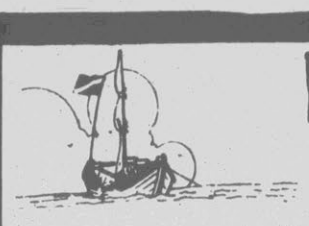

Huskins said wind of up to 95 mph forced the closing of the swinging bridge at Grandfather Mountain.

"We've really had the first blast of winter here today," Huskins said, adding that the ground was too warm for the snow to stick.

Radio station WKSK in West Jefferson also reported flurries on Pond Mountain and other areas near the Virginia and Tennessee lines.

Mike Sabones, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service in Raleigh, said he had received no reports of snow in North Carolina, but that temperatures were low enough for some flurries in the higher elevations.

"It's quite an early blast of cold air for this area," he said.

Thank You, Greenville and Pitt County

FIRST FEDERAL
The best place to bank.

October 1, 1987

Dear Stockholders:

This year marks the 50th Anniversary of First Federal serving the Greenville and Pitt County communities, and we are proud that it marks the second consecutive year of record earnings for your company. Net income was $1,270,082 or $3.43 per share for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1987.

First Federal's strategy is to be "The Community Bank" for Greenville and Pitt County. As the only financial institution, both home based and with all its offices located in Greenville and Pitt County, First Federal has an opportunity to uniquely serve the local market. Products, services and pricing can be designed for the local market and important decisions are made in Greenville by local people. This strategy should enable First Federal to continue to be the leading real estate lender in Pitt County, and maintain a solid position as a leader in retail deposits and services.

During the past year, changes in the market produced opportunities for your company. In October, First Federal introduced an Equityline of Credit program, and by June 30, 1987 over $6.2 million in outstanding equity lines had been made available to our customers. Additionally, First Federal purchased the corner lot at the intersection of Highway 11 and Third Street in Ayden, and plans are now being developed to build a new branch office on that site during the coming year.

Recently, there has been significant publicity concerning the condition of the FSLIC and the soundness of the savings and loan industry across the country. Legislation recently signed by the President has reaffirmed that your deposits are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States.

The past year has been an excellent one for First Federal and for the thrift industry in North Carolina in general. Your management and board of directors believe strongly that First Federal is a sound, profitable and well-positioned financial institution. The 20% increase in your annual dividend, to $ .30 per share, paid on September 15, 1987 confirms this belief. Our emphasis on the local market, and our people, provide the strength and keys for success in the future.

Your directors, management and staff appreciate your support. Please continue to take advantage of all the services your company offers, and recommend First Federal to others. We welcome your questions and suggestions.

Sincerely,

Colleges Avoid Federal Sanctions

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite evidence that desegregation plans have failed at colleges and universities in 10 states, federal officials are refusing to impose sanctions on states that violate civil rights laws, says a House report released Saturday.

The report said internal notes from the Education Department's Office of Civil Rights "describe failures of the states to eliminate the vestiges of illegal discrimination... Further enforcement actions by OCR are clearly required."

The internal notes obtained by investigators for the Government Operations Committee came from a task force assigned to review official reports on court-ordered desegregation plans in the 10 states.

In 1969 and 1970, the federal government found Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia in violation of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act because they had not eliminated traces of racial segregation in their higher education systems.

A federal court in 1973 ordered the government to take enforcement action against the 10 states, leading to desegregation plans for 254 colleges and universities. The plans expired at the end of the 1985 school year.

Among the goals were specific reductions in disparities between black and white college enrollment and hiring. The report said no progress was made on many fronts and in some areas the situation has worsened.

For example, the report said, the enrollment gap between black and white students in Virginia rose from 8.7 percent in 1978 to 20.7 percent in 1985. In Delaware, the attrition rate for black students is greater than for whites at state schools and the difference widened from 1981 to 1985.

More generally, the report said, Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Virginia set goals of having the proportion of black high school graduates equal the proportion of white high school graduates entering two- and four-year colleges. None met the goal and only two — Delaware and South Carolina — made any progress toward it.

In addition, the report said, all 10 states set goals for hiring black faculty at the doctoral level and none met them. Nine set goals for hiring black administrators at a doctoral level and only four met them.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., chairman of the Government Operations subcommittee on human resources, said the Education Department has had this information for over a year, "yet it refuses to enforce the law."

In a statement accompanying the report, he accused the Reagan administration of "setting a precedent that half-hearted and unsuccessful attempts to correct racial discrimination are satisfactory. We must not allow that to happen."

OCR spokesman Gary Curran said the agency would issue final determinations "in the near future.

Nosegear Collapses

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — The nosegear of a Piedmont Airlines F28 twin-engine jet collapsed on landing at Baltimore-Washington International Airport Saturday, airport and airline officials reported.

No injuries were reported.

Airport operations manager Paul Foley said the pilot of flight 962, bound from Greensboro, N.C., to Baltimore-Washington, had an indication that the nosegear was not locked in place when he began his landing approach.

"He made a fly-by, but we couldn't tell from the ground whether it was locked," Foley said.

The landing gear of the jet gradually collapsed as the plane ended its roll down the runway, saod Piedmont spokesman Don McGuire in a telephone interview from Winston-Salem, N.C.

The plane carried a crew of 54 passengers and a crew of four, McGuire said.

"All the passengers were evacuated, and there were no injuries that we know of," McGuire said.

Foley said the plane sustained minimal damage and was towed off the runway.

Arrest Suit

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Two false arrest lawsuits against Watauga County, the sheriff's department, the sheriff and two deputies has been settled out-of-court, an attorney said Friday.

Gary Triggs, an attorney for James Andrew Hicks, said lawsuits filed in Burke County Superior Court and in U.S. District Court in Asheville were voluntarily dismissed because of the settlement. He declined to disclose the terms of the settlement.

Hicks alleged he was falsely arrested on cocaine charges and was jailed between Sept. 12, 1985, and Feb. 28, 1986, when the charges were dropped.

Agreement

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University and the National Science Foundation have signed an agreement to establish an Engineering Research Center for Emerging Cardiovascular Technologies.

The ERC, which will apply biomedical engineering to cardiovascular medicine, is the first of its kind funded by the science foundation, said Theo Pilkington, a professor of biomedical engineering and electrical engineering at Duke.

Pilkington said the NSF will provide up to $9.33 million over the next five years for operation of the center.

Other member institutions of the center include the Univrsity of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, the North Carolina Biotechnology Center and the Research Triangle Institute, with the cooperation of faculty from North Carolina State University.

Movie Changes

DURHAM (AP) — A production company making a baseball movie in Durham will spend about $15,000 to make changes at Durham Athletic Park and an area house, company officials say.

The movie, "Bull Durham," is expected to begin shooting this month at the baseball park and other locations around the state.

Allen Custard, the film's location manager, said the lighting at the ballpark will be improved and fences repainted to make them more photogenic.

Movie Firm

HIGH POINT (AP) — A New York-based company that builds sets for movies and television has opened a branch in High Point to capitalize on the furniture, still photography and burgeoning movie industry here, a company owner says.

Set Control South began setting up shop in a rented warehuse about six weeks go, said Jack Blackman, co-owner with Bruno Robotti.

Blackman and Robotti have worked on sets for Broadway shows, television programs and movies for 25 to 30 years, Blackman said. Their most recent credit is the just-released movie, "Fatal Attraction."

Blood Test

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The driver of a tractor-trailer that crashed and dumped hundreds of boxes of candy bars onto Interstate 77 in Statesville last Sunday had a blood-alcohol level of 0.35, a state medical examiner says.

"That would be fatal in some people," said Thomas Clark, assistant chief medical examiner in Chapel Hill.

Earl Junior Parrish, 45, of Salem, Va., died of injuries to his chest. The truck he was driving ran off the road and hit a pillar on a road overpass.

Judgeships

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has filled two judgeships left vacant last month.

Ralph A. Walker of Greensboro was named as a Superior Court judge in Guilford County. He fills the unexpired term of Edward K. Washington, who resigned Sept. 20.

Walker, 51, is a partner with the law firm of Osteen, Adams, Tilley & Walker in Greensboro.

Leonard White Thagard of Clinton was appointed a District Court judge to fill the unexpired term of James N. Martin, who retired Sept. 30.

Texas Officer Earning Reputation As The State's Only 'Trash Trooper'

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mark Hodgkinson, a burly Bexar County deputy constable, strapped on his 9mm semi-automatic pistol, put on his sunglasses, got into his patrol car and hit the road.

He was ready to tackle some of the area's most wanted criminals — litterbugs.

His reputation as the state's only peace officer specifically assigned to cite litterers is getting around.

"They can see my car coming a mile away and they speed away. That's a deterrent," Hodgkinson said recently as he looked for garbage dumpers along a secluded road.

"If I can catch two people each day and educate them against littering then I feel I have done my job," he said.

Hodgkinson doesn't even mind being called "Litter Ranger," "Trash Trooper," or "Garbage Guard."

Hodgkinson, 23, had always wanted to be a cop with a distinctly marked police car, fancy crime-fighting equipment and an area to call his own.

But, instead of a traditional black and white car with flashing lights, his patrol car is a compact yellow sedan with a baby seat in the back for his child. County officers and constables get vehicle allowances and buy their own. Hodgkinson's car has a turbocharger for chases.

He does have an area all his own, though — the entire 1,248 square miles of Bexar County.

"This is not like being a regular police officer, who has a beat, but I try not to think about it," he said. "I like the job and I'll work twice as hard at it because nothing looks worse than going down the road and seeing all this trash all over the place.

"It's not only unsightly. It's also a health hazard."

Hodgkinson is part of a pilot program established by the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, which says its two-year, $4 million tough-talking campaign to stop highway littering already has paid off.

The department recently released figures that showed visible litter in Texas decreased by 54 percent since 1985 when the "Don't mess with Texas" campaign began. Rock musicians and athletes have encouraged people to stop littering.

Although Hodgkinson is a fully commissioned peace officer, his primary duties for the next 18 months will be to find litterbugs, who last year cost the county more than $300,000 in highway cleanup costs.

He drives more than 200 miles a day looking for people who throw trash along secluded country roads.

Charleston Desegregation Suit Ready For Trial After 7 Years

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — After almost seven years of legal maneuvering and fruitless out-of-court negotiations, a federal desegregation suit against the Charleston County School District finally lumbers into court this week.

U.S. District Judge Sol Blatt Jr. will have to decide if schools in the state's second-largest district are unconstitutionally segregated by race as the Justice Department contends.

"We make a good faith effort to educate the children of this county and a lawsuit of this type is certainly a distraction," said county school board chairman Robert Barber Jr. "It's certainly been my desire to come to some sort of resolution."

But a settlement has proved elusive despite years of out-of-court talks, which have proceeded under a gag order since 1984.

The non-jury case that opens Tuesday may take two months and as many as 70 witnesses may testify.

At issue is a 1967 legislative act creating a countywide school district to oversee eight existing constituent districts. The county board has control over finances while the local districts retain control over student and teacher assignments.

The suit alleges that while about 47,000 students, 53 percent of them black, attended county public schools in 1979, about 10,000 blacks attended schools with more than 95 percent black enrollment in three districts.

Although three magnet schools have helped slightly, there's been little improvement in racial mixing since the suit was filed in 1981 against the county and the state.

According to attendance figures for June, the latest complete figures available, there were 43,175 students in the district, of whom 23,247, or 54 percent, were black.

Those figures show that 9,400 blacks, or 40 percent of the total black enrollment countywide, attended schools that were more than 90 percent black. And 2,534 black students still attend five schools that are entirely black.

Under the consolidation, students are generally not permitted to transfer across constituent district lines, although there is one countywide magnet school for advanced studies.

The consolidation act also said teachers may not transfer across constituent district lines without approval of the constituent boards and the county board.

The Justice Department alleges those provisions have the effect of segregating schools.

The Legal Defense Fund, formerly a branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was later allowed to intervene as a plantiff on behalf of 10 students.

The district and the state contend the schools are desegregated, noting that every white high school and middle school student attends a school that has at least 25 percent black enrollment.

School officials note seven of the local districts worked out desegregation compliance plans with the old Department of Health, Education and Welfare in 1971. The remaining district, the downtown City of Charleston district, was ordered by a federal court in 1969 to rezone all its schools.

"We had seven of the eight districts following compliance agreements with HEW. Then all of a sudden here is one arm of the government saying you're doing just fine and another saying you're villains," said John Graham Altman, a member and former chairman of the countywide board.

School attorneys will argue the countywide district was established as a financial tool to let some of the county's poorer areas benefit from the larger tax base in other constituent districts.

The district position is that the local district lines are based on historical and natural boundaries. Seven of the eight local districts are separated by water.

But the Justice Department contends the legislature went out of its way to remove teacher and student assignments from countywide control and did so for racial reasons.

"We'd like to see it integrated in a fair way. But I can't tell you just what that way might be," said Rufus Dilligard, chairman of the downtown district's board.

Royalty Meets 'Dirty Harry'

By RICH CARTIERE
Associated Press Writer

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Spain's King Juan Carlos I dedicated the Clint Eastwood Youth Program for drug abusers Saturday and met the film star for whom the center is named.

Eastwood, star of such movies as "Dirty Harry" and "Escape from Alcatraz," met the 49-year-old monarch during a visit to Community Hospital Recovery Program and introduced him to the crowd.

Juan Carlos then left to tour nearby Carmel, where Eastwood is mayor and where he took a five-block stroll along the picturesque village's main street, crowded by tourists.

During that walk, a group of about six people shook rattles while Juan Carlos visited the Carmel mission and said they were demonstrating against the alleged mistreatment of Indians during the early Spanish colonization of the state. He did not speak with them or comment about their protest.

Later in the day, Juan Carlos was to return to Monterey to dedicate a statue of Don Gaspar de Portola, the Spanish explorer who founded the city as a military garrison. Queen Sophia, meanwhile, was headed for New York.

On Friday, the king said in a speech at the University of California at Berkeley that the discovery of America and the colonization of California was Spain's "great achievement in history." His visit is the first by a ruling Spanish monarch to California.

At a reception at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor Friday night, Mayor Dianne Feinstein presented the king with a replica of the key to the front door of Mission Dolores, the building that marked Spain's colonization of Northern California in 1776.

Juan Carlos said the city has remained proud of its Spanish heritage and has become "an example of tolerance, co-existence and progress."

The king and queen spent their honeymoon in San Francisco in 1962, 13 years before he ascended to the throne following the death of Spanish strongman Francisco Franco in 1975.

Before his speech, the royal couple toured portions of the famous campus, including the Bancroft Library, where he examined the second largest collection of early Spanish documents in the United States.

Japanese Prince Starts U.S. Tour

By JOHN KING
Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Mass. (AP) — The crown prince and princess of Japan arrived in the United States on Saturday to begin an eight-day visit cut short by the illness of the prince's father, Emperor Hirohito.

Crown Prince Akihito and his wife, Princess Michiko, will visit Washington and New York following their travels around Boston.

At the Old North Bridge in Concord, where part of the first Revolutionary War battle took place, the prince and princess were greeted by a local militia group playing fife and drum music and a crowd of several hundred people.

While in Concord, the couple also visited Louisa May Alcott House, the home of the 19th century author famous for her children's novels.

The princess studied English and American literature in college and wanted to visit the house because "Little Women" is very popular among Japanese schoolchildren, said Makoto Watanabe, deputy director of the North American bureau of Japan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

"The princess knew if she visited Alcott House it would be shown on television back in Japan and she wanted very much for the children there to be able to see what kind of house Alcott lived in," Watanabe said.

On Sunday the prince and princess are scheduled to visit the tiny Massachusetts seacoast town of Fairhaven, where it is believed the first Japanese citizen to come to the United States lived after being rescued in 1841 from a Pacific Island by a Massachusetts whaling ship.

On Monday, Akihito and Michiko will travel to Washington, where they are scheduled to dine with President Reagan and attend a reception hosted by Secretary of State George Shultz.

They will travel to New York on Thursday to visit the Juilliard School and tour a television studio. They will return to Tokyo on Friday.

Akihito, 54, and Michiko, 52, were orginally scheduled to make an 18-day trip including visits to Atlanta, Los Angeles, and Hawaii. The visit was shortened after 86-year-old Hirohito, the world's longest reigning monarch, underwent an intestinal bypass operation on Sept. 22.

ROYALTY ARRIVES — Japan's Crown Prince Akihito, left, waves to the crowd as he and Crown Princess Michiko, right, arrive in Boston Saturday for the start of an eight-day visit to the United States. The couple will tour the Boston area, and then go to New York and Washington, D.C. (AP Laserphoto)

Laity Backs Expanded Women's Role

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Lay Catholics on Saturday told bishops participating in a synod on the role of the laity that the Roman Catholic Church should expand the role of women in church life, a Vatican spokesman said.

The five lay people who addressed more than 200 bishops at the third session of the month-long synod also stressed the importance of their mission as evangelists and called for the active participation of Catholics in political life, said the spokesman, Monsignor Diarmuid Martin.

One speaker also called for greater openess about church affairs, including financial matters, Martin said.

At a later meeting, bishops also touched on the role of the lay person and politics in the church. Jaime Cardinal Sin of the Philippines called attention to the political problems in Asian countries.

"The specific contribution of the Catholic laity in the political problems in Asia will be the promotion of the common good based on gospel principles and exercised through the testimony of life," he was quoted as saying by a Vatican statement.

Pope John Paul II, who was present at both sessions Saturday, urged the synod to examine the role of the laity in the church and society. One hundred countries are represented by the 232 cardinals, bishops and church officials attending the synod.

Sixty lay representatives are participating in some synod sessions but do not take part in decision-making.

The sessions are closed to the public.

Martin said the lay speakers told the bishops about discussions at last May's International Conference on the Laity held at Rocca di Papa, south of Rome.

During his trip to the United States in September, the pope said the role of women should be increased, but reaffirmed the Vatican position against ordination of women into the priesthood.

Teresa Chooi of Malaysia told the bishops that "women's desire to participate more actively in the life of the church does not necessarily include the demand to have access to the ordained ministry," according to a summary of her remarks released by the Vatican.

She said that women sought recognition of their work at all levels of the church and "the elimination of paternalistic and condescending attitudes."

She also called for "accountability in all that affects the financial position and activities of the church at all levels," according to the summary.

Patricia Jones of Liverpool, England, said that church education "must prepare people to play their full part in politics," the summary reported.

It said Jean-Loup Dherse of France, who heads the French-British consortium dealing wiith the construction of an English Channel tunnel, spoke to the bishops about the laity's evangelization role, saying "the vocation of the lay person is holiness and his mission is to Christianize the world."

Monsignor Maxim Hermaniuk, a Ukrainian archbishop living in Canada, spoke to the bishops about the importance of evangelism in politics, especially where actions by governments affect religious life, Martin said.

He reported Hermaniuk said there are totalitarian countries as well as Western countries with laws allowing divorce, abortion and education without religious instruction.

John Paul led an evening vigil and rosary in a packed St. Peter's Basilica called to pray for the success of the synod.

The pontiff asked for the help of God "to fill the minds and hearts of the synod fathers and other participants to be filled with the gifts of the spirit."

Station Testing

LAKE TOXAWAY, N.C. (AP) — Environmental testing has begun for a proposed $3 billion pump storage facility in southwestern Transylvania County, a Duke Power spokeswoman says.

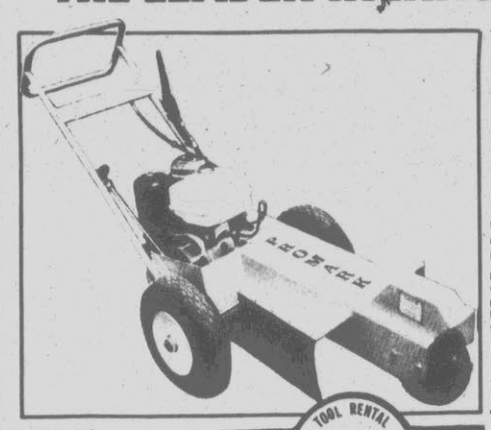

Beatrice Thompson said crews will continue testing an area around Coley Creek for several months to determine if the region's wildlife would be adversely affected by the proposed project.

The project is opposed by the Jocassee Watershed Coalition, a Highlands-based group recently formed to protest industrial use of scenic lands in the watershed of Lake Jocassee. The lake, just south of the North Carolina-South Carolina state line, is already used to generate electricity for Duke Power customers.

The pump-storage facility, if built, would allow the creation of a 352-acre lake between the Horsepasture and Thompson rivers just above the South Carolina border. Water to fill the lake would come from Lake Jocassee.

A similar project on the nearby Bad Creek River is scheduled for completion in the early 1990s.

Damage Totals Rise As California Gets Relief From Scary Aftershocks

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Minor aftershocks continued Saturday while the earth gently adjusted to stresses created by last week's powerful earthquake as estimates of damage mounted to $75 million.

Fears of more strong shocks began to subside and people throughout Los Angeles County went about life as usual, with shopping centers reporting crowd sizes were about normal.

Officials warned residents whose homes had been damaged to beware of scams by unscrupulous building contractors.

Thousands of Latin American immigrants, who for two days and nights camped out in parks because they were accustomed to more damage and death from quakes in their homelands, were returning to their apartments.

"Except for a few families, they're all going back to their homes," said police Sgt. Raul Amscua. "Things are returning to normal."

But not everyone was at ease. In suburban Whittier, near the epicenter of the tremor, the Whittier Community Services Agency offered free counseling "for anything related to the recent disaster."

"We have averaged about 130 people a day for the last two days, and we expect more," said spokesman Blaine Van Ausdeln. "Some people were in shock. Others were having difficulty adjusting to the fact that they had just been through an earthquake."

"Basically," he added, "people are just not as certain of themselves as they were before. It's a normal reaction."

Whittier officials decided Saturday to keep the community's heavily damaged business district closed, with shopkeepers being allowed in only with police escort.

Meanwhile, most residents who had been camping outside their seriously damaged homes since the quake have moved in with friends or relatives or to two relief centers run by the Red Cross, said Dave Temple, a municipal worker volunteering at Whittier's emergency operations center.

Thursday's quake registered 6.1 on the Richter scale — the largest in the region since a 6.4 in the San Fernando Valley in 1971. The shaking, blamed for six deaths, was felt as far away as Las Vegas, 250 miles northeast.

The same day, there were 16 aftershocks between 3 and 4 on the Richter scale, and three above 4 on the scale. The largest aftershock Thursday was 4.4, said Steve Bryant, a seismic analyst at the California Institute of Technology.

There had been more than 100 aftershocks by Saturday afternoon, but most were very small.

Besides the aftershocks, residents near Los Angeles had to deal with sweltering heat Saturday as the mercury hit 108 degrees downtown. It was the hottest temperature recorded at the civic center this year and the hottest Oct. 3 on record. The previous record was 102 set in 1885 and tied in 1958. The hottest downtown temperature on record is 110 degrees on Sept. 1, 1955.

The significance of the lack of more sizable aftershocks was "kind of a toss-up," Bryant said. "It is highly unusual not to have more aftershocks, but then, it has happened before. This is not truly an isolated case."

"Not all earthquakes act the same way. It's not necessarily a sign that nothing is going on. What's happening is the earth is still readjusting to the stress" from the big quake, he said. "Now the area around it has to adjust to the new stress pattern."

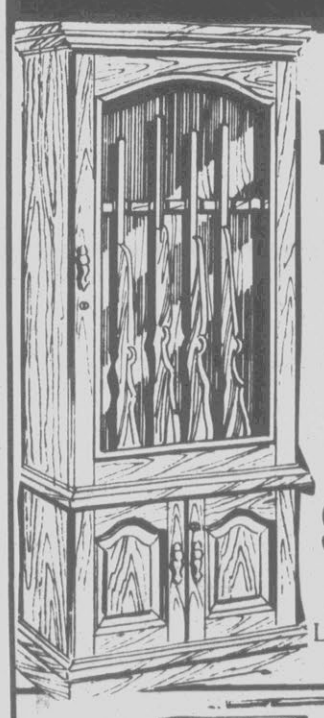

Most of the quake damage occurred in San Gabriel Valley suburbs east of Los Angeles.

Haig Says Book Right On Shooting

HUDSON, N.H. (AP) — President Reagan was gravely ill following the attempt on his life in 1981 and he and the White House misrepresented his condition to the public, former Secretary of State Alexander Haig says.

"If you knew the true story, it would make your hair stand on end," Haig said while touring the Liberty Millwork factory on Friday.

Haig, campaigning in New Hampshire for the Republican presidential nomination, said he agreed with author Bob Woodward's depiction of a White House in chaos and a president who was seriously impaired after being shot in the chest.

In his new book, "Veil: The Secret Wars of the CIA, 1981-1987," Woodward wrote that White House aides soon discovered that the smiling and waving president who left the hospital two weeks after the shooting had been acting for the public.

The day after leaving the hospital, Woodward said, Reagan collapsed into a chair, spoke in a raspy whisper and had to use oxygen to recover. During the following days, the president was able to work or remain attentive only an hour or so a day, Woodward wrote.

Haig agreed that Reagan's condition was much worse than the public knew, and said White House officials wanted to make sure the information was hidden.

"No question. Grave. Very serious," is how he described Reagan's condition.

While disagreeing with some portions of the book, Haig said the segment on the assassination attempt and its aftermath were "incredibily accurate."

Reagan's former doctor denied Woodward's account and said Reagan's recovery was "superb."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger also disputed Woodward's description of Reagan's health.

"I saw the president within, oh I guess, two or three days after ... and he was his same astonishing self," said Weinberger. "I never saw any slight signs of flagging or any of the things that people tell me is in the book."

In 1972, 11 Israeli athletes and five Arab terrorists who had taken them hostage were killed in a shootout with police during the Olympic games in Munich, West Germany.

Sessions Planning To Take Over FBI Control Thursday

WASHINGTON (AP) — William S. Sessions, now scheduled to take formal charge of the FBI later this week, said Saturday he felt fine but "a little grey" as he left a hospital where he had been treated for a bleeding ulcer.

Sessions originally had been scheduled to take the oath as FBI director at a ceremony last Thursday, but the proceedings had to be postponed when he was admitted into George Washington University Medical Center after becoming ill on an airline flight.

"I feel fine — a little grey — but I feel good generally," Sessions told reporters as he left the hospital.

He was accompanied by his wife, Alice, who carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

"Alice brought some yellow roses to go with my grey," he said.

Sessions said his swearing-in ceremony had been rescheduled for 2:30 p.m. next Thursday at the FBI Building.

He praised his doctors and said he intended to follow their advice, which included a special diet and some medication.

But Sessions, who had been a federal judge in Texas, said he will not have to give up Mexican food.

"You know, Mexican food had nothing to do with it," Sessions said of his ulcer attack. "Mexican food is good anytime of the day or night and (the doctor) tells me I can have it anytime I want — and I will."

Sessions was stricken Wednesday night aboard an airliner on the way from Dallas to Washington and was taken by FBI officials from National Airport to the hospital. There, doctors discovered a previously undiagnosed small ulcer in the upper portion of the small intestine.

Sessions had taken aspirin on an empty stomach, became sick and fainted on the flight from Dallas. Doctors said the ulcer flared up when he took the aspirin.

After he takes the oath of office, Sessions is not expected to start in his new job right away because doctors want him to rest before handling a normal workload.

Supreme Court Begins New Term Monday Minus Member

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A shorthanded Supreme Court begins its 1987-88 term Monday, facing new variations of the continuing societal debates over school prayer, abortion, free speech and the death penalty.

President Reaan's nomination of Robert H. Bork to succeed Justice Lewis F. Powell, who retired in June, remains a hostage of the Senate. Meanwhile, the court will start a new term with fewer than nine justices for the first time since 1971.

"It won't paralyze the institution but each of the eight justices will have more work to do as a result," said law professor Eugene Gressman, an expert on Supreme Court rules and procedure. "It could exacerbate an already troublesome caseload."

Gressman added that the missing justice "raises the possibility of 4-4 votes in some significant constitutional cases, a fact that does not please the court or the litigants. The result is less than satisfactory."

When even splits occur the justices issue no opinions, but merely uphold a lower court's ruling. The precedential value is limited because the possibility exists that the same issue will be tackled by nine justices in a later case.

The court has worked one justice short before. For example, it labored with eight members for the whole 1969-70 term before Justice Harry A. Blackmun joined it in June 1970.

In the interim, the Senate rejected two nominations — those of Clement Haynsworth and G. Harrold Carswell — offered by President Nixon to fill the vacancy created by Abe Fortas' resignation in May 1969.

More recently, Powell, who cited concern about his health when retiring, missed much of the 1984-85 term after undergoing surgery for a cancerous prostate. The court, without Powell's participation for several months, held over three cases so they could be decided a year later, and disposed of eight other cases by 4-4 affirmances.

A seven-member court began the 1971-72 term because the Senate had not yet confirmed Nixon's nominees to replace the retired John Harlan and Hugo Black. Justices Powell and William H. Rehnquist did not join the court until January 1972.

Bork's struggle to win confirmation has focused new attention on the Senate's constitutional role at a time when the court's liberal wing is anchored by its two oldest members.

Justice William J. Brennan is 81 and Justice Thurgood Marshall is 79. Marshall recently experienced medical problems but is reported to be in general good health.

Two of the new term's most closely watched cases — involving school prayer and abortion regulation — could result in a sharply divided court if decided on the constitutional issues presented.

In the first, the court is being asked to decide the validity of a New Jersey law providing daily moments of silence for public school students.

Although the law does not mention prayer, lower courts ruled that it violates the constitutionally required separation of church and state and represents a back-door attempt to return organized prayer sessions to public schools.

The justices in 1985 struck down an Alabama law providing daily moments of silence for "meditation or voluntary prayer" in public schools. But the court indicated that a law that did not mention prayer and was not intended to endorse or promote organized prayer would be valid.

The New Jersey case could fizzle because of a procedural problem. The state Legislature initially sought Supreme Court review but after a change in the leadership sought to withdraw its appeal.

The former speaker of the New Jersey General Assembly and former state Senate president pressed the appeal, but their legal standing to do so must be addressed by the justices.

The abortion dispute before the court also could have a procedural flaw.

At issue is the constitutionality of an Illinois law requiring some girls under 18 who seek abortions to wait 24 hours to have the operation after telling their parents or a judge about their decision.

The court may decide that a ruling on the law's validity should await pending rulings by lower courts on other aspects of the same law.

No such procedural hurdle is apparent in an Oklahoma case asking the justices to decide whether the death penalty is a valid punishment for convicted murderers who committed their crimes before they were 18.

Lower courts have ruled that capital punishment for teen-aged killers can be constitutional.

Of the more than 1,900 men and women on death rows nationwide, about 40 of them were condemned for crimes they committed as juveniles. Of the 91 U.S. prison inmates executed since 1977, three were killed for murders committed before they were 18.

FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

—What authority does the government have to bar people from entering the United States because they belong to, or allegedly are affiliated with, Communist governments. A lower court said the Reagan administration may have censored political speech illegally when denying visas to four people invited by American citizens.

—May evangelist Jerry Falwell collect a $200,000 award from Hustler magazine for the "emotional distress" caused by an advertising spoof purportedly quoting him about a sexual encounter with his mother? Lower courts upheld the jury award, and the justices' decision could yield important guidelines on the free-speech protections afforded satire and parody.

—May the District of Columbia bar protest demonstrations within 500 feet of foreign embassies in the nation's capital? Lower courts said the ban does not violate free-speech rights.

—Does a state law making it a crime to knowingly display sexually explicit publications for sale in a way anyone under 18 may peruse them violate freedom of expression? Lower courts struck down such a Virginia law.

—Are federal laws barring "insider trading" applicable to journalists who give friends advance notice about articles they intend to publish that will affect stock prices? The court will review the criminal conviction of former Wall Street Journal columnist R. Foster Winans.

RELIGION

—Must Oregon pay unemployment benefits to two drug and alcohol abuse counselors fired for using peyote, a plant containing a hallucinogenic drug, as part of a Native American Church sacrament? The state's highest court said denial of benefits would violate the ex-counselors' freedom of religion.

EMPLOYMENT BIAS

—May employees who contend they were denied promotions because of illegal racial bias win their case by proving that an employer's policy has a "disparate impact" on minorities or women? A federal appeals court ruled in a Texas case that intentional racial discrimination must be proved in such cases.

—Were white police officers in New York City the victims of unlawful racial discrimination because black and Hispanic officers with lower qualifying-test scores were promoted ahead of them under terms of an affirmative action plan? A lower court ruled that the white officers waited too long to challenge the plan.

CRIMINAL LAW

—Do police officers need court warrants before they can search discarded garbage? California courts ruled that a couple's privacy rights were violated when police sifted through their garbage after it had been taken from their home by a trash company.

EDUCATION

—Did officials of a Hazelwood, Mo., high school violate students' free-speech rights by ordering two pages deleted from an issue of a newspaper published as part of the school's curriculum? A lower court said the officials unlawfully had censored the students.

—May public school officials expel or suspend emotionally handicapped children for attacking students and other disruptive behavior? California school officials were barred from doing so after a lower court ruled that a federal law prohibits expulsion for conduct caused by a student's emotional disorders.

FAMILIES

—Are federal courts empowered to help resolve conflicting child-custody rulings by courts in different states? In the case to be studied, Louisiana courts awarded custody of a child to its mother; California courts awarded custody to the father.

—May a divorced parent be held in contempt for failing to pay child support if not proved financially able to do so? A California court ruled that prosecutors must prove the parent was able to make the child-support payments before he or she can be cited for civil contempt of court.

N.Y. Agency Wants Chinese Workers

NEW YORK (AP) — A plan to bring Chinese peasants to the United States to work on farms has prompted disbelief at two federal agencies, outrage at a union of farm workers and modest support from growers.

The Chinagri Manpower Center Inc. would bring peasants to the United States under revised Labor Department guidelines that allow farmers to use foreign workers when no Americans can be found to fill the jobs.

Cheeon Fung, manager of the center, said he believes that as many as 300,000 jobs, such as peach picking, sugar cane harvesting and irrigating, are available.

"There's no demonstrated need for anything close to that," said Duke Austin, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service and one of the skeptics about Fung's plan.

Fung, who is working with China State Farms Agribusiness Corp., a state agency in Beijing, contends Chinese workers are perfect to fill in for labor shortages.

"These are bona fide farmers," said Fung. "When you think about perfume, you think about France. When you think about farming, about agriculture and farmers, you think about China."

The project, which is scheduled to begin next spring, reminds some of the the 19th century, when "coolies" were imported from southern China to work on railroads, gold mines and ranches in the West and Midwest.

The laborers were paid little and lived in squalor. When the economy slumped in the late 19th century, some were killed and many had their property stolen.

"We don't care to be associated with a very painful chapter of American-overseas Chinese history," said Fung. "We want to make sure nobody's abusing anybody."

Workers would be protected by Labor Department guidelines and paid a minimum hourly wage, ranging from $3.73 in Alabama and South Carolina to $5.19 in California and Utah.

Fung said the center, which is headed by K.K. Soo, the former publisher of a Chinese language newspaper in New York, would get a small percentage of that wage. He expressed the hope that China would let the workers keep most of the rest.

"Chinese peasants make about $500 a year at home. They could make that much here in three weeks," said Fung.

Austin said the INS was taken aback by Fung's plan.

"We don't know what in the world Mr. Soo and Mr. Fung are talking about," said Austin. "We kind of chuckled about it."

Austin said that 24,544 foreigners came to the United States last year under an old version of the program, called H-2A. Jamaica supplied about 11,000, the most from any country.

Tom Bruening, the chief of the division of foreign labor for the U.S. Department of Labor, said that number will probably increase because of a new immigration law which makes it a crime to employ illegal aliens.

As growers seek to comply with the law, they will probably turn to the H-2A program, he said. Under the program if a grower can prove that no Americans will take an offered job, he can employ foreign workers.

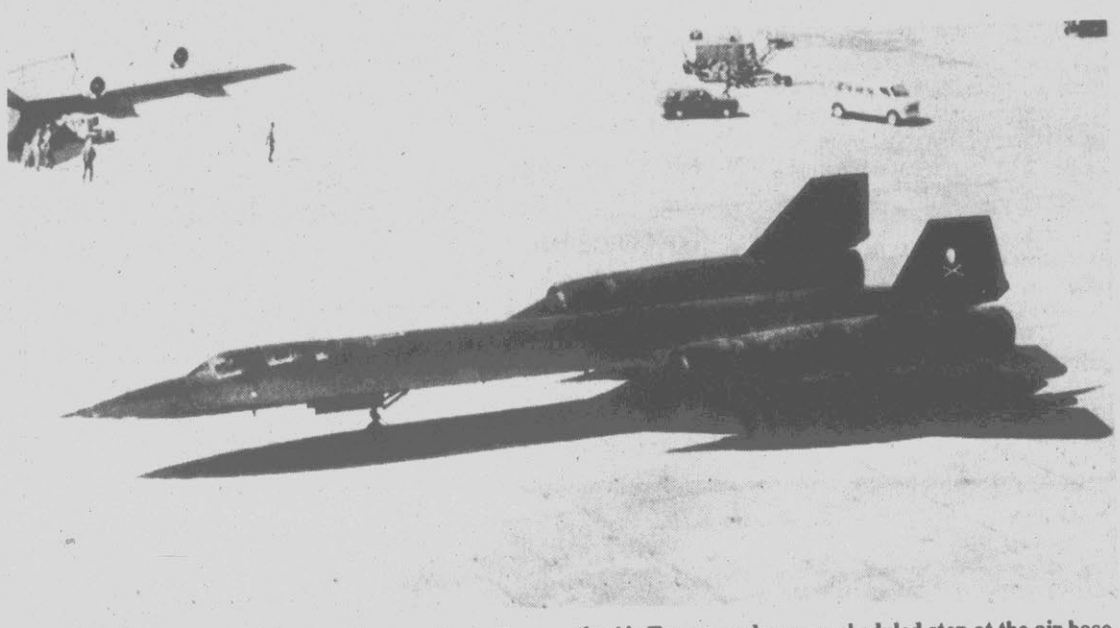

He said Fung's outfit had not contacted the Labor Department and officials there thought "it was strange to want to bring people halfway around the world to do farm work."

Peter Ten Eyck, a major apple grower in upstate New York, said he thought Fung's plan was "a necessary evil."

"Those people, be they Chinese or Jamaican, have a different work ethic. They're more willing and better motivated and they do a better job," he said.

Americans "aren't interested in temporary work because they can get something better," Ten Eyck said.

Mike Henry, a spokesman for the California Farm Bureau Federation, a lobbying group for growers and ranchers, said farmers were wary of the H-2A program because of the paperwork involved.

SPY PLANE — The SR-71 reconnaissance plane sits on the ground at the Naval Air Station in Belle Chasse, La. The plane, possibly the most exotic and secret aircraft in the Air Force, made an unscheduled stop at the air base after it developed engine trouble over the Gulf of Mexico. (AP Laserphoto)

Secret Spy Plane Makes Public Stop

BELLE CHASSE, La. (AP) — One of the Air Force's most exotic and secret airplanes made an unscheduled visit to the New Orleans area when it developed engine trouble over the Gulf of Mexico, officials said.

The SR-71 reconnaissance plane landed at the Naval Air Station in Belle Chasse for repairs Monday and left on Thursday, said Lt. Vickie Owens, spokeswoman for the station.

"It gave us very little warning and when it came in it landed on one engine," she said.

Much information about the SR-71 — including the number in the Air Force — is classified. According to reference material, it flies at 85,000 feet and reaches speeds of more than 2,100 mph.

It is outfitted with sophisticated cameras, infrared sensors and other equipment. The plane flies so high that the crew must wear astronaut suits, and so fast that its skin temperature hits about 1,000 degrees.

Owens said the plane's two-man crew asked for strict security when they landed Monday and the SR-71 was moved into the biggest hangar on the base.

"All of our planes were moved out to make room for the SR-71," she said.

Two C-141 Starlifter cargo planes flew in the next day from the SR-71's home base, Beale Air Force Base in northern California, bringing security and maintainenance workers and a spare engine.

Fire Is Contained At N-Power Plant

PLATTEVILLE, Colo. (AP) — A 15-minute fire in a turbine building at the Fort St. Vrain nuclear power plant Saturday caused no injuries and released no radiation, authorities said.

The fire was contained at 12:15 a.m., said Mark Severts, a spokesman for the Public Service Co. of Colorado, which operates the plant 40 miles north of Denver.

The plant's reactor, which had reopened this week but was not yet producing electricity, was manually shut down and no radiation escaped, Severts said.

The blaze hit a building separated from the reactor building by a steel wall. Oil from a hydraulic system sprayed onto a hot pipe and ignited, officials said.

Engineers were inspecting the plant Saturday to determine the extent of damages, said PSC spokeswoman Su Hawk. "In terms of damage to the plant, it's minimal," she said. "It was on the non-nuclear side and that's the side that is easiest to repair. We will have to replace cables and wiring."

PSC activated the Colorado Radiological Emergency Response Plan at 12:05 a.m. Under the plan, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Colorado governor's office, among others, are notified.

Hawk said PSC did not notify the public because it did not consider the fire an emergency, and Severts said the alert was canceled at 8:15 a.m.

Fort St. Vrain had been shut down since July to replace a helium circulator and remained closed until early this week, Severts said.

"We were about a day or so away from generating electricity," he said.

In June 1984, the plant shut down for a year when its control rod drive failed shortly after startup.

Reagan Makes Radio Bid For Public To Back Bork

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Saturday charged "liberal" opponents of Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork with trying to intimidate judges and to "thwart the desire of the American people" for jurists who will bring criminals to justice.

"Don't let them do it," Reagan told listeners of his weekly radio address, even as members of his own Republican party told him that his nomination of the conservative appeals court judge and legal scholar is gravely imperiled.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the Senate majority whip, disputed Reagan's assertion that Bork's opponents had politicized the nomination.

"It's a highly emotional, highly politicized situation. From both sides," Cranston said in an interview on CNN's "Newsmaker Saturday."

"There were plainly political motives in the president's nomination. It took into account ideology, and we have every right in the Senate and should, take into account ideology, as well as every other factor," Cranston said.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is scheduled to vote Tuesday on the nomination, and the president has said he would be satisfied if the panel sends Bork's name to the Senate floor without any recommendation.

As of Friday, 32 senators had declared they would vote for Bork and 27 had said they would oppose him, according to a count kept by The Associated Press. The rest were unwilling to state a position.

As he has in recent days, Reagan, in his radio address, invoked the framers of the Constitution's article on the federal judiciary, saying, "They knew that, like the Constitution itself, the courts must not be politicized."

"But now liberal special interest groups seek to politicize the court system, to exercise a chilling effect on judges, to intimidate them into making decisions not on the basis of the law or the merits of the case but on the basis of a litmus test or a response to political pressure," the president said.

"These special interests are gravely concerned that Judge Bork's appointment would mean a Supreme Court that practices judicial restraint as our forefathers intended and that's why the nomination of Judge Bork, a distinguished jurist, has become a distorted, unseemly political campaign," he said.

Reagan said Bork "has been subjected to a constant litany of character assassination and intentional misrepresentation."

Speaking from Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains, the president said, "Over the years, both progressive and conservative judges have understood the importance of judicial restraint."

"Judge Bork deserves a careful, highly civil examination of his record," the president said. Instead, he said, his opponents "are determined to thwart the desire of the American people for judges who understand the real role of the judiciary, judges who seek to interpret the law, not make it, judges who will enforce the law and bring criminals to justice, not turn them loose and make our streets unsafe."

"Well, don't let them do it. Tell your senators to resist politicization of our court system. Tell them you support the appointment of Judge Robert Bork."

On Friday, publicly undecided Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said he told Reagan that the nomination was "in deep trouble notwithstanding what my decision might be." DeConcini plans to announce his position on the nomination Monday.

Another Democratic visitor to the White House, Sen. J. James Exon of Nebraska, said the nomination is "in big, big trouble."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., a Bork supporter, told reporters that he thought it was doubtful that Reagan could gain the Senate majority required to put Bork on the Supreme Court.

However, White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker said Bork has not asked the president to withdraw the nomination and indicated in a meeting with Reagan on Thursday that he's prepared to "go the distance."

"Judge Bork, at my request, came in to talk to the president yesterday about that, about the whole situation," Baker said Friday in an interview on the MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour. "And Judge Bork's ready to go the distance. The president is anxious to go the distance. And we're going to go the distance."

Reagan nominated Bork, a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington and a former Yale University law professor and U.S. solicitor general, to succeed Justice Lewis F. Powell, who retired in July.

Senate Sets Sights On Collision Course Over Arms Limits

By HELEN DEWAR
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate has put Congress on a collision course with President Reagan on arms control by voting to compel him to comply with weapons limits in the SALT 2 agreement as part of a defense bill for this fiscal year that also would curb development of his Strategic Defense Initiative.

The $303 billion military-authorization bill was passed on a virtually party-line vote of 56 to 42 after the Democratic-controlled Senate voted, 57 to 41, to stop Reagan from exceeding nuclear-launcher limits prescribed by the unratified 1979 SALT 2 pact with the Soviets.

The bill now goes to a conference with the House, which has approved these and other arms constraints, including a proposed ban on nuclear testing that was rejected by the Senate.

Reagan responded to the Senate action by renewing threats to veto the measure, and Friday's roll calls indicated that Democratic leaders would be unable to muster the two-thirds vote of both houses that is necessary to override a veto.

But senior Senate Democrats warned that Congress will keep sending the arms proposals back to the White House in bills required to fund the Pentagon for fiscal 1988, which started Thursday. "Sooner or later he's going to have to sign a bill that pays for the men and women who defend this country," Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said.

"These issues are not going to fade away with a veto," Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said. Nunn's support of both provisions after a long history of opposing such constraints mirrored the change that has come over the Senate as a whole on arms control.

While the House has repeatedly passed stiff arms constraints, the Senate had refused until this year. The combination of mounting opposition to some of Reagan's arms plans and Democratic control of the Senate produced a challenge of unprecedented proportions to the president's arms policy.

"What we have here is a Democratic Congress on a direct collision course with the president of the United States," Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., said. Byrd put it another way: "Sooner or later there has to be a grappling with reality ... and the sooner the White House understands it the better."

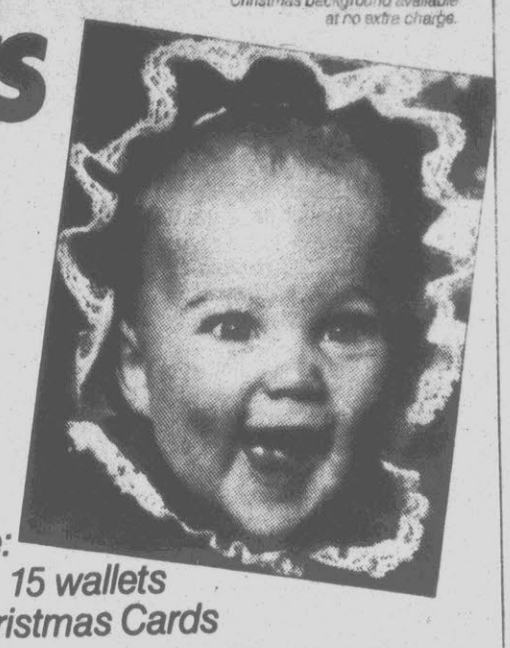

The defense bill passed after Democrats abandoned efforts to include provisions to require congressional approval for long-term continuation of the administration's controversial tanker-escort operation in the Persian Gulf.

The Senate Thursday shut off debate on imposing war-powers curbs on the gulf operation by a vote of 54 to 45, six short of the number necessary for cloture, posing a threat of an indefinite filibuster of the defense bill.

Although separate legislation to impose the war-powers constraints can be brought up next week, it would be vulnerable to filibuster. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., appeared pessimistic about prospects for action and castigated Congress as well as Reagan for failing to invoke the Vietnam-era War Powers Resolution.

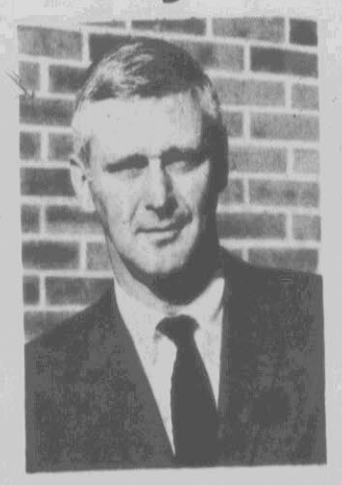

The SALT 2 provision would require the administration to comply with limits for multiple-warhead ballistic missiles and bombers as prescribed by the treaty.

Hawaiian Senators Protest Soviet Missile Testing Near Island State

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet missile testing that landed mock warheads within 600 miles of Hawaii and the apparent aiming of laser beams at U.S. monitoring aircraft are raising a new potential issue for U.S. arms talks, a U.S. lawmaker said Saturday.

Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, said that if reports are verified that one Soviet intercontinental ballistic missile test may have been off-target by as much as 600 miles, "that means if they made another error it could just land right in Hawaii."

Matsunaga joined Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., and a fellow Hawaii Democratic senator, Daniel Inouye, in introducing a resolution Friday to protest such Soviet testing. The testing involved the firing of multiwarhead dummy missiles into the Pacific from deep within the Soviet Union.

No vote was taken on the resolution, which was proposed as an amendment to the annual State Department authorization bill. It says, "The Soviet Union appears to have been practicing with this test a strike on the United States because of the polar trajectories of fire."

Matsunaga said he had no information about a Pentagon report Friday that two U.S. planes flying over the missile splashdown area were "illuminated by an intense light" from a Soviet ship, temporarily disturbing the vision of a co-pilot aboard one aircraft.

But the Hawaiian senator said the missile testing itself should not have occurred, particularly during the arms control negotiations.

"There should be a strong protest, and it (the missile testing) should be made a part of the negotiations. Things such as this through the negotiations should cease," Matsunaga said in a telephone interview.

Inouye, quoted in the Honolulu Advertiser, said he was "horrified" by the report but doubted the firing was a deliberate attempt to provoke the United States.

"It is inconceivable to me they would fire something and put Hawaii in harm's way," Inouye said.

