NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices leaped in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange early today but then gave back all of their gain, falling below the level it dropped to in Monday's $500 billion selloff.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up as much as 200 points in early trading, was down 3 points to about 1,736 at 11:59 a.m. The London Stock Exchange also retreated from a rally attempt in late trading.

Trading was even heavier than Monday's record, when the Dow plunged 508 points in a decline that rivaled the worst of the Great Crash of 1929.

Volume as of 11:30 a.m. was 258.56 million shares. The NYSE tape that reports trades was running 67 minutes behind.

Trying to calm the markets, the exchange asked securities houses not to use computerized program trading, which moves huge blocks of stock and contributes to the volatility of the market.

The Federal Reserve said it would inject money as necessary to support the health of the markets and banking system.

A statement from West German authorities today eased concerns that Germany would allow its interest rates to rise, a move that might choke off economic growth in the United States by forcing interest rates higher here as well.

The market's action continued to perplex analysts. Investors seemed torn between the theory that massive U.S. trade and budget deficits would cause the dollar to fall and trigger high inflation and high interest rates, and the alternate theory that interest rates and inflation would be dragged down by a recession.

"Right now you can build a case for whatever you want," said Morgan McDonnell, managing director of Moseley, Hallgarten, Estabrook & Weeden Inc. in Chicago.

Bond prices surged. Traders said one reason was that investors were putting money in bonds out of fears of the possibility — however remote — that the devastation in stock markets would cause another 1930s-style depression by wiping out people's investments and causing a crisis in confidence.

In contrast, analysts said the rebound in stocks seemed to grow out of a conviction that corporate earnings were good enough to support higher prices.

Prices of U.S. Treasury bonds soared early today as investors sought a safe haven in government (See MARKET, A-8)

Area Market Experts Say Caution, Patience Needed For Stock Market

By STUART SAVAGE and CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writers

"Can you hold on? I've got to put in an order," Jim Black said.

It was an order to sell a half-hour after the New York Stock Exchange opened this morning.

But Black said orders to sell and orders to buy were about equal at Wheat First Securities' local office during the first 30 minutes of trading today.

That was not so Monday, when Wall Street saw a day of panic selling that cut 508 points from the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials.

"Yesterday, there was a lot more selling, especially early in the morning," Black said.

"Right now," Black said at 10:15 a.m., the Dow Jones index is "up 143 points. We've probably got a two- to three-day rally."

But it's really anybody's guess at this point, Black and other market-watchers said this morning.

Carson Bays, chairman of the economics department at East Carolina University, said "one thing I'm sure of" is that the drastic drop in the market Monday "is not the precursor to the next great depression. The economy is stronger than it was in 1929. The stock market is stronger than in '29."

And although "it's a drastic situation, in many respects unprecedented," Bays said, "The sky is not falling."

"Nobody knows what's going to happen today. But it's a mistake to go out and sell willy-nilly," Bays suggested. "If you haven't cashed out by now, it's too late. Hold on and pray."

Much of Monday's loss was "a paper loss," Bays said, especially for long-term investors. "If you do hold stock, you haven't lost that unless you sell it."

But, Bays said, "If you bought in a month ago, you're going to lose some real wealth. If you're holding a lot of blue chip stocks," Bays predicted, "they'll pick up in two weeks ... two months."

And Bays said Monday's "crash was not surprising. It's been one of the longest, strongest bull markets on record. When you're making money, you're going to keep doing what makes money (and) not going to worry about fixing the (foreign trade and federal budget) deficit."

TRADING FLIES — Activity on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange was hurried Monday during a rapidly swinging market, with the Dow Jones average of 30 Industrials down more than 500 points when the trading closed. Some recovery was reported in early trading today. (AP Laserphoto)

U.S. On Alert For Retaliation

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A mine was reportedly spotted in the main shipping lanes of the Persian Gulf today and radio monitors said an unidentified vessel was issuing distress calls 10 miles from the Iranian coast.

Diplomatic sources said the U.S. Embassy in Bahrain was advising Americans to "keep their heads low" following the U.S. attack Monday on two Iranian oil platforms.

In Washington, Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and President Reagan's senior military adviser, said he believed Iran might resort to terrorism to retaliate for the U.S. attack.

"They obviously will look for ways, but probably more in line with the 'silent hand' than what they have done thus far," he said.

But he also acknowledged that "the Iranians have the capability to mine."

Marine salvage executives said the Iranian tanker Khark 3 reported sighting the mine at 9:30 a.m. in a major shipping lane about 40 miles off the Iranian coast.

The Iranian tanker warned vessels to avoid the area, said the executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The executives said they believed the report was accurate because it came from a commercial craft.

The area is about 100 miles north of the oil platforms destroyed by the United States. U.S. officials said the attack was in reprisal for an Iranian missile strike Friday on a U.S.-flagged tanker.

Nearly two hours after the mine sighting, a distress signal was picked up by radio monitors from an unidentified vessel that gave its location as 10 miles from the Iranian coast.

No Apology

Greenville Mayor Les Garner says he doesn't see the need to make a public apology for a joke he told at a recent mayoral election forum.

"I don't think I made any statement that I should comment on," Garner said prior to Monday night's City Council workshop.

"Nobody's ever told me they were offended, so if they were offended I don't know anything about it. If they'll come to me and tell me that they were offended, then I will apologize to that person."

Speaking at a forum at the Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co. plant Thursday, Garner, who is seeking his second term in office, told an ethnic-related joke. At a news conference Friday, D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County branch of the NAACP, decried the remark as offensive to Jews and Orientals.

When asked if he would continue to use ethnic jokes as mayor, Garner replied, "I don't think so. I don't think I'll ever do that again."

County Board OKs Hiring Of Four New Court Bailiffs

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners Monday approved the hiring of four new bailiffs for the Sheriff's Department and a new clerk for the Inspections Department.

The new positions for the Sheriff's Department were approved after Sheriff Ralph Tyson told the board that more bailiffs were needed to work in the courtrooms in order to keep from taking field deputies off the road to provide security for the various courts.

County Manager Kramer Jackson reported that it would cost an estimated $53,000 to pay the four new positions through June 30, 1988, the end of this fiscal year.

Tyson also said the new full-time positions would reduce the amount of overtime paid to department employees.

County Engineer Phil Dickerson, who oversees inspections operations, said a new clerk is needed to help maintain inspections records on a timely basis and allow inspectors to spend more time in the field.

Dickerson said the inspections budget for the present fiscal year is about $125,000, while projected revenue for the year is $175,000.

The board adopted a resolution asking the Department of Transportation to install a fire signal light at the Staton-House Fire Department on N.C. 11 north of Greenville after a request by the department said emergency vehicles at times have problems getting onto the highway because of the traffic.

A fire signal light would serve to stop traffic long enough for fire trucks to enter the roadway.

Another resolution adopted by commissioners asks the DOT to enforce litter regulations within the county.

Commissioners also appointed James N. Galloway as an alternate member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning board.

The board voted to postpone its first Monday meeting in November until Nov. 9 because several commissioners will be unable to attend on Nov. 2.

The Greenville City Council has unanimously approved an annexation report for Brook Valley amid assurances the acquisition will not skew the city's district election system.

At a workshop Monday night, council members voted 5-0 to adopt the plan to extend services to the area. Council member Inez Fridley did not attend the meeting.

Prior to the vote, Council member Ed Carter asked how the district populations would be affected by the annexation, which includes 528 dwelling units with a population of 1,378 people.

"The primary concern I have is with some districts becoming disproportionately larger than others," Carter said.

City Attorney Mac McCarley said the city will have to look at redistricting in about three years.

"We are being very careful about the annexations of white citizens in either election District 1 or 2 (both black districts)," McCarley said.

"This annexation of Brook Valley will be effective after this election obviously, and the 1990 Census comes right after our next election. That's the next time that I would recommend to the council that we look at districting again and bring it into line."

The staff is considering the annexation of some black-populated areas to counteract the Brook Valley acquisition, which will cost about $5 million, according to McCarley.

"We do have a draft of priorities for annexations of other developed areas around the city," he said.

"Very few of those have a significant number of black citizens in them, but for the two or three that do, I think they are fairly close in on the priority list."

"We are being sensitive to the fact that if we annex those in, it will make a difference. Because of the growth out there, we are probably going to need the annexation of black citizens to balance the anticipated growth."

The Brook Valley annexation will not drastically alter the district system, McCarley said.

"A 10 percent variation is considered a high disproportionate figure," he said. "With the annexation of Brook Valley, we're probably going to still be just under that for that district, but as growth continues we'll be nearing that 10 percent."

The council has scheduled a public hearing Nov. 23 on the proposed annexation.

In other business, the council unanimously approved a $240,000 operating budget for the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority.

The budget includes $60,000 for advertising, $56,564 in salaries, $25,000 for printing and $25,000 for audio-visual production. The budget is based on average collection of $20,000 per month on the 3 percent occupancy tax.

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners approved the budget Oct. 5.

As part of a motion for approval of the budget, Council member Janice Buck asked that the authority's budget be presented to a joint meeting of the City Council and the Pitt County Commissioners.

New Law

Shoplifters and employees who steal can now be sued for the value of the stolen goods, plus three times the amount of consequential and punitive damages, according to a new state law.

A North Carolina law effective Oct. 1 allows an additional award of attorney fees to the plaintiff — the shop owner or employer. In addition, the law also holds parents financially responsible for what their children steal, to a limited extent.

The total award is limited to $1000. The law does not bar criminal prosecution, but also provides the opportunity to prosecute through magistrate or civil court rather than through a criminal court. The store will be required to post a sign that describes the civil penalties.

Goetz Gets Jail Term

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz says his six-month prison sentence for illegal possession of the gun he used to shoot four young men on a subway won't deter him from defending himself.

"I have letters from people who have been permanently injured in crimes and say they would gladly trade places with me," Goetz said in a telephone interview late Monday. "They say they would rather have gotten my sentence than their injuries and gone through what they have gone through."

Goetz, 39, was sentenced earlier in the day by acting state Supreme Court Justice Stephen Crane, who presided over an eight week-trial stemming from the 1984 shootings. The jury convicted Goetz on June 16 of a single charge of illegal possession of a weapon, and acquitted him of attempted murder and assault.

Goetz, who is white, said he shot the four black 19-year-olds because he believed they were about to rob him when one approached and demanded $5. They said they were panhandling money to play videogame machines that they intended to burglarize.

Before sentencing, the state Probation Department had recommended Goetz receive "intensive supervision coupled with indefinite psychiatric intervention," but no jail time.

Besides the jail term, Crane fined Goetz $5,000, put him on probation for five years, ordered him to perform 280 hours of community service at New York University Medical Center, and directed him to undergo psychiatric treatment. Goetz remains free on $5,000 bail, pending appeal.

New Japanese Leader Vows To Cut Trade Surplus With United States

TOKYO (AP) — Noboru Takeshita, the man chosen to become Japan's next leader, vowed today to continue his predecessor's conservative policies, reduce Japan's vast trade surplus and keep close security ties with the United States.

Prime Minister Yasuhiro

NOBORU TAKESHITA

Nakase chose Takeshita when the three candidates in the race failed to agree on a new leader for the governing Liberal Democratic Party before today's deadline.

Since 1955, the party has held a majority in the 764-member Diet, Japan's parliament. Its leader is assured of becoming prime minister.

Takeshita, 63, is the party secretary general and a former finance minister. He has been the front-runner in the race and wields enormous behind-the-scenes power.

While the outspoken Nakase was dubbed Japan's first "media prime minister," Takeshita is best known for his skills in consensus-building and internal party maneuvering.

He negotiated throughout the day Monday with the other two contenders, Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, 68, and Liberal Democratic Party Executive Council Chairman Shintaro Abe, 63, to try to agree on a successor to Nakase.

The three finally asked Nakase to designate his own successor to avoid a potentially divisive vote today by the party's 445 Diet legislators.

In announcing Nakase's choice, party Deputy Secretary General Sosuke Uno said Nakase had asked Takeshita to appoint Abe LDP secretary general and to name Miyazawa as deputy prime minister in the next Cabinet to cement party unity.

Nakase steps down as party president Oct. 30 after five years in office. He is expected to hand over the prime minister's post to Takeshita for a two-year term beginning Nov. 6.

Nakase, 69, served two two-year terms as LDP president and prime minister. He was given an unprecedented one-year extension after leading the party to landslide victories in national elections in the summer of 1986.

Two Banks Cutting Back Prime Rates

NEW YORK (AP) — Chemical Bank and Marine Midland Bank, which jumped ahead of the industry last week by raising their prime lending rates to 9.75 percent, today rejoined other major banks at 9.25 percent.

It was the first cut since July 1986 in the prime rate, the interest commercial banks charge on loans to their biggest corporate customers with the best credit ratings.

Last week, Chemical and Midland were alone among major U.S. banks in raising their prime rates to 9.75 percent from 9.25 percent.

Banks had increased the rate to 9.25 percent from 8.75 percent on Oct. 7.

In the bond markets today, interest rates plunged as bond prices soared after investors shifted funds from the battered stock market into bonds. The yield on the Treasury's closely watched 30-year bond was quoted at about 9.45 percent at around 9:30 a.m., down sharply from 9.94 percent late Monday.

