Missile Hits Tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A missile believed to have been fired by Iran struck and set ablaze a U.S.-flagged tanker in the Persian Gulf today. At least 18 people, including the ship's American captain, were wounded in the attack.

It was the second missile strike on an American-owned or American-flagged vessel in Kuwaiti waters in two days.

The American radio man of the ship hit today was also among the wounded, a U.S. military spokesman in Manama said. The injured crewmen's identities were not released.

Secretary of State George Shultz, in Israel to discuss Middle East peace, called the attack a "serious matter."

Kuwait's Cabinet met in emergency session to discuss it.

The tanker, the 81,283-ton Sea Isle City, is part of the Kuwaiti fleet reflagged by the United States in July to protect it from attack. Iran claims Kuwait aids Iraq, Iran's enemy in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

Also today, a helicopter carrying a U.S. television crew came under fire from an Iranian gunboat in the southern gulf, shipping sources reported.

A member of the NBC television network team told The Associated Press there were no injuries or damage to the craft. No other details were available.

The projectile that hit the Sea Isle City crashed into the crew accommodation quarters as the ship moved

Mayor's Ethnic Joke Brings More Complaints

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

An ethnic-related joke told by Greenville Mayor Les Garner at a Procter & Gamble employee meeting Thursday doesn't reflect well on the community, the president of the Pitt County branch of the NAACP said today.

Speaking at a company-sponsored mayoral forum attended by about 60 P&G employees, Garner — who is seeking his second term in office — told a joke referring to Oriental pronunciation.

"I wasn't at the meeting, but I have been getting calls all morning" about the joke, Garrett said. "It was very upsetting."

"With this city growing the way it is and with people coming in from all over the world and especially Oriental people, those types of jokes and those types of slurs are just not ting heroism awards to three black city employees.

good for the economy of our community."

Garrett, who was to hold a news conference on the issue today, said he hoped the mayor would refrain from making similar comments.

"Frankly, I just wish Mayor Les Garner could find better ways of expressing himself for the remaining time he is going to be in office," Garrett said.

Garner, contacted at home, declined to comment on the matter.

Meanwhile, Garner's opponent in the upcoming Nov. 3 municipal election, City Council member Ed Carter, said he was disappointed by the comments.

"I feel sorry for Greenville, the citizens of Greenville and the City Council," he said.

Carter defended Garner after he was criticized in April for making a watermelon remark after present-

Garner apologized for the watermelon remarks, saying the statement was misinterpreted.

This time, however, Carter said he could not defend the mayor's comments.

"I defended the mayor thinking he just slipped in a previous statement, but we've got too much to lose," Carter said. "We're trying to attract industry from various places and what would people of certain ethnic backgrounds think with the leader of this city making this type of statement."

"It reflects negatively on the city and the City Council and degrades the efforts by many citizens to make this a desirable place to live."

Carter said the remarks have marred the campaign.

"I regret it for the campaign," he said. "I'm not the type of person who wants to benefit from the misfortunes of others. I feel bad about the whole thing."

special children an opportunity to experience various facets of the arts. Helping Blount with his sponge printing is LeVeta Weatherington of Wahl-Coates School. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

The forum, held in North Pitt High School, was sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Greenville and Pitt County and the Citizens for Excellence and Equity in Education in Pitt County.

When asked why Stokes Elementary School did not receive capital outlay funding, incumbent Ferrell Blount of District 2, Seat B, said a Research Triangle study conducted four years ago and consolidation studies suggested a long-range plan to "close Stokes down."

Changes Proposed For Future Schools

By CLAY DEANHARDT

Pitt County must invest in education immediately if it is to meet the challenges of the 21st century, according to Dr. Glenn Chappell, development officer for the school of agriculture and life sciences at North Carolina State University.

Chappell, a former associate professor in the East Carolina University marketing department, made the remarks Thursday night in a presentation to the Futures Task Force of the Pitt County schools. Educational and community leaders make up the board, which will meet twice in November for final presentations.

Chappell discussed the future of education in three areas: emerging trends, forces of education as it relates such things as demographics and economics, and the effects of these on the Pitt County schools.

Mid-East board Chairman Sam Carson of Bethel, accepted the over-size checks: one for $75,000 from Sen. Bob Martin of Bethel, to be used as a revolving fund to help small businesses on a matching basis; the other, a $55,000 check from Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville, to be used for technical assistance to local governments in the five-county Mid-East area of Pitt, Martin, Beaufort, Bertie and Hertford.

In addition to Martin and Warren, the dinner at the Sheraton Greenville was to honor Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville and Reps. Walter B. Jones Jr. of Farmville, Gene Rogers of Williamston, Howard Chapin of

Three ECU Students Face Charges Of Making, Selling False Licenses

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

State Department of Motor Vehicles' inspectors and East Carolina University police arrested three students on felony charges of making and selling fake N.C. driver's licenses Thursday afternoon.

The arrests resulted from a joint investigation that began after officers received a tip through the university's "Crime Buster Line" which allows people to report information on possible crimes. Bill Brinson, assistant district supervisor for the DMV's license and theft section, said.

Brinson identified the three charged — all 18-years-old and residents of Umstead Dorm on the ECU campus — as Jason Todd Gentel of Greensboro, Mark Wesley Cassidy of Asheboro and James Douglas Armstrong II of Oak Ridge.

Brinson, who said Armstrong will be 19 on Saturday and Cassidy will be 19 on Oct. 24, said the three men were charged with six felony counts each of making and selling fictitious driver's licenses. In addition, Brinson said a misdemeanor charge of giving false information for a special identification card issued to him last April was lodged against Gentel.

Gentel was released under a $600 bond, while Cassidy and Armstrong were released on bonds of $500 each, pending first appearance hearings scheduled today in Pitt County District Court.

Brinson said the men could receive up to three years in prison on each of the felony charges if convicted. The misdemeanor charge against Gentel carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail.

Brinson, who said Gentel and Cassidy are room-mates, said the three students had been making the fake licenses in their dorm rooms for use by people under 21, who used them as identification to purchase alcoholic beverages.

School Foundation Gets IRS Approval

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Educational Foundation Board of Directors was informed that the foundation has been recognized by the Internal Revenue Service as a non-profit, tax-exempt organization. But, it was cautioned about the responsibilities that accompany this status.

In its quarterly meeting Thursday, Phil Dixon, attorney for the Pitt County Board of Education, said, "You have to be careful what you do" as a non-profit organization. The foundation cannot be active in politics or campaigns, he said. The key is to avoid "any appearance of impropriety."

The foundation was initially conceived in 1986 to provide enrichment and supplementary funds to school children and staff members, said school Superintendent Eddie West. The school board authorized the emergence of the foundation in November 1986, and its members served as interim foundation board members.

A membership drive and a submitted application for a Z. Smith Reynolds Grant are among current projects of the foundation, said Betty Speir, coordinator. Community roasts and other activities also have been planned for each attendance area to draw funds for that particular area.

The roasts and membership funds will be used to provide money for teachers to use in classroom projects.

To ease the frustration of businesses and industries that often are solicited from individual schools, West said he will organize a committee of school principals to identify franchises willing to donate to the schools through the foundation. Also, other resources through insurance companies, volunteer and statewide organizations will be solicited for contributions.

Ideas from the Chapel Hill-Carrboro school system's Margin of Excellence Program were shared with board members as ideas for fundraising and policy making.

As of Oct. 13, the foundation's balance was at $129,834, of which $125,503 was designated for the Minges-Farley Athletic Complex.

In its January meeting, the board will discuss the use of student groups for the foundation.

School Activities

The classes of Ms. Clifton, Doris Morgan, Billie Norman, Linda James and Carol Whitaker discussed fire safety, techniques of stop, drop and roll and purposes of the fire suit. Pamphlets, emergency telephone numbers and safety stickers were distributed to the students.

Spring Mexico Trip

Arrangements are under way with the Puebla Mission for participants to live with Mexican families. Field trips to public schools and other sites of interest in the area are planned.

Applications and information are available in Speight Building, R-154. Application deadline is Dec. 7.

Group Organized

A committee of 11 retired faculty members has organized the East Carolina University Retired Faculty Association, with the first meeting set for Oct. 27 from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. in Room 244 of Mendenhall Student Center.

The association's bylaws state that the club will provide opportunities for retired faculty members to interact with the university, with the community and with each other.

The association will strive to provide and maintain relationships between the university and retired faculty, which will benefit both parties through the sharing of mutual interests, services and social activities, according to the bylaws.

ECU Rehabilitation Unit Expands As Funds Grow

By GEORGE A. THREEWITTS
ECU News Bureau
A graduate education program for rehabilitation and substance abuse counselors and vocational evaluators at East Carolina University gets thousands of dollars in federal grants and is expanding its offerings to attract more students.

This fall the department of rehabilitation studies in the ECU School of Allied Health Sciences received grants totaling $98,000. The awards, from the Rehabilitation Services Administration in the U.S. Department of Education, pushed the total amount of federal funding to the program, during a 20-year period, to over $1.5 million.

But despite this support, there is still a shortage of rehabilitation professionals. As rehabilitation and treatment centers for the physically disabled and substance abusers expand and as companies develop programs to help their employees with physical, mental and substance abuse problems, the need for trained counselors becomes even greater.

"We haven't been able to fill the need in North Carolina for all the openings that occur," says Dr. Sheldon C. Downes, professor and chairman of the department of rehabilitation studies.

"One of our main goals is to be able to fill these needs," says Downes, whose program at ECU is one of three in the state. The other two are at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and at Appalachian State University.

Currently there are 38 graduate students at ECU getting specialized training in the areas of rehabilitation counseling and vocational evaluation. About 400 students have received master's degrees from the two-year program since 1967 when courses were first offered.

Graduates of the program work as counselors and vocational evaluators in both the public and private sectors. Their work can range from helping find the right jobs for people with mental and physical handicaps to helping people overcome a dependence on alcohol and other drugs.

"Our students are trained to deal with any condition that prevents a person from working," Downes says.

This year the department was approved for expansion of its program to include rehabilitation counseling for substance abuse. Dealing specifically with drug- and alcohol-related problems, the new area of study will begin next spring and will be a joint effort by the department and the campus Alcohol and Drug Program.

Downes said the program will train professionals to work with companies that offer employee assistance programs. Employee assistance programs provide counseling and therapy for employees whose work may be affected by a wide assortment of problems. The problems, according to Downes, could be related to physical ailments or emotional distress but the problems that are beginning to affect employees the most are those associated with alcohol and drug addiction.

ECU's was among the first 15 programs in the nation to be accredited for professional training and rehabilitation counseling. Today there are 78 programs at schools throughout the country which are approved and accredited by the Council on Rehabilitation Specialists.

ECU got its first grant to plan for a new program in rehabilitation counseling in 1966. The first grant to support the program was made the following year and a second degree track in vocational evaluation was added in 1980.

Faculty in addition to Downes include Dr. Paul P. Austin, a rehabilitation counseling professor and Dr. Stephen Thomas, director of the program track in vocational evaluation.

Downes said that the growing need for rehabilitation counselors and job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Residents in the same area hit by a devastating Oct. 1 earthquake were jolted awake early today by another tremor.

No damages or injuries were reported in the 1:11 a.m. aftershock, which was felt in Whittier, Montebello, Long Beach and downtown Los Angeles.

"We got about a dozen calls from area residents," said Whittier police dispatcher Scott Eldridge. "There was no damage that we are aware of. Tell the people to calm down and go back to bed."

The shaker measured 3.0 on the Richter scale and was centered in the area of the Oct. 1 quake, said Robert Finn of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, where ground movement is measured.

It was the 29th aftershock registering 3.0 or above since the 6.1 magnitude Oct. 1 quake, centered in suburban Whittier, he said. The largest of the aftershocks, measuring 5.5, hit the area Oct. 4.

The Oct. 1 quake, which was centered in Whittier, and its aftershocks were blamed for seven deaths and $213.6 million in damages.

President Reagan has declared Los Angeles and Orange counties a federal disaster area, making residents eligible for relief funds.

The Richter scale measures ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude; a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

Discrimination Economic Issue

Former U.S. Rep. Shirley Chisholm put her finger on the real issue of discrimination against women in the workplace.

The issue is not competition with men, it is economic necessity and utilization of resources, Chisholm told an audience in Greenville.

In the 1980s a significant number of women work, not necessarily because they seek fulfillment, but because they are financially forced to. This group includes single women who support themselves as well as single parents and married women whose income is vital to the family's standard of living.

These women provide an important slice of the financial pie — for companies, for families, and, through tax dollars, for communities. Their services and talents also provide an increasingly significant resource base for these same factions. Discrimination against this work force squanders this resource and damages its economic value.

It also sharply contributes to societal problems that further drain community and national resource bases.

For example, many single-parent homes headed by women live at or near the poverty level. Many are dependent on welfare and food stamp programs to fill their families' needs. Financial discrimination against these single parents who are women — in the form of lower wages than their male counterparts — effectively weakens the nation's economic structure by deepening, in some cases, this dependence on assistance programs. The impact of discrimination then becomes a societal problem, complete with the tax burden of providing help.

The impact of inflation has forced the same importance on the woman's role in the two-income family. In many cases, a two-income family depends on the second income of the working woman to attain a standard of living beyond the basics. Without two incomes, home ownership is merely a dream and college funds for children are impossible. Financial discrimination against these working women effectively lowers the nation's standard of living and cheats those who want the essentials — and a little more.

The same concepts apply to single women who work to pay bills.

In addition, employment discrimination against women — in the form of flawed hiring practices and denial of advancement — wastes the contribution these individuals can make.

Women want and need fair economic treatment and job satisfaction. Discrimination denies these requirements, and Chisholm is correct to label this the real issue involved in discrimination.

A Full Life

For Alf Landon there was nothing to cheer about in 1936. He was the Republican nominee for president of the United States opposing Franklin D. Roosevelt. At the time the nation was locked into a gruelling depression — one which the public blamed on the last GOP president, Herbert Hoover. Roosevelt had not solved the problem in his first term as president. He had, however, offered the country hope of better things to come. There was nothing Landon or anyone else could have said or done to oust Roosevelt from the White House, but the race had to be made.

Election night was a disaster. Landon carried only two states — Maine and Vermont. After, he went on to what should have been political oblivion. The former presidential candidate never faded away, though. He survived as a political advisor and made it to that magical mark of 100 years old.

Landon's perspective on his dismal defeat was good. "They might have forgotten me if it had been close," Landon said of the 1936 election. He received only eight electoral votes, the lowest in history.

He never ran for public office again, but was often in contact with prominent GOP candidates.

There have been several disastrous presidential campaigns since Landon's but his is still remembered as the most devastating.

No one will ever know what kind of president he would have made. Obviously he would have approached the nation's extremely severe economic problems. Throughout his term he would have been consumed with the growing war threat in Europe and the Far East. Would he have handled the two overriding disasters of the 20th century differently? The answer is lost in history. It was Roosevelt's destiny to lead during the era and Landon returned to Kansas.

Landon died this week after having as full a life as anyone could have. His name recalls another era and one of the worse times for national tranquility that our nation has ever known.

Outcome Uncertain For Peace Plan

MEXICO CITY — Two months after the signing of an agreement for which Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Tuesday won the Nobel Peace Prize, the Central American governments and insurgencies involved have made greater progress than expected toward complying with the accord.

But not quite a month before the regional cease-fire is to take effect, it is still not clear whether the compliance will amount to more than collectively going through the motions of peacemaking and actually end the rebellions, repression and economic destruction that have devastated Central America.

And, in one of the numerous details that the plan seems to have glossed over, no provisions have yet been made to finance such endeavors as an international verification commission and a Central American parliament.

The main cause for hope is that the peace plan, largely authored by Arias, has generated momentum since it was unexpectedly signed in Guatemala Aug. 7 by the presidents of Nicaragua, El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala and Costa Rica.

In reaching such an important agreement by themselves, the signatories assumed a vital stake in the accord's success — or at least in the appearance of complying with it — and demonstrated a growing sense of regional independence from the United States.

"The United States must come to terms with the fact that a motley collection of Central American countries is finally coming of age," a European ambassador in the region said recently. "It is an agonizing process."

On the other hand, a major cause for pessimism is that, as a diplomat in Honduras put it, "this agreement is not underwritten by enough good faith or compulsion to make people comply." Instead, he said, "success is based on all the countries doing a fairly complicated ballet, and gradually little bits and pieces will get out of kilter."

Despite some early opposition from rebel groups fighting the governments of Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala, and the apparent reluctance of Honduras, all the Central American parties concerned have now formally accepted the accord.

Since the signing of the plan appeared to catch the Reagan administration by surprise, the White House has groped for a policy reconciling a political need to show support for the peace plan with the apparent aim of ousting Nicaragua's Sandinista government. One result has been growing doubts about the administration's ability to keep funding the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras.

So far, the main accomplishments under the peace plan have been the creation of national reconciliation commissions in all of the countries except Honduras, the initiation of formal peace talks between government and rebel representatives from El Salvador and Guatemala, and a political opening in Nicaragua.

The Sandinistas have restored some freedom of the press, allowed exiled church leaders to return, released imprisoned foreigners accused of counterrevolutionary activities and opened greater space for opposition political parties. They have done nothing so far to diminish the control of the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front over the armed forces and state-security apparatus. Nor have they taken any action suggesting a change in their view that the front ranks as the country's revolutionary "vanguard" and occupies a place in society on a par with the state.

To further demonstrate compliance with the peace plan, the Sandinistas have called limited unilateral cease-fires in three specific areas of the country and have been seeking contacts with Contra field commanders regarding an amnesty. But they have refused to talk to the Contra leadership about a negotiated cease-fire or other peace provisions on grounds that these leaders are puppets of the Reagan administration. The pact does not require governments to meet with armed opposition groups.

In El Salvador, President Jose Napoleon Duarte last week held unprecedented talks in the capital with leaders of a rebel alliance made up of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front and the Democratic Revolutionary Front. They agreed to set up two joint commissions to seek a negotiated cease-fire and agreements on other provisions of the Arias peace plan. But the Oct. 4-5 meeting produced no softening of the rebels' fundamental demand for participation in a "transition" coalition government or of Duarte's insistence that the rebels abandon violence and join the political process.

Duarte said that if the cease-fire commission was unable to reach an agreement by Nov. 5, he would declare a unilateral cease-fire to comply with the peace plan's provision for Central American truces within 90 days of signing.

In Madrid, representatives of the Guatemalan government and a rebel coalition called the Guatemalan National Revolution Union last week held the first formal peace talks in that country's 26-year-old guerrilla war, but reached no agreement beyond pledges to study each other's proposals.

Both sides called the Oct. 7-9 talks a first step toward peace but declined to say if they would meet again. The talks appeared to founder on the government's demand that the estimated 2,000 rebels lay down their arms and the guerrillas' refusal to do so without a broad political agreement.

In Honduras, there has been no sign yet of moves to comply with the peace plan's prohibition on rebels' use of one state's territory for "aggression" against another — a provision that Nicaragua says requires the removal of Contra bases and other facilities from Honduran soil.

El Salvador, meanwhile, has formally demanded the dismantling of Salvadoran rebels' installations and support activities in Managua and an end to aid that the Salvadoran government says is flowing to the rebels from the Sandinistas.

Ascertaining compliance to the peace plan's provisions is the province of an International Commission for Verification and Follow-up, composed of 13 Latin American foreign ministers and the secretaries general or representatives of the United Nations and Organization of American states.

The foreign ministers represent the five Central American signatories, the members of the Contadora Group — Mexico, Panama, Venezuela and Colombia — and a "support group" consisting of Peru, Uruguay, Argentina and Brazil.

No provisions have been made to fund this commission, which presumably must travel extensively and marshal considerable resources to discharge its duties.

Nor has there been any commitment to financing the establishment of a Central American parliament, which is to be set up next year in Guatemala with 20 elected representatives from each of the five signatories of the plan.

Costa Rican Vice President Jorge Manuel Dengo acknowledged recently that the Central American states "will have to make a big economic sacrifice" to implement the peace plan. He said he hoped that contributions would come from the European Parliament, the model for the new Central American body, and "maybe from U.S. civic groups."

The awarding of the Nobel Peace Prize to Arias could make that quest for funds somewhat easier.

Plan Headed For Sandinista Victory

In August the four democratic presidents of Central America and dictator Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua signed a peace plan. Its objective is to move the struggle for democracy from the battlefield to the political arena, and in the process achieve peace-peace as a result of democratization and not merely as a result of ending war.

This is how Central Americans understand the plan, and why the Nicaraguan resistance accepted it. But now the United States is moving to stop aid to the resistance, without conditioning that action on Sandinista compliance with the accord. Such a policy will result in military victory for the Soviet-backed Sandinista army and have inescapable consequences for Central America and the United States.

