Wall Street Seesaws As Anxiety Persists

By PETER COY
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks seesawed violently in the United States today after falling sharply in Europe, reflecting persistent anxiety about financial markets that are still wobbly from the historic collapse earlier this week.
The key Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks careened 140 points lower in early U.S. trading as sell orders swamped the New York Stock Exchange, but by 11:30 a.m. EDT the average had recovered somewhat and stood at 1,948.11, down 79.74.
The wild swing in prices came three days after the stunning decline that erased 508 points from the Dow average and more than a half-trillion dollars from U.S. stocks in Wall Street's worst crisis since the Crash of 1929.
Escalating hostility in the Persian Gulf and swirling rumors that the market might crash again played important roles in this morning's frenzied stock selling, analysts said.

They also attributed part of the early decline to a massive migration into the bond market by panicky investors who wanted to put their money in a relatively safe place. Bond prices jumped as a result.
"The market's extremely fragile," said Peter J. DaPuzzo, manager of the retail equity group at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York. "Any negative news causes it to break and people to sell out equities. There's so much tension and nervousness, the confidence level is very close to zero."
Some brokers saw hope in the announcement that several major U.S. banks dropped their prime lending rate from 9.25 percent to 9 percent. Lower borrowing costs historically have been welcomed by Wall Street.
In an attempt to curb the market's volatility, the New York Stock Exchange moved this morning further limit the use of computer-assisted trading techniques that have been blamed for sudden swings in stock prices.

The decline in the United States followed a sharp drop in London stock prices this morning.
Stock prices in Tokyo finished today's session higher, but well off their high point of the day. Later, in London, stock prices tumbled, and the key Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index was off 153 points to 1,374.3, wiping out its record one-day gain of 142.2 points.

The money pouring into the government securities market pushed down yields sharply. The yield on the three-month Treasury bill fell to 5.1 percent by midmorning, down from 5.64 percent late Wednesday, and the yield on the 30-year Treasury bond fell to 9.1 percent from 9.45 percent.

The stock volatility indicated persistent nervousness among investors about the health of the world economy following the panic that began Monday and erased more than $1 trillion worth of stock value in 24 hours.
Analysts said many investors likely were waiting to hear President Reagan's comments on the economy at his news conference tonight. Fear about the consequences of America's enormous trade gap, budget deficit and long-term debt is widely considered to be a key element in the market crisis.

In Tokyo, the 225-share Nikkei stock average was up nearly 730 points at midday but relinquished ground to close up 457.05 points at

Terrorists Claim Bombers Set To Attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The pro-Iranian captors of American and French hostages said today that thousands of suicide bombers are preparing to attack U.S. Navy and European forces in the Persian Gulf.
The typewritten Arabic statement from Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, was delivered to Western news agencies in Beirut. It was accompanied by black-and-white photographs of American hostage Terry Anderson and Jean Paul Kauffmann, a French captive.

The group encloses photographs as a sign of authenticity of its messages.
Anderson, wearing a T-shirt, had a bushy moustache and beard and was looking straight into the camera without his eyeglasses. The picture was different from the eight previous photographs of Anderson released by his captors.
Kauffmann, also with a bushy beard and moustache, wore a striped shirt under a dark nylon jacket.
It was the first still picture of Kauffmann released by Islamic Jihad. His previous photographs in captivity were all taken from videotapes.

Neither captive looked fatigued. Anderson wore an expression of confidence while Kauffmann had a look of dismay. Both appeared to have lost weight.
The statement said the Persian Gulf attacks would be patterned after the Oct. 23, 1983, bombings that demolished the headquarters of the U.S. Marines and French paratroopers in Lebanon.
The bombings, carried out by suicide truck drivers, killed 241 American servicemen at the Marines base and 58 Frenchmen at the other post. Both nations later withdrew their forces from Lebanon.

The envelope contained two pictures of the destroyed bases.
"Thousands of our suicide martyrs currently are in the (Persian) Gulf waiting for the proper moment to make a new glory for Islam and the Moslems," the statement said.
A total of 23 foreigners, including eight Americans, are missing.

Shultz Opens New Arms Control Talks

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz opened a new round of arms control talks today, pledging to do "serious business" to wrap up a missile-ban agreement.
Shultz seemed relaxed and cheerful after a train ride of 14 hours to the fog-bound Soviet capital from Finland. Along the way he munched on salami, conferred with National Security Adviser Frank C. Carlucci and other aides, and slept.
Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze greeted Shultz with a warm handshake, after telling reporters packed into a Foreign Ministry guest house: "Please wish us good luck and success."

Asked to predict the outcome of their effort to wrap up a treaty scrapping all U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range missiles, Shevardnadze replied: "We are natural optimists."
Several hurdles remain in the way of an accord, including differences over a schedule to scrap the missiles and procedures for verifying compliance with the treaty.
During his two-day visit, Shultz and Mikhail S. Gorbachev may set a date for the Soviet leader to go to Washington for a third summit with President Reagan.

Prime Rates Falling

NEW YORK (AP) — Several major banks today lowered their prime lending rate to 9 percent from 9.25 percent, effective immediately.
The cut comes about two weeks after major U.S. banks raised their prime rates by half a percentage point to 9.25 percent.
The move was first announced by Citibank, the nation's largest bank. First Chicago Corp., Bankers Trust Co. and Continental Illinois National Bank also announced reductions of the same magnitude in their prime rates, and most major U.S. banks were expected to follow suit.
On Tuesday, Chemical Bank and Marine Midland Bank, which had raised their prime rates by a half percentage point to 9.75 percent last week, reversed themselves and cut the rates to the 9.25 percent level that has prevailed elsewhere in the U.S. banking industry.
The cuts represent the first reductions since August 1986 in the prime rate, which is used by banks as a benchmark for a range of business and consumer loans.
Interest rates on both short- and long-term Treasury securities have plunged since the stock market collapsed on Monday. The decline continued even as some stock prices rebounded in the next two sessions.
The Treasury's closely watched 30-year bond was trading this morning with a yield of around 9.12 percent, down sharply from 9.45 percent late Wednesday.
The decline has been attributed to strong demand for Treasury issues by investors who were frightened by Monday's selloff and subsequent volatility in stock prices.
The Federal Reserve Board's affirmation on Tuesday that it stood ready to help the financial community overcome liquidity problems also contributed to lowering rates, as did speculation that the stock selloff could signal an imminent economic slowdown and lower inflation.

HAPPIER TIMES — Two London stock exchange traders share a jovial moment during a break outside the market. After an early recovery, prices dipped again today in London and Milan and gave up ground in Tokyo and Sydney. In London the Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index was down 79.8 at 1,864.0 at midday after seesawing during the morning. (AP Laserphoto)

PCMH Begins Expansion Projects

Officials were to break ground for two major construction projects at Pitt County Memorial Hospital at 1 p.m. today.
The ceremonies mark the beginning of construction of a 12,000-square-foot birthing center and an 8,686-square-foot expansion to the Regional Rehabilitation Center.
The birthing center is a joint project between Pitt Memorial and the East Carolina University School of Medicine. It will provide inpatient services for uncomplicated labor and delivery and postpartum care of both mother and baby. A Caesarean deliver room will be located in the unit for immediate surgical intervention during emergency situations.
Funds for the $1,448,000 birthing center were appropriated by the 1986 North Carolina General Assembly. The single-story, free-standing birthing center is scheduled for completion in approximately one year. It will be located south of the hospital's west bed tower and is designed to accommodate two additional floors in the future.
The Regional Rehabilitation Center will be expanded on its south side at a cost of $901,881. The project will provide additional outpatient treatment facilities and office space. It, too, is designed to have two more floors, if needed.

Contractors Fined $5.1 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government imposed a record $5.1 million fine against contractors today in the April collapse of a half-built Bridgeport, Conn., apartment complex that killed 28 workers.
John A. Pendergrass, chief of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, said an investigation revealed "a serious disregard for basic fundamental engineering practices, a factor directly related to the cause of collapse."
The investigation found that the collapse was triggered by failure of a jacking system used to lift concrete floor slabs into place, Pendergrass said.

The National Bureau of Standards concluded that L'Ambiance Plaza collapsed as workers were lifting three concrete slabs into place on the ninth, tenth and eleventh floors of the building's west tower on April 23.
A rod connected to a hydraulic jack atop a steel column slipped out of a U-shaped opening in a steel bracket that was embedded in the ninth-floor slab and used to hoist the floor into position, according to a National Bureau of Standards report.
Federal researchers said the load placed on one of the jacks caused the steel collar to bend. The jack rod slipped out, allowing the three slabs to fall and triggering a chain reaction that brought both wings of the 13-story structure down in a matter of seconds, they said.

"We found obvious design deficiencies in a listing system that could have been easily detected with an engineering analysis, but this was not done even after the system failed on two occasions prior to the L'Ambiance collapse," Pendergrass said.
"Furthermore, we found a pattern of sloppy construction practices throughout the project and an overall sense of employer complacency for essential workplace safety considerations," he said.

OSHA, which worked with the bureau on the investigation, cited Texstar Construction Corp. of San Antonio, Texas, with 238 instances of alleged willful violations of federal safety standards. The company was fined a total of $2.52 million. It was the contractor that carried out the so-called lift-slab construction method.
TPMI-Macomber, the primary contractor and project manager, was cited for identical violations because it was contractually responsible for overall health and safety at the site, OSHA said. It was fined a total of $2.48 million.

In The Area

Extras Needed

The Employment Security Commission is seeking experienced technicians and extras to appear in a motion picture with production scheduled to begin Nov. 1.

ESC Film Liaison Faye McArthur said producers of the film are seeking persons for the following positions: key grip, dolly grip, grip, gaffer, electrician, script supervisor, sound operator and boom operator.

Producers hope to fill most of the supporting cast and bit parts locally and need around 300 extras.

For further information contact Faye McArthur, c/o High Point Employment Security Commission, 121 South Hamilton Street, High Point, N.C., 27260, telephones 882-4141 or 733-3941. In Greenville contact the Job Service Center at 756-2686.

School Lunch Week

W.H. Robinson School cafeteria manager, Rachel Wade, and her staff placed fresh flowers on each table for National School Lunch Week last week. Parents, friends and other guests had lunch with students and staff throughout the week. Guests included E.C. Hines, mayor of Winterville; Tommy Langston, president of Winterville First Citizens Bank; Glenn Strickland, president of Winterville Kiwanis Club; Jim Black, Board of Education member; Sparky McCaskill, and Kathryn Allen, candidate for Board of Education.

Attended Seminar

Freda M. Lee of Ayden, a learning disabilities specialist at North Lenoir High School, recently participated in the seminar "Our Founding Faiths" at the North Carolina Center for the Advancement of Teaching.

Lee has bachelor's and master's degrees from East Carolina University.

Education Seminar

Rae G. Nobles of Stokes, a math teacher at D.H. Conley High School, recently attended a seminar at the North Carolina Center for the Advancement of Teaching, Western Carolina University, Cullowhee.

The seminar, "Challenge of the 20th Century," was coordinated by Anthony G. Rud Jr. and Shelley Olson, center fellows. Ms. Nobles has a bachelor's degree from Atlantic Christian College and a master's degree from East Carolina University.

Conley FBLA

The D.H. Conley chapter of Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) recently attended the Fall District Leadership Conference in Chocowinity. The Parliamentary Procedure Team which placed third in the state last year presented workshop on "How to Start a Parliamentary Procedure Team in Your School." Other students attended various workshops on leadership and dressing for business.

Class Visitor

Betsy Smith's first-grade students of Falkland Elementary School recently were visited by Thomas Feast, a karate instructor. After viewing a "Reading Rainbow" program stressing discipline and self-control, the class saw a demonstration of basic blocks, kicks and punches. Feast, a black belt in Go-ju Shorin Karate, discussed its the origin and meaning. He involved students in a demonstration and stressed use of karate as self-defense.

Jo Rogerson, health educator with the Pitt County Health Department, also spoke to first grade students about good personal hygiene and nutrition. The four food groups were illustrated, and the students drew pictures of themselves following good health practices.

Arrest Made

Ronnie Ashley White, 25, of 109A Brookwood Drive, was arrested by Greenville police Tuesday on breaking, entering and larceny charges.

Detective C.E. Weatherington said the charge was in connection with a break-in at 412 Lathan St. that was reported on Oct. 7.

Back To God

The Back to God Crusade Ministries, with Elder Nathaniel Edwards, pastor of Baltimore-Salisbury, Maryland Tabernacle of Prayer churches as guest evangelist, is holding revival services at Tabernacle of Prayer, 1606 Dickinson Ave., through Saturday. Revival services will culminate with a gospel concert Saturday at 6 p.m.

Nursing Honor

Donna Scull, a junior at East Carolina University School of Nursing, was presented a Certificate of Appreciation from the Cape Fear Valley Medical Center by Dr. Emilie D. Henning, dean of the school. Also participating in the ceremony was Curtis A. Farrance, director of student services.

Ms. Scull, a resident of Fayetteville, was one of three students who worked in the medical center's program this past summer.

Anton To Speak

Dr. David Anton, a senior research chemist at the DuPont Experimental Research Station, will speak to the Eastern North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society Friday.

The meeting will be held at Vermillion's in Kinston at 8 p.m. A social hour at 6 p.m. and a buffet dinner at 7 p.m. will precede the lecture. For information, call the Department of Chemistry, ECU, 757-6711.

EVEREADY GIFT — A $2,000 check was given to the East Carolina University Chemistry Department for support of seminar programs recently. The check was presented to Chancellor Richard Eakin, center, by Mick Maxon, left, plant manager of Eveready Battery Co. Inc.

of Greenville. Also participating in the ceremony was Dr. Caroline Ayers, chairman of the chemistry department. It was the 20th annual gift from the company. (ECU New Bureau Photo by Tony Rumpel).

Scholarship

Robert G. Gantt Jr. was presented the William H. Durham Marketing Teacher Education Scholarship by Dr. William H. Durham Jr. recently in a ceremony at East Carolina University.

The $500 scholarship was established in 1985 in appreciation for Durham's work in marketing education at ECU and is awarded each year to an undergraduate student majoring in Marketing Teacher Education. Applicants are judged on leadership, citizenship, financial need, scholarship and dedication to the field.

Gantt, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Gantt of Greenville, is student teaching at Hunt Senior High School in Wilson. He is an active member of Pi Omega Pi and Collegiate Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA), serving as chairman of North Carolina DECA. He said he plans to pursue a master of arts degree in business education at ECU.

Veterans Parade

The Pitt County Veterans Council will sponsor a Veterans Day Parade Nov. 7 — the Saturday before Veterans Day.

Council President Paul Waldrop said the parade units will assemble at Rose High at 9 a.m. and go down Elm Street to Fifth Street to Reade Street, up Reade Street to First Street and disband at the Town Common. A brief ceremony honoring all veterans will be presented at the new bandstand by the Tar River.

To participate, contact Dr. Harold McMillion, director of the Veterans Outreach Center (VET Center) on Arlington Boulevard, 355,7920.

The council is composed of members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Vietnam Veterans Association and Disabled American Veterans.

Anniversary

Pastor's anniversary services will be held today and Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Arthur Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

The Rev. James Lindsey and the congregation of Ellis Chapel Church will lead the Thursday service. Elders B.V. Rhinehardt and the congregation of Guiding Light Temple of Faith will conduct the Friday service.

Completed Degrees

Kimberly S. Owens of Farmville and David L. Osborne of Greenville completed degree requirements during the summer session at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Ms. Owens earned a bachelor's degree in science, while Osborne received a master's degree in arts.

Proof Required

Farmers who apply for loans made or guaranteed from the Farmers Home Administration must certify that they are in compliance with certain soil conservation requirements related to highly erodible and wetlands, according to Bert M. Hall, acting Pitt County supervisor.

The certification form to be signed by the applicant asks three basic questions dealing with cultivating highly erodible land not farmed before; wet areas converted for cropland since December 23, 1985, and future plans to convert wetlands.

"Farm borrowers who take the necessary certification actions now will not be delayed in receiving their spring crop loans. However, failure to take action could delay the delivery of FmHA loans and the USDA benefits," Hall said. For additional information call 752-2035 or visit the County FmHA Office at 1411 S. Evans St.

St. James Ushers

The Senior Ushers of St. James Free Will Baptist Church, Fountain, will have anniversary services Sunday at 7 p.m. The Rev. Walter Cherry will be the speaker.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Special Break

Pitt County's commissioners must take care, when revaluing property, not to grant one group special consideration it cannot afford other entities.

Lowering the tax schedule for farmland in Pitt County appears to be in line with the trend of declining crop land value. Certainly, at a time when farmers may be the most financially beleaguered businessmen around, it is difficult to begrudge that group any break.

