Child Trapped In 20-Foot Well

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Rescue workers feverishly drilled through solid rock today toward a crying toddler who tumbled into an abandoned backyard well and was trapped more than 20 feet down.

Eighteen-month-old Jessica McClure had been inside the well since about 9:30 a.m. Wednesday.

"It is solid rock right now. It is pretty slow going," said paramedic David Felice, one of the diggers. He said the girl was getting adequate oxygen and was believed to be on her back in a fairly comfortable position.

Rescue workers could not predict when they would reach the child, and early today they reported about a foot of solid rock still separated them from her.

At 6 a.m. today, rescue workers said the girl was awake and crying, indicating she was in good condition. The child had responded to shouts from relatives and from a paramedic by whimpering or crying.

She had slept earlier during the night after workers installed heaters to blow warm air into the narrow entrance of the well.

Friends and neighbors waited and prayed at the site with Jessica's mother, Reba Gayle McClure.

Pat Brister, a neighbor, said everyone was confident the child would be rescued. "You don't get tears as long as there is hope."

The rescuers, digging a 3-by-3-foot parallel shaft, said the drill bit they were using was not strong enough to bore through the solid rock and concrete between them and the area where the girl was located. They also appealed for more volunteers to relieve those who had been drilling since 11 a.m. Wednesday, about 1½ hours after the child fell in.

The well, behind a private day-care center operated by Jessica's mother, is about 8 inches in diameter at the spot where the child fell in. It widens farther down, then narrows to 6 inches below where the child came to rest.

A microphone was dropped into the shaft to communicate with the girl. At one time, her mother, Reba Gayle McClure, spoke to her.

A city water department video camera was lowered into the well and the child's face was visible on the screen for a short time.

The workers said they had dug a chamber wide enough to be able to lift the child up on a backboard after reaching her.

Lawanna Keller, whose 3-year-old daughter, Lyndsey, attends the day care center, said the accident happened while her daughter, Jessica and another children were playing.

Iranian Missile Hits U.S. Tanker In Terminal Attack

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iranian missile slammed into Kuwait's main oil loading terminal today, setting an American-owned supertanker ablaze but causing no damage to U.S.-flagged ships nearby, officials and shipping sources said.

The shipping sources said the missile might have been a Chinese-made Silkworm. If true, it would be the first time Iran has used the medium-range missile against a ship. The sources also said it might have been a shorter-range anti-ship missile fired from a boat.

Shipping sources had reported earlier this week that Iran had acquired American-made air-to-surface missiles for use by its air force. But a U.S. Navy official in the gulf, commenting on condition of anonymity, said the missile that hit the tanker in Kuwait was not fired from a plane.

At the United Nations, meanwhile, the Security Council agreed to back a proposal to end the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war, sources said. The proposal links a truce, a withdrawal of troops and formation of a panel to determine who started the war.

A British navy vessel today found a third mine in the Gulf of Oman outside the Persian Gulf and detonated it, the Ministry of Defense said in London.

The mine-hunting vessel HMS

Brecon used sonar to locate the mine off the United Arab Emirates. A remote-controlled minisubmarine attached an explosive charge to the mine before it was blown up, the ministry said in a statement.

The 275,937-ton Liberian-flagged Sungari, owned by New York-based OMI Corp., was hit in the starboard side at about 5 a.m. Shipping sources who were in contact with Kuwait said ambulances rushed to the terminal.

"I would characterize the damage as serious," Peter Long, vice president of OMI, said in New York. "There is no loss of life, no serious injury."

Travel Experts To Meet

By SUSAN TACKER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Governor's Conference on Travel and Tourism will meet in Greenville April 10-12, 1988, the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce announced today.

"We're excited about having the opportunity of hosting such a prestigious group," said Ruth Matous, chairman of the chamber's convention and visitors committee.

"These are the people of our industry involved in travel, tourism and booking meetings. And having just recently established a convention and visitors authority with the occupancy tax, what could be a better plus for Greenville and Pitt County but to host this important conference?" she said.

Greenville was chosen as the conference site over Rocky Mount, New Bern and Fayetteville, according to Ms. Matous, who said the meeting is expected to attract 300 to 500 participants.

"I can't think of a finer way to get the first year of the authority's operation really in high gear than to host this conference in Greenville," said Rudy Alexander, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville convention and visitors authority. "It's going to mean a lot to the city and to the county."

The convention and visitors authority uses the 3 percent room occupancy tax funds to promote travel and tourism in Greenville and Pitt County.

Panel Will Study Plans For Stadium

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A committee was appointed Wednesday night to consider recommendations on whether to move ahead in renovating Guy Smith Stadium in the immediate future or whether to recommend delaying work on the facility.

Dr. Carl Willie, chairman of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission, appointed members J.B. Surlis and Derek Dunn to head the study committee.

H. Boyd Lee, executive director of the Parks and Recreation Department, told commissioners that if a decision to renovate is made, that action needs to be taken without delay if the park is to be used for the coming spring baseball season.

Lee reported that in discussions with the city government, the first matter brought up touched on whether the priority would be to hire an architect to draw up renovation plans or to get a construction engineer to make a study on the soundness of the structure.

Lee said the City Council had authorized the city engineering department to make a decision on needs for structural renovation. "The city engineer said he did not feel comfortable for the city engineers, with their limited experience in this type of thing, to take on the study. He suggested hiring a con-

Six Children Killed In Fire

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A fire that apparently was started by electric heaters killed six children today, while the mother of at least five of the victims was in the hospital after giving birth to another child, authorities said.

It was the second major fire in Milwaukee within a month. On Sept. 30, 10 children and two adults were killed in a fire about one mile from the scene of today's fire.

Police Lt. Charles Grisham said that possibly all of the dead were children of Diane Washington, who rented the house. Ms. Washington, 38, was at Mount Sinai Medical Center after having a baby Tuesday, said hospital spokeswoman Kit McNally.

Five people were taken to hospitals with injuries suffered in the fire. "We've been told the gas had been shut off and they were using electric heaters," said Fifth Battalion Chief Howard Gassel. He said at least two heaters were found in the house.

Gassel said anywhere from 10 to 15 people were living in the house that burned today. He described the victims as five girls and one boy of ages from about 1 to 13.

City Gets $845,175 In Powell Bill Funds

Greenville will receive $845,175 in Powell Bill funds as part of this month's distribution of $63.8 million in street aid to 470 cities across North Carolina, according to the State Department of Transportation.

Powell Bill funds are allotted to the cities and towns by DOT for improvements to streets and roads not included on the state highway system.

This year's allocation includes for the first time the full effects of an increase in the level of contributions (from 1 and 3/8 cents per gallon to 1 and three-quarter-cent per gallon) that resulted from the partial adoption of Gov. Jim Martin's "Roads to the Future" program by the 1986 General Assembly.

Last year's allocation, which included some but not all of the increased funding level, was $54.7 million.

The funds are distributed under a formula set by the General Assembly with 75 percent of the money allocated on the basis of population, while the number of non-state system street miles in each municipality is used to calculate the remaining 25 percent.

Other Pitt County towns receiving Powell Bill funds included Farm-

Astronaut Says Everything Set For Scheduled '88 Shuttle Flight

By SUSAN TACKER
Reflector Staff Writer

Crews for the next several space shuttle flights are in training now as NASA plans for the future, according to astronaut-physicist Linda Godwin.

Dr. Godwin was keynote speaker for the Women in the 21st Century conference Wednesday on the East Carolina University campus.

Dr. Godwin, noting the next shuttle flight is scheduled for early June of 1988, said "we feel that everything is in place for getting the program back on a successful track and hopefully meeting this launch date." There have been no flights since the Challenger blew up soon after its lift-off on Jan. 28, 1986, killing the crew.

Dr. Godwin was selected as an astronaut candidate in 1985. Although she has not yet been in space, she is qualified for assignment as an astronaut and mission specialist on future shuttle flights.

She presented a slide history of NASA's space program and spoke of its future.

One major project is an orbiting space station.

"The space station plan is moving along," she said. The design includes panels for solar energy, modules for human habitation and laboratories.

"We'll be having international cooperation" on the station, she said, with both a Japanese and a European Space Agency module. The maximum number of crew members will probably be seven, but the length of

Property Stolen

Three thefts, including an estimated $2,389 worth of computer equipment, were reported to Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer M.R. Benton said a computer, a monitor, a disc drive, a printer, two voice synthesizers and a rolling desk were taken from Elmhurst School on West Berkeley Road in a break-in reported at 11:10 a.m., while Officer L.E. White said a purse was taken from the S&S Cafeteria at Carolina East Mall in an incident reported at 3:12 p.m.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said four cartons of cigarettes were taken from the Short Stop at 213 E. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 10:02 p.m.

Benefit Program

A building fund benefit program will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Best Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Route 6, Greenville. The Rev. Tarry Best will speak.

Thefts Reported

Greenville police said three people were charged in connection with thefts reported to the department Wednesday.

Officer R.L. Smith said Millette Laughinghouse, 20, of 207A Cadillac St. was charged with shoplifting and Latisa Bynum, 16, of 1914B Kennedy Circle was charged with aiding and abetting shoplifting in connection with a 5:24 p.m. incident at Nichols Discount City on Greenville Boulevard. Smith said $73.98 worth of merchandise was reported taken in the incident.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said Kim Martin Waller, 27, of 2613 Cherokee Drive was charged with shoplifting in connection with a 12:10 p.m. incident at Harris Supermarket on South Memorial Drive where $1.99 worth of candy was reported taken.

Drug Arrest Made

Michael Johnson, 27, of Washington, D.C., was arrested on drug and possession of stolen property charges by Greenville police before dawn today.

Officer N.B. Rise said Johnson was charged with possession of controlled substances with intent to manufacture, sell and deliver after a quantity of marijuana and materials to produce the cocaine derivative crack was found in his possession. Rise said the arrest took place after a car Johnson was driving was stopped on Memorial Drive near Village Drive.

The possession of stolen property charge was levied after a walkie-talkie reported stolen from the Rocky Mount Police Department was found in Johnson's possession, Rice said.

Health Care Talk

The Pitt County Medical Society will present "Alternative Health Care Delivery Systems" by Dr. James W. Carter Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the East Carolina Medical School's Brody Auditorium.

Safety Banner

The Vocational Industrial Clubs of America's Safety Committee in the carpentry program at Farmville Central High School arranged for a plane to pull a large safety banner above the crowd of more than 30,000 people at the East Carolina University homecoming game Saturday.

The plane circled the stadium seven times with a banner that read, "Farmville VICA says have a safe school year," urging students in the Pitt County schools and at ECU to do their best to have a safe school year.

VICA is an organization for students in trade, industrial, technical and health occupations in the public high schools, vocational schools, junior colleges and community colleges.

Resolution Adopted

A special committee of the East Carolina University Student Government Association Legislature has drawn up a resolution calling for increased communication between North Carolina State University and ECU.

The measure was taken to clarify the SGA's position on the events following the ECU-NCSU football game of Sept. 5.

A letter containing the resolution was sent to the Student Government Association of NCSU as well as NCSU Chancellor Bruce Poulton.

Alumni Chapter

The Pitt-Greenville chapter of Greenville-Industrial Eppes alumni will meet Saturday at 6 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Darden, 100 Trent Circle.

Accused Of Racing

Terry Lavon Cannon, 24, of Route 2, Grifton, was identified today as being among six people charged earlier this week by the Highway Patrol in alleged highway racing that led to the deaths of two people on Sept. 30.

Pitt County Superior Court Clerk's records show that Cannon and five others were arrested Tuesday morning as they left work at the Collins and Aikman textile manufacturing company in Farmville. Vehicles of all six were confiscated.

They are accused of participating in a prearranged drag race which ended when one of the cars went out of control and struck another car. Killed in the 7:50 a.m. accident was Wesley Mitchell Taft, 52, a Farmville woman on her way to work as a private duty nursing caregiver. Jeffrey Collins Johnson, 24, reportedly a participant in the race on the Eastern Bypass of Farmville, died Oct. 5 in Pitt County Memorial Hospital, from injuries received in the accident.

Surgical Procedure

Dr. Pinkney B. Young III of Greenville recently performed the surgical placement of four osseointegrated implants at a meeting of the Dental Implant Associates of North Carolina.

DIANC is a 25-member study group from North Carolina and South Carolina affiliated with the American Academy of Implant Dentistry.

Quarterly Meeting

St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church will have quarterly meeting services this weekend.

A members' meeting will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m., while Holy Communion will be Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Eldress Hattie Cobb will preach during 11 a.m. services Sunday, while Elder James Nobles will preach during the 3 p.m. service. Music will be provided by the Gospel Crusaders.

District Choir

A district choir is being organized for master masons and members of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Spock Lecture Set

Dr. Benjamin Spock, baby care expert and author of the guide, "Baby and Child Care," will speak Nov. 17 in East Carolina University's Hendrix Theatre.

Spock's lecture, "Stresses Affecting Families and Children," will begin at 7:30 p.m. and is free.

The Spock presentation is expected to be the first in an annual "Health Family Lecture Series" co-sponsored by the ECU schools of Medicine and Allied Health Sciences, along with the Pitt County Medical Society, the Pitt County Medical Auxiliary and the Greenville Hilton Inn.

Dr. David Chenoweth of the ECU health education faculty said Spock's lecture is designed to help parents understand ways to deal with today's stresses in raising happy and healthy families. Spock is also author of "Raising Children in a Difficult Time" and "A Teen-Age Guide to Life and Love."

Spock's Greenville visit is also intended to promote the imminent opening of the new Adventures in

'All-American Day'

The J.H. Rose High School cafeteria celebrated "All-American Day" Tuesday with a red, white and blue theme and an American flag hanging on one wall circled by smaller flags.

Hamburgers, hot dogs, fried chicken and french fries were used for the 50 stars. Red, white and blue streamers and balloons decorated the other walls, and the faculty dining table was decorated with fruits and red, white and blue candles and flags.

A side table was filled and labeled with examples of All-American food, much of which made up the menu for the day.

Halloween Carnival

Stokes Elementary School will have its annual Halloween Carnival Oct. 23 from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. with food, prizes, games, booths and an auction.

Employees Served

Bosses cooked hamburgers and served employees of Empire Brushes at odd hours of the day and night Tuesday and Wednesday.

The occasion was an "Empire Employee Appreciation Day" planned by the company to show employees appreciation for extra hard work filling large orders over the past several months, said Leon Wright, a company spokesman.

Company officers, managers, and supervisors cooked hamburgers on grills and served them with all the trimmings at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday to second shift people, at 2:30 a.m. Wednesday to third shift people and at 11 a.m. Wednesday to first shift employees.

Wright said about 500 people, including honorees and cooks, were served.

Rose Band Honored

Mike Fussell, director of the J.H. Rose High School Marching Band, accepted $750 as a first place prize for the band in the East Carolina University homecoming parade.

The band also won several honors in the Havelock Marching Band Festival including first place in Band Class A, Flags Class A and Horns Class A, and second place in Drum Majors Class A, Drum Line Class A and overall band for the day.

Church Homecoming

Little Creek Church of Christ in Ayden will have homecoming and quarterly meeting this weekend beginning Thursday night with a preservice led by Elder Blake Phillips from Zion Hill Free Will Baptist Church.

A visiting speaker will lead the services Friday with Holy Communion set for Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Sunday school will be held at 9:30 a.m. on Sunday and at 11 a.m. the combined choir will perform.

Dinner will be served at 2 p.m. and at 3 p.m. Elder W.D. Kerp from Antioch Church of Christ will close out the services.

Honor For Alumnus

The East Carolina University Student Stores will be named in honor of alumnus Ronald E. Dowdy to signify appreciation of Dowdy's leadership as an advocate and benefactor of the university, ECU officials announced.

The stores, which include the campus bookstore and two snack bars, will be named for Dowdy during a ceremony at 9 a.m. Oct. 31 in Wright Auditorium.

A self-made millionaire, Dowdy is an entrepreneur in Orlando, Fla., who has prospered through real estate development and investments, the officials said. At ECU he worked his way through school by providing a laundry delivery service to students and by booking dance bands for local shows. He received a bachelor's degree in accounting in 1966.

Dowdy, a native of Alexandria, Va., gave a $100,000 challenge gift in 1985-86. Through the annual giving program, his gift was matched by alumni contributors for a total of $200,000. He has also pledged $25,000 to the School of Business golden anniversary campaign.

Scrapbook Winner

The 1987 scrapbook of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors won first place in the recent North Carolina Association of Realtor's competition.

Stream Watch

The Riverwatch "G" stream watch group in the Tar River Basin in Pitt County has been designated an official stream watch organization by the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Stream watch groups monitor streams and waterways in their community through clean-ups, nature trail construction, education projects, water quality monitoring, recreational outings and inventories of natural and historic features.

Under the stream watch program, NRCD furnishes the groups with materials and technical information on sound stream management, including water quality, stream flow, fisheries and water trails. Contact persons in each of seven NRCD regional offices coordinate information and respond to specific problems.

For more information contact Stream Watch Coordinator, Division of Water Resources, NRCD, P.O. Box 27687, Raleigh, N.C., 27611.

Band Members Tour

Six members of East Carolina University's Marching Pirates band have concluded a season of touring across the nation with U.S. Drum and Bugle Corps groups.

The tours ended recently in Whitewater, Wis., at the Drum Corps International World Championships. All corps represented by members of the Marching Pirates made the "top twelve," a spokesman said.

ECU band members participating were Todd Brewer of Fairfax, Va., ECU's head drum major, who performed with the "Garfield Cadets" corps; Scotty Sells of Richfield and

Bucky Cross of Creedmoor, performing with the "Spirit of Atlanta;" Matt Minick of Raleigh, member of the "Garfield Cadets;" Nick Holland of Pittsboro, member of the "Sky Ryders;" and Jeff Weaver of Ronceverte, W.Va., member of the "Bridgemen."

The "top twelve" is selected from among several hundred competing corps, each with approximately 128 members, according to Dr. Thomas Goolsby, director of the Marching Pirates.

AAMA Speaker

John Walston will speak today at 7:30 p.m. at a meeting of the American Association of Medical Assistants.

Walston, who is associated with Professional Credit Service, will give a miniseries on collection.

The meeting will be held in the Greenville OBGYN office.

Eagle Citizen Award

Wyatt Brown was honored as the Eagle Scout Citizen of the Year during the first Pitt District Eagle Banquet held Wednesday in St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Brown joined Scouting in 1915 and received the Eagle award in 1935. He received the Silver Beaver award in 1948.

State Sen. Tom Taft, Eagle Scout of Troop 340, presented the keynote address, urging Eagle Scouts to recommit themselves to the Scouting movement.

John J. Bush, Scout executive of the East Carolina Council, presided at the banquet, and Walter "Sparky" Hood, East Carolina Council president, presented the Citizen of the Year award.

Pitt District Executive Grady Mullis presented the Eagle challenge and the closing ceremony.

Alumni Festival

The Alamance County Chapter of the East Carolina University Alumni Association is sponsoring a fall festival Nov. 3 at the Alamance Country Club, 2402 Pineway Drive, Burlington. A special guest will be Chancellor Richard R. Eakin.

Events will include a social hour beginning at 6 p.m., followed at 7 p.m. by a buffet dinner of prime rib and seafood. A silent auction will be from 6 p.m. until 7:30 p.m. Proceeds will benefit the Lester R. Ridenhour Scholarship.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The Jackson Factor

The candidacy of Jesse L. Jackson for Democratic nomination for president in the upcoming race for the White House can't be taken lightly. He means business.

After all, he is the only 1984 candidate now in this year's contest. And, as he says, Jackson has been campaigning for this opportunity ever since his 1984 experience.

The payoff is there for all to see: an ABC News-Washington Post poll last September determined Jackson enjoyed support of 23 percent of the nation's Democrats. Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis was second with 13 percent.

Jackson is an experienced candidate. He is articulate and has a way of reaching people with his persuasive public speech. He has shown the ability to capitalize on economic and social issues that other candidates have seemed ineffective at dealing with. That's not to say he's all dialogue. Jackson has substance to back up his rhetoric.

Couple his current support with many more weeks of handshaking, addressing large and small groups, and hewing to his message for financially pressed farmers and urban factory workers, and it is easy to understand why Jackson's ebullience is not all showmanship.

For that reason, he will figure strongly in the Democratic race for president. But he is a long shot for the nomination. It is more likely he and his supporters will bargain strategically in the nominating process by throwing support to another candidate in exchange for a vice presidential nomination or the hope of a cabinet seat.

In short, Jesse Jackson's political career may come of age in 1988. He is not just a black candidate for nomination. His support has broadened beyond racial lines. He is a player.

Jackson's appeal does have a less optimistic side.

