SNOWY WAIT — Students at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill had a snowy wait Wednesday as they stood at a bus stop. Much of North Carolina was greeted by snow and sleet early Wednesday and, by late afternoon, the entire state was under attack by the elements. Accumulations, if any, were light across the state, with some of the mountain areas reporting up to three inches of snow. (AP Laserphoto)

Snow, Rain — N.C. Gets It All

Whatever came down Wednesday — rain, snow, sleet — it caused no major problems in Pitt County but may have inconvenienced some of its residents, according to local officials. But Wednesday's precipitation reduces the chance of local forest fires, at least for a few days, said Mark Webb, the Pitt County forest ranger.

"That's going to give us a break for a day or two. It's just a matter of when we get some more. If the wind gets up strong," there still is a chance for fire, he said. "Folks still need to be careful."

Precipitation was light in the Greenville area, with less than one fourth of an inch reported. Clearing skies covered the area this morning, with temperatures forecast to climb into the 50s. Another freezing night was expected.

"We have not had any problems related to the weather," said Roger Jones, director of GUC's electric systems. Usage was "mild compared to what we anticipate" for colder months such as January, he said.

The load management system was used a few times Wednesday and earlier today to reduce costs to consumers, he said.

Carolyn Strother of the Pitt County school system's transportation department said no problems were reported this morning due to the cold weather or any ice accumulation.

According to The Associated Press, Indian summer turned into a quick taste of winter as a freak storm dumped as much 3 inches of snow in the northern Piedmont, but forecasters expected warmer temperatures today to leave the snow as only a memory.

"It is basically somewhat of a surprise," said National Weather Service meteorologist Ben Woods as he watched snowflakes fall outside his office at the Raleigh-Durham Airport Wednesday. "We didn't expect it to intensify as much."

The wintry weather was the backlash from a strengthening coastal storm that moved north of the Outer Banks Wednesday, Woods said.

"It's pulling the cold air from the north down over us," Woods said.

Schools Conduct Parental Sessions

Despite rain, ice and snow flurries pushed by cold winds, Pitt County school officials report a successful parent-teacher conference day Wednesday as students received a day off from classes.

"Despite the weather, we had a good turnout," said Barbara Mallory, assistant principal of J.H. Rose High School. "We had a steady stream of parents all day long."

The conference was the first one at Rose this year, she said. "We did not have an open house this year," which usually is in September or October, Ms. Mallory said. "This year we just decided to have the parent-teacher conferences."

Parents were waiting at 1 p.m. at Ayden-Grifton High School when the conferences began, and "some were walking out the door with us at 7 (p.m.)," said Laura Sutorius.

"We really had a good turnout," she said. Future Business Leaders of America members acted as guides for the parents, who were presented their children's schedules as they arrived.

"Parents really appeared to enjoy it. The ones I talked to were very concerned about the kids," Ms. Sutorius said.

"We had a full day despite the weather," with parents coming in to about 7:15 p.m., said Rebecca Oats, principal of South Greenville School. "Teachers were busy every 15 minutes. I was real pleased. It's the first time I've ever had one (a conference). This is Ms. Oats' first year as principal at South Greenville."

"Some of our teachers made house calls" to those parents they thought could not attend, she said.

The majority of parents of Elmhurst Elementary School kept their appointments, said Principal Stella Chambliss. "We had a good turnout despite the weather. We were pleased about that."

From 15 to 20 parents visited each classroom at Wahl-Coates School, said Principal Judith Budacz. "We had an excellent turnout."

Pactolus Elementary School also reported a successful conference day. "We had a good turnout, especially considering the weather," said Principal Selma Cherry.

Trimmed Trading Deficit Sets Off Wall Street Rally

By MARCY GORDON
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks rose sharply today and the Dow Jones average leaped 56 points, helped by a higher dollar, the best U.S. trade figures since last spring and optimism that Washington was nearing a deficit-cutting plan.

The indicator of 30 blue-chip stocks, wobbly since the 508-point collapse Oct. 19, jumped from its 1,899.20-point close Wednesday to the 1,955 level in the first hour of trading on Wall Street.

Broader market indices also advanced sharply and gaining stocks outnumbered losers by 7-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

"We're happy for now, no doubt about that," said Ronald B. Doran, manager of institutional trading at the First Albany Corp. investment firm. "There's now some thinking that we've got a little bit of a break here."

Analysts attributed much of the rally to the Commerce Department's trade report, which showed that the United States narrowed its deficit to $14.1 billion in September from $15.7 billion in August.

It was the best result since a $14 billion shortfall reported in May and immediately buoyed the financial markets, where concern over U.S. budget and trade deficits was an important element in the world stock crash last month.

The dollar rallied strongly in New York, rising nearly 1 yen in value to 135.80 yen by late morning from its 135-yen close Wednesday. That is

Trains Collide

BOSTON (AP) — A commuter train rammed into the back of another train letting off passengers at the large Back Bay Station during the morning rush-hour, injuring dozens of riders, officials said.

About 50 people were injured, and "about seven were rather serious," said Leo Stapleton, the city's fire commissioner.

One train was discharging passengers at the platform when the other plowed into it at about 8:30 a.m., he said. Most of the injured passengers were aboard the first train, he added.

Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority officials said an estimated 1,500 people were on both trains.

Most Of Jobless Missing Benefits

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only about one-quarter of the nation's jobless received unemployment insurance benefits last month, leaving 5.1 million people without work or benefits, a private research group says.

"This is the lowest it's ever been since they started keeping statistics on the program" in 1955, Isaac Shapiro, senior research analyst for the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, said Wednesday.

The center is a politically moderate organization that studies the impact of state and federal policies on low- and moderate-income people.

Only 25.4 percent of the jobless received unemployment insurance benefits in October. The remaining 74.6 percent did not, the center found in its study, based on Labor Department statistics.

Passenger Activity Hits Record Level

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt-Greenville Airport set an all-time monthly record for commercial passenger activity during October, with a total of 4,206 passengers departing the airport and 4,065 arrivals.

Airport Manager James Turcotte said Piedmont Commuter accounted for a record 3,443 boardings during October, while another 763 passengers departed the airport on American Eagle flights. Arrivals included 3,237 passengers using Piedmont Commuter flights and 828 arriving on American Eagle.

The previous airport record for passenger activity was set in August, Turcotte said, when 3,583 passengers flew out of Pitt-Greenville (Piedmont Commuter boarded 2,806 and American Eagle boarded 777) and a total of 3,524 passengers flew into Greenville on the two commuter airlines.

Piedmont Commuter's previous boarding record was set in May of this year when 3,406 passengers were flown out of Pitt-Greenville. But boardings on the airline dropped to 2,909 in June, after American Eagle began serving the airport on June 15 and boarded 350 passengers in the final two weeks.

In July, Piedmont Commuter boarded 2,794 passengers while American Eagle boarded 718, while in September, Piedmont Commuter boarded 2,880 passengers and American Eagle boarded 753.

CCAIR of Charlotte began commuter airline service to Pitt-Greenville Airport in August of 1980 as Sunbird Airlines but became a Piedmont Commuter in May of 1985.

ECU Designates 'Natural Area'

A wooded area along Otter Creek in northwest Pitt County, used as a "living outdoor laboratory" by East Carolina University for 20 years, has been designated a "natural area" under the state's protective Natural Heritage program.

Official of the university and the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development participated Wednesday in the formal dedication of the area of wooded slopes and ravines near the Tar River.

"The reserve will provide excellent opportunities for research and education in forest succession and other ecological processes," said Charles Roe, manager of the Natural Heritage program for NRC.

The land has been used for environmental education and biological research by ECU scientists and students since the early 1960s and was given to ECU last year by its owners, Reid Parker Ellis of Winterville and her son, Howard Ellis.

Prior to the Ellis' gift, the area was used by ECU under a token lease agreement.

A team of ECU scientists and administrators made up an ad hoc committee which proposed the natural heritage area designation and submitted an application and inventory of the area's natural resources.

Dr. Vince Bellis, professor of biology at ECU and a member of the committee, said the area has been designated to the state's Registry of Natural Heritage Areas because of its unusual varied topography, geomorphic features and diversity of vegetation.

Roe said the property has not been timbered in this century and contains good examples of natural (forest) communities seldom found in the Coastal Plain.

Some of the plant species not typically found this far east, Roe said, include galax and mountain laurel growing in a cool, moist environment on the steep north-facing ravines.

Eakin Proposes Expansion Of ECU Parking Facilities

Chancellor Richard R. Eakin has proposed a plan to add 1,269 parking spaces on the campus of East Carolina University as a major step toward relieving a severe shortage of spaces.

Eakin's plan, announced this week to the Faculty Senate, envisions six new surface parking lots which would cost $936,000 and require a $25 a year increase in campus parking fees. The increase would double the present $25 a year fee for students, faculty and staff.

ECU traffic and security officials said the university issues approximately 10,000 parking permits a year and maintains about 6,000 parking spaces. Eakin said part of the problem has been "maldistribution" of available parking space, plus the fact that "we've never had the resources" from parking fees and fines to do more than maintenance and make piecemeal additions.

Eakin said the university is continuing to acquire property on the edge of the main campus, between Ninth and 10th Streets, for additional parking areas and that a small, landscaped parking lot will be opened shortly on Fifth Street near the entrance to main campus.

These steps will afford only limited relief and a broader plan is needed, he said. "This is helpful but doesn't solve the problem," he said.

The plan to build additional parking lots and expand another has been discussed by the Finance and Facilities Committee of the board of trustees. Eakin said "the trustees are sympathetic."

He plans to present the new plan — which he called "a solution to the parking problem" for the immediate future — to the board of trustees Dec. 4 for approval.

At a 7 percent interest rate, the cost of the plan would be paid for at $228,000 a year for five years, Eakin said.

"This solution is going to cost all of us," he said. Parking fees would be increased to $50 a year.

Eakin's plan would add two surface parking lots for freshman vehicles in the Minges Coliseum area. One would provide 245 spaces at a cost of $170,000 and a second, north of the coliseum on Charles Street, would provide 606 spaces at a cost of $473,000.

The university will lose a freshman parking lot containing 150 spaces located on 14th Street south of Rose High School. This lot is on property owned by the high school which needs it for its own student parking, Eakin said.

A lot east of College Hill Drive near its intersection with 10th Street would be expanded from 288 to 388 spaces at a cost of $98,000. A 'controversial' part of the plan, he said, involves use of green space and a band practice area west of College Hill Drive for a $195,000 parking lot for 318 spaces.

Eakin said aesthetics would be considered and the areas landscaped. "The beauty would be preserved as much as possible," he said.

The lot east of College Hill Drive has been proposed for a university parking deck. Such a deck "would be very expensive," but remains a possibility for the future, the chancellor said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

In A Jam

By mid-November U.S. 264 in Pitt County will follow its new route along the highway under construction paralleling the Stantonsburg Road — a change which will have large implications on Greenville's traffic flow.

State road officials need to look at the effects of increased traffic in the hospital area and make some contingency plans to relieve it. Expediting the northwest bypass route from the new U.S. 264 to N.C. 43 would be one alternative. Simply speeding up the entire northwest bypass project would be another.

The new U.S. 264 routing will follow the eastern bypass of Farmville to its intersection with the new throughway. Traffic will then follow the four-laned section of Stantonsburg Road past the hospital to Memorial Drive (U.S. 13). It will then follow Memorial Drive to Burroughs-Wellcome and then the Eastern bypass to U.S. 264 east.

The old route through Ballards Crossroad and along Greenville Boulevard to the Eastern bypass will be designated U.S. 264-A.

The switch will radically alter Greenville's traffic pattern and likely literally put the city in a jam. No doubt some through traffic will continue to use U.S. 264-A. Certainly much of the traffic, including trucks, will follow the new route. This will mean some headache-size traffic problems in the hospital area and at the intersection of Stantonsburg Road and Memorial Drive. It will also mean more traffic on Memorial Drive north, a section that is already clogged with trucks and other vehicles.

In the future, of course, plans call for alleviating this congestion with the construction of the northwest bypass which will leave the Farmville-Greenville throughway, cross the Tar River, pass west of the airport and join the Eastern bypass at Burroughs-Wellcome.

Completion of that project is several years away. In the meantime traffic can only get worse on the Stantonsburg Road and Memorial Drive. It is a situation that should be monitored closely with short term solutions sought.

It is feasible to suggest the construction of the segment from the Farmville-Greenville throughway to N.C. 43 could be speeded up. Then U.S. 264 traffic could be routed to Fifth Street and then north along Memorial Drive.

There may be other ways to alleviate traffic problems in the area pending construction of the northwest bypass. Certainly it is a matter that needs study.

Health Issue

An early look of yet another study involving youngsters in the 6-to-9 age group has been published confirming findings at the University of Michigan concluding most children in that bracket do not get enough physical exercise.

Its results — which point a finger at non-exercising parents — are just as disturbing as previous studies on the issue.

The study comes from the director of school health of Macro Systems, Inc. of Silver Springs, Md., which studies health and education issues. The researchers broadened scope of the study beyond in-school programs of exercise and games, moving on into the parental role.

A professor of physical education at the University of Michigan whose earlier study took a generally dim view of school exercise programs among the youngsters reminds one of the most important things in changing behavior among the children is a role model. To that end, attention was given in a sampling of 4,678 children and 4,435 of their parents.

To the surprise of few people, 71 percent of the mothers and 70 percent of the fathers said they got in less than three or more days a week of exercise that resulted in rapid breathing and fast heartbeat which is said appropriate for good health.

Housework and strenuous on-the-job exertion do not count.

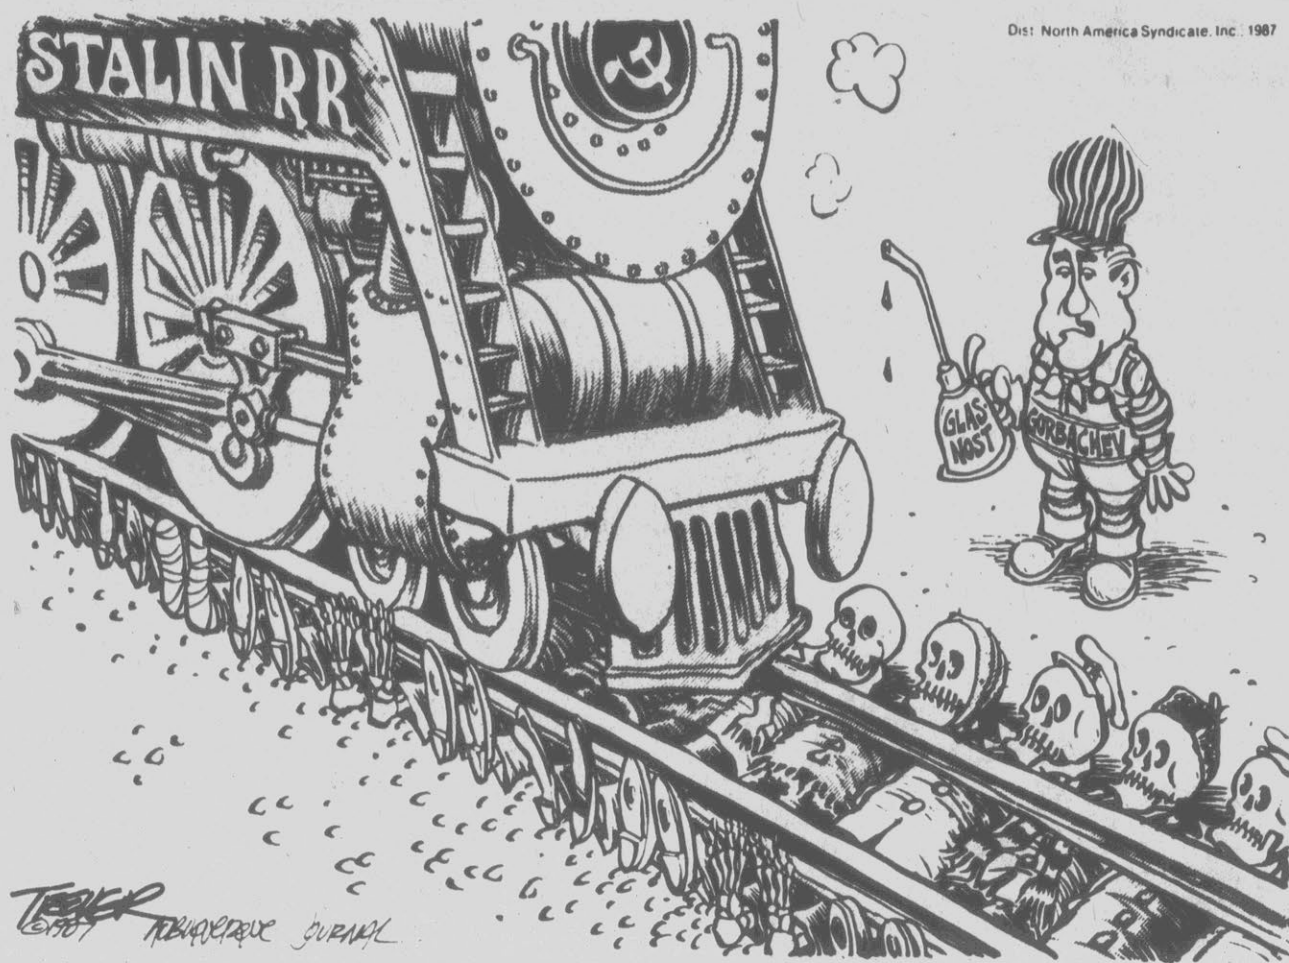

Importance of the parental role model was underlined with the point that if a child sees his parents apparently think exercise is not important, he's not going to do it either.

The research showed parents of leaner third and fourth graders tended to exercise more frequently than others.

As in previous studies we are reminded today's children carry more body fat than their counterparts did in the past. Professor Glen Gilbert, head of the University of Maryland Department of Health Education, warns the picture is complicated by genetically inherited influences on fatness.

The Maryland authority says precise consequences for children's health cannot be determined, but the increases are "significant" and cause for concern.

That prediction does not provoke comfortable feelings of security about the health of the next generation.

"OK, IT'S TIME TO ACKNOWLEDGE THE GUY'S METHODS WERE A LITTLE EXTREME, BUT LET'S NOT FORGET HE GOT INDUSTRY MOVING...."

Public Forum

To the editor:

The so-called "Public" "broadcasting system" is paid for by your tax dollars, but is not as public as the privately-owned Daily Reflector as it only presents the propaganda of its tax-fed functionaries, "All Things Considered" and "National Public Radio," as well as the television news are no more than editorials. The bank NCNB subsidizes them at the unwilling tribute of its stockholders.

Last night they spent two hours (tv and radio combined) — two hours on the release of a prisoner in South Africa. They called him a political prisoner in anticipation of the expected release of his fellow, Nelson Mandela. Neither is political. They both were caught red-handed in a mansion on a farm near Pretoria with the tools of their trade — guns, weapons, ammunition, explosives — involved in bank robberies, burglaries and murders. Both admitted to being members of the Communist Party.

They would be in jail for their crimes in the United States, too. Could you rob a bank and expect to stay out of jail?

