Six Charged In Racing Deaths

FARMVILLE — Six people have been charged with speed competition on a public highway near Farmville on Sept. 30 which led to the deaths of two people.

Arrested as they left work at Collins and Aikman textile plant Tuesday were Joshua Artis, 22, of Route 1, Snow Hill; Melvin J. Sutton, 24, of 112 Midget Lane, Greenville; Paul Streeter, 20, of 131 Catawba St., Greenville; Wheeler Davis, 18, of Grifton, and Randy Earl Edwards, 21, of 206 Trey Drive, Greenville. Their names, addresses and ages were obtained from the Pitt County Superior Court Clerk of Court's office. The sixth name and address was not available.

All were charged with "speed competition" and Paul Streeter was also charged with driving while his license was revoked.

Highway Patrolman Coy Taylor, the investigating officer, was assisted by other troopers and Pitt County sheriff's officers in making the arrests and confiscating vehicles owned by the men.

The six reportedly were engaged in prearranged drag racing with Jeffrey Collins Johnson, 24, a Farmville area man who died Oct. 5 of injuries sustained in the early morning accident, the Highway Patrol said today. The accident occurred at 7:50 a.m. just east of Farmville on the Eastern Loop Bypass of the town. Wesley Mitchell Taft, 52, a Farmville area woman, died at the scene of the accident. Her car was struck by Johnson's when it went out of control on wet pavement, the patrol said.

Witnesses said a one-mile "straight stretch" of the highway had been marked with white lines at either end.

Asked if prearranged drag racing on public highways is unusual, Capt. W.A. Ballard of the Greenville Highway Patrol office said, "Yes, it's very unusual. We occasionally learn that two guys sitting around a store start talking about whose car is the fastest and go out somewhere and try them out. But we haven't had prearranged racing like this in many years in this area, to my knowledge."

Aycock Jr. High School lunchroom as part of the National School Lunch Week observance this week. ## Educator Stresses New Ideas

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Focusing on students who have been labeled "the high risk group," as well as the need for an overall rethinking in education processes, Dr. Dudley Flood on Tuesday night emphasized that "every child can learn and we must consider unacceptable the idea that any child cannot succeed."

Flood, associate state superintendent of public instruction, spoke at a meeting of Pitt County's public school Minority Task Force held at Greenville Middle School.

Several of the points he dealt with stressed the necessity for educators to make a turn-about in long established ideas, approaches to teaching, of looking seriously into the effects of the conditioning process students are subjected to at an early age.

Flood said there has long been the concept of "working down to the level of least expectation from students whose early environment has placed them in a situation of disadvantages."

"What we must remember is that all people are endowed with more capability than it takes to succeed," he said. "This capability to learn is not inherent, it begins with a child's environment, and easily leads to a can or can't possibility syndrome."

Accepting and continuing this old precept, Flood said, results in "the dissipation of capability. All children have real capabilities, but it is up to the teacher to help each child."

One of the current viewpoints in education that Flood struck out against most strongly is that of maintaining a traditional culture.

"I've often heard good-intentioned people talk about maintaining the culture of certain students, particularly blacks. I'm often faced with

Iranian Gunboat Launches Attack On Empty Tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iranian gunboat raked a Kuwaiti-bound tanker with machine-gun fire early today in Iran's second attack in three days on commercial vessels in the Persian Gulf, salvage executives said.

Iraq, meanwhile, renewed a pledge to punish Iran for a missile attack that killed more than two dozen schoolchildren and injured scores of others in the Iraqi capital.

The U.S. Navy was reported getting ready to repatriate four wounded Iranian survivors and two bodies picked up after a U.S.-Iranian clash in the northern gulf six days ago. Oman was to act as mediator.

Three U.S. Navy minesweepers and an accompanying support ship entered the Suez Canal today en route to the Persian Gulf, canal authorities in Egypt said. They will be joining a large foreign naval presence already in the gulf to protect shipping from the 7-year-long war between Iran and Iraq.

The salvage executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the 84,631-ton Atlantic Peace, registered in Liberia, was attacked off the southern gulf port of Dubai in the same area where the Saudi Arabian tanker Petroship B was sprayed with machine-gun fire Monday. The tanker, owned by the Hong Kong-based Island Navigation Corp., was sailing empty to Kuwait.

The executives quoted the captain

Jones Backs Gulf Fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top Democrat and Republican on a House committee are supporting a move to impose fees on oil tankers receiving U.S. escorts and other military support in the Persian Gulf, aides say.

The House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, searching for new money-saving methods, was likely to vote on the user fee proposal today, aides said.

The "Navigation Enhancement User Fee Act of 1987," which would raise an estimated $95 million annually by charging at least $250,000 per voyage through the war-torn gulf, is backed by Committee Chairman Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., and Rep. Robert W. Davis, R-Mich., the ranking GOP member.

"It has a lot of appeal to our members," said Davis aide Duncan Smith, adding that committee members were briefed privately on the proposal Tuesday. "Of those who were there, many of them liked it."

Sue Waldron, a spokeswoman for Jones, agreed that the measure was likely to be approved.

Vessels would be charged either $250,000 per voyage or the actual cost of the services, whichever is higher, Smith said.

A committee memo on the proposal said the voyage estimates are based on the number of Kuwaiti oil tankers now under U.S. flags and receiving armed escort, surveillance and mine-sweeping services from U.S. forces.

The House Budget Committee has asked the Merchant Marine Committee to find $94 million in savings for the fiscal 1988 budget, either through revenue raising, program cuts or a combination.

The Budget Committee suggested raising $50 million through Coast Guard user fees, but such fees imposed on recreational and commercial vessels have been soundly rejected by the Merchant Marine Committee.

Pitt Pupils Lag Behind Physically

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

There is good and bad news about the physical fitness of Pitt County students, said Bob Dailey, athletics, health, physical education and driver's education coordinator for the county's public schools.

"The bad news is right now we're not really in all that good shape," he said. The good news is, "we do have a program and we're trying to promote" physical fitness in the schools.

Evaluation of school children's fitness stems from a study conducted by the University of Michigan that shows children to be fatter and less in shape than their counterparts in 1975 and 1980.

According to the study, 40 percent of boys ages 6 through 12 cannot do more than one pull-up; the same is true for 70 percent of girls ages 6 through 17. One-third of the boys ages 6 through 12 and 50 percent of the girls cannot run a mile in less than 10 minutes, and 2 percent of the 18 million children taking the "President's Challenge," a series of exercises that measure strength, flexibility and endurance, performed well enough to qualify for the national award.

A 1985 report of North Carolina children says many students fall below the 25th percentile in youth fitness tests. For example, 58.2 percent of kindergarten through second grade students, 42.3 percent of third to fifth grade students, 37.5 percent of sixth through eighth grade students and 34.4 percent of the ninth grade students all fall below the 25th percentile.

The test used in Pitt County during the 1986-87 academic year was the Health Related Physical Fitness Test, which consist of distance run, sum of skinfold test, modified sit-ups and sit and reach tests.

In the distance run test, children run one mile or the nine-minute run is conducted. The distance measures maximal functional capacity and endurance of the cardiorespiratory system.

American, French Scientists Share Nobel Chemistry Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — American scientists Donald J. Cram and Charles J. Pedersen shared the Nobel Prize in chemistry today with French researcher Jean-Marie Lehn for work in the synthesis of molecules that can mimic important biological processes.

"It really shakes me up," Cram, a professor at the University of California at Los Angeles, told radio station KNX-AM in that city. "What I'm delighted about is that the two people with whom I'm sharing it are very fine people."

Earlier today, the physics prize went to Georg Bednorz of West Germany and K. Alex Mueller of Switzerland for discovery of new superconducting materials that may point the way to faster computers and bullet trains.

"It's a great day for me," a smiling Mueller, 60, told reporters in Naples, where he was participating in a physics symposium. He called Bednorz, 37, a "valuable young man, and half the credit for the research must go to him," the Italian AGI news agency reported.

The chemistry research by Cram, Pederson — who is retired and lives in New Jersey — and Lehn could be used to separate radioactive tissues from other tissues and for the purification of molecules, and may have future application in energy production.

Candidates Agree Unity Needed

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Candidates for the Pitt County Board of Education in Districts 1 and 5 agree a unified board and equity among schools are issues for the Nov. 3 election.

They met Tuesday night in a forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Greenville and Pitt County and the Citizens for Excellence and Equity in Education in Pitt County. Each candidate was allowed three minutes for an opening statement, and one minute to answer questions.

"A school system in itself must be a cooperative effort between board members, the community and parents," said Donovan Phillips of District 1, Seat A. He is running unopposed.

Phillips also said the school board must develop a "mindset that it's one school system," and he emphasized equitable distribution of funds and resources.

"Decisions should be based on (established) criteria," Frank Grooms of District 5, Seat A, said in his opening statement. The "decision-making process is wrong."

In addition to equality education, Grooms addressed teacher supplements, vocational education and the "high-risk" student in his statement.

Charles Ward of District 5, Seat A, addressed the racial makeup of the schools and high school dropouts.

George Williams of District 5, Seat B, stressed the necessity of a cohesive board and policy based on sound educational principles. He addressed budget needs and appropriations, equity in education and public input.

"I appreciate public scrutiny," he said. "I appreciate public interest" because it is more beneficial than apathy.

In addressing a question on developing and monitoring the school budget, Phillips said, "Every board member should have seminars and training on the budget. That's absolutely necessary in the beginning."

Theft Arrests

Greenville police arrested four people on theft charges Tuesday.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said Leslie Todd Ennis, 22, of 407 Paris Ave. was taken into custody about 1:25 p.m. on a charge of breaking, entering and larceny in connection with the theft of a video cassette recorder and three disc players from 412 Latham St. that was reported Sept. 30.

Officer D.C. Johnson said Donald James O'Brien, 37, of Tampa, Fla., was charged with shoplifting in connection with a 7:01 p.m. incident at Rose's at The Plaza.

Officer C.S. Candler said Isham Trotter Bagley, 18, of 345 Slay Dorm was arrested on a larceny charge about 7 p.m. in connection with an incident at the K mart store at Greenville Square Shopping Center, while Officer J.A. Bartlett said Michael Patrick Kehoe, 19, of 429 Aycock Dorm was arrested about 7:49 p.m. on a larceny charge in connection with an incident at K mart.

Morning Larceny

A theft at the Fresh Way Food Store on Memorial Drive was reported about 4:40 a.m. today.

Officer K.D. Lingerfelt said two rugs, valued at $30 each, were reported taken from the front of the store.

LATE CAMPOUT — With the coming of cool weather, the days are numbered for hammock-type weather in 1987. Dan Ballance of Rocky Mount recently enjoyed a hammock rest during a campout at the family campground at Medoc Mountain State Park near Hollister. Ballance, who said he and his family often spend an overnight or a weekend at the site, chose the hammock while his wife and young child rested inside the tent in the background. ## Neighborhood Meet

The Elmhurst-Englewood-Forest Hills Neighborhood Association will hold a covered dish supper Sunday at 6 p.m. in the fellowship hall of Our Redeemer Lutheran Church.

A business meeting will begin at 7 p.m. with a program on neighborhood safety awareness. For more information call Renee Willis at 355-7389 or Maggie Brown at 355-2194.

Shrinettes Gather

Arts Festival

The eighth annual Very Special Arts Festival will be held Thursday from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at Elm Street Park.

Activities begin with opening ceremonies featuring the J.H. Rose High School Jazz Band and the D.H. Conley High School ROTC.

The festival will feature music, dance, storytelling, face painting, clowning, puppetry and other art activities. Carol Shields, coordinator, said, "The objective of the festival is to recognize the creativity of every student and to give them an opportunity to experience the various facets of the arts."

The event is sponsored by the Pitt County schools, N.C. Department of Public Instruction, Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, Greenville Parks and Recreation Department and the Association for Retarded Citizens, Pitt County.

The concluding event will be a dance performance by an exceptional children's class, directed by Dr. Boni Boswell, and entertainment by Steve Myott and friends.

For more information, call Ms. Shields at 830-4244.

Teacher Seminar

Mary-Anne S. Brannon of Greenville, a teacher at W.H. Robinson and Chicod schools, and Rae G. Nobles of Stokes, a teacher at D.H. Conley High School, recently attended a seminar at the North Carolina Center for the Advancement of Teaching.

The seminar, "Challenge of the 20th Century," was coordinated by Anthony G. Rud Jr. and Shelley Olson, center fellows. The center, located on the Western Carolina University campus, provides public school teachers opportunities to study advanced topics in the sciences, arts and humanities.

Ms. Brannon has a bachelor's degree from East Carolina University, while Ms. Nobles has a bachelor's degree from Atlantic Christian College and a master's degree from East Carolina University.

Class Registration

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department announced that registration is open for painting and drawing classes.

Beginner classes are for kids between the ages of 8 and 14. Students will work with painting techniques in watercolor and tempra and drawing techniques in pencil, pastel and charcoal. Classes meet on Tuesdays from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. beginning Tuesday.

Intermediate painting and drawing is for youth who have previously enrolled in the beginning course. Youngsters ages 8 to 14 will work in more depth on painting and drawing techniques. Classes are Tuesdays from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Mixed media is for children 4 to 7 years old. Students will work the basic techniques of paint, crayons and paper. The class will meet on Tuesdays from 3 p.m. to 3:45 p.m.

Call 830-4542 to register.

Furniture, Electronic Gear Taken At Home

Ten thefts, including an estimated $900 worth of furniture and electronic equipment from an East Fifth Street home, were reported to Greenville police Tuesday.

Detective D.R. Best said a couch, love seat, patio table and a stereo system were taken from 1205 E. Fifth St. in a break-in reported at 9:47 a.m., while Officer K.L. Jones said a battery was taken from a truck at City Ice and Cab Co. on Albemarle Avenue in an incident reported at 7:14 a.m.

Officer L.R. Kepler said $21 in change was taken from Southern Tire Brokers at 801 E. Greenville Blvd. in a break-in reported at 7:41 a.m.

Officer T.E. According to Officer E.E. Laughinghouse, six rings — including a diamond and enerald ring and an East Carolina University class ring — with a total value of $720, were taken from an unknown location in an incident reported at 5:50 p.m.

Roast For Latham

Walter Latham, former principal of North Pitt High School, will be honored Monday with a community roast, sponsored by the Pitt County Educational Foundation Inc.

Ramon Latham of Bethel will serve as master of ceremonies for the 7 p.m. event in the school cafeteria. Others participating will be Reginald Gray, former Pitt County manager; Eugene James, Pitt County commissioner; Ernest McNair, assistant principal at North Pitt, and Katheryn Lewis, former Pitt County assistant superintendent of instruction.

Latham retired as principal of North Pitt in 1974, having served in that position since 1970. Prior to going to North Pitt, he was principal of Bethel High School for 26 years.

He graduated from Elon College and completed additional studies at East Carolina University where he received his master's degree in education and his principal's certificate.

Action Line Started

Texasgulf Chemicals announced that it has set up a 24-hour action line to field questions and comments about its Lee Creek phosphate operations.

According to Tom Regan Jr., vice president for production, the line was set up because of concern over such environmental matters as the water quality in the Pamlico River.

The toll-free number is 1-800-248-9992.

Crime Stoppers Telethon Coming

Pitt-Greenville Crime Stoppers will hold a telethon on Greenville cable channels 7 and 9 Saturday from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m. and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m.

The telethon will feature 38 music videos starring local Pitt County community leaders and citizens lipsyncing to songs. The videos will include East Carolina University football players performing "The Pirate Song," Greenville Mayor Les Garner with "The Sidestep," Bethel Mayor Frank Hemingway singing "Sixteen Tons," County Commission Chairman Charles McLawhorn singing "Mississippi Squirrel Revival," and Barry Gaskins and Walter Gaskins of the Pitt County schools with "Hip to be Square."

Viewers can call in and pledge $25 to have their favorite video replayed. For a $50 pledge, viewers will receive a copy of all 38 videos.

Broadcast live from the parking lot of the Greenville Cable office, the telethon will also feature performances by the Academy of Dance, Suzuki Talent Education violin students, the Green Grass Cloggers, and Atlantis.

The telethon is a joint effort of the Pitt-Greenville Crime Stoppers committee and the Safety committee of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

John Minges III, telethon chairman, says the goal of the telethon is not only to raise $50,000 for the Crime Stoppers program, but to increase public awareness of its growing success.

Tax-deductible contributions can be made to Crime Stoppers during the telethon by calling 756-5677.

To date, calls to Crime Stoppers have resulted in over 400 arrests, with over $1 million of narcotics and stolen property recovered.

GUC Board Approves Purchase Of Computer

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The purchase of a $528,742 computer system for the Greenville Utilities Commission was given final approval by GUC board members at a meeting Tuesday night.

The purchase of the system, from Digital Systems Inc. of Columbia, S.C., was approved after John Ferren, GUC's assistant general manager, reported that negotiations with Digital Systems had reduced the original bid of $533,974 by some $5,232.

The contract, to supply Degital Equipment Corp. hardware and Digital Systems software, also includes $48,384 for software and hardware maintenance and support over a three-year period.

The computer system will be installed early next year after renovation work on the second and third floors of the commission's office building at the intersection of Fifth and Washington streets is completed.

Roger Jones, GUC's director of electric systems, reported that load management operations during the month of September saved $150,829 in wholesale power costs.

The savings included $30,392 from operating radio-controlled switches on water heaters and $41,689 from Beat-the-Peak switches on central air conditioning units, as well at $73,625 through voltage adjustments. Other savings included $2,970 from operation of generators at GUC's water plant and $2,152 through operation of generators at Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co.

At the end of September, 8,564 Beat-the-Peak switches were in service on water heaters throughout GUC's system, while 8,819 switches were in service on central air conditioning units. The switches allow the GUC to reduce the demand for electricity by cutting off water heaters and air conditioning units during peak demand periods.

Since January 1985, GUC's load management program has saved more than $4.2 million in wholesale power costs.

Contracts were awarded for the purchase of: 75,000 feet of cable from Rigby Electgric Supply Co. for $46,650; 40,000 feet of cable from Rigby for $25,480; 15 padmount transformers from R.W. Chapman Co. for $22,395; 100 distribution transformers from Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. for $43,150; 100 distribution transformers from Westinghouse Electric for $51,700; four circuit breakers from Westernhouse Electric for $76,308; two fault interrupter switches from Hesco Inc. for $58,520; six shunt power capacitor banks from Eastern Electric Supply Inc. for $32,950 and 20 three pole group operated switches from Rigby for $30,760.

Other purchases approved were: nine half-ton pickup trucks from Service Sales Inc. for $80,190; a van-type truck from Service Sales for $11,120; a bucket truck from Utility Equipment Sales Inc. for $48,197 and a tree trimming bucket truck from Aerial Devices Inc. for $66,710.

Dr. William H. Green, president of Livingstone College and Hood Theological Seminary, Salisbury, will speak. A native of Richburg, S.C., he was educated in the Charlotte public schools. He earned a bachelor's degree from Johnson C. Smith University and a master's and doctorate degree from Michigan State University. He also is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Graduate School of Business-Young Executives Institute.

Alumni of Livingstone College and other black colleges and universities in the area are being invited to attend. For information call or notify Barbara Taft, Layman's Council secretary, 1919 Norcott Court, Greenville, 27834, (756-8875).

Regional Meetings

East Carolina University officials have scheduled a series of five regional meetings to seek support of an enrichment fund in the ECU School of Education.

The Ralph Brimley Enrichment Fund for Educational Administration and Supervision, is designed to foster improved preparation of educational administrators and leadership in the public schools of North Carolina and to provide scholarships for deserving graduate students with potential for distinctive service in the elementary and secondary schools.

The Brimley fund was established in 1986.

Chancellor Richard R. Eakin and School of Education leaders will attend the regional meetings. The schedule includes: Monday, Edenton, 7 p.m., Sound View Restaurant; Oct. 21, Rocky Mount, 7 p.m., Carleton House; Oct. 26, Kinston, 7 p.m., King's Restaurant; Oct. 28, Winston-Salem, 11:30 a.m., Western Steer, Stratford Road, and Nov. 9, Fayetteville, 7 p.m., Horne's Motor Lodge.

Award Endowed

Samuel J. Wornom III of Sanford and his wife have endowed one of the University Scholars Awards at East Carolina University.

The awards are endowed at $40,000 and through interest income provide full tuition and fees for a recipient's four years at ECU.

Wornom co-founded The Pantry Inc., a chain of 480 convenience stores employing 3,000 people in five states. He recently sold his interest in the company and founded Nouveau Investments Inc., an investment firm.

A 1965 ECU graduate, he is a member of the ECU Board of Trustees, the ECU Foundation Board of Directors and the Chancellor's Society. He has served on the Alumni Association Board of Directors and is a plank member and an endowment member of the Pirate Club. He received the ECU Outstanding Alumni Award in 1981 for his professional contributions to the business community.

Landscaping Help

The Eastern Pines Rescue Squad was one of 84 non-profit groups across the state to receive azaleas during the second annual Keep North Carolina Clean and Beautiful/ WRAL-TV Azalea Celebration.

Five thousand azaleas were grown from cuttings taken from the WRAL-TV Gardens in Raleigh.

The azalea celebration was administered by Keep North Carolina Clean and Beautiful, a non-profit beautification and environmental education organization chaired by Mrs. Dan K. Moore. More than 50,000 azaleas were requested by churches, schools, garden clubs and other non-profit groups.

In addition to the yearly celebration, an annual A.J. Fletcher Azalea Award will be given to the organization which exhibits the best maintenance program for its azaleas. The late A.J. Fletcher was founder and president of Capitol Broadcasting Co. and designed the WRAL-TV Gardens.

The Eastern Pines unit plans to use the azaleas to beautify the landscape around its new rescue building.

Progress Imperative

East Carolina University's graduation rate for football players recruited in 1981 was dismal. There is simply no other way to put it.

A report issued by the University of North Carolina system shows only one of 20 football players graduated by August, 1986. At 5 percent it was the lowest graduation rate in the system and it was a drastic drop from the 23 percent of the previous year.

"The overall picture is not a pretty one and ... it is not acceptable," said William A. Bloodworth, acting ECU vice chancellor for academic affairs. "We're hoping to make some improvements." With statistics like the ones above, stressing improvement is the only direction the school can go.

Bloodworth sees a better future and, indeed, had the statistic to show that the future is already here. He reported nine of 18 of last year's football seniors graduated which would make the current graduation rate 50 percent. In addition, six of last year's seniors are still in school. If they should all graduate the rate would be 83 percent. Bloodworth said new coaches and greater emphasis on student-athletes' academic needs brought about the improvement.

Like most things at ECU the growth of the football program has been explosive — to the point where now the top collegiate teams of the nation are scheduled to play ECU. Along the way emphasis on academics did not keep up. Now East Carolina must recognize that deficiency. While excellence in athletic competition is commendable, it must not come at the expense of poorly educated athletes. Most college football players will not make a living from the sport once their eligibility is completed. If the university values the time and effort these athletes have given it owes them an education that will prepare them for the rest of their lives.

Those later figures show that progress is being made in emphasizing academics for athletes. That should be continued so that in future years, when studies of the matter are done, ECU will lead the state's universities rather than bring up the rear.

Geography?

One might think the University of Arizona geographer who invited first year college students of 54 countries to draw a map of the world and label all countries from memory didn't have the remotest idea of what he was going to get.

They'd be wrong. It was part of an ongoing study.

T.F. Saarinen was looking for evidence supporting a theory that world problems grow from simplistic notions — that decisions are made on the basis of people's ideas about the world.

"If you don't have knowledge of the rest of the world, how are you going to make decisions?" he asks. Still, he did encounter the unexpected.

His biggest surprise was the perceived importance of Europe. Eighty percent placed Europe in the middle of their maps, and its relative size was exaggerated by many. He attributes this to the colonial legacy.

Maps from Hungary were said to be among the best.

"Postage-stamp" countries were frequently omitted, which, considering the time limitation, was not too surprising in our eyes but Saarinen opined otherwise. Africa, for example, was generally sketched smaller than it should be and there were lots of blank spaces where countries should have been.

Central America was another area of "blanks."

"Our mental images don't seem to have caught up with the reality of a world of free and independent nations", says the geographer.

Jokers got into the act, too.

One "world map" featured the Philippines surrounded by an unknown world wherein sea dragons lurked. Another put Australia at the top of the world. A few put lightning bolts over "trouble spots".

The project involves analyzing the maps and getting that data into a computer. Down the road probably is a book that would be available to geography teachers around the world.

One lesson the instigator proposes is for teachers to inform students that other nations "are not perverse or evil because they don't look at the world the way we do." If drawing a world map is a means ofaccomplishing that perspective, that approach should be encouraged.

Geography, meet political science.

Qualifying For President Character Test

'The president must be someone who does not commit adultery, tells funny jokes with great ease and knows how to display emotion without wetting the lectern.'

My fellow Americans, I have finally decided to toss my fedora, supple leather gloves, or any other item of my designer apparel, into the political ring. I have done so because I have a vast supply of the one commodity so essential to the leader of our democracy in these challenging and perilous times. I mean, of course, character.

In light of recent revelations, I have scrupulously examined my own character and found it unwanting to the last smidgeon of the final iota. So faultless is my character that I'm dazzled by its impeccability.

Let's get down to cases and define, once and for all, moral boundaries — what's in and what's out. Adultery is out; it's an anathema, an abysmal transgression. A chaste soul in a chaste body, I say.

I recently said no to Sebastian, after he had invited me to join him for a cruise on his boat, "The Banana Peel."

"Honey," I said, "I don't care how good the fishing is. But going out with you may be hazardous to my chances as a presidential candidate."

"But you're not running, are you?" asked Sebastian, incredulous but respectful.

"Who knows," said I. "As my grandmother used to say, 'if God wants it, a broomstick will shoot cannonballs.'"

As you see from such a quotation, I have no need to plagiarize. If my grandma said that a broomstick will shoot cannonballs, I shall stand proudly and admit that my grandma said it.

I don't have to take other people's words. I am so brimming with poetic inspiration that, on any day, I can create something from nothing.

I have no need to take from others — not me, the first Rubinow who ever went to the University of Hartford. Now, my father was a Rubinow who had gone to the University of Odessa; my brother was a Rubinow who had gone to the University of Lodz. But surviving persecutions and pogroms, I am the first Rubinow to go to the University of Hartford. And I don't care who quotes me on that.

I am humble and grateful for what this country has done for me. I shall accept into my campaign anyone who wants to contribute: a Pole with a petition, a Gypsy with a horse, a Greek bearing gifts. The more, the merrier, I say. It's a jungle out there, you know, and we shall be truly thankful for whatever you can contribute.

Money? Who said money? I didn't say anything about money. What I say is that man does not live on bread alone. A couple of eclairs or petits fours might come in handy, though. That's a joke, by the way. Did you know it was a joke? I'm very good at coining original jokes.

That brings me to the question of jokes. The ability to tell jokes is the second most important attribute of a president. (The first, of course, is character. Right?) Now, let me explain what is a joke and what isn't a joke. It's not a joke if you go to Poland and say in Poznan, for example, that the Soviets are better mechanics than the Americans in Detroit. Anyway, when I'm your president I pledge never to tell jokes in Poland. Who's looking for trouble, right?

But if you go to Japan, stand in the middle of the Mitsubishi factory and say that the Japanese are better mechanics than the Americans in Detroit — that's hilarious.

Another vital presidential quality is control. A president has to control his or her emotions — elementary, my dear Schroeder. In politics, there is a right way to weep and a wrong way to weep, taught in Political Weeping 101 at the University of Maine.

Basically, the human animal has three ways of unloading the lachrymal duct. One way is loud sobbing accompanied by visible, wet tears. The second is a wide-eyed expression, moist but not wet, and a quivering but stiff upper lip — giving the impression that one is fighting back tears by a supreme act of will. The third is an emotionless, expressionless demeanor; nothing's moist, nothing quivers.

Obviously, the first and the third are out. As always in politics, the middle of the road works best. The second option shows that the leader's heart is in the right place. If he or she were not a leader, there would be sobbing.

To recapitulate: The president must be someone who does not commit adultery, tells funny jokes with great ease and knows how to display emotion without wetting the lectern.

That's moi. I'm faithful to my husband, I tell a great joke, and I cry only if you shove an onion in my face. For all these reasons I declare with confidence that my time has come.

Doubting The SAT Trends

Black gains on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, announced recently at a Manhattan news conference, must have shaken any lingering assumptions that scores for minority students demonstrate lack of intelligence.

Still, such assumptions go deep. They continue to be supported in the work of a few prominent researchers such as the University of California's Arthur Jensen, and their intellectual underpinnings go back to the very beginning of mass testing in this country 70 years ago.

That was at the height of World War I, when a group of research psychologists working for the U.S. Army began testing new recruits. Even soldiers who couldn't read were handed pencils and asked to complete simple drawings. An example, cited by Harvard's Stephen Gould in his classic critique of testing, "The Mismeasure of Man," was an illustration of a tennis game played without a net.

Tennis might have been considered inappropriate for young recruits who might never have watched a match. But test administrators still pointed to low scores, especially among blacks, as evidence of inferior brainpower. One of those officials, Carl Brigham, wrote a book predicting that the nation's intellectual capacity faced imminent decline, "owing to the presence here of the Negro."

After the war, Brigham returned to civilian pursuits and became better known as the developer of an exam for college applicants. It was called the Scholastic Aptitude Test, or SAT.

Now results from the SAT reveal a narrowing of differences between blacks and whites that Brigham could scarcely have imagined, though he eventually recanted many of the views expressed in his book. Since 1976, combined verbal and math scores for black students have climbed from an average 686 to 728, out of a possible 1,600. Meanwhile, white scores have fallen from 944 to 936. The number of blacks performing in the superior range — for example, above the 600 level in mathematics — also have risen sharply.

Why have these gains occurred? The test's sponsoring agency, the College Board of Manhattan, tried to explain much of the improvement by saying black teen-agers were taking more academic courses.

But that answer wasn't completely satisfying. The College Board's own figures revealed, for example, that the percentage of blacks taking at least four years of English actually had declined slightly. Yet black scores had risen almost as much in the verbal area as in math.