Wallop told the Senate at least one warhead fell within 100 miles of U.S. territory. The Pentagon, however, said the closest was 600 miles from Hawaiian shores.

Pentagon spokeswoman Celia Hoke said Saturday there were no additional details on either the Soviet testing, which took place Tuesday and Wednesday, or the laser incident. Friday's statement did not give the name of personnel aboard an Air Force WC-135 surveillance plane or a Navy P-3 reconaissance aircraft apparently targeted by the laser from the Soviet intelligence ship Chukotka.

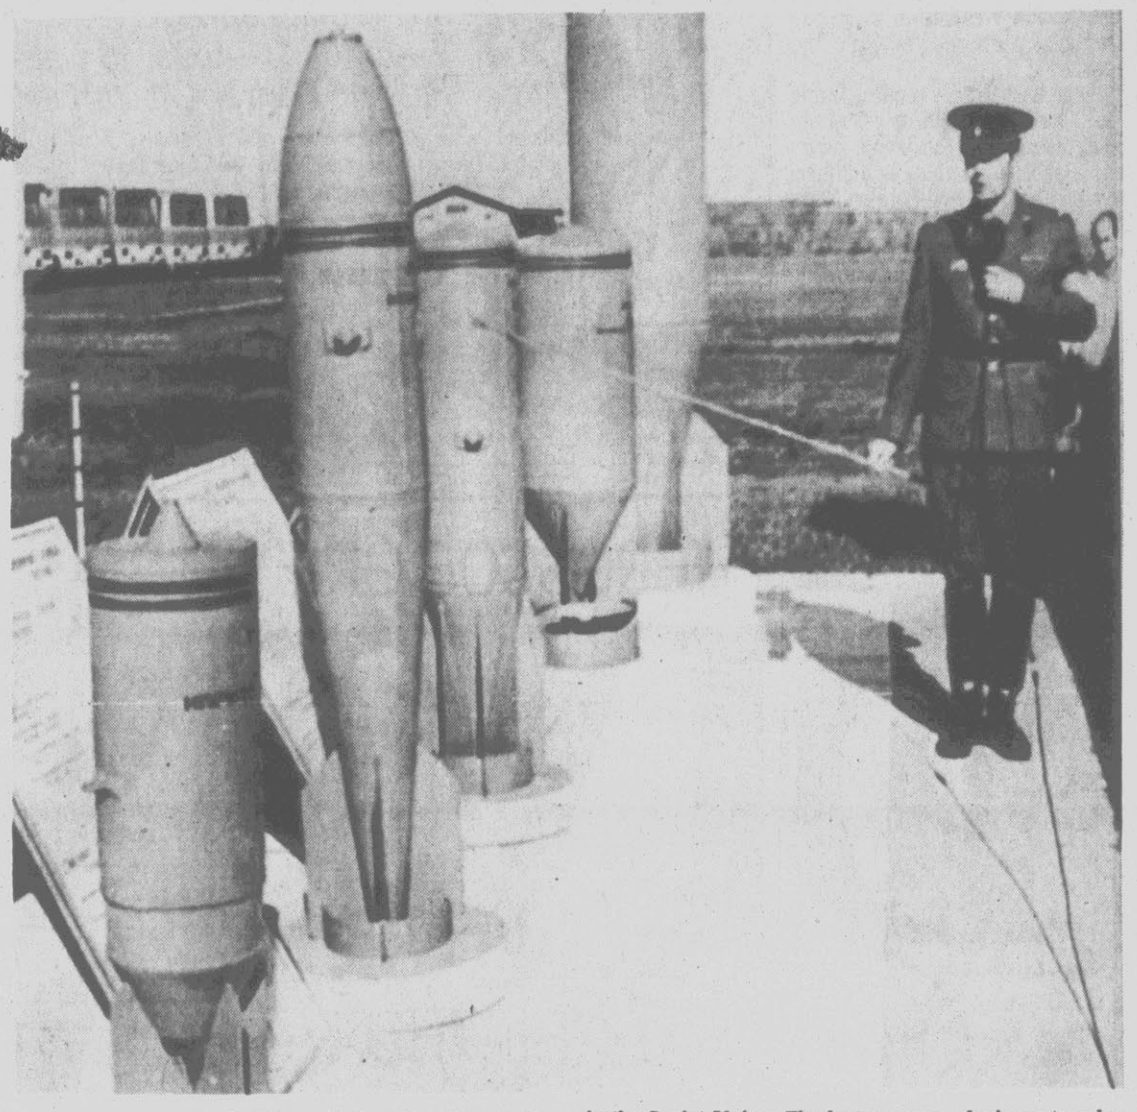

The statement said that although preliminary medical tests on the WC-135 co-pilot's vision has shown no apparent damage, "further details tests may be required to determine if, in fact, no damage to her eyes occurred." It said her vision was disturbed for about 10 minutes.

A naval consultant, quoted Saturday in The New York Times, said it was possible the Soviets were using the laser to track incoming warheads and inadvertently shined it at American planes.

"The guess I would make is that they were trying to track their own warheads," said the consultant, Norman Friedman.

In early September, the Soviets had informed the United States of plans to conduct two tests that would "bracket" the Hawaiian Islands from north to south.

The United States protested and both missiles were fired into the same area north of the islands. Pentagon chief spokesman Fred Hoffman said it was not known whether the change was in response to the U.S. protest.

Nudel Lets Visa Wait For Holiday

JERUSALEM (AP) — Soviet Jewish activist Ida Nudel ignored an order by a Soviet official to immediately pick up her exit visa, telling him she first had to observe the Jewish Day of Atonement, Ms. Nudel's sister said Saturday.

Ms. Nudel, 56, tried for 16 years to leave the Soviet Union and join her relatives in Israel. On Friday, an official of the Soviet visa agency told her she would be granted an exit visa.

"He told her, come immediately and you'll get an exit visa," Ms. Nudel's sister, Elana Fridman, told Israel television.

"She told him, I can't come immediately, it's Yom Kippur (Hebrew for Day of Atonement)," said Mrs. Fridman, who emigrated from the Soviet Union in 1971 and lives in the town of Rehovot near Tel Aviv.

On Yom Kippur, which began at sundown Friday and ended at sundown Saturday, observant Jews fast and seek forgiveness for their sins in hours of prayer. Travel is not permitted.

The granting of a visa to Ms. Nudel appeared linked to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's new policy of openness and better relations with the West. More than 5,000 Jews have been granted exit visas this year compared with fewer than 1,000 in 1986. The largest number in one year was 51,000 in 1979.

Ms. Nudel was an economist at an agriculture research organization before she was fired for seeking to emigrate in 1971. She became known as the "guardian angel" of Jewish prisoners of conscience in the Soviet Union.

In 1978, she was sentenced to four years in internal exile in Siberia after demonstrating outside the Kremlin and hanging a banner from her window that said "KGB, Give Me My Visa."

After her release in 1982, she moved to Bendery, a small town in Moldavia.

Hostage Rescued

PETERHEAD, Scotland (AP) — Authorities stormed a maximum-security prison in eastern Scotland before dawn on Saturday and freed a guard who was held hostage by three rebellious inmates for most of the week.

Inmates were protesting alleged brutality by guards and stricter parole regulations.

Officials at Peterhead Prison had hoped the convicts would release 56-year-old guard Jackie Stuart, who was seized last Monday, and surrender peacefully.

But David Beveridge, a spokesman for the government's Scottish Office, said the decision to free Stuart by force was taken Saturday because of concern for his safety and mental health.

Citing security reasons, Beveridge refused to give details of the raid.

He would not say whether police or prison staff or a combined force were involved, nor would he comment on British news media speculation that commandos of the army's elite counter-insurgency Special Air Services regiment may have been involved.

China Publishes New Account Of Rioting In Tibetan Capital

LHASA, Tibet (AP) — China on Sunday gave its second account of a pro-independence demonstration in Lhasa, saying foreigners were involved and that children were paid to stone police. The government tried to suppress independent reporting.

An American traveler said Saturday that Chinese police withdrew from Johkang Temple Square, allowing Tibetans to cheerfully loot a burned police station.

Six people were killed in the demonstration Thursday in the Tibetan capital, a city of 310,000, accordng to Xinhua, China's official news agency. Witnesses said some demonstrators were arrested in an earlier protest Sept. 27, but no injuries were reported. They said they did not know how many people were arrested.

Xinhua disputed travelers' reports that Chinese police fired on the protesters Thursday. It blamed the violence on the Dalai Lama, the Tibetans' spiritual leader.

(The Dalai Lama, living in exile in India, condemned the killings, and Tibetan exiles marched in Indian cities including New Dehli and in Bern, Switzerland.)

Xinhua's account published Sunday said scores of people took part in the protest Thursday. Its Saturday report said only several dozen participated. Witnesses said the crowd numbered 2,000.

"Among the rioters were two foreigners who were waving their hands, shouting and egging on the people around to attack the police," the latest Xinhua report said.

Two Xinhua reporters were beaten by 20 demonstrators, according to the agency.

It said that some rioters shouted, "Those refusing to join the demonstration will have their houses smashed!" and one offered children six jiao (about 16 cents) to throw stones at police.

Xinhua said the rioters threw gasoline bottles at the police station to set it on fire and then rushed in, looting furniture and tearing up identification and registration cards.

Xinhua confirmed travelers' reports that the demonstrators attacked fire engines sent to the burning police station. It said one firefighter was injured when struck on the head by stones.

Xinhua on Saturday disputed travelers' claims that police fired on Tibetans armed only with rocks.

"Some rioters went so far as to snatch away guns carried by policemen and opened fire at the police and common people," said the report, published on the front page of China's leading newspaper, the People's Daily.

Xinhua said six people were killed and 19 policemen were seriously injured in the riot.

Witnesses said Thursday's demonstration began after eight monks protesting the detentions on Sept. 27 marched into the square and were arrested.

It was the largest known pro-independent demonstration by Tibetans since 1959, when a failed uprising caused the Dalai Lama to flee to India with thousands of his followers.

China, which annexed the region in 1950, insists that Tibet has been part of China since the 13th century. Tibet has a population of 1.9 million.

An American who arrived Saturday in Chengdu, in neighboring Sichuan province, told an Associated Press reporter police withdrew from the square Friday and protesters came back and looted the burned out police station.

"The Tibetans were looking through files and tearing them up and laughing," she said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "They would take down a sign with Chinese characters and smash it."

(Tashi Phuntsok, joint secretary of the Tibetan Youth Congress, said more than 20,000 people took part in protests in India, home of the largest number of Tibetan exiles, about 90,000.

(In New Delhi, riot police prevented 1,000 Tibetans from marching on the Chinese Embassy and charged one group of demonstrators with wooden clubs when they tried to burn a Chinese flag in front of the embassy, witnesses said.

(The witnesses said five people were arrested.

(The Dalai Lama, who returned to India Sept. 29 after an 11-day U.S. visit, condemned the killings.

("I am grieved by the loss of life and the persons injured during the recent demonstrations by Tibetan people against the Chinese rule," the Dalai Lama said in a statement issued from his headquarters in Dharamsala in northern India.)

China's official media accused the spiritual leader of instigating Thursday's protest.

China Sees New Threat In Protests

BEIJING (AP) — China's acute sensitivity to criticism of its rule over Tibet has left it in a quandary over how to handle publicity about two violent independence demonstrations in the Tibetan capital.

China already had felt itself under siege on the Tibet issue because of a 10-day visit to the United States by Tibet's former ruler, the Dalai Lama.

When he called on Sept. 21 for negotiations on Tibet's status as part of China, Chinese officials responded with an outpouring of ministerial tongue-lashings and historical lectures.

The state-run Xinhua News Agency and major newspapers carried daily articles denying the Dalai Lama's and Western claims of human rights violations in Tibet and of Chinese ethnic domination since China annexed Tibet in 1950.

China also demanded that NBC, in a news program on the remote Himalayan region, delete videotape showing anchorman Tom Brokaw distributing pictures of the Dalai Lama to eager Tibetans. NBC agreed to cut out the short segment.

Jim Russert, vice president of programming for the network, said then that the tape wasn't significant and NBC didn't regard its decision to cut it as a concession to the Chinese. "We were unaware it was that sensitive," he said.

On Wednesday, Xinhua disclosed that 26 Tibetans, including 21 Buddhist monks, demonstrated for independence Sept. 27 in Lhasa.

China's official news media rarely report on demonstrations. They may have done so in this case because of concern that the influx of Western tourists to Tibet would make secrecy impossible.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Unified Approach For Medical Park

The recent spirit of cooperation on the Eastern Carolina Medical Park expressed by the Pitt County Commissioners is exemplary and will benefit this economically important project.

Now, this spirit should be converted to action. The commissioners should formally authorize a joint planning committee with Greenville to develop land use proposals for the Medical Park.

It is imperative that the Medical Park be given room to grow. It is also essential this effort be executed smoothly and with unity by the entities involved.

Creating a committee composed of both city and county representatives and charging it with the responsibility of planning the Medical Park expansion is a level-headed approach. The commissioners were correct to propose such a measure, and should act promptly to implement groundwork for a collaborative planning effort.

A good foundation of planning and zoning work has been laid by the city's creation of a Medical District within the city limits. But fine-tuning the expanded park plan may be necessary to fill in gaps where detail or direction is missing. In the county, suggested land use zoning designations may not be firm enough to accomplish the plan's goals.

Building on this base through joint planning for the additional 3,500 acres of Medical Park land is a logical step toward progress. A project of this magnitude requires utilization of the resources of an entire community. The open-minded and unified point of view expressed by the commissioners moves the project in this direction.

The park must be expanded to tap its full potential. Both the city and the county have the planning expertise to accomplish this goal, but it cannot be done effectively by one faction. A fragmented approach will not yield quality development of the Medical Park property.

The full impact of the Medical Park is still unknown. The current medical center has outgrown expectations and the remainder of the park has the potential to do the same. The project, however, transcends arbitrary city-county boundaries in scope. Consequently, it should be implemented by both entities.

The county commmissioners should be commended for their critical realization that the Medical Park expansion needs to be a joint project with the city. The entire community will reap the benefits of that decision.

New Link Added

With Tuesday morning's official opening of the new U.S. 264 highway from Farmville to Saratoga, the drive from Greenville and areas east will become immensely more pleasurable.

The 11-mile, four lane controlled access highway segment, constructed on a new right-of-way, at long last brings a adequately designed highway to Pitt County.

Travelers will enter the new highway at the Lewis Store area just west of Farmville. A two lane link will carry traffic to the four lane section. From there, except for a couple of grade crossings, it will be an uninterrupted drive to the junction of the old U.S. 264 west of Saratoga. Beyond that a section of the highway has already been opened providing four lane access to Wilson. West of Wilson U.S. 264 and U.S. 64 provide controlled access travel to Raleigh.

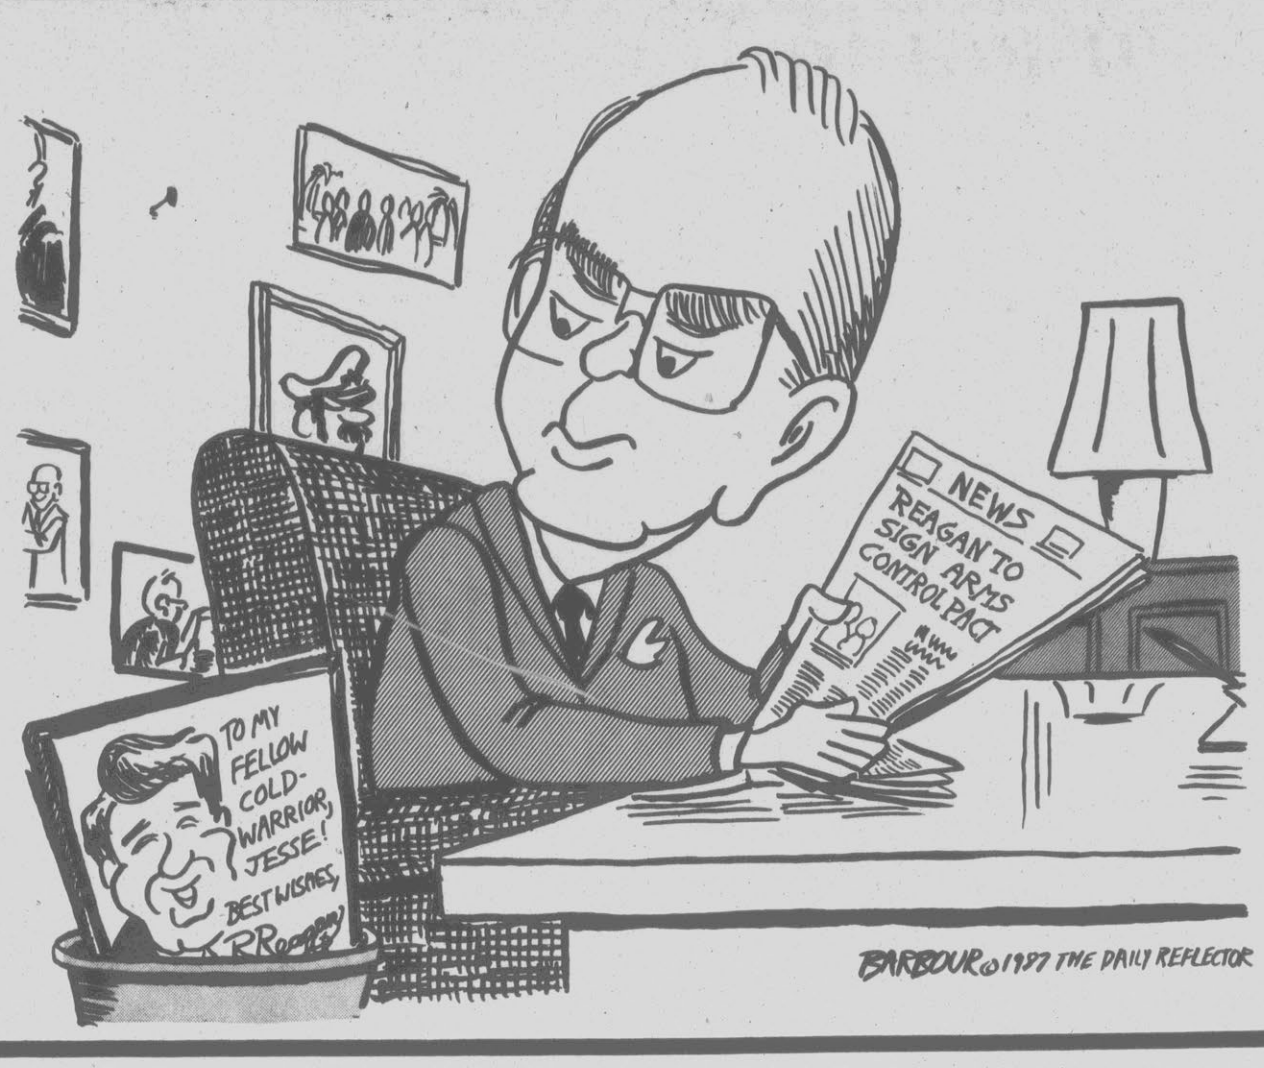

There is more to come. The new highway from Farmville to Greenville should be open by mid-November. Bids for the Farmville bypass segment of the highway are to be taken in November. Right-of-way acquistion for the Greenville northwest bypass is due to begin in December. Right-of-way acquisition for the Wilson bypass is scheduled to start in 1991.

East of Greenville U.S. 264 is being four-laned on its present right-of-way and that project is scheduled for completion in Dec. 1.

While other projects are ahead, the opening of the Farmville-Saratoga segment of the highway will provide immediate improvement to the trip to Raleigh. The only detraction from an otherwise well-designed highway is the absence of interchanges at the few entrance and exits to the throughway. It would seem logical that these would be added in the future, even one at a time.

For the present that should not detract greatly from the speed and convenience of the new route. The grade crossings are well marked and if drivers exercise proper caution the route should be a safe one.

Planning for and construction of the route has stretched over two administrations. It was, and continues to be, a long term and expensive project. Its safety and economic benefits to the central section of Eastern North Carolina will make it extremely worthwhile.

Sneak Preview Of Road Rates High

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Your columnist sneaked a ride on the new U.S. 264 link from Farmville to Saratoga recently. It is impressive.

The section will be opened to traffic with ceremonies Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. From then on motorists will be able to enter the highway just west of Farmville and stay on four-lane road to Raleigh. From there, of course, there are interstates available all the way to the west coast.

Access on the new section opening Tuesday is fully controlled. There are no crossovers between the opposing lanes of traffic and only at a few exits are there grade crossings. Hopefully these will be eliminated in future years with interchanges.

The view from the highway shows off eastern North Carolina at its best. Since the road was constructed on an entirely new right-of-way there is little in the way of development along its route to mar the view — not yet anyway. Thus most of what will be seen now is farmland, woodsland and even a few ponds.

The landscape now has the late summer appearance with greenery predominating. Soon that will be replaced by the brilliant colors of fall leaves which should make this trip a visually exciting one.

Even though this section of road is 11 miles in length, this trip won't last long — not comparing it to the drive from Wilson to Saratoga along the old U.S. 264. Since there is little to slow you down the distance can be covered in perhaps 15 minutes. And, if you don't wish to go west you had best not get on. There is no turning around except at the designated exit intersections.

Given the wildlife population of eastern North Carolina it is easy to imagine the deer and other animal life in the woods along the route. That shouldn't be a problem to motorists, however, since the entire length of the highway is fenced. Deer shouldn't be running in front of cars which are traveling at highway speeds.

A section of the new highway west from Saratoga was opened earlier and that leads into a four-lane connector which carries traffic into Wilson.

Motorists from Pitt County and areas east on U.S. 264 can be prepared for a satisfying trip on this new section of the highway, particularly when we consider there has never been anything like it built before down this way.

And there is more to come as additional sections of the highway are opened or placed under construction.

Candidates Spoon-Fed Bland Phrases

Ross K. Baker

Napoleon once boasted that every French soldier carried in his knapsack the baton of a field marshal. In like manner, every speech writer believes that his pen contains the words for another Kennedy Inaugural.

Robert Shrum, who has written speeches for a number of presidential hopefuls, conceded that he had been trying out for the role of Kennedy speech writer Theodore Sorensen ever since the age of 16. He wrote: "I wanted and worked to become whatever title it was in the White House — they keep changing it — that means advising and verbalizing for a president."

Any candid speech writer would admit to the same ambition — to write the soaring phrases that galvanize a nation, soothe its sorrows or praise its heroes. The political speech-writing enterprise tends to attract bright people whose own ambitions are sufficiently in check to write felicitous lines for others, but who are not so passionate in their desire for anonymity that they would deny their formative role in a memorable or well-received speech by another.

But speech writers can also get politicians in trouble, as the recent flap over Sen. Joseph R. Biden's liberal borrowings from British Laborite Neil Kinnock and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy demonstrate. Unlike other kinds of writers who can wait out a creative blockage, political speech writers must meet the inexorable demands of the scheduler. And, to recall an admonition long used in Washington, "If you want it real bad, you'll get it real bad."

Some speeches by major presidential contenders are indeed appallingly bad. One that must still bring back the night sweats to its author was delivered in March 1976 by President Ford in Charlotte, N.C., to a convention of the Future Homemakers of America.

"It still takes a lot of living to make a home," the president declared, and "I say and say it with emphasis and conviction that homemaking is good for America." That speech caused a major shake-up in the upper echelons of the White House speech-writing department.

The man who bested Ford in the 1976 presidential election ran into his own set of problems shortly after securing the Democratic nomination. Stung by criticism that he was being too differential to Ford, Jimmy Carter began getting rough with the president in September 1976. Carter took the gloves off with a speech using a labored metaphor: "Ford is a good automobile, but it's not doing too well in the White House. Stuck in the mud. Four flat tires. Out of gas. Gears locked in reverse. If it ever does move again, which I doubt, I'm sure we're going to have it back into the future."

The speech backfired on Carter because it exposed a mean streak that had been kept under wraps very successfully throughout most of the campaign. Its target moreover was a man generally liked by the American public. But its most basic flaw was that it was simply a bad speech.

What gets politicians and their speech writers into trouble is when the speeches are too high-powered for the speaker. I worked for a politician who had managed to win election to the U.S. Senate on two occasions on the strength of his folksy manner. The style fit perfectly with the farm state that he represented.

But when he made the fateful decision to seek his party's nomination for the presidency, his staff felt that he needed to sound "presidential."

The candidate was assuredly no sow's ear, but writing into speeches the high-flown observations of historian Jacques Barzun or philosopher Alfred North Whitehead was like putting socks on a rooster.

The speech writers, however, are less the problem than the politicians.

Public life is increasingly an environment where to be a "quick study" is the standard of intellectual excellence. Politicians tend not to write their own words because they do not think their own thoughts.

Speech writers become necessary when public officials are too busy to think.

Ross K. Baker, a professor of political science at Rutgers University, has worked as a speech writer for several U.S. senators over the past 15 years.

Casey Required To Talk To Woodward

Michael Sniffen

WASHINGTON (AP) — What's the big flap over why CIA Director William J. Casey talked, apparently four dozen times, with his nemesis, investigative reporter, Bob Woodward?

The primary answer is as plain as the nose on your face: It's in Casey's job description. He took an oath to do it.

The director of central intelligence is charged with "protecting intelligence sources and methods from unauthorized disclosure." That task was written into the job description by Congress in the National Security Act of 1947.

Nevertheless, no less an authority than the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said, "When the head of the Central Intelligence Agency, if indeed that is correct, meets with an investigative reporter of Bob Woodward's skill and reputation 48 times, or anything resembling that, then I think that in itself is very questionable and ... very surprising."

Even Casey's widow, Sophia, said her husband never would have discussed government secrets with Woodward, or even with her. "It was very secretive and he would never tell me. He wouldn't talk about it to Woodward. They had nothing in common."

But Casey was aware while he headed the nation's spy apparatus that one of this city's best known reporters was writing a book about him and the agency. He had to assume what publication of the book has proved: that Woodward could not tell that story without disclosing some secrets of intelligence-gathering.

How then was Casey to carry out his job? He had to try to persuade Woodward not to publish certain facts or he had to shut down any operations in which actions or even lives might be threatened by imminent disclosure.

To take either action, Casey had to know which of the agency's secrets Woodward had learned.

Casey had basically two ways to do that. One, he could tap Woodward's telephones, follow and electronically bug his offices, but in the absence of evidence that Woodward had committed some crime or was an agent of a foreign power, that would be illegal.

The other method open to Casey was simply to ask Woodward what he had learned. Why would Woodward tell Casey before publication? The one lure that would get Woodward — or any author — to do that would be an offer from Casey to give his version of any information Woodward unearthed.

Under the circumstances, how could either Woodward or Casey resist talking to each other?

Indeed they couldn't, and Woodward writes that Casey "had never once denied my request to speak with him."

The proof of this motive on Casey's part is right in Woodward's book, "Veil: The Secret Wars of the CIA, 1981-1987."

When Woodward describes how Casey personally planted a bug in a foreign official's office, he leaves out what he says Casey told him must never been disclosed: the name of the country and official involved.

Woodward also writes of Casey's shock in 1983 when columnist Jack Anderson and CBS News reported that U.S. intelligence intercepted Iranian communications. "Casey felt that he might have been able to talk Anderson and CBS out of zeroing in on the exact source and method used to gain the information. He had no early-warning system for the American news media.

Michael J. Sniffen has covered intelligence matters for The Associated Press in Washington since 1973.

United States Finding It Hard To Cope With Tehran

Barry Schweid

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Shultz isn't the sort who would admit it, but Tehran is giving the Secretary of State and the entire Reagan administration fits.

Every time Shultz gets ready to call on the U.N. Security Council to slap a worldwide arms embargo on Iran, the folks in Tehran maneuver to sidestep the sanctions with intriguing hints that it is about to accept a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war.

The point of an arms embargo would be to force Iran to comply with the cease-fire ordered July 20 by the security council to stop the 7-year-old war and set the stage for peace talks between Iran and Iraq.

The maneuvering makes the United States look a little awkward and out of step with the other big powers.

Shultz, as well as President Reagan, have set deadlines, only to retreat because Iran has managed to persuade the Soviet Union and China, whose support for sanctions is essential, that in time the cease-fire will be observed.

Ten days ago, in a high-profile speech to the U.N. General Assembly, the president gave Iran 24 hours to "clearly and unequivocally" accept the cease-fire or face an arms embargo.

Referring to the speech Iranian President Ali Khamenei was to deliver the next day, Reagan said if the answer were negative, the council "has no choice but rapidly to adopt enforcement measures."

The answer was more negative than positive. But the United States did not follow through with its threat to move for sanctions in the council. It is giving Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar more time to cajole the Iranians into laying down their arms.

Iraq, frustrated by Iranian vacillation, has resumed the "tanker war" in the gulf after a self-imposed moratorium. Tensions — and the risk of a wider conflict involving U.S. naval forces — remain high.

Shultz has spent nearly two weeks at the United Nations in New York, where he has made enforcement of the cease-fire one of his top priorities. He remains confident the Soviets and China ultimately will support the U.S. position. But the war rages on.

Meantime, Shultz is returning to Washington for more frustration over Iran.

He has to help Reagan decide whether to try to reverse the sharp increase in Iranian oil sales here with a U.S. embargo.

Imports of Iranian oil totaled $819 million through July, the Commerce Department said this week. That's an increase of nearly 70 percent over all of 1986, when Americans bought $498 million worth of Iranian oil.

Iran depends on oil sales to finance its purchase of weapons from a variety of sources, including China, Bulgaria, North Korea and the black market — the very same arms Shultz would like to cut off.

The issue is on the agenda for the National Security Council meeting Monday at the White House. But there may be no decision.

Reagan's advisers are divided.

The Pentagon supports sanctions, but there is no consensus at the State Department on what to do.

"Everybody is looking for something practical and useful that will have an impact, but they are not sure the best way to go about it," said a U.S. official who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

"Trade embargoes don't generally work. We'd like to get multilateral support, but we aren't going to get it. Our friends and allies tend to pick up the slack," the official said.

"THE AMERICANS HAVE TO PAY FOR THIS OUTRAGE! . . . GO BLOW UP A BURMESE FREIGHTER OR SOMETHING . . . !"

Shultz's hesitation over economic sanctions is in contrast with his strong stand on an arms embargo. He simply is not sure an oil embargo would work.

"If the price is right and Iran has heavily discounted its oil, Iranian oil will flow to other markets," Assistant Secretary of State Richard W. Murphy said recently.

There could be another reason for not cracking down on Iran, despite its perennial presence on the State Department's terrorism list and its refusal to agree to a cease-fire in the gulf.

Eight Americans remain hostage in Lebanon. Some anti-terrorism experts believe they are held by pro-Iranian factions.

While the United States has ruled out negotiations or deals for the hostages, closing all channels to Tehran might make it more difficult to secure their release.

Despite the many differences with Iran, U.S. policy remains geared to moderating Tehran's policies. Shultz has made it clear he has no objections to communications between the two sides.

That's one way to try to change policies, and it also could be a hedge against new opportunities for the Soviet Union to gain influence in Iran.

A Look At The Founders Of The Constitution And Religion

Charles Perry

WASHINGTON — Amid all the celebration of our Constitution this year, there has been little discussion of its religious premises. That's understandable. The Constitution doesn't mention God, and the only mention of religion in the document signed 200 years ago is the clause in Article 6 that "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

But we shouldn't forget that there are important religious assumptions that undergird the entire document, beliefs about God and the nature of humankind. I shall mention two:

— Sin. Madison and the framers knew about sin. They shared an almost Calvinist distrust of human conduct. In Federalist Paper No. 51, Madison writes, "If men were angels, no government would be necessary." But, men are not angels. In Federalist Paper No. 10, Madison writes of conflicting interests that have "divided mankind into parties, inflamed them with mutual animosity, and rendered them much more disposed to vex and oppress each other than to cooperate for their common good." The roots of this situation, he writes, are "sown in the nature of man."

Hence, a very careful distribution of power is necessary to prevent the despotism of the executive or of the legislature or of the courts. Each branch checks the power of the others.

The struggles of recent years are testimony to the tendency of men to usurp power. Madison and the others assumed that men are sinful and designed the system to so surround them with checks and balances that their sinful pretensions to power could not bring down the national government. Men and women have fallen from power, been removed from federal office and even gone to jail in our times because they exceeded the limits set by the framers — proving both that sin is ever with us and that the system is alive and well.

— Virtue. The second and equally important religious assumption of Madison and others among the framers is what they called "public virtue." Madison wrote, "I go on this great republican principle, that the people will have virtue and intelligence to select men of virtue and wisdom." And again he wrote "Is there no virtue among us?... If there be not, no form of government can render us secure. To suppose that any form of government will secure liberty or happiness without any virtue in the people is a chimerical idea."

Public Forum

To the editor:

In Aug. 12 publication through Public Forum, you published a response to my letter. I am pleased that someone from the local Indian community responded. It was unfortunate, however, that the letter really never touched the central points in my letter, i.e. the ineffectiveness of the present as well as past Indian governments to prevent and/or thoroughly investigate the causes of the serious and frequent communal violence and to punish the culprits. Secondly, to investigate the atrocities committed by the police and especially recently in Merrut by the Provincial Armed Constabulary that carried out a shooting of innocent muslim men, women and children which was stopped only by the Indian army.

If the government is effective in preventing and swiftly controlling the violence and severely punishing the culprits (muslims or non-muslims), there will be some deterrent. There is no justification whatsoever for the police to kill women and children and for the government to let responsible civil-police personnel go unpunished.

The failure of Rajiv's government so far to do so is tantamount to encouraging more communal violence and perpetuating this cycle. There is no disagreement with the writer, as I fully condemn violence and the people that commit it, regardless of their faith, race or geographical location.

The letter also included matters irrelevant to the central subject, such as the system of government in Pakistan in the past. I must point out that, regardless of the system of government, there has never been any incident of communal violence in the history of Pakistan.

On the other hand, in spite of its so-called democratic system, India, to my knowledge, is the only country in the world that never has been at peace, either with its minorities nor with any of her neighbors, including Bangladesh, a country she helped create by military intervention.

To the editor:

Ted Koppel's "Nightline" on Sept. 29 was devoted entirely to the subject of the "homeless," the "street people" of our nation. Unfortunately, Pitt County's Board of County Commissioners have behaved like the majority of governmental entities across the country and swept the subject under the rug! Stone-walled, that is.

Not many weeks ago, area television, radio and newspapers carried the enthusiastic good news that Greenville's City Council had agreed to make a $40,000 grant to the Greenville Community Life Center to establish temporary shelter for homeless people in our community. This is an emotional issue for me and I was delighted at the news.

Citizens, have you heard the latest? The Pitt County Commissioners, who smiled and nodded and indicated a willingness to be "generous" in helping the project, has done nothing!

Excuse me. They asked the Greenville Community Life Center to "withdraw its request" for assistance in purchasing the old Agnes Fullilove School property, of which the cafeteria building would be used as a shelter. A number of lame excuses have been dredged up, none of which holds water. Space does not permit me to list and refute each one.

The conclusion of the matter is that shelter supporters will use the $40,000 grant from the city and have to raise $35,000 more by donations.

Our public "servants" surely change costumes once they are elected. Maybe we should go to one-year terms and conduct annual house cleanings.

Sub-Continent Nuclear Race

Jed Snyder

WASHINGTON — There is no longer any real doubt that the government of Pakistan is building (and will shortly have) a nuclear weapon. In response, Congress is reviving threats to cut off all military aid to Pakistan unless Islamabad promises to cease its nuclear activities. This threat is almost certain to be ineffective because it fails to address the real problem: how to defuse an impending nuclear race on the Indian sub-continent.

Pakistan's security concerns are focused principally on India's potential nuclear capability. It has always been unlikely that sales of F-16s and other conventional arms would, by themselves, remove that concern. Instead, Zia has shrewdly gambled that, given his country's value as the only conduit for U.S. arms to the Afghan resistance, he could have both his nuclear weapon and an American-supplied and modernized conventional military to boot. Nor is he likely to be moved by a renewal of congressional threats. (Recall his now famous "peanuts" response to President Carter's offer to resume aid after cutting it off in 1979. The "peanuts" were several hundred million dollars of military aid.)

Why should we expect Zia to stop the bomb when he has within reach a prize that would enhance his prestige in the Islamic world, and also be a credible counter to India's simmering weapons program? It is doubtful that Zia would regard short-term U.S. conventional military aid as more valuable in the long run than an indigenous military nuclear capability — especially since a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan would sharply reduce pressure for U.S. aid anyway.

Threats of aid cutoffs might have been credible during the bomb program's embryonic stage in the early 1970's, before the invasion of Afghanistan made Pakistan's strategic value apparent. But severing U.S. aid now would be foolish simply because of the reality: A nuclear-armed Pakistan is now inevitable.

President Reagan can no longer claim with any credibility that Pakistan is not developing nuclear explosives.

The uncovering of an extensive international network created to smuggle illegal bomb materials into Pakistan has removed any reasonable doubt.

It is time for the president to state publicly that the United States can I no longer hope to enforce its nonproliferation policy solely by denying technology and financial support to would-be nuclear powers. We are entering a new and frightening era in which strategies must be crafted to avoid a metastatic spread of small nuclear arsenals. With the decline of unilateral leverage, the United States must work to create new multilateral frameworks that move beyond the assumptions that created and continue to motivate the 1968 Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) and the safeguards established by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA).

The United States should propose a new treaty, the Nuclear Threshold Agreement (NTA), including the current "nuclear threshold states" in a binding arrangement designed to keep the size of new nuclear arsenals within agreed limits. Signatories would: (1) foreswear first use of nuclear weapons; (2) agree to a multilateral inspection regime monitored by the IAEA; (3) pledge not to provide nuclear help to other states; (4) contribute to a confidential data base to include a comprehensive inventory of weapons, amount of fissionable (i.e. bomb) material, reprocessed reactor fuel, etc. These measures should reduce, for example, the Indian government's incentive to launch a preemptive strike against Pakistan's nuclear installations, an option that (according to private accounts) has gained support over the last several months.

It's Time For America To Deal With Managua & Sandinistas

Elliot Richardson

WASHINGTON — Advocates of Contra aid in the White House and elsewhere fault the Central American peace agreement adopted in Guatemala last month for failing fully to protect U.S. security interests in the region. It would be truly remarkable if it did. This is, after all, an agreement worked out among five very poor and weak nations. One of them — Costa Rica — has no army; three others — El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras — are politically unsettled; and one, Nicaragua, is fearful of and openly hostile to the United States. When they signed the Guatemala document, these countries expected the United States to make its own security arrangements, by negotiating directly with Nicaragua and also reaching whatever understandings it thought necessary with the Soviet Union and Cuba.

If the United States does undertake to satisfy its security concerns in this way, then the current peace initiative has a good chance of succeeding. If we do not, this significant opportunity for regional peace will be lost. The wars in Central America will become more bitter and destructive, and the security of every country in the region will be in greater danger. Hopes for democratic politics, economic progress and social justice will be disappointed.

The United States must resolve two key issues in head-to-head negotiations with Nicaragua and its Soviet bloc supporters. Secretary of State George Shultz, in recent congressional testimony, called attention to the most important of these: the United States cannot "permit a country as near to our borders as Nicaragua to become a place from which the Soviet Union and its allies can militarily threaten our friends or our country's national security."

The secretary is right. The United States must make sure that Nicaragua curtails its military ties to Soviet bloc nations and returns to normal state-to-state relations with them. Direct talks are needed to produce an unambiguous understanding with the Nicaraguan government on a process and timetable for ending weapons shipments from the Soviet Union and Cuba and withdrawing their military and intelligence personnel.

The United States should also be talking to the Sandinistas about arrangements for a cease-fire, as called for in the Guatemala accords. Because the Sandinistas are unwilling to negotiate a truce directly with the Contras, it is crucial that the United States ensure that the terms and procedures of the cease-fire are acceptable.

The peace plan requires the United States to stop assisting the Contras by Nov. 7 — and the United States must comply if the peace is to become a reality. We must also insist, however, that a fair and verifiable amnesty be in place for Contra soldiers and supporters. Those wishing to return peacefully to Nicaragua and become politically active must be allowed to do so — free of intimidation or retribution.

The best way the United States can support the Contras is to ensure them the opportunity to join the political contest inside Nicaragua.

No matter that our support to the Contras may have been ill-advised from the outset, or that the Contra insurgency has hardened the rule of the Nicaraguan government, increased its hostility to the United States and driven it further and further into the Soviet camp. There is still no denying that the Contras are now a potent bargaining chip for the United States. The Contra war is bleeding Nicaragua, and the Sandinistas badly want us to stop financing it — even to the point of compromising their revolutionary agenda.

The Sandinistas, meanwhile, also have a bargaining chip: the flow of Soviet weapons and the presence of military advisers. But they know that, however doubtful the current peace effort's prospect of success may be, they must take care to avoid blame for its failure. Contra aid from the United States is otherwise sure to flow at higher levels, and even the friendliest of their neighbors may look the other way.

Both chips have a very short half-life. Each is worth something only as long as the bargaining process is still in play. If the Sandinistas stonewall or if the United States drags its feet, the Nov. 7 deadline will pass, the game will end and the chips will become worthless. After that, Contra aid will buy nothing but a guarantee of more Soviet support. More Soviet support, in turn, will buy nothing but continued Contra aid. And the continuation of the two will buy nothing but more bloodshed and more destruction. The time to make a deal is now.

Aquino Confident After Latest Coup Report

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The army deployed troops and tanks Saturday at the presidential palace after an ambush raised fears of a new coup attempt, but President Corazon Aquino said she can survive any attempt to topple her rule.

Officials said at least 16 people, including a mayor, police chief, an army intelligence officer and a leftist farm leader, were killed nationwide in the previous 24 hours in politically motivated violence.

The coup scare arose about seven hours before the military began what it said was an exercise to test its capability to respond to new attacks from either communist or military rebels.

Manila's acting Gov. Jejomar Binay cautioned civilians not to get alarmed if they saw troops and vehicles moving through the streets after sundown.

In the afternoon, Scorpion tanks and combat-ready troops took up positions at the gates of the walled Malacanang Palace compound after gunmen killed a police sergeant and wounded another in a daylight ambush about two miles to the northeast.

Troops closed off streets around the palace, and witnesses saw them stringing barbed wire along Mendiola Bridge about 500 yards north of the presidential compound.

Danilo Gozo, assistant presidential spokesman, said the moves were taken as a security precaution after the shooting. But military sources said later it appeared that communist assassins carried out the ambush, and not mutineers linked to the Aug. 28 coup attempt led by Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan.

Fears of a new coup attempt heightened after press reports that Honasan, who is still at large, planned new strikes against the government.

Last Tuesday, hundreds of troops and tanks guarded the approaches to Manila for about 18 hours after the military received reports that mutineers were moving south toward the capital.

At a news conference for Filipino reporters, Mrs. Aquino took note of the new spate of coup rumors but expressed confidence that Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos could prevent a repetition of the Aug. 28 raids that killed at least 53 people and left hundreds wounded, including her only son, Benigno III.

In an interview published Saturday by the newspaper Tempo, Honasan claimed the August attempt was only a "dress rehearsal."

Mrs. Aquino told reporters she complained to Ramos about the failure to arrest Honasan, but said she realized "Manila is such a big place and Honasan is being protected" by undisclosed supporters.

Col. Emiliano Templo, a deputy commander of the 5,000-member Capital Regional Command, said Saturday's "anti-coup" exercise would last through Sunday morning. Templo said it was aimed at checking military communications, command control and responsiveness to any new threats.

Soon after the ambush near the palace, police said Maj. Efren Salido, an army intelligence officer, was killed by suspected communist rebels in suburban Pasay City, about five miles south of the presidential office.

The militant Movement of Philippine Farmers said its regional vice chairman for the Visayas islands, Valeriano Caro, was shot dead Saturday with his son, Rolito, as they worked their fields near Iloilo City, 290 miles south of Manila.

The movement's secretary-general, Rafael Mariano, blamed the military. The movement is allied with militant labor and political groups which the military brands as "pro-communist."

In Pampanga province, 40 miles north of Manila, 30 guerrillas of the communist New People's Army attacked a military patrol near Arayat late Friday, killing four soldiers and a civilian, according to local authorities. They said the rebels wounded four people.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat Magnet' Diet Pill Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You will start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patent pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in fat particles. Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested.

Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the doctors, the fat-magnet pills do all the work while you quickly lose fat with no starvation diet menus to follow, no calorie counting, no exercising, and no hunger pangs. It is 100% safe. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

The fat-magnet pills have just been offered to the American public and are already sweeping the country with record sales and reports of dramatic weight loss. It's the "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. MORGANTOWN, W. Va. — East Carolina dug itself into a hole early and kept on digging until there was no way out

In the end, West Virginia had rolled to a 49-0 victory over the Pirates, snapping a three-game losing skid for the Mountaineers.

Both teams came into the game with struggling offenses, but while ECU had trouble putting points on the board, the Mountaineers turned in one of their top performances of the year, scoring 21 points in the first half to take control early.

"In their first four ball games they've been turning the ball over and making mistakes and they certainly didn't do that today," said ECU head coach Art Baker.

"They executed and did the things they needed to to win and when we had the opportunity to early in the ballgame we didn't."

For the Mountaineers, it was a case of finally playing up to potential, according to WVU head coach Don Nehlen.

"This was one day where everything went right for a change.," he said. "We needed to make some big plays— we haven't done that yet. This team was on the verge of exploding and today we did."

WVU took over and marched 80 yards for the game's first score on a 31-yard pass from Major Harris to Calvin Phillips. Charlie Baumann's kick made it 7-0 with just under two minutes left in the opening quarter.

"It took a lot out of us, to drive all that way and not score," Baker said. "As the day went on, we seemed to get worse."

Disaster struck again with just over nine minutes left in the second quarter.

But, with a third and three at the 19, Hunter was hit by Theron Ellis as he attempted to pass.

The pass turned into a lob and was picked off by Bo Orlando, who returned it 84 yards for the score. Charlie Baumann kicked the point after and WVU led 14-0.

"They ran a blitz and we recognized the blitz and checked a play that we usually run," Baker said. "We missed a block on it and they tipped the ball. It was good defensive play on their part."

The Pirates hole got deeper later in the second quarter as Ellis again put a hard lick on Hunter, who fumbled at the Pirates' 27. Brad Hunt recovered for the Mountaineers.

WVU drove right down to its own 9, but ECU's Willie Powell came through with a sack of Harris that put the Mountaineers in a third-and-21 situation at the ECU 22.

But that mattered little to WVU. On the very next play, Harris faded back and hit Harvey Smith in the right corner of the end zone for the score.

The Pirates moved the ball well in the first half as Hunter had 112 yards passing. But his two miscues, courtesy of big hits by Ellis, led directly to WVU scores.

"Moving the ball wasn't a problem, scoring was," Baker said. 'We went down and stopped ourselves or helped stop ourselves. I think that snowballed and got a little worse the next time."

Things fared little better for ECU in the second half as ECU took the kickoff and drove down to the WVU 32 but failed to convert on a fourth-and-one try.

For Baker, the opening drive of the second half was the epitome of the entire game.

"We came back out in the second half and we had a fairly good drive going," he said. "We couldn't make a fourth-and-two situation. I think that said a lot about us the rest of the day."

WVU took over and promptly drove right down the field, covering 68 yards in 10 plays, with Undra Johnson going in for the score from four yards out.

Following a 10-yard punt by ECU's Craig Losito, WVU drove down for another score as Johnson took it again, this time from nine yards out. Baumann's kick made it 35-0.

On ECU's first three possessions of the third quarter, the Pirates garnered only one first down. After getting nine first downs in the opening half, the Pirates came up with only four more in the second half.

The onslaught continued in the fourth quarter as WVU drove 48 yards in six plays to score on a 17-yard bootleg by Harris. The scoring

Knights Nip Duke, 7-0

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Tailback Henry Henderson scored on a 2-yard run with 5:41 to play as Rutgers won its 500th football game with a rain-drenched 7-0 victory over Duke on Saturday night.

Henderson's dive off left guard capped a 15-play, 75-yard march during a heavy rain that fell the entire game and bogged down both offenses. The touchdown came just one play after Duke safety Eric Volk was flagged for pass interference in the end zone against wide receiver Brian Cobb.

Rutgers quarterback Scott Erney kept the winning drive going by scrambling eight yards on a third-and-seven play for a first down at the Scarlet Knights' 49. Fullback Mike Botti, who had eight carries for 35 yards on the drive, also had a 5-yard third-down run for a first down at the Duke 39.

The victory gave the Scarlet Knights a 3-1 mark. Duke fell to 3-2 with its second straight loss.

Auburn Tops Heels, 20-10

AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Jeff Burger used to be the Auburn quarterback whose job it was to get the ball to the Tiger tailbacks. But in the 20-10 football victory over North Carolina Saturday, he became the man who made the offense click on his own.

Burger threw two third-quarter touchdown passes, including a 2-yard scoring pass to Vincent Harris with 1:18 left in the period to guide the Tigers to a road victory.

In the two previous seasons, Burger was in the backfield with Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson and Brent Fullwood. He said he was virtually a spectator.

"I've been in an offense where all I did was turn around and pitch the ball to Bo and Brent and not do anything," Burger said. "I really like being involved as much as I am and having a little control out there."

Burger said the game took on added meaning after the 20-20 tie with Tennessee last weekend. He got hot in the second half and Auburn took advantage.

"We kept thinking ... that our whole season was on the line," he said. "We had to do what was necessary to win this game."

Auburn coach Pat Dye, whose two previous visits to Chapel Hill resulted in a loss and a tie while he was coach at East Carolina, said he issued a challenge to his Tigers before the game and at halftime, when they were in a 3-3 tie.

"I think you could sense that we were a different team in the second half," Dye said. "Our players have a lot of pride and they know what it takes to win a football game."

Turnovers haunted the Tar Heels, especially in the second half when the Tigers were trying to hold on to their lead.

"We're extremely disappointed. We played hard," North Carolina coach Dick Crum said. "But you just can't turn the ball over four times and have your field goal team go to pot. We had great opportunities and should have taken advantage of them."

