Dow Skids 208 Points As Panic Hits Wall Street

By BILL MENEZES
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Waves of panic devastated the stock market today in one of the most frantic days in the history of Wall Street as the Dow Jones industrial average dived more than 200 points, then quickly regained about 65 points.

The Dow average was down 135 points to about 2,111 at about 11:20 a.m., a sharp recovery from its low point of a 208-point decline a few minutes earlier.

The decline left the average 22 percent below its peak of 2,722.42 on Aug. 25. The Dow's 200-point plunge came just one trading day after the Dow posted its first decline of more than 100 points. The decline dwarfed Friday's record point drop in which the Dow industrials fell 108.36 points.

Trading was extraordinarily heavy. About 171 million shares changed hands by shortly after 11 a.m. as computer programs automatically sold stocks into a market in which there were few traders brave enough to buy. The tape that reports transactions was running 42 minutes behind.

The pace of trading was enough to easily break Friday's volume record of 338.48 million shares.

The sell-off on Wall Street echoed plunging prices earlier today on exchanges around the world. The dollar sank and interest rates and gold prices leaped.

Markets continued to be battered by the same concerns about inflation, interest rates and dollar weakness that helped spark last week's steep decline.

Pessimism was so strong in New York that the opening of trading was delayed for most of the stocks in the Dow industrials because of an excess of sell orders.

Earlier, share prices had taken a beating on exchanges in Tokyo, Hong Kong, London and elsewhere.

Money continued to pour out of stocks and bonds into gold and short-term Treasury securities, which are considered safe havens in times of crisis.

"Unless you can make a case for a major recession or World War III we cannot really justify such a severe decline," Suresh Bhurud, an analyst for Oppenheimer & Co., said today.

In New York, gold jumped to a bid of $486.75 an ounce as of 10:30 a.m. The price of the benchmark 30-year Treasury bond with a face amount of $1,000 plunged more than $15 as its yield rose to nearly 10.4 percent as of 10:30 a.m.

But money flowing into three-month Treasury bills pushed down their yield to 6.745 percent.

The dollar fell to 1.7710 West German marks from just under 1.7975 late Friday, and dropped to 141.15 Japanese yen from 142.45 late Friday.

Adding to the surge in gold was the announcement by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that the United States destroyed an Iranian offshore oil platform in the central Persian Gulf today in retaliation for a missile attack on a U.S.-flagged tanker.

"We seem to be raising the stakes here with the Iranian situation, and nobody's comfortable with that," said Daniel Weissman, vice president of trading operations for Manfra, Tordella & Brookes Inc.

On Friday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell a record 108.36

U.S. Ships Destroy Iranian Oil Platform In Retaliation

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The United States destroyed an Iranian offshore oil platform in the central Persian Gulf today in retaliation for a missile attack on a U.S.-flagged tanker, U.S. officials announced.

Iran and shipping sources in the Persian Gulf said two platforms had been attacked. Shipping sources said the platforms were ablaze after being attacked by aircraft, but U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said only one was raided and that four U.S. warships carried out the attack.

Gulf-based marine salvage executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Iranian tugboats were seen rushing to the Sassan and Rostam platforms, 30 miles apart, east of the Qatar peninsula and 60 and 75 miles south of the Iranian coast.

In Washington, the Pentagon said no Americans were injured in the attack and that most of the 20 to 30 Iranians on the Rostam platform abandoned it after being warned an attack was imminent.

The oil platforms, like other Iranian facilities in the gulf, are used as bases for Iranian helicopters and speedboats that attack neutral commercial shipping as part of the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Radio monitors said they heard an Iranian voice saying, "U.S. warship, U.S. warship, let me evacuate the injured before you shoot again." The monitors spoke on condition of anonymity.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, in the first Iranian confirmation of the attack, said only that two platforms were raided by the U.S. Navy. The report did not report on casualties.

Congress Supports Shelling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislators today hailed the U.S. destruction of an Iranian military facility and said they agreed with the White House that the shelling was "a measured, appropriate response" to Iranian missile attacks.

There were also predictions that the attack, carried out by four U.S. destroyers, would touch off a new congressional debate about invoking the War Powers Act to deal with President Reagan's policy in the Persian Gulf.

"I support the action as a measured and restrained action," said Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. "It was carefully calculated from a military and policy standpoint."

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said, "It was a measured, appropriate response" to Iran's attack with a Silkworm missile on a U.S.-flagged tanker Friday near Kuwait.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., called the U.S. action "an adequate response" to last Friday's attack.

"The ayatollah (Ruhollah Khomeini) asked for this and he got it," said Dole. "We've told the Iranians (See CONGRESS, A-10)

Wind Energy: A Thing Of Past?

By DEIRDRE McNAMER
Associated Press Writer

LIVINGSTON, Mont. (AP) — A decade ago, some predicted this town, where winds sometimes rip across the flats at 70 mph, was on the verge of becoming the nation's wind-energy capital.

Today, after a series of failed or foundering wind-trapping experiments and a parade of entrepreneurs who promised but didn't deliver, the south-central Montana town's romance with its invisible resource has cooled.

The 220-acre "wind farm," a stretch of land above the community of 7,000 where most of the windmills were placed, has turned into a final resting place for machines that couldn't handle the area's smacking winds and were left a twisted mass of broken propellers and torn metal shards.

But technical difficulties are only part of the problem. There also are economic realities, including the elimination of federal tax credits for wind-energy investments, and utility buy-back rates that are too low to entice investors.

"Wind energy was oversold," Gor-

Ex-White House Aide On Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential aide Michael K. Deaver went on trial today on perjury charges as the Supreme Court let stand a ruling that jury selection generally must be conducted in public.

The justices, without comment, rejected Deaver's arguments that barring secret questioning of potential jurors could hurt his chances for receiving a fair trial.

Deaver's trial, which caps an increasingly bitter legal brawl between prosecutors and defense attorneys, began with jury selection in U.S. District Court.

Deaver, a high-ranking member of President Reagan's staff from 1980 through 1985, was indicted earlier this year on charges he lied about his lobbying activities to a federal grand jury and a House subcommittee that investigated him for alleged ethics law violations.

Jury selection before U.S. District

Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson is expected to take a week or two before actual testimony in the trial.

A panel of about 100 prospective jurors was led into the courtroom and sworn in to begin the jury-selection process.

An earlier attempt to pick a jury was aborted when news organizations appealed Jackson's attempt to question prospective jurors behind closed doors. An appeals court ordered Jackson to conduct questioning of jurors in public.

There also have been appellate court challenges to the legal authority of independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. to prosecute the case as well as diplomatic protests from Canada to the prosecutor's unsuccessful attempt to subpoena Canadian Ambassador Allan Gotlieb.

Deaver signed a $105,000-a-year contract to represent Canada shortly

Complaint

The Robersonville Board of Commissioners has refused to discuss a wage and hour complaint against the Robersonville Police Department in open session.

Kevin Byars, who earlier in the year left the Robersonville force to become the sole police officer in Oak City, wanted the board to discuss the complaint in public.

Commissioners, however, said that state law permits the discussion of personnel matters in executive session. After discussing the issue in executive session, commissioners announced that no action had been taken.

Writers Symposium

The second session of the Southern Writers Symposium will be held tonight at the Kinston-Lenoir County Public Library beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Tom Huey, winner of the National Endowment for the Arts Award in Playwriting in 1986, will be the principal speaker. Moderator for the symposium series is Dr. W. Keats Sparrow, head of the East Carolina University English Department.

Zoning Agenda

A discussion on bufferyard requirements heads the list of items to be addressed by the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission at its monthly meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall.

Commissioners will also consider a request by Methodist Retirement Homes Inc. to close 925 feet of Third Street and a request by St. James United Methodist Church to close 316 feet of Hilltop Avenue.

The panel will consider a request to extend the extraterritorial jurisdiction south and parallel to the existing extraterritorial limit, which is located along state road 1708, from Tar Road on the west to state road 1709 on the east. The area encompasses Treetops subdivision and adjacent properties to the east.

A request by First Federal Savings & Loan to rezone its site on a .59-acre tract located off the southern right-of-way of Greenville Boulevard and the eastern right-of-way of Greenville Drive from low-density single residential to Office and Institutional II will be considered.

The commission will also consider a request by Greenville Properties to rezone a 134.91-acre tract located off the southern right-of-way of state road 1296 and Stantonsburg Road from the Robert B. Green Jr. farm property from MD-7 to MD-4, MD-3 and MD-5.

MD-7 is a district providing for low density residential development and allowing agricultural uses. MD-3 is an office and institutional use, while MD-4 allows the sales of convenience goods and personal services. MD-5 is a high density residential zone.

The board will consider a request by Peds Investments, PEDs Ventures and Home Federal Savings & Loan to annex 11.52 acres located off the southwest intersection of state roads 1708 and 1700.

A request by Marvin Blount Jr. to annex 58.94 acres located off the eastern right-of-way of Evans Street extension and south of Grayleigh subdivision known as Bedford Place will be discussed.

The board will consider a request by Myles Cartrette to annex 2.71 acres located off the western right-of-way of Evans Street extension and north of Sara Lane known as Graystone Village.

The commissioners will also consider preliminary plats of Bedford Place Cluster Homes, Graystone Village Apartments and Westhaven, Section 9.

Piano Recital

Wilson native Dr. Larry Bell will give a free piano recital at Atlantic Christian College at 8 p.m. Thursday in Howard Hall.

An American composer, Bell has performed in the United States, Italy, England, Canada and Jamaica and is the recipient of numerous awards including the Rome Prize, a Guggenheim fellowship, a Rockefeller grant and numerous others. He received both his masters and doctorate from The Julliard School of Music.

Employment

In September, 17,641 North Carolinians found jobs through the 78 Job Service Centers and six branch offices operated by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina.

The greatest number of placements were made in Lumberton, 707; Durham, 520; Hendersonville, 513; Smithfield, 472, and Raleigh, 463.

Convenience Store Has Armed Robbery

Greenville police said 14 thefts, including an armed robbery at the Happy Store on Greenville Boulevard on Saturday, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer S.A. Bass said a man armed with a pistol took an estimated $559 from the Happy Store about 1:42 a.m., then fled the scene after ordering the clerk to lie on the floor. Bass also said a radio-tape player and two equalizers, with a combined value of $452, were taken from a vehicle parked at 620 Pamlico Ave. in an incident reported at 3:31 a.m. Sunday.

Officer L.R. Kepler said a bicycle was taken from 217 Harmony St. in an incident reported at 1:10 p.m. Saturday, but Officer J.E. Woolard said that bicycle was recovered about 9:14 p.m. Sunday at 403 Greenwood Drive, where another bicycle was reported stolen.

Officer J.G. Bridges said a 9mm pistol and a .38 caliber pistol were taken from Sportsman Gun and Tackle Shop at 200 E. Greenville

During September, the greatest number of jobs listed by employers with ESC local offices were: Raleigh, 1,623; Durham, 1,409; Hendersonville, 1,238; Greenville, 1,081, and Greensboro, 979.

Lunch Week

National School Lunch Week recently was celebrated with guests at South Greenville School. State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., assistant school Superintendent Charles Ross and board member Erma Carr visited the school.

Children and teachers dressed in West African attire to support the theme for the day, and the menu featured a West African meal prepared by the lunchroom staff.

Reward Day

"Extra Terrific Reward Days" will be celebrated at South Greenville School. Students will be given "E.T." nametags, one hour of free time and pictures of "E.T." students will be displayed on the bulletin board. Each student must earn 15 to 18 points to participate in Reward Day.

Regional Winners

Miriam Fulford of D.H. Conley High School is one of 24 high school seniors who are regional winners and will compete for state honors in the Department of Public Instruction's North Carolina Writing Award program.

The second statewide competition for the award will be Nov. 7 at Duke University, Durham, and will include a scoring of an original piece submitted in April and a one-hour impromptu essay on a specific topic on the day of the finals. The original writing can earn up to 60 points, and the impromptu essay up to 40 points.

Three regional finalists were selected in each of the state's eight education regions from winners of local school unit competitions held last spring. Twenty North Carolina colleges and universities will offer scholarships to high scorers in the state competition.

Larceny Arrest

Greenville police arrested Ronnie Lee Jones, 26, of Route 3, Greenville, on larceny charges Saturday.

Officer J.K. McCarthy said Jones was charged in connection with an 8:15 p.m. incident at the K-Mart store at Greenville Square Shopping Center where sunglasses valued at $9.97 were reported taken.

Bld. in an incident reported at 1:40 p.m. Saturday, while Officer N.B. Rice said an estimated $100 was taken from coin-operated machines at 1414 W. 14th St. in a break-in reported at 3:45 a.m. Sunday.

Officer T.E. Evans said a hubcap and trim ring were taken from a car parked on Ward Street in an incident reported at 11:04 a.m. Sunday, while Officer J.G. Bridges said $700 was taken over the past month from Morrow's Nut House at Carolina East Mall in an incident reported at 1:15 p.m.

Officer L.E. White said four cartons of cigarettes were taken from the Piggly Wiggly store at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Hooker Road in an incident reported at 2:30 p.m., while Officer J.E. Woolard said a 1979 model motorized bicycle was taken from Alley Street in an incident reported at 3:54 p.m.

Officer C.S. Candler said a bicycle was taken from 214 Ripley Road in an incident reported at 6:43 p.m., but said the bicycle was recovered about 7:30 p.m. at 126 Ripley Road where another bicycle was reported taken.

Officer J.W. Isenhour said a bicycle was taken from the Fast Fare on Evans Street, near the Greenville Boulevard intersection in an incident reported at 8:29 p.m., while Officer Candler said a potted plant was taken from 1210 Cotanche St. in an incident reported at 11:59 p.m.

Admitted

Two Greenville students, Lillian C. Gordley and James F. Hills have been accepted for admission to the high school visual arts program at the North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem. The two were formerly students at J.H. Rose High School.

Tourism Meeting

The Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda for consideration are proposed goals and objectives of the authority and the establishment of permanent committees.

Scholarships

High school students who wish to apply for $1,000 college scholarships may request applications before Dec. 1 from Educational Communications Scholarship Foundation, 721 N. McKinley Road, Lake Forest, Ill. 60045.

To receive an application, students should send a letter stating name, address, city, state, zip code, approximate grade point average and year of graduation. Sixty-five winners will be selected on the basis of academic performance, involvement on extracurricular activities and need for financial aid.

For more information, contact Paul C. Krouse at (312) 295-6650.

Robbery Charges

Theodore Lenzy Jr., 39, of 1509 Fleming St., was arrested by Greenville police on armed robbery charges about 4:30 a.m. today.

Officer N.B. Rice said Lenzy was charged in connection with an incident that was reported to the department about 9:14 p.m. Sunday.

Officer W.T. McCarter said a Goldsboro man reported that a man approached him on Sheppard Street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, produced a pistol and took $50 from him.

Rogers Named

State Rep. Eugene Rogers of the 6th House District has been appointed by House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey to the early Educational Program Study Commission to study preschool services available to North Carolina children.

The group has five House members and five Senate members, and expects to file a report with the 1989 General Assembly.

Bag Stolen

Police said the theft of a military duffel bag containing a .38 caliber pistol valued at $400 and a knife was reported to the department about 1:10 a.m. today.

Officer J.G. Jenkins said the bag, which also contained a coat and an estimated $840 worth of other items, was taken from the Crows Nest at the intersection of 10th Street and Charles Boulevard.

Moderator

East Carolina University history Professor Henry Ferrell will moderate a panel discussion at a meeting of the North Carolina Conference of the American Association of University Professors Nov. 6-7 at North Carolina Central University.

Panelists will discuss "Academic Freedom in Today's World: Status, Issues, Threats."

Daniel A. Pollitt, Kenan professor of law at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, will provide a commentary following the panel discussion the morning of Nov. 7.

VESTIGIAL WISDOM TEETH

The last teeth to erupt in the mouth are the THIRD MOLARS or WISDOM TEETH, which make their appearance between the ages of sixteen and thirty or occasionally later. Often they cause problems which are best handled by the removal of these vestigial (no longer functional) teeth.

Frequently, there is no option but for them to burrow beneath the roots of the other molars, wreaking havoc in their attempts to break out.

Incidentally, do not worry if one or more of the wisdom teeth fail to put in an appearance. Quite a few people get only three of them and some get fewer or none.

HAZARDOUS INTERSECTION?

With all the upgrading of Greenville traffic conditions in the past several years, I continuously wonder at what can be done to make safer what I consider one of the most dangerous intersections in Greenville — West Third and Pitt streets. It is such a blind corner! Can't something be done to cut down that hill that blocks your view when you're trying to cross or get out onto Third Street from Pitt Street from the south? It's practically impossible to see what's coming up the hill. L.B.

Durk Tyson of the Greenville Engineering and Inspections Department said the intersection of West Third and Pitt streets is included in a Transportation Improvement Program for this year which will either complete or at least begin improvement work on this intersection. He said it is one which has a large volume of traffic and "a fair number of accidents."

He said topographical surveys will be done first and possibly additional right of way will have to be obtained to improve the sight distances you mention as being a problem.

Bork Supporters Planning Another Recovery Effort

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of Robert H. Bork should get their chance this week to go before the Senate's television cameras and make their case for the embattled Supreme Court nominee.

Senate Republican Whip Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming has been organizing a response to the effective anti-Bork campaign that has left the nominee's supporters trying to make up lost ground. Fifty-four members of the 100-member chamber have said they will vote against the appellate judge.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., tried to give the pro-Bork forces some momentum as the week began with his complaint Sunday that a pro-Bork witness had been intimidated into canceling an appearance before the Senate Judiciary Committee. He called for an investigation by the committee.

But John T. Baker, an Indiana University law professor who withdrew the evening before his scheduled appearance before the committee Sept. 28, told The New York Times that he had not been intimidated.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said he would like to start Senate debate on the nomination Tuesday. But that will depend on whether the Senate finishes discussing the Persian Gulf hostilities and invocation of the War Powers Act.

With Senate sessions now available to cable television subscribers, Simpson said Republicans need about three days to make their case to the American people.

But the GOP has refused Byrd's demand to set a voluntary time limit on debate, and there's no telling how long Bork's opponents would take to respond.

Byrd said Friday he would consider a tabling motion if debate dragged on. That maneuver would take the nomination off the agenda at least temporarily, and place Republicans in the position of delaying a new nominee.

