Ginsburg Asks President To Withdraw Nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Douglas H. Ginsburg, saying his views on the law "have been drowned out in the clamor" over his past marijuana smoking, asked President Reagan on Saturday to withdraw his Supreme Court nomination.

Reagan, spending the weekend at the Camp David presidential retreat, praised Ginsburg in a statment and said he would promptly make a third attempt to fill the vacant seat on the high court.

Ginsburg turned his brief withdrawal statement into an anti-drug message and said he hoped "the young people of this country, including my own daughters, will learn from my mistake."

His departure, only nine days after he was nominated by Reagan in an elaborate East Room ceremony, was one of the quickest exits ever for a Supreme Court nominee. It followed the stinging 58-42 Senate defeat Oct. 23 of Robert H. Bork, Reagan's first choice to fill the vacancy left by the retirement of Justice Lewis Powell.

Reagan said in his statement, "I commended Judge Ginsburg for his record and qualifications when I announced his selection, and I commend his selflessness and clear thinking now."

On Friday, one day after Ginsburg had admitted using the illegal drug in the 1960s and 1970s, the president had publicly defended his nominee and had said he would not withdraw the nomination.

However, Reagan's education secretary, William Bennett, telephoned Ginsburg Friday night and asked him to take his name out of consideration. Bennett did so after Reagan advised him to "do what you think is right," a Bennett aide said.

Several conservative senators had urged Reagan to withdraw the nomination, but one Republican member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, was highly critical on Saturday of what he considered the abandonment of Ginsburg.

"To be honest with you, I think there are a certain number of people down there at the White House who have no guts whatsoever," Hatch said.

Ginsburg, who will retain his position as a federal appeals court judge in Washington, made no comment beyond the statement he read at the White House.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the White House hopes to announce a new nominee early next week and gain Senate confirmation by the end of the year.

However, presidential aide Gary Bauer said he thought it would be

Carter Says His Election Signifies City's Growth

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Forty-one years ago, Leander Carter was killed in an unsolved racial incident near Greenville.

Today, his son, Ed Carter, is preparing to take office as Greenville's first black mayor.

"Just miles down the road in North Harlowe, North Carolina, my daddy was killed in a racial incident and they never found his body," said Carter, who was 7 years old at the time of his father's disappearance.

"Nothing was ever done about it. If you look in Craven County records today, you will find no record to reflect the death of Leander Carter."

Carter says his election signifies the development and growth of this eastern North Carolina city since the era of his father's death.

"We have come a mighty long way," he said. "We aren't perfect, we have problems that we have to work on but I'll ... put Greenville up against any city. I'm proud of Greenville, and I think the greatest thing that ever happened to me was when I came to Greenville.

"I have some definite plans for Greenville, and we're going to change Greenville. We're going to make it better. If you give me two years, it's going to be a lot better. If you give me four years it is going to be an ideal city, it's going to be a model city because we're going to work hard to deal with the problems and to move Greenville into the future."

In a time when children need people to look up to, Carter, a native of North Harlowe, said he wants to be an example to the young people of the community.

"There are children who need positive role models out here," he said. "We have a lot of drug pushers who they (children) see in some of those communities, especially in the black communities.

"They see drug pushers more than they do some of the other people, and they are impressed because these people don't work and they've got all this money and these fine cars and they're wearing these fine clothes.

"On the other hand, some of the people in the community who work on regular jobs come in with old, shabby clothes, and they drive the old cars. So essentially, for these kids sometimes their role model is that drug pusher. What in essence I think this election says to them is that you don't have to be a drug pusher to be as Michael Jackson says, 'Bad.'"

The potential is unlimited for dedicated, hard-working individuals, according to Carter, who attended the Queen Street High School in Beaufort where he graduated as the valedictorian of his class in 1958.

"When you get a good education, if you work hard and if you prove yourself to people, there are opportunities for everyone in this community," he said. "This is the most important message that I want to convey to all of the people here. Regardless to color, regardless to

DOT Proposes Route Changes For U.S. 264

The N.C. Department of Transportation has proposed several route number changes in accordance with the scheduled opening of the new U.S. 264 between Farmville and Greenville in mid-November, a DOT official says.

"The changes include routing U.S. 264 along the Farmville east thoroughfare and along the new four-lane facility to its intersection with Memorial Drive," said Randy Doub, a DOT board member from Greenville.

"Then U.S. 264 will be routed along Memorial Drive to the intersection of the northeast Greenville bypass. Then U.S. 264 will be routed along this facility to the present intersection of U.S. 264 to Washington."

Doub said the existing U.S. 264 to Farmville will be classifed U.S. 264 alternate. Greenville Boulevard, now known as U.S. 264 bypass, will be classified as U.S. 264 alternate.

The U.S. 264 business designation along the old Farmville Highway and 10th Street will be removed, according to Doub.

"The Farmville Highway will continue to carry the U.S. 13 designation and Dickinson Avenue and 10th Street in Greenville will be assigned secondary road numbers or, upon agreement with the city, abandoned from the state highway system and added to the city system of responsibility," Doub said.

Funding, facility needs and teacher recruitment are among issues the new Pitt County Board of Education will address in the next six years, Dr. Eddie West, superintendent of the Pitt County schools, said in a recent interview.

"First, obviously, is funding and finance due to our growth as a system and the increase in the demand of services," he said. "We either have to get additional resources or limit services. It's just that simple."

Second is facility needs and "that ties to funding," West said. Pitt County schools are "playing catch-up" with current capital outlay plans and the schools still are growing.

Pitt County schools increased enrollment by about 200 students this year as compared to 1986, "which was a little surprising" when compared to projected figures, Gibb Chauncey, management information director with the school system, recently reported.

Teacher recruiting and "providing a competitive compensation package for teachers" also is an issue the board will address, West said.

But, before all the work begins, new school board members will receive some orientation into the public school system. A new board member seminar sponsored by North Carolina School Board Association will be Nov. 23-24, he said.

"At this meeting, they will get an overview of public education in North Carolina," its role and functions. They also will be introduced to school law and school finance, West said.

"The staff will have an orientation for the new board members to the system and to the various facets of the system," such as instructional programs and finance, he said.

"Of course, you don't do that in one day," West said. There will be several orientation sessions.

"This is a standard operating procedure, recognizing you try to be sensitive to and try to provide the relative information" about the school system and answer questions concerning it.

Beginning in January, workshops on boardmanship also will be conducted, West said.

Leader Deposed

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — President-for-Life Habib Bourguiba was deposed Saturday by his prime minister, who said the man who turned colonial Tunisia into one of the Arab world's most Westernized nations now was too senile to rule.

Gen. Zine el Abidine Ben Ali, named prime minister by Bourguiba Oct. 2, said he assumed power as constitutionally designated successor because the 84-year-old Bourguiba was incapacitated by age and health.

Hours later, Ben Ali convened the National Assembly and took the oath of office as Tunisia's second president since it became independent from France 31 years ago.

Ben Ali announced Bourguiba's removal over Tunis radio before dawn. He seized power without bloodshed or significant opposition.

The new president immediately made it clear he would pursue the North African Arab nation's traditional Western-oriented foreign policy and introduce liberal domestic reforms including multiparty democracy and press freedom.

In Washington, the State Department issued a statement praising Bourguiba, but signaling an intention to work with the new government.

Algeria, Saudi Arabia and Egypt recognized the Ben Ali government and sent him congratulatory messages.

Ben Ali, 51, named security chief in 1977 and interior minister two years ago, was long considered the strongman of Bourguiba's authoritarian regime.

Carter Says His Election Signifies City Has Come A Long Way

race or creed, there are opportunities here in Greenville."

Carter, who became Greenville's first black mayor by defeating incumbent Les Garner by 296 votes in Tuesday's election, graduated from Virginia State College in Petersburg, Va., with a bachelor's degree in physics and was designated as a distinguished military graduate.

He spent approximately one year as a research physicist at Columbia University in New York City where he did further study at the City University of New York.

In March 1963, he received a regular commission in the U.S. Army where he spent more than eight years as a commissioned officer. His tours of duty included assignments within the United States, Korea and the Republic of Vietnam.

In the service, he received two awards of the Bronze Star, three awards of the Army Commendation Medal, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry, the paratrooper badge, expert missleman badge, expert marksman badge and the Vietnamese Service Ribbon.

In 1971, Carter resigned his commission in the U.S. Army with the rank of captain. He joined Burroughs Wellcome Co. as a staff specialist in charge of all outside packaging and manufacturing contracts. After several promotions, he is serving as department head of administrative services for the pharmaceutical firm.

Carter is a former member and chairman of the Greenville City School Board, former member of the Eckerd Wilderness Camping System, former chairman of the Greenfield Terrace Community Association, former chairman of Greenville voting Precinct 1, a member of Mt. Calvary Masonic Lodge No. 669, life member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, member of the 20th Century Social Club and a member of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

Carter, 48, and his wife, Jean, have three children, Regina, Tonya and Jacquelyn.

He is included in the Who's Who in North Carolina and Who's Who in the Southeastern United States, and he received the Omega Psi Phi's Community Service Award in 1977, Tar Heel of the Week in 1979 and Cornerstone Young Man Award in 1975.

In addition to being the first and only black to serve as chairman of the Greenville City Board of Education, Carter was the first black to serve as mayor pro tem of Greenville. He also was won a write-in campaign for City Council in 1985.

A priority in the new administration will be unifying the city council, the mayor-elect said.

"The first priority, of course, is to get the council together," he said. "I'm planning to have a session with the council in the beginning to talk about matters of boardsmanship. We've had problems in the past in a number of areas.

"I feel that we have to share the information in a timely manner to all members of the council, not just a few. If individuals are not informed in a timely manner, they feel like they are not part of the organization and then you have a polarization. We're going to try to get some ground rules, some understanding in terms of what we expect of each other."

Carter said he wants immediate focus on transportation issues.

"Within the next year, we should have a detailed comprehensive plan for the airport and a description of the necessary action to improve traffic (flow) in the city of Greenville," he said. "The thoroughfare system is archaic. In other words, there is no thoroughfare system in Greenville.

"Essentially, what I plan to do is to appoint a task force, identify some real skilled people in terms of traffic flow, traffic design and street design and get them to take a look at our city.

"If we have the expertise available on a volunteer basis we would do that. If not, I would try to convince the council to hire consultants to come in to take a look at this. I think we need some outside input in terms of alternatives in this area."

The effectiveness and efficiency of council meetings should also be upgraded, according to Carter.

"We have entirely too many meetings where we don't accomplish anything and they are too long," he said. "I will not tolerate individuals straying off from the topics of concern as they've done in the past.".

Despite working as full-time employee for Burroughs Wellcome, Carter doesn't expect to have difficulty making time for his new job.

"The hours I have are going to be even more convenient for the public," he said. "Most people work during the day. I'm planning on having my office hours somewhere between the hours of 4 (p.m.) to 6 (p.m.) or 4 (p.m.) to 7 (p.m.) depending on the need.

"Not only will I have hours available for the public, but I also plan to rotate around through the community to meet with community leaders as well as carry out other important responsibilities.

"The only area that I anticipate possibly a reduction in terms of the mayor's participation would be in the area of ribbon cutting, and I'm not so sure that that's a critical part of the job anyhow. I think that could very easily be delegated. I think we can get a lot more done in a lot more efficient manner and be a lot more effective with good time management."

Officials at Burroughs Wellcome have also been cooperative, according to Carter.

"We talk about getting involved in community affairs," he said. "Burroughs Wellcome believes in community involvement and participation."

Despite his elections to other local political offices, some people doubted if Carter would become the city's first black mayor.

"During my campaign, there were some people in my community who said they thought maybe I was biting off too much and that Greenville was not ready for a black mayor," he said. "They knew that I had performed well on the council but they didn't feel that it was ready.

"But I felt Greenville was ready because all of the feedback and indications that I had gotten as a councilman for the past four years. I had received a tremendous amount of support and verbal commitments from all segments of the community. I felt that not only was Greenville ready, I felt there was a necessity for change."

Tunisian Leader Removed From Office

Bourguiba granted equal rights to women and aggressively fought what he considered outdated Islamic traditions, but refused to agree to more democracy. Bourguiba has cataracts, a heart condition and arteriosclerosis. For months, there had been concern in political circles over his growing mental and physical instability.

In the Tunis area Saturday, there was almost no sign of unusual military activity except outside Bourguiba's suburban palace, which was surrounded by two tanks and a police cordon.

There was the usual Saturday traffic on capital streets and communication links remained open.

Bourguiba reportedly was taken to another presidential residence six miles west of Tunis.

Ben Ali placed four diehard Bourguiba loyalists under "preventive" house arrest and temporarily banned Tunisians from leaving the country.

With a unanimous legislature behind him, Bourguiba could arbitrarily dismiss his ministers without warning or explanation.

Last month, he changed the leadership of his Destourian Socialist Party three times within a week. He named Ben Ali prime minister without publicly stating any reason for removing Ben Ali's predecessor.

Bourguiba's niece, Saida Sassi, exerted great influence over the ailing president and was said to hold virtual veto power over all important decisions.

Recent visitors reported that Bourguiba's mental condition was rapidly deteriorating.

Last week, he received a visiting American delegation headed by former Treasury Secretary David Kennedy. Witnesses said Bourguiba devoted almost the entire audience to praising the late President John F. Kennedy, wrongly believing his guest was a member of the Kennedy clan.

After a recent show trial of Islamic fundamentalists accused of terrorism, two men were sentenced to death and executed. But Rachid Ghannouchi, leader of the fundamentalist Islamic Tendency Movement was sentenced to life imprisonment despite the prosecutor's impassioned plea for a death sentence.

Last week, officials disclosed that Bourguiba was insisting that Ghannouchi be tried a second time on essentially the same charges because the president "was determined to have him hanged."

Tunisian sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Ben Ali objected to a second trial. The sources said Bourguiba flew into a rage and threatened to replace Ben Ali as prime minister with former party chief Mohamed Sayah, a Bourguiba loyalist and known as Ben Ali's most outspoken critic and rival.

Sayah was among those placed under house arrest.

La Presse, Tunisia's largest newspaper, printed an unusual special edition Saturday with a large color photo of the new leader and the same lavish praise of him previously extended to Bourguiba.

Bystanders and people in open-air cafes in Tunis saw Ben Ali passing in a well-guarded motorcade Saturday afternoon and rushed over to cheer. They gave a two-fingered victory salute.

Ben Ali's statement paid warm tribute to Bourguiba's "innumerable and immeasurable sacrifices" during the struggle for independnce and suggested that Bourguiba would be allowed to live out his remaining years with dignity. Bourguiba spent 11 years in French jails before independence.

A friend of the United States, this mostly Moslem nation of 7.4 million people has received U.S. aid for 31 years. In 1957, Tunisia dissolved its monarchy and established a republic. Bourguiba ran unopposed in the country's first election under a new constitution in 1959 and was named president-for-life in 1975 by the National Assembly.

Gov. Barnett Dies

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A funeral was scheduled for Monday for former Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett, who battled the federal government to keep the University of Mississippi from being integrated in 1962.

Barnett, who was governor from 1960 to 1964, died Friday at age 89 after several years of failing health.

His administration was highlighted by the greatest industrial expansion in Mississippi's history, but he will likely be best remembered for his 1962 confrontation with the Kennedy administration when James Meredith became the first black to attend the University of Mississippi.

School Sessions

Third Street Elementary School will have an informational session for parents on the modified assertive discipline program Monday at 1:30 p.m. in the counselor's office.

Parent conference day will be Wednesday for parents and teachers to discuss ways to improve student learning at school. Conferences will be from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Ginsburg Asks Reagan To Withdraw Supreme Court Nomination

impossible to have a new nominee confirmed that soon.

"I would think that all the motivations here would be to take one's time and be absolutely sure," he said.

Senate Judiciary Committee spokesman Peter Smith said, "It probably would be difficult to complete action on the floor (this year) if not impossible."

The senior administration official said that the other two judges on the final list of three from which Ginsburg was selected would be considered. They are Anthony M. Kennedy of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and William W. Wilkins Jr. of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. He said others also would be considered.

Kennedy was considered the favorite of White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. after Bork's defeat. But Attorney General Edwin Meese III reportedly pushed for Ginsburg, and several conservative Republican senators said they would filibuster against Kennedy, whom they considered too liberal.

Reagan then chose Ginsburg, a little-known, 41-year-old judge on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals — and one of Bork's colleagues — who had served as an official in the Office of Management and Budget and chief of the Justice Department's antitrust division.

Ginsburg's announcement came some 17 years after President Nixon failed to win confirmation for two consecutive Supreme Court nominees, Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. and G. Harrold Carswell.

Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, ranking Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, said that given the circumstances he had recommended that the White House withdraw the Ginsburg nomination. "Judge Ginsburg is an able judge and it is most unfortunate that this situation has arisen," he said.

Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said, "I hope the administratiion will send us a new nominee soon. We need to fill the vacancy on the court as quickly as possible."

Ginsburg said in his statement that he was bowing out because "unfortunately, all of the attention has been focused on our personal lives and much of that on events of many years ago. My views on the law and on what kind of Supreme Court justice I would make have been drowned out in the clamor.

"The president and Mrs. Reagan deserve enormous credit for leading the fight against illegal durgs. I fully support their effort and I hope that the young people of this country, including my own daughters, will learn from my mistake and heed their message."

On Saturday, officials met at the White House for more than an hour preparing for Ginsburg's announcement.

After press queries citing reports of drug use, Ginsburg issued a statement Thursday night saying he had used marijuana once in the 1960s and a few times in the 1970s. And he told senators he had used it as recently as 1979, while a professor at Harvard Law School.

The marijuana issue was not first to plague the short-lived nomination.

Just three days after he was nominated, the Associated Press reported that Ginsburg directed a Justice Department case on cable television while holding a $139,000 investment in a cable company. Several senators said they would question him about potential conflict-of-interest questions.

By Friday, conservatives were calling for Reagan to withdraw the nomination.

Reagan himself defended the nominee, saying he had merely "erred in his youth" and that Ginsburg's admission of past marijuana smoking had nothing to do with his judicial qualifications.

But Reagan also said in an interview with Knight-Ridder and other news organizations that he was unsure whether he would have chosen another candidate over Ginsburg if he'd had the drug-use information.

How To Measure

If installing inside window frame, measure width and length.
If installing outside window frame, add desired overlap, such as molding width, to inside width.
If there is no molding, recommended overlap is 1½" per side.

For example, if you are installing inside a window frame that measures 23½" wide and 56" long, select the package marked 23" to 23 7/8" wide x 64" long. Blind lengths can be shortened at home.

Weinberger Mission: To Meet Soviet Challenge

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — On a typical day, Caspar Willard Weinberger would arrive at his third-floor Pentagon office at 7:30 a.m., and leave 12 to 14 hours later with enough paperwork to occupy him until midnight.

He saw his mission, after all, as rivaling that of his grestest idol, Winston Churchill, who browbeat a reluctant Britain into arming itself against Hitler at a time, said Weinberger, "when civilization itself was at stake."

For years, Weinberger insisted that same threat had been revisited upon mankind, emanating this time from Moscow, and it was his and President Reagan's destiny to meet that challenge with Churchillian deeds.

"There are great similarities in the eras," Weinberger once said. "It was considered basically bad form always to keep calling attention to Nazi Power, always urging rearmament. Now ... it is considered kind of a nuisance if you cry havoc." But "if I have too little when the time comes, there won't be time to say 'too late.'"

So cry havoc is what Weinberger did for nearly seven years, whether in his budget confrontations with Congress, in scores of speeches around the country, in seemingly weekly appearances on television interview programs, even in arguments with Reagan over the advisability of an impending arms control treaty.

At the White House on Thursday, Weinberger's former aide, Lt. Gen. Colin Powell, soon to become Reagan's national security adviser, told the president: "At close hand for a number of years, I watched him use every ounce of energy, every day, to push forward your defense program."

The president then bade a fond farewell to his fellow Californian: "Courage, constancy, loyalty, together with uncommon brilliance, decisiveness and determination, these are the qualities that Cap Weinberger has brought" to government service, he said.

A few years back, Weinberger's wife, Jane, complained to a reporter: "He doesn't do anything else. Just defense. I have a sign on my desk that says, 'This too shall pass.' It's been there for years."

For a time, Weinberger would arise before dawn to jog, but he gave that up for all the security hassles it caused. He'd have lunch, usually chocolate chip cookies and lemonade, at his desk, surrounded by a dazzling collection of paintings, golden figurines, bejeweled swords and daggers — the homage of sultans and kings, allies and adversaries, to the U.S. military machine.

At his back, between twin, white-draped windows overlooking the Potomac, was an original, self-portrait of Titian, the 16-century master. And just below that, within a half-turn of the defense secretary's swivel chair, a futuristic switchboard connecting him with the commands and weaponry that could destroy most, maybe all, life on Earth.

He remained trim, even at age 70, but his complexion, almost from the beginning of his seven-year stint as steward of Reagan's $2 trillion program to re-arm America, turned expectably pallid for a man who rarely got into the sun, whose idea of loosening up at the workplace was unbuttoning his suit jacket.

His pastimes, once plentiful, were neglected throughout this one last, grand turn at public service. He had been an addict of the art galleries and an avid reader of English novels, Thackery, Trollope and Scott, and bigraphies, Churchill, Disraeli and Gladstone. He used to play piano at home, often to a special symphony recording of Beethoven's Emperor Concerto that had the keyboard passages left out.

His wife, a one-time Army nurse who met Weinberger aboard a troopship headed for the South Pacific in 1942, yearned for the day when they could retire to Maine, where they set up a vacation residence early in Reagan's first term. She had hoped, particularly, that her husband would not remain beyond that term.

His critics, and even some friends, predicted that he wouldn't. Rumors of Weinberger's imminent departure have been whispered for years, with each revelation of procurement scandals involving $7,400 coffee pots or $640 toilet seats, of spats with State Department and White House colleagues — even, at times, with Reagan himself, and in the wake of failed bids in Congress to build more MX missiles, expand "Star Wars" research and jack higher the biggest peacetime military buildup in U.S. history.

Some argued that the relentless Weinberger, whose innate, passionate, consuming distrust of the Soviet Union probably exceeded that of Reagan's, was simply too tired to continue his battle as the champion of military spending. Four years ago, an old chum from Harvard, Theodore H. White, wrote that in his struggle with Congress, "the cheerful, ever-humorous Caspar Weinberger has been transformed into a gaunt, somewhat lonely man, driving himself to the edge of exhaustion and frequently over that edge."

"Aha," Weinberger would groan when statements like that were repeated to him. "Well, I'm still here."

And in the end, it was not his health, but Mrs. Weinberger's, that closed out the Weinberger book. His resignation Thursday, said White House sources, was based solely on his desire to be at her side more often as she battles her cancer.

"We are here today to wish Godspeed to an old friend, the finest secretary of defense in the history of our nation," said Reagan. And the president himself compared Weinberger with Churchill, saying that "When others hide in the foxholes, he rises to the battle."

Weinberger, former Royal Canadian Air Force washout, son of Harvard, unabashed Anglophile, corporate wizard, multimillionaire, and a cabinet officer for Presidents Nixon and Ford, wanted to close his career as Reagan's secretary of state. He wasn't entirely thrilled when the president-elect asked him to take the defense job instead, and neither were the service chiefs and defense contractors who knew of his reputation as "Cap the Knife," the nickname he had earned as a fearsome budget cutter.

But Weinberger quickly dispelled their fears after several weeks of briefings. The man who had long viewed Churchill as the savior of civilization was convinced there had been a tremendous deterioration between the allies and the Soviets and that "detente," the global catchword of the 70s, had become nothing but a synonym for appeasement.

"Detente with the Soviets meant expansion of their military offense capability," he said. "For us, it meant a decline."

His response was to spread new money across the military spectrum; on troops, on ammunition stores, on new planes and ships, on new strategic weapons. As for why the nation needed a new missile, or nerve gas, or anti-satellite weapons, his answer was always the same: "Because the Soviets have it."

For the first four years, Congress gave Weinberger 95 percent of what he sought, virtually doubling military outlays into the $300 billion-per-year range. But then, as concern over federal deficits mushroomed, his budgets began running into a stone wall. Congress would ask him to help pick the programs for spending reductions; he virtually refused. Repeatedly he suggested that cutting one missile would endanger national security, even with 25,000 warheads already in the nuclear arsenal.

"Cap's style was very confrontational," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee. "He would come in with a very high number and insist upon it. He wouldn't compromise."

Others admired his unwillingness to bend. Early in the administration, then-Budget Director David A. Stockman, alarmed at the projections of massive deficits, pressed Weinberger to lower his defense budget by $27 billion over three years, a seemingly modest amount. Weinberger showed up at the White House with option papers prepared for Reagan; one, the Stockman plan, was illustrated by a mocking cartoon of a rather anemic-looking soldier, while the "Reagan" plan — Weinberger's, featured a beefy looking guy that would make Rambo quiver. Reagan ordered them to split the difference, effectively a victory for Weinberger.

Many in Congress regarded him as cold, especially those who knew him only from his elaborate slide-show presentations to the budget and oversight committees. But others, including Democratic Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan of New York, saw a warmer side. "Cap is a man of peace .... you could hardly encounter a person with less aggression, less anger, less malevolence," Moynihan said.

Stories abound about Weinberger's gentler qualities. To the consternation of security agents, he once bolted from his limousine in Europe to comfort a motorcyle policeman injured in a crash. On a visit to the Pyramids, he retrieved the flowers dropped by a woman caught in the path of his entourage.

His wit is both dry and forgiving. Informed at one high-level meeting that a member of a super-secret counterterrorist team had been arrested for indecent exposure, he remarked: "And I thought they weren't even supposed to show their faces."

But he did not suffer insult gladly. When then-Secretary of State Alexander Haig rushed to the White House after Reagan was shot to announced that "I am in charge here," Weinberger acidly reminded Haig that others were ahead of him in the constitutional line of succession and, for that matter, control of the situation room itself rested with the secretary of defense.

He has had other confrontations, most less known publicly. Weinberger supported sending the Marines into Lebanon for the evacuation of the Palestine Liberation Organization, but he opposed its subsequent "peacekeeping" assignment — as pushed by the State Department — on behalf of a Lebanese government in chaos. When hundreds of young Marines were subsequently killed in the truck-bombing of of 1983, Weinberger dutifully bit his tongue about the decision to put them there in the first place.

He has insisted, to the dismay of some conservatives, that rebels in Nicaragua be supported without overt threats of U.S. military intervention.

He supported the recent deployment of naval forces in the Persian Gulf, but, by his own testimony, he was appalled at the "absurd" decision earlier to sell arms to Iran in exchange for U.S. hostages. He also split with Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz, and ultimately prevailed, over terms of the pending arms control treaty on intermediate-range missiles.

During the summit at Reykjavik, Iceland, last October, the president and Shultz tentatively agreed to a Soviet version that called for both sides to withdraw all such missiles from Europe, but to keep 100 of them elsewhere. Weinberger wanted the proposal withdrawn in favor of one calling for a total elimination, insisting the Soviets should not be allowed to retain 100 missiles in Asia. Some State Department officials saw Weinberger's position as a ploy to write a treaty the Soviets simply would not accept, and Reagan initially rejected the defense secretary's complaint. As it turned out, the Soviets later agreed to the wholesale elimination.

By many measures, there is no doubt that Weinberger helped Reagan make good on his election pledge to "re-arm America." He leaves his successor with a military machine that is better equipped, better staffed and better paid. But its future remains unsettled.

Critics fault Weinberger for management problems that go beyond the horror stories about Tiffany-priced hammers or toilet seats. They say he focused so heavily on buying new hardware and nuclear weaponry that the nation simply won't be able to afford the cost of sustaining it.

On Capitol Hill, the common joke was that Weinberger never met a weapons system he didn't like — until he scuttled the notorious Sgt. York air defense gun in 1985.

"The Weinberger years have probably been marked by the least effective leadership of any secretary of defense," said retired Rear Adm. Eugene J. Carroll, deputy director of the Center for Defense Information, a Washington think tank that has frequently criticized the military buildup.

"Weinberger became a cheerleader, a promoter of the armed forces' wish list. He didn't enforce any discipline or come up with any coherent, orderly plan for national defense," Carroll said.

"As a result, Congress will now be forced to try to find money for the people to man a 600-ship fleet, to buy supplies and spare parts and to maintain training and readiness."

There are already signs of such a crunch. Pentagon Comptroller Robert Helm predicted last month that any triggering of the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law would decimate the Defense Department's budget for operations and maintenance. That is the only sizable pot of money where cuts could be made, because the weapon procurement accounts are already heading down.

The result, Helm said, would be serious reductions in flight hours, ship steaming time and training exercises — enough to begin affecting the readiness of the military to fight if needed.

But there is little argument about some Weinberger successes. Each of the armed services is consistently meeting recruiting goals, while retaining the experienced enlisted men and women they need. Morale is generally described as high.

Throughout his tenure, Weinberger was unbowed by the awesome responsibility of handling weapons of potentially unspeakable destruction. "Anything that can kill anybody is frightening," he once said. "A rifle is frightening."

Lunch Menus

Robbery Reported

Greenville police said several thefts and a robbery were reported Friday and Saturday.

An armed robbery at the Freshway Store on Dickinson Avenue was reported Friday evening. Witnesses said the robber was last seen running on Raleigh Avenue, according to officers.

Police said Julie Corey of 105 N. Elm St. reported Saturday morning that $160 in cash was taken from a dresser in her house.

A dumpster valued at $800 was reported taken from Scottish Manor Apartments. The dumpster was later returned after it was found at First and Reade streets, officers said.

Boyce Johnson of 1801 First St. reported the theft of gas grill and gas tank valued at $200.

Charles Alfred Forbes told police a $100 camera, a bank draft and several checks were stolen from his car in a local shopping center.

Ethel Conway said the doors of two apartments at 1304 Cotanche St. were broken open and damaged and three natural gas heaters, a couch and a chair were stolen, police said.

Thomas Reginald Garris of Winterville reported a rifle with a scope was stolen from his truck in Greenville. Police said Garris estimated the value of the property at $540.

Art Exhibition

An exhibition, "Pastels," is on view through Nov. 29 in Galleries I and II at the Arts Council, 205 Gray St., Wilson.

The show features the work of pastel artists Nancy Dolce, Ann Boyer LePere and Gayle Lowery. The three share a studio at Raleigh's Artspace.

Harvest Bazaar

The Farmville First Christian Church will have a harvest bazaar Saturday beginning at 10 a.m.

The bazaar will include "shops" for Christmas decorations, home-canned goods, needlework, a handmade quilt, stained glass, woodcrafts, garden items, baked goods and mulled apple cider.

Lunch will be served by the Christian Youth Fellowship in the Fellowship Hall from noon to 1:30 p.m. This will be a chicken salad plate.

Profits from the sale will be used for renovation of the church sanctuary.

Conference Speaker

Col. Jack McGuckin will be the keynote speaker in the World Missions' conference set for Wednesday through Sunday at People's Baptist Temple. The conference will begin each day at 7 p.m.

McGuckin was a Marine fighter pilot during World War II and the Korean conflict. His awards include the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal, Bronze Star and Presidential Citation.

Support Group

An open meeting for new members will be held by the REACH Support Group at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Pitt County Mental Health Center, 306 Stantonsburg Road.

The REACH organization, for families and friends of the chronically mentally ill, is sponsored by the Mental Health Associaton in Pitt County. For additional information call 752-7151.

Humane Society

The Pitt County Humane Society will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the First Presbyterian Church, Elm and 14th streets.

Hospitality Booth

The J.H. Rose High School Boosters Foundation will have a hospitality booth set up in the main foyer of the school for members and interested parents Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Class Had Visitor

Miriam Lewis, a volunteer from the Pitt County Farm Bureau, recently visited Denise Moore's third-grade class at Bethel Elementary School.

Mrs. Lewis, who was raised on a farm near Greensboro, shared stories about living on a farm and raising beef cattle and horses. For the last four years, she has lived on a farm near Farmville with her husband, and they raise hogs and cows in addition to growing corn, soybeans and other crops.

Mrs. Lewis helped re-enforce concepts student teacher Leigh Williams has been teaching during a unit on agriculture in the classroom.

Board To Meet

The Greenville Community Shelter Board will meet on Tuesday at 5:15 p.m. at St. James United Methodist Church.

HOME DAMAGED — Firemen try to contain a blaze that caused heavy damage to a home east of Greenville late Friday afternoon. According to Pitt County Fire Marshal Boby Joyner, the owner of the home was listed as Ron Cooper on rural paved road 1537. Joyner said the fire apparently started in the kitchen area of the two-story wood frame house and spread to the attic. The structure received heavy smoke and fire damage. The fire marshal said Cooper's children were home and in the yard when the fire broke out. There were no injuries reported. Members of Pactolus, Staton House and Eastern Pines fire units fought the blaze. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

NCHEA Session

Melva Pollard and Andree Blanchard joined other home economics professionals from across the state at the 70th annual meeting of the North Carolina Home Economics Association recently in Asheville.

The convention was represented by speakers, seminars, workshops and research reports on topics such as teen-age pregnancy, elderly care, single parenthood and new technonlogy in food and housing.

Art Exhibition

Candace Craw-Goldman, an artist residing in Goldsboro, will have a solo exhibition of recent paintings in the Wright Building, offices of the Student Counseling Center, at East Carolina University.

The exhibit will open Monday and last through Nov. 13 during regular office hours.

Red Cross Classes

The Pitt County Red Cross is offering two health-related classes open to the general public.

A first aid class will be held Nov. 16 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A cardiopulmonary rescuscitation class will be held Nov. 17 and Nov. 19 from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. each day.

Call 757-0270 for more information.

Solicitation Permit

The Greenville Police Department has granted a solicitation permit to the Farmville Central High School VICA Club allowing fund raising until Nov. 24 to support local, state and national competition and club events.

Education Meeting

The Pitt County Board of Education will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Pitt County office building.

Agenda items include the Religion Task Force report, American Education Week resolution, and policies for search and seizure and sexual harassment.

Agenda Discussion

The Greenville City Council will discuss the agenda for Thursday night's monthly meeting at a workshop Monday at 5:45 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

Concert Planned

The New Deliverance Youth Choir, along with organist Rodger Ingram, will be in concert as the New Deliverance Youth Ushers celebrate eighth anniversary Sunday at 3 p.m.

Benefit Event

Calvin Suggs and the Gospel Ensemble, The Gospelettes, Vivian Barnes and the Striving Souls, The Edward Singers, The Golden Jubilees and the Rev. Willie Joyner and the Gospel Creations will perform today at 7:30 p.m. at St. Paul's Free Will Baptist Church to benefit Christmas Cheers for the elderly and sick.

The church is located two miles south of Farmville.

Leadership Program

Nominations are being accepted for participation in the 1987-88 Leadership Institute offered by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

With 90 graduates living and working in the community, the institute is in its sixth year of developing community leadership potential.

The institute steering committee will accept nominations for the 20 participant slots through Nov. 16. Selections will be announced by Nov. 24.

The one-day workshops are designed to provide potential leaders with an understanding of the resources and needs of the community. Candidates represent a cross section of the community selected according to leadership potential, community interest and involvement and their ability to assume expanded community responsibility.

Participation requires a time commitment of one to two days per month during the period from December to May.

To make nominations call Pat Burnette at 752-4101 or Ellis F. Hall Jr. at 551-2266.

Special Olympics

The Greenville-Pitt County Special Olympics will have its annual Special Olympics Basketball Skills Tournament Friday from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in Elm Street gym.

About 200 Greenville and Pitt County mentally and physically handicapped citizens will compete in various basketball skills.

For more information call 830-4551.

Baker To Speak

Art Baker, head football coach at East Carolina University, will be the guest speaker for Pitt Golden K Kiwanis at the Greenville Country Club on Wednesday.

Speakers for the month include Reynolds May, Greenville businessman and sportsman on Nov. 18, and Charles Mitchell, former professor of psychiatry at ECU, on Nov. 25.

Sierra Club

The Monday meeting of the Cypress Group of the Sierra Club will include a presentation by Michael Phillips, coordinator of the Red Wolf Project to reintroduce the Red Wolf in Dare County.

The group meets at 8 p.m. on the second Monday of the month at the First Presbyterian Church. For more information call Barbara Peoples at 757-1053 or Grace Smith at 756-3905.

Reception At ECU

East Carolina University will honor its international students with a reception and dinner Friday sponsored by the faculty of the university's area studies committees.

Faculty members and spouses will prepare dishes for the dinner to which more than 100 foreign-born ECU students have been invited.

Dr. Joseph A. Hill, management professor in the School of Business, is chairing the third annual event which will be held at St. Paul's Episcopal Church on East Fourth Street beginning at 6:30 p.m.

ECU has international committees for African, Asian, European and Latin American studies and an international programs office, as well as overseas study faculty and administrators. The university also has a large number of international faculty members.

Postal Schedule

The Greenville Post Office and ECU Station will close to observe Veterans Day on Wednesday.

The following services will be provided: no deliveries by rural and city carriers; no window service; mail will be delivered to post office boxes, and express and special delivery mail will be delivered within the city.

A special 3 p.m. holiday collection will be made from all boxes with 5 p.m. collection time. The collection of mail will be dispatched at 5:30 p.m.

The self-service postal unit located in the lobby of the main post office will supply customers with most postal supplies and permit them to mail parcels.

Licenses Issued

Three area people have been granted licenses to engage in the business of refrigeration contracting in North Carolina.

Receiving their licenses from the state were B.L. Dennis of Greenville, J.F. Knowles of Wilson and J.F. Krochmalny of Kinston.

Taft Interview

A group of third-grade students from Tanya Hankin's class recently interviewed state Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville.

Jonathan Williams, Sarah Davenport, Britt Jones, Donna Myers and Mark Tysinger asked Taft to visit them as part of a study they are doing in the TEP program on the "legal system."

Report Says Microwaves Affect Copters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crashes of the Army's most modern troop-carrying helicopters have been caused by ordinary radio waves from microwave towers, radio attennas and radar, a published report says, but a military spokesman Saturday vehemently denied the report.

Some army investigators believe that the radio waves made five of the sophisticated UH-60 Black Hawk choppers nosedive to the ground since 1982, according to a Sunday report by Knight-Ridder newspapers. It cited Pentagon officials and documents. Twenty-two servicemen died in those crashes.

The report quoted one senior Black Hawk pilot and investigator as saying that the Army has come out with "bizarre, superfluous and inane reasons'" for Black Hawk crashes that he believes were caused by the radio waves known as electromagnetic interference, or EMI.

Army spokesman Maj. Phil Soucy heatedly denied that the service made up any causes for crashes other than what was actually determined, and has spent millions of dollars on continuing tests trying to learn if EMI does endanger the helicopters.

"We have been studying ... this phenomena. We have not been able to tie a single crash to EMI," despite tests in which choppers were bombarded with radio waves, he said.

He conceded that the Navy, which also flies the Black Hawk, has stricter standards, and has ordered the choppers, which it calls Sea Hawks, heavily shielded against electronic interference. Soucy said the Navy helicopters fly in areas with much heavier radio waves, from ships at sea, than the Army choppers.

Knight-Ridder said records show that Army tests after a 1986 Black Hawk crash found that 40 of the chopper's 42 systems were affected by high-level transmissions common around weapons radars and microwave towers.

The article also cited 1987 tests New Mexico that it said showed EMI could push the helicopter's rear-wing stabilator down, putting the helicopter into a dive.

The newspaper story said the Army has blamed the crashes on mechanical breakdowns, but it cited unnamed Army safety experts as saying that the nosedive crashes were really caused by EMI.

Soucy, however, said no investigators have ever voiced those concerns, and that the Army would ground its helicopter fleet if there were evidence of danger from EMI.

"We don't make up causes for accidents and anyone who says so is libelous," he said in a telephone interview. "There's not a single crash that can be directly attributed to EMI."

A former Army major, Jerry A. McVey, who headed an investigation into a still-unexplained Black Hawk crash last year, told Knight-Ridder that he was "shocked at the lack of shielding" on the choppers.

The Army's fleet of 820 UH-60 Black Hawks was grounded twice last May, once for inspection and once because of design flaws. Officials have said about 40 people have died in crashes of the helicopters since 1978.

Jones Appointed To Research Panel

State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., D-Pitt, has been named by House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey as a member of the Legislative Research Commission's Study on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

Jones was a sponsor of the bill establishing the AIDS study commission.

"I am glad to accept the responsibility," Jones said. "No issue is addressed by the Legislature is more important to our citizens than reasonable evaluation of the impact of AIDS on our future.

"As House sponsor of the joint resolution establishing the commission, I look forward to evaluating the nature and scope of the problem and to participating in a study that will make all of use better informed."

"The prevalence of AIDS in our society makes this study urgent," Jones said. "The issues it touches cut across health care, social justice, citizens rights, family welfare, scientific inquiry and the current limitations of medical technology."

Jones is one of five members of the House of Representatives who will serve on the 12-member commission. He has recently been appointed House co-chairman of the Indigent Health Care Study Commission.

He chairs the House Committee on Commissions and Schools for the Blind and Deaf and serves as vice chairman of the House committees on children and youth and human resources.

Candidates Discuss Education, Economy

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Education and the economy were the key topics as four candidates for lieutenant governor met for a question-and-answer session at a Haywood County Democratic Party rally Saturday.

"I do believe this is one of the most important elections in recent North Carolina history because it will ultimately determine the direction North Carolina will take for the rest of the century," former state Rep. Parks Helms of Charlotte told the Asheville Citizen.

Moderator Jim Van Hecke, state Democratic Party chairman, presided as the four candidates — Helms, state Rep. Jim Crawford, D-Granville, and Sens. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir and Tony Rand, D-Cumberland — discussed education, the environment and business and industry.

Education studies show that half of incoming new teachers will quit within five years, Rand said. Not only should they be paid as much as other professionals, but they should have access to phones and offices to lift morale, he said.

Teachers should be paid by the amount of work they do, said Hardison.

Veterans Day Participants Get Enthusiastic Reception

Santa Claus attracts more interest, but the participants in Greenville's second annual Veterans Day parade held Saturday morning were enthusiastically received by those who did turn out.

The streets from Rose High School to the Town Common (Elm, Fifth and Reade) were not lined with crowds, but many people, many undoubtedly family of the participants, parked along the way to watch. Some stood on the sidewalks and cheered the vets and their cohorts on.

ROTC units from several schools, including Farmville, Goldsboro and Kinston took part. So did some Boy and Girl Scouts, some Shriners from Farmville and two beauty queens.

Smog, apparently smoke from forest fires west of Greenville held to the ground by an inversion, hung over the city, but seemed to bring no gloom to the occasion. American Flags were apparent in several color guards and on many of the floats and vehicles. So were North Carolina flags.

One float, sponsored by the Disabled American Veterans, featured veterans of World War I, World War II, The Korean War and The Vietnam War. The Vietnam Veterans of America marched. The American Legion was represented by a float featuring some of its members.

Numerous cars carried veterans' group representatives. Greenville Mayor Les Garner and Mayor-elect Ed Carter rode together atop the trunk of the mayor's black Lincoln convertible. Each is a veteran — Garner of World War II; Carter of the Vietnam War.

Atwood Gurganus and his wife rode in a car representing the Pearl Harbor Survivors organization.

The bandshell at the Town Common was framed by the fall colors of the trees across the Tar River as the posting of colors and retiring of colors and the presentation of a wreath were made during a ceremony following the parade. A special participant was John Stancil, 90-year-old veteran of World War I.

The gathering was keynoted by a patriotic speech given by Oscar Moore, district service officer of the North Carolina Division of Veterans Affairs. Moore served during World War II and has had a 28-year career as a public servant of veterans and their families.

Who Follows Ginsburg?

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The two finalists who lost out when President Reagan selected Douglas H. Ginsburg as his Supreme Court nominee will receive strong consideration again, a senior White House official said Saturday.

Judges Anthony M. Kennedy of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and William W. Wilkins Jr. of the 4th circuit should be among those considered most closely after Ginsburg's withdrawal on Saturday, but others will be examined also, said the official, speaking only on condition he not be named.

Kennedy, of Sacramento, Calif., had been considered the favorite of White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr., and many in the Senate and the administration were surprised when Reagan chose Ginsburg instead.

That choice came after Attorney General Edwin Meese III lobbied for Ginsburg and several conservative Republican senators threatened to filibuster against Kennedy, whom they considered too liberal.

One leading administration conservative said Saturday that Kennedy would be acceptable to other administration conservatives, including Meese.

Wilkins, of Greenville, S.C., is chairman of the U.S. Sentencing Commission, which devised uniform guidelines for punishments of people convicted of federal crimes. He is a favorite of Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, ranking Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Meese said he hoped a nominee could be chosen in time for the Senate Judiciary Committee to meet its tentative schedule that was set for Ginsburg's confirmation hearings. Those hearings were tentatively set for the week of Dec. 7 although the timetable was not certain.

When presidential aide Gary Bauer was asked if it would be impossible to get a new nominee confirmed this year he said, "Before the end of the year, that's right. I would think that all the motivations here would be to take one's time and be absolutely sure."

Senate Judiciary Committee spokesman Peter Smith said, "It probably would be difficult to complete action on the floor (this year) if not impossible."

Ginsburg Withdrawal Prompts Sympathy, Reagan Criticism

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Douglas H. Ginsburg's withdrawal as a Supreme Court nominee Saturday brought criticism of President Reagan for an incautious nomination, but mostly sympathy for Ginsburg.

A key supporter of Reagan's court nominees also faulted the administration for backing down too hastily.

"I urge the president to proceed with caution and to make certain the next nominee is asked all the right questions," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Dole called Ginsburg's decision to bow out two days after admitting he used marijuana a few times in the 1960s and 1970s "unfortunate, but now we have to move on."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said he was disappointed the administration did not give Ginsburg more support.

"At the first sign of vicissitude, they cut nd run," he said. "Yes, he made some mistakes, but I believe in the principle of repentance and forgiveness." Hatch said he believes the Senate would have supported Ginsburg, calling him "a first-rate legal mind."

Hatch attacked Education Secretary William Bennett for urging Ginsburg on Friday to withdraw. "I'm mad. Bill Bennett is a friend of mine, but he had no business doing what he did," said Hatch, who was a key supporter of Reagan's first-choice nominee, Robert H. Bork.

