RALLYING CRY — A share dealer releases pent-up tension today on the floor of the International Stock Exchange in London. Unsteady Market Shows Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices jumped ahead in heavy trading on Wall Street today as the Dow Jones industrial average rose sharply but then fell back following higher prices earlier in Tokyo and Hong Kong. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which on Monday had its worse decline since the Oct. 19 collapse, was up 34.65 to 1,828.58 by noon on Wall Street. In the first half hour of trading, however, the closely watched index had soared 84.22 to 1,878.15.

Seven stocks rose for every three that fell in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 1,166 up, 503 down and 257 unchanged. At the opening the ratio had stood at 13-to-3. By noontime, a brisk 174.56 million shares changed hands on the Big Board, compared with 202.42 million shares at the same point Monday. In London, stocks opened higher but lost all gains by early afternoon amid concern about a huge British Petroleum Co. PLC share offering.

Earlier in Tokyo, the 225-share Nikkei stock average, which lost 4.7 percent of its value on Monday, closed nearly 3 percent higher. In Hong Kong, share prices tumbled but then recovered as the government and banks announced new measures to help prop up the market. The market's prime gauge of blue chips, the Hang Seng index, closed up nearly 7 percent, following Monday's worst one-day fall ever, when it tumbled 33 percent as the market reopened after being closed a week.

On Monday, Wall Street tumbled, with the Dow Jones industrial average dropping another 156.83 points to 1,793.93. The decline, which represented 8.04 percent of the average's value, was the second-largest point drop ever, after the previous Monday's devastating 508-point, or 22.6 percent, sell-off. The Dow drop helped to wipe out much of the average's nearly 290-point recovery of last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Budget-Cutting Negotiations Open On Caution: Don't Want Too Much

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic and Republican congressional leaders said today they begin the year's first real deficit-reduction talks with the White House optimistic that they can help restore financial confidence but concerned that jittery markets may expect too much.

"There's an optimistic or positive feeling" that the erosion of confidence in the economy "can be reversed," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas. "I think we know we have to do something ... and some of us are going to have to bite the bullet on long-held positions."

But his House counterpart, minority leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, cautioned that expecting the negotiations to produce a much deeper cut in the federal deficit than the $23 billion called for this year under the Gramm-Rudman law may be unrealistic.

"When I analyze some of the votes in the Congress, I find there isn't all that much inclination to go much deeper than that," he said. Senate Democratic leader Robert H. Byrd cautioned that he, too, does not want to "raise expectations too high," while the House Democratic leader, Rep. Thomas Foley of Washington, said he is concerned that "there's a danger of raising expectations to the point that then if they aren't met, it could depress the market."

Dole and Byrd were interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" show; Foley and Michel on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

Both the White House and Capitol Hill, however, affirmed the need for the negotiations to find selective ways of cutting the fiscal 1989 deficit at least as much as the Gramm-Rudman target.

"The first thing we need to do is to make certain we can find the $23 billion, $24 billion in real savings, no smoke and mirrors, ... do it as quickly as we can and leave it bipartisan and try to get it done in a rapid way."

If that works, Foley said, "we may go beyond that. We're looking at a target" for fiscal 1989 that would match the $36 billion in additional deficit reductions Gramm-Rudman requires.

"If we do it not by an automatic pilot cut, but by an agreement, ... then I think we're signaling to the world that this government has its course set and is going to ... get our fiscal house in order."

Yet, cautioned Dole, "We don't know what it will take to ensure that confidence that the markets need."

And Byrd, while acknowledging the need to act quickly, said the group should "work hard and not set a time frame, because we ought not work against that."

The Gramm-Rudman law cuts fiscal 1988 spending automatically if the $23 billion goal isn't reached some other way.

Those across-the-board cuts, already in effect preliminarily, become permanent Nov. 20 in the absence of legislation. Such cuts would hurt domestic and military programs alike, regardless of priority.

President Reagan on Monday met with the congressional leaders to lay the groundwork for the talks, which will determine how much tax raising and how much cost cutting will be done.

More than a dozen lawmakers are expected to meet with Reagan's top aides on Capitol Hill.

Administration participants in the effort will include White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr., Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and budget director James C. Miller III.

Analyst Says U.S., Soviets Staging 'Arms Race At Sea'

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Soviet Union are engaged in an "arms race at sea" that has given the navies of the two superpowers almost 15,000 nuclear warheads and bombs, a private analyst said today.

While the navies of England, France and China now have about 700 nuclear warheads and bombs combined, "in just the past decade the two superpowers have added over 2,500 nuclear warheads to their naval arsenals, deploying new ballistic missiles, cruise missiles, torpedoes and bombs," according to William Arkin.

"The trend toward deploying more and more weapons at sea is increasing," Arkin writes in a new study.

As the weaponry increases, he adds, more ships operate at a "wartime tempo" during peacetime and more allied countries are drawn into supporting "the naval nuclearized competition between the superpowers."

"Navies, because of their autonomous nature, are more invisible and so far have not been subjected to the same public political scrutiny which has been focused on land-based military forces," Arkin says.

As a result, "today there are no constraints on naval nuclear weapons or operations; no restrictions on the carriage of nuclear weapons or the operations of nuclear propulsion reactors; no prohibited zones for surveillance, steaming or exercises; no outlawed maneuvers or harassment techniques; no geographic restraints; and no proscribed strategies or doctrines."

Arkin, a frequent critic of the Reagan administration's military policies, is a defense analyst with the Institute for Policy Studies who specializes in the study of nuclear arsenals. The institute is a liberal, Washington-based think tank.

His 46-page study, released today, is titled "Nuclear Arms Race at Sea," and was written with the admitted goal of supporting the "nuclear free seas" campaign of the environmental group Greenpeace.

While much of the document thus decries the "nuclearization" of the world's seas, it does present some unusual statistics. Arkin concludes, for example, that the United States now has 5,632 nuclear warheads on long-range ballistic missiles deployed on submarines, compared with 2,902 for the Soviet Union.

Both countries, however, have embarked on a huge buildup in "non-strategic" weapons — nuclear-tipped cruise missiles, torpedoes, depth charges, naval artillery and bombs for naval aircraft. The U.S. Navy now has 3,715 such weapons, while the Soviet Navy has 2,526, Arkin said.

To deploy such weaponry, the United States has 278 ships in its Navy capable of handling some type of nuclear weapon, compared with 624 for the Soviet Navy.

The deployment of such weaponry, in turn, has been accompanied by development of new naval strategies that emphasize more aggressive exercises and maneuvers to ensure preparedness.

"These naval operations are becoming more and more offensively oriented," Arkin writes.

"Ships, submarines and surveillance aircraft regularly operate in dangerous proximity to each other; they practice mobilizations without warning, shadow each other and perform mock attacks."

Doctor Pleads Innocent

Dr. Lee Trent, a former Greenville physician, pleaded innocent to rape and sexual offense charges in Pitt County Superior Court Monday.

Trent, 43, was indicted on the charges Sept. 28, after being released from prison when the N.C. Supreme Court overturned his 1985 conviction on charges of rape and taking indecent liberties with a minor.

He had been serving a life sentence on the rape charge and three years on the indecent liberties count.

The original charges and the new indictments stemmed from incidents six years ago involving a girl then under the age of 13.

In an order filed Sept. 3, the N.C. Supreme Court said the 1985 rape indictment was "totally defective," and should have been quashed because it charged Trent with rape of

Kuwait Will Train Civilian Corps To Strengthen Its Defense Forces

By MARTIN MARRIS
Associated Press Writer

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait will train civilian volunteers to help defend its territory and installations following a spate of Iranian missile attacks and the bombing of an airline office, a military official was quoted today as saying.

In other developments, a reflagged Kuwaiti tanker and its Navy escort were making their way across the Persian Gulf toward Kuwait today, and Britain said it was joining the effort to reflag and protect the sheikdom's tankers from Iranian attack.

President Reagan moved Monday to ban U.S. imports from Iran, citing Iran's "continued and increasingly bellicose behavior" in the gulf.

The English-language Kuwait Times quoted Col. Khalid al-Quoud, Kuwait's civil defense director, as saying more than 300 young people already have volunteered for training that begins next week. He said the training initially would be for Kuwaiti nationals and would later include foreigners.

The program is in addition to other defense measures and the timing was not meant to be related to recent attacks, the newspaper said. However, "If the program coincides with the recent escalation" of tension in the gulf, al-Quoud was quoted as saying, "then it calls for enthusiasm in its implementation from both the leadership and the citizens."

He called on Kuwaitis to guard their workplaces. "If every citizen undertakes his duty in this respect, there will be no way for messing around by weaklings," he was quoted as saying.

The oil-rich sheikdom has a defense force of about 12,000 men, along with a small national guard.

Iran has targeted Kuwaiti ships for about a year, charging that Kuwait aids Iraq, Iran's enemy in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war. Iran has recently expanded its targets to Kuwait's oil loading terminal, which has been hit by three Silksworm missiles since Oct. 15.

Pentagon officials said the Navy's 13th convoy left without incident Monday from the United Arab Emirates port of Dubai near the entrance of the Persian Gulf.

The convoy was comprised of the newly reflagged tanker Middletown, a 290,285-ton ship that carries oil products, and the guided-missile frigate Ford, the Pentagon said.

Reagan agreed in June to reflag 11 of Kuwait's

22 tankers to provide them with U.S. naval protection. Since then, the United States and several of its European allies have increased their military presence in the gulf to protect commerce in the oil shipping lanes.

In London, Transport Ministry officials said two Kuwaiti vessels had been reflagged in Britain: the 27,841-ton petroleum products carrier Ras al-Jalayah, renamed Chilham Castle, and the 263,679-ton supertanker al-Faiha, renamed Tonbridge. A third vessel, the 28,031-ton Ras al-Barshah, would also be reflagged, British officials said.

The British move would entitle the Kuwaiti vessels to the protection of British warships. At least three British warships and four mine sweepers are stationed in the gulf.

Reagan said Monday he was directing the State and Treasury departments to set up a ban on the export to Iran of 14 categories of U.S. products with possible military applications.

Last week, Reagan ordered military retaliation against Iran after a Silksworm missile damaged a U.S.-flagged tanker off Kuwait. Navy ships destroyed two Iranian oil rigs in the southern gulf.

Gavigan Heads GREAT Panel

Dr. J. Richard Gavigan has been elected chairman of the Greenville Area Transit (GREAT) Public Transportation Commission. Dr. Lucy Wright was elected vice chairman. Other members of the commission are Helen Harrell, the Rev. Ralph Love, the Rev. R. Graham Nahouse and Dr. Florence Weaver. During a recent meeting of the commission, it was reported that GREAT has an average weekday ridership of 950 to 1,000 passengers, with an average of 550 on Saturdays. Records indicate ridership has increased this quarter by approximately 2,000 passengers, with total ridership of 64,710.

Review Board Meets

The Greenville Subdivision Review Board will meet Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Community Building located on the corner of Fourth and Greene streets.

Officers Elected

Paul Tripp of Farmville was recently elected president of the Coastal Plains Local Organization of Volunteers for Epilepsy. Other new officers for 1988 include Cathy Jessen, vice president, and Louise Moore, secretary/treasurer. Both are from Greenville and have been members of the group since 1979. Tripp is associated with WUNK TV and recently joined member of the group. He has spoken at Epilepsy Association of North Carolina state conferences, local and regional chapter meetings, and has participated in the Pitt County Health Department neurological clinic. For more information contact Ms. Moore at 758-2898 or Ms. Jessen at 758-6487.

Real Estate Seminar

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and the East Carolina University School of Business are sponsoring a "Real Estate '88" seminar Thursday from 7:15 a.m. to 9 a.m. in the Sheraton Greenville. Marty Hackney of Washington, N.C., and Greenville will be installed as president of the Friends of the ECU Library for 1987-88. Members of the organization's board are Dr. Lawrence Brewster of Greenville, immediate past president; Beatrice Behr, Charles Cain, Parma Howard, Edgar Loessin, Mae McKee, Kay Whichard and Frank Wooten, all of Greenville; Dorothy Hicks and Billie Jo Matthews of Rocky Mount and Kelly Lewis of Farmville.

The board recommended that marketing include giving lollipops to children who ride Saturdays. Also recommended was the publishing of new bus route schedules in local newspapers. The board is planning the establishment of an Inter-Modal Transportation Facility to serve as a central transfer point for all means of public transportation in Greenville. This project can be supported through federal funds.

The commission meets quarterly — the third Wednesday of January, April, July and October — at the Public Works Facilities. For information on the commission and GREAT services, call 830-4532.

Local Funeral Home Operator Is Charged

James Charles Hardee, 47, of Greenville has been charged with 13 counts of embezzling state property and 13 counts of embezzling county property by the N.C. Department of Revenue. Dewey Sanders, supervisory special agent with the Revenue Department, said the charges against Hardee, operator of Hardee's Funeral Home at 510 N. Greene St., allege he collected state and county sales taxes on funerals and failed to remit the tax to the state. The warrants charge the embezzlements occurred during the period from May 1, 1985, through November 1986, and involved $673 in state sales tax and $346 in county taxes. Sanders, who said Greenville police arrested Hardee on the revenue charges last Friday, said Hardee, if convicted, could receive up to 20 years in prison and a fine at the discretion of the court on each of the state embezzlement counts and as much as 10 years in jail plus a fine on each of the county embezzlement charges. Police department spokesmen said this morning that Hardee and Police Sgt. C.J. Hardy, who received an award from the International Association of Chiefs of Police and PARADE Magazine Monday in Toronto, Canada, as one of the nation's outstanding law enforcement officers, are brothers.

Friends Of Library

Membership in the Friends of the ECU Library is open to all persons who are annual contributors to the organization. The event is scheduled for the Sheraton Greenville, with a reception at 6:30 p.m. and the banquet following at 7:30 p.m. Members of the organization's board are Dr. Lawrence Brewster of Greenville, immediate past president; Beatrice Behr, Charles Cain, Parma Howard, Edgar Loessin, Mae McKee, Kay Whichard and Frank Wooten, all of Greenville; Dorothy Hicks and Billie Jo Matthews of Rocky Mount and Kelly Lewis of Farmville.

Transit driver Faith R. Nobles was recognized during the meeting for her service.

GREAT operates three fixed routes of approximately 13 miles Monday through Saturday and a fourth peak hour route from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. and from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

The commission meets quarterly — the third Wednesday of January, April, July and October — at the Public Works Facilities. For information on the commission and GREAT services, call 830-4532.

Garrison Warns Cuts May Come

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt County Board of Social Services was alerted to the potential of federal budget cuts in domestic services in late November and their subsequent consequences during its regular monthly meeting Monday.

Director Ed Garrison told the board there is a potential for federal budget cuts under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Budget Deficit Reduction Act, which creates a trigger mechanism to reduce spending automatically in defense and domestic programs when the president and Congress cannot agree on ways to reach deficit targets.

The target figure for fiscal year 1988 is $144 billion and requires a $23 billion cut in the federal deficit.

If cuts in domestic spending are triggered into action, "energy assistance and perhaps some of the social work programs" may be affected, Garrison said. "I am really not very optimistic that this is going away."

He alerted the board of the possible necessity to cut back spending in the Pitt County Social Services Department. Based on previous cuts, possible reductions could affect 8 percent to 15 percent of the county agency's

Faculty Member

Dr. Eris P. Brestel, an allergist and clinical immunologist, has joined the East Carolina University Medical School faculty as associate professor in the department of medicine, division of allergy and clinical immunology.