To the editor:

After reading your November 8, 1987 editorial concerning the newly elected Pitt County Board of Education, I feel compelled to respond to what I believe is a glaring misunderstanding of the results of this election. While it is true that the new Board must work together to develop a cohesive, unified approach to problem solving that was missing from the previous Board, your call for them to accept the plans for capital outlay and redistricting ignores the most important statement made by the voters during this election. We have a new Board because the majority of voters were unhappy with the plans developed by the old Board and the total lack of responsiveness shown by the Board majority. Parents and other interested parties who tried to address these issues were constantly ignored during the developmental phase of these plans and the regular 8-7 votes demonstrated which members constituted the problem. This arrogant and aloof attitude continued throughout the campaign for re-election as certain incumbents refused to attend public forums to respond to questions from their constituents.

I believe that you are correct in suggesting that "The new Board can also learn from the mistakes of the past," but the lesson to be learned is one of responsiveness to a community that is not willing to be left out of the process of building the best school system for all of the children. An effort should now be made to solicit input from organized groups such as PTA's, PTO's, and local advisory councils as well as individuals in the community who are concerned and interested, in order to develop the best school system for our county.

To the editor:

Under normal procedures the administration of Pres. Reagan and its unparalleled policies favoring the affluent contrasted with the decline in the lifestyle, rights and privileges of the elderly citizens, minorities, the poor and disadvantaged would come to a halt within the next 15 months. But Reagan has in mind a move which may extend the the impact of his administration for two decades, surpassing what he has accomplished during two terms.

He stated that the confirmation of Judge Bork was his No. 1 domestic objective, notwithstanding the urgency of the federal deficit and the foreign trade imbalance. He said Bork's confirmation would be defeated only over his dead body.

Why all the emphasis on the confirmation of one Supreme Court Justice? Take a look at the makeup of the court. Reagan elevated Chief Justice Rehnquist to that position. He appointed Justices O'Connor and Scalia to the court. All three are considered ultra-conservative. Justice White usually votes with them. Justices Marshall, Brennan, Blackmun and Stewart are considered liberal. The present vacancy was created by the retirement of Justice Powell, a moderate who during his past three years on the court broke a four-to-four deadlock between liberals and conservatives 75 times with swing votes balanced between the two groups.

With an ultra-conservative as a replacement voting solidly with that group, it is obvious why the potential power of that one Justice could be so enormous.

The nomination of Judge Ginsburg was a disaster. No one expects Reagan to nominate a Marshall or a Brennan but Justices O'Connor and Scalia were both unanimously confirmed. He must discard his confrontation tactics and adhere to the requirements of the Constitution, "to nominate with the advice and consent of the Senate," or facing another confirmation defeat, he very likely will never have the opportunity to place another nominee on the court.

To the editor:

Mayor Ed Carter, congratulations! You have made history in Greenville. We respect your honesty, your integrity, your leadership, your morals and character. You seek happiness in giving, caring and sharing, for your example should prompt in others the qualities of dedication to service, and your interest in our city, totally.

We challenge all to forget any "hang-ups" and give our new mayor our full support and encouragement. Let's continue to make our city exemplify our slogan, "Greenville Has It All."

Dole Defying Both Parties' Assumptions

ATLANTA — By defining the federal deficit as "the single greatest threat to a prosperous and dynamic America" and by committing himself to an austerity program of spending cuts and possible tax hikes if elected, Senate Minority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., has set his presidential campaign on a course challenging widely accepted strategic assumptions in both political parties.

"The American people are ready for bitter medicine," Dole declared as he campaigned through Iowa last week. "The credit card is due." In taking this course, Dole is defying both the collective wisdom drawn from Walter F. Mondale's failed bid for the presidency in 1984 and the strategy adopted by the New Right wing of the Republican Party: that calling for sacrifice does not win elections.

"Americans are fair-minded people. They are willing to endure some changes in federal programs — if they know everyone is sharing equally," Dole argues, developing a theme that his adversaries in the Republican Party, including Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and members of the Conservative Opportunity Society, denounce as "root-canal economics" and "the politics of pain."

As Dole has moved during this two-day announcement swing from Kansas through Iowa, New Hampshire, Georgia and North Carolina, he has made clear that he does not accept the thinking of the supply-side theorists and politicians who dominated the early years of the Reagan administration. He is arguing instead that voters are willing to play by the same rules that govern the personal budgeting of the cautious farmers and small-business people in his home town of Russell, Kan.:

"We do not expand opportunity when we burden our children with debt from our own self-indulgence. We will either sacrifice for our children, or we will continue to make our children sacrifice for us. We have the privilege of choosing. Our children do not."

The stock market crisis — "a warning shot across our bow" — is providing impetus for a policy of austerity, according to Dole.

However, in addition to challenging those who argue that voters are not prepared to back a candidate whose campaign centerpiece is a call for national denial, Dole's decision to focus with such sharp intensity on the deficit has already begun to constrict another core element of his political strategy: his commitment to presenting himself as a Republican who will care for the elderly, the sick and the needy.

On the campaign trail, Dole declares: "If you want someone from real America, someone who is going to worry about the hungry and the unborn and the homeless and the abused children and the neglected children and the senior citizens who have no money and they need long-term health care, then I think you ought to take a hard look at me. ... I will be sensitive to the needs of the left-out and the down-and-out."

In more specific form, Dole said that as president, he would make "certain we provide adequate health care" to children and the elderly, including filling the "serious gaps (that strike) terror in the hearts of those who need long-term health care"; he would cut the "drop-out rate (from schools) by at least 10 percent a year," and he would "reduce by 2 million a year the 23 million" illiterate adults.

All this, in theory, would be achieved while eliminating a budget deficit in the $150 billion range and while ensuring that there is no attempt "to shortchange the defense modernization programs that keep us strong," including Dole's commitment to a phased deployment of the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars."

Asked how he could resolve the apparent fiscal conflict between his varying goals, Dole said that in the case of health care, for example, cuts could be made in a number of areas to find the cash to finance improvements for the elderly and children.

More broadly, he contends that "when it's all said and done, you have to make the hard choices, you have to cut spending. There is not a program I know of, with one or two exceptions, that couldn't take a tuck."

If Dole can persuade the voting public of the legitimacy of his austerity themes, he then believes he is in the best position to win the trust of the voters to perform surgery.

Strength For Today

Success is usually conceived in terms of wealth, power and recognition. But to a small minority of people it means service.

This is the highest form of success, and often it can be attained only at the sacrifice of power and recognition. The missionary, the social worker, the unheralded, unobtrusive volunteer for community service — these are some, but certainly not all, of the people who devote their lives to others rather than to themselves and those nearest them.

And often these are the people who achieve the one thing which so often eludes the seekers after personal success — real happiness.

The successful man in the eyes of the world often dies a with a tragic sense of failure which the person who has devoted his life to service never feels.

Martin Suggests Legislative Session On Wastes

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says a state panel should postpone its search for a hazardous waste treatment site for several months while the state — possibly through a special session of the Legislature — addresses a federal threat to cut off its authority to regulate hazardous waste programs.

That suggestion brought an angry response from Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who said Martin should consult the state Attorney General's Office before talking about moratoriums or special sessions of the General Assembly.

"The legislature has spoken on this issue," Jordan said during the meeting. "Don't we need to get the attorney general's opinion to discuss the issue at this time?"

The EPA said Tuesday it was considering whether to revoke North Carolina's authority to regulate hazardous waste because of a law passed this year by the General Assembly. The law requires each gallon of discharge from a hazardous waste treatment plant be diluted by 1,000 gallons of water.

"I don't think you're going to get the legislature, which passed that bill, to go back and change it," Jordan said after the meeting.

House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey, D-Madison, also was cool to the idea of a special session.

"Before you start talking about calling a special session, you'd better see what EPA does," Ramsey, who was not at the meeting, told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "I haven't been involved in that and I'm not going to get involved in it. The speaker of the house was not elected to find sites for hazardous waste dumps."

The commission has narrowed its list of possible sites to one in Rowan County and one in Davidson County, but commission members said other sites are being considered. The new law, enacted from Senate Bill 114, limits the commission's search to areas around the Yadkin, Pee-Dee and Cape Fear rivers, Mrs. Parker said.

The commission will meet again Tuesday.

Under one provision of Senate Bill 114, the law would be automatically nullified by an EPA takeover. Martin said it is not clear whether the provision would be activated by the EPA's letter written Tuesday, by a proposal to withdraw authority or only by the actual withdrawal.

Martin said in any event there would be no guarantee the state's permitting authority would be restored if EPA intervenes and the law is voided.

A special session next year "... would put us in the position where North Carolina might be able to resolve this issue without going to the point where we would risk having" authorization revoked, Martin said.

Commission chairwoman Deborah Parker said she supports a special session, saying it would answer several questions from the commission. She said she also supports a moratorium but did not know if that could be done legally.

Earlier in the meeting, she outlined several problems the commission has encountered in its search for a site for a facility to treat hazardous waste:

— Citizens have said they want a site much larger than the 50 acres set by the commission and in a more remote area. The commission is now looking for sites of more than 1,000 acres, she said.

— Both citizens and legislators need more educating about hazardous waste, she said. Opposition from both Democratic and Republican legislators, some of whom voted for the law setting up the commission "has been a little upsetting to us."

— Counties want assurances that if they volunteer for the hazardous waste site they will not be selected for a low-level radioactive waste site for which another commission is searching, she said.

— Counties want to know if a landfill is connected with the facility, but the attorney general's office has ruled that the commission can't site a landfill until the treatment facility is in operation, she said.

— The commission needs more legal help to decide who can run the plant and to identify larger sites, Mrs. Parker said. The state Commerce Department helped with finding the original sites, but now "they say their contacts are drying up for industrial recruitment."

Commission members said an incentive package might help, although they said it did not necessarily have to include money. Members suggested an incentive package that would help a county that accepts the treatment plant deal with its solid waste.

Mrs. Parker said Senate Bill 114 did not affect the original search for sites, but she said it was affecting the commission's search for additional sites.

"The bottom line is that with Senate Bill 114, we are limited to certain areas of the state," she said. "Without Senate Bill 114, we are back to looking at the whole state."

Officers Wound Surry Gunman After 2 Killed

LOW GAP, N.C. (AP) — A Surry County man was critically injured in a shootout with law enforcement officers, who discovered the bodies of the man's estranged wife and another man at a burning house nearby.

The dead woman was identified as Janet Lynn Dowell Brendle, 41. The body of the other man was found in a bedroom of the house, but was burned beyond recognition in a fire that investigators say was apparently set during the incident.

Jonah E. Brendle, 39, of Low Gap was in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem with gunshot wounds in his shoulder, back and possibly his leg, a spokesman for the hospital said.

Surry County Sheriff W.R. Hall said he called in the State Bureau of Investigation to investigate the incident because one of his officers shot Brendle. But Hall said that he did not know which officer fired the shot or shots that hit Brendle.

Hall said the body of the woman was found in the basement of a utility building behind Ms. Brendle's one-story wood-frame house. He said the woman's body was found lying next to a door that had two shotgun holes in it.

No charges have been filed against Brendle, Hall said.

Hall said the shooting spree may have stemmed from a domestic dispute. Hall said that Brendle and his wife "had been separated about 30 days."

Baptist Convention Backs Stand By Seminary Faculty

GREENSBORO (AP) — One day after sweeping moderates into the top three offices, delegates to the North Carolina Baptist State Convention approved a resolution supporting the faculty at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary.

The resolution, passed by a wide margin on the convention's closing day Wednesday, asks the seminary's conservative board of trustees to "maintain the rich Baptist heritage and tradition that has been a part of Southeastern Seminary's own heritage and tradition."

That tradition includes "the idea of unity of purpose amidst diversity of belief," the resolution says.

Southeastern's fundamentalist trustees, who are in a majority for the first time, have said they will hire only professors who believe that the Bible is literally true, even in matters of history and science.

As a result, W. Randall Lolley, the seminary's president, announced last month that he will resign. Morris Ashcraft, the academic dean, also said he will step down.

J. Marse Grant, editor emeritus of the Biblical Recorder, the state Baptist newspaper, said the Southeastern resolution and the election of a moderate to the convention presidency should remove all doubt that North Carolina Baptists don't want their institutions to change.

PTL Faces More Layoffs

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL will probably have to lay off some employees to help bring operating costs in line with meager contributions to the financially strapped television ministry, PTL bankruptcy trustee David Clark says.

The ministry needs $3.9 million for November operating expenses and another $2.3 million to get current with past bills, but has raised less than $1 million this month, Clark said Tuesday. PTL is under the protection of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court while it seeks to repay about $70 million in debts.

The ministry has about 1,000 employees, 650 of them full-time, Clark said. More than 300 were laid off earlier this year.

"We don't anticipate any massive layoffs, but we are going to have to look very rigorously at our personnel budget ... we'll have to see if there are any people who are redundant," he said.

He said he doesn't know how many jobs might be eliminated.

"It won't work to just take an arbitrary number and tell every department to give me a 20 percent cut in their budget," Clark said. "The reason that won't work is because you've got to set some priorities."

Clark, a former executive with the Christian Broadcasting Network, has been meeting with PTL managers to discuss what jobs can be eliminated without damaging ministry operations, he said.

Clark said PTL needs about $700,000 a week in contributions "to just get healthy."

Athlete Kills Self

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro high school football player, apparently despondent over news that he would not qualify to join the Marines, committed suicide by shooting himself with a .303-caliber rifle, authorities say.

Amos "Duke" Griffin Jr., 18, a defensive back for Dudley High School, was told by doctors Monday that a pin would have to be inserted in a broken ankle the teen-ager suffered in a sandlot football game several weeks ago. Marine officials confirmed that would disqualify him from military service.

The news was devastating to him, his father, Amos D. Griffin Sr., said. "It was like he lived and breathed the Marines."

Guilford County Sheriff's Sgt. R.T. Forrest said Griffin died instantly after the incident Monday.

AIDS Patients Criticize State Program

DURHAM (AP) — Bureaucratic footdragging, unenforceable laws and an unrealistic approach to sex education in public schools is contributing to North Carolina's death toll from the AIDS virus, four AIDS patients have told state health officials.

ty, the Greensboro News & Record reported.

"We are not being included in this. That would be fine if we weren't also being killed or dying on a large scale from it. ... I would like to feel that I, as an AIDS patient, have access to a real ear. This is a wonderful start, but I wish more people in your position or higher can do the same thing."

"There are grassroots organizations that have been working with this problem in North Carolina since 1982 that are being completely ignored," Harry W. Pleasants, an AIDS patient from Jacksonville, told state health director Dr. Ron Levine in discussions Wednesday at Duke Medical Center. "Involving some of those organizations in the planning stages would be a good first step."

Pleasants criticized the lack of input from the homosexual communi-

"Would you recommend that the Task Force be expanded by including one or more people with AIDS?" Levine, the chairman of the state AIDS Task Force, asked.

"Amen," Pleasants said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is an often-fatal virus transmitted through blood or sexual secretions. The majority of those with AIDS or those who have tested positive for the AIDS virus are homosexuals, bisexuals, intravenous drug users or hemophiliacs.

Hearings

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The North Carolina Governor's Highway Safety Commission will hold eight public hearings across the state early next year to find out if people think the state's Safe Roads Act is working.

The commission wants to get ideas on how to strengthen the law and other ways to fight drunken driving, said Roger W. Wiggs, the deputy director of the Governor's Highway Safety Program.

"It's been four years since the Safe Roads Act passed, and we've had no public hearings and no public input since that time," Wiggs said.

Recent figures show 292 reported AIDS cases in North Carolina. State health officials estimate that 10,000 Tar Heels may actually be infected with the virus but now are showing no symptoms.

The AIDS patients said proposed education programs in public schools must go beyond calls for sexual abstinence and must be explicit about the use of condoms and their failure rate in protecting against the disease.

"When we talk about safe sex, we have to be careful. It's not safe sex. It's safer sex," said Michael C.

Miller of Oriental, who has tested positive for the AIDS virus. "You're going to lull a lot of people into a false sense of security. That's where you have to get to the kids."

"We've got to be realists. People are not abstaining. When you talk about condoms, you have to go one step further and say 'If you use condoms, this is how you use condoms.' That's what I'm wondering about these guidelines. Are they addressing the issue correctly or just giving condoms a window dressing?"

The patients also said state health proposals requiring that AIDS victims identify their sexual partners for tracking and notification purposes are meaningless.

"Having been pretty promiscuous myself, you don't know the last names anyway and a lot of times, you don't know the first name," said Gary R. Triplett of Durham. "Who's to say if it was the guy you met last week, last month or 10 years ago?"

"The absurdity of it is, this is so totally unenforceable," Pleasants said. "One of the major problems with this disease is that it is anonymous sex that has brought us to this point. I cannot tell you the names of my previous 200 partners."

Some sexually active AIDS patients aren't notifying sexual partners. And some sexually active homosexuals genuinely believe they are not at risk, Pleasants said.

"If you have educated people, and if one of us — if we go with someone who is educated — they know they have to practice safe sex," he said. "If there are two partners involved in a sexual act and one of them is irresponsible and the other is responsible, what's going to happen? The responsible one is going to win out. The responsibility does not just lie with the AIDS patient."

"I actually have people come up to me and say, 'I'm going to do exactly what I want, to whom I want because I'm not going to get it.' The denial level is incredibly high."

Kennedy Shores Support With Visits To Senators

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Anthony M. Kennedy is off to a far better start than his two predecessors as senators from both parties say they like what they know about him so far.

Taking nothing for granted, the federal appellate judge scheduled visits with senators today, less than 24 hours after President Reagan praised him as a "courageous, tough but fair jurist" in announcing Kennedy as his new choice for the court.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr. said he would meet with White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. and other White House representatives to work out a timetable for confirmation hearings. That session is likely today.

Favorable but cautious reaction from both liberal and conservative senators suggested the 51-year-old judge from Sacramento, Calif., will not embarrass Reagan, as the president tries for the third time to fill a court vacancy more than four months old.

The first nominee for the seat, Robert H. Bork, was defeated by the Senate, 58-42. Second choice Douglas H. Ginsburg withdrew from consideration when conservatives declined to back him after he admitted past marijuana use.

Bork's nomination generated negative comments right away.

Ginsburg's inexperience — one year as a federal appeals judge — made senators uneasy from day one.

Ginsburg's surprise admission of past drug use left senators wary of moving too quickly on Kennedy.

"I hope this nomination will provide no more surprises for the Congress or embarrassments for the White House," said Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., a member of the Judiciary Committee.

Biden, D-Del., said, "I suspect we'll have a new Supreme Court justice if it all goes well immediately upon the reconvening of the Senate after the first of the year."

Among the meetings Kennedy will have with senators, few will be more important than his session with conservative Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Two weeks ago, Helms said there was "no way Jose" that he could back Kennedy, and there were hints of a filibuster by conservatives if he received the nomination instead of Ginsburg.

But Helms said Wednesday that Kennedy telephoned him within minutes of Reagan's announcement, and he expressed satisfaction with the conversation.

Helms added, "I hope I will be able to support his nomination with enthusiasm following my meeting with him and after he has appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee."

Biden said Kennedy "seems on the surface like a mainstream conservative justice whom I can support." Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., a committee member, said, "The thing that struck me is that he at least has a lot of experience as a judge."

Conservative Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, called Kennedy "a capable, well-qualified jurist who would be a fine member of the Supreme Court."

But Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, a Judiciary Committee member who had criticized the administration's failure to muster early support for Bork, said Reagan apparently took the path of least resistance in naming Kennedy.

"I would rather have my president take the course of sticking to principle and maybe picking somebody who is a little more controversial and yet confirmable than the easy way out it appears to me he did in the case of Kennedy," Grassley said.