Economists and indexes point toward a movement to recovery in the industrial states. The Farm Belt is also benefitting from a prolonged period of gradual economic growth. Per capita income is even now at an all-time high. So the economy may be losing its appeal as a fulcrum for votes from two of the candidate's targeted voter groups.

As an announced candidate, some of Jackson's past views or actions as an activist will be dredged up and laid out anew for the electorate. They will not please everybody but they will appeal to many — enough to make him a factor.

Hearings Show Concensus On Constitution

The hearings into the nomination of Judge Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court raised troubling issues which reasonable people could, did and no doubt will continue to disagree.

These include the role of the Senate in considering confirmation of a judicial appointment, the proper scope of inquiry into a candidate's philosophical and legal views, the manner in which this particular inquiry was conducted and, of course, the outcome.

Beneath that disagreement, however, the hearings and the public debate that surrounded them reflect a degree of consensus concerning the Constitution itself and the significance of individual rights, which to some of us came as a bit of a surprise.

Those of us who believe strongly in civil rights and liberties are inclined at times to see ourselves as a minority, and when the subject arises in conversation we are perversely fond of recalling a poll that was taken in Michigan (or was it Iowa?) a few years ago (maybe quite a few), in which it was demonstrated, in some fashion (we don't remember quite how) that if the Bill of Rights were put up to popular vote, it would lose. The implication of this legendary study is that the spirit of freedom and equality that gave rise to our noble document, and later to the 14th Amendment, is alive only within an enlightened minority.

The Bork hearings — not the outcome, necessarily, but the process — have undermined that pessimistic view. Granted that the outpouring of opposition to Judge Bork was in part orchestrated, that it was limited to selected issues and that some consider it to have been misdirected.

The point is, it was there, and in such intensity that all senators on the Judiciary Committee, whatever their views about politics in general or Judge Bork in particular, tacitly accepted as their premise for questioning and debate that Americans care deeply about their constitutional rights. Further, that they generally approve of Supreme Court decisions protective of those rights. And finally, that if Bork held the constrained views of constitutional protection for individual rights that his opponents said he held, then he was indeed outside what they and the public considered to be the mainstream of both constitutional theory and popular thought.

Moreover, despite the arguments of some scholars that it is meaningless to talk about shared values in a community so diverse as ours, there emerged from the hearings and their context a perceptible consensus about certain principles such as privacy, freedom of speech and equality, which even the most reclusive of academics and judges cannot fail to observe.

Notwithstanding problems of scope and definition, it appears, for example, that most of us do believe that there exists an area of personal privacy — perhaps autonomy is a better word — which courts should protect against government interference; that the freedom of speech guaranteed by the First Amendment is broader than political speech and embraces even (who would have thought?) a threat to kill the President of the United States absent a clear and imminent danger of the act being committed, and that the equal-protection clause of the 14th Amendment should be broadly interpreted in the case of women as well as blacks and ethnic minorities. As to integration, no evidence of a developed national consensus could be more convincing than the spectacle of Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., questioning Judge Bork to confirm his approval of Brown vs. Board of Education.

More generally, I submit, the hearings demonstrated public support for a dynamic view of the Constitution — one in which courts, though constrained by constitutional text, structure and history, nevertheless assume continuing responsibility for protecting the values of freedom and equality in a changing world. Whatever else one thinks of the hearings, these lessons are of lasting value.

Reagan Memory Lapses Surface In Public

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like many Americans, particularly as they get older, President Reagan sometimes has trouble remembering what he wants to say.

Some say it's getting worse and that the president, who will be 76 in February, is increasingly showing his age.

"He does grope more for words," says Stephen J. Wayne, professor of political science at George Washington University and a student of the American presidency. "Clearly, there has been an aging of this president as there has been of other presidents."

This one, however, is older than the others. Dwight Eisenhower, the oldest previous president, was just a few months over 70 when he left office.

Reagan himself said in a recent interview he felt "desperate" because he couldn't remember a senator's name.

The president seems no more self-conscious about his forgetfulness, and his age is a frequent target of his own jokes.

A leading authority on aging says the only thing the lapses show is that Reagan is Reagan.

"The president's behavior is becoming more and more representative of the president and not necessarily representative of people 76 years of age," said Edward Anselmo, associate director of the Center on Aging at the University of Maryland, arguing that people become more individual, and less representative of their age group, the older they get.

Be that as it may, on his speaking trip to New Jersey this week, Reagan said "1948" when his script read "1984" and, in some ad-libbed remarks in the same speech, failed to come up with the word "humidity" when he needed it.

In an interview last Friday with Cable News Network, he had trouble remembering the name of Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, one of a trio of senators he had described as "principal leaders of the lynch mob" attacking his Supreme Court nominee, Robert H. Bork.

Reagan was making the point that the same three also had opposed Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist when he was up for confirmation last year.

"If you look back at the leaders in the opposition, those against Rehnquist were three senators — Senator Biden, Senator Kennedy and — why does the third name slip my mind?" the president said.

Following an awkward pause, he added, "I'm still sitting here desperate because I missed the third — oh, Metzenbaum — the third senator."

Speaking to employees at the Somerset Technologies plant in Somerset, N.J., on Tuesday, Reagan never did come up with the word he was looking for, although he did find a substitute.

Interpolating a story about a hot day in Washington, he described it as "in excess of 100 degrees and about 100 percent ... (pause) ... moisture in the air."

This was also the speech in which the president said the company's sales had increased by more than $10 million in 1948, instead of 1984.

Later, in a speech to the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce at a Somerset hotel, Reagan said he wanted Congress to raise taxes, instead of the other way around, although he quickly corrected himself.

Reagan's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, dismissed the flubs, saying he himself has trouble from time to time remembering what he wants to say.

Presidential scholar Wayne, however, said in an interview, "It seems to me to be a sign of aging. ... We saw some of this with Eisenhower. He had three major illnesses during his presidency and he was a much older, less energetic man at the end of his term. I think Carter lost a little of his spirit by 1980, so some of this is a natural aging in a presidency, in a tough job."

Dr. Lila McConnell, associate director of the division of geriatric medicine at GWU Medical Center, said that while "any problem with memory in someone who is older should be investigated," such lapses can occur "for a lot of different reasons that are not necessarily pathological." In other words, if you forget things, it doesn't necessarily mean you're senile.

W. Dale Nelson covers the White House for The Associated Press. He is 60 years old and has been known to forget things.

Strength For Today

Have you ever driven any considerable distance with a person who knows so much about an automobile that he keeps complaining all the time about the condition of the engine? I have a mechanical-minded friend who hears every squeak, every knock in the engine. For him a trip in a car is one long lamentation over the inefficiency of modern mechanical methods. Many people go through life in the same way. To them life is a series of squeaks and knocks. They are sensitive to everything of an annoying nature which occurs in their vicinity. They are the first to hear gossip and pass it on. They are quite sure there is no such thing as statesmanship and that all statesmen are crooked politicians. To them the church is a weak, moribund institution.

The hear nothing but squeaks and knocks. They are conscious only of the weakness of the human race.

Public Forum

To the editor:

We were in Greenville two weeks ago for a few days. Please let me take this opportunity to tell you that we think your city is one of the nicest we've visited. The thing that impressed us most was the obvious lack of litter. Not only the streets, but even parking lots of malls and, more unbelievable, "quick-stop" parking lots were clean!

Your citizens should be commended. There is a definite feeling of community pride and, furthermore, everyone we met was very friendly.

We would certainly enjoy having "Greenvillers" vacation at our beaches. We just hope they won't be personally offended by the trash some people leave on our shores.

Fall Spectacular

Be ready for one of nature's most spectacular color shows, one in which North Carolina is a star performer.

The leaves should be turning in the mountains of our state right now, with the peak scheduled for the coming weekend.

Retired Appalachian State University biology professor Dr. Bill Carpenter said this should be a very good leaf color display year. Recent rains made up for a dry summer.

"What I was really afraid of was that the drought would crinkle the leaves up and we would not get much color," Carpenter said. "Now the leaves have gotten really green, and they're going at it."

The entire week of Oct. 17-24 should be good for viewing depending on the elevation on any particular day. The peak in the Wilkesboro area, in the foothills, should be around Oct. 23-24.

Carpenter said the display this year should be good and a strong killing frost should bring the leaves to their peak. If viewers choose a sunny day and look at east-facing slopes in the mornings and west-facing slopes in the afternoons they should see the maximum effect.

Carpenter explained that the colors we see in the fall are always in the leaves. They become evident when the green chlorophyll breaks down and exposes the colors.

The fall leaves in North Carolina mountains are one of the great sights and it is well worth the trip to view.

For those who can't go, however, remember that the turning of the leaves marches steadily to the coast throughout the fall. Although the mountainsides are not available, it is a sight which can be enjoyed in the vast forests of the east.

In fact, fall color lingers longer down east because frosts are less frequent. Often, eastern North Carolina doesn't receive a real killing frost or hard freeze until late November.

The spectacular production of fall leaves changing color is a good value. It costs nothing and thrills the eye. Don't miss it.

Dulling Demands Of Vice Presidency Dimmed Bush's Leadership

PARIS — "This is a neuralgic subject," my friend the diplomat said warily after reading my column on George Bush's trip to Western Europe last week. That was to be understatement. The vice president's office took to the column about the way the U.S. Navy took to those Iranian scud missiles who fired off a couple of tracer rounds at American helicopters and got sent to the bottom of the Persian Gulf for their trouble.

Shortly after the column appeared, transatlantic phone wires between the vice president's office in Washington and the American embassies in Bonn and Paris were humming. And shortly after that, embassy officials approached their host governments with demarches that were strikingly similar:

Would it be too much trouble for West German and French officials to make public comments about how successful the Bush trip had really been?

Friedhelm Ost, spokesman for Chancellor Helmut Kohl, obliged by sending off a telex to the editor, giving his office's view of the trip. In Paris, a Foreign Ministry official who had been called by the American Embassy found occasion to praise Bush in remarks in the French Senate.

I learned of the unusual paeon for Bush in the French Senate when Ambassador Joe M. Rodgers, the wealthy Tennessee businessman sent here by President Reagan in 1985, had an embassy spokesman telephone to call it to my attention.

The spokesman also suggested I call two French officials who had been contacted by Rodgers. They were willing to say how well Bush had performed if I asked. Rodgers and Richard Burt, the bright and ambitious young U.S. ambassador in Bonn, also chipped in letters to the editor in praise of Bush.

Such letters are routine. But even in this weird American political season, the image of U.S. officials seeking to enlist the help of foreign governments to gloss Bush's image is a striking commentary on the insecurities of those around the vice president, and on the use of power and position in an administration that has shown a remarkable insensitivity on this score.

It also seems to confirm a disquieting view of the Foreign Service held by a White House that has made more political appointments to large and sensitive embassies and senior policy posts in the State Department than any other in recent memory. It says buckets about what ambassadors seem to be expected to do these days, particularly if they have ambitions about Cabinet-level positions in Washington. One strains to imagine how David Bruce or George Kennan would have reacted if asked to rig this kind of echo chamber.

With Burt in Washington and away from Bonn, it fell to the highly competent and professional No. 2 at the embassy, James Dobbins, to convey the word to the West Germans about the wishes of the vice president's office. Dobbins declined all comment to questions about the incident, including whether he had discussed the matter with Bush personally. Rodgers, a self-described close friend of Bush, was also in the United States Tuesday and not available to comment on the report that Bush had called him personally.

The point of last week's column was not that Bush had embarrassed himself in Europe. It was that this trip had been routine rather than distinguished. Away from the photo ops and press conferences Bush did not break any new ground.

That seemed noteworthy because Bush had turned in a distinguished performance during a successful trip to Europe in 1981 when alliance relations were in a much more difficult stage. Since then, the dulling demands of the vice presidency seem to have diminished Bush's leadership abilities rather than added to them.

3 BIG DAYS LEFT! SALE

— Chet Currier — Downfall

NEW YORK (AP) — Faced with the biggest decline in stock prices in more than three years, Wall Streeters are beginning to wonder whether the long bull market is finished.

In the last two weeks, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, the best known measure of market trends, has taken its two largest point drops on record.

The 91.55-point decline posted on Oct. 6 stood as the record only eight days — until Wednesday, when the average plunged 95.46 to 2,412.70.

Since it hit a record high of 2,722.42 on Aug. 25, the average has fallen 309.72 points, or 11.4 percent, its first drop of 10 percent or greater since 1984.

"This is starting to look like something more than a modest, healthy correction," said Hugh Johnson at the brokerage firm of First Albany Corp. in Albany.

Analysts attributed Wednesday's slide to a monthly report on the nation's trade deficit that failed to live up to many analysts' expectations.

After a long wait, the thinking in the financial world went, the figures were ready to start showing the enhancing effects of the weak dollar on the United States' competitive position in world markets.

But the actual number for August — imports exceeding exports by $15.68 billion — was not the kind of news the optimists had in mind, even though it was smaller than July's record of $16.47 billion.

Improvement in the nation's international trade position now looks "months and months out in the future," said Wayne Nordberg at Prescott, Ball & Turben Inc.

Traders in the currency and the credit markets seemed to share that view, as the dollar fell and interest rates rose. Yields on long-term government bonds, which compete with stocks for investors' favor, climbed above 10 percent for the first time in two years.

To some observers, traders in all the markets have become preoccupied with the monthly data on trade.

"There's a tinge of panic," said A.C. Moore at Argus Research Corp. in New York. "Markets today are fixated on these numbers. We personally are not at all disturbed by them."

"This overreaction is probably leading to a buying opportunity."

In Johnson's view, however, the market's response to the latest data was worrisome.

"We've had bad trade numbers before without such an extreme reaction. This is starting to gain momentum on the downside," he said. "There's a lot of bear market talk out there."

Though it might have been small consolation to many investors, prices of several blue-chip issues swung upward from their New York lows in late trading Wednesday on the Pacific Stock Exchange, which closes half an hour later than other markets.

That was no guarantee of a rally in today's session. But it suggested that the bull market still had at least a few true believers left.

Chet Currier has reported on the stock market for The Associated Press since 1974.

In lobbying for the Patowmack Canal, a waterway that linked the Atlantic seaboard to the West via the Potomac River, George Washington started a chain of events that led to the writing of the U.S. Constitution in 1787, says National Geographic.

Farmer Says Co-Op Misled Growers On Assessment

RALEIGH (AP) — A Fuquay-Varina farmer says the board of directors of the flue-cured tobacco cooperative played a pivotal role in a 350 percent increase in assessments during 1985 that forced thousands of farmers out of business.

Horace Tart said minutes from the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. show the board voted 6-5 at a tension-filled special meeting on Feb. 22, 1985, to raise the assessment from 7 to 25 cents per pounds of tobacco.

"There was probably hundreds and even thousands of farmers forced out of business only because of that '85 assessment," Tart said Wednesday.

Every year, the board makes recommendations to the U.S. Agriculture Secretary on the per-pound amount farmers should be assessed to keep the price-support program running.

But the minutes, Tart said, showed that the agriculture secretary had indicated that he would do what the board wanted — and that the board had voted for the higher assessment.

"They have actually misled the tobacco farmer by trying to make him believe they had nothing to do with the changes in the program," Tart said. "They have totally misrepresented the role they have played in the tobacco program."

But Fred G. Bond, the co-op's general manager, said the decision on assessments was made by the U.S. secretary of agriculture and that no alternative was available.

Tart and fellow tobacco farmer

Dewey D. Keith obtained the minutes after they successfully sued the co-op for access to its books and records. Since 1985, the co-op had refused to give the farmers complete access to the records, saying the farmers were trying to undermine the tobacco program.

A federal judge in June ordered the co-op to give the men access to its records. On Tuesday, the farmers released through their lawyer copies of minutes of five board meetings held in late 1984 and early 1985, a time when the tobacco program was in danger of collapsing.

The co-op plays a key part in the federal tobacco program by buying tobacco at the support price if cigarette companies pass it over or if farmers refuse to accept a bid. The co-op is wholly owned by flue-cured tobacco growers in five southeastern states, and 10 of 11 members of its board of directors are elected directly by tobacco growers.

The minutes indicate the Agriculture Department would have accepted an assessment fee as low as 20 cents per pound, but Bond said earlier minutes showed the secretary once supported a 25-cent assessment.

"Discussions are ongoing, opinions change," Bond said. "This is the reason I see no value in going through these minutes."

But T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the 1,500-member Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, said the co-op was calling the shots.

"The secretary ... offered them that choice (because) he was trying to get himself off the hot seat and Stabilization on the hot seat," Blalock said.

"But the tobacco program was in such danger of collapse that a 25-cent assessment was the only alternative left," Bond said. "Twenty-five cents certainly is something you can't live with, but there certainly was no choice."

Bond said the co-op needed the assessment to give to cigarette companies an enticement to buy tobacco on the auction floor that year. Otherwise, Bond said, the co-op would have been forced to purchase even more leaf, adding to its record surpluses and $1.3 billion debt.

Blalock agreed. A 20-cent assessment would not have been enough to entice the companies, Blalock and Bond said, and would have led to even higher assessments.

The minutes show that the five board members voting against the 25-cent assessment were Richard J. Jenks of Wake County, Bruce L. Flye of Nash County, W. Graham Smith of Robeson County, Atlas W. Wooten of Pitt County and Frank Bryant of Yadkin County. Those voting for it were board president Billy W. Hill of Florida, F.H. "Buzz" Shackelford Jr. of Greene County, Isabelle M. Fletcher of Lenoir County, Roy B. Davis Jr. of Virginia, A. Irwin McIntosh of South Carolina and B. Frank Strickland of Georgia.

Who's Ahead In Polls?

RALEIGH (AP) — Republicans say they are pleased that Gov. Jim Martin holds a nine-point lead over Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan in a telephone survey 13 months before the 1988 gubernatorial elections, but Democrats say the poll indicates Martin is in trouble.

The survey released Wednesday by Raleigh television station WRAL shows Martin leading Jordan 46 percent to 37 percent, with 17 percent undecided.

The telephone survey of 828 North Carolina residents conducted last week by Mason-Dixon Opinion Research Inc. of Maryland also shows Martin with a 62 percent approval rating. Jordan's job performance rating was 44 percent, but 20 percent of those surveyed said they didn't know enough about him to have an opinion.

Democrats accounted for 64 percent of those contacted; they represent 68 percent of the state's registered voters. Thirty-two percent of those polled are Republicans, compared with 27 percent of those registered. The poll has a 3.5 percent margin of error — meaning the results can vary 3.5 points more or less than the actual findings.

"In a state where we're out-registered three to one, it's pretty amazing the governor is running as well as he is," said Jack Hawke, the state GOP chairman.

Hawke, who ran the governor's 1984 campaign, said Martin's job performance rating is a good sign.

"You've seen Democrats attack the governor on economic development, education and saying he isn't doing anything," Hawke said. He noted editorial cartoons that made fun of Martin's decision to go on a yachting vacation in the Caribbean during the final days of the General Assembly.

"In the face of this onslaught, he's still got a 62 percent approval rating," Hawke told the Greensboro News & Record.

Bob Bradshaw, a Charlotte lawyer and chairman of Martin's re-election campaign, is more restrained.

"At this point you have to be pleased with that kind of margin, recognizing that it will probably close when it gets closer to the election," Bradshaw said.

"We feel good about the race. The governor is well regarded. He's shown the kind of leadership the people of this state expect and want in a governor."

Democrats, however, say Martin's failure to capture half of the support in a match-up against Jordan means trouble for the incumbent.

"It's surprising to me that a sitting governor, who is supposed to be popular, is pulling less than half of the vote," said Ken Eudy, executive director of the state Democratic Party.

"If I were managing his campaign, I'd expect him to be stronger," said John Crumpler, Jordan's campaign manager. "It would cause me to think twice about what's happening."

The poll doesn't hold much encouragement for state Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee who is mulling a challenge to Jordan in the party's gubernatorial primary.

The poll showed Jordan the Democrats' favorite with 63 percent to Watkins' 8 percent.

Watkins said he isn't concerned about the results.

"I've got a poll, too," Watkins said. "It doesn't show the same thing."

He refused to release any of the details of his poll, but said he might make some of it public next week.

"My poll is sufficiently encouraging for me to encourage further consideration," Watkins said.

Duke Delays Sale Of College Bonds

By The Associated Press
The first sale of tax-free bonds designed to help parents pay for a college education has been delayed because Duke University, which is issuing the bonds, wants the same bond rating as Harvard.

The bonds were supposed to have been priced and offered for sale Tuesday, but Duke officials weren't satisfied with the AA and AA+ ratings the bonds received from Moody's and Standard and Poor's, two leading investment-information firms, said Benny Bowers, a financial analyst for the state treasurer's office.