When I left Nicaragua in May 1982, La Prensa was publishing, Archbishop Obando y Bravo was speaking over Radio Catolica, opposition parties were functioning and some 3,000 political prisoners were held in jail. Two months before that, the state of emergency had been re-imposed on the country. As Ortega explained to a restricted Cabinet meeting: "The worst mistake the Sandinista Directorate has made since July 1979 was the lifting of the state of emergency after Somoza's downfall; we now have an excuse to reinstate it and the military means to enforce it." Within 60 days the restricted liberties that existed before March 1982 were all but officially scrapped. I made the decision to leave the revolution, convinced that totalitarian rule and Soviet-bloc ties were deeply rooted in the Sandinista group that had betrayed the democratic revolution for which I had struggled six years and endured jail, torture and exile.

I left my country with two haunting memories. One was of a military maneuver I witnessed, involving T-55 Soviet tanks, Soviet helicopters and Soviet heavy artillery, all directed by a Cuban general. The other was of the secret party-to-party agreement between the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the Sandinista National Liberation Front, first signed in 1980 and renewed year after year. But I left with faith in the hemispheric democracies, which had been instrumental in bringing down the Somoza regime.

Now I see that to comply with the peace plan, the Sandinistas reopen La Prensa, let Cardinal Obando speak over Radio Catolica, talk to opposition political parties and talk of freeing a few of the by now 8,000 political prisoners and maybe even of lifting the state of emergency. And I cannot help remembering what I lived through back in 1982. The party-to-party agreement has been renewed for the seventh consecutive year, and there has been a breathtaking increase in the Sandinista Soviet-supplied arsenal. Unless Ortega thinks he lacks the military means to enforce it, he will find another excuse to reinstate the state of emergency for a third time.

This peace plan provides for ending war by two stages: first, an effective cease-fire, simultaneous with democratization measures and the halting of military aid to insurgent forces on Nov. 7; second, the laying down of arms by the resistance, once security agreements have been reached by the five governments, according to Point 7 of the peace plan.

This implies maintenance of the resistance as a viable military force until the second stage is under way.

Alfredo Cesar is a former revolutionary official in Nicaragua who is now a member of the directorate of the Nicaraguan resistance. He resigned as president of the Central Bank of Nicaragua in May 1982.

Strength For Today

Some people appear to have lustrous personalities or careers. Most of us are run-of-the-mill folks. If we do not have a lustrous personality there is nothing we can do about it, but the encouraging factor in the situation is that most of the people we know do not have anything lustrous about them.

The non-lustrous life can be made as satisfactory and peaceful as can the most lustrous life. In fact, those who hold high positions are seldom happy. There has been a lot of contention in the world by people seeking crowns or aiming for positions high in stake but the universal experience has been that when they got these honors they were no more happy than they had been before.

We can be happy with lustre or no lustre if we set about to make ourselves so.

Furniture Industry Optimistic

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — More than 40,000 people have jammed into High Point for the semiannual Southern Furniture Market, filling every hotel room and parking space for miles around.

The market opened Thursday with the usual crush of traffic and pedestrians intent on getting to the 150 buildings housing 1,600 exhibitors of furniture accessories.

And market officials say they expect the orders from this market to keep furniture factories running at capacity into next year.

G. Bruce Miller, president of the Southern Furniture Market Center, said the number of buyers registered for the fall market was up significantly over past years.

"We've registered 2,500 more buyers for this market than at any other one," he said in an interview. "It would be hard to believe that all of those people are coming just to look around."

"There's a very high level of confidence in the minds of the exhibitors," Miller said. "Big money is being spent preparing for this market."

Bernard Wampler, chairman of the sponsoring FFMAS, said the outlook is bright for the furniture industry. "This should be a strong market," he said. "Retail sales are good and most manufacturers are running straight out."

Fred Starr, president of Thomasville Furniture Industries, also predicted an excellent market.

"Business is as good, across the country and in all geographical areas, as we've seen in years," he said.

The market, which ends Oct. 23, is the largest of its kind in the world. The two furniture markets are worth nearly $100 million annually to the area economy.

FFMAS estimates that each market visitor — including buyers, exhibitors and designers — spends an average of $161 a day.

Perhaps more importantly, business generated at the market translates into furniture sales and jobs at more than 700 furniture factories in North Carolina.

The furniture industry is the state's third largest employer, with more than 85,000 production-line workers. According to the state Employment Security Commission, furniture and fixture employment in the state was up nearly 6,000 in July over the same period a year ago.

North Carolina produces about 14 percent of the furniture sold in the world.

Industry officials attribute the strong business climate to several factors.

Study Says Economy OK If Tobacco Cut

CHICAGO (AP) — Movement toward a tobacco-free society would produce neither great economic gain nor loss, despite extreme predictions from those involved in public debate over the issue, a policy analyst says.

"The economic impacts of a tobacco-free society would be modest and of far less consequence than the principal implication: a significantly enriched quality and quantity of life," said the analyst, Kenneth E. Warner.

Warner, chairman of public health policy and administration at the University of Michigan, said the health toll of tobacco use is well known, but the enormity of the toll seldom was appreciated.

"It is worth reflecting that cigarette smoking, alone, causes more premature deaths than do all the following together: acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS), cocaine, heroin, alcohol, fire, automobile accidents, homicide and suicide," he said in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Tobacco and related industries generated $31.5 billion of the U.S. gross national product in 1983 and gave rise to 710,000 jobs, Warner said.

Also, tobacco products produced $13.5 billion in tax revenue that year, said Warner, citing a study commissioned by the Washington, D.C.-based Tobacco Institute.

But the economic havoc predicted by the tobacco industry for a nation that kicks the habit would not occur because the move would be gradual, he said.

While some economic hardships would be inevitable in the transition, Americans would generate other jobs and other industries by spending money on other goods, he said.

He cited a 1986 news article in which Tobacco Institute Vice President Walker Merryman was quoted as saying, "If the industry would vanish tomorrow, most would find alternative work."

Opponents of tobacco have cited the enormous health-care costs of fighting smoking-related illnesses such as lung ailments and heart disease.

The Congressional Office of Technology Assessment reported the premature death and excess illness of smokers cost $22 billion in health care and $43 billion in productivity in 1985.

But Warner said freedom from tobacco would have its costs, too — notably a heavier burden on the Social Security system as people lived longer.

A recent study by Stanford University researchers indicated the trend away from tobacco nationwide ultimately would cost the federal government hundreds of billions of dollars.

"There's really no good side for Social Security for quitting smoking," said one of those researchers, economics graduate student Jeffery Sundberg.

"It's simply a matter of people living longer costing the system more money, no matter why they live longer," he said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Sundberg and his colleagues examined the wages and the vital statistics of 100,000 men and 100,000 women born in the early 1920s and reported their findings in May through the Cambridge, Mass.-based National Bureau of Economic Research.

Survey Ranks Duke, UNC-CH Near Top, Axes ECU

By The Associated Press
Duke and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill rank among the 11 best universities in the country, while Wake Forest is the top comprehensive school in the Southern and border states, a new survey of college presidents says.

The survey by U.S. News & World Report ranks Duke seventh among national universities, followed by UNC, which is tied for 11th with New York's Cornell University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Duke fell from sixth and UNC fell from ninth in the same survey conducted in 1985.

"We certainly feel that Duke's the best university in the country, and it's gratifying other university presidents rank us as one of the best," H. Keith H. Brodie, president of Duke, said through a spokesman Thursday. "Carolina has consistently appeared in every ranking of this kind that I've seen," said Jay M. Robinson, vice president of public affairs for UNC-CH. "We've always come out quite nicely."

At Wake Forest, cultivating academic quality has meant "a deliberate decision to keep the size of our student body small enough to offer more individual attention" despite a steady increase in the number of applicants, said Sandra C. Connor, director of public information at the university.

Wake Forest, which has 3,459 undergraduates and a combined enrollment of 5,177, did not make the Top 10 in the survey two years ago.

UNC-Charlotte slipped from 3rd to a 9th-place tie in the comprehensive universities class, while East Carolina and Appalachian State universities fell out of the Top 10. They had been tied for 7th and 9th respectively in 1985.

Davidson College is 15th among the nation's top 25 national liberal arts colleges. Williams College in Massachusetts was first.

The results, based on a survey of college presidents, are to be published as the cover story in the Oct. 26 issue.

Schools are ranked in nine categories depending on their location and the kind of programs they offer. National universities, for instance, are major research institutions that grant many doctoral degrees. Liberal arts colleges concentrate on undergraduate programs. College presidents are asked to select the schools that provide the best undergraduate educations in their schools' category.

This "best colleges" survey — the third the magazine has run since 1983 — has been criticized recently in academic circles as superficial and unscientific.

The Chronicle of Higher Education, a national education journal, recently wrote that some college presidents have objected bitterly to the survey, saying it requires them to rank institutions they know little about.

Davidson College's director of college relations, Jerry Stockdale, says Davidson, while grateful for the honor, has "some mixed feelings about this type of competition that is more of a popularity contest than a true measure of institutional value."

He points out, for instance, that Davidson was included among the best colleges in 1983 and 1987 but not in the 1985 survey.

"Has the educational experience at Davidson fluctuated that way? I think the answer is no," he said. "The quality has remained steadfast and in fact has improved."

U.S. News Editor David Gergen responded to criticism about the survey in a letter to the Chronicle.

There's no perfect way to conduct such a survey, he said, but "after consulting with a number of leading educators, it has been our view that university presidents appear to be the best informed judges of the relative merits of various schools."

UNCC officials agreed that the rankings aren't precise measurements, but school spokesman Ken Sanford says they believe the fact UNCC is repeatedly named in such surveys attests to its academic quality. UNCC was recently named by Money magazine as one of the country's top 10 college buys.

Residents Opposed To Move

BUXTON, N.C. (AP) — Hatteras Island residents say they are unhappy with a National Academy of Sciences recommendation that the 117-year-old Hatteras Lighthouse be moved inland away from the threatening waves of the Atlantic Ocean.

"The people here are very, very upset without exception," Carol Dillon, owner of the Outer Banks Motel in Buxton and past president of the Hatteras Island Business Association, said Thursday. "There is not an islander here who wants it moved."

The National Academy of Sciences released a report Thursday saying that relocation was the safest and cheapest way of protecting the lighthouse, which, at 208 feet, is the nation's tallest.

"I think it should not be moved, period," said Ray Couch, owner of Red Drum Service Center in Buxton. "If they do go ahead with it, the thing will probably fall apart and it will be one hell of a mess for somebody to clean up. If it doesn't work, we've lost a monument which is a part of our heritage."

"What if it falls?" said Edgar Hooper, owner of the Lighthouse View Motel. "All we'll have then is a bunch of bricks on the road."

Thomas B. Gray, a Dare County commissioner representing Hatteras Island, said the lighthouse is "too precious a thing to gamble with." He said the board of commissioners might ask congressmen to fight to withhold funds for moving the lighthouse, adding that lobbying pressure might have been behind the recommendation.

"I have a very strong feeling that this group has been unduly influenced by people whose profession would benefit from moving it," he said. "I feel it was a case where the deck was stacked to begin with."

The National Park Service last spring was on the verge of getting $5 million in federal funds to build the seawall when a group of engineers convinced officials they should take another look at moving the lighthouse inland.

"We're going to give the academy's report prime consideration in deciding how best to protect this important cultural resource," Robert M. Baker, the park's service southeast regional director, said in a statement released Thursday.

Baker was not available for comment. But when public affairs officer James M. Howard Jr. was asked whether Baker meant that the park service was leaning heavily toward moving the lighthouse, Howard said, "That's what I would say after hearing what the boss had to say yesterday."

Howard cautioned that the report was only preliminary. But he also said that the park service might begin plans for moving the lighthouse before the group's final report is issued in April.

The lighthouse was more than 1,500 feet from the ocean when it was built in 1870 to warn ships of the treacherous Diamond Shoals, nicknamed the "Graveyard of the Atlantic." But beach erosion has brought the ocean to about 160 feet from the edge of one of North Carolina's most famous landmarks.

Retreating from the sea is a safer option than trying to fight erosion, the 20-page report concluded.

"The committee understands full well that the average layperson will find it difficult to understand that moving the lighthouse is going to entail less risk than building a seawall," said academy staff member James J. Reisa.

IN THE STATE

School Suit

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has refused to hear an appeal of a lower court's decision dismissing a lawsuit by some Robeson County parents who want to force the merger of five public school systems in the county.

Eric Prevatte, a spokesman for Citizens After Responsible Education, which filed the suit, said the state Supreme Court's decision Tuesday was expected. But he called the court's refusal to comment on the suit proof of "political cronyism" between judges and legislators.

"We have so many political fellows of legislators who've been given judgeships that (there's) political cronyism in the courts," he said.

Robeson County has a county public school system along with city school systems in Lumberton, St. Pauls, Fairmont and Red Springs. In May 1986, 32 parents filed the lawsuit claiming that the five school systems are unconstitutional because they result in unequal funding from state and local governments and inferior education for students.

Oyster Season

VARNUM, N.C. (AP) — Unusually high water at low tide thwarted the first day of oyster season as oyster gatherers returned to the docks with little to show for a cold morning on the water.

The oyster beds of the Lockwood Folly River are some of the best known places in the state to gather oysters by hand, but Thursday the tide never dropped enough for anyone to do more than grab a few oysters above the water.

Despite the slim pickings, people said the state made the right decision in opening the season in the southern half of the state Oct. 15 for the first time rather than the traditional date of Oct. 1.

Bakker Tour

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Fallen evangelists Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker have scheduled two Virginia shows on an upcoming national tour, but civic center officials say it remains to be seen whether many people will pay up to $20 to see the couple.

"I have no feel for it at all," an assistant director at Norfolk's Scope auditorium, C.E. Gilbert, said Thursday when asked whether he thinks the Bakkers will sell out.

The other Bakker appearance in Virginia was scheduled for the Roanoke Civic Center, where manager Bob Chapman said, "We're shooting for a minimum of 5,000, but we're hoping to get 10,622," a capacity crowd.

C&C Entertainment of Camden, S.C., is promoting the Bakker tour, but officials said details of the show and the guests who will accompany the Bakkers have yet to be worked out.

Crash Suit

RALEIGH (AP) — A lawsuit over the deaths of two Raleigh teen-agers in a 1980 car crash could trigger similar cases and cost taxpayers millions of dollars if the state is held liable, Atty. Gen. Lacy H. Thornburg says.

But an attorney for the parents of the two girls, in arguments before the state Supreme Court Wednesday, said the court should uphold a ruling that the state Department of Transportation must pay the parents $200,000 because the accident could have been prevented if there had been a guardrail along Newton Road in North Raleigh.

The court heard arguments in what will be the final chapter of an eight-year battle by Andree T. Hochheiser, the mother of the two girls, who says the state was negligent in failing to identify the location as hazardous and making it safe by installing a guardrail.

Warehouse Fire

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A fire at a plumbing supply warehouse near downtown Fayetteville raged out of control for at least an hour, causing continuous explosions in the building and eventually destroying it, fire officials say.

No injuries were reported, but the building owned by Noland Plumbing, Heating and Air Conditioning Co. was destroyed in the Thursday night blaze.

Paddling

RALEIGH (AP) — The principal of a Raleigh Christian school was found guilty of child abuse Thursday for paddling a girl until she was bruised, but final judgment in the case was withheld on the recommendation of the prosecutor.

The prosecutor told the judge she thought the principal had not meant to harm the girl.

Wake District Court Judge Joyce A. Hamilton entered a "prayer for judgment continued" for Michael L. Hiltibidal after she found Hiltibidal guilty of the misdemeanor charge. Defense attorney Gerald L. Bass said the PJC would not count as a conviction against Hiltibidal, principal of elementary grades at the fundamentalist Raleigh Christian Academy.

The charge stemmed from the May 26 paddling of a second-grader, April Joy Burnette, 9. Hiltibidal acknowledged in testimony that he had struck the girl five times with an inch-thick wooden paddle but said he had been "shocked" to learn the punishment had left a bruise.

Task Force Says Offshore Phosphate Deposits Could Be Mined Profitably

RALEIGH (AP) — A joint state and federal task force says North Carolina's huge offshore phosphate deposits could be profitable for mining in five years, but the preliminary report does not consider the costs of environmental protection or developing new mining technologies.

Federal officials set up the task force to assess the potential for mining some of the estimated 100 million metric tons of phosphate ore on the floor of the Atlantic Ocean between Wilmington and Morehead City. Phosphates are a major component of most fertilizers.

The first phase of that effort, a $175,000 study of the economic feasibility of offshore mining, was presented to the task force Thursday in a preliminary report. A final, revised copy of that report is expected to be completed by Oct. 31.

"As of 1992, he's saying that it's economically feasible, based on an 8 percent rate of return," E. Evan Brunson, task force coordinator for the state, said of the draft report. "The task force will look at this report and make recommendations."

The task force expects to recommend whether to continue the study at its next meeting Dec. 4, Brunson said. If it is continued, he said, further studies would analyze the potential environmental impact from offshore mining as well as the technical feasibility of such development.

"We didn't at all ask him to look at the environmental impacts," Brunson said.

Offshore phosphate deposits have never been mined before, the report states, but such deposits could become more attractive as high quality ore from inland mines becomes scarcer.

Historically, the United States has been the largest producer of phosphates, with 11 mines in Florida and North Carolina accounting for nearly 90 percent of the nation's production. Texasgulf Chemicals Co. operates the only mine in North Carolina, but that facility near Aurora is one of the largest in the world.

Florida's existing mines are expected to start running out of ore in the 1990s, the report said, and that should result in higher phosphate prices. In projecting that offshore mining could pay off, the report assumes that phosphate prices will increase to $27 per ton by 1992. Phosphates currently sell for about $22 a ton — the lowest level since the early 1970s.

"Economic feasibility is very sensitive to phosphate rock prices," the report said. "While the project is economically feasible given an 8 percent hurdle rate, phosphate rock prices will clearly have to rebound from current levels."

Some of the 10 task force members and advisers, however, raised serious doubts about some of the assumptions on which the report is based. For instance, the report depends on the accuracy of limited sampling of the phosphate deposits, said Stanley R. Riggs, a geology professor at East Carolina University in Greenville who collected most of the existing information on the deposits.

"A mining company would not use this kind of data to do this kind of analysis," Riggs told the committee. "It's not the kind of data you would use to borrow money from a bank to develop a mine with."

Riggs also questioned whether mining wastes could be dumped safely on the ocean floor. Strong, unpredictable currents caused by tropical storms and northeasters could quickly move mining spoils and harm coastal fisheries, he said.

"The physical dynamics of the system out there are severe," he said. "They are more important than addressed in this study. ... One of the things that's really going to hold this study up is this disposal problem, which is the biggest potential environmental problem."

But study organizers said future shortages of phosphates might make a mining operation profitable enough to overcome such difficulties.

"If I was betting on this ... I would say the odds are that this will happen within my lifetime," Brunson said after the meeting. "The real call on this is the Department of Interior — because it's federal waters, it's federal money and it's federal minerals. But I suspect they wouldn't move ahead, unless the state agreed to move ahead."

Reagan Wisecrack Challenges Sanford's Intelligence

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate debate over the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Bork does not begin formally until Monday, but a preliminary skirmish on the Senate floor already is causing one member to warn that emotional scars could last long after the war ends.
Arguments over Bork and the tactics of lobbying groups erupted in the Senate on Thursday, with lawmakers signaling that Bork's impending defeat will have no bearing on the intensity of the debate.

President Reagan helped pour oil on the fire, wisecracking earlier in the day that Sen. Terry Sanford, who responded for Democrats to Reagan's pro-Bork television address on Wednesday, may not be very intelligent. Sanford is the former president of Duke University.

And conservative groups fanned the flames by starting a new drive for Bork's confirmation, complete with a fund-raising appeal. This, even though 54 senators in the 100-member Senate already have announced their opposition to the nomination.
"Maybe this whole thing's gotten out of hand," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said at one point during Thursday's debate.
The arguments began with a mini-debate between Dole and Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., over whether the vote should take place Tuesday, as Democrats wanted, or Wednesday, as Dole proposed.

During the mini-donnybrook, Byrd made blistering remarks regarding Reagan's remarks about Sanford.
Byrd said it shouldn't be surprising to hear Reagan questioning the intelligence of Sanford, since the president "grossly underestimated the intelligence of the American people" in the Iran arms-for-hostages affair. Reagan, he said, should "try to restrain himself."

Sanford said Wednesday that senators were "tired of having our intelligence insulted" by such criticisms as Reagan has made. Reagan, asked about that by reporters, said, "Well, there is some debate about what constitutes intelligence." Asked if he were suggesting that Sanford lacked intelligence, Reagan said, "Make your own judgment."

Hours after Reagan's remark, Sanford said "It's petty. He's slipping so much that I'm beginning to feel sorry for him."
Byrd continued an attack he began earlier in the week, by accusing Republicans of delays that could hurt the timetable for the next nominee.