The move by the banks followed a pledge today by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan to provide the necessary liquidity to protect the financial markets from a run fueled by margin calls in the wake of the stock market's plunge.

In a one-sentence statement issued before the opening of the market, Greenspan said, "The Federal Reserve, consistent with its responsibilities as the nation's central bank, affirmed today its readiness to serve as a source of liquidity to support the economic and financial system."

No Panic

American stock markets have taken a drubbing recently with a climactic selloff hitting Wall Street Monday which echoed around the world.

Following a disastrous week climaxed by a selling wave Friday that sent the Dow-Jones industrial average down 107.36 points, the New York Stock Exchange opened Monday to a deluge of sell orders. By 11 a.m. the Dow-Jones had dropped over 200 points and stunned traders were wondering where it would all end. It ended with the Dow off over 500 points.

Rank and file citizens recalled all the stories they had heard about 1929 and how that crash had sent the nation's economy into a tailspin to what became known as the Great Depression. And the politicians worried about what the rank and file citizens were thinking.

As this is written no one would even dare to predict where the stock market's down spiral will end. Obviously for many months there had been nothing but blue skies for stocks which sent the Dow to an historic high of 2,722.42 on Aug. 25. At the close yesterday the Dow was near 1,746. By anybody's standards that is quite a drop and the most troubling part of it is the intense selling of the past few days.

There is no argument as to whether there is a bear market ahead in which the sellers outnumber the buyers. This is a bear market. Just as bull markets — times when everyone is buying — have their tops, however, bear markets have their bottoms. The bottom of this market will be found when prices for shares of stocks in the nation's companies reach a level that is compatible with their earnings potential. The psychological factors being there, stock prices might drop even lower than they should, but eventually the market will adjust.

As for talk of 1929 and depressions, those who are not in stocks should rest easy. A stage for panic has been set, but none is necessary. Anything is possible, of course, but a stock market fall should not now bring on the same conditions as in 1929.

Consider these factors which set the nation's condition apart from 1929. Our savings accounts are now federally insured, Social Security is in place and its integrity will be maintained. The nation's economy generally is in good shape. Rather than the stock market bringing down the rest of the economy, the opposite should now be true. The economy will rescue stocks.

Just Wait

The Loch Ness monster hunt turned up nothing — but wait 'til next year.

One famous picture of a gargoyle-headed swimming creature was identified as a rotting tree stump, and it was determined the sonar system used in the search was too weak.

Robert Rines, identified as a physicist and patent attorney in Concord, N.H., was further said to be head of a group called the Academy of Applied Sciences. His organization was credited with providing the photo of a rotting tree stump. He is not discouraged. Some 4,000 eyewitnesses claim to have seen Nessie over the years, and Rines cannot believe every one of those 4,000 witnesses is a liar or a fool or a publicity seeker.

Organizer Adrian Shine, who set up the 1987 monster hunt, told a news conference Sunday he was more encouraged than ever because of three unexplained sonar contacts, and he expects further serious research. A more powerful sonar system may be brought into play.

The main character in the scenario is hotel owner Ronnie Bremner whom one might suspect of having a vested interest in promoting the 1,400-year-old Nessie legend. One million tourists spent some $250 million annually in the Loch Ness-Inverness area.

The past week's monster hunt was billed as the greatest of them all with more people and the most scientific equipment yet to search the waters. It drew 300 journalists from around the world who traveled to this beautiful loch in the Scottish Highlands to cover the 1987 hunt. It was the largest media contingent to ever assemble at the site. With all those people around, it's no wonder Nessie didn't show her face.

But just wait until next summer. Things could get even bigger and better when the next round of searching commences. Who knows, maybe some trace of the monster might be identified.

Rine's group is said to be planning to bring in a special Navy sonar system that could search the lake from one place. It promises to lure an even larger turnout of spectators seeking a glimpse of an elusive monster supposedly lurking in the deep.

U.S. Choices Now Defined In Gulf

PARIS — Iran's missile attack on a reflagged Kuwaiti tanker forces the Reagan administration to define its military commitment in the Persian Gulf with a precision that Washington wanted to avoid. To smoke out the United States, the ayatollahs have chosen the road of escalation and the risk of a bloody nose inflicted by American retaliation.

Why is Iran taking this route now, after reacting in low key to American attacks on Iranian gunboats earlier this month? And why do the ayatollahs figure that American retaliation is an acceptable price to pay for the privilege of shooting up Kuwaiti shipping? The answers are unknowable at this point, but the Iranian actions are plainly neither accidental nor irrational. Both international and domestic political factors make the escalation route logical, and sustainable, for them.

The greatest Iranian frustration has been an inability to play the two "Great Satans" against each other as the Soviet Union and the United States move toward a summit. Since its diplomacy has failed to divide Washington and Moscow, Tehran now appears to be gambling on open military conflict to do that and perhaps bring Iran Soviet support.

In recent months, the Soviets have placated Tehran by making the right noises about joint economic projects during an exchange of visits. But they have not provided any real relief for Iran from the diplomatic campaign for a United Nations arms embargo against Iran and the escalating air war carried out by Iraq's Soviet- and French-supplied warplanes.

Playing for time as it prepares for the renewed land offensive it plans against Iraq, Iran countered the U.S. drive in the Security Council for an arms embargo by giving indications for the first time this summer that it would consider a cease-fire.

The Soviets used this in successfully arguing for a delay in the arms embargo vote. But Moscow was careful to portray its move as part of a continuing cooperative effort with Washington inside the United Nations. The summit track continued to be the important one.

Friday's missile attack on one of the 11 Kuwaiti ships that now fly an American flag occurred as Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrived in the Middle East on his way to Moscow for the final summit planning session. Indiscriminate American attacks on Iran now would put Moscow in a squeeze and could even affect the summit. Escalation also brings pressure to bear on the five West European countries that have sent military ships to the gulf area.

For the ayatollahs, would such speculative gains be worth the humiliation and pain that an American retaliation would bring the nation? Because of the culture of martyrdom and the politics of turning persecution into strength that prevail in Iran today, they almost certainly would.

Consider the case of Hojatoleslam Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, the speaker of Iran's parliament and the man who arranged for Robert C. McFarlane to fly to Tehran and talk about hostages and arms. That operation blew up in their faces last November.

Six months later Rafsanjani's opening to France met the same fate. Then in July his attempts to work out a modus vivendi with Saudi Arabia collapsed in the Iranian-provoked bloodshed in Mecca.

In any other country, Rafsanjani's political obituary would already be written. But in Iran, the strongest political leader today is none other than this same Rafsanjani, now playing the role of persecuted radical. His rival, Mehdi Hashemi, who leaked the details of the McFarlane visit to a Lebanese magazine in an effort to discredit Rafsanjani, was executed two weeks ago.

Rafsanjani is taking credit for being able to use the American military presence in the gulf to bring 200,000 to 300,000 recruits into the Iranian Army at a time when morale had been sagging. He and his faction might actually welcome American raids as an opportunity to burnish their radical credentials and once again show that the country has to rally around the ayatollahs.

While the situations are completely different, in this one aspect the Iranians resemble another dangerous adversary in America's recent past — the North Vietnamese, who were also able to transform punishment into unity and whose leaders used the image of themselves as the weak persecuted by the strong to their advantage. The United States has to shape its response to Friday's missile with such long-term dangers clearly in view.

The Ebb Tide Of Influence

WASHINGTON — For Ronald Reagan, the twilight days of an extraordinary presidency approach. He retains, of course, the immense war-and-peace powers granted to any American president. Daily events in the Persian Gulf demonstrate how great those powers remain. He continues to be influential in world affairs. A chance to achieve a significant arms-control agreement with the Soviet Union still exists. But in other areas his political powers clearly are waning.

Nothing more dramatically underscores the diminution of Reagan's influence than his role in the increasingly embittered, and in the end destructive and hopeless, effort to win Senate confirmation for his Supreme Court nominee, Robert H. Bork.

Future scholars of Reagan's presidency looking for a symbol of how the tide ran out on the Reagan era may point to this week, when the three major television networks, ABC, CBS and NBC, refused to broadcast Reagan's speech in which he attempted to rally public support for his nominee by strongly attacking critics of Bork.

Here was the Great Communicator, the quintessential television president whose performances over the years enabled him to win battle after battle by carrying his case directly to the public, figuratively struck mute in one of his most important political struggles. The networks had deemed his message unworthy of live news coverage.

Even had his speech been broadcast, there is no reason to believe it would have made the slightest difference. The public seems to have tuned out Reagan, just as the Congress increasingly treats him as irrelevant. The right-wingers, too, who hailed him as their messiah, have distanced themselves from him of late. Predictably, they have fallen to fighting among themselves — and to attacking Reagan as well for what many of them view as his too-little, too-late, too-tepid handling of the Bork defense.

So, speaking almost as if offstage, Reagan sputters defiance, pops off, ad-libs, engages in excessive political rhetoric ("if the campaign of distortion and disinformation used by opponents of this nominee is allowed to succeed ... it will permanently diminish the sum total of American democracy") and plain nonsense (that the Bork battle really is about "the independence of our judiciary") — and all to no apparent effect.

Now only two of those Cabinet officers are left: the still highly visible and forceful defense secretary, Caspar W. Weinberger, and the still nearly invisible and almost publicly unknown housing secretary, Samuel R. Pierce. The roll of the others now gone tells the passage of the Reagan years: CIA Director William J. Casey and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, both of whom died this year; Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.; Attorney General William French Smith; Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan; Interior Secretary James G. Watt; Budget Director David A. Stockman; United Nations Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick; Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis; Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan; Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker; Agriculture Secretary John R. Block; Education Secretary

Terrel H. Bell; Energy Secretary James B. Edwards.

The same dramatic turnover has occurred among the president's senior White House staff. His original team included the Big Three, or Troika: presidential counselor Edwin Meese III, chief of staff James A. Baker III, deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver, all of them gone from the White House. Gone, too, are the rest of that first White House crew: press secretary James Brady, domestic affairs adviser Martin Anderson, national security adviser Richard V. Allen, economics adviser Murray L. Weidenbaum, political adviser Lyn Nofziger, congressional liaison Max Friedersdorf, public liaison Elizabeth Hanford Dole. The problems of Deaver and Nofziger, whose criminal trials approach, convey another symbol for the Reagan years — the ethical impropriety affecting many who held high positions during his two terms.

Reagan stands virtually alone today, and for him, the inexorable political countdown begins.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The House of Representatives voted to ban smoking on all domestic flights of two hours or less. I understand the Airline Pilots Association, the airlines themselves are opposed to this. As a private citizen and a smoker, I, too, believe this ban is totally uncalled for.

Safety, not smoking, is the most significant problem in airline travel today. I am more concerned with crowded skies, overworked air controllers and incompetent pilots.

In a free society, we smokers have rights, also. We should not be made to feel like second-class citizens simply because we enjoy the adult pleasure of smoking.

Strength For Today

A 12-year-old boy was throwing his weight around and declaring that parental discipline was unjust and foolish. "I wish I could go and live in the jungle," he said. The nature of the jungle was explained to him, and then his mother said, "Now would you like to go and live in the jungle?" The youngster thought for a moment and then replied, "I wouldn't like to live in the jungle, but I'd like to live near the jungle."

Yes, so he could dart in once in a while to have the freedom which the jungle affords. But what a disappointment he would get, for the freedom of the jungle is only the freedom to rend and destroy.

Everyone living in civilized society must be obedient to law. Life in the jungle is nasty, brutish and short — even for visitors. The only people released from human law are the dead.

IN THE STATE

Slow Start

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Fallen television evangelists Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker are doing considerably worse than a mediocre rock group when it comes to selling concert tickets in Virginia, a civic center official said.

"We've sold a grand total of five tickets," C.E. Gilbert, assistant director for Norfolk's Scope auditorium, said Monday after the $17.50 and $20 tickets had been on sale for several hours at 12 outlets. Toward the end of the day, Gilbert said, "We're up to 23 tickets. For this type of act, I would say it's not very good."

"An average rock show, you'd be looking at 900, maybe 1,000 tickets the first day," Gilbert said. "Then it drops to several hundred a day until the show gets closer and it picks back up."

The Bakkers are scheduled to play Norfolk on Dec. 14 and Roanoke on Dec. 15. Their national tour has been dubbed the "Farewell For Now" tour, and it is expected to include country music by Tammy Bakker.

Mother's Plea

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A Craven County woman accused of slaying her 5-year-old daughter and wounding her 18-month-old son in December has pleaded no contest to charges of involuntary manslaughter and assault.

Yolanda Drzik, 28, of Havelock had pleaded not guilty because of temporary insanity, but she entered the no contest plea Monday as her trial was scheduled to begin in Craven County Superior Court.

She had been charged with first-degree murder in the death of her daughter, Lorraine Frances Drzik, but was allowed to plead to the lesser charge of involuntary manslaughter as part of a plea bargain.

New Adviser

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin announced Monday that Joyce F. Wasdell of Durham will serve as his elementary and secondary education adviser.

Ms. Wasdell was the first woman to serve as assistant superintendent in North Carolina. She also has worked as a teacher, guidance counselor and director of secondary education.

Ms. Wasdell, 63, will help Martin in his efforts to improve public school facilities financing, strengthen the Basic Education Program, emphasize local control for school boards and prevent dropouts. Ms. Wasdell replaces Linda Combs, whose contract expired Sept. 30, 1987.