With a majority of the Senate already on record against Bork, Byrd's motion would have a good chance of winning.

If a new candidate is not confirmed by the time the Senate adjourns for the year, there could be a delay of several months before the Democratic-controlled body would be ready to handle another controversial nomination.

Humphrey's complaint regarding the pro-Bork witness centered on a phone call made to Baker by Judiciary Committee aide Linda Green the night before Baker was to have testified.

"Intimidation of a black witness is reminiscent of the ugly tactics of the Ku Klux Klan," Humphrey said in a statement.

Ms. Greene, who is also black, said she knew Baker and warned him to expect a tough examination of his academic career and scholarship, but she denied that her intent was to dissuade him from testifying, according to The New York Times. She characterized it as a call to professional associate whom she regarded as a friend.

"I told him, 'People are playing hardball,'" Ms. Greene said. "I asked him if he was prepared to go through tough questioning he was going to get."

Baker told the newspaper that Ms. Greene, counsel to a Judiciary subcommittee headed by Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, played a role in changing his mind, but he said there was no intimidation or harassment.

Metzenbaum said through an aide that Humphrey's allegation shows "how desperate the White House has become" in its attempt to salvage the nomination.

White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr., told an interviewer last week that if Bork is defeated, Reagan will submit another nominee "in the same mold." And the president said last week that Bork's opponents would not like his next choice any better than they liked Bork.

School Activities

Pactolus Elementary School students have participated in several activities this month.

During Fire Prevention Week, students were exposed to equipment used in fires and to safety techniques. They will also participate in various computer activities in observance of October as Computers in Learning Month.

In celebration of National School Lunch Week, students decorated the school cafeteria with a banner, mobiles and displays. Parents were invited to eat lunch with their children.

Weather forecaster Jim Woods visited Harriet Barnhill's kindergarten students in conjunction with a class unit on weather. The class gave Woods a decorated weather cake. He also discussed weather with Shirley Ebron's fifth-grade students.

Plans are being made for the school Halloween Carnival Oct. 23 from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Permit

The Greenville Police Department has granted a solicitation permit to the Wahl-Coates School PTA allowing fund raising for a public address system and classroom and physical education equipment Wednesday until Oct. 27.

The department also granted a permit of the Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi allowing fund raising for projects until Nov. 15.

The Greenville Human Relations Council will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Community Building located on the corner of Fourth and Washington streets.

Net Income Rose

First Wachovia Corp. announced that its net income for the third quarter of 1987 amounted to $56.8 million, compared with $50.7 million in 1986.

John G. Medlin Jr., chief executive officer, said the third quarter net income represented annualized returns of 1.24 percent on assets and 18.2 percent on shareholders' equity.

For the first nine months, net income totaled $136.7 million, compared with $142.6 million earned in 1986.

Medlin said that average earning assets rose $1.364 billion or 9.5 percent for the third quarter and $1.175 billion or 8.2 percent for the year to date, compared with 1986.

Cash Payment

The board of directors of The Planters Corp. declared a fourth quarter cash dividend of 12 cents per share, payable on Dec. 15 to shareholders of record on Nov. 30.

Planters said the dividend is equal to dividends paid in each of the first three quarters of 1987 and represents an increase over the dividend paid on the fourth quarter of 1986. Planters said the action marks the 21st consecutive year that it has increased its cash dividend.

Planters Corp., with its subsidiary Planters National Bank, has total assets of more than $850 million.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL

Peanut farmers in Pitt and other peanut growing areas must make planning decisions for next year and later years now to avoid disease problems in future crop rotations.

The major reason for the advance planning is because of the effects of the disease Cylindrocladium black root rot or CBR. The fact that CBR is now present in many fields in eastern North Carolina peanut fields means that growers must take steps to reduce the disease before the crop is planted. Because the disease is soil-borne, and because the fungus has survival structures that allow it to remain in fields for several seasons, long rotations between crops of peanuts will help reduce disease incidence.

Unfortunately, many peanut farmers do not have enough available good quality peanut land to give a two or three season "rest" from peanut planting. These growers can expect these peanut fields to remain as hotspots for the CBR fungus. Since the disease can be expected, the grower should plan to do several things the next time peanuts are planted in the field.

There is currently one variety of peanut that has considerable resistance to CBR, the variety NC8C. In two or three more years, a new variety of CBR resistant peanut, NC10C should be released on a limited basis. Both of these varieties perform much better if a preplant application of the soil fumigant, Vapam is injected into the soil two weeks prior to planting. Neither of these varieties is immune to the CBR fungus. In other words, a small percentage of the peanuts in the field will become infected with the disease. The use of the fumigant Vapam or the use of another fumigant, Vorlex has proven to be of considerable benefit in further reducing disease.

There are a few things that growers can do to reduce CBR. One thing is to remove the peanut hay and do a light disking of crop debris or no disking at all. The theory is that the fungus does not survive very well if severe cold weather freezes the water in the plow layer for extended periods. If the fungus is buried deeply, it is no subjected to this type of damage.

As peanut fields are examined for maturity, and harvested, the grower will benefit his future plans by noticing where in the field that CBR has caused the greatest losses. It will help reduce the spread of the disease to clean thoroughly the digger and combine between fields that are infested and those that are not. The fungus can travel from place to place on soil particles and crop debris. It may help to use aerial photographs of the field to make note of the area of the field where the disease was present. Using soil maps can be included in the cropping records that might help manage a farm more efficiently.

Reducing the cost of production is a very important consideration. It is also important to use the tools that we have at present to manage the problems that are expected. The soil fumigants listed above can be put out in the areas of the field where disease pressure is the worst in order to reduce the cost of the chemical.

While the harvest season is at hand, contact your county agent to identify disease problems and make plans for future growing seasons. Pitt County peanut farmers may contact Sam Uzzell, Pitt County agricultural extension agent, at 830-6374. This is a recently changed telephone number. This is the best time of the year to evaluate the field for disease and insect problems, lime and fertilizer needs, and weed identifications.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

THE HUMAN ELEMENT!

With the increasing use of computers and other types of modern technology, you might think that the real estate industry would someday become completely automated, mechanized and computerized. Perhaps there would no longer be a need for real people to act as real estate brokers and sales agents.

In fact, technological advances have given real estate professionals new tools which speed up the home buying process by figuring mathematical calculations, identifying suitable properties for buyers, etc.

But computers have one great fault, they're not good listeners. They hear and record information presented to them, but they don't LISTEN!

You see, the trained ear of a true real estate professional listens closely as buyers and sellers express their real estate needs and desires. More than once, a buyer has expressed the strong desire to own a newer, more modern home in the "right" neighborhood, only to end up buying a 40 year old traditional home in an older, established part of town.

The sensitive real estate agent, through long experience and the enjoyment of working with people, is able to "read" clients and customers to the point of knowing and understanding the presence of an unstated need. A computer would never know that the buyer had long envied life in a large older home.

Williams Gets New Stay Of Execution

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — Douglas Williams Jr., sentenced to death for the 1981 death of 100-year-old Ada H. Dawson of Conetoe, has been granted his fourth stay of execution, officials say.

U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle issued a stay last week to prevent Williams' execution, which had been scheduled for Wednesday, said Chris Brewer of the state attorney general's office.

Williams, convicted in November

1981 at age 23, has avoided execution dates in March 1982, May 1984 and August 1985.

Brewer said the most recent stay came on Williams' petition for a writ of habeas corpus that Brewer characterized as "a prayer for release which can encompass anything involved in the issues his defense counsel has raised."

Brewer said there was no way of knowing when another execution date might be set.

Tablets To Return

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The Foreign Ministry announced that the East German government has agreed to return 7,400 ancient Hittite tablets, ending 12 years of negotiations between the two countries.

The Hittites invaded what is now western Turkey in 2,000 B.C. and by 1,400 B.C. controlled Asia Minor.

At the turn of the century, Turkey allowed German archeologists to take 10,400 cuneiform tablets out of the country for cleaning and coding after a German team discovered the tablets at Bogazkoy.

Through 1943, Germany returned about 3,000 tablets.

Cuneiform is an ancient, wedge-shaped system of writing.

Regional Fair?

Record attendance at the 1987 Pitt County Fair has encouraged manager Elvy Forrest to talk glowingly of turning the event into a regional affair.

He sees the large turnout ... combined with glowing comments about the attractions and layout ... as evidence the fair is becoming a regional showpiece on its own.

If the fair's directors see fit to move in the direction of a regional fair, they might count a big natural advantage:

Pitt County is bordered by Martin, Beaufort, Edgecombe, Craven, Greene, Lenoir and Wilson counties. We share economic, social and historic backgrounds to a remarkable degree.

The geographic advantage is no small thing. Rather than expending effort and funds on five or six individual small county fairs we could collectively celebrate summer's waning days with one big show ... one big party, if you will, putting eastern North Carolina on parade.

Together, the counties could do just about anything.

This year's fair attendance has been estimated as being somewhere between 40 percent to 45 percent above last year. Forrest said visitors flocked from surrounding areas, especially from Washington, Martin and Green counties, and he says a large group from Duplin was also evident.

Unquestionably the turnout was helped by favorable weather which too often is not always the case. The fair manager expects the Pitt County Fair to move sharply upward in state standings from being eighth-ranked in 1986.

True, expansion always has its pitfalls; just as it has advantages. Still, foresight and patience overcome problems, and problems are meant to be solved. The results might surprise us all.

Plan Untested

The Nobel Committee of the Norwegian Parliament may have been a shade premature in awarding the prestigious Peace Prize to President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica ... if only because his peace-keeping ideas have not yet born fruit.

The group did demonstrate a better grasp of what the prize was inaugurated for than in other years when contributions toward human rights or possibly the easing of human suffering were deemed fitting causes for the Peace Prize.

Maybe it was because nothing was happening in that arena.

What President Arias accomplished was development of a plan not only for Costa Rica but for the ending of guerrilla wars in Central America involving El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua.

An estimated 25 million people stand to benefit from Arias' effort which began soon after he was elected Costa Rica's president in 1986 with 53 percent of the vote.

It was signed Aug. 7 in Guatemala City by Arias and presidents of Nicaragua, El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala. Any one of those countries may be said to have suffered too much already from tyrannies, misrule and gun-totin' terrorists who slay, torture and destroy remaining resources.

Now the signatories may have been sufficiently impressed by the Nobel Committee's action to consider instituting the call for cease-fires, amnesties and democratic reforms as well as an end to outside aid to rebels in the region. A global spotlight has been focused on the latter and that should influence involved partisans to clean up their acts.

Uncle Sam is no longer in the world policing business and the ball is now in the court of those who stand to gain most by peace.

Partisan Claims Hit Jordan Campaign

RALEIGH — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's extensive political organization is causing him problems with the Democrats who would like to succeed him.

On one hand, Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, a candidate for lieutenant governor, charges that key members of Jordan's gubernatorial campaign are helping the campaign of Hardison opponent Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland.

On the other hand, Parks Helms of Charlotte, a third candidate for lieutenant governor, says that Jordan's directive to his campaign workers to stay out of other races — an attempt to mollify Hardison — could cause manpower problems for other candidates.

Jordan's problem with Hardison dates from his closeness with Rand. The two served together in the Senate in 1983, and Rand supported Jordan in the 1984 campaign. In 1985, Jordan made Rand a budget chairman and dropped Hardison from the Senate's budget leadership.

Many of Jordan's closest allies are also supporting Rand. For example, Jordan's 1984 campaign manager John Bode attended Rand's campaign opening in Raleigh. Such overlap makes it appear that Jordan is trying to choose his running mate. Such an impression could hurt Jordan, as there is a tradition that candidates in one party race should stay neutral in others.

Jordan denies that he's helping Rand, and has directed those taking a lead role in his campaign to stay out of other campaigns. Rand also denies that there's any connection between the two campaigns.

Jordan's directive did not sit well with Helms, a former Charlotte state representative. "This party cannot afford that kind of exclusiveness," Helms said. A worker in Jordan's campaign should be free to work for any lieutenant governor's candidate.

A worker in the Helms campaign should be free to work for any gubernatorial candidate, Helms said.

"Democrats don't talk of winning as Democrats" anymore, Helms said. "They talk of winning for an individual candidate. That may be one of the root causes. There are only so many good Democrats to go around. I come into a town and here Bob Jordan has already been out there for a year and identified all these people."

Gubernatorial candidates, with prospects of future jobs, usually collect many more supporters than do candidates for lieutenant governor.

The Democratic Party has had this problem before. In 1983 and 1984, Jim Hunt's campaign for U.S. Senate issued strong directives to its workers to stay out of other campaigns. The directives led to considerable hostility, and backfired on Hunt who said he was trying to stay neutral. Then-Democrat Eddie Knox said Hunt had forced people out of his gubernatorial campaign but had allowed other Hunt supporters to stay active in the campaign of Knox's chief rival, Rufus Edmisten. Knox bolted the party after losing and is credited with helping Sen. Jesse Helms beat Hunt.

Jordan said, "We're very sensitive to not doing the same thing as Hunt's organization. We're not telling people they cannot get involved. We're saying that people who take lead roles in our campaign cannot get involved in other campaigns." He said that Bode was not taking an active role in his 1988 campaign because he appeared ready to take such a position with Rand.

Hardison spokesman Jerry Mobley said lower echelon workers should be able to work in two campaigns. But Mobley said it was not conducive to party unity, or to Jordan's eventual chances for success, for Jordan's key supporters to be showing up at Rand functions.

Religious Leaders' Influence Waning

DURHAM (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell's decision not to get deeply involved in the 1988 campaign is symptomatic of the religious right's waning clout in presidential politics, some observers say.

But a strategist for Sen. Jesse Helms, who helped galvanize Christian conservatives in previous elections, says political fundamentalists will wield as much strength as ever if a candidate wins their hearts as President Reagan did.

Falwell, the Baptist preacher and televangelist whom liberals love to hate, says he wants to return full-time to the pulpit.

"I don't plan ever again to work with any candidate as I did for Ronald Reagan," Falwell said last week prior to a give-and-take session with students at Duke University.

He said his political work — founding the Moral Majority, registering millions of voters, building a cadre of religious conservatives to advance the cause — was finished.

"Preaching the gospel is my calling, and that's all I want to do the rest of my life."

Whether Falwell, with his zest for the spotlight and the conservative cause, can retire to Lynchburg, Va., and abandon politicking remains to be seen.

Equally unclear is what others in the amorphous "religious right" will do. Many don't seem enthusiastic about any of the 1988 presidential contenders.

Unless the situation changes, Christian conservatives might be less of a factor next year than in 1980 and 1984, when — their leaders claim — they were central to Reagan's overwhelming victory margins.

"There's a lack of focus in the religious right. They're internally divided ... without a leader," Ted Arrington, professor of political science at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, said.

Falwell, for example, supports Vice President George Bush, who has drawn lukewarm support at best from most arch-conservatives. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., is trying to establish himself as Reagan's philosophical heir but has yet to catch on.

Then there's Pat Robertson, who recently resigned from the Christian Broadcasting Network to run for president.

While some Christian conservatives fervently back Robertson, others are squeamish about preachers in politics, Arrington said. Additionally, televangelists have an image problem in the wake of the Jim and Tammy Bakker scandal. And Robertson's admission that he conceived a child prior to marriage won't help.

David Paletz, political scientist at Duke, says what the religious right does next year is less important than some think because its strength has been exaggerated.

"It's not clear at all that there's a distinctive ideological religious right out there, or if so, that it's that big," Paletz said. "And even if it were, there's a difference between voting for Ronald Reagan because the economy is doing well and voting for him because Jerry Falwell says so."

Palez says Falwell's decision on the 1988 race may reflect a dissatisfaction with politics many Christian rightists feel as Reagan's term winds down.

They think Reagan has done too little to advance their social agenda, including a ban on abortions and restoration of school prayer, Paletz said.

"There's a certain frustration and fatigue on their part," he said.

Carter Wrenn, executive director of the National Congressional Club, Helms' political organization, agreed conservatives are frustrated. But he said they blamed liberal Democrats, not Reagan, and aren't ready to quit.

The president's nomination of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court pleased the Christian right, Wrenn said. But the Senate, with its Democratic majority, is expected to reject Bork.

"Each (recent) election has brought a new group of Christian conservatives into the political process," Wrenn said. "There's probably better grassroots leadership than in the past."

Arrington says Christian right-wingers need a charismatic leader to inspire them because most are not political junkies.

For most of the century, "their political involvement was just awful," Arrington said. It took the radical changes in moral values, the political scandals of the 1960s and 1970s and Reagan's eloquence to jolt them into activism.

But Wrenn says Christian conservatives won't lapse into inactivity without someone as colorful as Reagan on the ballot.

"The conservative Christians are portrayed inaccurately as a mass of people who move in lockstep," Wrenn said. "Really, it's a diverse group. The best way to appeal to them is like you appeal to others — on the issues."

Public Forum

To the editor:

Your Oct. 9 editorial titled, "Highway Politics," needs clarification and was based on faulty assumptions.

You state that the DOT re-evaluation of urban projects was based upon a "remote clause in the 1987 highway bill." The facts are that the changes in the law were on page 1 and 2 of the bill. Even The Daily Reflector ran articles last summer on the debate of the legislation. Therefore, your claim that DOT found a "remote clause" for partisan purposes is unjustified.

You also claim that this legislation was passed to cure a trend which "drew money away from small urban areas like Greenville." Again, your claim is not based on the facts. If this Republican Board of Transportation were taking money away, then why in 1985 was Arlington Boulevard first added to the Transportation Improvement Program (TIP) at a cost of $2.5 million and right-of-way acquisition on Evans Street advanced from 1989 to 1988? In 1986, funding for Evans Street increased from $3.5 million to $5 million. The facts show the trend was in the opposite direction from your claim, more funds for Greenville projects, rather than less.

I do agree with your observation that both the Evans Street and Arlington Boulevard projects are important. I can assure you and our citizens that this Board of Transportation member will do everything possible to get these projects on the ground in the shortest possible time at the least possible cost. Your editorial rhetoric of partisan politics on the part of the Democrat-control General Assembly or this Republican Board of Transportation does not contribute in a positive way to the job that needs to be done.

