Foreign Exchanges Lead Way As Stocks Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's broad advance continued in heavy trading today with the Dow Jones industrial average climbing about 63 points following strong gains on overseas exchanges.

The strong rise in the Dow average put the market's best-known barometer at about 2,001. Prices rose for 10 out of every 11 issues on the New York Stock Exchange, and were also broadly higher on the American Stock Exchange and on the over-the-counter market.

On Thursday, the closely-watched index closed up 91.51 points — its third-largest one-day point gain ever — to close at 1,938.33 after being up more than 110 points in late trading. The advance represented 5 percent of its value and followed a 0.33-point gain Wednesday.

The broader market, which had trailed the blue-chip issues represented in the Dow average, also improved Thursday, with four stocks making money for every one that lost.

Analysts said the market was up today because it was oversold following its $500 billion collapse a week ago Monday.

Wall Street's ability to shake off developments such as the dollar's decline on Thursday, "indicates an oversold market won't go down on bad news anymore," said Robert Colby, an analyst with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

Ralph Acampora, an analyst with Kidder Peabody & Co., said investors were gaining confidence following Thursday's advance and because of negotiations in Washington toward cutting the federal budget deficit.

"A little bit of a ray of hope, a little confidence came in," he said.

The dollar moved higher overseas today but fell in New York trading.

In London today, stocks rose sharply, with the Financial Times-Stock Exchange index of 100 leading shares up about 5 percent in early afternoon. The government decided late Thursday to go ahead with selling shares in British Petroleum Co., the government-owned oil giant, despite the depressed market.

The government promised to buy back any shares that could not be sold, a move that helps the brokerage firms underwriting the stock offering.

Prices also soared today on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, sending its best-known market indicator up 731.15 points in its third-biggest single-day point gain on record. The 225-stock Nikkei average closed at 22,765.04, up 3.3 percent.

On the Hong Kong Stock Exchange today, stock prices shot up over 200 points before the market began a daylong retreat. The market's blue-chip indicator, the Hang Seng index, closed at 2240.13, up 35.61 points or 1.5 percent from Thursday.

The market value of American stocks, as measured by Wilshire Associates, rose $106.57 billion, or 4.73 percent Thursday, to $2.36 trillion. On Wednesday, stocks fell $12 billion.

NYSE volume came to 258.14 million shares as trading again ended at 2 p.m. Markets have been closing two hours early to allow people to catch up on paperwork, and will have shortened hours again today.

U.S.-Soviet Talks Point To Summit

By TERENCE HUNT

AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze re-opened talks today with Secretary of State George P. Shultz amid indications plans for another superpower summit may finally have jelled.

"I think they are going to set a date. Everything is going smoothly," Deputy Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh said.

More cautious, Shevardnadze told reporters "just wait a few hours" as he shook hands and posed for pictures with Shultz in the Treaty Room of the State Department.

Shultz reminded the foreign minister, who arrived here overnight, that Shevardnadze was bringing a message from General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev for President Reagan.

After it's delivered, Shultz said, "then we'll know."

He seemed in a buoyant mood and said he hoped to keep a golfing date in Augusta, Ga., on Saturday.

Shultz made plans, meanwhile, to hold a news conference around 6 p.m. EST today.

As Shevardnadze entered the building he joked: "Well, we meet with you sometimes at least twice a week, (See U.S., A-3)

Nader Group Says Heating Oil Short

WASHINGTON (AP) — Homeowners who heat their homes with oil should fill their tanks right away because U.S. inventories of heating oil are low, the president of a group affiliated with consumer activist Ralph Nader said today.

Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, recommended at a news conference that regional strategic reserves for refined products be created along the lines of the national Strategic Petroleum Reserve for crude oil in Texas and Louisiana.

The news conference comes a day after the release of the Energy Information Administration's weekly report, which showed that wholesale inventories of distillate oils, primarily home heating oil and diesel fuel, are 19 percent less than they were on the same date a year ago.

"This is dangerously low. This is the second-lowest inventory at this time of year in 30 years," said Connie Rogers of Buyers Up, a subsidiary of Public Citizen, the Nader-founded umbrella organization for advocacy groups.

Stocks have been allowed to decline to 123.2 million barrels, Rogers said, because "the oil companies are afraid of a glut."

However, the EIA and the petroleum industry's principal trade group both say the supply is adequate.

Scott Sitzler, an economist with the Energy Information Administration, said: "We don't see a problem. Inventories of heating oil are about what they were two years ago."

Bishops Fail To Open Doors To Women

By STEPHEN R. WILSON

Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) — The worldwide bishops' synod that ended today did not recommend opening non-ordained ministries to women because of opposition from Third World prelates, a source said.

Pope John Paul II, closing the monthlong assembly of more than 200 bishops with a Mass in St. Peter's Basilica, said it had raised "profound and stimulating" ideas on the role of women and youth in church and society.

The advisory body's final recommendations to the pope condemn discrimination against women, but omit specific U.S. proposals, included in an early draft document, for opening all non-ordained ministries to women.

Still, U.S. bishops said they were satisfied the "principle" of their suggestions was included in the final document.

The pontiff, who concelebrated today's mass with synod participants, had convened the bishops to examine the role of lay Roman Catholics in church and society.

Vatican securitymen grabbed an unarmed American near the end of today's service as he rushed screaming toward the pope. A Vatican spokesman identified the man as Thomas Siemer, 57, of Columbus, Ohio, who said he wanted to tell the pontiff about his ideas on peace and nuclear weapons.

The man was stopped about 20 yards from the pope, who, even if he saw the man, continued with the service.

In his homily, the pope said: "Profound and stimulating things have been said on (women and youth in the church) and it will be my task in the coming months to gather them together and present them in an orderly form to the entire people of God."

He was apparently referring to a document he intends to produce on the synod.

Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago held a news conference on the final report Thursday.

"Certainly the message is not negative," he said. "There is less specificity but nonetheless the basic principle (regarding women) is there. I think it's a very positive statement and provides good basis for further development in the future."

Last week, Archbishop John May of St. Louis, president of the U.S.

bishops' conference, said there was "strong consensus" at the synod that the church open all non-ordained ministries to women.

Such ministries include acolytes, lectors and altar servers, people who assist in functions at Mass such as lighting candles and preparing the altar.

Church law does not permit women to serve in these roles, but in the United States and some other countries women sometimes carry out those functions informally.

The bishops also encouraged lay Catholics to enter politics but said they must uphold church policy.

"I have no doubt if we feel strongly enough that the nomination should be opposed, we will be able to oppose it. If the issues are the same, absolutely, we would win," Kropp said.

While many senators expressed private concerns, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., publicly listed the reasons for a potential firestorm against Ginsburg.

Kennedy said he's suspicious because Meese, an ideological conservative, apparently persuaded Reagan to choose Ginsburg. He also cited Ginsburg's relative lack of judicial experience, and he wondered

Senators Reject In-Flight Smoking

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, after voting to halt cigarette smoking on more than two-thirds of all U.S. airline routes, is grappling with another bill designed to help fliers shop around more wisely for their flights.

The senators resumed debating legislation today that is aimed at coaxing the carriers into improving their service by forcing them to reveal how frequently their flights are canceled or late, baggage is misplaced and passengers are "bumped" off overbooked flights.

"The major form of competition among airlines has been rates," said

Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., one of the sponsors of the bipartisan measure. "What this will do is provide a whole new basis so the airlines can be competing on service."

By an 84-10 vote Thursday, the lawmakers approved a separate $11.1 billion transportation appropriations bill that would forbid smoking on all domestic flights of 90 minutes or less. The ban would cover about 70 percent of all routes and last for two years, and is slightly less extensive than a similar restriction passed July 13 by the House.

The smoking restrictions in the appropriations bill were a compromise.

The sponsor of the ban, Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., had sought a smoking prohibition on flights of two hours or less — 80 percent of all routes — for a three-year period. Backed by more than 30 consumer and health groups, such as the American Lung Association, Lautenberg cited government studies concluding that cigarette smoke can threaten the health of non-smokers nearby.

But tobacco state senators led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., arguing that tobacco farmers would be hurt by the ban, had threatened to try to kill the measure with a filibuster — unlimited debate. After several hours of negotiations, the 90-minute version of the restrictions emerged.

"It still isn't good from the standpoint of this senator or the tobacco farmers I represent, but it is a vast improvement," said Helms.

Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., also expressed disappointment in the vote.

"I worked with the Majority Leader to see if we could get this thrown out, but they had us out-gunned on this one, and this was the best that could be done," Sanford said. "Senator Helms did a great job; we just didn't have the votes."

Larceny Charge

Greenville police arrested Dennis Lee Brown Jr., 18, of Route 3, Greenville, late Thursday night on larceny charges.

Officer R.S. Sawyer said Brown was charged about 11:30 p.m. in connection with the theft of center wheel covers from a car parked at Brinkley Moore Motors on Memorial Drive that was reported at 11:15 p.m.

Solicitation Permits

The Greenville Police Department has granted five solicitation permits, including one allowing Foursquare Christian Center to raise funds Sunday through Jan. 1 to purchase church facilities.

The department granted a permit to the Pan African Orthodox Christian Church allowing fund raising Wednesday until Nov. 7 for the Missionary Outreach Program to be used to build youth technological and community service centers, self-help programs and church expansion.

A permit allowing the staff of Joyner Library at East Carolina University to raise funds Sunday through Dec. 7 for the Pitt County Foster Children's Christmas Fund was granted.

The department also granted a permit to Ebenezer Seventh-day Adventist Church allowing fund raising until Dec. 31 to help victims of floods, fires and tornados.

The department granted a permit to St. Gabriel's School Parent-Teacher Organization allowing fund raising until Jan. 27 for school projects.

Police Pass Out 'Treat' Bags

Greenville police distributed about 2,000 "trick-or-treat" bags to kindergarten and first grade students today and urged local area residents to be watchful for youngsters making their annual Halloween rounds Saturday.

Officer J.E. Tripp, the department's crime prevention officer, said the bags — for the collection of candy and other treats — contain "safety rules" designed to make Halloween a safe time for youngsters.

Among the safety rules, according to Tripp: — "Don't eat any treats until your parents have seen and inspected everything." (And in the event any of the candy has been tampered with, Tripp said the police department should be called at 830-3404 or 830-3405.)

— Make-up is safer than masks. But if masks are used, make sure the holes are large enough to easily see and breathe through.

— Flashlights should be used after dark to enable trick-or-treaters to see and be seen by drivers.

— Wear costumes that are fireproof and ones with bright, reflective colors, again so drivers can see you when it gets dark.

— Walk on sidewalks, or if there is no sidewalk, as near to the curb as possible — keep away from moving traffic.

— Don't run across streets or run out from between parked cars.

— Travel in groups and don't go into homes unless you know the people.

Tripp also suggested that home owners leave an outside light burning — to welcome trick-or-treaters and make it easier for them to see, and to act as a deterrent to possible vandalism.

Tripp also urged drivers to be especially watchful for children and to be prepared to stop when they see children in or near the street.

Chief Says Speedy Marshal Was Wrong

By The Associated Preeds

Chief U.S. Marshal William Berryhill says a deputy marshal who received a speeding ticket in Pitt County while rushing prisoners to a county jail to be fed made a mistake in judgment.

"We tell our people not to speed or violate any traffic laws unless there are emergency circumstances," Berryhill said Thursday. "In the judgment of these fellows, because of the passengers they had, it was their judgment that they had an emergency on their hands."

Berryhill said he had warned the marshals and would take disciplinary action if they were to speed again. But he said a Highway Patrol trooper who ticketed the deputy marshal for driving 71 mph in a 55 mph zone could have issued a warning ticket.

The U.S. Attorney's Office contends that Deputy Marshal Danny McCoy Eatmon cannot be prosecuted for the ticket in state court because he was on official business. Federal lawyers filed a motion to move the case to federal court, contending that speeding had been justified because the prisoners would have had to be fed at a public restaurant — a situation they described as an emergency — if they could not have reached an area jail by meal time.

But state officials contend that no one — including federal law officers — is authorized to exceed the posted speed limit unless there is an emergency, and that transporting prisoners did not amount to an emergency under state law.

Isaac "Ike" Avery, an assistant N.C. attorney general, said the marshals could have arranged to have had the prisoners fed later at a jail. "I don't see that (transporting prisoners) as an emergency," he said.

Wayne Pearson, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons in Washington, said the only time bureau employees had been authorized to exceed speed limits was in an emergency situation, such as carrying a wounded prisoner to a hospital. He said correctional officers had received tickets while transporting prisoners between correctional facilities in buses and cars.

"I've known of our staff that have gotten tickets and had to pay them," Pearson, the prison bureau's coordinator of corrections services, said.

A spokesman for the U.S. Marshal Service in Washington said there were no specific regulations or policies concerning how marshals should drive while on official business. "Marshals would follow individual state laws under normal circumstances," the spokesman said.

Texasgulf Trying To Boost Image

By The Associated Praess

After being assessed a $5.7 million fine for alleged violations of the state's air quality laws, an eastern North Carolina fertilizer manufacturer has hired a consultant in an effort to improve its image.

"We are committed to the environment," said Thomas J. Regan Jr., Texasgulf vice president and plant general manager.

The fine, the largest penalty of its kind ever levied against a company by the state, was imposed after state investigators uncovered 1,742 violations of air-quality regulations. Most serious among the alleged infractions is that packing material was removed from a scrubbing device, reducing its ability to control air pollution.

The company denies any willful wrongdoing and is contesting the fine.

Air emissions were the focus of the state's legal action, but environmentalists also worry about damage to delicate salt-fishing waters and wetland habitats. Up to 60 million gallons of fresh water are used in the manufacturing process and discharged daily from the plant into the Pamlico River.

At the vast 80,000-acre Texasgulf plant at Aurora, phosphate ore, mined from deposits 100 feet under the ground, is processed into fertilizer. Ammonia, fluoride and sulfur-dioxide fumes are generated in the process.

Roughly $8 million is budgeted over the next two years to address environmental issues, Regan said. Some planning changes aim specifically at polishing public relations.

The company has hired an engineer and an environmental scientist to consult with state officials, review operating practices and upgrade the plant's environmental safeguards.

Texasgulf also is paying consultants to advise on restoring and replanting mined-out areas and developing environmental procedures manuals. It is also running a question-and-answer, "Texasgulf Talks," in seven eastern North Carolina newspapers.

Oyster Roast

The Pamlico-Tar River Foundation will have an oyster roast Nov. 7 at 6:30 p.m. at the Washington Civic Center, located between Main and Second streets on Gladden Street in Washington, N.C.

The event will include music by The Lemon Sisters and Rutabaga Brothers.

Instructor Course

The Pitt County Red Cross will offer a cardiopulmonary resuscitation instructor course on Nov. 20 and Nov. 21. Participants who wish to take the course must have a current CPR basic level course certificate.

Registration deadline is Nov. 16 at 4:30 p.m. For more information contact the Red Cross office at 757-0270 or 752-4222 Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Salute To Farmers

Bethel Elementary School will have "A Salute to Our Farmers" and focus on North Carolina agriculture the week of Nov. 23.

Teachers in kindergarten through fourth grades will use materials provided by the Pitt County Farm Bureau to emphasize the importance of agriculture in eastern North Carolina. The bureau also provided lesson plans and worksheets for students at each grade level.

Second-grade students will present a play incorporating harvest time and local agriculture, and a nutritionist will be asked to discuss the importance of food grown locally.

A poster about the activities will be placed on the bulletin board at the Bethel Town Hall.

Warren Honored

An estimated 450 people, among them N.C. Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, attended a reception Wednesday honoring state Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, for his service in the General Assembly.

"It was a fun occasion. Everybody seemed to enjoy it," said Reid Hooper, chairman of the event. "It was just a nice evening."

"The real purpose" of the affair, the fourth annual Warren appreciation gathering, Hooper said, "is to get a lot of Ed's friends and supporters together and to say to Ed that we appreciate the good job that he's doing for Pitt County and Greene County in the state Legislature."

"And he's doing one heck of a job for us," Hooper said. "There were no speeches. It was a time for fellowship ... just a nice evening."