Italian Airliner Crashes In Alps, Killing 37

BARNI, Italy (AP) — An Italian airliner carrying 37 people crashed during a storm in the foothills of the Italian Alps and authorities said today there were no survivors.

Rescue workers located the craft early today on a craggy hillside but thick fog and rough terrain hindered recovery attempts.

"Our first worry was to organize the rescue, but unfortunately it wasn't needed because there are no survivors," said state prosecutor Mario Del Franco, who is heading an investigation into the crash.

Antonio Giacomino, a fire official coordinating recovery operations, said fog was hindering flights of helicopters and the recovery of bodies from the inaccessible hillside at an altitude of about 2,500 feet.

The crash occurred minutes after takeoff Thursday night on a flight from Milan to Cologne, West Germany.

A passenger list released by ATI, a subsidiary of the state-run carrier Alitalia, did not include nationalities, but most if not all of those aboard were believed to be Italian or West German.

The wreckage of the twin-engine turboprop was seen at dawn today in a heavily forested area known for its high cliffs and deep ravines near Barni, about 40 miles north of Milan.

Giacomino said wreckage and bodies were spread over an area of 500 meters. An alpine rescue team had reached the site and had used ropes to lower themselves from hovering helicopters.

The airliner's flight data recorder and cockpit voice recorder, the so-called black boxes, were not immediately found, officials said.

Del Franco said "we will consider all possibilities but at the moment we don't know how and why it happened."

Amara and Franco Villa, owners of the Madonna Refuge, an inn at an altitude of 3,100 feet on Mount Crezzo, said they were eating dinner with their family Thursday night when they heard a loud roar.

They said they rushed to the window and saw "a ball of fire" rise into the air near their inn.

"We were frightened, but we rushed out and we could see an explosion in the valley below, although we could not hear it. It looked like fireworks," said Mrs. Villa.

The Villas' report was consistent with rescue officials' report that the crash occurred at the 2,400-foot level of Mount Crezzo, a mountain that drops off precipitously on one side to Lake Como and its popular resorts near the Swiss border.

Several witnesses reported seeing the aircraft flying abnormally low before the crash. There were also scattered reports that some people saw the plane in flames before the crash, but there was no way to verify those accounts.

"I was in the house when I heard a very strong noise from a motor, like that from a race car," said Anna Maria Conforti, in the town of Onno on the other side of the mountain from Barni.

"I went to the window and saw ... a plane that was flying very low over the roofs of the houses."

The aircraft disappeared from sight, then "I saw some sort of red light ... then I heard an explosion like a thunderclap," said Ms. Conforti, 40.

The plane vanished from radar screens at Milan's Linate Airport at about 7:30 p.m., 15 minutes into its flight north, said Alitalia spokesman Roberto Panico.

Panico said the plane was on a special flight carrying 34 passengers, mostly employees of a German firm. Five of the passengers and the three crewmembers were Italian.

About one minute before the plane went off the radar screens, pilot Lamberto Laine radioed the control tower: "We are in emergency," the Italian news agency ANSA reported, adding that nothing else was heard from the plane.

At the Cologne-Bonn airport, meanwhile, spokesman Hans Ley said relatives of the plane's passengers were told of the crash and that doctors and nurses had been called in to administer sedatives to stricken family members.

The last major crash for Italian commercial aviation was in July 1980, when an Italian DC-9 exploded mysteriously over the Mediterranean, killing 81 people.

At Linate Airport shortly after that plane took off, another aircraft made an emergency landing, saying dangerous ice had formed on its wings. The second plane was identified as a DC-3 from a private Swiss company flying from Venice to Zurich. None of its 26 passengers was hurt, according to officials quoted by ANSA.

Leader Killed In Coup

OUAGADOUGOU, Burkina Faso (AP) — Ousted President Thomas Sankara was shot and killed after his government was overthrown in a coup led by his second-in-command, a well-informed official source said today.

The Burkina Faso source said Sankara and about a dozen other people were killed during the coup. He said they were buried in a cemetery outside this West African capital. The source, who commented on condition of anonymity, provided no more details.

Capt. Blaise Compaore and his Popular Front seized power Thursday and declared today a holiday. The city was quiet today with more soldiers than normal in sight, but a reporter found roadblocks outside the presidential palace unmanned.

Firing was heard outside a military camp Thursday evening after the coup was announced on state radio. It wasn't clear whether the weapons had been fired in combat or in celebration. There were no signs of fighting outside the presidential palace.

Authorities initially said no casualties were reported, but hospital staff said two civilians were killed and four people wounded, including two soldiers.

Coup leader Compaore, who is a former minister of State and Justice, helped Sankara, also an army captain, overthrow Jean-Baptiste Ouedraogo on Aug. 4, 1983.

Residents interviewed noted that because Compaore had been Sankara's second-in-command, few changes were expected.

It was the fourth coup in the last seven years and the fifth since Burkina Faso, formerly called Upper Volta, became independent from France in 1960. Burkina Faso is an impoverished, landlocked country of 105,869 square miles just south of the Sahara Desert.

The "Popular Front of the 15th of October" seized the government to "halt the restoration of neocolonialism being undertaken by the traitor to the revolution," the country's official radio said Thursday, referring to Sankara. The broadcast was monitored in Abidjan, capital of the neighboring Ivory Coast.

Burkina Faso's borders were closed, a 9 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew imposed and Sankara's National Revolutionary Council dissolved, according to a communique read Thursday on the Burkina Faso radio broadcast, monitored in Abidjan.

Compaore said in a communique that representatives from the country's 30 provinces will elect a new president, but the announcement did not set a date for the election. The political policy-making National Council of the Revolution, the presidency, and the secretariat of the grass roots Committee for the Defense of the Revolution were all dissolved.

Mayse Trial

TAYLORSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The trial of Lori Mayse, accused of hiring two relatives to kill her husband, has been delayed seven weeks to give her attorneys more time to prepare her defense.

But attorneys for Mayse's uncle and codefendant, Estil Herman Ward, say they are ready to go to court Nov. 16, the original trial date. However, Alexander County Superior Court Judge William Helms granted motions to reschedule the trial for Jan. 4.

Alexander County sheriff's deputies allege that Mrs. Mayse, 18, paid Ward, 36, and half-brother Hobert Kenneth Adams, 22, $1,000 to kill Robert Daniel Mayse, 19.

CAR-EATING TREES? — A parked car was crushed beneath fallen trees at Clarence Parade in Portsmouth, England, early today after a massive storm swept through southern England. Electrical power was knocked out to London and most of the surrounding countryside. (AP Laserphoto)

Winds Gusting 94 MPH Darken London Area, Killing 4 People

LONDON (AP) — At least four people were killed when a pre-dawn storm with heavy rains and high winds knocked down trees, buildings and power lines, blacking out most of southern England and London, officials said.

The London Weather Center said winds in London gusted to 94 mph, the strongest ever recorded in the capital.

"The best part of London is down (without electricity) but there are some areas in the north (of London) round the Wembley area which have still got some power," said a spokesman for the London Fire Brigade spokesman.

"We are inundated with calls because of trees being blown down," the spokesman added. "We are stretched to the full. We have got no spare resources and we are just doing the best we can," the spokesman said.

Street lights and lights in offices kept on overnight in central London suddenly went out at about 4:20 a.m. today (11:20 p.m. EDT Thursday).

Power was restored in parts of London about three hours later. Mike Bream, a spokesman for the state-run Central Electricity Generating Board, said that restoring power in other areas was "going to be a very big uphill battle."

Bream said most of London and most of the southern counties of Kent, Sussex and Surrey had been hit by the power blackout.

Scotland Yard press officer Maggie Adams said she did not know the specific cause of the power failure but said: "Obviously it's the weather."

Police in the county of Sussex, south of London, said in a statement that the Castle Hotel at Hastings on the south English coast was blown down "like a deck of cards" and that some guests were unaccounted for.

Emergency services rescued people trapped in rubble when an apartment block was blown down at Brighton, another south coast resort, police said.

A falling tree killed two firemen at Highcliff, in southwest England. About 90 elderly people in an old-age home in the same town were rehoused when the roof was blown off the building, authorities said.

Police in the county of Essex, northeast of London, said: "We are stretched to our limits" with calls from the public for emergency help.

MID-EAST GETS CHECKS — Sen. Bob Martin, Mid-East board Chairman Sam Carson and Rep. Ed Warren, hold over-size checks totaling $130,000. ## Mid-East Receives State Checks

Washington, N.C., and Brewster Brown of Bertie County, for their service to the area — "provide an opportunity to talk with them and say 'thank you,'" Carson said.

The Mid-East Commission, with offices in Washington, N.C., provides planning, development and other assistance to the five county governments and to 35 member-municipalities.

As part of the program, the legislators commented on action taken by the last session of the General Assembly and on their feelings about the area's legislative delegation.

Martin called the $55,000 in state money to help Mid-East provide "technical assistance and aid" to local governments in the region "very essential," while Taft said the "areas I'm trying to talk most about are the Albemarle-Pamlico (sounds) estuary ... funding additional research" to help solve such problems as "the red sore disease on fish and crabs," and solid waste management, which he described as "the most important unresolved issue the Legislature has to face over the next five to 10 years."

Brown, the Bertie County freshman legislator, said one of the accomplishments of the legislative session was "matching funds" to help rural fire departments and rescue squads.

He referred to the General Assembly members from the five counties as "one of the strongest delegations ... we've ever had. We work together. We work together and work hard to make sure the northeast is represented."

Chapin agreed. "We work hard for the people of eastern North Carolina. We have a good, strong working relationship."

And Chapin suggested that the General Assembly did its best to support education. "I don't know if we could have done anything else for the schools," he said.

Chapin also said that "running for the Legislature and being in the Legislature is becoming more and more a full-time job."

Jones suggested that one of his interests is in the area of election law changes that would take mud-slinging and political pressure out of future campaigns.

And he cited a bill, passed by the House this year and to be considered by the Senate in 1988, that would place "a cap on running for office" suggesting that it's beyond the means of many qualified candidates to "spend $40,000 or more" to campaign for a seat in the General Assembly.

Rogers, formerly superintendent of the Martin County school system, said: "I think the most important thing to me was getting through this marathon session. That was the greatest accomplishment, I think."

On a more serious note, the first-term representative praised the General Assembly's support for education, including money appropriated to provide scholarships "for future teachers."

Warren, a member of the Appropriations Committee for the past seven years, said 65 percent of the state's $19.2 billion budget goes for education. He also praised action that provided money for scholarships for prospective teachers and a $4 million appropriation earmarked to improve the curriculum at university schools of education which train teachers.

And Warren said, "I take pride in being a member of this delegation."

Schools

"The educational planning process is very much like the marketing planning process in that you have to start that process by looking at the forces that affect everyday lives," Chappell began.

"We need some early warning systems to let us know when trends change so we will be able to respond to the changes in our educational strategies. That is going to become increasingly important as we near the year 2000," he said.

Referring to John Naisbitt's "Megatrends" as his source, Chappell cited 10 trends which will affect the nation in the coming years. Among those are a shift in the economy to an information based society, the realization of global interdependence and reaction to technical trends.

He said the global growth of our economy will lead to a renaissance in languages and cultural assertiveness.

"To be ready for the 21st century, our students will have to be trilingual," he said. "They will need to speak English, Spanish and computer."

Chappell said the greatest challenge education will face in the future is retraining people to work in a society that is shifting from an industrial to an information base.

"Jobs are going to be available in industries we don't even know about," he said. "But the question I have to ask is, will our graduates possess the high-tech skills that will enable them to fill these positions?"

Chappell said there are six sets of forces — demographic, economic, physical, technological, political-legal and socio-cultural — which will affect the future of education.

the building of the original small wooden structure called Farmer's Temple in 1862. Slaves left plantation duties at night to erect the church, a spokesman said.

In 1864, the church was burned by Confederate soldiers during the Civil War and church members met in a masonic lodge. In 1873, Hiram Masonic Lodge and members of the church procured the land needed to build the first AME Zion Church in the town. In 1907, Metropolitan bought the lodge's interest in the property, and the building and land was owned solely by members of the church.

The building project lasted nine years with members working at night to construct the facility.

Goldsboro Moderate Is Challenging Conservative Baptist Leadership

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Rev. Leon Smith visited Greenville recently seeking support in his campaign for the presidency of the North Carolina State Baptist Convention.

Smith, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Goldsboro, is a moderate up for election during the 157th annual Baptist State Convention to be held in Greensboro Nov. 9-11. He and those who agree with him are being challenged by fundamentalists who already control the Southern Baptist Convention nationally. The fundamentalist candidate is the Rev. Ned L. Mathews, pastor of the Parkwood Baptist Church of Gastonia. Another candidate is Ted G. Stone from Durham.

Smith said the battle lines seem to be drawn between Mathews and himself. He does not consider Stone a serious contender. The three are running to succeed William E. Poe of Charlotte, the moderate president who has completed two one-year terms and cannot seek re-election.

Fundamentalists have held control of the presidency of the Southern Baptist Convention, the nation's largest Protestant denomination, since 1979. But moderates have maintained power in many state conventions, including North Carolina's.

Smith said he feels he represents "mainstream Baptists" in this state. "The main issue," he said, "is whether North Carolina Baptists will maintain their historic principles of freedom and liberty for our denomination as opposed to a trend toward credalism and denial of individual freedom for Baptists."

He said he sees his point of view as one which allows each individual Baptist "to interpret his Christian faith and practice according to the dictates of his own prayerful consideration, according to our heritage."

He said the national body of the Southern Baptist denomination has been controlled since 1979 by "those who would like to substitute the traditional mission of our convention with a political movement which is right wing."

He said he believes the emphasis of the church should remain "missions and evangelism" and he believes both are now being hampered by the political nature of the national convention, as is, he believes, the operation of church-supported colleges and universities. He said much of the denomination's Christian education work, including the strength of its Southeastern Baptist Seminary at Wake Forest has, in his opinion, already been hampered by the "shift to the right" of the national convention. Some 20 percent of the Southeastern faculty has left, he said, and "we are losing our brightest students to schools of other denominations," he observes.

He says he believes "a shift back" is possible. He believes he will be elected Nov. 10 in what he calls "the most important presidency election of this century."

Experts Back Robertson On Marriage

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Republican presidential contender Pat Robertson says he and his wife consider their marriage sealed before it was legally registered, that accords with basic religious views, church experts say.

But they say marriage also has wider social obligations — which he met subsequent to it.

The historic, biblical concept is that when a man and woman pledge themselves to each other for life, that mutual promise constitutes the gist of marriage.

"They marry each other," says the Rev. Doug Anderson of Nashville, Tenn., director of the family ministry department of the Southern Baptist Convention to which Robertson belongs. "But it also has public dimensions."

That same, essential view prevails throughout Protestantism, Judaism and Roman Catholicism, despite varying rules about it.

They all hold that the couple, by joint commitment, does the marrying — not the state, church nor any official. These only witness to it.

"In that lifelong vow to each other is where marriage takes place," Anderson said, not via a judge, minister or public record. "The rest is just acting out the commitment, affirming the new reality in the minds of others."

However, the churches also consider the public declaration of marriage necessary, both a reinforcement of it and a responsibility to the community, and disapprove sexual relations until a marriage is publicly avowed.

"Intercourse is not sanctioned outside of this context," Anderson said. "It's a social obligation."

In Jewish tradition in the time of Jesus, it was considered acceptable for couples betrothed to each other — engaged — to have sexual relations prior to the formal marriage celebration.

Robertson's marital history became a political issue after it was disclosed that his first son was conceived several months before he and his wife married legally, Aug. 27, 1954, in Elkton, Md.

He maintains they had committed themselves to each other beforehand and felt married and that the later legalizing of it was just a formality.

Before the legal marriage date was disclosed, he said in an interview with the Washington Post last July,

"We were married, we began, I'm trying to think, it was 33 years ago, March the 22nd, we celebrate, my birthday."

That would be about five months before the legalized marriage.

Since the essence of marriage is considered mutual, personal vows of fidelity to each other, Anderson said "I hear what Pat Robertson is saying in that light. But I wish he'd been a little more forthright."

Keep The Pitcher And Pitch Card

DEAR ABBY: We've been married for three months. Among our wedding gifts was a silver pitcher. On the card was this poem:

"Wedding gifts usually go to the bride

"And you expect them to walk side by side.

"But if you split, and she throws you the broom,

"Then the pitcher automatically goes to the groom."

(There's a hand-drawn picture of a groom throwing a horseshoe at his bride. It's signed: "Good luck, chum!")

My husband put the pitcher and the card on the shelf in the kitchen. I turn the card to the wall when I cook. But he turns it back when he comes in from the barn at noon, then he sits there grinning like a Cheshire cat.

Shall I open the window and let a stiff breeze blow the card and pitcher into the stubble field? I like the pitcher, but not the card. — FARMER'S WIFE IN CLARK COUNTY

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR WIFE: Don't depend on the weather to do the deed. Pitch the card — not the pitcher.

DEAR ABBY: I am a bisexual male, 38, divorced with two children, of whom I have partial custody. My sister and her family used to invite us to swim in their pool, but no more. Why? They're afraid I might contaminate their pool with the AIDS virus!

Of course, this is ridiculous, but what is more ridiculous is the fact that many people, despite all the available information, still think that ALL gays and bisexuals are "automatically" infected with AIDS. (Abby, I have been tested for AIDS every six months and have always tested negative.)

My niece won't even let me hold — let alone kiss — her 3-year-old daughter. My children, who are 7 and 9 years old, want to know why these relatives didn't come to their birthday parties at my home. (They fear that the food and utensils may have been contaminated, no doubt!)

I am heartsick over all of this, and I know I'm not alone. Abby, please keep giving your readers the right information about AIDS.

Thank you very much, and God bless you. — A PITTSBURGH READER

DEAR READER: According to Dr. Mervyn Silverman, president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research: "Even if you were antibody-positive, your sister's behavior is not only inappropriate but insensitive and unnecessary. AIDS cannot be transmitted by sharing eating utensils, hugging, holding, swimming or any other form of casual contact. Study after study has repeatedly demonstrated this fact. This has been confirmed by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta."

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a man who wants me to live with him, yet will give me no definite confirmation of a wedding date? I have known him for three years and love him very much. He tells me that he loves me, but he hasn't asked me to marry him. I love him enough to live with him forever, yet I don't want to throw away years of my life waiting for him. He knows how I feel. — K.G.M. IN TEMPE, ARIZ.

DEAR K.G.: This man knows you love him enough to live with him forever. He says he loves you, but he hasn't as yet found a good reason to marry you. Time is precious and irreplaceable. Don't invest any more time in him than you are prepared to waste.

DEAR ABBY: You would be doing us cancer sufferers a great service if you would ask the media to eliminate the cause of death in their obituaries. I don't think it is really necessary to mention what a person died from. We who are afflicted with a death-threatening disease would be helped if we didn't read that "so-and-so" died after a long battle with cancer or heart failure. We are having a difficult enough time coping with the disease without hearing of people dying from it.

We are quite aware that thousands of people die of cancer every year. We also know that thousands of people have survived after a hard battle with cancer — which is what we cancer patients need to hear. We need to hear that there is hope, and eliminating the cause of death from obituaries and other news items would be a big help. — FIGHTING THAT BATTLE IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR FIGHTING: I'm on your side. Here's hoping "the media" — of which I am a part — take notice and heed.

HAIR OF THE DOG — Betty Burian Kirk demonstrates her unusual hobby of spinning dog hair into skeins of yarn recently in Chicago. She says the yarn can be knitted into scarves or gloves for people. (AP Laserphoto)

She Spins Yarn From Dog Hair

By WILLIAM C. HIDLAY
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Betty Burian Kirk is giving new meaning to the expression "putting on the dog."

Mrs. Kirk hand-spins yarn out of dog hair. Her clients then use it to knit mittens, scarves and shawls for themselves.

"It's becoming more and more popular," Mrs. Kirk said Wednesday. "A lot of people do it for sentimental reasons — they want to wear something from their dog."

Prospective clients include Susan Kanar, who plans to begin saving fur this week for mittens or a scarf from her white Hungarian sheep dog, Schmutz.

"Why? He's my baby. His fur happens to be beautiful," said Ms. Kanar, of suburban Northbrook.

"My mother is disgusted by the idea, my friends are disgusted, but I just think it would be a neat thing to do," she said. "You have to be somebody who really cares about dogs to want to have this done. It's wearing your own pet."

Mrs. Kirk, an elementary school art teacher from suburban Sauk Village, has been spinning dog hair since 1981, when she was an art student at Northern Illinois University.

She said she hopes to attract more customers to expand her hobby into a mail order business.

Mrs. Kirk has knitted herself a scarf and crocheted a shawl from the fur of her Belgian sheep dog, Lance.

"I like them — they are nice and soft," she said. "Depending on the breed, it's real soft and will make nice, fluffy yarn."