To the editor:

I would like to extend my compliments to the League of Women Voters and CEEPCO (Citizens for Excellence and Equity in Education in Pitt County) for providing an excellent candidate forum at Greenville Middle School for Districts 1 and 5 school board candidates. I came to this forum to gain information about all of the candidates so I could cast a well-informed vote on Nov. 3.

However, the great disappointment of the evening was the absence of District 5 candidates Kathryn Allen and Jim Black. Mr. Black not only did not show for the Forum, but he also did not make the effort to respond in writing to the questions submitted to him in advance.

How can Mr. Black and Ms. Allen expect me to make a decision on their ability to assume responsibility for the welfare of my children's education if they won't even extend the courtesy of showing up at a fair and unbiased forum? Furthermore, if Mr. Black and Ms. Allen decline to make themselves available to their prospective constituents during the campaign period (when even the worst candidates show up and at least make promises of accountability), can we expect them to be available and responsive to our needs after the election?

If a candidate has good ideas and plans about improving the quality of education in Pitt County, let the voters hear about them; otherwise, we can only assume they don't have any and shouldn't be running in the first place. Thank you, District 5 candidates Frank Grooms, George Williams and Charles Ward for sharing yours.

Strength For Today

A noted composer in his biography tells how one night there suddenly came to him the melody and structure of a symphony. Its different parts sang through his mind. For some reason he was too busy at the time to make any notes.

The next night it returned with not quite the vividness of the night before but nevertheless with sufficient clarity that he might well have captured the genius of it. The third day he was ready to go to work on it, but by that time all recollection of it had departed.

Many parables have been written about the necessity of taking advantage of opportunity when it arises. Not enough has been written, however, about the tendency of human nature to procrastinate. When we delay, opportunity may well return, but by that time we, because of our desultory ways, are not prepared to make use of it.

Central American Leaders Showing True Grit In Peace Quest

It is a little more than two months since the presidents of Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and El Salvador agreed to a set of steps for bringing peace to Central America. The agreement caught Washington and much of the world by surprise — as has the energy and grit with which the Central American presidents have been making good on their commitments.

Peace will still elude the region on Nov. 7, the deadline for some major provisions of the agreement. Yet sufficient progress will have been made, not only to assure the effort a longer life but to infuse it with a certain robustness. The awarding of the Nobel Peace Prize last week to the plan's originator, Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez, is less a recognition of what has been accomplished than a benediction on what is under way.

If signing the Guatemala accord expressed the Central American yearning for peace, the follow-up activities of the respective presidents reflect the limitations of their power. Each party must take initiative to show good will, but none can go too far — with so much at stake — without reciprocal acts. The United States, though not a signatory, could greatly ease the process, but Central Americans are learning that they can proceed without us. This was evident when El Salvador President Jose Napoleon Duarte visited the White House Wednesday, and strongly defended the accord while also stressing friendship for the United States.

Though agreement to the Arias plan was unexpected, it was no accident. It expressed a confluence of events and trends building for many months. First and foremost, the five presidents came to a shared sense of the toll that the Central American conflicts were taking on the entire region. While the burdens of war had fallen most heavily on Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala, they weighed as well on Costa Rica and Honduras, which have reluctantly given sanctuary both to refugees and anti-Sandinista rebels. Since 1981, per capita income in the region had dropped by 26 percent and, with continuing violence, prospects seemed bleak.

Second, for differing reasons, the presidents of Nicaragua and El Salvador were ready to pursue peace. Daniel Ortega was selected to stand for the Nicaraguan presidency as the compromise candidate — acceptable to other Sandinista factions because he was so unprepossessing. But over the past three years, he and his fellow "moderates" have estab-

the accord. It is one thing for the administration to take the democratization provisions seriously. It is quite another to use them to oust the Sandinistas. The Central Americans accept that Nicaraguan politics, even under the agreement, will take years to become fully democratic.

Second, the agreement is unequivocal in calling for an end to support by all governments for insurrectional movements. This applies to any U.S. aid to the Contras that is not for returning them to normal life. The Central Americans see stopping Contra aid as necessary for any real political opening, but Reagan refuses to give up the Contra bargaining chip, insisting it be retained to guarantee Sandinista compliance.

Third, the agreement gives little attention to measures related to security and arms limitations. In his recent speech before the Organization of American States, Reagan correctly stated that the accord "does not address U.S. security concerns in the region." What he ignored was the expectation of the Central Americans that the United States would negotiate security concerns directly with the Soviet Union and Nicaragua. Nicaragua's neighbors view the withdrawal of Soviet and Cuban advisers, reduction of Communist bloc military assistance and limitation of the size and sophistication of Sandinista armed forces as important to advancing the peace process. But they want U.S. help in achieving this.

The Sandinistas might yet renege on some key promises. It is possible they may feel too threatened by the political openings and civil liberties that they committed to. We may never know, since the Reagan Administration seems unwilling to put the Arias plan to the test. Until the Administration is ready to consider acceptance of the Sandinista regime's continued existence, there will be nothing to negotiate about with the Sandinistas, and there will be incentives for the Sandinistas not to comply with the agreement.

A majority in Congress, however, back the Arias plan. They cannot compel Reagan to do so — certainly not between now and Nov. 7. But by rebuffing his requests for more Contra aid they can at least keep him from dealing a body blow to the peace process.

Peter Bell, president of the Edna McConnell Clark Foundation, is co-chairman of the Inter-American Dialogue, an independent group of Western Hemisphere leaders.

Analysis

lished their ascendancy. A relaxation of tension as in their interest as well as their country's.

Meanwhile, Duarte's political star had fallen in El Salvador. In pursuing peace, Duarte could appeal to his people's war-weariness and show a measure of independence from the United States. And the Arias plan, by calling for an end to foreign support for insurgent groups and dialogue with unarmed opposition, legitimized the Ortega and Duarte governments and discredited the rebel causes.

Third, never enthusiastic about the U.S.-backed Contras, the presidents of countries neighboring Nicaragua had become convinced that the U.S. policy toward the Sandinistas was moribund. Most Central Americans believed the Contras were not going to defeat the Sandinistas. And now, power ebbing away, President Reagan seems incapable of sustaining congressional support for the Contras.

Finally, the Guatemala agreement signifies Central American independence. Since agreeing on the Arias plan, the Central American presidents have taken steps to implement provisions in advance of the deadline. For example, all the signatories have decided to set up commissions on national reconciliation. In the cases of both El Salvador and Guatemala, historic meetings have been held between the governments and armed insurgents.

In Nicaragua, the Sandinistas have named their toughest critic, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, to head the reconciliation commission, approved the reopening of the newspaper La Prensa and Radio Catolica and permitted the assembly of peaceful opponents. They have also repatriated a key rebel group of Miskito Indians, promoted the previously existing amnesty program and unilaterally declared cease-fire zones in three embattled provinces. Even more promising, Ortega and the commandantes have crisscrossed the country to explain the agreement and campaign for peace. The Sandinistas appear to have gone too far to be engaging simply in propaganda plays.

If the progress toward peace still falls short of the mark set for Nov. 7, the United States must bear much responsibility. Reagan has offered half-hearted praise for the Guatemala agreement, but also denounced it as "fatally flawed." In fact, the agreement's underlying weakness for the Administration is precisely the foundation for peace. The Central Americans will accept the existence of the Sandinista regime in return for Sandinista guarantees about its behavior at home and in the region.

By now the U.S. administration's opposition is clear on three basic points.

First, the Central American presidents have gone a long way toward spelling out the criteria and procedures for democratization, but they also set limits on the changes to be expected. Their agreement, for example, mandates "free, pluralistic, and honest elections," while recognizing that they will be held according to the schedules of "present political constitutions." By contrast, Reagan has declared democracy to be the "bottom line," the point on which there is "no compromise."

Three weeks ago, a White House spokesman suggested that accelerating the Nicaraguan presidential election, scheduled for 1990, might be required for U.S. support of Americans enjoy the best health care in the world. However, it is not so easy to agree on the best way to contain costs while continuing to receive the highest quality of care. As a result there are a host of new programs referred to as alternative health care delivery systems:

HMOs - Health Maintenance Organizations
IPAs - Individual Practice Organizations
PPOs - Preferred Provider Organizations

Above is a sea of "alphabet soup" that are relatively new methods of delivering and paying for medical care. If you haven't already, you may soon be required to decide whether or not to abandon the traditional system of health care. There are advantages and disadvantages of these new systems. The physicians of Pitt County believe it is important for you to know about these systems so that you will be better prepared to decide which one, if any, is right for you.

Eastern Chamber Moving Ahead With Plans To Clear Old Buildings

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — The Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce is forming local committees in 43 counties to help owners restore or remove weathered tobacco barns, kudzu-draped tenant houses and other abandoned buildings they say are eyesores.

"We're not out there to burn down tobacco barns," said James E. Fulghum, the chamber's executive vice president. Fulghum, a Wilson businessman, said the campaign is intended to improve the image of the area and to benefit the economy.

Individuals can benefit by using or selling their property, he said, and the region can benefit by making the area more attractive to new industry and business.

"We don't need to tear everything down to keep it cleaned up," Fulghum said. "We need to use what we've got. We don't need to let it fall down if it has a use."

While weather-beaten buildings may stand as stoic reminders of the past to many owners, they often are considered eyesores by non-residents who consider relocating in eastern North Carolina. A handbook developed by the chamber says the large number of abandoned structures remind residents and visitors of the changes that are occurring in the region.

"Over the years the number of farmers and farm workers has significantly declined," the handbook said. "This has left behind a very large number of abandoned houses, barns, sheds and stores that are not being kept in good repair. These structures create an impression of a dying economy for 'outsiders' and may also be costly to landowners."

Fulghum said an estimate of the number of abandoned buildings was not available. But he said that on an 11-mile stretch of U.S. 264 east of Wilson, he counted about 38 structures that needed work.

"We don't need 38 falling-down buildings between Wilson and Saratoga," he said. "We need three or four restored ones."

Sandy Wiggins, who heads the cleanup campaign committee in Wilson County, said a major goal of the committees would be to convince people that they can improve the looks of the countryside without sacrificing their heritage.

"They may say a barn or building has been on the homeplace for years and we want to keep it like it is," she said.

Under the program, called the Carolina Clean Countryside Campaign, the owners voluntarily decide what, if anything, they will do with their property. The county committees will provide qualified people to advise on the historical significance of any building and how buildings or records might be preserved. Anyone who wants to destroy a building will be able to contact a committee member, who will have a specialist evaluate the building and make recommendations on restoration or removal.

Contractors may be willing to remove the buildings in exchange for the materials, and they will be made available if removal is found to be the most desirable option. In some cases, the handbook said, a last resort might be to turn over a structure to a fire department for practice burning.

Fulghum said the program could have financial benefits for property owners. If a building is removed, he said, the owner might save money by having the building taken off tax books and by eliminating utility connections. The land could also be converted to more profitable uses.

"If you've got a cluster of the old tar paper tobacco barns, you're taking up quite a bit of land," he said. "Then you've got a vermin problem and a child accident problem. Children play around these places so they are a safety hazard."

He said that in some areas, old tobacco barns have been refurbished to provide living space and others have been transformed into garages for machinery. "Any kind of adaptive reuse of a building that would get it out of the abandoned arena and into action again would be good," he said.

54 State High Schools Will Get Classes Via Satellite

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The distance separating modern education from the one-room schoolhouse will increase by a giant leap next year when students in sparsely populated counties in North Carolina begin learning by satellite, a state education official says.

A consultant has identified 54 high schools where the school population is too small to offer elective courses that many students need to prepare for college, said Elsie Brumback, assistant state superintendent of public instruction in charge of media and technology.

"We will have a master teacher at a site in Raleigh or elsewhere who will actually do the teaching," Ms. Brumback said. "The students will tune in, and they will be wired back to the teacher by a telephone line so they can ask questions."

The $3 million for the satellite courses is part of the state's Basic Education Program, an eight-year effort to provide all students in the public schools a basic level of instructional programs and services no matter where they live.

During this school year, a satellite dish will be installed at each of the 54 campuses, which have an enrollment of 450 or less, Ms. Brumback said.

These are schools where the study found teacher shortages limit course offerings or where small numbers of students interested in certain courses make it difficult or impossible to justify the cost of providing them.

In the 1988-89 school year, Ms. Brumback said, it may be possible for students in Bladenboro to be learning calculus from a teacher in Raleigh; students in Tabor City to be learning Spanish from a teacher in Texas; and a student in Orrum or Parkton to be learning physics from a teacher in Chapel Hill.

The department has not yet decided whether to tie in with a national program or to originate all of the electronically-delivered classes in North Carolina.

"We may have a combination of both," Ms. Brumback said. "We'll have to see the quality of those already available, whether they follow our curriculum, what textbooks they are using, the qualifications of their master teachers and the schedule from where it's beamed."

Except for pilot programs in three schools last year, it will be North Carolina's first entry into satellite instruction, she said. The state will join 22 other states already offering classes by satellite.

The study, completed in June by Linda K. De Grand, pinpointed the needs in both staff development and facility resources to begin the operation. It also surveyed the subject areas requested but not available. Calculus, physics and foreign languages are the courses students want most, Ms. Brumback said. And of the foreign languages, Spanish came out on top. Others wanted courses in advanced chemistry, earth science, trigonometry, consumer math, algebra, advanced computer studies, world history, Latin, German and French.

Although a void in arts courses was recognized, these areas were not included in the study because courses like drama and visual arts may not be suitable for satellite delivery, the report says.

The survey found that most of the schools lacked facilities to provide for the satellite-delivered courses, either in classroom space, telephone lines or television receivers. But most said they could adjust to accommodate the program.

NCC Installs Chancellor

DURHAM (AP) — North Carolina Central University must re-emphasize its commitment to producing quality public school teachers, Tyronza Richmond said during his installation as the university's new chancellor.

"Our success in continuing to recruit and enroll well-prepared students will be determined more by our ability to prepare quality committed teachers than by any other single activity," Richmond said Saturday. He also called for more donations to help improve facilities and provide education for the economically disadvantaged.

"This university will look to alumni, faculty, staff, friends and the business community to assist in the building of a permanent endowment to ensure that excellence will be sustained," Richmond said.

Richmond, 47, was dean of the N.C. Central School of Business for nine years.

IN THE STATE

Change Denied

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has ruled that the trial of two Gastonia men charged with killing a student at Appalachian State University will not be moved from Watauga County.

Judge Charles C. Lamm would not grant a change of venue requested by attorneys for Jon Eric Clemmer and Darren Harold Waldrop.

Clemmer and Waldrop, both 22, are charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of Jabe Vernon Hardee II, 19, of Wilmington at a fraternity party in Boone on July 11.

Defense attorney Bruce Kaplan argued that a telephone survey of 50 people conducted in the county showed that Clemmer and Waldrop could not get a fair trial here.

Sentenced

JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — Michael Nathan Garrett has been sentenced to 15 years in prison after a jury in Ashe County found him guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the death of his brother, Danny Kay Garrett.

As the verdict was read, Garrett, 28, sat staring straight ahead, as his wife, holding the couple's 4-month-old girl, squeezed his hand. Garrett dropped his eyes as Judge F. Fetzner Mills of Superior Court declared the sentence.

The maximum sentence for voluntary manslaughter is 20 years.

Doctor Indicted

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A federal grand jury has returned an 89-count indictment accusing a Brunswick County physician of defrauding the Medicare, Medicaid and Crippled Children's programs and two private insurance companies.

Dr. Karen N. Paine of Shallotte was accused in the indictment of submitting claims for medical services she did not perform from 1983 to this year, double-billing for services and setting up a group insurance policy for her practice even though she did not have a required minimum of 10 employees.

The indictment was returned this week in Fayetteville and no date has been set for arraignment.

TB Patient

GREENSBORO (AP) — Guilford County health officials have invoked a little-used state law to jail a Greensboro man who officials say has failed to be treated for active tuberculosis.

Cecil Cauthen, 41, was arrested on three warrants charging him with failing to receive tuberculosis treatment. He was being held in a cell by himself at the Guilford County jail on the misdemeanor charges, police said.

State law allows health officials to isolate or quarantine in jail victims of communicable diseases like tuberculosis if they are contagious and refuse medication, said Dr. Joseph Holliday, the county health director.

Mascot Dies

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Rameses XIV, mascot for football teams at the University of North Carolina, has died at the age of 7½.

The ram died the day before North Carolina's homecoming game last Saturday, according to Orange County dairy farmer Robert Hogan, who carried for Rameses.

Traffic Rush

GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Motorists backed up traffic for three miles Sunday in efforts to view mountain fall colors.

"I've never seen this amount of traffic in the mountains," said Hugh Morton, Grandfather Mountain's owner. At 5:30 p.m., Morton said traffic was backed up for three miles from Linville past the entrance to the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Prized Books Falling Apart On Shelves

By The Associated Press
North Carolina's history is slowing rotting on the shelves, library experts say, the victim of acid found in paper made from wood pulp.

"Our intellectual civilization is basically recorded on paper that is self-destructing," says Jerry D. Campbell, librarian at Duke University. "We're losing books daily."

Spokesmen at Duke and UNC-Chapel Hill say at least 25 percent of their collections are so deteriorated they either can't be used, need extensive, costly repair or need to be transferred to another medium.

"It's very critical," says Marcella Grendler, associate librarian for special collections at UNC-CH. "If you would fold down the corner of a page it would break off and crumble in your hands."

"Anybody that has information on paper of a certain age is having conservation problems," says William S. Price Jr., director of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History, the keeper of the state's valuable papers.

"If we don't remedy (the situation) within the next decade we may be talking about not having material to preserve."

"We've had this book for 30 years," Emilie Mills says as she carefully leafs through a rare and valuable 18th-century work by English naturalist Mark Catesby. "And I've watched it deteriorate."

The book is one of the prize volumes at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, where Ms. Mills is special collections librarian.

In universities, small-town libraries and even in the state archives, millions of books, manuscripts, drawings, maps, newspapers and music scores are silently rotting away.

Before about 1850, books were printed on paper made of cotton or linen rags. As printing spread, the demand for paper increased and cheaper methods had to be found.

Baptists Upset Over University's 'Party School' Label

By ROBERT BYRD
Associated Press Writer
MACON, Ga. (AP) — These are strange times at Mercer University, a Southern Baptist college whose unexpected depiction by Playboy magazine as a "party school" has touched off a holy war for control of the administration.

