Storm Gains Hurricane Status As It Nears Florida

By HAYLEY GORENBERG
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Floyd's leading edge lashed South Florida with powerful thunderstorms today, prompting some tourists and residents to flee inland while others stocked up on staples and prepared to wait out the storm. Torrential rains flooded some roads in South Florida and hampered the morning rush hour. There were long lines as gas stations and on highways as people fled inland, and grocery store shelves were stripped bare of batteries, bread and other supplies as residents braced for the storm. Schools were closed today in many areas. Floyd went from a tropical storm to a minimal hurricane as its winds reached 75 mph, just beyond the 74 mph threshold, by 8 a.m. Earlier, it skirted the western edge of Cuba with 60-mph winds and torrential rains, forcing 100,000 Cubans to flee their homes in the western province of Pinar del Rio, Cuba's Radio Reloj reported. Civil defense officials also moved more than 40,000 head of cattle, the station said.

No storm-related injuries were reported by the station which said suspended international flights would be resumed tonight and flights to Mexico would resume Tuesday. All schools were to be open today, Radio Reloj said. Forecasters predicted the storm had a 58 percent chance of coming within 65 miles of Key West and similar odds for hitting the resort of Marco Island, near Naples. Floyd's center at 8 a.m. was located near latitude 24.4 north and longitude 82.9 west, or about 75 miles southwest of Key West. Winds to 40 mph extended about 125 miles north of the storm's center, and gusts of tropical storm strength were pummeling Key West this morning. Floyd was moving northeast at 15 mph and was expected to turn farther to the northeast later in the day, forecasters said. Tides 3 to 5 feet above normal were predicted near the point of landfall. Tornadoes touched down early today at Key Largo and in extreme southern Dade County. No injuries were reported. Forecasters predicted the storm had a 46 percent chance of passing within 65 miles of Fort Myers, a 36 percent chance of passing that close to Venice and a 24 percent chance it's powerful winds would come that close to Tampa. The storm brought southern Florida "spiral bands of thunderstorms," said Stan Right of the National Weather Service. Tornadoes were reported early today at Key Largo and in extreme southern Dade County. No injuries were reported. Water 2-3 feet deep today caused several cars to stall on the Florida Turnpike near Joe Robbie Stadium, the new home of the Miami Dolphins. Tropical storm watches were in effect for Bimini and Grand Bahama Island in the Bahamas and along Florida's east coast to 90 miles north of Miami and on the west coast to Tarpon Springs about 25 miles northeast of Tampa. Hurricane warnings galvanized residents of Florida's Keys, a delicate string of low-lying barrier islands linked to the mainland by a narrow series of bridges on U.S. 1.

FAREWELL TO A LANDMARK — A large empty space will soon be the only reminder of the presence of the rambling Blount Fertilizer structure on West 14th Street. On Saturday, Ray Joyner, with the E.R. Lewis Co. of Bethel, began demolition of the architecturally unorthodox building. The main part was built in a series of angles to conform with the curve of the railroad tracks that ran alongside the site. Joyner said the demolition is "a tough job, the material in the building is absolutely solid. It might look shaky, but it sure isn't." (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

MIT Researcher Awarded Nobel

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Susumu Tonegawa of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology today won the 1987 Nobel Prize in medicine for discovering how the body is able to produce thousands of different antibodies to fight disease.

In its citation, the Nobel Assembly said Tonegawa had shown in a pioneering set of experiments how the body's immune cells reshuffle their genetic material to recognize and attack invading organisms that the body has never seen before.

The assembly said the 48-year-old Tonegawa wrote an influential scientific paper in 1976 on "the genetic principal for generation of antibody diversity," and had dominated research in the field for the next two years.

Tonegawa said today a Japanese reporter informed him by telephone that he had been chosen for the Nobel prize. "I did not really believe what (the reporter) said," he said. "I haven't heard from Sweden yet... But I'm starting to believe."

Of his work, Tonegawa said: "I

Record Attendance At Pitt County Fair

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The manager of the Pitt County Fair credits the weather and smooth operation for a record 1987 attendance that has prompted planners to look at ways to regionalize the event.

The Pitt County Fair ending Saturday "was the most successful ever in Pitt County, both in terms of tremendous attendance and in the rides and entertainments offered in the midway," said Elvy Forrest, fair manager. Although final figures aren't available, he estimated the fair's attendance up 40-45 percent from 1986.

"One big factor in this year's success was the weather, ideal for fair time all week through," Forrest said. "Another very important consideration is the way the Vivona family worked with us. In their relations with us over the years, they have proved to be most respectful to deal with. They do what they say they'd do in every way." The Vivona family contracted to operate the fair.

The record attendance, Forrest said, "reflects the fact that the Pitt County Fair is definitely becoming a regional event. We had lots of people coming in from surrounding areas, especially from Washington, Martin and Greene Counties. One large group came in from Duplin County. Many of them told me it was well worth the trip, people from towns like Belhaven and Clinton, for example."

"The board (of directors) will also consider looking into ways to really make it a regional fair," Forrest said. "It's becoming that on its own, and

14 Americans Among Dead

Burmese Airliner Crash Kills 49

By SEIN WIN
Associated Press Writer

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Investigators are trying to determine why a Burmese airliner taking tourists to an ancient city caught fire and crashed, killing all 49 people aboard, including 14 Americans.

The twin-turboprop plane "caught fire in midair" Sunday and slammed to earth near a village about 20 miles southeast of Pagan, the official News Agency of Burma said. There were no survivors, it added.

It was the second fatal crash of a Burma Airways Friendship Fokker 27 plane in less than four months and the worst air disaster in this impoverished southeast Asian nation since 1978.

"As soon as news of the plane crash was received, responsible authorities of the airways corporation and members of an investigating team left for the crash site by a special plane," the state radio said Sunday.

An official passenger list said 36 of the victims were foreigners — 14 Americans, seven Swiss, five Britons, four Australians, three West Germans, two French and one Thai. Nine Burmese passengers and four crew members also died.

The victims included the parents of an administrative attache at the Australian Embassy in Rangoon, sources said.

Several of the 14 Americans killed in the crash were part of a tour arranged by a San Francisco travel agent, who also was among the victims, relatives said.

Edith Dalle-Feste of Kentfield, Calif., had been a travel agent for more than 30 years before starting her own agency, Cosmopolitan Travel, about 20 years ago. One of the firm's employees, Julie Ann Butler, 45, of Calistoga, Calif., was among the victims.

The plane was on a two-hour, regularly scheduled flight from the national capital of Rangoon, about 300 miles south of Pagan in central Burma.

Pagan, with a population of about 5,000, occupies 40 square miles of mostly flat terrain on the east bank of Burma's major artery, the Irrawaddy River.

Pagan's kings and governors ruled from 1044 to 1369 and built thousands of Buddhist shrines and temples. The buildings have made Pagan one of Asia's archeological treasures, a holy place for pilgrims and a top tourist attraction.

Gay Activists Hold D.C. Rally

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is unlikely in this session to expand civil rights legislation to include homosexuals, a House member who participated in a march on Washington by thousands of gay activists said today.

Rep. Gary Studds, D-Mass., said he did not foresee such congressional action despite the march and rally Sunday in which 200,000 people demonstrated for protection from discrimination and more money for AIDS research and treatment.

Asked on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" if Congress might revise civil rights legislation to make it apply to gays, Studds said, "I don't anticipate, in all candor, that happening in this Congress."

He said "if one thinks about it, it's really remarkable that in 1987 in the United States, one is still debating whether or not fundamental civil rights ought to be extended to all American citizens."

Studds and Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., both of whom have said they are homosexuals, appeared at the rally.

A leader of the march said she hopes it will help change public opinion about gays, as the march on Washington by blacks in 1963 changed attitudes toward them.

"That's one of the ... reasons that we've marched here, specifically," Pat Norman, co-chairwoman of the march, said on the ABC program.

INNOVATION AWARD — Vernon Kelly, president of the National Association of Development Organizations, presents Sam Carson of Bethel an Innovation Award for the Mid-East Commission's senior citizen supplemental staff program. Carson is chairman of the Mid-East board.

Mid-East Panel Receives Award

The Mid-East Commission has received an Innovation Award from the National Association of Development Organizations for its senior citizen supplemental staff program.

The award — one of 30 given by NADO to substate planning and development organizations in recognition of innovative programs — was presented to Sam Carson of Bethel, chairman of the Mid-East board, at the annual NADO conference in Las Vegas on Oct. 4.

The Mid-East's supplemental staff program uses senior citizens to assist the commission's land use planner in a number of functions relating to community development, including census surveys and windshield surveys.

Through the use of senior citizens, Mid-East saves money and at the same time, provides part-time employment to senior citizens through grants from the National Council on the Aging.

Members of NADO are locally based organizations who conduct business, community, economic and other development activities in small metropolitan and rural areas.

Whichard Elected

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. — David J. Whichard II, president, co-publisher and editor of The Daily Reflector, has been re-elected vice chairman of the board of trustees of the Southern Newspapers Publishers Association.

The election marks Whichard's second three-year term on the board. Creed C. Black, chairman and publisher of the Lexington (Ky.) Herald-Leader, has been elected president of the SNPA.

The association announced the election results during its 84th annual meeting at The Greenbrier resort. Howard Baker Jr., the White House chief of staff, was to address the group today, and the meeting continues through Wednesday.

Black succeeds Cecil Highland Jr., president and general manager of the Clarksburg (W.Va.) Exponent and Telegram. Highland has been elected chairman of the association's board.

In addition, Larry Franklin, executive vice president and chief operating officer of Harte-Hanks Communications, has been elected president-elect and Wayne Patrick, publisher of the Rock Hill (S.C.) Herald, has been elected treasurer of the SNPA, which has 424 member newspapers in 14 states.

John O. Emmerich, president, publisher and editor of the Greenwood (Miss.) Commonwealth, was re-elected chairman of the board of trustees.

Reagan Wants Quick Bork Vote

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today he would like to see the Senate vote this week on Robert H. Bork's seemingly doomed nomination for the Supreme Court.

A quick vote would permit Reagan to move ahead swiftly with a new nominee.

Returning from Camp David, Reagan gave a one-word answer when a reporter asked if he wanted the Senate to vote this week. Without breaking stride as he walked from his helicopter, Reagan said, "Yes."

The timing of the vote will be set by the Senate's Democratic leadership. Meanwhile, a Senate leader said the White House should not assume that a new nominee would have an easy time.

"I don't think anybody should share the illusion ... that the next nominee will sail through like a greased pig no matter what that nominee may be like," Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said Sunday.

Cranston, the Democratic whip, said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley" that a successful nomination would have to be "somebody who doesn't come with an agenda that's pretty much what the extreme right wants in our country."

Surprising lawmakers and, apparently, the White House, Bork said Friday he would continue his fight for the nomination despite his lack of support. Fifty-three senators have publicly opposed his nomination, according to an Associated Press survey.

White House strategists have indicated they hope for quick confirmation of a new, conservative nominee after the Senate votes on Bork. That vote is now expected to be later this month.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del, the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he hoped the Democrats and Republicans would avoid delays in filling the vacancy.

"In the past, there have been suggestions they (Democrats) adopt the Strom Thurmond tactic — which as you remember, as of June of the year before Carter left office, the announcement went out, no more judges," he said in an interview on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"If the Republicans are going to fight this out and the administration wants to continue to beat a dead horse, and we move this thing until after Thanksgiving, I think there's no possibility of a confirmation of a new nominee until well in the next year," he said.

The White House and Bork supporters in the Senate were working over the weekend on ways to gain political points from the floor showdown, even though they consider the nomination itself a lost cause.

"We're going to convince a lot of Americans, though, that the process was not fair" Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said on the ABC program. "They did a political job on Judge Bork."

Dole, R-Kan., said he hoped for a Senate vote this week. "It's important to have the debate to form arguments about the future of the nomination process and not just to focus on the next candidate," said an administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A presidential address on the issue has not been ruled out, and Reagan intends to keep speaking out between now and the Senate vote, he said. The official said the president plans to talk about "the importance of the institution of nominating Supreme Court justices."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who helped lead the fight against Bork in the Judiciary Committee, said in an interview published Sunday that Bork's testimony brought about his downfall.

"Bork displayed a cold, judicial attitude," Kennedy told The Boston Globe. "His background is economics and antitrust, and he applied that kind of thinking to privacy and civil rights."

Iraqi Jets Attack Tanker In Gulf

By NABILA MEGALLI
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqi jet fighters today hit a Panamanian-registered tanker with an Exocet missile, setting the vessel ablaze and killing two crew members, Persian Gulf-based marine salvage executives reported.

