Falwell, PTL Board Quit As Creditors Win

By G.G. RIGSBY
Associated Press Writer
FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL Chairman Jerry Falwell said he and PTL's board and top officers resigned this morning rather than remain at the helm of a ministry that has become the "Watergate of evangelical Christianity."

PTL under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

That move would leave the ministry open to a comeback by its founder, defrocked evangelist Jim Bakker, who turned the ministry over to Falwell on March 19 amid a sex-and-money scandal.

Falwell announced the decision at a news conference at the ministry's headquarters in Fort Mill.

Several top PTL leaders had threatened on Wednesday to quit if a bankruptcy judge allowed the evangelical empire's creditors and contributors to file a competing reorganization plan.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds called their bluff when he gave creditors and contributors a week to file a plan and said an arbitrator will help combine the two proposals.

Earlier, Harry Hargrave, PTL chief operating officer, had testified that he and three executive vice presidents, along with co-hosts of television's "PTL Club," would quit if another plan were filed simultaneously.

"I would be inclined to tender my resignation because it would be impossible to do my duties," Hargrave told the court. He said another plan now would render the ministry "totally incapable of operating."

But Reynolds said that it was clear that PTL had not listened to the creditors and contributors in compiling its plan, and that competing plans will save time in PTL's reorganization under Chapter 11 of U.S. bankruptcy law.

"I'm not for either side; I'm for success," Reynolds said. "We need that success by the end of the year."

Jerry Nims, PTL chief executive officer, said after the hearing that he hadn't decided whether to resign.

Hargrave said only: "I do what I say I'm going to do."

PTL attorney Roy Grutman said he will appeal the ruling. He said a simultaneous plan would "totally undermine and hobble our ability to negotiate with or obtain the consent of people who we want and hope will support our plan."

The ministry founded and lost by TV evangelist Jim Bakker is struggling with more than $60 million in debts.

Last week, PTL filed a plan to divide the evangelical empire into profit and non-profit corporations. Its holdings include the TV ministry, a theme park, shopping mall and two hotels in Fort Mill.

Bork Hangs On By One Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of Robert H. Bork moved to within a single vote of victory today as Democratic Sens. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas and Paul Sarbanes of Maryland declared their opposition.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "The nomination is not dead until the vote is taken." But he also left room for Bork to ask that his name be withdrawn from consideration, saying, "Obviously, his decision can be whatever he wants it to be."

The announcements by Bumpers and Sarbanes, in speeches on the Senate floor, pushed to 50 the number of senators who have declared their opposition to the nomination, according to an Associated Press survey. Thirty-four senators have said they would support Bork, with the rest undeclared. Fifty-one "no" votes would ensure defeat for Bork in the 100-member Senate.

Because of Bork's plunging chances, the Senate Judiciary Committee already is combing the backgrounds of possible replacement candidates.

Bumpers said Bork is "such a slave to ideology that I question whether he could render simple justice."

There were widespread rumors that Bork would come to the White House today — as he did Wednesday — to meet with the president. But Fitzwater said there was no indication the nominee wanted to see the president.

"We don't know. We have not heard (from Bork). Our assumption is that we're fighting it out to a floor vote," Fitzwater said.

He said that if Bork asked Reagan to withdraw his name, the president "would urge him to fight on."

The spokesman confirmed that the Justice Department maintains lists

Yale Plant Gets Navy Contracts

Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., has announced that up to $8 million worth of forklifts for the U.S. Navy will be built at Yale Materials Handling Corp. in Greenville.

Jones, in an announcement released in Washington, D.C., said Yale received a pair of Navy contracts. The first contract calls for the construction of 16 6,000-pound electric forklifts at a cost of $375,054, and the second includes the construction of 41 two-ton electric forklifts at a cost of $924,810.

Both contracts have options for additional purchases over a two-year period, up to 75 more larger lifts totaling an additional $1.5 million and 270 more smaller lifts totaling $5.1 million, officials said.

The contracts were initially awarded to a Kansas City, Mo., distributor of Toyota forklifts but the award was set aside following a review requested by Jones, the chairman of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Jones asked the Navy to examine compliance with the terms of the contract. The Navy found the contract provisions would not be met, and canceled the award, officials said. Yale was the next lowest bidder.

"I am pleased that Yale has been awarded this contract and that these forklifts will be built in an American plant by American workers," Jones said. "Yale officials have advised me that they will be bringing even more jobs home for American workers when production begins on a line of gasoline powered forklifts early next year. This is very good news for our community."

Yale employs 650 people in its Greenville plant and will be adding 77 more during the phase-in of the new production line, according to of-

Soviet Embassy Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, upset with Soviet listening devices in the new U.S. embassy in Moscow, today voted to tear down the new Soviet Embassy in Washington and rebuild where it can't be used for espionage.

The proposal, and another one to create a new State Department bureau to oversee embassy construction, was adopted by voice vote as the Democratic-controlled chamber plowed through a bill through a bill authorizing $3.6 billion in State Department spending for the current fiscal year.

The Soviet embassy here would be torn down and rebuilt in a lower area of the city under the terms of the proposal offered by Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho. That amendment is exactly the same as a Symms amendment approved 70-24 by the Senate on Sept. 24.

But that earlier vote attached the amendment to a Pentagon budget bill which President Reagan has threatened to veto. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-

N.C., told his colleagues today that "there are some hopes we're going to enact this into law."

Earlier today, the chamber passed an amendment requiring creation of a new bureau within the State Department to oversee embassy construction.

The amendment, approved by voice vote after no debate, was sponsored by Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, who said the problems with

MARKING SUCCESS — Benny McCrary, who holds the record with his brother, Billy, for being the world's biggest twins, indicates his last recorded weight in September at 370 pounds. The Pitt County Fair will be in the last chapters of Benny McCrary's autobiography, said the man who holds the world's biggest twins record with his brother Billy in the "Guinness Book of World Records."

The autobiography will tell the story of McCrary's life with his brother and his last two-year experience of participating in carnivals and fairs.

McCrary is leading tours this week through a trailer museum at the Pitt County Fair, which is the last fair he plans to work and to include in his book. The exhibit contains memorabilia of some of the twins' travels and experiences.

"I built this show here as kind of a memorial to my brother," McCrary said. His brother died in 1979 from injuries received after falling off his mini-bike at Niagara Falls.

The museum took four months to build, he said. "I came up with the idea, (and) my wife designed it. I had enough memorabilia to fill up five trailers," so selection was difficult, McCrary said.

The museum has been successful, but some people have viewed it as a "freak" show, he said. "I really don't like the idea. A lot of people want to come in and see how big I am."

McCrary explained that, because of a thyroid condition, he and his FORMER WORSHIP PLACE — The church building which served the Memorial Baptist Church congregation from 1890 to 1973 no longer stands. It was located at the corner of Fourth and Greene streets. An educational addition remains and is used by the city of Greenville. The church is now located at 1510 Greenville Blvd.

Church Nears 160th Anniversary

Memorial Baptist Church of Greenville will celebrate the 160th anniversary of its founding Sunday.

Church members and their guests will observe the occasion with an extended worship service, dinner on the grounds and a musical program featuring members and guests.

During the worship service, expected to last from 11 a.m. to about 12:30 p.m., the church members will welcome guests from out of town specially invited for the occasion. Among these will be two former pastors of the church, the Rev. Percy Upchurch of Williamston and Dr. Norman Bennett of Tidewater Virginia. Each will speak.

Special music will be rendered by the Chancel Choir and the newly formed Handbell Choir. In harmony with the theme of the day, "Debtors to the Past, Trustees of the Future," Dr. Hugh Wease and the Rev. E.T. Vinson will speak. Dr. Wease, a member of the church, will highlight the history of the church; Vinson, the church pastor, will address the future.

As Memorial is the "mother church" of all the other Missionary Baptist churches in Greenville, chairmen of the boards of deacons of the other churches — Sycamore Hill, Oakmont, Arlington Street, and Immanuel — have been invited to take part in the service.

The church began as the Greenville Baptist Church on July 2, 1827, with 23 people gathered under the leadership of the Rev. Thomas Mason, a missionary of the Neuse Baptist Association.

For several years the congregation worshipped in a school building at the corner of Greene and Second streets. A church covenant and rules of decorum were adopted May 31, 1828.

The church members took the lead in 1829 in organizing the Baptist Benevolent Society. The purpose of the organization was to support a traveling ministry in the state.

At the second meeting of this organization held in Greenville on March 26, 1830, the society was transformed into a state convention. The Greenville church hosted this organizational meeting of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina at the home of Dr. and Mrs. A.I. Gorham in Greenville. Three members of the Greenville church were among the 14 messengers who organized the convention. Reading Blount of Greenville became the first recording secretary.

The church's first permanent house of worship was built in 1832. Reading Blount, acting as a trustee of the church, on Sept. 7, 1832, purchased a half-acre lot at the corner of Greene and Fourth streets. A simple rectangular building was constructed on this site.

An active Sunday school was established in 1833 and preaching services were being held every Sunday by 1860.

During the Civil War, preaching services were discontinued, ap-

ECU Day-Center Expands Into Full-Day Operation

By SHANNON SHORT
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University's child development and family relations center has upgraded its half-day program into a full-time day-care center.

The full-time program began on Sept. 1. Half-time day care had been provided since the early 1950s.

The day-care center is in operation Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and has received an "AA" license. The ECU center is one of the two day-care centers in Pitt County to receive the highest license given by the state of North Carolina.

Helen Grove, formerly with the American Home Economics Association in Washington, D.C., and the current dean of home economics at ECU, said, "With more mothers and fathers working, there is a dramatic increase in the need for high-quality day care in our society."

Kathy Shepherd, director for the preschool education program at ECU, says there are "rigorous educational standards for the teachers. They have to make sure we provide very enriching learning acts for the children."

The program's primary emphasis is on providing activities which ensure that the child will develop socially and emotionally. "Not all children are ready to do the same things at the same time," said Ms. Shepherd. The ECU center tries to hone in on individual needs within the group setting.

"What we're doing is consistent with the best thinking in the field about what preschool children need in education and enrichment programs. The program's activities reflects the kinds of things that 3- and 4-year-old children need," said Ms. Grove.

Evangelist Meetings

The Salvation Army will hold evangelist meetings at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday at the Salvation Army Citadel, 2337 Dickinson Ave., with Maj. William Perry of West Palm Beach, Fla., as the speaker. He will be accompanied by Brigadier and Mrs. Fred Boyette.

Solicitation Permits

The Greenville Police Department has granted solicitation permits to two organizations allowing fund-raising activities during October.

Permits were issued to the Young American Bowlers Association to raise funds from Saturday until Oct. 24 for a state bowling tournament, and to the Lutheran's Women's Mission League of the Gloria Dei Lutheran Church to raise funds from Sunday until Oct. 24 for outreach projects and the church building fund.

Reading Rewards

Excitement reigned at Third Street School recently as the children went on a shopping trip, according to Jane Talbot, a first-grade teacher.

"They are earning 'reading bucks' for reading books and there will be a shopping trip each month so the children can spend their 'bucks,'" she said.

Some children had as many as 71 bucks, meaning they had read and parents had read to them that many books.

of possible candidates for judicial openings, including the Supreme Court, but said that no list of replacements for Bork had been sent to the White House. "Believe me, the president does not want consideration of any alternative candidates," Fitzwater said.

On Wednesday, Reagan and Senate supporters did their best to cheer Bork as he shuttled from the White House to the Capitol.

"If he were on the fence when he walked in, I think he's a little more determined to hang in there," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Still, Bork's supporters made clear that the appellate judge was at least considering asking the White House to withdraw his name.

"He will not decide anything today (Wednesday), and said he would be in touch," Tom Korologos, a lobbyist brought in by the White House to help Bork, told reporters after the session with senators.

Leonard Garment, a Washington lawyer who is advising Bork, said the judge would continue his quest for the nomination only if the president and the Republican Party agree to wage a full-scale national campaign in support of his confirmation.

PTL had been given a 60-day period during which no other reorganization plans could be filed, and creditors and possibly lifetime partners — people who had contributed at least $1,000 each to PTL — were to vote on the plan Dec. 10.

But creditors and contributors asked to file simultaneously a plan of their own, arguing that if they had to wait until December to file and the PTL plan failed to win creditors' ap-

"He's not willing to conduct a solitary crusade because that would quixotic and pointless," Garment said late Wednesday in a telephone interview.

Ten more Democrats on Wednesday said they would oppose confirmation: John Breaux of Louisiana, Lawton Chiles of Florida, Kent Conrad of North Dakota, Alan J. Dixon of Illinois, J. James Exon of Nebraska, Wyche Fowler Jr. of Georgia, Albert Gore Jr. and James Sasser of Tennessee, Bob Graham of Florida and Richard Shelby of Alabama.

Two Republican senators, Mark Hatfield of Oregon and David Karnes of Nebraska, said they would support Bork.

At the Judiciary Committee, Democratic spokesman Peter Smith said, "The committee staff is beginning to gather information about various individuals who are being mentioned as possible alternative nominees. I don't want to give the impression it's a full fledged research effort."

Smith said Democratic and Republican senators "would appreciate a serious effort at consultation" from the administration before it chooses another nominee.

He said the administration went through "an empty exercise" a day before Bork was picked earlier this year, when Attorney General Edwin Meese III and White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. presented Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr. with a list of potential candidates.

Biden stated his opposition to Bork in the meeting, Smith said, but the administration ignored the objection and announced the choice the next day.

Democratic sources, speaking on condition they not be named, said the committee staff is checking or would likely review the records of the following potential alternatives:

—Judge Richard A. Posner of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, covering Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

—Judge Frank H. Easterbrook of the 7th Circuit.

—Judge J. Clifford Wallace of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, covering Alaska, Arizona, California, Guam, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and the Northern Mariana Islands.

—Judge William W. Wilkins Jr. of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which hears cases from Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.

—Judge Patrick E. Higginbotham of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, serving Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

—Judge Roger J. Miner of the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals, covering Connecticut, New York and Vermont.

—Judge Ralph K. Winter Jr. of the 2nd Circuit.

—Judge Laurence Silberman of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, where Bork serves.

—Gov. Jim Thompson of Illinois.

—California Supreme Court Justice Malcolm Lucas.

Reagan's list before he chose Bork reportedly also included Sens. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Howell Heflin, D-Ala., the latter a former Supreme Court chief justice in his state.

proval, PTL would lose its financial support.

"Such a decline in contributions would assure the failure of the debtor's reorganization effort," the group, which includes some of PTL's largest creditors, argued in court documents.

The creditors cited an "acrimonious relationship" between PTL and its lifetime partners and creditors as a reason to allow plans to be submitted simultaneously.

Soviet Embassy To Come Down

the U.S. embassy in Moscow point up "the most glaring errors in the way we construct our missions."

The U.S. embassy in Moscow "is virtually a skeletal microphone wired to the Soviet Union," Murkowski said.

In a series of votes Wednesday, the Senate attached an amendment imposing anti-espionage travel restrictions on communist-bloc diplomats stationed in the United States similar to those long imposed on Soviet diplomats.

Voting 59-37, the Senate refused to shelve the amendment, which was sponsored by Sen. William Roth, R-Del. It was then adopted by voice vote.

If the proposal emerges intact from a House-Senate conference committee, the travel limits would apply to diplomats from East Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Bulgaria, Rumania and Cuba.

The Senate ignored a warning from the chairman of its Foreign Relations Committee, Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., that the move could lead to retaliation against U.S. diplomats assigned to the affected nations.

The cost-sharing amendment, which was approved 95-2, was offered by Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., who said making European allies and Japan bear a portion of the expense of maintaining a large U.S. military force in the Persian Gulf is "just good common sense."

The non-binding amendment states the sense of the Senate that "countries which directly benefit from the United States policy of providing military protection to reflagged Kuwaiti vessels and maintaining freedom of navigation in the Persian Gulf should share in the costs incurred by the United States in providing such protection."

The only objection raised in debate was by Sen. John Warner, R-Va., a former secretary of the Navy, who said he feared a precedent might be set that would indicate "that a U.S. military person is a mercenary."

After an exchange with Melcher he said he was satisfied this would not be the case.

Turning to the problems of refugees from Southeast Asia, the Senate approved, 63-33, a non-binding amendment by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., to increase the number of such persons admitted to the United States.

Hatfield's amendment declares that of the total worldwide admissions for refugees, the president should allocate 28,000 admissions from East Asia "first-asylum" refugee camps, at least 8,500 for the orderly departure program with Vietnam and at least 1,500 admissions for Amerasians and their immediate family members.

In a 55-45 roll call vote, the Senate refused to consider an amendment offered by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., which would have expanded last year's one-time amnesty program for illegal aliens to include their spouses and children.

Meanwhile, the United States hailed a Japanese plan to aid the U.S. effort in the gulf.

Withdraw Bork
From Nomination

Robert Bork's name should be promptly withdrawn as a nominee for associate justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Bork's nomination was questionable before the Senate Judiciary Committee rejected him. Now, with that action in mind, President Ronald Reagan should remove Bork's name as a nominee. If he does not, Bork himself should withdraw.

Reagan's determination to push for Bork's confirmation is not the action of a leader concerned about the best interest of his nation. His insistence, instead, can only be seen as flexing a somewhat flabby executive muscle. That ineffective approach will not work to the benefit of a judicial system that needs a full Supreme Court with a balanced bench.

Furthermore, withdrawing what appears to be an unsuitable candidate would be a critical and timely move for the Supreme Court. The Senate cannot begin the confirmation process for another candidate until Bork's nomination is settled. Already, the Supreme Court has begun a session a member short — and facing a caseload of prominent issues.

