Carter Wins Mayor's Seat

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer
City Council member Ed Carter, buoyed by overwhelming showings in three predominantly black districts, upset incumbent Les Garner on Tuesday to become Greenville's first black mayor in the modern era.
A two-term council member and one-time mayor pro tem, Carter defeated Garner, who was seeking his second two-year term, by an unofficial 296-vote margin.
According to unofficial returns tabulated by the Greenville Daily Reflector, Carter captured 3,441 votes to 3,145 for Garner. An additional candidate, Willis Stancill, finished a distant third with 161 votes.
"I'm extremely happy with the broad base of support I received," said Carter. "I'm elated about the mayoral selection and that all segments of the population came out to support me."

"I pledge my total effort in attempting to unify this city and move it forward in a very orderly and progressive manner. I plan to use all available resources in analyzing various situations so as to make the most effective decisions for this city."
Carter, head of administrative services at Burroughs Wellcome Co., captured Greenville precincts 1, 3, 4, 5, and 6, but lopsided totals in the predominantly black districts pushed him over the top.

In Precinct 1, located at the VFW Building on Mumford Road, Carter received 278 votes, compared to only 12 for Garner. Carter captured 506 votes in Precinct 3 at the West Greenville Recreation Center on Fourth and Nash streets, while Garner received 14.
In Precinct 4 at the Holy Trinity Unity Holy Church on Spruce and Hicks streets, Carter tallied 640, compared to Garner's 82.
Garner had strong showings in precincts 7, 9 and 10 and in the Wintergreen precinct.
Based upon records at City Hall, Carter becomes the first black mayor to be elected in Greenville, according to City Clerk Lois Worthington.

"He is as far as I know," Mrs. Worthington said. "I checked the records since 1897 and up until then it doesn't reflect any black mayors."
Margaret Hardee, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections, also said records indicate Carter will be the city's first black mayor.
At a morning news conference, Garner, who had been criticized for making ethnic remarks during his time in office and during the campaign, said he was "disappointed with the outcome."
"I commend and congratulate Mr. Carter, my friend, who I have worked with for two years," Garner, chairman of Garner Wholesale Mer-

Five Incumbents Ousted In School Board Races

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County voters eliminated five incumbents for the 12 seats on the Pitt County Board of Education election Tuesday — the first election under the six-district plan. Two of the five were running against other incumbent candidates.
Incumbents Donovan Phillips, Anne McGaughey, Mark Owens, Frank Grooms and George Williams will remain on the board and will be joined by new board members Howard Parker, Mary Williams, Walter Morehead, Leonard Lilley, Nicholas Patrone, Jack Collins and Elbert Buck.

Each board member represents one of six districts in the county in Seat A or Seat B. The initial term for Seat A will be through December 1992, while the initial term for Seat B will be through December 1990.
Incumbent Anne McGaughey edged by incumbent David Shackelford by about 60 votes in District 4, Seat A, while Frank Grooms won by more than 750 votes against James Black in the District 5, Seat A race.

Ms. McGaughey said she was pleased with the number of voters in Farmville who participated in the elections. Farmville municipal elections already had been conducted so "the school board race was the only race that was run. I think David (Shackelford) and I should be very

Turnout Is Low, Problems Are Few

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer
Slightly more than 30 percent of Pitt County's registered voters made it to the polls in Tuesday's election, according to an election official.
"I'm disappointed. I thought with the weather and the emphasis placed on the election, we would have had a better turnout," said Margaret Hardee, supervisor of the county's Board of Elections.
According to preliminary figures, 13,229 of the county's 43,973 registered voters cast ballots Tuesday.
Despite the relatively low county turnout, Mrs. Hardee said 35.5 percent of Greenville's registered voters went to the polls for the election, marking an 8.27 percent increase from the 27.23 percent turnout in the city's most recent election in 1985.
Meanwhile, election officials had little difficulty operating under new district voting methods for the Greenville and County Board of Education, according to Mrs. Hardee.
"We had a few problems from some of the precincts where voters

Stocks Tumble Again As Dollar Withers

By PETER COY
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks stumbled on Wall Street today and the Dow Jones industrial average lost more than 35 points by late morning after big overseas selloffs caused by the withering value of the dollar.
The market uncertainty resurrected fears that incited the world stock collapse last month and came one day after another troubling day in which the Dow average briefly lost more than 100 points.
Traders attributed the fresh anxiety to the view that the United States is not acting aggressively enough to correct huge budget and trade deficits threatening the global economy.
"A lot of the drop is from overseas investors based on lack of confidence in Washington," said Phillip C. Puccio, manager of institutional trading at the New York investment firm Dillon, Read & Co. "I think the market is extremely volatile and I for one won't be buying."
After its sharp plunge Tuesday, the Dow average of 30 blue-chip stocks recovered a bit but finished the day down 50.56 points at 1,963.53. The session ended five daily gains that had bolstered the average by more than 220 points.
The average dropped again in early trading today, losing more than 35 points by late morning. Broader market indices fell sharply and losing stocks outnumbered gainers by 3-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.
At the same time, an investor migration out of the stock market continued to benefit the bond market, where prices rose and interest rates fell. The Treasury's key 30-year bond gained about $10 per $1,000 in face amount and its interest rate fell just below 9 percent.

In Japan, the dollar at one point sank to 136.80 yen today, its lowest level in Tokyo since modern currency rates were established in the late 1940s. It edged back up and closed today at 137.25 yen, still down 0.33 from Monday.
But later in London, the dollar was quoted lower at 136.95 yen, although it was mixed against other key currencies. In early New York trading the dollar faded further to about 136.70 yen but rebounded to 137.20 by midmorning.
The Tokyo Stock Exchange's key index, the 225-stock Nikkei average, tumbled 298.07 points, or 1.3 percent, closing at 23,060.53 points. On Monday, it gained 29.69 points.
Markets in Tokyo were closed Tuesday for a national holiday.
Japan's finance minister, Kiichi Miyazawa, urged quick action by the United States to reduce its budget deficit to stabilize exchange rates.
"There aren't any incentives to encourage the market to go up. With the dollar falling and overseas stock exchanges declining, a fall in stock prices is unavoidable," said Yoshio Ogawa, a spokesman for Nikko Securities.
The Bank of Japan reportedly bought more than $500 million in dollars to prop up the U.S. currency.
In Hong Kong, stock prices fell sharply in light trading today. The Hong Kong Stock Exchange's key index slipped 103.63 points, or more than 4 percent, to close at 2,077.11.
By late afternoon in London, the Financial Times-Stock Exchange

100-share index was down 67.8 points in 1,586.1, up from earlier lows. Traders attributed the partial recovery to a small cut in a key British interest rate.
In New York, analysts said some investors, still shaken by Oct. 19's record 508-point bust, sold stock Tuesday to lock in short-term profits.
Twelve stocks fell in price for every five that advanced on the New York Stock Exchange.
The crash, meanwhile, has prompted nearly one-third of all Americans to postpone, cancel or cut spending on such things as vacations, houses and cars, according to a poll of 2,463 people published in today's Los Angeles Times.

"If (that) is the right number, then we're going to see very substantial weakness in consumer spending," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.
Tuesday's fall wiped out nearly $48 billion from the value of all U.S. stocks, according to the Wilshire Associates tally. It left the Dow average less than halfway back from its collapse on Black Monday.
"People are very hopeful that they saw the worst, but the least sign of decline, they sell. I don't blame them, it's human nature," said William LeFevre, a market strategist for Advest Inc.

The New York Stock Exchange on Tuesday lifted one of its curbs on computer-driven program trading, saying the stock market was "beginning to stabilize." Tuesday's trading volume rose to almost 228 million shares from 176 million shares Monday but was still lighter than in past weeks.
Hours have been shortened to cope with the heavy trading, but regular trading hours are expected to resume Monday.

Miller Edges Hadden For Council

Reflector Staff Writer
Three incumbent members of the Greenville City Council were re-elected, but 10-year board veteran Bill Hadden was edged out for the District 4 seat by Greenville businessman Richard "Ric" Miller.
"I'm tired and happy, I'm really flattered with the confidence the voters in our district showed yesterday in the vote," Miller said today.
Miller, general partner of Miller & Davis Associates building contractors, defeated Hadden 650-563 in Tuesday's election, according to unofficial results tallied by The Daily Reflector.
"I would like to thank my opponent Bill Hadden. We remained gentlemen through the entire campaign," Miller said.
In the election — the city's first under a new 5-1-1 district plan — council members Nancy Jenkins, Inez Fridley and Lorraine Shinn were re-elected. Under the 5-1-1 system, five council members are elected by district, while one council member and the mayor are elected at-large.

Mildred Council, a sickle cell educator and counselor for the N.C. Department of Health Services, captured the District 1 seat, while Rufus Huggins, a sales representative for Southern Life Insurance Co., took the District 2 seat.
In the at-large race, Lorraine Shinn, northeastern manager of the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, defeated Wallace Wooles, chairman of the pharmacology department at East Carolina University, 3,249 to 2,513. Ed Rose, an employee at Honeycutt Inc. finished third with 593 votes.

"I feel real good," Mrs. Shinn said. "I think I've been a fair person and an outspoken person, but I think the voters appreciate someone who tries to tell them the truth. I think it shows that they like the way I work."

In the District 1 race, Council, running unopposed, tallied 1,010 votes. Huggins held off a challenge from Herb Gardner, managing partner of Gardner's Bail Bonding Co. Huggins tallied 671 votes, while Gardner garnered 419.
In the District 3 race, Council member Inez Fridley, who ran unopposed, collected 558 votes to secure her second two-year term.

Incumbents Set Pace In Pitt Elections

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Every incumbent seeking re-election in Tuesday's municipal elections in Pitt County — outside of the city of Greenville, where Mayor Les Garner and Councilman William Hadden were defeated in re-election bids — were returned to office.
In Ayden, where Mayor Marvin "Bear" Baldree Jr. and five incumbent commissioners ran unopposed, Baldree received 592 votes, while Carl Speight took 553 votes, Robert Harris 558, Susan Moody 538, Stuart Tripp 561 and J.J. Brown 569.

Bethel Mayor Frank Hemingway, running unopposed, took 404 votes in Tuesday's balloting, while incumbent Commissioners Sam Carson, with 420 votes, Elvis Jones with 326 votes, Billy Peaden with 325 votes, Delton Perry with 407 votes and Robert Young Jr. with 431 votes, were returned to office.
The incumbent Bethel commissioners defeated hopefuls Ed Stox, who took 221 ballots, and Albert

Small, who received 196 votes.
Unopposed incumbent Grifton Commissioners Gene Coley, Johnny Len Craft and Maxwell Waters Sr. were re-elected to office with 297, 287 and 286 votes, respectively, while in Grimesland, incumbent Alderman Danny P. Strickland, who polled 59 votes, was returned to office.
Grimesland aldermen Ann Hudson, Zekda Galloway, Charlie Dawson Jr. and Mitchell Holloman, who did not see re-election Tuesday, were replaced by Gene Buck, with 79 votes, Harry Cushing with 85, Nancy B. Huntley with 80 votes, and Delores Mayo who received 59 votes.

Unsuccessful in their bid for office in Grimesland were Eleanor Farr, who took 56 votes, and John Farr, who took 46.
In Falkland, where Mayor Rober Collins and Commissioners David L. Carraway, Charles Mayo Jr. and Woodrow Wooten ran unopposed, Collins took 24 votes, with Carraway receiving 23, Mayo 24 and Wooten 22.

Incumbent Mayors Return In Martin County Races

WILLIAMSTON — There were no surprises in the outcome of elections held in Martin County's two major towns, Williamston and Robersonville.

In Williamston, incumbent Mayor Thomas B. Brandon III won easily over Betty L. Griffin, by a margin of 743 to 349. Robersonville's incumbent, Mayor Jonathan G. Booker, received 334 votes to 298 for L. Wilson Wynne, a former longtime Robersonville mayor making a comeback bid.

In the race for town commissioners in Williamston, six candidates ran for the five seats. Votes for the three incumbents winning seats were: William E. Honeyblue, 877; George C. Griffin Jr., 806, and Noah Eddie Hardison Jr., 801. Votes received by newcomers to the town board were 832 for Tommy E. Roberson and 765 for A.R. Chesson.

A total of 11 candidates sought office for five town commission seats in Robersonville. Top votegetter was Michael Kilpatrick with 355 votes, followed by C. Mort Hurst, 337; Dan Thompson, 330; with Edward Casper and Lorene Leggett each receiving 298 votes. Leggett is a newcomer to the town board. One incumbent, Frank A. Measamer, failed in his bid to be re-elected to the board.

Sentence

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — James Lee Childers, charged with the robbing and shooting death of a Quik Chek clerk March 10, has been sentenced to life imprisonment after pleading guilty to first degree murder.

He was sentenced by Judge William Helms in Davidson Superior Criminal Court in Lexington. Childers pleaded guilty after Helms ruled that he could not receive the death penalty.

Farmville OKs Annexation Of Shopping Center

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners Tuesday night annexed the Brightleaf Shopping Center property soon to be completed on U.S. 264 in the southern part of town.

This action, requested by the property owners, Bailey and Associates of Jacksonville, brings a $3 million increase in the town's tax base. A public hearing held before the annexation ordinance was passed brought no protest by any citizen.

In separate action, the final plat for the shopping center was approved, based on the recommendation of the planning board.

Following a public hearing in which there was no protest, the board adopted an amendment affecting text changes in the multifamily use section of the town's zoning ordinance and changes to the zoning map in multifamily districts. The town will continue to allow multifamily use in the higher density areas, but any developer wishing to construct a multifamily complex of a density greater than is allowed in any other residential area will have to appeal first to the planning board and then to the town board for rezoning of the property for exclusive multifamily use. Multifamily zones are being established in areas where multifamily use already exists.

The commissioners were split in their opinions on whether an airport just outside the city limits on U.S. 264A should continue to be subsidized by the town. An annual $1,200 donation to the operation of the Craft Air Field was removed from the current year's budget. A motion by Commissioner John T. Walston not to fund the airport was defeated when Charles Joyner, Oliver Murphrey and Alfred Williams voted against Walston and Moses Moye.

A new motion was then entered by Joyner and the three in favor of reconstituting the funding were successful. The money is being taken from the legislative contingency fund.

Walston and Moye said they feel that no documentation has been made that the airport directly benefits the town economically, other than for the use of private individuals and a crop spraying operation and, therefore, they feel the taxpayers' money should not be spent that way. The other three commissioners said they feel that local industry does derive some support from having the airport being here and being indicated on maps as one that can be used by the public. In an addition to Joyner's motion, Murphrey suggested that the board ask that documentation be submitted as to how much the airport is used by industry.

The Farmville Economic Council and the Farmville Area Chamber of Commerce had requested that the matter be reconsidered.

The commissioners also differed on whether the town should supply $1,500 for an inventory and study of historical houses and other structures in the Farmville area. The planning and finance committee had gone on record not recommending the expenditure.

Walston, Joyner, Murphrey and Williams opposed spending the money. Moye voted for it, saying that the rest of the communities in the county are taking part in this historical inventory project and he feels it's a far better service to the town than the service of the airport for which the board had just expended $1,200.

Commissioner Frank Bradham told the board that town office employees Margie Tripp and Sylvia spent two days in the mice-infested armory weapons locker inventorying old town records stored there. He requested authorization to dispose of the current record inventory and to adopt the N.C. Schedule of Records Retention and Disposition for Municipalities, which would preclude town employees having similar ordeals again.

The purchases of two well sites were approved. These sites have been designated Dale and Joyner. The price for both sites is $6,500, with a remaining balance of $5,850 each. It was pointed out that the Dale site has proved satisfactory, with a well constructed that is expected to yield more than 400 gallons per minute. The Joyner site is expected to produce about 200 gallons per minute.

Commissioner Alfred Williams, as chairman of the Public Services Committee, recommended the approval of an Adopt-A-Tree program for the town, and it was done. This program will encourage citizens to care for trees on public rights of way adjacent to their properties. It was pointed out that Mayor Edna Earle Baker has declared Nov. 19 Fall Arbor Day. The spending of $750 has been authorized to plant 50 dogwood trees, in anticipation and support of the Dogwood Festival that Farmville plans to hold next spring. Citizens will be asked to contact the town office if they wish to adopt a tree.

A resolution of respect for John B. Lewis Sr., a former Farmville mayor who died recently, was adopted by unanimous vote.

Carter Ousts Garner As Mayor

chandisers Inc., said. "Greenville is a growing and progressive city, and I hope the new City Council and the new mayor can work together as a team."

Garner said he was looking forward to some free time. "I'm leaving office with very few regrets," he said. "It's frustrating, confusing and hard work. It has kept me from enjoying my life the way a man my age is entitled."

Meanwhile, D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County branch of the NAACP, said Carter's election was the culmination of a long struggle.

"I am really elated over that victory," Garrett said. "We have fought a long time and waited a long time for this. I'm glad to see it come to fruition."

"As we begin to reflect on his victory, we realize that it didn't just start. We had our first black person run for City Council here in 1949 and it's been building on that ever since."

Carter's success should be viewed in terms of the future, according to Garrett.

"I'm glad it happened, but I don't think we can stop here," he said. "This will only have to be a stepping stone to a larger arena. For example, we have to look at the statehouse and also at the Washington, D.C., area."

"I think the people of Greenville are real pleased. The people of Greenville were ready for it. People of both races want Greenville to project a very liberal image and I think Carter's election will give us the kind of projection that we want to be seen."

Bennie Rountree, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of Pitt County and North Carolina, said, "It was a great landmark and some difficult decisions had to be made" to elect Carter as mayor. "However, it paid off, and I believe the black and white voters spoke loud and clear as to the direction the administration must follow the next two years. We certainly hope it will include both black and white in its process, and that we will never regret what we had done in this election."

As a co-spokesman for the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice, the Rev. Farney Moore said, "The citizens of Greenville are to be commended for their vision and their support. It is indeed a historic event and a giant step forward for our beloved city. We pray God's guidance and divine help for the mayor-elect, his administration and the Greenville citizens in the months to come."

The Rev. Alonzo Mills, also with the Concerned Citizens for Justice, said, "I am sure I voice the sentiment of all citizens that with Mr. Ed Carter as mayor of the city of Greenville the future of the city is in good hands. He brings to us great knowledge and experience of the administration of the city. I do urge all our citizens to support him and help make our city the greatest in North Carolina."

Carter said he planned to work on improving communication within the council, along with other agencies.

"The first thing we must resolve, the first priority, has to be to unify the City Council," the mayor-elect said. "I propose to the council that we participate in a retreat and it may need to be an out-of-town retreat to ensure full availability and avoid interruptions so we can identify those things that are critical for this city and to establish both short-range and long-range objectives for our new city manager."

"I think we must be more effective communicating with the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, East Carolina University and all of the boards and commissions in the city to improve our on-going relationships with those agencies."

SAFETY REMINDER — The Farmville Central High School VICA Club has constructed a 10-by-40-foot billboard and has placed it just outside the Greenville city limits on U.S. 264 West. The safety committee of the club created the sign as part of its annual safety campaign and is raising money to pay for it. The lighted sign will remain up for the entire school year.

proud" of the interest shown in the school board race."

Grooms said he was confident that he would serve another term on the board. "I always thought that the people would elect their best representative," he said.

Mary Williams upset incumbent J.B. Conleton with a margin of more than 600 votes in District 2, Seat A. Bryant Tripp followed Conleton with about 10 votes less.

"I think its clear that the total segment of the community was willing to elect people who will express their needs," Ms. Williams said. "The same people that elected me will hear from me" to express some of their feelings, concerns and issues, she said. "I plan to expose myself ... and these people (in the district) to other areas of the community and be interested in other areas and concerns" in the school system.

Incumbent Ferrell Blount was ousted by Walter Morehead in District 2, Seat B, with unofficial votes as 637 to 839, respectively. Sidney Scott collected 597 votes in the race.

"I'm excited about joining the Pitt County Board of Education," Morehead said. "I'm looking forward to being a part of the added value for excellence and education. I wish to thank my supporters for their help, outstanding teamwork and professionalism shown during the campaign."

Jack Collins was victorious over incumbent Robert Halstead with unofficial votes as 840 to 752, respectively, for the District 6, Seat A. Darryl Hignite received 444 votes.

"I'm very happy things turned out as I had hoped," Collins said. "The main thing that I'm looking for is what's going to be best for the children, all the children in Pitt County."

With new board members elected, unifying the board is "going to be the important thing," Collins said. "I'm looking forward to all of this. I had a lot of support ... (but) I want to get out and talk to the folks that did not vote for me to assure them that I want to represent all the people."

Incumbent Mark Owens won by a large margin against Randy Martin for District 4, Seat B. The unofficial votes were 1,098 to 437.

In the District 5, Seat B race, incumbent George Williams escaped being uprooted by Kathryn Allen with unofficial totals of 1,892 to 1,775.

Williams said he felt good about the race "but, you never take anything for granted. I was hoping that people would show confidence in me. ... I just hope we'll all get on and try to develop policy for what's best for the boys and girls in Pitt County because that's what I'm interested in."

Elbert Buck claimed District 6, Seat B, over Ron Hardison and Levi Smith, with unofficial votes of 1,023, 557 and 401, respectively, while Nicholas Patrone was victorious over C.B. Owens and Vann Latham with unofficial votes of 661, 571 and 509, respectively, for District 3, Seat B.

"I would definitely say it took a coordinated effort from all the folks from the district" to be elected, Buck said. "I couldn't have done it by myself. It was an uphill struggle" competing against an incumbent.

Patrone said, "I thought it went well. I think each of the other two candidates ran a good race. I pleased with the turnout in the southern part (of the county) and in the district. I think we all campaigned hard. I think people heard what we had to say."

In District 3, Seat A, Leonard Lilley was victorious over Martha Coffman with unofficial votes of 1,061 to 850.

In District 1, incumbent Donovan Phillips and Howard Parker claimed seats A and B, respectively, after running unopposed.

"I feel very honored and privileged to be able to serve the community," Parker said. "I had to no opposition this time, and I'm honored the community had enough confidence in me to let me run unopposed. I plan to roll up my sleeves and get to work with the other board members."

There will be a reception to honor the Pitt County Board of Education Monday at 7 p.m. in the Pitt County office building, second floor commissioner's auditorium. The reception precedes the regular monthly board meeting.

In Fountain, unopposed Mayor Julian Gaynor was re-elected with 112 votes, while incumbent Commissioners Letha Jefferson, with 93 votes, Walter Jessup with 84, William Douglas Strickland with 77, Nat Van Nsortwick with 68 and James Willoughby Jr. with 101, were re-elected over hopefuls David Price, who received 57 votes, and Ronald Wayne Strickland, who took 49 votes.

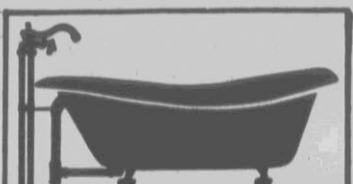

In the village of Simpson, unopposed incumbent village council members Brenda Joyce Hawkins, Virginia Lupton and Clara Thompson, with 98, 110 and 90 votes, respectively, were re-elected.

And in Winterville, where incumbent Alderman Leland Tucker did not seek re-election, incumbent Bobby Crawford and new-comer Willie Lester Jones were elected.

Crawford, with 198 votes, and Jones, with 188, defeated Ashley Dail, who received 155 votes, Raymond Hoover Cox, with 112, and Freddie Brock, who took 76 votes.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Winds Of Change

Premier Zhao Ziyang has become head of the Chinese Communist Party in a move that is seen as trend toward younger officials who seek reform in the party hierarchy. Deng Xiaoping, who vacated three party positions at age 83, will continue to be chairman of the Central Military Commission.

The leadership switch is a symptom of the changes stirring in China. Many of these changes are economic and are capable of producing profound effects around the world.

The appointments were announced at the Central Committee meeting at the closing session of the 13th National Party Congress. Conservative party leaders apparently were out as Deng gave up several positions. Deng now may carry out marketing reforms and an open door policy for China. Observers see the centrally planned economy being dismantled and further opening of lines to the west.

The names of new leaders in the huge nation of China are unfamiliar to most Americans. Nevertheless the changes moving through the Chinese government can affect us all. China has more interests with the United States now and in the future this could be important in world trade.

We know there has been some allowance for individual initiative in China and a few small businessmen have become wealthy by Chinese standards practicing the tried and true methods of private enterprise.

It is a certainty that China will not abandon communism in the foreseeable future. It is, however, more tolerant of individual initiative, the keystone of private enterprise, at home. It is also willing to talk and trade with capitalist nations. These changes are far removed from the days of Mao Tse-tung and the Red Guard.

The winds of change have begun to sweep China. New leadership which is now finding its way into government may assure that China moderates in its internal affairs and in its dealings with the western powers. The international political climate can only be bettered by it.

Renewed Concern

With autumn's declining days and early warnings of winter's cold there is also a renewed concern over welfare of the homeless people in America.

Nobody knows their number. Federal estimates range from 250,000 to two million. Benevolent groups guess three million.

The Associated Press checked officials in every state and found officials nearly unanimous in saying the problem of the homeless is growing. There are a multitude of causes. It's said to be aggravated in areas where economies are depressed and in areas where a booming economy pushes rents beyond people's reach.

There are many who complain mentally ill people are being put on the streets. AIDS and the isolation it brings is said to blame in more and more cases of homeless people. Divorce, release from jail with no place to go, being stranded while traveling, domestic violence, fire and health problems all contribute.

According to the U.S. Conference of Mayors' survey, 28 percent of those with nowhere to live are now families with children.

Charities as well as state and local governments have committed millions of dollars to help the homeless. In mid-1987 President Reagan signed a national commitment to spend $1 billion over two years to help the homeless. About $355 million has been appropriated and is said to be on its way through channels to various agencies. Much of the money is going toward improving or opening shelters and extending the emergency safety action further beyond major cities. Shelters are in the works for such remote places as Barrow, Kotzebue and Ketchikan, Alaska. Attitudes toward needs of the homeless have changed. A poll by the Roper Organization (last May) found Americans consider solving the problem of the homeless "extremely important" to government.

This is a notable turnaround from apathy that marked early reports of the tragic circumstances affecting many people. These days there is impatience at the slow pace of remedial measures and concern being voiced over why they were not begun months ago.

Everyone knew the cold of winter was no remote threat and the movement of needed resources into channels wherein they could be used has always been slow.

After Triumph, Work Begins For Zhao

BEIJING (AP) — Chinese leader Zhao Ziyang, flushed from a stunning triumph at a major Communist Party congress, now must begin carrying out his mandate to improve the lives of China's 1 billion people.

Zhao, with the party's top echelon squarely behind him, has told the nation there will be no turning back on China's long march for reform and economic progress. The road ahead, however, is studded with such problems as inflation, corruption, budget deficits and bureaucratic incompetence.

Zhao and his mentor Deng Xiaoping saw the perfect execution of their crafted scenario at the 13th national party congress, which ended Sunday.

The 83-year-old Deng, China's most powerful man, stepped down from several top party posts, dragging with him into retirement scores of aging comrades who have impeded Deng's market-oriented reforms with their hardened ideological views.

Rejuvenation of the leadership was dramatic in the newly appointed 17-member Politburo, where the average age dropped from 71 to 64, and the Politburo Standing Committee, where four out of the five members were replaced. Only Zhao remained.

The smooth transition of power was a first for Communist China.

The retirement of Deng "and other veteran revolutionaries has set a good, historic example for further rejuvenating" the party ranks in the future, the party's official People's

'... there will be no turning back on China's long march for reform and economic progress. The road ahead, however, is studded with such problems as inflation, corruption, budget deficits ...'

Daily (Renmin Ribao) said in an editorial Tuesday.

Zhao, 68, was formally confirmed as party general secretary and became the first man to head both the party and government since he took the premiership from then-Chairman Hua Guofeng in 1980.

Zhao also was appointed vice chairman of the Central Military Commission, a crucial step to gaining the allegiance of the military, still a powerful force in Chinese politics. The commission still is chaired by Deng, who will continue to use his political weight as the party's elder statesman.

Most important, Zhao seemed to command overwhelming support for the bold experiments in economic and political reforms he outlined in his report to the congress.

There was no sign of the opposition to progressive policies that surfaced in the "anti-bourgeois liberalization" campaign that followed prodemocracy student unrest last winter.

There may be a few people in the nation who oppose reform, a confident Zhao told reporters Monday, but these different points of view "will encourage democratization and ensure that we don't make mistakes."

The show of unity should make it easier for China to attract foreign investors frightened off by fears of policy reversals or another cycle of leftist political campaigns.

It also should help galvanize into action the millions of officials around the country who prefer the safety of the status quo when they are unsure how the winds are blowing in Beijing.

Zhao stressed that China will be in the "primary stage" of socialism until the middle of the 21st century, meaning that ideology must take a back seat to improving people's lives.

Socialism in China, Zhao said, can and must make use of such capitalist concepts as stock markets, private enterprise and labor markets in its drive for increased output.

The nation also must undertake the separation of party and government, he said, putting forth the revolutionary idea that the Communist Party should reduce its direct controls over the nation's business.

China already has begun giving factory managers more responsibility while cutting the authority of often ill-trained party secretaries over operations. But the results have been mixed.

Functionaries in the 46 million-member party have built up an intricate web of favor-sharing, corruption and nepotism that they will not give up willingly.

Even with the full support of the party, economic reforms face daunting problems.

Irrational pricing, a legacy of central planning, has spawned shortages, black markets and inflation.

A loosening of controls accompanying decentralization has worsened such longstanding problems as serious industrial pollution, flagrant safety violations and the production of fake or shoddy goods.

A third of the deficit-ridden budget goes to subsidies, but attempts to remove controls are stymied by strong resistance from a populace that has lived too long with artificially low prices.

The poor resent seeing some of their neighbors enriched by reforms. Chinese "millionaires," who earn more than 10,000 yuan ($2,700) a year, told reporters at the congress they contribute large amounts of cash to their communities, a way of easing income gap tensions.

Zhao also must cope with the rising expectations of a nation tired of political turmoil and eager to enjoy the fruits of economic prosperity.

"Now old people say things aren't bad," said a 15-year-old middle school girl student dressed in a blue ski jacket. "But we young people all think that although the living standard is better than before it still isn't very high. ... We aren't satisfied."