A Clarksburg, W.Va., native, he comes to the medical school from West Virginia University School of Medicine in Morgantown, W. Va., where he was associate professor of medicine and microbiology.

He received his medical degree from the University of Florida College of Medicine in Gainesville and bachelor's degree from Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton. He completed an internship and residency in internal medicine at Methodist Hospital in Dallas and also pursued clinical and research fellowships in allergy and immunology at the University of Florida, Gainesville.

While in the U.S. Air Force, he was the chief of the allergy section in the department of medicine at Keesler Air Force Base in Mississippi.

He is a fellow of the American Academy of Allergy, a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a member of the American College of Physicians.

budget, he said. "Based on the current state of affairs, I think we're in for very rough weather. I would like to be wrong."

Other affected areas may be day care, foster care for children, adoption services and other programs funded through block grants, Garrison said. He did not think cuts would affect aid to families with dependent children, food stamps and Medicaid.

"I'm just alerting the board these things could happen. I certainly hope that they don't," he said. But, it is best to "try to anticipate any change and be ready to adapt to it."

In other matters, the board approved policies regarding a voluntary placement agreement with a child in foster care. The policy allows the agency to contract with a child 18 years or older to plan for individual living until the age 21.

Policies for the Creative Living Center to implement an adult day care program also were approved.

It was reported to the board that the Low Income Energy Assistance Program had contacts with 877 people during the first 15 days of operation, which is less than last year during the same time. It was noted that people are not having to stand in line to apply for the service, and that was credited to the public's awareness that the program does not operate on a first-come, first-serve basis.

The last day to apply for assistance is Nov. 25.

It was noted there were 3,400 households served through the Surplus Food Distribution this month.

The board was briefed on the status of agency personnel, and it approved reviews and applications processed by the agency's Income Maintenance staff Sept. 15 through Oct. 15.

Board member Lillian Bradley briefed the board on recent Social Services Institute workshops in Winston-Salem, highlighting board and agency responsibilities and accountabilities.

School Benefit

Second-year medical students at the East Carolina University School of Medicine raised $100 in a recent car wash held to benefit the Agnes Fullilove Community School.

Ed Anthony, representing the medical school's class of 1990, presented a check to Tony Gray, a counselor and assistant principal at the full-time alternative high school. Gray and principal Johann Bleicher said the money will be used to support the school's day care nursery.

Environmental Event

David McNaught, executive director of the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, recently attended a weeklong conference for environmental advocates sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Todd Miller, Lena Ritter and Jim Kennedy from the North Carolina Coastal Federation and Bill Hollman and Derb Carter were other North Carolina representatives at the meeting.

The conference was hosted by "Save The Bay" in Narragansett, R.I. A national agenda was developed for response to problems in bays, lakes, sounds and estuaries and public education at a local level was emphasized, McNaught said.

'Care Connection'

Pitt County Memorial Hospital will begin a new employee program this month called "Care Connection," designed to increase interpersonal skills and awareness of patient sensitivity.

A series of educational sessions, led by PCMH employees, will focus on the patient's hospitalization and the fears and apprehensions some people feel when they are admitted to the hospital.

Aerial Crop Damage Cited

RALEIGH (AP) — Ozone pollution causes more than $1 billion in crop damage annually and will require additional control measures that could be perceived as "socially disruptive," an Environmental Protection Agency official says.

"Ozone has turned out to be the most pervasive, complex and intolerable air pollution problem facing this country," Craig Potter, the EPA's assistant administrator for air and radiation, said Monday.

Potter spoke at the beginning of a four-day international conference on crop losses from air pollutants, where about 150 scientists are reviewing seven years of government-funded research at North Carolina State University and other sites.

New strategies to control ozone could be "costly, socially disruptive, politically unpopular measures," Potter said. He said some of the proposals include "lifestyle-altering" tactics such as greater use of car pooling to reduce the number of cars on urban freeways.

Ozone is a highly reactive form of oxygen that occurs naturally in the upper reaches of the atmosphere, where it forms a protective shield against harmful ultraviolet rays from the sun.

But the gas is considered a nuisance when it is created at ground level as the result of sunlight's interaction with other air pollutants. Ozone is the primary irritant in smog.

Crop information collected since 1980 by the National Crop Loss Assessment Network at six research sites, including one near Raleigh, have shown that ozone can cause yield losses and other damage at levels as low as 0.05 parts per million, which Potter said was the average ozone level across the country.

The most susceptible crops include sorghum, soybeans, corn, wheat, tomatoes and alfalfa.

The body absorbs and uses only about 10 percent of the iron in foods. Iron from animal foods is absorbed easier than iron in plant foods. The body absorbs more iron if a food high in vitamin C is eaten with the iron-rich food.

Titan Launches Military Satellite

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The first successful launch of a Titan 34D, reportedly carrying a spy satellite, after two failures in two years is of "tremendous significance" to America's return to space, says the secretary of the Air Force.

The nation's most powerful unmanned rocket, bearing what the Air Force would describe only as a classified payload, lifted off at 1:32 p.m. Monday.

If the payload were a spy satellite, the launch would make a major contribution to the U.S. capability for monitoring Soviet compliance with arms treaties, civilian experts said.

A successful launch would mean "we're out of the woods in terms of the threat of being blinded in space," John Pike, a space policy expert for the Federation of American Scientists in Washington, said before liftoff.

Air Force Secretary Edward C. Aldridge said the launch was of "tremendous significance to the nation's space program" because it "allows us to resume launching critical national security payloads on a regular basis."

The launch was the first of a Titan 34D since April 18, 1986, when one of the rockets blew up on liftoff from this base 170 miles northwest of Los Angeles. Another Titan 34D and its cargo were destroyed after launch from Vandenberg on Aug. 28, 1985.

The Titan 34D consists of a 161-foot-tall liquid-fueled "core" vehicle and two 96-foot solid-fuel booster rockets.

Soviets Say Gorbachev May Sign Missile Accord In U.S.

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman indicated today Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev soon may go to the United States to sign a treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

But the spokesman, Boris Pyadyshv, refused to say if there would be a summit this year between Communist Party General Secretary Gorbachev and President Reagan. And he gave no indication Gorbachev had eased his insistence that there be more progress toward resolving strategic and space-weapons disputes before setting a date for a summit.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze summoned U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock to a meeting today, but neither Soviet nor U.S. officials would disclose what was discussed.

Shevardnadze held two days of meetings last week with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, and both sides said afterward they had practically finished work on a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

But at the close of the talks, Gorbachev said he was not yet prepared to travel to the United States for a summit meeting with Reagan.

Gorbachev's refusal to set a date for his third summit with Reagan left up in the air the future of the all-but-finished treaty that would require the two superpowers to scrap their medium- and shorter-range missiles.

Both sides agreed the document could be ready for signing within perhaps three weeks, but there was some question as to who would sign it if Gorbachev did not. There is no requirement that it be signed by the nations' leaders, and the United States would not be bound by it unless it is ratified by the Senate.

Pyadyshv said today the treaty would be signed "at the highest level," and that it would be signed in the United States. But he did not say a summit would take place this year, only indicating that still is possible.

"In a very brief period of time, we may witness a major step, a major breakthrough, in the area of nuclear disarmament," the Soviet spokesman said.

Neither Reagan nor Shultz has given any indication the United States is willing to make major concessions on Reagan's space-defense program, the key stumbling block Gorbachev cited.

As for the Soviet position,

Pyadyshv only repeated the government's standard language on the need for strengthening the 1972 antiballistic missile treaty, which U.S. officials say would cripple the so-called "Star Wars" missile defense plan.

"We have no doubt that an agreement relating to intermediate-range missiles and shorter-range missiles will be signed," Pyadyshv said. "Today, we are unable to say precisely when, but it is clear that in the nearest future, this agreement will be prepared for signing at the highest level, as this has been agreed between the leaders of our states."

Of last week's talks between Shultz and Shevardnadze, he said: "During the Moscow talks, the two sides made mutual steps to reach each other's positions."

Third Person Dies Of Radiation Poison

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A junkyard worker who helped break open a capsule containing radioactive cesium 137 died today, the third victim of the glowing substance he and friends admired but did not understand.

Israel Batista dos Santos, 22, died after he slipped into a pre-comatose state and his breathing stopped twice briefly, the navy office said.

Last Friday, a 6-year-old girl and her aunt died of generalized infection caused by radiation.

The bodies of Maria Gabriela Ferreira, 37, and her niece, Leide Ferreira, were buried Monday in special lead coffins in Goiania, the central Brazilian city of 800,000, located 850 miles northwest of Rio, where they were exposed to the radiation.

A crowd of about 400 people, shouting "We don't want to be contaminated," threw rocks at the caskets and formed a human barrier to try to prevent the burial. State police were called in to keep protesters back and the burial was carried out.

Rex Nazare, the president of the National Nuclear Energy Commission, said in an interview that the 1,320-pound lead-lined coffins of wood and fiberglass and the reinforced tombs of 12-inch-thick concrete prevented any risk of contamination from the radioactive bodies.

Officials did not say how or where dos Santos' body will be buried.

The cesium 137 was in a protective lead casing inside the machine found in September at a partly demolished cancer treatment center by junk scavengers, who sold it to a junk dealer.

The dealer and other junkyard workers broke open the capsule with a sledgehammer and exposed the cesium 137 powder. Friends and neighbors admired the substance as beautiful, rubbed it on their bodies and carried it in their pockets. Leide Ferreira even ate some of it.

The cesium 137 contaminated 243 people and some 30 tons of material, including clothes, furniture, junkyard scrap and soil. Doctors treated and released 200 people, but 39 remained hospitalized.

The nuclear waste was to be stored temporarily outside Goiania, while the government decides on a permanent dump site.

Chinese Still Shipping Arms To Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite China's denials that it is dealing arms to Iran, a shipload of Chinese-built artillery shells was delivered to Iran within the past week and the two countries may be close to sealing another deal for Silkworm anti-ship missiles, administration officials said today.

The officials, who demanded anonymity, quoted U.S. intelligence agencies as saying the artillery shells were delivered "within the last few days."

"They definitely came from China; no question about it," said one official.

The sources added, without elaboration, that there were "some indications" China was preparing to sell additional Silkworm missiles to Iran, possibly through a Hong Kong trading front.

"It's all very sketchy at the moment," said one official. "But there could — and I emphasize could — be another deal in the works."

Last week, the State Department announced the U.S. government was freezing the range of high-tech items that China could buy from America because of rising tensions in the Persian Gulf.

The United States has pressed China for more than a year to stop supplying arms to the Tehran government, particularly the Silkworm. The decision to censure China came after Silkworm missiles struck a U.S.-protected tanker in Kuwaiti waters Oct. 16.

The Silkworm is the Chinese version of an old Soviet missile that can be fired up to 50 miles from truck launchers on land at ships. The United States attacked and destroyed two Iranian offshore platforms in the gulf in retaliation for the missile attack two weeks ago on the tanker Sea Isle City.

China claims strict neutrality in the Persian Gulf conflict and insists it sells arms to neither side. It has acknowledged, however, that Chinese weapons may reach Iran through international arms markets.

Western officials have said China earns as much as $1 billion a year from arms sales to Iran.

One administration source said today that China's civilian leadership had "recognized the implications" of the U.S. decision to impose new sanctions. That could lead to a debate between civilian leaders and the military hierarchy, the source continued.

China's military bureaucracy oversees all arms transactions and uses the proceeds to modernize its own armed forces, the source explained. For that reason, the military may well resist any suggestion to scale back its arms dealings, he added.

"They clearly have been selling to Iran," said another official. "We really have no idea whether sanctions will make them think twice."

U.S. officials believe Iran has so far acquired slightly fewer than 100 of the Silkworm missiles. The sources said today it was too early to make any judgments on how many more missiles Iran might be trying to buy.

Growing Together

Once upon a time Greenville and Winterville were many road miles apart and there was little thought that someday they might be bumping together in planning and annexation.

That time has ended. Growth of the area between Greenville and Winterville has caused both communities to look at where they are going in planning, annexation and serving developing areas with water, sewer, fire and police protection and other municipal amenities.

It has also caused concern that Winterville might be absorbed by a growing neighboring city.

Greenville's new city manager Gregory Knowles moved quickly to assure Winterville that Greenville respected Winterville's status as an independent municipality.

"The city of Greenville and the city of Winterville have to coexist, and I think there is a lot of concern about the annexations we've been doing in that direction," Knowles said at a meeting of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday night.

"I'm concerned about the fact that some think we're going to make Winterville a suburb and that's not true. But I don't know how else to advise them and assure them other than to come up with a document that has the force of almost law."

Knowles asked that a subcommittee composed of representatives from Greenville, Winterville and Pitt County planning groups develop a document to resolve jurisdiction issues.

Knowles said, "I think it might work out to our best interest if we had some kind of mutually accepted plan. We would like to try to work out what we call an area of influence, not necessarily to determine territorial jurisdiction but a concept on an area of influence where we might come to some resolution and reconciliation relative to where the city is going to go or where it might not go."