The nominee's vague testimony and the Committee's consequent rejection makes it clear Bork is not acceptable for a position on the court. He failed to satisfactorily explain his inconsistencies during the confirmation hearings. His account of his own position-switching as merely intellectual transmutation was unconvincing. His testimony was as nebulous as the points of view he attempted to defend.

In addition, Bork's interpretation of the philosophy of judicial restraint is flawed. His record indicates that in over 50 split decisions in which he participated, he sought a conservative agenda amenable to private interests rather than practiced judicial restraint. That viewpoint is potentially damaging to opinions in past cases where the Supreme Court has made progress in individual and civil rights. A nominee with a more consistent and even-handed approach is in order.

The Supreme Court doesn't need an associate justice that is a question mark. Neither does it need one that represents a radical departure from the consensus in constitutional law. With these premises in mind, it is clear the Senate Judiciary Committee was correct to reject Bork.

The nation must now ask why its top executive is pushing a Supreme Court justice on them that is clearly not satisfactory. Reagan's responsibility to withdraw Bork's nomination is distinct. His action on the issue will show the nation whether he is a president concerned with the good of the country or merely a demagogue pursuing an agenda.

Reagan's Diminished Authority

'The real loser and the man who created the political challenge in the first place was Reagan, who insisted on trying to "nationalize" the 1986 midterm election and make its outcome a test of his policies and judicial appointments.'

hadn't campaigned against all of us back then. Now, we have to look beyond the president to our own constituents and our own futures."

Shelby should know. He was one of the Democratic candidates Reagan targeted to campaign against in 1986, when the Republicans lost eight Senate seats and control of the Senate. In speech after speech Reagan made his judicial philosophy a litmus test of the election and said — as he did at an Oct. 8, 1986, rally for then-Rep. James T. Broyhill, R-N.C., — that the proliferation of drugs and the "crime epidemic" can be traced to "liberal judges who are unwilling to get tough with the criminal elements in this society."

"We don't need a bunch of sociology majors on the bench," Reagan said. "What we need are strong judges who will aggressively use their authority to protect our families, communities and our way of life... judges who do not hesitate to put criminals where they belong — behind bars. And since coming to Washington, we've been putting just such people on the bench."

Broyhill lost his bid for the Senate to Terry Sanford, who last week became one of the first southern senators to declare opposition to Bork. So did senators from Texas, Alabama and South Carolina, all states in which Reagan had given speeches denouncing judicial permissiveness and attacking by name the two Democratic senators, Edward M. Kennedy (Mass.) and Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden (Del.), who led the fight against Bork's confirmation.

Speaking in Columbus, Ga., on Oct. 28, Reagan extolled Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., as a man who "can make all the difference" on judicial appointments. "Without him and the Republican majority in the Senate, we'll find liberals like Joe Biden and a certain fellow from Massachusetts deciding who our judges are," Mattingly also lost.

From the time Bork was nominated early in July the public battle over the nomination was accompanied by an internal administration struggle. Baker and White House deputy chief of staff Kenneth M. Duberstein recognized that Reagan had lost much of his southern base and had to stress Bork's undisputed legal credentials and personal integrity to have any chance at all. This strategy prevailed, but conservatives complained constantly that the White House was presenting an inaccurate and unconvincing picture of Bork.

One official who said that the consequences of the conflict produced a "muddled strategy" that confused voters and some senators. "We seemed to be making different arguments at different times," the official said.

The conflict between the factions, a regular and damaging feature of the Reagan presidency, has left some hard feelings in its wake. On Tuesday, just before the Judiciary Committee convened, veteran lobbyist Tom C. Korologos, who had been brought in by the White House staff to manage the Bork nomination fight, was standing near the press section surrounded by reporters.

Off to the side stood Assistant Attorney General John R. Bolton, the chief Justice Department lobbyist during the hearings. When a reporter mentioned to Bolton that Korologos was surrounded by journalists, Bolton replied with a trace of bitterness. "He should be, it's his strategy."

A case could be made, however, that in a larger sense the strategy was President Reagan's. He took his case and his arguments to the American people and in the 1986 elections he insisted on making a test of his presidency. Like Bork, Reagan lost.

Mixed Forecast

The National Association of Business Economists has been peering into the future and found growing optimism the country will continue its economic expansion through the 1988 elections.

That is good news for contenders in either major political party as well as the public at large. Of course, the next president is expected to have a problem on his hands.

The association has no government ties and its economist members who advise some of the country's largest corporations do see a long-expected recession beginning possibly in late 1988 and in 1989.

Fifty-six percent picked 1989 as the most likely year for the dip to begin. They cite rising inflation and higher interest rates as likely causes of the downturn. The analysts suspect the next president will have to deal with economic problems soon after taking office.

The current recovery from the 1981 recession entered its 59th month in October, making this recovery the longest peacetime expansion on record.

For this year and next, the economists are solidly optimistic despite a forecast of rising inflation. They claim growing demand for their companies' products as one of the reasons for their shared belief the present recovery is not running out of steam.

The survey included further predictions:

Unemployment, for instance, is expected to hover near and up to the six percent level to the end of 1988. The group also expects the U.S. foreign trade deficit declining to $140 billion in 1988. The dollar, which declined in value by almost 50 percent in the past two years, is headed still lower.

Governmental sources of economic forecasts and reporting are probably as good as any in the world. Still, availability of prestigious forecasts from the private sector are also treasured because in a way they help keep both themselves and governmental experts on their toes in a field which allows for no crystal balls or tea leaves and demands reasonable accuracy with no room for losers.

Academic Tenure System Needs Reform

The system of academic tenure evolved in the early part of this century to protect the freedom of scholars and teachers to teach, publish and conduct research without fear of reprisal for unpopular ideas.

For most faculty, tenure has come to mean job security.

More recently, too, tenure has prevented younger scholars and teachers from entering many fields because tenured faculty hold these positions in an era of declining enrollments.

When a university grants tenure, it confers a lifetime contract upon a member of the faculty. The contract can only be broken for serious reasons — integrity, financial needs of the university or the elimination of the program.

Before the American Association of University Professors was established in the early part of this century, job security for faculty members depended primarily on the rules of individual schools — mostly on the whim of administrators.

In the 18th and 19th centuries, the system provided blocks of time during which instructors could prove their worth as classroom teachers and scholars. Over time, the lower ranks of instructor and assistant professor became recognized as faculty proving grounds. The number of years spent on trial was indeterminate. Faculty members often remained at the lower ranks or slowly inched up the professional ladder without knowing whether they could expect to teach in the same institution once their contracts expired.

At the same time, especially in state schools, a system of yearly appointments evolved. Governing boards made commitments based on the availability of funds. But the effect of rehiring faculty on a yearly basis produced a level of tension and anxiety that soon proved counterproductive to the goals of teaching.

The indefinite tenure system of the late 19th and early 20th centuries still handed institutions the means by which any faculty member could be terminated. Tenure meant whatever the institution said it meant. In some schools, job security was never a problem, provided that the faculty member upheld his end of the bargain. At other institutions, the faculty was kept in the dark about renewal of contracts.

With the emergence of the American Association of University Professors, specifically organized in 1915 to develop policies on tenure, faculty dismissals and academic freedom — the pendulum began to swing toward the faculty. But not until the AAUP's 1940 Statement of Principles did the current tenure picture come into focus.

The 1940 statement included the basic notion of a maximum seven-year probationary period for the institution to review the faculty member's progress. That faculty member also had ample opportunity to comply with institutional regulations, such as receipt of a higher degree, continued scholarly growth and commitment to teaching.

The statement ensured an unprecedented degree of job security, assuming that the faculty member progressed satisfactorily during the probationary period. Faculty members could devote their time to teaching and upgrading their skills.

By the mid-1970s, the tenure system had produced two classes of college teachers: the haves and the have-nots. The haves, protected by tenure contracts, were not about to throw away job security by considering other schemes for retaining faculty.

The older faculty, especially the less competent among the old guard, recognized that their positions would be in jeopardy without the safeguards of tenure. The have-nots — frequently the younger and sometimes brighter teachers — looked incredulously at a system that excluded them yet protected their older, sometimes less competent, colleagues.

No one seriously believes tenure will be thrown out the window. Yet responsible observers recognize the need for reform. Recent federal legislation raising the mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70, allowing older faculty to remain even longer in their posts, makes a bad situation almost intolerable.

Since the new retirement laws apparently are here to stay, many critics of the system argue that tenure has finally outlived its usefulness.

The university remains a unique institution — a community of scholars and teachers, engaged in the struggle against ignorance and chaos. Faculty members are not like employees of a corporation; they are colleagues and co-managers of their institution. Without a sense of security to fall back on, the life of the scholar would be seriously undermined. But the inequities of the current tenure system also need to be corrected.

Thomas P. Melady, president of the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council, was president of Sacred Heart University from 1976 to 1986.

Strength For Today

The expression, "the fifth wheel of a wagon" is often used to describe something utterly useless. It should be remembered, however, that in the case of our modern wagons — automobiles — the fifth wheel is an extremely important wheel. It is the steering wheel.

Religious agnosticism has no use for this kind of fifth wheel. Everything happens in the universe as the result of blind, impersonal force. The steering wheel, says the agnostic, is a ridiculous assumption, and the Man behind the steering wheel — whom pious and unthinking people call God — is nothing but a projection of the frustrated life of weak-minded souls.

But just as an automobile soon runs amok if there is not a firm and purposeful hand on the steering wheel, so society will run into the ditch if no attention is paid to the steering wheel and the Man behind it.

Jackson, State Democrats Plan Busy Weekend

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson will make his presidential bid official and candidates for statewide offices will woo Democratic activists during one of North Carolina's busiest political weekends of the year.

The activities will take place almost 250 miles apart, beginning Friday and ending Sunday. In Raleigh, Jackson's announcement will highlight the biennial convention of his political organization, the Rainbow Coalition.

Meanwhile, hopefuls for lieutenant governor and other posts will work the crowds at the Democrats' annual Vance-Aycock weekend in Asheville.

Hundreds of elected officials and party leaders from across the state generally attend the fund-raiser at the picturesque Grove Park Inn.

"With primary season not far off, this year's Vance-Aycock will be exciting, as state and local candidates come out to gather supporters," said Jim Van Hecke, state Democratic chairman.

Meanwhile, the organizations of some — if not all — of the Democratic presidential contenders will sponsor hospitality suites or otherwise make their presence known. Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., will deliver the keynote address at the Saturday evening banquet.

Jackson's decision to use the Rainbow Coalition gathering to announce his candidacy has overshadowed other convention activities, including workshops, resolutions and speechmaking on the economy, foreign policy, the environment and other issues.

"The Rainbow Coalition is still in the infancy stage," said Bruce Lightner, a Raleigh businessman. "However, most of the delegates who will be coming to the convention serve in leadership roles and are spokespersons for all races."

One of the convention's biggest tasks will be adopting resolutions that outline its positions, Lightner said.

"The convention will be asked to take various positions on the national economic situation, particularly the deficit and ... poor people, and how we can impact on national policy," he said.

The group also will try to forge a policy on government contracts with women- and minority-owned businesses.

The convention schedule calls for a meeting of regional delegates Friday morning, followed by plenary sessions on the economy and forming a National Rainbow Women's Commission.

There will be an evening "jam-boree" featuring remarks by overseas guests, a formal chartering ceremony and speeches by leaders of labor, peace and environmental groups.

Jackson will address the convention Saturday morning in the Raleigh Civic Center.

Afternoon sessions will focus on getting Rainbow Coalition candidates on the ballots for state and local elections and planning for future state and national conventions.

Democrats who venture to Asheville for Vance-Aycock will spend Friday evening touring candidates' hospitality suites and talking politics.

Activities get under way Saturday morning with a breakfast sponsored by the Buncombe County Democratic Women.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a likely gubernatorial candidate in 1988, will hold a $50-per-person fund-raiser Saturday afternoon and a poolside reception hours later.

State Auditor Ed Renfrow, who has hinted at a clash with Jordan for the nomination for governor, is among the hospitality suite sponsors.

Graham, the banquet speaker, was a two-term Florida governor who unseated Republican Sen. Paula Hawkins in 1986. He is a member of the Senate committees on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs; Environment and Public Works; and Veterans' Affairs.

The weekend will conclude Sunday morning with breakfast at the mountain farm of Democratic Rep. James Clarke.

Mistrial Declared

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge declared a mistrial in the trial of a white supremacist charged with failure to appear at an earlier conspiracy trial after he testified that former White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller threatened to harm him if he attended the first trial.

U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree declared a mistrial in the trial of Robert Eugene "Jack" Jackson on Wednesday after jurors sent a message they were hopelessly deadlocked after four hours and 35 minutes of deliberations.

He said a new trial date had not yet been set.

Jurors told the New Bern Sun Journal that from the beginning of deliberations, they were deadlocked 9-3 in favor of convicting Jackson.

In his closing arguments, U.S. Attorney Michael Williams, prosecutor of the case, contended that Jackson was never held at gunpoint, or made to stay with Miller as a small band of white supremacists traveled through four states, allegedly trying to drum up support for a declaration of war against the federal government.

"The nature of the threat was nameless, faceless and defenseless," defense attorney Ronald McSwain told the six-man, six-woman jury. "It was a genuine threat, a threat from unidentified persons. His (Jackson's) greatest concern was for his family."

McSwain said if Jackson had shown up for his trial it would have ensured that his family would have been harmed. "That's the dilemma he faced. He didn't know what to do."

But the only threat Jackson faced was the "boogie man," prosecuting attorney Williams contended. "Everything that happened, Jackson said, 'Glenn Miller made me do it.'"

"He didn't appear because of the threat of being convicted. Today you've just heard a lot about the big bad boogie man," Williams said.

Maximum penalty for the failure to appear charge is five years imprisonment. Jackson has been in custody since his arrest April 30.

Jackson, identified by federal authorities as a long-time member of the White Patriot Party, has completed serving the six-month sentence he received in mid-July for his role in a conspiracy case that involved an unsuccessful plan to blow up the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., in January.

Jackson was convicted in absentia in April in Elizabeth City and his attorney has appealed.

Youth Charged In Dad's Death

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP) — Instead of reporting to the principal's office, police say they believe a 14-year-old Stanly County boy walked home five miles, got two guns and shot his father several times in the chest, killing him.

David Bell, charged Wednesday in the shooting death of Harry Leonard Bell, 40, told deputies that he "just didn't like his family," investigators said.

"He's a clean-cut kid who was wearing camouflage pants, a dark green T-shirt and tennis shoes," said Chief Deputy Roger Lowder.

Lowder said David Bell, described as a good student, was punished at school Tuesday, several hours before his father was shot.

"He failed to do his homework in health class and he got called down three times for talking in class," Lowder said. "His teacher sent him to the principal's office. He didn't go. He walked home."

Court Orders Child To Remain In N.C.

DURHAM (AP) — An 8-year-old Massachusetts girl found here last week after having been hidden for eight months will remain in temporary custody of the Durham County Department of Social Services, a Durham District Court judge has ruled.

Judge Richard C. Chaney said Wednesday the court and all parties involved recognize the ultimate jurisdiction of Massachusetts courts in the case, but ruled that Nicole LaLonde of Lynn, Mass., must remain in the custody of the department for up to seven days.

The child had been found Friday by authorities who said the girl had been hidden for up to eight months by an underground network of mothers.

Nicole's mother, Virginia LaLonde, also of Lynn, has been held in prison in Massachusetts since March 31 because she refused to reveal her daughter's whereabouts and surrender her to her father, Stephen LaLonde of Danvers, Mass., for a court-ordered visit. Mrs. LaLonde has accused her former husband of sexually molesting the girl.

LaLonde denied the allegations of sexual abuse, saying the alleged abuse occurred while Nicole was not in his custody. During a videotaped interview in July with a Maryland psychologist hired by Mrs. LaLonde, Nicole said she was sexually abused by her father at least three times.

Nicole's father won her custody after Mrs. LaLonde fled Massachusetts with Nicole in the summer of 1986 to avoid giving the child to her father for a court-ordered visit. Mrs. LaLonde fled after a court had ruled that her charges of sexual abuse were groundless.

Former POWs Hold 40th Convention In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Sally Morgan was 11, a quiet girl of deep, black hair and the high cheekbones of her Chinese mother.

Squire Baker was 32, a 180-pound Kentuckian whose spirits soared when the American flag went by.

They spent much of the 1940s a world and a war apart, both behind barbed wire. She, a civilian detainee of the Japanese in the Philippines. He, an American prisoner of the Germans.

Wednesday in Charlotte, they were among 2,000 members of the American Ex-Prisoners of War Inc. opening the group's 40th national convention.

The convention is a reunion for hundreds who fought starvation and sickness in stalags and jungle camps. Others, like Morgan and Baker, never met.

An invisible bond brings them to Charlotte.

"People join clubs and fraternities and they come and go," says Morgan. "But when you've been a POW, you don't ever leave."

Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt welcomed them. Then W. Curtis Musten, national commander of the American Ex-Prisoners of War, told reporters he wants a full accounting of prisoners of war and Americans missing in Vietnam.

Better medical care for former prisoners is on its agenda, too. Although POWs often suffered the most of all veterans, says spokeswoman Chere Chesy of Rye, N.Y., they sometimes cannot document their injuries and illnesses. POW camps kept no records.

History is on the agenda, too.

"We're angered by the lack of information on our experience, so we're involved in a project to assure our place in history," Musten says.

Morgan and Baker are part of that history.

