Council Backs Employee Tests

By GREG LAUDICK
 Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council on Monday unanimously endorsed pre-employment substance abuse screening for all prospective city employees.

The screening will become part of the pre-employment physical, currently administered by the city in final stages of the hiring process.

According to Greenville City Manager Greg Knowles, the screening is needed to protect current employees from the potential safety dangers posed by new employees who might be under the influence of controlled substances and alcohol.

Under the new policy, slated to go into effect Jan. 1, 1988, prospective employees testing positive will be disqualified from further consideration.

According to Knowles, the city to date has not encountered any drug-related problems, but he said extensive media coverage over the last 12 months to 18 months has made officials more aware of the potential for problems. "To maintain public trust and safety, we should move to ensure new employees are not drug users," he said.

The drug screening program will cost the city an estimated $50 to $100 per person, an amount Knowles said was minimal compared to the problems a drug-impaired employee might create in the workplace.

"I like to think of this in terms of preventive medicine," Knowles said.

Council members Monday also approved closing of a contract with the Arthur Young Co., hired last summer to study duties and responsibilities of city employees and the city's compensation and benefits plan.

In other business, the council approved agenda items for Thursday's regular monthly council meeting.

Matters to be addressed at the meeting include a request to rezone three tracts of land located in the Pitt-Greenville Medical District, approximately 1 mile from Pitt County Memorial Hospital off the eastern right-of-way of Stantonsburg Road.

The request involves three tracts of land totaling 124.11 acres. The petitioners have requested that Tract 1, at 17.02 acres, be rezoned from MD-7 (low density residential-agricultural) to MD-3 (office); that Tract 2, at 100.97 acres, be rezoned from MD-7 to PUD (planned unit development), and Tract 3, at 6.12 acres, be rezoned from MD-7 to MD-4 (commercial). The request was recommended for approval by

Market Plunges Again As Dollar Keeps Falling

By MARCY GORDON
 AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks dropped in early trading today, following a further decline in the dollar, losses on foreign markets and a strike by 1,100 clerical workers against the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow industrials, which lost nearly 60 points Monday in a nervous session, fell about 32 points from 1,900.20 to 1,868.20 by 11 a.m. EST today.

"I think there's a buyers' strike out there," said Hank Striefler, a senior vice president at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York. "They're just looking for a little more confidence."

Earlier, the relentless deterioration of the dollar's value alarmed foreign investors and sent the Tokyo stock market careening lower in the fourth week of turbulence since the Oct. 19 world stock collapse.

In Tokyo today, the dollar's value slid below 134 yen for the first time since modern exchange rates were established in 1949, overwhelming central bank efforts to stabilize the U.S. currency by buying dollars.

The dollar closed at 133.65 yen, the fifth consecutive record low closing. Later in London and New York, the dollar traded at about 133.60 yen.

In Washington, the White House took the unusual step of denying a New York Times report today quoting unidentified officials as saying the Reagan administration welcomes a lower dollar. The report may have partly accounted for the dollar's slide today.

"We're not doing anything to bring it down," President Reagan said. "I don't look for a further decline, don't want a further decline from where it is right now."

On the Tokyo stock market, the 225-share Nikkei Stock Average fell

Jonas' License Pulled

The North Carolina Board of Nursing has suspended the license of Robert Andrew Jonas, who was acquitted of murder charges in the 1983 death of a deformed and dying infant at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The board ruled Friday that Jonas, a neonatal nurse at Moses Cone Memorial Hospital in Greensboro for the past three years, may not practice nursing in the state for 10 years.

A Pitt County Superior Court jury in 1985 found Jonas not guilty of murder or attempted murder in connection with the death of 6-hour-old Darlene Clara Peszko, who was born with a fatal — usually in a few hours — brain defect.

But a year after Jonas' acquittal, board of nursing investigators charged him with being an unfit nurse, with engaging in conduct harmful to public health, with inadequately supervising a co-worker, with undermining the public trust in the nursing profession and with abusing and assaulting a patient under his care in connection with the incident.

Jonas, during the nursing board hearings in Raleigh Thursday and Friday, denied harming or conspiring to harm the infant.

But the Board of Nursing's special counsel, Nicholas Dombalis II, said even if Jonas did not directly or indirectly contribute to the child's death, he was still responsible for failing to intervene and prevent actions by Michael Edward Grant, a nursing assistant who pleaded guilty to manslaughter charges in connection with the death.

Pitt Tops Minority Job Goal

By CHERIE EVANS
 Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County school system's personnel department exceeded its targeted 1986-87 goal for hiring minorities, according to the school board's Affirmative Action first quarter Report 1987-88 presented during the board's regular monthly meeting Monday night.

In its second year of affirmative action, the schools' 1986-87 goal was 21 percent employment rate for minorities. The goal was exceeded with a minority employment of 23.5 percent, well above the statewide average of 11 percent.

There were 12 black teachers hired during the first quarter of 1986-87, while 10 black teachers were hired during the same time in 1987-88.

"Numbers of black hires have not significantly dropped, but 42 more teachers were hired for the beginning of this school year, an increase from 72 total hires to 114 total hires," according to the report.

Five percent of the applicants in the first quarter in 1986-87 were black, while 11 percent were black in the first quarter of 1987-88, a 6 percent increase. No black males applied during the quarter.

The employment goal for 1987-88 is a 24 percent minority employment rate. The first quarter reflects a 9

Schools Consider Religion Policy

By CHERIE EVANS
 Reflector Staff Writer

Several Pitt County Board of Education members expressed concern over the distribution of literature in the proposed religion policy for the schools during the final regular meeting of the consolidated board Monday night.

The 15-member consolidated board was honored at a reception prior to the meeting for its contribution to the schools. Each member was presented a framed and engraved Jerry Miller pen and ink drawing of the first public school in North Carolina.

The current board was formed by consolidation members of the previous Greenville and Pitt County Boards of Education after the school systems combined into one school system. It can "take pride in knowing it has made a tremendous beginning," Superintendent Eddie West said.

The newly elected 12-member board will assume its duties during the regular monthly meeting in December.

The proposed religion policy is designed to "foster among all students and personnel the attitudes of appreciation, sensitivity and respect for the rich religious diversity of our community and nation, and to accommodate student religious beliefs and practices whenever educational-ly feasible and constitutionally permissible," according to the policy introduction.

Regarding the distribution of literature, the policy says, "students may distribute religious literature on school property as long as they do not interfere with the school program or infringe on the rights of others."

Board members Anne McGaughey and Alfreida Parker said students may be used by outsiders to distribute religious materials, and there should be more control over distribution. But according to case law, distribution may not be prevented if it does not infringe on school functions or individual rights, Ben Sendor, assistant director at the Institute of Government, said.

Board member Frank Grooms suggested that students get prior notice from the principal before distributing literature. Sendor said the suggestion may be incorporated as a procedure to direct time, place and manner of distribution on campus, but principals will not be able to refuse the distribution of literature based on content.

The policy will be presented for adoption during the board's regular meeting in December.

In the search and seizure policy also to be approved by the board in December, Board member Donovan Phillips was concerned with an

Auditor Suggests Changes In Some County Procedures

By STUART SAVAGE
 Reflector Staff Writer

Auditors told the Board of County Commissioners Monday that Pitt County was in good financial condition at the end of the 1986-1987 fiscal year, but made a number of recommendations to improve internal accounting controls and other operating efficiencies.

Misty Schmitt, a spokesman for the accounting firm of Peat Marwick Main & CO., said the "recommendations on internal control" contained in a management letter were not based on any material weakness found during the audit. But she suggested the recommendations were based on the "ideal."

A number of the recommendations dealt with the security of the county's data processing system — such things as access controls, the location of the main data processing facility, access to off-site storage of backup tapes and disaster recovery planning — while others suggested such things as: the establishment of a separate, nonexpendable trust fund to hold contributions to the law enforcement officers special separation allowance, and reconciling fixed assets records on a monthly basis. One suggestion called for revising a county policy which requires any purchase of $100 or more to be approved by the finance officer's department to make the authorization procedures more cost-beneficial, with different authorization levels for each department, based on the size of its budget.

In other business Monday, the board named James Galloway to an unexpired term on the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission; approved building a platform in the Superior Courtroom for newspaper and television photographic coverage of court proceedings; approved a request by the East Carolina University School of Medicine to have the county office building appraised, and appointed Planning Board member Ed Hemingway to the Road Name Committee.

Commissioners also allocated some $800,000 for additions and renovations to Farmville Central, H.B. Sugg and Sam Bundy schools and some $294,000 for an addition and renovations at Belvoir Elementary School.

Bids for the projects were taken in

The hoax relative to a special GI insurance dividend for Vietnam era veterans has risen again, according to Charles A. Beddingfield Jr. assistant secretary for Veterans Affairs, N.C. Department of Administration.

Trio Injured As Bus, Ambulance Collide

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio (AP) — Three people on an ambulance en route from North Carolina to central Ohio remained hospitalized after the ambulance crashed into a school bus that was stopped at a railroad crossing, officials said.

Ten other people were released after treatment for injuries they suffered in the Monday afternoon crash on U.S. Route 35 in southern Ohio.

The most seriously injured were the patient aboard the ambulance, 83-year-old Beatrice Potts, of Sunbury, Ohio; and two emergency medical technicians, Eva Cook, 58, and Pamela Whitaker, 33, both of Jamestown, N.C.

Marianne Campbell, spokeswoman for Holzer Medical Center here, said Mrs. Potts suffered a dislocated right hip and broken ribs and was in guarded condition today. Ms. Cook suffered multiple facial cuts and broken ribs and was listed in stable condition; Ms. Whitaker, who was temporarily pinned in the wreckage, suffered a broken leg and other injuries and was listed in stable condition.

The ambulance driver, Brenda S. Wrenn, 42, of Jamestown, N.C., was released after treatment at Holzer Medical Center. The driver of the bus was not injured, but nine high school students aboard the bus were released after treatment for neck-related injuries; Ms. Campbell said.

The hospital spokeswoman said Mrs. Potts had suffered a heart attack at her son's home in Greensboro, N.C., and was en route to her home in Sunbury, north of Columbus, Ohio. Her son, Raymond, was traveling on the ambulance with her but was not injured, Ms. Campbell said.

The State Highway Patrol said the westbound school bus was stopped at a railroad crossing at about 3:08 p.m. when the ambulance crashed into the rear of the bus.

The driver of the ambulance was cited by the patrol for failure to stop within an assured, clear distance.

Robb To Seek Senate Seat From Virginia

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Former Virginia Gov. Charles S. Robb, ending months of speculation about his future political plans, says he will seek the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

"Now more than ever it seems to me that our nation needs the kind of values and leadership that Virginia can provide," Robb said during a news conference Tuesday at Hunton & Williams, the law firm where he has worked since leaving office in January 1986.

Robb, son-in-law of the late President Lyndon Johnson, will seek the seat held by Republican Sen. Paul S. Trible Jr., who has said he will not seek re-election.

Robb said Trible's decision not to run again did not influence his plans to seek the office, nor was he influenced by a recent newspaper poll that showed him an easy favorite over eight potential GOP opponents.

"For the past several years, as most of you know, I've been involved with other elected Democrats in an effort to forge a progressive new agenda for our party," Robb said of his work as chairman of the Democratic Leadership Council. "It's no secret that we think our party in the past has too often strayed from its historic mission."

Robb said he enjoyed his work as a private attorney, but "nothing provides me with the same sense of challenge and reward as public service and the formulation of public policy."

Bank Leaders Resume Talks On Financial Crisis

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — Central bank chiefs from the leading industrial nations, visibly worried at the fragile state of world financial markets, today began a second day of secretive talks aimed at heading off more turmoil.

The deliberations resumed against the backdrop of fresh declines in the value of the dollar in Far Eastern markets. It opened in Tokyo at a record low 134.75 Japanese yen, down from a closing rate of 135.50 yen on Friday.

The central bank governors declined to talks to reporters as they entered their closed-door meeting in central Basel. No agenda was made public.

Similarly, after an initial round of deliberations at a private dinner Sunday the officials declined to say what aspects of the market crisis had been discussed.

It appeared, however, that a key question to be resolved in today's final meeting was whether the 11 participating countries should embark on a coordinated round of interest-rate cuts. This would be aimed at trying to avert a world recession caused by the Oct. 19 collapse of stock market prices.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, declined after Sunday's meeting to comment on the prospects for a cut in the key U.S. discount rate, the interest the Fed charges on short-term loans to commercial banks.

Other central bankers also were reluctant to discuss either their meeting or the prospects for a return to calm on financial markets, which have been in a severe tailspin since the worldwide stock market collapse.

The collapse was triggered in part by U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker's implied threat to push the dollar down further unless West Germany cut its interest rates.

The Reagan administration wants the West German and Japanese governments to reduce interest rates as a way of stimulating their economic growth, which could boost U.S. exports and help reduce the massive U.S. trade deficit. The West Germans and Japanese have resisted, partly on grounds that an easy credit policy could rekindle inflation in their countries.

The European central bankers attending the meeting were expected to press Greenspan for an indication of how much further the Reagan administration is prepared to see the dollar fall.

The U.S. currency has declined by nearly 7 percent against the West German mark and 6 percent against the Japanese yen in the past two weeks, following eight months of relative stability.

A falling dollar is an acute threat to the export-dependent West German and Japanese economies, since a weak dollar makes foreign products more expensive on the U.S. market.

The meeting was not designed to produce major new policy initiatives. But financial analysts looked to the conference for news that could affect the direction of jittery stock and currency markets.

The market turmoil of recent weeks has strained relations between the United States and its main trading partners. The Europeans have become increasingly impatient with U.S. efforts to reduce the federal budget deficit.

The major European nations are believed to favor convening a special meeting of finance ministers to agree on measures to stabilize the markets, but only after Congress and the White House reach agreement on substantial budget deficit cuts.

The countries represented at the meeting are the United States, West Germany, Japan, Britain, France, Italy, Canada, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and Sweden.

White House Says Report Erroneous

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House took the unusual step today of issuing a statement disavowing a newspaper report quoting unnamed officials as saying the Reagan administration welcomed a weaker dollar.

The report, published in The New York Times, was believed responsible for a further drop of the dollar to new lows.

The White House statement said, "The unnamed White House and administration officials quoted in today's New York Times article on the dollar were not speaking for the administration."

"The United States continues to cooperate closely with its G-7 allies to promote exchange rate stability."

The G-7 are the seven major industrialized nations that signed an agreement in Paris to work for currency stabilization.

Budget Talks Bring More Finger Pointing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new volley of finger-pointing erupted today over the failure so far of congressional and White House negotiators to agree on ways to cut the federal deficit.

Democratic negotiators, meanwhile, met to try to forge a compromise package.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, complained that lawmakers from both parties were advancing proposals to cut the deficit in the Capitol Hill talks, but that President Reagan was not.

"He mustn't be just a leader on the good news," Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said on the "CBS Morning News." "He also has to exercise leadership on the tough news, when the difficult choices are to be made. I'd like to see him more a part of that process."

But Senate GOP leader Bob Dole, interviewed on the same program, accused the Democrats of not bargaining seriously and predicted that an agreement would not be reached this week.

"Let's face it, I don't think the Democrats really want to make a deal ...," said Dole.

The talks are aimed at cutting the federal deficit by at least $23 billion for this year. Without any reductions, the red ink is expected to be as high as $180 billion, well above the $148 billion deficit for last year.

The meetings enter their 12th day today.

Spain Drops U.S. Defense Agreement

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain officially notified the United States today of its intention not to renew their defense accord because the two countries failed to agree on a reduction in the U.S. military presence in Spain, a Foreign Ministry official said.

It was the first time either side had formally expressed intent to renounce the 34-year-old bilateral defense agreement signed by Gen. Francisco Franco and President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The accord, which is set to expire in May, stipulates that any changes must be announced within six months of the expiration date.

Inocencio Arias, the Foreign Ministry spokesman, said Eudaldo Mirapeix, Spain's director general for North American Affairs, presented a written notice of Spain's intention not to renew the defense agreement to U.S. Charge d'Affaires Adrian Basora.

Arias said the move was a logical step after U.S. and Spanish negotiators failed to reach agreement in the seventh round of troop reduction talks in Madrid last week.

Spain sought the withdrawal of 72 fighter-bombers of the 401st Tactical Fighter Wing stationed at Torrejon Air Base outside Madrid.

Chief negotiators Maximo Cajal of Spain and U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew told reporters at the end of the talks Nov. 6 that both sides would meet again in Madrid in December to work towards a troop reduction accord.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Bob Meade said today "it is important to take note of the fact that our two governments have indicated the desire to maintain a strong defense relationship and plan to go on negotiating at the next round scheduled for mid-December."

The two countries began the troop reduction talks 16 months ago following a national referendum on Spain's continued membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

A majority of Spaniards approved the referendum on the condition that the United States remove a substantial part of its 10,500 troops stationed in the country.

Spain has repeatedly said it would renounce the 1953 accord if the Americans refused to accept Spain's demand to withdraw the tactical wing.

Since the initial bilateral treaty was signed, the United States has maintained three air bases, a naval station and nine communication posts in Spain.

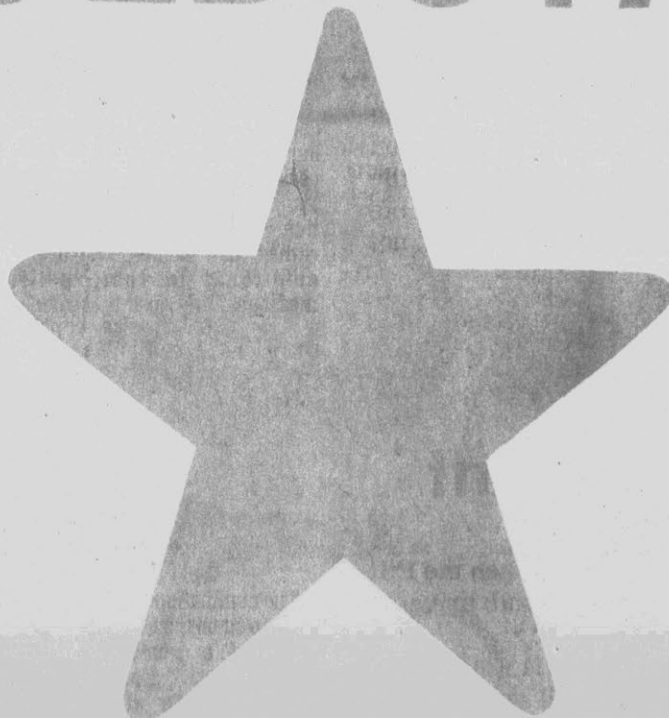

Arias said Socialist Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez and Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez Ordonez have repeatedly said that reaching a troop reduction accord is a "prerequisite for any new defense accord."