But that break will come at the expense of businesses and homeowners. Both will likely face a tax increase that county officials say could be as high as 11 percent.

Fact is, farming is a business and is operated on the same premise as other types of businesses — the need to make a profit. Although the commissioners are responding the special problems within the farming industry, giving farmers preferential tax treatment creates a situation of inequity. That sets a potentially precarious precedent for dealing with exceptional circumstances.

Other businesses face special problems, too. These difficulties are not as visible or politically potent, however, as empty fields and machinery that sits rusting under sheds in disrepair.

Property should be taxed at a rate which correctly reflects its value. The commissioners should look carefully to see that the new schedule of values for farm land accurately assesses the land's worth. Despite its woes, farming remains a lucrative venture for many who choose it.

It is true, however, the problems of other businesses are less likely to have as far-reaching impact as farm decline. In Pitt County, the scope of the agricultural industry extends far beyond the fields. Because of the county's economic dependence on agriculture, what happens in that sector affects all aspects of the community. Granting special consideration to this impact is likely correct.

But the commissioners should keep the implications of such a move clearly in mind. Without urgent hardship that affects a large segment of a community, a special interest should not be granted considerations that set it apart from other entities.

Public Forum

To the editor:

What a nice compliment Mr. and Mrs. Gary Anderson of Nags Head paid the city of Greenville concerning its lack of litter. They obviously closed their eyes to the trash along the highways leading into the area. They also did not visit any of the movie theaters or attend a ball game while here.

Why have we become such an "untidy" nation? Twenty-five years ago "Keep America Beautiful" signs dotted the roadsides and it was a sacrilege to throw one's trash out of the car window. At the movie theater, one never thought of casually tossing the popcorn container, candy wrappers, and soft drink cups to the floor for the new "show" to wade through. At sports events, you carried your trash over to the trashcan 10 feet away, instead of dropping it at your feet. We burned our "paper trash" at home, instead of carrying it to a container site, losing a good part of it along the way.

So as a frankly disgusted individual, what can I do to make a difference? I can write a letter to the Public Forum, hoping that it will jog someone's conscience. As a parent, I can teach my children to take care of their own personal trash, whether they are at home, at school or in a public place. As a citizen, I can take down the license plate numbers of cars and trucks when I observe flagrant violations and report them.

If every citizen would do these simple things (along with stashing their trash in proper places), it would make such a difference. Doesn't anyone care any more?

Laurie Charlton

To the editor:

It is a sad state of affairs when the three major television networks choose to air soap operas rather than the President of the United States.

Regardless of the issue at hand, whether he be Democrat or Republican, black or white, you would think if the President of the United States desired to speak to the American people that ABC, CBS, and NBC would grant him the common courtesy of airing his speech. But they chose the soaps to be more beneficial or more "news worthy" than our President's speech.

I don't think "news worthiness" has anything to do with their choice. It was, I believe, his subject, Mr. Robert Bork. The media has made it pretty clear where they stand when it comes to the nomination of Mr. Bork to the Supreme Court. If it has not been clear in the past, certainly the choosing of the soaps over President Reagan's speech makes it crystal clear.

The tragedy is they (ABC, NBC, CBS) can give the American people what information they please, and their pleasure is to censor our President when his information may hurt their cause. President Reagan, in the minds of many Americans, deserves more. He is still President of the United States.

To the editor:

Is it a right or a privilege to smoke while on board an airplane? To determine the difference, one must delineate the rights of all passengers, be they smokers or non-smokers.

All passengers have the right to:

1. Clean air free from known carcinogens
2. Clean seats free from ashes and cigarette butts
3. Safety from known fire hazards

Therefore, the smoker infringes on the basic rights of all passengers when (s)he lights up on an airplane. Smoking is not a right while traveling in an enclosed public space. It is a privilege that can be suspended by those health-aware persons who wish to promote clean, healthy, safe air travel for all passengers.

Dazzling Thought

Now we're informed the search for extraterrestrials has gained one more element of scientific credibility.

This comes with no evidence whatsoever that intelligent life exists beyond earth. Dreamers and seekers are involved in a decade-long National Aeronautics and Space Administration project linking several radio telescopes around the world to comb our galaxy for radio transmissions, searching for transmissions that could only have been broadcast by an advanced civilization.

Scientists attending the 38th Congress of the International Astronautical Federation in Brighton, England have been trying to come to grips with how to announce such a momentous discovery without alarming the public or destabilizing governments.

NASA administrator James C. Fletcher devoted much of his speech last week to the gathering about the ongoing search. Most of the scientists involved in the program believe they are looking for a signal deliberately sent in our direction.

Fletcher's comments and concern of the assemblage are seen as indicative of a growing legitimacy in the search for intelligence "out there".

Even the thought dazzles imaginations.

The White House Has It Both Ways

The White House press briefing on Monday, the day the United States attacked the Iranian oil rigs, was an example of what can happen when an immovable object, in the form of spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, meets an irrepressible force — the White House press corps. Logic goes out the window.

Fitzwater's task that day was to maintain, in the face of appeals to common sense, that two opposing ideas were in perfect harmony: That the administration could be obeying the War Powers Act while ignoring the heart of it — the part that gives Congress the power to approve the presence of U.S. troops in dangerous situations.

Stoic and unyielding, Fitzwater should have been given some kind of award for rational inconsistency. The reporters were respectfully persistent but perplexed, as though dealing with someone of doubtful reasoning whom they did not want to offend. As carried by Cable News Network, it can only be wondered what viewers thought of it all.

By now, it should not be surprising that the Reagan administration likes to have things both ways. President Reagan can be portrayed as being out of touch, on the one hand, with what was going on in his National Security Council, but, when it suits him, can assert that he is very much in charge on a day-to-day basis. He can deny knowing anything about raising money for the Contras one minute, and the next can say that the whole thing was his idea in the first place.

How can it be both ways? No one in the press seems to ask that question, or even bother to point it out, probably because inconsistencies on such a scale tend to numb the mind. If two and two don't add up to four in the White House, everybody else feels obliged to check their arithmetic.

Much of the briefing on the U.S. attack was taken up with the War Powers Act, which requires the president to report to Congress when U.S. troops are involved in imminently hostile situations, such as would seem to be the casual observer to be the case in the Persian Gulf.

Once he does that, he has 60 days to withdraw them unless Congress authorizes them to stay, a deadline that can be extended 30 days at the president's request. The idea behind it was to give Congress some say in how U.S. troops are deployed in warlike situations.

The administration's position is that the act is unconstitutional, but because it's the law, the administration can't admit it is disobeying it. It also is fiddling with semantics in refusing to acknowledge that the Persian Gulf is imminently dangerous. Once it did that, it would have to obey the War Powers Act.

Fitzwater told the correspondents that the White House would meet the reporting requirements of the act but that it would disregard that "portion" which, in effect, it did not like.

When it was suggested several times that Reagan thus was not obeying the law, his reply was always the same: "We are obeying the law."

"No, you're not," someone said at one point, unable to restrain an impulse to speak the truth.

Wasn't Reagan declaring the law unconstitutional without benefit of a Supreme Court ruling? That was a "legal point" that might be resolved some day, Fitzwater said.

"You are choosing not to obey the law because you have decided... that it's unconstitutional?" someone asked.

"We are obeying the law..." Fitzwater said.

It was like the Jackie Mason TV commercial. The wheels go this way, you go that way, and before you know it, nobody understands it.

Strength
For Today

A person given to wise sayings wrote some time ago, "If you do not have a solution you are part of the problem."

Often we know that there is something wrong, something which cries out for correction, yet we are not sure what that correction is. But the imperative requirement is that we keep seeking after it. Here we see a big problem in business, in the home, and in community life. We may shrug our shoulders in hopelessness. If we do then we are making the problem worse, for although we are not sure we can find the solution, we have to be sure that we are seeking after it.

Life is a series of problems, whether we want it that way or not. The overwhelming majority of life's problems can be solved if we want to solve them.

Political Is Not A Dirty Word

WASHINGTON — The political world has been abuzz lately with a particularly harsh epithet. It springs from the mouth of those who want to paint their opponents as particularly crass and shallow. It provokes sharp denials. The fearsome word I mean, of course, is "political."

I'm thinking of three situations. First, the Supreme Court nomination battle over Judge Robert H. Bork. As the nomination goes under, the Reagan administration accuses Bork's opponents of "politicizing" the process, an act which, it is said, will leave lasting scars on the constitutional process of confirmation for our highest court.

Second, the newfound notoriety of Democratic presidential candidate Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn.) In recent debates among the candidates on foreign policy, Gore has staked out a position somewhat to the right of his

'... We should bear in mind that politics is indispensable in making sense of national events and issues. Being political does not mean distorting the facts. It means taking a stand.'

fellows. Not all of the foreign policy initiatives of the Reagan era, Gore says, have been wrong. The other candidates accuse Gore of staging a "political" move, and criticize his "divisiveness."

Third, the imminent return to the headlines of the Iran-contra affair. Republicans on the committees preparing a report on the summer's hearings are already muttering that the result will be a "political" document. Several, including Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) and Rep. Henry Hyde (R-Ill.), have threatened to prepare an alternative report.

In each case, my response is the same: these situations may have their questionable aspects, but being "political" isn't one of them. Politics is nothing more or less than the pursuit of a social vision. "Political" is not a dirty word.

There have been some distortions of Judge Bork's record by some of his more vehement opponents, like People for the American Way. Few dispute that. But it was not wrong, as the administration claims, for Bork opponents to mobilize public opinion in the first place.

In his recent address to the nation

President Reagan said, "Federal judges are not appointed to decide cases according to the latest opinion polls." True enough. But judges first earn that legitimacy, the right to be democratic, by the consent of the polity. It was that process, political in the best sense, that vetoed Judge Bork when his authentically radical views became known.

A presidential race is another sort of chance to debate the national direction. And Sen. Gore, by breaking through the tedious politeness of unity-conscious Democrats, has begun to provide a greater choice within that party.

It remains to be seen whether his foreign affairs stance is much more than talk. But to criticize Sen. Gore for being disagreeable is absurd. That's what all the candidates owe to us. That is the function of politics.

Finally, as we await the judgment of the committees investigating the Iran-contra affair, we should bear in mind that politics is indispensable in making sense of national events and issues. Being political does not mean distorting the facts. It means taking a stand.

So it's inevitable that the final Iran-contra report, based on months of public and private testimony, as well as sleuthing, will be pointed, perhaps partisan. If it weren't, it wouldn't be worth reading.

Even so, if the report is written properly, it should tell enough for every interested American to make her or his own decision. When all the facts are in, the burden is on the drafters of the report to make their conclusions stick. And that responsibility is the challenge and the beauty of our much-maligned political process.

Easy Money, Hard Choices For Greenspan

Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve's unique ability to create money is helping propel the stock market's two-day rebound and giving Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan a crucial first test of deciding how much is enough.

Greenspan, who took the post last August vowing to be as tough an inflation fighter as his predecessor, Paul Volcker, has shifted tactics in the face of this week's stock market frenzy.

In the form of an easier monetary policy, Greenspan has embarked on a course of using inflation — at least in small doses — as a weapon to keep the stock market collapse from spreading into a new recession.

An easier Fed monetary policy can drive down interest rates in the short run and spur economic growth, thus making a recession less likely. But too much slack in the system can rekindle big-league inflation and erode investor confidence in the dollar.

"I think the Fed is walking a tightrope in the middle of a windstorm," said Frank McCormick, vice president and senior economist for the Bank of America.

Thus Greenspan, in his first crisis as head of the nation's central bank, has a series of difficult choices to make in charting the nation's monetary policy in the critical days ahead.

Economists and analysts credit the Fed decision to pump additional reserves into the nation's financial system on Tuesday and Wednesday as a major factor in the stock market's partial revival.

The Dow Jones industrial average surged a record 187 points on Wednesday, following a 102-point rise the day before, recapturing a portion of the losses in Monday's historic 508-point drop.

"So far, Greenspan's act has been perfect," McCormick said. "He's extremely calm, and that's what is needed when the market has gone into a panic."

But not all economists agree. "He's off to a rocky start and he follows a very tough act," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of Shearson Lehman Bros. of New York. "Volcker was the very best crisis manager ever at the head of the Federal Reserve. Anyone would suffer in comparison."

However, Sinai said Greenspan "did exactly the right thing" in easing monetary policy. But "the concern over too much easing is inflation down the road. The Fed has to walk a delicate line here, having eased already."

In the days since Monday's crash, both the Fed and the administration have pursued a course designed to minimize the damage from the market chaos of earlier in the week and to keep it from snowballing into a recession.

"You need to apply the physicians' code: first do no harm," Budget Director James C. Miller III said.

Despite upbeat words from President Reagan and his advisers on the market rally and a well-publicized overture to Congress to strike a budget compromise, the administration has pretty much followed Miller's prescription.

With the administration lying low, focus has clearly shifted to Greenspan and his Fed colleagues as the policy-makers whose actions have the most direct bearing on market psychology.

The Fed's actions to pump additional money into bank reserves came quickly after Greenspan's terse announcement early Tuesday that the central bank was ready to "serve as a source of liquidity."

Wednesday's Fed action, according to analysts, drove down the federal funds rate, the rate that banks charge for short-term loans to one another, to between 5 1/8 percent and 6 1/2 percent from the 6 3/4 percent rate of late Tuesday.

That represented a further fall from the 7 1/2 percent rates of Monday.

Economists said they expected the moves could help lower other key short-term interest rates throughout the economy.

The Federal Reserve can influence interest rates indirectly by buying government securities, as it did Tuesday and Wednesday, a move which pumped additional money into the system. With more money in their reserves, banks can make loans at lower rates.

When the Fed buys securities held by banks it, in effect, pays for them with funds that didn't exist before, thus actually creating new money. And new money, almost by definition, means inflation.

When the Fed sells securities, it has the reverse effect, taking money out of the financial system and driving interest rates up.

Although the Fed never discloses such moves publicly, analysts said all the signs clearly point to continued Fed activity to prop up the economy.

"We don't comment on things like that," Fed spokesman Joseph Coyne said Wednesday.

The Federal Reserve can also ease credit by directly changing its discount rate, the rate it charges for direct loans to financial institutions, or by changing its requirements on the reserves banks must hold in relation to the loans they have outstanding.

The Fed, in fact, raised the discount rate last month, to 6 percent from 5.5 percent, in a move widely viewed by analysts then as a gesture by Greenspan to show that he was committed to combating inflation and shoring up the dollar as was Volcker.

And, while some economists suggested the Fed might now move to lower the discount rate, in line with the other interest-rate reductions of recent days, some analysts suggested this would be a step too far.

"This would be a good-news, bad-news situation," said David Jones, senior economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., government securities dealers. "The good news is it would make investors more confident. The bad news is it would lead to a weakening of the dollar and make dollar investments less attractive to foreign investors."

Tom Raum covers economic issues from Washington for The Associated Press.

HUD Funding

Pitt County is one of 10 North Carolina counties that will share about $3 million in funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development awarded to the Mental Health Association of North Carolina.

The money will be used to construct residential facilities for persons with long-term mental illnesses.

Chemistry Meet

Educators and scientists from eastern North Carolina will meet at East Carolina University Nov. 6 for the eighth annual chemistry symposium co-sponsored by ECU and the Eastern N. C. Section of the American Chemical Society.

The 1987 event, "Classroom Innovations in Chemical Education," coincides with National Chemistry Day. Its workshop format will focus on recent developments in chemical curricula for middle grade and high school students and also offer ideas for incorporating computers into high school and college chemistry classes.

Dr. Peter E. Yankwich, senior executive officer of the National Science Foundation's Directorate for Science and Engineering Education, will be keynote speaker. His topic is "Has Tomorrow Come? A Look at Recent Progress in the Support for Science and Mathematics Education."

Permit Granted

The Greenville Police Department has granted a solicitation permit to the Salvation Army allowing fund raising from Nov. 27 until Dec. 24 for Christmas food baskets, toys and winter relief.

The department also granted a solicitation permit to the St. Peter's Women's Club allowing fund raising Saturday and Nov. 6-7 for the Carolina East Charity Bazaar and The Plaza Charity Bazaar.

Safety Project

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors is sponsoring "Safety Through Songs," a national award-winning child safety program designed to educate youngsters about how to avoid dangerous and life threatening situations.

The program, funded by the board, uses filmstrips, coloring books and accompanying cassette tapes to depict ten potentially dangerous situations for children and impart their safety messages in children's sing-along songs. Each first grade classroom throughout Pitt County as well as the media centers serving the children, have been provided with the materials.

Larceny Charges

Greenville police arrested two people on larceny charges Wednesday.

Officer R.L. Smith said Ann Paige, 23, of 1500 W. 14th St. was charged with larceny in connection with a 6:28 p.m. incident at Cato's at The Plaza mall where a purse was reported taken.