The Tigers, 3-0-1, fell behind when defensive tackle Tim Goad blocked Brian Shulman's attempted punt and Norris Davis picked up the ball at the 6-yard line for a touchdown with 7:18 left in the third quarter. Kenny Miller's conversion kick gave North Carolina a 10-3 edge.

It took Burger and Auburn six plays to tie the score. Burger, who completed 11 of 12 passes for 124 yards in the quarter, found Freddy Weygand wide open on the right sideline for a 33-yard scoring play with 5:17 left. Win Lyle added the conversion.

Kurt Crain's second interception of a Mark Maye pass at the North Carolina 41 set up Burger's game-winning touchdown pass to Harris. Win Lyle added the conversion.

Auburn's defense bent under Maye's passing, but it held back repeated drives deep into Tiger territory, allowing only Miller's 22-yard field goal in the second quarter after Lyle's 21-yard field goal late in the first period.

Miller missed two field goals in the second half, and Auburn got a 20-yard field goal from Lyle with 1:14 left to play, dropping the Tar Heels to 3-2.

With the Tar Heels top tailbacks, Torin Dorn and Kennard Martin, hobbled by leg injuries, Maye was expected to be the spark for the North Carolina offense. But Maye

NFL's 'Second Season' Gets Underway; Vets May Return

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL's "second season" begins Sunday with the striking players' union vowing to remain out until a contract is signed.

After a weekend of games cancelled by the walkout, 13 games were scheduled Sunday, with the teams consisting of free agent replacement players and about 90 regulars who have crossed the picket lines. The third week of the season — all games will count — ends Monday night with the San Francisco 49ers at the New York Giants.

"Going back to work without a contract is not under consideration," Doug Allen, assistant executive director of the NFL Players Association, said Saturday. "That's the story that's been planted by management to try to intimidate the players."

Friday, union leader Gene Upshaw met with striking players of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"Gene said he wasn't going to allow us to lose much more money," Cardinals running back Stump Mitchell said after the meeting. "He doesn't want to see us hurt.

"He said that one of the things that could be done is to have us go back in and play without an agreement, rather than sign one now that he can't live with."

But Allen, Upshaw's assistant, Saturday was adamant about the strike continuing until a contract was signed.

The two sides last met Sept. 25, and no further negotiations were scheduled. And while the striking players were to miss another payday, the club owners received a full payment of about $100 million from the three television networks.

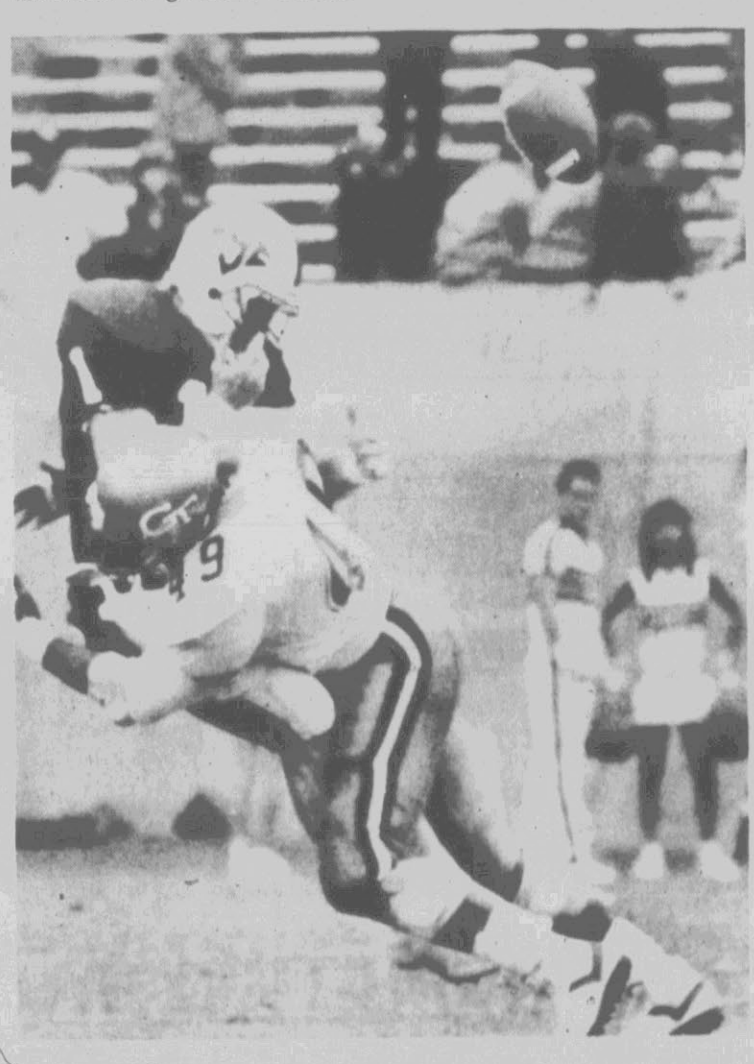

"The checks went out today to the clubs," Art Modell, owner of the Cleveland Browns and chairman of the league's broadcast committee, said Friday.

The $100 million is divided fairly equally among the three networks, although CBS pays slightly more than one-third and ABC slightly less. The 28 teams share equally in the revenues, with each team scheduled to receive about $17 million per year under the terms of a three-year contract signed last spring.

Although fans have returned thousands of tickets to this week's games, the NFL has waived its television blackout rule for eight games which were expected to be sellouts before the strike. The games are Chicago-Philadelphia, Cleveland-New England, Dallas-New York Jets, Green Bay-Minnesota, Houston-Denver, Miami-Seattle, St. Louis-Washington and San Francisco-Giants.

The other six games won't be

State Remembers; Hands Georgia Tech 17-0 Loss

RALEIGH (AP) — Before Saturday's game, North Carolina State coach Dick Sheridan said he didn't have to remind the Wolfpack of its defeat at the hands of Georgia Tech last season.

After the 17-0 victory — N.C. State's first shutout since 1983 — Sheridan didn't hestitate bringing up the 59-21 defeat.

"We got an outstanding performance from our defense shut out this Georgia Tech team," Sheridan said. "We came a long way from giving up 59 points last year."

Since most of the offensive output came in the first half, Sheridan saved his highest praise for the defense."

"We blitzed at times and that helped put pressure on their quarterback," he said. "But when you blitz, you also put pressure on our secondary and our kids did a good job.

"The biggest story about his team is how they come on and hung together. A lot of teams would have gone downhill. But our kids and our coaches didn't panic. We stuck with the things we were doing and kept the faith," Sheridan said.

N.C. State took control in the first half behind quarterback Preston Poag, who passed for a touchdown.

It was the second straight victory for N.C. State, 2-3 and 2-1 in the ACC, after opening the season with three losses. Georgia Tech dropped its third straight game and is 1-3 and 0-3 in the conference.

Poag, a redshirt freshman, was intercepted by Riccardo Ingram on the first play of the game, giving Georgia Tech possession on the Wolfpack 20. But the Yellow Jackets went only six yards on their first offensive series, and Thomas Palmer missed a 31-yard field goal.

It was the first of three misses for Palmer, whose team was able to move inside the N.C. State 20 only once after the first series.

Poag came back early in the second quarter, scrambling out of the pocket on fourth down to hit junior tight end Bobby Harrell on a 2-yard touchdown pass with 14:55 left in the half. The Wolfpack stayed on the ground for most of the drive, but Poag's 13-yard shovel pass to fullback Marty Karriker on third down pushed N.C. State deep into Georgia Tech territory.

Georgia Tech quarterback Rick Strom fumbled after he was sacked by linebacker Scott Auer, and tackle John Adleta recovered for N.C. State, setting up Bryan Carter's 31-yard field goal with 3:03 left in the second quarter for a 10-0 lead.

The scoring stopped until the final 21 seconds, when tailback Todd Varn hurled himself into the end zone for a 1-yard touchdown, capping a 72-yard drive.

"In the first half, we were not playing very physical, and it looked like we were just standing around," said Georgia Tech coach Bobby Ross. "... In the second half, I'll have to take a look at the film to see what happened. We would move down and we would need one play. And we just seem like we can't ever get the one play that we

Sooners Rip Iowa State

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Jamelle Holieway passed for two touchdowns and ran for another and Anthony Stafford scored three times as top-ranked Oklahoma began defense of its Big Eight Conference football title with a 56-3 romp past winless Iowa State on Saturday.

Holieway, known more for his running, fired touchdown passes of nine yards to tight end Keith Jackson and 42 yards to Stafford and scored on a 5-yard run in staking Oklahoma to a 35-3 halftime lead.

Freshman Charles Thompson took over at quarterback in the second half and continued the Sooners' assault, running for 137 yards in 13 carries and scoring on a 2-yard run.

It was the 19th consecutive conference victory and 13th in a row overall for Oklahoma, 4-0, which hasn't lost to Iowa State since 1961. Iowa State, which drove the ball across midfield only once in the first three quarters, fell to 0-4.

Patrick Collins ran 14 yards for the Sooners' first TD and Stafford scored the next from 13 yards, each on perfectly timed pitches from Holieway on option plays.

Stafford also scored on a 3-yard run in the third quarter and freshman Mike McKinley ran three yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown.

Holieway, who did not play in the second half, ran 10 times for 88 yards and became the second Oklahoma quarterback to rush for 2,000 career yards. Holieway has 2,023 yards, 35 less than Steve Davis.

Oklahoma ripped the Iowa State defense for big gains time after time and finished with 608 total yards, including 531 on the ground. Iowa State managed only 73 total yards.

Iowa State's Jeff Shudak kicked a 35-yard field goal with one second left in the first half, ending Oklahoma's shutout streak at 10 quarters. Derek DeGennaro's 42-yard pass to Tom Schulting to the Oklahoma 20 set up the kick.

Oklahoma mounted two touchdown drives of 80 yards, two of 69 and another of 47 in putting the game out of reach in the first half. Only one of those drives required more than three minutes.

Nebraska (2).....30
South Carolina.....21

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Keith "End Zone" Jones rushed for 129 yards and scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns on short runs Saturday as No. 2 Nebraska scored the final 17 points to beat South Carolina 30-21 in college football.

Todd Ellis threw touchdown passes of 35 and 80 yards as the Gamecocks built a 21-13 lead midway through the third quarter.

Nebraska, 4-0, then used 18 plays and nine minutes to march 96 yards and score on a 3-yard run by Jones, who rushed for 51 yards in the drive. The Cornhuskers' two-point conversion try failed, leaving South Carolina ahead 21-19 with 9:58 remaining.

Nebraska linebacker Steve Forch stripped the ball from Keith Bing on the second play after the kickoff, and the Huskers' Jeff Tomjack recovered at the South Carolina 27. Nebraska scored four plays later on Jones' 3-yard run, and Jones ran for the two-point conversion.

The Gamecocks marched to the Nebraska 39 before Mark Blazek intercepted an Ellis pass and raced 46 yards to the South Carolina 29. Four plays later, Chris Drennan kicked his third field goal, a 43-yarder.

The game was Nebraska's second straight close call against the underdog Gamecocks, 1-3, who lost at home to the Huskers 27-24 last year. Ellis, who threw for 286 yards in last year's game, completed 17 of 36 passes Saturday for 256 yards.

South Carolina was held to minus 14 yards rushing.

Ellis hit Sterling Sharpe for an 80-yard score less than four minutes into the second half, and Collin Mackie's extra point put South Carolina ahead 14-13.

Sharpe caught the pass, the longest against the Cornhuskers in nine years, at the Nebraska 45 and outran defender Brian Washington to the end zone.

Bethea also scored on a 35-yard pass from Ellis to put the Gamecocks ahead 7-6.

completed 19 of 41 passes, including 8 of 20 in the second half, for 232 yards with four interceptions.

Burger, whose Auburn offense is more ground-oriented, completed 17 of 26 passes for 180 yards and no interceptions.

Maye did most of his work between the 20s, but he couldn't direct the Tar Heel offense to the end zone in the first half. North Carolina drove from its 25 to the Auburn 7, but Maye's pass for Dorn was intercepted in the end zone by Crain near the end of the first quarter.

North Carolina moved from its 33 to the Auburn 5 on its first drive of the second quarter, but Auburn stiffened and the Tar Heels got Miller's field goal.

Maye was intercepted by Kevin Porter at the North Carolina 34, but the Tar Heel defense pushed the Tigers backwards with two sacks for 22 yards.

With 1:26 left before halftime, Maye moved North Carolina from its 40 to the Auburn 3. Maye was sacked for a 10-yard loss, Dorn dropped a pass and Miller scuffed a 29-yard field goal attempt with two seconds left.

Greg Staples intercepted a Maye pass at the Auburn 5, but the Tigers couldn't move, and Goad blocked the punt which led to Davis' third defensive touchdown this year.

After Burger's first touchdown pass, Maye moved North Carolina to midfield, where he was intercepted by Crain again to set up the winning drive.

televised in the home team's city, since the blackout rule bars local telecasts in cities where games are not sold out 72 hours in advance.

Those games are Pittsburgh-Atlanta, San Diego-Cincinnati, Indianapolis-Buffalo, Tampa Bay-Detroit, Los Angeles Rams-New Orleans and Kansas City-Los Angeles Raiders.

In Philadelphia, AFL-CIO officials Saturday withdrew their lawsuit asking for cancellation of Sunday's game, but said they would join striking Eagles' players in trying to stop future games using substitute players.

"The management has a legal and a moral responsibility to the citizens of Philadelphia," Anthony Molloy, attorney for the AFL-CIO, said. Malloy said Eagles' management was "flaunting their name" and "acting in a colossally arrogant fashion" by using substitute players.

The lawsuit was withdrawn because of another injunction issued Friday that covered the same issues. Friday's injunction said the Eagles' reputation in the in the NFL and in the city would be damaged if Sunday's game was stopped.

The Eagles announced Thursday that approximately 40,000 tickets had been returned by fans unwilling to spend $20 to see substitute players. The total didn't take into account several mail bags that remained unsorted.

The team had sold 62,000 tickets for the game between the regular players.

Two clubs — Buffalo and Denver — reportedly have given away tickets in an effort to boost attendance. But Dave Senko, director of media relations for the Bills, denied the allegation.

Senko said the Bills previously had sold more than 39,000 tickets to Sunday's contest and have seen nearly 22,000 returned. And he noted that a postal strike in Canada could increase that figure.

A caller to former Denver placekicker Jim Turner's radio show claimed the Broncos have given away nearly 2,000 tickets. Broncos officials were not immediately available for comment.

"We would be very surprised if this didn't happen in every stadium," Allen said. "The NFL complained loud and clear when the USFL did this as they were getting off the ground, and now they're doing the same thing.

"It shows how much they value the product they're putting on the field."

More than 300,000 tickets — more than one-third of the total sold for Sunday's games — had been returned by fans.

Three major auto manufacturers, United Airlines and the Miller Brewing Co., have pulled their ads from the telecasts, putting additional pressure on the networks.

"We're very encouraged that 300,000 tickets have been returned and the fact that the advertisers have also realized these are sham games," union spokesman Frank Woschitz said. "The fans are not buying these second-rate games, and neither are the advertisers."

Although the number of regular players who crossed the picket lines increased dramatically Friday, 12 teams still have no regulars and several others have only one or two injured-reserve players who crossed the lines to receive treatment. It also left several teams relatively loaded for this week's games against teams made up largely of free agents and castoffs.

St. Louis will feature starting wide receivers Roy Green and J.T. Smith, Pro Bowl safety Leonard Smith, linebacker E.J. Junior, defensive end Curtis Greer and Pro Bowl kick returner Vai Sikahema.

Dallas has quarterback Danny White, running back Tony Dorsett, defensive linemen Ed "Too Tall" Jones and Randy White, and wide receiver Mike Renfro.

New Orleans has six regulars on defense to play against the Rams, who got four defensive starters back Friday and have backup quarterback Steve Dils to start.

New England has five players back, including four starters — offensive linemen Ron Wooten and Sean Farrell, cornerback Raymond Clayborn and running back Tony Collins. Denver has wide receiver Steve Watson, linebacker Jim Ryan and an offensive line that includes starters Bill Bryan and Dave Studdard and backup Winford Hood.

Miami Rallies, Holds Off FSU

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Steve Walsh passed for three touchdowns in the final 16 minutes Saturday, including a 73-yarder to Michael Irvin with 2:22 left, that gave third-ranked Miami, Fla., a stunning 26-25 college football victory over No. 4 Florida State.

After an 8-for-20 passing performance against a ferocious Florida State defense, Walsh, the successor to Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde, passed 49 yards to fullback Melvin Bratton with 57 seconds left in the third period and 26 yards to Irvin, the Hurricanes' flanker, at 3:21 of the final period after reading a blitz perfectly.

Walsh also hit Brian Blades and Warren Williams with two-point conversion passes, the second of which tied the score 19-19.

Florida State, which led 19-3 with 16 minutes remaining, had three chances to win in the final 6½ minutes but wasted each opportunity.

Derek Schmidt, who kicked field goals of 36 and 25 yards but missed a 29-yarder in the third quarter, was wide right on a 31-yard try with 6:17 remaining.

Finally, McManus threw an 18-yard touchdown pass to Ronald Lewis with 42 seconds to play. But, after each team called a timeout, Miami cornerback Bubba McDowell knocked down McManus' two-point conversion pass intended for tight end Pat Carter.

The dramatic rally gave Miami its 16th consecutive regular-season victory away from home and extended the Hurricanes' regular-season winning streak to 24 games. Miami is 3-0 this season while Florida State dropped to 4-1.

Miami leads the intrastate series 18-13 and has won nine of 10 games at Tallahassee.

The Seminoles, who limited Miami to 81 yards in the first half, appeared en route to an easy victory.

Dayne Williams ran one yard for a touchdown on the first play of the second period for a 7-3 lead and Schmidt sandwiched his two successful field goals around a blocked punt by Martin Mayhew, which Alphonso Williams returned five yards for a third-period touchdown.

Elkins Leads As Deacs Top Army

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Junior quarterback Mike Elkins threw two touchdown passes to Ricky Proehl, including the game-winner with 2:46 remaining in the fourth quarter Saturday, to lead unbeaten Wake Forest to a comeback 17-13 victory over Army at Michie Stadium.

Proehl capped the winning 9-play, 80-yard drive with a 26-yard pass reception. Army had taken a 13-10 lead on a 1-yard run by substitute quarterback Mark Mooney moments earlier. Mooney was playing in place of starter Tory Crawford, who left the game with a knee injury early in the second quarter.

Crawford, Army's leading rusher this season, suffered partially torn ligaments in his left knee. He was scheduled to undergo arthroscopic surgery Saturday night and is expected to miss at least four weeks.

Wake Forest, 4-0, also had injury problems. Tailback Mark Young, the team's leading rusher, hurt his ankle early in the second quarter and did not return.

Mooney, who saw his first action in the fourth quarter of Army's 48-6 victory last week over The Citadel, stepped in and completed his first four passes and also rushed 18 times for 60 yards over all.

Army, 2-2, took a 3-0 lead when Keith Walker kicked a 31-yard field goal to cap the game's opening drive.

Wake Forest came back to take a 7-3 lead with 8:36 left in the first half when Elkins hit Proehl with a 23-yard touchdown pass. Proehl got behind Army defensive back Earnest Boyd and then leaped over him into the end zone for the score.

The Demon Deacons went ahead 10-3 early in the third quarter on a 46-yard field goal by Wilson Hoyle. But Army came back on its next drive when Walker kicked a 30-yard field goal.

The Cadets had a chance to take the lead early in the fourth quarter, but fullback Ben Barnett, who led both teams with 104 yards on 22 carries, lost a fumble inside the Wake Forest 10-yard line. But Mooney scored from the 1-yard line on the Cadets' next possession to put Army ahead 13-10. It was the first touchdown scored against Wake Forest this season.

Elkins was 15 of 22 for 208 yards, and substitute tailback Tony Rogers gained 60 yards on 16 carries for the Demon Deacons.

Ohio State (9).....10
Illinois 6

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Tom Tupa's 5-yard touchdown run capped an 80-yard opening drive and Matt Frantz booted a 32-yard field goal Saturday as ninth-ranked Ohio State got a hard-earned 10-6 victory over Illinois in a Big Ten football opener.

The game ended with Illinois quarterback Scott Mohr being sacked after the Illini had pounded to the Ohio State 20-yard line.

Ohio State started as if intent to make the game a rout. With George Cooper, Vince Workman and Tupa taking turns carrying the ball, the Buckeyes rolled 80 yards in 17 plays, making five first downs in third-down situations along the way.

Late in the first quarter, Illinois' Keith Jones fumbled and Eric Kumerow recovered for Ohio State on the Illini 22. The Buckeyes were unable to make a first down and had to settle for Frantz' field goal early in the second quarter.

Illinois didn't have another scoring chance until Doug Higgins missed on a 38-yard field goal late in the third quarter.

Illinois finally scored when Mohr hit Anthony Williams with an 11-yard touchdown pass with 6:22 left in the game. Ohio State's Bill Matlock had fumbled and Glenn Cobb recovered on the Illini 36. Illinois marched 64 yards in 11 plays, including passes of 16 yards from Mohr to Greg Turner and 10 yards to Darryl Usher to set up the touchdown.

Mohr took over and completed four passes to move the Illini to the Buckeye 20 before yielding the ball on downs.

Tennessee (10).....38
California.....12

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Freshman Reggie Cobb scored on runs of 14 and one yards and also caught a 25-yard scoring pass to lead 10th-ranked Tennessee to a 38-12 college football victory over California on Saturday.

The Vols, 4-0-1, also got a 1-yard scoring run from William Howard, a 5-yard touchdown catch from fullback Charles Wilson and a 26-yard field goal from Phil Reich.

Tennessee took command with 17 first-quarter points and led 31-0 at the half. Reich put the Vols on top 3-0 less than six minutes into the game with a field goal that capped a 13-play, 59-yard drive.

Two minutes later, Cobb scored his first touchdown for a 10-0 Tennessee lead, then added his second with 4:02 left in the opening quarter.

Howard's 1-yard dive gave Tennessee a 24-0 lead in the second period, and the advantage went to 31-0 when Jeff Francis connected with Cobb for a touchdown with 8:20 left in the half.

California, 1-4, got its first of two late touchdowns on a 37-yard pass from quarterback Troy Taylor to Michael Ford with 7:18 to play.

UCLA (11).....49
Stanford.....0

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Gaston Green sprinted 91 yards for a touchdown and set up another on a 54-yard pass play as 11th-ranked UCLA crushed winless Stanford 49-0 in a Pacific-10 football game Saturday.

Eric Turner and Ben Hummel each returned interceptions for touchdowns, Alfredo Velasco kicked four field goals and quarterback Troy Aikman threw two touchdown passes to Paco Craig as UCLA, 4-1 overall and 2-0 in the Pac-10, dominated every phase of the game.

Stanford, 0-4 overall and 0-2 in the conference, sank to its worst start since 1983, when it began 1983 and finished 1-10. The loss was the worst for the Cardinal since a 49-0 defeat by Southern Cal 10 years ago.

The Cardinal, intercepted six times by the Bruins, again played without their top rusher and receiver, fullback Brad Muster, who reinjured his ankle in practice.

Green, who had 139 yards rushing and 78 yards receiving, became UCLA's career rushing leader with 3,217 yards. Freeman McNeil had 3,195 yards.

Green's 91-yard run, which put the Bruins ahead 44-0 with three TDs in the first 4:40 of the third period, was the second-longest in UCLA history, behind Chuck Cheshire's 93-yarder in 1934.

UCLA opened the second half with an 80-yard drive in four plays, capped by Aikman's 40-yard pass to Craig in the end zone.

Hummel followed moments later with a 9-yard return of an interception off Greg Ennis, who threw while trying to avoid a sack. Hummel later had a 54-yard interception return for a score negated by a clipping call.

Green took a short pass from Aikman and turned it into a 54-yard gain to highlight an 82-yard drive that gave UCLA a 23-0 lead in the second period. Aikman capped the drive with a 3-yard pass to Craig.

Aikman finished with 187 yards passing, completing 12 of 15 passes, while Brendan McCracken added 50 yards passing and 43 rushing.

Michigan (12).....49
Wisconsin 0

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Senior tailback Jamie Morris rushed for 182 yards and three touchdowns Saturday and No. 12 Michigan's defense recorded its second consecutive shutout in a 49-0 victory over Wisconsin in the Big Ten football opener for both teams.

Morris, who was averaging 132 yards a game, rushed for 154 yards in the first half as the Wolverines, 3-1, scored on six of their first seven possessions in taking a 42-0 halftime lead.

On Michigan's first offensive series, Morris carried six times for 56 yards and caught a pair of passes from quarterback Demetrius Brown for 25 more to set up Allen Jefferson's 1-yard scoring run with 7:43 remaining in the first quarter.

The Wolverines made it 14-0 when Brown ran 14 yards on an option 3:12 later, then stretched the margin to 21-0 before the first quarter ended on Morris' 35-yard scoring run.

Virginia Tech.....31
Navy.....11

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Freshman flanker Jon Jeffries ran for 128 yards, including a 56-yard touchdown run, and Randy Cockrell returned an interception 90 yards for a score as Virginia Tech defeated Navy 31-11 Saturday in the first college football meeting of the teams since World War I.

Frank Beamer got his first victory as head coach of the Hokies, who had lost their three previous games. Virginia Tech last played Navy in 1915 and hadn't beaten the Midshipmen since 1903.

Penn State Slips Past Temple

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Blair Thomas, Penn State's one-man gang, ran for 167 yards and two touchdowns on Saturday as 14th-ranked Penn State beat Temple 27-13 in college football.

The Nittany Lions, 4-1, beat the Owls for the 13th consecutive time and lead the series 21-3-1.

Thomas, who surpassed 150 yards rushing for the third consecutive game, is the first Penn State back to put together such a streak since All-American John Cappelletti surpassed 150 yards in four consecutive games in 1973.

Thomas also caught three passes for 57 yards.

Temple, 3-2, which hasn't beaten Penn State since 1941, kept close for a period. The Owls' Bill Wright kicked a 45-yard field goal to offset an earlier field goal of 42 yards by Penn State's Eric Etze.

Penn State took control in the second quarter with scoring drives of 80 and 75 yards. Thomas, the No. 10 rusher in the nation, ran three and 45 yards for touchdowns for a 17-3 halftime lead.

A clipping penalty on the second-half kickoff moved Penn State back to its 5-yard line, but the Lions then drove 95 yards in 10 plays for a touchdown. Matt Knizner passed the final 21 yards to Jim Coates for a 24-3 lead.

The Penn State defense held Temple's Todd McNair, the No. 8 rusher in the country, to 88 yards on 34 carries.

Temple made it 24-6 with no time on the clock in the third period on Wright's career-best 51-yard field goal.

Texas Tech.....27
Texas A&M (15).....21

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Mighty-mite Tyrone Thurman returned a punt 74 yards for a Texas Tech touchdown, launching the Red Raiders to a 27-21 Southwest Conference football upset of 15th-ranked Texas A&M.

Thurman, a 5-foot-3, 130-pound junior from Midland, Texas, rode key blocks by Monty Melcher and James Mosley down the sideline to stake the Red Raiders to a 7-0 lead 85 seconds into the regionally televised contest.

Three minutes later, Tech quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver and fleet flanker Wayne Walker connected on a 76-yard scoring pass.

The Red Raiders, 3-2 overall and 1-1 in the SWC, preserved the victory with three pass interceptions, two in the final minutes of play.

The Aggies, 2-2 and 0-1, pulled into a 14-14 tie on a 66-yard touchdown run by Keith Woodside and a 19-yard scoring burst by Darren Lewis.

While the Aggies were stealing three passes from the Raiders, it was interceptions by Texas Tech's Lemuel Stinson, Michael Johnson and Jim Vasquez that loomed as the pivotal plays.

With 2:38 left in the game, Johnson intercepted a Craig Stump pass on the Tech 38 and, with about one minute left, Vasquez intercepted to seal the victory.

Reserve quarterback Scott Toman winged a 7-yard scoring shot to fullback Ervin Farris early in the second quarter and Scott Segrist kicked a 29-yard field goal to provide the Red Raiders with a 24-14 halftime lead.

Segrist, successful on all eight field goals he has attempted this season, kicked a 42-yarder in the third period to increase Tech's lead to 27-14. A&M struck back later in the third on Matt Gurley's 8-yard touchdown run.

Oregon 29
Washington (16).....22

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Redshirt freshman Bill Musgrave threw two touchdown passes, Kirk Dennis kicked three field goals and Ron Gould made an end zone interception as time expired Saturday as Oregon stunned 16th-ranked Washington 29-22 in Pacific-10 Conference football.

Washington scored nine points in the final 1:43 in a failed comeback attempt and was driving again before Gould intercepted a Chris Chandler pass with four seconds to go. Chandler had another pass picked off at the Oregon 1-yard line earlier in the final period.

Oregon, 1-0 in the Pac-10 and 3-1 overall, beat the Huskies for the first time since 1980 and only the second time in 14 years.

The Huskies, 1-1 in the conference and 3-2 for the season, jumped to a 14-7 lead on an 80-yard drive midway through the second quarter, Chandler scoring from the one.

But the Ducks scored 10 points in the final 3:03 of the half to take a 17-14 lead at intermission and never trailed again.

Derek Loville capped an 11-play, 80-yard drive with a 1-yard scoring run for the tying touchdown.

After a fake Washington punt attempt failed, Musgrave connected on passes of 23 yards to J.J. Birden and 17 to Terry Obee to set up the 37-yard go-ahead field goal by Dennis as time expired in the half.

Dennis had field goals of 43 and 53 yards in the third quarter as Oregon stretched its lead to 23-14.

Musgrave, who connected with a streaking Obee for an 83-yard score in the first quarter, hit Russell Lawson on a 31-yard touchdown play with 14:10 remaining to stretch the lead to 29-14.

Chandler threw two touchdown passes to Brian Slater, the last a 7-yarder with 1:43 to go, but the two-point conversion pass failed. Washington recovered an onside kick, but Chandler's long pass was intercepted by Brett Young at the Oregon 1.

However, an Oregon safety with 54 seconds to play cut the lead to seven points and gave the ball to Washington one more time.

A record Autzen Stadium crowd of 44,421, the biggest sports gathering of its kind in Oregon history, watched the the Ducks beat Washington in Eugene for the first time since 1973.

Alabama (17).....38
SW Louisiana.....10

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Vince Sutton, starting his first college football game since 1984, threw two touchdown passes to Pierre Goode and ran for another Saturday as 17th-ranked Alabama defeated Southwestern Louisiana 38-10.

Sutton scored Alabama's first touchdown at 4:22 of the first quarter when he took the ball in from the 17 on a quarterback draw.

Alabama, 4-1, committed five turnovers, but Southwestern Louisiana squandered several scoring opportunities.

The Ragin' Cajuns, 1-3, had a first down at the Alabama 7-yard line in the second quarter following Sutton's interception, but the Crimson Tide stopped quarterback Brian Mitchell on a fourth-down play at the 1.

Kermit Kendrick scored another Alabama touchdown on a 35-yard interception return in the third quarter and Alan Ward had a 51-yard field goal in the first quarter. Goode's brother, senior running back Kerry Goode, led the Tide in rushing with 68 yards on 15 carries and had a 1-yard touchdown dive in the fourth.

Michigan State.....19
Iowa (17).....14

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Quarterback Bobby McAllister's only pass completion of the second half, an 8-yard touchdown throw to Mike Sargent in the fourth quarter, lifted Michigan State to a 19-14 Big Ten football upset of No. 17 Iowa on Saturday.

A 22-yard punt return by Andre Rison and five rushes by Lorenzo White for 30 yards set up McAllister's scoring strike to Sargent.

The victory evened the Spartans' record at 2-2 in the conference opener for both teams.

Iowa, 3-2, drove to the Michigan State 38-yard line with 3:33 to play before stalling, and a field goal attempt by Rob Houghtlin sailed wide to the right.

Iowa took a 14-7 halftime lead after Dave Haight recovered a White fumble at Michigan State's 28. Iowa quarterback Dan McGwire capped a five-play drive with a 14-yard touchdown pass to split end Travis Watkins in the corner of the end zone.

White, who carried 21 times in the first half for 105 yards, finished with 166 yards in 39 carries.

Michigan State pulled within 14-13 in the third period on field goals of 21 and 46 yards by John Langeloh.

Georgia (20).....31
Mississippi.....14

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback James Jackson passed for two touchdowns and ran for a third Saturday as 20th-ranked Georgia overpowered Mississippi 31-14 in a Southeastern Conference football game.

Jackson, a 175-pound senior, arched a 9-yard scoring pass to end Kirk Warner in the first quarter and an 8-yarder to freshman tailback Rodney Hampton in the fourth quarter, and scored himself on a 4-yard run in the third quarter.

Hampton, subbing for injured star Lars Tate, kept Ole Miss off balance with his knifing thrusts through and around the Rebel defense and accounted for 227 offensive yards. Tate sprained a knee in last week's game with South Carolina.

Ole Miss threatened to make a game of it after intermission as quarterback Mark Young began hitting on key passes. He marched Ole Miss 80 yards for a third-period score that closed the gap to 17-7 and later 70 yards for a fourth-period tally that narrowed the gap to 24-14. Both scores came on passes to end Shawn Sowder, one covering seven yards, the other 18.

Mostly, however, the Rebels spent a frustrating afternoon trying to contain Hampton and stop Jackson from hitting on soft passes at key times.

run came on a fourth-and-one situation. Harris faked a handoff and went untouched in to the end zone. Baumann added the extra point and WVU led 42-0.

The Mountaineer reserves added a score of their own when Aaron Evans scored on a 6-yard run with 7:13 remaining in the game. Baumann again added the point after to make it 49-0.

The 49-point total equaled the Mountaineers season point total. Heading into the game, WVU was averaging only 12 points a game.

"It was kind of fun to score for a change. We really needed that for our team," Nehlen said.

WVU came into the game allowing only 14.5 points per contest, giving up 237.6 yards a game in total offense, including an average of only 112 yards rushing a game.

East Carolina, 2-3, returns to action Saturday hosting Cincinnati for its annual homecoming game.

The Mountaineers, 2-3, have an open date next week before taking on Cincinnati on Oct. 17.

It was the worst loss for Baker during his tenure at ECU. History wise, it was the sixth worst defeat in Pirate history. It was also the worst defeat since 1981 when North Carolina manhandled the Pirates, 56-0.

Tigers Top Jays In 12th, 3-2

DETROIT (AP) — Alan Trammell singled under shortstop Manny Lee's glove with the bases loaded in the 12th inning to give the Detroit Tigers a 3-2 victory over Toronto Saturday and a one-game lead over the Blue Jays in the American League East.

The two teams have one game remaining Sunday against each other in the regular season finale and the Tigers can clinch the division with a victory. A Toronto victory would send the division into a one-game playoff Monday in Detroit.

Jeff Musselman, 12-5, started the inning and got one out before yielding consecutive singles to Lou Whitaker and Bill Madlock. Musselman walked Kirk Gibson to load the bases, bringing on Mark Eichhorn.

Trammell greeted Eichhorn with a single past Lee, who was playing shallow for a possible chance at the plate. The ball appeared to take a short hop under Lee's glove.

Lee is filling in for All-Star Tony Fernandez, who broke his elbow in a game against Detroit on Sept. 24.

The defeat extended Toronto's losing streak to six games, and the two clubs now have played six consecutive one-run games.

Henneman, 11-3, pitched three innings of hitless relief after coming in to start the 10th for Morris. Morris retired the last five batters he faced, and Henneman, who saved Friday's victory, the next seven to give the two Detroit pitchers 12 straight outs going into the 12th inning.

Locked in a 1-1 duel with Flanagan, Morris overcame some early wildness and, after walking Willie Upshaw to lead off the second, retired 10 straight until Lee hit a two-out double in the fifth. Nelson Liriano followed with a single to center, scoring Lee with the go-ahead run.

Lee's three-run homer Friday night had given the Blue Jays all their runs in a 4-3 loss that forged the AL East tie.

The Tigers retied the score in the bottom of the inning. Tom Brookens reached second on a two-base throwing error by the shortstop Lee, who fielded a tough one-hopper, then threw the ball into the Blue Jays' dugout. Mike Heath, who had doubled and scored in the third, doubled again into right-center, scoring Brookens with the unearned run, to tie the score 2-2.

The Blue Jays took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, and the Tigers tied the score in the third against Flanagan, who came to the Blue Jays on Aug. 31 in trade with Baltimore.

Liriano led off the game with a single to center and stole second. Lloyd Moseby followed with a single to shallow left, and with none out, Liriano held at third base. Rance Mulliniks' fly ball to deep right field scored Liriano and, as they had done the night before, the Blue Jays took the early lead.

After the sacrifice fly, Moseby stole second, and Morris walked George Bell on four pitches, putting runners at first and second. Designated hitter Rick Leach, however, struck out, Jesse Barfield flied out and Morris was out of the inning.

Heath got the first hit off Flanagan when he lined a one-out, third-inning double into the gap in right-center field. One out later, Madlock doubled into the left-field corner, just beating Bell's throw to second as Heath scored the tying run for Detroit.

Rookie Greg Myers lined out to third with two outs and the three on in the sixth. With runners at first and second and two out in the seventh, Bell grounded into a forceout, and Lee lined out to left to end the eighth inning with runners at first and second.

New York.....6
Baltimore.....2

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly hit his 30th home run of the season and Bill Gullickson scattered nine hits over 6 1-3 innings as the New York Yankees defeated the Baltimore Orioles, 6-2, Saturday.

The Yankees took advantage of errors by right fielder Larry Sheets and first baseman Eddie Murray to score two unearned runs.

Gullickson, 10-11 with Cincinnati before his trade to New York on Aug. 26, yielded two runs in the seventh inning after not allowing a baserunner past second through the first six. He improved his record with the Yankees to 4-2. Pat Clements pitched the final 2 2-3 innings for his seventh save, striking out the side in ninth.

The Yankees scored single runs in each of the first two innings and added four in the third to take a 6-0 lead.

Sheets opened the seventh with his 31st homer and the Orioles scored another run on consecutive one-out singles by Terry Kennedy, Mike Young and Pete Stanicek to chase Gullickson.

Mattingly hit a solo homer in the first and Mike Pagliarulo opened the second with a walk and scored when Sheets allowed Orestes Destrade's single to go by him to the right-field fence.

Roberto Kelly and Dave Winfield chased starter John Habyan, 6-7, with run-scoring singles in the fourth and, helped by Murray's fielding error, New York scored two more on Pagliarulo's RBI single and Destrade's RBI grounder off reliever Mike Kinnunen.

The Yankees, drawing 21,556 fans for the game, surpassed the 2.4 million mark for only the third time in their history, having done it previously in both 1979 and '80.

Milwaukee.....8
Boston.....4

BOSTON (AP) — Greg Brock had three doubles and Robin Yount and Bill Schroeder hit homers Saturday as the Milwaukee Brewers clinched third place in the American League East with an 8-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Milwaukee had 18 hits in the game, including a club-record nine doubles.

Paul Molitor had two doubles, a single and two walks, but his hopes of winning the American League batting title faded. Molitor needs to go 6-for-6 in the season finale against Boston ace Roger Clemens Sunday to overtake the Red Sox's injured Wade Boggs for the title. Boggs finished at .363 average.

Yount extended his hitting streak to 14 games with a two-run homer, his 21st, in the first inning off Boston rookie John Leister, 0-2. It gave him a home run against every team in the league this year.

With the score tied 3-3, Schroeder triggered a four-run sixth inning with a tiebreaking home run, his 14th.

Brock doubled and scored on Ernest Riles's sacrifice fly in Milwaukee's three-run first. He singled in the third, doubled in the fifth and doubled for an RBI in the sixth.

Milwaukee starter Bill Wegman, 12-11, allowed eight hits in five-plus innings and Chuck Crim finished for his 12th save.

Dave Sveum and Molitor also had RBI doubles in the decisive sixth as the Brewers broke an 0-for-8 record in Boston since their last Fenway Park victory on June 15, 1986.

Boston scored two runs on an RBI double by Todd Benzinger and a single by Sam Horn in the fourth, then pulled into a 3-3 tie on a sacrifice fly by Pat Dodson in the fifth.

After Milwaukee made it 8-3 on B.J. Surhoff's sacrifice fly in the eighth, Dodson hit his second major league homer in the Boston half.

California.....12
Cleveland.....5

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Wally Joyner hit three solo home runs Saturday as the California Angels routed the Cleveland Indians, 12-5.

Joyner hit homers in the first and third innings off Ken Schrom, 6-13, and added another shot off reliever Sammy Stewart in the sixth. His third homer also gave Joyner 100 runs scored this season.

Joyner's first career three-homer game gave him 34 for the season along with 117 runs batted in. The last Angel to hit three homers in a game was Reggie Jackson, last Sept. 18.

The Angels added two other homers, by Brian Downing, No. 29, and Jack Howell, No. 23.

Jack Lazorko, 5-6, earned his first victory as a starter since June 9. He pitched 7 1-3 innings and Gary Lucas finished the game.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first as Brett Butler led off with a triple and scored on Brook Jacoby's two-out single.

In addition to Joyner's second homer, a five-run third inning featured run-scoring singles by Devon White and Bob Boone.

Lady Bucs Take Second

East Carolina opened play on Friday by beating the Lady Moccasins, 15-4, 5-15, 15-13. That was followed by a 15-11, 15-7 win over Winthrop. In the third round, the Lady Pirates beat Campbell, 15-0, 15-1.

Saturday, in the semifinals, the Lady Pirates downed Stetson, 15-13, 14-16, and 15-9. But in the finals, they met UT-C again and lost three straight games in a best-of-five championship series, 15-7, 15-2, 15-3.

The loss snapped a five-match win streak for the Lady Pirates, who are now 7-6 on the year.

Sophomore setter Debbie Tate was selected as the tournament's most valuable player and was the only ECU player to be named to the all-tournament team.

Rampants Rally, Top Gryphons

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ROCKY MOUNT — Ding, dong! The witch is dead!

Rose High School got the Rocky Mount witch off its back Friday night, scoring 20 points in the final quarter to take a 27-10 victory over the Gryphons in what many have billed the battle for the Big East Conference championship.

Both teams came into the game with 4-0 records. Rocky Mount was ranked sixth in the state and Rose, eighth.

It was the first time Rose had beaten Rocky Mount on the Gryphons' home field since 1974, and only the fourth victory over the Gryphons anywhere since then.

Timmy Moore raced 80 yards to score one touchdown and returned an interception 58 yards to set up another as he paced the way. Moore finished with 125 yards on 14 carries.

Malcom Wilson scored on a 4-yard pass from Tom Moye, who also ran over a 2-yard score. Axel Smith finished it off with a 1-yard run in the closing seconds of the contest. Kevin Goodrich added three of four PAT tries.

Rocky Mount quarterback Tim Kilpatrick accounted for all of his team's points. He kicked a 20-yard field goal that staked the Gryphons to an early 3-0 lead, then added an 18-yard keeper for the lone Rocky Mount touchdown. He also added the PAT kick.

Both coaches talked about mistakes in the game, however, since they played a big role. Rose fumbled the ball away, then gave up a 15-yard penalty to help set up Rocky Mount's touchdown. Rocky Mount roughed Goodrich on a field goal try — the only penalty of the game against the Gryphons — to set up the go-ahead score by Rose.

"We dropped three touchdown passes in the first half," Rocky Mount coach George Kelley said. "They have a great team, but I believe that we have a great team too. The final score of this game was no indication of how close it was. I guess that it gives us something to strive for — to have another shot at them in the playoffs.

"We gave them their second touchdown on the roughing the kicker call. They got some breaks, but I guess that's the way it goes," Kelley added.

"We made enough mistakes in the first half to fall way behind," Rose coach Chip Williams said. "We were very fortunate not to be way down at the half. Then, in the second half, I thought our defense did an outstanding job."

Indeed.

Rose held Rocky Mount to only 56 yards in offense in the second half, as compared to 152 in the first. Rose managed only 127 yards in offense in the first half (80 of that on Moore's touchdown run) but came back to have 187 in the second, twice scoring on long drives.

"Timmy did a heck of a job tonight. I thought we did a good job of disguising what his run would be and he made a great effort to break away from them after they nearly had him. I thought we did a good job of disguising our defenses too in the second half."

Williams said he was impressed with Rocky Mount receiver Don Thomas who caught four passes for 87 yards and who also returned a punt 55 yards.

"I've got nothing but good things to say about Rocky Mount; they are a fine team," Williams said.

"We had the chance to fold up there in the first half and even early in the second, but we fought back. Timmy did an outstanding job, David Daniels played great at linebacker and Axel Smith did a heck of a job in saving a touchdown for us."

That play came late in the first half after Rocky Mount had come back to knock on the door after Rose took the lead. On third and 10 from the 11, Kilpatrick got two men open on the same side in the end zone, but Smith came from nowhere to knock the ball away at the final second and preserve the Rampant lead.

"Things just seem to fall our way when it came down to the end," Williams said. "After so much time being Rocky Mount's way over here, I guess it was just our time for a change. And I'm sure that if we are lucky enough to make the playoffs, we'll see them there too."

Rose had the first chance in the game after Stacy Best intercepted Kilpatrick and returned the ball 28 yards to the Gryphon 38. But the Rampants failed to move it and Moye kicked the ball out of bounds at the 15.

Rocky Mount drove back to the Rose 41 before finally being forced to punt.

Late in the quarter, Rocky Mount took over after Thomas' outstanding punt return gave them excellent field position. Fielding the ball on his own 30, Thomas raced back 55 yards to the Rose 15. James Lancaster carried twice for 10 yards, but the Rose defense dug in and forced Kilpatrick to kick a 20-yard field goal with 8:18 left.

Later, from midfield, Thomas, all alone behind the Rose defense, dropped a sure touchdown pass and the Gryphons were forced to punt.

Rose took over on its own 16 and two plays netted four yards. On the next play, Moore went into the left tackle hole, found it plugged, but shook off several Gryphon tacklers and broke away. He then outraced the secondary as he scooted down the sidelines on his 80-yard touchdown run. Goodrich's kick made it 7-3 with 1:08 left.

On the first play after the kickoff, Kilpatrick tossed to Tom Jones, who, still behind the line of scrimmage, unloaded a 49-yard toss to Thomas, who was finally dragged down at the Rose 11. But four passes from there went incomplete, including the one knocked away from two potential receivers by Smith, preserving the Rose lead.

Rose fumbled the ball away on its first possession of the second half, and a face-masking penalty against the Rampants on the recovery gave the Gryphons the ball on the Rose 40. On third and three, Lancaster broke away for 16 to the 17. Two more plays netted a loss of a yard, but Kilpatrick faked a handoff on third down and raced around the left side for the touchdown with 8:00 showing. His PAT gave the Gryphons a 10-7 lead.

Rose again turned it back in good field position, fumbling four plays after the kickoff at its own 48. Kilpatrick then hit Thomas for 24 yards to the 24, but he fumbled the ball two plays later and Carlester Crumpler scooped it up and raced all the way to the end zone.

But now, the Rampants were fired up. Moye hit Jeff Mahoney for 15 yards on first down and then went to David Daniels for 10 more on second and eight. Moore ripped up 15 yards two plays later and Daniels added 11 more. Moore picked up 11 more to the nine and Moye got a first down at the eight.

But the drive stumbled there and on fourth down, Goodrich attempted a 25-yard field goal from the right hash.

His kick was off target, but Rocky Mount was penalized five yards — and an automatic first down — for roughing Goodrich. That put the ball on the four and Moye hit Wilson from there for the score. Goodrich added the PAT to give Rose a 14-10 lead.

Rose intercepted Kilpatrick at the Rose 43, but was forced to punt, and then Moore picked off Kilpatrick and returned it 58 yards to the Rocky Mount two.

On the first play, Moye sneaked into the end zone with 5:29 left and Rose led 20-10.

With four and a half minutes remaining, Rocky Mount went into punt formation at its own 26, but Rose, fearful of a fake, stayed up and allowed Kilpatrick to boot away. His punt rolled dead at the Rampant 16, 58 yards down field.

But again, Rose's conditioning paid off as the Rampants drove 84 yards for the final score. Daniels picked up 41 yards on three carries to help move it to the Rocky Mount 42. From there, Moye hit John Ebron for 34 more to the two. Two plays later, Smith slanted in over left tackle from the one with 35 seconds remaining to wrap it up.

The Rampants, 5-0 overall and 2-0 in the league, are in a two-way tie for first place in the Big East with Wilson Hunt. Rose returns home to host Wilson Beddingfield on Friday.

Hunter Leads Panthers By A-G

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

BETHEL — North Pitt quarterback Calvin Hunter, playing his first game since breaking a bone in his foot on opening day, said the Panthers needed to get their power game going if they were going to defeat Ayden-Grifton.

"Our philosophy was to try to control the line of scrimmage and move the ball on the ground," Hunter said after North Pitt upended the Chargers, 16-14, in an Eastern Plains Conference 2-A football game Friday night.

"We wanted to keep their defense on the field as much as possible and wear them down while keeping their offense off the field."

The Panthers, who never trailed in the contest, accumulated 196 yards on the ground on 45 carries in the matchup between the two teams picked in the preseason to contend for the EPC crown.

Hunter, who missed three games after injuring his foot against West Craven Aug. 28, said he had hoped to return for the game against EPC and cross-county rival Ayden-Grifton.

"The doctor told me that if I listened to him and took his time, I'd be ready for this game," said Hunter, who carried the ball eight times for 33 yards and completed one pass for 20 yards.

While Hunter's statistics weren't outstanding, his presence in the lineup created some opportunities for the offense, according to North Pitt coach Larry Bolger.

"With Calvin in the game, even though we ran the power game, the option was there," Bolger said. "Having him in there lets the defense know it can't key on stopping the power game.

"He's a threat to throw the ball. He was the top-rated quarterback in the conference last year. On a number of plays, I saw Ayden-Grifton show 11 players at the line and then back off, having to respect Calvin's passing ability."

Bolger said the Panther offensive line of Kevin Briley, Matt Davis, Dennis Palmer, Tony Hopkins and Jessie Frank was a key element in the success of the ground attack.