The agreement has been renewed every five years since its signing, the last time in 1983. Its renunciation would give the United States until May 1989 to remove its troops and military equipment from Spanish soil.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Who's Next?

And now Douglas Ginsburg has exited as a United States Supreme Court nominee.

Ginsburg, President Reagan's most recent appointment, withdrew after admitting to the use of marijuana in the past. He fell, not so much due to public opinion — which had not had time to solidify — but because he became unacceptable to the conservative right which is so influential with the president.

Ginsburg's greatest liability was that he had little record to indicate how he might decide social issues and questions of civil rights if he were confirmed as a justice. The marijuana use was enough to determine that issue for the rightists and the word went to Ginsburg that he should withdraw.

In what has become a presidential embarrassment the Ginsburg withdrawal followed closely the defeat of Robert H. Bork in the Senate bringing down the president's first attempt to name a new justice.

Now comes the third attempt to fill the position and all eyes are turning to federal appeals court Judge Anthony M. Kennedy of Sacramento, Calif.

At this point conservatives and liberals alike must be virtually pleading with the White House to see that the proper investigations are done and a candidate is chosen who will be acceptable. Obviously a nominee who is not squeaky clean on law and order matters will not be acceptable to the far right. And a nominee who does not at least show open mindedness on civil liberties questions will not clear the Democratic controlled Senate.

Perhaps it is time for the president to begin listening to the people, rather than Attorney General Edwin Meese and Sen. Jesse Helms. Their ideas, after all, have gotten him in a heap of trouble. The far right did Ginsburg in, not his marijuana smoking. It would be ironic if the confusion created by the advice of Reagan's own far right in turn did the president in.

The president doesn't have to nominate a flaming liberal to the U.S. Supreme Court — only a person with experience, a keen legal mind, devotion to the Constitution and a willingness to listen to reasonable arguments concerning civil liberties. That should not be so difficult.

Accomplishment

One million dollars looked very large when the Pitt County United Way began its 1987 fund drive in September

Now, with the drive complete and the $1,030,724 goal exceeded by $2,000, that amount still seems quite substantial.

It is. The individuals who determined the need and set this goal should be commended for their courage. The volunteers who devoted time to raising it and the public-minded citizens who dug into pockets to contribute should be applauded for their tenacity.

A million-dollar need is indeed a sizable need. 1987 was the first year the community set a million-plus goal. Taking tangible steps toward filling these needs, as the United Way has done, is in turn a large accomplishment.

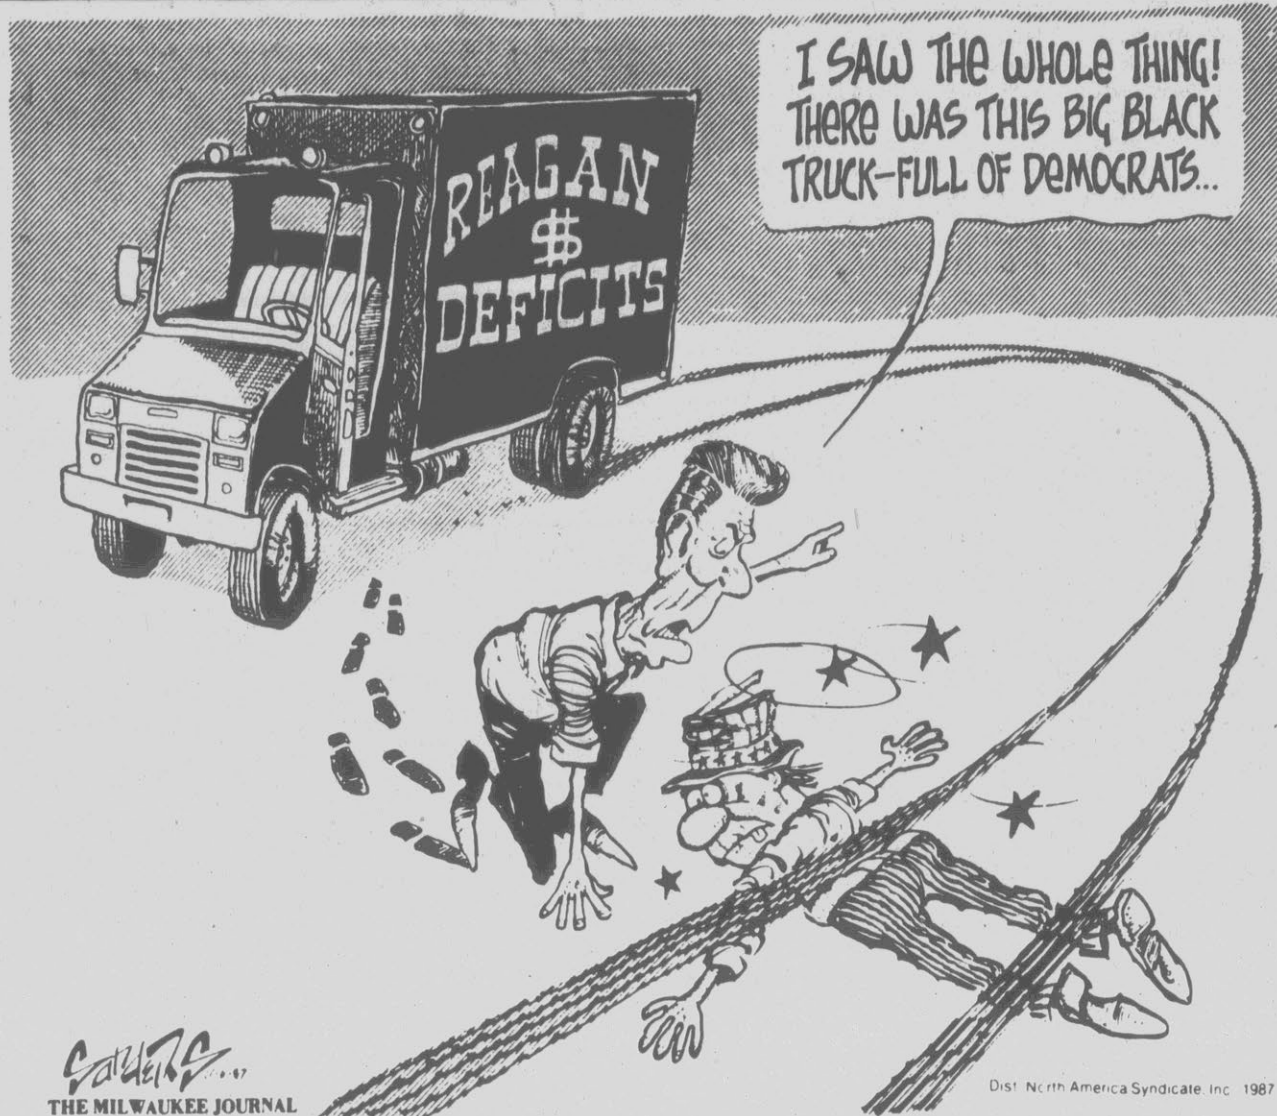

Exceeding the goal sends a very positive message about the community — a message concerning involvement, capacity for caring and giving and interest in human needs. Having a million-dollar requirement is impressive. Addressing it is even more significant.

For those who financially contributed to United Way in 1987, take pride in the knowledge you have helped a long list of organizations with venerable reputations for public service. The Pitt County Boys Club, the Children's Home Society, Family Violence Center and the Red Cross are just a few of the recipients of United Way funding. No number or dollar figure adequately represents the value this assistance provides in human terms. But the help would not be available, however, without a money drive like the one just completed.

Those volunteers who gave their time to raising the money should take pride in their accomplishment and its impact on human needs. Improving the quality of life in the community is an important task, and these individuals can be satisfied they have played key roles.

The United Way approach to fund-raising and meeting shortfalls is a sound one. It assures needs are tallied, examined carefully and that no one agency gets all the community support.

In 1987, the million-dollar needs will be met — even exceeded. The rewards of this effort may never be obvious to those who participated, but the lack of it would be painfully visible.

Pat Schroeder's Real Tears

Jeane Kirkpatrick shed no tears as she declined to seek the GOP nomination for president, thereby avoiding the sort of reproaches aimed at Pat Schroeder. Schroeder attributed criticism of her tears to a double standard that makes emotional displays acceptable for Ronald Reagan but not for her. On one level she was wrong. According to a convention that has prevailed since the similar outburst of Edmund Muskie in 1972, it is clear that anger may be expressed in a campaign appearance, but not sorrow.

But to the degree that she was expressing the frustration of women candidates, Pat Schroeder's tears were rational ones. As she said, women have not yet learned how to campaign and so either are not entering the presidential lists or are experiencing frustration in running for lesser offices. It must be recognized that for the most part, it is men rather than women who are being emotional in their political messages. It's just that men's appeals are far more subtly packaged. A double standard has emerged. Women must still prove competence, while men can move beyond that to appeals that focus on issues and character. On the latter front, men are openly emotional, and reap not only the male but also the female vote, while women, who are loath to focus on the caring side of character for fear of appearing weak, will be further inhibited by the response to Schroeder's tears.

The irony is that much of today's campaign image-making focuses on intergenerational bonding and that, although women are disproportionately responsible for meeting daily family needs, men reap the political benefit.

Intergenerational bonding focuses around the male candidate. It is not on the Bill Cosby show alone that fatherhood has experienced a comeback. In the 1984 election, Reagan cried on the bluffs of Normandy Beach as he reassured a young girl in white representing America that such a war, in which she had lost a male relative, would never happen again, because he and all American men in their farms, fields and factories would take his place and sacrifice for her. The president's eyes were misty as he and Nancy Reagan moved through the unending rows of crosses, and the first lady reached up to touch her husband's arm, offering consolation to the man who will protect America.

It was a deeply moving ad, which, like almost all of the Reagan campaign messages, focused on the ties that bind and offered reassurance to the young. It was advertising that brought tears even to the eyes of media consultant William Pope of Atlanta, who said, "I knew what they were doing, but I cried anyway."

Such bonding is at the heart of image-making for even the most serious candidate, and it is bipartisan. Thus in 1986 Rep. Ed Zschau, R-Calif., addressed the voters from a raft filled with his children and Rep. John Breaux, D-La., is presented to the electorate through the eyes of his daughter.

Many problems remain for women candidates. The image of the married woman is hard to market in political terms. Democrats have gone with the "maiden aunts," Mary Sue Terry and Barbara Mikulski, who rack up legislative accomplishments. Republicans have touted the clear-headed experience of women such as Jeane Kirkpatrick and Elizabeth Dole, but it is now clear that neither is willing to venture into the electoral arena on her own behalf. Recruiters for both parties are reporting difficulties in finding women to run for the House and the Senate. For women candidates, Pat Schroeder was crying real, not crocodile, tears.

Where Are The Voices For Equality?

The nomination of Judge Robert H. Bork to sit on the U.S. Supreme Court triggered a tremendous response from citizens' groups across the country. People who believed his judicial philosophy represented a retreat from the ideal of equality of opportunity flooded congressional offices with letters and telephone calls.

But where were these voices in earlier battles when important constitutional principles were at stake?

A generation ago, this nation made some important promises. One was contained in the Civil Rights Act of 1964. It stated that "no person shall, on the ground of race, color or national origin ... be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance."

In subsequent years, this promise was extended to women, by way of Title IX language concerning sex discrimination in education, to the handicapped under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and to the elderly through the Age Discrimination Act.

Unfortunately, writing equality into the law hasn't ensured equality. The U.S. Supreme Court — in the 1984 decision Grove City vs. Bell and later rulings — wrongly interpreted what Congress sought to do in these statutes. The court determined that the ban on discrimination applied merely to the specific program or activity that received federal money, not to the entire organization or institution.

So recipients of federal funds — hospitals, nursing homes, corporations, local governments and universities — can take government money with one hand and discriminate with the other hand. And they can get away with it.

What has Congress done during the three years since the Grove City decision? Nothing, or next to nothing.

Early in 1985, I joined a number of my colleagues in introducing the Civil Rights Restoration Act, which seeks to redress the Supreme Court's interpretation and redefine "program or activity" on a broad, institution-wide basis. The bill went nowhere.

Identical legislation was offered in the 99th Congress. Again, no action was taken, largely because of disputes over abortion.

In February, we reintroduced the Civil Rights Restoration Act. It was reported by the Labor Committee in June and that is where matters rest.

The legislation is in limbo because the voice of the people hasn't been heard. Where is the resounding "amen" that rang out across this country in the 1960s?

The Bork debate proves that the potential exists to mobilize for action. His nomination posed a threat to the Constitution and the opposition was galvanized.

Bork was right about one thing: The Supreme Court is the last refuge, not the first resort, of rights.

The front-line responsibility for guaranteeing that the Constitution applies equally to all Americans belongs to the president and Congress. But the Justice Department under President Reagan has been more than happy to take a hands-off approach to federally financed discrimination. Congress must pass the Civil Rights Restoration Act to put an end to this discrimination once and for all.

There is another battle, begun a generation ago, that requires renewed vigilance. In decisions handed down in 1962 and 1963, the Supreme Court ruled that Bible-reading and prayer in public schools violated the First Amendment injunction against the establishment of religion. During the intervening quarter-century, there have been many attempts to reinstate religion in the classroom.

In defiance of the court's ruling, a number of states have passed laws permitting prayer of a sort. The Supreme Court struck down one such law in 1985 and is considering another in the current session.

Whether the prayer is called silent or voluntary, these efforts all have the same effect — to reopen old wounds and bring back the days when one brand of religion received the official stamp of approval while adherents of other forms of belief were forced to stand in the hall.

Public Forum

To the editor: Throughout history, it seems, men and women have fought for the right to be free. The fallen and unfallen soldiers alike didn't turn their backs when their country called them to fight. Against all odds, they fought for the right to be free, by air, land or sea, many have fallen for peace.

But the unfallen soldiers, scarred and torn, returned home from the battles they had fought. Bravely, they gave a part of their lives for which time can never replace.

The unfallen soldiers are all around us, wherever life can be found. Lost only to those who fail to know why freedom rings.

Let freedom be threatened again in time and the unfallen soldiers will be the first in line, in wheelchairs, on crutches, and from their death beds, they would come. Proudly, they would answer their country's call.

Just think what life would be like if the fallen and unfallen soldiers had lost the battles they fought.

The unfallen soldiers are a part of all.

Strength For Today

The Bible has a great deal to say about wings. In Psalm 55 there is the statement, "Oh that I had wings like a dove, for then I would fly away and be at rest." In the 40th chapter of Isaiah, we find the declaration that those who wait upon the Lord shall mount up with the wings of eagles.

Here we see two divergent attitudes toward life and its problems. The psalmist wishes that he might have the wings of a dove in order to fly away from his troubles. Isaiah pictures the man of faith as one who rises above his troubles as if he were born upward on the wings of eagles. They that wait upon the Lord do not seek the escape route. They rise up with wings as eagles, they run and are not weary.

They walk and do not faint.

Reaganomics Unifying Issue For 1988 Democratic Hopefuls

WASHINGTON — In the closing hours of the 1988 presidential campaign, Hubert H. Humphrey, the Democratic candidate, resorted to a simple but blunt warning to party members leaning toward his Republican opponent. "We're talking about Richard Nixon," Humphrey said.

A similar tactic is likely to be employed next year by the man who emerges from the Democratic primary wars. But this time, the final battle cry will focus on Ronald Reagan instead of the heir to the past seven years of Republican government.

The Reagan record, particularly his economic priorities, has become the platform, a unifying theme for an otherwise divided and scuffling pack of contenders.

"We must fundamentally reject the lie of Reaganomics," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the national front runner for the nomination. While he leads in almost every poll, the same surveys show an equal amount of opposition among voters who will finally decide if a black man will be the next president.

"The chickens have come home to roost," said Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis in the wake of the Oct. 19 stock market plunge. He is a traditional liberal favored to win the first primary in New Hampshire Feb. 16.

"There is a shrinking middle class," said Illinois Sen. Paul Simon. He is steadily gaining support in neighboring Iowa, where the Feb. 8 caucuses will inject the first dose of campaign momentum.

"If standing up for an American working man and insisting on prying open foreign markets is protectionism, then I want to be a protectionist," said Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt. He is pursuing a moderate strategy — always risky in either party.

"With the world changing, competition changing, we need the best-trained, best-educated work force," said Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore. He has taken a conservative stand on defense spending, outflanking Gephardt and gambling on a strong southern showing in the March 8 Super Tuesday showdown.

"We must have the courage to tell the American people that we must cut spending and raise taxes," said former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt. Although the darkest of horses, he has become the gadfly of the Democratic contest, demanding answers the other candidates are loath to give.

While the Reagan record has provided targets of opportunity, it has also left the Democrats squirming and bickering over the best way to finance expanded social programs cut back during the GOP years.

Reagan's refusal to raise income taxes after achieving a series of cuts — particularly for the wealthy — dominates the Democratic debate.

Babbitt favors a national sales tax, which Democrats once condemned as an inflationary scheme that would hit hardest low-income families. Gephardt and Simon favor an oil import fee, a vote-getter on Super Tuesday in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. But higher energy prices resulting from such a fee would be a vote-loser in the Northeast. Dukakis argues that billions could be raised by cracking down on income tax dodgers.