Since the article appeared, some fundamentalist Southern Baptists have branded the school's moderate president a heretic and called for Mercer to be taken out of the hands of its board of trustees.

Student reaction has been swift, and angry. Last Wednesday, hundreds of clean-cut students packed Mercer's student center for a hurriedly called appearance by Raleigh Kirby Godsey, a former Southern Baptist minister and the 17th president in Mercer's 148-year history.

Cheers erupted when the soft-spoken Godsey vowed, "This university will not be taken over by anybody!"

Earlier this year, when Playboy magazine ranked the college the nation's ninth best "party school," many here figured that someone was pulling Playboy's leg.

The 6,000-student school is an unabashedly Southern Baptist institution. Beer isn't permitted on campus even if students are old enough to drink it.

BAPTIST MINISTER — The Rev. Nancy Hastings Sehested's appointment as chief pastor of a church in Memphis, Tenn., has upset some Southern Baptists who object to female pastors. The regional Baptist association says it is considering excluding the church because of her appointment. (AP Laser-photo)

The Playboy article was followed by another issue containing a nude pictorial featuring women from the "party" schools, including two Mercer students.

Then, earlier this month, Lee Roberts, a suburban Atlanta businessman and Baptist layman, mailed a 16-page "open letter" to Baptist pastors, Mercer faculty members and the parents of Mercer students.

The letter contained "dramatic evidence of filthy language, lewd photographs, heresies, student drunkenness and sexually explicit material."

Roberts included photocopies of the Playboy photos and a student newspaper ad in which someone seeks a backpack lost "in a drunken frenzy Saturday night."

Southern Baptists May Exclude Church And Its Woman Pastor

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The status of a Southern Baptist congregation that hired a woman as pastor rests on the findings of an inquiry into whether the church violated a policy that has bitterly divided the denomination.

The Shelby (County) Baptist Association, representing 120 Southern Baptist churches in the Memphis area, promised to release results today from the investigation into the church's "doctrinal soundness," which was conducted by an all-male group.

Ms. Sehested, who will assume her new post Nov. 1, is one of 450 women who have become ordained Southern Baptist ministers in recent years.

Ms. Sehested, 36, is a Texas native whose father and grandfather also were Southern Baptist ministers.

Adding to the drama was the proximity of the denomination's national leader, the Rev. Adrian Rogers, pastor of the 17,000-member Bellevue Baptist Church in Memphis.

Ms. Sehested said last week, as she prepared to leave her Decatur, Ga., home to take over the pulpit at the Memphis church.

Prescott Memorial Baptist Church offered its senior pastorship to the Rev. Nancy Hastings Sehested on Aug. 23.

The possibility of the association excluding Prescott Memorial and its 235 members threatened to heighten tensions between fundamentalists, who believe only men should be pastors, and moderate factions in the Southern Baptist Convention.

"It's just a shame this had to happen," Ms. Sehested said last week, as she prepared to leave her Decatur, Ga., home to take over the pulpit at the Memphis church.

UFOs Have Virginia Area Agog

By DIRK BEVERIDGE
Associated Press Writer
WYTHEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Wythe County sheriff's deputies have seen the lights in the sky that are causing a local UFO craze, but they are not preparing to battle space aliens.

ceived more than a dozen calls about UFOs in the past few weeks, but he pointed out that many more people who have seen the flying lights probably keep their mouths shut so no one will question their sanity.

something like that, I don't know anything about it."

reported green lights on objects of varying shapes.

"I'd rather have something else put us on the map," chief deputy Herb Cooley said. "This brings all the weirdos out. Before this is over, somebody's going to have to see some little green men."

He has heard reports of the objects swooping down and running cars off the road, but the department has not received any such complaints.

Nobody else contacted by The Associated Press had a good explanation, although eyewitness accounts of the UFOs are easy to come by around Wythe County.

Cooley said the department has received more than a dozen calls about UFOs in the past few weeks, but he pointed out that many more people who have seen the flying lights probably keep their mouths shut so no one will question their sanity.

Sheriff's Sgt. Cihmer Collins, who spent 22 years in the military before he became a civilian lawman, has seen the mysterious craft and says they are probably with the armed forces.

A waitress in the Country Kitchen in Rural Retreat said a crowd watched a UFO from the parking lot one night last week. She described it as round, like a Frisbee, with bright red and white lights cutting silently across the sky. Other witnesses have

"I've seen a bunch of them, and all I've seen is refueling," a maneuver that involves two aircraft joined in what appears to be a stationary position before suddenly bolting off in different directions. That matches the behavior of red and white lights seen by some of the UFO witnesses.

First Lady 'Feeling Fine' After Cancer Surgery

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan, recovering from the surgical removal of her cancerous left breast, is "feeling fine" and is anxious to return to the White House with President Reagan and resume her public activities.

Doctors told the couple on Sunday that final laboratory tests showed Mrs. Reagan's cancer had not spread and her prognosis for full recovery is excellent.

"Mrs. Reagan is recovering remarkably well from surgery," Reagan's physician John Hutton said in a statement released by the White House. Hutton said Mrs. Reagan's medical team is "completely satisfied with her progress in every respect."

A 12-doctor team removed the first lady's left breast and several lymph nodes from under her arm on Saturday in a 50-minute operation. The surgery followed a biopsy that revealed a quarter-inch malignant tumor.

The first indication of the lesion came Oct. 5 during Mrs. Reagan's annual mammography.

"She's feeling fine," Reagan told reporters Sunday after spending six hours with his wife at Bethesda Naval Medical Center. Reagan said the doctors told him "she's ahead of schedule" in her recovery and might return to the White House "sooner than we think."

The president plans to visit his wife regularly during her expected five-to-seven-day stay in the hospital, said Reagan spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

After the first couple was informed of the test results, Hutton released a statement saying, "Final laboratory analysis of tissue and lymph nodes removed during surgery confirm there is no further malignancy or evidence of other disease."

The lymph nodes are crucial because they act as filters for foreign matter. Doctors analyze them to determine whether the cancer has spread elsewhere in the body.

"No further treatment is expected, other than normal routine examinations. Mrs. Reagan's prognosis for full recovery is excellent," the statement added.

Hutton said Mrs. Reagan was feeling "very little pain" and was given a mild analgesic medication.

Mrs. Reagan's reaction to the news was "just total relief," said her spokeswoman, Elaine Crispin. She quoted the first lady as saying, "Just fine. I feel great."

Mrs. Crispin said Mrs. Reagan, the daughter of a neurosurgeon, "follows doctor's orders" and has followed their advice to "keep active."

Within hours of her surgery, Mrs. Crispin said, the first lady's mood was "very up." She was sitting up, doing breathing exercises and questioning doctors about her treatment, the spokeswoman said.

Mrs. Crispin said Mrs. Reagan canceled only one appearance because of her hospital stay, and planned to "be out there soon" in public.

The president joined his pink-robed wife "talking and laughing together" during short walks up and down the hospital corridor, Mrs. Crispin said. The two shared lunch and then looked over the voluminous cards and flowers sent by friends and associates from around the world, the spokeswoman said.

Reagan, who at first played coy with reporters about the contents of a red, white and blue beribboned gift tucked under his arm, revealed upon his return to the White House that he had bestowed on his wife of 35 years a "lovely little mirror that she'd once admired."

Later in the day, Reagan stood in for his wife at a taping of "In Performance at the White House," a musical tribute to Jerome Kern scheduled to be shown next month on public television.

"Nancy asked me to tell you how sorry she is that she could not be here tonight," Reagan told the audience. "I know how much she would have loved being part of this romantic evening of music."

Mrs. Reagan felt well enough the morning after her surgery to walk around her suite and have a full breakfast of juice, papaya, bran cereal and decaffeinated coffee, Fitzwater said.

The couple lunched on mulligatawny soup and chef salad, topped off with homemade brownies, Mrs. Crispin added.

Also on the couple's agenda was a telephone call to Chip and Reba Gayle McClure, the parents of Jessica McClure, to "express their happiness at Jessica's rescue" from an abandoned well in Texas, Hutton's statement said.

Mrs. Reagan told the young couple she had put aside her pre-operative preparations Friday evening, anxiously watching television to see that the toddler's rescue had been accomplished.

Appearing in a jaunty and lighthearted mood as he left the White House early Sunday, Reagan told reporters "I've got a date with a girl out at Bethesda."

"I'll tell her you all send your love," he added with a chuckle.

This was Mrs. Reagan's second bout with cancer. A basal cell carcinoma was removed from her upper lip in late 1982. Reagan underwent surgery for colon cancer in 1985 and has since had several operations to remove skin cancers from his nose.

UNESCO Leader Urges U.S., Britain To Rejoin

PARIS (AP) — A candidate favored by Western countries won nomination as UNESCO director general, and he urged the United States and Britain to rejoin the organization they had accused of having an anti-Western bias.

Federico Mayor Zaragoza of Spain told reporters after getting the nomination Sunday that he would ask the United States and Britain to "join us in ... some concrete projects" in some scientific and environmental areas.

He said he hoped the projects would lure both nations back to the Paris-based United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

The United States and Britain pulled out in 1984 and 1985, alleging that under the leadership of Director General Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal, the agency was squandering money and exhibiting an anti-Western bias.

One plan M'bow backed was for a new world information and communication order that Western governments and news organizations said could lead to licensing journalists.

Mayor called his candidacy for the $170,000-a-year job "above all scientific, professional and technical" and pledged to reform and streamline UNESCO.

UNESCO's 50-member executive board chose the Spanish biochemist after M'bow asked to withdraw from the race, which was characterized by a long and bitter battle between Western and Third World nations.

The general conference is virtually certain to approve Mayor in a vote Nov. 7.

Mayor served as Spain's minister of education, as M'bow's deputy director general from 1978 to 1981 and as his special adviser from 1983 to 1984. He said he would focus attention on the needs of Africa and the Third World.

"My first concern will be for the developing countries, especially those in Africa," Mayor said at a news conference Sunday.

He said he was equally "the candidate of Africans" and all other UNESCO nations.

Canada, Denmark, Japan and the Netherlands threatened to withdraw from UNESCO or not pay their dues if M'bow, director since 1974, was re-elected. In a letter announcing his withdrawal, M'bow accused these countries of "perverting the democratic process."

Mayor won by a vote of 30 to 20. Most of those opposing him represented African countries. Mayor's supporters included most Western nations, many Latin American nations, Japan, China and four Soviet bloc countries.

Mayor, 53, also had been supported by 107 international scientists, including 11 Nobel prize winners.

More Surgery Scheduled On Jessica's Right Foot

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Doctors planning more surgery today on 18-month-old Jessica McClure say they're encouraged but unable to guarantee they'll be able to repair damage to her foot sustained when she was jammed in a well 2½ days.

"I don't want anybody to think that she's out of the woods as regards her foot, because she's not," Dr. Charles Younger, an orthopedic surgeon, said Sunday, adding that Jessica's condition improved.

Also Sunday, Vice President George Bush, who was in Texas for campaign appearances, stopped by Midland Memorial Hospital to visit with Jessica's parents.

"This is what America is," said Bush of the 58-hour rescue efforts. "The rock was hard and they couldn't get through, but they heard the voice and they wouldn't give up and for 60 hours, they dug."

Doctors planned exploratory surgery today to examine the right foot and determine further treatment. They also hoped to perform plastic surgery on her forehead to remove a section of dead skin and prepare for covering the spot with adjacent skin.

"We will inspect the wounds and if we need further fasciotomy, we can release swelling further," said Younger. A fasciotomy is an operation designed to relieve pressure from swelling.

"If we've got areas that look like a bit of the tissue is dead, we can go ahead and clean that dead tissue down to viable, live tissue and prepare a bed for possible skin grafting at a later date."

Jessica, who was listed in serious but stable condition Sunday night, underwent a fasciotomy Saturday.

The toddler fell into the well Wednesday morning and was wedged in the narrow shaft for 2½ days. Her right foot was jammed against the side of the well and lost some circulation. She also suffered a pressure sore on her forehead, which was pushed against the shaft.

"Her foot is pinker. It's still not a normal color at all. It's cool. It is not warm like her left foot," said Dr. Shelton Viney, a vascular surgeon.

"I want you to know that we're still very concerned about that foot. We still have to watch it very closely," Viney said. "It is still a day-by-day process. We're very hopeful, but we may not be able to save the foot."

He said if everything goes right, Jessica will undergo surgery Friday to graft skin from her thighs onto her foot.

During his visit, Bush commended Midland residents for pulling together in rescue efforts.

"Everyone held their children a little bit closer the past few nights and all of us felt the warmth that comes from prayers that are both heart-felt and answered," he said.

Jessica slept while Bush talked to her 18-year-old parents, Chip and Reba Gayle McClure, in the intensive care unit. Later, President Reagan called, asking the McClures to give the tot "a big kiss."

Mrs. McClure said she believes the ordeal has affected Jessica.

"She cries some in her sleep, so we figure that she's having some bad dreams," she said.

Pediatrician Debbie Reese said Jessica has been singing a Winnie the Pooh song, a tune she sometimes sang while trapped, but Jessica isn't enthusiastic about the medical treatment.

"She's cranky. She tells us no. She doesn't like the things we do, drawing blood and restraining her." In order to keep intravenous tubes in both wrists, doctors have strapped her hands to boards along each arm.

"I feel like she's at a real good age, though, that she will eventually forget the majority of this trauma," Ms. Reese said.

The McClures said once Jessica is allowed to go home they plan a party.

"We're going to have a big bash for this little girl," Mrs. McClure said.

Justices Will Hear Charities' Challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed today to judge how far states may go in regulating the fund-raising activities of charities, by reviewing key provisions of an invalidated North Carolina law.

The court said it will study a ruling that the provisions were too sweeping and therefore violated the free-speech rights of the charities and their contributors.

The 1985 state law was aimed at cracking down on fraud by businesses that solicit contributions for charities and at assuring that most of the money collected went to charitable activities rather than fund-raising costs.

The law limited the percentage of charitable contributions that could be used for fund-raising costs, required professional fund-raisers to be licensed by the state and imposed disclosure requirements on them.

U.S. District Judge Earl Britt struck down those provisions last year, and the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld his ruling last April 27.

Citing previous Supreme Court decisions, Britt said, "Any statute that requires a license to solicit charitable contributions or engage in any First Amendment activity is inherently suspect."

He said the licensing provision of the law infringed on the free-speech rights of those charities which must rely on professional solicitors. Without the funds they get from solicitation, the charities might be unable to communicate their views and goals, he said.

Britt also struck down a provision that generally barred fund-raisers from charging fees amounting to more than 35 percent of contributions collected, and in some cases imposed a fee limit of 20 percent.

The judge expressed doubt that any such fee limitation is constitutional because, he said, the Supreme Court has held that "high solicitation costs are not an accurate measure of fraud."

The third provision Britt declared unconstitutional required professional solicitors to tell potential contributors what percentage of the money the solicitors raised for charity over the past 12 months had been used for that charitable purposes.

Fashion Gets Government Boost

LONDON — Lord Young, secretary of state for trade and industry, remembers well the first time he saw a miniskirt here. "I was driving down Baker Street, and I almost went off the road," he said Monday night after four days of designer shows of styles for next spring.

Short skirts are certainly a popular theme in the current collections, but the new clothes are not about to drive anyone off the road. In fact, other than giving raves for Rifat Ozbek, Jean Muir and John Galiano, who was presented the Designer of the Year Award by Young, many buyers fear the new clothes are not fresh and appealing enough to attract customers, particularly at the current high prices.

"It is a static moment here. Designers are doing what they have done before or imitating styles that are not inherently English," says Barbara Weiser, whose family stores, Charivari in New York, have nurtured and boosted the best of the English clan. "I look for fresh ideas and quality like the Marian Foale sweaters or the creative genius of a Vivienne Westwood," she said. "What's in between is not interesting anymore."

"They are trying to be commercial and playing it safe," complained Elin Saltzman of Saks Fifth Avenue before the Workers for Freedom show.

Clinching the down spirit of the fashion week here are the price tags. "I used to be able to come over to London and buy bags full of clothes from Kensington Market and elsewhere and take them back to the store. Now it is less interesting, and the prices are high because of the weak dollar," said Terry Melville, vice president of Macy's.

It's not that the organizers haven't put on a good show here. In fact, it is the best-organized fashion presentation in the world: Most of the shows are held in or adjacent to the huge Olympia exhibition area, where more than 300 designers and manufacturers have set up stalls to show and sell their wares.

The British government has gone all out to promote fashion, the country's third-largest manufacturing industry. Unlike the United States, where an interest in fashion by politicians and even some political wives is frowned on, the government here gives a financial and morale boost to the fashion business.

The biggest booster is Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who found time on the one day between her return from a meeting of the Conservative Party and a trip to Canada to spend an hour and 15 minutes touring the three floors of the exhibition, checking the "frocks on the rails" (clothes on the racks), asking questions and giving advice. She clearly enjoyed the whole adventure.

"Whose fabric is this?" Thatcher asked designer Murray Arbeid as she fingered one of his evening dresses, the kind favored by the princess of Wales. "Abraham from Switzerland," he replied. Arbeid says he was stunned by her next comment, "I thought it might be from Jacob Schlaepfer." According to Arbeid, Schlaepfer is a prestigious old Swiss textile firm that could well have made the fabric. "How could she have known that?" he asked.

At another booth, Thatcher said her favorite color was aquamarine, and to a cashmere knitter she admitted she had the problem many others have with cashmere skirts: "They always sag." To a designer of party dresses she said: "Your clothes remind me of the show 'Follies,'" the popular Stephen Sondheim revival on stage here.

Asked if she was planning to wear a miniskirt this spring, Thatcher said firmly, "I don't think that short skirts are for anyone over 40."

Miniskirts, which unquestionably had their start in London 25 years ago with Mary Quant and others, are not a big issue here, perhaps because they once were. It's not that there aren't superminis in the collections — Vivienne Westwood, in a collection she called "England Goes Pagan," showed bands of fabric not much wider than a belt, under which models wore knee-length jersey "panties," as she called them, that looked like bike shorts.

"Since the '60s spirit in fashion went out, we thought not to do the miniskirt again," designer Helen Storey said. "But it really is a strong, dramatic statement. It makes a new season." Storey says it is only because Yves Saint Laurent did it that English designers had the courage to even play with the idea.