A better answer may have been economic: Affluent students generally do better on the SAT than impoverished ones. Perhaps blacks' scores were going up because their family incomes and social opportunities were rising.

While these possibilities cannot be proven, there is indirect evidence in their support. College Board figures indicate, for example, that most poor students taking the SAT are female, and that verbal scores for the poorest students are more than 100 points below those of the richest.

That is to be expected, because so many SAT questions draw upon knowledge gained through social experience rather than through schooling. Consider a recent analogy question included on an SAT sample sheet:

SONG: REPERTOIRE:: (A) score; melody (B) instrument: artist (C) solo: chorus (D) benediction: church (E) suit: wardrobe

The best answer, according to College Board is (E) because several suits make up a wardrobe in the same way that several songs make up a repertoire. The answer, while true, might make students wonder if scores depended so much on their coursework as on the content of their closets.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I am writing to voice my opposition to the proposed airline smoking ban on flights of two hours or less. This ban would include 80 percent of all domestic flights.

For several years, airline regulations have provided sections for smokers and nonsmokers, and this policy has worked well. In fact, a recent poll by the Airline Pilots Association showed that 87 percent of the public endorses the current policy.

People are expressing more concerns about flying today. However, the overwhelming concerns are about overcrowded skies, overworked controllers and unnecessary delays. I believe that these are the issues that Congress ought to be addressing and leave the current policy of providing smoking and nonsmoking sections as they are now.

This policy works for smokers and nonsmokers and there is no need for any change.

Strength For Today

A puny child was brought to a London hospital for treatment. Upon his arrival, the nurse offered him a glass of milk. The youngster was about to drink when he looked up at the nurse and said, "How deep may I drink, Miss?"

All over the world, people have to answer the question, "How deep may I drink?" This is not because there is not enough to go around, but because the human race with all its boastful wisdom cannot arrange an adequate distribution of life's benefits.

Communism, a proposed solution to the problem, is not the answer. People are prevented from drinking deeply of the benefits of life not because of false men and women all over the world keeping others from the their rightful share of life's benefits. The answer to the problem will not be found in the writings of Karl Marx, but in the pages of the New Testament.

Ready To Shout

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grown men and women are shouting at President Reagan at the top of their lungs. They do it for a living.

Demonstrators? No, reporters.

The good-natured chief executive gets the official closing, "Thank you, Mr. President," from a wire service correspondent, but before he can retreat out the door of the East Room at the White House, the reporters are on their feet, shouting, badgering Reagan for one last word.

It even takes place at ceremonies.

He may enter the Rose Garden or the Roosevelt Room to the strains of "Ruffles and Flourishes," but he often beats a retreat to a chorus of questions from the folks behind the ropes with the cameras and boom microphones.

Last week, an educator made headlines when he upbraided the media for shouting questions about the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Bork to Reagan as he left a Rose Garden ceremony for outstanding schools.

"You're taking away from the joy of the whole occasion for us," said John Vessak, an eighth-grade history teacher from North Salem, N.Y.

There was even less decorum last month when Reagan came to the White House briefing room to announce a breakthrough on arms talks with the Soviets. At the end of Reagan's statement, pure cacophany erupted as several basso profundo types vied at once to beard him.

The reporters themselves wince at the negative image created by such scenes, beamed into millions of American living rooms.

But they say the blame rests with Reagan and his aides, who have sharply curtailed opportunities for the press corps to engage the president under more civil circumstances.

George E. Reedy, press secretary to Lyndon B. Johnson in 1964-65 and now Lucius W. Nieman Professor of Journalism at Marquette University, said, "I very definitely put the blame on the White House."

The press corps acts the way it does because "all the regular channels of access to the president have been cut off," Reedy said.

But Stephen Hess, a Brookings Institution senior fellow who has written extensively on media-government relations, said that "doesn't excuse the behavior of the reporters" who act "like unruly children."

"There's no question that the rudeness we tend to see on television is very unappealing to the American public," Hess said.

The problem, Hess said, is largely confined to the White House, where "television sets the tone. When people talk about the Washington press corps rudeness, they're really just talking about the White House press corps."

Lou Cannon, White House correspondent for The Washington Post, said, "We print journalists rely on these TV shouters. It's easy for us to stand back and criticize, but the fact is sometimes that's the only Reagan comment we get."

"This is a president who makes a deliberate practice of communicating through snippets, one- or two-minute photo opportunities, who doesn't hold news conferences, as almost all his predecessors in the modern era did," Cannon said.

"If he were readily available, there wouldn't be a need to shout questions," he said.

Terence Hunt, White House correspondent for The Associated Press, said, "I don't think anybody likes shouting at the president. What we would like is more opportunities to talk with him than we now have."

Reagan, enveloped by controversy over the Iran-Contra scandal, has held only two news conferences this year and a total of 40 in 80 months. The last was in Venice at the end of the economic summit in June.

"When the news is bad, they don't want him out there," said Bill Plante, senior White House correspondent for CBS News. "He's not comfortable with news conferences. He's much more comfortable delivering quips and one-liners."

Plante said he discovered covering candidate Reagan in 1976 and 1980 that he "couldn't walk by a question and he was a little hard of hearing." That meant reporters had to speak up, or, "if he was a little distance away, you had to shout."

Reagan's propensity to fire off a quick answer keeps the press corps primed to keep peppering him with questions.

Sam Donaldson of ABC News, who has gained fame as a fierce questioner in 10 years on the White House beat, said, "The president wants to answer questions. He always begins by saying, 'Well, I don't have time for any questions, I'll take no questions.' And then he proceeds to answer questions."

Donaldson said Reagan is not "a 5-year-old who ... must be sequestered and guarded and protected from the awful bully boys of the press."

Donaldson added, "People see us in the news-gathering process. It is disorderly. They somehow seem to believe that the press ... should conduct itself as if at a ladies' afternoon cotillion on Sunday, in its best clothes, and with its most polite manners. That's not the way the news business works."

Road Plans Resurrected

RALEIGH (AP) — Faced with an angry backlash from Democratic lawmakers, state Department of Transportation officials are scurrying to keep alive 15 urban road projects they previously said did not qualify for state funding.

"I think so, in whole or in part," Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington said Tuesday, when asked whether the projects are likely to be financed by the state. "It's a matter of sitting down and trying to work that out."

Harrington said DOT staff members were being dispatched this week for discussions with city officials in Gastonia and Charlotte, where three projects had been shelved.

The three projects were among 15, totaling $50 million, that Harrington earlier said "do not meet the criteria established by the new law" that the General Assembly enacted in July.

The complex highway law was aimed primarily at limiting financial contributions by cities to state highway projects. In a Sept. 28 letter to city officials affected by the new law, Harrington said it also "redefines the limits of the state's responsibility for highway projects within corporate limits ..."

He cited a provision defining state roads as those that move traffic through and beyond cities and to major industries, businesses, governments and institutions within cities.

EXCLUDED — Leon Smith of Goldsboro, a candidate for president of the State Baptist Convention, speaks out Tuesday against a decision by trustees of the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary to close their meeting to non-members. # Fisheries Chairman Told To Step Down

RALEIGH (AP) — A marine scientist who has served as chairman of the state Marine Fisheries Commission for the last three years is being replaced by a Morehead City attorney and former state Republican Party chairman, state officials have confirmed.

John Costelow, director of the Duke University Marine Lab in Beaufort, said Tuesday administration officials asked him to continue serving on the commission, but not as chairman. He said he turned them down, in part, because of concern that Gov. Jim Martin's new appointments would politicize the commission.

"I want a commission that represents expertise," said Costelow, who is a Republican. "I don't care what a person's political affiliation is.

"I understand that there has to be some balance, but when political experience becomes more important than other factors, then the governor has gone too far," he said.

Costelow will be replaced by Tommy Bennett, a spokesman for the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development said.

Costelow said he is not familiar with Bennett's experience in the marine fisheries field.

"I don't want to prejudge him, but I would assume he's not very oriented toward marine fisheries," he said.

Bennett, who will fill one of the three slots on the commission reserved for sports fishermen, said Tuesday he has been interested in marine fishing issues since he served in the Legislature in the 1960s.

As a legislator, he said, he introduced a bill that changed the focus of the state Marine Fisheries Division from law enforcement to research and marketing. Later, he was chairman of the Marine Science Council, an advisory board that oversees the state's aquariums and offshore oil and gas leasing.

"I have as much interest and general concern for commercial fishing as anyone in this state," he said. "I don't see any requirement that someone needs to be a scientist to do the job."

Bennett, who represented the developer of a Carteret County marina that environmentalists opposed, said his legal work would not bias his views on the commission.

"I wouldn't take it if I didn't think I would be fair," he said.

The commission, whose 15 members are appointed by the governor, sets policies that regulate coastal sports and commercial fishing. Within state government, the commission is the primary advocate for North Carolina's $2-billion-a-year fishing industry.

The change in chairmen is part of a reorganization plan the General Assembly approved last summer. Under the plan, all commission members' terms expired Oct. 1.

Conservatives Overpower Board Proceedings At Baptist Seminary

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — Conservative trustees at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary won a daylong series of clashes with moderates, seizing control of a panel that oversees the hiring of professors and forcing a closed-door meeting with the seminary president over his objections.

"I am viscerally opposed to this kind of a closed meeting," President W. Randall Lolley said Tuesday before a 14-10 vote to meet in secret. "If you vote for a closed session, I'll obey — I won't be fired for insubordination — but we don't need to go behind closed doors to do God's work."

Lolley said secrecy would exacerbate the tension between the students and faculty and the conservatives. "The trust level is zilch. There are people on campus who don't trust you. You don't trust them."

The Rev. James R. DeLoach, a conservative from Houston elected vice president of the board Monday, proposed the private meeting. He said the board needed to discuss Lolley's role and relationship with the board.

"The Bible ... talks about if you have something to bring up with your brother to go to him in private," said William D. Delahoyde, a Raleigh conservative. He said reporters might "distort the words we say" if allowed to hear.

William R. Lonis, a Morrison, Colo., conservative, said he did not want "boos and hollering" from the students, faculty and alumni who packed the meeting and have voiced staunch opposition to the fundamentalists.

A group of students at first refused to leave, then did so at Lolley's urging. About two dozen stood outside the room singing hymns until the doors were reopened.

No action was taken in the one-hour closed meeting, Lolley said afterward, and he and the trustees refused to say what was discussed.

The conservatives brushed aside protests of outnumbered moderates on the board, repeatedly cast votes solidifying their control over the 37-year-old seminary with rapidity that stunned the opposition.

"They are prepared to take over," Richard Hester, a professor who has led faculty resistance to the fundamentalists, said.

E. Leon Smith, a moderate pastor from Goldsboro who is seeking the presidency of the Baptist State Convention, described the conservatives' actions as "religious persecution."

"It looks like the forces of darkness are winning," Smith said. "We may suffer for a period of time. But trustees cannot prevent truth being taught, either by the seminary or among members of a Baptist congregation. ... The true Baptist spirit will prevail."

On the second day of a crucial, semi-annual meeting, the board's conservative majority voted to:

— Replace committee assignments proposed by the outgoing Nominating Committee with an alternate list that gives conservatives a 4-1 majority on the powerful Instructional Committee. That committee has a key role in hiring faculty.

— Adjust the policy on selecting new faculty in a manner that gives the president more influence and the faculty less. Some moderates have voiced fear the board will replace Lolley, which conservatives strongly deny.

Colleges' Racial Progress Falls Short

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina's community college system has failed to meet federal desegregation goals established in 1978, but has demonstrated "varying degrees of progress" in achieving certain affirmative action goals, U.S. officials have found.

According to reports released this month, the 58-campus system has failed to live up to a commitment to boost the number of blacks enrolled in programs leading to transfers to four-year colleges.

At the same time, however, systemwide enrollment of blacks in all programs reached targeu levels for most of the current decade, slipping somewhat in 1985.

Officials for the U.S. Department of Education pointed to improvements in course completion rates for blacks, hiring of new black faculty members and boosting black membership on governing boards for community and technical colleges in North Carolina.

In most cases, however, the advances fell below goals set out in the desegregation plan under review by the department's Office of Civil Rights.

"We obviously have got to do a better job," Bob Scott, president of the community college system, told the News and Observer of Raleigh Tuesday. Scott said it was uncertain what action civil rights authorities might take after they review the state's effort.

"A lot is going to hinge on whether we have made a good-faith effort" in the eyes of the officials, said Scott, a former governor.

The state community college system is among higher education systems in 10 states, most of them in the South, where desegregation plans have lapsed but are under review by the civil-rights office. The office is expected to rule later this year on the states' performance.

The U.S. House Government Operations Committee earlier this month issued a report sharply critical of the U.S. Justice Department's Office of Civil Rights' vigor in enforcing desegregation plans.

The committee based much of its criticism on a report on North Carolina's community college plan prepared by the Department of Education regional office in Atlanta.

The reported said only about $700,000 has been spent on efforts to boost black enrollment in the college transfer programs, even though the system committed itself to seek $12 million from the General Assembly for recruitment efforts.

The report said there were 1,044 blacks in college transfer programs in 1978, when the plan took effect. By 1985, the report said, that number fell to 799, which put the state system 1,442 students short of the goal set in 1978.

IN THE STATE

Sentenced

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro real estate agent who admitted to stealing more than $125,000 worth of diamonds from more than a dozen jewelers was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

William Randall Shelton pleaded in Guilford County Superior Court to 28 thefts from July 1986 to February 1987. In each case, Shelton took real diamonds from jewelry stores and replaced them with inexpensive, look-alike stones made of cubic zirconia.

In addition to the 20-year active sentence, Superior Court Judge Donald W. Stephens of Raleigh ordered Shelton to pay $53,145 to jewelers who did not get their diamonds back.

A suspended 10-year sentence could be activated if he fails to pay the restitution.

Waste Citation

RALEIGH (AP) — A state environmental agency has cited an electronics research company for leaving 14 drums of hazardous waste at its former laboratory site in east Durham, officials said.

The North Carolina Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch notified GEL Inc. that it would face fines up to $10,000 a day unless the company removed and properly disposed of the chemicals by Nov. 15, said Stephen T. Reid, spokesman for the branch.

Investigators found 31 drums at the plant site, Reid said, but 17 were empty. The remaining drums contained varying amounts of iron chloride, a chemical classified as a hazardous waste.

Parks Study

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Researchers at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill want to know more about what makes a research park successful.

To find out, a UNC-CH team will use a $93,000 grant from the Ford Foundation for a study focusing on five successful research parks, including North Carolina's Research Triangle Park.

Labor Surplus

ATLANTA (AP) — Twelve North Carolina civil jurisdictions have been classified as "labor-surplus areas" because of high unemployment, Labor Secretary William Brock said Tuesday.

The new labor-surplus area listing, effective Oct. 1, will remain in effect until Sept. 30, 1988.

Employers in those areas are eligible for preference in obtaining federal procurement contracts so that the government's procurement dollars are directed into those areas where people are in the most severe economic need.

The new listing reflects the use of the new 8.6 percent qualifying unemployment rate, a result of improvement in the U.S. economy that allowed the department to reduce the qualifying unemployment rate from 9.0 percent last fiscal year.

The jurisdictions classified as labor-suplus areas are: Bladen County, Brunswick County, Cherokee County, Columbus County, Graham County, Hyde County, McDowell County, Robeson County, Sampson County, Swain County, Tyrrell Count and the city of Wilson in Wilson County.

Falsified Resume

RALEIGH (AP) — Chrystal Harris Stowe, public information officer for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, will leave her $39,900-a-year job Thursday, after the discovery that she had falsified her job application.

Mrs. Stowe, a former reporter for WRAL-TV in Raleigh and anchor announcer for WBTV in Charlotte, claimed on the 1985 application that she had received a bachelor's degree in political science from North Carolina State University that she did not have.

Although Mrs. Stowe quit her job at the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, she has a new one as special assistant to Grace Rohrer, who is director of the Division of Policy and Planning in the Department of Administration and a special assistant to Gov. Jim Martin for strategic planning and policy development.

Board Members Meet Privately

RALEIGH (AP) — Ten of 17 members of the state Environmental Management Commission met privately to discussed proposed stormwater regulations and potential conflicts of interest the day before the commission acted on the regulations, a state official say.

But S. Thomas Rhodes, secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said the closed-door meeting did not violate the Open Meetings Law because it was an informal gathering with no votes taken.

"All of the members who were present had either been appointed or reappointed by Gov. Martin," said Rhodes, who attended the Oct. 7 meeting, along with NRCD staff members. "That was one of the reasons, to get all of the people who had been appointed by the governor — just to get familiar with one another."

Rhodes cited a provision of the Open Meetings Law that says a social meeting or "gathering together of the members of a public body does not constitute an official meeting unless called or held to evade the spirit or purpose of this Article."

Jackson Leads Striking S.C. Workers On March

By TRIP DuBARD
Associated Press Writer

NEWBERRY, S.C. (AP) — An era of economic violence comparable to the racial violence of past decades is upon the nation, the Rev. Jesse Jackson told striking employees of a nearby plywood mill.

Jackson, front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination and a native of nearby Greenville, blamed what he said was President Ronald Reagan's failure to enforce labor laws.

As a result of that inaction, the National Labor Relations Board has given "legitimacy to scabs" and "literally legalized union-busting," Jackson said Tuesday.

Jackson also spoke to high school students in Spartanburg, college students in Columbia and longshoremen in Charleston as he began a Southern campaign swing.

Jackson formally announced his candidacy for the presidency in a rally Saturday in Raleigh, N.C.

About 200 striking workers from the nearby Champion International Corporation plant gathered to hear Jackson Tuesday. He spoke from a grassy hillside outside the mobile home that serves as temporary strike headquarters, before leading the marchers on about a two-mile walk to the factory's gate.

About 350 employees have been striking the plant since Sept. 25 over a wage and schedule dispute. Local union president Clifford L. White said negotiators have arranged a Thursday meeting between leaders of the two sides.

Company officials could not be reached for comment.

Jackson reminded the crowd of his days as a civil rights activist years ago, when he said the issue was racial violence.

"Today, the issue clearly is economic violence," he said.

He said the nation now has a strong anti-worker attitude, reinforced by the national policies pursued by the Reagan administration.

People not only expect a job, he said, but to get paid fair wages.

The issue is one of fairness, Jackson said, and crosses racial and employment lines to embrace workers in Newberry, family farmers, working mothers and displaced workers.

"My friends, it is time to stand up and fight for justice," he said. "This matter is not black or white. It's profit and loss."

"Unite in solidarity," Jackson said. "Fight with your votes. Fight with your unity."

Jackson also noted the number of Reagan officials leaving their jobs under clouds of suspected wrongdoing.

"This is the most corrupt administration with the greatest sleaze factor in American history," Jackson said.

As a security helicopter whirred nearby, Jackson also criticized Reagan's Persian Gulf tactics, saying the country now has a strong military but weak policies.

His administration's policy would be "fight, win, come home" Jackson said.

As he often does, Jackson organized a political altar call, urging unregistered voters in the crowd to come forward and pledge to enter the political process.

He compared the right to vote to the rod in a Biblical story of Moses parting the Red Sea.

"If you've got that voting rod and drop it, it will turn into a snake and go to Columbia or Washington and bite you," Jackson said.

Though the crowd was predominantly black, Jackson also received support from many white members of the union.

Paul White, 44, who had a Confederate flag tattooed on the back of his hand, handed his weathered cowboy hat to Jackson after the speech. Jackson jokingly put it on.

"You said something that I can associate with," White said as the two men shook hands.

RTI Receives Drug-Testing Grant

RALEIGH (AP) — Research Triangle Institute has been awarded an $800,000 federal contract to run a national certification program for laboratories that conduct drug testing.

The contract, awarded by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, calls for RTI to certify laboratories that meet certain standards for accuracy, scientific testing methods and personnel qualifications.

Called the National Laboratories' Certification Program, the project is voluntary and will not prevent any labs from doing business with corporations or employers who want to hire them to test employees. But it will give a seal of approval to those labs that meet certain quality standards.

The program is likely to have substantial impact, however, because the federal government has announced that it will not hire any laboratory to conduct testing for federal employees unless it has been certified. The government is one of the nation's biggest customers for drug-testing programs, which are conducted for large federal agencies such as the U.S. Bureau of Prisons and the U.S. Administrative Office of the Courts.

"This is basically the only government-recognized credential that there is," project leader Kenneth Davis said Tuesday. "It probably will create some pressure on the laboratories to become certified. It may become a standard in court proceedings that lawyers bring up."

NCAE To Study Teacher Supply

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Education officials say a combination of low salaries and tradition has kept most men out of elementary education, where 91 percent of the teachers are women.

"Elementary school teachers have the image of not only being a teacher, but a mother," says Stephen A. Thornton, a teacher at Parkland High School in Winston-Salem and chairman of a task force examining why so few men become elementary teachers.

The task force, formed by the North Carolina Association of Educators, also will look at the effect the male teacher shortage has on children.

"That was a main concern — not having a male role model in the elementary school, especially today with single-parent homes," Thornton said.

Nationally, 31 percent of the teachers are men. Fourteen percent of the elementary school and 50 percent of the secondary school teachers are men.

In North Carolina the figures are even lower. At the secondary level, 37 percent of the teachers are men, and overall 21 percent of them are men.

Indictments

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — An Outer Banks lawyer and a Virginia Beach, Va., developer have been indicted for allegedly selling essentially worthless deeds on time-share units at a Nags Head condominium complex.

Norman W. Shearin Jr. was indicted by the Dare County grand jury Monday with his client, developer Gerald J. Friedman, who built Ocean Villas I and II, and Friedman's wife, Nancy.

Prosecutors allege Ocean Villas buyers were given "instruments" similar to titles, but a large outstanding debt essentially made those titles worthless.

Shearin and the Friedmans were charged with malfeasance, failure to file a lien-free instrument and conspiracy to obtain property by false pretense. The felony charges carry penalties of up to 15 years in prison.

Friedman and his wife also are charged with six counts each of obtaining money by false pretense. Each felony count carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison.

Wind-Driven Tides Wash N.C. Beaches

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — A northeaster packing 30- to 40-mph winds hit the northern Outer Banks Tuesday, churning up 10- to 13-foot waves, halting many fishermen and causing minor beach erosion from Cape Hatteras to Virginia Beach, Va.

Minor erosion was reported in Rodanthe and Nags Head, where waves licked at the stairs of some beach cottages. A heavy surf turned away surfers and fishermen, and the National Weather Service said high waves and gale-force winds would continue to batter the upper Outer Banks into Thursday.

Deborah Ross of the U.S. Weather Station in Buxton said winds had blown sand onto N.C. Highway 12 in Rodanthe but there were no reports of ocean overwash. The weather service canceled a coastal flood watch late Tuesday.

Greg Loy of the Kill Devil Hills planning office said beach erosion was minimal.

"It's a bad northeaster all right — full blown," Loy said. "If these 30- to 40-mph winds were coming a little more eastern, we'd have had a lot more erosion, but there is no overwash — just a lot of trash cans blowing over."

Gary Ferguson with the Nags Head town manager's office said, "This storm's stronger than the average. There is some beach erosion — four to six feet has been taken, but that could be replaced naturally in a few days."

Although patches of rain fell off the coast, the threat of Tropical Storm Floyd diminished during the day as the former hurricane merged with a low-pressure system and weakened.

Rube Marquard of the New York Giants won 19 consecutive games in 1912 and finished with a 26-11 record for the season.

Floyd Hits Colder Air, Blows Out

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — As remnants of Hurricane Floyd blew out to sea, its heavy rainfall left South Florida with a flooded tomato crop and a replenished water supply, and its high seas scattered treasure on the beach.

Floyd, which whipped the Florida Keys and South Florida with 80-mph winds on Monday, was downgraded Tuesday, first to a tropical storm and later to an ordinary, unnamed storm by National Hurricane Center forecasters.

Forecasters said Floyd merged with a trough of low pressure and hit a northern cold front in the open Atlantic that kept it from becoming a major threat.

"A hurricane is run by a heat engine and when you put cold air into it, it causes the engine to sputter," forecaster Hal Gerrisch said.

Authorities on Tuesday blamed one death on Floyd, the drowning of a 23-year-old swimmer off Texas' South Padre Island. Officials said Floyd created a heavy tide that in turn led to a dangerous riptide, and the woman was caught in the undertow.

Farmers estimated as much as half of the $22.5 million South Florida's early winter tomato crop was flooded by the rains.

Storm-related rainfall Sunday and Monday totaled nearly seven inches in southern Dade County, said meteorologist Stan Right. By Monday evening, Naples on the Gulf Coast had recorded 5.2 inches in 24 hours, forecaster Mark Zimmer said.

Before the storm, Lake Okeechobee was more than a foot below normal. The 714 square-mile lake, South Florida's primary drinking water source, had regained that foot by late Tuesday and was expected to continue rising.

For growers tending the nation's largest sugarcane crop, fears of a drought were eased by the heavy rainfall. "It's going to be pumped away and stored for future use," said Dalton Yancey of Florida's Sugar Cane League.

Floyd whipped up eight-foot seas off the coast, forcing the crew of the Venezuelan container vessel Alma Llanera to abandon ship when the cargo shifted early Tuesday.

Coast Guard crews rescued 24 people from a lifeboat and two from the ship around dawn. The ship was to be towed to into Fort Lauderdale today.

Off Miami Beach, several boxcar-sized cargo containers that slid off the freighter Hybur Trader washed ashore Tuesday, with scavengers scrambling on the beach to claim boxed stereos, televisions, skateboards and irons.

At first, police kept the crowd away, but shipping officials came by and let the salvage continue, going so far as to hire security guaards to watch over the containers just to make sure the scavengers didn't hurt themselves.

Forecasters said that some people may have overreacted Monday to the first hurricane to hit South Florida in two years. Stores were jammed with people buying up batteries, canned food and bottled water.

Liquor and beer sales also were brisk, store owners said, and some tourists headed away from beachside hotels Monday.

The last hurricane to hit the area was Hurricane Bob in 1985. The last to hit the east coast of South Florida was Hurricane David in 1979, which did minor damage in Palm Beach County on its way north.

Dog Owner Faces Charge

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Fayetteville man whose pit bull terrier mauled a 2½-year-old Winston-Salem girl in Uwharrie National Park was charged Tuesday with allowing a dog to run unleashed on a federal reservation.

The misdemeanor violation carries a $25 fine.

Russell LaViolette has seven days to pay the fine or a court date will be set before a federal magistrate, said District Ranger Eurial Turner of the U.S. Forestry Service.

It took 40 stitches to close wounds on the face of Sheena McNeill after the dog bit her Sunday while she was playing with her father, Kerry, on a wooded trail in a park area.

The girl also was bitten around her right shoulder before the dog was pulled off her and shot to death by a passerby. The girl was released Monday from Montgomery Memorial Hospital.

IRS Says It's Never Too Early ...

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is spending $7.6 million to remind Americans that April 15 is just six months away.

More than 90 million taxpaying couples and individuals have begun receiving green-and-white brochures carrying a gentle warning that those who wait until close to next spring's filing deadline might find the big new tax law too much to digest.

The advice mailed from the IRS: order your free copy of the 55-page publication 920, "Explanation of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 for Individuals," and begin studying it immediately to determine precisely how the new law affects you.

"The new tax law touches you and every taxpayer in this country," Ed Pecorella, IRS assistant commissioner for taxpayer services, told reporters Tuesday. "Depending on individual tax circumstances, it touches some more than others."

The 1986 law represents the biggest rewrite of the federal income tax since it was enacted in 1913.

Although the agency is putting on another 1,300 employees to help taxpayers with their returns, Pecorella said that "if too many taxpayers wait too long to ask for help, some could be disappointed. The simple fact is (that) our ability to deliver quality customer service won't improve with time."

In the past, the IRS employees who answer taxpayer questions by phone and at walk-in offices have been criticized for being inaccessible in many cases and providing the wrong information in others. Pecorella said the agency is determined to improve on both counts in the coming return-filing season, and has begun training of these taxpayer-service workers earlier than ever before.

Most taxpayers who filed returns this year should receive the informational brochure by the end of the month.

"Our brochure is a taxpayer alert — an attempt to drive home the importance of readiness ... to discourage taxpayers from thinking they can put aside the new tax law and conduct tax business as usual," Pecorella said.

The brochure includes a tear-out coupon that taxpayers may mail to request a copy of the plain-language Publication 920. That publication features a side-by-side comparison of the old and new laws.

The brochure mentions some of those changes: lower tax rates, higher personal exemptions and standard deductions, elimination or reduction of several itemized deductions, and new rules that may require students and some other part-time workers to file returns for the first time.

The IRS also has taped explanations of the new law that are available by dialing the Tele-Tax number listed in the telephone book under IRS. Asking for tape No. 315 will get you highlights of the 1986 law. Tape No. 326 is an index of other tapes on specific topics, ranging from the new requirement that children 5 or older have Social Security numbers to changes affecting Individual Retirement Accounts.

House Democrats Eye Limitations On Deducting Home Loan Interests

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax increase approved by Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee would spread a little bit of pain among millions of Americans — especially corporations and the rich — in the interest of reducing the federal deficit.

A surprise part of the package would impose limitations on deductions for home mortgage interest and interest on home-equity loans. But the limitations are so high they likely would affect few who are not millionaires — or do not live on a boat or mobile home.

The bill would raise taxes by more than $13 billion next year, with about $12 billion of that earmarked for cutting the deficit. The other $1 billion or so would pay for some targeted special tax cuts proposed by members of the committee and other House members. Those provisions likely will be approved Thursday.

None of the tax-increase provisions would fall particularly hard on any individual or company. The bill was put together without tampering with the tax-rate reductions enacted last year and without boosting excise taxes on alcohol, gasoline and tobacco, although it would extend for another three years the expiring 3 percent tax on telephone service.

"There's enough pepper in this bill to irritate a lot of members," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the committee, told reporters after the package won approval of Democratic members of the panel.

The 13 Republicans on the committee are refusing to take part in the bill-writing session because they insist that deficit reduction be built more around spending cuts than tax increases. If necessary, however, the 23 Democrats on the committee will be able to give final approval to the bill without any Republican help.