Hair from Samoyeds and huskies spins into the softest yarn, she said, but collies and German shepherds aren't too scruffy, either. She also has spun nice yarn from Belgian terriers, golden retriever and akita, but doesn't recommend toy poodle because the hair is too short or Cardigan Welsh corgi because it's too harsh.

"I usually don't recommend making a sweater from it," she said. "It's a lot hotter than wool generally."

She tells dog owners not to clip their dogs' fur but to brush it out regularly and save it up. She charges $2 to spin a small sample and $5 an ounce in finished yarn for larger orders.

Mrs. Kirk said that although "some dogs smell pretty rank," the odor usually is removed when she washes the yarn. "But when you have something made from dog hair, if it gets wet, it might smell like dog hair."

Ms. Kanar said she told her mother wearing dog fur is like wearing a mink coat. But mother said, "That's different — I don't know the animal."

For those weekends you simply must get away but don't have time for a long drive, there are eight bed and breakfast inns within 50 miles of Greenville.

Called "bed and breakfasts" because the meal is usually included in the room price, these quaint eastern North Carolina inns can be a calm, restful end to a hectic week. And they're all less than an hour away.

Picture a quiet weekend on the airy third floor bedroom of a rambling old southern house, with fresh flowers in your room, a crackling fire downstairs. Then add in a welcoming host to cook you a big, country breakfast in the morning. You've got the image of a perfect weekend away at a bed and breakfast. Reasonable prices and personal attention for each guest is what these bed and breakfasts (B&Bs) are known for.

Business travelers and tourists alike are finding the comforts of these small inns more to their tastes than the anonymity of motel chains. Owned, operated and also lived in by the proprietor, these local B&Bs are typically renovated and restored old homes with several bedrooms available to guests.

They are found in Tarboro, Wilson, New Bern, Bath and Oriental, and can give you a sense of local history while you relax.

In Tarboro, Tom and Patsy Miller own and operate the Little Warren, a large two-story house dating to 1913 facing the town common in the Historic District.

Wide brick steps lead past a red English mailbox and onto a spacious, high ceilinged porch where you can have breakfast on warm October mornings, read the paper in the afternoon sunshine or sip a complimentary sherry in the evening.

Upstairs, the guest rooms are bright, with sunny windows and tall ceilings. You can stay in the West Room in its four-poster double bed, the apricot East Room with twin beds and white wicker rocker, or the Boys' Room, which has twin Jenny Lind beds and an attached bath.

The house is a homey, comfortable place, decorated with antiques, early American pieces and what Miller calls "early marriage" furniture. Some of the furnishings have small price tags; the Millers also operate Passers-Buy Antiques Shop.

Retired after 26 years in the Marine Corps, Miller uses Little Warren to house his collections gathered from his travels. The kitchen walls and ceiling are covered with wicker baskets and kitchen utensils — "kitchenalia" — from many countries. English cod and sparkling mineral water bottles flash in the window. This is where Miller cooks your choice of breakfasts: American southern, full-English, or continental.

You can be served on the porch or in the dining room, where the Millers use their own china, crystal, silver and linen.

Rates are $38 to $55 through 1987. Pilgrim's Rest is a Victorian B&B in one of the oldest standing houses in Wilson. Built in 1858, it is listed in the National Register of Historic Properties.

Innkeepers Doug and June Stewart opened Pilgrim's Rest in October of 1984. One cozy parlor holds a piano and a fireplace. Described by one visitor as "elegant, but not stuffy," the inn also offers side and front porch rocking chairs that look out over a tree-shaded yard, set well back off the street.

The three guest rooms, with 12-foot ceilings and original pine floors, come with a private or shared bath.

A full breakfast is served in your room or in the dining room, and it may include eggs and sausage or bacon, french toast, ham biscuits, or pastry.

Rates range from $39 to $49 a night. New Bern has four B&Bs, each with its own distinctive, characteristic decor and atmosphere.

The Aerie is owned by Lois and Karl Taylor, who owned an inn in New Hampshire before moving to New Bern. The 14-room Victorian home was originally built sometime around 1882, and is located on Pollock Street in New Bern's Historic District.

The front sitting room has Victorian leaded glass panels in the windows and an old mahogany player piano against one wall.

Two guest rooms are on the first floor. The largest is off the front sitting room at the base of the staircase, and holds two twin beds as well as a huge North Carolina pie safe.

The center hall staircase, carpeted with a long runner, leads to the second floor's four guest rooms. A "secret" second floor room has a private entrance out back and is reached by an outside staircase. All guest rooms have private baths.

Breakfast is served in a dining room with several tables, and a country meal with eggs, fruit, homemade muffins or bread, bacon, sausage, or ham is typical.

Rates for room and breakfast range from $52 to $75 a night.

King's Arms in New Bern is operated by David and Diana Parks, who will be new parents sometime in the next few weeks. They bought the Pollock Street inn in August of 1986.

Known as the Meadows-Hahn House, King's Arms was built in 1848. It has eight guest rooms, each with a private bath, cable television and decorated with antique reproductions.

The Parks will serve breakfast in your room, and offer juice, coffee or tea, ham biscuits, banana or zucchini bread, or blueberry, sour cream, orange marmalade or sweet potato muffins, along with a morning newspaper.

Rates are from $60 to $62.

The Harmony House Inn, also on Pollock Street, is in the Benjamin Ellis House. It was built in 1850, and is designated an Historic Point of Interest.

Sometime around the turn of the century, this house was sawed in two, and half of it was moved nine feet over.

Now a single structure again, the inn has two front doors. The guest rooms open onto nine-foot wide hallways, giving it the feel of a much larger B&B.

Each of the rooms is decorated with antiques and reproductions, and each has a private bath. A guest telephone is located in the hallway.

Opened in the spring of 1985 by A.E. and Diane Hansen, the inn offers a full breakfast buffet in the dining room. Specially ground coffee is served with eggs, breakfast meats, and freshly made coffee cake or bread.

Rates range from $45 to $65.

The New Berne House is on Broad Street and has a slightly offbeat charm with the character of a 1923 southern Colonial Revival home.

Operated by Joel and Shan Wilkins, this B&B is redolent of fresh baking bread and brownies, and you can take afternoon tea in the sunny Rose parlor. The Wilkins usually leave cookies, desserts and sweets on the parlor sideboard for guests checking in.

The New Berne House is decorated with antiques, attic treasures and furniture bought at New Bern area auctions. The central staircase walls are decorated with old tints and photographs of the Taylor family, original owners of the home.

Wide, tall windows make the guest rooms on the second floor light and sunny. The rooms come with private or shared baths, complete with the original 1923 bathroom fixtures: clawfoot or pedestal bathtubs and pedestal sinks.

The Wilkins decorated each room with the color scheme of the original owners, hoping to preserve the early 20th century character.

The two third floor rooms tucked under the eaves have painted rose floors pickled with ivory. The slightly scorched brass bed in one of these guest rooms is an antique reportedly rescued from a burning Arizona brothel in 1897.

Each room has a breakfast table, or you can eat downstairs in the parlor if you prefer. A full breakfast, served when you want it, can include ham and eggs, fresh homemade white bread and jam, and coffee.

Rates range from $40 to $58 a night.

The Tar Heel Inn in Oriental was built in the 1890s, and has been completely renovated and remodeled by Harry and Frances Edwards.

The house now has six guest rooms with private baths. You can take your choice of pencil-post, four-poster, or cannonball antique or period-reproduction beds in the guest rooms.

The four seasons room, with windows on all four sides, holds a queen-size four-poster and an electric fireplace for atmosphere.

The Edwards serve a full country breakfast, which includes honeydew melon in season, bacon, eggs or quiche, fruit breads and a bottomless cup of coffee.

Winter nights may find guests grouped around the fireplace in the living room/guest lobby, nibbling cheese and sipping wine.

Rates range from $50 to $65.

The Bath Guest House, opened by Paul and Irene Kornarow, looks out over Bath Creek. Built over 100 years ago and opened in 1981 as an inn, the Guest House offers docking privileges, a boat ramp, duck hunting packages, bicycling, fishing, crabbing, sailing, rowing or canoeing.

All five guest rooms overlook the water.

The full breakfast may include sausage, eggs, grits, french toast, or pancakes.

LITTLE WARREN — Tom and Patsy Miller stand outside the Little Warren, their bed and breakfast inn in Tarboro. Breakfast is often served on the wide front porch. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Rates are from $43 to $48 a night, double occupancy. For more information on B&Bs in North Carolina, you can call Bed & Biscuits, a travel service specializing in smaller inns, between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. at (919) 787-2109.

Rescuers Insert Balloons In Well

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Rescuers trying to reach tiny Jessica McClure today slipped two balloons through a 2-inch hole in the well shaft where she was trapped 22 feet below ground, but her rescue was still several hours away, police said.

The industrial-type balloons were inserted through the hole, about 10 to 15 inches below Jessica, to keep the 18-month-old girl from slipping farther into the well, said police Sgt. Jeff Haile.

Rescue workers planned to try to insert mirrors into the shaft later so they could see the toddler, he said.

The rescuers, who have been trying for two days to reach Jessica, got a lift when they breached the narrow shaft at 4:15 a.m. today.

"I think it set them (rescue workers) on fire," police Cpl. Jim White.

But Haile later said workers were still several hours away from reaching Jessica, who fell into the abandoned backyard well Wednesday.

"It's going to be at least three and probably seven (hours)," he said at mid-morning.

The rescue workers, boring through rock so hard that it dulled diamond-tipped drills, had to drill a 20-inch diameter hole through 10 inches of solid rock in order to reach in and pull Jessica out, White said before dawn.

"She's been sleeping on and off the doctor says let her sleep," White said. "When she wakes up, she's crying for her mother."

Workers in the 20-inch wide tunnel used hand-held, 30-pound jackhammers to drill upward at a 45-degree angle toward the girl. The breakthrough came under floodlights and amid the din of drills and generators.

After breaking through the well shaft, workers left the drill bit across the shaft and under the toddler to keep her from slipping deeper into the hole, White said.

"If she's crying, she's breathing. It's as easy as that," Dr. Chip Klunick, an emergency physician at the scene, said late Thursday.

West Pay Becomes Election Factor

 participating in the forum, said, "I'm in favor of community schools," but added that declining enrollment at the Stokes school suggests closing it in long-range plans.

"Stokes has no growth area," to maintain the enrollment in the school, said Bryant Tripp of District 2, Seat A. But, he said he is optimistic about the potential for Stokes to regain students.

Mary Perkins Williams of District 2, Seat A, noted that trailers have been added to the schoolgrounds for classes, but enrollment reportedly is declining.

On the issue of the superintendent's salary, Walter Morehead of District 2, Seat B, said, "the highest paid administrator in the state should have the highest achievements" in team building, recruiting and hiring, and student achievement tests.

"I did vote for Dr. (Eddie) West's salary," Blount said. The school system is a "big business" with about 17,000 students and a budget of about $60 million, he said. West "earns every dime that he gets."

Blount said West's salary is $94,000 and is comparable to business administrators with similar budgets and the number of employees.

In his opening remarks, Morehead said, "I'm running on a platform of teamwork." A strong nucleus of blacks, women and other minorities should exist in the schools for maximum resources and role models, he said. Also, "the administration needs to listen to input from people."

Blount cited school board accomplishments such as higher SAT scores and current capital outlay projects in his opening statement. He said board members should be conscious of children as individuals and should be good managers. Long-range plans should be made, he said, because "we can't allow the same problems to crop up."

Sidney Scott of District 2, Seat B, said he has "insight to the needs of the schools" by having children in the school system and by working with different school organizations. "I do not feel, in the past, the community has been involved in the schools."

Ms. Williams said the schools need strong academic programs, and "the board needs to change to open channels for the community and parents."

Tripp said board representatives "have not listened to the community" on the issues. "I believe in local schools; I do not believe in busing. I believe in the community completely."

In answering questions submitted by the L.V. and C.E.E.P.C.O., Blount said, "where it's practical and feasible, I'm in favor" of racially balancing schools. "I'll never be in favor" of busing students long distances to do it.

Responding to another submitted question, Morehead said strong educational programs, a strong enforcement policy and a screening process are ways to combat drug and alcohol use, while Ms. Williams said peer involvement may be a solution. "I think the students are aware of who the others are and who are involved. I would support efforts of student peer groups," she said.

Scott said he would welcome input of advisory councils, parent-teacher organizations and other groups to ensure public inquiries received responses, while Morehead said he would develop a system to receive input from educators and the community and would have an open-door policy.

Beverly Congleton, an incumbent for District 2, Seat A, submitted written responses to submitted questions, but did not participate in the forum. District 4 incumbents Anne McGaughey and David Shackelford, both of Seat A, and incumbent Mark Owens of Seat B, did not participate in the forum. Randy Martin of District 4, Seat B, did not participate in the forum but submitted written responses.

A candidates' forum for Districts 3 and 6 will be conducted Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Ayden-Grifton High School.

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan will undergo tests for breast cancer on Saturday and may have a "modified radical mastectomy" if doctors find evidence of malignancy, the White House said today.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Mrs. Reagan "accepts the procedure recommended for her circumstance."

He said Mrs. Reagan will enter Bethesda Naval Hospital this evening and will spend the night at the hospital in preparation for the procedure, which involves her left breast, where a lump has been found.

East Carolina Goes On The Road To Face Hokies Seeking Fourth Victory

East Carolina's Pirates take to the road Saturday to try and double their output of victories over each of the past three seasons.

East Carolina, 3-3, will be at Virginia Tech for a 1 p.m. kickoff in Lane Stadium against a Hokie team, that, in many ways, is struggling like the Pirates are.

If, however, the Pirates get their run-and-shoot-I offense in motion as they did against Cincinnati this past weekend, they could make it a sad Homecoming for the Hokie faithful.

Virginia Tech enters the game with only a 1-4 record, but has played an outstanding schedule. They have lost to Clemson, 22-10; Virginia, 14-13; Syracuse, 35-21; and South Carolina, 40-10. Both Clemson and Syracuse are nationally ranked and Tech led both at times, holding a 21-7 lead over the Orangemen at halftime. Against Virginia, a two-point conversion failed — as did three field goal attempts by all-America kicker Chris Kinzer.

The lone victory for the Hokies came against winless Navy, 31-11.

The Pirates will be coming off a big 56-28 victory over the University of Cincinnati, with whom the Hokies close their season. In that game, East Carolina rushed for 500 yards and collected 608 yards in total offense, their biggest output in some time.

In fact, East Carolina's total for the day — in just rushing — is more than the Hokies have rushed for in their five games combined.

Still, ECU Coach Art Baker feels that Tech is a dangerous team, one the Pirates cannot afford to underestimate. "Like us, they have a good Homecoming record. It's been a frustrating year for them with their NCAA investigation and the season thus far," Baker said.

Baker also has much respect for Tech coach Frank Beamer, in his first year after moving from Murray State. Beamer, too, is a former Baker aide, having served a year under him at The Citadel.

"They run a defense we don't see a whole lot, the wide tackle six. It's hard to prepare for. Their strength is their defense, like West Virginia."

Baker said that Tech has an outstanding quarterback in Erik Chapman, but that he has been frustrated in his play this year. After having only six interceptions all of last year (12 games), he's already been picked off eight times in five games this fall. "Much of their problem is in the offensive line," Baker added. The Hokies list two freshmen and two sophomores among their starters in the offensive line. "They also have new tailbacks this year," the coach said.

Those two include a true freshman in Jon Jeffries, who is the team's leading rusher thus far, but with less than 200 yards.

"This is a vital game to our season," Baker said. "I'm anxious to see how we handle success after the way we did respond to adversity (the 49-0 licking by West Virginia two weeks ago)."

And while Cincinnati had not seen a single down of option offense against it going into the ECU game, Virginia Tech has seen it on several occasions. "We didn't know how Cincinnati would react to it, but we have had a chance to see (on film) how Virginia Tech reacts," Baker said. "That helps in our preparation."

Baker said that he hopes the series, which is now set for four games, will continue as a natural rivalry for the two independent schools in neighboring states. The two have met only once before, back in 1956 when the Pirates were still NAIA members and Tech was a member of the Southern Conference. The Hokies took a 37-2 decision in that game, played at Bluefield, W. Va.

Next year's game is also scheduled for Blacksburg, but the following two will be played in Greenville.

East Carolina's rushing attack will be led by fullback Anthony Simpson, who has ground out 444 yards thus far this year and by tailback Reggie McKinney, who — with 212 yards last week — has upped his total to 354. Quarterback Travis Hunter has 211 while Tim James, Simpson's backup, has 154 and Jarrod Moody, a slotback, has 103.

Hunter has hit on 37 of 79 passing attempts for 427 yards with three interceptions and his backup, Charlie Libretto, has hit 7 of 16 for 95 yards with two interceptions.

Ironically, no one on the ECU team has passed for a touchdown this year.

Walter Wilson and Ron Jones led in receptions with six each. Wilson had 117 yards and Jones, 67. Tony Smith (84 yards), Don Gaylor (77), Simpson (55) and Moody (49) each have four catches while Dennell Harper had four for 30 yards.

The Pirates have rushed for 242.2 yards a game while allowing 203.3. They have passed for 89.7 while giving up 178.3, a total of 331.8 per game for the Pirates and 381.7 for their opponents.

Following this week's game, the Pirates stay on the road, traveling to Columbia, S.C., next Saturday to face the University of South Carolina.

Getting Ready

Injured Cardinals Going Indoors For World Series

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The World Series moved indoors for the first time and injuries followed the crippled St. Louis Cardinals into the Metrodome.

Terry Pendleton is not likely to play against the Minnesota Twins because of rib cage problems, Manager Whitey Herzog said Thursday. "Right now, I'd say it's doubtful he'll play at all. He has torn muscles," Herzog said two days before Game 1.

Rookie Joe Magrane, another one of St. Louis' walking wounded this year, will start the opener against Frank Viola in a matchup of left-handers beneath the orange-tinted dome.

Herzog made a switch for Game 2, saying Danny Cox would pitch and be followed by John Tudor in the third game. Bert Blyleven will start Game 2 for the Twins and Les Straker will work the third game.

The Cardinals, besieged by injuries this season, are still not expecting slugger Jack Clark to play. Clark, out of the starting lineup since Sept. 9 with an ankle injury, took part in an intrasquad game Thursday night at the Metrodome as light rained fell outdoors. He went 0-for-6 with three strikeouts.

"What you see is what you get," Clark said. "I can't play. I can't help right now."

Herzog had another close call when catcher Tony Pena, who led the Cardinals with a .381 average in the playoffs, got hit in the right hand by a foul tip. Pena left the workout, but was not seriously injured.

"There's no sense fretting," Herzog said of the injury jinx that has plagued his team ever since Pena broke his thumb in the third game of the season. "There's nothing you can do."

Pendleton hurt himself while sliding Wednesday night in St. Louis' 6-0 victory over San Francisco in the seventh game of the National League playoffs. He remained in the game at third base for one inning and then was forced to leave. "I don't feel good at all. If it stays this way, I can't make it," Pendleton said.

Clark led the Cardinals with 35 home runs and 106 runs batted in, and Pendleton was second with 12 homers and 96 RBI.

Herzog had to make a decision by late this afternoon on his 24-man World Series roster. He has already indicated he will add a ninth pitcher, probably right-handed reliever Lee Tunnell. Reserve outfielder Lance Johnson could be the one dropped, or it might be either Clark or Pendleton.

There was speculation Herzog might seek permission from the commissioner's office to add David Green, who was not on the original playoff roster, to replace one of the injured players.

Tom Lawless and Tom Pagnozzi, who combined for 73 at-bats this season, were likely to start Game 1 for the Cardinals because of injuries. Lawless will take Pendleton's spot and Pagnozzi, despite only one at-bat in the playoffs, was forced into the designated hitter's slot.

This will be the second year the DH will be used in World Series games at the American League champion's park. The pitcher will bat in games at the National League champion's home.

Minus Clark and Pendleton, the Cardinals are likely to start a lineup for Game 1 that hit a total of 32 home runs this season. The Twins' probable lineup for the opener hit 173.

That lack of power will put even more emphasis on the Cardinals' running game, a fact Viola and catcher Tim Lauer realize.

"I don't think anyone in the American League compares to them in team speed," Viola said. "The American League plays a different type of ball. In the National League, they can be six runs behind and they'll still run on you."

Laudner said Viola is "pretty good" at holding runners on base, part of the reason Manager Tom Kelly picked him to pitch Game 1. Had the Giants won the NL title, Blyleven would have opened.

"The key to the Cardinals is to keep them off base," said Laudner, against whom Detroit stole five bases in the playoffs. "That's like with the Rickey Hendersons and the Willie Wilsons. They're not guys you're going to throw out."

NFL Players Can't Even Win By Walking Back In

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL players couldn't win when they walked out and they couldn't win when they walked in. They ended their strike but not the NFL's strike games.