Debates Hardly Action-Packed Affairs

'If people are beginning to doze off during these debates it's not the fault of the six presidential candidates. In fact, it's time to stop knocking the Democratic field. They are not dwarfs.'

straw polls, while the Democrats are threatening to set a new record for the number of candidate debates.

Evangelist Pat Robertson, demonstrating an impressive ability to get his supporters to the site of any straw poll, has shocked some of his GOP rivals and boosting his standing by his showings in several such events.

Robertson hopes to have another impressive turnout for the straw poll at the Florida Republican State convention next week.

The favorite in that poll is Vice President George Bush, but there are rumors in Florida that supporters of Senate GOP leader Bob Dole and Rep. Jack Kemp may side with Robertson in an effort to embarrass the vice president.

Dole and Kemp have said they are not competing for votes in the Florida tally.

Turning out supporters for straw polls does not provide any accurate measure of a campaign's ability to turn out people for statewide caucuses or a primary. But there is no doubt that straw poll victories, meaningless as they be, get attention and are particularly helpful for candidates in a race against the incumbent vice president and the party's Senate leader.

Bush has spared the Republicans from having their contest bogged down with debates. He has refused to accept almost all invitations to argue in public with his rivals.

That's a luxury denied the Democrats so far. They troop around the country like a traveling vaudeville show, stopping in this city and that town long enough to get up on a stage and debate before this and that organization.

At first it seemed to have advantages. It was a way candidates who didn't have easy access to a national forum could get their views known.

But now they are suffering from overkill.

Sunday night they were in New Hampshire debating environmental issues; on Monday it was social policy at Tulane. The subject will be education on Thursday in Iowa and the environment again before the Sierra Club in Iowa next Sunday.

In between they will participate in a forum at the Florida Democratic convention on Saturday.

Maybe the best judgment shown in any debate so far was exercised last weekend by Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri. He passed up the environmental forum in New Hampshire.

Strength For Today

A hurricane can quickly destroy a house. So can termites, but in an entirely different manner. These insidious insects quietly and invisibly eat away the core of planks and beams, and if not controlled will finally send the building crashing to the ground.

People are sometimes destroyed by the hurricanes of great events such as financial loss, gross injustice and disease. But more often the destruction is spread over a long period of time and is brought about unconsciously by moral termites in the form of flaws of character. Animosity and hate, cherished over the years, are one type of termite.

Covetousness, which robs the soul of all its spiritual values, is still another manifestation of the destructive power possessed and utilized by termites.

Budget Talks Stall As Financial World Waits

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole said today that a failure by Congress and President Reagan to reach a deficit-reduction agreement this week would signal the world that "we are just not going to come to grips with a very serious problem."

"I hope those representing the president would be in a position to make some judgments, or even better, that the president might call the leaders together and indicate to us, and we indicate to him at the same time, a willingness to do what we need to do," the Kansas Republican told colleagues.

Congressional leaders and high-level White House representatives have been trying for more than a week to produce a compromise plan for cutting the deficit. Their work has been made more urgent by unrest in world financial markets.

"I'm afraid that if we go over into next week (with the negotiations), it may be perceived as an unwillingness on the part of Congress and the administration to face up to one of the tough issues," Dole said.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, proposed Tuesday that Congress accept more domestic spending cuts than Democrats have said they will take, if President Reagan goes along with some more taxes in the deficit-reduction effort.

The proposal, which also was advocated by Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House Budget Committee, wasn't accepted Tuesday but participants in the closed-door negotiations said the talks weren't bogged down.

Treasury Secretary James Baker, asked if there was any progress, said, "I think a little, yeah."
"We're back talking and that's a positive sign," added Gray. But, he said, "We still have a long way to go, and of course time is running out."

The Gramm-Rudman law requires that Congress and the president approve legislation to reduce the fiscal 1988 deficit by $23 billion, or automatic across-the-board spending cuts will take effect Nov. 20.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said the Democrats will push ahead with their legislative agenda in case the talks fail. He urged the negotiators to come up with a practical deficit-reduction proposal, without political bombshells affecting programs such as Social Security.

"I think we have to put together the kind of a plan that will be supportable by a majority of the members in the House and the Senate," Wright said. "That's the name of the game."

Rep. Tony Coelho of California, the No. 3 Democrat in the House, said Democrats need to push their own legislation forward so Reagan will be given alternatives to the automatic cuts. If not, he said, the Democrats will end up being blamed.

"What you have is an administration trying to pin the tail on the donkey," he said.

Wright has been fighting a GOP revolt that began when the speaker forced a tax bill through the House last week. He also has rescheduled a vote on a huge, $597 billion spending bill until just before the automatic cuts are due to take effect, which would add pressure to that debate.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said that if the budget talks fail to produce results, next week he will bring up the Senate Democrats' version of the tax bill to reduce the deficit.

Even as the leadership stressed the importance of deficit reduction, advocates of various programs were trying to have the cuts directed elsewhere.

"It is essential that any deficit-reduction package recognize that investments in education make good economic sense," Reps. Augustus Hawkins, William Natcher and others said Tuesday in a letter to the House members working on the deficit problem.

Hawkins, D-Calif., is chairman of the Education and Labor Committee. Natcher, D-Ky., is chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on education.

Depression Ebbs In Gulf Waters

MIAMI (AP) — A tropical depression blamed for at least two flooding deaths in the Caribbean fizzled in the Gulf of Mexico today, barely able to muster a little autumn rain for Florida's west coast, forecasters say.

At 9 a.m. EST, forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables said the depression had lost all identifiable circulation and that no further advisories would be issued.

A tropical storm watch posted Tuesday for Florida's central Gulf Coast from Fort Myers to Cedar Key was lifted earlier.

Small-craft advisories continued along the coast of the northeast Gulf of Mexico, but were not associated with the dissipated depression, said forecaster Bob Case.

Cloudy remnants of the depression were causing some lingering showers and thunderstorms over west-central Florida. Some minor flooding was expected in low-lying areas, where the ground was already soaked with 2 to 4 inches of rain during the past week.

The depression's maximum sustained winds never exceeded 35 mph, just below the 39-mph threshold required for it to have become Tropical Storm Gert, the seventh storm of the 1987 Atlantic hurricane season, which began June 1 and ends Nov. 30.

As the 14th depression of the season, it hit Jamaica over the weekend, drowning two women who were crossing a river and leaving three people missing. An 8-year-old girl was injured after a power line fell into a flooded street, authorities said.

It then swept the lower Florida Keys with recorded winds of up to 45 mph, which were related to the depression but not representative of its circulation, forecasters said.

Three of the season's six named storms gathered enough force to become hurricanes. Hurricane Floyd hit the western tip of Cuba before sloshing uneventfully across South Florida and the Bahamas. Emily killed three as it crossed the Dominican Republic before smashing into Bermuda, and Arlene sputtered harmlessly at sea.

Inmate Moved

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Less than seven months after he was given double life sentences for molesting six Madison County children, Andrew "Junior" Chandler has been moved to a medium-security prison 130 miles from his victims, officials said.

The state Department of Correction transferred Chandler Oct. 13 from maximum-security Central Prison in Raleigh to Piedmont Correctional Unit in Salisbury, prison officials said.

Chandler, 30, was sentenced April 15 to life plus 21 years in prison after being convicted of sexually assaulting the preschoolers. Testimony revealed the former Madison Transit Authority bus driver assaulted the children, aged 2 to 5, at a remote dam and bridge near Marshall between January and May 1986.

Death Sentence

RALEIGH (AP) — William Quentin Jones was sentenced to death Tuesday for the March 7 slaying of a Raleigh convenience store customer.

Jones had pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in the death of Edward P. Peebles, 32, and told jurors Monday that he would not shirk if they recommended the death penalty.

"If I get death I'm going to walk into death just like Mr. Peebles walked into it," Jones, of Raleigh, told jurors in Wake County Superior Court. "I'm not going to hesitate. I'm not going to pull back."

Peebles was killed during the robbery of a Fast Fare store. He was in the store to get a cup of coffee when a man entered and fired 10 shots from a 9mm semi-automatic weapon.

DURHAM (AP) — An endowed professorship named for U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford will be established in Duke University's Institute of Policy Sciences and Public Affairs with a $1 million gift from ITT Corp., officials say.

Fossil Is Largest Flying Seabird

WASHINGTON (AP) — History's largest flying seabird, a gull-like creature that glided over ancient oceans on a wingspan of more than 18 feet, has been identified in a fossil dug out of a South Carolina rock formation.

Scientists at the Smithsonian Institution and at the Charleston Museum in Charleston, S.C., said Tuesday that the fossil has been identified as a member of the extinct bird family called pseudodontorn, or bony-toothed birds.

Storrs L. Olson of the Smithsonian said the bird lived about 30 million years ago and was discovered after scientists chipped away hardened sand and silt from a 4-by-5-foot block removed from a Charleston construction site in 1984.

He said the recovered fossil includes "most of the major bones" of the skeleton, including the skull, lower jaw, one leg and most of one wing.

Olson said the bird may have weighed nearly 90 pounds and probably spent most of its life riding wind currents on its 18-foot wing span. The largest living seabird is the wandering albatross, which weighs 20 pounds and has a wing span of 11 feet.

The pseudodontorn is second in size only to a fossil vulturelike bird from Argentina that had a wingspan of 20 feet to 25 feet.

Olson said an examination of the skeleton shows the pseudodontorn lacked the ability to sustain flight on muscle alone, and, thus, must have depended upon winds to soar. He said the bird's humerus, or upper arm bone, could not rotate to achieve the flapping motion that allows most birds to fly.

"It couldn't have had much of a rotary motion at all," said Olson. "All this bird could do is hold its wings out."

The bird's jaw, said the scientist, is lined with a bony structure that resembles teeth, but lacks the dentine and enamel of real teeth. "They look like teeth and functioned like teeth, but were really bone," he said. He said the bird probably lived on squid or fish that it scooped from the ocean and tore apart with its beak.

Olson said the pseudodontorn's jaw hinged in the middle, which would allow the bird to create a pouch to hold fish or food for its young.

Though the family of pseudodontorn birds are now extinct, Olson said they were very successful. They first appeared about about 50 million years ago, survived for about 45 million years, and were represented on every continent. The pseudodontorn family is part of a larger group of birds that include the present day pelican.

Before the South Carolina discovery, only fragments of pseudodontorn fossils had been found.

It is not known why the pseudodontorn became extinct, but Olson speculated that the thing that made it distinctive may also have caused it to disappear.

Stock Woes Cause Americans To Curb Spending

By BILL SING

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

One out of three Americans plans to postpone or reduce a major purchase such as a house, car or vacation because of the recent stock market crash, a prospect that economists fear could lead to a recession, the Los Angeles Times Poll has found.

The market plunge also has made many Americans doubtful about the future and concerned about a possible recession, regardless of whether they own stock or not, the poll found. In fact, Americans who do not own stock are more inclined to cut back on spending as a result of the crash than those who lost money in the collapse.

The results of the poll — conducted by telephone to 2,463 individuals nationwide between last Thursday and Monday — represent the first time spending intentions have been quantified following the crash and broken down specifically in relation to purchases of homes, cars and other big-ticket items.

Consumer spending — which accounts for about two-thirds of U.S. economic activity and thus is critical to the nation's economic health — had already been expected to slow down even before the market crash, in part because consumers have worn themselves out from their high level of spending during earlier stages of the current economic expansion.

But the high level — 31 percent — of Americans indicating they would cut back purchases because of the market crash came as a surprise to some economists who said they did not expect its impact would be felt as wide and as fast, particularly among those who don't own stock.

Most consumers normally don't adjust their plans that quickly in response to external events, said Allen Sinai, chief economist for the brokerage house of Shearson Lehman Bros. Such a finding doesn't bode well for the economy, he and other economists said.

"A 31 percent response is a very quick reaction by consumers. It indicates a lot of consumers are scared by the stock market crash," Sinai said. "If 31 percent is the right number, then we're going to see very substantial weakness in consumer spending."

"There is not necessarily a one-to-one link between a stock market decline and a recession. The real link is what happens to consumer confidence," poll director I.A. Lewis said. Americans' caution as reflected in the poll "has got to have a negative effect on the economy."

Any potential consumer spending cutback now will come at a critical time for the economy. Consumers are entering the key Christmas shopping period and many retailers already have ordered inventories. Any slowdown could result in reduced hiring, widespread price discounting and manufacturing slowdowns.

Also, U.S. auto manufacturers are entering the 1988 model year following cut-rate financing programs for 1987 models that temporarily boosted sales. The ending of those incentives already was expected to slow consumer auto purchases and any further slowdown could lead to layoffs and other production cutbacks.

"If you wanted to pick a good time to test consumer fears, this is it," said A. Gary Shilling, a New York economic consultant.

To be sure, Americans' caution could change to optimism if the stock market recovers or lower interest rates or other factors encourage consumers to boost purchases.

So far, evidence of actual spending cutbacks on homes, cars and other big-ticket items is growing but incomplete.

The Times poll showed that the item that the highest number of consumers planned to postpone or reduce buying was a car (11 percent), followed by a house (10 percent), vacation (10 percent), dining out and entertainment (9 percent), Christmas presents (8 percent) and major appliances (5 percent). The totals exceed 31 percent because some respondents indicated they would postpone or reduce buying of more than one item.

"That isn't going to be good for Detroit," poll director Lewis said. "If people cut back on buying cars, that has a real ripple effect" throughout the economy.

Interestingly, only 31 percent of those who lost money in the crash plan to cut back on spending, versus 33 percent of those without any stocks. That may indicate the fear associated with the crash has been just as unnerving as the actual loss of wealth, economists suggested. It also may reflect the fact that non-stockholders tend to have lower incomes and thus may fear a recession and possible loss of their jobs more than higher-income individuals.

However, the fact that many stock owners plan to cut back spending may be more significant, at least for its impact on big-ticket items. Stock owners, despite being only about one in five of all Americans, buy about 70 percent of the new cars and homes purchased annually in the country, economists say.

Another reflection of consumer caution was the finding that about two in five Americans (43 percent) surveyed said now was a good time to wait on buying things they want and need, versus only one in five (23 percent) who said it was a good time to purchase. The propensity to wait was higher among non-stockholders.

Also showing caution was the more than half (52 percent) who said they were doubtful about the future amid the market crash, versus 29 percent who were unconcerned and 12 percent who were confident of the future.

Americans are mostly optimistic about prospects for the economy. About 65 percent of those surveyed think the odds are less than 50 percent that a recession would start in the next 12 months. Even stockholders who lost money in the crash were optimistic, as 64 percent of them thought the odds were better than 50-50 against a recession.

Of the 19 percent of those surveyed who own stocks, 46 percent lost money in the recent decline versus 39 percent who broke even and 6 percent who made money.

But those who lost money in the crash were not turned off from the market by any means. While the bulk (74 percent) said they don't plan to increase or decrease their stock investing, more than twice as many (17 percent) plan to increase their stocks versus those who will pull back (7 percent).

Would-Be Brokers Have New Thoughts

By RICK GLADSTONE AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market crash has chilled the aspirations of students at many leading business schools and driven some investment-banking candidates to abandon their dreams of a glamorous Wall Street career.

From the ivy-covered halls of Wharton and Columbia to the verdant campuses of Michigan and Berkeley, students, educators and placement counselors say the anxiety level about life after grad school has risen considerably since the Oct. 19 stock collapse.

"It certainly has had an impact, that's for sure," said Randall Powell, assistant dean at the Indiana University School of Business and the head of an informal national group of graduate school career-placement officers.

"The reality has set in that Wall Street is not the gravy train it used to be."

Although major investment firms aren't expected to cut back their recruiting significantly this year, many school officials predict actual hiring will decline sharply, perhaps by more than 50 percent.

Starting salaries will remain unchanged at about $50,000 a year, they say.

Other educators and placement counselors report surging student interest in other career choices, notably business consulting jobs, which historically have multiplied rapidly during times of economic uncertainty.

Even before Black Monday, there was growing fear among students that investment banking's rapid expansion during the past five years was peaking along with the markets. Several major firms have announced significant layoffs.

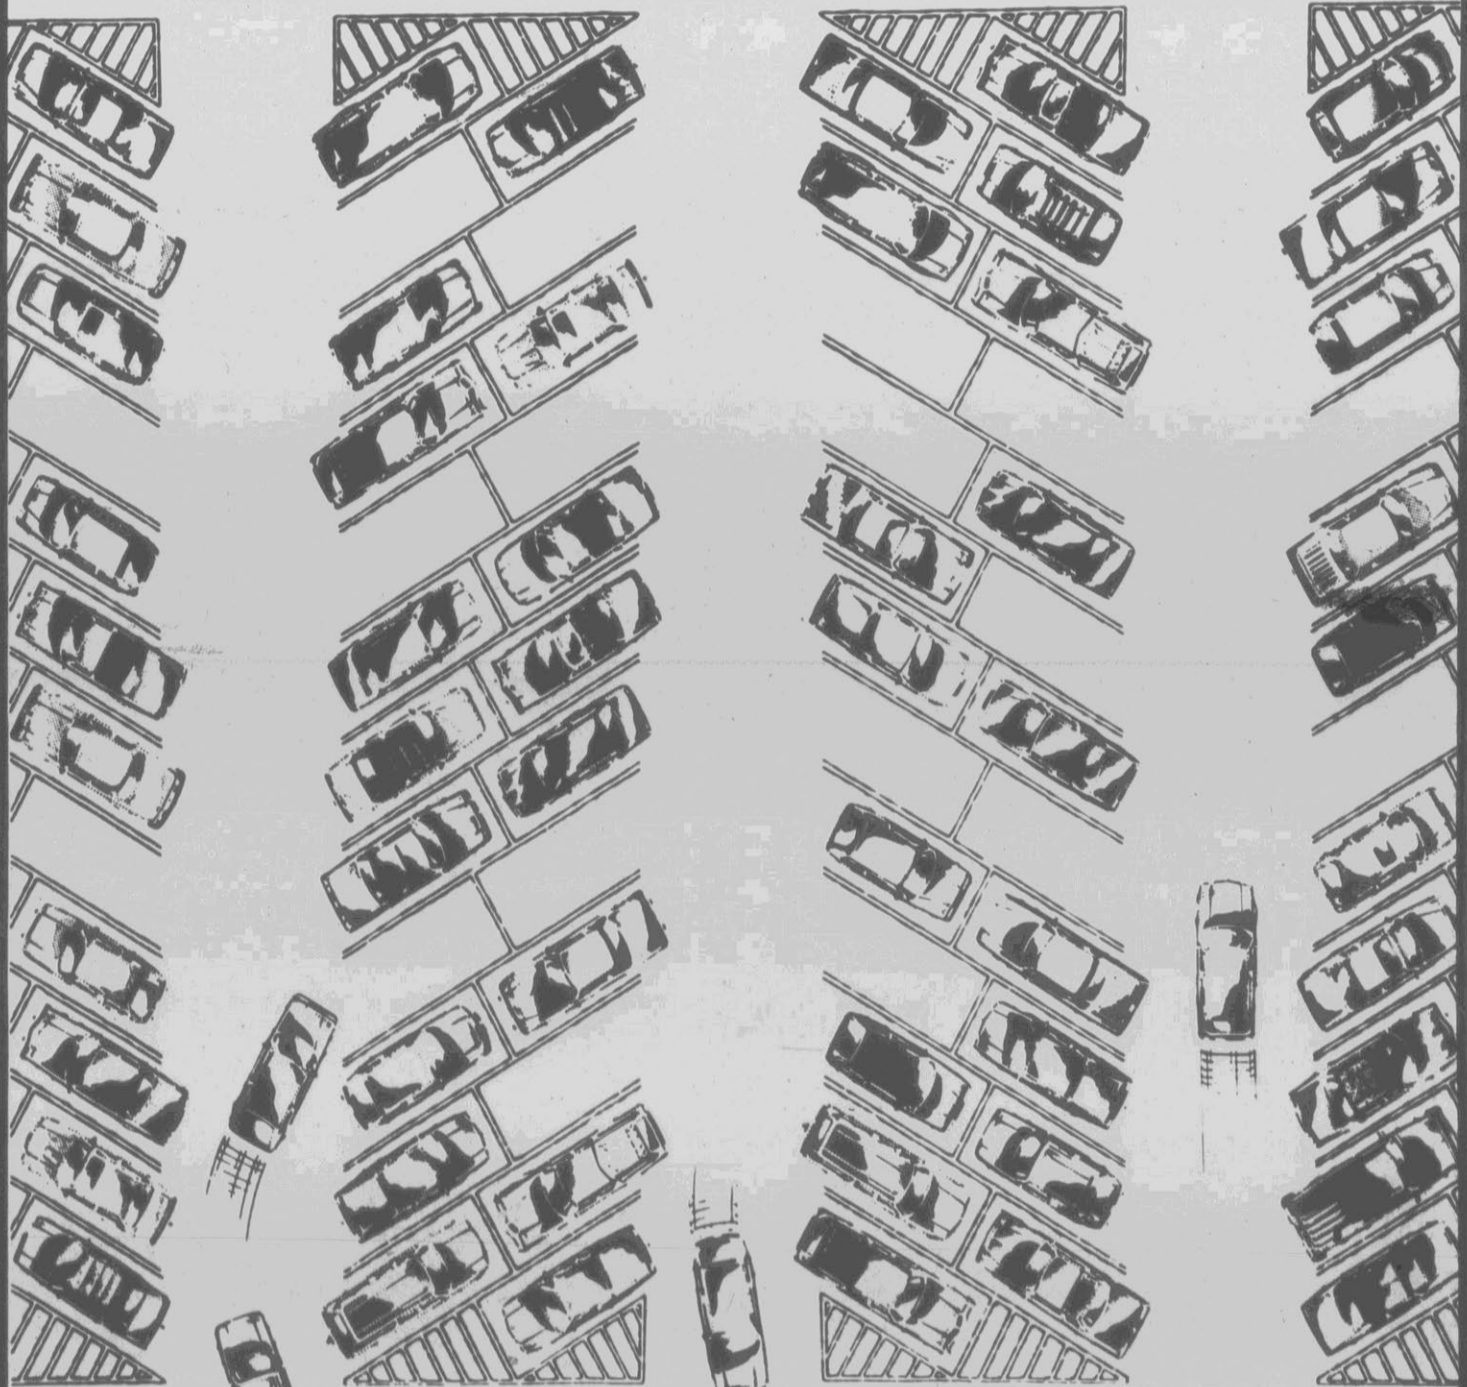

The Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, once regarded as the greatest source of investment banking recruits, says its first-year students have diversified career goals ranging from corporate accounting to social services.

"It's interesting to note that incoming students are less inclined to pursue jobs on Wall Street," said second-year student Wistar Wood, 26, student director of corporate contacts. "Whereas last year investment banking clearly was the job of choice, this year consulting seems to be the rage."

Many second-year students, he said, have become "very jumpy relative to first-year students, and a lot of people who spent summers on Wall Street are nervous and looking to other industries."

Karl Spurzem, a 28-year-old student at Northwestern University's Kellogg School of Management, said he has broadened his job aspirations because of the uncertainty about financial service companies.

Red Tide Spreads South Along N.C. Coast

WILMINGTON (AP) — State environmental officials have extended a ban on shellfishing as giant algae slicks thought to be the first "red tide" ever recorded in North Carolina slowly moves south.

"Mother Nature brought it in, and I guess Mother Nature will take it away," James Sheppard, a spokesman for the N.C. Division of Environmental Management, said Tuesday. "There's no way to predict it, and there's no way to control it."

Shellfishing had been banned along 50 miles of coastline in Carter and Onslow counties Monday after thousands of fish were killed over the weekend around Emerald Isle. Fifteen more miles of beach were closed to shellfishing Tuesday, extending the ban from Marshallburg in Carteret County to West Onslow Bridge at Topsail Island.

Bob Benton, a shellfish sanitation official for the state, surveyed the algae bloom from an airplane Tuesday. It is scattered, he said, but covers "many, many acres" of the ocean, as close as 18 miles from the mouth of the New River Inlet.

Sightings of the yellow algae have been reported as far south as Surf City and Topsail Beach, Surf City Town Manager Troy Davis said Tuesday. The substance has been identified as dinoflagellates, a potentially harmful form of algae that can infest shellfish and cause sickness in humans.

If large amounts of the algae reach shore, as happened last weekend in Carteret County, beach-goers can suffer throat and eye irritation.

Officials closed Bogues Banks beaches and advised that no one eat fish caught there over the weekend.

On Tuesday, Topsail Island residents were warned by a message on cable TV to call Topsail Beach Town Hall if they spot algae, "and stay in your house with your windows closed since the irritants can be carried in the mist."

Aside from that, officials say there's not much they can do. The algae bloom, a natural phenomenon, will live or die according to the whims of temperature, wind and water currents.

"From what we've heard, it's moving south," said Jack Hunter, a staffer at the Marine Fisheries office near Wrightsville Beach. "But I have no way of knowing, one way or another."

Officials from the state Division of Environmental Management are sampling water at Topsail Island and Wrightsville Beach for evidence of the algae.

The algae bloom appears to include dinoflagellates, a microscopic organism that is neurologically toxic, said Violet Stewart, a spokesman for the Florida Department of Natural Resources' Bureau of Marine Research, which has regularly dealt with Gulf Coast red tides since the 1950s.

The algae bloom — a population explosion — is not a sign of pollution or degraded water quality. Even though the slick off the North Carolina coast has a yellow color it is called a "red tide," a term used to describe most abnormal algae growths.

Ms. Stewart said the phenomenon occurs when algae cysts on the ocean floor get too many nutrients and begin blooming and reproducing rapidly. A shift in water currents is often to blame, she said.

Shellfish suck in the toxics and become contaminated. People who eat the shellfish can then be afflicted, most often by tingling and swelling of the lips, throat and mouth. Red tides, which date to 1844, have killed people, but not often in recent years and never in Florida, Ms. Stewart said.

Dinoflagellates can also kill fish during red tides by using up nearly all the oxygen in the water.

Most often, even contaminated shellfish survive. When the bloom passes and enough clean water circulates through the fish to rid it of the toxins, they are OK to eat, said Ms. Stewart.

Unfortunately, however, no one can estimate the length of that cycle. It usually takes two to four weeks but can only begin after the algae bloom has dissipated or moved on. A recent red tide on the Gulf Coast of Texas lasted a month.

Area shellfishermen are worried that if the threat doesn't pass quickly, their infant oyster harvesting season will be ruined.

"Any time we're shut down a week or more, it hurts. And I mean it hurts bad," said Lena Ritter, who shellfishes near the southern end of Topsail Island. That area has not been affected yet, "but I expect any minute for it to be closed," Mrs. Ritter said Tuesday.

The shellfish season, which opened last month, is at its crucial point, Mrs. Ritter said, because in a few weeks it will be too cold to wade out into beds to pluck oysters.

"And even if it opens back up, then the market's going to be hurt because people are going to be afraid to eat them," she said.

Clarence Grant Jr., who runs an oyster house in Sneeds Ferry, said he'll be ordering more fin fish from his suppliers if the shellfish supply comes up short.

"It's aggravating," he said. "Nothing you can do but wait."

Martin Says Coastal Areas Could Handle High-Intensity Development

RALEIGH (AP) — Some communities on North Carolina's coastal sounds could handle high-intensity recreational development without destroying environmentally sensitive areas along the coast, Gov. Jim Martin says.

"I think we can encourage the location of those kind of (developments) at places where we have already overloaded the ecological systems, where we have already overloaded the shellfish beds," Martin said Tuesday at the first meeting of his Coastal Initiative Task Force.

"It may be that there are some areas so sensitive to development, so valuable ... that we might want to acquire them," he said.

Martin said he envisioned development occurring near towns along the sounds, rather than in remote or pristine areas. Community participation in the program would be voluntary, he said.

"Our purpose is not to impose any growth pattern in these areas, but rather to invite them ... and see if they want to participate," he said. "If these communities want development, then there are things we might be able to do to help them."

"Most of the investment I have in mind would be private investment," Martin said.

Martin told the task force to identify those areas best suited for development and protection on the coast.

"Maybe that's too tall an order," Martin said. "Maybe we're not going to be able to do it. Maybe we're going to end up polarizing lots of different groups of people. But I don't think so."

Martin said he had established the task force because of a demand for more water-based recreation facilities along the coast and because of the need for economic development in eastern North Carolina.

Task force members representing communities and development groups reacted favorably to Martin's proposal.

Court Backs Ruling In Prostitution Case

RALEIGH (AP) — A state appeals panel has ruled that people can be convicted of encouraging a minor to become a prostitute even if it was never proved that the minor actually engaged in prostitution.

The three-judge panel of the North Carolina Court of Appeals Tuesday unanimously upheld the convictions of three Onslow County residents charged with encouraging a 15-year-old girl to become a prostitute.

Belynda Mae Morris, Julia Hicks and Russell Wayne Irving had argued in their appeal that they could not be convicted because there was no evidence the girl became a prostitute.

"This argument is totally without merit," Judge Gerald Arnold wrote for the court. "It is the attempt to corrupt a minor with which this statute is concerned. The statute never states or implies that actual acts of prostitution must be committed by the minor."

According to Arnold's opinion, Irving gave a 15-year-old girl his phone number and invited her to spend the night at his home, which she did. While there, Irving and the other defendants told the girl how to be a prostitute, the opinion said.

The defendants told the girl to accost customers at a bus station and to take them to a nearby house. She was told to give the defendants the money she made and that Irving would "buy her nice things," the opinion said.

The three were convicted and sentenced to six-year terms Dec. 10, 1986, in Onslow County Superior Court.

In another case, the appeals court upheld the involuntary manslaughter conviction and eight-year sentence of Jesse Haywood Bundy. He had been charged in Martin County with murdering Ernie Wayne Gardner Sr. on July 5, 1984, after an argument.

Gore Says Primary Is Boost To South

RALEIGH (AP) — The Super Tuesday primaries in more than a dozen Southern and border states will ensure a Democratic candidate that is acceptable to Southerners, presidential hopeful Albert Gore Jr. says.

That will enable the Democratic Party to "break out of the mold of past presidential elections, which has seen the nominating process push all of our candidates over to one side, make them fearful of being outflanked on the left," Gore said Tuesday during a brief campaign visit to Raleigh.

To win the nomination, he said, Democrats in recent elections have had to take leftist positions that made it "extremely difficult" for them to defeat the GOP candidate.

"We're going to do it differently this time," Gore said. "We're going to nominate someone who has a centrist message, who can speak to independents and who can win the general election."