Under the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law, Congress must reduce the deficit by $23 billion for the 12 months that began Oct. 1. Unless Congress and the president agree on a plan, automatic spending reductions will be triggered Nov. 20.

The fate of whatever tax increases Congress might finally approve is in doubt, since President Reagan has emphasized opposition to raising taxes.

The Senate Finance Committee, also operating without GOP support, is writing its own deficit-reduction bill. On Tuesday, the Democrats, who control the committee, approved about $7.6 billion worth of revenue increases. But they are still mulling over changes in the home-mortgage deduction, one of the most sensitive parts of tax law.

As part of the giant 1986 tax overhaul, Congress phased out the tax deduction for consumer interest, including car and education loans. However, it created a loophole that permits homeowners to take out a home equity loan, spend the proceeds for almost any purpose and, thus, escape the crackdown. At the same time, the law allows an unlimited mortgage deduction on one or two homes.

The Ways and Means Democrats voted to:

—Limit the mortgage deduction to the interest paid on $1 million of loans, a provision that obviously would affect a relative handful of homeowners.

—Limit deductible home-equity loans to $100,000, regardless of the value of the home and the purpose for which the loan proceeds are used. That apparently would affect very few people as well, although it would wipe out a special escape hatch from current limitations for money used for education or medical purposes.

—Bar boats and mobile homes "used on a transient basis" from qualifying as second homes for purposes of an interest-expense deduction.

One of the biggest money-raisers in the House bill — worth $1 billion — would remove incentives that some analysts say make it worthwhile for corporate raiders to take over other companies for tax purposes.

The bill also would repeal for large companies the "completed-contract" accounting method, which has permitted some defense contractors to avoid taxes for years so long as a project is still under way.

The House and Senate bills would:

—Correct a $1.3 billion error in the 1986 tax overhaul, affecting estates of corporate executives who sell stock in their companies to employee groups.

—Tighten rules requiring corporations to pay their taxes in advance.

—Delay until 1988 the start of a new rule requiring individuals who must make estimated tax payments to pay at least 90 percent of their liability in advance. The old rule, 80 percent, would remain effective for 1987. This break would cost the treasury a small amount of revenue.

—Freeze the maximum estate tax rate at 55 percent, rather than permitting it to drop to 50 percent next year. This would affect only those estates worth more than $3 million.

Seabrook Owners Suspend Payments

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The decision to default on a $37 million debt payment by the Seabrook nuclear plant's main owner could rival the Three Mile Island nuclear accident in its effects on the industry, an analyst says.

The 13-member board of directors of Public Service Co. of New Hampshire voted Tuesday to suspend scheduled interest payments on various bonds, the first of which is due Thursday, spokesman John Cavanagh said.

The default would make Public Service the first major privately owned utility to default on a bond payment since the Great Depression.

Dan Scotto, a utility analyst with L.F. Rothschild of New York, said the default will prompt investors to reassess investments in utilities.

"This is a real major event," Scotto said. "There's been a real strong belief in the analytical community that utilities don't default."

"It's going to send people back to the drawing board and look differently at utilities, the same way people looked differently at utilities after Three Mile Island," Scotto said, referring to the Pennsylvania plant that in 1979 was the site of the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident.

The company has 30 days to pay the bill, during which time creditors are barred from taking action, such as filing for involuntary bankruptcy reorganization, said Charles Bayless, company financial vice president.

If bankruptcy occurs, it would be the first by a privately owned utility since the Great Depression.

Public Service has been pushed to the brink of a bankruptcy filing by its $2.1 billion investment in the $5 billion Seabrook plant. Plans unveiled in 1968 called for a $1 billion plant that would go on line in 1979.

State law prohibits utilities from charging for plants until they operate commercially, and Seabrook, though loaded with nuclear fuel, has been kept from starting by snags in evacuation planning and strident opposition.

Public and private parking areas throughout the city have designated spaces for handicapped citizens. Special dashboard permits and license plates may be purchased at the state license agency, 718 Dickinson Ave. Call 758-1193 for information.

RE-ELECT
LORRAINE SHINN
CITY COUNCIL/AT LARGE

Dear Citizens of Greenville:

I am seeking re-election to the Greenville City Council/At large Seat. Two years ago you entrusted me with the responsibility of participating in the governing of our fine city. Be assured that I did not take that charge lightly, nor will I ever, if re-elected.

My term of service has not been an easy one. I have dealt with heated and controversial issues, but I will say to you that I made no decision without giving it many hours of studied consideration and I always had the best interest of all citizens at the forefront of my actions, I sincerely feel I have met, and in some cases exceeded, my campaign promises.

I believe the City of Greenville is in better condition now than it was a year ago. Major goals have been accomplished. The budget is more realistic; the leadership more professional; Medical Arts zoning has been enacted; our zoning ordinances are being updated; and needed annexations have occurred.

While much has been accomplished, more work remains to be done. Your vote returning me to the City Council will ensure its completion.

Thank you for voting on November 3rd.

Navy's Memorial Officially Greeted

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bronze sailor, alone on a granite map of the world and surrounded by waters from the seven seas, stands watch at the new U.S. Navy Memorial honoring the millions who have served America on the high seas.

"It enshrines, in stone and metal, the gratitude of a nation," Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said during dedication ceremonies Tuesday.

The statue, standing slightly larger than life at 7-feet tall, was unveiled as Navy jets flew in formation overhead, bands played, balloons were released and thousands of old salts were reunited with their sailing buddies.

"It's something that should have been done long ago. It's very good," said retired Chief Petty Officer Richard Hoffman, 72, of Port Hueneme, Calif., who made the first trip of his life to Washington to attend the dedication.

Looking over the scores of admirals and captains that had gathered, he was moved not just by the memorial but by the sight of more Navy brass "than I care to see."

"I'd hate to see them all coming down the deck," he said. "I'd have to put my arm up to salute and just leave it there."

Navy Secretary James H. Webb said people, not ships or weapons, are the essence of the Navy.

"We don't send a naval force into a crisis; we don't send ships," Webb said. "We send people.

"And those people are good, and they're dedicated, and they're tough," he added. "They have families, and dreams, and aspirations. And by and large they are young.

"This sculpture, the Lone Sailor, I think reminds us of the human elements of the Navy, commemorates the humanity," Webb said.

Accompanied by a 21-blast salute, performed with fireworks rather than guns, Navy sailors took water collected by a nuclear submarine that sailed the seven seas and poured it into the pools as the memorial's fountains were turned on for the first time.

Only partially completed, the memorial consists of a 100-foot circular floor of granite in an open-air plaza, with a map of the world etched in shades of gray granite. Surrounded by pools, the circle forms an amphitheater that is to be home to the Navy Band and other military musical units in warm weather.

It is on Pennsylvania Avenue, between the White House and the Capitol.

At the front of the memorial are two nautical flagpoles. On this day suspended from the halyards were the words "U.S. Navy Memorial" in the Navy's flag language.

A wreath was placed near the statue by family members of missing or killed Navy seamen and airmen.

The ceremony was held on Navy Day, the 212th birthday of the Navy. The memorial was authorized by Congress and built with private donations. So far $6 million has been raised toward the $10 million project. Still to be built are two adjoining buildings to house exhibits.

Study Shows 9,000 Planes Could Carry Nuclear Weapons

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Soviet Union now have more than 9,000 military aircraft in their arsenals capable of carrying nuclear bombs, of which only about 500 are counted for arms control purposes, two private researchers say.

"The figures show just how deeply nuclear weapons are integrated into U.S. and Soviet forces," said William Arkin, an analyst with the Institute for Policy Studies, a liberal Washington think-tank.

"Wherever they go, whatever mission they might be involved in, nuclear weapons are available for these aircraft," he said.

Arkin and Robert S. Norris, a researcher with the Natural Resources Defense Council, a New York-based environmental group, conducted the survey of nuclear-capable aircraft for the November issue of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists.

The researchers concluded the United States now has 4,834 aircraft that are capable of carrying nuclear bombs, compared with 4,202 for the Soviet Union. The U.S. count includes several hundred airplanes that actually are flown by America's NATO allies in Europe but which could be armed with U.S.-controlled nuclear bombs.

The two men on Tuesday stressed that the fact a plane is capable technically of delivering a nuclear bomb does not mean "it has been assigned a nuclear mission."

"We're not suggesting either side would use this number of aircraft to carry nuclear weapons in a war," Arkin said.

"But the totals are larger than we expected and should be kept in mind because arms control efforts as they exist today encourage the development of more nuclear bombs" by focusing on reductions in missile warheads, he added.

The United States and Soviet Union have historically counted only their long-range strategic bombers in fashioning arms accords. By that measure, only about 374 American warplanes and 165 Soviet planes currently "count" as strategic nuclear aircraft, according to the study.

In addition to those long-range strategic bombers, however, both countries have thousands of medium- and shorter-range fighter and attack jets, patrol aircraft and even some helicopters that have been wired to carry and drop a nuclear bomb, the researchers found.

On the U.S. side, such planes range from the Navy's F-A-18 Hornet, A-6E Intruder and P-3 Orion to the Air Force's F-16 Fighting Falcon and some older F-4 Phantoms. On the Russian side, they include such planes as the MiG-27 Flogger, the Su-24 Fencer and the Tu-26 Backfire, the study found.

"In over four decades, the United States has had 43 kinds of aircraft capable of delivering nuclear weapons," states a brief summary of the findings.

"Fifteen of these are currently deployed. ... The current U.S. nuclear bomb stockpile of six types is estimated to be 7,350, supplemented by 2,825 air-launched missiles."

The Pentagon had no comment on the findings Tuesday.

In The Area

Insurance Office

State Insurance Commissioner Jim Long has announced the opening of the eastern regional office of the Department of Insurance in New Bern.

Long said the new office will make "department services more efficient and readily available to the people of eastern North Carolina."

He said the office will facilitate services in areas such as consumers' insurance complaints, mobile home licensing, building code enforcement, insurance fraud investigations, fire and rescue training for local governments, and the Seniors' Health Insurance Information Program.

The office is located in Room 107, 405 Middle St., New Bern, 28560, (telephone 637-2450).

Films Scheduled

Documentary films concerning graphic and performance arts will be shown with one film scheduled on Thursday and the next on Wednesday, both in Jenkins Fine Arts Center Auditorium at East Carolina University.

"Wordswede" is about a North German artists' colony that was the residence of painter Paula Modersohn-Becker and the poet Rilke. The screening will also include "Pina Bausch and the Wuppertal Dance Theater," a rehearsal work featuring Bausch's choreography of "The Rite of Spring" and John Heartfield's "Dada and Neo-Dada" photo collages.

Scheduled for the Wednesday program is "Emil Nolde" and "A Portrait of Paula Modersohn-Becker."

Screenings are free and open to the public.

Election Letter

A copy of a letter from the U.S. Justice Department placing the burden of proof for the six districts and three at-large election system on Pitt County commissioners was read at a recent Pitt County Branch of the NAACP meeting.

The letter was addressed to Michael Crowell, attorney for the commissioners.

In other matters, the Rev. Alonza Mills was nominated to run for "Minister of the Year" in the state NAACP contest.

Delegates to the NAACP state convention Oct. 22-24 in Greensboro will be Rhumel Fuller, Linda Howard, Clarence and Louise Moore, Willie Mae Carney and D.D. Garrett.

NCAFP Installations

Dr. C. Christopher Bremer of Greenville will be installed Saturday as vice president of the North Carolina Academy of Family Physicians.

Bremer is associated with the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Other Greenville area people to be installed during the meeting in Asheville will be Dr. Kerry A. Willis as resident director, Emmett F. Montgomery as student director, and G. Christopher Jones as student director-elect.

James G. Jones of Greenville, American Academy of Family Physicians president-elect, will attend.

Barbershop Program

The Eastern Carolina Chorus of Sweet Adelines Inc. will present "Barbershop Roundup" Saturday at 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. at D.H. Conley High School.

Guests include "Diamonds in the Rough" of the Queen Charlotte Chorus.

Women's Aglow

The Women's Aglow Fellowship of Greenville will have a "Praise and Share" program Saturday during its 9:30 a.m. meeting.

The program will be led by Paula Mills.

A coffee and doughnuts time will precede the meeting at 9 a.m. The meeting is being held at the Evangelistic Tabernacle on the U.S. 264 bypass. A nursery is available.

Advisory Committee

John Chaffee, executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission, will speak at Thursday's noon meeting of the Employer Advisory Committee at Riverside Steak Bar on Stantonsburg Road.

For more information call Alyna Stoll at 756-2171, extension 201.

Yearbook Week

Wellcome Middle School recently celebrated National Yearbook Week with events to highlight the observance.

Posters in recognition of the week were made and copies of the school's yearbook, Wildcat, were sold. The yearbook staff also celebrated with a party.

Copies of Wildcat will be delivered in April.

Weekend Workshop

A workshop titled "Gathering Power Through Insight and Love" will be held this weekend at the Planters Bank Community Room.

The workshop, based on the teachings of Ken Keyes, is being taught by two people from his Living Love School in Coos Bay, Ore.

Hours are from 6:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. Friday and from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

For information call Peggy Karsnak, 355-6493, by Friday.

Women's Club

The Christian Women's Club will meet Oct. 21 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant. For more information call Lula Whitley, 756-0574, or Irene Gurganus 756-2139.

Americans Share In Nobel Chemistry Prize

Lehn lives in Paris.

It is the fifth year in a row an American has won or shared the chemistry prize.

In announcing the chemistry prize, the Swedish Academy of Sciences cited the work by Cram, 68, Pederson, 83, and Lehn, 48, in making relatively uncomplicated compounds that perform the same functions as natural proteins.

"Great progress towards this goal has been made over the last 20 years, and it is the pioneering achievements in this particular area that are now being recognized," said the announcement by the awards committee.

The committee said their work laid the foundation for an area of research that has become known as "host-guest chemistry" or "supramolecular chemistry."

"At the basis of many biological processes lies the ability of molecules to recognize each other and to form well-defined complexes," the announcement said.

"In most cases, one or more compounds of low molecular weight bind to a specific region in a high-molecular-weight compound, most often a protein on a nucleic acid. The binding is very specific and selective, and the low-molecular-weight compound must fit the high like a key in a lock," the committee said.

Two works published by Pedersen in 1967 became classics in the field, while Lehn and Cram later built on his studies, the announcement said.

"Pedersen, Lehn and Cram laid the foundations of what is today one of the most active and expanding fields of chemical research," the committee statement said.

"The goal is to produce synthetic host molecules that recognize biologically active molecules. Thus Lehn has produced a host molecule for the signal substance acetylcholine, which is so important in humans and animals."

Nerve cells use acetylcholine to communicate with each other.

The announcement by the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences cited "their important breakthrough in the discovery of superconductivity in ceramic materials."

Last year, "Bednorz and Mueller reported finding superconductivity in an oxide material at a temperature 12 degrees Celsius (22 degrees Fahrenheit) higher than previously known," the announcement said.

Scientists had been trying to raise that temperature for more than a decade in an attempt to make wider use of superconductivity.

Candidates Speak

Williams' response to the same question stressed approving the budget "where needed and not (based) on political implications." He said monitoring the budget may be the "second most important duty of a school board member" next to hiring a superintendent.

To ensure public input receives proper response, Grooms said time is alloted at each board meeting for the public to address the board. There also are other ways through advisory councils, telephone, letter or visits.

In response to the same issue, Ward said board members "have to be good listeners" to evaluate what has been said on an issue and make a proper response.

In a question on superintendent and teacher supplements, Ward said, "I'm not concerned about superintendent supplements. These men elected to do that. The fact that our teachers are being paid 72nd out of 104 is what concerns me."

On the same issue, Grooms said, "I feel badly, if that's the terminology." When he addressed raising teacher supplements, "It seemed like I was fighting with something that is unreasonable. I do not think we rank No. 1 in the state as far as school systems," he said. The money could "better be used for resources in the schools."

Currently, the superintendent's supplement in the Pitt County schools is the highest in the state, while teacher supplements are ranked about 70th in the state.

Racial balance in the schools "calls for a must in the process of comprehensive planning," Williams said. To "reasonably" achieve racial balance means to "not impose hardship on the student" by busing them from Ayden to Bethel, for example.

Candidates James Black of District 5, Seat A, and Kathryn Allen of District 5, Seat B, did not participate in the forum. Ms. Allen sent written responses to questions submitted by LWV and CEEEPCO. The Rev. Howard Parker of District 1, Seat B, did not participate in the forum, but submitted written responses, which were read by his wife, LaVerna Parker.

A forum for candidates in Districts 2 and 4 will be Thursday at North Pitt High School, while candidates in Districts 3 and 6 will meet in a forum Tuesday in Ayden-Grifton High School. Each begins at 8 p.m.

Students Checked

measured in the skinfold fat caliper for the sum of the skinfold test. Skin in the tricep (back of upper arm) and subscapular (below the shoulder blade) areas are measured to evaluate the level of fatness in the children.

In the sit-ups test, each student performs as many correct sit-ups in a 60-second period. They are used to evaluate abdominal muscular strength and endurance. The sit and reach test evaluates the flexibility of the low back and posterior thighs.

Test results show that Pitt County males ages 7, 8, 10, 12 through 15, and females 8, 9, 12 through 16, all were at or below the national 25 percentile in the distance run.

Females ages 12, 14 and 15 were at or fell below the 25 percentile in sit-ups. Males ages 10, 14, 15 and 17 were at or below the 25 percentile in skin fold measurment. Males age 17 were at or below the 25 percentile in sit and reach, while female ages 15 through 17 were at below the same figure.

But, there were improvements from pretests conducted during the eighth through 10th week of school to post-tests conducted during April, Dailey said.

The physical fitness program implemented in the Pitt County schools allows instructors to determine strengths and weaknesses of each student based on test information. "From this assessment, a plan can be developed to work toward a higher fitness level for youth," Dailey said.

Results of testing shows that students kindergarten through 12th grade have improved, Dailey said. "The changes were very dramatic."

Positive changes in pretest and post-test results ranged from 0 percent to 50 percent.

"We are going to succeed and have an effect on the fitness level of children," Dailey said.

Task Force Meets

people saying we must not deprive people of their culture."

Terming that attitude ridiculous and harmful, Flood emphasized that all students "need to learn English, good English. The idea of maintaining that kind of colloquial culture is nothing but a cop-out on the part of educators. It must be remembered that words relate to the learning factor. Language is critical in education. Fostering of bad language limits the capability of students to think."

Pacing a student to his capability — early recognition of the various degrees of capability — is another factor Flood feels needs serious attention.

"All too often, educators reach a critical decision on whether or not to pass a child to a higher grade based on emotional reactions." He said that parents pressing a teacher at the end of the school year with cries of "I want my child to pass" is a common occurence. "Teachers should know early in the year that retention may be necessary, and parents should hear this early.

"Education, good education, is not a matter of time measurements, but a matter of excellence," he said.

Other deterrents in education pointed out by Flood include "the burdening of teachers with far too much trivia to take care of" and the attitude of some teachers, "who are only marginal, protecting themselves with the 'you can't fire me' syndrome. 'I have tenure.'" Conditions such as these, Flood maintains, need correcting.

Summing up the need to rethink the basics of good education, not only for the "high risk" segment of students, but for students in the middle and higher levels of achieving, Flood cited several fundamental factors basic to good education — "all children are to be expected to learn; all parents are expected to be part of the education process; intellectural inquiry must be a prerequisite in education, and teachers must work with the community to help in understanding that we all have a vested interest in the best possible education for our children."

Perspective Will Help Parents Cope With Teenage Children

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

A tantalizing title: "The Secret of a Good Life With Your Teenager."

What could deliver parents from the anguish of their children's adolescence? What could help them cope with the rudeness, the sullenness, the years of repudiation?

Perspective, says author Angela Barron McBride.

Makes sense. So why is it a secret?

Parents often lack information on normal adolescent development, McBride says. They misunderstand their tasks as parents of teenagers.

"I think we have done a good job talking about parenting in the early years," says McBride, who teaches at the Indiana University School of Nursing and at Purdue University. But "the emphasis on the importance of the first few years of life communicates indirectly the notion that somehow it's going to get easier as the child gets older.

"The 'secret' is that you don't act the same way as the parent of teenagers as you did earlier," McBride says. "The tendency is to think when you become the parents of a teenager, it involves doing less of what you were doing before, instead of something different.

"Earlier you could tell you were a good parent by what you did for the child, taught the child. You protected the child. At this point, it's helping your child become independent."

Perspective will give you "a somewhat lighter touch" when your teenager antagonizes you. In difficult moments, perspective will allow you to recognize that "it doesn't mean you screwed up when the kid was 1 year old," she says.

"To the extent that parents feel that something is wrong, they feel guilty," she writes in her book, published by Times Books ($16.95). "Feeling guilty, they are more likely to react to experiences than to analyze them. They react by wanting to control what they do not understand, just at a time when their children want to control their own destinies. This leads to many an explosive situation."

With the dawn of adolescence, McBride says, children become capable of using irony, sarcasm and critical thinking. "When they get to that point and start using it, who do they use it on? The parents. If you look at it one way, you feel like you're being dumped on. If you look at it another way, you can think, 'This kid is really into high-level thinking.'"

Of course, at times a parent will "just plain old get angry." When a teenager's comments really become offensive, she advises, let them know, but not in a mean way.

Teenagers also are oppositional, moody, argumentative and seemingly indifferent. It's all part of establishing their own identities. But while they seem to scorn their parents, they really do need them.

They need "hundreds of hours of conversation to get clear" about important issues, to clarify where they and their parents stand, she says.

These often unpleasant exchanges seem to go nowhere, she says. The pattern: The child asks a parent's opinion about something. The parent responds in detail. The child asks with seeming disbelief, "Why would anyone say that?" The parent complains, "Why ask if you didn't want to know what I thought?"

McBride says that "the first impulse is to think the child is argumentative. But what the child wants to do is talk through certain things he or she is interested in."

A better understanding of teenagers will make the period less crazy but will not eliminate all difficulties. Bruised feelings are inevitable. Parents should remember that "even though it hurts, it's really necessary for children to think that they could do better than their parents, or be smarter. It's finding your own place."

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Re the flap about the "compassionate" farmer who promptly shot the mother beagle and her pup to put them out of their misery when they appeared at his door, hungry and half-dead from thirst and hunger:

Many years ago, my aunt trudged through the wind and snow one morning to her rural mailbox. Upon opening it, she found a little black and white mongrel pup — sick and nearly frozen stiff. She took the little guy into her home, named him Tony, and nursed him back to health. Everyone thought she was crazy.

Twenty years later, on another cold, snowy winter night, old Tony, arthritic and hard of hearing, roused my aunt from a second-story bedroom and guided her to safety while her house burned down around them.

When the firemen finally arrived, all that remained was the fireplace with its two-story chimney, Tony and my aunt!

How's that for gratitude? — MARION PAYNE, LAS VEGAS, NEV.

DEAR MARION: Beautiful! And it will please you and other readers to learn that the according to my most recent reader mail, the numbers have shifted dramatically in favor of attempting to nurse the dogs back to health as opposed to putting them out of their misery with a shotgun.

DEAR ABBY: "Sorry, Sorry, Sorry," who described tattoo removal as painful and expensive, should have obtained a second opinion before embarking on the removal of her 6-inch dragon tattoo. As a dermatologic surgeon who specializes in tattoo removal and other skin surgery techniques, may I point out that although her information on methods of tattoo removal was not incorrect, it was incomplete.

Skin grafting is a drastic procedure and should not be undertaken without careful consideration. There are less aggressive options in removing a tattoo, such as dermabrasion, caustic chemical removal or simple excision — one of the most common procedures used by dermatologic surgeons. These three procedures are less costly and not nearly as painful as laser surgery.

Any dermatologic surgeon can offer an opinion on the most appropriate procedure for removal of a tattoo. For a list of dermatologic surgeons in their area, readers can contact the American Society for Dermatologic Surgery, 1567 Maple Ave., Evanston, Ill. 60201. — HAROLD BRODY, M.D., EMORY UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE, ATLANTA

DEAR DR. BRODY: Thank you for some useful information. Some letters I've received over the years from sorry readers asking how to remove tattoos would not a pretty picture make. But in all fairness, not all who have subjected themselves to that kind of needling regret it. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am a 44-year-old woman with a tiny butterfly tattooed on my left breast. I was 28 years old when I had it done and I was neither drunk nor stoned at the time. It's truly a work of art, and I have never regretted my decision. — HONEY

DAR Chapter Shares Heritage

FARMVILLE — A sharing of heritage by show and tell was the theme of the Saturday meeting of the Major Benjamin May chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution.

Glasses, jewelry, an 1860 quilt, watch, china plates, moustache cup, hand-painted bowls, a turn-of-the century doll, minutes from Kornegay's Chapel and a tablecloth made of twine were some of the articles shown.

Plans were made for the May district workshop which the chapter will host. The regent's name will be placed in "Centennial Call," the DAR's 100th anniversary publication.

Meeting hostesses were Mrs. Thomas Hales, Mrs. Ed Lee Hill, Mrs. C.L. Betts Jr. and Mrs. McCoy Tripp.

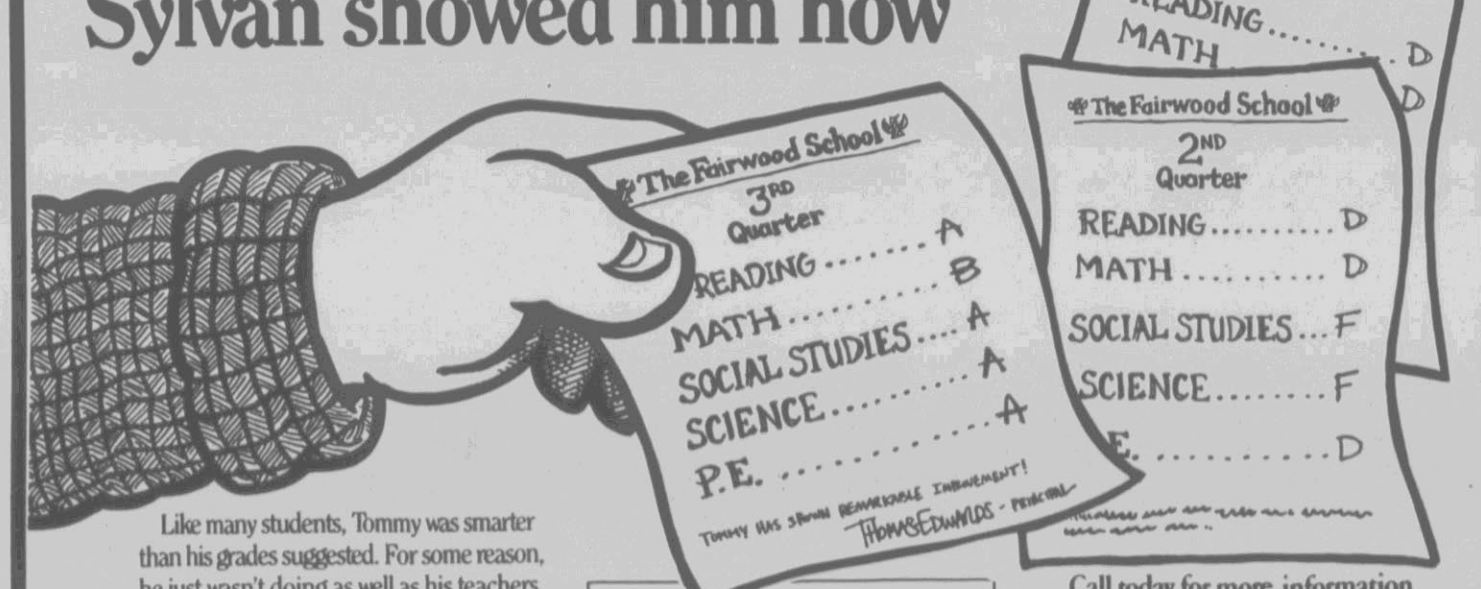
Tommy's teachers always said he could do better. Sylvan showed him how



Like many students, Tommy was smarter than his grades suggested. For some reason, he just wasn't doing as well as his teachers, and parents, knew he could.
At Sylvan we guarantee that Tommy will reach his full potential. It's a promise. And we back it with this simple guarantee: your child's reading or math skills will improve by at least one full grade level after just 36 instruction hours. Or we'll provide up to 12 additional hours of instruction at no further cost. Improvement will be measured by a nationally-recognized achievement test, given before and after instruction at Sylvan.
The Sylvan Guarantee
Your child will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in math or reading skills after 36 hours of instruction, or we will continue up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost.
Measurement will be based on a nationally-recognized achievement test for improvement in either reading (comprehension or vocabulary) or math (computation or application).

Testing Helps People Start Fitness Plan

By DOUG KAUFMAN
Belleville News-Democrat

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — In a five-week period, Steve King pinched about 20 tummies, asked a lot of personal questions and put several people through agony.

But these people were not angry. They were grateful.

Since early June, King has administered physical fitness evaluations to staff and members of the YMCA of Southwest Illinois, Downtown Belleville Center.

Whether people want to trim fat, start walking programs, improve their stretch at first base or win triathlons, the fitness evaluation can help.

"Whatever they want out of an exercise program, they let us know and we help them to accomplish that," he said.

Doctors and exercise physiologists devised the test for the YMCA, and instructors like King take a week-long course to learn how to give it.

It covers four areas: percentage of body fat, cardio-respiratory fitness, muscular strength and endurance and flexibility. Computer-tabulated results compare a person's fitness to that of others of the same age and sex.

In all test categories, results are discussed. If areas need improvement, King suggests specific exercises.

"It's a good starting point, said King, the YMCA's physical director. People first answer medical questions to reveal whether they are healthy enough to take the test or need a doctor's OK.

"Some people think this is a stress test," King said. "It's not. It's a fitness test. We're not doctors. This isn't any type of medical thing at all."

Then, participants have their resting heart rate and blood pressure recorded.

The first test is body composition, important because obesity is a health hazard. Using a caliper, the skin is pinched in four places — the chest, abdomen, hip and side.

