EPA Tabs N.C. Sounds For Estuarine Study

AURORA, N.C. (AP) — For centuries, the 2,000-square-mile Pamlico River and her smaller upcoast sister, the Albemarle Sound, have been generous, yielding $60 million worth of shrimp, crab and fish each year.

But fishermen say the sounds are drowning.

"Some people call it peaceful," said crabber Bill Mayo, 62. "But the thing is, it's a dead place."

Municipal wastes, farm runoff, industrial discharges, drained wetlands and perhaps overfishing upstream have sharply defined — and exceeded — the sounds' limits.

On the broad Pamlico River, one of the tributaries draining into the sound, bacterial contamination years ago closed the upriver oyster beds. Aquatic grasses that once nurtured wild ducks and young fish have disappeared. Shoals of shad no longer fill the gill nets and striped bass, once plentiful, appear to be going. Catches of most finfish have steadily dwindled since their peaks in about 1980.

More disturbing symptoms appeared in 1982, when ulcerous sores — large bites in their flesh — were found on flounder. By 1984, up to 80 percent of the menhaden, a nonfood fish, had the sores and many thousands died. The lesions are now of epidemic proportions, attacking most of the river's fish species.

Bayview fisherman Dallas Ormond is so appalled by what his nets haul up that he no longer eats his own catch.

Ormond reports "fish with their entrails hanging out, with the backbone sticking out, with one eye eaten away. If you saw it every day like I do, you wouldn't eat it either."

Because of the mounting alarm, and because similar scenarios have played out in estuaries nationwide, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Saturday named the Albemarle and Pamlico subjects of the EPA's first National Estuarine Program. The program was authorized in the Water Quality Act passed by Congress this year over President Reagan's veto.

Its major thrust will be a five-year investigation — the Albemarle-Pamlico Estuarine Study (APES) — into the stresses on the sounds and how to control them.

The study is based on a cooperative agreement signed Oct. 20 by EPA and state officials. EPA's designation ensures long-term federal financing, which could total more than $7.5 million. The General Assembly approved $350,000 for this year and $500,000 for next.

Seventeen technical studies ranging from demographic analyses to mapping Hyde County soils are already under way. Scientists, data handlers and everyday lovers of the sound will try to link human causes with environmental effects.

"It could be one of the biggest wastes of time and money we've ever gotten into, or it could be the biggest benefit ever to the sound," Todd Miller, executive director of the N.C. Coastal Federation, told the Charlotte Observer. "The key, really, is going to be active citizen involvement. The motivation has already come from citizens and they ought to continue to be the catalyst."

The study will consider, among other things:

— Wetlands cleared for farming and timbering, diluting the critically salty

Three Die As Blasts Rip Plant In Texas

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — Two explosions ripped through a chemical plant Saturday, touching off massive fires that burned out of control and leaving at least three people dead and more than 30 injured, authorities said.

At least 25 percent of the Hoescht Celanese Chemical Co. plant was burning so hotly that firefighters could not get within one-half mile of the plant, said Pampa Police Sgt. Ken Neal.

At least 60 nearby residents were ordered evacuated.

The blasts within 10 seconds of each other shook the plant, six miles west of this Panhandle town, about 4 p.m., when a weekend crew of 30 to 40 people was working, said Gray County Sheriff's deputy Ken Keith.

"They were just tremendous explosions," Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said. "We've asked the Federal Aviation

Beirut Hospital Explosion Kills 7

By DONNA ABU-NASR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A nail-packed bomb hidden in a box of chocolates exploded in the crowded lobby of Beirut's American University Hospital Saturday, killing seven people, including the woman who was carrying it.

Thirty-seven people were wounded.

The device contained about one kilogram (2.2 pounds) of TNT, a rifle grenade and dozens of nails, said Police Col. Mounir Maalouli. "We found nails in the bodies of the victims," he said.

He quoted a Lebanese soldier wounded in the blast as saying a nervous-acting blonde was sitting in the lobby with the box of chocolates when "the parcel exploded."

The unidentified soldier said the woman "was sitting on a chair opposite the accounts department, a few yards from the elevators . .. She looked nervous and was constantly watching the elevators. She had the chocolate parcel in her lap."

Another police official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said police did not yet know whether the woman knew what was inside "or whether she detonated the bomb."

U.S. 264 Section To Open Monday

The 7.4-mile section of the new four-lane U.S. 264 from the Farmville east thoroughfare to State Road 1204 near Greenville will open to traffic sometime after noon Monday, according to Rick Shirley, Division II highway engineer.

"This section is an important part of the four-lane U.S. 264 between Wilson and Washington and we are most happy the section will be open for the convenience and safety of our traveling public," said Randy Doub of Greenville, a member of the N.C. Board of Transportation.

No official opening ceremony is planned for Monday, Shirley said. Instead, transportation workers will remove the "road closed" signs and open the route to traffic as soon after noon as possible.

Shirley said bids will be taken on the Farmville bypass to complete U.S. 264 from Greenville to Wilson sometime this winter. "About an eight-mile gap will be under construction for the next several years," he said.

The newly completed link will be dedicated as the John P. East Freeway in ceremonies on Dec. 3 at 2 p.m., Doub said. He said state, local and national dignitaries are expected to be in attendance.

State Department Weighs Legal Challenge In Release Of Suspects

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is preparing a legal challenge to the "morally wrong and politically damaging" decision by an El Salvador military judge to free suspects in the 1985 slayings of six Americans, officials said Saturday.

"Our embassy is exploring every possible legal means of re-incarcerating the accused and assuring their prosecution," said department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty. "Here in the department we are consulting with our legal advisers on any other route we may take to ensure that these people do not escape justice."

She would not comment on what steps might be taken.

But aides to Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, a member of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Western Hemisphere affairs, said the State Department told the congressman that an appeal under Salvadoran law was being drafted.

DeWine's press secretary, Beth Carozza, said it was her understanding that the State Department had been in touch with the Salvadoran attorney general's office, which would have to approve an appeal, and that legal papers in the case might be filed as early as Monday.

The aim of an appeal would be to reverse a decision on Thursday by Salvadoran judge Jorge Alberto Serrano to release three men, said to be leftist guerrillas, under an amnesty for political prisoners that five Central American countries included in a peace plan signed in Guatemala Aug. 7.

The three were being held as suspects in the June 19, 1985 slaying of 13 people patronizing outdoor cafes in San Salvador's "Pink Zone," a strip of popular restaurants and clubs. Among the victims were four U.S. Marine embassy guards and two American computer technicians.

Since Serrano's decision, "we have stated our belief that the amnesty of these persons is morally wrong and politically damaging," McCarty said. "We have repeatedly stated that while we understand the desire of the government of El Salvador to comply fully with the Guatemala agreement we believe that persons who have committed crimes of terrorism against American citizens should not go unpunished."

Another State Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the department was "consulting with the legal eagles" and examining what options the United States had under Salvadoran and U.S. law.

The amnesty provision, approved late last month by the Salvadoran Congress, applies to those "who have participated as the direct authors, interemediaries or accomplices in the commission of political crimes or common crimes associated with political crimes."

Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Honduras and Guatemala also have agreed to the peace plan.

In releasing the three suspects, Serrano said "the killings are reprehensible here or anywhere, but the law is the law, and we must apply the amnesty."

So far, about 500 Salvadorans have been released under the amnesty provision. On Friday, another mili-

Memorial Closes Book On Tragedy

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

SLAPTON SANDS, England (AP) — For U.S. veteran Manny Rubin, Sunday's dedication of an American memorial to 749 comrades who died in one of World War II's forgotten tragedies is a bittersweet end to a slaughter that never should have happened.

Rubin was among the lucky survivors of what came to be known as "The Night of the Bloody Tiger," a dry-run for the D-Day landings that turned terribly real when German E-boats torpedoed the exercise off southern England.

The result was one of the highest U.S. casualty tolls of the war to that point, Pearl Harbor excluded.

Because of secrecy surrounding the Normandy invasion six weeks later, the disaster of Exercise Tiger did not come to light until after the war.

Even then, it was treated as a footnote to the invasion that launched the Allied forces on the road to victory.

There is still controversy over how many soldiers and sailors perished — some say over a thousand. And nothing was done to commemorate their sacrifice.

Charles B. MacDonald, former deputy U.S. Army chief historian, was called out of retirement to research the exercise. He told a news conference Saturday he believes the death toll was probably 946 — 749 soldiers plus 197 seamen overlooked in earlier counts.

A mock seaborne invasion of Slapton Sands beach by 30,000 troops turned into a real battle when nine German E-boats — fast, light craft that harassed coastal shipping during the war — torpedoed three amphibious landing craft on the night of April 28, 1944.

Hundreds died in the attacks. Others were killed by fellow Americans who mistook them for Germans in the dark. Hundreds more drowned by putting their Mae West life vests around their waists instead of under their arms.

"The sea was on fire. It was a dreadful sight. It was just a slaughter really," recalled Rubin, then a 21-year-old Navy signalman on one of the landing craft.

If there had been a destroyer escort to throw up a star shell and illuminate the battle scene and if the rookie GIs had been taught the right way to put on their life vests, many lives could have been saved, he said.

"In the morning, the sea as far as you could see was covered with dead bodies, floating upside down," Rubin, a garment manufacturer born in the Bronx section of New York City, said in an interview Saturday.

Annual Tobacco Festival Opens

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

There will be a lot of spitting, clogging and grading going on in Greenville this week as part of the activities scheduled for the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival, an annual Pitt County event.

"This is the tenth anniversary of the tobacco festival and we feel that it will be a bigger and better celebration than ever before," said Melissa Arrowood, executive director of the festival.

With the majority of its events at Farmers Warehouse, the Tobacco Festival is held in conjunction with the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show, the largest indoor farm show in the Southeast.

According to Ms. Arrowood, the festival is held to honor tobacco producers and manufacturers within the five flue-cured tobacco producing states.

Each November a weeklong celebration is held with various events geared to entertaining the whole family, she said.

On Monday, the festival's main event, an awards presentation and banquet at the Sheraton Greenville Hotel, will honor The Tobacco Farmer of the Year.

The award is given to the tobacco producer who best exemplifies excellence in tobacco production in the major tobacco producing states: Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Ms. Arrowood said candidates will be interviewed by a judging committee on Monday afternoon and Jim Graham, North Carolina Commissioner of Agricultural, will announce and award the winner Monday night at the banquet.

The four finalists for Tobacco Farmer of the Year are Arthur F. Woodard III from Darlington, S.C., Joey White from Elkin, Gordon Rouse Ivey from Mount Olive, and Ronnie Garner from Vass.

The winner will receive a $700 cash award and a plaque signifying his achievement.

The remainder of the week's activities, except the pig feast on Wednesday, will be held at the Farmers Warehouse.

On Tuesday, The North Carolina High School Art Contest opens at 9 a.m. Art work entered in the contest will be exhibited during the festival.

Entries will be judged and a scholarship provided by R.J. Reynolds will be awarded Thursday at 1 p.m.

"I am especially pleased with their (R.J. Reynolds) participation in scholarship events," Ms. Arrowood said. "It is very rewarding to see a large corporation so interested in providing an educational scholarship for the future."

All high schools with an art program and employing a certified art teacher may submit entries.

A tobacco-tying contest Tuesday at 11 a.m. will challenge experts to tie the neatest bundle of tobacco in the least amount of time.

Sounds Are Selected For Estuarine Study sound with freshwater and threatening young fish.

— Eroding farmland that bleeds fertilizer nitrogen into the water, stimulating algae that rob the water of oxygen as it decomposes — fishermen call it "dead water" — and killing fish.

— The 553 upstream municipal treatment plants, schools and industries that dump treated and untreated contaminants into the estuary.

— Fishing methods that kill 20 to 30 pounds of undersized young fish for every pound of marketable catch.

Along the Pamlico, there is a sense of urgency quite apart from funding schedules and research proposals.

A tidal wave of growth is expected to double the coastal population by the year 2000. With those projections in mind, residents fear the North Carolina sounds will be irreparably damaged.

"Everything that is now affecting the water is going to be increasing," said study director Doug Rader, an estuarine ecologist.

Despite the grim news, Rader said, the Albemarle-Pamlico is still relatively healthy compared with others it joined last year in EPA's list of estuaries of national concern — the Chesapeake; Buzzards Bay, Mass.; Narragansett Bay, R.I.; Long Island Sound; Puget Sound, Wash.; and San Francisco Bay.

Still, some fear the big study will become a competition for research grants, an academic exercise that ends without hard results. And they say the Pamlico can't wait five years for help.

"It's a marvelous tool, but I don't think that to throw $5 million at it and say, 'Let's study it for five years and then we'll know what to do,' is going to solve the problem," said Dave McNaught, executive director of the 1,400-member Tar-Pamlico River Foundation. "We need to take remedial action immediately."

Part of the problem, fishermen say, is the state's failure to enforce its own laws.

An example, they say, sits five miles upstream — the giant Texasgulf phosphate mining and processing complex. The French-owned economic giant employs 1,200, has mineral rights to 80,000 acres and accounts for one-third of Beaufort County's property tax revenues.

Texasgulf also discharges some 47 million gallons of treated wastewater into the Pamlico every day. The effluent is laden with phosphorous, a nutrient believed to contribute to harmful algae growth.

A late-summer survey by N.C. Marine Fisheries Division biologists found diseased crabs concentrated in an area between Texasgulf and Etles Henries's crab house. They haven't identified the cause of the disease.

Yet the firm's discharge permit expired in July 1984. The state hasn't issued a new one because Texasgulf disagrees with the stricter phosphate discharge limits the state wants to set.

Henries finds that impasse contemptible.

"It's time for some answers now," Henries said. "And until we do, what APES is doing is a waste of time. That's why we're dying now. That's why we're dead."

Texasgulf considers the problems of the Pamlico as yet undefined. Its local public relations chief sits on a citizens advisory committee of the Albemarle-Pamlico study If its discharge "is determined to be a significant problem, we will do whatever is required to fix the problem," said Vice President Thomas Regan.

tary judge said he granted freedom to two men accused of occupying a radio station and announcing the slaying of Lt. Cmdr. Albert Schaufelberger III, a U.S. attache killed May 25, 1983 while sitting in his car outside a university.

No one has been charged in the killing.

John S. Handwork, of Beavercreek, Ohio, whose son Thomas was among the slain Marine guards, said of the suspects' release, "I still can't believe it, I still can't believe it. If they let them get away with this in that country, then there is not another country where our Marine security guards are safe."

Handwork said he was going public with his anger in hopes of getting other Americans to lodge protests as well. "I just want people to know and maybe enough people will listen in Congress," he said.

The other victims of the shooting were Sgt. Bobby J. Dickson of Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Cpl. Gregory Weber of Cincinnati and Cpl. Patrick R. Kwiatkowski, of Wausau, Wis.; and computer technicians George Viney of Miami and Robert Alvidrez of Lexington, Mass.

popular events for those who appreciate tobacco history," Ms. Arrowood said.

Country music singer Helen Cornelius will perform at 2 p.m. and a clogging contest will conclude Tuesday's activities at 8 p.m.

On Wednesday, farmers will get the chance to play the role of tobacco grader in a grading contest at 11 a.m. Contestants will attempt to correctly separate leafs from a mixed collection into their proper grade.

"With 23 grades from the leaf group alone, it takes a keen eye honed by years of experience to do well in this contest," Ms. Arrowood said.

Roasted pork will be served at 6 p.m. at the New Independent Warehouse on Pitt Street behind the Farmers Warehouse. The Bill Lyerly Band, a local group with two albums to its credit, will perform rock, country, and blue-grass music after dinner.

The festival's most colorful event, the Tobacco Spitting Contest, will be held Thursday at 11 a.m. Both accuracy and distance are judged, as contestants aim their tobacco juice at a distant bull's eye.

Comedian Jerry Clower, who has entertained at The Grand Old Opry, will perform Thursday at 2 p.m.

Since the Tobacco Festival is a non-profit event, much of the necessary work is performed by volunteers, according to Ms. Arrowood.

"All decorations have been designed and placed by festival volunteers," she said. "The people handing out magazines, selling tickets to the Pig Feast, and even the chefs who prepare the meal are all volunteers. The effort they put forth is simply fantastic."

Jim Swindell, manager of the farm show, said the event has grown since its inception in 1976. He said he expects 40,000 people to attend this year's show.

We'll have around $10 million worth of farm equipment out on the floor this week," he said. "We'll have everything represented in farming here, from the seeds that are planted to the trucks that haul the crops away."

"Everyone has worked so hard on this during the entire year, we're really excited about seeing the culmination of our efforts," Ms. Arrowood said. "It's kind of like a farmer who works all year on his crops, finally getting to see the product of his labor at harvest."

"Then, the revelation over 40 years later, that Royal Air Force planes had spotted the E-boats heading for the coast and reported it to the Admiralty in London — but that word never reached the Americans in Plymouth — that made me hopping mad," Rubin said.

The crescent-shaped beach at Slapton Sands was chosen because it resembled Utah Beach on France's Normandy coast where the American D-Day landings were planned. On D-Day, 179 GIs were killed at Utah Beach.

Rubin, who married an Englishwoman in the Royal Navy and now lives in nearby Plymouth, has been coming to Slapton Sands every April 28 since he moved to England in 1962 — dropping flowers in the sparkling turquoise waters where his comrades died.

For the last three years, he has also placed a wreath on a U.S. Sherman tank that sank during the exercise and was raised in 1984 by Ken Small, a local guesthouse owner who campaigned for 16 years for an American memorial.

It was Small's lobbying, and his chance meeting with Rep. Beverly B. Byron, D-Md., that reaped Sunday's unveiling of a plaque to the slain Americans.

Mrs. Byron's father, Capt. Harry C. Butcher, witnessed Exercise Tiger as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's naval aide, and he published an account in 1946.

Said Mrs. Byron: "The thing that I feel is that it's something that's been overlooked. It's something that should have been done in the past."

Hospital Is Leveled

that Americans were among the victims. In a statement, it branded the bombing "particularly despicable and utterly heartless" because it brought "terror into a place of healing."

"The American University Hospital has served all the people of Lebanon with the highest standards of distinction and professionalism even as the city and country around it have been beset by chaotic violence and war," the statement said. "We have no details on who did this or why."

It was the second fatal bombing in Syrian-policed Moslem west Beirut in four days. Both bombs were carried by women.

A bomb hidden in a briefcase exploded Wednesday in the passenger terminal of the capital's airport, killing six people and wounding 73. The woman who carried it was among those killed.

No one claimed responsibility for either blast.

Since Syrian troops were deployed in February to end three years of militia anarchy, more than 100 explosions have hit west Beirut.

Maalouli said Saturday's bomb exploded at 11:15 a.m. near the elevators in the hospital's main lobby, which was crowded with visitors. He said the dead included "four men and three bodies damaged beyond recognition."

The blast broke the lobby's glass windows. Pools of blood, shoes and bags were strewn across the floor. Nurses rushed victims to emergency wards for treatment.

Police gave no details about the blond woman's identity but said an autopsy would be carried out on what remains of her body, which took the full force of the blast and was "damaged beyond recognition."

"I was in the lobby, some distance from the elevators, when I heard the boom. I woke up in the emergency room," said a man wounded in the neck, left shoulder and chest.

He refused to answer questions and walked out of the emergency department, despite his wounds.

Syrian and Lebanese soldiers and red-bereted riot police sealed off the hospital and stopped reporters and photographers from entering.

Women wailed in grief at a Lebanese army checkpoint that prevented them from going into the hospital grounds to seek word about relatives and friends.

"My sons are in there! I want to know about them!," a woman begged a soldier.

"Go away, go away!," the soldier shouted.

A doctor in the hospital, speaking on condition of anonymity, said no staff or patients were among the fatalities. He said "two AUH employees, a technician and an administrative assistant," were wounded.

He said the other casualties were "visitors and Lebanese soldiers in charge of security at the hospital."

The hospital, which has handled thousands of casualties from Lebanon's civil war, houses the medical school of the American University of Beirut, which was founded in 1866 by Protestant missionaries.

Administration, and they've agreed, to warn all aircraft not to get lower than 50,000 feet because of the strong possibility of another explosion."

The fires apparently stemmed from a butane explosion, which flattened the plant's control room, Neal said.

It was not clear what was burning or whether the fumes from the flames were toxic, Cox said. But, he said, the main concern was another explosion

Three people were killed, and one person was missing, Cox said.

Linda Haynes, Coronado Hospital spokeswoman, said 34 people had been taken there for treatment.

"It's completely full of people," she said. "There are people everywhere. Doctors, nurses, ambulance attendents. ... Many are being treated for lacerations. All the doctors in Pampa are here."

Three were seriously hurt and most of the others suffered lacerations or burn wounds, Cox said.

The explosions blew out a plate glass window of an auto parts store in downtown Pampa, six miles to the east, Pampa News Managing Editor Jeff Langley said.

"It was huge," Langley said. "It was incredibly loud. It shook this entire building and blew windows out all over Pampa."

He said police had called in emergency units from throughout the region and had requested a school bus to transport "walking wounded."

The Cabot King Mills subdivision north of the plant was evacuated, forcing about 60 people from their homes. M.D. Hood, who lives two miles from plant on U.S 60, said glass was blown out of his house and the structure was damaged.

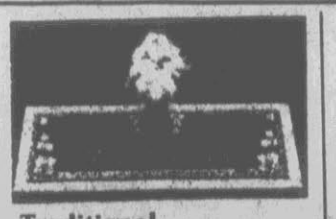
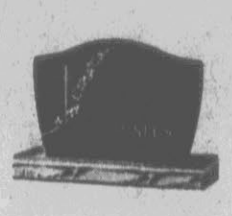
Homestead Funeral Home and Memorial Gardens
4 Interment Choices...sensitive to your needs.



Traditional Cemetery Lots.
Homestead Funeral Home & Memorial Gardens consists of lovely acres of land. Located in a quiet country setting on Hwy. 33. It is a perpetual care cemetery.

Modern Mausoleum.
Above ground burial is becoming increasingly more preferable. Dry, vented crypts offer loved ones the ultimate in protection. Built of granite, concrete and reinforced steel, the mausoleum is designed to withstand the ages. Designed for single or double burial, it can be more economical than ground burial.



Family Monuments.
We recently opened The Garden of Gethsemane, which will be used exclusively with monuments only.

Cremation Niches

Geography Department To Help Pitt Students

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The East Carolina University Department of Geography and Planning will help Pitt County students sharpen their geographical skills this week in recognition of the first National Geography Awareness Week today through Saturday.

Pitt school students have been invited to visit the department during the week to view demonstrations in map reading, aerial photography interpretation and computer mapping, said Leo Zonn, department chairman.

"This is the first year geography has been observed nationally," he said. "It's the first time we've tried to do all the things that we're doing."

Legislation proclaiming Geography Awareness Week was approved last July in a joint U.S. House and Senate resolution. Gov. James Martin recently issued a proclamation in North Carolina.

The Congressional resolution expressed concern that 20 percent of American elementary school students placed the location of the United States, on a world map, in Brazil. It said 95 percent of American college freshmen could not locate Vietnam on a world map, and 20 percent of American teachers currently teaching geography have taken no classes in the subject.

ECU geology faculty members also "will be going out to speak one period during the week to students in grades four through 12 on any aspect on geography" such as map reading and longitude and latitude skills, said Sue Branch, social studies coordinator for Pitt County schools.

In fourth through seventh grades, emphasis is on geography, Ms. Branch said. But, "many teachers are prone to teach history because it's more interesting to the kids." Eighth-grade students concentrate more on history, she said.

Class materials on how to incorporate geography with other subjects were sent to principals and teachers, Ms. Branch said. Ideas included "anything from students doing research about their own community, guest speakers, oral reports, films to be watched, (and) topics to be brainstormed as to why people lived in certain areas of the country. For example, why people may live around a river."

The materials also link geography to politics such as how the geography situation in Iran affects political events, she said. "It's a fairly inclusive list, (and) teachers at least can find a few activities on how geography affects the economy and politics."

E.B. Aycock Junior High School will have a geography contest in recognition of the week, said Palmyra Leahy, an ECU associate professor. Faculty in the department will judge the projects and present awards to the winners. The student with the best project will receive an atlas and other students will receive globes and other prizes.

"We've got some projects that have been assigned to the students that are centered around national georgraphy, not just North Carolina this time," said Sandra Walton, a social studies teacher at Aycock.

"Some of them (the projects) will be maps of the local community as well as maps of North Carolina and other states," Ms. Walton said. There also will be video tapes and photo albums.

"We had a list of items and the students were able to select what they wanted from that group," she said. The projects will be displayed in the school media center during the week.

The National Geographic Society promotes the study of geography by sponsoring a Geographic Alliance Network in 20 states. North Carolina recently appropriated $50,000 to support the network which will be used for a series of institutes and training programs for teachers of geography.

Geography Week Events Feature Falkland Native

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

A Falkland native will present the keynote address for National Geography Awareness Week activities at East Carolina University this week.

James H. Jones, associate professor of geography at the University of California at Los Angeles, will present "Migration of Black Residents from Los Angeles, California" Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Brewster B-102 at ECU.

Jones' topic is "really an important geography topic," said Leo Zonn, chairman of the ECU Department of Geography and Planning. "Migration is representative of activities on the surface of the earth and the kinds of things people do to organize and describe themselves," he said.

"I'm working right now on landscapes in Australia and how the different kinds of media (such as movies, novels, advertising and maps) tell about this place," Zonn said.

Jones is a 1972 Farmville Central High School graduate. He earned bachelor's, master's and doctorate degrees in geography from North Carolina Central University, Durham, the University of Wisconsin at Madison and Michigan State University, respectively. He specializes in urban-social and behavioral geography with his primary research in the areas of black migration, interethnic minority conflict in the inner city and human response to technological hazards.

The recipient of the Theodore R. Speigner Award for the highest academic average, department of geography, at N.C. Central in 1975, Jones was also the summa cum laude graduate in the department that year. He was a graduate fellow in the geography department on the Madison campus from 1975 to 1977, and received the first place award for the best graduate student paper presented at the East Lakes Division of the Association of American Geographers Annual Meeting, Michigan State University, in 1978.

He has served as associate professor at UCLA since 1985 and was an assistant professor there from 1980 to 1985. He teachs urban, social and cultural geography and environmental quality.

TV Haters

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Television tubes, electronic innards and pieces of imitation walnut cabinet flew through the air as protesters ganged up on the item they believe is turning Americans into jelly-brained couch potatoes.

"The point is that people don't live their lives anymore. They just watch TV," a woman who identified herself only as Camille said Friday at the demonstration at the University of California campus here.

A French report blames noise for 70 percent of the neuroses reported in the Paris area.

Guilty Verdict Returned In Trial Of Former Teacher

A former Rose High School teacher was found guilty of assisting in obtaining academic credit by fraudulent means in Pitt County Superior Court Friday. But Judge Paul Wright of Goldsboro postponed sentencing Ms. Madeline Jordan Taylor until 2 p.m. Monday.

Ms. Taylor, ending her fourth year as a remedial reading teacher at the high school, was arrested by Greenville police on June 1 after a student went to police and said Ms. Taylor offered to raise his grade in exchange for a video cassette recorder.

Tried on the charge in District Court in August, Ms. Taylor was given a six-month jail term, suspended on condition she pay a $500 fine, court costs and $288 restitution to the Greenville Police Department.

But she appealed to Superior Court.

In both trials, Andre Love, 20, testified that Ms. Taylor told him she had always wanted a VCR and "if I gave her a VCR I could pass" her English class.

Love said he went to the police department with the information and Detective Steve Pass purchased a VCR for Love to give the teacher.

Pass testified that he waited outside Ms. Taylor's home and watched Love take the VCR inside and leave without it.

And on a tape recording introduced into evidence in both trials, Ms. Taylor told Love, "If they find out about this, I'll lose my job." She also told the student that he needed to turn in a paper so that if she was questioned about the grade change, she would have something to show.

But Pass said later, when a warrant was obtained to search Ms. Taylor's home, the VCR was not located and Ms. Taylor told him she didn't know anything about a VCR.

Ms. Taylor, who did not take the witness stand in the District Court trial, testified Friday that she "brought up" the question of a VCR with Love, but said she "asked him as a favor to shop for a VCR ... which I intended to pay for."

Later, according to Ms. Taylor, Love "said he found one for $80." When Love carried the VCR to her home on May 22, Ms. Taylor said, she asked him "if this was the one for $80," and he told her "no ... this one is free." explaining that a relative had given the VCR to him.

Admitting "I received a VCR (but) never paid him for one," Ms. Taylor said "I threw it away."

She said, "I got a anonymous phone call (that) the police were trying to set me up," between the time she received the VCR and the time her home was searched." Ms. Taylor told the court she "put it (the VCR) in a dumpster," and told officers searching her house, "I didn't have a VCR."

She testified, "I got a phone call that said Andre went to the police ... gave them a false report."

The charge against Ms. Taylor is a misdemeanor with a maximum sentence of a $500 fine and six months in jail.

Arson Attempted

An attempted arson on East 12th Street was one of seven incidents reported to the Greenville Police on Friday.

Officer B.M. Highland said a cardboard box containing garbage was apparently set on fire near a residence at 206 E. 12th St. at about 1:41 p.m.

Highland said the destruction of the front floodlights at Hardtimes night club on U.S. 264 by-pass was reported at 11:45 a.m.

Officer Roy Smith said the larceny of a bicycle valued at $367 from a garage at 302 Stanwood Drive was reported at 4:50 p.m.

Officer W.E. Davis said the theft of a bicycle valued at $200 from the back yard at 113 Jamestown Road was reported at 5:37 p.m.

Davis also said the theft of a $300 bicycle from the rear of 401 Wesley St. was reported at 4:50 p.m.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said a breaking, entering and larceny at 1708 Myrtle Ave. was reported at 6:12 p.m. Nevelle said a cassette player worth $45, a $50 gold bracelet, a $450 gold necklace and a $20 sterling silver bracelet were taken from the home.

Officer J.G. Jenkins said the larceny of $301 in cash from a wallet on a shelf in the office of Gold's Gym was reported at 7:54 p.m.

Quick Thinking

RALEIGH (AP) — A Superior Court judge and two Raleigh attorneys didn't wait for the long arm of the law to nab a man suspected of stealing a secretary's purse — they just formed a posse and surrounded the suspect.

Judge Donald L. Smith teamed up with lawyers J. Randolph Riley and L.D. Hyde to detain the man on the 10th floor of the Wake County Courthouse Friday until the sheriff's deputies arrived.

"I wish I were up for election this year," Smith said. "This would be a real boost to my law-and-order campaign."

Smith said he spotted a man about noon leaving a filing room that connects with the office of Mimi Root, secretary to the Superior Court judges.

"I knew he didn't have any business being in there," Smith said.

Three Named To Faculty At ECU Medical School

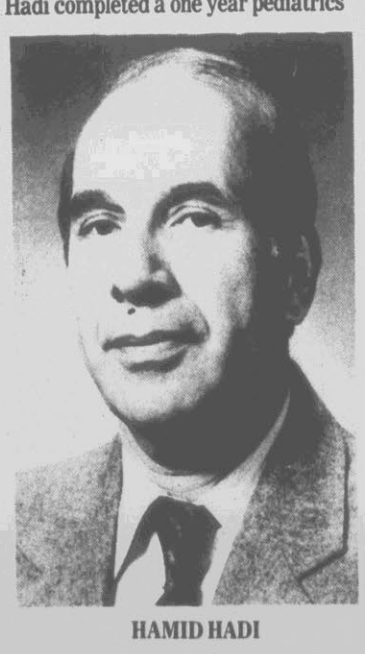
Dr. Hamid Hadi, an obstetrician-gynecologist, has joined the faculty as associate professor in the obstetrics and gynecology department. He will direct the maternal and fetal medicine section in the department.

Hadi was previously assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology in the maternal and fetal medicine division, Medical College of Georgia at Augusta.

Formerly of Kabul, Afghanistan, he received his medical degree from the Kabul University School of Medicine and his undergraduate education at Habibia College, also in Afghanistan.

After finishing medical school, Hadi completed a one year pediatrics residency at the University of Florida's University Hospital in Jacksonville, concentrating on neonatology. He later completed a four-year residency in obstetrics and gynecology at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, Harlem Hospital Center in New York City.



HAMID HADI

RICHARD HOPPMANN

Dr. Richard A. Hoppmann, a rheumatologist, has joined the faculty as assistant professor in the department of medicine's section of rheumatology.

Before coming to Greenville, Hoppmann completed a fellowship in rheumatology at Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem.

The Charleston, S.C., native received his medical degree from the Medical University of South Carolina. He also holds a master's degree from the University of Georgia and a bachelor's degree from the University of South Carolina. He completed a residency in internal medicine at ECU.

Dr. Reidar K. Lie has joined the faculty as assistant professor in the department of medical humanities.

Before joining the ECU faculty, Lie was a research associate in the department of anatomy at the University of Bergen in Bergen, Norway.

His specialty areas include the history of cardiology, particularly in the 19th and 20th centuries, and the philosophy of science.

Formerly of Stavanger, Norway, Lie completed graduate studies in philosophy and received his medical degree at the University of Bergen in Norway. He later received a doctorate degree in philosophy at the University of Minnesota.

Helms Says He's Been Cleared By Justice Department Of Leak

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C, decrying what he called "the anatomy of a smear," says the Justice Department has cleared him of accusations that he or a staff member leaked classified information to officials of Chile's authoritarian government.

Helms, at a news conference Friday, distributed copies of a letter in which the chairman and vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee said they were told by the Justice Department that "the allegations lack substance."

In the letter, Chairman David Boren, D-Okla., and Vice Chairman William Cohen, R-Maine, told Helms that "on the basis of the FBI investigation the Department of Justice has determined that no classified information was revealed as a result of the briefing to your staff member."

Stories on the incident in mid-July 1986 reported that the FBI had opened an investigation into the allegations that Helms or his staff were involved in leaks to the Chileans. They did not allege that there had in fact been a leak.

But Helms said that the stories and radio and television newscasts implied that he "had violated his trust."

Helms said Friday the stories were erroneous because the FBI had not opened an investigation but had merely received a request to do so.

"I think the Justice Department knew there was nothing to it," Helms said. "I think they just laid it aside."

That request for a "one-month" investigation was made on July 18, 1986 by Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., and Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who were the Intelligence committee's chairman and vice chairman at the time.

Helms said the letter was in turn leaked to "The New York Times and others."

It was widely reported at the time that the two had acted after being told of the allegations against Helms by Elliot Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs.

Helms said the allegations were "a tapestry of innuendo without foundation."

"It was a continued attack by certain people," Helms said. "It was the anatomy of a smear from start to finish. The truth has finally emerged."

PTL Management Might Turn To Bakker For Fund Raising

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bankruptcy examiner Billy Robinson said he and PTL's trustee want to ask Jim Bakker to help raise money — under certain conditions — because a polarization of contributors is threatening to sink the television ministry.

PTL is averaging only slightly more than half the $700,000 a week in contributions it needs to pay its bills, The (Charlotte) Observer reported in Saturday's editions.

"I can pull names from the computer, and I know they're big contributors, and I'm not getting anything from them — people who in the past have given over $20,000," Robinson said Friday. "They're not giving for some reason, and the reason may be that they're very attached to the Bakkers."

Robinson said he and David Clark, PTL's court-appointed trustee, want to ask Jim Bakker's help in opening his followers' checkbooks — but only if the exiled founder of PTL meets conditions that Robinson doubts he will agree to.

"He's got to try to get right with the (Assemblies of God) church, and he's got to confront the people who accuse him of homosexual behavior," Robinson said. "If we went to him otherwise, we would be doing the very thing that a lot of the support now feels like we shouldn't do."

But Robinson said he doesn't think Bakker will do either of those things.

"The first thing in the atonement process is 'let's find out if it's true,'" Robinson said. "And he ain't going to do that."

However, Clark said Bakker has sent a telegram to the Assemblies of God requesting a meeting, apparently the first step in the restoration to the ministry.

The (Columbia, S.C.) State reported in Saturday's editions that the telegram was sent two weeks ago to the Rv. Charles Cookman of Dunn, N.C., district superintendent for the North Carolina assemblies.

Cookman said, "The safest thing I can do is not discuss that."

Robinson said he spoke earlier this week with Roe Messner, a Kansas contractor who is a major PTL creditor and one of Bakker's closest confidants, and asked him to go to Bakker and tell him what Clark and Robinson want.

Robinson quoted Messner as saying, "I will tell him, in your opinion, the ministry won't survive unless he does it, because these people aren't giving, and if they don't give, it's going under."

Comments about the Bakkers on questionnaires now being returned from 114,000 PTL "lifetime partners" — who gave at least $1,000 each — show an alarming division, Robinson said.

"They range from, 'Burn 'em at the stake and cut their heads off; sell their bodies and raise money' " Robinson said, to, " 'If they don't come back, I won't give a dime.' "

The Brink Bakkers Back has been discouraging donations to PTL. The club last month mailed letters to Bakker supporters — Robinson estimated the size of the mailing at about 150,000 — that said, "For us to support PTL at this time would only delay the return of the Bakkers."

Robinson on Friday provided The Observer with the most complete data on PTL's financial condition since the Rev. Jerry Falwell and his staff resigned in anger Oct. 8.

Robinson's figures show that between June 1 and Sept. 26, PTL under Falwell averaged slightly less than $500,000 a week in contributions — not enough to meet the ministry's needs.

Since then, things have gotten worse.

With PTL in turmoil and essentially leaderless until Clark was appointed Nov. 1, contributions dropped to an average of $385,000 a week. PTL has accumulated a $1.35 million operating deficit since June 1.

Also, PTL owes nearly $2 million in past due bills to about 80 of the 138 television stations that carry "The PTL Club" show, the ministry's fundraising lifeline.

Another approximately $5 million in unpaid interest on back debts of more than $60 million has accumulated since the ministry filed for reorganization under the bankruptcy laws June 12.

Sanford Changes Tax Tune

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying that honesty requires elected officials to take risks, Sen. Terry Sanford — who promised in his 1986 election campaign to oppose federal tax increases — now says tax hikes may be needed to balance the budget.

"We're at the point now, where, with all the cutting, we've either got to have Gramm-Rudman, which people think would be disastrous, and that's forced cutting, or we've got to have a little tax package there of a fairly modest amount of money compared to the total budget," Sanford told The Charlotte Observer Friday.

"Honesty requires public servants to take that kind of risk," Sanford said.

Sanford said recent proposals by Sens. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., sounded reasonable.

Bumpers, along with House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Tex., proposed postponing personal tax-rate reductions from the 1986 Tax Reform Act. Bumpers said his plan would raise $9 billion next year. Sanford said that would delay tax reductions mostly for the wealthy because their rates were most significantly cut by the new law.

Hollings has proposed a $5-per-barrel oil-import fee that would raise about $8 billion a year. He said it would increase gasoline cost about a nickel a gallon.

"Those two taxes alone would more than be satisfactory, either one of them," Sanford said at a breakfast meeting with reporters.

He rejected proposals to double the federal cigarette tax from 16 cents to 32 cents a package, saying tobacco farmers already are overtaxed.

Three Win Reynolds Awards For Extraordinary Leadership

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Nancy Susan Reynolds Awards were presented Saturday to a Robeson County community activist, an Iredell County woman who has promoted the cause of struggling farmers and an Asheboro woman who has worked for change in the black community.

John L. Godwin of Pembroke, Edna Harris of Harmony and Addie S. Luther of Asheboro received the awards for extraordinary achievement at the grassroots level during a ceremony attended by Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

The awards, a project of the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, are given annually to as many as three North Carolinians who have worked without recognition and in ways that may be outside the mainstream of existing organizations.

The award includes a grant of $25,000, of which $20,000 is designated for charitable organizations chosen by the recipient. The recipient may keep the other $5,000.

Godwin, a Lumbee Indian, received the award for advocacy. He helped form Concerned Citizens for Better Government in Robeson County after a deputy sheriff fatally shot a Lumbee Indian last November. As chairman of the group, he organized a march on the courthouse in Lumberton last Easter Monday to draw attention to alleged injustices in the county.

Godwin, 67, is also vice chairman of the Center for Community Action, formerly the Robeson County Clergy and Laity Concerned. The group, along with the Concerned Citizens for Better Government, have been major forces in examining alleged abuses in the court system in Robeson and Scotland counties. The groups also scrutinize law enforcement practices, the system of court-appointed attorneys, prosecutorial conduct, and the accountability of elected officials.

"I think of all people as being first class citizens until they prove otherwise," Godwin said. "I don't like to think of people as being members of the white race, or black race or Indian race. We're all members of the human race, and if we can't accept that fact, then we're not progressing — we're regressing."

Godwin has also worked for fair employment for all people and equal educational opportunities. He has been a leader in promoting the merger of the five school systems in Robeson County, and also worked in the Robeson Senior Citizens Action Group project to build a "total life center" for older adults and led a campaign against the location of a hazardous waste in the area.

Mrs. Harris, 61, won the personal service award for her work as a farm activist when she saw her way of life being threatened. When the government withdrew its loan support to her, she fought back, establishing a chapter of the United Farmers Organization in her area to help struggling farmers. Now she helps farmers in an 11-county area of the western Piedmont.

"Farming has been the backbone of this nation, and if you break a farmer's back, you break the backbone of this nation, and it's broken forever," Mrs. Harris said. "When you do away with the family farmers, they're going to find out that the American way of life will be crippled."

Mrs. Harris operates a farm crisis hotline from her home, counseling farmers who face losing their farms or who need financial or other aid. She is chairman of her local United Farmers Organization chapter and a member of the group's two-state board.

Mrs. Harris organized and coordinated a haylift in 1986 which distributed 35,000 bales of hay to area farmers. She also coordinated a seed distribution program and was the local representative of Willie Nelson's "Farm Aid" drought fund program.

Mrs. Luther, 51, was given the award for community change for her work with blacks, senior citizens, the poor, children, mothers and those who were ill.

A guiding force in community organization, she helped found the East Side Improvement Association, a group that purchased the former black high school and is turning it into a community center that will provide recreational opportunities, day-care, meeting places and eventually, housing.

Mrs. Luther helped bring the first black doctor to Asheboro and was a leader in establishing the Randolph National Health Services Corps Practice, which provides medical care to low-income patients, and the Alpha House, a halfway home for female substance abusers.

"I was surprised and I guess somewhat shocked at the general attitude of blacks in that this is the way it is, and this is the way it's going to be," Mrs. Luther said. "My attitude was, it's got to be changed."

Nancy Susan Reynolds, the daughter of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. founder R.J. Reynolds, was a contributor to a number of non-profit organizations in North Carolina. She worked with Gov. Terry Sanford in 1962 to establish the North Carolina Fund, a $14 million program that addressed the root causes of poverty through community-based projects. She died in 1985.

Godwin of Pembroke, for advocacy; Edna Harris of Harmony, for personal service, and Addie S. Luther of Asheboro, for community change. (AP Laserphoto)

Bakkers Transfer Heritage Residences To Their Parents

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Former PTL President Jim Bakker and his wife, Tammy, have transferred ownership of two of their three homes on the Heritage USA grounds to their parents.

York County tax assessor's records show that two homes formerly in the Bakkers' names are now under the names of Raleigh and Furnia Bakker (Jim Bakker's parents) and Rachel Grover (Tammy Bakker's mother). The elder Bakkers and Grover already live in the dwellings.

Raleigh and Furnia Bakker's house in the Mulberry Village subdivision near the Heritage USA entrance has an appraised tax value of $125,500. Grover's house in the Dogwood Hills subdivision has an appraised tax value of $74,500, according to county records.

Another house in Dogwood Hills is the only property still listed in the names of Jim and Tammy Bakker. Its appraised tax value is $74,500.

Haines Maxwell Sr., who developed the houses, said property in the neighborhoods are sold on a condominium-style basis, with a property owners association owning the land. Houses in Mulberry are detached. Those in Dogwood are attached in units of two, three and four, Maxwell said.

Rock Hill lawyer Ryan Hovis, who said he handled the Oct. 14 transactions, said Jim Bakker "took what little profit he got from the sale of the house in Palm Springs (Calif.) and paid off his father's house and her mother's house."

The Bakkers sold their Palm Springs house Sept. 4 for $600,000. Last February, a trust controlled by the Bakkers had bought the house for the same price, said Marge Reynolds, an agent for Cherokee Real Estate in Bermuda Dunes, Calif.

At that time, the trust owed $250,000 on the home after making a down payment of $350,000, according to documents filed with the office of the Riverside County recorder.

Jim Bakker put the house up for sale after he resigned as head of the PTL ministry in March.

Hovis said he did not handle the transaction for the California house and did not know how much Bakker got for it. But he said Bakker wanted to make sure his parents had a place to live.

"The senior Bakker had been fired (from PTL) and didn't have an income," Hovis said. "I'm speculating. I don't know why. All I know is Jim wanted to make sure his parents and his wife's parents had a roof over them."

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — Miss America allowed etiquette to go out the window and revealed the $210 price tag on her black velvet and taffeta cocktail dress to a crowd.

But Miss Manners would surely understand.

Kaye Lani Rae Rafko showed the "Made in the USA" tags in her clothing Friday as a plug for the Crafted With Pride program, the benefactors of her extensive Miss America wardrobe.

Hunt-Senate Bid

RALEIGH (AP) — You might see former Gov. Jim Hunt back in political office in Raleigh in a couple years, but he is downplaying the possibility that he might be tapped as a vice presidential candidate.

"A lot of people have encouraged me to run for the Senate again in 1990," Hunt told The Hickory Daily Record. "The Senate race is something I am definitely giving some thought."

State Rep. Ray Fletcher, D-Burke, said Friday he thought "it would strengthen the ticket in the south" if Hunt ran with Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis, who is the governor of Massachusetts. As early as the late 1970s, Hunt's name was suggested as part of a president-vice president team with Dukakis.

But Hunt said "it would be unlikely for anyone not presently in office to be on the ticket" for vice president.

Hunt said he is happy in private life, and his law firm in Raleigh is doing well. But he said if Dukakis did get the presidential nomination, the Senate race is something he would consider. Hunt lost a bitter and expensive battle to incumbent Sen. Jesse Helms in 1984.

Hunt said some state Democrats say the former Democratic governor would be a good choice on the presidential ticket because he and Dukakis are friends.