"The offensive line did a super job blocking. They made it possible for us to control the ball."

Despite the success of the Panther's ball control offense, Ayden-Grifton had a chance to tie the game with less than five minutes remaining.

Trailing 16-8 with 8:01 left on the clock, the Chargers took over at their own 35-yard line. On the first play from scrimmage, Aaron Harper bulled ahead for 12 yards to put the ball near midfield.

Three plays later, on a third-and-six from the North Pitt 49, Harper carried the ball for eight yards and a first down at the 41. Eric Blount, who rushed for 129 yards on 17 carries, then scampered for 19 yards down to the 22.

On the next play, Blount's number was called again and he ran around end for a 22-yard touchdown dash to pull the Chargers to within 16-14 with 5:16 left in the game. However, the two-point conversion attempt failed, leaving Ayden-Grifton still behind with time running out.

On the conversion play, Blount took the ball and ran wide to the sideline but was stopped two yards short of the end zone.

"We strung it out, the defense got over there," Bolger said. "When Blount slowed up to make a cut, there was nowhere to go."

On their next possession, the Panthers ran 4:09 off the clock using nine running plays before being stopped at their own 49 with 1:01 remaining. On fourth down, Ashley Sheppard booted a 43-yard punt that sent Blount out of bounds with the ball at the Charger 8.

After a run by Blount gained seven yards, Ayden-Grifton quarterback Darryl Moye lofted a long pass down the center of the field which was picked off by Eldred Smikle at midfield, ending the Charger hopes.

Hunter fell on the ball for North Pitt and time expired.

The Panthers, who engineered two long touchdown drives for their only points of the game, didn't make many mistakes, according to Ayden-Grifton coach B.T. Chappel.

"They had been having some problems with penalties, mistakes and turnovers, but they didn't make many tonight," he said.

North Pitt took the opening kickoff at its own 21-yard line and pushed the ball the length of the field for the game's first score. The 79-yard, 11-play drive gave the Panthers a 8-0 lead before the Chargers touched the ball.

In the drive, Hunter broke loose for a 23-yard gain on a run off the option to give the Panthers a first down at the Chargers 36-yard line. On a third-and-two situation at the A-G 16, Michael Blow, who carried the ball 13 times for 63 yards, ran the ball to the one-yard line.

Blow then plunged in for the score on the next play. North Pitt added the 2-point conversion when Hunter, running from a split kicking formation, dashed into the end zone.

On the ensuing kickoff, the Chargers recovered the ball on their own 46-yard line after a North Pitt on-sides kick was unsuccessful. After three running plays moved the ball down to the Panther 38-yard line, Blount carried the ball for 16 yards and Tony Reeves followed with a 17-yard dash, giving the Chargers a first-and-goal from the eight.

Three plays later, Harper bulled in from the two for a touchdown. Blount then carried the ball in for the 2-point conversion, tying the score at 8-8 with 2:25 left in the first quarter. The drive covered 54 yards on eight plays.

The Panthers took over after the kickoff and again were able to move the ball against Ayden-Grifton. Michael Daniels carried the ball for 18 yards and Hunter completed a 20-yard pass to Reggie Daniels to put the ball at the Charger 28 as the first quarter ended.

Three running plays netted eight yards and North Pitt faced a fourth-and-two situation at the 20. Blow carried the ball for the needed two yards, giving the Panthers a first down.

A two-yard run by Blow, coupled with a personal foul penalty, moved the ball down to the eight and Michael Daniels pushed the ball in from there with 9:24 left in the half.

North Pitt again attempted the 2-point conversion from the split kicking formation and Hunter threw a pass to Michael Daniels who juggled the ball with one hand before finally grabbing it as his feet his just inside the end line of the end zone.

The conversion gave the Panthers a 16-8 lead they were able to protect as the teams headed into the locker room at halftime.

"On those first two drives we snuck the ball into the end zone," Bolger said. "Those two touchdowns came early and set the tone for the ballgame."

Meanwhile, Chappel said the Chargers made some defensive adjustments in the locker room, but they came too late.

"With some of the defensive plays we were calling from the sideline in the first half, the players weren't adjusting on the field properly," he said.

North Pitt, which improves to 1-0 in the conference and 2-2-1 overall, travels to Greene Central Friday night, while Ayden-Grifton, 1-1 and 4-2, has an open date this week. The Chargers are back in action when they host Greene Central Oct. 16.

Farmville Takes EPC Lead In 24-12 Win Overy CBA

PIKEVILLE — Farmville Central moved into sole possession of first place in the Eastern Plains Conference, a half-game ahead of North Pitt, with a 24-12 football victory over Charles B. Aycock Friday night.

The Jaguars ground out 254 yards on the ground against the Falcons, led by Elvis McFee's 91 yards on seven carries. Gary Moore added 25 carries for 85 yards.

Moore scored the first touchdown of the game as the Jaguars pushed in on the opening possession of the game. Moore capped the 72 yard drive by running in from 10 yards away for a 6-0 lead.

Farmville extended its lead to 12-0 in the second period, scoring on a 41-yard pass from Moore to Alexander Daniels. That ended a 75 yard drive after the Jaguars had received a punt. Moore then ran over the PAT to make it 14-0.

Aycock got on the board before the half ended by scoring on the first play following the kickoff. Johnny Smith broke away and raced 65 yards for the tally, leaving it at 14-6 at intermission.

The only score in the third period was a safety the Jaguars picked up. A host of tacklers downed Shawn Harris in the end zone to up the lead to 16-6.

Farmville then scored on a 79-yard drive in the final period. Mack Davis got the score on a 1-yard plunge. McFee passed to Phillip White for the PAT, running the margin to 24-6.

Aycock picked up one more score, driving from its own 17. After the kickoff, Daniels intercepted a Coy Dickerson pass, but on the next play, Farmville fumbled it back on the Falcon 17. Aycock drove from there with Harris scoring on a 5-yard run.

The win boosted the Jaguars to 2-0 in the conference, 4-1 overall. Aycock drops to 4-2, 1-1.

Farmville plays host to Pamlico County on Friday.

Vikes Strike Early, Often To Roll By West Carteret

MOREHEAD CITY — Anthony Perry scored two touchdowns and rushed for 101 yards to pace D.H. Conley to a 49-6 romp over West Carteret in a Coastal Conference football game Friday night.

Perry, who did all of his damage in the first half, scored the first of three Viking touchdowns in the first quarter of the game. His opening run for a score was 16 yards and gave the Vikes an early 6-0 lead.

Donte Williams got the second score by scooping up a fumble and returning it 47 yards for a touchdown. Derek Credle caught a pass from Bronswell Patrick for the conversion, giving the Vikings a 14-0 lead.

Then, Patrick hit Chuckie Gardner with a 59-yard pass to tally the third score of the period. Hall Dunn added the PAT to give the Vikings a 21-0 lead as the end of the frame.

Perry again opened a quarter with a score, breaking away on a 50-yard rumble in the second period. Dunn added the PAT and upped the score to 28-0.

Credle then was on the receiving end of a 33-yard pass from Patrick to boost the lead to 35-0 at intermission.

Perry, who accounted for all of his yardage in the first half, did not carry the ball again.

In the third quarter, however, Tyrone Turnage pushed into the end zone for the Vikings from the three and Dunn again was true on his kick to open the margin to 42-0.

West Carteret avoided a shutout with its only touchdown in the third period. That came when Kick Kukulinski blocked a punt and recovered it in the end zone.

The victory boosted the Vikings to 3-2 overall and 1-1 in Coastal play. West Carteret drops to 1-5 overall and to 0-2 in the conference.

Conley will play host to North Lenoir on Friday.

Havelock Tops Pack By 35-18

WASHINGTON — Havelock jumped out to a 21-0 lead in the first half and coasted to a 35-18 football victory over Coastal Conference rival Washington Friday night.

Washington, however, found a crack in the Havelock armor, as Franz Holscher connected on 14 of 28 passes for 300 yards in the game. Felix Cooper caught three TD passes from Holscher to account for all three Pam Pack tallies.

Kenny Frazier put Havelock into the lead with a 5-yard ramble in the first quarter. Later that period, Daryl Jackson added a 2-yard plunge to make it 14-0. Steve Craig, who was successful after each Havelock score, booted the PATs.

In the second period, Havelock quarterback Ledel George connected with Walter Goodwyn for 15 yards for the third touchdown, opening up a 21-0 led.

Washington came back to score twice in a row, however, and trim the lead to 21-12 before the third period ended. Cooper caught a 24-yard pass from Holscher for the first touchdown, then was on the receiving end of a 62-yard toss for the second.

But Havelock held off the Pack with another run by Frazier, this of three yards to up the lead to 28-12.

Washington closed it to 28-18 on another long Holscher to Copper strike, this of 77 yards, but that was the best the Pam Pack could do.

Havelock added a 1-yard plunge by George in the final period to close out the scoring.

Cooper finished with seven catches for 215 yards.

CHOCOWINITY — Chocowinity running back William Haywood rushed for 121 yards on 12 carries to lead Chocowinity to a 43-6 rout over Jamesville in a Tobacco Belt Conference 1-A football game Friday night.

Curtis Myers ran for 94 yards and Alton Rogers added 77 yards on the ground as the Indians piled up 327 rushing yards en route to the win.

Chocowinity jumped out to an early 6-0 lead in the first quarter when Rogers scored on a 4-yard run. The run for the conversion failed and the quarter ended with the Indians up 6-0.

Chocowinity then exploded for 18 second quarter points to take a 24-0 lead into the locker room.

In the quarter, Myers ran the ball in from 15 yards out to give the Indians a 12-0 advantage. They moved ahead 18-0 when Myers scored on a 2-yard run.

The Indians scored again when quarterback Dale Cole, who threw for 71 yards, connected with Greg Heggie on a 45-yard touchdown pass.

After a scoreless third period, the Indians scored on a 3-yard run by Cole to make it 30-0. Chocowinity increased the lead to 37-0 when Myers scampered into the end zone from 24 yards out and Darren Ward added the extra point.

Chocowinity completed its scoring barrage on a 15-yard run by John Perry to take a 43-0 lead.

The Bullets did manage a score late in the contest on a 4-yard pass play from Kelby Moore to Styron Moore to make it 43-6.

Defensive tackle LeeVan Crawford paced the Chocowinity defense with 11 tackles and six assists.

Chocowinity improves to 4-0 in the conference and 5-1 overall with the win, while Jamesville drops to 2-1 and 2-3. The Indians, who have an open date this week, play at Columbia Oct. 16. The Bullets host Mattamuskeet Friday night.

Tigers Claw Past Plymouth

PLYMOUTH — Williamston High School kept its drive for one of the three post-season berths in the Northeastern Conference alive Friday night with a 21-13 football victory over Plymouth.

The Tigers used their defense to set up their offense as they blocked a punt, recovered a fumble and grabbed an interception to help set up their three touchdowns. William Matthews pulled in a touchdown pass and also intercepted a pass for the third straight game as the Tigers upped their record to 5-1 on the season.

Felix Purvis, who has already blocked several punts this year, added another in the first quarter, turning the ball over to his teammates at the Plymouth 5-yard line. Francisco Clifford then went the rest of the way on the first offensive play for a 6-0 lead.

Plymouth rallied for a touchdown in the second quarter after blocking a punt of its own. The drive was 34 yards and ended on a 4-yard pass from Shawn Walker to Chris Cherry. The score knotted it at 6-6.

In the third quarter, Plymouth moved into the lead, driving 80 yards for the touchdown. Gerald Puckett did the final honors, moving in from the 10-yard line. The PAT kick made it 13-6.

But Williamston's defense wasn't through. Raymond Judge recovered a fumble at the 32, and Tyrone Bland scored on a five-yard run. J.D. Ambrose caught a pass from Mark Williams for the conversion and Williamston took a 14-13 lead.

Then, in the last period, Purvis intercepted a pass, returning it 26 yards to the 24. Two plays later, Williams hit Matthews for 22 yards and Chris Coudreit added the PAT kick for the final 21-13 margin.

Williamston, now 2-0 in the conference, plays host to league powerhouse Edenton on Friday.

ROCKY MOUNT — Franklin Huggins scored all four goals as Greenville Christian Academy claimed a 4-2 soccer victory over Falls Road Academy on Friday.

Huggins kicked in his first goal at the 9:27 mark of the first half, but Dwayne Chambers came back at the 13:01 mark to tie the game with a goal for Falls Road.

Huggins put GCA back into the lead with his second goal at the 21:23 mark. He was assisted by Chad Hedgepeth on that shot. But once again, Falls Road rallied, and Chambers hit on a penalty kick at 45:00 to tie it once more, 2-2.

Huggins scored at the 30:18 mark of the second half to put GCA back into the lead for good. He added the clincher at the 44:40 mark, with an assist from Mathew Patton to wrap up the scoring.

Ahoskie Whips Roanoke By 41-0

ROBERSONVILLE — Ahoskie quarterback Dexter Davis ran for a touchdown and threw for two more as the undefeated Cougars bombed Roanoke 41-0 in a Northeastern Conference 2-A football game Friday night.

Keith Roberson scored on a 1-yard run and a 23-yard pass play for Ahoskie, which improved to 2-0 in the conference and 6-0 overall. The Redskins drop to 0-2 and 2-3.

The Cougars, who scored 20 first-quarter points, got on the board early when Davis ran the ball in from the 1-yard line. Al Wright's point-after kick gave the Cougars a 7-0 lead. John Myrick followed with a 16-yard touchdown gallop and Wright's kick made it 14-0.

Roberson pushed the ball into the end zone on a 1-yard run to close out the first quarter scoring at 20-0.

In the second quarter, Roberson hauled in a 23-yard scoring strike from Davis and Wright's kick lifted the Cougars to a 27-0 halftime advantage.

The Cougars scored again in the third quarter when Arnold Powell returned an interception 24 yards for a touchdown, giving Ahoskie a 27-0 lead after three periods of play.

Mike Dempsey scored the game's final points on a 15-yard touchdown jaunt in the final quarter. The kick made the final score 41-0.

Marvin Earl Morning paced the Redskin attack with 111 rushing yards on 30 carries.

Ahoskie has an open date this week and travels to Williamston Oct. 16, while Roanoke meets Roanoke Rapids.

Rams Defeat Pamlico, 20-14

SNOW HILL — Greene Central held the Eastern Plains Conference's leading rusher to only 41 yards and Ram quarterback Kris Radford threw two touchdown passes as the Rams claimed a 20-14 football win Friday night.

The two teams were scoreless in the first period, but the Rams twice drew blood in the second quarter. The first came on a 62-yard, 16-play drive that ended when Anthony Suggs bulled into the end zone from 13 yards away. Then, Radford led a 57-yard drive that ended with he hit Wes Suggs from the 27 with 51 seconds left in the half. The two also hooked up on a 25-yarder along the way.

Pamlico got into the act in the third period, but only after a fumble saved the Hurricanes from being even deeper in the hole. The Rams, driving in, fumbled the ball at the Hurricane three and Pamlico recovered it on the eight. From there, the Hurricanes drove the length of the field with Bill Lovelace hitting Chris Warren on a 49-yard scoring pass to trim it to 12-6.

But the Rams came back to score once again and put it out of reach. After fielding a punt on the 20, the Rams gained a yard on first down. Then Radford connected with Donald Speight for 79 yards and the score. Radford passed to John Dixon on the PAT, opening up a 20-6 lead.

Pamlico scored on a 1-yard run to close out the scoring, with Lovelace sneaking in on the play. Tatum ran over the PAT.

Radford finished with 11 of 18 for 217 yards through the air. Speight caught two for 106 yards while Wes Suggs had six for 93.

Greene Central held Tatum to just 41 yards on 19 carries.

Now 2-3 overall and 1-1 in the conference, the Panthers play host to renewed North Pitt on Friday. The Panthers come in off a 16-14 upset of Ayden-Grifton this past Friday.

Moir Quits At Va. Tech

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Charlie Moir, the most successful basketball coach in Virginia Tech history, says after six months of turmoil it's a relief to no longer have the job.

Moir signed a settlement agreement on the final two years of his five-year contract Friday in Kansas City, Mo., where he and other Tech officials appeared at an NCAA Committee on Infractions hearing, the Roanoke Times & World-News reported in Saturday's editions.

Moir arrived at Roanoke Regional Airport, with his lawyer S.D. Roberts Moore, from Kansas City late Friday night. Asked to describe his feelings after 11 seasons and an investigation-wracked six months on the job, the coach had only one word:

"Relieved."

"Coach Moir isn't going to have anything else to say right now," added Moore. "He's relieved that this is over, and that he'll be able to chart a new course ... hopefully in calmer waters."

Moir has said he doesn't have any immediate prospects for employment.

Ray Smoot, the university treasurer and interim athletic director, said he and Tech President William Lavery also signed the settlement agreement, which seals Moir's resignation.

"There's an understanding on the terms of the resignation that the agreement will not be discussed," Smoot said.

Moore declined to reveal the buyout terms.

On Thursday, a source close to Moir told the newspaper that the worth of the settlement was about $250,000, which would approximate the final two years of salary and perks on the contract.

The Hokies will more quickly to select an interim coach to replace Moir, who guided Tech to 213 wins in 11 seasons, Smoot said.

In recent weeks, speculation about Moir's replacement has centered on Frankie Allen, 38, who has been a Tech assistant coach since Moir arrived at the school in March 1976.

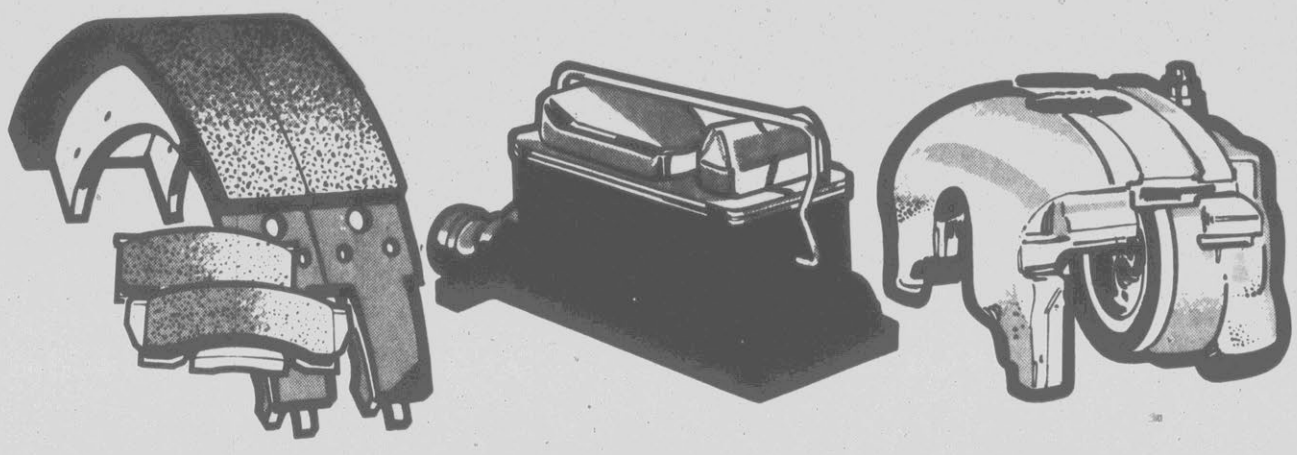

Moir, 56, said as long as six months ago that he didn't plan to coach this season in the turmoil following a university investigation into the Hokies' program. A report to the NCAA enforcement department on that six-month probe listed 13 NCAA violations, which were the subject of three hours of Friday's hearing.

His resignation is the third departure by a major Tech athletic figure in nine months. Bill Dooley left Jan. 1, relinquishing the athletic director and football coaching jobs after receiving a $1 million settlement of a breach-of-contract lawsuit. Dutch Baughman, Dooley's replacement as AD, resigned June 4 after only five months at Tech, saying his authority had been restricted.

Moir has been a college head coach for 20 seasons, and his teams have compiled a 392-196 record. After six years at Roanoke College, where he guided the Maroons to the 1972 NCAA small-college title. He spent three seasons at Tulane, where his teams were 46-33, before coming to Tech, where he posted a 213-119 record.

Moir guided the Hokies to 10 straight winning seasons until last winter. He took the Hokies to four NCAA Tournaments and four National Invitation Tournament appearances, and Tech won the Metro Conference Tournament in its first appearance in 1979. Nine of his 11 Tech teams won at least 19 games.

Wallach's Homer Paces Expos

MONTREAL (AP) — Tim Wallach's 26th home run of the season snapped a seventh-inning tie to give the Montreal Expos a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs Saturday.

Wallach homered with two outs in the inning on a pitch from starter Les Lancaster, 8-3. Jeff Parrett, 7-5, got one out in the seventh for the victory and Tim Burke finished for his 18th save.

In the bottom of the first, consecutive singles by Tim Raines, Casey Candaele and Hubie Brooks loaded the bases. One out later, Wallace Johnson singled to center, scoring Raines and Candaele. Brooks scored when shortstop Mike Brumley allowed a grounder by Herm Winningham to go through his legs for an error.

Chicago took a 4-3 lead in the third when Jerry Mumphrey lined a two-run single to center.

The Expos tied it at 4-4 in the fourth when Jeff Reed singled, took second on a Randy St. Claire's sacrifice, and scored on Candaele's single.

Houston 6
Cincinnati 4

HOUSTON (AP) — Billy Hatcher and Jim Pankovits each hit two-run singles in the seventh inning to lift the Houston Astros over the Cincinnati Reds 6-4 Saturday.

Jeff Heathcock, 4-2, pitched one inning in relief for the victory and Dave Smith pitched two innings for his 24th save.

The Reds' Rob Murphy set a major-league record for relief appearances by a left-hander, appearing in his 87th game of the season, breaking Wilbur Wood's record of 86 set in 1968 with the Chicago White Sox.

Trailing 4-1, Glenn Davis led off the Astros' seventh against starter Ted Power, 10-13, with his 27th home run of the season.

Singles by Ken Caminiti and Craig Reynolds and a walk to pinch-hitter Gerald Young loaded the bases for Hatcher's two-run single. After Young and Hatcher advanced on the throw to the plate, Pankovits drove them home with a single.

The Reds took a 1-0 lead in the first, after Dave Collins led off with a single, moved to third on Jeff Treadway's single, and scored on Tracy Jones' sacrifice fly.

Houston tied the score in the second when Davis singled, went to third on shortstop Kurt Stillwell's fielding error, and scored when Caminiti hit into a double play.

Cincinnati took a 4-1 lead in the sixth on Dave Concepcion's two-run single and Stillwell's RBI double.

St. Louis 1

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rookie left fielder Mark Carreon made up for a two-base error with a tie-breaking single in the sixth inning and Barry Lyons drove in four runs, helping the New York Mets beat the playoff-bound St. Louis Cardinals 7-1 Saturday.

Before the game, the Mets announced that Davey Johnson will make 1988 his final year as manager of the club. Johnson, the Mets' winningest manager, will become a special assistant with New York in 1989.

Rick Aguilera, 11-3, pitched two-hit ball over the first six innings for his eighth victory in his last nine decisions. David Cone pitched the final three innings for his first save, allowing one hit.

Aguilera struck out four and walked none while surviving Carreon's run-producing error in the first inning. Aguilera retired the last 12 batters he faced following St. Louis starter Randy O'Neal's single in the the Cardinals' third.

Mookie Wilson singled with one out in New York's sixth off Lee Tunnell, 4-4, who relieved O'Neal to start the inning. Wilson stopped at second on Lyons' single, and Carreon followed by bouncing a single over third baseman Doug DeCinces' head to snap a 1-1 tie with his first major-league RBI.

Len Dykstra scored the Mets' first run by doubling to start the game and moving up on Keith Miller's groundout preceding a passed ball that was charged to St. Louis catcher Tony Pena.

The Cardinals tied the score when Carreon dropped Dan Driessen's two-out drive to the warning track in left field for a two-base error. The miscue scored Lance Johnson, who beat out a bunt single and advanced to third as Pena and Terry Pendleton grounded out.

Howard Johnson doubled in an insurance run for New York off Tunnell in the seventh, and the Mets scored a second time in the inning when Lyons walked with the bases loaded.

The Mets added three runs in the ninth on Lyons' three-run double.

Jack Clark, idled since Sept. 9 by an ankle injury, pinch hit for O'Neal in the Cardinals' fifth and popped out.

An attendance of 46,845 increased St. Louis' season total at the gate to 3,030,232, the high figure for the majors and a single-season Cardinals record. The Cardinals open the NL playoffs Tuesday night against San Francisco at Busch Stadium.

San Francisco 6
Atlanta 3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Kelly Downs blanked Atlanta for five innings and Kevin Mitchell hit a three-run homer Saturday, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 6-3 victory over the Braves.

Downs, 12-9, yielded two hits in his five-inning stint as the National League West champions won for the 14th time in their last 20 games.

Rookie Marty Clary, 0-1, gave up three runs each in the third and fourth innings in his first major-league start.

Jose Uribe led off the third with a single and went to second on a sacrifice by Downs. After Robby Thompson was hit by a pitch, Mitchell hit his 22nd home run of the season, a 400-foot shot to center.

Will Clark led off the fourth with a double and scored on Chili Davis' single. Uribe's bloop double sent Davis to third and they both scored on Thompson's two-out single.

The Braves scored a run in the seventh off reliever Joe Price. Dion James led off with a double, went to third on Gerald Perry's grounder to second, and scored on Ted Simmons' grounder to shortstop.

Atlanta added two runs in the eighth on a two-run homer by rookie second baseman Ron Gant.

Murphy Extends Streak; Kinston Snaps Its Jinx

By The Associated Press

Murphy extended the longest high school football winning streak in the state, while Kinston grabbed a fumble in the final minute to assure the end of a 23-game victory drought that dated back to the 1985 season.

Murphy, the top-ranked team in the 1-A classification, defeated No. 4 Cherokee 49-7, behind halfback Ben Smith's three touchdowns. Unranked Kinston beat Wilson Fike 21-17.

The other top-ranked teams also fared well. Greensboro Page, the No. 1 team in the 4-A, beat cross-town rival Greensboro Dudley 31-13, Havelock defeated Washington 35-18 in a 3-A matchup, and Whiteville downed West Brunswick 19-7 in the 2-A class.

Smith, who scored on runs of 30, 42 and 39 yards, led Murphy, which has won 21 straight games. The Bulldogs also capitalized on a Cherokee mistake, with Carl Perkins returning an interception 38 yards for a score. Mel Nicely added an 82-yard punt return.

Both teams were undefeated going into the game. Murphy is now 6-0, and Cherokee drops to 4-1.

Meanwhile, Kinston scored on an 82-yard punt return by Tony Pitts, and the winning score came on a 1-yard sneak by quarterback Billy King. Michael Moore recovered a Wilson Fike fumble on the 28-yard-line with 45 seconds left to preserve the first victory since Kinston beat New Bern in 1985.

Page, 5-0, built a 24-0 halftime lead by taking advantage of three Panther fumbles in the first half. After Dudley lost a fumble on the first play from scrimmage, Page took only three plays to take a 7-0 advantage.

Page's Wyatt Smith, with the first of his two interceptions of the night, set up a 28-yard touchdown by Teddy Patterson, who had 84 yards in the half before suffering a separated shoulder.

Defending state 4-A champion Fayetteville 71st dominated Fayetteville Byrd 22-0 to claim its 13th consecutive victory. The Falcons held Byrd to a net total of one yard rushing for the game and 28 yards of total offense.

Fayetteville 71st, 5-0 and ranked second in the 4-A class, intercepted four passes, two of which led to the Falcons' first two scores.

Timmy Moore rushed 14 times for 128 yards and had a 58-yard interception return as Greenville Rose, ranked eighth in the 4-A division, defeated No. 6 Rocky Mount 27-10. Moore scored on an 80-yard run late in the first half to give Rose a 7-3 halftime lead.

Rocky Mount took a 10-7 lead in the second half on Tim Kilpatrick's 18-yard keeper. But Rose recovered a Rocky Mount fumble and took over on their own 28 yard-line two series later and drove 72 yards for the touchdown when Tom Moye hit Malcolm Wilson on a 4-yard pass to take a 14-10 lead.

Moore then intercepted a pass, and Moye scored on a 2-yard run to give Rose a 20-10 lead.

Havelock, 6-0, got two quick first-quarter touchdowns and jumped out to a 21-0 halftime lead. Kenny Frazier, who scored in the first quarter on a 5-yard run, finished 57 yards on nine carries and two touchdowns. Quarterback Ledel George was also responsible for two scores — a 15-yard pass to Walter Goodwyn with 58 seconds left in the first half, and a 1-yard run in the fourth quarter.

But the best individual performances came from Washington quarterback Franz Holscher and his receiver Felix Cooper. The pair connected on scoring passes of 24, 62 and 78 yards. Holscher completed 14 of 28 passes for 300 yards, while Copper had seven catches for 215 yards.

Herman Jones caught a 31-yard pass for one touchdown and ran for a 21-yard score to lead Whiteville, now 5-0. Running back Virgil Cokley had 115 yard on 15 carries.

Ahoskie, 6-0 and ranked second in the 2-A division, took advantage of Roanoke mistakes, capitalizing on eight of 12 fumbles to take a 41-0 victory.

Tigers Win, Tie For The Lead

By The Associated Press

The Detroit Tigers know the numbers. Now, the Tigers just hope they have Toronto's, too.

Detroit moved into a first-place tie with Toronto in the American League East on Friday night, beating the Blue Jays 4-3 behind the pitching of Doyle Alexander and Mike Henneman. Both teams have a record of 96-64.

"It's two out of three now," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "It gets down to where it's fair now. They had the hatchet over us. That's not fair. Now it's even."

The Blue Jays have lost five in a row, squandering a lead that was 3½ games last Sunday before they lost the final game of a four-game series against Detroit in Toronto. The teams finish the season with games today and Sunday at Tiger Stadium, facing the possibility of a Monday playoff if the tie persists.

Rookie Scott Lusader hit his first major-league homer for two runs in the second inning and Alan Trammell hit a homer and Detroit used a pair of errors by Toronto third baseman Rance Mulliniks to score two unearned runs in the third to help Alexander win his ninth game without a loss.

"Right now, it's a two-game season," Alexander said. "We wanted to win. We needed to win. We were behind a game. We didn't want to be in a position where we had to win two to tie."

Alexander allowed three runs and eight hits in seven-plus innings. Lloyd Moseby singled to lead off the eighth, stole second, and Mulliniks walked. Henneman came on and got George Bell to hit into a fielder's choice and Juan Beniquez grounded into a double play. Henneman retired the side in the ninth for his seventh save.

"That was the key to the game," Alexander said. "Mike got two ground balls and got us out of the eighth. That was a super job of pitching."

Jesse Barfield led off the Blue Jays' second with a single to right. One out later, rookie Greg Myers singled to right on the first pitch of his first major-league at-bat, sending Barfield to third. Manny Lee, batting ninth, took a strike from Alexander before he hit his first homer of the season in 110 at-bats off the facing of the upper deck in right field, giving Toronto a short-lived 3-0 lead.

In other games, it was New York 3, Baltimore 1; Boston 3, Milwaukee 2 in 12 innings; Oakland 4, Chicago 3 in 11 innings; Kansas City 6, Minnesota 3; Seattle 5, Texas 4, and California 10, Cleveland 4.

Yankees 3, Orioles 1

Red Sox 3, Brewers 2

Spike Owen's home run into the left-field screen at Fenway Park in the 12th inning lifted Boston over Milwaukee and snapped the Brewers' five-game winning streak. Owen's second homer of the season ended a pitching duel in which Milwaukee starter Ted Higuera, 18-10, went the distance, allowing six hits.

Royals 6, Twins 3

Danny Tartabull hit a grand slam and catcher Scotti Madison hit doubles for his first three major-league hits, leading Kansas City past visiting Minnesota.

Bret Saberhagen, 18-10, gave up nine hits and had four strikeouts and no walks en route to his 15th complete game.

Athletics 4, White Sox 3

Mark McGwire's run-scoring double snapped an 11th-inning tie and Oakland held on to beat host White Sox, snapping Chicago's seven-game winning streak.

With the score tied 2-2, Mike Gallego led off the 11th with a walk and scored on McGwire's liner to right off reliever Bob James, 4-6. Mike Davis sacrificed McGwire to third, and he scored on Jose Canseco's sacrifice fly.

Mariners 5, Rangers 4

Pinch-hitter Gary Matthews walked with the bases loaded to snap an eighth-inning tie and lift Seattle over Texas at Arlinton. Matthews drew his walk from reliever Steve Howe, who relieved with two outs and two runners on and walked Alvin Davis to load the bases.

Dennis Powell, 1-3, took over for starter Clay Parker in the fifth and got the victory.

Angels 10, Indians 4

Don Sutton won the 321st game of his career as California sent Cleveland to its 100th loss of the season.

Cleveland's 100th loss, made the Indians the first team in big-league history to sandwich two 100-loss seasons around a winning year. Cleveland finished 84-78 last season.

Sutton had five strikeouts in five innings to reach 99 for the season. He entered this season with a major-league record 21 consecutive seasons with 100 or more strikeouts.

Hunter Orange Law Effective

Hundreds of area sportsmen will return to the woods this month to participate in one of the state's oldest traditions — deer hunting.

But this year, they won't easily be mistaken for game since a new law requires them to wear hunter, or fluorescent orange while hunting during the firearms season for deer, bear or wild boar.

Wildlife enforcement officers with the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission will only issue warnings this season to big-game hunters not wearing orange. But next year, at the beginning of the 1988 gun deer season, officers will enforce a violation of the law as an infraction with a $25 fine. An infraction does not constitute a criminal offense as a misdemeanor does.

The commission and the N.C. General Assembly hope to reduce hunting fatalities by placing the new law in effect. Last year, several people died in hunting accidents in North Carolina — and the most common cause was being mistaken for game.

When the General Assembly convened, the commission endorsed legislation introduced by Rep. J. Paul Tyndall of Onslow County, to make hunter orange clothing mandatory for certain big-game hunters. Provisions of the new law require deer, bear and wild boar hunters during the firearms season to wear either a hat or an outer garment of blaze orange that can be seen from any direction.

The law does not apply to landowners or their descendants hunting on their own property.

Big Fish Entered

So far this year, 2,220 fish have been entered in the annual N.C. Saltwater Fishing Citation Program.

The program, conducted annually by the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries, awards citations for outstanding catches and special awards at the end of the calendar year for the largest of each eligible species.

An 86-pound sailfish is a new state record. Because pompano, tautog and triggerfish are new species in the program this year, the current leaders in these categories also hold the current state all-tackle record.

Listed are a few of the largest fish in each species, their weights, and where they were landed: amberjack, 86 pounds, Ocracoke Surf; barracuda, 54 pounds, S.W. Tower; channel bass, 60 pounds, Oregon Inlet; bluefish, 17 pounds, Nags Head; cobia, 95 pounds, Cape Lookout; dolphin, 72 pounds, Hatteras; flounder, 5 pounds, Atlantic Ocean; king mackerel, 57 pounds, Onslow Bay; Spanish mackerel, 12 pounds, Hatteras Inlet; blue marlin, 1,020 pounds, northeast of Oregon Inlet; pompano, 5 pounds, Cape Point; shark, 586 pounds, Atlantic Ocean; sheepshead, 12 pounds, Back Sound; red snapper, 31 pounds, off Hatteras; gray trout, 8 pounds, Oregon Inlet; speckled trout, 7 pounds, Atlantic Ocean; tuna, 298 pounds, Gulfstream; and wahoo, 115 pounds, Oregon Inlet.

Local Turkey Shoot in November

The Falkland Volunteer Fire Department is sponsoring a turkey shoot in November as part of a national event promoted by Field & Stream Magazine and the National Volunteer Fire Company Association.

The fourth annual event will be held in Fountain. Winning marksmen at the local competition automatically qualify to participate in a national program. Proceeds go to the Falkland Volunteer Fire Department.

Apply for Public Deer Hunts

Applications are being accepted for adult and youth deer hunts scheduled in December on the Roanoke River Wetlands in northeastern North Carolina.

The N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission and four Roanoke River area hunting clubs are sponsoring a youth deer hunt on Dec. 5 and an adult deer hunt on Dec. 19.

Both hunts will be held from 7 a.m. until 1 p.m. The hunting clubs, which include the Rainbow, Conine and Woodville gun clubs in Bertie County and the Conoho Gun Club in Martin County, will provide dogs and stands for a traditional eastern deer hunt.

Applications for each hunt should be placed on a 3 x 5 index card and mailed with a $5 application fee. Information on the card should specify which hunt — adult or youth — as well as the name, age, address and telephone number of each applicant. Mail them by Oct. 26 to the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

A random drawing will select the participants for each hunt from the total number mailed. Only one application per hunter may be submitted. Participants chosen will receive further information.

Waterfowl Weekend Scheduled

The ninth annual North Carolina Waterfowl Weekend will be held Friday through Sunday at the Armada Inn in Nags Head, with about 40 participants scheduled in the juried show.

The event, sponsored by the Outer Banks Woman's Club, will feature exhibits, a decoy painting contest, an auction and the sale of waterfowl arts and photography.

Tickets are $1 at the door with children under 12 free. Hours are Friday from noon until 7:30 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Proceeds will be used for community service projects by the Outer Bank's Woman Club.

Ducks Unlimited Banquet Scheduled

The Pitt-Greenville chapter of Ducks Unlimited, which led the state in sponsor memberships last year, will hold its annual fund-raising banquet Oct. 20 at the Greenville Country Club.

The event will begin with a social at 6 p.m., followed by the banquet and auction. Tickets cost $50 each and may be obtained by calling John B. Farley, a sponsor co-chairman, at 752-7137.

Attempts To Kill Off Eels Also Hurt Salmon Catch

HESPERIA, Mich. (AP) — An effort to poison lamprey eels in the White River has killed some of the fish the project was designed to protect, but biologists say the damage to the chinook salmon population won't be permanent.

Dead salmon were floating along log jams and in pools downstream from the Hesperia Dam, on Newaygo-Oceana county line. Dead lampreys littered the river bottom by midweek.

"It doesn't matter when we do the treatment or on what river," said federal biologist Tom Hamilton. "We're going to get complaints. We're always ruining somebody's fishing."

Some fishermen were angered that the operation was being conducted during the salmon run on the Lake Michigan tributary.

"I've got friends coming up from Ohio this weekend," said an Ohio fisherman who declined to be identified. "Two days ago you could have walked across the river on the fish. Now they're gone. I hope some fresh fish come in before the weekend."

For the past 15 days, a team of 35 U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service workers have spent 10-hour days treating rivers in the western Lower Peninsula.

"I can assure all the fishermen of this — I wouldn't do something that's going to permanantly hurt the fishing in my own backyard," said Hamilton, who owns a home on the White River.

Lamprey eels are parasites that live in the Great Lakes and reproduce in streams, like salmon. They attach to the sides of salmon or trout and feed off the fish for its 12- to 20-month lifespan.

In the 1960s, the eels nearly wiped out the lake trout population in the Great Lakes. After that, the wildlife service began a lamprey control program, treating most rivers once every four years.

The White River was treated with a poison fatal to lampreys within two hours of application. The chemical and its tell-tale green dye is harmless to humans, pets, livestock, salmon eggs and some fish, excluding those already stressed by old age, pollution, warm water or spawning.

"We just treated the Betsie River (near Frankfort)," Hamilton said. "The fishermen up there were mad because the pink salmon were in. When we treat in the spring, the sucker fishermen get mad. We didn't want to do the White in the spring because there are walleyes and steelhead spawning.

"If we treat in the middle of the summer when the river is low and the water is warm, we could hurt brown trout, rainbow trout, walleyes, summer steelhead, juvenile salmon and caddis," a kind of fly important as a trout food," he said.

"It's a no-win situation for us," he said.

Yates Wins Bike Race

TRALEE, Ireland (AP) — Sean Yates of Britain won the third stage of the Nissan Classic Tour of Ireland, while Ireland's Sean Kelly maintained the lead in his bid for a third consecutive overall title.

Yates was alone at the front of the race for most of the 140 miles and finished nine minutes, 17 seconds ahead of Kelly, who is rated No. 1 on the pro cycling tour this season.

Trinity Volleyball Teams Foiled In Tries For Titles

RALEIGH — Trinity Christian School, after winning the regular season boys' championship and sharing the girls' title, had to settle for third and second, respectively in the Mid-Atlantic Christian Athletic Association Volleyball Tournament Friday.

The boys, 5-0 going into the tournament, lost to Faith Christian of Goldsboro, 11-5, 11-6, to lose their shot at the title. Kreston Welch had 13 hits and Brian Stocks had 11 in the first game, while Welch added 11 in the second game.

"We were just flat," Coach Larry Bryan said. "We tried nine different guys and couldn't come up with a winning combination."

In the consolation round, Trinity received a bye into the finals, then lost the first game to Hilltop Academy of Fuquay-Varina, 11-1. But Trinity then rallied for an 11-8 win to even the match, then won 11-6 to take third.

Kevin Jordan had 12 hits and six service points in the second game, while Kirk Welch led hits with 12 and Michael Harrell led service.

Faith went on to capture the championship.

The Trinity girls downed Raleigh Christian 11-6, 11-3 in the second round of the tourney after a first-round bye. Natalie Godwin and Rhonda Harris led service in the first game, while Jennifer Alexander had 10 hits. Alexander and Becky Stocks led service in the second, while Myra Gillin had eight hits and Godwin had six.

Then, in the championship match, Trinity bowed to Faith, 11-0, 7-11, 11-3. Alexander was the top hitter in the first game, while Stocks and Alexander paced the second game with six each. Julie Godwin led service with six while Godwin had four in game two. In the third game, Rhonda Harris was the top hitter with four.

Faith and Trinity had tied for the regular season title. Trinity's girls finish 7-2 while the boys are 6-1.

GCA won the opening game, 15-3, then recorded a 15-8 win in the second.

Amber Tripp was the leading hitter with 16 while Christie Hardison led service with six. Erika Spain was the top setter with eight.

Elliott Grabs Pole For Race

The former Winston Cup champion trailed record-setting pole-winner Bill Elliott, Darrell Waltrip and Benny Parsons in Friday's qualifying on North Wilkesboro Speedway's five-eighths-mile oval.

"We know we're going to be strong in the race," said Labonte, who has yet to find Victory Lane this season, his first year driving for the elite team of Junior Johnson.

"I've run here against Junior's cars and know how stout they are," Labonte said. "They don't always win the pole, but they're always quick.

"I'm not worried about where I start. If you're racing at North Wilkesboro, you know you've got to beat Junior's car to win. I know how the other drivers feel, because I felt the same way."

Johnson's home and race shop are about eight miles from the North Wilkesboro track and cars he has driven or owned have won 16 times on the short oval.

"Now it's my time at bat, and I don't want to disappoint anyone," said Labonte, who has twice finished second for Johnson this season.

Johnson's Chevrolet finished eighth in the April race at North Wilkesboro, but Labonte, who was recovering from a broken shoulder blade, drove only the pace lap before giving up his seat to Brett Bodine.

"Really, I can't wait to drive this car here Sunday," Labonte said. "It was on this track that I drove one of Junior's cars for the first time last fall (in testing). I had just signed my contract with him a few days before.

"I knew right then that it was powerful, stable and quick. It was the best car I'd ever driven."

Elliott, who also won the pole here in April with a track-record lap of 116.003 mph, this time went 115.196 mph in his Ford Thunderbird, breaking the race qualifying mark of 114.632 set by Waltrip in October 1981.

Waltrip was right behind at 115.001, followed by Parsons at 114.884, Labonte at 114.813 and Alan Kulwicki at 114.808, all above the old race record.

"I felt like the car would run very good here, but you never know," Elliott said. "When you're talking about tenths of a second, a bobble here or there can cost you. But the car was real strong."

The top 10 qualifiers for Sunday's Holly Farms 400 NASCAR stock car race, with hometown, type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Bill Elliott, Dawsonville, Ga., Ford Thunderbird, 115.196 (breaks race qualifying record of 114.632, set in October of 1981 by Darrell Waltrip).
2. Darrell Waltrip, Franklin, Tenn., Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 115.001.
3. Benny Parsons, Ellerbe, N.C., Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 114.884.
4. Terry Labonte, Thomasville, N.C., Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 114.813.
5. Alan Kulwicki, Concord, N.C., Ford Thunderbird, 114.808.
6. Ken Schrader, Fenton, Mo., Ford Thunderbird, 114.451.
7. Michael Waltrip, Statesville, N.C., Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 114.236.
8. Bobby Allison, Hueytown, Ala., Buick LeSabre, 114.057.
9. Morgan Shepherd, Conover, N.C., Buick LeSabre, 113.976.
10. Dale Earnhardt, Mooresville, N.C., Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 113.953.

Santiago Extends Hitting Streak

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

As a catcher who has played 144 games this season, Benito Santiago thought that Fernando Valenzuela might be too big an obstacle to his hitting streak.

He was wrong.

"I like left-handers, but he's a tough pitcher, I'll say that," Santiago said. "He's Fernando Valenzuela, one of the toughest left-handers I will face in my life."

But Santiago doubled off Valenzuea in the first inning Friday night to extend his hitting streak, longest ever by a rookie, to 34 games. However, that didn't stop the Los Angeles Dodgers from winning the game 10-3 and handing the San Diego Padres their ninth consecutive loss.

"Catching is tough because you're crouching down on every pitch," Santiago said. "That's been extra tough for me, becuase I've played more than 140 games. But I don't feel tired."

Padres Manager Larry Bowa, who since Tuesday has inserted Santiago into the second spot to allow for the possibility of another at-bat, took his rookie catcher out of the game after five innings.

"I'm just hitting him there in case someone throws a gem against us," Bowa said. "Basically he's a great No. 5 hitter."

In other National League games Friday, it was Montreal 7, Chicago 1; Pittsburgh 6, Philadelphia 4; Cincinnati 12, Houston 7; St. Louis 3, New York 2, and Atlanta 6, San Francisco 4.

With only two days left in the regular season, Santiago will have to be satisfied with a 36-game hitting streak.

"I'm just going to try and go out the next two days and get some more hits," said Santiago, who has only 16 walks this season. "Every time I go to the plate I'm looking for something, otherwise I let the pitch go. I don't understand how I can take a walk if the pitch is close. I'll give it a hack and try to make contact."

"He had thrown me a couple of nasty screwballs and I swung at those first two," Santiago said. "After that, I stayed back and tried to hit it to right field, but I pulled it."

Mike Marshall drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a single, and John Shelby also hit a two-run homer as the Dodgers won for the ninth time in 12 games.

San Diego's nine-game losing streak is the longest for the Padres since they lost 10 consecutive games in 1974.

The Dodgers took a 2-0 lead in the first when Marshall hit his 16th homer, a two-run shot off San Diego starter Mark Grant, 7-9.

Mike Scioscia gave the Dodgers a 3-0 lead in the third with a run-scoring double.

Valenzuela, 14-14, allowed five hits and two runs in six innings for the victory.

Braves 6, Giants 4

Atlanta beat West Division-champion San Francisco as rookie right-hander Kevin Coffman yielded one run in six innings and rookie shortstop Jeff Blauser had three singles and two RBI.

Coffman, 2-3, shut out the Giants for five innings before pinch-hitter Francisco Melendez led off the sixth with a homer. It was the Giants' 11th pinch homer of the season, one shy of the major-league record held by the Cincinnati Reds in 1957 and the New York Mets in 1983.

The Braves took a 1-0 lead off loser Dave Dravecky, 10-12, in the third when Blauser stole home on a delayed double steal.

Singles by Dale Murphy and Ozzie Virgil around a hit batter by Dravecky loaded the bases in the fourth, and Blauser's two-out single made it 3-0.

Cardinals 3, Mets 2

St. Louis, which clinched the NL East on Thursday, defeated New York with two unearned runs in the third inning.

Jim Lindeman gave the Cardinals a 1-0 lead with a first-inning homer, but the Mets pulled ahead 2-1 on Kevin Elster's RBI double in the second and Dave Magadan's RBI single in the third.

In the bottom of the third, Magadan left the first-bag bag too soon to take third baseman Howard Johnson's throw on Lindeman's grounder, with Oquendo racing from first to third on the play. Mike Laga's sacrifice fly made it 2-2, and Doug DeCinces put St. Louis ahead to stay with an RBI double, his first NL hit.

John Tudor, 10-2, pitched five innings for his seventh straight win. Steve Peters got the last six outs for his first major-league save.

Expos 7, Cubs 1

Neal Heaton and Andy McGaffigan combined on a four-hitter for Montreal against Chicago.

Heaton, 13-10, who ended a six-game losing streak with his first victory since July 30, allowed three hits in six innings, striking out one and walking none. McGaffigan pitched the final three innings for his 12th save.

The Expos broke a 1-1 tie against starter Greg Maddux, 6-14, by scoring three runs in the fourth inning. Maddux had a throwing error to allow the first run to score.

Jeff Reed had two RBI singles and Hubie Brooks a two-run single for Montreal.

Pirates 6, Phillies 4

Pittsburgh assured itself of finishing out of last place for the first time since 1983 as Darnell Coles, whose two errors at third base led to a pair of unearned runs, hit a tiebreaking single in the seventh inning.

With one out in the seventh, John Cangelosi walked and Jose Lind singled against Mike Jackson, 3-10. Reliever Jeff Calhoun struck out Andy Van Slyke, but gave up consecutive run-scoring singles to Coles and Sid Bream.

Coles, who booted a grounder in the third and had a throwing error in the fourth, also hit a sacrifice fly. Terry Harper added two RBI singles for the Pirates.

Reds 12, Astros 7

Tracy Jones drove in five runs, Dave Concepcion had four hits and three RBI and Dave Collins tied a major-league season high by scoring five times as Cincinnati outscored Houston with an 18-hit attack.

After the Astros took a 6-5 lead with a four-run fifth inning, pinch-hitter Kurt Stillwell doubled and Collins singled to open the sixth off Rocky Childress, 1-2. Concepcion then grounded out to bring home Stillwell with the tying run and Jones followed with a go-ahead double.