The sum of the measurements is used to determine percentage of body fat. Although not as precise as body immersion, the caliper is accurate to plus or minus 3 percent.

The second test uses an exercise bike to test cardio-respiratory endurance.

Participants ride until their heart rate reaches the "training zone," 70 to 85 percent of the top rate at which their heart should beat per minute during exercise. The top rate is calculated by subtracting age from the number 220.

Participants begin pedaling at low resistance to warm up and get the heart working harder, as their heart rate is measured. The process is repeated at a second, more difficult level, then at a third.

At each level, the rider must pedal at a steady rate, with the idea to find a plateau, or steady state, at each level up to the training zone.

Being aware of maximum heart rate will help athletes know when to push and when to back off. "It's very important when these people are exercising to take their heart rate and see where they are," King said.

The third test area is muscular strength and endurance. Strength is tested by the number of smooth repetitions in the bench press, in which a weight is pushed up from the chest while lying on a bench.

Participants test their endurance by doing as many sit-ups as possible in one minute.

The final test area is flexibility. Sitting on a measuring device, participants stretch legs in front with knees slightly bent and lean forward at the waist. The idea is to use your hands to push a marker as far forward as possible. The farther it goes, the greater the trunk and hamstring flexibility.

"Most people need to work on their flexibility," King said. "Everybody is always concerned with how strong they are, but flexibility is very important."

Flexible muscles, tendons and ligaments will stretch, rather than snap or pull, in the case of falls or overextension.

Active people need to be flexible to remain injury free, King said.

"Fitness is a lifestyle, not a fad," King said. "People are beginning to realize that more. People are more aware of physical fitness than they ever have been."

Irish Knit Afghan Has Five Panels

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

You can sense the beauty of the Irish spirit in a fisherman afghan knit in traditional Aran Isle stitches using double strands of knitting worsted and large needles.

This fabulous look is easily made in five panels worked separately, then sewn together and finished off with a knotted fringe. You'll love to wrap yourself up in this afghan on a cold winter's night. Start it now in time for Christmas giving.

To obtain directions for knitting the Fisherman Afghan, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-101187 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-101187 by sending a check or money order for $25.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and your choice of fisherman's white or navy yarn.

Dear Readers: In response to many requests, I am repeating today a column written quite some time ago about the background of Aran Isle knitting.

Time has almost stood still in a group of peaceful Irish islands just off the coast of Galway Bay, where the people still earn their livelihood cultivating the rocky soil, fishing and raising cattle. Life is not easy or affluent, but the people, for the most part, are a happy lot, at peace with the world and themselves.

The women — and some of the men — are great knitters, working in various patterns according to the whim of the moment. Amazingly, they work even the most intricate designs without written directions. In typical Irish fashion, most are unconcerned if an occasional cable is crossed in the wrong place, or some other minor mistake shows in their knitting. Their joy comes from the pleasure of knitting and of knowing that their loved ones are comfortable clothed.

Interestingly enough, the more intricate the pattern is, the less likelihood there is that you will find mistakes in the work.

Symbolism plays a large role in the lives of most Irishmen, and this is true in their knitting as well. While different writers have given various interpretations to the symbolic meanings, these are some of the most commonly seen:

Cables represent the fisherman's rope, and are wishes for safety and good luck. The diamond design is a wish for success, wealth and treasure for the wearer, while the moss stitch takes its name from carrageen, an edible seaweed that is an important source of nourishment. It is a symbol of gratitude for this "gift from the sea."

Among other favorite pattern stitch symbols is the Trinity stitch, where three stitches are knit in one, thus symbolizing the Holy Trinity. It is the emblem of God-given life and being.

Single zigzag stitches depict the winding cliff paths along the rocky shores and the similar winding journeys through life; double zigzags represent two people traveling life's road together in marriage.

When a cable is found within another cable, it is known as the "Blarney Kiss" representing the gift of persuasion. The honeycomb stitch is a tribute to diligent work, while the Tree of Life pattern is a wish for family unity, fertility and strong sons and daughters.

The basketweave stitch calls to mind the fisherman's basket and carries with it the hope of an abundant life. Linked stitches are the eternal links with those who left home to journey to faraway lands.

In writing this column, I feel a link with my own Irish ancestry, and send with it an Irish wish for all the truly good and meaningful things in life for each of you.

FISHERMAN AFGHAN — Traditional Aran Isle stitches are included in the five panels of this knitted afghan.

Couple Weds On Monday

Cindy Hinton of Hobbsville and Bobby Gene Tripp of Farmville were married Monday in Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hinton of Hobbsville and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Francis Edmondson of Farmville.

The bride is employed by the Edgecombe-Nash Mental Health Center in Tarboro and the bridegroom works with Oakwood Mobile Homes in Greenville.

Fund-Raiser Set For Nov. 21

St. Gabriels Women's Club is making plans for a casino night fund-raiser to be held Nov. 21 in the Parish Hall.

Proceeds will be used for various services and parish activities sponsored by the women during the year.

Carolyn Powell was appointed by President Linda Thompson to rewrite the constitution and by-laws and to be in charge of publicity.

Ms. Thompson expressed appreciation to members who helped with the installation mass for the Rev. Xavier Hayes.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell sharply today, faced with disappointing news on the nation's trade deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials tumbled 40.31 to 2,467.85 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 4 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 225 up, 941 down and 361 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 24.96 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

As the market opened, the Commerce Department reported that the U.S. trade deficit amounted to $15.68 billion in August.

The gap between imports and exports narrowed from a record $16.47 billion in July, but the latest figure was larger than most analysts had expected.

Hopes had been building up on Wall Street that the August data would show signs of a substantial improvement in the United States' position in international trade.

When that didn't happen, the dollar fell in foreign exchange, interest rates climbed in the credit markets, and the recent slide in stock prices quickly resumed.

Point-plus losers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, down 2¼ at 146½; Ford Motor, down 2 at 93¾; RJR Nabisco, down 1⅝ at 63¼, and Eastman Kodak, down 1⅛ at 99⅝.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 2.35 to 173.67. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.35 at 343.27.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 36.72 points to 2,508.16.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 3 to 2 on the NYSE, with 959 up, 622 down and 394 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 172.87 million shares, against 141.87 million in the previous session.

Endorsements

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Association of Educators plans to make endorsements next month in three of the state's major 1988 elections, hoping that early support of candidates will increase the group's political clout.

The NCAE, the state's largest teacher organization, mailed invitations Tuesday to prospective candidates in the races for governor, lieutenant governor and superintendent of public instruction, inviting them to interviews with the group's political committee Oct. 23-25.

The political committee, called PACE, will make recommendations to NCAE members on which candidates to endorse. The recommendations must be approved by at least 60 percent of the membership or no endorsement will be made.

Gas Cut-offs

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's three major natural gas companies are petitioning state regulators to let them stop making one of two personal visits to delinquent customers before cutting off their service during the summer, saying the requirement is too time-consuming and costly.

But a group of consumer advocates is fighting the proposal, arguing that poor and illiterate people are protected by the requirement that gas company representatives talk with them personally 24 hours before their service is cut off.

The N.C. Utilities Commission now requires gas companies to take three steps before cutting off service because of delinquent accounts: issue a written warning 10 days before service stops; make personal contact at least 24 hours before service is cut off; and make a second visit immediately before termination.

Duarte Joins Reagan In Peace Talk, Leaves Ranks To Kiss American Flag

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan welcomed Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte to the White House today and both leaders agreed that peace will not come to Central America without democracy.

With Duarte standing at his side on the White House South Lawn, Reagan said the prospects for peace in Central America are better than they have been at any time in a decade because of the peace agreement leaders of the region signed two months ago.

"If peace is to prevail, so must democracy," Reagan said, adding that a successful outcome of the Aug. 7 accord remains "far from certain."

Duarte, in a similar vein, said Central Americans "still have a long way to go" in implementing the peace plan.

He added, "I am convinced that there cannot be peace in Central America without freedom and democracy."

At the conclusion of his remarks, Duarte took the unusual step of descending from the podium and walking 50 yards to an area where a military honor guard was standing.

Conceding that it was a "break with protocol," Duarte kissed an American flag. The assembled gathering, numbering in the hundreds, applauded.

On Tuesday, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said $270 million in aid the administration wants to give Nicaragua's Contra rebels could be used as opposition political support should a Central American peace effort stay on track.

Shultz, while vague about the precise uses of the political support money, told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that it could be used "to foster the kinds of activities — protest, publication, criticism — that are part and parcel of the democratic process anywhere in the world."

And he repeated a U.S. challenge to the leftist Sandinista regime to enter direct talks with the Contras aimed at reaching a cease-fire by Nov. 7, the target date for a series of reforms under the five-nation regional peace accord.

Shultz held up Duarte as the model for negotiations between a government and its opponents, noting that Duarte had been actively talking to Salvadoran leftist insurgents.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan wanted to talk with Duarte about the peace plan, particularly Duarte's experience in implementing talks with Salvadoran rebels, "because we're urging the same kind of talks in Nicaragua."

In reiterating the administration's intent to seek renewed Contra aid, Shultz told the Foreign Affairs panel, "We have to keep the resistance force in being. They are the best insurance that there will be follow-through" on the goals of the peace agreement.

He said the money will be requested formally by the administration sometime between the Nov. 7 cease-fire target date and Thanksgiving.

If the cease-fire and other goals are not achieved by Nov. 7, he said, the money would be used to keep the Contras alive as a military force opposing the Managua government.

Iran Attacks Boat

as saying damage was minor and there were no injuries.

They said both the Saudi and the Liberian tankers appear to have been attacked by an Iranian warship spotted in the area.

Today's attack occurred at 12:55 a.m. local time, according to Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit in London.

Iran has said it will attack vessels in the waterway as long as Iraq continues to strike Iranian oil targets. Iran claims Kuwait aids Iraq in the confict.

The official Iraqi News Agency said today that eight civilians were killed and 36 wounded in Iranian shelling of Basra, Iraq's second largest city, and four other towns close to the border.

The agency, monitored in Cyprus, noted that the shelling followed Tuesday's missile attack on Baghdad and said it proved "they want it a war of cities. So it shall be."

Iraqi officials said 32 people were killed and 218 wounded by an Iranian missile that demolished a school and 16 other buildings Tuesday in a residential area of Baghdad. Twenty-nine of the dead were children, the official reports said.

"It is time to punish these bloodthirsty murderers," Iraq's government-owned Al-Thawra newspaper wrote in an editorial today.

Four long-range missiles have hit the city of 4 million people since Oct. 4, but this was the first major casualty toll reported.

A government spokesman and U.S. diplomatic sources in Muscat, capital of Oman, said the Omani government had agreed to serve again as go-between for the transfer of the Iranians, as it did for 26 survivors of the Iran Ajr which the United States attacked last month for allegedly laying mines.

The spokesman said he did not know when the transfer would take place. "We anticipate that it will follow the same pattern as the previous one," he said.

Observers from the International Committee of the Red Cross were expected to be present.

U.S. officials said one of the four Iranians suffered extensive burns and the others had shrapnel wounds as a result of the fighting between an Iranian gunboat and U.S. helicopters.

The State Department said the four would be given a chance to request political refugee status.

In London, meanwhile, the British Defense Ministry said Tuesday that the mine hunter HMS Brecon found two mines off the United Arab Emirates coast in the Gulf of Oman, just south of the Strait of Hormuz that leads into the Persian Gulf. The area was a busy anchorage until last summer, when a U.S.-operated supertanker hit a mine.

Iran is widely accused of sowing the explosives.

The United States, Britain, Italy, France and other countries have sent navy ships to the gulf to sweep for mines and protect commercial vessels in the oil shipping lanes.

A convoy of reflagged Kuwaiti vessels was in Kuwait today to take on fuel, following a 550-mile journey with U.S. Navy escorts through the gulf. The Reagan administration agreed last summer to reflag 11 Kuwaiti tankers and protect them against attack by Iran, which accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq.

A Kuwaiti newspaper reported Tuesday that China had agreed to reflag Kuwaiti oil tankers and send military vessels to protect them.

Britain also has reflagged Kuwaiti tankers, while the Soviet Union has leased three vessels to the Arab state.

St. Louis Cardinal Tony Pena begins to slide home around the tag of San Francisco Giant catcher Bob Melvin during second inning action in game six of the National League Playoff Series. Pena tripled and scored on a sacrifice fly for the only run of the game. (AP Laserphoto)

Tudor Shuts Down Giants As Pena's Lone Run Holds And Cardinals Tie Series

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Those ready to write off the St. Louis Cardinals just because they lost two straight National League playoff games must have forgotten John Tudor's grit.

"He pitched with both his heart and his head," catcher Tony Pena said after Tudor held off the San Francisco Giants for 7 1-3 innings of St. Louis' tension-packed, 1-0 victory Tuesday night. "I've never seen him pitch ahy better. Everything he threw he was keeping low."

Tudor, while advancing St. Louis to tonight's decisive game in a playoff series tied at three games each, escaped several San Francisco threats.

"I changed speeds and moved the ball around," said Tudor, who threw 118 pitches. "Tonight's performance really wasn't any better for me than Game 2 (a 5-0 defeat) except for 800 feet in home runs I gave up then."

The lone run Tudor needed to prevail against a power-laden Giants' lineup came gift-wrapped in the second inning.

Pena, behind on a 1-2 count against loser Dave Dravecky, hit a leadoff line drive to shallow right field that for seconds appeared ready to be caught. But San Francisco right fielder Candy Maldonado, after first losing the ball in the lights, also lost his feet and Pena ended up with a triple as the ball bounced to the wall.

"I thought I hit the ball hard, but I thought he (Maldonado) was going to catch it," Pena said.

"Somebody up there must be looking out for us, because it was like a stroke of good fortune, that's for sure," he said. "I hope He is looking out for us again in Game 7. We need all the help we can get."

Once Pena was perched at third base, the Cardinals got the run home on Jose Oquendo's short sacrifice fly to right after Willie McGee grounded out to third base.

"With him (Tudor) coming up, you've got to do that," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said of third-base coach Nick Leyva's decision to send Pena, who slid around catcher Bob Melvin's attempted tag at home plate. "I (always) send him in that situation. I don't care if he's out by 10 feet."

A raucous, towel-waving Busch Stadium crowed that cheered Pena's run had moments before watched McGee put an end to a serious San Francisco threat.

"I knew I was going to catch it. I feel in this ballpark, I should catch everything," McGee said of a two-on, one-out low shot off Jose Uribe's bat he speared with a running catch. "I got a good jump on it. That was the key."

The catch allowed Tudor to breathe easier, but not for long.

After Pena gunned down Robby Thompson on an attempted steal following Thompson's walk to start the San Francisco's third.

The Giants went down in order in the fourth, but trouble arose again in the fifth. This time, Melvin and Uribe singled to put runners at first and second with none out.

Cardinals third baseman Terry Pendleton eased the pressure by picking up Dravecky's attempted sacrifice bunt and throwing to shortstop Ozzie Smith, who was covering the third base, for a forceout.

"It's Tony Pena's call," Tudor said of the close play, which was hotly disputed by San Francisco third base coach Don Zimmer. "Terry decided to go third, and I'm glad he did."

Jeffrey Leonard started the Giants' sixth with a single but was forced at second on Maldonado's grounder and Tudor retired the next two batters.

Tudor yielded the final of six hits, each a single, to Melvin to start the seventh. But neither Bob Brenly in a pinch-hit role nor Thompson could drive pinch runner Eddie Milner home after Uribe sacrificed.

Tudor left after walking Leonard on four pitches with one out in the eighth, setting up an unusual finish that had Cardinals relief pitcher Todd Worrell in right field.

"That's the fourth time I've done it. I did it twice last year and twice this year," said Worrell, who moved to the outfield as Ken Dayley notched the final two outs. "You just get kind of used to it."

By winning, the Cardinals sent the NL playoffs to a seventh game for the first time since they were expanded from a five-game format in 1985.

"I felt bad about it. I feel real down," Maldonado said of the triple by Pena that cost San Francisco the game. "I just lost it in the lights. There's got to be a reason. I'm just going to go home and pray."

Dravecky, before being victimized by Maldonado's misfortune, extended his streak of scoreless innings to a playoff-record tying 16 — including his two-hit, 5-0 victory over St. Louis in Game 2.

"I felt much better as far as my command of the strike zone was concerned, and I felt much stronger," the Giants' pitcher said in comparing his performance with that of last week. "It was a tough loss, but you've got to give him (Tudor) a lot of credit. He's one of the best left-handers in the game."

Dravecky, until giving way to Brenly as a pinch hitter, yielded only five hits and struck out eight, walking none.

"Mr. Dravecky was outstanding. The ball got lost in the lights, and it cost him a game," Cardinals utility player Tom Lawless said. "Both pitchers were, in fact, outstanding. We needed a big game from John Tudor but really never thought he'd do what he did."

Pitchers in Game 7 tonight will Danny Cox, coming back on three days rest after losing Game 4, for St. Louis, against Atlee Hammaker, who had no decision as San Francisco's starter in Game 3.

Bonnett's Team Uncertain He'll Stay On Sidelines

CONCORD (AP) — Doctors say Neil Bonnett should sit out the rest of the NASCAR Winston Cup season while he recovers from a broken femur in his right leg, but the driver's team isn't convinced he'll stay put.

"The doctor said he'd be out for the rest of the season, but Neil's so hard-headed he might try to drive again this season. I wouldn't put it past him," Rahmoc racing team manager Dick Seidenspinner said Monday.

The 41-year-old veteran driver from Hueytown, Ala., suffered the injury Sunday during the Oakwood Homes 500 at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Orthopedic surgeon Dr. John Wassel operated on Bonnett's leg Monday at Cabarrus County Hospital and discovered a four-inch piece of bone split off the femur. The leg was repaired, but it will be four weeks before Wassel will give Bonnett permission to began rehabilitation and the total recovery period may take three months.

"There's no reason to think Neil won't be able to continue racing, but recovery will take some time," said Wassel, officially describing the injury as "multiple fractures of the upper femur."

In the Sunday accident, his Pontiac struck the wall between the third and fourth turns of the 1.5-mile track after apparently blowing a tire. The car finally came to rest on the infield grass and rescue crews had to cut the top off the car before Bennett could be removed.

Bonnett was expected to remain at Cabarrus County Hospital the rest of this week and then be moved to a hospital in Birmingham, Ala.

Seidenspinner said Rahmoc plans to hire a driver to fill in for Bonnett and compete in the final three events — the Oct. A-C Delco 500 at Rockingham, N.C., the Winston Western 500 on Nov. 8 at Riverside, Calif., and the season-finale Atlanta Journal 500 on Nov. 22 in Hampton, Ga.

"We've got a few people in mind, and we're going to talk it over and see who's interested in the job," Seidenspinner said. "We'll announce our driver for Rockingham later this week."

Navratilova Takes 1st Round Win

Farmville Central puts its unbeaten Eastern Plains Conference mark on the line this Friday against North Pitt, a team that can ill afford another division loss if it has any designs on repeating as EPC champions this year.

The Panthers, 2-3-1 overall and 1-1 in the EPC, dropped a 17-12 decision to Greene Central last Friday while Farmville was raising its record to 5-1 and 3-0 with a 14-6 win over Pamlico.

In all likelihood, the game could turn into a defensive struggle.

"It was last year," said Farmville coach Dixon Sauls. "Their inside defense is exceptionally strong. It makes it tough to run inside. We are improving defensively. It will be a game determined by the kicking game and defensive mistakes."

FC's Moses Streeter

AG's James Collins

The loss to Greene Central came after an emotional 16-14 win over Ayden-Grifton and it left the Panthers with an even conference mark.

"It's a setback," Bolger said. "But I wouldn't classify it as a major setback. It is going to make this game against Farmville Central that much more important. They are the only team without a loss (in the conference) and hopefully we can get taped back together and give them a good ballgame."

If there was one bright spot for the Panthers last week, it was the defense, according to Bolger.

"I thought the defense did a super job," he said. "The only time we really didn't do it (defensively) was late in the football game when we let them get three or four first downs. In the third quarter, the defense gave us the ball inside their 30 and we didn't do anything and we made them cough it up on their 19 and couldn't do anything. That is when you're supposed to take advantage."

The Panthers could have their hands full defensively against the Jaguars.

Farmville's Gary Moore has rushed for 788 yards this season, including 223 against Pamlico in a 14-6 Jaguar win Friday night.

The key matchup could be how well the Jaguars' I-formation works against North Pitt's defense led by linebacker Ashley Sheppard.

If there is one definite, it is that the Jaguars are a much better team than a year ago.

"They are well-improved," Bolger said. "They had a tough game against Pamlico. Pamlico is not ready to line down and Farmville found that out Friday night."

Then again, there is always the revenge factor. Last year, as the Panthers were cruising towards a conference title when they were derailed by Farmville, 6-0 in overtime. That loss allowed Ayden-Grifton to tie the Panthers for the EPC title.

"We expect North Pitt to be highly motivated," Sauls said. "With them having a conference loss and (since) last year we upset them, we expect to meet a highly motivated team.

"From the standpoint of the conference race, it is important to all teams when they play a conference game. It (this game) is important. It's a county rivalry. Both teams are fighting for the conference championship. That in itself makes it important."

North Pitt, a pre-season favorite in the EPC, needs a win to keep pace in the race for a playoff spot. The Panthers have struggled offensively this season due to injuries.

Quarterback Calvin Hunter no sooner returned from a foot injury two weeks ago than he suffered a shoulder bruise. Halfback-defensive back Billy Hardison has also missed time with a ankle injury.

While Hunter is still in the lineup, offensive lineman Tony Hopkins has a knee injury and could be out the season, according to North Pitt Coach Larry Bolger.

For Bolger, whose team returned a lot of the key players off last year's playoff team, the season has been quite an experience.

"You get in a position where you don't think you have to work as hard with the talented players you have and all of a sudden you're in a position where you have to work harder than you ever have," Bolger said. "This has been a freak year. Hopefully, we can keep them glued together, earn a playoff spot and then get healthy."

A win would be a step in the right direction for the Panthers.

But the task will be a tough one.

NP's Kevin Briley

NP's Matt Davis

Farmville is playing well and boasts a powerful fullback, Billy Hardison, to team with Moore in the backfield.

"In the I-formation, you don't want the opposition keying on your tailback, particularly a tailback the caliber of Gary Moore," Sauls said. "The key for us is our approach to the game mentally. We need to be up for the game but we don't need to over prepare and be uptight. We need to be enthusiastic and ready to play."

Ayden-Grifton

The Chargers take on Greene Central Friday in a game that also could have playoff ramifications.

Both teams need to win to keep pace in the race for one of the conference's three playoff spots.

"I don't expect them to have a letdown," said Charger coach B.T. Chappell. "They had lost to Aycock but they came back to beat North Pitt. (Now) they have to beat either us or Farmville."

The Chargers had an off-week last week following a 16-14 loss to North Pitt and Chappell said he wasn't sure how his team would react.

AG's George Fuller

FC's Gary Tripp

"It's kind of hard to say," he said. "I hope it's given us a chance to go back and look at some basic fundamentals. I hope it will help us."

But the Chargers face a tough test in the Rams. Greene Central boasts the top passing attack in the conference behind quarterback Kris Radford.

"The way they set up their passes with play action fakes and dives, I just hope our defense backs don't try to come up too hard and assist on the run," Chappell said. "They put a lot of pressure on the corners.

"The Greene Central team is improving week by week. They've improved tremendously. Last year they were the only team in the conference to win a playoff game after scratching to earn the last spot. They're the type of kids that work hard and have a good attitude."

A key matchup will be how the Greene Central defense stops Ayden-Grifton's fleet of running backs led by Eric Blount, who has totaled 507 yards on the ground.

"Their defense would rate as the top defensive team in the conference," Chappell said. "We know it will be the type of ballgame if they do the type of job they did against North Pitt, we're going to have to play well to expect to win.

"The main thing we'd like to do is establish the ability to control the football. I don't think they're going to give up the big play."

Lady Pirates Experienced; Must Overcome Injuries

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

With eight returning veterans, East Carolina women's basketball coach Pat Pierson has some experience to build around for the 1987-88 season.

Pierson, who replaced Emily Manwaring as women's coach, will be fielding her first squad for the Pirates after a successful tenure at Northwestern (La.).

And while she is expecting a good season, she'll learn early just how good her first team could be. The Lady Pirates open the season at the Lady Kat Classic against Central Michigan, and will play at least four members of the pre-season Top Twenty.

Those four teams include Duke, North Carolina State, Southern California and James Madison. And, depending on how first round games go in the three tournaments the Lady Pirates play, there may be one or two more.

"It's a very challenging schedule," Pierson said on the eve of the start of practice, which begins Thursday.

"We have a lot of returnees, but we've also had some knee problems that could hurt us. We have good experience, but the knee injures leave us with some question marks."

Irish Hamilton (5-3, So.) is expected to start at point guard. She went down with an injury late last season and had surgery. Another guard, Pam Williams (5-8, Jr.) also was injured and underwent surgery in the off-season.

Then, this summer Sarah Gray (6-1, So.), who made the Colonial Athletic Association's All-Freshman team last year, was injured in a pickup game and also underwent surgery. Pierson said Gray would be out for the year as a redshirt.

Pat Pierson

The Lady Pirates return 6-0 forward-center Alma Bethea (Sr.), 6-2 forward-center Gretta O'Neal (Jr.), and forward Monique Pompili (6-0, Sr.) to give plenty of experience in the front line. Chris O'Connor, a 5-9 junior forward, also saw a good deal of action last year, providing still more experience.

Others returning from last year's team include Christi Harris, a 5-10 sophomore forward, and Rose Miller, a 6-2 junior center.

Newcomers are Katherine Kinney, a 5-6 guard, Wendy Morton, a 5-7 guard, and Sandra Grace, a 6-2 center who was brought in by Manwaring a year ago, but was redshirted.

"We're looking for good leadership from our seniors," Pierson said. "And everyone has been working hard in our pre-season conditioning program. I'm pleased with the attitude the players have shown. I have every reason to be positive about the season."

Early on, Pierson expected to do a lot of teaching. "They have to learn a whole new system. The girls have to become acquainted with my philosophy and my game style."

Too, Pierson expects to do a lot of scrimmaging over the first few weeks. "We want to see them play, to see what they can do and how they play together," Pierson said.

And despite the fact that there is so much experience back, Pierson feels that this season is one of transition. "I have to be patient in putting in my system and the players have to be patient in learning my style and what I expect of them.

"Of course, everyone's goal is to win 20 games and win the conference tournament and earn a berth in the NCAA," Pierson said. She also considers James Madison to again be the team to beat in the CAA, but also considers American, George Mason and UNC-Wilmington as strong contenders.

"I think this will be an intersting year since I have so much to learn about the players and our competition. But I'm excited about it and I think they are excited about it too."

The key, however, appears to be how well the two point guards, Hamilton and Williams, come off surgery. If they are ready to go at full speed, and there are no further injuries, the Lady Pirates could well be in the race for the CAA title once again.

Seventy-First Plunges After Losing; Rose, Tribe Ranked

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

After battling Greensboro Page for the top spot in The Associated Press 4-A high school football poll the first six weeks of the season, defending champion Fayetteville 71st plunged to No. 8 with a loss to Fayetteville Smith.

Page, 6-0, continued to be the top-ranked 4-A squad with nine first-place votes and 160 points in voting Tuesday by a statewide panel of prep sports writers. Havelock in 3-A, Whiteville in 2-A and Murphy in 1-A also retained their top billing.

Garner, 7-0 and one of the surprise teams of the season, moved up from fourth to the second spot vacated by 71st. The Trojans received two first-place votes and 136 points.

Gastonia Ashbrook remained No. 3 with four top votes and 130 points, followed by Wilmington New Hanover's two and 114.

The rest of the 4-A poll included Greenville Rose, Kannapolis Brown, Waynesville Tuscola, Northern Durham and Charlotte Harding.

Havelock and Burlington Cummings inched closer in the battle for the top 3-A spot. Havelock, 6-0, received 11 first-place votes and 156 points despite winning a close overtime game against East Carteret last Friday night. Meanwhile, Cummings, also 6-0, garnered five top votes and 154 points.

North Iredell, 6-0, received the other first-place vote and pulled in at No. 8.

East Wake was third, followed by Central Cabarrus, defending champion Shelby, Burns, Asheboro, Brevard and newcomer South Iredell, which replaced Southern Nash.

Six 2-A schools received first-place votes, but Whiteville, 6-0, is still on top with five top votes and 139 points.

Maiden, 6-0, jumped up from third to second with seven first-place votes and 129 points. Ahoskie, 6-0, was a close third with one top vote and 126 points.

No. 4 Lexington, 6-1 and the two-time defending state champs; No. 6 Wallace-Rose Hill; and No. 7 Edenton Holmes also garnered first-place votes.

Newton-Conover, Thomasville, Fuquay-Varina and North Rowan rounded out the Top 10.

Leaders Hold To Spots In Reflector Rankings

Garner, Wallace-Rose Hill and Swain continued to hold to first place in their respective divisions in the Daily Reflector's High School Performance Rankings this week.

Garner, 7-0, continues to lead the 4-A ranks, but has the advantage of not having sat out an open date this year. That will not come up until the final week of the regular season. Garner has amassed 45 points thus far.

Points are awarded for each game a team wins, with additional points awarded each time a team's victims post a victory. Thus Rose High School received points for defeating Beddingfield this past week, with additional points awarded for the Bruins' two victories to date.

Kannapolis (6-0) leaps from a tie for seventh to second place this week among the 4-A's with 41 points while New Hanover (6-0) and Greensboro Page (6-0) are tied for third with 40 points. Greenville's Rose High (6-0) is fifth with 39 points.

The only newcomer this week in 4-A's is Northern Durham, in in a tie for sixth.

In the 3-A ranks, Havelock regains the lead. The Rams, 7-0, have 45 points to date. They will face their open date this weekend, however, and that will put their lead in jeopardy.

East Wake (6-0) is second with 37 points while Burlington Cummings (6-0) is third with 36.

There were no newcomers this week in the 3-A's.