Warren, a Pitt County native and former member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, has been a member of the House since 1981.

Art Exhibit

More than 400 pieces of student art work were submitted to be judged for the North Carolina High School Art Exhibit.

Dr. Richard Laing, cultural affairs specialist at the Rural Development Institute and professor of art education at East Carolina University, helped select the 100 pieces of the art to be displayed at the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival.

The exhibit will be housed in the Pitt County schools office and the state Department of Public Instruction for one year.

but it's a good sign. That means work is going ahead, and when people are at work results also come. The rest of it I'll say to you after the talks."

The foreign minister then repeated what he said when he was here last month for talks: "I'm a natural optimist."

After the greeting, Shultz and Shevardnadze, along with senior advisers, moved into a small office where they sat in armchairs on opposite sides of a fireplace and resumed a dialogue broken off last Friday in Moscow when Gorbachev told Shultz he was not prepared to set a date for a summit.

Frank C. Carlucci, the U.S. national security adviser, sat behind Shultz.

"We have to keep the fire at a nice, quiet level," Shultz told Shevardnadze. "...You need a good bed of ashes because the ashes hold the heat. It's a good New England approach."

The foreign minister replied: "The fireplace does create an atmosphere of comfort, a comfortable atmosphere."

Reagan, after a week of mixed signals from Moscow, said Thursday the discussions with Shevardnadze would shed light on the likelihood of a nuclear-missile treaty and a super-power summit.

Shevardnadze, carrying a letter for Reagan from Gorbachev, was due at the White House shortly after noon.

Reports from Moscow on Thursday said the summit agenda already had been completed and that a meeting "is fixed for the end of this year." A Soviet official said Moscow would propose a summit in the first week of December.

U.S. officials said a summit could be arranged for late November or early December. Asked prospects for a summit in a neutral country, an official said, "We think it should be in the United States."

Reagan denied that anything had been arranged. Asked on Thursday if the timing had been set, the president replied, "Nope. I'm going to wait until tomorrow and find out."

Shevardnadze arrived in Washington early today, just hours before the opening of talks with Shultz and White House national security adviser Frank Carlucci at the State Department.

His visit capped a week of confusion, triggered by the surprise announcement in Moscow last Friday that Gorbachev was not ready to fix a summit date because there was no guarantee the Reagan administration was willing to restrict its Star Wars missile defense program.

Gorbachev's decision was seen in Washington as an attempt to force concessions from Reagan, who has been weakened by the Iran-Contra scandal, the defeat of his Supreme Court nominee and the market collapse on Wall Street.

Signaling possible flexibility on Star Wars, Reagan said he was willing to talk with the Soviets about the program but would never allow it to become a bargaining chip or cripple it.

In an apparent reversal, the Kremlin announced Wednesday that Shevardnadze would fly to the United States to resume talks with Shultz and to meet with Reagan.

Some of the mixed signals in Moscow may have stemmed from a political crisis there, touched off by a speech critical of Gorbachev made by Moscow party chief Boris N. Yeltsin, The New York Times reported today.

That challenge affected summit planning because Gorbachev could not leave the country if his position was insecure, and he could not appear to be soft with the Americans, according to unnamed Soviet officials quoted by the Times.

In Moscow, Deputy Foreign Ministry spokesman Boris Pyadyshev said the two sides had agreed on an agenda for the summit before year's end.

The agenda, he said, includes "medium-range and shorter-range missiles, questions relative to strategic offensive weapons and the ABM (antiballistic missile) treaty."

The Darkness Of Halloween Night

Out in the darkness of Halloween night, I see visions of goblins that give me a fright.

I am brave and this I know is so, cause I can stand beside a grave and yell loudly Ho, Ho, Ho.

But wait, what is that noise behind me that gives me such a start? I know it must be a goblin so I think I shall depart.

Away I run across the fields with witches and goblins at my heels, the red ones, yellow ones and green ones, too, were yelling and screaming that we will get you.

I ran and I ran 'til I could run no more, got to the house and slammed the door. Flew up the stairs and jumped in to bed pulling the covers right over my head.

I am not brave, I thought, as I lay ready for sleep. From now on, I'll just ring doorbells and play trick or treat.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Fun, Not Danger

Ghouls, ghosts, goblins and revelers, beware. Tricks await you as you seek your Halloween treats.

Fun is the theme of All Hallow's Eve but caution and moderation are as important as the trick-or-treating and partying that accompany this evening. The spirit of the day is observed by both kids and adults, and in Greenville, the tradition has included tragedy.

Adult revelers — often East Carolina University students — seek downtown Greenville as their party site — sometimes with troubling results. In 1975, the city's celebration erupted into a riot, complete with injuries and a lot of bad blood between students and the community. In no way should that episode be repeated, and the responsibility for prevention lies both with the revelers themselves and the city. Circumstances will be complicated in 1987 by a home ECU football game.

In recent years, downtown streets have been closed so costume-clad adults could parade their creative attire in public. It is no secret drinking is involved in this revelry, but preparedness by police and careful monitoring of the activities downtown have resulted in an atmosphere that more closely resembles A Mardi Gras than a riot. Police have set limits and arrested partiers who stepped beyond boundaries of legal and appropriate behavior. This planning and readiness, an approach that appears to have squelched serious trouble in the past, should be continued in 1987. Alcohol consumption should be contained.

The partiers should also take responsibility for keeping the evening harmless by stressing moderation, not over-indulgence. By now, organizations planning Halloween-related downtown events should be defining appropriate and inappropriate behavior for members. Individuals intending to join the carnival of costumes should recognize that drinking too much booze could put them in prison stripes as a real costume.

There is also inherent danger in the youthful celebration of Halloween. Youngsters don costumes and collect treats door-to-door, while scaring the witches hair off those who open the door. Parents must take responsibility for accompanying their kids on these jaunts. Youngsters shouldn't trick-or-treat without adult supervision.

Unfortunately, trick-or-treating should be limited to homes of friends and relatives, and treats should be checked for harmful substances or tampering before being eaten.

On Saturday, oldsters and kids alike will don costumes and trot off to parties. Halloween can be a safe celebration in Greenville if parents, revelers and law enforcement officials keep the focus on fun.

Accolades

Accolades are in order for Sgt. Cecil J. Hardy of the Greenville Police Department.

Hardy was one of 10 officers honored in the competition for Police Officer of the Year. He was honored along with the other officers in competition sponsored by Parade magazine and the International Association of Chiefs of Police. Hardy and eight other officers received honorable mentions, while the Police Officer of the Year is Sgt. Kenneth Pollock of the Maryland State Police. The awards were presented last Monday in Toronto.

Hardy was recognized for his work in developing a program to combat drug sales in a neighborhood on West Fifth Street. The once quiet neighborhood was upset when drug pushers moved in and virtually took over the yards of long time residents.

Hardy went door-to-door to alert residents to the problem and inform them of what they could do as citizens to combat the problem. One step was to give police officers the power to search on private property for hidden stashes of illegal drugs. Crime watch was organized to give the police many more eyes in watching for illegal drug traffic. The result was that an entire neighborhood became alert to the drug problem and began to understand that residents could help to protect their area's integrity.

Obviously the drug problem hasn't gone away in Greenville. Drug pushers have a way of moving to other areas when the heat is on. In this case, however, Hardy demonstrated to the neighborhood that it could do something to improve the situation. That in turn should show other neighborhoods that they can act in unison against crime and keep their areas pleasant places in which to live.

Hardy has received national recognition for his efforts and certainly he has the best wishes of his home community.

GOP Debate: Style Over Substance

'With the exception of the arms control exchange, in which Bush was the only unqualified supporter of the treaty, most of the candidates preened for points on style rather than picked knock-out fights on major issues.'

HOUSTON — The six Republicans who would like to succeed President Reagan found just one thing to argue strongly about Wednesday night at their first debate: a prospective arms control treaty that Reagan views as potentially one of his greatest triumphs.

It was a strange topic to open the campaign to become Reagan's successor. Many polls show that the American public largely supports the prospective treaty to eliminate medium-range and shorter-range nuclear missiles in Europe. And it is widely believed that a summit at which Reagan signs the accord would help restore some vitality to his troubled presidency.

Yet it was the only topic on which Republicans stalking front-runner Vice President Bush picked a fight in the first GOP showdown here, which was broadcast by the Public Broadcasting Service. With the exception of the arms control exchange, in which Bush was the only unqualified supporter of the treaty, most of the candidates preened for points on style rather than picked knock-out fights on major issues.

"They would all be different presidents, but the issues are not that different. It's more style," said Ed Rollins, campaign manager for Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and a former Reagan political adviser.

Even the most provocative contender, former Delaware governor

Pierre S. "Pete" du Pont IV — who injected Social Security into the debate to the others' discomfort and who aimed the sharpest attack on Bush — wound up getting the lowest marks in a poll of Republican debate-watchers released here Thursday.

The Republicans had nothing to say on the Iran-contra affair, which only a few months ago appeared to be a major handicap for Bush. Nor did they say much about support for the Nicaraguan contras, which Reagan is battling to sustain, or the growing U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf. And only du Pont mentioned the failed effort to put Judge Robert H. Bork on the Supreme Court.

Even differences on economic policy were described in gentle tones, despite the stock market collapse last week.

The debate's message seemed to be that the Republican candidates — with the exception of du Pont — wanted to be on their best behavior and decided in advance to save brawling for later. Here's how they approached the problems of style and themes:

Bush: Wanted to avoid awkward gaffes or angry outbursts — and he was successful — while emphasizing his loyalty to Reagan. Instead of getting rattled by du Pont, Bush, who has often been ridiculed for his establishment upbringing, put down du Pont with a firm "Pierre, my friend, Pierre. ..."

In a survey after the debate of 400 self-identified Republican primary voters in 13 key early primary states by SRI Research, Bush received the highest overall marks: 64 percent said he would be the GOP nominee.

Dole: Wanted to come across as the steady Washington insider rather than the slashing campaigner of earlier years, and he succeeded by taking a gently humorous approach.

"He wasn't flamboyant and he didn't intend to be flamboyant," said Dole strategist David Keene. "We didn't think in this debate it was our task or our need to take on George Bush."

The low-key approach had its risks, too: The poll found that few GOP viewers thought Dole improved his standing.

Du Pont: Wanted to be different, and was, challenging the others to discuss one of the greatest taboos in GOP politics — Social Security financing — and goading Bush by saying he had not seen "any vision, any principles, any policy."

But du Pont reaped only a backlash in the hall. And the poll reflected that: He got the worst marks.

Alexander M. Haig Jr.: Wanted to shed the image of a stern military man, saying at the outset that generals had not led the nation into war when they became presidents. Haig seemed more cool and measured than in his earlier days in the Reagan presidency, when many remembered his malaprops and quick temper.

Haig matched Bush for highest marks on foreign policy expertise in the poll, but did not gain much overall.

Kemp: Wanted to portray himself as a candidate of vision, stressing his support for the Strategic Defense Initiative and tax cuts, and avoiding rigid focus on international monetary policy, a favorite subject in the past.

Marion G. "Pat" Robertson: After touching off an uproar recently with a remark widely interpreted as criticism of First Lady Nancy Reagan, the former television evangelist tried to turn on the charm. The poll showed him far exceeding public expectations.

Soviet Diplomacy Difficult To Fathom

WASHINGTON — The standard metaphor for Soviet diplomacy for many years was Nikita Khrushchev's remark that his foreign minister, Andrei Gromyko, would sit on a block of ice until it melted if ordered to do so.

Since such drip-by-drip diplomacy was Moscow's chosen method most of the time, the Kremlin's dramatic reversals of course in the past week on a possible superpower summit in Washington are a surprising departure from the norm.

How this happened, and why, are subjects of intense interest and much speculation among U.S. policy makers and other observers of the Soviet Union.

Interviews with policy makers who participated in last week's Moscow talks that involved Secretary of State George P. Shultz suggest a growing consensus that the turn of events was the product of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's highly personal negotiating style, plus a critical misjudgment of the Reagan administration by Gorbachev and some of his key aides.

The swiftness of the Soviet turn-about suggests to these analysts that Gorbachev is very much in control.

He evidently did not have to spend time persuading other leaders to change the Soviet posture once it became apparent they had not succeeded in winning concessions from the Americans on the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), an embarrassment from a public relations standpoint.

At the same time, a series of other flip-flops and odd soundings from the Soviet Union has left officials wondering if a new phase of competition for power is under way within the ruling Politburo, or whether there has been an outbreak of bureaucratic politics between the Communist Party secretariat, the Foreign Ministry and the Defense Ministry.

"I think they overstepped in trying to (get) a U.S. move on SDI as a precondition for a summit meeting, and when they saw the reaction, they turned around," said a U.S. official who participated in last week's Moscow meetings.

"The simplest explanation seems to be the most logical, that they made one last try at concessions on SDI in connection with a summit and, when it didn't succeed, they quickly backed away," said another official who traveled with Shultz to Moscow. "We expected them to shift their position" after Shultz and President Reagan refused to budge, the official said, but "we didn't expect it this soon."

To recap what happened: During Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze's trip to Washington in mid-September, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to hold a summit meeting of their leaders this fall, during dates to be established in Shultz's Oct. 22-23 mission to Moscow.

Shultz said Shevardnadze, who arrived in Washington last month with a Gorbachev letter conferring on him full negotiating authority, proposed and drafted this particular agreement.

But last Friday in the Kremlin, Gorbachev unexpectedly did not set the summit date. Instead, he spoke of the need for agreement at the next summit on "key provisions" of future pacts on strategic offensive arms and space arms.

When Shultz replied that he could give no assurance on the latter point, which would put limits on Reagan's SDI, Gorbachev said he did not "feel comfortable" in setting a date.

As the meeting proceeded, a U.S.

official sitting across the table from the Soviet team noticed that Shevardnadze, sitting on Gorbachev's right, looked particularly unhappy. The veteran former Soviet ambassador to the United States, Anatoly Dobrynin, sitting on Gorbachev's left in his capacity as chief Kremlin adviser on international affairs, displayed no such concern.

Some U.S. officials theorize that several of Gorbachev's proposals last Friday were worked out by Dobrynin with another participant in the meeting, Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, chief of staff of the Soviet armed forces.

This past Tuesday, only four days later, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Boris Pyadyshev announced the surprising news that Gorbachev would come to Washington "in the near future." At the same time, Shevardnadze called in U.S. Ambassador Jack F. Matlock to say he was ready to fly to Washington Friday to continue the discussion of arms control and the summit.

Thursday Pyadyshev announced that a summit meeting has been assured.

All this took place, according to U.S. sources, without any substantive negotiations in the week since Shultz left Moscow.

Another indication for U.S. officials that strange things are going on within the Soviet hierarchy was illustrated by a surprising set of flip-flops regarding the Soviet position on space and defense.

In that case, a position set forth by Shevardnadze on space research in Washington last month suddenly was repudiated "on orders from Moscow" at the Geneva talks in mid-October by the chief Soviet space and defense negotiator, Yuli Kuznetsov.

Strength For Today

The Book of Revelation is confusing to many Christians. This is because people often fail to read it in the light of the historical situation amid which it arose.

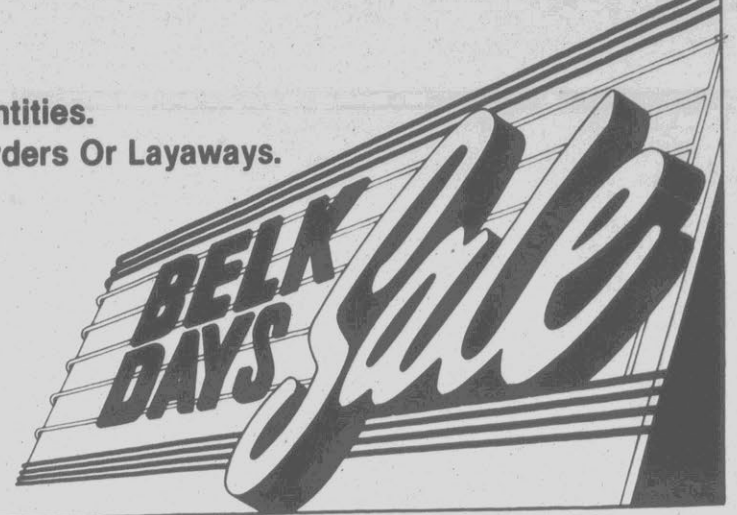

It was written by the Apostle John about the year 90 A.D. and was addressed to churches in Asia Minor which were suffering persecution. Too often the book has been used as a kind of mysterious and symbolic incantation of prophecy. Its chief aim, however, is not to foretell the future but to encourage and sustain believers amid the challenge of present trials.