Lloyd McClendon hit a two-run single before Barry Larkin's single scored the fifth run of the inning.

Reds starter Dennis Rasmussen, 4-1, pitched five innings for the victory.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY Oct. 4

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You have some deep desires which need to be clarified and brought down to more workable forms. Spend the day with your loved one.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A group activity to which you've been invited can be quite beneficial today. Don't stay out too late; you'll need the rest.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A fancy social gathering this evening can yield some great business connections. A credit matter will be resolved to your advantage.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A trip you've been considering should be planned now, and made soon. Make sure that your wardrobe is in good shape.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Rely on your intuition when dealing with your mate today. Concentrate on finishing up some troubling business affairs now.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't attend any social functions alone. Rather, contact some friends who will gladly accompany you. Your future looks very bright.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You may want to spend some time putting your home in order and perhaps purchase an art object or two. Get some rest tonight.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Get into some amusements which can alleviate the tensions you are under, and be sure to bring some good friends along as well.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Put those home improvement ideas into action, and then invite some charming frineds in for the evening. Get some rest tonight.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You are aware of what others expect of you, so don't let them down. The evening can be a delightful one if you choose guests carefully.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): The newspaper can give you some fantastic ideas, provided you read carefully and keep an open mind. Be sure to drive carefully.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Be tactful in pursuing your personal goals. A good friend can render some great assistance to you today. Pay those neglected bills.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY Oct. 5

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't change your plans on the advice of an out-of-town friend. Your mate may be upset, so try to be soothing and understnading tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A troubling situation at work will be resolved. You will have to face many obligations today, so keep your nose to the grindstone.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Accept an invitation from an ally this morning. Be sure not to take any risks where credit or career matters are concerned tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't take any action until you carefully consider all of the possible results. Show some enthusiasm in your work.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Be conscientious in keeping any promises you have made. Avoid quarreling with your mate over money. Solve this problem intelligently.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Do something nice for your family this morning which will ease tensions. Avoid any public situations which could cause you much trouble.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Handle corespondence early today. Postpone home repair work until you have plenty of time. There's more work than is apparent.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If you seize the bull by the horns this morning, you'll get some pleasing results. Be sure you do nothing to offend your friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Focus your attention on home problems which have been building up. This is not a good time to invite guests into your home.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Handle some correspondence which has been puzzling you, but be cautious. Take great care while in motion, especially while driving.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): An expert may give you advice which is incorrect, so double-check the facts and figures. Be extra cautious with money matters.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Since you will be to busy this evening, handle your personal affairs early. Avod being around any demanding friends today.

The bidding:

Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

Regular readers of any bridge column might gain the impression that bridge experts do wondrous things and never do anything silly. Nothing could be further from the truth. When experts do go ape, their goofs are monumental. This hand is from the trials some years ago to select North America's team for the world championship.

The bidding does need some explanation. North's two-spade opening bid showed a minor two-suiter and East's three clubs was a takeout for the majors! South's jump to four diamonds was an attempt at a preempt, and West's double expressed grave doubts about South's ability to make 10 tricks at a diamond contract.

In this West proved accurate. When the smoke cleared East-West had collected 1,100 points when on their own they could have scored no more than 650 at a heart game.

It looked like a sure gain of 10 International Match points for East-West. But see the auction at the other table:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Dbl	1 ♠	4 ♡
5 ♣	Dbl	5 ◇	Dbl
Pass	Pass	Pass

This time East was on lead and he also started with a heart. After that, the play went the same way and this time East-West piled up 1,400 points. So our first East-West pair ended up losing 7 International Match Points on the deal! Truly, bridge is a marvellous pastime.

Framing Turns Off-Beat Items Into Attractive Wall Hangings

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Looking for something special to put on the wall? How about the lyrics of your favorite song, the menu of your wedding dinner or a bit of old lace?

These are a few of the non-traditional decorative objects that are turning up on walls these days, according to the Professional Picture Framers Association.

Consider framing, for example, a needlepoint sampler, the menu from a special dinner, a recipe, favorite poem, famous autograph, child's artwork, award, cartoon, song lyrics, family photos, even a scorecard with your best golf score, the trade group suggests.

Hanging unusual items to personalize an office is also on the upswing. Some ideas for office wall decor include a collage of news features about your company or of mementos from a company ball team or an old company advertisement.

Some popular ideas for professional offices include colorful old stock certificates, antique maps and needlepoint pictures tied to a particular profession — a stethoscope for a doctor or scales of justice for a lawyer, for instance.

A troublesome area for some consumers is selecting an appropriate frame. The key to success is choosing a frame that complements the picture, instead of overpowering it. Keep in mind that a skimpy, too-narrow frame makes the picture seem fragile and cramped.

A frame that is too large, however, creates the impression that the work inside it is insignificant.

Normally, but not always, the frame should be in the same style as the work. Traditional paintings and other materials look best in traditional frames, while contemporary art is complemented with a less ornate frame.

There are exceptions to this rule. Framing is an art, not an exact science, and the visual impression created, not observance of rules, is the final arbiter. Museum frames for contemporary works often are quite elaborate, which emphasizes the work's importance.

A pleasing way to decorate a room is to hang a group of items. When planning such a grouping for a wall, a variety of frames is likely to add interest to the arrangement.

Grouping the individual works on the same wall gives them an importance no one of them would have individually. Some guidelines for making a pleasing group include creating a specific loose overall shape such as a rectangle, a square, an oval or a triangle.

Select at least one strong vertical and one strong horizontal, and fill in with smaller framed pictures or other objects, balancing light and dark frames and pictures so they are not all in one area.

Before hanging the group, lay it out on the floor or draw it to scale on a piece of paper.

You also can get an idea of how the group will work by tracing the framed pieces on paper, cutting them out and putting them up on the wall with tape.

The job of a professional framer is to help clients select an aesthetically pleasing frame that will also conserve the work it surrounds.

Generally, wood frames share some of the characteristics of furniture, according to John Cusano, a framer in Norwalk, Conn.

Look for well finished, blemish-free hardwood that has been glued and nailed. There are several options: the more expensive is known as museum or conservation framing and employs acid-free cotton rag paper for mats and backing. The artwork is attached with acid-free tape or glue.

A museum type of framing job usually separates artwork from the glass so they do not touch. Sometimes it is fitted with ultraviolet-resistant glass, if exposure to excessive sunlight is expected to occur. (Too much sun can fade pigments right through ordinary glass.) Glare-free glass is also available, although at about twice the cost of ordinary picture glass.

The less expensive method of framing calls for wood pulp paper which is half the price of rag paper. Labor costs are about the same.

It also is possible to create some or all of your frames yourself. Some shops offer a small savings to consumers who are willing to do some of the assembling work themselves.

For the more adventurous (and handier) individual who likes to work with wood and has home tools, an interesting project might be making a frame and then installing an art work in it.

Necessary tools include a lightweight hammer, small nail set, ruler, fine-toothed saw, nails, fine sandpaper, wood filler and glue. A miter box is necessary to make the required 45-degree angle cuts accurately and a set of four corner clamps allows for gluing the frame at one time.

Other aspects to framing artwork include selecting and cutting a paper mat, mounting the artwork onto the mat and covering the framed picture with glass and a backing. The necessary supplies are readily available at art supply outlets.

Q: In M. L. Weems' biography of George Washington, I read about Washington growing a plant called "scarcity." Do you know what this plant could be?

A: On May 21, 1788, George Washington recorded in his diary, "In my botanical garden I transplanted two roots of the scarcity plant." The plant he is referring to is mangel-wurzel, a type of beet. The botanical name for the plant is Beta vulgaris, Crassa Group. Mangel-wurzel was grown extensively in Europe as food for cattle. In this country it was also grown mainly for stock and poultry feeding, but if harvested young it was highly praised for the table. Mangel-wurzel seed are still available through J.L. Hudson Seedsman, P.O. Box 1058, Redwood City, Calif., 94064.

Q: How cold hardy is Kiwifruit?

A: Classified as a subtropical plant, the kiwifruit will not tolerate temperatures much lower than 10 degrees farenheit.

Q: Why is fall a good time for planting?

A: Fall is a good time to plant trees, shrubs, groundcovers, cool-season grasses and spring-flowring bulbs. Generally, the ground is drier than in the spring and therefore easier to work and less likely to become compacted. Soil temperature in the fall is favorable for root growth, enabling plants to establish themselves. Moderate air temperatures reduce water stress on the plants. Summer shoot growth has slowed dramatically or stopped completely, wo there is little succulent tissue to be damaged by low temperatures. Leaves will remain active in photosynthesis for some of this period, but the demand for carbohydrates for growth is less. This creates a surplus of food supplies available for producing new root growth. Also, there is a good selection of plants at garden centers and nurseries in the fall, which is another good reason to plant at this time of the year.

On The House

By ANDY LANG

It is what you do to the surface of wood before you put on the finish that determines how acceptable the finish will be.

The irregularities on the face of wood will not disappear or be hidden by a clear finish, but will be accentuated. Only when the wood looks smooth and feels smooth under your fingertips is it ready to take on a transparent coating, which can be varnish, lacquer, shellac or any of the synthetics or numerous specially formulated finishes on the market.

Sanding once was a matter of using sandpaper, with or without one of the many types of sanding blocks. Steel wool was an effective alternative, especially for certain purposes — getting into crevices, working across the grain and others.

When power sanding came along, it made the work easier and faster, requiring a different technique and stronger kinds of sandpaper.

Some professional wood finishers have never conceded that power sanding can produce the beautiful surfaces attainable by hand sanding, which they consider an art practiced only by the very skilled.

Closer to the truth is that there are times to use an electric sander and times to use sanding blocks and pads that are manipulated by hand.

The principle of sanding is that papers with coarse grits smooth rough surfaces, those with medium grits smooth fairly level surfaces and those with fine grits produce the extra sleekness necessary to achieve a delicate finish.

The cheapest sandpaper is flint, sometimes used for rough work and also for the light sanding of softwood. But flint paper does not cut as well nor last as long as the other papers.

Garnet is more popular because it does a good job of cutting and is tougher than flint.

Aluminium oxide is a synthetic abrasive that is very hard and very durable and can be used for hand or power sanding.

Silicon carbide, hard and black, is used a lot for wet-or-dry sanding with waterproof backing. It is suitable for sanding glass and, when used with very light hand pressure, is excellent for getting a very smooth finish on final coats.

In addition to the different types of abrasives, there are varieties of coarseness. The extra course kinds are sometimes used for removing paints and varnishes. As we go down the line, the finer the grits, the better they are for sanding between coats and on the final coat.

Another difference in sandpapers is the amount of spaces between the grits. Those which have fewer abrasive particles are called open-coated and less inclined to clog the paper.

If the paper is wrapped around a block, it affects the result. The more resilient the block, the easier it is to get precision results.

In fact, there are cases where it is best to guide the paper across the surface of the wood simply by using the tips of the fingers. Care must be exercised with this type of sanding, since you must not apply more pressure with one finger than with another.

Sanding should always be with the grain of the wood. Sanding across the grain sometimes will produce what appears to be a perfect result, but light scratches will make their appearance when the finish has been applied.

Many wood finishers believe the best possible finish can be attained only if the wood is cleaned and sealed after it has been sanded.

The cleaning can be done with a tack rag, which can be bought or made simply by dousing it with turpentine and wringing it out. The tackiness that occurs enables dust and grit to be wiped out of the wood without raising a lot of dust.

Those who advocate the use of a sealer say that it enables the wood to accept a stain or other finish without too much absorption, thus preventing an uneven result. You can buy a sealer or make one by mixing denatured alcohol with an equal amount of shellac.

But some finishing materials do not accept this combination too well, so read the directions on the sealer container very carefully before purchasing it. For instance, a polyurethane sealer is usually required under a polyurethane finish.

Here's The Answer

Q. — I soon will be getting aluminum gutters for my house. There are none there at present and I have had trouble with rainwater flooding the area alongside the house. I intend to install them myself, but I have never worked with aluminum and if any cutting is necessary, how should the aluminum be cut. I am thinking about making a cut along the horizontal part of the gutter. Won't it bend if I try to cut it with a hackshaw — or should I use some other kind of saw?

A. — A hacksaw is fine for making such a cut. However, place a wood block inside the part to be cut. Then, when you cut through with a hacksaw, the wood will provide the necessary support. Go right through the metal and the wood. When you are through, the edges of the aluminum may be a bit rough. Smooth, them out with a file.

Q. — I expect to put a dry well in my backyard to handle the rain that comes down two downspouts on that side of the house. My plan is to run underground piping from the bottom of the downspouts to the dry well. Should I use perforated pipe or solid pipe?

A. — By all means, use solid pipe. In some areas, you are not permitted to use perforated pipe or drain tile, as it is sometimes called. You should check with your local authorities to see what is allowed. If perforated pipe is permitted, it is usually when there is no septic tank on the ground.

Q. — I have been told that I can make my own flagstones, which I want to use on a long pathway at the rear of my house. Is it difficult and can a do-it-yourselfer handle it?

A. — It is not difficult and it is something most people can do even if they have had no experience with concrete. Make wooden forms about 2 inches deep. Brush on any kind of oil and set the whole thing on roofing paper. After this has been done, mix the concrete, either from scratch or with the ready-mixed kind that requires only adding water. Pour the mixture into the forms, wait two or three days and you are set to install the flagstones. They should be set into dug-out spaces which have been filled with 3 inches of gravel and 1 inch of sand.

The stones should be about a ¼ inch apart. The joints can be filled with sand or with a mixture of sand and Portland cement.

Using Your Pumpkin

By The Associated Press

Pumpkin comes from the French word "Pompkin" and means "cooked by the sun." The approach of Halloween brings visions of pumpkins, orange on the garden vine, market shelf or roadside stand.

Both children and adults can enjoy using pumpkins for decorative and craft purposes.

If you raise pumpkins in your garden, let your youngsters and friends select one and inscribe his or her name on it before the shell is completely hardened. First mark the letters with a pencil, then use a nail or knife to scratch the words or letters into the fruit. As the pumpkins mature, the letters will form a callus, like raised printing, and by harvest time, they will be easy to identify.

On very large pumpkins, older children can inscribe slogans such as "Happy Halloween," "Welcome to Our House" and "Watch Out for Goblins." They are a decorative addition for your doorstep when trick-or-treaters arrive.

If you want to paint words or designs on your pumpkins, acrylic paint works well on the waxy surface.

Children have little trouble painting black eyes, a nose and mouth on small Jack-O-Lantern pumpkins. Older kids can use additional colors to fashion more elaborate witches, owls, cats or goblins. The pumpkins' shapes and stems may suggest other designs.

However, when buying pumpkins, purchase them for their intended use — eating or decorating.

Empire Brush One Of The Largest Privately Owned Brush Companies

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

From its 375,000-square-foot manufacturing facility in Greenville, Empire Brushes Inc. supplies up to 700 different products used to sweep and scrub households across America.

"We basically make household brooms, brushes and mops for use in the kitchen, bathroom or garage," Joseph Gantz, company president, said. "We also make some brushes for the commercial field."

Empire Brushes has over 5 million brushes in inventory for dusting, sweeping, mopping, washing, painting, polishing, basting and grooming, according to Gantz, who said the firm operates about 70 brush machines.

"We don't really run on an assembly line production methodology," he said. "Each brush is made on a specific piece of equipment — one or two at a time. Then they are finished, packaged and put into the warehouse."

The firm distributes the bulk of its products inside the country, said Gantz, the company's president since 1982.

"Most of the brushes are sold in the United States," he said. "We do maybe 1 (percent) to 2 percent of our business overseas. We sell nationally, and we're pretty evenly distributed around the country based on population sizes."

Joseph Gantz emigrated from Austria-Hungary in 1905 and established the Jos. Gantz Factory in 1909 in New York City. He learned the brushmaking trade in his homeland.

The company's name was changed to Empire Brush Works in 1921 and to Empire Brushes Inc. in 1946.

By 1919, the manufacturer had outgrown the premises in New York and decided to move the factory to Port Chester, N.Y. In 1931, with about 70 employees and 18 automatic brush machines, Gantz opened a second plant in the village of Port Chester.

After the death of Joseph Gantz in 1945, his eldest son, Jack, became president of the company. Jack Gantz then expanded product lines in response to consumer needs.

In 1953, Empire acquired a woodworking factory in Meridian, Miss., which today processes wood handles. Empire also acquired the American Brush Corp. in Chicago, a paint brush company it has since sold.

In 1964, Empire began building a plant in Greenville on N.C. 13. The plant, which originally consisted of 55,000 square feet, has grown to 375,000 square feet and serves as the firm's corporate headquarters.

Buying raw materials from around the world, Empire is a vertical-production operation. It makes broom handles, brush blocks, the brushes themselves and does its own packaging.

As one of the largest privately owned brush companies in the world, Empire Brush, which employs about 500 people, continues to grow, according to Gantz, who said the company has stepped up marketing efforts.

"From a production point of view, we have broadened our product line," he said. "We have some new processes, but, by and large, we haven't done anything unique. We have upgraded our equipment where possible, and there are always some upgrades that come along.

"From a marketing point of view, we've increased our product line and increased our promotional activity in the trade and that's accounting for some of the additional growth."

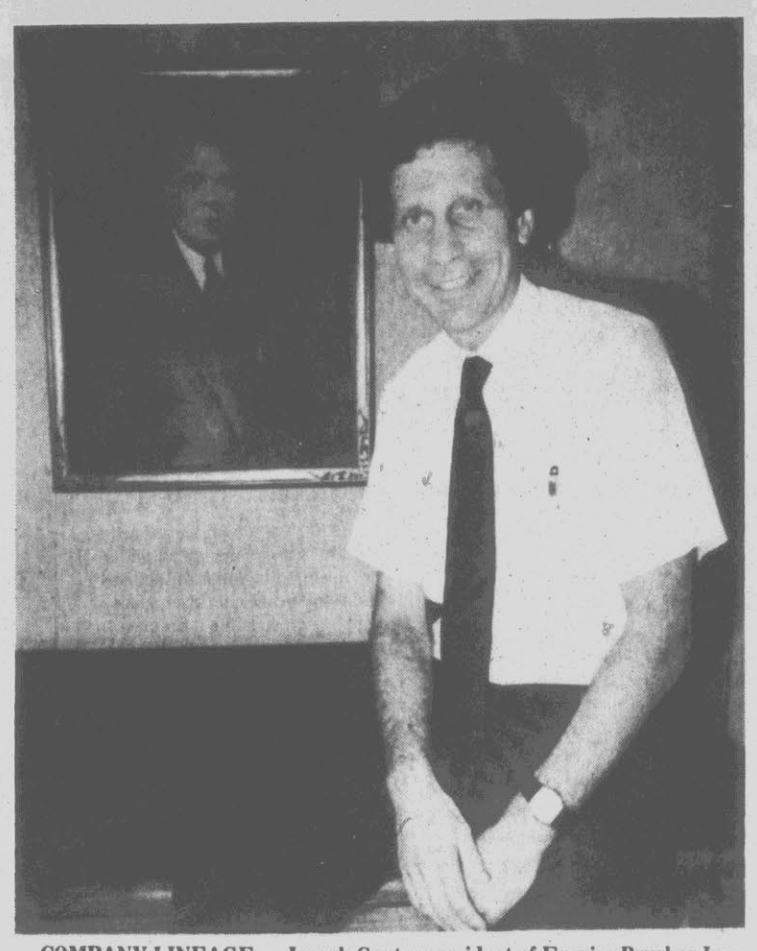

Although the brush market is "reasonably steady," Gantz said the firm is dependent upon the efforts of retailers.

"The consumer goods business is driven by the economy and by the willingness of the large chains to promote our product by putting ads in the newspapers," he said. "To the extent they do that, sales will go up, the extent that they won't do that, sales will come down.

"There's a base level where you should be able to sustain yourself, but as far as growth goes, you really need a healthy economy."

The company, one of the first to move into Greenville's Industrial Park, recently celebrated its 20th anniversary in the community.

"Greenville's grown a great deal, and we're proud to be a part of that growth," Gantz said. "We hope we have contributed to it."

Lloyd's Chief Says Economy Healthy

RALEIGH (AP) — The head of Lloyd's of London said that North Carolina is a strong insurance market because of its healthy economy and stable legal system.

"The economic importance of the Carolinas and Georgia is something to which we have to pay very much attention," Peter N. Miller, chairman of the 300-year-old insurance trading house, told 300 business and government leaders Friday.

Miller, on the final leg of a 10-day U.S. visit to drum up business for Lloyd's, said the trading house considered North Carolina to have a "legal regime where you get sensible (court) awards, predictable awards and you don't get judicial rewriting of insurance policy conditions. It is a conservative, responsible regime."

Comptroller Clears NCNB Advice Plan

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The U.S. Comptroller of the Currency has quietly approved NCNB Corp.'s plans to offer investment advice to brokerage customers, an NCNB executive says.

NCNB Securities Inc. President Charles Smith said the controller's decision allows NCNB and other commercial banks to compete on equal footing with full-service securities firms.

Brian Smith, a Washington lawyer, called the decision "very important" in permitting other banks to offer investment advice.

"It's a log on the already raging fire" that is ending the separation of banking and securities businesses mandated by the Glass-Steagall Act of 1933, Smith said.

The comptroller's action was disclosed in a June letter to NCNB. Neither the government nor the banking company announced the decision, which was released to other banks this summer but remained unpublicized until a story in the American Banker newspaper in late September.

Since the June decision, NCNB has opened or converted 16 offices in the Carolinas and Florida, including two in Charlotte, to full-service brokerage offices, Smith said.

The company has also hired away an undisclosed number of brokers from other firms, bringing many of their clients with them, he said.

The full-service brokerage is "doing quite well," Smith said.

The letter specifies these new powers:

— Offering of investment advice and research to customers. NCNB is using investment analysis from its trust division and from outside research firms, which NCNB won't identify.

— Paying brokers commissions for trades generated, as well as salaries.

Business Activity Rises Slightly

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The level of business activity in North Carolina registered a 0.3 percent increase in August, according to the First Wachovia Business Index.

Over the past year, the index has gained 4.4 percent.

The rise in the index was due primarily to a drop of 4.4 percent in initial claims for unemployment insurance, gains in nonagricultural and manufacturing employment, and an increase in the average manufacturing workweek. Residential building permits declined in August.

Economist Sees No Single Magic Potion For Farms

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just about any agricultural pulse feeler has a quick diagnosis and remedy at hand for what ails the American farmer, often involving huge doses of something or other to take away those nagging backaches and occasional bankruptcy blues.

In reality, says Agriculture Department economist Clark Edwards, there may be a number of ailments going on at the same time, each requiring its own dosages. But the welfare of the whole patient must be kept in mind and restored to proper balance.

Edwards says U.S. agriculture "is starting to grow again" after faltering in the early 1980s when exports for some commodities dropped and when some financial institutions serving agriculture got into trouble.

"Policies to help expand the farm sector often focus on one facet of the problem at a time," says Edwards. "One group wants to increase exports, another to adopt new technology and yet another to develop the natural resource base."

Such voices may sound discordant, in conflict with each other, but in a way each approach is correct, he said. And at times a single remedy has helped.

"But no single growth strategy can be successful over time if it permits the many-sided environment in which farmers work to get out of balance," Edwards said.

As a sort of screening process to identify the problem, Edwards boiled the complexity of agricultural growth down into five categories: resource availability, technology, demand for food and farm products, location of agricultural enterprises and the economic institutions that affect farmers.

Only demand and institutions gave farmers major problems in the early 1980s, according to Edwards. But there will have to be a balance among all five for growth to endure through the 1990s, he said.

The demand for farm products emerged as a problem when the U.S. export market shrank steadily in the early 1980s, following rapid growth in the demand for big-ticket commodities such as corn, wheat and soybeans during the 1970s.

It was this shrinkage, Edwards said, that was "a major cause of agriculture's recent financial difficulties." In earlier periods, he said, large changes in demand were usually associated with wartime needs, while domestic growth in demand for farm products usually is steady and reliable.

"Institutions affecting farm credit became troubled during the early 1980s," Edwards said. "The subsequent increase in credit costs helped put farmers in a cost-price squeeze. Earlier, these financial institutions contributed to agricultural growth by supplying the capital to consolidate farms and adopt new technologies."

Edwards, writing in the October issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine, said a mixture of public and private institutions were involved over many years in the agricultural growth process.

"Among these were the farm price support programs introduced in the mid-1930s, which affected farm size, farm numbers, enterprise combinations and the rate of technological change," he said.

Edwards added: "Then these programs became part of the problem by contributing to higher prices and a reduced level of exports in the early 1980s. However, recent changes in the programs have made farm commodities more price competitive again, through lower price supports and export enhancement. Other export-related institutions include regulations on quotas, tariffs and subsidies."

Technology was a "driving force in agricultural growth" in the middle third of the 20th century, giving those individuals and countries who quickly adopted the new technologies a comparative advantage over others, he said. A continued technical advance is in prospect for American farmers.

"One concern is whether this source of growth can move too quickly, and increase output so rapidly that it cannot be absorbed by the market at prices that provide adequate return to the farm sector," Edwards said.

Resources available to American farmers were a basis for growth from colonial times through the first third of this century, and still are in a number of countries, he said.

"The United States could double exports and feed its growing population during the next few decades without additioal natural resources," Edwards said. "By continuing to add capital inputs to existing natural resources and farming more intensively, producers have now reached a stage in which the problem is conservation of the natural resources available."

Location or "regional adjustments" of agricultural production are another way of responding to economic changes, including what Edwards sees has been "a tendency for the acreage in most crops to decrease in lower-yielding states and increase in higher-yielding states."

The development of profitable and productive farms close to major cities in order to gain access to marketing, processing and consumers has been one such example, he said.

Thus, the recent major bottlenecks to agricultural growth have been in the demand for U.S. commodities and in the institutions that affect exports and finance.

Sisters Met Challenge For Church

Sisters Tucker and Frances Smith each met a challenge by crocheting pictures for Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church in Greenville.

The selection of Frances Smith was "The Lord's Prayer," which is displayed near the ladies parlor. "It took four months to do. Of course, I did not work on it every day. I followed a pattern which I found in Nashville, Tenn. It was given to the church in honor of my sisters," said Miss Smith.

She also needlepointed a bell pull with Chrismon designs — crown, cross, fish, etc. — on white Damask using gold thread for the ladies parlor.

In addition to crocheting, Miss Smith does needlepoint, bargello, candlewicking, knitting and "a lot of sewing." She has been crocheting and knitting since she was 6 or 7 years old. "I started with my mother, who was a semi-invalid — but she could knit and crochet," said Miss Smith.

"I generally follow a pattern. Sometimes I do alter or change it. I get ideas from magazines or from leaflets I pick up," she said.

"Tucker and I do work on things together. When we get into complicated work, one reads directions and the other one does the work. We have worked on a sweater for several weeks. Of course, it was not an eight-hour a day thing. Of all the sweaters I have done, I have not kept one of them for myself. I give then to nieces and great-nieces," said Miss Smith.

Frances Smith hand paints china.

Tucker Smith crocheted "The Last Supper" which hangs in the chapel. The picture was given in memory of Mr. and Mrs. D.S. Smith.

Like her sister, she knits, crochets and does needlepoint. She learned knitting and crocheting with their mother and she, too, follows a pattern. "I don't paint china and do very little sewing," she said.

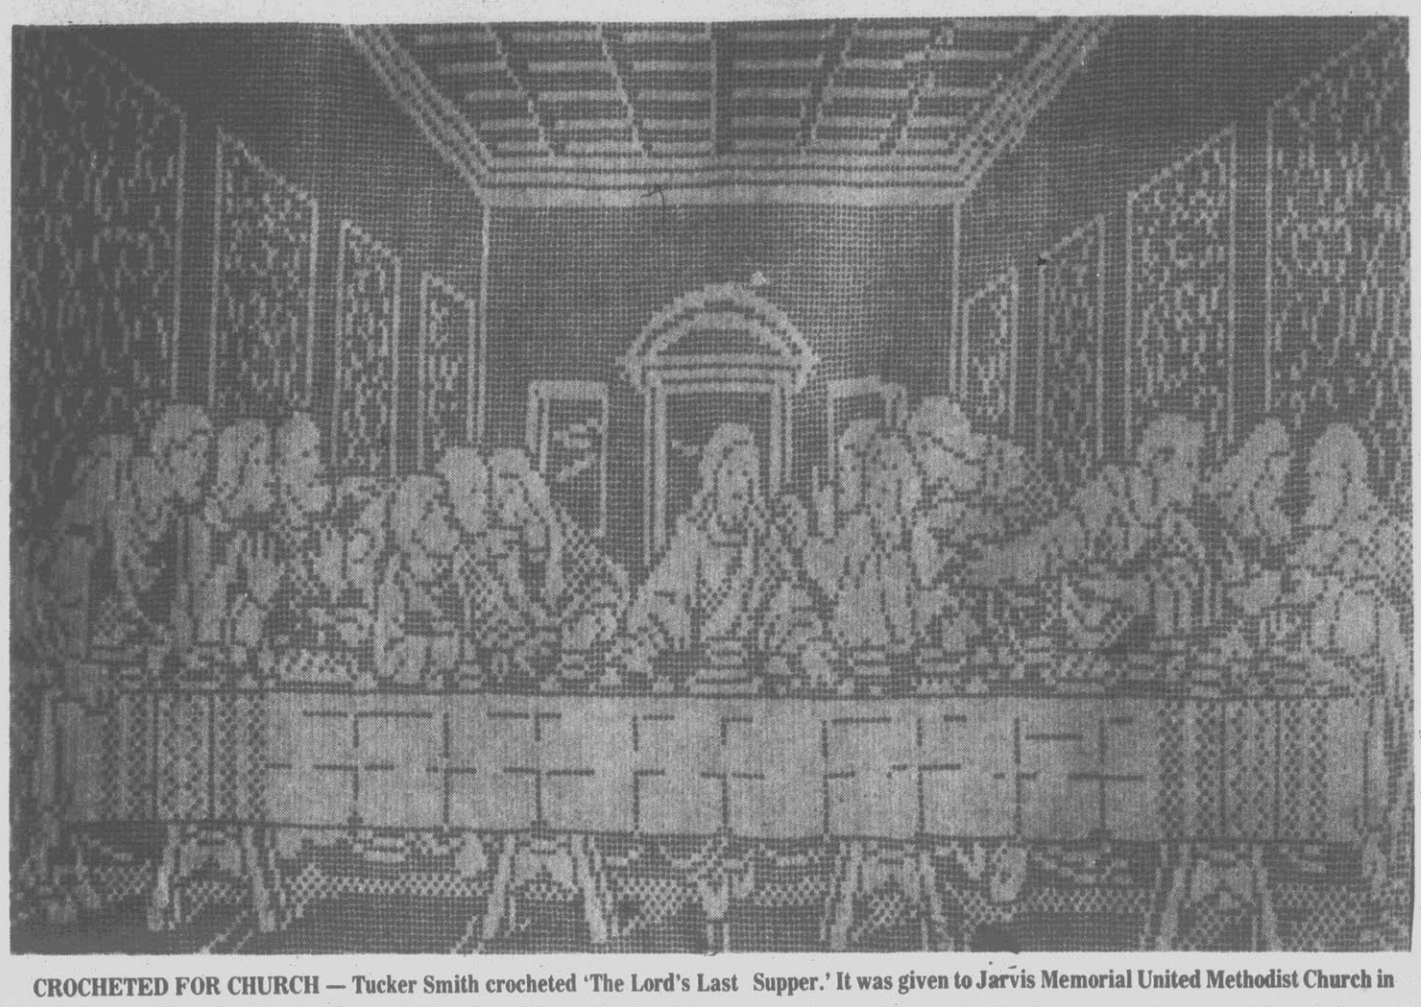

"Our biggest problem is keeping up with our thimbles, needles, crochet hooks and accessories," said Frances Smith.

The sisters enjoy traveling and reading. They are members of Delta Kappa Gamma and Retired School Personnel. "We have a little group that has been going out for dinner each Friday night for 25 years," said Frances Tucker.

There are two years to the day between their ages. "Out of eight children, three had the same birthdays, Nov. 20. Our great-grandparents' home and property were located where Minges Coliseum and Ficklen Stadium are — it was known as Ringgold property," said Frances Smith.

They were born and reared in Greenville, attended St. Mary's College and graduated from East Carolina Teachers College. Frances obtained a master's degree and taught math at J.H. Rose High School while Tucker taught special education in Washington, N.C.

They reared their nieces, Frances and Virginia Smith, who came to live with them at ages 3 months and 3 years.

Needlework Gives 'Feeling Of Service'

Anna Belle Sugg of Greenville was introduced to needlework while visiting her sister in Matthews, Va.

"My niece had a needlework shop, The Squirrel's Nest, and after dinner out came the needlework. I was told by them if I was going to visit for a week that it would be very boring if I didn't learn needlework. I was intrigued that I could apply some creativity to needlepoint in the sense of designing what I did instead of just filling in the background of another's design. Filling in the background is good therapy for arthritic fingers; but designing and creating new ideas on canvas is exciting," she said.

For several years Mrs. Sugg worked only on creative animals, pillows and personal things but then became interested in church needlework. "I had a great feeling of service when I went into the church aspect of needlework. I felt a lot of churches were cold and needed some warmth," she said.

"Today most people don't understand the meaning of Christian symbols. Most Protestant churches don't have needlepoint in them — but now they are beginning to more and more. They not only teach adults but teach children. Before long, I was designing paraments, palls and wedding knealers for a number of churches," said Mrs. Sugg.

Paraments are ornamental, ecclesiastical cloths used in churches for adding the dimension of color and sight into worship. The principal colors in use today are purple, white, red and green.

"I felt a need for color at the pulpit area of our church (First Presbyterian Church) to unite the magnificant hues in the windows, so I designed and stitched four paraments particularly for the sanctuary," said Mrs. Sugg.

Two things of importance to Mrs. Sugg are the small crosses that bordered three paraments, each representing the individual crosses of the people as they worship. Cushions in the church narthex were designed by Mrs. Sugg and stitched by women of the church. "They convey the story of creation and spreading of the gospel throughout the world," she said.

The paraments in Dinwiddie Chapel at Peace College in Raleigh were also created and drawn by Mrs. Sugg.

"When designing, the first thing I have is an idea or subject. If the subject is unfamiliar, it calls for research. From there I pick up pencil, paper and water colors and do my design. When I am satified with it, I transfer it to canvas. Free design is easy to transpose but where counted stitches are concerned, it takes a long time and it's hard on the eyes. Further work consists of determining the amount of yarn for your canvas," she said.

"While in college, I studied pencil drawing, charcoal and oil — but when I became involved with needlepoint, I found that water color was the easiest and quickest way to portray ideas for needlepoint. It was when I started this medium, I realized another door had opened. Now I find pleasure in landscapes and flowers. I do not pretend to be a real artist in this field. I dabble in oils and acrylics also," she said.

Mrs. Sugg's father, Dr. Robert S. Boyd, was a Presbyterian minister and was called to Greenville from Columbus, Ga. At that time, Mrs. Sugg had finished two years at Peace College and was thinking of going to New York to art school.

"Instead I stayed in Greenville to get a degree at East Carolina and my whole life turned around. I married a Greenville native, Harding Sugg. During the years we had three girls and a son. One daughter followed in her grandfather's footsteps and became a Presbyterian minister who is married to a Presbyterian minister," she said.

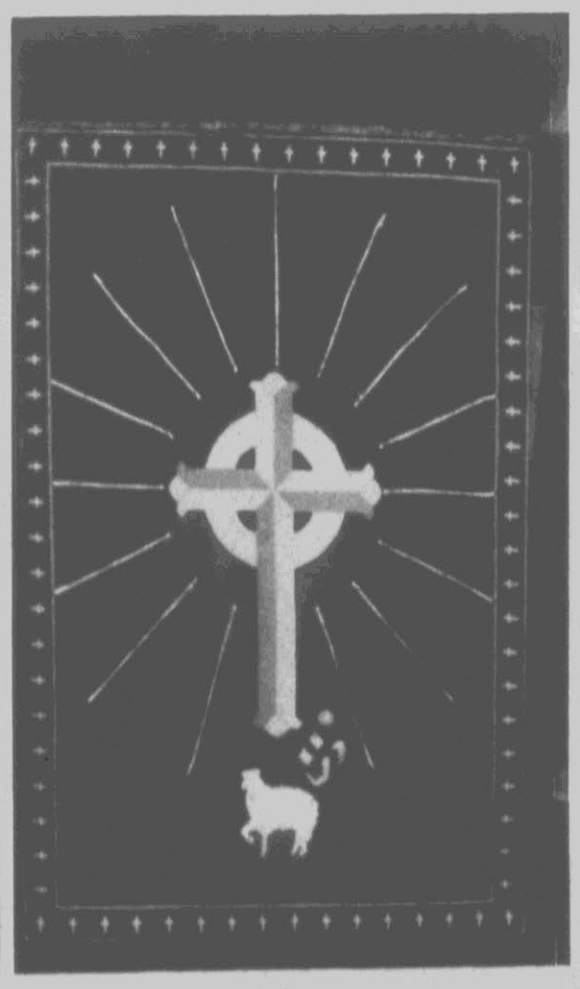

"Through the years, I kept painting and drawing off and on — but there was little time for that while rearing four children. It was after they were grown ... (that) I became interested in needlepoint. My usual activities were restricted and I realized that one door is never closed that the Lord does not open another if you will just open your eyes and see it — hence needlepoint — something that was absolutely foreign to my way of life," she said.

"I'm not a flashy, modern painter — but bright and strong colors appeal to me. Perhaps that's one of the reasons I was drawn to church needlework. So much that I had seen had been in pastel hues and tones that they were lifeless. I started out with bright, strong colors that expressed a message emphatically. For instance, so many of the green paraments in the church were dull and drab; even the gold was unimportant. They offended me. I want green to express life, growth, joy and regeneration — they take a bright strong color," she said.

"Reading is another important part of my life. My husband enjoys it as mucy as I. We are avid mystery readers. It's a family joke, I get seven books every three weeks, one for each day of the week," she said.

"There is nothing boring about my life, there is always some thing to do," said Mrs. Sugg.

CHURCH PARAMENTS — Anna Belle Sugg of Greenville designed and stitched four paraments for the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church, located in Greenville.

For 16 Years, Sisters Have Struggled For Reunion

(EDITOR'S NOTE — An Associated Press correspondent based in Israel recently went on an assignment to the Soviet Union, where she came upon half the story of two Jewish sisters who have been trying to reunite for 16 years. On her return to Israel, correspondent Masha Hamilton got the other half. This is her report.)

By MASHA HAMILTON
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — In the Soviet Union, Ida Nudel has wrestled with the KGB secret police, lived in Siberian exile, gone without food, spent time behind bars and survived months without human contact — all because she wants to join her sister in Israel.

In Israel, her sister, Elana Fridman, fights to get her out. She has traveled abroad, constantly hoping something will work to bring Ida to Israel.

I met Ida Nudel while on an assignment in Moscow. I talked to her sister in Israel.

"To deprive me of my only living relative for so many years is the worst possible kind of torture," the 56-year-old Ms. Nudel told me while she was on a rare visit to Moscow. "Sometimes I don't think I can stand it anymore."

In Israel, Mrs. Fridman, 54, told me: "I have neglected my husband and my only child. Our home is not a home." She wiped tears from her eyes. "But what can I do? I am Ida, and she is me."

Mrs. Fridman lives in Rehovot near Tel Aviv in a home that has a room with a bed and a desk set aside for her sister.

Ms. Nudel has applied for emigration and has been turned down more than half a dozen times since 1970, most recently in March. But she remains optimistic.

"Just like the doctor says, as long as the patient is still alive there is hope," she said with a laugh.

She said Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's new policy of glasnost (openness) might help her, noting other prominent Jewish activists such as Natan Sharansky have been allowed to emigrate since Gorbachev came to power in March 1985.

"I am not a human being any more to the Soviets. I am just an object for sale," Ms. Nudel said. "When Gorbachev is willing to sell me and the offering price is right, I will go."

A thin woman with eyes that are intense behind her thick glasses, Ms. Nudel has long been known as te "Guardian Angel" of Jewish prisoners of conscience in the Soviet Union.

For many years she has regularly sent letters and gifts to dozens of jailed Soviet Jews, including some she had never even met, and has provided moral and financial help for their families.

A movie starring Liv Ullmann has been made about her life and she was visited by actress Jane Fonda in 1983. She was also nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize this year.

"I don't want the Nobel," she said, "I want an exit visa to Israel." Ms. Nudel and her sister shared a bed as children in the Black Sea city of Novorossiysk and later shared many of the same friends in high school in Moscow.

They grew even closer after the deaths of their father in World War II and their mother in 1963, and lived together even after Elana's marriage to Aryeh Fridman, a Moscow agronomist.

"We were always together," Mrs. Fridman recalled. "The first word out of my son's mouth was not 'Mother,' it was 'Ida.'"

But the two sisters parted in 1971 at Moscow's Sheremetevo Airport, when Mrs. Fridman, her husband and son left for Israel. Ms. Nudel had been denied a visa.

"We believed it was a bureaucratic mistake and Ida would be able to join us quickly," said Mrs. Fridman, who wears her gray hair pulled back in a ponytail like her sister. "Had I known then what would happen, I never would have left."

Ms. Nudel worked as a bookkeeper at the Moscow Institute of Hydrology and Microbiological Synthesis before applying to emigrate. She said she had no access to classified information but Soviet officials told her they denied her a visa because she may have overheard a state secret on her job.

"I never overheard a secret," Ms. Nudel said. "I never believed that excuse."

It was only after her sister's departure that Ms. Nudel joined other Jewish activists who staged street protests and hunger strikes to seek permission to emigrate.

In Israel, Mrs. Fridman began a letter-writing and fund-raising campaign and traveled to the United States and Europe to keep her sister in the public eye.

She said she felt guilty for denying attention to her husband and neglecting her son Yaacov.

"When we lived in Moscow, we all danced around Yaacov. But when we got here without Ida, I just hung a key around his neck and that was the end of it," Mrs. Fridman said, referring to the boy as a latchkey child.

"I ruined the life of my family and sometimes I only kept going on all fours. Ida would tell me, leave it, leave it, go on with your life. But all my thoughts were with her. I've missed her terribly."

In 1978, Ms. Nudel ignored warnings of friends and took a bold step. She hung a banner from the balcony of her Moscow apartment.

"KGB, Give Me My Visa," it said.

She was arrested and sentenced to four years exile in Siberia. The charge was "malicious hooliganism" against the Soviet government.

Previously, Ms. Nudel had served brief terms in jail for participating in protests and hunger strikes.

In Siberia, she struggled to feed and clothe herself. She was under constant surveillance by the KGB but was permitted infrequent visitors. Ms. Nudel said she still suffers heart problems that began during that period.

After her release from Siberia in March 1982, Ms. Nudel was denied permission to live in Moscow and authorities sold her apartment. She was granted a permit to live only in the impovershed rural Moldavian town of Bendery in the southwest corner of the Soviet Union near the Romanian border.

Ms. Nudel lives there still in a two-room house without a telephone. Her sewage runs into a hole in the ground outside, she said, and once a month has to shovel it out and bury it.

"I prepare myself spirtually for days for that," she said.

All her belongings, including books, furniture, mementos, photographs and most of her clothing, were boxed up by friends while she was in exile and shipped to Israel.

"Now I'm living as a peasant," she said.

Although she is not officially restricted to Bendery, Ms. Nudel said, she is frequently barred from travel by being taken by agents off buses or trains or denied tickets at the window.

When she tried to leave her home 11 months ago to travel to Moscow, two KGB agents dragged her by her hands and feet off the bus, she said.

"They dropped me on the ground. I lay there silent for a minute because I was so humiliated. Then I stood up and they pushed me in a police car."

"Is this glasnost?" she said she asked the agents.

But Ms. Nudel acknowledged Gorbachev had eased some restrictions. She noted she had been able to make her latest trip to Moscow unhindered.

"The main worry is, how long will glasnost last? Will it be long enough for me to get out?"

Retiring Rank Is Important To Some

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to a wonderful man for more than 50 years. My problem is that he will not face up to the fact that he is not going to live forever.

He has made no provisions for a cemetery lot. He won't even discuss it. I know nothing about his business, or his wishes in the event of his sudden demise. We are both in fairly good health, but now that we are approaching our late 70s we need to discuss these matters, but he refuses. To make matters even more ridiculous, he is a lawyer. Abby, what is wrong with my husband? And what can I do about it? — BEWILDERED IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR BEWILDERED: Nothing is wrong with your husband; like most of us, he doesn't want to face his own mortality. And this is what you should do about it: When you both have plenty of time, put your hand in his and say: "Darling, we have been blessed with many years together, but nothing is forever, and one day, one of us must leave the other. Should you go first, do you realize how helpless, confused and utterly bewildered I will be? I know nothing about your wishes. Do you want to be buried in a family plot — perhaps near your parents? And do you want me to be buried beside you when my time comes? Perhaps you prefer cremation. Many do these days. We need to talk to our clergy person (if you have one) and/or a mortician who will explain all the options.

"Have you made a will? Probably not, because you've never asked me to make one, and that is something we both should do.

"If you love me, you will not leave me with a mess of unfinished business.

"As a lawyer, you surely are aware of how important it is to have all these things settled now while we are both of sound mind and body.

"I may go first. And if I do, I should have a will. So let's discuss what shall be done with our property, our personal possessions or whatever we have to leave behind. Even if we have little, there may be debts and obligations that will have to be honored.

"So, darling, before my time or yours is up, let's make our plans. I love you and hope these plans will not be needed for a long time, but just as sure as we were put on this earth, we are going to depart from it.

"Now, let's talk about it, then put it all in writing with a trusted lawyer to guide us. Even the finest doctors need doctors. And lawyers engage other lawyers, too, you know."

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that so many retirees (especially colonels) sign their names "John Jones, Col., Ret."? What's so great about being a retired colonel that this unimportant fact must be made known to all of us ordinary retirees? — JANE DOE, PH.D., RETIRED

DEAR JANE DOE: The fact that Mr. Jones is a retired colonel may be unimportant to you, but it's not unimportant to him. Rank is not easy to come by, and if he's earned a chicken on his shoulder, let him crow — and take the chip off yours.

DEAR ABBY: Seventeen years ago, when I was 18, I had a brief love affair with "Billy Bob," who was also 18 at the time. I became pregnant and his parents paid my hospital bill on the condition that I would seek no further support from them or their son.

With the loving support of my family, I kept my baby boy. When "Jackie" was 7 months old, I ran into a high school sweetheart who had just come back from Vietnam. We fell in love and married four months later, and he added his name on Jackie's birth certificate. (In our state this procedure was less expensive than adoption.)

Now that Jackie is nearing adulthood, don't you think he has the right to know the truth about his parentage? Billy Bob still lives in this area. He's married and has a family of his own, but I've never contacted him, and he never contacted me.

By telling Jackie who his biological father is, I know I run the risk of opening a can of worms, but some people already know the truth, and I would rather have Jackie hear it from me than someone else.

Do I need Billy Bob's permission to tell Jackie who his real father is? And if I should decide to tell him, could Billy Bob seek parental rights after all these years? — NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: I think you should tell Jackie who his biological father is, and the sooner the better. You don't need Billy Bob's permission to disclose the truth, but I advise you to let him know that you plan to do so. I doubt if he would seek parental rights after all these years, since he has ignored all parental responsibilities. But consult a lawyer to make sure.

DEAR ABBY: I have a confession to make. You have been my "psychiatrist" for years.

Whenever I became discouraged, I'd spend hours pouring out my heart to you. But I never mailed a single letter!

Then after I started to feel better, I'd get the letter out and read it, and I was amazed at how much insight I would derive from what I had written. Then suddenly, I found that my problems were not as overwhelming as I perceived them to be.

Thanks, Abby, for being such a good friend to me through the years. — GRATEFUL

DEAR GRATEFUL: Glad to be of help. However, I didn't help you — you helped yourself by zeroing in on your problems and putting them in perspective.

Program Challenges Students

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Lehigh University's manufacturing systems engineering (MSE) graduate program, in 1985 judged the best in the nation, is rigid enough for even the brightest students.

But for Gary Behm, deaf at birth, the Lehigh program he enrolled in last January poses several challenges less motivated pupils would balk at.

Like many of the students in the 12-month program, Gary comes from industry. But the senior associate engineer for IBM, Manassas, Va., comes not only with a hearing handicap but also with a baby he and his wife — also deaf — recently welcomed into the world.

And although Lehigh has a policy of offering equal educational opportunities to qualified handicapped people, Gary's case was a new one that required special attention.

First, he needed an interpreter, someone to accompany him to classes to deliver lectures in sign language. Gary reads lips, but he can't catch everything that's said, especially when a professor turns his head toward a blackboard or projection screen.

In 1983 IBM provided $2 million grants for Lehigh and four other U.S. universities to develop graduate curricula in manufacturing systems engineering. They agreed to pay for an interpreter for Gary, as well as his tuition, books, salary and living expenses.

The search for an interpreter reached as far as Lancaster before Nancy Abreu was located. She had worked as an interpreter at several universities and agreed to assist Gary.

Once a week, Gary and Nancy meet at lunch to review new signs made necessary by the technical nature of Lehigh's program. Signs for words and phrases like "robotics" and "hierarchical control" are added regularly to their sign-language vocabulary.

Gary's professors have adjusted. Dr. Mikell P. Groover, professor of industrial engineering, allows Nancy to shadow him as he writes across a blackboard so Gary can focus simultaneously on Nancy's signs and what Groover is writing and saying.

Groover says he makes an effort to face Gary during classes and in individual meetings, yet he sees Gary's handicap as formidable in the grueling course of study.

"He's managed not only to cope, but also to succeed on the job, in school and now in the MSE program," says Groover. "He's a remarkable person."

While an undergraduate electrical engineering major at Rochester Institute of Technology, Gary met his wife, Jeanne, a business major. He studied hard, got good grades, participated in a General Motors Corp. work-study program in manufacturing, and received several job offers upon graduation.

She wore a halo of silk roses accented with pearl sprays attached to a fingertip illusion veil trimmed with lace.