Wallace-Rose Hill, tied for first in the 2-A ranks last week, assumes the lead alone this week with 36 points. Wallace-Rose Hill is 6-0 on the year. Lexington, 6-1 and tied for first last week, drops to second this week with 33 points. Newton-Conover, 6-0, is third with 32.

Edenton and Ahoskie, both from the Northeastern Conference, move into the 3-A ranks, taking sixth and a tie for eighth, respectively. Fuquay-Varina is the only other newcomer.

Swain, despite an open date, held to its lead in the 1-A ranks with 25 points. Swain has a 6-0 record. Alleghany, 7-0, moved past Murphy to take second with 23½ while Murphy (7-0) slips to third with 23.

There were no newcomers in the 1-A ranks.

Flutie Traded To Patriots

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Doug Flutie wanted to come home. Raymond Berry wanted to win. So the quarterback and the coach got together.

Berry, New England's coach, plans to start Flutie against the Houston Oilers on Sunday, just five days after the Patriots obtained the former Boston College star from the Chicago Bears.

Barring an end to the NFL players' strike, Sunday's games will mark the third week of action with replacement players. Dissatisfaction with quarterbacks Bob Bleier and Todd Whitten prompted Tuesday's trade of an undisclosed draft choice for Flutie.

"These games count and we have two very young, inexperienced quarterbacks," Berry said. "The strike seems like it's going to be a long one and we can't sit around on our rear ends. We got to get something done."

New England is in a four-way tie for first place in the AFC East with a 2-2 record. It is 1-1 in replacement games but has scored just 24 points. Bleier went all the way at quarterback in both games.

Flutie, a long-time resident of Natick, Mass., brightened the Patriots' prospects after deciding that his future was dim in Chicago.

Mike Tomczak is the starting quarterback for the regular Bears, who also have rookie first-round draft choice Jim Harbaugh. Chicago Coach Mike Ditka has indicated he will keep replacement quarterback Mike Hohensee, and Flutie said Jim McMahon, who is on injured reserve, is recovering.

Despite indications that he wasn't fully accepted by his Chicago teammates, Flutie said, "I had a very good working relationship with guys out there."

He said he agonized over his decision after the Patriots contacted him Monday night.

"I hesitated a few times. I wasn't sure because of the nature of the situation," Flutie said. "I firmly believe in the union and the things that they stand for but I saw this as an opportunity to get to New England, a place that I wanted to be, and an opportunity that probably wouldn't be there down the road.

The Patriots had a chance to draft Flutie in 1985, the year after he won the Heisman Trophy. With quarterbacks Tony Eason, Steve Grogan and Tom Ramsey already on the rster, they bypassed Flutie and the Los Angeles Rams took him on the 11th round.

"The consensus at that time was that the quarterback situation that we had was one of the best in the NFL and we ought not to disrupt that," he said. "The quarterback situation has changed."

Eason, Grogan and Ramsey are still on the team, but they are on strike. Berry said he plans to keep four quarterbacks after the strike and Flutie will be the fourth-stringer.

He added that the 45-man roster limit will be increased after the strike, allowing him to keep four quarterbacks.

Bob Woolf, Flutie's attorney, said an assurance that Flutie would be kept was not a condition of the player's agreement to join the Patriots.

The 5-foot-9¾-inch Flutie set Boston College records for pass attempts, completions, passing yardage and touchdown passes for a season and a career. He also set an NCAA career record of 10,579 passing yards, which has been broken.

Despite that, he hasn't been able to escape the criticism that he's too short to play in the NFL.

"If there's anybody that can overcome the height and size disadvantage he can because of such superior gifts in these other areas" of throwing and running with the ball, Berry said.

"I was taught football by my dad who, in 35 years of coaching, found out that he had no prejudice against small football players. He had too many of them that won games for him and that's the object."

In two pro seasons, Flutie hasn't come close to the success he had at Boston College, where he led the Eagles to three bowl games, including a Cotton Bowl victory on Jan. 1, 1985.

"Why should I? We got a run," Herzog said wryly when asked if he planned changes in a Cardinals batting order that has so far done little against Giants left-hand pitching. "I'm going with the same lineup. Jack Clark won't be in it."

Clark, the St. Louis first baseman who missed the end of the season and these playoffs, revealed Tuesday that he has torn ligaments in his right ankle. Clark may be available for pinch hit duties.

San Francisco Manager Roger Craig expressed irritation over Leonard being pelted with beer and other debris by fans in left field, but said he expects the Giants to bounce back.

"I was confident before, and I'm confident now," Craig said. "You have to give them (St. Louis) credit. It was a shame one of the pitchers had to lose."

Rampettes Top Gryphons; Roanoke Downs Tarboro

Rose High School's girls' tennis team rolled up an 8-1 victory over Rocky Mount Tuesday to run its record to 12-0 on the season.

The lone loss for the Rampettes came in the number one singles where Rachael Jones scored a split set victory over Wendy Simpson. It was the first loss of the year for Simpson, and, for Jones, avenged her only loss of the season.

Gina Parrott and Nicole Maxon, however, continue unbeaten in singles action, while Simpson and Kathryn Taft, and Parrott and Maxon are still unbeaten in doubles play.

Rose is now 11-0 in Big East play and plays at Wilson Beddingfield on Thursday.

Summary:

Rachael Jones (RM) d. Wendy Simpson, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Gina Parrott (R) d. Angie Abernathy, 6-0, 6-1.

Kathryn Taft (R) d. Lisa Adkins, 6-0, 6-1.

Simpson-Taft (R) d. Jones-Abernathy, 8-2.

Parrott-Maxon (R) d. Zerjan-Adkins, 8-1.

Smith-Park (R) d. Tillery-Odom, 8-3.

Exhibition: Laura Young (R) d. Kara Merz, 8-2; Jenny Stoneham (R) d. Laura Woolsey, 8-2.

Roanoke.....5
Tarboro.....4

TARBORO — Roanoke took four out of six singles matches to hold off Tarboro, 5-4, in a non-conference tennis match Tuesday.

Roanoke's top seeds, Robbie Harris and Nancy Johnson, both won easily to raise their individual records to 14-0 on the year. The Lady Redskins improve to 13-1 and host D.H. Conley in a non-conference matchup Thursday.

Summary:

Robbie Harris (R) d. Ashley Cooper 6-1, 6-0 (14-0)

Nancy Johnson (R) d. Kim Talbot 6-2, 6-1 (14-0)

Jane Braxton (T) d. Amy Stegal 6-1, 6-1

Margie Morgan (T) d. Melissa Manning 7-6, 6-1

Vinya Gurganis (R) d. Margaret Creech 6-0, 6-2

Harris-Johnson (R) d. Cooper-Talbot 8-3

Braxton-Morgan (T) d. Guganis-Young 8-2

Creech-Savage (T) d. Stegal-Leigh Roberson 8-3

With Plan Rejected, Players Face Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Their hopes for a quick settlement dashed, the NFL Players Association must now cope with yet another day in which the union's solidarity will be severely tested.

The NFLPA's offer to return to work under certain conditions, including binding arbitration on unsolved issues, was rejected Tuesday by the Management Council. The union rejected management's counterproposal, so now the league's striking players face another deadline — return to work by today by 1 p.m. or forfeit another week's pay.

"It doesn't matter how many times we try, they just refuse us at every turn," union chief Gene Upshaw said. "What we have is a threat to see if the players will break rank. They're bent on busting the union."

Several players, including New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor and New England Patriots quarterback Doug Flutie, expected to cross picket lines today. The number of defections rose to 138 Tuesday when five more players, three Pittsburgh Steelers and two Los Angeles Raiders, joined their teams.

Washington Redskins defensive end Dextor Manley said Tuesday that he would cross the picket line, but on his morning radio program here today he said he had changed his mind and decided to remain out.

That meant about 9 percent of the 1,585 players under union jurisdiction have crossed picket lines since the strike began Sept. 22.

But two teams, the Washington Redskins and the Kansas City Chiefs, who have yet to have any players cross picket lines, voted Tuesday to honor the strike for at least another week.

Tuesday's action on the negotiating front featured volleys between Upshaw and management head Jack Donlan, but no agreement and no new date for the talks to resume. Upshaw said he expected to stay in contact with Donlan by telephone, but left the next move to the Management Council.

"It's in his court now," Upshaw said.

The day started when the owners considered, then rejected, the players' demand for mediation and then binding arbitration. The owners also insisted that returning players be bound by the 1982 agreement for as long as it would take to put a new agreement in place.

Upshaw countered by saying he would accept mediation on the key issue of free agency. But he demanded arbitration on the other issues and said there would have to be a time limit on how long the players would operate under the 1982 agreement.

"I'm trying to get the players back to work, but under some conditions in which we can all live under," he said. "We're willing to work under the old agreement for some period of time, but at some point there has to be a cutoff.

"We don't want this process to just go on for ever and ever."

Donlan said he saw no reason to resume the talks that broke off last Sunday unless the union changes its position on key issues.

The league said the strike-replacement games would go on again for the third weekend with free agents and those veterans who crossed the picket line.

"They're intent on busting the union," Upshaw said. "It just shows that the people in control don't want to reach agreement."

Among the items included in the union's original proposal was a demand that the jobs of the 45 players on a team's roster at the beginning of the season be protected. The union was concerned that some strikers would lose their jobs to replacements who have played since the strike began.

But management offered to guarantee the salaries of striking players only for two games.

"We think it should be much longer than that," Upshaw said.

The owners acceded to a union request to protect player representatives and union officials, saying they would guarantee their salaries for the rest of the season even if they are cut. They also said players would not be disciplined for strike activities if the union doesn't discipline its members who crossed the picket lines.

But the key condition separating the sides was the union's bid to end the standoff via binding arbitration. The owners said arbitration could force them to give up control of the game.

"It's very simple," Donlan said. "They want binding arbitration and we don't want any part of it. We've told them that many times when they've proposed it. The only surprise is that they'd come back to it now."

Upshaw said he was trying to do anything he could to get the players back in time for this weekend's games, but reiterated his vow that the players might stay out for the rest of the season.

"If they want the season canceled, maybe that's what it will come to," Upshaw said.

But he said he would entertain any suggestions from the owners in response to the union's request for arbitration on issues not involving free agency, a time limit on the negotiations or guarantees for players on the roster the day the strike was called.

"If we can reach an agreement on our memorandum, I'm sure we can get the regulars back," Upshaw said. "If I'm satisfied with it. I'm sure the players will say that's good enough, we'll go back to work."

But the only players who will return to work today will be those crossing picket lines.

Flutie, the Heisman Trophy winner, was traded by Chicago to New England on Tuesday. He will reportedly will join the Patriots today after honoring the strike as a member of the Bears.

Flutie's agent, Bob Woolf, said the only reason he would report was that the trade brought him back to the site of his college heroics at Boston College.

The most noteworthy of the players to cross the line Tuesday was running back Frank Hawkins of the Raiders.

McGhee's Saving Catch Typified Cardinals' Effort

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "Come on, Willie. Come on, Willie," St. Louis pitcher John Tudor yelled as he watched center fielder Willie McGee chase down a shot in the gap and save at least one run.

McGee's graceful play was among several visions dancing like Christmas sugar plums in the minds of the St. Louis Cardinals after they beat the San Francisco Giants Tuesday night.

They talked in the locker room about the brilliant pitching by both sides and the plays that won the game for St. Louis, 1-0, and lost it for the Giants to tie the National League playoffs at 3-3 and send them into a deciding game tonight for the pennant.

McGee's catch ... a disputed call at third base against the Giants ... Candy Maldonado losing a liner in the lights for a triple and throwing wide to home plate to let in the only run. Those were the plays that made Game 6 a flawed gem in this sparkling series.

The players talked, too, of the character of a St. Louis team jinxed by injuries but still scrapping, and a San Francisco squad that may have tried too hard.

"I think sometimes you see a team that's won a couple of games, and begin to think it's great," the Cardinals' Ozzie Smith said. "We've been through it before. Nothing's been easy for us all year. This club has played especially well with its back to the wall."

The Cardinals, wrapped in yards of tape under their uniforms, picked themselves off the trainer's table and turned the Giants for one night into "Mumm Babies."

Tudor eluded trouble for 7 1-3 scoreless innings, giving up six hits and three walks while striking out six. Todd Worrell and Ken Dayley didn't give up a hit or a walk the rest of the way.

Dave Dravecky was just as good, allowing five hits and no walks while striking out eight in six innings. Don Robinson pitched two innings of no-hit ball.

The difference was one run after a triple that should have been caught, postponing for at least one night a celebration for which the Giants have waited 25 years.

The Giants got the first batter on base in four innings without scoring, in part because of the St. Louis defense. McGee scotched one threat with his marvelous run, snaring a drive by Jose Uribe with runners on first and second and one out in the second.

"Without a doubt, it was the biggest play of the game," Tudor said.

Maybe, but it's hard to top what happened in the bottom of the inning.

Tony Pena led off with a low line drive that appeared to be an easy catch for Giants right fielder Candy Maldonado. Instead, he played it into a triple, falling clumsily to one knee as he lost the ball in the lights and let it fly over his head to the wall.

"Right now I feel if there was a hole I could fit in," Maldonado said glumly in the Giants clubhouse. He didn't finish the thought. He didn't have to.

"I play my heart out, out there," he said, his eyes dazed and near tears and his voice soft and somber. "I try as hard as I can, maybe too hard."

Maldonado, who also lost a ball in the lights at Candlestick Park in San Francisco in Game 3, had a chance to redeem himself one out after Pena's hit, but he blew it again.

Maldonado caught a pop fly by Jose Oquendo down the line and threw it wide to the plate as Pena barely eluded catcher Bob Melvin's tag to score the only run.

"If I make a good throw, the man is out," Maldonado said. "And we might still be playing."

Maldonado, who also is hitting poorly with a .211 average, joked that he might have to wear glasses if he plays tonight and said he could only think of one solution for his woes.

"I'll just go home and pray," he said.

35 ECU Student-Athletes Honored

A group of 35 East Carolina University student-athletes were named Colonial Scholar Athletes by the Colonial Athletic Association for their combined academic and athletic achievements for 1986.

The student-athletes, representing 11 Colonial Athletic Association sports, were honored by ECU chancellor Dr. Richard Eakin. The group included six members of the men's swim team, six baseball players, five members of the women's swim team and four soccer players. Other sports represented were women's basketball, men's and women's cross country, golf, men's and women's tennis and volleyball. Football is not a CAA sport.

To qualify as a Colonial Scholar Athlete, the student must earn a varsity letter in a CAA sports and achieve a 3.2 grade point average on a 4.0 scale.

Out of the eight member institutions of the CAA, only one school, James Madison, had more scholar athletes (36) than ECU.

Award Recipients

Bethel Upends GCA In Volleyball Action

Bethel Christian took a 9-15, 15-4, 15-11 over Greenville Christian in high school volleyball action Tuesday.

GCA was led in hitting by Christy Hardison with 24. The top server was Erica Spain with 19. Missy Baggett led the setting with 17. Spain was tops in spikes with 13.

GCA falls to 4-9 and returns to action Thursday at Wilson Christian.

Emotion Could Be Tar Heels' Key

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — If North Carolina is to beat rival N.C. State this Saturday in Atlantic Coast Conference football, they must play with emotion and intensity — two ingredients that have been missing, Coach Dick Crum says.

"(N.C. State) certainly has come along in the last couple of ballgames," Crum said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "We are going to have to really rise to the occasion. I think a lot of our players are going to have to do a lot of soul searching this week to see how important this game is to them."

Crum said a victory Saturday before a sellout crowd may depend on senior leadership.

"I'm thinking we're going to get a good effort out of them," Crum said. "But, again, we'll have to wait and see."

Crum said he has no concrete answers why his club, now 3-3 overall and 1-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, played so poorly in a 22-14 loss to Wake Forest.

"We were absolutely flat," Crum said, referring to the Wake Forest game. "It's a ballgame ... we feel we should have won. But you have got to play with some emotion. We certainly didn't have it.

"If you ask me why, I don't have any good answers for it, other than we have had such a tough first-half schedule," Crum said, referring earlier losses to top-ranked Oklahoma and Auburn.

N.C. State, 2-3 and 2-1, has won two ACC games in a row after inserting Preston Poag into the quarterback slot in place of Shane Montgomery.

Crum disputed N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan's assessment that the Tar Heels will be the best team the Wolfpack will have played so far this season — including Pittsburgh — a team that crushed N.C. State 34-0 in the second week of the season.

"I don't think so," Crum said. "Not at the level we are at right now. Now, if we would go over there and decide to play, yes, we could be."

Crum also said his team is throwing the ball too much.

"I think we have been throwing just enough to lose," he said. "I think we need to get our running game going. We need to be able to run the football. We have not done that ..."

Quarterback Mark Maye has completed 90 of 176 passes, but has thrown only six TD passes and has eight interceptions.

Crum said having six different starting tailbacks in six games has hurt the running game. Game one tailback starter Torin Dorn is still doubtful and Crum said the sophomore won't be getting out of his ankle cast until next week.

"It's an important game for us, I don't think there is any question about that," Crum said.

Last season, the Wolfpack defeated the Tar Heels 35-34 in Chapel Hill. Before that contest, North Carolina had won seven in a row between the two schools.

Deacs' Rogers Named Top Acc Frosh

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest tailback Tony Rogers, who averaged more than six yards per carry in the Demon Deacons' victory at North Carolina, has been named Atlantic Coast Conference rookie of the week.

Rogers, a 5-9, 185-pound redshirt freshman from Wellford, S.C., ran for a career-high 93 yards on 15 carries as Wake Forest extended its two-year win streak to six games with a 22-14 victory over the Tar Heels. Rogers also caught two passes for 22 yards and had a 39-yard run that set up the first of a school-record five field goals by kicking specialist Wilson Hoyle.

Earlier, the selection committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association chose Clemson's Terr Allen and John Phillips as the offensive players of the week and Wake Forest's Kelly Vaughan and Georgia Tech's Riccardo Ingram as the ACC's defensive players of the week.

Wille's 3 Goals Lead Rose

Brian Wille scored all of Rose's goals in a 3-1 win over Rocky Mount in Big East soccer action Tuesday.

The Rampants jumped out to an early 2-0 advantage as Wille scored his first goal at the 11:00 minute mark on an assist by Jason Bizzaro. Wille added his second goal at the 21:00 minute mark on an assist by Bobby Weisenberger.

The Gryphons closed to within 2-1 by halftime but Rose Wille struck again at the 75:00 minute mark to provide the final margin.

Rose outshot Rocky Mount, 12-4.

"We certainly should have put the ball in the net a few more times," said Rose coach Will Wiberg. "The opportnities were certainly there."

Rocky Mount goalie Forrest Smith came up with nine saves while Rampant goalie Sean Murphy stopped three shots.

Rocky Mount could have tied the Rampants for first place in the Big East soccer standings, but instead fall a game behind.

GCA ..... 5
Bethel ..... 1

Greenville Christian Academy romped to a 5-1 victory over Bethel Christian of Kinston Tuesday behind two goals by Franklin Huggins.

Billy Parker started the scoring off for GCA, which held a 3-0 lead after the first half. Parker scored unassisted at the 11:57 mark. He was followed by Kevin Joyner, assisted by Huggins at the 20:24 mark. Huggins and Joyner then swapped roles for the third goal of the half at 35:48.

Huggins then scored his second goal only 30 seconds into the second half. That was followed by another by Matthew Patton two and a half minutes later for a 5-0 lead.

GCA took 30 shots on goal while Bethel goalie Joe Hardison recorded 11 saves. Bethel had only 10 shots with GCA's Brad Dixon getting nine saves.

Greenville Christian is now 4-4 in conference play and 4-7 overall. The Knights travel to Ridgecroft on Thursday.

Reagan Says He'll Pick Conservative Again

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, sounding resigned to defeat on Robert H. Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court, vows that any new candidate he picks will upset liberal opponents "just as much."

Reagan's statement Tuesday drew quick criticism from Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who warned that harsh comments from the president could jeopardize his next nominee.

"It's not helpful," Byrd said of Reagan's statement. "I deplore this kind of remark, this tone coming out of the White House."

Byrd said if Reagan is going to "engage in ... innuendo and bitterness" the next nominee would be endangered.

Meanwhile, Senate Democrats and Republicans skirmished over the timing of the Bork debate, but nothing was settled.

Reagan, abandoning the low-key tone suggested by Bork himself on his nomination, derided tactics used against his nominee as "a political joke."

With the ranks of Bork's critics still growing in the Senate — reaching 54 with an anti-Bork declaration from Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev. — Reagan planned to talk about the nomination today in an address from the Oval Office.

ABC and CBS decided not to interrupt afternoon soap operas to show the president, while NBC reserved judgment. Cable News Network said it would carry Reagan.

Reagan, in a series of appearances in New Jersey on Tuesday, softened his rhetoric about Bork's opponents in one speech but then turned up the heat in a later address when a woman at a Republican fund-raiser shouted, "We want Bork, too."

"You want Bork, too? So do I," Reagan said in a resolute voice.

Dropping the restrained approach that aides said he adopted in deference to Bork's wishes, the president spoke with emotion about his embattled nominee.

"Yes, Bork is staying in, and we know the odds are against getting enough people to turn around their vote," Reagan continued.

However, he said, "what's at issue here is not one man and what happened to him. What's at issue is that we make sure that the process of appointing and confirming judges never again is turned into such a political joke.'"

Speaking over the applause of the audience, Reagan added, "And if I have to appoint another one, I'll try to find one that they'll object to just as much as they did for this one."

Back in Washington, Byrd cautioned against just such a move.

In remarks on the Senate floor, Byrd scolded the administration for not listening to Democratic advice that Bork would be controversial, saying Reagan "could have saved Judge Bork ... a traumatic experience."

"It's important that the administration listen to the counsel of some of the people in this body before it sends up another nominee," Byrd said.

Bork, a constitutional scholar, had raised fears among critics who said his hardline views would tip the ideological balance of the high court. Opponents spent millions of dollars on television spots and advertisements attacking Bork's philosophy.

In vowing to stay and fight the odds against confirmation, Bork asked last Friday for a lowering of voices in the debate.

However, a speech prepared for Reagan and distributed to reporters in advance Tuesday accused opponents of waging "a sophisticated campaign of smears and lies." It also claimed that "a few liberal special interests have declared a war of conquest on the American system of justice."

Even before Reagan left the White House for the trip to New Jersey, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan's speech was being rewritten "to restrain the language and depoliticize the process and set a dignified tone for this debate."

When Reagan delivered the address later, there was no mention of lies. Instead, he said the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on the nomination were "marred by distortions and innuendos."

Reagan said there was an important principle at stake — the method of determining the fitness of judicial candidates. "The ultimate decision will impact on each of us and each of our children if we don't undo what has already been done and see that that kind of performance is never repeated."

The revised language was written by White House communications director Tom Griscom on Monday. Griscom said he did not know that the text of the original remarks would be given to reporters.

When a reporter suggested that many people believed the White House had calculated to have it both ways, with two sets of remarks, Griscom bristled and replied, "A lot of you are wrong."

Gunmen Slay Five In Shop

PASCO, Wash. (AP) — Two gunmen burst into an auto body shop and opened fire, killing five men and wounding a sixth, police said.

The victims were working on an old car inside the shop on the city's east side Tuesday night when the two men entered, looked around and went back outside, said Police Chief Don Francis.

The pair returned with automatic weapons and opened fire, Francis said.

Two men were questioned and later released, police said.

Four victims died at the scene. One was taken to Our Lady of Lourdes hospital, where he died, a nursing supervisor said.

Jesse Rocio, 20, of Pasco, was wounded in the side, but managed to hide under a vehicle until the gunmen fled, Francis said.

Rocio drove to the police station to report the shootings. He was then taken to Our Lady of Lourdes, where he was listed in stable condition late Tuesday. He did not require surgery.

Francis said automatic weapons, including at least one rifle, were used, and casings littered the floor.

There were no signs of a struggle, he said.

Pasco is in south-central Washington, 130 miles southwest of Spokane.

Educator Heads Standards Panel

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel seeking to create the first national certification standards for school teachers today named a Detroit educator as its president and added 34 prominent education and business leaders to its board of directors.

The National Board for Professional Teaching Standards said it had selected James A. Kelly, president of the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit, from a field of 250 candidates to serve as president.

The fledgling board, created last year with backing from both major teacher unions upon the recommendations of a Carnegie Corp. study panel, is setting out to devise new tests and other methods to confer voluntary certification on top elementary and secondary school teachers.

Its aim is to help improve the status and professional standing of school teachers, giving them a form of recognition and quality control now afforded to board-certified physicians, accountants and other professionals.

The 34 new members of the national board, chosen from more than 750 nominees, include two corporate chief executives, David T. Kearns of Xerox Corp., and Richard E. Heckert of the Du Pont Co.; E.K. Fretwell Jr., chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte; Norman Francis, president of Xavier University; and Yale University psychiatrist James P. Comer.

It also includes a host of award-winning teachers, including Jaime Escalante, the Los Angeles math teacher noted for his success in teaching calculus to inner-city Hispanic youth at Garfield High School.

They join 29 original board members including former North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, and union presidents Mary Hatwood Futrell of the National Education Association and Albert Shanker of the American Federation of Teachers.

"The national board has a historic assignment ... to improve the quality of education of children by establishing higher standards for professional teaching," said Kelly.

The board is faced with the task of deciding standards to which teachers at various grade levels and in various specialties should be held.

Kelly said it may cost $50 million over the next three to five years to develop ways to assess the qualifications of those who seek the board's imprimatur.

Out Of The Sky

LAKEPORT, Calif. (AP) — A scorched, 7-foot-long piece of metal that may be a piece of a Soviet rocket has been recovered between two houses here, officials said.

"We don't much enjoy stuff dropping out of the sky while we're sleeping," said the Everett Danforth, a 73-year-old retired police officer who found the piece in the alley between his house and a neighbor's Sunday afternoon.

He thought all the dishes in his cupboard had fallen out when the gray object hit the gravel alley 10 feet from his bedroom window.

Police said the object was a piece of metal about 7 feet long, 6 to 8 inches wide, a 16th of an inch thick, and scorched around the edges. There were no markings and no indications of where it was from, they said.

Bright, fiery lights were observed bursting out of the sky around 2:40 a.m. Sunday.

Danforth's neighbor, Maggie Pickle, didn't hear the commotion or see the light show the rocket created over Northern California, western Nevada and southern Oregon. But she is grateful the metal object hit at night, when her children were in bed.

Khrushchev Feared Cuban Invasion

By GEORGE JAHN
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Nikita Khrushchev ordered installation of missile sites in Cuba, precipitating the 1962 missile crisis, in the belief that a full-scale U.S. invasion of the island was imminent, a Soviet expert says.

Sergei Mikoyan made the observation Tuesday during a U.S.-Soviet conference at Harvard University on the crisis, a gathering scholars said was characterized by surprising frankness from the Soviet participants.

Mikoyan said Khrushchev, the Soviet leader at the time of the 13-day standoff 25 years ago this month, perceived a threat to Cuba from the Kennedy administration following the abortive U.S.-backed Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961.

"We in Moscow were convinced that such an invasion would follow, this time with all the American might," said Mikoyan, whose father, Anastas, was Khrushchev's special emissary to Fidel Castro at the time.

At a news conference Tuesday, McGeorge Bundy, national security adviser for President John F. Kennedy and a participant in the meeting here, said the United States had no such intention.

An invasion "was 180 degrees from what the Kennedy administration was thinking," he said. "We did not want an enlarged version of the Bay of Pigs."

Also representing the United States at the conference were two other top Kennedy administration officials, former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Theodore Sorensen, Kennedy's counsel and speechwriter.

Fedor Bulatsky, another Soviet participant in the conference sponsored by Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government, said Khrushchev's decision to install missiles in Cuba "was maybe the first step to strategic parity."

Burlatsky explained Khrushchev's thinking before he made the decision as: "Why do Americans have right around us so many bases, including the base near our border in Turkey, and we do not have the right to do the same thing?"

The crisis, which brought the world to the brink of nuclear war, began after Kennedy learned the Soviets had installed in Cuba nuclear missile sites capable of launching an attack on the U.S. mainland.

The crisis ended when Khrushchev agreed to pull the missiles out in exchange for an American pledge never to invade Cuba and to go ahead with plans to withdraw obsolete missiles from Turkey and Italy.

The United States also was said to have warned it was prepared to remove the missiles by air strikes.

Conference participants said the crisis was fueled by false assumptions on both sides. For instance, they said, Washington at one time was braced for partial Soviet mobilization in Eastern Europe that never came.

The tension was heightened after Soviet missiles shot down an American spy plane over Cuba, a decision Mikoyan said apparently was made without official Soviet or Cuban blessing.

"It was the human error of a small commander," said Mikoyan, adding "we have some doubts" on whether it was a Soviet or a Cuban officer who was involved.

Journalist Seymour M. Hersh, in The Washington Post on Sunday, said Cubans apparently fired the missile after an armed clash between Soviets and Cubans for control of anti-aircraft or surface-to-air missile bases during the crisis.

Mikoyan did not discount reports that there was fighting for control of the bases, but ruled out the possibility that the battles were between regular Soviet and Cuban troops, and suggested that any fighting might have involved anti-Castro Cubans.

Burlatsky, a former speechwriter for Khrushchev, also said the Soviet leader installed the missile sites apparently without deep consideration of what the American reaction would be.

Mikoyan agreed, saying the move was "adventurous because it did not take into consideration what would be the American response."

McNamara said that in retrospect, it is clear that "it's not possible to predict the actions of the two military powers in this nuclear age. It is not possible to manage crises in the nuclear age ... with a high degree of certainty."

Scholars at the session said it was remarkable because of the willingness of the Soviet participants to admit shortcomings in Soviet policy during the affair.

William Taubman, a specialist on the crisis, said the Soviet attitutde until now has been that the Soviets were right and the Americans wrong.

Verity Is Confirmed For Commerce Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — C. William Verity Jr., fresh from winning Senate confirmation as secretary of Commerce, now moves into the front lines of debate over the nation's trade troubles.

"Mr. Verity is a distinguished businessman and he is a leader," Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said before the Senate voted 84-11 for confirmation.