Jackson alone favors higher income taxes, but only on upper-income families and corporations. For the most part, however, they all see reordered priorities that take from the Pentagon and give to recipients of job-training, welfare, education, health care and other federal programs.

For these announced candidates and potential latecomers such as New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, the pocketbook issue soared in importance as the Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped 508 points.

"Jobs, cars, home mortgages, the kids' future — it is the bread and butter issue," Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk said.

In looking ahead to 1988, the Democrats look back to 1960 when they were battling the successor to a popular, two-term Republican president, Dwight D. Eisenhower. In that year of John F. Kennedy's victory, the polls showed that voters believed that the Democrats were the party best able to deliver prosperity.

The loser, Nixon, would later blame a mild recession for his narrow loss to Kennedy. Economic turmoil in the form of soaring energy prices and inflation was a major factor in the defeats of President Ford in 1976 and President Carter in 1980.

Even before the market tumbled,

Democrats were tailoring their themes to lingering uncertainty about the nation's economic future expressed in almost every national poll.

The latest CBS-New York Times poll showed Jackson overtaking Gephardt for the lead in Iowa, where both men identify foreign imports and the loss of jobs to overseas producers as a major issue. Unless those foreign markets are opened to U.S. imports, Gephardt favors quotas and other barriers to foreign imports. Jackson favors restricting American companies from building plants abroad.

Analysis

But Jackson's lead was matched by voters who opposed him. Nationwide, his opposition among Democratic voters, particularly among wealthy Jewish contributors in New York and California, has left the frontrunner's campaign short of money.

Also overtaking Gephardt in Iowa was Dukakis, who, with an $8 million war chest, is running the best-financed campaign of any Democrat. Dukakis has used Massachusetts' economic revival as proof that he can do the same for the rest of the nation. "But we've got to make some hard decisions," he frequently says.

Far less specific is Simon, who is second in Iowa and, more importantly, is favored by Democrats most likely to participate in the first caucuses. With his bow tie and reassuring twang, he projects the image of integrity and inspiration that once worked for Carter. "We've got to be willing to dream again," Simon said last week in New Orleans. The manner tends to mask a record of winning at political hardball in Illinois.

"I think Paul Simon is the sleeper in this campaign," said Kirk. He is convinced the winner will come from the current field, dismissing scenarios that envision Cuomo's arriving to break a deadlocked convention in Atlanta in July.

The key to the March 8 tally will be Texas and Florida, where there is no clear favorite and 344 delegates are up for grabs. A statewide poll last month in Texas showed 44 percent of the Democrats were undecided.

Along with most of the candidates, Kirk also sees Super Tuesday as a training exercise for the general election. They want to energize blacks, women and other blocs that produced 1986 victories in the South in which Democrats wrested Senate seats from Republicans who rode Reagan's coattails into office in 1980.

"It's up for grabs," said Kirk. "We need the South to win."

Outgoing Baptist Leader Pleads For Unity

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO (AP) — Southern Baptists should not let their power struggle "divide and destroy us," the president of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention says.

William Poe, a Charlotte lawyer whose term ends today, told about 2,000 delegates at the convention Monday night that factionalism has manifested "a win-lose philosophy more appropriate to a political campaign or an athletic contest."

"At times it seems that historical Baptist freedom has been shoved into the back seat, and a new driver whose destination, described by some as conformity and creedalism, has taken the wheel," Poe said.

"North Carolina Baptists can demonstrate to all the rest of the Baptist world that there is a better way to do the Lord's work, and that we intend to stay steady on course despite the storm swirling about us," he said.

"Somehow we must find a way to reconcile our differences — not to force them out of existence or even to go underground. Let's simply be open, straightforward and honest with each other."

Today's election, which will determine the theological course of North Carolina's largest religious body, pits a moderate Goldsboro pastor, the Rev. Leon Smith, against fundamentalist Rev. Ned Mathews of Gastonia.

A record crowd of 4,000 delegates is expected to attend the convention of the 1.1 million-member denomination, which ends Wednesday.

Mathews, pastor of Parkwood Baptist Church in Gastonia, lost the presidency to Poe two years ago.

Mathews, 53, represents a fundamentalist group within the SBC whose members contend the Bible is factually correct. They also say women have no place in ordained ministry, and that only those who share their views should be employed by Southern Baptist Convention agencies and schools.

Moderates were angered when fundamentalists who had taken control of the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary board of trustees last month announced plans to fill all future faculty vacancies with professors who believe the Bible is inerrant — or without error even in matters of history or science.

Shortly after the announcement, seminary President Randall Lolley and Dean Morris Ashcraft resigned.

At a news conference Monday, Smith warned of the powerful new wave of fundamentalism that he said could slowly kill the Baptist State Convention.

The direction of the state convention would change dramatically with Mathews at the helm, said Smith, who has served as the convention's first vice president for two years.

"What I fear is the things that have taken place in the national (church) body would come home to North Carolina," he told reporters. "Our agencies and institutions would undergo intensive scrutiny and possible demise."

"That's how critical it is," he said. "The pain and divisiveness in the national body would be in North Carolina as well."

Smith promised he would work to unite church members if he were elected Tuesday.

"If my fellow Baptists elect me tomorrow I pledge every ounce of my energies to bring us together," he said.

Mathews said Monday that Smith's worries about the future of convention indicate he is panicky and "is attempting to frighten people."

Mathews said that the convention will survive no matter who is elected president. "The convention is greater than anybody," Mathews said. "It's greater than he — or I, for that matter."

At his news conference Monday, Smith was joined by the Rev. William Puckett and George McCotter of Friends of Missions, a Raleigh-based group supporting Smith in the presidential race.

"We are confident that though the forces which would try to divert the convention are strong, they will not prevail," Puckett said. "North Carolina baptists will choose a positive agenda and reject those who only wish to tear it down."

Puckett said the controversy at the seminary in Wake Forest have galvanized moderates within the church.

"The events that took place at Southeastern have helped a lot of people to see that the fundamentalists are very serious about making changes at institutions," he said. "They've done exactly what they said they would do."

The race also features a third candidate — Ted Stone, an anti-drug activist from Durham.

Group Backing Lighthouse Move Opens Fund Drive

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A group of engineers and scientists that has campaigned to move the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse away from the threatening waves of the Atlantic Ocean now hopes to persuade people from around the country to pay the bill.

The non-profit Move the Lighthouse Foundation wants to privately raise the estimated $3.2 million it will take to relocate the 117-year-old structure, Barrett D. Wilson, a spokesman for the foundation, said Monday.

In the process, the foundation also hopes to raise public awareness about the deteriorating condition of other U.S. lighthouses, particularly those in North Carolina.

"One target is the cost of relocation," Wilson told the Winston-Salem Journal. "I think it would be great if we could raise that much. Whatever we raise should help to lead to the realization that other lighthouses need to be restored."

The foundation, which was formed last year mainly by engineers and scientists, lobbied the National Park Service to take another look at moving the lighthouse, which stands about 150 feet from the Atlantic Ocean. Due to erosion, the ocean is advancing toward the lighthouse.

The park service had considered moving the lighthouse at one time, but decided instead to build a $5.7 million steel and concrete seawall around the structure. It agreed in April to delay building the seawall until a committee of experts from the National Academy of Sciences could study the plan of putting the lighthouse on rollers and moving it a half-mile back from the ocean.

The lighthouse comes under the park service's jurisdiction because it is in the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

The committee, in a preliminary report last month, recommended moving the 2,600-ton brick lighthouse. It said that moving it would be cheaper than building the seawall and would provide the best long-term protection.

Opponents of the seawall have worried that the lighthouse, surrounded by a seawall, would become an island once the beach erodes.

Boy Killed In Prank

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — An elderly farmer who allegedly was trying to scare off children who were in his hog pen has been charged with murder in connection with the death of a 12-year-old boy.

Joseph Oliver, 79, was charged by Alamance County sheriff's deputies in the death of Wayne Lamont Miles, who died late Friday afternoon on the way to a hospital with a single gunshot wound to the right side of his head.

When sheriff's deputies arrived after receiving reports of a shooting, Oliver did not know anyone had been injured, said Capt. Richard Frye.

"He was just more or less shooting to scare the kids away," Frye said.

"... He said he didn't mean to shoot anyone."

Oliver told sheriff's detectives that he had complained to the neighborhood children and told them to stay away from his hog pen, said Capt. Dan Qualls of the sheriff's office. Qualls said Oliver had said he purposely shot towards the ground and not at the boys.

Legislative Analysts Want To Use Computer Network

RALEIGH (AP) — Budget analysts at the Democratic-controlled General Assembly want to tap into the computer network used by agencies under Republican Gov. Jim Martin, but administration officials are not sure they want to give full access to their computers.

"We want to be very cooperative, but we want to look very carefully at this request," Phil Kirk, Martin's chief of staff, said Monday. "They would get information out of our computers without the benefit of our being able to explain what it is. They could hit us cold with it at a legislative committee meeting."

Traditionally, lawmakers — charged with appropriating money and overseeing how it is spent — have gotten their information from written reports given to them by agencies. Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said what the legislative staff wants is simply a raw version of what they usually would get.

"We are supposed to be given in writing, when we ask for it, what they have spent, what they spent it on and any deviations from the line-item budget," Watkins said. "We figure the most accurate source of information is to tap their source. Then they won't have to prepare those papers.

It will save time and effort on their part."

Kirk said the administration's concern was not over raw data, but over information that was guarded by federal privacy laws, such as the names of welfare recipients or the identities of applicants for permits who attached sensitive business information.

"That information can't be shared," Kirk said.

Watkins said that type of information could be shielded by the agencies.

"I think they can have safeguards on what they want safeguards on," Watkins said. "I am talking about us having access to" the public's business.

Lawmakers in the past three years have spent about $3.5 million to upgrade their computer system, said M. Glenn Newkirk, director of the Legislative Automated Systems Division.

Kirk said the administration would try to find out more about what the legislature wanted.

Cuts Would Hurt Economy

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Congress will commit nothing less than "economic murder" if it chops education funds at a time when the demand for educated workers is rising in the burgeoning high-tech workplace, former Gov. Bob Scott says.

"The Office of Management and Budget is recommending an 8.5 percent reduction in education," Scott, president of the N.C. Community College System, told a congressional subcommittee Monday.

Scott was among 18 education and business leaders scheduled to testify before the House Subcommittee on Science, Research and Technology at the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina.

Rep. David Price, D-N.C., a committee member, was host for the hearing on the rising demands of scientific and technical knowledge for current jobs.

Train Derails

MADISON, N.C. (AP) — Nine Norfolk & Western Railway freight cars loaded with about 100 new automobiles flipped off the tracks near Madison after a wheel bearing overheated on one of the cars, said a Rockingham County official.

There were no injuries in the accident that occurred at 5:30 a.m. Monday, said Geneva Paschal, assistant county fire marshal. The accident occurred between the U.S. 311 bridge over the Dan River and the Pine Hall Brick Co. property.

"The wheel went out, and that started a chain reaction," Mrs. Paschal said. "It was really something. Some of the cars were totally squished. There's a nice big van out there that's now about three feet high."

Engine oil, gasoline and transmission fluid leaked from the wreckage into a creek leading to the Dan River, but the fluids were contained before reaching the river, Mrs. Paschal said. The Dan River supplies drinking water for the cities of Eden and the towns of Madison and Mayodan.

The 65-car train was en route from Roanoke, Va., where N&W headquarters is located, to Winston-Salem to a car lot in Walkertown. The derailment started with the 25th car of the train, which was traveling about 20 mph.

Air Base

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A proposed Air National Guard base at Regional Airport will benefit economies of cities in the area without endangering or deafening residents, says a National Guard official.

"The proposed base would have 24 A-10 Thunderbolt close air support jets and 1,350 Air National Guard employees, 300 of whom would be full time, said Col. William T. Bundy Jr., commander of the 145th Tactical Airlift Group in Charlotte.

Bundy said the base would bring the region about $24 million a year in salaries and services, plus new buildings and hangars that cost about $37 million. The base also would help the airport expand, he said, noting that the Air National Guard has spent $10 million building runways and taxi lanes at the Charlotte airport.

Candidacy

RALEIGH (AP) — Rep. Ray Warren says Gov. Jim Martin could use some help with the all-Democratic Council of State, and he hopes to provide it by winning the secretary of state's office.

Warren, 30, a two-term legislator from Mecklenburg County, announced Monday he would be "a strong advocate of real two-party politics in state government" and "a strong ally of Governor Martin on the Council of State."

Warren said he had no criticism of the way the office was run under current Democratic Secretary of State Thad Eure, but did not think Eure would run again. Eure is 87 and hasn't said whether he will seek reelection to the post he has held for nearly 51 years.

Overdue Release

WAGRAM, N.C. (AP) — Carlton Hopson has resumed his Chicago-to-Florida trip — 10 years after making an unscheduled stop in North Carolina's prison system.

Hopson, of Jacksonville, Fla., was arrested on charges of breaking and entering and first-degree burglary after entering a garage in Elizabeth City during the June 1977 trip.

Within six days, he waived his right to an attorney, pleaded guilty to the burglary charge and found himself facing a life prison term, then the mandatory sentence for the charge.

Monday, Hopson was released from the prison unit in Wagram and was on his way south.

The stint in prison was much more than Hopson expected, an attorney said.

"He didn't know he was getting a life sentence," Paul Green, a Durham, N.C., attorney who volunteered to take on Hopson's case after being contacted by the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union in April 1986, said last week.

Incinerator

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — The Caldwell County Commissioners have reversed themselves, voting to close the Caldwell Systems incinerator.

The commissioners made no comment about the vote taken in a special meeting Monday or why they had a change of heart about allowing the state's only commercially operated hazardous waste incinerator to stay in business.

The vote came a day after more than 100 members of Caldwell Concerned Citizens for a Clean Environment signed a petition calling for a "clean closure" of the controversial hazardous waste incinerator, which had been leased from the county by Caldwell Systems since 1977.

Tournament

RALEIGH (AP) — A bass fishing tournament sponsored by the state Republican Party, originally scheduled for this month, has been postponed, a state GOP spokesman said Monday.

The tournament was originally scheduled for Nov. 17 but has been delayed, possibly until the first week in May, Robert Jones, communications director for the state Republican Party, said Monday.

"We were under such a short deadline (with the original date) that we ended up having to change the date," Jones said. "At this point, and I stay in touch with the Bass Association constantly, we're looking for a date in early May. This will give us time to organize a lot better than we had."

The tournament, called the Governor's Cup, would pair professional bass fishermen from all over the country with amateurs, most of them from North Carolina, Jones said.

Mistrial

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — A mistrial was declared Monday in the first-degree murder trial of Zeb Davis Jr. after jurors deliberated for five hours and failed to reach a verdict.

Davis was charged with first-degree murder and burglary charges in the 1986 Easter weekend stabbing death of Lillie Spain Pike, 66, of Hickory.

District Attorney Robert Thomas declined to comment when asked if the state would attempt to re-try the case.

Sentenced

WILMINGTON (AP) — David Rock Whitten, a former Wilmington lawyer who staged his death and later pleaded guilty to embezzling his clients' money, was sentenced Monday to 10 years in prison.

Whitten, who was a real estate lawyer, admitted to mishandling about $800,000 of clients' funds. He pleaded guilty to 14 counts of embezzlement and five counts of obtaining property by false pretense — each a felony for which he could have received 10 years in prison.

Robertson Backs Strong Military

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson gave supporters in Raleigh a glimpse today of what his presidency would be like, saying he would beef up U.S. military forces so that Americans would be safe all over the world.

Robertson said he would send a message to terrorists that "if you put one finger on an American citizen any place in the world, there will be no place for you to hide."

Robertson said he would beef up the Delta strike force, which is based at Fort Bragg, as one way to fight terrorism.

Robertson, speaking at a campaign breakfast in Raleigh, said he did not want to go to war, but that if the U.S. had to, his plan would be to "get in, win it and get out."

Robertson said one of his major priorities would be to reform the welfare system, which he said creates dependency and breaks up families.

"I think welfare is a disgrace like it is right now," Robertson said. But he said he did not want an America in which the elderly had to eat dog food. "I want to get the money to the truly needy and the poor, and take it out of the pockets of the bureaucrats," Robertson said.

Although Robertson said he supported equal pay for women, he said he also supported tax deductions to women who want to stay at home to care for their children.

But he saved some of his strongest criticisms for public schools, saying "education is in a mess" in the United States.

"I want to bring God back into the public schools of America," Robertson told an enthusiastic crowd of about 250 to 300 people.

Robertson said he supported local control of schools instead of control by the federal government and by "the national headquarters of the powerful teachers union with leftist tendencies."

Also attending the breakfast were state GOP Chairman Jack Hawke, Rep. Edgar Starnes, R-Caldwell and Rep. Bill Boyd, R-Randolph, a candidate for lieutenant governor.

Red Cross Proposes Screening

ATLANTA (AP) — A survey of 40,000 blood donors has found 10 carriers of a cancer-causing virus, prompting American Red Cross officials to recommend that all blood donated for transfusions be screened for the germ.

The virus is HTLV-1, which causes leukemia and a paralyzing nerve disease and is similar to the AIDS virus.

The survey was conducted in six U.S. cities, Dr. Gerald Sandler, associate vice president of the American Red Cross, said Monday.

Screening should be started as soon as a reliable test for the virus can be licensed by the government, said Sandler, whose comments were reported in today's editions of The Atlanta Constitution.

"We should test for HTLV-1 to eliminate infected carriers," Sandler told 6,500 people at the American Association of Blood Banks meeting in Orlando, Fla. "If we take a course of wait and see, HTLV-1 will spread."

The Red Cross study, which is to be published soon in the Journal of Science, indicates that about two of every 10,000 blood donors are carriers of the HTLV-1 virus — twice the rate of blood donors who carry the similar AIDS virus.

Dr. Roger Dodd, director of the Red Cross infectious disease laboratory, said the study involved 40,000 samples — including 6,000 from unidentified donors.

Of the 40,000, 68 appeared positive after preliminary study; 10 were confirmed to be carriers. All 10 still appear to be healthy.