In these days when nuclear catastrophe seems imminent, this book should be read thoroughly. It calls upon all Christians to maintain their conviction that ultimately the hand of God decides all issues, and that our final triumph will blot out all the sufferings we may have to undergo.

IN THE STATE

Dentist

DURHAM (AP) — When Dr. Candy Alderman accepted $24,529 in federal scholarship money to attend dental school, she signed a contract to work in a designated dentist shortage area for three years after graduation.

But she did not want to go to Plains, Ga., where she was assigned after graduation in 1984, so the government says she now owes triple the scholarship plus interest — $139,464.01. The government has rejected her offer to repay the initial scholarship plus interest.

Ms. Alderman, 34, said that when she signed the contract to go the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, she intended to fulfill it. "But I was told I would most likely be assigned to work in North Carolina, although there would be opportunities to go anywhere else," she said.

After graduation, she asked not to be sent to Georgia because her fiancé could not relocate. When she failed the Georgia licensing exam and did not report for work, the National Health Service Corps ruled that she had broken her contract.

Last week, U.S. District Court Judge Eugene A. Gordon agreed with the corps and ruled that she must repay the federal government triple damages.

Duke Fine

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has proposed a $100,000 fine against Duke Power Co. for alleged violations at the McGuire Nuclear Power Plant this summer.

NRC officials said Thursday the suggested penalty is twice the minimum because of the power company's "past poor performance in the area of concern."

The commission also questioned the adequacy of Duke's operator and employee training programs, saying the recent incident wasn't the first at McGuire.

The NRC charges that last summer, after a backup diesel generator was taken out of service, a circuit breaker to the generator was left open. The breaker stayed open for about 90 hours — which meant the generator couldn't have started automatically during that time. According to NRC rules, the plant should have started shutting down if the generator had remained inoperable for more than 72 hours.

Bragg Ad

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A Fort Bragg private picked to star in the Army's new recruiting television commercials says he skipped a haircut before his audition to give himself an edge on other applicants.

"I figured that would be the ticket in. I'd look like a civilian," said Pfc. David C. Hank, who was picked for the starring role this week. "I was wrong. They told me to go get an airborne haircut."

Hank, a 6-foot-3 artilleryman in the 2nd Battalion, 319th Field artillery Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division, plays a focal role in the Army's new generation of commercials with the theme "Get an Edge on Life."

The commercials will be added to the Army's familiar television ads, which proclaim "Be all that you can be" and "We do more before 9 o'clock in the morning than most people do all day," according to Army officials.

Hank, 22, who said he quit his $13.25-per-hour job as a sheetmetal worker in Flint, Mich., to become an airborne soldier, was selected from 43 other members of the division for the "Dear Dad" commercial.

Bus Drivers

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina school systems are struggling to meet an order to replace school bus drivers under age 18, and the State Board of Education next week will ask the U.S. Department of Labor to extend the order's Dec. 31 deadline.

The Labor Department announced in August that it would no longer allow North Carolina public schools to employ bus drivers under the age of 18. The schools have until Dec. 31 to replace underage drivers.

State officials said when the restriction was announced that about 4,500 student drivers — one-third of the state's school bus drivers — would have to be replaced.

But state and local officials say the task is easier said than done. The State Board of Education on Wednesday is to decide whether to propose a plan to phase out underage drivers, or to ask for a specific deadline extension.

"It looks like now the intention is to request an extension on to the end of the (school) year so (local school) units can have time over the summer to train new drivers," Norfleet Gardner, director of transportation for the state Department of Public Instruction, said Thursday.

Train Hits Car

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A man from Lexington was killed and woman critically injured Wednesday when their car, stalled at a railroad crossing, was hit by a train, the North Carolina Highway Patrol reported.

There have been two other fatal accidents in less than two years at the same crossing, which is on Lower Lake Road off Old N.C. 29.

The intersection is marked by stop signs and railroad crossing signs, but there are no warning signals or gates.

Richard L. Walker, 47, died Wednesday when the westbound Norfolk Southern train hit his car about 10 a.m., said trooper Robert Harper.

Wendy B. Corden, 27, was taken to Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, where she was in critical condition.

Martin, Jordan Trade Campaign Barbs Over Endorsement By NCAE

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin, accused by Democrats of having a "disgraceful" record on education, fired back that the North Carolina Association of Educators doesn't control the voters.

Martin said the NCAE, which recently recommended that members support Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan in his expected clash with Martin in 1988, has long supported the party in control of the Legislature.

Martin said he differs with the NCAE over merit pay for teachers, but he said he expected to get support "from individual teachers who have supported me in the past ... and who believe the things I am trying to do to strengthen the quality of public education in North Carolina deserve their individual support"

State Democratic Party Chairman Jim Van Hecke rejected Martin's explanation of the NCAE position, saying, "The reasons teachers reject the sitting governor are very clear: in his support of education, Jim Martin is at the bottom of the class."

Van Hecke said Martin, as a congressman, voted against programs to help needy and handicapped students pay for education and voted against a bill to let more poor children qualify for school lunches.

"As governor, Jim Martin's disgraceful record on education has continued," he said.

The governor "opposed the Basic Education Program before flip-flopping and now endorses it," Van Hecke said. "While Democratic leaders in the legislature came up with an innovative plan to build much-needed schools, the sitting governor sulked on the sidelines because he couldn't claim the credit."

Martin responded to the attack with humor.

"My campaign suffered a serious setback this morning," he joked with reporters. "The chairman of the Democratic Party announced he's not supporting me. I think that's the tenth time he's said that."

Martin repeated that he initially withheld support for the Basic Education Program over concerns about priorities that "neglected teachers" and "didn't really address fundamental skills."

He said Van Hecke "is trying to obscure the entire record. He gave a false version of my congressional record."

Martin leveled his own criticisms at Jordan and other key Democrats for turning their backs on his proposal to use bonds to pay for school construction, instead voting for a sales-tax increase and bigger levies on business.

He said Jordan said he was in favor of merit pay. "But when the system needs to be improved, he refuses to support the funding that is necessary to improve it."

The governor said he was pleased Van Hecke raised the education issue.

"It's a good issue and I think I'm on the winning side of it and I'm on the side where the majority of the people of North Carolina stand," he said. "They're in favor of evaluating the competence and the effectiveness of teachers and paying them accordingly. The NCAE is against that and the lieutenant governor is going to have to decide whether he's with the people or the NCAE."

Dogs Upset By Skating, Attack Boy

MOUNT OLIVE, N.C. (AP) — The grandfather of an 8-year-old boy who was mauled by three dogs says quick action by a neighbor probably saved the child's life.

"The best I can figure, if the man hadn't been there, I'm pretty sure they would have killed the boy," Cliff Strickland of Mount Olive said Thursday, the day after Travis Wellington was attacked by three boxers.

Travis underwent 3½ hours of surgery after the Wednesday afternoon attack and was listed in stable condition Thursday in the intensive care unit of Wayne Memorial Hospital in Goldsboro.

Strickland said neighbor Elbert Hall fired two shots at the dogs in an attempt to scare them off, then struck them with his rifle to get them off the child.

"He shot over the dogs because they were throwing him around like a rag doll. He couldn't shoot in there because he might have shot the boy," Strickland said.

Strickland said the dogs apparently escaped from another neighbor's yard by digging under a fence.

"He (Travis) had a skateboard and had tied a rope around the board and was pulling it up and down the road like a wagon," Strickland said. "Evidently the noise irritated (the dogs) and they dug a hole under the fence and jumped on him. They really tore him up. The man keeps a pretty good check on dogs because he raises and sells them. I guess the noise just got next to them."

The child suffered severe injuries to his head, face and arms.

Travis is the son of Doug and Patsy Wellington.

The dogs are owned by Charlie Swinson, a neighbor of the Wellingtons. The dogs have been confined and will be checked by local animal control officers.

Educator Pleased Over Tests

RALEIGH (AP) — A report that shows North Carolina matched the national average on math and history tests is encouraging, but a state education official says he won't be happy until the scores match Virginia — the regional leader.

Virginia led the eight states surveyed with scores significantly above the national norm. And Bill Brown, state superintendent for research and testing services, said that should encourage North Carolina officials to work harder.

"I wouldn't want to relax until we are even with Virginia," Brown said. "I would be very pleased to be at the national average if I were the state decision makers. But I wouldn't be satisfied until we are pressing the best."

The Southern Regional Education Board report of tests given to 11th graders in Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia was the first to compare individual states with the national average, Brown said.

"All of the Southeastern states are clustering around the national average," Brown said.

"Over the years the South has been historically a good bit lower than the national average any time achievement was measured," he said. "But now legislatures in many Southern states are putting more money into education."

While North Carolina's average score was 288 for math, compared with 289 for the national average, Virginia led the Southeast with a score of 299.1. For history, North Carolina scored exactly at the national average of 283.4, while Virginia was again the frontrunner at 299.3.

Brown said he was encouraged by data indicating black students in North Carolina were faring better than the national average for blacks. But he said he was surprised to find girls scoring lower than boys on both tests.

"I would be a little concerned about that if you're worried about equity in the schools," he said.

In sample questions provided with the report, North Carolina 11th graders scored lowest on a math question requiring solving an algebraic equation with one unknown variable.

Midland Celebrates Jessica's Rescue

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Up to 40,000 people, many wearing pink, cheered a jubilant parade in this ailing oil town to honor Jessica McClure and her rescuers, including one who called it "a celebration of life."

The festivities Thursday were to continue today, with Oprah Winfrey broadcasting her nationally syndicated talk show from a community center in this West Texas city and the 19-month-old girl's hospital room.

Jessica, who spent more than 58 hours in a narrow, abandoned well two weeks ago, sat on her mother's shoulders to watch the parade from her room at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Pink ribbons and bows were tied to trees and light poles, the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce served a 96-square-foot pink angel-food cake and hundreds of people carried pink balloons or wore pink ribbons.

About 800 people paraded, and Police Chief Richard Czech estimated that as many as 40,000 people turned out.

Thousands of callers phoned for tickets to today's "Oprah Winfrey Show" at the Midland Center auditorium, said Southwestern Bell officials. Scheduled guests included Jessica's parents, Chip and Cissy McClure, and Keshia Knight Pulliam of "The Cosby Show," and a television hookup to the little girl's room was planned.

Four hundred of the auditorium's 1,200 seats were reserved for volunteers involved in drilling the rescue shaft, said publicists for the show, which normally is broadcast from Chicago.

The McClures had asked the city and Chamber of Commerce to organize the parade to honor the rescuers and those who assisted them.

"For those who were there and those who weren't, we want to thank you from the bottom of our hearts," McClure, 18, told the 2,000 people who gathered at the parade's end. "I want you to remember one thing: Jessica loves all of you."

Emotions ran deep among the spectators, some of whom were let off work early to attend the parade.

They cheered loudly when a huge, green drilling machine that had dug part of the rescue shaft rumbled by. The crowd thundered even louder when they saw the flatbed trailer on which the volunteer drillers stood.

"This is a celebration of life," said Robert O'Donnell, the paramedic who freed Jessica from the shaft. "None of us could have done it alone. It took every one of us."

The feeling of pulling together was especially meaningful in Midland because the slide in oil prices has depressed its economy. The unemployment rate was 14 percent last year, and a few thousand of Midland's 90,000 residents have moved away.

"A lot of us have had a lot of pride in our people and just a sigh of relief that everything has turned out as well as it has," Chamber of Commerce Chairman Charles Spence said Thursday.

Jessica's rescue drew so much attention that telephone operators were treated as heroes in the parade.

One-Vote Margin Undercuts House Edge In Deficit-Cutting Bargains

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright admits that the one-vote House margin in favor of a Democratic tax increase plan doesn't help his bargaining position with the White House in deficit-reduction talks.

But Wright, D-Texas, also says failure to approve the bill would have sent the wrong signal to financial markets, where analysts are looking for signs that Congress is serious about stemming the government's red ink.

A day-long debate Thursday over the tax plan generated bitterness contrasting sharply with the bipartisanship that President Reagan and congressional leaders have tried to display this week in their deficit-reduction negotiations.

Only one Republican — Rep. Jim Jeffords of Vermont — sided with Democrats when, on a 206-205 vote, they approved the plan produced by the Democratic leadership. Forty-one Democrats voted no, including some liberals usually allied with the leaders.

"I think there's just a lot of nervousness ... on any vote about deficit reduction," Wright told reporters. Despite turning an embarrassing defeat earlier in the day into the razor-thin victory, Wright acknowledged he was left in a less-than-powerful position for negotiations with the White House.

"Nobody's got a real strong hand," Wright said. "I was hopeful of a bigger vote than that."

Wright argued that if the bill had failed, "the signal (to the financial markets) would have been marginally worse, perhaps a great deal worse."

The Democratic bill would: —Increase revenues by $12 billion during the 12 months that began Oct.

1, chiefly by boosting taxes on corporations and upper-income individuals. Neither income-tax rates nor excise taxes would be increased, although the 3 percent telephone tax would be extended three years beyond its scheduled Dec. 31 expiration.

—Cut selected spending programs by $2.5 billion, with Medicare reimbursements to doctors and hospitals bearing the biggest share. This grab bag includes such varied provisions as one requiring that ships pay at least $250,000 each time they are escorted through the Persian Gulf by the U.S. Navy. Another requires labeling of frozen pizza containing fake cheese under the assumption this would increase sales of real cheese and, thus, reduce farm price supports.

—Grant a 3 percent pay raise to members of Congress and federal employees in 1988. Lawmakers' pay would rise to about $92,200.

—Direct the House Appropriations Committee to vote about $8.5 billion in additional spending cuts in defense and social programs.

That would add up to the minimum $23 billion deficit reduction that the Gramm-Rudman law requires Congress and the president to agree on for the 12 months that began Oct. 1. Without an agreement, automatic spending cuts of $23 billion would take effect Nov. 20.

Although the Senate Finance Committee has produced its own tax increase bill, the Senate is unlikely to consider any such deficit-reduction plan until the Congress-White House negotiations conclude. The negotiators, who were resuming work today, are aiming to complete a package late next week. House Republicans had insisted that the Democratic bill be shelved pending the negotiations.

Economic Indicators Slip Slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief forecasting gauge of future economic activity slipped 0.1 percent in September, the first decline in eight months, the Commerce Department said today.

Many economists believe the setback for the Index of Leading Indicators is just the first of what will be a series of declines caused by the collapse of the stock market.

These analysts believe the index is correctly signaling slower growth for next year, with some already predicting the September drop will be the first of three consecutive monthly declines. Often in the past that has signaled an impending recession.

However, government analysts cautioned that much of the weakness in September came from a drop in the length of the average workweek.

They said this decline was misleading because the survey of workweek hours was taken in the week covered by the Labor Day holiday, which depressed the results.

This was the biggest negative force on the index in September, followed by a decline in the stock market, reflected by a 3.2 percent September decline in the Standard and Poor's index of 500 stocks.

This weakness reflected the fact that stock prices were already headed lower in September, following record highs reached in August.

Analysts said the record collapse of the market in October is likely to have three times the negative impact on the October index as the September fall.

Republicans Wary Of Woes Besetting Three Governors

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year after Republicans won major gains in governors' races, one new GOP governor faces recall and two more suffer political wounds, raising worries that their troubles may cripple the party in the 1988 presidential election.

In Arizona, beleaguered Gov. Evan Mecham is beset by a recall petition drive, impeachment moves by his own party in the state legislature, and a criminal probe into an alleged undisclosed campaign loan.