In his announcement, Reagan called Kennedy "popular with colleagues of all political persuasions. And I know that he seems to be popular with many senators of varying political persuasions as well."

Kennedy is considered to be a moderate conservative, less ideologically rigid than Reagan's two earlier nominees. He has a dozen years of experience on the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and has written more than 400 opinions — including some 335 in which he wrote for the majority.

Kennedy has written opinions upholding capital punishment, the legality of paying women less than men in comparable jobs and the Navy's policy of discharging sailors who engage in homosexual conduct.

In his most highly publicized decision, later upheld by the Supreme Court, he struck down the "legislative veto" by which Congress limited power in the executive branch.

Reagan spent 35 minutes with Kennedy on Monday and asked if there was anything in his background that would prove embarrassing. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. The nominee said there was nothing.

Kennedy told reporters he had been asked if he ever smoked marijuana. "The answer was — no, firmly, no," he said.

Kennedy underwent three hours of "no-holds-barred" questioning Sunday by Reagan's top lieutenants about his personal life and integrity, Fitzwater said. FBI agents grilled him for 10 hours Monday.

Among other things, FBI agents looked into Kennedy's onetime position as a lobbyist for a liquor distiller, a record company and opticians. Baker reported to Reagan on Wednesday that no problems were found.

While there were early reports that anti-abortion groups might have problems with Kennedy, a major organization quickly gave him cautious backing.

Douglas Johnson, legislative director of the National Right To Life Committee, said a search of Kennedy's record found he has not handled an abortion case on the bench. But he added, "We are pleased that Judge Kennedy has a general commitment to judicial restraint."

Kennedy Established Conservative Record

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Senate studies Anthony M. Kennedy's 12-year record as a federal appeals court judge, it will find the work of a conservative reluctant to expand legal protections for women, racial minorities and homosexuals.

But Kennedy, designated by President Reagan on Wednesday as his new choice to fill a Supreme Court vacancy, has not appeared to be a hostile ideologue when reviewing attempts to combat discrimination.

Reserving final judgment, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., said, "He seems on the surface like a mainstream conservative whom I can support."

In a 1985 decision, Kennedy threw out a lawsuit by Washington state employees in jobs predominantly held by women. The suit contended that state employees in comparable jobs predominantly held by men were paid more.

Kennedy said such a disparity, without proof of a discriminatory motive, does not violate a federal law banning on-the-job sex bias.

"It is evident ... that Congress, after explicit consideration, rejected proposals that would have prohibited lower wages for comparable work as contrasted with equal work," he said.

He said the state could not be held responsible for "an inequality which it did not create," adding, "Neither law nor logic deems the free market a suspect enterprise."

In a 1976 ruling, Kennedy said California civil rights testers who pretended to be biracial married couples looking for housing did not have the proper legal standing to sue real estate agents for allegedly steering them to minority neighborhoods only.

The Supreme Court in 1982 ruled in a Virginia case that federal law does allow such lawsuits.

In a 1980 decision involving homosexuality, Kennedy rejected a challenge by three sailors to the Navy's former policy of giving automatic discharges to anyone who engaged in such conduct. The Navy's policy now does not call for such discharges.

After discussing the need for military discipline and the special problems caused by long isolation on ships, Kennedy said: "Upholding the challenged regulations as constitutional is distinct from a statement that they are wise. The latter judgment is neither implicit in our decision nor within our province to make."

He added: "It should be plain from our decision that the constitutionality of the regulations stems from the needs of the military, the Navy in particular, and from the unique accommodation between military demands and what might be constitutionally protected activity in some other contexts."

The Supreme Court in 1986 ruled by a 5-4 vote that consenting adults have no constitutional right to private homosexual conduct. Justice Lewis F. Powell, whose retirement created the court's vacancy, voted with the majority.

Unlike Judge Robert H. Bork, Reagan's first choice to fill the vacancy, Kennedy did not question the existence of a constitutional right of privacy that protects homosexual conduct between consenting adults.

'Greenhouse' Changes Views On Nuclear Energy

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fear that a "greenhouse effect" accelerated by burning fossil fuels could disrupt the world's climate with disastrous results is leading some environmentalists to reconsider their stance against nuclear power.

A prominent Senate environmentalist, Democrat Tim Wirth of Colorado, broke ranks this week as he chaired two days of Energy Committee hearings at which scientists warned of the need to reduce the flow of carbon dioxide, methane and other gases into the atmosphere.

Two themes emerged from this latest round of congressional hearings into the greenhouse effect: The world must find alternatives to fossil-fuel energy sources such as coal and oil, and the United States must come up with an energy policy to lead the way.

Wirth talked of energy conservation and renewable resources such as solar power, but he also said the nation must look for ways to make nuclear generators safer. He acknowledged that such a view conflicted with the no-nukes philosophy within the environmental movement.

"This is counter-political (but) we ought to be a lot more aggressive pursuing nuclear power," he said.

The scientists reiterated testimony heard at hearings over the last 18 months: The Earth's atmosphere is being overloaded with gases that trap heat like a greenhouse, causing polar ice to melt and flood coastal areas, and bringing about shifts in weather patterns that can produce drought in breadbaskets such as the Midwest.

Over the past century, the global climate has warmed by about two degrees Fahrenheit. Sometime early in the next century, this heating could double, making the Earth warmer than it has been for 100 million or more years, the committee was told.

While no one is yet linking it to the greenhouse effect, scientists say that 1987 is the hottest year on record. Computer models predict that unless greenhouse gases are reduced, temperature averages could rise by eight degrees or more by the end of the next century.

The scientists say that the warming is occurring faster than previously believed, and that that even if greenhouse gases were controlled tomorrow, the levels already in the atmosphere may have committed the planet to a temperature rise of from two to six degrees.

"The greenhouse effect is real," James Hansen, an atmospheric scientist who has done work for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, told the Wirth hearings.

"The warming is not just a theory but a reality waiting to happen," added Donald Blake of the University of California-Irvine. He and other scientists said the only disagreement is over the timing and magnitude of its effects.

Fossil fuels are not the only culprits. Termites and rice paddies release methane, a heat-trapping gas. And as the atmosphere warms, the oceans release increasing amounts of methane.

But the worst greenhouse gas is carbon dioxide, pumped into the atmosphere by the burning of fossil fuels such as coal and released from the soil when a tropical rain forest is cleared for a Third World economic development project.

The United States is looking to its huge coal deposits as a future replacement for oil. China is basing its industrial growth on coal.

One of the biggest energy research programs in this country is a $5 billion government-industry effort to find a way to burn coal more efficiently and without releasing the chemicals that produce acid rain.

But witnesses told the hearings there is still no economically feasible method of burning coal without producing carbon dioxide. They said any clean-coal technology that encouraged more use of coal would only exacerbate the greenhouse problem.

Wirth and others said U.S. energy policy is in many ways at odds with dealing with atmospheric overheating. He cited cuts in funding for conservation and renewable energy research, and decisions allowing automakers to build vehicles that are less fuel-efficient.

"There is no doubt that we need to begin weighing the steps that should be taken over the near term as well as the long term," Wirth said.

Gus Speth, president of the World Resources Institute, called on Congress to establish a national climate-protection policy. "This is the most serious environmental issue of them all," he said.

Gordon MacDonald, vice president and chief scientist of the MITRE Corp., a consulting firm, said "a major redirection of the United States' energy policy is required." Among his suggestions were safer nuclear power and a tax on carbon dioxide emissions.

Officials of the Reagan administration, which recently led the industrial world into setting restrictions on chemicals that destroy ozone in the upper atmosphere, said a greenhouse policy is still under discussion.

"We do take this problem very seriously," said William Nitze, a deputy assistant secretary of state.

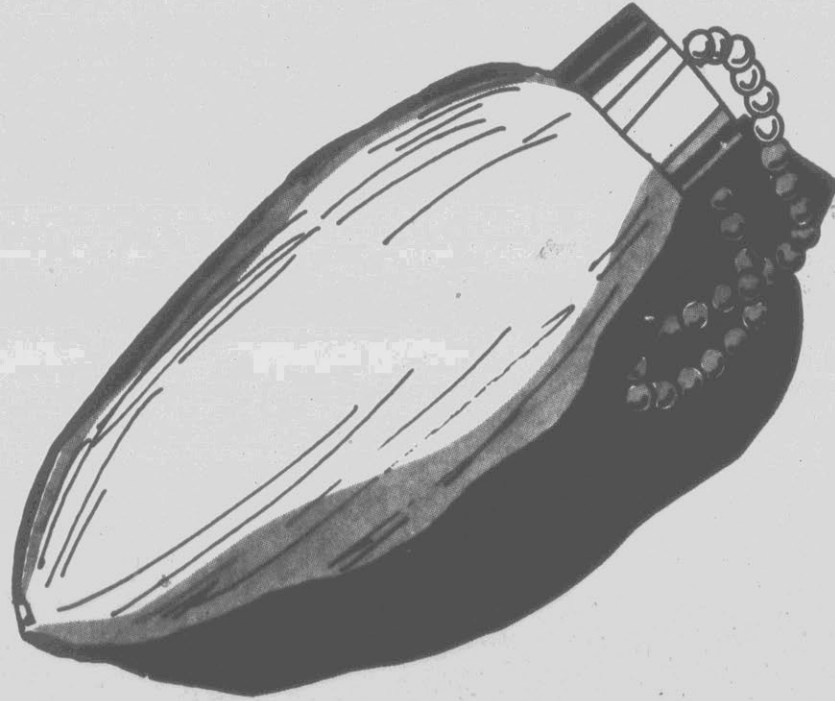

"Ultimately, governments (around the world) are going to have to make some of the key policy choices."

Drug Helps In Balancing Cholesterol

BOSTON (AP) — A drug prevents heart disease among those at high risk by raising the body's supply of "good cholesterol," and the finding is being praised as offering a new weapon against the common killer.

The drug, gemfibrozil, was tested for five years by doctors in Finland on more than 2,000 men with dangerously high levels of cholesterol, a major cause of heart attacks when it clogs arteries. Another group, also with the dangerous cholesterol levels, was given a placebo. Those administered gemfibrozil had one-third fewer cases of heart disease than those who did not.

Cholesterol is ferried through the blood by substances called lipoproteins, and doctors are learning that they can cut people's risk of heart trouble by manipulating these natural materials.

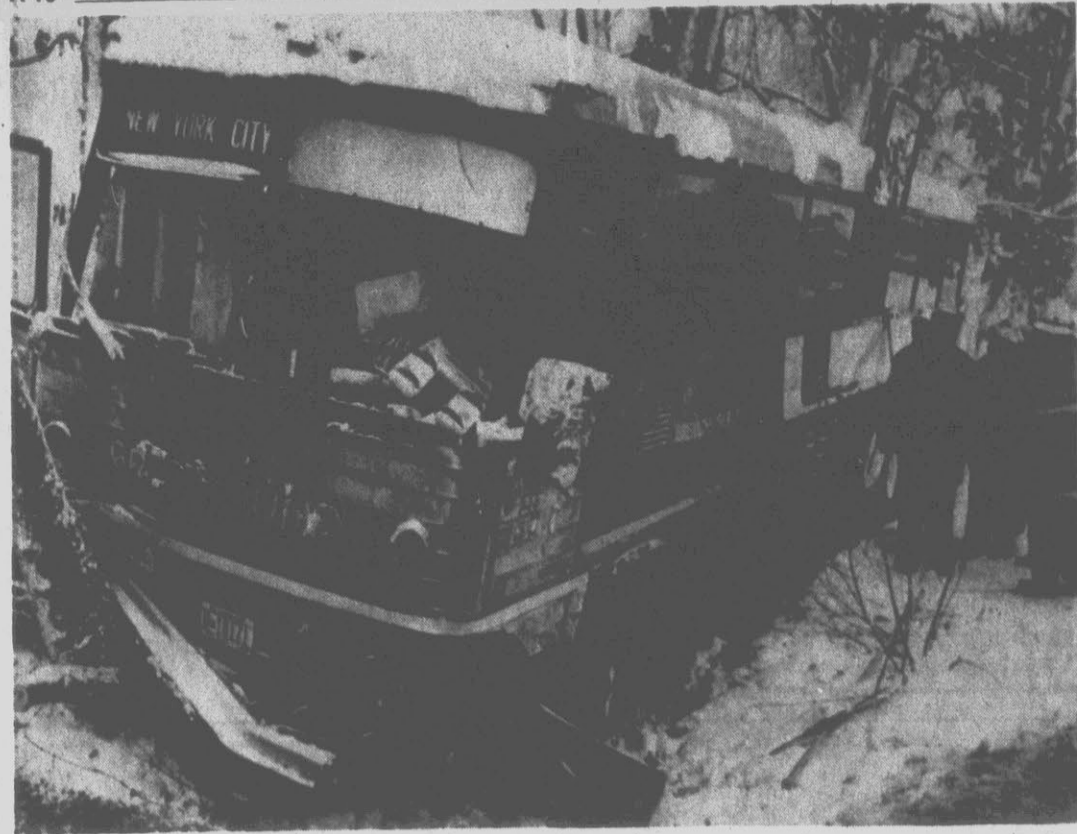

Until now, most emphasis has been on lowering low-density lipoprotein, or LDL, which delivers the cholesterol that builds up in the arteries.

However, the study supports the idea that another important approach is increasing levels of high-density lipoprotein, HDL, which carries cholesterol away to be destroyed.

Gemfibrozil raises HDL and lowers LDL.

"The exciting thing is that the reduction seems to be as much related to the effect this agent has on increasing HDL levels as it does on decreasing LDL," said Dr. Robert I. Levy of Columbia and former director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

"For five years, I and my colleagues have been waiting for the results of this study. It took us 100 years to demonstrate that lowering LDL would make a difference. Now we have pretty darned conclusive evidence that by raising HDL, you can also reduce coronary risk."

Storm Dumps 15 Inches Of Snow On Washington

By MICHAEL HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

A wintry storm blamed for 14 deaths blustered up the New England coast today after dumping a record 15 inches of snow near Washington, D.C., stranding hundreds of students at schools and disrupting Veterans Day ceremonies.

Cold air moving behind the storm, meanwhile, dropped temperatures below freezing today in the Deep South.

Wednesday's snowfall left 3 inches in the mountains of North Carolina; 9 inches in Harrisburg, Pa., and up to 6 inches in New York's Catskill mountains and Massachusetts' Berkshires.

The storm lost much of its power as it moved up the coast late Wednesday. A light snowfall was expected for New England before the storm moved into the Atlantic.

"It looks pretty much over farther south along Pennsylvania and a good-sized portion of New York," said Harry Gordon of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Hardest hit by Wednesday's sudden storm were Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia, where the storm lingered before it skirted the New York City area.

Thunderstorms accompanying the snow helped produce 5 inches of snow in three hours Wednesday afternoon in the Washington area. Fifteen inches fell in nearby District Heights, Md., and a foot of snow shut down Washington's National Airport for most of Wednesday.

The snowfall broke the area's 1967 record, when the total for the entire month was 6.9 inches.

The snow kept schools closed today in at least five Maryland districts.

On Wednesday, students in Anne Arundel County had to wait until 10 p.m. at the Old Mill Middle School for bus rides home. Teachers stayed late to supervise the children, who were served pizza.

Dozens of students in nearby Prince George's County also had long waits for buses maneuvering through unplowed streets.

"Most folks are still geared up for cutting grass and blowing leaves," said Brian Porter, a county school spokesman. "But our subcontractors aren't equipped to move massive amounts of snow."

About 1,100 students in Fairfax County, Va., were stranded at Hayfield Secondary School, where they were served supper and watched movies until about 9 p.m., when buses made it through.

Despite the storm, Veterans Day ceremonies went on as scheduled at Arlington National Cemetery and at the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial. But First lady Nancy Reagan canceled a trip to New York for a concert and a reception for Israeli President Chaim Herzog also was called off.

The storm also forced Rhode Island officials to cancel Veterans Day parades in Cranston and South Kingstown. In East Providence, the dedication of the city's veterans' memorial was postponed, and outdoor wreath-laying ceremonies were canceled in Bristol.

Authorities said the holiday was a welcome coincidence since federal and most state and municipal offices, schools, banks and libraries were already closed.

"A lot of people have had enough sense to stay home," said Massachusetts state Trooper Richard Cadran.

Driving conditions southeast of the Catskills remained "real lousy" Wednesday evening, said state Trooper Theodore Epidy.

"You can't drive faster than 15 miles an hour and then you go slipping and sliding everywhere," Epidy said. "It's a real bad night out there."

Snow tire sales boomed across the region.

"We're booked through Saturday," said Robin Tobey, administrative assistant at Warwick Tire Co. in Middletown, N.Y. "Because of the snow, everyone wants tires on immediately."

The 25 degrees in Baltimore early today broke a 74-year-old mark by four degrees. Farther south, Augusta, Ga., had a 28-degree reading and Birmingham, Ala., 27.

In Raleigh, N.C., the temperature plunged Wednesday to 34 from Tuesday's high of 76.

Nation Honors Veterans With Parades, Ceremonies

By The Associated Press
The snow fell silently as "Taps" echoed in Arlington National Cemetery on Veterans Day, as a nation honored the men and women, living and dead, who put themselves between their homeland and the war's desolation.

Although Wednesday's wintry weather forced cancellation of many observances in the Northeast, sunny skies in San Jose, Calif., brought out more than 50,000 people, the city's largest Veterans Day parade crowd in three decades.

A flag-waving former Marine, Efrén Pina of San Jose, said it was his first Veterans Day parade since he returned from Vietnam 15 years ago.

"It took me this long to feel good about it," he said.
In Pittsburgh, Vice President

George Bush joined the downtown parade as snowy skies gave way to sunshine. "Once a year, it doesn't do anything but good to have a renewed sense of patriotism and a renewed sense of honor," the former naval aviator said.

In Portland, Ore., hundreds of veterans and their families stood solemnly in the rain to dedicate the state's monument to the Vietnam War. A lone protester carried a sign reading, "Wrong then. Wrong now."

The monument, inspired by the black granite wall of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C., is inscribed with the names of 791 Oregonians killed or missing in Vietnam.

The nation's capital got its first Veterans Day snow in 37 years, and World War II veteran Ralph Gladman of Arlington, Va., said it reminded him of the Battle of the Bulge, the fierce German offensive of 1944.

"It sort of brought back memories of being over there, cold and freezing your feet off," he said. "We weren't well equipped. We didn't even have an overcoat."

In ceremonies at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said, "We honor both living and dead, and those whose fate is still not resolved — our missing in action, countrymen whom we swear never to forget."

At the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, special tribute was paid to 24 men whose names have just been added to the more than 58,000 war dead inscribed on the memorial.

Youngster's Murder Stuns Small New England Town

By WENDY MITMAN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSFIELD, N.H. (AP) — This small New England town struggled with despair after learning that a 9-year-old boy had been shot to death and one of his friends stood accused of murder.

JASON ELLIOTT

A tip led police to Jason Elliott's body Monday night, more than two days after hundreds of residents and police using a helicopter and bloodhounds searched unsuccessfully for him.

Police Chief Steven Byers, who uncovered the body, recalled Wednesday that he had "a sick feeling" and turned away repeatedly as an investigator's camera recorded the evidence.

Jason's mother, a school nurse, asked that the students in the town of 3,600 be given counseling and a chance to attend a memorial service today.