Food Stamp Woes

GREENSBORO (AP) — As many as 10,000 families in Guilford and Durham counties have not gotten their food stamps this month, and officials are blaming the owner of the private company hired to mail them.

"We had terminated his contract on 60 days' notice, effective Jan. 1," said Frank Wilson, director of the Guilford County Department of Social Services. "Then we turn around and find out he didn't mail the stamps."

County employees are expected to work through the weekend to get the stamps or ganized for distribution. The county cannot be ready before Monday, Wilson said.

"We've got to take the computer printout and stuff the stamps into envelopes in the correct denomination for each household, and that has to be done by hand," he said. "We also had difficulty getting the correct denominations to satisfy our demand."

Pollution Fine

RALEIGH (AP)— A company in which Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan has a financial interest has paid a pollution fine of $5,000 to the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

At his request, his partners in the company agreed to pay the fine even though they felt it was not justified, Jordan told the Durham Morning Herald.

"There are questions about the manner in which it took place, but there was a violation, that cannot be denied, and the department has the discretion to levy a fine or not. The department chose to levy a fine," Jordan said.

The Carolina Development Co., which is owned by Jordan and three other men, was cited in March for failing to control erosion on a two-acre, Anson County site the company was developing. It was also cited for not filing an erosion control plan with the state before beginning development.

Students Flee Bus

RALEIGH (AP) — Fifty-five Raleigh high school students were forced to evacuate an activity bus that burst into flames, but no one on the vehicle was injured, officials said.

The bus from Enloe High School was returning from the East Carolina Choral Music Festival in Greenville Friday afternoon when the driver noticed that smoke was coming from beneath the hood. Flames leaped from the engine as he pulled off the road, about three miles from Wilson.

There were no injuries although Enloe High School principal Diane Payne said one student was taken to a Wilson hospital as a precautionary measure after she tripped while leaving the bus.

The burned-out bus was towed into Wilson and school officials had no information on what might have caused the fire or the extent of the damage.

Ms. Payne said the Wilson school system provided a bus to take the students back to Raleigh.

"How's that for Friday the 13th," Ms. Payne said.

"That was our best bus," she said of the gutted 1971 five-speed Chevrolet.

Mistrial Declared

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — A mistrial was declared Saturday in the trial of a Watauga County man accused in the 1986 shooting of two law enforcement officers.

The jury of five men and seven women told Watauga County Superior Court Judge Charles C. Lamm Friday they were having difficulty deciding if Ronnie Lee Miller, a former mental patient, should be held accountable for a shooting spree in the Triplett that injured a Watauga County sheriff's deputy and a state highway patrolman. The vote was split 8-4, but officials did not indicate which way the jury was leaning.

The jury deliberated six hours over two days.

Lamm declared the mistrial shortly after 10 a.m. Saturday. District Attorney Tom Rusher said he would retry the case.

Miller was charged with two counts of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury, assault on an officer and firing into a vehicle. If convicted on all the charges, he would face a maximum sentence of 70 years in prison.

The central question in the trial was whether Miller knew right from wrong when he shot Deputy Robert L. Collins and Trooper J. Darrell Miller, who was no relation to the defendant, on Dec. 18 when they saw him near his home brandishing a gun.

Each victim identified Ronnie Lee Miller as the man who jumped up from the side of Elk Creek Road and fired a .22-caliber rifle at their patrol cars.

According to testimony, if Miller acted out of fear — and believed he shot in self-defense — he could be found innocent and hospitalized.

Grand Jury Eyes White Patriots' Link With Murders At Bookstore

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A Cleveland County Grand Jury may be targeting former members of the White Patriot Party as it considers evidence in the January slayings of three people at a Shelby adult bookstore, a newspaper reported Saturday.

"They (White Patriots) believed they were mandated by their politics and by God to kill these people," a source told the Charlotte Observer. "They were psyched up to be martyrs for their cause. They believed they were going to die, to be slaughtered by federal agents."

A source said the shooting was also meant to embarrass the Ku Klux Klan, another white supremacist group, because some White Patriots believed the Klan wasn't prepared to go to war for its ideals.

The newspaper reported in Saturday editions that the grand jury is expected to be asked to consider evidence Monday.

Former White Patriot leader Glenn Miller, who was arrested April 29 when federal agents stormed a trailer in Ozark, Mo., is not a target of the investigation but may testify before the panel, the source said.

The newspaper said another former White Patriot, Robert Stoner, may also testify. Transcripts of statements the two men made to a federal grand jury may be given to state grand jurors in Shelby, the newspaper said.

Investigators hope the statements will show that the Jan. 17 attack at the Shelby III bookstore was intended to be an opening maneuver in a war against homosexuals and minorities, the newspaper said.

Cleveland County Sheriff Buddy McKinney has said the store was frequented by homosexuals.

"At the time of the apprehension of Glenn Miller, and as a result of the arrest, the investigation of the Shelby bookstore murder case has focused on members or associates of a white supremacist group," SBI agent Dan Crawford said in September. He declined to identify the group, but others have said it is the White Patriots.

Miller pleaded guilty in September to a federal charge of mailing a threatening communication, an April "declaration of war" against the U.S. government, blacks, homosexuals and Jews. As part of a plea bargain, he agreed to testify against other former members of the White Patriots.

The newspaper said it received this account of the shooting from its sources:

Three gunmen wearing ski masks entered the store on U.S. 74, 7 miles west of Shelby. They ordered the manager and three customers to lie on the floor.

When a young man showed up to pass out Bible tracts, he was struck by a fourth man, a lookout, and pushed inside.

An argument broke out between the manager, Travis Melton, 19, of Ellenboro, and one of the gunmen. The gunman shot Melton several times in the head. Investigators believe the same man then began shooting the other men.

A source said the two other gunmen also took part in the shootings.

The five victims were shot in the head. Three died: Melton, Paul Weston, 26, and Kenneth Godfrey, 29, both of Forest City. Sources say one survivor suffered brain damage and the other was left blind.

When the gunman left, they used gasoline firebombs in an attempt to burn the store.

Sources said investigators believe they know the identities of four suspects and that others may have been involved as accessories.

Former POW Reflects On War Experiences

By CHIP WOMICK
Asheboro Courier-Tribune
An AP Member Exchange Extra

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — After German fighter planes had made their first crippling attack on the B-17, Lt. Q.R. "Jack" Bass, the bombardier, wished luck to the navigator, whose right leg had been blown half off, told him to count to 90 before opening his chute and tossed him out through the escape hatch.

On the second strike against the Flying Fortress by enemy aircraft, a canopy above Lieutenant Bass' head was destroyed.

It didn't take long for Bass and the remainder of the 10-man crew to bail out, too. The beautiful German countryside below was 400 miles from friendly territory.

Bass, a Tennessee native who's lived in Asheboro since 1961, soon was captured and spent the rest of World War II as a prisoner of war.

Bass retired in 1981 after years in Asheboro first with Burlington Industries Inc., then with Stedman Corp.

"Like it happens in all generations, you just get caught up in the activity (of war)," Bass said, downplaying the rigors of a year spent in Stalag Luft III, a German POW camp reserved for British and American air officers.

"It happened to be we were taken out of action. I got shot down on a bombing mission. But, we weren't the only ones. There were 95,000 air forces lost in Europe during World War II and in excess of 25,000 who've never been found."

Even though the war stories Bass tells are mostly humorous, sobering reflections on the months spent interned with 12,000 others also emerge.

Repeatedly, Bass conjures images of prisoners trying to stay warm, of men who were not given enough food to eat. Each prisoner, wearing his military overcoat and huddled beneath two blankets, slept on a pad of straw, he said.

"You could take water and throw it on the ground there (in the tiny room where Bass was housed with 15 other men) and have an ice rink."

If there were worms in the barley soup, prisoners would joke that there was meat on the menu that day.

"You'd be surprised what a person will do when they get hungry," he said. "Your wife, your grandmother, nobody's safe. "If it weren't for the Red Cross (supplying rations), we'd have been in dire straits."

Those imprisoned at Stalag Luft III were some of the best and brightest men the world had to offer, Bass said. But, there was nothing for them to do. Enlisted men who were prisoners-of-war worked. Officers were not allowed to.

Boredom was the biggest obstacle for them to overcome. The few letters from home received by some of the men often were tacked up in a common area for all to read and enjoy.

A few paddles and a single piece of plywood, which was used as a ping pong table, made the rounds within the camp every few weeks. Then, each group of 15 or so men would get a chance at such recreation for 45 minutes or so. Bass gained a reputation as a barber among the men in three or four barracks.

"They wanted me to trim their hair just like they were going downtown," he said, grinning. Before long, Bass took to hiding from the onslaught of business "because they were working my butt off."

Then, one freezing day as Bass was trying to trim the hair of an airman who had insisted that it be done at the same time a rousing game of ping pong was going on in their cramped quarters, the scissors slipped. Bass cut off the top of the man's ear.

Public Schools Leaders Asked To Give Education Guarantees

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's public school chiefs were asked Saturday to consider giving the nation's poor children a guarantee of rights to a high school diploma and a quality education.

Maryland State Superintendent of Schools David Hornbeck, the group's president, was pressing his colleagues to adopt a formal statement on "Assuring School Success for Students At Risk" and to encourage states to adopt a model law that would guarantee poor children a quality education.

A study commission set up by Hornbeck drafted the statement after spending the past year examining the plight of poor, minority or non-English speaking children. The council distributed copies of the draft statement to reporters before the meeting.

The problems of so-called "at risk" students are expected to be the main item of debate at the Council of Chief State School Officers' annual meeting, which opened Saturday and runs through Monday at the Grove Park Inn in Asheville, N.C.

Jay P. Goldman, spokesman for the national council, said Friday the draft statement was expected to evoke some dissent among the chiefs and was not likely to be voted on until Monday.

The draft statement says:

"An imperative for America's 21st Century is high school graduation for virtually all students....

"In each state there must be an equitable opportunity for each person to earn a high school diploma at public expense. Each person, with the rare exceptions of some who have severe disabilities, has the capacity to meet the standards for a high school diploma."

"The stark reality is that we have not yet found the way to succeed with the one-quarter of all students who do not complete high school," it added. "Students not graduating or not likely to graduate are at risk of lifelong dependence."

Accomplishing the goal of "high school graduation for virtually all students" by the year 2000 "will require substantial changes in education policy and in school practice now," it said.

The policy statement envisions writing into state laws guarantees that would go beyond the guarantee of a "thorough and efficient" education found in the constitutions of New Jersey and some other states. The existing guarantees have been the peg for lawsuits challenging disparities in funding between wealthy and poor districts.

The chiefs' draft statement says:

"The laws of each state should provide for an elementary and secondary education program of high quality for all students. State law should provide the supporting health, social welfare, employment, housing, safety, transportation and other human services which, together with the educational programs, are reasonably calculated to enable all persons to graduate from high school."

It calls upon states to give all children at risk of failing to graduate such guarantees as:

— "An education program of the quality available to students who attend schools with high rates of secondary school graduates.

— "Safe and functional facilities."

— "A parent and early childhood development program beginning ideally for children by age 3 but no later than age 4."

— "A written guide for teaching and learning for each student, prepared with and approved by the student and parents, which maps the path to high school graduation."

—"Effective supporting health and social services."

Britt, Pierce Seeking Judgeship Nomination In Robeson County

RALEIGH (AP) — District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt, who has obtained death penalty convictions against more than 40 defendants, has filed for a new Superior Court judgeship in Robeson County.

Britt, the district attorney for Robeson and Scotland counties, filed a campaign organization report Friday with the State Board of Elections. The report shows Assistant District Attorney Christopher L. Byerly as the campaign treasurer and lists a $100 contribution from an undisclosed donor.

Britt, who is white, will run against Julian T. Pierce, a Lumbee Indian who is a legal services lawyer for the poor. The two Democrats will face each other in the May 3 party primary, open only to voters in Robeson County. The winner will appear on the statewide ballot Nov. 8 for an eight-year term.

Filing opens Jan. 4 for the judgeship, created this year by the General Assembly by dividing Robeson and Scotland counties into separate judicial districts. The new Robeson district, where voters are 41 percent white, 26 percent black and 32 percent Indian, was one of nine new districts designed to increase minorities' chances of winning judgeships.

The race is expected to be a test of the organizational strength of an interracial activist group, Concerned Citizens for Better Government. The organization was formed in the wake of the Nov. 1, 1986 shooting of a Lumbee Indian by a Robeson County sheriff's deputy during a drug arrest.

"This Superior Court judgeship was supposed to be created for a minority in Robeson County, and of course, by Joe Freeman Britt even mentioning it, he turned that around, because he is not a minority," said John L. Godwin of Pembroke, chairman of the organization. "When people ask me if Julian Pierce is running against Joe Freeman Britt, I say, no, Joe Freeman Britt is running against Julian Pierce. It is a job that was created for a minority."

But Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux of Durham, a sponsor of legislation that created the district, said he was not bothered by Britt's candidacy.

Musavi Hints New Gulf Offensive By Iran

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran's radical Prime Minister, Hussein Musavi, fueled speculation Saturday that Iran was ready to mount a new offensive in its 7-year-old Persian Gulf war with Iraq.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted Musavi as saying that a national military mobilization will also confront American "mischievous acts" in the gulf.

The announcement came one day after Iraq's state-run news media claimed Iraqi warplanes inflicted "devastating raids" on economic targets in Iran.

A Soviet tanker meanwhile reported spotting a mine in the northern Persian Gulf about the time that a convoy of U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers passed safely through the area on its way to Kuwait. The sighting was not confirmed.

In the southern gulf, an Iranian gunboat boarded a Chinese commercial vessel in a search for Iraqi-bound goods, shipping executives reported.

A U.S. helicopter carrier, identified as the Guadalcanal, was about four miles away at the time and heading home after four months in the waterway, witnesses said.

Iraqi warplanes turned their missiles and bombs on land targets after five days of hammering oil tankers along Iran's coast.

A Baghdad war communique quoted by the Iraqi news agency, monitored in Cyprus, said the jets flew three missions in one hour against the Abdul Khan pumping station and oilfields at Maroon and Katch Saaran in southwest Iran.

Iraq has intensified its aerial blitz of Iran's oil exports in the past week, claiming 11 attacks on "large maritime targets" from Monday to Friday.

Five attacks occurred in a 20-hour period Friday, a one-day high, according to available records. But only three attacks were confirmed by independent sources. One attack hit a salvage tug instead of the tanker that had been targeted, sinking the small craft, killing two crewmen and wounding four.

On Saturday, Iran hinted that another offensive was imminent.

The Supreme Defense Council ordered nationwide mobilization Friday and declared that the "time is ripe" for a major offensive against Iraq.

The mobilization was ordered in response to a call by Iran's revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, for "a victory as soon as possible."

Khomeini's call was seen as an attempt to counter Iraq's unchallenged air superiority with a huge ground attack, using Iran's clear 3-1 manpower edge.

Western military analysts and diplomats in Baghdad estimated that Iran has massed about 20 divisions, about 250,000 men, in the southern sector of the 730-mile front east of the battered Iraqi port of Basra in recent weeks.

Iranian forces battled to within six miles of Basra, Iraq's second largest city, in January and February.

The U.S. convoy Saturday was the 17th since the U.S. Navy began escorting reflagged Kuwaiti tankers four months ago to protect them from Iranian attack.

It reached Kuwait Saturday hours after the mine sighting.

In it were the 290,081-ton oil products tanker Townsend and two liquefied gas carriers, the Gas Prince and Gas Queen, escorted by the missile frigates Carr, Thach and Gallery.

The convoy's northbound track took it past the area where the 32,040-ton Soviet tanker Makhachkala reported the mine.

The Makhachkala, southbound carrying Kuwaiti crude, reported the mine 50 miles west of Iranian-held Farsi island and 35 miles off Saudi Arabia. Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit said in London.

Farsi is a base for Revolutionary Guards who carry out speedboat attacks on shipping and lay mines.

Lloyd's said the mine was floating rather than moored. Shipping sources speculated it may have drifted down, as have others, from the Iran-Iraq war zone in the northern head of the gulf.

U.S. Navy officers consider some areas near Farsi so hazardous the Navy detours convoys around them.

The mine threat around the gulf led to a multinational minesweeping effort by the United States and five European countries.

While shipping executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, say they believe this has eased danger in shipping lanes, no navy has conducted extensive minesweeping near Farsi.

The Chinese vessel, identified as Ling Quanhe, was bound for Dubai, Dammam and Kuwait, and was off the southern gulf emirate of Umm Al-Quwain when ordered to "stop the engine ... and prepare to be boarded for inspection," shipping sources said.

There was radio silence after the Iranian orders, the sources said.

Associated Press photographer Peter Kemp reported after a helicopter flight over the area that the Ling Quanhe was dead in the water with a small boat next to it and a larger Iranian vessel nearby.

The Pactolus Elementary School PTO expresses their sincere appreciation to everyone who contributed to the Halloween Carnival in October. It was a great success!

Soviet Envoy Plans Talks With American Officials

GENEVA (AP) — A Soviet envoy arrived Saturday for talks with American officials aimed partly at speeding completion of a treaty to scrap intermediate-range nuclear missiles so it can be signed at next month's superpower summit.

Yuli Vorontsov, a Soviet deputy foreign minister, is to meet Max Kampelman, head of the U.S. arms control delegation in Geneva, on Sunday and Monday. He has talks Monday and Tuesday on regional issues, including the Persian Gulf war, with Michael Armacost, U.S. assistant secretary of state.

Kampelman and Vorontsov are expected to discuss unresolved issues in a U.S.-Soviet draft accord to scrap all intermediate-range missiles, especially the question of ensuring compliance.

If the meetings fail to produce the desired progress, U.S. officials said earlier in the week, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze could meet in Geneva Nov. 26 to get the treaty ready for signing at the Dec. 7-10 summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The main dispute concerns the data Moscow has been willing to provide on the number and location of SS-20 intermediate-range missiles that have not yet been deployed, one U.S. official in Washington said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Kampelman is to arrive Sunday.

'Bipartisan Praise'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday that Supreme Court nominee Anthony M. Kennedy has won "bipartisan praise" in the Senate and urged his speedy confirmation.

"Every day that passes with the Supreme Court below full strength impairs the people's business in that crucially important body," Reagan said in his weekly radio address from Camp David, Md.

Only eight justices, including Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, currently sit on the nine-member bench.

Reagan said that Kennedy "shares my fundamental legal philosophy of judicial restraint — the conviction that judges should interpret the law, not make it, that, in other words, judges should be umpires, not players."

Newspapers Say Pilot Had Drug Prescription

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The captain of a jet that crashed in a thunderstorm, killing 137 people, had prescriptions for a tranquilizer filled several times in the months before the crash, two newspapers report.

There was no indication that Edward M. Connors, who died in the crash of Delta Flight 191 at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, was under the influence of the tranquilizer at the time, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said in a copyright story Saturday.

The New York-based Journal of Commerce said it will carry a similar report in its Monday editions.

The Journal said information about Connors' prescription drug use was revealed in depositions taken for a lawsuit against Delta by about 50 survivors of some of the 137 killed in the Aug. 2, 1985, crash.

Plaintiffs' attorney Windle Turley said the prescriptions support the plaintiffs' contentions that Connors used bad judgment in allowing the plane to be flown into a thunderstorm during landing approach.

Henry Conley, marketing director for Delta's Dallas-Fort Worth district, disagreed. "This is just another desperate attempt by plaintiffs' attorneys to use the news media to play up the publicity on (Flight) 191," he said.

A case to determine liability i the crash is scheduled for trial Jan. 11 in Fort Worth.

Connors, 57, was not piloting the plane at the time of the crash, but he was the final authority aboard, the Star-Telegram said.

Two other pilots in the cockpit of the Lockheed L-1011 were killed when the plane hit a water tower while attempting to land during a thunderstorm. Many of the 27 passengers and flight attendants who survived were seriously injured.

Records from a Fort Worth pharmacy show he had prescriptions for Stelazine filled or refilled 13 times between September 1982 and June 24, 1985, the newspaper said. Connors never indicated in records of regular physical examinations that he was taking the drug.

Connors last purchased Stelazine about five weeks before the crash, the Star-Telegram said.

Delta Air Lines officials said there was no connection between the tranquilizer and the crash. Calls made by The Associated Press to Delta offices in Atlanta were not returned Saturday.

The Journal quoted unidentified Delta sources as acknowledging Connors was prescribed Stelazine as treatment for bruxism, or involuntary teeth-grinding.

But "we have sworn depositions from three medical experts saying the small dosage the captain took could not affect his ability to command the aircraft," said Delta spokesman William Berry.

Federal Aviation Administration officials said use of the tranquilizer would have disqualified a pilot from flying.

Stelazine, a brand name for trifluoperazine, carries a warning that it can mmpair physical and mental abilitities, the Forth Worth newspaper said.

Connors had been a commercial airline pilot for 31 years. He grounded himself for medical reasons in 1983 but was reinstated, the Star-Telegram said.

Medical investigators were unable to analyze Connors' remains for drugs, although they tested for alcohol and found none, said Rachel Halterman, a National Transportation Safety Board spokeswoman.

The board learned about Connors' prescription records last week from attorneys for plaintiffs in the Fort Worth case, she said.

"We are now looking into it to see if we'll reopen the investigation," Ms. Halterman told the Star-Telegram.

In a report released in August 1986, the NTSB concluded the crash was caused by several factors, including the crew's decision to fly into a thunderstorm, lack of timely weather information, and lack of training by Delta on avoiding wind shear, a sudden violent shift in wind direction and speed often found underneath thunderstorms.

Ms. Halterman said investigators did not find any evidence of the use of Stelazine, either in its review of FAA medical records or in an interview with Connors' widow, Kathleen. Mrs. Connors declined comment about the prescription records.

More that 50 liability suits arising from the crash have been combined for trial in Fort Worth federal court. Most were filed by passengers and their relatives against Delta.

The airline has filed a claim against the federal government, saying air traffic controllers and weather forecasters failed to warn the flight crew of dangerous weather conditions. Mrs. Connors also has sued the government.

Rivals Label Straw Poll 'Mickey Mouse'

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — George Bush and Pat Robertson looked to finish far ahead of their Republican presidential rivals Saturday in a Florida straw poll derided as meaningless and "a stacked deck" by the also-rans.

The vice president's supporters said he had to make a robust showing to avoid a perception of weakness in one of his stronghold states. And Robertson, the former television evangelist, was hoping for a strong second-place finish in balloting at the party's state convention.

The others were dismissing the whole thing as "a non-event" and — in a reference to the Orlando area's best-known attraction — "Mickey Mouse."

The problem for Bush's challengers — except for Robertson whose organization made a vigorous effort to enlist uncommitted delegates — was that about 42 percent of the 2,500 voters were GOP insiders, longtime party workers, state officials and people appointed by party groups.

Most of the delegates named by that selection process have been Reagan-Bush supporters for years.

Thus, Bush was calling the contest an important test leading to Super Tuesday, when delegates to the Republican National Convention will be selected in 17 states next March.

Robertson, who earlier shocked Bush with his strength in Iowa, Michigan and South Carolina, publicly claimed support from more than half of the 1,500 at-large participants here in advance of Saturday's voting. His supporters had spent months of organizational work on the county level.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, second in most national polls to Bush, called the popularity contest meaningless and said delegates should just as well "vote for Mickey Mouse," a reference to the Disney World environment of the convention site.

Dole, the only candidate who officially requested he be left off the straw poll ballot, said he was here to show he was "a broad-based national candidate." He said Bush had been running for eight years and that the vice president's strategy was to take over party organizations in as many states as he could.

"That's the strategy ... get the rich and the famous. But that doesn't mean he's going to win those states," said Dole, who did not stay for the voting but left behind an 18-minute videotape shown during the candidates' speech period.

GOP State Chairman Jeanie Austin denied charges of favoritism, saying the complainers "have beaten that horse to death. If they haven't gotten organized in Florida by now, they have no one to blame but themselves, and they are shifting the blame."

Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig, who earlier blasted the convention balloting as "a stacked deck" and said he wouldn't participate, changed his mind and showed up Saturday morning to court delegates.

"It's a non-event in many respects. It is flawed in its content and its character," Haig told a press conference before speaking to the convention.

Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont stayed away.

Bush told several hundred supporters at a Friday night rally, "We got kicked pretty good in Iowa in a straw poll (by Robertson) and I vowed I would never lose another one."

Florida is one of Bush's strongest states, and he counts Gov. Bob Martinez, Lt. Gov. Bobby Brantley, Secretary of State Jim Smith, five of the seven Republican congressmen and 36 of 60 GOP state legislators as supporters and campaign workers. His son Jeb Bush was a Martinez appointee as state secretary of commerce.

FLORIDA REPUBLICANS — Political signs abound in Orlando, Fla., Saturday as state Republicans demonstrate for a variety of candidates during their "Presidency II" convention. Battle Is Far From Over On South Mountain's Fate

By DEB RIECHMANN
Associated Press Writer

MIDDLETOWN, Md. (AP) — Battle lines formed on South Mountain again this fall, pitting property owners against preservationists 125 years after Civil War soldiers shed blood on the wooded, western Maryland terrain.

Landowners have blocked an attempt to declare a 2,000-acre section of the mountain a National Historic Landmark. But they remain worried that the latest clash has been simply a prelude to a full-fledged invasion yet to come.

"We've won the first round, but I don't think the battle is over," said Richard Robertson of Middletown, who lives in a stone house on 30 acres of the mountain. "One of our biggest fears is that they're trying to make this a national park or a state park."

Earlier this year, members of the Hagerstown Civil War Round Table, a group of Civil War enthusiasts, applied to have a section of the mountain declared a National Historic Landmark because of its ties to America's past.

The area, which includes Crampton's, Fox's and Turner's gaps, was the scene of heavy fighting between Confederate and Union forces three days before the Battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862 — the single bloodiest day of the War Between the States.

"The objective was to designate the South Mountain battlefield as a site of national significance to all Americans," said Dennis Frye, a member of the round table who prepared the application seeking National Historic Landmark status. "It was simply a designation and nothing more than that."

The designation would not deprive landowners of any property rights or place any restrictions on how the land could be used, Frye said.

The idea of recognizing the land stained by Civil War soldiers' blood, however, was not welcomed by many of the 47 property owners who would be affected by the designation. Fearing increased traffic, litter and noise from unwanted tourists, they mobilized, formed the South Mountain Citizens Association, and publicly voiced their opposition.

"The battle actually took place right in front of my house. We're constantly digging up bullets, pieces of mortar shells. That's one of the reasons why we bought the house — because it was a battlefield and we were intrigued by it," said Robertson, president of the citizens' association.

"I'm not against historic sites, or against battlefields. I don't want my place to be a battlefield. OK? This is a home site. This is where I live."

A majority of the property owners joined Robertson in objecting to the designation and forwarded their "no votes" to the National Park System Advisory Board, which met last week in California. At the meeting, the 12-member advisory group recommended to Interior Secretary Donald Hodel that the land be considered eligible for National Historic Landmark status.

"It cannot be designated a landmark because of the landowners' objections, but it can be found eligible for landmark status," said Jim Charleton, a historian at the National Park Service in Washington.

If enough landowners ever withdrew their objections, he said, the area eventually could become one of about 1,800 National Historic Landmarks in the United States.

But despite their successful attempt at blocking the action, Robertson and other property owners fear the dispute is far from over.

Veterans Groups Want Cabinet Status For VA

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterans groups have been pushing to gain Cabinet status for the Veterans Administration since the troops returned from World War II, and they think they're closer than ever to winning it.

President Reagan last week endorsed the idea, pushing aside the big-government concerns that led him to oppose the two Cabinet creations of his predecessor, the departments of Education and Energy.

A bill that would turn the Veterans Administration, now the largest independent agency of government, into a Department of Veterans Affairs is scheduled to be taken up by the full House of Representatives on Monday. More than half the House has endorsed the concept and passage is expected.

In the Senate, where hearings are set for February, there is bipartisan support for the idea, too. Supporters range from conservatives Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to liberals Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Advocates of the nation's 27 million veterans want the change in hopes it will increase the visibility and voice of veterans and the VA's benefit programs.

For Congress it's a virtually no-cost way to please millions of voting veterans. For the president it's a symbolic gesture of importance to a largely conservative constituency — and a chance to get in on an idea that Congress showed signs of starting to move on anyway.

"This is someplace where he can solidify the patriotic, conservative sector that was starting to erode for him," said Mike Leaveck of the Vietnam Veterans of America.

Even without the word "department," the VA is a huge component of government. It's bigger than all but the Defense Department in employees. It's the biggest health care system in the western world, with 172 hospitals and hundreds more clinics and nursing homes. If it was a company, it would be the single largest home mortgage guarantor and the fifth largest life insurer. And it operates 111 cemeteries.

Although the idea of elevating the VA has met quiet resistance for decades, virtually no public opposition has been raised in Congress.

Two weeks ago when the House Governmental Operations Committee held hearings, neither the White House nor the VA would send a representative or state a position.

There has been some opposition to VA programs, however; former Reagan budget director David Stockman considered VA benefits part of the welfare state he wanted slashed, and he called the VA hospital system "a giant boondoggle of inefficiency, waste and duplication."

Making the case against a Veterans Affairs Department last week, an editorial in The Washington Post disputed the argument that veterans need a stronger voice.

"The problem is that their voice is already too strong," the newspaper said. "At $27 billion a year the programs in their behalf are excessive, disproportionate to either need or just claims for past services. But the power of the veterans' groups is such that, as in this reorganization plan, the politicians just continue to give ground."

Despite their reputation for having advocates of strong influence in Washington, veterans programs have been under budget-cutting pressure like the rest of government. Reagan's most recent budget proposal would have caused significant layoffs of VA medical staff.

The VA is facing a future of dramatically increasing demands with a demographic tidal wave of older veterans. As the World War II generation grows elderly, there will be more people turning to the VA for care.

The "aging veteran" problem is this: the five million veterans aged 65 or older will increase to nearly 9 million by the year 2000, the VA estimates. In nine years, the Paralyzed Veterans of America estimates, two of every three American males 65 or older will be veterans and entitled to veterans care.

The VA's budget has risen steadily every year, but critics say it has not kept up with inflation or the cost of medical care. R. Jack Powell, director of the Paralyzed Veterans of America, says his group calculates VA annual spending when adjusted for inflation has actually declined $1 billion under Reagan.

"This image of veterans always bellying up to the bar and saying more, more, more, is simply not the case," Powell said in an interview.

With the veterans groups' approval, Congress and the administration have applied a "means test" for veterans seeking VA hospital care. That means top priority goes to those whose ailments are connected to service injuries, and to the poor, and for the first time, middle and upper income veterans must pay a portion of their treatment costs — if they can get in a VA hospital.

Parents Dislike Textbook

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — A group of parents is trying to dump an eighth grade social studies textbook they claim is too conservative and paints too rosy a picture of the nation's recent history.

"It's very distorted, very biased and gives the children a supremist view of themselves and the country," said Honey Nestle, a peace activist and parent of an eighth grader. "One of the parents described a picture of a slave camp as looking like the Club Med."

"It's not that it just oversimplifies. It glosses over facts," said Sophy Craze, another parent, who maintained the sections on current history "read like they were put out by Ronald Reagan's publicity department."

"The book tries to glorify and resolve the issues and paint the U.S. as the tough guy fighting communism rather than teaching that ... there are differing opinions and no absolute answers," she said.

School Superintendent Donald Frizzle said he received a report Friday from a committee established to review the book and expected to issue a decision this week.

The book debate has been spirited in this town that's home to two private colleges and the University of Massachusetts and has a centuries-long tradition of speaking its own mind. Amherst was one of the first communities to join the nuclear-freeze movement, and the town meeting has voted to oppose every U.S. war from 1812 to Vietnam.

To Social Studies Department Chairman Robert Kelly the issue is one of censorship, this time by liberal, instead of conservative groups and a challenge to the authority of the district's teachers.

"They don't want to call it that, but what they are trying to do is no different from the creationists," Kelly said.

"There are always hazards when decisions on books are made on the basis of correct political disposition," agreed Junior High Principal John Burruto.

Judy deTunq, vice president of marketing for MacMillan Press, said "The History of the American Nation," first published in 1982 and now in a second edition, has been one of its better sellers and has been used without controversy by a wide variety of school systems, including Chicago, Indianapolis, Rochester, N.Y., and Springfield, Mass.

John Patrick, who heads a social studies curriculum research center at the University of Indiana, wrote the book with Carol Berkin, a professor at Baruch College whose specialty is women's history. Patrick said he was "flabbergasted" and "terribly dismayed" by the dispute.

"I've been an educator for 52 years and I've never run into a situation like this. ... It would be easier to deal with the criticism if it was coming from the other side," said Patrick, who described himself as "rather liberal."

The book was praised by Curriculum Review for its "fine emphasis on women and minorities designed to redress previous negligence," and, he said, many of the parents' criticisms of the treatment of such groups could be rebutted by an examination of the text.

PAIR REUNITED — Sonny Bono and his former wife, singer Cher, were reunited for the first time in over 10 years when they sang their biggest hit, "I Got You Babe," on Friday night's edition of "Late Night With David Letterman." (AP Laserphoto)

Sonny And Cher Reunited On TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Sonny Bono looked eager and Cher somewhat hesitant, but with a little prodding from host David Letterman the two sang on national television the song that launched their careers as one of the 1960s' top acts.

"It's so interesting because we pretty much remembered it," Cher said afterward.

"It's been 10 years since we worked together," said Bono, her former husband.

The two, appearing on NBC's "Late Night With David Letterman," sang their first record, "I've Got You Babe," which sold more than 3 million copies in 1965.

The song was unplanned, according to Letterman, although it was Cher's idea that she and Bono appear together on the program, which aired early this morning.

Cher, 41, an award-winning actress, also performed "I Found Someone," the first single from her latest album, her first in six years.

During that song, she wore a revealing leather costume that recalled the controversy over the Bob Mackie gowns that failed to cover her navel on the "Sonny and Cher" show, which ran during the 1960s and early 1970s.

"What the hell were you wearing?" Letterman asked after a commercial break, during which time Cher had changed into a more modest outfit. "Was there a fire at the hotel?"

Bono, 52, who owns a restaurant and is a candidate for mayor in Palm Springs, Calif., said he and his former wife, who has compared him to Mussolini in recent interviews, remain good friends.

"When we see each other, there's something that always connects there," he said. "That won't ever go away. But then pride enters into it and sometimes the public puts us against each other."

Cher added, "We have a very strange relationship that no one will ever understand, except us."

She avoided questions about whether they would ever reunite, professionally or romantically.

"What are you trying to get here?" she asked Letterman. "I expected more from you, somehow."

Cher admitted a "Sonny and Cher" concert could be lucrative but added, "It was better that we came back together like this on this show."

Ginsburg Cable Work Under Fire

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is conducting a "threshold inquiry" to determine whether to launch a more formal probe into conflict allegations leveled against former Supreme Court nominee Douglas Ginsburg, a federal law enforcement official says.

The official, who spoke late Friday on condition of anonymity, said the Office of Public Integrity, part of the department's Criminal Division, would examine the propriety of Ginsburg's work as head of the Justice Department's Antitrust Division from 1985 until he became a federal appeals judge last November.

Ginsburg, whose nomination to the Supreme Court collapsed a week ago, personally handled a department effort to have the Supreme Court extend First Amendment protection to cable operators. He had nearly $140,000 invested in a cable company at the time.

A threshold inquiry is the first step in determining whether sufficient evidence exists for the department to request an independent counsel to investigate possible criminal actions, the official said.

Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten refused comment on the matter. W. Stephen Cannon, a spokesman for Ginsburg, did not immediately return a telephone message seeking comment on Saturday.

The Associated Press reported Nov. 1 that Ginsburg helped win the cable television case when he had an investment in Rogers Communications Inc. of Toronto, Canada, which has about 450,000 subscribers in the United States.

The inquiry also involves other cable TV matters handled by the antitrust division, the source said. Such inquiries are supposed to be completed in 60 days, although extensions are possible.

This is the second federal investigation into Ginsburg's possible conflict of interest involving cable television cases. The federal Office of Government Ethics has said it also is looking into Ginsburg's role.

Ginsburg, 41, last Saturday asked President Reagan to drop his nomination to the Supreme Court following the uproar over his admission that he had smoked marijuana in the 1960s and as late as 1979, when he was a professor at Harvard Law School. Ginsburg is now on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C.

The inquiry by the Justice Department has nothing to do with the marijuana smoking, the source said.

In a statement issued the night the AP story came out, Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland, speaking on Ginsburg's behalf, said: "Mr. Ginsburg decided that he could properly participate because the case before the court did not involve any company in which he had a financial interest. ... Mr. Ginsburg determined that the value of his holdings in Rogers would not be financially affected regardless of the outcome of the case."

The Supreme Court, on June 2, 1986, adopted Ginsburg's arguments in the decision that will limit government regulation on the number of cable operators allowed to do business in an area.

Kate Smith Services Held At Lake Placid

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Some 700 people mourned singer Kate Smith on Saturday, nearly a year and a half after her death, to the sound of her trademark "God Bless America" and other tunes she held dear.

The sun peaked through the clouds for the first time Saturday just as the Rev. Robert Lamitie blessed Miss Smith's mausoleum, whose disputed size led to the long delay in burial.

"That puts the crown on everything," said Miss Smith's sister, Helena Steene of Raleigh, N.C.

"She loved Lake Placid and the area and will now be here forever," Mayor Robert Peacock said before Saturday's memorial services.

A compromise between St. Agnes Cemetery officials and will executors on the size of the mausoleum Miss Smith wanted finally paved the way for Friday's entombment ceremony and Saturday's service. Cemetery officials said that what she had specified was too big.

Lamitie began his homily at Saturday's public Mass at St. Agnes Church with the words Miss Smith had used to open her long-running radio program: "Hello everyone, this is Kate Smith."

Miss Smith starred on Broadway, recorded nearly 3,000 songs and made more than 15,000 radio broadcasts. She died at 79 on June 17, 1986, of respiratory failure after several years of poor health.

Miss Smith had attended St. Agnes Church when she visited her summer home in Lake Placid.

Saturday's service included a sampling of some of Miss Smith's favorite songs, including "Amazing Grace," "How Great Thou Art," and "Ave Maria," all of which she performed during her 60-year career.

Miss Smith's recording of "God Bless America" stirred patriotic emotions during World War II and helped raise millions in war bonds.

Irving Berlin, who composed "God Bless America," was invited to Saturday's service, but told organizers he couldn't make the trip.

Millie Williams, a Lake Placid resident who knew Miss Smith, said the mood in the community Saturday was reverent. "I think people feel this is just a respectful, nice going-away for a very great lady," she said of the services.

Tip O'Neill Hospitalized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr. was in satisfactory condition in a hospital Saturday, while his son declined comment on published reports that his father suffers from cancer of the large intestine.

"He's in good spirits. He's feeling fine. He's walking around," said Christopher R. "Kip" O'Neill, a Washington attorney.

O'Neill declined to comment on reports Saturday in The Boston Globe and The Boston Herald that his father has cancer of the large intestine. He referred a reporter to a statement of his brother, Thomas P. O'Neill III, who said Friday that news reports that his father had cancer were not correct.

The Globe, quoting an unidentified source close to the family, said the former speaker would undergo a biopsy next week that would determine whether a section of his bowel should be surgically removed or treated with radiation.

Meanwhile, spokeswoman for Sibley Memorial Hospital said O'Neill would remain hospitalized Saturday and be released "shortly."

"I expect he'll be released in the next few days," Kip O'Neill said.

The hospital spokeswoman, Fern Stone, said, "He does not have cancer of the prostate but I do not have any further information on his condition or course of treatment on discharge."

"He's resting and is in satisfactory condition," she said.

40 Die As Bus Tumbles Into Lake

By JAVIER PICHARDINI
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A speeding city bus packed with schoolchildren and workers skidded off a dirt road in heavy fog Friday and flipped onto its roof in a shallow lake, killing 40 people and injuring five, authorities said.

A 10-year-old boy who escaped injury said he swam out through a window.

He said he heard a bang, then the driver "applied the brakes hard and the bus skidded. ... All the passengers started falling and they piled up onto the driver." The frightened youngster would not give his name.

The government-owned Route 100 Authority, which owns the bus, issued a statement saying it blew a tire on a front wheel.

A police spokeswoman, Carmen Gutierrez Zamora, said 18 passengers were unhurt in the accident at 6:30 a.m. Friday in the Tiahuac district on the city's southern edge.

She said the bus "tumbled and landed upside down in the muddy, shallow" San Miguel de Xico lake next to the road, its wheels protruding from the water.

The accident occurred on a detour made necessary because recent rains flooded the main route.

"From what survivors said, the road was completely fogged-in and visibility was very poor, and apparently the driver lost control of the vehicle," the police spokeswoman added.

It took divers and other rescuers about six hours to break into the submerged vehicle, take the bodies out and pull the bus from the water.

No information was available immediately on the conditions of the five injured people, who were taken to different hospitals.

Ms. Gutierrez Zamora said one person died soon after arrival at a Red Cross hospital and another died in a rescue helicopter.

The other 38 bodies were taken to Chalco, a town six miles east of the accident site, where the local auditorium was turned into a morgue. After identification, the bodies were placed in plastic bags for relatives to claim.

District Attorney David Castillo said he questioned five survivors soon after midday.

They told him "the bus was full and some passengers were riding, or hanging, outside. The bus was apparently going excessively fast and in dense fog hit a bump or hole and the driver apparently lost control," Castillo said.

According to the company statement, the "principal causes" of the accident "were three: the dense fog, the loss of a tire and the inadequate condition of the road, since recent rains caused the earth to soften."

Italian Premier Goria Resigns After Liberal Party Pulls Out

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Premier Giovanni Goria resigned Saturday after the tiny Liberal Party backed out of his problem-plagued, 3½-month-old coalition government over proposed tax increases.

President Francesco Cossiga asked Goria, a Christian Democrat, to stay on in a caretaker capacity until a new government is formed.

Goria's government was the 47th in Italy since World War II. The shortest was the 1972 nine-day adminstration of Giulio Andreotti.

The president could ask Goria to try to put together a new coalition, or turn the challenge over to someone else. Cossiga was expected to begin discussions Sunday with leaders of the major parties.

On Friday night, the Liberals quit Goria's five-party coalition after complaining that the proposed 1988 national budget emphasized higher taxes over spending cuts.

Squabbling over how to deal with the deficit was just the latest trouble for Goria, who, at 44, was Italy's youngest premier. Even with the departure of the Liberals, who won only 2.2 percent of the popular vote last June, the government had a majority in Parliament.

But when Goria formed his government, its partners agreed on specific programs, including how to try to cut the deficit.

A few weeks ago, Goria jokingly referred to his coalition as a government not of programs but "of problems."

Among the stickier happenings during his 109-day tenure were the collapse of the once-booming Italian stock market, a prison revolt, speculation on the Italian lira, deadly flooding in northern Italy and a debate on how Roman Catholic instruction should be given to public school students.

Goria survived a confidence vote on the deployment of a naval task force in the Persian Gulf, decided upon after an Italian merchant vessel was attacked there.

Journalists trying to learn if the Christian Democrats might push for a bid by Goria to form a new government, questioned party spokesman Mario Mastella about the prospects for the caretaker premier.

Mastella said only, "We support reassembling the political picture" of a well-working majority coalition.

Besides the Liberals and Christian Democrats, Italy's biggest vote-getters, other parties in Goria government formed July 28 were the Socialists, the Republicans and the Social Democrats. Italy's second-largest party, the Communists, have been shut out of governing coalitions since the war.

Goria had scheduled his first visit to the United States as premier for Dec. 16. It was not known if the trip to Washington was still on now.

In a communique, the Republican party leadership noted: "The problems that the country faces, and above all, the economic and financial situation ... not to mention the support needed by the naval force in the gulf, do not suggest, nor do they allow, the government to take a vacation."

At a meeting last week, Italy's top industrialists called for a strong government to try to keep the economy from slipping after its recent solid growth.

Goria served as treasury minister during the economic boom that accompanied the 3½-year government under Bettino Craxi, the longest-lasting government before its resignation last March 3 in a power-sharing dispute between Craxi's Socialists and the Christian Democrats. The relationship between the two major coalition partners remained tense during the Goria government.

Arab World's Diplomatic Barriers Around Egypt Continue To Erode

By MAURICE GUINDI
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Arab world's long diplomatic boycott of Egypt crumbled further Saturday with Arab League members Morocco and Kuwait joining Iraq and the United Arab Emirates in resuming relations.

At least three more of the League's 21 active members — Saudi Arabia, Qatar and Bahrain — were reported to have made similar decisions but not yet announced them.

General Arab ostracism of Egypt, initiated in March 1979 to punish Cairo for its peace treaty with Israel, is now apparently ending due to the threat to the Arab world of Persian Iran's fundamentalist revolution.

The boycott never was total. Oman, Sudan and Somalia never quit their embassies in Cairo and the Palestine Liberation Organization, Jordan and Djibouti normalized relations in ensuing years.

Saturday's restoration with Kuwait was announced in a joint statement released simultaneously in Cairo and Kuwait. The Moroccan decision was disclosed in a Foreign Ministry statement issued in the capital, Rabat.

The two countries' top Cairo-based diplomats, Mohammed Tazi of Morocco and Abdel-Razzak el-Kandary of Kuwait, met separately with Egypt's foreign minister, Esmat Abdel-Meguid.

The two also raised their countries' flags on the buildings housing their missions. Previously, the Moroccan mission was part of Senegal's Embassy, and the Kuwaiti mission was attached to the Malaysian Embassy.

The Egyptian-Kuwaiti statement said the resumption was inspired by "faith in the unity of Arab destiny, the strong brotherly relations between the two states and peoples and a keen desire to consolidate Arab solidarity."

Apparently referring to the 7-year-old war between Arab Iraq and Persian Iran, the statement said fence-mending is necessary "to confront the dangers and challenges threatening the security and the future of the Arab world."

Kuwait's ships and oil-loading terminal have been attacked by Iranian missiles and gunboats. Iran accuses it of aiding the war effort of its neighbor Iraq. Egypt, the strongest Arab military power with a 450,000-man standing army, has pledged to help Kuwait if asked.