The Tennessee senator released the names of 28 North Carolina legislators supporting him. He said polls suggested he was gaining support more rapidly than any other Democratic contender.

Among the legislators who endorsed Gore were several members of the Democratic leadership, including Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee; and Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, chairman of the Senate Environment Committee.

Also, Gore enlisted the support of the House chairmen of two joint appropriation subcommittees: Reps. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, and Bob Hunter, D-McDowell.

Airline Merger

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has refused to delay the merger of USAir and Piedmont airlines while it considers a competitor's challenge to the Transportation Department's approval of the deal.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday rejected the petition for an emergency stay of the merger that was filed by America West Inc., of Phoenix, Ariz.

The two regional airlines are scheduled to complete the merger today.

Health Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — After more than two years of searching, an administrator has been appointed to oversee the daily operations of the health plan for state employees and teachers.

Insurance Commissioner Jim Long Tuesday named David G. DeVries to the politically sensitive post, saying finding a qualified person to take the job had been "a difficult challenge."

DeVries will serve a four-year term at an annual salary of $71,892. His contract began Monday and expires Nov. 1, 1991. The post has been vacant since the General Assembly created it in July 1985.

The plan pays out $250 million a year in benefits and provides insurance to 425,000 state employees, teachers and their dependents.

Eulogy

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Dr. Billy Graham remembered the Rev. Grady Wilson as a man who loved people and received love in return, often from strangers.

"Grady felt at home with the rich and the poor," Graham said in his eulogy Tuesday at the First Baptist Church in Charlotte. "People felt he loved them. It was something in the way he smiled, something in the way he talked that was like no one else I've ever known. He could win their hearts."

Wilson, the first associate Graham picked for his evangelistic team, traveled with him for 30 years. He died Friday at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

State Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — State governments spent more than $500 per resident on educational programs last year, led by Alaska which more than tripled the average, the Census Bureau reported Tuesday.

North Carolina ranked 39th, with $667 per resident in education spending and total per capita spending of $1,482, the report said.

Overall, the 50 state governments spent $424 billion in 1986, more than half of it for education and welfare programs.

The $140 billion spent on education included $82 billion to local governments for schools, $48 billion for colleges and universities and $10 billion for other educational activities, the bureau said in its annual report, "State Government Finances."

Examiner

RALEIGH (AP) — Dr. John D. Butts Jr. of Durham has been named chief medical examiner of North Carolina.

Butts, who becomes only the second person to hold the position, has been acting chief medical examiner for more than a year. He replaces Dr. Page Hudson, who resigned last year to teach and conduct research at East Carolina University.

During more than 11 years in the Office of Chief Medical Examiner in Chapel Hill, Butts also has served as associate chief medical examiner. He is an associate professor of pathology at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine.

Smuggling Charges Returned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Japanese businessmen and two Hungarian diplomats have been indicted on charges of smuggling high-technology laser equipment from the United States to Hungary.

The 15-count indictment, which was handed down Tuesday by a federal grand jury in Asheville, N.C., capped a three-year investigation by federal authorities into the diversion of U.S. high-technology equipment to the Soviet bloc.

The Japanese and Hungarians are accused of smuggling an American-made laser trimming system from America through Japan to Hungary, in an effort to circumvent U.S. law prohibiting sale of high-technology devices with military applications to communist countries.

Those charged are Yoshio Fujinuma and Keisuke Katsuta and their company, Kurimoto Trading Co. Ltd. of Tokyo. The two Hungarian diplomats are Istvan Rona and Clara Uitz, who were based in Tokyo at the time of the alleged crime, which the indictment said took place from May 1982 through Nov. 7, 1983.

None of the four has been arrested and their exact whereabouts are not known, Commerce Department spokesman Donald Creed said.

Paul Freedenberg, acting Commerce undersecretary for export administration, said this type of laser trimmer was a key component in the production of semiconductors used in computers.

"This semiconductor manufacturing equipment is highly sought by Soviet-bloc countries for military modernization," Freedenberg said in a statement.

According to the indictment, Uitz and Rona arranged for the two Japanese to purchase the laser trimmer in the United States through a North Carolina businessman, Charles Moyer.

Moyer, 62, was arrested in Charlotte, N.C., on Sept. 24 by special agents of the U.S. Commerce Department and pleaded guilty to charges stemming from his involvement in the scheme.

After purchase and delivery of the equipment to Moyer's North Carolina company, the indictment alleges, Katsuta arranged to have the system exported to Japan.

Embattled Durham Mayor Wins Second Term

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
Incumbent Durham mayor Wib Gulley, who faced an unsuccessful recall drive last year, has easily won a second term, defeating Howard Clement 12,896 to 8,801 in unofficial returns.

Conservative Christians mounted an unsuccessful recall drive last summer after Gulley signed an anti-discrimination proclamation some viewed as endorsing homosexual rights.

But Gulley said Tuesday the issue had little effect on the race and that the outcome showed "the people across the board in Durham want strong growth-management, protection of neighborhoods, protection of the environment, and economic development that includes everybody in the community."

Gulley said his endorsement by the influential Durham Committee on the Affairs of Black People was an important factor. The group endorsed Gulley, a white, instead of Clement, a black who had feuded with the committee leadership.

"What I received tonight was the support of the majority of the black and white citizens all over Durham," Gulley said.

Voters across the state went to the polls to select mayors and town council members and to vote on local bond issues. Many candidates were unopposed.

In Carrboro, challenger Ellie Kinnaird unseated Mayor Jim Porto. With all five precincts reporting in the non-partisan election, Kinnaird had 793 votes to 646 for Porto.

Competition was fierce in Clemmons, a newly incorporated Forsyth County town holding its first election. Pat Sheppard was elected to a two-year term as Clemmons mayor, getting 1,086 votes to 635 for Mike Curry and 428 for Dennis Brewer. Winners in the town council races were Marvin Conley, Warren Kasper, Nat Swanson and Bill Tschopp.

Clemmons voters also narrowly defeated a $12 million bond referendum for sewer improvements. The bond issue was opposed by 1,087 voters, while 1,041 voted for it.

The mayoral race in Greensboro was perhaps the most intense since 1973, when the post changed from being a city council appointment to an elective post.

With all 45 precincts reporting, former four-term city council member Vic M. Nussbaum had 15,754 votes to 12,636 votes for P. David Brown, who never has held a municipal office.

Robert Mays Jr., the only Greensboro City Council member opposed in a re-election bid, retained his seat by a 28-vote margin, while council newcomers easily won the other three contested district races.

In complete, unofficial returns, Alma S. Adams won in District 2; Mays in District 3; W. K. Phipps in District 4, and William Burckley in District 5. District 1 incumbent Earl Jones was unopposed.

In High Point, Mayor Judy Mendenhall was unseated by former

Charlotte Rejects Gantt

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Sue Myrick rode a wave of unhappiness over Charlotte's congested roads to become the first woman mayor of North Carolina's largest city, shocking two-term incumbent Harvey Gantt.

"This was the one thing the people (were) most upset about from the beginning to the end," Mrs. Myrick said of the crowded roads. "I offered some solutions and the people went in my favor."

Gantt, the first black mayor of Charlotte, acknowledged that voters "felt her solutions were better than mine." Asked whether his organization had been outworked by the Myrick campaign, Gantt responded, "Nobody outworks me."

With all 99 precincts reporting unofficial returns, Mrs. Myrick, a former city council member, had 47,311 votes to 46,296 for Gantt.

"I feel really fabulous, I can't believe it really happened," said a jubilant Mrs. Myrick, who had refused to accept victory until all the votes were counted.

Gantt said he was disappointed with the results, but had no plans to ask for a recount.

mayor Roy Culler. The race was non-partisan for the first time, but Ms. Mendenhall is a Republican and Culler a Democrat.

Culler had 5,077 votes to 4,179 for Ms. Mendenhall in the first election under High Point's new ward system.

Two blacks, John Langford and the Rev. David Baker, were elected to High Point's city council, which previously was all-white.

Burlington voters approved a mixed-drink referendum.

Two Raleigh City Council members apparently were unseated. Unofficial returns showed challenger Geoff Elting with 1,962 votes to 1,792 for Mort Congleton. In another district, Mary Watson Nooe had 1,696 votes to 1,549 for incumbent Ed Walters.

Asheville Mayor Louis Bisette, a Republican, held off a challenge from Democrat Leroy Ray. Bisette, an attorney who in 1985 became the city's first directly elected mayor in 58 years, captured 5,369 votes to Ray's 1,995.

Five of six Democratic city councilmen triumphed in Asheville. Republican newcomer Russ Martin unseated Democrat George Tisdale, who placed seventh in the race for six council seats.

Former City Manager Ken Michalove, running for a second term on the city council, was top vote-getter with 5,239 votes. Norma Price got 5,186 votes, Mary Lloyd Frank, 4,858; Walter Boland, 4,722; Wilhelmina Bratton, 4,572; Martin, 4,168; Tisdale, 4,133; and Republican Robert Mayhew with 3,524 votes.

In the Harnett County town of Angier, Jack Marley's 24-year reign as mayor ended. Billy Surles received 258 votes to 209 for Marley. Maxine Pendergrass got 17 votes.

Another upset occurred in Carolina Beach, where challenger Hubert Vincent rode a wave of voter anger to victory over Mayor Neil Pharr. Vincent received 643 votes to 278 or Pharr.

The campaign was dominated by the disclosure this summer that the town has failed since 1983 to collect as much as $516,595 in development fees. Last week, the town council decided against releasing a special attorney's report on the matter.

Rejecting the call to "keep Davie dry," residents of the southern Davie County town of Cooleemee voted for sales of liquor, beer and wine in their community.

Voters in Fayetteville elected longtime councilman J.L. Dawkins to a two-year term as mayor without opposition, while incumbent mayors Al Brafford in Hope Mills and Vernon Hobson in Spring Lake were re-elected.

James B. "Jick" Garland unseated incumbent Harry Connor in Tuesday's Gastonia mayoral election. Garland received 5,563 votes to 3,193 for Connor.

Jerry Campbell won the Lincoln town mayor's race over Republican Charles Eurey, leading a Democratic sweep of the town election.

In the mountain town of Laurel Park, Mayor Pro Tem George S. Knopf was elected mayor.

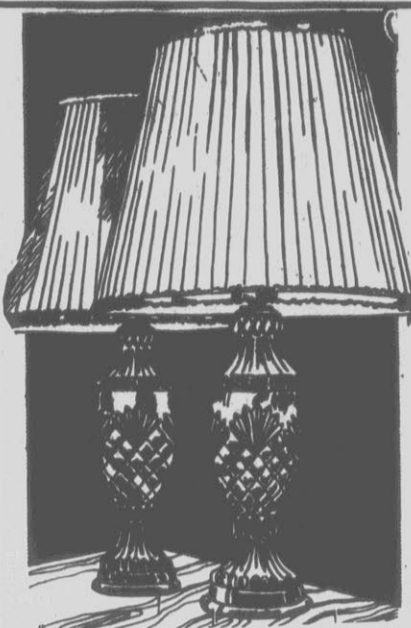

In Thomasville, James Norton was re-elected mayor in a non-partisan race, getting 1,777 votes to 1,156 for Zeb Hamner. The town also defeated four incumbents in electing an entirely new seven-member town council under a new ward system. Glenn A. Brooks and J.W. Mathis became Thomasville's first-ever black councilmen.

Roger P. Swisher reclaimed the Kernersville mayor's post, which he had held 21 years until being upset in 1985 by John W. Lain. This time, Swisher got 837 votes to Lain's 621.

Forsyth County voters overwhelmingly approved $43.7 million worth of school, health, technical college and library bonds. Unofficial results showed schools getting the most support, with 17,999 people, or 65 percent, voting for the $30 million package and 9,477 voting against it.

'Top Cookie' Debbi Fields Has Recipe For Success

By JEANNIE STEIN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

PARK CITY, Utah — There is a black-and-white photograph of Randy Fields' wife hanging on the wall of his office. In the picture, she is standing behind a podium, smiling a brilliant 1,000-watt smile, her fists raised in the air.

"That," Randy Fields says emphatically, "is Debbi. Of all the thousands of pictures that have been taken of her, that says it all. It gives me goose bumps just to look at it."

If the essence of Debbi Fields can be captured in one picture, it might as well be this one. The president and chief executive officer of Mrs. Fields Inc. does more than shepherd her wildly successful, multimillion-dollar Mrs. Fields cookie empire. As company founder, she is also its spokeswoman, head cheerleader, quality-control fanatic, employee booster, demanding boss and even occasional over-the-counter cookie saleswoman.

Now in the midst of personal and professional expansion — she is expecting her fourth child and the company has just launched a candy-making venture — she has written her autobiography, entitled appropriately enough, "One Smart Cookie," a true American success story of the daughter of a welder and the youngest of five girls, who herself always felt unpopular, who lacked a college degree and was labeled a low achiever but who, nevertheless, managed to rise out of it all at the age of 20 and, using a borrowed $50,000, begin to build her dream.

Today, at 30, Debbi Fields remains the driving force behind a company that last year had $87 million in sales. The dream is clearly alive. And the woman who remains relentlessly perky and boundlessly energetic through a day packed with meetings and telephone calls clearly loves it.

What makes Debbi run? What makes a woman totally commit her life to selling, as the company jargon goes, a warm and wonderful cookie in a feel-good way?

Fields is in her office at 8:30 a.m. She furiously pushes buttons on her desk phone while her eyes focus on a two-inch stack of sales updates for the more than 500 red-and-white cookie stores in the United States, Japan, Hong Kong, Britain, Canada and Australia.

Her right hand, when not working the phone, is clutching a mug of decaf or jotting notes in an overstuffed day planner. She is a blur of motion.

The office reflects its occupant. The desk is carved oak, an antique. Nearby is an armoire in the same style, a personal computer, a white love seat and two matching chairs, two bouquets of fresh flowers, a large basket of dried flowers and a few bowls of candy that she guarantees will be gone by the end of the day.

On the walls are framed photos, mementos and several portraits of her three daughters — Jessica, 8; Janessa, 6, and Jennifer, 3 — and their artwork, also framed. A hand-stitched pillow with the company's motto — "Good enough never is" — sits on the love seat.

"We've got some success stories here," Fields says, continuing to tap out phone numbers while looking at sales figures. The company's new computer system, using software designed by her husband, who is chairman of the board and the chief financial officer of the company, links her with all the stores and regional managers, calculates hourly sales goals and compares them with sales the same day a year ago.

Her new phone system allows employees to relay urgent and not-so-urgent messages, numbering about 100 a day, that she can tap into whenever she wants. "You can't stop listening to people that work and support you," she says. "I want the people in this organization to be happy."

Fields' phone conversations with employees start out in personal territory and quickly move to business.

"Hello, Mitch! Good morning! It's your birthday? You were No. 1 for yesterday! How's Pat doing? Is everything OK from surgery? Good. Now, your one store is down 56 percent. That's your new store. You've got to figure out how much you're missing your sales target. You've got to find out the reason behind it. ... Now, your new manager needs to come to work in a tie. He's got a terrific personality and he's very enthusiastic. Give him six months and he'll be great. ... Now, what other little mountains can I move for you?"

Her husband wanders into her office from his across the hall, stirring a glass of iced tea. "Do you want some?" he asks. "It's instant and it's yucky but you can have some."

Randy and Debbi met in the Denver airport when she was 18 years old and contemplating a life as a ski bunny. He was 28 and a successful financial consultant. Eventually, she says, she proposed and he declined. Then she gave him an ultimatum, and he relented.

As proud as she was of her husband's success, there was nothing that she could put her own signature on.

"When I was growing up," she says, "I always thought I was special and that was always very painful for me because it was always in my mind but not necessarily in anyone else's. My parents — primarily my father — never said, 'You do something uniquely well.' It was always in the context of, 'We love everybody equally.' That drove me crazy. Even on his deathbed, he said he loved me as much as all the others."

A mid-morning, Fields dashes out of her office and walks upstairs to the mall's main level to survey the scene at the Mrs. Fields store. "Oh, good, you're sampling!" she tells the manager.

Sampling was her original road to success. With her bank loan, her husband's skepticism and no support from her parents, 20-year-old Debbi, who had been baking for seven years, opened the first Mrs. Fields Chocolate Chippery (as it was called in those days) in Palo Alto, Calif., in August 1977. By noon of the first day, no one had bought a single cookie so she took a tray of them into the mall and gave them away. The return interest of those willing to go back into the store to pay for seconds netted her a first-day sales of $75.

Today the company — which refuses to franchise but went public in May 1986, and is listed on the London Stock Exchange — also owns La Petite Boulangerie, which is a chain of 125 bakery cafes bought from Pepsico in April; Jessica's Cookies and Famous Chocolate Chip Cookies, two cookie store chains located primarily in the East; Janessa's, a retail store for handmade gifts; and Jenny's Swings, which sells children's playwear.

The company's test kitchen is in the basement of a building adjacent to her office. The top two floors serve as classrooms for Cookie College, a new enterprise Fields started this year to bring managers to the headquarters for a week of intensive training and personal meetings. "I like to get to know them as people, not as numbers," she says.

"Hi!" she says, making her way through the classrooms.

"Hi!" the students respond, their faces beaming.

"How are you doing?" she asks. "Great!" comes the reply in unison. Another class applauds wildly as she walks through the room.

"They see her as a goddess," Sally White, the director of marketing, said later.

Waiting for Fields in the test kitchen is Martha Shepherd, who started with the company as director of training and development five years ago and now develops recipes for new products. Shepherd was behind the new line of ice creams and today is at work on a cream cheese frosting for banana-walnut muffins, an idea that arose from Fields' habit of eating banana-nut bread with cream cheese.

"I know a lot about what Debbi wants now," Shepherd says. "When it hits your taste buds it has to knock your socks off."

Fields tastes the frosted muffins, chews thoughtfully, and pronounces the first one "too goopy" and the flavor an ambivalent "Eh."

"My strength is my inability to compromise," she says. "If I really believe in something, you're not going to get me to budge. My weakness? I hate to lose. I'm highly competitive. And I don't think I'm as patient as I need to be. That's going to take another good 10 years years and more kids to get there."

Fields' lunch is upstairs in the company's experimental restaurant, called Spike's Grill, which takes up the top floor of the mall and serves hamburgers, chili, salads, chicken, steaks and desserts. Company headquarters are in the basement of the Main Street Mall, a complex she and her husband built to experiment with their retail stores.

By mid-afternoon, Fields is in her office to taste-test cookies there with Shepherd. She samples and rejects them all. There is no middle ground. It is either "perfect" or "disgusting."

Then it's upstairs to the cookie store to learn how to operate a new scale for her products, which are sold by the pound.

Even while working the scale, Fields is selling cookies to customers. She truly appears to be in her element.

"Where are you from?" she asks two girls from Brigham Young University in Provo who tell her they admire her success. "What are you majoring in? International relations? Give us a call when you graduate!"

"Hi!" she says to another woman. "I like your sweater! Do you want anything to drink with this? Come back and see us! We get lonely!"

Trusted Neighbor Has New Newspaper Idea

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You advised readers not to cancel their newspapers when they go on vacation because someone at the newspaper may tip off professional burglars as to when they're leaving town and coming back. You suggested that a trusted neighbor be asked to pick up the newspaper.

Well, I happen to be one of those trusted (and practical) neighbors who picks up the newspaper for a vacationing neighbor.

However, just to confuse the burglars, when my neighbor leaves town without canceling his paper, I cancel mine and read his! — PRACTICAL INLA.

DEAR ABBY: As the father of a daughter returning to college for her second year, I am upset and angry. I realize college students are considered adults, but are they really ready for this enormous step? I think the larger percentage of students are still children being forced to grow up too fast.

I get angry when I think of how hard my wife and I have to work to earn the $16,000-plus that it costs for tuition. But the cost doesn't anger me as much as the lack of moral supervision these "adults" get at college. When I visited our daughter's campus last fall, I was shocked to discover that the dorms and students' townhouses reminded me of the brothels I have read about.

I don't care how many talks parents have with their children, it's not fair to subject them to this kind of temptation. I wonder how many parents feel as uneasy as I do. Or have our moral standards sunk so low that parents are no longer concerned with the morals of their children? This may be an interesting poll for you to take. Maybe the results would bring about a change on our campuses. Then, instead of passing out condoms, the schools should stop the cohabitation going on at our supposedly respectable campuses! — UPSET PARENT

DEAR UPSET: Most parents are very much concerned about the morals of their children, but when a grown child goes off to college, parents cannot expect the college authorities to assume guardianship of their children's sexual behavior. I think college students bring their moral values to college — they don't find them there. If young adults are inclined to fool around, they will find a way to do it on their lunch hour — living at home.

DEAR ABBY: I was married in June 1985 in a Catholic ceremony. The marriage didn't last long; we split two months later. We were legally divorced and now I am seeking an annulment from the church. Once that goes through, can I truthfully say I was never married? The courts say the marriage did exist. The church says it didn't, and my analyst says, "Use your judgment and say whatever is appropriate to whomever you're with."

I would like to forget I ever met the bum. Would I be lying if I told everybody I had never been married? — NO LIAR IN KANSAS

DEAR NO LIAR: Yes. You were married briefly, and that's what you should say. The details concerning the annulment and divorce can come later. Divorce is nothing to be ashamed of. It occurs in the best of families. There's only one thing that is worse than making a mistake — and that's perpetuating it.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Weekend Crafts Fair Planned

WILLIAMSTON — The annual Roanoke Arts and Crafts Guild Fair will be held Nov. 14-15 at Williamston High School.

The Roanoke Carolina Guild is under the sponsorship of the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service of Martin and Bertie counties.

Craftspeople from Martin, Bertie, Pitt Hertford and Washington counties will be demonstrating and selling baskets, quilting, smocking, scherenschnitte, fabric stitchery, wood crafts, seat weaving, paintings, jewelry, pine needle craft, crochet, knitting, stained glass, egypt, porcelain painting and dolls.

A guest craftsperson, Emily Harrell of Hertford, will be demonstrating Armenian lace.

The fair will be open Nov. 14 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Nov. 15 from 1:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Martin County Extension Homemakers will operate a concession booth Saturday.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Video Program Given At Meet

A video presentation of the use of complementary colors by Jenny Beyer was presented by Margaret Hadden.

Carol Volkman, Vivian Purvis and Zelda Fasciano placed entries in the Pamlico River Guild's Quilt Show held in Washington, N.C., winning three blue and three red ribbons.

Two demonstrations on quilting were presented by Margaret Hadden, Kay Clemens, Vivian Purvis, Frances Wilson, Sylvia Wheelless and Mrs. Fasciano at the Pitt County Fair. Several members also entered exhibits in the fair and a number of awards were won.

Guild members will have a workshop on Ronald McDonald Quilts Thursday at Calico Square from 1-4 p.m.

The next guild meeting will be held Nov. 17 at the Community Building.

Couple Marries In Newport

NEWPORT — Monica Darlene Wyatt and Kenneth Joel Ginn were united in marriage Oct. 17 at 2 p.m. in the Newport Baptist Church. The Rev. Terry Q. Farmer conducted the double ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Paul Wyatt of North Myrtle Beach, S.C., are parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ginn of Snow Hill are parents of the bridegroom.

The couple lives in Greenville after a wedding trip to Washington, D.C.

Fifth Annual Show Scheduled

WINSTON-SALEM — A craft show and sale will be held at the Gingham Dollhouse Nov. 27-28. A portion of the profits will be given to Crisis Control Center.

Tommy's teachers always said he could do better. Sylvan showed him how

Like many students, Tommy was smarter than his grades suggested. For some reason, he just wasn't doing as well as his teachers, and parents, knew he could.

At Sylvan we guarantee that Tommy will reach his full potential. It's a promise. And we back it with this simple guarantee: your child's reading or math skills will improve by at least one full grade level after just 36 instruction hours. Or we'll provide up to 12 additional hours of instruction at no further cost. Improvement will be measured by a nationally-recognized achievement test, given before and after instruction at Sylvan.

The Sylvan Guarantee
Your child will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in math or reading skills after 36 hours of instruction, or we will continue up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost.

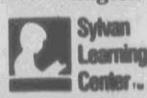

Measurement will be based on a nationally-recognized achievement test for improvement in either reading (comprehension or vocabulary) or math (computation or application).

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined moderately in active trading today as Wall Street kept groping for a stable position after last month's crash.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 11.94 to 1,951.59 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 5 to 2 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 356 up, 911 down and 414 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 47.44 million shares as of 10 a.m. EST.

Analysts said the market was confronted with weakness in the dollar in foreign exchange and jittery showings by other stock markets around the world.

Among actively traded blue chips, Ford Motor dropped 1 to 75 1/4, Eastman Kodak lost 7/8 to 53 3/4, and Exxon was down 1/4 at 43 3/4. But General Motors rose 7/8 to 59 3/4 and American Express gained 1/4 to 25 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell .97 to 139.14. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 3.29 at 252.20.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 50.56 to 1,963.53.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 5 to 2 in the overall tally on the NYSE, with 493 up, 1,211 down and 292 unchanged. Volume on the Big Board came to 227.84 million shares, against 176.04 million in the previous session.

Massive Drug Ring Reported Smashed

MIAMI (AP) — Federal officials announced today they have cracked a drug smuggling ring described as the largest and most sophisticated ever discovered in the United States.

The ring smuggled 20,000 pounds of cocaine into the United States for the Medellin Cartel of Colombia, considered the biggest supplier of cocaine for the U.S. market, between 1982 and 1986, federal authorities said.

"This is the largest transportation network used by the Medellin Cartel," said Bill Perry, acting special agent for the FBI in Miami. He said the bust "dismantled this organization."

The ring contracted with Medellin leader Jorge Ochoa Vasquez, officials said. Another alleged cartel leader, Carlos Lehder Rivas, is on trial in Jacksonville on drug smuggling charges but U.S. Attorney Leon Kellner said he was not connected with this investigation.

Patrick O'Brien, head of the U.S. Customs office here, said the ring used spotter planes, monitored the movement of Customs patrols and contracted to buy sophisticated radio beacons used to locate cocaine shipments dumped into the ocean for later retrieval to be taken ashore. The beacons led to the naming of the case, "Operation Beacon," and were in part responsible for the federal breakup of the ring, officials said.

O'Brien said a man the ring contacted to build the beacons had also worked with Customs and gave authorities information on the ring's activities.

The ring was led by Michael Munday and James Coley, authorities said. Coley was already in custody and Munday escaped a raid last year by threatening to blow up a squad of agents who had arrived at a Florida airport to arrest him.

Munday, still at large, threatened to blow up a gasoline tank with a flare gun, which held off agents long enough to allow him to escape, authorities said.

Thirty people have been indicted in the investigation. Federal officials said today that 11 had been arrested in Florida and Kentucky. Seven others were already in custody, two were already considered fugitives and the rest were being sought today.

North Carolina Will Join '88 Voter Awareness Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has been chosen to participate in a program designed to heighten voter awareness for the 1988 presidential campaign, officials said today.

In "U.S. 88: A New Road to the White House," citizens will participate in policy forums that will produce policy questions for presidential candidates, leaders of the program said.

"A lot of us who have been involved in public life over the years have become increasingly concerned with modern-day campaigning, with the fact that the 30-second (television) spot, the photogenic quality of the candidate, seems to transcend the major issues that are going to have to be address," former Gov. Jim Holshouser said.

He said he did not expect the program to diminish the influence of television commercials in campaigns, but that he hoped it would produce a better informed electorate.

Gov. Jim Martin, the state Democratic and Republican parties, and other groups ranging from the American Association of Retired Persons to the League of Women Voters have endorsed the program.

It calls for creation of a 600-member "North Carolina Citizens Assembly" reflecting the demographic and political diversity of the state, said Tim Noonan, an official with the North Carolina Leadership Forum who is heading the project in the state.

The assembly will hold eight to 10 meetings across the state to discuss such issues as agriculture, the federal budget, trade and foreign policy. The group will develop questions that candidates will be asked to address in debates and position papers.

Citizens can apply to the Leadership Forum for membership in the assembly.

The program has worked well in Iowa and New Hampshire, attracting rank-and-file voters who ordinarily might not have gotten involved in politics, said Larry Hansen, national director of U.S. 88.

Error Cited

CHICAGO (AP) — An air traffic controller's error probably caused a near-collision in which two passenger planes flew within 75 feet of each other, the Federal Aviation Administration says.

The pilot of a United Boeing 737 told authorities he took evasive action to avoid colliding with an Air Wisconsin commuter jet, when he was taking off and the commuter plane was landing, FAA spokeswoman Marjorie Kriz said Tuesday.

"The near mid-air collision involved a probable operational error by an air traffic controller," the FAA said in a preliminary finding.

United Flight 973, carrying 95 passengers and six crew members Thursday from Chicago to Omaha, Neb., had received clearance and was taking off from O'Hare International Airport when the pilot noticed the commuter plane, Ms. Kriz said.

Nuclear Plant Survives Vote

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Maine Yankee, the state's only nuclear power plant, weathered a shutdown drive for the third time this decade. The outcome represented a triumph for pocketbook politics.

After outspending anti-nuclear foes by a factor of nearly 10, supporters of the Wiscasset reactor outpolled them by a margin approaching 3-2 on Tuesday.

With 641 of 670 precincts reporting, plant supporters led 218,060 to 152,134, or 59 percent to 41 percent, according to unofficial returns.

Maine Yankee advocates emphasized the plant's economic value in generating power for about 2.5 cents per kilowatt-hour. Citing the expense of replacement power and compensation for out-of-state owners, the pro-plant forces warned a shutdown would cost more than $1 billion.

In mounting a third successful defense, the Save Maine Yankee forces overcame a determined battle by the Maine Nuclear Referendum Committee to make nuclear power synonymous with nuclear waste.

Alva Morrison of the anti-nuclear group issued a new challenge to the owners of the plant.

"We'll see if they hold to some of the promises they made in this campaign," he said. "We'll see if they keep high-level nuclear waste out of the state."

The anti-nuclear group had linked the continued operation of Maine Yankee with the state's effort to eliminate itself as a candidate for a federal repository for high-level nuclear waste.

The ballot question envisioned a mid-1988 shutdown of the 800-plus-megawatt coastal generator, which would come 20 years before its license expires. No state has ever voted to close an operating nuclear plant.

The top executive of the plant's chief owner immediately offered an olive branch to the unsuccessful opposition.