Ms. Morgan, mother of three and grandmother of six, taps her slender fingers together, as though praying.

She inherited her Chinese mother's features and none of her father's, a North Carolina soldier stationed in China. As American citizens, she and two brothers sailed on the last boat out of China when Japan invaded.

They got as far as Manila before the Japanese captured them in January 1942. They spent the rest of the war in internment camps there.

Study Says Fire-Safe Cigarettes 'Possible'

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — It is possible to manufacture "fire-safe" cigarettes, but the product does not appear to be far along in development, officials say.

"It is technically feasible and commercially feasible to develop cigarettes that will have a significantly reduced propensity to ignite upholstered furniture or mattresses," says a report by a study group.

The wholesale adoption of such cigarettes by the tobacco industry could save 14,000 lives and $2.4 billion over 10 years with little expense to manufacturers, members of the group said Wednesday.

"The group projected that the 15,000 lives that will be lost to cigarette-related fires between 1986 and 1996 could be reduced to 1,000, that a quarter of a million fires could be reduced to 20,000 and that 31,000 of the 34,000 burn injuries to civilians could be prevented," said Dr. Patricia Waller, director of the Injury Prevention Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

In addition, the number of serious injuries to firefighters across the nation due to cigarette-related fires would drop from 16,000 to 1,000 over the 10 years, she said.

While the 15-member study group set up by the Cigarette Safety Act of 1984 included representatives of four major tobacco companies, Ms. Waller said studies on the acceptability of the cigarettes to smokers would likely be conducted before manufacturing processes were changed.

Betsy Annese, a spokeswoman with R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. in Winston-Salem, said any efforts to market safer cigarettes "are not far along in development. And generally, when it comes to new products, we don't talk about them until we are ready."

The report was issued at news conferences at UNC and in 24 other U.S. cities and 20 foreign countries to coincide with the introduction of a new fire-safe cigarette bill by Rep. Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., and Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Cal., and John Heinz, R-Pa.

The proposed legislation would require the National Bureau of Standards to develop a fire-safety performance standard within one year and would allow one additional year for the cigarette makers to comply.

Tax Collector Is Delinquent

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A Robeson County tax collector who heads a team that pursues delinquent taxpayers has failed to pay a $564 tax bill assessed to him nearly two years ago, officials say.

Randall Chavis, an employee of the Robeson County Tax Department since 1985, owes the money in property taxes, fire district taxes, interest and advertising fees, according to records made available Wednesday.

"I intend to pay them," Chavis said in an interview. "I'll clear mine out if I have to go borrow the money to clear them out."

Chavis, 48, said he failed to pay the taxes because of "some financial struggles, being out of work and all that."

Chavis said he retired from the Army as a first sergeant in 1983 and was in and out of jobs before joining the tax department as a collector of delinquent taxes in February 1985.

He said the revelation of his unpaid taxes was the result of a "vendetta" by allies of former Tax Collector Carl Dixon Stephens, whose job was eliminated in June when the Robeson County Board of Commissioners reorganized the department's administration.

Chancellor Search

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Leadership, vision and "a human touch" were the watchwords as faculty members, students and local residents presented their wish lists as a search committee opened its effort to find a replacement for UNC-Chapel Hill Chancellor Christopher Fordham III.

Several university faculty members outlined their interests in the search, with Stirling Haig, a French professor, calling for a chancellor with "the strongest educational leadership possible and a vision with a renewed commitment to the undergraduate program at UNC and liberal arts."

Robert Eubanks, chairman of the university's board of trustees and its 14-member search committee, said the session was designed to give faculty members, residents and students a chance to voice their views on the selection process.

Seminary

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — The faculty at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, fearing the intentions of conservatives who recently took control of the trustee board, is marshalling forces to fight what it calls a threat to academic freedom.

The 33-member faculty has raised $10,000, hired lawyers and launched a campaign to alert sympathetic parties to a battle it says could come at a trustee meeting next week.

The seminary's board of trustees will hold its semi-annual, three-day meeting Monday through Wednesday. It will be the first session since the appointment of five new trustees this summer gave conservatives majority control of the board.

Wolves Freed

MANNS HARBOR, N.C. (AP) — The last three pairs of red wolves at Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge have been set free.

The first pair released Sept. 14 have remained within about two miles of their pen and are staying together, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials say. The wolves have been monitored with radio tracking equipment since their release.

The release of the eight animals is the first step in a recovery program for the endangered species. They are the only known red wolves in the wild.

Forest Plans

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service has agreed to rewrite several parts of its plan for managing the Pisgah and Nantahala National forests to give five rivers or streams more protection from damming, mining and development.

American Rivers Inc. had contended the Tellico River, Big Laurel and Puncheon Fork, Davidson River, French Broad River and Wilson Creek were eliminated from consideration for the federal Wild and Scenic River program without adequate study.

John Alcock, the head of the U.S. Forest Service's southern regional office, last week sided with American Rivers, saying the N.C. section of the Tellico River will be classified a recreation river. The other streams also will be protected while the services conducts further studies of them.

Sea Rising

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — A geologist who warned a Florida audience that seas will rise two to five feet over the next century also told them there's hope for the state's Atlantic shoreline.

"We're convinced the east coast of Florida is markedly better in beach stabilization than the rest of the East Coast," Orrin H. Pilkey, a professor at Duke University and an outspoken opponent of unrestricted shoreline development, said Wednesday.

"You do have a better chance to replenish your beaches than does the rest of the East Coast," Pilkey told the 100 people gathered at Brevard Community College for a program on the future of Florida's beach communities.

Honored

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — Brevard Elementary School Principal Richard Voso has been picked as one of the country's 59 National Distinguished Principals.

"It's a heck of an honor," said Voso, who left Wednesday for a Washington, D.C., awards banquet. "I just feel very, very proud of the good things that have happened here, that our school and our county is worthy of representing North Carolina."

Voso, 50, was selected for the honor by the U.S. Department of Education and the National Association of Elementary School Principals, acting on nominations at the state and local levels. Fifty-one of those selected come from public schools in the United States — one from each state and the District of Columbia — while the remaining honorees come from U.S. private schools or overseas schools operated by the U.S. government.

Court Strikes 'Movie Mates' Law

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has struck down as unconstitutional an Onslow County ordinance regulating businesses providing or selling male or female companionship.

The county adopted the ordinance, aimed at combating prostitution, in 1985 after commissioners became concerned about establishments known as movie mates. Those businesses provide female companions for male patrons viewing movies in private rooms.

Treants Enterprises Inc., operator of three movie mates businesses in the county, challenged the constitutionality of the ordinance. The measure, which has not been enforced pending the outcome of the court case, required the licensing of companionship businesses and required the businesses to register their employees' names and addresses with the sheriff. The ordinance also required the business to file the names, birth dates and physical characteristics of patrons with the sheriff's department.

The Supreme Court ruled 6-0 in an opinion released Wednesday that the companionship ordinance violated the state constitution because it was too broad. The ordinance would regulate nursing homes and companions for the elderly along with movie mates, private room bars and dial-an-escort services, the court said.

In other opinions Wednesday, the court reversed the accessory-to-murder convictions of a Davidson County man because the jury may have been inflamed when the defendant was asked about witchcraft and devil worship.

Charles Ray Kimbrell was convicted of two counts of accessory before the fact of second-degree murder in the deaths of Ricky and Pamela Norman in May 1984. James Clay Hunt, charged with the murders, testified that Kimbrell wanted Norman killed because he owed Kimbrell money.

At trial, prosecutors referred to Kimbrell's statement upon arrest that he participated in "black magic" activities. The state Court of Appeals ruled the evidence was admitted in error but did not constitute prejudicial error.

But the majority of the Supreme Court said "accusations or insinuations of participation in devil worship clearly carry with them a great potential for prejudicial impact on defendant's credibility."

Justice Burley Mitchell dissented, saying the questions and Kimbrell's denial of engaging in devil worship "was harmless error."

NAACP Sees Jump In Membership Rolls

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A jump in membership in the North Carolina chapter of the NAACP and other civil rights groups can be linked to actions by the Reagan administration, which has cut student aid and anti-poverty programs and made it tougher to prove discrimination, officials of the groups say.

That political shift, combined with publicized Ku Klux Klan activities and racial attacks in places such as Howard Beach, N.Y., and at The Citadel in Charleston, has provoked concern.

"There is evidence of backsliding," says Bob Davis, president of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Black Political Caucus. "There seems to be an idea prevailing that we've had our chance, that it's time to put things back in order. The signal is coming from the nation's capital."

Membership in the North Carolina NAACP has climbed by a third in the past year as blacks complain that a generation of educational, employment and political progress is under assault.

"Things seem to be going backward," says Elizabeth Bolton, 46, a records clerk with the Mecklenburg County Department of Social Services.

She joined the NAACP for the first time six months ago — nine years after her husband, six years after her two daughters. She said she once thought the battle for civil rights was over 20 years ago, but no more.

Membership in Charlotte's chapter of the NAACP has risen dramatically in the past five years, growing from about 300 to 2,000 members. Across the state, membership increased by about one-third to about 30,000.

Kelly Alexander Jr. of Charlotte, president of the state NAACP, says the Reagan policy shifts are creating a "pressure cooker."

Reagan administration officials defend the cuts as an attempt to balance the federal budget — or simply to end the federal role in some areas.

UNCW Puts On Feast

WILMINGTON (AP) — Dinner Thursday night on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington will include veal, crab, scallops, clam chowder, truffles and two choices of wine.

But students shouldn't get in line early — the meal's not for them.

It's for the UNC board of governors, trustees and chancellors from the 16 campuses of the UNC system and UNC President C.D. Spangler Jr.

The VIPs and their spouses — about 220 in all — are at Wrightsville Beach

Why others always compare themselves to Mercedes-Benz.

Those makers who commend their cars as substitutes for a Mercedes-Benz know what they are doing.

There is always a market for the product that is a bit less technologically ambitious, a bit less mature in design, a bit less quality-obsessed. Because these shortfalls allow it to be sold for a bit less money. And there are always more people in search of the lowest price than there are people in search of the best automobile.

But for those whose personal automotive equation is purer—who cannot abide second best—this argument is no argument at all.

It is to serve the demands of people like these that authorized Mercedes-Benz dealers exist. Their language is our language. Their standards are our standards. And their idea of automotive excellence is ours: Mercedes-Benz.

Other makers will continue to compare themselves with Mercedes-Benz, in hopes that this reflected glory may add the lustre their own names lack. It may even bring crowds of people to their showrooms.

And of these, some will drive away with a so-called bargain. Meanwhile, at our showrooms, discerning individuals will be driving away in their Mercedes-Benz.

Like no other dealers in the world.

Democrats Turn On Gore

By PAUL HOUSTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Four Democratic presidential candidates, stung by Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr.'s recent efforts to depict himself as the Democrat strongest on defense, ganged up on him Wednesday in the most heated campaign debate so far, and at a free-swinging news conference afterward.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., led off the attack, accusing Gore of "knifing" his rivals with suggestions that they advocate "the politics of retreat, complacency and doubt" on issues ranging from missile development to U.S. intervention in the Persian Gulf. Minutes later, Missouri Rep. Richard A. Gephardt charged Gore with creating "phony differences" between himself and the other candidates in debates and speeches over the last two weeks. Gephardt implied the tactic was a bid to pick up support in the crucial Super Tuesday primaries in Gore's native South next March.

Wednesday's debate was a dramatic departure from the easy-going nature of the Democratic forums held since July. Gore gave back as good as he got in the brawl played out on a concert stage at the John F. Kennedy Center, first before an audience of 378 party professionals who will be delegates to the 1988 nominating convention, then amid a swarm of reporters and cameras.

"If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen," Gore snapped as Simon spoke of the need to "keep in mind a good healthy tone" in the campaign.

Gore, asserting that there are "sharp disagreements" between him and the other candidates, said that Democrats had been losing presidential elections "rather consistently" because their candidates failed to advocate a willingness "to defend our vital interests in the world when they are challenged."

"Retreat, complacency and doubt are labels that I believe characterize a view in part of the Democratic Party that all five of my opponents have come close to subscribing to," Gore told reporters.

He styled himself a "centrist realist" in favor of "a strong national defense as we pursue arms control."

Gore maintained that his rivals' support of proposals to limit U.S. escorts of Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf was "a policy of retreating from leadership in that area."

Simon retorted that "There's not a single candidate here who says we ought to retreat."

Gephardt added that "Everybody agrees we ought to be there. The issue is how to do it. I believe we ought to have a multilateral force."

Gore also charged that all of his rivals except former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt support a ban on flight testing of missiles, which he termed "a policy of complacency."

Gephardt retorted that "Sen. Gore is saying that we're for a flight test ban on missiles without qualification, without mutuality without verifiability, without it being in the context of arms control. Nobody has said that, nobody has suggested that."

Addressing Gore, Gephardt said "The fact is that you and I and the rest of us agree on more than we disagree on, so let's not raise differences between Democrats and Dixiecrats. I don't think we ought to try to bring Strom Thurmond back into the Democratic Party."

Thurmond, now a Republican senator from South Carolina, bolted the Democratic Party in 1948 to run as the States' Rights candidate for president.

FLAMING CRASH — A firefighter trains his hose into the window of a burning vacant house in Deland, Fla., after a twin-engine plane crashed into the building Wednesday afternoon. Five people aboard the plane died in the crash and the fire that followed. (AP Laserphoto)

Five Die As Plane Hits House

DELAND, Fla. (AP) — A twin-engine plane nose-dived into an empty house here, killing the pilot who had purchased the aircraft only hours earlier and his four passengers, officials said.

The Cessna 421 crashed into the wood-frame house while taking off from DeLand Municipal Airport shortly after noon Wednesday, setting the house and the plane on fire, authorities said.

"Apparently, it took off with a fairly heavy load — a full tank of gas and five passengers. It was making a turn and crashed. Whether it stalled or the pilot had a heart attack ... I don't know," said Hal Pyke, director of the airport.

The pilot, a former military officer with many hours of flying experience, had purchased the plane Wednesday morning from Black Wing Aviation, said Mike Noble, airport manager.

Noble said the pilot inspected the plane with the Black Wing Aviation's chief pilot before completing the purchase, and then took the plane up three times before loading passengers for the flight to Port Charlotte.

"The plane was in flying condition. Nothing as far as I know was wrong with it," Noble said.

The house is one mile west of the busy general-aviation airport. Owner Peggy Ditaranto said the building was subdivided into three apartments and a business office but had been vacant for some time.

"There was no one in there, thank God," Ms. Ditaranto said. She said the home was valued at about $100,000.

Two men and three women were killed, but their names were withheld pending notification of relatives, said Volusia County Sheriff Edwin Duff.

Bomber Grounded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force's new B-1B bombers are being grounded and quickly returned to service after a check of their escape systems following a crash that killed three of the plane's six crew members in Colorado.

The Air Force on Wednesday grounded its fleet of 68 new B-1B bombers for a brief inspection, the service said.

In a statement, the Strategic Air Command said "this precautionary inspection is an outgrowth of the Sept. 28 accident" at a training range in eastern Colorado.

The inspections will require only about two hours per plane and are beginning immediately, meaning the planes will be returned to service quickly, SAC said, with at least one already back in service Wednesday afternoon.

The Associated Press reported last week that the Air Force, in investigating the crash, had begun trying to determine why only three of the six crewmen on the plane ejected from the crippled aircraft.

Sources said at the time said the Air Force was concerned because it appeared that at least four and possibly all six of the crewmen should have been able to bail out safely.

The three who ejected escaped with minor injuries, but the other three went down with the plane and were killed.

Federal Relief Funds Approved

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thousands left homeless by last week's earthquake prepared to rebuild as President Reagan approved federal disaster relief, while a small quake near Palm Springs kept Southern California on edge.

Wednesday's disaster declaration means federal money for temporary housing and Small Business Administration loans to those whose homes or property were damaged by the quake and more than two dozen aftershocks.

Damage from the initial quake, which measured 6.1 on the Richter scale and struck a week ago today, was estimated at more than $125 million. The temblor and its aftershocks killed seven people and damaged more than 10,600 buildings, authorities said.

On Wednesday night, a quake centered 13 miles northwest of Palm Springs and measuring 3.4 on the Richter scale struck, officials at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena reported.

There were no immediate reports of damage. Police reported receiving only four calls immediately after the quake, which was not believed related to the Los Angeles area temblor. The area, 100 miles east of Los Angeles, was rocked by a quake measuring 5.9 on the Richter scale in July 1986.

Congress Hones Tax Bite To Reduce Budget Deficits

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A deficit-reduction tax increase is beginning to take shape in Congress, and telephone users, the super-rich and deadbeats who owe the government are getting hit.

In the House, the tax bill is being put together despite a boycott by Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee who think the majority Democrats should give more emphasis to spending cuts.

The Senate Finance Committee is starting work on its version, with no indication how much help the GOP will offer.

Hanging over the exercise is President Reagan's often-stated opposition to raising taxes to cut the deficit. Many Republicans in both houses share his feeling that the deficit is not serious enough to require higher taxes, and some Democrats are hesitant about going it alone and handing the GOP an election issue for 1988.

Ways and Means Democrats reached agreement Wednesday on $6.3 billion worth of revenue increases, a little more than half the $12 billion the panel's chairman, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., wants to raise as part of a $23 billion deficit cut.

Those Democrats and the full Finance Committee planned to consider today several revenue-raising proposals that the Reagan administration recommended in 1984 but that Congress rejected in overhauling the tax code last year.