Officer M.E. Hayes said David Lynn Paige, 23, of 1500 W. Fourth St. was charged in connection with an 11:20 p.m. incident at Kroger's Save-On on Greenville Boulevard.

Special Program

Dick Flye, district community relations manager, Greenville, with Carolina Telephone recently presented the program "Never Say Yes to a Stranger" to K-3 students at Chicod School.

The program explores the ways that potentially dangerous strangers try and trick children to go places with them, a Carolina Telephone release said. The release said safety tips, along with answers to help children recognize and get away from strangers who might harm them, are discussed.

Flye is a member of Carolina Telephone's speakers bureau, The President's Club, a volunteer group of employees who speak to the public on a variety of telephone and community service issues.

For more information about scheduling a program from Carolina Telephone's Presidents Club call 1-800-4469.

UNICEF Drive

Collections for the United Nations Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF) will be made in churches, rather than door-to-door in neighborhoods in 1987, organization officials announced.

Children in churches in the community will be in costume at their church doors Sunday requesting donations, Deb Warren, chairman of the project, said. She said the money collected by Greenville volunteers will be used to benefit children all over the world.

Mrs. Warren said this is the 40th anniversary of UNICEF — that Americans have contributed more than $226 million to UNICEF-assisted projects in Asia, Africa, the Middle East and Latin America. She said UNICEF is the largest non-governmental purchaser of medicines in the world and that by 1990 it is planned for all the children of the world to be vaccinated against the major childhood diseases. Another major project is developing oral rehydration therapy projects — the administering of a simple mixture of sugar, salt and water — which has saved millions of children who would otherwise have died from diarrhea.

This year, Mrs. Warren said, is also a year to honor the late Danny Kaye, the first UNICEF Goodwill Ambassador, who died March 3. Kaye devoted much of his life to visiting Third World countries and promoting the work of UNICEF.

Proclamation

Greenville Mayor Les Garner has proclaimed Sunday through Oct. 31 as National Pastoral Care Week.

"Pastoral care enhances the inter-faith and inter-disciplinary cooperation in the health and human services field," Garner said in the proclamation.

"The department of pastoral services of Pitt County Memorial Hospital has been especially established to deal with the emotional and spiritual needs of patients in the hospital," the proclamation said.

NIE Speaker

Gigi Walters, Newspapers in Education consultant with The Daily Reflector, recently visited sixth-grade students at Wahl-Coates Elementary School. Participating classes were those of Mary Rose Stocks and Thelma Allen.

Ms. Walters discussed the history of the Reflector and taught the different parts of the newspaper. She also told them how to read an entire newspaper in a relatively short time.

The presentation culminated with the student activity, "This Is You," which utilizes the newspaper and art work.

Scottish Rite

A ladies night Scottish Rite dinner will be held Friday at 7 p.m. at the Greenville Masonic Temple.

The event is sponsored by the New Bern Scottish Rite bodies and is open to Pitt County members of Scottish Rite and their spouses.

Fatalities

A woman and a child whose identities have not been released were killed in a head-on collision Wednesday on U.S. 17 in Beaufort County.

According to a report by investigating trooper B.E. Brown of the N.C. Highway Patrol, a vehicle traveling south on U.S. 17 crossed the center line and struck a tractor-trailer vehicle head on. The accident occurred at 4:50 a.m. approximately seven miles north of Washington.

The woman, driver of the car, was pronounced dead on arrival at Beaufort County Hospital. The other fatality, a young girl, died later Wednesday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Driver of the tractor-trailer, Charlie Reddy of Jacksonville, was treated for minor injuries.

Basnight said the car carried an out-of-state license plate and that the identity of the victims will not be released until next-of-kin are notified.

Following the impact, the tractor-trailer left the road and overturned. No charges have been filed.

Free Flu Shots

The Eastern North Carolina chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association is offering free flu shots to people who have any of the 40 neuromuscular diseases covered by the association's programs.

Children and adults with neuromuscular disorders are considered at high risk for serious illness if infected by flu viruses. The MDA clinics are located at Duke Medical Center in Durham and at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, but the association will pay for the shots, even those administered by personal physicians.

For information, contact MDA, 6612 Six Forks Road, Suite 104, Raleigh, 848-8714.

Talent Search

Seven students from Bethel Elementary School have qualified and applied for participation in this year's Talent Search for mathematically and verbally talented students, sponsored by Duke University's Talent Identification Program. The program identifies seventh-grade students from a 16-state region in the south, southwest and Midwest.

Bethel Elementary students participating are Sandra Elaine Dixon, Antoinette Heath, Aaron Roberson, Angel L. Taylor, Brad White, David Wright and Robert C. Young III.

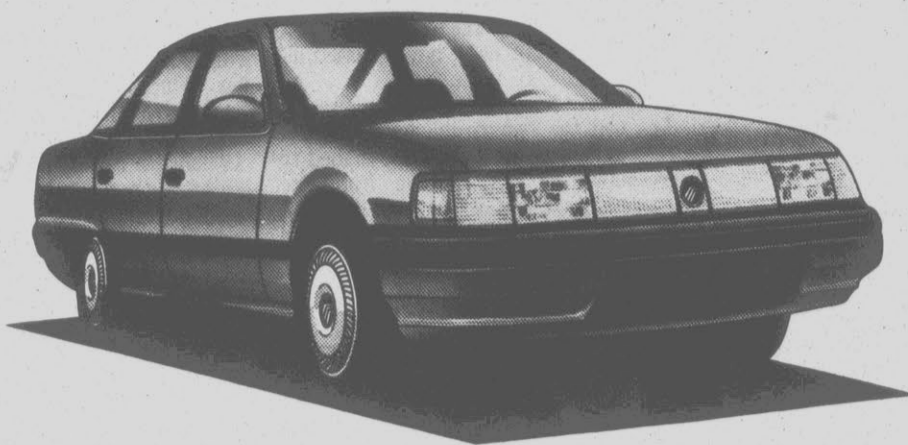

Morning Thefts

Greenville police said four thefts, including three newspaper racks, were reported to the department early today.

Officer J.A. Felton said 30 cans of beer were taken from the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 12:37 a.m., and coin operated newspaper racks, valued at $200 each and containing an estimated $15 in change each, were taken from the Phillips 66 service station on North Greene Street and from Harris Supermarket on North Memorial Drive in incidents reported at 4:15 a.m.

Officer K.L. Jones said another newspaper rack was taken from the Fuel Dock at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 5:41 a.m.

DMV Giving Up Computer Scales

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Division of Motor Vehicles says it won't spend any more money for computerized truck-weighing devices because the machines are no better than an inspector with a good set of eyes.

"We tried as best we could to utilize that equipment," Donald Stahl, director of the DMV enforcement section, said Wednesday. "They were not good enough that we felt that we were making any progress that we couldn't do by eyeballing."

DMV officials last year promoted the two portable "weigh in-motion units" as valuable weapons in the battle against overweight trucks. The division spent $71,163 for the two machines and had received an $800,000 appropriation from the General Assembly to buy more.

But Stahl said the Weighman units bought from Golden River Corp. are not accurate enough and are easy to fool. He said the machines did make good decoys for truckers.

"We were over on (U.S.) 421 near Greensboro with it one time," Stahl said. "And the weight crews did good catching people trying to avoid the weigh-in-motion equipment — better than the weigh-in-motion equipment did."

Walter R. O'Connell, vice president of Golden River Corp., said the Weighman primarily was designed to collect information for use by highway designers.

"It can also be used as screening tool for enforcement," O'Connell said. "After you develop sufficient experience with the unit, you can identify trucks that are likely to be exceeding the limit of your regulations. Maybe they're just expecting more from the equipment than the equipment will provide."

Stahl said a truck that weighs 80,000 pounds might be recorded as weighing anywhere from 72,000 to 88,000 pounds by the machines.

"That's 10 percent either way of 80,000 pounds," he said. "We want it tighter than that. We'd like to have it 5 percent."

He said the Weighman could handle only one lane of traffic at a time, so trucks had to be directed into the proper lane.

"Of course, truck drivers are not dumb," he said. "They know what's coming. They'll try to bounce that truck, you know, and hit the brakes, ... to get the truck to oscillate, go up and down." The bouncing distorts the weighing.

Stahl said some problems DMV encountered with not unique to the Weighman brand.

"Asphalt is another little problem," Stahl said. "In the summer-time, asphalt gives a lot," resulting in inaccurate measurements.

He said the Weighman units could not be used in hot weather or wet weather.

"The concrete would get up to 140 degrees and just melt the wires," he said.

A unit includes two wire loops and a quarter-inch thick rubber pad, which are taped to the roadway, and a box containing a computer.

"You can't tape in wet weather," Stahl said, because regular tape won't adhere to the concrete. Tape that will stick to a wet road sticks so well it can't be removed.

Textbook Panel Members Attempt To Keep Ranking Of Books Secret

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Members of the North Carolina Textbook Commission attempted to keep secret their individual rankings of books they will recommend to the state Board of Education.

The commission voted Wednesday to present the board its recommendations without revealing how the books were ranked. But chairman James Ellerbe insisted that the commission cannot prevent its rankings from being made available to the public.

"We are doing the public's business," Ellerbe told the members. "If you don't want your vote known, the only thing you can do is not vote."

Publicity has not been an issue in the past because neither reporters nor members of the public have attended the commission meetings.

Member John Langley, principal of Rockingham Junior High School, said revealing the ranking could influence how local school systems select books from the list.

"I believe every publisher should have free reign of the marketplace and we cannot give free reign if we prejudice it from the start," he said.

The 14-member commission is selecting which of 288 social studies, music, art and business books it will recommend that the state board adopt for use in North Carolina schools. Local school systems must choose their textbooks from the list that will be adopted by the board Nov. 6.

Books are selected through a tedious process in which each commissioner ranks the group of books being considered, giving the highest number of points to the best book and the lowest number to the worst. The individual rankings are added for each book, giving it a total score. The commission, with a few exceptions, chooses the books with the highest scores.

Out of a dozen U.S. history books, the commission chose "Triumph of the American nation," published by Harcourt, Brace and Jovanovich, because it had the most points, even though one commissioner ranked it last. The company's sociology book — ranked the best of four books by five commissioners and the worst by four others — was picked for the same reason.

Winning a coveted spot on the panel's approved list could mean hundreds of thousands of dollars to a publisher. North Carolina will pay for about $22 million in new and replacement textbooks this year, said Ellerbe, superintendent of the Johnston County school system.

Wednesday's debate ranged from the issue of teaching economics in tandem with social studies all the way to geopolitics.

"Many times Canada and Latin America were just tossed in there at the end," commission member Alexander Erwin complained about a proposed fifth-grade text, McGraw-Hill's "U.S.: Our Nation and Neighbors."

And Sandra Scott, a teacher from Goldsboro, was not entirely happy with a sixth-grade nominee, Silver, Burdett's "Eastern Hemisphere — Yesterday and Today."

"The only complaint I had about Silver, Burdett was that it included a lot of Africa, which infringes on the 7th-grade curriculum," she said.

"Eastern Hemisphere" eventually made the list because — like most of the other winning texts — it was deemed thorough, well-written, engaging and lacking sexual or racial bias. It also touched on most of the subjects required by the state's Basic Education Plan. Without that, a book was doomed. No consideration was given to price.

Each panel member relied on teams of educators to review samples of each book. Those opinions — about 1,500 in all — helped shape the results.

A big winner Wednesday was Scott, Foresman and Co., which saw several books make the list, including the No. 1 picks for grades six ("Europe and the Soviet Union") and seven ("Eastern Hemisphere: Europe, Asia, Africa and Oceania").

Richard Peterson, senior vice president of Scott, Foresman, would not estimate what that will mean in dollar terms for the Glenview, Ill., company, but he did sound gleeful when told of the results.

CP&L Cuts 200 Jobs

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. said Wednesday it would eliminate just over 200 jobs, of which fewer than 50 currently are filled.

The Raleigh-based electric utility, which employs 9,400 people in North Carolina and South Carolina, said it would try to find other jobs in the company for those whose jobs will be cut.

The cuts will come in the wake of CP&L's completion and startup of its $3.8 billion Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant in Wake County.

"Although it sometimes requires that difficult decisions be made, the company strives to maintain efficient and productive staffing levels, and we will from time to time need to re-evaluate and adjust our personnel inventory as necessary and appropriate," Cecil L. Goodnight, the company's vice president for employee relations, said in a memo distributed to employees Wednesday.

Helms Wages Verbal, But Unsuccessful, Battle

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The tradition of senatorial courtesy fell by the wayside in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee when one senator warned: "If you railroad me, Mr. Chairman, you'll regret it."
Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who made the remark to Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., also pointedly reminded a fellow Republican that he had defeated him to become the panel's ranking GOP member.
A third lawmaker tried to cut off the verbal fireworks Wednesday, declaring that the committee should not be exposing its internal divisions in public.
At issue was an attempt by Helms to block action on an ambassadorial nomination that had languished for most of this year.

In the end, the committee voted 11-3 to recommend that the Senate approve the nomination of Foreign Service veteran Richard Noyes Viets to be U.S. ambassador to Portugal.
But it did so under circumstances so complicated that Helms — who walked out of the committee room before the final vote — may challenge the validity of the action.
Helms has long and vigorously objected to the nomination of Viets, 56, who previously served as U.S. ambassador to Jordan and Tanzania.
His grounds: grievances filed against Viets by three junior diplomats and allegations that he may not have paid state and district taxes in U.S. areas in which he may have had a legal residence.

Helms contended that the State Department is engaged in a "cover-up" because it has declined, on privacy grounds, to give him access to Viets' full personnel files.

"Mr. Viets is a totally unsatisfactory diplomat," Helms said.
When Pell said that it was important to fill the vacancy and "get on with the nation's business," Helms replied with a single word — "Bull!"
Under the rules, Senate committees were required to end their morning business meetings by 11 a.m.
The clock was running and senators accused Helms of filibustering to prevent action before that hour arrived.
Helms tried to table the nomination but was defeated 11-5. He then launched into a speech, shouting over Pell's attempts to cut him off.

Helms insisted he had the floor and could not be stopped, shouting, "You cannot take the floor away from me."

"If you railroad me, Mr. Chairman, you'll regret it," Helms said.
Pell held his ground.
"It's been more than a year; Mr. Viets deserves a vote," the chairman said.
"No he doesn't," Helms replied.
Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., the former committee chairman, attempted to intervene.
"You're no longer the ranking member," said Helms, who defeated Lugar for that post at the opening of the 100th Congress.
Helms pleaded for other senators to leave the room with him, to deny the panel the necessary quorum to do business.

No one budged. But Sen. Frank

Murkowski, R-Alaska, asked for a brief recess.
"To attempt to do our internal laundry in public is uncomfortable and embarrassing," he said.
The time was 10:59 and Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., moved that the nomination be approved and voting began.
Under the Senate rules, once voting begins it can continue until the balloting is concluded.
Helms walked out.
At 11:03 a.m. the committee sent the nomination to the Senate floor where Helms is expected to continue his delaying tactics.

Once Farm-Only Grange Is Now Taking Members From All Areas

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The state Grange was once a farm-rooted society with monthly meetings, secret passwords and ritual marches, but Grange officials say all that is changing now.
The growing Grange membership includes secretaries, merchants and carpenters attracted by the society's Blue Cross-Blue Shield group insurance plan. But they are not interested in the meetings and community service projects of the past.
"We've gotten away from the requirements that strictly you had to be raised in agriculture," Wayne Mangum, a retired agriculture teacher in Union County, said. "You had to be connected with the soil to be a Grange member. Now we have all walks of life."
Mangum is secretary-treasurer of the 62-member Wesley Chapel Grange that has added 16 members in the past four months but hasn't met in six years.
He earned the Grange's highest level — the seventh degree — 15 years ago, and he misses the gatekeepers, the secret passwords, the ritual marches and the crop talks of the past. Letter-writing efforts to resurrect interest in meetings have failed.

Randy Settle was 12 when he joined the Boy Scout troop that North Carolina's oldest Grange sponsored at Little Mountain near Elkin.
That was 30 years ago. Now Settle's sons belong to the same troop, but Settle no longer farms full-time — and the 58-year-old Grange no longer holds monthly meetings.
"Mainly, my work is with the youth program," Settle says. "Most of our meetings are around the camp fire. We're still involved in the community. As far as meeting regularly like we used to, we don't."
The society, with its Blue Cross-Blue Shield group insurance plan, has 20,000 N.C. members — up 1,000 since last year and more than double 10 years ago.
Some Granges, including several in the Greensboro area, remain active.
St. John's in Cabarrus County draws about a third of its 100 members to monthly meetings at St.