The tanker was identified as the 21,166-ton Marianthi M., managed by the Greek shipping company Anastassiou. It was attacked about 60 miles south of the Iranian port of Bushehr, the executives said. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

The nationality of the dead crewmen was not immediately confirmed, but they were believed to be Greek, the executives said.

Iraq said today its warplanes also raided five oil and industrial centers across Iran, and reported that Iran was shelling Basra, Iraq's second-largest city.

The attacks came as U.S. Navy warships were escorting four reflagged Kuwaiti tankers through the gulf, and followed weekend strikes that devastated one Iranian-chartered supertanker and left an unexploded Exocet missile in a second.

The official Iraqi News Agency quoted a military spokesman as saying that at noon warplanes raided a "large naval target off the Iran coast." The term is used by official Iraqi media when referring to attacks on tankers ferrying Iranian oil.

The agency said the targets struck on the Iranian mainland included a power plant and oil refineries in Esfahan, some 250 miles east of the border.

Other Iraqi warplanes, the agency said, blasted a power plant in the northwestern Iranian city of Tabriz, an oil pumping station in Tanki Feni, in southwestern Iran, oil installations in Khoramabad and a communications center in Ilam.

Khoramabad and Ilam are in the western province of Lorestan, near the Iran-Iraq border.

Tehran's Islamic Republic News Agency said Iraqi jets struck at several targets in Lorestan province. It said six workers were killed or wounded in one raid, but did not say how many of the six were dead.

IRNA, which also is monitored in Cyprus, said the Iraqi warplanes bombed a school in Khoramabad, but that all the students and teachers escaped injury because they had fled to bomb shelters.

The Iraqi agency later said the Iranians opened up with long-range artillery on Basra, Iraq's second largest city. It said several civilians were killed, but gave no precise figure.

The U.S. Navy was escorting Kuwaiti vessels flying the American flag through the gulf to the Mina Al-Ahmadi, Kuwait's main oil loading terminal. The convoy, including two gas carriers and two tankers, began its 550-mile journey early Saturday and was reported halfway through the gulf without incident when today's Iraqi raids were announced.

The United States began escorting 11 Kuwaiti tankers through the oil shipping lanes in July to protect them from attack by Iran, which accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Iraqi jets fired two Exocet missiles Sunday at another ship off the coast of Iran. The 239,435-ton Liberian-flagged Roval was set ablaze and severely damaged, gulf-based shipping sources said.

Two crewmen were killed and four others were missing, the sources said. The Roval was managed by World Carriers, a London-based Greek shipping company.

The raid was one of three attacks Iraq said it carried out Saturday and Sunday against tankers along the Iranian coast.

The shipping sources said another target was the Merlin, a 215,925-ton Cypriot-flag tanker chartered by

Family & General Dentistry

TOOTH TIMETABLE

When baby is born, he has a mouthful of 52 teeth buried in his gums. Although they are not full formed, the 20 "baby" teeth are under way, including enamel coating. There is barely enough room for the upcoming 20 baby teeth, and not nearly enough room for the adult set of 32.

The first two teeth to pop out are normally the lower incisors (front teeth) at six months. Within a month, the lateral incisors usually appear on the bottom, alongside the central incisors. The upper front teeth usually come into the mouth at about seven and a half months, followed by the upper lateral incisors (like bookends) at nine months.

The first molar teeth ordinarily erupt before the canines (or eye teeth), leaving a space between the front teeth and the molars. The lower first molars come in at about the age of one year and the upper first molars about two months later. The canines come into the space reserved for them at eighteen months and the second molars make their appearance at about the 24th month. I'll hedge a little and say that between age 2 & 3 baby should have a full set of 20 primary teeth.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Rudy Schulte

BUYERS, BUYERS, EVERYWHERE!

Have you ever wondered where home-buyers come from? The answer is everywhere!

Next time you leave your home to go shopping, take a look at the diversity of homes around you. People like you and I purchased those homes for many different reasons. And those homes come in all shapes, sizes and colors, don't they?

Some homes are owned by families who needed space for children to grow. Some are owned by people who live alone, and enjoy a small home with little upkeep. Others like the "personality" of an unusual style or color home. Then, there are the nostalgic people who want to live in an older home like grandma used to own. Or, have you ever known a growing family who invited mother to come live with them? They needed a larger home with a "mother-in-law" room away from all the activity.

Money is also a factor. Sometimes, a home that would otherwise be unacceptable to a buyer, becomes a dream home as the result of a low price or special terms. Homes have even been purchased because a person had a special need to live close to a cherished relative, regardless of the style, features or age of the house.

One important aspect of being in real estate is understanding the many reasons why people choose the homes they do. Real estate is indeed a people business.

Politician In Middle Of W. German Scandal Dies

By BRENDA WATSON
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA (AP) — The principal figure in a West German political scandal died of a heart attack in his Geneva hotel room the day before he was scheduled to testify before a parliamentary panel, according to preliminary autopsy results.

The body of Uwe Barschel, former governor of Schleswig-Holstein state and a member of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Party, was found fully clothed Sunday in his room at the Beau Rivage hotel, police said.

Bild, the mass-circulation West German newspaper, reported that the 43-year-old Barschel had shot himself. But police official Marcel Carrara told a news conference Sunday that Barschel had not been killed by a bullet and "there was no blood."

A statement from the state government in Schleswig-Holstein said today: "According to preliminary autopsy results, Barschel died of a natural death from a heart attack."

It added there was no evidence of foul play, and no indication that drugs or drinking had played any role in the death.

The statement said Geneva police had given the information to West German officials.

Barschel was to testify today before a parliamentary panel investigating West Germany's most bitter political scandal in recent years. The scandal surrounded allegations by a magazine that Barschel had attempted to defame his opponent in Sept. 13 state elections. Barschel denied the charges. Police said Barschel checked into the hotel on Saturday.

West Germany's Stern magazine said one of its reporters found Barschel's body in a water-filled bathtub in the politician's hotel room Sunday afternoon. The magazine said the reporter entered Barschel's room through the unlocked door after knocking several times and getting no reply.

Carrara said Sunday that the body was found "in the hotel room." Asked about the bathtub report, he replied, "I said in the hotel room." Carrara confirmed the room door had been unlocked, and said investigators had not found any sign of a forced entry.

Asked if there was any sign of violence on the body, Carrara replied "nothing special." He did not elaborate.

He said officials had not found a suicide note.

Bild, in a report sent by telex to news media, said Barschel "shot himself to death" in Geneva, where he stopped en route to West Germany after a vacation in the Grand Canary Islands.

The paper said it learned from Barschel's "inner circle" that the politician "for the past two days saw no other way out than to kill himself."

Barschel resigned as state governor Sept. 25 because of the scandal, which has dominated West Germany's news media for a month.

The affair has been a major embarrassment to the governing party, which is headed by Kohl, and has threatened to cripple the party in Schleswig-Holstein in northern West Germany.

The scandal surfaced when West Germany's left-leaning news magazine Der Spiegel published an article containing allegations it said were based on the testimony of Reiner Pfeiffer, an aide in Barschel's press office.

Pfeiffer said Barschel ordered him to hire private detectives to spy on Bjoern Engholm, his Social Democrat opponent, and try to find evidence that Engholm was having extramarital affairs or was bisexual.

Pfeiffer also said Barschel ordered him to distribute anonymous letters to tax officials suggesting that Engholm cheated on his taxes.

After his resignation, there were indications that prosecutors in Schleswig-Holstein state would file criminal charges against him stemming from the affair.

Child Mauled By 300-Pound Lion

HOUSTON (AP) — An 8-year-old girl mauled by a lion on display at a flea market is battling for her life today and, if she pulls through, faces years of follow-up treatment.

Roxanne Maria Hernandez suffered a cracked skull, leaving part of her brain exposed after she was attacked Saturday by a 300-pound lion, which was described by a veterinarian as undernourished and was later destroyed.

The lion was being led through the flea market on a chain by its owner, Gary Durkovitz of Houston, said police Lt. C.W. Driskell.

Durkovitz had operated a booth for three months at the Texas Flea Market, where shoppers could have their picture taken with exotic snakes and the lion, said Driskell.

"The lion knocked over an ornament and became excited," said Brian Mason, 27, who said he saw the attack.

"The little girl walked by, and he knocked her down. He grabbed her and started dragging her across the floor. She was screaming and everybody started running around."

A security guard accompanying the lion and its owner fired a shot into the animal with a .44-caliber handgun, but the blast didn't stop the attack, Driskell said.

"That seemed to aggravate the lion, and it grabbed her by the head," he said. "He then shot the lion again, and they still had trouble getting it to release the little girl."

Roxanne underwent more than six hours of surgery Saturday night at Hermann Hospital, where she was listed today in critical but stable condition.

A second operation was scheduled for today to repair a wound near her right temple where a 2- by 2-inch piece of bone is missing, said Roxanne's father, Joel Hernandez.

"It's a miracle she's still alive," Hernandez said.

Roxanne was conscious and responded to family members through hand motions, said hospital spokeswoman Theresa Kowpak. Hernandez said his daughter nodded Sunday when he said to her, "Do you know Daddy loves you?"

Doctors have warned that if Roxanne survives, follow-up treatments or operations probably will be necessary for at least three years, Hernandez said.

Hernandez, a carpenter who lives on the outskirts of Houston, said he would like to see criminal charges filed against Durkovitz.

"Only an idiot would take a lion in a crowded place with people and kids, endangering them," he said.

Police turned the case over to the Harris County district attorney's office for presentation to a grand jury, said Sgt. A.D. Moore.

Durkovitz could not be reached for comment Sunday.

Bean Workers Know The Products

By DENISE LAYFIELD

CARRABASSETT VALLEY, Maine (AP) — The wilderness guide heaved his 65-pound backpack onto his strapping shoulders, looked at the 10 people dressed in an assortment of polypropylene underwear, chamois shirts, wind-resistant pants and waterproof hiking boots and said, "Let's go to it troops."

Call it a business trip. The two women and eight men who fell in behind Paul Farrington and headed for the Appalachian Trail were L.L. Bean employees becoming familiar with the company's outdoors equipment.

They looked like a living incarnation of the L.L. Bean catalogue, laden with stuffed backpacks and armed with whistles and compasses as they headed into the mountains of the Bigelow Range north of this western Maine town.

"For salespeople to talk intelligently (about our products), they should be using it and experiencing the outdoors. So we get them out there," L.L. Bean training coordinator Ed Babino said at the store's headquarters in Freeport.

The idea harkens back to the philosophy of store founder Leon Leonard Bean, who wanted hunting and fishing gear he began selling in 1912 to be "tried, true and tested."

"It was always hands-on with L.L.," said Everett Bucklin, facilities manager at L.L. Bean. "If he didn't use the equipment himself, he made sure someone else did."

Bean opened shop in what was then an isolated town in southeastern Maine with a borrowed $400 and a way to make innovative hunting boots featuring rubber bottoms bonded to leather tops. Bean promised his customers 100 percent guarantees and "no-questions-asked" refunds, a policy that continues.

But 75 years later, L.L. Bean has grown from a handful of avid hunters, anglers and trappers who sold a small inventory of goods to a mail order business with thousands of employees, some of whom have never seen the Maine back country.

Celebrating its 75th birthday this year, the company garnered the top spot among mail order businesses rated by Consumer Reports magazine readers, with 97.5 percent of the respondents indicating they were completely or mostly satisfied with products and service. Company sales reached $368 million last year.

"We call ourselves 'the store that knows the outdoors.' We want to protect that reputation," Babino said.

Store employees get training in activities such as backpacking, kayaking, snowshoeing.

"We pay for travel to and from a location. We pay them a regular wage to participate. We supply the equipment. All we ask is that they pay their fair share of the food," Babino said.

Forums Important

Voters should be aware that the ballots they will receive in the Pitt County Board of Education and the Greenville City Council elections on Nov. 3, 1987, will be unfamiliar compared to those of the past.

In the board of education elections voters will receive ballots for their districts only. There are six districts and each has an A and B seat. Thus voters in each district will cast ballots for two candidates. This differs from past board of education elections when all the candidates, even though they were required to reside in specific districts, were elected on a county wide basis. Greenville school district elections were held separately.

Now the two school systems have been combined and candidates compete only within their districts. Voters who are not informed might not understand that they can only vote on the candidates in the district in which they reside.

There have been similar changes in the Greenville City Council race. The mayor will still be elected in a city-wide contest and there will be one at-large seat which will be decided on a city-wide basis. Beyond that, the city has been divided into five districts and voters will be choosing from candidates only within their districts. In both the City Council and board of education elections some voters might be surprised to find that they cannot vote for a candidate who is not in their district. Voters are reminded, however, that they continue to vote at their usual polling places.