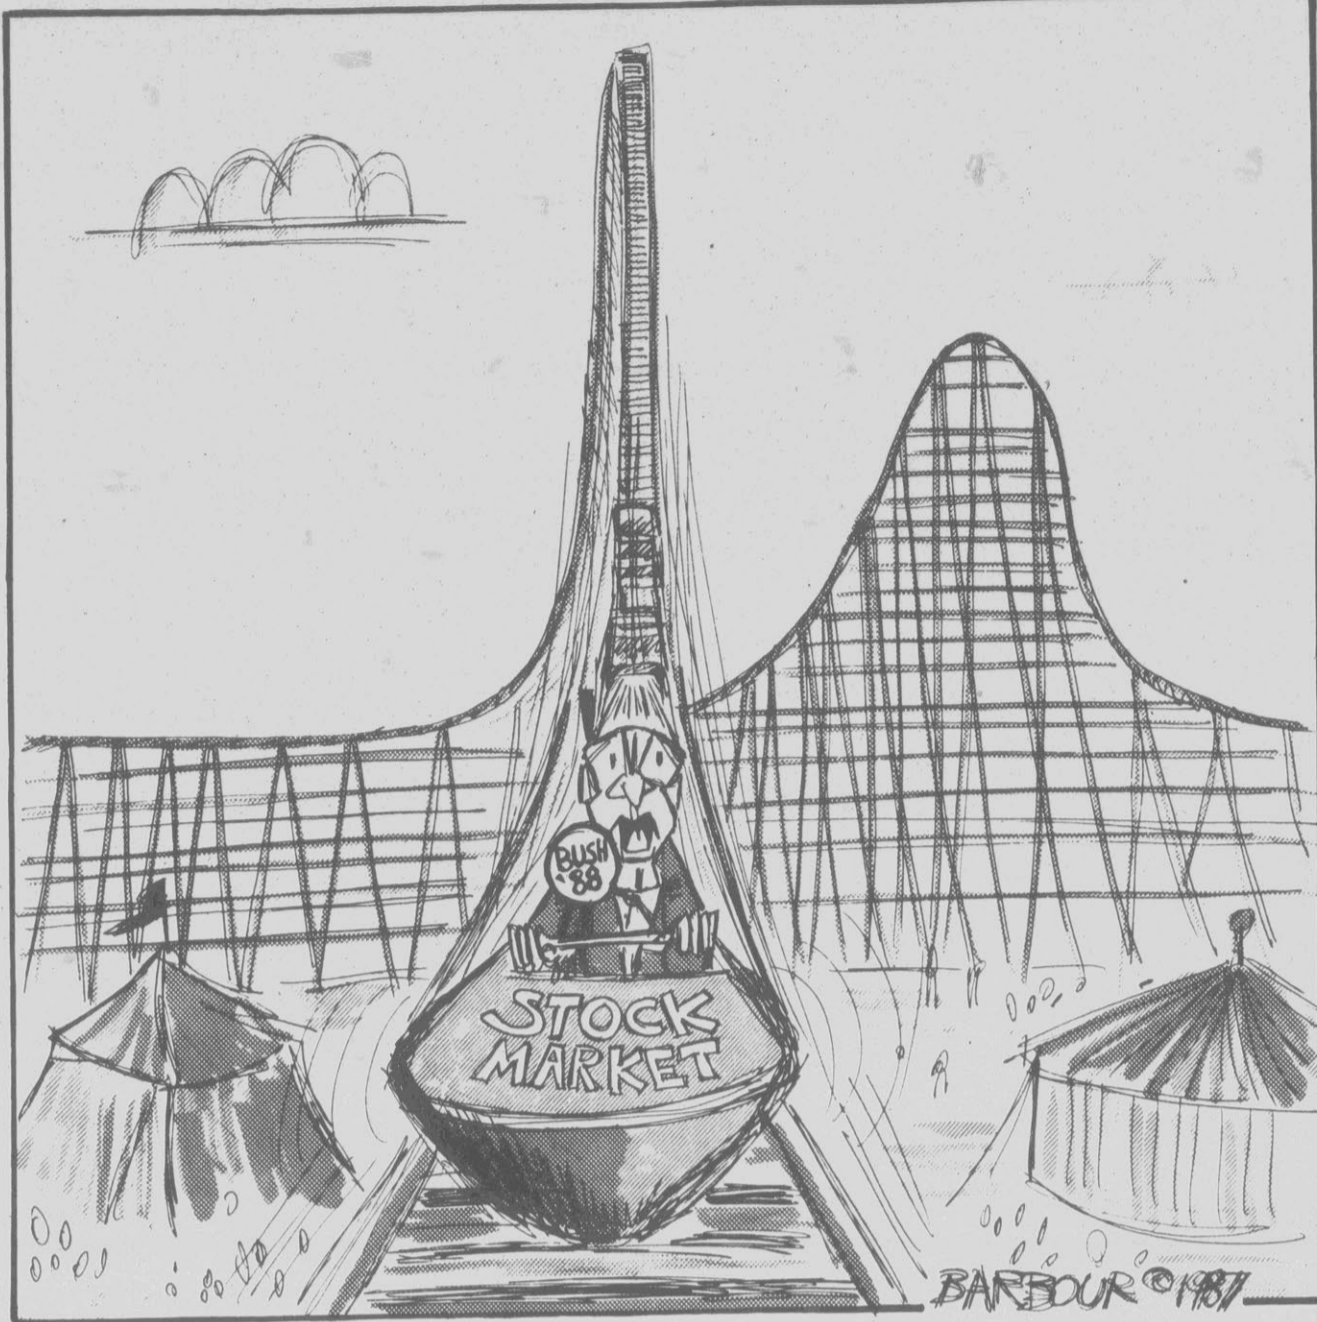

The comments were prompted by a dispute over who will annex and serve an area in the Cannons Cross Road area. Sewer service is presently provided by Greenville but Winterville maintains it is in its extraterritorial jurisdiction because of an agreement reached in 1971.

No action was taken on that particular business because the petitioners withdrew their request for annexation.

Pitt County is seeing the problem which has plagued growing cities and their smaller neighboring towns for many years.

There is no reason for this to be a problem between Winterville and Greenville. Lines can easily be established to delineate annexation areas. And committees with proper authority can be created to resolve specific problems just as boards of zoning adjustments do now.

There should be no fight between Winterville and Greenville over the growth areas between them. It is far more important that the municipalities cooperate to assure the area is developed properly in accordance with good planning and zoning. Both municipalities should see they have the resources to provide the proper services to the developing areas. With cooperation, Winterville and Greenville can develop a model relationship for coordinated development of their mutual areas.

Wall Street Woes Change No Minds

'The five presidential candidates who had been on record as adamantly opposed to new taxes ... stood their ground last week, and some criticized Reagan for failing to do the same.'

WASHINGTON — The stock market plunge that coaxed new flexibility from President Reagan on tax increases failed to budge any of the dozen men who want to succeed him.

The five presidential candidates who had been on record as adamantly opposed to new taxes — Vice President George Bush; Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.; Marion G. "Pat" Robertson; former Delaware Gov. Pierre S. "Pete" du Pont IV; and Alexander M. Haig Jr., all Republicans — stood their ground last week, and some criticized Reagan for failing to do the same.

The four candidates who had already supported new taxes — former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt; Jesse L. Jackson; Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill.; and Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., all Democrats — treated the carnage on Wall Street as fresh evidence that a deficit-reduction package must include additional revenues.

And the remaining three — Senate Minority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan.; Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, D; and Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn. — continued to leave themselves wiggle room on the politically sensitive subject.

During the 1984 reelection campaign, Bush spent a brief but embarrassing stretch of days opening a crack in the door for new taxes that Reagan kept slamming shut. This year-with Reagan facing retirement early in 1989 and Bush a leading aspirant for his job-the roles have reversed.

Bush made his first public comment on the stock market turmoil

Thursday in a Miami speech in which he said the solution to the budget deficit is "not to raise taxes; it is to restrain the growth of federal spending." A few hours later in Washington, Reagan opened his news conference by saying that he is prepared to listen to deficit-reduction proposals from Congress that include tax increases.

Several Bush aides sought to play down the differences. "If you listen to what the president said during the question-and-answer part of the press conference, and not just his opening statement, it's clear that they are basically in the same place," said Peter Teeley, campaign communications director for Bush. "Neither wants new taxes."

The market turmoil caught Bush at an awkward moment. In his presidential-campaign announcement speech the week before, he had gone out of his way to emphasize that he would not "raise taxes, period" — perhaps recalling from 1984 that any less emphatic formulation invited endless questions and trouble. But he then lapsed the day after the announcement, answering a hypothetical question in Atlanta by suggesting that there might be some circumstances in which a tax increase was necessary. When that produced a flurry of stories, Bush regrouped and returned to the tougher language.

Here is a rundown on the tax positions of the other 11 candidates, based on public statements or interviews last week with The Washington Post.

The Democrats:

•Babbitt: "All the flim-flam aside, a realistic plan must include both spending cuts and tax increases." He has proposed a consumption tax similar to a national sales tax that would raise $40 billion to $50 billion a year and means-tested spending cuts that would bring deficit reduction to $80 billion this year, the most ambitious target of all the candidates. He disputed the argument that a tax increase now might trigger a recession. "The best way to avoid a recession is to deal seriously with the deficits," he said, but added that he might be willing to phase his tax plan in over two years.

•Dukakis: He called for "strong determined measures" and "tough choices" in the wake of Monday's 508-point plunge in the Dow Jones Industrial Average, and he insisted that the "best and fairest" way to raise new revenue is to collect the $110 billion in federal taxes that are owed but not paid each year. He said he would not consider raising taxes without first launching a massive tax-enforcement effort. He also reiterated his call for trimming the Defense Department budget, including all spending for the Mid-etman missile.

•Gephardt: He called for raising $20 billion in new revenues this year, through an oil import fee ($8 billion) and a "base-broadening" Ways and Means Committee tax proposal that would raise $12 billion from corporations and upper-income taxpayers. He called for spending cuts of $10 billion to $20 billion, mainly in farm and defense programs.

•Gore: He said he favors tax increases "only as a last resort" and prefers first to look for spending cuts of an unspecified amount.

•Jackson: "This is the end of Ronald Reagan feel-good economics," he said, adding, "We have to convince the market that what we do is real, not smoke and mirrors." He called for a deficit reduction that goes beyond the $23 billion Gramm-Rudman-Hollings target. He said taxes on profitable corporations should be increased and defense spending trimmed.

•Simon: "Everything must be on the table," he said, echoing the line used by Reagan. He said new revenues should be considered only after spending is cut, but he has proposed considering a tax increase on upper-bracket taxpayers and a cigarette tax increase.

The Republicans:

•Dole: "First things first; we need to focus on the spending side-where there is still a lot of work to be done-before we start talking about tax increases."

•Du Pont: "The president should just say 'no' to new taxes," he said. "In my years as governor, I discovered that when you give the legislature the eye of a needle, they drive an 18-wheeler through it. Reagan's going to get a big tax increase bill on his desk, and he's going to be helpless to defend against it." Du Pont has called for a phasing out of farm subsidies, the elimination of 100 "unnecessary" military bases and an end to welfare programs for the able-bodied.

•Haig: "In this volatile climate, I urge him (Reagan) to reject immediate tax increases. ... Such actions at this time would threaten a further rapid contraction of liquidity and confidence when our economy has not yet digested the impact of the market's fall." He called for spending cuts in all areas of the budget-including defense-of 2 or 3 percent.

•Kemp: "Under Herbert Hoover, three mistakes turned the Crash of '29 into the Great Depression: tight money, protectionism and a tax increase. We must avoid all three. Recent history shows that Congress uses every penny of a tax increase for higher spending." He called for Congress to adopt an across-the-board spending freeze on domestic programs except Social Security.

•Robertson: He called for "bold action that will tell the world that the United States has the will and the moral courage to balance its budget and shore up the value of the dollar." He ruled out tax increases, calling instead for cuts in "wasteful spending" on both the domestic and defense side.

Strength For Today

Is there an inherent and necessary conflict between science and religion? Many scientists today would say there is. Others see that science and religion occupy separate realms, and that science can never answer the ultimate questions to which religion addresses.

This distinction was clearly realized by some of the greatest scientists of ages past. The philosopher Francis Bacon said, "Much science leads to God; a little science leads away from God."

Louis Pasteur made one of the most eloquent tributes of science to religion: "Could I but know all, I would have the faith of the Breton peasant's wife ... Faith saves the world. That is why the precept which the Savior repeated most often is the precept of the believer — 'All things are possible to him that believeth.'"

'Witch Doctors' Can't Explain Market

Economics is very good when it comes to analyzing the fundamental forces that determine long-run economic behavior, but miserable when it comes to determining the precise timing of events.

Nearly sixty years after the stock market crash in October 1929, for example, economic historians can still not tell us why it crashed on precisely those days. Economic historians know why the stock market was overvalued and had to fall, but not why it fell when it did, or why it fell at the pace it did.

Similarly, economists will never be able to determine why the stock market crashed on Oct. 19, 1987. If one wants to know why the stock market dropped 508 points on that particular day, there is no answer, and there never will be an answer.

Timing depends upon herd sociology, and economics can no more predict why the financial herd panicked on the 19th of October than an animal behaviorist can explain why a herd of African antelope panics on some particular moment on the plain of Serengeti.

There is, however, a straightforward answer as to why the stock market had to fall. Over the preceding weeks the Federal Reserve Board had pushed interest rates up to almost 10 percent. This meant that bonds were selling with a price-earnings ratio of 10 to 1. At the peak of the market, stocks were selling at a price-earnings ratio of 20 to 1.

But these two market ratios cannot for long co-exist. If one can buy a dollar's worth of earnings for $10 in the bond market, why should one pay $20 for a dollar's worth of earnings in the stock market?

At some point the two markets have to come back into equilibrium, since investors will sell stocks and buy bonds to get more earnings. And in selling stocks, they will drive the price of stocks down to levels that are compatible with that of bonds.

Since stocks are riskier than bonds, the price-earnings ratio on stocks must be less in the long run than the price-earnings ratio on bonds. Stocks are riskier than bonds since bonds have a prior call on earnings.

Basically, if the price-earnings ratio on bonds is 10 to 1, then the price-earnings ratio on stocks must be something like 8 or 9 to 1 in the long run.

If one observes a stock market with a price-earnings ratio of 20 to 1, and a bond market with a price-earnings ratio of 10 to 1, then investors must believe one of three things:

—Interest rates are going to come down so that the price-earnings ratio on bonds can go up to match those on stocks.

—Future company earnings are going to rise dramatically so that the price-earnings ratio on stocks can come down to match those on bonds without stock prices' having to fall.

—Stock prices are going to fall and bring the price-earnings ratio on stocks back into line with that on bonds.

As the Federal Reserve Board pushed interest rates up to defend the dollar in the weeks prior to Oct. 19, it became obvious that interest rates were not going to fall. With an interest rate at 10 percent, it was also obvious that the economy would remain sluggish, and that earnings were not going to rise sharply.

But to say this is to say nothing about Oct. 19. Stocks could have fallen earlier or later than they did. Stocks could have fallen faster or slower than they did.

Everyone wants to predict the timing of the stock market. People are willing to pay those who say they can predict the timing of the stock market. But a stock market predictor is the modern equivalent of the jungle witch doctor.

Witch doctors exist to know the unknowable. Everyone knows that they cannot really know the unknowable. But it would be so nice if they could that we are willing to suspend our intelligence and pay them to tell us what we know that they cannot tell us.

So it has been, and so it will always be — no matter how bad their forecasting record, the witch doctors of the stock market will always prosper. But in fact no one will be able to foretell the daily ups and downs.

Stock Market Crash Not The End Of Civilization

Analysis

The morning after the stock market's great fall, the daily comment my firm provides began: "The end of Western civilization?"

So it seemed to many of us who spend their days watching, prognosticating and maneuvering around the ticker tape.

All day Monday stock prices fell in panic selling. By day's end some 604 million shares had traded hands. The Dow Jones Industrial Average had lost 508 points or nearly a quarter of its value. One had the sense of being in an elevator whose cable had broken, hurtling it downward out of control.

As the selling intensified, I found myself periodically gazing from the windows of our 16th-floor office in Hartford to reassure myself that the city had not caved in, that the Connecticut River, which passes in front of us, had not changed course, nor the outlying hills cracked open.

Rumors circulated about suicides along Wall Street and that President Reagan might be asked to halt trading on the country's besieged marketplace. Trading volumes overwhelmed the computers. We no longer could assume that prices shown on our screens bore much relationship to actual market prices; at day's end the tape was some two hours late.

There were stories about investors who spent much of the night following the record selloff actually vomiting over their losses. At age 32, I was too young to have been sent to Vietnam and I began to wonder if this might be the beginning of my generation's greatest crisis.

Only Friday we had left the office with the market down 108 points — what we thought was the climax of a weeklong correction that had taken about 235 points off the Dow.

We reasoned — as we spent the next couple of hours bumping each other on a basketball court — that we were near the end of the selloff. In the glow of that Indian summer afternoon the economy seemed relatively stable, with corporate profits predicted to grow by leaps and bounds and unemployment under control.

Monday's crash exceeded our wildest fears.

On Tuesday, as the frenzied pace of trading began anew, there were signs that some financial markets had changed overnight. The long-suffering bond market began to rally as investors sought the safety of guaranteed returns while interest rates started to decline.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average soared nearly 200 points in less than two hours, reversed itself and fell almost 250 points before beginning a jagged upward pattern through the afternoon. Trading volume hit a new record, with 608 million shares moving on the Big Board.

It will be months, even years, before the extent of the damage caused by Monday's purging of stock prices is known.

I worried about my clients. Who among them will be able or willing to hang on — to resist the panic in the marketplace?

I cannot help but think that those who were shaken out of the market at sizable losses — be it those who sold out of fear or economic necessity — are the true victims of last week's bloody Monday.

A client called Friday just to talk. During market hours there is rarely time just to talk, but these are not ordinary days — these are days to talk.

She had grown up in the Depression. Now a business owner, she worried about the economy with a level of concern I had never detected in her. She asked questions, even though she said she knew there are no answers yet.