"That's a great rating," Bowers said. "But Duke feels they deserve the highest rating possible, and they are holding out for that."

The bonds will be available in denominations as small as $1,000.

IN THE STATE

Chemicals

HOLLY RIDGE, N.C. (AP) — Two trucks loaded with 96 barrels of a hazardous chemical left Holly Ridge Wednesday, ending a seven-month effort to remove the barrels from a warehouse here.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency had ordered the owner, Marlow Bostic, to remove the chemicals. A chemical manufacturer solved the problem less than two weeks ago when it agreed to take the chemical and reprocess it.

The barrels, containing 2,4-dinitrophenol, a chemical used in preparations for wood preservatives and dyes, were removed by Mobay Corp., a Pittsburgh-based chemical manufacturer. The barrels were taken to Charleston, S.C., for reprocessing.

Jim Kopotic of the EPA regional office in Atlanta said Wednesday that EPA spent about $2,000 from the federal Superfund making inspections and analyzing the chemical.

Slaying

RALEIGH (AP) — A Raleigh-area man already accused of one killing was charged Wednesday with the Sept. 9 slaying of a clerk at the Wolfpack Buy Kwik convenience store near North Carolina State University, police said.

James F. Pope III was charged with the murder of Matthew W. McClure. Pope also faces murder charges in the shooting of a Durham pizza parlor employee. Pope, 29, was held in the Wake County jail without bond pending a first appearance hearing Thursday in Wake District Court.

Wake County Assistant District Attorney Susan Edwards said her office will seek the death penalty against Pope, who also was charged last month by Durham police officers for the Aug. 30 killing of Matthew Howerton of Durham.

Waste Fee

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The Davidson County Board of Commissioners has passed a law that requires anyone who wants to put a hazardous waste treatment plant there to pay a $10 million application fee.

Commissioners said privately that the non-refundable fee is useless because the state can overturn the law whenever it wants. But they wanted to make the gesture anyway.

Commissioners wanted to register their opposition to the selection of Davidson County by the N.C. Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission for a $30 million treatment plant. The treatment commission has narrowed the list of possible sites to Davidson and Rowan counties.

Murder-Suicide

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — The bodies of a Lee County man and woman were discovered Wednesday in the woman's home, and authorities say their deaths are an apparent murder-suicide.

The bodies of Bobbi Sue Page, 21, and a neighbor, Michael Wayne Mance, 28, of Route 11, Sanford, were found in Ms. Page's home about eight miles south of Sanford, Chief Deputy Ronnie Currin said.

Plane Crash

GREENSBORO (AP) — An experimental airplane crashed and burned Wednesday morning at the Triad's Regional Airport.

The pilot of the two-passenger plane, Richard Gritter, was transported to a hospital for treatment. No one else was aboard.

David Kragh, a spokesman for Questair, the company building the prototype for a new line of build-it-yourself aircraft, said the plane had fuel system problems as it took off for a test flight.

Manor Destroyed

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — Craig Manor, built more than 200 years ago, was destroyed by fire Tuesday.

Volunteers firefighters were called to the abandoned home about 2 a.m. Tuesday, but Eno Fire Chief John Raleigh said it was already too late when they arrived.

FDA Policy May Scuttle Smokeless Cigarette

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Efforts to market smokeless cigarettes may be scuttled by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which has recently turned over a new leaf when it comes to regulating tobacco-related products, officials say.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., which unveiled a prototype of the cigarette Sept. 14, hopes to forestall FDA scrutiny because tobacco has been exempt from the process since 1906.

"This is a cigarette and the FDA does not regulate cigarettes," said Betsy Annese, an R.J.R. spokeswoman.

But the FDA's recent decision that a tobacco-containing chewing gum called "Tobacs" should be regulated as a food could signal a growing willingness to act in the tobacco arena, said Greg Connolly, director of the Massachusetts Office for Nonsmoking and Health.

"The tobacco decision by the FDA sends a warning shot across the bow of R.J. Reynolds that you can't just put tobacco in a product and get an exemption," said Connolly in a telephone interview last week. "My reading on it is that the leaf is there ... basically to gain an exemption. I don't think the FDA is going to buy that."

The FDA last February removed "Favor" cigarettes from the market, ruling the product, which substituted a nicotine plug for tobacco, should be regulated as a drug.

If smokeless cigarettes are subject to FDA oversight, Reynolds may abandon the project, said Richard A. Daynard, a law professor at Northeastern University in Boston and director of the Tobacco Products Liability Project.

"My sense is they're worried about it," Daynard said of Reynolds officials. "I think they've clearly been doing a lot of informal lobbying to try to keep it out of the FDA area."

To market the smokeless cigarette as a drug would require extensive testing, "and they would have to start telling the truth about it," Daynard said. "They would have to admit that nicotine is addictive. They would have to say a lot of smokers are working in environments where people object to the smoke."

An application would have to mention the link between heart disease and nicotine and carbon monoxide — two elements not eliminated by the smokeless design, Daynard said.

"I would be delighted to see it in our product liability cases, frankly," he said. "But I would think the whole ballgame for them turns on getting a regulatory exemption."

Ms. Annese said Reynolds was still pursuing a smokeless cigarette, but declined further comment, saying, "We generally do not comment on new products until we are ready."

Daynard said the tobacco exemption was ridiculous when taken to its logical extreme.

"If you wanted to sell opium you'd just stick some tobacco in it," he said. "The question is ... is this really tobacco or is it really something else?"

Ed Nida, an FDA spokesman, said the agency had just begun considering smokeless cigarettes, in which tobacco would be heated without burning to produce nicotine and flavorings inhaled by smokers.

"They're at the head-scratching stage right now," he said. "The first consideration is safety for all drugs, prescription and nonprescription. And the burden of proof is on the would-be seller."

The tobacco exemption originated when tobacco use, mostly in the form of snuff, pipes and cigars, appeared to be waning.

"It was intended as a grandfather clause, to let cigar and pipe smokers die out with the products," said Connolly. "It was really abused to bring in new products."

Among those new and exempt products were cigarettes, touted as a safe alternative when chewing tobacco was linked with tuberculosis, Connolly said.

"When finally we figured smoking was not safe at all, manufacturers brought back the other forms of tobacco," he said.

Reynolds officials have been careful to downplay claims that the product would be "safer" than conventional cigarettes, a move Daynard and Connolly said was intended to protect industry claims that the health risks of smoking have not been documented.

But the smokeless cigarette issue may backfire on Reynolds and the entire tobacco industry, said Connolly.

"Once one of the major companies makes a break (from traditional cigarettes), what they have to do to gain public acceptance is get rid of the tobacco leaf," he said. "The debate may now shift to, is there a safe way to deliver nicotine?"

That would hurt tobacco farmers and might ultimately destroy the industry, Connolly said.

"It will create a major division within the industry and they will lose their political base. Once they lose that political base, they're going to get creamed by the health lobby."

Connolly said he sometimes wondered whether Reynolds, a subsidiary of R.J.R. Nabisco, might move completely away from cigarettes.

"I used to say, somewhat facetiously, that they might put a nicotine capsule in Nabisco Shredded Wheat and have people compulsively eating foods," he said. "They could move the whole operation to Atlanta and just forget about tobacco. ... Probably the biggest victim in this whole mess is the tobacco farmer."

Even if the FDA agrees to exempt the product, Congress may not sit still for it, Connolly said.

"If the FDA says, no, we don't have authority here, my sense is Congress will hold hearings when the product is introduced," he said.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Cal., has said he will fight any attempt to market the smokeless cigarette without FDA scrutiny.

Academy Suggests Moving Lighthouse

ATLANTA (AP) — The National Academy of Sciences says moving the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse away from the Atlantic Ocean's encroaching waves appears to be the safest way to protect the 117-year-old structure from erosion and storms.

Relocating the lighthouse farther inland "would not destroy the aesthetic values and historical context" of the lighthouse, and is consistent with federal and state policies of non-interference with natural processes, the academy said in a preliminary report issued Wednesday.

"Relocation appears to provide a good opportunity ... to establish a significant precedent for preserving structures that are threatened by shoreline retreat," the report said.

The academy's recommendation came in a 24-page interim report on a lighthouse protection study commissioned in April by the National Park Service.

The park service last spring was on the verge of getting $5 million in federal funds to build the seawall when a group of engineers convinced officials they should take another look at moving the 208-foot lighthouse inland.

"You have to give a lot of credit to the National Park Service for having the courage to reverse their decision to go ahead with the seawall," said David Fischetti, a Cary engineer and member of the Move the Lighthouse Committee. "Once a large bureaucracy gets going, it's hard to change the momentum."

"A large bureaucracy usually will not change its mind without a lot of pressure on it for fear of criticism from the public," Fischetti said. "I think when they did change their mind and did not get a lot of public heat, they probably felt better about it."

Bob Baker, National Park Service southeast regional director in Atlanta, said he doubts that the academy's recommendation to move the 208-foot-tall lighthouse will change in the final report, expected next spring.

"Obviously, the academy's panel of experts is convinced that moving the structure is a better method for preserving it than refurbishing groins or building breakwaters and revetments to protect it in place," Baker said.

Baker said the park service will give the academy's report "prime consideration" in deciding how the lighthouse should be protected.

Seminary's Board Shifts Emphasis To Conservatism

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — Conservative trustees at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary say the consolidation of power at the school signals a new beginning, but moderates say it is the beginning of the end.

The board's new chairman, Robert Crowley, called the three-day meeting that ended Wednesday the "beginning of a real Reformation. I believe the shift to amore conservative evangelical focus — the ferency of the word of God — will mean great growth for Southern Baptists. Southeastern's greatest days are ahead of it."

"I like blacks and whites, not grays," Crowley said. "The Bible is the literal word of God. That's the truth I want to see taught."

But moderate trustees did not have such a bright vision of the future.

"What we've seen in a real sense is the death of an institution," said the Rev. Mark Caldwell of Hyattsville, Md. "I'm very disappointed. This is the end of a vision that fueled the life of a seminary, and the beginning of a nightmare. I think the atmosphere will become so poisoned that professors will leave."

"To say the meeting was a clean sweep for conservatives would be an understatement," said Jesse Chapman of Asheville, a moderate ousted after one term as chairman. "There is no one left in even a patial position of power that is not of their persuasion. We must now learn to adapt."

W. Randall Lolley, who has been president of Southeastern since 1974, said he would evaluate in the coming months whether he should continue to head the school.

"These events all add up to a vision for the (seminary's) future," Lolley said. "I must see how that accords with my own sense of vision. I do not have the right to assume my vision will prevail, but I do have a right to see if my vision is consistent enough with how the future unfolds for me to stay."

Richard Hester, president of the seminary's chapter of the American Association of University Professors, said Wednesday increasing public scrutiny and solidarity among professors had kept conservatives from running roughshod over moderates despite an 18-12 majority on the seminary's board of trustees.

The board voted to take greater control over the hiring of faculty members at the 37-year-old seminary, but they won't immediately try to replace current professors with those who would teach the fundamentalist concept of the inerrancy of the Bible.

Hester, speaking in a room filled with applauding and sometimes tearful seminary students, said, "We want to sustain the 37-year tradition of powerful, free theological education at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary."

The Southern Baptist Convention's Peace Committee issued a report in June that upheld a 1963 Baptist Faith and Message Statement that declares the Bible to be "truth without any mixture of error." But Hester said faculty members would refuse to sign the statement, even if the refusal meant they might be fired.

Helms' Amendment Blocks Funding For Pro-Gay Ads

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An overwhelming Senate vote to deny federal money for AIDS education materials that critics say promote homosexuality is prompting countercharges that the action will lead to unnecessary deaths. "Education for high-risk groups must be explicit, detailed and unflinching," said Ann McFarren, executive director of the AIDS Action Council, an umbrella group of health and social service providers. She called the Senate's action Wednesday "a literal death knell... to the only effective means of curtailing the spread of AIDS."

Barry Lynn, legislative counsel of the American Civil Liberties Union, said private groups could be denied funding "if they speak bluntly to their constituencies. This could result in government suppression of vital informational material which must be disseminated if the AIDS crisis is to be reduced."

At issue is an amendment to the $129 billion Labor, Health and Human Services and Education appropriations bill passed 80-15 by the Senate on Wednesday evening. The bill contains $946 million for AIDS research, prevention, information and education, including $310 million for education efforts overseen by the Centers for Disease Control.

But before passing the overall bill, the Senate voted 94-2 to accept a version of an amendment sparked by conservative Sen. Jesse Helms' viewing of graphic sexual comics produced by the Gay Men's Health Crisis of New York.

The amendment says federally financed educational materials about AIDS must stress sexual abstinence and cannot promote or encourage homosexuality or intravenous drug use.

Opponents said the amendment clearly would limit CDC's ability to educate drug addicts, homosexuals and sexually active heterosexuals, particularly young people, about the dangers of AIDS.

"If you're going to censor that education, you've got no solution" to the AIDS crisis, said Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who voted against the measure along with Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Weicker said CDC workers would risk losing their jobs and organizations would risk losing their grants if they so much as suggested clean needles or condoms to protect people against the deadly illness.

But Helms countered, "In no way should this amendment inhibit any sensible person in deciding how to get out true and legitimate educational materials."

The North Carolina Republican said he showed President Reagan the comic books, which depict gay men in sexual encounters using condoms, and told him the Gay Men's Health Crisis receives federal education funds. He said Reagan "shook his head and hit the desk with his fist."

The comics were not paid for with taxpayer dollars, but Helms said federal money is being used for other activities he found "so obscene, so revolting, that I'm embarrassed to discuss it."

Helms described educational methods that included assignments to write a personal sexual advertisement for publication in a gay newspaper and list alternatives to high-risk sex, as well as instruction in the use of safe sex photos.

"I may throw up," Helms said. "We've got to call a spade a spade and a perverted human being a perverted human being," he said.

Helms initially proposed that none of the CDC money be used for materials or activities that promote, encourage or condone homosexuality, illegal drug use or any sexual activity outside marriage. He eventually dropped the word "condone" and the reference to marriage.

Jeff Levi, executive director of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, said the final version was "a little confusing" and its impact would depend on how CDC interpreted the language. But he said he doubted the provision would survive in the House-Senate conference where differences in the two bills will be reconciled.

Lori Behrman, a spokeswoman for the Gay Men's Health Crisis, said Helms "is playing with the lives of thousands of Americans."

"This is censorship of life-saving information. It sends a message that the gay community is expendable in this epidemic," she said.

Sanford Angrily Rebuts President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is promising a fight "to the last ballot" for Robert H. Bork, and backers of the Supreme Court nominee insist that they need until next week to make last-ditch arguments to the American people.

Reagan said in a speech Wednesday that the confirmation process was "marred by distortions and innuendos," and Senate Republicans argued — over Democratic objections — that it could take until Oct. 23 to set the record straight.

The opening day for debate was left unsettled, but the outcome is no longer in doubt. Fifty-four senators have announced their opposition to Bork, while just 36 have said they support him. Ten remain undecided.

Reagan's brief speech from the Oval Office was made available to the television networks, but only the Cable News Network carried it live, followed by a response by Democratic Sen. Terry Sanford of North Carolina.

"I hope that in the days and weeks ahead you will let (senators) know that the confirmation process must never again be compromised with high pressure politics," Reagan said. "I am determined to fight right down to the last ballot on the Senate floor." Sanford struck back with anger at Reagan's remarks.

He said the Constitution spells out senators' role of advice and consent on presidential nominees.

"We are tired of having our integrity impugned. We are tired of having our sincerity questioned. We are tired of having our intelligence insulted," Sanford said. "It is time for that corrosive dialogue to stop."

Bork's critics have attacked the nominee for his narrow reading of the Constitution on protection of civil rights and liberties; for changing his position at his confirmation hearings to take a broader view of free speech and equal protection for women; for saying in the past he would overturn landmark Supreme Court rulings, while insisting at the hearings he would respect precedent; and for taking positions that opponents labeled anti-civil rights, anti-labor, anti-consumer and pro-big business.

His supporters have said he is sensitive to the rights of all Americans, but believes that constitutional decisions must be rooted in the intent of the Constitution's framers.

Navy Report Credits Crew With Saving Stark

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The USS Stark was saved from sinking after an Iraqi missile attack last May thanks to crew training and simple good luck, particularly since the ship's design limited its fire-fighting equipment, the Navy said today.

The Stark crew initially faced the threat of "mass detonation of the forward missile magazine," the report disclosed.

At the same time, the sailors were grappling with a fire that was "unique" in U.S. Navy experience — a fire so hot that instead of spreading horizontally, it spread vertically by cooking equipment on the deck above to the flash point of ignition, the report adds.

The report was written by an investigative panel created by Navy Secretary James H. Webb last June. Copies of it were made available late Wednesday in advance of a hearing this morning of the House Armed Services seapower subcommittee.

The Navy also planned to provide the subcommittee with a second report — the findings of a military board of inquiry that investigated the May 17 incident and the Stark's failure to defend itself. Thirty-seven seamen died in the attack.

The Navy declined to release that report in advance, but sources who spoke only if not named said most of its findings already have been publicly detailed. That inquiry, conducted by Rear Adm. Grant A. Sharp, resulted in disciplinary action against three top officers of the Stark.

The ship's skipper, Capt. Glenn R. Brindel, ultimately accepted responsibility for the Stark's failure to defend itself. He was reprimanded but then allowed to retire at the lower rank of commander.

"The inquiry concludes the crew and officers did not respond appropriately to the threat," one source said. "It wasn't a problem of malfunctioning equipment; the weaponry wasn't employed."

The Stark was attacked at night by a lone Iraqi jet fighter that had been presumed to be "friendly." Iraq has admitted its culpability, describing the attack as a case of mistaken identity. The United States has accepted the Iraqi explanation.

The investigative panel, rather than focusing on the events that led up to the attack, looked at what happened after two Exocet missiles slammed through the ship's hull. It also reviewed the safety features on all such guided-missile frigates and the "lessons learned" that should be applied when building new warships.

On that latter score, the panel concluded the Navy should never again design a warship the way it did the so-called Oliver Hazard Perry class of frigates, of which the Stark is one. The Navy has purchased roughly 50 of the ships and does not plan to buy any more.

The ships were designed in the early 1970s and the Navy was so concerned about cost it limited the size of the hull and filled it to its maximum load, the report states. As a result, it is extremely difficult to add safety equipment to cope with new weapons such as the Exocet as they emerge, the report continues.

"The severe displacement limit placed on the FFG-7 Class design resulted in compromises that reduced Stark's ability to respond to a conflagration of the magnitude that occurred."

In the future, "growth margins, by ship class, should be established in contract design and maintained in construction," the report adds.

Among the panel's other findings: —"The most significant new lesson learned from the Stark incident is in the area of fire protection against a missile propellant fire." The fire on the Stark became a "conflagration" because it fed on the unused solid rocket fuel inside the Exocet missiles.

Thanks to the presence of that fuel, temperatures quickly rose to between 3,000 and 3,500 degrees Fahrenheit, causing equipment on the deck above to ignite. The same thing then happened to the next deck up.

Future warships should be designed with a sprinkler system in the crew berthing areas — where the missiles hit the Stark — and fire retardant insulation should be used on the underside of decks supporting "vital spaces."

—After the rocket fuel had burned, the fire was fed primarily by polyvinyl chloride jacketing on electrical cables. The Navy has now developed a "low-smoke" type of cable for installation in new ships, "but it is prohibitively expensive to backfit" such cable on existing ships.

—While it "was no accident" the Stark was saved, luck was with the ship. Among the examples: the close proximity of other Navy ships and a commercial salvage tug that raced to the Stark's aid; a calm sea at the time, which allowed the ship to remain relatively stable despite a 16 percent list; and narrow aversion of an explosion in the forward missile magazine.

The ship lost its primary fire water main on the port side as a result of the missiles' impact, denying water to the sprinkler system in the magazine. The crew "had to cool and eventually flood the magazine using a fire hose."

—The Navy must continue an existing program aimed at reducing the amount of flammable materials stored on its ships. It should also speed the delivery of new fire-fighting gear to deployed ships.

The report notes that some new emergency equipment has already been provided to ships in the Persian Gulf, including thermal-imagers that allow crewmen to locate "hot spots" and metal-cutting gear to allow quick access to blocked compartments.

Panel OKs Escort Fee For Tankers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee's proposal to impose heavy escort fees on oil tankers receiving protection from U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf is tantamount to putting a "For Sale" sign on American military services, critics of the plan say.

"It's a very bad precedent to set that somehow our military services are for sale around the world," Rep. Douglas Bosco, D-Calif., said Wednesday before the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee approved the money-saving measure 32-7.