All of that makes it extremely important that we become informed on the candidates and the issues. One way to do this has been provided by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters and the Citizens for Excellence and Equity in Education in Pitt County which will hold forums for candidates during the month of October.

For the Pitt County Board of Education, a forum for districts 1 and 4 will be held at Greenville Middle School Oct. 13. Districts 2 and 5 forum will be held at North Pitt High School on Oct. 15. The forum for districts 3 and 6 will be held at Ayden-Grifton High School on Oct. 20. Each forum begins at 8 p.m.

In addition, a forum for Greenville City Council candidates will be held Oct. 27 at 7:30 p.m. at the Jaycee Park Auditorium.

These forums present the perfect opportunity to become acquainted with the candidates. The public can hear their ideas on how government should operate and they can discuss their platforms as candidates. It is, in fact, the voters' responsibility to familiarize themselves with the candidates in this manner.

This year the most important function of the forums may be to acquaint us with the candidates on which we will be voting. As voters it is an opportunity we should not pass up.

Competition?

There appear times when the United States needs the Soviet Union and it may well be true the Soviet Union needs the United States.

There were many indicators of that shared reliance in World War II.

A recent anniversary observance in Moscow underlined another such occasion — the launch of Sputnik. That event was in October of 1957 when the Russians launched a 184-pound satellite into orbit 560 miles above Earth.

It shocked Americans and the "race in space" became a really competitive affair. Until that challenge, Americans regarded space flight as largely an exercise of the imagination as well as an incredibly difficult undertaking. All that changed with Sputnik.

Pride was involved. The Russian press proclaimed the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 paved the way for development of Sputnik by creating a society in which people could grow and develop free of the "capitalist yoke." That stung.

The U.S. launched a mobilization of funds and human resources, a goal was set, and there came the day we put men on the moon. So much for the Russian boast.

But while the Soviet Union was celebrating its Sputnik anniversary, observers here at home said their old rival was now the pacesetter in space flight. Current experiments and research indicate a manned flight to the planet Mars is very much on the minds of Russian scientists. An American effort is not assured.

It is uncertain whether the Soviet aspirations of putting men on Mars will prompt a competitive reaction from the United States similar to the one Sputnik produced.

The nation's attention is largely focused on problems much closer to home, not orbiting in space. In the end, those issues are probably the more important ones.

The Democrats' Foreign Policy Differences

WASHINGTON — What were the Democratic candidates trying to do in debating foreign policy at the STARPAC, Democratic Leadership Council and Democratic National Committee forums on Sept. 27 in dovish Des Moines, Oct. 5 in hawkish Miami and Oct. 7 at the Kennedy Center here? And how well did they do it? Take each in turn.

•Albert Gore. Gore wanted to set himself apart from the rest of the pack, and he did. Gore attacked the others for not supporting humanitarian aid to the Contras, for not favoring missile-flight testing (though Bruce Babbitt does), for not backing the U.S. presence in the Persian Gulf. He accused the other Democrats of meeting litmus tests set by small peace groups and of learning the wrong lesson — that the United States must intervene nowhere — from Vietnam. Dick Gephardt objected that the differences Gore was pointing to were marginal: that Gore opposes the administration's $270 million Contra aid and favors only a $3 million stopgap bill. But the rhetorical difference was clear and suggests they'd be different kinds of presidents. Gore, who has not caught fire in Iowa or New Hampshire, is trying to buy himself a ticket to Super Tuesday. His stance can win votes in the South and in big industrial states, he will argue, and he should be allowed to test them there.

•Dick Gephardt. Gephardt tries instinctively to be the conciliator, the forger of united party policy, as he is in the House. You were with us on Contra aid, he chided Gore, we were together on the Midgetman, you voted for the freeze: our differences are only marginal. Democrats shouldn't talk like Jeane Kirkpatrick, he says; Gore's campaign manager replies, "Party unity and polite debate are the last refuge of candidates without a message." Gephardt wants to emphasize both that he opposes Contra aid and the administration bargaining strategy on arms control and that he favors a strong defense: politically he is trying to pirouette between dovish Iowa where he is strong and the Super Tuesday South, where he hopes to demolish Michael Dukakis, whom he attacked for opposing the Midgetman. But he made it more difficult for voters to understand his support-some-of-this, oppose-some-of-that policy when he made the startling proposal of U.S. military aid to the African National Congress in a revolutionary war in South Africa.

•Bruce Babbitt. In almost every response Babbitt shows that he has easily the most original mind of the candidates — though his opponents might call it quirky. He calls for U.S. diplomatic liaison with South African rebels (but questions the standard liberal prediction that revolution is imminent there), he wants to change NATO conventional-war strategy to "no first use" of tactical nuclear weapons, he is willing to give President Reagan credit for the INF treaty and (like Gore and unlike Jackson and Dukakis) defends the Grenada invasion. Babbitt strikes the most optimistic note of the candidates, one that probably rings truer for most Americans than the Democrats' usual out-party lugubriousness, when he argues that America and democracy are winning around the world, that Marxism is dying, that exciting progress is ahead. But Babbitt is not readily placeable on a one-dimensional ideological spectrum, which may make it hard for him to attract a large enough constituency in Iowa to get him a ticket to New Hampshire.

•Paul Simon. To STARPAC Simon was preaching to the choir, talking about arms control and urging more international exchange programs to bring ordinary Americans and Russians together and build international understanding. In Miami and Washington, he responded to the DLC's emphasis on American strength and to Gore's polarizing tactics with asperity, saying Gore was accusing his opponents of "the politics of retreat, complacency and doubt." Simon, like Gephardt, wants to avoid controversy among Democrats. His strategy is to portray himself — his issue stands and his bow ties — as unfashionable, which may just make them fashionable in Contrarious Iowa. Like Gephardt, he has an odd-duck proposal: to take covert activity away from the CIA and give it to the military and the FBI — the opposite of the decision made in 1947 by the Harry Truman whose memory Simon invokes.

•Michael Dukakis. In Des Moines, Dukakis was considered by many the leading candidate; in Miami, after his campaign manager stepped down, he started gamely but after a testy exchange with Al Gore on Grenada visibly slowed down. Dukakis articulates his attitudes with television crispness, but sometimes finds it hard to reach a decision. Alluding to human-rights violations (but not to recent progress on democratization), he has hinted that "in the long run" it might do to move U.S. troops out of South Korea. In Miami he criticized the invasion of Grenada but then said he didn't have enough information (after four years and lots of documentation) to judge whether it was right. But Dukakis persists in Wilsonian themes, favoring multilateral action, calling in the United Nations, denouncing Contra aid as a violation of law. This rings true, coming from a reform politician who helped change Massachusetts from one of the nation's most corrupt states to one of its cleaner ones. But the United Nations is hardly an asset. Gephardt, no doubt with a view to pro-Israel contributors, took care to attack Dukakis for elevating an organization that recognizes the PLO.

•Jesse Jackson. Jackson's moments of greatest fervor come when he denounces the United States, especially on Grenada and Nicaragua and South Africa. He denounced the Midgetman and Stealth bombers, favored by the others except Dukakis, as well as Star Wars and Contra aid, which they all oppose. "We must break the back of the arms race," he said, indulging as all the candidates did in the assumption that a U.S. policy declaration or a House resolution can change people's lives in far corners of the world.

Rural High Schools Lack Courses

RALEIGH — North Carolina's schools may have come a long way with the four years of accelerated funding provided under the Basic Education Plan, but a report presented to the State Board of Education this month puts in shocking perspective just how deficient some of the state's schools still are.

The Department of Public Instruction surveyed the state's 54 smallest high schools to determine the courses that they do not offer and which are most needed. The report leaves one wondering about the value of the education that these schools are providing.

For example, in 32 high schools, the first year of introductory algebra is not offered. In 41 high schools, the second year isn't offered. In 39 high schools, earth science isn't offered. In five high schools, there are no world history courses. This may sound like quibbling, but in 10 high schools, students don't have a physics course available.

The small high schools are especially deficient in foreign language instruction. None of the 54 high schools offered either German or Latin. French was not offered in 22 schools, and a third year of French was not offered in 47 schools. Spanish, probably the most important second language in the U.S. today, is not taught on the first year level on 28 schools, on the second year level in 29 and on the third year level in 45.

One encouraging note is that these "schools" do manage to teach four years of the language we try to speak in this country.

'In 32 high schools, the first year of introductory algebra is not offered. In 41 high schools, the second year isn't offered. In 39 high schools, earth science isn't offered. In five high schools, there are no world history courses.'

The report was prepared as background for the state's satellite instruction program that will begin next year. (More on that in a future column.) DPI needed to know the courses most in demand at these schools.

DPI listed two primary reasons for the course deficiencies at these schools. At some, there simply is no certified instructor available. In others, there is not enough student interest to make a course economically feasible. If a school of 450 has only one student interested in physics, the per student cost for providing that course would be immense.

But the report notes that some administrators have gone to considerable trouble to provide their students with the studies not offered in school. Students might be enrolled in a correspondence course, or transported to the local community college or other high schools for a course. Students might get instruction from a teacher who had a background, although no certification, in a discipline. Or, in the case of advanced foreign language study, a student might take the course through audio tapes only.

This jerry-built approach to education, as well-meaning as it is, creates undesirable side-effects. It's fairly obvious that a correspondence course, or one on audio tapes, won't be as valuable as a teacher-led course. Transporting students to other campuses takes away from their instructional time in other courses. Instruction by non-certified teachers has shown to be deficient. That battle was fought several years ago.

Across America, there are indications that the great education reform movement may be dissipating in the face of tight state and local budgets. That did not happen in North Carolina this year, but there's an election coming and politicians love to promise tax cuts.

It might be wise to ask those promising tax cuts if they can do so and still get algebra in rural high schools.

Strength For Today

Our planet is revolving about its axis at the rate of eighteen miles a minute. The planet is revolving about its orbit at the rate of eighteen miles a second. What furious agitation we are subjected to all the time, yet we are unconscious of it.

Astronomers tell us that the number of heavenly bodies in our galaxy alone is a hundred thousand million billion. Some of them must be populated, or else the Creator wasted a lot of real estate. There is something of vital importance going on in the universe, and we are part and parcel of the same.

God is the power that keeps the whole mechanism working. No wonder the Bible tells us that God rested on the seventh day. He needed to. There is a lot more believable humanity in our religion than we are sometimes willing admit. At the center of it all stands a personal God.

Out Of Touch On The Right

Analysis

WASHINGTON — On the day after the Bork battle was lost, with a solid majority of senators publicly prepared to vote against him, The Wall Street Journal editorially breathed defiance. It sounded the call for conservatives to fight on and offered President Reagan strategic advice.

"... After the Bork defeat, he must be starting to understand the irrational nature of the forces being deployed against him," the newspaper said of the president. "It's time he used his powers to strike back, starting by ensuring that the Bork opponents are in no way rewarded."

This is a fundamental misreading of what this epochal Supreme Court nomination fight, the most telling political incident of the Reagan presidency, symbolizes about America in the late 1980s. Far from being irrational, the forces producing Judge Robert H. Bork's defeat were both logical and inevitable. That doesn't mean that they fairly depicted Bork's views. It means that they represent the tide of history.

No episode in the Reagan years more clearly illuminates the differences between political ideology and reality, between the nation that has emerged from the long, bloody civil rights revolution that crested in the 1960s and the one envisioned by true believers who cling to illusions about America today.

None demonstrates more vividly the misjudgments of ideologues who have convinced themselves that the land not "inside the Beltway," as they sneeringly refer to the nation's capital, is awash with ideological fervor and inhabited by a people hungering for politically polarizing positions. The truth is that the ideologues don't understand what lies beyond the Beltway, and therein lies the essential lesson of the Bork case.

Contrary to what the ideologues believe, Americans have no social agenda. They don't want preachers in politics, school prayer in public classrooms, perceived extremists on the Supreme Court. They are neither liberal nor conservative; they are practical — yes, "pragmatic." And every opinion poll, every grass-roots voter survey, reinforces those impressions. If anything defines Americans' philosophically today, it is their belief in moderation and fairness. Most emphatically, they do not want to reopen old wounds and rekindle past battles.

That is especially so in the South, where the political misjudgments involving the Bork case are most striking and where the opposition of generally "conservative" senators killed the nomination.

Bork lost because the Reagan operatives failed to understand the forces that created the present South. Lyndon B. Johnson understood them when, in his great New Orleans presidential campaign speech in 1964, he told southerners what they knew in their hearts to be true: that the day of appeals to racial hatreds was over. No region in America welcomed that message more than the South, blacks and whites.