Egypt's 50 million population also makes it the most populous of Arab countries. Iran has 55 million people, about three times that of Iraq.

Kuwait's restoration of relations was announced after a meeting in Kuwait of the Cabinet, presided over by the ruler of the Persian Gulf state, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah.

Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheik Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jaber told reporters later that the Arab countries "cannot do without Egypt, and Egypt cannot do without its brothers in the Arab nation (world)."

Morocco said in its statement that its resumption of diplomatic relations with Egypt stems from the resolution passed at last week's emergency Arab League summit in Amman, Jordan, which gave members of the 32-year-old League freedom to restore diplomatic ties with Egypt.

The United Arab Emirates, another gulf state, was the first to act. Iraq, which despite the break has bought more than $1.5 billion worth of military hardware from Egypt since 1981, resumed relations Friday.

Rashed Abdullah, the United Arab Emirates' minister of state for external affairs, told reporters in Cairo Thursday that Saudi Arabia, Bahrain and Qatar also agreed to reopen embassies in Cairo.

Seventeen League states and the PLO severed ties with Cairo after it signed the treaty with Israel. The League also suspended Egypt's membership, banned financial aid and transferred its headquarters from Cairo to Tunisia.

Between the 1967 Arab-Israeli war and the 1979 sanctions, Egypt had received more than $5 billion in loans and grants from oil-rich Arab countries.

On taking office in 1981, President Hosni Mubarak embarked on a conciliatory policy toward Arab detractors and repeatedly emphasized that Egypt respected its Arab commitments as much as it did the treaty with Israel.

Jordan was the first state to restore relations, in 1984, and Djibouti followed two years later.

To the citizens of Pitt County:

Thank you for your support during my recent campaign for Pitt County Board of Education.

Convention Protest

HOECHSTADT, West Germany (AP) — About 2,500 people, shouting "Oppose the ghost of fascism!," protested the annual convention of the far-right National Democratic Party in this city just north of Nuremberg Saturday.

Police said 12 protesters were arrested, including one accused of kicking and injuring a party member.

The others arrested were found to be carrying tear gas canisters, knives and chains, police reported.

Authorities prevented the rally from being held in the city's central marketplace for fear of possible fights between protesters and party members.

The protest was organized by the opposition Social Democratic Party, the German Labor Confederation and the leftist Greens party.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Southern Link Vitally Needed

A highly important highway link for eastern North Carolina has been added to the Transportation Improvement Program by the Board of Transporatation.

Regional board member Randy Doub announced that the newest plan, approved Friday, includes the four-laning of N.C. 11 south of Kinston to tie in with I-40 to Wilmington. Construction from Jackson Store to Pink Hill is scheduled for 1993-94 at an estimated cost of $21 million. Right-of-way acquistion on N.C. 11 from Pink Hill to Kenansville is set for 1994-96 with construction to begin in 1996 at $36.4 million. The section from Kenansville to I-40 would be on a new right-of-way with acquistion to be in 1991-93 and construction to being in 1992. Total cost would be $24 million.

How necessary is that to Pitt County? It is essential to the future development of eastern North Carolina. Think of it. N.C. 11 is already four laned from Greenville to a point south of Kinston. I-40 construction from Raleigh to Wilmington is assured. The link needed to tie the central section to southeastern North Carolina is the projects which have now been included in the TIP.

The effort to make this highway a reality has taken a giant step forward by its inclusion in TIP. Nevertheless its construction is not assured until work is actually under way. A future administration could decide to move the funding to some pet project and delay this corridor for an indefinite time. It has been known to happen to eastern North Carolina but it should not be allowed to happen to this important project.

What can the people of the area do to help assure this project? We must support it in every way possible. The chambers of commerce, county and city governments along the way should organize to promote the four-laning.

It will involve the convenience and economic development of a huge area of our state and constant vigilance will be required to make certain it develops on schedule. The rewards will be a four lane highway from Greenville to Wilmington and eventually on into the coastal regions of South Carolina. A worthwhile project? You can believe it.

Greenville's Interstate Connection

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

I-95 is one of the great highways of the nation, and indeed the world. It was born of the interstate highway system which was instituted during the Eisenhower administration. The concept was a system of interstate roads which would be the throughways of the nation. There would be no stop lights and all access would be by interchanges. Full fencing would protect the right-of-ways, keeping animal life out of the paths of vehicles. It is one American dream that was realized and the interstate system is nearing completion.

For the Greenville area I-95 is the closest interstate road — only about 40 miles away at Rocky Mount and Wilson. Alas, most of this magnificant highway, which stretches from the northmost Maine to the southern tip of Florida, is seldom used by the people from the Greenville area. The reason is that it is shorter to follow area roads to Weldon, if traveling to the north, or Fayetteville on a trip to the south. Thus most of I-95 is virtually unknown to area travelers, including this one.

Recently I decided to at least partially rectify that. I traveled on the new U.S. 264 to Zebulon, doubled back on U.S. 64 to Rocky Mount and then followed I-95 from Rocky Mount to Wilson.

The highway, while mostly financed by federal funds, is owned and maintained by North Carolina. It is almost like an international corridor. Traffic was heavy on the Sunday that I traveled it and the majority of the vehicles were from states other than North Carolina, as well as from provinces of Canada. There were numerous trucks and many camper-type vehicles lumbering along on their way to Florida, or returning. The surface is concrete, rather than the asphalt used on new sections of U.S. 64 and U.S. 264. Already, however, the concrete is beginning to show signs of wear from the constant pounding that the around-the-clock traffic gives it.

I-95 is beautifully designed with stands of trees along much of its right-of-way and the lanes of traffic occasionally are separated by islands of trees. The vegetation, however, shows signs of the constant atmosphere of vehicle exhaust which surrounds it.

Traffic speeds along, thanks partially to the recently re-enacted 65 mile per hour speed limit. If traffic ignored the old 55 mph limit it also ignores the 65 mph limit.

The end of my trip came at Wilson where I exited in favor of the new U.S. 264 for the return to Greenville.

Signs there tell travelers that U.S. 264 east is an alternate route to the national seashore on North Carolina's outer banks. The signs show that it is the exit for Wilson. Significantly they also tell travelers that it is the exit to Greenville.

Threats Persist After Missiles

If all goes as planned, another Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting will be staged soon in Washington — or the vicinity thereof. It is also possible a treaty will be signed banning all United States and Soviet short and intermediate range nuclear missiles.

The meeting between the two heads of state is of value because, while both of the principals will be wearing their best smiles and seeking to impress each other with their peaceful outlooks, there would also be efforts made to interpret words and gestures for clues as to real possibilities a lasting degree of harmony is attainable.

The missile-ban treaty is again almost a symbolic gesture. It involves less than five percent of nuclear warheads in the superpowers' arsenals. Still, it is far from an empty step. Both the Soviet Union and the United States must work their way toward dismantling the threat of mutual suicide. The proposed agreement is a small beginning but nevertheless it is a beginning.

Both superpowers have agreed in principle to halve their strategic nuclear forces though accomplishing that end is probably going to be left to future leaders.

Citizens of this nation seldom think in terms of the heavy price Moscow has paid with its tremendous investment in nuclear weaponry. But if the price Americans have paid in straining our economy to create a huge — and now questionable — deterrent can be used as a measuring stick, it must have been an even greater burden on the weaker economy of the Soviet Union.

Mr. Gorbachev knows that story much better than we, and it is bound to be a factor in any aspirations he has for creating a better life for his own people.

Americans have just observed a most sobering holiday honoring their veterans of past conflicts. Remembering the thousands of dead in conflicts with "conventional arms" provided another reminder that if and when the nuclear threat is laid to rest, there remain a host of conventional weapons which are also going to be demanding attention.

Democrats Must Seize The Moment

Robert Kuttner

This ought to be a great time for Democrats. With the market collapse, laissez-faire economics is once more in disrepute. But the Democrats have not yet figured out how to seize the moment because they are reluctant to embrace their own party's legacy of economic activism.

The first disgrace of laissez-faire economics, in 1932, made the Democratic Party America's usual majority party. Prior to FDR, Democrats elected just two presidents in 76 years — Woodrow Wilson and Grover Cleveland. With the New Deal came a formula that bound citizen to polity through a social contract guaranteeing economic opportunity and socialized security.

Politically, the genius of the New Deal formula was that it provided for social justice and political community via inclusion. Implicit in the party's philosophy was the idea that the market doesn't automatically allocate its prizes fairly. But Democrats were reluctant to de-throne the free market as a national icon. Democratic programs like Social Security and Medicare, expanded public education, starter homes for families and low rent housing for the elderly, were never advertised as taking from the haves to give to the have-nots (though they often had that result). Instead the party defined needs that benefitted a substantial majority of the electorate.

This canny conception of society, market and polity tapped the American ideal of egalitarianism and built empathy and political cohesion — but without being terribly radical about it. The mixed economy and the social state played the same role for the modern Democratic party that the much sentimentalized bucket of coal and Christmas turkey played for Tammany. To understand all of this as mere "interest-group liberalism" — a ragtag coalition of out-groups with their palms extended — is to miss the fact that the great body of voters welcomed the Democrats' new conception.

The grand era of the mixed economy and the welfare state (1946-1973) was a quarter-century of unique economic prosperity and social peace. But in the 1970s, in the shelter of a mixed economy, the free market recovered its strength, both as institution and ideology, heralding the decline of the Democrats. In a second laissez-faire era, the symbols of national advancement now belonged to conservatives. Policies were judged by the criteria of deregulating, privatizing, and budget-cutting, of liberating free markets and dismantling mixed ones. The globalization of the economy compounded the problem, because social contracts necessarily operate within the boundaries of the nation state.

The second laissez-faire era, seemingly, came to an abrupt end on Oct. 19, 1987. Among the debris from the stock market crash were the following clues to an impending ideological sea-change:

The Wall Street Journal, post-crash, ran a front page story explaining that the crash was not the beginning of another great depression — thanks to depository insurance, bank regulation, social security, welfare spending, securities laws and a host of other interventions that the Journal regularly opposes as assaults on the free market.

Most of the ideological energy lately has belonged to movements beginning with the prefix "neo" — neo-conservatism, neo-liberalism, and neo-classical economics. Each of these movements, in its own way, acts as a solvent on the glue that binds the Democratic party to the democratic electorate. Democrats have been cowed by the charge that they are the party of "tax and tax, spend and spend," forgetting that the original version of that slogan (attributed to FDR's aide Harry Hopkins) went "tax and tax, spend and spend, elect and elect." Lately, many Democrats have accepted the idea that fiscal prudence dictates the Tax without the Spend, which could mean without the Elect as well.

The neo-conservatives warned that "McGovernism" — meaning a leftwing foreign policy, a bohemian lifestyle, a radical conception of racial justice and economic equity, and a more participatory set of party rules — was wrecking the Democrats' necessary links to the white working class.

The insight was partly accurate. Yet as neo-conservatism evolved, under the tutelage of magazine editors like Irving Kristol and Norman Podhorez and a stable of other conservative policy entrepreneurs, the neo-cons positioned themselves on the weak side of their own insight. Instead of demanding that the Democratic Party keep faith with the Roosevelt formula of broad inclusionary government, they became mainly a lobby for dismantling social programs.

By the same token, neo-liberalism began in the early 1970s as an idealistic call for cleaner politics and more effective government, for a liberalism true to its values yet rigorously skeptical about its means. As Charles Peters, editor of the Washington Monthly and godfather of the movement, wrote in his "Neoliberal's Manifesto" in 1983, "We still believe in liberty and justice and a fair chance for all, in mercy for the afflicted and help for the down and out. But we no longer automatically favor big unions or oppose the military and big business. Indeed, in our search for solutions that work, we have come to distrust all automatic responses, liberal or conservative."

Yet despite the genuine high-mindedness, neo-liberalism has also evolved into a movement quite at odds with the necessary Democratic approach to citizen, government, and party. Its quest for ad hoc "new ideas" has been splendidly disdainful of politics. It has joined traditional conservatives in celebrating the Joy of Entrepreneurship. Neo-liberal writers have been among the most scathing in their denunciation of trade unionism. At bottom, neo-liberalism seems to agree with neo-conservativism that government is more often a problem than a solution. A recent influential article by Mickey Kaus, a protege of Charles Peters, recommending mandatory low-paid work as the solution to welfare, was scarcely different in tone or analysis from the most prominent neo-conservative work on the subject, Charles Murray's "Losing Ground."

Today, most economists in this tradition, including those advising the Democratic party, are in substantial agreement with their Republican colleagues about the wisdom of de-regulation, the value of floating exchange rates, the dangers of economic planning, and the distortions introduced by trade unions. Just as traditional economists had to be bludgeoned by the plain reality of the Great Depression before they accepted even the most tepid form of Keynesianism, most economists today are again cheerleaders for laissez-faire. In effect, the Democrats' best political instincts are regularly pronounced scientifically unsound by their own economic advisors.

The best political slogan in 1988 is Paul Simon's: "I'm not a neo-anything. I'm a Democrat." The case for a mixed econony as necessary economics and sound Democratic politics was never better.

Because Democrats have been so intimidated by the temporary conservative ascendance, it fell to Wall Street to bury laissez-faire a second time. Now the stage ought to be set for a Democratic renaissance. However the party of the common people still needs to recall the other lesson of the 1930s: that a mixed economy and a social conception of security are also good politics.

Today, most economists in this tradition, including those advising the Democratic party, are in substantial agreement with their Republican colleagues about the wisdom of de-regulation, the value of floating exchange rates, the dangers of economic planning, and the distortions introduced by trade unions. Just as traditional economists had to be bludgeoned by the plain reality of the Great Depression before they accepted even the most tepid form of Keynesianism, most economists today are again cheerleaders for laissez-faire.

Reagan Administration Decomposes, Drifts Toward Its End

Ross Baker

There is a scene in "Zorba the Greek" in which Madame Hortense, the village harlot, is in her bed dying and the people of the town flock to her apartment. They come not to pay homage to the old woman but to steal her possessions. As she breathes her last, the villagers stream past her bearing bedsprings, bird cages, anything that can be carried. Her final moments are blighted by human avarice.

So it is with the advanced senescence of the Reagan administration. Everyone in Washington has his eyes fixed on the monitor over the bed, and as the brain waves begin to flatten out, the hospital administrators gleefully anticipate getting the bed ready for the next occupant.

This administration has always been a little unpredictable. The Reagan administration made good on its promises to an extent that confounded both its friends and its enemies, yet it never went far enough to exalt the former or flatten the latter. Ronald Reagan turned out to be more flexible on East-West issues than liberals dared to hope, but was even more defiant on taxes than any of them had feared. Following that pattern, the administration has now entered the stage of active decomposition sooner and more noisomely than anyone had anticipated.

The mid-term congressional election at Reagan's sixth year in office was a kind of two-minute warning for the incumbent president. The first team left the field and the scrubs came on. Remarkably, a sizeable number of varsity players remained on the field despite the fact that only Sam Pierce of Housing and Urban Development is of the original Cabinet. Howard H. Baker Jr., who did not join the administration until after the Iran-Contra scandal broke, was not on the team in 1981 but is a first-team type. James Baker, while no longer at the White House, is still a very influential figure in his role as treasury secretary. Kenneth Duberstein, who had so admirably handled the administration's congressional liaison and left the White House, was recalled from his corporate lobbying firm to restore relations with Capitol Hill in the aftermath of the Iran-Contra affair. George P. Shultz, while not a Cabinet original, has been on the job since the middle of July 1982. Ed Meese is still at his post at the Justice Department, where he has been since the beginning of 1985. Meese has been with the president in a high-level capacity since Reagan's days as governor of California. Meese is not just a Cabinet member: he is a senior Reagan adviser and personal confidante. What makes this political denouement so horrifying, then, is that it is the first team that has dropped the ball.

When presidential administrations come apart, the bills still get paid. The public services get performed. The Army stands guard and the Navy goes on patrol. A political crisis under our form of government does not see anxious crowds gathering outside the White House or soldiers posted in radio stations.

When a superpower democracy begins to drift, the effects are less obvious but no less dire: Allies become nervous or defiant; financial markets tremble; adversaries look for targets of opportunity, and the attention of citizens begins to wander. This last is perhaps the worst, because it means that it is harder to rally them to support the objectives that the president wants to accomplish in his waning days at the White House.

Why have things fallen apart so spectacularly and at such an accelerated pace? Part of the trouble can be traced to the president himself. He has become increasingly irascible but less lucid. His cantankerous mood has no obvious purpose. At a recent White House-Capitol Hill summit on the deficit, members of Congress expressed bafflement at the meaning and purpose of the president's table-pounding petulance. Clearly, he has been under pressure ever since Mrs. Reagan's surgery, but the bright prognosis for her has not brightened his mood or sharpened his attention. His last stab at delineating the theoretical basis for deficits during a news conference made you pray that they install a prompter's pit before his next encounter with journalists.

While the president has never been a hands-on executive, his recent slackness has unleashed a form of intramural combat at the White House that has always been on the verge of erupting but had been contained until now: The struggle between the "prags" and the "wingers." The former group, embodied by chief of staff Howard Baker, is locked in mortal and debilitating combat with Attorney General Meese and his troops. Members of Congress, whose role in internal Executive Office affairs would be nominal in a smooth-running White House, have now become major players. Sen. Jesse Helms, once an irritating but distant influence, has become a formidable player and the chief lab technician in charge of administering ideological litmus tests to high-level political appointees.

For a presidency with less auspicious beginnings, this entropic end would have been less shattering. This, after all, is the man who gave us $40 billion in budget cuts in 1981 and gave statutory life to supply-side economics. He triumphed in Grenada, skillfully evaded blame for the Marine barracks calamity in Lebanon, persisted in his support of the Contras, and kept the protectionists at bay. Now he would be doing well if he got the vacancy on the Supreme Court filled on his third try, something he could have pulled off without a hitch in 1981.

Reflecting on that earlier time, the fear among liberals was that in its aggressive conservative activism, the Reagan administration would trample the entire structure of the modern welfare state in the manner of a raging rogue elephant. Much of this apprehension turned out to be unfounded. Today it is instead an inert and confused administration that, through its passivity, is creating a host of serious problems for its successor. Not a rogue elephant on the rampage in 1987; more like a rogue gerbil.

Let The Facts Fall

Thomas Collins

Like most people, reporters and editors operate on a couple of levels. On the one hand, they have their individual tastes, intelligence and common sense. On the other, there are the demands of journalism, which, like an angry god, have to be satisfied. The two are often in conflict when it comes to handling a news story.

Nina Totenberg, the reporter who broke the story about Judge Douglas H. Ginsburg's marijuana smoking, is fortunate in that she works for National Public Radio, which does not put a premium on knee-jerk journalism. A distinguishing feature of its news program, "All Things Considered," is that reporters have the luxury of giving reality its due. Nuances can be acknowledged and a more rounded and accurate perspective has a chance to emerge.

That is why, when she found out that Ginsburg had smoked pot while teaching law at Harvard University, she did not dash to a microphone with the news. "I didn't think of it as something I wanted to lead with but would put it in the story somewhere further down," she said in an interview. "I didn't see it as a screaming headline. I wasn't going to ignore it, but it seemed to me it could be part of the description of the man without focusing on it as the only piece of information about him."

That is not the kind of thinking that would have endeared her to editor Walter Burns of "The Front Page." But then if she were working for a Walter Burns she no doubt would accommodate herself to his kind of journalism. That, too, is part of the news business, and there is nothing wrong with it.

Totenberg, 43, who has been covering Washington for NPR since 1974, said she had gotten an indication of Ginsburg's marijuana puffing the very day he was nominated. She would not say precisely how she found out. "It was not a tip, per se," she said, "but it was not something I went looking for, either. You could say I discovered it quite inadvertently, while probing for information about him."

She said she had the story confirmed and could have gone with it two days later, but since she still had more reporting to do on Ginsburg — and no other reporter had the information — she held off.

It wasn't until she called the Department of Justice for comment about Ginsburg's pot smoking that the story began to come out. "That's what popped the lid off," she said. Department spokesmen were extremely uptight. "They wanted to know how much I knew, and it became clear that I knew quite a bit."

They asked specific questions — how many times had Ginsburg smoked it, how many people had witnessed it, and so on. When it was obvious that a political tornado was taking shape, she gave some of her information to a newspaper reporter. That way, another news organization would have the story and could share the heat if an angry right-wing attack developed. The story would still be her exclusive, since her radio account would beat the print version by a day.

By last Thursday the capital was roaring with the rumor. Reporters who worked for Walter-Burns-style editors were badgering NPR for information. To protect her exclusive, she went on the air with it that evening. In an effort to pre-empt her exclusive, Ginsburg issued a statement admitting that he had smoked marijuana (and was praised by his former boss, Attorny General Edwin Meese, for his forthrightness. There is no limit to these people's hypocrisy.)

As for those who equate her story with journalistic gossip-mongering, Totenberg has a simple reply: "I'm not in the business of suppressing information or evaluating it. I just get it and put it out." Would any reporter have done otherwise?

'Thoughtcrime' On Campus

Timothy Healy

WASHINGTON — Tyranny's first victim is always language, particularly for governments that parade in the trappings of democracy even though the substance is lacking. Writing of the Hungarian revolt in 1956, W.H. Auden put it as tersely as anyone I know:

The Ogre does what ogres can,
Deeds quite impossible for man,
But one prize is beyond his reach,
The Ogre cannot master speech.

The latest ogre down the pike is the government of South Africa, which has recently imposed upon its universities "criteria" to help them preserve "the undisrupted and undisturbed continuance of teaching and research activities." There is not much of a jump from "Academic Freedom Is Conformity" to the more famous slogans from George Orwell's Ministry of Truth: "War Is Peace; Freedom Is Slavery; Ignorance Is Strength."

The "open" universities that accept both black and white students (Rhodes University, the universities of Cape Town, Natal, the Western Cape and The Witwatersrand) derive approximately 80 percent of their support from public funds. The new rules threaten to cut off such funds if their criteria are violated. Some of the support for black students, particularly for their housing, comes from private sources. There is, however, no way the universities could continue without what Americans call "tax-levy money," so the new rules threaten their very being.

Let us by way of illustration apply such rules to the publicly supported University of Maryland or the University of Virginia. Let us suppose also that the federal government has decided that all affirmative-action programs are illegal. Any Maryland or Virginia faculty group discussing affirmative action or, even worse, urging it, any student group supporting affirmative action, any publication that speaks of racial justice will automatically have violated the law. The university board of trustees must then look into the incident and report to the department of education what happened, what disciplinary steps were taken against the students or faculty members involved and finally what the board did to make certain that no affirmative-action talk will occur on campus in the future.

What the South African government seeks is to prevent university discourse, assembly or publication on the explosive topic of apartheid. It is interesting that this subject is never mentioned in the long, intricate set of regulations, but it is clear that in the mind of the minister of national education, any university opposition to apartheid, be it by assembly, speech or publication, is disruptive of academic freedom. De Klerk would make a good member of Orwell's "Thought Police," since he has already subscribed to the concept of "thoughtcrime."

In South African society some vestiges are left of freedom of assembly, freedom of the press and freedom of speech. All three areas are controlled, but despite the controls citizens still manage to talk, meet and publish. Thus the rules imposed on the universities are considerably more stringent than those governing the general public, and universities are naturally vulnerable to political vengeance.

Universities can only claim civic autonomy when they are dealing with their own inner workings and being. Thus no university in any Western state is an enclave immune to police action where it is called for or indeed to governmental sanction where it is justified. But when it comes to the exchange of ideas, to free speech about any topic of any interest to anybody, universities are right to defend savagely their self-governing status.

A further sadness in all this is that the South African open campuses are, with the exception of the churches, the one free forum where black and white can argue, debate and come to know each other. Spend any time at all at the universities of Cape Town or The Witwatersrand, and you have the sense of a new leadership taking shape that could with patience and skill undo the terrible inheritance of apartheid.

Chile's Silenced Journalists

Ariel Dorfman

When Gen. Augusto Pinochet, Chile's dictator, inaugurates the general assembly of the annual Inter-American Press Association in Santiago next week, the members who are gathered there may find themselves somewhat embarrassed. They will, after all, be addressed by a man whose first action, upon seizing power in the 1973 coup that killed democracy, was to raid the newspapers and bomb the radio stations that had been loyal to the deposed constitutional president, Salvador Allende. In the weeks and months and long years that followed, hundreds of journalists were arrested, tortured and sent to concentration camps. Many were executed. A number are still among the disappeared.

Given this collective experience of terror, it is extraordinary that the opposition in Chile should now have several magazines, radio stations and even two newspapers. Though this is partly due to the government's need to prove to the outside world that some semblance of free expression is tolerated, it should be attributed, more than anything else, to the courage of Chilean journalists and their tradition of an independent, critical press. They have stubbornly continued spreading the word in spite of frequent shutdowns and arbitrary prohibitions, in spite of long bouts of prior censorship, in spite of harassment and beatings by the secret police.

In spite of murder.

One morning in early September 1986, I was awakened by an urgent long-distance call from my country. During the night, a journalist friend, Jose Carrasco, had been dragged from his house by a group of men in ski masks; 24 hours later his body was found in a cemetery, ripped apart by bullets.

Although the crime occurred during a strict military curfew when only official vehicles can circulate, the government has, of course, denied any involvement. What it cannot deny is its incompetence (if that is the adequate term) in finding the murderers. That they have not been apprehended is no surprise. Never, in the 14 years since the military takeover, has anyone accused of human-rights violations been brought to trial and condemned.

The message being sent to all independent journalists is therefore quite clear. When you go to bed at night, when you open your eyes the next day, you cannot know what lies in store for you. You are unprotected, exposed, totally vulnerable.

This attempt at silencing the press through fear is not an accidental feature of the dictatorship; it is essential to its survival. If Pinochet is to win an upcoming plebiscite (which most observers believe will be fraudulent) and if he is to continue governing after that until the end of the millennium, he must control the media.

Non-Candidate Cuomo

Rowland Evans & Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Irritation by announced Democratic presidential candidates that Gov. Mario Cuomo's highly- publicized non-candidacy is distracting from their efforts may deepen when NBC soon airs a Tom Brokaw interview with him in which he says "of course, I would do it (run for president)" if no other candidate breaks through and it becomes "an obligation."

Even before that, according to an adviser to one hopeful, the announced candidates had "been thinking he should put up or shut up." But Cuomo is unlikely to follow private advice from Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk to issue a Sherman-like statement unequivocally taking himself out of the 1988 presidential picture. Kirk's blunt recommendation came after Cuomo asked him whether he was becoming a distraction.

A footnote: Cuomo has been friendliest with Sen. Paul Simon among the announced candidates and least friendly with Gov. Michael Dukakis. Conspiracy-minded Democratic insiders say Cuomo would like to step in and save the party from a Simon nomination that he himself had encouraged.

Soft On AIDS

White House aide Gary Bauer, supposedly point man on AIDS, learned about President Reagan's appointment to his commission on the disease of one of the administration's toughest critics by reading about it in the newspapers.

Oregon State Health Administrator Kristine M. Gebbie's appointment was lauded by such foes of Reagan policy as Rep. Henry Waxman of California and gay lobbyist Jeffrey Levi. She has assailed the administration's AIDS testing policy, advocated special treatment for homosexuals and attacked both Reagan and Secretary of Education William J. Bennett.

Moynihan Trouble

A secret Robert Teeter poll shows Democratic Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan barely above the crucial 50 percent mark in a possible New York Senate contest with Republican Rudy Giuliani, the crime-busting U.S. attorney in Manhattan. Teeter, a key adviser to Vice President George Bush, has interpreted this as a highly-favorable omen for Giuliani. He has informed the federal prosecutor that although the poll shows his name recognition is very low throughout the state outside the New York City area, he could beat Moynihan if he can raise enough money and "work hard."

Candidate Flees Campaign Rally

By J.H. LEE
Associated Press Writer

KWANGJU, South Korea (AP) — Presidential candidate Kim Young-sam was rushed to safety by bodygards Saturday when supporters of another opposition candidate hurled rocks and sticks and stormed the dais during a campaign rally.

Kwangju is Kim Dae-jung's main political stronghold.

At least 13 people were hurt, including two press photographers and a lawmaker. Five of the injured were hurt when protesters with sticks attacked a traditional Korean folk dancing troupe with the Kim Young-sam campaign.

Kim Young-sam escaped injury, but some of his aides were hit by rocks and other missiles.

The two Kims have split the opposition by both running for president in elections to be held Dec. 16. Both have predicted that they will win the first direct elections in 16 years and have demanded the other bow out of the race.

Kim Dae-jung broke with Kim Young-sam two months ago and started his own party, the Party for Peace and Democracy. They were in the Reunification Democratic Party, which Kim Young-sam continues to control.

Elsewhere, police broke up protests by radical students against Roh Tae-woo, the candidate of the governing Democratic Justice Party, in two other cities Saturday. Police said about 40 protesters were arrested.

About 70,000 people turned out for the rally in Kwangju, but many appeared to be onlookers. Thousands of people chanting "Kim Dae-jung!" filled the square in front of the railway station before the rally.

Scuffles broke out when protesters blocked Kim Young-sam's car and pelted his bodyguards with eggs. His motorcade was forced to turn back and reach the square by back streets.

"These kinds of acts will not be helpful for democratization," Kim Young-sam told the crowds as protesters set fire to piles of his campaign literature. He ducked several times to avoid flying objects.

Riot police moved in after Kim Young-sam left and fired volleys of tear gas to break up milling crowds.

In the central city of Yesan, scores of students urging the two Kims to agree on a single candidacy clashed with Kim Dae-jung supporters. No injuries were reported.

Clashes also erupted Saturday in Buchon near the western port of Ichon when riot police dispersed some 300 students scattering anti-government leaflets before a campaign rally by Roh.

Kim Dae-jung had sent senior aides to Kwangju, saying he would appeal to his supporters not to disrupt Kim Young-sam's rally.

The city, 165 miles south of Seoul, was the scene of a 1980 anti-government uprising in which at least 191 people were killed in fighting with troops. Some dissidents claim the death toll in the uprising reached into the thousands.

Kim Dae-jung later said: "It was regrettable that Mr. Kim Young-sam's rally was disrupted by unhappy incidents despite our repeated calls for Kwangju citizens to avoid such disgraceful incidents ...."

President Chun Doo-hwan, a former general who took power with military backing in 1980, bowed to demands for broad reforms after nationwide anti-government protests in June. Chun is to step down Feb. 25 in what would be the first peaceful transfer of power in modern Korean history.

Bangladesh Bomb Blasts Injure Six

By FARID HOSSAIN
Associated Press Writer

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Blasts from at least two dozen homemade bombs rocked the capital Saturday, injuring at least six people, as an eight-hour general strike aimed at President Hussain Muhammad Ershad ended its third day.

Witnesses said police fired in the air in at least four places in the city to disperse anti-government crowds. No one was hurt.

Reporters moving across the city heard at least two dozen bomb blasts, mainly in intersections. At least six persons were injured by the blasts, police said.

Most of the devices were not powerful enough to cause significant damage.

Witnesses said explosive devices were hurled in Dhaka at the houses of opposition leaders Mirza Golam Hafiz, a former speaker of Parliament, and Kamal Hossain, central leader of Awami League and a former foreign minister.

A group of 25 protesters briefly attacked an office of government tax department in central Dhaka. At least three government vehicles, including a bus, were burned in the attack.

The city was otherwise calm in contrast to past four days.

The strike is a part of the "Dhaka Siege," launched by opposition politicians on Tuesday. Since then four people, including a policeman, have died in riots and many have been injured. The opposition claims that as many as 15 have died.

The two chief opposition politicians, Sheik Hasina and Khaleda Zia, were detained in their homes Wednesday.

The government has ordered the 1,600 policemen and paramilitary forces deployed in the city to shoot rioters on sight.

Shops remained shuttered during the strike.

The general strike in the Dhaka area, which led to national violence Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, was suspended by opposition leaders on Friday, a Moslem holy day. The leaders called for it to resume from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

A letter from 23 intellectuals called on Ershad to free the opposition leaders immediately.

Ershad, an ex-army general, says he will not resign, the main opposition demand. He told foreign reporters Friday he would require three more days to contain the opposition.

The opposition fears more arrests and restrictions. The government says about 1,500 persons have been arrested since the campaign started. Opposition sources put the figure at 7,500.

Southern Mississippi Holds Off Pirate Rally To Take 38-34 Victory In Finale

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HATTIESBURGH, Miss. — East Carolina's hopes for a winning season crumbled in the waining moments as time ran out on the Pirates' comeback attempt against Southern Mississippi, allowing the Golden Eagles to take a 38-34 win Saturday.

ECU rallied from a 38-21 fourth-quarter deficit behind two touchdown pases from backup quarterback Charlie Libretto, but fell short in its efforts to win its sixth game of the season. Instead, the Pirates close the year at 5-6.

"It's tough to lose any football game," said ECU coach Art Baker. "But it's a little bit tougher to lose like we did today."

ECU twice came back from at least a two-touchdown deficit but couldn't overcome the big-play Eagles and punt returner James Henry, who returned two punts for scores.

"When Libretto came in the game around the end, I saw flashbacks from last year," said USM coach Jim Carmondy. "He was the same quarterback who threw the go-ahead touchdown last year (before USM won on a last-second field goal, 23-21)."

The score was tied at halftime but USM took a 28-14 lead midway throught the third quarter as quarterback Brett Favre connected with Preston Hansford for an 11-yard touchdown and Henry returned his second punt of the game for a score, this time from 81 yards away.

"We knew they had a great punt returner and but unfortunately we were not able to contain him," Baker said. "Obviously the two touchdowns he scored on punt returns were a big difference."

But ECU was far from out of the game at that point, however. The Pirates had overcome a two-touchdown lead in the first half and pulled within 28-21 at the end of the third period when Travis Hunter kept from two yards out with 19 seconds left in the third quarter.

But as was the pattern all game, everytime ECU got close, USM would score again.

The Golden Eagles opened the fourth quarter with a 74-yard drive, capped by Favre's 63-yard touchdown pass to Darryl Tillman. That made it 35-21.

The Golden Eagles quickly turned that misccue into points as Chris Sekova kicked a 33-yard field goal to make it 38-21.

But ECU came back to life on its' next drive, as Libretto replaced Hunter at quarterback and led the Pirates on two straight scoring drives, only to be foiled by the clock

Libretto turned in a seven of 12 performance fof 131 yards and two touchdowns.

"We ran out of time," said wide receiver Tony Smith, who caught one of Libretto's touchdown passes.

"We lost, but I still feel great. We didn't quit. (We showed) that no matter how far we're down or how much time is left, there is still a chance. We just ran out of time.

"We didn't get down. Last year, if we had gotten down like that we would have rolled over and died."

Taking over with just over six minutes left, Libretto drove the Pirates 72 yards in just 2:28, higlighted by George Franklin's 2-yard touchdown run with 4:27 left in the game.

ECU held on the Golden Eagles' ensuing possession and ECU took back over at its own 20.

Libretto quickly drove the Pirates back down field in just under a minute and a half. He capped the drive off with an 8-yard strike to Smith to make it 38-34 with 1:30 to go in the game.

ECU went for two but Tim James came up short on the run attempt.

Secules Bows Out In Style In Leading Cavs By Heels

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia quarterback Scott Secules saved his best for last, and the result was disastrous for North Carolina.

Secules, a fifth-year senior playing in his final home game, overcame a slow start Saturday and directed a pair of touchdown drives in the final 4:44 to lift Virginia to a 20-17 victory over the Tar Heels in Atlantic Coast Conference football.

Secules, the ACC passing efficiency leader, missed his first five attempts but came back to post a record-setting performance that culminated with a 9-yard scoring throw to Keith Mattioli with 30 seconds left for the game winner.

"I have high expectations for myself," Secules said, "and I know those around me expect me to perform well, too, so I was just trying to get it in gear."

Secules finished 26 of 50 for a career-high 328 yards, including 148 on the final two Virginia scoring drives.

"It took me a while to get it kind of zeroed in," he said. "But when it counted, we came together as a unit and did what we do well."

Secules set school records for most passes atempted in a game, most completions in a season, 155, and most passing yardage in a season, 2,042.

The game, played before scouts from the Independence and All American bowls, enabled Virginia to lock up its fourth winning season in six years under Coach George Welsh. The Cavaliers, 6-4 overall and 4-2 in the ACC, close their schedule next week at North Carolina State.

"I cannot describe the feeling," Welsh said of the comeback. "I don't have words that describe it. I feel great, and I'm very happy for that team and really happy for the quarterback. He had some tough times out there today, but if you hang in there, some good things will happen."

North Carolina, which held a 17-7 lead for much of the second half, fell to 5-5 and 3-3.

"It was a tough loss," said North Carolina Coach Dick Crum, who is in the sixth year of a 10-year contract but has been under fire recently for what some fans say is conservative play-calling and the inability to win crucial games.

"We had two really hard ball games recently, and getting up for this game was hard," Crum said.

The Tar Heels went ahead 10-7 on Torin Dorn's 6-yard scoring run with 10:52 left in the first half, and built their advantage to 17-7 early in the third period when Randy Marriott took a swing pass from Maye and raced 51 yards down the left sideline for a touchdown.

With 4:44 to play in the game, Virginia moved 83 yards in 12 plays, with Durwin Greggs cutting the North Carolina lead to 17-13 on his 10-yard scoring run with 2:53 left. Secules passed for 78 yards on the drive, which also included a 10-yard Virginia holding penalty.

The Cavaliers kicked off and forced North Carolina to punt after three plays, and Virginia got the ball back on its 30 with 1:22 to go. This time, Secules threw for all 70 yards on the drive.

North Carolina took a 3-0 lead on Kenny Miller's field goal in the first quarter before Secules scored on an 11-yard option run to give the Cavaliers a 7-3 edge with 2:40 left in the period.

Secules finished the first half with nine completions in 19 attempts. Maye had 45 yards on 1-for-8 passing before intermission. He finished 7 of 19 for 143 yards. He was intercepted three times compared to twice for Secules.

The game was interrupted by 21 penalties — Virginia had nine for 107 yards and North Carolina 12 for 79.

Montgomery Outbombs Duke As State Claims 47-45 Win

DURHAM (AP) — Earlier in the season, if someone would have said that Shane Montgomery quarterbacked in a football game which featured 926 yards of total passing they would have smiled and cracked a joke or two.

But, the only laughter and joy Saturday was coming from inside the North Carolina State dressing room after the Wolfpack rode the right arm of Montgomery to a come-from-behind 47-45 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Duke.

"He deserves all the accolades today," N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan said of Montgomery's school-record 468 yards passing. "He never got down ... He stayed ready and today was able to make the most of his opportunity."

Ditto for kicker Bryan Carter, said Sheridan, whose 32-yard field goal with 29 seconds left was the margin of victory.

"The story's the same with Bryan Carter and it's a good lesson for all of us," Sheridan said. "He came back ... and made it happen."

Going into the contest, Montgomery completed only 41.5 percent of his passes for 274 yards and was benched in favor of Preston Poag after an 0-3 Wolfpack start, while Carter had hit only three of six field goals.

"We could have folded the tent and sulked at halftime when nothing was going right in the first half," Sheridan said of the game that featured 1,100 yards of total offense. "But we didn't."

Duke first-year coach Steve Spurrier said N.C. State's 20-point outburst in the third quarter was hard to explain.

"We just never could stop them," Spurrier said. "Our secondary play was bad and we missed a lot of downfield tackles.

"The game was there to be had," Spurrier added. "We just didn't play well enough today and it is going to be a very disappointing year. We'll just have to regroup."

Trailing 31-14 at halftime, Montgomery caught fire and passed for 175 yards in the third quarter as the Wolfpack, 4-6 overall and 4-2, scored 20 points to take the lead.

Montgomery, who completed 29 of 46 passes, connected with Todd Varn on a 12-yard scoring pass with 11:36 left in the third quarter to cut the gap to 31-21.

After forcing Duke, 4-6 and 1-5, to punt, Montgomery's key 25-yard third down pass to Varn set up Bobby Crumpler's 2-yard scoring run with 7:22 remaining.

Duke was forced to punt again after only three plays and 10 seconds later Montgomery found Varn over the middle for a 52-yard scoring strike and a 34-31 lead.

After a Joe Johnson interception, Crumpler dove over from the 1 on the first play of the fourth quarter to increase the Wolfpack lead to 41-31.

A minute later, freshman Randy Jones scored on a 5-yard run for Duke to cut the margin to 41-38.

Carter's 47-yard field goal a series later gave the Wolfpack a six-point bulge with 10:56 remaining.

The Wolfpack was driving for a clinching score midway through the final quarter when Montgomery was hit by Anthony Allen, who recovered the ball at the Duke 32.

From there, behind quarterback Steve Slayden, who threw for a career-high 458 yards, the Blue Devils drove down the field and took its final lead at 45-44. Slayden capped the drive by hitting Clarkston Hines with a 12-yard TD pass with 5:11 left. It was Slayden's third scoring pass to Hines.

But Montgomery hit Danny Peebles on a 24-yard pass to key a 9-play drive that led to Carter's winning field goal.

Gamecocks Blank Wake Forest, 30-0

AP Sports Writer

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Harold Green said it took the South Carolina offense a while to kick in, but when the Gamecocks went into overdrive, they virtually ran over Wake Forest in a 30-0 college football victory Saturday.

Green, a sophomore, rushed for 172 yards and two touchdowns on 27 carries and caught a scoring pass from Todd Ellis as the 14th-ranked Gamecocks polished off an error-prone Demon Deacon team.

"We had to settle down, come back and get things rolling," Green said after the Gamecocks took a 13-0 lead at halftime. "We caught on to what they were doing. We just had our head in the ball game in the second half and started sticking over the goal line."

Green rushed for 100 yards in the second half. After taking a 33-yard touchdown pass from a scrambling Ellis midway through the second quarter, he scored on a 13-yard run along the right sideline with 11:28 left in the third quarter raised the South Carolina lead to 23-0.

The Gamecocks, 7-2, finished the afternoon with Green's 4-yard run with 2:05 remaining.

"I think Wake Forest played us a little bit more toward our passing game, which most of our opponents do," Green said. "When we get the breaks to run the ball, we do. It turns out to be a pretty good gainer on the offensive side of the ball."

In holding Wake Forest scoreless, the Gamecock defense has not allowed any points in eight quarters. That defense also made the afternoon miserable for Demon Deacon quarterback Mike Elkins.

"First of all, we are very proud of our defensive unit," South Carolina Coach Joe Morrison said. "Today's performance makes back-to-back shutouts. That reflects the great job of our defensive players."

Norman Floyd intercepted two of Elkins' passes and South Carolina recovered a fumble after a pass completion. Elkins was intercepted three times and sacked five times for 33 yards.

The Demon Deacons, 6-4, also were penalized nine times for 71 yards.

Wake Forest also lost three fumbles, the last of which set up the third of freshman Collin Mackie's three field goals, a 44-yard effort with 1:19 left in the third quarter.

Mackie also kicked field goals of 24 and 32 yards, those in the first half.

"Their offense wore us down by having the ball for two-thirds of the game," Wake Forest coach Bill Dooley said. The Gamecock offense controlled the ball for 40 minutes, the Demon Deacons for 19 minutes.

Bean Wins Kapalua Golf

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — Andy Bean shot a front-running 5-under-par 67 Saturday to successfully defend his title at the $600,000 Kapalua International Golf Tournament.

Bean, injured and deeply frustrated most of the year, finished with a 72-hole score of 21-under-par 267 — a tournament record on the the ay course at the Kapalua resort — beating Lanny Wadkins by three shots.

Bean, suffering from an elbow injury, won only $73,808 in the official PGA Tour season that ended two weeks ago. That amount, and his 120th-place finish on the money-winning list, were his poorest since his rookie season of 1976.

This victory, however, was worth $150,000 and went with the $93,000 he collected in Japan last week to give him $243,000 in earnings for the last 14 days.

Bean led by one shot at the start of the day and stretched it to two at the turn. He birdied the par-5 10th by getting up and down from a greenside bunker to increase the margin to three.

Bean, one of golf's longest hitters, drove just short of the green on the 345 yard, par-4 13th, chipped close and made the birdie putt for a four-shot cushion that enabled him to coast home.

Wadkins came on with a late rush to match Bean's 67 and lift him over Sandy Lyle of Scotland into second place at 270, worth $82,000.

Lyle, the 1984 winner here and a former British Open champion, could do no better than a 71 and was third at 272, five shots back.

With Bean refusing to give ground, no one else really got in the chase. Ben Crenshaw had a 66 that put him fourth at 273.

No other player was within 10 strokes of the winner.

Clemson Ices ACC Title

By RICK SCOPPE
AP Sports Writer

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — For all its success, Clemson has had its problems with Maryland over the years.

Only one player now with the ninth-ranked Tigers knew what it was like to defeat the Terrapins. And Maryland was the only Atlantic Coast Conference team to have a winning record against Coach Danny Ford.

But that all changed Saturday — in a big way.

Rodney Williams threw a pair of touchdowns, and Terry Allen rushed for two more scores as Clemson defeated the Terrapins 45-16 to capture its second straight ACC title.

"We're excited about winning the ACC," Williams said. "All in all, I think we finally played as a whole team today."

After seeing his team struggle at times this year, Ford, who is now 4-4-1 against Maryland, said the Tigers played their best game of the season.

"I think we're pretty close to being the kind of football team we want to be," Ford said. "I thought that we showed today that we are a very good football team."

Maryland first-year Coach Joe Krivak said bad field position and too many mistakes cost his club.

"It was a good, ol' fashioned knockdown, dragout whipping," Krivak said. "They were by far the best team on the field today.

"They made some mistakes and it didn't hurt them. We made them and it does."

Clemson, 9-1 overall and 6-1 in the ACC, has won a record 10 titles outright and tied for another. Clemson also solidified its bowl possibilities, with the Tigers apparently going to the Citrus Bowl, although bowl bids can't be offiered officially until next weekend.

The Terrapins fall to 4-6 and 3-3 and are assured of their first losing season since 1981.

Allen scored on runs of 8 and 2 yards in the second period and Williams hooked up with Gary Cooper on TD passes of 50 and 44 yards as the Tigers downed Maryland for the first time since 1983.