That list includes such ideas as taxing employees on a portion of the health-insurance premiums that their employers pay and repealing the deduction allowed for state and local personal property taxes.

The Ways and Means Democrats added to their revenue-raising bill a provision giving some taxpayers an unexpected break this year. This would delay until next year a 1986 change that requires individual taxpayers to pay at least 90 percent of this year's income-tax liability in advance, through withholding or quarterly payments. The old law had an 80 percent figure.

The delay is being advocated because of confusion among many taxpayers about the new W-4 tax-withholding forms.

Here are major parts of what Democrats agreed on:

—Extend through Dec. 31, 1990, the 3 percent tax on local and long-distance telephone service. This would cost telephone users $1.3 billion in 1988.

—Extend through 1990 an expiring program under which the IRS withholds tax refunds from individuals who owe money to various government agencies. The program would be expanded to cover corporations.

—Freeze estate and gift tax rates at present levels, rather than let them drop next year as scheduled. Only the richest handful of estates are subject to any tax.

—Require employers to pay Social Security taxes on all cash tips received by employees. Employers now are taxed only to the extent that a worker's wage falls below the federal minimum wage.

—Repeal gasoline-tax exemptions now allowed bus operators and state and local governments.

—Impose a user fee on taxpayers who petition the Internal Revenue Service for private letter rulings and determination letters. This would affect about 200,000 individuals, companies and tax-exempt organizations that write the IRS for binding rulings on specific tax issues.

Scientists Develop Map Of Body Genes

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists say they've drawn a map of the body's genes that will take some of the "hit and miss" out of the search for the cause of many common inherited ailments and the role of heredity in cancer and heart disease.

The map is a guide to many of the variations on the body's 23 pairs of chromosomes, which are made up of 100,000 or so strung-together genes, repositories of hereditary information.

The variations usually don't do anything important except serve as markers or signposts. That is, they are likely to lie close to — and thus be linked to — genes that play crucial roles in diseases.

Researchers say their map shows precisely where on the chromosomes the markers sit and how far apart they are — something scientists were not sure of before.

"I think it's a great achievement," said one of the nation's most distinguished geneticists, Dr. Victor McKusick of Johns Hopkins University.

The map was described by researchers from Collaborative Research, a biotechnology firm in Bedford, and the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, both in Cambridge.

Another map has been developed independently by Ray White of the University of Utah. Some details of both maps were described to scientists in September at a genetics workshop in Paris.

Experts say the maps should make it possible to identify the genetic components of many common diseases, including those such as heart disease and cancer that may result from two or more genes — something that so far has never been done.

The map also is expected to aid the search for prenatal tests for serious inherited disorders, and improve the understanding of what disease-causing genes are doing wrong so that their unwanted effects can be treated.

Dr. David Botstein of MIT, one of the authors of the Collaborative study and a pioneer in the search for genetic markers, called the development a milestone.

"It means that genes that cause diseases can be linked all over the genome," the body's 23 pairs of chromosomes, he said. "It's no longer a hit-or-miss process to the degree it was before."

The technology used to develop the maps already has led to the discovery of various disease genes, including those for cystic fibrosis and muscular dystrophy.

AIDS Panel Leaders Resign From Study

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Both the chairman and vice chairman of the presidential AIDS commission, reportedly unhappy with divisiveness among its members, resigned Wednesday effective immediately, leaving the already embattled panel in turmoil.

Dr. W. Eugene Mayberry, the outgoing chairman, who is chief executive officer of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., refused to elaborate on his reasons for quitting, but knowledgeable sources said Mayberry has long been unhappy with the commission's makeup and its "internal politics and bickering." He resisted resigning earlier because "he didn't want to embarrass the president," one source said.

Moreover, sources said, Mayberry believes the panel is so divided that it "will never arrive at a consensus report." The first report of the commission, which is charged with advising the president on a national strategy on the AIDS epidemic, is due Dec. 7, with its final report expected in July.

Dr. Woodrow A. Myers Jr., Mayberry's handpicked vice chairman, who is Indiana's health commissioner, announced his departure within hours of Mayberry's. "I feel I can no longer be effective in attempting to reach the goals outlined in the president's order creating the commission," he said.

Later Wednesday, the White House announced that Adm. James D. Watkins, a commission member, would take over as chairman. Watkins is retired chief of naval operations.

Myers told an Indiana legislative study committee that he hoped the individuals selected to replace them would have established public health backgrounds or experience in caring for AIDS patients.

He said health professionals were not adequately represented on the panel and that it was deadlocked on key AIDS-related issues.

Women Join Morning Rotary

By SUSAN TACKER
Reflector Staff Writer

Three women were inducted into the morning Rotary Club of Greenville today, becoming the first female Rotarians in eastern North Carolina.

Betty Grossnickle, Ginger Scales Longino, and Nancy Barnhill Aycock were welcomed into the traditionally all-male service organization.

"It's nice to break the sex barrier," said Mrs. Grossnickle, one of the owners of The Kitchen Cupboard. "To me it's a great honor and a privilege to work with a service organization like Rotary. It's the most prestigious of the formerly all-men organizations."

"I consider this a milestone," said Dr. Harold Zallen, charter president of the morning group, last week. "It's the right thing to do."

Rotary has always been a male-only organization. In club literature, it is defined as "an organization of business and professional men united worldwide, who provide humanitarian service, encourage high ethical standards in all vocations, and help build goodwill and peace in the world."

A recent U.S. Supreme Court decision is the basis of the membership change.

The Supreme Court upheld a ruling that the Rotary membership rule excluding women violated a California law. Although the ruling did not force Rotary International to admit women in every state, the organization decided not to withdraw the charter of those clubs that do.

Membership in local Rotary clubs, however, is by invitation only.

"What the individuals will bring to the club is the prime reason for them to be proposed or selected," said Dr. D. Harper Taylor, president of the morning club. "There will be more women inducted now, and the emphasis will be on the person, regardless of gender."

"It's a tremendous honor for me," said Mrs. Longino, owner of Travel Express. "I look forward to meeting with other business people, sharing ideas, and being active in the community."

For many in Greenville, Rotary is a family tradition now open to daughters and sisters as well as sons. Mrs. Longino's brother attends the morning meeting, and her father-in-law was an active Rotarian.

"I would have turned down other service clubs to wait for Rotary," said Mrs. Grossnickle, whose father and father-in-law were both active members.

"I think it's a great thing for Rotary," said E.H. Alexander, the governor of Rotary district 773, which includes Greenville. "If we don't try to change with the times and grow, it will die."

With more women being inducted, Alexander says, Rotary will be "involved in a lot more areas of the community. The broadening of the club will be the broadening of the service." The inductions this morning will bring the number of women in the district to eight.

Rotary Clubs, begun in Chicago in 1905, choose one representative of each business, profession, and institution in the area to obtain a cross section of that community's business and professional world.

J. David Duffus, a local attorney with Dixon, Duffus and Doub, and Dewey Linville, NCNB National Bank vice president and senior loan and credit officer, were both also inducted this morning.

"I'm excited because we want leadership from both men and women," said Zallen. The morning club, officially known as The Rotary Club of Greenville (morning), is the newest of the three Rotary clubs in Greenville. It was chartered in January of this year.

According to Alexander, the morning club is "one of the most progressive and dynamic clubs in the district because of the calibre of people" who are members.

For example, Zallen notes that the morning group has three Paul Harris Fellows, a recognition given to those donating $1,000 or more to the Rotary Foundation. "This is significant in a new club," he said.

All members of the morning group agree to be sustaining Paul Harris Fellows. Sustaining Fellows give the Foundation $100 annually for ten years; Zallen said the group had contributed $3,100 since January.

GINGER S. LONGINO

The Rotary Foundation is one of the world's largest foundations granting scholarships for international study.

District 773 includes 55 clubs and 2432 members. Rotary International has 23,129 clubs with over 1,040,052 members in 161 countries and geographical regions worldwide.

Other states are following California's lead in inducting women. "Every district in the country probably has by now," said Alexander. "I expect a real boom in the next three years."

Photographs Are Now Collectibles

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

Despite nearly 150 years of beautiful images, not two decades have passed since photography became respectable enough to qualify as a collectible. That's when institutions like the Metropolitan Museum of Art put their prestige behind major photographic shows, and the big auction houses, such as Christie's, Sotheby's, Swann and Phillips, added photographs to their regular schedule of sales.

With eager collectors looking for something to buy, the demand in the late 1970s drove prices up, especially on the works of dozens of photographers from the 19th and 20th centuries.

Imogen Cunningham prints that a few years before were selling for $50 shot up to $3,000 and more. Baltimore photographer A. Aubrey Bodine's work sold for $300 in the late 1970s. Today, his photos of life along the Chesapeake Bay go for up to $2,000 each.

While the value of other forms of art is going through the ceiling, the works of some photographers and categories of prints are undervalued. This may be an excellent time to begin a collection.

Collectors have built portfolios on almost every conceivable photographic specialty. In their book, "The Photograph Collector's Guide" (Little, Brown; $35), Lee Witkin and Barbara London write about a person who buys only portraits of hands. You may be inspired to begin a similar collection or you may choose to start with a more common category: famed photographers such as Alfred Stieglitz or Ansel Adams or some undiscovered photographer you like.

Or perhaps you'll decide to invest in portraits of famous people or of the anonymous from another time, which are probably the cheapest collectibles and sometimes sell for as little as $5 in antique shops.

You can collect works made by a specific method — daguerreotypes, albumen prints, tintypes from the early years of photography or the photographs Man Ray made famous in the 1920s. You can choose an era or a movement. Photos from the early 1950s or late 1940s can cost pennies or a few hundred dollars, but the investment value has not yet been established. Civil War photos, especially those of the higher-ranking Confederate officers, are said by some dealers to be the next great value.

Or, if you're like attorney Tim Jacobs, you can build a collection on nothing more than your personal tastes. He began collecting photos two years ago when, as he searched for clients outside of his corporate practice, he was hired to represent the Frankel Gallery in San Francisco.

Since then, he's collected 30 prints, contemporary and vintage, ranging in price from $500 to $1,700. Twenty of the photographs fill his office walls, making further acquisitions difficult.

Whatever you buy, you should learn the history of photography and be familiar with its greatest practitioners. Start at galleries and museums. See as many pictures as you can and talk to gallery owners and museum curators. Some may offer classes on photographic appreciation.

Among books, an excellent start is "The Photograph Collector's Guide," mentioned above. The oversized volume includes concise biographies of scores of photographers and a useful glossary, and it lists museums, auction houses and art galleries in the U.S. and around the world.

You should also brush up on techniques of judging the physical condition of the prints you'll be considering for purchase. For example, nicks, tears and fading can lower the value of a print. Peter Hastings Falk, author and collector, says fading, common in 19th-century prints, can reduce a print's value by as much as 90 percent.

Other factors that influence the price: whether the photographer or an assistant printed the photo, how many prints were made, when the prints were made (the earliest prints made from a negative, called vintage prints, are generally more valuable than those made later), and whether there is any authenticating information, such as a signature or date on the back.

The biggest auction houses — Sotheby's, Christie's and Swann — hold photo auctions in May and November in New York City. You can find names and addresses for galleries, auction houses and dealers in Witkin and London's book.

You can bargain with gallery owners over price, although factors such as the popularity of the photographer and the quality of the print will influence the outcome of your deliberations.

Changing Times magazine advises you to guard against the most common mistakes, which are these:

—The temptation to buy a big-name photographer's most famous print. Ansel Adams' "Moonrise, Hernandez, New Mexico" is not highly valued because there are nearly 900 prints of it.

—Buying the first print you see. Comparison shop and you'll avoid the likelihood of ending up with poor quality for a high price. If you're buying 20th century photographers, you should be able to find more than one print of almost anything you like. Multiple prints of 19th century works are less common. You'll be better off, aesthetically and fiscally, buying the best-quality print you can afford.

—Relying on somebody else's taste or estimate of investment value. You should buy what you like, not what's popular or supposedly headed for stardom. Photography, like nearly all collectibles, is highly speculative.

As with any art, you'll have to take some precautions to preserve your prints. A dealer can help you decide what is appropriate for you. Your homeowners insurance policy may not be adequate to cover a substantial collection. Your insurance agent should be able to advise you on any additional coverage, generally offered in the form of a rider, you may need. You should also have your collection appraised every two years or so to be certain your policy is sufficient to cover a loss.

Beets will remain fresh in the refrigerator up to two weeks. For longer storage, it is best to layer them in sand in a cool (45 degrees or below), moist cellar.

Men Develop Nesting Instinct

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

It's no secret, the older a man gets, the less of a social animal he becomes. There is a brief period after you are married when he will willingly climb into a suit and a tie and accompany you to events where he will be quite civil. This condition "peaks" in about two weeks, and then it's a struggle all the way to get him out of the house. Eventually your social life will be somewhere to the right of a lighthouse keeper.

At our house, going out for an evening anymore has all the drama of a Phil Donahue show. I sit at the table and my husband roams through the kitchen shooting questions at me.

"Who's going to be at this party?"

"I don't know."

"You don't know!" he admonishes, his eyes widening. "You don't know if it's a few couples or a mob?"

"No."

DIAGNOSING

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Doctors will be able to visualize internal organs and diagnose some illnesses without exploratory surgery by the 1990s, says Dr. Paul F. Griner, director of Strong Memorial Hospital at the University of Rochester.

He says the technology of magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) is developing quickly. Doctors expect to use it soon to define, in the case of cervical cancer, the extent of a tumor before surgery. This will allow them to choose treatment by surgery or radiation, without exploratory surgery first.

Another example of when MRI may reduce the need for surgery would be in identifying torn ligaments or cartilage in knee injuries.

The average American eats the fat equivalent of a stick of butter every day.

"Is there a place to sit down and talk or do we stand around watching Duane's Ollie North haircut grow out?"

"There's no need to be sarcastic. These are just nice people..."

"Nice people! How well do we know them... really! We don't even know if we're going to have a good time or not. And what about the food? Is this a dinner or one of those things where we eat bait off crackers for three hours?"

"What difference does it make? We'll see some people we know and..."

"Aha! I thought you just said you didn't know who was going to be there."

"I don't, but the odds are in our favor."

"What time are we coming home?" he asks.

"What kind of a question is that? We haven't even gone yet and you want to know when we are coming home."

"I suppose everyone will be in hard shoes."

"Everyone except Prof. Irwin Correy," I say dryly.

All of this is a preamble, you understand. Once he gets to a gathering, you would have thought it was all his idea. Old Hats and Horns comes alive and greases from group to group giving his political views, his insights into world affairs and regales them with his story of the duck in the bar who ordered two martinis. When I mention leaving, he turns to the group and says, "I'd better take Mother home. She requires 18 hours of sleep a night, you know. After the hors d'oeuvres, she fades fast."

I find it rather ironic that men develop a "nesting" instinct in their maturity. After years in the marketplace, they lust after a chair with cushions that shape to their contour, a nice light that illuminates the newspaper draped over their chest, a television tuner that brings in sound to cover their deep breathing.

Forget the hearth... home is where the husband is.

Independent Publishers Help Unknown Writers

By KARREN MILLS
Associated Press Writer
HOPKINS, Minn. (AP) — Can't interest a publisher in your new book? Self-publishing may be the answer, say members of the Minnesota Independent Publishers Association.

"I think most everybody has thought they'd like to write a book," says Nancy Radcliff Edwards, the association's president.

But what the unknown writer thinks is a great idea may not fire the imagination of an established publisher, she says, even though the book might have sales potential.

"The Minnesota Publishers and Producers Directory" estimates there are between 1,200 and 1,400 publishers in the state producing books, magazines and newspapers, but Edwards said there was no breakdown for book publishers.

Outside New York, however, California, Texas and Minnesota are among the top states for the number of books being produced, said Marlin Bree, a former president of the state association.

In Minnesota, there are self-published books on subjects as varied as cooking, fishing, art, hunting, Minnesota data, humor, medicine, more mushrooms, self-help, travel, poetry, law, children's activities and photography.

Self-published books in Minnesota range in price from $2.25 for a small, self-help paperback to $1,500 for a limited edition artist's book. Some are of purely regional interest, while others are of national interest.

Called "vanity publishing" by detractors, success in self-publishing requires considerable business acumen. The self-publisher is responsible for making all decisions regarding publication, from selecting typeface and paper to choosing a printer, and then marketing and distributing the book.

Edwards, an artist and former elementary school teacher, got into the publishing business about three years ago when she began work on "With Love From My Kitchen," a blank recipe book intended for people who want to share their special recipes with friends and relatives.

She did sketches for each of the 264 pages of the recipe book, a ring-binder edition with tab sections to separate categories, and had 1,000 copies printed.

"We put the books together page by page from tables all over the house," she said of the meager beginnings of Paint Box Studios at her home in this Minneapolis suburb.

The book sold and she ordered a second printing of 5,000 copies, then a third of 10,000. She now orders two printings a year of 15,000 copies each and pays to have the books assembled.

"We just sold our 50,000th copy. My printing bills are over $100,000 a year now. I never dreamed my book would sell this much," said Edwards, whose book is sold for $16.95 in gift stores.

"You can do this on your own. You don't have to go through a big publisher... Of course, you have to do a lot more work," Edwards said.

After it is written, there's the marketing. "I first thought if you had something good & ple would just track you down. No way!" she said.

The marketing is where many self-publishers fail, she said.

Large bookstore chains virtually always turn down independent publishers because the sales potential of the books is so uncertain with unknown writers, she said.

What self-publishers do, she said, is peddle their books individually to bookstores, which usually stipulate that they be allowed to return unsold copies.