Oliver North Goes Before Grand Jury

WASHINGTON — Former National Security Council aide Lt. Col. Oliver R. North appeared today before a federal grand jury investigating the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

North began testifying late this morning following a brief shouting match in the hallway outside the grand jury room between his attorney and a prosecutor working for independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

"We've always followed the law, we've always followed the law," defense attorney Brendan Sullivan shouted at Michael Bromwich, an associate independent counsel.

North is under investigation for organizing the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

North's grand jury testimony began after he met in an adjoining room with prosecutors and his attorneys. A minute after he entered the grand jury room he emerged to consult with Sullivan and defense lawyer Barry Simon. North then reentered the grand jury room to be questioned again.

North, who wore his Marine uniform, had been fighting a subpoena issued by Walsh's office earlier this year seeking a sample of his handwriting. After a series of court challenges to Walsh's prosecutorial authority, the federal appeals court here upheld the validity of the subpoena.

North's lawyers, however, had indicated they would file an appeal to the Supreme Court.

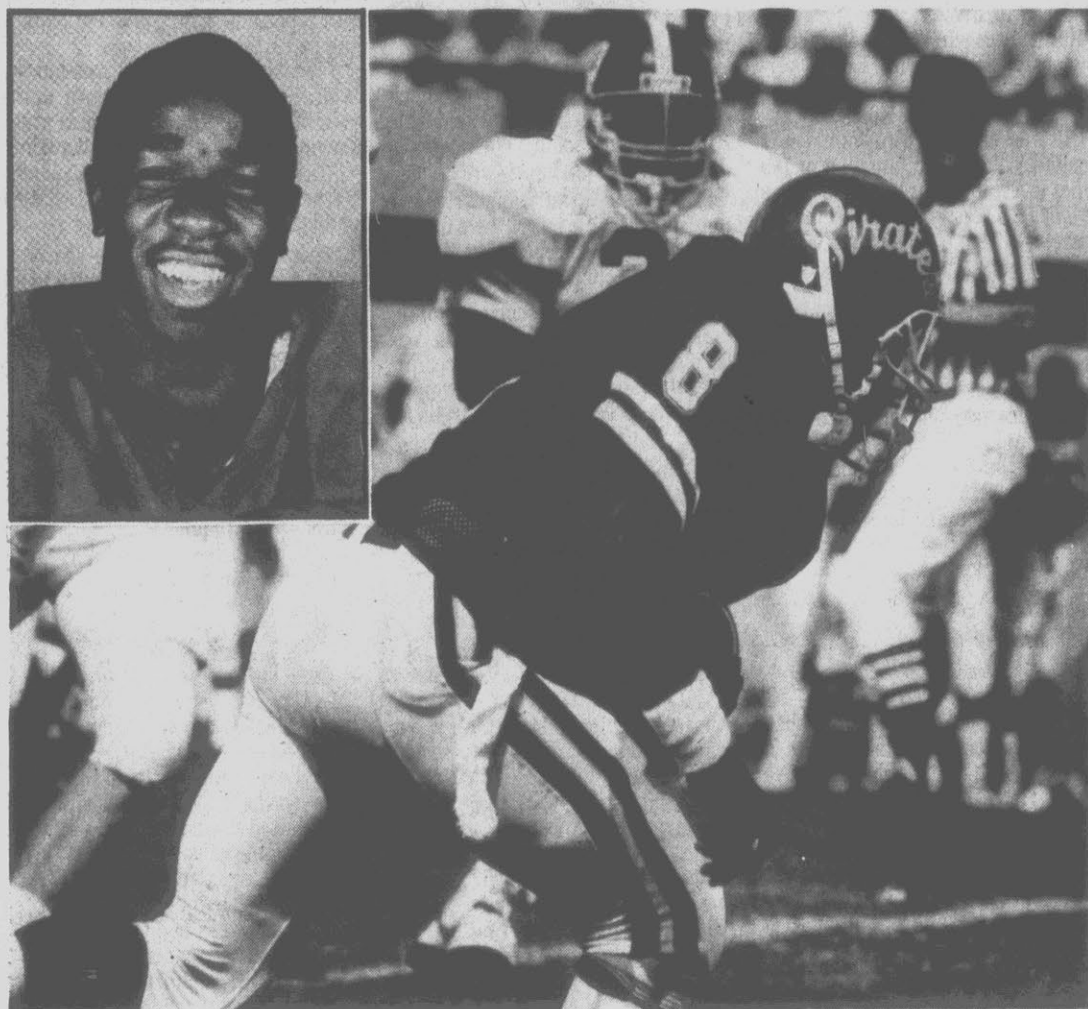

North's appearance at the U.S. Courthouse came a day after Swiss authorities turned over more than 2,000 pages of bank records of accounts controlled by North and others involved in the transactions being investigated by Walsh.

Move To A New Position Has Not Slowed Jones

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Ron Jones has been on both ends of the passing game during his career at East Carolina, and as he winds up his playing days as a Pirate he said his only remaining goal is to secure a winning season.

A fifth year senior, Jones came to ECU as a quarterback and started on and off for two years before moving to slot back last year. A knee injury in the second game of the year ended his season and he came back for his final year as a wide receiver.

"I didn't think I was ever going to play three positions," Jones said. "I'm not disappointed at all. I feel like Coach (Art) Baker made the moves for the team and myself."

"I think we've made considerable progress. These next two games (against Temple and Southern Mississippi), if we go out and play the best we can play, there would be no limit to our expectations."

In an otherwise forgettable 41-3 loss to Miami Saturday, Jones turned in one of the finest receiving days for a Pirate in over 16 years. He caught seven catches for 69 yards. That fell short of Tim Dameron's nine catches against Davidson in 1971.

For Jones, it's been quite a transformation. He had no idea he would end up his career catching passes rather than throwing them.

"In high school, I was a quarterback," he said. "And I feel like I could have been the quarterback here. Not taking anything away from Charlie (Libretto) and Travis (Hunter), because they are good athletes and good quarterbacks. It (the change in positions) was just to strengthen the team. I prefer playing anywhere to help the team."

And for a team short on receivers, Jones gives them 4.5 speed in the 40 and a constant threat on the reverse.

But prior to the season, Jones was a question mark. He was coming back from serious knee surgery. The coaches knew what he was able to do prior to the injury, but they had no way of knowing if he would lose any of his abilities due to the injury.

"Coming off knee surgery, my first goal was just to help the team as much as possible and maybe to try and move into the number one spot at my position and I've accomplished that," Jones said. In fact, he has been the Pirates' leading receiver with 18 receptions for 226 yards.

While the Miami loss eliminated any hopes ECU may have had of going to a bowl game, Jones said the Pirates must rebound because they still has plenty left to play for.

"Miami is behind us, we're just looking forward to playing this Saturday (against Temple)," he said. "My long-term goals were to have a winning season and possibly a bowl game. The winning season is not out of question."

ECU, 4-5, has already won more games this season than it has in the past two years and has a chance to have a winning season for the first time since 1983 when the Pirates finished 8-3. To accomplish that, ECU must defeat its final two opponents. And while that may be a lot of added pressure on the team, Jones shrugs it off.

"Since I've been here at East Carolina, there's been some kind of pressure to win," he said. "The 8-3 record put pressure on us to come out and perform to our best. I don't see where this is going to put any added pressure on us. I just feel like we're going to have to go out and play one of our best games yet."

Regardless, it all starts with the Temple game this Saturday. The Owls have manhandled the Pirates the last three times the teams have met, taking a 17-0 win in 1984, a 21-7 win in 1985 and a 45-28 romp last year.

For Jones, the game will mark his final home appearance in a Pirate uniform.

"For me, it's going to be an emotional game," he said. "If there is any home game that I would like to be remembered for it would be this one because it is the last one that I play here."

EPC Playoff Race Still Unclear

Reflector Sports Writer

The final week of the high school football season has arrived but the playoff race in the Eastern Plains Conference is anything but settled.

North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton are tied for first with 4-1 records and are trailed by Farmville Central with a 4-2 conference mark. Also in the picture is C.B. Aycock with a 3-2 mark.

The Jaguars are finished with their conference schedule and their last game is against Plymouth.

This is where it gets complicated. Aycock hosts Ayden-Grifton and must win to have any chance at making the playoffs.

A win by both the Chargers and the Panthers would send North Pitt, Ayden-Grifton and Farmville to the playoffs. If North Pitt wins, the Panthers get the EPC's number one playoff spot. If the Panthers lose and the Chargers win, then Ayden-Grifton gets the conference's top playoff spot, with North Pitt number two and Farmville number three.

If the Chargers lose, a draw will be necessary for the second and third spots.

If North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton both lose, a draw will be needed for all three spots with a four-way tie between those two along with Aycock and Farmville.

That out of the way, nothing will be decided until Friday night.

Charger coach B.T. Chappell said he knows the Falcons will be still smarting from their 34-0 loss at the hands of North Pitt.

"They've got to win this week," he said. "We've got all the reason to go down there and give it a good effort, playing for co-championship. Should we win, we'll have the home-field advantage. Should we lose we could not be playing anywhere."

The Chargers are coming off a 61-8 blowout of South Lenoir but Chappell is very concerned about stopping the Falcons' single wing offense, featuring the talents of fullback Corey Dickerson.

"The main point they have is Corey Dickerson," Chappell said. "He runs from the fullback spot and passes for them. He's the second or third leading rusher in the conference. They've (also) got Johnny Smith. He plays wingback and he leads the conference in yardage per rushing attempt."

"They are really tricky. It really worries going into a game like this. Their offense is totally different than anything our players have seen. Out of the single wing, they use misdirection. They try to get you going the wrong way. You don't know how your players are going to react."

"We've got everybody reading their keys. They are going to have to stay and play their position. It's a concern for us."

Chappell does have the consolation of having an improved defense on his side.

"We had a couple of problems a few weeks ago with the defensive line and we've kind of made that a focal point," Chappell said.

"We moved Steve Tucker from linebacker to defensive tackle and he's just been outstanding," Chappell said. "Beside him are Reggie Jackson and George Fuller at the defensive guards. And on the other side we've been running James Collins. They've been doing a great job. They shut down Farmville Central, Greene Central and South Lenoir."

"One of our best defensive players the entire year has been Kelvin Ellison. He leads team in sacks and tackles behind the line of scrimmage. I haven't seen anybody I trade him for."

But while Chappell may be concerned about stopping the Falcons, Aycock must also try to slow down a dangerous Charger offense, led by the running of Eric Blount, who has 938 yards rushing.

Farmville Central
The Jaguars went into their game against Greene Central knowing the winner would still be in the hunt for a playoff spot and the loser would have to look towards next year.

As it turned out, Farmville won a thriller, 29-28, and in the process got over a stigma of not being able to win the close games.

"We'd been going through years of this ever since Fuquay-Varina (two years ago) in the playoffs," said Jaguar coach Dixon Sauls. "We had lost seven straight close football games so to finally come out on top, it is a tribute to our players and coaches that they didn't give up. It's satisfying that our players faced adversity and had character to play hard and to win."

The Jaguars got their running game back in gear against the Rams as Gary Moore ran for 129 yards.

"We expected a low scoring ballgame but as it turned out, it was the exact opposite," Sauls said. "We were able to run the football more successfully than we thought we could."

"We made some adjustments with two new starters (Ben Ellis at left guard and William Johnson at right tackle). Gary Moore started at fullback and Elvis McFee at tailback."

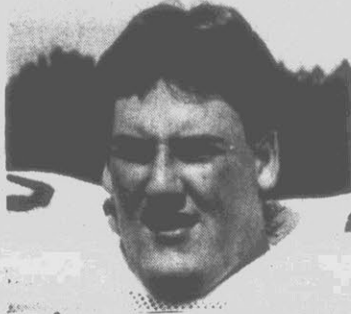

Farmville was missing two starters on offense. Regular fullback Billy Hardison was out with an injury and quarterback Mack Davis was able to play defense only due to an injury.

The win closed out the Jaguars' EPC schedule and they take on

Reid And Bucknall Will Miss 1st Game

Against Syracuse

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Syracuse basketball coach Jim Boheim said he's disappointed that suspended center J.R. Reid and forward Steve Bucknall won't be playing when the Orangemen take on North Carolina in the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith Tuesday suspended Reid, a sophomore, and Bucknall, a junior, for the first game of the 1987-88 season. Reid and Bucknall were arrested after a confrontation Oct. 24 at Shooters II, a Raleigh nightclub. A hearing is scheduled Nov. 16 in Wake County District Court.

"We feel the reason we scheduled the game is because we wanted to play a great team," Boheim said in a telephone interview from Syracuse, N.Y. "We think with those two guys they are a great basketball team. We still think they are a good basketball team."

"We would love to play them at full strength and let the best team win," added Boheim. "When the ball goes up I'm sure everyone will forget who is there and who is not there. It will be Syracuse-North Carolina."

Syracuse, which lost in the NCAA championship game to Indiana last season, and North Carolina will meet Nov. 21 in Springfield, Mass.

"Although the players were verbally harassed and pushed in an effort to provoke some kind of response, I am taking disciplinary steps against them for not getting out when the verbal harassment started," Smith said in a statement released through the North Carolina sports information office.

"This is a team matter and will be handled internally," Smith said. "However, since the suspensions will be obvious, I am going ahead and announcing that part of my action."

Paul James Doherty, who said he was attacked by Reid and Bucknall, said the two attacked him without provocation.

The 6-foot-9 Reid, selected the Atlantic Coast Conference rookie of the year last season, averaged 14.7 points and 7.4 rebounds a game. The 6-6 Bucknall saw spot action, averaging 3.7 points a game.

"I haven't had to deal with a situation like this in the past," Smith said. "While I don't believe physical action should ever settle any confrontation, I realize incidents like this are common occurrences across the country. But, we have been lucky that in my 27 years as head coach that this is the first time I've had to deal with a matter such as this."

Neither Reid nor Bucknall would comment on the incident.

McGwire Tabbed Top AL Rookie

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mark McGwire had 49 home runs, one short of a mark reached by only 10 players in major league history, when he decided to go home and miss the Oakland Athletics' final game of the season.

The husky, red-haired first baseman, named American League Rookie of the Year unanimously in a Baseball Writers Association of America vote announced Tuesday, has no regrets.

"I saw my son Matthew born. That was my 50th home run," McGwire said in a telephone interview from his off-season home near Los Angeles.

"He's a big boy now," the 24-year-old McGwire said of his son born one month ago today.

"Everyone had been asking if I thought I could hit 50 homers. After I hit my 49th, I really started thinking about it and I really wanted to hit 50," McGwire admitted.

But, with the Athletics playing in Chicago on the final weekend of the season, McGwire got a call from his father-in-law with news that his wife, Kathy, was going to the hospital. McGwire got a Sunday morning flight to Los Angeles and arrived at the hospital 45 minutes before Matthew's birth.

"I wanted to be with my wife and see my first-born. I told (Manager) Tony LaRussa, and he appreciated what I was doing," McGwire said.

LaRussa certainly appreciated McGwire's batting production, which included a .289 average and 118 RBI as well as the 49 home runs which set a major league record for rookies.

9 Nominees For Hall

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Four players, including the New York Knicks' Earl Monroe, and five coaches, including Indiana's Bobby Knight, are nominees for election to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The nine nominees, spanning from the 1930s to the present, were nominated Tuesday and will be put to a committee vote, said Joe Brien, the hall's executive director.

The other players nominated are former Minneapolis Lakers and Boston Celtics center Clyde Lovellette, former Notre Dame star John Moir and former Baltimore Bullets center Wes Unseld.

Other coaches include Jack Hartman, formerly of Kansas State; Ralph Miller, formerly of Oregon State; Wil Robinson, formerly of Illinois State, and the late Phil Woolpert, of the University of San Francisco.

The results of the Honors Committee vote on the nominees will be announced in early February, Brien said. Eighteen of 24 votes from committee are needed to qualify for Hall of Fame induction on May 3.

There are 161 players and coaches and four teams enshrined in the Hall of Fame.

Lovellette, a member of the 1952 Olympic gold medal basketball team, played 11 seasons with National Basketball Association teams, including the 1954 championship Lakers and the 1963 and 1964 Celtics championship teams.

Moir was named player of year with the national championship Notre Dame team in 1936.

King Downplays Big Debut

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Bernard King, after a dazzling debut with the Washington Bullets, says he still needs to improve his timing before Friday's regular-season opener at Atlanta.

"I felt relatively comfortable out there," King said after scoring 33 points Monday night to lead the Bullets to a 113-110 preseason victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"We worked out (Monday) this morning; I didn't know how I would respond tonight in terms of being winded. I think I did OK."

"This was something that I've been looking forward to," said King. "I'm elated at how things worked out — but it's only a beginning."

While the 10-year veteran pronounced himself in "pretty good shape," he said he didn't feel entirely comfortable with the Bullets' offensive schemes.

"I was just trying to fit in the offense," said King. "I didn't run the break as well as I like to and my timing wasn't perfect, but I'm honestly pleased with myself."

Bullets' coach Kevin Loughery, obviously pleased with King's performance, said he had planned on going easy on the former Knick star.

"It was totally up to him," said Loughery. "I asked him five or six times over the course of the game how he felt. I could have expected the answer — maybe I shouldn't have asked. He's just a basketball player."

King got started fast, sinking his first two shots en route to a 13-point first quarter.

King wound up making 12 of 18 shots from the field and nine of 11 from the foul line and displaying many of the moves that made him one of the NBA's most feared offensive threats until he suffered a devastating knee injury in March 1985.

King, who had played in only six regular-season games since the injury, last week signed a two-year, $2.2 million deal with the Bullets.

While the King acquisition will give the Bullets additional scoring punch on the front line, Loughery said he is still worried about Washington's deficiencies on the backboards.

"Even with Brad Daugherty and Hot Rod Williams out of their lineup, the Cavaliers outrebounded us (40-37)," noted Loughery.

But given King's scoring ability, Loughery said he will begin experimenting with a front line featuring King, Moses Malone and Manute Bol to beef up the Bullets' rebounding.

In moves made Monday, the Bullets acquired forward Mark Alarie and guard Darrell Walker from the Denver Nuggets for forward Jay Vincent and guard Michael Adams.

Walker, another former Knick, was especially disappointed at being shipped to the Bullets.

"Washington, of all places," Walker said. "Washington. All that banging and hitting and pushing and shoving and fighting," said Walker. "I'll be throwing the ball Moses and Bernard. Won't be any more 30-point nights for me."

Walker, in his fifth NBA season, averaged 12.2 points for Denver last season.

Alarie, 6-foot-7, averaged 7.9 points and 3.3 rebounds last season as a rookie.

"I thought it was a great situation for me here in Denver," the former Duke star said. "Apparently the feeling wasn't mutual... Maybe I'll be better off in Washington."

Baseball Has Wall Street Slump

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street is not the only place where bonuses are disappearing this winter.

Steve Balboni, Ken Dayley, Bryn Smith, Jim Gott and Atlee Hamaker all made more in bonuses last season than in salary, but baseball players are finding many clubs will not agree to incentive clauses in new contracts.

"It's part of the conspiracy," player's union head Donald Fehr said Tuesday. "(The owners) proposed in bargaining that they not give incentives. We did not agree to it. They went ahead and imposed it anyway."

Balboni made $100,000 in salary last season plus $525,000 in bonuses — $65,000 for every 30 games he was not on the disabled list plus $200,000 for being on the Opening Day roster. Since he did not get hurt, he made all of the bonus money, equalling his 1986 salary.

Dayley earned $75,000 in salary plus $250,000 for reaching all three incentive levels of game appearances.

Smith, who signed for the major league minimum of $62,500, had one of the most complicated contracts in baseball, with 256 possible incentive levels. He received a certain bonus for each start up to 32, and the amount of the bonus depended on how many innings he averaged per start.

For making 32 starts and averaging between 5 2-3 and six innings, Smyth earned $404,219 in bonuses out of a possible $612,500 that the contract allowed.

"This is something he will not agree to in the future," said his agent, Jim Bronner.

Doug Baldwin, Dayley's agent, said Tuesday that getting clubs to agree to incentive bonuses is becoming more difficult.

"There are some clubs that will not discuss any incentive bonuses and year-by-year that number is growing," Baldwin said. "It used to be that the Detroit Tigers were alone against it."

He identified the Tigers, the San Diego Padres, Los Angeles Dodgers and Boston Red Sox as clubs that refused to include bonuses in contracts.

The Red Sox last winter mailed out letters to agents saying they should not even propose bonuses, according to Baldwin.

Many of the bonuses were for games played or games started. Lance Parrish turned down $1.2 million from the Tigers in order to sign with the Philadelphia Phillies. He took a $400,000 pay cut but made a $200,000 bonus because he did not go on the disabled list before the All-Star break.

According to a study published in Tuesday's editions of The New York Times, Parrish was one of 57 players to earn more than $1 million in 1987. Six players made more than $2 million — Dan Quisenberry, George Brett, Jim Rice, Eddie Murray, Mike Schmidt and Gary Carter.

Andre Dawson, who with Parrish was one of the two premier free agents to change clubs last winter, took a $1 million pay cut to sign a $500,000 contract with the Chicago Cubs, the team he wanted to play for.

He earned a $150,000 bonus when he did not go on the disabled list before the All-Star break and another $50,000 when he was named to the National League All-Star team.

He led the major leagues with 137 runs batted in and tied for the lead with 49 home runs. He is almost certain to file for salary arbitration. But because of owner's desires to reduce salaries, Dawson had to take a huge payout to switch teams.

"Andre will be paid a salary, in my opinion, less than one half of what he would be entitled to if he were properly slotted into baseball's salary structure," Dick Moss, his agent, said last spring.

Balboni, Dayley and Smith all were released by their clubs following the 1986 season. No other clubs made offers and by releasing them their salaries could be cut by more than the 80 percent allowed in the Basic Agreement.

"They took these people and did not tender them contracts and then no one in baseball would talk to them," Baldwin said.

All three had been injured in 1986 and by putting most of the money in bonuses, clubs were protected against future injuries.

"What the teams said was that if these persons came back from their injuries, if they were healthy, they would make at least as much money as they did the year before," Baldwin said.

Large bonuses identified by The Times went to Don Sutton of the California Angels, who made $340,000 for games started; Mike Witt of the Angels, who made $250,000 for innings pitched; and Nolan Ryan of the Houston Astros, who made $200,000 for his number of starts.

Gott of the Pittsburgh Pirates made $217,000 in bonuses above his $100,000 salary for games started, and Hammaker of the San Francisco Giants made $212,000 in bonuses based on his appearance above his $168,000 salary, according to The Times.

Charlie Kerfeld of the Houston Astros had perhaps the most unusual contract in baseball. He made $110,037.37 and 37 boxes of orange Jell-O.

Playoffs ...

Plymouth in a non-conference game Friday.

"We want to play well," Sauls said. "It's our homecoming game. We have a lot of incentive to play well. Anyone you have a non conference game, it would be cause for concern. I feel we'll be ready to play. I believe we'll give a good effort."

North Pitt coach Larry Bolger said the Panthers overcame a lot of adversity early on due to injuries and discipline problems but they have come together in the last few weeks to once again put themselves in a position to tie for the conference championship.

"I can see these young men really pulling together in the last few weeks," Bolger said. "We had a team meeting about a month ago, I met with the seniors and we had a heart to heart talk and its reflected in last few weeks. With practice this late in year you look for them to get worse, but they're quicker, more intense than at the beginning of the year. Our team is finally starting to jell."

The Panthers pacted C.B. Aycock last Friday, 34-0, to maintain a first-place tie with Ayden-Grifton. North Pitt stands at 5-3-1 overall and 4-1 in the EPC.

ing up to be tight contest but it ended in a blowaway, which surprised Bolger.

"I expected C.B. Aycock to be a lot stiffer competition than it actually turned out to be," he said. "But I can't take away from our kids effort. We were substituting freely by mid-third quarter. We were pleased with our output both offensively and defensively."

But the Panthers still need a win if they expect to tie for the conference title for the second year in a row.

"We keep something in the back of our mind," Bolger said. "Last year Pamlico was not in the playoff picture and Ayden-Grifton played them in the last ballgame and it was only a two or three point ball game in the 30s. Pamlico is by no means dead yet. I'm sure they are preparing just as hard for us as we are for them. We've got the conference championship at stake."

To win, North Pitt must stop the Hurricanes' Terrance Tatum.

"That's our number one concern, stopping Tatum. Anytime a young man has rushed for over 1,100 yards, he's got to be doing something right," Bolger said. "They don't have a real excellent passing attack, but if you got all your guns to stop one man, it's easy to get burned."

General Consensus Says Rams Came Out The Best

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

When Bobby Beathard was asked about THE TRADE, he didn't hesitate.

"They all did very well," said the general manager of the Washington Redskins, one of the few master traders left in the NFL, where no move is usually thought preferable to any move at all.

But there seems to be a general consensus that the Los Angeles Rams could — emphasize that COULD — be the biggest winners and the Indianapolis Colts the biggest losers in the most eye-catching NFL deal since the Rams sent nine players to the Cardinals for Ollie Matson 28 years ago.

The reasoning works this way.

By trading Eric Dickerson for three first-round picks and three second rounders over the next two years, Los Angeles put itself in a position to rebuild quickly, either by trading those picks for another impact player or to move up in the draft. They already have a quarterback to build around in Jim Everett and if they can motivate Greg Bell, they also have a potential 1,000-yard running back.

There are, however, a couple of question marks.

No. 1: The Rams haven't drafted particularly well the past couple of years, and if they use their new high picks like they did their recent ones, they're in trouble.

Coach John Robinson has acknowledged that he should have taken Erik Howard — who went to the Giants on the second round — over Canadian question mark Mike Schad in 1986 and this year, having given up a first-rounder for Everett, they used their second-round pick on Donald Evans, who was supposed to be the pass rusher they would have had in Howard. Now they may try to convert Evans to fullback.

No. 2: The reason the Rams were forced to trade Dickerson is their unwillingness to come up with the big money he demanded. High draft picks demand cash and having a lot of them means a lot of demanding. Once drafted, the players still have to be signed.

Plus there is one other little item: The suit filed at the end of the strike by the NFL Players Association seeks an end to the collegiate draft, so it's possible, though not likely, that there will be no draft in which to use all those picks.

The Bills came out decently, having acquired another building block in linebacker Cornelius Bennett, the No. 2 selection in the draft who had not been signed by Indianapolis. The Bills now have a franchise quarterback in Jim Kelly, two bookend linebackers in Bennett and Shane Conlan plus one of the emerging defensive linemen in Bruce Smith and they all have their better years in front of them.

But the price was high — Bell and two No. 1 picks, particularly considering they were just a pick away from snaring Bennett on their own in this year's draft.

But Buffalo fans are happy and the Bills look at Bennett as next year's top pick.

"If things work out right, we won't need the draft picks," General Manager Bill Polian said.

The Colts? Unless things change, they may find themselves on the treadmill that awaits teams that go for the quick fix solution. Has Bob Irsay looked at the NBA's New York Knicks recently?

It sounds nice to have Dickerson, who may someday become the NFL's all-time leading rusher.

But he might better have built around Bennett than a running back with three or four prime years left. A team that needs one more piece to win a Super Bowl makes a trade like that, not a team that might make the playoffs in a year when the strike makes the standings somewhat spurious.

Yes, Dickerson can make the Colts a .500 team, which will get Coach Ron Meyer a two-year extension on his contract.

But where will they be three years from now, when Dickerson is 30 and wearing down from eight years of 30 carries per game? How many running backs over 30 are there in the NFL and wouldn't the Colts be better off with Bennett and the players they might have gotten with the three draft picks they gave up?

Beathard himself almost got in on the deal, but didn't. He wanted Bennett but had already traded too many draft picks. But he would have been willing to trade his best running back, George Rogers.

Why did he want Bennett rather than Dickerson? And why was he willing to give up his 29-year-old running back?

He smiled a Cheshire cat smile.

Pirates' Final Match Is Cancelled

East Carolina's final soccer match of the season Monday against North Carolina Wesleyan was cancelled after the Bishops received a bid to play in the NCAA Division III soccer playoffs.

The Pirates finish the season at 3-13 overall and also went 0-7 in the Colonial Athletic Association.

Crum Says Clemson Far Superior

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — When it comes to the Atlantic Coast Conference, Clemson is in a class by itself, North Carolina coach Dick Crum says.

"They sure are," Crum said Tuesday when asked if the Tigers, the defending ACC champions, were a level above the rest of the conference. "That's just where they are. I think it's a true statement that they are in their own class."

"They maybe are the best Clemson team in the 10 years I've been here," Crum said at his weekly news conference. "They are complete. They have a good offense — very steady. Defensively — extreme speed and quickness. And, of course, they always have a good kicking game."

The game has been switched from a 12:05 p.m. start to 4 p.m. to accommodate ESPN, which will show the contest to a national cable audience.

The 10th-ranked Tigers, 7-1 overall and 4-1 in the ACC, have won the last five out of six meetings with the Tar Heels, 5-3 and 3-1. But, it's last season's 39-10 loss at Clemson, S.C., that Crum is still worried about.

"They are a powerful ballclub," Crum said. "They really beat us badly last year and I'm very concerned about the effects that will have on our team from the standpoint of the game was out of control early and we didn't have much of a chance."

However, despite three losses, Crum said he's happy with the way his squad has played lately.

"You work all year to put yourself in a position where you can at least — toward the end of the season — be competitive to win the conference championship," he said.

After North Carolina, Clemson's only other ACC game is at Maryland, while the Tar Heels travel to Virginia and host Duke.

Crum said tailback Torin Dorn, injured since gaining more than 100 yards in the season-opening game against Illinois, may see some action. However, he said Dorn is still having difficulty in making cuts with his sore ankle.

"... He's had a week longer to heal, but as far as him playing, I don't think we're going to know that until we get into the ballgame and see if we get in a position that we have to put him in."

"He will not play like he played against Illinois," Crum added.

Eric Starr, who has gained 461 yards and scored three touchdowns, will start at tailback, Crum said.

Starr will be going up against one of the nation's top defenses.

Crum called Clemson's right tackle Michael Dean Perry "an excellent player," and the Tigers' whole defensive front line "extremely good."

"They can get off the ball and run," he said. "I just hope our kids aren't going to be afraid of them."

Tar Heel Defenders Gain Honor

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina teammates Tim Goad and Norris Davis, who led the Tar Heels to a 37-14 victory over Maryland, have been picked as Atlantic Coast Conference defensive players of the week.