"Now, the people that would use and destroy us first divide us," Johnson said. "There is not any combination in this country that can take on Russell Long, Allen Ellender, Lyndon Johnson and a few others if we are together. But, if they divide us, they can make some hay. And all these years they have kept their foot on our necks by appealing to our animosities and dividing us. ... All (southern voters) ever hear at election time is nigra, nigra, nigra!"

One of the voices of racial division that year was Strom Thurmond of South Carolina. He is the same Thurmond who had led Dixiecrats out of the Democratic Party in the 1948 presidential election and waged a bitter, divisive segregationist campaign presaging violent racial struggles of the 1950s and 1960s. He is the same Thurmond who later symbolized the switch of white southerners to the Republican Party and the reigniting of southern racial polarization.

In the Bork confirmation hearings, Thurmond strongly defended Bork's judicial record by praising his moderate, mainstream views and indignantly rejected the notion that Bork harbored racial prejudice or was tainted by racism.

In the aftermath of the venomous nomination fight, such bitter-enders as The Journal editorialists urged Reagan to take the Bork case to the country. They thought voters would respond as angrily and ideologically as they had to "the Senate's total irresponsibility" in rejecting Bork. Fight on, they urged, for "obviously this would become a big issue in the presidential and senatorial campaigns in 1988."

They don't understand that the battle ended long ago. Perhaps that's the price of not understanding what lies beyond the canyons of Wall Street.

Who Replaces Bork?

WASHINGTON — Judge Robert Bork's unexpected decision not to drop out in the face of certain Senate defeat is aimed not only at salvaging self-respect but is an effort — viewed as misguided by his strongest supporters in the Reagan administration — to prevent agonizing defeat from turning into prolonged retreat.

Even as Bork stunned Washington by not asking that his name be withdrawn, White House aides were suggesting that chief of staff Howard Baker this time wants pre-nomination consultation with the Senate to be more than the mere formality it was in Bork's case. What's more, names of surely confirmable but non-conservative nominees have surfaced: Former HUD Secretary Carla Hills, newly installed CIA Director William Webster and even HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce.

Any of them would waltz through the Senate toward confirmation, but at a price. The liberal power structure will have established new guidelines for judicial confirmation, with the line drawn against Reaganization of the federal judiciary.

An angry President Reagan has vowed this cannot happen. He privately expresses determination not to send up any name pleasing to Joe Biden or Ted Kennedy. But the judge-selection process is less clear than it was last June when the president asserted with uncharacteristic finality that Bork was the only choice.

So many Democratic senators had announced their positions, these officials argued, that a formal roll call vote would serve no purpose. Only Sen. Sam Nunn remained a mystery, and his popularity in Georgia puts him beyond electoral retribution. Besides, the withdraw-now argument went, the bitter debate could be personally humiliating to Bork.

Only Bork's adviser, lawyer Leonard Garment, argued for him to stay and fight a last-ditch struggle. But if Garment harbored illusions, the judge himself did not. When Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd early last week finally announced his opposition, Bork picked up the telephone in a state of personal emotion to tell his wife, "It's over."

That is why his supporters in the administration wanted to turn the page and start on the new appointment. It would not be easy. Democratic operatives on Capitol Hill last week began preparing a case against two brilliant young judges on the 7th Circuit Court in Chicago whom they figure might be tapped: Richard A. Posner and Frank Easterbrook.

But while conservative, Posner and Easterbrook are considered judicial activists and have no more support at the Justice Department than at the White House. Strong sentiment at Justice was voiced for Gov. John Ashcroft of Missouri, a former state attorney general with a firm anti-abortion record, until an aide last Friday sent word to Washington he is not interested.

Ashcroft would have fit the category of a conservative with excellent legal and political credentials.

Seminary Faculty Bucking Board Move To Curb Academic Freedom

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — Professors at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary say they will refuse orders if school trustees vote to restrict academic freedom by requiring the teaching of fundamentalism at the expense of other doctrines.

"Regardless of what the board dictates, we will continue teaching in the Southeastern tradition of openness and freedom," said Richard L. Hester, a professor of pastoral care and the president of the school's chapter of the American Association of University Professors. "We have no plans to leave the seminary of our own accord. That's why we formed the organization and hired lawyers."

Southeastern's board of trustees today began a three-day semiannual meeting that has caused anxiety among the seminary's professors.

The meeting is the board's first since the appointment of five new trustees this summer gave conservatives a majority on the board and the first since the Southern Baptist Convention adopted a report charging that Southeastern professors were not giving adequate weight to the conservative view that the Bible is inerrant, or literally true.

The 33-member faculty, fearing changes members say are inevitable, last week launched a campaign to attract sympathy for academic freedom. All 33 professors are members of Hester's organization.

Southeastern President W. Randall Lolley said he has found himself in the middle of the fight.

"If the meeting comes down to a showdown, it'll be up to me to negotiate a way out of the logjam," Lolley said Saturday. "That's why I've tried to keep a distance. But like the faculty, I'm not of a disposition to let the trustees force something on me that I couldn't in conscience agree with."

"If the meeting results in the faculty and the board adopting directly opposed viewpoints, it would certainly be an impossible position for the seminary," Lolley said. "I can't make predictions on what would happen. I only hope trustees are friendly toward the basic issue of academic freedom, which the faculty has taken a strong stand on."

The majority of Southeastern professors are tenured. Lolley is not. Jesse P. Chapman, chairman of the Southeastern Board of Trustees, told the News and Observer of Raleigh Hester's remarks were "interesting."

"That position can either be interpreted as an act of defiance or an act of conscience," said Chapman, a surgeon in Asheville. "It depends on how the words were meant. People of conviction must stand by what they believe and if that's what the faculty is saying, I hope the trustees understand that. Personally, I'm for treating them gently."

Although one conservative trustee interviewed said he was interested in making dramatic changes at Southeastern, the majority of 12 trustees contacted, including Chapman, said the faculty has nothing to fear.

"I don't know of any trustee — and I'm as conservative as any of them — that would want to violate the academic freedom of any faculty member," said Rev. James W. Bryant of Fort Smith, Ark. "Southeastern has a tradition of academic excellence that I pledge to uphold. My only hope is that as vacancies occur, conservative faculty are hired in order to bring about a better balance of viewpoints."

But Hester isn't so sure that's all conservative trustees have in mind. "In successive agencies of the convention — the Home Mission Board, the Executive Committee, the Sunday School Board — fundamentalists are insisting on a single-minded doctrinal position that permits no dissent and chills freedom of speech and expression," he said. "We can read the writing on the wall. If it happens here, we would cease to be an educational university."

IN THE STATE

Quail Studied

CHARLOTTE (AP) — During the 1970s, hunters killed between 6,000 and 9,000 quail annually at Fort Bragg Military Reservation. Now they're lucky to take 600 birds a year.

"We're not sure we've seen the bottom yet," said Dr. Phillip Doerr, a professor of zoology at North Carolina State University. "I sure hope we have."

With funding from the U.S. Army, Doerr's research team is focusing on the military reservation in the southeastern part of the state. They hope to find the cause of the rapid decline in quail populations.

The problem is not exclusive to North Carolina. Small-game hunters throughout the Southeast are complaining about reduced quail populations, Doerr said.

"Fort Bragg is one of the few places that keeps good records of the number of quail killed," Doerr said. The records could make researching the problems in the quail population much easier, he said.

The NCSU scientists will monitor the quail population by attaching tiny radio transmitters to some of the birds to learn about their movements and mortality rate.

Average Crop?

CLARKTON, N.C. (AP) — The hot, dry summer which fried other eastern North Carolina crops did not roast Bladen County's peanuts, but the current cold spell may have a chilling effect on the crop, some peanut farmers say.

Bladen County farmers have fared better than the rest of the nation this year, boasting an average crop — about 30 percent of the county's crop has been harvested and sold, leaving the rest in or on top of the ground.

Peanut farmer Woody Marlowe Jr., of Clarkton, told The Fayetteville Observer his crop is near normal, but the outcome of the harvest is a matter of whether the weather holds up.

Everett Byrd, a 70-year-old farmer also from Clarkton, said he stopped plowing his peanuts out of the ground last week so he could avoid the frost predicted for the area.

Although peanuts grow underground, they are plowed up and left on top of the ground to dry for about five days before they are harvested. Byrd said if frost hits the upturned peanuts it will make them virtually worthless.

'Equity Skimming'

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A soldier has a problem when he buys a home in a military town and then is quickly transferred, and one solution often can leave an unsuspecting seller with a damaged credit rating and mired in debt.

Officials say the practice, called "equity skimming", often occurs when a soldier who bought a home using a mortgage loan backed by the Veteran's Administration is transferred and the home must be sold quickly. He finds a buyer, who pays little or no money down, assumes the loan and rents the house to someone else. But then the buyer pockets the rent money and doesn't use it to pay the mortgage.

Months pass and the VA contacts the soldier — who has now moved — wanting the money. The deed of trust holds the soldier responsible for the VA mortgage, unless released from that responsibility. And the buyer is nowhere to be found.

The resulting damage to a credit rating means it will be a long time before the soldier can buy a car, a house or anything else on time payments.

Jackson Protest

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While Jesse Jackson was announcing his bid for president, a small band of white supremacists traded taunts with his supporters outside the arena.

The protest Saturday by about 50 people, led by former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke, was without violence. A steady stream of Jackson supporters walked past the demonstrators and some stopped to listen, occasionally heckling the group. Police constantly surrounded the demonstrators.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin of North Carolina peppered a speech with a few phrases of Korean today as he called for expanded trade relations between his state and South Korea.

Martin said North Carolina was making a major effort to increase trade with South Korea and hoped that Korean businesses would use the state as a base for their expanding American operations.

"We are sincerely interested in furthering trade relations between our businesses and the Republic of Korea," he said.

Martin used several Korean phrases during his speech, bringing smiles of appreciation from the dozens of Korean government officials, businessmen and others attending the meeting.

The governor said he hoped the joint conference of the Korea-U.S. Economic Council and the Southeast U.S.-Korea Economic Conference, would help to redress some of the trade differences between the two nations.

Martin commended South Korea for its efforts to liberalize its trade policies and open its markets to American and other foreign imports. He stressed the need for unfettered free trade.

"Free trade can thrive best as two-way trade," he said.

The United States is putting pressure on South Korea to open its markets to all American imports to reduce the growing trade imbalance between the two nations, which is running in favor of Seoul.

North Carolina has a strong pro-business environment and is ready and willing to work with South Korea and other foreign nations in developing trade and business, Martin said.

He urged South Korean businesses to consider using North Carolina as a base, especially to take advantage of its ports and other transportation facilities.

Martin also called for better cultural and social understanding between Koreans and Americans. He said strong, close friendship between the two peoples was vital.

North Carolina offered, he said, "stronger bonds of trade and even stronger bonds of friendship."

The governor noted that the United States has long worked with South Korea and contributed to its defenses to help protect freedom and their common political interests. He said the effort had to be maintained.

Martin said soldiers from North Carolina serve with American forces based in South Korea under a mutual defense pact. He said he had enjoyed meeting some of these soldiers during his visit.

"We brought them news from home and thanks for their defense of freedom," he said.

Guards Cleared

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — An inmate at Piedmont Correctional Center has accused two guards of beating him in a $75,000 lawsuit, but the State Bureau of Investigation and the state Department of Correction have cleared the guards and returned them to work.

Officials said Terry E. Foster and Patrick J. McKee were suspended without pay Aug. 21 after inmate Bruce Stanley Fuller claimed to have been assaulted on Aug. 20. They returned to work Sept. 26, according to interviews by the Winston-Salem Journal with officials from the N.C. Department of Corrections and the SBI.

Fuller, 21, was treated for neck injuries at Rowan Memorial Hospital. He has filed suit in U.S. District Court in Greensboro, claiming the guards used excessive force against him.

Since the incident, Fuller has been transferred to the Eastern Correctional Center in Maury. He also has filed a lawsuit claiming prison officials withheld medicine from him.

College Bonds

GREENSBORO (AP) — For the first time Tuesday, North Carolina will offer tax-free capital appreciation bonds in denominations as low as $1,000 — bonds that state officials hope parents will set aside for college tuition.

"There will be plenty of supply," deputy state treasurer J.D. Foust says. "People should check with their banks or who they buy bonds from."

In the past, the smallest denomination of the bonds was $5,000.

Last summer, the General Assembly approved a bill allowing the state to sell the bonds in smaller-than-normal denominations with the idea that families could buy them to help pay for a child's college education.

But the money isn't restricted to college expenses.

"It can be used for any purpose whatsoever," Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, the bill's sponsor, told the Greensboro News & Record. "But the main reason for doing this is higher education."

Teen-Age French Girls Wedding Vows Had First Look At U.S.