Clemson clinched the ACC title last year by tying the Terrapins 17-17. Between them, Clemson and Maryland have won the last seven ACC titles.

Allen capped an eight-play, 54-yard drive with his first score, giving Clemson a 17-7 lead with 8:19 left in the half.

Clemson then shook off three penalties — two for holding — and took advantage of a pass interference call to push its lead to 24-7 with 1:17 left on Allen's second TD.

Maryland cut the lead to 24-10 on Dan Plocki's 21-yard field goal as the half ended. But it was all Clemson in the second half, to the delight of the 78,000 fans who chanted "A-C-C, A-C-C" in tribute to their team winning the league title.

Allen gained 103 yards on the ground, while fellow tailback Wesley McFadden rushed for 101.

It was all Clemson in the second half against the only ACC team with a winning record (10-8) against Clemson at Death Valley. The Tigers scored twice in the third period — on a 55-yard run by Wesley McFadden with 8:05 left and Williams' second TD pass with 5:57 to go.

"It was disappointing that we couldn't score. We couldn't stop their rush, and Elkins was in trouble all day," Dooley said. "The turnovers stopped us too many times."

"Offensively, we didn't really move the ball the first three quarters," Morrison said. "We just spit and sputtered. In the fourth quarter, we switched to the I formation and took it down the field and put it in the end zone."

Wake Forest rushed 18 times for three net yards, managed 63 yards passing and four first downs. Elkins was shut down by a Gamecock defense which blitzed on virtually every down and prevented him from setting up to throw.

Ellis, playing 30 minutes from his hometown of Greensboro, N.C., was 20 of 37 for 212 yards. He was sacked once.

Floyd intercepted Elkins on Wake Forest's first offensive play and returned the ball 32 yards to the Wake Forest 16, but the Gamecocks squandered the opportunity when Mackie pulled a 31-yard field goal attempt to the left.

Wake Forest's Dextor Victor intercepted an Ellis pass, returned it 16 yards to his own 40. But three plays later, Elkins fumbled the snap from center on third-and-one and nose guard Roy Hart recovered for the Gamecocks.

South Carolina was stopped on a fourth-and-four, but Elkins was intercepted again by Floyd at the South Carolina 33. That turnover set up Mackie's 24-yard field goal 90 seconds into the second quarter.

Ellis moved the Gamecocks 88 yards for their first-half touchdown. He scrambled out of the pocket on a third-and-10, ran toward the right sideline and hit Green for the score at the 8:22 mark.

Wake Forest held off South Carolina's last threat toward the end of the first half and Mackie added his 32-yard field goal 43 seconds before intermission.

Peterson's 47-yard field goal with 13:17 remaining before halftime increased the Duke margin to 10-6.

Duke's next two scores came in quick fashion.

After Peterson's field goal, the sophomore kicker rolled a perfect on-side kickoff that Mike Diminick recovered at the Wolfpack 48. Three plays later, Slayden found Hines in the corner of the end zone with a diving 29-yard touchdown reception.

Later in the quarter, Randy Sally blocked a Craig Salmon punt at the Wolfpack 29. Rodney Dickerson recovered and raced untouched into the end zone from 24 yards out to increase the lead to 24-6.

About two minutes later, Montgomery hit a wide open Mack Jones with a 58-yard scoring pass. The TD pass was the longest of the season for the Wolfpack and was Jones' first career touchdown in his four seasons at N.C. State. Montgomery's two-point conversion pass to Peebles cut the Duke advantage to 24-14 with 3:08 left.

However, behind 48 yards passing from Slayden and two 15-yard personal foul penalties called against the Wolfpack, Slayden capped the half by scoring on a 1-yard keeper with 15 seconds left.

Some Already Know Destination

By The Associted Press

Although bowl bids can't be officially extended until Nov. 21, several college football teams have an idea of where their home for the holidays will be.

One team, the 13th-ranked Michigan State Spartans, know exactly where they will be on New Year's Day.

The Spartans beat No. 16 Indiana 27-3 at East Lansing on Saturday to clinch the Big 10 Conference championship and a Rose Bowl berth.

Lorenzo White rushed 56 times for 292 yards, both school records, and two touchdowns to lead the Spartans to their first Rose Bowl in 22 years.

"It certainly is a beautiful day," Michigan State Coach George Perles said. "I can tell you, there's not too many of you who are going to have a better time than me tonight.

Perles, who owns four Super Bowl rings from his years as defensive coordinator for the NFL's Pittsburgh Steelers, called the Big Ten championship a bigger thrill.

"When we get our championship ring, I'll probably be done wearing my Super Bowl rings," Perles said. "I've got four kids and they'll each get one, someday."

At Pasadena on Saturday, Troy Aikman ran for one touchdown and passed for another in a 17-point third quarter as fifth-ranked UCLA blew open a close game and went on to a 47-14 victory over Washington to remain unbeaten in the Pacific-10 Conference.

The Bruins can become the first team in Pac-10 history to go through conference play with a perfect record by beating crosstown rival Southern Cal next Saturday.

A victory or tie against USC will send the Bruins to the Rose Bowl against Michigan State.

Seventh-ranked Notre Dame crushed Alabama 37-6 on Saturday and will reportedly play in the Cotton Bowl on Jan. 1 against the winner of the Southwest Conference.

After Saturday's play, Texas A&M and Texas each had a 4-1 records in the SWC. They play Nov. 26 (Thanksgiving) at College Station, Texas.

Senior flanker Tim Brown caught four passes for 114 yards and became Notre Dame's career leader in reception yardage with 2,371 against the Crimson Tide, who still have a shot at the Sugar Bowl.

"That sounds like the people who predict the elections before the polls close," Cotton Bowl official John Scovell said of reports the Irish would be in Dallas on New Year's Day.

Undefeated and sixth-ranked Syracuse rallied from a 17-0 deficit to beat Boston College 45-17 and will most likely play in the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1 against the Southeastern Conference champion.

Jeff Burger passed for 217 yards and two touchdowns as Auburn moved closer to a berth in the Sugar by beating Georgia. The Tigers are 8-1-1 and 4-0-1 in the SEC, and they need a Nov. 27 victory over Alabama to clinch the conference outright.

Burger completed 22 of 32 passes and onnected for touchdowns of 21 yards to Lawyer Tillman and 3 yards to Duke Donaldson. Georgia fell to 7-3 and 4-2, eliminated from the SEC title chase.

Fourth-ranked Florida State will probably spend New Year's Day at the $2.1 million Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., against the loser of the Oklahoma-Nebraska showdown next Saturday.

The winner of the Oklahoma-Nebraska game will head for the Orange Bowl in Miami as the number one team in the nation. The most likely opponent for the Big Eight champ is third-ranked Miami, Fla. The Hurricanes, however, still have to play Notre Dame and South Carolina so there's still a chance another team — such as Syracuse — could make it.

South Carolina could be a Gator Bowl participant, along with several SEC teams and Penn State.

Rodney Williams threw for two touchdowns, and Terry Allen scored twice as ninth-ranked Clemson defeated Maryland 45-16 to earn its second straight Atlantic Coast Conference football title. Clemson, 9-1 overall and 6-1 in the ACC, has won a record 10 titles outright and tied for another. Clemson also solidified its bowl possibilities, with the Tigers apparently going to the Citrus Bowl. The Tigers' opponent could be Penn State or the Alabama-Auburn loser.

Stacey Simmons returned the opening kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown and caught a 39-yard scoring pass from Kerwin Bell, making the Florida quarterback the SEC's career TD pass leader as the Gators beat Kentucky 27-7.

The victory stopped a two-game losing streak and may send the Gators, 6-4, to the Aloha Bowl in Honolulu on Christmas Day against Oklahoma State, Arizona State or the Southern California-UCLA loser.

Freshman quarterback Sterling Henton began a 28-point second quarter with a touchdown pass and ended it with a scoring run as 18th-ranked Tennessee defeated Mississippi 55-13 in a SEC game.

The victory, before scouts from the Hall of Fame, Peach, Liberty, Independence and Bluebonnet bowls, improved Tennessee to 7-2-1 overall and 2-1-1 in the SEC.

USC Wins On Kick

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quin Rodriguez's fourth field goal of the game, an 18-yarder with 1:11 remaining, lifted Southern Cal to a 12-10 Pacific-10 Conference victory over Arizona Saturday and set the Trojans up for a title showdown against UCLA.

Steven Webster gained 161 yards for the Trojans, who will face the cross-town rival Bruins at the Coliseum next Saturday for the Pac-10 crown and Rose Bowl berth.

The Trojans have a 6-1 Pac-10 mark and are 7-3 overall. Arizona dropped to 4-4-2 overall and 2-3-2 in league play.

Webster, who carried 34 times, provided the big play of the drive when he reeled off a 25-yard run to the Arizona 42-yard line.

Fullback Leroy Holt also played a key role during the decisive march, picking up four first downs as he carried five times for 17 yards.

Southern Cal, which had fallen behind early, trimmed the difference to 10-9 on Rodriguez' third field goal, a 27-yarder with 13:15 left to play.

Moments earlier, the Wildcats' defense had stopped Southern Cal four times after the Trojans had first-and-goal at the Arizona 5-yard line. On fourth-and-goal from the 2-yard line, Webster gained just a yard before Arizona safety Chuck Cecil stacked him up.

Arizona led 7-6 at halftime and added a 47-yard field goal by Gary Coston 5:37 into the third period.

Peete quickly marched his team down the field and completed a 30-yard pass to John Jackson at the Arizona 25 to set up a 42-yard field goal by Rodriguez as time ran out in the half.

A 1-yard quarterback sneak by Veal gave the Wildcats a 7-3 first-quarter lead. Vince Lotti's recovery of a fumbled punt by the Trojans' Randy Tanner at the Southern Cal 16 set up the score.

Rodriguez had given the Trojans a quick 3-0 lead with a 21-yard field goal after Southern Cal safety Chris Hale picked off a Veal pass on the first series of the game and returned it 21 yards to the Wildcats' 9-yard line.

Iowa 29
Ohio State..... 27

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Chuck Hartlieb hit Marv Cook with a 28-yard touchdown pass with six seconds remaining to give Iowa a 29-27 victory over Ohio State in a Big Ten Conference college football game Saturday.

Hartlieb's pass came on fourth down and 23 at the Ohio State 28. Cook, a senior tight end, caught the ball at the right sideline at the 9-yard line. He cut back to beat two defenders at the goal line.

The late score erased a 27-22 Ohio State lead that came on Carlos Snow's 14-yard touchdown run with 2:45 left.

The victory was the fourth in a row for Iowa, now 8-3 overall and 5-2 in the Big Ten. Ohio State, which lost its third straight game, dropped to 5-4-1 and 3-4 in the Big Ten.

After Snow's score had given Ohio State the lead, Hartlieb led a 64-yard, 10-play drive that included two fourth-down conversions.

An 8-yard Hartlieb to Cook pass gave Iowa a first down at the Ohio State 23 on a fourth-and-3 play with 1:16 remaining.

ECU used its final two timeouts on USM's next possession but Favre came up with a 12-yard gain on a naked reverse in the final seconds to help the Golden Eagles retain possession and end any last hopes the Pirates might have had.

"Our football team did a great job," Baker said. "I was very proud of them coming back. Libretto came off the bench and you couldn't ask anymore than what he did today.

"I don't think I've ever see a group of young men that were so determined that they wanted to have a winning season. It just didn't work out. It wasn't in the cards today."

The Pirates drove the ball well enough on offense but had trouble stopping the Golden Eagles, especially on third down.

"That's been our problem,," Baker said. "We've had a serious problem stopping third down conversions all year and it continued today."

USM got yardage both thorugh the pass and the run. Favre, a freshman, threw for 232 yards and three touchdowns. But the Pirates also were vulnerable on the ground, giving up 121 yards to tailback Rickey Bradley.

ECU noseguard Medrick Rainbow said the Pirates had problem stopping the pass on some of those third down plays.

"On third down passing situations, we try to let the defensive backs know when it's pass by waving our hands back," Rainbow said. "We also try to apply a rush. Sometimes we weren't getting a good rush and sometimes we weren't getting good coverage, so it was both ways.

"He was a smart quarterback. He'd jamed us inside and he'd bounce out."

ECU fell behind early as Henry took a short Craig Losito punt on the final play of the first quarter and returned it 65 yards for a touchdown. Chris Seroka added the point after to make it 7-0.

The Golden Eagles made it 14-0 midway through the second period, driving 87 yards in 13 plays to score on a 8-yard pas from Favre to Darryl Tillman. Seroka added the point after to make it 14-0.

Down by two touchdowns, the game looked like it would follow the pattern of ECU's other five losses this season but the Pirates changed the script somewhat.

Willie Lewis got things started with a 43-yard gain that gave ECU a first and 10 at the 22

Three plays later, Hunter faded back, sidestepped two tacklers and found a wide-open Matt McLaughlin for a 18-yard touchdown play. After missing on his first PAT attempt, Chuck Berleth got a second chance due to a penalty and split the uprights to make it 14-7.

On USM's next drive, ECU forced a punt at the Golden Eagle 34. Freshman Donald Porch broke through to block Billy Knighten's kick and Anthony Thompson recovered for the Pirates at the 25 with 3:51 left in the half.

ECU promptly drove down and scored in the final seconds of the half as Denell Harper took a pitch right from Hunter, fumbled it, picked it back in and scooted in from a yard out. Berleth added the PAT to knot the score at 14-14.

But in the end, the punt returns loomed big. Henry has returned four punts for scores in the last three games.

"Our coaches told us that they said in an article they'd won four games on special teams, either field goal, blocked punt or punt return," Smith said. "We knew going in to this game that special teams were going to be the determining factor. They beat us on special teams and the score shows it."

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — As the East Carolina football players walked the long trek from the field to the lockerroom following the Pirates' 38-34 loss to Southern Mississippi, they left their chances for a winning season behind them.

But that takes little away from the fact that this year's team won more games (5) than ECU had won in three years.

"A lot of people didn't expect us to win more than two games," said safety Ellis Dillahunt. "I think we accomplished a lot by winning five games. We had a chance to win six but it kind of slipped away."

The hurt was obvious in the face of linebacker Vinson Smith. He responded slowly to the question of whether or not you can take anything away from this year's 5-6 mark.

"I guess you can," he said. "We left with the guys the attitude for next year that they can win — basically do what it takes to be winners."

Noseguard Medrick Rainbow echoed his teammate's sentiments.

"You can take something positive away," he said. "It's the first time in three years we've won more than two games. The other guys coming up can look at it as a stepping stone. Maybe next year it will be 6-5 or 7-4."

That's all well and good for next year's team, but for the seniors it is different. There really is no next year. This Saturday was weighing heavily on their minds.

"I'll tell you, there is really a lot going on in my mind," said wide receiver Tony Smith. "I'm just glad the Lord gave me the opportunity to play five years. I've learned a lot.

"East Carolina has shown me a way to cope with life. Dealing with football, I know that the last four years, the things I've gone through, if I can cope with that I can cope with anything."

For Dillahunt, who was ending up a brilliant career, there was an empty feeling.

"I'm kind of hurting," he said softly. "I didn't want my last game at East Carolina to end like this. I guess I just have to look to the future."

For Dillahunt, and maybe a few others, a pro career could lie ahead. For the players who return next year, there lies the renewed hope that a winning season is close enough to be achieved.

Sooners Slip Past Missouri, 17-13

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Fullback Rotnei Anderson rushed for 118 yards, and the Oklahoma defense denied two late drives as the top-ranked Sooners remained unbeaten with a 17-13 Big Eight victory Saturday over Missouri.

Oklahoma is 10-0 overall, 6-0 in the Big Eight heading into next weekend's showdown with No. 2 Nebraska. The Cornhuskers are 9-0 in all games, 5-0 in the conference.

Oklahoma was favored by five touchdowns against Missouri, 4-6 and 2-4, but had to work for all it got in playing without starting quarterback Jamelle Holieway and fullback Lydell Carr. Both suffered season-ending knee injuries last week.

Oklahoma, leading the nation with an average of 49 points per game, didn't score a touchdown until 45 seconds before halftime and led only 17-10 after three quarters.

Holieway's backup, Charles Thompson, had scored on a 14-yard run in the third quarter to make it 17-3. Thompson finished with 91 yards rushing and 104 passing.

However, Missouri tightened things when halfback Michael Jones scored on a 20-yard run one play after a Thompson fumble late in the third quarter, one of four fumbles the Sooners lost.

A 45-yard field goal by Tom Whelihan with 8:13 to play brought Missouri to within four.

The Oklahoma defense then came up with a big play when cornerback Scott Garl intercepted a John Stollenwerck pass with 4:42 left. After Oklahoma was forced to punt, Missouri saw its final drive end at its 29 with four straight incompletions.

The Oklaoma defense allowed Missouri only 10 first downs, four of them on the drive that led to Whelihan's 45-yard field goal.

Whelihan also had a 48-yard field goal, in the second quarter.

Oklahoma dominated the game most of the way but was hurt by mistakes. Anderson fumbled on Oklahoma's first offensive play of the afternoon. In the second quarter, the Sooners moved from their 10 to the Missouri 22 but that drive ended with another Anderson fumble.

Thompson, a redshirt freshman, also fumbled the ball away on two consecutive third-quarter possessions, one of which the Tigers converted with Jones' 20-yard run.

Oklahoma finished with 283 yards rushing and 387 in total offense. Of the Sooners' 104 passing yards, 65 went to tight end Keith Jackson.

Missouri wound up with 139 yards on the ground and 54 through the air. The leading Tiger rusher was fullback Tommie Stowers with 56 on 15 carries.

UCLA (5).....47
Washington.....14

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Troy Aikman ran for one touchdown and passed for another in a 17-point third quarter Saturday as fifth-ranked UCLA blew open a close game and went on to a 47-14 victory over Washington to remain unbeaten in the Pacific-10 Conference.

The Bruins can become the first team in Pac-10 history to go through conference play with a perfect record by beating crosstown rival Southern Cal next Saturday.

Southern Cal went 7-0 in the league 11 years ago, two years before Arizona and Arizona State joined the conference.

The Bruins are 7-0 in the Pac-10 and 9-1 overall. Washington fell to 3-3-1 in league play and 5-4-1 overall.

A 27-yard field goal by Alfredo Velasco with 1:44 to play before halftime gave UCLA a 16-14 lead, and the Bruins put the game away by scoring on all three of their third-quarter possessions.

A 32-yard field goal by Velasco made it 19-14 before Aikman threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to Willie Anderson and scored on a 12-yard run, giving the Bruins a 33-14 advantage with 52 seconds remaining in the period.

Aikman, who leads the nation in passing efficiency, completed 17 of his 23 passes for 247 yards. He was 9 of 11 for 142 yards in the third quarter.

The Bruins took a 7-0 lead 55 seconds into the game on a 22-yard touchdown run by Eric Ball one play after UCLA linebacker Ken Norton recovered a fumble by Washington's Greg Lewis on the second play from scrimmage.

UCLA made it 13-0 with 5:34 left in the opening period on a 54-yard run by Ball, which capped a 78-yard, five-play drive. Velasco was wide right on the conversion for his first miss after 41 successful PATs this season.

Ball led UCLA rushers with 99 yards on 10 carries.

The Huskies bounced back with a pair of second-quarter touchdowns to go ahead 14-13. The first came on a 24-yard pass from Chris Chandler to Darryl Franklin on the first play of the period and the second on a 4-yard run by Tony Covington with 5:32 left before halftime.

The Bruins led at halftime despite the fact that Washington controlled the action in the first 30 minutes. The Huskies had the ball 20:11 in the first half to only 9:49 for UCLA and had 16 first downs to eight for the Bruins.

Chandler completed 10 of 12 passes for 93 yards before aggravating a hip injury midway through the second quarter. He was relieved by sophomore Chris Conklin, who was five of 16 for 44 yards with three interceptions.

Chandler guided Washington to a 76-yard, 12-play drive for its first touchdown. Conklin was at the controls when the Huskies scored their second TD. They needed seven plays to go 40 yards after a 21-yard punt by UCLA's Harold Barkate.

The Bruins went 72 yards on 10 plays before settling for Velasco's first field goal, and moved 57 yards on seven plays with the second half kickoff before his second field goal.

An 80-yard, 10-play drive followed before an interception by James Washington put UCLA in position for a 36-yard, five-play march and its 33-14 lead.

The Bruins went 66 yards on eight plays for their fifth touchdown, and scored in the final minute shortly after Bryan Wilcox recovered a fumble by Vince Weathersby at the Washington 13-yard line.

Green, who has been hampered by a pinched nerve in his neck, didn't appear until midway through the third quarter. He finished with 39 yards on six carries.

The game was played before a crowd of 70,332 at the Rose Bowl.

Boston College.....17

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Robert Drummond scored two touchdowns, and Don McPherson passed to Tommy Kane for two more as sixth-ranked Syracuse erased a 17-0 first-half deficit to beat Boston College 45-17 Saturday.

Syracuse scored 17 points in the final 10 minutes of the first half to tie the score, and Daryl Johnston's 1-yard scoring run, capping an 80-yard drive, put the Orangemen ahead for good.

Syracuse improved its record to 10-0 with its 11th straight victory and may have locked up a bid for the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day. Boston College, which has never won at the Carrier Dome, finished its season at 5-6, its second losing season in the last three years.

Boston College blew its second big lead against a ranked team in as many weeks. Last week, the Eagles lost to then-No. 9 Notre Dame 32-25 after leading 25-12.

Boston College went ahead on a 6-yard scoring run by Jim Bell, a 37-yard field goal by Brian Lowe — set up by a McPherson fumble — and a 1-yard run by William Hislop four minutes into the second quarter.

McPherson then took over, setting up his 6-yard scoring pass to Kane with a 46-yard bomb, his first completion of the day, to freshman Rob Moore. Tim Vesling kicked a 31-yard field goal to cut the Eagles lead to a touchdown with 2:02 left in the half, and Drummond scored on a 2-yard run to tie the score before time ran out in the half.

Syracuse opened the second half with an 80-yard drive, capped by Johnston's touchdown seven minutes into the period, giving the Orangemen a 24-17 lead. Drummond scored his second touchdown of the day to extend Syracuse's lead to 31-17 as the third period ended.

McPherson, who threw for 211 yards and rushed for another 54, made it 38-17 with a 20-yard touchdown pass to Kane in the fourth period. Kane now has caught 14 scoring passes this season and has 17 in his career, breaking the team record of Scott Schwedes.

The Syracuse victory was muted by the loss of standout noseguard Ted Gregory, who reinjured a sprain knee that has limited his action to less than a dozen plays during the last four games.

McPherson passed for 211 yards and rushed for another 54.

Boston College built its 17-point lead using a surprisingly effective ground game to set up short passes from Mike Powers to Darren Flutie. On their first score, the Eagles moved the ball 60 yards in 11 plays, eight of them running plays, with Bell scoring on a 6-yard run with 5:34 left in the opening quarter.

After a 37-yard field goal by Lowe that followed a fumble by McPherson, the Eagles began a new march to the Syracuse end zone. This time, Boston College ran on 11 of 13 plays with Hislop scoring on a 1-yard run four minutes into the second quarter.

Syracuse then took over.

On their next possession, the Orangemen drove 88 yards in eight plays. The big play was McPherson's 46-yarder to Moore, giving Syracuse a first-and-goal at the 9. Two plays later, McPherson hit Kane with a 6-yard scoring pass with 7 minutes to play in the half.

Vesling kicked a 31-yard field goal to cut Boston College's lead to seven points with 2:02 to play. The Orangemen then stopped Boston College and got the ball back on their own 37 with 1:02 to play. McPherson moved Syracuse downfield, hitting Kane and Deval Glover on successive long passes to put the Orangemen inside the Eagles' 10-yard line. Drummond scored from 2 yards out on a pitchout three plays later to tie the score 17-17.

West Virginia.....37
Rutgers.....13

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Freshman quarterback Major Harris engineered scoring drives on six of West Virginia's first seven possessions Saturday to propel the Mountaineers to a 37-13 college football victory over Rutgers.

WVU, 6-4, scored on extended drives the first four times it touched the ball and, after forcing a Rutgers punt with :57 left before halftime, scored again on a 44-yard Harris-to-Eugene Napoleon pass as time ran out.

On its first second-half possession, West Virginia drove 74 yards on 10 plays and scored on Craig Taylor's 2-yard run.

The Scarlet Knights, 5-5, took a 7-0 lead on an eight-play, 66-yard drive to open the game, with Henry Henderson scoring from the 2. Henderson had eight carries for 56 yards on the drive and had 103 yards in the first quarter but finished the game with just 134 yards.

Irish Swamp Tide In 37-6 Victory

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Tony Rice ran 12 yards on third down to put Notre Dame ahead and lobbed a 3-yard, fourth-down touchdown pass to tight end Andy Heck later in the second period, leading the seventh-ranked Irish to a 37-6 victory Saturday over No. 11 Alabama.

The loss was the most lopsided for Alabama in 16 years.

Brown, forecast in most football circles as the Heisman Trophy winner, helped set up field goals of 49, 21 and 22 yards by Ted Gradel with an 18-yard kickoff return, a 34-yard punt runback and a 54-yard pass reception.

Tailback Mark Green ran 74 yards for a touchdown early in the final period and backup Ricky Watters raced 75 yards eight minutes later to wrap up the scoring.

Brown, who began the game No. 2 nationally in all-purpose yardage with an average of 176.9 a game, accounted for 225 total yards while touching the ball 14 times.

The victory gave Notre Dame an 8-1 record this season and a 5-1 lead in the series between two of college football's glamor schools. The Irish last won eight games in 1980.

Alabama is 7-3 in Coach Bill Curry's first season. It was the Crimson Tide's biggest pounding since Nebraska defeated them 38-6 in the Orange Bowl to close the 1971 season.

The Irish spotted Alabama a 3-0 lead on Phillip Doyle's 34-yard field goal less than three minutes into the game, then took command with touchdown drives of 80 and 59 yards for a 20-6 halftime lead.

Humphrey, the nation's 11th leading rusher and No. 5 in all-purpose yardage, carried 14 times for 94 yards and had 214 all-purpose yards.

Alabama drove from its 28 to the Notre Dame 16 following the opening kickoff, including an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty against Notre Dame and a 15-yard pass from Jeff Dunn to tight end Howard Cross. Doyle's field goal gave the Crimson Tide a short-lived lead.

In an attempt to prevent a long runback by Brown, Alabama booted a high, short kickoff and Brown returned it from his 25 to the 43. Two plays later, he caught a 17-yard pass from Rice to set up Gradel's first field goal, the longest of his career.

On Notre Dame's next possession, an 18-yard run by Brown on a double reverse was nullified by a clipping penalty. But three plays later he caught a 21-yard pass from Rice that put him ahead of the record of 2,283 reception yards set by Tom Gatewood from 1969-71.

Notre Dame began a 13-play drive to the tie-breaking touchdown with 3:10 left in the first quarter. The march included fullback Anthony Johnson's 15-yard run, a 10-yard run by tailback Mark Green and a 22-yard Rice-to-Brown pass.

Six plays later, on third-and-seven from the Alabama 12, Rice ran an option keeper to the right — the Crimson Tide had trouble stopping the option all afternoon — and fell across the goal line as he was hit.

The Irish made it 17-3 on their next possession. Cornerback John Mangum was called for a questionable pass interference penalty on Brown and Rice kept for 18 yards to the Alabama 11. On fourth-and-five, Gradel lined up to try a field goal but an offside penalty against the Crimson Tide moved the ball to the 3.

Midway through the third period, Brown ran a third-and-11 fly pattern with single coverage by Mangum and grabbed Rice's 54-yard pass at the Alabama 6. Four plays later, Gradel's third field goal made it 23-6.

Notre Dame got a break early in the final period when Rice lost three yards on third down from his 10 but a face mask penalty against linebacker Derrick Thomas enabled the Irish to retain possession.

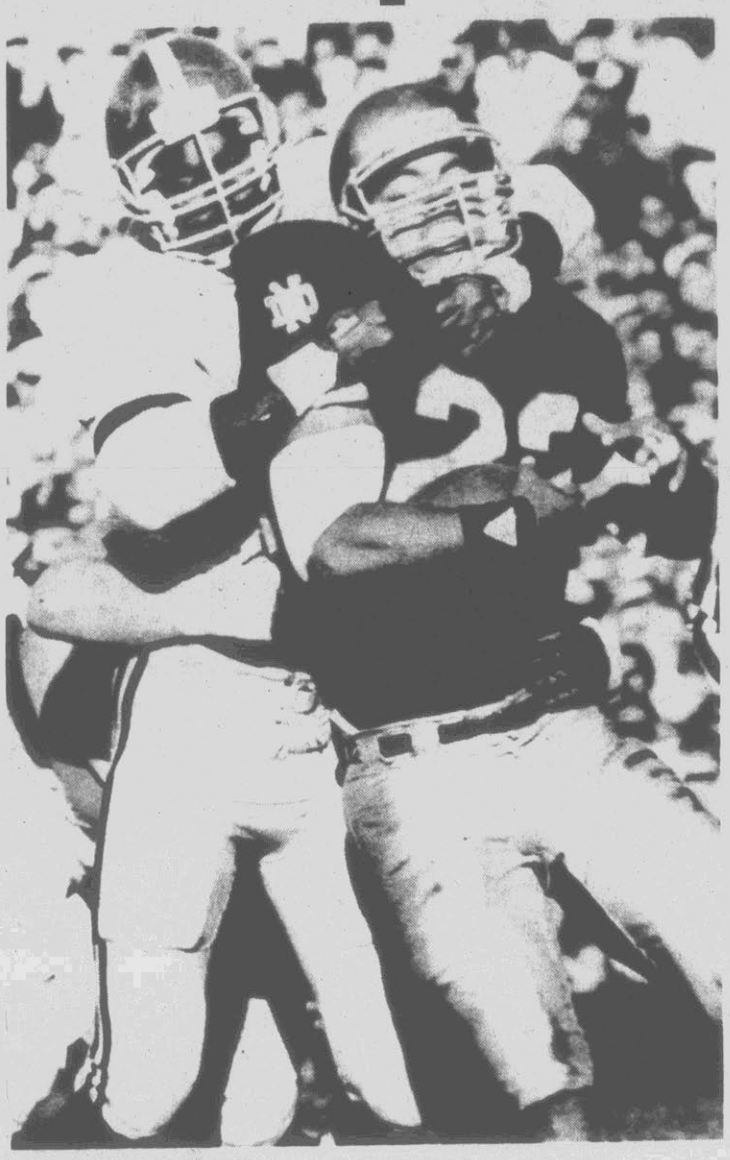
Four plays later, Green bolted 74 yards, the longest run for Notre Dame since Allen Pinkett went 76 against Pitt in 1982.

Auburn (12).....27
Georgia (8).....11

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Jeff Burger passed for 217 yards and two touchdowns, and 12th-ranked Auburn's defense smothered Georgia as the Tigers beat the eighth-ranked Bulldogs 27-11 Saturday.

Burger, who completed 22 of 32 passes, threw scoring tosses of 21 yards to Lawyer Tillman and 3 yards to Duke Donaldson as the Tigers moved to the threshhold of their third Southeastern Conference football championship.

The Tigers, 8-1-1 for the year and 4-0-1 in the conference, need a Nov. 27 victory over archrival Alabama to clinch the crown outright and earn a berth in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.



No Where To Run

Georgia could have clinched a championship tie with a victory, but was eliminated, with its record falling to 7-3 and 4-2.

The swarming Auburn defense kept Georgia's attack at bay for most of the afternoon and helped turn the tide with a pair of third-quarter turnovers that set up a field goal and touchdown.

Carlo Cheattom pounced on a James Jackson fumble at the Georgia 37 to set up a 40-yard field goal by Win Lyle and Nate Hill's interception set up a 28-yard touchdown run on a reverse by Alexander Wright.

Lyle also kicked a 34-yard field goal with three seconds left in the first half, less than three minutes after Georgia had sliced the Tiger lead to 7-3 on a 38-yard field goal by Steve Crumley.

Lars Tate scored on a 2-yard run with 4:14 left in the game and then ran for the two-point conversion.

The victory squared the South's oldest series, one that began in 1892, at 42-42-7.

The Tigers took control of the game at the start of the third quarter when they drove 69 yards in seven plays to build their lead to 17-3 on Burger's 3-yard pass to Donaldson.

The key play in the drive was a 55-yard gain by Harry Mose, who caught a short pass from Burger at the Tiger 45 and raced to the Georgia 6.

Three plays later, Greg Staples forced the Jackson fumble that Cheattom recovered to set up the Lyle field goal, building the lead to 20-3 with 6:23 left in the third.

Georgia kept possesion for only two plays on the next series, with Hill picking off Wayne Johnson's pass on second down and returing it six yards to the 28.

Wright got the call on the reverse, bobbled the handoff twice before getting control and racing to the end zone.

Georgia moved to the Auburn 2 before running out of downs on the next possession and also got in scoring territory again after Tate's run had sliced the lead to 16 points.

That last threat was set up when Vince Guthrie returned a Burger interception 36 yards to the Auburn 21. The Bulldogs again ran out of downs at the Tiger 2 with just under two minutes remaining, enabling Auburn to run out the clock.

Michigan St. (13).....27
Indiana (16).....3

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Lorenzo White rushed 56 times for 292 yards, both school records, leading 13th-ranked Michigan State to a 27-3 Big Ten victory Saturday over No. 16 Indiana and giving the Spartans their first Rose Bowl berth in 22 years.

The season was the most successful since 1978 for Michigan State, 6-0-1 in the conference and 7-2-1 overall. The Spartans tied for the Big Ten crown in that year but were on probation and unable to compete in the Rose Bowl.

Indiana, 6-2 and 7-3, was gunning for its first Rose Bowl berth since 1968. Both teams have one game to play, but conference standings won't be affected.

The Michigan State defense, best in the nation against the rush, held the Hoosiers to 180 total yards, 33 on the ground. Todd Krumm intercepted two passes for the Spartans, giving him a school-record nine for the season.

Indiana quarterback Dave Kramme, making his second successive start while Dave Schnell recovers from an appendectomy, completed 11 of 28 for 147 yards with three interceptions.

The Hoosiers, who had outscored their opponents 125-60 in the second half of their first nine games, got a 49-yard field goal by Pete Stoyanovich on their first possession, then the Michigan State defense took control.

White scored two touchdowns. His 5-yard TD run on the first play of the second quarter put Michigan State ahead 7-3, and the Spartans dominated the rest of the way, avenging a 17-14 loss to the Hoosiers last year.

It was the fifth time in his career that White, who also scored on a 1-yard run, has gained over 200 yards in a game.

McAllister completed 5 of 5 passes for 67 of the Spartans 408 total yards.

The Hoosiers took the opening kickoff and drove from their own 26 to the Spartans 32 in 12 plays for Stoyanovich's 49-yard field goal.

Kramme had two third-down conversions in the drive, hitting Tim Jorden for 11 yards and Tony Buford for 13 yards.

The Spartans, who didn't register their initial first down until 12:50 into the game, put together a 51-yard, eight-play TD drive on their third possession with White carrying on all eight plays.

The key to the drive, and perhaps to the game, came after a holding penalty gave the Spartans a second-and-14 situation at the Indiana 23. White burst through right tackle, made two nifty moves and rambled to the Hoosiers' 3 before finally being hauled down.

Three plays later, White slanted in behind a block by left tackle Tony Mandarich for the score that put Michigan State ahead 7-3 on the first play of the second quarter.

The Spartans have never given up a lead this season.

On their next possession, the Spartans went 64 yards in seven plays for McAllister's TD toss to Rison who beat Joe Zeigler in front of the goal post from a third-and-11 situation at the Hoosiers' 22.

The Hoosiers drove to their own 43 on their next possession. On first down, defensive tackle Mark Nichols forced a Kramme fumble that was recovered by Michigan State linebacker Kurt Larson at the Indiana 44.

Eight plays later, with 3:24 remaining in the half, Langeloh was good on his 47-yard field goal attempt as the ball hit the crossbar and kicked forward toward the north tunnel for a 17-3 lead.

The key to the drive was a spectacular one-handed grab by Rison for a 19-yard gain in front of Zeigler from a third-and-8 situation at the Indiana 42.

On their next possession, the Hoosiers drove to the Spartans 35 before Todd Krumm picked off his eighth pass of the year, stepping in front of Ken Allen with 1:15 remaining in the half.

Michigan State's Blake Ezor started the second half with a 90-yard kickoff return to the Hoosiers' 8 yard line where he was hauled down by Erick Coleman.

Thomas Leads Cowboys To 49-17 Win Over Jays

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Thurman Thomas rushed for 202 yards and three touchdowns and Barry Sanders retrurned a kickoff 100 yards for another score Saturday, sparking No. 17 Oklahoma State to a 49-17 victory over Kansas.

Thomas, leading the Big Eight and ranked sixth in the nation in rushing, exceeded 200 yards for the fifth time in his career as the Cowboys raised their record to 8-2 and dropped the Jayhawks to 1-8-1. Thomas scored twice on four-yard runs in the second period and sped 33 yards to the end zone in the third.

After a scoreless first quarter, Oklahoma State got the wind at its back and reeled off touchdown drives of 94, 59 and 24 yards without once going to a third down. The 94-yard march, following a Kansas turnover, consisted of 12 running plays and an 11-yard pass to Hart Lee Dykes. The second covered 59 yards in eight plays and the third, following another turnover, went 24 yards in four plays.

The Cowboys, who have not lost to Kansas since 1972, went up 28-0 with a 78-yard drive on their first possession of the third period, capped by Mike Gundy's 25-yard touchdown pass to Dykes. Gundy put Oklahoma State on top 42-3 with 10:46 left when he threw a 6-yard scoring strike to Dykes, the Big Eight's leading receiver.

The Jayhawks, aided by Kelly Donohoe's 49-yard pass to Willie Vaughn, scored their first touchdown on Donohoe's 1-yard run with 8:32 to play. But Sanders took the ensuing kickoff and broke free, outrunning the only defender with a chance to get him past midfield.

Donohoe closed out the scoring when he connected with Vaughn on a 20-yard scoring pass.

Thomas' 202 rushing yards gave him 5,146 yards in total offense, boosting him past Bob Fenimore for first place in the Cowboy record book.

The Jayhawks seized the momentum along with the wind in the first quarter when Stacy Henson's sack of Gundy threw the Cowboys for an 18-yard loss and forced Cary Cooper to punt out of his own end zone. The kick carried only 18 yards, giving the Jayhawks possession on the O-State 28. But on third and 4, safety Rod Smith made a juggling interception of Kevin Verdugo's pass and was downed on the 6-yard line. That ended the quarter, and Oklahoma State proceeded to unreel a 94-yard touchdown march and take control of the game before the crowd of 18,200.

Thomas climaxed the first two drives with four-yard scoring runs and Sanders made it 21-0 with an 11-yard run. On his 33-yard scoring spurt in the third period, Thomas juked two defenders with a clear shot at him in the end zone.

Oklahoma State place kicker Cary Blanchard wrote his name into the school record book by kicking his 37th consecutive extra point.

Both teams were coming off bitter, disappointing games against state rivals, with the Cowboys having lost to No. 1 Oklahoma last week and the Jayhawks winding up in a 17-17 tie against Kansas State.

Tennessee (18).....55
Mississippi.....13

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Freshman quarterback Sterling Henton began a 28-point second quarter with a touchdown pass and ended it with a scoring run as 18th-ranked Tennessee defeated Mississippi 55-13 in a Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

The victory, before scouts from the Hall of Fame, Peach, Liberty, Independence and Bluebonnet bowls, improved Tennessee to 7-2-1 overall and 2-1-1 in the SEC. Mississippi dropped to 3-7 in all games and 1-4 in the league.

Henton had plenty of help from freshman teammate Reggie Cobb, who scored on runs of 1, 13 and 9 yards.

After a 1-yard run by Cobb gave the Vols a 7-0 lead at the end of one quarter, Henton and Tennessee took almost total control. Henton, making only his second career start, opened the second quarter with a 39-yard scoring pass to wingback Terence Cleveland that put the Vols up 14-0 with 14:52 left in the first half.

Tennessee found the end zone in each of its next four drives. Charles Wilson scored from 4 yards out for a 21-0 lead and Cobb scored on a 13-yard run to push the Vols ahead 28-0.

Cobb's second touchdown was set up by Tennessee linebacker Keith DeLong, who gave the Vols the football at the Mississippi 31-yard line after covering a fumble by Mississippi tailback Jim Earl Thomas.

Mississippi mounted its only sustained drive of the half, moving 70 yards in 16 plays with quarterback Jonn Darnell scrambling 14 yards for a Rebel touchdown and cutting the Vols' margin to 28-7.

Henton brought Tennessee right back, however, guiding the Vols 75 yards in the final 2:17 and capping the drive with a 2-yard scramble around his own right end for a 35-7 lead at the half.

Tennessee reaffirmed its control of the contest at the start of the third period when DeLong intercepted a Darnell pass at the Rebel 33 and returned the ball to the Mississippi 23.

Two plays and 39 seconds later, Cobb had his third touchdown of the game with a 9-yard run, and the Vols were on top 42-7.

The Rebels finally held Tennessee when placekicker Phil Reich missed a 47-yard field goal attempt with 7:52 remaining in the third quarter.

After Reich's missed field goal attempt, Mississippi backup quarterback Mark Young took the Rebels 69 yards in six plays, cutting the Vol lead to 42-13 with a 54-yard scoring pass to Willie Green.

The Vols added a late score on a 19-yard pass from Moses Collins to John Rollins to push the score to 55-13.

Cobb's three touchdowns put the 5-foot-11, 205-pound tailback within six points of tying the SEC record of 120 points scored in a season.

Cobb has scored 114 points and has games remaining against Kentucky and Vanderbilt.

The record is shared by Herschel Walker of Georgia and Tommy Durrance of Florida. Walker scored 120 points in 1981, while Durrance reached the milestone in 1969.

The Tennessee school record is 130 points, which was set by Gene McEver in 1929 when the Vols were members of the old Southern Conference.

Texas A&M (19).....14
Arkansas (20).....0

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Third string quarterback Craig Stump threw his first touchdown pass of the season, and Rod Harris returned a punt 66 yards for a score Saturday to keep defending champion Texas A&M in the Southwest Conference race with a 14-0 victory Saturday over Arkansas.

The 19th ranked Aggies are 4-1 in SWC play and 7-2 overall while the 20th- ranked Razorbacks dropped to 5-2 and 7-3. Texas is the only other SWC team with just one loss.

It was Texas A&M's first shutout of Arkansas since 1956. It was the first blanking of the Hogs since SMU did it 47 games ago.

Harris' punt return in the first four minutes of the game got the huge Kyle Field crowd of 73,511 fans stirring, then it settled down into a defensive struggle.

Arkansas punter Kendall Trainor got a low snap and his line drive kick was fielded on the fly by Harris, who followed Alex Morris' clearing block at the Arkansas 30 for the touchdown only 2:49 into the game.

The Razorbacks used four quarterbacks, trying to get their offense going, and A&M's couldn't move until Stump got a chance midway in the third period.

He took the Aggies 78 yards in 10 plays, completing two big third-down passes. On third down from the Arkansas 3-yard line, Stump hit walk-on wide receiver Gary Oliver for the touchdown.

Arkansas rallied late in the fourth period, reaching the Aggies' 7-yard line, but Mickey Washington recovered a bad pitchout by Quinn Grovey.

The Aggies sacked the Arkansas quarterbacks 10 times for 57 yards in losses.

Arkansas gained only 125 yards in total offense on 60 plays. James Rouse was held to 38 yards on 11 carries as the Hogs could muster only 62 rushing yards on 54 tries. A&M went into the game sixth in the nation in total defense.

Both Aransas and A&M only had 11 first downs each.

The Aggies blew two scoring opportunities in the first half when Scott Slater missed field goal attempts of 26 and 31 yards.

Linebacker Adam Bob blocked a Trainor punt in the first period and the ball rolled back 26 yards to the Razorback 19. Arkansas held and Slater hooked his first field goal attempt to the left of the upright.

Harris' 11-yard punt return plus a piling on penalty set the Aggies up again deep in Arkansas territory in the second period. The Aggies marched to the Arkansas 15 but on third down fullback Gurley dropped Bucky Richardson's pass in the end zone. Slater then missed his second try.

Arkansas crossed the midfield stripe only once in the first half and twice in the second half.

Michigan.....17
Illinois.....14

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Phil Webb raced two yards for a touchdown in the final minute Saturday to give Michigan a 17-14 victory over Illinois.

The Wolverines trailed 14-7 going into the fourth quarter. But Mike Gillette booted a 25-yard field goal to pave the way for the winning touchdown and the Michigan defense stopped the Illini cold.

Quarterback Demetrius Brown kept the last-minute drive alive with a 10-yard completion to Chris Calloway on fourth down, and three plays later Webb was in the end zone.

Michigan improved to 7-3 for the season, with a 5-2 mark in the Big Ten Conference. Illinois fell to 3-6-1 and 2-4-1.

Michigan opened the scoring with a three-yard touchdown run by Jamie Morris in the second quarter.

But Illinois tied the game on a one-yard touchdown run by Greg Turner in the second quarter, and took the lead when running back Keith Jones fired a 20-yard TD pass to James Gordon in the third.

On three possessions in the fourth quarter, Illinois netted a loss of two yards.

Houston.....37
Temple.....7

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — David Dacus threw three touchdown passes Saturday to help spoil the Temple Owls' homecoming and lead the Houston Cougars to a 37-7 victory.

Dacus, a junior, completed 36 of 50 passes for 376 yards as Houston, 3-6, sent Temple, 3-7, to its sixth straight defeat.

Dacus hit Kimple Anders with touchdown passes of 3 and 2 yards, the first one coming late in the second period to help the Cougars take a 17-7 halftime lead. He also connected with James Dixon on a scoring pass midway through the third quarter. Dixon finished the game with 12 catches for 123 yards.

Temple's Willard Cooper intercepted a pass and ran 64 yards to give the Owls a short lived 7-3 lead midway in through the second quarter.

Houston went ahead for good with 11:57 remaining in the quarter when Randy Thornton picked off another Temple pass and raced 19 yards into the end zone.