Fire Deaths

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Linwood couple died Sunday in a fire at their home that authorities said was the third in the past 10 or 15 years.

Garvey Ray Garris, 50, and his wife, Betty Jo Hardy Garris, 41, died after they were overcome with smoke in the fire, Larry Anderson, chief of the Linwood Volunteer Fire Department, said.

The fire was the third to occur at the house in the last 10 or 15 years, Anderson said.

Car Death

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Christy Paige Berrier, a 17-year-old senior at Thomasville Senior High School who had recently been elected the school's homecoming queen, was killed in a one-car wreck in Randolph County that sent three other people in the hospital, authorities said.

The driver of the car, Gary Wayne Thrift, 17, of Thomasville, is in stable condition in the surgical unit at High Point Regional Hospital, a hospital spokesman said. He has been charged with driving while intoxicated and with felony death by vehicle.

Soft TEDs

WILMINGTON (AP) — A "soft" device for ejecting sea turtles from shrimp nets, which Brunswick County shrimpers helped design, has met the requirements for federal certification.

Jim Bahen, a University of North Carolina Sea Grant agent, took the turtle excluder device, or TED, to Cape Canaveral, Fla., last week for a week of tests. Starting in May, the federal government will require TEDs in all North Carolina shrimp boats longer than 25 feet.

Shrimpers can mount only certified TEDs in their nets. Although the soft TED tested last week by the National Marine Fisheries Service met all requirements, the agency has not yet certified it officially. Bahen said the paperwork will take a month or more.

Manager Resigns

DANBURY, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Rothrock, the Stokes County manager, told the county commissioners Monday that he plans to leave his job Dec. 31.

"I just feel like it's time to move on," Rothrock said before attending an executive session with the commissioners. "Personally and professionally, this is the right time."

Rothrock, who has been the county's manager for 11 years, declined to elaborate on his reasons for resigning.

He has been criticized recently for his handling of an incident at the animal shelter, where an employee was accused of beating a puppy to death, and he has been at odds with the board over the hiring of an assistant county manager.

Four Killed As Tractor-Trailer Hits Basketball Team's Stalled Bus

GAFFNEY, S.C. (AP) — Four people were killed and 12 others were injured early today when a tractor trailer slammed into the back of a disabled bus carrying the Converse College women's basketball team, authorities said.

The deaths left the campus of 1,100 students "in shock. It's as if this happened to your family," said Converse spokeswoman Sally Hammond.

The bus had broken down and apparently was on the shoulder of Interstate 85 just outside Gaffney when the collision happened about 12:30 a.m., according to state Highway Patrol Trooper Allan Luker.

Fifteen people were on the bus heading to Spartanburg, said Carl Wrenn, director of public relations at Cherokee Memorial Hospital. Those killed were players Debbie Powers, 17, of Walterboro and Julie Hamilton, 19, of Charleston; college security guard John H. Jones, 60, of Spartanburg; and truck driver Robert A. Swann of Charlotte, N.C., said Deputy Coroner Beverly Queen.

Jolynn Bennett of Walterboro was taken by helicopter to Charlotte (N.C.) Memorial Hospital and was in critical condition; Dale McCulloch of Kingstree and Cindy Knight of Lanett, Ala., were taken to Spartanburg Regional Hospital and were in serious and stable condition, respectively, Wrenn said.

Eight other players and Coach William Reitmeier were taken to Cherokee County Memorial Hospital, Wrenn said.

Swann worked for Brown Transport Co., Luker said.

The women's basketball team from the Spartanburg school had been to Wingate College in Wingate, N.C., for a scrimmage.

The bus was having mechanical problems, Luker said.

Reitmeier, who was driving the bus, pulled off the interstate and into a trucking terminal a few miles north of where the accident happened, but was unable to get a mechanic to work on the bus, the trooper said.

"They tried to continue on to Spartanburg, but it started messing up again so they pulled over," Luker said.

Jones had just gotten off the bus to seek help when the collision took place and he was run over, apparently by the truck, Luker said.

"It was a bad collision," Luker said. "It demolished both vehicles. Both went off the road and down the embankment. It's the worst I've seen in several years."

At Converse, meanwhile, classes were suspended today in memory of the students who died, Ms. Hammond said. College officials were planning a memorial service, she said.

"At a school this size, everyone is affected," she said. The students on the bus "represented a cross-section of campus," she said.

Son Of Slain Couple Attacks Man Released As Suspect In Murders

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The son of a slain Fayetteville couple attacked Bruce E. Basden in an elevator at the Law Enforcement Center after Basden was released from jail and charges against him dropped in the slaying and robbery of the couple.

Basden, 35, did not retaliate Monday after he was struck on the left side of the head with a glancing right-hand blow by Terry Adams. Adams is the son of Remus Adams, 64, and his wife, Blanche, 59, who were found shot to death in June 1985.

Basden, jailed without bond for the last 13 months, was released after officials discovered that a crucial fingerprint found at the murder scene in the Adamses' home did not belong to the Texas man. He had been charged with armed robbery and two counts of first-degree murder, and authorities said they would have sought the death penalty.

"You killed my parents. You're going to pay. You're going to pay," the red-faced Adams shouted as he strained to free his arms from the grip of Chief Jailer Dan Ford.

"You don't have to hold me back. I ain't going to do nothing to him," Basden said to sheriff's Detective Hershel Barbour who stepped between Basden and Adams and pushed Basden against the elevator wall.

Lifetime Job

CINCINNATI (AP) — Miss America 1944, Venus Ramey, says that a lifetime of public scrutiny goes along with the crown of the nation's best-known pageant.

"Once a Miss America, always a Miss America. Me included. I've decided I'll be a bathing beauty until I'm 80," said Ms. Ramey, now 63.

"When you voluntarily move into a glass house — because that's where all Miss Americas live, for all their lives — you should live accordingly," she said in a recent interview.

during the incident, which was witnessed by a reporter for the Fayetteville Times.

"That first one (punch) was on the house," Basden said to Adams as Adams was pulled off the elevator by Ford.

No charges were filed against Adams, Ford said later.

Ford quoted Basden as saying, "You got the wrong man. I'll let you have that one."

"I took that to mean he didn't want to press charges," Ford said.

"I smacked him in the face," Adams said as he left the law enforcement center after being detained for about five minutes. "If that's not enough, I've got no reaction."

Adams had been notified of Basden's release by authorities,

Grannis said. A victims' rights law requires that the victim's family be notified about developments in a criminal trial.

Grannis said his office had been notified of the incorrect fingerprint identification around noon.

"It was the crucial piece of evidence from our perspective, which was the main reason we were taking him to trial," Grannis said after dismissing the charges in Cumberland County Superior Court.

Detectives discovered they had incorrectly identified the fingerprint as coming from Basden's right middle finger when enlarging a photograph of the print to comply with a judge's order allowing defense experts to examine the evidence.

"I changed my opinion. I determined it was not his," John Trogon said Monday. Trogon, a print examiner with the City-County Identification Unit, testified at Basden's bond hearing in December 1986 that the fingerprint belonged to Basden.

Although there were enough points of similarity between the print lifted from the murder scene and Basden's to make an initial positive identification, detectives said that upon enlarging the print other characteristics eliminated Basden.

Basden, an Army cook stationed at Fort Bragg at the time of the slayings, was stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas, when he was arrested.

"I'm going to kiss my children, and then I'm going home to Texas," Basden said before stepping on the elevator where Adams hit him.

Church Wants No Part Of Hog Farm

BURGAW, N.C. (AP) — Representatives of New Hope Baptist Church asked the Pender County Commissioners Monday to keep a proposed hog farm from operating about 100 feet from their pulpit.

The county commissioners' hands are tied in the matter, however, because of a state law that prohibits counties from regulating what is described as "bona fide" farms.

Beulah Herring and Joyce Messick presented a petition asking the commissioners to consider how the farm could endanger human health and lives. The petition had the signatures of more than 200 people who live near the farm and the church.

A contract farmer would raise between 1,600 and 1,800 hogs on the farm, said county Planning Director Alvin Midgette. The farm would be within 100 feet of the church, Ms. Messick said.

Fumes from the farm's waste lagoon would endanger the lives of many residents who suffer from respiratory illnesses, Ms. Herring said. County officials should prevent the farm from "jeopardizing the lives of people," she said.

Commissioner Robert A. King, himself a farmer, said the county should do something to regulate the placement of the lagoons.

"I'm a farmer, but I do think neighbors need to be thought of," he said. "This could pop up next door to anybody."

Market Collapse Could Hurt Everyone

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — From retired steelworkers to investment bankers on Wall Street, millions of Americans could be hurt by shock waves from the stock market's cataclysmic loss. Economists say the plunge that stripped more than $500 billion from the value of stocks could dampen consumer spending, eliminate jobs, threaten the stability of pension funds and lead to higher taxes. Although most people don't ordinarily think about Wall Street's day-to-day gyrations, the stupefying 22.6 percent loss suffered by the Dow

Jones industrial average Monday reflected a historic turning point that may have a profound effect on their lives in coming months, economists said. "The stock market always has been a leading indicator of the economy," said John Markese, vice president of the American Association of Individual Investors in Chicago. "If the market is right and it's a precursor of a declining economy, then we all have to be worried."

The impact of the devastation, if it continues, could be particularly harmful to retired people who have relied largely on gains in the stock market's five-year-long rally for supplemental income.

"For those retirees who have just invested in the market, they've got a problem," said Robert W. Dell, manager of retiree relations at Sun Oil Co. in Radnor, Pa. "Psychologically, it has to be devastating."

The worst securities selloff of modern times also wiped out billions of dollars in holdings by pension funds, which are among the most significant of the large, long-term institutional investors in the stock market.

"It goes without saying that large pension funds are going to share a 22 percent beating along with anybody else," said Malcolm Rodman, executive vice president of the International Association of Pre-retirement Planners, a group based in Rockville, Md.

Rodman and others said they saw little threat to the stability of pension funds because in most cases they are well managed and diversified portfolios that include bonds and other stable investments.

Nevertheless, experts said, many companies may have to compensate for any pension-fund losses in stocks, which could put an unexpected and severe pressure on their budgets and lead to cutbacks in other areas, including jobs.

For public-employee pension funds as well, the market debacle was severe. In California, for example, the state's Public Employees Retirement System, which provides pensions for more than 220,000 government retirees, lost up to $4 billion Monday. New York state's stock holdings lost more than $6 billion. As with private companies, state and municipal governments might have to compensate for losses suffered by these funds, possibly by levying higher taxes, benefits experts said.

The impact of a bear market already has started to affect fortunes on Wall Street, where many young professional brokers accustomed to six-figure salaries and high-priced Manhattan condominiums are confronting the prospect of pay cuts or layoffs.

More than 1,000 people have been laid off during the past month, and several major brokerages reportedly are contemplating big restructurings on the theory that Wall Street's bull market has reversed and interest rates are starting to rise significantly.

Many economists said the sudden loss of more than $500 billion in stock value would ripple through the economy in waves, simply by making investors much more cautious or persuading them to keep it in safe, interest-bearing savings accounts.

"A lot of people could be affected by a prolonged and severe decline in the market," said James Lorie, a professor at the University of Chicago's graduate business school. "A major market decline represents a major decline in wealth, and people's willingness to spend money depends on wealth. The indirect effect could be significant to people who don't invest."

For example, investors who had wanted to buy new cars, houses or appliances with earnings from their stock mutual funds might scrap those

Stocks' Fall Carries Into Foreign Trading

By The Associated Press
The drop on foreign stock exchanges that helped fuel a more than 500-point fall in the Dow Jones industrial average extended into a second day today, with prices plunging on markets in Britain, Asia and the Pacific.

On the London Stock Exchange, the Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index skidded 9.8 percent in the first half-hour of hectic trading. The index was down 202 points to about 1,850 following a record drop of 249.6 points on Monday.

In Japan, the Tokyo Stock Exchange was swamped with sell orders, and the 225-share Nikkei stock average fell a record 3,836.48 points to 21,910.08 at the close. The decline shaved nearly 15 percent off the index's value.

The plunge surpassed the largest previous one-day fall in the Nikkei average, an 831-point slide on April 27.

Analysts said the devastating 508-point plunge to 1,738.74 in the Dow Jones average on Monday, which had been fed by the declines in overseas trading, spilled back onto today's activity.

Prices also plummeted on the Sydney exchange, falling a record 24.9 percent today and erasing the equivalent of $39 billion off the value of Australian stocks. Sharp declines also were recorded on exchanges in Taiwan, South Korea, Singapore and Malaysia.

But in Hong Kong, the stock market was silent. The exchange did not open and officials said they would keep it shut for the rest of the week to prevent panic selling.

On Monday, the Hong Kong exchange saw a record 11-percent drop in its key Hang Seng index.

Hong Kong Secretary of Monetary Affairs David Nendick attributed the drop to "people copying others without thinking why they're doing so."

One factor in the decision to suspend trading, "might be that sanity is restored to the system by the end of the week," Nendick said.

Frenzied selling also swept stock exchanges in Tokyo, Frankfurt, Amsterdam, Mexico City and other financial centers on Monday after traders were shaken by a 108-point drop in the Dow Jones average on Friday.

Japanese Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa today shrugged off speculation that Wall Street's declines could trigger a crash in stock markets around the world and send the world economy into depression.