(EDITOR'S NOTE — A long friendship between an American reporter and a French couple he met in Cambodia resulted in the recent visit of two teen-age French girls to the Connecticut home of the journalist. In this account he tells how he and his wife were thoroughly charmed by "Les Girls" who were getting their first look at the United States.)

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — It was a rare cultural encounter of the teen kind that, like a leaping doe, bounded over the generation gap.

"Les Girls" came to our house from Provence in France to practice their English for a month before entering high school this fall. Cecile Bosc, just turned 14, was from Avignon. Elodie Laplaud, her school friend and my goddaughter, from across the Rhone River in Villeneuve-les-Avignon, was a year older. It was their first visit to the United States.

I had met Elodie's father, Bernard, in Cambodia in 1970 when President Richard Nixon sent in U.S. troops to destroy North Vietnamese sanctuaries. He was an adviser to the Cambodian government and his wife, Nicole, was my French interpreter.

Waiting for the plane from Paris, my wife, Brigid, I wondered what French girls in the first bloom of adolescence were like. Incipient Madame Bovarys full of guile and precocious sophistication? Wide-eyed and innocent Colette demoiselles in Gigi straw hats and school uniforms truant from a Monet field of poppies?

The smiling, slender young ladies dragging enormous suitcases from the customs hall turned out to be shy and winsome. Their eyes were wide with small-town wonder at the Manhattan skyscrapers looming ghostly in the haze as we crossed the Whitestone Bridge.

The Empire State building was high on their must-see list, right after the Statue of Liberty, who to them still retained her French citizenship.

Graceful as fawns, the girls projected a feminine elegance, even in blue jeans and T-shirts, that could only be French. Happily, they still clung to some of the glories and goblins of childhood: a menagerie of stuffed animals on their beds and a night light to banish any phantoms hovering from the ghost stories they begged my wife to tell. "But they must NOT be true," Elodie specified.

"Les Girls" — they were amused by the code name I had scrawled on the calendar for their arrival date — enjoyed their first taste of corn on the cob, rhubarb, Harvard beets and "French toast," which they had never heard of in France.

They loved cooking out in the backyard over "carbon," charcoal, especially "hamboo-gaires," which they piled high with onions, tomatoes, lettuce, cheese and pickles, smothered with ketchup and mustard.

They were shrewd shoppers, frugal with their traveler's checks and conscious of quality. They searched endlessly for a certain brand of sports shoe that cost three times as much in Avignon.

"We are bourgeoises," Elodie casually proclaimed. "In France that is not a pejorative word."

"Pejorative" showed the depth of her English vocabulary after only two years of class work, and my old French dictionary upheld her definition of bourgeoisie: an independent woman of competence and respectability, which suited them to their chic T-shirts and miniskirts, which invariably bore the name of some designer.

They eagerly accompanied my wife to the supermarket, in hopes of encountering Paul Newman, their matinee idol, who lives in a nearby town.

They were astonished when the clerk kn the cheese shop offered around generous samples on the tip of his carving knife.

"In France," Cecile confided through a mouthful of Stilton, "the merchants never give anything away."

At their choice, only English was spoken outside their bedroom. I try not to think what impression their stay here will make on their English teacher next semester, but they were quick to pick up the local patois: "Gimme a break, will ya?" "No sweat." "Get lost."

An assignment took me to New Bedford, Mass. The girls came along. They knew all about Moby Dick and Captain Ahab of the Pequod.

The scope of their reading amazed us: "The Scarlet Letter," "Huckleberry Finn," "Of Mice and Men," "Gone With the Wind," "Catcher in the Rye." They knew more American literature than any native eighth-graders of our acquaintance.

Yet they seldom looked at a newspaper or listened to the news on TV, which seems to be the duty of the father in a French household.

They were surprised when a waitress took their orders in a New Bedford lobster house. Back home, this is a man's profession, "like being a chef," Elodie explained. Neither one could come up with the French word for waitress.

The fireworks and the quickening of the town's patriotic pulse on the Fourth of July excited them. Mindful of the Marquis de Lafayette's contribution to independence, they hung out Old Glory and iced the beer for our barbecue.

But 10 days later their fairness doctrine dictated that we celebrate Bastille Day with even more splendor: champagne and la cuisine provencale, which they prepared. The kitchen was off-limits to my wife for hours as they concocted a banquet of omelette aux pommes de terre, salade avignonnaise, pate de foie gras aux truffes, which they had brought from home and which Cecile surgically sliced with a knife dipped in hot water. The dessert was poires belle Helene.

They sang La Marseillaise as I toasted La Republique with their gift of Poirer Williams, an 86-proof liqueur from Avignon with the zap of an Exocet missile. But my praise for their haute cuisine was almost nullified by my referring to the foie gras as pate.

"Pate," Elodie rebuked me, "is for the cat."

Hot dogs, pizza, Kentucky Fried Chicken, McDonalds, Trivial Pursuit, "Kojak," "Dallas" and other American cultural exports are now as much a part of the ambience in the Midi as Van Gogh's sunflowers. But to our relief, even at top hi-fi volume, they preferred opera to rock, probably because Elodie was studying the violin and Cecile took piano. Both had beautiful voices, trained in a church choir, and the house often echoed with "Frere Jacques" and "Sur le Pont d'Avignon."

New York's mad bustle and sad decay confused them. Having ridden the TGV, the world's fastest train, they laughed at the dinky diesel pulling a long line of 50-year-old coaches into Manhattan on our Danbury line.

They found our subways "dirty, smelly," and, at a loss for words, "mechant," evil or full of trouble.

Now "Les Girls" are back in France, filling their diaries with new adventures. This old house is strangely empty. But late in the evening, when the bats fly low and the raccoons come prowling, the curtains in the guest room seem to rustle with faint echoes of "Frere Jacques" and Gallic ghosts in soft soprano whisper of Paul Newman.

Wedding Vows Said In Chapel

CHARLESTON, S.C. — The wedding ceremony of Mary Elizabeth Storey and Lt. Matthew B. Cissel, U.S. Navy, took place Saturday at 3 p.m. in Eternal Father By The Sea Chapel, Charleston Naval Base.

The Revs. Finian Storey and James Julius conducted the double-ring ceremony. Organist Susan Cowart and vocalist Anne Gunn Tant presented wedding music.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Storey of Greenville, N.C., the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Cissel of Orlando, Fla.

Susan Croom of Charleston was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Lori Nash Stank and Dawn Pugh Gordan, both of Mount Pleasant, S.C., Susan Hutchins Lear of Kissimmee, Fla., and Carol Mehne of Greenville, N.C.

Lt. Gus Anderson of Monterey, Calif., was best man. Ushers were Theodore Stank, Gregory Goolishian and Patrick Reno, all of Mount Pleasant, S.C., and John Chandler of Newport, R.I. The ring bearer was Ian Whitlock of Mount Pleasant.

The bride wore a lace sheath gown fashioned with puffed shoulders, princess collar and fitted bodice. The chapel train of satin featured a flounce and was trimmed with embroidered lace. She carried a cascade of white roses and baby's breath. Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a cap accented with flowers.

Each of the attendants wore a white-on-white brocade suit with a tea-length fitted skirt. The jacket had a fitted bodice with a peplum edge. The honor attendant carried a cascade of red and white roses and baby's breath. The bridesmaids carried cascades of red roses and baby's breath, tied with white silk ribbons.

A sit-down dinner was held at the Commissioned Officers Club at the Charleston Naval Base. A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at Tommy Condon's Restaurant in Charleston. A bridesmaids' luncheon was held at the home of Lou Stank.

After a wedding trip to Nantucket, Mass., the couple will live in Mount Pleasant.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University in Greenville. The bridegroom is a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and is serving in the U.S. Navy.

Don't Complain To Son About Wife's Limitations

DEAR ABBY: My son and his family visit us twice a year. I enjoy setting what I consider to be an attractive table for breakfast, lunch and dinner. My daughter-in-law, judging by our occasional visits to her home, goes to very little trouble at mealtime, and we rarely have matching glasses and dishes.

When my daughter-in-law visits me, she has the annoying habit of removing the floral centerpiece from the table, stating that we need more room on the table, which is extralarge! She evidently thinks that the center of the table should be occupied by a bowl of spaghetti or a carton of milk rather than something decorative.

What should I do? — BURNED UP IN EVANSTON, ILL.

DEAR BURNED UP: Accept your daughter-in-law's limitations and say nothing. Now I will tell you what NOT to do. Don't complain to your son about his wife's bad manners. If he can put up with her on a steady basis, you can tolerate her twice a year.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from the man who hasn't kissed his wife in 10 years because she was a heavy smoker and he couldn't stand the taste and smell, I had to write. My husband chews tobacco — specifically, he dips snuff, which is why I haven't kissed him in 10 years!

His teeth are brown, his tongue is cracked and his mouth tastes so bad my tongue and mouth "burn" when he tries to kiss me. It's a real turn-off when making love, and yet he insists that I kiss him. "It's not that bad," he says. Ha! Cancer runs in his family, yet he's into total denial of all the statistics.

For years he has been promising me he would quit. Now he announced that he has changed his mind — he "enjoys" dipping snuff too much to give it up. I still find him repulsive with that tobacco mouth, but it's not enough to make me divorce him. He doesn't drink, gamble or chase other women. I find myself looking at other men and fantasizing about what it would be like to spend a night just kissing!

Dear Abby

Am I wrong to refuse to kiss him during lovemaking? Or would a good wife submit to whatever her husband wants, just to satisfy him? — KISSED OFF

DEAR KISSED OFF: Your husband is clearly addicted. He made a choice between you and tobacco. You lost. And no, you are not wrong to refuse to kiss him during lovemaking. ("A fine romance — with no kisses!") Your husband is selfish to the point of being cruel; he's punishing both of you because he "enjoys" his addiction too much to try to overcome it.

Gay Activists March

"We believe that by reaching out to the rest of the nation and showing who we are... that all of us will begin to know each other better and change the kinds of myths that people have conjured up in their minds."

Sgt. Dennis Smith of the U.S. Park Police estimated that 200,000 people participated in the march past the White House and a rally near the Capitol.

Eleanor Smeal, former president of the National Organization for Women, said the demonstrators numbered 500,000.

"Here we are from California, Alabama, Florida, Arizona, Alaska, Seattle and Delaware - east, north, west and south - in numbers too large to ever be denied again," Smeal said.

"Feel the power of this moment and carry the message to the Capitol," she told the crowd that stretched across the mall for more than a dozen blocks.

The crowd, led by AIDS victims in wheelchairs and bearing signs with messages such as "Thank God I'm Gay", also heard from Jesse Jackson, the Democratic presidential candidate who attended civil rights demonstrations at the same location more than 20 years ago.

"I'm here because I care," Jackson told the crowd. "In 1963, I was there because I cared."

Jackson drew a loud roar when he said, "I came because you asked me, because I disagree with those who divide us, who want to isolate anyone who is different."

And he brought the crowd to its feet when he said, "We can fight AIDS and every form of death. Let's give life a chance."

Activists say the AIDS crisis, which has hit the homosexual community in the United States especially hard, has spurred an increase in violence and discrimination against the nation's homosexuals, who they estimate number 25 million.

Kay Ostberg, co-chairwoman of the march, said that like the demonstrations in the 1960s, the rally Sunday should send a message to the government that the homosexual movement is too large to ignore and that gays deserve civil rights.

Jet Crash

Because of poor roads, however, tourists can go only reach the city by air or river boat.

Authorities have not said what caused the June 21 Burma Airways crash, which killed all 45 Burmese on board. The plane slammed into a mountain minutes after takeoff from Heho, about 280 miles northeast of Rangoon.

In Burma's worst air disaster in recent years, a Burma Airways plane crashed five miles from Rangoon airport on March 25, 1978. Twenty-three foreigners were among the 48 dead.

That also was a Friendship Fokker 27, a Dutch-made medium-range aircraft.

Nobel In Medicine Awarded To Researcher

hope the information we got will be useful in developing responses to a number of diseases, including cancer and possibly even AIDS.

"If we understand how the (immune) system works, that information will be helpful in understanding what went wrong with it," he said at his home in Newton, Mass.

Last month, Tonegawa was among three molecular biologists to share the Albert Lasker medical research award. In 1986 he was named a recipient of the $50,000 Bristol-Myers Award for Distinguished Achievement in Cancer Research.

Today's announcement was made by the Nobel Assembly at the Karolinska Institute, a hospital and research facility.

Tonegawa, born in Nagoya, Japan, is a professor at the Center for Cancer Research and the Biology Department at MIT, in Cambridge, Mass.

Much of his pioneering work was done while he was a member of the Basel Institute for Immunology in Switzerland, from 1971 until 1981, when he moved to MIT.