Mecham's mounting troubles have caused a drop in Republican voter registration, and Republicans fear it is costing the GOP the majority it recently achieved in the state.

Some national party officials are so concerned they have urged Republican National Committee chairman Frank J. Fahrenkopf to repudiate Mecham publicly, according to sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

While not nearly so disastrous as the Arizona problem, stumbles by the governors of Texas and Florida have generated complaints and concern among Republicans over the fallout in states that are the electoral giants of the South in the presidential campaign.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements — the only Republican governor in Texas since Reconstruction — has suffered from his involvement in a college football scandal and enactment of the state's largest tax increase ever despite campaigning on a no-tax-increase pledge.

Florida Gov. Bob Martinez has seen his popularity plummet while reversing himself twice on taxes. He surprised supporters first by helping Democratic legislators pass a billion-dollar first-in-the-nation tax on services, such as advertising and accounting, then called for its repeal when he was hounded by intense criticism and opposition.

"In all three cases, these Republican governors have irritated and angered some Republicans as well as the opposition Democrats," said Merle Black, a University of North Carolina political scientist and specialist in Southern politics. "It's not just a partisan thing."

Martinez is a national co-chairman of Vice President George Bush's campaign. But the Florida governor has not appeared in public with Bush in recent months, and he stayed away when Bush visited the state last week.

The reversal in GOP fortunes in these three states comes on the heels of Republican gubernatorial successes in the 1986 elections that flew in the face of an otherwise Democratic year.

Republicans gained eight more governor's offices last year, even while losing control of the U.S.

Turkey Prices Will Be Lower

WASHINGTON (AP) — Holiday diners can expect record supplies of turkey this season, with prices down sharply from a year ago, according to Agriculture Department economists.

Turkey slaughter has been running far above year-earlier levels. As of Oct. 1, the stockpile of frozen turkeys was at a record 640.9 million pounds, up 25 percent from a year earlier, according to a quarterly inventory.

Meanwhile, turkey wholesale prices — indicating consumer price trends ahead — are down sharply. The department's Economic Research Service says the wholesale price of hen turkeys in the Northeast probably averaged about 56 cents per pound in July, August and September, down 30 percent from the third quarter average of 80 cents in 1986.

Wholesale turkey prices in the fourth quarter are expected to be in the range of 54 cents to 58 cents per pound, also down 30 percent from 78 cents a year ago.

Economist Lee Christensen, an analyst in the agency, said turkey is a fast-growing component of the American consumer's meat diet, moving from what was once mostly a holiday treat to year-round use.

In 1986, he said, Americans each consumed an average of 214.3 pounds of red meat and poultry. That is retail weight as it is taken home.

Senate. The party now holds the governor's mansion in 24 states that control a majority of presidential electoral votes.

At least one of the new GOP governors has proven thus far to be a pleasant surprise for Republicans, however.

Alabama Gov. Guy Hunt, a former chicken farmer and Amway salesman, became the first Republican governor in that state since Reconstruction when Democrats divided in a bitter nomination dispute. Since then, Hunt has won passage of a legislative package and kept up his popularity, raising GOP hopes for the future.

In Arizona, Texas and Florida, Republicans want to avoid damage to voter registration and to future GOP chances, particularly in the next governor's race.

"The next Republican has some baggage to carry," said Black. "The positive thing for Republicans in this is these problems are happening early in the administrations. But I think there still will be a lingering impact."

In Texas, Clements has already said he will not seek re-election in 1990. One party leader, Dallas County GOP Chairman Tom James, said Clements has become "an enormous negative" for his involvement in the football scandal at Southern Methodist University. Clements was chairman of SMU's board of governors when it continued payoffs to players.

"Within the party, there is a sense of betrayal since he ran and was elected on a no-tax-increase platform," James said.

Clements has remained neutral in the race for the Republican presidential nomination, but his wife is state co-chairman for Bush, who claims the state as his home.

Michele Davis, executive director of the Republican Governors Association, said that by taking himself out of the 1990 race Clements has given other candidates time to overcome political trouble. She said Martinez, who may run again, has time to overcome his high negative ratings.

"First shot out of the box, he slipped, and he's trying to fix the problem," she said. "I don't get a sense this is poisoning the well for any Republicans in the state. ... He's got some time to make up for it."

Martinez ran for office pledging to cut $800 million from the state's budget. Instead he joined Democrats on the new tax, and after its enactment one poll showed 52 percent of those surveyed would vote against Martinez no matter who else was running. He then called for the legislature to repeal the tax.

Mecham's victory in Arizona was attributed to a split within the Democratic Party that allowed him to win in a three-way race. Soon after taking office he alienated voters by canceling the state's Martin Luther King birthday and referring to black children as "pickaninnies."

A top Mecham aide was indicted in October on an extortion charge, and the GOP-dominated state House hired a special counsel to investigate and recommend whether to begin impeachment proceedings over the $350,000 loan. A state grand jury has subpoenaed Mecham and begins meeting next week.

Dear Citizens Of Greenville:

As a Greenville businessman, I would be remiss if I did not take this opportunity to publicly express my sincere appreciation for the 12½ years of outstanding public service rendered this community by Ed Carter - candidate for mayor. I have known Ed for approximately 10 years and have found him to be articulate, knowledgeable, caring, considerate and extremely capable. His unrelenting opposition to the garbage fees, his strong support for the creation of River Park North, his strong leadership in evaluating and reducing budgetary expenditures and his demonstrated ability to mediate conflict and unify others' efforts have all contributed to his outstanding popularity and his overwhelming political success. Greenville desperately needs Carter's strong and capable leadership to ensure its orderly growth and prosperity in the future. You can provide this assurance by casting your vote for Ed Carter on November 3, 1987.

Who Has The Beard That Can Win?

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — All the talk about Judge Douglas Ginsburg's age, religion and judicial philosophy ignores what may be a crucial issue in his Supreme Court confirmation — his beard.

Consider the fate of Ginsburg's predecessor, Judge Robert Bork. Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama, a Democrat and key member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, complained that Bork's beard made the Yale law professor look like the devil.

On Wednesday night's "Tonight" show, comedian Jay Leno compared Bork's beard to a government project that ran out of funds before completion.

Ginsburg's fuller beard prompted this comment Thursday from Philip B. Kurland, an expert on American legal history at the University of Chicago Law School: "In my opinion, the Ginsburg beard is a better beard than the Bork beard."

Despite the beard's proud legal tradition — Socrates himself had one — the last beard on the Supreme Court was that of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, who sat on the court from 1931 to 1940 and helped defeat President Franklin D. Roosevelt's plan to pack the court.

In many ways, 1987 has been the year of the beard. Bearded newsmakers have included:

—Barry Slotnick, the New York attorney who successfully defended subway gunman Bernhard Goetz on attempted murder charges.

—Bert Blyleven, the pitcher who helped the Minnesota Twins win their first World Series.

—C. Everett Koop, who as U.S. surgeon general has been the government's most prominent spokesman in the war against AIDS.

Possibly because controversial figures such as Yasser Arafat, Fidel Castro and Ayatollah Khomeini have given them something of a bad name, there are few beards in Congress. Exceptions include Reps. David Bonior, D-Mich., Michael Lowry, D-Wash., and Gary Ackerman, D-N.Y.

Man has been shaving only since about 3100 B.C., when Mesopotamians began using blades made of volcanic glass to scrape away whiskers. In the 4th century B.C., Alexander the Great ordered his troops to shave so foes couldn't grab their beards in battle.

The first straight razor was invented in Europe in 1606, and before the century was over Czar Peter the Great of Russia imposed a "beard tax" as a way of forcing his subjects to shave and thereby enter the modern era.

In 1904 King C. Gillette obtained a U.S. patent for the home safety razor. In its first year, his company sold 90,000 razors and 12 million blades.

Facial hair went out of style about the same time. It came back in the rebellious '60s and hip '70s, when beards were grown by just about everyone who could grow one, and by many who could not.

Today, about 14 percent of American men between 18 and 64 — 12 million of them — have full beards.

Given the nation's economic woes, perhaps President Reagan should hope more men don't join their ranks. In 1986 men spent $2.8 billion on grooming products — most of them related to shaving.

EDITOR'S NOTE: When Rick Hampson was a student at the Boston College Law School, he had a beard.

NOMINEE — President Reagan introduces appeals court Judge Douglas Ginsburg as he announced Thursday that the jurist will be his nominee for a seat on the U.S. Supreme Court. Ginsburg, who would become the court's only Jewish justice, was reported to be the choice of Attorney General Edwin Meese III. (AP Laserphoto)

Nominee Faces Challenge

if Ginsburg's "philosophy about the constitutional rights and liberties of the American people is as extreme as Judge Bork's."

He asked, rhetorically, if Ginsburg is "an ideological clone of Judge Bork — a Judge Bork without a paper trail."

Senate Judiciary Chairman Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., whose panel will conduct confirmation hearings for Ginsburg, had warned the White House that Ginsburg would be controversial.

It became clear Thursday that Reagan's announcement of his choice followed intense, last-minute conservative lobbying for Ginsburg.

The pro-Ginsburg campaign by Meese's Justice Department and conservative Republican senators reportedly plucked the nomination from the grasp of Kennedy, who encountered little opposition from either party when Baker reviewed a list of candidates earlier this week with senators. Baker reportedly favored Kennedy.

Wednesday night, Kennedy and a second federal appellate judge, William W. Wilkins Jr. of Greenville, S.C., had been summoned to the Justice Department for interviews with Baker, Meese and other administration officials.

Reagan was briefed Thursday morning and made his decision at the end of a 20-minute meeting that included Baker and Meese, according to administration officials.

A Senate Republican source, speaking on condition he not be named, said "Kennedy was the choice up until conservatives started raising hell this morning. For these conservatives, Kennedy was just too liberal."

Several conservative senators threatened to filibuster against Kennedy, said Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, ranking Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he called Reagan about 9:30 a.m. and told the president that if a certain person were nominated, "I would openly oppose him. I said 'no way Jose' I could support him."

Helms did not mention Kennedy's name, but made clear he was referring to the California appellate judge.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, a conservative member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, also called both the White House and the Justice Department to protest a selection of Kennedy, according to a Republican source, who insisted on anonymity.

"I talk to the White House all the time, and there's no question that I was a strong supporter of Judge Ginsburg, but I would have supported Judge Kennedy as well," Hatch said today on ABC's "Good Morning America," when asked about the call.

One Democratic Senate source, speaking on condition on anonymity, said a number of Democrats "are very concerned" about Ginsburg.

FAMILY FITNESS
NEW YORK (AP) — Family togetherness may be the greatest single motivating factor in a life of fitness, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.
It reports that Dr. Paul Dymont, chairman of the Sports Medicine Committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics, says:
"Fitness is something that can be learned from parents, like table manners and brushing your teeth."
He believes that when the whole family does things together, such as walking, hiking or bicycling, the children take to fitness naturally.
"The child, starting as early as age five, should grow up with physical activity a natural part of his culture. It should become a habit."

Vernessa Mitchell

Sunday, November 8, 6:30 p.m.

In the latter 1970's Barry Gordy introduced a new group on Motown records which consisted of 4 teenage girls with an abundance of talent and they were just bursting with energy. In fact, they were called High Inergy! Substituting an I for an E they quickly became a national sensation and appeared on most of the nation's leading talk shows such as Merv Griffin, Dinah Shore, Soul Train, American Band Stand, Mike Douglas, etc., as well as work with such entertainers as Stevie Wonder, Diana Ross and Marvin Gaye.

Vernessa has toured across the country and ministered in song with such gospel artists as the Nicholas Family and has appeared in concert with the Lanny Wolf Trio, the Winans, Tramae Hawkins, the Richard Smallwood Singers, the Clark Sisters, Shirley Caesar and Al Green. Vernessa has performed with the New York Albany Symphony, with the New York Philharmonic at the Lincoln Center and at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. She has been a guest on the PTL Show with Jim and Tammy Bakker as well as the Bobby Jones Gospel Show.

Education Teamwork Is Important

By DOUG FISHER
Associated Press Writer
OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — A Miami University professor thinks education is just discovering what business has practiced for years: cooperation, not competition, produces a better product.

Lawrence W. Sherman, associate professor of educational psychology, believes the idea of cooperation can be practiced as easily in the classroom as in the corporation.

He structures classes to let students work together on projects, with individual grades based not only on test scores but also on how each group does.

"I think one of the things that is being stressed is that they can use each other as resources," Sherman, 46, said recently. "I don't necessarily see it as cheating when a group of people get together to learn the material. That's fine if the material is learned."

Too much of what we believe is a mythology of John Wayne rugged individualism, Sherman said. "If everyone shoots from the hip like John Wayne, nothing gets done," he said.

Japanese industry has learned the lesson in its team-oriented manufacturing plants, Sherman said.

American business may talk competition, but studies show that higher pay tends to go to those executives who can get their employees to work together, he said.

The early work goes back to the 1930s and 1940s and studies in group dynamics, he said.

"We just didn't buy into it right away. Most of the people who bought into it weren't in teaching. They were in business. Most of us were sitting back, I think, and operating on a social Darwinism type of notion," Sherman said.

The move toward cooperation in the classroom isn't a revolution, but is gaining ground slowly, partly through social need, he pointed out.

The need to get black and white students brought together by desegregation to work together brought some of the ideas into the classroom, Sherman said.

"Because of that, there has been a fairly large dissemination of these strategies, especially in urban areas. There are a number of classrooms in Cincinnati, for instance, that I know of that are working with this," he said.

Lately, the idea of cooperation has been popularized with a book, "No Contest: The Case Against Competition," by Alfie Kohn.

Kohn recites numerous studies that he says show that employment agency interviewers, scientists, airline pilots and reservation agents, and students all performed better when they worked together than when they competed.

His work was excerpted in Psychology Today.

Sherman says cooperative education in elementary and high school classrooms often is structured so that teams of three or four students compete against each other in quiz games similar to the old television show, "College Bowl."

Another technique uses students in a group to tutor one another to take tests that are geared to their ability. Teams earn points based on the test scores of each member.

"Kids like themselves, they like each other and they do better," Sherman said.

Classes graded on a curve designed to ensure a percentage of students receive each grade also are designed to ensure that some students fail, he said.

"So many classrooms are built on a system of grading that is not quite real," Sherman said.

Sherman is compiling his own studies. His college classrooms also have been laboratories for his work, as has a high school in Ross, Ohio.

His high school study among two mathematics classes showed that even in a school with a relatively homogenous white student body, students who studied together showed more improvement when pre-test and post-test scores were compared.

Sherman's college classroom study didn't show such a marked difference between the groups. But there was a result that would help any professor's ego.

"In the cooperative classes without intergroup competition, the class and the professor had the most favorable evaluation" from the students, Sherman said.

Thieves Unlikely To Make Returns

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Some woman wrote to say she got "ripped off" when a thief stole her purse. It contained her wallet, driver's license, credit cards, irreplaceable pictures of her children when they were babies, prescription glasses, address book, bank book, etc. And you suggested that maybe the thief will be decent enough to keep the cash and return the other items that are of use only to the owner. Get real, Abby.

The last decent thief was the one that hanged on the cross beside Christ. He repented. The other thief didn't.

This woman is crying about losing baby pictures, the only ones she had of her children. (Good! They grew up faster than she did.)

Smart people don't carry anything of value around with them anymore. Lunch money should be the limit.

When will people get wise? — CITY WISE, CARRIES NOTHING

DEAR CITY WISE: The letter from "Ripped Off" prompted many letters from readers who had this valuable message to thieves: "Keep the cash, but drop the purse and wallet into any postal box. It will be delivered to the owner who will be more than happy to pay the postage due."

DEAR ABBY: I always read your column and I will continue to, but I notice more and more of a tendency to "help" your readers too much and entertain them too little. Example: Today's column contained three worthwhile items — don't let strangers know your travel plans, the Red Cross lawn mower safety classes, and Alice Faye's free exercise plan for the elderly. All very good information and likely to benefit a lot of people.

Abby, I won't belabor the point.

But if you become just another column of "safety advice," you might bore readers to the point where they won't read it — and then who benefits? — CAROLE R., ITASCA, ILL.