Goad, a 6-4, 370-pound senior, earned the lineman award after leading a defensive line effort that limited the Terps to 31 yards rushing on 33 carries. The Claudville, Va., native also sacked Maryland quarterbacks four times.

Davis, a Reston, Va., native, came up with one of the game's key plays when he blocked a Maryland punt, grabbed the ball on the bounce and carried it 26 yards for a touchdown. It was the fifth touchdown of the season for the 6-1, 310-pound senior, who also recovered one fumble.

Clemson tailback Joe Henderson, who averaged 6 yards per carry in the Tigers' victory over Wake Forest, has been named rookie of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Henderson, a 5-9, 195-pounder from Freehold, N.J., rushed for a career-high 131 yards on 20 carries, including a pair of fourth-quarter touchdown runs of 31 and 48 yards, as the Tigers posted a 31-17 victory. In addition, Henderson, who was filling in for the injured Wesley McFadden, returned one kickoff for 19 yards.

Deacons Must Prevent The Big Play

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest football coach Bill Dooley says his defense won't be able to halt Duke's explosive passing attack on Saturday, but he says the Demon Deacons must not give up a play that can set up a touchdown.

"The big thing is that you don't stop a passing attack like Duke has," Dooley said. "You have to recognize that fact that they are going to complete some passes and they are going to get some yards."

"The things that you must do is not give up the big play or homerun play that can set up a touchdown," he said. "You must also not let them be as consistent offensively as they have been — they can control the football with their passing game."

Dooley said at his weekly press conference Tuesday that the Blue Devils' offense isn't the only thing worrying him.

"Duke defensively is much improved from what they have been in the past," he said. "I think that is the big factor in their season to date — they play defense much better, they swarm around the football, they come up with some big plays, interceptions, fumbles, turnovers, and they make things happen on defense."

Falcons Put Griffin On Waivers

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons on Tuesday announced that rookie free agent running back Steve Griffin of Clemson had been released and replaced on their NFL roster by running back Larry Emery.

Emery, a 12th-round draft choice from Wisconsin, suffered a blood clot in his arm prior to the season opener and had been on injured reserve.

ND's Brown Suffers Broken Finger

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — All-American flanker Tim Brown suffered a broken finger during his 173-yard offensive effort against Navy, Coach Lou Holtz said Tuesday.

Earlier reports indicated Brown had suffered a torn nail on his left ring finger. The injury was closed with three stitches and Brown returned to the game Saturday with the finger heavily taped. He later scored on a 51-yard pass play.

Brown missed practice Monday but probably will play Saturday against 5-4 Boston College, said Holtz. Notre Dame is 6-1.

"It will bother him, no doubt about it," he said. "He will just find a way to get things done."

The injury raised questions about the effectiveness of Notre Dame's top offensive threat. Brown's explosive running has sparked the No. 9 Notre Dame offense with three punt returns for touchdowns and an average of 13.8 yards per play.

The team trainer numbed the injured finger before Brown returned to action against Navy game. Holtz said Brown played the rest of the game on adrenaline.

"He did very well," he said. "What they do is they tape his one finger to the other finger for stability. It is difficult and he is at a disadvantage. But I think Tim Brown is a great winner. He's a competitor. He wants to win, and he just has to overcome that pain, which he has done."

Brown's injury was only the latest on a growing list that may begin to threaten the 6-1 Irish, says Holtz.

Quarterback Tony Rice suffered a bruised leg against Navy, did not practice Monday and is questionable Saturday against Boston College, said Holtz.

Fridge Doesn't Discuss Weight

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — They call him "The Fridge" for short and if you want to talk at any length with William "The Refrigerator" Perry, don't ask him about his weight.

"I don't talk about that," said Perry, who appears to be nowhere near the 315 pounds that Coach Mike Ditka of the Chicago Bears desires.

Guesses on the defensive tackle's weight run from 325 to 340 pounds and one indication that he is not anywhere near form is that Ditka has not worked him on offense, even in practice, this season.

Two years ago when he was a rookie out of Clemson, the Bears got his weight down to 315 and Ditka used him in the backfield on goal line drives.

Twice in a Monday night game against Green Bay Perry blocked for Walter Payton touchdowns. He also rushed for a touchdown against Atlanta and caught a pass for another touchdown in the second game against Green Bay that year.

He topped that by rushing for a touchdown in the Super Bowl victory over New England.

Although he apparently is not concentrating on his weight these days, Perry is working on his defense and had his best game of the season in last Sunday's 31-28 victory Kansas City. The Fridge had six tackles and one assist.

"I'm doing everything possible to get better," said Perry of his play. "I won't get to where I want to be until I make the Pro Bowl six or seven times."

Perry has not made All-Pro yet and although he had a solid season last year, he revealed "I played hurt and my knee cap was almost blown out."

Perry has been coming out of the lineup on third down in obvious passing situations. He doesn't like the idea but shrugs off the decision as "fine and dandy, if that's what they want. I'm working hard in practice to improve my pass rush."

Ditka and Perry have not always been on the same wave length because of the player's weight problems.

"I'm not getting into that," said Perry again of his weight. "Me and the coach? We even off in everything. He talks to me, I talk to him. He's the coach, I'm the player."

The defense, which has been at fault as the Bears have fallen behind in the last two games only to have the offense rally to victory behind quarterback Jim McMahon, was kept late in this week's meeting.

"We were going over things that were right and wrong," said Perry. "There wasn't too much that was wrong. Some of the guys missed plays but the effort was there."

Asked what things were wrong, "I wish I knew," said Perry. "When we opened the season, we were great. The last two games we were sluggish. Sooner or later, we're going to get it together."

Like most of the Bears, Perry would like to get it together this week because the Bears go to Green Bay to face the Packers and last year's game is still fresh in their minds.

That's the game in which Charles Martin last Nov. 23 delivered the final blow with a late hit that knocked McMahon out for the season.

"I definitely get ready to play the Packers," said Perry, "when the ball is snapped and after it's snapped."

Since Martin is no longer with the Packers does that make a difference?

"I doubt it," said Perry. "The head coach (Forrest Gregg) is still there. It's the Green Bay and the Bears. It's always been like that. It's going to be a dog fight. We will play whichever way they want."

Simms To Miss At Least 1 Game

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Super Bowl most valuable player Phil Simms will miss at least Sunday's game against the New England Patriots and could be out much longer than that because of a sprained left knee, New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells said Tuesday.

Simms, who injured the knee Monday night in a 33-24 road loss to the Dallas Cowboys, underwent undisclosed tests at the New York Hospital for Special Surgery on Tuesday. The results are expected to be announced Wednesday, Parcells said.

"He has a sprain of his medial collateral ligament," Parcells said. "Generally we are optimistic, but right now it appears — and I am quoting our doctor as of last night — that there probably isn't going to be any surgery necessary."

Parcells did not know the type of tests Simms underwent and he was not sure how long his quarterback would be out of action.

At one point he said it was possible Simms might miss three or four weeks, but then added he wasn't sure, saying he needed to know the test results before anything was certain.

"He is definitely out this week," Parcells said. "After that I don't know."

Simms, who has started 59 consecutive games for the Super Bowl champions, hurt the knee late in the fourth quarter when he was hit high and low by Jim Jeffcoat and Ed Jones while attempting to pass.

Simms fell to the ground clutching his knee and was taken off the field on a motorized cart.

"I talked with him briefly and he is really quite positive," Parcells said. "You know, I think he felt fortunate."

The injury was the latest insult for the Giants in this strike-marred season. New York is now 1-6 and its chances of making the playoffs are marginal at best.

"As I said last night, when you are 1-6 the prospects for the playoffs certainly don't look that good," Parcells said. "You just hope your team can get going and win some games. I think in some areas the play was pretty good, in some areas. But overall as a group we just didn't get it done."

With Simms out against the Patriots, Parcells said that Jeff Rutledge would get the starting nod at quarterback and Jeff Hostetler would be activated off the injured reserve list as a backup. Reserve safety Tom Flynn would be an emergency quarterback.

Rutledge played the Giants' final series against the Cowboys and fumbled a center snap from the shotgun formation that set up the Cowboys' final field goal. He was one of four players to cross the picket line during the recent strike and started five touchdown passes in his last two games.

His biggest problem has been an inconsistent and injury-riddled offensive line that Monday night allowed Dallas to harass him often. Two of Simms' passes were intercepted after tips by Cowboy linemen.

"I don't have many options," Parcells said of the line troubles. "You can move people and hope for the best. I don't feel that's the best way. If you keep working the problem might just resolve itself."

Clark Adds Name To Free Agent List

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Clark of the St. Louis Cardinals is the third premier baseball free agent of 1987.

He was one of eight players to file Tuesday, increasing this year's free agent total to 40.

Also filing were pitchers Danny Darwin, Dave Smith and Larry Anderson of the Houston Astros, Charlie Lea of the Montreal Expos and Len Barker of the Milwaukee Brewers. Outfielders Mike Davis of the Oakland Athletics and Gary Matthews of Seattle also filed.

Among the top players, Dave Righetti of the Yankees and Paul Molitor of the Brewers filed last week.

Still eligible to file before next Monday's deadline are Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves, Cal Ripken Jr. of the Baltimore Orioles, Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies and Jack Morris of the Detroit Tigers.

Clark made $1.3 million this season and batted .289 with 106 runs batted in. He hit 35 home runs, 37 percent of the Cardinals' total, despite missing the final five weeks of the season with injuries.

He missed the second half of the 1986 season with injuries and also was on the disabled list in 1984 and 1985.

"I understand that has to work into the deal and it will cost me some money," Clark said Monday of his time on the disabled lists. "I know I've had some injuries the last four years."

Clark said he is filing to keep his options open.

"Just because I file does not mean I'm not going to be a Cardinal," he said. "I just don't want to let it go. It might be interesting to see what somebody else might say."

Smith was sixth in the National League with 24 saves and 73 strikeouts in 60 innings. He won two, lost three, had a 1.65 earned run average and made $700,000.

Darwin was 9-10 with a 3.59 ERA and a $740,000 salary. Anderson was 9-5 with a 3.59 ERA and a $300,000 salary.

McLaughlin Gets Labor Nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ann Dore McLaughlin, President Reagan's choice to succeed William Brock as labor secretary, appears headed towards a quick and easy confirmation by the Senate.

Within hours after Reagan formally nominated the former interior undersecretary to the labor post Tuesday, both Senate Democrats and labor leaders said they looked forward to working with her.

"I would be delighted to see her follow in the footsteps of Bill Brock or Frances Perkins," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

Miss Perkins was labor secretary from 1933 to 1945 under President Franklin D. Roosevelt and the first female Cabinet member.

Even the 14.2 million-member AFL-CIO, which helped mount a grass-roots campaign that contributed to defeat of Reagan's nomination of Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court, extended a welcome to Mrs. McLaughlin.

"Despite her lack of experience in the labor area, we will do everything in our power to help her carry out the purpose for which the Department of Labor was created," said the labor federation's president, Lane Kirkland.

Mrs. McLaughlin herself alluded to Miss Perkins during a brief nomination ceremony Tuesday in the White House Rose Garden.

"Doubtless, there will be comments about my being a woman," she said, recounting what Miss Perkins had replied when asked if being a woman was a disadvantage in public life.

"Only when I'm climbing trees," Mrs. McLaughlin recalled Miss Perkins as saying at the time. "And that was before blue jeans. So I have no reason to feel disadvantaged at all," Mrs. McLaughlin said.

Brock, 56, resigned from Reagan's Cabinet last month after holding the labor post for 2½ years to head the Republican presidential campaign of Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

As his successor, Reagan said Mrs. McLaughlin, 45, who previously held high-level public affairs positions in the Treasury Department and the Environmental Protection Agency, would bring "uncommon experience and competence" to her new job.

Mrs. McLaughlin gave up the No. 2 post in the Interior Department, a job she had held for three years, last March following several clashes with Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel.

"When I left your administration earlier this year, I had no idea I would be back so soon," she quipped to Reagan on Tuesday. "I've heard a lot about the revolving door between government and the private sector, but this is a record-breaker."

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, senior Republican on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, called the choice of Mrs. McLaughlin "an inspired one. Ann has the ability and background to run the department."

Robertson Irks Labor Leaders

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The head of the United Auto Workers responded angrily to Pat Robertson's claim that a fourth of America's autoworkers use drugs, saying the presidential hopeful showed "ignorance of the facts and poor political judgment in equal measure."

"A person aspiring to the presidency shouldn't be tossing around off-the-wall remarks in the area he knows nothing about," UAW President Owen Bieber said Tuesday.

However, Robertson said he wasn't disparaging the workers.

"I'm just saying that in industry in general, that it is estimated by certain sources that about one out of every four workers is using some kind of an illicit substance," the former television evangelist said.

"If we took drugs out of the workplace, it would help the other three on the assembly line who don't take drugs. That's all," he said Tuesday during a visit to Lansing.

"It's stupid for someone to say something like that, especially a presidential hopeful in the state of Michigan," said Frank Garrison, president of the 650,000-member Michigan AFL-CIO.

"I don't know what his sources are and I'm not aware of any data to support such a statement," Garrison added.

Robertson said he got the statistic "probably two or three years ago" from the news department of the Christian Broadcasting Network, which he founded. He said he didn't have the original source "right at the tips of my fingers," but that he could supply it later.

Bieber said the remark indicates "Republicans who still nurture the dream of winning working people's votes in Michigan just can't seem to hide their true anti-worker feelings and continue to fall on their faces at every turn."

The UAW has 1.1 million members nationwide and close to 400,000 in Michigan.

Robertson's remark came as he told reporters that he could appeal to blue-collar workers, such as autoworkers, in Michigan and across the nation, even though they traditionally have been in the Democratic camp.

The incident comes one month after Vice President George Bush made an offhand remark praising Soviet tank mechanics, adding if they run out of work "send them to Detroit, because we could use that kind of ability."

That comment also drew fire from Bieber. Bush later apologized for the remark, saying it was a joke that fell flat.

On other points Tuesday, Robertson predicted that he'd beat Bush in Michigan, the first state to select national convention delegates.

He estimated that he will win 40 of the state's 77 delegates. If his estimate holds true, the outcome would be a major setback for the vice president, who is the GOP frontrunner.

6 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD TEST DRIVE THE ALL-NEW 1988 MAZDA 929.

"Wrapped in leather and supported in luxury... the 929 felt fantastic, or more to the point, it felt like the best from Germany."

MOTOR TREND, November 1987

The new Mazda 929 is a high-performance luxury sedan combining the most civilized of creature comforts with performance that outstrips some of Europe's finest luxury sports sedans.

Yet 929 is substantially less expensive to own. About $8,000** less than Mercedes-Benz 190E, about $11,000** less than BMW 528e.

"This car is roomy like no other car from Japan."

The 1988 Mazda 929 gives you "a feeling of being in a car nearly twice the size..."* Mazda 929 offers more interior room than Mercedes-Benz 190E or BMW 528e—even Mercedes-Benz 300E.

There is over three feet of legroom for rear-seat passengers. And the 929 is actually quieter inside than the costlier Mercedes-Benz 300E and BMW 735i.*

You'll also find a 6-way adjustable driver's seat with lumbar support. Plus rich velour upholstery (leather is optional). To quote MOTOR TREND:

"Large, overstuffed seats front and rear with adjustable headrests and a rear seat center armrest, electronic climate controls with excellent vent placement, optional electronic instruments, and a six speaker AM/FM cassette audio system with graphic equalizer are all things we'd expect, and all so nicely integrated into the interior's flow. Here, clearly, is the new benchmark at which Japanese manufacturers will be shooting."

"The 929's V-6 pulls for the moon with a seductive silkiness."

At the heart of the Mazda 929's high performance lies an advanced, all-new, 158-horsepower, 18-valve, 3.0-liter V-6 engine with electronic fuel injection. Its smooth, quiet power can take 929 from 0 to 60 in just 9.2 seconds and to a top speed of 121 mph—outperforming Mercedes-Benz 190E and BMW 528e.<sup>1</sup>

It has been matched to a unique handling package that thrusts the 929 into the ranks of the world's great road cars. "Lean hard into a corner and the 929 stays on its feet... Throw it into a series of ess-bends and you're surprised at how well it follows your lead. Enough motive power is available to flatten hills or fry asphalt..." "Smooth, quiet and quick, the 3-liter is the stuff 'real' luxu-sport sedans are made of, and just the stuff some German car makers had better start to fear..."

All-new Mazda 929 is built the time-honored way.

With quality and care. With a front-engine, rear-drive chassis. "Mazda's reasons for bucking the front-drive trend are perfectly sound: to produce a more even weight distribution, to promote better handling, and to achieve a more refined drive. Besides, the space efficiencies of front drive would be of minimal value in a car that is already roomy enough for everybody but land-yacht die-hards..."

The luxury of all these standard features.

The 929's serious instrumentation includes speedometer, tachometer, and gauges for vital functions. You also get cruise control. Front and rear reading lights. Plus your choice of a 5-speed manual or 4-speed automatic over-drive transmission at no extra cost.

This world-class tourer comes with a long list of luxury features as standard equipment, including:

- E-Link independent rear suspension that continuously tunes suspension geometry to provide optimum balance of handling, stability and ride.
- 4-wheel power disc brakes
- Electronically controlled automatic air conditioning
- Variable-assist power steering and brakes
- Power windows and door locks
- Tilt/telescopic, leather-wrapped steering wheel
- Theft-deterrent system.

Each is designed to add to your comfort and control. And together they make the 929 an even more impressive value.

A 36-month/50,000 mile "bumper-to-bumper" warranty.

A high-performance luxury sedan as remarkable as the Mazda 929 should have a warranty to match. So like all 1988 Mazdas, the 929 comes with a "bumper-to-bumper" warranty for 36 months or 50,000 miles (see your Mazda dealer for details). It offers you the kind of comprehensive protection common 5, 6 and 7 year "drivetrain-only" warranties don't provide.

Come on down to your Mazda dealer's and try out the all-new Mazda 929 high-performance luxury sedan. You'll discover that when it comes to value, performance and luxury, nobody delivers like your Mazda dealer. That's the Mazda Way.

Gephardt Ends Long Iowa Tour

DAVIS CITY, Iowa (AP) — Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt's Democratic presidential campaign swept through the hills of southern Iowa, claiming a record for grass-roots campaigning that would do a gubernatorial candidate proud.

Gephardt has spent months working the back roads of Iowa politics, and he capped that off Tuesday in the barnyard of a state senator's farm, campaigning amid hay bales and bratwurst in the 99th and last Iowa county.

"In and of itself, it's not any sure road to victory, but it helps," Gephardt said. "I wouldn't have done it if I didn't think it would help."

Along the way, Gephardt laid claim to the title of most traveled presidential candidate in Iowa.

At speeches and a farm rally, Gephardt bragged that he's set a record by bringing his ambitions to every Iowa county.

"I understand it's never been done by a presidential candidate," Gephardt said. "Jimmy Carter spent a lot of time in Iowa, but he didn't go to all 99 counties."

Falwell Gives Up 'Majority'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Friends and foes of the Rev. Jerry Falwell say the nation's "religious right" will remain a force to be reckoned with despite the minister's decision to leave the Moral Majority.

Falwell on Tuesday announced he was leaving the organization, which had provided a home base and rallying point for the conservative Christians who surged into politics in the 1980s.

"At age 54, my first love is back to the pulpit, back to preaching, back to winning souls, back to meeting spiritual needs" at his church in Lynchburg, Va., Falwell said at a news conference.

"I am now rededicating my life to the preaching of the gospel," to taking care of Liberty University, which he founded, and to other ministries including one he hopes will lead to a national telephone crisis line offering help to pregnant teen-agers, to drug addicts and to others in need, he said.

Falwell, who founded the Moral Majority in 1979 as a group to mobilize conservative Christians on political issues, said "eight years is a long time."

He acknowledged that finances at his church and university have suffered while he spent time and energy elsewhere. And he said that conservative Christians drawn to politics and other public causes during the 1980s can carry on well without him.

Democrats Win Top Spots In Kentucky, Mississippi

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

Voters chose reform-minded Democrats Wallace Wilkinson and Ray Mabus as new governors of Kentucky and Mississippi and narrowly gave Philadelphia Mayor W. Wilson Goode a second term over an ex-mayor who bitterly refused to concede.

"I'm sure that there was fraud," Frank Rizzo told supporters early today after returns from all but seven of 1,739 precincts showed Goode winning with 332,396 votes or 51 percent to his 318,516 or 49 percent.

"I will never concede to him," insisted Rizzo, a former Democrat who became a Republican to challenge Goode, the first black mayor of the nation's fifth-largest city. "This election's not over yet."

Whatever the outcome of Rizzo's challenge, two big-city mayor's races definitely weren't over yet.

In San Francisco, a crowded contest was sent into a Dec. 8 runoff early today as the leading candidate, state Assemblyman Art Agnos, fell just short of a majority. With all precincts reporting, Agnos had 88,275 votes or 48.2 percent, followed by city Supervisor John Molinari, 52, with 45,566 votes or 24.9 percent. The winner will succeed Dianne Feinstein, who was required by statute to leave office after two terms.

And Miami Mayor Xavier Suarez was forced into a Nov. 10 runoff against Maurice Ferre, the man he ousted two years ago. With all precincts reporting, Suarez led with 19,330 votes or 42.6 percent, Ferre had 14,692 votes or 32.4 percent and black lawyer Arthur Teele Jr. had 10,415 or 22.9 percent.

In other mayoral elections Tuesday, most big-city incumbents had an easier time winning new terms, including Raymond Flynn of Boston, Kathy Whitmire of Houston, William Hudnut of Indianapolis and Palmer DePaulis of Salt Lake City.

But in Charlotte, N.C., Harvey Gantt, a Democrat and the city's first black mayor, was upset in his bid for a third term by Republican Sue Myrick, a former city councilor.

Baltimore got its first elected black mayor, Kurt L. Schmoke, the city prosecutor who swamped Republican Samuel Culotta. Schmoke earlier won the Democratic primary over another black, Clarence Du Burns, who had inherited the mayor's job in January when William Donald Schaefer became governor.

And in Hartford, Conn., Democrat Carrie Saxon Perry became the first black woman elected mayor of a major Northeastern city, handily defeating Republican Philip L. Steele.

Scores of propositions were on ballots around the nation. Virginia voters made their state the 28th to authorize a lottery; Texans legalized racetrack betting for the first time in 50 years; Washington, D.C., voters turned down a plan to require a deposit on beverage containers. Maine voters rejected for the third time in seven years a proposal to force the shutdown of the state's only nuclear power plant, and voters in Mississippi amended their constitution to remove an archaic ban on interracial marriage.

The victories by state Auditor Mabus in Mississippi and millionaire businessman Wilkinson in Kentucky extended long-established Democratic statehouse dynasties, but both men promised to make big changes.

"I think this is a new day for Mississippi," said Mabus, who campaigned as a crusader after a term as auditor spent investigating irregularities by county supervisors around the state. "I think change has come to Mississippi, and this says that we will no longer settle for status quo."

With 84 percent of precincts reporting, Mabus had 317,320 votes, or 53 percent, to 276,096 votes or 47 percent for Republican businessman Jack Reed. Mabus will succeed Gov. Bill

Allain, who declined to seek a second term.

Wilkinson, whose millions are self-made, had asked voters for a mandate to impress on the General Assembly the public support for his campaign platform opposing higher taxes, supporting a state lottery and advocating change in state government. He won by the largest margin in state history.

"I think the people of Kentucky tonight have spoken loudly and spoken clearly that they want change. And I'm going to fight every day for them to give them that," Wilkinson said as he thanked supporters.

Unofficial returns from all of 3,286 precincts gave Wilkinson 504,095 votes, or 64.8 percent, to Republican state Rep. John Harper's 272,910 votes, or 35.2 percent. The current governor, Martha Layne Collins, was barred by law from succeeding herself.

Goode, who was scarred by the handling of the radical group MOVE in 1985, when 11 people died and 61 home destroyed after police dropped a bomb from a helicopter, struck a conciliatory note in claiming victory.

"The time is now for everyone to join with us," he said. "We've had a good victory, and now we're going to build and unify this city. ... We will continue to build a new prosperity for the 1990s and beyond, to bring business, to bring jobs, to bring hope and economic opportunity to all the people of our city."

Chemist Is Held In Shooting Threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unemployed chemist who allegedly threatened to kill President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz is being held without bond on federal and state charges and is to undergo a psychiatric evaluation.

U.S. Magistrate Jean Dwyer issued the orders Tuesday after Edward Lewis Gallo, 41, of Worcester, Mass., was arrested and charged with transporting a weapon across state lines to carry out a threat against a public official.

He also is charged in Massachusetts with threatening a public official.

Following his arrest at a Washington motel, investigators searching Gallo's car found a Colt AR-15 rifle with three fully loaded 30-round magazines of ammunition; a Mossberg semi-automatic shotgun; a Remington Model 870 12-gauge pump shotgun with sawed off barrel and stock; and numerous shotgun shells loaded with buckshot.

As police were taking Gallo to be booked, he said he was on vacation and planned to do some hunting.

Gallo's mother told a State Department investigator in Massachusetts on Sunday that her son left their home with his guns wrapped in a fatigue jacket, according to court papers.

His last words to his mother were "Shultz, you're dead," the papers said.

Rose Gallo also said her son had told her several days earlier, "Kill, kill Reagan."

"It is her belief he is unstable mentally," assistant U.S. Attorney John Finnigan told the magistrate.

He said Gallo "has been hearing voices" for the last two years and said Mrs. Gallo told authorities that the episodes had become more frequent.

Gallo, wearing a blue button-down shirt and brown corduroy pants, told the magistrate, "My mother can probably arrange for a lawyer," but then accepted a court-appointed attorney when told his defense could be expensive.

Gallo was laboratory manager at the Upper Blackstone Water Pollution Abatement District in Worcester from 1976 to September 1986, according to plant manager Arthur Levesque.

Levesque would not explain the circumstances under which Gallo left his job.

Sgt. Michael Vacca of the Worcester Police Department said he had been told that Gallo spent his time watching television news shows and often became quite upset.

"He distrusted politicians in general and said he was going out to kill politicians," Vacca said.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the department's Bureau of Diplomatic Security increased its protection of Shultz and launched an investigation after being tipped by Worcester police.

Gallo was found by District of Columbia police at a motel in the northeast section of the city, several miles from the State Department.

He was arrested after a brief struggle in which a police officer suffered a dislocated shoulder, according to D.C. police.

Administration Faces Major Reshuffling Of Senior Advisers

By JAMES GERSTENZANG and JOHN M. BRODER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, braced for a major shuffling of its most senior national security posts in anticipation of the resignation of Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger, is preparing a new alignment of senior advisers to President Reagan in the midst of final plans for the U.S.-Soviet summit conference barely one month away.

In the short run, the expected departure of Weinberger is not expected to have a major policy impact. Citing his lack of involvement in the last meeting between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Iceland, for example, administration officials predicted that the secretary's absence would have no impact on current summit preparations.

But hard-line conservatives expressed fears Tuesday that his likely replacement by national security adviser Frank C. Carlucci, widely known as a conciliator, may weaken the Pentagon in disputes over arms control policy with the State Department.

"I don't think Carlucci has the same relationship with the president that Weinberger has. That has been instrumental in the exercise of influence by Weinberger," a former senior Pentagon official said.

Some conservatives complained that former Sen. John G. Tower, R-Texas, would be a better choice for the post because he enjoys the president's confidence and is seen as a hard-liner on arms control issues.

These critics believe that Carlucci's nomination was engineered by White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. and Secretary of State George P. Shultz — his allies among the so-called administration "pragmatists" in their continuing dispute with the president's more conservative allies — to guarantee their authority over foreign policy.

The White House plans Thursday to announce Weinberger's resignation, the nomination of Carlucci and his replacement by his deputy, Army Lt. Gen. Colin L. Powell, government sources said. Weinberger is resigning to help care for his ailing wife, Jane, and not because of any policy dispute, according to senior officials and friends of Weinberger outside government.

He is expected to remain in his post, which he has held since the beginning of the Reagan administration in 1981, until his successor is confirmed by the Senate — process that could be delayed until after the summit meeting, which begins in Washington on Dec. 7.

No date for has been set for Senate hearings. Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said after a White House meeting that he did not expect Carlucci, who has maintained good relations with the Congress, to encounter any difficulties in winning Senate approval.

Although Carlucci was a protege of the secretary of defense, Weinberger has a much more combative reputation. "Cap is a very tenacious man," said a former senior Pentagon official, using Weinberger's nickname. "He fights until the battle is over and then he continues to fight."

Weinberger's hand was strengthened further by his close personal relationship with Reagan, an association that has lasted more than 20 years as an adviser in and out of government. He has been a Reagan confidant since Reagan's days as governor of California and — along with Samuel R. Pierce Jr., secretary of housing and urban development — is one of only two members of the first Reagan Cabinet still serving in their original posts.

"Whether a lame duck will have the same influence as someone who is staying on is a good question," said Robert B. Sims, Weinberger's former spokesman. But, Sims added, Weinberger "is likely to be able to make his weight felt right up until the last because of his relationship with the president and his seniority in the administration."

Deadbeat Student Loans Could Cost Schools More Aid Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett today threatened to expel colleges and trade schools from all federal student aid programs if they allow future student loan default rates to exceed 20 percent.

Bennett said defaults in the Guaranteed Student Loan program now cost taxpayers more than $1.6 billion a year and have become "intolerable."

He released a campus-by-campus list of default rates at 7,295 colleges, universities and trade schools for fiscal 1985. Thirty-two percent of the institutions had default rates over 20 percent, including 500 with default rates above 50 percent.

Bennett said the primary responsibility to repay the loans rests with the former students, but institutions bear a responsibility as well.

He has ordered an immediate review of the programs at all institutions with default rates above 50 percent, and instructed his inspector general to "focus audit and investigative efforts on those institutions where the program review suggests the existence of waste, fraud or abuse."

The government counted as a defaulter anyone who was supposed to begin repaying student loans in fiscal 1985 and who had failed to do so by Sept. 30, 1986, the end of fiscal 1986.

The overall default rate in the heavily subsidized loan program is about 13 percent but rates vary greatly from school to school.

In West Virginia, for instance, Bennett's department said that 49.8 percent of the loan recipients from West Virginia State College had defaulted. That compared with just 9.95 percent of the borrowers from West Virginia University.