Arthur J. Kroop, executive director of the American Way, which sponsored an ad campaign against Bork, said Ginsburg's fall was the result of Reagan's "rush to judgment."

"The nomination was fatally flawed from the outset. In his determination to nominate a 'spite' candidate, the president ignored the basic issues of qualifications and background," Kroop said.

His organization had not taken a position on the Ginsburg nomination.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, who had been preparing for hearings on Ginsburg's nomination after helping lead Senate rejection of Bork, urged Reagan to quickly pick a new nominee. Both Ginsburg and Bork will retain seats on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

"We need to fill the vacancy on the court as quickly as possible," said Biden, D-Del..

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., acknowledged after Ginsburg withdrew that he had urged the White House to drop Ginsburg.

"Judge Ginsburg is an able judge and it is most unfortunate that this situation has arisen. Given the circumstances, I had recommended to the White House that they give serious consideration to withdrawing Judge Ginsburg's nomination," Thurmond said.

Some of Ginsburg's former colleagues at Harvard University Law School were angered by the judiciary process that led to Ginsburg's withdrawal.

"I think the Reagan administration should bear some responsiblity for playing with human lives and taking a casual and callous attitude toward the constitutional process of nominating and confirming Surpeme Court justices," said Harvard Professor Lawrence H. Tribe, who testified before the Judiciary Committee against Bork.

"I feel very sorry for Doug Ginsburg and his family," Tribe said. "What has happened reflects far more badly on the Reagan administration than on Judge Ginsburg."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., a Judiciary Committee member, said Ginsburg's nomination was submitted to the committee with haste and the judge was right to withdraw.

"There has been a cloud upon his nomination from the beginning," Kennedy said, adding that he hopes the next nominee will not be so heavily backed by Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

Veteran Dies

BOSTON (AP) — A Vietnam veteran believed to be the first U.S. serviceman excused from criminal charges on grounds he suffered post-traumatic stress because of combat experience has died at the age of 42.

Police found John R. Coughlin dead in the one-room apartment where he lived alone after a neighbor reported he had not seen Coughlin for more than a day.

An autopsy was performed and Suffolk County medical examiners were awaiting the results of toxicological tests, expected in four to six weeks, police spokeswoman Jane Sheehan said Saturday. There was no evidence of foul play, she said.

Coughlin had joined the Marines after graduating from Braintree High School in 1965. He served two tours in Vietnam and returned home as a sergeant with a Bronze Star for valor and three Purple Hearts.

"He was a true-blue friend, a dedicated American," said Robert Solmente of Braintree, who had known Coughlin since boyhood. "He loved children and dogs in that order."

Officials Say N.C. Citizens Must See A Need Before Funding Highway Work

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina citizens must see the need for everything from repaving projects to a system of upgraded arterial highways that will connect urban and rural areas before they will be willing to foot the bill, state officials say.

"I think everybody sitting around this table feels like we're going to end up seeing that need," said Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe. "But I think it would be a bad mistake to early on start making those assumptions and those prognostications.

"The people want to see the need first," he said. "They want to see what their dollars will buy, and once they can see that they don't have any problem."

Republican Gov. Jim Martin, Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, each appointed five members of the study commission, created by this year's General Assembly and charged with making recommendations to the 1989 session.

Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, who cochairs the Highway Study Commission with Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, said he expects the commission to explore priorities for the major connecting roads and urban projects such as Charlotte's planned outer belt. During a break, he told reporters, "I'd like to see some very clear directions given to DOT."

He acknowledged there may be constitutional questions involved, and added, "I expect this to be a very controversial thing."

A Martin appointee, transportation board member Seddon "Rusty" Goode of Charlotte, said additional revenue sources must be tapped.

Citing the impact of the federal interstate system, he told fellow members of the study group: "I hope that one of the things that we can do in this commission is to maybe have our own small interstate system mapped out in North Carolina."

He suggested upgrading arterial highways, such as N.C. 24 and N.C. 27 between Charlotte and the coast, and making them "sort of a capstone of our state."

Goldston concurred, suggesting an "intrastate" label for such a system.

At the outset, Goldston listed as possible revenue sources a major state bond issue, tolls, increased gasoline taxes or license fees, additional sales taxes on auto and truck parts and a larger share of federal highway money.

"We have gotten along very well in North Carolina without tolls," he said. "I don't know whether this is the way to go or not ... (but) I'll say one thing: The people in the mountains aren't very interested in building a loop around Charlotte until they get what they want.

"But if the users are paying these fees as they go, then it might be a way," he said. "This is one thing we should consider."

Goode later said he favors tolls, too, but he added that "there are probably only a few logical places where a toll road will be economically feasible."

Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington told reporters he doesn't expect legislators to try to dictate where roads will be built. If they did, he said, "I think they would have problems."

Harrington, a Martin appointee, said additional highway construction money is needed, but declined to say whether that means increased state taxes.

"I don't want to propose solutions before the study is complete," he said.

Archaeologist Finds 1800s Pottery

By JIM WICKER
The Burlington Daily Times-News
An AP Member Feature Exchange

SNOW CAMP, N.C. (AP) — An archaeologist's dig around Eugene Whitehead's old tool shed has produced more than 1,000 shards of pottery made in the early 1800s by Solomon Loy, one of the state's earliest innovative potters.

Although a quarter of the dig site — the long-ago location of a pottery kiln — is covered by part of the shed, it has produced enough artifacts to give archaeologists a clear picture of Loy's pottery-making operation.

"I'm in my fifth week of digging here," explains Linda Carnes of Atlanta, Ga., a graduate student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, who is carrying out the archaeology project as part of her work toward a doctoral degree.

Solomon Loy, a North Carolinian of English descent, was believed to have been born around 1805. He apparently settled by the 1820s on the land along what is now called Old Dam Road.

Although Loy has been hailed as one of the important early potters in the state — and photos of some of his plates are included in the book Turners and Burners, by UNC folklore professor Charles Zug III — it is not known when he died or where he was buried, Carnes says.

Carnes said the dig at Whitehead's shed revealed that Solomon Loy used a round down-draft kiln constructed by rock, but apparently with a brick top. This is only the second down-draft kiln uncovered in the state. The first was found near Salisbury in 1974, Carnes said, pointing out that large stones inside the circular rock foundation create a hollow floor. She says she also has located the vents where the smoke from the kiln was directed to a detached chimney.

Carnes is also digging at another former kiln location, a few feet away, but she points out that kiln was not a round, down-draft type. The dig shows it was more of a square structure.

Carnes said Loy became well known in his era for his method of decorating pottery, and for his use of cobalt blue coloring. In Turners and Burners, it was pointed out that Loy used loops and lines to decorate his pottery, which was made from clay dug from a nearby stream.

A lot of potters were located in this area in the first quarter of the 19th century, Carnes said, attributing the location of suitable clay in that region of southern Alamance County as a key factor.

Loy apparently sold his pottery wares in distant towns by the wagon load, Carnes said. He probably would not have found a large market among his neighbors, who also made pottery.

Despite the mystery of Solomon Loy's latter years, it is known that his son, John M. Loy, succeeded him and continued to work at the site as a producer of stoneware. He died in 1911.

John M. Loy, according to Carnes' research, was survived by two sons, William H. Loy, who was born in 1855 and died in 1894, and Albert Loy, who was born in 1874 and died in 1955. They, too, followed the potter's trade and resided within a half-mile of Solomon Loy place.

Apple Butter A Family Tradition

By JIM WICKER
Burlington Daily Times-News
An AP Member Exchange Feature

SNOW CAMP, N.C. (AP) — The best way to make apple butter is to have a good, 15-gallon copper kettle and a whole lot of tasty mountain apples, says Alton Duckworth, who has been helping make the delicacy at the Sword of Peace for the past decade.

Taking a break from the chore of constantly stirring the bubbling pot of fresh apple butter Wednesday, Duckworth explained that he first learned the method of converting apples to the tasty dessert as a teenager.

"My daddy, Ray Duckworth, who grew up in Avery County, deep in the Blue Ridge Mountains, learned how to make it from his daddy. It's a tradition that has been in my family for generations," says Duckworth, who is director of audience development at the Sword of Peace.

Duckworth, 30, and several other Alamance County people associated with the outdoor drama have spent much of this week getting ready for the Sword of Peace's annual Molasses Festival, which will be held Sunday from 1-5 p.m.

Although he assisted in grinding sorghum cane, the chief ingredient of country molasses, Duckworth's chief responsibility was making the approximately 120 quarts of apple butter that will be offered for sale at the festival.

"The old folks used to put four or five silver dollars in the bottom of their copper cooking kettles to help keep the apple butter from sticking during the cooking process," Duckworth said.

Apparently just as a lark, mountain apple butter makers in years gone by used to put one of the silver dollars from their kettle in a quart of apple butter that was kept for family use or given to friends and relatives and whoever found the silver dollar was supposed to be the recipient of good luck.

Duckworth says he doesn't use silver dollars in his apple butter making.

"Real silver dollars are a rare thing and, even if I had some, I'd need to keep them for myself," he chuckles. "Some people today would probably think it's mighty unsanitary to put silver dollars in a cooking kettle anyhow."

The way Duckworth makes apple butter is to set up the copper kettle over a wood fire outdoors.

First, he puts a small amount apple cider in the kettle and slowly add the apples, which are peeled, cored and quartered before the cooking process is ever started.

"You keep cooking until the apples make a sauce," he says, adding that cooking continues until the mixture thickens and sugar and spices are added. "I don't tell what the spices are," Duckworth said, explaining his recipe is a closely guarded secret. "It's my own recipe which is based on the one my family has used for generations."

But one secret Duckworth will share is, "You have to do a lot of stirring - an awful lot of constant stirring to make good apple butter. If you let it burn or stick in the pot it will ruin you whole pot of apple buttle, and the next time you try to use the kettle, it'll probably stick again in the spot where the burn occurred."

Campus Soap Opera Airs

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — "General College" is in its second semester on a local cable channel in Chapel Hill, and the show, which is written, produced and performed by students is developing quite a following — even for a 15-minute broadcast.

"We've turned out to have quite a good response," said junior Adam Reist, a 21-year-old radio, television and motion picture major who is the director and producer. "I think people are starting to talk about it."

What has people talking are four story lines that have, or will, touch on delicate subjects.

Here's a sample:

Paige and Meg are college roommates. Both have been dating Jason, but they don't know this until Paige finds Jason's picture on Meg's dresser. Meanwhile, Jason's former gay lover, Steve, is calling and wants to get back together. When Jason rejects Steve's advances, a despondent Steve just happens to run into Meg, who works at the student union. Meg asks Steve out, unaware of who he is.

Besides the roommate love triangle, the plots include a Catholic couple facing an unwanted pregnancy and considering abortion, a teaching assistant who regularly seduces female students and a woman who comes to college brimming with her parents' high-toned social expectations, then falls in love with an auto mechanic.

One indication of the show's popularity is the number of people who show up Monday nights at the Pizza Hut on Franklin Street. Manager John Wagoner told the Greensboro News & Record that the soap opera pulls four times as many viewers as Monday Night Football did before the NFL strike.

"Without this Student TV (a student organization on campus), it's usually pretty dead," Wagoner says.

Granville Towers, where the basketball players stay, is the only dormitory with cable. The show airs Mondays and Wednesdays at 11 p.m.

Reist and Assistant Producer Jason Lyon, a 19-year-old sophomore also majoring in radio, television and motion pictures, say the foremost goal of their show is to entertain. They hope it will have some educational value, too. Upcoming episodes will show how a student deals with rape.

'Painful Debate'

DURHAM (AP) — The takeover by fundamentalists of the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary prompted "painful debate" among professors, who were eventually reminded of the freedom they were fighting to protect, a seminary faculty professor said today.

"What we are doing is bearing witness to the liberty the Baptist theological institutions have historically held so highly," said Richard L. Hester, a professor of pastoral care, who spoke during the fall meeting of the North Carolina Conference of the American Association of University Professors.

Control of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary by fundamentalists could have effects on academic freedom far beyond that school in Wake Forest, Hester said during a panel discussion at N.C. Central University.

Hester said it's difficult to predict what the Southeastern faculty gained in its fight against attempts by conservative trustees to require professors to believe in an inerrant Bible.

"What will happen when what is happening at Southeastern is threatening the academic freedom of other schools as well as ours? We do not know," Hester said.

Fundamentalists gained control of the Southeastern board of trustees over the past eight years, Hester said. They now control the boards at five of the six Southern Baptist seminaries in the United States, he said. Those six schools educate about 20 percent of theology students in the country.

Proposal Blasted

RALEIGH (AP) — U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett's proposal to end federal loans to schools with high student loan default rates would have a chilling effect on students who attend black colleges in North Carolina, officials say.

"I would describe the secretary's policies as Neanderthal," Robert L. Albright, president of Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "It's designed to punish institutions, and ... it would probably close us."

In Raleigh, officials at Shaw University and St. Augustine's College said Bennett's threats showed a lack of compassion for students from low-income families who rely on federal aid.

Bennett said Wednesday that the government would have to spend $1.6 billion this year, nearly half the federal Guaranteed Student Loan budget, to cover loans that students failed to repay, a situation he called "intolerable."

In interviews Friday, educators from black schools attacked Bennett for threatening to end federal student loans to schools if their student loan default rates exceeded 20 percent by 1990. Black colleges rank near the top of the list of North Carolina schools with high default rates.

Nationwide, according to federal figures, there are 2,190 colleges or trade schools with default rates of 20 percent or higher. In response to high numbers of students failing to pay off their loans, the Senate is considering a bill that would allow guarantors to refuse to guarantee loans to institutions with a default rate higher than 25 percent.

A list issued by federal educators showed 55 colleges or trade schools in North Carolina with default rates at 20 percent or higher. Among those were several predominantly black colleges including St. Augustine's with a default rate of 54.6 percent; Shaw with 33.3 percent; Johnson C. Smith with 47.7 percent; and North Carolina Central University with 33.5 percent.

Power Struggle

GREENSBORO (AP) — Teachers in North Carolina still want better school buildings and smaller classes, but their top priority is reversing a trend which shifted power from the schools to federal and state governments, officials say.

John Dornan, executive director of the North Carolina Public School Forum, said some 80 principals, teachers and superintendents from about 25 counties met Friday at a conference on how to make the schools a better place for learning. They reached a consensus that they needed more power, he said — the same conclusion that was reached by school officials from 30 western North Carolina counties at conferences in Boone and Asheville last month.

That would be a reversal of a movement, sparked by a critical report in 1983 on the status of American education, which gave more power to the government.

More decision-making and budgetary power are among 14 changes educators said they need to help make the schools a better place for teaching.

State Rep. Al Lineberry, D-Guilford, a member of the House Education Committee, called the educators' work "the beginning of a new day in education."

"I think we are going to see some vital changes in education," he said.

If he's right, demands that educators be held accountable will increase, said Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

He reminded educators that more local control and more money for education increases the demand that teachers and principals be held accountable for how students perform.

"My mama always told me to be careful what you ask for, because you just might get it," Warren said. "We expect more accountability and evaluations. If we are going to continue to get the investment in dollars, we've got to show it's being spent wisely."

Nevertheless, educators seemed confident of their choices.

Plan Endorsed

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Rufus Reynolds says a newly filed plan to reorganize the PTL television ministry has a "pretty good shot" at erasing an estimated $60 million in debt.

But during a hearing Friday, Reynolds directed attorneys for the creditors and newly appointed ministry trustee David Clark to make some changes in the plan. Those changes would be made in time for a summary to be mailed to approximately 1,000 creditors and 116,000 lifetime partners by Nov. 23.

Under a timetable set after the ministry filed for bankruptcy June 12, and which Reynolds reaffirmed Friday, creditors and partners would vote during December with the court making a final judgment in a hearing Dec. 22.

Reynolds said he anticipated a new regime taking over the ministry by May 1 in a ceremony he called "the changing of the guard."

But until then, he noted, the ministry faced a difficult task of just keeping its doors open.

"Right now, they're struggling to survive," Reynolds said. But he said "the trustee is optimistic and I'm optimistic too."

Attorneys used chalk and a blackboard to diagram corporate structure under the proposed reorganization plan.

For tax purposes, PTL would become a non-profit holding company that oversees a for-profit corporation and two other not-for profit corporations. The profit corporation would hold all purely commercial activities. One non-profit corporation would function as a title-holding company for certain church-related properties, while the other would be a regular tax-exempt ministry.

As envisioned in the plan, operations of all three sub-corporations would initially be overseen by a panel of businessmen and assisted by the holding company's board of directors. That board would be elected by the ministry's lifetime partners.

Red Tide Aid

WILMINGTON (AP) — An algae bloom that has lingered off the North Carolina shore for a week has contaminated shellfish and idled fishermen, prompting Gov. Jim Martin to apply for federal disaster relief for four counties.

"The economic impact of this red tide has been widely damaging to coastal North Carolina," Martin said. "Our hope is to be able to qualify these fishermen and other businesses for low-interest loans to help them get back on their feet."

Martin said he was asking the Small Business Administration to declare Carteret, Onslow, Pender and New Hanover counties a federal disaster area.

"There are some 9,000 local shellfishermen that have been unable to harvest, and they could be out of business for a month or more," Martin said.

"The economic impact of this red tide has been more widely damaging to coastal North Carolina as we've learned that 20 fishing piers, 50 restaurants, 70 charter boats and 30 motels have already suffered major losses of business," he said.

'Tinderbox Conditions' Fuel Blazes Across N.C.

RALEIGH (AP) — The number of brush fires across North Carolina was reduced from 91 to 61 Saturday, but officials said one blaze in Maggie Valley threatened nine homes and weather and wind conditions were providing no fuel for optimism.

"Basically we've got tinderbox conditions, we've got leaves on the ground, you got leaves on the trees," said James Munn of the N.C. Division of Emergency Management.

Personnel from the Division of Emergency Management, as well as the forestry division manned a command center in Raleigh Saturday to keep watch over the fires. They were keeping a close eye on weather conditions, warning that although the number of fires and the acreage destroyed had decreased drastically from Friday to Saturday, the danger was still high.

"The humidity has dropped," said Al Warlick, a spokesman for the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety. "The sun is out and the heat is greater. It's just not working in our favor."

Warlick said the 61 fires had burned 239 acres Saturday. By late afternoon, officials said the blaze in Maggie Valley in Haywood County charred at least 90 acres, and posed the greatest threat to property. The blaze was about 75 percent contained as of 5 p.m., officials said, and no homes had been burned.

Warlick said the state's emergency response team has been dispatched to the area, and 20 tons of flame retardant is being flown to the scene from Kinston, N.C. Tankers from the Air Force National Guard in Charlotte had also been dispatched to the area, he said.

Warlick said the Red Cross has been notified in case evacuation is necessary. Three 20-man teams from the N.C. Department of Correction were sent to support teams in the Haywood County area and in Buncombe County, where a forest fire had destroyed about 75 acres near Black Mountain Saturday.

Division of Forest Resources officials say 154 fires burned 1,473 acres of land in North Carolina Thursday and Friday. Ninety-one of those fires were reported Friday.

The largest fire Friday roared through Transylvania County, where about 85 acres of the Pisgah National Forest were destroyed near Turkey Pen Gap, according to Junior Woody of the United States Forest Service.

"We contained the blaze at 60 acres, then it creeped across the fire (containment) line and just kept going," Woody said.

The fire was contained by nightfall, but firefighters were put on standby in case of another flare-up, Woody said.

State officials canceled burning permits in 24 western counties Thursday as a precautionary measure because of dryness, high winds and low relative humidities.

"It's a critical situation right now," said Selby Hawk of the N.C. Forest Service. "We're not expecting any rain until sometime next week. With the low humidity and brisk winds, well, it means trouble."

Rebecca Richards of the state Division of Forest Resources said firefighters will remain on alert through the weekend.

"We'll have to watch it," she said. "We've been luckier than other states so far. But we could follow suit if we don't get some rain — soon."

A lingering drought has combined with high wind and newly fallen leaves to aggravate conditions throughout the Forest Service's 13-state Southern region from Texas to Virginia, where 8,972 fires have burned 157,000 acres since Oct. 27. The hardest hit have been Tennessee and Kentucky.

Judge Gives Colombian Senator Tentative Trafficking Sentence

RALEIGH (AP) — A Colombian senator, who appeared in federal court wearing nothing but a white blanket taped around his waist, angrily denounced what he called a U.S. government conspiracy that led to his drug trafficking conviction.

Senator Samuel Alberto Escruceria-Delgado, a 24-year member of the Colombian legislature who was convicted by a federal jury in Wilmington in August on 21 drug trafficking charges, received the maximum sentence on each count Friday: 240 years in prison and $505,000 in fines.

District Judge Franklin Dupree, Jr., said he would consider modifying the sentence following the results of a psychological evaluation of the senator. Another sentencing hearing may be scheduled in about 60 days.

Bill Dickenson of the U.S. Marshal Service said Escruceria-Delgado came to the courthouse Friday wearing a three-piece suit, but disrobed in a holding cell "in protest of the government's conspiracy against him."

Saying the senator had wanted to appear in court nude, Dickenson said marshals used strapping tape to secure a blanket around his waist before bringing him into the courtroom.

Speaking through an interpreter during the hearing, Escruceria-Delgado stood in his bare feet, his body covered with an outbreak of psoriasis.

"I have come to the court, Judge Dupree, dressed as I am, not because of lack of respect of the court or of you, but as an expression of protest of the conspiracy against me," the senator said.

Turning angrily toward the prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Swaim, and U.S. Customs Agent Mike Lemnah, who headed the two-year investigation that led to his arrest, Sen. Escruceria-Delgado said, "I am deeply convinced that those two United States officials, for the rest of their lives, will never, ever have their consciences clear. There has been a profound and deep injustice done here."

"I implore you, Doctor Dupree, that you be benevolent with me in your sentence," the senator shouted, his voice cracking with emotion. "I swear before God ... that I am innocent."

Throughout the trial and during the sentencing hearing Friday, Swaim argued that Escruceria-Delgado, who has been detained since his arrest March 12 during a dinner party at his Miami condominium, headed one of Colombia's most powerful and dangerous organized crime families, which was responsible for the importation into the United States of thousands of kilograms of cocaine in the past decade.

Swaim asked the court to impose a severe punishment because the senator used his political influence to direct an international drug trafficking ring that funneled cocaine and marijuana into Miami and other distribution points that supplied local drug rings in the United States.

It was the investigation of a Wilmington-based cocaine ring, headed by Jose Guillermo Gutierrez, a Colombian national living in the United States, that led drug agents into the Escruceria organization, according to the U.S. attorney's office.

Gutierrez, a former electrical power plant engineer, testified before a federal grand jury in North Carolina that indicted Escruceria-Delgado along with the senator's son, Samuel Alberto Escruceria-Manzi, also a Colombian congressman, and the congressman's wife, Maria Lorza-Escruceria. Both are fugitives believed to be living in their home state of Cali, Colombia.

Gutierrez, who received a seven-year sentence for his guilty plea, testified against the senator during the trial along with three other convicted drug traffickers who were sentenced under a plea agreement with the government. All testified under the federal witness protection program.

U.S. officials have been unable to extradite the co-defendants because the Colombian Supreme Court ruled earlier this year that a domestic law that had been used to apply the 1979 extradition treaty between the United States and Colombia was unconstitutional.

The senator's son, known as Beto, is believed to have headed the family's Miami cocaine distribution network, said Skip Garcia, special agent in charge of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration in Wilmington.

Garcia called the senator's conviction "a historical landmark" because it tied a country's national legislature to an international drug trafficking ring. He testified Friday that the senator shared leadership of the "Escruceria crime family" along with his brothers Jaime and Gustovo, the crime family's "top eschelon overseers."

Duke Chancellor

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University President H. Keith H. Brodie announced Saturday that he had recommended to the Duke Board of Directors that the office of chancellor be re-established and that Dr. William G. Anlyan be named to the position.

Anlyan would relinquish his position as chancellor for health affairs and as executive vice president of the university. If approved, the appointment would take effect July 1.

The recommendations were approved Friday by the Executive Committee of Duke's Board of Trustees, and the issue will go to the full board in December.

Brodie said Anlyan's new responsibilities would focus on major elements of Duke's external relationships.

"The need for top-level attention and involvement in this area continues to grow, and I'm delighted that Bill has agreed to accept this position," Brodie said.

Brodie said Anlyan would play a major role in the university's internal program and fund-raising efforts, especially the Capital Campaign for the Arts and Sciences, and Engineering.

LOCAL CENTERS HONORED CINCINNATI, OHIO

On September 26th and 27th during the 1987 National Convention all eight local Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers were presented with awards and honors. Owner/Pres., Ron Mock, attributes the achievements of Raleigh I, Raleigh II, Durham, Greenville, Cary, Fayetteville, Asheboro and Garner to the never ending dedication of each centers staff. The ceremonies were part of a three day National Convention held at the Cincinnati Convention Center, The Hyatt Regency, Omni Netherland Plaza, and the Clarion Hotel. The event officially opened with a reception welcoming Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers owners and staff members from 27 states and Canada. An estimated 1200 participants heard speakers such as Dr. Stephen R. Covey, renowned motivational trainer, Dr. Jerry Sutcamp, President-elect of the American Society of Bariatric Physicians and Charles E. Sekeres, Founder and CEO of Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers.

Since 1979, Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers of America, Inc., an Akron, Ohio based corporation has provided thousands of clients with the most professionally supervised weight loss program in America. Nationally touching approximately 35,000 clients each day, over 270 centers are in operation in the United States and Canada. Raleigh I is ranked #1 Nationally in the U.S. and Canada—thank you residents of Raleigh and surrounding areas for making this honor and recognition a reality. We appreciate your commitment and dedication to yourselves and our program.

MEDICAL SUPPORT IS APPRECIATED!

Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers are very appreciative of our programs acceptance within the medical communities of North Carolina. Medical doctors referring their overweight patients to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers for structured assistance have been very pleased with the results. In the eight centers, each are staffed with Registered and/or Licensed Practical Nurses, Staff Counselors, a Manager and a Physician. The Physician accepts the potential client ONLY after a thorough screening of their medical history, and electrocardiogram evaluation, blood chemistry studies and a physical examination. Medical supervision within the staff is a requirement. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers have the expertise and skill to guarantee a weight loss of 3 or more pounds per week. Medical monitoring, staff guidance and encouragement help the client to follow the prescribed program. The program utilizes several calorie and carbohydrate restricted diets. Adequate amounts of protein, vegetables, fruits and starches create well-balanced menus at each meal. Our clients successes are related to menu plans that encourage dining in any atmosphere, from fast foods to elegant restaurants. The convenience factors of Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program allow for out-of-town, interstate and intercontinental travel. Clients are also taught improved eating habits for eating at home and social occasions.

Most times, poor eating habits have become ingrained over the years. Many people may not realize these habits even exist. Behavior Guidance classes arranged near the lunch hour or immediately following the workday are conducive to more efficient management of the precious time of our clients. Since 1979, Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers have recognized the importance of catering to individuals. We realize the necessity of being a result oriented outpatient weight loss facility. We take great pride in offering effective weight loss and weight maintenance programs that blend well with the most hectic of schedules. Client success and dedicated service are the primary focuses during operating hours of 8:30 am to 7:30 pm. After reaching ones weight loss goal, a full one year weight maintenance schedule is encouraged and established. This period of calorie adjustment stabilizes the individuals newly attained and desired weight. Weight maintenance is the overall objective. A primary goal of Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers is to create the climate of attention, recognition and achievement for our clients, many of whom have never experienced the joys of a totally acceptable body weight. As the holiday seasons and New Year approach, we look forward to serving those who have entrusted their care to us. During these joyous times, Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers sincerely expresses our appreciation to the medical communities and literally thousands of clients who have made our celebrations possible. We ARE committed to the effective delivery of WEIGHT LOSS. We THANK YOU!

2nd ANNUAL CLIENT AWARDS BANQUET

In today's society we are aware that weight loss and weight maintenance are unspoken expectations. Everyone will check his or her reflection when approaching double glass doors. At last glance were you impressed or disappointed with self? The image that reflects back to you is accurate. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers proudly presents on November 15, 1987 at 6:00 pm, Reflections II—our Second Annual Awards Banquet and Fashion Show. The Marriott Hotel (Crabtree) in Raleigh will host this special event. Featured will be an array of successful weight loss models now actively participating in the maintenance program. A sneak preview of the seasons hottest fashions from Miller & Rhoads promises to be a highlight of this affair. Activities include special guests, a spectacular slide presentation, a carefully selected buffet dinner, fashion, fun and door prizes. Tickets can be purchased at any of the eight conveniently located Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers nearest you. Please join us. We Thank you again for another great year!

Rural Residences Change Fire Fighting Strategy

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer

The popularity of rural living has forced firefighters to make protection of houses a top priority while they battle hundreds of forest fires burning across the drought-stricken South.

"So many people like having their homes in small wood lots out in the country to enjoy and live in, and then commute to the city," said Doug Williams, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service in Atlanta.

"There are more structures in rural settings, and that increases the difficulty of fighting fires because you have to give the structures priority. We've committed a large amount of our resources to protecting structures," Williams said.

A lingering drought has combined with high wind and newly fallen leaves to aggravate conditions throughout the Forest Service's 13-state Southern region from Texas to Virginia, where 8,972 fires have burned 157,000 acres since Oct. 27.

Not included in the 13-state region is West Virginia, where 135,000 acres have burned across the rugged southern part of the state, causing an estimated $41 million in damage. About 100 fires still burned Saturday and thick smoke from some of those fires was partly blamed for an early morning collision between a bus and a stalled pickup on the West Virginia Turnpike that killed one person and injured 23, state police said.

Despite the high numbers, Williams said, "we did not receive orders for additional manpower from the firefighters. That's a good sign. That means we what we have in place or already mobilized is sufficient to take care of the situation."

Earlier, firefighters from the Southeast were among those sent out West to battle huge forest fires. Now crews from some Western states have been brought to the Southeast to help. Virginia had crews from Arizona and California and more arrived Saturday from Idaho and Montana.

High wind carried smoke for hundreds of miles, reducing visibility even in areas of southern Georgia and northern Florida where there were no fires, according to the National Weather Service.

Gusting wind subsided Friday and Saturday in West Virginia, but the calmer air allowed a thick cover of smoke to accumulate. Similar conditions in Kentucky hindered efforts to use aircraft to drop water on the flames. Officials in those states and Virginia warned people with respiratory ailments to limit outdoor activity because of the smoke.

The West Virginia Air Pollution Control Commission said air quality in Charleston on Saturday rated 400 on a scale on which anything above 100 is considered unhealthful. Visibility at Charleston's airport was one-half mile Saturday afternoon and motorists on Interstate 64 had their headlights on.

Firefighters said only rain will allow them to get ahead, but meteorologists don't expect much rain before Monday or Tuesday. Even then, only a 50 percent to 60 percent chance is expected.

"We still have our fingers crossed. It's definitely not a sure thing," said weather service forecaster John Laing in Atlanta.

A few sprinkles of rain fell Saturday in Kentucky, but forecasts for the fire-scarred eastern and southeastern parts of the state were not encouraging.

Williams said more than 2,500 Forest Service firefighters had been mobilized by the Atlanta office, in addition to at least that many state and local firefighters fighting the fires.

Kentucky and Tennessee were hardest hit last week, but Williams said conditions were worsening in Alabama and Mississippi.

Near Sturgis, Miss., a high school was evacuated and one house destroyed and another severely damaged last week, Williams said.

North Carolina State Emergency Management officials said they sent out aerial tankers and the Air Force National Guard to help fight fires in the western part of the state Saturday.

Crews in eastern Tennessee, also aided by National Guard aircraft, battled a 6,000-acre fire Saturday near the Kentucky border that straddled Interstate 75, creating heavy smoke along the highway, and an uncontained fire of about 5,000 to 7,000 acres on Cumberland Mountain.

Kentucky firefighters were dealing with a blaze over 10,000 acres in the Daniel Boone National Forest.

A fire in Lee County in Virginia's far southwestern corner spread to more than 1,800 acres, and Lou Southard, of the Virginia Department of Forestry, said rugged terrain in the area made the fire "almost impossible to contain."

Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia have banned outdoor burning, and such a ban is in effect in 24 North Carolina counties and 52 Alabama counties. Georgia on Saturday banned outdoor burning in the northern third of the state.

West Virginia Gov. Arch Moore closed forests in 14 counties to all public activities.

Despite the high number of fires, Williams said the burned acreage is below the first two weeks of April 1985, when 7,976 fires burned 275,075 acres. Williams said that rash of fires is generally considered one of the most severe on record.

Medical Unit For Homeless Opens

By MICHELE COPPOLA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A gleaming medical clinic for the homeless was officially opened Saturday as part of a $14 million renovation of a shelter that could only dispense bandages and first aid three years ago.

"We always dreamed we would expand our services. We never dreamed it would become like is now," said David Nelson, director of medical services for the shelter.

The clinic, part of the block-long shelter run by the Community for Creative Non-Violence, includes a 32-bed infirmary, its cots covered with bright patchwork quilts, and lockers for individuals' belongings.

It has a medical laboratory, six examining rooms, two dental suites, a podiatry room, counseling rooms, a therapy room with a whirlpool, a conference room, pharmacy and large day room.

Paintings donated by local artists line the white walls.

The mental health section, which will include a 21-bed detoxification unit for those with drug and alcohol problems, is expected to be ready in a few weeks.

Nelson has worked at the shelter since it opened in January 1984 in what was then a crumbling old building once owned by the federal government.

"We started out with a couple of rooms and about 30 bandages. We did first aid," said Nelson, who is a nurse. "It is a miraculous metamorphosis."

The shelter, which holds more than 1,000 people, is being renovated with about $14 million from the federal and District of Columbia governments and some private donations. Most of the work is completed.

The mental health section and the women's section of the shelter, which will have about 165 beds, should be finished by Christmas.

Mitch Snyder, the main force behind shelter and a vocal activist on homeless rights, said the near completion of the shelter renovation is gratifying but is only a "first step."

"This a nice place, more comprehensive than any shelter in the country. But people shouldn't have to live in shelters," Snyder said. "Housing will be a greater struggle."

Snyder said while original renovation plans called for the shelter to hold about 1,000 people, they have decided to increase the space to 1,700 by putting in bunk beds because of need.

A 1985 report by the University of the District of Columbia estimated there were 6,500 homeless people in the nation's capital, but advocates for the homeless said the figure coule be as high as 10,000.

Habitat Polluted

LOS BANOS, Calif. (AP) — Selenium levels higher than those that caused birth defects in birds at the Kesterson National Wildlife Refuge have been found in the Grassland Water District, California's largest remaining waterfowl wintering area.

A report from the Fish and Wildlife Service, which detailed the findings at several duck clubs, reinforces an earlier theory that selenium contamination affects migratory waterfowl habitat throughout a large part of the San Joaquin Valley. The report was released Friday.

Selenium levels at Kesterson have been blamed for grotesque deformities in hatchlings: twisted wings, swollen heads, and missing eyes. Embyros have died as well.

The 1,280-acre Kesterson marshes are about 20 miles away from the Grassland Water District, which stretches over 51,000 acres and is home to an estimated 250,000 migratory waterfowl.

"It is out of control. ... Until we get clean water in our wetlands, we will continue to have problems," said Lydia Miller of the San Joaquin Valley Raptor Rescue Center in Merced.

Much of California's wetlands has been paved over or reclaimed since the turn of the century, leaving few areas for birds to nest and feed along the Pacific Flyway, a major migratory route.

Because of this, the Grassland district marshes "are absolutely priceless," Miller said.

Selenium, a naturally occurring mineral, is found in water draining off farms west of Fresno. Small doses of selenium can cause birth defects and other chronic health problems, but trace amounts are needed for healthy growth in humans and other animals.

Tests of livers of three duck species gathered in Grassland marshes in 1985 and 1986 found selenium levels higher than in the same species in Kesterson in 1983, said Fred Paveglio, a federal wildlife biologist.

The selenium concentrations in the Grassland birds ranged from 23 to 25 parts per million, or about twice as high as levels known to trigger serious reproductive damage. An average concentration of 19.9 parts per million was found two years earlier in birds at Kesterson.

"These levels were high enough to assume that we had a nesting problem in the Grasslands," Paveglio said.

Dangerous levels of selenium also were found in algae, one of the main food staples for aquatic birds.

Birds remaining in the Grassland area after the marshes dried up in the spring probably will suffer the same fate as the birds at Kesterson, he said.

A separate study is being done on eggs and hatchlings at Grassland.

On Sept. 25, 1981, Sandra Day O'Connor took her seat as the U.S. Supreme Court's first woman ever to sit on the high court.

Relaxed Kennedy Reviews 25 Years In Senate

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, celebrating his 25th year in the Senate this weekend, says he's happily working without the scrutiny of presidential politics hanging over him and plans to stay in Congress for as long as voters want him.

"My ambition lies in being an effective senator," Kennedy said in an interview last week. "I've been honored to represent Massachusetts for 25 years and have every intention to continue serving Massachusetts as long as they want me."

The Massachusetts Democrat, who was first elected to the Senate on Nov. 6, 1962, and sworn in the next day, has been considered for the presidency, as heir apparent to his slain brothers' legacy, since 1968.

But after losing the nomination in 1980 and sitting out the race in 1984, Kennedy shocked the political world in 1985 by announcing he would not run in 1988, a move he says has made the last two years in the Senate more effective and enjoyable.

"Very definitely," Kennedy said. "I think we would have had difficulty in a number of legislative efforts that we had over this period of time if you had to have every statement or comment or position being judged through the presidential lens."

"People may not agree with me on all the issues, and I understand that, but I think they're giving me the benefit of the doubt that I'm standing for my beliefs," he said. "You'd like (opposition) to be on the basis of principle and not on questioning your motive."

Despite his early rejection of a presidential run, Kennedy remains a dominant political figure, better known than most of the current presidential contenders.

Presidential speculation will always surround the lone surviving brother of one of America's most influential political families.

Kennedy, 55, flatly rules out a late entry or convention draft for 1988, and brushes off talk of a future presidential run. He talks like a man satisfied with his role as a senator, a role that quickly frustrated his brother John.

"I'm concerned now about what's going to be in this economic package and where we're going in terms of the agenda that I have now. I enjoy it, stimulated by it, excited by it," the senator said.

"This is an exciting time. I'm chairman again of the Human Resources Committee," he said. "The Senate is more open today. It's more responsive to the needs of people. Perhaps it's not as rigid and perhaps it's not as productive in churning out legislation. But the younger members are speaking and they're involving themselves and they get good ideas, and we're responsive to the concerns of the American people generally."

Kennedy sees the economy as the No. 1 issue of 1988, overshadowing US-Soviet relations.

"It would seem to me the most important summit that can come this year would be a summit of the industrialized nations talking about the interdependence of economic policies in all these countries," Kennedy said. "A sound economy is the most important social program we have. If that is wrong, nothing else is right."

Kennedy looks back fondly at his first plunge into electoral politics.

"It was a great educational experience," he said. "There was a lot of pressure for a young person, with the debates and the national attention that it had. ... It was a fun campaign. I enjoyed it."

The seat was opened when John F. Kennedy won the presidency. Eddie McCormack, state attorney general and nephew of then-House Speaker John McCormack, was running against Kennedy in the Democratic primary.

According to former House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., the Kennedy family suggested, to avoid a messy battle, that a poll be commissioned and whoever lost would drop out. When McCormack refused, the family offered to give him an ambassadorship and help him pay off his campaign debt, O'Neill said.

Kennedy does not deny the story.

"A lot of things were talked about then," he said. "He's (McCormack) a good friend and those campaigns are past. One of the good things about Massachusetts politics is you get passed and you go on from there."

Kennedy defeated the more experienced McCormack by a margin of better than 2-1. In the general election, he beat Republican George Lodge, the son of Henry Cabot Lodge, whom JFK unseated for Senate in 1952.

The accident at Chappaquiddick may be a permanent deterrent to the presidency for Kennedy. But in Massachusetts, where the Kennedy name still has a magic ring from Cape Cod to the Berkshire Hills, he seems to be senator-for-life if he chooses.

In 1982, millionaire businessman Raymond Shamie waged an aggressive, high-profile campaign against Kennedy, but lost 61 percent to 38 percent despite spending $2.3 million.

Shamie, now GOP state chairman, says he won't challenge Kennedy again.

Burdick Tosses Hat

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Declaring himself fit for another six-year term, Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., formally announced his candidacy for re-election Saturday during a four-city tour of the state.

Burdick, 79, told about 200 supporters at the Northern Crops Institute in Fargo that his experience from 27 years in the Senate and clout as chairman of two Senate panels gives him the influence he needs to help North Dakota.

"We've won some big battles in the past 10 months. Not because people care about North Dakota, but because as chairman of two powerful committees, I made sure we weren't forgotten," he said.

Burdick is chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee and the agriculture subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee. He received the chairmanships when the Democratic Party assumed the majority in the Senate last year.

He said he is the first North Dakota senator in 34 years to hold a committee chairmanship.

Burdick's candidacy has been the target of criticism from some in the state Democratic-Non-Partisan League party, who believe he is too old to seek another term.

Though he has acknowledged his age probably will be an issue, he said Saturday that he is ready for the rigors of a tough campaign.

"If I didn't think I was up to the job, I'd retire," he said.

Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., has been mentioned often as a possible opponent to Burdick for the Democratic-NPL nomination. Dorgan has said he has not made up his mind on his plans for 1988.

Asked Saturday about Dorgan's possible candidacy, Burdick said: "If Mr. Dorgan wants to run that's his right, but I'm not going to give up those chairmanships."

Campaign officials said more than $750,000 has been raised so far for Burdick's campaign.

Police Crack Down On Road Violence

GRANITE CITY, Ill. (AP) — State police bolstered their road patrols and watched from the sky Saturday in an effort to halt a rash of highway shootings in southern Illinois in which one person has been killed.

"We haven't had any more today or last night on the midnight shift," said Sgt. William Wylder of the Collinsville police post. "We've beefed up patrols today and we have involved a helicopter, incorporating it into our regular patrols to assist us on this."

Police reported nine cases in which shots have been fired and several other instances in which real weapons or toys were brandished on the highways over the past two weeks.

One man was killed and another man was injured in separate shootings within two miles of each other Oct. 24. In four cases, vehicle windows have been shot out, police have said.

Hugh Barlow, a criminologist and professor of sociology at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, speculated that drunkenness or the pursuit of thrills might have prompted the shootings.

"I don't think they're thinking that someone may get killed," he said.

The violence prompted state police Sgt. David Jung to issue a warning: "Our troopers are not carrying toy guns. These are real guns, and if the situation warrants and if necessary, we are prepared to use the real guns. If someone would point a gun — whether a real gun or a toy gun — at one of our troopers, the consequences would be very grave to say the least."

On Thursday, two shotgun blasts were fired from a moving car on a highway overpass. No injuries or damages were reported, and no arrests have been made.

Fairview Heights police said Saturday they have found no evidence that an East St. Louis woman was shot at before losing control of her car Thursday, but officers still haven't been able to interview the woman because of her facial injuries.

The woman has indicated in writing that someone shot at her, said Fairview Heights police Lt. Mike King.

He said police were investigating the incident as a possible sniping, although witnesses said they didn't see a gunman or hear any shots.

Last summer, a rash of unrelated roadway attacks that began in mid-June was blamed for five deaths and dozens of injuries in Southern California. Some were instigated by traffic altercations but others were apparently random. The incidents have receded since then.

Iranian Ship Blamed In Ambush Of Tanker

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A U.S.-run tanker pounded by shellfire in the southern Persian Gulf probably was attacked by an Iranian frigate known for staging ambushes in the region, shipping sources said Saturday.

Crewmen aboard the 103,584-ton Grand Wisdom say they never saw the vessel that attacked their ship before dawn Friday, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The tanker was anchored off Dubai on Saturday with five large holes in its stern and side where the shells hit, but it suffered relatively minor damage and no casualties.

The 16th convoy of U.S. Navy ships and reflagged Kuwaiti tankers moved down the gulf Saturday and was expected to reach the halfway point of its 550-mile journey shortly.

In Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates officials issued a statement of regret over the death of an Indian fisherman last Sunday, killed when a U.S. warship fired on what was believed to be a hostile Iranian vessel.

The Emirates news agency quoted Sheik Hamdan Bin Zayed, Foreign Ministry undersecretary and son of the Emirates president, as saying: "We consider the incident closed as there is no indication that it was deliberate."

U.S. officials say the Emirates' fishing boat, similar to those used by Iranian Revolutionary Guards for raids on ships, ignored two warnings before it was fired on by the USS Carr. The State Department expressed regret for the incident.

Revolutionary Guards were originally blamed for the attack on the Grand Wisdom, but experts discounted this because holes in the tanker — some two feet wide — were too big to be made by the guards' rocket-propelled grenades.

At least five rounds from 4.5-inch guns hit the Panamianian-flagged Grand Wisdom, which is managed by the Teekay Shipping Co. of Long Beach, Calif.

It was the first Iranian assault on a neutral vessel since Oct. 24 and was believed to be reprisal for an Iraqi air strike that damaged a shuttle tanker off Iran's coast last Thursday.

Gulf-based shipping sources said the attacker was believed to be the Alvand, a 1,540-ton Iranian frigate carrying guns with a range of up to 13 miles. The attacker probably was much closer than that, the sources said, but they quoted Grand Wisdom crewmen as saying they never saw what hit them.

U.S. military officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Alvand operates in the southern gulf, where they said it has attacked other ships and served as a mother ship for smaller armed boats that have attacked neutral vessels.

It rarely, if ever, flies the Iranian flag, the sources said.

Five rounds hit the ship, exploding inside the crew's quarters, a storeroom and other areas. A small fire was controlled within an hour. Crewmen said they thought eight rounds were fired, with three hitting the water.

U.S. officials said that at the time of the attack, the American missile frigate Rentz was on patrol 40 miles away. The Grand Wisdom captain reported a fire on board but never requested assistance, and the Rentz was too far away to help anyway, a Navy official said.