John's Lutheran Church. Members will hold a cholesterol screening Monday.
"It's a family organization," says St. John's member Ray Cline, the state Grange's chaplain who will lead Sunday's worship at Lake Junaluska when the Grange holds its 59th annual meeting. "They've always cared about schools and roads and things that concern our people in the rural areas here."
State Grange Master Robert Caldwell of Greensboro says a new Grange in Avery County is helping residents get roads and industries.
He says the N.C. Grange drew about 100 youths to its summer camp near Hanging Rock and took more than 30 on a bus trip to Washington that included lunch with congressmen.
Caldwell says he's working hard in places like Union County to revive the Grange — and, with farm conditions improving, he expects some success.
"They really are looking for some people to give fresh leadership down there," Caldwell says. "They need some young folks down there to come out. I think you have to have a local spark plug to make an organization go."

MOUNT PLEASANT, N.C. (AP) — An unemployed Cabarrus County man whose electricity had been cut off by a utility company for non-payment of a $200 bill was electrocuted as he tried to restore the power with a long metal pole.
Jimmy Dean Cromer, 29, of Mount Pleasant had climbed atop a pile of barrels, boxes and stools late Tuesday night with a 12-foot metal pole. As he used the pole to try to turn on a transformer outside his mobile home, he touched a wire carrying 7,200 volts, utility officials said.
He was pronounced dead on arrival at Cabarrus Memorial Hospital early Wednesday morning, Cabarrus Sheriff Robert Canaday said.

GAO Challenge's Army's Security For Stinger Missile, Other Munitions

By JAMES HANNAH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Inaccurate inventories and poor security make some Army munitions, including the deadly Stinger anti-aircraft missiles, highly vulnerable to theft or diversion, according to a congressional report.

The General Accounting Office study released Wednesday also said some sensitive U.S. missiles stored in Europe are inadequately protected and inventoried by the Army, which took nearly a year to locate 24 of the shoulder-fired Stinger missiles in its arsenal.

"Our review disclosed numerous instances where physical security was inadequate to afford proper protection," the GAO said. "The physical security deficiencies applied not only to repair parts, but also to sensitive missiles which could be targets for theft by terrorists and other dissident groups." The report cited inadequate storage facilities, broken detection devices, poorly equipped and trained guards, and poor control over sensitive munitions.

The report was based in part on visits to eight Army battalions in Germany. At four sites, missiles were stored in structures that did not meet security requirements, the GAO said.

The report said Stinger missiles were stored in lightweight metal sheds stenciled with the word "Stinger" and that anti-tank rockets were kept in sheds that had to be propped shut because of broken locks. In addition, Dragon and TOW missiles were stored in tractor-trailers and on open pads in plain view.

"The most serious concern we have has to do with the debilitation of readiness and the physical danger posed to Americans and allies by terrorists and others," said Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., who released the study along with Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio.

Glenn, chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, said he plans to hold hearings on the issue next week.

The GAO said that in September 1986, the U.S. Army Missile Command requested that 24 Stingers in Europe — identified by individual serial numbers — be located by October 1986 so they could be test fired. However, it was not until the following August that all of the missiles were located.

And Glenn said three of those Stingers had been transferred to a classified program.

"A very logical follow-on question is who — indeed even what nationality — is now in possession of those three missiles," Glenn said. "We don't have any tracking to ensure that they're even still in friendly hands."

Glenn said it is "very disturbing" that control was lax with the Stingers, the Army's most potent shoulder-fired anti-aircraft missile.

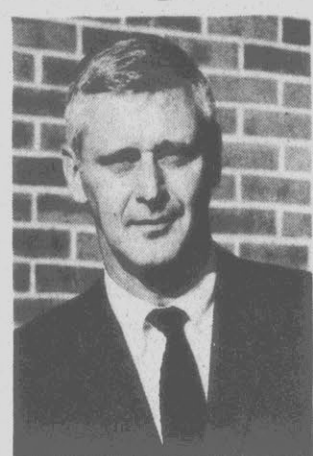

Army spokesman Maj. Philip Soucy said that while some storage facilities may not appear to be first-rate, no missiles are missing from the U.S. arsenal.

"We weren't missing any missiles, and it wasn't an accident that we weren't missing any missiles," Soucy said. "You're not going to walk up to the fence, stick your hand through and walk away with a Stinger missile. We have policies and procedures in effect, and we're going to make them better."

Soucy said it took so long to locate the 24 Stingers because the Army stores the missiles by lot numbers instead of serial numbers.

"That does not mean that we have lost control of our missiles," he said.

JOSEPH BRODSKY

Soviet Poet Wins Nobel In Literature

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Russian poet Joseph Brodsky, a former Arctic labor camp inmate who left his homeland for life in the United States, won the Nobel Prize in literature today.

The Swedish Academy cited Brodsky's writing for its "great breadth in time and space." It called his work "rich and intensely vital."

Brodsky, 47, was one of the youngest laureates ever awarded the prestigious prize. He was forced to leave the Soviet Union in 1972 and now lives in New York.

Brodsky was reported visiting London. The poet underwent open-heart surgery in 1979, and British friends said he was in frail health.

Born to a Jewish family in Leningrad in 1940, Brodsky's work has been translated into more than a dozen languages. He attended school until age 15, then worked in factories and at sea as a shipboard stoker.

During those years he studied philosophy and history of religion on his own, making contacts in Leningrad with literary circles.

In the 1960s he made an intensive study of the Bible.

He began to write poetry in 1958. His work was read at clandestine literary meetings and spread in underground publications during the 1960s.

The academy said in its announcement that "all literature really is about what time does to people, Brodsky has said, thus indicating a main theme in his writing."

"Parting, becoming deformed, growing old, dying are the work of time. Poetry helps us, gives us basically the only possibility of withstanding the pressure of existence," the statement said.

Brodsky was arrested in 1964 and sentenced to five years hard labor for "parasitism" at a camp north of the Arctic Circle. While there, his first poems were published in the West, leading to pressure on Moscow for his release.

Eighteen months after his trial, he was allowed to return to Leningrad where he continued writing.

"In 1972 he was forced to leave his native land," the Academy said.

Brodsky's change of environment to the United States "naturally involved a severe strain for the poet," the announcement said.

The academy is a 300-year-old institution established to serve as a watchdog over the Swedish language.

Reagan Opposes Foreign Aid Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying the United States must accept the sometimes thankless task of spreading money around the world to protect its interests, is arguing that the foreign aid budget envisioned by Congress is dangerously low.

"Congress throws money at its own priorities but ignores the priorities and the commitments this nation has to help build our national security," Reagan told a private foreign aid lobbying group Wednesday.

"When it comes to special interests, too often Congress is like Ado Annie in 'Oklahoma,'" he said. It "can't say no."

Reagan, addressing several dozen members of The Citizens Network for Foreign Affairs, a private lobbying organization, complained that congressional committees had cut his fiscal 1988 proposals for foreign economic and security assistance by about 15 percent.

"I submitted a rock-bottom request that would still allow us to undo some of the harm caused by cuts in previous years and to return to a level of funding that will not put our security at risk," he said. "But now the Congress is cutting again."

"For 42 years, mankind has not seen the likes of the world wars that in the first half of this century tore civilization apart," Reagan said. He said "general peace" has come about because "America has been willing to shoulder the responsibilities of leadership."

Using an argument that Secretary of State George P. Shultz has been making frequently, the president said: "Like it or not, we are the leader of the free world, and that is not a role we asked for. It's a role that was thrust upon us by history and by the hopes of those who aspire to freedom throughout the world."

"We are a global power, with global interests and global responsibilities. We can ignore, but we cannot escape this basic truth, and any retreat from our responsibilities endangers both our national ideals and our national interests."

Little Girl Survives Crash That Killed 3

WALTON, Ore. (AP) — A whimpering 3-year-old was found buckled in her seat, shielded by a body, in the wreckage of small plane that crashed in heavy fog, killing her father, grandmother and another adult, officials said.

The girl, Aubrey Holst, was in serious condition at Sacred Heart Hospital in Eugene with broken arms, spinal bruises and possible internal injuries after the Cessna 180 went down in heavily wooded coastal mountains Wednesday.

Lane County Sheriff Dave Burks called the child's survival "a small miracle."

Killed were her father, the pilot, Carson Holst, 32; his mother, Anna "Effie" Holst, 63, both of Oakridge, and Darlinda Sue Taylor, 27, of Aguila, Ariz., whose relationship to the others was not immediately known.

Jerry Eames of the Oregon Aeronautics Division in Salem said the plane left Oakridge at 9 a.m. for Florence. A search began after it failed to arrive as scheduled.

Authorities picked up a signal from an emergency locator transmitter on the downed plane, and a search helicopter found the wreckage about 4 p.m., said Sue Cole, spokeswoman for the sheriff's department.

Burks said the plane had struck a tree atop a ridge and came to rest on its right side. The child was found buckled in on the left side and one of the adults was shielding her, officials said.

It took rescuers nearly an hour to carry her up a steep slope to a road about 600 yards from the crash site, 25 miles west of Eugene. She was taken by helicopter to the hospital.

Nancy Going Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who has visited his wife, Nancy, daily since she was hospitalized for breast cancer surgery last week, is taking her home to the White House.

An elated president announced on Wednesday that he had "the most important day's news" — that he was to go to Bethesda Naval Medical Center today to "pick up Nancy."

Reagan was barraged with questions about the budget and turmoil in the stock market, but he brushed most aside until he could make his announcement about his wife.

"That's not as happy as bringing her home," he said of the rebound in the stricken stock market.

The first lady, following the removal of her cancerous left breast on Saturday, has been given a clean bill of health and has been told she has an "excellent" chance for a complete recovery because the malignancy had not spread.

Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, Elaine Crispin, described the first lady as anxious to return home and to write of her hospital experiences in her diary.

Among the get-well missives was a wicker basket full of flowers from the first lady of the Soviet Union, Raisa Gorbachev, that arrived Wednesday.

Mrs. Crispin said Mrs. Gorbachev sent "a lovely basket of assorted flowers, irises, carnations, all different colors."

The two first ladies met during their husbands' initial summit in Geneva in 1985.

As they have since she entered the suburban Washington hospital, the president and Mrs. Reagan on Wednesday shared a few hours in the evening and dinner in her suite. They dined on lamb chops, snow peas, parsnip potatoes, green salad and poached fruit, Mrs. Crispin said.

Near-Collision Reports Increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 50 percent increase in the number of near-collision reports for commercial aircraft is causing concern among some aviation safety experts, but the Federal Aviation Administration maintains the statistics do not mean greater risk to air travelers.

During the first nine months of the year, the number of pilot reports on near-collisions involving at least one commercial aircraft jumped almost 50 percent over the same period last year, the FAA said Wednesday. The 383 reports filed with the agency during the January-September period were 43 more than in all of 1986.

The FAA defines a near-collision as planes passing within 500 feet of each other, although reports by pilots of ten involve greater distances.

FAA Administrator Allan McArdor said in an interview that the higher number of close calls is of concern to the agency, but that the figures should not be interpreted as a reduction in aviation safety.

"Taken by themselves (they) are not good indicators of exposure to risk in the national air system," McArdor insisted, adding that the number of reports "rising or falling is not in itself very meaningful."

Other safety experts disagreed.

Jim Burnett, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, said he was worried about the higher figures and said they reflect "a major increase in the risk" of flying.

"If you look at total near mid-air collisions, they continued through the summer at very high levels. ... Somehow we're going to have to get a handle on that," Burnett said in an interview. "The mid-air collision numbers certainly represent, in my view, the increased risk of mid-air collisions that we've been subject to over this past summer."

The NTSB chairman raised strong concerns about air safety last spring, suggesting that the FAA was allowing too much traffic into the air in some areas of the country.

John O'Brien, a safety specialist for the Air Line Pilots Association, said the statistics support pilot concerns about the increasing threat of a aerial collisions. "It just points to an overall problem in the system of too many airplanes being handled by antiquated equipment and procedures by too few people."

During the first nine months of the year, the FAA received 857 near-collision reports, or an increase of 37 percent over the 1986, involving all kinds of aircraft. The number of reports that involved at least one commercial aircraft increased even more sharply during the nine-month period from 258 last year to 383 this year, up 48 percent.

During the busy summer months of June through August there were 159 reports of close calls involving at least one commercial plane, an increase of 50 percent over the summer of 1986. The sharpest increase, 69 percent, came in August when there were nearly two such incidents reported a day, according to the FAA figures.

Frozen Body Of Boy Found

MINDEN, La. (AP) — The frozen body of a 7-year-old boy was found on a bedroom closet shelf in his family's mobile home, apparently after being stored for a week in the household freezer, sheriff's deputies said.

Bruce Mims, 33, the father of Ketrich Mims, was booked Wednesday on a murder charge and his wife Patricia, 28, was booked as an accessory to murder, Webster Parish deputies said.

The child, a mentally retarded victim of Down's syndrome, weighed only 25 pounds and was incapable of speech or movement or even lifting his head, said Chief Deputy Tommy Kemp.

District Attorney Henry Brown said both parents denied harming the child.

Jimmy Batten, an investigator for Brown, said Mrs. Mims reported the child missing Oct. 15.

CAR TALK

From Joe Cullipher Chrysler
Plymouth, Dodge, Peugeot

By James Phillips

LOOK OUT BEHIND!

I can't think of a more harrowing feeling than having to come to a complete stop on a highway because of bunched up traffic and peering through the rear view mirror hoping that the car behind you stops in time also.

You can take some of the danger out of this situation by warning your followers. If you approach a group of bunched up traffic assume that something has happened, like an accident, and that you'll soon have to stop. Tap your brakes lightly three or four times as a warning to cars behind. Should you have to crawl, turn on your emergency flashers to reinforce the warning. I would also recommend a waving arm signal to catch the driver's eye.

Leave a substantial gap between you and the car ahead. If the worst happens and you are going to be rear-ended, the extra cushion will leave you room to lurch ahead without doing additional damage. If you can see a rear-end collision coming in the mirror and the shoulder is clear, pull over out of the way as soon as possible.

PARIS — The first person on the runway for the Jean-Paul Gaultier show was a zaitig woman in a big skirt and peasant blouse playing folk songs on the accordion. As she made her way slowly toward the photographers, fast-stepping models in jackets (which are actually bodysuits), tights and high-heeled high-tops passed her by. It was Gaultier's way of saying that the much-touted folkloric styles of other designers, particularly Christian Lacroix, are out of step and out of tune.

While Lacroix is the new hero on this very competitive turf, his froufrou party clothes are for a very special, very small audience.

The other Paris collections this fall are largely a mix of old and new, ethnic and spare, masculine and feminine. And no one does this counterpoint better than Gaultier, who places lace aprons over pin-stripe suits, attaches scarfs on shoulderless jackets and puts lace edges on stretch leggings.

Karl Lagerfeld stirs up another spicy mix. He's clearly influenced by the paintings of the 18th-century artist Fragonard, whose work is featured in an exhibition that opened last month at the Grand Palais. Lagerfeld calls some of his styles — like the stand-away necklines (filled in with flowers) or boned bustiers and panniers — "Fragments of Fragonard."

But his long pouf skirts, striped gauntlets and striped shoes move two centuries into modern times. In fact, many of these have miniskirts underneath. He's also big on the petticoated bell-shaped skirt of other eras, but Lagerfeld's are a mix of zany prints — like Polaroid portraits of the model Marpessa — and they break ties with any earlier time.

Lagerfeld also updates some of the style he introduced while he was at Chloe — such as the navy lingerie dresses with lace trim. "The collection looked very Chloe, which is a compliment," said Saks-Jandel's Ernie Marx, who found Lagerfeld "back in top form."

There are hints of the Lagerfeld collection in his designs for Chanel. But the anchor for the Chanel look is, of course, the Chanel jacket — brightly colored this season. Even Chanel's signature white camellia shows up dipped in color in this collection. If the basic jacket design remains sacred, however, Lagerfeld goes wild with its complementary skirts and slacks. The traditional Chanel skirt, hemmed just below the knee, was abandoned several seasons back and the new length skirt is short, short, short — like a mini square dance skirt, tiered and full — a surprising contrast to the tailored jackets. On the occasional long skirt, buttons were left open or the side deeply slitted to show a lot of leg.

For those who find most of the Chanel skirts too short and floppy, Chanel's wide or straight-leg pants may just be the answer, even for evening. Most revealing of all at Chanel are the designs in lace. Lagerfeld's love affair with lace began at Chanel seasons back, but now this ladylike fabric is given a modern look. Over the shortest lace skirts he pairs a long satin jacket, and with lace knickers he puts a leather jacket. Many of the models wore or carried beautiful long lace stoles.