Most of those who were infected either had been drug abusers or had had sexual contact with drug abusers, said Dr. Alan Williams, a Red Cross infectious disease specialist.

Navy Loosens Policy, Will Allow Umbrellas

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After almost two decades of debate, the Navy has decided that male sailors and officers may carry an umbrella while in uniform.

The decision by Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, the chief of naval operations, might not appear the stuff of controversy. But his authorization makes the Navy the second military service to allow its men to carry an umbrella — and disputes an old military sentiment that a military man protecting himself from the rain with an umbrella looks too effete.

Cmdr. Tom Jurkowsky, a spokesman, said Monday that Trost had recently received a recommendation from the Navy's Uniform Board to make the change and decided to authorize the move "as a common-sense approach to the climatic conditions that Navy men have to face."

Previously, only the Air Force allowed its men to carry umbrellas. All four services have allowed women to carry umbrellas for years.

The Navy's Uniform Board and top brass have debated the issue off and on since 1969, always rejecting the change with such excuses as it would hamper saluting.

Two years ago — when the Army's Uniform Board recommended the same step — Army Secretary John O. Marsh and then chief of staff Gen. John A. Wickham Jr. blocked the recommendation and vowed that no soldier would ever carry an umbrella while they were still in office.

Wickham has since retired, but Marsh remains in his post.

A source said at the time that Marsh and Wickham considered umbrellas an "artificial affectation" that was "intrinsicly unumilitary."

Trost, while finally breaking with such arguments for the Navy, is issuing some ground rules just to be safe.

Jurkowsky says the Navy is ordaining that umbrellas must be plain black; cannot be carried in formations; must not be used as a walking stick and must be carried in the left hand to leave the right hand free for saluting.

Trost's decision does not affect the Marine Corps, a branch of the Navy.

A Marine officer who asked not to be named said he expected his service to continue resisting the move along with the Army.

Asbestos Jury Gives Couples $75 Million

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — A jury decided Raymark Industries Inc. should pay $75 million in punitive damages to three couples who charged that the company conspired to conceal or misrepresent the health hazards of asbestos.

The verdict Monday is believed to be the second largest in the nation, said Thomas C. Crumplar, one of the plaintiffs' attorneys. He also said it was the first time in 15 years of asbestos litigation that a corporate defendant has been held liable for conspiracy.

Three former Du Pont Co.

employees who worked for more than 25 years in and around asbestos at the company's Newport Plant won the award, along with their wives.

Administration May Seek Medicaid Cuts

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is working on a plan to cut $1.3 billion from projected fiscal 1989 federal outlays for Medicaid and to set limits on future growth that experts said could reduce annual federal payments to the states by billions compared with current law.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House subcommittee on Medicaid, the medical welfare program for 23 million low-income people, called the plan an "ill-disguised" attempt to "cap" the program and force cuts in services. He predicted congressional rejection of the proposal, adding: "Whether the administration likes it or not, the federal government has a responsibility to help pay for basic health care for the poor."

Program officials were not available for comment. But an administration official who asked not to be identified argued that while the plan would restrict federal outlays, it would shift money to poorer states to help upgrade programs and give states the flexibility to reduce costs without cutting services.

Eloise Draper Is Truckers' Friend

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
SUMMERLAND KEY, Fla. (AP) — It's not listed in the Yellow Pages, but for 20 years Eloise Draper's place has been an oasis for truckers who drive the Overseas Highway to Key West.

There's no "welcome" sign to distinguish her weatherbeaten mobile home from others in the trailer park fronting U.S. 1 here — only the citizens band antenna on the roof that links "Yankee Leu" with truckers passing by.

"There's no one in the world who doesn't like her," said John Ogden Jr., a Miami trucker whose radio handle is "Gemini."

"Yankee Leu will help you in any kind of emergency — day or night," added Ogden, who has driven the Key West route for 28 years.

With yellow emergency lights mounted on top of her rusty station wagon, the 72-year-old Mrs. Draper responds to truckers stranded on the two-lane roadway during the early morning hours.

"I've got every kind of tool they ever made in my station wagon," laughed Mrs. Draper, standing amid a collection of truckers' paraphernalia in her cluttered home.

A couple dozen hats, souvenirs of truckers, are piled on a couch not far from the microphone and four radios she uses to communicate with drivers. Magazines, comic novelties and sundries left by her many CB friends are everywhere.

A microwave is filled with cookies and snacks for visitors and the top of her refrigerator is covered with first-aid items and medications.

Ice tea is available and near the sink is the coffee maker that is always on. Next to it are stacks of coffee mugs.

"Each one has their own cup," Mrs. Draper explained, showing nicknames to identify them.

Many of Mrs. Draper's visitors have become more than acquaintances since she first went on the air in 1968 when her husband, Bill, died. Her first radio was a gift from her son — "something to keep me busy."

A grandmother, she serves as a mother figure and counselor for many of the men. Photos of drivers and their families are pasted to the refrigerator.

She speaks affectionately of "Little Skunk," whose son was shot and is a paraplegic; and "Grasshopper," who survived a severe heart attack and bypass surgery.

Mrs. Draper has visited the homes of many of the truckers and she carries pictures of their children in her wallet.

Her hospitality and kindness aren't confined to truckers, however.

She's a teacher's aide at a local school, helps in community fund drives, and collects aluminum cans to build an addition at Big Pine Methodist Church.

Mrs. Draper takes neighborhood shut-ins shopping and visits the elderly confined to rest homes as far away as Key West, 25 miles to the south.

Truckers bring her used clothing which she distributes to less fortunate families living in the Lower Keys. Canned goods, day-old bakery products and fresh vegetables and fruit are left at Yankee Leu's to help the poor.

On her wooden porch are two open boxes where these foodstuffs are kept.

"I ask people to take only what they need," she explained. "I'll help anyone if they try to help themselves."

She's Plane Acrobat

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Her passion for flying began in high school when a blind date took her for an airplane ride.

Now, 16 years later, Linda Meyers is not only a talented acrobatic pilot, but she's also managing director of a unique aviation museum in Miami.

"When the plane took off, I knew I was going to be a pilot," said Miss Meyers, recalling her first flight from a Michigan City, Ind., airport when she was 17.

Since then, she has amassed 2,500 hours in the air, including 1,000 hours of acrobatic time, and earned instrument, commercial, multi-engine and seaplane ratings.

Not only does Miss Meyers pilot her specially built 200-horsepower single-seat acrobatic plane, but she also has time in such military aircraft as the P-51 and P-40 fighters, A-26, B-23, four-engine B-17 bomber and a 1929 B-100 biplane, one of the oldest Navy fighters.

These and many other antique aircraft are part of the Weeks Air Museum at Tamiami Airport where she's employed.

"I love to fly all kinds of aircraft," she said, climbing into a huge 1941 Stinson L-1. "It's a challenge and I'm in control."

Learning to fly was financially difficult for Miss Meyers after she left her New Carlisle, Ind., home and attended Indiana University for two years and spent three years at Purdue.

"I worked several jobs to help pay for college and, in between, saved money for flying lessons," she said.

While in college, she joined a sports parachuting club and made 14 jumps.

In 1976, she received her private pilot's license and met Kermit Weeks, who was studying aviation engineering at Purdue. Weeks already was an acrobatic pilot.

Soon after, Weeks left school and returned to Miami. A year later when Miss Meyers was graduated with a degree in interior design, she joined him in south Florida.

"Flying was important to me. I wanted, at the time, to be an airline pilot, but I got more and more into acrobatics."

Her early skills in that specialized type of flying came from Weeks and Bill Thomas, who operates a flight school at Tamiami.

Her first acrobatic competition was in 1979 at Sherman, Texas, and, two years later, she qualified for the U.S. team.

In her first world competition in 1982 in Spitzerberg, Austria, Miss Meyers won a silver medal in one of the woman division categories. Two years later in Bekescsaba, Hungary, she took a gold medal and, in 1986, placed first at the world trials in South Cerney, England — both times taking category victories.

The world acrobatics championships are held every two years and the overall title has eluded her thus far.

"I hope to God I win the overall championship in Calgary, Canada, next year," she said. Two or three times a week, she practices aerial maneuvers — inverted spins, outside snap rolls and others — to improve her efficiency over a prescribed course.

"About 20 minutes of intense acrobatics is all you can take," Miss Meyers explained. "It's physically and mentally tiring."

When not behind the controls of an aircraft, Miss Meyers is busy at the museum, which Weeks began putting together in 1981 and opened to the public in 1986.

"We've got 30 antique planes on display and almost all of them are in flying condition. I want to make this the best aviation museum in the world," she added.

The museum and the world overall acrobatic title are her only goals at the moment.

"After that, I'll come up with something else."

Programming VCR Is Intense Procedure

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

For weeks, we looked at the videocassette recorder in our living room without speaking.

Mentally, I had begun to think of other uses for it. Maybe we could put legs on it and use it for an end table or release the ejection slot and put a plant in it.

From time to time, my husband would leaf through the manual with an intensity usually reserved for a nervous flier reading about the evacuation procedures on an aircraft.

It wasn't until last Friday night that he cleared his throat and said, "Since we are going out to dinner, why don't we tape 'Dallas' so we can watch it later?"

I put my hand over his. "I want you to know that whatever happens, I think you're the bravest man I have ever met."

As we stood in front of the machine, my husband observed, "This is ridiculous. We look like all we need are padded coveralls and a bucket of water. Good Lord, we aren't dismantling a bomb. It's only a harmless VCR. Read! I'll punch buttons."

"You want me to read to you the page on how to use the manual?"

"Skip that and get on with how to set it when we're not here."

"You have to swing down the cover of the programming button compartment at the right of the clock and set the speed switch to LP, SP or SLP before you insert the cassette."

"The clock is blinking."

"Then you screwed up. You have to go back and reprogram that particular memory position."

"How do I do that?"

"Press the daily button. NOT the 2W, you ninny, or you're back to square one!"

"I think I've got a.m.," he said.

"Well, you want p.m. You should be able to select one of the eight programs by pressing the button with the number and the minutes and the hours. Do you see the days of the week flashing?"

"Everything is flashing."

"Don't forget to press the record stop time. Are the letters CH flashing? If so, you're ready for the channel selector switch. Hey, I think you've done it. I see J.R. and Miss Ellie."

"What you see," said my husband, "is the actual program on the regular channel. We might just as well sit down and watch it. I don't know the time, but we've obviously missed dinner."

Behavior of Anyone Else Is Impossible To Control

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I am 57 and have been divorced from "Joe" for five years. Joe broke up our 31-year marriage by saying he didn't love me any more, but he did love his secretary, who was 24 at the time. (Joe was 54.) They are living together in a house he bought for her five years ago. They are not married.

The problem now is that our 24-year-old son is getting married in December, and Joe is bringing his mistress to the wedding. Abby, I just can't handle her being there. I have been hurt enough without having this woman flaunted in front of my family and friends.

Is there anything I can do to keep her from coming? Joe and I do not speak to each other, but I called him to ask if he planned to bring her, and he said yes.

Would it help to appeal to her not to come? I want my son's wedding to be a happy occasion for all of us. — WAITING FOR AN ANSWER

DEAR WAITING: One fact of life that many people have difficulty acknowledging: You can't control the behavior of others — only your own. Yes, you could appeal to Joe's mistress to stay away, but unless she has the IQ of a houseplant, she already knows that her presence at your son's wedding will make you uncomfortable.

Go to your son's wedding, hold your head high and quit worrying about who else will be there. And please remember, above all, that this day belongs to your son and his bride, so do your part to make the day a happy one.

DEAR ABBY: I need to know how a person gets crab lice. My wife got them, then said she must have gotten them off a toilet seat at work. Could she have been fooling around?

Please tell me what percent likelihood it is that they came from a toilet seat, or an affair.

These doubts are damaging a very

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell broadly today, extending a loss in the previous session as worries persisted about the falling dollar.

Injecting a new element of concern into a jittery marketplace, clerical workers went on strike against the New York Stock Exchange which had supervisory employees fill in for them.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which fell 58.85 on Monday, was down another 24.21 to 1,875.99 after the first half-hour of trading.

Declining stocks outnumbered advances by more than 5 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 190 up, 1,142 down and 311 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 31.70 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street compared with 26.24 million shares at the same point on Monday.

In early trading today, the dollar continued to slide on foreign exchange markets around the world.

Before the exchange opened today, clerical workers set up pickets outside the NYSE.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Telephone & Telegraph was down 1/2% at 28, General Electric was down 1/4% at 43 3/4, International Business Machines was off 1/4% at 116 1/2 and American Express was down 1/4% at 23 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 1.87 at 134.48. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 4.75 at 245.04.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 58.85 to 1,900.20, for a loss of 3 percent. As measured in points, it was the average's ninth largest drop on record.

Grant, who admitted responsibility, was sentenced to four years in prison.

According to testimony at Jonas' 1985 trial, Jonas and Grant discussed what a burden the child might be to her parents and Jonas admitted to covering the infant's mouth and nose with his hand while Grant pressed on the baby's chest.

But Jonas said the infant was still alive when he left the room.

Dombalis argued last week that by briefly cutting off the baby's air supply, then leaving the child alone with Grant, Jonas clearly violated provisions in the nursing practice act.

"Punish him and send out the message to nurses that they can't help critically ill children complete the process of dying," Dombalis said in asking that Jonas' nursing license be revoked.

Commissioners took no action on a proposal to reorganize the Pitt County Development Commission after County Attorney W.H. Watson said in his opinion, changes in the composition of the board should be done by a special act of the General Assembly.

Highway

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The schedule for widening U.S. 421 from two to four lanes has been speeded up, Gov. Jim Martin said Monday.

But Martin would not say by how much, reserving that for the state Board of Transportation, which will meet Thursday and Friday in Raleigh.

More than 20 miles of the highway in Watauga and Yadkin counties have been scheduled for widening beginning in the 1990s. No date has been set for the widening of about 32 miles that lies mostly in Wilkes County.

Bochco

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emmy Award-winning television producer Steven Bochco says his commitment to create 10 new series exclusively for ABC during the next six years does not mean he is leaving "L.A. Law."

The agreement, which goes into effect July 1, gives Bochco the freedom producer Aaron Spelling formerly had with the network.

731.91 points to 21,686.46, or 3.3 percent. The closing was nearly 225 points below its 21,910.08 close on the day last month's crash.

Share prices on the Hong Kong stock exchange closed lower in thin trading today. The Hang Seng Index, the key indicator of blue chips, fell 96.07 points, closing at 2043.24.

The London Stock Exchange also opened sharply lower but was rising later in the session. The Financial Times 100-Share Index was off 0.9 points to 1,564.3 by midafternoon. Nevertheless, the rebound reflected only selective buying and did not represent a broad stock rally, traders said.

Traders looked for a signal from a meeting of central bankers from the major industrial powers. But the meeting in Basel, Switzerland, ended Monday without any new policy initiatives announced.

The U.S. financial exchanges, which curtailed trading schedules after the crash, moved closer to normal operating hours Monday by staying open until 3:30 p.m. EST, a half hour shorter than usual.

NYSE officials said today they would maintain business as usual although about 1,100 clerical workers voted Monday to strike over failure to reach a new contract.

A bargaining session between the NYSE and Local 153 of the Office and Professional Employees International Union ended Monday afternoon, and the membership voted 2-to-1 to go on strike, said Michael Goodwin, the union's secretary-treasurer.

The union's contract expired at midnight Oct. 31 but the floor reporters, clerks, secretaries and maintenance workers kept working while federally mediated talks continued. No further talks are scheduled.

While dealing with the strike, Wall Street traders also faced the reappearance of computerized program trading, which had been restricted after being blamed as a big factor in Phillips suggested that law enforcement officials be called to proceed with the search.

In other matters, the board approved a sexual harassment policy and procedures for the schools in addition to personnel recommendations and bids for Farmville Central, H.B. Sugg and Sam Bundy schools.

A resolution for American Education Week Nov. 15-21 was adopted, and advisory council recommendations were approved.

It was noted that Rosa Martinez and Lillian Copeland were selected among seven candidates for the Teacher's Assistant Advancement Program. A grant to fund 12 positions was not approved, but the Pitt County schools is funding the two positions at about $10,000, which includes regular pay for work in the schools for two years, and tuition for two semesters and two summer sessions.

Recommendations and suggestions were submitted to the board by the tobacco task force, which is preparing a tobacco policy for the schools. Ms. McGaughey suggested the tobacco awareness program be made available to the students through the health curriculum as opposed to the English curriculum.

The Certificate of Appreciation by the Governor's Business Awards Program was presented to Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., of Greenville for outstanding support to the schools. John Minges accepted the certificate for the company.

the stock market's wild fluctuations.

The reemergence of the technique, involving instantaneous buying and selling of stocks and stock-index futures, kept many investors on the sidelines Monday.

"It's a market drifting under its own weight," said Larry Wachtel, a market analyst for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "The market has taken a basic hit and needs to work out its destiny."

The Dow Jones industrial average, which tracks the value of 30 of the biggest U.S. companies, fell 58.85 points Monday, or 3 percent, to close at 1,900.20. It was the ninth largest one-day point drop.

About 160.69 million shares were traded, the lowest daily volume since "Black Monday" and sharply below the average volume of 459.90 million posted in the first week of the crisis.

The value of all U.S. stocks fell by $62.9 billion, according to the Wilshire Associates 5,000 Equity Index.

NYSE Chairman John J. Phelan, commenting on Monday's action on Wall Street, said there was "not a lot of use of program-assisted trading" and no evidence that the market dropped because of the resumption of computer trading. He cautioned, however, that the exchange would suspend computer trading again if it appeared to contribute to the market's volatility.

Sumrell Wins Final Football Contest

Gary Sumrell of 110 Country Road, Grimesland, is the winner of the final Daily Reflector Football Contest for the 1987 season.

Sumrell correctly picked the winners in 26 of the 32 games listed in last Tuesday's contest pages. His victory, however, came on the basis of his point total guess. He hit the actual total of 76 right on the nose. That came in Iowa's 52-24 victory over Northwestern.