The damaged tanker later anchored near the Rentz, but the frigate did not escort it to Dubai as some reports suggested, U.S. officials said.

U.S. warships are officially assigned to protect or escort only American-flagged vessels in the gulf. But under the Navy's classified "rules of engagement," they may offer "humanitarian assistance" to other ships that request it.

The 290,083-ton tanker Middletown, escorted by the U.S. frigates Thach and Ford, was moving down the gulf in the 16th convoy since the U.S. Navy began escorting American-flagged Kuwaiti tankers in July.

Charges Dropped

CHICAGO (AP) — Prosecutors have been forced to drop charges against a man convicted of killing four people because an appellate court threw out most of the evidence.

"Having this guy out on the street is a travesty," said Assistant State's Attorney Brian Telander, who prosecuted the murder case against James Ealy. "He's going to be a dangerous person out there."

However, Ealy also was convicted of rape and was sentenced in 1982 to 23 years in prison. The killings occurred while Ealy was free on $1,500 bond on the rape charge. He will be eligible for release in 1994.

Ealy, 23, was convicted in 1984 of strangling a woman, her two teenage daughters and her 3-year-old grandson, and was sentenced to life in prison.

But the Illinois Appellate Court reversed the conviction, saying Ealy was arrested without probable cause. It threw out virtually all of the evidence against him, including a 26-page confession.

On Friday, prosecutors dropped the charges against Ealy in the Aug. 16, 1982, deaths of Kristina Parker, 33; her daughters, Mary Ann, 15, and Cora, 12, and Mary Ann's son, Jontae.

Ealy's attorney, Randy Mehrberg, said his client is "really delighted" the murder charges were dropped.

He said police beat a phony confession out of Ealy, an allegation police deny.

"They had a boy who they had no reason to believe had committed the crime and they took him down to the police station and they got a confession," Mehrberg said.

Wiretap Found On Phone Of Harvard Law Professor

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A secret wiretap discovered on a Harvard University law professor's telephone may have revealed his misgivings about Supreme Court nominee Douglas Ginsburg, the professor said Saturday.

"It's certainly very upsetting," Laurence H. Tribe said. "To think that my private conversations were being shared with a person with no scruples is definitely not a good feeling."

Tribe, who testified to a Senate panel in opposition to the Supreme Court nomination of Robert Bork, said his confidential statements about Ginsburg's lack of judicial experience may have been leaked to the public by the apparently illegal wiretap discovered last week.

The tap was found near Tribe's Harvard office and a report was sent to the FBI and the state attorney general's office, said university Vice President Daniel Steiner.

Tribe, 46, an expert on constitutional law, said the only telephone conversations from his office about Ginsburg occurred Oct. 27, the day before President Reagan nominated Ginsburg.

The next day a colleague told him rumors were circulating that Tribe was trying to block the Ginsburg nomination, Tribe said.

Tribe said he likes and respects Ginsburg, but questioned the nomination because of Ginsburg's judicial inexperience and lack of time working in government. Ginsburg, formerly a Harvard Law School professor, was appointed as a federal Appeals Court judge last year.

Tribe refused to speculate on who may have installed the listening device.

Tribe also has served as legal counsel to the Pennzoil Co. in its $10 billion legal battle against Texaco.

A surveillance expert hired by Tribe discovered the phone tap, which is believed to have monitored Tribe's calls for the last two to eight months, Steiner said.

The wiretap was discovered after two secretaries in Tribe's office separately reported hearing noises on the telephone line on Oct. 30 and Oct. 31.

The first commercial airline, KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, was founded in 1919.

Reagan's Woes Began A Year Ago With McFarlane Disclosure

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — One year ago, trouble was on the horizon as President Reagan flew back to Washington on Air Force One from Los Angeles.

It was Election Day 1986. Reagan was riding high in popularity polls. Republicans were in power in the Senate. The stock market was booming.

Then, from Lebanon, came word of a bizarre story in a pro-Syrian magazine. It said Reagan's one-time national security aide, Robert McFarlane, had traveled to Iran with a Bible, a cake and a planeload of weapons seeking the release of American hostages.

"No comment," Reagan told reporters as he returned home after a week-long campaign trek through the South and West, the final leg of 24,839 miles of political travel since Labor Day.

Across America, meanwhile, voters were giving the Senate back to the Democrats, stripping Reagan of an important power base.

Nov. 4, 1986, was the beginning of a series of events that rocked the president, eroded public confidence in him and made people begin thinking of him as a lame duck.

Twelve months later, Reagan's presidency is still being buffeted by events out of his control, from turmoil on Wall Street to the surprising revelation by Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg that he had smoked marijuana.

On the personal front, his wife, Nancy, underwent surgery for breast cancer, and then her long-ailing mother, Edith Davis, died.

"The election, combined with the Iran scandal, are what really undermined this president," said William Schneider, a political analyst and resident fellow at the conservative-oriented American Enterprise Institute. He said the lame duck factor also contributed.

"His political effectiveness has diminished very sharply in Washington," Schneider added. "He is not taken seriously. No one is afraid of him anymore."

The same point is made by Stephen Hess, onetime adviser to Presidents Dwight Eisenhower and Richard Nixon and now a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, a liberal think tank.

"A president loses clout when people no longer have to factor him into their thinking, no longer need be concerned about whether he's for you or against you," Hess said.

Reagan's diminished influence was demonstrated early in the year, first in February when Congress overrode his veto of a $20 billion to combat water pollution.

Two months later, Reagan dug in his heels and vetoed an $88 billion highway construction bill. He went to Capitol Hill for a closed-door arm-twisting session with 13 Republicans who were opposing his veto. They all voted against him, joining in a 67-33 override.

"It's been a hard year for Ronald Reagan," Hess observed.

"Losing the Senate, particularly after he had invested so much of his own prestige in holding it, was a very difficult development," said Hess.

"It changed the whole equation with the Congress and put him on the defensive, immediately followed by the Iran-Contragate scandal which created sort of an instant drop in his public opinion ratings," Hess said. "They've never gotten much above 50 percent ever since."

The analysts agree that Reagan can recover ground if, as expected, a treaty abolishing intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe is signed at a summit here next month with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

And, there is talk in Washington and Moscow about another summit next spring for the signing of an agreement to limit strategic nuclear weapons.

"Two arms agreements — if he could pull it off — would be a pretty glorious way to go out of office," Hess said.

However, upbeat news has been in scarce supply for Reagan.

Instead, the president was on the defensive much of the past year about the Iran-Contra affair. His management style was criticized by the Tower board that investigated the affair, and Reagan was forced to admit to mistakes and retract his claim that he didn't swap arms for hostages.

His national security adviser, John Poindexter, resigned and soon was being investigated by a grand jury, along with Oliver North, another national security aide and the reputed architect of the diversion of arms profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

Don Regan, Reagan's strong-willed chief of staff, was forced to resign because of the continuing controversy over the affair.

And just last week, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, Reagan's friend of two decades, announced he was quitting because of his wife's poor health.

Reagan also had to replace Cabinet secretaries at the departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Labor and Transportation, pick a new CIA chief, and fill the top positions at the FBI and on his own National Security Council staff.

Even the annual public relations extravaganza — the summit of industrialized nations — was a ho-hum meeting with no major results. At the time, the allies would not contribute any military muscle to America's task force in the Persian Gulf, although some later did.

On another foreign policy front, Reagan went before the United Nations in September and demanded that Iran "clearly and unequivocably" accept a cease fire in the gulf war with Iraq or face a worldwide arms embargo led by the United States. He said that unless the answer was positive, the U.N. "has no choice but rapidly to adopt enforcement measures" — an arms embargo.

Seven weeks later, there still is no clear answer from Iran and, with the Soviets helping the Iranians stall, the United States has not made its move in the Security Council.

In Central America, Reagan also was frustrated.

With little hope of getting approval for more money for the Contra rebels, Reagan joined with House Speaker Jim Wright in promoting a Central American peace plan.

The Reagan-Wright initiative was quickly upstaged, however, by a peace plan drafted by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias and signed by the region's five presidents.. Reagan has called it flawed and continues to seek Contra funding.

"There may be some sort of peace agreement in Nicaragua but it won't be the one he (Reagan) wants," Schneider said.

On the domestic front, the results were the same. His top priority was Senate confirmation of Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork, and that failed. And now Ginsburg is in trouble, following the marijuana admission and allegations about a conflict of interest.

If Ginsburg steps aside or is defeated, there is an expectation Reagan will have to accept a moderate conservative, not the hardliner he wanted.

Reagan's "Economic Bill of Rights," containing a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget, line-item veto power for the president and other components, once a high-priority item, now is never mentioned.

And the devastating fall of the stock market forced Reagan to consider something he claimed would happen only "over my dead body" — the raising of taxes.

The AEI's Schneider argues that Reagan's presidency really came to a standstill after the 1984 elections.

Aquino Gets Endorsement

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday that budget constraints may limit what the United States can do for the Philippines but urged businessmen to invest in the country and warned Congress not to skimp on his aid requests.

Reagan gave a strong endorsement of Philippine President Corazon Aquino, saying she has "been more successful than many believed was possible" and thanking her for her visit to the widows of three Americans slain last month by terrorists.

In his weekly radio address, Reagan said few countries are strategically more important to the United States than the Philippines.

He said the communist insurgency has lost momentum in the Philippines but it remains the single most serious threat to the survival of democracy there. "It continues becoming more violent as it becomes more desperate," he said.

He said Mrs. Aquino has to rebuild the Philippine armed forces while reasserting civilian supremacy over the military and resolving "honest differences" over how best to defeat the communists.

Reagan blamed the killings of three Americans, including two airmen and a retired U.S. serviceman, on terrorists. No group has claimed credit for the killings. Some Philippine officials suspect rightists trying to destabilize Aquino, but the communists have threatened to kill American soldiers.

Reagan called Mrs. Aquino's trip to Clark Air Base to attend memorial services for the Americans a gesture of friendship. "I have told President Aquino how much all Americans appreciate her thoughtfulness," he said.

"These murders bring home to all of us the troubles and threats that the new Philippine democracy faces," Reagan said.

Airliner Hijacker Claimed Mafia Chased Him

By STEVE WILSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A distraught man demanding FBI protection from the Mafia held a cockpit fire ax over an Air Canada pilot's head but gave up after a 3½-hour standoff at the airport, authorities said Saturday.

James Barrett Drake, 37, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., boarded the Boeing 767 at San Francisco International Airport on Friday and made rambling demands to be flown to Dublin, Ireland, or London, said FBI agent Barry Mawn.

The standoff began about 12:15 p.m., when the man raced aboard the plane with 12 crew members on board shortly after it arrived from Toronto, said airport spokesman Ron Wilson. The plane's passengers already had departed.

"Initially, he was in a very threatening position to the pilot," said Mawn. "He was standing there in close proximity to him with both hands on the hatchet, right over the pilot.

"The initial thrust of his demands was his fear of the Mafia and he wanted the FBI's protection," Mawn said.

When Drake entered the plane, 10 flight attendants fled, leaving the pilot and the co-pilot behind, said airport director Louis A. Turpen. When Drake ordered the co-pilot to prepare for takeoff, the co-pilot bolted and escaped, leaving the pilot behind, Turpen said.

FBI and police SWAT teams were on hand in case it became necessary to storm the plane, Wilson said.

FBI negotiators, talking with Drake first from outside the plane, then face-to-face in the cockpit, told him the agency wasn't afraid of the Mafia and that it could offer him protection.

"It went on and he got weary and lowered his hatchet and said, 'OK, I'll give up,'" Mawn said.

Drake, who told the FBI that he'd flown here from Seoul, South Korea, surrendered without a struggle about 3:45 p.m.

"At this point there's no indication that his statement (about the Mafia) is true," FBI agent Dick Held said. "That's something we'll have to follow with."

The pilot, Capt. James David Robinson of Beaconsfield, a suburb of Montreal, walked off the plane unharmed but emotionally exhausted. Asked how he weathered the ordeal, he replied, "I'm hanging in there."

"The captain performed well under the circumstances," said Mawn. "He obviously was being threatened. But he did not try to negotiate with the man and he let the police and FBI negotiators handle it."

Federal Aviation Administration officials said they would investigate the apparent breach of airport security and may recommend changes to prevent such incidents.

Mawn, the agent in charge of the negotiations, said Drake boarded the plane from the ground, climbing stairs into a side door used by the crew, rather than through the terminal.

"He was emotionally distraught," Mawn said. "Initially he was tense, but as the afternoon went on he became more congenial and less threatening until he finally gave up."

Drake didn't say specifically why he thought the Mafia was after him, Mawn said. He was taken to the city jail and booked on charges of attempted hijacking. He will be arraigned Monday, an FBI spokesman said.

Al Cline, an Air Canada spokesman in Los Angeles, said the plane had been scheduled to depart at 1 p.m. as Flight 756 for Toronto and Montreal, and 171 passengers were booked for the trip.

Wilson said the hijacking didn't affect airport operations except for the area immediately around the gate where the plane was parked.

Five-Organ Transplant Recipient Has Surgery

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three-year-old Tabatha Foster, the nation's longest survivor of a five-organ transplant, responded to her parents and nurses Saturday after more surgery to repair suture openings.

Doctors decided to operate Friday night after Tabatha complained of discomfort, according to Dick Riebling, a spokesman for Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh.

The Madisonville, Ky., girl was taken into the operating room around 6 p.m., and surgeons repaired two pinpoint openings at her intestinal suture line that had not healed, Riebling said Saturday.

No complications were reported during the 2½-hour operation. The surgical team was led by Dr. Thomas E. Starzl, who directed last weekend's transplant that gave Tabatha a new liver, pancreas, small intestine and parts of a stomach and colon. She was in critical but stable condition Saturday.

"The team was encouraged to see that Tabatha's new liver and intestines looked normal with no visible signs of rejection," said Dr. Marc Rowe, the hospital's chief of surgery.

The operation is considered minor and is performed often on liver transplant patients, Riebling said.

"It's not a major setback and it's not a giant leap forward either," he said. "It's one more bump on the road to recovery, a small bump. We're hoping for smooth sailing."

Tabatha received her five organs from a brain-dead Virginia girl during a 15-hour transplant that ended last Sunday.

Crash Landing

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — An Aeromexico DC-10 airliner with 112 people aboard crash landed at Tijuana airport after its landing gear malfunctioned, officials said Saturday.

Seven passengers suffered minor injuries as they slid down an emergency chute to evacuate the jet Friday night, said David Martinez, chief of security at the airport.

It was not immediately clear what caused the accident. There were reports of an engine fire and of problems with the left landing gear.

An Aeromexico employee at the airport identified the plane as a DC-10 but referred inquiries to offices in Mexico City where calls were unanswered.

The plane was headed for Guadalajara, said Tijuana firefighter Adrian Callega.

Adoption Enabled Lady To Save Agency License

BY HENRY STERN
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A woman adopted her daughter-in-law so the younger woman would get preferential treatment from the commission that appoints agents to run state liquor stores.

The adoption was a new twist, but the preferential treatment is spelled out in Oregon state law.

Norma Olson was disabled by severe emphysema last December, and had to give up her 10-year position in Sweet Home as a state liquor agent, running Sweet Home Liquor Store or agency No. 106. The sale of liquor is a state monopoly in Oregon.

"The doctor just told her flat out that if you don't quit, you'll die," said Kathleen Olson, 31, the daughter-in-law-turned-daughter.

Norma Olson decided to adopt her daughter-in-law in January and the next month, Kathleen became Norma's legal child. The older woman now is bedridden.

"That (the agency) was the only reason for the adoption," Kathleen Olson said. "My own mother was all for it. She knew the reason behind it."

"It's kind of a joke down here. People come up to me and say 'Oh, so you're married to your brother?'" she said last week.

A 1983 state law allows the spouse or child of a former agent to avoid the competition from other applicants that other candidates must face when applying for a liquor store vacancy. Ordinarily, 30 to 40 people apply for each agent opening.

The younger Mrs. Olson said neither her husband nor her father-in-law wanted to give up his timber industry job to take over the liquor store agency.

She became the new agent after passing an interview with the Oregon Liquor Control Commission staff and then commission members in August.

"We run these folks through the same interview as anybody else. If they score satisfactorily, then the staff recommends them as qualified," said Chris Lyons, commission merchandising director. She also noted that the new agent had spent 6½ years working in the liquor store in Sweet Home.

Assistant state Attorney General Len Perlman has identified Kathleen Olson's success in obtaining her mother-in-law's position as a precedent to include adopted children under the law, Ms. Lyons said.

Ms. Lyons said she knows of no other state that has a law giving preference to spouses or children of liquor store agents.

Ordinarily, agency vacancies are advertised. A staff committee grades each applicant on retail business experience, knowledge of retail operations or business management, customer service skills and financial ability to purchase or lease and equip a retail liquor store.

The top scoring applicants are interviewed by five staff people and one agent. The final two or three choices are sent with a staff recommendation to the commission, which selects one as agent.

The agents get their liquor from the state, which controls retail prices with a 99 percent markup. Agents get a percentage commission on sales, under a formula that's supposed to somewhat even out store operators in rural and urban areas, meaning their income varies widely.

The younger Mrs. Olson said the store in Sweet Home, a town of 6,900, grosses about $32,000 a year.

Ms. Lyons stressed that the six agents chosen under the successorship law, out of 69 changes since May 1984, have all been "really qualified."

But a recent interoffice memo prepared by Ms. Lyons and other staff members suggested the 1983 law be reconsidered.

The memo acknowledged that the law provides continuity in store operations, gives agents a sense of security for their families and ensures that a local person will operate a store.

But requiring the commission to hire only a satisfactorily qualified candidate instead of the most outstanding one does a "disservice to the community" and "discriminates against the public," the memo said.

"All you can do is anticipate problems," said William Hedlund, commission chairman. "I'd prefer it be based strictly on the qualifications of an individual to do a good job for the public."

Duke Grant

DURHAM (AP) — The National Cancer Institute has awarded $3.2 million to Duke University Medical Center for research aimed at a new class of cancer drugs, officials said.

The five-year grant will pay for studies related to protein kinase C, an enzyme discovered in 1977. Studies suggest that chemical signals activate the enzyme within cells. The enzyme appears to be critical in tumor promotion, growth regulation, cell differentiation and development, said Robert Bell, project director.

In the latter 1970's Barry Gordy introduced a new group on Motown records which consisted of 4 teenage girls with an abundance of talent and they were just bursting with energy. In fact, they were called High Inergy! Substituting an I for an E they quickly became a national sensation and appeared on most of the nation's leading talk shows such as Merv Griffin, Dinah Shore, Soul Train, American Band Stand, Mike Douglas, etc., as well as work with such entertainers as Stevie Wonder, Diana Ross and Marvin Gaye.

Vernessa has toured across the country and ministered in song with such gospel artists as the Nicholas Family and has appeared in concert with the Lanny Wolf Trio, the Winans, Tramaine Hawkins, the Richard Smallwood Singers, the Clark Sisters, Shirley Ceasar and Al Green. Vernessa has performed with the New York Albany Symphony, with the New York Philharmonic at the Lincoln Center and at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. She has been a guest on the PTL Show with Jim and Tammy Bakker as well as the Bobby Jones Gospel Show.

Gore, Babbitt Admit They Smoked Marijuana

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Presidential candidates Albert Gore Jr. and Bruce Babbitt admitted Saturday they smoked marijuana in college, while four other Democratic hopefuls said they never used the illegal drug and that such revelations should not affect the campaign.

Gore, a Tennessee senator and at 39, the youngest of the Democratic candidates, said he smoked marijuana in college and in the Army but has not used the drug in the past 15 years.

He made his announcement at the Florida Democratic Party convention as Reagan administration officials in Washington said Judge Douglas H. Ginsburg is asking that his name be withdrawn from consideration for the vacancy on the Supreme Court, two days after his admission of marijuna use.

In Des Moines, Iowa, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt also said he has used marijuana.

"I was a college student in the 1960s and a civil rights lawyer down South. Sure, I tried marijuana," Babbitt said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Babbitt served from 1966-67 as a special assistant to the director of Vista in the Office of Equal Opportunity and later joined a law firm in Phoenix, Ariz.

Babbitt added that he has not used the drug in the past 20 years.

"The only possibly relevant question is, 'Are you a drug abuser now?' And the answer is obviously not," he said.

Four other candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination — Michael Dukakis, Richard Gephardt, Jesse Jackson and Paul Simon — said they had never used any illegal drug. But Dukakis and Jackson said Gore's revelation should not affect the campaign.

Gore said he wished he hadn't ever used the drug. But he also likened its use in the 1960s to people drinking "moonshine" in the 1920s.

"During my junior and senior years in college, during those years it was looked at similar to the way 'moonshine' was looked at during prohibition days," he said.

"There are tens of millions of Americans in my generation who had the same experience," Gore said. "I think that there is a difference that people in my generation look at it and the way older Americans look at it."

He said his wife, Tipper, also tried marijuana while she was a student.

Jackson praised Gore for his "openness and candor."

"I think it should play no role" in the campaign, he said of Gore's announcement.

Dukakis said, "It has nothing to do with your qualifications. I've never used drugs, but I certainly understand why some people try it."

Simon, 58, said marijuana was not widely used when he was in high school and college.

"If people were going to have a wild time, they would sneak off with a six-pack of beer and really live it up. I did do that, I hate to tell you," Simon said at a news conference in Des Moines, Iowa.

The Illinois senator declined to speculate on what effect Goe's and Babbitt's disclosures would on their campaigns. "I just don't know," he said.

In Waverly, Iowa, Republican front-runner George Bush said he had never used the illegal drug.

"No, but I'd hate to speak for my kids," said the vice president.

Gore's announcement created such a stir that a scheduled three-hour forum featuring the four candidates was delayed nearly an hour at the Florida convention.

"I would hope it would not have a significant impact, but the American people will judge that," Gore said.

He said he first tried the drug at the end of his junior year at Harvard in 1968 and used it at the beginning of his senior year the next fall.

Gore also said he used the drug "once or twice" while off-duty during an Army tour at Bien Hoa, Vietnam, and on a couple of occasions while he was in graduate school at Vanderbilt and an employee of a Nashville, Tenn., newspaper.

"I've never used anything beyond that," he told reporters. "I wish I had not done it.

"I'd much rather be here talking about arms control or the stock market crash," he said.

Gore said he told his children about his experiments with marijuana prior to his news conference Saturday morning.

"My 5-year-old son said, 'Did it make you sick, Dad?'" related Gore.

Earlier, Gore had declined to answer reporters' questions whether he had ever used marijuana, calling the questions inappropriate. He said Saturday, "I still feel it is an inappropriate question because it doesn't have any bearing on my fitness for office. And also, I think there are some boundary lines of privacy that ought to be respected."

A nationwide poll released Friday showed that 70 percent of those surveyed said it would make no difference in their vote if a presidential candidate had smoked marijuana in college, but 27 percent said they would vote against such a candidate, with the rest expressing no opinion.

The poll by Cable News Network and USA Today surveyed 1,005 registered voters Oct. 25 to 30. The results had a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

Congressman Bowing Out

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Kenneth J. Gray, a 12-term Democrat, said Saturday he will not seek reelection next year in his southern Illinois district because of health problems and political opposition.

"It is with a great degree of sadness that I announce today that I will be unable to seek a 13th term in the U.S. Congress," Gray said in a statement.

"Once again, the Republican National Congressional Campaign Committee has targeted the 22nd District as one that will receive extra funds (and) numerous opposition speakers," said Gray, 62.

He said the Republicans plan "an all-out 12-month campaign between the filing time in December 1987 and the November 1988 general election."

Gray said he is suffering from an ailment in his leg muscles caused by a tick bite he received in the jungles of Brazil while on an official trip there in December 1986.

"I have been suffering a 40 percent disability in my leg muscles and will be physically unable to handle more than 200 problems daily in my congressional office and at the same time carry on a yearlong bruising campaign in the southern Illinois district," Gray said.

His press secretary, Robert Otterson, said the muscle ailment was not life-threatening, but had left the congressman fatigued.

"It has caused him to slow down quite a bit," Otterson said by telephone from Washington. "There is no limping or anything like that."

Gray was first elected to the House in 1954 and served for 20 years, until retiring for health reasons. In 1975, he was replaced by fellow Democrat Paul Simon, now a senator and a contender for Democratic Party's presidential nomination.

When Simon was elected to the Senate in 1984, Gray came out of retirement to win back his old seat.

Otterson said he didn't know if Gray had any successors in mind. "There's probably going to be a lot of people scurrying around down there today trying to get their names into the ring," he said.

He said the deadline for filing is Dec. 7, giving prospects a month to decide whether to enter the race.

Budget Advice Offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee warned Saturday that unless the Reagan administration and Congress speed up their budget negotiations, the government risks sending the wrong message to foreign markets and seriously damaging America's economic future.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, who delivered the weekly Democratic radio address, said President Reagan should heed the advice of this nation's close ally, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

"Mrs. Thatcher has stated that a convincing package to reduce the United States' budget deficit is a vital first step toward restoring confidence in the financial markets. Mrs. Thatcher is absolutely correct," Bentsen said.

"If the negotiations between Congress and the president fail to produce major, honest, convincing progress toward deficit reduction, America will acknowledge to the world that we lack the courage and the will to set our economic house in order," he said. "We can no longer afford to send that message of failure."

As the second week of negotiations drew to a close, a Republican plan to cut $30 billion from the federal deficit remained on the table.

The administration indicated Friday that it was softening its stance against defense spending cuts.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON THE QUESTION OF THE ADOPTION OF AN ORDINANCE AMENDING CHAPTER 32 OF THE ZONING ORDINANCE BY ESTABLISHING A NEW SECTION 32-92 ENTITLED "BUFFERYARDS"

Pursuant to Article 19, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers of the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, NC, on Thursday, November 12, 1987, at 7:30 p.m. on the question of the adoption of an ordinance amending the Zoning Ordinance of the City of Greenville, NC.

Chapter 32 of the Code of Ordinances for the City of Greenville entitled "Zoning" is hereby amended by consolidating all the buffer requirements throughout the zoning ordinance into one section entitled "Bufferyards." The buffer provisions consist of the following:

Bufferyards - General
Bufferyards - Site Plan Required; Approval
Bufferyard Use Classification
Bufferyard Requirements
Maintenance of Bufferyard Areas
Nonconforming Bufferyards
Acceptable Vegetation

A bufferyard has been defined as a combination of land area and physical barriers such as fencing, plant material and earthen berms used to separate vsrious land uses and street right-of-ways. Six bufferyards of varying intensities have been established. The bufferyard required between uses is dependent upon the classification of land uses involved. All land uses in the City of Greenville fall into one of five classifications, which are as follows:

Classification I generally represents single-family and duplex development;
Classification II generally represents multi-family and mobile home development;
Classification III generally represents office and retail development;
Classification IV generally represents road service uses such as gas stations and auto sales and unoffensive industrial uses; and Classification V generally represents offensive industrial uses.

The bufferyard required for separation of uses increase as the difference in land use classification numbers increases (i.e. Classification V adjoining Classification I requires a wider and more intensive bufferyard than Classification V adjoining Classification IV). Bufferyards are also required along street right-of-ways and when developed land adjoins vacant property where the type of bufferyard required is dependent upon the zoning district of the vacant property.

During this public hearing, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by City Council. All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing, and they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file in the office of the Planning and Development Department, located in the Community Building at the intersection of Fourth and Greene Streets (Telephone - 830-4505) and at the City Clerk's office located at 201 W. Fifth Street and is available for public inspection during normal working hours Monday through Friday.

BY ORDER OF THE CITY COUNCIL.

Britain Ponders The Unthinkable — Royal Divorce

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The unthinkable has been thought, the unmentionable mentioned — a royal divorce.

The heir to the British throne and his wife lived distinctly separate lives in October. From that one fact has come a flood of speculation that Prince Charles and Princess Diana are in marital trouble and Britain might experience its first divorce at the peak of the royal family in centuries.

Being a divorced person used to be cause for exclusion from the royal enclosure at Ascot. Now the arbiters of the blue-bloodedness that is at the heart of the British monarchy are freely quoted on the topic in newspapers.

None of the arbiters seem to think Charles, 38, and Diana, 26, will divorce, but the dreaded topic is out in the open, complete with the dismal histories of some flagrantly dissolute forebears of today's monarchy.

King Henry VIII — he of six wives — dissolved his marriage to Catherine of Aragon in 1533, for instance, and precipitated a break with the Catholic church in Rome that convulsed Europe. Henry also divorced Anne of Cleves, his fourth wife.

And what royalist today would summon up the memory of George IV, widely held to be a bad monarch? Long before he became king in 1820 he had married a Roman Catholic widow, Mrs. Mary Anne Fitzherbert, in secrecy. She was dumped — the record isn't clear how — so he could marry the more suitable Princess Caroline of Brunswick in 1795.

But they so detested each other that they separated after the birth of their only child. When he succeeded to the throne, George petitioned Parliament to divorce her. The petition failed, and there ensued the embarrassing spectacle of Queen Caroline attempting to force her way into Westminster Abbey for George's coronation.

No wonder, then, that some news media commentators moan that speculation about Charles and Diana could destroy the royal family's standing as symbols of national continuity and rectitude.

But others in the press have jumped in with both feet, and it hasn't been confined to the so-called "popular press."

To be sure, The Sun, a racy tabloid, took the story about as far as it can go with an article about a royal divorce that was headlined "Unthinkable — But Who'd Get The Kids?"

The Sun merely stated what it thought would be the child-custody arguments on both sides and did not make a Solomonic judgment, leaving its 4 million daily readers to decide which parent should get Prince William, 5, and Prince Harry, 3. The boys are second and third after Charles in line of succession.

Some so-called "quality papers" also have had a go at the topic. The Sunday Times surveyed constitutional experts and reported that a divorce would not bar Charles from succeeding his mother, Queen Elizabeth II, on the throne.

The Sunday Times also resurrected a long history of philandering by British monarchs and commented: "It has been only in very recent times ... that fidelity within royal marriages has been expected and even enforced."

The change started in the 19th century when European monarchies tried to appeal more to the upright middle classes: "This meant leading a life of cozy domesticity, or at least pretending to," the weekly said.

Still, marital splits are a fact of life in Britain. One in three marriages ends in the divorce court, and the royal family is not immune.

Princess Margaret, the queen's sister, and her husband Lord Snowdon were divorced in 1978 amid intense press coverage of Margaret's romance with a man 18 years her junior.

Diana herself comes from a broken family. Both her parents have remarried. That irregularity in her background was thought to be a mark against her chances with the future king before their engagement was announced, and now it figures in the speculation of royalty-watchers.

John Pearson, a historian whose 1986 book "The Ultimate Family" described a public relations machine behind the royal family, said he thought divorce was "extremely unlikely."

Pearson said Charles was brought up on the "horror story" of the queen's uncle, King Edward VIII, who had to abdicate in 1936 to marry Wallis Simpson, an American divorcee. They lived as the Duke and Duchess of Windsor in exile — a mark of the royal family's distancing itself from divorce as well as the stain of abdication.

"Charles was brought up very firmly from childhood on what divorce would do," Pearson said in an interview with The Associated Press. "But Diana wasn't. ... She would be the one to kick, she is the dangerous part of the equation."

Pearson said that though he doesn't expect it to happen, a divorce "would be one more twist in the royal story" and would require some adjustments because Charles, when he takes the throne, will be head of the state Church of England.

Could a divorced king take the traditional monarch's title "Defender of the Faith" when the church is against divorce?

Such are the questions that bob up in the speculation about Charles and Diana, perhaps not to surface again — since they have gone on a state visit to West Germany and seem to be happy in each other's company.

But if Charles goes off to Scotland alone again for weeks and the speculation resumes, Buckingham Palace undoubtedly will be advised to break its habitual silence and end rumors of a royal rift.

There is a precedent, set 31 years ago. Queen Elizabeth and her husband had been apart for four months in 1956 while he was on a world tour. The palace scotched rumors of marital discord with a terse statement: "It is quite untrue that there is any rift between the queen and the Duke of Edinburgh."

The queen and her husband will mark their 40th wedding anniversary Nov. 20.

Koch Urges Truce In Fighting

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Nicaragua could be an extraordinary country if the leaders of the Sandinistas and the Contra guerrillas stopped beating up on each other, New York Mayor Edward I. Koch said Saturday.

He made the statement upon leaving Managua after meeting President Daniel Ortega en route to further discussions with Costa Rica's President Oscar Arias Sanchez, who won the Nobel Peace Prize.

The mayor met Sens. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., and Terry Sanford, D-N.C., who were arriving in Managua to observe a cease-fire that is part of the Central American peace plan orchestrated by Arias.

"I have high hopes," Koch told Sasser. If the two sides stopped battling, he said, "this could be an extraordinary country."

Italians Set To Decide On Nuke Energy Fate

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Voters in energy-poor Italy will decide in a referendum Sunday and Monday on whether to join a growing number of European countries that have turned away from nuclear power.

Newspaper polls taken a week before the vote indicated anti-nuclear forces well ahead, but still lacking a majority because of a large undecided bloc.

In contrast to neighboring France, Italy has only a small nuclear power plant program. It planned a major expansion to reduce its dependence on imports, which account for 80 percent of its energy.

But the disaster at the Chernobyl nuclear plant in the Soviet Union in April 1986 spurred a petition drive that led to three questions going on the ballot.

The confusion in Italy and elsewhere over the possible hazards from the Chernobyl radiation fallout helped environmental groups to gain the half million signatures needed to get a referendum on the ballot. Sales of milk to pregnant women and leafy vegetables were barred here for more than two weeks after the accident as a precaution.

Referendums in Italy can't propose such actions as a moratorium on construction of power plants but can only abrogate existing laws. So the organizers targeted three laws that if overturned would effectively curb the nuclear energy program.

Anti-nuclear groups also maintain that a "yes" vote to abrogate the laws would send a clear message to politicians that Italians don't want nuclear power plants.

One question would eliminate government contributions to regions and towns that agree to host a nuclear power plant, money viewed as an indemnity against possible risks.

Another question would leave it up to Parliament to decide where a plant should be built, instead of a small number of Cabinet ministers involved in economic planning as is done now.

A third question would bar participation by the state-run energy company in nuclear power plants abroad like France's Super Phoenix reactor.

France, which gets about 70 percent of its electrical needs from nuclear plants, Britain and West Germany have no plans for a moratorium, but other European countries have taken that step.

After Chernobyl, the Dutch government shelved plans for construction of new nuclear power stations until all safety issues arising from the disaster were resolved.

Sweden committed itself in a 1980 referendum to phase out its nuclear power program by the year 2010. Austria rejected nuclear power in a 1978 referendum and subsequently halted the startup of a plant near Vienna.

Portugal conducted studies but put off any decision until 1992. Greek governments ruled out building nuclear power plants because of the danger of earthquakes.

Of Italy's total energy production, only 4.6 percent comes from its three operating nuclear power plants, and officials have warned that Italy might risk blackouts if electrical production is not increased by nuclear plants.

A 1981 government energy plan envisaged building five more plants, increasing production from nuclear sources to 25 percent of total energy.

But, said the leading newspaper La Repubblica of Rome, "the referendum will bury the energy plan. With Chernobyl, the nuclear illusion burned up."

The issue of safety has dominated the referendum campaign.

In a speech in Rome to the Amici della Terra (Friends of the Earth), Paul Leventhal, president of the private Nuclear Control Institute in the United States, said, "Italians must now carefully consider the benefits and risks of nuclear energy — there are no easy answers. However, to whatever degree Italy continues to depend on nuclear power, it must be made as safe and secure as possible."

The major political parties publicly joined the anti-nuclear side despite some dissension in their ranks. The dominant Christian Democrats support participation in foreign nuclear energy programs.

Two small parties in Premier Giovanni Goria's five-party coalition, the Republicans and Liberals, broke ranks and called for a "no" vote on the three questions on grounds that nuclear power is needed for economic growth.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat Magnet' Diet Pill Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)— An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You will start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patent pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in fat particles. Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested.

Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the doctors, the fat-magnet pills do all the work while you quickly lose fat with no starvation diet menus to follow, no calorie counting, no exercising, and no hunger pangs. It is 100% safe. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

The fat-magnet pills have just been offered to the American public and are already sweeping the country with record sales and reports of dramatic weight loss. It's the "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. The public will take notice that the City Council of the City of Greenville will hold a public hearing in the Council Chambers of City Hall, at 5:45 o'clock p.m., on the 23rd day of November, 1987, on the question of annexation of the territory described below, pursuant to Part 3, Article 4A, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, at which time the plans for extending municipal services to said territory will be explained and all persons resident or owning property in said territory and all residents of the City of Greenville, will be given an opportunity to be heard.

The report of plans for extending services to said territory will be available for public inspection at the office of the City Clerk at least thirty (30) days prior to the date of said public hearing.

A legible map of the area to be annexed and a list of persons holding freehold interests in the area to be annexed who have been identified will also be posted in the office of the City Clerk at least thirty (30) days prior to the date of said public hearing.

The area to be considered for annexation is described as follows:

Muscovites Call For Domestic Reform

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union celebrated 70 years of socialism Saturday with a massive parade through frigid Red Square that combined a traditional display of military might with citizen-borne banners urging domestic reform.

Mikhail S. Gorbachev led Kremlin leaders in reviewing the 2-hour-long Revolution Day parade, the most important ritual on the Soviet calender. By their side were Cuba's Fidel Castro, Polish leader Wojciech Jaruzelski and other top officials of Soviet-allied countries.

Gorbachev sported a red ribbon on his chest and braved the 23-degree cold in a dark fur hat and scarf. Gray-bearded President Castro also wore a fur hat to top off his dress uniform.

All 12 Moscow-based members of the 13-man ruling Politburo were atop Lenin's mausoleum for the spectacle. Protocol would require Ukrainian Communist Party boss Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky, the other Politburo member, to preside over festivities in Kiev.

Among the visitors, Castro appeared to have the place of honor, nearest Gorbachev, perhaps because of his dual role as Communist Party leader and head of state in Cuba. He and other foreign dignitaries came to Moscow last week to take part in a special Communist Party meeting to observe the anniversary.

China, which has had strained relations with Moscow since 1960, sent only a delegation from the China-Soviet Friendship Society and was not represented on the platform atop the mausoleum.

The parade marked the day in 1917 when the Bolsheviks stormed the Winter Palace in Petrograd and toppled the provisional government that replaced the czar earlier that year.

Although banners carried by workers called the U.S. "Star Wars" anti-missile space defense program a threat to peace, this year's parade was devoid of the anti-American rhetoric that was once customary.

One float towed through an ocean of red banners and multihued flowers proclaimed the superpowers' decision to scrap intermediate-range missiles "the first step to a nonnuclear world."

Gorbachev plans to sign a treaty banning the missiles at a summit meeting in Washington beginning Dec. 7.

His wife, Raisa, watched much of the parade standing on the cobblestones in front of the VIP reviewing stand. She told a reporter she would travel to Washington for the summit "if it takes place."

Mrs. Gorbachev wore a white-and-gray patterned fur coat and a fur hat pulled over her ears against the cold, which was aggravated by a stiff wind. Irina, the Gorbachev's only child, watched from the stands.

U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock did not attend, sending two lower-ranking officials instead. Since the 1979 Soviet military drive into Afghanistan, the U.S. ambassador has boycotted the parade as a sign of protest.

The Red Square celebration capped weeklong festivities that began Monday when Gorbachev, in a major speech, criticized the abuses of Josef Stalin and steered a middle course between Communist Party leaders seeking to stifle reform and its overzealous adherents.

Thousands of rainbow-colored placards, banners, floats and flags promoting Gorbachev's drive for a more efficient economy, tighter work discipline and a more open society were toted by Muscovites past the Soviet leadership.

"Reconstruction depends on us, comrades!," an announcer's voice boomed from loudspeakers mounted on the Kremlin's russet walls. "Forward, forward!"

Shortly after 10 a.m., snow flurries began to fall as Defense Minister Dmitri T. Yazov crossed the square in a green Zil limousine to review military units massed to begin the parade.

The sun broke out, and as a 1,000-trumpet military band played marches, high-kicking units of the ground, sea and air forces swept past the mausoleum, their arms swaying from side to side.

Some soldiers wore the long black leather coats of the 1917 Revolutionary Guards and the peaked khaki cap with a red star that was the trademark of the Red Army in the 1917-22 civil war.

Eight horse-drawn carriages carrying Civil War-vintage machine guns and a detachment of cavalry strutted past, their panting horses sending clouds of steam into the air.

T-72 tanks, 152mm self-propelled howitzers and FROG-7 and SS-1 missile transporters filled the vast square with the roar of engines and acrid exhaust fumes.

Western military attaches said the parade gave them their first glimpse of a new armored personnel carrier, the BTR-80. The rubber-tired vehicle, armed with a 14.5mm machine gun, is designed to carry an infantry squad and has an estimated speed of 50 mph, the attaches said.

Atop Lenin's mausoleum, Gorbachev smiled and chatted with one of the young girls who brought flowers to Kremlin officials. He reviewed the parade with Yazov and was flanked by President Andrei A. Gromyko, Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov and Kremlin ideologist Yegor K. Ligachev.

Also on hand was Moscow Party boss Boris N. Yeltsin, an alternate member of the Politburo. He offered to resign last month after saying in a speech to the Central Committee that the party's pace of reform was too slow, but later praised progress being made.

In a brief address before the military review, Yazov lauded the accomplishments of 70 years of Soviet power, but stressed the need for continued vigilance.

Ortega Will Address OAS General Assembly

By ARY MOLEON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, whose government is under attack by U.S.-backed guerrillas, will make his first trip to Washington next week to address a meeting of the Organization of American States, a senior OAS official said Saturday.

Ortega will speak Wednesday to the OAS' 17th General Assembly, the day after Secretary of State George P. Shultz addresses the organization.

The OAS' deliberations have been dominated by developments in Central America since five nations in the region signed an Aug. 7 peace plan that calls for cease-fires, amnesties for political prisoners and democratization.

Mexican Foreign Minister Bernando Sepulveda hailed the news of Ortega's visit, saying: "It is indispensable to show that Latin America is able to solve its own problems. Latin America's hope for unity resides on its ability to prove it."

Until Ortega's trip was disclosed by an OAS official, speaking on condition of anonymity, Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto was expected to be Nicaragua's representative at the session.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said Friday that Shultz had no plans to meet D'Escoto, but it was not known what kind of reception was planned for Ortega.

Nicaragua has sought direct negotiations with the United States to discuss the situation in Central America.

The United States has rejected that request, calling instead for direct talks between the Nicaraguan government and the U.S.-backed Contras. In what the United States has said it hopes is a step in that direction, Nicaragua announced on Friday it would hold indirect discussions with the Contras, with Managua's Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo as intermediary.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Saturday that administration officials had heard that Ortega might come to Washington, but he declined to say whether there might be any meetings between the Nicaraguan president and the administration.

As to whether Ortega's recent reversal on negotiating with the Contras might portend a softening of the administration's position, Fitzwater said, "It's too early to say. We'll have to wait and see."

He said U.S. officials still want to "take a look" at exactly what shape Ortega's opening to the Contras would take.

D'Escoto said Saturday that Obando y Bravo's mission will be limited to seeking a cease-fire, but not to discuss Nicaragua's political future.

"There is nothing in the peace agreements that mandate the Sandinista government to negotiate with them (the rebels)," D'Escoto said.

A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Saturday that the possibility of U.S. talks with the Nicaraguans was a question under discussion within the administration, with the Contras and with Nicaragua's neighbors.

Noting that such talks had been held years ago, the official said thoughts of doing so again "are no great surprise."

"But the question of when the United States might join in and how has been very much in the air, certainly since Aug. 7," he said. "It's an obvious question if the peace plan starts to work, then what?"

"It's been clear since Aug. 7 that the issue around the corner was, OK if this is all working, when does the United States join in and how, and we are thinking about that," he said.

The options are to undertake such talks in a multilateral setting, in a bilateral setting, or not at all, the official said.

At the OAS, meanwhile, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cueller met Saturday with foreign ministers of 13 Latin American nations seeking a solution to the Central American conflicts.

Under the Aug. 7 peace plan, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua agreed to implement cease-fires, amnesties and moves toward democracy.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Base Of Progress Must Remain Intact

The newly-elected faces on the Pitt County Board of Education should build on the foundation of progress the previous board laid for the school system.

The new board should recognize the urgent need for continuity in the school system, and focus on stability, not promote further upheaval.

Five incumbents were ousted in Tuesday's election. The makeup of the new board represents a shift in voting power from Pitt County to Greenville. That fact could significantly alter the focus of the board.

It should not. The new board of education should continue with important projects the past board initiated.

The new board will, of course, have its own character and its own projects. It should ensure, however, its commitment is to providing a solid education to each of the system's approximately 17,000 students — not grinding a political axe.

For example, as its first assignment in December, the new board will consider the long-range capital outlay plan proposed for the school system. It should endorse it as a well-thought-out approach to assessing and planning school construction needs. Such an instrument is valuable, especially to a school system like Pitt with the potential to gain 200 new students each year. It would be counterproductive for the board to devise another plan.

The board should also continue policy setting with quality as its primary goal. Since consolidation, improvements have been made in instruction standards. That emphasis is essential if the system is to continue its movement toward the top.

The need for reasonably racially balanced classrooms is still present. The recent redrawing of school district lines is a measure that must be updated as demographics shift.

The new board can also learn from the miscues of the past. It should not, for example, forget the need for unity and cohesiveness in directing the school system. Only with the interests of all students and all attendance districts firmly in mind can sound decisions for the system be made.

The campaign rhetoric is over, and the time for work approaches this new board. The members are in a situation to learn from both the successes and the mistakes of their predecessors.

Confronting Stalin

Josef Stalin should now indeed be dead. Though he died in 1953, the dictatorship of Stalin has pervaded the Soviet society to this day.

Despite acts against his own people which rivaled those of Adolph Hitler against the Jews, Stalin is still revered by some and feared by others.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev Monday talked of the "enormous and unforgivable" crimes of Josef Stalin and established a commission to investigate them.

"There is now much discussion about the role of Stalin in our history," Gorbachev said. "He was an extremely contradictory personality. To remain faithful to historic truth we have to see both Stalin's incontestable contribution to the struggle for socialism ... and the abuses committed by him and those around him."