DEAR CAROLE: Thanks for writing. I can always learn, and appreciate the nudge.

Readers? Drop me a line and let me know what you like and what you don't like about my column.

DEAR ABBY: After reading "Alive by the Grace of God" in your column, I wanted to share with your readers my own technique for staying awake on the road late at night. My work takes me all over the state, and I often find myself driving long distances after dark. I have found that eating whole sunflower seeds is a reliable way to remain awake behind the wheel with my mind on the road.

Each sunflower seed must be cracked between the teeth and the shell deposited in the ashtray or a paper cup. It's a minor distraction, really, and very few calories. But the activity is enough to keep me alert and my mind on the road. It works better than coffee or radio music for me.

Packaged sunflower seeds are available at almost all convenience stores and many mini-mart-type gas stations, so they're readily accessible to anyone who is traveling. — DOING MY PART FOR HIGHWAY SAFETY

DEAR DOING: Thanks for the tip. And I always thought sunflower seeds were for the birds.

Anniversary Gemstones Selected

DALLAS (AP) — In a joint effort, trade groups of the jewelry industry have compiled an official anniversary gift list.

Developed by the American Gem Trade Association, Jewelers of America, Jewelry Industry Council, Cultured Pearl Association, American Gem Society, and Gemological Institute of America, the new anniversary gift list is the first to be endorsed by all of these organizations.

Heading the list, for the first anniversary, is gold jewelry, followed by: 2, garnet; 3, pearls; 4, blue topaz; 5, sapphire; 6, amethyst; 7, onyx; 8, tourmaline; 9, lapis; 10, diamond jewelry; 11, turquoise; 12, jade; 13, citrine; 14, opal; 15, ruby; 16, peridot; 17, watches; 18, cat's-eye; 19, aquamarine; 20, emerald; 21, iolite; 22, spinel; 23, imperial topaz; 24, tanzanite; 25, silver jubilee.

The 30th anniversary is the pearl jubilee; the 35th calls for emerald, the 40th, ruby; 45th, sapphire; 50th, golden jubilee; 55th, alexandrite. The 60th is the diamond jubilee.

The American Gem Trade Association, with headquarters in Dallas, offers a sampling of the qualities of these colored gemstone gifts:

Garnet is found in shades of red, orange, violet, gold and green. The third and 30th anniversaries call for pearls, said to symbolize love, fortune and happiness. Considered the "queen of gems," pearl is found in shades from white to black.

Blue topaz, in tones from aqua to dark "London" blue, is mined in Brazil, Sri Lanka, Burma, Mexico, California and Texas.

Dazzling in all colors, including blue, pink, yellow, green, lavender and purple, the sapphire is said to hold the power to induce attachment and fidelity when given as a love token.

Ranging in color from pale lilac "Rose de France" to dark, royal purple, amethyst is also the February birthstone. Legend holds that onyx, which comes in a variety of solid colors such as green, blue, brown and black, guards against misfortune.

Tourmaline is called "nature's rainbow," as it is found in virtually every color. Lapis lazuli, a gemstone mined in Afghanistan, Chile and Colorado, ranges from intense royal to navy blue.

Diamond jewelry, a special treasure chosen to represent a decade of marriage, is available in fancy colors such as pink and "canary" yellow.

Ranging from blue to blue-green, turquoise, also the December birthstone, is seen often in fine silver jewelry creations as well as in yellow gold fine jewelry.

Considered good luck in the Orient, jade offers an array of color choices including green, lavender, white, yellow and orange. It is frequently carved or carved.

Citrine displays a pale yellow to intense red-gold color. Opal is treasured for its brilliant play of color, flashing red, blue, green and spectral shades in intricate patterns. Said to give a glowing love, the rich red ruby is also the July birthstone.

Early Romans called peridot, found in shades of lime to intense green, "evening emerald" because its colors made it lively under torchlight. Cat's-eye gemstones can be found in quartz, tourmaline, chrysoberyl and — rarely — emerald.

Lore attributes aquamarine with the power to restore harmony, helping husbands and wives to reconcile differences. It ranges in color from delicate sky-blue to deep sea-blue.

Called the "gem of the spring," because its color is nature's dress when awakening from winter, the vibrant green gemstone emerald is characterized by inclusions called "le jardin," or "the garden," because when magnified the inclusions resemble foliage.

Iolite offers unusual shades of blue, while spinel, a durable and exceptionally brilliant gemstone, is found in red, orange, blue, violet, pink and green.

Topaz, derived from the Greek meaning "to shine," is available in soft shades of yellow and gold, as well as the imperial dark sherry.

The fiery tanzanite, a recently discovered gemstone known for its beauty and rarity, ranges in color from pale lilac to intense blue.

The rare alexandrite has the phenomenal quality of displaying green shades by daylight and violet-red shades in artificial light.

At N.Y. Salon Hair Is A Long Story

By CLAUDIA COATES
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tears over hacked-off hair never fall at George Michael's Madison Avenue salon, where growing it out and keeping it long are de rigeur.

For 30 years, Michael and his staff have sung the praises of unlayered, unprocessed long hair. They teach women how to have hair "the Michael way." Then they cheer them on, provide reassuring timetables and help them look good through the frustrating growing-out process.

It takes time to make the best-tressed list. In fact, it takes two years and eight months for heavenly hair, says Michael.

The methods now are used at salons in Atlanta, Dallas, Los Angeles and Miami, as well as in Austria, Switzerland and West Germany.

One need only look at the beautiful hair of the women on the staff to see that the Michael system is doing something right. Their thick, shiny hair reaches to their waists, their hips or beyond.

This staff doesn't cut hair to order.

Join this salon's clientele and you accept the regimen: a bob cut to start grow-outs; no layers; no bangs; no metal clips; brush every night; wash every 10 days; deep condition twice a year; trim every two months. And eat the right foods.

"Other salons ask what you want" and try to give it to you, he said. Not here. In fact, Michael admitted he was sometimes "not very diplomatic."

The salon manager, Maria Matarazzo, 57, of Manhattan, has a thick braid of white and gray hair tucked up on the back of her head.

Years ago, Matarazzo recalls, she asked another hairdresser to find a style for her waist-length hair. Minutes later, she was in short hair — and tears.

Michael doesn't fault other hairdressers for cutting. After all, he says, "They're trained to work with hair up to 6 inches long."

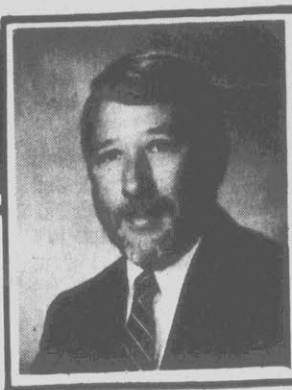

But with Michael, the floor's the limit.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 38.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 40 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 39.25 cents. The market is firm and the live supply is adequate, in some instances light, for a moderate to good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,067,000, compared to 1,966,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market higher. Supply barely adequate for a good demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 15 to 16 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady at mostly 1.80-2.01 in East and mostly 2.06-2.16 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 2 cents to 6 cents higher at mostly 5.12-5.32 in East and mostly 5.04-5.08 in the Piedmont; wheat steady mostly 2.56-2.65; new crop soybeans 4.92-5.41. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 101 to 105 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was broadly higher in very heavy trading today, extending the recent rallies following last week's historic collapse.

Traders attributed today's sharp rise in prices to several factors, including higher bond prices in the credit markets, a more stable dollar and a rebound in overseas stock markets.

But they also said many investors continued to snap up stocks considered greatly undervalued after the Oct. 19 collapse, in which the Dow Jones industrial average lost an unprecedented 508 points.

By noon, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials soared 63.33 points to 2,001.66.

Broader market measures also showed significant strength. About 10 stocks rose in price for every one that fell on the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading continued at a heavy pace, with 197.41 million shares changing hands by midday on Wall Street, compared with 149.10 at the same time Thursday.

MASONIC NOTICE

Winterville Lodge No. 232 will meet at 7 p.m. today at Livingstone Lodge, Farmville, for its annual district meeting. The annual banquet will follow the meeting and will be held at the Farmville Community Center on Main Street.

Analysts said confidence seemed gradually to be recovering in the market with a rise of 144 points, or 8 percent, in the Dow Jones industrial average over the past three sessions. "If we continue to base build ... and if bond prices continue to get better, good times may be ahead," said Jack Baker, head of block trading for Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

Dillahunt Learned Size Doesn't Count In Hitting

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina safety Ellis Dillahunt said he received a lesson in his first year as a Pirate about hitting that has served him well throughout his career.

"One thing I learned when I first got here was that size really didn't matter," said the senior from Jacksonville. "It really surprised me. I thought the bigger guys would really dominate things and I came to find that it really doesn't work that way."

"Smaller guys did a lot of things that I didn't think they were capable of."

Dillahunt, 5-11, 192 pounds, hits in a manner that belies his size. He has been a starter at both safety and cornerback and a defensive leader for the Pirates for the past three years.

But his specialty is hitting and he obviously takes great pride in it. Coaches say he is one of the hardest hitters on the team.

"I know what it feels like to be hit hard," he said. "I can tell you that anytime I go on the field, I try to lay it on them. The size of a person really doesn't matter."

"You can hit people hard a lot of different ways. The one thing I think is most important is you should have your head up when you hit. (Then) you should push through with your hips and legs. One of you is bound to give."

But what about the perfect hit? For many defensive backs it remains a dream, but not for Dillahunt. He said he got his perfect hit in the Pirates 32-14 win over N.C. State this season. It was a bone-jarring hit that knocked two of Eugene Peters' teeth loose.

"They were running a post or a post bend across the middle and I was reading the quarterback all the way," Dillahunt said. "I was breaking on the ball and as I was going, in my peripheral vision I could see the guy coming in. By the time the ball was getting to him, I caught him at that perfect angle and I just unloaded on him. It felt so good. That was the ultimate hit."

In his last year, Dillahunt has been part of a mild resurgence in the Pirate football program. After three straight 2-9 seasons, ECU has moved out to a 4-4 mark this year heading into Saturday's game against third-ranked Miami.

The accomplishment has been particularly satisfying to Dillahunt and the other seniors on this year's squad.

"Going into my senior year, we knew that we had to turn the program around and leave our mark behind," he said. "Our record is 4-4 and I think it should have been better, but you can't live off seasons, could or ifs. We're just trying to do the things we can to have a winning season."

Last year, ECU played the Hurricanes close in the first half before suffering breakdowns in the second half that eventually led to a 36-10 loss.

But Dillahunt said the Hurricanes might just come in to this game overconfident.

"I think they might come in here thinking East Carolina is a blowover," he said. "I think they might take us lightly, but hopefully after the first quarter, when they see we're serious then they'll get down to playing some serious football."

But win or lose, the main goal is a winning season.

"All the guys realize we have to win two to have a 6-5 winning season," Dillahunt said. "I think that will get them jacked up more."

But regardless, this year's start is the best by the Pirates since 1983 and Dillahunt has been a large part of that success.

He has 51 total tackles with 28 solos and 23 assists. He also leads the team in interceptions with four.

Last season, the secondary was often the focal point of criticism as the Pirates limped in with a 2-9 mark. That criticism, Dillahunt said, was in many ways unjustified.

"It's funny how people in the stands look at the game of football and the only thing they see is defensive backs getting burned deep," he said. "But no one notices that maybe the defensive line didn't get the rush or that the quarterback had all day to throw the ball."

"We got a lot of criticism. It hurt sometimes because it was just deserved and other times it wasn't. When a quarterback has a lot of time, he'll pick you apart any day of the week."

And make no mistake about it. Playing in the secondary is one of the more difficult jobs on the field, according to Dillahunt.

"I think it's probably the hardest position that I've ever played," Dillahunt said. "I've played

Dickerson Won't Play On Sunday

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams say All-Pro running back Eric Dickerson is "physically and mentally unable to play," and Sunday will find him on the inactive list rather than the playing field against the San Francisco 49ers.

Dickerson, unhappy with a contract that pays him more than $680,000 per year through 1989, was not available for comment on the club's action Thursday, but fellow running back Charles White said it's probably for the best.

"I don't know if this is good for Eric, but it's probably good for the team not to have these negative forces around," White said.

Coach John Robinson said Dickerson, 27, will be reinstated "when he is 100 percent physically and mentally ready to play and we are assured that he is ready to resume his role on our team."

But Robinson's prepared statement did not deal with Dickerson's desire to be traded. He has expressed interest in going to Washington, Denver or Chicago.

"Presently, we are not contemplating any other action," Robinson said.

Dickerson, a five-year veteran, has said he may not play as well since he's preoccupied with his salary. According to Robinson, Dickerson turned down an offer from the Rams that would have made him "the highest-paid running back in the NFL." The dispute has dampened team spirit.

"I'm sure he is frustrated, hoping something will happen. I'm sure everybody wishes Eric was here, especially for a team like San Francisco," wide receiver Henry Ellard said.

The 49ers are 5-1, far ahead of the 1-5 Rams in the NFC West.

"I'm sad for Eric," tight end David Hill said. "I'd hate to see him lose his zest for football. This might be the final straw, as far as his wanting to stay with the Rams."

But Robinson said the $2.5-million contract Dickerson signed after an extended holdout in 1985 is binding until the 1989 season.

"When Eric signed his extension, he gave the Rams a written representation and warranty that he would fully adhere to all conditions and terms of his contracts in their entirety and would not attempt in any way or manner to renegotiate his contract prior to the commencement of the 1989 season," the coach's statement read.

Dickerson played only in the first half Monday night against the Cleveland Browns, gaining 38 yards in seven carries, including a 27-yard touchdown run late in the second quarter. He sat out the rest of the game complaining of a thigh injury.

Pirates Hoping To Trick Hurricanes, Treat Selves To A Big Upset Victory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It's Halloween, and strange things do, they say, happen on Halloween.

And while 12:10 p.m. is a little early for the witching hour, East Carolina's home-standing Pirates are hoping to spook the Miami Hurricanes in Ficklen Stadium Saturday afternoon.

The game was moved from its original starting time to 12:10 because the game will be telecast back to Florida and several other Southeastern areas.

The Hurricanes, ranked third in the Associated Press standings, bring a perfect 5-0 record into the game. Only against Florida State, an earlier 44-3 winner over East Carolina, did the Hurricanes fail to blow their opponent away by as much as 27 points. Miami had to settle for a 26-25 victory against the Seminoles.

The two have also played one other common opponent, Cincinnati. The Hurricanes walloped the Bearcats, 48-10, last week, while the Pirates rolled up a 56-28 win three weeks ago.

"They've only won one more game than we have," Coach Art Baker joked this week. "I hope everyone takes that tongue-in-cheek."

The Pirates are 4-4 after a 34-12 defeat at the hands of South Carolina last weekend. That loss snapped a two-game winning streak by the Pirates.

Baker knows that it will take more than Halloween hoo-doo's to stop the Hurricanes, who rank among the nation's best in defense.

The 'Canes are ranked 16th in total defense among Division I-A schools, allowing only 276.0 yards a game. They are 14th against the rush, giving up 105.4 yards a game. The Hurricanes are also ninth in scoring defense giving up 12.4 points per game.

One of the big reasons for the success is the turnover margin, where the Hurricanes are eighth with a plus 1.40 ratio per game. They've captured five fumbles, intercepted nine passes for a total of 14 takeaways, while losing only three fumbles and four interceptions, a total of seven.

Baker agrees that the Hurricanes are strong on defense. "They don't have Jerome Brown, but they have some others that are excellent. (Daniel) Stubbs (6-4, 250, Sr., DE) is unbelievable. I think he does a great job. (Bennie) Blades (6-0, 215, Sr., FS) is probably the best defensive back we've played against all year."

Baker said that his assistants told him that if the Pirates could figure a way to put in an eight-man offensive line, they might be able to stall the Miami defense. "They are really quick on the line of scrimmage and their secondary is every bit as good as it was last year."