Second place went to Randy Moye of P.O. Box 71, Maury, who also picked 26 correct winners. His point total guess was one off the actual total as he listed 77.

The Reflector congratulates the winners for 1987 and thanks all those who took part in the contest this year.

ACC Names Week's Best Performers

GREENSBORO (AP) — Clemson tackle Michael Dean Perry and Wake Forest defensive back Tony Mosley have been chosen as defensive players of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference after outstanding performances in their teams' conference victories Saturday.

Perry was the choice as the top lineman for his effort in the Tigers' 13-10 victory over North Carolina. The 6-foot-1, 280-pound senior from Aiken, S.C., was in on eight tackles, including one quarterback sack and three others for losses as the Tigers assured themselves of at least a tie for the ACC title with their eighth victory in nine outings.

The media's pre-season choice as the conference's defensive player of the year, Perry is Clemson's all-time leader with 27 quarterback sacks.

Mosley, a 5-foot-10, 170-pounder, turned in one of the finest games of his career in the Demon Deacons' 30-27 come-from-behind victory over Duke.

With the Blue Devils holding a 14-0 first-quarter lead, the junior from Albany, Ga., recovered a blocked punt in the end zone for Wake Forest's first touchdown. Mosley was also in on nine tackles, including six unassisted, and broke up four passes as Wake Forest snapped a three-game losing streak and clinched their first winning season since 1984.

On offense, Clemson fullback Tracy Johnson and Virginia wide receiver Tim Finkelston, both of whom turned in career-best performances in their team's league victories Saturday, were named the Atlantic Coast Conference offensive players of the week.

Johnson, a six-foot, 230-pound junior, rushed for 124 yards on 24 carries as the Tigers defeated North Carolina 13-10. He was responsible for 37 of 67 yards in Clemson's fourth-quarter scoring drive that set up David Treadwell's game-winning field goal.

Finkelston, a junior from Camp Hill, Fla., grabbed six passes for 67 yards, including a five-yard scoring pass from Scott Secules, as Virginia posted a 23-14 victory over Georgia Tech. He also returned two kickoffs for 76 yards and two punts for eight yards.

The selection was made by a special committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

Spurrier Says Devils Must Look Ahead

DURHAM (AP) — Duke has lost four football games this season by a total of 18 points, but coach Steve Spurrier says members of his team can't let the numbers get them down, especially as they prepare to face North Carolina State.

"We can't sit around and mope about it," Spurrier said at his weekly press conference Monday after his team lost to Wake Forest, 30-27, on Saturday. "We'll see if we can't come out hollering and jumping and full of enthusiasm."

In four of their five losses this season, the Blue Devils have squandered a lead or a chance to overtake the opposition. Their four victories have come by a total of 88 points.

"In those crucial situations, we haven't made the big plays and the other team has," Spurrier said. "Certainly, we'll have to look back and reflect on this year as a year where if we would have done a little better in close situations, we would have won some of those games."

Duke, 1-4 in the ACC, hosts the Wolfpack, 3-2 and 3-6, in its home finale at Wallace Wade Stadium. Duke is going for its first unbeaten home season since 1974.

Montgomery Back As Pack Quarterback

RALEIGH (AP) — After nine games, North Carolina State's football team is back to where it began at quarterback — Shane Montgomery.

The 6-foot-1, 188-pound sophomore was returned to the starting position Monday when Preston Poag joined the team's injury list. Poag underwent knee surgery Sunday, less than 24 hours after the Wolfpack lost 29-14 to East Tennessee State.

Montgomery started the season's first three games, all losses, and was benched in favor of Poag before a 42-14 victory over Maryland. Since then Montgomery has been off the bench only once, relatively late in a 48-0 loss at South Carolina.

Entering Saturday's contest at Duke, Montgomery has completed 22 of 53 passes for 274 yards with one touchdown pass and six interceptions.

Poag, NCSU's total offense leader with 724 yards, first was injured in a 48-0 loss at South Carolina two weeks ago. He was held out of practice most of last week, but then he reinjured the left knee on the final play of Saturday's game.

NCAA, Big 10 Clear Harmon

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — The NCAA and the Big Ten Conference Monday cleared Iowa running back Kevin Harmon of any wrongdoing in allegations of payments made to Harmon by sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom, Iowa Athletic Director C.W. "Bump" Elliott said.

"I am very pleased to report today that Wayne Duke of the Big Ten and Steve Horton of the NCAA have conferred on this matter," Elliott said in a statement. "They have confirmed to me that they see no violation of Big Ten or NCAA rules or regulations by Kevin Harmon, and see no problem that would jeopardize his eligibility for athletics at the University of Iowa."

The university launched an investigation last week after a report by federal arbitrator John C. Culver said Harmon may have received $350 and airline tickets from World Sports and Entertainment, Walters' and Bloom's sports-management firm.

Culver ruled in the report that Kevin's brother, former Iowa running back Ronnie Harmon, does not have to repay Walters almost $50,000 that was given to the Buffalo Bills running back during his junior season at Iowa.

"While suggesting that on a few occasions he displayed poor judgment, the NCAA and the Big Ten concluded that Kevin Harmon did not commit any violations," Elliott said.

A university committee interviewed Kevin Harmon about the allegations.

The committee's report, released Monday by the university, said no Iowa athletic department officials were aware of the events described in Culver's report and no NCAA rule was violated by Kevin Harmon, although rules were violated by Ronnie Harmon and former Iowa football player Devon Mitchell.

The committee said it would continue to investigate the allegations.

Culver's report makes two references to Kevin Harmon, one that he was paid $350 and that the sports agents bought airplane tickets for Ronnie Harmon, his girlfriend and Kevin Harmon and another that the agents gave Ronnie Harmon $12,157 in airplane tickets, some which went to Kevin Harmon.

A transcript of Ronnie Harmon's testimony, provided in the university committee's report, says money for tickets were sent to Kevin Harmon only once and not at his request.

"Well, first of all, the only time I can remember that they sent him money was when he was at the airport and he was stranded with another one of their clients, and they sent it on their own to him," the transcript quotes Ronnie Harmon as saying.

"He did not ask. The client asked money, and they said, did my brother need any money? And he said, yes. I did not tell them to send my brother money. They sent that on their own."

The committee said Kevin Harmon denies he ever received money directly from the agents.

Kevin Harmon and Mitchell were stranded at the St. Louis airport following the Thanksgiving holiday in 1985 and Mitchell called Walters for money, the committee said. The committee said Harmon was not aware that Mitchell had asked Walters for the money and did not know where the money came from.

"Kevin Harmon denies that he received any money," the committee report said. "Devon Mitchell has the same recollection."

Kevin Harmon told the committee that he never met Walters or Bloom, the committee report said.

"During the fall of 1985, he answered the phone a few times while visiting his brother Ronnie's apartment and spoke to both Walters and Bloom a few times," the committee report said. "They simply identified themselves as Norby or Lloyd and asked to speak to Ronnie. He indicates that he chatted with them for a few minutes without knowing that they were agents. They never discussed representing him."

The committee report said it is unlikely that Walters and Bloom would have been pursuing Kevin Harmon as a client in 1985 because he had shown little promise as a quarterback or running back at Iowa by that time.

"Whatever motivated WSE to provide transportation money to him through Devon Mitchell almost necessarily was unrelated to Kevin's athletic abilities," the committee report said. "It is likely that the money was provided either because of WSE's relationship with Kevin's brother or its relationship with Devon Mitchell. Kevin had no knowledge of the source of the funds and did not accept them as part of a 'deal' with an agent."

The report said Ronnie Harmon bought an airplane ticket for his brother to fly home to New York during spring break in 1986. The money to pay for the ticket apparently came from Walters and Bloom, the report said.

"Whatever the source of the funds Ronnie Harmon used to pay Kevin's airfare, the gift was from Ronnie to his brother and not from WSE to Ronnie's brother," the committee said.

Injury-plagued Oklahoma, the nation's top-ranked team all season, lost ground for the fourth week in a row in the Associated Press college football poll.

Oklahoma, Nebraska, Miami and Florida State held onto the first four positions today for the fifth consecutive week while UCLA, Syracuse, Notre Dame and Georgia climbed two places apiece and Arkansas replaced Florida in the Top Twenty.

Oklahoma's 29-10 victory over No. 12 Oklahoma State cost the Sooners the services of quarterback Jamelle Holieway and fullback Lydell Carr for the rest of the season but earned them 36 of 60 first-place votes and 1,164 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Nebraska, which has been second to Oklahoma in every poll this season, defeated Iowa State 42-3 and received 15 first-place ballots for 1,137 points. Last week, Oklahoma led 38-15 in first-place votes and 1,173-1,137 in points.

The other nine first-place votes and 1,111 points went to Miami of Florida, which is No. 3 for the seventh consecutive week after defeating Miami of Ohio 54-3. Last week, the Hurricanes had seven first-place votes and 1,108 points.

Two weeks ago, Oklahoma led Nebraska 40-13 in first-place votes and 1,176-1,134 in points. The previous week, it was 42-12 and 1,179-1,134 and the week before that 47-7 and 1,184-1,122.

Florida State received 1,021 points for a 34-0 rout of sixth-ranked Auburn, which dropped the Tigers to 12th place.

The LSU Tigers also suffered their first setback of the season, losing to Alabama 22-10, and fell from fifth place to 10th.

UCLA moved up from seventh to fifth with 943 points by defeating Oregon State 52-17, Syracuse jumped from eighth to sixth with 902 points by downing Navy 34-10, Notre Dame vaulted from ninth to seventh with 856 points after rallying to turn back Boston College 32-25 and Georgia rose from a 10th-place tie with Clemson to eighth with 694 points by beating Florida 23-10.

Clemson, a 13-10 winner over North Carolina, is ninth with 646 points and LSU rounds out the Top Ten with 632 points.

The Second Ten consists of Alabama, Auburn, Michigan State, South Carolina, Penn State, Indiana, Oklahoma State, Tennessee, Texas A&M and Arkansas.

Last week, Oklahoma State was 12th — there was no No. 11 tea because Clemson and Georgia tied for 10th — followed by Alabama and South Carolina in a tie for 13th, Michigan State, Penn State, Florida, Indiana, Tennessee and Texas A&M.

Florida dropped out of the Top Twenty by losing to Georgia. Arkansas, which beat Baylor 10-7 on a last-minute touchdown, returned to the rankings after a three-week absence.

Dickerson Bobble Won't Cause Changes

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A fourth-quarter fumble that led to a loss to the San Diego Chargers is not about to cause Eric Dickerson to change his running style or make the Indianapolis Colts scrap their new game plan.

Dickerson, acquired by the Colts from the Los Angeles Rams a week earlier, was stripped of the ball by a gang of defenders at the goal line as he drove for an apparent go-ahead touchdown with four minutes to go Sunday.

The Chargers' Mike Humiston pounced on the ball in the end zone and San Diego took over at its 20. Eleven plays later, Vince Abbott kicked a field goal with 12 seconds to go, giving the Chargers their seventh straight victory, 16-13. "I thought I had a good hold on the ball," said Dickerson, who runs with the ball cradled in one arm and did not wrap his other arm around it as he was mobbed by San Diego's Billy Ray Smith, Thomas Benson and Elvis Patterson.

"That's how San Diego plays. They like to punch the ball out. They were going after the ball all day," Dickerson said.

"Those things happen. If I was holding the ball with two hands, it would take away from my running style."

Dickerson, a fifth-year All-Pro who has led the NFL in rushing in three of his first four seasons and holds the league record of 2,105 yards for one season, gained 138 yards on 35 carries in his debut as a starter with the Colts. A week earlier, a day after joining the Colts, Dickerson rushed 10 times for 38 yards in a 19-14 victory over the New York Jets.

"I consider it an average day for me," Dickerson said of his second game as a Colt. "As for things like the fumble, I let it die once I leave the field. Whether you win or lose, when it's over, I try to forget about it."

Coach Ron Meyer refused to blame Dickerson for Sunday's loss.

"I thought our play selection had a good mix," Meyer said. "We would have liked to have spelled him a little more with Albert (Bentley), but we were moving the ball with the game-winner in mind. He did everything we wanted him to do.

"We're extremely disappointed," Meyer said. "But it was a heck of a game which came down to the last play."

"I hate to look at one particular play that spelled the difference and I won't do that," said Meyer, who also coached Dickerson at Southern Methodist.

The Colts dominated the first half, leading 13-0 on two field goals by Dean Biasucci and an 8-yard touchdown run by Bentley. Dickerson had 50 of the 80 yards on the TD drive.

Quarterback Jack Trudeau hit 12 of 18 passes for 127 yards, but the new emphasis on the running game produced the fewest pass attempts in one game by the Colts in two years.

"He (Dickerson) is a great player and you want to get him the ball as many times as you can," Trudeau said. "The coaching staff has to evaluate how much and how we want to go about doing it."

"Maybe we got a little too predictable, and I thought there was a streak in the game where I felt we could have thrown the ball more. But I want to emphasize we were in the game and had a chance to win at the end. That's the most important thing."

Receiver Bill Brooks, who caught three passes for 30 yards, said, "When you've got someone like Eric Dickerson, you make sure he gets his 35 or 40 carries, because sooner or later he's going to break one. You use him."

Guard Ron Solt said the Colts "are a running team and Eric fits that mold beautifully. Running the ball, that's our strength. We're not the type of team that can drop back (and pass) all day. That's not our personnel. Our makeup is to line up and blow people away up front."

San Diego Coach Al Saunders said, "You can see the difference he (Dickerson) makes to that team. He's such an extra dimension to (try and) defense. He's the ingredient that's going to make them excellent."

"It's good to see," Saunders said. "He's the first real NFL star that they've had here."

Bucs Remember ...

(Continued From B-1) rusher, and maybe we should have been playing him more this year," Baker said.

"Travis Hunter had an outstanding day despite some early mistakes. He was 9 of 15 passing and that's what we want (over 50 percent). (Walter) Wilson had some outstanding catches. The routes he ran have been open all year, but that's the first time that we've gotten the ball to him on it. He had several crucial catches," Baker said. He also said Ron Jones caught the ball well while Denell Harper ran the ball well in situations he has not worked in before.

"The key thing was the number of big plays we had," Baker said. "We did what we had to do to win. That sort of thing builds confidence."

Baker credited the work of assistant coach Kevin Gilbride for the improvement of the passing game, working with the individual area coaches to put together a passing package "that was realistic for them."

Baker said that Temple caught the Pirates somewhat by surprise with the wishbone formation. "They had only used it in short yardage and goal line situations before," he said. "We had not practiced all week against it, so I thought we adjusted to it pretty well under the circumstances."

After their last touchdown with 1:51 left in the game, the Pirates, leading 31-19, elected to go for two points and Baker was questioned as to why. A kicked PAT would have given the Pirates a 13-point lead. A miss on the conversion left the door open for Temple to come back, score one touchdown, make a 2-point conversion and kick a field goal to tie the game.

Temple did score the TD, but missed on the two-point try, however.

"We have a little computer card that nearly everyone in the country uses. It gives you situations and tells you whether you should go for one or two points," Baker said. "At this point, it said go for two. Now I've got nine full-time assistants and four part-time assistants, plus myself, and not one of us figured out that we didn't need two, just one."

"We had a coaches' meeting last night and decided that from now on, we'd do our own figuring," he said.

Raiders On A Down Streak

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders have lost five straight games — the first time that has happened to owner Al Davis since 1964 when the team was in Oakland and Davis was the coach.

Davis still was deciding things Sunday, when he sent word from his box high in the Metrodome that the Raiders should change quarterbacks. The move early in the second half helped for a while, but it didn't stop the mistakes which helped the Minnesota Vikings to a 31-20 victory over the Raiders.

Los Angeles, which won its first three games this season, is 3-5 and fading fast.

Coach Tom Flores admitted that the outlook was bleak, that the chance of making the playoffs was "a long shot."

"The big thing is to get back and win a game," Flores said.

That won't be easy. Ahead for the Raiders is a tough late-season schedule, including a game Sunday at San Diego against the Chargers, who have won seven straight games and lead the AFC West with a 7-1 record.

After that, the Raiders play at home against defending AFC champion Denver and at Seattle, where they have been outscored 70-3 the past two seasons.

Later, the Raiders face resurgent Buffalo, Kansas City and probable playoff teams Cleveland and Chicago.

San Diego beat the Raiders' replacement team three weeks ago 23-17 when Elvis Patterson returned an interception 75 yards for a touchdown with 18 seconds remaining.

"What can you say after you've lost three straight?" said halfback Marcus Allen, whose arithmetic didn't count the two losses the Raiders' replacement team suffered before the end of the players' strike.

"I don't know," Allen said when asked what's wrong with the once intimidating, swashbuckling Raiders.

Is it the indecision at quarterback? Rusty Hilger has been pulled three times in his five career starts, including Sunday's game when immobile Marc Wilson took over and threw the ball well most of the time but was sacked three times.

"It doesn't make any difference, we still have to block," center Don Mosebar said.

Is it the offensive line's fault? Minnesota defensive end Doug Martin was among the Vikings who bedeviled the Raiders' quarterbacks into five sacks. Martin said 295-pound Raiders' rookie John Clay, the team's No. 1 draft choice was part of the problem.

"He's (Clay) definitely one of the weak links in the offensive line, along with a few others," Martin said.

"You can't throw without time to throw and you can't run without blocking," Vikings' safety John Harris said.

Is it problems utilizing both of their Heisman Trophy winners at running back, Allen and Bo Jackson? Minnesota linebacker Jesse Solomon said that when the Raiders used both at the same time in the second half, it didn't matter.

"It doesn't complicate the defense because they can't give 'em both the ball at the same time," Solomon said. "There's not enough footballs."

Allen and Jackson had good but not spectacular games against the Vikings. Allen ran 11 times for 50 yards and caught four passes for 12 yards. Jackson's blazing speed was evident as he ran for 71 yards on 12 carries, but on his one pass reception, he fumbled after gaining seven yards.

Solomon recovered the fumble and ran 31 yards to the Raiders' 11-yard line, and the Vikings scored their clinching touchdown on the next play, making the score 31-13.