"Unless we get out of there right away, there are going to be American servicemen killed in this action. And what are we going to say — that we were selling commercial escort services?" he said.

The Reagan administration also opposes the proposal.

"It hasn't been and is not our policy to charge escort fees," said Bob Hall, a White House spokesman.

An administration official speaking only on the condition of anonymity said, "We shouldn't be in the position of renting out the lives of American servicemen for something that isn't in our national interest, and if it is in our national interest, we should be willing to pay for it."

The committee proposal is designed to cover a $94 million savings requirement imposed on the panel by the House Budget Committee. The proposal now goes to the Budget Committee to be compiled with money-saving proposals from the other committees.

Under the fee plan, each one-way trip made by an oil tanker under U.S. protection through the gulf would cost $250,000 or the actual cost of the services, whichever is more.

Oil companies not paying the fee would be subject to penalties and the protection service would be halted. The committee staff estimated the escort fee would generate at least $95 million a year, covering the Budget Committee's goal.

Supporters led by committee Chairman Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., and Rep. Robert W. Davis, R-Mich., the ranking GOP member, argued that the fee is the only way to meet the budget target and not resort to a Coast Guard user fee for domestic vessels, an approach favored by the Reagan administration but traditionally opposed by the committee and boaters.

Zaccaro Cleared In Bribery Trial

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro lashed out at her former boss, the Queens district attorney, with a "four-letter word" — dumb — after he tried and failed to convict her husband of trying to shake down a cable TV company.

John Zaccaro, 54, was acquitted Wednesday on bribery and extortion charges in an indictment Ms. Ferraro reiterated would not have been brought if she hadn't been the 1984 Democratic vice presidential candidate.

After the verdict, Ms. Ferraro said she might run for office again and would work to defeat in 1989 District Attorney John Santucci, who helped launch her career by hiring her as a prosecutor and later backed her for Congress.

"If we can't find a Democrat to do it, and the Republicans come up with someone ... I'll be there to help out," she said.

Ms. Ferraro's real-estate broker husband was accused of scheming in 1981 with then-Queens Borough President Donald Manes to solicit a bribe from Cablevision Systems Corp. for the lucrative contract to wire the borough.

Manes, who also was implicated in unrelated corruption cases, committed suicide in 1986.

Zaccaro, if convicted, could have received up to seven years in prison.

"I'm angry at John Santucci for bringing this obviously empty indictment," Ms. Ferraro said on the courthouse steps. "It should never have happened. There's a four-letter word I can use to describe John Santucci."

"What is it?" someone yelled.

"Dumb," she replied, smiling. "It is a dumb indictment. It was a dumb political action. But I guess, of course, anybody who sits on their brains for 14 hours at a time must suffer some sort of damage."

Asked if she would consider running for office again, Ms. Ferraro said, "Perhaps."

"I really don't see answering the charges," Santucci responded. "She worked here. She and her family have been through a very trying episode, and I will take the statements in the manner in which they were made."

Zaccaro's business dealings had come under intense scrutiny after Ms. Ferraro's nomination as Walter Mondale's running mate.

"John is going back to being John Zaccaro, real estate broker, no longer John Zaccaro, husband of Geraldine Ferraro, who ran for vice president of the United States," Ms. Ferraro said.

Gas Blast Injures 25

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A propane tank was believed to blame for an explosion that ripped through a Chinatown restaurant, injuring 25 people and igniting a three-alarm fire that caused an estimated $250,000 damage, authorities said.

"Boom, boom, boom. It just exploded," said Chung Sun Chan, who was inside the popular Canton Tea House in the city's most densely populated neighborhood during Wednesday's lunchtime blast.

Of the 25 injured, officials said, seven were admitted to San Francisco General hospitals, where two were listed in serious condition with smoke inhalation, cuts and second-degree burns, and five were in satisfactory condition.

Three were firefighters treated for minor injuries, fire officials said.

Fire damage was limited to the restaurant's upper floor, and fire Capt. Richard Crispin speculated that a five-gallon propane bottle blew up at a second-floor waiter's serving table.

"I heard a big explosion and glass flew across the street," said Paul Lee, owner of a grocery store across from the restaurant. "The building was shaking. We were all scared. I didn't go out. We thought it was a bomb."

Bus driver Norman Green said he was driving near the two-story restaurant when the explosion "blew the window right out across the street in front of me."

"If I had been going a few miles per hour faster, I would have been caught," Green said.

Security Council Backs Cease-Fire

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council decided to endorse today a proposal linking a cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war to several other peace moves, sources say. The plan could remove a major obstacle to a truce in the 7-year-old war.

The endorsement is contained in a four-paragraph text worked out by the 15 council members in confidential negotiations over the past two weeks, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The proposal, formulated by the U.N. secretary-general, is significant because it contains elements that have been supported by Iran. The government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini did not embrace an earlier U.N. cease-fire proposal, which Iraq had backed.

The text, which needs only formal approval, marks the first time the council has stated its view on the timing of peace moves in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

Hospitals Sell Services By Advertising

By DONNA BRYSON
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The commercial is set in a hospital nursery, where rows of infants are bathed in a warm blue light. At first glance, they seem to be sleeping peacefully.

But these aren't ordinary newborns. Once the attending nurse is out of earshot, the babies, actually puppets, begin to discuss the care they've received at the hospital. They come to a unanimous conclusion:

"We want to stay! We want to stay!" they lip enthusiastically.

Though the effect of marketing is unclear, hospitals in Missouri and Kansas are turning to such tools as sophisticated television and radio commercials, print advertisements and direct mail targeted to narrow audiences as the health care industry becomes increasingly competitive.

Officials at the facility extolled by the swaddled cheering squad, North Kansas City Hospital, say the commercial has prompted admiring phone calls and letters. The commercial was developed by a Kansas City advertising firm.

"People enjoy watching it, it has a real following," said Edna Rindner, the hospital's marketing head. More important, the commercial may have gotten results.

Ms. Rindner said a maternity ward renovation may have had much to do with attracting patients, but the baby commercial can't be discounted.

"We've had a very dramatic increase in volume (in obstetrics) over the past few years," Ms. Rindner said.

A recent survey for Hospitals magazine, the organ of the American Hospital Association, found that during the first quarter of 1986, the average U.S. hospital spent $25,700 on advertising. By the third quarter of the 1986, the expenditure had increased to $42,390.

Jan Shulman, a spokeswoman for the American Hospital Association, said hospitals are under pressure from the government and insurance companies to keep costs down, so they are hesitant to pass the costs of advertising onto patients. Hospital administrators want advertising to pay for itself by bringing in customers, she said.

Linda Golodner, executive director of the Washington-based National Consumers League, said consumer advocates are ambivalent about the increase in hospital advertising.

"We are concerned about additional costs. When we see more and more of it, we will have to make sure that the information in these ads is correct, and not misleading," she said. "But it's good for consumers to be able to make the choice."

It was once assumed that people relied solely on their physicians for information about hospitals. With the information provided in hospital advertising campaigns, consumers could make health-care decisions on their own.

Government programs and health insurance companies are becoming more selective about what care procedures qualify for funding. Hospitals are competing for the patronage of increasingly choosy consumers in a buyers' market.

Single-care centers are springing up in shopping malls and near freeways. They offer convenient, reasonably priced, but limited services — perhaps just emergency care or minor surgery. Appointments can be made easily, and hours of operation are geared to fit career schedules.

"In the past, institutions had the attitude that 'we provide a service and the people come to us.' That's changing," said Glen Marshall, administrator at the Phelps County Regional Medical Center. Marketing "is becoming a tremendous expenditure. We have committed more resources to marketing in the past year or so."

Breast cancer detection centers and other screening clinics are popular options among hospitals that are expanding and promoting product lines.

Other than a physician or the hospital itself, there are few places for a consumer to turn for qualitative information about hospital care. The Kansas Department of Health and Environment and the Missouri Department of Health license hospitals based on minimum standards in such areas as staffing, equipment, sanitation and safety.

"We don't recommend one hospital over another," said Bob Moody, a spokesman for the Kansas health department.

"The best recommendation would be from your physician," said Gerald Woods, a hospital administration consultant for the Missouri health department. "Hospitals don't practice medicine. Only your doctor can do this."

Let Cleaning Slide, It Can Save A Life

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Fact. Women are in the work market to stay.

Fact. "Real men" don't flush, wax, mop, wipe, defrost, vacuum, shop, babysit, iron or bleach.

Fact. Death by housework is a reality.

Fact. Something has to give.

It's true. American women can no longer go on trying to keep house the way their mothers and grandmothers kept it and hold down a job outside of the home at the same time. It's time to take a frank look at what is important and what you can let slide by. Some of these ideas may be revolutionary, but believe me when I tell you they can save your life.

My theory on housework is, if the item doesn't multiply, smell, catch fire or block the refrigerator door, let it be. No one else cares. Why should you?

Despite what your mother told you, no one ever died from sleeping in an unmade bed. I have known mothers who actually remake the bed after their children do it because there is a wrinkle in the spread or the blanket is on crooked. This is sick.

Cleaning out a catch-all drawer is nothing to do. Once you get beyond the fact that when you die strangers will come in after the funeral and see what a lousy housekeeper you were, you have it made.

Dust was put on earth to measure time. You have to believe that or you will be rearranging it every day of your life. If you notice dust particles, they float around until you leave the room, then they settle in the same spot from which you have just removed them.

Don't let shoes in the middle of the floor make you crazy. Oriental mothers used to go wild and then they learned to live with it, and today it's an important part of their culture. At least you know where the shoes are and aren't looking for them all the time.

Ironing by demand is a trend whose time has come. How many of us have ironed clothes in our closets that have been hanging there for three years and will have to be ironed again before we can wear them? I say leave them in the dryer until there is a need for them.

Women have got to get over the bathroom fetish. On my mother's driver's license under "occupation," she listed BATHROOM HAND-MAIDEN. After each and every person used it, Mother would go in and wipe the beads of water off the shower wall, turn off the faucets, retrieve the towel from the floor and the soap from the drain. Then she would straighten the rug scrooched under the door and put the lid down on the seat of the commode. We did not respect her for this.

Housework is a treadmill from futility to oblivion with stops off at tedium and counterproductivity. If you want to be a woman who still removes take-home chicken from the box and arranges it on a plate, go ahead and be a martyr. But don't be surprised that when you put this on your resume, no one cares.

Model Meeting Held Tuesday

A model meeting was held by Eta Delta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Tuesday at the home of Betty Womack. Guests present were Cindy Jenkins, Susan Beman, Barbara Long and Marie Stell.

A report on the breakfast rush was given. A mini convention will be held Nov. 7 in Fayetteville. Plans were also announced for the cookout set for Saturday at the home of Susan Deans.

The Oct. 27 meeting will be held at the home of Kelly Fleming. The program will include various safety tips and rules for Halloween. It will be given by a member of the Greenville Police Department.

An executive board meeting will be held prior to the business session.

Young Achievers To Be Honored

By ERICH SMITH
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — As an engraver at the U.S. Mint, Michael G. Iacocca has carved the images of generals, presidents and captains of industry, but his favorite subject is young people and the shape of the future.

Iacocca, cousin of Chrysler Corp. chairman Lee Iacocca, is the founder and director of the National Youth Hall of Fame, an organization which honors young achievers in sports, academics and the arts.

His newest campaign honors young people who have gone beyond what is normally expected of them to make a difference in the world at large. The first young person to be so honored is the late Samantha Smith, who made a powerful statement for world peace in a letter to then Soviet leader Yuri Andropov.

Iacocca started in 1954, carving a bust of Rocky Marciano to present to New York City's Police Athletic League boxing champion. Since then, his awards have gone to champions in soap-box derbies, spelling bees, marble shoots and other contests.

"Each year, I seemed to add activities," he said.

He continues to do it, spending his own time and money, Iacocca says, because "Young people should have more recognition. They need guidance toward achieving. They need inspiration, incentive."

That's where the new project comes in. Iacocca said he had been thinking about a way to honor Samantha Smith since she died in a plane crash more than two years ago.

"She was an outstanding young person who contributed a lot to the cause of world peace," Iacocca said.

The young schoolgirl gained international attention in 1982 when she wrote to Andropov, expressing concern about nuclear war between the superpowers.

Andropov wrote back, pledging that his country would not be the first to use nuclear weapons. He also invited Samantha and her parents to the Soviet Union.

She and her father died in a plane crash in August 1985.

Iacocca worked for weeks, painstakingly, to complete an 8-inch medallion in clay showing Samantha Smith. The medal, cast in plaster with a bronze patina, will be displayed at the Bourse, a mall-office building near the Liberty Bell.

Eventually, Iacocca said he would like to donate a copy to the Samantha Smith Foundation in Maine. He would also like to have the medallion displayed in the Soviet Union.

The next youth Iacocca plans to honor is Trevor Ferrell, who began making nightly visits to homeless people in the Philadelphia streets to give them food and clothing after he saw a television report about their plight.

"This is an idea whose time has come," he said. "Young people deserve the same recognition as adults for these achievements. And kids ought to know that there are young people just like them who have gone out and done some great things."

Championship Games Held

Three club championship duplicate bridge games were played last week at the Senior Center.

Mrs. Ray Gunderson and Mrs. Gene McKemie were first place winners Wednesday morning with .69 percent. Others placing were Mrs. Warren Maxon and Mrs. Fred Sorensen, second; Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts and Mrs. Charles Mitchell, third; Mrs. C.F. Galloway and Mrs. C.D. Elks, fourth; Effie Williams and Emma Warren, fifth.

Mrs. Roy Hadden and Sally Kirkwood were first place winners in the afternoon game with .63 percent. Others placing were Mrs. E.J. Poindexter and Mrs. Robert Barnhill, second; Mrs. W.R. Harris and Beulah Eagles, third; Mrs. George Martin and Ben Mac Bryde, fourth; Mrs. Gene McKemie and Mrs. Ray Gunderson, fifth; Kathleen Metz and Mrs. Stuart Page, sixth.

Dave Proctor and Lee Hastings were first place winners Thursday night with .63 percent. Others placing included Mrs. Stuart Page and Mrs. M.H. Bynum, second; Mrs. Charles Mitchell and Sibyl Basart, third; Mrs. C.D. Elks and Ann Latham, fourth; Mrs. Sam Jones and Maggie Gentile, fifth; Mr. and Mrs. George Martin, sixth.

North-South winners in the Saturday afternoon game were Dr. Charles Duffy and Ken Baxter, first .60 percent; Mrs. Harold Forbes and Emma Warren, second; Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts and Mrs. Lacy Harrell, third, and Mrs. Zeb Cummings and George Martin, fourth.

East-West: Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Beulah Eagles, first with .60 percent; Mrs. William McConnell and Lewis Newsome, second; Nancy Boyd and Joe Hatch, third, and Bertha Jones and Sibyl Basart, fourth.

STENCIL BEDROOM — Sprigged fabrics, country furniture and a scheme of beige with greens highlight the stencil bedroom of the 1987 Historic New Bern ASID Designer Showhouse. Designed by Nancy Bolen, as associate ASID member from Greenville, it is one of 17 "ideal rooms" in the c. 1850 restored dwelling at 517 Johnson St. The house will remain open through Oct. 25 as a benefit for the Craven County Council on Aging. Stenciling applied on the ceiling c. 1870-80 was still visible when reconstruction began two years ago and has been retouched in original colors. The house is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Lesson Learned From Worthless Book

DEAR ABBY: I work as a secretary in New York City. I recently purchased — from a vendor on the sidewalk — a "1987 Edition of Webster's Dictionary."

On several occasions I have consulted that dictionary to verify the spelling of a word, and much to my amazement, those words were not to be found!

On closer examination, I noticed in small print on the title page a disclaimer stating: "This book is not published by the original publishers of Webster's Dictionary — or by their successors."

Abby, please print this letter to alert my fellow secretaries, students, and the public in general. — JANE LABRIOLA, N.Y.C.

DEAR JANE: Lucky you. You got a worthless dictionary but learned a valuable lesson: Never buy in haste, and only from reputable dealers.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 37-year-old, single, honorably discharged Vietnam veteran who is well-thought-of in my community. I have excellent credit, a responsible job as an investment manager, and I work with disadvantaged children. I help raise money for charities and have a wonderful circle of friends. So what's the problem?

Recently, pursuant to the upgrading of corporate policy, a new background check was run on employees. No problem. Nothing for me to hide. Right? Wrong. It seems this large international investigation company returned a report on me saying that I had been arrested six years ago for drug possession, fined and imprisoned. There's just one minor problem. It wasn't me. By referencing the case number and calling the records divisions of the court, I was able to discover that the individual they referred to in the background report:

1. Had a different middle name.
2. Obviously, a very different Social Security number.
3. Was a different race than I am.

This little fiasco caused indescribable tension with my employer and unbelievable embarrassment to me.

Abby, I am lucky. My employer at least showed me the report rather than immediately firing me as he might have. The point is not that I was able to get things straightened out and obtain a very halfhearted apology from this firm. The point, more significantly, is, how many innocent people are haunted by these grossly inaccurate, indeed, even libelous reports that they never get the

Donna Whitley Gives Program

Donna Whitley was speaker at the Tuesday meeting of Xi Gamma Xi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held at the home of Carolyn Powell.

She told of the history of Middle Eastern folk dancing and demonstrated various hand and body movements. She was introduced by Libby Kinley.

A Halloween breakfast will be held Oct. 31.

Carol Bishton reviewed the book of Beta Sigma Phi.

Committee reports were given during the business meeting conducted by Fran Rostar, president.

chance to see? Jobs, mortgage loans, memberships to organizations — who knows what all a person will be denied because of one of these "small errors" in data retrieval?

Please let your readers know that anytime they suspect that one of these checks will be run on them, they have the right to request that a copy of the report be sent to their home. It would be a hell of a nice idea if some legislators would introduce a bill making dual reporting mandatory. What do you think? Incidentally, I am suing the reporting company. — MAD AS HELL IN SEATTLE

DEAR MAD: I think I would be even "madder" than you had I been victimized in that manner. Thank you for a valuable letter.

DEAR ABBY: I felt compelled to write after reading the letter in your column about how many people had lost their cats in clothes dryers.

Last week, Adam, our 2 1/2-year-old son, crawled into our clothes dryer and pulled the door shut. I was in the next room and could hear him playing contentedly, then I heard the dryer door slam shut. Soon I heard his muffled cries for help. Abby, that dryer is airtight, and if the radio or dishwasher had been on, Adam might have suffocated before I found him. As it was, he suffered only a big scare.

I hope you feel that this warning is worthy of space in your column. — ELAINE WALLACE, MOUNTAIN-TOP, PA.

DEAR ELAINE: I do. And thanks for shouting it from the mountaintop!

Junior Women Have Social

The Junior Woman's Club of Greenville promoted membership at a social held during their October meeting.

Suzanne Pecheles, president, expressed appreciation to members helping at the S. ly Southall Cotten Memorial reception.

Shelley Basnight and Lydia Hayes attended the District 15 fall meeting. Gladys Burroughs, N.C. Federation of Women's Clubs president, and Daphne Smith, NCFWC junior director, were keynote speakers.

Jamie Bunn reported on searching for a Christmas family and Kim Bunn, education department chairperson, said bookmarks will be made at the November meeting to be given to school students.

Karen Brock said the yard sale and bake sale will be held Oct. 17 at the Woman's Clubhouse.

The club recently donated playground equipment to the Ronald McDonald House.

Stadium

 struction engineer to look at the stadium and make a decision."
 Funds amounting to $100,000 are available for renovation work on the stadium. Several years ago updating the stadium got under way with installation of lights and work on the field.
 "Except for the grandstand, the field is in great shape," Lee said. "Today, it would cost something like nearly a million (dollars) to duplicate this facility."

A question arose about the proximity of Guy Smith Stadium to the location of the projected baseball field at the new school sports facility at Greenville Middle School.
 Chairman Wille told the committee appointees this situation would be one of the factors to be considered in coming up with recommendations. "It has to be kept in mind that if renovation cannot be done at an early date, it will definitely mess up the coming baseball season."

At Wednesday night's meeting, recognition was given to participants and medal winners at the recent North Carolina State Senior Games. Participants each received a certificate in recognition of their achievement.

"This is the third year of the senior games," Lee said. "Our Greenville contingent every year has returned home with more medals than any other group. We like to remember that the idea for the senior games started right here in Greenville, and it has already become one of the biggest things in the state for active senior citizens."

This month marks the end of the first trial year of the operation of the Aquatic Center by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. The city council last year gave its blessing for the project with a stipulation that it must pay for itself in order to remain in operation.

"It has worked out well, far beyond our expectations," Lee said. "As of Oct. 1 this year membership stands at 1,360 not including employees of the city and Greenville Utilities Commission, who use the facility through the city's wellness program."