What could happen next? What would her stocks be worth if our worst fears are realized?

We agreed that the worst fears probably would not be realized. For long-term oriented investors to leave the market, to accept the losses brought on by the panic, is to capitulate. The stock market will survive and should continue, over time to present opportunities and create wealth. People with staying power and the ability to dollar cost average — the process of committing new funds at lower prices — will reap the greatest rewards as the market stabilizes.

As one of my colleagues, a weathered veteran of several market cycles, is fond of describing such tumultuous market movements: "Ebb and flow."

From Kindness To Greed

The political pundits tell us that Republican presidential candidates are trying to outdo each other in advertising their passion for compassion. They want the voters to know that, deep down, they understand the problems of the little guy and want to help him.

That's nice. But even if you give full credibility to the GOP candidates' profession of sympathy for the also-rans of American society, overcoming the compassion gap doesn't depend entirely on Republican or Democratic politicians. It also requires a moderation of the greed, the callous insensitivity to moral responsibility, that has become all too prevalent in the country at large.

An Asia expert of my acquaintance, a man who happens to be a personal friend of Philippine President Corazon Aquino, returned from Manila recently with the morose conclusion that the outlook for democracy there is dim. In his words, "The Philippine people have no sense of civic duty."

Neither do a lot of Americans these days.

U.S.-style capitalism, which has brought more prosperity to more people than any other system that the world has ever known, is based on an assumption of constructive greed. The idea is that each citizen working to feather his own nest will contribute to the production of wealth for America as a whole.

For 100 years, however, it has been obvious that unfettered capitalism breeds inequities, that unbridled competition leads in fact to economic monopoly and social injustice, and that a humane society must lend a helping hand to the small farmer, the small businessman and those who for reasons of age or infirmity cannot provide for themselves.

Long before Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal of the 1930s, Congress enacted antitrust laws and provided for regulation of public utilities and railroads.

The Great Depression, following the stock market crash of 1929, resulted in a whole set of laws designed to prevent a recurrence of the speculative abuses that helped trigger the crash. It also begat a cornucopia of programs — Social Security pensions for the elderly, minimum standards for worker pay and safety, subsidized loans for farmers and home buyers and small businessmen — aimed at taking more of the rough edges off capitalism.

The modified, more humane version of the free-enterprise system also turned out to be more productive and more prosperous. More people had more money to spend, which generated profits as well as jobs, and the swings in the business cycle were shallower and less destructive.

Capitalism's taming didn't repeal greed, of course. It merely tried to keep it within constructive bounds. This didn't go down well with the business titans of the time. Many hated FDR until the day he died.

As the years passed, however, a new generation of business and financial leaders emerged who recognized that, whether they liked it or not, their bottom-line prosperity depended on the well-being of the country as a whole. They had a sense of civic duty — or at least they recognized the necessity of acting as though they had one for the sake of good public relations.

Unfortunately, though, it seems to be a rule of nature that all things, good or bad, are done to excess. During the 1960s President Johnson led the country on a binge of do-goodism. Under his banner of the Great Society, a torrent of social programs was enacted. All were well intended, several badly needed, but they gave little regard to the long-term ability and willingness of Americans to pay for it all. The momentum slowed but did not stop during the Nixon, Ford and Carter presidencies.

An inevitable reaction set in. Ronald Reagan rode into the White House atop the taxpayer revolt and the souring of public support for social programs that simply had not solved the problems that they were supposed to solve.

Budget restraint would have been necessary no matter who was elected. But budget cuts inevitably involve painful adjustments, and the safety net promised by Reagan proved to have gaping holes.

In any event the new approach of the Reagan administration went far beyond budget cuts. The president brought with him a crew of ideologues who preached a doctrine of social and economic Darwinism — a dog-eat-dog, survival-of-the-fittest dogma that included little sympathy for victims of the revolutionary changes occurring in the U.S. economy.

At the government level, agencies responsible for worker safety, meat inspection, pension protection and equal opportunity lost their zest for enforcement.

Within the business world, greed and callousness were in.

Important corporate executives said openly that they felt no particular responsibility toward workers displaced by mergers or by plant closings and shifts to overseas production, or to local communities whose tax base was seriously impaired.

The number of people with company or other health insurance actually has declined, partly because of a deliberate shift to "temporary" workers who do not qualify for health insurance or pension coverage.

Reagan's Department of Justice turned a blind eye to the destructive effects of hostile takeover attempts.

Unfortunately, the flight to greed affected not just the winners of our society but the ordinary citizen as well. When auto and steel workers lost their jobs, the folks in the Texas oil country and the farm belt didn't much care. But when the tables turned, the rest of the country didn't much care what happened to the arrogant Texans, either.

That is unfortunate. Americans have always been generous and, compared with the folks in most other countries, they still are. But the milk of human kindness is not flowing very strongly these days.

State Puts Best Foot Forward At Sunbelt Expo

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
North Carolina agricultural officials jumped at the opportunity to brag about the Tar Heel State's wide variety of crops at the recent Sunbelt Agricultural Exposition in Georgia.

Nick Paul, assistant director of the division of marketing in the N.C. Department of Agriculture, said the show's sponsors must have liked what they saw.

"We were pleased when they put the pressure on us to come back next year," he said in a telephone interview from his Raleigh office.

North Carolina was designated the spotlight state for the three-day show earlier this month. With 435 exhibits, the Expo is one of the country's largest agricultural shows.

Held each year at an abandoned Air Force base near Moultrie, Ga., the Expo features new innovations in farm equipment, 600 acres of crops for harvest and tillage demonstrations, educational displays and entertainment.

Given the chance to shine, North Carolina's representatives brought in an exhibit focusing on tobacco, Christmas trees, apples, cotton, sweet potatoes and other crops grown in the state.

"Our role was to brag on North Carolina," said Paul, who attended the show that opened Oct. 12. "Some 200,000 people come through the show from states like Florida, Texas and Tennessee."

North Carolina is surpassed only by California and Florida in crop diversity, he said, so an ample selection of home-grown crops were included in the exhibit.

The state's $42 million Christmas tree industry got a big boost at the show, Paul said.

"We made a lot of contacts," he said. "North Carolina has a well adapted climate to grow white pine and Frazier fir. We can compete very effectively with states like Maine."

State officials also seized the chance to push some of North Carolina's other crops, including tobacco, sweet potatoes and apples.

"Tobacco is, of course, still our No. 1 cash crop," he said. "But we're also first in sweet potatoes and turkeys."

A recent marketing campaign by the N.C. Department of Agriculture that targeted chain-store produce buyers promoted the sweet potato as a home-grown treasure.

"We want the North Carolina sweet potato to be recognized like the Idaho potato and the Maine lobster," Paul explained. "We want to promote that image with consumers."

A similar marketing campaign will promote North Carolina turkeys, he said.

Another Tar Heel State crop featured at the Expo is making a comeback — cotton.

"There's no question about that," Paul said. "With the elimination of the boll weevil ... more and more farmers are going back to it."

North Carolina officials also took along some red delicious and yellow delicious apples to show buyers at the Expo another healthy segment of the state's agricultural industry.

"We're right in the heart of the apple-picking season right now," Paul said. "It's been a much improved year compared with the last two years."

Last year's drought had a severe impact on the state's apple crop, Paul said. In 1985, a spring freeze reduced the harvest.

Mrs. Martin Has Biopsy

RALEIGH (AP) — Dottie Martin, the wife of Gov. Jim Martin, has undergone a biopsy for possible breast cancer and initial indications are that a growth was "entirely benign," said Tim Pittman, the governor's spokesman.

"There is no cancer there," Pittman said Monday. Mrs. Martin was admitted Monday morning to the out-patient service of Raleigh Community hospital for day surgery on the basis of a routine screening mammogram performed Friday, Martin said in a statement read by Pittman.

Mrs. Martin returned home at 10:30 a.m. and "has been resting since then," Pittman said.

"She expressed her confidence in the procedure, and would encourage all women as to the benefits of an early diagnosis," Martin said.

Electricity Cut Off For Dialysis Patient

RALEIGH (AP) — A crisis agency worker says a rural electric cooperative is insensitive to a Johnston County man whose power has been cut off three times this year, even though he uses a home kidney dialysis machine, but the cooperative says the family is continuously late in paying its bills.

Wake Electric Membership Corp. cut the electricity to Harvey Tanner's mobile home near Middlesex in February, August and September. Tanner, 47, has kidney failure and must use a home dialysis machine four times a day.

"The bottom line is (Wake electric) was aware he was on a life support machine," said Dorothy C. "Gene" Kornegay of Johnston-Lee Community Action Inc., a private, non-profit agency for low-income families that helped the Tanners pay their bill last month.

But Wake Electric staff assistant Ann S. Curren said the Tanners have a "terrible" payment record.

"We're certainly not out to do anything that's detrimental to anybody, but ... it seems to be that it's at the point where they will pay the bill only if you go out there to collect it," she said.

Woman Charged In Boyfriend's Death

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — A 40-year-old Catawba County woman was charged with killing her boyfriend after a domestic argument, authorities say.

Virginia Dishman was charged Sunday morning with murder in the death of William Rudolph Gay, 60, of Newton, said Maj. Richard Cannon of the Catawba County Sheriff's Department.

Gay was shot in the chest with a .22-caliber pistol inside their single-story house, Cannon said.

Scientists Hold Mock Tribute

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Some earth scientists at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte celebrated Monday as the 5,991st anniversary of the Earth's creation — a mock tribute to an Irish archbishop who placed the date at Oct. 26, 4004 B.C.

"He did as well as he could," said Barbara Christian, UNCC earth sciences lecturer, who pointed out Archbishop James Ussher made his estimate in the 17th century, relying heavily on the Book of Genesis.

Ms. Christian said the earth sciences honorary society is "poking a little bit of fun" at the estimate with a birthday party featuring a pet rock contest, dinosaur-shaped refreshments and a "dating game" in which players try to determine the age of rocks and fossils.

She said Ussher, unable to use radio-isotope dating, traced generations of ancestors of Adam and Eve and added their life spans to reach his conclusion. "But he did work in the most scientific way he could," she said.

Report Says Public TV 'Challenged'

RALEIGH (AP) — The UNC Center for Public Television must find a unique niche if it is to survive in the crowded telecommunications marketplace, according to a consultant's study.

One way to do that is by producing more quality local programming, says the report, which was released Monday.

The 75-page report, requested by University of North Carolina system President C.D. Spangler Jr., was designed to compare the center's activities to those of other states' public television networks, said UNC Vice President Wyndham Robertson. It was conducted by Mac S. Harris, a director of corporate communications for Carolina Power & Light Co.

Harris concluded that after 32 years of services, the center faces "a period of challenges" posed by inadequate funding, outmoded equipment and competition from cable television and other technology.

Harris describes cable TV as a "missed blessing" for North Carolina's public television system — one that extends the signal's reach, yet triggers competition for viewers by offering commercial programs that historically have been available only on public television stations.

Davidson Residents Jam Hearing To Protest Waste Treatment Plan

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — About 15,000 Davidson County residents jammed a Lexington high school gymnasium and spilled over into a cafeteria and football stadium to protest the proposed construction of a state hazardous-waste treatment facility.

"I've never seen anything like this before," said Eddie Smith, former Lexington mayor and the co-chairman of a citizens' group opposing the facility.

"We got the message out to the people," he said, adding that the group mailed 35,000 letters in the last three weeks.

Several speakers told the state Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission the proposed site was too close to High Rock Lake, prime farmland and the population density center of the state.

The commission is considering a site in the county as one of two potential locations for the facility, which will treat about 90 million pounds of hazardous waste annually. The Davidson County site was added by the commission to the list of potential sites Oct. 1.

"We don't like the fact that the site was added so late in the search," said Jim Nance of Lexington. "It gave us only a month to defend ourselves."

"With all due respect, I think you've destroyed any possibility of developing good will with this community," Davidson County Attorney Garry Frank told the commission.

The residents were controlled when commission chairwoman Deborah H. Parker outlined the criteria the panel would use in the selection process. The crowd applauded when she said the search for sites was not over.

"We are presently looking for sites and we're looking for sites that are quite, quite large," Ms. Parker said.

Ms. Parker said many residents who wrote her were misinformed about the purpose of the treatment facility.

"It's important for you to know that it will not treat radioactive materials or PCBs," she said. "This facility will be designed to handle chemical toxic waste produced by North Carolina industries."

She promised the residents that the commission would consider all of their concerns.

"We are going to do our very best to make a decision on a site that's best for North Carolina," she said. "We will take what you say very, very seriously."

Rowan County protestors, meanwhile, said they planned to greet the commission today with tractors and signs showing skulls and crossbones during a tour of a proposed 264-acre site.

Grifton Man Will Head State Victims Compensation Panel

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — After four years of waiting, North Carolina this week will begin compensating victims of violent crimes for their losses.

"In the past, we've gotten these horrible, sad letters" from victims begging for help, said Robert Hassell, who was elected director of the program Monday. "All we've been able to do is say 'we're sorry, but there's nothing we can do.' We'd like to think those days are over."

Hassell, director of the state Division of Victim and Justice Services, said about two dozen claims already have been filed. When the N.C. Crime Victims Compensation Commission adopted its rules Monday, it enabled Hassell to begin writing checks for claims under $5,000.

The commission held its first meeting Monday and elected the father of a murder victim as chairman.

"It's ... something that's been a long time coming," Joseph Dean, secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said.

"I think it's going to go a long way toward helping people who have not ever had help before," Dean added, "and restore a little balance to the criminal justice system which has been weighted in favor of the criminal for a lot of years."

The delay resulted from the Legislature's failure to fund the program. This year, lawmakers finally appropriated $2 million for fiscal 1987-89.

Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, who sponsored a bill to fine-tune the 1983 law creating the program, won support for funding by sponsoring a measure that boosted the fee paid by criminals on supervised probation by $5 per month. That will generate about $1.3 million per year.

North Carolina is the 37th state to fund a victims' compensation program, while another six or seven have other forms of assistance, Hassell said.

The five-member commission includes Dean; A.A. Adams and Louis Pippin, both from Grifton; Mark D. Donaldson, a deputy sheriff from Pitsboro, and William W. Melvin, a senior deputy state attorney general.

Adams was elected chairman and Pippin vice-chairman. They are friends and crime victims. Pippin said his home had been broken into numerous times.

The program is too late to help Adams, a retired employee of a Du Pont plant in Kinston. His son, Richard, was murdered in December 1982 during a robbery of the Winston-Salem restaurant where he was receiving management training.

He and another employee died of gunshot wounds. John Sterling Gardner was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. His case is pending before the state Supreme Court, which has upheld the conviction once.

Crime victims "are victimized by the criminal and then we victimize them in our court system," said Adams, who attended many of the meetings of legislative committees that handled the Hunter bills.

"I don't think I'll ever be the same, but I've come to realize there's an awful lot of ... victims who need assistance," Adams said.

He said he was not left financially destitute by his son's death as are many crime victims. But Adams said he has spent thousands of dollars tracking the case through the court system — mostly for trips to Winston-Salem and telephone calls.

Under the law and rules adopted by the commission, the program will provide victims up to $20,000 for crimes involving bodily injury.

Investor Who Lost Millions Kills Brokerage Manager, Shoots Self

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — An investor who reportedly lost millions in the stock crash was facing a deadline for covering his losses when he walked into a Merrill Lynch office, shot and wounded his broker, killed the brokerage's manager and shot himself to death.