He said the U.S. economy has been improving and the Japanese economy also is expected to pick up.

In Tokyo on Monday, the Nikkei average dropped 620.18 points to close at 25,746.56. Losing stocks outstripped gainers by a commanding margin of 863 to 111, with 69 other issues unchanged.

In London, the drop in the FT-SE index Monday was between four and five times larger than the previous record drop set Aug. 6 when the index fell 56.0 points to 2,261.4.

'It's Only Paper'

By The Associated Press
Sam Walton, identified by Forbes magazine as the nation's wealthiest man, shrugged off the more than half a billion dollars he lost in the stock market plunge.

"It's paper anyway," Walton, the founder and largest shareholder of Wal-Mart Stores Inc., said Monday. "It was paper when we started and it's paper afterward."

Walton said he wasn't worried about his personal wealth. "As far as I'm concerned, we're focusing totally on the company doing well and taking care of our customers."

Walton and his family own 38.6 percent of the stock in the Wal-Mart chain, or 218 million shares.

Forbes used the closing prices of stocks on Sept. 11 in tallying the 400 richest Americans. On that day, Wal-Mart stock closed at $38.75 a share, giving the Waltons' stake in the company a value of $8.45 billion. Forbes estimated the family's total assets at $8.5 billion.

As the stock market declined in recent months, so did Wal-Mart shares. On Friday, after a $3.87½-per-share decline, the retailer's stock closed at $29 and the family's stake was valued at $6.32 billion.

On Monday, with Wal-Mart stock down $2.37½ a share, the Waltons had a loss of $517.8 million, giving their holdings an estimated value of $5.8 billion.

An Open Letter To The Citizens of Greenville

Dear Citizens:

As a local businesswoman, City Councilperson and former mayor, I have always had the betterment and well-being of Greenville as the focal point of my community involvement. Because I am not seeking re-election, I feel compelled to endorse a candidate who has demonstrated those same concerns. LORRAINE SHINN is that person!!!

Lorraine has:

- Fought for fiscal responsibility.
- Demonstrated her concern for the less fortunate in the community.
- Been willing to make tough decisions in order to have a more professional city staff.
- Above all, not obligated herself to any special interest group.

Lorraine brings experience and understanding of both business and government to the City Council which enables her to make informed decisions.

I strongly urge you to consider her qualifications as I have, and vote for LORRAINE SHINN, City Council-At Large on November 3rd.

Thank you,
Janice B. Buck

Baptists Exclude Church For Hiring Woman Pastor

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The local association of Southern Baptist churches has expelled a congregation that hired a woman pastor, citing the Bible.

"The reasoning that was given is that it is not part of the Bible that women can have authority over men," said the Rev. Nancy Hastings Sehested, the newly appointed pastor of Prescott Memorial Baptist Church.

About 400 delegates to an annual meeting of the Shelby (County) Baptist Association voted Monday night to expel Prescott Memorial, which has 235 members.

The expulsion is part of a continuing and often bitter debate within the Southern Baptist Convention over the role of women in the ministry.

The convention, whose more than 14.5 million members makes it the nation's largest Protestant denomination, has resisted allowing female pastors.

Mrs. Sehested, 36, is the first woman chosen as pastor of a Southern Baptist church in Tennessee and one of four women nationwide at the head of churches within the denomination, said Betty Dawson, chairwoman of the board of deacons for Prescott Memorial.

"We are being set up as an example for the whole Southern Baptist Convention to show what can happen to a church that doesn't follow the party line," Mrs. Dawson said.

The delegates stood to cast their votes, and an exact count was not taken, said the Rev. Kenneth Story, chairman of the association's credentials committee. "It was a visible majority, but not an overwhelming majority," he said. Story said that allowing women as pastors goes against traditions of the denomination. Southern Baptist opponents of women in the ministry have noted their belief that man was first in creation while woman was first in sin.

The executive board of the county association called last month for a review of Prescott Memorial's "doctrinal soundness."

The Rev. Adrian Rogers, the president of the Southern Baptist Convention, is from Memphis and the county association often meets at his 17,000-member church, Bellevue Baptist.

Rogers has not spoken publicly on

Mrs. Sehested's ability to serve as pastor. He was elected on a fundamentalist platform, and church conservatives have led the debate against women pastors.

Expulsion from the county association will not alter Prescott Memorial's day-to-day operations. The church issued a statement saying Mrs. Sehested will remain as pastor.

"We are absolutely convinced that God has led Nancy Sehested to us, and we rejoice that she has accepted our call," the statement said.

Mrs. Sehested moved to Memphis after serving as associate pastor of Oakhurst Baptist Church in Decatur, Ga.

Opponents of Mrs. Sehested's appointment have noted a scriptural passage that says a pastor "must be the husband of one wife."

But Mrs. Sehested, a Texas native whose father and grandfather also were Southern Baptist ministers, said that argument carries little weight.

The real focus of the debate, she said, is to keep men in charge of the church.

"There is often a temptation to use the Bible to support our own cultural biases and prejudices," she said.

Caution Advised

But he suggested that Monday's trading "may be the thing that encourages Congress and the president to get together to fix it ... do something."

Ernest Uhr, dean of the business school at ECU, had similar thoughts.

He suggested long-term investors — people who have invested in the market on a long-term basis in solid types of companies — shouldn't "feel a panic."

"They rode the market up. I don't expect another great crash and if they are in solid companies, stay with it," he said.

But for the short-term investors, those that are in and out of the market frequently looking for large gains, Uhr said, "I hope you got out two, three days ago, maybe two weeks ago."

"Most folks are looking today" to see what the market will do, Uhr said. "If it starts building back up, people should buy. But the bottom may not quite be with us yet."

"I'll be watching with interest today."

Carl Blackwood of Carlina Securities said, "Yesterday's history. Today is a new day."

And Blackwood suggested "a prudent investor should let the market open and if it's down substantially, he should put 10 to 15 percent of his available cash in high quality securities with high yields."

"He may stink at the end of the day. But if history is any indicator, it will be a wise move, long-range. He should step up to the plate a little bit and nibble at these values."

Interstate Securities' Bryant Kittrell said, "I think most of the damage is probably already done. The market (at 10:25 a.m.) is up 171 points from yesterday's low."

"I feel the panic selling is pretty much over with. We're advising our clients that if they weren't out before the weekend, they should hold."

And Kittrell said, "There were some good buy opportunities this morning that some were wise to take advantage of. As would have been expected, bonds are up the limit today and gold is up.

"Nothing's making sense right now, but we still don't feel too pessimistic."

Wes Singleton of Edward D. Jones and Co. said, "As far as the market is concerned, we feel that the drop yesterday was based on several factors — the increase in interest rates over the past several months, the Persian Gulf situation, as well as the budget and trade deficits, and maybe to a large extent, panic."

"As far as my clients are concerned, I feel good for them. We deal primarily in mutual funds and long-term investments. These don't see nearly as much volatility and change as individual securities. We feel we can reassure our clients and that's what we're trying to do. We're calling people all day today to do just that."

Ken Hutcherson of E.F. Hutton's local office said, "I think yesterday's activity was a situation where selling was feeding on selling. It appears that any excuse to sell was used."

"This morning, several banks have lowered the prime interest rate and things are going to be better, I think."

"Unless there's a desperate need to sell, we're recommending that our clients not sell," Hutcherson said. "People in this area are conservative in their investments anyway, so they haven't been affected by this as much as those in some other areas."

And Hutcherson suggested that the news media is "the biggest enemy we have. Their alarms create panic in people."

Greg Stokes of Investment Management Inc. said, "We are not advising anyone to sell at the present. The market is already up some this morning. We don't necessarily believe it will close up today, but we feel it will not continue to drop drastically."

Budget Office Begins Whacking Programs For Gramm-Rudman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress and President Reagan have yet to agree on how to reduce the federal deficit, so the president's budget office was forced to begin slashing $23 billion today under the Gramm-Rudman law.

From AIDS research to law enforcement to military readiness, government programs will lose about a tenth of their annual budgets.

The cuts are temporary for now, as the law gives the politicians a month to figure out alternative ways of reducing the fiscal 1988 deficit. But if they fail to agree on adequate reductions in the red ink, the cutbacks become permanent.

Under the law, the president's Office of Management and Budget computes the across-the-board Gramm-Rudman cutbacks based on a formula designed to spread the cuts around.

Half the $23 billion total must come from domestic programs and half from the Pentagon, although within those broad categories specific areas were exempted. No cuts will come from huge areas of the budget including Social Security, welfare and veterans benefits and the military payroll.

The non-exempt portion of the military budget will lose about 10.4 percent and domestic programs about 8.7 percent, based on figures released last week by the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office.

The administration has said the figures it releases today will be close to those calculated by the CBO.

Responding to the threatened cuts, Congress' Democratic leaders have been pushing ahead with a deficit reduction package. But their plan would accomplish half the deficit reduction through a variety of tax increases, a strategy Reagan has promised to veto.

Monday's stock market crash has been blamed by some analysts in part on the huge U.S. budget deficits under Reagan, and the market collapse has heightened the hostile rhetoric between the White House and Congress.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III suggested Sunday that the Democrats, by proposing the tax increases, were to blame for the previous week's stock market losses. On Monday, as the worst single-day stock plunge since 1914 was unfolding, House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, called Baker's remarks "balderdash."

Wright called on the administration to calm the markets by working with Congress to reduce the deficit through a combination of spending cuts and some new taxes.

The budget deficit in fiscal 1987 was about $155 billion, down from a record $221 billion the previous year. But estimates show it will head higher again in the new fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, unless action is taken.

The Gramm-Rudman law envisions a deficit of $144 billion this year as an interim step toward a balanced budget by fiscal 1993. The automatic spending cuts were restored to the law recently to help force the deficit's downward.

The $23 billion cutback is the maximum under the law for fiscal 1988, but smaller across-the-board reductions might be imposed later if Congress and the president agree on measures that get part way to the deficit goal.

Since January, legislation has been running in the opposite direction — adding to the deficit. The CBO estimated that more than a billion dollars in new spending has been added, and the cutbacks needed to avoid the automatic cuts would thus be in excess of $24 billion.

securities offering fixed incomes. That meant the yield on the bonds fell, a measure of lower interest rates. They fell back slightly later in the morning.

Two banks that had raised their prime rates last week, Chemical Bank and Marine Midland, rolled back the increases to the general level of 9.25 percent. The prime rate is used as a benchmark for a variety of consumer and business loans.

The dollar rose sharply in value against the West German mark and Japanese yen.

"The whole world is moving as fast as it can, and what it does today may be undone tomorrow," said Thomas Sour, first vice president of investments for Gruntal & Co. in New York. "The numbers we're seeing today nobody would have dreamed of a few days ago."

Earlier today, the Tokyo Stock Exchange's main index fell 14.9 percent. In London, the stock exchange's key index was down 14 percent about halfway through the trading session but rebounded late in the day as Wall Street was rallying.

The Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index was up 171.00 at 1,881.3 near the end of trading following Monday's record plunge of 249.6 points, or 10.8 percent.

It also came after a record fall in Tokyo on Tuesday and New York's historic tumble on Monday.

On the Tokyo Stock Exchange, the 225-share Nikkei stock average fell a record 3,836.48 points to 21,910.08 at the close, a drop of 14.9 percent.

The price of gold bullion on New York's Commodity Exchange was down $16.80 a troy ounce to $464.90 shortly after 9 a.m. Gold had jumped $15 an ounce on Monday.

A jump of $26.25 in the price of the benchmark 30-year Treasury bond with a face value of $1,000 pushed its yield down to 9.53 percent by 10:40 a.m. The yield had fallen to 9.1 percent earlier today.

The yield of the bond, which moves in the opposite direction from its price, had been at 10.4 percent as recently as Monday morning. It soared into the double digits last week after the report of a larger-than-expected U.S. trade deficit raised fears of a sharp decline in the dollar.

The dollar strengthened today against foreign currencies, apparently buoyed by a crisis atmosphere and a meeting between U.S. and West German officials that seemed to lessen the likelihood that the United States would allow the dollar to decline.

The dollar was quoted at 1.8085 West German marks and 143.80 Japanese yen in European trading as of 10:40 a.m., up from 1.7721 marks and 141.475 yen as of late Monday afternoon in New York.

Selling of stocks was heavy earlier today on exchanges in Australia, South Korea, Taiwan, Malaysia and Singapore.

The Hong Kong stock market did not open and officials said it will stay shut for the rest of the week after the market's key index dropped 11 percent Monday.

Monday's historic 508.00-point collapse in the closely watched Dow industrial average shaved 22.6 percent from its value, outpacing the index's declines on the eve of the Great Depression in 1929.

The Dow fell 12.8 percent on Oct. 28, 1929, and another 11.7 percent on Oct. 29. The Dow average's worst percentage decline ever was on Dec. 12, 1914, early in World War I, when it lost 24.4 percent of its value.

The fall of the Dow industrials to 1,738.74 left it at a level not seen since April 1986, destroying a year's worth of gains in the 5-year-old bull market.

Mine Seen In Gulf

"The vessel only put out an SOS but it did not identify itself or mention what happened," said one radio monitor. Because of its location only Iranian boats can help it, he said.

Also today, Iran's official news agency quoted Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh as saying the U.S. attack caused $500 million in damage and has threatened the gulf with an oil spill.