The union couldn't even end the strike the right way, sending the players in on the assumption they could suit up Sunday, then standing helplessly by when the owners told them they'd reported too late.

"It was like being in a war and losing your bullets," said Rickey Hunley, player rep of the Denver Broncos. "There was nothing left to fight with. The bottom was falling out of the situation."

"It's the end of the Civil War and they're taking Atlanta," said wide receiver Cris Collinsworth of the Cincinnati Bengals. "Let's get the furniture before it burns, too."

In fact, Gene Upshaw, the union's executive director, sounded like a man putting his members out of their misery in announcing the official end of the 24-day walkout on Thursday.

"It was unfair to the players to continue to sacrifice any more," Upshaw said, sending the more than 1,300 players still on strike back to work, and announcing that the union had decided to pursue its aims in an antitrust suit filed in federal court in Minneapolis.

agency, pension and severance improvements, guaranteed contracts and on down — was agreed upon.

As one league official put it: "If they wanted to go to court, they could have done it Sept. 1 and saved all this trouble."

Moreover, most of the players ended the strike where they began it — on the street after the union miscalculated and ordered them in a day after the weekly deadline for reporting on the assumption it would be waived.

For a while, there was mass confusion as teams reported en masse only to be told by coaches and team officials that they couldn't play this Sunday and would be paid at the per diem rate of only $750 a week for veterans and $500 for rookies if they decided to stick around and practice.

The owners insisted that veterans reporting Thursday, after more than three weeks off, would be running too great a risk of injury if they played Sunday.

"I think having them here by 1 p.m. Wednesday is a sensible time for the coach to organize and get the players in shape," said general manager George Young of the New York Giants. "Thursday is not a good day, especially late in the afternoon. They can't walk in off the street and expect to play. Of course if they got hurt, they would say it's your fault."

General Manager Jim Finks of the New Orleans Saints said the owners also were wary that without a formal agreement, regulars would go on strike again as soon as replacement players were let go.

Two teams — the Bears and Raiders — agreed to return and practice, and a few scattered players from other teams also took physicals, reclaimed their equipment and worked out.

But all of those who struck for the

Martin Reportedly Failed Drug Test

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Red-shirt freshman tailback Kennard Martin failed a drug test administered last Sunday, leading to his suspension from the North Carolina football team, a Durham newspaper reported Thursday.

A prepared statement released Wednesday night said Martin's suspension was for "disciplinary reasons," but the Durham Morning Herald quoted sources as saying the Tar Heels were given an unannounced drug test Sunday and that Martin did not pass.

The type of drug involved was not known, according to the newspaper and the source.

UNC changed its drug testing policy from mandatory to voluntary before this academic year. Most football players signed releases allowing the school to test them periodically.

Coach Dick Crum would not confirm reports that Martin had failed a drug test.

"Anytime you suspend somebody, there's a pretty good degree of seriousness to it," Crum told the newspaper.

Crum said Martin was suspended from practices and games for an indefinite period. He said Martin would be evaluated "week-to-week" and that a reinstatement this season is possible.

Martin's suspension leaves North Carolina with just one healthy tailback, freshman Reggie Clark, who has played in two games this season.

Martin began the season as a backup to sophomore Torin Dorn, but moved up after Dorn sprained an ankle in the season opener against Illinois. After playing against Oklahoma, Martin played against Georgia Tech and pulled a hamstring and hyperextended a knee. He sat out the next two games.

Sampson Re-signs With Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Ralph Sampson, after spending the off-season talking about testing the free-agent market, signed a six-year agreement with the Rockets Thursday that will pay him $12 million, team officials said.

The Rockets now have both of their Twin Towers under long-term contracts. Akeem Olajuwon signed a 12-year contract last season that pays him an average of $2.5 million per year.

Sampson suffered through an injury-marred year with the Rockets last season, missing 39 regular-season games because of ankle injuries and arthroscopic knee surgery.

Sampson was selected to the NBA All-Star team for the West but did not play because of his knee injury. He averaged a pro career low 15.6 points per game and 372 rebounds, also a career low.

One More Week In Spotlight

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

For one more week, they'll have to put up with being called scabs, being degraded for not having the skills of the striking NFL regulars they replaced.

For one more week, the fill-in players will be in the pro football spotlight.

"We all are looking forward to the game, especially since it may be our last," Houston linebacker Eugene Seale said. "I feel it was worth it."

The replacement games certainly were worth it for the Oilers, who are 2-0 during the walkout. And the Chargers, Redskins, Cowboys, Colts, 49ers and Bears, all unbeaten in replacement games.

"We knew this wasn't going to go on forever ... We went out and got them a couple of great wins to tie them for the AFC East," Colts quarterback Terry Nugent said.

And they were worth it to most of Seale's peers, some of whom might remain in the NFL, others who will get another look in the future.

"I knew from the start that this was a strike situation," Cleveland linebacker Tim Crawford said. "This is life, and you've just got to live it. I'm still young. I could get another shot."

So might Joe Dudek, who performed well for Denver's strike team.

"I'm relieved it's over," Dudek said. "I was getting sick of living my life day to day, wondering when the other players were going to come back."

There were no confrontations between the replacements and regulars whose paths crossed Thursday. In New Orleans, Saints regulars Tony Elliott and Eric Martin, who had broken with the strike earlier, got into a shouting match with the returnees.

There were no problems in Kansas City.

"They just came down to pick up their mail," Chiefs replacement defensive back Jack Epps said. "A few guys said things like, 'Go pick up your money, scab, you're through.' Some of the assistant coaches looked pretty nervous, but there was nothing more to it."

After this weekend, there will be nothing more to life in the NFL for hundreds of players.

Conley Advances In 3-A Playoffs

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley opened up the state playoffs by downing Southern Nash, 15-4, 15-1, 15-1, in three straight games Thursday.

In the first game, Renee Tuten led with six straight service points. In the second game, Miriam Fulford had six straight service points followed by Dee Barbee with five.

In the final game, Tracy Surrell had a service string of five straight points.

Rhonda Mills had four effective hits to lead Conley. Surrell and Hanna Hill added two effective hits and two kills each. Peggy Whitehurst chipped in three effective hits.

Conley moves on to play Tuesday against the winner of the Bertie-Southern Durham game.

Wilson ..... 2
Greenville Chr. .... 0

WILSON — Wilson Christian Academy swept a pair of volleyball games from Greenville Christian Thursday.

Wilson gained a 15-7 victory in the opening game and followed that with a 15-5 win in the second.

In the first game, Tina Stiltner led service for GCA while Missy Baggett led in bumps. Erica Spain led in sets and Christy Hardison led in spikes. In the second game, Spain led in service and sets while Hardison led in bumps.

GCA is now 4-8 on the year and travels to Bethel Christian of Kinston on Tuesday at 4 p.m.

Laney ..... 4
Rose ..... 0

WILMINGTON — Wilmington Laney knocked Rose High School out of the state 4-A volleyball playoffs Thursday with a 4-0 victory.

Details and games scores were not made available.

Aycock Rolls By Jacksonville

JACKSONVILLE — E.B. Aycock Junior High School rolled up a 32-6 football victory over Jacksonville Thursday.

Aycock pushed over two in the first period. Terrance Smith scored on a 5-yard run and added the points after run. Before the period ended, Anthony Love went in from the six and also ran the PAT to make it 16-0.

Grant Harmon scored on a 35-yard pass from Smith in the second period, with Smith running in the PAT. That made it 24-0 at the half.

Love finished off the Aycock scoring in the third period on a 4-yard run. Smith passed to Matt Aldridge for the PAT to make it 32-0.

Jacksonville's only score came on the final play of the game.

Aycock is now 4-0 and plays host to Fike on Thursday.

Bethel-Wellcome ..... 16
Snow Hill ..... 8

SNOW HILL — Wellcome-Bethel rallied for a 16-8 football victory over Snow Hill in junior high school action Thursday.

Snow Hill scored first in the game and led 8-0 until the final period.

Then, John Cayton scored from the two and Derrick Brown ran in the conversion to tie it at 8-8. Then, about a minute later, Chris Sheppard intercepted a Snow Hill pass and returned it 40 yards for the score. Brown again ran in the PAT.

Wellcome-Bethel is now 4-0 on the year while Snow Hill falls to 4-1.

Ayden & Grifton ..... 24
Chicod & Whitfield ..... 6

CHICOD — Ayden and Grifton Middle School's combined football team took a 24-6 win over Chicod and Whitfield's combined team in junior high football action Thursday.

Chicod returns to action Oct. 28 against Snow Hill.

Rampant JV Rolls By Vikes

KINSTON — Rose High School's junior varsity rallied from an 18-13 deficit to score in the final two minutes of play and pull out a 21-18 football victory over Kinston Thursday night.

Maurice Hines put Rose into the initial lead in the first period on a 3-yard run and Ty Fickling kicked the point after for a 7-0 edge. But Kinston came back to close with 7-6 before the period ended.

In the second quarter, Rose scored again as Hines scored from 11 yards out to hold a 13-6 edge at the half.

Kinston came back with a score in the third period and another in the fourth to take the lead, 18-13, but Hank Thompson passed to Terry Anderson for 22 yards and the go-ahead score. Fickling then ran over the PAT for the final 21-18 margin.

Rose is now 5-2 overall, 3-1 in Big East competition. The Rampant Cubs travel to Wilson Fike on Thursday.

Farmville ..... 39
North Pitt ..... 14

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central rolled up a 39-14 junior varsity football victory over North Pitt Thursday night.

Rose Defeats Beddingfield

STANTONSBURG — Rose High School romped past Wilson Beddingfield, 6-1, in soccer Thursday to remain atop the Big East Conference standings.

Rose scored all six goals in a 25 minute span with six different players doing the scoring.

Brian Wille scored the first on a penalty kick at the 30:00 mark in the first half. Mike Kasperek came back a minute later with an unassisted score. John Person, assisted by Wille then closed out the first half scoring at 38:00 for a 3-0 lead.

One minute into the second half, Lloyd May, assisted by Ed Norris and Richard Lewis, upped the lead to 4-0. Five minutes later, Bobby Weisenberger, assisted by Dallas McPherson and Toure Claiborne, scored the fifth goal. David Allen, assisted by Weisenberger and Person, scored at the 55:00 mark to close out the Rampant attack.

Kelly Batten got Beddingfield's only goal at the 70 minute mark.

Rose took 30 shots on goal with Bruin goalie Trung Nguyen had 20 saves. Rose goalie Sean Murphy had three saves as the Beddingfield took only four shots.

"This was a very mediocre performance against a weak team," Coach Will Wiberg said. "This was certainly not the way to keep our first place standing."

Rose is now 9-1 in the Big East, 10-3-2 overall. Beddingfield falls to 0-10, 0-15.

Rose travels to Kinston on Tuesday.

Ridgescroft ..... 6

Morris Leads, But The Race Tightens Up

Woody Peele

Tom Morris extended his lead to two full games this past weekend, but overall, the race tightened up a little bit on our panel.

Morris continues to hold the lead with a 51-18 record, while Tom Baines slipped two games back at 50-20. Vickie Spivey is another game back at 49-21, while Don Reuter and this writer are knotted for fourth at 48-22. Joe Jenkins falls back into last place with a 47-23 mark.

This week have some more divergence, so there is hope of some more scrambling among the crew.

Our high school picks this past week resulted in a 6-1 record, which brings us to 35-16 on the year.

One of the bigger games this week pits Greene Central against Ayden-Grifton. Now if you compare wins, the Rams have it, having beaten North Pitt which beat Ayden-Grifton. But it doesn't work quite that easily.

The Chargers will be ready to charge out of the gate after a week off to brood on their loss to the Panthers. But the Rams should be in high gear after winning last Friday night. It's a great defense going against a great offense.

We like the offense to win — Ayden-Grifton, 21-14.

Conley's Vikings take to the road to challenge West Craven. The Vikes have a lot riding on the game, their hopes for a post-season bid among them. West Craven, too, is in a position to knock off a rival for their post-season hopes also. Conley has shown a lot of improvement this year, but this week, it may not be enough. Our pick is West Craven, 18-13.

Finally, Rose plays host to Kinston in another key Big East game. The Rampants, again, may be guilty of looking past the Vikings toward their final three games. Kinston, with only one win on the year, could prove to be their downfall, however. The Vikes have improved each week and come close to several other wins.

It should be a struggle — moreso than last week at least — but we still go with the Rampants, 28-15.

Elsewhere it will be Jamesville over Belhaven, Columbia over Chocowinity, Ahoskie over Williamston, Northampton East over Roanoke, and Washington over North Lenoir.

The final high school game of the week belongs to the panel with North Pitt hosting Farmville Central. The Jaguars come in without a loss in the league while North Pitt has been up and down. North Pitt will remember its only league loss from last year, but that pales by the fact that the Panther hopes for a return to the playoffs may ride on the outcome of this one.

The panel's choice — a split decision. Three each pick Farmville and North Pitt. Our own choice, Farmville by 20-17.

East Carolina travels to Virginia Tech hoping to win two in a row for the first time since the start of the 1985 season. The Hokies have struggled, but have played outstanding opponents, too, including two nationally ranked teams, Clemson and Syracuse.

Again the panel is split, but gives Tech the nod by 4-2, Morris and this writer going with the Pirates. Our result: ECU by 24-17.

Our other consensus picks: North Carolina over N.C. State; Wake Forest over Maryland; South Carolina over Virginia; Nebraska over Oklahoma State; Texas A&M and Baylor, a toss-up; Clemson over Duke; Auburn over Georgia Tech; Ohio State over Purdue; Penn State over Syracuse; and Washington over Southern California.

Big Eight Showdown Set Up Between Cowboys, Huskers

By The Associated Press

Only eight Division I-A teams are still unbeaten and untied. Three of them are in the Big Eight, and two of those — second-ranked Nebraska and No. 12 Oklahoma State — headline Saturday's college football schedule when they collide.

While the Oklahoma State Cowboys have had good teams in the past, sometimes outstanding teams, Nebraska has always been better. The Cornhuskers have emerged victorious every year since 1961, except when the two teams tied in 1973.

This year, both Nebraska and Oklahoma State have 5-0 records — the same as conference rival Oklahoma, the nation's top-ranked team; No. 7 Clemson, No. 13 Syracuse and unranked Minnesota and Wake Forest. At 4-0 is third-ranked Miami of Florida, which is idle this week.

"Oklahoma State has emerged out of the pack as a contender," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "They have a very good chance to be a contender (for the Big Eight title). This game this week will be very critical."

It is the first time since 1945 that the Cowboys have won their first five games, but they have not played the same caliber of competition as Nebraska.

Still, there is hope in Stillwater, Okla., when the Huskers come calling.

"For one thing, we're 5-0," said Mike Gundy, Oklahoma State's sophomore quarterback, who leads the Big Eight Conference in total offense. "Nobody we've played has stopped us from moving the ball offensively. We're running the ball well and throwing the ball well, and it's tough to stop a balanced attack."

"At the start of the year, we knew we had good players but we hadn't proven much to anyone," Gundy said. "People are starting to believe in Oklahoma State now."

Nebraska is ranked sixth nationally in total offense, averaging 453 yards per game. The Cornhusker defense has allowed opponents 268 yards per game, with most of that coming through the air.

That fits in well with Oklahoma State's game plan. The Cowboys have thrown for 249 yards per game, best in the Big Eight and 14th best in the nation. And with tailback Thurman Thomas, who leads the nation with 140 yards per game, Oklahoma State has a running game.

Still, Nebraska is a 10½-point favorite to increase its record to 6-0.

"We've got to play solid in all areas. They can do too many things," Cowboys Coach Pat Jones said.

While Barry Sanders of Oklahoma State leads the nation in punt returns and leads the conference in kickoff returns, Nebraska's Rod Smith and Dana Brinson are Nos. 2 and 3 in the league in punt returns and Brinson is second to Sanders in kickoff returns.

"The kicking game would well decide this contest," Osborne said.

Two other games Saturday will pit ranked teams against each other: No. 9 UCLA will play host to No. 16 Oregon and No. 10 Penn State travels to No. 13 Syracuse.

Tonight, 20th-ranked Indiana travels to Minnesota where it will play in the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome. The game was rescheduled from Saturday because the Minnesota Twins will meet the St. Louis Cardinals in the opening game of the World Series in the Metrodome on Saturday night.

In other games Saturday involving the Top Ten, Oklahoma, fresh off its stomping of arch-rival Texas, is a 55-point favorite over Big Eight opponent Kansas State; Louisville is at No. 4 Florida State, No. 5 Auburn is at Georgia Tech, Kentucky is at No. 6 Louisiana State, Clemson plays host to Duke and No. 8 Tennessee meets Alabama at Birmingham.

In the Second Ten, No. 11 Notre Dame is at Air Force; Temple is at No. 14 Florida; No. 15 Arkansas faces Texas at Little Rock; No. 17 Ohio State is at Purdue; No. 18 Georgia travels to Vanderbilt; and No. 19 Michigan State is at Northwestern.

NFLPA Takes The Battle Into The Judicial Arena

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The National Football League Players Association has taken its battle against the owners from the picket line to federal court.

After negotiations for a new contract collapsed and the players union ordered its members to return to work Thursday without an agreement, the NFLPA filed an antitrust suit in U.S. District Court in Minneapolis, claiming the league illegally limits compensation to players and monopolizes player talent.

"We waited to file the suit until today because we hoped the NFL would reach a good-faith collective bargaining agreement," W.B. "Buck" Briggs, staff counsel for the NFLPA, said Thursday.

"We only filed the suit when it became apparent the league had no intention of reaching an agreement. I assure you that our intention was to negotiate an agreement," Briggs said by telephone from his Washington office.

The players could have filed their case in any federal district court, but Minnesota was chosen mainly because the union has hired the Minneapolis law firm of Lindquist & Vennum.

Teams began reporting back en masse Thursday without a new contract agreement, but left after being told they had missed the deadline to play and get paid for this weekend's games.

"I'm sure the NFL will raise a hue and cry. I'm sure they'll shed crocodile tears," Briggs said. "But the league's intransigence made this the only viable movement."

The suit alleges that the NFL and owners conspired to impose a system that illegally restricts compensation paid to players.

The Management Council executive committee said in a statement it would have no comment until it had read the suit.

The NFLPA became the second sports union to file suit against its league this month. The NBA Players Association filed suit in New Jersey on Oct. 1 against the NBA over the draft, salary cap and right of first refusal.

"The NFL defendants comprised the only major football league in the United States," the suit claims. "Together, they monopolize and or have combined to conspire and monopolize both the U.S. market for major league pro football games and the U.S. market for the services for major league professional football players."

The suit also alleges that the league's college draft is monopolistic and a violation of the Sherman antitrust act.

"It's an anti-competitive practice," Briggs said. "The draft allows owners to allocate player services among themselves rather than allowing players to compete amongst themselves."

The suit challenges NFL policy requiring all players entering the league to be bound for a minimum of either two years or one year with an option clause, Briggs said. "Again, that was never bargained with the union," he said.

The suit claims contracts used by NFL teams are not legal because they were not approved under any collective bargaining agreement. It seeks to void any NFL contracts signed after Sept. 16, 1987, at the wish of the player.

"The player contract is not collectively bargained. It was drafted by management," Briggs said.

He said the suit also was filed in Minneapolis because that is where the plays union in 1972 successfully challenged the so-called "Rozelle Rule," which allowed NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle to set compensation paid to any team when a player concluded his contract and left the team.

Lindquist & Vennum handled that case.

"We got good law there," Briggs said. That decision, upheld four years later by the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals, was replaced by a system which continues to limit player movement between teams, Briggs said.

"In the last 10 years, under the last two collective bargaining agreements, only one free agent has moved," Briggs said.

The suit, which seeks an unspecified amount of damages, was filed by the executive counsel of the players union against the league and all NFL teams on behalf of some 1,600 players.

Named as plaintiffs are Marvin Powell of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Brian Holloway of the Los Angeles Raiders, Michael Kenn of the Atlanta Falcons, Michael Davis of the Los Angeles Raiders, James Lofton of the Los Angeles Raiders, Dan Marino of the Miami Dolphins, Michael Lockhurst of the Atlanta Falcons and George Martin of the New York Giants.

The suit also names Steve Jordan of the Minnesota Vikings, the Vikings' player representative, who was included as a plaintiff because he is a Minnesota resident, Briggs said.

The league is not exempt from antitrust law except in the case of television contracts, the suit claims.

Pendleton To Miss 1st

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — St. Louis third baseman Terry Pendleton says a pulled rib muscle will probably keep him out of the lineup in Game 1 of the World Series against Minnesota.

Pendleton hurt the left rib muscle Wednesday night in Game 7 of the National League playoffs while running from first to third on Tony Pena's single. Pendleton then scored on Jose Quiendo's homer as the Cardinals beat San Francisco 6-0 for their third pennant in six seasons.

Pendleton played defense in the third inning and then was pinch hit for in the bottom of the inning.