"All indications," Lee noted, "point to maybe an even more successful year ahead. We have reason to feel good about this success, and people who have been using the facility seem well satisfied."

On Nov. 6, Lee and other representatives of the department will go to Greensboro to receive an award. "The Greenville tennis program has been named by the North Carolina Tennis Association as the top tennis program in the state," Lee said. "We are excited about this. As state winner, we will now compete nationally for the title of best tennis program nationwide."

 time the crew will stay in space is still under discussion.

"It'll be a big step forward to return to a program where we can be in space on a semi-permanent basis," she said.

Dr. Godwin discussed the extensive training necessary for all shuttle astronauts.

"There's hardly anything that we ever do in orbit that we haven't spent hours rehearsing for on the ground," she said.

Using equipment simulators was a major part of her training. Because of gravity, simulating weightlessness is a particular problem.

She said one training aircraft will fly a "series of parabolas" 30 or 40 times, and during each parabola,

Funds

 "you are weightless for about 20 or 25 seconds. So you go up and practice donning and doffing a space suit. You get as much on as you can in 20 or 25 seconds."

When the plane completes its parabola, "it'll pull out at 2 G's — twice your weight — and you have to wait until it gets in another weightless parabola to do any more ... it's the best simulator that we have."

The astronauts also simulate weightlessness in spacesuits under water, trying to achieve "neutral buoyancy."

Currently 13 women are in astronaut training at NASA. "The women so far have all been on the mission specialist side," Dr. Godwin said. "They are science astronauts ... the other category is pilot astronauts. I think we're getting closer to hiring women in that area."

Most pilot astronauts get their experience in the military's fighter pilot or test pilot schools, which until recently did not train women. According to Dr. Godwin, however, there are "women now in military test pilot schools for the first time."

For those interested in a career with the space program, Dr. Godwin said there were opportunities in math, chemistry, physics, engineering, computers, and medicine. She said it may seem only "a narrow range of careers are acceptable, but that's not really true." With the expansion of the space program, she predicted that most careers on earth will also be necessary in space.

And applicants should be patient. Dr. Godwin applied four times for the astronaut program before she was accepted.

Ed Warren said the purpose of the fellowship club is "to promote our area — roads, education, industry, health care. The club was formed in an effort to get more political clout in eastern North Carolina," especially for the counties of Pitt, Martin, Edgecombe, Beaufort and Greene.

Although Warren said the gathering is "non-political" and "no political speeches are allowed," he said those attending are encouraged to "talk together and see what's going on in the political arena."

North Tar River Club president David Speir of Bethel, who presided Wednesday, was re-elected to the office for the coming year.

Cox, Oquendo Lead Cards To Flag

ST. LOUIS (AP) — In winning pitcher Danny Cox's opinion, it was appropriate that light-hitting Jose Oquendo's home run was the big blow that powered the St. Louis Cardinals into the World Series. "We seem to have a different hero every night," Cox said Wednesday night after combining with Oquendo, an unsung utility player, to lead St. Louis to its 15th National League pennant.

"No one expected Jose to hit a home run, so we weren't expecting it either," Cox said. "We seem to find a different way to win each time."

Oquendo's three-run shot in the second inning, only the third homer of his major league career, was all that the Cardinals really needed in tandem with Cox's pitching for a 6-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

But for good measure, shortstop Ozzie Smith stuck in his defense as the middle man on three double plays. And, with the Giants' hopes waning in the late innings, Tommy Herr sealed their doom with a two-run single.

"This is the kind of victory that reads like a storybook," Rick Horton said in a tumultuous St. Louis clubhouse, where champagne flowed.

"All year long, people kept counting us out because of all our injuries. Well, tonight we had injuries, too. We overcame them. It makes it all that much sweeter because of the adversities we've overcome."

Like they had during the regular season when they lost pitching ace John Tudor for several months with a broken leg, and for stretches Herr and slugger Jack Clark, who remains sidelined with torn ligaments in his right ankle, the Cardinals consistently overcame adversity and the opposition.

The last predicament was a 3-2 deficit that forced them to win the last two games of the playoffs to advance to their third World Series in the last six seasons. They meet the American League champion Minnesota Twins in the first game Saturday night.

Cox, no stranger in the past to difficulty, went at San Francisco from the start with both vengeance and purpose.

The 6-foot-4 pitcher challenged Giants hitters throughout. He yielded eight hits, but all were singles — including two by playoff MVP Jeffrey Leonard. And he struck out five while walking none.

"You go with your best stuff," Cox said of the format he used to keep San Francisco from collecting more than one hit in all but the third inning.

"He's a good pitcher, no matter what the score is," Mike Aldrete of the Giants said. "When he gets a lead, it makes him that much tougher."

Part of Cox's bravado stemmed from the Cardinals' four-run eruption in the second, capped by Oquendo's homer on a 3-2 count off Atlee Hamaker.

"I never thought about hitting the home run. I always look where the ball is and try to hit it the way it's pitched," Oquendo said. "Every time I hit a home run, it surprises me, because I'm a line-drive hitter."

Jim Lindeman started St. Louis' second by striking out, but Terry Pendleton fouled off two pitches and singled to center field.

Pendleton raced all the way to third, pulling a muscle in his rib cage as he went, when Tony Pena singled to right. Pendleton, whose daring throw to third base on a bunt foiled a San Francisco bid to win Game 6, later removed himself from the game. His status is now day to day.

But he scored the Cardinals' first run on Willie McGee's single. Then Oquendo, after catcher Bob Brenly's passed ball allowed both Pena and McGee to advance a base, cleared the left-field wall.

Oquendo said the drive served as a gift for his daughter Adiane's third birthday.

"I feel good. My wife told me to do something good for my daughter," Oquendo said. "I tried to do my best. When I hit it, I thought it was off the wall."

Balloons were released into the air held by red-clad St. Louis fans to mark the home run by Oquendo, who may never again be heralded as the Cardinals' "Secret Weapon."

"Jose has played great all year," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said of the 24-year-old utilityman, who played eight positions during the regular season. "No matter where we stuck him, whether it was for Herr at second base or for McGee in center, he has always done the job."

After missing scoring opportunities in both the third and fourth, the Cardinals expanded their margin with a two-run sixth.

Scott Garrelts, the fourth of San Francisco's seven pitchers, helped them with three walks. Herr's single capped an inning that started with McGee doubling and being thrown

Steps Taken To Be Sure Graduation Rate Climbs

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

While the graduation rate for East Carolina football players entering in the fall of 1981 was less than impressive, Pam Penland, assistant athletic director for academic counseling, said steps have been taken to avoid a recurrence.

According to the University of North Carolina system study released last week, ECU graduated only one of 20 scholarship football players who entered school in 1981 by August 8, 1986.

"In preparing the board of governors' report, 1981 was a very unusual year," Penland said. "When you have a transition from one coaching staff to another (Ed Emory was then in his second year after replacing Pat Dye), there are going to be some recruiting transitions at that time."

"When we went back to prepare statistics from 1981, we had no one on staff who had been here in 1981. We used only scholarship athletes. We were asked to give a graduation rate on athletes who entered in 1981 as recruited athletes. We could not determine who were the recruited athletes other than those who were on scholarship (starting in 1981).

"We knew they were recruited because they were on grant. There were other students who entered in 1981 and stayed with the football team and were active participants who were not scholarship athletes who graduated."

But Penland said she is not making excuses for any of the statistics in the report. After arriving in 1984, Penland headed up a reorganization and expansion of the academic counseling program.

"Since 1984, the athletic program has instituted a totally different aca-demical counseling program, one that is staffed with two individuals full time, with academic counselors and we also have a greater number of tutors.

"The main thing is taking a careful monitoring approach with course selection, making sure that every student is making progress towards a degree, insuring that any assistance is there."

With that system firmly in place, Penland is confident of an improvement in graduation statistics, not just for football but for all sports.

"I think the graduation rate for student athletes should be at or exceed the student population graduation rate in the future," she said. "It certainly did in 1981. I think it will continue to do so."

"I think I have some foresight and I can certainly tell you who the students who came in in 1982 and I have some ideas on who has graduated and who will graduate. I feel very confident you will not see that kind of thing again."

The data for the study did not include walk-ons who may have earned a scholarship during their time at the school. Of the original 20 recruits who entered ECU in 1981, six transferred out.

It did also not include the high number of players off of the 8-3 1983 team who left to pursue professional football careers.

"There were certainly others, and others who graduated," Penland said. "That's why you only see 20 athletes (total) reflected in 1981. In the interest of being absolutely correct, we only reported scholarship athletes because we felt that was a very legitimate number."

It should be noted that the percentage for the athletic department as a whole was much better. Sixty-one freshman student-athletes entered in 1981. Thirty-one percent, or 19 student-athletes, graduated by August 1986. Twenty-nine left school in good academic standing giving the freshman class an adjusted five year graduation rate of 59 percent, compared to 39.9 percent for the entire student body of the same year.

ECU had 35 student-athletes named as Colonial Scholar Athletes by the Colonial Athletic Association for academic achievement during the 1986 academic year. The total was second only to James Madison.

Vikes, Rampants Continue Quest For Playoff Spots

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

D.H. Conley's Vikings and J.H. Rose's Rampants will be out to pick up another conference victory come Friday night as high school football enters week number eighth.

The Rampants, 6-0, will be hosting Kinston at Daniels Field, as the Minges-Farley Athletic Complex is dedicated. Conley, 4-2, will be on the road against West Craven — seeking to take over second place in the league standings and take a big step toward a berth in the state 3-A playoffs.

Rose goes into its game with a 3-0 record in the Big East following a lopsided 42-0 win over Wilson Beddingfield. Conley, 2-1 in the Coastal 3-A, comes off a 33-8 victory over North Lenoir in which the Vikings overcame a host of mistakes.

Rose Coach Chip Williams said that he was quite impressed with the show David Daniels put on against Beddingfield. Not only did Daniels block two punts by the Bruins — one resulting in a touchdown and the other in a safety — but he also did an outstanding job of blocking offensively. "He was very, very effective with his blocking," Williams said.

The coach also singled out the receiving of Malcolm Wilson, who has come on as a reserve to earn a starting role. Williams was also satisfied with the passing of Tom Moye, noting that the biggest problem with the passing game was the inability of the receivers to hold onto the ball.

"The story of the game was the physical aspect," Williams said. "We were just physically better than they were. However, I would rate our execution as only average."

Williams said he felt that, for the most part, the Rampants went through the motions in the game and didn't really give it an all-out effort.

"We did some things good, but we were sloppy, too," the coach said. "I was pleased with the shutout, and I think we got better in that a lot of people got to play and show what they could do. For instance, I think we showed that we have depth at quarterback in both Don Thompson and Jamie Brewington."

The Rampants will be missing several players for this week's game against Kinston. Wide receiver Tony Williams (bruised shoulder) and Jeff Mahoney (back injury) are both expected to miss Friday's action. Steve Tripp, the backup center, is also expected to miss because of the flu.

"Kinston kinda worries me," Williams said. The Vikings bring only a 1-5 mark into the game, but have played just about everyone tight. "They lost only 14-0 to Jacksonville and it was 7-0 until late in the game. They came close to beating Hunt (19-16), beat Fike (21-17) and were in the game until late against North-eastern (21-7)."

"They are very hungry and want to win. It should be a tough game. They are very quick. They are young, mostly juniors, and I don't think they'll give up. They probably realize too, that they can't make the playoffs, so beating us would make their year," Williams said.

Williams is hopeful that activities surrounding the game won't take the players' minds off it. The stadium dedication will be held prior to kickoff, and the day is a teacher work day, which means the players will be on their own throughout.

"You never know what's going to happen in that situation," Williams said. "If they are in school, you know part of their mind is on the game at least. But if they're out running around or sleeping late, you don't know what they're doing or thinking about," Williams said. "Too, high school kids have a tendency to look down the road and we just can't do this against a team like Kinston. They are improving each week and making fewer and fewer mistakes. This is a key game for them."

"I'm tickled to death to be (6-0) and I had no idea we'd be unbeaten at this point of the year. But winning can get monotonous. That may sound funny, but it's true. When you win, you keep doing the same things. Hopefully you get better. The pressure builds too and overconfidence too. That's why there are so few unbeaten at the end of the year."

Conley's win over North Lenoir came despite the fact that the Vikings played somewhat sloppily at times. The Vikings fumbled seven times, losing six of them.

Still, the Vikings had the presence to come back and take a big, lopsided win. "I feel good about the win," Coach Steve Craft said. "Anytime you win, you have to feel good."

"It was not all that easy to come by, though. We didn't play real good in the first half, but we came back in the second and played real good in spots and did a good job."

Why the fumbles? Craft said he didn't know. "We have worked a lot on fundamentals this week to try and correct that. Some of it can be attributed to North Lenoir and some to our lack of concentration. Against the better football teams, you lay it on the ground and you won't be successful. We can't afford to lay it on the ground; we're not that good."

Craft said that it took some great plays by the specialty teams to help pull out the game. "But you can't count on that week after week. You have to play well all the time."

Craft singled out Donte Williams for his play both on defense and on the specialty team. "He was our leading tackler and he returned a punt for a touchdown," Craft said. "I thought he and Aaron Freeman both played well at linebacker and Jason Hamby and Martin Patrick did well at defensive tackles. Anytime you hold a team to 14 yards in the second half, your defense has done a terrific job."

"Our offensive line opened up some gaping holes up front, but we didn't take full advantage of that," the coach added. He said Chris Lindsey, Kevin Moye, Robbie Little, Todd Holloway and Terry Williams all played well.

Against West Craven, the Vikings have a little tougher opponent to face this week. "They are a well-coached, well-seasoned club. They have been in the thick of it (in the conference) for quite a while. They are used to being successful and we want to get used to being successful. It's a mighty big game for us."

The Eagles feature an attack build around tailback Derrick Booker, but Craft says that stopping him is not the big key. "They've had other kids come along and play well for them too. The Becton kid is running well

Oquendo Scores A Direct Hit

ST. LOUIS (AP) — With the National League pennant on the line, St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog decided to deploy the Cardinals' Secret Weapon, that switch-hitting man of many positions, Jose Oquendo.

And he scored a direct hit on the San Francisco Giants.

Oquendo, a shortstop by trade, came off the bench this season to play every position but catcher and to produce some clutch, run-scoring hits. Consequently, he was dubbed by the local media as The Secret Weapon, and the name caught on in St. Louis.

But after he hit a three-run homer in the second inning Wednesday night, and then walked and scored in the sixth, the secret was there for all baseball fans to see as the Cardinals won the seventh and deciding game 6-0 to advance to the World Series against the Minnesota Twins.

"I guess the secret is out," said second baseman Tommy Herr, drenched from showers of champagne in the St. Louis clubhouse. "We've got a power hitter in the eighth slot."

Actually, Oquendo, 5-foot-10 and 160 pounds, is hardly a power hitter. He had just one home run during the regular season. Ironically, it too was hit against the Giants.

The Cardinals had come to expect the best from him. But not home runs.

"That was almost unbelievable," Herzog said. "It was unbelievable."

Even Oquendo doubted that the 3-2 pitch he hit off Giants starter Atlee Hammaker would leave the park. But it did, giving the Cardinals a 4-0 lead.

"I thought it would hit the wall, hit the warning track, or something," he said. "I put my head down and ran hard until I heard the crowd, the booms (from fireworks). That's when I know it's gone."

It didn't take Herr that long. "When he turned on that pitch I knew it was gone," he said. "He really smoked it."

Oquendo, 24, was acquired in a trade with the New York Mets in April 1985. He has been particularly useful this season filling in for the many Cardinals who have been sidelined with injuries. He even pitched an inning of a game in which the Cardinals were blown out. He hit .286 and drove in 24 runs.

"He's typical of the unsung heroes on this team who have stepped all season and done the job when it had to get done," St. Louis relief ace Todd Worrell said.

Third baseman Terry Pendleton, who pulled a muscle in his rib cage and took himself out of the game, agreed.

"This team has pulled together all season long, and tonight was a continuation of that," said Pendleton, who indicated that the status of his injury would have to be evaluated daily. "When the chips are down, somebody on this team comes through. The hitting was there, or the pitching was there. Whatever it took, we did it."

"It's hard to believe that with the obstacles that got in this team's way that we are standing here celebrating," Worrell added. But celebrating they were, spraying, pouring and drinking champagne and beer. And savoring the moment they would have before focusing on the American League champion Twins and Game 1 of the World Series on Saturday.

Herzog said he anticipated another long, tough fight.

"They're a hot ballclub with good hitters and a good, young infield," he said. "They'll be quite a challenge."

But the never-say-die Cardinals, who won the last two games to overtake the Giants, have proven time and again that they are good at meeting challenges.

"This series was a good example of what this team is about," said Herr. "Don't ever count us out."

Cary Man Said To Be Assailant

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State University police have obtained a warrant charging a Cary man with punching a security guard in the face during a post-game melee at the East Carolina-N.C. State football game Sept. 5.

The misdemeanor warrant charges Keith Douglas Philbeck, 21, with assault inflicting serious injury. Philbeck is not a student at either university.

Philbeck is charged with punching Robert W. Malason, a security officer who was on the field at Carter-Finley Stadium after it was swarmed by about 2,000 people, mostly ECU fans celebrating their team's 32-14 victory. Following the incident, N.C. State officials said their team would not play ECU next year.

Authorities said Malason had been trying to keep celebrants from tearing down a goal post when he was punched in the face by someone standing behind him.

The warrant said Malason suffered cuts on his face that required 10 stitches, along with other injuries.

NCSU Police Capt. Laura K. Reynolds said one reason the investigation took longer than expected was that the assailant was first thought to be a student at ECU, so much of the focus was in Greenville.

Ms. Reynolds said videotapes of the incident provided by two Raleigh-area television stations helped police identify the suspect.

She said Philbeck was identified by people who had gone to high school with him in Cary and who later had gone to ECU. She said Philbeck attended the game with local friends who were ECU students.

Ms. Reynolds said she had talked with Philbeck's attorney Wednesday and added that she expected to serve the warrant Thursday. Philbeck could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Tom Morris

In the wake of the suspension of Blue Edwards from the East Carolina basketball team, the one question that lingers in my mind is whether there has been a change in policy regarding student-athletes charged with crimes.

Edwards, who was charged along with three former ECU players with thefts of over $6,000 worth of property from an ECU residence hall last December, has not yet been tried by the state.

Chancellor Eakin's statement concerning Edwards' suspension read simply, "In consultation with Athletic Director Ken Karr and Basketball coach Mike Steele, I have decided that Theodore (Blue) Edwards is not eligible for varsity play during the 1987-88 academic year as a result of infractions of the Student Code."

Citing the Privacy Act, ECU officials refused to elaborate on the case any further.

While Edwards' suspension and the charges leveled against him may or may not be related, the announcement of his declared ineligibility makes it appear they are.

If that is true, that action represents a sudden shift in university policy on student-athletes charged with crimes. Why was Edwards declared guilty by the university before he was tried by the state? Especially in light of other incidents involving student-athletes charged with crimes who were not suspended from play.

For example, Walter Bryant, a member of the ECU football team, was charged with breaking and entering and theft in late August, yet he has been allowed to continue playing pending the outcome of the trial. Last year, former ECU football players Curtis Struyk and Rich Autry were charged with assault yet allowed to continue playing until their cases went to trial.

Granted, Edwards' alleged incident occurred on campus while the other two were charged with off-campus crimes therefore putting them out of the jurisdiction of the University. But why should Edwards be judged prematurely?

If the school's action against Edwards is the genesis of a new hard-line stance against student-athletes' wrongdoings, then that stand is worth supporting.

In theory, I agree with Chancellor Eakin's decision to take a hard stand. The university has suffered a great deal of embarrassment over the years due to incidents involving athletes who are supposed to represent the school in a positive light.

Since Eakin has taken over, one football player, one basketball player and three former players have been arrested on various charges. In addition, the school was publicly embarrassed by the behavior of its fans in the incidents that followed a 32-14 win over N.C. State on Sept. 5.

But the intent of any policy must be made clear. It should uniformly apply to all situations in question. Why is Edwards' case distinct from those involving the individuals mentioned previously? Why was he treated differently?

There should be some consistency of decision here. Citing a violation of the student code is too ambiguous an explanation. What was the violation? Why is it different from similar incidents in the past? If it is different, why wasn't that made more clear?

The decision to remove Edwards' eligibility is not in itself wrong. But it is a departure from previous policy. Previously, ECU athletes charged with crimes were innocent until proven guilty. Has that policy changed? If the policy has been altered, why was that not announced?