A "number of oil company workers were wounded, two of them seriously," he was quoted as saying at a news conference in Tehran.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, which carried Aqazadeh's remarks, also quoted Iran's parliament speaker as saying Iran will avenge the U.S. attack "in the coming days."

"We have said we will not let any aggression go unanswered. This is not a threat but a reality," said Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani.

Pentagon officials said the platforms were built for drilling but were used by Iran to stage attacks on shipping as part of the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. Iran also has been widely accused of laying mines in the gulf.

However, Aqazadeh insisted the platforms were purely oil facilities that were undergoing repair when struck by the U.S. Navy warships.

"The two platforms are still on fire," Aqazadeh was quoted as saying. "There is a possibility of an oil spill and pollution of the Persian Gulf waters." U.S. officials have said the platforms were destroyed.

Shipping sources reported at least four U.S. warships, possibly the same ones that shelled the Iranian platforms on Monday, remained near the wrecked oil facilities.

They said private vessels were reporting no other movement in the area, which is in waters that Iran considers an "exclusion zone." The zone, which extends roughly halfway across the gulf, is not acknowledged by the U.S. Navy.

"Only mangled metal and charred remains were apparent from the distance, and smoke could still be sighted," said one source, quoting a report from his company's vessel.

No Americans were killed or injured in Monday's attack, which won support from Arab nations and several U.S. allies and was condemned by Moscow.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger hinted today that more violence might be necessary to teach Iran that the United States will not tolerate its attacks on merchant shipping.

"If they keep it up, there will be additional responses that we hope ultimately will drive the message home to them," Weinberger said on the "CBS Morning News."

Weinberger said four U.S. warships fired 1,000 rounds of 5-inch gunfire at the Rostam oil platforms.

Evelyn Spangler Receives Council Service Award

Evelyn Spangler, Pitt County extension home economics agent, has received this year's North Carolina Family Life Council Distinguished Service Award.

The presentation was made at the Family Life Council's awards luncheon Friday at the group's annual meeting in Greensboro.

"Mrs. Spangler exemplifies the type of leadership communities need. We are proud of her dedication and commitment to helping families in Pitt County," said George Shalkford, president of NCFLC and consultant, Department of Public Instruction in Raleigh.

Mrs. Spangler was cited for her commitment to service in the area of family life. She was instrumental in forming the Pitt County Family Life Council, and her work as a county extension home economics agent has helped farm families facing economic hardships.

In addition to teaching classes on topics ranging from handling stress to budgeting and simple home repairs to sewing for profit, she also reaches area residents through newsletters. Some 6,000 homemakers and 3,600 parents of preschoolers receive timely information through her newsletters.

Mrs. Spangler has been on the Pitt County staff since 1969. She has a bachelor's and master's degrees from East Carolina University.

Among other honors, she received a 1986 RJR Nabisco Extension Agent Award of Excellence, a 1985 Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of Extension Home Economists and was named outstanding alumni of the ECU School of Home Economics in 1982.

She is married to Paul Spangler and is a member of Immanuel Baptist Church. Some of her favorite pastimes are reading, interior design and sailing. She is a native of New Bern.

Credit Has Old, Young Views

I'll just bet there are some "old timers" out there reading this column today who remember when the worst thing that could happen to them was to owe someone. They lived by the philosophy handed down from their fathers: "If you can't pay cash for it, you can't afford it. If you can't afford it, do without!"

Today, credit is a way of life. Young people want it all and they want it today. Debtors comprise the biggest fraternity in this country and the numbers are growing every day. People owe for meals they can't remember eating. They owe for vacations where they had a rotten time. They owe for appliances that no longer work. They owe for luggage that has been lost and face-lifts that have fallen to their knees.

They owe the government taxes on money they made but never saw because they owed it. (The government should understand that. It owes several "trill" and has the highest deficit in the history of the country.)

Our parents and grandparents come from a time when they saved pennies in jelly glasses and joined Christmas clubs where they deposited 50 cents every week. They put clothes in layaway where they paid a dollar on them whenever they could and hoped the clothes wouldn't go out of style before they could spring

At Wits End

them. I remember an uncle who bought a secondhand carpet from my parents for $3. He'd pay $1 on it, then borrow 50 cents back the next week. It took him a little over two years to pay off the three bucks. They still talk about him.

With no trend in sight of things ever getting back to where they were 20 years ago, what's the answer?

Well, to begin with, car designers are just going to have to come up with an automobile that outlasts the payments. The way it is now, payments last three years and the car expires at 18 months. That means for 18 months, you're not only making car payments, but paying for the repairs. Someone has to close the gap.

Before you buy any apparel, you must ask yourself, "Am I going to love this coat in the spring of '88 as much as I love it in the fall of '87?" because that's how long it's going to take to pay it off.

Before you buy a house, a good rule of thumb is to ask yourself if your co-signer makes enough in a week to pay the interest on it for a month. If he doesn't, shop for a new co-signer or you could lose everything.

Before you try to keep up with the Joneses, be sure they're not trying to keep up with you.

Finally, we're all going to have to start seeing real money once in a while just to get a handle on how many ones it takes to make a 10 and how when you take five of them away, you only have five left. We were playing Monopoly the other night when I landed on Park Place. I said I couldn't afford it. Later, one of my kids landed on it and charged it on his credit card.

That's the difference between young and old ... between a son and his mother.

Sufferers Whistle With Joy For New-Found Relief

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you had some articles in your column about "dry mouth" and recommended a product that brought instant relief. At the time it didn't concern me, so I didn't save the items. But I've recently had radiation treatments and now I have a dry-mouth problem. Will you please repeat those letters? There must be others who would appreciate it, too. — MR. L. IN BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR MR. L.: Curiously, I've received many letters in the last few weeks from readers asking me to repeat the earlier letters on dry mouth. Here they are:

DEAR ABBY: A while back you recommended a "saliva substitute" for people who suffer from dry mouth. Having suffered from that condition for two years, I went immediately to the pharmacy and asked for a saliva substitute. The pharmacist said she had never heard of such a product and told me to ask my dentist what the brand name was.

I called my dentist and he had never heard of a saliva substitute either. Abby, can you tell me the name of this product and where it can be purchased? — NEEDS IT IN ILLINOIS

DEAR NEEDS: I had no idea that the problem of "dry mouth" was so widespread until I mentioned it in my column and was promptly deluged with letters from readers seeking relief from that condition.

There are at least four brands of saliva substitutes on the market today. Ask your pharmacist to check the "Annual Pharmacists' Reference Red Book," "Facts and Comparisons" or "Physicians' Desk Reference for Non-Prescription Drugs" under "Saliva Substitutes."

Dear Abby

Readers, for your information, "xerostomia" (dry mouth) can be caused by disease, medication, radiation therapy or the normal aging process. This condition can cause acute discomfort, tooth decay, inability to eat, swallow or talk, as well as difficulty in wearing dentures.

If your pharmacist has never heard of it and doesn't know where to get saliva substitutes, find another pharmacist.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to thank you for an article that you ran recently that has given me more relief and comfort than I can describe.

I am 83, male and reasonably healthy, but in recent years I've been terribly troubled with a dry mouth — especially at night. I complained to my doctor. He just shrugged his shoulders. Then I read your column in the San Francisco Chronicle, and my prayers were answered! In response to a letter asking why a person would use a mouth spray in public, you quoted a dentist who said that as a result of disease, medication, radiation therapy or simply aging, a number of people suffer from "xerostomia" (dry mouth).

I immediately phoned my druggist, and he had never heard of a "saliva substitute," so I told him to call his supplier and order it. He did, and the next day I picked it up and used it. Abby, I will be eternally grateful to you and that dentist. No more dry mouth! God bless you. — GRATEFUL IN PARADISE, CALIF.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I'll print your letter for the benefit of others who suffer from dry mouth and are not aware of saliva substitutes.

Fall Council Meet Held By N.C. District

Pilot Clubs of North Carolina held a fall council meeting at the Sheraton-Greenville Saturday and Sunday.

Clubs in Kinston, New Bern and Carteret County were hostesses for the 44 clubs represented.

Workshops were held for incoming officers as well on growth on the district and club levels. Jean Proctor of Rocky Mount is district governor and Billie Jones of Kinston was chairperson for the meeting.

Entertainment for the Saturday night banquet was provided by the Ovation Show Troupe from Kinston High School.

50th Anniversary Reception Held

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer B. Dixon were honored at a reception Oct. 11 in the Cherry Fellowship Hall of Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church in celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary.

The couple was married in Greenville Oct. 13, 1937.

The four-tiered cake was served by Edna Mills, sister of Mrs. Dixon, and punch was poured by Joyce Dixon.

Mrs. Dixon wore a blush lace dress complemented by a corsage of white roses.

Hosts and hostesses were the couple's children, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Dixon, all of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Terry Dixon of Duck.

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue chip stocks rallied on Wall Street today, giving signs of recovering from Monday's historic collapse.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, down 508 points Monday for its biggest loss in modern times, rebounded 113.88 to 1,852.62 in the first half hour today.

In the overall tally on the New York Stock Exchange, however, gainers trailed losers by about 4 to 3, with 466 up, 627 down and 174 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 62.19 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said it was too soon to conclude that the market's recent debacle was over. But they said there were encouraging signs that some of investors' biggest worries were easing.

In fact, they said, it appeared that the storm that hit worldwide markets was itself prompting some desired responses.

Interest rates fell sharply in the credit markets today. Yields on short-term Treasury bills tumbled a full percentage point this morning.

To a large extent, that was attributed to a "flight to safety" by investors moving their money into the safest possible place. Yet by lowering some key interest rates it also served to relieve a source of pressure on all the securities markets.

Two New York banks that had raised their prime lending rates from 9 1/4 to 9 3/4 percent last week cut them back to 9 1/4 this morning.

Among today's early volume leaders, Ford Motor rose 6 1/4 to 75 1/4; American Express 1 1/2 to 24; Upjohn 2 1/4 to 27 3/4, and Santa Fe Southern Pacific 3 3/4 to 44 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks climbed 6.29 to 134.91. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.41 at 280.09.

In Monday's collapse declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 20 to 1 among NYSE-listed issues. Volume on the Big Board totaled 604.33 million shares, nearly doubling the previous record of 338.48 million set last Friday.

Doctors Hopeful Jessica Recovering

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Doctors trying to save 18-month-old Jessica McClure's right foot that was injured during her 2 1/2 days trapped in a well expressed optimism, and said her youth may be her greatest asset.

"Children, babies like Jessica have great recuperative powers," vascular surgeon Shelton Viney said at a news conference Monday at Midland Memorial Hospital. "Doctors have to learn to slow down and let the baby heal herself."

During her 59-hour entombment in an abandoned water well, Jessica's foot was wedged between her body and the wall, cutting off much of the blood circulation.

After inspecting her swollen foot Monday, orthopedic surgeon Charles Younger said he would not give odds against amputation, "but I think we're all on the optimistic side."

Her condition remained serious but stable.

Doctors on Monday cut away some dead skin, and tested blood circulation by injecting dye and using a device called a Doppler laser.

Blood flow in the big toe and the edges of the foot was poor, Younger said. But he added that a child of Jessica's age can compensate easily by growing new blood vessels.

"We're on a teeter-totter," Younger said. "You can look at the foot for five minutes and it'll look pink for two minutes and it'll look blue for two minutes, and you wonder whether your eyes are playing tricks on you."

The doctors said the foot has improved.

"I don't think we're totally out of the woods. I think we feel a little better today," Younger said Monday.

Doctors plan to test the foot's circulation on Wednesday.

Jessica also has a wound, similar to a bed sore, the size of a silver dollar on her forehead.

Plastic surgeon Terry Tubb said he had been ready to implant two silicone "bubbles" in Jessica's forehead to stretch the skin and stitch it over the area of dead skin. But he decided to wait because her forehead was still bruised and swollen.

Jessica, whose plight riveted the world, has been sent gifts from all over.

On Sunday, she was visited by Vice President George Bush, and her parents received a phone call from President Reagan.

Among the latest gifts is a stuffed beaver from New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who declared this week "New York Loves Midland, Texas, Week." The beaver, New York's state animal, sent to the girl by the governor and his wife, Matilda, resulted in another gift, Cuomo press secretary Gary Fryer said Monday.

"When the toy store found out who the gift was for, they donated a 'Garfield the Cat' stuffed animal for us to send along," Fryer said.

Skins Edge Dallas, 13-7

In Final Replacement Game

IRVING, Texas (AP) — It was only fitting in the NFL's final replacement game that a former semi-pro quarterback was the winner and a 13-year veteran quarterback fail with the contest on the line.

The Washington Redskins, without any regular starters, beat the Dallas Cowboys, who started seven veterans, 13-7 Monday night in an NFC East showdown for first place.

Tony Robinson, a former Tennessee star who was playing for the Richmond Ravens in September, led Washington to victory after Ed Rubbert went down with a shoulder injury in the first period.

Robinson completed 11 of 18 passes for 152 yards and Lionel Vital ran for 136 yards against a Dallas defense that included a frontline of veterans Randy White, Don Smerek, Kevin Brooks, and Ed Jones.

Washington advanced to 4-1 and Dallas dropped to 3-2 because veteran Danny White couldn't produce with four downs from the Washington 20-yard line in the final minute.