Bree recalled marketing the first of his company's seven books in 1982. "On our first book, the truck pulled up with our books and we thought, 'What do we do with it?' We put it in the middle of the living room so every day we had to stumble over that pile of books until we got rid of them. It took at least two or three months on that first press run," Bree said.

Once bookstores or, in Edwards' case, gift shops agree to carry the books, they have to be shipped.

"The most boring job in the business is shipping, billing and collecting the money," Edwards said.

"The process can be disheartening for some new publishers, she noted.

"People will have this 'great idea.' They'll put it together and publish it and sell a few copies. Then they have to make a decision. Do they want to continue? Is it worth the effort? Some of them are just glad to get rid of that first printing and get the heck out of there," Edwards said.

She cautions that self-publishing is not a get-rich-quick business.

"It would take a number of years to get to the point of being able to support a family" in most cases. "But if you enjoy it, it would be worth it," Edwards said.

Matchmaker's Blind Dates All Fail To Catch On Fire

DEAR ABBY: Since my divorce two months ago, I've had a hard time meeting single women, so I signed up with a dating service. The fee was $750 (in advance) and they agreed to fix me up with as many women as it took to find me a wife within 12 months.

For my very first date, I was fixed up with a woman of a different race. I'm not prejudiced, but I had clearly told the people at the dating service that I wanted to go out only with women of my own race. When I complained and asked for my money back, they said they were sorry and it would not happen again, so I gave them another chance.

My second date was with someone who works weekends and is not available on Saturdays and Sundays. I date only on weekends, which I told my "matchmaker" when I signed up.

The third date was with a woman who lives 90 miles away. Before joining I told them I would drive no more than 25 miles. When I told these matchmakers I was dissatisfied and wanted my money back, they said, "Sorry, we don't give refunds." Now what do I do? — DUMBELL

DEAR DUMBELL: You are not a dumbbell, only inexperienced and vulnerable. I'm reminded of a line from a song from "Fiddler on the Roof": "... playing with 'matches' a girl can get burned." Guys, too. The Better Business Bureau should be notified about this dating service. You were had.

DEAR ABBY: You hear a lot of jokes about how women try to get out of having sex with their husbands by saying, "Not tonight, dear. I have a headache." Well, this is no joke — my husband really gets a terrible headache when we have sex.

I told him it wasn't normal, and he should tell his doctor about it when he goes for his next insurance physical, but he says he won't because the doctor might think he's crazy.

Abby, have you ever heard of this before? — HEADACHES IN HOUSTON

DEAR HEADACHES: Yes. I have

Dear Abby

heard that the physiological changes that accompany orgasm (accelerated heart rate and sudden rise in blood pressure) have been known to cause headaches in some men.

Also, just the stress of worrying about getting one of those headaches is enough to precipitate one.

DEAR ABBY: A co-worker arranged a blind date for me with a man she's been wanting me to meet for a long time. She gave him a big buildup, so I kept wondering why a "handsome, intelligent, successful, 36-year-old accountant" had never been married. (I'm 33 and divorced.)

Well, after the third date, I think I know why. This man doesn't believe in using a deodorant! I was very much attracted to him, so after the third date, in a very nice way, I told him he needed a deodorant — and even bought him one. He refused to accept it, saying, "There's nothing wrong with the honest smell of masculine sweat." (Can you beat that?)

I could really care for this man, but I get turned off when he gets close to me. He was born in this country and is modern and open-minded in every way except this. He says he showers every morning and sometimes twice a day, and I believe him, but, Abby, he perspires profusely and I find the odor very offensive. Frankly it would be very hard for me to have a physical relationship with a man who smells bad.

Any suggestions? — TURNED OFF IN ATLANTA

DEAR TURNED OFF: Match his "honesty" with this honest statement of your own: "I am very much attracted to you, but I can't make love with a clothespin on my nose, so if you want to get closer to me, get wise and use a deodorant."

If he refuses, say goodbye with no regrets. He's selfish, insensitive and rigid.

DEAR ABBY: I've been friends with "Violet" for a long time. We work together. I was thrilled when she asked me to be a bridesmaid. I helped her select the bridesmaids' dresses and also helped her plan her wedding. When I received my invitation, I learned that I was expected to come without my fiancé. I thought it was an oversight because Violet knows I have a fiancé, so I mentioned it. She said she was sorry but nobody could invite an escort because she couldn't afford to have extra people. It's to be a catered affair. I tried to explain that I really wanted my fiancé to be there. I even offered to pay for his dinner in advance. She said no.

I told her if she couldn't let my fiancé come, I couldn't be in her wedding party. Well, I dropped out, and now we aren't friends anymore.

Was I wrong, or was she? Can you figure out why she refused to have my fiancé at her wedding? I sure can't. — FEELS TERRIBLE, STATEN ISLAND

DEAR FEELS TERRIBLE: She was wrong. It's possible that she couldn't afford the extra dinner, but since you offered to pay for it and she refused, I would conclude that she didn't want your fiancé at her wedding.

DANGER SIGNS

Doctors normally explain the condition of a patient by his vital signs: blood pressure, pulse, temperature, etc. If any of these areas dip, the patient is in trouble. Your car also has vital signs or danger symptoms.

BRAKES: A sagging pedal may indicate a hydraulic leak. Other danger signals are squealing, grabbing or locking of brakes. The hand brake should be capable of holding the car on a steep hill when the transmission is in neutral.

TIRES: Look periodically for cuts, embedded nails and worn spots on the treads and sidewalls. Tire pressure should be checked every two weeks and before every long trip.

MUFFLER: Holes that rust through mufflers not only broadcast noise, they let deadly carbon monoxide fumes escape and cut down on a car's performance.

If you find symptoms of something wrong, take your car to an expert before more serious trouble develops.

Dravecky Near Perfect As He Hurls Giants To Victory Over Cards In Game Two

ST. LOUIS (AP) — According to San Francisco catcher Bob Melvin, Dave Dravecky's two-hit shutout ranked close to perfection.

"From the first batter on, we were together on almost every pitch," Melvin said of the left-hander's 5-0 victory over St. Louis Wednesday that evened the best-of-seven National League playoffs at one victory each. "When he was off, he was way off. He walked a few, but he just didn't make mistakes."

Dravecky, while baffling St. Louis with sharp control that belied the four walks he issued, stretched his streak of scoreless postseason innings to 19-2-3.

"It's a dream I've had for a long time," Dravecky said of his gem. "The ball was moving so much that I really didn't have to work on corners."

So effective was Dravecky that he faced only 18 batters after Ozzie Smith walked and Tommy Herr singled to open the Cardinals' fourth.

"When we had (runners at) first and second with no outs and didn't score, I knew we were in trouble," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said of the Cardinals' fourth-inning bid. "He (Dravecky) was just dominating from the start. He was in control all the way."

The teams are off today and the series resumes in San Francisco Friday night with the Giants sending left-hander Atlee Hammaker, 10-10, against either right-hander Danny Cox, 11-9, or left-hander Joe Magrane, 9-7.

Cox was scheduled to start the opener for St. Louis but was scratched hours before gametime with a stiff neck.

St. Louis' loss was its first in seven home playoff games and its third shutout defeat this year in 83 games at Busch Stadium.

"I've seen him better, believe it or not, (but) he threw a heck of a game," Cardinals center fielder Willie McGee said of Dravecky. "The key to our game is hitting, but good pitching stops good hitting and that's what happened."

As Dravecky was carving up St.

Louis with an assortment of fastballs, changeups and sliders, Jeffrey Leonard was using a hammer.

"I love it," said Leonard, who gleefully responded to catcalls from Cardinals fans in the left-field bleachers by hitting a home run, his second in two games, and two singles. "I've been a villain in my own ballpark. It pumps me up. It gives certain ballplayers a little bit of an advantage."

Leonard's home run was a towering shot to straightaway center field off a 0-1 changeup from John Tudor that led off San Francisco's fourth.

"I don't know whether the wind got it or what, but it went out," Tudor said of Leonard's 420-foot blast. "It wasn't a good pitch for me. It was a good pitch for him."

Leonard's homer, drawing awe-inspired murmurs from a red-clad crowd of 55,331, continued an assault off Tudor that Will Clark started in the second.

"Clark hit a fastball down the mid-

Gaetti's Homers Break Alexander Spell By 8-5

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — When Gary Gaetti hit a second-inning homer, the Metrodome became so noisy that it was impossible to hear what was truly the most important sound in the Twins' most important game in 17 years — a sigh of relief in the Minnesota dugout.

Gaetti hit two homers to break Doyle Alexander's spell and Don Baylor came through with a game-winning pinch single in the eighth inning Wednesday night, leading the Twins to an 8-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers in Game 1 of the American League playoffs.

"The key blow was Gaetti's first home run off Doyle Alexander. After he hit that, there was a sigh of relief. We said he (Alexander) is human," said Tom Brunansky, who added two doubles and three RBI to help the Twins to their first playoff victory ever after being swept in both of their previous playoffs, in 1969 and 1970 against Baltimore.

Like every other team in the AL, the Twins have had trouble beating Alexander, who was 9-0 after coming to Detroit in an Aug. 12 trade with the Atlanta Braves. Two of those victories came against the Twins, who had only a .218 batting average against the 37-year-old right-hander.

But when Gaetti homered — three innings later he became the first player to hit homers in of his first two playoff at-bats — the Twins suddenly had confidence.

"G-Man came through," second baseman Steve Lombardozzi said. "He took a lot of pressure off us. You could hear a sigh after that one."

But Baylor was the one who broke the tie.

With the Twins trailing 5-4 entering the eighth, Dan Gladden led off with a single. One out later, Kirby Puckett's RBI double to right tied the game and chased Alexander in favor of rookie Mike Henneman.

Henneman walked Kent Hrbek intentionally to get to Gaetti and then walked Gaetti unintentionally to load the bases.

Left-hander Willie Hernandez came on to pitch to lefty Randy Bush, who was promptly removed for the right-handed hitting Baylor. On a 2-2 pitch, Baylor, the 37-year-old designated hitter the Twins acquired just before the Sept. 1 trading deadline, lined a run-scoring single to center. Brunansky followed with a two-run double.

"Don Baylor is a clutch hitter, a good competitor, and he's always ready — physically and mentally — to come off the bench," pitcher Bert Blyleven said.

Blyleven, 15-12, starts against Detroit's Jack Morris, 18-11, tonight in Game 2 of the best-of-seven series.

"I think if it was my first at-bat in the league championship series, I might have been nervous," Baylor said. "When you see Gary Gaetti hit the ball out his first time up, that's special."

Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson had said before the series that he liked the way Gaetti played.

Asked afterward if he still felt that way, Anderson said: "That's why I like Gary."

"I like him, too," Gaetti said facetiously.

Gaetti said he thought his first homer "gave everybody a little hope."

Alexander had given up just three home runs in 88 1-3 innings since coming to Detroit and "had always shut us down pretty good," Gaetti said.

About his homers, he said: "The first one was an outside fastball. The second one was a slider right in the 'whomp-um' zone. I just did what I always do — swing hard in case I hit it. The first good pitch I see, I swing at."

Alexander, whose postseason record fell to 0-4, took the loss philosophically.

"I knew I couldn't win forever," he said. "But I'll be back. This thing's not over yet."

Wednesday night's game looked like it might be over when the Twins took a 4-1 lead after five innings.

Gaetti, who had 31 homers this season, had given the Twins a 1-0 lead with his first homer.

Mike Heath homered off Minnesota starter Frank Viola to tie the game in the third.

Gaetti's second homer, on Alexander's first pitch of the fifth, sparked a three-run outburst and made him the sixth player to hit two homers in an AL playoff game.

Bush followed with a triple. Brunansky had an RBI double and, two outs later, Gladden hit a run-scoring single for a 4-1 lead.

Kirk Gibson's solo homer off Viola in the sixth made it 4-2.

Detroit loaded the bases with none out but only managed one run — on Heath's RBI single — in the seventh.

Heath came back to haunt Viola, who had said before the game that being a left-hander gave him an advantage because "I'd much rather face Mike Heath than Matt Nokes."

Detroit scored twice in the eighth to chase Viola and take a 5-4 lead. Gibson walked and Trammell doubled him to third, bringing on reliever Jeff Reardon. Pinch-hitter Dave

Vikes, Rose Both At Home

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

D.H. Conley plays another key game in its bid to get into the State 3-A football playoffs which Rose's biggest obstacle this week may be its own attitude toward Friday night's game.

The Vikings, who spanked West Carteret, 49-6, this past Friday, return home this Friday, hosting North Lenoir. The Hawks, who have never finished below third place in the league standings, have lost four straight since opening up with a 21-7 win over South Lenoir.

Rose, meanwhile, is coming off a stunning 27-10 victory over Rocky Mount, and plays host to Wilson Beddingfield, a winner in just two of its first five games.

The Vikings, 3-2, were shut out by North Lenoir, 14-0, but have shown much more strength this year. The Vikes only loss since an opening defeat at the hands of Ayden-Grifton, was a 20-6 setback at the hands of Havelock, ranked number one in the state among 3-A schools.

Nevertheless, the Vikings just about have to get past North Lenoir to have a shot at the playoffs this year.

JHR'S Axel Smith

DHC's Ardee Anderson

The Hawks, following their opening win over South Lenoir, have been beaten by Greene Central, 13-0; C.B. Aycock, 14-7; White Oak, 29-6; and West Craven, 25-3.

Conley coach Steve Craft was well-pleased following the big win over West Carteret. "We did some things right that haven't gone real well before. Our passing game was asleep for the first four weeks, but it woke up Friday. We executed well in the first half and went out and didn't let up and went after them. I was real proud of our young team," Craft said.

"It was a good effort to say the least. A lot of times when you score a couple of times early, you let up. But they went right for the jugular and put them away. I was glad to see that instinct."

Craft said that quarterback Bronswell Patrick had a good night throwing the ball, while both Anthony Perry and Daryl Simpson ran the ball well. "We got good play from our defensive ends, Chuckie Gardner and Ardee Anderson, and from our linebackers, Aaron Freeman and Donte Williams."

Craft said he did not anticipate the game being lopsided, but felt that if the team played to its potential, it could be that way. "We had more speed than they did and were able to execute and do it. We weren't that much better, but they had very little team speed and our speed dominated them."

This week, against North Lenoir, the Vikings expect to be in for a fight. "They'll be coming in scratching and clawing. They had a lot of kids out against White Oak, so that game should be not a good measure of their abilities. They are fairly young at the skill positions but they will get better. They have their backs to the wall now and that gives them a lot of incentive."

Craft said that the Hawks have mixed the run and pass well. "We look for them to run their tailback up the middle and on sprint draw and pass off it. They are very tailback oriented."

"The best thing for us is that we're looking forward to coming home after two weeks on the road and to playing in front of our home people."

"We have to keep on improving. We have to keep on doing the good things we do better and improve some other things that need improving. One thing we have to improve is our blocking. And on defense, we have been in the right places at the right time, but our techniques and tackles has to improve," Craft said.

JHR's Tom Baker

"We really don't try to overly concern ourselves with our opponents, but just try to work to improve our own game. We have to take it week by week. We can't start looking too far ahead."

Rose must guard against a mental letdown against Beddingfield, a team that has scored more than one touchdown in only one game this year, a 12-6 opening win over Smithfield-Selma. The Bruins have since lost to SouthWest Edgecombe, 34-0; beaten Southern Wayne, 8-6; and lost to Rocky Mount, 28-0; and Northern Nash 21-6.

Rose, in last week's game, rallied from a 10-7 deficit midway through the third period to pull out the 27-10 win over the Gryphons, and it took a score in the final minute of play to accomplish that.

"Some people have accused us of running up the score on them," Coach Chip Williams said. "But they've forgotten how quickly Rocky

Heisman Candidate

University of Cincinnati quarterback Danny McCain is being hyped as a Heisman Trophy candidate this year. McCain, who passed for over 300 yards in his last outing, leads the Bearcats into Ficklen Stadium Saturday.

Mount can get on the scoreboard."

Two years ago, Rocky Mount scored twice within a couple of minutes to put the game on ice then, recovering an on-sides kick after a touchdown. "Any team that is a good passing team is capable of scoring in a hurry," Williams said. "With a 10-point edge, we were still vulnerable."

Williams praised Rocky Mount as the best the Rampants have met this year, and he added that the players shared his feelings. "I was very impressed with their linebacker, Marion Sharpe," the coach said.

But the also thought that the Rose defense did a good job against Rocky Mount, limiting Tim Kilpatrick to just five completions in 21 attempts and picking off three of his passes. "Our coverages, and the way we disguised them, had a lot to do with that," Williams said. "It worked well and they threw into our coverage on a number of occasions."

Williams singled out Rexter Williams for catching receiver Don Thomas when he had broken clear on a reception, saving a touchdown. He also noted that Malcolm Wilson caught Thomas on a long punt return that could have gone all the way. "He did that after being blocked," Williams said.

"One of the big plays was their roughing the kicker penalty that allowed us to keep the ball and score," the coach said. Kevin Goodrich was roughed on a missed field goal attempt, and Rose scored on the first play following. It was the only penalty of the game against Rocky Mount. "But then, we had lost a touchdown on the same series when they called a clip on our fumble return," Carlester Crumpler had picked up a Gryphon misplay at the Rose 28 and returned it for a touchdown, but the ball was called back because of a clip well behind the play.

"A good effort carried us," Williams said. "We played hard on defense, but the effort was what did it."

On offense, Williams praised the play of quarterback Tom Moye, who was six of 11 for 89 yards, including a pass that set up the final score. "He's doing just what a senior quarterback is supposed to be doing," the coach said.