"Saint Laurent gives us security." Using mostly short skirts, Storey keys her new collection to a South American theme with flowers and fringe. The South of the Border spirit highlights a lot of the collections. "Spanish and Cuban women show strong femininity and sexuality about themselves. Think of Carmen Miranda," Storey said.

For Bruce Oldfield, the collection was pegged to a Tex-Mex spirit with bolo ties and cowboy shirts as a way to introduce color. "We've had so much black. I wanted to introduce bright colors and this is a way for me to do it," said Oldfield after his show, called "Couture Cowgirl."

Rifat Ozbek, the Turkish-born, London-based designer, spent his summer vacation in Mexico, and his sophisticated collection showed Mexican blanket colors, silk raffia trims, rumba ruffles, silver coin trims and much more.

Ozbek was the first designer to show here, and his message was immediately clear as the crowd found seats in the Gamble room of the Victoria and Albert Museum. Propped up by the far door of this embellished baroque room was a huge cactus and behind it a setting with a mirror framed in Mexican silver and an elaborate painted table.

For some designers, such as Alistair Blair and Katharine Hamnett, the Hispanic influence was less obvious. Hamnett moved back to her spiritual home in the 1960s, complete with bell bottoms, bare midriffs, long black wigs and pop art prints. For evening she showed washable taffeta dresses.

For many stores, the value of a trip to London is not in the collections per se, but in the easy access to hundreds of resources at Olympia. "Just the shoes alone," said Bernie Ozer of Associated Merchandising Corp.; "from the longstanding cobbler tradition here, there are wonderful shoes with an elongated last that is right for the shorter skirts."

Although his pet customers, the royals, have been ordering short skirts, Murray Arbeid agrees they aren't for everyone. "If you have a plain face, seeing your knees does not improve the situation," he said. "However if the short length suits you — if you are comfortable in it and are not wearing it like a fashion victim — then why not?"

Couple Marries In Savannah

SAVANNAH, GA. — Cynthia Lynne Broome and Dr. Jay Raymond Calkins, both of Savannah, were united in marriage Saturday on the grounds of the Marine Extension Service in Savannah in a 6 p.m. ceremony.

The Rev. Jody C. Wright officiated at the double ring ceremony. Music was provided by Bob and Judy Williams.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Clyde Broome of Goldsboro, N.C., and Mr. and Mrs. Jay Calkins of Whiting, Maine, and Bradenton, Fla.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza. The high shadow neckline with fitted bodice was accented with lace, pearls and iridescent sequins. The gown had illusion sleeves enhanced with pearls, lace and iridescent sequins. The hemline of the embroidered scalloped lace was also adorned with a detachable train. The veil was two-tiered with lace netting attached to a wreath of pearls and rosebud trim. She carried white roses, burgundy sweetheart roses, alstromeria lilies with lace streamers.

Diana Broome of Raleigh, N.C., served as her sister's maid of honor. She wore a deep rose, taffeta floor-length gown with puffed, accented sleeves. She carried purple statice, burgundy roses and white sweetheart roses.

Kevin Kurras of Savannah served as best man.

The reception, which followed the ceremony, was held at sunset in the Marine Extension Service aquarium. Bob and Judy Williams played folk music on guitar and hammer dulcimer.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the couple's house.

The couple had an informal breakfast buffet at their home Sunday for their out-of-town family and friends.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C., and is now a copy editor at the Savannah News Press. The bridegroom is a graduate of Florida State University and is currently associate director of the Marine Extension Service at the University of Georgia.

After a wedding trip to the Florida Panhandle, the couple will reside in Savannah.

Palin-Martin Vows Said In Connecticut

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Candace Elizabeth Martin and James Michael Palin, both of New Haven, were united in marriage Oct. 10 in an 11 a.m. ceremony. The Rev. James J. Cronin officiated at the double-ring ceremony in St. Joseph's Catholic Church. Music was provided by Britt Wheeler of New Haven.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Thomas Martin of Greenville, N.C., and Mr. and Mrs. James Wallace Palin of Huntington Beach, Calif.

at Annie's Firehouse Restaurant in New Haven.

The bride and bridegroom are both pursuing their doctoral degrees in geology at Yale University. The bride is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The bridegroom is a graduate of California State University-Fullerton and the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

After a wedding trip to Maine, Arizona and California, the couple will reside in New Haven.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's formal length gown of ivory satin which had a beaded Peter Pan collar. The long, fitted sleeves came to bridal points. The fitted bodice buttoned down to the dropped waist from which the pleated full skirt fell to a chapel train. Her hand-crafted headpiece was a tear-shaped, pearl and lace trimmed caplet with a fingertip veil accented with lace and a pouf. She carried an English nosegay of champagne and pink roses, lavender freesia, blue brodea, alstromeria, campanula and heather.

Nancy Martin of Raleigh, N.C., served as her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Wendy Martin of Chapel Hill, N.C., sister of the bride, and Patricia Palin of Huntington Beach, sister of the bridegroom.

CANDACE ELIZABETH MARTIN

Paul Dixon of New Haven served as best man. Ushers were Steven Johsz of Huntington Beach, Craig Mlady of Santa Ana, Calif., and Jeffrey Martin of Syracuse, N.Y., brother of the bride.

The reception took place at Sachem Country House in Guilford, Conn. Rhonda Dixon of New Haven presided over the guest book. Classical music by the William Street Players quartet provided the entertainment at the seated luncheon. The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the parents of the bridegroom, was held

Lighthearted Poems Brighten Her Days

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: After reading "The Monkey's Disgrace," I felt I should tell you that I've had that poem since I was 10 years old. (I am now 80.) I am sending you two more amusing poems I have had for at least 70 years. You may want to share them with your readers. BERTHA D. GOFF, COLDWATER, MICH.

DEAR BERTHA GOFF: How generous of you. I'm going to use both of them but one at a time. The first:

COMEDY

Where can a man buy a cap for his knee?
Or a key to a lock of his hair?
Can your eyes be called an academy
Because there are two pupils there?
What jewels are in the crown of your head?
Who walked the bridge of your nose?
Can you do the shingling in the roof of your mouth
With the nails on the ends of your toes?
Can the crook of your elbow be sent to jail?
If so, what did it do?
Can you sit in the shade of the palm of your hand?
Be darned if I know, do you?
Did you ever sharpen your shoulder blades?
Can you beat the drums in your ears?
Do the calves in your legs eat the corn on your toes?
Then why not grow corn on the ears?
(Author Unknown)

DEAR ABBY: I own a motorcycle and have occasionally treated one of my children to a ride. I have always been extremely careful when one of them was aboard. We have never gone on highways, we avoided heavy traffic, wore helmets, etc.

A couple of months ago I was riding with my 6-year-old son behind me, when I felt his fingers tighten on my back and heard a high-pitched wail. I immediately pulled over and stopped.

When I looked back his shoe was gone and the whole side of his foot had been burned off! After reconstructive surgery, skin grafts and a month in the hospital, thank God the foot was saved. He is finally beginning to walk again. That foot is terribly disfigured, and will cause him problems for the rest of his life.

Abby, please tell people that motorcycles are dangerous, especially for young children. It doesn't have to take an accident for a serious injury to occur. A fidgety kid can easily get his foot caught in the spokes of a moving wheel. And an exhaust pipe can burn a foot to the bone in a split second. A day doesn't go by that I don't relive this awful experience.

I love my kids more than anything in the world. It tears me up inside seeing what my little boy went through because I decided to take him for a "little ride." And it could have been a lot worse! Please, you folks with motorcycles, when you've got kids with you take the car! SORRY I DIDN'T IN DENVER

DEAR SORRY: Thanks for a valuable addition to this column.

THE JACQUARD CONNECTION

Joseph Marie Jacquard, an ingenious Frenchman, invented a weaving loom which creates a fabric bearing his name with complicated and beautiful patterns. It's easily recognized since the pattern on the back of the fabric displays the "photo negative" of the pattern on the front.

"The Jacquard Connection" relates to upholstery cleaning, where this fabric is found covering some of the highest quality furniture made. Here's the problem—the unsuspecting cleaner assumes (his first mistake) that an expensive fabric, such as this, may be cleaned with standard cleaning agents. He applies his solutions, using normal procedures (his second mistake). Within hours his customer calls exclaiming that dyes in the fabric are running everywhere! In disbelief, he returns and attempts to correct the problem but, alas, to no avail.

So who's to blame—cleaner or manufacturer? Let me suggest that both, in part, are responsible.

Jacquard Manufacturing

First, the manufacturer. In discussing this delicate problem with the manager of the nation's largest Jacquard fabric plant, I learned that rayon is used to highlight patterns in the fabric because of its bright, vivid colors. Unfortunately, the rayon is not color-fast! In his candor, the manager admitted that better colorfastness could be achieved, but this process costs more. He commented further that sales of fabric are his concern—not cleaning. And sales are booming!

Now, before I lapse into a sermon on business ethics, let's hasten to examine the cleaner's responsibility.

There are chemicals on today's market which stabilize dyes used in Jacquards. In addition, with proper technique, there is no reason for color-transfer ever to take place. I'm painfully aware of lack of training in my own profession—also a good subject for an ethics sermon.

Who's at fault? Both. The manufacturer for creating the problem and the cleaner for not recognizing and avoiding the problem for you, the customer!

Final question—what does the consumer do when the need to clean Jacquard fabrics arises? The answer is to pin the cleaner down with questions—and lots of them! Use only those who display the utmost in professionalism.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 37.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. 94 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 36.89 cents. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate to good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,805,000, compared to 1,945,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 2 cents lower at mostly 1.80-2.00 in East and mostly 1.90-2.10 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly steady to 1 cent higher at mostly 5.18-5.34 in East and mostly 5.03-5.18 in the Piedmont; wheat 2.66-2.76; new crop soybeans 5.04-5.44. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1 cent higher and ranged from 101 to 107½ percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took another steep drop in extremely heavy trading today, resuming last week's record-breaking decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial plunged 67.88 points to 2,178.85 in the first half hour of trading. Losers outnumbered gainers by nearly 20 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 64 up, 1,264 down and 122 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 51.11 million shares in the first half hour of trading.

Analysts said the market was caught up in a chain reaction of events that created what William LeFevre at Advest Inc. called "a terrible washout" at the opening.

Stock markets in Tokyo and London fell sharply in reaction to Wall Street's severe break last week.

Deaver On Trial

after he resigned as deputy White House chief of staff in May, 1985. Seymour wants Gottlieb to testify about a Jan. 5, 1985 luncheon he had with Deaver.

Deaver is accused of lying when he couldn't recall lunching with Gottlieb. He is also charged with lying when he denied participating in the decision to appoint Drew Lewis as special envoy to Canada on acid rain before he left the White House.

Seymour's latest go-round with Ottawa occurred last week when Canada publicly registered its protest with the State Department over a letter the prosecutor wrote urging Gottlieb to reconsider his refusal to testify.

The Justice Department quickly entered the fray, urging Jackson to order Seymour not to contact Canada without going through diplomatic channels. It also asked Jackson to order Seymour "to desist from any attempts at trial to threaten, embarrass or punish the Canadian government for asserting the immunity of its diplomats."

Seymour responded late Friday by accusing the Justice Department and Canada of orchestrating "a P.R. campaign" of "false accusations." The prosecutor said Canada was trying to create a "cause celebre, conceivably to divert attention from the unpleasant truth" about Deaver's lobbying for Canada "which will emerge at trial."

Deaver, 49, whose career as a close aide to President Reagan goes back to the president's days as governor of California, formed a public relations business that quickly signed up such important clients as Boeing, Rockwell International, Philip Morris, TWA and the governments of Canada, Saudi Arabia and South Korea.

As the business grew more successful, grossing more than $3 million during its first seven months, Deaver encountered public allegations that he was trading on his connections with the Reagan administration.

In the spring of 1986, Deaver requested an investigation by an independent counsel and agreed to testify before the House Energy and Commerce oversight subcommittee, which was studying allegations Deaver violated conflict-of-interest laws.

The indictment, returned last March 18, charges that Deaver lied to both the subcommittee and a grand jury empaneled by Seymour.

Dole commented from Manchester, N.H., where he is campaigning for the GOP presidential nomination.

Michel and Dole were among the legislators called to the White House late Sunday for a meeting with Reagan where the legislators were informed about the decision to hit the Iranian site.

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., ranking Republican on the Foreign Affairs panel, said, "I think it was very appropriate. I was pleased it was such a measured response."

Fascell, Michel and Broomfield agreed that new debates are likely over the War Powers Act, the 1973 law that limits a president's authority to send U.S. military personnel to areas of imminent danger.

Bumpurs

A funeral for Mr. James Henry Bumpurs, formerly of Falkland, will be conducted by the Rev. James Harris Wednesday at 2:30 p.m. at St. John Missionary Baptist Church in Falkland.

Mr. Bumpurs was a native of Pitt County and attended area schools.

He is survived by his sister, Hallie Williams of Falkland. The family will receive visitors Tuesday from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Hemby Memorial Funeral Chapel in Fountain. At other times, the family will be at the home of Willie Buster in Falkland.

Edwards

MACCLESFIELD — Jonas Arthur Edwards, 85, died Sunday. His funeral will be held in Webb's Chapel Church at 2 p.m. Tuesday. Burial will follow at Queen Ann Cemetery in Fountain.

Surviving are two sisters, Mary Baker and Sudie Weaver, both of Macclesfield, and four brothers, James Edwards and Kinchen Edwards, both of Macclesfield, and Joe Edwards and Marvin Edwards, both of Rocky Mount.

The family will be at the church between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. today. Arrangements are being handled by Shingleton Funeral Home, Wilson.

Winds Win Out

don Brittan, a rancher and a longtime wind-energy supporter, said recently. "Well-intentioned people ... got on the bandwagon. For a variety of reasons, it didn't come to pass."

There's a big change from the late 1970s and early '80s, when tax incentives and the crash programs to encourage alternative energy sources led to wildly optimistic visions for the future of wind energy.

Montana Power Co. and a Butte-based research organization set up an experimental wind turbine in Livingston.

A Massachusetts firm started buying "wind easements" from ranchers and promised to invest $180 million in a wind-harnessing project.

The company painted an awesome picture: 1,800 wind turbines set up over 5,000 acres, each with three, 28-foot blades mounted on a 65-foot tower.

The state awarded its largest-ever alternative energy renewable energy grant, $222,000, to Livingston for four, 25-kilowatt wind-powered generators. The town also inherited Montana Power's machine.

In 1982, a Michigan financial counseling firm proposed building 7,000 windmills and selling shares in them as tax shelters. Again, there were promises of an economic boom for Livingston. The company predicted an $18 million investment with 30 percent of that spent in Livingston.

But by this time, mechanical failures were taking their toll. Developers found their machines couldn't take the area's searing cold and fierce winds. And potential investors disappeared when federal tax credits for wind-energy investments ended Jan. 1, 1986.

Now, Livingston's wind business is in trouble.

Recently, Montana Power said it may terminate a contract to buy wind power from Livingston, noting that the town's wind farm hadn't produced any electrical power since April 1986.

The town's own generators at the wind farm broke down some time ago and haven't been fixed.

If wind energy is to recover, those in the business say, it will take a long uphill climb that will be hampered by lower rates that utilities like Montana Power are paying for the power.

Many in the business say the newer rates, which were set by the Montana Public Service Commission, are too low to make wind-energy worth their efforts, economically.

Some long-term contracts negotiated in Montana's boom wind energy years provided for payments of more than 7 cents per kilowatt hour. Now Montana Power is willing to pay only 1.25 cents for some short-term contracts, more for long-term contracts with reliable producers.

"Right at the moment, the mood of the town is not optimistic," Brittan said. "But there are still enough of us here that are determined we're going to see some wind industry here in Livingston."

The British tested their first atomic bomb off the coast of Australia in 1952.

Twins Win Earns 2-0 Series Lead

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Holler "Four!" and head for cover.

The Minnesota Twins are on their way to St. Louis, two games up in the World Series and coasting along like no other postseason team in history.

"We're on a roll now," Twins shortstop Greg Gagne said. "Hopefully, we can carry it through. ... We've got some confidence going into St. Louis."

The Twins won the first two games of the World Series, 10-1 Saturday night and 8-4 Sunday night — scoring a total of 13 runs in the fourth innings of the two games. They had seven runs in the fourth inning of Game 1, six in the same inning of Game 2.

"When I go to the racetrack tomorrow, I'm going to play '4,'" Twins Manager Tom Kelly said.

With this victory, the Twins not only backed the Cardinals into a corner, they also became the first team in major-league history to score five or more runs in seven consecutive postseason games.

The Twins defeated the Detroit Tiger in a five-game American League playoff. Their winning scores were 8-5, 6-3, 5-3 and 9-5. They lost Game 3, 7-6.

Game 3 is scheduled for Tuesday night at Busch Stadium with rookie Les Straker, 8-10, going for Minnesota against veteran John Tudor, 10-2. Tudor will try to stop St. Louis' five-game World Series losing streak, dating back to 1985, during which the Cardinals have been outscored 37-7.

Minnesota's Bert Blyleven got the win, allowing two runs on six hits through seven innings and striking out eight. The Twins, meanwhile, sent 11 men to the plate and chased St.

Louis' starter, Danny Cox, in the fourth inning.

Tim Laudner, a .191 hitter during the season, had a two-run single in the big inning, then hit a 420-foot homer two innings later.

"They look pretty good to me," Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said of the Twins. "I saw them play Detroit, and they are a hot ballclub. We haven't had many big innings against us all year, and we've given up 13 runs in the fourth inning of the last two days."

Of the 37 teams that have gone down 2-0 in the World Series, only 10 have come back to win. That is the task facing Herzog's Cardinals.

"Two things mean nothing in baseball," Herzog said, "last year and yesterday."

This was an intimate little party of 55,257 whistle-blowing, hanky-waving, rock-and-roll singing fans, the largest crowd to ever see a baseball game in the state of Minnesota.

When songs like "Twist and Shout," "My Baby Does the Hanky-Panky," and "Born To Be Wild," were played over the Metrodome public address system, fans waved their homer-hankies in time to the music, looking like so many herons bobbing their heads in unison.

When Gary Gaetti and Laudner hit home runs, the theme music for Darth Vader of "Star Wars" fame boomed out across the 70 million cubic feet of space enclosed by the Dome.