As his teammates took batting practice in the Metrodome Thursday evening, Pendleton stood on the sidelines, leaning on his bat.

"We're here now and I'm not able to help the team. It's a very big disappointment," he said.

The Cardinals are also without first baseman Jack Clark, who led the team with 35 homers and 106 runs batted in. Pendleton was second on the club with 12 homers, 11 more than his 1986 output.

NFL Players...

duration will be forced to watch their replacements play again Sunday, returning on Monday or Tuesday to resume their shattered season.

"It may be the end of anyone in this country influencing the NFL again," Collinsworth said. "We're going to be left to the mercy and the good graces of the owners of the NFL and we'll see how we'll be treated by them."

"The management played hardball and accomplished what they wanted to do. They busted us up," said linebacker Jeff Rohrer of the Dallas Cowboys, one of many players who seemed to come out of the strike with deep resentments toward the owners.

"Some people are very, very bitter, not just here, but across the country," said Harry Carson, captain of the Super Bowl champion Giants. "It's everyone's opinion that they were out all along to bust the union, humble the players somewhat. It's a little like when you have a person down, you grind on them. I think that's what they are trying to do."

Carson is just one of many for whom the strike put a damper on the season. The Giants could be 0-5 when they return unless their meek replacement team, bolstered this week by the return of league MVP Lawrence Taylor and backup quarterbacks Jeff Rutledge and Jeff Hostetler, beat the Buffalo replacements Sunday.

But players weren't the only ones hurt.

"Nobody wins in a strike and everybody loses. It's an unfortunate circumstance," said Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys, who at times during the strike almost seemed to enjoy building America's Replacement Team back to the stature of the Cowboys of old.

"All this has put a damper on my enthusiasm," said a Kansas City Chiefs fan, Stan Parks of Overland Park, Kan. "Both sides haven't solved anything and made matters worse. In the end it's affected the fans and no one else."

The walk-in seemed to put an end to bargaining between players and owners, at least for the time being.

The last talks took place by telephone Thursday morning among Upshaw, Jack Donlan, the chief management negotiator, and Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

But they couldn't agree on the last step in an agreement to get the players back to work — the termination date for the extension of the 1982 contract. The union wanted Feb. 1, the owners wanted June 16, the gap being the dates between the time a player's contract expires and the deadline for receiving offers from different teams.

So Upshaw sent the players in and the union filed suit in the same court where it won a similar battle in 1975 when a federal judge threw out the NFL's free-agent compensation rules.

An appeals court later said that rule should be the subject of collective bargaining and new compensation was written into the 1977 labor contract, which also gave the union the right to collect dues from all NFL players for the first time.

The suit challenges the NFL reserve system, the college draft and the players' contracts, particularly free agency.

"We had to give the bargaining process a chance," said Dick Berthelsen, the union's general counsel. "We've always wanted to bargain a new agreement with management, but they just refused to discuss the system issues and told us they would never agree to something that didn't have restrictions on free agency."

Biggs Set For Fight

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Tyrell Biggs will try to become the fifth member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic Boxing Team to win a world professional title when he challenges Mike Tyson tonight for the undisputed heavyweight championship.

"He's made for me," the 26-year-old Biggs said.

The smart-money guys disagree. "I'm the best fighter in the world," the 21-year-old Tyson said.

The smart-money guys agree that he certainly is the best heavyweight.

Tyson has been a strong favorite in all of his fights, and this time Las Vegas oddsmakers have made the swarming, power-punching champion an overwhelming 12-1 favorite, as of Thursday.

Sports betting is legal in the United States only in Nevada.

Tyson was a 10½-1 favorite when he scored a unanimous 12-round decision over Tony Tucker last Aug. 1 to add the International Boxing Federation championship to his World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association titles.

Tyson is the first undisputed heavyweight champion since Leon Spinks upset Muhammad Ali Feb. 15, 1978. Spinks then had title recognition withdrawn by the WBC for signing for a rematch with Ali instead of defending against Ken Norton.

Should Biggs pull what would be the greatest upset in heavyweight history, at least in terms of odds, he would join fellow Olympians Evander Holyfield (cruiserweight), Virgil Hill (light heavyweight) and Frank Tate (middleweight) as world champion. Another Olympian, Mark Breland, was a welterweight champion.

The 6-foot-4½ Biggs appears to have the tools needed to beat the 5-11½ Tyson. He has the height and reach advantages all of Tyson's opponents enjoy, but Biggs has shown good boxing ability, especially as an amateur and he has a punishing left jab.

But there are questions about Biggs' stamina and strength, although he officially outweighed Tyson Thursday 228¾ pounds to 216 pounds.

A lot of boxing people wonder if Biggs, who has a 15-0 record, with 10 knockouts, can keep to his fight plan if he is hurt or tired, or whether he will try to slug it out with a genuine slugger.

Tyson, who has a 31-0 record, with 27 knockouts, is cat-quick, possesses great hand speed and doesn't allow opponents any respite.

Players, Owners Differ On Results

By The Associated Press

Dallas Cowboys President Tex Schramm said there was no victor in the NFL strike. But Cincinnati receiver Cris Collinsworth disagreed.

"It's the end of the Civil War here and they're taking Atlanta," Collinsworth said Thursday after the players' union called off its 24-day strike. "Let's get the furniture before it burns, too."

Players didn't salvage much from the ruins of their bitter strike against NFL owners. After losing almost $100 million in salaries and seeing their union all but shattered, they agreed to return to work without a new contract.

"The management played hardball and accomplished what they wanted to. They busted us up," Dallas linebacker Jeff Rohrer said.

Collinsworth said "collective bargaining is over with as we know it in the NFL."

"We're going to be left to the mercy and the good graces of the owners of the NFL, and we'll see how we're treated by them," he said.

Denver linebacker Ricky Hunley said the players ran out of ammunition in the labor battle.

"It was like being in a war and losing your bullets," he said. "There was nothing left to fight with."

Despite the clear-cut victory, management didn't gloat.

"Nobody wins in a strike and everybody loses," Schramm said. "It's an unfortunate circumstance."

The final blow was struck Thursday, when striking players returned to work only to be told that they had missed the deadline to play and be paid for this weekend's games.

Several general managers said they were worried about a possible rash of injuries if the returning players were rushed back into action after a four-week layoff.

"They can't walk in off the street and expect to play," said New York Giants GM George Young. "Of course, if they got hurt, they would say it's our fault."

Indianapolis Colts owner Robert Irsay said the no-play, no-pay decision wasn't "a hard-line stance. We wish we had all our players with us to go play the Steelers ... but the deadline was set."

Players viewed the move as a final slap in the face.

"It was ludicrous to reject us coming in," fumed Ken Clarke of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Clarke said the decision showed "management doesn't care about the players or the public."

"What's the difference if it (the reporting deadline) was 1 p.m. yesterday or 1 p.m. today?" he said. "We can still suit up and play."

New Orleans tackle Stan Brock also blasted the owners, who are planning to stage replacement games for the third straight week.

"If they were really interested in putting the best guys on the field and playing the best football game possible, 24 hours wouldn't make that much difference," he said.

Some players accepted the decision calmly.

"They told us we can't play, so what are we going to do?" said Tunch Ilkin, player representative for the Pittsburgh Steelers. "We can't force our way in there. We understand that and we can live with that."

Buffalo offensive lineman Joe Devlin said the Bills were "disappointed about what's happened ... but we understand that it's really out of the Bills' control at this point."

ALTERNATIVE HEALTH CARE DELIVERY SYSTEMS

Monday, October 19, 1987, 7:30 p.m.

Brody Medical Sciences Building Auditorium Moyo Boulevard

Americans enjoy the best health care in the world. However, it is not so easy to agree on the best way to contain costs while continuing to receive the highest quality of care. As a result there are a host of new programs referred to as alternative health care delivery systems:

HMOs - Health Maintenance Organizations

IPAs - Individual Practice Organizations

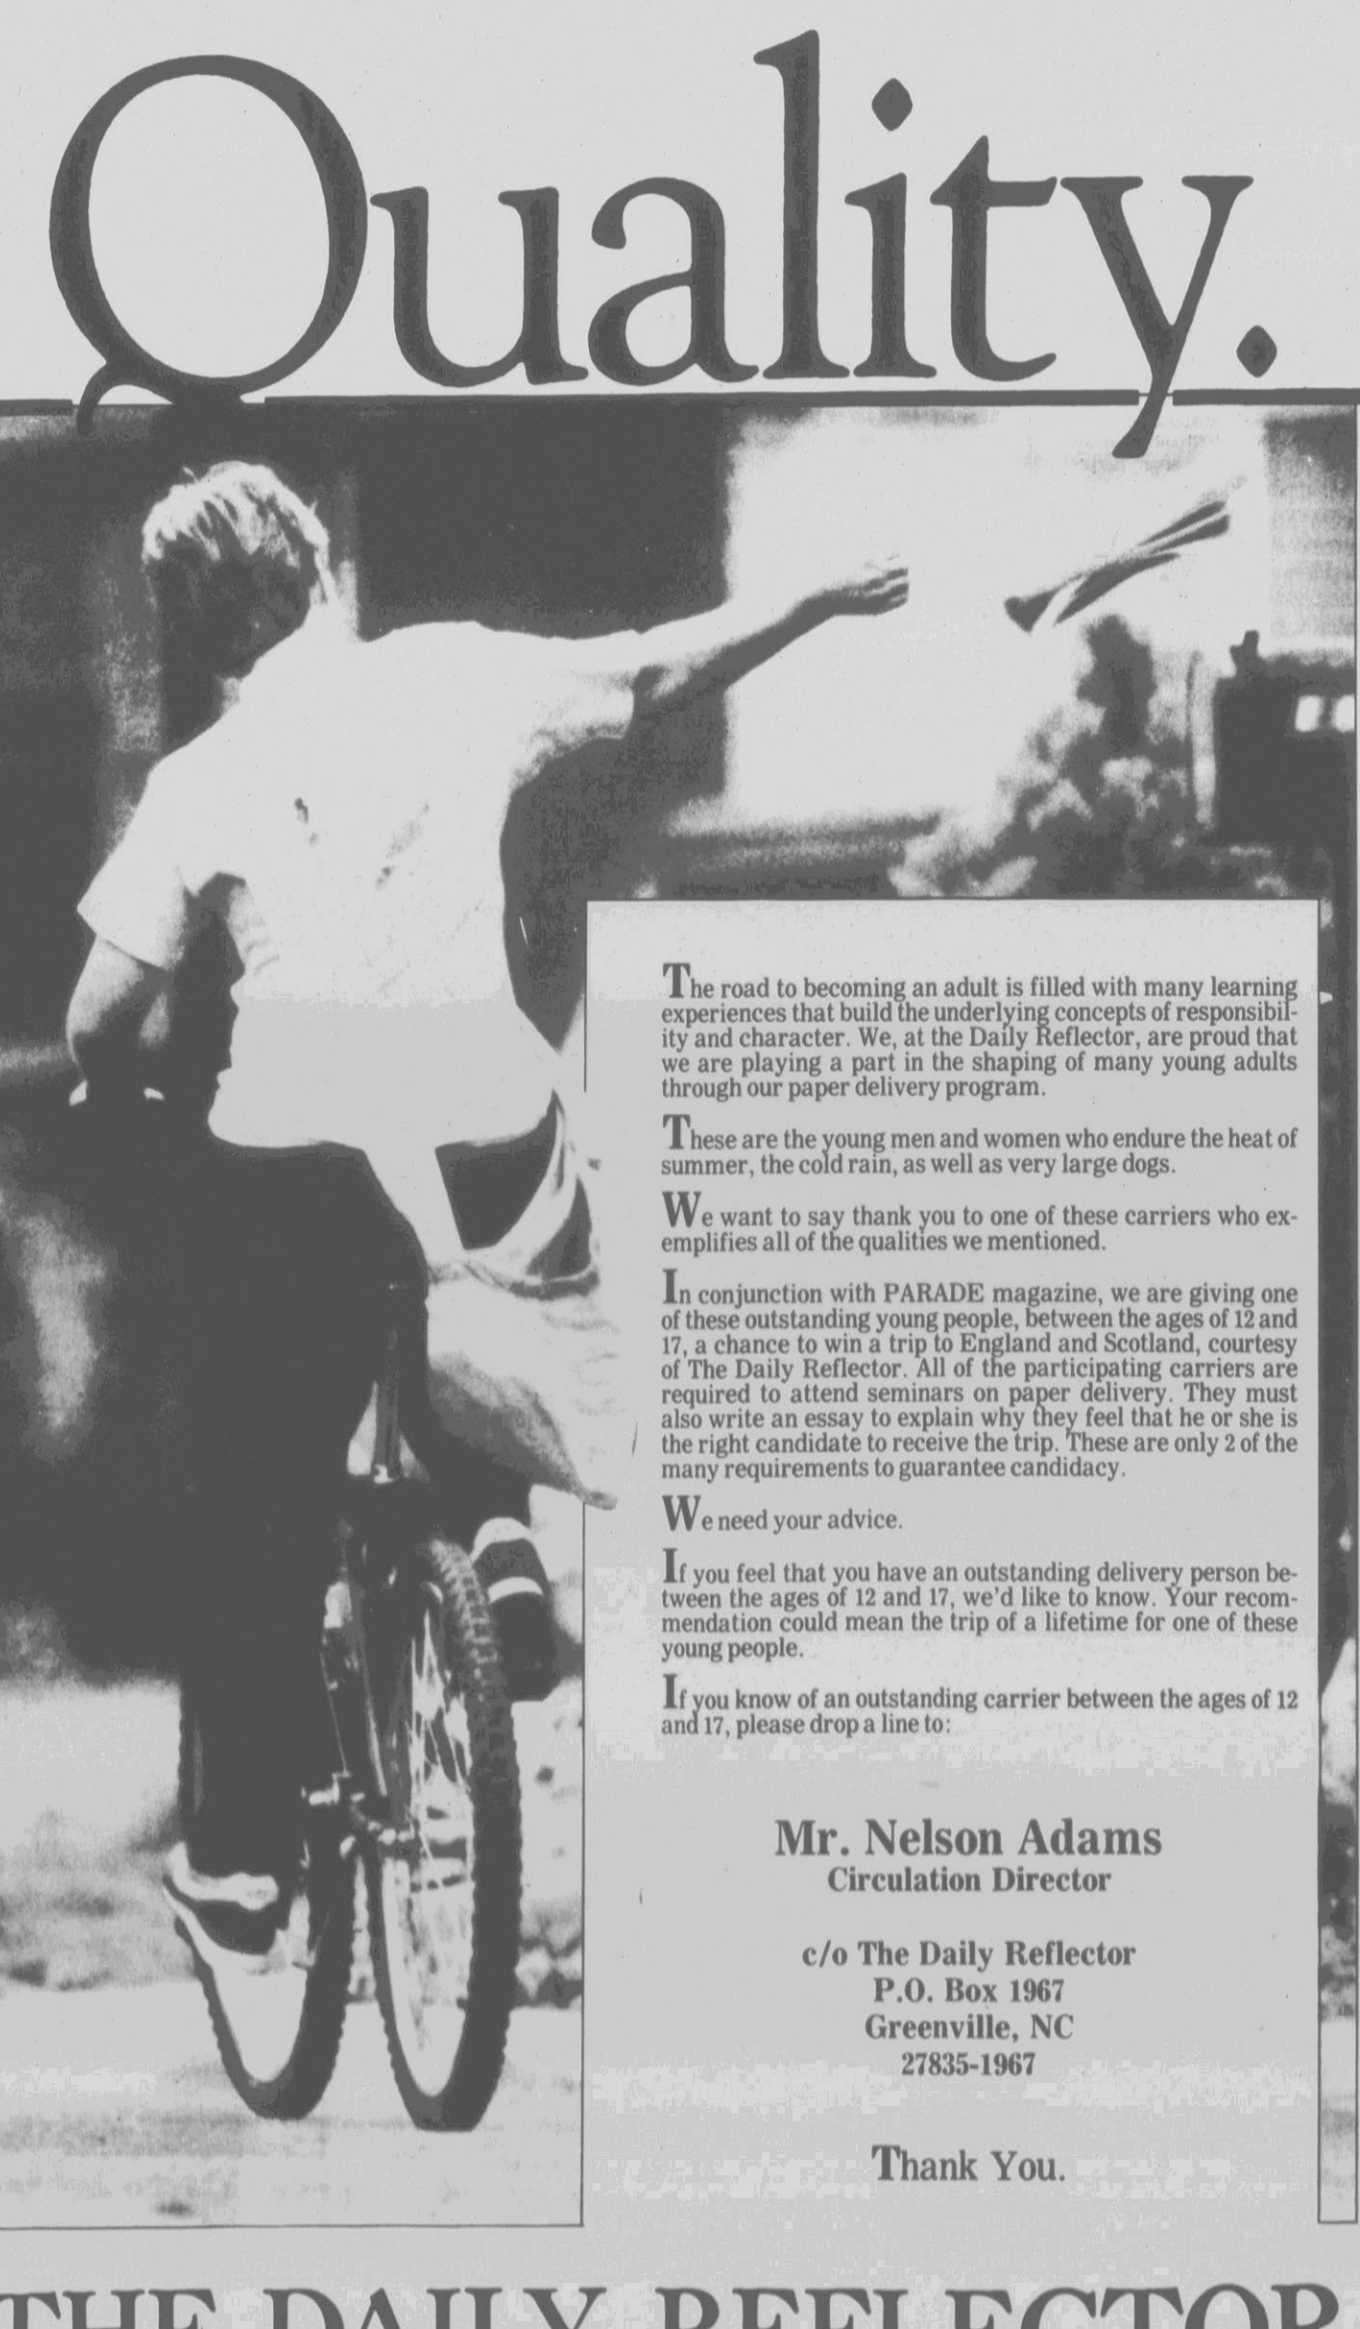

PPOs - Preferred Provider Organizations

Above is a sea of "alphabet soup" that are relatively new methods of delivering and paying for medical care. If you haven't already, you may soon be required to decide whether or not to abandon the traditional system of health care. There are advantages and disadvantages of these new systems. The physicians of Pitt County believe it is important for you to know about these systems so that you will be better prepared to decide which one, if any, is right for you.

The decisions we make today will determine the kind of health care we receive in the future. To learn more about Alternative Health Care Delivery Systems, please come and bring a friend.

This Medical Information Series is presented as a public service by the PITT COUNTY MEDICAL SOCIETY. The public is cordially invited to attend.

James W. Carter, M.D.

The road to becoming an adult is filled with many learning experiences that build the underlying concepts of responsibility and character. We, at the Daily Reflector, are proud that we are playing a part in the shaping of many young adults through our paper delivery program.

These are the young men and women who endure the heat of summer, the cold rain, as well as very large dogs.

We want to say thank you to one of these carriers who exemplifies all of the qualities we mentioned.

In conjunction with PARADE magazine, we are giving one of these outstanding young people, between the ages of 12 and 17, a chance to win a trip to England and Scotland, courtesy of The Daily Reflector. All of the participating carriers are required to attend seminars on paper delivery. They must also write an essay to explain why they feel that he or she is the right candidate to receive the trip. These are only 2 of the many requirements to guarantee candidacy.

We need your advice.

If you feel that you have an outstanding delivery person between the ages of 12 and 17, we'd like to know. Your recommendation could mean the trip of a lifetime for one of these young people.

If you know of an outstanding carrier between the ages of 12 and 17, please drop a line to:

Raider Veterans Provide A Mismatch

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Raiders normally would be favored to beat the San Diego Chargers. But with 17 regulars in their lineup Sunday to none for the Chargers, the game could be one of the biggest mismatches in NFL history.

So could the Cleveland-Cincinnati contest, with nine veteran Browns against two for the Bengals.

What about the Rams, with 23 regulars, versus Atlanta, with one? And Dallas, with 11, playing Washington, with all replacement players, on Monday night?

The final weekend of fill-in football could be an ugly one for competitive balance.

"Some games have been mismatches with the number of players who reported against the ones who didn't cross the line on other teams," said Miami Coach Don Shula, whose team plays the New York Jets. The Dolphins have one veteran, safety Liffort Hobbie, while the Jets have nine available. "Down the road, the teams with the most players who came in and are working and playing will have an advantage because they were practicing and playing."

"If there's ever been a David and Goliath situation, here it is," Bengals Coach Sam Wyche said. "How could you be more of an underdog than to have these guys come in with all their horses, and us trying to defend our home turf?"

Also defending their home turf this weekend will be Pittsburgh, against Indianapolis; Detroit, vs. Seattle; Houston, playing New England; Green Bay, against Philadelphia; Chicago, taking on New Orleans; Tampa Bay, vs. Minnesota; Buffalo, against the New York Giants; Kansas City, playing Denver; and San Francisco, vs. St. Louis.