Byers said he kept seeing his 7-year-old son's face as he crouched in the dark and uncovered the body buried under leaves about 200 yards from Jason's home.

"My immediate reaction was, 'where was Wesley, my son?'" Byers recalled, adding that the death of a child "just never affected me until I had my own."

Smoking a cigarette outside his now-quiet station, Byers looked at a photograph of his son. The resemblance to Jason, found shot in the head, was striking, down to the fine dark hair and engaging smile.

Byers, who lives alone with his son, sent the boy to his grandparents in another town.

A 14-year-old friend of Jason was charged Tuesday with the juvenile equivalent of first-degree murder. Because of his age, he cannot be tried as an adult. Prosecutors want the boy, who remains in his parents' custody, declared a delinquent and committed to the state reformatory.

Along with their sadness at Jason's death, residents are coping with conflicting feelings about the accused boy.

"There's a rage as well as a compassion for his family," said Byers.

The crime has baffled investigators, who say the accused boy and Jason were friends, and that both were intelligent and outgoing.

Dr. Roger Fossum, the state medical examiner, said Wednesday that Jason was shot in the forehead and the right side of his head above the ear. Officials said a .22-caliber rifle was used. The shot to the forehead was fired at close range, Fossum said.

Investigators have released few other details.

On Wednesday, a police car in front of the Elliott home warded off reporters, but some others in the town were willing to talk about Jason.

Heather Brown, a 10-year-old classmate, said the tragedy prompted her to stay close to home.

Jason "was a good kid. He was gung-ho," she said. "In a small town like Pittsfield, everyone's real close. Everyone's feeling real bad."

Twelve-year-old Shelley Mandigo called Jason a "real friend. The past couple of days I've been really shook up about him."

The memorial service was planned for all of Pittsfield's students and teachers at the request of Jason's mother, Judy Elliott, a nurse who attends to all of the district's children, said Superintendent Andre Paquette.

Counselors were talking with students this week about their grief and anxiety.

"Consistent with Mrs. Elliott's wishes, we are trying to tell the students that while they can be angry about it, they should not be angry about who it happened to, and who it happened by. It simply is," Paquette said.

As for the accused student's classmates, Paquette said, "We expect they will have the normal types of reactions, which are, 'How was it possible? Didn't we understand him?'"

"And I'm sure for some there will be some sense of anger."

Accused Hijacker Contends Agents Broke Both Wrists

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI agents slammed a hijacking suspect to the floor so hard that both his wrists were broken and then denied him medical treatment during a grueling four-day interrogation at sea, a defense lawyer says.

Fawaz Younis, who is charged in the 1985 hijacking of a Jordanian airliner, was arrested this year in the Mediterranean after being lured aboard a yacht by an FBI informant.

In court papers filed Tuesday, defense lawyer Francis D. Carter says both of Younis' wrists were broken when he was grabbed by two FBI agents and "thrown — face down — to the deck of the vessel."

In addition, "the skin around his eye and mouth was broken" as the agents pressed him into the deck, according to the papers filed late Tuesday with U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker.

The FBI has been conducting an internal investigation of the circumstances surrounding the injuries, which the defense says were treated only with ice while Younis was interrogated over four days aboard a Navy ship.

Younis was transferred to the Navy ammunition ship after his Sept. 13 arrest and interrogated while the vessel slowly plied the Mediterranean from near Cyprus to waters off Corsica.

Law enforcement officials "protracted the time before he was surrendered to the court, knowing the defendant was in pain from his broken wrists and ill from seasickness," Carter said.

The four-day delay in bringing Younis to Washington for arraignment was "for the purpose of interrogation only," the defense lawyer said.

The defense asked Parker to bar the government from using as evidence any statements that Younis made during his interrogation on the ground that he did not properly waive his constitutional rights against self-incrimination.

"He was seasick and bewildered," Carter said. "In this frame of mind and with his wrists in pain, Mr.

Younis is told of some rights of the U.S. justice system.

"Mr. Younis had no background upon which to understand his rights, nor the significance of the waiver" that he signed.

The defense also alleged that before Younis was flown to Washington on Sept. 17 aboard a military aircraft, he was bound and received an injection with a sedative.

Younis lay immobilized during the flight and "was not given solid food or allowed to attend to his bodily functions," the defense said.

FBI spokesman Susan Schnitzer declined to comment on the defense allegations. "We will comment on it in a proper forum, which will be through our own filing," she said.

The defense also gave a different account of Younis' arrest from that provided by law enforcement officials.

Carter said Younis went to Cyprus on Sept. 10 to meet Jamal Hamdan, a friend from his native Lebanon who was living on the island. Hamdan offered Younis a chance to meet "an alleged East Beirut businessman by the name of Joseph."

The businessman was "described as important with a number of contacts in the right places in Lebanon," Carter said. "His supposed wealth and contacts combined to give him access to a number of important people in the government of Lebanon, Mr. Younis was told."

Hamdan, who the defense said was cooperating with the FBI, rented a boat and took Younis to the yacht where he was arrested.

Government sources have said Younis was lured to the yacht by the prospect of a weekend of drug use with beautiful women.

The defense moved to dismiss the indictment charging that Younis participated in the June 11, 1985, hijacking of a Jordanian airliner that was carrying 74 passengers, including several Americans. Carter contended that Younis' arrest was illegal because FBI agents had plotted with Hamdan to circumvent extradition treaties with Lebanon and Cyprus.

The defense also says the FBI made illegal use of the Navy ship, which used its electronic navigation equipment to position the yacht in international waters off Cyprus.

This involvement of the vessel violated a ban on using the military in law enforcement, Carter said. None of the exceptions to this ban would apply to Younis' case, he said.

Carter also asked Parker to reduce the number of U.S. marshals who appear each time Younis comes to court.

"The overkill method of blanketing the courtroom with security personnel is not warranted by the facts of this case nor the particular characteristics of Mr. Younis," Carter said.

USDA Sets Farm Week At 56 Hours

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers rarely put in the 40-hour week that has long been a standard for urban workers, according to a report by the Agriculture Department.

Farmers who sell more than $100,000 worth of livestock and crops each year reported that they spend an average of at least 56 hours a week, 50 weeks a year, working on their farm operations.

The survey results are contained in the department's report on 1986 farm costs and returns.

Farmers with sales of less than $20,000 annually — frequently those who run part-time operations and hold other jobs — reported an average of less than 30 hours per week, 43 to 44 weeks per year.

"Among different farm types, the longest hours, not surprisingly, were worked by dairy farmers, who reported a 68-hour work week and only one week off per year," the department's Economic Research Service said in a report.

It added: "The next toughest schedule was reported by poultry producers — 39 hours per week on average, and 49 weeks per year. Cash grain farmers were third in total hours, with a 40-hour week and 43 weeks per year."

But those average hours include the shorter work weeks of small, part-time farmers, and do not include hours worked off the farm.

The survey is conducted each year by the department's National Agricultural Statistics Service from a large sample representing about 1.6 million of the nation's 2.2 million farms.

Much of the survey provides detailed information on costs of production, financial conditions in agriculture, farm family living expenses, production practices, and the distribution of farm debt among lenders.

This information is used by Congress, USDA, farm organizations, universities and others to determine how different types of farms in different locations are faring and where problems persist, says economist Mitch Morehart, who wrote the report.

But not all of the information deals with costs and returns, debts and assets, he said.

Some other 1986 survey findings:
—The average reported age of farm operators in 1986 was 51, the same as in 1985. Farmers with sales in excess of $40,000 a year tend to be younger than the average. Operators of smaller farms were older and "tended to be more financially solvent than their younger counterparts."

—Nearly two-thirds of the operators with sales of less than $10,000 did not consider farming to be their major occupation, while nine out of 10 farmers with sales of more than $40,000 said farming was their primary job.

—The largest share of direct government payments went to farms in the $100,000 to $249,999 sales class, which covered 14 percent of all farms represented in the survey. They received 38 percent of the 1986 federal payments.

—Less than 10 percent of the payments went to farms with sales of less than $40,000 a year. These smaller farms made up 64 percent of all farms represented in the survey, but they accounted for only about 10 percent of the nation's total crop and livestock sales.

—Large farms, whose sales were in excess of $500,000 a year, got 12.7 percent of the 1986 government payments. Although they made up slightly less than 2 percent of all farms, they accounted for 35 percent of all 1986 crop sales and nearly 27 percent of the livestock sales.

Van Gogh Sells For $54 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — Vincent van Gogh's "Irises," the masterpiece the artist painted in the garden of his insane asylum, has been auctioned off for a record $53.9 million, a sale the auctioneer said shows "the art world is alive and well."

The buyer, whose bids were entered by phone through a European agent, chose not to be identified, said John L. Marion, chairman of Sotheby's North America, where Wednesday night's auction was held.

The previous record for a painting was set by another van Gogh masterpiece, "Sunflowers," which sold for $39.9 million earlier this year to a Japanese insurance company.

"I think it's obvious that the art world is alive and well," Marion said after "Irises" was sold. The last time "Irises" was sold, in 1947, it fetched $80,000.

Bidding began at $15 million. When it reached $40 million, the approximately 2,000 people present applauded. They grew hushed and tense as the price continued to climb.

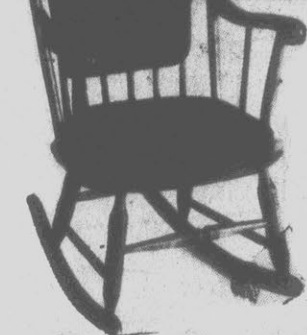

There were at least three people who placed bids for the painting, according to Marion, but the final bidding took place between two phone callers. "The hammer price was $49 million," said Sotheby's spokeswoman Fiona Ford. The purchaser must pay a 10 percent commission fee to the auction house.

DEDICATION — Charles E. Roe, left, recognized East Carolina University Wednesday for its leadership in preserving Otter Creek, a natural area north of Falkland. ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin, center, and Dr. Eugene Ryan, dean of the college of arts and sciences, accepted the plaque commemorating the

ECU Designates Wooded Area

Natural community types include dry oak-hickory forest, dry mesic oak-hickory, mesic mixed hardwoods, and Coastal Plain small stream swamp, with large variation between the types, Bellis said. Few examples of these communities remain in this part of the state, he said. The Otter Creek Natural Heritage designation is the first such designation in Pitt County under the program, Roe said.

The site is along a small stream, Otter Creek, which is a meandering tributary of the Tar River near Falkland.

On uplands above its slopes are mature stands of loblolly pine with an understory of hardwood trees. Huge beech trees in the ravines are estimated to be 150 to 200 years old. The ravines watered by seeping springs also provide an ideal environment for certain mosses, ferns and liverworts not commonly found in Pitt County.

Upper hardwood forest include several types of oaks, two types of hickory, sweetgum, dogwood, American holly and sassafras. Lower hardwoods include many of the same trees, along with white oak, black walnut, mulberry, yellow poplar, beech and ironwood.

The stream swamp area contains bald cypress, river birch, basswood and possum haw.

ECU officials said the university's biology, geology, parks and recreation, conservation and leisure systems studies, science education and environmental health plan to continue use of the area for study and research. The school of art has also expressed interest in the area as a site for painting of landscapes and outdoor scenes.

Weather

"So even though the storm is not here, we're getting hit by it."

The weather bureau reported snow throughout the state on Wednesday, with 2.5 inches at Mount Mitchell, 2 inches at Grandfather Mountain, 1.5 inches at Boone and 1 inch at Spruce Pine.

Wednesday was a day off for state workers, except some unlucky Department of Transportation road crews.

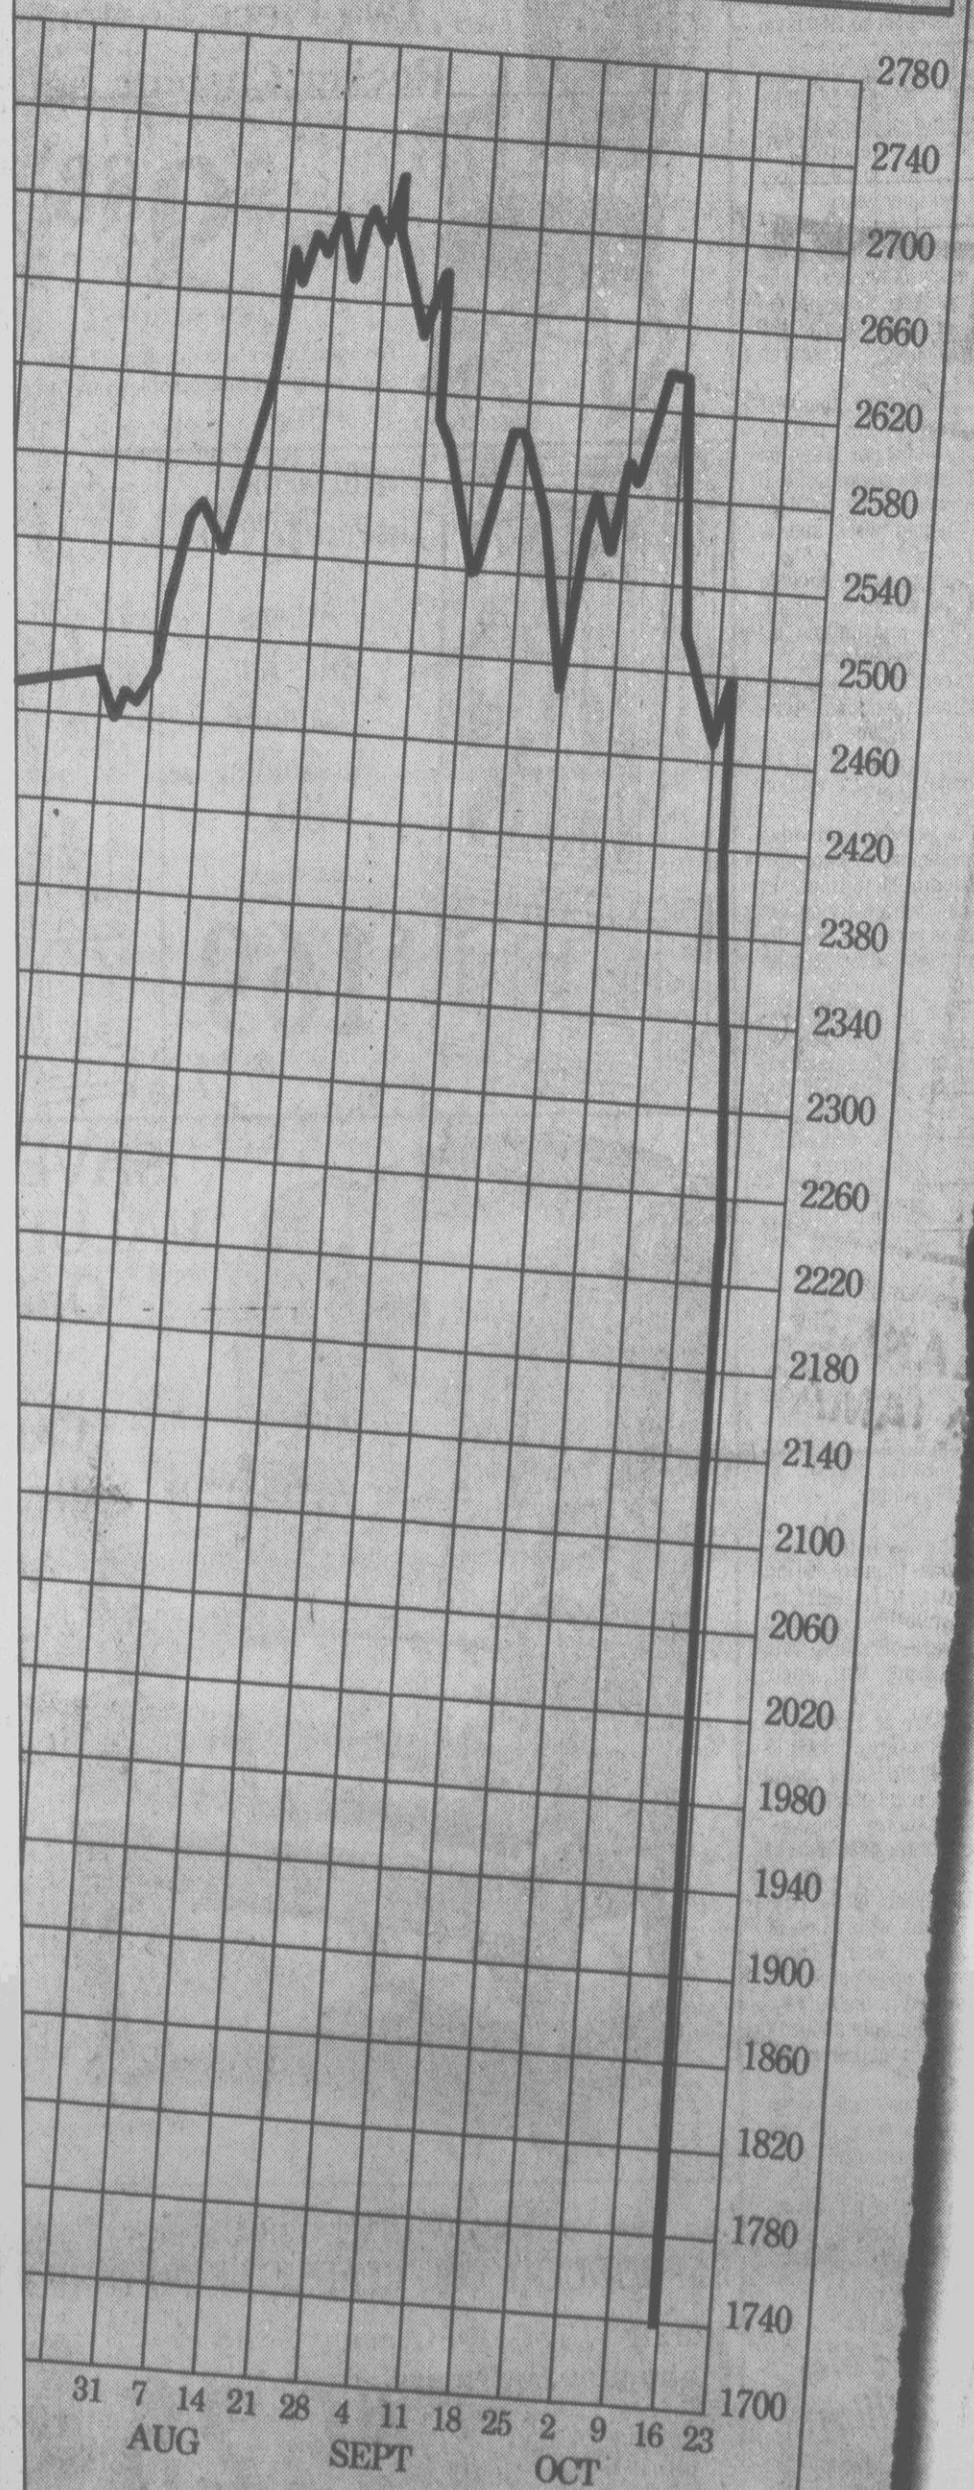

Temperatures fell below freezing west of Raleigh early today, forming ice on roads dampened by melting snow.

Slippery roads caused a rash of traffic accidents across the state, but no storm-related fatalities were reported.

In the Boone area, authorities said portions of U.S. 321 and U.S. 421 were at times blocked by disabled vehicles.