The two buzzwords for next spring: color and short. They are handled impressively by Claude Montana, whose brilliantly colored and very brief styles, often shown with short shorts, will have one of the biggest impacts for spring. He uses citrus colors, acid colors, tomato, spinach and carrot colors. There is some navy, but remarkably little black.

Like Lagerfeld, Montana likes sculptural clothes this season that seem to fall off the shoulders and swirl around and drape away from the body rather than being plastered against it. In another period we called these standaway styles "crumbcatchers." Montana says simply that he is fascinated with necklines.

That's obvious, too, because there is very little left to the skirt to distract him. And even more than other designers, Montana is showing shorts for next spring. They, too, often stand away from the body, the hems stiffened with deep quilted ribbing to get this effect.

Aside from short clothes and shorts themselves, Montana also offers wide-leg pants, a popular theme with many designers not only in Paris, but also in Milan and London over the past two weeks. Chanel and Gaultier, too, liked wide-leg pants, and Sonia Rykiel offered pants with deep, soft pleats down the outside of the leg as well as narrow styles. Many of the pants are not full-length but rather "floodwater" style, cut off above the ankle.

One of the less fortunate trends of the season is the return to the splashy, spectacle fashion show. Thierry Mugler scheduled two in the African art museum on the outskirts of Paris, one amid such tangled logistics it started two hours late. Although there are excellent suits in the collection, it was difficult not to be distracted by the flamboyant costumery, the sedated tiger cub, piles of jewelry and wild hair styles — all to inspire an African mood for the clothes. Grace Jones, who was in the front row with designer Azzedine Alaia, madly applauded the most ingenious of all the designs, the leathers worked to look like tribal body scars or like a crocodile pattern on the models' bodies.

There may have been more flesh showing at the Mugler show than at the Lido that night, peeking through sheer fabric and, in one sequence, around little bikini diapers. In fact, in the opening scene, which Mugler called "the ideal couple," two models, male and female, appeared on a darkened stage in what seemed to be total nudity. An interesting twist for a designer in the business of selling clothes.

Michael Taylor and his bride, Angela, both of Greenville, went to San Francisco and Los Angeles following their June 6 wedding. Both wanted to attend a "live" television show.

"After arriving in California, we obtained information through our hotel management, finding out where NBC and CBS studios were located. We went to CBS that morning to get tickets for the afternoon show and were given standby tickets to attend The Price Is Right," said Taylor.

"We went back during the afternoon and waited in line about two hours. After each person was interviewed we were then seated. Contestants are selected based on interviews, but are not told — selection is a total surprise. I was the second person called — names are shown on cue cards. When my name was shown, I just stared. Angela said, 'Go on down.' I first guessed the price of a television, which entitled me to go on stage. I rolled dice to win a car, but I was one off," Taylor said.

"The entire experience was so fast that I did not have time to think. After I was off-stage, I filled out a form and then got nervous," he said.

"Seeing how they actually do a show was a different experience. Everyone was very nice and they really involve the audience in the show," he said.

Taylor works at Burroughs Wellcome and his wife is associated with Waldrop Acres Daycare Center. The show is scheduled to be broadcast on WNCT-TV, Channel 9, on Nov. 17.

Reader Should Re-Evaluate Future

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am faced with a very upsetting situation. I am 29 and single. "W" is 47 and divorced. We have been living together for a year and a half. Everyone knows we are a couple and are as good as married. "W" has five children. His oldest daughter is going to be married in the Mormon Temple. "W" is Catholic and cannot attend the wedding, but his ex-wife and children will be there. After the wedding, he and his "ex" are having a reception outside of the temple. There will be wedding pictures taken and a regular party for their friends and relatives.

"W" does not want to take me to this reception. He says I do not belong there. We have had many arguments over this. Meanwhile, he says he loves me and hopes to marry me someday, so I can't understand his thinking.

I feel, as his future wife, I belong with him at his daughter's wedding reception. Am I wrong? — UPSET IN L.A.

DEAR ABBY: Yes. Although you are living together and you consider this arrangement "as good as married," "W" does not. If he doesn't want you there, stop arguing and accept the fact that he thinks you don't belong there. You would be wise to re-evaluate your future with this man. He considers you good enough to live with, but not good enough to participate in a family celebration.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to marry a man who was married and divorced. (So was I.) I am 33 and Walter (not his real name) is 40. He's a lovely guy, but he has a fault that's serious enough for me to wonder if I should go through with this marriage.

He has asked me to repeat at least 100 times every detail of my sex experiences with the only two men in my life I have ever gone to bed with. The first was a man I was engaged to marry (after we went together for five years). We broke up when he confessed that he was bisexual and his psychologist told him to choose between me and the man he had been seeing. I lost.

The other man was my ex-husband. There wasn't much to tell because we were married less than a year and dated only a few months. I am sick to death of repeating my experiences, but Walter insists that he has to know everything. When I tell him there is nothing more to tell, he accuses me of lying.

He has told me about all the girls in his life, and there were many. I didn't ask him and really didn't care to know, but he went on and on, telling me in detail about Imogene, Fredericka, Doreen, Holly, etc.

My minister advised me to refuse to talk about anything that makes me uncomfortable, but Walter won't take no for an answer.

What should I do? — SICK OF TALKING

DEAR SICK: Walter appears to have a sick preoccupation with your past, and it's not going to get any better unless he gets help. I would not marry a man who had so little respect for my feelings and so little confidence in my integrity.

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell a very nice woman you work with that she has a very bad body odor? — SOMEONE IN KENT, WASH.

DEAR SOMEONE: Tell her privately — in a kind, gentle and caring manner. And soon. You will be doing her a kindness. —

DEAR ABBY: I, too, wish there had been a booklet like "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know" when my children were growing up. My daughter married (for the first time) at 16. It was a bad mistake. My son got his girlfriend pregnant, and faced up to his responsibility and married her. They were both barely 17 at the time.

By the way, I also want to thank you for your answer to that reader who asked if it was too late to fulfill his lifelong dream to become a lawyer at 70. You said, "It's too late to fulfill your dream only if you think it is."

I am a widow, age 73, and have a burning desire to become a poet. I write many poems but have never had enough courage to send any of them to a publisher. Now, I think I will, thanks to you. — GREAT-GRANDMOTHER IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR GREAT-GRANDMOTHER: You already are a poet, but as yet, an unpublished one.

Continue to write, and send your poetry to the editors of the publications that contain your kind of poetry. And don't be discouraged by rejection. If you knock on enough doors, one is bound to open eventually. Good luck.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Couple Marries Saturday

MRS. SPAIN

Dianne Renee Oakley and Gregory Brooks Spain of Greenville were united in marriage Saturday in a 7 p.m. ceremony in Mt. Pleasant Christian Church. Don McKinney officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Music was provided by Barbara Simpson, pianist, along with Jerry Simpson and Anita Little, soloists.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Douglas Oakley of Greenville, and Louise M. Spain of Greenville of Route 6, Greenville, and the late Russell C. Spain Sr.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a wedding gown of satin with lace and pearls. The Queen Anne neckline was accented by Venise lace. The fitted bodice had Elizabethan sleeves, accented by chantilly lace and satin ribbon. The bodice was accented by Venise lace appliques and pearls extended to the waist. The full skirt was accented by chantilly lace and satin ribbons which encircled the hem and chapel length train. The headpiece, hand-made by the bride, was chapel length illusion encircled with chantilly lace and attached to a cap of silk roses and pearls. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white and pink roses accented with white orchids, baby's breath, greenery and lace streamers tied with love knots.

Trudy B. Oakley of Greenville served as her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Christy A. Oakley of Greenville, sister of the bride, Pamela M. Clark of Blounts Creek, cousin of the bride, Nancy S. Elks of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, and Donna H. Spain of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bridegroom. The flower girl was Kendall A. Jennings of Winterville, cousin of the bride.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore tea-length gowns of dusty rose taffeta. The butterfly sleeves were accented with close fitting bodices.

Gray satin ribbons highlighted the waistlines of the dirndl skirts. They wore halos of pink daisies and baby's breath accented with a lace and satin bow. They carried fans of white bridal lace with pink roses, daisies, baby's breath, greenery and lace and satin streamers.

The flower girl wore a tea length dress of dusty rose taffeta with a gathered skirt and short sleeves. The collar was of hand-crocheted lace.

Her halo was identical to that of the bridesmaids'. She carried a basket of roses and daisies accented with baby's breath.

F.A. McLawhorn served as his grandson's best man. Ushers were Russell C. Spain Jr. and Allen O. Spain, both of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom, Ray Elks of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Eric C. Garris of Greenville.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the fellowship hall and was given by the parents of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University School of Nursing and the bridegroom is presently enrolled at Pitt Community College.

The bride is a registered nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the bridegroom is a plumber with Allen Spain Plumbing Co.

After a wedding trip to an unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

To make cleaning up easier, spray a saucepan with a vegetable oil spray before scalding milk or cooking hot cereal.

Summer Cold Causes Misery

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Look at me. I'm too sick to answer the door or go to the doctor. I'm too well to stay in my nightgown all day or not prepare dinner.

I'm ugly. My hair is smashed to one side and my cowlick is exploding. My eyes are dull and lifeless and my nose could stop freeway traffic. I look like someone I've seen before. I can't remember who. Every time I turn on TV, that fool of a woman is saying, "Don't blame me for being beautiful," and then towels and teases 15 pounds of hair. She is getting on my nerves.

I do feel thin. Probably dropped 10 pounds or so. I should. I haven't eaten human in three weeks. Maybe I'll get on the scale. No! I've gained two pounds. Wouldn't you think in a world where a woman can make a career out of selling vowels, they could make an antibiotic that is low in calories!

It wouldn't hurt some of the people I work with to at least call. I can't believe that I called in yesterday and the operator asked me to spell my name. I'd like to cough on their bagels and cream cheese, that's what I'd like to do.

I JUST REMEMBERED WHO I LOOK LIKE. MY PASSPORT PICTURE!

All of this is my fault. I was the one who lusted for a little time off from the routine. I didn't want some big, major malady. Just a little insignificant thing that might buy me a few days in my bathrobe in front of the TV set with a tray and a little sympathy from people. Instead, I get some common, little, unimpressive thing that everyone in the country has. People who go through the Betty Ford Clinic get more respect than I do. What's the matter, Oprah, isn't three weeks of coughing, sneezing, blowing, sweating and chilling dramatic enough for you?

I'm cold again. Where's the afghan I made? Who am I kidding? The kids will use it for a dog bed or wrap their car jack in it to keep their trunk from getting dirty. I've always known that within 24 hours after I'm gone, my "treasures" will be offered at a colossal garage sale for a pittance. "You want this little glass turtle? (Steuben) Here, catch!" "Thirty-five cents for this Hermes scarf? It's yours and I'll throw in this tea set that belonged to my great-grandmother."

At least I've learned a lot from this experience. I've learned to be compassionate. The next time someone says, "My nose is stuffy, my eyes feel like round spinning razor blades when I blink, my breathing is labored, my head aches and my body is wracked with pain," I will never again say, "Clear the table and you'll forget it's there."

These are my last days on earth and I'm watching a rerun of Laverne putting cooking oil all over Shirley's body. What an end to a promising career.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Market .50 to .75 higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 47.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 46.50; Wilson 46.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 43.00; Wallace 43.00; Spivey's Corner 43.00; Rowland 43.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 37.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed for a final weighted average. The market is steady and the live supply is barely adequate to adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,966,000, compared to 1,974,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 cent lower at mostly 1.79-1.98 in East and mostly 1.95-2.08 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly steady at mostly 5.10-5.25 1/4 in East and mostly 4.95-5.10 in the Piedmont; wheat 2.62-2.72; new crop soybeans 4.90-5.35. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1 percent lower and ranged from 101 to 108 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a broad-based retreat in early trading today as panic selling re-emerged, wiping out much of the record gains posted in the previous session.

By 10:15 a.m. EDT, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials had fallen 108 points to 1,919.85. The broader market also stumbled badly, and sell orders were swamping the New York Stock Exchange, the country's largest securities market.

24,404.45. One day earlier, the average had a record single-day gain of more than 2,000 points.

The Dow Jones industrial average ended Wednesday more than halfway back from Monday's historic 508-point collapse, and the value of all U.S. stocks rose $183 billion.

The index of blue-chip stocks achieved a second consecutive record point gain as it climbed 186.84 points to 2,027.85. The index had risen 102.27 points in the previous session.

The Dow industrials' plunge Monday wiped out 22.6 percent of the index's value — a bigger one-day decline than during the Crash of 1929.

With Three-Run Homer

Lawless Ignites Card Rally

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals stole Minnesota's big weapon, and the World Series stood even. It was, indeed, a Lawless act.

The Cardinals used flashy defense and speed on the bases — their trademarks — to beat the Twins 7-2 Wednesday night.

They also got a three-run homer from Tom Lawless, who had only 25 at-bats during the season, to ignite a six-run fourth inning, and two RBI from Jim Lindeman to even the World Series at two games apiece.

The Twins, who have hit 13 homers in nine postseason games this year, had used big fourth innings to win the first two games at home, 10-1 and 8-4. This was a role reversal not only of timing, but of method. The homer by Lawless, only the second of his major league career, was the first in this Series by the Cardinals.

Lawless, playing third base for the injured Terry Pendleton, also turned in one of three run-saving defensive plays in the fifth inning as Minnesota tried, but failed, to get back into the game. The other fancy defensive work was done by in the Wizard himself, shortstop Ozzie Smith, and left fielder Vince Coleman.

Lindeman, playing for injured first baseman Jack Clark, singled in runs in the third and fourth innings and now has four hits in two Series starts. He is platooned at first base against left-handed pitchers, such as the Twins' Game 4 starter, Frank Viola.

"You always have to figure you've got a chance," said Bob Forsch, who got his first Series victory in four decisions in relief of starter Greg Mathews. "Otherwise, it's going to be a long season. With some of the injuries we've had, if you're not an optimist, you could get a real bad attitude, and we don't have a bad attitude. That's what's so great when a guy like Lawless comes along with a home run."

Tonight, the Twins will start Bert Blyleven against Danny Cox in a rematch of Game 2.

"We didn't expect them to throw in the towel," Twins Manager Tom Kelly said.

On a second straight frigid night at Busch Stadium, the Twins took a 1-0 lead. It came on Greg Gagne's leadoff homer in the third. Lindeman's RBI single in the bottom half of the inning tied it, and the Cardinals chased Viola in the fourth inning.

Viola, who pitched eight innings and allowed just one run on five hits in Game 1, had walked his first batter in 10 innings in the third. Then, leading off the fourth, he walked Tony Pena. Jose Oquendo's single sent Pena to third, bringing up Lawless, the No. 8 hitter.

Lawless' only other major league homer had come in 1984 with Cincinnati. His second came on an 0-1 pitch from Viola and put the Cardinals ahead for good. Lawless flipped his bat toward the St. Louis dugout and took off on a slow, luxurious home run trot.

"I knew I hit it right on the button," Lawless said. "But I also knew this was a big ballpark. I just stood and watched it and I said 'Holy Cow!' to myself. ... I knew I hit it good, but I didn't know it was going out right away. I wasn't running because I figured it was either going to be a sacrifice fly or a home run."

"From the fifth inning on, I wanted to get the game over so I could relish the moment," Lawless said.

One out later, the Cardinals were at it again. Coleman walked, and Kelly replaced Viola with Dan Schatzeder. The 3 1-3-inning outing matched Viola's shortest of the season.

"The only part that's frustrating

The Really Big One

Pierson Is Pleased With Early Work By Women

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Not quite a week into practice for the 1987-88 basketball season, East Carolina women's coach Pat Pierson has been taking a hard look at her first Lady Pirate team.

"We've been having a lot of position drills," she said. "We've been doing a lot of conditioning and quite a bit of scrimmaging."

"We have a lot of work to do on our fast break. The one I use is different from the one they used here last year, so the girls are having to learn a new one. But we just need to get our timing down and it'll be ready," Pierson said.

Pierson, who came to ECU following a nine-year tenure at Northeastern (La.) State, is excited by the play of her front-court personnel. "I think the play of our post people is going to be one of our strong points," she said. Those upfront people include Monique Fomili (6-0, Sr.) and Alma Bethea (6-0, Sr.), both of whom saw starting duty last year. Gretta O'Neal Savage (6-2, Jr.) also is expected to see quite a bit of playing time again also.

"I'm pleased with the depth we have inside. We have four people 6-0 or better, and I've never had anything like that before," Pierson said. "This gives us the opportunity to be aggressive inside."

Pierson is also happy with the leadership of the two seniors — along with that shown by Chris O'Connor, a 5-9 redshirt junior. "It's good to have people out there who have a good deal of playing experience. They're like coaches on the floor. Monique has a great deal of athletic ability and Alma is one of the strongest physical players I've ever seen. Chris is a good passer and defensive player and a good outside shooter."