Chargers at Raiders

The Raiders will have topnotch defensive linemen Howie Long, Greg Townsend and Bill Pickel, linebackers Jerry Robinson, Joe Cormier and Jamie Kimmel, quarterback Rusty Hilger and placekicker Chris Bahr. The Chargers counter with QB Rick Neuheisel, nose tackle Blaise Winter and kicker Jeff Gaffney.

Some striking Chargers had hoped that teams reporting en masse Thursday would convince the owners to allow them to play this weekend, defensive lineman Terry Unrein said.

"Obviously that's not going to happen, but we were ready to play, we've been practicing and there's no better week to come back than when we're playing the Raiders," he said. "A lot of guys said, 'Let's go in and we'll scrimmage (with the replacement players) and the best people will come out.' We're just ready to play."

Browns at Broncos

Both teams are 1-1 during the strike. But the Browns got back quarterback Gary Danielson, tight end Ozzie Newsome, offensive linemen Cody Risien and Ricky Bolden, receiver Brian Brennan, defensive end Sam Clancy, punter Jeff Gossett and kicker Jeff Jaeger, who joined defensive captain Carl Hairston, who returned a week earlier.

Cincinnati has linebacker Reggie Williams and DE Eddie Edwards. "The combination of all that and the veteran quarterback that can get the ball to them, that's doubling the stakes," Wyche said.

Falcons at Rams

Atlanta linebacker Tim Green is the only regular eligible. The Rams have Jim Collins, Nolan Cromwell, Greg Meisner, Shawn Miller and Alvin Wright on defense, QB Jim Everett, running backs Charles White and Mike Guman, plus punter Dale Hatcher and placekicker Mike Lansford.

The Rams are 1-1 during the strike, while Atlanta has lost both replacement games.

Redskins at Cowboys

A pair of unbeaten replacement squads resume one of the NFL's hottest rivalries. Washington stayed firmly on strike, but the Cowboys have veterans Tony Dorsett, Danny White, Mike Renfro and Robert Lavette on offense, Randy White, Don Smerek, Too Tall Jones and Kevin Brooks on defense.

Dolphins at Jets

Although the Jets have their entire defensive line and quarterback Pat Ryan available, Coach Joe Walton isn't counting on a big edge over Miami.

"I don't know about the experience edge," he said. "A lot of teams had the so-called advantage and didn't do well ... New England had it over Cleveland and St. Louis had a distinct edge over the Redskins and they lost. It's hard to predict."

Colts at Steelers

Indianapolis has won both replacement contests, the Steelers have split theirs. Pittsburgh has more experience, with 18 veterans, including center Mike Webster, wide receiver John Stallworth, safety Donnie Shell and running backs Earnest Jackson and Frank Pollard. The Colts will be without No. 1 quarterback Gary Hogeboom, out with damaged ribs.

Seahawks at Lions

Five key Seattle regulars — wide receiver Steve Largent, center Blair Bush, placekicker Norm Johnson, quarterback Jeff Kemp and linebacker Fred Young — will bolster the Seahawks' lineup. Detroit, whose regulars were 0-2 but whose replacements are 1-1, have vets William Gay and Danny Lockett.

Patriots at Oilers

Star linebacker Andre Tippett and newly acquired quarterback Doug Flutie join the Patriots, who already have solid veterans in Raymond Clayborn, Tony Collins, Sean Farrell, Tony Franklin and Ron Wooten.

For Houston, 2-0 with replacements, the strength might be the kicking game, with placekicker Tony Zendejas and punter Lee Johnson. Their best fill-ins have been QB Brent Pease and receiver Leonard Harris.

Eagles at Packers

Green Bay, going almost entirely with replacements, lost in overtime to Detroit last weekend. The Eagles haven't been close in two fill-in games and have only one veteran, linebacker Ron Moten.

Saints at Bears

Chicago has had one of the most powerful replacement squads, with two easy victories and a dominant defense. The Bears will need it against New Orleans, which has 11 regulars, including defensive starters Michael Adams, Gene Atkins, Reggie Sutton and Antonio Gibson in the secondary, and Bruce Clark and Tony Elliot up front.

Vikings at Buccaneers

Minnesota, which started 2-0 and lost twice with replacements, still has no veterans available. The Bucs, 1-1 during the strike, had center Dan Turk cross picket lines.

Giants at Bills

Will Lawrence Taylor run wild against fill-in blockers? Will the Bills, who like the Giants are 0-2 during the walkout, use everybody to block the 1986 league MVP?

The New York offense, which has been anemic as the defense has been porous, will be aided by backup quarterback Jeff Rutledge, who returned with Taylor on Wednesday.

Regulars Carl Byrum and Robb Riddick will run the ball plenty for Buffalo.

Broncos at Chiefs
Kevin Ross, Kansas City's superb cornerback, is the only veteran who'll play against Denver, which has eight healthy vets, including offensive linemen Bill Bryan, Winford Hood, Keith Kartz, and Dave Studard.

Cardinals at 49ers

San Francisco won by only eight points at Atlanta last Sunday despite a big edge in experience. With Joe Montana, Roger Craig, Dwight Clark and Joe Cribbs on offense, Dwaine Board, Eric Wright and Pete Kugler on defense, the 49ers are in good shape.

St. Louis also has plenty of veterans, although that didn't help in a loss to Washington in replacement game No. 1. Leading the Cardinals are wide receiver Roy Green, safety Leonard Smith, linebacker E. J. Junior and running back Earl Ferrell.

Rivalry Is Second

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

The rivalry is of secondary importance in Saturday's North Carolina-North Carolina State football game. Wolfpack Coach Dick Sheridan would like to avoid the distraction and Tar Heel Coach Dick Crum has an entirely different problem.

It is the second game in the series for Sheridan, whose offense came up with the big play in last year's 35-34 victory in Chapel Hill. Crum will be in his 10th matchup in the series, and has won seven.

Focused on trying to win the Atlantic Coast Conference football championship, Sheridan wants that prize to be the motivation. But he has seen too many rivalries in his career to expect his players to be unfazed.

"The guys who grew up in the state have a better feel for (the rivalry)," Sheridan said. "I think the excitement that surrounds the North Carolina-N.C. State game is one that all of our players will get caught up in."

The loser will have two ACC losses, and that would virtually eliminate them from the championship race. Tone down the rivalry, Sheridan suggests.

"I guess we never have been much of a gimmick team. We never have really used factors like the rivalry," Sheridan said. "We approach each game basically the same. But a conference game has a greater status in our approach than other games."

Sheridan nearly got the Wolfpack to the top last season, losing a decision to Virginia and falling into a tie for second. This season, N.C. State has already lost one league game, but that was before Sheridan switched quarterbacks and won his next two games, both ACC victories.

With a renewed shot at the championship, Sheridan doesn't want to lose it on emotion. He will leave that to the fans.

"We don't try and play with emotions by each week trying to find something to gear them up," Sheridan said. "We want their natural competitive spirit ... to be the motivating factor."

In Chapel Hill, Crum is warding off the notion that his job rests on what the Tar Heels do this weekend. Boos filled Kenan Stadium last weekend when the offense failed to move against Wake Forest, and several newspapers Wednesday made references to the idea that if North Carolina doesn't get the victory this weekend, it could be harder for Crum to remain in Chapel Hill as a football coach.

Compounding the problem is news that tailback Kennard Martin, one of two healthy tailbacks remaining in the Tar Heel stable, was suspended for what was called disciplinary reasons. The Durham Morning Herald reported that Martin failed a drug test, which led to his suspension.

For his part, Crum doesn't consider the game a threat to his employment.

Robertson Leads Contenders With $11 Million

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pat Robertson, the TV evangelist turned presidential candidate, has collected money at a rate outpacing all other hopefuls except Vice President George Bush, his campaign reports.

But of the $11.7 million Robertson has raised, only $263,221 is left in the bank, with $637,141 in bills due. The rest was spent before Robertson's Oct. 1 entry into the race on more fund-raising and on a campaign mailing that the Robertson camp says collected 3.3 million signatures from people urging Robertson to run.

Reports that presidential contenders filed Thursday with the Federal Election Commission show Bush still leads the GOP field in total money raised, with $12.7 million through Sept. 30. Of that, $4.8 million was left in cash on hand.

On the Democratic side, Massachusetts Gov. Mike Dukakis is ahead in the money sweepstakes, with $8.1 million raised so far and $4.3 million cash on hand.

The Bush camp claimed Thursday that its cumulative total will be at $14 million by the end of the week. Robertson's campaign chairman, R. Marc Nuttle, said the former evangelist will raise and spend as much as is needed to keep pace with his rivals.

Robertson's $11.7 million included $11 million from 120,000 contributors reached through the mails, and that list of names will provide a donor base for future solicitations, Nuttle said.

Nuttle said the political mailing lists did not come from the Christian Broadcasting Network. Robertson cut his ties with the network and resigned as a Southern Baptist minister shortly before entering the presidential race Oct. 1.

Nuttle said Robertson has a paid staff of 104 people in his campaign in 23 state offices, and has volunteer organizations in 27 states.

Some campaigns had less to crow about. Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt's Democratic campaign continued in debt, with just $35,973 in the bank to cover $339,113 in obligations.

"We struggle on," said Babbitt spokesman Mike McCurry, who added that the figures prove "you can run a campaign for president on a shoestring budget."

Babbitt's $551,815 raised in the last quarter included a $262,000 loan borrowed against federal matching funds that will be released in January. His cumulative receipts stood at just under $2 million. McCurry said the campaign borrowing was a deliberate strategy to raise Babbitt's profile in the early contest states, New Hampshire and Iowa.

GOP Rep. Jack Kemp of New York reported substantial debts left over from large mail solicitation expenses, but spokesman John Buckley said that was not a worry because the mails brought in 85,000 individual contributions, building a donor list the campaign can solicit again.

Kemp raised $2.8 million in the quarter, including a $600,000 loan, for total receipts to date of $6.3 million. He ended the period with $407,165 in cash on hand and outstanding debts of $881,624.

Campaign workers for Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., were gleeful Thursday because in the quarterly totals they outdistanced Bush's receipts, bringing in just under $4 million to Bush's $3.3 million. That boosted Dole's total receipts so far to nearly $8 million.

Dole also plans to transfer to his presidential campaign some $1.8 million left over from his 1986 Senate campaign, his staff said. Dole ended the period with $2.2 million in cash on hand and $495,451 in debts.

Republican Pete du Pont, the former Delaware governor, raised $1.1 million for the quarter, bringing his total receipts to $3.3 million, and ended the period with $252,852 in the bank and $83,382 in debts.

The sixth GOP candidate, former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., raised $490,000 for the quarter, his staff said, bringing his total receipts to $955,000. He had $86,000 in cash on hand and debts of some $100,000, which included a $50,000 loan from Haig to his campaign.

Among the six Democratic contenders, Dukakis raised $3.5 million for the quarter, for a total to date of $8.1 million, with $4.3 million of that left in the bank.

Other Democrats reported the following: Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee raised $1.3 million for the quarter, for a total of $2.7 million so far, and had $1.4 million in the bank to cover $111,766 in debts; Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois raised $1.1 million for the quarter, bringing his total so far to $2.3 million raised, and had $318,784 in cash on hand.

Jesse Jackson, who formally entered the Democratic race last weekend, said he would file a report later in the month. Spokeswoman Pam Smith said he raised some $900,000 in the most recent quarter for a total to date of about $1.2 million.

Rep. Richard Gephardt's figures were not immediately available.

Robertson has said he opposes use of matching funds, supported by a voluntary tax return checkoff, in campaigns, but Nuttle said the campaign would apply for federal matching funds if he needs them to stay competitive.

Candidates who receive matching funds must comply with spending limits under election law. The spending limit during the primary season is estimated by the FEC at $27 million per candidate.

The matching funds become available Jan. 1.

San Diego, Dallas Exceed Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States now boasts eight municipal millionaires, with San Diego and Dallas joining the ranks of places with populations in the seven-digit category.

The latest Census Bureau update of city populations shows New York City still safely atop the list with 7,262,700 residents, followed by Los Angeles and Chicago.

The ranks of places with 100,000 people or more gained six to total 182 cities across the country, according to the new list made public on Thursday.

The new population estimates for the country's largest cities covers only the actual city-limits populations, not the larger metropolitan areas, which were reported on last July.

In addition to the Big Three cities, others with more than a million people are Houston, Philadelphia, Detroit, San Diego and Dallas.

In 1920 only New York, Chicago and Philadelphia boasted a million or more residents each. Detroit and Los Angeles joined them in 1930, and the list remained at five until the 1970 census found that Houston had passed the million mark.

While both Dallas and San Diego edged above the one-million mark in 1986 for the first time, they also accounted for the only change in the top 10 rankings, with the California city edging ahead of the Big D.

The only other change in the Top 20 cities was Jacksonville, Fla., moving up one notch to 17th as it grew from 577,971 to 610,030 people. That dropped Milwaukee down one spot to 18th.

The list of cities with at least 100,000 people added seven newcomers in this report: Scottsdale, Ariz.; Plano, Texas; Inglewood, Calif.; Brownsville, Texas; Hayward, Calif.; Pueblo, Colo., and Orange, Calif. Dropped from the list was Davenport, Iowa.

Among the biggest gainers were Mesa, Ariz., which rocketed from the 74th spot to 60th in two years. Tempe, Ariz., shot up from 141st to 123rd; Arlington, Texas gained nine places to 61st; Raleigh, N.C., moved from 94th to 87th; Garland, Texas climbed nine spots to 91st.

Also, Huntsville, Ala., jumped from 109th to 97th place; Bakersfield, Calif., climbed eight spots to 109th; Glendale, Ariz., climbed 10 spots to 135th; Pomona, Calif., moved from 162nd to 146th, and Ontario, Calif., moved from 163rd to 148th.

On the other end of the scale

Rochester, N.Y., slipped six spots to 66th; Yonkers, N.Y., slid from 76th to 82nd; Syracuse, N.Y., dropped from 96th to 102nd; Spokane, Wash., slipped from 90th to 95th.

In addition, Salt Lake City dipped from 95th to 104th; Gary, Ind., fell seven places to 122nd; Peoria, Ill., fell 15 notches to 158th and Odessa, Texas plummeted from 153rd to 178th.

Besides New York, the 10 most populous American cities, according to the new study, are Los Angeles, 3,259,300; Chicago, 3,009,530; Houston, 1,728,910; Philadelphia, 1,642,900; Detroit, 1,086,220; San Diego, 1,015,190; Dallas, 1,003,520; San Antonio, 914,350, and Phoenix, 894,070.

The city population estimates are updated every two years.

Brock Resigns To Join Dole Camp

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Labor William E. Brock announced Thursday that he would resign his Cabinet post to become chairman of Republican Sen. Bob Dole's presidential campaign — a development that Dole called "a home run with the bases loaded."

Brock said at a Department of Labor news conference that in making the move, which becomes effective Nov. 1, he would "embark on a new mission, a mission that I believe is critical to the future of this nation, the election of the next president of the United States."

The 56-year-old Brock, a former GOP national chairman who has led the Department of Labor since April 1985, called Dole "a conservative public servant with a demonstrated compassion" and said the candidate would aggressively seek backing from organized labor.

Brock becomes the second Cabinet member to resign to work in the Dole campaign, following the Kansas senator's wife, Elizabeth, who quit her post as transportation secretary on Oct. 1. Both are expected to bolster Dole's effort in the South. Elizabeth Dole is a native of North Carolina and Brock was born in Tennessee.

Administration officials said that consideration of possible successors for Brock was only in the preliminary stages. Brock said that he was unaware of "anything like a short list."

THE CRIME STOPPERS STORY

The Pitt-Greenville Crime Stoppers program was started by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce in September of 1983 to help fight crime in Pitt County. Since its inception about five years ago, Crime Stoppers has helped area law enforcement agencies make over 400 arrests and recover narcotics and stolen property valued at over ONE MILLION DOLLARS.

The concept of Crime Stoppers is simple - cash rewards of up to $1,000 are paid to callers who provide information that leads to an arrest. An eighteen member volunteer committee reviews the cases and determines the amount of rewards to be presented to the callers. In Pitt County, Crime Stoppers has cleared cases ranging from larceny of electricity to murders and rapes.

The Crime Stoppers reward fund is totally funded through contributions from the citizens and business community of Pitt County. The Pitt-Greenville Crime Stoppers Committee and the Safety Committee of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce have planned this telethon to stimulate public awareness of the program, to provide the community a weekend of fun and entertainment, and to allow every citizen in Pitt County the opportunity to support the program with both large and small contributions.

IN ISRAEL — Soviet refusenik Ida Nudel, right, embraces American actress Jane Fonda after her arrival in Tel Aviv from Moscow on Thursday. # Shultz Plans Israeli Meetings

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz arrived in Israel today on the first leg of a Middle East visit aimed at injecting life into the stagnant Middle East peace process.

Shultz had scheduled meetings with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres shortly after his noon arrival. He also planned to meet during his three-day trip with a group of Palestinians from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

An expected focus of Shultz's talks is the proposed international peace conference advocated by Peres and rejected by Shamir. Peres aides have said privately they expect Shultz to bring new ideas to budge Shamir from his longstanding opposition to the idea.

But Shultz has said he would not intervene in the dispute, which has divided Israel's coalition government. "Obviously we all care a great deal about peace and about moving in that direction," he said in an airport news conference.

"We all want to get to bilateral (Israel-Arab) negotiations," he said. "How to get there is the question. ... I hope we will all put on our creative thinking hats and get there."

Peres, who heads the left-leaning Labor Party, has insisted the conference is the only way to bring Jordan to the negotiating table. He says it would serve only as a launching pad for direct talks and would not impose solutions on the parties.

But Shamir, leader of the right-wing Likud bloc, has said the idea of an international conference is a Soviet-engineered trick aimed at forcing Israel to concede territory occupied since the 1967 Middle East war.

The proposed conference would be held under U.N. auspices and would include the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, China, and France — along with Israel, Jordan and Palestinian representatives.

During a refueling stop in Shannon, Ireland, Shultz accused the Soviets of supporting "rejectionist tendencies" in the Arab world and of having worked to sabotage an attempt by Jordan's King Hussein last year to patch up his differences with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Soviet Refusenik Gets Huge Welcome By Israeli Crowd

JERUSALEM (AP) — Ida Nudel, hailed as the "Guardian Angel of Refuseniks" for spending more than a decade fighting for the rights of jailed Soviet Jews, arrived from Moscow to a crowd of thousands who chanted her name.

Clasping her new Israeli citizenship certificate to her heart and wiping tears from her eyes, Ms. Nudel told the Israelis who greeted her: "The moment came. I am on the soil of my people, at home."

Ms. Nudel, 56, had sought permission to emigrate from the Soviet Union for 16 years. She arrived at Ben Gurion International Airport aboard U.S. oil magnate Armand Hammer's private Boeing 727 Thursday night. Hammer said he negotiated with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze for Ms. Nudel's emigration rights.

Her sister, Elana Fridman, whom Ms. Nudel had not seen since 1971, boarded the plane for a brief private moment. Ms. Nudel then stepped down from the plane, her pet collie beside her.

She was welcomed by a shoulder-to-shoulder crowd that included American actress Jane Fonda and Israel's leaders.

Ms. Nudel was to meet today with visiting U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who sought her release, and former Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel, whose late wife, Aliza, campaigned on behalf of Ms. Nudel.

"She represents the strongest of Jewish women," Foreign Minister Shimon Peres told the crowd Thursday. "An event like tonight can hardly happen in any other country to any other people. It is really Jewish. It is really Israel."

Ms. Fonda also praised the 4-foot-11, graying Ms. Nudel for all she had done for dissident Soviet Jewish prisoners. "I thank her for teaching me one very important thing — to never lose hope," Ms. Fonda said.

Ms. Nudel worked full time for 10 years on behalf of imprisoned Soviet Jews, including many she had never met. She sent them presents, smuggled vitamins into their prisons, submitted court appeal applications and offered their families support.

Soviet authorities denied Ms. Nudel permission to emigrate in 1971 although her only living relative, Ms. Fridman, was given an exit visa to Israel.

The Soviets said Ms. Nudel was denied permission on the ground that she might have overheard state secrets while working as a bookkeeper at the Moscow Institute of Hydrology and Microbiological Synthesis.

In 1978, she was sentenced for four years' exile in Siberia for hanging a banner on her balcony which read: "KGB, Give Me My Visa."

After her release in 1982, she was forced to move to the Moldavian town of Bendery in the southwest corner of the Soviet Union near the Romanian border.

Stealth Bomber Missing

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — An Air Force plane said by Pentagon sources to be a top-secret Stealth fighter crashed and burned in the dark in the rugged desert, killing the pilot, officials disclosed more than 18 hours after the accident.

Emergency crews secured the crash site after the plane went down on the Nellis Air Force Gunnery range about 8:45 p.m. Wednesday, said Maj. Victor Andrijauskas. The pilot was the only one aboard, he said.