The 70-year-old Ohioan and retired chairman of Armco Inc., the nation's No.5 steelmaker, moves into a post left vacant by the death last July of Secretary Malcolm Baldrige in a rodeo accident.

Baldrige was a favorite of industrialists who saw him as more sympathetic than others in the administration to the problems presented by burgeoning imports. As a former steel executive, Verity has firsthand knowledge of the issue.

Senate approval followed a debate that found conservatives divided over Verity's longstanding push for expanded trade relations with the Soviet Union.

Critics complained that he was lukewarm at best toward using trade sanctions to prod the Soviets toward allowing greater Jewish emigration and other human rights measures. They also said he was not a supporter of export controls designed to keep militarily useful hardware out of communist hands.

"It is Mr. Verity and some of his colleagues who are now literally selling the Soviets the rope with which to hang the free world," Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said.

In Middletown, Ohio on Tuesday, Verity said the confirmation took longer than he expected.

"This whole position of increasing trade with the Soviet Union was blown way out of proportion," he said. He said Soviet trade currently is "too small to be of major importance but could grow in importance as the years go by."

Verity, in fact, has expressed doubts about mixing trade with unrelated matters. At his confirmation hearings, however, he pledged to uphold the so-called Jackson-Vanik provisions of U.S. trade law, which prescribe sanctions to exert pressure on the Soviets to open the door to greater Jewish emigration.

Helms conceded even before the Senate voted 85-8 to shut off a threatened filibuster that critics lacked sufficient support on the issue to prevent a confirmation vote, whose outcome had been a foregone conclusion.

Critics were obliged to be content with dramatizing their reservations.

"Mr. Verity does not seem to believe in the primacy of human rights," Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said. "He believes in profits."

Verity has been president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and headed the President's Commission on Private Sector Initiatives.

The critics, however, stressed that he also has been a leader of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economics Council, a group that promotes commercial relations between the countries.

Police Arrest 600 In Gay-Rights March

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Police officers, many wearing rubber gloves, arrested more than 600 gay-rights protesters outside the Supreme Court Tuesday in a mass demonstration designed to draw attention to their cause and denounce last year's landmark decision upholding a Georgia state sodomy law.

The peaceful demonstration marked the largest mass-arrest ever to take place at the court and the largest in Washington since the Vietnam era, police said. Arrests were made throughout the morning as group after group of demonstrators climbed the court's steps, crossed police barriers and sat down in the plaza in front of the building, where protests are prohibited.

"Civil disobedience is not new to gays and lesbians," said Pat Norman of San Francisco, co-chairman of the National March on Washington, which organized the demonstration and a massive weekend rally that preceded it. "Every day in our lives we commit the act of civil disobedience by loving another. We demand an end to this idiocy."

The demonstrators condemned the 1986 high court decision on the Georgia law, which bans homosexual conduct. In a bitterly divided decision, the court ruled that the Constitution does not protect homosexual relations between consenting adults, even in the privacy of their own homes.

The orchestrated demonstration turned occasionally raucous as protesters trampled through hedges in search of a back entrance to the court and shouted at police, ridiculing those who had donned surgical gloves as well as riot gear out of fear of contracting AIDS or other communicable diseases.

"Lesbians are low-risk," some yelled as glove-wearing police began to arrest a dozen lesbians who had formed the first wave of protesters.

"Your gloves don't match your shoes," they shouted later.

Apart from occasional pushing and shoving, however, there were no clashes between police and demonstrators. The courtroom, where justices were listening to arguments, remained open to the public most of the day.

All of those arrested were charged only with trespassing, a District of Columbia Police Department spokesman said, and were likely to be released by late Tuesday after paying a $100 fine. As the arraignment of prisoners began Tuesday evening, police estimated the number of arrests at about 600, though protest organizers said court officials had put the figure at 840.

Many of those arrested themselves wore bright yellow rubber gloves to mock what they described as an offensive D.C. police department practice of using gloves when arresting homosexuals to protect themselves from AIDS.

Capt. William White III, a police department spokesman, said surgical gloves were used by officers to reduce the risk of contracting any kind of communicable disease and "is not intended or designed to reflect upon any particular group."

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♡ | Pass | 2 ♡ | Pass |
| 4 ♡ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Opening lead: Two of ♠

Usually, when you get to combine your chances, they are in different suits. That is not a sine qua non. On this hand the chances are in the same suit.

Whether you play four-card majors or five, you have an automatic raise of one heart on the North cards. Since as little as the king of hearts and a doubleton club in partner's hand will offer play for game, South's jump to four hearts is automatic.

West got his side off to their best start with a club opening lead; had he led any other suit, you would have time to set up a diamond trick to take care of your losing club. Now, however, you do not have time to go after the diamonds, and have to hope that you can establish a second spade trick to take care of one of your losers.

Win the ace of clubs and cross to dummy with a trump to lead a spade to your king. If that were to lose and a club is returned, you would have to rely on a finesse of the ten of spades for your contract. Fortunately for you, the king wins, so you will still have two chances in the spade suit.

You can't afford to play a second round of trumps yet—you will need trumps as your line of communication. It is time to try the first of your additional chances by finessing the ten of spades. You are out of luck—East wins the jack and knocks out your remaining club stopper.

It is time for the last string to your bow. Cross to the table with a trump and ruff a low spade. Your care is rewarded when the ace comes toppling down, setting up the queen. And thanks to your foresight in not drawing trumps, you can still get back to dummy to cash the queen for your tenth trick.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON— Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Oct. 9.

HOUSE

AIRLINE ADS: By a vote of 246 for and 171 against, the House opted for Transportation Department rather than Federal Trade Commission regulation of airline advertising.

The vote left DOT as the sole regulator of such ads. It came during debate on an FTC reauthorization bill (HR 2897) that later was sent to conference with the Senate.

Under the amendment, the FTC was to have required publication of on-time performance records and more candor about discount tickets and frequent flyer programs.

Norman Mineta, D-Calif., who voted for the amendment, said consumers "are concerned about airlines. They are not complaining about advertising."

Opponent Rick Boucher, R-Va., said the FTC must step in because "unfair and deceptive airline advertising...have helped to earn this industry the American people's disdain and distrust."

Members voting yes wanted DOT rather than tougher FTC regulation of airline ads.

North Carolina voting yes: Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin lancaster, D-3, Stephen Neal, D-5, Howard Coble, R-6, W.G. Hefner, D-8, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Voting no: Walter Jones, D-1, David Price, D-4, Charles Rose, D-7, James Clarke, D-11.

Not voting: none.

FARM CREDIT BAILOUT: By a vote of 365 for and 49 against, the House sent to the Senate a bill (HR 3030) to keep the Farm Credit System, the nation's largest farm lender, from going insolvent.

Open-ended in its cost to taxpayers, the bailout is expected to cover FSC losses of $4 billion to $6 billion in fiscal 1988-92. It would rescue the FSC, a quasi-federal collection of 37 banks and 400 credit associations, from the consequences of bad loans to agricultural borrowers.

Key elements of the salvage effort are creation of a "Farmer Mac" secondary market for farm mortgage loans and a Temporary Assistance Corp. through which shaky FSC units will get appropriated funds.

Supporter Ed Jones, D-Tenn., said without the bill "many farm system institutions face the stark reality of collapse."

North Carolina Voting yes; Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, David Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Voting no: none.

Not voting: none.

SENTENCING REFORM: The House rejected, 183 for and 231 against, a bill (HR 3307) to postpone the effective date of new sentencing guidelines for federal judges from Nov. 1 to Aug. 1, 1988.

Developed by a special commission under a 1984 law, the guidelines will add uniformity to federal sentencing.

Supporter John Conyers, D-Mich., said more time is needed to instruct judges and court personnel in this "revolutionary change in th federal criminal system..."

Opponent Dan Lungren, R-Calif., said the measure would provide "a window of opportunity for those who are convicted criminals."

North Carolina voting yes: Walter Jones, Coble, Clarke

Voting No: Valentine, Lancaster, David Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger.

Not voting: none.

SENATE

ALIEN FAMILIES: By a vote of 55 for and 45 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to insure that children and spouses of newly legalized aliens also gain legal U.S. residency.

The amendment sought to prevent the Immigration and Naturalization Service from breaking up families, by deportation, in cases where not all members are eligible to seek residency under amnesty provisions of the 1986 immigration reform law.

It was proposed to the fiscal 1988 State Department authorization bill (S 1394), later sent to conference with the House.

Terry Sanford, D, voted no. Jesse Helms, R, voted yes.

SALT II TREATY: The Senate adopted, 57 for and 41 against, an amendment to the fiscal 1988 defense authorization bill requiring United States adherence to certain limits in the unratified 1979 SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union, if the Soviets reciprocate.

The limits are on the number of intercontinental ballistic missiles the superpowers can mobilize against each other. The $303 billion defense bill (S 1174) was sent to conference with the House.

Senators voting yes wanted to require Pentagon adherence to SALT II.

Trapper Says Gators, Wild Boars Make Up 'Fun Life'

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — John Tanner has trapped an occasional bear and monkey. But hungry alligators, wild boars and eager movie people take up most of his time, says the "honest-to-God Florida cracker."

It's a fun life, according to Tanner, who has trapped hogs for the federal government for more than two decades and gators for the state government for half that time.

He's fielded calls from movie producers who remember the killing "Crocodile Dundee" made at box offices after he trapped an alligator in February in an Orlando storm drain system and got national publicity.

"There's never a dull moment," Tanner, 46, said during a recent telephone interview from his Central Florida home in the town of Christmas.

"New York calls me at least once a week," he said. He said he has also received calls from Europe and Washington about possible movie deals.

"They're talking Robert Redford," Tanner said.

Tanner hasn't seen "Crocodile Dundee" the movie about an Australian crocodile hunter who travels to New York City that has generated so much interest in his real life.

"I don't have time," Tanner said. "I don't watch television. Sometimes a baseball game, but that's it."

Tanner may not come from the Outback, but his home is also a long way from New York, according to Orlando attorney Don Wright.

"He lives at the edge of the wilderness," Wright said. "He is an honest-to-God Florida cracker."

Possible titles for a movie are "Trapper Tanner" or "Gator John," according to Wright, who said that he and his client would be meeting with representatives of a movie studio to outline a script in the near future.

"I think the deal is going to arranged," Wright said.

Tanner is one of some 50 trappers the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission calls on to capture nuisance alligators day and night, most frequently during breeding season, which lasts from May through July.

"I've got a radio," Tanner said. "I can't get away from nobody. Sometimes we work around the clock and then we take off the day."

If there aren't many alligators roaming parking lots and backyards, there are enough wild boars roaming Kennedy Space Center to keep Tanner busy. Only 1 percent of the 145,000 acres that make up the principal launch site for NASA is developed, Tanner estimated.

"We don't have access back in the marshes and they keep multiplying," Tanner said.

In July, Tanner spent 30 straight hours tracking a 400-pound black bear that escaped from a Central Florida zoo. The bear was tranquilized with drugged bread after it was found and returned to its cage two days after is escaped.

One of the most difficult assignments Tanner ever undertook was capturing five rhesus monkeys that

ECU Designer Produces Clothes For Handicapped

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Maintaining independence is the key in designing clothes for arthritic and handicapped persons, said an assistant professor in the school of home economics at East Carolina University.

Diana Cone has researched and designed ways to aid elderly and arthritic women in dressing themselves and recently was contracted to design clothes for physically and mentally handicapped persons in Caswell Center, Kinston.

"We're in the planning stages" of the one-year project, which will begin this summer, she said. It is funded through the K.B. Reynolds Trust Fund.

"Other facilities in eastern North Carolina will also be involved," Mrs. Cones said, "but they haven't been identified."

Preliminary stages in the project involve identifying other facilities, and determining the number of participants in the study and getting their measurements. The project then would include developing a plan for designing and constructing the garments, and testing and evaluating their effectiveness, she said.

Mrs. Cone began research on clothing for the handicapped with her doctoral thesis at Florida State University in 1980-81, she said. Most of that information was surveyed to see what was available in the market.

"Very little had been done with arthritics" even though about 31 million Americans suffer with arthritis, she said.

As an assistant professor at the University of Arkansas from 1982 to 1986, Mrs. Cone "tested garments for arthritics and did some individual counseling work with different kinds of problems," she said.

She designed a shirtwaist dress, a blouse and a pair of pants "to generalize and come up with a design that would satisfy" general problems arthritics have, Mrs. Cone said. The tests were conducted in Arkansas with 25 elderly and arthritic women. "Arkansas has such a large percentage of elderly," she said.

The dress opens all the way down to prevent from having to step into it or pull it over the head. It is fastened with Velcro, which is directly correlated with buttons to give the dress a button-look without the difficulties of fastening buttons.

"We added additional room in the shoulder and upper arm area," she said. There also is a loop in the shoulder seam for those who are aided with dressing devices.

It was made from polyester, cotton and linen-type material in different colors.

The blouse was made of polyester, woven fabric or polyester-cotton blend. "With the elderly, we chose a lot of the polyester because it has easy care," Mrs. Cone said.

The blouse has a round neckline with kimono-style sleeves. "There's a lot of fullness in the arm area," she said. It also has an open-down front fastened with Velcro and loops in the shoulder.

The pants have a dropped front style, Mrs. Cone said. "We open them at both pockets" as opposed to one. "It leaves a large opening to put them on with." The pants are fastened with "heavy duty" Velcro and are equipped with elastic in the back waistband to prevent them from popping open. It also has loops in the seams for dressing devices. It was made of polyester woven fabric.

"We tried to make the garments look like regular store-bought garments and not bring attention to them," she said. The women "wore the garments, and evaluated (them) after each wear. Most of the women were satisfied."

Before the study, 10 women needed help dressing as opposed to one after the study, she said.

Her research and studies differ from the Caswell project in a variety of ways, Mrs. Cone said. There will a variety of age groups to consider and different areas of concern.

For example, spastic limbs, drooling and bladder control are among things to be considered when designing the clothes for the center, she said.

The project may encourage manufacturers and producers to include ideas and designs for the handicapped, Mrs. Cone said. Most magazines that include clothing for the handicapped have "limited style selections and the cost is expensive."

BUTTONS? — Diana Cone, an assistant professor in the school of home economics at East Carolina University, fastens a shirtwaist dress she designed to help elderly and arthritic women dress themselves. It is fastened with Velcro, but buttons are used to accent the external appearance of the dress. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis).

New Orleans Station Caters To Truckers

By BILL CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In a city known more for Dixieland jazz, the granddaddy of nighttime radio shows aimed at the American trucker dishes up a spicy gumbo of country tunes and down-home chitchat.

"We claim the Rockies to the Atlantic seaboard," said Dave Nemo, disc jockey in the driver's seat of station WWL, a 50,000-watt rig that booms a nighttime AMs signal all the way to Canada.

Nemo, 38, is the wheelman of the Road Gang, and his soft Mississippi drawl a comfort to lonely truckers on dark roads across the heartland.

"This is the granddaddy of all them. We are the longest continuous running trucking show in the country," Nemo boasted. He estimates that 1.5 million truckers and night owls listen each week from 43 states.

"Our loyal listeners include drivers out of Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Indiana — from the South up through the Ohio Valley," he said.

The Road Gang introduced the nation to trucker radio in 1972, striking a twangy chord from its French Quarter location.

After 15 years, the format of "country with guts" has remained unchanged despite a tide of easy listening and Top 40 stations. A trucker can still mash the brakes at a Midwest pay phone, dial the "Toll Free Trucker's Hot Line" and request a Hank Williams hit.

"We don't like that watered down disco sound," said Nemo with a scowl.

"The drivers are hard-working people. They're out there driving trucks and they want to hear good country music. You just can't hear that very much anymore."

The cab is a home away from home for most truckers, Nemo said. "I've announced new babies to dads on the road. I've announced deaths and marriages," he said.

In between Johnny Cash, motor oil ads and such songs as "Prisoner of the Highway," Nemo reads greetings to the family from Bert "heading into the barn at Dothan" and Dale out of Georgia "and on the road to Dallas."

And the hard-edged rockabilly and western tunes are a lively jolt intended to keep truckers alert. Explained Nemo, "My main occupation is to keep these guys and lady truckers awake at night."

He scans computer printouts on the weather and warns truckers of

Dick Van Patten Brings TV Family Together Sunday

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the six years that they've been absent from television screens, the "Eight Is Enough" family has grown to 18, and they're getting back together for the TV movie "Eight Is Enough: Reunion."

The family gathers to celebrate the 50th birthday of dad Tom Bradford, played by Dick Van Patten, and help him through a business crisis.

All of the original cast except for Betty Buckley returned for the two-hour movie, which NBC will air Sunday. Buckley was in France making the movie "Frantic" with director Roman Polanski.

Mary Frann, who stars in CBS' "Newhart," plays Tom's wife, Abby. There are eight children, six spouses and two grandchildren.

Van Patten said the idea for the reunion came about when he ran into director Harry Harris in New York. Harris had directed about a third of the episodes when the series ran on ABC from 1977 to 1981.

"We were talking on the sidewalk and people kept coming up to me and saying how much they missed 'Eight Is Enough,'" Van Patten said. "Harry couldn't believe the show was still so popular. He asked me if I would do a reunion show. I said of course I would. It took him about two years to put it together. ABC turned it down, but NBC said yes. It took a while to get all the actors together."

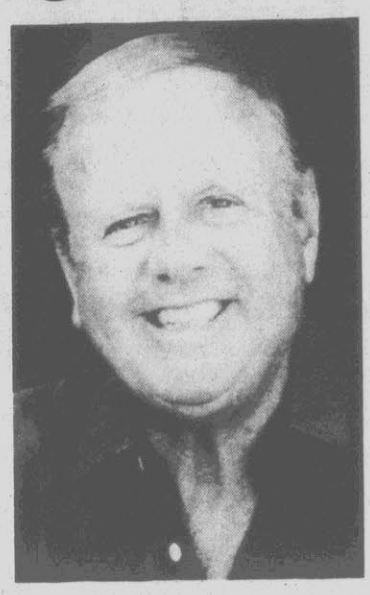
The exteriors for the movie were filmed at the original "Eight Is Enough" house in North Hollywood.

The series was based on the book "Eight Is Enough" by columnist Thomas Braden, who wrote it about his family. Diana Hyland was cast as the wife, Joan, but she died of cancer in the middle of filming the fourth episode.

"It was such a terrible tragedy," Van Patten said. "I'd worked with her for four years on two different soap operas. She was so happy to get the show. Pat (his wife) and I were with her when she died in John Travolta's arms. Pat and I had been to Mass at St. Paul's and stopped by her house. John answered the door. She was in a coma. We called the church and got the Rev. Bob Curtis to give her last rites. She died about two hours later."

Van Patten thought that would be the end of the show, but the producers brought in Betty Buckley and after a brief TV courtship they were married.

He recalled that he originally tested for the role with Mariette Hartley as the wife. Hyland began filming the first episode with a different actor, but after three days then-ABC Entertainment President Fred Silverman put Van Patten into the role instead. Van Patten was under contract to ABC, since he had played the doctor in a pilot for "The Love Boat."



DICK VAN PATTEN

Van Patten said he's looking for a new series and considered doing one for Fox Broadcasting Co., a sort of "Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" about his own family. The Van Pattens have three sons — Nels, Jimmy and Vincent, who are all actors and tennis players.

Later this month, Van Patten and his wife, a former June Taylor dancer who makes a cameo apperance in "Eight Is Enough: Reunion," will be guests at the White House. Van Patten was last seen in feature films in "Spaceballs." He will be guest starring this season in an episode of "Rags to Riches" and on Jay Leno's Thanksgiving special, and he recently finished playing "Gary the Glue Man," who walks on ceilings and walls in the feature children's film, "Pippi Longstocking."

Carolina Events

Martin Players Present Play

WILLIAMSTON — The Martin Community Players are presenting the Chrisopther Sergel-Leonard Wibberley play, "The Mouse That Roared" for three performances this week. The play runs Thursday, Friday and Saturday with curtain time at 8 p.m., to be staged at the Martin County Auditorium at Williamston High School. Allan W. Osborne directs.

N.C. Zoo Changing To Winter Schedule

ASHEBORO — Beginning Saturday, the North Carolina Zoological Park will return to its winter schedule of 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day of the week. The R.J. Reynolds Forest Aviary and the African Pavilion, the zoo's indoor exhibits, will begin closing at 4:30 p.m. For more details, call 879-5606.

Special Shuttles For State Fair

RALEIGH — Fairgoers can let someone else do the driving this year by taking a Capital Area Transit bus to the fairgrounds. CAT plans tree special shuttles. Buses will be available from downtown or along Hillsborough Street from 7 a.m. to midnight weekdays and Saturdays, and from 10 a.m. to midnight on Sundays.

All shuttle buses will run every 30 minutes. For more details, call 833-5701.

Kural ECU Show On Television

The East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Robert Hause with television personality Charles Kuralt and The Loonis McGlohon Trio, will be seen on public television stations throughout North Carolina at 8 p.m. on Thanksgiving evening and again on Nov. 29 at 2 p.m.

The program, "North Carolina Is My Home," was taped during a live performance last April in ECU's Wright Auditorium. It is a musical-narrative salute to the heritage of the Tar Heel State.

Country Music Group Organized

The Calico Country Music Association Inc. has been formed to preserve and further country music entertainment.

The organization hopes to expand country and bluegrass music and dance by establishing ways to acquaint the public, by uniting fans of these forms of music and dance, and by bringing together entertainers and sponsors.

CCMA will be headquartered at Calico Lodge (formerly Tranter's Creek Lodge) near Washington, N.C.

Leader and founder of CCMA is Sammy Rouse. Among several persons actively involved in the organization are Jim Baldwin, Garland Bowden and Fred Cutler.

Interested entertainers, fans or sponsors desiring additional information may to contact CCMA by calling 946-7658 or by writing to: Calico Country Music Association Inc., 302 E. Second St., Washington, N.C., 27889.

Turner And Houston Tickets Now On Sale

CHAPEL HILL — Tickets for the concert performances of Tina Turner on Nov. 6 and for Whitney Houston on Nov. 21 are now on sale. They are priced at $17.50 each and can be purchased by calling 1-800-233-4050 or bought at the box office at the Dean E. Smith Center on the UNC-Chapel Hill campus. The concerts will be held at the center at 8 p.m. on each date.

Wild Animals

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — A United Nations expert has urged African governments to use wild animals for food instead of reserving them for foreign tourists to see.

"All forms of wild animals have potential as sources of meat from frogs to rodents to large animals and birds," Emmanuel Asibey, a Ghanaian representative of the Food and Agriculture Organization.

He spoke before 450 delegates at a conference on wildlife management in Africa.

"On I-20, Indianapolis is reporting rain along with Baltimore. Heavy fog now at Williamsport, Pennsylvania and on I-94 winds are gusting into the low 20s from the north at Milwaukee."

He speaks into a microphone in a studio surrounding by country album covers, "This is WWL 870 and the Road Gang. Travel with us across the miles and through the night."

Then he flips on a taped salute to the American trucker, a patriotic theme about runaway rigs and a runaway economy eating the lunch of the U.S. trucker.

Golden Award

VERCELLI, Italy (AP) — Yehudi Menuhin, the American-born musician known as the "ambassador of the violin," was awarded Italy's "Golden Viotti" prize for the successes of his 60-year career.

The prize, named after the 18th century Italian violinist Giovanni Battista Viotti, was awarded Monday to the 71-year-old violinist for combining a concert career with his role as ambassador of peace.

Menuhin was born in New York City, toured as a child prodigy and was the first Jewish musician to play in West Germany after World War II. In recent years, he has promoted Asian and African music in addition to Western classics.

"The time of the great and solitary virtuoso is over," said Menuhin, who is also a conductor.

were roaming 40 acres at a Titusville zoo.

"They were terrible," he said. "Almost impossible. I had to build and design a special trap."

It took him a week. But he got the job done.

Tanner uses dogs and pens to hunt boars, which the federal government wants to eradicate from the space center. For alligators he uses ropes, tape, and mating calls.

Tanner's most serious injury occurred when an alligator bit his finger. Although he says he has no fear, he also says precaution and common sense are important qualities in his line of business.

In February, Tanner, armed with a flashlight and lasso, waded into Orlando's storm drain system to capture a 7-foot, 2-inch gator.

"I spotted him, gave him a mating call and put a rope around his neck," he said.

After roping his quarry, Tanner taped its jaws shut, bound him, and carted him off with the help of some of the city workers who spotted the alligator while cleaning pipes to the sewer.

The alligator was released into the St. Johns River in neighboring Brevard County.

COMPLETE NUTRITIONAL MEAL — Tasty frozen dinners that include dishes from the four basic food groups go a long way toward providing a balanced diet for the family.

Four Basic Food Groups Provide Good Nutrition

Most families are aware that good nutrition begins with balanced meals made up of the four basic food groups. With today's "grazing" trends, many families are not keeping good records of their nutritional intake. Loss of necessary vitamins, minerals and other nutrients can cause serious harm to the family's health- particularly the health of growing children.

Periodically, every family should be reminded of nutritional requirements for good health. Then care should be taken to insure every member of the family eats a variety of foods from the four basic food groups daily.

One good way to assure good nutrition is with frozen dinners from your grocer's frozen food department. Many dinners have the four basic food groups in an easy-to-fix package. The label will give you a complete breakdown of ingredients and nutritional values. A few minutes in the microwave oven, and they're piping hot, ready to eat. You can't beat that for convenience and good nutrition.

When shopping for frozen products to use in your microwave oven, look for the frozen food industry's "Microwaveable" logo.

Breads and Cereals

Grain products are imporant to a balanced diet. Whole grain cereals and enriched breads provide starch, thiamin, riboflavin, niacin and iron. Grains are good sources of fiber, folic acid, magnesium and zinc. Everyone should eat six servings of bread, cereals, rice, pasta, or other foods made from whole grain and enriched products daily.

Fruits and Vegetables

Fruits add color, flavor, texture, natural sugars, folic acid, potassium and magnesium to the diet and provide dietary fiber. Oranges, grapefruit, melons, and berries are good sources of Vitamin C. Yellow fruits like apricots, cantaloupes and mangos are high in Vitamin A. Two servings of fruit or fruit juice are recommended per day.

Vegetables provide fiber, starch, protein, many vitamins, and minerals. Three servings are recommended daily from dark green and yellow vegetables, dry beans and peas, starchy vegetables, and others.

Meat, Poultry, Fish

Meat group products provide protein, niacin, Vitamins B6 and B12, iron, phosphorus, zinc, and many other nutrients. Nutritionists advise families to choose leaner cuts of meat to reduce fat and cholesterol. Trimming fat from meat and removing skin from chicken is also recommended. Baking or broiling are preferred methods of preparation. One egg, a half-cup of beans, or two tablespoons of peanut butter are the equivalent of one ounce of lean meat. Two servings or five to seven ounces of lean meat, fish or poultry a day are suggested.

Milk, Cheese and Yogurt

Dairy products provide protein, riboflavin, Vitamin B12, Vitamin A, thiamin, and may be fortified with Vitamin D. Ice cream, ice milk, and yogurt have the same nutrients, but are higher in fat and sugar. Two servings from the dairy group are recommended daily. Teenagers, pregnant and breast feeding women should have three or four servings.

If your family is into grazing or eating-on-the-run, it's time to reassess how well these practices are meeting each individual's nutritional requirements.

Frozen Food Department Can Fill Any Shopper List

Your supermarket frozen food department isn't what it used to be.

When commercial frozen foods were first introduced in 1930, only 26 items were represented — 18 cuts of meat, some fish fillets, and a variety of fruits and vegetables.

Today's supermarket frozen food department has more than 1,500 items. However, the increased number of items is only part of the story. Shopping in the department can satisfy almost every mealtime need, from low-sodium, low-fat meals to ethnic foods, combination vegetables, complete breakfasts, and gourmet ice cream novelties.

Of particular interest is the increasing number of microwaveable frozen food products. Many innovations are now being developed that will make almost ever frozen product microwaveable.

For example, some pizzas and French fries are already being packaged on a special ray with a silvery film that browns the product. The tray has a layer of powdered aluminum laminated under plastic so it absorbs microwaves and heats to a high temperature without causing the microwave to arc.

Frozen waffles now come in an aluminum sleeve that heats the waffle until it is crisp and brown.

Manufacturers are now working hard to find a similar packaging that can be used to fry chicken, fish and other products in the microwave.

Among packaging products under consideration are plastic films that absorb microwaves selectively so different foods will cook at different rates. Presently, manufacturers precook foods for frozen dinners separately to different levels so that when microwaved for a short period of time, all items each doneness at the same time.

Manufacturers are also preparing more light, good tasting and nutritious products. More items fortified with vitamins and minerals are also seen. Ethnic foods — Mexican, Oriental, Cajun and Indian — are becoming more available, and sales of complete breakfast combinations are increasing. Most of these products are microwaveable.

Frozen food manufacturers are truly making your supermarket frozen food department a "convenience store within a store."

Keep Freezers Closed During Power Blackouts

A common problem for all of us today is operating within our budget. And a most necessary and vital part of that budget is allocated for the purchase of food. That's why it's important that we know what to do in case of a power failure to salvage most of the food in our freezer. Here are some things to remember if you experience a power blackout.

A fully stocked freezer, with completely frozen food, will keep temperatures at a satisfactory level for two days, provided the appliance is not opened. A half-full freezer will keep food only one day.

Cover the freezer with a blanket or newspapers and DO NOT OPEN.

Consider adding dry ice to a freezer which will be without power for an extended period of time. Twenty-five pounds of dry ice will hold the temperature below freezing in a half-full 10-cubic-foot freezer for two to three days. Place the dry ice on a layer of cardboard and put between the food. Do not place the ice directly on food containers.

Partially thawed food can usually be refrozen if it contains ice crystals. The exception is fish, which tends to spoil quickly and should not be refrozen.

Completely thawed foods should be discarded or, if still good, used at once. Red meats and vegetables may be refrozen if you cook them first.

Use refrozen items as soon as possible. They will probably lose some taste and will not keep as long as foods which have not been refrozen.