Appalachian.....27
The Citadel.....17

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Freshman reserve quarterback Bobby Fuller threw for 173 yards, including an 18-yard touchdown pass to tailback Ritchie Melchor, to lead Appalachian State to a 27-17 victory over The Citadel in Southern Conference football Saturday.

Appalachian, No. 2 in NCAA Division I-AA, is now 8-2 overall and 6-0 in the league.

Fuller, who replaced starter Todd Payton after the first Mountaineer series, hit Melchor for the TD pass with 1:22 remaining in the first quarter.

Appalachian State's Sam Sanders then blocked Tim Cook's 26-yard field goal attempt and returned the ball 69 yards for the score with 9:59 remaining in the first half and the Mountaineers quickly had a 14-0 lead.

Moye-Wilson Aerials Key Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

With his back to the wall, Tom Moye unleashed a perfect strike to Malcom Wilson in the end zone late in the fourth quarter Friday night and sewed up a first round victory for Rose over New Bern in the state 4-A playoffs, 20-7.

The Rampants, facing a fourth-and-20 at the Bear 30 yard line, overcame it in the best way as Moye laid the ball perfectly into the hands of the streaking Wilson in the end zone. Wilson, well-covered on the play, scored his second touchdown of the game on the play, boosting the Rampants into the second round.

Earlier, Wilson and Moye had connected on a 3-yard pass, and Timmy Moore had run for seven yards for the opening score of the game.

New Bern, held fairly well in check much of the way, scored late in the third period on a 24-yard pass from Mark Dilday to Jerome Hudson, bringing the Bears back to 12-7 at the time.

But Rose's defense turned the key, halting the Bears on several scoring threats during the night, including two in the opening quarter of the game.

The Rampants will now play host to Jacksonville, a 24-7 victor over Rocky Mount. It will be the second meeting of the two, Rose having won the earlier game, 12-7.

Rose Coach Chip Williams had nothing but praise for the Bears after the game. "They were well-prepared and they played a heck of a game.

"But I think the big difference was our defense. We held them several times, including those two drives in the first period. That set the tone for the game," Williams said.

Williams said that he felt the Rampants were somewhat spotty on offense in the first half, moving into scoring position several times and coming away empty. The first score of the game — the only one in the first half — came when Rose took the ball away on an aborted punt try by the Bears.

"I was real pleased with our passing in the second half. Tom (Moye) did a great job throwing the ball and Malcom (Wilson) and Eric (Morris) did a good job catching the ball."

Moye completed eight of 15 attempts for 155 yards, with Wilson catching three for 69 and Morris two for 54.

Moore, who was the workhorse of the ground attack, carried 19 times for 147 yards for the Rampants, and several times got away for key yards on third down plays.

If there was a problem in the game for the Rampants, it was their kickoff game. They were again penalized for kicking out of bounds on the opening play of the game, then allowed runbacks of 22, 49 and 24 yards before finally holding the last returner to just one yard.

The penalty and the 22-yard runback on the opening play gave New Bern good field position at its own 35. Facing third and four, however, Anthony Henry broke through the middle and dashed 39 yards down to the Rose 20. Three plays later, the Bears collected another first down at the Rampant seven, but Tracy Murphy was thrown for a 6-yard loss and then Dilday was sacked for 12 more, forcing a 42-yard field goal attempt by Leslie Thompson.

It fell short, however, and Rose took over — only to turn it back on a fumble on the second play at the 21.

But again, the defense proved up to the task, and a 41-yard field goal attempt by Thompson was partially blocked and again came up short.

Rose finally got the ball in good field position after Rexter Williams intercepted Dilday and returned the ball eight yards to the Rose 47. Moore squirted up the middle for 23 yards to the Bear 30 on first down, but after reaching the 14, the Rampants were thrown for a loss and a fourth-down pass attempt by Moore on the option fell short.

The defense came to the rescue again, rushing punter Kenny Jackson and forcing him to roll out and attempt a pass, which fell incomplete, giving the Rampants the ball on the Bear 33.

After a 4-yard gain, Moye hit David Daniels for 16 yards and a first down at the 13. Rose picked up six on the next two plays before a pass fell incomplete, making it fourth and four at the seven.

Moore took a quick pitch around the left side on the play and broke into the end zone for the score, giving Rose the lead. Kevin Goodrich's kick, however, was blocked, leaving it at 6-0 with 6:06 left in the half.

Shernard Brown's kickoff return brought the ball back to the Rose 41, but the Bears were unable to pick up a first down. Rose, in turn, picked up 36 yards on first down after the punt, moving back to the New Bern 44, but also failed to pick up another first down as the half ground down.

The Rampants marched for their second score after the second half kickoff. The drive got off to a good start when New Bern was flagged for face masking on the runback. From the 32, Moore sped around the right side, broke three tackles and was finally jerked down at the New Bern 39 after a 29-yard gain. Moye then went to Morris for 35 yards on the next play, moving the ball to the four.

Two plays, however, netted but a yard, so Moye hooked up with Wilson for the final three yards and the touchdown with 9:34 left in the period.

A two-point run by Moore was halted just short of the goal line, however, leaving it at 12-0.

Another poor kickoff coverage let New Bern bring the kick back to its own 41. On first down, Dilday hit Mike Purdie for 19 yards to the Rose 40, but the Rampants sacked Dilday on third down, and Jackson, back to punt, again had to eat the ball under a rush, coughing it up on the New Bern 45.

But the Rampants failed to pick up a first down and gave it back at the 36. A personal foul after the play ended, however, moved it all the way back to the New Bern 21. But Rose let the Bears out of the hole as Dilday hit two passes to make up the 25-yards needed for the first down, getting back to the 50.

Thompson's kick was good, cutting the lead to 12-7.

Rose almost put it out on reach on its next series, overcoming a second-and-25 situation with a 25-yard run by Moore. But a holding penalty negated a 7-yard touchdown by Moore and Moye was intercepted on the next play.

Rose got it back with seven minutes left and drove 47 yards for the clincher. Moore raced 24 yards on third and five for a first down at the 20.

Rose was penalized for a clip on second down, however, pushing the Rampants back to the 32. They got two before a third down pass fell incomplete.

But on the fourth down play, Moye hit Wilson and it was all over with 4:58 to go.

Moye hit Moore for the two-point conversion and it was just a question of time after that.

The victory boosts the Rampants to 11-0 on the season while New Bern closes out its year at 7-4.

Cofield Paces Tarboro By Conley

TARBORO — Elroy Cofield scored all four touchdowns as Tarboro rallied from a 6-0 deficit to defeat D.H. Conley, 24-9, in the first round of the State 3-A Playoffs Friday night.

Conley, picked in the lower division of the Coastal 3-A, surprised the league with a third-place finish, earning only their second trip to the playoffs.

Chuckie Gardner put Conley into the initial lead in the first quarter as he pulled in a 10-yard pass from Bronswell Patrick for a 6-0 lead.

Conley had earlier threatened, but fumbled the ball inside the Tarboro 20 to be frustrated in that attempt.

Tarboro then came back behind the running of Cofield to score two second period touchdowns. Cofield got the first on a 3-yard run, then added the second on a 10-yard sprint. That put Tarboro into a 12-6 lead at the half.

The Vikings kept it close, getting a field goal of 27 yards from Hall Dunn. That closed it to 12-9 with plenty of time remaining.

But Conley fumbled the ball away twice more, and Tarboro turned both fumbles into touchdowns. One of the fumbles was inside the 20 and the other inside the 30 on the Conley end of the field.

Cofield scored from the 20 on one and from the five on the other to run the Tarboro lead out to the final 24-9 margin.

Cofield led the Tarboro offense with 150 yards on 21 carries.

Edenton Ends Jag Hopes, 17-0

EDENTON — Farmville Central played tough defense, but never got its offense on track as Edenton swept past the Jaguars, 17-0, in the first round of the State 2-A Football Playoffs Friday night.

The Aces returned the favor defensively, holding the vaunted Farmville Central running game to minus three yards for the game. Edenton ground out 278 yards in total offense, but Farmville stopped the Aces on five trips inside the 20-yard line.

After a scoreless first period, Edenton settled for a 37-yard field goal by Ben Miller for the only points in the first half of play.

In the second half, however, the Aces added touchdowns in each quarter. Derrone Felton pulled in a 39-yard pass from Erie Downing for the first and Eric Hayes ran six yards for the other. Miller added PAT kicks after each score.

Edenton turned the ball over five times to the Farmville defense, including fumbles at the FC 1, 6 and 12 yard lines, and had two passes intercepted inside the Farmville 20.

"I thought we played extremely hard defensively," Farmville Coach Dixon Sauls said, "forcing five turnovers. But we couldn't generate any offense."

The loss ends the year for Farmville, which closes 7-4. Edenton, 11-0, will travel to Ayden-Grifton on Friday for round two.

Hurricane Blows Away Jamesville

GUMBERRY — Northampton West, after battling with Jamesville in the first half, broke open the game with five second half scores and rolled to a 41-0 win in the first round of the State 1-A Playoffs Friday night.

The Hurrieane managed only one first half touchdown and lead 8-0 at intermission before blowing the Bullets away.

Ronnie Ingram climaxed the opening drive of the night for Northampton, crashing over from the nine. Ingram also added the conversion run for an 8-0 lead.

On its second possession, the Hurricane moved again deep inside Jamesville territory, but was stopped and got off no real threats the rest of the half. Jamesville, meanwhile, mounted its only drive of the night, moving inside the 20 before turning the ball back to the Hurricane.

In the third period, however, two touchdowns by Northampton put the game away. Ingram scored his second on a 35-yard run and Melvin Garner added the PAT. Quincey Croffen then scored on a 25-yard gallop to up the lead to 22-0.

Northampton closed out the game with three more touchdowns in the last period. Marcus Banks scored from the one, Wiley Moody from the 23 and Richard Moody from the four. Kirby Underdue added PAT kicks after the final two scores.

Jamesville closes out its season with a 5-6 record, while Northampton, 10-1, will play Gates County on Friday in round two.

Blount Paces Chargers In Rout

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

LITTLEFIELD — It was supposed to be a case of irresistible force meets immovable object, but the immovable object never showed up.

Instead Eric Blount and Ayden-Grifton's irresistible Chargers moved the Ahoskie Cougars off the field in a 45-17 victory Friday night in the first round of the State 2-A Football Playoffs. And they did it with solid running, good defense, and — surprise — a sharp passing attack.

"We opened up and passed more," AG coach B.T. Chappell said after the game. "We caught them by surprise. They weren't expecting us to pass."

Indeed, as a team Ayden-Grifton was six of seven for 186 yards and four touchdowns. Quarterback Darryl Moye threw for two of the touchdowns and 110 yards.

The other two passing touchdowns came on trick plays: the first on a pitch to Blount who threw 37 yards to fullback Ronnell Peterson in the end zone, and the second on a fake punt. On that play, James Woodard threw a 39 yard pass to halfback Tony Reeves in a fourth and eight situation.

Surprisingly, the Cougars, whose defense allowed only 451 yards rushing all season, could do little to stop the potent Ayden-Grifton running attack. All total the Chargers ran for 222 yards and a touchdown.

"We ran better than anyone thought we would," Chappell said. "And that helped people get open for passing."

Ahoskie coach Darryl Allen said he thought quickness was the key to the Chargers' success.

"I was very concerned about Blount. We knew he was quick, but we didn't know he was that quick," Allen said.

Blount stuck it to the Cougars on defense also.

On the opening play from scrimmage, after Keith Roberson returned the kickoff 43 yards deep into Charger territory, Blount intercepted an Ahoskie pass at the 3-yard line.

After getting a first down, Ayden-Grifton was forced to punt on a fourth-and-inches play at its own 23. Woodard's 29-yard punt was downed at the 41 of Ahoskie.

Roberson, Ahoskie's fullback, immediately ripped off 14 yards down the middle to earn a first down at the Chargers' 39-yard line. Five more running plays took them to the 10 yard line, from where Darrin Mitchell bulled the final yards for the first score of the game.

Al Wright's point after attempt was good off of a bad snap, and Ahoskie led 7-0 with 3:41 left to go in the first quarter.

After Blount returned the ensuing kick-off 25 yards to his own 42, Moye surprised the Cougar defense with a 43 yard pass to fullback Ronnell Peterson over the middle. That put the ball on the Ahoskie 15-yard line.

Blount took the next run eight yards and then Harper carried twice, for five and two yards, the latter for the Chargers' sole rushing touchdown with 2:36 left to go in the first. A 2-point try failed.

Taking a page from the Chargers' book, Ahoskie used five five running plays to move the ball to the A-G 32, from where, on third and nine, quarterback Dexter Davis threw a 16-yard pass to Mitchell and a 15-yard pass to running back Mike Dempsey, putting the ball on the one. Davis kept the ball on the next play for sneak up the middle to score on the next play. The PAT was good, and Ahoskie led 14-6 with 9:48 left in the half.

It was the last time the Cougars would hold the lead.

A-G took the kickoff on the 20 and rolled off nine running plays to get the ball to Ahoskie's 37. Moye then pitched the ball to Blount who scrambled around in the backfield before tossing a 37-yard touchdown strike to Harper in the middle of the endzone.

On the two-point conversion, Blount got the ball again, looking for Moye, the quarterback, in the endzone. After scrambling in the backfield he hit end Jeff Barrett over the middle for the score tying the game at 14 with 4:48 left in the half.

Ahoskie was forced to punt after getting one first-down on the next series, and A-G ended up with the ball on its on 11-yard line.

Four quick running plays, including a 17-yard scamper by Reeves, put the ball on the Ahoskie 44. On the next play, Moye hit Blount, who was bumped, on the left sideline for a touchdown with 1:03 left in the half. The two-point conversion made it 22-14, Chargers.

Ahoskie's Ricky Vann fumbled an on-side kickoff and David Dixon recovered for the Chargers on the Cougars 30-yard line. An illegal procedure call moved the ball back five yards, then Blount scampered for 12 yards to the 23.

After tossing his only incomplete on the night, Moye hit Peterson in the right side of the endzone with eight ticks left on the clock. Roberson batted down the PAT pass try and Ayden-Grifton took a 28-14 lead into intermission.

On a night when nothing could go wrong for the Chargers, they moved to the 12-yard line on the opening series of the second half. There the drive stalled, but George Fuller connected on a 29-yard field goal that hit the cross bar to make it 31-17 with 7:59 left in the third.

Both teams punted on their next series, then Ahoskie managed to put together a combination of passing and running that moved the ball to the A-G seven. On fourth and goal, Al Wright booted a 23-yard field goal to pull his team to within two touchdowns of the Chargers with 22 seconds left in the third quarter.

Ahoskie tried an on-sides kick, but was offsides and kicked away the next time. Ayden-Grifton took over on its own 24, and eleven runs later, the drive stalled with fourth and eight at the Ahoskie 39.

The Chargers elected to fake the punt, with Woodard throwing a 39-yard strike to Reeves for another touchdown. The PAT put the nail in Ahoskie's coffin, making it 38-17 with 5:55 left.

Then, to add insult to injury, on the first play after the kickoff, Dixon stripped Cougar quarterback Tyrone Joyner of the ball. Blount scooped it up and ran it back 62 yards for the Chargers' final touchdown. The PAT made it 45-17 with 5:28 left.

Ahoskie's final deep threat was stopped when Blount intercepted his second pass of the evening at his own 12-yard line and returned it 21 yards to his own 33.

Ahoskie ends the season with a 9-2 record. Ayden-Grifton, now 9-2, plays host to Edenton, the only other team to beat Ahoskie on Friday.

Tigers Get No Luck In Loss

CLAYTON — Williamston's football team must have had a black cat run in front of its team bus on Friday the 13th, as bad luck followed them to a 14-13 defeat at the hands of hosting Clayton in the State 2-A Football Playoffs.

Both of Clayton's touchdowns came within a minute of each other, both of them set up by Williamston fumbles. Two penalties also contributed to the demise of the Tigers, one keeping the first Clayton drive alive and the other killing the tying extra point kick in the final stages of the game.

Williamston drove for the first score of the game in the opening period. Francisco Clifford, who carried 15 times for 136 yards to lead the Tiger offense, raced 24 yards with the ball for the first score. Chris Coudreit kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

Later in the half, Williamston drove to the Comet 19 only to be turned back.

As the half drew towards a close, Williamston forced a Clayton punt, only to fumble the ball on its own 35. After reaching the 17, the drive appeared stopped and Clayton lined up to try a field goal. However, the count drew Williamston off sides, and the 5-yard penalty gave Clayton new life.

Travis Stevenson pushed into the end zone from the one to cap the drive and Craig Williams' kick tied it up.

On the first play following the kickoff, Williamston again coughed up the ball on its own 33. On the first play following, Stevenson hit Billy Dunn for 33 yards and the touchdown with just 42 seconds left in the half. The pass was deflected by Williamston's safety, but still fell into Dunn's hands. Williams again kicked for a 14-7 lead at halftime.

Williamston drove inside the 20 in the fourth period, only to half a first-down pass at the five dropped. Clayton came right back and drove to the Williamston 19 before the defense stripped the ball and turned it back.

The Tigers then drove 83 yards on seven plays with Mark Williams hitting five of five passes for 66 yards, including a 20-yard to Felix Purvis for the score with 41 seconds left.

Gates Runs Past Tribe, 36-20

CHOCOWINITY — Gates County survived an hour-long wait after knocking the lights out of Chocowinity, then proceeded leave the Indians in the dark Friday night in the opening round of the State 1-A Football Playoffs, 36-20.

The Red Barons shot down the Indians, co-champs of the Tobacco Belt Conference, posting 28 first half points, including a touchdown on the final play of the first half.

The opening score of the night, however, left the playing field in the dark and caused an hour's delay in the game which wasn't over until after 11 p.m. Carl Elliott scored on a four-yard run for the touchdown in the first period. On the ensuing extra point attempt, Eric Knight's kick attempt sailed wide and hit a wire leading off a transformer on a power pole off to the side of the uprights. The jarring blow darkened the field, and it was nearly an hour before power was restored and the lights warmed up to playing brightness.

However, the delay didn't give the Indians time to do an effective war dance. Gates came back to score again before the period ended on a 3-yard run by Knight. Joe Umphlette then caught a PAT pass from Knight for an 14-0 lead.

The two worked their aerial act again in the second period, with Umphlette catching a 19-yard touchdown pass. Since it had worked before, Gates used it again, and Umphlette's PAT catch upped the lead to 22-0.

Chocowinity finally got on the scoreboard in the closing seconds of the half. Greg Heggie caught a 69-yard pass from Dale Cole that cut the lead to 22-6.

But the Red Barons came back and Knight was on the receiving end of a 23-yard halfback pass from Thomas Smith for the score on the final play of the half, making it 28-6.

Chocowinity came back with two more touchdowns in the second half, one in each quarter to cut the lead to 28-20. Curtis Myers go the first on a 56-yard gallop. Cole hit Julius Smith for the PAT.

Then, Sean Crawford caught a 12-yard pass from Cole for the second Tribe score.

Gates, however, got one more before it was all over. Smith scored on an 8-yard run and Knight hit Jason Lane for the PAT.

Myers led the Chocowinity rushing with 64 yards on 12 carries while William Haywood had 45 on 15 trips. Smith led Gates with 117 yards on 15 carries with Elliott adding 99 yards on 18 yards. Cole hit on six of seven passes for 169 yards.

Myers led the Chocowinity defense with 11 tackles while Lee Van Crawford added nine, including a sack.

"I was pleased with our senior this year," Coach DeWayne Kellum said. "They progressed every year and have done a fine job for us. Hopefully some of this year will carry over into next year."

Chocowinity ends the season with an 8-3 record. Gates, 7-4, travels to Northampton West on Friday for the second round of play.

Panthers Rally, Top Cougs

BETHEL — North Pitt, trailing throughout much of the game, took control of the ballgame in the final quarter and pulled out a 26-21 football victory over Zebulon in the first round of the 2-A State Playoffs Friday night.

The Panthers, down by 14-6 at intermission, still trailed 14-12 at the end of the third period, but pushed over two touchdowns in the final period and were close to another before it was all over.

The win marked the first for North Pitt in three attempts in the state playoffs. In each of its previous attempts, it had lost close games in the first round.

This time, however, the Eastern Plains co-champs, were not to be denied.

With the victory, North Pitt will advance in the field and will travel to Clayton, a 14-13 victor over Williamston Friday night. Ironically, Clayton lost to Zebulon, 39-32, during regular season play, but ended up with the league's number one seed after tying with Fuquay-Varina for the title.

North Pitt, now 7-3-1, also tied for the EPC title, with Ayden-Grifton, which also advanced with a 45-17 romp over Ahoskie.

Zebulon got the scoring started in the first period as quarterback Tony Douglas scored on a 6-yard run. Reggie Robertson kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

North Pitt came back to score in the second quarter as Calvin Hunter hit Reggie Daniels on a 25-yard pass. The PAT kick was off-target, however, leaving the Cougars in the lead, 7-6.

Zebulon came back with another touchdown before the half ended. That came on a 50-yard pass from Douglas to Quentin Mitchell. Robertson again added the PAT for a 14-6 lead that held the rest of the half.

North Pitt scored the only touchdown of the third period on a 51-yard run by Michael Blow. The Panthers went for two to tie it up, but again failed to complete the conversion, trailing 14-12.

But Blow came back to put North Pitt into the lead in the fourth quarter, scoring on a 1-yard run. This time, Hunter hit Daniels for the PAT, giving the Panthers their first lead of the game, 20-14.

Not long afterwards, William Morning intercepted a Zebulon pass and returned it 35 yards for the score, putting the game away for the Panthers at 26-14.

However, Zebulon wasn't totally dead. Mitchell gathered in the kickoff and returned it 85 yards for one final score before the Cougars finally cashed in their chips.

Blow led the Panther offense with 138 yards on 19 carries. Douglas led Zebulon with eight of 15 pass completions for 115 yards.

Cowboys Tell Dutton 'Bye

IRVING, Texas (AP) — John Dutton, the oldest Dallas Cowboy, had planned to retire at the end of the NFL season, but the team decided to let him go a little sooner as it begins its youth movement.

"It was extremely tough for me to make the move. I never like to have to let a veteran go, but we had to make the move," Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said Friday after putting the 36-year-old defensive lineman on waivers.

"You have to put (Danny) Noonan in there, try these younger guys and see if they can play," Landry said. "What we (also) have to do is develop some backups at defensive end."

Dutton declined the Cowboys' request to hold a news conference, saying he didn't want to deal with reporters, Cowboys spokesman Doug Todd said.

His departure was hastened by the progress of Noonan, the Cowboys' No. 1 pick from Nebraska, Landry said. Dutton, also from Nebraska, was the Baltimore Colts' first pick and the fifth player selected in the 1974 draft.

Dutton came to the Cowboys in 1979 from the Colts in exchange for first- and second-round draft picks. He worked at end and tackle the first year before becoming the regular left tackle in 1981.

He started all but one game during the next six seasons, but lost his starting job to Brooks this summer during training camp.

99-Yard Pass Stuns Rams; Other Top Teams Win

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

Havelock, the top-ranked 3-A team in the state, was feeling confident after backing Bertie up at its own 1-yard line on a punt with less than four minutes left and leading by one point in its state high school football first-round playoff game.

However, the 5-6 Falcons dug into their bag of tricks Friday night and pulled out a 99-yard flea-flicker pass with 3:53 remaining that ruined Havelock's perfect season and a quest to return to the 3-A title game for the second season in a row.

Quarterback Delwin Clark lateraled the ball to Pedro Cherry, who in turn passed it 35 yards downfield to Marshall Cherry, who outraced defenders the rest of the way for the shocking upset.

Havelock, which lost to Shelby in the 3-A title game last season, finished the season at 10-1.

The three other top-ranked teams in the state recorded easy victories.

In Greensboro, Monroe Patterson rushed for 100 yards on 14 carries and scored on a 6-yard touchdown run and Mark Harrison added two more scores as top-ranked Greenboro Page rallied to defeat South Stokes 36-12 in a 4-A playoff contest. Page is now 11-0.

The win sets up a first-ever postseason meeting between Page and Greensboro Grimsley. The Whirlies earned a second shot at the Pirates by toppling East Forsyth 34-20. Page embarrassed Grimsley earlier in the year 56-7.

Second-ranked Garner upped its mark to 11-0 as Anthony Barbour rambled for 221 yards and four touchdowns in its 48-13 drubbing of Roxboro Person.

Gastonia Ashbrook sent previously undefeated Kannapolis Brown packing 18-14 as the often-injured Junior Hall rushed for 166 yards on a career-high 30 carries and two scores.

Undefeated Northern Durham downed Raleigh Millbrook for the 13th straight time — on Friday the 13th — to set up a matchup with undefeated Wilmington New Hanover, an 18-0 winner over Wilson Hunt.

Greenville Rose and Charlotte Harding also stayed undefated at 11-0 in the 4-A ranks.

There will be a new 4-A champion crowned this season, though. Defending champion Fayetteville 71st fell to Richmond County 20-7 as running back Marcus Cox scored twice and quarterback Mike Thomas passed for another score. Robert Mays, 71st's top rusher with more than 1,100 yards on the season, nursed a sprained ankle and carried the ball only three times for 3 yards. Richmond County avenged an earlier 30-0 loss in the regular season to 71st.

Defending 3-A champion Shelby upped its record to 10-1 with a 44-0 victory over Skyland Roberson, while No. 2 Burlington Cummings downed Rockingham County 41-6.

Cummings will now face Asheboro, which defeated Western Guilford 21-7 despite losing star running Elliott Armstrong to a disciplinary suspension. Armstrong, who gained 1,775 yards in the regular season, was replaced by junior Odis Covington, who carried the ball 29 times for 120 yards and two touchdowns. During the regular season, Covington carried the ball only 12 times.

Shelby will host Belmont South Point, which got 274 combined yards from the tailback trio of Willie Stain, Brian Pate and Scott Floyd in its 31-15 victory over Canton Pisgah. Pate also scored on a 81-yard kickoff return.

Along with Havelock, Brevard, West Henderson, Central Cabarrus, East Wake and Northwest Cabarrus all were upset in the 3-A ranks.

In 2-A, top-ranked Whiteville raised its record to 11-0 with an impressive 27-6 victory over Wallace-Rose Hill.

Two other unbeatens at 11-0 also scored victories. Edenton Holmes recorded its eighth shutout of the season with a 17-0 blanking of Farmville Central, while Newton-Conover rolled to a 55-3 victory over North Wilkes.

Two-time defending state champion Lexington defeated South Stanly 41-7 to set up a meeting with Monroe, a 33-7 winner over North Rowan. Monroe scored on five of its first six offensive possessions to grab a commanding lead and rolled to victory. Both schools are 10-1.

ged for having only six men on the line of scrimmage. The second attempt, five yards further back, was no good, sealing the win for Clayton.

Clifford led Williamston's rushing with 136 yards on 15 carries. Williams was 10 of 20 for 121 yards to lead the aerial attack.

Williamston closes out the year at 7-4 while Clayton, 9-2, plays host to North Pitt on Friday.

No Comment On Card Move

BALTIMORE (AP) — Owner Bill Bidwill says he sees nothing to rule out Baltimore as a possible site should he decide to move his St. Louis Cardinals football team.

Conversely, Bidwill said at a news conference "it would be premature if they (fans) were to get excited."

Bidwill met separately Friday with Gov. William Donald Schaefer and Mayor-elect Kurt L. Schmoke and looked over the football facilities in suburban Baltimore as well as a proposed stadium site downtown.

"There is nothing I've seen that would rule out Baltimore as a potential site," Bidwill said.

But when asked whether he has definitely decided to move the NFL team from St. Louis, he replied, "No. I can't comment on that."

He did say, however, that he had received indications from other NFL owners that there would be little opposition should he decide to relocate the franchise.

"There have been conversations not initiated by myself that would indicate that it would be favorable," Bidwill said.

Baltimore lost its NFL team when the Colts moved to Indianapolis in 1984. Football fans already have been debating the merits of the name "Baltimore Cardinals," and local radio stations on Friday played the classic tune "Mr. Sandman ... send me a dream," with new words, "Mr. Bidwill ... bring us your team."

For Bidwill to take his team anywhere, he must receive 21 of 27 votes from his fellow club owners.

"If a decision is made, it will be made through an application for transfer before Jan. 15, as required in league bylaws," he said.

Bidwill reportedly has been considering Baltimore, Jacksonville, Phoenix and Memphis as possible new homes for the Cardinals.

The Maryland Legislature has approved funding for a $235-million project to build baseball and football stadiums at Camden Yards, an industrial site downtown.

Bidwill said the possibility of having some input into the design of the football stadium would be a "big factor" in his decision to move.

"The architects they're dealing with are capable of building a first-rate football stadium. If we can have some input, that's great ... That's a big factor."

Bidwill said he was not interested in owning a share of a stadium.

"Our primary interest is as a tenant," he said. "There are a combination of factors if we decide (to move) and the financial aspect could be important."

Bidwell, who toured residential areas of Jacksonville earlier this week, declined to do so during his visit here.

"I did that in Jacksonville because I'd never seen the the residential areas there," he said. "I've seen the residential areas of Baltimore over the years."

Bidwill said he began considering leaving St. Louis three years ago, when he decided that Busch Stadium had become inadequate.

"Up until two or three years ago, we played to 94-to-95 percent capacity in a ballpark that seats 51,000 people," he said. "When we had good teams, we couldn't average more than 51,000 ... We just can't keep up (with the rest of the league)."

Bidwill, who pointed out that over the past 17 years the average attendance at an NFL game had risen from 51,000 to 68,000, said support was waning for the teams in St. Louis.

"When we were winning the division and the baseball team was not doing very well, we (St. Louis) were considered a football town," he said.

He said he does not look forward to moving the Cardinals.

"I've lived in St. Louis for 27 years," he said. "I've enjoyed living there, it's my home. It's a lovely city. I would not enjoy leaving."

Pitt Paladins

Pitt Paladins Join New League; See Improvement

By WOODY PEELE

Pitt Community College has begun its fifth season under coach Charles Coburn by joining the National Junior College Athletic Association, moving a step up in the class of its program.

The Paladins will be playing in the Eastern Region, against Chowan, Louisburg, and Craven, Lenoir, Richmond (Hamlet), and Richard Bland (Petersburg, Va.) community colleges. The conference members meet twice in the season, then play a post-season tournament at Lenoir.

"It's our first year in the NJCAA and we will be going up against some pretty big people. But we've had three years of winning seasons, and it was just time for up to move up a notch. If our first game (a 111-92 loss to Montreat-Anderson) is any indication, I think we can have a .500 season the first year," Coburn said.

"We have a better team this year than last because we have a better bench."

Three members of last year's 17-10 team return, Joel Isley, Mike Hathaway and Jesse Pratt. However, all three of them are currently ineligible. Hathaway, a 6-3 forward, will be eligible on Friday, Isley, a 6-3 forward, on Saturday and Pratt, on Dec. 5. Pratt, only 6-1, will play center quite a bit because of his jumping abilities.

"Right now we're starting five freshmen," Coburn said. They include Otis Barnes, 5-11, at point; Jeffrey Crudup, 5-10, at guard; Paul Hollingsworth, 6-1, at forward; Ricky Congleton, 6-1, at forward, and Eric Dunn, 6-3, at center.

Some of the players are familiar to area fans. Hathaway played at Rose, Hollingsworth at Greenville Christian Acadmey, and Congleton at Roanoke.

"We made a lot of freshman mistakes (against Montreat-Anderson), but I was impressed by the hustle of the team," Coburn said.

"Quickness and outside shooting will be out biggest assets. Our biggest problem, particularly with the freshmen, will be taking shots they should not be taking. Also our free throw shooting must improve. We're working very hard on improving that, since we usually shoot about 40 a night. In our first game, we hit only 58 percent and that hurt us."

Rebounding was a strong point, however, despite the size. Dunn pulled 13, Congleton, 10, and Crudup, nine. "We boxed our real well," the coach said. "They were 6-4, 6-5, 6-6 across the front. Chowan has one guy who's 6-7 and another 6-8, but I think we if continue to scrap and use our quickness, we can stay in the ballgame with them. By the way, (the Montreat-Anderson game) was the first game since I've been here where two guys were in double figures in rebounding."

Adding to the depth are Kevin Michaels, Maurice Williams and James Hilliard. "(Michaels and Williams) don't have a lot of experience, but they've shown considerable progress and are giving 100 percent. Hilliard was the point guard at Ayden-Grifton two years ago and has shown a lot of quickness and outside shooting ability."

Another reserve is Woodrow Wallace, currently sidelined by high blood pressure. "Hopefully he'll be cleared to play this week," Coburn said.

The Paladins participate in the Brevard Tipoff Classic this weekend and open their home season on Nov. 24 against the Methodist JV team.

Eagles Growing Up, Now Hope To Make Move Up

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
(One of a series)

In the past, American University coach Ed Tapscott's team was referred to as the "Little Eagles" because of a definite lack of height.

The Eagles had to rely on outside shooting and hustle to post a win here and there.

But in the last few years, the Eagles have started to grow up, and Tapscott says, "They aren't the little Eagles any more."

Such players as senior forward Andy Bon Salle (6-7), freshman center Ron Davenport (6-8), senior forward Longmire Harrison (6-6), and senior center Tom Scherer (6-9) have made them the biggest Eagle team in some time.

And the Eagles will have a new nest to play in this winter too. After years of playing in the Fort Myer Hall (3,500), the Eagles will be moving in mid-January to their new home, Bender Arena, which seats 5,000.

That, plus the new height, are the keys to an improved Eagle team this winter.

However, Tapscott will have some big shoes that need filling. Gone from last year's squad is high-flying guard Frank Ross, who scored 25.2 points a game last season. Also missing is forward Chuck West, who chipped in 12.4. They were the only double figure starters on the team.

A couple of key reserves who will either start to see a lot of playing time are guard Mike Sampson (6-0) and forward Longmire Harrison (6-6).

However, Sampson and sophomore Daryl Holmes (6-7) are most likely to fill the two starting roles left vacant. Another who could fit into the starting role, and will certainly play a lot is 6-6 junior forward Eric White, who was the leading rebounder two years ago, but missed last year with a knee injury.

American University

- □1986-87 Record: 13-14
- □CAA Record: 5-9 (Sixth)
- □Coach: Ed Tapscott (6th year, 58-83)
- □Top Losses: Frank Ross (25.2, 4.7); Chuck West (12.4, 4.1)
- □Top Returnees: Andy Bon Salle (6-7, F, 8.2, 7.7); Tom Scherer (6-9, C, 5.3, 4.8); Mike Sumner (6-4, G, 6.9, 3.4); Mike Sampson (6-0, G, 3.1, 2.4); Longmire Harrison (6-6, F, 3.0, 3.2), Eric White (did not play in 86-87)
- □Top Newcomers: Ron Davenport (6-8, C); Brock Wortman (6-1, G), Dale Spears (6-3, G)
- □Projected Finish: Fifth

"This team should be very interesting," Tapscott said. "Ross is gone and that, actually, may help us, in that we can't rely on any one person. We have a good bit of experience coming back. Sampson is back at the point, White was our leading rebounder, and we have five people who started at one time or another last year, plus one of our better recruiting classes.

"Without Ross, it will change our approach to the game," Tapscott added. "We are going to have to go inside more and we will have to be a better defensive team inside."

Because of the experience, some observers are projecting the Eagles as a top-division finisher in the Colonial Athletic Association this year, something they have not attained before.

The added height inside helped the Eagles outrebound their opponents in 21 of their 27 games last year, and that trend is expected to continue this year.

"Personally, I welcome the challenge of becoming a team to be recognized and expected to be a contender," Tapscott said. "And with the amount of commitment we're witnessing just on our own campus, I believe our players have to be real excited about the upcoming season. For our returning players, it's a chance to prove what they can do outside the shadow of (Ross). For our new players, it's a chance to start a whole new tradition."

Another player who will figure in the situation is South Florida Community College transfer Dale Spears, a 6-3 guard who averaged 22 points and six assists a game last year. Another transfer, 6-5 Clarence Ingram could also add to the depth at forward, averaging 14 points and 10 rebounds last year. Daryl Holmes, a 6-7 sophomore, also joins the team by transfer and will see plenty of action.

Backing up Scherer at center will be 6-8 Marc Levy.

The key will be how well the Eagles do in their new nest and how well they perform inside. If they perform as well as Tapscott believes they can, they could fly themselves into an upper-division finish.

Wilt Chamberlain scored more than 3,000 points three years in a row in NBA competition from 1960 to 1963, but each time he was beaten out for MVP honors by Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics.

Yankees Trade For Pitchers

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Von Hassey Express" between Chicago and New York is rolling again, this time carrying pitcher Rich Dotson from the White Sox to the Yankees along with the fourth player in two years to make it a round-trip excursion.

The deal brings pitchers Dotson and Scott Nielsen, who took the express from New York to Chicago only last January, to the Yankees for outfielder Dan Pasqua, catcher Mark Salas and minor-league pitcher Steve Rosenberg.

The trade was the fifth between the two clubs in less than two years and made Nielsen part of a tour club that is growing less exclusive by the month.

Besides Nielsen, the two clubs have re-exchanged catcher Ron Hassey and minor leaguers Mike Soper and Glen Braxton in a series of rapid-fire deals that began in December 1985. Hassey, in fact, has gone from the Yankees to the White Sox to the Yankees to the White Sox after first coming to New York from the Chicago Cubs.

"I did mention to somebody today that I could be back to the White Sox next week," Dotson said as he talked to reporters via conference call from Reno, Nev. "I've played with a few of the guys who went back-and-forth.

"I talked to Scotty Nielsen today, and, of course, there's Hassey, who breaks the all-time record for going back and forth."

The Yankees needs for pitching are obvious. They made deals that brought Rick Rhoden, Steve Trout, Charles Hudson, Bill Gullickson and Cecilio Guante to the club last season, during the course of which they used 15 different pitchers as starters. Rhoden, 16-10 with a 3.86 ERA, and 44-year-old Tommy John, 13-6 and 4.03, were the only consistent starters.

Throwing Away Deerskin Is Making Big Mistake

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

Millions of American deer hunters are missing a big opportunity to enjoy their trophy by giving away or throwing out the hide.

"Deerskin is unique leather. It's really soft. It's softer than any other kind of animal," said Lyn Schuette, president of W.B. Place & Co., a deerskin tanning and leather goods company in Hartford, Wis.

Deerskin also is strong and warm and when it gets wet it dries back to nearly its natural softness, unlike cowhide or pigskin which can dry hard enough to use as scrapers.

It's because of the loose fiber structure of the hide, Schuette said.

"I'm not biased. We also make cowhide gloves here. But I once made a pair of gloves, one cowhide, one deerskin and wore them. The deerskin kept that hand warmer," Schuette said in a telephone interview from his office. He got the same result with another pair of gloves with the different leathers on opposite hands.

Turning your deerskin into good leather isn't complicated, provided you don't mind getting your hands a little dirty. It just requires a little care skinning the deer, five pounds of salt, some newspaper and postage to ship the skin to a tannery.

Outdoor News

There's no rush to skin the deer. The hide can remain on while the meat ages. Cut the skin loose around the legs, well above the knee joint, and slit the skin up the inside of the leg to the belly cavity.

Cut around the neck behind the head and down the throat to the belly cavity, so the skin is loosened all around.

Tie the deer by the head to a strong tree limb and skin the back of the neck enough to wrap the skin around a rock. Tie a rope tightly around the skin and rock, then to a car, and pull the skin off the deer.

"That way you eliminate any possibility of getting score marks on the hide," Schuette said. "You can cut into the hide without really seeing it. The tanning process can turn a slit into a hole in the hide, or at least leave a weak spot in the leather."

Then salt the skin thoroughly.

Lay it fleshy side up on a piece of plywood or cardboard and work the five pounds of salt into it.

"What the salt does is draw the moisture out of the hide. The moisture is a breeding ground for bacteria," Schuette said. "The bacteria eat up the hide. They'll eat a hole through the hide. We have gotten hides that look like they've been shot with a shotgun. That's bacteria damage."

The hide can be frozen immediately after removal from the deer, then thawed and salted later. But salting should be done immediately after the skin is off the animal or as soon as it is thawed.

After several days, "when it looks crusty and dry," fold the hide's edges to the center, roll it up, wrap it in newspapers, box it and ship it to a tannery.

Don't wrap the skin in a plastic bag. That helps seal moisture in. Paper will help absorb any moisture away from the hide, Schuette said.

It usually costs $10 or so to get a hide tanned. Then it can be made into anything from moccasins or purses to clothing. It takes, for example, about five good-size deerskins to make a fringed jacket, but one hide will make two purses.

Calling Deer Is Job That Can Be Mastered

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. (AP) — Inexperienced deer callers should stay away from wheezes, snorts and bleats, but a properly pitched snort could fill the freezer with venison, a state wildlife manager said.

Many hunters consider deer calling impossible, but Gary Cook of the Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency said grunts can be mastered easily through listening to tapes and choosing from a good selection of calls on the market.

"The grunt is the center of their communication," Cook said. "There are different types of grunts, including aggressive grunts, social grunts and tending grunts."

Most of the grunting noises deer make have only subtle differences and are soft, except during the mating season when bucks are chasing does, said Cook, who is the agency's assistant regional manager in West Tennessee.

"Don't practice on deer, especially those you are wanting to hunt," Cook said. "The biggest problem most hunters have is overcalling. This won't help your chances."

A beginner should call only once every hour and should remember not to make the grunt too loud, he said.

"It's really hard to mess up on a grunt. Deer even mess them up themselves and if a hunter messes up, it won't scare a deer. They just won't pay any attention to it," Cook said.

Cook said he has called in more than 200 deer. He said he uses a call to make a deer change direction.

"A lot of times deer will be feeding away from you and a subtle grunt will make them turn around and come looking for another deer," he said.

The best time for deer calling is during the rut, or mating season, Cook said.

"Unless it's breeding season, they will casually walk over and check things out, but when the bucks are in rut, they will run in with their hair up to find out what's going on," Cook said.

Deer calling has some drawbacks, he said. Calls instantly give away a hunter's position, for example.

"They will come looking for you and if you're not ready you can really mess up," Cook said. "This is one of the problems most hunters make."

The best thing about grunting is that the sound makes deer relax, he said. Hunters must pay close attention to wind direction and try not to make much other noise so as not to frighten away deer before the call is made, he said.

Bleats, wheezes and snorts are very hard for a hunter to master, Cook said.

"A bleat means different things. To a fawn, they may mean they're hungry, frustrated and lost," he said.

The intensity of the bleat also changes the meaning, Cook said.

Snorts, used in conjunction with grunts by a deer, mean the deer is ready for a confrontation, he said. Wheezes also are used by deer when they are feeling aggressive, Cook said.

Hunters are best to stay away from wheezes, snorts and bleats unless they thoroughly understand deer communication because poorly performed recreations will do more harm than good, he said.

"The only thing about using calls is that it doesn't make a good hunter out of a bad hunter," Cook said. "It only makes a better hunter out of a good hunter."

Fouling Knicks Fall To Bullets

By The Associated Press

The New York Knicks were in a fouling mood and the Washington Bullets made them feel worse.

The Bullets made an NBA record 60 foul shots Friday night and won their first game of the season, beating the winless Knicks 108-101.

"When you play against them, you have to make your free throws because you're going to get fouled," Washington Coach Kevin Loughery said.

That's what the Bullets did. They made 30 straight during one stretch and finished 60-for-69 from the foul line. Washington also took 69 shots from the field, but made only 24.

Washington broke the free throw mark of 59, set by Syracuse during a five-overtime game against Anderson, Ind., on Nov. 24, 1949. Boston, in 1954, and Chicago, in 1970, held the regulation-time record of 56.

Moses Malone, who had 30 points, was 18-for-21 on free throws and Jeff Malone, who had 19 points, was 13-for-14. Bernard King and Frank Johnson were each perfect on their eight tries.

In other NBA games, Boston beat Cleveland 128-114, Chicago defeated New Jersey 103-85, Detroit downed Philadelphia 113-94, Seattle beat Dallas 103-85, Utah topped Phoenix 109-92 and the Los Angeles Clippers defeated Golden State 97-94.

The host Bullets outscored New York 32-6 from the foul line in taking 62-50 lead at halftime. Washington, 1-3, made just one shot from the field in the fourth quarter but still held off the Knicks, 0-5.

Overall, the Knicks were called for 42 fouls to Washington's 28. New York also got three technical fouls for playing illegal defenses and Coach Rick Pitino picked up two technical fouls for arguing shortly before halftime and was ejected.

"I'm trying everything I can think of to get this team going," said Pitino, who last season led Providence to the NCAA Final Four. "I'm terribly disappointed at being 0-5, but I'm not disappointed in the way the guys have been playing."

The Knicks scored 100 points for the first time this season. That was not enough to stop Washington, which led 90-80 after three quarters and never let New York get closer than four points the rest of the game.

"Moses did a terrific defensive job on their big guys," Loughery said. "He worked very hard on the other end."

Gerald Wilkins scored 22 points and Patrick Ewing 20 for New York.

King, the former Knicks star who was signed by the Bullets as a free agent recently, was only 3-for-18 from the field but finished with 14 points with help from the foul line.

Celtics 128, Cavaliers 114

The undefeated Celtics maintained their homecourt hex over Cleveland, beating the Cavaliers for the 23rd straight time at Boston Garden since 1978.

Larry Bird scored 34 points as Boston, trailing 74-64 in the third quarter, rallied for its fifth straight victory.

Dennis Johnson scored 11 of his 23 points in the third period and the Celtics came back for a 92-90 lead entering the fourth. Johnson, who also had 13 assists, made a jump shot with seven minutes remaining to break a tie at 104 and rookie Mark Acres added eight points. Danny Ainge finished with 28 for the Celtics.

Bulls 103, Nets 85

Michael Jordan scored 36 points and Chicago improved to 4-0, the best start in the Bulls' 22-year history.

Jordan scored 12 straight points in the second quarter as host Chicago took a 51-38 lead at halftime. New Jersey got within 64-61 with three minutes left in the third quarter before Jordan scored 13 points in the final period.