He also praised the running of Timmy Moore, who had 125 yards on 14 carries and scored a touchdown. A 54-yard interception return by Moore set up another score. "Buddy (Barnhill) and Dave (Daniels) do a lot that doesn't get seen. Their blocking has been very, very good. Stacy Best played well on defense. He intercepted two passes. Jay Mattox did a good job at center against a strong nose guard."

Beddingfield, despite its record, is a dangerous team, Williams cautioned.

"Our mental attitude is going to be important, too," he warned. "Monday, we looked a little pleased with ourselves (in practice). We can't have that."

Williams said that against Rocky Mount, Beddingfield was only down 7-0 at halftime and the Bruins' tight end had dropped a pass all alone in the end zone that could have knotted it at intermission.

"They lost their quarterback and their best running back in the game and Rocky Mount was able to score three times on them in the second half to win. But the score was not indicative of the game."

"Against Northern Nash, their quarterback played only sparingly and the running back did not play at all. But I expect them to be back this week."

"Northern Nash scored one touchdown by blocking a punt, and then sacked the punter another time to set up a drive from the 17 for a score," Williams said.

"Obviously, they are doing something right. It's not going to be an easy game for us. I just hope we are ready," Williams said.

McCain Paces UC Attack

The University of Cincinnati visits East Carolina University for the second straight year this Saturday, seeking its first football win over the Pirates.

And the Bearcats bring in a potent passing game to try and to the deed. The Bearcats, 2-2, operate off the strong arm of 6-3, 195-pound senior quarterback Danny McCain. McCain led Cincinnati to a season-high 521 yards of offense in a 31-26 victory over Miami of Ohio. He completed 27 of 36 passes for a career-high 399 yards and one touchdown.

In his career, the lanky hurler has completed 454 of 736 passes for 5,569 yards, all three school career records. He also has 4,988 yards in total offense, along with 899 offensive plays, also a career mark.

His 2,831 yards passing last year is second among Cincinnati quarterbacks, and is on pace to break a number of other records before he finishes up this year.

McCain, however, isn't the whole story for the Bearcats. They have a strong runner in running back Alan McKinney (6-0, 193, Jr.). McKinney has picked up 372 yards and scored one touchdown in the four games thus far.

Cincinnati opened its season with a 10-7 defeat at the hands of Rutgers, then bounced back to defeat Louisville, 25-0. That was followed, however, by a 41-0 rout at the hands of nationally ranked Penn State.

The win over Miami came two weeks ago as the Bearcats had this past Saturday off, giving them two weeks to prepare for the Pirates.

And if last year's game is any gauge, this year's should be another corker.

East Carolina took last year's game, 32-19, as McCain hit on 26 of 40 passes for 260 yards. The Pirates spurted out to an early 17-0 lead in the game, leading 10-0 at the half and then scoring the first touchdown of the third period. The Bearcats rallied, however, drawing with 25-19 before Willie Lewis sealed the win for the Pirates in the closing minutes of the game.

Against Miami, Cincinnati was successful in coming from behind, as McCain led drive of 94 and 77 yards to score twice in the final period, the last touchdown coming with 1:57 left.

McCain underwent arthroscopic surgery during the off-week, but is expected to be ready to go this weekend.

So far this year, he's completed 68 of 105 pass attempts for 781 yards. He's thrown for three touchdowns and had three interceptions.

McKinney leads the rushing with 372 yards on 85 carries, with one touchdown. Fullback Leonard Cry (5-9, 216, Jr.) has 101 yards on 20 carries, the only other Bearcat over 100 yards.

The top receivers are reserve flanker Bill Davis (5-10, 184, Jr.) with 15 catches for 227 yards and two touchdowns. Flanker Roosevelt Mukes (5-10, 166, Jr.) has pulled in 14 for 160 yards. Split end Steve Sanders (6-2, 194, Jr.) has caught 12 for 183 and one score, while McKinney also has 12 receptions for 93 yards.

"This is the beginning of our second season, and a very tough three-game stretch in our schedule," Coach Dave Currey said. "East Carolina is a much-improved team with good overall speed. They've got a big-play offense. Their quarterback is an exciting player, and defensively, they are led by a good linebacking group."

Currey said that the Miami win was a big one for the Bearcats, "both from the standpoint of needing a win at that point and because of the way we won it."

"We made some big plays offensively which we must continue to do to be effective," he said. "There are a number of little things which we must still shore up to be a good football team."

Cincinnati has rushed for 125.3 yards a game while allowing 225.0 per contest. The Bearcats have passed for 205.5 yards a game, giving up 155.5.

The defense is led by sophomore linebacker Mike Kelly (212) and linebacker Vaughn Booker (6-4, 216, Fr.). The latter had five tackles, four of them unassisted, a fumble recovery and a blocked PAT in the Miami game. Defensive end Hollis Smith (6-3, 205, Fr.) also had five tackles, including two for a loss against Miami.

The Bearcats also rely on a freshman punter, Jeff Jones, who averaged 44.3 against Miami. He's averaging 37.7 on the year, however. Placekicker Phil Insalaco has kicked two of three field goals and is 7-7 on PATs.

The game is the second of a four-game series currently under contract. The next two games, in 1988 and 1989 will be played in Cincinnati.

Opening Game Victory Gives Twins Confidence

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The opening game of the American League playoffs has given the victorious Minnesota Twins added confidence while re-introducing the Detroit Tigers and pitcher Doyle Alexander to the realities of defeat.

"Tonight was the most nervous of any game this year," winning pitcher Jeff Reardon said after the Twins, who rallied from behind in the eighth inning Wednesday night, came away with an 8-5 victory. "It gives us confidence we can match up with them."

It was a point well taken because the Tigers won a major-league high 98 games — including the last three against Toronto to take the AL East — and held an 8-4 regular-season advantage over the Twins.

"I knew I couldn't win forever," said Alexander, who posted a 9-0 record — the Tigers were 11-0 in games he started — following his trade from Atlanta in August. "We had our chances."

"It was good to get the first one out of the way," said Gary Gaetti, who became the first player to homer in his first two at-bats in the AL playoffs. "It doesn't remove the pressure, though."

Reardon, who saved 31 games during the regular season — as many as the entire Tiger bullpen — got the victory after relieving left-hander Frank Viola with no outs in the eighth inning.

"It was a real big game for us because we're known as a good home team," Reardon said of the Twins, whose 56-25 record at the Metrodome was the best home mark in baseball this season.

Twins Manager Tom Kelly also thought the victory was very important.

"It is important to win the first game for our ballclub, being a younger ballclub," said Kelly, who has only five players with post-season experience.

But Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said the loss wouldn't hurt his club because the Tigers are a team of veterans, most of whom were on the 1984 club that won the World Series.

"I don't ever like to lose," Anderson said. "We have to beat them four of the next six."

The Twins got the lift they needed in the second inning when Gaetti hit a 2-2 pitch from Alexander over the fence in right-center field fence. In the fifth, he hit the first pitch in the same direction.

"The key was Gaetti's first home run," said Tom Brunansky, who had two hits in four at-bats and drove in three runs. "After he hit that, there was a sigh of relief in our dugout. We said, 'This guy is human.' After the second home run, our batters were much more aggressive."

Alexander had no trouble explaining the loss.

"I had too many balls up tonight," he said. "I this park, you just can't do that. In this park, they're out. In our park, the two home runs probably aren't out, but that's not the way it is."

Alexander has one of baseball's best records in September, going 20-3 over his career. But his luck always seems to change in October. In five post-season outings, Alexander is 0-4.

"I made some good pitches tonight and I made some bad pitches," he said. "But, I'll be back. This thing's not over yet."

The game clearly demonstrated the superiority of the Minnesota bullpen.

Reardon stopped Detroit on one hit over the last two innings despite allowing eighth-inning sacrifice flies by pinch hitter Dave Bergman and Chet Lemon that gave the Tigers a 5-4 lead with runs charged to Viola. Reardon gave up a single and a walk in the ninth, but wound up striking out the side, including Bill Madlock and Kirk Gibson to end the game.

But the Detroit bullpen failed to bail out Alexander.

Dan Gladden singled to start the eighth. After Greg Gagne fouled out, Kirby Puckett doubled to center to tie the game and bring on Mike Henneman, who intentionally walked Kent Hrbek and unintentionally walked Gaetti.

Willie Hernandez relieved Henneman and gave up the go-ahead run when Don Baylor, pinch hitting for Bush, singled to left. Brunansky followed with a two-run double.

Dravecky...

die," Tudor said of the two-run homer after Candy Maldonado singled. "You don't have to make many (mistakes) to have them beat when you throw home runs."

St. Louis, already trailing 3-0 after Leonard connected, ensured its fate with an uncharacteristic eighth inning.

Leonard fisted a hit to right field, stopping at second on Maldonado's single up the middle. Eddie Milner's sacrifice bunt moved the runners up, but Melvin struck out after Clark was intentionally walked to load the bases.

"I missed it, I missed it, I missed it," Cardinals shortstop Smith said of Jose Uribe's subsequent grounder that went through his legs and let two runs score.

"It's that simple. What more can I say?" Smith said. "Today just wasn't our day."

It was, however, a crisp afternoon that Dravecky, whom the Giants acquired July 4 from the San Diego Padres, can long treasure.

"A couple of times I got careless, but I think the (reason) was I was trying to aim the ball instead of throwing it," Dravecky said. "When I walked them, I was throwing to the catcher's glove. I was tentative, not aggressive."

Dravecky, while becoming the fourth pitcher in playoff history to pitch a complete-game two-hitter, extended his NL playoff string of scoreless innings to 15 — one fewer than the record Mike Scott of the Houston Astros set last fall.

"The bottom line is the good Lord has given me (good) health," said Dravecky, who in addition to Herr's hit permitted only Jim Lindeman's two-out single in the second. "They've written in the past that I've had a bum arm, but this year I stayed healthy."

More Defect As Talks Go On

TYSONS CORNER, Va. (AP) — As Gene Upshaw and Jack Donlan continued to work to end the NFL strike, 37 more players crossed picket lines, including quarterback Joe Montana and 11 of his San Francisco 49ers teammates.

Upshaw and Donlan, representing the two NFL labor fronts, were to continue negotiations today in the latest round of talks designed to end the 17-day-old walkout. Upshaw, the executive director of the NFL Players Association, and Donlan, his management counterpart, have held one-on-one meetings at an undisclosed site in the Washington area since Tuesday.

There were conflicting reports on the amount of progress made Wednesday.

But both sides said that no immediate settlement was in sight. Thus, it is a certainty that this weekend's games will once again feature teams with a majority of replacement players and a smattering of defectors.

The latest flood of regulars to cross the picket lines came Wednesday as players strived to meet the deadline imposed by owners to pick up this week's paychecks and qualify to play in this weekend's games. The 37 defections brought to 129 the number of players who have crossed over since the strike began Sept. 22.

The biggest blow to the union came in Redwood City, Calif., where 12 49ers crossed. Among those accompanying Montana were wide receiver Dwight Clark, running backs Roger Craig and Joe Cribbs and cornerback Eric Wright. Many members of the group were ready to return last week but were talked out of it by Coach Bill Walsh.

Walsh, who had turned back the players in the interest of team unity, would not repeat the procedure Wednesday.

"I wouldn't want to try it again," Walsh said. "We don't really have any other choice. If they want to come back, our doors have to be open."

The latest round of defections left just seven of the league's 28 teams — the New York Giants, Washington Redskins, Philadelphia Eagles, San Diego Chargers, Seattle Seahawks, Tampa Bay Bucs and Kansas City Chiefs — with no defectors.

Meanwhile, both sides gave different versions of the latest round of negotiations, which were effectively shielded from the press coverage the last session in Philadelphia received Sept. 23-25.

Management Council spokesman John Jones said the sides did not discuss the major bargaining points, instead focusing on such topics as injury and non-injury grievance procedures, discipline by the commissioner, injury protection and safety and welfare.

But Doug Allen, the NFLPA's assistant executive director, said Upshaw was "encouraged, and progress has been made." Allen said the sides "touched on" such important topics as guaranteed contracts and protection for player representatives.

Allen contended that the two sides had covered 13 of the 38 articles in the proposed collective bargaining agreement.

While Donlan and Upshaw were meeting, several of the striking players either crossed picket lines or came close to doing so.

The 0-3 Giants had three players — NFL MVP Lawrence Taylor, Pro Bowl defensive end Leonard Marshall and third-string quarterback Jeff Hostetler report to Giants Stadium, then leave after meeting with team officials.

General Manager George Young denied they were asked to leave.

"Our policy is that each man has to answer with his own conscience," Young said. "Each man has to make the decision on his own."

Other defections included four St. Louis Cardinals, bringing that club's total to a league-high 18, and three more from Dallas, giving the Cowboys 11. The 49ers now have 13 defectors as do the Los Angeles Raiders. The New Orleans Saints have 12 and the Los Angeles Rams 11.

"We've still got around 1,500 on the picket line and right now we're not focusing on the scabs but on our strength. We're certainly confident of our solidarity."

One of the Dallas defectors, defensive lineman Kevin Brooks, got a letter from the Cowboys saying he might lose $250,000 of deferred income if he stayed out. Running back Tony Dorsett and defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones cited similar reasons for reporting last week.

That led the union to claim Wednesday that such threats institute a breach of contract.

"NFL players who are illegally threatened by management to cross picket lines could go to court and seek free agency because their contract has been breached," Dick Berthelsen, NFLPA general counsel, said in a statement.

The union already has filed unfair labor practice charges with the National Labor Relations Board against the Cowboys and New Orleans Saints for "unlawful coercion" of players such as Dorsett and quarterback Danny White.

Berthelsen said that since their contracts had expired, players receiving "threats" can "go directly to federal or state court to pursue free agency."

Union Solidarity Crumbling

By The Associated Press

All but seven NFL teams have cracks in their union solidarity as 37 more players defied the strike, bringing to 129 the number who have crossed the picket line.

The San Francisco 49ers, who beat the New York Giants 41-21 on Monday night with no regular players on the field, became even stronger Wednesday as quarterback Joe Montana, wide receiver Dwight Clark, running back Roger Craig and nine other 49ers rejoined the team.

Players who decided against staying out of uniform for the third straight weekend had to report by 1 p.m. in order to be eligible — and paid — for this week's games. The players union has 1,585 members, and of the 129 who have reported, 25 are on injured reserve.

The seven completely non-union teams are Kansas City, Philadelphia, the New York Giants, Seattle, San Diego, Tampa Bay and Washington. On four other teams — Chicago, Detroit, Minnesota and Green Bay — the only players who have reported are on injured reserve.

Thus, four of Sunday's games will match all non-union players, with San Diego at Tampa Bay, Washington at the Giants, Minnesota at Chicago and Detroit at Green Bay.

The Super Bowl champion Giants had three near-defections, when linebacker Lawrence Taylor, the NFL's most valuable player last season; Pro Bowl defensive end Leonard Marshall and third-string quarterback Jeff Hostetler reported Wednesday.

But they left after meeting with team officials. General Manager George Young denied the players were asked to leave.

"Our policy is that each man has to answer with his own conscience," Young said. "Each man has to make the decision on his own."

The St. Louis Cardinals lead the league in defections, with 18, including four players who returned Wednesday — offensive tackle Tootie Robbins, punter Greg Carter, linebacker Charlie Baker and guard Mike Morris.

Offensive tackle Luis Sharpe, the Cardinals' assistant player representative, said strong union teams hold a low opinion of his team, who despite having 11 regulars on the roster last Sunday, lost 28-21 to the Washington Redskins.

"It's a shame that the Cardinals are being ridiculed, not only for having so many coming in to play, but also for losing that game," Sharpe said.

"The majority of the guys don't want to be a part of the players who are being talked about around the league. Those guys in there might not realize it, but people around the league are looking down on them."

Other teams in double figures among defectors were the Los Angeles Raiders and San Francisco with 13 each, New Orleans with 12, Denver with 11 and the Los Angeles Rams with 10.

The defections on the 49ers began Tuesday night with the return of veteran tight end Russ Francis. It accelerated Wednesday with the reporting of Montana, Clark and Craig, running backs Joe Cribbs and Harry Sydney, cornerback Eric Wright, defensive end Dwaine Board, linebackers George Cooper, Kevin Dean and Jeff Fuller, tight end Ron Heller and defensive lineman Pete Kugler.

Keith Fahnhorst, the 49ers' player representative, said the defections would cause team divisiveness.

But Coach Bill Walsh said he would not intervene with the players coming back as he did last week.

"I wouldn't want to try it again," Walsh said. "We don't have any other choice. If they want to come back, our doors have to be open."

The other players returning Wednesday were: placekicker Tony Franklin and running back Elgin Davis of New England; cornerback Lester Hayes of the Raiders; quarterback Blair Kiel, nose tackle Scott Keller and tight end John Brandes of Indianapolis; center Joe Fields of the New York Jets; defensive end Carl Hairston of Cleveland; running back Frank Pollard of Pittsburgh; defensive end Eddie Edwards of Cincinnati; defensive tackle Kevin Brooks, running back Robert Lavette and wide receiver Carl Powe of Dallas; running back Karl Byrum and defensive back Durwood Roquemore of Buffalo; linebacker Bobby Leopold of Green Bay; tight end Mike Mularkey and defensive end Mark Mullaney of Minnesota, and safety Liffort Hobley of Miami.