Couple that with an outstanding offensive game, led by quarterback Steve Walsh (6-3, 195, So.), and you have a reason for Miami's success. (Brian) Blades (6-0, 185, Sr., SE — Bennie's brother) is back and he's doing an excellent job. Walsh is doing an excellent job for them at quarterback. He doesn't throw the ball nearly as well as (Vinny) Testaverde, but not too many people do.

"It doesn't take a Phi Beta Kappa to figure out they are a great football team. But there are always strange things that happen. If Miami plays their best and we play our best, we're probably going to get beat. But if Miami slips a little, and they might, and we play our best, which we haven't yet, then there is always a chance to win a football game."

Baker pointed to two years ago when the Pirates were leading the Hurricanes 15-14 with seventh minutes left to go. Testaverde was intercepted a career-high six times in that game, but pulled the 'Canes back, 27-15.

Baker thinks Miami may have the best receiving corps in the country with Blades and flanker Michael Ivrin (6-2, 202, Jr.), who is the leading receiver for the Hurricanes. "Our job will be to disguise our coverages as best we can."

The Pirates, meanwhile, have to overcome the many mistakes that caused them problems last week against South Carolina — having players line up incorrectly in formation, or taking too much time to get plays into the offense.

"We'll work to bounce back from a disappointing loss," Baker said. "It's just unfortunate that we have to come back against a team like Miami."

Miami brings in a 26-game regular season winning streak. The only blemishes along the way were bowl losses to Tennessee (35-7 in the 1986 Sugar Bowl) and to Penn State (14-10 in the 1987 Fiesta Bowl).

They've also won 18 consecutive road games this year, and this will be the final chance for a road loss this year. The Hurricanes play their final five games in their home stadium, the Orange Bowl.

East Carolina has yet to beat the Hurricanes in five previous meetings, losing last year 36-10 in the season-ending game in the Orange Bowl before a national television audience.

East Carolina's rushing is led by Anthony Simpson, with 529 yards on 111 carries. Reggie McKinney has amassed 444 yards on 63 carries, while quarterback Travis Hunter has rushed for 305 yards on 78 lugs. Four other Pirates, Tim James (183), Willie Lewis (127), Jarrod Moody (109) and George Franklin (109) have at least 100 yards on the season.

Hunter has completed 51 of 109 passes for 725 yards and one touchdown. He's had four picked off.

His top receiver has been Walter Wilson, with 12 catches for 185 yards. Ron Jones has 11 grabs for 157 yards.

Overall, the Pirates are rushing for 236.3 yards a game while allowing 195.5. They've passed for 108.8 but allowed 207.6. Overall, the Pirates have amassed 345.0 yards a game, but have given up 402.9.

East Carolina will close out its home season next Saturday, hosting Temple, then end the year at Southern Mississippi on Nov. 14.

El Mostafa No Longer Mystery

NEW YORK (AP) — Nechadi el Mostafa no longer is the "Mystery Man" of the New York City Marathon.

Last year, el Mostafa, unknown to the marathon community, paid his way to New York from Brescia, Italy, and competed in his first marathon.

For part of the way, he ran alongside Norway's Grete Waitz, who was to go on to her eighth women's title. Television cameras picked up el Mostafa, and his face — if not his name — became recognizable.

El Mostafa ran the first half of the marathon in a sparkling one hour, 4 minutes, but inexperience cost him heavily in the second half, and he wound up finishing 66th in 2:34:37.

Sunday, el Mostafa, a native of Khouribga, Morocco, a mining town of some 65,000 and about 80 miles east of Casablanca, will be among the favorites.

In one year, he has improved his time by more than 20 minutes.

After clocking 2:20 in the Palermo Marathon in Sicily late last year, he ran a remarkable 2:10:09 in finishing second in the London Marathon in May, then dropped out after about 20 miles of the World Track and Field Championships marathon at Rome in September.

The London race made him the year's second-fastest performer, behind Japan's Hiromi Taniguchi, the winner.

About the world championships, el Mostafa said Thursday through an interpreter: "For three weeks before the race, I couldn't sleep and I didn't eat well. I got so nervous in the race, I had to drop out."

El Mostafa, 25, who had started his running career in Morocco in 1979 as a cross country competitor, then ran in 10-kilometer road races and left his home country in August 1986.

"When I first arrived in (Perugia) Italy, I wanted to work in addition to making money from running," el Mostafa said. "So I sold rugs (in marketplaces) for about three months."

Northeastern Hands Rampants A 1-0 Loss

Northeastern Elizabeth City salvaged a little balm from a second-place finish in the Big East soccer race with a 1-0 win over regular-season champion Rose Thursday.

The loss snapped an 11-game winning streak by the Rampants, who finished the regular season with a 12-2 conference mark and a 13-4-2 overall record. Northeastern closes at 11-2-1 both conference and overall.

The lone goal of the game came at the 62 minute mark on a shot by Jody Gordon, assisted by Cliff Vogelsburg.

"We had plenty of chances to take the lead or even tie it up but we didn't shoot the ball well," Coach Will Wiberg said. "A game like this shows us just how easily we could be knocked out of the state tournament."

Wiberg cited the play of Ed Norris, Dallas McPherson and Jon Bolen in the match.

Rose will open state 4-A playoff action next week, but its opponent will not be known until Monday. Rose will face the number three team from the Mid-east Conference, either New Hanover, Hoggard or Eastern Wayne. That game will be played either Wednesday or Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

Rose Qualifies Three Netters

WILSON — Rose High School's tennis team, champions of the Big East Conference, qualified three players, one singles match and a doubles team, into the state 4-A tournament in regional play Wednesday and Thursday.

In the singles competition, Rose's Wendy Simpson, seeded second in the tournament, was upset by the fourth seed, Caroline Vincent of Goldsboro, 6-3, 6-2.

In the doubles, Gina Parrott and Nicole Maxon, seeded second, lost out in the finals of the tournament to Daniella Marx and Lee Worrell of Goldsboro, the top seeds, 6-2, 6-2.

They advanced far enough, however, to qualifying for the state tournament, which will be held in Chapel Hill on Wednesday and Thursday.

Goldsboro won the team title with 31 points while New Bern had 27 and Rose had 20.

Roanoke Qualifies Four For The State

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Roanoke High School qualified two singles players and a doubles team to the state 2-A tennis tournament at regional action Thursday.

Roanoke finished third in the team standings. Charles B. Aycock took first with 35 points while Roanoke Rapids was second with 25. Roanoke, the Northeastern Conference tournament winner and regular season co-champ, had 18 points.

In the singles, Aycock's Debbie Grantham defeated Roanoke's Robbie Harris, 6-2, 6-3, in the semifinals, while Connie Lancaster, also of Aycock, downed Roanoke's Nancy Johnson, 6-2, 6-2.

Lancaster then beat Grantham for the title, 6-0, 6-2.

In the doubles semifinals, Missy King and Jen Weathers of Roanoke Rapids, downed Roanoke's Susan Long and Melissa Manning, 6-0, 6-0. They went on to beat Adrian Aycock and Nell Cooley of Aycock, 6-0, 6-2, for the championship.

By finishing in the semifinals, all three of the Roanoke entries qualified for the state tournament, to be held Wednesday and Thursday at Southern Pines.

Wellcome-Bethel, Cox, Aycock Take Wins

GRIFTON — Reggie Cox scored two touchdowns to lead Wellcome-Bethel Middle Schools to a 36-0 football victory over Savannah in junior high school action Thursday.

Cox scored on a 24-yard run and a 3-yarder, and also added a two-point conversion.

Derrick Brown scored on a 50-yard run while Terry Johnson and John Cayton each scored from three yards away. Johnson also added a conversion.

Defensive leaders included Mark Copeland, Sidney Boyd, Brown and Cox. Wellcome-Bethel is now 6-0 and plays host to A.G. Cox on Thursday.

WINTERVILLE — A.G. Cox took a 28-0 win over Woodington in a junior high football game Thursday.

Anthony Barrett scored on an 87-yard run and added the two-point conversion run. Aaron McKinney had two touchdowns, once on a 47-yard run and the other on a 23-yard fumble return.

Emmett Lang had the final score on a 12-yard run and then added the two-point conversion run.

Cox improves to 5-1 and returns to action Thursday at Bethel-Wellcome.

PINETOPS — Anthony Love scored two touchdowns to lead E.B. Aycock to a 22-13 win over Southwest Edgecombe Junior High Thursday.

Love's first score came in the first quarter on a two-yard run. Terrance Smith then ran in the two-point conversion.

After Southwest pulled within 8-6, Love scored from 42 yards out. Smith then passed to Matt Aldridge for the two-point conversion to make it 16-6.

Aycock's final score came on a 25 yard pass from Smith to Grant Harmon. Harmon then added the extra-point kick to make it 23-6.

Aycock improves to 5-1 and hosts New Bern Thursday.

Miller Reportedly Set To Sign

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons have reached agreement with top draft choice Chris Miller on a five-year, $2.8 million contract, according to a published report.

The Atlanta Constitution in today's editions quoted sources close to the NFL team as saying the Falcons would make an official announcement this morning when Miller signs the contract.

The paper said neither Miller, a former Oregon quarterback, nor his agent, Mike Blatt of Stockton, Calif., could be reached for comment, but Blatt did have plane reservations out of San Francisco to arrive in Atlanta this morning.

Sources said the contract agreement, reached after six months of often bitter negotiations, was agreed upon by Blatt and Falcons chief financial officer Jim Hay.

Hay would not confirm that an agreement had been reached. "I have no comment," he said.

The Constitution quoted sources as saying the Falcons would pay Miller a signing bonus of $600,000, with annual salaries of $200,000 in 1987, $350,000 in 1988, $450,000 in 1989, $550,000 in 1990 and $650,000 in 1991.

Terp Officials Reviewing Lewis' Case

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — University of Maryland officials will decide during the next few days whether to allow ailing basketball star Derrick Lewis to play this season, according to college officials.

Chancellor John B. Slaughter, after hearing medical reports, will make the final decision, officials said.

Rose, North Pitt, Conley Post Wins

WILSON — Maurice Hines scored two touchdowns to lead the Rose JV football team to a 16-0 win over Wilson Hunt Thursday.

Hines got the Rampants on the board with a 3-yard run. Todd Fickling kicked the extra point to make it 7-0. The next Rose score came following Terry Anderson's 32 yard pass reception from Hank Thompson put the ball at the Hunt one. Hines then went in for the score on the next play. Fickling again kicked the point after to make it 14-0.

Rose's final score came in the final quarter when James Davis and Terry Anderson sacked the Hunt quarterback in the end zone for a safety.

Rose improves to 7-2 overall and returns to action against Northeastern Thursday at home.

PIKEVILLE — North Pitt's junior varsity football team snapped an eight-game losing streak with a 38-26 victory over Charles B. Aycock Thursday night.

Michael Tyson and William Crumble each scored two touchdowns to lead the Panther Cubs.

Al Roberson scored the first North Pitt touchdown in the first quarter, taking a 35-yard pass from Danny Suggs. Suggs kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead. Tyson then scored on a 4-yard run to up the lead to 13-0 at the end of the period.

Aycock got on the board in the second period on a 1-yard run by Marcus McLean. But Tyson took an 11-yard pass from Roberson to counter for North Pitt. Crumble then scored from the two and the Panthers led, 25-6, at the half.

Travis Newsome scored for Aycock in the third period from a yard out, but Crumble matched that with a 7-yard run.

The final period saw Aycock score twice, closing the gap to 31-26. McLean went in from two out and Newsome took a 19-yard pass from McLean. But Marcus Purvis closed out the scoring for North Pitt with a 5-yard run, and Suggs added the PAT kick.

North Pitt is now 1-8 and closes out the year hosting Pamlico on Thursday.

WASHINGTON — Hal Conger scored three touchdowns to lead D.H. Conley to a 44-14 junior varsity football victory over Washington Thursday, remaining undefeated on the season.

Conley is now 9-0 on the year, 5-0 against Coastal Conference competition.

Conley scored once in each of the first two periods. Fred Streeter scored on a 7-yard run in the opening period and Conger pulled in a 10-yard pass from Tim Allen in the second.

Washington, however, came up with single scores in both periods, completing a two-point conversion after the second to take a 14-12 halftime lead.

The Baby Vikes, however, wiped that out with two third quarter scores. Conger scored on a 20-yard pass from Allen, and the two combined for the PAT to put Conley back up, 20-14. Streeter then scored on a 26-yard run and Allen passed to Anthony Artis for the PAT to run the lead to 28-14 at the end of the third period.

Conger recovered a Washington fumble in the end zone for the first of two final period scores and Allen sneaked in from a yard out for the other. Mike Clark and Tyrone Phillips each ran for conversions to account for the remainder of the scoring.

Streeter led the offense with 151 yards on 23 carries, putting him over 1,100 for the year. Remarto Rogers had a 59-yard interception return, recovered a fumble and knocked down three passes to lead the defense.

Conley closes out its year at East Carteret on Thursday.

Battle Of Bays Has Significance

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

It's the Battle of the Bays and when was the last time this game held any significance?

In this strike-torn NFL season, not much of anything is surprising. So the Green Bay Packers and Tampa Bay Buccaneers playing a meaningful game in November is no shock.

The Packers and Buccaneers have not had winning records since 1982 — the last season marred by a players' strike. But the Pack is 3-2-1, including a 1-1-1 record with the regulars, and they come off a 34-33 road victory against Detroit.

"We'd rather be in first (in the NFC Central) but we're not, so we have to be satisfied with second right now. We want to maintain that position and gain ground," Packers Coach Forrest Gregg said.

The Bucs, 3-3, led Chicago 20-0 last Sunday, only to see Jim McMahon lead the Bears back to a 27-26 triumph.

"It was a tough loss," Ray Perkins, in his first year coaching the Bucs, said. "This should teach us two things. One, it takes 60 minutes of concentration. But two, if we get that 60 minutes, we have a chance with any team."

Tampa Bay is fifth in defense, allowing only 95.2 yards on the ground each game. Green Bay is seventh in rushing, and Kenneth Davis had 129 yards and two long touchdowns against Detroit.

The Packers have won the last five Battle of the Bays, but Gregg said "we're not playing the same team we've played the last three or four years."

"Ray Perkins has done a good job of putting the team together and they are playing well together. I think the new staff has given them hope of something good in the future," he said.

Elsewhere Sunday, the Bears are at home to Kansas City; Cleveland is at San Diego; Minnesota is in Seattle; Detroit at Denver; Houston at Cincinnati; Indianapolis at the New York Jets; the Los Angeles Raiders at New England; New Orleans at Atlanta; Philadelphia at St. Louis; Pittsburgh at Miami; Washington at Buffalo; and San Francisco at the Los Angeles Rams.

On Monday night, the New York Giants are at Dallas.

It's a little early for the Packers and Buccaneers to think the playoffs, but they are in their best position in five years for a run at the postseason.

"They're a lot like us, a young team that is rebuilding and trying to put itself in position for something — a playoff or to improve or to show progress," Gregg said of the Bucs.

"We sort of fall in the same boat."

As do the Bears and Chargers — they're both 5-1, the best record in the league.

The Bears were expected to be up there. With McMahon apparently fully recovered from shoulder surgery, they look like a power.

Morris Still 1st; Second Up For Grabs

Woody Peele

Tom Morris continues to lead the way in our contest for this year — and appears to be making a runaway of it. But — the real battle is for second place where four members of the panel are deadlocked.

Morris, after last week's games, holds a six-game lead over the rest of the game, running his total to 69-25 on the season.

Then, nine games back is Don Reuter, in last place with a 60-34 record.

But knotted in between are the rest of us, Vickie Spivey, Tom Baines, Joe Jenkins and this writer, all with 63-31 records, six back of Morris and three ahead of Reuter.

Perhaps this week will break the logjam up a little. Our high school picks last week saw us record a 5-2 mark. That brings us to 48-18 on the season.

This is the next-to-last week for the regular season in high school. The playoffs are only two weeks away, and this weekend's games will go a long way toward saying who will be playing in two weeks and who will be packing up the gear.

Ayden-Grifton plays host to South Lenoir. A victory will insure the Chargers of a post-season berth again while a loss could seriously hamper their chances. South Lenoir is unlikely to come up with the upset unless the Chargers look ahead and forget what happened against North Pitt. That's not likely, Ayden-Grifton to win, 49-7.