The honor attendant wore a mauve tea-length dress of lace over satin. The bodice featured a V-back with full skirt and scalloped hemline. She carried a long-stemmed mum, statice and baby's breath with mauve and dusty rose streamers. Souvenirs Are Items Never Given

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

I've been home from vacation for over a week now, and the dining room table is still littered with souvenirs.

Call me an old softie, but I always like to bring back some little memento from a country I have visited for those back home who might not get there.

"Did you give the silk kimono to your mother yet?" asked my husband.

"I'm not giving her the silk kimono," I said. "I told you that. I got to thinking about how she gets dressed the moment she rolls out of bed. Besides, it's my color. So I'm keeping it."

"That's right," he said, "you bought the tea set for her."

"I did and I didn't. I don't have a nice tea set and besides, I heard her say once that tea upsets her stomach. Don't you think it will look wonderful on a tray next to the toaster in our kitchen?"

"So, you're going with the wood block print."

"I was until I got to thinking you had to have been there to appreciate all the work that goes into wood blocks. Besides, I've got just the spot for it in the living room."

"You're right. She'll love the ivory necklace," he said.

"You really think so? I don't think Mother has the chest for it. I thought I'd keep that for myself. I'm leaning toward a T-shirt."

"I thought you bought those for your aunts."

"We never see them so I kept three for myself and decided to give each of them a pair of chopsticks."

"Smart idea. They're good ones and they were expensive."

"On the other hand, I might have a dinner party with a theme some night. Maybe I'll give them a Christmas ornament and a brochure on the history of the silkworm."

"They'll be choked up."

"What kind of a crack is that! On second thought, I'll keep all the T-shirts and give Mother a fan."

"I thought you were giving the fans to the nice lady who watered your plants and the neighbor who brought in the mail."

"They're down to boxes of matches from the hotel. Look, it's not how much something costs ... it's the thought that counts."

"So, you're still looking at the fan for your mother?"

I took the fan out of the box and opened it. It would just fit into my purse and you never knew when it would get stuffy and I'd use it. I saw my husband looking at me.

"Is that the best you can do for a woman who has given you life, raised you and stood by you during the good times and the bad times of your life?"

I threw in a panda bear key chain.

Zoo Vet Deals With Variety

By JOSEPH CAPOZZI
The Pittsburgh Press

PITTSBURGH (AP) — He's been bitten by a monkey, kicked by a zebra and has stared an angry leopard in the face.

He's not Tarzan — or even crazy. He's Dr. Robert Wagner, veterinarian at the Pittsburgh Zoo.

"The job is real safe compared to a lot of other professions," he said.

But Wagner is "somewhat of a brave soul," according to zoo director Charles Wikenhauser. "Many of the zoo keepers are recognized by the animals," Wikenhauser said, but when the animals see the veterinarian, "they're not too friendly."

Wagner, Pittsburgh Zoo veterinarian since 1980, said: "I only take calculated risks. You can only examine an animal when it's anesthetized."

That's why he laughs when he recalls a recent incident during an operation on a leopard's infected tail. The animal started to wake up midway through the surgery.

"He was almost completely awake, and he just looked up at me with that fire look in his eyes and he gave me one of those loud growls.

"He flopped off the (operating) table and was trying to walk around. Everybody ran out of the room and here I was with this 130-pound leopard between me and the door."

He said the leopard had been just groggy enough for him to give it another shot of anesthetic, and the operation continued without incident.

Wagner says he applies the same techniques as a neighborhood veterinarian, or even a family physician, because usually there are no prescribed ways to treat exotic animals.

"You have to apply the basics. When a leopard gets sick, I think of how a house cat gets sick. Or when a monkey gets sick, I wonder what (similar symptoms) make humans get sick," he said.

EKGs, blood work, physical exams, surgery, Wagner does it all for the more than 3,000 animals and birds at the city's zoo and aviary. Whether he's tending an elephant's sore knee or performing abdominal surgery on a monkey, Wagner said, "I have to be a jack of all trades."

The key to the animals' health is the zoo's 20 keepers, he said. "They tell me (the animals') symptoms, if they're not eating or if their breath smells."

Wagner, one of only 60 full-time zoo veterinarians in North America, says he also treats Pittsburghers' exotic pets. He either makes a house call or has the animal brought to the Highland Park facility.

Center To Offer Comprehensive Program For Elderly

(EDITOR'S NOTE — With the number of retired people growing across the country, the University of North Carolina at Asheville is establishing a Center of Creative Retirement which officials say will be the most comprehensive program of its kind in the country.

By ERICA JOHNSTON

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Ben Holden thought he had it made when he retired last year. He would finally get to relax in the serene, mountain community where he had served as president of Warren Wilson College for 15 years.

There was one problem.

"I love retirement, but I miss the vacations," he joked. "I didn't know it was going to be like this."

Holden, 69, is one of more than 600,000 people over the age of 65 in North Carolina. He also is one of a handful of people on the steering committee of a leadership council for retirees sponsored by the University of North Carolina at Asheville.

The university, prompted by a booming population of senior citizens in North Carolina, is organizing a series of programs for the elderly that school officials say will be the most comprehensive of its kind in the country.

"We're looking at people in their third quarter," says Alf Canon, acting director of the Center For Creative Retirement. "We hear from people who are 65, or maybe as young as 50, who have decided to move into a secondary career, or have decided they want to volunteer. They're shifting gears, but they often have 20 or 30 years of activity in front of them."

When it all comes together in 1988, the center will have eight components, including a council that provides consulting for small businesses, a health promotion center, a service league, a "college" [illegible] by and for retirees and an in- [illegible] work[illegible]s on issues such as [illegible] options and finances.

"Each of these things is being done somewhere," Canon says. "But I don't know of any place in the world whe[illegible] these things are done under one umbrella."

Retirement is a critical issue in the United States, where people are living longer than ever before, and especially so in Nortn Carolina, which moved from 27th to seventh among the 50 states in retirement-age populations from 1970 to 1980. Although more recent figures are not available from the U.S. Census Bureau, state officials say North Carolina probably has an even greater proportion of retirees now.

Thousands of retirees have settled in the North Carolina mountains. In Henderson County, for example, the number of residents who were 75 years old or more increased by 80 percent from 1970 to 1980. Almost 2[illegible] people 65 years old or more moved into the county between 1975 and 1980.

"They've all got different attitudes toward retirement, but for the most part, I think they're pretty positive," Canon says. "They're mostly in good health, and they're still interested and excited."

But the retirees face a change in lifestyle for which few are mentally prepared, Canon says.

"There are a lot of people who have never thought through the process before," he says. "If your whole life has been wrapped up in your work, you think you're important because of your title or your expense account.

"All of a sudden, you walk out the door at work, and you're just Joe Blow. You've got to suddenly decide who you are as a human being, and how you're going to relate to others."

Jack Nichols, 75, knows that feeling. After working 54 years in textiles, chemicals and investments in Philadelphia, he retired to the Asheville area a year ago. He now is on the steering committee of the leadership council for retirees.

"In the past, my community contributions were pretty much through my church," he says. "You might say that my attitude now is somewhat a matter of catch-up."

Nichols now works with prison inmates in a pre-release program, and is trying to figure out how to organize a network of volunteers to identify and help the 20,000 people in Buncombe County whom he says cannot read.

"I feel that spending a day or two a week working for others is little enough to pay for the life I've had," he says.

Abe Freedman, another member of the leadership council, is channeling his efforts into the center's enterprise council, which will help people who want to start their own businesses get loans and advice.

"We'd like to put them through a five-day course," he says. "Once they're through with that, we'd lend them $5,000 to $20,000 to help them get started. We feel we could probably handle eight small businesses. And as they paid back the money, the program would be self-perpetuating, ideally."

Freedman, who has lived in Asheville 17 years, says he never really had gotten to know the area before he retired as an executive for textile-equipment and apparel companies.

"I was never here," he says. "I don't think I spent a whole month — or a week — in Asheville, although my kids went to school here.

"When you're in business, you're in a very narrow area. I'm just starting to look at the whole community. This group is bringing together all kinds of people — it's really bringing the community together."

Kay Clemens Gives Program

A special showing was held of 29 quilts made by members for sick children staying at the Ronald Mcdonald House. Barbara Woods, a director, accepted the quilts and showed slides.

Plans were made for two quilting demonstrations to be held during the Pitt County Fair.

New Record And A Book By Jazz Pianist Marian McPartland

By the Associated Press

Bill Strayhorn, whose best-known composition is the Ellington Band's theme song, "Take the 'A' Train," used to go to the Hickory House in New York when jazz pianist Marian McPartland played there.

When she played his music, he never made suggestions for improvement, she recalls. He was much too polite.

Her latest recording, her seventh on the Concord label, is "Marian McPartland Plays the Music of Billy Strayhorn."

She also has a new book published by Oxford University Press, "All in Good Time," a collection of articles she has written about jazz musicians, including alto saxophonist Paul Desmond of Dave Brubeck Quartet fame and pianists Mary Lou Williams and Bill Evans.

Longest of the 13 chapters, and the only one written for the book, is about the International Sweethearts of Rhythm, and integrated, all-girl orchestra of the 1930s and 1940s. Each chapter has a recently written postscript, satisfying a reader's desire for updates and additional biographical facts.

And she'll soon start taping 13 "Marian McPartland's Piano Jazz" shows for her ninth season on National Public Radio. The one-hour shows weave in McPartland interviewing a piano-playing guest with some duets and solos by both.

Concord plans to set up a special label, Clayton, and release some "Piano Jazz" show recordings. If they sell, more will be released. McPartland is delighted. "People are always asking where they can get them. They should be out, maybe, in time for Christmas."

On "Marian McPartland Plays the Music of Billy Strayhorn," the pianist is joined by alto saxophonist-arranger Jerry Dodgion, bassist Steve La Spina and drummer Joey Baron. Bobby Short wrote the liner notes.

She recalls that at the Hickory House, "Billy was always sitting at the bar, always in the same place. Naturally it was a good time to learn some of his tunes, to try them out on him.

"I think I probably learned all the tunes of his that I play at the Hickory House except 'A Train.' It seems like I knew that tune forever.

"The only criticism I ever had from Duke Ellington was at the Hickory House. He said, 'Oh, you play so many notes,' in a very arch kind of way. I thought about it afterward and I thought he was telling me not to play so many notes. I took that to heart eventually. I'm still trying; I still probably play too many notes."

The pianist says, "Billy was such a nice person, it's hard to imagine him ever criticizing anybody. He would just say how nice it was and how lovely it sounded. I had to figure things out myself by trial and error.

"I think I do his tunes better than I did then, definitely. I've recorded a few of them twice. I did 'Lush Life' and 'After All,' which doesn't get played much, earlier.

"I play about 15 tunes by him. 'Something To Live For,' which is beautiful, I play but I'm not sure of what I'm doing. I'm sort of fiddling with it, trying to get it together."

On the album, she played a couple with just Dodgion, a couple with just La Spina and "Day Dream" and "Lotus Blossum" as solos.

She says, "Duke did 'Intimacy of the Blues' with a small group. I always loved that, so I did that number. Billy wrote something when he was in hospital called 'Upper Manhattan Medical Group.' I did that one."

What about another that Strayhorn, who died of cancer in 1967, wrote while hospitalized, "Blood Count?" "I had already recorded 'Blood Count,'" McPartland says. "I adore that. I heard Stan Getz play it. I said, 'I have to play that tune.' Stan Getz has introduced me to more tunes than he'll ever know about."

If McPartland had to pick her favorite Strayhorn tune it would be "Blood Count."

"From this album I'd say 'Day Dream,'" she says.

She recorded the interviewer's favorite, "Chelsea Bridge," two years ago for Capitol Records. "I was going to do that again and somehow I fell in with some of these and all of a sudden we had enough tunes."

Before McPartland started recording for Concord, she had her own label, Halcyon. Those recordings are still distributed to record stores. After she signed with Concord, she says, "I made a trio album at the Carlyle Hotel in New York and offered it to Carl Jefferson at Concord. He said, 'Put it out yourself,' so I did."

The pianist made a one-composer album once before, "Marian McPartland Plays the Music of Alec Wilder." She says, "Alec wrote so many tunes for me I couldn't keep up with it. I was very busy with Halcyon. I thought, "I'll make an album and use the tunes he wrote for me and also put his well-known tunes on there.'

"I could tell he was apprehensive. He thought it was going to be a very amateurish job, especially when I said the cover was going to be a collage. The cover is gorgeous; it should have won some kind of award. It was done by an artist in Rochester.

"Alec wanted me to record (pianist) Jimmy Rowles for Halcyon. I said I didn't have the time or the money. Alec gave me $1,000. Charlie Bourgeois, who works for George Wein, said Jimmy would do a sketch of himself for the cover. I took a piece of paper to the Cookery and he did it and it was wonderful. We made 'The Special Magic of Jimmy Rowles' and I paid Alec back his $1,000."

This draws further reminiscenses about when Jimmy and McPartland, then married, were in the house band at Wein's Boston jazz club, Storyville. "Charlie got me started writing. Ella Fitzgerald came in, Helen Merrill, John Lewis, Duke. Charlie kind of pushed me into writing for the Boston Globe about these people. Charlie said, 'You can write,' so I tried.

"Charlie also is responsible for my first record date, for Savoy. The piano was out of tune. In those days, jazz musicians played on anything. You didn't dare ask for the piano to be tuned."

During the rest of this year, McPartland will take part in a jazz cruise, tape her radio show and play jazz dates, some with symphony orchestras. "On Dec. 5 Jimmy and I are going to play a date in Batavia, Ill. We hope to have Bud Freeman in the band. They're the last two of Chicago's Austin High School gang.

"Jimmy has nephews and nieces and their kids out there, so many of them. We may have an audience of just McPartlands."

OTTOMAN TREASURES

NEW YORK (AP) — The first major exhibition in the United States of the art from the height of the Ottoman Empire — The Age of Sultan Suleyman the Magnificent — is on view at New York's Metropolitan Museum through Jan. 17, 1988.

The display includes illuminated and illustrated manuscripts from the imperial painting studios, textiles and kaftans from the imperial wardrobe, jewel-encrusted weapons, and decorative objects and ceramics from the royal kilns.

Some 200 objects are featured in the exhibition, most of them from the Topkapi Palace Museum in Istanbul. They were shown at the National Gallery of Art in Washington and the Art Institute of Chicago

Museum Preserves The Old Ways

YARN SPINNING — Lyndall Toothman spins wool thread at the Museum of Appalachia, where several hundred craftsmen and musicians are expected to take part in the 1987 Tennessee Fall Homecoming. The event will be held Oct. 8-11 at the museum and farm village in Norris, Tenn. (AP Laserphoto)

By STEVE BAKER
Associated Press Writer

NORRIS, Tenn. (AP) — Old ways are not only worth preserving, they're fun to relive if only for one early autumn day at the Museum of Appalachia in the rolling mountains of East Tennessee.

"One thing I've never advocated is going back to the old days," author and museum curator John Rice Irwin said in a recent interview. "Days go by, but it's good to use the better aspects and qualities of the older ways."

In a world taken with youth, older ways offer people a method to cope with modern pressures, said Irwin, whose Oct. 8-11 Fall Homecoming Festival brings together writers, musicians, craftsmen and even an occasional starlet.

Several years ago actress Brooke Shields showed up, but Irwin downplays that day for the sake of keeping a relaxed atomsphere for the main events: making soap, baskets, wooden tools and clocks.

But Irwin says the best times are had by simply visiting, a time-honored pastime that Appalachia can't claim it invented but certainly developed into a near art form in the days before television, discount airfares and interstates.

"Many mountain people are the most articulate people I've ever met. They can express themselves in a concise story like the most practiced writer," he said.

Some well-known musicians will help festival-goers remember their roots, including members of the Carter Family, Roy Acuff's Smoky Mountain Boys and John Hartford.

But the featured attraction, according to Irwin, is Minnie Black and her All-Gourd Band from East Bernstadt, Ky. "Last year she brought tears to their eyes with "Amazing Grace," he said.

Irwin said a childhood spent at the knee of his grandparents and their friends made him realize as a grown-up that "a disastrous thing was happening."

"A generation of wonderful, kind, gentle, humble, persevering, hard-working and articulate (people) was dying every time I opened the paper," he said. "What we were remembering was the politicians and entrepreneurs. We know all about Mark Twain and Harry Truman but nothing about their ancestors," who come from the border towns dotting the Tennessee-Kentucky border, he said.

"I stood in the mountains of Scott County the other day, I went there to see a man who lived in a cave. Now I could have written about him as representative of Appalachia," Irwin said.

"But on the other hand, over here is where Mark Twain's mother was born and other there is where Harry Truman's great-grandfather lived. These are people whose impact on their children has had an impact on us," he said.

Ceremonial dances, music, sports and crafts will be featured in the four-day long celebration. (Photo Courtesy Cherokee Indian Reservation Tourist Center)

SPORTS PAINTINGS

CHADDS FORD, Pa. (AP) — A view of solitary and team sports in America is being shown in more than 50 oils, watercolors and pen drawings at the Brandywine River Museum through Nov. 22.

Among the sports depicted are sailing, hunting, ice skating and hot air ballooning. Works by Andrew Wyeth and Jamie Wyeth are included.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Accessories can make or break a room. Remember, odd numbers are more interesting than even numbers. For example, 3, 5 or 7 candlesticks are more interesting on a mantle than a pair, etc.

Paintings and prints should coordinate with the colors used in the room. Intense, vivid colors are often most effective if used in small amounts and as accessories. Remember, one main color should dominate a room by about 3/5.

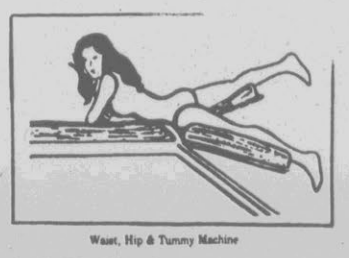

The most appropriate type of accessory to use with Queen Anne, Chippendale, Sheraton and Hepplewhite is oriental. Oriental accessories can even mix with contemporary furniture.

Come in and see our large selection of porcelain imported from China and original oils from New Orleans and New York. We currently have the largest inventory of lamps, accessories, pictures, mirrors and handmade oriental rugs in our history.

To Formulate Abandoned Buildings Plans

RALEIGH — The organization of a campaign to solve the abandoned buildings problem in Eastern North Carolina began Monday in Raleigh.

County agricultural extension directors or their representatives attended the luncheon to receive final instructions before returning home to begin the recruitment of a nine member Implementation Team that will work with the owners of abandoned buildings to attempt to arrive at one of three solutions: rehabilitation of the abandoned building for adaptive reuse if possible; in case the abandoned structures have historic significance, their restoration, and those that have no historical significance and are so far gone they cannot be rehabilitated, to be removed.

The campaign calls for the Implementation Teams to assist building owners to remove the buildings in one of three ways: by the owner accomplishing the removal on his own; removal by contractors willing to remove them for the salvage of the materials, or, removal by owner request to a rural volunteer fire department that will burn the structure in training exercises.

The Carolina Clean Countryside Campaign is being launched by the Abandoned Buildings Committee of Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce with assistance from several other organizations interested in beautification and cleanliness.

Robert S. Hackney of Washington, presided at the luncheon and outlined campaign plans. He said the campaign will be launched Jan. 1, after the county Implementation Teams have been recruited and trained.

Natural Areas Listed

RALEIGH — Nine natural areas along the Blue Ridge Parkway, including a corridor along the just-opened Linn Cove Viaduct, have been registered as North Carolina Natural Heritage Areas.

The National Park Service and the state's Department of Natural Resources and Community Development (NRCD) have agreed to place the areas on the state Registry of Natural Heritage Areas, to become part of 22 such natural areas protected along the Parkway.

The National Park Service has agreed to protect the areas, many of which contain rare and threatened species of plants and animals. Others are exceptional examples of undisturbed forest types and natural habitats which are representative of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Included is a 746-acre corridor along the recently opened section of the Parkway on the eastern slopes of Grandfather Mountain, which includes the Linn Cove Viaduct. Another 2,000 acre section of Grandfather Mountain already is protected.

Other natural areas registered include the Parkway corridor above the Asheville-Buncombe Water Authority's North Fork Watershed, the High Swan six-mile corridor, parts of Doughton Park, several unusual mountain bogs, and sites of endangered plant species.

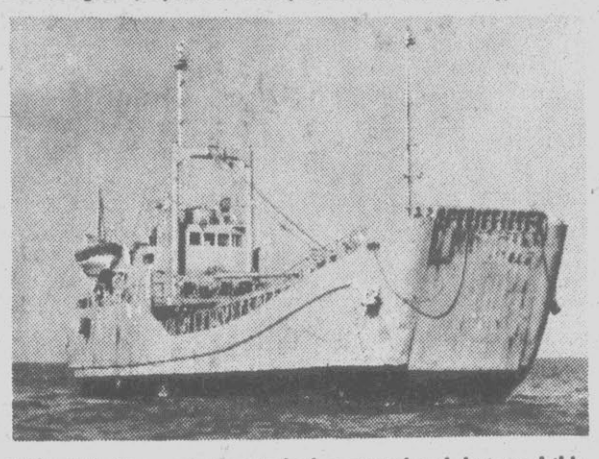

The N.C. Registry of Natural Heritage Areas, operated by NRCD's Division of Parks and Recreation, is the state's official list of outstanding natural areas protected by their owners.

Poems By A Young Girl

THE BELLY BUTTON EATER. By Erin M. Fowler. New Bern, Wee People Publishing. Paper, 60 pps., illustrated. $6.00

NEW BERN — A 12-year-old New Bern girl, Erin M. Fowler, is the author of a book of poems titled "The Belly Button Eater."

The young poetess has been writing, saving and collecting her work for a period of six years. With the help of her family, she selected some of the poems to feature in the book.

The brief poems deal with many of the fears and joys of a young girl in subjects familiar to young lassies.

Typial of a child's vivid imagination are her thoughts on "Dinosaurs": "Dinosaurs played/ But not all day./ They liked to eat/ And stomp their feet./ There were some caves./ But no graves./ So their bones just/ Hung around."

And on an experience suffered by children are Erin's lines on "An Awful Day": "Today has been an awful day./ All the blue skies have turned to gray./ All my happiness has gone away./ Oh, how I wish I could go out and play!"

The 24 poems in this collection relate to topics that will register with most children — things such as birds and animals, brothers, bad dreams, the world of rockets and a Sunday drive with the family. Black and white line drawings illustrate each poem as well as front and back pages.

Although Erin has long devoted time to her poetry, she does not spend all her time in this pursuit. A student in the seventh grade at New Bern's H.J. MacDonald Middle School, she enjoys socializing with her friends and is active, along with her family, in church activities.

Copies of "The Belly Button Eater" are available locally at The Gazebo, at Little by Little and at the gift shop in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. It may also be ordered for $6 plus 30 cents sales tax and $1 for postage and handling from Wee People Publishing, P.O. Box 351, New Bern, N.C., 28560.

Snakes Have A Special Message For Busch Gardens Visitors

TAMPA, Fla. — Whether it is a melee of baby water snakes wriggling contentedly in the warmth of a nursery incubator, or the awe-inspiring sight of a 15-foot Burmese python basking in the sun, snakes have a special message for visitors to Tampa's Busch Gardens.

Curator Ron Reynolds agrees that the mystery of snakes tends to both attract and repulse most people. This is also why Reynolds is inclined to use the plight of snakes in the wild when addressing the broader issue of wildlife conservations.

"Snakes are just too easy not to like," said Reynolds. "The notion of conserving endangered species is easier for folks to imagine if the animals in question are cute and fuzzy rather than slithery and scaly."

Reynolds believes that conservation education plays a key role in the protection of the earth's natural treasures, including the beauty and diversity of snakes.

"Our goal here is to increase public awareness and appreciation of habitat protection in wildlife conservation," said Reynolds. "We like to present zoo animals in a natural setting so visitors can understand why they are so important to the environment."

Together with open-air displays, reptiles whose natural movements are largely by night, are displayed in the "Nocturnal Mountain," where nighttime is simulated so visitors can see how these animals behave in their natural habitat.

In addition to the exotic species such as the Burmese and smaller ball python (used by the gardens' snake charmer), and boa constrictor, the gardens display 10 non-poisonous and three of the six poisonous snake species indigenous to Florida.

"Snakes are but one integral and indispensible part of the system that is our natural world," said Reynolds. "They are a necessary part of the food chain, and prey on creatures we commonly think of as pests."

While a robin is welcome to nest in a willow tree, or a turtle in the backyard pond, the mere sight of even the smallest snake sends shivers down the spine.

Of the 115 species of snakes in the continental United States, 17 are poisonous, and of those, only six species make their home in Florida.

This isn't to say that caution should not be exercised when encountering the snake, but too often people will go out of their way to kill a snake, poisonous or not.

Reynolds explained that pesticides and a variety of environmental pollutants together with habitat destruction, have placed many species on the endangered list, and driven others to live ever closer to man.

"Conservation begins at home," said Reynolds. "The plight of many exotic species is well publicized, but it is no less important to conserve the species right here in Florida."

As curator, Reynolds is in charge of the breeding program for both native and exotic species of snakes. Native Florida species are bred and then carefully reintroduced into their natural habitats.

Some Florida snakes such as yellow and red rat snakes will do well even in urban areas where they consume rodents and other pests, while Florida brown water snakes and the large indigo are highly specialized and poorly represented in the wild, necessitating careful research before they are reintroduced into a natural habitat.

Reynolds explained that because some species exist only in highly specialized areas, transplanting them is not a viable option, making habitat conservation a necessity if the extinction of an entire species is to be avoided.

"The aim of zoos is to take the pressure off wild populations; that is what the snake reintroducton program is all about," said Reynolds. "The plight of Florida snakes is typical of endangered species in general," he added.

"We hope that by seeing and interacting with our animals, our visitors will leave us a little more aware of the animals's importance in the overall scheme of things."

In the safety of their enclosures, snakes large and small come to live as the heat of the afternoon subsides, unaware of the role they play in the preservation of their own species.

LOCAL INDIAN — Orlando Silver is a member of the Haliwa-Saponi Indian Tribe who live mostly in the Halifax and Warren counties areas near Medoc Mountain State Park. Silver, a student in computer science at Nash Technical Institute, has a life-long affinity for the wooded beauty of the park.

A STREAM VISTA — Trails meandering along both the east and west shores of the two creeks within the park — Little Fishing Creek and Bear Swamp Creek — offer hikers numerous scenic views such as these sun-dappled trees arching over Little Fishing Creek at the site of one of several small musical waterfalls rippling across dark fragments of rock.

Medoc Mountain State Park In Halifax County

A Little Known Nature Retreat

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

One of the least known nature retreats in North Carolina is the 2,300 acre Medoc Mountain State Park, established in the early 1970s in the center of the Haliwa-Saponi Indian territory in rural western Halifax County.

The park derives its name from the so-called Medoc Mountain, which in turn was named by a local vineyard owner for a wine producing area in France. The mountain is actually a ridge 325-feet above sea level in the fall zone separating the Piedmont and Coastal Plain.

What it lacks in dramatic height is compensated for in a bounty of natural beauty.

Foremost among Medoc's attractions is an abundance of magnificant woodlands, mostly hardwoods, and two rippling streams, Little Fishing Creek and Bear Swamp Creek. The two merge about middle way the park and divide it in the southern sector into eastern and western areas.

Along any of the five trails that have been laid out through the forest are stands of trees, young and old, that in any season of the year filters sunlight into dancing patterns of silver, gold, green and black. Totally, the trails cover about 14 miles.

An array of mushrooms, from tiny butter-colored ones to medium sized ones in tan, lavender or red on to large ivory white and velvety gray patterned specimens are discovery temptations to slow the hiker.

At places thickets of mountain laurel create mysterious tunnels that soon open out again into sunnier paths.

Scatterings of rock, primarily of black mica granite, show veins of many colors where time has eroded the rocks. Ferns and wildlowers add touches of ground color in any season.

With a few exceptions, principally a medium steep climb of several hundred yards to the "peak," the trails are easily negotiable by persons in fairly good physical condition.

Modern Conveniences

Conveniences for today's travelers and hikers at this point in time are more than sufficient to take care of all needs. At the Summit Trail entrance and at the main parking area there are toilet facilities and picnic tables placed under large shade trees.

How To Get There

Two basic routes from Greenville to Medoc Park are available to travelers. One is via N.C. 33 to Tarboro, then take N.C. 44 to Leggett and Whitakers to just past the 301 overpass, then north along N.C. 4 to a point three miles north of Ringwood to an intersection where signs indicate the road to the park. Travelers can also proceed on N.C. 4 to Brinkleyville and take a left turn on N.C. 561.

The second basic route is N.C. 43 to Rocky Mount, then turn north on N.C. 4 to the intersection north of Ringwood on to Brinkleyville. One-way distance by either route is about 75 miles.

Park Information

For information on facilities and activities provided by the park, including fees for camping, write to: Medoc Mountain State Park, Route 3, Box 219G, Enfield, N.C., 27823, or phone 445-2280.

Campgrounds, both individual sites for family use and group tent camping, are available. Two canoe launch-take out points are located near roads skirting Little Fishing Creek.

An Indian Community

The villages of Hollister, Essex, Brinkleyville, Heathsville, Ringwood, Glenview and the countryside extending for several miles into Halifax and Warren counties encircling Medoc Park is home to one of North Carolina's more recently recognized Indian tribes, the Haliwa-Saponi.

Very few of the tribe are engaged in making traditional Indian crafts; however, at the annual powwow, held usually in the spring, and on other festive occasions, the Haliwa-Saponi put on a show of dance and music accentuated by brilliant costumes. Indians from other North Carolina tribes also congregate at the tribal site in the Old Bethlehem community. At that time too, large contingents of visitors come to view the dances and often to add in a spring flower jaunt in Medoc Mountain State Park.

A young Indian, Wade Lowry, is the chief park ranger at Medoc. "I'm a Lumbee, from Pembroke, not a Haliwa-Saponi," Lowry said. "But we get along very well," he added with a friendly smile.

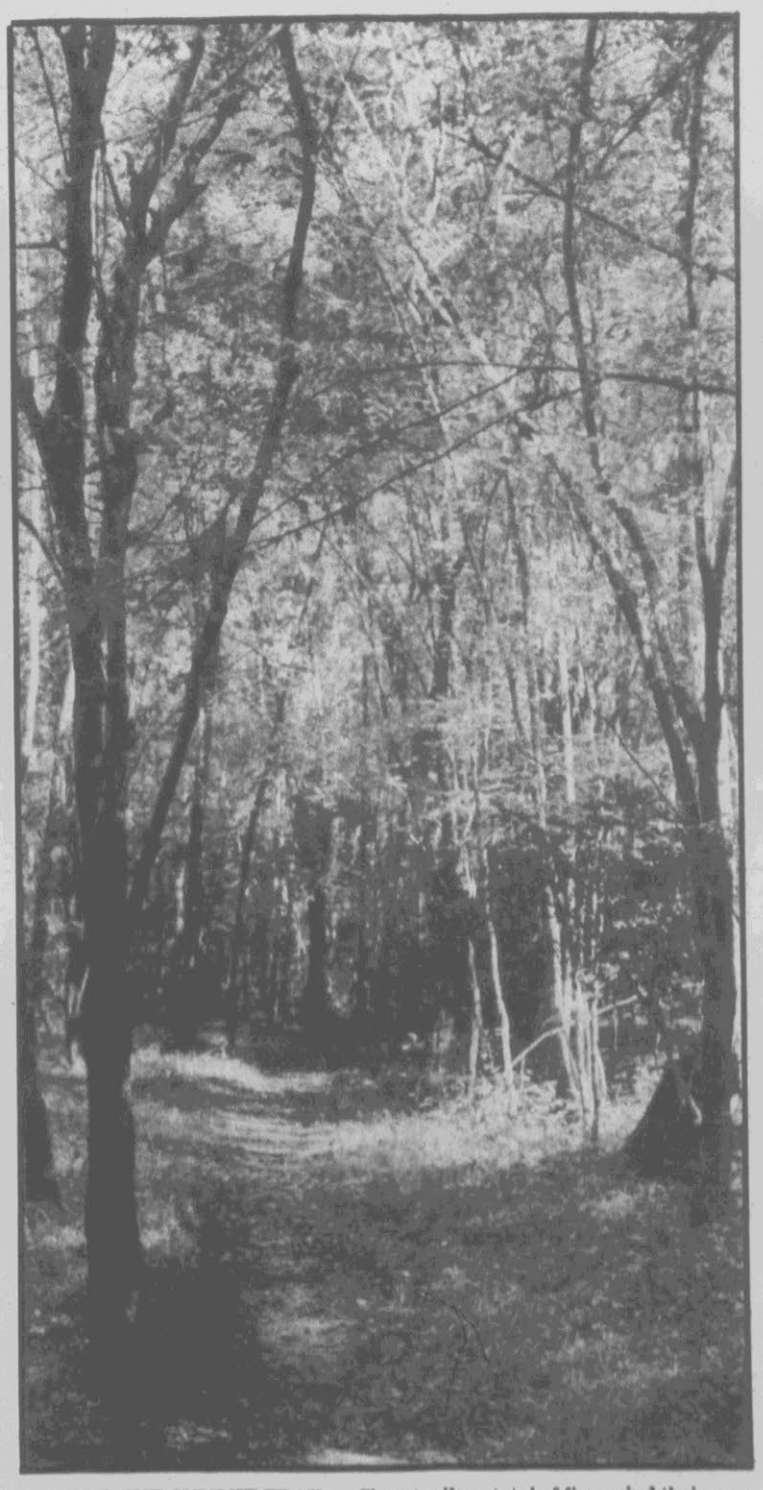

And a friendly, sunny attitude is characteristic of the American natives whose homelands surround the scenic mountain park. The streams and forests of this low rolling hill scenic rural area of North Carolina is land they love — and visitors venturing to Medoc Mountain State Park for the first time will undoubtedly share their feeling for this retreat of solitude and forest magic.

ROCK OUTCROPPINGS — Although Medoc State Park has only a few sizeable rock formations, there are random scatterings of rocks such as this nine-foot long low-lying rock that provide good rest seats as well as an opportunity to study the texture and colors of the indigenous rocks.

OUTDOOR DINING — Most visitors to the park bring along a spread of picnic food to be enjoyed in a shady spot. The family dining here occupies a table at the southern entrance along State Road 1002. A short distance away, just off gravel road 1322, a shady meadow area has several picnic tables. Campground sites are located near this center.

ALONG THE SUMMIT TRAIL — Clear trails, a total of five, wind their way through the 2,300 acre nature park. The peaceful path shown here is on the Summit Trail, longest of the five. Other trails are the Dam Site Loop Trail, Discovery Loop Trail, Stream Trail, and Bluffs Loop Trail.

A Reflector Review

Rewards Worth The Digging

HUMAN VALUES IN A CHANGING WORLD. By Daisaku Ikeda and Bryan Wilson. Secaucus, N.J., Lyle Stuart Inc., 364 pages, hardcover, $20.

Whether or not Reflector readers believe in "Harmonic Convergence" along with Jose Arguelle or in "Moronic Convergence" as depicted in Garry Trudeau's comic strip Doonesbury, they will probably agree that the pendulum is swinging away from isolationism to world community if popular nonfiction such as "Human Values in a Changing World" is any indication to the latest international mores.

Born out of conversations between the two authors, one a Japanese leader of the world's largest Buddhist organization, the other a sociologist of religion at All Souls College, Oxford, England, this book is written in a dialogue format.

Believing that laymen have the right to express their views on genetic engineering, abortion, religious freedom, parent-child relations, human nature (to name a few issues), the authors discuss, without evaluating, such things as the nature of religious emotion, the character of miracles, the significance of mysticism, the limits of rationality and its kinship to religion.

Ikeda and Wilson agree in the chapter, "Antidotes for Suicide," along with Karl Menniger, American psychiatrist, "that a confusion of desires is at the bottom of all suicides." According to Ikeda, "one important role of religion is to sublimate these desires (suicidal) and channel them in the direction of strength to live."

Wilson states that "we must seek through our educational institutions to provide people with the opportunity to recognize their own potential and their own inner resources from which a sense of worthiness can develop."

They also agree that "large urban conglomerations and an impersonal society — on an immense national and industrial scale — as causative factors in the growing suicide rate." And on an even deeper level, people kill themselves when they fail to understand the value of perservering in life.

Whether discussing euthanasia, tampering with genetic structures, or sexual ethics, one thing the book demonstrates is a bridge between cultures. The fact that an eastern religious leader engages on middle ground in debate with an academician who admits he is uncommitted religiously, shows the possibility of free intellectual exchange between two cultures with diverse backgrounds and different values on various human concerns.

If you have the vocabulary of William F. Buckley, the patience of Gandhi, and the tenacity of Jim and Tammy Bakker — or a good dictionary, you may want to tackle this one. The knowledge you'll learn on almost every world issue makes the effort worthwhile.

Magazine Is Honored

ECU News Bureau

KINSTON — A fledgling North Carolina literary magazine whose editorial staff includes two East Carolina University faculty members won one of three prizes for fiction in a recent national competition.

"A Carolina Literary Companion," published twice yearly by the Kinston Community Council for the Arts, received a fiction award for an outstanding short story published in and nominated by the magazine's editors.

The other editors are poet Patrick Bizzaro, also of the ECU English faculty, and Kinston writer-teacher Michael Parker.

The magazine's winning entry in the General Electric Foundation/ Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines competition was a story, "The Night the New Jesus Fell to Earth in Cliffside, North Carolina," by South Carolina writer Ron Rash. Rash will receive a $5,000 prize and "A Carolina Literary Companion" will receive $1,000 in a Dec. 1 awards ceremony in New York.

The competition's other fiction winners were "The Paris Review," published in New York and edited by George Plimpton and the University of Georgia's "Georgia Review."

40,000 Blair Books Are To Be Donated

WINSTON-SALEM — On Oct. 28, John F. Blair, Publisher, a publishing company based in in Winston-Salem, will donate nearly 40,000 books to the libraries of North Carolina.

The give-away will take place during the biennial convention of the North Carolina Library Association scheduled to be held in Winston-Salem Oct. 28-30.

Following the death of John Fries Blair in November, 1986, the publishing company that he had founded in 1954 reopened under the management of his heirs. In an age of conglomerate publishing houses and bottom-line decision-making, Blair was a rare phenomenon.

A true lover of books and a strong supporter of North Carolina authors, Blair found it intolerable not to publish a worthy book just because it would not be a commercial success.

As a result, the company that he left behind had in its inventory many well-written and finely-crafted books that had not sold in great quantities. He believed in each title that he published, and believed each title should be available as long as possible for the reading public.

Faced with a dilemma when the company re-opened, Margaret Couch, the new president of the company, decided it would be necessary to take many of Blair's titles out of print.

The usual outlets that purchase large quantities of out-of-print titles to resale as bargain books were not interested in most of these titles because the North Carolina focus was too narrow for their market. So Couch was faced with the problem of disposing of the 40,000 books that were now out of print. Because her entire staff supported her decision, she began to explore alternatives.

When she learned that the North Carolina Library Association would be holding its biennial convention in Winston-Salem this fall, the solution became apparent. The company would be able to deliver these books to the sources that would not only take the books, but also appreciate and use them in a way that would have greatly pleased Blair as well.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By WILLIE NELMS

"The Four Days of Courage" tells the stunning story of the effort to oust Ferdinand Marcos as president of the Philippines. The book is written by Bryan Johnson, a Canadian who has been a Far Eastern correspondent since 1979.

This book shows how the effort to depose Marcos began with just 200 poorly equipped rebels who declared war on the modern 225,000 man Philippine army. Through a calculated campaign of disinformation, extreme bravery, and blind luck the rebels were successful.

Filled with colorful portraits of rebel leaders, the book reveals various displays of inspiring courage. For instance, Johnson documents the compelling leadership of Cardinal Jaime Sin and how he got the backing of the Pope for the rebels.

He details the crucial defection of Air Force Colonel Sotelo, who flew his squadron of helicopters toward the rebel stronghold at Camp Crame — and then unexpectecly landed and joined them.

Johnson goes beyond previous reporting in the West to paint a picture of one nation's struggle for democracy. He frankly assesses the U.S. role in the Marcos overthrow as well as describing the actions of Corazon Aquino and her supporters.

Rich historical background, in-depth understanding of key figures, and behind the scenes knowledge of the rebels' actions make "The Four Days of Courage" a fine work of investigative reporting.

Reading like a fictional thriller, this book adds much to our understanding of the recent events in the Philippines.

JASPER JOHNS PRINT SHOW

VN Memorial Replica To Visit N.C. Cities

RALEIGH — A half-size replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. will be displayed in North Carolina from Oct. 7-13.

The traveling memorial known as The Moving Wall will be displayed on the Meredith College Campus in Raleigh from Oct. 7-10, and on the Fayetteville Technical Institute Campus in Fayetteville from Oct. 11-13. The Moving Wall will give North Carolinians the opportunity to reflect, remember and pay tribute to the thousands of Americans who died or were missing in action during the Vietnam War.

The Moving Wall was constructed in 1984 by Vietnam Combat Veterans, Ltd. of San Jose, Calif. It is 246 feet long, composed of 70 solid plexiglass panels and bears the names of 58,132 persons who made the ultimate sacrifice for the United States during the Vietnam War.

Included are the names of approximately 1,300 persons still missing, POW's, MIA's and others.

The traveling memorial is the creation of Vietnam veteran John Devitt, who was so impressed with the memorial in Washington that he developed the idea of building a portable version of the wall.

Devitt has transported The Moving Wall to more than 60 communities across the nation, enabling persons unable to travel to Washington to share in the experience of the memorial.

In Raleigh, The Moving Wall will be hosted by the North Carolian Vietnam Veterans Memorial Committee, and by North Carolina Vietnam Veterans, Inc. In Fayetteville, the memorial will be hosted by Friends of the Vietnam Veteran.

Capitol Broadcasting Company, parent firm of WRAL-TV and WRAL-FM in Raleigh, is sponsoring the North Carolina displays of The Moving Wall.

Veterans groups will provide volunteers from throughout the state who will assist visitors in finding the names of relatives and friends on the wall. Counselors will also be available. Both the Meredith and Fayetteville Technical Institute locations will provide an appropriate setting for this tribute.

A Reflector Review

Talent, Vitality In ECU Sculpture Show

It's reassuring to know that while most of us carry out our daily rounds of generally non-creative tasks, there are young North Carolinians blessed with talent and imagination who are dedicated to creative efforts that enrich our lives.

Now, in Greenville, people can see the fruit of a representative group of North Carolina sculptors in the current exhibition at the Gray Gallery on the East Carolina University campus.

The exhibition, the sixth annual Exhibition of North Carolina Sculpture, sponsored and supported by the Integrated Network System of Northern Telecom of Nashville, Tenn., is an eclectic assemblage of contemporary sculpture by more than two dozen artists.

Vitality, a willingness to experiment and the transfer of imaginative ideas to concrete visual forms mark this large, diverse show.

Today's world of modern sculpture is no longer confined to creating sculptural art from a limited range of materials. There are a few pieces of the more traditional materials of bronze, marble and wood, but the choice of materials covers a full catalog that includes paper, plaster, ceramics, wire, neon tubing, glass, leather and even tar.

One piece is constructed of dried leaves neatly compressed within circles of chicken wire; another makes use of cowrie shells to form an Afro hair style on a clay figure. Gleaming white marble has been chiseled and polished in a study of legendary Greek characters, and other sculptures are fashioned from a mixture of natural and commercial materials.

Ideas projected by the artists result in pieces that register force, fancy, fantasy, realism. Predictably, in an exhibitioin of this scope, some of the sculpture comes off successfully, others give more promise than realization at this point.

A study of the excellent catalog that accompanies the exhibition reveals that a sizeable number of the sculptors who have work selected for this show have been trained at East Carolina University, with some still active in the Greenville area.

•The second exhibition now on view at Gray Gallery is that of large black and white photographs by Israeli photographer Gilad Ohphir. These are unusual images, in which the photographer has developed a technique that translates landscapes into moods of somber studies in which blacks are prominent — and in a few, swirls of white enclose flame-like ribbons of black.

These are photographs that are a far remove from the usual concept of photographic approaches. They convey the impression that Ohphir has achieved in photography what Franz Kline excelled at in his paintings. The photographs may not find favor with viewers who seek more recogniable images in photographs, but they present an intriguing viewpoint.

Hours at Gray Gallery are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays, with longer hours, until 8 p.m., on Thursdays. Finding parking places in the vicinity of the gallery is oft-times difficult — but the reward of viewing the sculpture and photography there is well worth time spent in circling about to find a parking space.

A Sculptor's Dream

By GEORGE HOUDE
Elgin Courier-News

ELGIN, Ill. (AP) — It was a mere half-century ago that Trygve Rovelstad began work on his statuary visions of the pioneer heroes of Elgin. He hasn't stopped yet.

"It's the long trail story," Rovelstad says, "winding back to the land of my dreams."

He smiles enigmatically. There are secrets in that land, his smile says, and dreams filled with passions.

Rovelstad has been working on the 12-foot-tall pioneer statues since the Great Depression, when the federal government was paying writers, photographers, painters and sculptors to dream up works and create them.

"I originally started the pioneer statues over at the old fire barn No. 5 on Villa Street" says Rovelstad, noting that it was one of the few places big enough. "One time, Mayor (Myron) Lehman was going to destroy them. My mother came out with a rolling pin and prevented him doing that."

The land of Rovelstad's dreams is his studio in Elgin, in northern Illinois. It is filled with larger-than-life heroes and heroines: winged gods and goddesses, colossal heads, disembodied hands, sculpted myths and legends.

Pan, the Greek god of woods and shepherds, reposes cast in aluminum in a corner. Icarus, the Greek mythological character who flew too close to the sun with waxen wings, stands in bronze.

George Washington gazes serenely at the clutter of an artist's work and life. The statue is two or three times larger than the original hero.

"That was made for a niche in the Capitol building in Washington," says Rovelstad.

He says the statue was commissioned by Robert McClory, an Illinois congressman who retired in 1983 to become a Washington, D.C., consultant, leaving Rovelstad with the statue and an empty niche in the Capitol.

On the walls are drawings and castings of coins he has designed. There is a drawing of the Combat Infantry Badge, designed for the U.S. Army during World War II, when he was a lieutenant. He also designed the Bronze Star for the U.S. Army, borrowing liberally from the famous Silver Star for the design.

His interest in heroic symbols goes back to his fascination with the statue of the World War I soldier memorialized in Davidson Park here. The statue went up about the time he graduated from Elgin High School in 1922.

After high school, Rovelstad joined the Midway Studio of Chicago sculptor Lorado Taft. He also was a deckhand on a lumber schooner, studied sculpture at the University of Washington and in Paris, and taught the art to GIs in England toward the war's end.

After returning home, Rovelstad became his own best public relations agent, trying to garner support for his sculpture, promoting his memorials, gathering civic leaders for photos and pledges, scraping together funds to continue the projects in his studio.

He even made models for a project to dwarf the Statue of Liberty — a 500-foot-high woman cast in aluminum and named "I Will," after the motto of Chicago. Rovelstad hoped the statue would stand at the entrance to Chicago's harbor.

But the strength required to create giant statues from giant dreams is not as great as it once was.

Castings of the pioneer statue heads have been displayed in several places. Medals and coins have been struck featuring the pioneers to raise money to promote the project.

Edgecombe Program Announced

TARBORO — A public program focusing on changes in agriculture and rural life in Edgecombe County since the years of the Great Depression will be presented Oct. 11 in Tarboro.

The program, titled "An Oral History of Agriculture in Edgecombe County" and sponsored by the Edgecombe County Memorial Library with funds provided by the North Carolina Humanities Council, will be presented at 3 p.m. in the Edgecombe Community College Auditorium.

The program will open with a lecture by Pete Daniel of the Division of Agriculture and Natural Resources of the National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institute. This will be followed by a discussion, "An Edgecombe County Perspective," conducted by five volunteer inrerviewers for the project, with a period for audience response to issues.

The interviewers in the discussion program tell the story of the county's farmers, farm women, merchants, manufacturers and extension agents, and how they helped shape farm life during the period.

Clarification On Museum Lectures

Clarification has been provided on the Greenville Museum of Art's slide/lecture program carried in the Sept. 27 edition.

Those enrolling in the series have a choice of an evening or a morning attendance hour, rather than the series encompassing a twice weekly schedule.

Each lecture over the eight-week session will be presented twice during each week, from 7:30 to 8:30 on Tuesday evenings and from 10:30 to 11:30 on Thursday mornings.

A person enrolled in the series for the Tuesday evening lecture, however, in the event he or she misses attending at that time, can take in the Thursday morning lecture.

Nostalgia At The Heart Of GMA Shows

Nostalgia for the Old West of a century ago in the form of recreated buildings and a recall of simple things that constitute the warmer sort of family ties are represented in two current exhibitions on view at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St.

In the two areas of the South Galleries downstairs, Pitt County native Mac Jones, a member of the Greenville police force, is displaying seven scale-model buildings that conjure up the romance of the Old West in his "Wild West Town (Re-Living the Old West.")

For several years, Jones has pursued, with devotion and patience, the skill required to construct a range of buildings of the type once found along the main street of a Western town. Details are meticulous, and the coverage of commercial establishments of that time is well represented.

The largest of the seven structures is an imposing Imperial Hotel. This building in blue and white contains a variety of services needed out in the frontier country — hot baths, meals and rooms, a mining engineer's office, a dentist's office, a lawyer's office.

Other structures include a bank; the Wells Fargo Overland Mail and Express office; the U.S. Marshal's building; the Montana Cafe, and Chris Jones General Merchandise.

These buildings, all in wood, have the false fronts, the covered porches, wooden benches out front, and other details that reveal Jones' attention to authentic details. The viewer is taken back to rememberance of typical locales seen in so many Western movies. It does not matter that all the structures are sparkling new with paint and the identificaton signs neatly lettered. After all, it's likely that at one point in time each structure of the type shown did have it's day of newness under the prairie sun — before dust, time, gunfire and other ravages changed them into stages of faded paint and delapidation.