"It is one of the most emotional wins I've ever been associated with," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said.

"Our (replacement) players kept us in the conference race. They were 3-0 in their three-game season."

Robinson said he realized he could be back with the Ravens soon.

"I don't know where I'll be three days from now," Robinson said. "I was just happy to be part of the Redskins' organization and play in a game. This was a great opportunity for me."

Robinson added "I hated to see Ed get hurt. He had been doing terrific job."

What was heaven for Robinson was hell for the heavily booed White.

"This was one of the most difficult games I've played in," White said. "The boos don't make my job any easier. We could really use the homefield advantage. Right now we don't have it."

The 60,415 fans, second largest of the NFL replacement games, booed White and Tony Dorsett every time they touched the ball. There were only 197 no-shows.

"The fans pay their money and can respond any way they want to," Dorsett said.

Gibbs said Robinson "was great" considering he was "thrown in there cold against the Cowboys. He made some big plays and it was a tribute to him. He had tremendous poise for his first NFL game."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry the Cowboys contributed to Robinson's success.

"We were our own worst enemy," he said. "And we just couldn't stop that second quarterback they had in there. He kept making some big plays."

Landry said he never considered replacing White despite the boo birds.

"It's our job to turn boos to cheers," Landry said. "I didn't want to take Danny out. We had a chance to win until the last play of the game."

Chants of "We want (Kevin) Sweeney, We Want Sweeney" began in the second period. Sweeney had quarterbacked Dallas to two replacement game victories.

"I had to make a choice and when I decided on Danny and Tony it was their game, at least as long as it was close. You have to stick with your veterans."

White hit Kelvin Edwards with a 38-yard touchdown pass, but it wasn't enough to offset two field goals by Obed Ariri and Ted Wilson's 16-yard touchdown on a reverse.

Twins Set To Go Without The DH

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins are gearing up for their first designated hitter-less game since the American League adopted the rule in 1973.

Tonight's Game 3 of the World Series against the St. Louis Cardinals also marks the first time the Twins have played a game that counted in a National League ballpark since 1965, when they met the Los Angeles Dodgers in the Series.

Unlike the Cardinals, who had never seen anything quite like the Metrodome in Minneapolis, the Twins have seen ballparks like Busch Stadium.

"It's a big ballpark here," Twins reliever George Frazier said after Monday's off-day workout. "There aren't many home runs hit here and the turf is just about the same as it is in Minneapolis."

"I like the turf here," outfielder Dan Gladden said. "It's similar, probably, to Kansas City, but it's a bigger yard."

Frazier said that at this time of the season, "you should be able to play in an outhouse and not be affected."

Frazier probably won't be the first pitcher affected by the World Series DH rule, which state that the designated hitter is to be used in the AL team's home field, but pitchers must bat in the NL ballpark.

Don Baylor was the Twins' DH in Game 1 at the Metrodome and Randy Bush had the spot in Game 2. But at Busch Stadium, Twins starter Les Straker will have to take his turn at bat.

"I'm looking forward to it," Straker said. "But I don't think I'll do much except bunt."

"The last time I batted was in 1983 in Double A ball. All we did was bunt and move the runners over. I don't know if I can still do it."

Twins Manager Tom Kelly, whose team won the first two games by a combined 18-5, said Monday at the Twins' off-day workout at Busch Stadium that he only hoped his pitchers "could get a few bunts down and not have their (poor) hitting be the thin that decides a ballgame."

Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said a manager doesn't "have to manage as much with the DH. You write out the lineup and that's about it."

Kelly said simply that the Twins have built their team with the idea that there would be a DH in the lineup.

"It's two different leagues," he said. "You set your ballclub up for the league you're in."

He added that he wasn't looking forward to making a double-switch — removing the pitcher for a pinch hitter and, at the same time, replacing a position player to change the batting order so that the new pitcher wouldn't have to bat for as long as possible.

"In spring training, Ray Miller couldn't wait to make a double-switch," Kelly said, referring to the man he replaced as Twins manager late in the 1986 season. "I'm not so anxious."

He said he wouldn't remove outfielders Gladden, Kirby Puckett and Tom Brunansky, ifielders Kent Hrbek, Greg Gagne and Gary Gaetti, or his starting catcher for the sake of a double-switch.

"Maybe I'll be able to fool around with my second baseman (Steve Lombardozzi) because I've got (Al) Newman on the bench," Kelly said. "But if I take a pitcher out, I'm probably just going to come back with another pitcher in that same spot."

Cards Look To Get On The Run

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog would like to get his Cardinals running before the Minnesota Twins stage a runaway in the World Series.

"I wish the top three hitters would get seven hits in the next five games," Herzog said Tuesday. "We've gone through that before — in the playoffs. Ozzie (Smith) wasn't hitting, Tommy (Herr) wasn't hitting."

The Cardinals, trailing two games to none in the best-of-seven Series, have failed to offset Minnesota's home-run power with their speed because the top of the batting order has been stuck in its tracks.

The Cardinals have stolen just one base and the Twins have hit four home runs.

Both St. Louis leadoff batter Vince Coleman and an No. 2 hitter Smith are 1-for-8, and Herr is 0-for-8 behind them. Combined, the three have been on base only twice. Herzog, while acknowledging that Frank Viola and Bert Blyleven have pitched effectively for the Twins, also said he thinks Blyleven had an unfair edge in Game 2.

"I'm not saying he balked every time, but he balked at least 11 times — three times in the first inning," Herzog said. "Then, when (Jose) Oquendo struck out in the second inning, he never stopped (in the windup) at all. It was a joke."

Herzog said it could be different tonight when Les Straker, who balked five times during the regular season, pitches for Minnesota in Game 3.

"He's probably one of those guys they'll call one on," Herzog said. "I'm not begging for anything. I just want what's coming."

Herzog, after meeting reporters at Busch Stadium, repaired to a downtown tavern and held court as both philosopher and outspoken critic.

"I wouldn't mind being the manager in the World Series next year and losing all four games," he said, alluding to St. Louis' current predicament. "They say (former Minnesota Vikings coach) Bud Grant lost all four Super Bowls he was in, but that's a lot better than being 0-for-0."

Herzog, ignoring the Cardinals' predicament, also reiterated his belief that the Twins are not baseball's best team.

"I don't think they could win the National League East. I'm talking about playing the whole season," he said. "But this (World Series) is seven games."

A postseason format including two off days for travel during both the playoffs and the World Series favors a team such as Minnesota because of the opportunity to start its two top pitchers (Viola and Blyleven) as many as five times, Herzog said.

"I'm not knocking Straker, but during the regular season two guys could only pitch five out of 11 games," Herzog said. "Off days give them (Twins) a hell of an advantage."

After ace John Tudor pitches tonight for St. Louis, the Cardinals plan to go with another left-hander — Greg Mathews — in Game 4 on Wednesday night.

"I'm not saying we're going to beat them," Herzog said of St. Louis' need. "But that home-run ball (of the Twins') will be neutralized a little bit."

If the Cardinals win at least two of the next three games at Busch Stadium, the Series would shift again this weekend to the Metrodome — a horror chamber for St. Louis in Games 1 and 2.

George And Billy Reunited Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Only George Steinbrenner could knock the World Series and the end of the NFL strike out of the sports headlines.

Billy Martin is coming back as manager of the Yankees for the fifth time.

Steinbrenner, ignoring Martin's brawls and angry words that forced his four previous firings, brought Martin back Monday to replace Lou Piniella, who promoted to general manager in place of Woody Woodward.

"I'm anxious to return as Yankee manager and I'm looking toward bringing an exciting and winning team to Yankee fans," Martin said in the statement.

Martin's last dismissal by the Yankees came just before Game 7 of the 1985 World Series.

"I feel this is a step forward in my baseball career and gives me the opportunity to learn a new facet of the game," Piniella said in the statement.

The Yankees finished fourth in the American League East, nine games behind first-place Detroit, in Piniella's second season as manager. The Yankees were second in his first year.

Steinbrenner's decision to hire Martin had been expected since last week, but Piniella's move to the GM post was a surprise.

Woodward reportedly asked out of the position.

"I felt like the demand of the schedule I was asked to keep was not one I wanted to continue," Woodward said. "I wanted to see what was out there. My plans are to be available to talk to any club that might be interested."

On Aug. 8 in Detroit, Steinbrenner issued a two-page statement in which he said he might have made a mistake by hiring the inexperienced Piniella as manager. He later reminded everyone that what counted was the "bottom line."

The bottom line was that the Yankees, who led the American League East by three games at the All-Star break, finished fourth with an 89-73 record.

"Nothing Lou did hurt us in any way," Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly said. "He did what he

Hard Work Is Paying Off

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina football coach Art Baker feels that his Pirates have shown what hard work will do.

Two weeks ago, the Pirates were 2-3 and coming off a smarting 49-0 setback at the hands of West Virginia University. But since then, the Pirates have ripped Cincinnati, 56-28, and taken hosting Virginia Tech, 32-23.

The latter victory was the first outside the state of North Carolina since the 1983 season — and it also marked the first time since 1983 that the Pirates have won as many as four games in a season. "I think that is significant," Baker said.

"I think that our offense has proven for the second week in a row that it is for real. Our defense may stretch a bit, but overall the football team will find a way to win."

Baker said that while the Pirates made some mistakes against Virginia Tech, they were capable of overcoming them. The Pirates coughed up the ball twice, once on a fumble and the other time on an interception. "But they didn't take as much out of us as it has in the past," Baker said. "We seem to be able to regain the momentum."

Baker said there were at least two controversial plays in the game, one in which he had originally thought that the Pirates should have had a safety. On that play, a Tech player muffed his catch of Craig Losito's punt inside the five and the ball bounced into the end zone. Tech was able to recover and return the ball back just outside the end zone, according to the officials.

"The official said that the receiver had muffed the ball and that the ball's momentum carried it into the end zone. So if we had tackled the receiver in the end zone, it would have been a touchback (giving Tech the ball on the 20). Our review of the films showed that he did, indeed, get out of the end zone, so I guess the best thing happened for us," Baker said.

The other play came when Tech kicked off from the 40 instead of the 35. Baker said that ECU had been penalized for being offside on the touchdown play before the kickoff.

"Still, it was a rewarding day for the coaches and the players," Baker said. "I thought our coaches did their best job of communicating from the press box to the field, and of adjusting to what Tech was doing."

Baker singled out a number of players for their efforts against Tech. On defense, they included inside linebackers Bubba Waters and Vinson Smith, who each recorded 14 tackles and graded 85 percent; backup Essray

Taliaferro, who had 8 tackles and graded 85 percent; outside linebackers Willie Powell (six tackles, 4 times pressuring quarterback and one fumble caused) and Brian McPhatter (5 tackles, one fumble caused, "great hit on a punt return"); end Ron Gilliard (two tackles for losses, 8 total); free safety Ellis Dillahunt (interception) and strong safety Roswell Streeter (interception); and corner Junior Robinson.

Streeter, who had four tackles, one of them a touchdown saver, drew praise for his special team play, too, as did McPhatter and Dillahunt and punter Craig Losito.

On offense, Baker felt the team again executed well. "The I (formation) didn't do much for us, but we made something from the spread. When they did take something away from us, we found another way to hurt them. When you can run inside well and run outside well and throw the ball well, you can find a way," Baker said.

Quarterback Travis Hunter, whose 313 total yards set a new school record for a single game, had an excellent day, Baker said. "He ran the option well and threw the ball well. He had 21 decisions to make at the line of scrimmage and made each of them correctly."

He also singled out Ron Jones, who caught several key passes and who threw a key block on Tim James' touchdown run; tight end Ben Billings for his blocking; Willie Lewis for his running; and the play of Grant Lowe, Stewart Southall and Todd Drugac in the offensive line.

"Both James and Simpson ran the ball quite well from fullback," Baker added.

The Pirates apparently came out of the game fairly healthy. Offensive lineman Billy Michel was to undergo arthroscopic surgery today for a knee injury, and preliminary evidence indicated ligament injury, probably sidelining him for the rest of the year. Slotback Jarrod Moody, with a lesser knee injury, is also questionable for the South Carolina game this Saturday.

"I was particularly pleased with the way we've moved the ball in the second half for the last two weeks," Baker said. "We've played exceptionally well in the second half. It was pointed out to me by one of the coaches that we've come from behind in every one of our wins and I think that says a lot for the character of this team."

The Pirates, however, will find little time to enjoy their two-game winning streak. They have to put it on the line against a very strong South Carolina team come Saturday as they travel to Columbia.

Point Total Wins It For Malloy

Allen Malloy of Rt. 6, Box 367, Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest. Malloy correctly picked the winners in 26 of the 32 games listed in last week's contest pages. His victory, however, came on the basis of his point total guess. Malloy's guess was 75, which was closest to the actual total of 84 in Stanford's 44-0 win over San Diego State. Jack Wall of 405 Winchester Drive, Greenville, and Margie M. Johnson of 225 Allendale Drive, Greenville, tied for second place. Both also had 26 games correct, and both picked 72 as the most points to be scored in any one of the contest games. Two other people also had 26 correct picks. Clint Edwards of 402 Kings Arms Apt., Greenville, had 70 as his point guess, while Michelle Wells of Ray St., Williamston, failed to list a point total. The next of the weekly contests appears in today's edition of the Daily Reflector.