Outside shooting will take on a new meaning this year in women's basketball as the three-point line comes into use. "Hopefully we'll have some people who can hit from out there. Chris and Irish (Hamilton) can do it. I think it will help the women's game. It will get the fans more into the game and put the little person back in the game, too."

Pierson feels that the free throw shooting of the Pirates will be a plus too. "With our inside people, we're going to try and get the ball inside. Hopefully, we'll get a lot of scores and a lot of fouls too," the coach said.

She has also been impressed by the attitude of the players. "They are very hard workers and I find that refreshing. They know what it takes to win."

Pierson said the Pirates still have to work on their transition game, conditioning and the post defense. "We want to be aggressive up front and pressure the ball all over the court. We need to improve our timing and our shooting."

While the Lady Pirates have lost Sarah Gray (6-0, So.) for the year due to an off-season knee injury, Pierson is hopeful that both Hamilton (5-3, So., guard) and Pam Williams (5-8, Jr., guard) will come off knee surgery and be ready to go.

"Hamilton looks like she is coming along well. It doesn't seem to be bothering her and she's moving well. Pam may be ready for our first game. She's going to be fitted for a brace this weekend," Pierson said.

"Our schedule is difficult. We know we're going to play four teams that are listed in the preseason Top 20. But I believe that the only way to get better is to play the best."

And Pierson believes that the Lady Pirates can again be in the battle for the Colonial Athletic Association title. While James Madison is again nationally ranked and favored, Pierson is hopeful. "You always want to feel like you can compete for the title," she said.

South Carolina's Ellis May Be Best Quarterback

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's football Pirates have had so-so luck against some of the nation's toughest quarterbacks so far this year.

Florida State's Danny McManus had a fine day against them as the Seminoles rolled up a 44-3 victory; Cincinnati's Danny McCoin didn't quite have the supporting cast but he threw for a record-tying four touchdowns in a 56-28 loss to the Pirates; and Virginia Tech's Kris Chapman was held in check as the Pirates took a 32-23 victory.

But this week, the Pirates go up against the man who may be the best of them all, South Carolina's Todd Ellis.

Ellis, a sophomore, has passed for over 200 yards in 16 of his 17 collegiate games. This past weekend, he threw for 286 yards as the Gamecocks raced past a grieving Virginia team, 58-10. The Cavaliers were still in shock over the death Friday night of Craig Fielder, a defensive end, who lost a three-year battle with cancer. He had accompanied his teammates on the trip and died Friday night in his motel room.

Nevertheless, South Carolina dominated play in the game, rolling up 572 yards in total offense, the highest total since the team got a school record 636 against The Citadel in 1985. Their 286 on the ground was the most since a 398 day against Navy in 1985, and their 58 points was the most since a 73-0 blitz of Wichita State in 1980.

One of the keys was the return of running back Harold Green, who returned from arthroscopic surgery to post a career-best 132 yards on 23 carries. It was the second time he's been over 100 yards for the Gamecocks.

But the key man behind the whole thing is Ellis, a 6-3, 210-pounder. During his brief career, he's passed for 4,776 yards and 27 touchdowns. He needs only 141 more passing yards to move past Tommy Suggs (4,916 yards from 1968-70) and become the all-time passing leader for the Gamecocks. He's also a sure bet to pass Suggs in touchdown passes this year. Suggs had 34 in his career.

This season alone, Ellis has hit on 137 of 240 passes for 1,756 yards with seven touchdowns and 14 interceptions.

Tops among his targets is wingback Sterling Sharpe (6-1, 200, Sr.). East Carolina coach Art Baker calls Sharpe the "best athlete we'll face this year."

Against Virginia, he pulled in six receptions for 106 yards, including a 59-yarder for a touchdown. He also returns punts, and brought back one 59 yards for another score against the Cavaliers Saturday.

He enters Saturday's game with 144 career receptions for 2,121 yards, the latter a school record. He needs only three more catches for a new school record in that category too.

This year, he has 37 catches for 539 yards and three touchdowns.

Wingback Kevin White is second among the reception leaders with 28 for 235 yards, while wide receiver Ryan Bethea had 26 for 352 and two scores. Wide receiver Danny Smith had caught 16 for 286 and two touchdowns, while Green has caught 13 for 116 and wingback Harold Brown had seven for 114.

Green is far and away the leading rusher for the Gamecocks with 89 carries for 428 yards. Like East Carolina, South Carolina is now employing the I formation at times, which tends to get the ball to Green more often.

Green's backups, Keith Bing and Greg Welch, have rushed for 128 and 102 yards, respectively.

Placekicker Collin Mackey is the top scorer for the Gamecocks with 54 points. He's a perfect 21 of 21 on extra points and has hit on 11 of 14 field goals.

As a team, South Carolina has allowed 119.0 yards on the ground and 141.3 through the air, a total of 260.3.

But they've rolled up 132.3 on the ground and 297.5 through the air for 429.8 a game, an advantage of some 160 yards an outing.

South Carolina holds a 4-0 advantage in the young series between the two schools, including a 38-3 win last year. Ellis twice threw to Sharpe for scores and was 17 of 23 for 318 yards on the day. Sharpe caught eight passes for 157 yards.

East Carolina's only points of the day came on a second period field goal of 23 yards by Chuck Berleth, but the Pirates trailed 21-3 at intermission.

South Carolina will close out its current home state next week against N.C. State, while East Carolina returns home to face third-ranked Miami.

Rose Goes After Eighth; Vikings Seek Revenge

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School travels to Wilson, seeking to just about insure itself of a berth in the State 4-A playoffs while D.H. Conley's Vikings go outside the Coastal Conference for a game at Greene Central this Friday night.

Rose, which faces Wilson Fike in the 8 p.m. contest, will be attempting to run its overall record to 8-0 with a 5-0 conference mark. That would not alone insure a playoff berth, but would go a long way toward it.

Conley will be seeking revenge for a 19-0 stunner in the opening game of the season last year. Conley spiraled down to a 2-8 season after that while Greene Central ended up going to the second round of the 2-A state playoffs.

Rose goes into this weekend's game after a 28-0 win over Kinston last Friday night. And Coach Chip Williams wasn't all that pleased with the way the team won, although he is quite willing, thank you, to take it.

"We were a little sloppy early in the game," he said. "We missed on several scoring opportunities."

"It was obvious that we were not emotionally up for the game. I don't know whether it was because of Kinston's record (1-6) or the situation." Williams was referring to the fact that Friday was a teacher work day, with the students out of school. Williams said earlier he doesn't think the players have their minds as much on the game on such days. "Our practice sessions weren't that good during the week, either."

"Still we played well enough to win," he said, "and I have to give the players credit for that."

Again Rose was hit with a large number of penalties, but Williams said he wonders if that is not a stigma of successful teams. "In talking with other successful coaches, they have the same problem. Maybe the officials are watching us closer."

Williams said he was pleased with the effort of the defensive line and the linebackers. "They may have played as well as they have all season," he said. "Our secondary did a pretty good job. They only completed one long pass. We'll have to play much better this weekend though against (Fike's) Sharief Dew."

Williams is also worried about the attitude the players may have going into the upcoming games. With the championship — and the playoff berths — still in doubt, the Rampants could be looking at comparative scores and not giving Fike and some of the other remaining opponents their due.

For instance, Kinston beat Fike, 21-17, and Fike beat Beddingfield only 7-6 (Rose beat Beddingfield 42-0). "I would think this is a tendency of high school players — to compare scores. But we have to make them aware of what the other teams can do. We have to respect them. I just hope we can get through to (the players)," Williams said.

"Fike is a talented team. Dew can throw the ball well. He has speed and is a good scrambler, probably better than (Rocky Mount's) Tim) Kilpatrick. Their running game hasn't been that strong, but they had someone get over 100 yards against Hunt, so that says something," Williams said.

"They use a lot of different sets and while they may not be consistent, they can confuse you enough to make some long gainers out of it," he added.

First Card Homer Keys Victory

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals have gone from pitiful to powerful.

A three-run homer by Tom Lawless, — the first for St. Louis in this World Series — keyed a 7-2 victory Wednesday night and helped reassure center fielder Willie McGee.

"We were long overdue for a big inning," McGee said of a six-run fourth against the Minnesota Twins. Ironically, the Twins had used fourth-inning rallies to break open Games 1 and 2.

"Occasionally we can do it without (injured) Jack Clark and Terry Pendleton," he said. "It seems like we're getting our offense together a little bit."

The resurgence by the Cardinals, who were all but left for dead after losing Game 1 by 10-1 and Game 2 by 8-4, evened the best-of-seven Series at two games apiece and renewed McGee's hopes.

"Tomorrow is a big game for us.

Hopefully we can win and then we would have to win only one more in the (Minnesota) Metrodome," he said. "We're putting our hits together and scoring some runs, which is what we need to do."

First baseman Jim Lindeman, like McGee, stressed the importance of tonight's Game 5 at Busch Stadium.

"I think we need to win. We don't want to go back to the Metrodome trying to win two games," Lindeman said. "(But) you can win in a cornfield if you have to. They (Twins) have lost 25 games there."

The importance of the Lawless homer was not lost on McGee.

"It just showed that they're not the only team that can hit home runs," he said. "Anytime a home run is hit, it means an instant run. That's what baseball is all about."

It's also about defense, which the Cardinals used to snuff out a Minnesota rally in the fifth.

"I think that's what has carried us all year," said left fielder Vince Coleman, who caught Tom Brunansky's hard drive for the third out after the Twins had scored a run. "They've had some big innings against us. Sometimes a play like that is the difference."

It was one of just three the Cardinals made in the inning. A run-scoring infield hit by Kirby Puckett with one out could have been a two-run double down the left-field line had Lawless failed to knock the ball down.

Then shortstop Ozzie Smith made a fine stop of Gary Gaetti's hard grounder into the hole, throwing out Puckett on a force play at second base.

"I'm spoiled," Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said of Smith. "He's been with me six years now, and I don't even say 'nice play' any more."

Catcher Tony Pena suggested that the St. Louis offense, consisting of 10 hits that included doubles by Coleman and McGee, may have been a carryover from the Cardinals' 3-1 victory Tuesday night.

"Last night, we were in a situation where we had to win and were tense," Pena said. "Tonight, we were more relaxed. Right now it's a three-game Series." St. Louis utility player Jose Oquendo said, "Anything can happen now. We've got to think about tomorrow night and try to win."

The Cardinals said they were happy for Lawless.

"He hasn't had that good of year," Smith said of Lawless, who during the regular season had only two hits. "He was just trying to hit the sacrifice fly, and it turned out to be a home run. He had a good game all the way around."

Lawless...

of the National League playoffs, before he pulled a muscle in his right thigh. The Cardinals said he won't pitch again in the Series.

Forsch came on and worked 2 2-3 innings, allowing one run on a hit for the victory. Ken Dayley worked the final 2-3, allowing one hit.

"It's not the way I envisioned getting my first World Series victory," said Forsch, who was 0-2 for St. Louis in 1982 and 0-1 in 1985. "I envisioned it more as a starter than as a reliever, but I'll take it any way I can get it."

He walked pinch-hitter Gene Larkin to start the fifth, and a single by Dan Gladden sent Larkin to third.

It was a perfect opportunity for the Twins' offense. It also was a perfect opportunity for the Cardinals' defense.

Forsch struck out Al Newman for the first out. Then Puckett hit a bouncing ball down the third base line. Lawless dived, got his glove on it and, while Puckett got an RBI single, the ball stayed on the infield.

Then Gary Gaetti hit a grounder that seemed destined to pass between Lawless and Smith and into left field. But Smith dived, gloved the ball and scrambled to his feet in time to force Puckett at second as Gladden went to third.

"So so," Smith rated his play. "It's all in a day at the shop."

Tom Brunansky followed with a sinking line drive to left field. Coleman raced in and made a sliding catch to end the inning.

"I knew I didn't want it to fall in," Coleman said. "All I was worried about was that it didn't get into the lights. I always feel like I have a chance on any ball hit out there."

The Cardinals had pulled the plug on a potential rally. The score stayed 7-2, and, just maybe, the momentum had swung.

"When we were down 2-0, people didn't give us a chance," Smith said. "It's tough for us to score runs. But somehow, we get the job done. I think we're a much better ballclub than we get credit for."

Cardinal Starter

Rose, Conley ...

"And their defense is strong. They are second in the conference in points allowed, after us." Rose has allowed only 45 points in seven games, slightly over a touchdown a game. Fike has allowed 74, or just over 10 a game.

"This is their Homecoming, so I'm sure that they'll be emotionally up for the game. Too, they'll be going up against an unbeaten and ranked team and I'm sure they'll be primed for an upset. They upset us last year (27-14) and I'm sure they'll believe they can do it again. And I tend to believe they were looking past Beddingfield at us last week, accounting for the close score in that one."

Rose, with a victory, could clinch the championship and the number one berth with a win over Wilson Hunt next week in its final home game of the regular season.

Conley, 4-3 overall, comes into its game with Greene Central after suffering its second Coastal Conference loss of the year, a 16-7 setback by West Craven.

However, the Vikings still have a shot at one of the league's three playoff berths, but would need to win their remaining two league games.

But they cannot afford to look ahead to them or Greene Central will certainly take advantage of it.

The Rams, 3-4, have been up and down this year. The two have two common opponents, Coastal member North Lenoir and Eastern Plains member North Pitt. Conley beat both of them, taking North Lenoir 33-8 and North Pitt 7-0 in overtime. Greene Central upset North Pitt, 17-12, two weeks ago, while downing North Lenoir 12-0.

"We played very badly," Conley coach Steve Craft said. "We were flat, number one; we probably had more mental mistakes than we've had all year, number two. We've said all along that one of the keys was to improve each and every week and we didn't feel like we improved with our showing Friday night."

Craft said he didn't think that West Craven intimidated the Vikings. "Being out of school was one problem. Too, we had been up for about four weeks in a row. It was just a combination of things. I can't take anything away from west Craven. It was their Homecoming and they were pumped up sky high. It was also one of their better games."

"Finishing as close as we did is a positive point for us, but we still had opportunities to come back in the second half and we didn't."

"I can't think of anyone who really played a good game," Craft said. "It was not just one or two, just a total team ... I don't know. I guess every coach in the country is faced with that one time or another. But if we can stay that close (to West Craven) and play that badly, I guess we still have some things to look forward to down the road if we can get our 'mo-venom' going. I didn't say 'momentum,' but 'mo-venom.' That's a Craftism. It means going out there and playing with confidence."

It will take a good deal of confidence to get past Greene Central this weekend.

"We've got to get back on the straight and narrow. We need to get back on track so that when we'll be ready when we jump back into the conference. It's an important game for us, and it's important for them, coming off the loss to Ayden-Grif-ton."

Craft said that there has been some talk about revenge for the loss last year, but he also said that "we've been talking about pay-backs in nearly every game this year. I'm sure that it's in the minds of our seniors."

The Rams will present additional problems in that they are one of the few teams Conley plays which uses an option offense.

"They throw the football quite a bit. They run from the split back veer and we haven't seen it all year. Basically, our conference is power-oriented, with a lot of I's, load-ups that run straight at you. Greene Central is more option and pass-oriented. That's the problem they present."

The Vikings close out the year against Washington and East Carteret, both home games the following two weeks.

Twins Still Believe They Can Pull Out The Series

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Even though they've blown a two-game lead, the Minnesota Twins don't believe they've blown the World Series.

The Twins sounded downright happy to be tied at two games apiece with the St. Louis Cardinals heading into Game 5 tonight.

"I think we still feel good about what's going on," Roy Smalley said after the Cardinals handed the Twins a 7-2 loss in Game 4 Wednesday night. "It would have been unrealistic to think we could wrap up the Series in five games in St. Louis."

Frank Viola, who pitched splendidly in winning Game 1 in Minneapolis but was knocked out after 3 1-3 innings Wednesday night, expressed similar sentiments.

"I don't see too many people worrying too much around here," he said. "We'll be ready to go tomorrow night. Bert (Blyleven) is going to pitch a whale of a game and then we're going back (to the Metrodome)."

No team has ever won a World Series by winning all four games at home. Nevertheless, the Twins like their chances against the Cardinals.

"I look at it this way," Tom Brunansky said. "It's a three-game series with two at the Dome and I feel we have the advantage. Bert has been our workhorse all year. We've got him going at the right time. We've just got to score early and take them out of their game."

The Cardinals stole a page out of the Twins' book in Game 4, as lightning Tom Lawless' three-run homer touched off a six-run fourth inning that broke open the game.

"Anybody's capable at any time," Viola said after giving up Lawless' first home run since 1984 and only the second of his major-league career.