Toddlers Have A Market Choice

By KEITH BRADSHER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — Stockbroker John Kiggen pushed 18-month-old Brendan in his Aprica stroller into the Gymboree store in a trendy shopping mall and entertained the blond-haired baby by spinning little plastic wheels on the stroller's front bar while his wife, Martha, shopped.

She walked past the tinted, transparent plastic screens, which stick to the inside of a car's back windows with four suction cups and shield the eyes of a car seat-bound baby from the sun. She ignored the wide splash mats, for placement under high chairs to prevent spills, and the no-mess, soapy liquid-filled plastic figures with bubble-blowing rings that pop up at a squeeze. Instead, she gave a few trial shakes to the traditional green baby rattles and rummaged among brightly colored jumpers and pullovers.

"Out of the millions and millions of things available for adults, multiply that by five or six times and that's what you've got available for your children," John Kiggen said.

Sales are booming for baby products ranging from cribs and bibs to $50 designer jeans and $2,000 high-fashion christening gowns. The range of products and companies in the industry is expanding as entrepreneurs and national retailers of traditionally adult products begin chasing the dollars of parents who are growing older and richer before they start having children. The number of babies born to U.S. women over age 29 climbed 81.2% from 1975 to 1985.

"There are a lot of people who have never been in the market before, (who are) coming into it because they see it as a very good opportunity," said Judith Nolte, editor of American Baby magazine. The list of companies marketing to new parents no longer is limited to such nursery names as Gerber, but also includes the likes of Mobil Chemical, which now sells Hefty Tidies diaper disposal bags to hold soiled plastic diapers.

Although parents and grandparents may complain about the expense of it all, growing competition is also beginning to pinch profit margins and even force price discounts for less prestigious labels. Designer-brand infant clothes continue to sell well, however, despite doubts among many parents about whether the perceived extra quality justifies the additional cost.

"It gets pretty ridiculous, especially since they're only going to drool over it, spill food on it, and the third time you wash it, it's going to look the same shade of gray," said Freddie McKenna, a Los Angeles resident with a 2-year-old daughter, Alix.

Sales of infant furniture, bedding and accessories rose to $1.6 billion last year from $700 million in 1979, according to the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association. "We're seeing companies that have been making wooden rocking chairs, and all of a sudden they're making high chairs," said William L. MacMillan, the association's executive director. The organization's membership has risen to 155 companies today from 71 in 1980, as new businesses have entered the field, he said.

Sales of accessories such as playpens and car seat covers have exploded into a $250 million market now from a base of less than $10 million in 1980, MacMillan said. Legislation and growing safety concerns among parents have pushed manufacturers' sales of car seats to nearly 2 million units this year worth $75 million to $80 million from 1.2 million units and $30 million in 1980.

Pawtucket, R.I.-based Hasbro, the nation's largest toy maker, is launching Nursa, a disposable baby bottle system with pre-sterilized nipples and twist-on bags for milk. Baby exercise gyms are popping up across Southern California, offering exercise classes for babies as young as three months.

"It's an opportunity for Mom to come with her newborn, to come and experience what it's like with other moms with their newborns. It's more of a social experience," said Kevin J. Gray, director of My Gym in Los Angeles. "Children at that age (three months) rarely get to interact with other children at that age."

New parents are attracting corporate interest because they are older and have more to spend on fewer children. The annual total of live births in the United States has stagnated at about 3.7 million for the past five years and is expected to start dropping in the early 1990s. But the average age of U.S. mothers bearing their first child rose to 23.5 from 22.3 between 1975 and 1985, while the number of births to women over age 29 leaped to 940,186 from 518,856, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

The number of first borns — for whom most cribs, strollers, car seats and other big-ticket baby products are purchased — has climbed as well, reaching 1.55 million in 1985. By contrast, in 1957, at the peak of the baby boom, first borns made up just 1.18 million of the 4.3 million babies born.

Spending on first-born babies typically is 25 percent greater than spending on subsequent babies, said Kenneth B. Greeman, a children's products analyst for Fairchild Publications in New York.

Sales of high-priced baby products have grown fastest. Five years ago, the typical baby gift bought at Saks Fifth Avenue cost between $25 and $50; now the range is $25 to $100, said

Carla L. Slocum, vice president for children's wear. "Adult fashions, trends and life styles are now very apparent for babies. ... (Working mothers) have got more disposable income and they've got more guilt."

Specialty stores selling expensive and fashionable baby products have also avoided the price wars and consequent lower profits that have begun to hurt mass merchandisers, said Robert R. Geisheker, Sears' national retail marketing manager for infants and toddlers. Well more than half of the nation's infant furniture is sold for less than full retail price, he said, adding that for the past two years, baby products have led in sales growth for most big retailers. "Because the industry has grown so much and there are so many more people involved ... you can't just go wild and raise your prices."

But fashionable products continue to command prices that belie their diminutive sizes. At one Los Angeles mall, a children's apparel store sells $29 black denim Baby Guess miniskirts with matching $55 black denim jackets — all for 6-month-old baby girls.

Los Angeles-based Pour Le Bebe, which licenses the Guess name for use on young children's clothing, has seen sales grow to between $1.6 million and $2 million a month since its founding three years ago, said Michel Benasra, the company's French designer, president and chief executive. Babies do appreciate fashionable clothing, he said. "More than you think, they care. They care, and the mother cares, and the grandmother cares." But many industry experts disagree. "An infant doesn't really care whether it's sleeping in a laundry basket or a dresser drawer or a fabulous, $2,000 Italian designer crib," said Olivia I. Buehl, editor-in-chief of Baby magazine.

Candlelight Vows Spoken Saturday

FARMVILLE — In a candlelight service, Mary Della Pope and Donald Weldon Lancaster, both of Greenville, were married on Nov. 8 at 3:30 p.m. in the First Baptist Church of Farmville. Dr. Ronald Lee Davis officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Harris Pope, Jr. of Farmville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Proctor Lancaster of Greenville.

Music was provided by Billy Wooten of Lenoir, vocalist and John Barker, organist.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was escorted by her father. She wore a floor-length gown with a chapel train of traditional bridal satin with re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline outlined with re-embroidered alencon lace with clusters of seed pearls and sequins, long tapered sleeves and basque waist. Re-embroidered alencon lace encrusted with seed pearls and sequins were applied on the bodice and sleeves. Bridal buttons fastened the illusion V back and the sleeves. The floor-length skirt extended into a chapel train. Scalloped alencon lace bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. The bride chose a waltz-length layered veil of illusion with scalloped beaded edge border accented with scattered alencon lace motifs flowing from a lace cap. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis with white bridal roses.

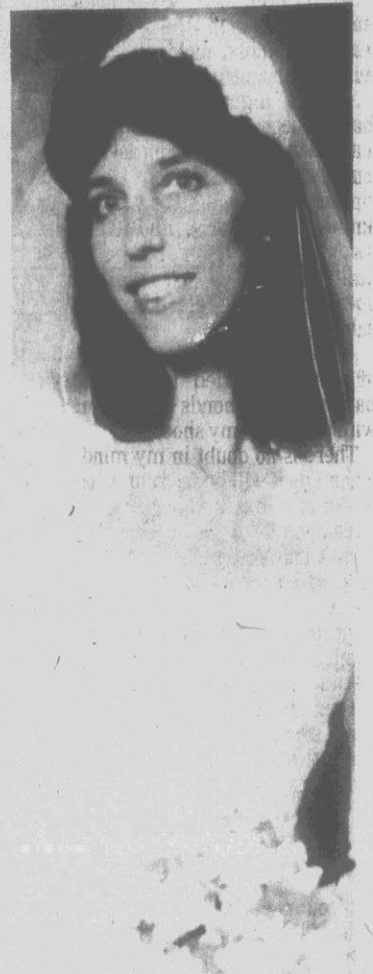

Ruth Ann Grimes of Garner served as her cousin's matron of honor. She wore a royal blue taffeta gown. The fitted bodice featured a sweetheart neckline, short puffed sleeves and basque waist. The gathered skirt flowed to floor-length. Her colonial bouquet was a mixture of variously colored flowers.

Junior bridesmaids were Virginia Godwin of Ayden and Brooks Andrews of Farmville. Their dresses and bouquets were like the honor attendant's.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were James Pace, Jr. of Greenville and Jesse Lee Grimes of Garner, cousin of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore an aqua tea-length dress of crepe and chiffon. The bridegroom's mother wore a dress of fuchsia crepe. Both mothers were presented with cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Charles Cedric Davis and Mrs. John Davis Andrews directed the wedding.

MRS. LANCASTER

The bride is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and attended Central Piedmont Community College. She is employed as a library clerk at Joyner Library of the East Carolina University campus. The bridegroom is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and attended ECU. He is the manager of Don's Auto Parts and Diesel Machine Services in Greenville.

A reception, hosted by the parents of the bride, was held in the fellowship Hall of the church. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. John Turner Walston, Sr. Mr. and Mrs. John Burrus presided over the register and goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Chester Outland.

The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the parents of the bridegroom, was held at the Colonial Inn in Farmville.

After a wedding trip to Hilton Head Island, S.C., the couple will reside in Greenville.

Treasured Photos Hang In Bathroom

DEAR ABBY: Here's a new one for you. My daughter-in-law has my wedding picture hanging directly over the toilet in her bathroom. She has "honored" her parents' wedding picture in this fashion by hanging it right next to ours.

This must be a new fad because my daughter hung the wedding picture of her grandparents (my beloved mother and father) over the "throne" in her bathroom!

I'm tempted to ask for those pictures back. I would rather see them destroyed than hanging there. They should be in an album. I treasure

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

those pictures and wanted my family to have them after I'm gone. I am 82. — HURT IN ARIZONA

DEAR HURT: Please don't judge your daughter and daughter-in-law too harshly. I'm sure they meant no offense. Many contemporary decorators suggest hanging heirloom pictures in the bathroom, powder room or dressing area. Though the idea may not appeal to you, the pictures will be enjoyed far more where they are seen every day, rather than placed in an album that's seldom opened.

DEAR ABBY: Having just read the letter from "Patti" regarding the "nasty" thank-you note for a $10 wedding present, I thought you might get a kick out of the following:

A young couple (friends of mine) were recently married and were surprised at not receiving any wedding gift from the groom's best friend (and best man). Although the groom wanted to ignore the fact, the miffed bride sent the following thank-you note: "Thank you for the lovely wedding gift; every time we look at it, it reminds us of you!" — STILL CHUCKLING

(Dear Abby's Cookbooklet is here! To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.)

Reports Given Service League

Committee reports were given at the meeting of the Greenville Service League held last week. Sustaining members will meet March 15 with a coffee planned for March 30.

Mrs. Richard McKee reported on the Bloodmobile visit held at Burroughs Wellcome. Volunteers worked 43½ hours and 184 units were collected. Mary Wesley Harvey reported on coat-hangers collected and Mrs. Howard Dawkins said 22 workers worked 43½ hours making 500 tray favors for Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Five arrangements were placed at nurses stations.

A workshop will be held Nov. 17 to make Christmas favors.

Mrs. R. Kelly Barnhill gave the Laughinghouse Fund report and Mrs. C.W. Harvey Jr. gave the layette report. Mrs. William C. Brewer said the Thanksgiving holidays for hospital volunteers would be Nov. 26-27.

Mrs. James C. Carter said Operation Santa Claus will start Nov. 30. Mrs. Raymond MacKenzie answered two calls from the lending chest.

Resorting To All Things To Open Sealed Packages

One of these days you're going to open your paper and the headline will read, "Columnist accidentally shoots self while trying to open bacon."

Actually, a gun is the only thing I haven't used to pry open packages, but I've been close to it on several occasions. In an attempt to open various containers, I've resorted to knives (bread, paring and cleavers), razor blades, scissors, rose clippers, nail files, axes, spears, letter openers, javelins, electric saws and sabers.

At one point, when I was totally out of control, I tried to puncture a package of almonds on an airline with the heel of my shoe.

There is no doubt in my mind that when I go it will be from injuries suffered as a result of breaking into a package. A box of sheets arrived from a mail-order company the other day. Sheets, as we know, do not have to be hermetically sealed. Nothing happens when the air hits them. The tomb of Tutankhamen should have been so well-preserved.

I put the box on the table, reached for a steak knife and waited for the voice that appears at the opening of every box.

"Don't stab yourself with that knife or you'll bleed to death," my husband said.

"You have just ruined my surprise," I said.

"I mean it. You make me very nervous when you start sawing away."

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Why don't you just loosen up the tape around the opening?"

Patently, I smiled. "Remember when you tried to get a comb out of a plastic bubble and by the time you got to it, you had pulled all your hair out and didn't need it?"

"I remember," he said. "Then you know what the odds are of loosening up the tape around the opening."

I think the mail services have us so intimidated that we have over-corrected the problem. There is no reason to bury a small plastic cup in a piano box, in 10 yards of plastic bubbles, another five pounds of foam squiggles, tape on every opening and baling wire around the entire package.

My kitchen is turning into an arsenal to combat hard-to-open packages. I salvaged a piece of broken glass from the trash the other day and said, "I can use this to open my book selections each month."

Homemaking always has been a high-risk profession. Raising children, cooking, chauffeuring, caring for animals, solving disputes - all of it is life-threatening, but I truly believe if God wanted me to open packages, He would have given me serrated fingernails that, when pressure is applied, would detonate.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Market $1 lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 40.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadborn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 40.50; Wilson 40.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 37.00; Wallace 38.00; Spivey's Corner 37.00; Rowland 37.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is higher and the live supply is adequate for a mostly moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,005,000, compared to 1,931,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to 2 cents higher at mostly 1.80-2.02 in East and mostly 2.11-2.17 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 2 cents higher at mostly 5.32-5.55 in East and mostly 5.20-5.30 in the Piedmont; wheat 2.47-2.65; new crop wheat 2.63-2.78; Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 101 to 106 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Better-than-expected news on international trade provided the spark for a strong rally in the stock market today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial climbed 63.50 points to 1,962.70 by noontime on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 5 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 1,278 up, 285 down and 339 unchanged.

Before the market opened the Commerce Department reported that the nation's trade deficit narrowed in September, with imports exceeding exports by $14.08 billion.

The figure was down from $15.68 billion in August, and came in well below advance estimates of about $15 billion.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines gained 2 1/2 to 122; General Electric 1 1/2 to 45 1/2; American Express 1 1/2 to 25 1/2, and American Telephone & Telegraph 1 1/2 to 30.

Ford Motor picked up 2 1/2 to 74 1/2. The company announced a new stock buyback program running to as much as $2 billion.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 3.40 to 138.86. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 4.77 to 251.30.

Volume on the Big Board came to 103.71 million shares at noontime, up from 78.58 million at the same point Wednesday.

Marines Return

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — After five months in the Mediterranean Sea and the Indian Ocean, 3,000 sailors and Marines are coming home today and Friday.

Four of the five amphibious ships that made up the Mediterranean Amphibious Readiness Group will discharge the Marines today at Morehead City, N.C., before returning to their homeport of Norfolk on Friday. The fifth ship, the amphibious assault ship Guadalcanal, was diverted to the Persian Gulf to act as a base for mine-sweeping helicopters. The Guadalcanal is en route to Norfolk, and is expected to dock in several weeks.

more than 2 yen higher than its 133.65-yen record low set Tuesday in Tokyo. The dollar also was sharply higher against European currencies.

Strength in the dollar and reports that the administration and Congress were progressing toward an agreement to cut the federal budget deficit also helped buoy stock markets worldwide.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange's key indicator, the Nikkei stock average of 225 selected issues, gained 509.74 points today and closed at 21,546.50. The indicator had fallen 649.70 points on Wednesday.

Share prices on the Hong Kong stock exchange rose sharply in increased trading. The Hang Seng Index, the market's prime indicator of blue chips, gained 104.69 points, closing at 2150.87.

Prices also surged on the London Stock Exchange. The Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index gained 68.8 points to 1,707.6 by late afternoon.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 21.05 points Wednesday to close at 1,969.20, snapping a three-session losing streak that had knocked 107 points from the barometer of 30 blue-chip stocks. Broader market indices also rose, with five stocks gaining in price for every three that fell on the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading volume, thinned by Veterans Day, was a modest 147.85 million shares, the lightest since before the Oct. 19 crash.

The NYSE weathered its second day of a strike by 1,100 clerical workers, but trading appeared to run smoothly. Supervisors have been performing clerical duties.

The New York and other exchanges again closed early, but today planned a return to regular trading hours for the first time since the week of the crash.

Aerobics Show Stirs Controversy

By NEIL MacFARQUHAR
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Samia Allouba has gained a wide following in Egypt for her 15-minute TV aerobics program called "Let's Play," but some of the country's Islamic faithful are objecting to it as sinful.

"Although it has a noble aim," a woman teacher wrote in a letter to the newspaper Al-Ahram, "some of the movements should not be watched by older and younger men ... to avoid embarrassment and to maintain our morals."

Others say Mrs. Allouba's clothing is immodest and her body movements provocative.

But the television station says most of the reaction has been highly favorable, although Islam is Egypt's state religion.

Mrs. Allouba, 35, learned aerobics in California, North Carolina and New York. After seven years of Surviving are a daughter, Ann Thompson of the home; two sons, Frank Thompson and Buster Thompson, both of Greenville, and two grandchildren.

Trains

Deputy Fire Chief James Cosgrove said it took 90 minutes to clear everyone from the two trains and the darkened tunnel.

Stapleton said the accident occurred when one nine-car train, coming from the southern end of the state, was struck by a seven-car train. He said the extent of injuries probably was reduced because the last car in the train at a standstill was the engine.

Inside the station, full of rescue workers from hospitals and police and fire departments, victims covered with brown wool blankets were being carried out on stretchers.

The train that was hit was listing toward the platform, dripping snow and ice onto the ground.

Passengers aboard the train said they had to walk through the dark and smoky tunnel to the station after the accident.

"Everyone started falling and everything went black," said one passenger, Geri Hansen of Canton. "I was scared; there was a lot of smoke ... especially in the tunnel you didn't know where you were," said a relative, Mike Hansen.

Boston City Hospital spokesman Bill Markley said 13 people were brought to the hospital's emergency room. One was in serious condition with trauma and other unspecified injuries; the others have minor injuries, such as scratches and bruises, he said.

MBTA spokesman Timothy Gens said other passengers were being taken to local hospitals for observation and treatment.

The family will receive friends at the home, 201 S. Saratoga Road, Stantonburg.

Memorials may be made to Stantonburg United Methodist Church Organ Fund.

Arrangements are being handled by Shackelford Funeral Home, Farmville.

Wilkes
A funeral for Mr. David James "Red" Wilkes will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. Saturday in Hardee's Funeral Home Chapel by the Rev. Tyrone Turnage. Burial will be in the Branch Cemetery at Haddock's Crossroads.

Mr. Wilkes attended the Pitt County schools. He was a member of Beautiful Valley Masonic Lodge No. 435 of Stokes.

Surviving are his wife, Beulah Wilkes of Stokes; a son, Jesse Wilkes of Monticello, N.Y.; a daughter, Geraldine Hardy of Winterville; a stepson, Robert Outlaw of Greenville; three stepdaughters, Brenda Wilkes of Stokes, Willie Mae Brown of Grimesland and Emma Heath of Greenville; his stepmother, Australia Wilkes of Grimesland; a sister, Mary Cannon of Washington, N.C.; a stepfather, Dorothy Wilkes of Hillside, N.J.; eight grandchildren; 12 step-grandchildren, and six step-great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends Friday from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Hardee's Funeral Chapel and at other times will be at 604 Mills St., Winterville.