While Franklin and Davis rejoined the Patriots, two New England strikers — running back Mose Tatupu and quarterback Tom Ramsey — charged that General Manager Patrick Sullivan exaggerated the number of their teammates he expected back at work this week.

"He's trying anything he can to get the guys in," Tatupu said. "That's his job."

Eight Patriots have returned to the team.

The return of Hairston, 34, the oldest Cleveland player, Mobley to Miami and Byrum and Roquemore to Buffalo made them the first players to cross their teams' picket lines.

Allen contended that the two sides had covered 13 of the 38 articles in the proposed collective bargaining agreement.

Bobby Allison Captures Pole For Oakwood 500

CONCORD (AP) — Bobby Allison had seen five long years go by since the last time he started from the pole position on NASCAR's Winston Cup circuit.

The Buick-driving Alabama native ended his drought in style Wednesday, roaring to a track record 171.636 mph to qualify first for Sunday's Oakwood Homes 500 stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"This is the first pole I've won since 1982 and it feels good," he said. "Today the good Lord gave us a good ride."

There were some tense moments for Allison after Rodney Combs blew an engine and spilled oil on the track just before his qualifying run.

"We had a very good draw and considering that and the fine job that our team has done, I felt confident earlier in the day that we had a good chance of winning the pole," Allison said. "I was a little jittery, though, going into that first turn where that engine had blown."

He praised NASCAR officials who worked for about 20 minutes to get the speedway back in shape.

"That blown engine could have really put us in a tight, but the NASCAR officials did everything possible to put the track in shape for us," he said.

Allison, 49, set a single-lap record of 171.860 mph on the first of his two laps. That broke the old record of 171.712 mph set by Bill Elliott before May's Coca-Cola 600.

Allison's two-lap average of 171.636 mph also set a speedway record. The old mark of 161.926 mph was set by David Pearson nine years ago. Since then, qualifying speeds have been based on a four-lap average.

168.708 mph, followed by Jimmy Means at 168.274 mph.

As Allison spoke with reporters, his son, Davey, came by and shook his hand. The younger Allison had been one of the favorites to win the pole.

"I felt we had a shot at it," Bobby Allison said. "We were kind of looked upon as a darkhorse, but I didn't think so."

Gaetti's Homers...

Bergman and Chet Lemon followed with consecutive sacrifice flies.

"I was (mad) for not getting strikeouts," said Reardon, who pitched a scoreless ninth for the victory. "You can't be perfect all the time. After we got the tying run, I forgot all about it."

"That was the most pumped I've been," Reardon said of the ninth inning. "I was hoping to get them 1-2-3, but the Tigers are never going to die."

John Grubb led off with a pinch single but Reardon struck out the pinch-hitting Nokes before walking Lou Whitaker. Reardon then struck out Bill Madlock and Gibson to end the game.

"I was definitely going to tie it up," Gibson said. "I didn't swing at the best pitches. But give him credit. He made pitches that I couldn't hit."

While Reardon excelled, the Detroit bullpen continued to flounder. Hernandez, who won the Cy Young and Most Valuable Player awards after leading Detroit to the 1984 World Series championship, has struggled all season.

"Right now, it's frustrating," Hernandez said. "I know the guys are disappointed. So am I."

The victory prevented Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson from tying Earl Weaver's record of 10 consecutive playoff victories. Anderson's string, which started with Cincinnati in 1975 and 1976, stopped at nine.

"I don't ever like to lose," Anderson said. "... Now, we've got to win four of the next six."

Baylor, who extended his own league record by hitting in his 11th straight playoff game, said the pressure has shifted to the Tigers.

"Now the Tigers have to think about a split," he said, noting that the Twins had the best home record in the majors this season. "Now the pressure's on them."

Gaetti, despite becoming the first Twins player since Harmon Killebrew to fashion consecutive 30-homer, 100-RBI seasons, he has received little national attention to date.

That may change, but Gaetti isn't concerned.

"The people that I need to impress are my family, the people signing my checks and my manager," he said. "Whatever else happens is gravy."

Rose, GCA Play To Tie In Soccer

Greenville Christian Academy and Rose High School's junior varsity played to a scoreless tie in a soccer match Wednesday.

Rose took 11 shots on goal in the match while Greenville Christian had nine. Rose goalie Sean Murphy recorded nine saves, while Brad Dixon of GCA had 11.

Rose coach Will Wiberg cited Brad Myers, Thomas Leahy, Greg Jones and Scott Thomas for their play.

The two teams will meet again on Oct. 17.

Meanwhile, a protest meeting will be held on Wednesday at 10 a.m. to settle a dispute that arose when Rose was ordered to forfeit its match with Rocky Mount earlier this year. The two were involved in a scoreless tie when, late in the game, the officials forfeited the game to Rocky Mount. Rose issued a formal protest of the forfeit.

Bethel Takes Two In Volleyball

KINSTON — Bethel Middle School captured a pair of volleyball matches in a tri-meet at Woodington Junior High Wednesday.

Bethel downed Chicod, 15-7, 15-13, then took Woodington, 15-7, 15-3.

Angela House led Bethel's service on the day with 24 points.

Bethel, now 4-0, plays host to Frink and Snow Hill on Monday.

In the Chicod-Woodington match, Chicod won 15-6, 15-4. Stephanie Mills led Chicod with eight points.

Chicod is now 3-1, and returns to action on Monday at Savannah.

Petty Escapes Injury In Crash

CONCORD (AP) — Seven-time NASCAR champion Richard Petty crashed his Pontiac Wednesday at Charlotte Motor Speedway as he practiced for pole qualifying for Sunday's Oakwood Homes 500.

Petty's car was heavily damaged but he was not injured. He refused an ambulance ride to the infield medical facility after crashing at turn No. 2.

"We had just put on a new set of tires and the car was pushing real bad," Petty said in the garage area. "When I got up there in the loose stuff, it just took off on me."

Petty blamed himself for the wreck.

"It was a driver's mental error," he said. "I just got behind on my steering a little, that's all. When I got up there and turned it, it got loose."

Kyle Petty, Richard's son, was on the track at the time of the crash. Kyle slowed his car to check out his father before continuing into the pits. The elder Petty's Pontiac was towed to the garage area where crew members swarmed over the damage.

"This one's too bad to fix," Petty said. "We'll go and get another car. We won't get nothing done today."

Crewman George Caldwell said Petty would not be able to qualify Wednesday.

"This one's damaged too bad," he said.

Connors Takes Easy Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Jimmy Connors, shrugging off the taunts of some fans who apparently felt age 35 was too old for a tennis player, won an easy victory over Paul Annacone in the $500,000 AT&T Challenge tournament.

Connors disposed of Annacone 6-1, 6-4 Wednesday night.

In other matches on the second day of the round-robin exhibition tournament, Ivan Lendl outlasted John McEnroe 5-7, 6-4, 7-6; Sweden's Stefan Edberg downed countryman Ulf Stenlund 4-6, 7-5, 6-1, and Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia defeated Mikael Pernfors of Sweden 7-6, 6-4.

Tonight, Connors takes on Edberg and Lendl plays Pernfors.

Although Connors had no trouble with Annacone, some in the crowd called him and "old man."

At one point, Connors replied, "I bet you I'll still be standing when this is all over."

Later, he acknowledged to reporters, "I've played a lot of tennis this year and I'm ready for a rest."

He said he plans to take some time off in a few weeks.

Of his performance Wednesday, Connors said: "I played OK, but I don't think he played very well at all."

After splitting the first two sets, McEnroe and Lendl battled evenly through the final set until Lendl dominated the tiebreaker, which he won 7-2, to take the two-hour, 45-minute match.

McEnroe criticized the officiating, and during the third set threw his racket down so hard it bounced into the stands. A spectator tossed it back.

"I thought I played well, but words can't express the way I feel about the officiating," McEnroe said. "The words I would say couldn't be used on TV."

McEnroe is currently on suspension from official tournaments, but is allowed to participate in exhibitions such as the AT&T.

Stenlund won the last two games to take the first set against Edberg, who took the last two games in the second set to knot the match. In the decisive third set, Edberg jumped to a 3-0 lead and coasted.

"Overall I've had a good year to move up to No. 2," Edberg said. "I've won five tournaments, but I still feel I can improve."

Mecir, who won the first-set tiebreaker 7-3, said he had some trouble getting his game untracked.

"I had problems with control in the first set. In the second set I played a little better," he said. "I began hitting more shots than I'm supposed to hit. He (Pernfors) runs quite well and has control of the ball. When you hit a lot of topspin balls, you don't have to hit it deep."

Raleigh Okays Pro Stadium

RALEIGH (AP) — Raleigh voters narrowly approved a bond referendum which will provide money for a baseball stadium, but a supporter of the measure says it might as well have been a landslide.

The stadium issue was one of five bond referendums which Raleigh voters cast ballots on in Tuesday's elections. It was also the closest, winning approval by a margin of 8,993 to 8,543.

The vote provides $3.5 million in bonds for construction of a baseball stadium on North Carolina State University property near Carter-Finley Stadium.

Cavs Seek To End Streak

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Eighth-ranked Clemson returns to Atlantic Coast Conference football action this weekend, facing a Virginia team trying to maintain momentum but which hasn't beaten the Tigers in their 26 previous contests.

The Clemson spell over the Cavaliers marks the longest active winning streak by one NCAA Division I-A team over another, but, as usual, Coach Danny Ford isn't talking streaks. He certainly isn't talking victory.

"Our people don't know about 26, 27 years ago," Ford said. "We don't have any players over 26. None of them was even born."

Clemson is one of eight teams in the nation without a loss with a 4-0 mark after beating Georgia Tech in the league opener two weeks ago. Having been off last weekend leaves Ford anxious to find out what his Tigers will do.

"The question is: Does it bother us? I don't know," he said. "We got to do some repair work and get some people healthy, and our young people were glad to have a weekend off."

The time off didn't do anything to calm Ford's worries about the offense, which for him is a constant source of concern.

"We're just not there yet," he said. "We need to get there in a hurry. I'd hope we'll show improvement this week, but I'm afraid Virginia will have something to say about that."

Virginia is 3-2 overall and 1-1 in the ACC, but Coach George Welsh was less than pleased with his team's performance in its 30-0 victory over VMI last Saturday. That was the team's third straight victory after consecutive losses to Georgia and Maryland.

Also hampering the Cavaliers will be an injury to wide receiver John Ford, the team's deep pass threat.

"Naturally, it would be better for us to be at full strength," Welsh said. "But I don't think it's too unusual to have three or four guys hurting now. Realistically, I don't know if you're ever at full strength any more in the middle of the season."

Elsewhere, unbeaten Wake Forest goes to North Carolina in the only other league game. Outside the conference, Georgia Tech hosts Indiana State and Maryland is at No. 3 Miami, Fla. Duke and North Carolina State have Saturday off.

The Tar Heel-Demon Deacon game matches Dick Crum, North Carolina's coach for the last 10 seasons, against his predecessor, Bill Dooley. Crum has made little mention of it, and Dooley has downplayed the significance of returning to Kenan Stadium.

"I wish I could tell you it felt funny, that it will seem strange to look across the field Saturday, all that," Dooley said. "But I really haven't thought about it."

Dooley has been concentrating on the Wake Forest defense, which has allowed just one touchdown, and that came in last weekend's 17-13 come-from-behind victory over Army which raised Wake Forest to 4-0. On the other hand, the Tar Heels are trying to regroup from a 20-10 loss to fifth-ranked Auburn in which Crum's team squandered several scoring opportunities and Mark Maye threw four interceptions.

"Maybe we ought to get more conservative in our style of play," Crum says. "Don't throw the ball, don't open up the offense. If we don't score (a touchdown), at least we can get a field goal."

The Yellow Jackets have struggled since opening day, falling to three ACC opponents and suffering a 17-0 shutout from N.C. State last Saturday. The Sycamores will provide a challenge to the Georgia Tech defense, Coach Bobby Ross says.

"They throw the ball quite a bit and they throw it well," Ross said. "They move the ball extremely well in the middle of the field but they appear to have had a tough time getting the ball across the goal line."

Maryland returns to action after taking last weekend off, but it's not the type of action Terps Coach Joe Krivak is looking forward to.

"This is the kind of team that can embarrass you," he said. "You have to play hard for 60 minutes, because if you relax for one moment, you can get hurt and hurt bad."

Trick Play Is Recalled From Earlier Meeting

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — If either Dick Crum or Bill Dooley pull a trick play out of their offensive notebooks in Saturday's football matchup between North Carolina and Wake Forest, it will be a fitting reminder of the last time they faced each other.

The play occurred in 1976 when Dooley was head coach at North Carolina and Crum was a visitor to Chapel Hill as head coach at Miami of Ohio.

It was the old "shoestring play" or what was then called the "swinging gate." While it netted the Tar Heels a touchdown, it had Crum seeing more than just the red on his team's jerseys and helmets, especially since it turned out to be a crucial play in North Carolina's 14-10 victory.

"The decision to use the play was based upon the fact that Miami of Ohio used a closed huddle on defense," Dooley said during a telephone conference call this week. "They had their backs and their heads down to our offensive huddle and that was the reason we used it."

On the play, wingback Mel Collins leaned down near the right sideline as if he was fixing a shoelace or preparing to go back to the North Carolina bench. The remainder of the Tar Heel offense went back to midfield, as if to huddle. In a second, quarterback Bernie Menapace tossed the ball to Collins, who sprinted 69 yards untouched for the touchdown.

The play calls for deception on the quarterback's part.

"You have to get the ball over near the sideline. When you're tackled, we tell the quarterback to be slow about getting up because the official has to throw the ball back in to the hash mark," Dooley said. "The other people are huddled on the line of scrimmage in the middle of the field."

On the previous play, Menapace had run a sweep to the right, and got up slowly, faking an injury.

Dooley recalls the Redskin team as being very disciplined — to the point of putting its heads down in the closed huddle and turning their backs entirely to the Tar Heels.

"Our quarterback got up after the official marked the ball ready for play and just scooped the ball up and threw it out to Mel Collins and he went down the field for a touchdown," Dooley said.

"Fifteen or 20 yards was the closest anybody got to me," Collins said that September afternoon. "All I had to do was run."

Dooley used the play in his first game as Tar Heel head coach against North Carolina State. Ironically, it came back to haunt him.

"I brought the play into the league and Duke beat me with my own play," he said.

Meanwhile, Crum, who said he defense went to a closed huddle the next weekend, was not the least bit amused about the play, as he told reporters after the game.

"I didn't see the trick play until the runner was 40 yards beyond me," Crum said then. "No, I have never seen it before."

Good Start Helps Coach Ease Nightmare Memories

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

Burns High School is off to a school-best 5-0 start this season, and head coach Ron Greene says his team's stellar performance on the football field is helping ease the pain of his tragedy-filled year.

Greene, 36, came to the Lawndale school three seasons ago in an attempt to lift a football team with a losing past to new heights. While he has been somewhat successful his first three seasons with two 5-5 marks and a 4-6 slate, the squad took off this season and has won five straight, being ranked among The Associated Press' Top 103-A teams.

But while all the plays seem to be working on the football field, Greene's personal life has fallen apart.

On Friday, March 13, Greene lost all his belongings when a fire, apparently started by smoldering wood in the fireplace, gutted the house he and his wife and three children were renting.

"We lost everything except the clothes we had on and some clothes that were in the dryer," Greene said in a telephone interview last week. "It's something that shouldn't have happened, but it happens every day to someone."

When news of the fire hit the town of 469, citizens banded together to provide money, food and clothes for Greene and his family.

"When the house burned, we had minimal insurance," Greene said. "People we didn't even know sent us things. It was an overwhelming experience. It make us appreciate our home and friends we have around here even more."

Greene said "he couldn't have been happier" when the family moved into a new home this summer.

But two weeks before football practice was to start, tragedy struck again. Greene's 10-year-old son, Jason, drowned in a swimming pool while at a church outing.

"The thing that really bothered me (after the house burned) was he said, 'Well, I got my kids and everything is fine,'" said Burns principal Dennis White. "He's not worried about Jason because he knows where Jason is. He doesn't live for the negative. He's after the positive strokes."

Greene said he'll never forget the night of July 18, when he tried to save his only son.

"It was so strange," Greene said. "We were all keeping an eye on the children. All the sudden I went to get the children and I noticed my older daughter (12-year-old Christie) with Jason and she said, 'Ah, he's just playing.' We all jumped in to try to save him ..."

White said it's a tribute to Greene's hard work and dedication that enables the coach to teach five classes a day and then face a group of young men he "treats like sons" on the football field.

"He's still fighting back, still 100 percent right here," White said.

Gonzalez Must Defend Title On A Dry Course

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Ernie Gonzalez came out of obscurity a year ago to win the rain-dampened Pensacola Open, but now he must defend his title on a dry track.

The 1986 Pensacola title was the first victory on the PGA Tour for the 26-year-old golfer from Chula Vista, Calif., and the first for a lefty since Bob Charles won the Greater Greensboro Open in 1974.

Gonzalez, who today begins defense of his title in pursuit of the winner's share of a $300,000 purse, hasn't won since then, but he's still reaping the benefits. His Pensacola victory enabled him to play in major events open only to previous tournament winners.

Gonzalez shot a 14-under-par 128 on the first two rounds a year ago. After rains washed out the final 36 holes, he was awarded a $40,500 winner's check, the biggest payday of his career. He beat Joey Sindelar by a stroke.

"The waiting is tougher than the playing," Gonzalez said at the time.

Last year, he had to wait out rains that halted efforts to resume the tournament on Sunday and Monday after a delayed second round was completed Saturday.