More recently, Tonegawa's research group at MIT was one of several teams to identify the genes responsible for what are called T-cell receptors.

T-cells are white blood cells that perform a variety of immune system tasks. On the outside of the cell are the "receptors" where other immune system substances can plug into the T-cells and trigger them to go into action.

Understanding of those receptors is crucial to understanding the role of T-cells in the body's defenses.

Tonegawa's research on the immune system could one day help doctors understand how the immune system fails in patients with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, said Hans Wigzell, a professor of immunology at the Karolinska Institute. But, he said, "it's too simple to say the prize has immediate bearing on AIDS."

Tonegawa was 144th Nobel laureate in medicine or physiology, and the first in the category from Japan. He was the sixth Japanese Nobel prize winner in any category.

The most recent previous Japanese Nobel laureate was Kenichi Fukui for chemistry in 1981.

Tonegawa received a bachelor of science degree at Kyoto University and a doctorate at the University of California-San Diego. He did postgraduate work at the Salk Institute in San Diego.

Last year's winners of the Nobel Prize in medicine were Stanley Cohen of the United States and Rita Levi-Montalcini of Italy, for discoveries of "growth factors" in human and animal tissue.

Floyd Gets Stronger

Officials had not called for an evacuation by early today, but warned residents in Monroe County, which includes the Keys, to secure their homes and boats and to store supplies.

Key West Airport was closed this morning, and about 100 people were evacuated from a Key West mobile home park. Officials recommended leaving camping areas and urged all residents of mobile homes to seek more secure shelter.

"We got an early start, which is good for everybody," said county sheriff's spokeswoman Annabel Brooks-Clark.

The Florida Highway Patrol reported heavy traffic leaving the island chain late Sunday.

"We've had fender-benders and the gas lines are long, but that's it. The roads are fine. They're not flooded," said Officer Bridget Stewart in Marathon.

Business boomed at grocery stores in Key West.

"We were wiped out between 6:15 and 7 p.m. (Sunday), right after the first advisory," said Jack Taylor, who works at Seven Days Food Store. "No bread, some water and no batteries."

Record Attendance

everything seems favorable to make it truly a regional fair. That's an approach we need to encourage."

Forrest said that Phil Vivona told him "you have the third biggest and best fair of all those we serve in North Carolina. Next to the State Fair and the Dixie Classic, yours is the best."

Official fair standings statewide for 1986, according to Forrest, placed the Pitt County Fair in eighth place. "After the success this year, I wouldn't be surprised to see our standing come up to fourth or fifth place."

Forrest said 1987 was his first year as manager of the American Legion Pitt County Fair. "I've been working with Sam Winchester for 20 years, and he was by my side this year to give me support. My wife, Betty Sue and myself visited several fairs a little earlier on, to get ideas and that was helpful."

This year was the final of three contract years with the Vivona family's Amusements of America. "The family expressed a hope that they will be coming back next year," Forrest said. "The board of directors of the fair will meet soon and make a decision on who to contract with for the 1988 fair, so right now it's not known who will be coming."

The Pitt County Fairgrounds is owned by the American Legion posts in Greenville, Farmville and Ayden. "Whatever profits are realized go toward expenses, especially paying off the mortgage on the property," Forrest said. "At this point, things look favorable to being able to pay that soon."

Replacement Football Aids Doormats

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Replacement football suits the Houston Oilers, Indianapolis Colts and San Diego Chargers just fine.

As for the Minnesota Vikings and New York Jets, the 20-day strike has been 20 days too long.

Then there's the curious case of the Super Bowl champion New York Giants, to whom the strike doesn't seem to matter. They lost two games before the strike and they've lost two during the strike.

"We can't stop the run and we can't pressure the quarterback and we don't cover too well," Giants Coach

Bill Parcells said. "So that's a pretty helpless feeling."

If NFL players stay on strike much longer, league doormats could walk all over the established powers and right into the playoffs. The Oilers, Colts and Chargers are heading in that direction with 2-0 records during the walkout.

The Vikings and Jets both got off to 2-0 starts but have seen those bright times fade as their replacement squads faltered.

Some of the strong are surviving. The Chicago Bears easily won their two pre-strike games. And they've dominated during the strike, particularly on defense with 20 sacks in two victories — the regulars had 13 in their wins.

Oilers 15, Browns 10
Houston, which had lost six straight to Cleveland, got 121 yards rushing from Herman Hunter and is off to its best start since 1979.

The Oilers defense held Cleveland to 50 yards rushing and 169 total yards. Cleveland had rushed for 217 yards last week at New England.

Colts 6, Jets 0
Indianapolis has used varying styles for its two victories during the strike. Last week, the Colts routed Buffalo 47-6 as veteran quarterback Gary Hogeboom threw for five touchdowns.

This time, the Colts got their first shutout since moving from Baltimore, where they last turned the trick in 1976 against the Jets. They held New York to 66 yards rushing and 145 passing and forced five turnovers.

Chargers 17, Buccaneers 13
A crowd of 23,873 ignored the rain and collected NFL hats and souvenirs in a Bucs' promotion. Then Neuheisel came in and sparked the Chargers to victory.

Nueheisel replaced Mike Kelley midway through the second quarter and hit 18 of 22 passes. He threw a 19-yard touchdown pass to Tim Moffett two minutes into the fourth quarter. Jeff Gaffney's 27-yard field goal and Martin Sartin's two-yard touchdown run provided the other points.

Bears 27, Vikings 7
Chicago took a two-game lead in the NFC Central as the defense overpowered Minnesota. Mike Hohensee passed for one touchdown and set up another before a crowd of 32,113. Originally, 66,030 tickets were sold for the game, leaving more than 33,000 tickets turned back or unused.

Redskins 38, Giants 12
Lionel Vital, who was cut by the Giants last year, became the first player in almost two years to rush for 100 yards against New York. He had 109 on 17 carries in the first half and his 22-yard touchdown run highlighted a 21-point second quarter. Vital finished with 128 yards and Ted Wilson returned seven punts for 142 yards.

The game drew the Giants' smallest crowd ever at Giants Stadium, 9,123 on a chilly, rainy day.

Cowboys 41, Eagles 22
Replacement Kelvin Edwards had a 62-yard touchdown run on the first play for Dallas, then Alvin Blount scored on runs of eight and one yard, Luis Zendejas kicked two field goals and Cornell Burbage caught a 77-yard scoring pass from Kevin Sweeney in the opening 10 minutes. Cowboys stars Tony Dorsett and Danny White received some harsh treatment from the fans — both were booed often.

Bengals 17, Seahawks 10
Cincinnati overcame its own self-destructive tendencies — seven fumbles, three of them recovered by Seattle; eight penalties for 80 yards — scoring all its points in the second quarter, on a five-yard run by Marc Logan, a one-yard run by David McCluskey and a 28-yard field goal by Massimo Manca.

49ers 25, Falcons 17
The smallest crowd in Falcons' history saw Montana, Roger Craig and Joe Cribbs — three of San Francisco's 12 strike-breaking veterans — spearhead the 49ers' second straight victory in a replacement contest.

Montana guided the team to two touchdowns and a field goal on his only five possessions of the day. Craig rushed for 91 yards, Cribbs had 67.

Rams 31, Steelers 21
So did Los Angeles veterans White, Mike Lansford, Nolan Cromwell and Steve Dils, who contributed to all the Rams' scoring.

White rushed for 166 yards and scored one touchdown in his best

NFL outing ever. Dils hit 13 of 19 passes for 148 yards and two touchdowns. Cromwell, a four-time All-Pro safety, blocked a punt and Kirby Jackson fell on the ball in the end zone. Lansford capped the Rams' scoring with a 39-yard field goal in the final quarter.

Dolphins 42, Chiefs 0
The first regular-season game at 74,993-seat Joe Robbie Stadium drew 25,867 fans. They'll remember the strong Miami defense, something the regular Dolphins, who were 26th in NFL defense last year, didn't have.

Cardinals 24, Saints 19
St. Louis made up for a 368-143 deficit in total yardage by returning two fumbles for touchdowns in a game featuring 30 veterans, 18 for the winners. Mark Jackson ran yards with a fumbled snap and Pro Bowl safety Leonard Smith went 29 yards for another score with a fumble.

Lions 19, Packers 16, OT

Detroit's first victory of the season came when Mike Prindle kicked a 31-yard field goal with 2:34 left in overtime before 35,779. It was the fourth field goal for Prindle, who had missed a 42-yarder with 10 minutes to go in overtime.

Woody Peele

The old saying goes "If it walks like a duck, looks like a duck and quacks like a duck, it must be a duck."

Saturday, East Carolina's opening offensive formation looked like the I, exploded like the I and continued to work like the I.

But Coach Art Baker says it isn't really the traditional I-formation. No, it's just a variation of the Pirates' run-and-shoot.

"It's the same offensive plays, the same blocking scheme," Baker said. "We don't change anything."

Well, just a little. The big change is to take one of the slotbacks, in this case the hard-running Reggie McKinney, and move him from the slot to the tailback position. From there on, everything else works like the run-and-shoot. In the "normal" alignment in the run-and-shoot, McKinney would line up as a slot to one side or the other, with Jarrod Moody or Willie Lewis at the other. Then, the direction the play would take would be dictated by how the defense lined up.

"What this formation does is it takes one of your running backs out of your running scheme," Baker said. "Jarrod Moody didn't get to run the ball all day and he's a pretty good runner, but I talked to him after the game and he said, 'Coach, I'm just glad we won.'"

If a back went in motion to get the ball on the pitch, he could come back roughly to where the tailback would be standing if in the I.

By moving McKinney back to the tailback slot, it put the ball in his hands much more often. He carried the ball 20 times Saturday against Cincinnati, gaining 212 yards. In the five games prior to Saturday, McKinney had carried only 22 times, gaining 142 yards.

It doesn't take a great deal to see the difference it made. "I haven't had a game like this since high school," McKinney said. "It was worth the wait."

There were still some times when the Pirates lined up in the conventional run-and-shoot, but generally, they stayed in the I-like formation. "I prefer the scheme that gets us in the end zone," quarterback Travis Hunter said. "We can mix them up and keep them off balance."

East Carolina really doesn't run the true I or the true run-and-shoot, but varieties of the two. If the success of Saturday can continue, the Pirates would be wise to continue using it just as they did against the Bearcats.

The 608 yards in total offense was the most any Pirate team has generated in Ficklen Stadium and the 500 yards rushing was the most any team has produced on the local turf.

McKinney's 212 yards was the second best ever by a Pirate back, falling short only of Billy Wightman's 245. And, had McKinney continued to carry the ball in the final quarter, he would certainly have surpassed that. After his 56-yard scoring burst, the next-to-last Pirate touchdown, he carried only once more.

The game saw Anthony Simpson, Travis Hunter and Charlie Libretto all move up in the top 10's in career activities for the Pirates.

Simpson rushed for 86 yards, giving him a career total of 1,809. That surpassed Tom Michel's 1961-63 total of 1,788 for 10th place on the ECU list. Simpson now trails #9 Earnest Byner by 240 yards.

Hunter, with four pass completions, moved his total to 79 for his career, moving in to seventh place, passing George Richardson (1963-65) and the still active Ron Jones, now a receiver, who had 76. Libretto, with three completions, moved to 78, taking over eighth place. Next up the ladder is Greg Stewart, who had 108 completions.

Hunter, whose yardage Saturday brought him to 942 in his career, moved in to 10th place on that list too, supplanting Bill Bailey (1962-66), who had 929 yards. Hunter is just four yards short of catching #9 Richardson, who had 946. Beyond him in eighth is Jones, who has passed for 1,169. Libretto, too, is close to the top 10 with 928 yards.

Giants Steal Win From St. Louis

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They taught the thieves a lesson in base-stealing and outkicked the "dink ball" champions.

The San Francisco Giants, one victory from their first National League pennant in 25 years, put on another show of power and pitching Sunday while also beating the St. Louis Cardinals at their own game.

The Giants set a playoff home run record, swiped three bases, strung together some singles and secured a 6-3 victory with reborn relief pitcher Joe Price's brilliant one-hit pitching over the last five innings.

"They looked like the Gashouse Gang today and we looked like a bunch of leadfoots," said St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog. "We couldn't get them out with a cannon."

The victory gave the Giants a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven playoffs with Game 6 on Tuesday night in St. Louis. The Giants will send Dave Dravecky against John Tudor. The two met in the second game when Dravecky threw a two-hitter in a 5-0 victory.

Price became the latest surgically repaired hero for the Giants, a team to make medical science proud.