Food stored in a refrigerator-freezer, or in the refrigerator itself, is even more difficult to save. Do not eat any foods that look or smell spoiled.

Frozen Blueberries Give Taste Of History To Dessert Recipes

Don't long wistfully for summer's sumptuous blueberries through the cool autumn and barren winter, even if the big beautiful blues have left the produce department of the supermarkets.

They've just moved over to the frozen food department.

It's hard to match the glamorous good looks of the freshly picked blueberry, plump and meaty and with the gray-white bloom of the summer sky still on it. But the dry-pack frozen blueberries do a wonderful cloning job. Best of all, they are always available and interchangeable with the fresh in dozens of favorite recipes.

Take Blueberry Duff.

All right. Few people today even know what a Duff is. Our first settlers certainly did. It was a recipe, a dessert, that sprang both from their heritage and their minds.

The Mayflower-comers were English, and they loved this steamed pudding that was traditionally made with raisins and currants. But here, thanks to friendly Indians who introduced them to the native blueberries, they found another fruit to put into the pudding. One that was available and delicious.

Now blueberries are just as available and delicious all year around. The dry-pack frozen blueberries work as well in this dessert as the fresh ones do, and now the traditional Duff has become, unquestionably in America, a Blueberry Duff.

Try it with the frozen blueberries one of these days. It's not hard to put together and it will make historic memories for a new generation and a reputation for whoever presents it. Meaning you.

BLUEBERRY DUFF

2 cups all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1/4 cup molasses
1 cup milk
2 cups dry-pack frozen blueberries, rinsed and drained
1/2 cup butter or margarine
2 cups confectioners' sugar
1/4 cup brandy

Mix flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in butter until particles are very fine. Stir in molasses and milk. Fold in blueberries. Spoon mixture into a greased 1 1/2 quart mold. Cover mold with a greased lid or greased piece of foil. Stand mold in a large kettle, on a rack, with boiling water coming halfway up the side of the mold. Cover kettle and steam 1 1/2 hours. Remove mold from kettle, remove covering and bake in a preheated hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 10 minutes. Let stand at room temperature for 15 minutes. Unmold and serve warm with chilled Hard Sauce. To prepare Hard Sauce, cream butter and beat in confectioners' sugar. Stir in brandy. Chill. Yield: 1 1/2 quart mold.

Chances are that most of today's youngsters have never even heard of Blueberry Fool. Yet in the old days, American boys and girls grew up debating why this particular family dessert was called by such a crazy name.

It's time to bring back this good old-fashioned dessert. Now it can be enjoyed all year around, thanks to dry-pack frozen blueberries. And it's a great way to use up not-so-fresh bread.

According to some members of the older generation, little girls seemed to hold to the idea that the "fool" was somehow related to fun. It was a funny combination, fun to talk about and fun to eat.

Nobody ever got the idea that Blueberry Fool was a foolish thing. The only possibility of foolishness was to be foolish enough to miss a chance to eat it.

So let's not now fool around. Let's see that today's kids get a chance to talk about Blueberry Fool and, especially, to enjoy this easy little old-fashioned treat.

BLUEBERRY FOOL

4 cups diced bread
3 tablespoons butter
4 cups dry-pack frozen blueberries, rinsed and drained
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup milk

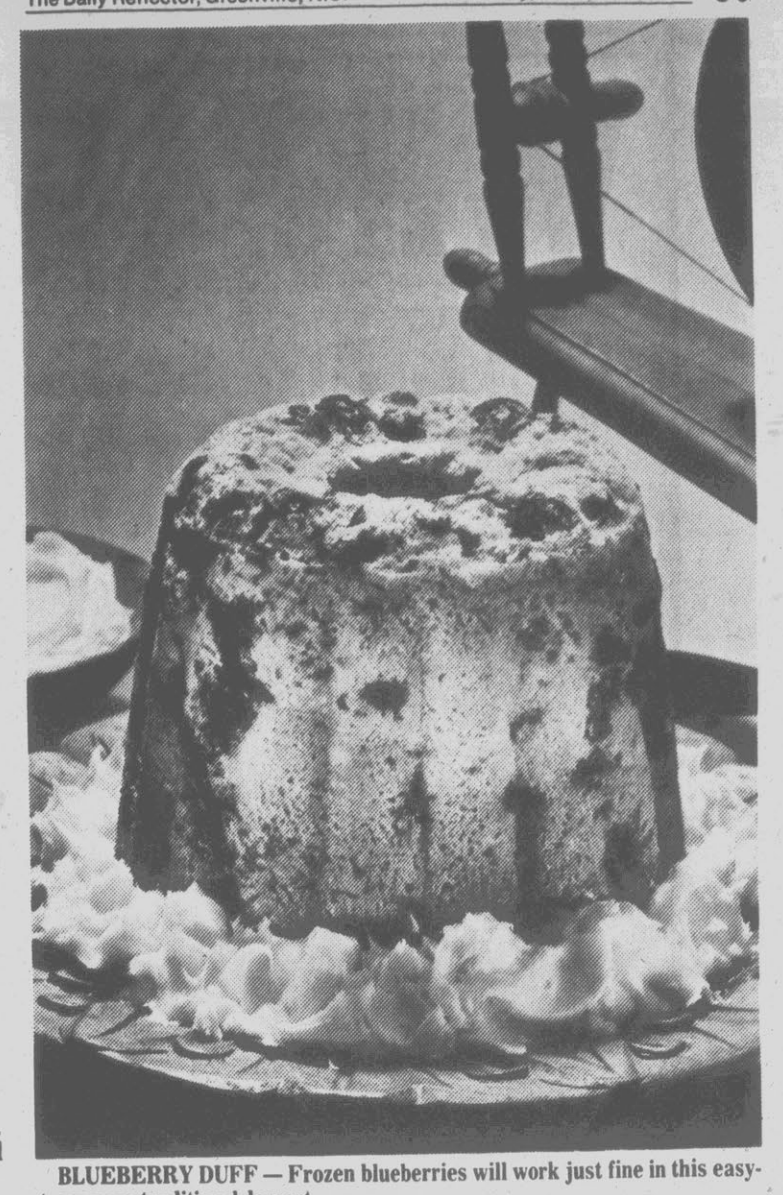
Fry the diced bread in the butter until nicely browned and crisp on all sides. With a fork, crush partially defrosted blueberries in a bowl. Add the bread and sugar and blend. Mix in milk. Spoon into individual serving dishes and chill. Serve with whipped cream. Yield: 8 servings.



BLUEBERRY DUFF — Frozen blueberries will work just fine in this easy-to-prepare traditional dessert.

Elegant Meals Are A Breeze With Versatile Frozen Foods

Let's say you're planning a lovely garden party and want to serve something elegant, without spending a lot of time in the kitchen away from your guests.

The solution, of course, is frozen foods.

Frozen foods offer versatility as well as time-saving convenience. It's easy to find frozen vegetables and prepared foods that fit your party theme.

Whatever your concept, look first in your supermarket frozen food department to get unusual or different ideas for a party menu that can be cooked or heated with the greatest of ease. Your own personal touch can easily be added with a favorite herb incorporated in the sauce after the food has been heated; with a sprinkling of seasonings and seed; with the addition of spices, cheese or seasoning agents which complement the frozen prepared dish.

Stir fry food takes only minutes to cook-once all the advance cutting and slicing is done. Velly-Easy Teriyaki Stir-Fry is a time-saver, because it uses a frozen vegetable combination of ready-cut broccoli, carrots, water chestnuts and red peppers, combined with thin strips of beef.

The vegetables are added to the stir-fried, marinated meat without having to be thawed, another time-saver.

You complete this healthful, low calorie main dish by simmering the vegetables and beef in a little bouillon for three to five minutes, just long enough to crisp-cook the vegetables. Then thicken and season the sauce and serve over hot rice.

This basic recipe could be made another time with pork or chicken. The frozen vegetable mixture also can be used in other stir-fry dishes to replace about 1 1/2 cups of chopped vegetables.

VELLY-EASY TERIYAKI STIR-FRY MARINADE

1 tablespoon sugar
3 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons sherry
1 pound sirloin or flank steak, cut into paper-thin strips
1/2 teaspoon instant beef bouillon
1/2 cup hot water
1 tablespoon oil
1 16-ounce package frozen broccoli, carrots, water chestnuts and red peppers
1/4 cup water
4 teaspoons conrstarch
1/4 teaspoons ginger
2 teaspoons soy sauce
Hot cooked rice, if desire

Combine marinade ingredients. Pour over meat; let stand 20 to 30 minutes. Drain. Dissolve bouillon in 1/2 cup hot water. In large skillet or wok, heat 1 tablespoon oil over high heat. Add meat; stir-fry until beef is no longer red. Add frozen vegetables and dissolved bouillon; stir. Cover; reduce heat to low. Simmer 3 to 5 minutes or until vegetables are crisp-tender. Combine 1/4 cup water, cornstarch, ginger and 2 teaspoons soy sauce; stir into mixture. Heat and stir until sauce thickens. Serve with hot cooked rice. 360 calories per serving. 5 servings.

Deli Style Croissant

With all the high quality frozen food products on the market, it's easy to duplicate favorite deli foods for your party with very little effort.

TURKEY CROISSANTS AU GRATIN

1 1 ounce package frozen broccoli, cauliflower and carrots with cheese-flavored sauce in a pouch
1/8 teaspoon dry mustard
1 6 ouune package (4 rolls) frozen all butter croissants, thawed and sliced in half lengthwise
8 thin slices (8 ounces) package sliced cooked turkey breast

Prepare unopened vegetable pouch as directed on package. In small bowl, combine hot vegetables, mustard and pepper. Arrange croissant bottoms on serving plate. Top each with turkey slices and about 1/4 cup hot vegetable mixture. Place croissant top on each sandwich. 310 calories per sandwich. 4 sandwiches.

Choosing A Freezer

Here are some suggestions for selecting a family freezer:

•Allow 4 to 6 cubic feet of freezer space per person in the family.

•Read the energy-efficient label to learn the amount of energy consumed for each model. Energy useage is based on a standard formula that will allow you to compare operating costs.

•Place newly arrived food from the market on the fast-freeze shelf available in some freezer units. The freezing coils in this shelf keep frozen foods solid and freeze fresh foods fast.

•Generally, you can expect refrigerator/freezer units to last 13 years, and chest freezers to last 15 years.

•Keep your freezer temperature as low as possible to obtain the longest shelf life for your frozen foods. The recommended temperature is 0 degrees F, or below.

Frozen Chicken Recipes Great Choices As Entrees For Brunch

Brunches are a good way to entertain. Brunch is simply a pleasant way to get friends together. Here are several brunch menu ideas that look and taste elegant, and don't take all morning to prepare.

Begin by bringing out the Chicken Asparagus Rolls, a delicious entree that belies its ease of preparation. The rolls start with frozen breaded chicken sticks and frozen asparagus spears. This combination is rolled in thin slices of ham, put into a casserole and moistened with a sprinkle of wine. You can make the rolls the day before the party, refrigerate them, then pop them into the oven 30 minutes before serving.

The sauce served with the rolls is a lemony flavored Hollandaise. You should have no trouble with this method. The trick is having the butter very cold and using very low heat.

Also ideal for a brunch is flaky Chicken in Puff Pastry. The helper this time is convenience foods from the freezer, frozen puff pastry and breaded chicken patties. Simply layer ham, cheese and a chicken patty on squares of puff pastry and seal the edges. Brush the top with an egg wash and cut a slit in each to let the steam out. When they bake, the cheese melts and blends with the ham and chicken for a delicious filling inside flaky layers of pastry.

Toast the day with sparkling Mimosa Punch, which is simply equal parts of champagne and orange juice. For those not up to champagne early inthe day, use ginger ale instead for the sparkle.

To complete the menu, add your favorite tomato aspic mold and crisp relishes. For dessert serve a bowl of fresh strawberries, stems left on, with powdered sugar for dipping. Your guests will all agree, anytime is a nice time for a brunch.

CHICKEN ASPARAGUS ROLLS WITH HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

1 10-ounce package frozen asparagus spears
1 12-ounce package frozen chicken sticks, thawed
24 slices boiled ham, approximately 2x6 inches each
1/4 cup white wine
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup cold butter
Hot cooked rice (optional)

Place asparagus under hot water until separated into spears. Place two ham slices together and wrap around a chicken stick and two or three asparagus spears. Repeat with remaining ham. Place seam side down in shallow baking dish; sprinkle wine on top. Bake in 375 degree oven 25 minutes, or until hot.

Meanwhile, in small saucepan, stir egg yolk and lemon juice; add 1/4 cup butter. Over very low heat, stir until melted. Add remaining 1/4 cup butter and stir until melted and sauce is thickened. Place chicken and asparagus rolls on bed of rice, if desired, and pour sauce over. Makes 6 servings.

CHICKEN IN PUFF PASTRY

2 sheets (17 1/4 ounce package) frozen puff pastry, thawed
16 slices Swiss cheese, approximately 3x3 inches each
8 slices boiled ham, approximately 3x3 inches each
1 12 ounce package frozen chicken patties, thawed
1 egg beaten

On lightly floured board, roll out each pastry sheet to 10 1/2 x 11 inches. Cut sheets into quarters to make 8 squares. On each of 4 squares layer 2 slices of ham and a chicken patty with a slice of cheese alternating between each layer. Top with remaining pastry squares. Pinch edges to seal and fold excess pastry underneath. Brush tops with egg and cut a slit in each. Bake on cookie sheet in 350 degree F. oven 40 minutes, until golden brown. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Quick, Delicious Snacks Are Easy When Using Frozen Bread Dough

Trying to scratch that urge for snacks is always a problem. Here are two suggestions for "different" snacks that are both quick and easy to prepare with frozen bread dough from your supermarket.

Pizza rolls are fun and different finger foods. While great for snacks, they can also make a lunch box or picnic basket surprise. Pizza rolls have all the great makings of pizza rolled up into a neat handful.

The "crust" is made from frozen bread dough, topped with layers of sauce, cheeses, olives and pepperoni. Rolled up and sliced, it makes individual pizza rolls. They are delicious hot or cold.

PIZZA ROLLS

1 one-pound loaf of frozen bread
3/8 cup pizza sauce
3/4 cup grated mozzarella cheese
3/4 cup grated cheddar cheese
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
3 ounces thinly sliced pepperoni, chopped
Small (2 1/4 ounce) can sliced black olives

Let frozen dough thaw until pliable. (To thaw dough in the microwave oven, wrap frozen loaf loosely in plastic wrap. Microwave on low power for 6 minutes, rotating occasionally.) On a lightly floured board, roll dough out to a 12-inch square. Spread pizza sauce over dough and layer with remaining ingredients. Roll dough up tightly in jelly-roll fashion; pinch along edge to seal. Using a sharp knife, cut roll into 12 pieces. Place pieces in cavities of greased muffin pan. Let rise until double in size. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from pan immediately. Makes 12 pizza rolls.

Boboli is a crusty Italian cheese crust that can be used in a variety of ways. Enjoy the savory flavor of Boboli all by itself as a snack or with a meal. Or turn Boboli into a main course by topping with sauteed vagetables and seafood.

Boboli is delicious topped with sauce, cheese and the works to create a pizza. Also try making Boboli into a tostada or open-faced sandwich. For brunch, try Boboli topped with scrambled eggs or as a base for eggs benedict.

You can make the light and flavorful Boboli with very little work using frozen bread dough. Each loaf makes 4 large crusts. Just add grated Mozzarella, Parmesan and seasonings and ... Viola! fresh baked Boboli!

BOBOLI CHEESE CRUSTS

1 one-pound loaf frozen white or honey wheat bread dough
2 teaspoons oil
4 teaspoons Parmesan cheese
1/4 teaspoon Italian seasonings
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
3/4 cup grated mozzarella cheese

Let frozen bread dough thaw until pliable. Cut loaf crosswise into 4 pieces. Using a little flour on dough and board, roll each piece out to a 6-inch diameter circle. Spread dough circles with oil and sprinkle with seasonings. Top with Mozzarella. Let rise until very light, 2 to 3 hours. Bake at 375 degrees F. for 12-15 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 4.

PIZZA ROLLS — Try Pizza Rolls as a fun and different finger food at snack time. They are easy to prepare with frozen bread dough from the supermarket.

Food Buyers Want It Quick, Fancy, Good

Studies of supermarket shopping indicate that Americans are trending toward foods that are ready; to eat, quick, fancy, and good tasting in that order.

Supermarkets are responding to perceived consumer demands by offering in-store delicatessens, bakeries, and enlarged frozen food departments. Growth in these areas is expected to continue well into the 1990s.

Food industry; watchers say that while homemakers today spend from two to four hours a day preparing food, in the 1990s they will be willing to spend no more than 10 to 90 minutes a day at the task. Among current growing preferences are:

•Orange juice instead of oranges
•Frozen vegetables instead of fresh vegetables that need paring and chopping
•Prepared salads with dressings instead of do-it-yourself salads and dressings •Frozen prepared dinners, entrees, breakfasts, and desserts instead of "scratch" meals
•Microwaveable frozen products instead of almost anything else.

Microwaveable fast foods are becoming increasingly popular. In 1986, more than half of all American homes had a microwave oven, and the number is increasing rapidly. Purchase of a microwave oven has caused many families to increase their visits to their grocer's frozen food aisles, which have more microwaveable products than any other supermarket department.

While the frozen food department is the chief source of foods planned for long-term storage, other products are becoming popular for instant use and short-term storage. Many of these are now popping up in supermarket delicatessens and in-store bakeries, and in dairy, refrigerated and even dry grocery departments.

With increasing interest in fresh produce, attempts ate being made to insure better quality in fresh food departments. Government banning of many chemicals and preservatives used to keep produce fresh—looking has forced the industry to adopt new sales techniques. Produce is now appearing in shrink-wrap for protection. Brand names and labeling are being seen.

Even the canned food department is beginning to show signs of change. Metal containers that can't be used directly in a microwave oven are now being replaced by cans made of heat-resistant plastic.

The demand for fancy and good tasting meals initiated by frozen upscale dinners several years ago will continue. The trend is already being seen by the increasing interest in frozen ethnic foods, desserts, and even frozen down-home country; breakfasts.

To make things easier for their trendy consumers, supermarkets are installing computerized scanners that make checkouts much faster. It's only an additional step to do-it-yourself checkouts in which customers can pass their own groceries over an electronic eye and bag it themselves.

Times they are a-changin'!

Freeze Soups, Stews For Microwaving

If you prepare your meals in advance, you ought to consider making and freezing a nutritional soup or stew for later microwaving a quick, delicious one-dish meal. A good way to save preparation time for your soup is to use frozen ingredients.

Soups have been getting more popular in recent years, and microwave ovens make reheating your favorite soups easy and fast. A big bowl of hearty frozen soup filled with vegetables and meat can take just 10 minutes from freezer to table.

To make soup with a microwave, precook vegetables and meats before they are used. This assures an even doneness of all ingredients in the finished product. While precooking meat and vegetables in the microwave, you might want to heat your broth or water at rangetop to reduce preparation time further.

Many cooks believe that microwave ovens are not as efficient as range tops for preparing soups. While the time to heat water is about the same, microwaving has its own advantages.

Stovetop soups are simmered to tenderize the raw meats and vegetables. This increases cooking time. Frozen meats and vegetables can be quickly thawed and cooked separately in the microwave much faster than at range top. Then, ingredients can be microwaved together in soup without fat for fewer calories. Ingredients also won't stick in the microwave as it will at rangetop.

In cooking soups, remember that microwave cooking times vary with the ovens. So, start with a time you think is about right, then subtract five minutes. At the end of the cooking period, check ingredients, and add some additional time in increments of two or three minutes until the meat and vegetables reach the level of doneness you're looking for.

Cover the soup with a tight-fitting lid for faster cooking. The container should have ample room at the top to prevent bubbling over and allow space for stirring.

Soup made ahead can be frozen in individual bowls or in serving-size containers. This will allow you to select out just the amount you want to use without defrosting all you have made.

Soup can be frozen, thawed and served in the same bowl. Put the soup in a covered casserole, for example, and microwave on HIGH. Use a fork to separate partially thawed areas for faster defrosting. Individual servings in their own dishes saves even more time. To avoid tying up container, you can freeze small amounts of soup in ice cube trays or other small containers, then transfer to a freezer bag.

Fall

By Garrett Honeycutt

Red and yellow leaves,
Blow swiftly in the breeze.
While birds fly south for the winter,
And cold weather starts to enter.
Squirrels gathering nuts have a ball,
While bears begin to sleep in the fall.

Point

By Chris Mewborn

Walking the edge about five rows apart,
Hoping to find birds so dear to our hearts.
Watching the dog fifty yards in front,
Zigging and zagging and wagging his tail.

All of a sudden we notice a change,
We can tell the dog has just made game.
With nose to the ground, tail high in the air,
Slowly stalking here and there.

Skidding to a halt and going on point.
For this one moment, so much time has been spent,
Training and teaching, learning, and having fun.
With guns at the ready, and hearts beating fast.

Thundering, whirring, and beating their wings,
The birds get up and head for the trees.
Picking out one but not firing a shot,
My partner and I, we just could not.

We stood and counted thirty-two birds get up and fly
Heading for their home, under the sunset sky.

The Stalker

By Bob Harrell

Walking home in the still of the night
As darkness falls upon you,
Gloom and regret of staying out late
Creeping up on you like a feeling of madness.
You hear footsteps coming closer,
Stalking you like a madman.
Your imagination runs wild
As you begin to speed up,
Running in fear of what might happen,
You pass the spot to wait for the bus.
As you feel a hand grab your shoulder,
A cold chill runs up your spine.
Turning around with fear in your heart, you see,
Standing in front of you panting from exhaustion,
Your father mad with fury.

Nothing At All

By Tonya Moore

But I see nothing, nothing at all.
No love, nor hate-just an empty heart.

Though it is empty, its weight is great.
It is weighed down by anger,
Frustration and Contempt.
But it can't be seen , only felt.

That same heart starts to turn
To stone and soon there will be nothing,
Nothing at all.

Tonya Moore, 16, a student at J.H. Rose High School receives special mention.

The Hummingbird

By Suzanna Roberts

One evening my mother was in her flower bed. A hummingbird flew around. My mom stood very still and picked a pink flower. Then the hummingbird stuck out its tougue and it drank some nectar from the flower. My dad was watching from the porch. Isn't that hard to believe? But it's true.

Suzanna Roberts, 8, a student at Elmhurst Elementary School receives special mention.

Tar Heel Trivia

Industry

In some areas of industry North Carolina leads the nation and in some cases it is a world leader. High Point is considered the furniture center of the United States because N.C. leads the country in the production of household furniture. In fact, buyers come from the entire world to the High Point Markets which take place in October and April each year.

Almost half of all hosiery produced the United States is made in our state. And in the textile industry in general, the state leads the nation in production with such maufacturing as towels, sheets, socks, hosiery, and fabric.

The eastern part of our state is well known for the growth of tobacco and N.C. is the national leader in production of tobacco products.

Tasty Pita Sandwiches Spice Up Tailgate Feast

Cooler weather and autumn leaves signal the arrival of the year's number-one season — football! Kick-off in style with a classic tailgating party and packable, portable pita sandwiches.

Football fans like to lower the tailgate and spread out blankets for a team feast. Build a banquet around pita sandwiches made special with Kahlua and — touchdown! Family and friends will stand up and cheer.

Use pita bread to make tailgating easy with no worries about fumbling; even saucy sandwiches won't be offsides.

Defend your position as an accomplished cook with Five-Spice Kahlua Pork Pitas. The combination of Kahlua, soy sauce, five-spice powder and Chinese cabbage imparts authentic Oriental flavor in a savory, spicy sauce.

Hand-off Kahlua Chicken Fijitas in pitas with guacamole and salsa. Cook this marinated mixture of chicken, onions, red bell peppers and chiles just until tender. Then drop-kick into pita bread and you're ready for the second half.

Vegetarians won't sit out the season, either, with Kahlua Brown Rice and Veggies in a pita. Blend cooked brown rice with vegetables and peanuts in a tangy Kahlua dressing. This recipe will be named "most valuable player" when served as either a pita sandwich filling or a side dish salad.

FIVE-SPICE KAHLUA PORK PITAS

1/2 cup Kahlua
1/4 cup soy sauce
3 tablespoons dry Sherry
1 1/2 teaspoons Chinese five-spice powder or 3/4 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/4 teaspoon each of ground allspice and ground anise, 1/8 teaspoon cloves and 1/8 teaspoon black pepper
2 to 3 cloves garlic, minced
2 1/2 to 3 pounds pork tenderloin
8 pita breads, tops sliced open
Shredded Chinese (Napa) cabbage
Sliced green onions

Combine Kahlua, soy sauce, Sherry, five-spice powder and garlic. Pour over meat and marinate at least 1 hour or overnight, turning several times.

Remove meat from marinade and roast at 375 degrees for 45 minutes to 1 hour, basting frequently with marinade. Let stand 5 minutes, then slice meat about 1/4-inch thick. Bring remaining marinade to boil and pour over meat.

To serve, fill pita pockets with hot meat slices and some of marinade. Top with shredded cabbage and sliced green onions. Makes 8 servings.

SOUTHWESTERN KAHLUA BARBECUED BEEF PITAS

1 1/2 to 2 pounds round steak, cut about 1-inch thick
1 onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 jalapeno peppers, minced
1 can tomato sauce
1/4 cupp Kahlua
3/4 teaspoon salt

Be A Pioneer, Cook A Pumpkin

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Since my son was a preschooler, he's picked out two pumpkins each fall, one to carve and one to cook. After some experimenting, Jason and I have settled on this cooking method:

Buy a small to medium pumpkin that feels heavy; it will have less waste and more tender pulp than a large one. Look for one with vivid color, very firm skin and few blemishes.

Wash the pumpkin and cut off the top, scooping out and saving the seeds. Replace the top and place the pumpkin on a baking sheet. Bake in a 300-degree oven until tender (that's about 3 hours for an 8-pound pumpkin).

While it's still warm, scoop the pulp from the rind. Discard the rind. In a blender container or food processor bowl puree the pulp until smooth. Transfer the pulp to a large saucepan and cook over medium heat for 40 to 60 minutes or until reduced by half, stirring frequently.

Serve the pumpkin topped with a pat of butter as a side dish or use it in recipes for pie, muffins or cookies.

We always roast the seeds, too. Wash the pumpkin seeds, removing all the fibrous material. Soak the seeds in salted water (1 1/2 teaspoons salt to 1 cup water) overnight.

The next day, drain the seeds and pat them dry with paper towels. Place the seeds in a shallow baking pan and roast in a 300-degree oven for 20 minutes or until golden.

Crack the shells by hand and remove the nutlike portion inside. The roasted seeds make a great snack and are good sprinkled over a salad, cooked vegetable or soup.

Old Is New When It Comes To Fall Cooking

By Irene Sax
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

This season, old is new. Autumn's cookbooks tell us how to make old-fashioned game and wild mushrooms, traditional bran muffins and tiramisu, how to cook like European peasants, American Southerners or Elizabethan women.

Even the book that looks brand new, "The Microwave Gourmet" by Barbara Kafka (Morrow, $19.95), is about using technology to make old-fashioned, good food.

Kafka insists that the microwave oven has as valid a place in the fine kitchen as the food processor. It can't do everything — any more than a toaster or a wok can — but what it does, it does well.

Speed isn't even the issue with fish and vegetables, pates and preserves, she believes: For them, the microwave is better than other methods.

Reading her book is like following a creative mind on a roll. You want rice? How about risotto with cabbage, with radicchio, with wild mushrooms, with olive paste? (I made risotto olivado with my microwaved swordfish, tomatoes and basil.) You want chicken breasts? With duxelles or curry sauce, garlic cream or yellow peppers and tomatoes? I made pork chops with curried cabbage. I made garlic-roasted potatoes. My lawyer brotherin-law, a skeptic who uses his microwave only to reheat coffee, made meat-stuffed peppers.

One caveat. The protein dishes weren't done when they should have been. I asked Kafka, who said we should have resealed the plastic wrap and let them sit for 2 minutes out of the oven.

On reflection, I realized that a 2-minute error in timing doesn't invalidate the book: When we cook on top of the stove, few things are done just when the recipe says they will be. I've known Kafka and her work for years, and I think "The Microwave Gourmet" is a tremendous book, better than anything that's been done on the subject so far.

If you want to get into microwaving slowly, you might take a look at "Glorious Vegetables in the Microwave" by Patricia Tennison (Contemporary, $17.95).

Tennison does exotic salsify and tomatillos and cooks down-home kale with bacon, black pepper and Tabasco, transforming usually long-cooked southern greens into a speedy dish. Her turnip-potato puree takes less than half an hour. I'm going to try it this Thanksgiving in place of Lydie Marshall's three-hour turnip puree.

Ken Hom, author of "East Meets West Cuisine" (Simon & Schuster, $19.95), was born in Tucson of Chinese parents and grew up like all second-generation Americans, a creature of two cultures.

Now he has combined cooking

Pre-Cooked Chicken A Tasty Option

By Bea Lewis
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

What a guy, this Frank Perdue, cooking up dinner for millions of Americans sold on chicken.

The new line of Perdue Done It! has recently rolled into supermarket fresh-meat counters — fully cooked chicken that can be reheated and on the dinner table in a matter of minutes (4 if you use a microwave).

The options range from spicy chicken wings to a whole roasted Cornish hen.

"We're responding to a need," said Perdue. "More and more families are working; there are two-wage-earner households and plenty of singles.

One of the targeted groups is college students, according to Perdue, president of the namesake company; This will give them a quality product."

But Perdue is not the only company making life easier for the home cook. Frank now has competition from Holly Farms and maybe Tyson and Cookin' Good. Empire Kosher Poultry has been selling pre-cooked chickens in Cryovac packages for 15 years with plans under way to prepare the product for microwave ovens.

At Tyson Foods, whole roasted and cut-up roasted products have been test-marketed in various cities with favorable initial results; the company is considering further expansion.

Cookin' Good cooked up chickens for a while but stopped production when they didn't make the financial splash the company expected.