Perhaps ECU needs to take this opportunity to formulate, or formalize a consistent policy on the issue of student-athletes charged with crimes. It needs to back this policy up with action and an appropriate explanation when these incidents arise.

Minnesota Twins Lacked Identity

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Kelly manages the Minnesota Twins and still manages to handle fan mail for his players.

"I'd say about 70 percent of the mail is either for Kirby Puckett or Bert Blyleven," Kelly said.

The rest? Well, it doesn't amount to much.

The Twins were a team without identity until a few days ago when they won their first American League pennant in 22 years, and almost to a man, they are starved for attention.

"I always thought Gary Gaetti and Greg Gagne were the same person," someone said to Blyleven, one of the Twins pitchers.

"So did I," Blyleven said, laughing.

Gaetti, as any baseball fan should know after his MVP performance in the American League playoffs, is the Twins third baseman. Gagne plays shortstop.

Neither are Randy Bush and Tom Brunansky the same person, although one Twins writer considered the question recently before offering: "You know, I never have seen both of them on the field at the same time."

we won was the first one in San Francisco," Herr said of the Cardinals' 6-5 comeback victory Friday. "Once we did that, we knew we'd get to come back to our home park. Without it, it was a five-game series."

Although St. Louis equaled an NL playoff record by totaling 56 hits, it was, in the final analysis, pitching that carried the Cardinals.

"You have to give them credit. After we won two in a row at home, we came in here and got no runs in two games," Craig said. "I never expected that. I wish them all the luck in the world."

Leonard, the object of St. Louis fans' taunts throughout, acknowledged that the MVP award he won on the basis on his four playoff home runs and .417 batting mark carried with it bittersweet feelings.

"It's going to be a long, hard winter. Hopefully, time will heal what happened," Leonard said. "There's really not much more to say."

now, and their passing game has improved. That makes it tougher to defend against them."

Still, Craft said, the Vikings must work on what they can control, not who they play. "We have to keep from laying the ball on the ground and we have to execute offensively and defensively. We don't want to beat ourselves."

The Vikings still have a shot at a playoff berth come the end of the season, and Craft recognizes it. "Every game in the conference is important. You have to win in the conference to stay in the hunt, and the closer you get to the end, the more important each one gets."

Season Unkind To Hokies Thus Far

The year has not been kind to Virginia Tech's football team, which came into the 1987 season with high hopes of another bowl game appearance.

The Hokies, 10-2, a year ago, ended their season with a 25-24 upset of N.C. State in the Peach Bowl, and returned a number of the players off that team, including All-America kicker Chris Kinzer, who kicked 22 of 27 field goal attempts and was a perfect 27-for-27 on extra points.

Tech, 1-4, will play host to East Carolina's Pirates Saturday at 1 p.m. in Lane Stadium in Blacksburg. It is the first meeting of the two since the Hokies gained a 37-2 decision in 1956 in a game played at Bluefield, W. Va.

Lady Luck began her frown on the Hokies early on this year. Of the 44 players listed on Virginia Tech's two-deep chart on August 15, 17 have been lost to injuries, including both of the starting linebackers, lost in preseason drills.

The injuries have also taken their toll on Kinzer's abilities. He is a perfect 10-for-10 on PAT kicks, but is only three of nine in field goal attempt, although four of the six misses were from over 50 yards. Both the snapper and the holder on kicks are among those sidelined with injuries.

With a new coach in Frank Beamer, the Hokies opened with a strong showing against nationally ranked Clemson, falling late, 22-10. That was followed by a 14-13 defeat at the hands of Virginia, a game in which Kinzer missed three field goals and a two-point bid for the victory in the closing minutes of the game failed.

The Hokies then led nationally ranked Syracuse, 21-7, at halftime, only to allow the Orangemen to storm back and pull out a 35-21 victory.

The following week, Virginia Tech earned its only victory of the year, a 31-11 decision over winless Navy. But that was followed a week ago by a 40-10 setback at the hands of South Carolina.

Tech's rushing game has fallen on hard times this year also. Last year, the Hokies rushed for 190.5 yards a game. This year, they've managed only 88.0 per game and have less total yards than East Carolina rolled up against Cincinnati last week alone.

Through the air, Tech has averaged 120.0 yards a game after a 138.3 average last season.

Defensively, Tech has allowed 239.0 yards per game rushing this year, and 160.0 through the air.

The leading rusher for Tech has been freshman tailback Jon Jeffries (5-10, 201). He's rushed 39 times for 195 yards. Earnie Jones (5-9, 214, Sr.) returns at fullback and has carried 45 times for 150 yards.

Quarterback Erik Chapman (6-0, 199, Sr.), who played every offensive down last year in the final nine games, has thrown for only 601 yards this year, hitting on 56 of 116 (48.3 percent). He's thrown for four touchdowns, but has eight picked off.

In contrast, Chapman threw for 1,627 yards last year with only six interceptions on the whole season. He's been sacked 20 times this year in five games.

Strange, Azinger Head Disney Field

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — The PGA's top two money winners of the season, Curtis Strange and Paul Azinger, head a field of 132 professionals entered in the $600,000 Walt Disney Classic.

Others in the top-10 money list playing in the tournament starting today are Lannie Wadkins, Tom Kite, David Frost and Payne Stewart.

"You'll have to shoot pretty good scores to win here," PGA spokesman David Lancer said Wednesday.

The tournament is being played on three courses at the Disney amusement complex in an event that has been on the PGA Tour since 1971.

Also in the field is defending champion Ray Floyd who recorded a 13-under 275 last year in windy conditions to take the $108,000 winner's check.

Doug Tewell will be trying to win his second tournament in as many weeks in the Sunshine State. He won last week's $300,000 Pensacola Open, his fourth victory on the tour and first this year.

Tewell picked up the $54,000 winner's check in Pensacola after a month-long layoff. He left the tour to get his game turned around after several disappointments earlier this year and returned swinging new graphite-shaft woods that added distance to his drives.

Wadkins won two years ago with a 21-under-par 267, and Larry Nelson set the tournament record in 1984 with a 22-under 266.

The tournament is played on the Magnolia, Palm and Lake Buena Vista courses. All are par-72 layouts ranging from 6,706 yards at Lake Buena Vista to 7,190 at Magnolia.

The pros will team up with amateurs the first three days of the event with the professionals moving to Magnolia for the final round Sunday.

Although the Orlando area received rain earlier in the week, Lancer said the courses are in excellent shape. Temperatures in the upper 70s and a light breeze were expected to greet first-round players.

Tyson Quiet Before The Fight

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — "There's not much I can say," Mike Tyson said, almost wearily, at the final news conference for his defense of the undisputed heavyweight championship against Tyrell Biggs.

It was a good thing, because neither Tyson nor Biggs got much of a chance to say anything Wednesday as the news conference turned into a battle of verbal jabs between Lou Duva, a co-manager of Biggs, and Jimmy Jacobs, a co-manager of Tyson.

That delighted Don King, the promoter of Friday night's scheduled 15-round bout at the Convention Center, which will be televised by HBO.

"There is a lot of copy to go out to friends and foe alike," King crowed to reporters.

Duva intimated that Tyson was lacking in boxing ability and wondered why. "We're going to teach you (Tyson) something about boxing that you never learned or didn't take time to learn," Duva said.

"I thought Tyrell Biggs was a good fighter and that Lou Duva had a touch of class," snapped Kevin Rooney, who trains Tyson. "I think differently now. I hope Tyrell Biggs comes to fight."

Duva also accused Jacobs and Bill Cayton, who manages Tyson, of being overconfident.

"They're ahead of themselves," Duva said in reference to a scheduled fight on Jan. 23 between Tyson and former champion Larry Holmes.

"Before Larry Holmes, I heard they were trying to make a fight with Joe Louis, but they found out he was dead," Biggs cracked.

Wagner To Leave Astro Position

HOUSTON (AP) — Dick Wagner says he declined an offer from Houston Astros owner John McMullen to extend his contract as general manager for another year, and will leave the ballclub Oct. 23.

"I have a hard time reading what he wants of me or what he expects of this job," Wagner said. "But this is a very friendly parting. This is not what might be a typical shouting at one another."

Manager Hal Lanier complained publicly several times during the season that Wagner had failed to make key trades to bolster the Astros bullpen, shortstop and catching positions.

But Wagner said there was more to his departure than his disagreements with Lanier.

"There are some problems where Hal is going to have to mend his ways, but that's one thing," Wagner said. "I felt John was not happy with the club and wasn't happy with certain things that had happened."

Lanier could not be reached for comment.

McMullen told the Houston Chronicle in a copyright story that the rift between Wagner and Lanier could not be solved.

Deacs, Tigers Aim For Wins

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Clemson and Wake Forest, locked in a tie for first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference, host league football battles this weekend with their eyes on keeping the race even for one more week.

The seventh-ranked Tigers and the unranked Demon Deacons are both 5-0 overall and have won both their league meetings. This Saturday, Clemson takes on Duke and Wake Forest goes against Maryland.

Wake Forest coach Bill Dooley, who already has three ACC football titles from his days at North Carolina, has put out the word that he doesn't want the fourth one to slip away to a bad case of overconfidence.

"I'm going to try to make sure nothing like this happens," offensive lineman Jay Deaver says. "Coach Dooley tells us it's only one step from the penthouse to the outhouse. We've really got to get after it Saturday."

Dooley says Maryland is similar to North Carolina in size and strength. The Demon Deacons knocked off North Carolina 22-14 last weekend.

"The biggest concern is that they are an explosive football team, an outstanding big-play team," Dooley said. "Dan Henning is an excellent quarterback and they have three outstanding receivers. I know because I tried to recruit them when I was at Virginia Tech."

Dooley's own offense is hurting. Tailbacks Darryl McGill, Mark Young and Tony Rogers are all injured and Dooley isn't certain who will start against the Terrapins.

Danny Ford, the Clemson coach who is hard to please, expects Duke to be a test.

"What they do and do very well is basically the same thing that Virginia did last Saturday, probably even more throwing," Ford said. "There'll be something unexpected — no huddle for a half, no huddle for a quarter or a game, quarterback throwback, double reverse, spread offense ..."

One thing Duke will present for Saturday's matchup is a new starting quarterback. Coach Steve Spurrier announced on Monday that Anthony Dilweg will replace Steve Slayden.

"I still say Steve Slayden is the finest passer I've ever coached," Spurrier says. "But he has not performed well in the last two weeks, and for that I take some of the responsibility."

Duke is 3-2 and lost its lone conference game to Virginia.

North Carolina State and North

Carolina clash this weekend in the only other league action. Outside the conference, Virginia goes to South Carolina and fifth-ranked Auburn is at Georgia Tech.

The Wolfpack, 2-3 and 2-1 and which had last Saturday off, is looking to regain the momentum started with league victories over Maryland and Georgia Tech. But N.C. State Coach Dick Sheridan sees in the Tar Heels much the same problems that his team went through in losing its first three games.

"Frustration can build incentive," Sheridan said. "I'm sure Carolina must be feeling some of the same things that we felt early in the season. I think it made us play harder. It could work the same way for Carolina. It's something else that we have to prepare for in getting ready for the game."

After returning to Chapel Hill from a three-game road trip, the Tar Heels lost a heartbreaking decision to Auburn and struggled in a loss to Wake Forest which left them at 3-3 and 1-1 in the league. While there is sentiment that North Carolina football coach Dick Crum is in need of a victory this weekend, especially in terms of job security, he doesn't see it that way.

"I've got a philosophy that I'm gonna do the best job that I can to get the kids ready to play," Crum says. "And as long as I can look in the mirror and say 'You've done everything you can,' then I'm not going to worry about other people."

Virginia's three-game winning streak came to a halt at Clemson last week.

Georgia Tech's two victories have come against Division I-AA teams. Its three losses have been to Division I-A teams, all league defeats by North Carolina, N.C. State and Clemson. Auburn doesn't make beating that decline any easier.

"We've got to go out, play a good game and hope we get lucky," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Ross said.

Leonard Shrugs Off Abuse; Wins Most Valuable Honor

ST. LOUIS (AP) — They threw all manner of debris at him. They chanted his name derisively. They booed his every move. Jeffrey Leonard just shrugged off all of the abuse and won Most Valuable Player honors in the National League playoffs.

Still, the fans had the last laugh because while Leonard was the MVP winner, his San Francisco Giants were losers of the NL pennant, shut out in the final two games of the playoffs by the St. Louis Cardinals.

"This is a bittersweet award," Leonard said Wednesday night after the Giants were ousted 6-0. "It will remind me of something awful. It's going to be a long, hard winter. Hopefully, time will heal what happened here."

What happened was that the Giants simply stopped scoring. They finished with a string of 22 straight scoreless innings, setting a playoff record for offensive futility.

"They were tough," Leonard said. "We were overanxious and started swinging at their pitches. We got away from our game plan."

While the St. Louis pitchers contained his teammates, they never quite solved Leonard, who went on a playoff tear. His two singles in Wednesday night's loss gave him NL playoff record-tying totals of 10 hits and 22 total bases. He hit 417 and became the first player to hit home runs in four consecutive playoff games.

It was his deliberate, almost leisurely home run trot in those first four games and some early remarks about the Cardinals that got Leonard in trouble with St. Louis fans.

"It seems so long ago that truthfully, I don't remember what comments I made," Leonard said. "All I said after the first game (which St. Louis won 5-3) was that they wouldn't beat us four games if they played like that."

When the series returned to St. Louis on Tuesday with the Giants needing one win to nail down the pennant, Leonard became the target of the fans, who showered him with coins, beer, frozen hot dogs and even a couple of cowbells. They could not shake him, though.

"My performance dictated how difficult it was," he said. "It wasn't difficult at all. These weren't the toughest fans I've played in front of."

Leonard still isn't convinced the Cardinals should be in the World Series instead of his Giants. "We had respect for them, but even now, I feel we have the better team. Truthfully, I don't know how they did it."

Leonard became the second straight MVP winner from a losing playoff team. Last year pitcher Mike Scott of the Houston Astros won it for twice pitching complete game victories against the New York Mets.

For Leonard, the award, which consists of a Chevrolet vehicle donated in his name to his favorite charity, also means a $50,000 bonus. The payoff was for a clause written into his contract three years ago at a time when the Giants were hardly playoff contenders.

One creative Cardinal fan, hoping to shake Leonard, constructed an oversized facsimile check with the outfielder's name on it and the word "Void" printed across the bottom.

The artwork, while impressive, proved to be both premature as well as incorrect.

Fans Jam Streets To Celebrate Win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Police officers on horseback escorted St. Louis Cardinals players from Busch Stadium through masses of red-clad fans as St. Louisans celebrated their third National League pennant in six seasons.

Cheering from the thousands of people who remained packed around Busch Stadium long after the game Wednesday night was over often nearly drowned out the honking of cars which continued to circle the ballpark slowly on the jammed streets.

Other fans, some carrying open containers of beer and champagne, walked across the hoods of cars to cross the streets.

Despite the revelry following the Cardinals' 6-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants in the seventh game of the series, there were no serious incidents reported by police. More than four times the normal number of officers were assigned to the stadium area for traffic and crowd control.

Among those cheering for the Cardinals was Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., whose presidential campaign brought him to St. Louis on Wednesday.

Wearing a Cardinals hat, Kemp said he had considered California's electoral-vote power, but had decided to go with the Cardinals.

"Some of my friends are for the Cardinals, some are for the Giants," Kemp said. "But tonight I'm in St. Louis."

Fans began to build up steam after the Cardinals scored four runs in the second inning. They seemed to sense that there was little the Giants could do to halt the St. Louis momentum through the rest of the game.

"The Giants weren't humming it, they were really bumming it today," Jennifer Conway said.

Even before the game ended, ticketless fans began to fill the streets around Busch Stadium, standing quietly for the most part as they waited for the fireworks display that would signal the final out.

"We just came for the fun of it, it's history," said Butch Humphreys, 17. "This is something that doesn't happen too often in your lifetime."

The streets erupted into horn-honking, screaming masses of fans immediately after the game as strangers exchanged "high fives" and gulps of champagne and beer as they milled around the stadium.

If there are strange symptoms coming from the rear of your car, treat them as warning signals.

For example, if there is a heavy blue smoke billowing out of the tail pipe, that could mean you have oil on the cylinders caused by worn piston rings. On the other hand, black smoke indicates that a carburetor adjustment is probably needed. If there are fumes accompanied by a deep roaring sound coming from the rear, you can pretty well count on a problem in the exhaust system. Have it checked as soon as possible because it can allow the seepage of carbon monoxide into the passenger compartment.

Three Teams Set To Report Back

NEW YORK (AP) — Three entire teams appeared today ready to return to work en masse, effectively shattering the NFL players strike following a day of mass defections.

"Our strike seems to be winding down," union head Gene Upshaw conceded this morning in a recorded message to players.

But whether the players can be back in time to play real games this weekend remains in doubt.

While union and management haggled Wednesday over the final 1's to be dotted and T's to be crossed in an agreement that would end the strike without a contract, 89 players returned to their teams, more than double the number in any previous single day. But there still was no agreement and Upshaw and the 28 player representatives were holding a telephone conference this morning to decide the next step in the 24-day-old strike.

Meanwhile, the Washington Redskins, the only team without a striking player in camp, were set to return en masse, so were the Pittsburgh Steelers, and the Los Angeles Rams were reported nearly ready to do the same. Other teams league probably would not be far behind.

"I would suggest that all of the players in the National Football League hang together because we're now on the verge of returning you all back to work," Upshaw told players this morning in the telephone message.

The Redskins' lone potential defector, All-Pro defensive end Dexter Manley, changed his mind Wednesday, saying he preferred to act with his teammates. While Neal Olkewicz, the team's player representative, had no comment on the return, Upshaw said Wednesday night: "I'm sure they're going back. They've said they're going back."

"There's a lot of guys who want to come in," player representative Tunch Ilkin of the Steelers, who had 11 players report Wednesday, said this morning before the call with Upshaw. "We'll meet today and see what they want to do."

And the Los Angeles Times reported that the Rams, 13 of whose players were due in today, were two or three votes short of coming in.

The rest of the players will almost surely follow soon.

Several teams, like the New York Giants, have said that if one team breaks, they will follow.

And if that doesn't do it, they will be back as soon as the two sides can agree on the expiration date of the 1982 contract, which will be extended while negotiations continue. The union is seeking an expiration date of Feb. 1 so that any new gains on free agency would not be delayed another year. The owners are seeking a June 16 expiration date.

Management Council spokesman John Jones said this morning that the owners had had no contact with the union since Wednesday, when the two sides spoke twice. Upshaw, however, conceded Wednesday night that there was one sticking point.

"We would be willing to return to work. We would be willing to play under the 1982 agreement," Upshaw said. "But everything must expire February 1. If we took their agreement, all the rights under the standard player contract would vest for an additional year, so we're not going to have that."

Among Wednesday's defectors were such stars as Lawrence Taylor, Steve Largent, Ozzie Newsome and Andre Tippett with the prospect of Eric Dickerson, Jim Everett and at least 11 of their Los Angeles Rams teammates reporting today.

Upshaw, while minimizing the numbers, conceded the defections were having an effect, particularly if a full team like Washington was to cross the line. He noted that 16 Cleveland Browns reported Wednesday and they play Cincinnati, with only two defectors, on Sunday.

"If you consider one full genuine team, say the Cleveland Browns playing the Cincinnati scabs, I don't think that would be very fair and wouldn't be good for competitive balance or for the integrity of the game," Upshaw said.

But most of Wednesday's action was on the telephone lines as the union seemed to be running out of both time and support.

The two chief negotiators, Upshaw for the union and Jack Donlan for management, talked twice during the day. Upshaw said he also had had conversations with Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who he said was working "quietly ... behind the scenes."

Donlan also spent the day talking to owners while Upshaw spent much of the late afternoon and evening in conference calls with the 28 player representatives. Another round of calls had been set for this morning.

But whether the union could get the players back in time to forestall another round of replacement games this weekend was a question.

"There has been progress made," Mike Lynn, general manager of the Minnesota Vikings, said Wednesday. "It can be resolved at any time. But time is running out to play this Sunday. I would say if there wasn't anything done tonight, it would be difficult to get the players ready for Sunday."

But one management source cautioned: "There's still a lot of difference of opinion. Everything still has to be approved by the owners and there are some who don't want to take the players back without a new contract."

Still, the pressure was on the union. The players who beat Wednesday's 1 p.m. deadline for reporting brought the total of players who have returned to their teams to 228, more than 14 percent of the 1,585 players under union jurisdiction.

Defectors Mounting As Strike Loses Momentum

All striking Washington Redskins were expected to return to work, joining 228 other NFL players who have crossed picket lines to rejoin their clubs.