Greenville Rec Team Takes Victory

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's junior girl's tennis team took a 14-2 win over Wayne Country Day of Goldsboro Monday. With the win, the rec team finishes its season with a record of 6-3-1.

Williams Wins GTA Novice Title

Johnny Williams defeated Lawrence Wendell 6-3, 6-4 to claim the singles title in the Greenville Tennis Association's Novice Tournament this past weekend. Williams and Linda Brown then teamed together to take a 6-0, 6-0 doubles win over Johnny Fleming and Claudette Wilkins in the mixed doubles final. Wendell and Larry Dollberry won the men's doubles title with a 6-3, 6-7, 6-4 win over Billy Dawson and Tommy Roach.

Bethel Upends Aycock In Volleyball Action

Bethel defeated E.B. Aycock, 15-3, 15-11 in junior high volleyball action Monday. Bethel was led in scoring by Montressa Ebron with seven. Sheaneathe Sherrod also had seven. Bethel improves to 8-1 and returns to action Wednesday hosting A.G. Cox and Farmville Middle Schools. In another match, Savannah took a win over Aycock.

LAGRANGE — Frink split a pair of junior high volleyball matches Monday, downing Wellcome and falling to Chicod. In the first match, Frink won 15-6, 15-9. In the second match, Chicod defeated Frink 16-14, 15-8. The leading server for Chicod in the first game was Sheila Kite with six points. In the second game, Angie Jones led with six service points.

Wolfpack Retaining Positive Outlook

RALEIGH (AP) — Neither Saturday's loss to Atlantic Coast Conference rival North Carolina nor next week's impending clash with league-leading Clemson has hurt North Carolina State's positive outlook, Wolfpack coach Dick Sheridan said Monday. "I just don't believe with the caliber of people we have, even though some of our goals are very, very long shots, that we are going to back off and stop trying," Sheridan said at his weekly news conference. "I think there is a pride that just won't let them," he said. "No doubt that it is more difficult to reach down and be at practice every day. I have confidence in them to keep trying and to get better for every game." While N.C. State had hoped to challenge for the ACC crown, the Wolfpack has fallen to 2-4, 2-2 in the conference. After the 17-14 loss to the Tar Heels, a trip to Death Valley to play undefeated Clemson looms large, Sheridan said. "Our opponents seem to be getting better," he said. "We have got to continue to improve every week if we want the opportunity to be successful." The Wolfpack, which gained only 26 yards rushing against the Tar Heels while giving up 269 yards on the ground, must turn things around, Sheridan said. "We have got to be able to rush the ball consistently and control the line of scrimmage from a defensive standpoint," he said. Even though Duke and Virginia had some success passing against the Tigers, N.C. State will strive for a balanced offense, Sheridan said.

Tarpley Admits Cocaine, Alcohol Problem

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas forward Roy Tarpley confirmed Monday that he had been treated for cocaine and alcohol problems over the summer and said that he is having problems with his aftercare program. In September, Tarpley had announced he was counseled voluntarily for a problem he didn't identify. He said the problem had been resolved. But one day after he showed up late for an exhibition game with the Boston Celtics, Tarpley confirmed what some had speculated — that he sought treatment for drug problems. Following Sunday's game, in which he did not play, Tarpley talked about his problems in the meeting with Rick Sund, vice president for basketball operations, and general manager Norm Sonju Sunday. "I was beginning to slip away from my aftercare duties," Tarpley said in a news conference after practice. "So I decided to talk about it with Norm and Rick and my counselors." "After we talked yesterday, I started feeling better about my aftercare, and I tried to talk with my teammates about it today after practice started. I want them to know some of my problems and that it was relating to drugs and alcohol." Sund said at the news conference that Tarpley would remain with the team. Under the NBA's drug policy, Tarpley, 22, the Mavericks' No. 1 draft pick in 1986 and a member of the NBA's All-Rookie team last season, now has a strike against him for drug use. The rules state that if a player voluntarily comes forward with a problem, he can undergo treatment without penalty. A player coming forward a second time is suspended without pay during treatment but suffers no further penalty. Subsequent use results in that player's permanent dismissal from the league. Tarpley, 6-foot-11, played an important role on a Mavericks team that won the franchise's first Midwest Division title, averaging 18.7 minutes and seven rebounds per game. He averaged 13 points and 10 rebounds in the first round of the playoffs, in which Dallas lost to Seattle.

Lyle Comes Up On Short End Again

WENTWORTH, England (AP) — Four times, Sandy Lyle has reached the final of the World Match Play Championship. Four times, he's failed at the last hurdle. But the mild-mannered Scotsman was gracious in defeat again Monday as he lost to Ian Woosnam by one hole in this year's final of the prestigious $424,000 golf event.

NFL Teams Balance Vets And Top Scabs

By The Associated Press

With temporary rosters set at 85, NFL teams are balancing the return of regular players this week with the best of the replacements who played during the 24-day strike.

Among those who will stay, for now, is Los Angeles Raiders replacement quarterback Vince Evans. The 32-year-old Evans was out of football for two years before catching on with the Raiders' strike team.

Indianapolis Coach Ron Meyer cut just 16 replacements, retaining 71 players, although he said more would be cut later this week.

But Philadelphia and Cincinnati cut all their replacements. Detroit Coach Darryl Rogers said there was a slim chance any of the Lions' replacements ultimately would make the 45-man roster, although none were cut Monday.

The replacements departed with some sadness at San Diego, where the irregulars went 3-0, putting the Chargers at 4-1, their best start since 1981.

"Just another day at the office," said quarterback Mike Kelley, who threw a touchdown pass and a 67-yard completion to set up a field goal as the Chargers beat the Raiders 23-17 Sunday. San Diego's first-ever victory over the Raiders at Los Angeles.

"That's what made this so special," Kelley said. "We did it for us. We were fighting for us."

Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll said backup quarterback Bubby Brister might have become No. 1 over struggling Mark Malone had he crossed the picket line. Instead, Noll said, Brister may now be behind both Malone and Steve Bono, the Steelers' quarterback during the strike.

"He missed a golden opportunity," Noll said of Brister. "We'll have to see how they look after they come in, but it could well be that Bono will be the backup. Steve played well for us and the big thing was that we won with him at quarterback."

Atlanta kept only two replacements — quarterback Erik Kramer, who threw for 335 yards and three second-half touchdowns as the Falcons overcame a 17-0 deficit and beat the Los Angeles Rams 24-20 Sunday — and Rich Kraynak, a linebacker on injured reserve.

The New York Giants kept offensive linemen Dan Morgan and Mike Black from the group that went 0-3 and left the Super Bowl champions in desperate straits at 0-5 overall.

Cleveland retained 15 strike players, although Coach Marty Schottenheimer said the active roster for next Monday night's game with the Rams would be the same 45 who were on the roster when the strike started.

Miami kept 14 replacements, New Orleans 11 — including much-traveled quarterback John Fournace — and the New York Jets 15, including defensive lineman Scott Mersereau and linebacker Jay Brophy.

"The strike is the reason one of our players is with us," Jets Coach Joe Walton said, referring to Mersereau, a fifth-round draft choice of the Rams from Southern Connecticut.

"As we entered the season, one of our biggest question marks was the defensive line, particularly nose tackle. He's shown he can play. At this point, that area looks a little brighter," Walton said.

Another player who may have earned a job was punter Tommy Barnhardt of New Orleans, who averaged 44 yards a kick in three games. Regular punter Brian Hansen, a former Pro Bowler, averaged 36.9 in two pre-strike games.

Many coaches feared tension between the returning strikers and the replacements.

In New England, where 12 players crossed the picket line, Coach Raymond Berry was quick to tell his players he wanted no friction.

Running back Craig James, one of the strikers, noted that all the players ate together "and there was no food fight."

"If anyone has a problem, they've got to handle it on their own," James said. "The air is cleared and we're playing ball. We've got to bring ourselves back together and we're doing that."

"They made their beds the way they wanted them," Buffalo linebacker Darryl Talley said. "I haven't decided how I'm going to deal with it."

"It's going to be a weird week. I know there's going to be some tension," said San Francisco receiver Dwight Clark, one of 15 49ers to cross the picket line. "I think on the first day we've got to get everything out in the open and not talk behind people's backs about it. I'm not worried about the hostility."

His teammates downplayed the existence of hostility.

"It's just not going to be a problem," Keith Fahnhorst, the team's co-player representative, said. "There were some hard feelings, but it's been tempered a bit because the strike is in the past. I think everybody can understand the situation now."

Like Fahnhorst, some player representatives were willing to forget.

"I don't think there are going to be problems," Miami's William Judson said. "We haven't had any incidents up 'til now and I don't see any reason to start."

There was even a little nostalgia as the replacements packed up and left.

"They could have the winners of the replacement games play a minibowl somewhere ... and let somebody besides us coach," Atlanta Coach Marion Campbell said. "And so the TV people won't complain, let 'em have it free."

Replacements Await Uncertain Futures

IRVING, Texas — Free agents who came to be called "Nowboys" and "Redscabs" will find out soon if their NFL careers will end in video tape memories or continue with a spot among the regulars.

For Washington Redskins linebacker Bobby Curtis, it comes down to a pro football job or a return to the classroom at Savannah State College in Georgia.

"I'm just going to take it one day at a time, but winning tonight makes it easier to wait," Curtis said. "We've just been having a whole lot of fun and this really caps it off."

Curtis, like others on the replacement teams that took over when regular players staged a 24-day strike, said, "I'm just thankful I got the opportunity to play. I think we've all tried to make the best of it."

The sentiment was widespread Monday night among those who had crossed picket lines and will be allowed to stay, at least temporarily, because the league has permitted the teams to keep 85 players. Only 45 — for the most part the returning strikers — will man the active rosters.

But many were optimistic at the possibility of joining a regular team somewhere in the league.

"I think we developed some good friendships, and we had a lot of fun just getting another chance to make a team," Dallas Cowboys quarterback Kevin Sweeney said. "I think most of the guys now are just hanging low, waiting to see if they're going to make the team."

"It's been an up-and-down thing all along — waiting to see if they were going to strike, then waiting to see if the strike was ending," he said.

It was a common trait among these players that helped endear them to fans — they were grateful just for the chance to play, the chance to make the team.

"I've been playing football a long time, and this was my opportunity," said Redskins quarterback Tony Robinson, who hit 11 of 18 passes for 152 yards Monday night.

"I never lost confidence in myself. The one thing I've done is trust in myself and the Lord," Robinson said. "I was just happy to be part of the Redskins."

Syracuse Enters Into The Top 10

By The Associated Press

While Syracuse continues to rise, the Southwest Conference continues to fall.

The Orangemen, fresh off a 48-21 victory over Penn State that snapped a 17-year losing drought against the Nittany Lions, moved into the Top 10 in The Associated Press college football poll Monday for the first time since 1968. Syracuse jumped from 13th last week to No. 9, its highest position since Oct. 19, 1964.

"Our object and dream was to get in the Top 20. That's what we feel very comfortable with," Coach Dick MacPherson said. "We're thrilled to be in the Top 10. We're in great shape."

He said it's more important to be a consistent Top 20 team over a period of a few years than to make brief trips into the Top 10.

Arkansas, 15th last week, fell out of the Top 20 with a 16-14 loss to Texas, which is the only undefeated team in the SWC but is only 3-3 overall.

Since the AP poll began in 1936, 20 teams have been ranked every week except from 1962-67 when only 10 were ranked. No SWC team was listed in the Top Ten for seven weeks in 1967, but since the poll resumed ranking 20 teams in 1968, the SWC has been represented in the Top Twenty every week until now.

"We knew it was coming, unfortunately. Parity has arrived in the conference," SWC spokesman Bo Carter said.

Carter said he couldn't tell whether the SWC's stumble was affected by the loss of Southern Methodist, banned from playing this season by the NCAA for repeated rules violations.

He said the league's absence from the rankings is due mainly to fierce competition within the conference.

"It has not been a case of getting beat badly outside of conference because SWC teams are 15-13 against outside opposition," Carter said. "It's just a real tough battle within the league."

The SWC's decline this season could put the conference into a hole that's tough to climb out of.

Staying in the Top 20 means guaranteed newspaper and television coverage across the country — a boon to recruiting, MacPherson said.

"Our goal was to have a winning season and go to a bowl game. The better the season, the better the bowl," he said. "I think there's a graduation of levels of bowl games and we're trying to get in the biggest one we can."

Meanwhile, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Miami and Florida State held onto the top four spots.

Oklahoma, which has been No. 1 in every poll this season, trounced Kansas State 59-10 and received 42 of 60 first-place votes and 1,179 of a possible 1,200 points.

Nebraska has been runner-up every week and the Cornhuskers received 12 first-place votes and 1,134 points for a 35-0 triumph over Oklahoma State.

Last week, Oklahoma led Nebraska 47-7 in first-place votes and 1,184-1,122 in points.

Miami of Florida, idle last weekend, remained No. 3 with six first-place ballots and 1,106 points. Florida State defeated Louisville 32-9 and held onto fourth place with 977 points.

LSU and Auburn swapped positions. LSU beat Kentucky 34-9 and climbed from sixth place to fifth with 923 points while Auburn struggled past Georgia Tech 20-10 and slipped from fifth to sixth with 893.