Even in the condemnation of Stalin there were concessions to Stalin's initiatives.

Gorbachev spoke kindly of Nikita S. Khrushchev, the late Soviet leader, who 30 years ago accused Stalin of being a tyrant. Even though Stalin was dead Khrushchev was ousted and became a nonperson in Soviet history and public life.

Critics say that, while Gorbachev aimed needed criticism at Stalin, he didn't go far enough. Like a western politician he uttered words which were pleasing to the Soviet liberals and corresponding words designed to be pleasing to communist conservatives. No doubt, like western politicians, Gorbachev recognizes he can only go so far.

What he did say, however, is of enormous value in putting the cruelty of Josef Stalin into perspective. Without doubt, he persecuted and/or killed millions.

If the Soviet Union is ever to become a more democratic society it will have to deal with the monstrous acts of this man who dominated the formulative years of modern Soviet society. Khrushchev attempted to deal with this and virtually disappeared from public life. Now Gorbachev is trying some 30 years later. Unlike Hitler, however, Stalin was never crushed. His ghost will be with the Soviet people until they openly confront the terror that he brought upon their society.

U.S. 264 Movement Charts Area Growth

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Highway U.S. 264 will soon be moving — again.

The highway once followed East Fifth Street. It was routed through Chocowinity, along what is now N.C. 33 to Grimesland and then to what was then Five Points.

From there it followed Dickinson Avenue to what is now West End Circle and then out West Dickinson to Red Oak and on to Farmville. The predecessor to U.S. 264 followed Johnson Street to Third.

Next came the "bypass" which is now Tenth Street to Dickinson Avenue. Then came the next "bypass" which is now Greenville Boulevard and still carries the U.S. 264 traffic. Next U.S. 264 was moved to the eastern bypass and on to Washington by way of Pactolus. That route is now being four-laned with completion expected this year.

The next move for the changeable U.S. 264 will come about mid-November when the Farmville to Greenville throughway is opened. Then traffic will be routed from Farmville via the eastern bypass of Farmville, then along the new road to the Stantonsburg Road. A left turn there will carry U.S. 264 traffic along U.S. 13 to Burroughs-Wellcome, then along the eastern bypass to the present U.S. 264 east.

If that is difficult to follow, please remember that the present route from Farmville to Greenville and along Greenville Boulevard will be designated U.S. 264-A and no doubt traffic will continue to use it.

Anyway, U.S. 264 in Pitt County has proven elusive over the years. There are additional changes ahead — when the Farmville bypass is completed (contracts are expected to be awarded in December) and when the Greenville northwest bypass is opened (right-of-way acquistion begins this year).

The highway is our most important artery and its movements are a chart of the Greenville area's growth.

Your columnist took a trip to Morehead City on a recent warm November Sunday. It was like saying goodbye to summer even though the calender says that season is long gone for 1987.

Nevertheless there were still people on the beaches in shorts and summer clothing, even a few in swim wear.

The ocean still pounds in on the shore, oblivious of the seasons, and the sea gulls still scout up and down the beaches in their never-ending searches for food.

Same say this is the best time of the year to visit North Carolina beaches. The walks can be fantastic at this time. Soon the winds will turn bitingly cold and it will be the hearty soul who braves them on the beaches.

Stalin Reassessment Disappointing

Bryan Brumley

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev did not go as far as expected in a speech criticizing the excesses of Josef Stalin, and appears to be under more pressure from opponents of reform, some Western scholars say.

"It's half of glasnost," said Marshall Goldman of the Russian Research Center at Harvard, referring to the policy of greater openness that Gorbachev has pursued since he rose to power in March 1985.

Peter Reddaway, secretary of the Kennan Institute for Advanced Russian Studies in Washington, said Gorbachev's long-awaited address Monday in Moscow "appeared to be less radical than some of the rumors prior to the speech indicated."

"It didn't live up to expectations," said a veteran government Kremlinologist, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

In his speech, which marked the 70th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, Gorbachev did not directly mention the 8 million to 10 million people estimated by Western scholars to have died in Stalin's collectivization of agriculture from 1929 to 1932 or the hundreds of thousands of Communist Party members killed in the 1934-36 purges.

But he emphasized the need to uncover some facts which have been ignored by the Soviet news media and historians, and said Stalin was aware of the "lawlessness."

Gorbachev said some of the harshest measures taken by Stalin, such as forced collectivization and rapid industrialization, were necessary for the survival of the Soviet Union.

While extolling Vladimir Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state, Gorbachev repeated traditional criticisms of old Bolsheviks who were killed in the power struggle after Lenin's death in 1924: Leon Trotsky, Nikolai Bukharin, Lev Kamenev and Grigori Zinoviev.

Communist Party leaders, "headed by Josef Stalin, safeguarded Leninism in an ideological struggle," Gorbachev said in a bland description of the carnage.

Stalin emerged supreme and ruled until his death in 1953, using terror and brute force to create the centralized economic and political system that remains today.

Many Western and Soviet experts believe no major changes are possible in the Soviet Union until Stalin's legacy is probed honestly and in detail.

Stalin's successor, Nikita S. Khrushchev, harshly criticized Stalin in his famous "secret speech" to the 20th Communist Party Congress in 1956. Although the speech was read to party officials throughout the Soviet Union, its text was never published for the public and is still not available there today.

In some respects, Khrushchev was harsher than Gorbachev on Stalin. And even before Khrushchev was toppled in 1964, "de-Stalinization" was halted by former Stalin lieutenants who feared they would be swept away in a wholesale attack on the strongman's legacy.

Comparing Gorbachev and Khrushchev, Goldman said, "I would be nervous if I were Gorbachev, because I think he is inviting some of the same problems."

Stalin's cronies have died, but their places have been taken by some of Gorbachev's colleagues on the ruling Politburo who are warning against the anarchy which could result if the Pandora's box of the past is reopened.

The Soviet ambassador to Washington, Yuri Dubinin, asked to compare the speeches by Gorbachev and Khrushchev, said the current leaders were "continuing the process ... that was begun at the 20th Party Congress."

"We are now moving the process forward, and we will go forward in a way that is resolute and assured," Dubinin said. Asked at a news conference about reports of a dispute in the leadership, the ambassador read a copy of a Kremlin statement and declined to elaborate.

In recent months, Gorbachev appears to have come under increasing pressure from opponents of reform, notably two colleagues on the Politburo, Egor Ligachev, the reported No. 2 man in the Kremlin, and Viktor Chebrikov, the head of the KGB security police.

Compromise A Euphemism For Shirking

Sheldon Himelfarb

When the Senate brought up an alternative to the War Powers Resolution two weeks ago, I thought I was watching the stock market; within hours, on two votes, the measure lost, 51-47, then won, 54-44.

Unlike Wall Street, this was a one-shot flip-flop, and when it was all over the Senate was left with the flop end: the Byrd-Warner alternative, requiring a presidential report on the Persian Gulf operation and postponing a congressional vote for several months on the operation's merit.

Byrd-Warner was supposed to be a way of asserting Congress' authority over the Gulf operation, while both sidestepping the War Powers Resolution and keeping it intact. Horsefeathers! By failing to invoke the act — either to approve or disapprove of the Gulf operation — Congress didn't sidestep the resolution, it stomped on it.

Ironically, the stomping began with the very senators who were most concerned to protect the resolution. After the U.S. attack on the Iranian oil platforms, Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd reportedly urged President Reagan to comply with the terms of the 1973 War Powers Act. Sen. John Glenn suggested that "the president would be well advised to report to us under the War Powers Act so he can have congressional support." Similarly, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. said that escalating tensions in the Gulf make it "more important than ever for the president to secure the support of Congress, and the way to do that under the law is to invoke the War Powers Act."

Like Byrd-Warner, these statements stand the War Powers Resolution on its head by relying on the president to invoke it. They constitute an abdication of Congress' constitutional role to "declare war" and make rules "for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces," throwing the responsibility onto the president's shoulders.

There is only one way to keep the War Powers Resolution intact: Congress must invoke it. This does not mean "jerking the rug out from under the president" by forcing him to withdraw the fleet from the Gulf, as some people seem to think. In this case, it is far more likely that Congress would give the president its seal of approval and authorize the operation to continue.

Congress was in a similar situation five years ago, during the Lebanon operation. I remember the problem very clearly because I worked on it as a member of the Senate staff, and because it was the first real test of the War Powers Resolution.

For the first time since passage of the act nine years earlier, U.S. forces were introduced into hostilities for a period longer than 60 days, the deadline for invoking the resolution. While mortar, rocket and small arms fire rained on U.S. Marines' positions, the president denied that American forces were engaged in hostilities, and for a few months Congress bought it.

It took the deaths of four Marines before Congress took matters into its own hands and invoked the resolution. The marble corridors of the Capitol practically shook from the sighs of relief that went up when the debate finally turned from the finer points of "imminent hostilities" to the policy itself. In the end Congress passed, and the president signed, a bill authorizing the continued participation of the Marines in the multinational force for a generous 18 months.

No one pulled the rug out. In fact, the president decided unilaterally to bring the forces home well before the 18 months had elapsed — and after 265 more Marines had lost their lives.

Sheldon Himelfarb, formerly on the staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is writing a book on secret U.S. postwar negotiations with Czechoslovakia.

Strategy And Politics Make Strange Bedfellow

James Woolsey

WASHINGTON — It is not only politics but also strategy and arms control that make strange bedfellows. Consider the current unacknowledged agreement between elements of the left and the right as they simultaneously launch similar attacks against deterrence and NATO. The only thing that prevents one from illustrating these similarities by assembling an "attack video" is that it is almost impossible to figure out just who is plagiarizing whom.

For example, the notion of a general ballistic-missile-flight-test ban is currently endorsed by four of the six Democratic presidential candidates — it is opposed only by Albert Gore and, less clearly, Bruce Babbitt. The idea was sowed by congressional staffers and began to sprout in Iowa, where nuclear deterrence is apparently socially unacceptable and where hapless visiting candidates are pushed into positions that no president could responsibly sustain.

A ban on flight tests of ballistic missiles would mean that, while trying to maintain a nuclear deterrent, the United States would have to abandon over a period of time any reliance on untested (and thus decreasingly reliable) ballistic missiles. It would consequently mean the end of our ballistic-missile submarine fleet, as well as the end of our land-based ICBM force. The submarines are the survivable bedrock of our ability to deter war, and the ICBMs, if made survivable, are their most valuable adjunct.

In short, it is almost impossible to think of a worse arms-control proposal from an American point of view than a general ballistic-missile-flight-test ban. Almost, but not quite. Because this current crowd-pleaser in the Iowa caucuses is merely a gradual method of implementing an even more damaging proposal — the offer by President Reagan a year ago at Reykjavik to ban ballistic missiles outright. Reagan's proposal in Iceland's famous haunted house was a way of undermining deterrence by a date certain. In Iowa the anti-nuclear groups that dominate the caucuses are willing to have the undermining take place more gradually, to have our deterrent rot slowly. Chalk one up for Midwestern moderation.

On the issue of U.S.-Soviet relations there are also some increasing, probably unconscious, parallels between left and right. For example, there are many recent exuberant statements about glasnost from national figures of a liberal persuasion. Certainly Mikhail Gorbachev's beginning efforts at reform are interesting, are positive and should be encouraged. But Peter the Great, Alexander II, Lenin and Khrushchev all had their reforming periods. Sometimes Russia's neighbors got a respite from that nation's millennium of expansionism, and sometimes not. It is only prudent to avoid getting palpitations about glasnost and perestroika until we, the Afghan rebels, Solidarity and the rest of the world see more substantial results.

But, again, this giddiness about glasnost is a pale copy of what is still the proposal that no member of the administration below the very top can mention with a straight face: the president's often reiterated idea that the United States should give (in some formulations, sell at cost) SDI technology to the Soviets. Only a complete transformation of the nature of the Soviet state could bring such an idea within the pale of reason.

A third interesting mirror image between right and left occurs in the form of opposition to the small mobile ICBM (Midgetman), the best bet for preserving the survivability of the land-based leg of our nuclear deterrent over the long run. Midgetman is opposed by two of the six Democratic candidates (Jackson and Dukakis). It also has some opposition in Congress from both conservatives and liberals, and in parts of the administration. Opponents from one side tend not to want to spend money on ICBMs, period. Those on the other side want to spend funds on SDI rather than on anything else. For many of these elements of both right and left, maintaining a survivable ICBM force for deterrence is, at best, of second-order importance.

Finally, the isolationism that held sway on the right of American politics for many decades, and then migrated to the left during the Vietnam War, has now found a foothold on the right again. Irving Kristol and other conservative and neoconservative intellectuals have started to propose withdrawal from NATO, in favor of heavier reliance on SDI.

Most who are bashing the alliance and deterrence feel free to do so because they believe that a deus ex machina is about to descend to the world's stage and solve all our strategic problems. For some, such strategic salvation is expected to come from an early SDI deployment. For others, it seems to come from the assumption that in short order Russia's empire will be dramatically converted into government by a genial group of capitalist-minded commissars running a free-market economy that is more or less on the verge of democracy.

These two notions have in common a high degree of fantasy. Those who defend deterrence and the alliance have recently seen hostile action, sanctioned by such fantasies, on both flanks. It is time to return the fire.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Let us pause this Veteran's Day and put aside for a moment (if possible) the bogus 'heroes' of rock, film and sports and remember Heroes of another time: the sweating crew of a U.S. submarine lying 150 feet beneath the South China Sea, temp. 110 degrees, tiptoeing about, while Japanese destroyers raced back and forth dropping depth charges ... a Virginian named Doss, reviled in basic for his steadfast religious beliefs barring the carrying of arms, as an aid man on a spring day in 1945, on Okinawa, carrying 74 men of the 77th Division to safety; under fire and twice wounded. We gave him the Medal of Honor, first conscientious objector in our history to be so honored. Today a Seventh-Day Adventist camp in Michigan bears his name...

A Navy torpedo bomber squadron leader named Waldron, a dash of Sioux blood coursing in his veins, who led Torpedo 8 off USS Hornet on a rare morning in June, 1942, against a mighty Japanese carrier force at a place called Midway.

Without a shred of fighter protection, Waldron led his 15-plane group straight into a hail of Zero and anti-aircraft fire to launch torpedoes. All save one met death causing Winston Churchill to break into sobs when he heard of their gallantry.

Korea and Vietnam form a tapestry of similar bravery by young Americans.

The words of an unknown poet apply here: "Do not stand by my grave and weep; I am not there — I do not sleep; I am a thousands winds that blow, I am the diamond glints on snow; I am the sunlight on ripened grain. I am the gentle autumn rain. Do not stand by my grave and cry; I am not there — I did not die."

The Dawn Of Another Morning In America

Jim Hoagland

PARIS — History's web has snared events of the past two weeks and left them exposed in close proximity in its threads. The resulting pattern suggests that we live in a world radically different and more threatening than the one we inhabited just a few days ago — a world in which American influence and prosperity are on the decline.

The wild gyrations of the stock market, the dollar and interest rates created political winners and losers as well as financial ones. American prestige and leadership were marked down sharply abroad in a reaction that not even the current market rebound and the Dec. 7 Soviet-American summit are likely to overcome.

Lingering damage has been done to the idea that U.S.-style free markets represent the irresistible wave of the future for the rest of the world. In Britain and France, conservative prime ministers who have proudly promoted the sale of stock-market shares in denationalized firms to the populace as a way of spreading capitalism (and boosting their own political fortunes) suddenly have egg all over their faces.

Left-of-center parties are seeing their only recently discredited policies of strong market regulation and control of the economy take on new life as a result of what is being portrayed even by the conservatives as an American-caused debacle. Since leftist governments then in power took the brunt of the political fallout of the 1979 oil shock, they are savoring this potential reversal.

Seen from abroad, America seemed mesmerized by the Wall Street crash, the sudden lurches in the Soviet-American dialogue on arms control and the failure of a weakened president to get the Supreme Court justice of his choice. This spurred efforts to develop alternatives to dependence on American leadership.

Bonn and Paris escalated discussion of French-German cooperation on nuclear strategy, which has always been a coded way for the West Germans to express doubts about U.S. security policies that they cannot voice directly. (Neither government has any interest in the subject on its own merits.) In The Hague, seven West European nations issued their own security declaration in an implicit vote of diminished confidence in American abilities and commitments.

In the Persian Gulf, Kuwait watched in dismay as the United States declined to retaliate for an Iranian attack on a vital Kuwaiti oil terminal. The Kuwaitis then let it be known they were deeply involved in discussions with Egypt about providing military protection for the sheikdom in return for a massive economic-aid program.

The American decision to show restraint at this point was, in fact, prudent. The well conceptualized U.S. retaliatory strike against an Iranian oil platform the week before also deserves praise rather than criticism. But, however sensible in their own terms, such actions cannot be separated out from the overall failure of overwhelming American military force to calm the Persian Gulf.

War Planners Adjust To Summit

Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — NATO's defense ministers have met in Monterey, Calif., in recent days to look beyond the Reagan-Gorbachev summit to the new nuclear weaponry they may utilize if the superpowers decide to eliminate land-based short- and medium-range missiles. At the top of the defense ministers' list has been a proposal to redeploy at sea medium-range missiles withdrawn from Europe.

While the world may feel encouraged by a superpower summit, the growing militarization of the world's oceans is a fact few public-minded citizens can ignore. There is no escaping the dramatically-increased risks of nuclear war at sea.

Over 15,000 nuclear weapons, making up more than a quarter of the world's total, are now deployed at sea. In the last decade, the Soviet Union and the United States have added more than 2,500 such weapons to their naval arsenals. New nuclear weapons such as highly-accurate multiple warhead submarine-launched ballistic missiles and Tomahawk sea-launched cruise missiles arm more sophisticated and capable ships. Armadas from both countries have also added hundreds of new nuclear-capable bombers and attack aircraft to their arsenals.

The U.S. now has deployed more than 9,000 nuclear weapons at sea, accounting for 37 percent of the American nuclear stockpile. Some 278 U.S. Navy ships and submarines are capable of firing nuclear weapons. The Soviet Union has approximately 5,400 naval nuclear warheads and 624 ships and submarines capable of firing nuclear torpedoes and missiles.

Regrettably, the trend toward deploying more and more weapons at sea is increasing. Nuclear weapons there are more flexible and mobile than land-based weapons. They are also less controversial and increasingly relied upon as a means of circumventing public opposition to nuclear weapons. This is a message not lost on NATO's defense ministers.

The nuclear naval arms race is by no means simply a superpower problem. Every year, more and more superpower naval exercises are being conducted with growing support and involvement of coastal countries. Last year, U.S. ships conducted 90 major exercises involving 33 countries. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union has established its first major overseas naval base at Camranh Bay in Vietnam.

It's no surprise nuclear-armed naval fleets are becoming an important component of "peacetime" foreign policy. They are increasingly used for signaling intentions during international crises.

Questioning Preferential Treatment For Black Applicants

John Hildebrand

Nearly all selective U.S. colleges grant some sort of preferential treatment to black applicants as part of their admissions policies. But a growing number of conservative black professors question this practice, contending it may do minority students more harm than good. A leading exponent of this view, Glenn C. Loury, a professor of political economics at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government, was recently interviewed:

Q. Colleges naturally want to attract diverse groups of students, because diversity makes for a more interesting campus. Doesn't that justify admission of blacks even if their entrance-exam scores may be somewhat lower on average than those of whites?

Loury: I wouldn't answer that "no" unqualifiedly. But I think there is a lessening justification for that than there was 20 years ago when the practice was initiated. Of course you want to have diverse communities. But no one can say that requires you to have 6 percent minorities, or 8 percent, or 12 percent. And it's not going to be the same on each campus. If I'm in a state university located next to a big city, I'm going to have a much different flow of minority applicants than if I'm in a small liberal-arts college tucked away somewhere in the countryside.

Q. But why shouldn't that small college try to attract more black students?

Loury: I think the possibility is small that preferential admissions will solve the problem — I mean, the problems of black under-representation in undergraduate enrollment, on faculties, in graduate schools of science and engineering. In the main, these institutions are fair and, in some instances, more than fair in their treatment of minority students. When we look at performance statistics — I talk about test scores but also more broadly about grades — we see racial differences which you can't chalk up to racism in any general sense. I can tell you that here at the Kennedy School we face very stiff competition for a small number of black students. The Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton is one of our main competitors. When they have a good year, we have a bad year, and that's just the way it is.

Q. Even accepting your argument that preferential admissions may not solve racial problems, does it really do any harm?

Loury: First of all, there's a resentment factor. It would seem to me that there is a legitimate complaint to be made by a blue-collar white student who's omitted in favor of someone else.

Violence Marks Stakes In Haiti Free Elections

AP News Analysis

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — An upsurge in violence aimed at disrupting Haiti's first free elections in 30 years underscores the stakes involved — keeping the status quo or making basic changes in this desperately poor nation.

Elections for president and a National Assembly are set for Nov. 29. Because of the violence, the Independent Electoral Council spent the day Friday debating whether to postpone the contest. It announced Friday night that the balloting would be held as scheduled.

Nearly two years after President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to exile in France, a military-dominated junta still rules by decree, as was the case in this Caribbean nation during the 29-year Duvalier family dictatorship.

The Duvalier-appointed leaders of the army, Haiti's strongest but perhaps least trusted institution, have remained at their posts, and prominent Duvalier loyalists have retained their privileges.

Meanwhile, life for Haitians has grown worse. Political instability and contraband imports have put thousands of farmers, sugar cane fieldhands and $3-a-day assembly-line employees out of work.

The government operates on a meager $257 million budget that amounts to about $43 for each of the country's 6 million residents. Public services — education, health care, housing, access to clean water — don't exist.

Many prominent Haitians are calling for revolutionary social change.

Jean-Bertrand Aristide, a Roman Catholic Silesian priest with a wide following among Haiti's youths and the poor, advocates giving state land to peasants and raising taxes and the minimum daily wage. His ideas don't appeal to many landlords and businessmen.

Louis Dejoie II, one of the most popular presidential candidates and the son of the man who lost the disputed 1957 election that catapulted Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier to power, favors prosecuting Duvalieristes and army officials accused of human rights abuses.

"We are at the end of one period and the beginning of another," said Jean-Claude Bajeux, a leader in anti-government strikes and demonstrations that shut down Haiti's main cities in June and July. "A revolution is ineffective unless you get into the machinery of daily political power."

The pre-election attacks appear to be organized, although no one has claimed responsibility. The electoral council's headquarters and a ballot-printing company were targets last week of arson.

The headquarters of three political parties were raked by gunfire at night, as was the home of a presidential candidate.

Electoral council member Emmanuel Ambroise has gone into hiding following attacks on his home and business.

Duvalieristes, including Clovis Desinor, a disqualified presidential candidate and former finance minister, deny involvement. They are blamed for the violence nonetheless, as is the junta led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, whom Duvalier appointed army chief-of-staff.

Desinor is of concern to anti-Duvalieristes because of his similarities to Francois Duvalier, Jean-Claude's father. Like the first Duvalier dictator, Desinor stresses his blackness and pits black peasants against the mulatto elite. He denounces foreign aid as attempted intervention and accuses the Catholic Church, which supported the overthrow of the Duvalier dictatorship, of meddling in politics.

Francois Duvalier's was a "legal and constitutional government — dictatorial for some, popular for others," Desinor said in announcing his candidacy last month.

The electoral council disqualified Desinor and 11 others from the race because of their Duvalier ties. A clause in the new constitution, drafted after Jean-Claude Duvalier's ouster, allowed the move.

The junta, which has governed since Duvalier fled, is criticized not for supporting the old regime but for doing so little to support the transition to a new one.

In June, it tried to wrestle control of the elections from the electoral council, but backed down after widespread public protests. Since then, it has shown little interest in the elections.

The junta rejected the electoral council's initial budget request and denied the use of schools for registration centers and polling stations.

It has ignored the Oct. 13 shooting death of opposition presidential candidate Yves Volel, who was killed while giving a speech near police headquarters. Witnesses accused plainclothes officers in the slaying.

Foreign observers say the dispute between the junta and the electoral council stems from each believing it best represents the people in Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

"There is animosity between the national governing council and the electoral council," said one Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity. "It's childish, it's unprofessional, it's stupid. But it's there."

UN Opens War Crimes Files

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A Jewish leader and a Nazi hunter praised the United Nations for opening its files on Nazi war crimes, but researchers won't have immediate access to the vast and poorly organized information.

Austrian President Kurt Waldheim, a former U.N. secretary-general, is accused of war crimes in one file. He has denied the charges.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said the files of the U.N. War Crimes Commission, previously restricted to government access for prosecution, will be open to individuals and researchers for the first time.

"Access for governments has been broadened," the secretary-general said in a statement. "Not only may governments continue to request information on specific individuals, but they may now ask for access for general research."

Israel's U.N. ambassador, Benjamin Netanyahu, praised the decision to expand access to 8,000 files containing the names of more than 36,000 accused Nazi criminals and others.

"This is the greatest storehouse of information to be released since World War II," he said at a news conference. He said it was "a courageous and historic decision (which) opens a new chapter in Holocaust research."

Beate Klarsfeld, a noted Nazi hunter, charged at the news conference: "Had the files been opened a few years ago, Kurt Waldheim would never have been secretary-general of the United Nations." Ms. Klarsfeld told reporters she did not expect the files to yield any more "big names," like Waldheim, but said: "A lot of these criminals will be from Eastern Europe."

Waldheim served as a German army intelligence officer in the Balkans in World War II, and there were claims he knew about the deportations of Jews and Greek and Yugoslav partisans to Nazi concentration camps. Waldheim has repeatedly denied the allegations.

It it is likely to be a long time before anyone gets a look at the U.N. files because the mechanics of researching and organizing them have not been worked out. Applications to obtain access also are not yet available.

The war crimes archives, put on microfilm, are poorly indexed. The room where they are stored is jammed with cardboard boxes and files and narrow passageways. The files are stacked almost floor-to-ceiling, wall-to-wall.

Jewish groups are expected to establish a foundation to finance extensive research, since the financially strapped United Nations is unable to do so.

U.N.-member governments have had limited access for the purpose of investigating and prosecuting specific individuals. Israel contends many nations never acted on that information.

"You don't have to be a statistician to undertand that there must be many files of people who were accused of these crimes ... and that these people are alive and are untried," Netanayahu said.

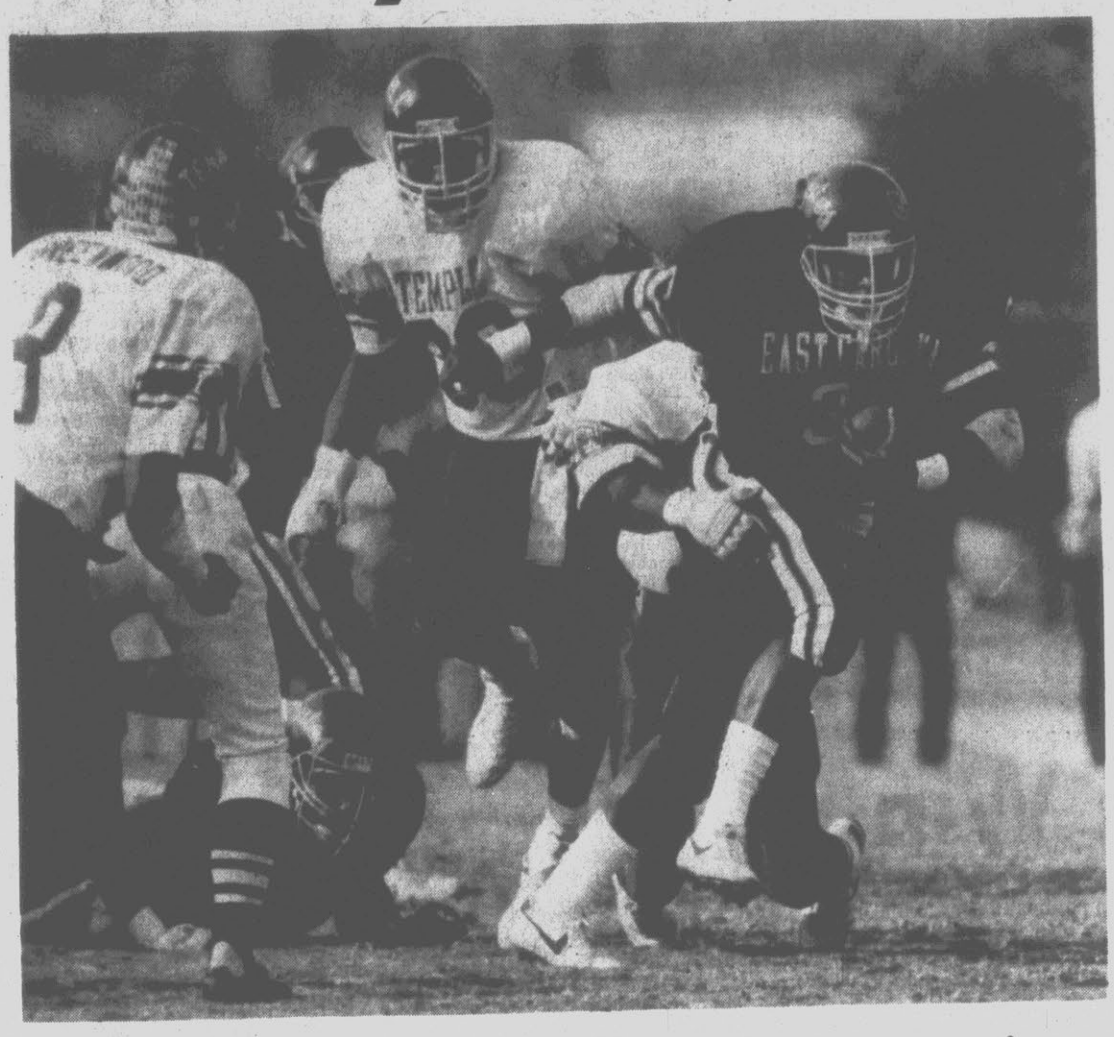
Timely Wilson Leads Bucs' Win



Breaking Away

Walter Wilson, a sophomore wide receiver, was in the right place at the right time Saturday for East Carolina's Pirates and because of it, ECU pulled out a 31-26 victory over the Owls and still have a shot at their its first winning season since 1983.

In closing out their home schedule for Ficklen Stadium, the Pirates brought their record to 5-5 on the year. They end up next Saturday at Southern Mississippi with a winning record on the line.

Wilson, who caught four passes for 108 yards, made all four of them count. Two helped set up touchdowns for the Pirates while the other two kept drives alive.

Travis Hunter, while held somewhat in check by the Temple defense on the ground, nevertheless connected on nine of 15 pass attempts for 210 yards, including a 59-yard scoring strike to Jarrod Moody on the first series of the ball game. Dennell Harper scored on a pair of 1-yard runs, while Anthony Simpson ended his ECU home career with the final Pirate TD of the day, also a yard out.

Chuck Berleth, who kicked two PATs, also added a 26 yard field goal, while Tony Smith turned a bad handle on another kick attempt into a 2-pointer when he tossed the ball to George Frankin.

Bill Wright kicked field goals of 33 and 34 yards for Temple, while Mike Hinnant grabbed a five-yard pass from backup quarterback Matt Baker for a touchdown. Baker and tailback Todd McNair both scored on 1-yard plunges.

And while Temple moved the ball often at will, the Pirates were able to stop them when it counted — and to control the ball much of the final period. In the final 15:48 of the game, ECU kept the ball 12:34, scoring twice.

"I'm extremely pleased with the win, to say the least," ECU's Art Baker said. "We're especially happy for our seniors to go out on a winning note at home.

"It wasn't pretty, but we did the things we needed at the right time, putting together two 80-yard drives and we ran our offense fairly well," he added.

"Travis Hunter and Walter Wilson had excellent games for us. Walter seemed to always be in on the big play today and that's the spark we need. Both of those young men are just sophomores."

Wilson's first big catch came in the third period after Temple had taken a 13-10 lead in the game. Facing second and 10 from the 33, Hunter lofted a long bomb to Wilson over the middle that the sophomore ran under and caught. He nearly broke it all the way but was dragged down by cornerback Joe Greenwood at the nine.

The Pirates got a break on third and six when Hunter was facemasked on a tackle at the two. That gave the Pirates another third and goal at the one, but Simpson failed to make it in on the play. On fourth down, Hunter faked to Simpson, then pitched to Harper, who ran untouched into the end zone for the score putting ECU on top for good, 17-13.

After the Pirates held Temple and forced a punt, ECU got it back on its own 36, but Moody was dragged down on the option for a four-yard loss. From there, on third down, Hunter hit the leaping Wilson at the Temple 38 for a 30-yard gain, setting up the next score.

Harper ran the same play he had scored on twice for 14 yards and Simpson twice burst through for 13 more to the nine. The big senior fullback carried three more times to the one, and Hunter and Harper again teamed up on the same play for the final yard — again on fourth and goal.

The snap was mishandled, however, and Smith picked the ball up and tossed it to Frankin, who stepped into the end zone for a 25-13 lead.

Wilson's two other catches were important also. In the first period, he caught an 11-yarder that got the Pirates a first down. But on the next play, Hunter's pass bounced off his receiver and into a crowd of Temple defenders, with Joe Possenti intercepting.

The other catch was a 9-yarder on third and fourth from the ECU 46 that kept the final touchdown drive alive. Hunter and reserve fullback Tim James carried the ball after that to the one, where Simpson got the call for the final yard and the score.

While Baker was happy with the passing game on offense, he was worried more about the offensive line, which received more injuries. Joe Molineaux and Kyle Condrey both went out with injuries and their status was not known Saturday night.

"We had some third string guards in there since Billy Michel is also out," Baker said. "Our coaching staff made some fine adjustments at

Buccaneers Upset Wolfpack, 29-14

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — East Tennessee State coach Mike Ayers was doused by a bucket of ice as the Buccaneers celebrated their victory over North Carolina State Saturday, but that was not what made Ayers numb.

"This was a Super Bowl win — 60 solid minutes of effort," Ayers said after East Tennessee's 29-14 victory. "This is certainly the biggest win I have been associated with. When you have three youngsters just out of high school among 11 starters on defense, this is certainly a major, major win."

Quarterback Jeff Morgan passed for one touchdown and ran for two more, and cornerback Rick Harris added a 56-yard interception return to seal the victory for the Division I-AA Buccaneers.

"We came into this game telling our players to believe in themselves," Ayers said. "We told them they would get a win here if they would just believe in themselves. We got the momentum and managed to keep it going."

"This is not only the low point for me in the season but in my career," said N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan, who will suffer only his second losing season in his 10-year coaching career.

"It's obvious how we played starts at the top and that's me," Sheridan said.

East Tennessee took a 13-7 lead with 3:07 left in the third period, when Morgan hit tailback George Searcy with a 7-yard scoring pass to complete a 13-play, 73-yard drive. The conversion attempt failed when Mike Shoun's kick was wide right.

Morgan gave the Buccaneers a 19-7 lead on a 1-yard sneak with 10:14 left, one play after he had connected with Cedric Solomon for a 40-yard strike. The 37-yard, five-play drive was set up when the Wolfpack lost 35 yards on a bad snap on a Bryan Carter field-goal attempt.

Harris stepped in front of the Wolfpack's Mack Jones at his own 44-yard line to intercept a Preston Poag pass, returning it untouched to

Treadwell Delivers On Foreign Turf

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — On foreign turf for the first time in 56 days, place-kicker David Treadwell looked the North Carolina fans in the face and did what he does best — win football games.

"I've been there before and fortunately I was able to make it," said Treadwell, whose 30-yard field goal with 32 seconds left gave the 10th-ranked Tigers a 13-10 Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over the Tar Heels.

Tied 10-10, on the road for the first time since Sept. 12 and with the North Carolina fans roaring, Clemson's coach Danny Ford said his team came up with "a great drive" to win the game in the final seconds.

"We got the ball on the 19 and was able to drive down there and give David a chance to win it for us," Ford said. "... He's kicked a lot of them. He's just a tremendous football player for us when the pressure is on, and he did a great job again tonight."

Earlier in the season, Treadwell kicked a 19-yard field goal with two seconds left to give the Tigers a 21-20 victory over 10th-ranked Georgia. Treadwell has been successful on 17 of 20 field goal attempts this season.

"This is a tough place to come up here and win, but we are pleased with our performance," Ford added.

North Carolina coach Dick Crum said his team gave a good effort, but that Clemson is "just a great football team."

"We just came up a little short at the end," Crum said.

Crum also was angry during Clemson's last drive when the officials asked the Tar Heel crowd to quiet down.

"They (the officials) told us that if the crowd made noise again, they were going to take a timeout away from us," Crum said. "The thing I thought he was wrong on was the quarterback never turned around and asked him for a timeout. The referee took it upon himself to do that and I don't think that is his place."

Both teams squandered scoring opportunities in the first quarter.

Clemson took the opening kickoff and drove to the North Carolina 21, but Norris Davis stopped fullback Johnson for a 1-yard loss on a fourth-and-one play.

The Tar Heels then ate up more than five minutes of their own on a drive, but Miller's 46-yard field goal attempt was wide to the right.

After a scoreless first quarter, the Tigers drove from their own 10 to the North Carolina 17, but Johnson fumbled the ball into the end zone after being hit on the 10 and North Carolina's Derrick recovered for a touchback.

A series later, James Lott's 32-yard punt return set up the first half's only score. After Miller's 52-yard punt, Lott reversed his field and brought the ball back to the North Carolina 30. Two plays later, quarterback Rodney Williams found a wide open Gary Cooper for a 29-yard touchdown pass with 1:30 left before halftime. Treadwell kicked the extra point.

Injured Young Comes Through For Deacs

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest tailback Mark Young is still recovering from a sprained ankle, but Saturday's 30-27 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Duke eased the hurt.

"I was trying to run hard, but I'm not 100 percent," Young said. "My ankle hurts."

Young provided painful moments for Duke, however, rushing for 135 yards and a key third-quarter touchdown on 27 carries. Young's touchdown with 1:38 left in the period gave the Demon Deacons a 30-21 edge. Wilson Hoyle missed the extra point, but the score was cushion enough to help Wake Forest snap a a three-game losing streak and raise their record to 6-3, 3-3 in the ACC.

"The team accomplished its goal of a winning season," first-year Wake Forest coach Bill Dooley said. It is Wake Forest's third winning season in the last 16 years. "It was a total team effort."

The Wake Forest defense had shut down Duke's offense in the third period, and produced a touchdown when A.J. Greene intercepted a Steve Slayden pass and ran 38 yards for a touchdown with 11:42 left in the third period, giving the Demon Deacons a 24-21 lead.

In the fourth period, Duke's offense regrouped and got within the final margin on Stanley Monk's 7-yard run with 6:58 left. Doug Peterson missed the extra point.

Duke took the ball for the last time at its own 14 with three minutes left. The Blue Devils reached the Wake Forest nine, where Slayden was sacked for a six-yard loss. He gained the yards back on third-and-9, but his fourth-down pass was batted down at the line of scrimmage.

"We wanted to try to win, of course, and not try to tie. But it just didn't work out for us," Duke first-year Coach Steve Spurrier said. "We had the play we wanted, a slant to the side. But the Wake player got his hand on it and knocked it down, and that was the end of it."

The Demon Deacons were pushed into a 14-0 hole in the first quarter on a Slayden touchdown run on Duke's first possession and a Slayden touchdown pass to Clarkston Hines, which was set up on a Wake Forest turnover.

Wake Forest rallied when Tony Mosley fell on a blocked punt in the Duke end zone late in the first quarter and Tony Rogers tied the score on a 4-yard scoring run at 12:16 of the second quarter.

"The blocked punt in the first half gave us momentum," Dooley said. "The next time the offense got the ball, they scored."

Earnhardt Relaxed At Riverside

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt says he rarely has felt more relaxed than he does heading into Sunday's Winston Western 500 NASCAR stock car race.

But Earnhardt, who clinched his second straight Winston Cup championship two weeks ago at Rockingham, N.C., guarantees he won't just be going through the motions in the 500-kilometer (310.5-mile) race at Riverside International Raceway.

"When I put on the uniform and get in the race car, there's nothing else I can do but give it my best shot," Earnhardt said. "I'll be out there trying to win a race, just like I do every time. And I'd really like to win one at Riverside before they close this place."

The historic track on the edge of the Mojave Desert is scheduled to close in 1988, either right after the June NASCAR race or following the November race, an event which remains in question because of the enroachment of housing developments on the racetrack grounds.

"Clinching the championship at Rockingham felt really good," Earnhardt said. "Now, I can just relax and enjoy myself out there. But nothing has changed. The guys give me a car that can finish and I drive it as hard as I can and we see what happens."

Earnhardt still has a chance to tie Richard Petty for the most victories in a single season since NASCAR began its "modern" schedule in 1972.

Petty won 13 races in 1973. Earnhardt has won 11 and still has Sunday and the season-finale on Nov. 22 at Atlanta International Raceway remaining.

The 27th annual Western 500, which will be telecast live by cable channel WTBS, is scheduled to start noon PST.

Earnhardt will start eighth in the 42-car field, four rows behind pole-winner Geoff Bodine, looking for his first victory of the season.

Others up front include Ricky Rudd, Rusty Wallace, Terry Labonte, Kyle Petty, Bill Elliott and Alan Kulwicki.

Well back in the pack when the big field takes the green flag on the 2.62-mile, nine-turn road circuit will be veteran racer Morgan Shepherd and three-time Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip, both of whom had mechanical problems on Friday and were unable to qualify until Saturday.

The top 25 qualifiers were locked in Friday, with Shepherd leading Saturday's time trials with a fast lap of 116.963, which would have been good enough for sixth on Friday.

Waltrip, who was one of the favorites to win the pole and the race, will be starting right behind Shepherd in 27th after qualifying Saturday at 116.086. That would have been good enough for eighth on Friday.

"We'll start 27th and that's not very good in the overall picture," said Waltrip, who hopes to close what has been a disappointing season with a rush. "There are a lot of guys in front of me I really don't want to race near. It'll be tough from that standpoint.

"The first several laps will be critical," he added. "I can't afford to get in trouble. My idea is to wait until the field gets strung out and then start picking them off one-by-one. It's a long race, so it will take time and patience.

"One thing's for sure," Waltrip said. "It'll be fun to watch. I feel racy. I might even put on a Dale Earnhardt mask and trade a little paint with the boys."

half to change the blocking schemes. Throwing the football was the key for us today."

Defensively, Baker was disappointed with the outcome. "Our defense did not have a very good day, as a whole. We gave them too many third down conversions."

Temple made good on 8 of 16 third down conversions, but a number of them were from deep holes. ECU also was 50 percent, with 7 of 15.

The Pirates started out like a house afire, racing 81 yards in just seven plays on the first series of the game. Hunter hit Ron Jones on a third-and-nine from the 20 to keep it alive, then after a first down at the Pirate 41, Hunter connected with Moody on the 59-yard scoring bomb. Berleth made good on the PAT for a 7-0 lead with 11:31 showing.

Temple drove to the ECU 37 before a procedure penalty blunted its first drive and forced a punt.

But Possenti's interception four plays later set up Wright's first field goal, a 33-yarder. With 2:09 left, that cut the lead to 7-3.

After twice misfiring after crossing midfield, Temple got the ball back at their own 37. Baker hit Keith Gloster for 25 yards on first down to the ECU 38, then went to McNair on a 17-yard gainer. The tailback fumbled the ball as he went down, but Hinnant was there for the recovery on the 21. A couple of plays later, he was there to take a 5-yard pass from Baker for the score, and Wright's kick with 2:35 left gave the Owls their first lead, 10-7.

Wilson's 48-yard kickoff return helped put the Pirates in position to tie it before the half ended. Hunter hit Jones on a 24-yard pass to the 13, then kept the ball on the next play down to the four. But the drive was stymied there and Berleth's 26-yard field goal with 28 seconds left tied it at 10-10.

The Pirates still had to dodge a bullet before time ran out as Temple raced from its own 37 to the Pirate 28 on just two plays, a 17-yard pass from Baker to Maurice Johnson and an 18-yard scramble by the quarterback. Wright went for a 45-yard field goal, but it fell short.

Temple drove 57 yards on a 7:39 possession to regain the lead. But again, the Pirates forced a field-goal attempt. The 34-yarder by Wright was good, giving Temple a 13-10 lead.

Wilson then provided the spark with his two catches on the next two Pirate drives, setting up Harper's two touchdowns.

Temple scored inbetween, driving 76 yards in just eight plays, including a 27-yard aerial to Hinnant on the first of the series. McNair ripped off 29 on a fourth-and-three sitatuion at the 30 that set up Baker's 1-yard sneak over the goal line with 7:41 left the game.

But the Pirates responded with their final score, a 60-yard drive that saw Simpson make it 31-20.

Mike Palys almost broke the kickoff, returning it to the Pirate 40, and from there Baker hit Hinnant for 36 yards, setting up one last gasp by the Owls.

But after McNair's 1-yard TD run, a pass for two was knocked away by Ed Brodgen, leaving it at 31-26 with 1:16 to play.

An on-side kickoff attempt went out of bounds, and the Pirate ran out the clock from there.

Temple falls to 3-6 with the loss.

"We've set a primary goal all season long to have a winning season," ECU's Baker said. "We're in position to achiefe that mark. We would have liked to have won more, but a chance to go 6-5 is all that's on our minds as a football team. That would really be the way for these seniors to go out."

the end zone for a 25-7 lead with 7:59 left. Morgan hit Roosevelt Way for the two-point conversion.

The Wolfpack cut the lead to 27-14 with 6:24 left, as Poag hit tailback Todd Varn with a 10-yard scoring pass to complete an eight-play, 64-yard drive.

N.C. State then recovered an on-side kick, but stalled on the East Tennessee 40. The Buccaneer defense ensured the victory, as Juan McGarrah intercepted two Wolfpack passes in the final minutes.

The Buccaneers scored a safety on the last play of the game when N.C. State guard Lenny Schultz recovered a Poag pitchout in the Wolfpack endzone.

East Tennessee, of the Southern Conference, improved to 5-4, while the Wolfpack of the Atlantic Coast Conference fell to 3-6.