Arthur Kane's last, bloody moments came Monday, when the 53-year-old federal bureaucrat pulled a powerful handgun out of his briefcase and opened fire.

"He had suffered some very serious losses in the stock market. He was distraught," said Marvin Hollub, father-in-law of the oldest of Kane's three daughters. "But other than that, there was no indication. ... When people lose money, they are upset."

Kane amassed a portfolio in the millions, The New York Times reported today. The New York Post, quoting an unidentified Merrill Lynch source, said Kane "had as much as $8 million invested" in the stock market and that he "lost millions last week."

Police said Kane, a bespectacled Social Security Administration hearing examiner, was a near-daily visitor to the two-story Merrill Lynch offices in The Falls, a fashionable shopping center in southwest Dade County.

"He was a nice man. He would come in nearly every day," said Marie Ros, a former junior broker at the office. "He knew the market. He liked to trade. You know, people get hooked on it."

Kane was such a regular that he could come into the office when he pleased and sometimes stayed after hours talking to the employees, she said.

Merrill Lynch employees said he often spent hours there watching the electronic market reports, chatting with employees and studying stock listings.

Melvyn Cohen, a Merrill Lynch executive, said Kane was a regular customer, but that calling him a heavy trader would be "speculation right now."

"He was just a regular customer. He always seemed calm and collected," said Osvaldo Machado, 36, a broker.

Machado said the brokers had been under pressure since the stock market made its dramatic, 500-point decline Oct. 19, and were too busy to think about a customer exploding.

"After Monday and Tuesday, we were all exhausted. We were just trying to do our jobs," he said. "It was just a normal day. Then I heard noise — gunshots."

A Merrill Lynch spokesman said the slain brokerage manager was Jose F. Argilagos, 51. The wounded stockbroker was Lloyd Kolokoff, 39, of Miami. Both were local vice presidents.

Kolokoff was flown by helicopter to Baptist Hospital, where he underwent surgery for a back wound, said hospital spokeswoman Adrienne Silver.

His condition improved from critical to serious late Monday, and he remained in serious condition today. Doctors were reportedly concerned about whether he would be partially paralyzed.

Kolokoff's wife, Wanda, burst into screams when she arrived at the office, but detectives quickly shouted to her that her husband was still alive. Police then took her to the hospital. Later, Argilagos' daughter, her eyes red, emerged from the building clutching some materials that included a Wall Street Journal.

Homicide investigator Russell Fischer said a .357-caliber Magnum handgun was used in the shooting.

"They met in Argilagos' office," Fischer said. "During the course of their discussion, Mr. Kane pulled a handgun out of his briefcase. ... A number of shots were fired."

Police said shots rang out about five minutes after Kane arrived. Witnesses said Argilagos' secretary Patricia Ward yelled: "He's got a gun, duck!"

She later came outside to calmly tell clients the offices would be closed the rest of the day. At two other Merrill Lynch offices, in Miami and Hallandale, security guards were posted at the entrances.

Aaron Perry, a Profile Investments broker, said friends at Merrill Lynch told him Kane had received a margin call because of last week's crash.

Monday was the deadline for meeting the margin call, the Times reported. Bruce Anderson, the manager of a nearby furniture store who spoke to brokers leaving the office, said he was told that Kane had indicated he had a check with him before walking into Argilagos' office.

Speculators buying stock on margin borrow money from a brokerage to cover up to 50 percent of the cost of securities. If the stock's value falls, the margin call asks the client to put up more assets to bring the percentage of the stock's value covered by the loan within required limits.

If the call is not met, the brokerage can sell off the stock involved to cover the debt. "From what I've heard, the guy was overextended. We're talking huge losses," Perry said.

"It's one thing to lose your money, it's another thing to lose your mind like this guy apparently did," Perry said.

Market's Ups, Downs Driving Investors Wild Seeking Advice

By ARLENE LEVINSON
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Investors stung by the stock market's swoops and slides are looking everywhere and anywhere for advice on how to survive a frenzied bear market.

Newsstands report brisk sales of financial newspapers and stock brokerage houses report unprecedented inquiries, despite last week's stock market crash.

"The phones are pretty busy," said Ryan Butler of the L.F. Rothschild brokerage in Boston.

"People are asking what's going to happen, should we sell," he said. "Some people seem just blown out, emotionally, and other people can smell an opportunity."

Peter Leach, vice president for media relations of Merrill Lynch, said the rate for opening new accounts each day has been "at least 10 times normal."

Some of the increase may have come from people who could not get through to discount houses last week because of the heavy volume, he said.

Leach said at least half of the company's 11,000 financial consultants in 480 offices around the country worked Saturday to talk with clients and clear out paperwork from the hectic week.

Sandra Bromfield, a Boston-area financial planner, said she has received more calls from people who had been making investment decisions on their own.

E.F. Hutton brokers were kept busy during expanded hours Friday night and on Saturday going over portfolios with clients, said spokesman Bob Sharkey.

People also have been snapping up copies of The Wall Street Journal and its weekly cousin, Barron's, Boston area vendors said.

A spokeswoman for the Journal said the print run for its half million newsstand editions was boosted nationally 20 percent Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Waldenbooks and B. Dalton's Bookseller chains reported a surge in business, especially in sales of "The Great Depression of 1990," written by Southern Methodist University Professor Ravi Batra.

A spokeswoman for the book's publisher, Simon and Schuster, said there has been a notable increase in sales all over the country in the past week. She would not disclose exact figures.

"People are starting to take that book seriously now, whereas before people were treating it as if it were a little off the wall," said Frank Allen, a manager at Boston University Bookstore.

He said consumers are shying away from other books on the stock market.

"There aren't a lot of books dealing with the stock market going down," he said. "Most are more positive guides towards investing and I don't think people feel they can trust those books."

Those investors who believe stars tell them more than stock tables turned to Cambridge astrologer Barbara Koval. Her clientele belong to the middle- and upper-income brackets, and include economists, she said.

The brokers could use advice and consoling themselves, said Rothschild's Butler.

"Every trader, every broker is getting more emotionally involved than the investors," he said.

Butler says he gets his advice from his mother, Pat.

He said she assured him: "Listen, hang in there. It's always darkest before the dawn."

Publishers Charging More For Textbooks

RALEIGH (AP) — Publishers are selling social studies books in North Carolina for prices as much as 58 percent higher than five years ago, according to bids opened Monday by state officials.

One reason for the jump is the cost of consulting services and voluminous teacher resource materials such as work sheets, transparencies for overhead projectors and computer-generated tests that publishers offer free to school systems that buy their books.

The higher prices could make it difficult for some school systems to afford the books they need, state and local school officials said.

Reagan Bans Iranian Imports

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is tightening the economic screws on Iran, ordering a ban on all U.S. imports a week after American naval forces retaliated for a missile attack against a U.S.-flagged tanker.

"The measures I am initiating are a direct result of the Iranian government's own actions, including its unprovoked attacks on U.S. forces and U.S. merchant vessels," Reagan said.

The president on Monday directed the State and Treasury departments to institute an outright ban on imports and a partial ban on exports, applying essentially to products with possible military applications.

The measures were announced a week after Reagan ordered U.S. Navy destroyers to bombard an oil platform used by Iran for military purposes, in reprisal for a Silkworth missile attack on a U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti oil vessel.

The economic sanctions, Reagan said, "don't reflect any quarrel with the Iranian people." Instead, he cited the Iranian government's "refusal to implement U.N. Security Council Resolution 598, its continued aggression against non-belligerent nations of the Persian Gulf and its sponsorship of terrorism there and elsewhere in the world."

The ban on imports will take effect as soon as possible, he said, adding that the additional export controls "will go into effect in a week to 10 days."

"Let me emphasize that we are taking these economic measures only after repeated but unsuccessful attempts to reduce tensions with Iran and in response to the continued and increasingly belligerent behavior of the Iranian government," he said.

"These measures will remain in place so long as Iran persists in its aggressive disregard for the most fundamental norms of international conduct," the president said in a statement.

Oil imports from Iran last year totaled around $500 million, but had reached about $900 million through the first seven months of this year.

According to the Energy Department's "Monthly Energy Review," Iranian oil in 1986 accounted for 0.31 percent of U.S. oil imports. For the first seven months of 1987, the percentage was 1.4.

But, according to a White House fact sheet, oil earnings to Iran from crude oil imported by the United States is estimated to total over $1 billion from Jan. 1 through July 30 of this year.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said he hoped other countries would follow the U.S. lead and embargo Iranian oil, causing a drop in the price of Iranian oil and in revenue for the purchase of weapons.

"Maybe it will be catching," Shultz said on the PBS program, "McNeill-Lehrer NewsHour."

Shultz acknowledged that it would be difficult to enforce an embargo, since the origin of oil on world markets is hard to trace. But, he said, "while Iran is conducting the war (with Iraq) and conducting terrorism, we shouldn't be buying things from them to the tune we are. ... We feel it's important to lay down our marker."

Non-petroleum imports include pistachio nuts, carpets and caviar. In 1986 non-petroleum imports were valued at around $100 million, White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said. "We expect that number would have declined by 25 percent in 1987, even with no trade controls in place," he said.

Total U.S. exports to Iran amounted to roughly $34 million. Popadiuk said "that number is declining in 1987. Those U.S. exports covered by the new controls amount to less than $10 million."

Among the U.S. products that were put on the list of banned export items are: mobile communications equipment; boats, including inflatable rafts; off-highway tractors; large diesel engines; non-strategic aircraft parts and components; and portable electric generators.

"The United States believes that more normal relations with Iran will evolve as Iranian belligerence and tensions in the area diminish," Reagan said. "We have made these points known repeatedly to Iran, through diplomatic channels as well as public statements. Unfortunately, the Iranian government's response, to date, in deeds as well as in words, has been entirely unconstructive."

Prisoners Protest Slaying Of Human Rights Activist

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Political prisoners enraged by the slaying of a prominent human rights activist held a demonstration in a jail outside the capital, and labor and student groups said they were planning protests today.

The political organization for El Salvador's leftist rebels meanwhile said the killing could jeopardize peace talks with the government.

Herbert Ernesto Anaya, 32, the president of the Salvadoran Human Rights Commission, was gunned down Monday as he left his home, official sources said.

Inmates at La Mariona prison, El Salvador's main penitentiary for men, shouted through megaphones to prisoners in other areas Monday, blaming the government for the killing and demanding an investigation.

Some radio stations broadcast a communique from the prisoners saying they had taken over the prison, but officials denied the claim.

No injuries were reported in the demonstration at the prison north of San Salvador. Anaya had been held at the jail for several months last year, after the government arrested him on suspicion of collaborating with leftist rebels.

Two men firing handguns shot Anaya point-blank as he left home to drive two of his six children to school, a police source said. The children were not hurt.

No group has claimed responsibility for the murder. Police and military sources said they had no leads on the identity of the killers.

Miguel Angel Montenegro, a spokesman for the Human Rights Commission, said death squads linked to security forces were to blame.

"All the responsibility for this assassination falls on the armed forces high command, the security agencies and the government itself," Montenegro told a news conference.

Government spokesman Roberto Viera, speaking at another news conference, said, "This irrational act reflects the level of hate and rancor that exists in the hearts and minds of some Salvadorans."

Human rights groups say 65,000 people have been killed since civil war began in October 1979, many of them slain by death squads. Death squad killings have declined sharply in recent years.

Three other members of the Human Rights Commission have been killed since 1980 and two others disappeared while in police custody.

Leaders of the National Union of Workers, the largest opposition labor organization, said they were arranging activities today to protest the murder. They said that because of security reasons they could not describe the activities, in which university students were planning to take part.

Leftist guerrillas burned a city bus and a pickup truck belonging to the government electrical company on Monday. Witnesses quoted the rebels as saying the actions were to protest the killing.

The Democratic Revolutionary Front, the rebels' political organization, said Anaya's killing could derail talks with the government on meeting a Nov. 7 deadline for a cease-fire set out in a new Central American peace plan.

Anaya was arrested May 26, 1986, on suspicion of collaborating with the rebels, who have been fighting for eight years to overthrow the U.S.-backed government. He was held without trial under a national emergency law, then released last year with 56 other political prisoners in exchange for an army colonel captured by the guerrillas.

The emergency law was lifted in January.

The commission, founded in 1977, is an independent organization of lawyers and other professionals that has criticized government human rights violations. Rightists have accused it of being sympathetic to the left.

Anaya's father, Rafael Lopez, told reporters his son had received several anonymous death threats because of his work with the commission.

"He had had a premonition, and when we talked about it, he told me, 'Look, father, they are going to kill me. They are going to kill me. But that's okay, let them do it,'" Lopez said.

Amnesty International on Monday called on the Salvadoran government to investigate the killing. The London-based organization said there have been numerous threats against human rights workers in El Salvador in recent months.

The number and identities of members of death squads are not known. Participants in the stocks are generally believed to be connected with the military and other security forces.

South Koreans Giving Strong Backing To New Constitution

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A constitution paving the way for sweeping democratic reforms appeared headed for overwhelming approval today. Early returns show 94 percent of the voters favored the referendum.

Election officials said at least 74 percent of the country's 25.6 million eligible voters cast ballots and that nearly all were expected to vote for the measure despite dissident calls for a boycott.

Korean newspapers in their first editions for Wednesday reported with banner headlines that the constitution had passed and said the government would formally announce its acceptance Friday.

Hundreds of radicals demanding a boycott of today's referendum and the overthrow of the government battled riot police in front of Myungdong Roman Catholic Cathedral in the heart of Seoul. Protesters hurled scores of firebombs and rocks as police held them back with volleys of tear gas.

The government agreed to the new constitution and other reforms after nationwide protests for full democracy during the summer.

"Our long awaited aspirations are about to come true with this referendum," said businessman Chung Sung-nam as he cast his vote in Seoul. "I hope this will open the way for democracy."

Voting went on in a relaxed manner at many polling stations despite heavy security. Police, some armed with rifles, stood guard against possible attempts by radicals to disrupt voting.

Many people said they wanted an end to the country's long years of authoritarian government. South Korea has been ruled by military governments and civilian strongmen for most of its recent history.

For the constitution to be passed, at least 50 percent of the country's eligible voters must cast ballots, with a majority of the ballots favoring the referendum.

No Prosecution

LUDWIGSBURG, West Germany (AP) — The chief prosecutor of Nazi war crimes in West Germany today ruled out a trial for Reinhold Kulle, who was deported from the United States after lying about his Nazi past.

Kulle was accused of hiding his Nazi activities when he entered the United States 30 years ago. The 66-year-old former custodian, who was living in the Chicago area, was deported Monday to West Germany after a U.S. Supreme Court justice refused his emergency appeal.

Alfred Streim, the chief Nazi crimes prosecutor, said officials had conducted a preliminary investigation on Kulle.

"However, there were no indications of a crime that still can be prosecuted," Streim told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

Streim heads the Ludwigsburg center responsible for coordinating investigations and prosecutions of suspected Nazi criminals.

Under West German law, suspected Nazi criminals can only be prosecuted for murder, because the statute of limitations has elapsed for other crimes.

Ferry Sinks

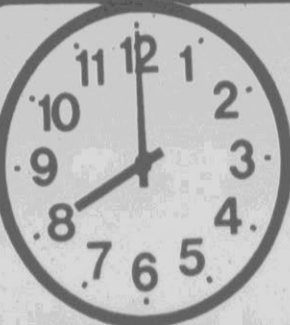

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A overcrowded ferry with about 450 people aboard sank after hitting a sandbar on the Ganges River, where divers today found 10 bodies and braved swift waters to look for 100 missing passengers, officials said.