As of Wednesday night, the Redskins were the only NFL team without a defector. But Gene Upshaw, the head of the players' union, said he expected the team to return en masse today.

"I'm sure that they are going back," Upshaw said. "They've said they are going back. But there are still 27 other teams."

However, there was also speculation that 13 striking Los Angeles Rams would report to work today. The Rams said the players had "expressed an interest in rejoining the team," but four of the players denied it. However, a striking player who asked not to be identified told the Los Angeles Times that the Rams were "two or three votes away" from returning en masse.

If the Rams and Redskins do return, it would be a major blow to the union, which has been struggling to head off mass defections. Eight-nine players rejoined their teams Wednesday, leaving about 1,350 players still on strike heading into the third week of replacement games.

Wednesday night, the union and management appeared to be close to an agreement that would end the walkout, which is now 24 days old. But the sides were reportedly stuck on a key point — how long to extend the expired 1982 Collective Bargaining Agreement if the players return to work without a new contract.

Among the defectors Wednesday were 16 Cleveland Browns, including tight end Ozzie Newsome and quarterback Gary Danielson. Only one Cleveland regular, defensive end Carl Hairston, had previously crossed the picket line.

"I feel betrayed," teammate Dave Puuzzi said. "With friends like those, who needs enemies?"

Puuzzi, a defensive lineman, said he thinks the players remaining on strike are fighting a losing battle.

"It's really caving in," he said. "I don't believe we've accomplished anything."

Under league rules, striking players had to report by 1 p.m. Wednesday to be eligible to play this weekend and be paid for the week. Upshaw said he believed owners would extend the deadline for the Redskins, but that was denied by officials of the Management Council.

The most prominent player to return Wednesday was New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor, the league's Most Valuable Player last season. Taylor lost $160,000 during the strike and watched his team, the defending Super Bowl champions, lose two games to drop to 0-4.

"I felt the reason I had to come back, and I wanted to come back was I didn't want to sit back and watch the Giants lose and lose a lot of money," he said. "Finally I sat back and asked myself, 'Why are you losing this much money every week?' And I can't find the answer."

Other well-known players returning before Wednesday's reporting deadline included wide receiver Steve Largent of the Seattle Seahawks, wide receiver John Stallworth of the Pittsburgh Steelers and quarterback Doug Flutie of the New England Patriots.

Stallworth was one of 11 striking Steelers to report Wednesday, second most behind Cleveland. The Los Angeles Raiders were third with 10 defectors.

The Raiders now have 26 regulars back, the most of any team. The St. Louis Cardinals are second with 21, while the Steelers are next with 18.

War Of Words Already Underway For The Series

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The war of words has already begun between this year's World Series participants, the Minnesota Twins and the St. Louis Cardinals.

Before St. Louis had even wrapped up its National League playoff series against the San Francisco Giants, Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said it was "a shame" that the Detroit Tigers won 98 games but lost to the Twins in the American League playoffs.

"It's a shame that one team wins 98 games and the other 85 and the one with 85 wins (the AL pennant)," said Herzog, whose team went on to defeat the Giants 6-0 Wednesday night to wrap up the NL pennant.

When told Wednesday afternoon about Herzog's comments, Twins first baseman Kent Hrbek said: "It's a shame they can only score one run a ballgame, too. That's too bad."

Hrbek was referring to the Cardinals' troubles manufacturing runs when the injured Jack Clark is out of their lineup.

Twins shortstop Greg Gagne, reached at home Wednesday night after the Cardinals' triumph, said the Twins have won more than 85 games counting the four playoff victories.

"Right now, we've won 89 and we hope to make it 93," Gagne said. "Hey, that's just the way the thing is set up in both leagues. We only needed to win 85 games to get there. Heck, we could have won 84 and still won it. That has nothing to do with anything now. Now it's 0-0 and the best team's going to win the seven-game series. Talking can't do nothing."

Added second baseman Steve Lombardozi: "I don't have a comment (on Herzog's statement). I'll just let it go and let other people talk."

Lombardozi said the World Series seems closer now that the Twins know who they'll be playing Saturday night at the Metrodome in Game 1.

"It feels much better to know for sure who we're going to play," he said. "Now we can set our sights on one team and we'll have the scouting reports pouring in."

The Cardinals' victory means that Frank Viola, the Twins' 17-10 left-hander, will start Game 1. Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly said that early scouting reports have indicated that St. Louis' switch-hitters are less dangerous from the right side of the plate.

Kelly said he was planning to start right-hander Bert Blyleven if the Giants won the pennant.

"It doesn't matter to me," said Blyleven, who will start Game 2. "I know I'll get my pitches and my innings in. Our scouting department did a great job with the Tigers and I'm sure they know what they're talking about for the World Series."

Rookie right-hander Les Straker will start Game 3 and Viola will come back for Game 4 unless the Twins have a 3-0 series lead. In the unlikely event that happens, Joe Niekro would start Game 4, Kelly said.

Minnesota players don't know much about the Cardinals because they have seen very little of the National League this season.

"One thing we do know is they got speed," Gagne said. "They come at you with Tommy Herr and Ozzie Smith and Vince Coleman and Willie McGee and Jose Oquendo. They're a running club. They're supposedly a lot of singles hitters who get on base and then run a lot."

"It's going to keep us on our toes. We gotta make sure we hold our own when they hit-and-run. We're probably going to have to play a little closer to the (second base) bag, play them up the middle."

Unlike the Tigers, the Cardinals have reliable relief pitching in Todd Worrell and Ken Dayley.

"You gotta expect the two teams in the World Series to have good pitching staffs," Lombardozi said. "They couldn't have made it without Worrell and Dayley."

Why others always compare themselves to Mercedes-Benz.

Those makers who commend their cars as substitutes for a Mercedes-Benz know what they are doing.

There is always a market for the product that is a bit less technologically ambitious, a bit less mature in design, a bit less quality-obsessed. Because these shortfalls allow it to be sold for a bit less money. And there are always more people in search of the lowest price than there are people in search of the best automobile.

But for those whose personal automotive equation is purer—who cannot abide second best—this argument is no argument at all.

It is to serve the demands of people like these that authorized Mercedes-Benz dealers exist. Their language is our language. Their standards are our standards. And their idea of automotive excellence is ours: Mercedes-Benz.

Other makers will continue to compare themselves with Mercedes-Benz, in hopes that this reflected glory may add the lustre their own names lack. It may even bring crowds of people to their showrooms.

And of these, some will drive away with a so-called bargain. Meanwhile, at our showrooms, discerning individuals will be driving away in their Mercedes-Benz.

Like no other dealers in the world.

Former Prince Bandmates Now Making It On Their Own

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After appearing in two movies, playing on three million-selling albums and making the cover of Rolling Stone magazine, Wendy Melvoin and Lisa Coleman still wonder if people know them.

"We have to think of it in those terms, because there's a lot of people we haven't reached," said Melvoin, the guitarist with the Revolution, Prince's multifaceted backup band, for the past five years. "We can't expect these people to just invite us in their homes. We have to knock politely and see if we can come inside."

The light rapping on their debut album, "Wendy and Lisa," is a change from their days under Prince's purple reign, when Melvoin and keyboardist Coleman helped the Minneapolis superstar break musical and motion picture ground with a series of ever-evolving records. Coleman was a fixture on Prince's records dating back to "Dirty Mind" in 1978, while Melvoin joined the band in time for the multi-platinum "Purple Rain" movie and soundtrack. They played on the subsequent "Around the World in a Day" and "Parade" LPs and appeared in the disastrous movie, "Under the Cherry Moon" before the band went its separate ways.

Along the way Prince began recording their music: "Sometimes It Snows in April" and "Mountains" from the "Parade" LP were co-written by the pair, marking the first time Prince had recorded anyone else's music and landed them on Rolling Stone's cover.

But unlike the rock-funk fusion perfected by Prince, Melvoin and Coleman brought a lighter, jazzier feel to their project.

"Sounding like the Revolution wasn't a concern of ours, but it was of a lot of other people," said Melvoin, who co-wrote most of the album with Coleman in the studio. "No one knew what to expect from the two of us."

The pair knew what to expect from one another — they grew up together in California, where their fathers were session musicians in Los Angeles.

"We've been familiar with one another since we were in diapers," Melvoin said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles. "We know our limitations, and try to convince each other we have none. It's a bicycle built for two."

After the dissolution of the Revolution, the two went into the studio within two weeks and began working on the album — self-financed without a record contract.

"It was the chance of a lifetime," said Coleman. "We had the money to get in the studio and start the whole process."

Revolution drummer Bobby Z joined as co-producer; Melvoin and Coleman played everything from synthesizers to drums on the record.

"We needed to vent so much in such a short time, being in Los Angeles for the first time after so long in Minneapolis," Melvoin said. "We could have spent time telling somebody what to play, giving them a chart with exactly what we wanted to hear. But we could do it as well."

The result ranges from the first single, "Waterfall," with Melvoin singing over a soaring guitar line, to "White," a jazz-fusion instrumental number which closes side one.

"Once it was done, there was no room for lyrics — it's just a feeling, a mood," Melvoin said. "You can't tell if it's a male or female playing, and it's nothing to do with rock 'n' roll. Some people don't get it, but that's OK."

Most of the record deals with relationships: "I know more about relationships than nuclear physics," said Melvoin, with a laughing Coleman adding, "It's something we both know about."

both expect to resume one day.

"Those were our college years (with Prince). 'Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance,'" said Melvoin, referring to the book about self-realization. "Now that we're on our own, we're going from place to place, gathering things together, putting it in a basket."

"When we've gathered enough to make the Revolution better, we'll get back together and blow the world up."

RECOGNITION — Entertainers Wendy Melvoin, left, and Lisa Coleman wonder if people know them although they've appeared in two movies, played on three million-selling albums and made the cover of Rolling Stone magazine. ## For $9.95, Fans Turn Into Stars

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — For $9.95, you can become a recording "star."

Recording Studios of America Inc. has 40 studios, mostly in amusement parks and shopping malls, where would-be Willie Nelsons can spend just 15 minutes and walk away with their voice on record.

The studios provide the background music and background vocals and copies of the words to 275 songs. The customers provide the courage and get to take home a cassette tape with the title of the song and their name proudly emblazoned on it.

"It's fun and it's a fantasy fulfiller," says Ted McCracken, president of the 4-year-old company. "We've had people 70 or 80 years old come and record and said they'd wanted to do it for a long time."

Customers pick out a song to record, then are handed a list of the lyrics. They go into the recording booth, practice a couple of times and then make the recording.

It's all done under the direction of a helpful recording engineer. Customers wear headphones in the booth and sing into an authentic microphone while the "recording" sign flashes on outside.

There's a curtain for privacy if needed.

"It's just like singing along to the radio," says the sign outside the company's studio on Nashville's Music Row, the firm's first. Next year, the firm will have a studio at Expo 88 in Australia.

For an extra $19.95, customers get their photo on a plaque with a gold album inset into it, just like the gold albums presented to such stars as Kenny Rogers, Michael Jackson and Dionne Warwick.

For the more ambitious customers, the studios also can make a music video for $29.95.

Wella Faye Peebles of Grand Prairie, Texas, was among 33 excited members of Calvary Baptist Church who crowded into the Nashville studio to record "I'll Fly Away" and "Amazing Grace." Amid laughter and a few knotted nerves, they assumed the name "The Recycled Teen-agers" for their stint behind the microphone.

"It was great. Exciting," Mrs. Peebles said after hearing the playback. "We practiced on the bus before we got here."

She said the recording will be "a moment that will live forever."

"I'm going to give it to my two girls and let them fight over it," she said.

Customers choose from a list of country, pop, gospel and Christmas hits. Whitney Houston's "I Wanna Dance With Somebody (Who Loves Me)" recently has been a big favorite. Madonna's "Who's That Girl" and Bon Jovi's "Wanted Dead or Alive" are among the other rock 'n' roll selections.

Country choices include "The Gambler," "Coal Miner's Daughter" and "9 to 5." Oldies include "The Twist," "Shout" and "Stop in the Name of Love."

McCracken says "The Rose" has been the most recorded song at his line of studios which stretch from Long Island to California and include all the Six Flags amusement parks.

"It's in a good, generic key and relatively easy to sing," he said. "For some reason, it stands out. There's something about the melody that entices people."

Poet Who Once Scorned Post As Laureate Now Holds Job

By CAROLYN LUMSDEN
Associated Press Writer

CUMMINGTON, Mass. (AP) — The writer who once pooh-poohed the idea of an American poet laureate because, he said, it was not worth the risk that the nation would get a bad one, now has the job.

What exactly Richard Wilbur is supposed to do in the $35,000-a-year post isn't clear, since he's only the second poet ever named to laureate. The first, 81-year-old Robert Penn Warren, stepped down after a year because of frail health.

Whatever he's supposed to do, Wilbur won't write official poems commissioned by the government.

"That's not part of the deal," said the 6-foot-5 man of letters in a recent interview at his hilltop home in western Massachusetts.

"Besides, I feel I've already done the laureate's job in that respect," he said, referring to his lyrics to a cantata performed last fall by the New York Philharmonic to celebrate the Statue of Liberty's centennial. "I don't expect to write any more long, patriotic poems."

At 66, Wilbur has already done many jobs, including a lifetime of teaching, translating French plays and writing elegant metered verse that has been heaped with honors, among them the Pulitzer and Bollingen prizes and the National Book Award. He also served as president of the American Academy of Arts and Letters from 1974 to 1976.

His peers call him "an extraordinary craftsman" and say they hope his appointment brings attention to the neglected art, although some, such as Harvard Professor Emeritus Daniel Aaron, say they are uncomfortable with the idea of an "official" literature.

Professor and poet M.L. Rosenthal of New York University said he saw no danger the post would taint writers: "Some countries pay too much attention to their poets' attitudes; our country pays too little attention. Almost anybody would be safe in the job."

The post of poet laureate was created by Congress in 1985 at the urging of a few senators who believed it would restore some lost glory to American poetry. Unlike the English practice of putting a laureate in the job for life, however, the American laureate has the duty for only one year and the librarian of Congress may renew it.

Wilbur was among the many who opposed a lifetime appointment to the position. "One can be stuck with someone who loses the ability to write and becomes a semicomical figure," he said. "On the other hand, we're now in danger of having 50 laureates per century."

The job has few specified duties: advise the Library of Congress on whom to include in its huge record library and whom to invite to Washington for readings and lectures; and give a poetry reading in the fall and a springtime lecture on any subject.

The appointment was made in April, and despite Wilbur's apprehensions about the publicity tearing him away from his writing in the silo that serves as his office, he says it hasn't been all that bad. "I've managed to finish five poems, which — if you knew how long it takes me to do even one — is quite an accomplishment."

Drew Barrymore Fits Film Into Homework Schedule

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Drew Barrymore had her hands full, between classes, studying, homework, her workout and her newest movie for CBS, "Conspiracy of Love."

In the movie, to be aired Sunday, she plays a tomboy kept from her beloved grandfather (Robert Young) by a restraining order obtained by her mother (Glynnis O'Connor). The movie deals with the rights of grandparents.

Drew, 12, was on the patio of her hillside home one afternoon after her seventh-grade classes at a private school. She had just completed her exercise program. She lives with her mother, Ildiko Barrymore, a writer and former actress who is writing a screenplay for Drew.

"I've still got three hours or homework," Drew said. "Maybe four hours. They give us way too much homework. I don't think it's necessary. On weekends they give us so much you spend the whole weekend working."

An orange cat wandered by and rubbed against her. "His name is Kiwi Bear," she explained. "He sleeps with me and licks my face."

She worked in the movie last June, when it was "super hot." She had to leave school three days before finals to go to Toronto.

"When you do a movie you still have to do your school work," she said. "I'd work on the film all day. On my lunch hour I'd study. I'd come home at night, exercise, take a shower, read my lines for the next day, study and go straight to bed. Time goes by fast when you're doing that. The working part was super fun."

Young plays Grandpa Joe, an old-time barber who lives on rose-tinted memories. Drew's character fervently believes his embellished stories of past glories. Her father, Joe's son, deserted the family. Her mother gets a restraining order to keep the grandfather away because she fears he is a bad influence.

Drew comes from one of America's most illustrious theater families. Her grandparents were John Barrymore and Dolores Costello. Her great-aunt and great-uncle were Ethel and Lionel Barrymore, both of whom won Academy Awards.

She made her professional debut in a commercial when she was 11

BUSY SCHEDULE — Drew Barrymore, the youngster who bedazzled audiences as the little sister in "E.T. — The Extraterrestrial," talks about her busy schedule during an interview at her Los Angeles home. months old. When she was 2 she was in the TV movie "Suddenly, Love" with Cindy Williams. Her feature film debut was in "Altered States" but it was her role as the little sister in "E.T. — The Extraterrestrial" that made her famous.

In "Irreconcilable Differences," she and Ryan O'Neal and Shelley Long played a scene from "Father Knows Best" with Drew as Kathy. While in Toronto, she told Young, the original "Father," about it.

"I think Robert Young is such an incredible actor to work with," she said. "You learn so much from just one scene with him. What's so great about him is that he's always 100 percent doing what he has to do. He's always on the money."

Drew has worked mostly in feature films, but she has also done such TV work as "Amazing Stories," "Babes in Toyland" and "Bogey."

She wants to continue her acting career but is also interested in designing and decorating. "I love, love, love to create," she said. "I designed some of my clothes. Nobody uses safety pins for clothes, so I made a skirt with safety pins. Weird, huh? It's good to be different."

She plans to go to film school and learn directing and other aspects of film work.

"I know the odds are against me continuing as an actress when I grow up," she said, "but if you think about that you'll never get anywhere. I'm going to make it. If I'm not as famous later, it's all right. If you have the attitude that it's difficult, then you don't want to be an actress."

In November she starts work on another feature film, "Second Chance." Drew, who will be 13 in February, plays a 15-year-old.

She admits it's hard to watch herself on the screen. "I get embarrassed," she said. "I try my absolute hardest to be good, but I'm never sure. I'm a tough critic on myself."

ABC Gives Ax To 'Max' As Ratings Hit Bottom

By DIANE HAITHMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The creative staff of ABC's futuristic "Max Headroom" series were recently at work on an episode called "Families," an ironic study of the television ratings system, which questioned a network's slavish reliance on an absurdly small sample to reflect the tastes of the American public.

That episode will not air, however. Four weeks into the new season, the critically acclaimed "Max Headroom" has been canceled — because of ratings.

ABC announced Wednesday that "Max Headroom," which aired for six episodes last season and was picked up for fall, had been canceled after four episodes. The hour-long program will be replaced by the current comedy "Mr. Belvedere" and a new sitcom called "The Pursuit of Happiness," starring Paul Provenza as David Hanley, an idealist-just-turned-30 who ends a decade-long cross-country trek to become a professor at a small Philadelphia college.

"Max Headroom," a Lorimar production, was the lowest-rated network show last week, ranking 67th with a 7.1 rating and 12 share. The previous weeks were not much better.

The character of Max Headroom, a computer-generated image who comments on the modern world, began as the host of a music video show in England. The concept was later expanded in to a television movie and comedy talk show with Max as host. The talk show came to United States via cable television and inspired the ABC series.

Headroom also became the poster boy for Coca-Cola, appearing on billboards, display ads and television commercials. And Headroom is probably the first computer-generated star ever to appear on the cover of Newsweek.

"Max Headroom" executive producer Peter Wagg, who re-located from England to Los Angeles to produce the show about a year ago, said his staff was informed Tuesday afternoon of ABC's decision. "I think it is rather tragic, isn't it?" he said. "You might start getting me choked up in a minute."

"I think it's hard the morning after to come up with an answer, but I think a lot of people feel very sad this morning," Wagg continued. "And not just people connected with the show, but people in the (TV) industry."

"The sadness is that any time a producer with a great idea that is slightly different, that is challenging, that is possibly slightly ahead of its time will get turned down, because they'll say: 'Max' didn't work."

Wagg said Max Headroom would continue to be a spokesman for Coca-Cola, and a feature film and an animated series are being considered. His talk show will probably continue as well. "He's a very healthy character," he said.

Actress Wins Her Appeal

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra violated the civil rights of actress Vanessa Redgrave when it canceled a series of concerts she was to narrate, the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled.

The orchestra canceled scheduled narrations by Ms. Redgrave of Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" in 1982 after reporting it got threats that performances would be disrupted because of her support of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The orchestra said disruptions could endanger the audience and players and detract from the artistic integrity of the production.

Wednesday's 2-to-1 decision overturned a U.S. District Court ruling and was hailed as "a tremendous victory on the civil rights claim" by Ms. Redgrave's lawyer, Daniel J. Kornstein.