SuperSonics 103, Mavericks 95

Ellis, a former Maverick, made a 3-point shot and a pair of 15-foot jumpers as the SuperSonics held Dallas scoreless for 5:38 and charged to a 102-89 lead with one minute left. The sellout crowd at Reunion Arena, usually one of the loudest and most supportive in the NBA, booed the rest of the game.

Ellis finished with 22 points, Tom Chambers 20 and rookie Derrick McKey 18, 12 in the fourth quarter.

Sam Perkins and Rolando Blackman scored 19 points each for Dallas. Mark Aguirre, averaging 26½ points per game, was held to nine.

Pistons 113, 76ers 94

Reserve Vinnie Johnson scored 27 points, 23 in the first half, and Bill Laimbeer keyed a third-quarter streak that helped Detroit win at Philadelphia.

The Pistons won all five games against the 76ers last season, and have won the last four at the Spectrum.

With Detroit leading 57-56 early in the third quarter, Laimbeer scored 10 points during a 23-8 surge. Detroit outscored Philadelphia 32-12 in the period, and Laimbeer scored 22 points in the game.

Adrian Dantley scored 18 points and John Salley 13 for the Pistons. Charles Barkley had 31 points and 17 rebounds for Philadelphia.

Jazz 109, Suns 92

The Jazz led 59-44 at halftime, 85-67 after three quarters and the Suns never got closer than 10 points.

Stockton scored 13 points and had 12 assists and Mark Eaton blocked seven shots.

Trial Is Delayed

RALEIGH (AP) — A trial for J.R. Reid and Steve Bucknall, basketball players at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill who have been charged with assault, has been postponed from Monday until Nov. 30.

Wake County District Court Judge Louis "Mike" Payne granted the request Friday of defense attorney Roger Smith to continue the proceedings.

"He asked for and received the continuance in order to subpoena additional witnesses," said Assistant District Attorney Lori Fuller.

Paul James Doherty, an N.C. State University student, said Reid had spit in his face. Doherty said he was then punched in the face. Police quoted witnesses as saying that Bucknall had thrown the punch.

Basketball coach Dean Smith has suspended both players for the season-opening game against Syracuse Nov. 21 for failing to avoid a confrontation at the nightclub.

"For most businesses, the only risk manager you'll ever need is your Independent Agent..." RAYMOND BURR

Center Provides 'Mother Away From Home'

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Smiling Faces Day Care Center near Everetts strives to provide a "Mother Away from Home" setting in addition to a positive learning environment for the children, according to its owner and director, Bernadette Rodgers.

We "care whether little Joey has a running nose or if little Tiffany isn't feeling well," she said, and the center was established out of her love for children and out of need in the community.

"I love children and would love to have children of my own," she said. "Being single and being an only child, it's (operating the day care center) been so fulfilling for me."

Smiling Faces also was created to meet a need in the community, Ms. Rodgers said. Most day care centers in Martin County are operated by churches or other organizations to meet the needs of its members or community. There also are programs such as Head Start, which accomodate children of families that meet specific income guidelines. So, Smiling Faces tries to meet the needs of the families who do not fall into either category or of those looking for alternate day care, she said.

Opened July 20, the center has "grown faster than I anticipated," Ms. Rodgers, 32, said. "I've not had the opportunity to advertise. It's been walk-ins and word of mouth."

The day care center, located in the old Martin Academy school, shares the building with Contract Packaging. The center has about 1,700 square feet and is licensed for a maximum of 90 children ages 2 to 5 years. There currently are about 40 children in the center.

"The locale is perfect," with about 60 percent of the industries in Martin County located within a 10-mile radius including Southern Apparel, Robersonville Products, Eagle Snacks, Generation II and Perdue, Ms. Rodgers said. Several companies have "indicated a need for day care" for their employees, she said.

"My biggest problem has been finding good staff. You have to have people who really love children," because salaries in the profession are low, and there are very few benefits, she said. "We offer unemployment compensation, workman's compensation, annual leave and sick leave."

"I've found several (potential employees) with the education requirements," but not the qualities to handle children, Ms. Rodgers said.

Staff is required by the state to have a high school diploma and to acquire 20 hours of credit each year from child care or related courses. Teachers also must have a medical exam and must be taught CPR and first aid, she said. They need to be aggressive, have plenty of initiative and "a wall of patience."

The center opens at 6:30 a.m., and Ms. Rodgers and four teachers greet children, monitor their free time and aid those visiting the restroom until about 8:30 a.m. Breakfast is served from 8:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. in a group setting. The center has a full-time cook.

Group time for the morning prayer, identifying the day, and date, and other activities are from 9 a.m. to 9:15 a.m., then children choose an activity or are guided in a directed exercise in the different skills areas until 10 a.m.

Outside activities or vigorous indoor activities due to weather are conducted from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., and language development is from 11 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

The four and five-year-olds are in the Rebus Reading Program, said Ruth Rodgers, who operated a day care center in her home for four years and worked with another local day care for 10 years. Last year, a child in Ruth Rodgers' day care center was reading at a third-grade level, she said.

The program "starts with symbols and translates them into words," Ruth Rodgers said. "They actually learn to read."

The children are just beginning the translation process, she said. "They have a reader, a workbook and worksheets" and should be finished with the program around April.

"The children have really done wonderful with all the distraction they had." Ruth Rodgers said.

Currently, the 2- and 3-year-olds are being taught in the same room as the 4 and 5-year-olds, but the classes are separated by a partial wall. In early December, the 4- and 5-year-olds will be "isolated (from the younger children) so you can work with them on a one-to-one basis," Bernadette Rodgers said. "It's difficult to work with them in structured activities."

The extra room "should increase our licensing (to accomodate more children)," because the number is based on square footage per child, she said.

SMILING FACES — Bernadette Rodgers, owner and director of Smiling Faces Day Care Center, stands near the sign of the center located near Everetts on Highway 64 east. This sign was created by a local artist, Demetria Staton, Ms. Rodgers said. (Reflector Photos by Cliff Hollis).

Lunch is served from 11:30 a.m. to noon, and the children prepare to rest by brushing their teeth and going to the bathroom until 12:30 p.m. Cots and mats are used to rest on until 2:30 p.m., and then they are served a snack.

From 3 p.m. to 4 p.m., the children participate in activities in the different skills areas, or a teacher directs a planned activity. Parents arrive to pick children up from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

A native of Williamston, Ms. Rodgers is the daughter of Annie and Arthur Baker. She has a bachelor's degree in business education from North Carolina A&T State University and has been a teacher in Washington County. She is a notary republic instructor in Martin and Bertie counties, and she teaches adult basic education part time at Martin Community College.

Ms. Rodgers said she withdrew money from her savings and received help from family and friends to accumulate the $10,000 to open the center, which may be the only black-owned day care in Martin County. "We did most of the work (renovations) ourselves."

The center operates on a monthly budget of about $5,000, she said.

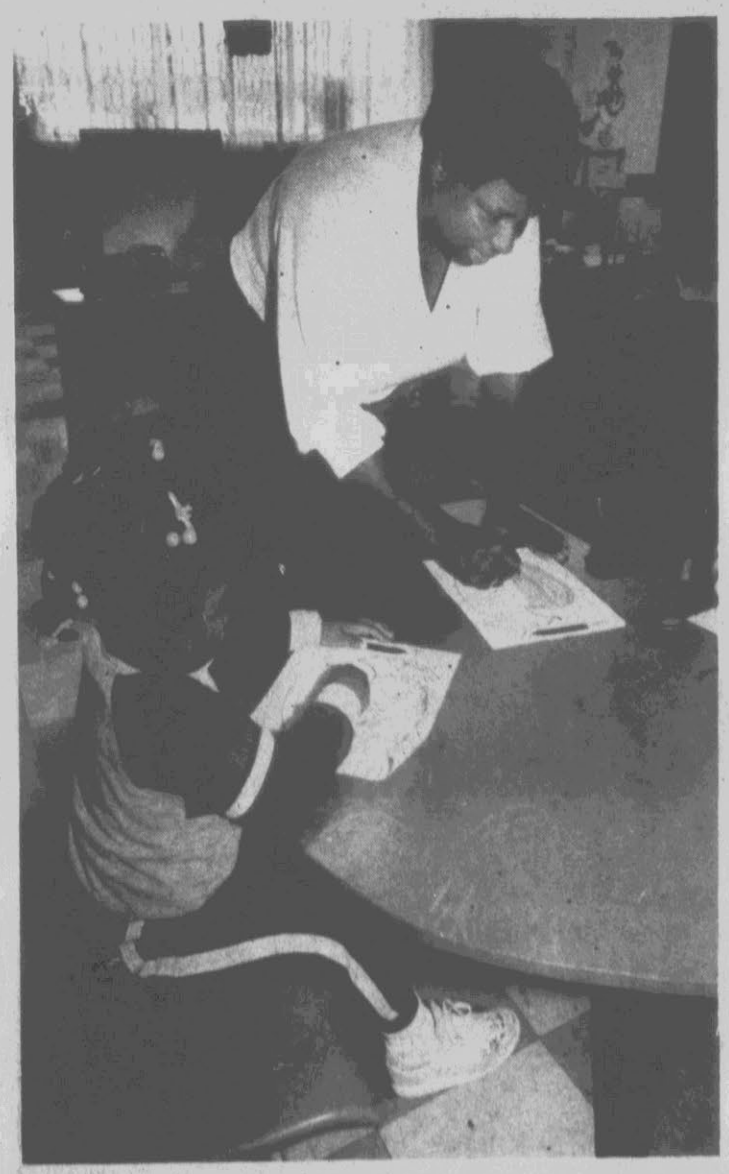
While most of the center's children are black, Ms. Rodgers said she is working toward a more integrated facility. "That's a barrier that time is going to have to break for me," she said

Recently, parents and the center combined their efforts and earned about $3,500 by selling cookies, and there will be a parent-teacher meeting to decide how to best use the money, Ms. Rodgers said. Suggestions include purchasing a van, a computer or outdoor equipment.

"Our parents are very supportive," she said. "They're go-getters. I have a group of parents who are interested in their children and want to provide what's best for them."

MEALTIME — Two-year-old Marquitta Cherry begins eating her lunch in the center's dining area. Also used as a learning experience, the room has words and pictures about foods and the different meals.

PREPARING LUNCH — Sally Green, the full-time cook at the center, begins preparing the day's lunch. The center also serves breakfast and an afternoon snack in the dining area.



COLORING — Christiné Manning leads the 2- and 3-year-old children in coloring an apple. The activity helps children identify different objects and colors.

LANGUAGE — Ruth Rodgers teaches 4- and 5-year-old children at the day care center to read by using the Rebus Reading Program, which is based on translating symbols into words. The children are tutored about 30 minutes each day and utilize a reader, a workbook and worksheets.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

Lisa Anne Topping and William Theodore Gartman III, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday in a 3 p.m. ceremony in St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

The Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston, assisted by the Rev. Michael H. Cogsdale, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Music was provided by Laura Gaither, organist, and Bill Frazier, trumpeteer.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Horace Riggs Topping and Mr. and Mrs. William Theodore Gartman Jr., all of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor-length gown with a cathedral train of organza with re-embroidered alencon lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a V neckline outlined with re-embroidered alencon lace motifs, long tapered sleeves and a natural waist. Alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls and sequins lavishly appliqued the bodice and sleeves. Bridal buttons fastened the sleeves. The floor-length skirt extended into a cathedral train. Scattered alencon lace medallions etched with seed pearls and sequins embellished the skirt and train. Garlands of scalloped alencon lace bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. She wore a layered veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge flowing from a bandeau of silk flowers and pearl spray cascades for her headpiece. She carried a slender cascade loosely designed with tea roses, freesia and baby's breath.

Susan Topping Wilson of Greenville and Pamela Topping Joyner of Wilson, both sisters of the bride, served as honor attendants. Bridesmaids were Elizabeth Gartman Cogsdale of Morganton, sister of the bridegroom, Donna Jo Cullipher, Lisa Priestly Mills and Rebecca Sullivan Masotti, all of Greenville. Alston Wilson of Greenville, niece of the bride, was the flower girl.

The honor attendants and bridesmaids wore floor-length gowns of royal blue matte taffeta with an open neckline and short pouf sleeves. The fitted torso bodices featured a panel of shirred taffeta extending into the basque waistline. They carried free form cluster bouquets of rubrum lily blossoms, blue iris, lisianthia and alstroemenia. The flower girl wore a floor-length gown of white Swiss batiste. The square collar featured lace insertion beading and periwinkle blue ribbon and was edged in lace. She carried a basket of blue iris, lisianthia and alstroemenia. She wore alstromenia blossoms, baby's breath and ribbon streamers in her hair.

William Theodore Gartman, Jr., served as his son's best man. Ushers were James Conrad Lanier III and Thomas M. Galya, both of Cary, R. Lantham Mills III of Greenville, J. Russell Davenport of Carrboro and Mitchell S. Moon of Cockeysville, Md.

A reception, immediately following the ceremony, was held at the Brook Valley Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Priestly greeted the guests and Sarah Leane Houston presided at the register. Mrs. Robert Pinkston Jr. and Mrs. Tylon Kerman Jr. served punch, Mrs. Ira Topping, along with Mrs. Louis Stephenson, served cake and Mr. and Mrs. James Sullivan said the goodbyes.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of J.H. Rose High School. The bride attended East Carolina University and received a B.S. in Nursing. The bridegroom attended E.C.U.

The bride is employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the bridegroom is employed at Marsh's.

MRS. GARTMAN

The rehearsal dinner took place Friday night at the Colonial Inn in Farmville.

The couple was honored by a pig picking, shower, and bridesmaid's luncheon given by Mrs. Harold Priestley, Mrs. Lathan Mills Iii, Mrs. W. Griffin Garner and Mrs. James Sullivan prior to the wedding.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Couple Marries In Afternoon Ceremony

The wedding of Denise Yvonne Williamson and Ben Louis Stocks Jr., both of Ayden, took place Saturday at 2 p.m. The Rev. David Lee Ralston conducted the double-ring ceremony in People's Baptist Temple.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Stocks of Ayden.

The bride wore a formal gown of organza and peau de soie styled with a high see-through neckline and dropped waistline. The long sheer sleeves ended in a self-fabric ruffle trimmed in ribbon and closed with bridal buttons. A flounce with ribbon trim accented the neckline. The bride wore a fingertip-length veil of illusion bordered with narrow lace attached to a headpiece of silk lily of the valley and other bridal flowers. Seed pearls and filaments trimmed the headpiece. She carried a silk bouquet of lily of the valley, alstromeria lilies and orchids.

The couple will live in Ayden.

Mills-Daughtry Vows Solemnized

GOLDSBORO — Margaret Anne Daughtry and Curtis Lee Mills were united in marriage Saturday at 3 o'clock in St. Paul United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Robert Lee Baldridge performed the double-ring ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by Dr. James Cobb, organist, and Mrs. Walter Ray Anderson Jr., soloist.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Harold Wolfe. Presiding at the guest register were Mrs. Frank McLawhorn of Ayden, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Carl Cox of Goldsboro. Programs were distributed by Jessie Ann Mills of Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald B. Daughtry. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis N. Mills, the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Ivory Lee Haddock and Mrs. Nabe Mills, and the great-grandson of Mrs. Snodie Haddock and Mrs. Semmie Wiggins of Ayden.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a white satin and chantilly lace gown designed with a beaded schiffli yoke etched with iridescents and accented with scalloped lace. The bodice back featured a basque waistline. The long tapered sleeves closed with lace points over the wrists. The lace appliqued skirt, bordered with scalloped lace and accented in the back with elongated lace appliques and a crystal pleated satin ruffle, flowed into an attached chapel train. Her walking-length veil of silk illusion, bordered with scalloped lace, was attached to a lace capulet etched with pearls. She carried a silk bouquet of white roses, orchids, and mini-carnations accented with baby's breath. She wore a diamond and pearl lavalier which belonged to her maternal great-grandmother of Henderson, the late Mrs. H.W. Mixon, Sr.

Kay Daughtry of Goldsboro, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Carol Daughtry of Goldsboro, sister of the bride, Mrs. Doug Pierce of Ayden, sister of the bridegroom, and Krystal Mills of Greenville, daughter of the bridegroom.

MRS. MILLS

Glenn Mills of Ayden serves as his brother's best man. Ushers were Randy Mills of Washington, cousin of the bridegroom, Doug Pierce and Frank McLawhorn of Ayden, brothers-in-law of the bridegroom.

The bride is a graduate of Wayne Country Day School and attended Mt. Olive College. She is employed with the U.S. Postal Service in Greenville. The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed with the U.S. Postal Service in Greenville.

Parents of the bride hosted a reception following the wedding ceremony at Goldsboro Country Club. During the reception, Mr. and Mrs. William Stevens presided. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. John Alley, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brown, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. A.E. Andrews. Punch was served by Mrs A.W. Griffin, Jr., Mrs. Jerald Ray, Mrs. Norman Edgerton, Jr., and Mrs. Ray Rouse, III. Coffee was served by Mrs. Harvey Davis, Jr., Mrs. Banks McNairy, III, Mrs. A.N. Wyatt, and Mrs. Clifton Daniel, Jr. The cake was served by Mrs. James McPhail. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McArthur, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Raper, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hill, and Mr. Glenn Daughtry. Rice bags were distributed by Turner Walston and Walt Anderson.

Parents of the bridal couple hosted an after-rehearsal dinner at Walnut Creek Country Club for the wedding party and out-of-town guests. A pig-picking honoring the couple was given by the family of the bridegroom. Several showers were given in honor of the bridal couple.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Ayden.

CB Helps Fight Loneliness And Help Others

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — "Lady Heartbeat" sits beside her citizens band radio nearly every day, giving road information to truckers, chatting with lonely callers and offering practical advice to people with problems.

Seated on a gray and pink flowered sofa in a small wood-paneled living room, she hears someone calling for her on CB channel 19. She lifts a chrome-plated pedestal microphone from the armrest nearby.

The caller, a trucker who goes by the CB handle "Golden Eagle," complains of being tired.

"This is Monday morning and you were supposed to sleep over the weekend," replies the 4-foot-9 widow whose voice can be soothing as well as harsh.

Another driver cuts in to request directions to state Route 300, a heavily traveled truck link to Interstate 75 at Cordele.

Lady Heartbeat says lonely people have contacted her by CB to discuss problems arising from their jobs, marriages and health.

"They don't have nobody else," she said. "They're just lonely. I know I have straightened out a whole lots of people and put them on the right road."

She particularly enjoys helping truckers, who sometimes ask her to phone wives or dispatchers.

"When you're a strange person in town you need someone friendly to talk to," she said. "They're out there making a living. It's not their fault they're away from home."

Her comments are interrupted by "Teddy Bear," a trucker reporting a serious accident along a busy street.

A native of Spartanburg, S.C., Lady Heartbeat used to have a CB in her car. But after her husband died in 1982, she moved it into her living room.

"That thing's a lifesaver, when you're sitting in here looking at the four walls," she said.

Lady Heartbeat got her handle by accident. Her grandchildren called her "Hot Lips," but a trucker misunderstood and dubbed her 'Heartbeat," a name she has stuck with since 1975

CBers in southwest Georgia are not satisfied with chatting from far away. Up to 100 gather once a month at an Albany restaurant to dine and socialize.

"Everyone has to come around and hug me," says the diminutive CBer. "It's just plain ol' family folks. When we're all telling our handles, they make me stand in a chair because I'm so short."

Trucker Leon Beard, 40, of Albertville, Ala., is one of Lady Heartbeat's fans.

"I wish there was someone like Lady Heartbeat in every town in the USA," said the veteran trucker during a recent stopover in Albany. "It's not unusual to find people willing to give directions. What is unusual is to find somebody who is so nice."

Lady Heartbeat, who has two grown children and six grandsons, said she sometimes stays up until 3 a.m. talking on her CB.

"When I tell 'em I have blonde hair and blue eyes, those truckers out there almost have a fit," she said with a chuckle. "But I don't tell them my age."

She says she would be lost without her CB. "If it ain't on, at least it's here for me to look at."

About that time a trucker summons her on the CB.

"This is Lady Heartbeat," she tells him. "If you ever need help call me."

Parents Send Harmony Up In Smoke

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a grown man (age 42) and I'm having problems with my parents who live in Minnesota. I have a very lovely home in Scottsdale, so two years ago I invited my parents to visit me during the winter for a month. My only rule: No smoking in the house. My father smokes cigars and my mother smokes cigarettes, so when they wanted to smoke, they went outside.

Last winter I went to Asia for six weeks and invited my parents to have the use of my home in my absence. They knew the rules, but when I got home, the stench was terrible. I was furious, and told them so. It took me three weeks to get the smell out of the house.

Two weeks ago, I decided I'd go to California for January and February, so I called my parents to offer them my home again. My father said that since I complained so much about the smoke in my house, he never wanted to see Arizona — or me — again, and he promplty hung up on me! Within a few days, I received a letter from my mother saying that I was a terrible son, and they want to disown me.

Please advise me as to how I should handle this situation. — PARENT PROBLEMS

DEAR PROBLEMS: If your parents accepted your hospitality on the condition that they wouldn't smoke in the house, and they smoked anyway — shame on them. And if you invited them back, knowing this, shame on you.

To invite habitual smokers to stay in your home for months at a time, and expect them to go outside every time they want to smoke, is unrealistic. Inasmuch as your parents were also house-sitting, I think you owe them an apology. And if you are really that intolerant of smoke, issue no more invitations with a "no smoking" proviso.

DEAR ABBY: Just suppose a lady bookkeeper for a small business — always in the hole with its creditors — ran across this problem:

The boss in the above situation grabs up any cash that comes in for jobs, pockets it — then tells this bookkeeper to disregard the work order.

The job is important to the bookkeeper, so she's really in a bind. Is she an accessory to something if she follows her boss's instructions? It could cost her job if she refuses. — WORRIED ONE

DEAR WORRIED: The bookkeeper is an accessory to the underhanded business of helping her employer pocket money — a part of which should go to the government as "income." The word from here is: Aforementioned bookkeeper should start looking for a more honest boss. She may not eat as well, but she'll sleep better.

DEAR ABBY: Recently at school there has been a vicious rumor going around that I'm pregnant. What should I say? I'm only 14. — TROUBLED IN FRESNO

DEAR TROUBLED: Say nothing — just stick around for eight months and you shouldn't have to "say" anything.

DEAR ABBY: Please comment on a relatively trivial annoyance that I and other mothers agree is not so trivial after it's happened 30 or 40 times. I refer to strangers who strike up a conversation with your child in a park or checkout line or wherever with such comments as: "What's a big girl like you doing with a pacifier in your mouth?"

My daughter is big for her age and her dentist has told me it's all right to let her use a pacifier. I try very hard not to "shame" her out of using it, but it's difficult when so many strangers try to do it for me. (One woman actually reached out and removed the pacifier from my daughter's mouth!)

I'm not asking you to suggest an insulting comeback, but I hope you will print this so those people will know how rude they are. Thanks for the pressure valve, Abby. — MOTHER OF A CUTE LI'L SUCKER

DEAR MOTHER: If your professional advisers (dentist and pediatrician) approve of your daughter's sucking on a pacifier at her age, it's all right with me. But I am concerned about your daughter's feelings. She must feel confused when you encourage her to suck on a pacifier in public, and strangers humiliate her for doing so.

When strangers make these rude comments, tell them politely but firmly that you are able to handle the situation, so kindly back off.

Study Suggests

Pediatricians Should Turn Listening Ear

By MARTA W. ALDRICH
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — With a surplus of pediatricians predicted for the United States in three years, children's doctors would be wise to expand their expertise beyond runny noses and high fevers, a pediatrician says.

A study conducted through Vanderbilt University Medical Center found that parents worry more about their children's personality and social development than about their physical health.

Yet parents rarely turn to their child's pediatrician for guidance about dealing with these concerns, said Dr. Gerald Hickson, chief of pediatric outpatient services for Vanderbilt.

Hickson said expanding pediatric services to cover such issues could fill parental needs and, at the same time, help offset a 25 percent surplus in child health care providers predicted for 1990.

"The issue is, can we use this surplus constructively?" he said. "If we have this additional manpower, why not take an organized approach to identifying some of the unmet needs that parents have?"

Hickson's proposal stems from a study conducted in the Nashville area in which 210 parents were interviewed in the waiting rooms of 10 randomly selected pediatricians.

"What we found was that 70 percent said their greatest parental concerns were related to issues, not of physical health, but of psychological health," he said.

The parents said they worried most about issues such as discipline, mental development, adjustment to divorce, transition to adolescence and whether their jobs took too much time away from the child.

"What dismayed us is that less than a third of those parents had brought these concerns to the attention of their pediatricians," Hickson said.

Sixteen percent felt their doctor was too busy to help, and 15 percent denied needing help at all. Twelve percent said they felt the pediatrician was not qualified to deal with problems that were not disease-oriented, while 10 percent said they thought the pediatrician was unwilling to help. Another 8 percent said they were too embarrassed to seek assistance.

"We also measured pediatricians' interest in dealing with these issues. We found that the greatest predictor of whether parents communicated these concerns to the doctors was the amount of interest the doctors showed and their self-perceived ability to provide services in these areas," Hickson said.

"This was an encouraging response because it showed that ... if we work to let parents know we're interested in these things, there's a good chance we can overcome some of the parents' reluctance in bringing these things to us."

As a result of the study, Vanderbilt has begun trying to teach budding pediatricians to show interest in a child's social well-being, as well as his physical condition. Vanderbilt also has incorporated more behavioral training classes into its curriculum for pediatrics students.

"It's all part of being a complete physician," Hickson said.

Hickson said the new thrust will not step on the toes of psychologists, psychiatrists or others in the mental health field.

Double-Ring Vows Said

Linda Kay Littleton of Winterville and Alvin Wayne Gurkins of Greenville were united in marriage Saturday in the Greenville Church of God.

MRS. GURKINS

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of silkened organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with a double row of silk floral miniature venise lace. The sheer empire bodice was overlaid in the floral silk venise lace with the waistline trimmed in miniature lace. The full bishop sleeves repeated the miniature lace at the cuffs with a profusion of lace appliques on the sleeves and fabric covered button closure. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel-length train were accentuated by rows of floral lace with appliques. Miniature lace edged the hemline of the skirt and train. Her headpiece was a halo of silk flowers trimmed with a satin bow in the back and the veil was elbow length. She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, stephanotis and English ivy with accents of sonya sweetheart roses.

Brenda Smith of Winterville served as her sister's matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Ande Harper of Greenville, cousin of the bride, and Tonya Cox of Gardnerville, cousin of the bridegroom. Kathy Smith of Winterville, niece of the bride served as flower girl.

The matron of honor wore a royal blue off-the-shoulder taffeta gown. Lace accented the shoulder ruffle and the naturally fitting waist with alternating rows of lace and taffeta ruffles on the skirt. The bridesmaids wore royal blue gowns with off-the-shoulder necklines topped with a ruffled heading, a full skirt with an apron effect, a wide ruffled hem, and a rose in the center back. The matron of honor and bridesmaids carried cascading bouquets in shades of sonya and creme of roses, ivy and alstromeria with matching streamers.

Alvin Gurkins served as his son's best man. Ushers were Barry Gurkins of Greenville, uncle of the bridegroom, and Charles Littleton of Winterville, brother of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed at Nichol's Discount City. The bridegroom is a graduate of North Pitt High School and Calvary Christian Academy. He is employed by Winn Dixie Stores.

Morning Wedding Vows Solemnized

MRS. CUNNINGHAM

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Carlton Turner of Elizabeth City and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Booker Cunningham III of Wilson.

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride wore a tea-length gown with a sweep train of bridal taffeta with beaded Venise lace. The torso bodice featured a V-neckline and leg o'mutton sleeves accented with a rosette. Venise lace motifs encrusted with seed pearls and crystals appliqued the bodice. Garlands of scalloped lace bordered the hemline of the skirt. She wore a low crown satin bridal hat appliqued with Venise lace encrusted with seed pearls, sequins and scrstals on the crown and brim. A satin bow with cascades of lily of the valley and silk flowers accented the hat with an illusion pouf and streamers flowing from the back. She carried a clutch bouquet of white Jack Frost roses, baby's breath and Baker's fern tied with white ribbons and streamers.

A reception was held at the Woman's Club in Wilson and was given by the parents of the bride.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Three dimensional accessories can convert a dull wall into a room's focal point. In addition to flat wall groupings you can add drama to your room with dramatic three dimensional accessories. Mirrors of all sizes, unframed or with simple or ornate frames, or clocks, old or new, in wood, metal, crystal or porcelain finishes are always interesting. There are no rules of thumb to guide the choice of "correct" accessories, but there are some general principles that can help you in the selection and display of three dimensional decorations so they will be in harmony with the setting you give them.

Decide whether the item pleases you. Is it the correct formality for the room? Do the colors in the room coordinate with the accessory? Is the accessory to be pleasing or functional and serve a useful purpose?

Although you may have never thought of it this way, the most common device for simulating height is through the use of decorative accessories. Groupings of ornamental objects, single tall mirrors, tall ferns and even ceiling-hung fixtures all can give the appearance of height to a small room. This is best achieved by placing the item above the level of low pieces of furniture as the accessory serves to carry the eye above the furniture, creating an illusion of height.

We invite you to visit our showroom frequently to see the many new pieces arriving daily.

Pepper Mills Are Too Much

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

The other night my husband and I took a guest from another country out to dinner.

As we were poised over the pasta, from out of the darkness a waiter appeared with a pepper mill the size of a league bowling trophy and waited for instructions.

"What is THAT?" asked our guest.

"It's pepper," we said.

"What kind of pepper?" he asked.

"Just pepper."

Our guest reached for the mill and the waiter said, "I'll do it for you, sir."

Embarrassed, he sat back and watched the waiter grind away. When the waiter started to leave, the visitor said, "I'll have some salt."

"You can serve yourself. It's on the table," said the waiter and he disappeared into the darkness again. Our guest had never seen anything like it.

"I suppose you want some kind of an explanation for all this," we said. He nodded.

We didn't have one. I don't know when pepper got to be right behind frankincense and myrrh in prominence. It used to be in a little jar that sat next to the salt on the table and everyone passed it around, sneezed, and it was no big deal.

The next thing you know, in some of the fancier restaurants, waiters started carrying pepper mills around like they were a human sacrifice to be placed on the altar of a smoking volcano.

If pepper were one of the jewels of the spice family, I could understand why someone would dole it out grain by grain. Salad bars do that with the shrimp. They put them in the back row, behind all the lettuce and the garbanzo beans, and then angle the glass shield so that you sever a main artery if you try to dip a spoon into them. But pepper!

I think it was Johnny Carson who observed, "The bigger the pepper mill, the more expensive the restaurant." It has gotten out of hand. After a while, they are going to wheel them to the table on a dolly.

Frankly, I would welcome something to do while I'm sitting there at the table. Eating has become so passive. Someone pulls my chair out, flips my napkin for me and places it in my lap, and inserts a menu between my curved fingers. I don't have to pour my own wine, spoon on my own Parmesan or bring my own flashlight to read the check. They do it all.

Our guest, to put it mildly, was intrigued by the ritual. After the waiter left, he lifted the pasta to his lips and sampled it. "I don't taste the pepper," he said.

"That is because it never comes out of those mills."

"I don't understand."

We told him, "Eat!"

Charleston Is Site Of New Weekend Finishing School

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A dozen Southern belles ride through Charleston's brick streets in horse-drawn carriages. Later, they dine aboard a yacht as it plays in the harbor against a backdrop of city lights.

The weekend passes with learning the gentle arts of conversation and table manners and in discussing the finer points of selecting linen, crystal and stationery.

Such scenes reminiscent of antebellum Charleston will be played out this weekend as a finishing school entitled "Belles & Bows" is staged for the first time.

The weekend is an outgrowth of the party manners programs created by etiquette expert Marjabelle Young Stewart, who recently selected Charleston as No. 1 in her rankings of the nation's 10 "most mannered cities."

"This is the only country in the world where it's your inalienable right to be well-bred," said Mrs. Stewart. "You can move from one class to another with a suitcase full of good manners."

Mrs. Stewart, who has written 15 etiquette books, will join a dozen Charleston-area girls at the weekend school which will feature, among other things, instruction about proper table settings, hair and makeup and even the selection of personal stationery.

The girls will spend the weekend in the elegant Two Meeting Street Inn on Charleston's Battery, have dinner at 82 Queen and will receive a guided tour of the Gibbes Art Gallery.

Mrs. Stewart's "White Gloves and Party Manners" programs are offered in 420 cities across the nation. Those programs deal mainly with etiquette.

Belles and Bows represents a branching out into other areas girls would be exposed to at a finishing school without having to leave home for weeks at a time.

"It's a service to today's '80s woman," said Mrs. Stewart, who says parents today generally don't have the time to instruct their daughters in such matters and prefer not to send their daughters away from home.

The local coordinator of the program is Susan Harrison, a Charleston native who admits she grew up as a tomboy but who also developed an early interest in etiquette.

"Etiquette is a feeling of being gracious that comes from the heart," she said.

The youngsters in the "White Gloves" programs she teaches locally don't always use their party manners all the time, she said. But she says she tells them, "If you don't choose to do it, you're doing it out of choice, not lack of knowledge."

Mrs. Stewart and Miss Harrison hope to expand the weekend finishing school concept to other areas around the country.

"It will grow very quickly," Mrs. Stewart said. "It's made for Junior League women who want something to do but they don't want to go back to work full time. They just want a little something to do."

Author Oates Comments On Books That Impressed Her

By JOYCE CAROL OATES
A Press Syndicate Release

So many books have made a powerful impression upon me over the course of my life that it is virtually impossible for me to name any single title. To name one, to exclude others, would be misleading.

In fact it was the very nature of books, and of reading, that struck me — that strikes me still — as remarkable. Our lives are wholly objective, we see others from the outside, we are "alienated" in a sense from them; but, by way of reading, we escape our subjectivity and enter into another's. No other art offers us this miracle. No other experience approaches it.

Lewis Carrol's "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass" were the first influential books of my life; the first books I remember reading and rereading with enormous pleasure. How many times I read them, I couldn't begin to say; I seem to have memorized whole sections of Alice's bizarre story and could probably recite them, still, under the proper conditions. Of course, I naturally tried to compose "Alice"-like novels of my own, with drawings to accompany them. (For a long time I thought that books always contained drawings.) I don't recall being given any children's books apart from Carroll's which are not, I suppose, really children's books at all. They inhabit a special, indefinable space, hauntingly "realistic" in a psychological sense while supremely "fantastic" in every other sense.

Yet it would be an exaggeration to say that the "Alice" books made a great impact upon my life or, in any case, a greater impact than the many now-forgotten books I read as a child, books from the public library in Lockport, New York (where I attended sixth grade and junior high), books and magazines that found their way into the household. When I was a young teenager I read Thoreau's "Walden," which made a powerful impression upon me; but I also read the lurid and rather silly "Dracula," by Bram Stoker, and any number of genre books — mysteries, science fiction, adventure, the "Black Stallion" series.

I read Edgar Allen Poe, and can recall decades later puzzling over "The Gold Bug" — a story I don't think I ever quite understood. I read poetry by Robert Frost, and I read D.C. Comics — "Tales of the Crypt" is the title that comes to mind, to my shame. Later, there was "Mad Magazine," and Rawling's "The Yearling;" "Wuthering Heights," "Green Mansions," "Huckleberry Finn;" "Oliver Twist" and "David Copperfield" and "Great Expectations;" "Our Town" and the short stories of Ernest Hemingway.

And, of course, those plays of Shakespeare our enterprising English teachers tried to teach us. At some point I read "Jane Eyre," Scott Fitzgerald, Dostoyevsky, Hawthorne, Faulkner ... the usual titles, read, probably, with the usual air of wonder and excitement.

I wish it were the case that a single book changed my life but it is books in the plural that shaped my life; each of them singular, and rather miraculous. I can't imagine a world without books, not simply the mysterious access they allow us to the souls of strangers, but the fact of books themselves: their weight in the hand, the look and feel of their pages, the precision of their print. It is sentimental to suggest that books possess souls, or even life; yet they outlive us, don't they? Those that deserve to, at least.

A Review

A Monumental Work

FREEDOM. Wailliam Safire. Doubleday. 1,125 Pages, $24.95

As a self-described "controversialist," William Safire apparently likes political arguments. That's how he won a Pulitzer Prize for distinguished commentary as a newspaper columnist.

A one-time White House speech writer, Safire tackles several basic controversies about presidential wartime powers, national security, the Constitution and Congress in his 600,000-word "Freedom," an engrossing historical novel on Abraham Lincoln and the Civil War.

He invents fictitious conversations involving Lincoln and a large cast of historical figures — based mainly on words found in contemporary diaries, memos and letters.

Such literary license may be frowned on by historians, but Safire, in an appended 133-page "underbook," clearly cites his sources, separates fact from fiction and even directs the reader to writers who disagree with his views.

For Lincoln hero-worshipers, some of Safire's conclusions may be hard to take. He says Lincoln was wrong, for instance, on his conception of his power to crack down on dissent.

During the war, some 13,000 civilians were arrested for alleged disloyalty, several newspapers were closed down and Southern-sympathizing Maryland legislators were arrested on their way to the Statehouse to vote on the matter of secession.

Lincoln also suspended the writ of habeas corpus and established military tribunals to try civilians even where civil courts were operating.

But Lincoln was neither sly nor saintly, Safire concludes:

"His handling of the mutual endangerment of individual liberty and national security, his use of the means of damnably bloody war to achieve the blessed end of majority rule, and his discovery that the means of abolition (of slavery) was as central as the ends of union are my idea of the real Lincoln."

"Freedom" is a monumental work that may well win another Pulitzer Prize for its author.

Images Of The Mind

The museum says the 60 works in the exhibition "include some of the finest examples of Chinese art in the world."

Highlights of the show include rare masterpieces by two of the leading calligraphers of the late 11th century, Huang T'ing-Chien and Mi Fu, and the earliest extant complete set of "Eight Views of the Hsiao and Hsiang Rivers" by the mid-12th century painter Wang Hung.

PICASSO'S SKETCHBOOKS

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — "Je Suis le Cahier: The Sketchbooks of Picasso," the first public presentation of the artist's sketchbooks, will be shown at the Forth Worth Art Museum Nov. 15, 1987-Jan. 10., 1988.

The display includes 43 sketchbooks created between 1900 and 1965. They contain over 200 drawings, watercolors and personal notations that Picasso kept hidden from the public and family members.

The museum says the notebooks "illustrate the artist's most intimate and personal expressions and provide new insight into Picasso's ingenuity and the evolution of his work."

Anthropologist Finds Many Changes

EDITOR'S NOTE — In 1948, British anthropologist Julian A. Pitt-Rivers went to the Andalusian village of Grazalema to do field work for a book that was to become a classic in modern European social anthropology. Almost 40 years later, he returned and found that much has changed in the village and the rest of Spain, but some things remain the same.

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer

GRAZALEMA, Spain (AP) — When Antonio Mateos Salguero was growing up as a farmer's son in the meadows outside this white village perched high in the Ronda Mountains of southern Spain, he paid timid visits to his girlfriend in the doorway of her house.

Today, as the 38-year-old socialist mayor of this town of 2,000, he can look out the window of his office on the plaza and see young people entwined on benches in front of the "Right Here" Bar.

"You want to know what the difference is between then and now?" he asks. "Women smoke, women work, women have two kids instead of 10. Women go into the bars, and they take a drink when they feel like it."

In 1954, during the authoritarian regime of Gen. Francisco Franco, British anthropologist Julian A. Pitt-Rivers published "The People of the Sierra," based on field work conducted in Grazalema. In the book, which has become a classic in modern European social anthropology, Pitt-Rivers changed the name of the village to protect his "informants."

During a recent return visit to Spain, the anthropologist agreed that the change in sexual mores is the sharpest dividing line between his Grazalema — his Spain — and the village and country of today.

"That and television, which ended the isolation of the thousands of pueblos across Spain," he said during a stopover in Madrid on his way back to his Paris home from a visit to Grazalema.

In the book, Pitt-Rivers wrote that a "structural tension" existed between the authority of the local community and that of the central government of the country. In other words, the people of Grazalema, for historic and cultural reasons, found it difficult and unpleasant to accept the dictates of power outside the village.

But he added that "the divergence between the national rulers and the pueblo grows less," due to state education, the radio, the cinema, easy communications and universal military service.

Forty years later, Pitt-Rivers says another important factor that has led to the breakdown of distance between the pueblo and the state was the massive emigration of Andalusians in the 1960s to other parts of Western Europe in search of jobs in the 1960s.

"Those who returned brought a new vision of the world with them as well as new expectations on how a pueblo should be run," he said.

The anthropologist said the people of the village tended to "show hostility to the temporal order of the (Roman Catholic) church, but the powers of religion play an important part in their traditions" with "solidarity of the pueblo being expressed in relation to its patron saint."

According to townspeople and Pitt-Rivers, citizens of Grazalema tend to ignore the church's stand on birth control and other social issues, and this is a change from 40 years ago.

Jose Mario Sanchez Roman was 28 when Pitt-Rivers arrived in Grazalema for the first time, loaded down with notebooks and a desire to look into the origins of agrarian anarchism and find out who was related to whom and how things got done in the town known for its fine woolen blankets, sheep's milk cheese and legendary bandits who played Robin Hood at the expense of the wealthy landowners.

Sanchez Roman became what anthropologists call an "informant," an insider who is willing to take the time to unravel and illuminate the tangled web of social fabric the outsider has come to study.

The 67-year-old wool mill owner and Agrarian Society president, former mayor and deputy, insurance agent and beer distributor, laughed when reminded that his friend Pitt-Rivers wrote that Andalucians were the "most accomplished liars" he had ever encountered.

"Last week someone from the Ministry of Labor came here to try to find out about unemployed youth," he said in his office on the plaza. "Of course everyone wanted to say what was necessary to qualify for unemployment benefits, but no one would admit that they were also being paid for municipal work on the side."

When Pitt-Rivers came to Grazalema in the lean years after the 1936-39 Spanish Civil War, living was from hand-to-mouth and many of the town's 2,400 inhabitants were eventually forced to emigrate to find jobs in wealthier Western European countries like Belgium, France and West Germany.

Mateos joined the Spanish Socialist Workers Party as a carpenter in Ziegen, West Germany where elderly exiled party members had set up a local branch.

Since his election in 1979 in Spain's first free municipal elections in 40 years, his main preoccupation has been creating jobs to give young people a reason to stay in town.

Spain's 21.3 percent unemployment rate is the highest in Western Europe. In southern Andalusia the rate climbs to 30 percent.

BOOK FULL OF FLOWERS

NEW YORK (AP) — Flowers make a lovely gift.

Unfortunately, they don't last indefinitely. One way to keep them with you for a long while is to get a book full of pictures of flowers. A new, lovely and expensive addition to such books is "Georgia O'Keeffe: 100 Flowers."

The book, published by Knopf-Callaway at $100, contains "an array of blossoms painted with an astonishing intensity: calla lilies, red cannas, black and purple petunias ... bleeding-hearts, trumpet flowers."

DEMUTH RETROSPECTIVE

NEW YORK (AP) — The Whitney Museum of American Art is presenting, "Charles Demuth," a retrospective of 120 oil paintings and watercolors through Jan. 17, 1988.

The exhibition, the first major overview of Demuth's works since 1950, includes "his ground-breaking Precisionist paintings of American industrial subjects as well as his lyrical and poetic watercolors of flowers and fruits and his figurative portrayals of New York's pre-war bohemia."

ART OF JASPER JOHNS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — "Foirades-Fizzles: Echo and Allusion in the Art of Jasper Johns" will be on view at the Walter Art Center here Dec. 6, 1987-Jan. 31, 1988.

The exhibition will feature more than 140 prints and trial proofs, including the prints executed by Johns for the illustrated book, "Foirades-Fizzles." That volume consisted of five prose fragments by Samuel Beckett and 33 etchings by Johns. The etchings are variations of his painting "Untitled" and will be exhibited with a selection of working proofs from his private collection.

Flowers, Animals, People Depicted On Stamp Issues

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Stamps featuring animals and flowers are favorites of many collectors throughout the world.

Topical philatelists (those who specialize in particular subjects) will welcome, therefore, the latest set of eight from Lesotho, the former British protectorate in Africa once known as Basutoland. It gained its political independence in 1966.

The 5-sente stamp shows the gray rhebuck. The 9-sente depicts the Cape clawless otter. The 15-sente illustrates a Cape gray mongoose. The 20-sente pictures the Free State daisy. The 35-sente has the beautiful flower called river bells. The 1-maloti shows the turkey flower. The 2-maloti depicts the sweet briar. The 3-maloti shows the mountain reedbuck.

Two souvenir sheets also were issued with this set. One features the pig lily and the other shows the Cape wildebeest.

Another interesting set from Lesotho contains four stamps saluting individuals who contributed to great discoveries or accomplishments in history.

The 5-sente depicts a portrait of Sir Isaac Newton, the English mathematician who devised the telescope. The 9-sente bears a portrait of Alexander Graham Bell, Scottish-born inventor of the telephone. The 75-sente illustrates Robert Goddard, American physicist and rocket pioneer. The 4-maloti has a portrait of Chuck Yeager, the American test pilot who was the first to fly faster than the speed of sound.

The stamps are available at your local dealer.

The U.S. Postal Service has released a new souvenir card in connection with its participation in HAFNIA '87, the international philatelic exhibition held in Copenhagen, Denmark.

The card features a maritime theme.

The main design depicts images of the 1901 Pan American Series stamp that commemorated "fast ocean navigation" plus a 1976 Danish stamp issued as part of the nation's tribute to the bicentennial of the American Revolution.

The U.S. stamp design pictures the American Line steamship, St. Paul.

The HAFNIA '87 souvenir card is available in mint and canceled forms. The $2.00 mint card may be purchased at philatelic centers or by mail order from the Philatelic Sales Division in Washington, D.C. You also may order the card with a 22-cent Flag with Fireworks stamp canceled at HAFNIA '87 (item 508c). Mail orders, subject to the usual $10 minimum and 50-cent handling fee per order, should be addressed: HAFNIA '87 Souvenir Card, Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, DC 20265-9997.