Many of the missing were believed trapped inside the hull of the double-deck ferry that sank Monday at Aricha, 100 miles northwest of Dhaka, the officials said.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said divers found the 10 bodies floating about a mile downriver.

The ferry was carrying more than double its legal number of passengers, the officials said. The boat was on its daily run from the southwestern district of Faridpur to Aricha when it sank.

Police at Aricha said at least 300 people were rescued by fishing boats and another ferry.

The Box Project Helps Families In Dignified Way

By SHERRI SINDELAR
The Champaign-Urbana
News-Gazette

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Ellen McDowell has known Martha Taylor for nearly 25 years, helping clothe her children, exchanging letters of love and sharing child-raising experiences, though the two have never met or spoken on the phone.

McDowell, of Champaign, "met" Taylor, of Greenwood, Miss., through The Box Project, a 25-year-old endeavor launched by a transplanted Southerner concerned about the plight of needy families in the South.

The Southerner, Virginia Naevie of Vermont, sent basic necessities to such families and later enlisted the assistance of friends. One was an acquaintance of McDowell, who in turn enlisted her help.

Today, The Box Project includes 3,272 members serving 2,560 families.

It operates simply, matching interested individuals, families or groups with families needing assistance, taking into consideration the age of family members and clothing sizes.

The organization suggests the giving families send a box every other month. The original idea was to send surplus items, such as sheets one was tired of or shoes or clothes children had outgrown.

The Box Project really got organized in about 1970, McDowell said. "It came as a surprise to us when we were asked to pay dues," she said. "The organization was rather loose before that, but now it is much more efficient. We get a newsletter with suggestions on what to send and bits of news about other members."

In observance of the project's 25th anniversary, all the giving members are being invited to Mississippi, where most of the assisted families live. The pilgrimage is planned for next summer.

McDowell said that although it seems ironic, one of the things that has made the project work is the distance between correspondents. "It lends a certain grace to the situation," she said.

"I always send a self-addressed stamped envelope and always get a letter in return. I've found that you end up sending the same things you like or need. But they have never made a demand for certain items. They do ask for basic things, like sheets or school supplies. It has been a very dignified and rewarding relationship on both ends. They respect the arrangement."

The Taylor family had as many as 14 members at one time, including children and grandparents, McDowell said.

"We feel like we are just touching the tip of the iceberg," McDowell said, "but when our son died, Martha sent such a touching letter. The arrangement tends to be supportive on both sides."

"We have exchanged snapshots. I knew, though, when I looked at the photos they sent with their faded images and well-worn corners that they were probably the only ones the family had, so I returned them."

McDowell said she had thought a lot about the project's North-South orientation. "But, actually, it could go from any section of the country to any other section where there are needy people," she said.

"Would I like to meet the Taylors? I don't know. My husband keeps saying it's interstate all the way. I think neither of us want to change the quality of the relationship."

One year at Eastertime, McDowell made dresses for all the girls in the Taylor family.

McDowell thinks of Martha Taylor as her friend.

"It's funny how similar our experiences have been in raising our children," she said.

Martha's husband, Israel Taylor, was a sharecropper but is disabled, McDowell said. Martha has worked at times, but her health is questionable. One daughter won a college scholarship. Their youngest child is about 12.

In the past 25 years, two natural disasters have struck the Taylors — a flood and a tornado — which destroyed all their possessions at separate times.

"They have had a lot to cope with," McDowell said.

Hand To Mouth Never Ends

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

There is a period in a child's growth when everything he picks up goes directly into his mouth.

It's a tense time for a mother who must appear miraculously at the right time to snatch whatever from his hands and save him from devouring a lamp shade or the stair treads.

With most children, the phase is a temporary one. They will baste everything with saliva and reduce it to bite-size for a period of three years ... tops. Then, they judiciously begin to examine the item, smell it and determine whether it's edible.

Then, there is a group of children who never outgrow it. I am the mother of one of them. At the age of 9, he ate three soaps shaped like strawberries. At age 11, he ate a green apple and didn't even realize it was a candle until he spit out the wick. One evening in his 16th year, we were at a friend's house having dinner when I looked up to find him eating a cork coaster.

"What are you doing?" I asked. "Eating a cookie," he said. "It's not too bad."

"I'll get her recipe," I said tiredly. Ironically, children who hang on to this appetite for non-edibles never seem to suffer any ill effects. My son has consumed enough baking soda (stored in the refrigerator to combat odors) to turn him into a statue.

He came in the other night and like a magnet went to his free-throw line in front of the refrigerator and with both hands pulled both the freezer and the refrigerator doors open.

"Don't eat the film in the freezer," I said. "Your father is saving it for vacation."

His eyes caught the glass carafe filled with red liquid. In typical boy fashion, he whipped off the cap and hoisted it to his lips and began to drink. At the same time, his eyes went to a hummingbird feeder just outside our kitchen window. He stopped drinking. "Wait a minute," he said. "Is that hummingbird drinking the same stuff I'm drinking?"

I nodded. "You could have told me it was nectar," he said, wiping the sticky liquid off his lips. He is 28 years old.

A friend of mine came by, and when I told her the story she said, "That's nothing. I gave a party the other night, and one of the guests dipped her hand in my potpourri and started popping it into her mouth. She thought it was trail mix."

"How old was she?" I asked anxiously. "Thirty-eight." "Why me, God?"

Poem Claimed By So Many

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Is plagiarism really the best form of flattery? In any case, it's nothing new. Montaigne, the 16th-century French essayist, had this to say about "borrowing" literary quotations: "I have gathered a bouquet of other men's flowers, and only the ribbon that binds them is my own."

A reader signed "Going Crazy in Reno" sent the poem that began "Do not stand at my grave and weep," and asked me to help her find the author. I printed her letter, and more "authors" surfaced than I can mention here. For example:

DEAR ABBY: A very good friend of mine sent me your column from The Patriot Ledger in Quincy, Mass. May I modestly state that I am the author of the poem in question. I am 77 years old and have been a poet and journalist for the last 35 years. I wrote that poem in 1978 and titled it "Afterwards." John Wayne requested in his will that my poem be read at his graveside. I do hope that this will clear up the mystery of the origin of that poem. — NEAL S. TOOMEY, LOWELL, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: The poem sent to you by "Going Crazy in Reno" was written by me in 1971 while on an extended holiday in America. I gave it to the president of the Reno Chamber of Commerce while visiting Nevada. That poem was tentatively named "A Clown's Eulogy." Needless to say, I am amazed that my work was used in the manner you have stated, and also very pleased that I have left something behind me besides bones. — WILLIAM ARTUS, VANCOUVER ISLAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA

DEAR ABBY: In regards to the poem sent in by "Going Crazy in Reno": The title is "I Am Not

There," and I am the author. I composed the poem at Mr. Wayne's request in 1977. Yours in life. — ROBERTA BRAUN

DEAR ABBY: The poem "Do not stand at my grave" was written by Father Joseph Mohr of Oberndorf, Austria, in 1819 when his brother, Elbert Mohr, was laid to rest. This beautiful poem was also read at another Mohr family member's funeral in Nuremberg, Germany, in 1899, and has become a popular eulogy since then. I am a great-grandnephew of the author, who also wrote "Stille Nacht" (Silent Night). — AUTHOR'S KIN, CONN.

DEAR ABBY: The author you are looking for is John Neihart, poet laureate of Nebraska. That lovely poem is inscribed on the Nebraska State Capitol building in Lincoln. — GEORGIA GRUBB, OMAHA

DEAR ABBY: My boss is a well-known minister in Atlanta, and he uses that poem for funeral services. He credits Lillian Bullard Ridgeway as the author. — VERA H. WADDELL, DR. OZMENT'S SECRETARY

DEAR ABBY: "Going Crazy" will be relieved to learn that the author is Charles E. Hollingsworth, M.D. — a Los Angeles psychiatrist. I found the poem in "The Family in Mourning" — a guide for health professionals, published in 1977. It was read at the funeral of a friend of mine. — REGINA THOMPSON, WALHALLA, S.C.

DEAR ABBY: I read in The Sacramento Bee that you are searching for the author of a poem recited as a eulogy for John Wayne.

I have a tattered copy of that poem and the author is Clare Harner Lyon. — PEGGY GRIEVE, ELK GROVE, CALIF.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices advanced in very heavy trading today but a fresh wave of selling crept through the market by midday, sharply eroding the market's strong rise at the opening.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which on Monday had its worst decline since the Oct. 19 collapse, was up 34.65 to 1,828.58 by noon on Wall Street.

In the first half hour of trading, however, the closely watched index had soared 84.22 to 1,878.15.

Seven stocks rose for every three that fell in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 1,166 up, 503 down and 257 unchanged. At the opening the ratio had stood at 13-to-3.

By noontime, a brisk 174.56 million shares changed hands on the Big Board, compared with 202.42 million shares at the same point Monday.

Analysts said the market started out on a strong note after Tokyo and Hong Kong markets rebounded sharply, but sellers slowly began to outnumber buyers.

"They saw this as an opportunity to reduce their risks," explained Michael Metz, a technical analyst with Oppenheimer & Co. "Those people who were bargain hunters last week had their confidence pretty shaken by what happened on Monday."

The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 156.83 to 1,793.93 — an 8.04 percent decline.

Metz said, "Today is a critical testing point. If the market breaks the old lows we'll be forced to further liquidate and that will cause further demoralization."

Meanwhile, major exchanges were scheduled to close two hours early again today to curb the enormous volume building up since the Oct. 19 plunge, when stocks lost more than $500 billion in value and the Dow Jones industrial average plummeted 508 points.

Among the prominent blue chips, International Business Machines rose 4/4 to 116 1/4; Ford Motor 2 1/2 to 69 1/2; American Express 2 1/4 to 24 1/4; American Telephone and Telegraph 1 1/2 to 27 3/4; and Exxon 7/8 to 42.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 2.07 to 129.95. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.63 at 240.30.

Nancy Reagan's Mother Dies At Home Of Brain Blood Clot

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Edith Lockett Davis, first lady Nancy Reagan's mother and a former actress who performed with theatrical greats like George M. Cohan, died in her sleep. She was 91.

Mrs. Davis died at her home at 12:15 p.m. Monday of a cerebral thrombosis, a blood clot in the brain which is a form of stroke, the White House said.

President and Mrs. Reagan took off from Andrews Air Force Base, Md., today en route to Phoenix. The president was to fly back to Washington tonight, then rejoin his wife for the funeral.

The Reagans will make arrangements today for the funeral, but no date has been fixed, White House spokesman Ben Jarratt said this morning.

Mrs. Reagan, who returned to the White House on Thursday after breast cancer surgery Oct. 17, was very upset Monday, said her press secretary, Elaine Crispin.

"She's going through some old photographs of her mother. (She's) very teary," Mrs. Crispin said.

Mrs. Reagan, who had visited her mother several times a year, last saw her on Aug. 13. Mrs. Davis had been ill for years, and had round-the-clock medical care at her condominium, Mrs. Crispin said.

"She died peacefully in her sleep," the spokeswoman said.

Tom Chauncey, a family friend who was at Mrs. Davis' home when she died, called Mrs. Crispin. The press secretary said she told the president because she thought he "should be the one to be with her."

Reagan immediately went to the presidential residence to inform his wife, and spent the rest of the afternoon with her, Mrs. Crispin said.

Mrs. Davis was the widow of neurosurgeon Loyal Davis, the first lady's step father who died in August 1982 at age 86. The couple moved to Phoenix from Chicago in 1963, when Davis retired as head of the surgery department at Northwestern University.

Ride To The Stadium Bad Omen For Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Art Baker said he should have known early in the day that Saturday wasn't going to be a good one for him and his East Carolina Pirates.

"I was in my car following the team buses. But not far from the stadium, this big highway patrolman jumped out in front of my car," Baker related at his press conference Monday. "He wanted to know where I thought I was going. I told him I was the East Carolina coach and I was with the team.

"The heck you are," he told me and wouldn't let me through. I offered to show him some identification, but he just yelled at me and I started yelling back. Finally, I told him I was Art Baker and I wanted his name.

"I should have known right then that it was going to be that kind of game."

True. Once he got on the field, his Pirates had run-in after run-in with "the law," in this case the officials. The Pirates were flagged for a record-tying 14 penalties. It was actually the second year in a row they had tied the mark against South Carolina. The Gamecocks won the game, 34-12.

"We didn't handle things well,"

Baker said. "It was a tough loss after two straight wins. We felt coming in and going out that it was a game we could have won. There are no excuses for losing, but there are some reasons."

Baker said that the Pirates created no big plays on either offense, defense or on special teams. Junior Robinson did bring back a pass interception for a touchdown, but it was brought back because of a clip call — about which, more later.

"We allowed our players to get up-tight before the game," Baker said. "Then, when we had nothing good happen early, we lost our poise." The coach said that South Carolina has its share of intimidators and that there was a lot of talk on the field on both sides of the line. "They handled it better than we did."

Baker added that the difference in the game may have boiled down to two passes which East Carolina did not catch. The first was a Todd Ellis pass that went through the hands of Ellis Dillahunt and into the hands of the Gamecocks' Sterling Sharpe for the first touchdown of the game. The second was a Travis Hunter pass to a wide-open Denell Harper that was dropped. That, according to Baker, was a 14-point turnaround.

The coach also cited East Carolina's inability to handle the South Carolina blitz, noting that if he had to do it all over again, he would not use the same game plan against the Gamecocks. "We had only average quarterback play against the blitz and our line play against it was not very good either. Our inability to make third down conversions hurt us, and when we had the chance to score early and got only field goals hurt too," Baker said. "We felt going in that we would have to have some positives early and we just didn't get them."

Baker said that he was particularly unhappy with the unnecessary roughness penalties against the Pirates. "I got on the players at the half and then again after the game," Baker said. "We did overact on some occasions, but after looking at the films it wasn't as bad as I thought it was. Some of it was our reaction to what they did and the official saw only what we did. For instance, when Roswell (Streeter) tackled the guy near our sideline. The guy got up and threw the ball in Roswell's face. Roswell threw it back and he drew the penalty although the official was standing there and saw it all.

Eye Contact Helps Browns Pop Rams

CLEVELAND (AP) — The key to defending against Los Angeles Rams' quarterback Jim Everett, says Felix Wright, is eye contact.

"He's a young quarterback. He tends to look at his receiver as soon as he gets the ball," Wright said after he intercepted two Everett passes, returning one of them 40 yards for a touchdown, to help the Cleveland Browns beat the Rams 30-17 Monday night.

Everett, a 24-year-old in his second year with the Rams, was fortunate to have been intercepted only three times — twice by Wright and once by Mark Harper — because Cleveland cornerback Hanford Dixon dropped two others.

"He stares receivers down all the way, and we knew that going into the ballgame," Dixon said. "That's why it's easy to get good reads on him."

The Rams, 1-5, desperately missed running back Eric Dickerson, who stood on the sidelines for most of the game.

Charles White started in place of the disgruntled Dickerson, who had suggested last week that he might not be able to give a 100-percent effort because he does not believe his $680,000 salary reflects his value to the team.

Coach John Robinson, however, said Dickerson was benched for most of the game because of a "Charley horse in his thigh."

Dickerson ran seven times for 38 yards, including a 27-yard touchdown in the second quarter. He did not play in the second half.

"Whether you hurt or not, it's still difficult to be on the sidelines," said Dickerson, who firmly repeated his desire to be traded.

"I don't think I'm appreciated with the Rams, and I think I could go somewhere else where my skills would be appreciated," he said.