The appeals court said adopting the orchestra's position "would be to give free rein to those seeking to intimidate artists engaged in political activity."

Judge Hugh H. Bownes, writing the majority opinion, said the orchestra's defense of artistic integrity really was a claim for "the right to perform without interruption by the audience."

He said performing artists do not have First Amendment rights to perform without audience interruption.

"History and experience teach that the risk of catcalls, boos, disruptions and even being the target of vegetable projectiles is inherent in any public performance by artists who seek to entertain and educate the public," he wrote.

"Indeed it could be argued that the audience has a First Amendment right to object vociferously to an artistic performance."

Recognizing a First Amendment defense of artistic integrity in the case "would mean that a performing artist or group of artists could deny another artist her statutorily protected right to perform because of the fear that the audience might interrupt the performance," he wrote.

Judge Frank M. Coffin dissented, writing, "If Redgrave's presence in anyway threatened the BSO's freedom of artistic expression, then the BSO had the right to replace her or to cancel the performance."

Judge Bruce Selya joined Bownes for the majority decision.

Kornstein said Ms. Redgrave was in London and was delighted with the ruling. "We feel it's very, very important, not just for her, but for other people, similarly victimized," he said.

Itinerant Surgeon Battles His Peers Over Rural Care

By LARRY GREEN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

GRAND ISLAND, Neb. — Once a week at 3 a.m., Dr. Robert Koefoot opens his office, makes a pot of coffee, reads the morning newspaper and then drives off into the darkness — a medical renegade.

The moon and an infrequent passing car provide the only light, an occasional deer or raccoon the only sign of life on the flat central Nebraska farmland as Koefoot drives north to St. Paul, population 2,000.

By 4 a.m. he is performing his first operation of the day — in defiance of the American College of Surgeons.

Koefoot, third-generation physician, is an itinerant surgeon. His are the only general surgical services available to the 35-bed Howard County Community Hospital, which serves the St. Paul area, 22 miles north of Grand Island.

He has traveled the lonely Nebraska blacktops from Grand Island to nearby towns for decades now — fixing hernias, removing appendixes, amputating limbs — but he leaves post-operative care in the hands of the family physicians who live in the towns — the doctors who referred the surgical cases to him in the first place.

That arrangement violates the bylaws of the College of Surgeons, the only major professional medical organization that prohibits so-called itinerant medicine. It requires its members to follow up surgical cases personally or to delegate postoperative care to another qualified surgeon.

For 10 years, Koefoot has waged a one-man crusade against this restriction. He challenged the College of Surgeons as a member and, after he was expelled from the prestigious organization, from a federal courtroom in Chicago. So far, he has been unable to get the rule changed, but the legal fight is continuing and so is his practice of itinerant surgery.

"They picked on the wrong fellow," said Koefoot, who has been joined in his fight by the Kansas City-based American Academy of Family Physicians.

The dispute between Koefoot and the 47,000-member surgeons' organization is as much a matter of Koefoot's ego as of medical principle, but it underscores the difficulties of providing specialized medical services in rural areas that have a chronic shortage of doctors, particularly specialists.

Critics of the surgeons' group's prohibition say that the economic well-being of country hospitals, already suffering from cuts in federal programs, shrinking populations and competition from regional medical centers, is further hurt by such a policy.

The College of Surgeons contends that patients are better served by surgeons who provide postoperative care or delegate it to other qualified surgeons who will be nearby in case complications develop.

The issue, the group's lawyers say, is assurance of quality care. "Itinerancy" is not going back and seeing the patient, no matter where he is. Elements of time and distance are irrelevant," said Paul G. Gebhard, attorney for the College of Surgeons. "It isn't traveling .... There are fellows in Nebraska who travel some distance, and who see their patients regularly (after surgery)."

Koefoot said: "People in rural areas should have surgical problems solved by a competent, trained surgeon (and) they should also have the opportunity to have their surgery (near their) home, in the rural hospital. Without (income from) surgery these hospitals would not remain open."

"The surgeon is more than a 'hewer of flesh,'" the surgeons' association argues in court documents. "The college believes that the surgeon has a moral, ethical and legal obligation to give patients upon whom he has operated his personal attention, and to attend his patients postoperatively."

"Itinerant medicine is essential," insists Robert T. Van Hook, executive director of the National Rural Health Association. "Radiology, pathology, ophthalmology, cardiology — almost all the sub-specialties in internal medicine are out there and being practiced on an itinerant basis. It's happening now more than it was 10 years ago."

Because he refused to stop practicing itinerant surgery, Koefoot was suspended from the College of Surgeons in 1979 and expelled two years later. He filed suit, claiming his right to due process was violated by the disciplinary procedures. That claim is being considered by a federal judge in Chicago who presided over a seven-week trial earlier this year.

Koefoot and the family practitioners who attend to his patients also contended that the ban on itinerant surgical practices was anti-competitive, restrained trade and violated federal antitrust law. On that issue, a jury ruled against Koefoot and in favor of the College of Surgeons.

A surgeon does not have to join the American College of Surgeons. In fact, many do not belong, but membership is considered important in the medical profession.

"The prestige of being a member of the American College of Surgeons is tremendous," Koefoot said. "That is the one surgical organization that, to me, is the most outstanding in the country. They have their yearbook, and that book is used for patient referrals. I think I have lost a tremendous amount of income because of (absence from the yearbook)."

"Certainly, within the medical community itself, physicians look at other physicians' certifications — whether they are board-certified or not — as to whether they'd want to refer a patient to them," said R. Michael Miller, vice president and general counsel of the 59,000-member American Academy of Family Physicians.

The Academy, whose members often take over the postoperative care of itinerant surgeons' patients, is helping to underwrite Koefoot's legal battle with the American College of Surgeons. The family physicians' group decided to support Koefoot because "we felt this rule regarding itinerant surgery challenged the competency of family physicians to provide competent postoperative care," Miller said.

While the controversy can be viewed as a dispute between a strong-willed country doctor and an equally strong-willed professional organization, it also highlights the growing problem of health care in rural America. In areas far from the nation's population concentrations there continues to be a shortage of doctors, particularly specialists, and hospitals are closing at an accelerated pace.

"Rural areas are losing doctors at a more rapid rate than before and replacing them at a slower rate, despite the increasing supply of doctors nationally," said Roger D. Tracy, director of community programs at the University of Iowa's College of Medicine.

"We're not Los Angeles or the Gold Coast of Chicago or Fort Lauderdale," Tracy said. "Certain things lead doctors to locate in nice climates and healthy health-market places. That makes it difficult to attract doctors to lesser-performing economies and more rural areas."

Medicare pays rural hospitals less than it pays city hospitals for the same services, according to the American Hospital Association, and this is a contributing factor in the closing of an increasing number of rural hospitals, said Jan Shulman of the American Hospital Association.

In the last two years, country hospitals have been closing at a faster rate than urban hospitals. According to American Hospital Association figures, 38 of the 72 hospitals that have closed since the beginning of 1986 served rural areas.

Surgery is one way to keep these facilities alive economically, many medical authorities say. And, according to some, the only way to provide surgery is through itinerant practitioners.

"Hospitals need to fill their beds," said National Rural Health Association executive director Van Hook. "Itinerant medicine is essential to the rural hospitals .... Bringing in additional specialists helps improve the utilization of their facilities. It is critical to them."

"The college has no interest in putting rural hospitals out of business or bringing surgical patients into big cities," said Douglas J. Polk, a lawyer for the surgeons group. "What the college insists upon is that rural patients receive the same level of care that city patients receive."

"The college simply doesn't want people wearing the label of the college, which insists on a certain level of care, and then not delivering that level of care," added College of Surgeons lawyer Gebhard.

Said Koefoot of his practice: "It's quality. It's not unethical. It's not immoral, and our patients know it and their relatives know it."

Study Shows Testicle Cancer Now 'Curable' Regardless Of Its Stage

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Advances in chemotherapy and early detection of tumors have made death from cancer of the testicles almost completely avoidable, says the director of a study published today.

"It is now a curable disease no matter what stage it is," said Dr. B.J. Kennedy, a University of Minnesota cancer researcher and president of the American Society of Clinical Oncology.

"If a patient with testicle cancer dies, that should be studied carefully. It should not occur," he said, adding that most Americans who die of testicular cancer refused to complete chemotherapy.

Kennedy said the study, published in the journal Cancer, found that for the advanced stage of testicle cancer's most serious form — called non-seminoma — the proportion of men surviving at least one year was 50 percent in the early 1970s and 78 percent in 1983.

That figure soon should reach 98 percent, Kennedy said, adding survival is even higher for seminoma, the form of testicle cancer that always was more vulnerable to chemotherapy, and for early stages of both forms.

Testicle cancer grows so rapidly that it is often detected early, and men who survive one year almost always survive much longer and are considered cured, he said Tuesday during the annual meeting of the American College of Surgeons, which conducted the study under Kennedy's direction.

About 4,000 to 5,000 men, mostly 15 to 35 years old, develop testicular cancer each year in the United States. Fifteen years ago, about 80 percent died, Kennedy said, estimating 80 percent to 90 percent are cured today, with survival rates continuing to rise.

Kennedy credited advances in chemotherapy for non-seminoma, and to earlier detection by doctors and patients. He said men should check their testicles for lumps each month, and consult a doctor if they find a lump.

Progress is much slower against prostate cancer, which kills about one-third of 90,000 American men diagnosed with it each year, said the director of another study published last year and conducted by the surgeons' group.

Almost all men who develop prostate cancer are older than 50, and men in their 70s are most likely to get it, said Dr. Joseph D. Schmidt, surgery professor and head of urology at the University of California, San Diego.

Schmidt said at least 77 percent of men with early-stage prostate cancer now survive at least five years, compared with 65 percent 10 years ago. At least 30 percent of men with advanced prostate cancer now survive at least five years, compared with 24 percent a decade ago, he added.

Schmidt said prostate cancer grows more slowly, so is less susceptible to chemotherapy and hormones. Nevertheless, he said five-year survival rates improved by at least 6 percent between 1978 and 1983 for all stages of prostate cancer, from early to advanced.

Researcher Links Insulin Intake To Variations In Blood Pressure

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — People with high blood pressure may be abnormally sensitive to reductions in oxygen intake, perhaps explaining why they are more likely than others to die in their sleep, a researcher says.

In a separate study, decreased sensitivity to insulin has been identified as a possible cause of high blood pressure, a researcher said Wednesday at the American Heart Association's annual meeting on high blood pressure.

Both studies are part of continuing efforts to explain one of the great mysteries of heart disease: Almost 58 million Americans have high blood pressure, but in 90 percent of the cases, doctors have no idea what's causing it.

Dr. Virend Somers of the University of Iowa said that low oxygen is known to stimulate the sympathetic nervous system, a collection of nerves that regulate blood pressure.

Somers and his colleagues showed that the sympathetic nervous system response is heightened in people with high blood pressure.

Somers and his associates inserted electrodes into the sympathetic nerves of eight men with high blood pressure and eight men with normal blood pressure.

When the two groups breathed a gas mixture with only half the oxygen found in the air, those with hypertension showed a 41 percent increase in sympathetic nerve activity, compared with only a 20 percent increase in the normal men, Somers reported.

It is known that people with high blood pressure have an increased likelihood of suffering from sleep apnea, a condition that's often associated with snoring and occurs when breathing ceases for short periods during sleep.

Oxygen levels in the blood can drop sharply during apnea, exciting the sympathetic nervous system, driving up blood pressure and perhaps triggering a heart attack or stroke.

"It may explain why hypertensive people are more likely to die in their sleep," Somers said.

In another report presented Wednesday at the heart association meeting, Dr. Albert Rocchini, a pediatrician at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, showed that an abnormally sluggish response to insulin in obese people could lead to retention of salt and fluids, causing high blood pressure.

Researchers had guessed that the abnormal response might produce such an effect, Rocchini said, but the issue had not been resolved. "This is one of the first tests of the hypothesis," he said.

Rocchini examined the insulin response in seven obese teen-age boys, and found that they suffered from a condition called insulin resistance, in which more than the usual amount of insulin is required for the body to utilize sugar in the bloodstream.

He also found that the excess insulin operated on the boys' kidneys to cause them to retain salt and fluid, a condition that can eventually lead to high blood pressure.

"This may be a major mechanism in hypertension," he said.

The studies were done on adolescents in part because obese adults may have sustained kidney damage from high blood pressure, thus clouding the study's findings, Rocchini said.

He said, however, that he believes the results apply to overweight adults as well as to overweight adolescents.

Drug For Treating Lung Infections Effective In AIDS

By SUSAN OKIE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Tests of a new drug for a lung infection that is the most common cause of death in AIDS patients suggest that the experimental treatment is at least as effective as current therapies and has far fewer side effects, according to a report published Thursday.

Trimetrexate, an experimental drug previously evaluated as a cancer therapy, was used to treat 49 AIDS patients suffering lung infections with Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia, or PCP, by researchers at the National Institutes of Health and George Washington University Medical Center.

The encouraging results of the preliminary trial, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, have led to plans for a national study later this month of 370 AIDS patients with the infection that will compare trimetrexate with trimethoprim-sulfamethoxazole, the combination antibiotic most often used to treat PCP.

Once a rare infection seen only in patients whose immune systems were damaged by cancer or medications, PCP has become more common as a result of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome epidemic. As many as 80 percent of AIDS patients suffer at least one episode of PCP, according to Dr. Carmen J. Allegra, the principal author of the new study. In 58 percent of the 24,412 reported AIDS deaths, PCP was the cause, according to the most recent figures from the federal Centers for Disease Control.

Episodes of PCP can be cured about 75 percent of the time with currently available drugs, which include trimethoprim-sulfamethoxazole and pentamidine isethionate, Allegra said. But AIDS patients frequently suffer multiple episodes, and the cure rate in patients with a second or third episode falls to between 40 and 60 percent, according to the report.

Both the standard drugs frequently cause serious side effects in AIDS patients, such as dangerously low blood counts and allergic reactions. "Up to 50 percent of people will have side effects severe enough to cause the physician to stop therapy," Allegra said.

The rationale for trying trimetrexate in PCP was similar to the use of a related drug, methotrexate, in cancer patients, Allegra said. Trimetrexate blocks the activity of a chemical enzyme in cells needed to manufacture folic acid, a vitamin critical to cellular function. Given intravenously, trimetrexate is taken up by both the Pneumocystis organisms and by the patient's cells.

To prevent the drug from poisoning the patient's cells, doctors administer a second "rescue" drug called leucovorin, a form of folic acid that enters human cells but not Pneumocystis organisms. Thanks to leucovorin, the infecting organisms are killed by trimetrexate but the patient's cells are unharmed.

Allegra emphasized that the preliminary results must be confirmed and expanded in a large, randomized study comparing trimetrexate to standard therapy. But he noted that the most encouraging finding was the rarity of side effects with trimetrexate.

Although 12 patients experienced temporary lowering of blood counts, none suffered bleeding or infection because of low blood counts, a common side effect with the standard drugs. Four patients had temporary abnormalities in liver function detected on laboratory tests. Only one patient, who developed a rash, had to stop taking the drug.

Trimetrexate was first synthesized in 1969 by a researcher at the Warner-Lambert Co. in Morris Plains, N.J., which holds the patent. A spokesman said the company will provide the drug free of charge for a national study of trimetrexate, scheduled to begin this month at the 19 AIDS treatment evaluation units funded by the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

 It is easy to be lulled into a false sense of security by a hand that seems simple. If, however, you take your time before playing to the first trick, you will often spot the complications and be able to adopt countermeasures.

 South's jump to four spades is a trifle aggressive. We would have preferred a trial bid in one of the red suits, preferably diamonds, which would have led to the same game.
 When we saw this hand played at rubber bridge, it was soon over. Declarer won the first trick with dummy's ace and tried the diamond finesse. When that lost, declarer still had to concede a trick in trumps, hearts and clubs for down one.
 The percentage break in spades is 3-1, so declarer should have been alert to the possibility of losing a trick in each suit in the event that the diamond finesse were to fail. Careful planning would have allowed declarer to overcome his bad luck.
 Since West can do declarer's cause no harm, South should have allowed the king of hearts to hold the first trick. Let's suppose that West continues with a low heart. Declarer finesses the jack and then cashes the ace. When East ruffs, declarer discards his club loser. Best is for East to shift to a diamond. Declarer climbs up with the ace, draws the remaining trumps in two rounds, and concedes a diamond, making his game.

 If West switches to a club at trick two, declarer's task is simplified. Now he can test trumps before finessing the jack of hearts.
 This line is not without some risk.

If West started with a doubleton king of hearts and the diamond finesse is off, you will go down even if trumps were 2-2. With trumps splitting evenly you could have made four spades by simply cashing winners. But that is an odds-against proposition.

Pentagon Faces 10.4 Pct. Cut Under Gramm-Rudman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The impact of $23 billion in spending cuts threatened by the Gramm-Rudman budget law is coming into focus with the release of the first official figures on how government programs would be hit.

The Congressional Budget Office planned to report today that Pentagon spending would be cut 10.4 percent, outside of payroll accounts, which were exempted. Domestic programs lose 8.7 percent across the board.

The percentages are based on equal total dollar amounts — $11.5 billion — that would be stripped from those two spending areas should the automatic cuts outlined in the budget-balancing law be triggered.

The cuts will be made unless Congress and the president agree on alternative ways of reducing the deficit.

The $23 billion deficit reduction was aimed at reducing the government's red ink to $144 billion in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1, more than $10 billion below last year's level.

But the new CBO estimates show the fiscal 1988 deficit at $179.3 billion before the cuts are made. That's about $4 billion below the non-partisan agency's last projection two months ago but still would leave more red ink than the law promised.

The lower deficit estimate is largely the result of some cost-cutting changes in Medicare regulations and President Reagan's decision to limit federal pay raises to 2 percent next year.

The CBO figures are just preliminary, a yardstick for Congress to monitor the final decisions made by the Reagan administration under the law's guidelines. The administration's preliminary estimates are due Oct. 20.

The spending cuts won't become permanent until Nov. 20. Democrats in the House and Senate have been working to come up with alternative budget proposals before that date.

The Democrats say half of the deficit-cutting should come from increasing taxes, but Reagan says he'll veto a tax increase.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, began a series of speeches this week to warn of the impact of the automatic cuts.

"A whole range of programs — including both domestic programs and defense — will be pushed in front of the buzz saw and big pieces will be cut off," he said. He has detailed how farm subsidies, education and housing programs would be scaled back drastically.

"It seems to me the only sensible and responsible course of action would be for Congress and the president to get together and work out an agreement" to avoid the cuts, he said.

However, conservative Republicans, including some at the White House, have been arguing that the automatic spending cut might be better than Democratic alternatives which protect domestic spending but not the Pentagon while raising taxes.

The administration, under the law, is allowed to exempt military personnel accounts from the automatic cuts, and it has taken that option. As a result, remaining programs get hit harder, including purchasing of weapons and equipment, research and maintenance.

On the domestic side, the law exempts from cuts major entitlement programs such as Social Security, welfare and veterans benefits.

Congress and the president can avoid the fiscal 1988 Gramm-Rudman cuts if they agree on a package of tax increases or spending reductions that reach $23 billion. If they go part way, the remainder would be made up with the across-the-board cuts.

The threat of automatic spending cuts was restored to Gramm-Rudman this year when a bill was enacted to overcome Supreme Court objections to an earlier version of the law. The cuts are a tool to force Congress and the president to reduce the deficit to zero by fiscal 1993.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said Wednesday he hoped to have the House's fiscal 1988 deficit reduction package on the floor by Oct. 27.

Democrats said the package would be half spending cuts and half tax increases, but so far it is shaping up as less of the former and more of the latter.

Lawmakers Recess, Tax Still On Books

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — After nearly a month of haggling, Florida's $760 million services tax remains on the books.

Legislative leaders on Wednesday adjourned the second special legislative session called by Gov. Bob Martinez to address the issue, and said the Legislature would take up the matter in December.

The adjournment stifled Martinez's efforts to rescind the landmark levy, which has been blamed for a steep drop in the first-term Republican governor's popularity.

"I can understand the Democrats would rather almost die politically than repeal the tax," Martinez said. "I think that's going to be the message loud and clear."

The 5 percent sales tax on services, pushed through last spring by Martinez and the Democratic leadership, became law in July. It was applied to previously untaxed services such as advertising, legal work, accounting, pest control, pet grooming and yard services.

The tax sparked a fight that cost Florida taxpayers an estimated $520,000 to keep lawmakers in session and was marked by an anti-tax advertising blitz, several changes in Martinez' position and one of the strongest displays of partisan politics in the 20 years since Florida's last Republican governor.