These fans are one of the reasons the Twins built baseball's best home record of 56-25 this year. Now they must leave their shelter.

"It's good in some ways, bad in others," Gagne said of the crowd noise. "It gets loud out there. It's awful tough to concentrate."

The Twins were the worst road team ever to win a pennant, 29-2, but after beating Detroit twice at home to start the AL playoffs, the Twins won two of three in Detroit. Those were only the 10th and 11th road victories for the Twins since the All-Star break.

"Sure, the Detroit series will help," Twins leadoff hitter Dan Gladden said. "I think so. Since we started the playoffs, we've played well. Now, we're on the road."

Game 2 was a matchup of the clubs' two "big game" pitchers.

Blyleven, 15-12 for the Twins during the season, was making the third World Series appearance of his career. His Series record now is 2-0, the first victory coming in 1979 with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and he has a 3-0 record in playoff action, two of those earned this year against Detroit.

In this game, Blyleven allowed singles in each of the first two innings but did not give up a run until the fifth. He also gave up a run in the seventh before yielding to Juan Berenguer and Jeff Eardon, who each worked an inning. Berenguer gave up two runs in the eighth.

Blyleven, best known for his curveball, said it was the changeup that was most effective in containing the injury-riddled Cardinals.

"I was just thinking about pitching my game, staying in control," Blyleven said. "If I don't have the good changeup, it doesn't matter what lineup they have."

Cox, 11-9 for the Cards this year, was 1-1 in the playoffs against San Francisco, including a 6-0, eight-hit shutout in Game 7. He started two World Series games in 1985 against Kansas City, and although he had no decisions, he gave up just two earned runs in 14 innings.

This time he was gone in 3 2-3 innings, having given up seven runs on six hits and a pair of walks.

Gaetti, MVP of the playoffs, homered off Cox with one out in the second inning to give Minnesota a 1-0 lead. Two innings later, Cox fell apart.

With one out in the fourth, Kirby Puckett and Kent Hrbek hit consecutive singles. A wild pitch advanced the runners and Gaetti walked, loading the bases. Randy Bush hit an 0-2 pitch into the right-field corner for a double, scoring two runs. Tom Brunansky was walked intentionally, loading the bases again.

The runners held on a flyout to shallow left by Steve Lombardozzi, but Laudnersingled home Gaetti and Bush, sending Brunansky to second. Dan Gladden then singled home Brunansky, sending Laudner to second and chasing Cox in favor of Lee Tunnell.

"Hitting is contagious," Laudner said. "We've spent all year long picking each other up. When one guy's not swinging well, the other guy picks him up — and so forth, all the way down the line."

Greg Gagne, whomade the first out of the inning, hit a bloop double into right, scoring Laudner, and the Twins led 7-0.

"I was sitting in the dugout saying to myself, 'I'd better do something because everybody else is,'" Gagne said. "That's what went through my mind."

So why the fourth-inning fireworks?

"I think it helps to get through the lineup once," Gagne said. "The first time we see a guy, you really don't know what to expect. The second time, you have a better idea how he is throwing and how the ball is moving."

Cox said the 0-2 pitch to Bush would haunt him for some time.

"A pitch like that, I didn't want to make," Cox said. "I just did. It was a fastball up."

The Cardinals finally scored a run in the fifth when Terry Pendleton led off with a single — only the third hit off Blyleven — and Curt Ford walked. Jose Oquendo hit a perfect double-play grounder to second baseman Steve Lombardozzi, but Lombardozzi bobbled the ball. All he could get was Oquendo at first, and the runners advanced. Pendleton then scored on a grounder by Tony Pena.

The Cards got another run in the seventh on consecutive two-out singles by Ford, Oquendo and Pena, but lost a chance for more when Puckett threw out Oquendo at third while Ford scored on Pena's hit.

Berenguer came out for the eighth and gave up three hits, including an RBI double by Dan Driessen and a run-scoring single by Willie McGee, but Reardon pitched a scoreless ninth.

The Cardinals know only too well what can happen to teams that get behind.

"In 1985, we were down 2-0 in the playoffs and came back to beat the Dodgers," Cox said. "The same year, we led Kansas City 2-0 in the World Series and lost. How can you tell? They're on a roll. They're hot.

"We ust have to win in our ballpark."

And as for the general lack of national respect the 85-77 Twins have received this season, Gaetti added: "We really can't worry about or control what the writers or TV people are saying about us. We don't think the disrespect comes from our fellow players, and that's the important thing."

If the Cardinals don't respect the Twins now, they may be in even more trouble than they seem to be.

The victory of the East Carolina Pirates over Virginia Tech was probably a lot more important to the ECU program than just a win over a 1-4 football team.

It wasn't so much WHAT the Pirates beat, but WHO they beat, WHERE they beat them and HOW they beat them.

Virginia Tech has a long, established program that has beaten a lot of good teams in the past. Sure, this year, the Hokies have fallen on some bad times. Injuries and graduation and a coaching change have caused some problems. But the Virginia Tech program is a good one, one which will bounce back in the future.

Beating a team on the road — outside of North Carolina — is another big thing for the Pirate program. It marked the first time since the 1984 season that ECU has won a game outside its own state.

And coming from behind, from as far down as 10 points twice, is something that the Pirates also accomplished.

Certainly — and despite what happens the next two weeks — the Pirates have shown that they can be a winning football team.

Now, however, they go up against two of the stronger teams on their schedule. South Carolina carried #2 Nebraska to the wire before bowing. They've been on a tear the last couple of weeks, ripping their opponents.

Ironically, South Carolina moved out of its run-and-shoot offense into the I — much as the Pirates did against Cincinnati — in handing Virginia a 58-10 setback this past Saturday.

East Carolina, meanwhile, found the I hard to run against Tech's wide-tackle six. The alignment tended to stop the middle game and the corner game. However, it was vulnerable to the pass and to the option. Much of the Pirate yardage came through these two avenues.

Travis Hunter probably played his best game against the Hokies, rolling up 313 yards in total offense, a new school record. He was not far off the school passing record, either.

The Pirates thus turned in recording setting performances in each of their last two outings.

More importantly, they held the advantage in turnovers again — something they've done in each of their wins — and something they have not enjoyed in each of their losses.

One of the Pirate turnovers, too, was questionable as even the officials disagreed on whether possession had been lost. It was finally decided, after a huddle, to give the ball to Tech.

Another close play, at the goal line, nearly resulted in a safety against Tech. The safety man, back to field a punt, fumbled into the end zone, then had to pick it up and run it out. The officials placed the ball down only inches from the goal line. Virginia Tech's radio crew, with a better point of view than ours, called it a safety.

The Tech player, interviewed after the game, said, "It was close," and let it go at that.

Hunter was happy to know he had set a record, but downplayed it some.

"It means a lot to me, but I don't worry about records. If it happens, it happens," he said.

"It was one of my best outings, but I've still got a long way to go to be where I want to be. I still make too many bad decisions."

Nevertheless, Hunter is climbing among career passers. His 10 of 18 for 228 yard performance moved him to eighth in career yardage with 1,170, just passing George Richardson (946) and Ron Jones (1,169). Jones is still active but as a wide receiver. Next ahead is Mike Weaver, who had 1,457 and Greg Stewart with 1,466. Hunter should easily pass those two before season's end.

He also has 89 completions now, moving on toward sixth place — Stewart — who had 108.

The overall records of 2,859 yards and 198 completions are certainly within Hunter's reach, should he hold to the starting job for the next two seasons. The records, by the way, are held by Carl Summerell.

Win Over State Redeems Heels

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

RALEIGH — With their goals for the season quickly washing away, North Carolina's players and coaches alike knew Saturday's game against North Carolina State was a chance to get headed back in the right direction.

And the Tar Heels responded, turning back the Wolfpack, 17-14, to break a two-game losing streak and to keep pace in the Atlantic Coast Conference standings with a 2-1 mark (4-3 overall).

"It's a great win and a win that we needed," said North Carolina nose guard Carlton Bailey.

The Tar Heels played with emotion against their traditional rival, something that was missing in a 22-14 loss to Wake Forest Oct. 10.

"That was the thing that was hurting us last week," Bailey said. "We didn't have any emotion. We knew what we had to do was come back and get our emotions going."

UNC defensive back Derrick Donald also thought emotion was a big boost for the Tar Heels.

"We knew we had to come out and play with emotion," he said. "If you don't come out and play with emotion like we did against Wake Forest, you get the same results as we did against Wake Forest."

Last year, UNC lost 35-34 in an offensive show that saw quarterback Mark Maye set a then single-game passing record with 311 yards.

With only two healthy tailbacks heading into the game, it looked like the burden would again fall on Maye, but it didn't.

"I thought we'd been passing just enough to lose the last couple of weeks," said UNC coach Dick Crum. "But our running game really helped to open up the passing game for us today. It's tough to come off an emotional loss to Auburn and a disappointing loss to Wake Forest and play well, but our kids did that."

UNC started freshman Reggie Clark at tailback since he was really the only healthy tailback it had. Eric Starr was questionable before the game due to a bruised thigh.

However when Clark went out with a rib injury in the third quarter, Starr was the only available choice and he responded with a 129-yard perfor-

Veteran Players Have Big Days

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

If there were ever any doubts about the difference between a real NFL player and a strike irregular, Steve Largent, Joe Montana and a bunch of backup quarterbacks have dashed them forever.

As replacement games mercifully dwindled down to a precious one — tonight's Redskins-Cowboys game at Texas Stadium — many of the regulars who reported this week had an immediate impact Sunday.

But there was no rush back by the fans to see them on the third week of strike football.

The average attendance Sunday was about 26,500, 38 percent of capacity, with just 8,310 watching a near-record performance by Largent at the Pontiac Silverdome and three other gatherings of less than 20,000.

But at least, most of the heroes were familiar names — Largent, Montana, Dwight Clark, Jeff Kemp, Gary Danielson, Pat Ryan and Lawrence Taylor. But despite two sacks and a forced fumble, Taylor couldn't prevent the New York Giants from losing again, 6-3 in overtime to Buffalo, dropping them to 0-5, the worst start in history for a defending Super Bowl champion.

In other games Sunday it was, Pittsburgh 21, Indianapolis 7; Seattle 37, Detroit 14; New York Jets 37, Miami 31 in overtime; New England 21, Houston 7; Cleveland 34, Cincinnati 0; Green Bay 16, Philadelphia 10 in overtime; New Orleans 19, Chicago

17; Tampa Bay 20, Minnesota 10; Atlanta 24, Los Angeles Rams 20; San Diego 23, Los Angeles Raiders 17; Denver 26, Kansas City 27, and San Francisco 34, St. Louis 18.

The Giants were just one example of the way the strike skewed the standings.

Kansas City and Minnesota, two other contenders, also went 0-3 with replacements while a 2-1 strike record left Houston and Tampa Bay at 3-2, the best start for each team since 1981.

Largent, who extended to 142 his record for consecutive games with receptions and needs just 36 catches to become the top pass-catcher in NFL history, was by far the most impressive player Sunday.

He caught 15 passes for 266 yards in Seattle's victory before being benched with 5:36 gone in the second half, three receptions short of Tom Fears' 37-year-old record for catches in a game.

But he seemed to have no desire for a mark that many would have denoted with a mental asterisk if not an actual one.

"The only record I was concerned with was getting a win," said Largent, who spent the day playing catch with Kemp, who was 20 of 27 for 344 yards and four touchdowns.

Most of the Sunday's heroes took the same attitude.

"I don't take any personal joy in this day at all," said Danielson, Cleveland's 36-year-old backup

Nelson Takes Disney Golf Classic

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — The victory in the Walt Disney World Golf Classic was a new experience for Larry Nelson.

Winning was not new. He's done that before and he's done that recently. But the fashion in which he won was something new.

Nelson, a two-time and current PGA champion and a former U.S. Open title-holder, won in the Disney Sunday while he was sitting in the press tent studying the leaderboard.

Moments later a PGA Tour official approached Nelson, held out his hand and said "Congratulations."

"Can you imagine that? You're in the press tent and you find out you won the golf tournament when someone walks up and shakes your hand," Nelson said.

Nelson, 40, came from six shots back with a 9-under-par 63 — he called it "maybe my best competitive round; certainly my best competitive round on Sunday" — and won the tournament by one stroke over Morris Hatalsky and Mark O'Meara.

"The most gratifying thing to me is to be able to win so quickly after winning the PGA (two months ago)," Nelson said.

"That shows some maturity. But, I guess if you don't have some maturity by the time you're 40 you're in trouble."

Nelson acquired the ninth title of his 14-year PGA Tour career with a 20-under-par 268 total. The victory was worth $108,000 from the total purse of $600,000 and pushed his season's earnings to $437,492 — more than $150,000 ahead of his best previous season.

Geiberger Holds Off Ferree For Win

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Al Geiberger says he felt the pressure when Jim Ferree ended regulation with two birdies to force a sudden-death playoff in the Seniors International golf tournament.

But Geiberger stood up well under the tension, sinking a birdie on the second playoff hole Sunday to win the $250,000 tournament at Harbour Town Golf Links.

"I had to regroup on the first playoff hole after watching him make two birdies to tie," Geiberger said.

"I knew I had to do something. You can't expect to just make par and win. It gets to be a pressure situation, but I had to keep plugging," he said.

Geiberger and Ferree finished 54 holes at 4-under-par 209 and both parred No. 10, the first playoff hole.

On the second playoff hole, the 363-yard 16th, Geiberger hit a 9-iron close to the hole with his second shot. Ferree missed the green with his second shot and was forced to try to chip in for a birdie. Instead, Ferree chipped five feet past the hole and Geiberger made his short putt to claim the title.

Ferree had a final-round 68 Sunday and ended his round with two birdies to force the playoff. Geiberger shot an even-par 71 Sunday.

Geiberger won $37,500 for the victory, his second in his first year on the Senior Tour. The victory pushed his 1987 earnings to $197,671. Ferree won $21,500 for his second-place finish.

Ferree, who missed the green on his second shot on the first playoff hole, said the miscue might have taken the pressure off Geiberger.

Skins-Cowboys Is Final Replacement Game

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Replacement players for the Dallas Cowboys and Washington Redskins will qualify for a half share of January playoff money after tonight's NFC East first-place showdown.

With the NFLPA strike over and the regular players set to return this week, this will be the last of the replacement games and Dallas management expects a crowd of better than 50,000 to be there to say goodbye to the "rhinestone" Cowboys.

The "carbon" Cowboys and Redskins could earn a big payday at the end of the year if the teams do well in the title chase.

"To qualify, a replacement player has to be in three games and then they are eligible for championship playoff money which includes the Super Bowl," Cowboys President Tex Schramm said. "I imagine they will be pulling hard for the veterans starting next week."

Striking Dallas linebacker Steve DeOssie said: "It doesn't bother me they'll get playoff shares. The owners have to pay the money anyway. It doesn't come out of our pockets. Sure, I hope the replacements whip the Redskins but I won't be at the game cheering."

Both teams are 2-0 during the strike.

Odds makers have made the Cowboys seven-point favorites because of a large contingent of veteran players who crossed the picket line. The Redskins remained solidly behind the union during the 24-day strike and no regular players crossed the picket line.

However, Dallas Coach Tom Landry said he wasn't certain whether he will start quarterback Danny White or running back Tony Dorsett.

"I'll probably make up my mind when I walk down the tunnel just before the game starts," Landry said.

"I'd be shocked if we won," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said. "Dallas has too many veteran players going against us. It's a tremendous competitive advantage. It's one of the few times we've played a game when we know our odds to win are mighty slim."

"The way Joe talks I don't even think I'll need a game plan," Landry said.

The Redskins and Cowboys face each other for the sixth time on Monday Night Football with Dallas holding a series lead of 31-21-2 and a 3-2 edge on MNF.

Dallas is 16-14 on MNF and Washington is an NFC-best 17-11.

 Overall record: 34-34. Record not counting ECU or against each other: 27-25.

Williams' Father Shoots Kills Wife, Himself

By The Associated Press
 Albert Williams, 40, father of Scott Williams, a sophomore basketball player at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, shot and killed his estranged wife and then himself Thursday night in Hacienda Heights, Calif., deputies said.

A dispute leading to the shootings broke out at 8:45 p.m. at Mrs. Williams' apartment complex in Hacienda Heights, a residential suburb of Los Angeles, said Steve Lee, a deputy and public information officer with the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

Williams shot his wife, Clair, 40, just before 9 p.m., Lee told The News and Observer of Raleigh in a telephone interview Saturday. She was pronounced dead at Queen of the Valley Hospital at 9:20 p.m., Lee said, and Williams died at the scene after he fired the gun at his head.

No other people were involved, and there were no witnesses, Lee said.

The Williamses had been separated since the beginning of the year and had planned a divorce, said Diane Weingarten, a friend of the family's. Her son, Neil, played with Scott Williams on the Wilson High School basketball team in Hacienda Heights, she said in a telephone interview.

Clemson Suspends Three Football Players

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson junior linebacker Norman Haynes and two other players have been suspended indefinitely, Coach Danny Ford announced this past weekend.

Ford did not say what prompted the suspensions or how long they would last.

Haynes, a 5-foot-9, 210-pounder from Athens, Ga., has started in the first five games for the seventh-ranked Tigers and has 29 tackles, fourth best on the team.

Clemson Moves Into 1st Place

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
 AP Sports Writer

Unbeaten Clemson took first place for itself in the Atlantic Coast Conference football title chase this weekend with a 17-10 victory over Duke, but Coach Danny Ford finds nothing to celebrate.

"It was just a very poor performance on our part, but if you're looking for excuses, I had rather give Duke a whole lot of credit," Ford said.

Duke and Clemson were in a 10-10 tie after a 1-yard scoring run by Roger Boone with 5:58 left in the third period. Two series later, punter Anthony Dilweg quick-kicked on third-and-25 at his own 33 and kicked the ball to the Clemson 3.

The Tigers came back, marching 97 yards with Tracy Johnson's 4-yard dive off right guard with 6:46 left to play leading Clemson what was to be its sixth victory, and third in the league.

"In the huddle, we were saying our season's on the line with this drive," Johnson said.

Duke tried to retaliate, but an Anthony Dilweg pass for Clarkston Hines was intercepted by Donnell Woolford. The Tigers had a victory, but it was not much to talk about.