Air Force officials refused to say publicly what type of plane crashed, but Pentagon sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said Thursday the plane was a Stealth fighter similar to the one that crashed in 1986 in California.

The plane went down Wednesday about 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas, and about 50 miles south of a base where a top-secret squadron of about 50 Stealth fighters is believed to be undergoing testing.

It was not immediately known whether the plane was on a training exercise or a flight test. Stealth fighters, designed to be almost invisible to radar, fly only at night, presumably so pictures can't be taken of them.

Andrijauskas said the pilot's name was being withheld pending notification of relatives. He refused to give the pilot's unit.

Wholesale Prices Rise Slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices climbed a moderate 0.3 percent in September as higher food prices and increases across a wide range of goods were partially offset by the largest drop in energy costs in a year, the government reported today.

The rise in the Labor Department's producer price index followed no change for August.

The increase was in the range considered modest by analysts. In advance of the report, economists had predicted that a sharp rise in the producer price index could trigger further rises in interest rates in already jittery credit markets, and could bring pressure to bear on the Federal Reserve to join in the boosting of interest-rate levels to prevent further rises in inflation.

For the first nine months of 1987, wholesale prices have been increasing at a rate of 3.6 percent, compared to a 2.5 percent drop in prices for all of 1986.

The September rate alone was equivalent to an annual, compounded rate of inflation of 3.7 percent.

After rising 1.5 percent in both July and August, overall energy prices fell 3.7 percent in September, the biggest one-month decline since a similar fall in October 1986.

It is only the second time this year that wholesale energy costs have fallen. The other decline was a 1.1 percent drop in May.

The fall in energy prices was paced by a strong 6.4 percent plunge in gasoline prices, following a 4.2 percent increase in the previous month. Heating oil prices dropped 11.4 percent after rising 3.7 percent in August.

Food prices increased 1.1 percent after falling 1.3 percent in the preceding month. Prices rose for fruits and vegetables, pork, beef and veal, while falling slightly for fish and poultry.

The index for goods other than food and energy increased a hefty 0.6 percent, twice the increases in each of the previous months.

Economic policy-makers and financial markets had been eagerly awaiting the figures on wholesale price activity for a sign of whether inflation was again on a serious upswing.

Most analysts, including those in the Reagan administration, had pretty much written off inflation this year as an economic problem. Then came the consumer price index for August, showing an unexpected 0.6 percent jump in prices.

On Thursday, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker said recent fears of resurging inflation are "overblown."

Actress Sandy Duncan Takes Chance With TV Return To 'Valerie's Family'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sandy Duncan knows television is risky and that she's taking a chance replacing Valerie Harper in the NBC series that bears Harper's name.

Duncan joined the cast of 'Valerie's Family' to portray Sandy Hogan, who comes to live with her brother and his children after Harper's character dies in an automobile accident. In real life, Harper was dropped in a dispute with the producers. The show made its debut in March 1986 as "Valerie."

"I couldn't believe she was leaving the show," Duncan said. "They said I was at the top of the list to replace her. (NBC Entertainment President) Brandon Tartikoff said it was a risk, but he thought I had a good shot at success."

"I said as long as it's all been settled with Valerie — I didn't want to join the show then find I was in the middle. But television at best is a risk. I liked the show, the cast and the writing. It's better than starting from scratch."

Duncan starred in two short-lived series on CBS, in 1971 and 1972. Her first, "Funny Face," went off the air when Duncan had brain surgery for a benign tumor that left her blind in her left eye.

The following year she returned in "The Sandy Duncan Show," but it was gone in three months.

Duncan said she remembers little from the period when she had the tumor.

"I lost my vision by the time I did the second episode of 'Funny Face,'" she said. "I weighed only 86 pounds and thought I still looked fat. I was anorexic before we knew what it was. I was totally blind, but they said it was nervousness. I kept going to a doctor and he gave me cortisone shots. That shrunk the tumor enough for me to regain some vision. They kept patting me on the head and I kept working."

"I was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. I thought I was losing my mind. I flew back to Texas with my mother and saw my hometown doctor. He said, 'Hell, Sandy, you don't have optic neuritis. You have a tumor.' I flew straight back to Los Angeles and went into surgery."

She returned to television in 1977 in "Roots," probably her most memorable appearance. She played Missy Anne, who was forced by the customs of the day to turn her back on her black childhood companion.

She moved to New York in 1978 after her second marriage broke up. She is now married to dancer-actor Don Correia.

For three years, she starred on Broadway in "Peter Pan."

"I did it long enough to have nightmares that some stagehand was sawing through the wire that let me soar over the audience," she said. "I did it a thousand times. How many times can you soar without something happening?"

Mary Martin, Broadway's original "Peter Pan" came backstage to see her one night. "She had tears in her eyes. She said, 'You are my Peter Pan.'"

After that, Duncan took off a year to have her first son, Jeffrey. Then she was asked to do a show at Radio City Music Hall.

"I gained 50 pounds with each child," she said. "Doing the show forced me to get back into shape. I did the show for four months and got pregnant again. Then Mikey was born."

After the second child, she was asked to replace Twigg in "My One and Only." Her husband replaced Tommy Tune, and they performed for a year on Broadway before Duncan went on the road with Tune.

She took another year off while her husband did "Singing in the Rain" on Broadway.

"It's been an adjustment moving back to Los Angeles," she said, "but it's nice that I came back on my own terms. The first time I came here I was 23. I came here thinking I could do it all. I was exhausted and overwhelmed."

"I came out here in August 1986 because the theater in New York isn't in the greatest shape. I have two kids who are school age and I wanted to settle down. I came out to see if there was any interest in my doing television. I did a pilot for NBC last April, but it didn't go. I'd just started developing another show when this came along."

TV's Tim Reid Succeeds Despite His Early Lack Of Interest In Acting

By KEVIN GOLDMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — Tim Reid, the star of CBS's "Frank's Place," became a success as an actor in part because he was threatened with failure. As a college student, Reid wasn't interested in performing. Quite the contrary. The Virginia native was drawn more to the bottom line than the chorus line.

"I was a business major at Norfolk State University," said Reid, now 43. "A drama professor said he saw a bit of an acting quality in me and wanted me to try out with the drama department. He said he would make sure I failed one of my courses if I didn't."

But college productions didn't pique his interest in a stage career. Reid continued on course, earning a marketing degree and becoming a marketing representative based in Chicago for Du Pont.

It now seems that that early corporate experience may have served as training for his work in the new series "Frank's Place," seen Monday nights.

In the show, which Reid calls a "character comedy," he portrays Frank Parrish, a Boston college professor who inherits a funky New Orleans restaurant and must quickly turn into a savvy businessman among smooth-talking associates.

The program — which also stars Reid's wife, Daphne Maxwell Reid, as his mortician girlfriend — is shot on film with one camera, not live on tape with three cameras like most sitcoms.

It's a low-key comedy that relies on a wry sense of humor rather than quick jokes. And it's one of the season's few new series to show any signs of critical and ratings achievement.

But how did Reid get from there to here? How did a businessman in a three-piece suit become the star of a TV sitcom, along the way playing supporting roles as a clotheshorse disk jockey ("WKRP in Cincinnati") and a plainclothes police lieutenant ("Simon & Simon")?

By joining Chicago's junior chamber of commerce, for starters. While at Du Pont, Reid said, "I met another guy, and we began going to high schools and delivering anti-drugs presentations. We made them funny. Then we tried our hand at stand-up comedy."

The "other guy" was Tom Driessen, who later made a successful career as a solo comic. But their venture into stand-up — unusual because they were one of the first black-white comic teams — was a long and bitter cliché.

"We played strip joints," Reid said. "I made more money in my last year at Du Pont than I did during seven years in stand-up."

Luckily, his "first venture into organized television" was more successful. "WKRP in Cincinnati," the CBS sitcom about a hapless radio station, produced by the hit factory of MTM Productions, ran for four seasons starting in 1978.

But the series was a bittersweet experience for Reid. Although his work as the fast-living DJ Venus Flytrap brought him to the attention of the public, the critics and the network, he complains that "WKRP" was treated as the "stepchild" of MTM, that the show is never mentioned when MTM officials list their successes ("The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Hill Street Blues") and that CBS didn't treat it much better.

"In four years, we were moved 16 times on the schedule," he said. "MTM thought we were poking fun at a sacred industry. And CBS never understood what we were all about."

Reid would find it tougher to make that complaint now. CBS came up with the idea of "Frank's Place." In a scenario at home only in Hollywood, the network's programming officials suggested to Reid and Hugh Wilson, the creator of "WKRP," that they do a show about a Cajun restaurant — because Cajun food was all the rage in Los Angeles.

"But CBS didn't count on a show where a majority of the actors are black (nine of the 11 characters), nor did they think it would be in New Orleans," Reid said. "The restaurant will be the center of the action, but it will not be the central theme every week."

In one recent episode, an elderly patron of the restaurant died in a car crash after drinking at the bar. His widow sued Frank's restaurant, which didn't have enough insurance to defend itself — not exactly typical comedy fare.

If Reid is the center of activity on the "Frank's Place" set at the Culver City Studios, it may be because he isn't just the star; he's also co-executive producer (with Wilson).

"I'm a businessman first, and I was always interested in this aspect of the industry," Reid said. "I'm not just a star who has his name on the production credits. I view dailies (the film shot that day) every day."

Reid's experience with "WKRP" has sharpened his mistrust of network executives. Even before the show's official premiere, CBS shifted "Frank's Place" from Saturday to Monday.

But that change, made after the show had successfully previewed on Monday night, bothered Reid much less than CBS's refusal to move the show from its 8 p.m. slot to 9 p.m. or later.

"This is not an 8 o'clock show," he insisted. "We're up against (NBC's) 'ALF,' for God's sake. We can't win. The kids are still controlling the sets, and we're not really a show for children."

So, Reid said, the team behind "Frank's Place" hopes that the situation will improve if CBS's prime-time schedule begins to unravel, as many at the network believe it must.

CBS has too many one-hour action-adventure shows, they say; half-hour shows will be needed to rescue the ratings.

"The executives tell us not to worry," Reid said impatiently, "just produce the best show we can." He is confident that CBS will let him have a full television season to find an audience.

"We give CBS the show gift-wrapped every week. Maybe we should also put on it, 'Handle with care.'"

'Kate & Allie' Makes Pitch For New York's Homeless

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In Monday's episode of CBS' "Kate & Allie," upscale Allie is reduced to trudging the streets of Manhattan alone and penniless.

When Jane Curtin played the role, she had plenty of company — crowds of starving New Yorkers.

"Gawkers!" Curtin recalled in a recent interview. "Oh, she's so short!" "Look at her hair!" They're there to observe and to judge.

"This was the only show that we've done on location. And it's hard doing shows on location in New York. You're inundated by noise and people, and it's very distracting, but it's also fun. It was exciting. I wouldn't want to do it that much."

Allie gets a look at another side of New York life when she is stranded 150 blocks from her Greenwich Village home after leaving her purse in a cab. She can't reach Kate or the kids and doesn't have a buck for the subway.

"They tied it in with the Coalition for the Homeless, because it did seem that during the course of the time between 158th Street and Broadway and Bank Street, this woman who was very insulated would see what life is really like, especially now," Curtin said.

At one point Allie sees a woman hailing a cab who's wearing the same designer sweater she has at home and thinks she might be able to solicit subway fare from a kindred soul. She runs up to the woman and recites the label, store and price of the sweater. "See, I'm a nice person. Give me a dollar!" The woman tells her to get a job.

By the time Allie gets home, the show makes a subtle statement about the homeless — there but for fortune go you and I.

"It's not that difficult to get from 158th Street to Bank Street. You do have feet," Curtin said. "But other people don't have a place to go. It's a nice show."

Curtin rarely gives interviews, so it was a surprise when UNICEF announced her as this year's celebrity head of National UNICEF Day, a job that consists mainly of publicity seeking.

"It's very difficult to sit and talk about yourself," Curtin said. "It bores me, so you're convinced it's going to bore other people. If my life was a little more exciting, perhaps maybe I would get out there and talk about what I'm doing, but I don't do anything. I go to work and go home, and I cook dinner and I take care of my daughter and my husband and my dog and the fish, and that doesn't make good copy."

On UNICEF Day on Halloween, volunteers trick-or-treat for donations that go for food and medical care for needy children.

Curtin said she has been approached by lots of organizations, but until UNICEF called last year, she had always turned them down.

"I always thought that it was trite," she said. "You see so many people in my business talking about their causes and particular trends that they're getting into. But when UNICEF approached me, it just sort of struck a chord, because I remembered trick-or-treating for UNICEF."

"I remember being in Europe and the Middle East in the '50s, because we traveled a lot when I was a kid, and being exposed to what the post-war situation was. When they made the pitch it was very difficult to turn them down because of the work they do."

Curtin grew up in Massachusetts. Her father was an insurance executive who took the family on long, exotic cruises in the summer, she said.

So how does a young woman from a respectable Cambridge family get propelled into the off-the-wall comedy world of "Saturday Night Live," the show that made Curtin a star?

"Damned if I know," she said. "I wanted to go into the foreign service, probably because of all those trips that I took. I don't know. I took a detour somewhere."

"I think it was in between high school and college that I did summer stock. It just seemed easier than writing papers."

Curtin has co-starred with Susan St. James on "Kate & Allie" for four years and won two Emmy Awards. Her contract is up after this year, but she said she has no plans to leave the show.

"I could do Allie for a long time. It's a wonderful situation, and it's a terrific character. It's fun to play, so if the show continues to be successful, I would certainly continue to stay with it."

NBC has challenged CBS on Monday nights with its high-rated

"ALF." But "Kate & Allie" shouldn't face any serious threat in the foreseeable future.

Peck Will Lead Rose Parade

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Gregory Peck says his family watched the Tournament of Roses Parade every year when he was a child and now the Academy Award-winning actor will get to lead it.

Peck, named Thursday as grand marshal of the 99th annual parade, said he would begin practicing his wave for the Jan. 1 event.

"I'm thrilled," Peck said. "I think it's one of the most exciting things that has happened to me because I have long-time connections with this."

Peck's family would drive from the San Diego County community of La Jolla to Pasadena for the parade Rose Bowl football game every year, the actor said.

Peck, 71, has appeared in dozens of movies, including "Moby Dick," "Duel in the Sun," "Spellbound," "The Yearling" and "To Kill a Mockingbird," which won him an Oscar as best actor in 1962.

Investor

NEW YORK (AP) — Vanna White, letter turner on "Wheel of Fortune," says she doesn't let an investment manager handle her money, which she is investing for herself in real estate.

"I work too hard for my money for somebody else to spend it," said Miss White, interviewed for Sunday's "The Wall Street Journal Report."

"I'm not rich yet, but I'm slowly building up," she said. "I might get a small apartment building."

Opening lead: Eight of ♣
 It was Oscar Wilde who wrote: "Life imitates art." Had we not seen this hand dealt in a major national championship, we would have sworn it had been composed by a writer for a column on defense. Note North's decision to open one diamond with two four-card minors. That is the modern style. With two three-card minors, however, most players would open one club. North's jump to game was the value bid. The defenders got off to a fast start. West led his top club. Declarer covered with dummy's ten, East won the jack, cashed the ace and continued with a third club. Declarer ruffed with an honor, and where West overruffed, that ended matters. Declarer was able to win any return and, when the king of trumps dropped under the ace, declarer simply drew the last trump and claimed the rest of the tricks.

The winning defense is really quite obvious. Instead of overruffing, West should simply discard. Now no matter what declarer does, West must come to two trump tricks to defeat the contract. Note that failing to overruff runs absolutely no risk. Once declarer has ruffed with an honor, West is assured of a trump trick no matter what. Therefore, refusing to ruff can only gain. This situation crops up quite frequently in play. It is usually right not to overruff with a natural trump winner.

Ortega Nixes Talks If Contras Are Armed

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of Nicaragua's Contra rebels say they're ready to play "hardball" in the Central American peace process by traveling to Managua for direct talks aimed at achieving a cease-fire.

But Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega says they'll find jail cells rather than a negotiating table waiting for them unless they agree in advance to lay down their arms.

Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte today endorsed the idea of Contra leaders going to Nicaragua. "I think that's a good idea that people from Nicaragua go back to Nicaragua and present themselves and say, 'Here we are, we accept the amnesty, we want the ceasefire.' I think that's a very good attitude," said Duarte on NBC's "Today."

The Contra directorate on Thursday proposed the direct talks in Managua to work out a cease-fire by the Nov. 7 deadline set in a regional peace plan.

"We are starting today the hardball game in the peace process," said Alfredo Cesar, a member of the directorate. "So far, the Sandinistas have been able to comply with the easy part of the plan."

Since it joined four other nations in the peace accord Aug. 7, Nicaragua has restored some press freedoms and civil liberties and has declared a unilateral cease-fire in some parts of the country.

But the leftist Sandinista government has steadfastly refused in the past to talk directly with the rebels, contending that they are creatures of U.S. policy and that any talks should be with the United States.

Ortega told reporters in Nicaragua on Thursday that "as long as they don't accept amnesty and put down their arms, they are going to jail."

"Even if they arrive accompanied by American congressmen, they will go to jail because they are guilty of crimes against the Nicaraguan people," he said.

Ortega said in an interview last week that he believed the Contras, in any such negotiations, would make "absurd" demands to ensure the failure of the process.

But the Contra leaders noted that leaders in Guatemala and El Salvador are talking directly with the rebel groups in their countries, and said the government of Nicaragua should do the same.

"If they don't change their mind, they will be responsible for the failing of the peace process in Central America," said Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, another member of the Contra directorate.

In making the surprise announcement, the rebels said they would be accompanied to Managua by members of the U.S. Congress and other international observers, noting that they feared political repression.

Members of Congress who so far have agreed to go to Nicaragua are Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., and Reps. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., and Mickey Edwards, R-Okla. McCain said the group hopes to depart around Nov. 1, which would give time to work out a cease-fire before the Nov. 7 deadline.

Adolfo Calero, another of the rebel leaders, said the Contras have enlisted Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, a government critic and chairman of a new peace monitoring group, to help open the way for direct talks.

Chamorro said the leaders of the four other Central American countries which signed the accord had been briefed on the offer, and all "told us of their decision to support it." The group said the Reagan administration also is sympathetic to its effort.

A statement by the resistance said it "does not embrace the amnesty" offered by the Sandinistas or the current political process in Nicaragua.

"Rather, it makes an extra effort" toward a cease-fire that could enhance the peace process and stop bloodshed in the country, Chamorro said.

The Contra offer came as the Salvadoran president asked the United States to forgo providing additional military aid to the Contras until the entire peace process has run its five-month course.

Answering a question at the National Press Club, Duarte said the peace accord calls for a cutoff of outside military aid to insurgent forces until it can be determined whether the process has succeeded.

"We have said give us a chance, give us this opportunity," Duarte said. "And the maximum time we ask is 150 days."

That time includes the 90 days for the five signatory countries to achieve cease-fires, grant amnesty to insurgents, restore civil liberties and bar the use of their territory as staging areas for rebels.

Sixty days later, in early January, the presidents of the five countries — El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Guatemala and Costa Rica — are to meet and receive a report from an international commission which will monitor compliance with the accord and report on its outcome.

"Then we know the truth whether our plan has succeeded or has failed," Duarte said. "We are asking for this space. ... This is what we stand by and this is what we are asking the world and the United States."

Contra Attack Closes Strategic Highway

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — One of Nicaragua's most strategic highways remained closed today despite the leftist government's claim that its troops fought off Contra rebels trying to block the country's only east-west link.

The battle Thursday raged over more than 50 miles of Rama Road and appeared to be one of the most savage in six years of civil war between the Sandinista government and U.S.-financed rebels called Contras.

Defense Minister Humberto Ortega and his brother, President Daniel Ortega, declared the battle won Thursday afternoon.

But at Juigalpa, about an hour's drive from the capital, Managua, the army continued to halt reporters and hundreds of civilian vehicles. Many people slept in their vehicles Thursday night for lack of hotel rooms.

Ortega said 20 Sandinista soldiers were killed in the fighting, but accounts by reporters and civilians in the area suggested the casualty toll was much higher. He put preliminary Contra losses at 18 dead and said one civilian had been killed and 15 wounded.

The fighting occurred outside the four small cease-fire zones unilaterally declared by the government in connection with the regional peace plan signed Aug. 7 by Ortega and the presidents of the four other Central American nations. The nearest of those zones is about 50 miles south of the Rama Road.

It is the only highway linking the eastern and western halves of the Nicaragua, connecting Managua with the town of Rama on the east, a small port on the Escondido River that runs to the Caribbean port of El Bluff.

The Defense minister said pre-dawn attacks Thursday on five small villages along the highway in central Nicaragua, about 120 miles east of Managua, were designed to cover a Contra attempt to blow bridges near Rama and seize control of the Escondido River.