"It's every ballplayer's dream," Price said of his first playoff victory, calling it the most important game in his eight-year career. "I may have pitched better games but I don't think I pitched any bigger games."

Price's dream game — he had six strikeouts and one walk — held more significance for him because it marked the climax of his comeback from elbow surgery, a path filled with pain, frustration and doubt.

"I had a very sharp pain with everything I threw," Price recalled of his days before surgery two years ago. "If I tried to throw the ball hard it was like somebody sticking a knife in my elbow."

Pirates Put The Pieces Together

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina finally put all the pieces together in its 1987 football puzzle Saturday and breathed new life into a season of ups and downs.

The Pirates rolled over Cincinnati, 56-28, and put up their biggest offensive numbers in quite some time. The 56-point total was the highest since 1981 when ECU blasted East Tennessee State, 66-23.

The win evened ECU's record at 3-3 and it also marked the first time in head coach Art Baker's three-year tenure in Greenville that the Pirates had won more than two games in a season.

And coming off a 49-0 shellacking at the hands of West Virginia last week, the win couldn't have come at a better time.

The keys were many in the game. Obviously the offense, led by the running of Reggie McKinney and Anthony Simpson, was in high gear. But the defense also turned in a strong second-half performance, holding the Bearcats to one touchdown over the final two quarters after giving up 21 points in the first half.

"Our players responded to a tough win mentally after last Saturday's loss to West Virginia," Baker said. "We were critical of ourselves as coaches and players, and we were criticized by the media. This performance gives us a big lift."

There wasn't much to criticize Saturday.

With the score tied 21-21 at the half, ECU's defense came out in the second half and gave a renewed effort that swung momentum the Pirates' way.

ECU's Ellis Dillahunt blocked a Jeff Jones punt at the Bearcat 25 and four plays later Simpson crashed in from the three to give ECU the go-ahead score, 28-21.

The play sparked the defense, which had spent the majority of the first half watching Cincinnati quarterback Danny McCoin tear them apart as he hit on 11 of 14 passes for 174 yards in the opening two periods.

"We weren't putting enough pressure on and when you've got a quarterback like that, he's going to be able to pass well," said ECU linebacker Vinson Smith.

"We came in (at halftime) and discussed it. We felt we needed to put more pressure on the quarterback. I think it kind of shook him up a bit. I think it was a good adjustment for us."

Indeed it was. McCoin went untouched in the first half but was sacked three times in the second half, during which time he hit on only six of 14 passes for 74 yards.

"Our defense has kept us in the game the whole year," said quarterback Travis Hunter. "A couple of the defensive players may feel they let us down but not in the second half. This is a team effort. We're all in this together."

Meanwhile, the ECU offense kept on grinding away at the Cincinnati defense.

With McKinney and Willie Lewis gaining yardage out of the I-formation, the Pirates scored 35 points in the second half.

Puckett, Gagne Ignite The Twins

DETROIT (AP) — Kirby Puckett and Greg Gagne, like Twin fuses on Minnesota's ticking time bomb, were due to explode.

Puckett and Gagne, who had been held in check by Detroit through the first three games of the American League playoffs, helped power the Twins to a 5-3 victory in Game 4 Sunday night.

That put the Twins up 3-1 in the best-of-seven series with the AL East champions, who found themselves in a must-win situation in Game 5, which was scheduled for 3:07 p.m. today.

It marks the third successive year since the playoffs went to a best-of-seven format in 1985 that a team has fallen behind 3-1.

In both of those cases, the team facing elimination — the 1985 Kansas City Royals and the 1986 Boston Red Sox — rebounded to win the next three games and advance to the World Series.

Doyle Alexander, who suffered his first loss in a Tiger uniform in Game 1, was scheduled to start for Detroit. Bert Blyleven, who handed Jack Morris his first loss ever in the Twin Cities in Game 2, was scheduled to go for Minnesota.

Puckett, who had only a double in 13 at-bats in the first three games, had two hits, including a home run, in five at-bats and scored two runs Sunday.

Gagne, who had only a solo homer in 10 at-bats, had another homer in Game 4 while going 2-for-4 and scoring two runs.

"My teammates know it's just a matter of time," Puckett said of his slow start for the AL West champions. "I just play hard and let the chips fall where they may."

As fate would have it, a two-out throwing error by Gagne at shortstop allowed Lou Whitaker to score Detroit's first run as the Tigers took a 1-0 first-inning lead.

But Puckett, who hit 28 home runs during the regular season, got that back in the third when he slammed the first pitch from Frank Tanana into the left field seats.

"The pressure was on the Tigers," Puckett said. "Nobody expected us to do anything anyway."

Detroit compiled the best record in baseball, winning 98 games in 1987. Their victory Sunday night was only the 10th road victory since the All-Star game for the Twins.

Gagne put the Twins ahead to stay when he hit Tanana's 1-1 pitch into the left field seats in the fourth.

"The first pitch he threw me was a fastball, so I kind of anticipated the next pitch; be ready for the fastball, but adjust if he throws a changeup or a curveball," said Gagne, who hit 10 home runs during the regular season. "He threw it in a zone and I was able to get a good part of the bat on it."

Elliott Holds Off Allison For Oakwood Victory

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Bill Elliott didn't mind fighting a war of attrition at Charlotte Motor Speedway, as long as he won the race.

"I'd rather be lucky than good any day of the week," Elliott said Sunday after beating Bobby Allison to the checkered flag by 2.22 seconds to win the Oakwood Homes 500 NASCAR race.

Elliott had led two races at Charlotte earlier this year only to come up short in each. But on Sunday, he took advantage of the last of seven caution periods to take the lead from Allison with 61 laps to go.

Allison, who won the pole earlier in the week — his first since 1982 — couldn't catch Elliott in the final laps.

"They were able to get that Ford to handling with all those caution flags and he (Elliott) had too much motor at the end for us," said Allison, who led six times Sunday for a total of 143 laps.

Elliott, who turned 32 on Thursday, quipped that his Ford Thunderbird was "the best of what was left" after 23 of the 42 cars were knocked out of the race.

"That's all it takes," he said after collecting the $74,040 winner's share.

The race was marred by two early multi-car accidents and a third crash that broke the right hip of driver Neil Bonnett.

Bonnett, 41, of Bessemer, Ala., was scheduled for surgery today at nearby Cabarrus Memorial Hospital. He is expected to remain hospitalized for the rest of the week.

With the victory, Elliott solidified his hold on second place in the Winston Cup driver standings. He trails Dale Earnhardt, who finished 12th Sunday, by 525 points with three races left.

All Earnhardt has to do is start at Rockingham, N.C., on Oct. 25 to clinch his second consecutive national title and third overall. Elliott won the points title in 1985.

Earnhardt missed a chance to clinch the championship Sunday when his Chevrolet lost its brakes on lap 193. It put him six laps behind and overshadowed his earlier efforts to make up a three-lap deficit.

Earnhardt had lost the three laps after being caught in a six-car pileup on the 21st lap.

Derricke Cope collided with Earnhardt between the first and second turns to begin the accident that claimed the cars of Jimmy Means, Buddy Baker, Greg Sacks and Cope.

"Derricke just lost control of it and tagged me," Earnhardt said. "I think he was driving over his head. We were back in the lead lap running in third when we had the brake problems. A brake line busted and all of a sudden the brakes started going away."

Earnhardt wanted to clinch the championship at Charlotte, which is just a few miles from his Kannapolis, N.C., home.

"We were going after the win," he said. "We've got the points, so we don't have to worry about that. Yeah, we're disappointed but we can clinch it at Rockingham."

NFL Negotiations Break Off Again

TYSONS CORNER, Va. (AP) — After six days of negotiations and a second Sunday of replacement games, the NFL strike situation is back where it was a week ago: no bargaining sessions scheduled and player representatives headed for a meeting in Chicago.

once again, free agency appeared to be the central issue.

"I think they have overcommitted or overreached on any number of positions," Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council, said Sunday. "We're at a roadblock."

No new talks were scheduled as the strike entered its 21st day and union chief Gene Upshaw was to meet in Chicago today with the 28 player representatives to evaluate the situation.

In a similar meeting last Monday, the NFL Players Association declared that it would not let one single issue stand in the way of an agreement. It was that vow that led to the latest round of talks, which got under way Tuesday.

The previous session of talks, in Philadelphia Sept. 23-25, ended when management refused to consider the union's plan for unrestricted free agency. Sunday, Donlan said the sides were still far apart on the same issue.

In fact, the two sides seemed as far apart as ever. Six days of bargaining yielded agreement on only seven minor issues.

"Since Thursday we have gone through the items on a fairly regular basis without any resolutions," Donlan said. "We get close on a lot of them, but we get close and just get stagnant."

While Donlan blamed the impasse on the union's insistence on unrestricted free agency, Upshaw said the major stumbling blocks were management's demands for a six-year contract and its plan to change the 20-year-old pension system.

In an effort to adhere to the current NFL system, the union greatly altered its stance on free agency.

According to its latest proposal, at the end of a player's contract the club could make a qualifying offer to retain the player by guaranteeing 120 percent of the contract.

If the player received an offer from another club, the original team could match the contract or let the player go and receive compensation, which would be determined by the player's old salary.

"In my opinion, it maintains the labels we currently have, but does away with the compensation," Donlan said. "What they're doing is taking the heart out of our system."

He then pointed out that, based on management's demand for a wage scale, a team signing a two-year veteran would not be required to compensate a player's old team.

The union says the plan was not devised with the wage scale in mind.

"The owners are using free agency as a smokescreen on the real issues, which are pension, guaranteed contracts and player rep protection and a whole list of things," Upshaw said.

He said it was management, not the union, that is intent upon altering the system. Management's plan for a six-year contract, Upshaw said, goes against tradition because the previous pacts had been signed to coincide with the league's television contract.

The disagreement on pension is basically the source of the money rather than the payout itself.

Management, which contends the players should be concerned only about the payout and not where the money comes from, is offering to increase pension benefits from $150 to $200 per month for every year of service, over the proposed six-year life of the contract. It would have contributions based on the profitability of the investments made by the trustees of the pension fund — three from each side.

The owners are also willing to contribute a flat $37 million, which is derived from the current $19 million surplus in the fund and $18 million in payments now being disputed in federal court.

The union, on the other hand, says the owners have been contributing to the fund since 1968 and should continue to do so. And the NFLPA insists the $18 million is already theirs as a result of the 1982 collective bargaining agreement.

"We're working within the system (on free agency) and they're proposing to change it," Upshaw said.

Player Of The Week

Farmville running back Gary Moore ran all over the Pamlico Hurricanes Friday night, totaling 218 yards rushing and two touchdowns as the Jaguars edged the Hurricanes, 14-6. And for his efforts, he is the Daily Reflector Player of the Week.

GARY MOORE

Moore opened up the scoring in the game by dashing 34 yards for his first score and then added a two-point conversion run to make it 8-0. Moore scored his second touchdown on a one-yard run in the final period to lock up the win for the Jaguars.

With 788 yards rushing so far this season, Moore has been the catalyst for Farmville this season as the Jaguars have sported a 5-1 mark and a 3-0 record in the Eastern Plains Conference.

Prep Honor Roll
D.H. Conley tailback Daryl Simpson: Simpson rushed for 117 yards on 11 carries and scored two touchdowns to lead the Vikings to a 33-8 romp over North Lenoir.

Greene Central linebacker Tommy Eason: Eason had 13 unassisted tackles and three assisted tackles to lead a strong Ram defense that bottled up North Pitt and helped Greene Central post a 17-12 upset victory.

North Pitt quarterback Calvin Hunter: In a losing effort, Hunter hit on five of nine passes with two interceptions for a 126 yards in the Panthers' 17-12 loss to Greene Central.

Roanoke fullback-linebacker Marvin Earl Morning: Morning ran for 193 yards and one touchdown and also collected 12 tackles for the Redskins in a 13-12 loss to Roanoke Rapids.

Washington running back Damien Moore: Moore ran for 138 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Pam Pack to a 42-12 romp over West Carteret.

Rose linebacker David Daniels: Daniels blocked two punts that led to a touchdown and a safety for the Ramblins in a 42-0 blowout of Wilson Beddingfield. Daniels helped lead a powerful Rose defense that limited Beddingfield to 17 yards in total offense.

Twins Up 3-1 ...

"It was pretty exciting. I had some fun out there. There's a few smiles."

Despite the offensive punch by Puckett and Gagne and some superb work by four Minnesota pitchers, however, the game turned on an unthinktable mistake by Detroit veteran Darrell Evans.

With one run in, cutting the Twins lead to 4-3 in the sixth, the Tigers had Evans on third and Dave Bergman on second with one out.