Williams
AYDEN — A funeral for Mr. Jasper Williams of 723 Venter St. will be conducted Saturday at 3:30 p.m. in Zion Chapel Free Will Baptist Church by Elder C.R. Parker. Burial will be in the Ayden Cemetery.

Mr. Williams was a member of Zion Chapel Church and was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II.

Surviving are a daughter, Vivian "Jean" G. Chapman of Ayden; a stepson, Clyde Harper of Long Branch, N.J.; three brothers, Matthew Williams, Leroy "Bill" Williams and Allen Williams, all of Baltimore; a foster brother, Rudolph Evans of Simpson; a sister, Mae West W. McDonald of Baltimore, and 10 grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at Norcott Memorial Chapel from 8:15 p.m. to 9:15 p.m. Friday and at other times will be at the home.

Rose, Conley Open Playoff Action

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

D.H. Conley's Vikings make only their second appearance in the State 3-A playoffs, while J.H. Rose returns to the 4-A playoffs for the first time since 1982 on Friday night.

The Vikings must travel to Tarboro, to face the Tar-Roanoke Conference winners, while Rose will play host to Mideastern Conference third place finisher New Bern.

The Rampants downed Northeastern, 21-14, last Friday night to complete their march through the regular season, earning their first unbeaten regular slate in 20 years. Conley, meanwhile, its back to the wall, stunned East Carteret, 23-8, to earn the number three berth in the Coastal with a 7-3 overall mark and a 4-2 Coastal Conference record.

"We played well," Conley coach Steve Craft said. "Our young men did a real good job. We got after them and played one of our better ballgames of the year."

Craft said the biggest key to the game was the play of the offensive and defensive lines. "We created some turnovers and took advantage of them, the coach said.

He singled out the play of center Chris Lindsey, guards Robbie Little and Aaron Freeman, tackles Todd Holloway and Kevin Moye and tight ends Jason Hamby and Martin Patrick.

On defense, he praised the play of down linemen Darryl Simpson and Kevin Daniels, linebackers Freeman and Donte Williams, backs Derrick Credle and Bronswell Patrick, noting that Conley intercepted five Mariner passes.

"We feel like we're trying to point in the right direction. But we can't call what we have a program yet because it's just the first year. But it does give us a cornerstone to build on. We're still a long way from where we want to be, but anytime the kids are successful it makes building easier — and more fun," Craft said.

Rose Coach Chip Williams said the closeness of his team's win over Northeastern was due in many ways to Northeastern.

"They played that way all year long and just seemed to give up the big play that hurt them," he said.

The big play for Rose was a 93-yard kickoff return by Rexter Williams, followed by a couple of key pass completions that led to a Tom Moye to Malcom Wilson touchdown for the game-winner.

"There defense is probably as good as we'll see, although their pass coverage was not as good as we may see," Williams said.

"Our quickness helped us get outside with the running game and the passing was the key to the win."

Williams said that he was somewhat worried about the passing game in the first half after several on-target passes were dropped.

"We didn't do anything at the half. We just started locking up (on the tackles) and played harder," he said.

New Bern vs. Rose

Rose and New Bern scrimmaged prior to the start of the season, but unlike previous seasons, did not play during the regular schedule. New Bern went away from the scrimmage, Williams said, feeling it had beaten Rose.

Now, however, it's for real, not just a scrimmage.

"Their defense has always been average to above average, and that's the way they are this year. They are pretty solid, and feel they should have beaten Jacksonville this year."

New Bern, instead, fell to Jacksonville and New Hanover during their Mideastern wars, and also fell to unbeaten 3-A power Havelock, finishing 7-3.

Top defensive personnel include linebackers Kenny Jackson and Leslie Thompson and nose guard Charles Moore.

"The biggest thing about them offensively is their ability to pass and to carry out their assignments with efficiency," Williams said. "Their quarterback is a good thrower and they have both the deep threat and the middle distance threat. They have a big tight end who catches the ball well. Their tailback is as good as anyone we've seen and their fullback is a good athlete too."

The quarterback, Mark Dilday, has completed 60 of 105 passes for 1,032 yards and seven touchdowns. He's had 7 intercepted. His chief targets has been the tight end Mike Purdie (6-3, 240), who has 23 receptions for 410 yards, and split end David Davis (6-3, 205), who has 21 catches for 309 yards. Shunard Brown, a split end, has nine receptions for 199 yards. As backup tailback, he's rushed 14 times for 178 yards.

And while Williams rates the tailback Tracy Murphy as a top threat, he's not the leading rusher.

Moore On The Move
Rose High School tailback Timmy Moore (34) moves for yardage during action earlier this year. Moore, with 911 yards, was the team's leading ground gainer this season as Rose had a regular season perfect 10-0 record. Rose hosts New Bern in the first round of the State 4-A Playoffs Friday. Conley Tickets Are On Sale

Pre-sale tickets for D.H. Conley's first round playoff game against Tarboro are available at the school for $3.

Those interested in purchasing tickets prior to the game can come by the office of student affairs from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., or the school cafeteria from 11:45 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Vikings, the third place team from the Coastal Conference, travel to Tarboro Friday for the game. Tickets at the gate will be $4.

Rose Tickets, Parking Set

Tickets for the Rose High School-New Bern first round state 4-A football playoff game will be $4 instead of the usual $3 charged by the Rampants, school officials have announced.

Rose officials also pointed out that season tickets would not be valid for any of the playoff games.

Additional parking for the games will be available at Greenville Middle School, adjacent to Daniels Field, and gates will be opened at both ends of the field for spectators.

Clemens Wins Second Cy Young

KATY, Texas (AP) — Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens not only broke the Cy Young jinx, but also managed to win the American League's top pitching award for a second consecutive year.

"It was little more anticipation this year," a smiling Clemens said Wednesday outside his home in this suburb of Houston. "Last year I just wanted around to find out how much I won by. This year it was going to be a little closer. I think I did all right."

"I like the award, and my wife is already talking about the third one in a row now," he said. "It's gratifying that it puts me in a class with people I looked up to. I guess I'll try to beat the jinx again."

Clemens wasn't home when the call came that he had won the award. He was stuck in traffic, but officials called him on his newly installed car phone. "I think it's been the most exciting moment for me that I've been caught in Houston traffic," he said.

Clemens drove up to his home in a black Porsche with the license plate "Super K" and "MVP 1986" etched into the bumper. He said he had taken his 1986 Cy Young trophy to be cleaned "for good luck."

Clemens had a 20-9 record with 256 strikeouts in 281 2-3 innings this year. He received 21 of 28 first-place votes and 124 points in balloting by a panel of Baseball Writers Association of America members.

Jimmy Key of Toronto, 17-8 with a league-leading earned run average of 2.76, had four first-place votes and 64 points to finish a distant second. Dave Stewart of Oakland, at 20-13 the only other 20-game winner in the AL, was third with two first-place votes and 32 points.

Doyle Alexander, who went 9-0 for Detroit after coming to the Tigers from Atlanta on Aug. 12, got the remaining first-place vote and totaled eight points to finish fourth in the balloting.

"Whether I won or not, I felt I beat the Cy Young jinx and that's what I set out to do, to try and overcome that which is more prevalent in the American League," Clemens said. "A lot of guys have gone to the wayside after they've had a good year. I was looking for consistency and I got it."

Winning the award, however, was not the best news for Clemens.

"The best news is that a week ago we just found out that Debra (his wife) is pregnant again, so I guess these awards bring babies. She wants me to win my third in a row, but I don't know if she wants another little one that quick."

The Clemens already have an 11-month-old son, Kody.

Clemens, the game's dominant pitcher in 1986 with a 24-4 record, 2.48 ERA and 238 strikeouts, was written off early this year to repeat as the Cy Young winner.

After holding out in a salary dispute, he rejoined the Red Sox a week before the season started. He started 4-6 with a 3.51 ERA in his first 13 appearances going into mid-June.

Many felt he would not be the overpowering pitcher he was in 1986, when he started 14-0 and set a major-league record with 20 strikeouts in a game against Seattle.

After starting with a 4-0 shutout at Cleveland on June 17, Clemens went on a spree. He finished the season 16-3 with a 2.66 ERA in his final 23 startings. He capped the year with a 4-0, 12-strikeout victory over Milwaukee in Boston.

Except for his won-lost record and ERA, Clemens had a better year than in 1986 despite pitching for a poorer team. He led the majors with 18 complete games and seven shutouts, compared with 10 complete games and one shutout in 1986, when Boston won the pennant before losing a seven-game World Series to the New York Mets.

His 256 strikeouts last season were second in the league to Seattle's Mark Langston's 262, and only Charlie Hough of Texas pitched more innings, 285 1-3. He also had the league's third-best ERA of 2.97.

Steve Bedrosian, a reliever for the Philadelphia Phillies, won the National League Cy Young award Tuesday.

The last American League pitcher to win consecutive Cy Youngs was Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles in 1975-76. Denny McLain won the AL Cy Young in 1968 and shared it with Baltimore's Mike Cuellar the following year.

Clemens became only the third American League pitcher to win a Cy Young for a team placed as low as fifth. Dean Chance with the 1964 California Angels and Gaylord Perry with the 1972 Cleveland Indians also won the award with fifth-place teams.

Clemens earned $150,000 for winning the Cy Young. In addition, $150,000 will be tacked onto his 1988 salary of $1.2 million as a result of his contract negotiated last April.

Others receiving votes were Langston, Ted Higuera of Milwaukee, Frank Viola of Minnesota, Jeff Reardon of Minnesota, and Jack Morris of Detroit.

Balloting is done by a panel comprised of two BBWAA members from each league city. They are asked to name their top three candidates with five points awarded for a first-place vote, three for second and one for third.

Eagle Back Goes For 1,000 Yards

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Southern Mississippi and East Carolina will be after the same goal Saturday at 2 p.m. (EDT) when they meet in Hattiesburg, Miss.

The Pirates, in their final game of the 1987 football season, are 5-5 and will be trying to clinch their first winning season since 1983. Southern Mississippi, 5-4, will be out to ensure its own winning season although the Eagles will have one more chance when they travel to Southwestern Louisiana on Nov. 28.

The Eagles, too, are sure to remember the ending of last year's game, when the Pirates, behind freshman quarterback Charlie Libretto, drove the length of the field to take a 21-20 lead with just eight seconds left on the clock.

Following the kickoff, Southern Miss quarterback Andrew Anderson hit Lyneal Alston in the middle of a crowd and he dragged defender Robert Martin to the 10, where, as he hit the ground, he pitched the ball forward to a teammate who went into the end zone.

The officials, however, forgot in the confusion that the runner was downed, and walked off the penalty from that spot, allowing Southern Mississippi an untimed down, and Rex Banks kicked a 31-yard field goal to win the game, 23-21.

Officials later admitted that they had blown the call and the game should have ended without the field goal kick. But, since it was after the end of the game, nothing could be done and it went into the books as a win for the Eagles.

Since then, the rule has been changed, and on such a play, the ball would be returned to the original line of scrimmage, the penalty marked off, and an untimed down allowed from there.

The Eagles, who count among their victims this year such teams as Tulane (31-24), Louisville (65-6), Memphis State (17-14), Mississippi State (18-14) and Jackson State (17-7), will be trying to win their fourth straight over the Pirates. The last ECU win was a 10-6 victory at Hattiesburg in a driving rain storm in 1983's season-ender. The Golden Eagles lead the series 9-3.

The key man to watch in the game may be tailback Shelton Gandy, who is just 34 yards shy of a 1,000 yard season. Barring the unforeseen, Gandy should be the seventh USM player to accomplish that feat, and it will be the eighth time it has been done. Ben Garry accomplished it twice, in 1976 and 1977.

He will be the first since Sam DeJarnette in 1982 to reach 1,000, assuming he makes it.

A 5-9, 191-pound junior, Gandy's previous best year was last season when he rushed for 419 yards on 78 carries. He has nearly three times that many carries this year.

Quarterback Brett Favre, a 6-2, 198-pound freshman, has hit on 46 of 135 completions for 737 yards. He's thrown for 10 touchdowns and had nine picked off.

The leading receiver is split end Darryl Tillman (6-1, 181, So.), who pulled in 18 for 371 yards and three touchdowns through eight games. Flanker Chris McGee (6-1, 218, Sr.) is next with 11 for 213 and four touchdowns.

The leading scorer for the Eagles is place kicker Chris Seroka, a junior, who has booted all 23 of his point-after attempts, and is 7-12 on field goals, including a 54-yarder and a 55-yarder.

The Eagles are rushing for 192.2 yards a game, while allowing 203.4. They have passed for 102.8 per game while giving up 182.4.

Defensive leaders include linebacker Sidney Coleman (6-2, 240, Sr.) with 118 tackles and Onesimus Henry (5-11, 219, Sr.), also a linebacker, with 116 tackles.

ABC Blunder Drawing Attention

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

ABC's telecast of the New York City Marathon lasted three hours. The controversy over the network's finish-line blunder is lasting much longer.

Callers swamped ABC with complaints when the network failed to show the winner, Ibrahim Hussein of Kenya, crossing the finish line Nov. 1. Some even accused ABC of racism because Hussein was the first black to win the race.

ABC said the mistake was the result of "plain human error," a cameraman's failure to focus on the right runner. But this week, the head of the union that represents the network's cameramen came up with a different explanation.

James Nolan, president of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians, accused ABC of using the cameraman as a scapegoat. He said a shot of Hussein crossing the finish line was available to director Larry Kamm, but he was looking at the wrong monitor.

"They'll never admit, though," Nolan said. "Everything that goes wrong is always the cameraman's fault. It's never the producer or director."

Kamm wouldn't discuss the incident, saying "enough has been said already." But a source at ABC said the gaffe wasn't his fault.

"Two cameramen were assigned to shoot the winner, and they both missed him," the source said.

Luckily for ABC, not many people saw the finish. The telecast received a 2.8 rating, lowest in the seven years ABC has shown the race.

ABC's late-night Winter Olympics show may be subtitled "All In The Family."

There's speculation that Frank Gifford and his wife, Kathie Lee, will co-host the nightly shows from Calgary. ABC announced Wednesday that Gifford would be the host, but refused to say whether Kathie Lee would play a role in the telecasts.

Mrs. Gifford is co-host of the "Morning Show" in New York. The program, which is shown on the city's ABC-owned station, will be nationally syndicated next fall.

Other Winter Olympics assignments are: Jim McKay, principal anchor and figure skating; Al Michaels, hockey; and Keith Jackson, weekend daytime host and short-track speed skating.

When Marvellous Marvin Hagler was fighting regularly on Home Box

Office, he used to joke that HBO stood for Hagler Box Office. In recent years, there have been similar jokes about heavyweight champion Mike Tyson's frequent appearances on the pay cable network.

HBO's next fight doesn't feature Hagler or Tyson, but it should be one of the best bouts of the year.

On Nov. 21, World Boxing Association lightweight champion Edwin Rosario defends his title against former World Boxing Council super featherweight champion Julio Cesar Chavez. Rosario is 26-2 with 22 knockouts. Chavez is unbeaten in 52 fights.

"This fight has been two years in the making, but it's been worth waiting for," Seth Abraham, head of HBO Sports, said.

Abraham also said HBO is close to signing a new multi-fight deal with Tyson. Tyson's current HBO contract ends with his Jan. 22 defense against former champion Larry Holmes.

Abraham said Tim Witherpoon, Frank Bruno, Carl "The Truth" Williams and Evander Holyfield are being considered as opponents for Tyson.

Bean Singing Blues About 1987 Season

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — Andy Bean could only sigh when asked about his 1987 season on the PGA Tour.

"It's been a bummer," the big, red-haired guy finally said.

"It's been frustrating sitting at home, watching the other guys play," said Bean, who "messed up an elbow" early this year and has played only sparingly for six months.

"I didn't even go fishing," Bean said. "And when I don't go fishing, you know something's got to be wrong."

Bean, however, took a major step on Wednesday toward putting a positive finish to his worst season in a decade.

He birdied the final hole to complete a bogey-free 6-under-par 66 that left him one shot back of leader Sandy Lyle after one round of the $600,000 Kapalua International, an unofficial event sanctioned by the PGA Tour that offers a $150,000 first prize. British Open champion Nick Faldo of England had a chance to tie Bean for second when darkness ended his round on Wednesday.

Faldo was facing a putt of about seven feet on the 18th green when play was suspended. He was to return today with a chance to complete a round of 66.

"The arm is coming around," Bean said. "I was playing good. The game is getting to be fun again. I'm having a good time again."

Bean, the defending champion of this tournament, has cashed only two checks since the Masters in April. He finished the official season with earnings of only $73,625, his poorest showing since his rookie year of 1976.

"It's the kind of year you just want to forget about," he said.

"But there's two months left," Bean added. "I've just got to make the most of it, make a lot of money in the next two months."

Lyle, a former British Open champion and the 1984 Kapalua winner with a record score of 266, continued his impressive play here. He birdied each of the par-5's despite precipitation ranging from drizzle to shower, didn't have a "5" on his card and was never in danger of making a bogey.

"It's nice when it all comes together," Lyle said.

Rose, Conley...

Murphy has 146 carries for 833 yards and 11 touchdowns, while fullback Anthony Henry has 107 carries for 1,171 yards and 13 touchdowns. He averages 10.9 yards a play.

"He breaks a lot of runs because people key up to stop Murphy," Williams said.

"They will be a challenge for us to stop. We'll have to rush them, change up our coverages and try and top their running game. And we'll have to score some points to win."

Conley vs. Tarboro

Craft says that Tarboro's winning the Tar-Roanoke says a lot for them. "They are a very good football team and unbeaten in their conference."

Tarboro posted an 8-2 record overall, losing only to 4-A Rocky Mount and unbeaten and top-ranked 3-A power Havelock.

"They are a power-oriented ball control team. They play hard defense and pin your ears back when they tackle. They don't have any one area that stands out so you can key on it. They are a very diversified team," Craft said.

"They don't do a lot of throwing, but they are capable of putting it up just when you don't expect it."

The top runner on the team is tailback/halfback Elroy Cofield. He plays the tailback position when Tarboro lines up in the power I and halfback when they go to the full house T.

Antonio Harris, the fullback, is the Vikings' second leading rusher, with Glen Hart at quarterback.

Key linemen include guards Mark Jones and Gary Wilson.

"Size-wise, they are a little bigger than we are, but there is not a tremendous difference," Craft said. "But they are nothing like East Carteret. They are strong and fairly quick, but they are not as quick as some of the former Tarboro teams. Their speed does concern me, however, even though we may be a shade quicker."

Top defensive players include linebackers David Hudson and Harris, and Cofield at the corner.

"They run a 4-4 defense, although they do multiple it up at times," Craft said.

"Our kids are very positive about the game and they feel good about themselves, so they have to feel like we have a chance. We've gotten there, now let's see what we can do with it."

Craft said that with the success, he hopes the Vikings have not set their goals to low.

"Our goal all year was to get to the party, now it depends on how well we dance," he said.

Lady Bucs Host CAA Volleyball

By STEVE WEAVER
Special To The Reflector

William and Mary enters the 1987 Colonial Athletic Association volleyball championship tournament Friday and Saturday in Minges Coliseum as the favorite to win its third consecutive title.