In general, beauty colleges and other trade schools dominated the list of deadbeats, although some public and community colleges also had high default rates. Four-year universities generally had below-average default rates.

For example, in California, the default rate among 3,481 borrowers from the University of California at Los Angeles was 9.27 percent, and at Berkeley the rate was 7.7 percent among 2,217 borrowers. The rate was 66.4 percent for 1,208 borrowers who went to the Sierra College of Business, 55.9 percent for 1,055 from Webster Career College and 54.5 percent for 1,146 from the United College of Business.

There were a number of cases of 100 percent default rates, but usually they were instances like the New York Institute of Technology, where that was for the one and only institute student who was supposed to begin repaying loans in fiscal 1985.

FDA Says NutraSweet Complaints Unfounded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says it has reviewed 3,500 complaints and found no scientific evidence undermining its confidence in the artificial sweetener aspartame, which is marketed as NutraSweet.

FDA Commissioner Frank Young told the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee on Tuesday that most of the complaints were mild, involving reported reactions such as headaches and dizziness.

He said the number of complaints is relatively low for a product so widely used and that there is no consistent pattern of symptoms that can be attributed to the use of aspartame.

Aspartame is a popular artificial sweetener marketed under the brand name NutraSweet. It is consumed by an estimated 200 million people around the world in various food products.

"We do not have any medical or scientific evidence that undermines our confidence in the safety of aspartame," said Young. "Based on the evidence to date, the agency has concluded that aspartame has withstood the requirements of the law that there be reasonable certainty of no harm."

Billionaire Boys' Jury Deadlocks

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — The murder case against a Billionaire Boys Club bodyguard ended in a mistrial for the second time in two years when a judge declared the jury deadlocked after nine days of deliberations.

Tuesday's mistrial of Jim Pittman was expected to complicate the debate over whether NBC should be allowed to broadcast a TV mini-series on the case. A federal court hearing was scheduled for this afternoon.

The jury said Tuesday it was hopelessly split 8-4 in favor of acquitting Pittman of murdering Ron Levin, a Beverly Hills con man who reportedly tricked fellow members of the exclusive social and business club into a commodities hoax.

In 1985, a jury deadlocked 10-2 in favor of conviction.

The 34-year-old Pittman's former boss, Billionaire Boys Club founder Joe Hunt, has been convicted in the 1984 slaying of Levin, whose body was never found. Prosecutors allege Pittman shot Levin on Hunt's orders.

Pittman was arrested in 1984 in New York City, where police said he had been using Levin's name and two of his credit cards.

After declaring the mistrial, Superior Court Judge James A. Albracht ordered attorneys to appear in court Nov. 10, when prosecutors are expected to announce whether Pittman will be tried a third time. He remained in custody Tuesday on $500,000 bail.

Pittman's attorney, Jeff Brodey, had sought to block the NBC broadcast, scheduled to be shown Sunday and Monday.

A request to keep the movie off the air also was filed in U.S. District Court by Hunt's attorney, Jeffrey L. Melcer, and a hearing was scheduled for today. The attorneys contend the broadcast would hurt their clients' cases.

Hunt, who got a life sentence in the Levin case, faces trial in San Mateo in the slaying of the father of a former member of the Billionaire Boys Club.

Burglary Victim Held In Shooting

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP) — A man whose house was burglarized on two successive nights could face a homicide charge now that the intruder he ambushed on the third night has died from gunshot wounds, authorities said.

John Howard, 29, was booked on an attempted murder charge and freed on $5,000 bail after allegedly lying in wait in bushes outside his home with a .22-caliber handgun to ambush break-in suspect David Taylor, who was shot in the head.

Taylor, 28, was declared brain-dead Tuesday, according to a spokesman at the JFK Medical Center in Atlantis.

Seven hours later organ transplant teams removed his heart for a man in Jackson, Miss., and his liver for a person in Pittsburgh, said Jaunita Spires, assistant director of the University of Miami Organ Procurement Program.

Howard lost a camera in a Friday night break-in. Saturday night, someone stole Howard's electric guitar. "He told an officer 'next time I'll shoot him,' and that's what he did," said Walton. "He set a trap."

Howard pretended not to be home Sunday night and hid in the bushes with a gun, police said.

He saw someone enter the same window used in the previous break-ins and Taylor allegedly emerged with a 19-inch television.

Nicaragua Says Defector Passed Over For Promotion

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A key military official who defected to the United States resented being passed over for promotion and probably began working for the CIA in September, Defense Minister Humberto Ortega said.

Ortega said his staff supervisor, Maj. Roger Miranda Bengoechea, was a "little worm" who had access to important information but who probably took documents of little strategic value when he left Nicaragua on Oct. 25.

Miranda, 34, first went to Mexico City, where he turned himself over to the U.S. Embassy, Ortega said Tuesday. An embassy spokesman in Mexico City, William Graves, said Tuesday night he had "no information on that."

Ortega said he had information indicating that Miranda was already in the United States, although he did not elaborate, and that Miranda had telephoned a member of the Nicaraguan army trying to persuade him to work for the CIA.

A capable guerrilla leader during the Sandinistas' struggle to topple the U.S.-backed Somoza dictatorship in the late 1970s, Miranda was "resentful" at being passed over in July for promotion to lieutenant colonel, Ortega said.

News reports published in the United States, quoting anonymous sources, said Miranda had been spying for the U.S. government for a long time.

But Ortega said Miranda was "reached by and fell in love with the CIA" in the United States when he accompanied Rosario Murillo, companion of President Daniel Ortega, to California on Sept. 5 to visit a demonstrator who was injured while protesting U.S. aid to the anti-Sandinista Contra rebels.

Miranda probably deserted now in the belief that he had information that would be useful to the Central Intelligence Agency, especially on the terms of a Central American peace plan go into effect this week, Humberto Ortega said.

The Defense Ministry said Friday that Miranda took $15,000 in government money when he left during a government audit of the ministry's finances.

Ortega, the brother of the president, acknowledged Miranda's position would have given him access to "important information" that could now be in the hands of the CIA.

But he tried to minimize the damage, saying Miranda "stupidly would have believed he was taking extremely useful, extremely important information."

For example, Ortega said, Miranda may have taken "photocopies of the military defense operations of the capital, of the air force, of the tank and artillery brigades." But Ortega said, "When have we ever hidden from thousands of Nicaraguans the preparations for defense?"

Miranda recently would have had access to Ortega's own conversation with the high command about "strategy, doctrine, even where the war in Central America would go in case of a U.S. intervention," the minister said.

The leftist Sandinista government has long predicted the U.S. military will invade Nicaragua as the only way to oust the regime.

Ortega also said Miranda could have taken information on the Sandinistas' negotiations to obtain MiG fighter jets from the Soviet Union.

"When have we hidden from the world that we are seeking to acquire fighter jets to defend ourselves?" he said. He said it is widely known the government built an airfield at Puente Huete near Managua for the aircraft.

"We feel burned by this treason, but we are not aggrieved, we are not sad," Ortega said.

He predicted the Reagan administration would "try to mount an enormous show" to depict the desertion as proof of disunity in the ruling Sandinista front. "But this will only be a little firecracker," Ortega added.

The Contras' clandestine Radio Liberation said Monday the charge that Miranda took money was designed to discredit him. It compared his desertion to that of Cuban Gen. Rafael del Pino who went to the United States this year.

The last high-ranking army deserter in Nicaragua was Comandante Eden Pastora, one of the original Sandinista leaders after the revolution, who quit in 1981 to lead a now-defunct Contra unit, Ortega said.

Prison Abuse Charge Filed

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International today urged Singapore to release six prisoners accused of plotting to overthrow the government and accused the government of mistreating them and other detainees to extract confessions.

The human rights organization said the prisoners were among 22 people accused of involvement in a Marxist plot and arrested in May and June under Singapore's Internal Security Act. It permits detention for up to two years without trial.

Amnesty said the government has released 16 members of the group but put restrictions on 15 of them.

There was no immediate comment from the Singapore government.

In a 28-page report, the human rights group said a fact-finding mission to Singapore in June "had confirmed that the (22) detainees were prisoners of conscience, imprisoned solely for their non-violent opposition to the government."

Amnesty also urged the release of Chia Thye Poh, a former member of Parliament, held without charges for 21 years.

Iranians Stage Mass Demonstrations On Anniversary Of Embassy Siege

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Millions of Iranians chanted anti-American slogans at rallies in Tehran and other cities today to mark the eighth anniversary of the 1979 takeover of the U.S. Embassy, Iranian news reports said.

Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani told demonstrators in the capital's Azadi Square: "If the United States doesn't want another Vietnam or Lebanon, it should immediately withdraw its force from the Persian Gulf."

The rallies were "a glorious manifestation" of Iranian anger toward the United States, he declared, as the crowd chanted, "The Persian Gulf is Reagan's graveyard!" and "Victory, with God's help, will soon be ours!"

Meanwhile, a convoy of U.S. warships and reflagged Kuwaiti tankers headed through the gulf toward Kuwait, and the Pentagon was investigating reports that a U.S. Navy frigate in the gulf fired on a fishing boat, not a hostile Iranian craft as the Pentagon believed. Gulf shipping sources said the attack killed an Indian crewman.

Iraq announced renewed air raids, claiming its warplanes today hit three Iranian oil centers and a ship in the gulf.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said millions of Revolutionary Guards, soldiers, government officials and citizens demonstrated across the nation on "Death To America Day."

The state-run television network, also monitored in Nicosia, showed Tehran's tree-lined Jomhuri Islami, or Islamic Republic Avenue, jammed with demonstrators shaking clenched fists above their heads.

Prime Minister Hussein Musavi and other leaders had exhorted Iranians to make the national holiday "a day on which America should tremble with fear."

Today also is the birthday of the Prophet Mohammed, founder of Islam, and the 24th anniversary of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's exile to Turkey and later Iraq and France. Khomeini was forced out of the country by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, who accused him of fomenting unrest.

Fourteen years later, pro-Khomeini students staged protests against the shah, triggering the Islamic revolution that toppled the shah early in 1979 and brought Khomeini back in triumph.

On Nov. 4, 1979, the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was stormed by militants calling themselves "Moslem students following the Imam's line." Dozens of Americans were taken prisoner.

Most were soon freed, but 52 were held hostage for 444 days until their release in January 1981 under an agreement mediated by Algeria.

Today's rally in Tehran began with a march outside the former U.S. Embassy. Many participants wore white shrouds, indicating their willingness to become "martyrs of the revolution" in the fight against America.

Rafsanjani said the demonstrations showed Iran "cannot be intimidated by the United States."

"The government, the armed forces and the country's potential should be mobilized so that the United States will find that it has made a big mistake ... and that this revolutionary nation will not tolerate this provocation," he said.

The latest convoy of U.S. warships and Kuwaiti tankers was the 15th since Kuwait requested U.S.

protection from attacks by Iran, which accuses the Kuwait of aiding Iraq in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Iraq's official news agency, also monitored in Cyprus, said Iraqi warplanes attacked petrochemical and production installations in the Baznan oilfield in the northern gulf. It said the facilities were in flames.

The agency, quoting a military communique, said other jets also scored "direct and effective hits" on an unidentified "large naval target," which usually means a tanker, off the Iranian coast.

There was no independent confirmation of the reported attacks.

Tehran claimed an Iraqi plane was shot down today by ground fire in northwest Iran and the pilot captured.

Gulf shipping sources said Tuesday a U.S. Navy frigate fired on a fishing boat Sunday and killed an Indian crew member. The Pentagon identified the Navy ship as the USS Carr.

The Pentagon has said the Carr fired .50-caliber machine guns to turn back a "suspected Iranian vessel" that had ignored two bursts of warning fire and was racing toward the refueling tanker MV Patriot, being escorted by the Carr.

The sources said the boat was actually a fishing vessel and that it was moving aside to make way for the convoy.

The Pentagon issued a statement Tuesday saying Navy officials in the gulf "have been asked to review" the incident in light of the reports but added, "but at this point we have no reason to change our original statement."

Seventeen Held In Air Base Killings

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military today said 17 people have been detained in connection with the slaying of two U.S. soldiers, a retired American serviceman and a Filipino outside Clark Air Base.

In other developments today, police rounded up hundreds of people in raids on alleged communist hideouts, and government officials said the Southeast Asian summit would go ahead despite an attempt to bomb the meeting site.

Lt. Col. Amado Espino Jr., police commander in Angeles City, told reporters that 11 men were picked up Tuesday as part of the probe into the Oct. 28 killings near the base 50 miles north of Manila.

Six others were picked up last week and remain in custody on preliminary charges of illegal weapons possession, Espino said.

None has been formally charged with the unprecedented killings, but he said at least six are members of the communist New People's Army.

The group was blamed for the shootings, but no group has claimed responsibility.

Espino said investigators were awaiting results of ballistics tests to determine if weapons seized during the arrests were used in the killings.

In Manila, police and air force security units launched the early morning raids in two districts of suburban Pasay City near the city airport.

The areas are believed to include hideouts of communist urban guerrillas and crime syndicates.

Brig. Gen. Alexander Aguirre, capital commander, told reporters the raids were "to ferret out terrorists and criminals" following a wave of killings in the capital in recent weeks.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT ON THE ENVIRONMENT AND NOTICE TO PUBLIC OF REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

November 4, 1987

Town of Ayden
Post Office Box 219
Ayden, North Carolina 28513

(919)746-4152

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

On or about November 23, 1987, the Town of Ayden will request the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) for the following project:

Town of Ayden FY 87 Community Development Block Grant, including:
C-1: East First Street Revitalization Area
C-2: East/West Avenue Revitalization Area

Purpose of Notice

This Notice is intended to meet two separate procedural requirements of 24 CFR Part 58: (1) To provide notice to the public that the Town of Ayden has determined that the request for the release of funds for the above-named project will not have a significant impact on the environment, (2) To provide notice to the public that the Town of Ayden is requesting the release of funds for the above-named project.

Finding of No Significant Impact

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and accordingly the above-named Town has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).

The reasons for such decision not to prepare such Statement is as follows:

It has been determined that the proposed projects, which will include the rehabilitation of 29 substandard dwelling units, demolition of 9 dilapidated structures, relocation of 2 households, and construction of the following: 2,300 L.F. water lines, 1,900 L.F. storm drain lines, 1,900 L.F. of street paving, and 2 fire hydrants, are not actions which will adversely affect the quality of the human or natural environment.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within project has been made by the Town of Ayden which documents the environmental review of the project. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying upon request at the Ayden Town Manager's office, Ayden Municipal Building, during normal office hours.

No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of Federal Funds.

Public Comments on Findings

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the Town to the Town Manager's office. Such written comments should be received at the Town Manager's office on or before November 20, 1987. All such comments so received will be considered and the Town will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action the within project prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

Release of Funds

The Town of Ayden will undertake a project described above with Block Grant funds from the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. The Town of Ayden is certifying to NRCD that the Town of Ayden and Mayor Marvin C. Baidree, Jr., in his official capacity as Mayor, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision making, and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, the Town of Ayden may use the Block Grant funds, and NRCD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

OBJECTIONS TO STATE RELEASE OF FUNDS

NRCD will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is on one of the following bases: (a) That the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer or another officer of applicant approved by NRCD; or (b) that applicant's environmental review record for the project indicates omission of a required decision, finding, or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24 CFR Part 58), and may be addressed to NRCD at P.O. Box 27887, Raleigh, North Carolina 27611.

Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by NRCD. No objection received after December 21, 1987, will be considered by NRCD. Comments must specify whether they concern the finding of no significant impact or the intent to request release of funds.

Mayor Marvin C. Baidree, Jr.
P.O. Box 219
Town of Ayden, North Carolina

Soviet Negotiator Says More Arms Cuts Likely

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The superpowers will sign a treaty next year to reduce their strategic arsenals by 50 percent and ban deployment of space weapons for a time, a veteran Soviet arms negotiator predicted.

Viktor P. Karpov, former chief of the Soviet negotiating team at the Geneva arms talks and now a senior adviser in the Foreign Ministry, made the statement Tuesday, citing what he called "an understanding" between the superpowers.

A senior U.S. official, however, said there had been progress but no clear breakthrough on the future of President Reagan's space-based defense system, popularly known as Star Wars. The issue has stymied negotiators for more than two years.

Karpov predicted there would be an agreement on strategic, or long-range nuclear arsenals, and space weapons at a summit in the Soviet Union next year. His account was reported by Tass, the official Soviet news agency.

Tass sought his opinion of the scheduled Dec. 7 summit in Washington between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Reagan and Gorbachev are expected at the meeting to sign an agreement eliminating their countries' short- and medium-range nuclear missiles.

Tass said: "An understanding was reached that the Washington meeting will ... outline the basis for an agreement for a 50 percent cut in the strategic offensive arms" on condition of a period of time being set to disallow withdrawal from the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

Karpov was quoted as saying the Soviets recommend a 10-year prohibition on withdrawal from ABM, which it maintains would be violated by the Star Wars program. But he acknowledged it was subject to further negotiation, Tass said.

A fourth U.S.-Soviet summit, to be held in Moscow in the first half of 1988, "will sum up that work," Karpov said.

"A Soviet-American agreement on a 50 percent cut in the strategic offensive arms is to be signed at it," Tass said.

Although the Reagan administration and the Soviets disagree on how much research and development of a space-based defense may be conducted within the limits of the ABM treaty, both sides acknowledge the document prohibits deployment of a defensive shield like that envisioned by Reagan.

Either side is free to break out of the treaty on six-months' notice, and the Soviet Union has sought a non-withdrawal pact to block deployment of Star Wars, officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

A senior American official familiar with the state of U.S.-Soviet negotiations said the goal of signing a strategic arms reduction treaty next year is "a realistic one."

But the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there has been no breakthrough that would lead to resolution of the dispute on the Star Wars project.

The official said there have been indications the Soviets now hope to "put some predictability in the process," rather than gain a clear ban on a space-based defense.

Reagan has refused to consider such a ban.

But there has been no indication the Soviets are prepared to separate a strategic arms agreement from Star Wars, the official said.

On Monday, Gorbachev said he would use the Washington summit and Reagan's scheduled visit to Moscow next year to press for a "palpable breakthrough" leading to reductions on strategic weapons and block an arms race in space.

Reagan Assures Europe Arms Pact Won't Weaken Western Alliance

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a speech broadcast today in Europe, said a new U.S.-Soviet arms agreement will not weaken the Western Alliance and pledged that America's commitment to the security of Europe "remains unshakable."

Reagan also hailed the soon-to-be signed treaty to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear (INF) missiles as "the beginning, a first big step" on the path toward cutbacks in the superpowers' strategic nuclear arsenals.

However, he said it is "totally unacceptable" for the Soviet Union to try to link reductions in strategic weapons with restrictions on the U.S. missile defense plan, known as "Star Wars" or the Strategic Defense Initiative, SDI.

"We won't bargain away SDI, which offers the promise of a safer world in which both sides would rely more on defenses — which threaten no one — than on offensive forces," Reagan said.

Reagan's address, taped on Tuesday at the White House, was broadcast by satellite channels of the United States Information Agency's "Worldnet" and Voice of America. It comes about a month before Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev arrives in Washington for a summit beginning Dec. 7 with Reagan to sign the INF treaty and discuss other arms issues.

In his remarks, Reagan acknowledged that the INF treaty has caused some concern that it will remove a nuclear deterrent to the Warsaw Pact's huge conventional forces and cause a split among the Alliance.

"For our part, the commitment of the United States to the Alliance and to the security of Europe — INF treaty or no INF treaty — remains unshakable," Reagan said.

"Over 300,000 American servicemen with you on the continent and our steadfast nuclear guarantee underscore this pledge," he said.

"Those who worry that we will somehow drift apart or that deterrence has been weakened are mistaken on both counts.

"Our ties will be strengthened, not diminished, by this success," Reagan said. "Such an historic reduction in nuclear weapons, as now appears on the way, will be a resounding vindication of the unity, strength and determination of the Alliance."

He praised the "unflinching solidarity" of the Alliance since its 1979 decision to deploy INF weapons to counter similar Soviet forces already in place.

"Had the nuclear freeze and unilateral disarmament protestors won, Europe would now be condemned to live under the shadow of Soviet nuclear-armed INF missiles," Reagan said.

The president said the shorter-range Soviet missiles that will be eliminated are capable of carrying not just nuclear warheads, but also chemical and conventional warheads. "Thus we will be making a promising start in cutting back these threats to Europe, as well."

Reagan said he welcomed the new era of openness, or "glasnost," under Gorbachev but said the West will watch for tangible changes in Soviet behavior "in deciding what is real or illusory."

In particular, he mentioned the areas of human rights, emigration and the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan, which he said "is most certainly a dreadful quagmire" for the Kremlin.

"Soviet leaders can win accolades from people of good will everywhere and free their country from a no-win situation by grounding their helicopter gunships, promptly withdrawing their troops and permitting the Afghan people to choose their own destiny," Reagan said.

He said another sign to look for "would be a loosening of the Soviet hold over Eastern Europe. Why should the peoples of Europe remain divided as they are with barbed wire, watch towers and machine guns?"

NATO Remains Firm On Deterrent Forces

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, meeting with Europe's military leaders for perhaps the last time, said NATO must beef up its remaining nuclear arsenal after the United States and Soviet Union scrap their mid-range missiles.

Weinberger said NATO's defense ministers agreed unanimously Tuesday that the alliance must maintain an effective nuclear deterrent to a possible Soviet attack and must bolster its conventional forces to offset Soviet troop and tank superiority.

The nuclear arsenal NATO has left after U.S. Tomahawk cruise missiles and Pershing 2 missiles are dismantled should be modernized for greater accuracy and survivability without adding more warheads, Weinberger said.

The proposed treaty is to be signed Dec. 7 by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Life In An Airport Home Can Be Noisy

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — If you want to correspond with the Jesse Wilcox family, don't write to their street address: 6620 NW 36th St. Miami, Fla., 33266. They'll never get it.

That's because no one wants to believe the Wilcoxes live at Miami International Airport.

"You're kidding," said an employee at the airport administration offices when told a family lives off one of the main runways. She asked that her name not be used.

"They're going to call you a liar when you tell people we live here," advised Wilcox, who has resided in the only house on the airport for four years.

"People who live only three blocks from here say they've never seen the house," he added.

However, the one-story, two-bedroom cement block house with a children's swing set out front is clearly visible from the perimeter road on the north edge of the airfield.

Built on airport property, it is part of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Wilcox is an animal caretaker for USDA. He's responsible for animals in quarantine before they are shipped by plane to domestic and foreign ports.

Ironically, when Wilcox is asked where he lives, he says, "Wilcox Field," the seldom-used dual name of Miami International Airport.

The man whose name honors this huge airfield was J. Mark Wilcox, a Florida congressman who, in the early 1930s, campaigned for the United States to build an air force.

For 11 years, J. Mark Wilcox served as an attorney for the port authority here and several months after he died Feb. 4, 1956, the Dade County Commission decided to name the airport after him.

Coincidentally, both Wilcoxes were born in Georgia. J. Mark Wilcox, a white man, was from Willacoochee while Jesse Wilcox, a black man, was born in Jacksonville, Ga.

"We're not related," Jesse said, smiling.

For Mrs. Wilcox, life beside the airport runways is not much different from living elsewhere. She works as a school crossing guard and cafeteria monitor for the Miami Springs school system.

Daughters Lavonne, 15, and Chandra, 10, ride a school bus during the week but, each new term, that creates a problem.

"Every year I go through the same thing. The bus drivers say they can't find the house or say it isn't here," Mrs. Wilcox said.

The continuous noise of departing and arriving aircraft go unnoticed by the family — except the Concorde, a needle-nosed supersonic jet operated by British Airways.

"You can set your watch by it — Wednesday, Friday and Sunday it takes off at 10:45 a.m.," said Mrs. Wilcox.

"I hear the planes, but it doesn't bother me," added Wilcox, 46. "Even the kids sleep with the windows up."

Enclosed by chain-link fence topped with barbed wire, the Wilcox home is not bothered by salesmen or peddlers.

"I enjoy the privacy," said Wilcox. "Nobody knocks at my door, but I can't get a newspaper delivered here."

Tar Heel Enjoys Life On Mountain

Bachelor Finds The Tennessee Hills To His Liking, Except The Winters

By LEANNE WAXMAN
Associated Press Writer

ERWIN, Tenn. (AP) — Dewey Hensley has lived in the heart of Appalachia a good long time, and he doesn't relish another winter on Spivey Mountain above this tiny, East Tennessee town.

"I don't much like it up here anymore when the cold comes," said Hensley, 78, from the porch of his meager house about halfway up the Unicoi County mountain.

"I'm a walking hospital case. I just drag around," said Hensley, well-known in this area, where he has lived since before World War II.

Hensley has spent most of his life around these parts and has plenty of stories to tell, like the one about a big, black lion that killed his great-grandfather.

"It was the biggest ole shaggiest thing," he said. "It was a big ole mountain lion."

It was somebody else, he said, who shot at an airplane passing overhead a few years back.

"They tried to blame that on me. People told a lie on me," Hensley said.

Hensley, who counts among his physical ailments arthritis and stomach problems, is a confirmed bachelor who subsists on $357 a month in military and other government benefits.

There is little more than an old wood-burning stove, the only source of heat in the winter, a beat-up refrigerator and a bed in his small house scattered with fruit juice cans and cardboard boxes.

But Hensley has not yet used up his hope.

"I've got a feeling like a millionaire. I'm running on my morale," he said.

Hensley said he farmed near his native Mars Hill, N.C., before he moved to Unicoi County and the Army got him. He said he was discharged March 18, 1944, after non-combat stints in Africa and Sicily for three years. Other facts are lost to balding, slim Hensley as the years drift by on the mountain.

"There wasn't but one thing I liked about the Army — learning how to fly," Hensley said. "It was layin' on that cold, hard ground that give me this arthritis."

Hensley said he hasn't worked since he left the Army because of his health. He has filled the years tooling around on a motorcycle, or driving a battered old Cadillac into town for chats at the local barber shop.

"I used to be a roustabout," Hensley said. "I owned two motorcycles. They nearly killed me I guess 1,000 times, but it didn't happen. They messed up my hip."

Hensley said he gave up motorcycle-riding some years ago because of his arthritis, but he still ventures off the mountain on a regular basis in one of two old Cadillacs parked in his yard.

"My hearing's gone bad on me riding my old motorcycles," he said. "It's the best automobile ever made. You don't hear about people getting killed easy in them things."

Mike Hensley, a sheriff's deputy who is a distant cousin, said his relative is known for driving all over the road.

"If you see him comin' you better get out of the way," he said.

The elder Hensley said he must eat soft foods like rice because of his bad stomach and the fact that he has no teeth.

"I'm saving up my money for a set," he said of the latter. "Them things cost $400."

Hensley said he never married because there are enough people in the world already.

"Sometimes when you're single you're not under the influence of responsibility," he said. "When I get 85 years old I might marry. There's too many people now. There's just standing room only."

Hensley said he has never been a drinker or a smoker.

"Did you know it's a sin to smoke?" he asked a recent visitor as she lit up. "I liked to chew that ole sweet tobacco and spit it yonder, but it got my teeth. I never was drunk in my life. I never was ignorant enough to think about gettin' drunk."

Hensley used to hunt for squirrel and deer in the thick woods separated only by a narrow road that winds through the hollers of Spivey Mountain. But he doesn't anymore.

"I could get my .22 and shoot one of them deer right in the head and blow its brains out. They're not scared of me, so I don't. But these hunters come all dressed up and they get scared. They shoot the place up tryin' to run after 'em."

Hensley suspects he'll spend yet another winter on the familiar mountain, in the woods that he knows so well.

"I guess it's a pretty good place to live up here," he said. "That winter, I don't much like it. It could make me a dead duck."

MOUNTAIN LIFE — Dewey Hensley, 78, is a Mars Hill native who found his spot in nature on Unicoi Mountain near Erwin, Tenn. He says he doesn't relish the idea of another winter in his meager, sometimes open home, but Hensley admits he isn't ready to leave the mountain. (AP Laserphoto)

German Farmers Finding Brides In Other Lands

By GEORGE BOEHRER
Associated Press Writer

RUGENDORF, West Germany (AP) — For many West German farmers, bad weather and complex price policies aren't the only problems: finding a wife is another.

"Part of the problem with German women is the liberation movement," said Helmut Motschmann, a 53-year-old farmer.

"They all want to have their own jobs — they get divorced — they don't want to live on a farm. The world has changed."

Motschmann, whose first wife died 10 years ago, is now married to a 35-year-old woman from the Philippines.

who was interested in farm life," Motschmann said in an interview at his home in the Upper Franconia region of Bavaria, the country's southernmost state.

The former Mercedida Santos smiled as her husband told of their meeting and marriage seven years ago.

Asked how she felt about farm life in West Germany, Mrs. Motschmann replied in English: "It's OK."

The couple has a 5-year-old son, Christopher.

ANN THORNTON

RUSTY SMITH

Two Rose High School seniors, Rusty Smith and Ann Thornton, were selected to perform in the 1987 North Carolina Honors Orchestra performance. Smith is a trumpeter, and Miss Thornton is a flutist.

The concert by North Carolina honors players took place at 4 p.m. on Sunday in Winston-Salem in the Benton Convention Center where the orchestras performed for the annual convention of the North Carolina Bandmasters Association.

Dr. Donald Portnoy of the University of South Carolina conducted the orchestra in the playing of three compositions — a selection from Strauss's "Die Fledermaus," the "Masquerade Suite" by Katchaturian, and Tchaikovsky's "The 1812 Overture."

Smith is the son of Frank and Nancy Smith and is a student of Bill Frazier. Miss Thornton, daughter of Jack and Mary K. Thornton, is a student of Anne Searl. Both are members of the J.H. Rose High School Band directed by Mike Fussell.

'Polka King' Sees Revival Of Dance Come To America

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Polka patriarch Frank Yankovic is celebrating more than a half century of leading the fun from the bandstand.

This is his 56th year of playing the lively Bohemian dance. He's recorded between 75 and 100 albums and another, "Live in Nashville," is due out soon. It is also his 50th year as a recording artist, having put out his first album in 1937 in Cleveland, his long-time home.

Yankovic, the son of Slovenian parents, isn't ready to put down his well-traveled accordion, retire to the sidelines and let someone else play "Beer Barrel Polka." He performs two to four nights a week and sometimes more in the summer. During the winter, he retreats to warmer climates to entertain in places such as Tampa, Fla., and Mesa, Ariz.