"I don't think we were mentally prepared to play," Ford said. "We went out there like it was a Saturday morning scrimmage."

Duke has lost its last three games, and is now 3-3 and winless after two conference games.

"Obviously we had 'em in a hole," Duke Coach Steve Spurrier said. "But the same thing happened that happened at Rutgers. We had 'em down and let 'em off the hook."

Starting the weekend, the Tigers and the Demon Deacons stood at 5-0 and were undefeated after two league games. While the Tigers were struggling, Wake Forest saw the defensive tables turned on it in losing to the Terrapins, failing to score a touchdown for the first time in five years.

Maryland went back to the type of power football which made it a three-time ACC champion in the early part of the '80s. The Terrapins out-rushed Wake Forest 208-77. Three times, Wake Forest was in scoring range, only to come up empty-handed.

"We had our chances," said Wake Forest wide receiver Ricky Proehl, who has a reception knocked out of his hands and into the hands of a Maryland defender in the end zone.

"If we'd been able to cash in at least once, we'd have been on an emotional high and I think we could have come away with a win."

The Terrapins did all their scoring in the second quarter. Mick Anderson rushed for an 18-yard touchdown and quarterback Dan Henning connected with Azizuddin Abdur-Ra'ooof for a mance. The big day helped erase the memories of Starr's costly fumble in last year's loss to the Wolfpack.

"Eric Starr came to play today," Crum said. "And he played hard. He was stung by some of the criticism he got in last year's game."

Both Starr and fullback James Thompson's success with the running game helped the Tar Heels control the football all day long. Thompson ran for 94 yards on 18 carries.

As a team, the Tar Heels ground out 358 yards in total offense, compared to only 187 for the Wolfpack.

Despite the injured thigh, Starr was sure he'd be ready to play.

"There was never any doubt in my mind," he said. "I knew Thursday I was going to play, all the soreness was gone. All the other backs are injured. Someone had to do the job."

And while Maye didn't set any records this year, he had nothing but praise for the running backs.

"JT (Thompson), Eric, all the running backs did a good job of running," he said. "I think the offensive 3-yard touchdown pass late in the half. The victory raised Maryland to 3-3, 2-1 in the ACC.

"We knew this was a game we had to win and our backs were to the wall," Terrapin coach Joe Krivak said. "So we took a simple approach to this game. I thought our kids responded and played very hard."

The Tigers now become the prey for three teams to catch. Maryland climbed to 2-1, as did North Carolina, which downed North Carolina State 17-14. Wake Forest fell to 2-1 and travels to Clemson on Oct. 31. The Tigers are at North Carolina on Nov. 7 and Maryland goes to Death Valley on Nov. 14.

Elsewhere, No. 5 Auburn rallied for a 20-10 victory over Georgia Tech and South Carolina whipped Virginia 58-10 in a game marred by the death of a Cavalier football player on Friday night.

North Carolina football coach Dick Crum has been showing more of a reluctance to pass after his team's losses to Auburn and Wake Forest. Against the Wolfpack, the Tar Heels rushed 71 times for 269 yards. Eric Starr rushed 32 times for 129 yards and fullback James Thompson added a career-high 94 yards on 18 carries. Quarterback Mark Maye threw just 15 passes, completing eight for 89 yards and one interception.

But the day belonged to place-kicker Kenny Miller, who kicked three field goals, and defensive back Norris Davis, who fell on a bad snap on an attempted punt for a touchdown. The Tar Heels climbed to 4-3 and have next weekend off.

"I thought we'd been passing just enough to lose the last couple of weeks," Crum said. "But our running game really helped to open up the passing game for us today."

"It feels different when you lose," said N.C. State quarterback Preston Poag, who threw two touchdown passes. "You have that sick feeling. I have it now."

N.C. State is 2-4 and watched its ACC title hopes drift away after falling to 2-2.

Jeff Burger tossed a 17-yard touchdown pass to Lawyer Tillman with 24 seconds left to lift Auburn to a 14-10 lead, and Aundray Bruce capped the victory with a 45-yard interception return for a touchdown on the game's last play.

South Carolina scored the most points since a 73-0 whipping of Wichita State in 1980. Against the Cavaliers, the Gamecocks scored 28 points in the fourth quarter alone.

On Friday night, defensive end Craig Fielder died after a three-year battle with cancer at the age of 21. He was in a hotel room with strength coach John Gamble when he died.

Next Saturday, Duke is at Maryland, Wake Forest is at Virginia and N.C. State is at Clemson. Georgia Tech is at Tennessee in non-conference games.

line moved them off the ball. You have to give all the credit to those guys."

And while the Tar Heel offense failed to get into the end zone, settling instead for three Kenny Miller field goals, it did keep the ball out of the hands of the N.C. State offense.

"North Carolina won the battle at the line of scrimmage," said Wolfpack coach Dick Sheridan. "They were able to grind out the yards and get numerous first downs. Time of possession was a big factor."

The Tar Heels' lone touchdown came courtesy of the defense.

UNC safety Norris Davis recovered a bad snap in the end zone on a N.C. State punt attempt on the Wolfpack's initial possession of the second half. It was Davis' fourth defensive touchdown this season.

The Wolfpack's two scores came behind the arm of quarterback Preston Poag, who hit Danny Peoples with a 47-yard scoring pass in the second quarter and then hit Chris Corders with a 27-yard touchdown pass in the fourth.

Player Of The Week

Ayden-Grifton's Eric Blount, fresh off a 142-yard rushing performance in the Chargers' 24-6 win over Greene Central, is the Daily Reflector Player of the Week for the second time this season.

ERIC BLOUNT

Blount carried the ball 25 times and scored one touchdown, a five-yard run. He now has 649 yards rushing on the season.

His performance led a big day for the Chargers, who rebounded from a 16-14 loss to North Pitt two weeks earlier. The win allowed Ayden-Grifton, 5-2 overall and 2-1 in the Eastern Plains Conference, to keep pace in its quest for the EPC title with Farmville Central and North Pitt.

Prep Honor Roll

Washington quarterback Franz Holscher: Holscher ran for two touchdowns and also passed for 135 yards, hitting on five of seven passes, to lead the Pam Pack past North Lenoir, 19-6, Friday.

Williamston defensive end Tryone Rogers: Rogers returned a punt 33 yards for a touchdown and also recovered a fumble in the Tigers' 13-12 loss to Ahoskie.

Rose fullback David Daniels: Daniels ran for 91 yards on only 12 carries and scored one touchdown to lead the Rampants to a 28-0 victory over Kinston Friday.

North Pitt quarterback Calvin Hunter: Hunter hit on seven of 10 passes for 101 yards and also hit Eldred Smikle with a 10-yard scoring pass for the winning score as the Panthers handed Farmville its first conference loss of the season, 20-13, Friday night.

Farmville end Alexander Daniels: Daniels was the main target of three different Jaguar quarterbacks as he caught five passes for 101 yards and one touchdown, a 19-yard pass from Mack Davis.

Roanoke running back Bernard Hudgins: Hudgins ran for 96 yards on only 10 carries in a 31-10 loss to Northampton East.

Scabs' Honeymoon Nearing The End

By The Associated Press

His honeymoon over with the NFL, Buddy Moor headed home to a real honeymoon today.

"I was glad we could give them a win, but I know we're not welcome so I'm going back to Lexington (Ky.)," the 6-foot-5, 250-pound defensive end said after helping the Atlanta Falcons gain a 24-20 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Sunday in a game that signaled the end of the season for the most of the NFL's replacement players.

Moor and his colleagues presumably were made superfluous as a result of the end of the NFL strike late last week. Regulars on most teams were expected to start returning to camp today.

Like most of the other replacement players, Moor didn't have much hope of playing any more football this season in the NFL, even though teams planned to keep a complement of up to 85 players for awhile.

"I'm a plumber, and you've got to do something for a living," said Moor, who got married on Saturday and said he plans to go back to his plumbing work following his honeymoon this week.

As for the other replacement players, many resigned themselves to going back to jobs as firemen, teachers, child care workers and fishermen, among other things.

Detroit linebacker Tim Ross, for one, will rejoin a fire department in Toledo, Ohio.

"I have enjoyed it, but I knew I had something to do at home, too," Ross said. "I enjoyed the guys and I'll miss that. I thank God that He gave me a chance to play the game again."

A former Bowling Green player who is an emergency medical technician 50 miles south of Detroit in Toledo, Ross was able to suit up for the Lions without taking a leave of absence from his job with the Toledo Fire Department.

He was on vacation when the strike began and managed to juggle more time off when the strike continued. If need be, he could come back late this week after putting in his 24-hour shift on Tuesday.

Many players felt at loose ends.

"Everybody in this locker room is happy we won the game, but everybody is a little apprehensive about what's going to happen," quarterback Steve Bono said after leading the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 21-7 victory over the Indianapolis Colts. "It's a little subdued in here and I guess it is all around the league. Nobody knows what their future holds."

Others held out hope of hooking on somewhere in the NFL with the league deciding to expand rosters from 45 to 85 for the time being — in part to protect itself from a sudden strike by regular NFL players next Sunday.

"We're not out yet." Seattle Seahawks defensive end Doug Hollie said after Seattle's 37-14 drubbing of Detroit. "I'm just looking forward to the Raiders' game."

Two weeks ago, Hollie was a member of the Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian Football League. His anticipation of the Raiders' game might have something to do with being cut by the Los Angeles team in training camp this year.

Some teams considered mixing replacement players with the veterans, if only for next week's games.

"I'd like to take all these guys home with me," San Diego Chargers Coach Al Saunders said of his replacement players.

And next week?
 "We will play with the best 45 players available to us," Saunders said. "Right now I don't know who are the best 45 players to play against Kansas City."

As far as the replacement players themselves, however, there was generally resignation among them.

Minnesota quarterback Tony Adams, who was sacked eight times against Chicago last week and seven times in a loss to Tampa Bay Sunday, said he would "try to heal" from his hurts.

"I don't think there ever was any intention to have a next week for me once this thing was over," he said. "I have my own business and I'll get back to that. My only regret is that we didn't win ... Years from now, I'll look back on this and it will be a footnote in my life."

Old And The New Keyed Tide Win

By The Associated Press
 Given inspiration by a former star linebacker and leadership by a freshman quarterback, Alabama made a strong bid to return to the college football rankings after crushing No. 8 Tennessee 41-22.

Former Alabama linebacker Lee Roy Jordan talked to the Crimson Tide players Friday night and Coach Bill Curry said the inspirational message carried over into the game.

"Basically, I just told them the importance of bouncing back," said Jordan, now a Cotton Bowl scout. "I also emphasized the importance of the Tennessee game. It's been a big game in the SEC and the country for more than 50 years."

Then freshman Jeff Dunn, starting his first game, took over, passing for 229 yards, including a record-breaking 90-yard scoring play.

"I was trying to show leadership. I was trying to take charge," Dunn said. "Those guys rallied around me."

Curry said Dunn "got off to one of the best starts I've ever seen in college football."

Even Tennessee linebacker Kelly Ziegler was impressed, saying Dunn "did everything well. He threw well, ran well and executed well. He's got three more years, so he can really develop into a great quarterback."

Alabama, upset by Memphis State 13-10 last week, took a 24-0 lead and went late into the third quarter before having to punt. Dunn, taking over because of injuries to David Smith and Vince Sutton, completed five passes as Alabama drove 80 yards on its first possession, capped by Bo Wright's one-yard touchdown run.

Gene Jelks returned a Tennessee punt 63 yards for a score. Then, on third-and-10 from the Alabama 10, Dunn and Pierre Goode teamed up for a 90-yard pass play, the longest scoring pass in Alabama history.

Besides Tennessee, four other members of The Associated Press' Top Twenty lost Saturday, but three were to other ranked teams.

No. 2 Nebraska defeated No. 12 Oklahoma State 35-0, No. 9 UCLA downed No. 16 Oregon 41-10, No. 13 Syracuse stopped No. 10 Penn State 48-21, and Texas edged No. 15 Arkansas 16-14.

In other games, it was top-ranked Oklahoma 59, Kansas State 10; No. 4 Florida State 32, Louisville 9; No. 5 Auburn 20, Georgia Tech 10; No. 6 Louisiana State 34, Kentucky 9; and No. 7 Clemson 17, Duke 10.

In the Second Ten, it was No. 11 Notre Dame 35, Air Force 14; No. 14 Florida 33, Temple 3; No. 17 Ohio State 20, Purdue 17; No. 18 Georgia 52, Vanderbilt 24; and No. 19 Michigan State 38, Northwestern 0. On Friday, No. 20 Indiana nipped Minnesota 18-17. Third-ranked Miami, Fla. was idle.

"We were mighty good to them and they were also mighty good to themselves," Tennessee Coach Johnny Majors said.

Alabama, he said, was "really keyed up, and they played a fantastic ball game, both offensively and defensively. They shut our running game down."

The Vols got only 51 yards rushing and Alabama's defense came up with five interceptions and recovered two Tennessee fumbles.

No. 1 Oklahoma 59, Kansas St. 10
 Nine different players scored as Oklahoma rolled over Big Eight Conference foe Kansas State, including Anthony Stafford's 20-yard run and Jamelle Holiway's 28-yard pass to Carl Cabiness on the Sooners' first two possessions.

"You make a mistake against them, and it's a touchdown," Kansas State Coach Stan Parrish said of Oklahoma.

Oklahoma, 6-0, leads the nation in rushing, scoring and total offense. No. 2 Nebraska 35, No. 12 Oklahoma St. 0

Keith Jones and Ken Clark each scored twice to lead Nebraska, 6-0, which outrushed Oklahoma State 466-43.

"I didn't have any idea we'd be able to control the game like that," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "I felt the strongest part of Oklahoma State was its offense, but our defense played a super game."

"We just absorbed a sound whipping," Oklahoma State Coach Pat Jones said.

No. 4 Florida St. 32, Louisville 9
 Tailbacks Sammie Smith, Dexter Carter and Victor Floyd each scored as Florida State, 6-1, stopped Louisville. The Seminoles led 18-3 at halftime and didn't allow Louisville a touchdown until the fourth quarter.

No. 5 Auburn 20, Georgia Tech 10
 Jeff Burger and Lawyer Tillman teamed up for a four-yard scoring pass with 24 seconds remaining and Auburn, 5-0-1, scored again on the game's final play to down Georgia Tech. Burger's pass capped a 91-yard drive that began with 4:01 remaining and the Yellow Jackets, 2-4, leading 10-7.

No. 6 Louisiana State 34, Kentucky 9
 Harvey Williams ran for two touchdowns and Eddie Fuller sprinted 45 yards for another to give LSU the victory against the No. 2 scoring defense in major college football. Kentucky, 4-2, had allowed only 40 points in its first five games.

LSU quarterback Tom Hodson completed 17 of 30 passes for 222 yards, his sixth consecutive 200-yard game. The victory improved LSU's record to 6-0-1.

No. 7 Clemson 17, Duke 10

Tracy Johnson's four-yard touchdown run with 6:46 remaining gave Clemson a 17-10 victory over Duke and stretched Clemson's winning streak to six games. Johnson's touchdown capped an 11-play, 97-yard drive after a quick kick by Duke that the Blue Devils downed on Clemson's 3-yard line.

Duke, 3-3, lost for the third straight time.

No. 13 Syracuse 48, No. 10 Penn State 21

Quarterback Don McPherson combined with Rob Moore on an 80-yard scoring pass on the opening play of the game as Syracuse ended 16 years of frustration by defeating Penn State. McPherson passed for three touchdowns and ran for two others, rolling up 375 offensive yards.

It was the first Syracuse victory over Penn State since 1970 and its first at home over the Nittany Lions since 1965. The Orangemen improved to 6-0, the best start for a Syracuse team since the 1959 national champions went 10-0.

Syracuse kicker Tim Vesling converted six extra-point attempts to extend the Orangemen's 9-year-old streak to 200 in a row and tie the NCAA record set by Alabama.

No. 9 UCLA 41, No. 16 Oregon 10
 Linebacker Randy Austin ran 38 yards for a touchdown on a fake punt and recovered a fumble to set up another score as UCLA, 5-1, scored in a record 187th consecutive game. UCLA was last shutout 38-0 by Michigan in 1971.

Oregon, 4-2, which last week moved into the Top Twenty for the first time in 17 years, threw four interceptions and lost three fumbles.

No. 11 Notre Dame 35, Air Force 14

Tony Rice, replacing injured quarterback Terry Andrysiak, ran for two first-quarter touchdowns as the Fighting Irish, 4-1, stopped Air Force.

Rice attempted only five passes, completing one for 10 yards. But the Fighting Irish, who ran for 354 yards, controlled the ball in smothering Air Force, 5-2.

No. 14 Florida 34, Temple 3

Freshman Emmitt Smith became the quickest entrant in college football's 1,000-yard rushing club, making it in his seventh game as Florida defeated Temple 34-3. Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh and Herschel Walker of Georgia previously had reached 1,000 yards in eight games.

Smith ran for 175 yards on 23 carries despite missing most of the second quarter with a sprained right wrist. He has gained 1,011 yards and scored 11 touchdowns.

Texas 16, No. 15 Arkansas 14

Brett Stafford threw an 18-yard pass to 5-foot-7 Tony Jones, who caught the ball between two defenders in the end zone on the final play to give Texas, 3-3, the victory over Arkansas, 4-2.

Arkansas outrushed Texas 288-120, but the Longhorns passed for 182 yards to 10 for the Razorbacks, who attempted four passes and completed one as starting quarterback Greg Thomas sustained a shoulder injury.

No. 17 Ohio State 20, Purdue 17
 Matt Frantz's 50-yard field goal with 3:10 remaining gave Ohio State the victory after Purdue came back from a 17-0 halftime deficit. Two touchdown passes from Doug Downing to Calvin Williams and a 25-yard field goal by Jonathan Briggs tied the score for Purdue.

No. 18 Georgia 52, Vanderbilt 24

Reserve quarterback Wayne Johnson rushed for three second-half touchdowns for the Bulldogs, 5-2, who trailed 14-0 in the first quarter and 21-19 at the half.

No. 19 Michigan State 38, Northwestern 0

Lorenzo White rushed for 187 yards on 33 carries and scored three touchdowns as Michigan State, 4-2, downed Northwestern. White moved into 34th place on the NCAA career rushing list with 3,838 yards. Northwestern, 0-5-1, has lost 12 of its last 14 games.