The Lady Tribe open play Friday at 11 a.m. against UNC-Wilmington, followed by UNC-Wilmington against host East Carolina at 1:30 p.m. ECU then takes on William and Mary at 4 p.m. in poll 'A' competition.

The other league schools, constituting pool 'B', have James Madison taking on George Mason at 11 a.m. George Mason then takes on American at 1:30 p.m. followed by American playing James Madison in the final match of the day at 4 p.m.

Saturday will see the top team from pool A playing against the second finisher from pool B and the best of pool B taking on the runnerup in pool A with both matches starting at 11 a.m. Semifinal and final matches are scheduled for 1:30 and 4 p.m., respectively.

The seeding of the teams was based on regular season play in which all CAA teams played a single round robin. William and Mary went 5-0 and thus is the top seed in pool A. JMU, runnerup to the Lady Tribe in the regular season at 4-1, is the top seed in pool B. UNCW (3-2) is seeded second in pool A with ECU third. GMU is seeded second in pool B with American third.

William and Mary, coached by Debbie Hill, enters the tournament with a 18-7 record and an All-America candidate in outside hitter Heidi Erpelding, who posted impressive numbers in almost every statistical category this year. JMU was the only CAA team that came close to beating the Lady Tribe during the regular season.

One of JMU's six regular season losses was to William and Mary, but the Lady Dukes won 30 matches, more than any team in CAA history, this season. JMU, coached by former ECU volleyball coach (1981-83) Lynn Davidson, enters the tournament as perhaps one of the hottest teams, having won 11 consecutive matches and 33-35 games during that stretch. JMU ended the regular season with a victory in its own invitational tournament.

UNCW posted its best record in recent years, winning 21 and losing nine. The Lady Seahawks, coached by Kathy McDaniel, opened the 1987 season with five straight match wins, including 15 consecutive games during that stretch.

GMU, 12-22 during the regular season, ran up some impressive statistical numbers during the year and must be considered a darkhorse to unseat William and Mary. The Lady Patriots are led by freshman hitter Kim Jones and freshman setter Maribeth Masica. Coach Pat Kendrick has one of the youngest teams in the league with nine of her players listed as underclassmen.

American was inconsistent during the regular season, winning against only ECU and posting a 1-4 league mark. Like GMU, the Lady Eagles have a young team with the roster of entirely freshman and sophomores.

ECU was 8-6 at one point in the October but the Lady Pirates slumped badly and won only one of their last five matches. ECU enters the tourney with a five-match, 15-game losing streak. Injuries have affected ECU and fifth-year head coach Imogene Turner, as senior Kris McKay, one of the areas' better middle hitters, is hobbled by a bad ankle and may not be at full strength for the tournament. ECU has never won a CAA tournament match and is 0-4 in the event over the past two years.

Batteries today tend to be trouble-free if they receive reasonable care. There is one common area for battery failure and that is failure to add water when needed.

Water is the lifeblood of your battery. Without an adequate supply of water, the chemical reaction within the battery will be impaired. Check the water level once a week in the hot weather and at least once a month in cold weather.

Rec And Parks Earns An Award

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department has been selected as the Member Organization of the Year by the North Carolina Tennis Association.

The award was presented at the NCTA's annual convention.

Greenville was chosen for its River Birch Tennis Center program along with its service to tennis in Eastern North Carolina and the entire state. This past summer, Greenville hosted the N.C. VSTA/Volvo State Championships with 700 participants, the largest tennis event in North Carolina.

The department also coordinates the Downeast Adult and Junior Leagues, comprising 30 teams from eight surrounding cities.

The department also sponsors a junior boys and girls tennis team along with numerous other programs.

Receiving the award were GRPD director Boyd Lee, Recreation Commission chairman Carl Wille, and tennis supervisor Henry Hostetler.

Hostetler also received the President's Award from the N.C. Association of Professionals. Hostetler is a past board member of the NCTA and is currently secretary of the NCATP and is in charge of publishing that organization's newsletter.

ECU-Czech Game Ticket Prices Set

Ticket prices for the East Carolina-Czechoslovakian Nationals exhibition basketball game Tuesday Nov. 17 will be $5 for adults and $3 for children 12 and under, ECU ticket manager Brenda Edwards announced.

There will be no reserve seating, it will all be general admission. The doors will open at 6:30 p.m. with tip-off set for 7:30 p.m.

The game will be the Pirates' first exhibition of the year under new head coach Mike Steele. The Pirates open the regular season Nov. 28 at home against Longwood.

Davis Providing Unexpected Scoring

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Norris Davis has provided an unexpected scoring punch for North Carolina this season — unexpected because Davis is a defensive back.

He has scored five touchdowns, and in a variety of ways.

- Against Illinois on Sept. 5, Davis scored on a 19-yard pass interception return.
- On Sept. 26, Davis returned a mid-air fumble 27 yards for a score against Navy.
- The next weekend, facing Auburn at home, Davis picked up a blocked punt and ran it in from 6 yards out.
- On Oct. 17, he recovered a fumbled punt snap in the end zone against N.C. State.
- In a victory over Maryland, Davis scored when he blocked a punt, picked it up and ran 26 yards against Maryland.

"Hopefully, he's got some more in him," said Davis' secondary coach Dean Campbell. "I told him, 'Hey, start to expect those things to happen.' But it's hard to plan those things."

Davis also has blocked another punt on which he didn't score, intercepted a pass, recorded three tackles for losses, recovered three fumbles and been in on 60 tackles. And he still has two games left in the season.

The NCAA has no record for the most touchdowns by a defensive or special-teams player. But the records for touchdowns on blocked punts and interceptions each are three.

"Norris has been in the right place at the right time with regularity," head coach Dick Crum said. "But, he is just an amazing player the way he arrives where the ball is."

His efforts have stirred talk about a Heisman Trophy for the senior — an unlikely possibility, but no less unlikely that Davis' performance. No strictly defensive player has ever won the award given to college football's outstanding player. Two-way ends Larry Kelley of Yale and Leon Hart of Notre Dame won it in 1936 and 1949, respectively. Defensive end Hugh Green of Pitt was second to South Carolina running back George Rogers in 1980, two-way tackle Alex Karras of Iowa finished second to Texas A&M running back John David Crow in 1957 and Oklahoma center-linebacker Kurt Burris finished second to Wisconsin fullback Alan Ameche in 1954. Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth was fourth last year.

"We certainly think he should be an All-American candidate," said Rick Brewer, North Carolina's sports information director.

"The attention he's attracted (by scoring all the touchdowns) has gotten him some national exposure."

Davis is big by defensive back standards. He is 6-foot-1, 210 pounds, and the Reston, Va., native said he uses every bit of his size, strength and quickness to gain an advantage. He has been clocked at 4.43 seconds in the 40-yard dash.

"My first blocked punt was in the Aloha Bowl and I got the feel for it," Davis said last week. "Now I go for it every chance I get."

Davis said he has had to adjust to all the attention he has received from his teammates and the media. And his exploits already have had their reward.

"I bet (linebacker) Brett Rudolph after I scored the Navy game ... I bet him (a steak dinner) that I would score again," Davis said. "And he put his hand out and we shook. We forgot all about it until I scored again. Then I brought it up to him and he was shocked."

"We are extremely pleased that these three young men have selected to continue their education and basketball careers at Wake Forest," Staak said in a prepared statement. "We feel that we have three of the premier players in North and South Carolina and that each will fit in very nicely with our program next season."

King was impressed by the intimacy of the Wake Forest campus and the education that the school offered, according to Hobpton High School coach Kenny Bass. King had been recruited by North Carolina, North Carolina State and Duke, and it was reported that the Tar Heels had hoped to persuade King to make his decision in the spring.

"Kenny told me that of all the official visits that he took, that he felt the most comfortable with all of the players at Wake Forest," Bass said. "He said he really felt at home there."

Although he played point guard for his high school team, King is expected to be a small forward at Wake Forest.

"If he works hard and continues to improve, I think he can be an impact player at Wake Forest," Bass said.

Laettner chose Duke over Virginia and North Carolina, the other two schools he has been considering since the summer. He announced at a news conference at the private Nichols School that he had signed a letter of intent to play for Coach Mike Krzyzewski.

"I felt I would fit in well at Duke," said Laettner. "It's small and intimate like Nichols. When I think about the basketball situation, their style is similar to mine. They play a motion offense. They play intense defense and you have to play many positions at once."

King, a 6-foot-8 forward from Newton Grove, N.C., and Phil Medlin, a 6-8 frontcourt player from Pitt County's D.H. Conley, have committed to Wake Forest, two of four high school seniors to take advantage of the early basketball signing period and join Atlantic Coast Conference schools Wednesday.

At least nine prep players have ended speculation and committed to one of the eight ACC schools under the NCAA rule which gives seniors one week each fall to make their commitments. That week started Wednesday, and if no decision is made within that period, seniors must wait until April.

Wake Forest Coach Bob Staak also announced Wednesday that 5-11 Derrick McQueen of Darlington, S.C., St. John's had also signed a letter of intent.

Also announcing their commitments Wednesday were 6-11 Christian Laettner, who signed with Duke, 6-6 Bryant Stith, who chose Virginia, and 6-4 David Young, who picked Clemson.

King, a first-team selection on the Associated Press all-star team last season, averaged 23.3 points and 13.1 rebounds for Hobpton, which was 23-5 last year. King was the lone junior on that all-star team. He announced his official decision on Tuesday.

Clemson Close To Crown Again

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Ninth-ranked Clemson stands on the threshold of its second straight Atlantic Coast Conference football title and the fourth this decade, needing only a victory over Maryland this weekend to clinch the crown.

Coach Danny Ford celebrated league titles in 1981 and 1982. His reign was interrupted by a three-year Maryland run between 1983 and 1985. Clemson returned to the top last season with a 5-1-1 mark, holding off North Carolina and North Carolina State.

This season, the Tigers were everyone's pick to win the championship, but only after the 13-10 victory over North Carolina on Saturday could the Tigers consider their most serious challenge repelled.

What remains is Saturday's battle at Death Valley, which not only has league implications, but can determine just which post-season bowl game Ford and his team will attend. For the moment, his attention must be focused on the Terrapins, who have not lost to Clemson since 1983.

"Maryland's a top-flight football team in our opinion. Maybe, or probably, the best football team personnel-wise and play-wise that we've played all year," Ford said. "They've had a few problems record-wise, but the tight ends and receivers are by far the best that we've played all year, probably the best in the country as far as all three positions are concerned. We have great respect for what they do offensively."

Maryland Coach Joe Krivak's team is 3-2 in the league, and it now has the role of spoiler. But first, Krivak must determine who will be his starting quarterback.

"I'm not going to tell you guys," Krivak told reporters earlier this week. "I'm going to keep everyone in suspense until Saturday."

The Terrapins have switched between sophomore Neil O'Donnell and senior Dan Henning, neither of whom has been consistently effective in 1987.

For the rest of the league, North Carolina is at Virginia and Duke hosts North Carolina State. Wake Forest is at home to meet 14th-ranked South Carolina.

The Tar Heels dropped another big game last weekend, and before Coach Dick Crum could turn his thoughts to the Cavaliers, he had to contend with reporters asking if he thinks his job is on the line because he failed to get the big victory.

"I'm going to be back here," Crum emphatically stated at Tuesday's news conference. He also responded to charges that the Clemson loss might have had an effect on his job status.

"I don't think so. You guys think so. The reason people get to thinking it is because you guys write it," Crum responded.

North Carolina, Maryland, Virginia and N.C. State all are 3-2 in the ACC. The Cavaliers are fighting for a chance at a winning season and a victory would give Coach George Welsh his fourth winning season in six years in Charlottesville. In the meantime, Welsh is looking for four quarters of consistent effort from his players.

"At times we're good, at times we're not," Welsh said. "... The last quarter and a half against Georgia Tech, we played well defensively, and our kicking game has gotten better in the last couple of weeks. But we're still inconsistent."

Duke also is looking for a winning season, and it needs a victory over the Wolfpack to keep its chances afloat. Just last week, some Blue Devils were talking bowl bid.

"We're certainly not a great team, but we've been good enough to put ourselves in position to win all these games," Duke Coach Steve Spurrier said. "I feel that we're very close to being competitive in this league, maybe two or three players away."

N.C. State will have to rely on Shane Montgomery at quarterback because of a knee injury to Preston Poag. Montgomery couldn't get the offense moving in N.C. State's first three losses and gave way to Poag.

"Obviously, it hurts us to lose Preston, but Shane is capable of doing the job," Wolfpack Coach Dick Sheridan said. "If we start getting the job done, it probably won't be because of the presence or absence of any one individual."

Wake Forest is thinking bowl, but it has to get through the Gamecocks to remain a candidate.

"... The big difference in this football team is its defense," Demon Deacon first-year coach Bill Dooley said of South Carolina. "I think their defense has done an outstanding job — they have given up only three rushing touchdowns while ... scoring 20. They are probably better than they are ranked, so we will have quite a challenge."

Hoosier Title Hopes Facing Fan Apathy

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana's football team plays its biggest game in 20 years on Saturday and the big concern on campus is seat location for the upcoming basketball season.

A victory at Michigan State and another the following week against Purdue would earn 15th-ranked Indiana its first Rose Bowl trip since 1967.

As the Hoosiers prepared for their Big Ten Conference showdown with No. 13 Michigan State, thousands of students stood in line for more than an hour on Wednesday for the tickets that would tell them where they would be seated for six of Indiana's basketball games.

With the exception of a few signs encouraging the Hoosiers to "Spear the Spartans," there was little indication of Rose Bowl euphoria visible on campus.

"That bothers me. I don't think they're excited," senior flanker Ernie Jones said. "I don't think they really know how good a team we can be, or we are. I think over the years they've looked at Indiana as a basketball school.

"But we've got a football program, too."

Students say decades of losing football produced apathy.

"People from Indiana aren't used to it," said Jim Bowling, a freshman from Lancaster, Ohio, who was among those picking up basketball tickets. "There's no football tradition here. I'm from Ohio and I know what enthusiasm is for football. Give it time here and the same thing will happen here."

"There's a lot of excitement around here for football but winning IU basketball has been around for a lot longer," said Kris Hiland, a sophomore from Clayton, Ind. "I guess students are waiting to see what happens Saturday before they think about the Rose Bowl. And the fact that the game is away probably helps keep the enthusiasm down."

Sleepy On Another Roll

By BILL BARNARD AP Basketball Writer

When Sleepy Floyd gets on a roll, it can be a nightmare for the opposition.

Last May 10, Floyd set NBA playoff records with 29 points in a quarter and 39 in a half en route to 51 points against the Los Angeles Lakers. He wasn't quite that hot Wednesday night, but his 20 points in the third period and 37 for the game were plenty as Golden State rolled to a 130-115 victory over Phoenix.

"When Sleepy gets going like that, we just get out of his way and let him work," said Warriors forward Ben McDonald, who had 13 points and 14 rebounds.

Golden State led 66-59 at halftime, but the Warriors extended the margin to 104-85 after three quarters thanks to Floyd's outburst.

"We just couldn't shut him down." Phoenix Coach John Wetzel said.

Floyd, who also had 12 assists, is averaging 28.8 points and eight assists through four games, but the victory over the Suns was Golden State's first.

"I hope I don't have to work this hard everytime we win a game," Floyd said. "But if that's what it takes, that's what it takes."

In other NBA games, it was Boston 120, Indiana 106; Chicago 105, New Jersey 96; Atlanta 94, New York 93; Utah 121, Dallas 92, and Milwaukee 109, Cleveland 101. The Philadelphia-Washington game at Landover, Md., was postponed because of snow.

Chris Mullin scored 26 points for the Warriors, while the Suns, who won their first game when they beat Golden State 123-109 in Phoenix on Tuesday, were led by James Edwards with 26 points and 12 rebounds and Walter Davis with 21 points.

Edwards and Davis scored eight points apiece as the Suns led 34-29 after one quarter, but the Warriors went ahead for good on a basket by McDonald that made it 39-38 in the second period.

The absence of starting forwards Larry Nance and Armon Gilliam, both of whom are out with injuries, played a key role in Golden State's ability to out-rebound the Suns 60-43.

"We have to play hard throughout the game and play smart," Wetzel said. "We didn't do that tonight. We allowed circumstances like the crowd and the Warriors to get us out of our game."

Celtics 120, Pacers 106 Boston beat Indiana for the 22nd consecutive time at Boston Garden as Larry Bird had 42 points and 20 rebounds.

Bird and Fred Roberts scored 10 points apiece in the third period as the Celtics opened a 94-83 lead. The Pacers got as close as seven points by making the first two baskets of the fourth quarter, but Bird scored nine points during an 11-2 spurt that built the margin to 105-89 with 8 1/2 minutes left.

John Long had 26 points and Reggie Miller 24 for Indiana, but Chuck Person, last season's rookie of the year, managed only six. Robert Parish added 24 points for the Celtics.

Bucks 109, Cavaliers 101 Jack Sikma scored 26 points for Milwaukee, and his two free throws and two rebounds stifled a Cleveland rally in the fourth quarter.

The Cavaliers scored seven consecutive points to cut an 88-78 Bucks lead to three before Sikma's foul shots with 7:17 left. He then rebounded Cleveland's next two shots, and the Cavaliers got no closer than four points the rest of the way.

Brad Daugherty led Cleveland with 24 points.

Bulls 105, Nets 96 Chicago won its third straight game as Michael Jordan scored 31 points at New Jersey, including 13 of the Bulls' first 15 in the fourth quarter.

Jordan sparked a 15-10 spurt at the start of the final period, giving the Bulls a 95-80 lead with 4:52 left. The Nets had gotten as close as four points in the third quarter after a 20-7 spurt by the Bulls gave them a 34-23 lead after one period.

Charles Oakley had 15 points and 12 rebounds for Chicago, and Ben Coleman and Dallas Comegys led New Jersey with 14 points each.

Hawks 94, Knicks 93 Atlanta handed New York its fourth consecutive loss as Dominique Wilkins scored 33 points and Spud Webb hit a tiebreaking jumper with 24 seconds left.

After Webb's shot broke an 88-88 tie, the Hawks hit four straight free throws in the final nine seconds, off-setting a basket by Sidney Green and a buzzer-beating 3-point goal by Mark Jackson.

Patrick Ewing had 26 points and 11 rebounds for the Knicks, who kept close throughout despite hitting 29.2 percent of their shots in the first half and 39.1 percent for the game.

Jazz 121, Mavericks 92 Utah, which lost to the Los Angeles Clippers on Tuesday, came back strong against Dallas as Karl Malone had 32 points and 10 rebounds.

Malone, who was 13-for-17 from the field, scored 22 points in the first half as the Jazz took a 53-39 lead. A 25-13 spurt in the first quarter put them ahead to stay.

Mark Aguirre led the Mavericks with 21 points, but Utah held high-scoring guard Rolando Blackman to 11.

Soviet Paper Chronicles Abuses In Way Psychiatrists Operate

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Arbitrary diagnosis, abuse of power and bribery have tainted Soviet psychiatry, and a citizen can be found insane simply for not kowtowing to employers, a Soviet daily said in a stunning expose.

"Psychiatric science and practice have long ago been shut off from openness by a high and solid fence," the Komsomolskaya Pravda newspaper said Wednesday. "Behind the fence, there is lawlessness," it added.

The paper's six-column article was the longest on psychiatric abuses to appear in the state-run press yet, and was clearly linked to the current campaign for "glasnost," or greater openness on social problems.