Sooners Roll By Cowboys, 29-10

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Substitute fullback Rotnei Anderson rushed for 191 yards and quarterback Jamelle Holieway added 123 more in leading top-ranked Oklahoma to a 29-10 Big Eight football victory Saturday over No. 12 Oklahoma State.

Anderson, a junior, entered the game in the first series after starter Lydell Carr suffered a sprained foot. Anderson wound up carrying 30 times as the Sooners piled up 413 yards on the ground.

The victory raised Coach Barry Switzer's career record to 146-25-4, allowing him to surpass Bud Wilkinson as the winningest coach in Oklahoma history.

Oklahoma is 9-0 overall and 5-0 in the Big Eight. Oklahoma State dropped to 7-2 and 3-2, with its other loss coming against No. 2 Nebraska.

Holieway — who left the game in the fourth quarter with a knee injury — and Anderson were the bright spots in a game that saw the Sooners move the ball well, but get stopped repeatedly by turnovers and an inspired Cowboy defense.

McManus, who completed only 12 of 27 passes for 139 yards, threw scoring passes to split end Herb Gainer of four yards in the first period and 19 in the second quarter and added a six-yarder in the final period to 6-foot-5, 255-pound tight end Pat Carter, who caught seven passes for 79 yards.

Fullback Dayne Williams started loss to Florida in 1984.

Auburn's Win Lyle kicked field goals of 32 yards in the second period and 31 in the third quarter. A 50-yard bomb from Burger to wide receiver Lawyer Tillman set up the first one and the second came after Alvin Briggs' second interception.

Briggs also intercepted a McManus pass at the Auburn 7 in the punt by Donaldson at his 13.

McPherson passed for two touchdowns, breaking the Syracuse season-passing record he set last year, and Daryl Johnston ran for two scores as the eighth-ranked Orangemen defeated Navy 34-10 on Saturday.

Syracuse, 9-0, broke open what had been a close football game with a field goal at the end of the first half and two quick touchdowns in the third quarter for a 27-3 lead.

McPherson, a senior, completed 11 of 20 passes for 197 yards before leaving the game midway through the fourth quarter. That gave him 1,884 yards for the season, breaking the Syracuse record of 1,827 yards he set last year.

Nebraska.....43
Iowa State.....3

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Keith Jones rushed for 240 yards and two touchdowns to lead second-ranked Nebraska to a 42-3 Big Eight Conference football victory over Iowa State on Saturday.

Jones' total was the fifth-best single-game rushing total in Nebraska history. The senior I-back didn't play in the fourth quarter.

The Cornhuskers, 9-0 on the season and 5-0 in the conference, had 604 yards rushing against the Cyclones, 2-7 and 1-4. NU's rushing total was the second-best single game total in school history.

Quarterback Steve Taylor started Nebraska's scoring parade with a 9-yard touchdown run. Fullback Micah Heibel added a 3-yard score in the first quarter.

Tyreese Knox, who rushed for 118 yards on 14 carries, scored from six yards out and Jones ran in from 27 yards in the second period for a 28-0 Nebraska halftime lead.

Jones also raced 69 yards to score on the second play of the third quarter.

Iowa State's Jeff Shudak kicked a 44-yard field goal in the third period for the Cyclones' only points.

Florida State.....34
Auburn.....6

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Danny McManus threw three touchdown passes and placekicker Derek Schmidt became the NCAA's all-time scoring leader with 370 points as fourth-ranked Florida State took advantage of five first-half turnovers and trounced No. 6 Auburn 34-6 Saturday.

It was the Seminoles' first victory at Auburn after nine losses and a tie — they trail the series 12-2-1 — and kept their national championship hopes alive with an 8-1 record, the only loss a 26-25 setback to third-ranked Miami.

Auburn, 7-1-1, suffered its worst loss since a 41-7 rout by Nebraska in 1982. The Tigers last failed to score a touchdown 37 games ago, in a 24-3 Florida State's onslaught with a 2-yard touchdown run after Auburn wide receiver Duke Donaldson fumbled at his 37 on the game's first play following a 17-yard pass from Jeff Burger and Florida State linebacker Terry Warren made the first of his two recoveries.

It was the 50th carry of the season and the 12th touchdown for Williams, the Seminoles' 230-pound short-yardage specialist. Williams also helped set up McManus' first touchdown pass to Gainer late in the first period with a 6-yard run on a fake punt.

Schmidt, a 5-9, 180-pound senior from Sarasota, Fla., kicked field goals of 36 and 27 yards in the second period — the first one after Warren recovered fullback Reggie Ware's fumble at the Auburn 25 — and McManus threw a 19-yard scoring pass to Gainer with 1:40 left in the half following an interception by strong safety Stan Shiver at the Auburn 37.

Schmidt, who also converted after Florida State's four touchdowns, has been successful on 67 of 96 field goal tries and 169 of 173 extra points in his career. Arizona State placekicker Luis Zendejas set the old mark of 368 points — 78 field goals, 134 conversions — from 1981-84.

Burger, ranked fourth nationally in passing efficiency, was intercepted twice in the final 2½ minutes of the half after the Tigers lost each of their three fumbles, including a muffed second period but the Seminoles still led 27-3 at halftime.

UCLA.....52
Oregon State.....17

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Tailback Eric Ball, playing in place of injured Gaston Green, rushed for 128 yards and three touchdowns Saturday as the seventh-ranked UCLA Bruins rolled over Oregon State 52-17 to remain unbeaten in the Pacific 10 Conference.

UCLA's Troy Aikman threw two touchdown passes to Willie Anderson before sitting out most of the second half.

The Bruins, who also were without starting fullback Mel Farr because of injury, had a 617-290 advantage in total offense.

Green, the all-time leading UCLA rusher, missed the game because of a pinched neck nerve.

Ball, the MVP as a freshman in the 1986 Rose Bowl who hadn't played in three weeks because of a shoulder injury, carried the ball 25 times and sat out most of the final quarter. He scored on runs of 1, 9 and 8 yards.

UCLA, 6-0 in the Pac-10 and 8-1 overall, turned the football game into a rout by scoring two touchdowns in a 27-second span in the final minute of the first half.

Notre Dame.....32
Boston College.....25

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Mark Green carried the ball eight consecutive times, the last a 2-yard touchdown run, to give No. 9 Notre Dame a come-from-behind 32-25 victory over Boston College on Saturday.

Green rushed for 152 yards, sparking a second-half ground attack that brought Notre Dame, 7-1, back from a 25-12 deficit.

The Irish rushed for 253 yards and four touchdowns in the second half, overcoming Eagle quarterback Mike Power's 203-yard passing effort.

Notre Dame flanker Tim Brown totaled 294 all-purpose yards on 16 plays.

Power hit Darren Flutie on a 31-yard touchdown play at 10:02 in the third quarter, then rushed for a 2-point conversion to give Boston College, 5-5, the 25-12 lead.

Georgia.....23
Florida.....10

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Tenth-ranked Georgia got three field goals after turnovers and Lars Tate scored two touchdowns on 1-yard runs as the Bulldogs downed No. 17 Florida 23-10 in a Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

Georgia's defense also shut down Florida's freshman running star, Emmitt Smith, holding the nation's second-leading rusher to 46 yards.

Ben Smith picked off two Kerwin Bell passes to set up field goals of 51 yards by Steve Crumley, a career-best, and 35 yards by John Kasay.

Crumley added a 21-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter following a fumble recovery by Terrie Webster at the Florida 34.

The victory lifted Georgia to 7-2 overall and 4-1 in the conference to stay alive in the SEC race.

Florida fell to 5-4 and 2-3, losing for the second straight week after being dumped 29-6 by Auburn last week.

Michigan St.....45
Purdue.....3

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Bobby McAllister passed for two touchdowns and ran for another as 15th-ranked Michigan State remained on track for its first Rose Bowl berth in 22 years with a 45-3 Big Ten football victory over Purdue Saturday.

McAllister ran 16 times for 70 yards and completed six of 11 passes for 126 yards, giving him 196 of the Spartans' 542 total yards.

Blake Ezor gained 151 yards on 23 carries Lorenzo White had 144 yards on 25 carries, marking the first time since 1967 the Spartans have had two running backs with more than 100 yards in a game. White and Ezor each scored touchdowns.

The victory, before a sun-drenched capacity crowd of 76,933 left the Spartans one-half game ahead of Indiana in the conference standings and set up next week's showdown when the Hoosiers visit Spartan Stadium. Indiana beat Illinois 34-22.

Michigan State is 5-0-1 in the Big Ten, 6-2-1 overall. Purdue slipped to 2-4 and 2-6-1.

Indiana.....34
Illinois.....22

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Dave Kramme, subbing for ailing quarterback Dave Schnell, ran for one touchdown and passed 58 yards to Ernie Jones for another Saturday, rallying 18th-ranked Indiana to a 34-22 Big Ten Conference football victory over Illinois.

Two of Indiana's four second-half touchdowns were set up with fumble recoveries by Mike Dumas on kickoffs, including the clinching touchdown on a 2-yard run by Anthony Thompson with 2:29 remaining.

Kramme got his first start of the season after Schnell, fifth in the nation in pass efficiency, was hospitalized Saturday morning and underwent surgery for appendicitis.

The Hoosiers, appearing rattled by the loss of Schnell, managed only 64 yards net offense in the first half and trailed 16-3 before Kramme completed four straight passes to the Illinois 1-yard line on their first possession of the third period.

Thompson ran in for his first touchdown, and Indiana regained possession moments later when Bill Reisert hit Darryl Usher on the kickoff and forced a fumble which Dumas recovered at the Illinois 5.

It took three plays for Indiana to score again, with Kramme running in for the touchdown from the 2.

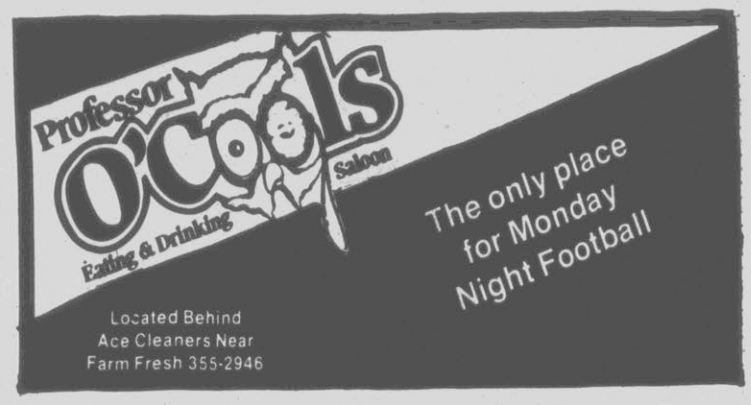
Kramme, who had 43 passing yards in the first half, finished with 228 yards, including the 58-yard scoring strike early in the fourth quarter to Jones. It was the 12th touchdown of the season for Jones, a school record.

The victory improved Indiana to 5-1 in the Big Ten and 7-2 overall. Illinois dropped to 2-3-1 and 3-5-1.

Tennessee.....41
Louisville.....10

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Freshman quarterback Sterling Henton scored on a 16-yard run and threw a 9-yard touchdown pass in his first collegiate start as 19th-ranked Tennessee beat Louisville 41-10 Saturday.

Freshman tailback Reggie Cobb and junior running back Keith Davis each scored for the Volunteers, who improvedtheir record to 6-2-1. The Cardinals fell to 3-6-1.



Sports Notes

Middies, Tribe Take X-Country Titles

WILLIAMSBURG — Navy captured the men's Colonial Athletic Association cross country championships Saturday at William & Mary while the hosting Lady Indians won the women's title.

East Carolina's men finished tied for seventh while the women took sixth.

Navy took top honors among the men with 39 points. James Madison was second with 48, followed by George Mason with 70. William & Mary was fourth with 81, followed by Richmond with 140, UNC Wilmington with 178 and ECU and American, tied with 212.

William & Mary's women led the way in their division with 30 points while Mason had 33, Madison had 77, Richmond had 128, UNCW had 135, ECU had 159 and American brought up the rear with 177. Navy did not field a women's team.

Mike McGhee led the ECU men with a 30th place finish in 26:02. He was followed by Matt Schweitzer, 36th in 27:07; Jim Layton, 47th in 28:32; Rob Rice, 49th in 28:46; Russell Williams, 50th in 28:57 and Joe Corley, 52nd in 30:22.

Kim Griffiths was the leading Lady Pirate, finishing 16th in 19:38. Terri Lynch took 29th in 20:26, followed by Dawn Tillson, 32nd in 20:37; Bibi Rosas, 40th in 21:10; Judy Wilson, 42nd in 21:19 and Kim Abernethy, 44th in 23:00.

The meet was the final outing for the Pirates this fall.

ECU Swimmers Earn A Split

The East Carolina swim team split a meet with James Madison Friday as the women took a 135-133 win while the men dropped a 121-96 decision.

In the men's meet, three ECU swimmers were disqualified for false starts.

"We swam up to our expectations for a season opener," said ECU coach Rick Kobe. "I was a little disappointed with the men's team, especially with the disqualifications. Our women's team performed very well, and we have to consider this win perhaps the biggest in the women's history at ECU."

JMU's women have won the last two Colonial Athletic Association swim titles.

The men are 0-1 while the women are 1-0.

ECU takes on Furman today at 12 p.m.

ECU Winners:

Men — 1,000 free: J.D. Lewis (9:54.00); 200 Free: John Farrell (1:46.07); 200 backstroke: Mark O'Brien (2:00.02); 500 Free: J.D. Lewis (4:51.35); 400 Free Relay (Pistorio, Christenson, A. Lewis, Callender) 3:21.54.

Women — 200 Medley Relay (Hodges, Bridgers, Philyaw, Hemmingway) 1:53.23; 100 Backstroke: Keller Hodges (1:04.76); 100 Breaststroke: Meredith Bridgers (1:07.66); 200 Butterfly: Robin Wicks (2:15.41); 1-Meter Diving: Sherry Campbell 236.00; 200 Breaststroke: Bridgers (2:26.69); 3-Meter Diving: Campbell 248.35 and 200 Individual Medley: Leslie Jo Wilson (2:16.51).

Holieway, Carr Injured, Out For Season

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma quarterback Jamelle Holieway and fullback Lydell Carr will miss the rest of the season due to knee injuries suffered Saturday, Coach Barry Switzer said.

Holieway, a junior, injured his left knee while on a fourth-quarter run in the top-ranked Sooners' 29-10 victory over No. 12 Oklahoma State.

He left the game with assistance from trainers after having run for 123 yards on 18 carries.

Carr, a senior, left the game after the first series. He had carried twice for 27 yards.

"We lost two great players for the season. Jamelle Holieway will be operated on, and Lydell Carr has ligament damage and will be in a cast for the rest of the season," said Switzer.

"Obviously, it affects our football team when you lose two great players. We have to pull together as a team. We've got some young, inexperienced talented players that I believe in and they believe in themselves," he said.

Switzer said Holieway will be replaced by freshman Charles Thompson, who has played extensively this season as a backup. Carr's place will be taken by Rotnei Anderson, who rushed for 191 on 30 carries in Saturday's victory.

Holieway is the Sooners' leading rusher this season with 919 yards and Carr is second with 674. Oklahoma is unbeaten in nine games this season.

O's Not Looking At Robinson

BALTIMORE (AP) — Orioles Coach Frank Robinson says he no longer is being considered a candidate for general manager of the team, but has spoken to owner Edward Bennett Williams about another front-office job, which he probably will accept.

Robinson said Friday the chances were "very, very slim" he would turn down the job Williams had talked about when the two met Wednesday in Washington.

"We talked about a lot of things," Robinson said. "We talked about how I thought things should be run."

Robinson said Williams told him an announcement could be made this week.

According to sources cited by The Sun and Evening Sun, Williams would like his next general manager to be Roland Hemond, a former White Sox general manager who currently works for the major-league scouting bureau.

USM Falls To 1-AA Opponent

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Stan Humphries threw for 233 yards and two touchdowns to give Northeast Louisiana a 34-24 college football upset victory over Southern Mississippi Saturday.

The last time the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I-AA school downed a Division I-A opponent was a 7-6 victory over Southwest Louisiana in 1984.

Humphries found tailback Jeff Steele for the 7-2 Indians' first score. Then Ted Garcia kicked a 32-yard field goal to put the Indians ahead 10-0.

But the 5-4 Golden Eagles came back in the second quarter behind the arm of quarterback Brett Favre and tailback Shelton Gandy. Gandy found the end zone in the second quarter to cut the Northeast Louisiana lead to 10-7. Chris Seroka followed up with a 55-yard field goal to tie the game at 10-all.

Within 16 seconds, Southern Mississippi got the ball back and scored again to take a 17-10 lead as Favre found Chris McGee for a 29-yard touchdown pass.

Northeast Louisiana tied the score a 17-all before the end of the half. The Indians faked a 46-yard field goal attempt as Charles Andrews passed to Kevin Duhe for a 20-yard gain to the Southern Mississippi 10-yardline. That set up Humphries' 5-yard touchdown pass to Tommy Jackson.

The Indians took charge again in the second half as Humphries scored on an 8-yard run in the third quarter.

In the fourth quarter, the Indians' had a 51-yard field goal on the strong leg of Ted Garcia and Humphries' second rushing touchdown from 13 yards out. That put the Indians up 34-17.

Southern Mississippi made the final score as James Henry returned a punt 89 yards for a touchdown.

Appalachian St.....17
Marshall.....10

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Todd Payton tossed a 35-yard touchdown pass to Sam Wesley and Tim Sanders rushed for another score as Appalachian State held off Marshall for a 17-10 victory Saturday to clinch the Southern Conference football title.

Sanders' 3-yard touchdown run put the Mountaineers up 7-0 and the Payton-to-Wesley combination made it 14-0, but Marshall used a 22-yard touchdown pass from Tony Peterson to Keith Baxter to pull within 14-7 at halftime.

Bjorn Nittmo hit a 46-yard field goal with 14:12 left to give Appalachian State a 17-7 advantage, but Marshall's Brian Mitchell booted a 37-yard field goal with 2:14 to go to make it 17-10.

Marshall recovered the ensuing onside kickoff at the Mountaineers' 47-yard line, but the Appalachian State defense held Peterson to four incomplete passes to close out the game.

Appalachian State entered the game with a one-game advantage over Marshall and Western Carolina in the conference race. The Catamounts lost to Tennessee-Chattanooga and the Mountaineers clinched the crown with their victory. Appalachian State improved to 7-2 with a 5-0 league mark while Marshall fell to 6-4 and 3-2. Appalachian State's last two games are at The Citadel and at Western Carolina. Marshall finishes its regular season at home against Western Carolina next week.

Peterson set a Southern Conference record for passing yardage with 3,048 and for total offense with 2,962 including a loss of 86 yards on 76 rushes.

Michigan.....30
Minnesota.....20

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Leroy Hoard and Jamie Morris scored within an 89-second span of the third quarter Saturday, rallying Michigan from a 17-7 deficit to a 30-20 Big Ten victory over Minnesota.

Morris, who carried 29 times for 149 yards, has a conference-leading 1,203 yards this season. His career totals of 743 carries for 3,893 yards moved him past Butch Woolfolk into first place on Michigan's all-time rushing list.

Minnesota, 5-4 overall and 2-4 in the conference after its fourth straight loss, was driving for what could have been a clinching score in the third quarter. But Darrell Thompson — who earlier had a Big Ten-record 98-yard touchdown run — was stopped an inch short on fourth-and-1 from Michigan's 23 by linebacker J.J. Grant.

Michigan, 6-3 and 4-2, then marched 77 yards in 12 plays, culminating in Morris' 9-yard touchdown run. Demetrius Brown's two-point conversion pass to Chris Calloway pulled the Wolverines within 17-15 with 2:47 left in the third.

On the ensuing kickoff, Pat Tinglehoff fumbled when hit by Carlitos Bostic and the ball was recovered at the Minnesota 23 by Rick Hassel. Hoard ran for 13 yards on first down and, three plays later, dove over from the 1. Brown's conversion pass to Tripp Welborne put Michigan ahead 23-17.

After Chip Lohmiller's 49-yard field goal made it 23-20, Brown hit Calloway with a 36-yard touchdown pass.

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Mark Porter's 38-yard field goal with no time left was blocked by Kansas Saturday, leaving winless Kansas State and lowly Kansas locked in a mistake-filled 17-17 tie.

Kansas State, hoping to break a 13-game losing streak, recovered a fumble by Kansas quarterback Kevin Verdugo with 36 seconds left. The two hapless squads exchanged penalties, then Porter lined up for his 38-yarder with :03 to go.

The sloppily played game left Kansas State with an 0-8-1 record and Kansas 1-7-1.

Vanderbilt.....38

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vanderbilt quarterback Eric Jones passed for four touchdowns and compiled 345 yards of total offense Saturday to lead the Commodores to a 38-29 Southeastern Conference football victory over Kentucky.

Jones passed for 244 yards and rushed for 101 yards as the Commodores snapped an 11-game losing streak within the conference.

The Commodores, now 3-6 overall and 1-4 in the league, last won a SEC contest when they downed Kentucky 31-24 in 1985.

Pitt.....17
Rutgers.....0

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Craig Heyward rushed for a season-high 175 yards and a touchdown, freshman quarterback Darnell Dickerson ran 6 yards for another score and the Pitt defense dominated Rutgers on Saturday as the Panthers rolled to a 17-0 victory over the Scarlet Knights.

With scouts from the Peach, Sun and Independence bowls in attendance, Pitt raised its record to 6-3 and virtually ended the Scarlet Knights' bowl hopes by dropping them to 5-4.

The Tigers outgained the Tar Heels 267-129 on the ground before 53,115 people — the fourth largest crowd in Kenan Stadium's 60-year history.

Clemson defensive right tackle Michael Dean Perry recorded two tackles for losses, bringing his career total within one of brother William's ACC record of 60.

Four Defending Champs Are Back Again

By The Associated Press

All four defending state champions will try to defend their titles when the first round of the NCHSAA football playoffs begin Friday night.

Fayetteville 71st, the defending 4-A champion, along with 3-A Shelby, two-time defending 2-A titlest Lexington and 1-A Murphy will attempt to protect their crowns.

Top-ranked Greensboro Page, 10-0, heads a list of seven undefeated 4-A teams in the playoffs. The Pirates have won or shared four of the last seven 4-A championships.

Along with Page, which hosts 8-2 South Stokes, Greenville Rose, Garner, Northern Durham, Kannapolis Brown, Charlotte Harding and Wilmington New Hanover head into the playoffs with perfect marks.

Shelby, 9-1, will host the team with the worst record in the playoffs — 2-8 Skyland Roberson. Shelby defeated this season's top-ranked and undefeated team — Havelock — 9-6 last season to gain the title.

Lexington, a 35-7 winner over Ahoskie last season, hosts 8-2 South Stanly in the 2-A playoffs.

Meanwhile, top-ranked Whiteville will have a tough battle when it hosts 9-1 Wallace-Rose Hill.

Top-ranked Murphy saw its 24-game winning streak snapped Friday night by Swain County, but still comes into the 1-A playoffs with a strong 9-1 record. The Bulldogs host 6-4 Hayesville.

Tabor City, which lost 27-3 to Murphy in the 1-A championship last season, will travel and play Red Springs, 10-0.

Undefeated Swain, the 1985 champion, will host Tryon, 5-5.

The only pairings yet decided were from the Blue Ridge Conference, where a ruling will be made later in the week over whether Elkin allegedly used an ineligible player, NCHSAA officials said.

The following are the first-round pairings for the 1987 North Carolina High School Athletic Association state footall playoffs. NOTE: Teams for 1-A Blue Ridge Conference have not been decided.

Penn State Slips By Terps

BALTIMORE (AP) — Penn State's 23rd straight victory over Maryland, no matter how difficult it looked, was good enough for Coach Joe Paterno.

Dwayne Downing returned an interception 38 yards for a touchdown and Blair Thomas ran 58 yards for another score as the 16th-ranked Nittany Lions defeated Maryland 21-16 Saturday. "I think our defense is getting better," Paterno said. "I thought the offense did the job in the second half against a team that was behind and blitzing a lot.

"Overall, it was a good game for us."

Paterno was satisfied even though the Nittany Lions couldn't put the Terps away.

"Maryland is a good football team," he said. "They've got good people, they've beaten some good teams, and got beat by some extraordinarily good teams like Miami. ... I knew we'd have a tough football game."

With Penn State trailing 6-0 in the second quarter, Downing picked off a Neil O'Donnell pass near the left sideline, raced across the field, breaking three tackles before diving into the end zone, putting the Nittany Lions ahead to stay with 10:37 left in the first half.

"Downing's play was big, but I'm not a big believer in momentum," Paterno said. "... A good football team plays 60 minutes."

The Nittany Lions led 14-9 when Thomas scored with 7:43 left to play, going around left end and racing untouched into the end zone. The junior halfback gained 138 yards on 25 carries and now has 1,120 yards rushing on the season.

Maryland got within 21-16 when Dan Henning came off the bench to complete an 18-yard touchdown pass to James Milling on a fourth-and-goal with 5:01 to play.

"It's the same old story for the last 24, 25, or 26 years," Krivak said. "It doesn't make it any easier for us."

Tech's Gamble Pays Off For Cavs In 23-14 Win

ATLANTA (AP) — Virginia Coach George Welsh said a fourth-down Georgia Tech gamble that failed late in the game may have been the key play in the Cavaliers' 23-14 victory Saturday that also ended a season-long losing streak on the road.

Cavaliers' quarterback Scott Secules ran for one touchdown and passed for another and Mark Inderlied kicked three field goals Saturday to supply the offensive firepower in the Atlantic Coast Conference triumph.

Virginia, however, was clinging to a 20-14 lead with 7:05 left after Tech had driven 45 yards to the Cavaliers' 28-yard line and went for the first down on a fourth-and-4 situation.

The defense pressured Tech's Darrell Gast, whose pass sailed incomplete. Virginia took over and sealed the victory with Inderlied's third field goal of the game, a 26-yarder with 3:23 left.

"There's always five or six (key plays) in a game when it's close, going down to the end," said Welsh."Who knows? I think that fourth down play that we stopped them on, saved me from sweating anyway."

It was Virginia's first road victory after four losses this year, six overall dating back to last season's 30-28 victory over Wake Forest.

Despite Tech's fourth straight loss, which dropped the Yellow Jackets to 2-7 on the season and 0-5 in the ACC, Welsh said it was not easy.

"That's not a poor football team. They're just in one of those streaks where sometimes you just can't win," he said.

"It was a very frustrating game," said Tech Coach Bobby Ross. "I thought there were some good things that we did. I thought we played better football than what we've been playing."

Secules scored on a 1-yard sneak-in the opening quarter and connected on a 5-yard TD toss to Tim Finkleston in the third period after the Yellow Jackets had taken a 14-10 lead.

Inderlied had field goals of 45 yards in the second quarter and a 31-yarder in the final period for the 5-4 Cavaliers, 3-2 in the ACC.

Tech got touchdowns on a 22-yard pass from Gast to Steve Davenport in the opening period and Richard Hills scored on a 2-yard run in the third period.

Secules connected on 17 of 25 passes for 164 yards and Wilson had 125 yards rushing on 22 attempts for the Cavaliers.

Gast hit on 13 of 26 passes for 170 yards for Tech. Richard Hills had 52 yards on the ground in 19 attempts and freshman fullack Stefen Scotton also had 52 yards on nine carries.

Badgers Pull Off Surprise Win Over Buckeyes, 26-24

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Todd Gregoire kicked four field goals and Wisconsin took advantage of six second-half Ohio State turnovers Saturday to rally past the stunned Buckeyes for a 26-24 Big Ten football victory.

Gregoire's 41-yard field goal with 10:49 left followed a pass interception by the Badgers' Pete Nowka and gave Wisconsin, 3-6, a 26-24 lead en route to its first Big Ten victory in six league games this season.

Ohio State, 5-3-1 and 3-3 in the league, had a chance to regain the lead but Matt Frantz missed a 22-yard field goal with 6:57 left.

Ohio State got the ball back again but Wisconsin's Don Davey picked off a batted pass with just over a minute left.

Colorado.....27
Missouri.....10

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Fullback Erich Kissick rushed for 129 yards and a touchdown, and halfback J.J. Flannigan romped 53 yards for another score as Colorado's wishbone ground out a 27-10 Big Eight football triumph over Missouri on Saturday.

The Buffaloes, 6-3 overall and 3-2 in the conference, also used a trick play — a pass by spli end Lance Carl to halfback Eric Bieniemy on what started out as a reverse — to score just before the half, giving them a commanding 24-3 lead.

The loss dropped the Tigers to 4-5 overall and 2-3 in the Big Eight.

Iowa 52
Northwestern 24

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Chuck Hartlieb threw a Big Ten record seven touchdown passes — four of them, including a 95-yard bomb, went to Quinn Early — as Iowa romped to a 52-24 victory Saturday over Northwestern.

Hartlieb completed 25 of 32 passes for 471 yards. His seven touchdown passes eclipsed the conference record of six shared by Iowa's Chuck Long and Illinois' Dave Wilson.

Early caught 10 passes for a Big Ten record of 256 yards, breaking the mark of 252 yards by Al Toon of Wisconsin in 1983. He also caught touchdown passes of 44, 35 and 9 yards. Hartlieb's other touchdown passes were for 22 and 7 yards to Travis Watkins and 7 yards to David Hudson.

Hartlieb, a senior from nearby Woodstock, Ill., left the game with more than five minutes to play in the third quarter after completing his 95-yard touchdown pass to Early, who split two defenders, caught the ball his own 45 and ran the remaining 55 yards without a Wildcat in pursuit.

Brigham Young.....38
San Diego St.....21

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Todd Santos set an NCAA Division I record for career passing yardage Saturday, but it wasn't enough as Brigham Young defeated San Diego State 38-21 in a Western Athletic Football game.

Santos, a Mormon from Selma, Calif., broke the record set last season by Fresno State's Kevin Sweeney against the school that wouldn't give him a scholarship. But BYU's Sean Covey passed for two touchdowns and ran for another to help the Cougars keep their WAC title hopes alive.

The victory was sweet revenge for BYU, which lost its bid for an 11th straight conference championship with a 10-3 loss at San Diego last year.

Vikings Win, 23-8, Earn Berth

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — With a playoff spot on the line, D.H. Conley coach Steve Craft said he knew his team would have to take advantage of the big play, and the Vikings heeded their coach's advice, 23-8.

Conley turned three Mariner turnovers into touchdowns, including a blocked punt in the first quarter that put the Vikings ahead early.

"We took advantage of the scoring opportunities they gave us early on," Craft said. "Midway through the third quarter, we got a couple of more breaks. We weren't able to capitalize but we kept them in the shadow of the goal line."

But all other things aside, it was the blocked punt that keyed the game, according to Craft.

The Mariners had driven to the their own 41 but stalled and faced a fourth-and-one situation in the closing minutes of the first quarter.

Conley's Chuckie Gardner broke throught to block the kick by Doy Rhue, recovered it and pitched it to teammate Ardee Anderson who returned it to the East Carteret 9.

Two plays later quarterback Bronswell Patrick connected with Robert Staton on a 8-yard scoring play. Hall Dunn kicked the point after to make it 7-0.

"The blocked punt was really an early key play that set the tone in our favor," Craft said. "Probably, the blocked punt was the biggest play in the ballgame."

East Carteret coach George Viereck agreed.

"It was really big," he said. "It set the tone. We got behind and had to play catchup."

And that was a game the Mariners didn't play well. They drove the ball effectively enough on the ground but every time quarterback Michael Way tried to pass it, it ended up in disaster.

The first of his four interceptions, this one by Derrick Credle, gave Conley a first and 10 at the Mariner 28. From there, the Vikings drove right down the field with Anthony Perry blowing in from 17 yards away for the score. Patrick faked the kick on the point after and took it in himself to make it 15-8.

Still, East Carteret was far from out of the game after that as the Mariners put together a 60-yard drive in the closing minutes of the first half that was climaxed by Greg Frazier's 2-yard run with 20 seconds to go before halftime. Andre Reed then ran in the two-point conversion to make it 15-8.

Craft said the late score could have been a big swing in momentum, but his seniors didn't let that happen.

"We were concerned," he said. "(But) a little situation happened outside the lockerroom after halftime: our seniors took over."

The Mariners then came out in the second half and drove the ball all the way down to the Conley 14 but an illegal procedure call killed the drive and Jimmie Fodrie came on to attempt a 32-yard field goal.

Fodrie faked the kick and rolled back looking for a receiver but instead found the Vikings' Perry over the middle. Perry took the interception back to the Mariner 10.

But the Vikings failed to score from the three as East Carteret held on four downs to regain possession.

But Craft said that really didn't concern him because the turn of events still ruined the Mariners' best field possession of the second half.

"I didn't feel bad, the kids didn't feel bad, because we had stressed field position all week," Craft said. "Their passing game was not their strong point and we didn't think they could drive 90 yards, getting five yards at a pop."

And the strategy worked. East Carteret moved to its own 25 before stalling and were forced to punt.

Conley failed to score but kept the Mariners in their own end of the field.

"I felt like it had come around in the third quarter. We came out and drove it well," Viereck said. "But with the long drives, they just had the field position."

With 6:51 remaining, the Mariners tried to pass again and for the third consecutive time, it was a catastrophe. Patrick intercepted Way's pass and returned it to East Carteret 41.

Conley quickly drove down the field for the score as Patrick hit Staton on a third and goal at the three with a quick slant. Patrick then added the two point conversion on a pass to Martin Patrick to make it 23-8.

Receiving: Staton 3-13, Credle 1-45

Again, a Mariner miscue turned into a big play.

"That (the big play) was a big key," Patrick said. "We were really prepared. We worked hard in practice all week. We wanted it more than they did. It's especially satisfying. It shows what we can do."

It was Patrick's second scoring toss of the night as he completed six of 12 attempts for 81 yards.

The Vikings had failed to score twice before in the second half after driving into scoring territory as their run attempts on fourth down plays were stuffed both times. On the final score, they tried something different.

"We saw them playing deep," Patrick said. "I told Coach Craft that I could hit him (Staton)."

For his part, Craft said he is as comfortable with that type of play as he is with a running play.

"Our number one goal in the short passing game is to be as consistent as when we run the fullback," he said.

"They stopped us at the goal line (earlier) and we made up our mind that if we got back down there, we'd go for the field goal or go to the short passes."

Conley finishes 7-3 overall and 4-2 in the conference. East Carteret finishes 6-4, 4-3.

Year Makes Big Difference

What a difference a year makes.

Last year at this time, the Vikings were finishing up a disappointing 2-8 year in a season in which they were picked to challenge for the Coastal Conference title.

And while the players are virtually the same this season the results under first-year coach Steve Craft aren't. With the Vikings' 23-8 win over East Carteret Friday, they advance to the state 3-A playoffs at Tarboro Friday.

"These kids have a lot of heart. They set a goal on the third of August 3rd to go to the party," Craft said.

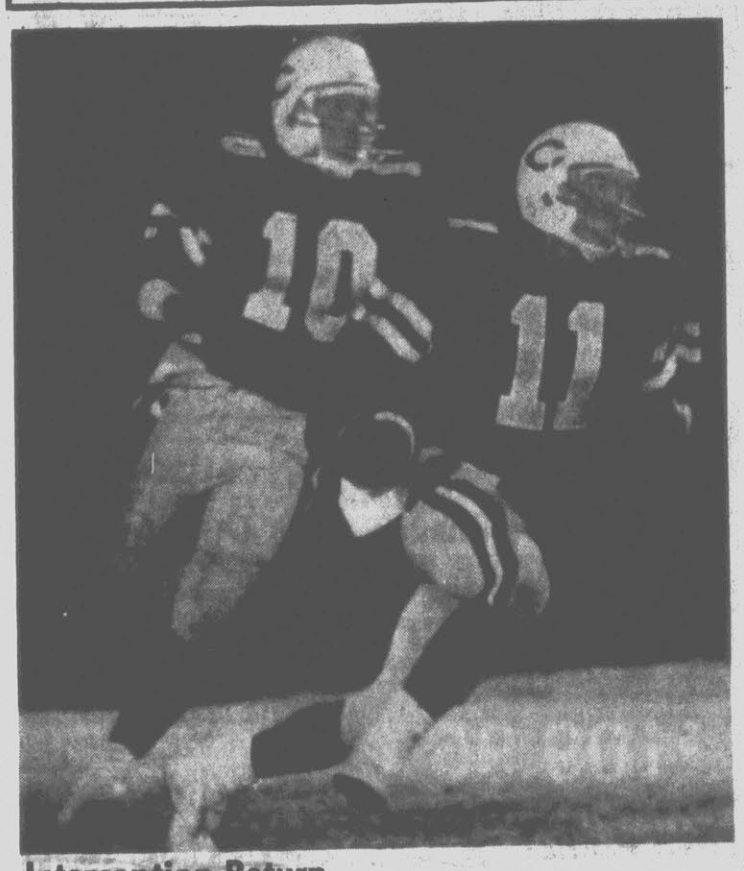
"Personally, it's satisfying to me, but that's not important. The players are happy. The program is headed in the right direction. The main thing the staff decided was we wanted the kids to get a good taste of football in their mouths in 11 weeks. It's not what we've done, it's what the kids have done."

And they did it as they have all year against a bigger opponent.

"Our kids are fairly quick," Craft said. "We were as strong as they were, we just weren't as big. We felt all week it would be a battle of strength against quickness."

Well, quickness won. The Vikings took advantage of Mariner mistakes, turning three turnovers into scores.

"Our basic defensive gameplan was to contain their running game and force them to throw and hope they would make some mistakes," Craft said.



Interception Return

D.H. Conley defensive back Derrick Credle (11) returns the first of his two interceptions of East Carteret quarterback Michael Way on the night. In the background is teammate Bronswell Patrick. Credle returned this theft 16 yards to set up a score for the Vikings in their 23-8 win over the Mariners that locked up a playoff spot. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Smith May Run

LILLINGTON (AP) — Former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion James "Bonecrusher" Smith is considering a bout in the political ring.

Smith said he is "leaning 60-40" toward running for the Harnett County Board of Commissioners next year. He said he would make a final decision in about a month.

"I'm just trying to get involved in what's happening in the county," said Smith, who lives near the Old Farm community. "I have always represented Harnett County, Cumberland County and North Carolina in the ring, and I would like to continue to work for the people and do the best I can for North Carolina."

Smith, 34, said he sees politics as an appealing way to keep his profile high.

"I definitely struggled in the boxing ring, and put forth a lot of effort to win the title and continue in the limelight," Smith said in a telephone interview with The Fayetteville Observer Wednesday.

Shaky Rose Nips Eagles, 21-14

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School dodged a bullet Friday night and wrapped up a perfect regular season with a 21-14 football victory over Northeastern High School.

The Rampants, trailing twice in the game, rallied from behind and finally pulled out the hard-fought victory in the third period, but had to hang on through the final minutes of play to ensure the win.

Rose, which won the Big East Conference title last week with a victory over Wilson Hunt, needed this one only to put together its first unbeaten season in 20 years and found the going tough.

"I was worried all week," Rose Coach Chip Williams said. "I think it can be said that we were a little complacent."

Then, he added, "Maybe that's not the right word, but we certainly weren't as sharp as we were against Hunt."

Northeastern scored the first two times it touched the ball, with quarterback Lawrence Winslow scoring on a 17-yard keeper, and second-string fullback James White dashing 39 yards for the other.

Sandwiched between was a 1-yard run by Timmy Moore that helped give Rose a temporary 7-6 lead. Then, after the second Eagle score, Rexter Williams returned the kickoff 93 yards for the tying score.

It remained that way until the third quarter, when quarterback Tom Moye hit Malcom Wilson on a 17-yard scoring toss that ended the game's scoring.

"Their size definitely hurt us in our inside game. They took that completely away. In some cases, they outweighed us by over 100 pounds on the line. Their defense is big and they come at you.

Once in fact, one bruising tackle made it untouched through the line to smack into Moore just milliseconds after he received the handoff. "That was the toughest hit I've had this year," Moore admitted.

"I'm just tickled to death the way we put the game back together in the second half," Williams said. Rose, after giving up 144 yards of offense to the Eagles, held them to just 38 yards in the second. "And we moved the ball by mixing things up. Billy Carr caught the ball well for us on a couple of key plays, and Malcolm Wilson did too, especially with his touchdown catch. Tom (Moye) called that one. He saw that it was open and checked off on it."

Williams said that Rexter Williams' kickoff return was the best of the season. "Our front line hasn't been coming back to the ball like it should until tonight," the coach said. "But all five of them, Torrence Greene, Steve Tripp, Dwight McKinney, Kevin Goodrich and Andy Smith, all did a good job. Rexter saw the hole and hit it at full speed. That was the key to the run."

And being 10-0. "I'm relieved. This has been an awfully tough week," Williams said.

Rose took the initial kickoff in the game, but quickly bogged down and punted away. Northeastern took over on its own 16 and fought for a first down at the 26. Five yards later, on second down, Troy McCullum broke away over right tackle and raced 51 yards before he was pulled down at the Rose 18.

After a yard gain on first down, Winslow kept the ball on the option around the left side, found no one covering him and dashed into the end zone from 17 yards out with 4:55 left in the quarter. Javis Gibbs' kick, however, just missed to the left, leaving Northeastern up 6-0.

Rose then mounted its first touchdown drive, moving from its own 26. Moore got things going with a 30-yard carry from his own 31 to the Eagle 39. Moye hit John Ebron for 10 more and Moore got away for 16 more to the five.

Three plays later, he stretched into the end zone from the one for the score on the first play on the second quarter. Kevin Goodrich made the first of three PAT kicks for a 7-6 lead with 11:54 left in the half.

It took Northeastern only six plays to get back into it. The first five moved it from the Eagle 37 to the Rose 39, and from there, White, who joined the varsity from the JV just a week ago, broke around the right side to race the rest of the way for the score. Winslow ran over the PAT, giving Northeastern a 14-7 lead with 8:32 left in the period.

But it took Rose only 20 seconds to tie it up. Williams pulled in the kickoff on his own seven, went straight up the middle, cut to his left, then back to the right to go the distance. Goodrich's kick made it 14-14 and it stayed that way the rest of the half.

Northeastern, however, did manage a threat before the half ended, driving to the Rampant 26 before a 45-yard field goal attempt by Gibbs fell short. Then, in the closing seconds of the half, a fumble by Rose at the 50, followed by a pass interference call against Rose, moved the ball back to the 29 before a sack ended that threat.

Late in the third period, Rose got off on another scoring drive to finally break the deadlock. Taking over at the Rampant 40 following a punt, Rose used only seven plays. On first down, Moye hit Carr for 12 yards, then went to Wilson for 20 more to the Northeastern 28. On third and nine, Moye hit Carr again for the first down at the 18, and another yard later, Moye called Wilson's number from the 17 for the touchdown pass. Goodrich again was good for a 21-14 lead with 33 seconds left in the quarter.

Both teams had minor threats on their next possessions, and late in the half, Northeastern got it back at its own 40 after a fumbled punt by Rose, moving to the Rose 45 before being stopped once again.

Rose then ran out the clock to record victory number 10 — and a perfect regular season.

The Rampants will now move into the state 4-A playoffs, hosting New Bern on Friday at 8 p.m. at Daniels Field.

Swain Ends Murphy Win Streak With 27-23 Score

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

In a battle of the state's top two 1-A high school football teams, Robbie Brown scored on a 2-yard run late in the fourth quarter to lift Swain County past defending state champion Murphy 27-23, snapping the Bulldogs' 24-game winning streak.

On a Friday night of upsets, the state's three other top-ranked teams managed to escape with impressive victories to polish off undefeated regular seasons.

Greensboro Page, the top-ranked 4-A team, rolled to a 42-13 victory over Northr Forsyth, while 3-A Havelock downed West Craven 19-0 and 2-A Whiteville destroyed North Brunswick 55-0. All three finished 10-0 heading into the North Carolina High School Athletic Association playoffs next Friday night.

The big matchup of the evening was in Bryson City, where Swain captured the Smoky Mountain Conference crown. Brown scored his TD with 5:35 remaining and Greg Taylor intercepted a pass from Murphy quarterback Jeff Martin with 34 seconds left to seal the victory.

In Winston-Salem, Tony Patterson scored three touchdowns as Page completed their undefeated regular season. Patterson scored on runs of 5, 2, and 16 yards, while Frank Wilder added another touchdown on a 1-yard run.

Page rolled up 254 yards rushing and 72 more passing. The Pirate defenders limited North Forsyth to just 90 yards total offense.

Meanwhile, with more than 15,000 people looking on in Gastonia, Hunter Huss upset No. 3 and previously unbeaten Ashbrook 14-7. Junior tailback Pete Lipscomb scored on runs of 6 and 1 yards, including the game-winner with 2:09 remaining. The loss snaps Ashbrook's 22-game regular-season winning streak.

Along with Page and Garner, which finished its regular season last week, five other 4-A teams finished the regular season with perfect 10-0 marks — Wilmington New Hanover, Greenville Rose, Kannapolis Brown, Northern Durham and Charlotte Harding.

In 3-A, top-ranked Havelock got two touchdowns from quarterback Ledell George and limited West Craven to 95 total yards in its shutout victory.

Second-ranked Burlington Cummings — a 34-0 winner over Bartlett Yancey — and No. 4 North Iredell — a 24-21 winner over West Iredell — finished the regular season with 10-0 slates.

Defending 3-A state champion and No. 3 Shelby warmed up for its title defense with a 61-0 thrashing of Chase.

High Point Central surprised No. 7 Asheboro with a 10-9 victory, holding running back Elliott Armstrong to under 100 yards for only the second time this season.

Four of the top 2-A teams lost Friday night, including No. 2 Ahoskie, a 15-12 loser to No. 5 Edenton Holmes.

Holmes, along with top-ranked Whiteville and No. 3 Newton-Conover are 10-0.

Both No. 6 Fuquay-Varina and No. 7 East Duplin saw their undefeated seasons go down the drain with close losses. Fuquay-Varina lost 20-17 to Clayton, while Warsaw Kenan edged East Duplin 14-7 in overtime.