Jones has paid equal attention to the interiors, easily seen through numerous windows and by means of concealed inside lighting. There are beds, tables, desks, merchandise. And on the board sidewalks and in the streets are a scattering of horses and cowhands — a couple of well-dressed desperados are evidently ready to engage in a shootout.

What is missing is the presence of women. I may have overlooked them, but I couldn't find a single female, not even in the saloon.

Nevertheless, this is an opportunity to view the results of the long labor invested by a local man in a demanding avocation.

And no doubt about it, children, as well as, or perhaps even more than adults, will be fascinated by this beautifully recreated look at the Old West.

•In the Upstairs Gallery, an atmosphere of times gone by is also a strong point in the 16 works shown by an artist now living in Missouri (he has family ties in eastern North Carolina) who goes by the single name of Linister.

"Family Ties," the title of the collection on view at the museum, summarizes the gentle mood of these works. With the exception of three black and white works and a single backstage painting of costumes in which reds, creams and grays are used, the remaining works are in predominant shades of tan and soft golden and darker browns.

A basic item of furniture, an unadorned brown cabinet, is the principal motif, or reference point of the paintings. This cabinet, incorporated in the majority of Linister's paintings, forms the focal base on which familiar household still-life objects are arranged — a single yellowish glove and a kerosene lantern, books with tattered spines, a collection of old bottles, a rusted toy truck, a grandmother's slop pot.

The total effect of these simplified, interior still lifes is one of restfulness, of the less cluttered lifestyles of homes in past years. Linister has effectively achieved a mood for nostalgia in these realistic works of art.

ROMANTIC COMPLICATIONS — Ralph Bass and Nina Blanton discover each other (and love) in the Jerome Kern-Guy Bolton-P.G. Wodehouse musical, "Leave It To Jane," the next attraction of the East Carolina Playhouse. Performances will be at 8:15 nightly Wednesday through Saturday and on Oct. 12. Jerome Kern Musical Is Season's Opener For ECU Playhouse

"Leave It to Jane," the musical with Jerome Kern melodies that was a New York hit in 1920 and again in 1959, will open the East Carolina Playhouse 1987-88 season. Performances will given Wednesday through Saturday and again on Oct. 12 in McGinnis Theatre at 8:15 nightly.

"Leave It to Jane" is one of the most enduring plays of American theatrical history. It first gained popularity in 1904 as a straight comedy by George Ade called "The College Widow."

Around 1920, its tale of a campus flirt's interference in the football rivalry of two midwestern colleges was turned into the present musical by Bolton, Wodehouse and Kern — Guy Bolton and P.G. Wodehouse taking care of the book and lyrics and composer Jerome Kern, the music.

The rivals in "Leave It to Jane" are two fictitious institutions called Atwater and Bingham Colleges. Things look poorly for Atwater as the fall term begins, because Bingham is due to field a new quarterback named Billy Bolton. But as Bolton passes through town on his way to enroll at Bingham, of which his father is a loyal alumnus, he is lured by Jane Witherspoon, the flirtatious "college widow" daughter of Atwater's president, to switch to her daddy's team.

Bolton is all set to score touchdown after touchdown for Atwater when his father turns up for the big game. Outraged at seeing his son wearing the wrong-colored jersey, he tries to stop the game.

Romantic and athletic complications keep the play's plot bubbling and the songs bouncing.

Performances will be in the McGinnis Theatre in the Messick Theatre Arts Center.

Season tickets, at $20 for the 1987-88 season, are available through October 12 to cover all five Playhouse productions.

Single tickets for "Leave It to Jane" are priced at $10, $8 for groups of ten or more. For details and ticket reservations, call 757-6390.

Robert Godrey, department head, is collecting manuscripts and abstracts to include in the journal, scheduled to be published April 1.

Cherokee Fall Festival Opens Tuesday

CHEROKEE — It began 75 years ago in 1912 at Cherokee, an autumnal thanksgiving to the Creator called called The Cherokee Indian Fall Festival. The revered annual ritual will be celebrated this year from October 6-10, just as it has been each harvest season since its inception.

Commemorating bountiful crops, the Cherokee express their gratefulness to the Almighty with a diverse five-day exposition of traditional Indian rites, both solemn and jovial. It is a time for renewal and perpetuation of ancient Cherokee customs, and a time for homecomings and family reunions for hundreds of Cherokee who have left the Qualla Indian boundary Reservation for the outer world.

The festival of thanks kicks off on Tuesday, with a parade of over 110 floats, caravans, bands and marchers in traditional Cherokee dress. Thereafter, events will be staged at the Cherokee Ceremonial Grounds, from ten in the morning until midnight each day, rain or shine. If the weather is bad, activities will move indoors to the Qualla Civic Center.

The five-day event is organized and supervised by a committee of volunteer Cherokee Indian members of the Cherokee Cultural Society, a nonprofit corporation. All proceeds will go toward staging next year's Fall Festival.

Events scheduled include traditional Cherokee ceremonial dances, tribal pow wows, blowgun and archery competition, clogging performances, country and gospel music, beauty pageants and demonstrations of Indian magic. In addition to the permanent natural stone seats in the Ceremonial Grounds stadium, temporary bleachers will be erected around the stage to accommodate spectators.

Inside the multi-purpose building, an arts, crafts and agricultural display will be exhibited. Genuine handcrafted Cherokee wares will be offered for sale.

One competition will be a series of stickball contests. Stickball is the ancient Indian forerunner to modern-day lacrosse, although perhaps more dangerous to life and limb. Two opposing teams are comprised of no less than 10 players each. All participants are provided with two long wooden sticks having a small woven leather basket at the end for cradling a ball approximately the size of a golf ball.

The object of the sport is for a team to earn a point by carrying the ball through two goals. Whichever team scores 12 points first wins. Players wear no protective gear and are not permitted to touch the ball with the hands, though they may club, kick and hit the opponents liberally. No substitutions are allowed. When a player becomes injured, which is frequent, his opposing counterpart must join him on the sidelines.

Each team also has a "medicine man," whose job it is to call upon the gods to favor his team. This important duty is performed both before and during the mayhem. It is said that, regardless of a team's ability, the one with the most powerful "medicine man" usually wins.

Despite the festive atmosphere of stickball and other traditional Cherokee activities, an aura of sacredness permeaties the atmosphere of the Fall Festival. It is, after all, a time of recollection and thanksgiving.

The annual Cherokee Indian Fall Festival takes place at the Cherokee Ceremonial Grounds on N.C. 441 in Cherokee. Admission is $3 daily. There are discounts for five-day passes, children, senior citizens and groups. For specific details and a calendar of events, phone 704-497-3028.

FARM MUSEUM — Bob Hipps sits on the front porch of the farmhouse in rural Polk County in western North Carolina that he wants to turn into a farm museum. The 95-acre farm has been in his family since 1842 and Hippes says it's the only one he knows of that has the original tools, equipment and household goods, some dating back to the 1830s. Chinese Watercolors In St. Andrews Art Exhibit

LAURINBURG — Chinese watercolors by Daniel Nie, a new faculty member at St. Andrews Presbyterian College, Laurinburg, are currently on view at Vardell Gallery on campus.

A native of Shanghai, born in 1961, shortly before the Proletarian Cultural Revolution, Nie was a member of a family of artists and intellecturals who were targets of the suppression of that revolution. The art collection of his family, along with a valuable collection of Chinese stamps, were wantonly destroyed by Red Guards.

At the age of 1, he was sent to live with relatives in Hong Kong. Later he returned to Shanghai, where he began the study of art at age 9, and then completed high school and attended Shanghai Textile Technical College.

Nie's coming to the States came about through Mary Fay Williamson of Wagram. The daughter of a Southern Baptist Missionary, Ms. Williamson had kept in touch with a childhood friend — Nie's grandmother.

In 1981 she sent for Nie and arranged for him to attend St. Andrews. He also attended Wake Forest University and, in the spring of this year, received master's degrees in fine arts and in history from the American University in Washington, D.C.

Nie says "my work is inherited from a school of art, Xie Yi, which means the impression. It is unlike western impressionism, a more reductive way to the minimal level. There is as much emphasis on the beauty of the brushstroke itself as on the subject in this classical form of Chinese art."

It is this technique which Nie will teach in his class on Chinese watercolor at St. Andrews.

Nie's work will be on exhibit until Oct. 12. Gallery hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Sweet Adelines Benefit Performance Oct. 17 At D.H. Conley

LADY SINGERS — Members of the Greenville-based East Carolina Sweet Adelines are shown in a recent dress rehearsal for their upcoming production, "Barbershop Roundup." The entertainment, to benefit the Pitt County Family Violence Program, will be presented at 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. Oct. 17 at D.H. Conley High School. Tickets are $6 for adults, $5 for senior citizens and children under 12. (Photo by Bobby Oldham)

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Twenty singers, members of Eastern Carolina Sweet Adelines, a quartet from The Queen Charlotte Chorus from Charlotte and other entertainers will present "Barbershop Roundup," primarily an entertainment of song, at 3 p.m. and again at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 17.

The musical, with proceeds to benefit the Pitt County Family Violence Program, will be presented in the auditorium at D.H. Conley High School, and will be directed by Jo Broadway of Washington, N.C.

Tickets are priced at $6 for adults, and $5 for senior citizens and children under age 12. They may be purchased from the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, from members of the Eastern Carolina Sweet Adelines, or at the door prior to performance hour.

The focus for "Barbershop Roundup" is patterned on western musical themes, and will additionally feature four individuals other than members of the two ladies' singing group.

The show will open with the Eastern Carolina Sweet Adelines chorus performing songs such as "Don't Fence Me In" and "Ragtime Cowboy Joe."

This will be followed by The Calamity Janes Quartet's rendition of "Sioux City Sue." This quartet is comprised of Carolyn Croston, baritone; JoAnn Lewis, lead; Janet Rodgers, bass, and Barbara Woods, tenor.

Songs to be presented by the Premium Blend Quartet of the Eastern Carolina group include a medley of Wild and Wooly West Gal songs and "Cool Water." The chorus will sing other selections to include "Home on the Range." Members of the Premium Blend are Jo Broadway, tenor; Janice Hardee, lead; Sandra Johnson, bass, and Mary Vars, baritone.

The guest Diamonds in the Rough Quartet from Charlotte will perform during the second portion of the show. This quartet, which sings four-part harmony in barbershop style, features Nancy Lippard, tenor; Lois Atkins, lead; Alice Guy, bass and Ann Powell, baritone. Atkins is a former professional singer of country music; Guy writes most of the group's material and plays the guitar.

Selections chosen by Diamonds in the Rough include "Mood Indigo"; "When I Take My Sugar To Tea;" "So Long Dearie," and "Keep The Music Ringing."

Two area male entertainers will join the ladies in a music narrative type of side-stage activity. The two are Joey Pollock of Ayden, a veteran of the theater at East Carolina University and Ayden Theater Workshop, and Dusty Hanks. Hanks is an area entertainer who sings, plays guitar and performs as a comedian. Pollock and Hanks will take the role of two cowboys reminiscing about their adventures on the trial.

Along with this, two Conley students, Arielle Sturz and Malana Harris, both juniors, will perform at one spot as Bessie the Cow.

Technical direction and lighting for the production is Curtis Lee Jones, a student in the Theater Arts Department at East Carolina University. Jones also had the lead role in the recent East Carolina Playhouse production of "Master Harold and the Boys."

The Pitt County Family Violence Program to receive proceeds of the show is one that serves the community in several ways. It provides temporary shelter for women and children who need to get away from bad home situations; provides 24-hour counseling and referral services; provides advocates for court appearances; provides weekly support group meetings for women and men, and provides speakers and printed material for community and professional education.

Several members of the Eastern Carolina Chorus serve as volunteers for the program. Jan Maas-Brady is the executive director and can be reached 24 hours daily by calling 752-3811.

Scenes From Operas Being Given At ECU This Week

The East Carolina University Opera Theater will present its fall production of scenes from operas on Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Recital Hall of the A.J. Fletcher Music Center on the ECU campus. No admission will be charged.

Favorite scenes from operas by Rossini, Donizetti, Saint-Saens, Stravinsky, Britten and Douglas Moore will be performed by the student members of the Opera Theater.

Costumes have been designed by Patricia Hiss, assisted by Michelle Crotty and Jennifer Layman; accompanists are Mark Gansor and Patricia Hiss. Director of the Opera Theater is Dr. Clyde Hiss of the ECU School of Music faculty.

Opera Theater Auditions Set

Auditions for the February production of the East Carolina University Opera Theater will be held Oct. 21 and 22 from 7:30 until 10 p.m. in room 269 of the A.J. Fletcher Music Center on the ECU campus.

Auditions are open to any interested persons. Singers should be prepared to sing something of their choice for solo roles; those auditioning for the chorus do not need to prepare a special piece. An accompanist will be provided.

The full-length opera production will be presented Feb. 11-14.

For more information, contact D. Clyde Hiss, director of the ECU Opera Theater, at 757-6851.

Fawn Hall: Has agents fawning over her

Q. Has Fawn Hall, Lt. Col. Ollie North's beautiful secretary, signed a Hollywood contract to star on the screen in her own life story? How much is she getting?—Eunice Stokes, Houston, Tex.

A. Fawn Hall, who attracted national attention by appearing on TV at the Irangate hearings, has signed no screen contracts as of this writing. She has, however, signed a contract with the William Morris Agency to represent her in whatever deals it can put together. Her autobiography would constitute a logical first step.

Q. In the many years he worked in the movies, was Ronald Reagan ever nominated for an Oscar? What were his best pictures?—Nita Winkler, The Bronx, N.Y.

A. Reagan never was nominated for an Academy Award, although he exhibited considerable talent as an actor. Two of his best films are "Kings Row," with Ann Sheridan, and "Knute Rockne—All American," with Pat O'Brien.

Q. Before screen star Sylvester Stallone took Brigitte Nielsen as his second wife, he had to drop his first, Sasha Czack. How much did his 10-year marriage to Sasha, the mother of his sons Sage and Seth, cost him? We hear it was an incredible $50 million. Could that possibly be true? How much did Stallone's marriage to Brigitte cost him? Finally, what are the dates of his two marriages?—Louise Stein, South San Francisco, Calif.

A. Estimates of Stallone's financial settlement with his first wife range between $10 million and $20 million; with his second wife, between $500,000 and $1.5 million. Stallone married Sasha Czack on Dec. 28, 1974. He married Brigitte Nielsen on Dec. 15, 1985, divorced her 18 months later.

Q. Is it true that superstud Warren Beatty and ex-Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado used to share time with Donna Rice, the brainy chick who made Phi Beta Kappa at the University of South Carolina? —B.L., Elmira, N.Y.

Kriegsmann/Sygma

Donna Rice: Not one of Beatty's bathing beauties

A. Not true. According to "Vanity Fair" magazine, Gary Hart would fly out to Los Angeles on weekends and "frequently hang out at Warren Beatty's house, sitting by the pool, which was often populated with topless starlets."

A. Milton A. (Mickey) Rudin has been Frank Sinatra's lawyer for almost 30 years. On Aug. 12, however, Sinatra's press agent announced: "Frank Sinatra and Mickey Rudin, close friends and business associates, are in the process of rearranging their working relationship." Rudin was born in New York City on Nov. 16, 1920. He was educated at UCLA, where he received his B.A. degree in 1941, and at Harvard Law School, from which he was graduated in 1946. After clerking for a judge in a court of appeals, he joined the Hollywood law firm of Gang, Kopp & Tyre, where he handled the legal affairs of Frank Sinatra, Lucille Ball, Susan Hayward and other screen stars.

Rudin, a short, stout man, has been married twice and has three grown children: Pam, Lisa and Michael. His first wife was Elizabeth Greenschpoon, an immensely talented cellist whose brother, the late Dr. Ralph "Romeo" Greenson, was Marilyn Monroe's psychiatrist. His second and current wife, Mary Carol, is a former airline attendant. Mickey Rudin is a founding partner of Rudin, Richman and Appel, a Beverly Hills law firm.

Q. Was the late Grace Kelly "promiscuous to the point of nymphomania," as I've been reading? She was supposed to have been madly in love with Ray Milland, her co-star in "Dial M for Murder." She also was engaged to marry Oleg Cassini, the dress designer. Why didn't she marry either of these eligible guys?—D.D., Arvada, Colo.

A. There is no evidence that, as a film star, the late Grace Kelly was "promiscuous to the point of nymphomania." She was, according to those who knew her, selective in her choice of friends and lovers, some of whom—like Bing Crosby, William Holden and Gary Cooper—were her leading men. She might have married Milland, but he was already married. She declined to marry Cassini, largely because her parents couldn't stand him.

AP/Wide World

Oleg Cassini and Grace Kelly in 1955, before breakup

Q. On my first two visits to Hollywood, I searched in vain trying to find Bette Davis' star on Hollywood Boulevard's Walk of Fame. After writing to the friendly Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, I learned that Bette Davis had two stars embedded in the sidewalk. Then I got to thinking . . . if Bette Davis has two stars, are there others with two? Is there anyone with three or more stars?—J. Paul Kirk, Oklahoma City, Okla.

A. At this writing, there are 1852 celebrities with stars of honor on Hollywood's Walk of Fame. Bette Davis and Lucille Ball both have two; the comedians Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are honored with three; the singer Tony Martin has four; and Gene Autry, the singing cowboy, has five.

THE EXTRAORDINARY VARIETY IN CARS COMES ALONG JUST WHEN THE DRIVER/BUYER IS MORE ASTUTE AT CHOOSING A CAR TO SUIT HIS OR HER OWN TASTE AND NEEDS, AND AT FINDING OUT EXACTLY HOW MUCH A FAIR PRICE SHOULD BE. More Car For Your Dollar

Photos by Timothy White

Success has given "Big Three" auto chiefs new confidence: Don Petersen of Ford, Lee Iacocca of Chrysler and Roger Smith of General Motors (l-r).

THE DOLLAR'S 20 PERCENT DROP THIS YEAR against the Japanese yen and the German mark gave America's carmakers a turbo charge against their foreign competition. The imports' price advantages have virtually vanished. At the same time, Detroit also has seized the lead in styling. The result: Between lower prices and better looks, America's car companies suddenly are selling what American car drivers want to buy.

Yet, as PARADE discovered in its annual visit with the men at the head of Detroit's "Big Three," the U.S. car industry is still learning from its past mistakes. Detroit is hoping that its exciting array of new products, designs and warranties, as well as improvements in service, will make even more enthusiastic customers out of value-conscious—and style-conscious—car buyers.

Car-industry observers liken today's "aero" look, with its smooth streamlining and curvaceous lines, to a kind of flip side of the peaked fins and hard edges on automobiles of the 1950s. Both express self-confidence and euphoria on a grand scale.

Donald Petersen, Ford Motor Co. chairman and the man who started the style, couldn't agree more. Certainly Ford has a lot to be self-confident and euphoric about. Last year, the perennial No. 2 car company became No. 1 in profits for the first time since 1925.

It also captured 20 percent of the car market. A lot of that success had to do with its aerodynamic styling, particularly the popular Ford Thunderbird that led the way and the recent Taurus and Mercury Sable models. This year, Ford gave its all-new Lincoln Continental the aero look as well. A lot of Ford's success also had to do with trucks. For the second year running, Ford pickups are the most popular thing on four wheels (see "Pickup Truck," page 20).

Petersen's office in "Glasshouse"—as Ford world headquarters in Dearborn, Mich., is called—is a spare, pristine room with gleaming crystals from his rock collection in a glass case to one side. But, as he speaks, Petersen's smile is the shiniest object on display. "Our direction has been constant for some years," the 61-year-old chairman maintains. "That is to be accepted as the manufacturer of the world's best-quality products. And for that line of products to be truly driven by what the customer is asking for."

The new Lincoln Continental, priced around $25,000, is very much a symbol of everything Ford is now about. Its aero styling speaks to the company's continuing overtures to a more sophisticated, younger customer. Inside, according to Petersen, "it will have on-board diagnostic capabilities beyond anything we've ever offered." Service-bay computer linkups and portable linkups will report and remedy problems at microchip speed.

Utility vehicles are Ford's next battlefront. "It's probably the biggest dogfight at the moment," Petersen says. "General Motors is outselling us in utility, and Jeep, of course, does very, very well." Ford's current utility entries, its Bronco and Bronco II, are both very popular. However, Ford is revamping its Ranger pickup for this market as well. "Sporty" approaches to the Ranger will include design improvements like supercabs and high-style wheels—"all the cues," Petersen says, "that people go for when they think of a tough-but-fun truck."

Meanwhile, Ford is bringing three of its own new imports to the U.S.: the Festiva, a modernized cousin of the subcompact Fiesta, made in Korea; the larger Tracer, being produced in Taiwan and Mexico; and the Mérkur Scorpio, a German-built luxury car designed to compete with the Mercedes-Benz 190.

For more than a decade now, Chrysler Motors Corp., under its chairman, Lee

Japan & Korea—An Update

MAZDA "DRIVERS AREN'T satisfied anymore in just the hardware itself," says Mazda's president, Kenichi Yamamoto, 65. "They want good service, total satisfaction. We aim to enrich people's lives. Cars now are of two classes—the simple, reliable ones and the value-added cars with special character." There is, for example, the all-new 929 (Mazda's answer to the Mercedes-Benz 190) and this year's 626, which, in its 4-door turbo models, introduces computer-governed electronic 4-wheel steering. "Using new technology, we can create a wider variety of custom-made cars to suit every taste," Yamamoto says. "They'll have information, navigation and control systems. You'll be able to obtain traffic information, make hotel reservations or locate a service station, drugstore or hospital."

TOYOTA SHOICHIRO Toyoda, 62, president of Toyota, is also intent on meeting drivers' needs. In the U.S., where Toyota last year sold 1.03 million cars and trucks (28 percent of its total production), he aims to establish round-the-clock service stations.

Toyota also is investing heavily in telecommunications. Mobile phones, Toyoda says, can be enhanced to transmit fax messages. CD discs, which now record high-quality music, could be loaded with map information.

Diminished profits caused by the rising yen in relation to the dollar concern Toyoda. "We can't control it, so we must counter it," he says. "The oil-producing countries are buying less, and we have trade problems with Europe and the U.S. The solution lies in increased demand here in Japan."

HONDA WITH CURRENT trade tensions, Tadashi Kume, 55, Honda's new president, projects increases in the production of Hondas in the U.S. and in exports of its American-made cars (even to Japan). Although Honda outsold Toyota and Nissan in the U.S., it is No. 3 in Japan, attracting the young but not conservative middle-aged drivers. So, last year, Honda entered the luxury-car market with its Acura Legend and Integra models.

Kume cites the '88 Prelude's new 4-wheel steering system as "confirming the changing relationship between people and the car." It makes parking easy in tight spots, affords greater stability on sharp turns and reduces skidding on slippery surfaces or at high speeds. All major Japanese automakers now have a 4-wheel system.

NISSAN TO MEET HIGH production costs caused by the rising yen, Nissan and the other Japanese automakers raised prices in the U.S. nearly 20 percent in 1986 and at least 2 percent more this year. Yutaka Kume, Nissan's 66-year-old chief, says he is also "strengthening domestic production and sales and increasing overseas production." He adds, "In the future, we will need to cooperate even more with companies abroad." Nissan has cooperative ventures with Motor Iberia S.A. of Spain and Daewoo of Korea.

Nissan's new technology includes a stereo radar system that spots potential hazards and warns the driver or automatically initiates evasive action.

HYUNDAI THE COUP OF THE year was Hyundai of Korea's invasion of the U.S. market with its low-cost Excels. Hyundai's chairman, Chung Se Yung, 59, had worried about tough U.S. emissions regulations, Japanese competition and critical American drivers. He passed the tests and sold his car for $1000 less than its Japanese counterparts. Chung speaks now of good after-service and Hyundai's new Cross Country Motor Club, with a toll-free number if an Excel driver is disabled outside one of the 31 states that have dealers and service outlets.

Two other Korean firms have entered the low-price car market—Daewoo through Pontiac and Kia with Ford. Chung, meanwhile, is shipping more cars worldwide. "Japan," he notes, "is the most difficult nut to crack: Regulations are too tough, and they make good small cars themselves. I guess the day Americans can sell their cars in Japan, we'll be able to get in too."

Iacocca, has been America's most theatrical automaker. However, in July, its performance took a somewhat farcical turn as the company sought to explain a federal indictment for selling as new 60,000 vehicles that company employees had driven with their odometers disconnected.

Yet, after pausing to apologize, the 63-year-old Iacocca and his company are still rushing ahead. Chrysler's most dramatic development is its $1 billion-plus purchase of American Motors Corp. stock from the French car giant Renault. The pending merger will give Chrysler the treasured Jeep marque and a solid 20 percent market share in light trucks and utility vehicles. "For several years," explains Iacocca, speaking in his memorabilia-filled office at Chrysler's Highland Park, Mich., headquarters, "we've wanted to pour the coal into the truck business. We just needed a great opportunity like this to come along."

Chrysler also holds about 47 percent of the minivan market—which it virtually created, with a big hand from American women. "Once we got the 'truck feel' out by improving handling and making them fit in a garage," says Iacocca, "no one had to draw pictures for women, especially those who need to move a family around. They cottoned right up." Chrysler is starting to export minivans to Europe, where nothing like them exists. "We're returning the visit to Europe," he says. "I didn't think I'd see that day before I died."

Iacocca also is enthusiastic about luxury and high-comfort cars. "It's a fantastic, rich market," he says. "But it's the toughest market in the world to get into." Not only must Chrysler compete with GM's Cadillac, Buick and Oldsmobile, but there's also Ford's Lincoln and imports like BMW, Mercedes-Benz and Jaguar. To break in, Chrysler plants now are churning out spiffy new V-6-powered New Yorkers and New Yorker Landaus for 1988 in lieu of subcompact Omnis and Horizons. "Then, in rapid order, within maybe 12 months," Iacocca estimates, "we'll come in with a longer, more luxurious Fifth Avenue, and then an all-new Imperial, and then we'll also throw in a Maserati coupe."

"We have to make the whole act of buying a car simpler," Iacocca contends. Certainly getting cars fixed is easier now. Last year, Chrysler gave its customers seven-year/70,000-mile warranties on engines and transmissions. Ford and GM offered six-year/60,000-mile protection. Iacocca would like to remove $2500 per car from his costs—and your price—by 1990. To do this, the company recently turned its budgets back to 1981 overhead levels. "We're on target," he says, beaming. "It's coming out."

But if you want to see Lee Iacocca's eyes really sparkle, ask him about convertibles—his continuing, consuming passion. It seems nothing can change a Mustang man. "The real hot car we've got is the new LeBaron convertible coupe," he says. "We're building 50,000 of them." Last year's version was the pace car at the Indy 500. But Iacocca thinks this year's sleeker design will be even faster off the starting line.

"Less is more" sounds funny coming from General Motors, manufacturer of five of the nation's 10 top-selling cars. (The GM best-sellers, in order: Chevrolet Celebrity and Cavalier, Oldsmobile Ciera, Pontiac Grand Am and Oldsmobile Delta 88.) Still, GM has trimmed its market share projections for next year. Among its problems: GM has the highest costs among the Big Three. Its robots and plant modernization have cost the company dearly in the short term, while it has lost the initiative to Ford in today's fashionable aerodynamic styling.

Just the same, Chairman Roger Smith has a hard time agreeing with GM's critics. "People forget that we sell 20 percent, in round terms, of all the cars sold in the world—and we are going to keep doing that," he insists. When the bugs are worked out of the robots and other planned improvements take place, GM's costs will slide, he says, bringing the prices of its products down.

"The biggest thing the American consumer is going to see from us is greater value for the price of his car," the 62-year-old Smith explains. "Look what we have done with the 6/60 warranty. [GM was the first to introduce it and offers seven-year/100,000-mile protection on its Allanté line.] We've brought the cost of warranty protection down by getting our quality up. I was talking to a dealer the other day, and he said we had cut his service business by 40 percent. He shut down a whole service building because he didn't need it anymore."

GM's goal remains to provide something for every car buyer. In Smith's view, "Pontiac is our excitement car. Chevrolet is more value-oriented, geared toward the younger, first-time buyer. Oldsmobile goes more toward reliable, family vehicles. Buick comes up nearer the luxury class. And Cadillac, of course, is the standard in the world." Even so, these five marques apparently aren't enough. "In the last 18 months, we've gone through the biggest market survey in our history," says Smith. "We used to make small-, medium- and large-sized cars. Now we've got 19 market segments to address."

The Corsica and Beretta, for instance, with their sloped brows and flush-mounted door handles, are GM's overture to youth and the age of aero. But Smith takes the styling trends with a big grain of salt: "Our look-alike cars—remember, the ones we got scolded for? The A-cars. We sold four times as many of those as Ford did their Taurus and Sable."

Europe—An Update

THE MAKERS OF EUROPE'S luxury cars have been fazed by the dropping dollar. Yet, at the end of the auto market that they cater to, snob appeal is more critical than sticker price.

European cars are built for more varied driving than the open freeway —they must have excellent braking for mountain roads, and be capable of cruising at sustained speeds on the autobahns yet durable enough to operate on primitive roads. The result: efficient lightweight engines, computerized braking systems, aerodynamic body structures and rugged yet smooth suspensions.

Volkswagen occupies the middle range of the European imports. The U.S. accounts for 10 percent of VW's worldwide sales. Two "revolutionary" replacements for its Quantum and Scirocco models are currently on line for 1989. Meanwhile, VW's sister, Audi, adds the 5000CS Turbo Quattro, with 4-wheel drive, computerized braking and advanced suspension.

Volvo, the sensible Swede, sells one-third of its car production to customers in the United States. Most Volvo owners value the car's icebox-like durability. Still, to add some flash, Volvo plans a $35,000 Italian-designed model for 1988—the 780.

In 1987, Britain's Jaguar introduced two new models: the XJ6 and the Vanden Plas, its first fully restyled cars in 20 years. Both are big successes. With the XJ-S, Jaguar now sells 25,000 cars here. Prices start at $40,000.

Last year, 30,000 Americans paid $24,000 to $78,500 for Porsches they can drive to work as well as on the racetrack. Porsche's 928S 4 recently was clocked at 171 miles per hour, yet it's completely street-legal.

Priced at $28,450 to $73,260, the German Mercedes-Benz remains the zenith for many motorists. At $45,000, this year's 300 Series coupe with 3-liter engine only feeds the dream.

Finally, the BMWs, with their distinctive grilles, cost from $23,180 to more than $60,000. Gunter Kramer, chairman of BMW of North America, speaks for his company—but he could be speaking for all U.S. buyers of European luxury cars—when he says, "An interesting number of affluent people want a car that performs and sacrifices nothing. They want more than comfort. They want undistracted enjoyment of the act of driving."

If you could afford any car in the world...

What Would You Drive?

IF YOU COULD HAVE ANY CAR in the world . . . ? Everyone knows this daydream. Maybe you'd get a real ballistic-missile-type sports car. But the speed limit is 65 or less, and where would you put the kids? Or maybe you'd take a vast, cushiony Rolls-Royce. But would that make the neighbors laugh? How about owning a classic from the days when auto designers weren't kidding about style? However, a classic car is an old car, and it's going to be trouble. The heck with it. Choose a sensible, full-size American car with all the luxury options. Or is that too dull?

Getting the car of your dreams—like getting any wish—could turn out to be complicated. PARADE interviewed some people who really can have any car in the world. These are smart and successful folks. Maybe they know what to do when your automotive fantasies come true. (Then again, maybe not—they mostly disagree with each other.)

FIVE CELEBRITIES—WITH ALL THE OPTIONS—REVEAL THE DREAM CARS THEY CHOSE FOR THEMSELVES AND TELL WHY

Jay Leno is America's hottest standup comedian. He gave 300 performances in 41 states last year. He's on the David Letterman show almost as often as David. His movie, Collision Course, premieres this fall and so does his prime-time TV show, The Jay Leno Family Hour, on NBC. But, at heart, Jay is a regular guy. And regular guys—as all wives and mothers know—are just overgrown teenagers.

Leno has an M&L 427 Cobra, a replica of the fearsome car created more than 20 years ago by race driver Carroll Shelby, who put a gigantic 427-cubic-inch Ford engine into a small English A.C. sports car. Jay's 427 is not really a replica, it's more of a reconstruction. It was hand-built to the original specifications.

Leno is enthusiastic—maybe even a little wild-eyed—when he talks about what the Cobra's 475 horsepower engine (fueled by aviation gas) can do: "The tires light up and smoke," he says. "The car slides around. When you put the Cobra into a turn, you can steer it with the gas pedal. The back end breaks loose. You step on the throttle. And you take off like a shot."

The '80s cars are too complicated and just don't have the same excitement for him. "There's nothing new I really like," says Leno. "My wife [Mavis] has a Honda Prelude. I'm a pretty good mechanic, but I don't understand anything under its hood." Leno harks back to the days when cars were cars and boys would be boys. "I want all the vehicles I couldn't have in 1967," he says.

Susan Sullivan, who plays Maggie Gioberti on CBS's Falcon Crest, has had her heart's desire of a car for 10 years.

When Sullivan first came to L.A. to appear in the ABC-TV 1976 miniseries Rich Man/Poor Man—Book II, she loved to window-shop for the perfect car. One day, in a Hollywood dealership, she found it—a beautiful 1975 Mercedes 450 SL roadster. And the salesman was pleasant, too, not like car salesmen sometimes can be. Unfortunately, her dream car was just that, a dream. She simply couldn't afford it.

Then Susan saw the same car advertised in the want ads for much less money. Her Mercedes salesman turned out to be a Susan Sullivan fan. He volunteered to come along and tell her if this private sale was a good deal. It was. "It has been a great car," she adds.

Many automotive experts consider the 450 Mercedes one of the best-engineered cars ever. Susan Sullivan says it is better than that: "It's like buying a good piece of jewelry that you can keep for a long time." While on location recently, she rented a new car. "I hated all that digital computer junk all over the dashboard," she recalls. "The 450 SL is a relatively simple car, the Chanel suit of cars."

Of course there's a pragmatic, commonsense side to any good actress. "One of the dream things about this car," says Sullivan, "is that I've found a dream mechanic to go with it." Who could ask for more?

What kind of dream car does a dream girl have? Dreamgirls star Sheryl Lee Ralph—she played Deena Jones in that Broadway musical and now plays Ginger on the syndicated comedy series It's a Living—doesn't have a gold-plated Bentley. Sheryl Lee has a 1964½ Ford Mustang, which she bought for $800. "To me, a Mustang was the epitome of what a young actress from New York should have in L.A.," she says.

Of course Sheryl Lee can afford to buy something more luxurious now. And she has. After Dreamgirls, she says, she told herself: "We're doing better now. We can buy new." She bought a 1985 silver-gray Pontiac Fiero because she wanted something "sporty, feminine, fast and American." And after the success of her first season on It's a Living, she says, she told herself: "Now we can have what we've always liked." She got a 450 SLC Mercedes coupe.

She still has all three cars. But which is her favorite? "I love the Mustang best—because it was the first," says Sheryl Lee. Also, it saved her life. She was driving it down the Ventura Freeway when a jagged piece of metal came flying across the road, bounced off the Mustang's hood and tore a gash in the roof. Its good, solid American top helped this star to keep on shining.

Michael Nader—who plays powerful mining engineer Dex Dexter on ABC's Dynasty—has his dream car: an English Range Rover. It's like the Land Rover of safari fame. It has the same tough chassis and go-anyplace 4-wheel drive. But it also has beautiful bodywork, a luxurious interior and a big, high-performance aluminum V-8 engine.

Nader didn't want a car that was a Los Angeles cliché. "I didn't want to fall into the Mercedes-owning quagmire," he says. He likes the Range Rover because it's fast, handsome and the right size. And, though the interior is beautiful, it can all "come apart and be washed."

Michael's wife, Robin, had other considerations: "With a 3-year-old daughter," she says, "safety was the thing. We spent a year looking and couldn't find anything that seemed really safe." The Range Rover's sturdy build and excellent visibility from the driver's seat was the answer. And the automatic transmission and 4-wheel drive means she doesn't have to shift gears while driving to the Naders' Hollywood Hills home. "The dogs love it too," says Robin.

The Naders admit they're living out their fantasies with the Range Rover. "Michael and I would much rather be on a ranch in Timbuktu," says Robin, "but we can't right now. So I take the Range Rover up on Mulholland Drive. It's almost like being away."

"If everything else fails in getting away from it all," says Michael, "this car won't."

Charlton Heston has a car that's almost as identifiable as he is—a 1987 Corvette. "It's one of the most beautiful pieces of automotive machinery in the world," he says, "especially with the top down." Heston has owned sports cars for many years, including three previous Corvettes—a 1959, a 1969 and a 1983. "After 1969," he says, "Corvette didn't make a real sports car for a long time. They looked like sports cars, but they weren't engineered or equipped as sports cars." He held onto the '69 until Corvette launched its current road rocket in the early '80s. Of course a real sports car should be an open roadster, so, as soon as Corvette began making convertibles again, Heston sold the '83 and bought an '87.

The Corvette's speed and beauty are beguiling. But when a man has been at the top of the moviemaking business as long as Charlton Heston has, he has seen a lot of speed and beauty come and go. The Corvette has something more: "It has extraordinary safety features," says Heston, "such as the anti-lock braking system. People think of these cars as glitzy speed wagons. But the braking and suspension make it one of the safest cars on the road. And, if you need a little extra speed [a hint of mischief comes into his voice], it's got that too. Nobody's going to cut you off."

Heston uses the Corvette for all his everyday driving. He says a brisk Corvette run to his Beverly Hills home down sinuous Mulholland Drive is much more fun than life in a big car on the freeway.

Heston was interviewed by telephone, and, a few minutes after the interview ended, he called back, saying, "There's one thing I forgot to say: Nobody gets in any of our family's cars without fastening the seat belts. This is very important—especially in a high-performance car." Charlton Heston didn't get successful enough to own his fantasy car by being foolish, and he doesn't want us to be either. Buckle up!

How To Love A Pickup Truck

TO AMERICANS WHO KNOW the joys of pickup-truck ownership, this news comes as no surprise: The best-selling vehicle in the United States—outselling all other 1986 models—was a truck. Specifically, the big, fast Ford F-Series pickup. What's more, the No. 2 best-seller also was a full-size pickup, General Motors' Chevrolet C-Series, equally big and just as fast.

Long regarded—inaccurately—as just a farm or work vehicle, today's pickup has taken the place of a car in many minds and hearts: One of every seven vehicles sold in the U.S. is a pickup truck.

There's every reason to consider pickups as worthy replacements for automobiles. Pickups are available with tasteful, comfortable interiors that offer every convenience found in cars—air conditioning, cruise control, adjustable steering wheels, power windows and the other accoutrements American drivers expect—and they usually cost less than a comparably equipped car (see chart).

Ford and General Motors have given their full-size pickups new, more aerodynamically efficient bodies. Chrysler's Dodge Dakota has this same smoothly rounded look, and the full-size Dodge pickups soon will follow suit.

Sophisticated technology has come to pickups; one example is anti-locking rear brakes. Unloaded, a pickup has a forward-weight bias, which can make the rear end skittish in emergency braking. The improved braking system helps curtail this.

Pickup engines range in size from a 1.9-liter 82 hp 4-cylinder in the Isuzu to the whopping 230 hp fuel-injected 7.4-liter V-8 in the new Chevrolet C3500.

Because pickups usually weigh less than cars equipped with comparable engines, the driver who enjoys head-snapping acceleration won't be disappointed. Larger engines cost more, of course, but they're usually worth it. Electronic fuel injection (providing better efficiency and improved winter starting) is becoming almost commonplace on truck engines. It's a good feature to shop for.

Pickups fall first into two categories, full-size and compact. The appearance last year of the Dodge Dakota—ranked, like American Motors' Jeep Comanche, between full-size and mid-size pickups—complicated this basic division, but any pickup owner will say that there are two kinds of pickups: the big ones—made by Chevrolet, Dodge, Ford and GMC—and the others. The builders of compact trucks include Detroit's Big Three plus the imports (Isuzu, Mazda, Mitsubishi, Nissan, Toyota and a Mitsubishi-built Dodge).

Two other physical characteristics put a pickup in its proper place: the cab style and 4-wheel or 2-wheel drive, features noted by designations of 4x4 or 4x2.

A pickup can have the basic one-seat-for-three arrangement, the same single bench seat with a spacious storage area behind it, or a second set of seats in the form of a second bench seat or a pair of jump seats that fold down from the side. There's also an extended cab, or "crew-cab," pickup with four doors and seating for six.

TODAY'S MODELS CAN COMBINE THE COMFORTS OF A CAR WITH THE RUGGED FUN OF 4-WHEEL DRIVE

The 4-wheel-drive feature, increasingly popular, appears in both imports and domestic makes. Research shows that off-road capability is a major reason for buying 4x4 pickups, yet off-road excursions account for less than one percent of the trips made in these vehicles, meaning that 4x4 pickups probably meet most of their slippery, rough-road challenges on paved streets in winter.

Most observers lump together sports utility vehicles and compact pickup trucks, something pickup lovers resent. The sports utility vehicles—such as the Ford Bronco and Bronco II, Chevrolet's Blazer and smaller S-10 Blazer and the imports, ranging from the tiny Mitsubishi Montero ($10,089) to the $31,000 Range Rover from Great Britain—don't approach pickup sales. Of the nearly 5 million trucks sold, only 732,013 were sports utility vehicles; 2,677,498 (more than half) were pickups. Researchers find that a spirit of adventure and a feeling of independence often are cited as rewards of pickup ownership.

"You just feel kind of tough sitting up there, high above the road," says the owner of a big Ford F-Series pickup. He has equipped it with a roll bar; big, above-the-roof, high-mounted driving lights; and a spread-steel grille protector. And he drives it to the supermarket and to commute to work every day. Commuting—the largest single activity for all pickups, regardless of size—needn't be dull. Chevrolet's all-new C/K-Series, for example, offers a Silverado SS pickup that is powered by a big, 350-cubic-inch engine similar to the one found in the Corvette.

Big, fast engines raise the question of fuel economy. There are compact pickups with small engines, and diesels are available. Even so, a pickup's fuel economy on the highway generally is less than that of a car with the same engine. This is due largely to the poor aerodynamics of the basic truck shape, despite recent improvements. In stop-and-go city driving, there's less of a fuel-economy difference between cars and trucks.

Women constitute more than 18 percent of the buyers of small pickups, a J.D. Power & Associates research study shows, and even more are the principal drivers of pickups. Car and Driver magazine's annual new-car buyer survey says women drive nearly one out of every eight full-size pickups.

Who else buys trucks? Demographics for all truck buyers are not readily available, but the buyers of compact pickups are mostly male (82 percent), married (69 percent), about 35 years old with median incomes also in the mid-30s, and 28 percent hold college degrees—close enough to a yuppie profile to discomfit pickup traditionalists.

American truck builders own clear title to the large pickup segment—where there are no imports—but imports have a firm foothold in the compact truck market. Ten years ago, imports had little impact on U.S. truck sales. Today, one out of every five trucks sold here is an import, not counting the 102,499 Nissan pickups sold last year that were built in Smyrna, Tenn. Wherever they are built, their Japanese nameplates—perceived by buyers as indicative of quality and economy—are cited as a primary reason for purchase.

More than two-thirds of all compact pickups are bought as replacement vehicles. Half of them replace passenger cars, the other half replace other trucks—some full-size, some compact. The average owner, male or female, uses cars and pickups similarly—for commuting, personal errands and recreation. Pickups can carry plenty—just check their payload, or carrying capacity. Affecting payload are engine size, wheelbase, the length of the bed and the strength of the suspension. Pickup payloads range from 1000 pounds—a half-ton—in the Nissan pickup to more than 6000 pounds—three tons—in the big (136-inch wheelbase) Ford F-350. A payload of 1500-2000 pounds satisfies most noncommercial users.

Pickups work better as second vehicles than as primary transportation, because most can carry only three people. A crew-cab pickup, though, with seating for six, could serve well as a family's only vehicle and, in farming areas, sometimes does.

On any given weekend, you'll likely see pickup beds filled with motorcycles, lawn mowers, antiques, even beds. You also may see pickup beds filled with people and dogs, which is not safe and not recommended. On the subject of safety and trucks: In 1986, the last year for which statistics are available from the National Highway Traffic and Safety Administration, 5552 of the 34,843 persons who died on the road were driving or riding in pickups. Used sensibly, a pickup truck is a safe, versatile, muscular helpmate for camping trips, trash hauls and other heavy duty.

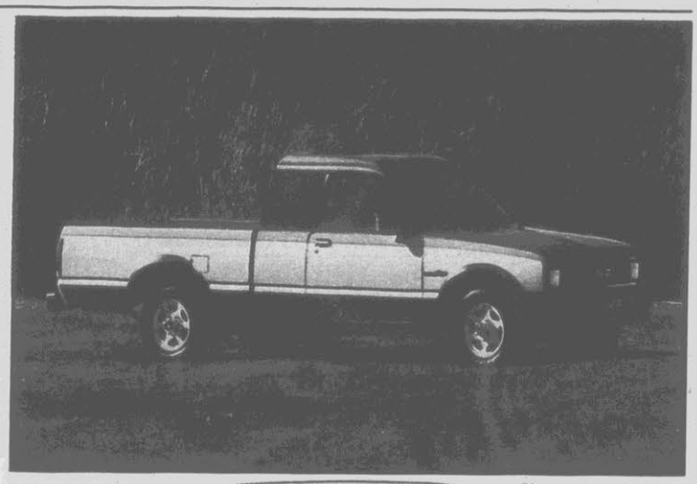

But, best of all, it's fun riding high above your fellow motorists, with Willie Nelson or Alabama playing on the tape deck, a big V-8 rumbling under the big wide hood, and a feeling that you're off on a great adventure. Even if it's just to McDonald's or Burger King.

Today's Car Is The Best

THE PLAIN TRUTH ABOUT American automakers is that they just don't make cars the way they used to.

And for this, you should be thankful.

Despite the fond and even romantic memories you may affix to the cars of the 1950s and '60s—especially if you courted in, say, a 1955 hardtop coupe or a '63 convertible—those vehicles were not chariots of the gods.

By today's standards, the state-of-the-art autos of the 1950s and '60s were crude, uncomfortable, cantankerous machines that required frequent tune-ups, oil changes and lube jobs to keep them running properly.

Most U.S. cars then still were powered by large engines and rode on stiff, bias-ply tires that blew out with very little provocation. They were built on inflexible, heavy, separate steel frames. They had drum brakes and heavy, slow steering. The metal body parts were prone to early rust-through.

Today's cars stop, turn, handle and ride better than drivers ever would have thought possible just a few years ago.

We now take for granted such safety features as 5-mph bumpers, dual brakes, warning lights on the dash to alert drivers to brake failure, break-away rearview mirrors, seat belts, soft dashboards and side-impact protection. And that's without mentioning such little niceties as electronic climate control, dirt- and wear-resistant upholstery fabrics, reduced wind noise, digital instruments and trip computers that tell us everything instantaneously, from fuel consumption to outside temperature.

In fact, the computer is one of the most exciting keys to the technological revolution in the auto industry. Today, computers not only help design and build cars, but they also control just about every aspect of the car itself—from streamlining quality-control procedures and assembly-line processes in the factory, to tuning the radio, to feeding fuel to the engine. And, as in such cars as the Chrysler New Yorker (shown on the cover), they are regulating cabin temperature and smoothness of ride. Safety and maintenance also are automatically monitored by microprocessors.

Cindy Lewis

Shelly Katz

The 1948 Buick Roadmaster had a "million-dollar grin," whereas today's special features add safety and comfort.

In fact, computers even tell a driver—or a mechanic—what and where a car's problems are and, often, how to fix them. These on-board computers, which vary in sophistication with a car's price range, are found today in most major cars. Computers, in short, affect a long checklist of auto features.

Here are a number of ways in which our automobiles are better now:

• Engines—New engines are more powerful for their size and more maintenance-free than ever before, with average oil-and-filter change intervals of 7500 miles. (These tasks used to come up every 4000 miles or so.) They are covered by warranties ranging from six years/60,000 miles (GM and Ford) to seven years/70,000 miles (Chrysler) to seven years/100,000 miles (GM's Cadillac Allanté).

Engines are electronically managed by computer sensors that control fuel and air flow, ignition spark, idle speed, engine knock and other functions. Electronic ignition systems have replaced the distributor, points and condenser, all of which once required frequent maintenance and adjustment.

Ford's EEC-IV electronic system uses a computer with a memory capacity equal to that of many home computers. Chevrolet's ECM computer can sense and signal up to 600,000 commands per second.

• Transmissions—The old three-speed manual with column-mounted shifter has been replaced by four- and five-speed transmissions with convenient floor-mounted shifters, which offer improved performance and economy.

Once, up to 20 percent of an engine's efficiency was lost as its power was routed through the automatic transmission. Today, many automatics have four speeds, not three, and the fourth is overdrive, for improved gas economy. To eliminate slippage and efficiency loss, many of these automatics are directly linked mechanically in fourth gear. In some of the more sophisticated cars, computers "read" engine performance and "know" the best moment to shift.

• Four-wheel steering—Honda's Prelude Si and Mazda's 626 Turbo LX are offering this feature for the first time. Four-wheel steering eases handling at high and low speeds. Honda's system is mechanical and responds to the car's steering angle. Mazda's system responds both to the steering angle and to the car's rate of speed. It has hydraulic/mechanical links for rear-wheel steering and uses a computer to electronically control the front steering. A fail-safe feature locks rear wheels into a straight-ahead position, if needed.

• Brakes—Disc brakes previously were found only on race cars and a few exotic sports cars, but now they've become almost standard. Most cars have these more efficient binders on the front wheels, and many have them on all four. Two separate hydraulic systems operate the brakes to eliminate total brake failure. Anti-lock braking systems (ABS) are available on more and more cars.

• Suspension systems—New suspension systems provide the best compromise between responsive handling and comfortable ride. In some cars, a driver can push a button to adjust the shock absorbers to suit road conditions (twisty road or smooth highway) or driving style (sporty or conservative).