"It makes people happy when I play, and I enjoy that," he said in a telephone interview from his home in suburban Cleveland. "Even if they don't dance, you can see them clapping and look under the table and see their feet going up and down."

"It's a happy dance. It's danceable. It enlivens people and gives them spirit. In plain English, it's simply happy."

Over the past decade, the polka has enjoyed a comeback in the United States. The energetic ethnic two-step even attracted the attention of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences which presented a Grammy award for the first time to the best polka album of the year in 1986. It went to Yankovic for his "70 Years of Hits" LP.

The polka, a fast dance with a hop and three small steps, had its origins in the early 19th century in Bohemia, a former kingdom and province of Czechoslovakia. It came to America with the wave of immigrants, and for years was known only as an ethnic dance.

"It's getting bigger and spreading," Yankovic said. "We get teen-agers dancing now. They don't do the authentic dance, but they hop around. A lot of areas that didn't have the polka are starting to get it now."

The 72-year-old accordion player, dubbed "America's polka king," has built up such a following that he rarely has to stay in a hotel in the many cities where he performs. Adoring fans invite him to their homes as their guest.

He's content to remain on the bandstand and play because when he heads for the dance floor, he's mobbed.

"Once in a while, I get in the crowd and try to encourage them," he said. "But the problem is, they all want to dance with me."

Yankovic has quit drinking beer — a social custom widely associated with polka dancing. "I gave up all my drinking, but I drank wine for a while," he said. However, he admitted, "It's hard to (just) play when you see people drinking and having such a good time."

He has no idea how many polka songs he knows. "I couldn't even begin to tell you; hundreds, I suppose."

But "Beer Barrel Polka" ranks as the most requested. "It's simple and the lyrics fit the dance."

His four-piece band, though best known for their polkas, play all types of music. "We watch and try to play what the crowd wants to dance to: the fox trot, the rumba or a rock tune if we have to."

Yankovic's parents arrived in this country in 1903. His father owned a hardware store in Cleveland and took in boarders who taught Slovenian folk songs to young Frank. They also taught him to play the button accordion.

He learned the instrument over his father's objections and gave his first professional performance at age 16. His mother paid $500 from her savings for his first piano accordion and he practiced secretly until his father's feelings softened.

He was in the Army in World War II and nearly had to have his hands amputated because of frostbite suffered during the Battle of the Bulge.

"Gangrene set in and my hands were almost black," he recalled.

Home-Grown Plays Seeking Broadway

LINCOLNSHIRE, Ill. (AP) — Such British dreadnoughts as "Cats" and "Les Miserables" now dominate the Broadway musical waters, but regional theaters in the colonies are mounting a counterattack with smaller craft.

The flagship, launched here recently, is an all-American musical, "Grover's Corners," and the 60-some members of the National Alliance of Musical Theater Producers (NAMTP) hope it proves seaworthy, since it's their declaration of independence from both Britain and Broadway production costs.

"There's a shortage of product coming from Broadway, so the alliance is trying to originate material themselves," said composer Harvey Schmidt, who wrote the music for "Grover's Corners."

On the face of it, "Grover's Corners" should sail. For one thing, it's a musical remake of the most-performed American play, Thornton Wilder's "Our Town." Second, it was put together by Schmidt and librettist Tom Jones, creators of the world's longest-running musical, "The Fantasticks."

"Our Town" won the Pulitzer Prize in 1938 and has never been off the amateur or professional stage since. "The Fantasticks" opened off-Broadway in May 1960, and is still running in New York more than 27 years later.

The premiere run of "Grover's Corners" began July 29 at the Marriott Lincolnshire Theatre in this northwestern Chicago suburb and ended Oct. 11. Jones and Schmidt will restage the show for traditional proscenium theaters. In the spring, it will tour NAMTP theaters in Houston, Pittsburgh and three California cities: Long Beach, Sacramento and San Jose.

A national tour already is being planned for the fall of 1988, but Broadway isn't on the route. Jones and Schmidt estimate the cost of mounting a Broadway production at between $2.5 million and $5 million — something guaranteed to lose money for all but blockbuster musical hits.

"Grover's Corners" isn't meant to be a blockbuster. It's billed as "The musical that takes America back home," and it's about quiet and simple things — family breakfasts, birthday parties and church choir practice.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS CRIME PREVENTION TO YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD.

In Eastern North Carolina, Domino's Pizza people participate in a program we call "People Who Care."

Part of this program is a basic course in crime prevention taught by local law enforcement officials. On any given evening, we have 36 drivers on the road in Greenville. We feel a driver trained to be alert to crime is an asset to our customers. And that's why we take the time to train them. Our employees, including our drivers, learn what they should do—and shouldn't do—if they witness a crime or suspicious activity.

Domino's Pizza wants to be a good community citizen. And working with our local law enforcement officials and neighborhood watch programs, we believe we can do more for our hometown than just deliver the best pizza.

ECU Political Science Professor Writes Biography Of S.C. Judge

ECU News Bureau

A major historical biography of a South Carolina federal judge whose civil rights decisions stirred heated controversy has been completed by Dr. Tinsley E. Yarbrough, an East Carolina University political science professor, and published by Oxford University Press.

The Yarbrough book, "A Passion for Justice: J. Waties Waring and Civil Rights," is the first published biography of the late jurist, an eight generation Charlestonian, who was judge for the Eastern District of South Carolina from 1942 to 1952.

As a federal judge, Waring ended racial designation on juror lists and other traditionally accepted discriminatory practices within his court, ruled in favor of equal pay for black and white public school teachers and struck down rules of the South Carolina Democratic party limiting membership and participation in the party's primaries to white voters only.

Years before the historic U.S. Supreme Court decision in 1954, Waring dissented when a three-judge court upheld South Carolina's segregated school system, becoming the first judge in modern times to contend from the bench that "segregation is per se inequality."

Yarbrough, who conducted exhaustive research and extensive interviews with Waring's contemporaries, contends that "it is unfair to dismiss his struggle for racial justice as an exercise in spite." This is in reference to Waring's having been socially ostracized after his divorce in 1945 to marry a younger woman.

Waring "had hardly been a typical Confederate even before his complete break with the past," Yarbrough writes. "His equal pay rulings preceded his divorce; his efforts in behalf of civil rights continued long after his retirement from the bench, and his harsh attacks on those who did not share his militancy were no respecter of region or race," Yarbrough says.

"His militancy may have been politically naive...but the revolution in his thinking was sincere — even if the darker side of his personality served as a catalyst," Yarbrough says.

An earlier Yarbrough biography of a controversial jurist in the South during the civil rights struggle, "Judge Frank Johnson and Human Rights in Alabama," was published in 1983. Still another Yarbrough work, on U.S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black is to be published by the Duke University Press.

Yarbrough, professor and former chair of the Political Science department at ECU, has been a member of the ECU faculty since 1967.

A native of Decatur, Alabama, Yarbrough is a 1963 graduate of the University of Alabama and received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from that university in 1965 and 1967 respectively.

While at the university, he was a recipient of the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship in 1963 and the National Defense Education Act Fellowship, 1963-66. He has also taught at the University of Virginia. He served as acting chair and chairman of ECU's Department of Political Science from 1979 to 1984.

In addition to his books, for which received prestigious awards, Yarbrough has had more than 25 articles in public law and judicial politics published in forums such as The Virginia Law Review, Duke Law Journal, Vanderbilt Law Review, Texas Law Review and other journals.

During the celebration of the bicentennial of the Constitution, he has given lectures in more than 20 forums, including seminars at Clemson University and The Citadel. Yarbrough is the recipient of several research grants, including the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Farmers Search For Brides

blems in the farming sector.

"We found that for each 100 men there are only between 76 and 80 women," said association director Heide-Marie Seltner.

"We also found that while the young farmers are learning their trade, their mothers are at home to take care of them, so they don't look for a wife."

"Then suddenly the mother is old, the son is 30, and the young women are already married or have a job in the city."

Erich Thiesen, spokesman for the Schleswig-Holstein Farmers' Association says problems finding a farm wife in that northern state are the same.

"We have no accurate statistics on it, but there are more than a dozen advertisements carried in our weekly newspaper from farmers looking for a wife," Thiesen said.

Martin Gripp, single and 31, runs a dairy farm in the Westerhorn district of Schleswig-Holstein, about 25 miles north of Hamburg. He agrees finding a bride is not easy for a farmer.

"It's because we have so little time, the long hours. Most women today don't want to put up with that."

Manfred Petersen, 34, finally got married in July, but only after a story about his trouble finding a wife appeared in a newspaper nearly two years ago.

"After Bild am Sonntag (West Germany's Sunday tabloid) printed the story in February 1986, Cornelia and I met when she came here on vacation," Petersen said of his 27-year-old wife.

Many West Germans take vacations on farms.

Petersen runs a dairy farm near the remote village of Brande Hoernerkirchen, about 20 miles north of Hamburg, not far from Gripp.

Petersen said most of the 30,000 single men among the 300,000 full-time farmers in West Germany don't get a chance to meet women because farms are in remote areas.

Bernd van Deenen, a professor of sociology in Bonn, completed a recent study of 420 single farmers between the ages of 18 and 27, and 500 single women between the ages of 17 and 25 on their attitudes on farm marriages.

"There are a number of reasons farmers have problems finding wives," Deenen said.

"One of them is that people don't see farming as a career with a future because more and more farmers are going broke or have to take on another job to survive."

He said the problems faced by farmers who wait until they're 30 years old to look for a wife are even more complicated.

"For young girls 18 to 21, a man of 28 is already hopelessly old, and the available women his own age have careers."

He added that many women don't realize the life of a farm wife has changed drastically from 20 years ago.

"Today with all the modern appliances and machinery, a woman doesn't have to work from dawn to dusk mowing in the fields as they did then, but that image still exists."

Walruses breed in winter, under-water amid ice floes, says National Geographic.

"I wanna get rid of the cold, but I wish I could keep this deep voice."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Nov. 5

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Look into new modes of expression in your business life; opportunities abound. If you need advice, listen only to qualified opinions.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you're unwilling to compromise a little, you could have quite an argument with a stubborn partner. Be careful in motion of any kind.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Find away to remove obstacles and other restrictions which have been impeding your progress. Avoid a talkative ne-er-do-well.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Improve relationships with old friends who you haven't seen for some time. Be sure you drive with the utmost care tonight.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Plan your schedule carefully so you'll spend as much time at home as at work, while neglecting neither. Pay attention to your health.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Many changes are in the offing, so be prepared for them even though they may happen slowly. Be more practical in your thinking.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Take a good look at the state of your budget. Chances are you'll see it needs some serious revision. Try to economize more in the future.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You are very determined to get your way today, but you'll find that another person is just as eager. Keep your temper in public.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Listen to the advice of a co-worker who you usually have no use for. This person can point out something you've been overlooking.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): A new course of action can help your success if you use a little charm to get it under way. Enjoy the company of friends tonight.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Focus your attention on the domestic scene today. Take your family out for dinner or smoe entertainment this evening.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): A close friend will introduce you to some contacts who can be of assistance to you in the days ahead. Be friendly and sociable.

One of the fascinations of duplicate bridge for the columnist is that it is a fertile source of material. Hands that merit little attention in rubber bridge can be fascinating battles in a pair competition. Here is an example.

North-South were using an artificial one club forcing system. So South's bid was the equivalent of a one club opening in standard methods. When East-West reached four hearts, a contract that would have made, South decided to sacrifice in five clubs. West took the right position when he elected to double rather than bid on.

Since East-West would have scored 620 in four hearts, for a good score they had to set five clubs doubled, four tricks to earn 800 points under the new scoring table; only down three would have netted 500 for a poor score. Three spades and two hearts were the obvious defensive tricks. Where could another trick be developed?

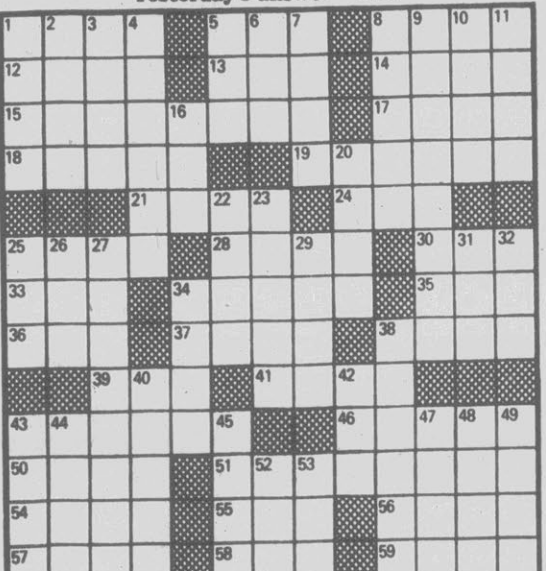

East-West masterfully found the answer: in the trump suit! West started matters off with three winning spades, on the last of which East signalled with the nine of hearts. West then shifted to a low heart, and East's jack won. A heart continuation to West's ace netted the defenders their fifth trick.

Since declarer had to have the ace of diamonds for his opening bid, there were no more tricks to be won in the side suits. Now West landed the telling blow by reverting to spades. East ruffed with the ten of trumps and the defenders had prevented. South could overruff, but in doing so he set up a trump trick for West.

The technical name for this tactic is borrowed from the "noble art of self-defense." It is called an "uppercut."

The Messes I Make With Spaghetti

By Steven Shaw

I like to eat spaghetti but I usually make a mess, that's the problem. Once I was eating spaghetti and I got one piece in my mouth and sucked it up. It hit my brother's hand and he got mad! He knocked over the lamp and it hit the fish bowl. The fish jumped into the turtle pan and the turtle ate the fish, so that was the end of the fish. My brother had to buy new fish. I was lucky my mom didn't see me hit my brother with a piece of spaghetti! Another time I made a mess on the floor and my mother slipped on the floor and broke her leg. I had to clean up the mess.

I just wish I didn't make such a mess. My mom said that we were having hamburgers tonight. I have always hated hamburgers. My mom forced me to take one bite. I took a bite and I liked it three times as much as spaghetti! Hooray! I have something I like and don't make a mess. I wish I could have hamburgers every night. They taste even better with catsup and mustard. This is the greatest day of my entire life. I'm glad my mom made me eat one bite!

Steven Shaw, 8, a student at St. Peter's School wins this week's writing contest.

Three Wishes

By Michael Lamb

I wish for a Porsche painted white,
 I wish for it to be the fastest in sight.

I wish that I could turn sixteen,
 So I could drive my killin' machine.

A Special Grandfather

By Laura Roberts

The saddest thing that ever happened to me occurred on February 12, 1985 at my Grandmother Roberts' house. My grandfather had already had two heart attacks, and his third was fatal. The Roberts family is big, and Granddad meant a lot to each and every one of us.

Every year we'd celebrate Christmas at Grandmother Roberts'. This past Christmas just wasn't the same without Granddad. We used to all laugh together, but now something was holding us back. We all missed him teasing and playing with the kids. I have a picture of him with a ribbon tied around his head making the family laugh.

When he died, my cousin Tommy put his backscratcher in the casket to be buried with Granddad. Granddad used to use his backscratcher to turn the TV volume up and down and all sorts of other things. We thought he might want it with him now.

When my grandfather died, he took a last deep breath and then went to sleep forever. He didn't even make a noise, just said, "I love you," to my grandmother, took a deep breath, and didn't wake up again.

I hope he feels better now that there's no more pain, but I'll always miss and remember him.

Laura Roberts, 14, a student at Tarboro High School receives special mention.

Solve The Riddle

By Thomas Rouse

I am like a snake, but I do not crawl the ground. My skin can have many different patterns and colors. I curse the man by wrapping myself around him. I do this almost everyday, especially the holiest day. I can be seen in places of importance, but to find me you must look to the heart of man. What am I?

Answer: A tie

Thomas Rouse, 17, a student at D.H. Conley High School receives special mention.

Jennifer Tetterton, 13, a student at A.G. Cox School receives special mention.

Fall

By Christopher Austin

No one swims in the cold river,
 While all the children shiver and shiver.
 Me and my brothers play in the leaf pile,
 We stayed there for awhile.
 Fall is here and summer

there,
 Fall is now everywhere.

Christopher Austin, 8, a student at South Greenville School receives special mention.

Fall

By Catherine Moore

Brown autumn leaves,
 And a nice cool breeze,
 Swinging in the sun.
 Although it's not too hot,
 Going on bike rides,
 And then coming home and Smelling warm soup in the pot.

Catherine Moore, 9, a student at South Greenville School receives special mention.

Tar Heel Trivia

State Language

This summer the North Carolina General Assembly adopted English as North Carolina's official state language. Conflict arose because some assembly members feared that the teaching of foreign languages could be stopped.

In addition this summer, the historic shad boat became the official state vessel.

Send In Your Entries To Expressions

The Daily Reflector is looking for elementary, middle, and high school students to draw pictures, write stories, essays and poems. Each week we will publish the best writing and drawing. The winner of each will receive $2. We will publish stories and art work we feel should receive special mention.

Entries must be original. Drawings must be in ink, crayon, markers or paint on thick colored paper. Please no pencil. Entries will be held for a period of ninety days and will be considered for that period of time. Entries will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is included.

Parents or teachers who sign the entry form should monitor for good taste and plagiarism.

Alumnae Plan Tailgate Bash Spanning Decade

Among Ivy League universities it is common for each school to claim to have the best and oldest tailgate traditions. But two Cornell alumnae have come up with an uncommon idea. They are planning a tailgate party that spans a whole decade, their decade — the '60s.

Alice Katz Berglas ('66) and Penny Skitol Haitkin ('65) say their ideas grew from the desire to renew old friendships that crossed class lines.

Berglas says, "When you're in college your friendships aren't limited to your classmates, they include lots of people ahead of and behind you. That's how we came up with the idea of a tailgate party that would involve people from the whole decade. Remember, the Sixties decade includes people who entered college in 1956 and those who were graduated in '69. That's a real interesting cross-section of people and experiences."

This year Haitkin and Berglas, in conjunction with representatives from each class, are organizing Sixties Tailgate Parties at three different Cornell away games: Penn, Yale and Princeton. In this way they hope to reach alumni from different geographic locations. While their goal is ambitious, the tailgates themselves will be casual affairs at which anyone could feel welcome.

"It's bring-your-own lunch," explains Berglas, "and we will supply the frills like, dip, fresh fruit and homemade brownies."

Her tailgate menus have not always been so modest. In fact, two years in a row she won the Cornell Tailgate Champion Award, an award conceived and presented by her father, an equally fervent tailgater. But father and daughter confer the title of "All-Time Great Tailgate Champion" on Bob Willson, class of 1917.

Wilson was an international honey distributor and a true man of the world. His tailgate parties were always conducted in grand style with white linen tablecloths, silver candelabra and caviar with all the trimmings. But according to Berglas, it was his attention to detail that kept him a step ahead of the rest. "For instance, before each tailgate party he would go out to his garden, select a few good-size stones, heat them in his oven, wrap them in foil and bring them to the tailgate to keep the toast points warm." Now that's style!

In appreciation of such style and fortitude, Sy Katz presented his daughter and Willson with the silver loving cups. His motto: "If you can't win the game, you can at least win the lunch."

The following are three recipes that could star in a Berglas/Willson-style tailgate party.

With Beef and Chicken Satay, you can marinate the meats the day before the game in peanut butter, green onions, soy sauce, spices and Campbell's cream of chicken soup. The skewers can be prepared before the game on a

Italian Meat-Curing Business All In Family

By Carole Sugarman
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

COLONIAL HEIGHTS, Va. — Ferruccio Fiorucci calls here at 7:30 every morning from Rome to talk to his daughter. Fiorucci is not just a protective father, inquiring about Silvia and her family. He has other bambini to worry about, too: the prosciutti, mortadelle, sopressate and genoa salamis. The Italian cold-cut magnate has entrusted his 27-year-old daughter and 32-year-old son-in-law with a brand new $20-million factory and 137 years of family tradition.

Fiorucci Foods Corp., is not the first company to make Italian-style cured meats in this country. But it is the first firm from one of Italy's premier ham-producing areas to make hams in Virginia, one of America's foremost ham-producing regions. It is also the first U.S. venture for Fiorucci, Europe's largest manufacturer of Italian specialty meats, which operates seven plants in Italy and offices in England, France and Germany.

Shy and unassuming, Silvia Fiorucci-Colmignoli is the great granddaughter of Innocenzo Fiorucci, who started the family business back in 1850. Cesare, Innocenzo's son, helped his father turn the company into a full-scale industrial operation. And now, Ferruccio, Cesare's son, has continued to expand the corporation into new markets with the help of his three daughters.

Aside from a strong sense of family tradition, the Fioruccis — like other producers of hams in Italy's Parma and San Dapiele regions — have a strong sense of manufacturing tradition. In these areas of lush pastures and cool, dry temperatures, curing meat is considered as much of an art and a science as making fine wines. A consortium in each region inspects each ham, setting strict manufacturing standards for members.

Due to a fear of the possible spread of certain hog diseases, the U.S. government has not permitted the importation of Italian hams — until this past spring, when the ban on prosciutto made by the Parma process was lifted. Satisfied that Parma's curing methods sufficiently alleviate the threat of animal disease, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has already given the green light to several Italian processing plants.

It may be two or more years, however, before we start seeing imported Italian hams in this country, as the slaughter operations still need to be approved, and the hams aged.

Until that happens, Ferruccio Fiorucci wants to see his company's traditions transferred to his plant

Apples Go Well In Savory Dishes

By Nina Killham
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

With autumn come apples. Bushels and bushels of apples. Apples in the store, apples in your yard, apples in your neighbor's yard, apples in your friends' neighbors' yards.

What to do with all them apples?

But before we decide, a note on how to store them properly.

If you buy apples in bags with perforation, refrigerate them in the bags. Place loose apples in a covered container to help maintain proper humidity and prevent them from absorbing other food odors.

If they are in bushels or half bushels, they will keep best in a cool, humid cellar. Line the basket with aluminum foil or polyethylene to help prevent moisture loss. To increase humidity, you might even place a small container of water among the apples or cover the basket or box with moist towels. If the apples are brown near the core, they have been stored at too low a temperature.

When thinking about apples, people naturally turn to desserts, turnovers and pies. But apples can be tantalizing in savory dishes as well. Pork and apple, chicken and apple, apple and cheese crepes, apple-cabbage saute — the list is endless.

A medium-size apple contains only 85 calories and retails for about 89 cents a pound, so using it in a meal is healthy as well as economical. For a quick side dish for eight, mix together in a large pot: 1 pound shredded red cabbage, 2 cups chopped apples, 1/4 cup melted butter, 2 tablespoons sugar, 2 teaspoons salt and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, for about 15 to 20 minutes.

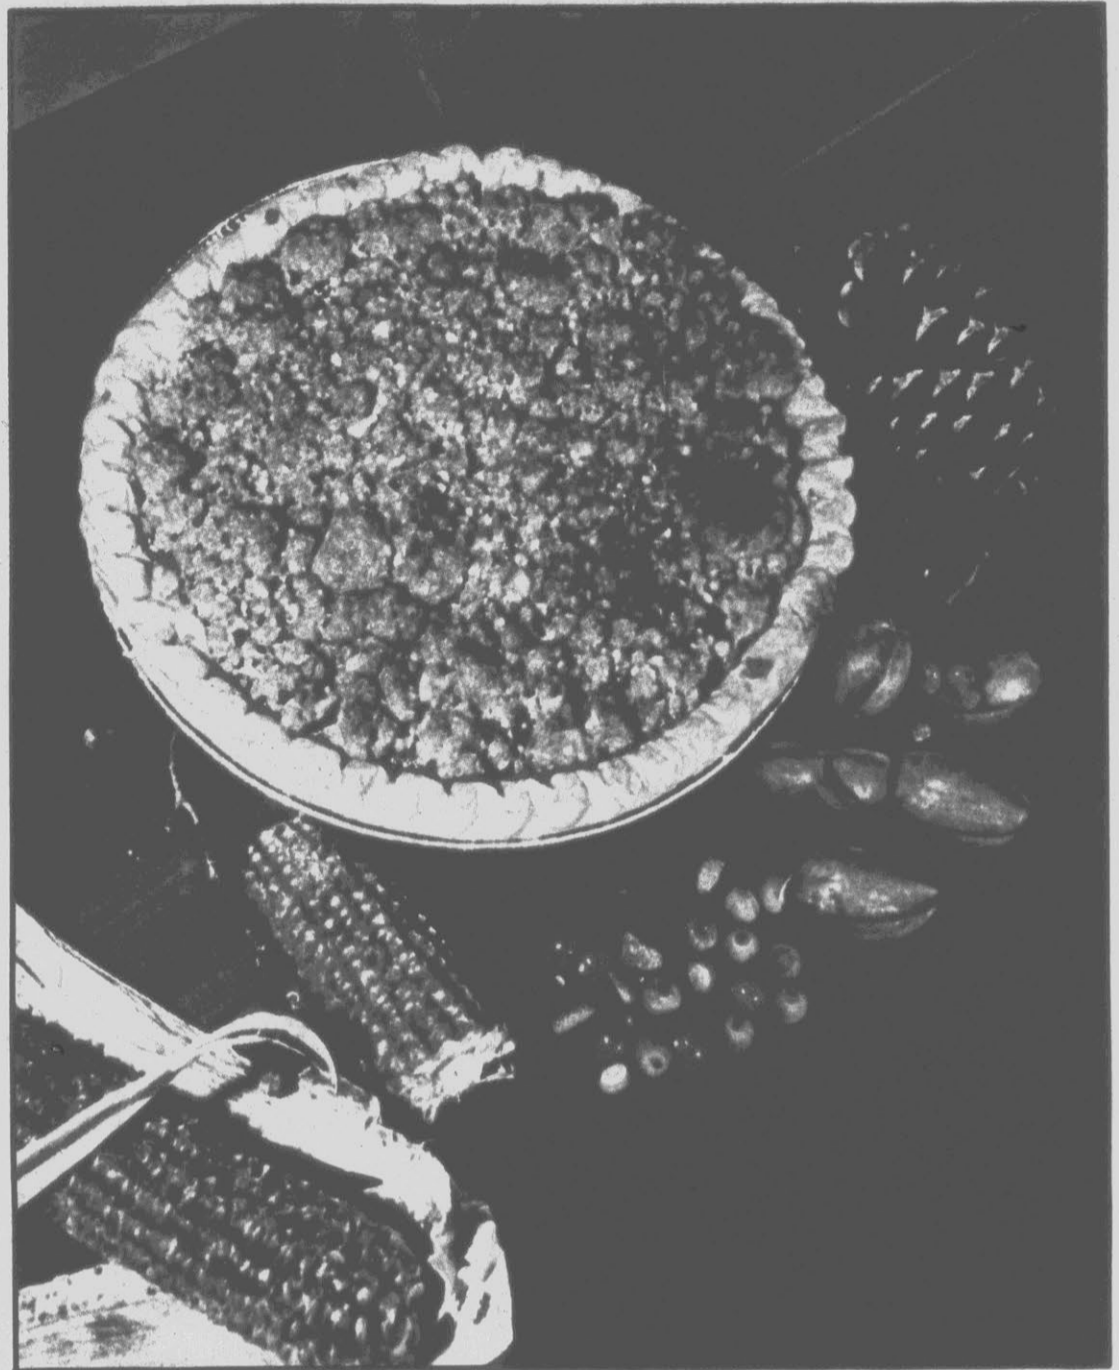

When working with apples, to keep them from discoloring slip them into a bowl of water that is lightly salted or mixed with a little lemon juice or vinegar.

Also, three medium apples equal one pound or three cups of peeled and sliced apples.

For a treat, make apple leather. Use ripe or overripe apples; peel if desired, then core and cut in chunks. Puree in food chopper or blender. For a lighter color, add 1 tablespoon of lemon or lime juice for each quart of fruit. Line a cookie sheet or tray with waxed paper and pour in the blended fruit about 1/4 inch deep. Set oven at its lowest temperature (140 degrees); place trays inside and leave the oven door open from 2 to 6 inches. The apple leather will be dried in four to five hours.

To turn your thoughts to entrees with apples, here is a recipe with an unusual mixture of flavors. If you have butter, salt and pepper, it will

Autumn Pumpkin Pie Good Use Of Halloween Leftovers

AUTUMN PUMPKIN PIE

- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 3 cups cooked, mashed pumpkin
- 1 (12-ounce) can evaporated milk
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger

- 1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1 unbaked 10-inch pastry shell
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine, melted
- 1/2 cup all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans

Combine first 12 ingredients; blend well. Pour into pastry shell. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake an additional 35 minutes.

Combine butter, 1/2 cup flour and brown sugar; blend well. Stir in pecans; sprinkle mixture on pie. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes. Makes one 10-inch pie.

Q. We enjoy the meat our neighbor sometimes cooks for us on their smoker grill. Before I invest in one for our family, what the cancer risks of eating meats cooked that way? Mrs. R.T., Greenville.

A. Would someone please ask a simple question. I'm just teasing — all the questions I've been getting are wonderful, and many make me search for a clear answer. As you are obviously aware, since the late 1970s, cancer scientists have said charcoal broiling food does produce cancer producing substances. Those substances are deposited on the meat. As the meat fat drips on the heated charcoal, smoke rises and coats the meat. Those scientists who express the greatest concern write that you may consume in one charcoal broiled steak the same number of polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (PAH) as you would smoking 600 cigarettes. Some cancer producing substances also are made by the breakdown of the proteins during cooking. That's the negative news.

However, other scientists don't agree that the effect is that great. They say most Americans do not eat enough smoked or charcoal broiled foods to be significant cancer risk. There are few experiments in this area. Most recommendations come from observing cancer rates around the world. For example, stomach and/or esophageal cancer is common in places where people eat smoked or cured foods daily. But, the death rate from esophageal and stomach cancer are low in the United States.

Smoking meat in a smoker rather than charcoal broiling cooks meat up with much lower levels of PAHs. So, the risks of eating smoked food appears to be less than charcoal broiling food. But, no one will actually give an exact number estimate of the risk. Remember, the dietary guidelines for lowering cancer risk include several foods and food preparation techniques.