In a battle of two 8-1 teams going into the contest, Bunker Hill snuck by No. 9 Maiden 24-22 in overtime. Paul James scored from 10 yards out on the first play of overtime and Mark Conner passed to Neil Lortz for a two-point conversion to give Bunker Hill a 24-16 lead. Maiden, aided by a pass interference penalty on a third-and-22 play, scored on a 6-yard run by Holloway, who rushed for 240 yards. However, Holloway was stopped 1 yard short on the two-point conversion attempt.

Red Springs joined Swain County as the only two 10-0 teams from the 1-A ranks heading into the playoffs after downing Orrum 35-0.

Jordan-Matthews upset No. 5 North Moore 9-7, while Chocowinity defeated No. 7 Bath 34-28 in a contest.

Hunter Paces Panthers By Pamlico For Top Spot

BAYBORO — Calvin Hunter closed the regular season in fine fashion, accumulating 196 yards in total offense as playoff-bound North Pitt rolled over Pamlico County, 25-6, Friday in Eastern Plains Conference football action.

Hunter carried the ball 12 times for 108 yards and threw for 88 more as he completed six of seven passes.

He started off the scoring in the first quarter, hitting tight end Ashley Sheppard with a 5-yard scoring pass. The point-after kick failed to leave it at 6-0.

Hunter added a 1-yard touchdown run in the second quarter. His pass attempt on the two-point conversion failed but North Pitt still led, 12-0.

Michael Daniels made it 18-0 before halftime with a 7-yard scoring run. The run failed on the two-point conversion try.

North Pitt's final score came on a 3-yard run by Collier Mullins. Derek Knox added the point-after kick to make it 25-0

With 19 seconds left in the game, Pamlico finally got on the scoreboard as Sandy Long scored on a 12-yard pass from Terrance Tatum. The run on the two point conversion failed to make it 25-6.

With the win, North Pitt ties Ayden-Grifton for the EPC title for the second year in a row and takes the number one-seed for the conference by virtue of its 16-14 win over the Chargers.

The Panthers will take on the number-three team from the Capital Area 2-A, Zebulon.

Tatum ended the game with 104 yards rushing on 17 carries.

Sheppard led the North Pitt defense with six solo tackles and 10 assists.

North Pitt finishes 6-3-1 and 5-1 in the EPC.

Farmville Halts Plymouth As Conversion Falls Short

FARMVILLE — Farmville stuffed Plymouth on a two-point conversion try in the final seconds of the game to prevent a tie and take a 20-18 non-conference win over the Vikings Friday.

Farmville had gone ahead 20-12 with 4:55 remaining on a 10-yard pass from Mack Davis to Morris Foreman, but the two-point conversion pass failed.

The Vikings came back to put themselves in position to tie as Chris Cherry caught a 10-yard pass from Shawn Walker with 25 seconds remaining. But the Jaguars stopped Plymouth on the ensuing conversion try.

Gary Moore had 144 yards rushing on 26 carries to lead the Jaguars, who finish the regular season at 7-3.

Plymouth went ahead early as Tim Collins scored on a 18-yard run with 1:41 left in the first quarter. The extra-point kick failed.

Farmville came back to take the lead with 9:05 to go in the half as Moore hit Elvis McFee on a 10-yard halfback option pass. Alexander Daniels added the point-after kick to make it 7-6.

Farmville moved out to a 14-6 lead in the early part of the fourth quarter as Moore ran it in from a yard out. Daniels kicked the extra point.

Plymouth drew within 14-12 on Gerald Puckett's 1-yard run but again, the Vikings were unable to get the conversion.

Farmville advances to play Edenton away in the first round of the state 2-A playoffs.

Blount, Harper Pace Chargers

PIKEVILLE — Eric Blount and Aaron Harper each scored two touchdowns to lead Ayden-Grifton to a 41-6 romp over Charles B. Aycock and a share of the Eastern Plains Conference football championship Friday night.

The Chargers, who finish the year with an 8-2 overall record, knotted with North Pitt for the title as both finished 5-1 in the EPC. The Chargers, however, will take the league's second seeded berth in the 2-A State Playoffs, having lost to North Pitt in their meeting this year.

Blount, Harper and Tony Reaves all piled up over 100 yards as the Chargers rushed for 424 yards on the night. Blount finished with 12 carries for 165 yards while Harper had 15 for 117 and Reaves, nine for 105. Blount also returned a kickoff 52 yards to give him 217 all-purpose yards on the night.

Aycock's Corey Dickerson rushed 27 times for 148 yards to lead the Falcon offense.

Darryl Moye got the Charger scoring going with a 1-yard plunge in the opening period for a 6-0 lead.

Ayden-Grifton then added two more touchdowns in the second period to run the lead to 18-0 by intermission. Blount scored both of his TDs in the quarter, one on a 56-yard scamper, and the other on a 14-yard run.

Harper scored his two back-to-back in the third quarter when the Chargers put the game out of reach. His first was a 19-yard run, with Blount passing to Moye on the PAT.

The second came on a 3-yard run, and Harper also ran in the PAT, raising the score to 34-0.

Aycock finally broke the ice as Dickerson scored from six yards away.

Ayden-Grifton closed out the scoring as Reaves scored on a 10-yard rip. George Fuller added the PAT kick for the final margin.

The Chargers will now play host to the number two team from the Northeastern Conference, Ahoskie, on Friday.

Pam Pack, Conley Advance In Meet

RALEIGH — Washington High School's girls captured the 3-A Eastern regional cross-country meet, while the boys' team finished fourth Friday, qualifying both for Saturday's state championship meet.

D.H. Conley's girls finished fourth to earn a qualifying spot also, while Vikings Emerson Merritt and Adrain McLawhorn also earned at-large positions for the boys' meet.

The easterns, held at N.C. State's Carter-Finley Stadium, saw Washington earn the low score of 22 points in the girls' meet. Apex finished second with 46 while Statesville was third with 87. Conley took fourth with 87 to earn the final automatic spot in the state field.

Washington's DeeAnne Davis was the individual winner with a time of 20:46, while teammate Marcha Wells was second in 21:46. Denise Weherenberg took fifth in 22:24 while Missie Purgason was 10th in 23:00. Stephanie Pittman finished 11th in 23:06 while Katherine Occhipinti took 18th in 23:57.

Missouri Trout Anglers' Goal

By BERT LINDLER
Great Falls Tribune

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — Once the leaves have fallen and the orange-clad army of hunters has taken to the hills, a die-hard band of brown trout fishermen descends on the upper reaches of the Missouri River in Montana.

Despite water temperatures in the 40s and air temperatures that may be much colder, these fishermen wade the river in search of spawning brown trout weighing from 2½ to 10 pounds or more.

In 1979 the Missouri's big browns drew Pete Test to Helena. Since then he's caught four brown trout over 10 pounds, most during the fall when they were spawning. Aside from one 10½-pound fish he had mounted, he has released his fish.

When Test wades the Missouri, the boat net slung over his shoulder shows his intentions. Although most fishermen carry cute little nets that might handle an 18-inch fish, the massive hoop Test carries would handle an 18-pounder. There's no use in carrying a small net if you're trying to catch big fish, Test says.

Test's most successful flies are wooly buggers, which looks like a green pipe cleaner with a dust mop tail, and marabou muddlers, streamers with deer hair heads and olive or white dust mop wings. The flies are about three inches long, tied on 24x-long hooks. Test doesn't weight the flies, preferring to get the fly down with two small split shot.

When brown trout clean an area of gravel for spawning, the bed can be seen as a light area on the river bottom. Sometimes the trout can be seen on the bed. Test fishes the beds again and again and again.

"It's just a matter of pounding and pounding and pounding," he said. "Then you happen to be at the right place at the right time and then you get 'em."

Test invited me to join him on the Missouri recently.

He showed me a bed and told me to drift my wooly bugger along the bottom as I fished it. The fly kept catching bottom, so I had to pull it in regularly to clean off moss.

Soon, however, the fly hung on the bottom. I started working upstream to get above the fly so I could pull it free. But then the fly pulled free and began swimming off. I could see the silver flash of the fish as it fought its way toward the surface. Then it pulled free.

I was pleased that I had at least been able to hook a fish. When I hooked a second fish a few minutes later, I was shocked. It's not supposed to be that easy.

The fish was powerful, running downstream until all 100 feet of fly line had been stripped from the reel. I kept the reel from backlashing by pressing the heel of my hand against the reel spool, the handle slapping against my hand with each revolution.

Test netted the fish, a 24-inch brown trout that weighed between 5¼ and 5½ pounds. I've never caught a bigger brown trout. Since I wanted the fish to be able to spawn, it was released. Later, I hooked an 18-inch rainbow trout that was also released.

By this time, Test was back at the upstream end of the bed, preparing to fish through it once again. There was a terrible thrashing as a brown trout that fell for a white marabou muddler tore up the surface.

Test reeled the trout in quickly, pouncing on it as he beached it along the bank. Once the 27-inch 8½-pound female brown trout had her picture taken, she was released to resume her duties on the spawning bed.

Brown trout spawn in several areas of the Missouri between the reservoirs near Helena and below Holter Reservoir north of Helena. The Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks has been studying an area below Hauser Dam for the past several years.

The studies show that it takes fishermen an average of five days to catch a brown trout. But the average weight of the brown trout that were kept was 3.7 pounds.

From Oct. 11 to Nov. 17, 1985, 364 anglers caught 73 brown trout, releasing 47 (64 percent). The largest brown trout that was kept weighed 11 pounds.

The fishermen also caught 405 rainbow trout, keeping 60 percent, and 181 kokanee salmon, keeping 87 percent. The average rainbow trout kept weighed 1.48 pounds with the largest rainbow weighing 3.4 pounds. The average kokanee salmon kept weighed 2.34 pounds with the largest weighing 3.02 pounds.

Leroy Ellis was on the Los Angeles Laker team which won a record consecutive 33 games in the 1971-72 NBA season. The next year Ellis was with the Philadelphia 76er squad that lost 20 in a row.

Deer Hunters Arrested for Injuring Wildlife Officer

Two Henderson County men were arrested late Tuesday night and charged with assaulting a wildlife enforcement officer while he was investigating a report of an illegal deer kill.

Jesse Harold Murray, 44, of Hendersonville, and his son, Jesse "Sonny" Gerald Murray, 21, of Horse Shoe, were being held without bond in the Henderson County Jail. Each was charged with one count of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill a wildlife officer, Foster D. Harrell of Horse Shoe. Other charges are pending further investigation.

The arrests came in response to a plea for the public's help in solving the case made through the news media across North Carolina.

Harrell was injured Monday about 6:30 p.m. when he attempted to arrest two suspects for illegal hunting near the Mills River area of the Pisgah National Forest.

According to Commission officials, Harrell was in good condition Tuesday morning and was scheduled for surgery in the afternoon. He suffered a broken hip and abrasions when one of two suspects in a jeep pickup grabbed and held onto his arm while the driver sped off at a high rate of speed, dragging the officer about 75 feet.

The incident occurred while Harrell was responding to a telephone call at his home from a bow hunter who had been on the mountain hunting. The hunter told Harrell he had heard a gunshot and later found a dead deer. Hunting deer with a gun is illegal in Henderson County, except during the Nov. 23 through Dec. 12 season.

"I went to the place where the hunter saw the deer, but I couldn't find it," Harrell said. "Then, I saw a truck drive up and two men get out. I heard them load the deer in the back of the truck. I approached them and told them to stop. The passenger grabbed my arm and the driver took off at a high rate of speed. When I broke loose, I began tumbling end over end."

Harrell flagged down a vehicle and two men took him to his car where he called for help. Harrell then pursued the truck until he came to a road block set up by the Henderson County Sheriff's Department. He was transported to a hospital in Hendersonville.

Apprehending and arresting the suspects was "assigned top priority" by the Commission earlier this week, according to Charles R. Fullwood Jr., executive director.

Col. Harold Ragland, chief of the Commission's enforcement division, said officers often respond to calls alone at night. "They're in a dangerous occupation and it takes a dedicated employee to do it."

Harrell is a 26-year veteran of the Commission.

Information from Bear Hunters Needed

Biologists with the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission are asking bear hunters in eastern North Carolina to help them collect information for research on bear populations.

While biologists need information from all eastern counties, they are placing special emphasis on four northeastern counties.

Each hunter who harvests a bear in Hyde, Beaufort, Washington or Tyrell counties during the six-day season of Nov. 9-14 is asked to call the Commission's toll-free numbers, 1-800-662-7137. The hunter should give the dispatcher a telephone number. The dispatcher will relay the number to a biologist, who will call and arrange to meet the hunter to collect the information.

"We need to collect specimens, such as a pre-molar tooth from both males and females, and reproductive organs from the females," said John Collins, who coordinates the big-game program. "Bear seasons in Washington, Tyrell and Beaufort counties previously have been closed for a number of years and have now been reopened. We plan to make a concerted effort to collect data from bears harvested in those counties as part of our bear management program."

Last year, 56 bears were harvested in Hyde County when bear season was opened for the first time in nine years. Biologists use specimen such as bear teeth and reproductive organs to determine the ages of the animals and population dynamics.

The commission's division of wildlife management makes recommendations on seasons and bag limits based on data provided by hunters. The bag limit for the four counties during the season this year is one bear per hunter per year.

Tribe Rolls, Has Share Of Title

CHOCOWINITY — Chocowinity High School out-offensed Bath and captured a share of the Tobacco Belt football championship Friday night, 34-28.

Chocowinity finishes the regular season with an 8-2 overall record, 6-1 in league play, and tied with Columbia. The Indians, having lost to Columbia, will take the number two TBC berth in the 1-A state playoffs and will host Albemarle third place team Gates on Friday in the first round.

Bath's Jay Evans scored all four of the Pirate touchdowns, but it wasn't enough as Chocowinity countered with two each from William Haywood and Greg Heggie and one from Alton Rogers.

Bath scored first, getting the only touchdown of the first period on a 3-yard run by Evans. Evans also ran over the PAT for an 8-0 lead.

In the second period, Chocowinity came back to cut the lead to 8-6. Haywood scored on a 2-yard run and it stayed that way the rest of the half.

Bath upped its lead to 14-6 on a 14-yard scoring run by Evans in the third period. But Greg Heggie scored on a 33-yard ramble and Dale Cole ran over the PAT to tie it at 14-14. Haywood followed that up with a 1-yard run, moving the Indians into a 20-14 lead. Before the quarter ended, Bath again scored on a 6-yard run by Evans, who also added the PAT for a 22-20 margin.

But Heggie pulled in a 49-yard scoring pass from Curtis Myers in the final quarter to put the Indians back on top, 26-22. Bath got one more score from Evans, a 3-yard run, pushing the Pirates back on top 28-26.

Rogers finished it up with a 4-yard run and Cole added the PAT to give Chocowinity the win, 34-28.

Haywood carried the ball 21 times for 98 yards while Heggie had 88 yards on six carries. Evans led Bath with 133 on 15 lugs, with Tommy Warren adding 102 on 12 trips.

"The boys played a super game," Coach DeWayne Kellum said. "Bath played a heck of a game, too. But we wanted it and we went and got it."

Rodgers Sparks Williamston

ROBERSONVILLE — Tyrone Rodgers blocked two punts and recovered a fumble as Williamston forced six Roanoke turnovers en route to a 37-12 Northeastern 2-A Conference victory Friday night.

The Tigers opened the scoring with a 55-yard drive in the first quarter highlighted by Mark Williams' 18-yard pass to Bart Revels for the score. Chris Courdreit kick made it 7-0.

Rodgers then blocked his first punt of the night to set up a 1-yard run by Francisco Clifford. Coudreit added the kick to make it 14-0.

Williamston made it 21-0 late in the half when William Matthews returned a fumble 38 yards for a score. Coudreit again kicked the point after.

Following Larry Williams' fumble recovery and 10-yard return to the 17, Coudreit kicked a 23-yard field goal to make it 24-0.

Matthews added a 17-yard scoring run following Rodgers' second blocked punt of the night but the conversion kick was blocked leaving the score 30-0.

The Redskins finally got on the scoreboard with 4:43 left in the third quarter on a 68-yard run by Pender Locke.

Williamston came right back to score its final touchdown of the night on a 4-yard run by Clifford. Coudreit added the point after.

The Redskins provided the final margin when Bernard Huggins scored on a 65-yard run, but the two-point conversion run failed leaving the score 37-12.

Williamston, 7-3 overall and 4-2 in the NEAC, will travel to Capital Area champ Clayton on Friday in the first round of the state 2-A playoffs.

Roanoke closes out the year at 3-7 overall and 0-6 in league play.

Bullets Rip Tigs, 34-17

JAMESVILLE — Playoff-bound Jamesville rolled over Creswell, 34-17, Friday in as Keith Basnight ran for 85 yards on nine carries with two touchdowns and one two-point conversion run.

Eddie Fitzgerald started things off for Jamesville when he scored on a 10-yard run. Kelby Moore kicked the point after.

Basnight then scored the first of his two touchdowns, this one on a 4-yard scamper.

Quarterback Craig Dickerson expanded the lead further with a 25-yard run. Basnight added the point-after run to make it 21-0.

Ernie Gardner scored on a 21-yard run in the fourth quarter. Moore added the point after to make it 28-0.

Basnight closed out the Bullets' scoring with a 23-yard run.

Creswell's only score came on a 65-yard kickoff by Shawn Williams. Marco Paz added the point-after kick.

Jamesville closes out the regular season at 5-5 overall and 4-3 in the TBC.

Bodine Captures Western Pole

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Geoff Bodine has somehow managed to keep his sense of humor.

For Bodine, the 1987 Winston Cup season has been awful.

With only Sunday's Winston Western 500 and the Nov. 22 race at Hampton, Ga., left on the 29-race NASCAR stock car schedule, Bodine is winless.

"A lot of people are going to be concerned with points on Sunday," a grinning Bodine said Friday after winning his first pole position at Riverside International Raceway. "You're not looking at one of them.

"This has been a disastrous season for me for points," Bodine said. "You have to finish races to get points. The first half of the season we had mechanical problems. The second half, we've had some crashes, some of them real dumb crashes.

"I don't even know where I stand in the points."

For the record, Bodine, who has won two poles this season and 19 in his Winston Cup career, is 13th going into Sunday's 500-kilometer race.

The native of Chemung, N.Y., who now makes his home in Julian, N.C., was the first driver onto the 2.62-mile, nine-turn road course on Friday, turning a fast lap of 117.934 mph.

That lap held up through the entire session, much to Bodine's surprise.

"I didn't really expect it," he said. "We were the first car out and we had to change the engine between the last practice and the start of qualifying.

"The weather was warmer, too, when I went out there. After I ran, I stood up in the 'S' corners watching everyone else. It just kept getting cooler and cooler.

"Really, I thought that would help Terry and Darrell. The only real advantage I had was that being first we had a really clean racetrack."

Terry Labonte, who beat out Bodine for the pole here in June, wound up fourth on Friday, while Darrell Waltrip, who was expected to vie for the pole, had a mechanical problem and failed to finish his qualifying lap.

Waltrip thus was forced to attempt to make the 40-car lineup in today's time trials, a session which would determine the final 15 starters.

Ricky Rudd was close behind Bodine at 117.696 in a Ford, followed by Rusty Wallace at 117.465 in a Pontiac and Labonte's Chevrolet at 117.217.

Rounding out the top 10 were Kyle Petty at 117.006; Bill Elliott, 116.850; Alan Kulwicki, 116.432; already-crowned Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt, 115.896; Michael Waltrip, 115.862, and Benny Parsons, 115.621.

Elliott, who has seven poles this season, was assured of the $30,000 bonus set aside for most top qualifying positions when rookie Davey Allison failed to grab the pole on Friday. Allison, who has won five poles, was 25th at 113.650.

Among the drivers who made the top 25 on Friday was Rick Hendrick, a wealthy car dealer and owner of the team which fields cars for Bodine, Waltrip and Benny Parsons. Hendrick, who will make his Winston Cup debut on Sunday, was 21st at 114.664.

Tim Richmond, who set a qualifying record of 118.247 mph here last November, then won that race and the race in June, is absent this weekend. He is recuperating from a recurrance of the pneumonia that sidelined him for most of the first half of the season.

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The top 25 qualifiers Friday for Sunday's Winston Western 500 NASCAR stock car race, with hometown, type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Geoff Bodine, Julian, N.C., Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 117.934.

Dupree Leads Rams To Win

DEEP RUN — Anthony Dupree helped Greene Central close out the year on a positive note as he rushed for 203 yards, scored three touchdowns and two extra points as the Rams topped South Lenoir, 34-27, in Eastern Plains Conference football action Friday.

Greene Central overcame a 20-12 halftime deficit and forged out to a 26-20 lead after three quarters of play as Dupree scored two touchdowns, one on a 53-yard run and the other on a 3-yard run.

South Lenoir came right back to take the lead with four minutes left in the game as Ray Koonce, who carried 24 times for 157 yards on the night, scored on a 17-yard run. Montez Davis added the point-after kick to make it 27-26.

The Rams came back to score the game-winner with 1:15 remaining as Paul Grantham ran it in from five yards out. Dupree added the two-point conversion run to make it 34-27.

South Lenoir mounted one last comeback, driving to the Greene Central 39 in the final 1:15 but the clock ran out on the Blue Devils' upset hopes.

Dupree's 200 yard performance marked the first time this season that a Ram back had gone over the 100 yard rushing mark in a game. He also recorded eight solo tackles from his linebacker spot.

South Lenoir had forged out to a 20-12 halftime lead as quarterback Cranford Heath scored twice on one-yard runs and Koonce added a 46-yard scoring run.

Greene Central's first half scores came on a 29-yard run by Dupree and a 4-yard run by Cornelius Hill.

The Rams had a chance to pull even closer by the half as they drove the length of the field in the final minute of the second quarter. With a first and goal at the 10, quarterback Kris Radford hit Wes Suggs for a score but officials ruled Suggs out of bounds, negating the score.

Grantham added 51 yards on 11 carries while Radford ran for 50 yards and passed for 86 more, completing seven of 13 attempts.

Greene Central finishes up the year 4-6 overall and 3-2 in the EPC. South Lenoir ends up 1-9 and 0-5.

Soviets Slip By Wolfpack, 99-90

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State's 99-90 loss at the hands of the Soviet Union national basketball team provided the Wolfpack with some less tangible victories.

"Other than losing the game, we accomplished what we set out to do and that's to play everyone on the team," said N.C. State coach Jim Valvano after Friday's game. "We tried to utilize the entire court and use pressure. We have not done that in the past."

Aleksandr Volkov scored 21 points and Sergey Tarakanov and Sharunas Marchulenas had 16 points apiece as the Soviet national team fought off the Wolfpack in the exhibition matchup.

Including their late-game run, the Soviet Union shot 26 of 32 from the free throw lines and hit 34 of 59 from the field for 57.6 percent.

N.C. State hit 35 of 83 from the field for 42.2 percent and 19 of 28 from the line.

Soviet Coach Aleksandr Gomelsky called the Wolfpack the best of the three college teams he has faced so far. But Gomelsky said his team was hampered by the loss of two big men which kept him from going inside more.

Still, the Soviets enjoyed a height advantage which resulted in nine blocked shots.

"Tonight, we had to change our play," Gomelsky said. "We played a fast-breaking game to give us the outside shot."

In winning their third straight game on their American tour, the Soviets used a transition game to disrupt the Wolfpack offense and build a big lead in the first half. When N.C. State threatened again in the second half, the Soviets spread the floor, went one-on-one and scored easy baskets to build a cushion that N.C. State couldn't overcome.

A Volkov dunk at 12:04 of the first half gave the Soviets a 25-15 edge, but N.C. State fought back with a 20-10 run which tied the score at 35 on Chucky Brown's layup with 6:01 left before halftime.

Tarakanov broke the tie with a jumper and added a three-point play at 5:29 and the Soviets began their first runaway en route to a 55-49 halftime lead.

N.C. State used full-court pressure defense to force turnovers and it got within 67-62 on a Vinny Del Negro drive with 13:44 left. The Soviets then went to their spread offense and slowly pulled away. A 6-0 run in which Marchulenas scored four points pushed the Soviets to an 83-69 with 6:38 left.

The pressure defense allowed the Wolfpack to make its last drive, again getting within five at 85-80 on a Del Negro layup with 3:58 left. The Soviets repelled that threat with free throws, hitting 11 of 12 in the final 3:31.

Dickerson Makes Game Big

By The Associated Press

A San Diego-Indianapolis matchup didn't figure to be a big game this season, but thanks to the strike and the presence of Eric Dickerson, it is.

Dickerson, a three-time NFL rushing leader when he played for the Los Angeles Rams, makes his first start Sunday when the Colts play the Chargers, winners of six straight, at the Hoosier Dome.

Albert Bentley may never be heard from again.

Dickerson replaces Bentley, who gained 145 yards in 29 carries and caught three passes for 32 yards in last Sunday's 19-14 victory over the New York Jets.

With a some more time to learn the Indianapolis offense, Dickerson is expected to be more of a force on Sunday. Forced into a reserve role against the Jets because of his unfamiliarity with the Colts' system, Dickerson gained 38 yards on 10 carries and caught one pass for 28 yards.

"The team is a real good football team," said Dickerson, who has been reunited with Ron Meyer, his college coach at Southern Methodist.

Neither Indianapolis nor San Diego were expected to be challengers this season. But the Colts have a 4-3 record and are tied with New England for first place in the tight AFC East race, while the Chargers head the NFC West with a 6-1 record, a game ahead of Seattle, 5-2.

The Chargers have become a real surprise team under Coach Al Saunders, who took over last year after the Chargers started 1-7.

"After the strike, we've had a mixture of replacement players and our regulars that has put two good games back-to-back and they've been 2-0," Saunders said.

In Sunday's other games, it is Atlanta at Cleveland, Chicago at Green Bay, Dallas at Detroit, Denver at Buffalo, the Los Angeles Raiders at Minnesota, Pittsburgh at Kansas City, Tampa Bay at St. Louis, Washington at Philadelphia, Houston at San Francisco, New Orleans at the Los Angeles Rams, Miami at Cincinnati and, in a night game, New England at the New York Giants.

Seattle visits the Jets Monday night.

Atlanta, 2-5, tries to rebound after last Sunday's 38-0 loss to New Orleans. Cleveland is 4-3, with three of the losses by a combined 15 points. The Browns have beaten the Falcons four in a row.

Quarterback Jim McMahon has been a savior for Chicago, 6-1, in the two games since the strike ended. Instead of the shoulder injury that idled him before the strike, McMahon now has an injured groin and is a questionable starter against Green Bay, 3-3-1.

The Bears have won 25 consecutive games with McMahon as a starter.

Detroit, with a 1-6 record that has made Coach Darryl Rogers' job shaky, goes against an apparently revitalized Dallas, 4-3 after a victory over the Giants last Monday night.

A passing duel between Denver's John Elway and Buffalo's Jim Kelly promises excitement. The Broncos, 4-2-1, don't run the ball that well, but they're far ahead of the Bills, 3-4.

Both Minnesota and the Raiders are 3-4, but last week's 28-17 loss to Seattle was a tough one for the Vikings. Wade Wilson may stay at quarterback for the Vikings even though Tommy Kramer's pinched nerve is healed. Raiders quarterback Rusty Hilger turned in a good game against New England last week, throwing for 277 yards.

Both Pittsburgh, 4-3, and Kansas City, 1-6, try to break the habit of blowing big leads. The Steelers blew 14 and 10-point leads against Miami in a 35-24 loss last week, while the Chiefs twice led by 14 before a 31-28 setback to Chicago.

Tampa Bay is 4-3 and in playoff contention, while St. Louis is 2-5 and apparently a lame-duck franchise. A win would give the Buccaneers their best start since a 7-2 opening in 1979.

Washington, 6-1, won the first meeting against Philadelphia, 3-4, but the Eagles regulars are much better than their strike replacements. The Redskins have won five in a row and have beaten the Eagles the last four games. The strike didn't hurt either Houston, 5-2, or San Francisco, 6-1. Coach Bill Walsh of the 49ers says, "We expect a high-scoring game. We want to keep the game under control the best we can, and that means ball control on our part."

Walsh also called the Oilers "one of the strongest teams in the league right now."

The Rams, 1-6, will have to wait for the draft choices they got in the Dickerson deal. New Orleans, 4-3 and hungry for its first playoff berth, ranks first in the league in defense.

The contest between Miami, 3-4, and Cincinnati, 2-5, is the first between quarterbacks Dan Marino of the Dolphins and the Boomer Esiason of the Bengals. Marino, who tossed four touchdowns last week, is the No. 1 rated passer in the NFL, while Esiason is No. 3. Cincinnati has lost three in a row.

Jeff Rutledge gets the start at quarterback in place of the ailing Phil Simms for the Giants, 1-6. New England, 4-3, has a much more experienced backup quarterback in Steve Grogan, who will step in for the injured Tony Eason.

The Kentucky Derby, a run of one mile and one quarter, is called the "fastest two minutes in sports."

Recreation Basketball

The Greenville Recreation Department will be sponsoring adult and youth basketball, and will also hold a clinic for prospective officials in the coming weeks.

Pre-registration for the youth basketball leagues will be held Monday through Wednesday from 3 to 6 p.m. at Eppes Recreation Center, South Greenville and Elm Street gyms. Participants will play and practice at the gyms where they register with the exceptions of the seniors, who play all games at Elm Street Gym.

Girls 9-12 will meet from 3:45 to 4:45 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays, starting Nov. 30.

Boys 9-10 will meet 3:45 to 4:45 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, starting Dec. 1. Boys 11-12 will meet 4:45 to 5:45 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, starting Dec. 1. Boys 13-14 will meet 4:45 to 5:45 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays, starting Nov. 30. Boys 15-18 will meet 3:30 to 4:45 p.m. Fridays starting Dec. 4.

League ages are as of April 1, 1988.

• • •

The adult leagues will be divided into divisions, according to talents and competition level. The seasons will be split in half and adjustments made at that time to makes the leagues more equal.

The first organizational meeting for the league will be held Nov. 12 at Elm Street Gym at 7:30 p.m. There will be a team entry fee and a $4 per player participation fee. December will be used for practice and play will begin in January.

For more information, call Ben James at 830-4543 or Nancy Evans at 830-4550.

• • •

The first organizational meeting for anyone interested in officiating in the men's winter basketball league will be held Nov. 12 at Elm Street Gym at 7:30 p.m. Anyone interested should attend.

For more information, call 830-4543.

Runs Planned For Wilson

WILSON — The Sixth Annual Wilson Christmas Run will be held on Dec. 6 in Wilson.

The events include a 1-mile walk at 1:30 p.m., a 5-kilometer run at 1:50, and a 10-K run at 2:50.

Entry fees for each event are $7. The starting and finishing lines will be near Fike High School for all three events. Prizes and awards will be made in 11 age groups.

Proceeds from the event will go to help provide Christmas gifts to children in foster care in Wilson County.

For more information or to enter, contact Gwen Neely, Wilson County Department of Social Services, P.O. Box 459, Wilson, N.C. 27893, or call 237-6600.

Fred Thayer of Harvard University is credited with having invented the catcher's mask in baseball.

Guidance Helpful In Choosing The Right Piece Of Furniture

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Furniture is available in virtually every conceivable style and many price ranges. But a missing ingredient in the buying experience has been adequate guidance and help.

Survey after survey reveals that consumers fear making a costly mistake. They see obtaining what they regard as helpful guidance as a problem.

At the recently concluded national furniture market in North Carolina, furniture makers and sellers addressed this issue on several fronts.

Attempts to provide the needed help include development of manufacturer galleries in retail stores, introduction of furniture, accessories and fabrics designed to go together and the addition of items, such as specially sized sheets for daybeds, that make shopping easier and less time-consuming.

For example, a number of brass bed makers now offer at extra cost sheets, comforters, dust ruffles and pillows sized to fit their daybeds. The bedding is displayed and sold in the furniture department so the necessary purchases can be completed at the same time. At the market, Dresher Inc. became the latest brass bed maker to offer an extensive selection of bedding made specifically for daybeds.

In another expansion of convenience, Vanguard, the upholstered furniture firm, began offering optional slipcovers at moderate prices with sofas.

One of the farthest-reaching efforts to give consumers guidance without the necessity of employing a decorator is a new furniture and accessories program offered by Guild Hall of St. Louis and designed by New York-based Gear Inc.

Raymond Waites, Gear's chief designer, has supervised the creation of five different country looks — three French and two American. Retailers will be required to show and sell all the products necessary to furnish a room and the producer will offer design guidance in arrangement of store vignettes in 900 square feet or more. Besides fabrics and accessories, wallpaper will also be available.

Since all the fabrics and other items are designed to go together, whatever the consumer selects can be assumed to coordinate successfully.

Richard Tallin is president of Guild Hall, a new division of a firm that specializes in importing furniture, accessories and antiques from Europe. He says the point of the new collection is to "help people have a nice home at middle price points. Many readers look longingly at the beautifully designed rooms in decorating magazines and know they don't have the ability to reproduce the wonderful rooms they see."

A signature of Guild Hall is to mix new and antique furniture and accessories to create an eclectic personal space.

One of the most talked-about developments to make retail furniture stores more professional and responsive to consumers is the growth of galleries. The term describes brand-name sections in furniture stores where a large assortment of a particular maker's furniture is shown. In some ways, the galleries duplicate the designer sections found in women's ready-to-wear departments across the country.

Some of the best-known gallery programs are those offered by Ethan Allen, Drexel Heritage, Pennsylvania House and Thomasville Furniture. Other companies which have gallery programs include Bernhardt and Henredon.

The first gallery program, inaugurated by Ethan Allen years ago, is a prototype for the newer examples. All the furniture and most other products, as well, in an Ethan Allen store are supplied to the retailer by the manufacturer.

Freed from many of the selection chores, retailers can concentrate on customer service. The manufacturer also provides extensive sales training, guidance in store arrangement, decorating help and emphasis on accessorizing the furniture.

According to Frank Burr, executive vice president of Thomasville Furniture, many consumers find galleries less-worrisome places to shop for furniture.

"They have the assurance of a manufacturer brand name and the retailer has been vetted by the manufacturer. But most important, a gallery program trains salespeople in product information so that they can answer consumer questions," he asserted.

As a rule, he noted, provided you like the furniture of the particular maker, the furniture in a gallery is a good value since pricing is quite competitive with what is available in the marketplace at that quality level.

Since the retailer commits to order a minimum amount of furniture and agrees to maintain a large display space (usually about 7,500 to 10,000 square feet or more) the theory is that they get preferential treatment in terms of delivery, which may be useful to a consumer.

Today, most well-known branded furniture is sold in galleries.

Q: Someone told me of eating pyracantha jelly in a restaurant in New Orleans. Do you know of a recipe for using pyracantha berries to make jelly?

A: Here is a recipe from "Putting Foods By" by Janet Greene (Stephen Greene Press, Battleboro, Vt., and Lexington, Mass.). The recipe calls for three quarts of pyracantha berries, three cups water, juice of one grapefruit, juice of one lemon, one box of powdered pectin (1 3/4 ounces), 4 1/2 cups sugar and 1/4 teaspoon of salt. Put the berries in a large enameled kettle with the three cups of water. Boil for 20 minutes, add the citrus juices, bring briefly to boiling again and pour into a dampened jelly bag to strain slowly into a crockery bowl. This should render 3 1/2 cups of juice. In a bowl, combine the pectin and one cup of the juice, then pour the mixture into the preserving kettle with the remaining 2 1/2 cups of juice. Bring to a hard boil, add the sugar and salt and bring to a full rolling boil; stir and boil for three minutes. Remove from heat, skim quickly and pour into sterilized 1/2 pint jars, leaving 1/8 of an inch of headroom. Cap immediately with sterilized two-piece screwband lids, twisted tight. If using paraffin, leave 1/4 inch headroom and quickly pour on enough melted wax to form a thickness of 1/8 inch.

Q: What can I use pumpkins for besides jack-o-lanterns and pumpkin pies?

A: Pumpkin bread, pumpkin custard, pumpkin butter (the pumpkin version of apple butter), pumpkin soup, pumpkin cookies, pumpkin muffins and pumpkin spice bars are some ways to use the nutritious pumpkin. And, of course, the seeds can be eaten raw or roasted.

Q: Is it better to buy shrubs in containers or those wrapped in burlap?

A: Most nursery-grown plants are balled and burlapped (B&B), bare root (BR), or container-grown. Container and B&B plants can be bought and planted successfully anytime in the field then dug and wrapped for selling. Bare-rooted plants have no soil around the roots and are generally handled while the plant is dormant.

Decorator accents can be given to the interior of your home with 22 karat gold leaf, familiar to most of us as a finish for picture frames.

Actually, old doors can be spruced up by edging the inside of a molding with gold; the tiniest rosette at the top of a window casement can be made to glow with just a filip of gold leaf; or the design of a fireplace can be pointed up with gold to catch the fire's glow.

Advocates of the use of gold leaf to highlight rosettes, finials and the small-but-important bits of gingerbread on old Victorian homes are Elizabeth Pomada and Michael Larsen, authors of "Daughters of Painted Ladies." The "painted ladies" are not what you might think, but merely the Victorian houses of another era. Pomada comments:

"Victorians delighted in painting their unusual homes in contrasting colors. Sometimes they used as many as 14 or 15 different colors. The effect was to make these houses appear jewel-like in the light. Touches of gold here and there added extra dazzle and warmth to the effect."

Pomada and Larsen, like many color designers across the country, feel 22 karat gold leaf is economical as well as durable and easy to apply. Sheets of this gold leaf are available at sign shops, major art supply stores and many hardware and paint stores for $25 to $30. They come in little books of about 24 pages, each about 3½ inches square. Each sheet is phenomenally thin and is attached to a thin sheet of tissue paper. Gold leaf without the thin separating sheet is cheaper, but is harder to use.

How to apply? Put a thin coat of varnish on the surface and allow it to dry until it's sticky or almost 25 percent dry. Slide a sheet out of the packet, press the gold leaf onto the surface from the back of the attached tissue paper and lay on the gold leaf. Tamp it off gently but firmly. In other words, you are putting on the gold leaf as you pull away the tissue paper. You will end up with a blank sheet of tissue paper and a shiny rosette. Don't seal or cover the gold with varnish for protection because that will cut the sheen as well as its life by 50 percent.

Bob Buckter and Jill Pilaroscia of San Francisco, Joe Adamo of St. Louis and James Jereh of Chicago are well-known color designers involved in the restoration of landmark "painted ladies." All are beginning to use gold leaf to highlight their designs. Their creations and other Victorian mansions in America are in the Pomada-Larsen book.

A perfect example of gold leaf usage is the Buckter design on St. Charles St. in New Orleans. He prescribed gold leaf on each of the 39 rosettes in the crowning gable of this lace-encrucated and cream-colored mansion. At eight rosettes per sheet, the owners created a stunning effect for only $5.

("Daughters of Painted Ladies" is published by Dutton.)

Garden Model Train Is A New Challenge

By J. EARL RUTHHARDT
The Reading Eagle

POTTSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A steam locomotive with four cars highballs it through a flower garden of coral bells, portulaca, California poppies and other varieties.

On a curve, it zooms under a clump of lily of the valley leaves.

If an engineer were at the throttle, he'd have to look up to see the blue, yellow, fuchsia, white and crimson-colored flowers in the garden.

The flowers are taller than the model railroad train moving smoothly over 2-inch-wide brass tracks in the back yard of Kutztown resident John K. Landis.

He's into garden railroading, a relatively new concept in the United States.

"There are probably only a dozen model railroaders in the United States who have outdoor layouts — garden railroads," he said. "But in Great Britain, there are hundreds of garden railroads."

A professor of communications design at Kutztown University, Landis grew up in the bygone era of iron horses snorting steam and coal dirt. Steam locomotives fascinated him. Having fun with indoor model railroads for the past 30 years has nurtured his fascination.

Landis decided to try the outdoor concept after hearing about it at conventions of model railroad buffs and reading about it in a 1985 issue of Model Railroader magazine.

"It was a new challenge," he said. "But my first challenge was to convince my wife, Cathy, that a garden railway would be an asset and not just take up valuable space in our very small back yard," he said.

Gardening and tennis are his wife's hobbies.

The layout is about 6 feet at its widest and 20 feet long, with a shape roughly resembling a peanut or dog bone. Inside the layout is the flower garden, garnished in places with pine bark.

Along a straight stretch of track is what Landis calls "the rockery." He placed a type of native stone there to look like cliffs along the track.

Freezing and thawing have cracked the stone into a multitude of fissures, giving it the appearance of a natural rock outcropping.

Landis spent the winter of 1985-86 drafting plans for the railroad and buying materials and equipment. He gave his railway a French name, Enpleinair — meaning "outdoors" — Ry.

Digging the track foundation started early in March, when the ground started to thaw. Into the foundation trench went 2 inches of crushed stone, topped by a layer of sand. On top of that went two courses of brick, parallel and lengthwise, with stones between the bricks for drainage.

Track was fastened to the bricks. For an attractive finish, he spread white, ornamental garden gravel between and along the sides of the track.

In June, the last spike had been driven and the railway garden was finished.

He started testing his handsome brass locomotive, custom-made by Roundhouse Engineering, a British firm. It's a British prototype with black and green enamel. The smokestack and other fittings are polished brass.

Weighing five pounds, it can pull any combination of cars totaling 20 pounds.

A brass nameplate on the side says "Sunnybrook." Landis grew up in a home along Sunnybrook Lane in Ardmore.

Mighty Sunnybrook is fired by methyl alcohol, with a working pressure of 40 pounds per square inch. The safety valve opens at 40. Wisps of steam trail from the valve, but Sunnybrook doesn't have a steam whistle.

"The engine is sensitive to pressure," Landis explained.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — How do you tell the difference between boiled linseed oil and regular linseed oil? Also, which one dries faster?

A. — The question is puzzling, because each comes in a container plainly marked. But if there is some reason why you must know, boiled linseed oil — which does not require boiling, but is that way when you purchase it — is a much darker color. The boiled type dries much faster.

Q. — My hardware dealer has recommended an ammonia he sells as a good stain for an old oak table I have. I spoke to several people about it. One of them has been working with furniture for years. Nobody seems to have heard of it. Is the dealer right? I do not want to ruin the table.

A. — Ammonia, mixed with water, has often been used as a stain for oak. Be sure to follow the directions on the container for the proportions of water and ammonia in the mixture. The resultant color will be a dark brown, but test it on the underside of the table to be sure it is what you want.

Q. — I have replaced the faucet washer in the stem of the cold water faucet in our kitchen, but it continues to leak from the spout opening. I have been told the valve seat probably is worn and needs regrinding. How is this done?

A. — You can buy a grinding tool at any hardware store. It will come on a piece of cardboard that tells how to use it. The important thing is to turn the handle a little bit at a time. After a few turns, replace everything and try it out. Don't grind the valve seat too much. Be sure the water to the fixture is turned off before you begin work.

Q. — The float ball in my bathroom toilet tank has a leak in it which causes the float to sink too low in the water. Can it be repaired?

A. — Yes, but it is better to buy a new one. Better yet, consider the purchase of a completely new tank mechanism if you think you can handle the installation. It is not difficult, but does require a bit of skill with tools.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY Nov. 8

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Any short trips or errands which are necessary should be made early today. Work on getting your home affairs in order this evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you bring your desires down to a more practical level, you'll be able to get much more accomplished. You have excellent ideas now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): There may be some stumbling blocks in yuru path today, but keep your eye on the finish line and you'll make it through to the end.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You'll have many inspired ideas today, but be sure you jot them down, as your memory is not elephantine at all.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Don't be afraid to make changes in your plans if you come across an opportunity whi a bit erroneous right now. Save some time in your schedule for recreation.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Listen to the views of others; the sun does not rise and set to make your day. Don't just talk about your ideas, make use of them.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Decide with your mate what you would both like to do to make this a very happy day. Be sure you get an early start this morning.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A partner can help you plan a new strategy for success. Use your charm to gain more prestige in public. Drive carefully.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): If you sit all day and don't get much exercise, find a way to remedy this situation. Enjoy a quiet evening at home.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Get into some amusements which you really enjoy, but have little time for during the week. Go out on the town with your mate tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Have a happy morning at home, but avoid arguments after lunch. Have friends in this afternoon, and different ones this evening.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY Nov. 9

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): If you're completely frak with your mate regarding money matters, you'll come to a better agreement and have more harmony at home.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You may be somewhat confused about a letter you receive, so wait until you understand it better before rushing into anything.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Rework your budget so you can follow it more easily, but don't be frivolous and allow yourself more money for unnecessary items.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are confused about how to deal with a business associate, so sit back and study his or her attitude. Drive carefully.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): TGry to forget a private worry which has been bothering you. It's not that big a deal — you've just blown it out of proportion in your mind.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You can resolve a differenc of opinion between a friend and a loved one by having a calm and objective talk with each individually.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): There is little you can do to resolve any family or business difficulties until after lunch, so bide your time. Be clever in all dealings today.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Don't come to any understandings with a new contact until you check all the facts, as well as this person's background in such dealings.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Check the cost of a new project with an expert before getting into it. If you still don't understand, talk it over with your mate.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Try to be more gentle and understanding with a person who is often annoying to you. You may make a great new friend.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Put the blinders on. Stick to your work, don't get involved in the affairs of others, and don't offer your opinion unless it's sought.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Don't put off that important talk with your mate any longer. You'll get full details on that new amusement you've been considering.

Opening lead: King of ♣

At rubber bridge, when you are in slam territory your main concern is to find the safest contract. At duplicate, you often choose the highest-scoring slam. That can lead to interesting play.

Any rubber bridge player worth his salt would settle in six diamonds, a contract that would not tax anybody's playing skill too greatly. Indeed, you are on a spade finesse for an overtrick. When this hand was played in a pair tournament, however, many chose the higher-scoring six-spade contract. Not too many had the skill to bring it home, unfortunately.

After West's normal lead of the king of clubs, your first concern should be to get rid of dummy's club loser. So win the ace of clubs, cash the king of hearts and come to hand with the ace of trumps. Take a club discard on the ace of hearts. What next?

If trumps are 3-2, you can draw another high trump and start running the diamonds. But what if trumps are 4-1?