Dickerson was particularly missed at two moments in the game. The first was in the first quarter after Everett threw a 20-yard pass to Damone Johnson that gave the Rams a first-and-goal at the Cleveland 1-yard line.

White carried on first down and lost two yards. Buford McGee, who later suffered a torn Achilles tendon that ended his season, gained two yards on second down.

After tight end David Hill was called for illegal motion to move the ball back to the 6, Everett's third-down pass bounced off Hill's hands at the goal line to Wright, who returned it 68 yards to set up the first of Jeff Jaeger's three field goals.

"I read the quarterback," Wright said. "The ball hit off his (Hill's) hands and maybe his helmet and deflected into my hands. I tried to get up field, but Charles White had the angle on me."

Dickerson was missed a second time early in the fourth quarter, when the Rams, trailing 30-17, had a fourth-and-one at the Cleveland 15. White plunged into the middle for no gain, effectively sealing the Browns' victory.

"That was a big play, the fourth-and-one," said Cleveland linebacker Eddie Johnson. "We had a slanting defense where we tried to blow the middle up. We anticipated that they'd have Charles White slash up the middle, and that's what they did. Reggie Camp got good penetration for us, and in that situation, you're always trying to create negative yardage."

Kevin Mack scored Cleveland's first touchdown on a 16-yard run up the middle early in the second quarter, breaking three tackles along the way to put the Browns up 10-0. Wright then stepped in front of Henry Ellard on the Rams' next possession and went 40 yards with his second interception for a 17-0 advantage.

Jaeger's 48-yard field goal made it 20-0 before Dickerson finally scored for the Rams.

Reid, Bucknall Set For Trial

Charged With Assault

RALEIGH (AP) — University of North Carolina basketball players J.R. Reid and Steve Bucknall are scheduled for trial next month on charges of assaulting a North Carolina State student at a nightclub, authorities said.

Warrants filed with the Wake County Clerk of Court said the charges were filed early Saturday morning by Paul James Doherty. In the warrants, Doherty said Bucknall hit him "with a clenched fist to the right eye," and that Reid spit in his face.

Doherty told The Raleigh Times that the blow knocked him to the floor and his head hit a support column. Doherty said he suffered a chipped tooth and was taken to Rex Hospital where he received nine stitches for cuts on his eyebrow and nose. A hospital spokesman said Doherty was treated at the hospital and released.

Trials in Wake District Court for Reid and Bucknall have been set for Nov. 16.

UNC basketball coach Dean Smith was not available for comment and UNC sports information director Rick Brewer said, "That's the first I've heard of it."

Doherty, 21, said the incident occurred about 12:30 a.m. Saturday at the Shooters II club near the N.C. State campus. He said Reid, a 6-foot-9, 250-pound sophomore from Virginia Beach, Va., and Bucknall, a 6-6 junior from London, England, "confronted me and started to ask me if I was talking about them or trying to start a fight with them."

"I tried to tell them I had no idea what they were talking about," Doherty said. "They left again and then one minute later they returned all over again. I tried to explain that I didn't know what was going on. This time Reid became more vocal again and more violent."

Reid began cursing and, after a friend of Doherty tried unsuccessfully to intervene, spit in Doherty's face, Doherty said.

"I put my hand up and I can't say that I even touched him," he said. "As I put my hand up I was just punched. I was blindsided."

Witnesses identified Bucknall as the assailant, Doherty said. Raleigh police Lt. C.A. Watson said police interviewed 12 to 15 witnesses.

Nelson's Big Plays Help Vikes Gain Win

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — In a feast-or-famine game for Darrin Nelson, his 72-yard run was a smorgasbord in a contest that left neither observers nor participants with a good taste in their mouths.

"Feast or famine, that's what was happening to me tonight," said Nelson, who got 88 of his 98 rushing yards on two carries. "I tried to make something out of nothing too many times."

Twice, though, he made something out of something. His 72- and 16-yard runs set up two of D.J. Dozier's three short touchdown bursts Monday night, helping the Minnesota Vikings survive some shaky moments in a 34-27 victory over the Denver Broncos.

It was the teams' first game since the end of the 24-day NFL strike, but to Broncos Coach Dan Reeves, it might as well have been the first exhibition game.

The Vikings won even though Wade Wilson was intercepted five times. They were helped by the sloppy play of the Broncos, who were penalized 10 times for 128 yards.

"This was like preseason football," said Reeves, whose defending AFC champions were 1-0-1 before the strike and 2-1 during it. "We're not close to being the team we want to be. We just have to go through another training camp period and go from there. When you haven't played in a long time, you lose a lot of coordination and timing. We will be a good football team."

The Vikings, meanwhile, feel they are good, even if the standings say they are 3-3. They are 3-0 with their regular players, and were 0-3 with replacements during the strike.

"This team right here is 3-0. Maybe I'm 3-3," Vikings Coach Jerry Burns said. "We're happy to have our regulars back."

"As far as I'm concerned we're undefeated," said Scott Studwell, the middle linebacker on a Minnesota defense that chased Broncos quarterback John Elway all over the field. "But we're only back to even and it's not going to be easy."

The strike actually helped Nelson some, because he had been trying to recover from a knee injury.

"The best medicine is time," he said. "After the Rams game (Minnesota's last game before the strike), my knee was shot."

Many expected Minnesota's fans to be shot, too.

A crowd of 51,011 — there were 7,716 no-shows — cheered loudly on many occasions but didn't come close to matching the roof-raising roars heard in the Metrodome during the Minnesota Twins' drive to victory Sunday in the World Series. The Vikings-Broncos game was moved back a day so the Twins could host the St. Louis Cardinals in Sunday's Game 7.

"I had a feeling they'd be popped out. But they still had a little bit of enthusiasm left," said Dozier, who scored on runs of one, three and five yards, making the most of his 15-yard rushing performance.

Even though there were six turnovers and 14 penalties, Elway didn't think the contest was all that poorly played.

"You're not going to be hitting on all cylinders with a 35-day layoff," he said. "But I thought we were a lot farther along than I thought we'd be."

It seemed like Elway was hitting on all cylinders early. He completed his first six passes, including a 25-yard touchdown strike to Vance Johnson. In the first half, Elway was 14-for-19 for 153 yards and he also scored on a one-yard run, helping the Broncos to a 17-14 halftime lead.

But on the first play from scrimmage in the second half, Nelson took off on his 72-yarder, the longest non-scoring run in Vikings history.

He shot through a hole, cut behind the right tackle and raced down the right sideline to the 3-yard line. Mike Harden, blocked for about 20 yards downfield by receiver Hassan Jones, finally made the tackle.

"It was a play we run three or four times a game and I just happened to hit the hole going full speed," Nelson said. "That's what us guys live for — to take off in the open field."

On the next play, Dozier, the Vikings' No. 1 draft choice from Penn State, went around left tackle untouched into the end zone. The Vikings never trailed thereafter.

Later in the third, Nelson's spinning 16-yard run put Dozier in position for his five-yard touchdown run and a 27-17 lead.

Denver had to play catchup and the Vikings were all over Elway, who was only 8-for-20 for 92 yards in the second half.

"They were keeping me inside," said Elway, whose offense was further limited after running back Gerald Willhite fractured his right leg in the second quarter. "Those big guys got their hands in my face and it's hard to see downfield. They did a good job in the second half. That third quarter really hurt us."

Dickerson Says He Wants Out

CLEVELAND (AP) — All-Pro running back Eric Dickerson stood idly on the sidelines during most of the Los Angeles Rams' 30-17 loss to the Cleveland Browns, watching a game that could have been quite different had he played more than a quarter.

Rams Coach John Robinson said Dickerson had a sore thigh. Dickerson agreed.

Yet it was apparent there was more to the benching of Dickerson than a charley horse.

"I want out. I mean it," Dickerson said after Monday's night's game, repeating the trade demand he had voiced last week. "I really want to be traded, because I don't think I'm appreciated with the Rams, and I think I could go somewhere else where my skills would be appreciated."

Sports Notes

Rose Cross Country Earns A Split

ELIZABETH CITY — The Rose boy's cross country team placed nine of the top ten finishers to outdistance Northeastern in a Big East conference meet Monday.

Rose totaled 15, compared to Northeastern's 66. The Northeastern girls, meanwhile, topped Rose, totaling 18 points while the Rampettes had 47.

Rose's Jason Dohm was the top finisher with a time of 18:34. He was followed by David Russ (18:40), Dave Jolley (19:10), Chris Richards (19:14), Mike Jolley (19:29), James McPherson (19:59), John Turner (20:03), Todd Taylor (20:19) and tenth was Shane Johnnie (20:45).

The top finisher for Northeastern was Aaron Williams, who placed ninth with a time of 20:35.

Rose's other top finishers were Craig Kirkland (11th, 21:27) and John Rose (13th, 22:29).

Rose's top girl finishers were Susan Hu (4th, 23:32), Lee Nisbet (6th, 26:04), Angie Stott (8th, 26:38), Darby Thomas (14th, 29:24), Bonnie Rogerson (20th, 44:44), 3-3-1.

The Rose boys improve to 5-5 overall and 5-1 in the Big East. The girl's fall to 3-3 and 3-1. Next up for both teams is the conference meet Saturday at Rocky Mount.

Teams Of Decker, McKoy Win Tournament

The team of Dick and Missy Decker and Cathy and Chris McKoy took first place in the Greenville Country Club's Couples Member-Guest golf tournament this past weekend.

Second low gross went to Smith and Jean Creech and Bob and Janet Kennedy.

Low net was won by Tom and Sue Hardy and George and Quincy Parham, while second low net went to Jim and Janet Kurian and Gary and Janet Coonrad.

In other recent GCC activities, a Ladies Day tournament saw Betty Lou Howard and Mary Ann Barnhill take first low gross, while Pat Norris and Irma McQuade took low net.

First low gross in the Dr. William Laupus Appreciation Day Tournament went to Bill Laupus Jr., while Roy Selby was second. Low net went to Joe Laupus while Jim Laupus was second.

Kiwanis Club Holds Annual Golf Tourney

The University City Kiwanis Club Sixth Annual Golf Tournament was held at Greenville Country Club Monday.

The first place, low net team in the superball tournament was comprised of Joe Turner, Jeff Davis, Allen Moseley, Don Brinkley with a score of 45. Second place went to the team of Bob Montgomery, Joe Linneman, Paul White and Ed Harris with a score of 47.

The low gross winner was the team of Lester Brown, Skip Bright, Chip Casey and Bill Mitchum with a score of 56. Second place went to Craig Smith, Butch Talbot, Gene Rackley and Whit Miller with a score of 58.

On hole 10, Rackley also won the closest to the pin. Brown won the same honor on hole number eight. The longest drive went to Talbot for his drive on the first hole.

Emerson Wins DR Football Contest

Paul Emerson of 206 Cheryl Circle, Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Emerson correctly picked the winners in 26 of the 30 games listed in last week's entry pages. Two games, Alabama vs. Penn State and California vs. Oregon were not counted because they had been moved to other dates after the schedules were printed.

Second place went to Judith Spencer of 306 Williamsburg Dr., Greenville, who picked 25 of the 30 games correctly. Her win, however, came on the basis of her point total guess. Spencer picked 83 as the most points to be scored in any one of the contest games. The actual total was 94 in San Diego State's 52-42 win over Long Beach State.

Two other entrants also had 25 correct, but were further off the point total. They were Keith Gould of Rt. 1, Box 262-C, Grimesland (70), and Glenn Potter of 207 Harmony Way, Greenville (79).

ACC Honors Its Top Performances

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina State fullback Mal Crite and Duke wide receiver Clarkson Hines have been picked as the Atlantic Coast Conference offensive players of the week.

Crite, a junior from Brevard, rushed for 94 yards on 22 carries, including a 23-yard scoring run, as the Wolfpack defeated Clemson 30-28 Saturday. Crite's 94-yard total came against the nation's top-ranked defensive unit against the rush and was the highest single-game total against the Tigers in 20 games.

Hines, a sophomore from Jacksonville, Fla., snared eight passes for 154 yards as Duke lost to Maryland 23-22. Six of Hines' receptions were for first-down yardage, while three were on successful third-down conversions. He is currently fifth in the ACC with 29 receptions for 580 yards and two touchdowns.

Also, Maryland linebacker O'Brien Alston and Virginia defensive back Keith McMeans have been chosen defensive players of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Alston received the lineman award for his performance in Maryland's 23-22 victory over Duke. The 6-7, 227-pound senior came up with three quarterback sacks and keyed a defensive effort that held the Blue Devils to 22 yards rushing on 38 attempts.

Alston, of Fort Washington, Md., also was in on 16 tackles, including nine unassisted, as the Terrapins moved into a tie with Clemson for a share of the conference lead with their third straight win.

McMeans, a freshman from Virginia Beach, Va., intercepted two passes and was credited with three tackles in the Cavaliers' 35-21 victory over Wake Forest. The 5-11, 184-pounder came up with a third-quarter interception at the Cavalier goal line and returned it 11 yards, stopping a Demon Deacon scoring opportunity.

Later, McMeans picked off another Wake Forest aerial at his own 29-yard line and returned it 12 yards, setting up a Virginia field goal.

The selections were made by a committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association, which earlier named Virginia's Keith McMeans and Maryland's O'Brien Alston as the defensive players of the week.

Gamecocks Make Move Into Collegiate Top 20

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

The top six teams remain the same in the Associated Press college football poll while South Carolina made the Top Twenty for the first time this season and Michigan dropped out for the second time in three weeks.

Top-rated Oklahoma's 24-6 victory over Colorado earned the Sooners 47 of 60 first-place votes today and 1,176 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Nebraska, a 56-3 winner over Kansas State, received 13 first-place votes and 1,134 points while the other seven first-place ballots went to Miami of Florida, which defeated Cincinnati 48-10 and totaled 1,108.

Oklahoma, Nebraska and Miami are ranked 1-2-3 for the fifth week in a row. Last week, Oklahoma led Nebraska 42-12 in first-place votes and 1,179-1,134 in points.

Florida State and LSU were idle last weekend and received 986 and 952 points, respectively. Auburn remained No. 6 with 900 by defeating Mississippi State 38-7.

However, Clemson, No. 7 last week, fell to No. 14 after a 30-28 loss to North Carolina State. UCLA beat California 42-18 and moved up from eighth place to seventh with 842 points, Syracuse crushed Colgate 52-6 and climbed from ninth to eighth with 774 points and Notre Dame jumped from 10th to ninth with 732 by downing Southern California 26-15.

Florida made the Top Ten for the first time this year. The Gators, 11th a week ago, were idle but rose to 10th place with 612 points.

The Second Ten consists of Indiana, Georgia, Tennessee, Clemson, Ohio State, Alabama, Oklahoma State, Penn State, South Carolina and Michigan State.

Last week, it was Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, Michigan State, Indiana, Ohio State, Alabama, Penn State, Oklahoma State and Michigan.

South Carolina, 5-2, won its third game in a row, 34-12 over East Carolina, and made the Top Twenty for the first time since early in the 1985 season. Michigan, which fell out of the rankings two weeks ago but got back in last week, dropped out again by losing to Indiana 14-10.

LSU Holds On To First In DR Poll

Louisiana State University, despite an open date, held onto first place in the Daily Reflector Performance Rankings this past weekend.

The Bengals, 6-0-1 on the season, have amassed 1,208 points on the rankings, which rate teams on their success against strength of schedule.

Nebraska, 7-0, jumped from fourth to second on the list with 1,196 points while Syracuse, second last week, fell to third with 1,132. The Orangemen are also 7-0 on the season.