"The only time I lose concentration is when I take a guy for granted," he said. "If I'm not in my groove, it always seems that the No. 8 and No. 9 hitters hurt me."

He said that Lawless' shot will go down on his list of homers allowed to weak hitters — including such sluggers as Mike Gallego, Tim Foli and Garth Iorg.

"Iorg hadn't hit a homer in five years," Viola said, laughing. "This one, though, is probably the biggest considering the magnitude of this game," he said.

Viola, who would come back for Game 7 if necessary, said he "wouldn't like it to go seven."

"But I don't want to end my season on a night like this," he said.

Twins Manager Tom Kelly said Lawless "hit a mediocre fastball ... up in the zone (without) much on it."

After Lawless hit the ball, he stood and watched its flight — a la Reggie Jackson. And when the ball cleared the fence, Lawless flipped his bat into the air.

When asked if he thought Lawless was trying to show him up, Viola contemplated the question for a moment, smiled smugly and said: "No comment."

After beating the Cardinals with a five-hitter in Game 1, Viola had given himself a "9" on a scale of 1 to 10.

When asked to rate his performance Wednesday night, the left-hander said: "Can I use negatives?"

But that was the only time the word "negative" was heard in the Minnesota dressing room.

"They didn't demoralize us," Gary Gaetti said.

"(The Twins) had many opportunities to get down this season," pitching coach Dick Such said. "But they didn't, and that's why we are where we are."

Tigers Seek Revenge Over Pack

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Unbeaten Clemson, now the focus of three teams tied for second place in the Atlantic Coast Conference, goes for a little football revenge this weekend when the seventh-ranked Tigers take on North Carolina State.

With its victory over Duke last Saturday, Clemson, 6-0, broke from a tie for first with then-unbeaten Wake Forest after the Demon Deacons were knocked off by Maryland. That left the Tigers with a 3-0 conference record, followed by Maryland, Wake Forest and North Carolina, whose victory over N.C. State created the logjam behind the top spot at 2-1.

Besides trying to gain some ground in the league race, Clemson is seeking to avenge last year's 27-3 loss to the Wolfpack which temporarily delayed the Tigers from getting their league championship. Also, Coach Danny Ford is looking for a little more production from his offense.

"Last year they beat us terrible," Ford says. "They made us look very average. We need to play up to what our potential is, or what our level is. We don't know what that is yet."

Ford says the negative comments about his offense may be his fault, but that his team can't worry about them.

"We're not concerned about a lot of things that seem to bother other people. We just want to win. We're not trying to set stats, or seeing how many All-America players we can get," Ford says. "We just want to win, and they're doing a good job of winning."

The Wolfpack offense was slowed by the North Carolina defense in a 17-14 loss. Save for two Preston Poag touchdown passes, N.C. State couldn't generate much and dropped to 2-4 overall.

"The thing I want to get out is I don't think that play is the reason we lost the ballgame," Wolfpack coach Dick Sheridan says. "We lost the ballgame because we didn't do the job up front."

Sheridan's defense was worn down by the North Carolina running game, and he expects Clemson to try the same thing.

"Clemson has been even more successful than North Carolina running the football," he says. "That's the key to winning games. To be a consistent winner, you have to be able to run the football and control the line of scrimmage."

Maryland and Wake Forest will try and keep pace with each other on Saturday — the Terrapins are host to Duke and the Demon Deacons have a night game at Virginia. North Carolina has the weekend off before starting a stretch of four straight league games. Georgia Tech has a non-conference game at 13th-ranked Tennessee.

The Terrapins' hopes seemed to be on the decline several weeks ago after a big loss to N.C. State, followed by a whipping by Miami, Fla. But the defense raised those hopes with its 14-0 effort at Wake Forest that left Maryland at 3-3. Coach Joe Krivak would like the offense to come around, too.

"Offensively, we're still sputtering around," he says. "We did some good things in the first half, had a good mix with the run and pass and scored a couple of touchdowns."

Duke, 3-3 and winless after two league games, replaced Steve Slayden with Anthony Dilweg against Clemson to try and shake up a sluggish offense which was based on the pass and designed to produce a lot of points.

"If Anthony had torn them up down there and we won the game, he'd obviously be the quarterback," Coach Steve Spurrier says. "Anthony played well and hard and with a lot of effort and guts. He missed a few guys open here and there."

Slayden returns to the starting lineup against the Terrapins.

"I'm hoping and thinking that the week off will enable (Slayden) to reflect and get a better picture of the situation," Spurrier said.

Wake Forest, 5-1, has limped through the last three weeks without a healthy tailback. But the Demon

Deacons may have Darryl McGill, Mark Young and Tony Rogers ready for the trip to Charlottesville, which could be a factor considering the Cavaliers, 3-4 and 1-1, couldn't stop the South Carolina offense in a 58-10 loss to the Gamecocks.

"Virginia had prepared for their run and shoot offense and South Carolina came out in an I formation," Wake Forest coach Bill Dooley says.

Dooley, who coached at Virginia Tech for nine seasons, likely won't do anything Virginia Coach George Welsh hasn't already seen.

"They're very close," Welsh says of the resemblance between the Hokies and the Deacons. "He just changed colors. Even the uniforms look the same."

Georgia Tech, 2-4, was close to an upset of Auburn last weekend, but a Jeff Burger touchdown pass and an interception for a score gave the Tigers a 21-10 victory.

"Emotionally, I think our state of mind is good," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Ross says. "Obviously, we wanted to win the game against Auburn. It would have been a lot better if we had. But our effort and improvement can't be denied. I see those two things adding to our confidence. I don't see it as being a negative."

Defense Won For Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins were robbed in St. Louis. The culprits were red hats and red-hot gloves.

The Cardinals, for whom sensational fielding plays are standard, ripped off their guests with three consecutive defensive gems in the fifth inning Wednesday night.

The plays enabled St. Louis to hang on to a 7-2 lead and go on to a victory by that score as the Cardinals evened the World Series at two games apiece. The Twins play again in the den of thieves tonight.

"They just beat us with the gloves," Minnesota infielder Roy Smalley said.

The Twins weren't the first victims. St. Louis, led by acrobatic shortstop Ozzie Smith, was the National League's top fielding team this season. On Wednesday night, Smith shared the spotlight with third baseman Tom Lawless and left fielder Vince Coleman.

Smith made the second one. He dived to his right, caught Gary Gaetti's hard grounder and quickly popped up to nip Puckett for a forceout at second base.

"You see him do it on 'This Week in Baseball' all the time, but when you see it in front of you, it's unbelievable," Gaetti said.

"Ozzie can dive and catch that ball in his sleep," Smalley said. "To see him bounce back off the carpet like he has a spring in his chest is amazing."

Then Coleman completed the trifecta.

"We get so used to it (with Smith), you don't give it a thought," Forsch said. "He does it all the time. Tonight, they all did it."

Coleman, in left field, had a good view of the plays by Lawless and Smith.

Roanoke Shares Tennis Lead

EDENTON — Roanoke and Roanoke Rapids, who shared the regular season Northeastern Conference tennis title, came through the first round of competition in the league's tournament deadlocked Wednesday.

The two, who lost only to each other in regular season play, each collected 19 points in the first day of play. Both advanced two singles players into today's semifinals, which, with the finals, will decide the title.

Roanoke's Robbie Harris and Nancy Johnson moved into the finals along with Missy King and Jen Weathers of Roanoke Rapids. Neither school advanced a doubles team to the finals.

Edenton and Plymouth were tied for third place after the first day with three points, while Northampton East had two and Williamston failed to score.

Harris, after having a first round bye, defeated Williamston's Uma Monttravadi, 6-0, 6-0, then beat Lisa Pierce of Roanoke Rapids, 6-0, 6-0, to reach the semifinals.

Johnson, also with a first round bye, downed Plymouth's Penny Sawyer, 6-0, 6-0, and Roanoke Rapids' Stephanie Roswell, 6-1, 6-1.

Roanoke's Melissa Manning downed Amanda Whichard of Williamston 6-1, 6-2 in the first round, then downed Northampton's Donna Johnson, 6-2, 6-2. She was defeated by Weathers, 6-1, 6-0, in the quarterfinals.

The other Roanoke single entry, Susan Long had a first round bye, then beat Gabrielle Webster of Edenton, 6-3, 6-1, before losing to King, 6-1, 6-2.

Roanoke's doubles team of Katrina Young and Vinya Gurganus downed Hope Robinson and Deedee Mills of Williamston, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3 before falling to Plymouth's Heavner and Bragg, 6-0, 6-2.

Williamston's Donna Hardison was beaten by King, 6-0, 6-0, in the second round, while Mary Horton lost to Northampton's Tammy Lassiter in the first round, 6-2, 6-1.

Play in the tournament winds up today in Edenton.

Bethel Wins Volleyball Match

BETHEL — Bethel Middle School took a volleyball match from Farmville Middle School Wednesday.

Bethel won the first game, 15-13, then rolled up a 15-9 win in the second game to take the match.

Montressa Ebron led Bethel's service with 13 points.

Bethel is now 9-1 on the year and will play host to A.G. Cox on Wednesday.

Baseball Aide Leaves UNC

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Todd Wilkinson, the coordinator for baseball at the 1987 U.S. Olympic Festival and assistant baseball coach at North Carolina the past 2½ years, has resigned from the Tar Heel coaching staff.

Wilkinson, 25, resigned last Wednesday.

"I'm just unhappy here," he said. "It's better for me to just go on..." Wilkinson was a member of three Atlantic Coast Conference baseball championship teams as a Tar Heel player and played in the Montreal Expos farm system for one season.

Wilkinson also holds the ACC Tournament record with three home runs hit in one game, against Wake Forest in 1984.

Much At Stake In Tucson Open

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — There is more at stake this week in the Tucson Open golf tournament than the title and a $108,000 first prize.

There is the struggle for positions on the money-winning list in the last tournament that qualifies players for next week's $2-million Nabisco Championships of Golf.

"That's the only reason I'm here," said Mac O'Grady, among the handful of golfers in the hunt for those final positions on the 30-player list that will be eligible for the tournament in San Antonio.

Also in the scramble for the last four positions are Mark O'Meara, Hal Sutton, Mike Reid, Jodie Mudd, Gene Sauers, John Cook and Bob Tway.

At the moment, O'Meara, O'Grady, Sutton and Reid would qualify, with Mudd, Sauers, Cook and Tway below the cutoff, but they are in solid position to improve this week.

The tournament in San Antonio will offer the largest purse in the history of the PGA Tour and almost certainly will determine the leading money-winner and Player of the Year.

In addition to the $2-million purse, including $360,000 to the winner, another $1 million will be distributed according to positions on a season-long points list.

And, while that's a week away, it all serves as an incentive for the 156-man field that was to start play today in the $600,000 Tucson Open.

"The money-winning title. Player of the Year. Leading the Nabisco list," Paul Azinger said, ticking them off his fingers.

"They're all incentives for playing here. There's lots of incentives," said Azinger, winner of three titles this season and second to the absent Curtis Strange on both the money-winning list and Player of the Year standings.

Azinger needs a strong performance this week to close the gap going into the decisive Nabisco tournament.

And that's possible, Azinger said after a final practice round on the new, TPC course at Star Pass.

"I'm hitting the ball good and I'm putting good," he said. "I'm probably more consistent than I've been all year. I don't think I've been out of the top 15 in my last five tournaments."

He faces a lineup that includes Tom Watson, Masters champion Larry Mize, U.S. Open title-holder Scott Simpson, Payne Stewart, Lanny Wadkins and Fuzzy Zoeller, winner of $90,000 Tuesday in the Merrill-Lynch Shootout, a made-for-television event that had a field of 10 golfers.

The Tucson tournament, after a three-year stint as a match-play tournament, returns to a 72-hole stroke-play format this year.

No Showdown For Cowboys

IRVING, Texas (AP) — John Dutton and Randy White shook hands. "Randy knows he can have all the free beer he wants if I get my distributorship next year," Dutton said. "There was a lot of talk. But talk is cheap."

So much for the great showdown between returning strikers and picket line crossers at Valley Ranch on Wednesday.

It was business as usual as Dallas Coach Tom Landry prepared his returning veterans for Sunday's NFL game with the Philadelphia Eagles.

There were a few veterans not happy the replacements used during the 24-day strike were still around.

"They shouldn't be here," player representative Doug Cosbie said. "We don't need a lot of extra people around."

No Neutral Site This Year

By DAVID DROSCAK
Associated Press Writer

Better crowd control and a rare chance to play in a college football stadium weren't good enough reasons to switch the state 4-A high school football championship to a neutral site this season, NCHSAA officials say.

"There just wasn't overwhelming evidence that it (a neutral site) would draw better," said Rick Strunk, assistant executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. "At least at this point, it's a dead issue for the 1987 championship."

Title games for all four classifications in North Carolina rotate between East and West home team sites each season.

Strunk said this week that some 4-A schools had expressed interest in moving the title contest to either Kenan Stadium in Chapel Hill or Groves Stadium in Winston-Salem. But the idea was scrapped after discussing it at regional meetings and polling all 4-A schools, he said.

In last season's 4-A championship game at Fayetteville 71st, an overflow crowd of more than 6,000 watched the contest.

"My personal feeling is if you don't try something you'll never know," said Charlie Adams, NCHSAA executive director. "The vote (among 4-A schools) was about 50-50 ... too close to call. Let's set a date and for two years try the neutral site ... This is a controversial and emotional thing among the schools."

"I don't think it ought to be a dead issue," Adams added. "We are trying to give the best playoff possible. A memory for a lifetime. It's worth a try."

"The idea is based on crowd control," Strunk said, noting that several hundred fans were left standing at the title game last season. "It's also based on the idea that the 4-A championship game has outgrown the facilities it's played in.

"Coming to one central site has been good for other sports — like basketball," Strunk added. "However, there is a loss of home-field advantage, concessions — and financially — you might have to pay more for the teams to travel. At a home site, you are guaranteed some money."

Neutral sites have been good for South Carolina, said Pete Ayoub, executive director of the South Carolina High School League.

The SCHSL plays its 4-A division title games and 3-A championship matchup at University of South Carolina's Williams-Brice Stadium on a Friday night and Saturday. Attendance for the games has been "super," says Ayoub.

"We've been playing there for five years and have had no problems at all," Ayoub said. "Neither school has any responsibility — all they have to do is show up and play."

Ayoub said the SCHSL has to pay about $2,000 for security and cleanup for each contest, but at $4 a ticket, the 4-A Division I title game last season cleared about $40,000.

"Parking is no problem and you get a good seat," he said. "Players coming ... think it's a terrific thing playing in a big stadium. Playing here is an experience in itself."

Minimum seating for a 4-A championship football contest in North Carolina is 4,000, according to NCHSAA rules. Strunk said several 4-A schools don't have stadiums that big, but the NCHSAA board of directors has the authority to move a contest to another site.

The record crowd for a North Carolina playoff game is 22,000, drawn in last season's Western Regional title game between Charlotte Harding and West Charlotte, Strunk said.

Strunk said an alternative to playing the contest at a neutral site would be live television. However, he said, that may be several seasons down the line.

"There doesn't seem to be a lot of commercial interest (in the live game)," Strunk said. "We hope to air the 4-A title game this season on a tape-delay basis."

"Maybe the market is saturated (with college and professional football)," Strunk added. "I believe down the road there will be some interest in it."

"To me, it's a great, untapped market," said Strunk, who noted that Michigan televises its playoff games live and still draws large crowds.

Strunk said last season's 3-A title game between Havelock and Shelby was carried live back to the Havelock area. "We still had thousands of people from Havelock going to Shelby," Strunk said.

Lawless Joins Folklore

ST. LOUIS (AP) — With one swing, Tom Lawless doubled his career home run total, knocked in his first runs of the season, and became a part of World Series folklore forever.

With the score tied 1-1 in the fourth inning, Lawless hit a three-run homer off Minnesota ace Frank Viola and St. Louis went on to a 7-2 victory Wednesday night to even the best-of-seven Series at two games apiece.

Lawless, filling in for the injured Terry Pendleton at third base, was 2-for-25 this season and didn't get his first hit until Aug. 12. His next hit didn't come until the last day of the season.

His name was omitted from the National League pennant souvenir sold outside Busch Stadium and he was called Tom Hitless by Sports Illustrated.

When Reggie Jackson was asked why the TV ratings were off for this Series he said it was because of a lack of "star" players.

"When I make out my lineup card,

I have to put first names down to remember who the guys are. "I'm still trying to find out who Tom Lawless is," Jackson said before Game 4.

On Wednesday night, Jackson found out as Lawless even borrowed part of his Mr. October act.

Tony Pena opened the fourth with a walk and moved to third on Jose Oquendo's single.