Clemson remained No. 7 with 846 points by defeating Duke 17-10 and UCLA moved up from ninth to eighth with 802 by drubbing Oregon 41-10. The loss knocked the Ducks out of the Top Twenty after their first appearance in 17 years.

Tennessee, last week's No. 8 team, lost to Alabama and dropped to 13th.

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, record through games of Oct. 17, total points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 and last week's ranking:

could. He put the best players on the field every day and made the right moves. We just didn't produce. We didn't play well when we had to. But we never lost respect for Lou. Never. We played hard for him."

Piniella had one year remaining on his two-year contract — though Steinbrenner's decisions have never been affected by that.

The Yankees suffered major injuries to their first two hitters in the lineup — outfielder Rickey Henderson, with a right hamstring strain, and second baseman Willie Randolph, who had torn knee cartilage that necessitated surgery. They missed a combined 109 games.

Piniella did not talk with Steinbrenner for almost a month after missing a scheduled call from his boss on Aug. 3. Piniella later apologized for not being in his hotel room to accept the call.

He was 90-72 in his first year as manager, and his two-year record was 177-145.

Martin is the Yankees' 15th manager since Steinbrenner bought them from CBS in 1973.

He last was dismissed as Yankees' manager on Oct. 27, 1985, just before the start of Game 7 of the World Series between Kansas City and St. Louis. He had been named manager that April 28, replacing Yogi Berra 16 games into the season.

On Sept. 20 in Baltimore he got into a fight with a bar patron at the Cross Keys Inn, where the Yankees were staying. The next night, he broke his arm as he fought Yankees' pitcher Ed Whitson in the hotel lobby, in an elevator and in the parking lot.

Although the Yankees were 91-54 under Martin, Steinbrenner decided to switch to Piniella.

For the last two seasons, Martin has been an adviser to Steinbrenner and a television commentator on some Yankees broadcasts.

Martin's first term as Yankees manager was his most successful. He replaced Bill Virdon on Aug. 2, 1975, two weeks after he was fired by the Texas Rangers.

In 1976, New York won the its first pennant since 1964, and in 1977 the Yankees won the World Series by beating the Los Angeles Dodgers in six games.

But the Yankees fought while they won. Martin nearly brawled with Reggie Jackson in the dugout at Fenway Park on June 18, 1977. It was a dispute with Jackson that led to Martin's first Yankee firing the next season.

On July 18, 1978, Jackson did not follow Martin's instructions to bunt after a bunt sign was flashed, then attempted to bunt after it had been taken off. Jackson was suspended for five days.

Tyson Fight Sends Holmes Back

By ED SCHUYLER JR., AP Sports Writer

Fighters who were great, or merely good, have a way of looking back when they are looking forward to a fight.

So while Larry Holmes watched Mike Tyson batter Tyrell Biggs, he saw himself fighting Tyson — himself, as he was when he beat Ken Norton nine years ago, or when he overcame a knockdown by awesome-punching Earnie Shavers eight years ago, or when he taught a boxing lesson to Gerry Cooney seven years ago.

However, Holmes will be 38 Nov. 3 and will not have fought in 21 months when he challenges the 21-year-old Tyson Jan. 23 for the undisputed heavyweight championship of the world.

"Fighting is scary," Holmes said. "When I watch a fight I think, 'Why did I used to do that.'" But he remembers that he fought very well, and thinks he can still fight well enough.

"Writers, of course, tell me I'm crazy to come back," Holmes said. "But my family is behind me. My mother told me to get in shape and kick his butt. The time is right, so go ahead and do it."

Holmes retired with a 48-2 record after being the dominant heavyweight in the world for seven years. But he never officially was the undisputed heavyweight champion, as was Joe Louis, or George Foreman, or Joe Frazier, or Muhammad Ali, and those two losses came in his last two fights — and they still rankle him.

Holmes, who voluntarily relinquished the World Boxing Council title after a dispute with promoter Don King, lost the International Boxing Federation championship to Michael Spinks. Some observers felt Holmes won, but the dispute was unanimous.

A lot more observers felt Holmes won the rematch, which Spinks took on a split decision April 19, 1986.

"They took something from me, and now I have a chance to get it all (the undisputed championship) at one shot," Holmes said.

"First of all, Tyson doesn't intimidate me," Holmes said. "Tyson fights dirty. What he does to me, I'll do to him."

"I've got a left jab he's never been hit with before. Everybody else pushes with it. I hit with it."

In the two fights against Spinks, and even earlier, Holmes' jab no longer was the weapon it once had been, and increasing age and inactivity do not figure to improve it. As the legs lose their spring, punches lose their snap, reflexes slow by blinks of an eye. You can lose a fight in the blink of an eye.

There have been a few exceptions, but while a 38-year-old man is young, he is an old fighter.

A fighter's age is not measured by the calendar alone. You must also figure in caliber of opponents, number of fights, number of tough fights, the countless rounds of sparring, the seemingly endless miles on the road. And the mental pressure.

Yet, through the ages, Father Time is the one opponent fighters have insisted on challenging. Pride, perhaps, or perhaps it's because challenges have been the mainspring of their lives.

Father Time gets the last laugh.

In 1980, Holmes defended the WBC title against the great Ali, who was 38 and coming out of a two-year retirement.

"I am the master of illusion," said Ali, who looked to be in great shape.

He was an illusion. He embarrassed himself.

LSU Tops Reflector Poll

Louisiana State, 6-0-1, held onto the lead in the Daily Reflector Performance Rankings this past week with its victory over Kentucky.

The Tigers, who held only a four-point lead over Miami of Florida, a week ago, increased its lead to 80 points over the new second place team, Syracuse.

LSU has now accumulated 1,004 points in the seven weeks of the 1987 football season.

Points are awarded each time a team wins. It further accumulates points for each game won by teams it has beaten. Then, when third level teams also win, additional points are awarded, thus ranking the teams on the basis of their performance against the strength of schedule.

For example, North Carolina earned a stated number of points from its win over N.C. State. The Tar Heels also gained points for State wins over Maryland and Georgia Tech, and for each game Maryland and Georgia Tech wins during the season.

Points continued to accumulate as the season goes along. Any further wins by N.C. State and wins by State's victims will also add to the North Carolina total.

Standings tend to be more accurate as the season goes along and the number of games played events out. Syracuse, 6-0, jumped from fifth to second place after its win over Penn State. The Orangemen had 924 points while Florida State, 6-1, is in third with 910 points. Nebraska, 6-0, is fourth with 900, followed by Miami, 4-0, with 852. The Hurricanes,

DUNKEL INDEX COLLEGE FOOTBALL

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

 Cowles Syndicate, Inc.

"I guess I'm not letter-perfect."

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY Oct. 21
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Let your talents be recognized by superiors and gain their cooperation—as well as an opportunity for financial advancement.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you make your surroundings more neat and orderly, you'll function more efficiently. Compliments will get you everywhere today.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be sure your car is in good running order before leaving on any trips. Make use of your talents, and you'll have great business success.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Invite some helpful friends into your home, but first get rid of the clutter and make the place more comfortable and pleasant.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): This is a good day to forge some new friendships, whether they be personal or business related. Handle your correspondence early.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Your time is very valuable today, so make a schedule this morning and stick to it rigidly. This will be a happy evening for you.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You'll feel full of energy today, so make use of it. Get out and visit friends, run some errands, take care of bills and other commitments.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Try to please your mate with some special thought which will be appreciated. You can become a very popular person with some effort.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Arrange a get-together with a group of old friends. Reminiscing could be very enjoyable. Be very cautious when driving.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You can accomplish a great deal today if you apply yourself and stick to a schedule. Contact some long-forgotten friends tonight.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): This is a good day to plan a trip you've been contemplating. See if you can interest some good friends in accompanying you.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Your hunches are right on target today, so don't be afraid to follow them. Don't take any risks where your health is concerned.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will get along well with others, and should be trained in the social graces and cultural subjects. Your progeny may tend to be overly conscientious, so teach him or her to arrive at decisions a bit more quickly. A fine education will be very helpful to your child.

 It is tempting first to tackle the suit that will produce the most tricks. More often than not that is the right approach. Once in a while, however, you have to determine how many tricks you need from your long suit before you know how to handle it. This example is most instructive.

Your opening two-club bid followed by the two no trump rebid described a balanced hand of 23-24 points. After checking fruitlessly for a 4-4 heart fit, North made the value raise.

There are seven fast tricks outside the diamond suit. How do you propose to play the diamonds? Strangely enough, the answer lies in your hearts!

only four diamond tricks to fulfill your slam, so you can afford a safety play. If the heart finesse is doomed to fail, you need five diamond tricks, and the only way to get those is to hope to drop a singleton or doubleton queen.

Since you want to be in dummy for the heart finesse, win the ace of spades and, to preserve dummy's entries, carefully run the queen of hearts. When that wins, you need only four tricks from the diamond suit. So you abandon hearts and lead a low diamond from the table. Simply cover any diamond that East produces. If West wins, it means the suit is breaking no worse than 3-1 and you have four sure diamond tricks.

What if East inserts the nine and, when you win the king, West shows out? Continue with a diamond to the jack and East's queen. Win any return, cross to the king of clubs and take the marked finesse for the diamond ten. And if East shows out on the first lead of the suit, win and lead toward the jack. Again, you are guaranteed four tricks. Try it!

German Actor Breaks Image To Play Good Guy In Movie

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reiner Schoene says he hopes his good-guy role in the television film "The Gunfighters" will fight what he feels is typecasting of Germans as the bad guys in movies.

Schoene is best known in this country for his role in the controversial ABC miniseries "Amerika," about a Soviet takeover of the United States. He played a sadistic East German major.

In real life, Schoene defected from East Germany where he was a rock 'n' roll singer.

In "The Gunfighters," Schoene plays Dutch Everett, who along with his cousins, played by Art Hindle and Tony Addabbo, protects the family ranch against a ruthless landowner, played by George Kennedy.

The two-hour movie is a pilot for a possible first-run, syndicated series that would follow the fugitive Everetts as roving gunfighters.

The movie, a joint Canadian-American production, is being released in syndication by Coca-Cola Telecommunications. It can be seen in various markets through mid-November. The movie was made by Grosse-Jacobson Productions, the producers of CBS' late-night crime series "Night Heat." Like "Night Heat," "The Gunfighters" was filmed in Canada.

"I don't want to be typecast as the mean, European villain," said Schoene. "I consider it a privilege to play a German who's a good guy, which rarely happens in this country.

"People tell me I remind them of Rutger Hauer, the Dutch actor," Schoene said. "We're different. He's a good actor, and he's escaping typecasting. It's important for me personally to play a good German, even if he's called 'Dutch.' I do have a chance to break the pattern that Germans have to play the bad guys.

"I just turned down a feature film. I don't want to be caught in violence. I hate violent films. My character in 'The Gunfighters' is almost a pacifist. He doesn't carry a gun. He carries a whip. I even have a shoulder holster for the whip. I can use it to take a gun out of someone's hand."

Originally, "The Gunfighters" was to star three Americans. But when a German production company became involved, Schoene was cast.

Schoene said he is frequently offered roles as the bad guy because of his German looks, his 6-foot-5-inch height and powerful build. He said he wants to break out of the cliché.

On the other hand, he admitted he wouldn't mind playing a Nazi in a quality film. "Something that doesn't exploit violence," he said. "I feel films about violence are dangerous. It is dangerous to entertain people with violence."

Schoene, who is now allowed to return to the German Democratic Republic, has virtually lost his German accent. In Europe when he is asked where he's from, he now answers with his new home, Oregon. However, he still has to grope for English words on occasion.

"My goal in the near future is to be cast as an actor and not as a freak," he said. "It works to my advantage now because I get the parts American actors can't do. But I'm not taking a job from an American actor. Eventually, I'd like to be offered American roles."

Schoene is still interested in music and said he is looking for an American lyricist to collaborate with him on writing songs. "I haven't written any songs here yet," he said. "My strong quality was always my lyrics. I need a co-writer who can put the words into proper American."

Schoene, who has a West German passport, said he is thinking of applying for American citizenship.

Suit Revived

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A copyright suit claiming Stevie Wonder stole his Academy Award-winning song "I Just Called To Say I Love You" from a Los Angeles songwriter has been revived by a federal appeals court.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Monday that Lloyd Chiate could go to trial with his claim against Wonder.

Wonder, whose real name is Stevland Morris, won an Academy Award in 1985 for best original song from a motion picture.

NBC Union OKs Pact

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's striking workers voted by a 2-1 margin to accept a contract offer, but their 17-week walkout continued today after two small units of the broadcast employees union held out.

A tally Monday showed that 12 of the 14 units in the 2,800-member National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians voted to accept an offer that had been opposed by most of their leaders. Under union policy, the strikers cannot go back to work until all the units agree.

Negotiators planned to meet this week to "get this thing ironed out and ratified by the end of the week," said NABET spokesman John Krieger.

"The strike is still officially on," said Tom Kennedy, another union spokesman.

The two dissenting units, messengers in Chicago and building maintenance workers in Los Angeles, have only about 50 members between them.

NABET's executive committee opposed the contract offer but, pressed by its divided membership and by General Electric, NBC's owner, agreed last week to put the proposal to a vote. The national committee and local leaders in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cleveland, Washington and Chicago urged rejection, but the New York local, the union's largest, urged approval.