Other Games

Yale defeated Columbia 27-13, extending the Lions' record losing streak to 36 games.

New Mexico Highlands quarterback Brian Ainsworth completed 29 of 47 passes for 492 yards and two touchdowns in a 42-42 tie with Colorado Mines.

Replacement Era Close To End

quarterback, who completed 25 of 31 for 281 yards and four touchdowns as the Browns the Cincinnati "B" team. "It's just a team victory. The statistics don't really mean that much."

Montana and Clark, meanwhile, teamed up as in championship days of yore. Montana completed 31 of 39 for 334 yards and four touchdowns in a victory over St. Louis, with Clark catching two of the touchdown passes and nine in all.

Ryan, the Jets' backup quarterback, threw four touchdown passes in the Jets' overtime victory over Miami.

One notable replacement was Erik Kramer, who threw for 335 yards and three second-half touchdowns as Atlanta overcame a 17-0 deficit for a 24-20 victory over the Rams, who had 11 veterans back.

"All I can say is that I had the best day of my life. It was a dream come true. If it all ends today, it was great, but I hope to stick around the NFL," said Kramer, who had been helping coach the football team while working for his degree at North Carolina State, where he played in college.

"I think I at least earned a shot. I proved I can play, but it's not for me to say."

As for the shaken up standings, the most obvious example is the Giants, 0-2 before the strike and left in deep trouble by inept replacements. Unless Dallas and Washington tie tonight, the Giants will be four games out in the NFC East and their 0-5 record is one game worse than Pittsburgh's 1-4 in 1976, the year after the Steelers had won two straight Super Bowls.

That means that even to make the playoffs, they may have to go 10-0, a not impossible feat considering they won 12 straight last season. But not very easy, either.

"It's going to be very difficult to get out of it. I don't think we have any margin of error," Coach Bill Parcells said.

The Giants aren't the only one. The Rams, 1-2 during the strike despite an influx of regulars, are now 1-4 and last in the NFC West.

Kansas City, a playoff team a year ago, went 0-3 with replacements and is 1-4, two games out of fourth place in the AFC West after a loss to Denver.

And Minnesota, considered the only possible challenger to Chicago in the NFC Central, went 0-3 with replacements after starting 2-0. That left them two games behind the Bears, who themselves lost for the first time Sunday.

"I can't say I'm happy about anything right now," Minnesota Coach Jerry Burns said. "We're going to have to regroup together with the 'A' club and lay down the problems in front of us."

The high attendance Sunday was 46,813 at Chicago's Soldier Field, where Bears Coach Mike Ditka alternated quarterbacks most of the second half to shuttle in plays. There were 40,719 in Cincinnati.

Pittsburgh's first home game of the replacement season drew 34,627 in Three Rivers Stadium, ending a streak of 119 consecutive home sellouts dating to Nov. 5, 1972. John Stallworth, one of six Pittsburgh regulars to play, got his 500th career reception in the Steelers' victory over the Colts.

Just 8,310 watched the Lions and Seahawks in the Pontiac Silverdome, double the number for the heavily picketed strike opener two weeks ago. Atlanta drew 15,813 for its game with the Rams, and the Packers' overtime victory over Philadelphia drew 35,842 at 57,000-seat Lambeau Field, 63 more people than attended last week's game.

The Jets drew 18,249 to Giants Stadium, a figure that qualified as the high for four replacement games for the Jets and Giants at 76,000-seat Giants Stadium. The smallest crowd in Tampa Bay history, 20,850, watched the Bucs beat the Vikings and 20,296 saw the first replacement game in Kansas City.

San Francisco drew 38,094 to Candlestick Park, their smallest crowd since 1980, and 23,541 at the 92,516-seat Los Angeles Coliseum, where Elvis Patterson's 75-yard intercepttion return with 18 seconds left gave San Diego the victory over the Raiders.

Buffalo's Rich Stadium, which seats 80,000, was sold out for the game before the strike, but only 15,737 came for the replacement game.

PBS Offers New TV Shows Aimed At Younger Viewers

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Public television is taking a big step this week in its quest to expand viewership and shed its lingering image as a bastion of how-to shows, obtuse artistic ventures and documentaries on wildlife mating rituals.

Beginning this week, PBS yocks and rocks.

On Monday is the debut of "Trying Times," an anthology sitcom series in which PBS takes TV's shock genre and says we can do it better.

On public television's version of half-hour comedy, the writers have won Pulitzer Prizes for their plays and the actors have been in films by Martin Scorsese and Francis Ford Coppola.

A look at the first few episodes of "Trying Times" reveals the series to be satisfyingly offbeat and unlikely to find its way onto present-day network television. On the other hand, the best of the commercial network comedies, like the new "Frank's Place" on CBS and "The Slap Maxwell Story" on ABC, do not compare unfavorably with the PBS idea of TV comedy. Maybe public television can't do it that much better. Maybe commercial television is improving.

The first episode, "A Family Tree," is a black comedy written by Beth Henley, author of the Pulitzer-winning play "Crimes of the Heart," and starring Rosanna Arquette ("Baby, It's You," "After Hours," "Desperately Seeking Susan") and rock artist and filmmaker David Byrne ("True Stories").

Arquette is Kara, the Calamity Jane of social events, hoping to make a good first impression on her boyfriend's parents. The evening dissolves into a series of Hitchcock-inspired horrors. Henley pokes fun at sitcom style, turning everything swell at the end despite disaster.

The following week's episode is "Drive, She Said," written by playwright Wendy Wasserman and starring the wonderful Teri Garr ("One From the Heart," "Tootsie") as a stodgy art history professor who decides to learn to drive after her intellectual boyfriend (Lyman Ward) dumps her for the car-hopping star of "Dukes of Hazzard," played by Catherine Bach, who was actually in the defunct car-crash series. Again the story dissolves into true TV happiness when the art history professor falls for the driving instructor (Ron Silver).

Comedian Steven Wright stars as a freeloading perpetual academic who finally gets cut off from his stipend and has to "Get a Job" in episode three, by TV sitcom writer Earl Pomerantz, whose credits include some of the best of commercial television, "Mary Tyler Moore," "Cheers" and "The Cosby Show."

Future episodes star actor and monologue artist Spalding Gray, Jessica Harper, Jeff Daniels, Swosie Kurtz, Candice Bergen and Keanu Reeves, the younger actor who made a splash in the movie "River's Edge."

The featured writers include Gray and playwrights Bernard Slade and Christopher Durang.

So much for yocks. In the rocks department, PBS this week revives "Rockschool," an innovative series featuring rock musicians explaining their work and demonstrating that, notwithstanding the Dire Straits tune "Money for Nothing," it is work. Keyboardist Herbie Hancock is host.

The shows are a combination of MTV-style star interviews, good rock music and, for those who want to grow their own, a how-to-rock course.

David Thomas, project director for WNET, said the series has been somewhat revamped since it first aired two years ago to give more space to music rather than pure instruction and to concentrate more on computerized synthesizers than on drums and guitars.

Artists who appear in the series include ex-Doobie Brother Michael McDonald, "Miami Vice" composer Jan Hammer, Genesis' Tony Banks, Andy Summers of The Police and singer James Ingram. Much of the instruction comes from demonstrations by the engaging members of the "Rockschool" band: Deirdre Cartwright, Geoff Nicholls, Henry Thomas and Alastair Gavin.

When the series premiered, the reaction from public television stations was less than enthusiastic. Only about 50 stations picked it up.

"Some stations put it on with a little trepidation, somehow thinking rock music and public television were incompatible," Thomas said. The show eventually gained acceptance "once they saw it wasn't a music video clip show." Eventually it was carried by about 200 stations, and more than that have already picked up the show for this season, Thomas said.

"I know there are efforts to do something more for our teen-age audience," Thomas said.

Liz Taylor Goes On Food Binge In Preparation For Italian Film

BARI, Italy (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor has arrived in Bari to begin shooting Franco Zeffirelli's "The Young Toscanini," but the Italian media say she is also starring in a "gastronomic performance."

According to news reports, Zeffirelli asked the American actress to gain 9 pounds for the $14 million film set in Italy and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in 1886.

On Saturday, Taylor, who last year shed 60 pounds, reportedly dined on prosciutto, fettuccine with wild mushrooms, a lobster rice dish and spaghetti.

Newspapers said that for breakfast on Sunday, the actress requested sweets. Lunch was pasta with turnip, mashed beans and chioro and artichoke parmigiana, followed by fish, baby shrimp and other local specialties.

Taylor arrived in the medieval port city of Bari on Saturday by private jet from San Francisco, along with two bodyguards, four secretaries and 59 suitcases, reports said.

In the new film, the 55-year-old Taylor plays a retired soprano whose declining voice blossoms in the role of the Egyptian princess Aida, under the love spell of the 19-year-old Italian conductor.

Arturo Toscanini is played by 22-year-old American actor Thomas Howell.

Zeffirelli directed Taylor and her former husband, the late Richard Burton, in Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew."

Picnic Complaint

MIAMI (AP) — "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson was having a picnic with a little gunfire mixed in for fun when police got a complaint of illegal dove shooting.

Metro-Dade police officers responded to a call from Linda Jennings about dove-shooting in the sanctuary on property adjoining her home in rural Dade County.

Sunday's complaint, police Sgt. Ed Hefner said, was handled much like the other 40 to 50 calls officers receive each day during dove season.

Officers left without issuing any complaint "because nobody saw him actually pull the trigger and a bird fall," Mrs. Jennings said. "Don Johnson got in his helicopter and left."

Author's Daughter Talks Of 'Daddy'

GLEN ELLEN, Calif. (AP) — The only surviving daughter of adventurer-author Jack London is living near her father's ranch, doing what he did best: telling stories.

"It's wonderful to be here," said 84-year-old Becky London-Fleming, who moved from Oakland to a small house outside Jack London State Historic Park about 60 miles north of San Francisco four years ago following the death of her husband.

"I don't do anything except talk. So many people are interested in Daddy, and I love to talk about him," she said. "When I was a little girl, he was always my age."

London, born in Oakland in 1876, died in a ranchhouse near here in 1916 after publishing 51 books, 200 short stories and hundreds of articles. His novel "The Call of the Wild" was published in 1903.

Her father didn't like to be called a writer, she said recently.

"I'm merely a teller of tales," he would say. Then he would give a grin and add, "Also I'm a darn good listener." And he was. He got people to talk, and he always listened to my sister and me. He wanted to know about our friends and our school."

"Mommy! The pot's losing its temper."

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Oct. 20

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't be forceful in trying to get your views across to others. A reasonable and diplomatic attitude could work well for you.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be cautious in any movement today, or you'll cause some damage. Be more cooperative with associates and become more productive.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Plan a recreation for later, but remember that it needn't cost much. Be more understanding with your mate, and don't argue.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Work on improving the appearance of your home and your mood will improve. Have guests in and enjoy quiet conversation.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Be considerate of your associates this morning or unpleasant situations may arise. Be very cautious when driving this evening.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't be extravagant in any way today, and be sure you understand the consequences before taking any financial action.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Make a concerted effort not to annoy anyone today. Contact some good friends and arrange an amusement for later tonight.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You would be wise to keep your mouth shut today, as arguments will come easily. But they will not be so easy to resolve later.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be careful not to over spend or over exercise today. Clarify your wishes to others, and you'll have a much easier time gaining them.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): This is a good time to get into new civic matters which have interested you. Take it easy and enjoy your family this evening.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You can be quite successful in putting new ideas into motion today. Don't work overtime tonight, go home and get some rest.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Come to a better understanding with a business associate. This is a good time to clarify agreements or make binding contracts.

 1 ♥ Pass Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—It looks as if partner has a good hand but couldn't act because he has heart length. You don't win money or tournaments by letting the opponents play at the one-level. Balance with two clubs.

Thatcher Again Leaves Friendly Summit — Alone

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — When Margaret Thatcher emerged from the latest Commonwealth summit, she left a trail of angry and frustrated fellow leaders in what has become a familiar style for the British prime minister.

In scenes reminiscent of European Economic Community summits where Mrs. Thatcher is often the odd one out in budget arguments, she arrived in Vancouver on the offensive.

At the gathering of the Commonwealth, which groups Britain and 47 former colonies, she was the sole opponent to imposing sanctions against apartheid South Africa.

The 62-year-old Conservative Party leader concluded the five-day summit Saturday without hint of embarrassment that some of the information barrage mounted by her officials may have backfired.

"When you hit back, they go up in smoke," Mrs. Thatcher snapped in a radio interview with a British Broadcasting Corp. reporter.

That was after the leaders of Australia, India, Zambia and Zimbabwe went on the attack at a news conference, accusing the British of misinformation and abominable tactics.

They said Mrs. Thatcher was just plain wrong in her argument that sanctions harden the South African government's resistance to abolish its system of racial segregation and grant political power to the black majority.

Britain had quoted 1985 and 1986 figures showing that Canadian trade with South Africa had risen, but Canada said trade fell by half in 1987 when new embargos took effect.

Mrs. Thatcher and her officials said her most vociferous African critics, Zambia and Zimbabwe, not only were unable to implement a range of anti-South African sanctions they pledged in 1986, but were also major recipients of British aid to lessen their dependence on Pretoria.

Mrs. Thatcher made more than one reference to Zambian bankruptcy, and several to herself as "winning the argument" after the summit ended without imposing any new embargos on South Africa, a major British trading partner.

It was not a performance designed to win new friends, and it didn't.

"The Iron Lady has got it all wrong, perhaps deliberately. ...

Perhaps that's the way she gets her votes in Britain, but it cannot be votes from the rest of the Commonwealth," grumbled Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe.

Host Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney kept smiling. But privately his officials were angered by the Thatcher tactics.

For critics who say she is bossy, patronizing and dogmatic, and for admirers who see a forceful, courageous leader prepared to take an unfashionable line for her beliefs, Mrs. Thatcher provided plenty of new ammunition in Vancouver.

"The prime minister has never been concerned about being out on a limb when she thinks she is right, and the fact that it is uncomfortable is neither here nor there," said a top Thatcher aide who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Europe's first woman prime minister has shown a willingness to go it alone since she first took office in 1979.

The Vancouver meeting was the third Commonwealth gathering in three years where Britain has been in a minority of one over sanctions.

For years, Mrs. Thatcher has exasperated the rest of the 12-nation European Economic Community.

With statements such as, "I want my money back," she battled alone until the British budget contribution was reduced. This year, she vetoed increased budget levies until the trading bloc controls runaway agricultural subsidies.

"The other 11 countries failed to convince me," Mrs. Thatcher said last June when an EEC summit ended in deadlock. The Europeans will try again in December to reach accord.

In April 1986, Mrs. Thatcher, again alone, incurred widespread condemnation internationally and in Britain by allowing U.S. warplanes to use British bases for a bombing raid on Libya.

"Friendship works two ways," she shouted as opponents in the House of Commons howled that she'd gone too far for her friend, President Reagan.

She has proved to be the most hawkish U.S. ally in Western Europe, building up Britain's nuclear arsenal making it the first to deploy U.S. cruise missiles in 1983.

Her welcome of the superpower agreement in principle to remove their medium-range missiles from Europe has been muted. This month she declared that nuclear disarmament has "gone far enough."

Commuter Trains Hit, Killing 80

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A train packed with rush-hour commuters smashed head-on into another train south of Jakarta today, killing about 80 people and injuring 300, police said.

Panicking passengers jumped from the roof and sides of the trains moments before the 7:30 a.m. collision, witnesses said.

"We were so shocked when we saw another train coming on the same rail there was no time to warn the others. We just jumped for our lives," said a man who identified himself only as Sukirman.

A police spokesman said 50 bodies were recovered and about 30 more bodies were believed to be in the wreckage. About 300 injured were sent to seven hospitals in Jakarta, he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The spokesman said the collision took place in the district of Bintaro Jaya, about nine miles south of central Jakarta.

A train carrying 600 passengers from Rangkas Bitung to Jakarta, 40 miles north, smashed into a train carrying 300 passengers from Jakarta to the town of Merak, about 85 miles west.

Police said the northbound train was traveling at high speed when conductors saw the other train approaching about two miles away. They did not know the exact speed, nor whether the second train was traveling at high speed.

A train station official said 50 or more people frequently perch on top of the train to Jakarta during rush hour.

Some people jumped from the trains when they saw the accident was about to occur, survivors said.

Sudrajat, 25, a painter who goes by one name, said he was sitting in one of the carriages when he saw the oncoming train.

"I did not have time to pick up my bag," he said. "I just jumped out the door, which was somehow already opened."

King Accepts Resignations

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — King Baudouin accepted the resignation of the center-right government today after four days of talks among political leaders failed to resolve a dispute over language.

The royal palace said in a brief statement the monarch asked the government of Prime Minister Wilfried Martens to stay on in a caretaker capacity and to form a new government.

Martens offered the resignation of his coalition government Thursday in a dispute over a mayor who insists on speaking French in Dutch-speaking Flanders.

Belgium is divided into French-speaking Wallonia in the south and Dutch-speaking Flanders in the north. But there is some overlap in towns along the frontier.

Belgium has had 33 governments since World War II, many of them felled by the language issue. The country has 5.5 million Dutch speakers and 4.5 million French speakers.

© 1987 by COTTER & COMPANY, CHICAGO IL 60614 100% Member-Owned Warehouse Distributors & Merchandisers
 Because this is a syndicated publication prepared in advance by Cotter & Company for distribution by over 6,000 independently owned and operated retail store members, some merchandise illustrated may not be immediately available on demand. However, any item that's unavailable can be ordered in full carton by the member store from a regional warehouse. Many items in this circular come unassembled. Individual stores are not responsible for assembling merchandise unless stated. This circular must be prepared months in advance of the actual distribution period. At times, an advertised item may not be available because of sales above anticipated demand or because of circumstances beyond our control; while we try to avoid such situations, we have no control over our manufacturers' delivery problems. We reserve the right to limit quantities, correct pricing errors and require central credit office approval of time payment sales. Prevailing taxes will be added to prices. This catalog is distributed by True Value members who own their own stores and set their own retail prices. Green Thumb, Harvard Cutlery, Lawn Chief, Master Electrician, Master Mechanic, Master Plumber, Servess, Snow Chief, Tru Bond, True Value, Tru Guard, Tru-Test and Value Bright are registered trademarks of Cotter & Company.