Points are awarded for each victory a team gains. Additional points are awarded for each game won on the opponents' schedule and their opponents' schedule.

For example, East Carolina gained 24 points for each of its four wins over N.C. State, Georgia Southern, Cincinnati and Virginia Tech.

State, with three wins, Georgia Southern with five, Cincinnati with two and VPI with one, brought ECU a total of 176 more points. The total of 11 wins brought in 16 points each.

Dropping to the third level, N.C. State's victims have won 12 games, Cincinnati's, 7, and VPI's, 1, for a total of 20. The Pirates were given eight points for each of those wins, for a total of 436 altogether.

Where ties occur, points are split, and when teams play Division I-AA no third level points are awarded. Those teams playing Division II or III teams receive only first level points.

Florida State, 6-1, dropped from third to fourth and has 1,128 points while Miami, Fla., remains fifth with 1,108. The Hurricanes are 5-0.

The biggest climb this week belongs to Georgia and Oklahoma State, who moved from 13th to 7th and from a tie for 16 to a tie for 10th, respectively.

The biggest drop was Clemson's, which fell from ninth to 17th, falling eight places.

Newcomers this week include Pittsburgh, in at 13th; Ohio State, in at 18th, and Air Force, in at 19th.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Once again, Jacksonville has been left at the altar by a powerful, high-dollar National Football League suit-or.

The latest to jilt the city is Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams, who decided that neither love nor money was enough to persuade him to end his 41-year marriage to Texas and elope with upstart Jacksonville.

But Adams is only the latest in a series of flings the Northeast Florida city has had with NFL suitors, including Bob Irsay's Baltimore Colts, John Mecom's New Orleans Saints, Bill Bidwill's St. Louis Cardinals and Rankin Smith's Atlanta Falcons.

When Adams visited Jacksonville Oct. 14-15, Mayor Tommy Hazouri presented him with the keys to the city and promised "the next key will be the key to our hearts."

City business leaders had offered Adams $125.8 million over 10 years to move the Oilers to the Gator Bowl. Reporters jokingly asked Hazouri if Jacksonville had included the Main Street Bridge in its offer to lure the Oilers.

Adams said Monday that he and the Houston Sports Association had reached agreement on lease terms that would keep the NFL team in Houston's Astrodome for the next 10 years. The agreement hinges on the ability of the business community to lease 72 new skyboxes at the stadium for $30,000 a season.

"The fact that the Oilers are going to remain in Houston is based on your support," Adams told Houston community leaders at a luncheon Monday.

Pirates ...

"I just don't feel that they called it on an equal basis. The clip on Robinson's runback was very questionable. Vinson Smith had his head in front when the block started and the guy tuned his back before it was completed. The official ran 10 or 15 yards on down the field before he decided to throw the flag."

The coach said that the Pirates must improve their third down pass defense but added that he did think the Bucs played better defense in the second half.

Baker said that the crowd noise added to the confusion of the Pirates on several occasions, causing the Pirates to be unable to hear signals or their names called when subs came into the game. That cost the Pirates a couple of times out and a few delay penalties.

The team came out of the game with no serious injuries and everyone is expected to be healthy for this Saturday's home date with nationally-ranked Miami of Florida.

Baker did announce that offensive lineman Billy Michel had undergone surgery to repair damage to his right knee and would miss the remainder of the season. "That's a big loss because he was our most consistent offensive lineman."

Kickoff Saturday will be at 12:10 p.m. because of a regional telecast of the game back to Florida and other parts of the Southeast.

Trinity Tops Vike Spikers

HOLLYWOOD — Trinity ended D.H. Conley's bid to repeat as the 3-A state volleyball champions, handing the Valkyries a 3-2 loss in the state semi-finals Monday.

Conley won the first game, 15-11, but Trinity came back to even the score by winning the second game 15-8.

The Valkyries then won the third game, 15-9, before Trinity took the final two games, 15-11 and 15-12, to claim the match win.

"The girls played hard the whole way," said Conley coach Martha McCaskill. "We did not play that well. Trinity had a good team so that contributed to us not play real well."

"I felt good when we had the 2-1 lead but we didn't take advantage of some opportunities. We didn't set up our attack like we should have so Trinity edged us out in the last few games. We didn't have any real serving strings and that was one area I thought we were weak in last night. We had good effort, good hustle, we just didn't play well enough to win."

Conley was led in hitting by Hanna Hill with nine effective hits and six kills. Tracy Sumrell added seven effective hits and three kills. Miriam Fulford chipped in seven effective hits and two kills while Rhonda Mills had five effective hits and one kill.

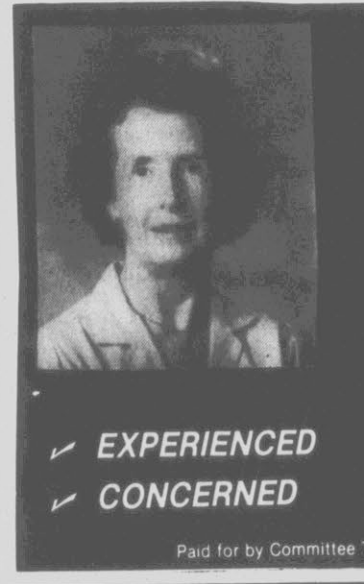

The Valkyries finish the year at 22-8.

Hearns Set For Roldan

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Thomas Hearns will try to make boxing history Thursday night against Argentina's Juan Domingo Roldan, who already shares a common history with the three-time champion.

Hearns takes aim at an unprecedented fourth world title against the rugged Roldan, who, like Hearns, was stopped by Marvelous Marvin Hagler in his only previous bid for the middleweight title.

Both hope a victory could set up a big money fight against Hagler, who lost the middleweight title to Sugar Ray Leonard in April after successfully defending it 12 times.

CONTEST RULES

- Thirty-two football games are placed on these pages. Pick the winner of each game (not the score) and write the team name opposite the advertiser's name on the entry blank. The entrant picking the most correct winners each week will be awarded $25.00. Second place $15.00.
- Pick a number which you think will be the most number of points scored by both teams in any one of the week's games listed and write your answer in the space provided on the entry blank. This will be used to break ties. In the event of a further tie the money will be equally divided between the winning entrants.
- Only one entry per person per week. The contest is open to all except employees of The Daily Reflector and their immediate families.
- Entries must be in The Daily Reflector office not later than 5:00 p.m. Friday or postmarked not later than Friday, 7:00 p.m. Address entries to: FOOTBALL CONTEST, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27835. (Reasonable facsimiles also accepted).

DUNKEL INDEX

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY Oct. 28

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Follow the wishes of your family, and create more harmony at home. This is a good time to work on improving the appearance there.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): This morning is a good time to take care of correspondence and other communications, whether for business or personal reasons.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): An opportunity to make more money in the future will present itself. Tonight is a good time to work on improving your budget.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Quiet talks with good friends at lunch can yield some ideas which will benefit everyone greatly in the long run.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Make a private plan for business success in the days ahead, but don't worry about the details until later. Do a nice favor for your loved ones.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Make some plans for your social life, but don't go out tonight; stay home and rest up instead. This is a good time to ask favors of friends.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Morning is a good time to handle credit matters which could be damaging if not attended to. Listen well to your superiors today.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You can rely on your intuition this morning, but later on it may be flawed. Stick to conventional methods which are reliable.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): If you get some promises out of the way this morning, you'll have a satisfied feeling all day. Try to avoid any arguments today.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): If you are loyal to an associate and back his ideas, you'll get more cooperation in the future. Be sure to do your share of the work.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You can reach points of agreement with others quickly right now, so try to impress your ideas on as many people as possible.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Getting into some new social situations will make you very happy, but don't be extravagant. Be sure to drive with great care.

Opening lead: Two of ♦

Don't strive for the impossible when there's a reasonable alternative chance elsewhere. Put together the clues at your disposal, and you might be surprised at the solutions you come up with.

North-South arrived at four spades because of a misunderstanding. South intended his bid of three spades as preemptive; North took it as invitational and, holding two aces and the jack of trumps as a kicker, was delighted to accept.

West led his fourth-best diamond, East won the king and shifted to a club. How would you tackle the hand?

If you were shown the North-South hands in a vacuum, the correct play would be to try to drop the queen of trumps in two rounds, then resort to the club finesse for your contract if the queen didn't come down, or for an overtrick if it had.

Is that still your best line?

To answer that question, let's see what we know about the hand. From the bidding, we know East did not have enough to open in third seat. From the play to the first trick, he started with the ace-king of diamonds, and probably the jack as well. He is also sure to have one of the two missing top heart honors, because West didn't lead one. Had East held either black queen, he would surely have opened the bidding.

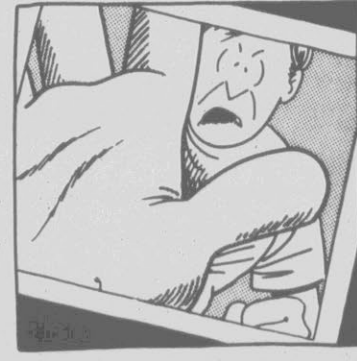

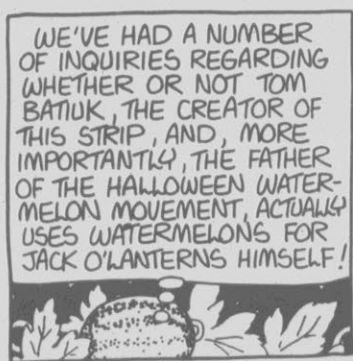

Therefore, taking the club finesse is bound to lose. And, since you know East cannot hold the queen of spades, unless it's singleton, you have a better line than trying to drop the lady. Win the king of clubs, cash the king of spades and, despite the fact that you have nine trumps, finesse the jack at trick three! You shouldn't be at all surprised when that wins the trick and your contract is home when East shows out. Next, try to drop the queen of clubs for an overtrick. Success!

'Golden Girls' Director Says Humor Is Universal

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emmy-winning comedy director Terry Hughes, who spent years working with the Monty Python troupe in his native England, says what's funny in Britain will also provoke laughter here.

"Humor is universal," said Hughes, who won his Emmy in September for directing NBC's "The Golden Girls."

"I didn't find much change in comedy when I came here eight years ago. I worked with all the people in Monty Python. In fact, I worked with John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle and the rest before they became Monty Python. I created a show called 'The Two Ronnies,' which after 15 years is still on the air. The writers were mostly Monty Python members."

Hughes agrees, however, that "The Golden Girls" probably comes as close as anything on American television to what is regarded as English humor. The comedy has a cutting edge; it can be a bit nasty. The dialogue is literate and it has a liberal sprinkling of bathroom humor. The show, he noted, is quite popular in England.

"The Golden Girls," now in its third season, stars Bea Arthur, Betty White, Rue McClanahan and Estelle Getty as four single women living out their golden years under the same roof in Miami. For the last two years, it's won the Emmy as best comedy series.

Hughes had spent nearly 17 years with the British Broadcasting Co. He started as a director trainee and was head of entertainment his last two years.

"I wasn't happy," he said. "I missed doing shows. I came here frequently on business. The head of the television department at the William Morris Agency took me and my wife to dinner in London and offered me a job packaging shows in Los Angeles. He said I knew as much about American television as anybody.

"I said thanks, but no thanks. I knew that the first good show to come along, I'd want to go off and produce or direct. I didn't like being an executive. But I also didn't want to give it up and go back to working for my successor."

He resigned from the BBC and decided to go for broke as a freelancer. He had directed a lot of commercials and knew he could make a living at it. But he was invited by EMI to come to Los Angeles and head comedy development for the studio.

"I did it for a year but I didn't know what development was," Hughes said. "I thought you talked about a show for 12 weeks, then went off and did it. I found out you talked about a show for a year, then probably didn't do it."

Hughes moved his wife and two daughters to the United States but, as a precaution, kept his house in London.

In 1981 he developed "Report to Murphy" for CBS and became its producer and director. The short-lived comedy starred Michael Keaton as a parole officer. The next year he directed eight episodes of CBS' "Square Pegs," then produced and directed "Empire" for CBS.

In the meantime, he also directed such plays for television as "Hughie," "Sweeney Todd," "I Do, I Do" and "Sunday in the Park With George." He directed such TV movies as "Sunset Limousine" and "For Love or Money."

Hughes believes that television comedy should be done on videotape, not film. He mentioned CBS' "Frank's Place," which is beautifully filmed. "Too much beauty gets in the way of the comedy," he said.

Shows on video tape have a flatter look because of the way the set is lighted for three or four cameras. Film has a more sculptured look.

Hughes had not directed comedy for several years when he was asked to direct several episodes of "The Golden Girls" in 1985. That was about the time everyone had pronounced comedy dead — until "The Cosby Show," "Family Ties," "Cheers," "The Golden Girls" and others proved there was still lots of life left in the sitcom.

"I saw 'The Golden Girls' and loved it," he said. "It had that English edge to it and I responded to that. I directed two shows in the middle of the first season. Then they asked me to direct the rest of the season. I did about 15 shows. I directed all of the shows the second season, I'm in the middle of the third season and I will do all of the fourth season."

U.S. Film Crew Killed

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Two Americans filming a documentary in Afghanistan were killed when government soldiers ambushed them and their guerrilla guides, sources said today.

U.S. diplomats in Pakistan identified the Americans as Lee Shapiro, director of New Jersey-based Shapiro Media Productions, and James Landalos, a sound and camera man.

Diplomatic and guerrilla sources said a third American was believed to have been with them, but his fate was not known.

A spokesman for the Hezb-i-Islami Moslem guerrillas said the group got word of the Americans' death in a rare radio report from insurgents near Kabul.

Qaribar Rehman Saeed said Hezb-i-Islami fighters had led the film team for five months through Afghanistan's northern provinces.

He said the ambush occurred near Paghman, a town west of Kabul which was the scene this summer of constant clashes between insurgents and the combined Soviet-Afghan forces.

Saeed said the radio report placed the attack around Oct. 11. The Americans' Hezb-i-Islami guide, Abdul Malik, was reportedly wounded but he has not reached the Pakistan border.

News frequently takes days or weeks to travel out of Afghanistan.

U.S. officials did not know the Americans' hometowns. They said Shapiro had registered with the consulate in Peshawar, Pakistan, last December and March.

The bodies were still in Afghanistan, but it was not clear where, the diplomats said, speaking on condition of anonymity. There was no word on any arrangements to return them to the United States.

The deaths bring to seven the number of foreign reporters killed in Afghanistan.

CUSTOMER SERVICE IS OUR #1 PRIORITY
The Lowe's Commitment

GREAT PRODUCTS & PRICES

10% Low Price Guarantee Policy:

Lowe's guarantees our everyday low prices. If you find an identical advertised item at any retail competitor currently priced lower than ours, simply bring us written proof of that price. We'll match that price PLUS give you an additional 10% of the difference between the two prices when you buy from us. It must be an identical in-stock item. Closeout, discontinued and other clearance type sale items are excluded from this offer.

Satisfaction Guarantee Policy:

Lowe's guarantees that you will be satisfied with your purchase. If you are not completely happy with your purchase, simply return it along with your original sales receipt to any Lowe's store. We'll repair it, replace it, or refund your money.

Lowe's Raincheck Policy:

If an advertised item is temporarily out-of-stock, we will gladly issue a raincheck (except for items marked limited quantities, discontinued or closeout). When we restock you will be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price. Some stores may not stock all advertised items; however, every item shown can be ordered for you.

Lowe's Fair Purchase Policy:

In order to provide fair purchase opportunity to all our customers, Lowe's reserves the right to limit quantities sold to individual customers. No dealers, please.