"About a year ago we tried selling 5 to 7-pound roasted chickens," said Michael Guerrieri, vice president of Cookin' Good. "They were excellent, but that didn't matter, because the store price, $10 to $11 a package, was perceivedby the consumers as being too costly, even though the big bird could last for two meals. We are now looking at 2½-pound, fully-cooked broilers."

The convenience is expensive. Both Perdue and Holly Farms whole oven-roasted chickens generally sell for about $1.99 per pound, compared to 79 cents to 99 cents for a whole raw chicken.

Is the convenience worth the extra price? The folks at Holly Farms think so.

"We are projecting about $200 million in the first year nationally," said John Creel, senior director of sales and marketing at Holly Farms. "We just completed a $20 million plant in North Carolina to produce just the oven-roastedchickens. We started selling in the New York market a few weeks ago and expect the success we found in our test markets — Atlanta, Indianapolis, and Cinncinnati."

The market for the already cooked

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q. I'm trying to eat more fish, but I really don't like it any way but fried. Can you give me some helpful hints? Mr. E.M., Greenville.

A. People in the food business have always known that fried fish is the only way most people know how to cook, eat and enjoy fish. But, fish can be interesting tasting, and today, the seasoning manufacturers are making it easier. Last year, 52 new spice products were introduced in the U.S., some of them, such as "fish herb blends," "cajun blackened coating mix," and other "fisherman's catch" seasonings add new and interesting flavors to microwaved or grilled fish. Many of these mixes also are salt free.

Many people have told me the real reason they don't fix fish at home is because it smells. Microwaving fish leaves little after-odor. Dr. Carolyn Lackey from the North Carolina Extension Service shared the following microwave instructions with us.

Remove the fish from the oven just before it flakes. Lean fish (flounder) is microwaved at 100 percent power. Oily fish (mackeral, blue) is microwaved at 50 percent power (it may pop at a higher setting). Brush fish with melted butter or margarine or lemon juice. Roll in crumbs, if desired. Place on roasting rack. Cover with waxed paper (except crumb-coated fish which gets soggy). Microwave half the time. Rearrange fish, placing less cooked parts to the outside. Microwave remaining time, until fish flakes.

You may like seafood better if you choose and only buy fresh or frozen fish. If possible, buy seafood the day you use it and keep it on ice. Fish fresh from the water does not smell "fishy." Although, fresh fish does have a fresh and mild odor. Frozen seafood should be solidly frozen with no discoloration or freezer burn. Frozen fish should be wrapped with moisture-proof and vapor-proof material, like wraps and bags. For more fish buying hints, the N.C. Sea Grant Program offers a free booklet on buying fresh seafood. Write for "Hooked on Fresh Fish and Shellfish," UNC-SG-85-08, Sea Grant Program, 105 1911 Building, Box 8605, NCSU, Raleigh, N.C., 27695-8605.

Potatoes Make Hearty Chowder

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

There's nothing more soothing or satisfying than homemade soup. Mashing the potatoes slightly thickens this chowder.

BRAT AND TATER CHOWDER

1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup shredded carrot
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
2 cups sliced potatoes (2 medium)
1 1/2 cups chicken broth
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
12-ounce package fully cooked bratwurst, sliced
1/2 cup frozen peas
Dash bottled hot pepper sauce

In a 3-quart saucepan cook onion and carrot in margarine until onion is tender. Add potatoes and broth. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender. With a fork or potato masher, slightly mash potatoes. Stir milk into flour; add to potato mixture along with bratwurst, peas and hot pepper sauce. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir 1 minute more. Makes 4 main-dish servings.

Start With Turkey For Easy Dinner Parties

One of the best things about home entertaining today is the trend toward keeping menus simple. The lavish, time-consuming banquets of the not-too-distant past simply don't fit our busy lifestyles anymore.

Ever since fitness became a national pastime, party planners have been lightening up meals for guests by cutting back on the number of dishes served, and by relying on popular light meals such as breast of turkey from Louis Rich. The convenience and versatility of these fully cooked portions of 100 percent real turkey breast have made them a menu staple for streamlined dinner parties. Requiring just a few minutes time to turn into impressive main dishes, breast of turkey has the added bonus of providing only 45 calories per ounce. With three distinctive varieties from which to choose-- oven roasted, barbecued and hickory smoked-- a favorite dish can take on a new flair each time it is served.

Sometimes, a new and interesting recipe creates an instant theme for a dinner party, making the selection of appetizers and desserts a breeze. For example, Chinese Walnut Turkey is the kind of speciality that might be found at an Oriental restaurant. Almost a meal in itself, it suggests egg rolls or a light soup to start, and almond or fortune cookies to complete the menu. If a wok is available, add a bit of showmanship to the presentation. Arrange the cut-up breast of turkey, vegetables, walnuts, ginger and combined spicy sauce ingredients attractively on a tray, then quickly stir-fry the meal at the table. Don't forge the chopsticks!

Another time, go new-style Italian with parma turkey and fettucine verde, a zesty combination of turkey, mushrooms and tomatoes in a creamy sauce accented with Parmesan cheese. Serve with al dente spinach fettucine, a simple tossed salad in a vinaigrette dressing, and crusty rolls or Italian bread.

CHINESE WALNUT TURKEY — Almost a meal in itself, this dish suggests egg rolls or a light soup to start, and almond or fortune cookies to complete the menu.

CHINESE WALNUT TURKEY

1 pound fully cooked breast of turkey
2 tablespoons oil
3 slices fresh ginger
3 green onions, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 green peppers, cut into 1-inch chunks
1 cup walnut halves
4 servings hot cooked rice

SAUCE:

1/4 cup water
1/4 cup soy sauce
1/4 cup dry sherry
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons catsup
1-1/2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

Cut turkey into thin strips; set aside. Fry ginger in hot oil in wok or Dutch oven until golden brown; remove and discard ginger slices. Stir-fry onions and green peppers 3 minutes; add turkey and walnuts. Stir-fry 5 minutes more. Combine sauce ingredients; pour over turkey and vegetables. Continue to heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Serve over rice. 4 servings.

PARMA TURKEY AND FETTUCCINE VERDE

1 pound fully cooked breast of turkey
1-1/2 cups half-and-half
1 cup (2 ounces) sliced fresh mushrooms
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons dry white wine
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon chopped fresh basil or 1/2 teaspoon dried basil
1/4 teaspoon onion powder
2 tomatoes, cut into chunks
6 ounces spinach noodles, cooked

Cut turkey into 1/4-inch slices; set aside. Combine next seven ingredients; pour into large skillet. Cook on medium, stirring constantly until thickened. Add turkey. Cover. Simmer 10 minutes. Place turkey on platter. Add tomatoes to skillet; stir and hear through. Serve with turkey and noodles. 4 servings.

Lunch Week Under Way

In a welcome annual observance, the nation's schools are celebrating National School Lunch Week through Friday.

During the period, school food services in more than 15,000 school districts across the country are offering special ethnic menus and lunchtime activities to participating school children.

Capitalizing on last year's successful theme, "School lunch: It makes a world of difference," 1987's official menus are featuring foods from four ethnic groups that have contributed to America's complexion and lifestyle. Students are being treated to West African, Scandinavian, Middle Eastern and all-American specialities. School foodservice personnel as well as educators take advantage of this opportunity to gear learning programs around these diverse cultures. For the fifth day's menu, schools are encouraged to investigate their own community's ethnic roots and to create a special meal recognizing local favorites.

The American School Foodservice Association, whose more than 55,000 members manage and operate our nation's schools' feeding programs, designs these featured menus with the guidance of the members of its Nutrition Stands/Nutrition Education Committee. School districts that participate in the program serve menus that meet USDA nutritional guidelines, and ensure that school children eat balanced meals that supply an average of one-third of their daily Recommended Dietary Allowances.

As always, fruit holds appeal on lunchtime menus, particularly now that light and healthy are dietary considerations for all age groups. Acknowledged student favorites, California cling peaches, Pacific Coast canned pears, and California prunes combine appetizing color and rich flavor in a Scandinavian Fruit Choice: the finale to the first National School Lunch Week menu. The recipe reflects the goals of the school lunch programs and the professionals that operate them — an awareness of foods and nutrition by both children and their parents. American students are better fed than ever, and are now learning through programs like NSLW how to choose wisely the foods that promote good health.

Utilizing America's ethnic heritage and the benefits of the nutritional foods served in our nation's school lunch programs, National School Lunch Week helps us understand that school lunch does make a world of difference.

SCANDINAVIAN FRUIT COMPOTE

1 can (16 ounces) California cling peach slices in juice or extra light syrup
1 can pear halves in juice or extra light syrup
1 cup orange juice
1/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1/2 teaspoon cardamon pods
1/2 teaspoon whole cloves
3/4 cup dried pitted prunes

Drain peaches and pears, reserving juices. Combine drained juices, orange juice, sugar, lemon peel, cardamon and cloves in a medium saucepan. Stir in prunes. Bring to a boil. Simmer 5 minutes. Remove prunes; continue to simmer 15 to 20 minutes until liquid is reduced to a syrupy glaze. Remove from heat and cool. Combine drained peaches, pears and prunes in a large bowl. Carefully stir in cooled syrup. Cover and chill overnight. Makes 6 servings.

YELLOW BELLIED CHICKEN?

Heard there's a chicken farmer up North who swears chicken should be yellow. That's right. Yellow. Like a banana. Worse still, he's tryin' out those yellow chickens down here.

Now maybe up there they color-code their food so they can find it easier. They do things differently up there. Which is fine. For them. But down here, as everybody knows, a chicken's got yellow fat. A chicken's got yellow feet. But chicken meat is a nice pinkish-white color. It's not supposed to turn golden until it's cooked. A Holly Farms chicken has the color a fresh chicken's supposed to have. So it cooks up like a good chicken, not a banana.

Yellow bellied chicken? Who knows what's next. In the future chickens like these may be available in other designer colors. Maybe even patterns. How about a nice plaid?

Chicken

birds is different, Creel said, from that for raw chicken.

"The consumer buying the pre-cooked chicken is not looking to go home that night and cook up a fresh chicken. We're after the fast food user, we want to get him back to the supermarket," said Creel.

Holly Farms expects to cook about850,000 chickens a week, a small share of the 6 to 8 million uncooked chickens it sells nationally each week.

At Perdue, the cooked items also represent a small segment of chicken sales, less than 1 percent, according to Blake Lovette, executive vice president for Perdue Farms.

"The roasted items have a tremendous potential. The breaded items at retail have never been a huge success," Lovette said.

Holly Farms, according to Creel, has been researching and testing the new products for about three years, looking carefully at the British market, where 26 percent of all chicken sales are pre-cooked. "We don't expect such a large market right away," said Creel, who speculates it will take about 10 years to catch up to the British.

Right now, Holly Farms is offering the whole roasted birds and packages of cooked parts in a variety of flavors — besides the plain roasted, there's Cajun flavor and one that's smoky barbecue for a total of 21 different items. The company is putting $25 million behind an ad campaign.

There are 10 options in the Perdue line — from whole birds and Cornish hens to packages of assorted parts. All the Perdue products are first marinated, then roasted in a circulating hot-air oven.

Both Holly Farms and Perdue are packed in microwavable trays, with newly developed packaging techniques that insure about a week past "sell-by-date," refrigerated shelf-life.

At Perdue, "the shelf life is because of the modified atmosphere packaging. We surround the product with inert gases in which nothing can grow," said Lovette from Perdue.

Holly Farms does not have a nutritional breakdown of its products available. The following calorie and sodium counts for a 3.5-ounce serving of Perdue products was supplied by the company:

—Whole Roasted Chicken — 209 calories; 308 milligrams sodium

—Whole Roasted Cornish Hen — 194 calories; 199 milligrams sodium

BEEF STIR-FRY IN CREAMY PEANUT SAUCE

1 can (10 1/2 ounces) condensed French onion soup
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon soy sauce
2 tablespoons peanut butter
1/8 teaspoon crushed red pepper
3 tablespoons peanut or salad oil
1 pound boneless beef sirloin steak, cut into very thin strips
2 medium cloves garlic, minced
1 package (16 ounces) frozen mixed vegetables
Chopped peanuts for garnish

In small bowl, combine soup, cornstarch, soy sauce, peanut butter and red pepper; stir to blend. Set aside.

In 10-inch skillet or wok over medium-high heat, in 2 tablespoons hot oil, stir-fry beef strips with garlic, 1/2 at a time, until meat is browned; remove from skillet.

Return beef to skillet. Stir soup mixture; stir into skillet. Heat to boiling; cook one minute. Serve with rice. Garnish with peanuts.

Makes 4 cups or 4 servings.

Chinese Food Can Include Down-Home Favorites

By Irene Sax
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

CHENGDU, China — You don't need shark's fin and lotus root. You don't even need bean sprouts and bamboo shoots. You can make Chinese food out of almost any ingredients as long as you season them and cook them properly.

Consider a recent dinner of potatoes, peanuts, greens and watermelon, all down-home ingredients familiar in the American South. But these country foods were seasoned with fiery peppers, washed down with cool beer and served under slowly spinning ceiling fans in the guest house of a commune on the fertile farmland outside this capital city of Sichuan Province.

The meal began with an assortment of cold dishes: hard-cooked eggs, peanuts, lightly pickled vegetables and tomato slices sprinkled with crunchy sugar.

There were new steamed potatoes tossed in oil with dried hot peppers. There were golden shredded potatoes crisply deep-fried. There was a platter of sweet, sesame-coated pork cracklings, and another of delicate chicken and bean sprouts.Dried soy beans were braised with salty ham and black pepper; crisp green beans were bathed in a sauce of ginger, garlic, soy and chile peppers; tiny cabbages and sweet red onions like Vidalias were salted and tossed quickly in hot oil.

Waitresses in baggy trousers opened bottles of Chinese beer and orange soda, sent diners to fill their rice bowls from a bamboo steamer and slapped platters of food on the table in no particular order. The end of the meal was signaled by the arrival of slices of deep-red watermelon.

It was a surprising meal, because much of what tourists get to eat in China is forgettable: bland; canned. Either bok choy and watermelon twice a day or else the strange and expensive ingredients that the Chinese give you when they want to honor you: shark's fin, sea slug, jellyfish, cubes of agar.

They're the kinds of ingredients that inspired one traveler to create the rule, "Never eat anything transparent" and made me add, "Not bad is not good enough."

But there was no need to apply those rules at the New Village of the Golden House Township in Sichuan, where the ingredients were farm-fresh and the cooking zesty, flavorful and diverse.

Liu Hui, the sturdy, apple-cheeked grandmother who is director of the village and has lived on farms in the area for all of her 52 years, talked about the food on the farm and how it has improved over the years.

When she was a girl, Liu said, she lived on rice, wheat noodles and cabbage that was fresh in summer and pickled in winter. She had eggs only when the family couldn't sell them and meat — mostly fatty pork — only on holidays.

The farmers' diet was even more limited when Mao Tse-tung was in power. Not only did they have to deal with weather and greedy landlords, but a central authority in Beijing told them what to grow.

Liu told of some farmers who had to cut down thriving fruit trees to plant rice. Free enterprise was discouraged; farmers could no longer sell their excess goods on the free market. Under Mao, agricultural production barely kept pace with population growth.

But now Liu eats some chicken, pork or fish every day. She eats a great variety of vegetables. And nearly always she has local peaches, apples and mandarin oranges at the end of a meal. The improvement began when Premier Deng Xiaoping introduced the Household Responsibility System in December 1978, giving China's more than 700 million farmers control over what they grew.

A small part of their crops still has to be sold to the government, but the rest can be kept by the family for its own use, or can be sold for cash to city-dwellers.

Farmers also are allowed to make money in sideline production. Besides growing rice and vegetables, New Village raises poultry, presses rape-seed oil, makes honey and sausages and runs a fleet of trucks.

For the first time in Chinese history, Liu said, farmers not only have a degree of autonomy over their lives, but earn higher incomes than most city people.

One of the village's sideline industries is the entertainment of guests, which explains the high quality of the cooking, with its nice balance of spicy, sweet-and-sour and country-style tastes.

The village is very much a showcase farm. In mid-August it had already been visited by 300 tour buses since January and had provided overnight housing to hundreds of weekenders from nearby cities.

During a visit to the one-room school, it was clear that the children's welcoming songs and farewell waves were part of a well rehearsed performance.

But the signs of prosperity also were clear. They were there in the fat white geese that scattered in front of Liu as she marched down the muddy country road; and in the dense green foliage of the fruit trees, the rosy-cheeked boys holding bamboo fishing poles over irrigation ditches and in the flooded rice fields sunk between plots of peppers, zucchini and, surprisingly, flowers.

SICHUAN DISHES FOR AMERICAN COOKS

These recipes for the American kitchen were worked out following instructions from a guest-house cook. Lima beans have been substituted for the commune's fresh green soybeans.

PEPPERY NEW POTATOES

1 pound new potatoes, about 10
3 tablespoons oil
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/2-inch slice ginger, minced
1 dried red pepper, seeded
1/2 teaspoon chili paste
pinch of sugar

1. Quarter the potatoes and steam them until they are done.

2. In a wok, heat the oil. Add the garlic, ginger and red pepper and stir-fry over high heat for 1 minute. Stir in the chili paste and sugar, return the potatoes to the wok and toss over medium heat for 2 minutes, until they are lightly coated.

BRAISED LIMA BEANS

2 10-ounce packages frozen baby lima beans
1 tablespoon oil
1/4 cup shredded ham
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 1/2 teaspoons freshly ground black pepper
pinch of sugar

Defrost the lima beans. In a wok, heat the oil. Stir-fry the ham and garlic. Put in the lima beans, toss over high heat and add ¼ cup water, pepper and sugar. Cover and cook ovar low heat until the beans are cooked through. If there is too much liquid left, remove cover andboil it down to evaporate.

GREEN BEAN "SALAD"

1 pound green beans
1 tablespoon oil
3 cloves garlic, smashed
2 1/4-inch slices ginger
2 scallions, whites only, sliced
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 teaspoons rice-wine vinegar
1/2 teaspoon sugar

1. Trim the beans and steam until done.

2. In a wok, heat the oil and toss the garlic, ginger and scallions. Add the soy sauce, vinegar and sugar and return the beans to the pan. Stir-fry over medium heat for a few minutes. Pour into a serving dish and let cool to room temperature before serving.

PICKLED VEGETABLES

1 pound cucumbers
1/2 pound Chinese cabbage
2 fresh hot green peppers
1/4 cup salt
9 cups water
1/3 cup rice wine
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons minced ginger
2 tablespoons minced garlic

1. Cut the carrots, cucumbers and Chinese cabbage into roughly the same size pieces. Slice and seed the peppers.

2. Combine the remaining ingredients in a bowl. Add the vegetables, cover and let sit in the refrigerator for at least 3 days. Drain and serve within 2 weeks.

Sodium nitrite gives cured ham its rosy pink color and protects it against spoilage and food poisoning bacteria.

Recipe Tops Contest

Ginger Spicy Chicken, an easy, elegant main dish that goes from start to serving in less than 25 minutes, has garnered the $2,000 Grand Prize in the 1987 PACE Picante Sauce 40th Anniversary Recipe Contest.

A lively example of combining familiar ingredients in a new and creative way, the best-of-contest recipe teams boneless chicken breasts with a spicy-sweet fresh vegetable topping. The colorful melange of red and green peppers, pineapple, cilantro and fresh ginger depends on picante sauce for its garden fresh flavor and just the desired degree of jalapeno pepper "punch." Popular as a dip for chips and essential for Tex-Mex foods of all kinds, this zesty all-purpose sauce boasts a unique versatility that is showcased in the Grand Prize winning recipe.

Contest entries underscored today's cook's interest in spicy foods of all kinds, from breakfast dishes to late night snack foods. Mexican and Tex-Mex flavors prevailed, but hundreds of innovative entries used picante sauce in dishes such as the Grand Prize winner, which ranged from streamlined Szechuan and Thai to "spiced up" versions of favorite American and Italian fare. Open to residents of states west of the Mississippi River, the contest's top prize winner is the creation of Priscilla Yee, a computer project director from Concord, California.

GINGER SPICY CHICKEN

2 whole chicken breasts, split, boned and skinned
salt, as desired
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 medium red pepper, cut into 1/4 x 2-inch strips (1-1/2 cups)
1 medium green pepper, cut into 1/4 x 2-inch strips (1-1/2 cups)
1 can (8 ounces) juice pack pineapple chunks, undrained
1/2 cup picante sauce
2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro or parsley
2 to 3 teaspoons shredded fresh ginger or 3/4 to 1 teaspoon ground ginger

Lightly salt chicken. Cook in oil over medium heat until lightly browned and cooked through, about 5 minutes. Remove and reserve. Add peppers, pineapple, picante sauce, cilantro and ginger to skillet; cook, stirring frequently, 5 to 7 minutes or until peppers are tender and sauce is thickened. Return chicken to skillet; heat through. Makes 4 servings.

Old Is Name Of The Game When It Comes To Cooking This Fall

styles, blending Chinese cooking's openness to new ingredients and French nouvelle cuisine's affinity for Oriental presentation and seasonings.

Most of the recipes are fast and easy, and the food sounds good. There's chopped liver crunchy with water chestnuts, ginger-scallion mayonnaise to go with grilled fish, cold coconut cream to mix with berries. I love the ideas, but they didn't work in my kitchen. Chicken breasts marinated in hoisin sauce and olive oil were a lot like my Aunt Hilda's jam-baked chicken.

The stir-fried vegetables seasoned with vinegar would have been better with traditional Chinese seasonings. The sesame-ginger crab pancakes needed something: We floundered around until we made a dipping sauce of soy and chili oil. I'm not giving up, however; there's too much of interest in the book. It may be that this cooking style is still being worked out and isn't ready yet to go from the restaurant chef to the less-skilled home cook.

"The Breakfast Book" by Marian Cunningham (Knopf, $17.95) has recipes for breakfast fruits such as pineapple baked with brown sugar, meats, such as pork with biscuits and gravy, and potatoes such as fried potatoes and apples.

But Cunningham is best on baking, as we expect from the author of "The Fannie Farmer Baking Book." She's especially good at making traditional foods up-todate while keeping their homeyness, as she did with the nutty-light granola pancakes and the lemon-ginger muffins.

This is a small book, on a subject that has never been hit by trendiness: a perfect fit for Cunningham's California-wholesome approach to old-fashioned foods.

I had doubts about "Dolci, The Fabulous Desserts of Italy" by Virginie and George Elbert (Simon & Schuster, $17.95). The recipes looked too complicated, the ingredients too ditsy. What recipe writer asks for ¼ teaspoon of lemon extract or 1 tablespoon of beaten egg?

The Elberts do, and they're right. I made buttery pignola cookies and raisin-studded plum cake, and both were so good that I plan to try a more complicated dessert.

This is a pleasant book for bedtime reading, full of anecdotes on where the Elberts first tasted each sweet mouthful. Those of us who know only the staple desserts of American-Sicilian restaurants will have a good time trying the Moorishinfluenced pastries of the south and the buttery sweets of the north.

"Southern Food" by John Egerton (Knopf, $22.95) is another good read, an anecdotal treatment of the history, dining habits and cooking of the American South by a man who is neither a historian nor a cook, but a Southerner and an eater.

"Craig Claiborne's Southern Cooking" (Times, $19.95), on the other hand, is the author's usual reliable job: in this case, an exploration of the cuisine he grew up with. It includes everything from his mother's coconut cake to Charleston she-crab soup, from New Orleans Oysters Bienville to TexMex fajitas.

Hunters are as passionate about their hobby as mushroom-gatherers, and "Game in Season" by Romi Perkins (New Century $19.95) is for them. It's divided into 36 seasonal menus, starting the year with a New Year's dinner of Canada goose and apple-juniper choucroute and ending it with a Christmas cocktail party of quail liver pate (how many quail do you need for a pate?), dove breasts wrapped in bacon and woodcock legs sauteed in garlic butter. A nice reminder that game doesn't have to come with chestnuts and cranberries.

"The Old World Kitchen" by Elizabeth Luard (Bantam, $22.50) is on the "mother recipes" of Europe: the traditional, ancient dishes that Paula Wolfert likes to call "evolved."

They have in common the use of local ingredients, the lack of bought seasonings such as sugar, and the tendency to be cooked in one pot because both fuel and cookware are scarce. It's a solid book on a fascinating subject: Luard shows the kinship of Italian polenta, Romanian mamaliga, Basque broyo and a sweet cornmeal dish from Spain called milhassou.

"The Art of Indian Vegetarian Cooking" by Yamuna Devi (Dutton, $29.95) ought to do for Indian cooking what Julia Child did for French cooking, but it won't: Americans just won't warm up to Indian food.

This is a treatment of a classical vegetarian cuisine by an American woman who became a disciple of an Indian swami and learned to cook for him. In more than 700 pages, she guides us through the food, from fresh panir cheese to lethal lime pickles to the peculiar fudge-like sweets popular in India.

But the reader who's interested in truly old-fashioned cooking will want to look at "Elinor Fettiplace's Receipt Book" by Hilary Spurling (Viking, $22.50).

Spurling cooked for 10 years from a hand-written book of recipes written in 1604, discovering that early English cooking was far more sophisticated and less monotonous than we assume.

Her first attempt was the Lord of Devonshire's pudding, which turned out to be bread and butter pudding. She gives the originals as well as the modern versions of all the recipes, in a book as chunky with facts as the Lord of Devonshire's pudding was with dates, currants and raisins.

TESTING THE NEW RECIPES

From Ken Hom's "East Meets West Cuisine":

GRILLED HOISIN CHICKEN

1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
3 tablespoons hoisin sauce
2 tablespoons rice wine
1 tablespoon olive oil
4 boned chicken-breast halves

Mix the thyme, hoisin, rice wine and olive oil and rub into chicken breasts. Cover with plastic wrap and marinate 30 minutes at room temperature, or 1 hour in the refrigerator. Grill over coals or in the broiler.

From "Dolci" by Virginie and George Elbert:

ROMAN BANANAS

1 ripe banana
3/4 tablespoon dark rum
3/4 tablespoon maraschino liqueur
superfine sugar
1/4 cup heavy cream
4 drops vanilla

Peel and slice banana into a flat-bottomed bowl. Sprinkle with rum and maraschino juice and dust with sugar. Let sit at room temperature for 1 hour. Spoon bananas and syrup into a bowl and cover with cream whipped with vanilla.

From Barbara Kafka's "Microwave Gourmet":

GARLIC POTATOES

1 pound small new potatoes
6 large cloves garlic, peeled and smashed
3 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
freshly ground black pepper

Place potatoes in a 1 1/2-quart souffle dish. Add remaining ingredients and stir. Cover tightly with microwave plastic wrap. Cook at 100 percent for 10 to 15 minutes, depending on size of potatoes, shaking to redistribute potatoes.

Tasty

1/4 teaspoon liquid smoke (optional)
4 pita breads, tops sliced open

In large skillet, heat oil over medium-high heat. Add meat and cook, turning once, until browned on both sides. Set aside.

Add onion, garlic and jalapeno to pan. Saute, stirring frequently, until onion is translucent. Stir in tomato sauce, Kahlua, salt and liquid smoke. Return meat to pan and spoon some of sauce over top. Cover and simmer over low heat about 45 minutes, or until tender. Remove meat from sauce and set aside. Bring sauce to boil and cook and stir until thickened slightly reduced, about 5 minutes. Slice meat 1/8-inch thick. Return meat to sauce and stir to coat with sauce. To serve, fill pita bread pockets with meat and some of the sauce. Makes 4 servings.

KAHLUA CHICKEN FIJITAS IN PITAS

5 tablespoons vegetable oil
1/4 cup Kahlua
1/4 cup freshly squeezed lime juice
2 tablespoons soy sauce
6 chicken breast halves, skinned and boned
1 onion, sliced in narrow wedges
1 small red bell pepper, slice in strips
Salt and pepper
1 (7-ounce) can whole mild green chiles, sliced in strips
4 pita breads, tops sliced open
Guacamole
Fresh or bottled salsa

In glass baking dish, combine 4 tablespoons oil, Kahlua, lime juice and soy sauce. Cut chicken into thin strips and add to marinade with onions, red pepper and green chile strips. Marinate at least 30 minutes.

Heat large skillet or griddle until very hot. Add remainig oil, then, working with half of chicken at a time, remove mixture from marinade allowing excess liquid to drain off. Fry in hot pan, stirring and tossing constantly, just until chicken is tender, about 5 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Repeat with remaining chicken mixture. Serve in pita bread pockets. Add guacamole and salsa as desired. Makes 4 servings.

KAHLUA BROWN RICE AND VEGGIES IN A PITA

1 1/2 cups brown rice
1 cup sliced green onions
1 cup diced carrots
1 cup roasted peanuts
1 cup diced red bell pepper
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1/2 cup peanut oil
1/4 cup Kahlua
1/4 cup rice vinegar
1 tablespoon mustard
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
4 pita breads, if desired, tops sliced open
Lettuce leaves

Cook rice according to package directions. Spread on baking sheet to cool. In large bowl, combine cooled rice, green onions, carrots, peanuts, red pepper and parsley. Chill.

In jar with tight-fitting lid, combine oil, Kahlua, vinegar, mustard, salt and pepper. Shake to combine

When ready to serve, pour dressing over the rice mixture and toss to blend thoroughly. For sandwiches, tuck lettuce leaves into pita pockets and fill with rice salad. Or, serve over lettuce leaves. Makes 4 servings.

PEACH-BLUEBERRY SLUMP

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons brown sugar, packed
1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 1/2 cups water
2 tablespoons amaretto
3 to 4 peaches, sliced
3/4 to 1 cup blueberries
1 cup buttermilk baking mix
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/8 teaspoon ground ginger
1/3 cup milk

Melt butter and brown sugar in large skillet or Dutch oven. Stir cornstarch into water. Add to skillet and bring to boil, stirring constantly. Stir in amaretto, then add peaches and blueberries.

Combine baking mix, granulated sugar, cinnamon and ginger. Add milk and stir with fork just until mixed. Drop dough by tablespoons onto boiling fruit mixture. Cook 10 minutes, then cover and cook another 10 minutes. Makes 6 servings.