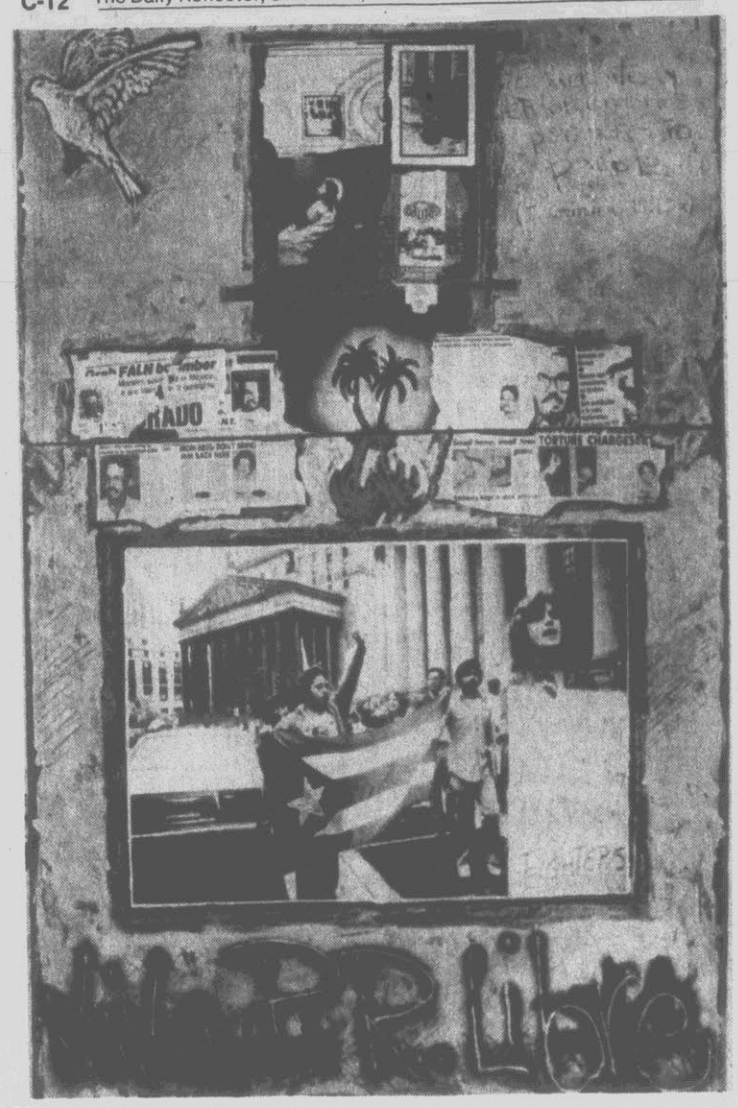
Artist Juan Sanchez To Lecture Thursday



JUAN SANCHEZ ART — Shown here is a mixed media work by Juan Sanchez. The artist will present a free slide/lecture at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Jenkins Auditorium on the ECU campus.

Juan Sanchez, a New York born Puerto Rican artist whose mixed media collage-paintings reflect the complex issues of the cause of Puerto Rican independence, will present a slide-lecture at East Carolina University this week.

The lecture, open to the public, will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Jenkins Auditorium.

Sanchez, sponsored by the ECU School of Art's Visiting Artists Program, is a contemporary Latin American painter. His visit and lecture have been scheduled to coincide with Gray Art Gallery's current exhibit, "Images of Latin American Culture: Art and Artifact" as part of ECU's celebration of November as Latin American Month. He has paintings on view at the exhibit which will be up through Nov. 25.

Sanchez studied painting and photography at Rutgers University, New Jersey and at Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art in New York. His work has been featured in over 60 group shows both nationally and internationally including the Whitney Biennial, 1985; First Havana Biennial, 1984, and the Bronx Museum of the Arts, 1982. Additionally, he has had several one person exhibitions.

He is best known for his skillful and innovative integration of varied materials, graffitti and medi images. He is a recipient of a 1983 National Endowment for the Arts Fellowsip and a 1983 Crative Artists Program Service Fellowship.

On Thursday and Friday Sanchez will visit classrooms and conduct individual critiques in the School of Art.

His visit is funded in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and his paintings are exhibited at ECU through the Museum of Contemporary Hispanic Art, New York, under the direction of Nilda Peraza.

Ms. Peraza will also lecture on contemporary Latin American art at 7:30 p.m., Monday, in Jenkins Auditorium.

THE ART OF THE FAN

BOSTON (AP) — "Unfolding Beauty: The Art of the Fan" will be on view at the Museum of Fine Arts here March 9-June 5, 1988.

The museum says, "Ninety fans and 20 costumed mannequins in the exhibition will illustrate the changing styles of the fan from the 18th to the 20th century. The chronological survey will be complemented by a display of fans from different eras, grouped according to specific themes: the Grand Tour, political fans, chinoiserie and ballooning."

Specialty fans, created by designers who transformed fans into party games, lorgnettes and parasols, also will be represented in the exhibition.

The Third French Republic was proclaimed Sept. 4, 1870, following the capture of Napoleon III during the Franco-Prussian War. With the fall of the empire in France, a government of national defense tried to continue the war with Germany, but France capitulated the following year.

Paluan Stamps

Palau, part of the United States Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, has had ties to Japan for many years. Palau was under Japanese rule from the beginning of World War I until the end of World War II.

The links with Japan are featured on the latest set of four stamps of Palau. A Japanese stamp is superimposed on each stamp.

The 14-cent stamp depicts a view of the Japanese mobile post office near Palau's highest mountain peak and a stamp used by the Japanese from 1937 to 1945.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY Nov. 16

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be encouraging to co-workers and increase your production. Don't let anyone confuse you or interfere with the pace you set.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be patient with friends today, as they are apt to become easily upset. Don't worry about work tonight, but take care of your health.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Before getting critical of a family friend, put yourself in this person's shoes. Don't overstep your budget for pleasure tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may receive a disturbing letter tonight, but if you re-read it, you'll find it is constructive criticism you can benefit from.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Althugh you'll be tempted, don't make any drastic changes where business or finance are concerned. Be cooperative with your family.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Be cautious with your personal realtionships today, as you are prone to errors in judgment. Postpone a property repair for a few days.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Your situation is not as bad as you think, so cheer up. Don't take your frustrations out on your family or friends this evening.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Don't expect a close friend to take your side in an argument which you start, as this person knows better than to become involved.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Keep your personal goals in mind at all times--don't be distracted. Follow the orders of a superior without fail.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): This is a good time to handle simple problems which you've been putting off, but be very careful that you don't create any new ones.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Clear up any commitments which you've recently made. Putting them off longer would reflect badly on you. Help your mate with chores.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): If you believe that a discussion with an associate will end in an argument, it probably will. Put this off until you feel more calm.

There is no need to panic just because there is a weak spot in your holding which might jeopardize your contract. The opponents might be unaware that they have to redirect their area of attack—especially if you help them in their belief.

In a recent team match, North-South reached a reasonable contract of three no trump at both tables. At each, North used the Stayman convention to check on a possible 4-4 spade fit.

At both tables West led the jack of clubs. One declarer, worried by his heart weakness, took his three high clubs immediately in the hope that the suit would break. When he now had to surrender a club to set up his long card, West had no trouble in finding the heart shift—down one.

At the second table, declarer realized that, if West held the jack of hearts, the defenders couldn't effectively attack that suit. And also, if West did not know too much about the lie of the cards, a heart shift at trick two would be difficult to find. So declarer allowed West's jack of clubs to win the first trick, carefully following suit with the seven.

Look at the situation from West's point of view. The two of clubs had not appeared, so it looked as if his partner was signalling encouragement. With nqthing to guide him, West continued with clubs, and when East followed to the second club, declarer had nine fast tricks—four in each black suit and the ace of diamonds.

What should you do in a pair event? Both the percentages and the fact that West chose a club lead suggest that the suit won't break, so we would hold up at that form of the game as well.

Computerized Design Service Eliminates Guessing

By Lou Dolinar
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Frank and Sahron Schlipf knew what they wanted in their new master bathroom — they just weren't sure they had all the details right.

What they wanted was a typical luxury upgrade: A full-sized oval whirlpool, a separate stall shower, and a "dry vanity" in addition to the double sink and cabinet. Avid do-it-yourself buffs, Sharon designed and Frank planned to build the new addition. But did they have it right?

When they walked into their local plumbing-supply house, they got a pleasant surprise: A computer looked over their shoulders, so to speak, making sure they optimized space and didn't commit any blunders common to amateur remodelers. They were using a service offered by a firm called Design Plus Inc.

The Pennsylvania firm was recently bought by Eljer, a leading manufacturer of bathroom fixtures. The service costs $300, $200 of which was applied to fixtures purchased after the design was accepted and is available at selected plumbing-supply houses.

"We didn't want to go the route of a full interior designer," Sharon Schlipf said. But the computer service "came up with a couple of things. They laid out the vanity better, and utilized the space better."

That, in a nutshell, is why a homeowner or tradesman would want to use a computerized design service, says Jerry Katz, owner of a fixture and plumbing firm. The service, he says, does not replace designers, but rather brings a professional edge to a section of the home-improvement market not widely served. The do-it-yourself market is one part of this group.

The other is plumbing. Instead of hiring a general contractor who has an in-house design service, a plumber — who handles most of the work in a bathroom anyway — can offer competent design in low-and medium-priced bathrooms. He serves as the general contractor, subcontracting out tile and structural work.

Ken Kringle, head of Design Plus, stresses that mere competence is beyond the skills of many people. "We see a lot of bad design. I remember one client who came up with a kitchen in which the only way you could open up the refrigerator was to pull it out from the wall and turn it halfway to the left. Another one: the only way to get into the kitchen was to jump over a countertop." More commonly, the firm corrects doors that open in the wrong direction and inadequate space for fixtures such as toilets.

Design Plus starts with a rough dimensional layout of the existing bathroom, provided by the homeowner or tradesman. Besides the size of the room, these layouts show the location of existing drain and supply lines. Typically, a homeowner can save a bundle if plumbing lines don't have to be relocated. Homeowners then fill out a five-page questionnaire on color and style preferences, mood (romantic, formal, informal), material preferences, fixtures and so forth.

From there, the approach varies according to the outlet that subscribes to the service, according to Kringle. Some just ship the questionnaire and rough plumbing sketch off to the service. Katz, on the other hand, usually takes a shot at a new floor plan himself, in consultation with the homeowners.

Then the whole package is shipped off to Design Plus, where it is input into a sophisticated Computer Aided Design (CAD) minicomputer. The system has been refined since 1981.

The computer functions like a drafting table, and then some. Various stock designs for cabinets, fixtures and such are stored in its memory, and the firm's technicians can select and rearrange these on screen, in much the same fashion as you'd rearrange furniture in a room. A similar service is available for kitchens.

But electronic drafting is old hat — plenty of architects, contractors and even some home centers use computers to draw floor plans. Design Plus programs go further: they red-flag potential problems like doors that swing in the wrong direction, for example, or inadequate clearances around toilets. Then the plan is given an overall rating for function. Too low, and it's back to the drawing board.

Bear in mind this is all happening on one "view," the floor plan, on-screen. When the process is finished, the computer produces a number of other drawings: elevations of cabinets and fixtures, and most important, a three-dimensional overview of the entire room, which is then hand-colored. A sample board, with towel swatches, tile and paint chips and wallpaper samples, is included, along with a printout of manufacturers and model numbers.

"The 3-D view, from the top, looked great. Until then we had a vague idea of what we were doing. This showed us exactly how it would look," Frank Schlipf said.

If there is any weakness in this system, it is less a function of the design than of the shopping list of manufacturers provided: Only a handful of firms in the bath and accessory field are named, Eljer being the main plumbing supplier. Schlipf says, though, that she didn't feel compelled to stick to the list. Instead, she shopped around and bought a different style of cabinetry from a supplier who was not on the recommended list.

On The House

By ANDY LANG

You are very much in the minority if you like to paint ceilings. But you would have been an even rarer individual if you enjoyed painting ceilings before the days of rollers and extension handles.

Painting a ceiling while standing on the floor isn't quite the tiresome chore it was when you could not tackle the task without a paint brush in your hand. Surprisingly, many people still do not undertake it because they have heard it is a difficult job that is quite likely to give you a stiff neck and muscle strain. While these are possible consequences, they can be avoided if you remember one thing. Always keep the roller ahead of you, not above you. When the roller and the handle are held vertically, both your neck and your arms will begin to protest after half an hour or so.

The principles of painting a ceiling are the same as they are for painting walls. You should always roll from a dry area into a wet one. Most modern paints minimize the chance of getting brush or roller marks. Even so, you should not risk this possibility by halting the work for a while and then going back to it. Try to arrange your time so you will not have to stop for lunch or dinner until you have completed the entire ceiling.

Again, as with wall painting, do not apply too much pressure to the roller. This rule, important with all painting, is vital when handling a ceiling, because the splattering paint falls on you or the floor. Be sure everything is covered with drop cloths. Wear an old paint cap or something similar to keep from washing your hair with turpentine if you are using an oil paint and with water if using latex.

It is practical to paint a ceiling before painting the rest of the room. If you have to paint a ceiling alone, you will be surprised to see how seedy the rest of the room looks even though it seemed to be all right a while ago.

You will need a small brush or edging roller to paint the strip where the ceiling and walls meet. In painting the ceiling, paint across the width of the room.

The color of a ceiling can affect the appearance of the room. A color darker than the walls "pulls down" a ceiling that is too high. Painting it a lighter color than the walls will raise a low ceiling. Painting it the same color will not affect the features of a room either way. All this fits into the optical illusion category, but the idea is sound.

Always read the directions on the labels of the paint can. They can be revealing, telling you, for example, such a seemingly simple thing as whether or not the paint should be stirred.

When a ceiling must be patched before painting, the spots that are treated should be primed. This usually can be done merely by covering the patch with a little of the paint to be used for the final coat. Then, when the paint is applied to the full ceiling, the patched portion is less likely to show.

If, for whatever reason, you should decide to dispense with a roller and use a brush for the entire ceiling, the job will be tedious if you work from a single stepladder. The best setup is one in which a plank is stretched across the lower steps of two stepladders. It then will not be necessary to keep moving a single stepladder every few minutes. Even then — with the two-stepladder arrangement — paint in fairly narrow strips across the width of the ceiling. If you paint in wide strips, you won't have to move the ladders so often, but you will risk leaving the lap marks discussed earlier.

(All aspects of painting a house are discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743.)

Garden Clinic

A: Four to six inches of an organic mulch will aid in winter protection by insulating the roots. Before adding this layer of mulch, fertilize with a 0-20-0 fertilizer. The phosphorous encourages root growth and the potash helps in lowering the freezing point of plant tissue. Use a 0-20-0 fertilizer at the rate of one pound per 100 square feet of plant bed area. Broadcast the fertilizer evenly around the plants and try not to concentrate the fertilizer in a ring or in handfuls under the foliage, as this could damage roots. Water thoroughly after fertilizing. Do not apply quickly available nitrogen in fall or late summer because it encourages tender vegetative growth. Remember to water shrubs during dry periods and when water is frozen in the ground. Most shrubs killed in North Carolina winter die from lack of water rather than cold temperatures.

Q: When do sasanqua camellias bloom?

A: Sasanqua camellias (Camelia sasanqua) bloom from October to January depending on the cultivar and the weather.

Q: Is there a sweetgum (Liquidambar styraciflua) that doesn't produce gumballs?

A: The fruitless sweetgum (Liquidambar styraciflua 'Rotundiloba') was discovered in the wild in North Carolina in 1930 and has existed in plant collections since that time, but has never been produced commercially. In addition to never producing fruit, it is also distinctive in having leaves with rounded lobes rather than the normal star-shaped leaves with pointed lobes. A number of nurseries have obtained the propogation wood, so these plants should soon begin to appear in commercial markets. Fruitless or not, the sweetgum is a superb native tree. It has found widespread commercial use on the West Coast as well as in Asia and Europe due to its stress tolerance, good fall color and rapid growth.

Q. — There is a crack about 15 inches long on our dining room ceiling. I intend to put up a heavy vinyl paper on the ceiling. Will this permanently cover the crack or will it eventually show through the vinyl?

A. — The best way to be sure it doesn't show through is to fill the opening with a spackling material before you install the vinyl.

Q. — I have to use a flush door soon for a room being added to our house. Do they come in standard sizes or should the opening be built to accommodate whatever size is available?

A. — Most doors are 6 feet, 8 inches, but you can order any size you want.

Q. — I would like to install plastic piping. Is this permitted by law?

A. — Plastic pipe is permitted by most building codes, but better check with your local authorities. If you are having a licensed plumber do the work, he will know which types of pipes and fitting are allowed in your community.

Q. — I want to finish the basement but am puzzled as to how to handle the water pipes that run across the ceiling. They are fairly high, but a bit away from the ceiling and I am afraid it would be awkward to hide them. Is there some way to disguise them a bit?

A. — In a recent basement renovation, the owner neatly covered the hanging pipes with bamboo blinds, wound around the pipes. However, these were cold water pipes. You could not do it with hot water pipes unless you first insulated the pipes. The insulation would also prevent the formation of condensation.

Q. — When I have paint left over, I seal the top of the can tight. But, no matter what I do, a paint skin forms on top of the paint. Is there any way to prevent this? If not, would it hurt the paint if the skin is carefully skimmed off?

A. — You usually can skim off the skin with no damage to the paint. One way to prevent the skin from forming is to pour a little paint thinner over the paint before you close the top of the can. However, even this won't work if the paint is not used for a long time — say a year or two. Besides the thinner plan, place some aluminum foil or plastic wrap under the top of the can before hammering it down.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

How Jeannette Cox has become Greenville's Most Successful Relocation Specialist.

When corporations need help in the transfer and relocation of their employees in the Greenville area, more of them call Jeannette Cox than any other Realtor. Because no one equals her experience in managing residential properties. Or her success in selling them.

Jeannette heads the Relocation Division of Jeannette Cox Agency, Inc., one of Greenville's most dynamic real estate firms. Working with sales Associates, she coordinates the relocation services required by her corporate clients. Market analysis, sales, mortgage financing and the care and upkeep of vacant homes. It's all handled efficiently and at the lowest possible cost by the Relocation Division at Jeannette Cox Agency, Inc.

In addition to working directly with major corporations, Jeannette also represents relocation firms such as Equitable Relocation Management Company, Merrill Lynch Relocation management, Bank of St. Lewis, Procter and Gamble Company and Homequity. Here, too, her property management and sales skills find a ready market.

If your company is involved in employee transfer and relocation in Greenville or the surrounding counties, call Jeannette Cox at (919) 756-1322.

Old Fort, Gem Of A Mountain Village

The mountain village of Old Fort lies 19 miles east of Asheville and just off the whirling flow of vehicular traffic on Interstate 40. Many travelers speed past on their way to Asheville, Cherokee, Knoxville, with little more than a passing glance at the exit signs.

The traveler who has time to stop, for a day of casual sightseeing and exploring, or even half a day or a few hours, will be rewarded for what this North Carolina small mountain village has to offer. One of the beauties of Old Fort is what it does not offer — there are no traffic congestions, no busy shopping centers, no large herds of tourists.

Instead, there is the quiet of a still rustic valley place rimmed by towering hills. A small, rock-strewn stream, Mill Creek, ripples through town, catching, reflecting glints of sunshine filtering through trees.

Local pride in the village is registered in work being carried out in landscaping the small downtown triangular park. The park faces a traffic circle which encloses a huge arrowhead mounted on a circular column of rocks, and within the circle too is a historic marker recalling that Old Fort was one of the sites from which soldiers marched westward to give assistance in the infamous roundup of Cherokees for the Trail of Tears westward trek to Oklahoma.

The sidewalks of Old Fort, with tubs and planters of seasonal flowers, are gardens in miniature brightening the scene. A town newspaper is published from a small office and a couple of neat shops provide an array of authentic and not-so-authentic mountain craft.

Two small museums tell the sometimes romantic, sometimes rigorously pioneer past story of Old Fort and the surrounding area.

In 1982 the state of North Carolina acquired the museum property and the Mauney House on Mill Creek. Now a service branch of the N.C. Museum of History, the Mountain Gateway Museum displays a rich variety of old tools, musical instruments, furniture, clothing, pottery, dolls, household items and other artifacts of the mountain life in earlier times.

Two mountain log structures, the Morgan and Stepp cabins, have been moved to the museum grounds. They are reminders of the rugged lifestyles of past generations of mountain people — sturdy, but hardly amenable to what we accept today as minimum comfort.

The Mountain Gate Museum building was erected by the WPA in the 1930s on the spot reportedly occupied by a fortification said to have been built by Gen. Griffith Rutherford's men. At first it was a community building, and in 1971 was opened to the public as a musuem under the auspices of the Old Fort Historic Site Committee for the purpose of interpreting pioneer lifestyles.

Grant's Museum, on the village's main street, is a hodgepodge of Indian artifacts, rattlesnake skins, unusual stones, and household items. It has the particular charm of a showcase of material accumulated by a person in love with saving and sharing with the public tangible reminders of bygone days.

The Old Fort train depot today stands idle, a gray building downtown that once saw throngs of tourists descend for a stopover. The Western North Carolina Railroad was completed in 1869, and in 1870 the name of the town, Catawba Vale, was offically changed to Old Fort. A hotel, the Round Knob Hotel was built and propsered, but is now no more. It burned in the 1930s.

At the same time, a manmade geyser about four miles uphill from Old Fort was built to commemorate the completion of the railroad. In recent years it was rebuilt and rededicated as the Andrews Geyser. It is an ideal picnic spot.

Today, visitors with time to spare will enjoy the mountain drive to the geyser. At several spots, typical mountain homes, neat and flower bedecked, are located in snug, flat areas. Scenic views of forested hills abound — carpeted in rhodendron in spring and in autumn by a spectacle of leaf glory. For much of the distance, a roadside stream pours its ceaseless murmur of music over rocks.

Old Fort, the valleys and mountains that surround it, was first settled in the 1770s. Change has come slowly to Old Fort, unlike the nearby bustling town of Black Mountain. This lack of change and the village's loving identification with the past make it a very special place.

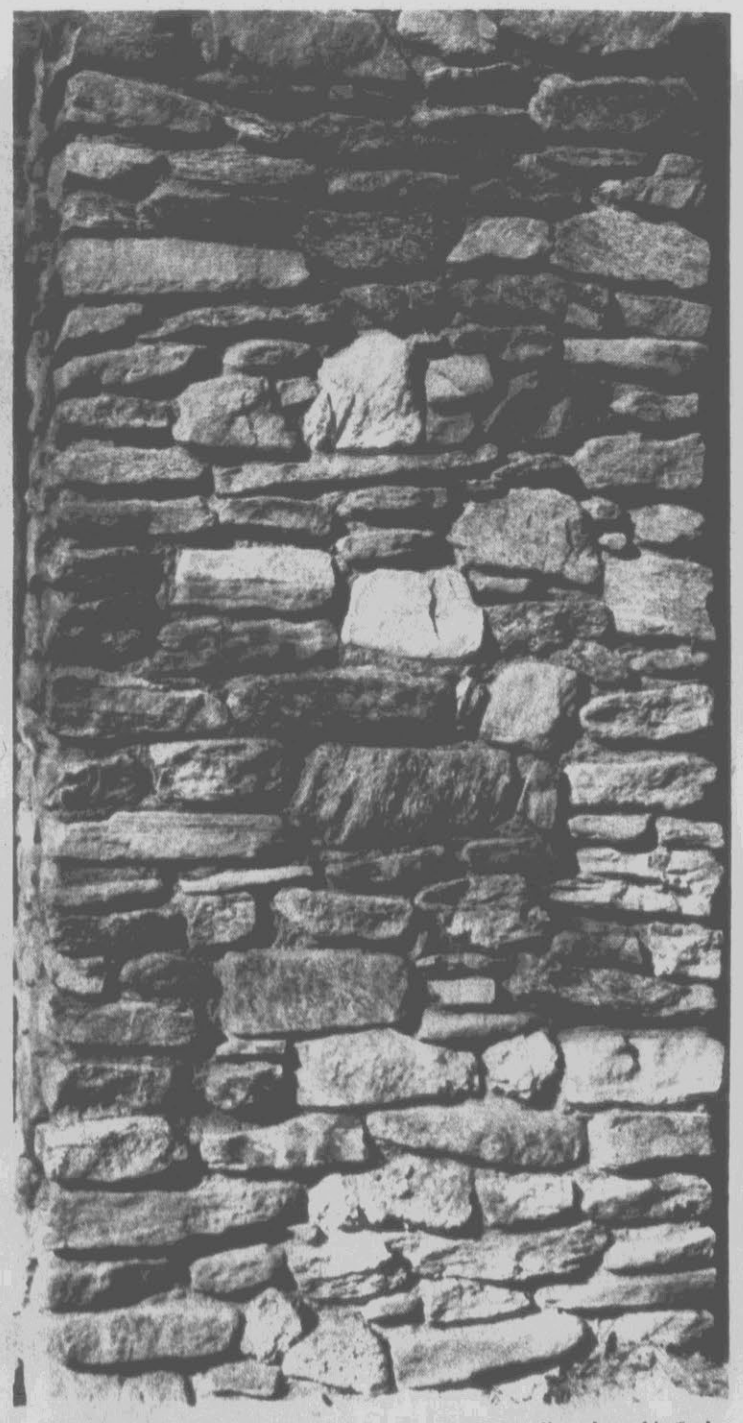
TYPICAL STREET SCENE — Along the main street of Old Fort, wooden tubs and ceramic plant holders decorate the sidewalk in front of the town's several small stores. The door to this shop has a paint-flaked door in several shades of weather-warmed colors.



STONEWORK — The mountains of western North Carolina abound in rock. This handy building material is frequently used in chimneys and in foundation constructions, and less often, as building material for complete buildings. A detail of a rock chimney is shown here.

A Vivid, Comprehensive History Of Black Mountain College

THE ARTS AT BLACK MOUNTAIN COLLEGE. By Mary Emma Harris. Cambridge, Mass., London, England. The MIT Press. Large format, illustrated, 374 plus pages. $50.

Kinston native Mary Emma Harris, now an art historian at the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, spent nearly two decades researching material, interviewing people and tracing down art work and records in preparing and writing this truly comprehensive history of Black Mountain College that was located a short distance east of Asheville in western North Carolina. The college operated 24 years, from 1933 to 1957.

Black Mountain College was founded by John Andrew Rice, a professor from Rollins College in Winter Park, Florida. Rice, a restless, frustrated teacher, gathered around him a group of educators with viewpoints and concepts similar to his own.

The choice for a campus was that of the Blue Ridge Assembly buildings, used for YMCA summer conferences but vacant in winter months. The heart of the campus was a magnificant building, the spacious Robert E. Lee Hall, with a huge porch overlooking spectacular mountain scenery.

Black Mountain College, Harris writes, "was conceived at a critical moment in American and international history. The crisis (suffered by Rice) that precipitated the college's founding occurred simultaneously with the appointment of Adolf Hitler as chancellor of Germany in January 1933 . . . and with the beginning of the persecution of artists, intellectuals and Jews on the European continent. The United States was in the depths of the Great Depression."

Throughout this admirably conceived multi-faceted history of a place and its people, developments in art, music, dance, drama, photography and literature at Black Mountain College reveal the excitement brought to the forefront through the intensity of creative urges given room to be voiced in countless ways by gifted people in an atmosphere not restricted by conventional curriculum and narrow academic requirements.

It dawns on us that had it not been for Black Mountain College, many of these people may have never had the chance to explore their dreams, or to fulfill their potential. The haunting possibility exists too that without this innovative school that came at a time in history when it was needed to bring to light (and fruition) new ideas, some of the richest achievements in American art in all fields might never have been realized, or at least long delayed.

Pioneering is the golden key to achievements at Black Mountain College. Even in the midst of the American and worldwide depression, this mountain haven kept alive and nurtured the American dream of enriching and expanding the American heritage of seeking and doing — in this case applicable to the arts in 20th century America.

Typical of artists who benefitted at Black Mountain are Josef Albers and his wife Anni, a weaver, denied pursuit of their talent in Nazi Germany; dancer Merce Cunningham and composer John Cage, eager for opportunities to experiment in dance and music of a new bent, and Buckminster Fuller, that genius of many accomplishments, who found Black Mountain amenable to his ideas.

During a time of economic hardship, the possibilities of artists working within a partially self-supporting institution fostering both the arts and practical livelihood from a farm was realized as nowhere else in America — a concept that succeeded despite drawbacks.

The roster of talent connected with Black Mountain College — of teachers, students and special guests covers an incredible cross-section of artists who would eventually leave their mark on American arts across a long span of years.

In addition to Fuller, the Albers, Cunningham and Cage, "The Arts At Black Mountain College" records the early creations of people like dancers/choreographers Agnes de Mille and Nataraj Vashi; artists Willem de Koonig, Franz Kline, Jacob Lawrence, Robert Motherwell, Kenneth Noland and Robert Rauschenberg; literary figures Edward Dahlberg and Alfred Kazin; ceramist Soetsu Yanagi and sculptor Ossip Zadkin; poet Jonathan Williams and the college's farmer, Raymond Trayer.

Author Harris covers in full measure the various obstacles — economic, political, educational and social, that consistently beset Black Mountain College. Many of these situations were inevitable, given the wide gulf of divergence in lifestyles of the conservative residents of the area (and the nation) and the freer, Bohemian ways of those at the college.

"Mere association with liberal causes of the 1930s was sufficient to frighten people from affiliation with a person or institution . . . its false reputation as a Communist community did not help in recrutiting students or raising money."

As years passed, and the college became established, tensions arose between those who favored "a more conventional and disciplined college" and those who felt comfortable in continuing to advocate a more relaxed attitude toward faculty and student behavior.

It did not help either that the pending appointment to the regular faculty of Paul Goodman created a conflict in the community. "Goodman was not just openly bisexual; he was also aggressive in his pursuit of young men . . . (who) were tired of having to deal constantly with his advances."

Yet, as Harris shows, it was not alone such dissensions that eventually led to the demise of Black Mountain College. Many factors entered the decision in 1957 that the time had come to close the college. For several years, the economics of operating Black Mountain College had become more difficult. "By 1952 the college was almost solely dependent on gifts and loans to meet its deficit." Several times the hope of private support fell through. On another occasion, "the sale of the beef herd and some of the pianos enabled the college to get through the 1955 spring semester."

Thirty years have passed since Black Mountain College closed its doors. But the influence of the school nationally and internationally in the entire spectrum of the arts lives on. Older people familar with the fame of the school will relish this long, detailed history. Younger readers studying art or North Carolina history will undoubtedly be grateful to have this remarkable source book available.

"The Arts at Black Mountain College" is not quick or easy reading. Obviously, in an attempt to keep the size down, the publishers resorted to very small print, and the author evidently (and understandably so) could not bring herself to compact the vast material accumulated.

It is a totally fascinating history, one made more enjoyable by the large array of superb photographs, both in color and black and white.

"The Arts at Black Mountain College" is a marvelous book to be read for pleasure and to be kept on hand for reference. The $50 price tag is well justified and the book will be a most welcome holiday gift item to anyone interested in the arts and in North Carolina history.

Modern Renaissance In Indian Art

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the 1930s, the canons for traditional American Indian art were formed. But contemporary Indian artists are breaking down a culture barrier, melding traditional approaches with the modern, and their industry is flourishing.

By MATT MYGATT
Associated Press Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — American Indian art is in the midst of a second renaissance with a new generation of contemporary artists producing works beyond the traditional but still drawing on a rich cultural heritage.

"In the world of Native American art, as deep and as great as it is, you could never have these exotic artists unless you have the wealth of such a foundation on which to grow," says Charles Dailey, museum director of the Institute of American Indian Art in Santa Fe.

Indian art has flourished and expanded into new areas since its golden age in the 1930s, when the canons for traditional Native American art were formed, Dailey says.

Indian art historically was associated with the well-being of a culture, he says. It supported and enhanced a person's relationship and harmony with nature and the universe.

But contemporary artists combine the past with 20th century images and interpret them in their modern art.

"They're thinking about space shots," Dailey says. "They're living in the 20th century. They know the past and its images and interpret them into a new century.

"This is my personal opinion, but up until the 1930s all Native American art was either centered on nature or else it was so fragmented. The Eskimos did their art. The Seminoles did theirs. There was no national school or awareness or cross-culture. Ever.

"It was a landmark occasion in 1932 when the Santa Fe Indian School was established as the first of the important schools for the Indian people. It really wasn't just an art school, but it had an art program."

Dorothy Dunn, who founded the first department of painting at the school and who taught there, came up with some basic canons on traditional Indian art, Dailey says.

"She was very definitive in the forms which she said were traditional," he says.

The second renaissance in Indian art in the past 25 years or so, Dailey says, "has allowed, for the very first time, the opportunity for a young person to go any place they wanted to go in their work. They are no longer restricted by the confines or the cultural barriers which said, 'You were not to depict this or that because it wasn't right.'"

Jewelry makers are breaking out of traditional turquoise, coral, jet, shell and silver. They are using blue lapis lazuli, deep-blue azurite, deep-green malachite. deep-blue covellite, purple sugilite and blue lazulite as well as diamonds and gold.

Craftsmen, with greater access to grinders, cutters and pencil-thin torches, are producing work that is fetching better prices and enabling them to make a living.

Jim Ostler, manager of Pueblo Zuni Arts and Crafts, says Zuni jewelry "is becoming finer and finer. The channel work is better. Pieces are becoming so much more delicate. Not as big maybe."

Craftsmen are becoming more skilled by improving on what they have learned from their families.

"One will find that it's the young people in their 20s who are doing such extraordinary work," Ostler says. "They've just gone a step farther than their parents."

Potters are using new techniques, such as selective firing in which carbon on black pottery is burned away, revealing red clay.

"They can burn away carbon on a turtle's toenails, or make bands on traditional black pots with red clay," Dailey says.

Sgraffito — potters etching the slip, or thin top coating, off pots and leaving a design — is becoming more refined.

"Sometimes other clay colors are rubbed into or over the design or painted into carvings," says Bob Andrews, a gallery owner in Albuquerque.

Clay storytellers and nativity scenes are growing in popularity.

Traditionally, he says, Indian artists were "instructed to paint deer this way, trees this way. All this was based on fine research in preceding years."

But the artists could only go so far in detail, and then there was concern about repetition. To break out of the mold, some artists began trying more modernistic approaches.

"If you were a Sioux person who was doing a wall painting or a tepee painting of a man on horseback, you would draw the horse and rider," Dailey says. "In modern art, you would do the same picture but leave out the legs. You can do the idea of a buffalo and horse. That was foreign to the development of Indian art."

Dailey says that without constant progression and development, art will go downhill.

Sculpture, for example, has blossomed from primitive pieces in sandstone or wood to abstract pieces in industrial steels and bronze.

"One of the things I've always admired is simplicity," says Allan Houser, a sculptor in Santa Fe who once taught at the institute. "Seeing things that appeal to me are things that have been almost completely abstracted.

"I've been all over the country and all over the world. It's given me a broader outlook to what has happened and it makes me think a little harder, trying to come up with something that's completely unique.

"I've tried to go back and do a lot of research. I love who I am and where I'm from. I'm very proud of it. I'm trying to make the best of what I know and doing it in a very contemporary approach."

Many sculptors are doing beautiful pieces that will sell in the marketplace, but a lot of them are getting too commercial-minded, Houser says.

Also, inferior copies of American Indian jewelry are being produced overseas.

Andrews says the success of American Indian arts and crafts and their increasing value has led to a plethora of potters in the past couple of decades.

"It's drawn a lot of talented people back into pottery and a lot of other people into pottery in a mass production-type thing," he says.

Dailey says the institute, established in 1962, never has "taught modern art, and we don't teach traditional art. We do teach skills and technique.

"For a culture to be healthy, we've always fostered both ends of the spectrum."

Artists Show Work At Arlington

The late fall exhibition of art at Arlington Hall, 327 Arlington Boulevard, is comprised of the work of three guest artists and one artist who shows regularly at the gallery. Work by the four — Irmaly Brackin, Lori Burek, Tony Joneck and Stephen Hill opened Nov. 10 and will be on view through the end of the year.

Brackin, whose forte is free-expression painting and sculpture, holds the BFA from Applachian State University in Boone and the MFA from UNC-Chapel Hill. Her earlier, European art training was in Germany, Denmark, England and France. At the American Art Academy in Paris, Brackin received first place honorable scholarship for summer study.

She has exhibited extensively throughout North Carolina, in Virginia, the state of Washington and in France.

• Burek earned the BFA degree from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. She has exhibited and won honors in shows in Michigan, Maine, Kansas and North Carolina.

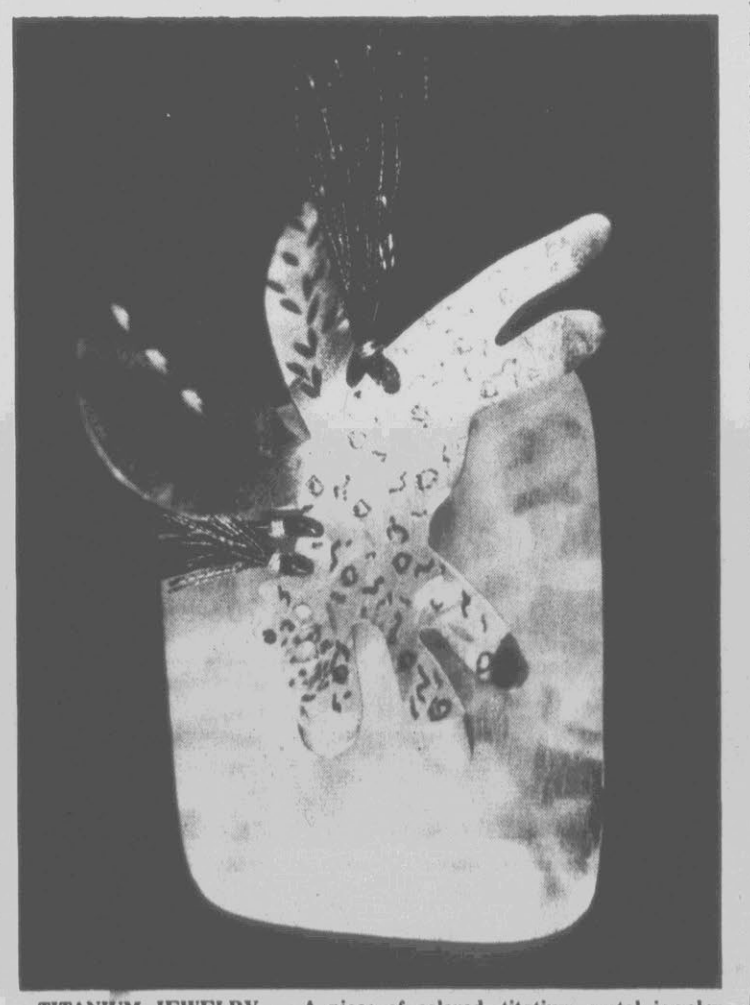
At Arlington Hall, she is showing a selection of titanium jewelry that is based on a balance of traditional and innovative ides, using color for the pieces.

• Dunn resident Anthony "Tony" C. Joneck is exhibiting porcelain earrings and pendants. He holds several degrees — in plant science from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst; in horticulture from N.C. State University, Raleigh, and most recently, a BFA degree in ceramics from East Carolina University.

Joneck labels his creations as pottery for the ears — he constructs earrings and pendants in porcelain.

• Kansas City based potter Hill has a BFA degree from Kansas University. In this show, as in ongoing offerings at Arlington Hall, Hill is showing pottery that is both functional and decorative.

Gallery hours at Arlington Hall are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, and from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturdays. For more details, call 355-2426.



TITANIUM JEWELRY — A piece of colored, titatium metal jewelry created by artist Lori Burek is currently on view at Arlington Hall, Arlington Boulevard. Work by Irmaly Brackin, Tony Joneck and Stephen Hill is also in the show to be on view through Dec. 31.

ECU's Splendor Of Old And New Latin American Art

"Images of Latin American Culture, Arts and Artifacts," the current exhibition of art at Gray Gallery on the East Carolina University campus, fills an imaginative and highly informative role.

In the central area of the gallery a sizeable array of pre-Columbian artifacts are exhibited in glass cases, grouped by themes that constitute a thread to better understanding of this ancient art and the people who created it.

The two major divisions of the exhibition are covered by: "Interpreting the Artistic Tradition in Latin America" and "Traditional and Contemporary Art, Latin America."

Five themes incorporate the broad scope of basic interpretion of the material, old and new, in this fascinationg exhibiton. The themes are: "The Quest for Understanding: Defining What it Means to be Human"; "Continuity and Transformation: The Relationship of Humans to the World Around them"; "The Duality of the Spirit: Humans and the Gods," and "Life and the Meaning of Death: Creation and Regeneration."

Included in the cases are procovative and representative examples of art of centuries ago from native cultures in Mexico, Columbia, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Ecuador, Peru — encompassing cultures such as the Inca, Maya, Olmec, Early Chancay, Chimu, Club Nacional, Quimbaya, and Lambayeque, among others.

The showing of this number of old Latin American artifacts is a rare oppotunity for art and history lovers in Greenville. The mostly clay derived items reveal certain similarities in techniques, but at the same time show clearly the differences in designs and decorations used by peoples of widely separated civilizations that flourished before the arrival of Europeans.

Within the range of this period of art are a wide range of artifacts — figurines, bottles, incense burners, bowls, urns, whistles. Some are utilitarian, others ritual pieces, and some for entertainment and decorative value.

Although ceramic artifacts predominate in this exhibition, there are examples of woven textiles, a backstrap loom and a lovely collection of small, polished stone works, slings and sling stones.

The manner in which the ancient artifacts is exhibited — in the central part of the gallery with a showing of contempoary paintings displayed on the walls forming a framework for the older art, gives a decided feeling that the ancient heritages strongly radiate their influences down to today.

The paintings, along with a display of 19th and 20th century Mexican masks, incorporate influences of ancient Indian cultures, superimposed by the heritage of four centuries of Spanish life and culture. The paintings, mostly by Hispanics, the Latin American community in the U.S., testify to the continued love of bold design and daring colors, to the rich historical heritage that often included years of bloodshed, oppression, the sharp contrasts in the everyday lives of the rich and the poor.

The Latin history, studded with revolutions, has fashioned a dense, violent canvas of history in which religion, class divisions and the struggle to survive are factors recognizable in the showing of these new works. Equally evident are manifestations of a robust humor and the vitality of life that is a hallmark of Latins.

Together, these insights — old and new, into Latin American culture offers viewers an exceptional opportunity to experience a new leaf of knowledge about the millions who today inhabit that vast land south of the American border. And it affords tremendous visual pleasures as well.

An expression of gratitude is due Ms. Nilda Pereza of the Museum of Contemporary Hispanic Art, who assembled and made possible the loan of contemporary Hispanic Art; Dr. David Phelps and Dr. Holly Matthews of the ECU Department of Sociology and Anthropology, who assembled the collection of pre-Columbian artifacts and masks displayed, and to Perry Nesbitt, director of the ECU Art Gallery, who designed and curated the total exhibit.

The exhibition, being held through November 25 in conjunction with Latin American Month at ECU, is ideal for viewing by school groups, art lovers and anyone interested in discovering more about the Indian-Spanish peoples who are our neighbors in the warmer climes of the Western Hemisphere.

Until the supply is exhausted, visitors can ask for an excellent illustrated brochure of the exhibition.

Hours at Gray Gallery are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays, with extra viewing hours on Thursdays until 8 p.m.

Culture Booms In Mexico

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — From a 180-degree screen, thousands of visitors a year get a bird's-eye view of Mexico's most breathtaking sites — Mayan and Aztec ruins, the pyramids, Copper Canyon, the beaches of Acapulco and Cancun.

The Tijuana Cultural Center and Space Theater, a mammoth sand-colored sphere held aloft by a stylized hand, are two of the border city's most impressive new structures.

The federally funded center, inaugurated in October 1982 just months after Mexico's economy plunged into crisis, has become the focal point of northern Baja California's cultural development.

Tijuana, which for years has offered bullfights, horse racing, jai alai games and Mexican beer as its chief tourist attractions, is undergoing a cultural revolution.

The center's director is working to make it a learning center for American tourists. Exhibits accompanied by brochures written in English, such as the current "Mexican Identities," display works of art from throughout the country and explain what it means to be Mexican today.

"We're offering attractions so the tourist who travels here finds out what we're all about and doesn't come here just to go to the beach or look for bargains," said Rodolfo Pataky, who moved here four years ago from Mexico City to direct the center.

Tijuana is called "the most visited city in the world" but tourists who flock here by the millions each year most often have left knowing very little about Mexico's rich cultural heritage.

Pataky said Tijuana's flourishing economy, brought about by major investments in commerce and industry, is fostering the development.

The center has hosted artists and exhibitions from France, the Soviet Union, Spain, Argentina, Cuba and China to provide a more demanding Tijuana population with cultural variety.

"As the community improves people begin looking for the satisfaction of cultural development," Pataky said. "We're seeing development of the arts because of the economic boom.

"Tijuana has changed more in the past 15 years than it did the previous 80."

Art shop owners such as Rogelio Alvarez Barriere are gambling that Tijuana's new development will bring a class of tourist that wants to take the best of Mexican art home.

"The people that have visted here come with the idea that they're going to find cabarets and 50-cent trinkets," said Barriere, whose Galerias Fernanda is located in Tijuana's new shopping center, Plaza Revolution, which until two years ago was a parking lot.

"I want people to know that our artists here in Mexico have very skillful hands," he said.

The gallery, like one or two others in Tijuana, sells works by Mexico's leading artists, many of whom are not sold outside Mexico City or the ritzy beach resorts.

"Mexico is in a crisis. We have to do something or our artists will die of hunger," Barriere said.

The Tijuana Tourism Bureau has invited 3,000 journalists from around the world to "Super Fiesta Tijuana" on Jan. 27, 1988, during Super Bowl week.