- Eat a variety of food prepared in many different ways.
- Reduce intake of all types of fat; keep your weight under control.
- Increase the amount of fruits, vegetables and whole grains you eat.
- Eat salt cured, pickled, smoked and charcoal broiled foods in moderation.
- If you drink alcohol, do so only in moderation.

The American Institute for Cancer Research, Washington, D.C., 20069, has a booklet called "Outdoor Cooking" that you can write for free.

So what's my answer? I suggest people eat their food cooked in a variety of ways. Enjoy the smokery, but don't cook all your food every day in it. Patrick and I enjoy foods cooked out of doors on occasion. There are some things you can do to lower the amount of cancer producing substances made in outdoor cooking.

• Place the coals so fat does not drip on them. This is referred to as indirect heat in some recipe books.

• Place a barrier, such as aluminum foil or a pan, between meat and coals.

Inns Become Popular For Fine Dining And Personal Attention

Contrary to the image that America's inns have their roots in another century, many are less than six years old. Since the early '80s, when Americans began to discover the charm of inns, their numbers have grown at one of the highest rates in the lodging industry.

In California, the number of inns has climbed from 20 to nearly 500 in six years, and their popularity is spreading to other regions, according to Inn Transition, Inc., a training and consulting firm for innkeepers. Spurring the rapid growth, reports the firm, is an increased demand for the well-prepared food and personal attention offered by inns.

An inn menu is often a unique combination of creatively presented regional favorites, signature entrees and specialty side dishes prepared with fresh ingredients. The inn foods that have captured the attention of so many Americans are distinctive, yet are the kind of simply-prepared, great-tasting meals that can be recreated at home. With fresh meats and fish, high quality rice blends and streamlined preparation, the home cook will find it surprisingly easy to bring home the flavors of fine inn dining.

A satisfying at-home dish that might be from a cozy, comfortable inn menu is Fireside Salmon Steaks with Herbed Rice. Based on the creation by an inn chef, Uncle Ben's Country Inn Herbed Rice Au Gratin with Wild Rice highlights elegant salmon steaks for an easy, but special, company dish. A combination of long grain rice, assorted vegetables and luxurious wild rice in a creamy sauce of Swiss and mozzarella cheese, the rice mix is a perfect accompaniment for the broiled salmon or other fish. Chopped romaine and lemon peel are added flavor highlights. Prepared at home in less than 30 minutes, this meal may well become a regular party dinner menu item.

For casual, hearty fare try Bistro Beef Burgandy with Savory Brown Rice, prepared easily at home with Uncle Ben's Country Inn Brand Savory Brown Rice with Vegetables. This contemporary inn classic is enhanced with the singular blend of rich brown rice, sweet corn, broccoli and sweet red bell pepper. The secret to this quick-cooking version of traditional beef burgandy is the use of cubes of tender beef, such as tenderloin or a select cut of top sirloin, which are quickly browned and served with an easy wine sauce.

FIRESIDE SALMON STEAKS WITH HERBED RICE

- 1 package (5.2) ounces Herbed Rice Au Gratin with Wild Rice
- 1 3/4 cups water
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 4 salmon steaks about 1-inch thick (thawed if frozen)
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- Cracked black pepper (optional)
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 1 1/2 cups coarsely chopped romaine
- 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel

Combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, water and 1 tablespoon of the butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. While rice is cooking, melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter with lemon juice. Brush salmon with lemon-butter mixture and season with pepper, if desired. Broil 4 to 5 inches from heat just until fish flakes easily with fork, about 4 minutes on each side. Remove rice from heat. Let stand covered 5 minutes, or until desired consistency. Stir in romaine; transfer to serving bowl. Sprinkle salmon with parsley and serve with rice mixture. Makes 4 servings.

BISTRO BEEF BURGANDY WITH SAVORY BROWN RICE

- 1 package (4.7 ounces) Savory Brown Rice With Vegetables
- 1 1/2 cups water
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 large onion, cut into thin wedges
- 1 large carrot, thinly sliced on the diagonal
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 pound beef tenderloin or top sirloin, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 2 cups halved fresh mushrooms
- 1/4 cup burgandy or dry red wine
- 1/4 cup beef broth

(See INNS, D-8)

Tailgate Bash Set

tailgater's standard...the portable barbecue. Serve in lettuce lined pita breads with dipping sauce.

Grilled Pita Pizzas combine two popular foods - pita bread and pizza - into one winning dish. The spicy taste of Campbell's zesty tomato soup/sauce adds just the right seasonings to the pepperoni, mushroom and mozzarella cheese-topped pita breads.

Campbell's nacho cheese soup/dip adds a Southwestern accent to the all-American favorite hamburger. Top with jalapeno peppers, and you'll be sure to score the winning play at your next tailgate party.

BEEF AND CHICKEN SATAY

- 1 can (10 3/4 ounces) condensed cream of chicken soup
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup creamy peanut butter
- 1/4 cup finely chopped green onions
- 2 teaspoons soy sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper
- 1 pound round steak cut 3/4-inch thick and cut into strips
- 2 whole chicken breasts, skinned, boned and cut into strips (1 pound boneless)
- Lettuce leaves
- Small pita breads (sandwich pockets)

Prepare sauce: In 2-quart saucepan, stir soup; stir in water, peanut butter, green onions, soy sauce, garlic powder and red pepper. Cook over medium heat until smooth, stirring often. Reserve 3/4 cup for dipping sauce.

Place beef strips in 1 1/2-quart baking dish. Pour 1/2 of the remaining sauce over beef; toss to coat well. Cover. Place chicken strips in another 1 1/2-quart baking dish. Pour remaining sauce over chicken; toss to coat well. Cover. Refrigerate both dishes at least 30 minutes.

Prepare skewers: Thread beef and chicken strips onto skewers. Grill or broil until desired doneness.

GRILLED PITA PIZZAS

- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1 cup sliced mushrooms (about 4 ounces)
- 3/4 cup thinly sliced pepperoni (about 1 1/2 ounces)
- 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon dried oregano leaves, crushed
- 1 can (11 ounces) condensed zesty tomato soup/sauce
- 6 small pita breads (sandwich pockets)
- 8 ounces mozzarella cheese, thinly sliced

In 8-inch skillet over medium heat, in hot oil, cook mushrooms until tender. Stir in pepperoni, red pepper, oregano and soup. Blend well. Remove from heat.

Cut 1-inch strip from one side of each pita; set aside. Open pita, forming a pocket. Line with cheese slices and fill with soup mixture; lay reserved pita strip across opening. Wrap each pita in foil.

Grill foil-wrapped pitas 10 minutes or until hot and cheese is melted, turning once. Cool slightly before serving. Makes 6 pizzas or 3 servings.

TO PREPARE AHEAD: Prepare through step 2 above. Refrigerate until serving time.

MILE-HIGH NACHO BURGERS

- 1 can (11 ounces) condensed nacho cheese soup/dip
- 3/4 cup fine dry bread crumbs
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 2 green onions, finely chopped
- Tortilla chips or flour tortillas
- Sliced jalapeno pepper for garnish

In large bowl, mix 1/2 can of the soup with bread crumbs until moistened. Add beef and green onions; mix thoroughly.

Shape into 4 patties. Grill or broil until desired doneness.

Meanwhile, in small saucepan, heat remaining soup. To serve, spoon hot soup over burgers. Serve with chips or warm tortillas. Garnish with sliced jalapeno pepper. Makes 4 servings.

Chemist Writes Test On 'Salmonella IQ'

RIDGEFIELD PARK, N.J. (AP) - Salmonella, a type of bacteria that can be found in poultry and meats, can be avoided in most cases by following a few simple rules, according to Marvin Winston, an expert in food testing and analysis.

Winston, a chemist, is president of Winston Laboratories here. The firm specializes in food testing, microbiology and food safety.

Winston says periodic salmonella scares have produced myths and uncertainties about food bacteria and how to effectively rid poultry, meat and other foods of them.

The proper treatment of the foods once they have reached a restaurant or home can prevent the eater from being infected, Winston says.

He suggests these precautions: Because of the possibility of cross-contamination, consumers should isolate all raw meat and poultry and used utensils to avoid bacteria from spreading to kitchen surfaces and other foods. Knives and cutting boards should be washed thoroughly between usages.

Most bacteria are killed once cooked, but can grow back at room temperature. Cooking meat thoroughly, thawing only in the refrigerator, reheating leftovers thoroughly, and promptly refrigerating all leftovers are examples of what Winston calls the "keeping the cold cold and the hot hot" method of preventing the growth of bacteria.

Winston has prepared a self-test questionnaire for consumers and restaurant personnel. Answer true or false to these 16 statements about salmonella.

SALMONELLA INFORMATION QUIZ

TRUE OR FALSE

1. Salmonella is a bacterium that can cause disease in both man and animals.
2. Salmonella is relatively new. Only in the past 12 years has its significance become known.
3. Salmonella cannot be destroyed once present in food.
4. Symptoms of salmonella infection can include fever, cramps, diarrhea and sometimes vomiting.
5. No one actually dies from salmonella infection.
6. Prolonged periods of turkeys sitting at room temperature while being hand-carved can enhance the opportunity for salmonella to grow.
7. Homemade eggnog made from store-bought eggs, Monte Cristo sandwiches made of sliced cooked meat and cheese dipped in raw egg and grilled, and Caesar salad dressing made with raw eggs have all been vehicles of transmission for recent salmonella outbreaks.
8. Salmonella can be reduced in poultry by methods such as irradiation. This technique has been found safe for many foods including poultry and costs could be minimal. The drawback is the perceived rejection by consumers who associate irradiation with a radioactive product.

9. Improved sanitation could largely reduce salmonella at the breeder flock level, hatchery supplies and broiler production.

10. Salmonella may be living in liquid or frozen eggs but would not be present if the eggs have already been dehydrated (powdered).

11. More than 2,000 different types or strains of salmonella are known.

12. Potentially hazardous foods once cooked, should be cooled to a safe temperature of 45 degrees Fahrenheit or less within six hours.

13. Wiping cloths used around work stations should be rinsed off between usages.

14. Spices have never been implicated in a case of salmonella food poisoning.

15. Drug treatment for salmonella food poisoning is recommended for quickest recovery.

16. Chickens with the Kosher marking are less likely to contain salmonella than non-Kosher birds.

ANSWERS

1. True.
2. False. In 1966, an official of the Food and Drug Administration said salmonella "poses as great a problem as any facing the public health." In 1970, Congress passed the Egg Products Inspection Act to protect against salmonella outbreaks associated with bulk egg products.
3. False. Properly heating foods kills most bacteria. Also, chemicals are available that are approved for such purposes and for specific foods.
4. True.
5. False. Although generally not fatal, the very young or very old, or persons already weakened, can be in real danger.
6. True. This was concluded to be one factor at a wedding in June 1981 in Canada. Also, inadequate reheating and a haphazardly-operated refrigerated truck were factors.
7. True. Reported by health officials in Atlanta for the approximate period October 1986 to April 1987.
8. True.
9. True.
10. False.
11. True.
12. False. Four hours is the maximum time for safety.
13. False. Wiping cloths should be soaked in a solution made up of one teaspoon bleach per gallon of water or other recommended sanitizing agent.
14. False.
15. False.
16. False. No scientific data is available to substantiate this.

Dear SOS: In a recent Culinary SOS, a reader asked for a recipe for Pina Colada Muffins and you gave her a recipe for the cake. I think this is what you want. (SUDIE)

Dear Sodie: Thanks.

PINA COLADA MUFFINS

1/2 cup sugar
1 egg
1/4 cup margarine or butter
1 cup sour cream
1 teaspoon rum extract
1 1/2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 (8-ounce) can drained crushed pineapple
1/2 cup coconut
Combine sugar, egg, margarine, sour cream and rum extract and beat until blended. Stir in flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt until barely blended. Do not overmix. Add pineapple and coconut. Pour into 14 well-greased baking tins. Bake at 375 degrees 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 14 muffins.

Dear SOS: Once a meat-and-potatoes consumer, my dining habits have been greatly varied and enhanced in the past few years. The teriyaki sauce of chef Jose Lopez of Alexander's Brass Rib in Pasadena, Calif., is of great interest to me. (WES)

Dear Wes: Here is Lopez's teriyaki sauce, which can be used with ribs, chicken, fish or shrimp.

ALEXANDER'S BRASS RIB TERIYAKI SAUCE

2 tablespoons minced ginger root
1/2 white onion, sliced
1/2 cup chopped green onions
1/4 cup chopped celery leaves
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 cup soy sauce
1/4 to 1/2 cup pineapple juice
1/4 cup water
1/4 cup Burgundy wine
1/4 cup Sauterne
2 tablespoons brown sugar, packed
Combine ginger root, white and green onions and celery leaves. Saute in olive oil until evenly browned, about 10 minutes.

Add soy sauce, pineapple juice, water, Burgundy, Sauterne and brown sugar. Bring to boil, then reduce heat and simmer 20 minutes over medium-low heat. Strain and serve with desired meats. Leftover sauce can be refrigerated for several days. Makes about 2 cups.

Dear SOS: I have lost my recipe for vegetable spaghetti printed several years ago. It had broccoli, mushrooms zucchini, Chinese pea pods, tomatoes and cheese. Can you print the recipe again? Our family enjoyed it. (BETTY)

Dear Betty: We have many such recipes in our files, so I am not sure this is the one you have in mind. However, it does contain the vegetables mentioned and is a fairly basic spaghetti with vegetables.

PASTA PRIMAVERA

3 cloves garlic, minced
2 medium carrots, peeled and sliced diagonally
1 eggplant, peeled and cut into small sticks

1/2 pound mushrooms, diced
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 medium zucchini, shredded
1/4 pound Chinese pea pods, string removed
1 teaspoon ground oregano
1 teaspoon basil
1 large tomato, cut into wedges
1/4 cup white wine
12 ounces spaghetti, cooked and drained
2 tablespoons grated Romano cheese
Saute garlic, carrots, eggplant and mushrooms in olive oil 2 minutes. Stir in zucchini, pea pods, oregano and basil. Saute 1 minute longer. Add tomato wedges and wine. Cover and steam 2 minutes. Serve over hot cooked spaghetti. Sprinkle with Romano cheese. Makes 6 servings.

Dear SOS: We have gone for years to the Halekulani Hotel at Waikiki Beach in Honolulu and marveled over its sumptuous-tasting Coconut Cake. It is pure air. Please, if you could, get the recipe for us. (DEE)

Dear Dee: Would a similar recipe from the Kahala Hilton Hotel be all right with you?

KAHALA HILTON COCONUT CAKE

4 eggs, separated
1/2 cup oil
1/2 cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup cake flour
Sugar
Custard Filling
1 1/2 cups whipping cream
3 cups freshly grated coconut
Mix egg yolks, oil, water and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla. Add salt, baking powder, cake flour, and 3/4 cup sugar and mix until smooth.
Beat egg whites until stiff and carefully fold into batter. Pour into 10-inch springform pan that has been greased and floured or lined with wax paper. Bake at 325 degrees 50 minutes or until cake tests done. Cool.

Cut cake into 4 very thin or 3 thicker layers. Spread cooled Custard Filling between cake layers. Whip cream with 3 tablespoons sugar until stiff. Frost top and sides of cake with whipped cream. Sprinkle top and sides generously with coconut. Chill. Makes 1 (9-inch) layer cake.

Custard Filling
2 cups milk
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons cold milk
2 eggs, beaten

Combine milk, sugar and vanilla in saucepan. Bring to boil. Mix cornstarch with cold milk and beater eggs. Blend cornstarch mixture into sugar mixture and cook, stirring, until thickened. Cool.

Put Crunch In Cookies

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

What cornmeal does for bread and muffins it can do for other foods, too. These lemon cookies owe their pleasant crunch and cake-like texture to the cornmeal in the dough. You can store them for up to 12 months in the freezer in moisture- and vapor-proof containers or bags.

LEMON CORNMEAL COOKIES

1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup cornmeal
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
18 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup margarine or butter
3/4 cup packed brown sugar
1 egg

2 teaspoons finely shredded lemon peel
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup buttermilk or sour milk
1/2 cup finely chopped pecans
Chopped pecans

In a mixing bowl stir together flour, cornmeal, baking powder, soda and salt. In a large mixer bowl beat margarine with an electric mixer on medium speed for 30 seconds. Add brown sugar and beat until fluffy. Add egg, lemon peel and lemon juice; beat well. Add dry ingredients and buttermilk alternately to beaten mixture; beat until well blended. Stir in chopped nuts. Drop by teaspoonful 2 inches apart onto an ungreased cookie sheet. Sprinkle with additional chopped pecans. Bake in a 350-degree oven about 12 minutes. Remove to a wire rack to cool. Makes about 48.

HOT FROM THE OVEN — Chopped pecans top crunchy lemon cookies. Ingredients include buttermilk and cornmeal. And you can store the cookies in the freezer.

Italian Meat-Curing Business In Virginia Strictly A Family Affair

here where pork artisans are more likely to discuss hog prices over Smithfield ham and biscuits than prosciutto and figs.

The company chose to build a plant 10 miles south of Richmond because the area approximates the climate of producing regions in Italy, and because it is close to primary markets and raw materials. It was also aggressively pursued by the state of Virginia, according to Claudio Colmignoli, Silvia's husband and president of the U.S. branch of the company.

The large white factory sits on 35 acres in the middle of nowhere, surrounded by serene farmland. But inside the plant is a bustling city of sausages, with corridors leading to temperature-controlled chambers of hanging meats, smoky smells and workers in white.

A lone 100-pound mortadella hangs from the ceiling of one room, resting in its 30-hour cooking cycle; miles of pepperoni are being turned into links in a processing area; and boxes of fennel, anise and red, black and white peppers await mixing in a chamber with an aroma worthy of an Adriatic aerosol.

One half of the plant is a chain of rooms used exclusively to make prosciutto, the most noted of Parma's hams, and one of the most tedious to make. Traditionally, American companies make prosciutto by salting the meat and storing it for two to three months at high temperatures in effect, semi-cooking it. In Italy, and in the plant here, however, the hams that will become prosciutto are never cooked, but are aged for eight months to a year.

"After 2½ months, Italian prosciutto is raw meat," explains Silvia Fiorucci-Colmignoli, while leading the factory tour with Giovanni Giussani, the company's vice president of manufacturing.

Fiorucci's Virginia-made prosciutto starts with hams purchased from either Gwaltney of Smithfield, Lundee (in North Carolina) or Commission Sales, a supplier in Chicago. Since American hogs are leaner than Italian hogs, says Giussani, the company has to settle for 22- to 24-pound hams, rather than the 28- to 30-pound hams used for Italian-made prosciutto. (The company can't make its Grand Riserva prosciutto, which is aged for two years, in this country because it can't get big enough hams.)

The fatter hams with redder meat are chosen for Fiorucci's first quality prosciutto; the leaner, paler hams are reserved for Colosseum, a lesser-quality product line. In the first step of the lengthy aging process, the hams are coated with coarse salt (the Colosseum line is also coated with garlic and pepper to bring out more flavor) and allowed to rest for 40 days at 34 to 36 degrees. Hundreds of hams, still raw and red, sit on shelves in the salting chamber. Here, the salt will penetrate to one inch inside the meat.

Next, the outer layer of salt is brushed off. The dry air in the resting room ensures that the inner salt will seek the greater humidity in the center of the ham and migrate further into the meat. Humidity and temperature control are crucial at each phase of the process so that the hams shrink properly. If they shrink too much in the initial stages, for instance, explains Fiorucci-Colmignoli, they will not be able to "breathe" and will get a hard crust around the outside.

The hams are then washed and hung to dry. As in other rooms, if the temperature and humidity outdoors is right, the air is channeled inside. (In the humid summer months, air conditioning must be substituted.)

The hams are then sent to the pre-seasoning area, where they are spread with a layer of lard to prevent a crust from forming. Throughout the process, workers push the hams on overhead wire racks; there are no fork lifts or trucks here.

In the pre-seasoning room, which is filled with rows and rows of hams, Guisanni suddenly takes a thin, beige stick from his breast pocket and shoves it into a nearby ham. He pulls it out, then smells it.

"If it (the stick) smells like rotten eggs, the salt hasn't penetrated enough," explains Guisanni. The stick, actually carved from a horse's tibia, is a traditional instrument of the trade, Guisanni explains.

At the end of the labyrinth, the aging chamber is the most dramatic. In a huge room permeated with a yeasty and slightly sweet smell similar to a vineyard cellar, almost 50,000 hams hang from wire meshes. Like newborns in a maternity ward, each ham is tagged with the date it started life as a prosciutto. Here the hams look considerably more mature than they did in the initial rooms; they are smaller, darker and look cooked even though they have been cured.

Fiorucci-Colmignoli says that the company takes great pains to ensure that the firm's Virginia prosciutto tastes like the product made in Italy. Every month the Colmignolis send a complete sample product line back to Italy for taste tests, and every two or three months a team of Italian quality-control experts comes to Richmond to test the product on site.

Whether or not Fiorucci's prosciutto tastes the same in Italy can't be judged here in Colonial Heights (we won't know until they start importing it, which is in the works). Nevertheless, Fiorucci's prosciutto may not be the best of the company's domestic product line, at least in the opinion of this reporter. In an informal tasting of a handful of its competitors, Fiorucci's ham was judged to lack the depth of flavor of Canadian-made San Daniele, for instance. The company's domestic salamis and sausages are quite good. Unlike the prosciutto, they are made and packaged differently here than in Italy because of USDA requirements for certain protein and moisture ratios.

Thus far, Fiorucci Foods Corp., has distributors in every major U.S. market and is selling products in 28 states.

By the end of the year, the company hopes for gross sales of $3 million. Wholesaling for $4.60 to $4.80 a pound, Fiorucci's first prosciutto was ready in July.

The Colmignolis, who now live in Richmond, have had a hectic two years. Claudio Colmignoli, although not a newcomer to this country (he received a degree in business from Rollins College in Florida in 1978), practically commuted from Italy during the planning phases of the factory. His schedule was 10 days in Richmond, 10 days in Rome.

When the family moved here with their two children, ages 9 and 6, Silvia Colmignoli had to adapt to a lot at once: a new country, new language and the responsibility of serving as vice president of marketing of her father's new company.

She also had to get used to how Americans eat Italian-style meats. A good sandwich needn't be slathered with mustard and mayonnaise, Colmignoli contends. Italians prefer simple preparations, eating cured meats on crusty bread, perhaps with a thin spread of butter, or in salads with a drizzle of oil and vinegar.

Nevertheless, the Colmignolis believe that Italian-American food is generally getting more authentic. American chefs are getting away from the view that if you "add garlic, it's Italian," Claudio Colmignoli commented, finishing up a lunch of Fiorucci meats on bare bread, espresso and chocolates.

Silvia Fiorucci-Colmignoli says that her children "love it" here, and have eagerly adapted to American eating habits. While the Colmignolis employ an Italian cook at home, they make sure to eat out at least once a week with the children — at McDonald's.

SFORMATO DI PATATE (Mortadella and Potato Pie)

 2 1/2 pounds baking potatoes, peeled and quartered
 1 egg yolk
 1/2 cup grated parmesan
 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
 1/2 teaspoon grated nutmeg
 3/4 pound mortadella, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
 1/4 cup grated mild cheddar cheese
 Pepper to taste
 Place potatoes in a pot and cover with water. Bring to a boil and cook for 30 minutes, or until tender. Strain, peel and mash well. Combine potatoes with the egg yolk, parmesan, lemon rind, nutmeg, pepper and mix quickly. Add the mortadella. Place mixture in a greased 9-inch pie plate. Sprinkle grated cheese over top. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Let cool slightly, cut into wedges and serve.

SALTIMBOCCA ALLA ROMANA

(6 servings)
 12 small veal scallops (about 2 pounds), pounded very thin
 1 1/2 teaspoons ground sage
 4 tablespoons butter
 6 thin slices prosciutto, cut in half crosswise
 1/2 cup dry white wine
 Salt and pepper to taste
 Sprinkle veal slices with sage on both sides. Melt the butter in a large skillet, add the veal slices and cook quickly over high heat for about 1 minute. Have the prosciutto ready and as the veal slices are being turned over, top them with the prosciutto and cook for about 1 more minute. Carefully remove the veal from the pan, arrange on serving platter and keep warm.
 Add the wine, salt and pepper to the liquid in the pan. Reduce for a few seconds and then pour this sauce over the veal and serve immediately.

RECIPE INSALATA RICCA

(4 servings)
 1 bulb fresh fennel
 1 small head curly lettuce
 2 ounces sopressata, thinly sliced
 1/4 pound romano cheese
 2 1/2 tablespoons vinegar
 1/2 cup olive oil
 1 teaspoon coarse mustard
 Salt and pepper
 Wash and dry fennel and lettuce. Slice fennel thinly and arrange with lettuce on serving platter. Scatter sopressata over lettuce and fennel. Slice romano cheese into small, thin strips. Scatter over salad. In a blender, mix vinegar, oil, mustard, salt and pepper. Mix until smooth and creamy. Serve over salad.

FESTA DI TACCHINO DI PISSELLI

(Turkey Breast with Peas and Pancetta)
 (4 servings)
 1 1/4 pounds turkey breast
 Salt and pepper
 2 ounces pancetta, sliced into strips
 2 to 3 sprigs fresh rosemary
 2 to 3 leaves fresh sage
 5 tablespoons olive oil
 1 small onion, chopped
 1/2 cup tomato puree
 1/2 cup white wine
 4 ounces frozen peas, cooked
 Sprinkle the turkey with salt and pepper. Wrap the sliced pancetta around the turkey and secure with kitchen twine. Secure rosemary sprigs and sage leaves under the string.
 Sprinkle the meat with a tablespoon of olive oil and place in a 350-degree oven for 30 minutes.
 Chop onion and saute in remaining 4 tablespoons oil until translucent. Add peas and cook for 5 minutes, stirring with a wooden spoon. Add tomato puree and cook 2 minutes, stirring if necessary.
 Pour wine over the meat. Add peas with sauce and turn meat over once or twice. Cover meat with foil and continue cooking for 10 minutes. Remove twine, slice and serve.

The following glossary identifies the basic characteristics of Italian processed meats. Because competing companies use different spice mixtures and aging, curing and smoking processes, products will differ.

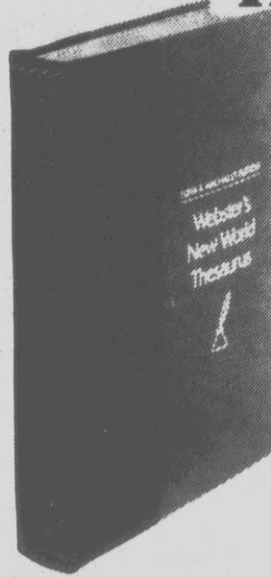

- Bresaola — Air-dried beef.
- Cappicola — Mildly spiced cooked ham, sometimes seasoned with paprika.
- Coppa — Pork shoulder butt that has been aged into a sweet or hot dry meat. It is usually eaten in antipasto, sliced very thin.
- Genoa salami — A mixture of pork, beef and spices rolled into a slender sausage shape. Good in sandwiches or antipasto.
- Mortadella — Predecessor of American bologna, this pale pink, smooth sausage made from finely chopped pork is larded with cubes of pork fat. A wide, cooked sausage, mortadella is good as a cooking ingredient, served cold in sandwiches, or hot, wrapped around vegetables or cheese.

Italian

Pancetta — Italian bacon, cured (not smoked) for about two months. Seasoned with pepper, it is rolled into a sausage shape. Pancetta can be used either alone or as a cooking ingredient and is often mixed into pasta sauces such as carbonara or amatriciana.

Pepperoni — Small, dry, cured sausage made of beef and pork and seasoned with red pepper, black pepper, garlic and paprika. According to the Colmignolis, it is an American invention that is not found in Italy.

Prosciutto — Cured, uncooked ham that is aged anywhere from eight months to two years. It is not smoked. American-style prosciutto is a semi-cooked product that is made in two to three months. Prosciutto can be served in a sandwich, with cheese or fruit, or with vegetables, pasta, chicken or seafood dishes.

Sopressata — A mild or hot salami made of coarsely ground pork and flavored with peppercorns. It is frequently served as an appetizer.

Apples

take just a snap through the express lane.

SEAFOOD APPLE CASSEROLE

- (4 servings)
- 6 medium apples
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 pound shrimp
- 1/2 cup scallops
- 2 cloves garlic, finely minced
- 1 1/2 cups boiled rice
- 1/2 cup apple cider
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1/2 tablespoon curry or to taste
- Parsley for garnishing
- Peel and dice apples. Saute over med um heat in 2 tablespoons butter for about 15 minutes. When apples are cooked, puree them.

Saute the garlic in 2 tablespoons butter for 3 minutes. Add shrimp and scallops and saute for 2 minutes over medium heat.

Spread rice evenly in 9-by-13-inch baking pan. Spread apple puree evenly on top of rice with apple cider. Without draining the cooking butter, neatly arrange shrimp and scallops on top. Salt and pepper to taste and sprinkle with curry. Pour 1/4 cup melted butter over all.

Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes. Garnish with parsley.

Note: Onions may be added for extra flavor when cooking the apples. Fillet of sole may be used instead of shrimp and scallops.

Inns

- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon thyme
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 tablespoons water
- Salt (optional)
- Chopped parsley

Combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, 1 1/2 cups water and 1 tablespoon of butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer until all water is absorbed, about 18 minutes. While rice cooks, saute onion, carrot and garlic in butter in large skillet over medium heat until carrot is crisp-tender, about 5 minutes. Add beef and mushrooms; increase heat to high. Cook and stir until beef is desired doneness, about 4 minutes for medium rare. Remove from skillet and reserve. Add wine, broth, pepper and thyme to skillet; heat until mixture simmers. Combine cornstarch with 1 tablespoon water; add to skillet. Cook and stir until thickened. Return beef mixture to skillet; stir and heat through. Add salt to taste, if desired. Arrange alongside rice on serving platter; sprinkle rice with parsley. Makes 4 servings.

HERE'S THE BEST:

Introducing Holly Farms' new Oven Roasted Chicken. It's ready when you are—delicious hot or cold. Roasted to perfection, and so juicy. You'll find it in the fresh meat case. It can be popped right in the microwave or oven in its own tray. And the best reason to serve it? The taste! With the Holly Farms' tradition of freshness that's guaranteed.

Enter the “What's your reason not to cook” contest and get a chance to win a luxurious cruise for two on Royal Caribbean Cruise Lines. Details available at Winn-Dixie.