• Tires—In the 1950s, the best bias-ply tires usually needed replacing after 25,000 to 30,000 miles. Today's steel-belted radials easily last 40,000 miles or more. And thanks to better tread designs, radial construction and new rubber compounds, tires ride more smoothly, have less rolling resistance (which helps fuel economy) and provide better all-weather traction.

• Rust-resistance—Due to improved anti-corrosion methods and materials, new cars are highly rust-resistant. And stainless-steel exhaust systems in more and more cars (and now on all of Chrysler's models) have extended the life of tail pipes and mufflers far beyond old standards.

"Best father on earth" and son, Geoffrey

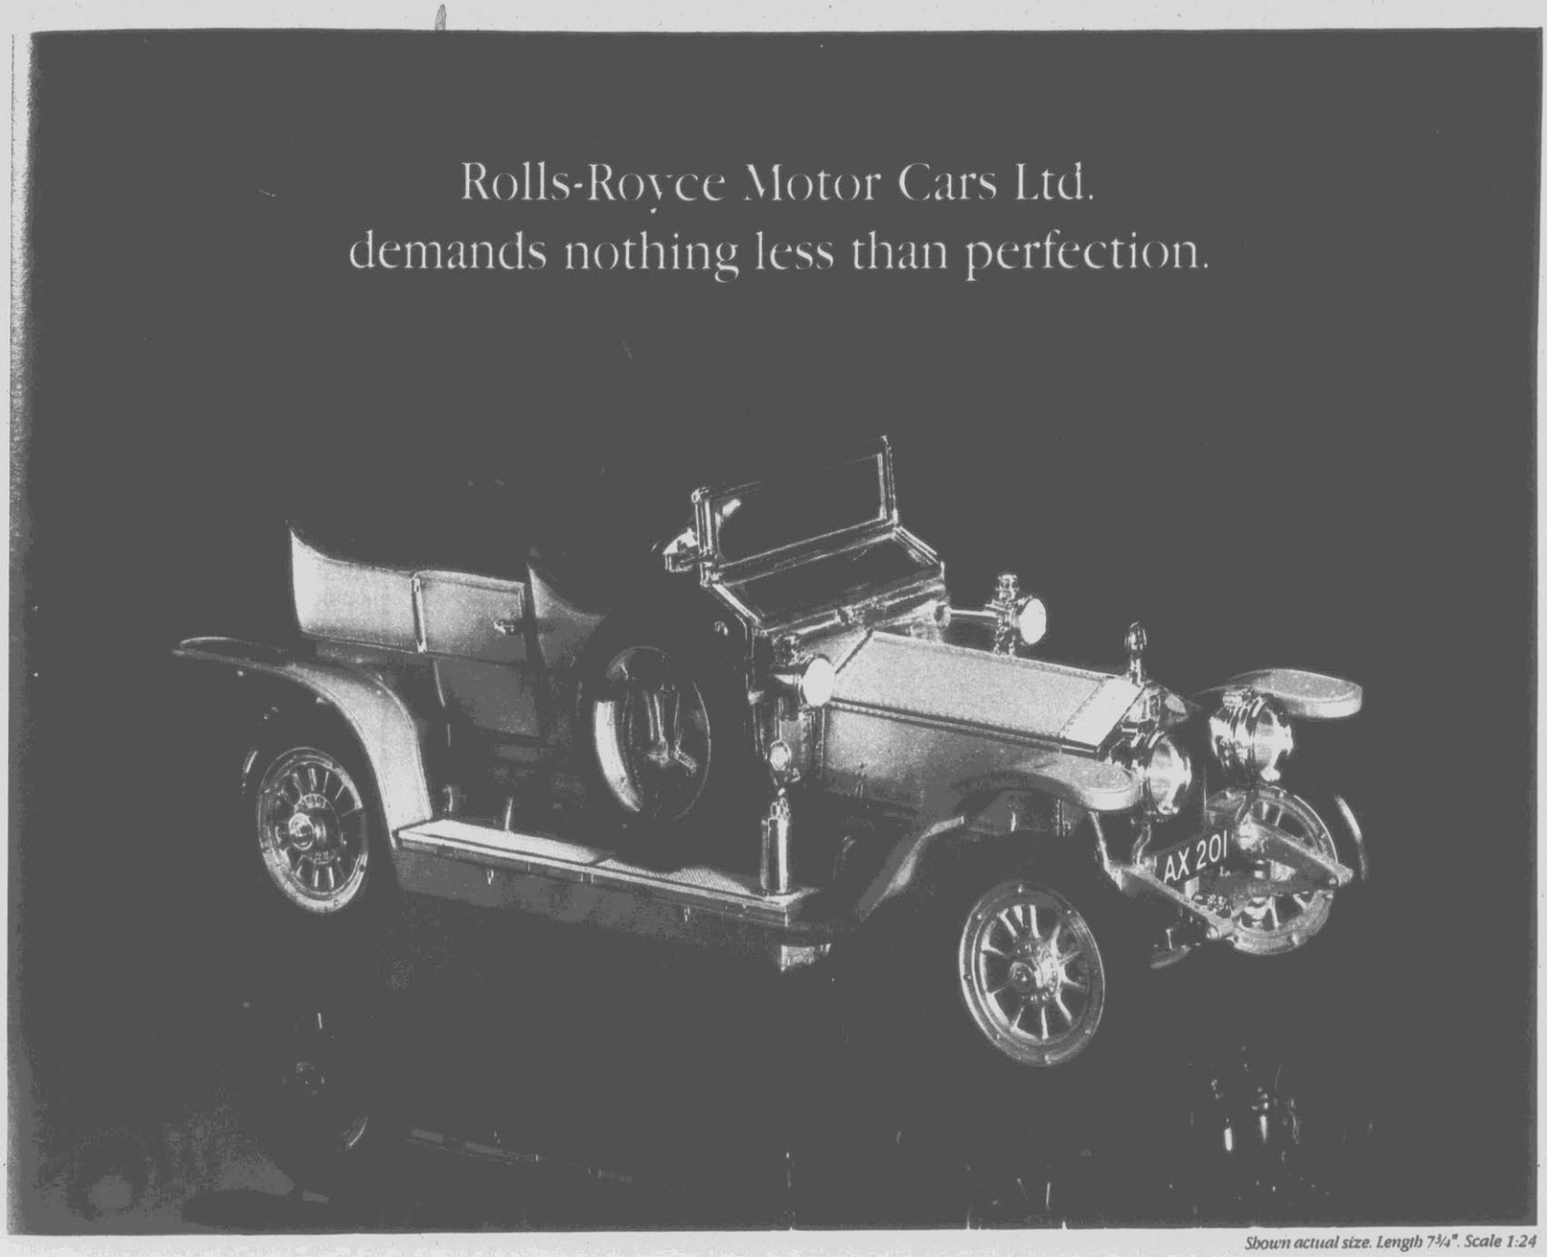

The sons of famous fathers frequently lead schizoid lives. They are grateful for the privileges and opportunities that paternal fame affords them. Yet they resent their fathers, fearing they will be unable to equal or even approach the old man's accomplishments and will suffer by comparison.

Geoffrey Moore, 22—the tall, handsome son of Roger Moore, 59, the tall, handsome British actor who starred in a half-dozen James Bond movies—has not yet entered the second stage of hostility. He hopes, in fact, to avoid it. He has embarked on a career as a pop singer and recently introduced his first single record, "Sleep With Me Tonight," in London. "I know," Geoffrey concedes, "I'm getting extra attention at the start of my music career because of my father, but I can't run away from who I am. I'm very happy and lucky to have a father like mine. He is the best father on earth. I really respect and admire him."

Young Moore—who was educated at Le Rosey in Switzerland, one of the most expensive prep schools in Europe—hopes to prove himself as a pop star and then to try his talents as an actor. At the moment, he's trying to live down a reputation as a minor playboy who specializes in dating women several years his senior.

The 1907 Rolls-Royce Silver Ghost. It advances a revolutionary concept in the fascinating field of model car collecting. Perfection.

A scale re-creation with such convincing standards of detail, quality and precision that Rolls-Royce Motor Cars Limited has recognized it as the authorized die-cast model of The Silver Ghost.

And so scrupulously accurate that company officials have verified the model for authenticity.

Named for its silver-plated trim, metallic-silver paintwork and extraordinary silence, The Silver Ghost offered luxury and performance previously unknown. And the prototype for this die-cast model is based directly on first-hand studies of the original Silver Ghost.

The elegant Roi des Belges coachwork is carefully painted and hand polished to a deep sheen. And the exterior trim is plated with sterling silver—protectively coated—matching the original exactly.

There are soft tufted seats, doors and tool boxes that open and close, fully operable steering, complete instrumentation—and engine detailing that shows the two sparkplugs on each of six cylinders.

What price perfection? A custom model of this high quality would cost hundreds or even thousands of dollars. But The Silver Ghost is priced at just $120.

Sore at the Airlines? Fight Back!

Have many air travelers lost confidence in this nation's airlines? Are they tired of endless delays, routine overbookings, lame excuses and lousy service? The answer is a big, fat "yes."

In the first six months of the year, according to the Federal Aviation Administration, the 22 busiest airports in the U.S. reported 162,778 delays, while other government agencies disclosed a rising mountain of cancellations and complaints. Worse yet, the crash in Detroit of Northwest Airlines Flight 255 in August, with at least 156 deaths—plus an increase in close calls among aircraft—has aroused in the public a fear of flying. People suspect a decline in equipment maintenance, pilot training, baggage handling and operations in general.

In 1978, when routes and fares were deregulated, new airlines were formed. They offered bargain fares, stimulating the old carriers to reduce costs to meet the growing competition. In some cases where airlines were merged, safety may have been compromised.

The FAA contends that deregulation has not been responsible for any decline in safety, but the new Aviation Safety Commission is studying the correlation between deregulation and safety. It will present its findings early next year, and the advance word is that they will sizzle.

Meanwhile, if you want to know what rights you have as an airline passenger—and they are considerable—you can purchase a 32-page booklet, Fly-Rights, A Guide to Air Travel in the U.S., for $1 from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 38, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. It contains valuable information on overbooking, reservations and tickets, delayed and canceled flights, fares, the art of complaining and, most important, airline safety. If you're tired of being hassled by the airlines and in the mood to fight back, this booklet is for you.

Population Trends

In the first half of the 1980s, the population of this country grew by a little more than 5% (from 226.5 million to 238.7 million), with the sunbelt states generating faster growth than the frostbelt states. Herewith a list of the five states with the largest population increases and the five with the largest population decreases:

2) Texas 2,140,000
3) Florida 1,619,000
4) Georgia 513,000
5) Arizona 469,000

Losses

1) Michigan ..... -174,000
2) Ohio 53,000

Possible TV Hits

Several months ago, knowledgeable time-buyers in the major advertising agencies predicted that the following three new situation comedies might prove to be the hits of the 1987-88 TV season:

• A Different World, a spin-off from The Cosby Show, starring Lisa Bonet as Denise Huxtable away at college. Thursdays, 8:30-9 p.m. EDT.

• My Two Dads, which deals with two young men who've been willed custody of Nicole, a 12-year-old orphan. Sundays, 8:30-9 p.m. EDT.

• Hooperman, in which John Ritter, of Three's Company fame, plays a San Francisco plainclothes detective who inherits an apartment house with wacky tenants. Wednesdays, 9-9:30 p.m. EDT.

Three promising programs (clockwise from left): A Different World, with Lisa Bonet (c); My Two Dads, with Paul Reiser (l) and Greg Evigan; Hooperman, with John Ritter

Sex-Drive Stimulant

Eli Lilly & Co., one of the nation's pharmaceutical giants, won't give you the time of day about it, but the Indianapolis-based corporation is testing a drug whose purpose is to revive one's depressed sex drive.

A spokesman for the company acknowledges the existence of the experimental drug but says, "It's far too early to say anything about it—good, bad or neutral—and that's all I'm going to say."

University Hospitals of Cleveland, however, one of the 15 organizations around the country that are participating in the testing, put out a call on Aug. 3 for 40 volunteers. Within a week, more than 1200 men and women with lagging libidos had responded. The new drug is said to stimulate that portion of the brain which controls the sex drive.

POLL

HOW OUR BOSSES RATED

How are our bosses? Well, 2174 readers rated their bosses in response to PARADE's informal poll in our "What People Earn" issue of June 14. The results? It seems good bosses and bad bosses run neck and neck: 1073 votes came in on the positive side of the scale (numbers 6 to 10), while the negative side (numbers 1 to 5) gained 1057 votes. The remaining 44 votes went off the scale.

Comments abounded. For every couple of letters from employees who felt they had the best bosses around, a letter would come in describing a supervisor as a "low-down dirty skunk." While one Midwesterner wrote, "I couldn't find, buy, make or wish for a better boss," another wrote how she dreaded Monday mornings with her boss, "Mr. Perfect." A newly appointed manager said he had done well by doing exactly the opposite of his former boss. On the flip side, a California reader told us that she was always made to feel she worked "with" her bosses rather than "for" them.

Finally, one woman warned others not to work for their spouses—"a thankless job." Maybe she should be self-employed, like the upbeat reader who wrote, "Thank you for reminding me to appreciate my boss—me!" So, too, do we thank all those who responded. —Ron Hillery

ASK MARILYN

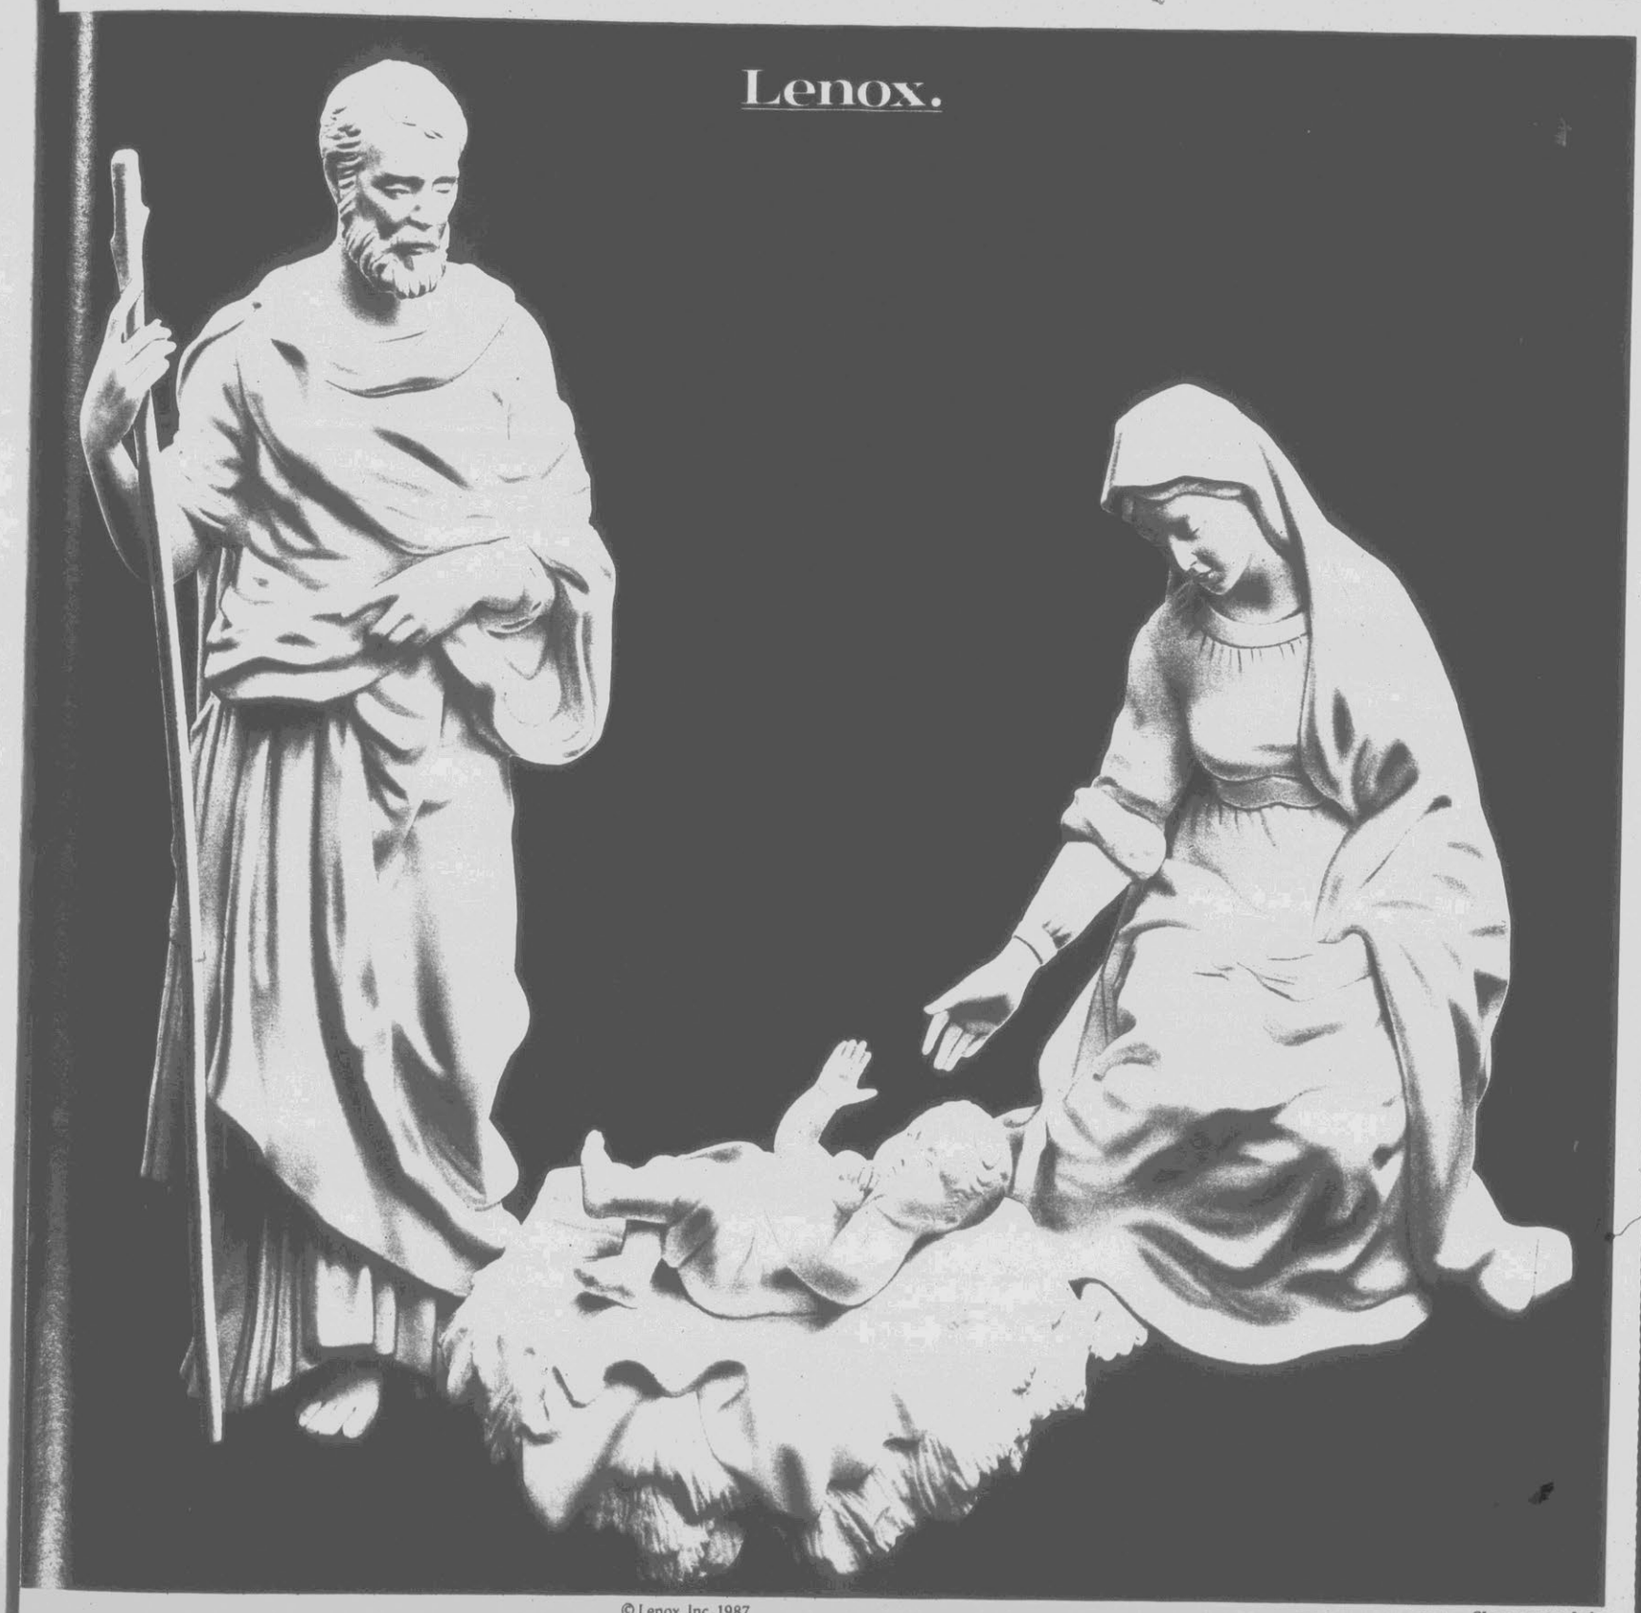

BY MARILYN VOS SAVANT

It seems to me that your answers are based mainly on logic. Isn't it possible that some things cannot be explained by pure logic?

—Marvin Bensend Sr., Atkins, Iowa

Yes—but I would say that's because language, rather than logic, fails us.

If you have a question for Marilyn vos Savant, who is listed in the "Guinness Book of World Records" under "Highest IQ," send it to: "Ask Marilyn," PARADE, 750 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Because of volume of mail, personal replies are not possible.

Raquel Welch

A BROADCASTING EXECUTIVE once told me that Raquel Welch's first job was as the weather girl for a San Diego TV station, but she was fired because she didn't exude enough sex appeal. I asked Miss Welch about that.

"The first part is true," she said. "Not the second. I was 17 or 18, and I won a beauty contest. Suddenly, I was on talk shows and being interviewed by the newspapers, and I was more articulate than most beauty queens—not just a paperhead. And I was offered this job. It was like the local version of the Today show, and I did the weather. Then I got pregnant and left." She paused. "I was paid $7.50 a show."

That was a few years ago, and Raquel's salary has gone up somewhat. On Oct. 12, she'll star in Right To Die, the story of a mother of two young children who is suffering from Lou Gehrig's disease (a progressive neurological disease, also known as ALS). Raquel did her homework.

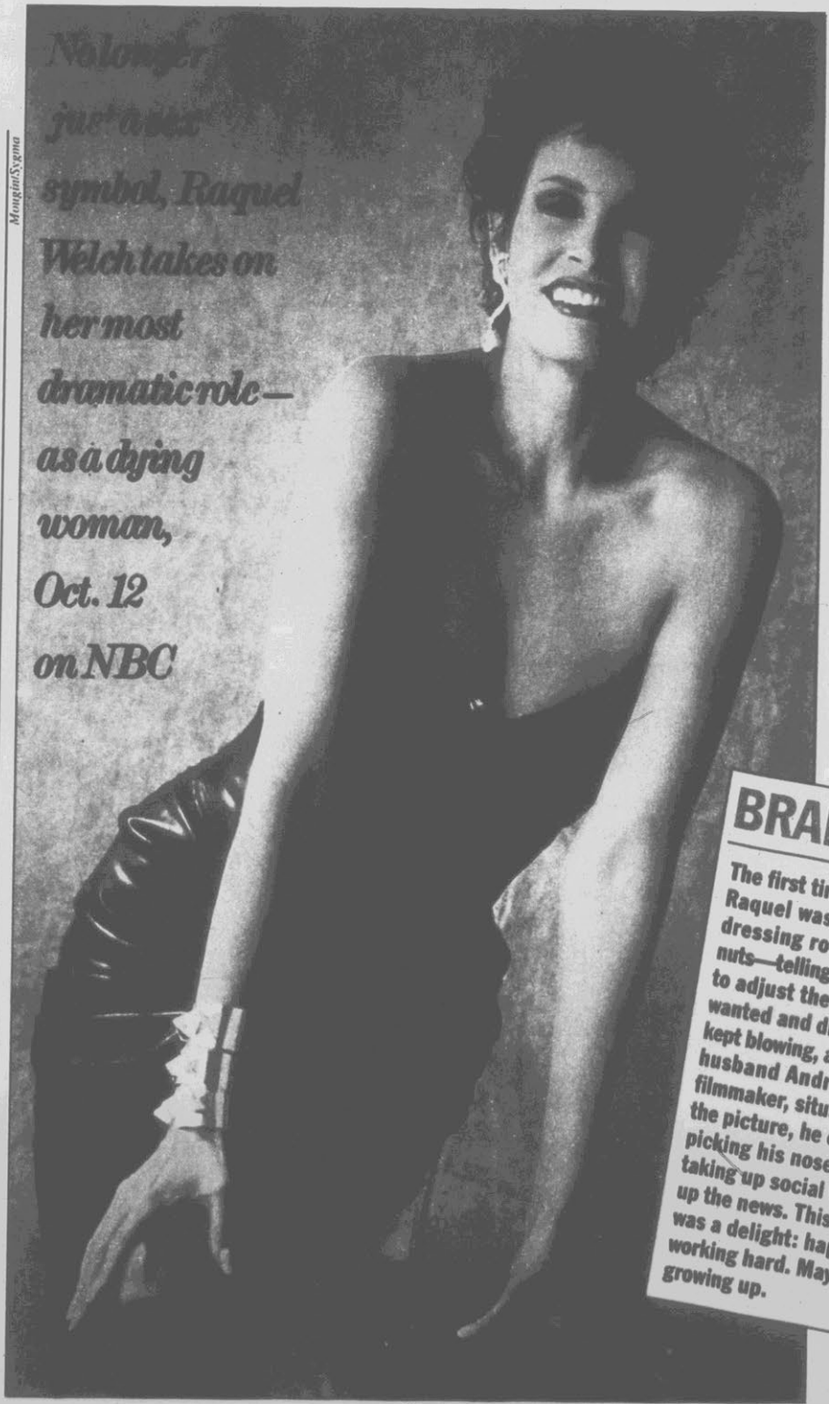

"I got to talk to the doctors and the patients about it for hours," she said. "There was this one extraordinary man I got to know. He died before we finished the film. That's how quickly it can take you."

Show-biz has its inevitable ups and downs—and, right now, Raquel is decidedly on top. A new music video is in the works. She bought the story of Libby Holman, the torch singer whose millionaire husband was mysteriously shot to death, and plans to produce it and star in it. She also will be coming out with a record and plans to produce another film in France. I said it sounded as if she were working hard.

"Hey," she said, "that's what happiness is—work."

Perhaps the low point of her career was being fired from an MGM film, Cannery Row, a half-dozen years ago. Gutsy Raquel took on the studio and sued, winning a big settlement. "But it took so much energy and such a long time," she admitted. Until now, the high point has been her 1982 Broadway debut in Woman of the Year, replacing Lauren Bacall. "That got me away from the 'image,'" she said. "Not that there was anything wrong with the image. But suddenly everyone took me seriously as an actress. I love the stage. Alive and immediate. Important!"

When we spoke, Raquel was in Hollywood. Her husband, André, a filmmaker, was writing a new screenplay in Mustique, and her daughter, Tahnee, now in her mid 20s, was working on Falcon Crest. New York is home for the Weinfelds between jobs. I asked Raquel about her name. "Sometimes people call me Rachel. Sometimes Rochelle. Sometimes," she said, laughing, "they even call me Rocky."

BRADY'S BITS

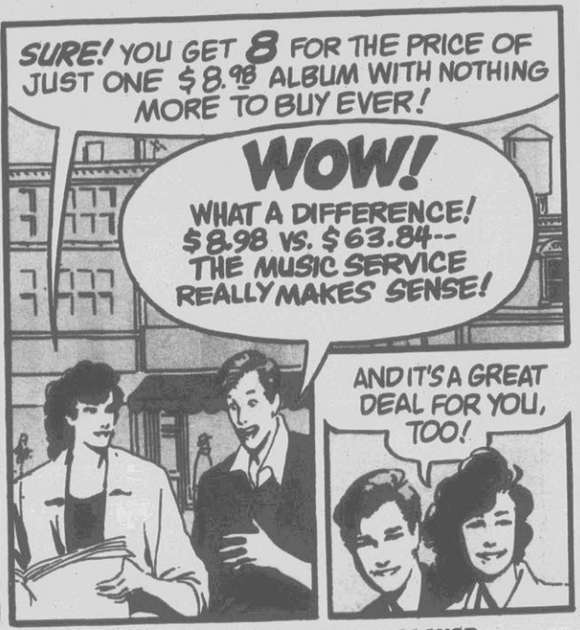

The first time I ever interviewed Raquel was in her Broadway dressing room. She drove us nuts—telling the cameramen how to adjust the lights, what she wanted and didn't want. Fuses kept blowing, and when we got her husband André, a French filmmaker, situated properly in the picture, he clowned around, picking his nose. I considered taking up social work and giving up the news. This time, Raquel was a delight: happy, content, working hard. Maybe it's called growing up.

Carol Huston Joins 'The Charmings'

By Evan Levine

Once upon a time, some network executives at ABC thought it would be fun to create a family sitcom with a twist. They remembered shows like "The Addams Family," and decided that they would aim for a zany family like that. So they came up with "The Charmings," where Snow White and her prince are transported into the '80s. But all was not well with the happy couple. Discord rang in the once enchanted forest. So the producers decided, in their magic way, to get a new Snow. Presto! Harmony would reign again.

"Actually, the original idea was to have people from the '80s blasted back into the Enchanted Forest," explains Carol Huston, who has taken over the role of Snow from Caitlin O'Heaney. "As the idea developed, it became more realistic. They decided it would be funnier this way."

Huston sees her role in only the most realistic manner. "I approach her like she's a working woman, who happens to have been born in the Enchanted Forest," she says "She and her husband just happen to have that background.

"When I first read the script," she continues, "my reaction was, 'I can't play this role.' But then I started thinking about it, and decided that it might be fun."

A lot of the humor in "The Charmings" (airing Thursdays) stems, naturally, from the reaction of the couple to the modern world around them. "I made a list of things that would affect Snow," explains Huston. "I walked around, just looking, and it was wild. Things like running water, things we take for granted."

But how many times can viewers laugh at Snow's confusion over a blender? "There are enough wacky things like the dwarf, to keep things interesting," promises Huston.

"Besides, she adds, "the situations are funny. We play on familiar ground, both events people know from everyday, and the fairy tales that people have from their childhoods.

In ABC's "The Charmings," Snow (Carol Huston) and her husband (Christopher Rich) struggle with life in the '80s. The show airs Thursdays.

My daughter sits there and laughs, but I think there's enough subtle humor to also appeal to adults."

Whether the blend of realism and myth can keep the show afloat probably has less to do with Huston's interpretation of Snow than whether audiences can bear to watch innocence flouted in the face of the big, bad world week after week. If viewers decide that the dwarfs can just stay in the enchanted forest, the wicked network executives may have to go back to the drawing board.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: What's the name of the actor who played the drill instructor in "Full Metal Jacket"? Can you give us some background on him? — JOSEPH NYE, FAIRMONT, N.C.

Lee Ermey, 43, portrayed tough Marine Gunnery Sgt. Hartman in Stanley Kubrick's hard-hitting film. Ermey is a former D.I. and Vietnam veteran, so "Full Metal Jacket" was hardly a stretch for him. His military career came to a halt in 1969 when he was wounded by shrapnel in Vietnam; he prematurely retired from the Marines two years later. Following a series of odd jobs, Ermey took up acting in 1976. He appeared as an extra in "Apocalypse Now" (1979) and has had bit parts in "The Boys in Company C" (1978) and "Purple Hearts" (1984), for which he also served as technicaladviser. Ermey is married and has three children, Betty, 8, Evonne, 6, and Clinton, 5.

Dear Michele: Is Peter DeLuise of "21 Jump Street" the son of actor Dom DeLuise? — CHERYL GOSCHLER, SPRING CITY, PENN.

Yes he is and Dom is one proud papa! Peter, 21, is the eldest son of the hefty Hollywood actor and the former Carol Arata. The family also includes sons Michael, 18, and David, 16. In addition to his role on the Fox Network's "21 Jump Street," Peter has guest-starred on such series as "The Facts of Life" and "Diff'rent Strokes." His feature films include last year's "Solarbabies" and "Supercross."

Dear Michele: How old is Prince Rogers Nelson, and what is he up to? — MENA HOFF, SHEBOYGAN, WISC.

Rock star Prince claims to tell the truth in his music, but when it comes to his age he's not above stretching it. The Purple One is said to have been born in 1958, but he has pushed up the year to 1960. Fans are anxiously awaiting his third big-screen feature, tentatively titled "Sign O' the Times," which will be released shortly. Directed by Prince, it's a musical based on his recent European concert tour.

Dear Michele: While watching reruns of "Here Come the Brides," starring David Soul, Bobby Sherman and Robert Brown, my husband and I became curious as to how long the show actually ran, and how many episodes were filmed. Was the series based on a novel? — TRUDY STAVROU, WESTERLY, R.I.

"Here Come the Brides" ran from 1968-70 on ABC and 52 original episodes aired. "Brides" was loosely based on the 1954 movie "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers."

Please address questions to Michele Will Tell, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 2315, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163. Because of the volume of mail received, personal replies cannot be sent.

Variety's Tough Road Back

Since the cancellation of the Ed Sullivan and Dean Martin shows in the early '70s, variety has fared poorly on network TV. Only Carol Burnett lasted until 1979. Here are a few recent examples:

•"Cos" (1976) and "Mary" (1978), in which Bill Cosby and Mary Tyler Moore tried variety, were almost instant flops.

•"Saturday Night Live with Howard Cosell" (1975) and "Dick Clark's Live Wednesday" (1978) were ill-fated attempts to revive the variety concept.

•"Donny & Marie" (1976-79), and later "Marie" (1980-81), provided music and comedy vehicles for the Osmond siblings.

•"Barbara Mandrell & the Mandrell Sisters" (1980-82) was a moderate success until exhaustion drove the star to quit.

TV Chatter

Even though Daphne Maxwell Reid's husband Tim Reid stars and produces "Frank's Place," her role was not a certainty — in fact, it was almost given to a man. Tim Reid and creator Hugh Wilson decided to go to New Orleans, where "Frank's Place" is set, to find just the right guy to play an embalmer on the CBS series. But they were in for a surprise. "We quickly learned that most funeral homes in New Orleans are run by women," says Reid. "We asked one funeral home owner if we could meet the head embalmer and in walked this beautiful, 32ish black woman. Hugh and I looked at each other and we both said, 'Daphne!' " The two Reids have worked together on "Simon & Simon," and Tim Reid looks forward to collaborating again, but with some misgivings. "Working with Daphne is a joy, but it's also a struggle," he says.

After swearing that he'd never return to the weekly series grind, Tom Selleck reconsidered and will begin his eighth season on "Magnum, P.I." this week. A hefty paycheck, no doubt helped lure Selleck back. But the actor cites two other reasons why he decided to return after his character "died" in last season's final episode. "These sorority girls called up crying because Magnum was dead," he says. The other reason? "(Co-star) John Hillerman likes to buy things. John wanted to do an eighth season so he could buy another house."

If you liked Cheech Marin's film comedy "Born in East L.A.," look for more on NBC next season, when Marin, half of the disbanded comedy team of Cheech & Chong, turns his film into a weekly series. In the movie, written and directed by Marin, he plays a Mexican-American deported by mistake to Mexico. The comedian feels the only way to get Latino-themed projects produced is to write your own. "It has to start on the writing level. Latino writers have to initiate Latino themes."

How happy are the Huxtables? Too happy, according to Michael Leeson, one of the creators of "The Cosby Show." After co-writing the pilot for "Cosby," Leeson decided to stay in Los Angeles when the show moved to New York because his wife was eight months pregnant. So the writer-producer never got to see his vision of "Cosby" materialize. "My original concept was for more conflict,"says Leeson, whose current family series, "I Married Dora," will most likely pose little threat to "Cosby" 's still-intense popularity. "The Huxtables seem to be happier than I envisioned them,but the show seems to be doing OK without me." Leeson attributes the more upbeat nature of the No. 1 series to its star. "Cosby's vision was that of a family just having a ball. I don't think there's any family that happy."

During her starving actress days, Kirstie Alley appeared on "Match Game" and won $6,000. The new star of "Cheers" had lower aspirations at the time. "I remember thinking, 'One of these days I could be on 'Match Game' as a celebrity contestant.' ".

SOAP OPERA WEEK

By Kimberly Redmond

Please give me some information on Ronn Moss, who plays Ridge Forrester on "The Bold and the Beautiful." – P.C., Ayden, N.C.

Ronn Moss

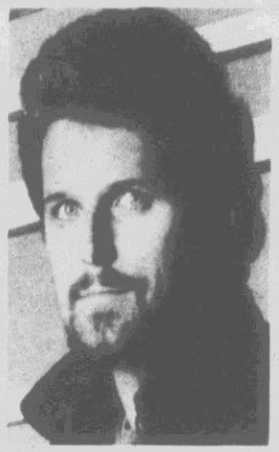

Before "B&B," which marks Moss' introduction to daytime TV, he appeared in the feature film "Hard Ticket to Hawaii." He has guest-starred on such TV series as "Trapper John, M.D."

Whatever happened to Beth Raines (played by Judi Evans) on "Guiding Light"? I wish they'd bring her back. – F.H., Boston, Mass.

Beth was presumed to have drowned when a boat she was in capsized. Her body was never found, so it's possible she could be reintroduced into the story line. However, Judi Evans probably won't be portraying her, since she now plays Adrienne Johnson on "Days of Our Lives."

Can you tell me what role Jane Elliot played on "General Hospital"? – T.K., Houston, Texas.

Elliot portrayed Tracy Quartermaine on "GH" from 1978 to 1980. She also played Cynthia Preston on "All My Children," and Carrie Todd on "Guiding Light." She is currently seen as Angelica Deveraux on "Days of Our Lives."

Robert Newman

There's no truth to the rumor. The Newmans are not related.

ASK ME ABOUT TV

'Munsters' aren't among the roles in Peppard's past

By Toni D'Amato

Did George Peppard play the father in "The Munsters"? - A.K., Revelstoke, British Columbia

George Peppard

Fred Gwynne played Herman Munster. Peppard, whose most recent success was playing Col. John "Hannibal" Smith in "The A-Team," also starred in the series "Banacek," in which he portrayed Det. Thomas Banacek. He also played Dr. Jake Goodwin in "Doctors' Hospital."

Peppard is also an accomplished film actor. His credits include "The Strange One" (1957); "Breakfast at Tiffany's" (1961); "The Carpetbaggers" (1964); "The Blue Max" (1966); "The Executioner" (1969); "One More Time" (1971) and "Five Days from Home" (1978).

Please name the hosts of the TV show "You Asked for It." - M.M., Olathe, Colo.

"You Asked for It," an audience-participation show, premiered in 1950 on the DuMont Network as "The Art Baker Show." Named for its host and creator, the title changed in 1951 to "You Asked for It," but Baker continued to host until 1958. Then, Jack Smith replaced him and hosted until the series ended in 1959. A syndicated version of the show aired from 1971 to '72 with Smith as host. Production continued on and off until 1977.

Who played the oldest brother in the series "The Monroes"? Was it Kurt Russell? - L.H., Jacksonville, Fla.

It was Michael Anderson Jr. He played Clayt, who, with the help of his sister Kathy (played by Barbara Hershey) took over their household of five orphans. As a teenager, Russell starred in "The Travels of Jaimie McPheeters," a Western that aired from 1963-64.

Primary Time

NBC recently announced its plans for coverage of the 1988 presidential primaries, beginning with a debate from the Washington's Kennedy Center Dec. 1. The network will air prime-time news specials on Feb. 8., the day of the Iowa caucuses, and March 8, the day of primary voting in 21 states.

Four Young Actresses Merit A Closer Look

By Connie Passalacqua

The all-important November sweeps ratings period is almost upon us. During the past few months, soap head writers have been busy setting the scene for the customary histrionic sweeps plot lines by carefully positioning old characters and introducing new ones. Here's a guide to four of the more interesting ingenues.

* Claire Beckman (who plays Noelle Keaton on "All My Children") — Beckman took over the role of mysterious amnesiac Noelle from Rosalind Ingledew only three months after the character debuted and did such a good job that the character finally clicked. It happened just in time, since next month Noelle will be revealed to be the long-lost sister of one of the show's leading characters. Beckman has already held her own with acting heavyweights such as Louise Shaffer, who plays her mother Constance, and Charles Keating, who plays her brainwashing psychiatrist Damon Lazarre. And that'snot all he is!

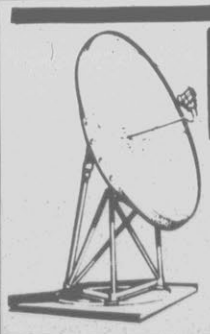

* Sandi Ferguson (who plays Amanda Cory on "Another World") — Here's another demanding role, that of Mac and Rachel's (Douglass Watson and Victoria Wyndham) suddenly all-grown-up daughter.Amanda is working at her father's publishing company but using another name so as not to reveal that the boss is really daddy. Ferguson, a former beauty queen, resembles Sandra Dee, but she's not just a goofy teen. She has shown a lot of spirit, particularly in those chin-to-chin confrontation scenes with Wyndham.

NL, AL Begin League Championship Play

By Marty Linehan

With the regular season ending Sunday, Oct. 4, baseball fans now turn to the League Championship Series playoffs, the true test of a big leaguer.

After all, you have to beat the other division champion before you get a shot at the big money and the ring. Even if you don't win the World Series, the losers' share and the glory of playing for the ultimate championship is enough to keep most players happy. But if you lose in the playoffs, it's wait until next year.

They start Tuesday, Oct. 6, on NBC with the National League playing the first game. On Wednesday, Oct. 7, the Senior Circuit plays its second game in the afternoon, with game one of the American League playoffs that evening. On Thursday, Oct. 8, the Americans catch up and play game two. The NL plays game three on Friday, Oct. 9, and on Saturday, Oct. 10, both leagues play: game four for the NL in the evening and game three for the Junior Circuit that afternoon.

This year's playoffs will have to go a long way, however, to outdo last year's heroics and suspense.

The Houston Astros and the California Angels both came incredibly close to winning their respective league titles, only to blow it. The Angels caved in with two out in the ninth inning of the fifth game, surrendering a home run to Boston's Dave Henderson, and the Red Sox started a pennant-winning comeback.

The Houston Astros suffered the same way in the sixth game of their playoff series with the New York Mets. In what some called the greatest game ever played (until the sixth game of the World Series), the Astros blew a ninth-inning three-run lead. The Mets sent the game into extra innings, Jesse Orosco kept them even with a stellar relief performance, and the New Yorkers finally won it in the 16th.

* For the football people, there's always "Monday Night Football" (assuming there is no players' strike). On Monday, Oct. 5, the San Francisco 49ers visit the Super Bowl XXI champion New York Giants. The teams don't meet that often during the regular season, but have become almost regular rivals in the playoffs.

* And for hockey fans lucky enough to have ESPN, on Thursday, Oct. 8, the cable channel opens its regular hockey season by presenting the usually high-flying Montreal Canadiens against the rough-tough Philadelphia Flyers.

BLUEGRASS

Former "Charlie's Angel" Cheryl Ladd is now in Kentucky filming "Bluegrass," a four-hour miniseries about a woman's struggle to earn respect in the world of thoroughbred horse racing. The movie is set in greater Lexington, Ky., a region commonly known as bluegrass country. "Bluegrass" will air during the 1987-88 season on CBS.

WHAT IS 4-WHEEL ALIGNMENT?

Every car, rear wheel or front wheel drive, has an imaginary centerline. All four wheels must be parallel to this line for proper handling and tire wear. When either the front or rear wheels are not parallel you will have poor handling performance, increased wear on suspension parts and tires!

A policy of satisfaction guaranteed for 90 days is terrific. Unless it's the 91st day.

Most companies have warranties or satisfaction guarantees that last 30, 60, or 90 days. Some even a year or more. But what if you have a problem with something after its warranty runs out? That's when the store you bought it from and their attitude toward satisfying you means everything.

At Sears, when we say "Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back," we don't put a specific time limit on it. If you have a problem, just tell us and we'll try our best to satisfy you. And since we're the store, we can handle it right here, right away.

It's a policy we've had for 60 years. And there's hardly a store we know of that has one that's lasted as long or goes as far.

The way we see it, the longer we're prepared to keep our promises, the longer we'll keep our customers.

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back

Why You Need The All-New Protection Plus Hospital Plan

If you were just returning home from the hospital, would you be able to write a check for your share of the bill? If not, would you have to take money out of your savings? Or worse yet, would you have to look for help?

That's why most of us depend on health insurance—whether it be a group plan, major medical or Medicare—to share in the cost of hospital care. But have you stopped to consider that as hospital charges go up, so does your share of the bill?

And hospital costs are continuing to rise at an alarming rate. The American Hospital Association reports that the average hospital bill is now over $3,200.00—DOUBLE what it was just five years ago.

Yet most health insurance continues to pay only 80% of your hospital bill. In years past that may have been enough. But today, your share could be difficult to handle.

That's why more and more people are turning to the Protection Plus Hospital Plan. It pays cash benefits directly to you, or anyone you choose. You can use them to help pay the growing amount of hospital costs other health plans don't cover. Or you can use them to help pay your regular household expenses while you're in the hospital or recuperating at home.

The cash benefits you collect could mean the difference between getting through a financial crisis and having to look to your savings or elsewhere for help.

We're here when you need us

"I realized just how important this type of insurance is."

That's what one policyowner said. Kathleen Prutzman says our protection has helped her through difficult times. Here's her letter:

Dear Physicians Mutual,

My husband suffered terribly from cancer and was in and out of the hospital for four years. Through your hospital plan, we were able to provide him with the best possible care right up until the very end.

Through the years, it helped pay unbelievable medical bills over and above hospital care. It also helped bring him home where he wanted to be at the end (with the help of a nurse).

I must thank you again for your very quick response to claims -- and most importantly, your extension of a helping hand.

Sincerely,

Kathleen Prutzman

Here's How The All-New Protection Plus Hospital Plan Helps You Beat The Rising Cost Of Hospital Care

These Cash Benefits Will Be Paid Directly To You

$2,250.00 A Month—$75.00 A Day
For Any Covered Sickness Or Injury

You'll collect these cash benefits whenever you are hospitalized for any reason—even a simple checkup.

$3,375.00 A Month—$112.50 A Day
For Cancer Or A Heart Attack

Your cash benefits will increase by 50% when you are hospitalized for cancer (including leukemia and Hodgkin's disease) or a heart attack (acute myocardial infarction).

$9,000.00 A Month—$300.00 A Day
Double Benefits For You And Your Spouse

Protection Plus pays you and your insured spouse DOUBLE BENEFITS when you both are in the hospital due to the same, or different accidents.

A Special Note To People 65 & Over
Pays Benefits In Addition To Medicare

During the first 60 days of hospitalization, Medicare pays most of the hospital costs. That's why Protection Plus pays half benefits during this time. After 60 days—when Medicare coverage reduces—you'll begin receiving full cash benefits for as long as you stay—even for life!

With Protection Plus, you don't have to pay for protection you don't really need. And you don't have to join an association or pay membership dues to get it. Your acceptance is guaranteed regardless of age.

You'll receive copies of the North Carolina Buyer's Guides with your policy. If you wish to have the Guides before you enroll, you may request them from the company.

You Also Get All These Special Features

- Protection From The Very First Day
  Your cash benefits are paid from the VERY FIRST DAY of ~~any~~ covered hospital stay. No deductible.
- Benefits For A Lifetime
  Your cash benefits are paid for EVERY DAY of covered hospitalization. No matter how many days you're hospitalized, or how many times. Even for life!
- You'll Collect Cash Benefits On Top Of Any Insurance
  That includes group insurance, major medical coverage, worker's compensation, prepaid health plans—even Medicare. And your benefits are not subject to state or Federal income tax.
- Money To Spend As You Choose
  Your checks will come directly to you, unless you tell us otherwise. These cash benefits are yours to use in any way you wish.
- Full Benefits For The Whole Family
  Your insured spouse and children will receive the very same protection you have. One rate provides full coverage for all—regardless of your family size.
- Pays Maternity Benefits, Too
  You'll collect full benefits for normal childbirth when pregnancy occurs anytime after your policy is issued. And at no extra cost.
- Freedom Of Choice
  Your Protection Plus coverage is good at any hospital, anywhere in the world—even federal and VA hospitals. The only exceptions are nursing homes, convalescent, extended care or self-care units of hospitals.
- Quick, Convenient Cash Payments
  Your claims will be settled promptly—and your benefit checks will be sent to you by first class mail.
- Please Note These Limitations
  Old health problems (those that became evident or were treated before the effective date of your policy) are not covered for the first year of your policy. But once that year is up, even a health problem you've had for years is covered!

  If you are 65 or over you will be covered for cancer, heart attack, stroke, hernia, disease or disorder of the prostate, tuberculosis, cataracts, emphysema, cirrhosis or diabetes if your hospital confinement commences more than six months after the effective date of your policy.

  For confinement due to mental illness, half benefits are paid for up to 30 days.
- No Salesman Will Call
  We believe the Protection Plus Hospital Plan is good enough to sell itself. That's why you won't have to deal with a salesman to enroll. Everything is handled directly between you and Physicians Mutual.
- Enroll Today For Just $1.00! Your Acceptance Is Guaranteed
  Simply fill out the brief enrollment form and mail it back to Physicians Mutual along with $1.00 for your first month's coverage. There is no medical exam required, or health questions to answer. Your acceptance is guaranteed!

  If you are already a Physicians Mutual policyowner and would like information about additional coverage available, please call or write for details.