Farmville Central visits Greene Central in a very key game. The winner has a good shot at going to the playoffs; the loser will certainly stay at home. It should be an outstanding game. This one is capable of going either way, but we'll give Farmville the nod, 14-13.

North Pitt plays host to C.B. Aycock — and again, the winner has a good shot at the playoffs while the loser probably has none. Aycock's single wing offense is sure

Molitor Planning To Use Free Agency As Precaution

NEW YORK (AP) — Although Paul Molitor doesn't intend to leave the Milwaukee Brewers, he is using free agency as a precaution.

"Unless something very suprising develops, I suspect I'll be back in a Brewer uniform next year," Molitor said Thursday. "I think in my case filing is more of a formality."

Molitor, who finished 10 points behind Wade Boggs in the American League batting race and had a 39-game hitting streak, the fifth-longest this century — was one of eight players to file Thursday, increasing the total to 24.

Chili Davis of the San Francisco Giants, Larry Herndon of the Detroit Tigers and Glenn Hubbard of the Atlanta Braves were among the others.

Garth Iorg of the Toronto Blue Jays, Joe Sambito of the Boston Red Sox, Thad Bosley of the Kansas City Royals and Chris Bando of the Cleveland Indians also filed.

Ron Simon, Molitor's agent, said Thursday that he met with Milwaukee General Manager Harry Dalton and owner Bud Selig at the World Series in St. Louis last week.

"I think we're maybe looking for a four-year contract," Simon said. "At his point, we're going to focus on working out a deal with Milwaukee."

Dalton, like other major league general managers, seemed doubtful about agreeing to a long-term deal.

"That's the first I've heard of that," he told ABC. "Frankly, they haven't given us any term as far as their desire is concerned. But we are not much inclined to want to commit to long contracts."

Molitor, 31, has a .297 career average. He made $1.26 million in 1987 in the final season of a five-year, $5.2 million contract.

He batted .353 and hit 16 home runs with 75 runs batted in despite missing seven weeks with pulled hamstrings. Molitor has been hurt often, spending five months on the disabled list in 1984, two weeks in 1985 and eight weeks in 1986.

Dalton said Molitor's popularity with Milwaukee fans would not figure into the contract talks.

to cause North Pitt some problems, but then Calvin Hunter and Co. should cause Aycock some problems too. We like the Panthers in this one, 22-16.

Finally, D.H. Conley plays host to Washington in the Coastal Conference. The winner of this one will retain a chance at the playoffs. The loser will have no chance at all. This could be a real battle, too. It's Homecoming for Conley, but we'll have to go against the Vikes as Franz Holscher's arm looks too strong for them. Washington to win, 23-15.

In other games, it'll be North Edgecombe over Jamesville, Chocowinity over Princeton, Williamston over Roanoke Rapids, and Roanoke over Belhaven.

The panel handles the Rose-Hunt contest. This is one for all the marbles. Rose can wrap up the Big East title and the league's number one seeding for the playoffs with a victory. Hunt can insure itself of no worse than a tie for the title with the win — and both teams might have to wait a week to see if they make the playoffs. It's a big, big game for both.

The panel is sticking with the Rampants to win this one, 6-0. Rose hasn't beaten Hunt since before Chip Williams became coach, but we'll go with Rose to pull out a 17-14 win.

East Carolina plays host to Miami of Florida, the nation's third ranked team. The Pirates would like nothing better than to pull off a Halloween day upset. Stranger things have happened, to be sure.

But not this week. It's a 6-0 vote for the Hurricanes, and our prediction is 45-10.

Our other consensus picks: North Carolina over Maryland; Duke over Georgia Tech; Ohio State over Michigan State; Penn State over West Virginia; Auburn over Florida; Clemson over Wake Forest; South Carolina over N.C. State; Texas over Texas Tech; Army and Temple, a toss-up; and Iowa over Indiana.

Winning The Key Goal

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — There's the big money, $3 million, the most ever distributed in golf. But that's not the only attraction for Tom Watson in the Nabisco Championships of Golf.

There's the simple fact of winning. That's the lure.

"Absolutely," Watson said Thursday after scrambling to a 5-under-par 65 that gave him the first-round lead over the other 29 members of the elite field.

"Winning again means a lot," said Watson, who was the dominant figure in golf before entering a long, puzzling slump. "The longer you go without winning, the more it means to you."

For Watson, a five-time British Open champion and six-time Player of the Year, it has been more than three years since he acquired his 31st PGA Tour title — July 1984.

He's been close many times since then, the latest a one-shot runner-up finish to Scott Simpson in this year's U.S. Open.

The frustration is obvious and admitted. And, he said, it all boils down to his putting.

"That's the bottom line," Watson said. "You must putt well to win."

And a recent, six-week break from competition and a minute change in his stroke has him thinking he might be back on track.

"I was very confident coming into this tournament. I'd made a little adjustment in my stance. I have my shoulders a little forward, in a more aggressive position," he said. "I went out today not thinking about struggling. I went out thinking 'Attack.'"

And it was his aggressive putting that brought him through on the 6,556-yard Oak Hills Country Club course. He one-putted 11 times in the gusty winds in a round that he said "was like the Watson of old."

"It was scramble over the front nine. But I didn't make any mistakes on the greens," he said.

It left him one shot in front of Masters champion Larry Mize, who birdied the last two holes, and South African David Frost, tied at 66.

Australian Greg Norman included an eagle-3 in his round of 67 and was tied with Mark Calcavecchia and South African Nick Price.

Ben Crenshaw bogeyed from a bunker on the final hole and was tied at 68 with D.A. Weibring and Bernhard Langer of West Germany.

Curtis Strange and Paul Azinger, the principal figures in the struggle for leading money-winner and Player of the Year, both finished at 73.

Strange leads the money-winners with $718,941 and also leads the Player of the Year standings and the Grand Prix of Golf.

All end this week, and, with the enormous prize money at stake, all could change.

The Championships of Golf offers $2 million, with $360,000 to the winner. The Grand Prix, a season-long competition based on performance in regular-season events, also ends this week and offers another $1 million, with $175,000 to the winner.

"It would be a nice tournament to win for my first in three years," Watson said.

RBI and a .279 average.

Iorg had the worst season of his major-league career, batting .210 with four home runs and 30 RBI. He earned $362,500.

Sambito, a free agent last year who re-signed with the Red Sox for $360,000, was 2-6 with a 6.93 earned run average and no saves in 47 relief appearances. Another Boston pitcher, Steve Crawford, filed for free agency on Wednesday.

Asked if the Red Sox would re-sign them, General Manager Lou Gorman said Thursday "I don't think we will.

Anderson Is AL's Top Manager

DETROIT (AP) — Sparky Anderson, whose gospel of character and chemistry guided the Detroit Tigers to the best regular-season record in baseball, is the American League Manager of the Year for the second time in four years.

"This is the most special one to me," Anderson said Thursday after learning of his selection by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

He is the only manager to be named twice since the BBWAA began voting on the award in 1983. Prior to that, Anderson won National League honors, in 1972 and 1975, as skipper of the Cincinnati Reds.

"I don't have to do one other thing in my career," Anderson, whose mother was undergoing surgery on the West Coast, said in a statement released by the Tigers. "I've had it all."

Anderson, who also was named AL Manager of the Year in 1984 when the Tigers won the World Series, received 11 first-place votes and a total of 90 points in balloting by a panel of two BBWAA members from each AL city.

Tom Trebelhorn of the Milwaukee Brewers was second with 78 points and seven first-place votes, followed by Tom Kelly of the World Series champion Twins with 74 points and 10 first-place votes.

Balloting was done on the basis of regular-season performance only. Each panel member was asked to vote for three managers with five points awarded for a first-place vote, three for second and one for third.

Tony LaRussa of the Oakland Athletics finished a distant fourth with eight points, followed by Doc Edwards of Cleveland and Lou Piniella of New York with one point apiece.

John McNamara of Boston won the award last year.

The Tigers, who were 9-20 in spring training and were picked to finish no better than third. But Anderson, because he had good pitching, felt this was a better team than the 1984 club that won 104 games.

He was almost right. The 1987 Tigers won 98 games, including five of their last six to nip the Toronto Blue Jays by two games in one of the most stirring stretch drives in recent years.

"Maybe we weren't that good," said pitcher Dan Petry, whom Anderson relegated to the bullpen. "But he was making those bold statements. He felt we had the chemistry. He believed in us."

The chemistry was no accident. The Tigers have been carefully put together by General Manager Bill Lajoie with Anderson's tastes in mind.

"He says, 'I'm not going to put up with any crud.' You've got to be a good guy and a good ballplayer," Petry said. "We had 24 guys on that club that truly liked each other. There was no back-biting."

"Sparky was the one that kept that going."

Lajoie did his share by signing free agent Bill Madlock and swinging a crucial Aug. 12 deal for veteran pitcher Doyle Alexander who went 9-0 down the stretch for the Tigers.

"He got the most out of his players," Lajoie said of Anderson. "The first thing he has is the respect of the players."

"They're a very well-disciplined group of people."

The Tigers lost the AL playoffs in five games to the Minnesota Twins, but in many ways that series was anticlimactic to the one that got them there. Trailing Toronto by one game going into a season-ending series with the Blue Jays, the Tigers swept three to win the division.

In the final two weeks of the season, the Tigers played seven one-run games with the Blue Jays, winning four.

Throughout the season, Anderson kept the faith despite a start that had the Tigers in sixth place, 11 games out on May 5.

"Sparky did a good job of keeping us positive early in the year when things weren't going well," Tigers outfielder Kirk Gibson said. "He told you guys (reporters) in May we would be here, and you walked away laughing at him."

Anderson pointed to pitching as the difference between 1984 and 1987. In 1985, the Tigers traded third baseman Howard Johnson to the New York Mets for pitcher Walt Terrell, who has won 47 games in the past three years. The Tigers added Frank Tanana in June 1986, and he has won 27 games since, including a six-hit, 1-0 season-ending victory over Toronto to that clinched the division.

"I told my people, 'If you don't get too down, you'll have a smile on your face in September,'" Anderson said. "I always felt we'd be within reach when we got to the stretch. You only had to look at our pitching to see that."

Although the smiles did not last into October, Anderson was right.

By the All-Star break, the Tigers were 11 games over .500 and only five games out of the lead. On July 21, they moved into second, and they were in the race for real.

While the Tigers were peaking down the stretch, Toronto lost its last seven games of the season.

"I've surrounded myself with solid people and gotten rid of the phonies," Anderson said. "You have never witnessed a club that has stood up to more pressure than this club here, and no club showed more character."

Hearns Wins Bout To Claim 4th Title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Thomas Hearns may have become the first fighter ever to win championships in four different weight classes, but he may never get a chance to fulfill another of his dreams.

Hearns weathered some vicious punches from Juan Domingo Roldan before knocking the Argentine out in the fourth round Thursday night to win the World Boxing Council middleweight title vacated by Sugar Ray Leonard after his April victory over Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

"I'm a very proud young man right now," said Hearns, who revealed that he had set a goal of four titles seven years ago.

Leonard and Hagler looked on at the outdoor arena at the Las Vegas Hilton as Hearns knocked Roldan down four times while nearly hitting the canvas himself in a wild brawl that delighted a crowd of more than 10,000.

Hearns then issued a challenge to Leonard and Hagler — the only fighters to whom he has lost in a career that has spanned a decade — to fight him again.

"I hope this brings not only Ray Leonard but also Marvin Hagler out of retirement," Hearns said. "I think the public deserves a rematch between me and Ray Leonard and Marvin Hagler."

But Hagler and Leonard weren't impressed by the challenge.

"The only reason I would come out of retirement is for Ray," said Hagler, who was a color commentator for the closed-circuit television broadcast.

"I don't have any interest in Tommy," Leonard said. "I'm happy for him, but that's all."

Leonard said Hearns' preoccupation with the rematches nearly cost him the fight when he was hurt on several occasions by the powerful and wild-swinging Roldan.

"I figure he was trying to be impressive with Marvin and my being there," said Leonard, who knocked Hearns out in their welterweight title fight in September 1981. "Thomas was hurt bad, but Roldan didn't have the kind of ring generalship he needed to put him away."

Roldan, who never slowed his powerful attack even after being knocked down twice by Hearns in the first round and again in the second, won the third and was on the verge of getting back into the fight as the fourth began.

Only seconds into the round, a Roldan left hook buckled Hearns' legs and almost dropped him. He managed to hold on, however, and quickly regained his senses.

"I was hurt bad enough to know what I had to do," Hearns said. "I knew I had to hold on."

Less than a minute later, Hearns came back with a hard right to the side of Roldan's face that backed him up. Hearns continued pressing the attack, finally landing another huge right that sent Roldan down face first. He was counted out at 2:01.

"I was conscious that I was down, but I was really hurt," Roldan said through an interpreter. "It didn't make any sense to get up."

A weary Hearns erupted in jubilation after seeing that the dangerous Roldan had finally had enough.

"This man is an animal," Hearns said. "I've been in fights before, but I've never been in a fight where I come out with bruises on my shoulder, bruises on my back, bruises on my chest. He was very strong. I landed some good shots and he shook them off."

Hearns, who first won a portion of the welterweight title with an August 1980 knockout of Pipino Cuevas, later won a 154-pound crown and added a third title in March when he took the WBC light heavyweight crown from Dennis Andries.

Hearns, who weighed in at 159½ pounds, was the fourth fighter to try to win four titles.

"My dream has been accomplished," the 29-year-old Hearns said. "One thing for sure, I have something Ray Leonard doesn't have and I have something Marvin Hagler doesn't have. I have something no other man in the history of boxing has ever had."

Roldan, meanwhile, said he is calling it quits after failing to become the third Argentine since 1970 to win the middleweight title.

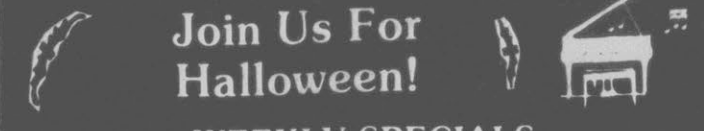

Roldan, also 159½, whose last loss was a March 1984 10th-round knockout at the hands of Hagler in their middleweight title fight, said he will retire after a career that saw him win 63 fights, 41 by knockout, while suffering four losses and two draws.

"I think my career stopped here in Las Vegas," he said.

In another title fight on the card, Charles Williams of Philadelphia shocked Bobby Czyz to take his International Boxing Federation light heavyweight crown with a ninth-round knockout.

Czyz, making his fourth title defense, knocked Williams down in the second and third rounds. But Williams used a stinging left jab and stiff uppercuts to close the champion's right eye and force the fight to be stopped.

"Tonight, it seemed like he was the better man," Czyz said. "I'll be back, though. This is just another hurdle for me to overcome."

Clarinetist Woody Herman, 74, Dies Of Cardiac Arrest

By JOHN ROGERS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Big Band leader Woody Herman, who hit the charts in 1939 with "Woodchopper's Ball" and kept in tune with America for much of the next half-century playing bebop, funk, jazz and rock, is dead at 74.

The clarinetist died Thursday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center of cardiac arrest.

He had suffered for weeks from heart failure, emphysema and pneumonia, had been confined to a wheelchair and had fallen on hard times, narrowly averting eviction from his home with help from Hollywood's entertainment community.

Herman's best-known hits included "Apple Honey," "Northwest Passage" and "Caledonia" but he was never content to stick with his old standbys during a career that took him from smart ballrooms to African villages.

Through a series of young bands, more or less dubbed "The Thundering Herd" for their fierce energy, Herman kept pace with a dizzying variety of styles.

In the 1960s, he played with Stan Getz and Neal Hefti, shared the bill with The Who and Dionne Warwick and played arrangements of the Doors' "Light My Fire."

"As both Duke Ellington and Igor Stravinsky have said, there are only two kinds of music: good ... and bad," he said in 1986, his 50th year as a band leader. "We're going to try like hell to play good, and it'll swing. I assure you of that."

Financial troubles marred his later years.