You can give yourself an extra chance by now leading the jack of trumps from hand! If a defender wins, you are in control. Capture any return, draw trumps and run diamonds. But what if a defender has four trumps and refuses to win the second spade?

Now you will need a slice of luck—you have to find the defender with four spades holding three diamonds as well. Ruff your losing club, come to hand with the king of diamonds and cash the king of spades. Now start to run diamonds, and hope that you can discard both losing hearts before the defender ruffs.

Economists Feel Interest Rates May Drift Lower

By VIVIAN MARINO
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — While the direction of interest rates has dramatically reversed course since last month's stock market collapse, many economists are predicting rates will have to decline even further to keep the economy rolling.

"The psychology right now is there's more concern with deflation and recession. That's the underlying force in the marketplace," Sung Won Sohn, chief economist for Norwest Corp, explained this past week.

That could spell good news for some people who might have been thinking about buying a new house, car or other "big-ticket" item but were put off by the previous sharp rise in interest rates.

It also means an end to the rising yields on bonds, certificates of deposit, or other interest-bearing accounts most people had enjoyed in recent months.

"There are two sides to every coin when rates go down," Sohn said.

But for now, the Federal Reserve sees lower rates as the only way to prevent an economic slowdown that eventually could lead to a recession in the aftermath of the Oct. 19 market crash, which resulted in a one-day paper loss of half a trillion dollars.

Lower rates often spur economic growth by making consumer and corporate borrowing less expensive. The Fed has completely reversed its credit policies since the market crash, buying securities in the open market and flooding the banking system with money. Beforehand, the central bank had tried to push rates higher to stifle inflationary fears and support the dollar.

As a result of the recent turnaround, yields on most bonds and notes have fallen dramatically, with the Treasury's bellwether 30-year bond losing more than a percentage point since mid-October.

And mortgage rates have drifted lower. Lenders this past week asked an average of 10.79 percent on 30-year conventional fixed-rate mortgages, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. That was down sharply from Oct. 16, when the rate peaked at 11.58 percent, but still far above the 9.03 percent low for most of March.

This past week, major U.S. banks continued the trend toward lower rates by trimming their prime lending rates another quarter percentage point to 8.75 percent. It was the second cut in as many weeks of the benchmark rate, which is used to set interest rates on a variety of corporate and consumer loans.

David H. Resler, senior vice president and chief economist for Nomura Securities Inc., said the cut "simply ratifies the fact that we have low interest rates," and was a natural move since banks' cost of doing business had declined.

Central banks overseas have taken similar measures, with West Germany, Britain, Switzerland and the Netherlands cutting key interest rates to stimulate their economies and help support the weak dollar.

Most economists welcomed the coordinated cut in rates, but said they weren't enough to stem the economic slowdown caused by last month's epic stock plunge.

"I think that rate cuts that we've seen so far will only have a marginal beneficial effect," said Resler. "It's probably not going to induce someone to go out and borrow for investing who wasn't going to borrow anyway.

"When rates were rising, that had a direct impact on the discretionary income available for spending on other things (especially) ... since income gains weren't corresponding strongly," said Resler.

But he adds: "The rate decline we're seeing is coming against a backdrop of uncertainty on the part of consumers because of the stock market."

Resler and many other credit market analysts say they believe the market collapse already has shaken consumer confidence and will ultimately slow down the economy.

They predicted rates would come down through early next year, with the prime lending rate and yield on the 30-year bond nearing 8 percent.

"By the time late spring rolls around you'll see more indication whether the economy will snap back," said Maury Harris, chief economist for PaineWebber Inc.

In other business and economic news this past week:

—The dollar continued to plunge to record lows against other currencies while stock prices were more stable.

—The nation's civilian jobless rate edged up to 6.0 percent in October — the first increase in 13 months — despite the creation of more than 500,000 jobs and significant growth in manufacturing employment, the government said.

—Factory orders increased 1.1 percent during September, while construction spending jumped 1.5 percent, the government said.

—The Treasury sold $23.79 billion in three-year notes, 10-year notes and 30-year bonds in its quarterly refinancing auction.

—The nation's largest general retailers reported sluggish October sales, although experts said the stock market collapse had little effect on the trend. —Automakers reported flat sales for U.S.-built cars in late October, indicating little immediate impact on domestic car buyers.

—General Motors Corp. announced it would cut nearly 6,400 jobs at two plants in the United States and Canada due to sluggish car sales.

—Brazil and its creditor banks worldwide reached a short-term agreement that ends Brazil's nine-month moratorium on debt payments.

—The United States and Mexico signed a trade agreement that sets up a new mechanism for resolving trade spats and calls for fresh discussions of more thorny issues.

—The Texas Supreme Court affirmed Pennzoil Co.'s $10.3 billion judgment against Texaco Inc.

—Henley Group Inc. offered to buy Santa Fe Southern Pacific Co. for $63 a share, or about $9.94 billion, but Olympia & York Developments Ltd. indicated it may match or surpass that bid.

Wall Streeters Calm, Cautious After Crash

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As the financial spotlight swung away from the U.S. stock market in recent days to currency markets around the world, many Wall Streeters were happy to see it go.

The relative calm that prevailed in stock trading for most of the past week provided a respite from the waves of selling that swept through the market last month.

At the same time, however, many market participants were leery of relaxing too much, or letting down their guards. The October crash raised a bewildering array of questions that haven't been answered yet.

"A sailor in a storm knows the alarming sensation of losing one's bearings," observed Robert S. Salomon Jr. in a commentary for Salomon Brothers Inc.

"Stockholders are in the same predicament: Stock prices, investor sentiment and the views of many market prognosticators have undergone radical changes in a short period."

One view of the recent stability of stock prices holds that the market has finished playing its role for the moment in a world financial drama that continues to unfold.

Having sounded a warning, the market is now presumed to be waiting for the full response of world financial leaders to trade and debt imbalances and the threat of recession.

Another interpretation says that investors scared themselves so thoroughly in the selling frenzy that they simply didn't know what to do next.

Tentative hopes seem to have increased lately among market analysts and economists that a severe recession can be avoided.

"We do not inevitably have — at least not yet — a classic cyclical bear market and a recession," maintains Jeffrey Applegate, chief investment strategist at E.F. Hutton & Co.

Investors now, he said, are "awaiting action on lower interest rates and fiscal readjustment from policymakers in Washington, Tokyo and Bonn so that the global economic expansion can proceed — and global bull markets can recommence.

"We anticipate that those actions will be forthcoming. But if they were easy in coming, they already would have happened."

The market's still-edgy state was evident in the performance over the past week of the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which dropped 34.48 points to 1,959.05.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .76 to 140.04; the American Stock Exchange market value index fell 5.13 to 255.23, while the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 3.10 to 326.40.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 212.13 million shares a day, down from 281.99 million the week before.

One source of optimism on the economic outlook is abundant evidence that output, employment and other key forces were in strong shape when the financial crisis hit.

"We've learned not to underestimate the resiliency of our economy," said Edward Yardeni, economist at Prudential-Bache Securities. "Obviously, if stock prices continue to crash then we'd become more concerned about an imminent recession.

"But we don't believe the economy's fundamentals justify another crash."

Analysts also note that the typical modern recession has begun with the Federal Reserve tightening credit and interest rates rising under the pressure of mounting business activity.

Today the circumstances are much different. Thanks in large part to the stock-market crash itself, interest rates have fallen sharply of late, and the Fed has been openly pursuing a policy of pumping money into the system.

Some skeptics argue that the drop in interest rates is merely a response to recessionary forces that may already have been set in motion — including a drop in consumer confidence in the wake of the stock-market collapse.

For the moment, few traders appear willing to place big bets on any of these interpretations. As Applegate said, "There's nothing like the biggest one-day crash in stock prices in this century to instill humility."

Greenspan Meeting

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Alan Greenspan, chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, meets with his counterparts from 10 major trading nations Sunday in Switzerland for the first time since the October stock market collapse.

On foreign exchange markets on Friday, where the dollar sank to new record lows against key currencies, traders said they were looking to the central bankers' meeting for news that could affect the markets' direction.

Trade Agreement Signed

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The United States and Mexico have signed a trade agreement that sets up a new mechanism for resolving trade spats between the neighbors and calls for fresh discussions of more thorny issues.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter and Mexican Commerce Secretary Hector Hernandez signed the document in front of a group of prominent U.S. and Mexican officials and business executives.

"The document," said Hernandez, "satisfies the interests of the United States as well as Mexico."

"We want to point out that for us ... it establishes extremely important steps for arranging the commercial, investment and intellectual property relationship between the two countries," he said.

Yeutter, speaking in Spanish, said the measure offers the "possibility to create jobs in Mexico and, hopefully, in the United States."

"What we have here is a foundation, hopefully, for relations between the two countries in the future," he said. "We cannot resolve all the problems now with ... this. That is impossible, but it is a first step, a very important step in this respect."

"If we can increase trade with this understanding, then it is worth the trouble for Mexico and ... the United States," he said. The United States is Mexico's largest trading partner, while Mexico's trade with its northern neighbor ranks behind Canada, Japan and West Germany.

The United States runs a trade deficit with Mexico. U.S producers exported $12.4 billion worth of goods to Mexico last year and imported $17.6 billin from Mexico.

Local Funeral Home Stresses Economic Rationality In Dealings With Clients

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

At a time when clear thinking is difficult, S.G. Wilkerson & Sons Inc. funeral home stresses economic rationality.

"We tell people that we don't think the price of a funeral ought to be more than they can handle," said Don M. Wilkerson, vice president of the firm, which has served the Greenville area steadily since 1931.

"We try to have a business discussion with them so that they know that it is normal to be concerned about money and that money spent does not necessarily equate to love for their deceased."

Wilkerson said the firm tries to deal with all clients in the same manner.

"We deal with all walks of life," he said. "We deal with folks that are having a difficult time with their finances and folks that finances are not a concern.

"We try to treat them and serve them the same way. There are some circumstances with some people where finances are a very difficult thing, and we bring it up in a way that it I think kind of puts them at ease so that they feel free to talk about it. It helps them to know that there is a financial side to this business as well as an emotional side."

The firm was started by S.G. Wilkerson who came to Pitt County from the Roxboro area in the early part of this century. In the early 1900s, he moved to Farmville and later moved to Greenville.

"The business couldn't sustain itself all the time, and he would stop and go back on the road as a casket salesman," Don Wilkerson said.

In 1931, Charles Wilkerson Sr., a son of the founder, returned from college to assist his father and the company has been in continuous operation ever since.

Several years later, three sons, George, Norman and Lindsay, came into the business. The four brothers worked with their father until his death in 1948, according to Don Wilkerson.

"Those four fellows continued the operation of the business, and, starting in 1964 up until the present time, there has been an integration of the third generation and a slow exiting of the second generation," he said. "Presently, we have only one of the brothers, George Wilkerson, who is president.

"He's the only one of the second generation who is still active in it. Norman and Charles are retired and Lindsay is deceased."

A son from each of the four brothers works for Wilkerson's today.

Dean Wilkerson serves as controller, while Charles D. Wilkerson Jr. and Don M. Wilkerson are vice presidents. Robert Wilkerson, the newest member of the firm, is treasurer.

Originally, the firm was located on Dickinson Avenue in the area of Taft Furniture Co. The company then moved to the corner of Seventh and Dickinson, which is about where Reade Circle cuts through, and remained there until 1948.

"In 1948, we moved to a modern facility (on Evans Street) that even had a chapel, which was an oddity in those days," Don Wilkerson said. "Funeral homes, by and large until the 50s and 60s in this country, were basically old, big, converted houses.

"The facility was air-conditioned and had a garage and a hand-pulled elevator."

Wilkerson's moved to its present location, a 30,000-square-foot facility on Fifth Street, in 1975. About five years later, the firm added a branch facility in Vanceboro.

In 1957, the four brothers purchased a farm on the eastern outskirts of Greenville and organized and developed a new company called Pinewood Memorial Park. The park has operated as a perpetual care cemetery since 1958.

About a year ago, Wilkerson's completed a mausoleum facility at the cemetery. The building has 792 crypts, according to Don Wilkerson.

"In the past, we ran ambulance company and an ambulance service as an adjunct to our business, but that was stopped in about 1964 when the Pitt Memorial Hospital took over the ambulance services."

Today, the funeral home generally deals with people in immediate situations, according to Don Wilkerson, although he said some people are planning ahead.

"Basically, funeral homes in this day and time serve to a great extent at an at-need basis, but, in the last five years, there has been a national emphasis on pre-planning which takes some of the sting, some of the surprise out of funeral arrangements," he said.

"We have been heavily involved in pre-need funeral work for several years and counseled people to the advantages of that kind of thing, but most of our business remains at-need as does the entire country."

While many of Wilkerson's clients prefer traditional funeral arrangements, the migration of people from areas outside Pitt County ask for different methods.

"Our area is slow to change, we have very traditional people," Don Wilkerson said. "But with the influx of different population, where you have a lot of people who haven't lived here all their lifetime and you have different ideas coming together, cremation has become preferred by a minority in our population.

Meanwhile, new guidelines on pricing have clarified the billing process at funeral homes, Don Wilkerson said.

"About four or five years ago, the Federal Trade Commission completed a 10-year study on funeral pricing," he said. "They made it so that every funeral director in the country now operates from the same rules that require dividing service fees from the merchandise.

"It used to be that there was a unit-pricing system and the unit that was priced was the casket so the casket price included charges for services, but the two were not divided and the consumer really wasn't given the opportunity to see that half of it was for services and half of it was for merchandise.

"For the last four years, all funeral directors have been under an itemization pricing system, and it has worked to a great advantage to the consumer because they have a much clearer understanding of what the fees are for and they have an option of not having a full-service funeral if that's what their situation warrants. It has given a great amount of flexibility."

The mortuary business also involves continuous education, according to Wilkerson, who said about 20 people work for the firm.

"We have the strongest staff we've ever had, but it takes a number of people to operate our business, and without qualified people you couldn't operate this type of labor-intense business," he said. "There's a lot of education in our industry. There is an education program mandated by the state of North Carolina to keep licensing current.

"It is a great policy because it forces licensed personnel to continue to upgrade their education, and it works very well.

Gas Service

RALEIGH (AP) — A state lawmaker and utility regulators say the lack of natural gas service in some parts of North Carolina is hurting economic development, and a legislative committee has agreed to study the problem.

Robert O. Wells, chairman of the state Utilities Commission, told lawmakers he was concerned with reports of industries losing interest in North Carolina sites after learning that natural gas service was unavailable.

"It is bound to be an impediment to economic development," Wells said.

The committee agreed to take a more in-depth look at the issue at a meeting Jan. 7.

Business Notes

Tadlock Promotion

Tadlock Insurance Agency Inc. has announced the promotion of Mary Page to commercial lines manager with responsibility for coordinating efforts of commercial lines customer service representatives in serving business clients.

Ms. Page has been associated with Tadlock for eight years and has worked in the insurance industry for 13 years.

She has attended several insurance related seminars and holds the Accredited Advisor In Insurance, Certified Insurance Counselor and Certified Public Insurance Woman designations. She has completed eight of the 10 parts required to earn the Chartered Property Casualty Underwriter designation.

Ms. Page, who is president of the Pitt County Association of Insurance Women, is a member of Grace Free Will Baptist Church. She and her husband, Russell, have three sons, Andrew, Rusty and Derrick.

Sales Representative

Mid-Atlantic Builders of Greenville has announced the appointment of John R. Heath as sales representative and design coordinator with the firm.

The firm said that Heath will be responsible for assisting those planning construction projects to design efficient and functional buildings.

Heath has had experience in construction planning, the company said, having served as construction coordinator for Burroughs Wellcome, construction project manager for Rose's Stores, and design supervisor for Robert Engineers Inc.

Mid-Atlantic Builders specializes in design-build construction of commercial, industrial and agricultural pre-engineered buildings.

Stock Purchase

Peoples Bancorporation announced that it has begun purchasing shares of its common stock. The Rocky Mount-based company originally received shareholder approval in April to purchase up to 200,000 shares of its stock.

Robert R. Mauldin, chairman and chief executive officer, said the purchase was prompted by the recent stock market decline and management's belief that current price levels of Peoples stock represent a timely investment opportunity.

Mauldin said it is expected that shares repurchased will be used to fund existing employee benefit plans.

Staff Addition

Connally Branch of Clark Branch Realtors Inc. announced that John F. Moye Jr. has joined the Greenville firm as an agent.

Branch said that Moye, a native of Pitt County, has specialized in residential real estate sales in Greenville since 1982. He attended Pitt Community College.

Moye is a member of the Pitt-Greenville Board of Realtors and is a million-dollar producer.

Cash Dividends

Directors of Jefferson-Pilot Corp., meeting recently in Greensboro, declared two quarterly cash dividends each in the amount of 30 cents per share.

The first dividend is payable Dec. 4 to shareholders of record Nov. 13, while the second dividend will be payable March 4 to shareholders of record Feb. 12.

Seminar Planned

A two-hour breakfast seminar on "Communications — Written and Spoken" will be held Wednesday at the Hilton Inn at 7 a.m.

The sessison is the third in a series of eight in the "Executive Development Series" sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Small Business Task Force and the Small Business Center of Pitt Community College.

A chamber spokesman said the series is for business owners and other executives as well as for persons who are interested in promoting and expanding their careers.

For registration information contact the chamber at 752-4101.

Business Forum

The Office of Women in Economic Development in the N.C. Department of Commerce will be the initial sponsor of Business Forum, a new business and radio program series founded and produced by Barbara K. Cleary of Greenville.

Ms. Cleary said the series, scheduled to air weekdays at 5:45 p.m. on WNCT-FM beginning Monday, will highlight eastern North Carolina's economic growth opportunities, trends, events, resources, small business, and entrepreneurs.

She said that Business Forum plans to syndicate its radio program series with private sector sponsorship, and develop additional media components to reach the general public with programs about business and economic development in the eastern region.

A Greenville resident for the past 10 years, Ms. Cleary is a graduate of The City University of New York. She served as marketing manager in banking for five years, most recently with Branch Banking & Trust Co. in Greenville. She has managed her own marketing and communications consulting firm for over 10 years and is a former host on "Carolina Today," WNCT-TV.

Ms. Cleary and her husband, Matthew, have a daughter, Margaret, and attend St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

BARBARA K. CLEARY

Administrative Post

C. Buddy Edwards, general manager of Southern Cable Contractors Inc., Greenville, announced the appointment of Sheila B. Colosimo to administrative vice president.

Mrs. Colosimo is a graduate of East Carolina University and has been a resident of Greenville for six years.

Southern Cable Contractors' corporate offices are located on Arlington Boulevard.

Figures Decreased

Hampton Industries Inc. reported that sales for the quarter ended Sept. 26 were $48,152,000 as compared to $49,116,000 a year ago, a decrease of 2 percent.

The company said earnings for the period decreased by 27 percent to $1,542,000 as compared to $2,098,000 in 1986.

For the 39 weeks ended Sept. 26, sales were $114,941,000 compared to $110,344,000 a year earlier, an increase of 4 percent. Earnings for the current period were $2,866,000 as compared to $3,344,000 a year ago, down 14 percent.

Prepshirt of Greenville is a division of Hampton Industries.

Texasgulf Position

Edward Barriere Winn Jr. has been assigned to the environmental affairs department at Texasgulf's phosphate operations in Beaufort County as senior environmental engineer.

The company said that Winn will be responsible for wastewater permitting compliance, solid and hazard waste management, groundwater monitoring programs, and community right-to-know compliance.

Winn joined Texasgulf as a process development engineer in the technical services department in 1981. A Virginia native, he attended high school in Geneva. He received a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering from Imperial College of Science and Technology in London.

Winn and his wife, Robin, and their two children reside in Washington, N.C.

Purchase Planned

First Citizens Bank of Raleigh announced that it has agreed in principle to purchase six offices of Barclays Bank of North Carolina in Ahoskie, Bayboro, Clinton, Rockingham, Tarboro and Windsor.

First Citizens said deposits of the six Barclays offices total approximately $46 million.

The bank said that the transaction is contingent upon certain agreements between the principals and approval of the applicable regulatory agencies. The acquisition would allow First Citizens to enter Bertie, Edgecombe, Hertford and Richmond counties.

Broadcast Seminar

Raymond Rohrer and Lawrence Behr of Greenville participated in the second annual Society of Broadcast Engineers convention and broadcast engineering seminar last week in St. Louis.

Rohrer, director of engineering for the consulting firm of Lawrence Behr Associates Inc., discussed the need for continued high levels of equipment maintenance in the broadcast industry in spite of the continued relaxation of government mandated reporting.

Rohrer also participated in a consultants round table with other broadcast consultants from around the country.

Behr, president of the LBA Group of companies headquartered in Greenville, presented a paper on "New Developments in Folder Unipole Antennas."

Record Results

Investors Title Co. and its subsidiaries, Investors Title Insurance Co. and Northeast Investors Title Insurance Co., announced that it continued to achieve record operating results during the quarter ended Sept. 30.

J. Allen Fine, president and chairman, said the quarter marked the 21st consecutive period of record high revenues and net income for the company.

For the three months ending Sept. 30, premiums written increased 7 percent from $2,386,000 to $2,543,191, revenues rose 6 percent from $2,534,103 to $2,680,006, and net income increase 2 percent from $565,326 to $575,740, all compared to the same quarter in 1986.

Fine said for the nine months ending Sept. 30, net income increased 57 percent from $1,346,340 to $2,115,917, premiums written increased 24 percent from $5,907,402 to $7,310,485, and revenues increased 22 percent from $6,343,828 to $7,743,055.

Firm Opens Sales Center

Adams Products Company, a concrete masonry producer, has opened a sales center in Greenville at 309 Hooker Road.

Adams Products, headquartered on Morrisville, N.C., produces concrete masonry at eight locations in central and eastern North Carolina.

The Greenville facility will be a sales outlet for commercial and residential builders and homeowners, according to the company.

Butch Hardy, regional manager, said the company is enthusiastic about introducing a Greenville outlet.

"We've served the Pitt (County) area for years from our plants in Kinston and Rocky Mount, but this new Adams Products outlet indicates our optimism about the growth potential in this part of the state," he said.

Hardy is incoming president of the Carolinas Concrete Mosonry Association.

Staff members at the Greenville office include Nancy St. John, sales manager, and Betty Hughes, commercial sales representative.

Sunday Hours

Brendle's Inc. announced that it will open its retail stores for business on Sundays for the first time, beginning Nov. 15.

The Elkin-based company said that allowing for differences in local laws, the stores will generally be open from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Sundays from Nov. 15 through Dec. 20.

Douglas D. Brendle, president and chief executive officer, said that at the end of the year Brendle's will evaluate the impact of Sunday sales to determine whether to maintain the Sunday policy.

Brendle's, which has a store in Kinston, is building a facility in Greenville.

Company Names VP

The board of directors of Dibrell Brothers Inc. announced that Fred E. Wainright has been named a vice president of the company.

Wainright was formerly vice president-controller of Carolina Leaf Tobacco Co. Inc., a wholly owned subisidary of Dibrell Brothers Inc.

Wainright is married to the former Alice Skinner and they have two children. The family resides at 205 Club Pines Road in Greenville.

Both Dibrell and Carolina Leaf deal in the purchasing, processing and sales of leaf tobacco around the world.

Repurchase Planned

Heilig-Meyers Co. announced a plan to repurchase up to one million shares of its common stock from time-to-time on the open market for general corporate purposes.

The company said it currently has 10.7 million common shares outstanding.

Heilig-Meyers, a Virginia corporation, operates 253 home furnishing stores in 10 southeastern states. The firm has a store on Greenville Boulevard.

BW Staff Change

Burroughs Wellcome Co. announced that Alexandra Capps has been promoted to manager in ointments, creams, liquids formulations division at the Greenville manufacturing facility.

Ms. Capps received a bachelor's degree in biology/math from Indiana University and master's degrees in biomedical engineering and business administration from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and East Carolina University, respectively.

She has been employed with the company since 1977.

Treatment Center

Preliminary construction in the way of site grading work has begun for the Mary Frances Center, a private free-standing treatment facility for alcholism and chemical dependency, in Tarboro.

Spokesmen for the new center said the 38,000-square-foot building will consist of administration area, dining facility, meeting rooms, counselor therapy offices, and 66 treatment beds.

The center will provide for detoxification and residential treatment as well as follow-up care after the patient is discharged, the spokesmen said. A separate Family Residence Center of approximately 6,000 square feet will be developed to house family members and be the resource for family recovery programs.

The center will eventually employ approximately 80 full-time employees including a medical director and medical staff.

The facility is located on a 52-acre site on Howard Avenue extension one mile west of Tarboro. Executive director is Tom Palmer.

Groundbreaking ceremonies will be held on Nov. 18 at 2 p.m.

New Employee

Mavis Butts, owner of Mavis Butts Realty, announced the association of Arline Barnes with the company.

The firm said Ms. Barnes is a real estate agent with four years experience in residential real estate. She will continue to specialize in residential real estate, according to the agency.

Ms. Barnes is a member of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the Pitt/Greenville Board of Realtors, the North Carolina Association of Realtors, the National Association of Realtors, and the Greenville/Pitt County Women's Counsel of Realtors.

Ms. Barnes resides in Pitt County with her husband, Bill, and their son, Wayne.

HBA Officers

The Greenville-Pitt County Home Builders Association announced its slate of officers and directors for 1988 at its recent November meeting in Greenville.

New officers are Myles Cartrette, president; Len Tozer, first vice president; Dennis Harrington, second vice president, and Ludie Smith, secretary-treasurer.

Directors are Derek Dunn, Jeff Hazelton, Denny Laux, Charles Vandiford, Merle Bowser, Bob Dail, Charles Hood, Jimmy Hughes, Gary Miller and Billy Davis.

Firm Expands

Tracy E. Pedigo, president of State Sign and Light Service of Knightdale, announced the expansion of the firm's service area from Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill to eastern North Carolina including Greenville, Rocky Mount, Wilson, New Bern, Tarboro and Goldsboro.

The spokesman said the firm specializes in electrical lighting and sign maintenance repair.

Branch Stock

Branch Corp., acting under authority granted by shareholders in April, announced the implementation of a plan to repurchase up to 500,000 shares of the corporation's common stock after adjustment for the recently announced 100 percent stock dividend.

Branch said the recent market decline in stock prices has made a share buy-back plan a good investment for the company. It said, however, that no timetable for the purchases has been determined.

The corporation is the parent holding company of Branch Banking and Trust Co., Wilson, and the Community Bank, Greenville, S.C.

Higher Totals

TRW Inc. reported higher sales and earnings for the quarter ended Sept. 30.

The Cleveland-based company said sales for the quarter rose 19 percent to $1.70 billion from $1.43 billion a year ago. Net earnings climbed 56 percent to $63.2 million from $40.5 million in 1986.

For the first nine months of 1987, sales were $5.08 billion, up 13 percent from $4.49 billion for the 1986 period. Net earnings were $176.5 million, up 2 percent from the $172.7 million recorded a year earlier.

TRW, which has a plant in Greenville, provides high technology products and services primarily for the space and defense, automotive, and information systems markets.

Business Activity

The level of business activity in North Carolina increased 0.1 percent in September, according to the First Wachovia Business Index, which indicated a gain of 4.4 percent for the Index over the past year.

Wachovia said the rise in the Index for the month was due primarily to a drop of 1.2 percent in initial sales for unemployment insurance as well as gains in nonagricultural and manufacturing employment. Residential building permits declined, while the average manufacturing workweek remained unchanged.

Nonagricultural employment in the state rose 0.5 percent in September, while manufacturing employment in North Carllina rose 0.4 percent for the month.

The Index measures the level of economic activity in North Carolina on a monthly basis.

Sales Increased

Fieldcrest Cannon Inc. announced that sales in the third quarter of 1987 were $366.4 million, up from $282 million in the same quarter a year ago.

The Eden-based company said that on a proforma basis, corporate sales increased 10 percent over the same period a year ago, Bed and Bath Division sales rose 12 percent, and Carpet and Rug Division sales increased 5 percent.

Net earnings for the third quarter were $1.5 million, compared to $8 million for the third quarter of 1986.

For the first nine months of 1987, sales were $1,015.4 million, compared to $747.3 million in 1986. Net earnings for the first nine months were $5.8 million, compared to $6.7 million last year.

Fieldcrest Cannon has a plant in Greenville.

Designer Gardens?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fashion-conscious gardeners take note: an Agriculture Department study has found that "designer mulches" can lead to bigger crops.

Tomatoes, for example, respond best to a color-coordinated approach. The department's Agricultural Research Service says they "dramatically increase in size and quality when plants are grown over red mulch."

Potatoes and green peppers, meanwhile, produce more with white mulch, the service says in a report.

It isn't vanity but, rather, the particular wavelength of reflected light that makes the difference, plant physiologist Michael J. Kasperbauer and soil scientist Patrick G. Hunt say in the report.

Mulch is commonly used by both commercial and backyard gardners, who lay it at the base of plants to conserve soil moisture and keep weeds down.

Sign of quality.

Tobacco Hobby Expanded Into Big Business

By PATRICIA MOORE

For Jean McLawhorn White, crafts are a way to recreate and preserve tradition — the tradition of tobacco farming.

Since she began marketing tobacco crafts two years ago, her hobby has expanded to a national business. Today Mrs. White sells her crafts in 40 states, from California to Florida.

Buyers want her tobacco-covered duck decoys, Christmas ornaments, door wreaths and wood replicas of the old curing barns, racks and "trucks." The latter are really wooden wagons loaded with cured tobacco, but to farmers they always have been and forever will be "trucks."

One of 10 children of the late Lyman and Melba McLawhorn, Mrs. White grew up on a farm in the Rock Springs section of Pitt County, about three miles west of Greenville. Like her brothers and sisters, she worked in tobacco. The family also raised cotton, another farm product she sometimes uses.

Describing her start in tobacco crafts, she said she had wanted to fill some of her spare time after she stopped work as a cashier in the East Carolina University Student Supply Store. She had been there for 14 years.

"I didn't look for this," she says. "It just 'dumped' in my lap."

She was inspired by a miniature tobacco rack, or "horse" that holds tied tobacco leaves. The sight of it made her want to create one of her own. Her son Gardner used the first one as a pattern and produced 100 more. Mrs. White added miniature tied tobacco.

So many people wanted the "horses" that she began to consider selling them.

Meanwhile, she conceived ideas for three more miniatures: a cotton sheet filled with cotton, a tobacco sheet with tobacco and the wooden tobacco truck holding tobacco.

In October 1985 she and her husband took samples of her first four items to craft shops between Greenville and Raleigh. "I didn't have anybody turn me down," she said.

She took orders from interested shopkeepers, filled and shipped them.

A year later she added the tobacco-covered duck decoy in life-size and miniature.

The first ones she sent to a Maryland gift shop were sold while they were being unpacked — to a North Carolina tourist.

Now she also covers an intermediate size duck.

The tobacco ducks look and feel like decoupage: the cured, golden leaves are hard to the touch, and their finish resembles high-gloss varnish. But there is no mistaking the leaf veins or the golden color of bright tobacco that made eastern North Carolina famous.

Mrs. White chose money plant seeds for the eyes of the large and mid-sized decoys and buds from the red bud tree for eyes of the small ducks because "I try to stick to natural things."

When she first started making tobacco crafts, she worked out of her dining room, shuffling her work aside every time she needed to feed the family at the table. "It got real frustrating to stop and fix a meal," she recalls.

She covered the floor with plastic to protect it from tools and sticks. Finally, the room got so crowded she couldn't use it for eating. She had accumulated so many craft supplies that she had no place to store them.

By that time her house smelled like a tobacco curing barn.

That was when her husband told her he would renovate a vacant trailer for her workshop. He knocked out interior walls and created a long workroom. The trailer also had a small room where she could dry and store tobacco, a bath and a kitchen sink. She added a tiny television set that is used one hour a day during break time. That is when she and her daughter, Terrie Bibb, watch "The Young and the Restless."

Her most exciting time occurred in 1986 when she decided to sell nationwide. Although people who buy crafts seem to purchase things that are "different," Mrs. White assumed that tobacco crafts would take a while to attract widespread buyer interest.

But when the orders came in, they were double what Mrs. White had expected.

"I didn't know what to do. It blew my mind," she says.

That's why Mrs. White says the hobby that became a full time business "dumped" into her lap.

However, her family rallied to help her. Her daughter Terrie works with her four days a week, her husband produces all her wood forms, granddaughter Erin fills acorn baskets with navy beans (that look like little eggs), and daughter-in-law Beverly designed a logo and works on invoices. When Mrs. White couldn't find tobacco cloth here, an uncle located some for her in Virginia. The whole family, especially her husband, have been supportive.

But what now is a nationwide business always has been part of Jean White's life. "I am very interested in preserving anything, especially if it belonged to my ancestors," she says.

For Jean White, tobacco crafts represent "going back to a way of life."

These links to the past include a large wreath of tobacco leaves and tobacco cloth. Tobacco forms the outside circle of the two-part wreath. The inner circle consists of tobacco cloth, which resembles gauze. Mrs. White braids the cloth the same way farmers braided it after they removed it from young tobacco seedlings it had protected from harsh weather. She ties the wreath with polka-dot or plaid ribbon.

She makes another wreath with a cotton bow, symbolic of the family tradition of raising cotton.

Christmas ornaments include solid and cut-out hearts, a ball, an apple, a pear, an egg, a candy cane, a small tobacco wreath, and a tobacco-stem wreath. She doesn't throw away any part of the tobacco.

She produces a replica of the old wood-burning barn with cut firewood on its porch.

And there are silhouettes called "Morning" and "Evening," a man with a mule and plow. "Morning" represents Mrs. White's father as he began his day's work — rested from a good night's sleep, head held high, the mule likewise. "Evening" portrays man and mule exhausted from the day's labors, so their heads are downcast as they head for home.

Though she is proud of her marketing success, Mrs. White derives satisfaction from tobacco crafts for another reason: "It's something that I started. It wasy my idea. I didn't get it from anybody."

Once she got started, she says, "I got carried away. Now when I see something, I wonder if I can copy it with tobacco."

Her Book Is For Fearless And Adventurous

EDITOR'S NOTE — It's a guidebook for parents and children who want to kick the television habit and the publisher is touting a "No-TV November." Though it's her second book warning of the dangers of addiction to the tube, Marie Winn doesn't want to be labeled an anti-TV fanatic. "I believe that it's less damaging than Valium," she says.

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 20 years ago, a Manhattan mother was parking her two preschoolers in front of the television set when she suddenly felt compelled to take a closer look. Not at the set. At the kids.

While 5-year-old Mike and 3-year-old Steve took in "The Flintstones" and "I Love Lucy," their mother tuned in to their slack jaws, glazed eyes and dazed expressions.

"They seemed zonked out, almost like zombies," Marie Winn recalls. "I thought, 'This is a little weird. This isn't the way they look in normal life.'"

From those casual observations, a career was born.

First came long years of research, followed by the publication in 1977 of "The Plug-In Drug," Marie Winn's landmark book alerting parents to the dangers of television addiction in children.

Now, 10 years later, after more research, comes "Unplugging the Plug-In Drug," a guidebook for fearless parents and adventurous children who want to take part in a daring experiment: surviving a week without television.

Accompanying the new book will be the sort of hoopla that generally surrounds "major publishing events," as publicists like to call them. Already, there are press kits and buttons and lists of schools and libraries planning to participate in what VikingPenguin Books has dubbed "No-TV November."

At the prospect of additional Americans discovering the world beyond the tube, Ms. Winn is excited. At the prospect of being viewed as a Carry Nation for the '80s, she is less than thrilled. "I'm very eager not to be seen as a fanatic anti-TV type," she says wearily.

For the record, Marie Winn does own a television set that has, on occasion, been tuned in to "Dynasty." She likes "L.A. Law" and "Hill Street Blues." And never once has she suggested that all TV sets be banished.

"I believe in it as an entertainment and a relaxant," she says. "I believe that it's less damaging than Valium."

Previous TV Turnoffs in Denver and New York provided the grist for the new book — Winn's 12th volume for parents and children. It offers everything from tips for selling the idea to addicted adults ("You mean we would have to turn it off too?" one teacher demanded) to survival hints for families about to take the plunge.

Excerpts from the diaries of televisionless children shed light on the magnitude of the problem. ("When I come home I CANNOT STAND IT," writes one hardened little addict. "Dear Diary: I feel like I'm dying!" says another. "I gotta watch TV! But I won't!")

Amid the recipes for fingerpaint and play clay and alongside the sample No-TV contracts is a serious message: Too much television can be hazardous to family life, not to mention reading, homework, parental problem-solving and all manner of creative endeavors.

"It's a quality-of-life issue," says Winn, who believes that excessive television-watching has had a noticeable impact on American life.

Parents who use television as electronic baby sitters often fail to develop effective ways of shaping their children's behavior, she says.

And children who spend too much of their time parked in front of the set fail to develop the resources, skills and interests that can lead to enriching careers or hobbies in adulthood.

Very young children also may find their verbal development stunted for the simple reason that families engaged in watching television are not talking to each other, she says. It is by participating in conversations — not merely observing them — that toddlers develop verbal skills.

"People don't think about television in a lucid way," Winn says. "It's just there, from your earliest days. Obviously, one week without television can't change people's lives, but it can start them thinking differently."

A successful TV-Turnoff, to Winn, brings about "insight and illumination about television. In some families, it's a confirmation of what they already practice and believe. For others, the impact is that they begin to understand the need to control it better."

The experiments also enable families to discover new activities, "to do some of the things you don't normally do because you spend too much time watching TV. To see that there are gratifying ways to spend your time."

She didn't always view television as a mind-altering drug. In the early days of her marriage to Academy Award-winning documentary filmmaker Allan Miller, formerly a conductor, evenings at home often included "The Danny Kaye Show" or "Mission: Impossible."

After long, tiring workdays, the couple would sometimes settle in for what Winn calls "a cozy little junk watch."

Later, as a young mother, "I used to watch 'Lucy' with the kids. I remember turning on shows I thought were OK for them to watch, and plugging them in. Then, I began to observe my use of television with the kids, and the way they were watching.

"My kids, when they watched TV, seemed different from when they played or slept. They looked hypnotized."

From the beginning, it wasn't what her kids watched but how much that struck Marie Winn as significant. While she was also concerned about the worthwhile activities — reading, music, homework — that were displaced by television viewing, it was primarily "the one-way nature of television" that bothered her.

"The kind of attention you pay to it is different from two-way activities," she says. "There are a variety of children with a variety of vulnerabilities. Obviously, not every child gets hooked. But often you find at least one of these in a family — the child who seems to zero in with excessive attention on the tube. The child who wants to watch too much, who is hard to distract while watching."

Like any concerned, '60s mother, Winn turned to the child-care experts for advice. But most of the books and magazine articles she found focused on content. There was little about the act of watching television.

If she wanted solid research, she would have to do her own.

Not long after those first observations about her own children's viewing habits, the lone TV set in the household went on the blink. It was never repaired but was replaced some years later.

"There's a lot more empty time in your lives without TV," Winn says. Her children filled theirs with word games and puzzles, music and books. How did their mother manage to write books at home without relying on television to keep her kids occupied?

"Naps," she says firmly. "I'm a strong believer in naps."

Today, son Steve is a professional violinist. Mike is a journalist who, as a teen-ager, was already a published author. His book, "Beyond Crossword Puzzles," a volume of original word games, was an outgrowth of a course he taught at the New School as a 15-year-old.

In discussing "the television thing," as Marie Winn has come to refer to it, "I hate to make myself an example," she says. "I'm a different case."

And so she is.

Winn moved to New York from Prague, Czechoslovakia, at the age of 2 with her mother, a lawyer, and her father, a neurologist and a poet who also wrote a literary column in his native language.

Her sister, Janet Malcolm, writes for the New Yorker magazine.

"It's not just chance that we both became writers," says Winn. "In our home education, great emphasis was placed on words. Our dinner-table conversations were about etymology, meanings, rhetorical devices. Later, my own family played huge amounts of word games and palindromes."

Winn and her husband still live in the same Upper West Side apartment where they raised their children. "Chien lunatique" reads the sign on the front door. The dog turns out not to be crazy, just old and hot.

Miss Fearrington Is Wed At Noon

Tracy Deanne Fearrington and Paul Alexander Cobb Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at high noon in St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston Jr. conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Eric Lindsay Fearrington of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alexander Cobb of Drewryville, Va.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Laura Gaither, violinists Carol Moore and Shelley Lucht, trumpeteers William Frazier and Glenn Buck, and guitarist Eric Steven Fearrington.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory silk featuring a mandarin collar of lace with dropped pearls and crystals. The bodice was appliqued with embroidered lace and patterned with hand-beading of seed pearls and iridescents. The design was repeated on the sleeves of windowpane lace extending over the wrist into a point. The back bodice of English netting outlined in embroidered lace featured a silk bow at the waistline over a draped skirt and attached cathedral-length train fashioned with hand-beaded windowpane lace in a pyramid design. The gown was bordered with scalloped embroidered lace. Her cathedral-length veil, designed by Jan Chamblee, fell in layers of silk illusion in a French pouf fashioned with iridescent leaves and pearls framing her face. The bride carried an English style bouquet of calla lilies, freesia, dendrobium orchids and English ivy.

Mrs. Eric Steven Fearrington of Rocky Mount, sister-in-law of the bride, wore a floor-length gown of amethyst moirella designed with a full skirt cascading from a pleated cummerbund waist. The design featured tucked sleeves ending below the elbow and a tailored bodice with bateau neckline, open back with a diagonal obi bow accenting the waistline. She carried an arm bouquet of calla lilies and hosta tied with a tailored bow and streamers of ivory moire.

Bridesmaids included Mrs. Clifford Shawn Fearrington of California, sister-in-law of the bride, Paula Lee Cobb of Roanoke, Va., sister of the bridegroom, Jane M. Hardee of Salisbury, Dora Butler Phelps and Laurie Bynum, both of Greenville, Molly Fix of New York, and Kerri Logue of Cary. Their dresses and flowers were identical to that of the honor attendant.

MRS. COBB

Honorary bridesmaids were Lynnette Dorn Johnson and Tammy Jenkins of Greenville and Mandi Maiolo of Charlotte.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Groomsmen were Joseph Mark Cobb of Virginia, brother of the bridegroom, Eric Steven Fearrington of Rocky Mount and Clifford Shawn Fearrington of California, brothers of the bride, Robert Lundy Jackson, Carl William Caulk and Michael Wayne Brett, all of Greenville, and Joseph Dale Andrews of Virginia.

A wedding breakfast was held at the Greenville Hilton Inn after the ceremony. The parents of the bridegroom gave an after-rehearsal dinner at the Greenville Hilton Inn, followed by a dance held at the Greenville Country Club given by friends. A bridesmaids luncheon was given by Mrs. Lee Roy Hardee and Mrs. Robert S. Messner Friday at the Greenville Country Club.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and is in customer service at Overtons Sport Center while completing the professional acting program at the university. The bridegroom is a graduate of South Hampton Academy in Virginia and Pitt Community College. He is a marine manager at Overtons Sport Center.

The couple left Saturday evening for a cruise to Nassau and the Grand Bahamas.

They was entertained at several parties in Greenville and Virginia prior to their wedding.

A taffeta lining in a linen skirt should be removable to make washing and pressing easier.

Widow's Memories Marred

DEAR ABBY: "No Name" asked you how a woman could tell a homosexual from a bisexual man. Take it from one who knows – there ain't no way!

For 29 years, I was happily married to an attractive professional man. Together we raised four fine children. He was a great lover, and never did I doubt his loyalty to me. He died suddenly at age 62. When I dismantled his office and opened his office safe, all the uglies came spilling out!

He had been an active homosexual since he was 15. I found love letters from Toms, Dicks and Harrys across the United States and Europe. There were canceled checks, proving that for years he had been supporting two guys with generous monthly checks. I found pictures of himself living in two separate worlds – one with his family, the other with his secret companions ranging in age from teen-agers to older men. I was devastated!

Not only did this revelation destroy 29 years of beautiful memories, but the embarrassment of feeling humiliated before those who probably knew was worse.

He's been gone for 10 years, and looking back, there were some clues, but at the time I never suspected a thing. Bizarre? Yes. If this could happen to me, it could happen to anyone. – BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Your chilling tale should signal a valuable warning to others who have locked away similar memorabilia, which if discovered could break some hearts and tarnish a lifetime of golden memories. So, readers, the time for spring cleaning is now.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had a terrific sex life until he turned 40. Then he said he was getting "old," and he began to lose interest in sex. He's 50 now, and hasn't touched me in two years. He's also a heavy drinker and smoker (even after lung surgery). He tells me how much he loves me, but I'm lucky to get a good-night peck on the cheek.

I am sure there is no other woman – he's home all the time. Can nicotine and alcohol kill a person's sex drive? – LONELY AND ANGRY

DEAR LONELY: Yes, in varying degrees. And sometimes they kill the person.

Miss Jenkins, Mr. Staton Wed In Saturday Service At Cornerstone

The wedding ceremony of Betty Sue Jenkins and Nelson Staton was solemnized at 2 p.m. Saturday in Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church in Greenville. Performing the double-ring ceremony was the Rev. Arlee Griffin Jr.

The ceremony included the lighting of a unity candle and the special presentation of roses to the mothers.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Virginia Jenkins and Clarence Jenkins, both of Greenville, and Mrs. Cora Staton of Robersonville and the late William Staton.

A program of nuptial music was performed by Michael Garrett, organist and Debra Leathers and Onession Brooks, soloists.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Clarence Jenkins, Jr. She wore a formal gown of white satin. Beaded embroidered schiffli lace embellished the fitted basque bodice which was styled with a keyhole neckline, accented the Chandalier beading. Sheer cameo cut outs of schiffli detailed the long sleeves. Covered buttons flowed down the back of the sheer illusion yoke to a triple tier apron of satin and lace. Embroidered schiffli motifs adorned the full grande skirt and cathedral train, which was edged in a deep border of embroidered schiffli lace. She wore a cap covered with schiffli lace accented with pearls and rhinestones. A pouf flowed from the back of the cap with the attached shoulder-length veil accented with irridescents. Her headpiece was designed by Katie Cummings of Raleigh. The bride carried a white floral cascade of roses, daisies, miniature carnations, baby's breath, accented with ivy and tied with lace and satin streamers.