Due to the arbitrary way Soviet patients are now diagnosed, the paper said, "the same person can be recognized as a schizophrenic in Moscow, a psychopath in Leningrad and healthy in Khar'kov."

Although Komsomolskaya Pravda's article was groundbreaking by Soviet standards, it made no reference to charges by human rights activists and Western groups that psychiatric hospitals are used to warehouse political prisoners.

In the past, some of the most serious charges of abuse of psychiatry in the Soviet Union were leveled by psychiatrist Anatoly Koryagin, 48, who was sentenced to a labor camp in 1981 for his accusations. He was released last February and allowed to emigrate to Switzerland.

On Oct. 29, Koryagin addressed the Royal College of Psychiatrists in London and said the Soviet Union withdrew from the World Psychiatric Association in 1983 to avoid the humiliation of being suspended or expelled for using the science against political prisoners.

Vladimir Titov, a former political prisoner, was released from a psychiatric hospital last month. He told reporters Oct. 20 that at least a dozen hospitals throughout the country hold people convicted of political offenses.

Prisoners in such hospitals are subjected to heavy medication, poor food and unhealthy living conditions, Titov said.

Komsomolskaya Pravda said a 20-year-old Leningrad resident, Marina Pristavka, was forced into a mental hospital by the management of the factory where she worked, with the help of corrupt doctors.

Ms. Pristavka was condemned for her efforts to work honestly and her criticism of management for its indifference to the needs of workers, the paper said.

"She reads too much Marxist-Leninist literature," her trade union boss, Vladimir A. Kozlov, was quoted as saying.

According to Komsomolskaya Pravda, two schools of Soviet psychiatry exist, with the Leningrad school founded by Professor I.F. Slucevsky giving a narrower definition of schizophrenia than the Moscow school.

In its 1985 "Psychiatrist's Handbook," the Moscow school lists so many symptoms of that illness, including an interest in philosophy, art and religion, that virtually any sane person can be found to have "creeping schizophrenia," the paper said.

It said a young aviator who disagreed with his bosses was subjected to 2½ years of psychiatric care that resulted in various diagnoses, including schizophrenia.

El Salvador Frees 150 More Prisoners

MARIONA, El Salvador (AP) — Chanting defiant slogans, 139 men were freed from prison in this capital suburb under an amnesty for political prisoners.

In the suburb of Ilopango, the doors to a women's prison opened for 11 women also freed under the amnesty, part of a regional peace plan signed Aug. 7 by five Central American presidents.

Wednesday's releases brought to 446 the number of political prisoners freed in El Salvador since its amnesty program began last Friday.

Among other countries included in the plan, the number is likely to be exceeded only in Nicaragua, where President Daniel Ortega has recommended that 981 prisoners be freed.

Salvadoran human rights groups and labor unions said the inmates belonged to a committee affiliated with the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, an alliance of five rebel armies.

The front has been fighting since October 1979 to topple the U.S.-financed government of El Salvador. Church and human rights groups say nearly 65,000 people, most of them civilians, have been killed in the war.

The male ex-prisoners walked single file out of the Mariona prison, chanting slogans, then broke ranks to greet waiting relatives, children and supporters. People yelled, "The people united shall never be defeated."

Some of the ex-prisoners, many demanding anonymity for safety reasons, said they worried they might now face reprisals from security forces.

"I'm happy. I've finally got my freedom back, but I think the repression will increase with our exit," said Jose Riquelme Melendez, who said he had been jailed since November 1980.

Riquelme would not talk about his immediate future. He said that when he was captured he had been fighting with the National Resistance Armed Forces, one of the rebel armies.

Ortega Says Reagan Violating Peace Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega is accusing the Reagan administration of undercutting the Central American peace agreement by flying surface-to-air missiles and other equipment to the Contra rebels.

Ortega said Wednesday that there have been 140 U.S.-sponsored flights to Contra forces inside Nicaragua since the peace agreement was signed by five Central American presidents in August.

U.S. spy flights over Nicaragua are continuing, he said, adding that the intelligence information is passed on to the CIA for use by the Contras.

The Nicaraguan leader, addressing the General Assembly of the Organization of American States, pledged that his government will comply fully with the peace accord. Among the key provisions are an end to U.S. aid to the Contras and steps toward democracy in Nicaragua.

Ortega spoke for an hour before an overflow crowd that spilled into the corridors outside the main meeting room at OAS headquarters. Among his listeners were all six leaders of the Contra political leadership.

Adolfo Calero, the most senior of the Contra leaders, disputed Ortega's estimate of 140 supply flights, saying it was far below the actual total.

Ortega renewed his call for direct talks with the Reagan administration but the U.S. ambassador to the OAS, Richard McCormack, noted that President Reagan has placed strict conditions on diplomatic contacts with Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

In a speech to OAS delegates on Monday, Reagan had said substantive talks with Sandinista representatives can take place only if other Central American leaders are present and if Nicaragua makes a serious effort to negotiate a ceasefire with the Contras. Those talks are expected to begin soon.

Ortega often makes public appearances in combat fatigues but wore a conservative gray suit during his visit to OAS headquarters. He is making his first visit to Washington since he was received by President Carter in the Oval Office just two months after the Sandinista revolution in 1979.

He was ushered to the podium by Ana O'Brian, the OAS chief of protocol who was Washington lobbyist in the late 1970s for dictator Anastasio Somoza's government, the one Ortega and his Sandinista allies overthrew eight years ago.

"Nicaragua is ready to comply 100 percent with the agreement," Ortega said, rebutting a statement by President Reagan on Monday that Nicaragua is "nowhere near" meeting its obligations.

But he said that on two key elements of the peace plan — a total amnesty for political prisoners and a lifting of the state of emergency — Nicaragua would comply only when an international observer team verifies that outside support for the rebels has ceased.

The peace agreement was signed by Nicaragua and four Central American neighbors — Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica.

U.S. Says CIA Not Involved In Fiji Coup

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The U.S. Consulate today accused two publications in Australia and one in New Zealand of waging a disinformation campaign by alleging CIA involvement in Fiji's May 14 coup.

In a five-page statement, the consulate accused the publications of printing "no more than an illogical web of fabrications, half-truths, facts taken out of context and unfounded allegations."

Asked about the statement, a consulate official who spoke on condition of anonymity said the denial was issued because allegations of CIA involvement "keep popping up" six months after the coup in Fiji, an island nation in the South Pacific 2,000 miles northeast of Sydney.

The statement accused the Sydney Morning Herald, a leading Australian daily; the authoritative Sydney-based Pacific Islands Monthly; and the New Zealand newsletter Wellington Confidential of engaging in a "widespread disinformation effort."

The statement reiterated Washington's condemnation of the coup, and described as "excellent" the United States' relationship with the government of Timoci Bavadra, who was ousted as prime minister.

It rejected specific media allegations, including a claim that the U.S. aid director in the Fiji capital of Suva, William Paupe, worked for the CIA.

Egypt Returns To Fold As Arab League Relents

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer
AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Egypt, shunned by most of the rest of the Arab world for more than eight years for making peace with Israel, is returning to the fold.
Many leaders of the Arab world threw the door open to Egypt at a four-day summit in Amman by ending Egypt's diplomatic banishment.
It may have been the back door, but the decision of the Arab League summit on Wednesday to allow individual states to restore relations with Cairo marked a significant step toward Egypt's rehabilitation.
A handful of hardline Arab states, including Syria and Libya, blocked an attempt by moderate leaders to readmit Egypt to the Arab League.
But the ice was broken.
Before the conference had ended, several gulf states, including Iraq, Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar, said they will restore relations with Cairo. Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are sure to follow, an Arab diplomat in Cairo said on condition of anonymity on Wednesday.
Egypt's membership was suspended after it put out peace feelers to Israel, then signed a historic peace treaty in March 1979, the only one between an Arab country and the Jewish state.

Ironically, one of the prime movers to patch things up with Egypt, the Arab world's most populous and military powerful state, was Iraq, which hosted the summit that booted Egypt out.
Kuwait's al-Anbaa daily said the summit was "a turning point in joint Arab action."
"The Amman summit has apparently succeeded in laying down a new strategy of Arab action and the establishment of quiet and tension-free relations among Arab states," it said.

Egypt has been quietly rebuilding its links for several years. But the Iran-Iraq war, and growing Arab alarm that it will spread, drove gulf states to turn to Egypt as a friend with powerful arms to sell.
Iran and Iraq both are Moslem countries, but Iraq is Arab and Iran is Persian. They have been fighting since September 1980.
The conference indirectly repeated Arabs' rejection of the solo path Egypt took to peace with Israel, insisting peace talks could only occur with all parties to the conflict present.
But the summit's final communique clearly reflected a belief that the Arabs would be stronger with Egypt in their corner.

It said the Arab leaders were "firmly convinced that Arab national security can only complete its elements, conditions and requirements through total solidarity," and spoke of "shared conceptions of the dangers threatening the Arab existence and future."
Egypt, with a population of 50 million, is the only Arab country with the manpower to match Iran, which has about 55 million people.
It also has a modern, American-equipped army of 450,000 men, and it has shipped arsenals of arms to Iraq since the gulf war began. Some estimates put the total as high as $2 billion worth of hardware.

The Egyptians are not likely to send their army into the gulf in the aftermath of the Amman summit. But they are expected to play a bigger military role in helping countries like Kuwait defend themselves from Iran attack.
While the gulf looks toward Egypt for tacit support, Egypt, deep in debt, is looking to the oil-rich gulf to help feed its masses.
Published reports say Kuwait and Saudi Arabia have transferred more than $200 million to Egypt over the last year to help it meet debt payments.
Egypt was the political and cultural center of the Arab world in the 1950s and 1960s under the radical Arab nationalist Gamal Abdel Nasser, who still is revered throughout the region.

His successor, Anwar Sadat, is widely regarded as a traitor outside of Egypt for his treaty with Israel.
President Hosni Mubarak, who came to power after Sadat's assassination in 1981, has moved Egypt gradually back toward the Arab mainstream, keeping relations with Israel on proper but often chilly terms.
Mubarak repeatedly has expressed concern over Iranian threats to the gulf states and over the danger that the war could spread to their countries.

Iran Rejects Arabs' Call To Stop War

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran's prime minister today rejected an Arab League call for a cease-fire and vowed that the war against Iraq would go on until "the complete suppression of the aggressor," an official report said.
Iraq said its planes attacked another ship in the Persian Gulf off Iran, the sixth vessel Iraq has claimed to have attacked this week. Shipping sources confirmed that one tanker was hit Wednesday night.
Iraq's state-controlled newspapers, meanwhile, termed the Arab League summit in Amman, Jordan, "historic, successful and great."
The summit, called to seek concerted Arab action against Persian Iran to end the 7-year-old gulf war, concluded with unexpected unity and a strong condemnation of Tehran's "intransigence, provocations and threats."
Prime Minister Hussein Musavi of Iran was quoted by the Islamic Republic News Agency as claiming that decisions made at the four-day meeting, which ended Wednesday, were dictated by the United States. He termed the meeting a defeat for Arabs.
Iran is a Moslem nation, but not Arab. Iranians are Persians.
Iran's foreign ministry declared in a statement that the summit's support for Iraq was "in line with the aggressive policies of the U.S.A. and Iran will give a suitable response to the threats of the American government and its dependents in the region."

Libya also accused the United States of interfering.
The second ranking Libyan official, Staff Maj. Abdulsalam Jalloud, was quoted by the Libyan news agency JANA as saying that all resolutions at the summit "were passed by Washington beforehand."
The Arab leaders, including Syrian President Hafez Assad, Iran's main Arab ally, lined up behind Iraq and called for international action against Iran.
In the first official Iranian comment on the summit, IRNA reported that Musavi said the "Iraqi-imposed war will be continued until the complete suppression of the aggressor." The IRNA report was monitored in Cyprus.
Musavi was quoted as saying that economic sanctions against Iran "cannot have the least effect" on Tehran's conditions for ending the war.

The Iranians have listed these as branding Iraq the aggressor, the ouster of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and massive war reparations.
IRNA quoted Musavi as denouncing the summit's move to allow Arab states to restore links with Egypt, which has been shunned by most Arab countries since it signed a peace treaty with Israel in 1979.

By permitting the restoration of relations with "the traitor regime of Egypt," the summit "has in fact backed the Zionist regime," Musavi said.

Punk Rock Ramones Will Perform Friday

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Clad in black leather jackets and ripped, faded blue jeans, rock 'n' roll's proverbial bad boys are bringing their unique brand of "blitzkrieg pop" to Greenville.

The Ramones, one of the few original, punk-rock bands still touring, will be performing at The Attic Friday night as part of a tour promoting their latest album.

"Halfway to Sanity," the band's 10th album, is a self-produced collection of 12 original songs.

"This is our strongest album yet, both in writing and execution," lead singer Joey Ramone said. "It was a total band effort and very exciting to do."

The Ramones are Joey, Johnny, Dee Dee and Marky Ramone. Although bandmembers share the same last name, they're not related. Ramone is merely a pseudonym, the idea originating from Paul McCartney's use of the fictitious name "Paul Ramone" during the early Silver Beatles days.

The quartet from Forest Park, N.Y., began playing together in the mid '70s. The Ramones each shared similar tastes in music, much different than the disco-pop which then dominated radio. The band played a straightforward expression of rock music: simple, three chord songs one or two minutes in length, and very loud.

They received initial notoriety playing at CBGB's, a New York City nightclub with good acoustics which catered to an avant-garde crowd accustomed to the likes of Lou Reed and Patti Smith.

The Ramones performed hard and the New York music-elite soon discovered the band through word of mouth. A record contract soon followed and in May of 1976, The Ramones' first record was released.

A tour of England soon followed and The Ramones received much attention.

"I remember playing Dingwall's in London," Joey said. "Christie Hynde was there working for the NME, and so were Joe Strummer, The Damned and Johnny Lydon. They all came backstage after the show and told me what an impact our concert had on them. Lydon invited me to see a rehearsal of a new band he had just put together. The Sex Pistols were only about two months old at that point, and you could see the similarities between our two groups."

The Ramones were the inspiration for a whole new sound and attitude of popular music, media writers quickly labeled "punk rock."

To most observers, the Ramones fell into that genre. Their street gang appearance, long black hair and loud music perfectly fit the punk image, although they rarely performed the angry political music associated with punk rock.

"We didn't want to sing political songs back in 1976," Joey said. "We ROCK BAND — The Ramones, who set a new trend in rock 'n' roll 13 years ago, will appear in Greenville Friday night at The Attic. The Ramones recently returned from a tour of Europe.

had enough of Watergate and Viet Nam; we just wanted to go out and have a good time."

In its nearly 13-year career, the band has released such hits as "Sheena is a Punk Rocker," "Pinhead," "I Wanna Be Sedated," and the title track from their successful 1979 movie, "Rock 'n' Roll High School."

In 1985 The Ramones became embroiled in controversy after recording "Bonzo Goes to Bitburg," a scathing commentary about President Reagan's decision to place a wreath in a cemetery containing the remains of Nazi soldiers.

Sire, the Ramones' record company, initially refused to release the recording in America. Fans in the U.S.A. were able to obtain the song on English imports.

Their new album has a song featuring an old acquaintance from the CBGB's days, Deborah Harry, former lead singer for the group Blondie.

"Chris Stein (Harry's husband) called me and asked if Debbie could do anything on the record," Joey said. "It was a lot of fun. It was also

Bowie Agrees To AIDS Test

DALLAS (AP) — Rock star David Bowie, accused of sexually assaulting a Dallas-area woman, has agreed to take an AIDS test if it doesn't interrupt his world tour, his attorney says.

The test to determine whether Bowie carries the virus that causes AIDS was requested last month by a 30-year-old University Park woman who said Bowie sexually assaulted her Oct. 9 in a Dallas hotel room and then told her he had just exposed her to the fatal disease.

State District Judge David Brooks had set a hearing for today to decide whether Bowie should be ordered to take the test. But the judge agreed to delay the hearing until Dec. 18 after a conference Wednesday with attorneys for the woman and Bowie.

The woman originally asked that Bowie be tested in Dallas. Bowie's attorney, James Linn, said his client does not object to taking the test in Australia, his latest stop on the tour, or elsewhere along the tour.

The woman's attorney, Robert Rose, said she will agree to a test elsewhere "as long as we know it's (Bowie) being tested, just to ensure the integrity and truthfulness of the test."

Pageant Gives Up Swimsuits

LONDON (AP) — The Miss World pageant is replacing swimsuits with leotards this year, but apart from a few droll jokes the pageant has sparked less than normal interest from the tabloid newspapers and the bookmakers.

The world's most beautiful women from 78 countries take center stage tonight at London's Royal Albert Hall, and oddsmakers are looking through their history books.

"I think it's one of the quietest years ever for betting," said Ronnie Vannan of Mecca bookmakers.

"It's virtually a non-event in betting terms," said Graham Sharpe of rival William Hill. "I would expect to get more money on a white Christmas (a rarity in London) than on Miss World this year."

In the past, the annual pageant has weathered sex controversies, feminists' bombs and never-substantiated allegations of rigging.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Nov. 13
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Get your priorities straight early in the day, and follow through with them. Friends, associates, and relatives will be all helpful today.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't become involved in an argument between a family friend and a stranger. It's none of your business who is at fault.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Plan a short, romantic trip for yourself and your mate. Be sure you cover all details of this, including the necessary wardrobe.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Running off on a pleasure-seeking tangent could ruin some fine chances you will have in business, so think first.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): That problem at home will work itself out, so concentrate on business. Be wary of reckless drivers on the highway today and tonight.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Postpone making any phone calls this morning. Focus your attention on your relationship to an associate which has been a little strained.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): A recreational activity need not be expensive to be relaxing and fun. Don't let anyone talk you into anything extravagant tonight.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You may feel discontent about current situations, but put your grumbles aside and work on promoting more harmony at home.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be succinct and accurate in conversations today. Beating around the bush will only cause misunderstandings and anger.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't permit anyone to set your pace today. You'll have a rare opportunity to build up your bank balance today, so be alert.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't get involved in any arguments which don't concern you. Go after your person goals which are easily attainable now.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): If you smile too much your face could stick that way, so give it a try. Your mate is in an irritating situation, and needs your help and support.

 How would you like to be declarer and know where every missing high card is located? Once in a while, you will come across a hand where the auction makes it look like you are playing with glass cards.

South's double of one no trump and subsequent jump in hearts created a forcing auction. North could do no more than rebid his suit, and a normal contract of four hearts was the result.

When dummy came down, declarer was faced with four possible losers—three in the black suits and a diamond unless the suit broke evenly. In his hand and dummy he could see 23 high-card points, and since East had shown at least 16 with his one no trump overall, the most West could have was one of the two minor-suit jacks. If diamonds were 4-2, as was likely, declarer would have to set up a spade trick to take care of his loser in that suit.

Two things were obvious: Leading a spade to either the king or jack would be futile, since East was marked with A-Q; and South would need every entry in dummy if he were going to collect a spade trick.

Therefore, declarer won the opening lead in hand and drew trumps in three rounds. Next came a spade to the nine. When that fetched the queen from East, the contract was safe. East tried three rounds of clubs. Declarer ruffed the third, crossed to the king of diamonds and led the king of spades from the table.

Had East not covered, declarer intended discarding a diamond. When East put up the ace, declarer ruffed, crossed to the ace of diamonds and sluffed his last diamond on the jack of spades. The deep finesse had brought home the contract.