But on Juan Berenguer's first pitch to Lou Whitaker, catcher Tim Laudner snapped a perfect throw to third baseman Gary Gaetti, picking off Evans, who had strayed too far up the line.

"The pickoff play certainly was large, certainly was a big play," Laudner said. "Gary and I have a predetermined signal. If he feels he can get him out, he puts it on."

"The ball was down and in. It kept me square to third base."

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said, "I thought it was the turning point of the game. No question about it."

Two pitches later, on a 2-0 count, Berenguer, the former Tiger, threw a wild pitch which would have allowed Evans to trot home easily with the tying run — had he still been on third.

Minnesota left-hander Frank Viola, pitching on three days of rest for only the fourth time this season, worked the first five innings and was relieved after Chet Lemon and Evans opened the sixth with singles.

Viola, 17-10 during the regular season, gave up three runs — two earned — on five hits to earn his first playoff win.

After scoreless relief by Keith Atherton and Berenguer, Jeff Reardon, who was the winner in Game 1, worked the ninth inning and earned a save.

Berenguer, who angered Anderson with his enthusiastic arm-waving in Game 2, again shut down the Tigers before turning the ball over to Reardon, the Twins' designated closer.

Pirates Roll ...

McKinney ran for a career-high 212 yards, including a 56-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter.

"I haven't ever had a game like that since high school," McKinney said. "I saw the crease. I saw it right away. They didn't have but one guy outside. We had good yardage on it all day but that time we broke it open."

Baker had been hinting for weeks that he wanted to get McKinney the ball and finally followed through on the notion. He brought in Matt McLaughlin and Ben Billings in a double tight end formation and lined up McKinney as a tailback instead of his accustomed position as a slot.

"Reggie McKinney is exactly the type of runner we knew he was," Baker said. "We just had not done a good enough job of getting him the football."

All the Pirate backs had success though. Simpson ran for 86 yards on 12 carries. Lewis ran for 49 on eight carries and quarterback Travis Hunter had 54 yards on nine carries.

As a team, ECU had 500 yards rushing and another 108 passing.

It was the second time this season that the Pirates had implemented a tailback into their run-and-shoot scheme. They had gone to that formation in a 16-13 win over Georgia Southern on Sept. 26.

"I think the I opened it up a little bit because they didn't know how to read it and they weren't able to key on me," Simpson said.

Against the Bearcats, ECU used both the split formation with the slot backs and the I-formation with the tailbacks.

While Hunter would rather credit the Lord with helping prepare him for the game and allowing him to keep his composure, he said another key was that the Pirates didn't self destruct on offense as they have at other times this year.

"We scored 32 points against N.C. State," Hunter said. "If we go out there and do the things we're capable of doing, we can score points. The problems that were hurting us in previous ball games were mistakes and turnovers. What we were lacking was concentration."

Baker echoed his quarterback's sentiments.

"For several weeks, we've been our own worst enemy," he said. "And today, there were no turnovers and the result was a big win."

"Bend down here, Daddy, and get your hug for today."

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Oct. 12

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Try to establish more harmony among the members of your family. You can get fine results by entertaining at home this evening.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Try to be open-minded in your communications today. Stop thinking small; open your eyes to the new opportunities around you.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Revise your budget so that you'll have extra money to spend on making your home more comfortable but don't be too extravagant.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Use your natural charm to influence people you enjoy and would like to be around in the future. Drive carefully.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): The amount of effort you expend is proportionate to your position in the business world. Avoid a person who interferes with your work.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Some unusual aspects of a new enterprise can be cleared up easily. Plan your itinerary if you'll be leaving on a short trip soon.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Extend yourself in the business world, and put a plan to work which will gain you more success and notoriety. Watch your credit situation.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Don't put any new ideas into action until you've smoothed off the rough edges. Seek the advice of an expert who has a proven track record.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): This can be a very profitable day if you're sure to keep the promises you have made. Teamwork with your mate can help greatly.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): It would be wise to keep informed on current world events. A good friend can introduce you to a person who has good advice for you.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Superiors may be studying your work, so do your best today. Do nothing which will annoy your family and cause a big argument.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Listen to the suggestions of a new friend who can help you improve your social life. Progressive thinking is a must at this time.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A83 ♥KJ95 ♦AJ87 ♣K9
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What do you bid now?
 A.—With all prime cards, a ruffing value, four cards in the other major and only one stopper in the opposing suit, we prefer a takeout double to an overall of one no trump. If there is game in the hand, it's more likely in hearts than no trump.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AJ5 ♥Q952 ♦KJ43 ♣AQ
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What do you bid now?
 A.—This time you have a double stopper in the enemy suit, tenace positions, a weak four-card major and softer values. One no trump looks more promising on this hand.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠9 ♥AJ63 ♦K987 ♣Q1032
 The bidding has proceeded:
 East South West North
 2 ♣ * ?
 *weak
 What action do you take?
 A.—You have the perfect distribution for a takeout double, but you are not strong enough to act at the two-level—especially at this vulnerability. Pass to see how the auction develops. Remember, partner is still free to act.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠9 ♥AJ63 ♦K987 ♣Q1032
 This time your right-hand opponent opens one spade. What action do you take?
 A.—While you are a bit light for any action in terms of high cards, you compensate for that with perfect distribution. A takeout double stands out at any vulnerability.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK9852 ♥AQ73 ♦83 ♣8
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—The temptation to rebid your six-card spade suit is great, but that could result in losing a possible 4-4 heart fit. Bid two hearts. If partner does anything but raise hearts, you can rebid your spades to complete the picture of your distribution.

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Since the hand is a partial misfit, treat it as a minimum opening bid. In that case, you should rebid your six-card major. Bid two hearts. Depending on partner's next action, you can show your diamonds later.

Randy Travis Top Finalists For Country Music Awards

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Randy Travis, boosted by his No. 1 record, "Forever and Ever, Amen," could be the big winner tonight at the 21st annual Country Music Association awards show.

He is a finalist in five categories when the awards are announced during a CBS-TV special from 9:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. EDT. Kenny Rogers will be the host of the show at the Grand Ole Opry House.

Travis is a finalist for entertainer of the year, top male vocalist, No. 1 single for "Forever and Ever, Amen," album of the year for "Always and Forever" and video of the year for "Forever and Ever, Amen."

Other finalists for entertainer of the year, the top award, are Reba McEntire, George Strait, the mother-daughter duo the Judds and Hank Williams Jr.

Miss McEntire, voted top entertainer last year, seeks to join Alabama and Barbara Mandrell as the only acts to have won the honor more than once.

Joining her as finalists for top female vocalist are Rosanne Cash, Emmylou Harris, Kathy Mattea and Dolly Parton. Miss McEntire seeks to become the first person ever to be voted No. 1 female vocalist four straight years.

Travis' competitors for male vocalist of the year are Strait, Williams, George Jones and Ricky Skaggs. Strait has won the award the last two years.

Miss McEntire and Strait received four nominations each. Miss McEntire also is a finalist for video of the year and album of the year, both for "What Am I Gonna Do About You." Strait completed his categories with nominations for album of the year for "Ocean Front Property" and No. 1 single for "All My Ex's Live in Texas."

Winners will be announced in 11 categories. A new member of the Country Music Hall of Fame will also be named at the ceremonies.

Finalists and winners are chosen by the 7,500 members of the CMA. The association is composed of singers, songwriters, musicians, disc jockeys and others in country music.

Byrnes Back In Wheelchair As Lifeguard In 'Wiseguy'

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Jim Byrnes landed the intriguing role of The Lifeguard on CBS' new series "Wiseguy," it was, he said, "the one time in my life I was at the right place at the right time."

Byrnes was at the wrong place at the wrong time 15 years ago, helping somebody push a stalled truck on a rain-slicked highway at night. A car slammed into him, pinning him. He lost both legs.

"By the time they had extracted me from the wreckage, it was damn near 45 minutes, and I had practically bled to death. I was runnin' on E," Byrnes said in a telephone interview from his home in Vancouver, British Columbia. "Next thing I remember was waking up, and this doctor was saying, 'You've been in a very serious accident.'"

"You're so high on drugs and stuff at the time they tell you this, it's kind of like a dream. But you wake up so many times over the next few days, and your legs are gone, you start realizing, hey, they ain't kiddin'."

He said he eventually decided he was just lucky to be alive and that he still had his music, the rhythm and blues he'd grown up with in St. Louis and turned into a livelihood in Canada.

"I told myself, there's absolutely nothing I can do about this, no matter how many tears I cry, it is not going to change fact that I lost my legs, so let's get on with it."

He went home to St. Louis after the accident, but missed friends in Vancouver and moved back in 1978. His band plays clubs around the Pacific Northwest and western Canada. Byrnes has written and performed music for films, including a song featured in the NBC movie "Hands of a Stranger."

He had worked as a professional actor as a youngster and decided to take it up again because of the increasing amount of television and film production in Vancouver in recent years.

Among the producers moving to Vancouver for budget reasons was Stephen J. Cannell, creator of such television shows as "Rockford Files" and "The A-Team" and executive producer of "Wiseguy," a taut crime drama about an undercover agent working deep inside the mob.

The above-average writing and interesting cast of characters has attracted a respectable viewership, despite the show's Thursday night competition from NBC's high-rated comedies.

The Lifeguard is a communications wizard who keeps tabs from a high-tech command post on undercover cop Vinnie Terranova, played by Ken Wahl.

Cannell had written The Lifeguard as a paraplegic, but Byrnes walked into the interview on the prostheses he has used since shortly after his accident. He had to re-learn the frustrations of a wheelchair for the role.

"When the casting director brought me this part, it was just this guy is a longhair in a wheelchair. That was pretty much it," Byrnes said. "I had taken the whole month of January off last year and had gone down to Mexico and let my hair grow and my beard grow, so when I came in, these guys looked at each other and said, 'Hey, this is the guy from the script!'"

Byrnes thinks The Lifeguard considers Vinnie his alter ego, a guy out there laying it on the line the way The Lifeguard would if he could.

As the season progresses, Byrnes said, viewers will learn more about The Lifeguard and see him outside the communications room. He hopes the show will make a subtle statement about attitudes toward the handicapped.

Madlyn Rhue Rediscovered In 'Knights'

WASHINGTON (AP) — When actress Madlyn Rhue got the part of Annie, a ballistics expert who gets around in a wheelchair on CBS' "Houston Knights," she placed a full-page ad in Variety, headlined, "See the new Madlyn Rhue."

After the first show aired, a friend who had seen the ad called perplexed and asked if she had done something with her eyes.

"She didn't know it was the chair," said Miss Rhue, who learned 10 years ago that she had the degenerative disease multiple sclerosis, but kept it secret until three years ago when she couldn't get around anymore without the wheelchair.

Until "Houston Knights," a midseason replacement last season, she had only three parts since then, one with only one line.

"I thought my career was over," she said in an interview in Washington where she was assisting the National Multiple Sclerosis Society with a campaign against federal budget cuts for medical research.

"They wanted to help me," she said of her friends in show business. "But they were offering me 'poor Madlyn' roles."

"I haven't worked 30 years as an actress to do one line just because my left leg is a little funny," she said.

Multiple sclerosis is a chronic disease of the nervous system that affects its victims in different ways and can go into long periods of remission, but has no known cure.

In the first few years, the symptoms came and went, enabling Rhue to conceal the disease. Now her left leg is numb and her feet are swollen. But she can still stand and says she could even do a slow dance onscreen with a strong actor she trusted.

Miss Rhue views her role in "Houston Knights" as a rediscovery, but jokes, "I get rediscovered about very seven years."

She credits the show's executive producer Jay Bernstein with providing the opportunity to appear in a network show and said letters from handicapped people who like the Annie character have helped clinch her place in the series.

The show has never explained why Annie needs the wheelchair, and Miss Rhue wouldn't mind keeping it that way.

"I don't want to do a story about a handicapped person," she said.

But she doesn't have any problem incorporating the wheelchair into the action or making joking references to her handicap. She said that some of her own light-hearted, off-camera remarks about her condition have come back as lines in her script.

"I think my role now is to be as good as I can in the part and get other parts in other films and lead the parade," she said. "I think I am supposed to do something about the handicapped people of the world."

Fox Tries Harder

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael J. Fox, the Emmy-winning star of "Family Ties," says he's trying to kick his two-pack-a-day cigarette habit.

"Eliminating this thing can save your life," said Fox, who has enrolled in a stop-smoking program.

The Oct. 19 issue of People magazine reports that Fox hasn't stopped smoking completely yet and was seen recently smoking while his girlfriend, actress Tracy Pollan, shopped in New York City.

Fox cited the recent death of smoker Bob Fosse, the choreographer and director, at age 60, saying "If I keep smoking that's how long I'll live."