"The last turnover killed us," Raiders defensive end Howie Long said. "It ate us alive, emotionally and physically. There are only so many turnovers you can take and keep coming back from. It's devastating to lose two in a row on the road like this."

Long referred to a last-second loss at New England last Sunday, when the Patriots' missed a last-minute field goal try, but were given a second chance when the Raiders were caught offside, and made the second one to win 26-23.

The Raiders outgained Minnesota 398-200 and held the Vikings to a net 84 yards passing, but again a defensive mistake made a huge difference.

Radio Days Alive For Today's Fans

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

Radio days are anything but dead for sports fans.

Tune in, and Tim Brown of Notre Dame is just a tackle away from breaking a long return. It's like he tripped over the coffee table.

A flick of the wrist, and 275-pound Craig "Ironhead" Heyward of Pitt rumbles through your living room carrying Rutgers tacklers on his back.

Another flick of the wrist, and body English has you leaning over the side of an easy chair as a last-second field goal sails narrowly, agonizingly wide and Columbia's record streak goes to 39 losses.

On television, the picture you get never covers the entire field and sometimes is just a bird's-eye view because the director is playing artist.

The picture you get on the radio is as wide or narrow as your imagination, or bias. And, you can feel more like a fan in the stands because there are no seemingly endless reruns of plays.

Word pictures, as painted by a Jack Buck or Lindsey Nelson, capture the essence of the game, whatever the sport. On television, words often get in the way.

It is said a picture is worth a thousand words. If true, it's something TV sportscasters forget. A viewer doesn't need to be told in detail what is there for him to see, and often what he sees doesn't jibe with what he is being told.

On radio, not only do words form pictures for listeners, but so do voice inflections and pauses.

So, last Saturday was a feast for the mind's eye for at least one listener, who had become a sports tube boob. In a space of a few hours he traveled to South Bend, Ind.; Annapolis, Md.; East Rutherford, N.J., and the upper corner of Manhattan Island.

In the meantime, the television set was on for the Florida State-Auburn game, but the sound grew lower until it was gone as Brent Musburger and Pat Haden tried to hold viewer interest in a game that was over by halftime.

Sandy Lyle, the winner of the 1985 British Open, likes the fast lane. His hobbies, away from the fairways, include motorcycles, swift cars and airplanes.

to the replacement-ball potential of teams like Houston and Tampa Bay, which haven't quite emerged yet.

The Eagles' 31-27 victory over Washington Sunday avenged their only "real" loss of the season. They are 4-1 with their regulars, as opposed to 0-3 with strike irregulars and Buddy Ryan's bravado seems a little more real these days.

"I think we beat the best team in the National Football League and that shows we can play with the big boys," Ryan said after Randall Cunningham, who has 11 touchdown passes in five games, made like John Elway, with three touchdown passes and seven carries for 80 yards, including a 45-yard scramble that set up his first TD pass.

"I think they're contenders," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said of the Eagles.

The Vikings' regulars matched the Eagles, moving to 4-1, 4-4 overall, by beating the Los Angeles Raiders 31-20. It was the fifth loss in a row for Los Angeles, its longest losing streak in 23 years.

The Chargers, 7-1, also are 4-1 with regulars. They rallied from a 13-0 halftime deficit and beat Indianapolis 16-13. And New Orleans made itself a legitimate wild-card contender, improving to 5-3 by routing the Rams 31-14 as Los Angeles lost for the seventh time in eight starts, the first time it has been 1-7 since 1964.

"This was a day when the New Orleans Saints put the rest of the league on notice that we are a force," said Dalton Hilliard, who rushed for 92 yards, caught four passes for 84 yards and completed one pass for 23 yards.

Sunday's results also left the league in a strange state of parity — or is it strike-produced parity? — as the 15-game season moved past the halfway mark.

The strangest situation was in the AFC East, where four teams were tied at 4-4 and the New York Jets were 3-4 going into Monday night's game against Seattle.

There was a three-way tie at 5-3 atop the AFC Central among Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Houston. Off non-strike form, Cleveland should be favored, but the Oilers played tough Sunday, losing 27-20 to the San Francisco 49ers at Candlestick Park.

Chiefs Are Stumbling Once Again

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — In 1985, the Kansas City Chiefs, under taciturn Coach John Mackovic, were hoping to turn the corner in a rebuilding program which dated to 1974 and the firing of Hank Stram.

But as Kansas City fans cheered the Royals to victory in the World Series, the Chiefs proceeded to break the franchise record for consecutive losses, dropping seven straight games.

Now, to their amazed horror, it's happened again. And this time, the Royals finished out of the American League playoffs and cannot offer fans any comfort.

As in 1985, this was billed in August as a big year for the franchise that won Super Bowl IV. Fueling the fires of optimism was a four-game exhibition winning streak, giving the Chiefs a 4-1 preseason mark heading into their first season under likable, enthusiastic coach Frank Gansz.

The opener went well, a 20-13 victory over San Diego in which this year's top two draft choices, running backs Paul Palmer and Christian Okoye, played leading roles.

Of course, nobody realized it was going to be the team's last appearance at Arrowhead Stadium in 55 days.

Gansz, an animated motivator who coached the special teams to a high level last season, seemed the perfect counterpoint to his dour, chip-on-the-shoulder predecessor. Mackovic was fired despite the fact the 1986 Chiefs had made their first playoff appearance since 1971.

The second week of the season found the Chiefs in Seattle for what has become for them an annual blowout. A 43-14 setback did not put them in a good frame of mind for the player strike that was called the following Tuesday.

Then, as they walked the picket line and tried to explain that the shotguns were not loaded and only a joke, the front office assembled one of the league's weakest replacement teams. The substitutes' first effort was a 35-17 whipping by the Los Angeles Raiders. Then came a trip to Miami and a 42-0 beating.

Back home before 20,000 mostly curious fans in Arrowhead, the replacement Chiefs rode into history with their third straight setback, 26-17 to Denver.

The first non-strike game turned out to be consecutive franchise loss No. 5 when the Chargers, at San Diego, trounced the Chiefs 42-21. The next week brought loss No. 6, 31-28 to the Chicago Bears, as Jim McMahon rallied his team to a fourth-quarter comeback.

Then Sunday, listening to people cheer for them for a change, the Chiefs played one of their worst games in years and lost to Pittsburgh 17-16.

So this Sunday's home game against the New York Jets will not be for pride alone. It will be to avoid the embarrassment of setting a franchise record for consecutive futility.

"I'm not sure what's wrong with this team," Rick Donnalley, center and alternate player representative, said.

"It sounded like they started booing the offense. But they did that last year, too," Donnalley said. "We're starved for victory. We're improving. We're just not seeing the results in the won-loss column yet."

Gansz, predictably, is being criticized by many fans. A former Navy fighter pilot, Gansz never had been a head coach before getting his chance this year at 48.

Protecting the passer has been a major problem. Quarterback Bill Kenney played with a cast on his non-throwing hand Sunday and got sacked four times.

But perhaps the most glaring deficiency is in holding the ball. Kenney was intercepted twice inside the Steelers' 10-yard line. And the 250-pound Okoye, a raw bundle of potential, has made a killing fumble two straight weeks.

His fourth-quarter turnover against the Bears led to Chicago's winning touchdown. His fourth quarter fumble Sunday let Gary Anderson have a second chance at kicking the game-winning field goal.

The Chiefs had a 16-14 lead with 10:36 to play after Nick Lowery kicked his third field goal. The Steelers then moved from their 20 to the Chiefs' 24 before Anderson was wide right on a 41-yard field goal attempt.

The rejuvenated Chiefs took over at their 20 and then Okoye fumbled.

"I can't tell you what happened," Okoye said. "I carried the ball 22 times last week and fumbled once. I try to hold on to the ball every time."

Gansz described the fumble as "heartbreaking."

"He's going to be a great player, but he's going to have to go through this," Gansz said.

"Nobody in this room feels worse now than Christian," Donnalley said. "Nobody has said much to him. What's the point? He's going to be a great player. This is just a learning process for him. He'll be better for what's happened to him the last two games."

Gansz is calling upon his military training to help his team fight through its crisis.

"This is a tough business. Every loss is hard to come back from," he said. "Every loss can help us if we have the right attitude and come back with confidence."

"The thing that's killing us is the turnovers, the fumbles, the interceptions," Kenney said. "We can't make it work like we want all the time."

One problem the Chiefs do not have, Donnalley said, is complacency.

"We're working hard," he said. "Very hard. That's why this is such a disappointment."

Sports Arguments Are Changing

By Scott Ostler
(c) 1987, Los Angeles Times

Sports arguments, I've noticed, have changed since I was a kid.

Back then, we argued about who was a better hitter, Williams or Mantle, that type of debate.

Now, it seems kids are more issue oriented, more into personalities. Take these two kids I heard going at it the other day on a street corner. They were busting each other's chops about their respective sport heroes — Irving Fryar, the football player, and Mitch "Blood" Green, the former heavyweight contender.

"Heard the latest about the fabulous Fryar?" asked the little kid, sniffing the air pompously.

"What? More fumbles?"

"C'mon. Check out this clipping. 'New England Patriot wide receiver Irving Fryar said he might have been shot at while pursuing a mugger in Boston.' These three guys jumped him coming out of a jewelry store, stole his stuff, and he chased 'em and got it back."

"Kid stuff," scoffed the big kid. "He didn't even get arrested. He probably made the whole story up."

"That's the point, potato brain. This guy makes up better stories than Walter Mitty, or Joe Biden."

"I deal in reality, squirt. Seen the latest on my man Mitch Green?"

"Don't tell me — He's the guy who mugged Fryar."

"No, no, no. My man Mitch ..."

"What, he's got three first names?"

"Hey, listen up. The other day Mitch drives his '79 Lincoln — a classy car, not that you'd know — into a gas station in Queens, fills 'er up, then threatens the pump jockey, who takes a fast hike. Mitch assumes control of the station. He starts filling up other cars and collecting the money."

"Does he clean windshields, too?"

"Don't be cute. He's grabbing a $100 bill from a cabbie when the cops arrive. The cabbie sees the cops, tries to take back his bill and Green punches the cabbie in the face. He's up for robbery and grand larceny."

"Is that the first fight he ever won?"

"C'mon. Mitch took Tyson 10 rounds in '86 and he only lost because the promoter shortchanged him. He said he woulda won, but, and I quote, 'I couldn't get motivated because of the money thing.' I used the same line on my old man when he refused to double my allowance, then asked me why I didn't cut the lawn."

"The gas station caper is impressive, I admit. Greatness, however, is not measured on one feat, but on longevity and versatility. Hey, last year Irving was accused of attacking a man in a hotel who insulted his wife."

"Big deal. I remember that non-event. Judge threw the charge out of court. Don't even bother me with that lame stuff."

"OK, what about Fryar's alleged gambling on NFL games?"

"He passed a lie detector test. Clean as a whistle."

"Lie detectors have been known to lie. And what about the drug rumors?"

"Never proven. Same with the assault, vandalism and trespassing rap back in college. This guy can't do anything wrong right. He's a shadow of his own self."

"Let's not forget the knife caper. Fryar slices a tendon in his finger, claims it's a kitchen accident. But we find out he had a parking-lot beef with a pregnant woman who turns out to be his wife."

"Interesting, but not big league stuff. Maybe you saw where my guy was busted for allegedly refusing to pay a toll on an expressway. Disorderly conduct and driving while intoxicated. Next, he's driving around Harlem, watching a TV on his dashboard. The cops stop him. They find pills and angel dust in the car. Top that."

"OK, Fryar gets injured in a game, leaves the stadium at halftime, goes for a cruise, and he's talking on his car phone when he goes out of control and runs into a tree. Totals his Benz. Gets himself a concussion."

"I've done worse on my skateboard. Look, I thought you'd be reasonable, but I can see I have to go to the well for my A stuff. When my man Mitch gets busted on the TV and angel dust charge, the cops check and find out his driver's license has been suspended 54 times."

"You're making that up. After 40 suspensions, they put you in a dungeon or something."

"This was in New York, twerp, where they believe in giving a guy a second chance."

"Wow. Fifty-four! I don't think Babe Ruth ever got 54 license suspensions. I can't wait 'til I'm old enough to have a driver's license suspended."

Observing the discussion, I felt so much better about this young generation. They haven't lost the old sports-debating habit. They have their heroes. They have their goals. I gave the two lads a buck to go buy some baseball cards. They thanked me politely and left.

I hope they bring back my car.

Ginsburg Is Part Of 'Marijuana Generation'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the case of Douglas H. Ginsburg means that past marijuana use rules out government leadership, much of a generation has been disqualified.

The government estimates that one-third of all Americans over age 12 — and 60 percent of those age 18 through 25 — have tried marijuana at least once.

Ginsburg asked President Reagan on Saturday to withdraw his nomination to the Supreme Court. He cited the furor caused by his admission two days earlier that he had smoked marijuana on a few occasions as a student and law professor.

To apply that as a new standard for public figures, political analyst Norman Ornstein says, "means our pool of potential top public servants from the largest generation in history has just been reduced by three-quarters or more."

"We're not talking about serious crimes here," Ornstein said. "We're talking about youthful transgressions or things that were par for the course for people in a generation."

A Gallup poll taken for Newsweek magazine showed that two-thirds of Americans don't believe past marijuana use should disqualify a person from holding public office.

But the generations are divided on the illegal drug, and Americans old enough to recall bathtub gin are sometimes shocked at their children's indulgences.

"If you're 30, you say that everybody has tried it and it doesn't faze you," said William Crotty, a 58-year-old Florida lawyer. "But if you're in my generation, you're shocked."

Crotty is a fund-raiser for Democratic presidential candidate Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, who was moved by the Ginsburg controversy to disclose last weekend that he too had smoked marijuana — as a college student and soldier.

Another Democratic candidate, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, said he had tried it "back in the '60s, in a culture of widespread use."

And more politicians stepped forward with similar statements. Among them: conservative Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., liberal Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and both Florida Democratic Sen. Lawton Chiles and his Republican challenger Rep. Connie Mack.

"The reality is if you're going to exclude everyone from public office that's made a mistake there are going to be darn few people around to participate," said Mack, who had denied marijuana use in his first campaign five years ago.

"The fact is this country can't do without those people," said Jon Gettman, director of the National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws, which favors legalization. "We need the best minds in this country, and a lot of those best minds have used marijuana."

The year already has seen the emergence of new questions about the private lives of public figures. Ornstein said the Ginsburg episode will further increase the reluctance of many qualified people to seek public office or leadership roles because of the scrutiny they would face.

"You think back on what it is you might have done, not just in the last five years but when you were a kid, not just serious problems but modest transgressions, and suddenly you realize that it can have a far greater impact on your life," he said.

Dr. Arnold Trebach, director of the institute on drugs, crime and justice at American University, said marijuana use has been surrounded by irrational reactions.

"My feeling is there's enormous hypocrisy," Trebach said. "We've got to back up and say, 'The basic American test is performance.'"

Burton Pines, senior vice president of the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank, said Ginsburg should be forgiven.

"If someone was doing something that was a broad social norm at the time, I think the public could say that's not a disqualifier," he said. "How many Supreme Court justices appointed in the 1940s drank booze during Prohibition? Should they have been disqualified? They broke the law. Probably we'd say no."

But Education Secretary William Bennett, who pushed Ginsburg to withdraw, said through spokesman Loye Miller that Ginsburg's marijuana use raised ethical questions in part because some of it occurred when he was a teacher — and of law, no less.

The National Institute on Drug Abuse, a federal agency, estimated in 1985 that 62 million people, or 33 percent of those over age 12, had tried marijuana at least once, and that 18 million had used it within the past 30 days.

Among college-age Americans and young adults, ages 18 through 25, 60 percent were estimated to have tried marijuana — down slightly from the 68 percent peak in 1979. Among those 26 or older, 27 percent were estimated to have tried the drug.

White House Tests Senatorial Waters Before Nomination

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration appears ready to nominate federal appellate Judge Anthony M. Kennedy for the Supreme Court and is lobbying Sen. Jesse Helms and other uneasy conservatives to line up support for the California jurist.

President Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese III have been meeting with some conservative senators, but the major part of the effort was a meeting set for today between Helms, R-N.C., and Kennedy.

It is unusual for a prospective nominee to meet with senators, but this is a special case.

After the defeat of Robert H. Bork by the Senate last month, and the withdrawal of Douglas H. Ginsburg on Saturday, Reagan doesn't want to lose a third straight Supreme Court nominee.

Helms just two weeks ago said "no way, Jose" would he back Kennedy, suggesting there could be a filibuster against a candidate that some conservatives considered not solidly enough conservative. But on Monday, Helms said he had an "open mind."

"I always look at all of them with an open mind," he said. "I want to be fair to him and I know he wants to be honest with me and, you know, that's a good way to start."

After the protest from Helms and others, the president decided to nominate Ginsburg, who bowed out nine days later following the uproar over his admission that he smoked marijuana in the 1960s and 1970s.

Other conservatives said they would be able to support Kennedy.

"I think it's fair to say he is the leading candidate," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said of Kennedy, a Sacramento, Calif.-based judge on the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Conservative Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, at the White House on another matter, told reporters, "If chosen by the president I'd certainly support him."

He said there would have to be "very strong reasons" for anyone to filibuster and noted, "There's a limited amount of time this year" to fill the court seat.

Jeffrey Trout, research director for the Institute for Government and Politics, a conservative think tank, said, "Most conservatives would be behind Kennedy."

"We can support him," said Bill Kling of the Coalitions for America. He said the Helms-Kennedy meeting was arranged because the administration wants "to put out the fire right away."

Meese on Monday met with Sen.

ANTHONY M. KENNEDY

Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who earlier in the day blamed "gutless wonders" in the White House for forcing Ginsburg to quit when he was willing to fight on despite the marijuana controversy. Reagan contended Ginsburg gave up voluntarily.

And the ranking Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, met with Reagan on Monday, according to a source who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Thurmond apparently will be frustrated for a third time in his attempt to have the president nominate federal appellate Judge William Wilkins of Greenville, S.C.