Lawless followed with a drive over the left-field fence. He left the batter's box as if he had just hit his 200th career homer instead of his second.

In a Series scene reminiscent of Jackson or Carlton Fisk, Lawless took a couple of measured strides, flipped his bat away, and watched the baseball sail into the night.

"I thought I hit the ball pretty well, but this is a big ballpark and I didn't think it was going to go out," Lawless said.

"There were runners on first and third at the time and I just stood there because I knew if it was going to be caught, it was going to be a sacrifice fly. Then, I saw it go over the wall and I said to myself 'Holy Cow!' I flipped the bat, I guess, but I don't remember. My mind went blank."

St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog, however, was watching every moment.

"When he (Lawless) hit it and stood there I thought it was in the upper deck and it only cleared the fence by a little bit," Herzog said. "I told him later he ought to run when he hits the ball."

Herzog said that in terms of bat flips, "It's right up there with Reggie's."

"I really didn't think it would go out," Lawless said. "I hit the ball good last week in the playoffs against San Francisco and it didn't go out. For me to have a ball go out I have to hit it squarely and I just didn't know with the size of this park whether it would go out."

Lawless' only other homer in 409 major-league at-bats was against St.

Louis teammate Ken Dayley, then pitching for Atlanta.

"He reminds me about it constantly," Dayley said. "Every day they bring around a stat sheet which lists each player's last home run and he drops it by my locker quite frequently. He keeps telling me he's going to bring the ball in for me to sign, but he hasn't yet."

Lawless spent five years in the minors before playing in 49 games with Cincinnati. On Aug. 16, 1984 he was traded by the Reds to Montreal for Pete Rose, who was then named player-manager of Cincinnati.

In 1985, Lawless was acquired by the Cards from Montreal for Mickey Mahler and has been the definition of a utility player since then with a batting average to match.

Lawless has played second, third, the outfield and is the Cardinals' third-string catcher. He ended the 1987 season with a lifetime .203 average and 17 runs batted in.

"Last spring he was a catcher for us, caught all the 'B' games," Herzog said. "He can play the outfield and infield and catch and I always had him as a safety valve."

In the top of the fifth inning Wednesday night, Lawless also knocked down Kirby Puckett's drive down the left-field line and saved a run.

"I always considered myself an aggressive fielder when I played second base, Lawless said. "I try to get to a ball and knock it down."

Lawless' name surely will be on the World Series pennant. If the Cardinals win, he may be on the cover of SI and Jackson may learn more about him.

"I know my role," Lawless said. "As long as I'm doing my best every day, that's all that counts."

Six-Run Inning Is Not The Style Of Cardinals

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — In the era of the long ball, the St. Louis Cardinals will never be mistaken for Murderers' Row.

It is not exactly an offensive machine. It manufactures runs meticulously, in small, measured doses. It is not in the habit of beating the other team into submission.

So certainly that must be a misprint in the Game 4 World Series box score that shows the Cards with six runs in the fourth inning. Six runs in an inning is not St. Louis' style. In fact, six runs in a game hasn't been the Cardinals' style lately.

After Jack Clark, their only legitimate long ball threat, tore up an ankle on Sept. 9, the Cardinals had a pennant race stretch of 18 games in which they scored as many as six runs just twice. To suggest that they might score six runs in an inning is, well, far-fetched.

McMahon Back For Sunday

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Opponents of the Chicago Bears had better be prepared for another dimension when the post-strike season resumes this week. Jim McMahon is back.

After a layoff of nearly a year in which time he underwent serious shoulder surgery, McMahon expects to play Sunday at Tampa Bay and, if all goes well, assume his starting quarterback role shortly thereafter.

"I feel ready to play," McMahon said Wednesday, "and if I do well in Tampa Bay, I'll expect to start the following week."

McMahon, who appeared in only six games last season but has a string of 23 straight starting victories, underwent rotator cuff surgery last December.

Doctors told him it would be at least a year before he could play again. But McMahon reported to the Bears training camp in Platteville, Wis., last summer determined to start the opening game against the defending Super Bowl champion New York Giants.

"That was unrealistic," said McMahon, who was placed on the injured reserve list until Coach Mike Ditka announced he would be activated this week.

"So I set my sights on week seven and this is week seven," McMahon said.

And yet, that is just what they did against Minnesota on Wednesday night, ripping Frank Viola, the Twins' best pitcher, for the first half of the rally and finishing it against reliever Dan Schatzeder.

You had to know something was up when Tom Lawless, who had two hits this season and one home run in his career, tagged Viola for a three-run homer. When he trotted his way around the bases in the best tradition of Reggie Jackson, it inspired his roadrunner teammates to even greater achievements.

"Our first homer in the Series," noted Manager Whitey Herzog. "We don't hit many, but the ones we hit, we don't waste."

From there, the beep-beep Cardinal attack added three more runs on a couple of walks, Jim Lindeman's second RBI-single of the game, and a two-run double by Willie McGee.

And just that fast, a 1-1 game was transformed into an rout. The Cardinals' uncharacteristic 7-2 victory evened the Series at two games apiece.

Even Herzog had to be surprised. Just the night before, he had said, "We're not going to score too many runs with the lineup we've got."

It is a patchwork, do-the-best-we-can assembly of replacement parts that has to scramble for runs. Did he remember the last time his club had scored six runs in an inning? "We did it a lot early, before the All-Star break," Herzog said.

Not lately, though. Not with Clark out and joined on the bench for the Series by Terry Pendleton.

"We have an interesting team," McGee said. "It's a pay-attention team. People want to count us out without Jack. It's true we're not capable of getting three runs on one swing most of the time. We don't have any 30-home run guys in the lineup now, so we're not going to blow you out."

"But if everybody plays up to their capabilities, if we get pitching and make the plays, you can't count us out."

"Ever since I've been here, our attack has been underrated. If we win, it's always a miracle. But you know what? We keep on winning. We battle with what we have."

The Twins have noticed. They bludgeoned St. Louis by a cumulative 18-5 score in the first two games of the Series, the most lopsided margin since the New York Yankees outscored the New York Giants 16-2 in the first two games of the 1937 Series.

For all that bombast and bluster, they are tied in the Series and the latest big inning belongs to St. Louis.

Was Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly surprised at the lilliputian Cardinal lineup bunting runs that way?

"If you hit three-run homers, you have a chance to put some numbers on the board," he said.

Why others always compare themselves to Mercedes-Benz.

Those makers who commend their cars as substitutes for a Mercedes-Benz know what they are doing.

There is always a market for the product that is a bit less technologically ambitious, a bit less mature in design, a bit less quality-obsessed. Because these shortfalls allow it to be sold for a bit less money. And there are always more people in search of the lowest price than there are people in search of the best automobile.

But for those whose personal automotive equation is purer—who cannot abide second best—this argument is no argument at all.

It is to serve the demands of people like these that authorized Mercedes-Benz dealers exist. Their language is our language. Their standards are our standards. And their idea of automotive excellence is ours: Mercedes-Benz.

Other makers will continue to compare themselves with Mercedes-Benz, in hopes that this reflected glory may add the lustre their own names lack. It may even bring crowds of people to their showrooms.

And of these, some will drive away with a so-called bargain. Meanwhile, at our showrooms, discerning individuals will be driving away in their Mercedes-Benz.

Like no other dealers in the world.

See your authorized Greenville Mercedes-Benz dealer.

'Thirtysomething' Sometimes Hits Home Too Hard

By JERRY BUCC
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The creators of ABC's "thirtysomething" aren't just making a television show about people in their 30s coping with the '80s. They are people in their 30s coping with the '80s.

The one-hour drama is about baby-boomers whose youthful enthusiasm and confidence has begun to give way to doubts about the direction their lives are headed.

ABC describes the show as "about married people and single people and whatever's in between. It's about wanting children, having children and being children."

The show was created by Edward Zwick and Marshall Herskovitz, the executive producers.

Zwick is married to writer Liberty Godschall. They have one child. Ms. Godschall has written an episode for the show. So has Herskovitz's wife, writer Susan Schilliday. They recently had their second child.

Zwick said "thirtysomething" was not an attempt to speak for a generation but is "an amused observation and commentary on a generation."

"It's about people who spend money on accouterments they can't afford, or can't afford to buy the house they were raised in," he said.

"We want to make this about personal relationships. Once you objectify it or talk about 'yuppies' you change it."

"We rarely saw television dealing with real life as it is," said Zwick, explaining how he and Herskovitz came to create the show. "It seems so often to be a hyped and overdramatized depiction of life in terms of infidelities, business takeovers, diseases and not dealing with the smaller concerns of daily drama that in the aggregate add up to deep emotion."

"I think the reason we chose to write about a group of people of this age is that's what we know. We looked around and saw amusing dramatic situations in predicaments we face and that our friends face. It's a group of people, all of a certain age, dealing with transitions, responsibilities and roles, the likes of which we never expected. It's an adjustment to real life that they may have put off for a long time."

Zwick and Herskovitz met about 10 years ago at the American Film Institute. Since then they have worked together frequently, although each has done projects separately. Their best-known was "Special Bulletin," a 1983 NBC movie about nuclear terrorism, told through dramatized newscasts.

Zwick directed the movie "About Last Night," a comedy about dating rituals based on the stage play "Sexual Perversity in Chicago."

The movie was described by some critics as a tale of yuppie angst, as was "thirtysomething" and many other new television shows this season such as ABC's "A Year in the Life" and CBS' "Leg Work," in which Margaret Colin plays a private eye who drives a Porsche and is one jump ahead of the bill collector. New yuppie comedies are ABC's "Full House" and NBC's "My Two Dads."

Despite the inevitability of his show being described as "yuppie," Zwick said he thinks the label is inaccurate.

"I think if you did an in-depth study you'd find this generation facing more downward mobility than upward mobility," he said. "It's not fair to say they're self-indulgent. The heart of the show is about values. Values you might have thought you should have but are now reconciling

Tribute to Hepburn Helps Museum Fund

NEW YORK (AP) — A glittery gathering of stars, socialites and royalty gathered to honor Audrey Hepburn at a black-tie tribute at the Museum of Modern Art.

Wednesday's dinner, which included highlights of the 58-year-old actress' film career, benefited the museum's Film Preservation Fund, which supports the restoration, care and storage of 9,000 films in its archives.

Among those attending were Veronique and Gregory Peck, Ralph Lauren, Princess Yasmin Aga Khan, Count and Countess Frederic Chandon, Henry Grunwald and Hubert de Givenchy.

Miss Hepburn, wearing a black silk Givenchy dress, arrived with her son Sean Ferrer and his wife, Marina, Robert Wolders and Givenchy.

"I'm very honored and scared stiff," Miss Hepburn said. "I'm interested in preserving everything. Not just films, but buildings and trees, too."

Peck introduced the film portion of the evening, which included clips from "Funny Face," "Sabrina" and "Love in the Afternoon."

"She had — and still has — grace and inner beauty," said Peck, her co-star in "Roman Holiday." "She is also very funny. There has been no one like her in movies before or since."

A standing ovation greeted Miss Hepburn after the final scene from "Love in the Afternoon," when Gary Cooper, aboard a train leaving the station, sweeps her into his arms.

"This evening is really for our children, because only the magic of movies can show them one day how we were — our history, our spirit, maybe even our dreams," Miss Hepburn told the crowd.

ROBERT H. SCHULLER

TV Evangelist Defends Cybill

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP) — Television evangelist Robert H. Schuller has come to the defense of actress Cybill Shepherd after some cattlemen complained about her lifestyle and role in promoting beef.

Schuller wrote to the Nebraska Beef Industry Development Board as Miss Shepherd's former pastor, saying cattlemen should not judge her harshly, according to Ron Arp, the board's communications director.

Some cattlemen complained when the actress announced before her wedding to Bruce Oppenheim that she was expecting twins.

Schuller, pastor of the Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove, Calif., did not say when or where he was Miss Shepherd's pastor. But Schuller said that going back several years, "Harsh and hard experiences were brought unnecessarily and innocently to this beautiful person, which set the stage for future relationships."

"As of today, he's on his own," said Ronald Chandler, director of the Dallas office of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Ustinov, who rejected Soviet overtures to rejoin the Moscow Ballet and go home with impunity, said he plans to make Dallas his home for now and hopes to dance the "The Nutcracker" here this Christmas.

Ustinov, who left behind a wife and his 2½-year-old daughter in Leningrad, said the couple had been talking about a divorce, "but in Russia, it's almost impossible to have a divorce."

He said there apparently was suspicion earlier in the tour that he was considering defection because he was warned against making contact with Americans. The tour concludes Nov. 28.

"He says he's a dancer, he's not a political person. He just wanted to have a change, and he always heard so much about the United States. He danced in America, 20 performances, and he liked very much the audiences and he liked America," Ms. Krassovska said.

Soviet Ballet Dancer Given U.S. Asylum

DALLAS (AP) — A Soviet dancer who fled his ballet company to defect to the United States says he looked into the eyes of a stranger and knew he could trust her to help him.

Andrei Ustinov, a 32-year-old lead dancer with the Moscow Ballet, emerged from nearly a week in seclusion Wednesday after U.S. immigration officials granted his request for political asylum.

Ustinov said his desire to defect grew so strong that he slipped out of the troupe's Dallas hotel last week and ran into a drugstore nearby to find help.

"He says he saw a girl, just looked into her eyes, and thought he could talk to her," said Nathalie Krassovska, an instructor for the Dallas Ballet Association who translated for Ustinov at a news conference.

Hampered by his broken English, Ustinov had trouble communicating

Goetz Drama

NEW YORK (AP) — The trial of subway gunman Bernhard Goetz will be the subject of a three-hour drama next year on public television's "American Playhouse," producers say.

Goetz admitted shooting four young men on a Manhattan subway train on Dec. 22, 1984, but said he fired because he was certain they intended to rob him. Goetz was eventually convicted of illegal possession of his handgun but was acquitted of attempted murder. He was sentenced Monday to six months in prison and five years' probation to more real life concerns. You haven't abandoned those values.

"There is nothing particularly noble or interesting about this generation," Zwick said, "except maybe a sense of self-importance and self-consciousness this generation has always had because of the attention paid. With all the attention they can't help but feel they're the first generation to have children or mortgages."

The show has received critical praise for its writing and excellent repertory group of actors. But it has also been suggested the show is almost painfully realistic at times.

Zwick agrees with that assessment proudly. "If people have a hard day and want to escape," he said, "this is not the show for them."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Oct. 23

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Decide on what it is that you most desire, then go after it with enthusiasm. Do something unique and charming for your mate.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Handle your responsibilities personally; don't relegate them to others who are apt to make mistakes and get you in trouble.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Fulfill your promises to your mate, and do something which will please a fellow worker. Attend to the appearance of your wardrobe.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Try to please your kin in some way, and later you can have fun with friends. Go along with any changes made at home.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Be careful of the words you use in any communications. Come to an understanding with an associate who sometimes annoys you.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Be sure your judgement is working well pertaining to financial matters. Enjoy a hobby with a few old friends later on tonight.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Try to resolve a conflict with an old friend; the cause of the problem was petty in the first place, and time hasn't changed that at all.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Work on extending your business interests, and pay special attention to investments you've made. Work out a problem with your mate.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Listen to the advice of an influential friend before you get into any new ventures. Tonight can be a very romantic one for you.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): If you follow the advice of a superior, you can get very fine results. Change the circumstances of a troubling public matter.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Try to find a better system for handling routine tasks. Be discriminating with any newcomers—they may not be what they seem.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): A business expert can help you settle a dispute over a bill which has you confused. Make sure to keep promises you've made to your mate.

 When we first met Robert Sheehan of London more than two decades ago, we were impressed with his talent. Since then, as a stalwart of the British team, he has done nothing to make us change our opinion. Watch his textbook play on this hand from the World Team Olympiad.

In typical British style, North-South were playing weak no trump opening bids (12-14 points) North's two diamonds was a transfer to hearts, and the right game was reached in quick time.

The defenders started with two rounds of diamonds, then shifted to a spade. Declarer won in dummy and cashed ace-king of hearts to learn of the bad break. Obviously, the only problem was to avoid losing two club tricks. Declarer took his remaining spades, discarding a club from the table. A diamond ruff completed the elimination of the pointed suits (spades and diamonds), and the stage was set for declarer to try for his extra chance.

He cashed the ace of clubs and continued with a club to the queen. One chance flew out the window when West captured this trick with his king. Now, however, declarer's groundwork paid rich dividends. Down to nothing but spades and diamonds, the defender was forced to present declarer with a ruff-and-sluff. The table's last club disappeared as South ruffed in hand, and there was nothing left but high trumps on the board for the last two tricks.

Note that declarer pulled off his end play despite the fact there were still two trumps outstanding. This is a case where a relatively unfortunate lie of the cards worked to declarer's advantage.