The 1986 tournament was the first

36-hole PGA event in 17 years, since the 1969 Anheuser-Busch Classic then played in Napa, Calif.

After playing in a pro-am event Wednesday, Gonzalez said the 7,154-yard, par-71 course at the Perdido Bay Resort, lengthened by 64 yards this year, is playing tougher than in 1986.

The course at the western edge of the Florida Panhandle also is dry and is expected to stay that way throughout the tournament.

"I don't foresee any rain unless something out of the ordinary happens," said Buddy Reiser of the National Weather Service.

China Expels Western Reporters From Tibet

By DAN BIER
Associated Press Writer
CHENGDU, China (AP) — More than a dozen Western journalists covering independence unrest in Tibet were ordered today to leave the province within 48 hours because officials say they violated reporting regulations.

The Chinese news agency Xinhua said 15 journalists from the United States, Britain, Italy, Canada and Australia are being expelled from Tibet because they did not apply for permission to cover news in the region.

Wall Street Journal correspondent Adi Ignatius, who arrived today in Chengdu, in Sichuan province, from the Tibetan capital of Lhasa said 14 foreign journalists were summoned to a Lhasa hotel room shortly after midnight Wednesday and told they were to be expelled. Two U.S. diplomats were also at the meeting.

The expulsion order followed a day in which heavily armed police riding trucks patrolled Lhasa to stifle further pro-independence demonstrations. A bloody street riot Oct. 1 left an estimated 14 dead.

Ignatius said the expulsion order was delivered by Yu Wuzhen, director of Tibet's foreign affairs office, to journalists from the United States, Britain, Italy, Australia, West Germany and France.

Yu said the journalists, who arrived in Lhasa after the riots, violated Article 16 of regulations on foreign news coverage in China issued last year.

The article stipulates that foreign reporters wishing to cover news outside Beijing must apply 10 days in advance with the local foreign affairs office. Their requests are subject to approval by local officials.

Ignatius said the reporters argued they had never seen the regulations and asked why Yu and others in his office had met some of them earlier for interviews if their presence there was illegal.

"That's 'neibu' (secret)," Yu replied.

According to a pool report out of Lhasa carried by Ignatius, a heavy show of police force kept the city quiet on Wednesday, the 37th anniversary of the Chinese Red Army's advance into Tibet.

Tibet sources had said previously that the anniversary could trigger further demonstrations.

The pro-independence demonstrations began on Sept. 27 with a protest march by Buddhist monks loyal to their exiled spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama. On Oct. 1, China's National Day, an estimated 14 people were killed when some 2,000 Tibetans clashed with Chinese police.

It was the worst violence since a failed uprising against Chinese rule in 1959, when the Dalai Lama fled the country.

The report said a 20-truck convoy, including 13 vehicles packed with more than 300 heavily armed police, was seen driving through the city Wednesday.

Many shops and markets were closed and all of Lhasa's monasteries were sealed off by blockades of police brandishing automatic weapons and pistols. Foreigners were forbidden from entering the monasteries.

The report also said that on Tuesday, dozens of monks staging a peaceful demonstration were beaten with clubs, rifle butts and belts. There were reports from several monasteries of police sweeps and more arrests of Buddhist monks, who have been the leaders of the independence activities.

It was reported earlier that 60 people were arrested in Tuesday's march.

There had been a virtual blackout on communications out of Lhasa since Tuesday, raising speculation that Chinese authorities were upset about foreign reports on pro-independence demonstrations.

An Associated Press reporter who reached a Lhasa hotel by telephone today from Chengdu was told that foreigners in Lhasa were not permitted to receive outside calls. A U.S. Consulate official received the same response Wednesday evening when he called Lhasa.

Lhasa for the time being.

The People's Daily, official voice of China's Communist Party, said today in a Wednesday-dated story from Lhasa that "life here has returned to normal."

China claims that Tibetan living standards have greatly improved under its rule. It says the recent troubles were instigated by dissenters supporting the Dalai Lama.

The Dalai Lama, at a news conference Wednesday at his exile home in Dharmasala, India, expressed his support for peaceful pro-independence protests in Tibet and said unrest was inevitable because of China's "colonial rule."

Xinhua said today that China has received assurances from India that the Dalai Lama would not be allowed to carry out political activities in that country.

The Panchen Lama, the highest Tibetan leader in China, opposed the protests, said Fan Peilian, a spokesman for China's State Nationalities Commission. The Panchen Lama lives in Beijing.

Protesters Detained

MOSCOW (AP) — Human rights demonstrators who held a protest march on a holiday honoring the Soviet Constitution were detained by police for several hours, dissidents said.

Eighteen members of the Democracy and Humanism group marched Wednesday to demand the release of political prisoners, said group member Alexander Rubchenko. They unfurled signs on a downtown Moscow street proclaiming, "There's no place for ideology in the constitution," he said.

Fifty to 60 police used force to break up the protest and detain the protesters, but no one was seriously hurt, Rubchenko said.

Seven other people were detained on their way to the demonstration, Rubchenko said. All were released after several hours.

Nikolai Khranov, another member of the group, said police issued warnings to several protesters, including Dmitri Eisner. He was detained last week when police seized 70 copies of the unofficial human rights journal Glasnost from him.

Glasnost refers to new Soviet policies to allow more openness in society.

The newspaper Vechernyaya Moskva said Tuesday that on Sept. 17 a regional Communist Party committee turned down a request from the Democracy and Humanism group to hold a demonstration.

It said the group presented its goal as "supporting and widening perestroika," Mikhail S. Gorbachev's effort to restructure Soviet society. But the paper accused them of seeking to slander the constitution.

Chile Sees Protesters Increase

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Soldiers battled rock-throwing demonstrators in the biggest day of protests against the military government in a year. A 2-year-old was killed, 10 people were wounded and nearly 400 were detained, authorities said.

The clashes occurred on the day of a national strike for higher wages, which drew little support from workers. Street demonstrations have frequently accompanied strikes aimed at the 14-year-old military regime.

Soldiers were dispatched Wednesday to support police in several areas. The troops fired automatic weapons into the air and used tear gas and water cannon to break up protests. Three people, including a toddler, suffered bullet wounds, and several people were injured by buckshot.

It was the biggest day of street protest against the right-wing military government of President Augusto Pinochet since a two-day strike in July 1986, during which eight people were killed in street violence.

Shortly before midnight Wednesday, radio reports and residents of the Penololen neighborhood in southeast Santiago said a 2-year-old boy, Felipe Gutierrez, was killed by a stray bullet while he was sleeping in a municipal shelter. An anti-government demonstration was going on nearby at the time, the reports said.

Authorities did not immediately confirm the death.

Police, press reports and human rights organizations said at least 10 demonstrators were wounded, including three police officers, in the daylong protests.

The police reported late Wednesday that 287 people had been arrested in Santiago. The nationwide figure of arrests neared 400.

The one-day strike was called by the National Workers Command, the main trade union federation, to press the Pinochet government for a 30-percent wage increase and a minimum monthly wage of $85. The minimum wage now is about $50.

While most businesses appeared to be operating normally Wednesday morning, many shops closed and city bus drivers stopped working after skirmishes broke out. At dusk, Santiago's normally busy downtown area was nearly empty.

There was also unrest in some provincial cities. In Valparaiso, 75 miles northwest of Santiago, police said 70 demonstrators were detained. A bomb damaged a railroad line near the city, but no one was injured, police said.

While union activists were involved in the demonstrations, the protesters appeared to be mostly students and other youths.

Sandinistas Begin Withdrawal As Limited Cease-Fire Starts

YOLAINA, Nicaragua (AP) — Soldiers withdrew from several combat areas and freed at least eight jailed rebel sympathizers to mark the beginning of the leftist government's limited cease-fire with the U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

The Contras have condemned the partial truce, which was declared in connection with a regional peace plan signed Aug. 7 by Nicaragua and four other Central American countries.

"We are showing our good faith," Lt. Col. Roberto Calderon, commander of the 5th Military Region, said in Yolaina after the cease-fire became effective Wednesday.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega has said the cease-fire is aimed at ending bloodshed and allowing peace commissions to begin working in the combat zones. Ortega was in New York today to address the United Nations General Assembly.

President Reagan said in Washington Wednesday that he was asking Congress to approve $270 million in military and non-lethal aid to the rebels. In a speech to the Organization of American States, he said the aid was an insurance policy for peace in Nicaragua.

Calderon said soldiers were pulled back to defensive positions in an area of 250 square miles in the mountains of Nueva Guinea in central Nicaragua. A few militia and regular army units remained in some hamlets, he said.

There are an estimated 27,000 people in the Nueva Guinea cease-fire area, including about 150 rebels, he said.

The other truce areas are near the border with Honduras, where the Contras have bases. Altogether, the cease-fire covers about 900 square miles.

Military leaders in Yolaina, about 200 miles southwest of Managua, told reporters they expected Contra activity during the cease-fire, but also hoped some rebels would give up fighting and return to civilian life.

"We will initiate no offensive actions and we will not go on patrol," Calderon said. "We will receive and talk to any group coming to us. They (Contras) are free to come and visit relatives if they want. They can talk to us or the peace commissions and return to the mountains if they do not agree to the amnesty plan."

State Looks For Owners Of Unclaimed Money

RALEIGH — State Treasurer Harlen E. Boyles' office has begun its annual hunt to find owners of money left in unclaimed or abandoned savings accounts, utility deposits, uncashed checks, etc., during the last year.

Boyles has such accounts totaling $7,058,244, including 415 accounts totaling $65,019 with apparent area connections.

As the money comes in and during the search for its owners, the money is invested and the earnings are remitted each year to the State Education Assistance Authority. That agency uses the money to make loans to North Carolina students in state-supported schools of higher education.

"This year, we remitted $3,572,623 to the SEAA, which should result in making low interest loans available for over 1,600 of our North Carolina students," said Boyles.

Those who learn that there is unclaimed property being held in their name by the Treasurer's Office are asked by Boyles to write to the N.C. Department of State Treasurer, Escheat and Unclaimed Property Office, 325 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611 or call 733-6876. No time limit applies to inquiries or claims, and refunds will be made promptly whenever valid ownership is established.

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Two British runners have set out on a 180-mile trip from a base camp at Mount Everest to Katmandu, according to a radio report from northeastern Nepal.
Alison Wright, 22, of Durham, and Helene Diamantides, 22, of Coventry, left Wednesday morning from the base camp, at 17,500 feet altitude. They hope to finish by Saturday and break the course record of four days and 13 hours set last year by five Nepalese Sherpas.

HARD HAT — Tomy Dykhoff plays the brick saw as Jere Lantz conducts the Minneapolis Pops Orchestra Wednesday night in St. Louis Park, Minn. Construction sounds blend with those of the oboes, clairnets and trombones in music composed by Stephen Paulus as a salute to the construction industry. (AP Laserphoto)

Orchestra Makes Music Using Construction Noise

ST. LOUIS PARK, Minn. (AP) — Bang the nail slowly and saw the brick lowly, then mix mortar musically and trowel it melodically, the composer of "Groundbreaker Overture" might say.

Cries of "Bravo" greeted Stephen Paulus' seven-minute composition for orchestra and construction tools Wednesday night at groundbreaking for an $80 million complex of shops, restaurants and offices in this Minneapolis suburb.

"It's really upbeat, energetic, rhythmic. It's meant to be celebratory in nature," said Paulus, 38, who recently finished a four-year stint as composer-in-residence with the Minnesota Orchestra.

The overture featured the sounds of a nail gun, a brick saw and a mortar mixer that blended with the strains of violins and cellos, punctuated by grinding and sawing, ending with a single shot from the nail gun.

"I was looking for some things that at certain points would contribute some drive, like the brick saw, when it's actually cutting a brick, has a real searing effect, and things like the zip gun provide the real rat-a-tat, sort of a sharp staccato," Paulus said.

The 45-piece Minneapolis Pops Orchestra, conducted by Jere Lantz, was backed up by four construction workers in hard hats and tuxedos who played the tools.

In addition, percussionist David John Olsen performed on a "weldophone," which he and Paulus invented and consists of 17 welding caps of different diameters struck by a bolt.

The sound, Paulus said, is a cross between a xylophone and a glockenspiel.

The audience of about 300 was impressed. "I thought it was delightful to see a marriage of the arts and the trades," said Linda Hoeschler of St. Paul.

"It's definitely an extravaganza," said Dale Valaske, one of the performing workers. "I've been to many groundbreaking ceremonies and this definitely supersedes anything I've ever seen or experienced."

Paulus' musical score includes such directions as "turn on and let run" for the mortar mixer and "start rotation slowly, increase to full speed" for a trowler, which spreads cement.

"The grinder actually has a pitch that's variable. It sort of whines down and back up again," he said.

Although previous avant-garde compositions have featured airplane propellers or linotype machines, Paulus said he believes his is one of the first to incorporate construction tools.

"Admittedly, people can think of this as a tongue-in-cheek (piece) but basically it's a serious, fun piece of music," he said.

Paulus recommends that his piece be performed in the open, as in its debut, rather than in a concert hall. Although the tools are not amplified, he said, "I think it would be just too loud."

'SNL' Eyes Moscow

NEW YORK (AP) — Announcer Don Pardo may someday be saying, "Live from Moscow — It's Saturday Night!" And that's no joke.

Executive producer Lorne Michaels said Wednesday that if negotiations succeed, the irreverent NBC comedy show will originate from Moscow sometime after the first of the year.

The show begins its 13th season Oct. 17 with the same cast as last year — the first time that's happened in nine years.

Michaels said negotiations through diplomatic channels are under way to take the show to the Soviet Union. He said the idea is not so unthinkable, since "Saturday Night Live" is well-known in Europe as "the" U.S. satirical television show.

The only time "Saturday Night Live" has gone out of the studio was a 1978 trip to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras.

Michaels said the only guest host he has always wanted to have on the show but hasn't been able to get is former President Richard Nixon, "because I think there's a side to him that hasn't been shown before."

Words For Rich

Millionaire T. Boone Pickens has plenty of company. Experts estimate that there are now about 1,000,000 millionaire families in the United States. According to some sources, the richest person in the nation is Gordon Peter Getty. Forbes Magazine, however, lists Sam Moore Walton as the nation's richest billionaire. Walton runs a chain of discount stores. The term "millionaire" was coined in the year 1740. The first "billionaire" appeared in 1861.

DO YOU KNOW — Jean Paul Getty's empire is based primarily on what product?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Tofu is a cheese-like product made from pressed soybean curds.

 Distribution can wreak havoc on seemingly impregnable contracts.

But just because someone wants to chop off your head is no reason to go quietly to the guillotine.

The auction was uneventful. South's five-heart bid was a request for partner to value his controls and trump support for slam purposes, and North decided that both were adequate.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and all seemed simple when dummy appeared. Since the contract hinged only on holding trump losers to one, declarer won the opening lead and ran the queen of trumps. When that held, he had visions of an overtrick. However, his hopes were dashed when East covered the jack of trumps and West showed out. Suddenly there was a danger of losing two trump tricks.

The only way to prevent that catastrophe was to score a trump trick en passant. To accomplish that, declarer needed three entries to dummy—two to ruff and one for the lead in the end position. There were only two to be seen.

To create the third, declarer had to risk going down an extra trick. He cashed the ace of clubs, then led a low diamond and boldly finessed the ten when West followed low. When that held, he discarded a diamond on the king of clubs and ruffed a club. After crossing back to dummy with the king of spades, declarer ruffed a spade, then held his breath as he cashed the ace of diamonds and overtook the queen with the table's king.

When East followed, all was well. South was down to the 9-7 of trumps while East held 10-8. No matter which black card declarer led from dummy, he would be able to score a trump—if East ruffed with the eight, declarer would overruff; if he ruffed high, declarer's nine would become the fulfilling trick.

Thank You, Greenville and Pitt County

FIRST FEDERAL

The best place to bank.

October 1, 1987

Dear Stockholders:

This year marks the 50th Anniversary of First Federal serving the Greenville and Pitt County communities, and we are proud that it marks the second consecutive year of record earnings for your company. Net income was $1,270,082 or $3.43 per share for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1987.

First Federal's strategy is to be "The Community Bank" for Greenville and Pitt County. As the only financial institution, both home based and with all its offices located in Greenville and Pitt County, First Federal has an opportunity to uniquely serve the local market. Products, services and pricing can be designed for the local market and important decisions are made in Greenville by local people. This strategy should enable First Federal to continue to be the leading real estate lender in Pitt County, and maintain a solid position as a leader in retail deposits and services.

During the past year, changes in the market produced opportunities for your company. In October, First Federal introduced an Equityline of Credit program, and by June 30, 1987 over $6.2 million in outstanding equity lines had been made available to our customers. Additionally, First Federal purchased the corner lot at the intersection of Highway 11 and Third Street in Ayden, and plans are now being developed to build a new branch office on that site during the coming year.

Recently, there has been significant publicity concerning the condition of the FSLIC and the soundness of the savings and loan industry across the country. Legislation recently signed by the President has reaffirmed that your deposits are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States.

The past year has been an excellent one for First Federal and for the thrift industry in North Carolina in general. Your management and board of directors believe strongly that First Federal is a sound, profitable and well-positioned financial institution. The 20% increase in your annual dividend, to $.30 per share, paid on September 15, 1987 confirms this belief. Our emphasis on the local market, and our people, provide the strength and keys for success in the future.

Your directors, management and staff appreciate your support. Please continue to take advantage of all the services your company offers, and recommend First Federal to others. We welcome your questions and suggestions.

Sincerely,

Burney S. Warren, III
President