"They may be mad at the president and the White House for now, but they realize this is it," Trout said of Thurmond and Hatch. "If they don't get this one, they probably realize the next nominee they face may come from a Democrat."

A Democratic source from the Senate Judiciary Committee, speaking only on condition he not be named, said Democratic committee members placed Kennedy in their "least controversial" category among possibilities mentioned by White House officials for the court vacancy last month.

Meanwhile, FBI Director William Sessions disclosed that 143 interviews with more than 100 people in background investigations over the past four years failed to turn up evidence of Ginsburg's marijuana use.

Sessions said he will order a review of the FBI's background investigations into Ginsburg and that the results will be referred to the Justice Department, where a determination would be made on whether to pursue prosecution.

Who Did What To Ginsburg?

By TERENCE HUNT

AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — The collapse of Douglas H. Ginsburg's Supreme Court nomination left in its wake a rash of finger-pointing and heated arguments about who's to blame and whether the White House pressured him to quit.

Angry denying that he had abandoned Ginsburg, President Reagan said Monday, "I stood by and declared I would not withdraw him. He voluntarily made that decision on his own."

But there was unusually sharp criticism from Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, one the president's staunchest conservative supporters.

Hatch blamed "gutless wonders" in the administration for Ginsburg's withdrawal and said "It's time for Ronald Reagan to take charge of the White House."

Nine days after being selected, Ginsburg announced Saturday he was asking Reagan to drop the nomination because of the flap resulting from his admission he had smoked marijuana in the 1960s and 1970s.

Ginsburg's announcement followed a telephone call from Education Secretary William J. Bennett urging him to resign. Bennett checked with Reagan before placing the call.

Reagan, asked if he were embarrassed by the loss of Ginsburg, said, "No, but I think there are others that should be." He did not elaborate but said he was not referring to Ginsburg.

"He chose to leave in view of the harassment that was coming," the president said, talking with reporters as he toured the United Way headquarters in nearby Alexandria, Va. Asked who harassed Ginsburg, Reagan replied, "I think it's very evident."

As for the assertion he had given his blessing to Bennett's call, Reagan said, "All of that was a distortion, the way that story was told."

The president amended his use of the word "harassment," saying that Ginsburg himself had cited the "right word" for his departure in his withdrawal statement, "and that was the 'clamor' that arose."

Reagan was referring to Ginsburg's statement on Saturday that his views on legal issues were being drowned out in the clamor over his past use of an illegal drug.

In an unusual public airing of differences, the White House and Education Department offered conflicting stories about Reagan's position regarding Bennett's call.

Asked if the president had acquiesced to Bennett's action, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "I don't know whether the president said that or not in terms of a direct quote. But I do know that he did not intend to acquiesce or give direction or approve or in any way endorse those actions."

Going even farther, Fitzwater publicly criticized Bennett's press spokesman, Loye Miller, and said Miller "said things the president didn't say."

Miller had called news organizations Friday night to alert them to Bennett's call. He said Reagan told Bennett: "Do what you think is right."

Sticking with his story Monday, Miller said Bennett, after talking with Reagan, "felt confident in making the call (to Ginsburg). He wouldn't have if he felt any discouragement from the president."

Bennett, in an interview Monday with The Associated Press, declined to discuss the call he made to Ginsburg, but he said he stood by the account of his role revealed earlier by Miller.

At a news conference on Capitol Hill, Hatch said he spoke with Ginsburg before and after the nominee's withdrawal statement.

"I have no doubt that he was" pressured, Hatch said. "I know it came from the White House. He would have kept on had he felt the White House really supported him."

"It's time for Ronald Reagan to take charge of the White House," Hatch said.

Fitzwater was asked repeatedly at a news briefing what, if any, action had been taken by Reagan or other White House staff members to let Ginsburg know that Bennett was not talking for the president.

He insisted he had told members of the press corps that Reagan was not behind Bennett's call, but numerous White House reporters, including the reporter who first brought the issue to Fitzwater's attention.

Reagan Hints U.S.-Nicaragua Talks May Begin

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, while praising pending cease-fire talks between Nicaraguan officials and the Contra rebels, says the Sandinista government is "nowhere near" compliance with the Central America peace agreement.

Reagan, in a speech Monday, also raised the possibility of substantive diplomatic contacts between the United States and Nicaragua.

His remarks opened a week of intense debate in Washington on Central America. Also on the agenda was a speech today by Secretary of State George P. Shultz to the Organization of American States General Assembly and a round of appearances later in the week by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega.

Foreign ministers or their representatives from more than 30 hemispheric countries, in Washington for the annual OAS meeting, heard Reagan criticize the Sandinista government's performance since the Central America peace agreement was signed last August.

"The Central American democracies are in compliance with the accord. Nicaragua is nowhere near," Reagan told the luncheon gathering, which included the Sandinista foreign minister, Miguel d'Escoto.

In violation of the peace agreement, Reagan said press restrictions have not been lifted, a state of emergency remains in effect and "thousands of political prisoners remain in their jails."

Nicaragua has said it has done more to comply with the agreement than any other Central American country.

Reagan, in a more upbeat vein, said he saw as a "hopeful sign" the designation by the Sandinistas of Cardinal Miguel Ovando y Bravo, a government critic, as peace mediator between the Sandinistas and the Contras.

The president said he envisions those discussions as a possible basis for ending the diplomatic freeze between the United States and Nicaragua.

"When serious negotiations between the Sandinistas and the freedom fighters ... are under way, Secretary Shultz will be ready to meet jointly with the foreign ministers of all five Central American nations, including the Sandinistas' representative," Reagan said.

The United States and Nicaragua have not had substantive discussions since the latter half of 1984 when a series of unsuccessful bilateral exchanges took place.

Reagan ruled out a resumption of those talks by insisting there can be no substantive contacts with Nicaragua unless other Central American countries participate as well.

U.S. officials, agreeing to discuss the situation only if not named, said the conditions Reagan spelled out for resuming discussions with Nicaragua were not new. But they said the decision to include reference to this issue in Reagan's speech followed intense internal debate.

The officials said the decision was based partly on the desire to preempt Ortega, who is expected on Wednesday to repeat in an OAS speech his long-standing appeal for direct negotiations with the United States.

Ortega was due to arrive in Washington today on what is believed to be his first visit since shortly after the 1979 Sandinista revolution. No meetings with U.S. officials were scheduled.

At a news conference Monday, Shultz indicated he was satisfied with the progress in the peace agreement. Other officials, however, expressed concern that some of Nicaragua's allies, particularly Mexico, will try to use their influence to enable the Sandinistas to evade compliance with the agreement.

In a speech to the OAS on Monday night, Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda issued several veiled critiques of U.S. policy, although he made no direct reference to the United States.

Florida Space Center Set To Increase Launch Rate

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An Air Force official predicts that within two years the annual launch rate here will climb sharply to eight or nine space shuttles and 12 to 15 unmanned rockets.

"We're on the threshold of a new heyday here with both shuttles and expendable launch vehicles; it's going to get exciting around here," Col. Lawrence L. Gooch, who heads the Eastern Space and Missile Center, told reporters Monday.

Gooch's command includes the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, where expendable rockets, civil and military, are launched. Space shuttles are launched from the adjacent Kennedy Space Center, operated by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Launch activity has been light since the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger nearly two years ago and the grounding of most of the nation's space rockets for months because of various problems last year.

But Gooch said activity will accelerate now that the Air Force's Titan 34D, the United States' most powerful unmanned space booster, is back in business and a new generation of rockets is coming on line. Activity also will be stepped up by a surge in commercial space-launch ventures, he added.

Titan 34D is used primarily for boosting large military reconnaissance, communications and missile early warning satellites into space.

Rain Relieves Forest Fire Threat

By The Associated Press
More rain fell today in the South, bringing relief to weary crews battling wildfires in 14 states, while firefighters in Oregon finally controlled a blaze that burned out of control for 71 days and charred nearly 100,000 acres.

Two people have died while battling the Southern forest fires, which have charred more than 350,000 acres in 14 states.

A band of rain was falling from northeast Texas across Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky and West Virginia, helping to dampen the fires and clean the smoke from the air over much of the East and South, the National Weather Service said today.

Monday's downpour in Tupelo, Miss., dropped a record 3.7 inches of rain. Elsewhere, nearly 2 inches fell Monday at El Dorado, Ark., and more than an inch at Muscle Shoals, Ala., on the Tennessee border.

"One-half or three-quarters of an inch will put the fires out, dead out," said John Laing, of the weather service in Atlanta.

But Tennessee forester Dwight Barnett said more is needed: "We need 3 inches to put us out of the fire business. We're expecting a half to three-quarters inch."

In Oregon, meanwhile, the 96,500-acre Silver forest fire was declared under control Monday, marking the symbolic end of a devastating fire season.

Fire officials flew over the charred heart of the Siskiyou National Forest to check flare-ups from increased winds before declaring the battle over, said spokesman Warren Olney.

At least 9,000 fires have burned more than 200,000 acres since Oct. 27 in 13 Southern states, said Doug Williams of the U.S. Forest Service regional office in Atlanta. That doesn't include West Virginia, where 150,000 acres have been charred recently.

Smoke from the fires, which at one time stretched from West Virginia into New England, extended early today from eastern Tennessee to Maryland and Delaware, the weather service said.

In Kentucky, a 75-year-old firefighter died after suffering an apparent heart attack on Monday, a day after a 48-year-old man died while battling a blaze.

Author-Screenwriter Returns To Hollywood For TV Filming

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although Budd Schulberg moved away from Hollywood years ago, something always draws him back to his roots.

Schulberg is the screenwriter whose "On the Waterfront" and "A Face in the Crowd" are film classics.

He's also the novelist whose "What Makes Sammy Run?" is a searing exposure of ruthless ambition set in the movie business. Needless to say, industry nabobs regarded it as a betrayal when it came out in 1941, since he was the son of B.P. Schulberg, head of Paramount Studios. Louis B. Mayer, then head of MGM, told the elder Schulberg his son should be deported.

Schulberg, now 73, with a flowing mane of white hair and dark horn-rimmed glasses, recently returned to Los Angeles for the filming of one of his short stories, "A Table at Ciro's," part of the trilogy "Tales from the Hollywood Hills" airing this month on PBS.

He selected the meeting place for the interview, the Polo Lounge, the legendary watering hole of movie moguls at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

Schulberg co-wrote the teleplay for the one-hour "A Table at Ciro's," starring Darren McGavin, Lois Chiles, Stella Stevens, Ann Magnuson and Steven Bauer. It airs Friday. Schulberg had dedicated the story, of a studio boss thronged by hangers-on as his own fate hangs in the balance, to his father.

"This is from a group of stories I wrote in the early 1940s," Schulberg said. "I believe it was published in the Saturday Evening Post. I was doing a series of stories about Hollywood, and some also ran in Collier's, Liberty and Esquire.

"It's about a studio head at a party at Ciro's and everybody there wants to hit on him for something. Even his wife wants to get a choice film part for her Latin lover. A director fallen on hard times is looking for a comeback. The switchboard operator has been told she looks like Ava Gardner. What they don't know is that he's waiting for a phone call from the people in New York who really pull the strings."

HBO Has Most Nominations

L.A. Times-Washington Post

HOLLYWOOD — Home Box Office led the cable-TV industry with 112 out of 314 nominations for the ninth annual ACE Awards, cable's own version of the Emmys, which were announced Monday by the National Academy of Cable Programming.

Among 18 other cable outlets that submitted original programming for consideration, Showtime received 46 nominations, the Arts & Entertainment Network got 35 and Cable News Network and the Disney Channel collected 10 each.

Approximately 30 winners in the program and performance categories will be announced Jan. 24 during a live ACE (Awards for Cable Excellence) telecast on HBO. The program will originate from the Wiltern Theater here. Winners in other categories will be honored during non-televised ceremonies at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles Jan. 22.

Singer Says Mistreated

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Soul singer James Brown says he was mistreated by sheriff's deputies when he was arrested last weekend on charges of resisting arrest and leaving the scene of an accident.

Brown, 54, of Beech Island, was arrested Saturday evening after his van struck a vehicle in a parking lot, then released Sunday on $10,118 bond, Aiken County sheriff's officers said.

Brown said he was bound hand and foot with wire. "It's very inhumane what they did to me," he said.

Sheriff's Capt. James Whitehurst said that when Brown's van was stopped, a fight ensued between Brown and the officer.

Whitehurst denied that Brown was tied up. "At most, Mr. Brown was handcuffed," he said.

Brown denied involvement in the accident and said he fought with the deputy when he refused to return his driver's license.

Schulberg began his career as a reader in the story department at the Selznick Studio. David O. Selznick had been his father's assistant at Paramount. Schulberg then graduated to junior writer.

"We were extremely underpaid and our scripts rarely got read," he said. "We thought of ourselves as pinch hitters. I wrote the last 25 pages of 'Nothing Sacred' and did much the same thing with the original 'A Star Is Born.' Ring Lardner Jr. was working with me. I became a specialist at endings."

Selznick planned to make him his assistant, but Schulberg begged off, saying he wanted to be a writer. He was working for Sam Goldwyn when "What Makes Sammy Run?" was published. Goldwyn promptly fired him.

It was one book the studios never made into a film. There was a television version, starring Larry Blyden and John Forsythe, and a musical version ran on Broadway for two years. Schulberg said he is close to making a film deal.

In all, Schulberg has written seven books and has published some of his screenplays. He still writes for television in collaboration with Stan Silverman. They wrote the CBS movie "A Question of Honor" and "Prisoner Without a Name."

Schulberg lives on Long Island, N.Y., but returns to Hollywood frequently. He came in April for a reunion of the Watts Writers Workshop, which he helped found. He also visited Paramount Studios, which named one of its buildings after his father.

B.P. Schulberg had joined Adolph Zukor at Famous Players in 1912 as a screenwriter. He was head of production at Paramount, which grew out of Famous Players, from 1924-35. After that he stayed with Paramount as an independent producer.

The two other short stories adapted for the "Great Performances" series are "Natica Jackson" by John O'Hara and "Pat Hobby Teamed with Greatness," an adaptation of F. Scott Fitzgerald's magazine stories about a screenwriter. "Natica Jackson" was broadcast last Friday. "Pat Hobby" will be shown Nov. 20.

Soviet Pianist Will Launch U.S. Career In New York

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — On June 14, 1982, Avery Fisher Hall was booked for the American debut of concert pianist Vladimir Feltsman. However, he wasn't expected to be there.

That's because Feltsman, one of the Soviet Union's most promising young performers, had applied for an emigration visa which had been repeatedly denied since 1978. The performance was set up by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry to publicize that fact.

His visa was granted in June, and the 35-year-old pianist will finally have his American debut on Nov. 11 at Carnegie Hall.

Feltsman, his wife, Anna, and 4-year-old son, Daniel, arrived in New York on Aug. 18. The next day he went to Steinway and chose two pianos, one for a Manhattan apartment and one for a rented house in New Paltz, N.Y., where he teaches the history of keyboard literature and gives master classes at the State University of New York.

"I must not hurry to play many concerts to make my living. It is a very flexible schedule and people understand that I have to play concerts. ... I feel they need me. Such places as Juilliard and Curtis already have a number of outstanding musicians," Feltsman said.

Since being in the United States, he has so far given one performance, at the White House on Sept. 27. He'll give 60 performances this season.

"I want to play really good concerts with major orchestras and major conductors and to play different programs. I don't want to grab all money in one year," he said. "A very important part of my artistic life I hope will be records. Concerts disappear. I want to leave something after me."

Feltsman has lived in virtual exile in the Soviet Union since first applying for a visa.

"It was the highest point of Jewish emigration; 52,000 Jews left in this year," he said. "I was naive enough and maybe ignorant and I didn't expect this eight-year story." Two hours after he applied, Moscow radio and TV stations were told to cease playing Feltsman's music and his concerts were canceled.

"In December 1979, the Afghanistan war started and the fairy tale was over," he said. "It was tough luck. We did it at the wrong time. I had had plenty of chances to defect. I never did it because I don't want such things for my country. I have no bad feelings against my country at all."

From 1973, when he was 21, to 1977 Feltsman wasn't allowed to tour outside the Soviet Union. After he married in 1977, he toured in Japan and the following year in France but his wife had to stay at home.

"In my case, the Soviets were creating an example for other musicians and people of creative art," he said. "They were saying, 'Look what is happening to him. He lost everything and he will never get out.'"

"But even in our worst years when it was really difficult and the sky was very dark, I never regret what I did. After the moment when I applied for an exit visa, I was free. They didn't let me play abroad; I can not make records or play in Moscow. But I was free inside.

"It is two different issues, the system and the country. I have deep roots. Russian culture is my culture. I love my country. I think the system, the ideology and how they treat people of creative art is completely sick, wrong and stupid."

He gave no concerts for two years after his visa application. He had savings from giving concerts and teaching at the Moscow Conservatory and some valuable books, which he sold. "It was enough to feed ourselves for two years. Then the Soviets let me play again a very limited number of concerts. It was enough just to eat. So we never were starving."

Anna Feltsman, a biologist, didn't work because she could only find low-paying jobs which wouldn't help much, Feltsman said.

Guild Elects Patty Duke

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — Actress Patty Duke has won a second two-year term as president of the 70,000-member Screen Actors Guild.

The Oscar- and Emmy-winning actress, who ran unopposed, began her term Monday by seating new officers at a Western Section meeting of the guild's Board of Directors.

Also re-elected were National Treasurer Yale Summers and Recording Secretary Sumi Haru.

Several actors were newly elected as vice presidents in contested races. In Hollywood, Barry Gordon defeated Paul Winfield to replace Christopher Mitchum as first vice president.

Also locally, Joe Ruskin won over Bryan Shane for the office of third vice president, while Daryl Anderson prevailed over Charles Siebert and Hugh Gillin for ninth vice president. Frank Aletter won in a field of five to become 11th vice president.

There are 12 national vice presidents in the guild, each elected regionally. Balloting was completed Nov. 6.