Carolyn Jenkins of Raleigh, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a tea-length dress of dusty rose. The drop-waist bodice with lace overlay featured a stand-up collar and long tapered sleeves. She wore a heart shaped hat of matching taffeta and lace accented with netting and pouf. She carried a nosegay of mixed flowers in dusty rose, pink and gray with matching streamers.

Bridesmaids were Earlene Nickens of Forestville, Md., Alicia Chapman, Saundra Lassiter, and Glenda Honeyblue, all of Raleigh, and Jackie Godley of Greenville, cousin of the bride. Beverly Willoughby of Greenville, niece of the bride, served as junior bridesmaid. They wore dresses similar to the honor attendant but with short sleeves. They wore identical hats and carried similar nosegays. The gowns were styled by Linda Byers of Greensboro.

Maggie Crandell of Robersonville was the flower girl. She wore a dress of dusty rose lace and taffeta similar to that of the bridesmaids and carried a flower basket trimmed with lace and satin streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a dusty rose tea-length dress of jacquard. The mother of the groom wore a tea-length dress of royal blue silk. Both wore orchid corsages. Mrs. Annie Godley, grandmother of the bride, received a corsage of white carnations.

Tarnez Greene of Cleveland, Ohio, served as best man. Groomsmen were Johnny Evans of Raleigh, Larry Willoughby, brother-in-law of the bride, Willie Reid, Jr., James Tripp, Jr., and Thomas Nevelle, all of Greenville. Junior groomsmen was Troy Staton of Robersonville, nephew of the bridegroom. Endre Greene of Cleveland was ringbearer.

The wedding was directed by Ella Harris of Greenville.

A reception was held at the Holiday Inn, Greenville. Louise Jenkins presided at the guest registry. Introductions of the wedding party were made by DeWitt McCarley. Tarnez Greene gave the toast and Angela Staton, niece of the bridegroom, received gifts. Bettie Crandle and Torneil Staton, niece of the bridegroom, poured punch and Mildred Willoughby, sister of the bride, served cake.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's family at the Golden Corral. A bridal luncheon and several showers were held prior to the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and a member of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. and is employed as an eligibility specialist with the Department of Social Services. The bridegroom is a graduate of Martin Community College and Pitt Community College. He attended Winston-Salem State University and is enrolled at East Carolina University. He is acting assistant chief of police of the Greenville Police Department.

After a wedding cruise to the Bahamas, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Miss Leary, Dr. Schellenberg Married

WINTERVILLE — Martha Cindy Leary and Dr. Robert Karl Schellenberg, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday in a 5 p.m. ceremony at the Winterville Baptist Church.

Dr. Russell Willis and the Rev. Bill Leary officiated during the double-ring ceremony. Music was provided by Carol Hawkins of Greenville, soloist, and Glen Buck of Greenville, trumpet soloist.

Parents of the bridal couple are the Rev. and Mrs. Bill Leary of Winterville and Dr. and Mrs. Karl Schellenbery of Virginia Beach, Va.

MRS. SCHELLENBERG

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor-length gown with a cathedral train of traditional bridal satin with venise and sposabella lace. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline, leg o'mutton sleeves and torso waist. Venise lace motifs encrusted with seed pearls and sequins lavishly appliqued the bodice, sleeves, and outlined the neckline and illusion yoke back. The floor-length skirt extended into a cathedral train. Venise lace motifs beaded with seed pearls adorned the skirt and bordered the hemline. Cascading tiers of satin ruffles outlined with garlands of sposabella lace cutouts accented the the cathedral train extending to the hemline. The bride chose a waltz-length tiered veil of illusion with a fluted edge and standing pouff flowing from a tiara of venise lace motifs etched with seed pearls and crystals and accented with satin tossettes for her headpiece. She carried a cascade of white sweetheart roses, ivy, white chrysanthemums, white miniature carnations accented with baby's breath and red sweetheart roses.

Gay Leary of Wilson served as her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Betty Ann Galway of Gaithersburg, Md., sister of the bridegroom, Margaret Schellenberg of Virginia Beach, sister of the bridegroom, Beth Barrineau of Greenville, Nora Williford of Wilson, Phyllis Smith of Raleigh, Susan Small of Edenton and Melanie Russ of Charlotte.

The maid of honor wore a tea-length dress of black accented with white taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a sweetheart neckline, julliet pouff sleeves accented with a fabric rosette and basque waist. A white taffeta asymetrical drape cascaded from the right shoulder to the left waist, accented with the white taffeta bow at the waist back. The gathered taffeta skirt flowed to tea length. The maid of honor carried an arm bouquet of white, long stemmed roses with baby's breath, a white bow and streamers. The bridesmaids carried arm bouquets of red, long-stemmed roses with baby's breath, a bow and streamers.

Eddie Theisz of Virginia Beach served as best man. Ushers were Richard Schellenberg of Virginia Beach, Randy Binzer of Iowa City, Io., Clay Cromley of St. Louis, Mo., Tom Brooke of Williamsburg, Va., Dale Leary of Greenville, brother of the bride, Wade Leary of Wilson, brother of the bride, Ramon Matawaran of Norfolk, Va., and Warren Gordon of Greenville.

The reception was held at the Shrine Club in Greenville. Aunts of the bride, Mrs. Vann Smith of Edenton and Mrs. Merle Clark of Durham cut cake. Mrs. J.D. Mayo of Greenville and Mrs. Thomas Leary of Edenton, aunts of the bride, poured punch.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the Colonial Inn in Farmville. A party was given by the siblings of the bride in honor of the couple at the Farmville Country Club. A bridal luncheon was given by the bride's great aunt, Grace Hill, on the day of the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of Peace College, Meredith College and East Carolina University Graduate School of Social Work. The bridegroom is a graduate of William and Mary and Eastern Virginia Medical School.

Both the bride and bridegroom work at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

After a wedding trip to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, the couple will live in Greenville

Never Put Home Office Outside Bathroom Door

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Ever since the President of the United States started to work out of his home, everyone thinks he can save on bus fare and lunches by doing it, too.

The number of people who work part-time or full-time from their homes now is somewhere around 23 million.

I have been doing it for 20 years, and I can tell you it is no day at the beach. All of these stories that talk about creating an "atmosphere" for business and "zoning" your own space are right out of Alice in Wonderland. If you're going to create anything, it should be a chapel right next to your desk.

No one takes you seriously when you work from your home. If you worked in a big office building with egg-crate lighting and bottled water, would someone call you from a repair shop and ask you to give him the serial number off the bottom of the toaster?

Or if you were in the middle of a high-level corporate meeting, would a child call you to the phone and tell you you just ran out of toilet paper in the hall bath?

And who in his right mind would call the President as he works at cutting the national deficit and chirp, "You busy?"

No, there is just something unprofessional about a home office that invites people to leave a half-eaten doughnut on your desk and a telephone receiver with a Popsicle stick and your pen woven into the cord.

If I had any advice about home offices, it would be to never locate them outside a bathroom door.

We're talking freeway traffic here, plus outbursts of steam, blaring radios, off-key singing and heavy gargling.

Be an unlisted mother or you'll fall into the trap of, "Does your mother stay at home or does she work? She's at home? Then she can drive the Future Homemakers of America to a meat-processing plant."

Have business hours or at least 50 times a day you will have someone interrupt your chain of thought with, "Don't get up. Just tell me where it is."

Don't share your office with another business. This translates to a room that houses a sewing machine, ironing board, stereo, exercise bicycle, or a guest who is sleeping over. These are distractions you don't need. Wear your heart on your sleeve and your supplies around your waist. Years ago, I created a utility belt that holds my scissors, pen, tape, ruler, envelopes and white paper. Every night before I go to bed, I hide them in a different spot. A loaded utility belt in the hands of children is a dangerous thing.

I read one story that said a home office can offer you exactly what you have always wanted: a challenge, efficiency, effectiveness and fun.

You will do well to get one out of four.

Leslie Ann Harrell Married In Jacksonville

JACKSONVILLE — Leslie Ann Harrell and Michael Paul Geske of Jacksonville were united in marriage Saturday in a 2 p.m. ceremony at the Infant of Prague Catholic Church.

The Rev. Casimir Sabol officiated during the double-ring ceremony and music was provided by Monique Roy, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Robert and Shirley Harrell of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Peter Geske of Chicago and Ms. Barbara Wulf of Malibu, Calif.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of imported white satin with an open V-shaped neckline enhanced with appliques of schifflie embroidered organza lace beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins. The beaded lace extended over the fitted torso bodice to the dropped, basque waistline. The long tapered Renaissance-styled sleeves were appliqued in the beaded lace which embellished the open, cutwork that featured English net studded with pearl clusters. Lace edged the calla points at the wrist which closed with satin-covered buttons. The demi-bell silhouette skirt was adorned with appliques of the floral patterned lace with linear designs etched in pearls. The hemline was edged in the lace and extended over the Cathedral- length train. She selected a pearl headband featuring a French pouf of bridal illusion off-centered with a spray of silk flowers interspersed with pearl filaments. Her veil was accented with pearl flower medallions. The bride carried catalilies with white roses and baby's breath.

MRS. GESKE

Denise Davis of Greenville served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Malissa Suggs and Mary Strange, both of Greenville, Tammy Greer of Pasadena, Calif., Catherine and Christine Geske of Madison, Wis.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore princess-styled, floor-length gowns of fuchsia satin and carried catalilies and dark pink roses with accents of baby's breath.

Peter Geske served as his son's best man. Ushers were Kyle Geske of Madison, Wisc., Alan Sharkany of Connecticut, Timothy Healy of Madison, Wis., Steven Meyer and Edward Heidecker, both of Jacksonville, Ricky Harrell of New York, N.Y. and Brent Harrell of Wilmington.

The reception was held at the Steak House of Camp Lejeune. A sit-down dinner was provided. The Lahn and Loften Band provided music.

A bridesmaids' luncheon, given by Susan Peele Hamm of Snow Hill, was held on Friday. The rehearsal dinner was held Friday at Murphy's Restaurant in Jacksonville.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and is the manager of the Coastal Fitness Center in Jacksonville. The bridegroom is in the United States Marine Corp.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas and Disney World, the couple will reside in Jacksonville for seven months and then Chicago, Ill.

Indian Relic Bonanza To Be Housed

By JANET McCONNAUGHEY
Associated Press Writer

MARKSVILLE, La. (AP) — Nearly 20 years after a treasure-hunter found a buried Indian village in the Tunica Hills, the relics uncovered are being readied for their last resting place.

No public notice will be given when any human remains mixed in with the Tunica Treasure are given their second burial, says Earl J. Barbry, chairman of the Tunica-Biloxi tribe.

"We will not make a public spectacle of it," said Barbry, a stocky man whose voice is soft even at its most vehement. "It's something that should be done in private."

Public ceremonies will be reserved for Nov. 11, when ground will be broken for a museum to house the 2½ tons of pottery, arrowheads and other artifacts buried centuries ago with more than 150 Indians.

"These artifacts should have been left in the ground. This will be their final resting place," Barbry said.

Leaders from as many as 16 southern and eastern Indian tribes will attend, because the Tunica-Biloxis and Chitimachas also are hosting the United Southeastern Tribes this week, Barbry said.

He said he expects the museum to be finished next summer.

The Tunica-Biloxi tribe got a $275,000 federal grant to build the museum after it won the artifacts back from Leonard Charrier, a guard who dug them up between 1968 and 1972 from the rugged hills near the state prison at Angola.

Charrier contended he spent a lot of time and money tracking down the ancient village and that anything in it was up for grabs because the tribe had abandoned it in 1763.

He went to court in 1974 to get legal ownership of the collection. According to attorney J. Arthur Smith, the judge ruled first for Charrier but changed his mind after the state intervened.

The Tunica-Biloxi tribe got into the case in 1981, at the state's invitation. And in 1985, ad hoc state District Judge C. Lenton Sartain ruled that Charrier had not had legal permission to dig at the site, and that the artifacts had not been abandoned by the tribe.

"They were burial goods ... and they remain burial goods today, whether they are referred to as artifacts, funerary offerings or the 'Tunica Treasure,'" the judge wrote.

Barbry said the Indians always had known where the village was, but left it alone out of reverence for their ancestors.

"I'm sure you'd be upset, too, if somebody went to a cemetery and dug up your ancestors. It's only human," he said.

But what is done is done — the artifacts will remain above ground.

About 100 or so of the things dug up by Charrier now sit in two big display cases at the tribal headquarters in Marksville.

There are shallow bowls, round bowls and green glazed vases; jugs decorated with whorls dug into the clay and with designs punched in with the tip of a sharp tool; necklaces made from beads of gray stone and of semiprecious stones.

There are many items clearly brought by Europeans: metal buttons, trade beads of multicolored glass, crosses, black and pitted scissors and trigger guards from rifles, a pen nib. There are blue-glazed mugs and bowls, and a plate decorated with a verse from a French drinking song.

Barbry said he went to the Louisiana State Museum in New Orleans, where the rest of the collection is still stored, and picked four or five closed boxes at random for the display.

The rest is being catalogued by R. Christopher Goodman & Associates of New Orleans and two members of the tribe to be trained by Goodman, Barbry said.

Charrier sent it to Harvard University's Peabody Museum to be verified, catalogued and appraised, but Barbry said the job was never finished.

"There's a list. But it's very hard to read. Whoever wrote it has very poor handwriting," he said.

And he thinks that somebody still has part of the collection. It was stored in a dozen boxes — not nearly enough to hold what has been described as 2½ tons of artifacts, said Barbry.

"I'd be very interested in finding out where the rest have gotten to," he said. "We intend to find out. That is a promise."

BRIGHTEN BASEMENT

ATLANTA (AP) — More homeowners are installing paneling to help turn cold, damp basements into cozy family rooms.

With proper selection and installation, paneling appears to lighten, enlarge and warm a remodeled basement. It also can be an enjoyable do-it-yourself project, says Dick Rose of Georgia-Pacific.

"It doesn't take a lot of expertise to install paneling," Rose says. "Since it's often a one-person job, paneling a basement can be easy for a do-it-yourselfer."

Kathryn Cormier Gives Program

A program on hair care and styling was given at the meeting of the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club. Kathryn Cormier, a hair design specialist, was speaker.

Cindy Erdin and Debbie Bissette will be chairpersons of the tasting luncheon scheduled for March 19.

Two needy families will be remembered at Christmas. Gigi Hallow, Amy Morris and Chris Brueckner will collect donated and purchase items while Karen Krupa volunteered to help in selecting the families.

The deadline for information to be included in the newsletter is Nov. 15 and club directories have been completed and are available.

Kathy Whitehead, projects committee chairman, reported on shrubbery which has been planted at an entrance. Another clean-up day has been planned for Nov. 21 at the clubhouse.

The plaque listing past garden club presidents and women of the year has been completed and have been placed in the clubhouse.

Ms. Hallow is the sunshine chairman for November. Ann Peterson is chairman of the telephome committee.

Meeting hostesses were Brenda Edwards, Phyllis Joyner and Nan Garrett.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

An accessory is like a dress with jewelry. One complements the other, but without unity, the art of display is lost. Accessory display is an art.

For example, one should think in terms of scale, unity and balance when planning a wall grouping. Various sizes are needed to carry out the plan. Questions should be asked like: Is the group too close together? Are the hangings too far apart? Are an odd number of items used? It may help to draw a sketch to scale on graph paper. Remember, wall hangings need some unity, whether the same frames or the same subject matter. Also, each room should have one major focal point and accessories can add drama and individuality, revealing personalities, interests and hobbies of the occupants. Accessorizing is the one area where your imagination can run rampant without being concerned with function. Don't be shy. Create your own family portrait gallery. Combine a number of shots and group them in one large display, as in a hall. Accessory arrangement can be haphazard or artfully designed, adding to the room's decorating scheme.

Let the professionals at Betsy Drake Interiors help you turn an ordinary room into a work of art. We have the largest inventory of lamps and accessories in eastern North Carolina, attractively priced at savings of 50% or more.

Squatters Being Assisted In Some Cities

By TED DUNCOMBE
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — In the late 1970s and early '80s, squatters seized more than 1,000 abandoned buildings in Philadelphia, breaking the law to create decent places to live.

Today, community organizers say they are working with the city and private sector to place people legally in permanent housing.

This cooperative movement is bearing fruit in other cities, too.

Squatters who seized 25 vacant city-owned houses in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1985 have since become legal homesteaders under a city-assisted housing program. People are also living in homes they seized and renovated in Boston and Pittsburgh.

But in Los Angeles, a squatters' tent city for up to 600 homeless people was dismantled this September with no alternatives to replace it.

"Squatting's always extremely difficult," said Bruce Dorpalen, director of ACORN Housing Corp., which organized about 300 takeovers at the high point of squatting activity in Philadelphia. "It's very hard on the family."

It was hard on Maria Santana and her husband, Juan Soto, when they seized a two-story Philadelphia row house in 1984. Neighbors said the house had been unoccupied for three years, and parts had been damaged by fire. Graffiti scarred the walls.

As the couple labored at renovations and applied for the title, the owner, whose taxes were unpaid, one day made a surprise visit, demanding to know "who gave us the permission to come in," Ms. Santana recalled. Since then, with help from the city and a neighborhood group, the family has traded the squatter's fear of eviction for the homeowner's responsibility for tax payments.

Now, Ms. Santana said, "I consider it my home."

Dorpalen's organization, part of the national Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now, or ACORN, acknowledges squatting as a tool to win policy changes but focuses on preventing homelessness.

"We try to get people into homeowner situations that are affordable for low-income people," he said.

People living on the streets, contends Mike Shea, national campaign director for ACORN, are a small minority of those needing help to get livable homes.

"We need a Marshall Plan for housing," he said. "It's got to be a long-term plan. Unfortunately, given the budget deficit problem, the future looks bleak."

Henry DeBernardo, director of a north Philadelphia community group, Project Aegis Inc., said squatting has slowed because of a changed political climate that fostered more government efforts to find affordable housing.

But he said he believed the surge of homelessness would likely trigger another wave of squatters in coming years.

"I would think that it's going to be worse the second time around," he said. "I think the issues are going to be much more elaborate. It's just like a little bomb sitting in the city's safe, ticking away. All cities are just the same, actually."

One Philadelphia effort to defuse that bomb, a $9.4 million project to try to place 960 homeless people into 315 existing single-family homes around the city, was recently stalled when some City Council members balked at the process for choosing tenants and home sites.

Jeffrey A. Cruse, president of Philadelphia Council for Community Advancement, said he hoped the setback would be temporary.

"I am fearful that the winter's fast approaching and we are going to have delays in construction which will have the first families moving in during the spring instead of during the winter when it's most critical to have people off the street and out of shelters," he said.

Once the council authorizes acquisition of the first 100 properties, all habitable but needing repairs, some homeless people could be housed within 10 to 15 days, Cruse said.

The Dignity Housing project will cost city government $6.85 daily per person, according to an Oct. 7 project summary. That includes amortization of development costs, plus administrative expenses and a spectrum of social services to help homeless people become independent.

By contrast, the average cost of public shelter is $13 daily per person, not including the cost of social services.

People who move into Dignity Housing homes will have to sign contracts promising to participate in job training, education, family counseling, health programs and community activities.

"This is not just a housing program where we give you the key and you go in and sit there and watch TV," said Chris Sprowal, president of the Philadelphia-based National Union of the Homeless. "There are some things that are going to be a must, and if you don't do those things, we're going to put you out."

The housing units are in areas that have decent schools, access to transportation, job opportunities, medical care and food markets.

"We don't want to put those people in ghettos or in drug-infested communities, but in communities that are stable and have a strong sense of community pride," Sprowal said.

The Dignity Housing project illustrates the need for activism to achieve goals for the homeless, Sprowal said. The project received city approval after Sprowal, founder and former president of the Committee for Dignity and Fairness to the Homeless, negotiated with Mayor W. Wilson Goode in December 1986.

"There is nothing that we have here in Philadelphia that wasn't fought for, that people didn't have to go to jail, or march, or make some sort of sacrifice to get," Sprowal said. "But at least we have people who will listen, who will say, 'If you want it, go out and organize for it. Force me to do it.'

"It's not a popular issue to give $9 million to homeless people."

According to Shea, federal budget cuts in the 1980s have contributed to the deterioration of low-income housing stock throughout the country, while gentrification has displaced low-income people from many neighborhoods. Passage of the federal Stewart B. McKinney Act, authorizing $1 billion to be spent to help the homeless, is beginning to provide help.

Meanwhile, ACORN has organized squatting in such cities as Boston, Detroit, St. Louis, Phoenix, New Orleans, Atlanta, Chicago and Washington to prompt changes in local housing policies, Shea said.

With other groups, ACORN has helped squatters in Philadelphia win sanction from the city to obtain legal deeds. But many didn't have enough money to rehabilitate the properties, and that's a gap Dignity Housing aims to fill.

"It takes a combination of a good use of financial resources and a little human compassion, and the combination of those two things can work miracles if you put your mind to it," Cruse said.

In Brooklyn's East New York section, the squatters who seized 25 buildings in 1985 now control 58 city-owned buildings in cooperation with the city. With ACORN's help, they formed the Mutual Housing Association of New York and received money and technical help in return for restricted rights of resale.

"Mutual housing is becoming more and more of an attractive model," said Felice Michetti, first deputy commissioner of New York City's Department of Housing Preservation and Development. "And it's being looked at by neighborhood groups across the city."

HOME IS NOWHERE — A homeless woman rests on a bench in front of a display of flowers inside the atrium of a New York office complex. As America's tens of thousands of homeless people face winter, cities and states are scrambling to offer innovative help so that few may suffer this year. (AP Laserphoto)

Jaymes Honored — Retiring From Ministry

The retirement of the Rev. Howard G. Jaymes was recognized at Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church recently.

Jaymes and his wife, Margaret Buie Garriss Jaymes, are celebrating 45 years in the Christian ministry.

Jaymes became a licensed minister in 1942 and was ordained in 1944. He attended Atlantic Christian College and Duke University. He has held pastorates in Greenville, Washington, Stokes, Sanford, Chicago, Cissna Park, Ill., Winston-Salem, Elizabeth City, Charleston, S.C., Winterville, Snow Hill, Eden, Gold Point and Bethel.

Jaymes also has worked as a counselor. He did medical-social counseling at Winterville High School, Chicod High School and D.H. Conley High School. He also worked for the state 10 years as a psychotherapist, involved in individual and group therapy, at Pitt, Greene and Wilson county mental health centers.

He has done vocal soloist work with various university choruses and was a voice major at the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago. He sang with Perry Como at The Chesterfield Supper Club in Durham and performed two operatic aria with the Duke Men's Choir at Carnegie Hall in New York.

Since 1956, he has served as a volunteer chaplain at Pitt County, Martin County, Robersonville Township and Lenoir County hospitals and has studied hospital chaplaincy at Duke, the University of Chicago and Pitt Memorial.

In retirement, the Jaymeses plan to continue to direct tours of the Holy Land. They now given slide shows and lectures on these tours to churches and civic groups. Jaymes is writing his autobiography.

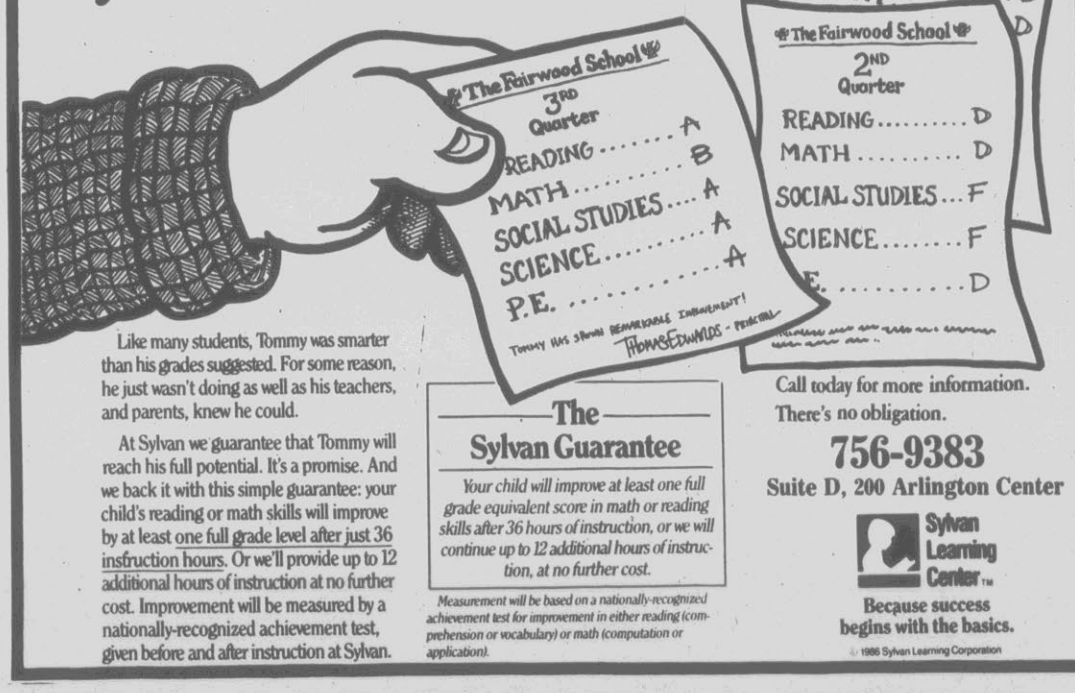
NOW ENROLLING FOR FALL!



Like many students, Tommy was smarter than his grades suggested. For some reason, he just wasn't doing as well as his teachers, and parents, knew he could.

At Sylvan we guarantee that Tommy will reach his full potential. It's a promise. And we back it with this simple guarantee: your child's reading or math skills will improve by at least one full grade level after just 36 instruction hours. Or we'll provide up to 12 additional hours of instruction at no further cost. Improvement will be measured by a nationally-recognized achievement test, given before and after instruction at Sylvan.

The Sylvan Guarantee

Your child will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in math or reading skills after 36 hours of instruction, or we will continue up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost.

Measurement will be based on a nationally-recognized achievement test for improvement in either reading (comprehension or vocabulary) or math (computation or application).

Bubb Designing For Perry Ellis

By PAUL GEITNER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Looking at the sophisticated, stylish sweaters, jackets and trousers Brian Bubb creates today as chief men's designer at Perry Ellis, it's hard to believe that one of the first garments he can remember falling in love with was a big, gaudy, floral shirt.

The loud, print shirts were big in the early 1970s, and a friend showed the teen-age Bubb how to make one from some 1940s vintage fabric.

"We put these really, horrible buttons ... I mean, they were beautiful buttons but they didn't go with the shirt," he remembers. "It was a beautiful thing. I wore that shirt for a long time."

Bubb's wardrobe — and the scale of his designing — has changed a great deal since the days he raided his grandmother's fabric scraps.

In the 12 years since he moved from York, Pa., to New York City to attend the Parsons School of Design, Bubb, 30, has become a wunderkind in the international world of design.

After starting with Oscar de la Renta, he went on to do work for Calvin Klein, Ralph Lauren and Christian Dior. In 1982, Bubb went to work for Perry Ellis as assistant men's designer.

Ann Keagy, who retired in 1982 after 35 years as head of the Parsons fashion department, has continued to watch Bubb's career.

"There are some people who, with a lot of training, can become designers," she says. But Bubb is a "very gifted person" born with "extraordinary good taste."

At Christian Dior, Bubb's desk was in the same room as a pattern maker. He learned that "there's a reason for all these lines and the way he cuts out a thing, the grain of the fabric and how it hangs. ... I can apply it to ... the whole spectrum of men's clothing."

Bubb's love of the nuts and bolts of fashion is evident as he walks through the sample room, where ideas go from paper to reality. His pride in the clothes and the Ellis standard appears as he talks about his upcoming collection, the second for spring since Ellis' death in May 1986.

"It's sad that Perry's not around because he was really funny," said Bubb. "He was really considerate and caring about all of his staff and he protected us so well. You have to sort of stand on your own now."

Bubb intends to stay within Ellis' general philosophy of clothes that are modern without being too daring, stylish yet comfortable: "clothing that stretches the rules of dress without bending anyone out of shape."

Basket Weaving Is Men's Work In This Family

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — It only takes Joubert Harris a couple of hours to weave one of his split oak baskets. But that's the easy part of the work.

"What you see is representative of an entire family effort," said Harris, a fourth-generation basket weaver.

First you have to find the right tree, cut it down and carry it away.

"The material is hard to come by. White oak doesn't grow everywhere," said Harris, an environmentalist for the Department of Transportation and Development.

It's found most often in hilly country, and the best trees are those which have long, thin trunks.

That usually means trees which grew close together, making it impossible to get a truck into the woods to haul them out. So Harris and his brothers and father have to haul the trees out on their shoulders after cutting them down.

Only about a six- to eight-foot length is used for basket making — the rest usually goes for firewood.

The Harrises use a wedge and maul or sledgehammer to split the wood into strips, each about as wide as one of Harris' strong fingers. Hand splitting makes the wood stronger and more durable, Harris said.

"We use a lot of makeshift homemade tools," said Harris. "My father uses a lawnmower blade cut in half. I use an old bayonet."

Most of the strips of wood are left their natural color, but some are dyed to make patterned baskets. Harris makes some dyes from walnuts and blackberries, but buys commercial clothing dye for the brighter colors.

"My father will be 74 in November. He's been doing it for 68 years. He was taught by his grandfather, Robert Robertson," said Harris. "It's down to the fifth generation — my brother's children are now making baskets."

Harris began the work out of necessity. He was one of seven boys and five girls raised on a sharecropping farm in the St. Landry Parish town of Washington.

"With a family of our size, it was hard," Harris said. "My parents did whatever they had to do.

"Making baskets helped out. We learned to do things ourselves or we learned to do without."

He said he and his six brothers learned first to weave basket bottoms, working on those for four or five years before they were allowed to move up to weaving the sides.

Now, he said, he continues the work he learned 22 years ago for his own enjoyment, weaving when he's not helping his three children with their homework or working on one of two '57 Chevys he's restoring.

"I do it for a hobby. I could turn it into a professional business, but I want to keep it as a hobby and something to appreciate," he said.

The basket business has changed greatly since his father sold his first in 1920, Harris said.

"Back then, there were only a few different basic types of baskets," he said.

There were egg baskets, feed baskets, rice baskets and barrel baskets, which were used on the farm for measuring corn or cotton.

"Since then baskets have moved from the farm to everybody's den, dining room and everywhere else ... you see colors now, and bows and curls," said Harris.

The family now makes 100 different kinds of baskets. Some ideas came from magazines, others from customers.

"A lot of times, someone'll come in and describe a basket they want and we make it," said Harris.

Drawing On Display

WASH DRAWING — "View At Sorrento," 1864, a black and gray wash over graphite underdrawing, by Henri-Joseph Harpignies, is one of the works to be shown at the North Carolina Museum of Art beginning Oct. 31. The show, "Drawings as Drawings: Works from the Ackland Art Museum and the Weatherspoon Art Gallery," will be on view in Raleigh through Jan. 3. (Photo courtesy N.C. Museum of Art)

Local Arts Projects Supported

RALEIGH — The N.C. Arts Council has awarded $1,296,000 in Grassroots Arts Program monies to support local arts projects statewide.

The program allocates funds to each North Carolina county on a per capita basis. The current state fund allocation comes to about 21 cents per person. This program was established by the General Assembly in 1977 and is the Council's main source of funding for community arts activities.

In every county, the Board of County Commissioners designates a local distributing agent (LDA). The agents decide how Grassroots Arts Program funds in their counties will be spent.

Grassroots Arts Program award recipients must match the funds dollar-for-dollar from other sources.

Funds allocated to Pitt County and adjacent counties are:

• Pitt County: $19,865 — Ayden, $1,500; Farmville Community Arts Council, $3,500; Greenville Choral Society, $1,000; Greenville Museum of Art, $3,000; Grifton, $1,500; Pitt County Schools, $2,500; Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, $6,865.

• Beaufort County: Beaufort County Arts Council, $8,965.

• Craven County: Craven Arts Council and Gallery, $16,470.

• Edgecombe County: Edgecombe County Cultural Arts Council, $12,105.

• Greene County: Greene County Arts Council, $3,420.

• Lenoir County: Community Council for the Arts, $12,534.

• Martin County: Martin County Arts Council, $5,523.

• Wilson County: Arts Council of Wilson, $13,335.

To Patricia: My Car, My Stereo, My Retainer

EDITOR'S NOTE — When a group of teen-agers in Levittown, N.Y., were asked to write their wills as a classroom exercise, the documents revealed much about the lifestyles of the young in the middle-class Long Island suburb, from bank accounts, cars and VCRs to blow-dryers and comic books.

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

LEVITTOWN, N.Y., (AP) — They are high school students and they live in Levittown, a landmark in the first flight of Americans to the suburbs and the small house and piece of greenery young couples could afford.

That was 40 years ago. The expansion attics have long since been expanded, the carports enclosed, the porches or family rooms added. The adolescents who frolic or sulk here now represent the second generation of teen-agers in the development.

A recent classroom exercise reveals remarkable strides in their lifestyles and life support systems. They were asked to write their wills.

These students live on lanes and roads — not streets — named Orchid, Sparrow, Periwinkle, Castle, Harvest, Mistletoe, Pasture, Vista, Morning Glory, Abbey, Blacksmith, Sandpiper, Chimney, Bayberry.

They belong to families named Kelly, Rijo, Hefferman, Berju, Beller, Cody, Weese, Grimes, Failla, Calabro, Wengerter, Mittel, McDonough, Czachor, Cocoman, O'Shea, Talkachov.

They are 16 to 18 years old, 11th- and 12th-graders in Division Avenue High School, Levittown. They were taking an elementary course in "every day law" from Susan Galland, learning about criminal and civil law, about laws relating to contracts, consumers, marriage, divorce, adoption, wills.

For their will-writing assignment, Ms. Galland stipulated that their bequests deal with their actual worldly goods, not fictional assets.

Well, now.

Kathryn was prodigious in her bequests to her four sisters. To Margaret, she left her jewelry. To Elizabeth, "my shoes, clothes and my softball glove." To Lorraine, "my hair spray, blow-dryer and brushes." To Patricia, "my car, stereo, cassettes and my retainer."

The laws of probate do not require Kathryn to specify whether the aforesaid retainer relates to music or teeth. If her car bequest seems casual, it is because more than half of her classmates own their own cars. Among the early settlers of Levittown in 1947 and 1948 most parents were lucky to own a car.

The wills submitted to Ms. Galland suggest that today's high school student is building a varied estate.

Joseph bequeathed his 1967 Mustang to his father, his radio, Walkman and tapes to brother Michael, his baseball gloves to brother James, his weights to Michael, one lacrosse stick to each brother, his "bank account and cash" to be divided equally among his parents and sister and, finally, "my car magazines to my friend Thomas."

Marc revealed a particularly fine hand in assembling a diversified portfolio.

He left his car to his friend Dave; his diamond ring to his father; his gold rope chain to his brother Scott; his gold Yankee (baseball) and Islander (hockey) charms to brother Ian; "all of my baseball and hockey equipment" to his friend Sal; his color television and stereo to his friend Joe; his gold bracelet to his friend Wendy; $500 in savings bonds to each of friends Mike and Rich; his NBA basketball and NFL football to friend Bill; $2,000 to each of his brothers; "control of my stock account" to his mother and father; "all the rest of my property" to his parents. If any of the legatees dies before Marc does, he stipulates that their gifts become part of his residuary estate, which estate, he further stipulates, will pay "all taxes." Marc got an A-plus.

Norman left his 1974 Super Beetle Volkswagen to his buddy, Anthony, and his jewelry and part of his bank account to his girlfriend, Suzy. Glenn left his lacrosse sticks and all of his bank account to his girlfriend, Lynn, but not his "Air Jordan" basketball sneakers. They went to Tom.

Noreen consigned her bagpipes to her father, her teddy bear to her brother Jerry "to give to one of his children when he has them" and, to her friend Kathleen, "my Swatch watch and all the clothes I never gave back to her."

Lest readers assume that the young testators of Levittown think only materialistically, Julia's last will and testament should be noted. To her brothers and sisters, nieces and nephews and friends, she bequeathed her jewelry, pink radio, light bulb poster, stereo, stuffed animals and favorite pillow.

But she added the proviso that these assets should go to Goodwill Industries if her beneficiaries predecease her.

Kim left her "K" ring to friend Kerri, her heart ring to her cousin Jody and "my ring on layaway (if it is paid in full at the time of my death) to my mother."

To other family and friends, she left her radio, tapes, watch, earrings, gold bracelets, gold chain, bicycle and bank account. And she specified that her Archie comic books be given to a retarded boy in her school.

Thomas was probably the star of the class philanthropists. He provided for a fund to be administered by his brother Michael. That would include money from Thomas' bank account and money obtained from the sale of his car, television, VCR, stereo, phone, phone answering machine and "all other personal possessions."

All monies in the fund, Thomas instructed his executor, are to be used for the care, feeding and "extra needs" of his dog, Dokey.

Arts Subsidies Distributed

RALEIGH — The N.C. Arts Council has selected 15 national and 39 state performing artists or groups for its 1988-1989 touring roster. Nonprofit, tax-exempt organizations booking these artists are eligible for fee subsidies from the N.C. Arts Council. Subsidy support is available for performances scheduled from July 1, 1988-June 30, 1989. The Council promotes the touring program as a means of reaching statewide audiences.

The 1988-89 National Touring Roster includes the following ballet companies: Atlanta Ballet; Eliot Feld Ballet of New York City; the Ohio Ballet of Akron, and the Washington Ballet of Washington, D.C.

In the modern dance area, the roster includes: Oberlin Dance Collective/San Francisco; Stephen Petronio Company of New York City; Philadanco of Philadelphia, and Nina Wiener Dance Company of New York City. Hubbard Street Dance Company of Chicage, a jazz dance company, will also be in the program.

The national touring program offers theatrical performances by the following: The Acting Company of New York City; the Alley Theater from Houston; the Center for Puppetry Arts of Atlanta; John Maxwell: "Oh, Mr. Faulkner, Do You Write?" from Jackson, Miss.; Missouri Repertory Theater of Kansas City, and the San Francisco Mime Troupe.

Deadline for subsidy applications for these national touring groups is May 1, 1988.

Now in its ninth season, the North Carolina Touring Roster includes professional dance, theater and music groups performing in the state.

Dance groups chosen for the 1988-1989 roster are the African-American Dance Ensemble of Durham; the Apple Chill Cloggers of Carrboro; New Performing Dance Company of Durham; North Carolina Dance Theater of Winston-Salem, and Wall St. Danceworks of Asheville.

Theatrical artists and companies on the state roster are: Doug Berky of Wake Forest; Grey Seal Puppets from Charlotte; Lynch Puppetheater of Dallas; North Carolina Black Repertory Company from Winston-Salem; North Carolina Shakespeare Festival of High Point; North Carolina Theater for Young People from Greensboro; Carey Sutton of Winston-Salem; Tarradiddle Players from Charlotte; Touch Mime of Carrboro, and Transactors Improv Company from Carrboro.

Classical music performers include: Broyhill Chamber Ensemble of Boone; Eric Larsen from Winston-Salem; Mallarme Chamber Players of Durham; Amy Mugavero from Raleigh; Musica Della Collina of Carrboro; Robert Nathanson from Wilmington; Marilyn Thompson of LaGrange, and Rebecca Troxler and Jane Hawkins from Durham.

The Jazz musicians selected for the state touring roster are: Cornelious/Crawford Duo of Durham; Dungey/Tyson/McCrae Trio from Wilmington; Group Sax of Raleigh; String of Pearls from Durham; the Bo Thorpe Orchestra of Rocky Mount, and the Unifour Jazz Ensemble of Hudson.

For more information on the programs and for subsidy applications, contact Amy Smith, touring program coordinator, N.C. Arts Council, Department of Cultural Resources, Raleigh 27611, or call 733-2821.

BMW Courtesy Inspection
A Service and Safety Awareness Program

BMW WOULD LIKE TO IMPROVE YOUR SERVICE AND SAFETY AWARENESS...FREE!

BMW is inviting every BMW owner to participate in the BMW Courtesy Inspection. The Inspection is free but what you will learn about your BMW and your driving awareness will be invaluable.

BMW's Courtesy Inspection includes a comprehensive 40 point Vehicle Inspection performed by certified BMW technicians. The results are recorded on a detailed Inspection Report that's presented to every BMW owner when the Courtesy Inspection is completed. There is no charge or obligation. It's simply that we want you to continue to experience BMW's superior handling and response, by keeping your BMW in top operating condition.

We also want you to be continually aware of the importance of driving safety. The instructors at the BMW/Skip Barber Advanced Driving School will heighten your Safety Awareness in our video entitled, "Dynamic Safety". You will be able to watch this timely and informative presentation at your BMW Dealership while your BMW is undergoing its' 40 point Courtesy Inspection.

Your BMW Dealer believes in the importance of the BMW Driving Experience and the importance of Driving Safety.

The BMW Courtesy Inspection reflects that belief and the importance of your maintaining your driving awareness...and properly maintaining your BMW.

By Appointment Only
Call 355-7200 today.

INSPECTION DATES:
Wednesday, November 11 • 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.
Friday, November 13 • 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.
Saturday, November 14 • 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

In the event that these dates are not convenient we will perform the inspections the following week: November 16 - November 20. By Appointment Only. Call 355-7200.

4-WHEEL ALIGNMENT

Every car, rear wheel or front wheel drive, has an imaginary centerline. All four wheels must be parallel to this line for proper handling and tire wear. When either the front or rear wheels are not parallel you will have poor handling performance, increased wear on suspension parts and tires!

• SWELL TRIP! Initial letters of the names of five planets visited on an imaginary trip through the solar system may be used to form the word MUMPS in the diagram at right.

How quickly can you name the five planets?

P.S.: Planets whose names start with letter M are interchangeable.

Mars, Uranus, Mercury, Pluto, and Saturn will do it.

• SUM FUN! A, B and C are consecutive even numbers. One-third A, plus one-half B, plus one-fourth C totals 15. What are the numbers?

VERSE POSER TWISTS MIND

You can solve this poser in your head if you turn things over in your mind. It involves coping with some trick arithmetic.

Six hundred and sixty so ordered may be,
That if you divide the whole number by three,
You'll find the result will exactly express,
The half of six hundred and sixty, no less.

How quickly can you "explain" it?

Invert axes of 660 to form 990; divide by three: result is 330.

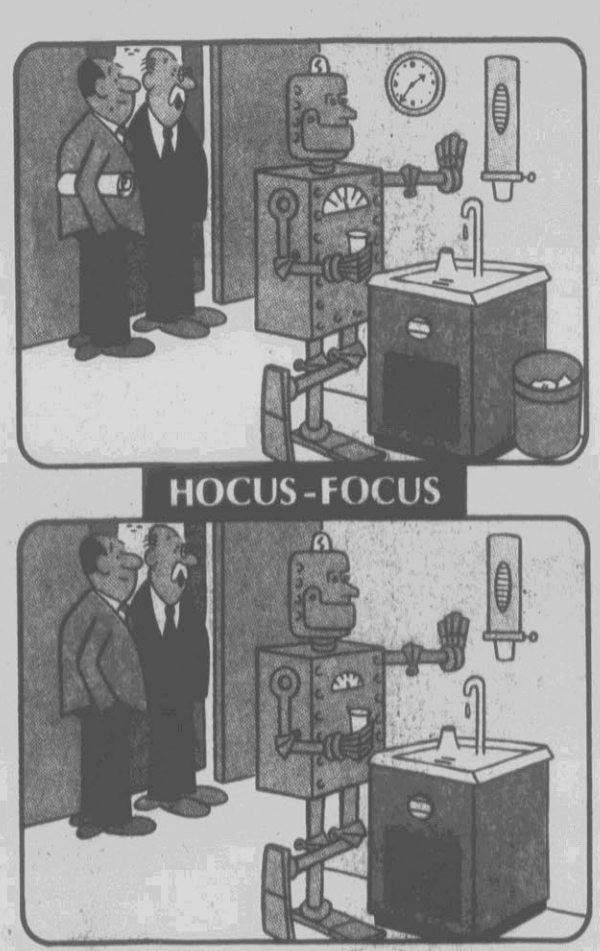
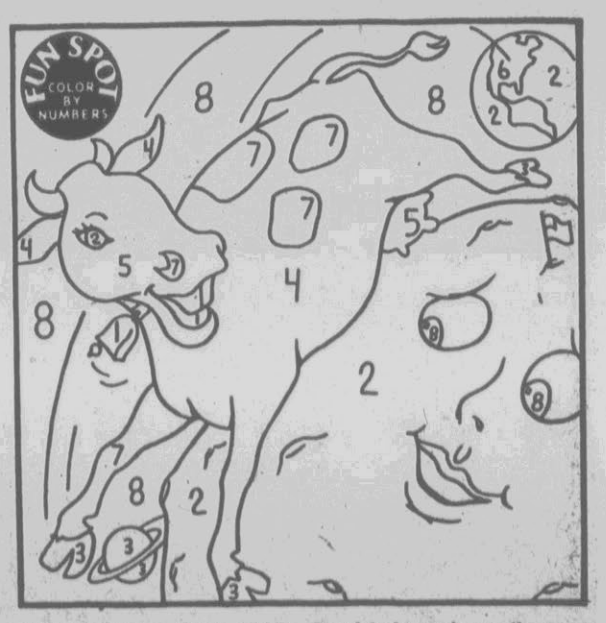
SOAPY SAIL! Starting at arrow, find small bubble's path through maze to bursting point, X, at top right.



CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Paper is missing. 2. Dial is smaller. 3. Robot's body is shorter. 4. Clock is missing. 5. Cup holder is shorter. 6. Trash can is missing.



MILKY WAY! Hey, diddle, diddle...Bossie's jumped over the moon. Add colors neatly: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Lavender. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Green. 7—Dk. brown. 8—Dk. blue.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

REGISTER

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 30 points.

Possible maximum: One gee.