Herman lost his Hollywood Hills house, which he bought from Humphrey Bogart in 1946, in a 1985 Internal Revenue Service auction to recoup $1.6 million in back taxes, a situation he blamed on a personal manager with a gambling habit. Herman had continued to rent from the man who bought it but was nearly evicted in August after falling behind.

Fans and celebrity friends such as Frank Sinatra and Clint Eastwood raised more than $70,000 toward the tax debt and back rent, organizing an all-star benefit in his honor Oct. 23 that drew musicians, singers, comedians and other celebrities.

"I'm glad that he doesn't have to suffer anymore and that he lived long enough to see that people really cared for him," said "Tonight" show orchestra leader Doc Severinsen. "And that tribute the other night turned out to be a rather nice send-off."

Herman played an average of 27 halls and ballrooms a month into his 70s — saying he loved the music and needed the money — and he claimed to still have the ear of younger listeners. He last performed in March.

"The band stays young," he once said. "It's just the coach that got very old."

Herman's band played as scheduled Thursday night at Southwestern Iowa Community College in Creston, Iowa. "We'll do everything we can to keep the band going in his name," road manager and trumpeter Bill Berne said.

Severinsen described Herman as one of the greatest musicians of all time. "Certain guys you just don't rate," he said. "Count Basie, Duke Ellington, Harry James, Woody Herman, they just don't have a rating scale for those guys."

"It seems like we have lost a lot of giants in the last few years, Stan Kenton, Count Basie and others," Eastwood said. "Probably they'll never be replaced."

Herman was born Woodrow Charles Herman in Milwaukee, the son of a musician. By age 6, he was touring the vaudeville circuit as the "Boy Wonder of the Clarinet."

At 15, he dropped out of high school to tour with the Tom Gerun band, and grew up fast on the road during the Prohibition years. At 17, he was shot in the leg by a Chicago thug during a scuffle.

He formed the first of a succession of bands in 1936. Ten years later, he appeared at Carnegie Hall, and had his own radio show.

In 1945, Stravinsky wrote "Ebony Concerto" for Herman's band.

Herman's career flagged at times in the 1950s, when at one point he did State Department tours in Africa for lack of better work.

He is survived by a daughter and two grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

CBS Miniseries Follows True Story Of Police Investigation

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A manipulative teacher tricks an adoring colleague into signing her life savings over to him, then gets their psychopathic principal — already convicted of armed robbery — to kill her and her two children.

If he tried pitching that plot line to a producer, even Joseph Wambaugh would be laughed out of the office. But "Echoes in the Darkness," a two-part, five-hour miniseries airing Sunday and Monday on CBS, is the true story of a seven-year police investigation.

While truth can indeed be stranger than fiction, it sometimes doesn't work as fiction, at least popular fiction. Wambaugh's story is no formulaized, prime-time entertainment, but rather a treatise on the boundless human capacity for deception alongside a plodding account of dedicated police work.

The miniseries is based on Wambaugh's best-seller, and he wrote the teleplay. It was directed by Glenn Jordan, director of the Emmy-winning TV movie "Promise."

The cast is an impressive array of esteemed stage, film and television actors — Peter Coyote, Robert Loggia, Stockard Channing, Cindy Pickett, Peter Boyle, Gary Cole and Treat Williams.

The murder case took seven years to solve and is still on appeal, which might account for Wambaugh's dogged determination, ultimately to the disadvantage of the drama, to stick to facts. The miniseries lacks one scene that might be contrived, but would pull it all together — the cops sitting around speculating on what really happened. Instead, viewers are left to piece together an intricate, circumstantial murder case without a blueprint. In that way, however, viewers are in the same position as the police.

Wambaugh ably presents the puzzle pieces.

The first two-hour installment sets up the scheme and the murder, a crazy quilt of lies, fantasy and desire that led to the death of divorced teacher Susan Reinert and presumably her two children; their bodies were never found. In the second, three-hour episode, the police dismantle the scheme piece by piece, constructing a delicate link between two unlikely conspirators.

The police drama begins at the end of Part 1, in June 1979 when the body of Reinert, a teacher at Merion High School outside Philadelphia, was found in the trunk of her car in a Harrisburg motel parking lot, dead of a lethal injection of morphine. Her two children, 11-year-old Karen and 10-year-old Michael, were missing.

Her lover, William Bradfield, a hopelessly romantic English teacher at Merion High School, was the sole beneficiary of her will and an insurance policy together worth $730,000.

Their principal, Dr. Jay Smith, was serving a prison sentence for a robbery committed as part of what police termed a double life. Smith's wife had died of cancer, leaving behind a diary suggesting she suspected him of killing their drug-addicted daughter and son-in-law. Police found evidence in Smith's basement linking him to Reinert's murder.

As Bradfield, actor Coyote has to carry the drama. If he isn't believable, Wambaugh's crazy quilt comes unstitched. But Coyote is so good he takes in the audience as well as his unwitting accomplices.

Channing is mousy victim Susan Reinert. Pickett is Sue Myers, Bradfield's long-suffering live-in girlfriend. Zeljko Ivanek is Vince, Sue and Bill's fellow teacher and neighbor, a lonely, religious man with fantasies of the netherworld. Alex Hyde-White is Chris, an insecure former student of Bradfield's. Robert Loggia is sinister Jay Smith.

Part 2 features Boyle as hardened police sergeant Joe VanNort, Cole as his dedicated partner, Jack Holtz, and Williams as crusading prosecutor Rick Guida.

VanNort suspected Bradfield of involvement in Reinert's murder, but two years after the discovery of her body, nothing linked Bradfield to Smith, except for Bradfield's odd testimony as a supposedly innocent alibi witness at Smith's armed robbery trial.

VanNort died, never to see the case solved. Holtz and Guida pursued the investigation for years, eventually chipping away the fantasies of Bradfield's emotionally needy friends and turning them against him.

Wambaugh suggests that in the end Bradfield got exactly what he really wanted: "In many ways I envied him," Bradfield says at one point of his idol Ezra Pound, imprisoned in an asylum. "To be truly alone like Ezra Pound, locked away in a small, cell-like room. That seems to me in many ways a blessing."

Smits Files For Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Jimmy Smits, who plays the street-smart corporate lawyer Victor Sifuentes on the hit TV show "L.A. Law," has filed for divorce from his wife of seven years.

A petition filed in Los Angeles Superior Court on Wednesday cited irreconcilable differences between Smits and his wife, Barbara, who lives in New York.

The couple separated in March 1986, according to Smits' lawyer, Harvey Strassman. They have two children: Taina, 13, and Joaquin, 4. Smits was nominated for an Emmy for his role in "L.A. Law," now in its second year on NBC.

The actor and a woman were arrested Aug. 10 after allegedly scuffling with police at an apartment they share, and were charged with battery and resisting arrest. That case has not reached trial.

Lange Returns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Hope Lange returned to the stage a day after a fainting spell forced her to leave her role in the Gore Vidal play "The Best Man."

"She's doing OK. She was checked by doctors and is doing the matinee today," Christine Cox, an Ahmanson Theater spokeswoman, said Thursday.

Iranian Missile Strikes Residential Area Of Baghdad, Kills Civilians

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — An Iranian missile slammed into a residential neighborhood of this capital today. The military said it killed civilians, but did not say how many.

Iran said the missile was aimed at Iraq's air force command.

A column of smoke rose from the site of impact, witnesses said.

An Iraqi military spokesman said "a number of citizens were martyred and another number wounded." The unidentified spokesman read a communique on Baghdad radio.

The missile demolished a number of civilian residences and damaged others, he said.

"Iraq will not let these crimes pass without a severe punishment at the appropriate time," said the spokesman. He did not elaborate.

Soviet First Deputy Foreign Minister Yuli Vorontsov was in Baghdad when the missile struck shortly after 1 a.m. It was not known precisely where he was staying or whether his accommodations were near the impact site, Western diplomatic sources said.

Vorontsov, who had held talks with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, later flew to neighboring Kuwait and also planned to visit Tehran to discuss a proposed cease-fire in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Residents in Baghdad were shaken out of bed when the missile struck. Police vehicles and ambulances raced to the impact site, said residents reached by telephone.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, reported the surface-to-surface missile was fired at a building housing the air force command in central Baghdad. The one-paragraph IRNA report gave no other details.

Iran's long-range missiles, believed to be Soviet-designed Scud-B rockets, cannot hit precise targets when fired from border areas.

The missile attack is the fifth by Iran against Baghdad since Oct. 4, heightening fears that a new round has begun in the so-called "war of the cities."

The attack came after Iran vowed retaliation for the death of 18 civilians in Iraqi air raids Wednesday on the southwestern Fars province.

Hours after the missile hit, Iran said "heavy attacks" on military, economic and industrial centers in Baghdad and other cities "will continue as long as the Iraqi government continued its mischievous acts."

The missile strike came hours before Iran and Iraq were scheduled to give U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar their response to a U.N. peace plan aimed at ending the war.

But U.N. officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said if the nations' envoys do respond later today, their comments will not be revealed. The secretary-general is in Spain, and he is not expected to make an official statement about the response to the peace plan until next week, they said.

U.N. Security Council Resolution 598 calls for a cease-fire, withdrawal from occupied territory and an inquiry into who started the war. Iran says Iraq began the war by invading Iraq in September 1980. Iraq says the conflict started weeks earlier when Iranian artillery shelled border towns.

Also today, a U.S. warship and reflagged Kuwaiti tanker steamed south through the Persian Gulf. The 14th U.S. convoy left Kuwait late Wednesday for the 550-mile trip down the gulf and out through the Strait of Hormuz.

The Gas Princess tanker was being escorted by the guided-missile frigate USS Ford "and the convoy is now progressing uneventfully," Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said Thursday.

Two U.S. minesweepers entered the gulf Thursday. Hoffman said three others that arrived in the area with them would steam through Hormuz soon.

U.S. warships began escorting 11

U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers in July to protect them from Iran, which considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq.

Today's missile strike came one day after Iran announced its warplanes attacked military and industrial installations in southern Iraq. Although Iraq did not confirm the air attack, it said Iranian artillery fire had killed 13 civilians and wounded 46 in the southern port city of Basra on Thursday.

Western diplomats in Baghdad, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Vorontsov, in his talks with Hussein, proposed that Iraq accept an informal cease-fire and allow an international inquiry to determine who started the fighting.

Hussein was quoted by the state-owned news media as telling Vorontsov any attempt to misinterpret U.N. Security Council Resolution 598, which calls for a cease-fire followed by an inquiry, would be totally rejected by Baghdad.

The resolution should be implemented as an integral whole, Saddam was quoted as saying.

Moscow is Baghdad's main arms supplier, but the two have differed recently on how to end the war, as Soviet-Iranian ties began improving.

Gorbachev Survives Challenge

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev weathered a political crisis touched off by a critical speech by the Moscow Communist Party chief, who had been a key supporter, a newspaper reported today.

Boris N. Yeltsin gave a dramatic speech to the party Central Committee last week accusing Gorbachev of developing a personality cult. The New York Times reported, quoting Soviet officials it did not name who said the crisis had affected planning of a summit with President Reagan.

The Oct. 21 meeting of the committee, about 300 top Communist Party officials, was private. The Soviet press agency confirmed that Yeltsin was a scheduled speaker, but did not report on the content of his speech.

The Times said Yeltsin, a non-voting member of the ruling Politburo, told the committee he was resigning his party post over the slow pace of change.

The newspaper called it extraordinary that Soviet officials were willing to discuss the heated debate, and quoted officials saying it represented possible erosion of Gorbachev's support and influenced his handling of negotiations to arrange a summit.

"He couldn't leave the country if there was a question about his position, and he had to be careful not to appear soft with the Americans," one official told the Times.

Yeltsin's speech occurred the day before Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrived in Moscow for meetings that led to Gorbachev's scrapping and then reviving summit plans.

Yeltsin's resignation, which was first reported Thursday by the leading Spanish daily El Pais, was apparently withdrawn. He made official appearances Wednesday and Thursday.

Yeltsin has been a key supporter of Gorbachev's plans for restructuring Soviet society. According to the Times, his speech said actions by Gorbachev, the Soviet Communist Party general secretary, in fostering a personality cult, and by No. 2 leader Yegor Ligachev, whom he accused of lacking compassion, were blocking the program.

Nicaragua Rejects Peace Talks As Cease-Fire Appears Doomed

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A Central American peace plan was jeopardized when Nicaragua vowed it will never negotiate with the Contra rebels, and Salvadoran rebels said they would boycott talks with the government.

The announcements came Thursday, one week before the scheduled implementation of the peace plan, which calls, among other things, for cease-fires in the civil wars in Nicaragua and El Salvador.

The peace plan was signed Aug. 5 by the presidents of those two nations and Guatemala, Honduras and Costa Rica.

Despite the apparent setback, Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, who received this year's Nobel Peace Prize for proposing the plan, said in San Jose that he remained optimistic the accord can succeed.

"I believe that what is being done is put to the test the sincerity of the five governments, because none wants to be remembered in Central American history as the one that kept 25 million human beings from living in peace," he told The Associated Press on Thursday.

A communique read over the leftist Sandinista radio said the government would hold peace talks only with the United States, which supports the Contras, who have been fighting the Sandinistas for the last six years.

"In no way, in no place, with no intermediary, will there ever be a direct or indirect political dialogue with the counterrevolutionary leaders," the communique said. It repeated the proposal by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega for "a direct and unconditional dialogue with the North American government."

The Reagan administration has refused to talk with the Sandinistas, insisting they should talk with the Contras.

The communique also said Nicaragua will not declare a broad amnesty or lift a state of emergency as long as the fighting continues.

Besides cease-fires in the region's civil wars, the peace plan calls for amnesties, democratic reforms, an end to outside aid for guerrillas. The plan is to be implemented Thursday by the five participating nations.

Before the communique was read, Arias told reporters he felt the peace talks were not progressing well but were not quite at an impasse. But a high-level Costa Rican official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Nicaraguan statement could indicate a complete break in the peace negotiations.

In El Salvador, leftist guerrillas said they would boycott peace talks scheduled with government officials this weekend to protest the slaying in El Salvador on Monday of Herbert Ernesto Anaya, a prominent human rights activist.

The leaders of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front said their decision to boycott the talks in Mexico City was "a gesture of condemnation of the crime committed by the government and the armed forces."

"To attend that meeting would be to contribute to the creation of false expectations," the group said in a statement distributed to news agencies.

Opening lead: Ten of ♦ Bridge and archeology have a lot in common. In both you have to dig beneath the surface to find the real treasures. Study this hand and see if you can unearth the extra chance.

We are not proud of North's decision to bid two no trump. While we have no quibbles with his distribution, certainly his heart stopper left something to be desired; our preference would have been for a waiting bid in one of the minors. South's jump to four clubs was the Gerber convention, asking for aces, and he settled in the small slam when he found out one ace was missing.

What are your chances of gathering 12 tricks after a diamond lead? Since one heart can be discarded on dummy's fourth diamond, it would seem success hinges on either guessing the heart position (where you can either finesse for the queen or lead to the king) or a club finesse. However, you don't want to go down in a slam in a suit which is not critical, so we suggest you don't even consider the club finesse.

There is still another line. If trumps are 3-2 and the king of clubs is only twice guarded, you can ruff out his majesty and set up the queen for another heart discard. So win the diamond in hand, cash the ace of trumps and ace of clubs, and ruff a club. Now get back to the table with the jack of trumps.

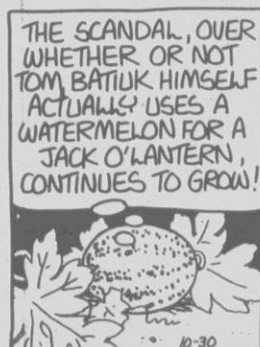

If trumps are 4-1, you can't afford another club ruff without risking losing control of the hand. Therefore, lead the jack of hearts and try to guess the position. If trumps do break 3-2, ruff another club. If the king does not appear, you will have to fall back on the hearts. But when the king drops, draw the last trump, take two heart discards on the minor suit winners and cheerfully concede a heart trick to the defenders.