Ms. Duke is the second woman to head the influential union. The first was Kathleen Nolan, who served two terms from 1975 to 1979.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY Nov. 11
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Avoid an argument with your family or a close friend this morning, or you'll be in a lousy mood all day. Don't drive aggressively.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): When communicating with others, be sure you are understood correctly. Try to calm down an associate who is apt to be disturbed.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Look for errors in important reports and statements which could be disastrous. Be extremely cautious in motion of any kind tonight.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Get busy improving your income so you can stop moping about being a "have not." Control your temper at home this evening.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Be cautious about revealing confidential information, or you'll get yourself into some trouble which you can't get out of.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): A new associate may have you irked, but control your temper until you can get some further information on this person from your mate.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Try to become more independent. Your superiors will not be impressed if you're constantly asking favors of others in the workplace.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You'll hear some new ideas today which sound suspicious, but don't form an instant opinion. Wait until tonight to think them over.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be sure you handle any obligations before running off to some adventures. It may pay you to be suspicious of a newcomer.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Try to be more understanding of an associate instead of immediately opposing every idea. Don't sign any contracts at this time.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You'll be given a lot of work which has to be done yesterday, so get "in gear." Be particularly careful when dealing with people all day.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Even if schedule changes are necessary, get out to some relaxing amusement. Steer clear of an egotistical friend tonight.

 The choice of an unsupported ace as the opening lead is not to be recommended. Aces should be kept back to capture kings. In one instance, however, the lead of an unsupported ace is advisable. That is when there has been a preemptive bid, and there is the risk that declarer will be able to discard his losers. Watch what happened on this hand from a team event.

We don't endorse South's choice of four hearts as his opening bid. He has a normal one heart opening, since he has defensive values outside his long suit. That would have made no difference to the final contract, as for the result ...

so West read the jack as a suit preference signal. Accordingly, he shifted to a spade. East took the ace-king and persevered with a third spade. No matter whether declarer elected to ruff with the king or the jack, West's queen of trumps was promoted to the setting trick.

At the other table the contract was also four hearts. However, there South chose to open one heart and eventually reached game after North had shown both black suits. When West led his singleton spade, the contract could no longer be defeated. The defenders started with three rounds of spades, but declarer did not ruff. He simply discarded his diamond loser, and all the defenders could get were two spade tricks and a ruff. Note that, if East shifts to a diamond after cashing two spade tricks, the defenders will not score a trump trick.

Syria Blocks Egypt's Attempt To Regain Seat In Arab League

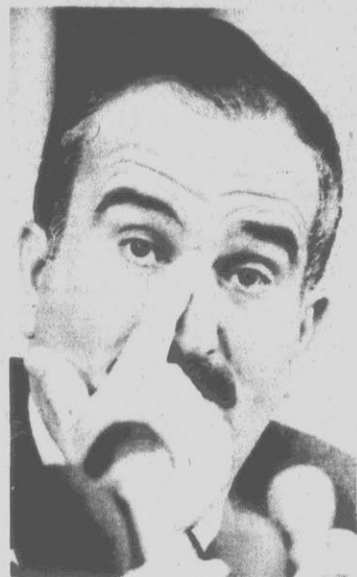

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer
AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Syria sought to block its old rival Egypt from returning to the Arab League, but progress toward a united stand on the Iran-Iraq war was reported as the Arab summit entered a third day today.

The 21 Arab delegations went into closed session, and a conference source said they will continue efforts concerning the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

The session followed a morning meeting between King Hussein of Jordan and Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization. It was their first encounter in Amman since a joint effort for peace with Israel collapsed in February last year.

The conference source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Syria's President Hafez Assad spent much of a two-hour speech Monday arguing against a proposal to reinstate Egypt, which was suspended from the Arab League after Egypt signed a peace treaty with Israel in 1979.

"Any attempt at the summit conference to end the suspension of Egypt's membership in the Arab League will only result in undermining all the positive conclusions which have been reached and might be reached," Jibrane Kourieh, an Assad spokesman, said today.

However, the conference source said Iraq and other countries made progress toward readmitting Egypt during a closed five-hour meeting of the delegation leaders. He did not elaborate.

Jordan's Crown Prince Hassan told a news conference Monday there was a "growing possibility" that individual states would restore relations with Egypt in the absence of any formal decision by the Arab League.

Virtually all Arab nations severed relations with Egypt after it signed the U.S.-sponsored peace pact with Israel.

Taher Masri, Jordan's foreign minister, told a news conference the leaders also discussed Lebanon's economic crisis and calls for an international peace conference on the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Delegates at the summit, which began Sunday, have expressed doubt a unified position could be reached on the Iran-Iraq war, but Masri said the leaders would continue talks "until they reach decisions. There's no deadline for the summit."

The conference source said there was some movement toward resolving the differences between Iraq and Syria, an ally of Iran. The source would not specify what progress was made but said it came during a four-hour meeting Monday night that included President Saddam Hussein of Iraq and President Assad of Syria.

Syria is Iran's main Arab ally and has been feuding with Iraq for the last eight years. The two countries are ruled by rival wings of the Baath Socialist Party. Both Iraq and Iran are Moslem nations, but Iran is Persian and most Arab countries directly or indirectly support Arab Iraq in the Gulf war.

Among others attending the Monday night talks were King Hussein, President Ali Abdullah Saleh of North Yemen, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah of Kuwait and Saudi Crown Prince Abdulla Bin Abdul-Aziz. They have been pressing for possible sanctions against Iran for rejecting United Nations resolutions calling for a cease-fire and negotiations to end the war.

Also present were President Chedli Benjedid of Algeria and Sheikh Zayed Bin Sultan al-Nahayan of the United Arab Emirates. They joined Syria in opposing punitive actions against Iran.

Prince Hassan said the Arab world must reach a common stand on the Persian Gulf war and other conflicts or risk being carved into spheres of influence.

"I refer specifically to the naval presence in the Gulf waters, which of course bears very little relation to the justification for that presence," he said.

The United States and some of its Western allies have warships in the Gulf to protect international shipping from war-related attacks.

Hassan said the leaders discussed setting up a joint fund to support the plunging Lebanese currency and help Lebanon out of its worst economic crisis since independence from France in 1943.

Gaza Strip Shot Kills School Girl

JERUSALEM (AP) — A 17-year-old Palestinian girl was shot and killed today during a demonstration at a high school in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip, Israeli military and Arab sources said.

It was not immediately clear whether Israeli soldiers or Jewish settlers in the Gaza Strip were responsible for the shooting death, according to the Arab-run Palestine Press Service.

The press service, which monitors events in the occupied territories, identified the victim as Intissar Al A'tar and said the girl had participated in a demonstration at her school in the village of Deir Al Balah, about 10 miles south of Gaza City.

The military source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed that the girl had been killed during what the source described as a major demonstration, but said she had no further details immediately.

The body was taken to Al Shifa Hospital in Gaza, said a Palestinian reporter who spoke on condition of anonymity. Telephone calls to the hospital went unanswered.

The demonstrators had protested what they perceived as the snubbing of Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat during the Arab League summit currently being held in Jordan.

Irish Bishops Condemn IRA For Latest Bombing Attack

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestant extremists apparently killed a Protestant by mistake after the Irish Republican Army said it accidentally killed 11 civilians in a bombing, police said today.

Funerals were set today for three of the 11 people killed in Sunday's bombing in the small western town of Enniskillen.

The Roman Catholic bishops of Ireland on Monday issued their strongest denunciation yet of the predominantly Catholic IRA. The British government appealed for calm, but there were growing fears of a Protestant backlash.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, fiery leader of Northern Ireland's Protestant Democratic Unionist Party, ridiculed British promises to tackle terrorism and repeated his call on Protestants "to defend themselves."

A worker was shot dead Monday on a construction site in Belfast. It was first reported that the dead man, Brian Adam Lambert, 19, was a Catholic.

But Sgt. Harry Hussey, a police spokesman, said today the killing apparently was a case of mistaken identity by a Protestant paramilitary group. No group claimed responsibility.

Enniskillen was at a virtual standstill today for the funerals of nurse Marie Wilson, 20, retired policeman Samuel Gault, 49, and police reservist Edward Armstrong, 52.

Stores, offices and schools were closed, and work crews labored to clear the main street of the last debris from the explosion so the funeral processions could pass.

The bishops asked priests to read their denunciation of the IRA at Mass next Sunday.

"There is no room for ambivalence. In face of the present campaigns of Republican violence the choice of all Catholics is clear: It is a choice between good and evil," the bishops said.

The mainly Catholic IRA wants to drive the British from Northern Ireland and unite the predominantly Protestant province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic under socialist rule.

The explosion Sunday ripped through a war memorial service honoring Catholics and Protestants who died in both world wars.

After 24 hours of silence, the IRA circulated a statement to Irish news media on Monday saying the radio-controlled bomb was meant to cut down security forces at the service but was triggered prematurely during the British army's electronic sweep for explosives.

It referred to the 11 dead and 63 injured when the bomb blew out a wall as "catastrophic consequences" which "we deeply regret."

Gerry Adams, president of Sinn Fein, the legal political wing of the outlawed IRA, also issued a statement of regret. "I do not try to justify yesterday's bombing," he said Monday.

At Sinn Fein's dilapidated headquarters in West Belfast's Falls Road Catholic heartland, officials did not conceal their dismay at what one called "a colossal mistake."

In the past, the IRA and Sinn Fein have tried to justify attacks that have killed civilians by saying the root cause was Britain's presence in Northern Ireland. This time their statements contained no such qualifiers.

The bishops, who have in the past been accused of equivocating over the morality of IRA violence, declared that those who support the guerrillas "share in the awful crime of murder."

"Dotted across this country there are safe houses provided for members of these organizations. There are people who store weapons, or who willingly help fugitives to escape.

"People must choose. There is no longer any room for romantic illusion. There is no excuse for thinking that the present violence in Ireland can be morally justified," the bishops said.

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Police fired rifles and tear gas today at protesters demanding the resignation of President Hussain Muhammad Ershad. Opposition politicians said six were killed and 50 were injured.

Police officials refused to talk about casualties. A sergeant standing about 30 feet from a pool of blood on the pavement said he did not know if anyone was hurt.

Workers in second-floor offices of the Janata Bank, directly over the spot where police opened fire, said they saw two people fall to the ground. None of the witnesses would give his name.

The violence came during the "Dhaka Siege," a day of general strikes and mass protests called by opposition leaders who want Ershad to resign.

Former Foreign Minister Abdus Samad Azad, a senior member of the opposition Awami League, said he knew of six people who were killed by police fire. He said 50 people had been injured in the first four hours of the protests. Other Awami officials gave the same figures.

The biggest confrontation was at an intersection midway between the Baitul Makaram, Dhaka's biggest mosque, and the government Secretariat, where Ershad's Cabinet ministers have offices.

About 4,000 marchers converged on the square and staged a sit-in directly in front of about 100 helmeted policemen armed with rifles, tear gas and batons made of cane. At least 400 other policemen waited on foot and in trucks within a one-block radius.

Holding banners of the Awami League and of the Moscow-oriented Communist Party, the protesters chanted: "We have one point, one demand — Ershad must go."

At first, police did not intervene. Then they asked the demonstrators to leave.

Rocks were thrown from the crowd, and police fired canisters of tear gas. During the next hour, rifle shots were heard — sometimes singly, sometimes in bursts of five or six. Demonstrators retreated down two streets leading into the intersection but did not disperse.

Many of the stone-throwers in the front ranks were boys in their early teens, dressed in ragged sarongs. Behind them, young men in trousers waved banners.

Sheik Hasina, the Awami League's leader, told reporters the protests would continue Wednesday in the capital and across the country on Thursday.

Most streets in Dhaka, normally jammed with bicycle-drawn rickshaws and three-wheel motorscooters taxis, were deserted today. Almost all shops were closed, but food-serving stalls and pharmacies were open.

During the morning, bands of 50 to 100 young men taunted helmeted police and threw rocks at a half-dozen sites around the city. At one confrontation in the financial district, about 50 protesters were arrested, according to a police official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

By afternoon, most protesters had converged in the city center near the Baitul Makaram mosque.

Other protesters twirling 5-foot-long poles marched toward the Secretariat and chanted "set fire, set fire," in Bengali. Police watched but made no move to intervene. The marchers did an about-face and left.

The "Dhaka Siege" was timed to coincide with today's first anniversary of Ershad's rule as an elected civilian president. The 57-year-old president came to power in a bloodless coup in 1982 but later retired from the army and won election on Nov. 10, 1986.

On Monday night Ershad told foreign reporters he will not resign and called the "Dhaka Siege" a failure before it started.

The government moved to thwart today's demonstrations by invoking a law that bans assembly by more than five people. So far, the law has not been enforced.

Hasina, head of the opposition Awami League, which joined forces with Khaleda Zia's Bangladesh Nationalist Party to call for the demonstrations, said the protest will eventually succeed in ousting Ershad.

"I will not let him stay in place. We will continue. Today or tomorrow, he will step down. That day is not very far," the 40-year-old Hasina told reporters.

Hasina is the daughter of Bangladesh's first president, Mujibur Rahman, who was assassinated by army officers in 1975. Mrs. Zia is the widow of President Ziaur Rahman, who was assassinated by army officers in 1981.

Both women say they want to end the rule of generals in their country, which in its 16 years of existence has never changed leaders through the ballot box.

The protest comes at a time when Dhaka's normal population of 4 million has shrunk by an estimated one-third to one-half, according to local reporters. Many people left the city to spend a Moslem holiday, the birthday of Islam's prophet Mohammed, in the countryside, and have not returned.

Bus, train and ferry boat service to the capital has been curtailed. The government says cutbacks in passenger service were required to transport food and relief materials to areas ravaged by last summer's floods. The opposition says it was done to keep their followers from converging on Dhaka.

Martin Trip

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin will lead a delegation of North Carolina businessmen and government officials on a seven-day economic development mission to Europe Nov. 14-21.

The mission, which will cover cities in France, England, The Netherlands and Germany, is designed to attract European foreign investment to North Carolina and build on the state's business reputation in the region.

Martin will be accompanied by state Commerce Secretary Claude Pope and former Sen. Jim Broyhill, who now serves as chairman of the state Board of Economic Development. The commerce department's director of International Development, Steve Stevenson, will also make the trip.

University College

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

A PART OF YOUR LIFE . . .

We are here to serve you. In this publication, you will find a listing of credit courses representing a cross section of East Carolina University.

Through the University College, degree programs are available for part-time day or evening students. Class schedules can be arranged to accommodate work schedules, family obligations and commuting distances. This program provides an excellent opportunity for individuals to pursue a degree while employed full or part-time. Individuals can also enroll for self-improvement, certification or for personal interest.

As you leaf through this publication, please feel free to call us if you have any questions or desire further information. We are here to serve you.

How To Get Started With The University College

The University College serves primarily the needs of adult students. Recognizing that adults have jobs, family responsibilities or may live some distance from campus, the University College attempts to assist them in overcoming these "barriers" in furthering or completing their education. Counseling, assistance with the admission and registration process, as well as taking a "personal interest" in the student are characteristics of the University College. After reviewing this information, feel free to call (757-6488) or write the University College for further information.

Evening Programs Available

Several Departments within the College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Technology schedule sufficient classes for a person to complete a degree while attending classes in the evenings. Currently, eleven degree programs are available in the evenings.

Evening Degree Programs

- Anthropology
- Business Education or Administrative Services
- Computer Science
- Driver and Traffic Safety
- Economics
- English (Concentration in Writing)
- Geography
- History
- Industrial Technology
- Psychology
- Sociology

Minors in several areas, including Business Administration, are available in the evenings. Certification programs in Business and Technical Communication and Alcoholism Counseling are also available. In addition, the General Education requirements for other baccalaureate degree programs can usually be completed through the University College.

Individuals desiring to enroll in courses for self-improvement, certification or personal interest, and yet gain college credit, may enroll in the University College.

The University College can also assist adults who desire day classes due to their work schedules, family obligations or commuting distances.

Counseling

Counseling is an important aspect of successful entry or reentry into the University. Students are encouraged to take advantage of the counseling services available through the University College. Counseling is available during normal working hours, 8:00 AM to 5:00 PM, Monday through Friday. As a convenience to University College students, evening counseling sessions will be available on November 30, December 7 and December 9 from 6:00 PM to 9:00 PM. Appointments are necessary for these sessions and may be scheduled by calling 757-6488. Counseling at times other than those listed above is also available by contacting the University College office.

Admission and Registration Procedures

To be eligible to register as a University College student, a person should

- (1) have acquired a high school diploma or GED
- (2) have a "C" average and be eligible to return to the last college or university where they were enrolled (if applicable)

(3) complete an application, statement of residence, pay a $15.00 application fee, and submit official copies of high school and college transcripts.

(4) former East Carolina University students who desire to re-enter the University as a part-time, or evening student may apply for readmission through the University College. Applications should be submitted as soon as possible, but at least three weeks prior to the beginning of the semester in which the applicant desires to enroll.

Registration for the Spring Semester will be conducted on January 7 from 7:00 AM to 7:00 PM on the second floor of Erwin Hall. Late registration will be conducted on January 8, 11 and 12 from 8:00 AM to 4:00 PM. Counselors will be available to assist students with course selections and the on-line registration process.

University College students may enroll in any course listed in this schedule provided they have satisfied the required prerequisites as stated in the 1986/88 East Carolina University Undergraduate Catalogue. The University College can assist students with questions concerning course selections, degree requirements, and University requirements and regulations. With this opportunity comes a responsibility: University College students are required to adhere to academic standards, policies, procedures, details and regulations which apply to all students of the University.

Math 0045-General College Mathematics is designed to prepare the student for the traditional course in college algebra. While this course cannot be applied toward a degree at East Carolina University, it will remove a high school mathematics deficiency and assist a student in meeting University admission requirements. It should also be beneficial as a review class for individuals who need to refresh their mathematical skills prior to enrolling for credit math.

The class will be conducted on Thursday evenings. The class will begin January 14 and end on April 24, 1988. Tuition and fees will be $75.00.