HOT OFF THE PRESS — Spot checking one-ounce silver Libertad coins after they have emerged from the press is Lino Servin, press operator for the Government of Mexico's 450-year-old Casa de la Moneda in Mexico City, the oldest mint in the Western Hemisphere. The 99.99 percent pure silver coins have been produced since 1984 by Mexico, the free world's largest producer of silver. (AP Laserphoto)

Asheville, An Architectural Treasure

By JEFF RENK
Buncombe County Tourism Development Authority

ASHEVILLE — One city suffered a greater financial hardship than all others from the 1929 Crash, shouldering a per capita debt burden that was the highest in the country. Today, the liability that city carried for almost 50 years has turned it into an American architectural treasure.

The "City That Suffered Most" was Asheville, a municipality that was so poor for so long that ancient buildings never faced the bulldozers of urban renewal.

While many cities chose to default on their Depression-era liabilities and started over with a clean slate, Asheville city fathers chose to pay every dollar back. It was a burden several generations would carry, until 1976 when the last obligations were paid off.

During those years the city stayed much as it was before that black day in 1929. The tax base was small enough that growth was slow, and what tax monies were generated funded more pressing needs than the destruction of old buildings.

The result is a city that reflects a different era in American architecture, a city that is only now shaking off the dust and rust of almost 60 years and carefully restoring buildings that would have disappeared long ago from most American cities. Approximately $53 million has been pledged for downtown redevelopment as developers have begun to look at the city's architecture as an economic opportunity.

Asheville today is more than a city where architecture stood still for several generations. It is distinctive because in the year time stopped, 1929, it was a boom town, a home for the Vanderbilts, a resort for Henry Ford, Thomas Edison and other historic luminaries, and a mecca for rising young architects following in the footsteps of one of the masters, Richard Morris Hunt, who built the lavish Biltmore House in Asheville in 1895.

The styles of architecture reflect the temperament of different designers, and the moods of the city at different periods. In downtown, side by side tower the mountain city's own structural odd couple — a flashy Art Deco-style city hall, its peaking mountain silhouette veiled with a pink and green tiled octagonal roof, and, next to city hall, in sharply masculine, conventional juxtaposition, the Buncombe County Courthouse.

The two structures surprisingly were completed in the same year, 1928, and were to have been designed by the same man, Douglas Ellington, who popularized the Art Deco style he had come to admire as a student in Paris. As work started on the city hall building, however, local officials decided its design was too extravagant and had someone else take over the county building project.

Begun as a frontier outpost in 1797, Asheville was originally little more than a crossroads of Indian trails on a plateau. Surrounded by imposing mountains on all sides at the confluence of the French Broad and Swannanoa Rivers, Asheville would later be described by its native son, novelist Thomas Wolfe, as a town existing within the rim of an enormous cup.

Previously the land of frontiersmen like Daniel Boone and Davy Crockett, Asheville and Buncombe County were transformed into a resort town and a center for therapeutic health treatments after the railroad arrived in 1880. Until the 1920s, Asheville became a mecca for visitors wishing for a mountain escape, its population climbing to 10,325 in 1890 and its "summer people" in 1886 numbering nearly 30,000.

The area also attracted the rich and famous. None of its visitors left a greater impact upon Asheville than George Washington Vanderbilt, whose Biltmore Estate and 250-room Biltmore House continue to be Asheville landmarks.

Vanderbilt thought Asheville the most beautiful city in the world and bought 125,000 acres of land there. He then commissioned noted architect Richard Morris Hunt to build the most luxurious private residence in America upon the property, and hired Frederick Law Olmsted to supervise the landscape architecture of the estate.

Hunt modeled the French renaissance chateau after those of the 16th century in the Loire Valley in France. Indiana limestone was brought into the area by train. Stonecarvers and woodcarvers contributed their artwork to the interior and exterior of the house, and Vanderbilt spent years in Europe and the Orient buying antiques and art for his great house.

In 1895, after five years and a million man hours of labor, Biltmore House was completed. Not only did the establishment of the estate and Vanderbilt's presence there enhance Asheville's reputation as an exclusive area, the work at Biltmore Estate also required the skill of European craftsmen. Many of these talented workmen remained in Asheville and spread their influence throughout the city in architectural projects.

Grove became enamored with a grand, yet rustic, mountain lodge he had seen at Yellowstone Park. He sought an architect who could grasp the notion of an indegenous building designed with a regional style appropriate for a mountain setting.

Frustrated with his inability to find such an architect, Grove entrusted the construction and design to his son-in-law, who had no architectural experience. The result was Grove Park Inn, a massive hotel made of native uncut granite boulders laid over a reinforced concrete frame.

Grove's son-in-law ignored the currently popular styles that characterized most of the downtown buildings in Asheville. The materials from which the hotel was constructed were taken in large part from the mountain on which it stands. Huge boulders which form the walls of the hotel, some weighing up to five tons, were brought to the site by trains of 15 wagons carrying over 40 tons of stone each trip.

Red clay tile produced in Tennessee, and visible for miles, covers the main roof, overhanging the walls in great undulating eaves. The main lobby is 120 feet long and 80 feet wide, and contains fireplaces that can accommodate 12-foot logs.

Although Asheville's reputation as a resort for the wealthy was well known, its appeal for the middle class traveler seeking relief from summer heat was also widespread.

Wolfe, Asheville's most famous native son, immortalized the house in "Look Homeward, Angel," a novel which is mostly autobiographical. The house, named Dixieland in the work, is the setting for the experiences of the author as a young boy growing up in his mother's boarding house.

Although the all-too-vivid portrayal of Asheville and its citizens was considered so unflattering by locals that the book was banned from the local library, Wolfe's home is considered one of Asheville's most important and significant historical sites.

At the core of any thriving Southern city, of course, is its church community. Asheville's churches reflect the city's architectural heritage and the same calibre of excellence in design as the city's other landmarks, many of the churches sharing mutual architects and designers with the city's most significant structures. Three of Asheville's noted churches were constructed during the 1895 to 1925 time period.

In Biltmore Village, a community established and built by Vanderbilt to house and support estate workers, the social and architectural focal point is All Souls Episcopal Church of 1896. The extraordinarily complicated structure is designed in the shape of a Greek cross with a massive central tower. The church's memorial windows are made of opalescent glass using a pre-Gothic method which produced amazing richness and depth of color. The features of the building include pebbledash surfaces and expansive tile roofs.

Another architect involved in the Biltmore House project was a Spanish designer named Rafael Guastavino. Guastavino is responsible for the legacy of St. Lawrence's Catholic Church, 1909, in downtown Asheville, a structure employing two Spanish Baroque towers rising to a height of five stories. Each tower is capped with a parapeted wall enclosing a bulbous dome; each dome is sheathed with pink, green, brown and white tiles.

Guastavino's own technique, "cohesive construction," was utilized in the St. Lawrence project. The church, considered a true architectural masterpiece, contains the largest unsupported tile dome in the United States, measuring 52 by 82 feet.

The construction of the dome is a story in itself. Built without the use of scaffolding or shoring, Guastavino started at the outside walls and cemented in the tiles one at a time all around, subsequently building up the roof layers going into the center using the tile he had recently cemented in place as his working platform.

Ellington employed a gradation of colored mission tiles on the dome, ranging from green to dark red. Orange bricks, terra cotta moldings and pink marble combine in the walls.

Retrospectively, it was fortunate that after Asheville's largest bank and five other financial institutions closed on Nov. 20, 1930, and after Buncombe County, the city of Asheville refinanced its debt. And now, in 1987, the city's historic district of approximately 170 buildings stands as one of the most comprehensive collections of early 20th century commercial architecture in North Carolina.

Celebrating The Romantics

NEW YORK (AP) — "William Wordsworth and the Age of English Romanticism," an exhibition at the New York Public Library through Jan. 2, 1988, consists of more than 300 literary and artistic treasures, many of them in the United States for the first time.

The exhibition includes 25 major paintings by John Constable and 20 by J.M.W. Turner; original manuscripts of some of the most famous poetry in the English language, by Wordsworth, Coleridge, Shelley, Keats and Byron, and personal memorabilia of the poets. The exhibits have been lent by more than 70 museums, libraries and private collections around the world, including those of The Wordsworth Trust, Dove Cottage, England, the British Museum and the National Portrait Gallery, London.

After its presentation in New York, the exhibition will travel to the Indiana University Art Museum, Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 27-March 6, 1988. Smaller traveling versions of the exhibiton in poster-panel form will tour the United States, Canada and Great Britain in 1987 and 1988.

Real-Life Situations Can Sometimes Become Movie Scripts

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Like most of the nation, film producers, writers and agents have been fascinated by the televised testimony of Lt. Col. Oliver North during the Iran-Contra hearings.

However, their concern is not one of national affairs. They want to know if this real-life drama can be translated into a movie project and who would play North — Treat Williams, Kris Kristofferson, Mel Gibson?

Converting today's headlines into tomorrow's movies and TV miniseries has become a Hollywood subindustry. Production companies subscribe to dozens of newspapers and magazines which are scoured for another "Saturday Night Fever," which originated as an article about a discotheque in New York magazine.

"I tape the television news every night," says David R. Ginsburg, president of Alliance Entertainment. "When I see something that might produce a film property, I file it for future reference."

Ginsburg's alertness has resulted in acquiring dramatic rights to a pair of news figures: Marla Hanson, the New York model-actress whose career was threatened by a revenge slashing of her face (optioned by NBC); Michael Caruso, Jr., the 10-year-old who talked himself out of a hostage situation at the Dallas-Ft. Worth airport (optioned by Disney).

"Sometimes the news story mentions a lawyer and we communicate with him," Ginsburg said. "Sometimes we can get right through to the figure in the news. In the Caruso case, we saw that the family had moved to Phoenix. We got the number of the phone book and sent our in-house lawyer to acquire the rights."

No news story in recent times has attracted as mu-------(something missing)-------- could marry his secretary and mistress, Lorna Anderson. They also were convicted of an abortive plot to murder her husband.

The story had everything: religion, sex and murder in mid-America. Henry Winkler, Dick Clark and Zev Braun signed various members of the case, and other producers and agents sought rights from reporters and other sources.

The winner was Zev Braun. His four-hour movie, "Murder Ordained," starring Keith Carradine and JoBeth Williams, appeared on CBS on May 3 and 5.

"I think 36 producers, networks and agents went after the story," Braun said. "I was intrigued by the figure of John Rule, the state trooper who investigated the wife's murder. I decided: Let's tell the story from the point of view of Gary Cooper, the upright man fighting evil in a small town. So I made a contract with Rule and moved ahead. Now the others have dropped out because we got there first."

Getting there first is all-important in the real-life movie trade. No one knows that better than producer David Permut.

"My approach to securing rights is: I make one phone call and then I'm on a plane," said Permut, 33, who started his business career when he was a 15-year-old selling maps to the movie stars' homes on the curb of his parents' Bel-Air home.

His projects have included: "Changing Habits," a TV movie in which a San Francisco madam was sentenced by a judge to spend time in a convent; "Fighting Back," a feature with Tom Skerritt as a New Jersey deli owner who runs into trouble when he organizes anti-crime vigilantes; "Palm Beached," a future Disney movie with Bette Midler as the Florida socialite who found a Venezuelan freighter in her swimming pool.

"There are some subjects that don't appeal to me. Like 'The Billionaire Boys Club.' I had talked with a couple of members, but my real problem with the story was how to deal with a bunch of spoiled rich kids breaking the law," he said.

The Billionaire Boys Club, whose leader Joe Hunt was sentenced to life in prison earlier this month for murder, will be portrayed in a four-hour NBC movie produced by Donald March. Judd Nelson has been cast as Hunt.

Abby Mann is an old hand at creating drama from real events, dating back to his Oscar-winning "Judgment at Nuremberg" 25 years ago. Among his other scripts are "The Atlanta Child Murders" and "The Marcus-Nelson Murders," from which the "Kojak" TV series originated.

Although no deal has been cut for an Oliver North story, Mann already has some ideas of how the project should go.

"I see it as a black comedy, something that Stanley Kubrick ('Dr. Strangelove') could do beautifully," he said. "Look, you've got a lawyer who has failed bar exams ... and a beautiful woman who claims she didn't know what was going on but seems to know all the names and numbers. It's great stuff. The best casting I can think of for Ollie North is Jack Nicholson."

Mann's latest project is the McMartin Pre-School child molestation case, now being tried in a Los Angeles courtroom.

Mann and his wife, Myra, did extensive research with many of the case figures, especially former prosecutor Glen Stevens. He expects legal repercussions over his television movie, but that's nothing new for him.

"The Atlanta Child Murders," which suggested that defendant Wayne Williams had been victimized by city authorities, brought a storm of protest.

"But I've never been sued yet," he said, "and I've done more of these (real-life dramas) than anyone else."

The danger of libel and invasion-of-privacy suits provide a mine field for producers of the real-life films. How do they deal with it?

"First you decide what rights to go after," said Allied Entertainment's Ginsburg. "If you can't clear all of the figures, you can fictionalize them or change names.

"All of the scripts are scrutinized by the production companies' lawyers, the networks' lawyers and the insurance companies' lawyers. All of these movies have insurance policies before they go on the air. In some cases the insurer will insist on certain exclusions, exceptions and deductions, but at least you have some protection."

Spanish Art In France

BY MARILYN AUGUST
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — After centuries of neglect, France is celebrating the genius of Spanish art and enjoying the biggest showing ever of works by Spain's best known masters.

Under the collective title "500 Years of Spanish Art," more than 500 masterpieces by El Greco, Pablo Picasso and other Spanish artists are on display through Jan. 3 at two major Paris museums renovated especially for the occasion.

Despite long lines, crowded galleries and, in some places, poor lighting, critics agree the $4 million splash is the most exciting cultural event of the season. Transported in temperature-controlled crates from Spain's most important museums, many works were being seen in France for the first time.

The most striking exhibition, at the Petit Palais, is called "From El Greco to Picasso," and features the stark studies in black and white, dressed-up dwarfs and slices of raw reality long associated with Spanish art.

The works are on loan from major Spanish museums and private collectors. Some 62 are from the Prado in Madrid; 50 come from small towns and 39 from private collections.

The show begins with El Greco (1541-1614), one of the great visionary artists of all time, whose work was infused with a kind of religious ecstasy.

On show are 10 of his masterpieces including "Portrait of a Horseman," "The Tears of St. Peter" and "Adoration of the Shepherds," all typifying the wispy-lined brushstrokes, elongated features and light-dark contrasts for which he was famous.

On the bizarre side from the 17th century are Jose de Ribera's "Bearded Woman," a grotesque portrait of a bearded man-woman nursing an infant on a milk-engorged breast, and Juan Carreno de Miranda's (1614-1693) obese midgets portrayed both clothed and naked.

There are several works by Diego Velasquez (1599-1660), a romantic before his time and one of the first painters to ever set up an easel outdoors and paint what he saw. The exhibition displays, among others, his portrait of "Aesop" and "Joseph's Coat."

Among the show's highlights are paintings by Francisco de Goya (1746-1828) including "The Puppet," "Tirana," the full-length portrait of the period's leading actress, and "The Family of Don Luis," which is being exhibited in public for the first time.

"Picasso's Century," at the Museum of Modern Art of the City of Paris, is a toast to the daring and imagination of such 20th century giants as Picasso, Salvador Dali, Joan Miro and Juan Gris. They fled the oppressive atmosphere of their native Spain and settled in France where their work was appreciated.

The exhibit features more than 200 works,including a quickly-drawn self-portrait of Picasso, sketched about a year before his death in 1973 in his home on the Riviera.

ECU Jazz Ensemble Concert Thursday

THURSDAY CONCERT — The East Carolina University Jazz Ensemble will be in concert at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in Wright Auditorium under the direction of George Broussard. The program will feature a selection of jazz music through the years. Admission is free.

The East Carolina University Jazz Ensemble will perform in concert Thursday at 8:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus.

The concert offers an evening of popular entertainment featuring a variety of tunes by such favorites as Duke Ellington, George Gershwin, Erroll Garner, Jimmy Van Heusen and Thad Jones.

The group is directed by George Broussard of the ECU music faculty and is comprised of 25 music students performing on saxophone, trombone, French horn and trumpet, in addition to the rhythm section and vocalist Carol Bailey.

Featured as soloist is percussionist Mark Ford, professor of percussion at ECU this year on a one-year appointment. Ford is a 1981 graduate of the ECU School of Music.

For its Thursday concert, pieces to be played include, among others: "Carnival Night in Vera Cruz" by David Caffey; "Tuning Up" by Toshiko Akiyoshi; Kenny Durham's "Blue Bossa"; Gershwin's "I Got Rhythm"; "Caravan" by Juan Tizol and Duke Ellington; the George Simms arrangement of "Carry Me Back To Old Virginny"; "Limehouse Blues" by Douglas Furber and Philip Braham, arranged by John Berry, and the Roger Pemberton arrangement of Duke Ellington's "Don't Get Around Much Anymore."

The Jazz Ensemble has just returned to campus from its 1987 tour of several locations in North Carolina, including a performance on Nov. 2 at the N.C. unit of the National Association of Jazz Educators at the N.C. Music Educators Association In-Service Conference in Winston-Salem.

After concerts for the NAJE and the ECU Alumni Association, the ensemble performed for high schools in the Piedmont area before returning home.

It performance for the NAJE concert was highlighted by the collaboration with guest soloist/clinician Dr. John Marcellus, conductor of the Brighton Synphony Orchestra, principal of the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra and a member of the Eastman Brass.

In addition to conference appearances, the ECU Jazz Ensemble has performed in concert with jazz artists such as Roger Pemberton, Pl Percino, Jerry Coker, Danny Stiles, and Kai Winding.

Tardif To Perform In Faculty Concert

A free concert will be presented on Wednesday by pianist Paul Tardif as a featured event of the ECU School of Music faculty recital series. The program will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall of the School of Music. Seating will be on a first-come, first-seated basis.

Tardif's achievements as a classical and jazz pianist were seen most recently this October on a nationally telecast program taped last summer at Washington, D.C.'s Wolftrap Center for the Performing Arts.

The two-hour special, "Wolftrap Salutes ASCAP," was a tribute to the talents of members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Tardif was accompanist for performers Bernadette Peters, Glenn Close and Jeffry Osborne.

With three days' notice, he was asked to learn the first movement of Gershwin's "Piano Cencerto in F," for a ballet sequence featuring members of the New York City Ballet.

He performed with the orchestra, also, for works sung by Judy Collins and Tony Bennett and for composers Henry Mancini, Marvin Hamlisch, Charles Strauss, and Sammy Kahn. The production was directed by Joe Layton, former director of North Carolina's outdoor drama "The Lost Colony."

Wedneday's recital will feature classical music from all major periods. Works to be performed are Mozart's "Adagio in B Minor," K.540; Schubert's "Sonata in A Major," D.664; Prokofieff's "Sonata No. 3 in A Minor," Opus 28; "Valses nobles et sentimentales" by Ravel, and three preludes by Rachmaninoff.

Tardif received his formal training at the Eastman School of Music, the Peabody Conservatory, and the Salzburg Mozarteum in Austria. He has been a prize winner in major competitions and was the recipient of a Fulbright Grant to Munich and Salzburg.

Junior Recital For Vutsinas

Steven G. Vutsinas of Clinton, Md., a student of Dr. Rodney Schmidt in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present his junior recital in violin at 7 p.m. Monday at the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus.

He will be accompanied by Alisa Wetherington, piano, and assisted by Carol Moore, violin.

For his program, he has listed Bach's "Preludio from Partita No. 1" and "Concerto for Two Violins" with Carol Moore; the allegro di molto from "Sonata" K.305 by Mozart, and Dvorak's "Sonatina," Opus 100, in four movements.

Contemporary Jazz Program On Friday

The East Carolina University Contemporary Jazz Ensemble will present a free concert on Friday at 8 p.m. in room 224 of Mendenhall Student Center. This nightclub-like performance is sponsored by the Student Union Coffeehouse Committee.

Tenor saxophonist Jack Wilkins will be featured. He is a graduate of the University of Miami School of Music and is currently head of the jazz program at Appalachian State University. Wilkins can be heard on recordings by rock artist John Cougar Mellencamp and by the University of Miami Jazz Ensemble.

The ECU Jazz Ensemble is lead by ECU faculty member Paul Tardif and features student musicians Klee Liles on electric bass, Dan Davis on drums and Chris Moore on vibes and percussion.

IN DISCUSSION — Marilyn Malloy and Chris Chappell discuss love and marriage in "Lovers and Other Strangers." 'Lovers And Strangers' Next Production For The ECU Playhouse

The East Carolina Playhouse will present its second show of the season, "Lovers and Other Strangers" by the married team of Renee Taylor and Joseph Bologna Wednesday through Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in McGinnis Theater on the East Carolina University Campus.

"Lovers and Other Strangers" ran on Broadway in 1968 and was then made into a film a year later with a cast that included Bea Arthur and Gig Young.

Reminiscent of "Love American Style," the play is a collection of five short comedies concerned with attitudes toward male-female relationships. It has been described as funny and compassionate toward the problems of everyday people caught up in the complexities of love and marriage.

The first comedy deals with the preliminaries to a seduction. Jerry is a young man on the make who has brought a newly-met girl, Brenda, to his bachelor pad. He finds himself somewhat flabbergasted by her continuous quotations from numerous experts on amorous relationships, from Helen Gurley Brown to Kahlil Gibran. Undeterred, he comes to the point of their evening, when she stalls him.

In the second comedy, a married man, Hal, is having an argument with his mistress, Cathy, in a bathroom. He says he loves her but he can't leave his wife until the children grow up a little. She claims he's been telling her that for years and she no longer wants to see him.

The third comedy is a trip into the private life of a couple, Johnny and Wilma. They are having a bedroom battle because he wants to go to sleep and she wants to make love. He is not in the mood, he claims, not only because she is too aggressive as a person and too successful at her work, but because that day he himself lost an important business account.

The fourth comedy is a portrayal of a young man, Mike, suffering from pramarital jitters. The groom-to-be is afflicted with cold feet when he faces the fact that his marriage to Susan is only four days away.

The fifth and last comedy is the longest. Frank and Bea are a couple who have been married for over 30 years and have come to think of matrimony as a troublesome but necessary institution.

Long settled into complacency, they have a sudden problem — their son, Ritchie, after six years of marriage to Joan, is planning a divorce. The two parents set out to end the rift. In bitter-sweet but amusing confessions, father talks to son and mother to daughter-in-law, and no one gets anywhere, but on the way there are humor and truth.

Performances of "Lovers and Other Strangers" will take place Wednesday through Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in McGinnis Theater in the Messick Theater Arts Building, corner of Fifth and Eastern Streets on the ECU campus.

Single tickets are priced at $5 and $4 for groups of ten or more.

All tickets may be charged on VISA or Mastercard by telephoning the box office at 757-6390, or may be purchased at the McGinnis Theater box office from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and 11 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. on performance days.

For further information call 757-6390.

Burt and Loni: Still going strong on all cylinders

Q. Are actor Burt Reynolds and actress Loni Anderson still together, or have they split? —Becky Edgar, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. Their friendship endures, and inevitably Reynolds, 51, will succumb to Loni's desires for marriage . . . if he hasn't already.

Q. Don Hewitt, the creator of "60 Minutes," is supposed to be the most highly paid producer in television. How much does CBS pay Hewitt per year?—Brad Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

A. CBS reportedly pays Don Hewitt $2.5 million annually.

Shari—No. 1 in our eyes

Q. I know that "beauty is in the eyes of the beholder," but who, in your opinion, is the most beautiful black actress on TV?—Olivia Ellis, Phoenix, Ariz.

A. Surely one of the most beautiful is Shari Belafonte-Harper, 33, who plays the director of guest relations on the "Hotel" TV series.

Q. Since John Huston was born in Nevada, Mo., and served in the U.S. Army as a captain in World War II, how come when he died on Aug. 28 he was a citizen of Ireland? In your opinion, for which of his movies will he best be remembered?—Shirley Brewer, Chapel Hill, N.C.

A. In the 1950s, unhappy in Hollywood and distressed by high U.S. income taxes, Huston established residence in Galway, Ireland, and later became a citizen of that country. In 1978, he sold his Irish castle and bought a home outside Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, but retained his Irish citizenship. Huston was an eclectic director with no stamp or style of his own. Our Huston favorites are three films in which he directed Humphrey Bogart: "The Maltese Falcon" (1941), "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre" (1948) and "The African Queen" (1951).

John Poindexter and the President: A possible pardon?

Q. If Michael Deaver, Lyn Nofziger, Oliver North and John Poindexter are found guilty of certain crimes and sentenced to jail, will Ronald Reagan pardon them or let them serve time? What do you think?—B.C., Bethlehem, Pa.

A. We think the President will pardon them. Deaver and Nofziger are, after all, his old friends and associates from their California days. North and Poindexter are Reagan supporters who served their country and did what they believed, however erroneously, that their President wanted them to do.

The Queen Mother (using one fist) downs a draught

Q. I understand that Elizabeth, the Queen Mother of Britain, is a two-fisted drinker who, at 87, can drink most people under the table. True? —Barry Thomas, Vancouver, Canada

A. False. The Queen Mother is no two-fisted tippler.

Q. Can you identify any first-class hotels in this country that equip their bathrooms with condoms for their guests?—LeRoy H., Austin, Tex.

A. Not yet, although many hotels carry them in their gift shops. The Beverly Hills Hotel and the Beverly Hills Four Seasons are two such hotels.

Q. Who was the famous drama critic, now dead, who loved to prance about in women's clothes: Alexander Woollcott, Walter Winchell or George Jean Nathan?—Colin P., Carbondale, Ill.

A. None of the three critics you list fits your description. Perhaps you have in mind the late British drama critic Kenneth Tynan.

How Chris Sizemore emerged from behind The Three Faces of Eve

"I Wasn't Brave, I

WHEN THE movie The Three Faces of Eve came out in 1957, no one knew who the real Eve was. Even Joanne Woodward—who won an Oscar for her riveting portrayal of a young woman with multiple-personality disorder, a rare and baffling mental illness—did not know Eve's true identity.

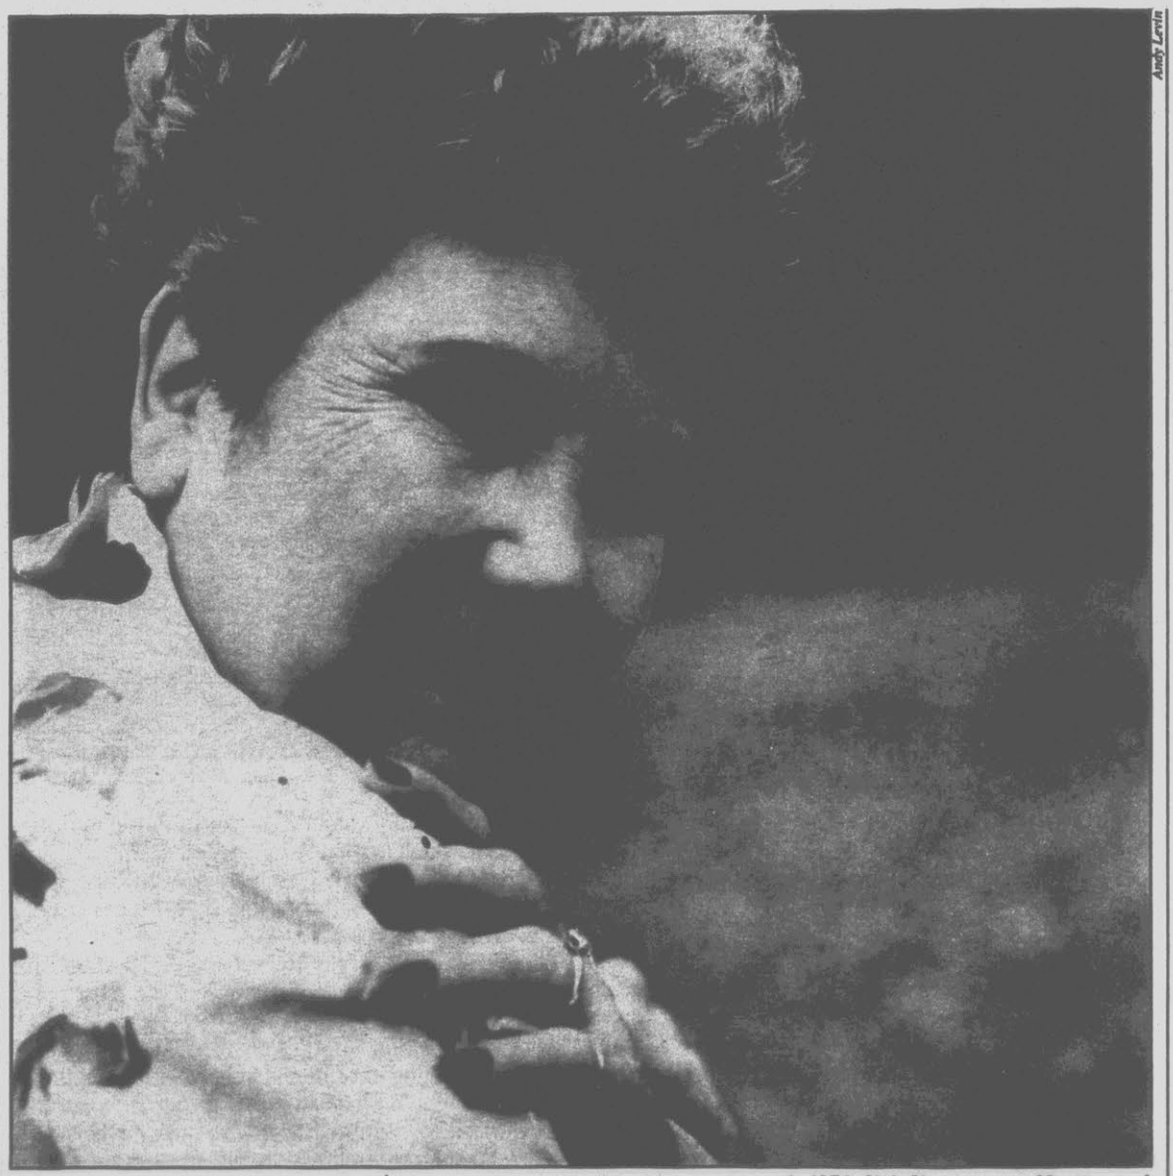
This is the story of Christine Costner Sizemore—the real Eve—and her life since the movie. It is a story of how she drove the demons from her life and learned to be a whole person.

"When the movie came out, I didn't see it," recalls Chris, now 60, demure, petite and softspoken. "My therapist at that time, Dr. Corbett Thigpen, who wrote the book on which the movie was based, told me not to. And he told me never to tell anybody I was Eve. He said if I did, my children wouldn't be able to go to school and my husband would lose his job. I like to believe that he was trying to protect me. There was such a stigma attached to mental illness—a mental patient could be treated like a leper.

"I wasn't even cured when the movie and book came out, though Dr. Thigpen insisted I was. He didn't feel there was a need for further treatment. I didn't know where to turn."

Thigpen today believes he never said Chris had fully recovered. "I hoped to God she was well," he says, "but you never really know in any psychiatric condition. I thought she had some problems of adjustment, but I did not consider them that serious. I had no idea she was still suffering from multiple-personality disorder. I admire her greatly for all she has done. I feel great friendship for her."

Chris tried four therapists over the succeeding years—to no avail. In despair, she attempted suicide. "I felt I was too great a burden on my family and that I would never get well," she says. Then her family moved to Fairfax, Va., where in 1970 she met Dr. Tony Tsitos, a psychiatrist. "The first thing he said was, 'You can get well,' " Chris recalls. "I'd always wanted to believe that, and for the first time I really did."



Andy Levin

In 1974, Chris Sizemore, now 60, was cured of multiple-personality disorder. Then she faced a greater challenge.

In 1974, after four years of intensive therapy with Dr. Tsitos, her own unique personality emerged. The 22 personalities—three at a time—that had lived inside Chris for almost her entire life, tearing her apart, finally disappeared. Then she faced an even greater challenge.

"Here I was, in my 40s," she says, "and I didn't even have a high school diploma. I had no skills, no training. I wanted to do something worthwhile with my life. But I didn't know who I was or who I wanted to be."

Then her twin sisters asked if she'd speak to their college classes about her illness. "I told them I didn't know how to speak before an audience, that I'd been isolated all my life," says Chris. "But, to be honest, that wasn't my greatest fear. No one besides my family and my therapist knew I was Eve. I was afraid of the rejection I might face from people."

"I talked with Dr. Tsitos about it," she adds, "and he told me, 'Be prepared for rejection, because the world doesn't necessarily love a mental patient. But it's better to do that than to go through the rest of your life scared to death that somebody's going to find out.' "

Chris decided to talk to the class. But instead of the 15 students she had expected, about 600 people were packed into an auditorium, including a large contingent from the media. "I was terrified," she recalls. "I shook so hard my knees were bumping together. I said that I was Eve of The Three Faces of Eve, that I had been well for a short while, that I really didn't know how to speak to a group of people, but if they wanted to know something about my life, I'd answer their questions."

"Here I was, in my 40s, with no skills. I didn't know who I was or who I wanted to be."

BY CHRISTOPHER PHILLIPS

Afterward, the audience gave her a standing ovation. "I was crying, they were crying," she says. "I felt so relieved that it wasn't a secret any longer. And I realized then that I had a calling: to continue to speak out and shed light on the plight of the mentally ill."

That evening she told her family it was no longer a secret that she was Eve. "All my son Bobby said was, 'Mom, I want to go tell my two best friends," Chris recalls. "My daughter, Taffy, who had a family, asked me not to tell anyone where she lived because she did not want attention drawn to her family. Even now, Taffy prefers not to talk to anyone about it. I can appreciate that."

None of Chris' fears came true. "Everyone treated us wonderfully," she says. "And that showed me that people wanted to learn about mental illness. They wanted to understand it."

"Fear keeps the mentally ill from seeking help," Chris adds. "And they're ashamed of their illness. Lots of people, even many in the medical community, still see mental illness as a disgrace. But it can happen to anybody. One in three households this year is going to have a mental patient. We need to accept it as we do any other illness. There is treatment for all, and many can be cured. Almost all mental patients can go on to lead a productive life."

Chris was divorced from her first husband, Ralph White, in 1953. Later that year, she married Don Sizemore. Today they live in Ramseur, N.C. "I think the main reason I was able to be cured," she says, "was because of my family's love and support. They stood by me in the darkest of times. I'm so grateful I had a family that wasn't ashamed I was mentally ill. Don sold practically everything we had so I could be treated. Most people have no idea what the families of mental patients have to go through. I know it had to be devastating for my family, but together we pulled through. We have a closeness, a special bond, that can get us through the worst of times."

"If she had had cancer, I wouldn't have left her," says Don, a slim, quiet man who is a retired electrician. "I looked at this as I would have any other illness."

Still, once Chris was cured, new conflicts arose in her family. "I think Don was worried when I started traveling, doing my own thing," she explains. "He was so concerned, he took six weeks off from work and went with me. Finally, I had to tell him not to come with me, at least for a while. I told him I had to do this by myself, to find out if I could make it on my own . . . Change can be scary. I wasn't brave about all this. I was determined."

Don also resented her newfound independence. "I told Don I was a part of this marriage and was going to have a say," says Chris, "and he was going to have to hear me out. And we worked it out. I understand the position Don was in. For all those years, he'd had to assume all responsibility for me. But I had made up my mind that my marriage, or anything else, wasn't going to stop me from being a whole person."

In 1977, Chris wrote her own story, I'm Eve. Every year, she delivers scores of speeches about the plight of the mentally ill. Recently, she returned to Augusta, Ga., where she dedicated a psychiatric hospital. "Augusta was where I received my first therapy," she says. "It was a triumph to go back there a well person." She also helped found the International Society for the Study of Multiple Personality and Dissociation and is setting up a support program for families of mental patients. And she serves on the boards of several mental-health associations and lobbies state legislatures and Congress on related issues.

One of her dearest projects is the toll-free hotline she is working to set up for the mentally ill. "Sometimes all it takes to make a difference for mental patients is for them to have somebody there who they know will listen," she explains. She herself receives numerous calls each week, at all hours, from victims of multiple-personality disorder.

"I didn't realize when I first sought help what a long journey I was embarking on," she says. "It was hard work—but it was worth it. Because the last 12 years have been the most exciting of my life. It's wonderful to be a well person—to look forward to getting up in the morning. At 60, I'm exploring a whole new world. Things that most people take for granted—feeling the wind against your face, smelling a flower's fragrance, feeling the texture of a tree—I'm enjoying like a child. Life is just really getting started for me."

Joanne Woodward won Oscar for portrayal of a woman with multiple personalities in 1957 film The Three Faces of Eve.

"I told my husband that I had to do this by myself, to see if I could make it on my own"

The Faces of Chris

For most of her life, Chris Sizemore's mind and body were inhabited by three personalities at a time. Their appearance, ages, intellect, interests and skills varied—some were left-handed, some right; some could drive, some couldn't; one was fun-loving and a bit promiscuous, one a devoted housewife; one was deaf, and one had arthritis. Among them:

The Freckle Girl, 15. She came first, at 2.

The Blind Lady, 28, really couldn't see.

The childish Banana Split Girl, with Don.

The Purple Lady was obsessed with purple.

Turkey Croquettes

Patties of light and dark turkey chunks, egg, bread, onion and parsley—it couldn't be easier, and it's a good reason to cook a turkey often, so you can have these delicious leftovers again.

3 slices whole-wheat bread, crusts off
1/4 cup milk
2½ cups coarsely chopped turkey, white and dark meat
1 cup coarsely chopped onions
2 eggs
1 teaspoon dried thyme
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
2 cups seasoned bread crumbs
3 tablespoons chopped Italian parsley
2 tablespoons paprika
3 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
1 cup corn oil
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
Giblet gravy (optional)

1. Soak whole-wheat bread in milk for 10 minutes. Remove bread, squeeze dry and shred. Reserve.
2. In a separate bowl, combine 1½ cups turkey, reserved bread, onions, eggs, thyme, salt and pepper. Toss well. Place mixture in a food processor fitted with a steel blade. Using pulse action, process until mixture is well-blended but not completely pureed. Fold in remaining 1 cup chopped turkey. Cover and refrigerate for 1 hour.
3. Combine bread crumbs, parsley, paprika and melted butter in a 9-inch pie plate. Stir together with a fork.
4. Shape chilled turkey mixture into 6 large patties. Coat in bread-crumb mixture and return, covered, to refrigerator for 1 more hour.
5. Place 1/2 cup corn oil and 1 tablespoon butter in a skillet. Over medium heat, cook croquettes 3 at a time, 7 minutes on one side, 5 minutes on other side. They should be golden. (Keep warm in 300° oven.) Proceed with remaining croquettes, adding more oil and butter as necessary.
6. Serve hot croquettes immediately with heated giblet gravy on top.

1/2 cup cooked spinach, squeezed dry and well chopped
2 ounces Boursin cheese

Ask Marilyn

BY MARILYN VOS SAVANT

I've been trying to get the answer to this problem since childhood. Three people went to a hotel and rented a room for $30, each paying $10 for his share. Later, the clerk discovered that the price of the room was only $25. He handed the bellman five $1 bills and asked him to return them to the three people. The bellman, not knowing how to divide $5 among three people, instead gave each person $1 and the rest to charity.

Here's the question: The three people originally paid $10 each, but each received $1 back, so they've now paid a total of $27 for the room. Add to that the $2 that the bellman gave away, and you have a total expenditure of $29 instead of $30. What happened to the other dollar?

—Robert T. Mann, Austin, Tex.

There is no missing dollar. The total expenditure is now only $27, accounted for by adding the $25 in the hands of the hotel clerk to the $2 in the hands of charity. In other words, the original $30 now is divided like this: the hotel clerk has $25, the guests have $3, and charity has $2.

The error arose when an asset ($2) was added to an expense ($27) instead of the other asset ($25), thereby "mixing apples and oranges" and giving us fruit salad instead of a correct answer.

My philosophy is very simple: "All that has been and all that will be, is now." What do you think?

—A.W. Claybrook, Fort Worth, Tex.

I think that maybe the future is just the past getting back at us.

What is the difference between skill and intelligence?

—Colleen Kelley, Spokane, Wash.

It's good for you. It's bad for you. It causes cancer. It prevents cancer. It makes you more fertile. It makes you less fertile. You should get on it. You should get off it.

All the conflicting information floating around about the Pill is enough to make you contemplate abstinence. We recommend a far less drastic measure: educate yourself. Gather all the information you can from reliable sources and, together with your doctor, make the decision that's right for you.

Here are a few facts to start you off. First, the Pill is actually many pills. Since its introduction in 1960, it's evolved from one high dosage product into many much lower in dosage. From 150 mcgs. of estrogen in 1960, down to 35 or less today. Yet, it's still the most effective form of birth control available to you other than sterilization.

What about the Pill and cancer? The Center for Disease Control has recently reported that women who took the Pill—even for 15 years—ran no higher risk of breast cancer than women who didn't.

The CDC also reported that ovarian and uterine cancer are substantially less common among women who use oral contraceptives. In addition, Pill users are less likely to develop benign breast disease, pelvic inflammatory disease (tubal infections) and ovarian cysts.

One of the Pill's greatest areas of misconception is conception. Does the Pill make you less fertile? Studies indicate that if you were fertile before you took the Pill, taking it should not affect your ability to have children later. However, some women may experience a short period of readjustment after discontinuing the Pill. Even so, they usually become pregnant soon.

Some women wonder if their bodies need an occasional rest from the Pill. The simple truth is, they don't. And switching to a less effective form of birth control increases your chances for unplanned pregnancy. So much for giving your body a "rest."

You've also probably heard that there are risks associated with taking the Pill. That is a fact. And you should know what those risks are. For example, if you are taking the Pill you should not smoke. Especially if you are over 35. Cigarette smoking is known to increase the risk of serious and possibly life-threatening adverse effects on the heart and blood vessels from Pill use. What's more, women with certain conditions or medical histories should not use the Pill.

Even if you're already on the Pill, you should see your doctor at least once a year.

Decisions about birth control aren't easy and shouldn't be taken lightly. Moreover, they should be based on information from first-rate sources, not secondhand advice. If you're a Pill user, read the patient information regularly. Learn everything you can about what you're taking.

Whether you're considering getting off the Pill or getting on it, the better informed you are, the better you'll feel about your decision.

Older People And Women More Honest

If you are 55 or over—or a woman—you probably have higher ethical standards than most others, according to the results of a questionnaire in Sylvia Porter's Personal Finance. People under 35 are "more opportunistic"—more willing, for example, to buy a low-cost VCR that may have been stolen or to keep a bank teller's overpayment. The psychologist Eda LeShan explains, "It's a time of immorality and selfishness, even in the highest offices, and the young...feel, 'What the hell, everything is terrible, so let me get mine'...But older people still have hope." Farrah Fawcett Plays Heiress Barbara Hutton

Heiress and her prince (Nicholas Clay)

Barbara Hutton—the seven-times-married (including Cary Grant, a prince and a count) Woolworth heiress who inherited $50 million when she was 21, in the depths of the Depression, and died in 1979 with $3500 in the bank—is the subject of an NBC miniseries starring Farrah Fawcett. The former Charlie's Angel made it plain to executive producer Lester Persky when they first met, he says, that "she understands what it's like to be misunderstood by the public, as Hutton was, and to have all your personal life in the tabloids, because it happened to her too." Poor Little Rich Girl: The Barbara Hutton Story. BOOKS

NERDS AND OTHER WORDS

The original Random House Dictionary of the English Language, published in 1966, was a hefty volume with just about everything you would want to know in the way of definitions, etymologies, pronunciations and anything else pertaining to words. The second edition, just published, is even heftier, with 50,000 new entries and various improvements and updates throughout its 2500 unabridged pages. It's as useful, if not exactly inexpensive ($79.95), a book as you'll have around the house.

Among the new words the RH editors have accepted into the living language since the first edition are bionic, chocoholic, preppy, nerd, wimp and yuppie. Hero sandwich is listed, along with its regional variants—submarine, grinder, hoagy, spunky and poor boy. There even is a kind word for ain't, with the Dictionary noting: "In some communities, it may be used freely in the informal conversation of cultivated speakers with those whom they consider their social equals . . ." Ain't it the truth!

Is Nothing Sacred?

As the year draws to its end, we note in the hectic world of politics that:

• Sen. Joe Biden (D., Del.) quit the race for the White House after the news media exposed his filching of speeches and his law school venture into plagiarism.

• Gov. Michael Dukakis (D., Mass.) confessed that it was his campaign manager, John Sasso, who had leaked the information to the press that caused Biden to quit the competition for the 1988 Democratic nomination.

• Pat Robertson, who resigned from the Baptist ministry to seek the Republican nomination, was outraged when the press revealed that his son had been born only 10 weeks after the Robertsons were wed in 1954.

• The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a leading contender for the Democratic nomination, admitted that his wife had been 2½ months pregnant when they were married in 1962 and that both he and his mother had been born out of wedlock.

Dede and Pat Robertson (l), Jesse and Jacqueline Jackson: No privacy on campaign trail

Are there any other potential exposés, major or minor, involving Presidential candidates that loom on the horizon of journalistic exposure? Reporters covering the various participants hint that one is a Romeo who specializes in affairs with chanteuses, that a second has had a staff mistress for years and that a third is linked financially to a Midwestern industrialist who "owns" him.

One or all of these stories may break momentarily, if they haven't already. It depends on how much and what type of evidence the investigative reporters have been able to unearth and on how deeply their editors and publishers believe in the readers' right to know. In these times, politicians do not share the dispensation, consideration and privacy accorded others. Moreover, gone are the days when the sex lives of Warren G. Harding, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson were regarded as off-limits. Today's politician must be Mr. Clean . . . or else!

Stanford, Class of 1991: One-Third Minorities

Blacks are making the grade at Stanford

Alert to former charges of elitism in their selection of freshmen, many of the nation's most prestigious and wealthy universities continue to target minority students for enrollment. At Stanford University in California, for example, a third of the entering class this fall consists of minority students: 245 Asian-Americans (16% of the class), 129 blacks (8.4%), 126 Mexican-Americans (8.2%) and 13 American Indians (0.9%).

The Stanford Class of 1991, which numbers 1529, was selected from 16,884 applicants—3080 of whom had 4.0 grade-point averages and more than 2650 of whom had combined Scholastic Aptitude Test scores higher than 1400 (of a possible 1600). In addition, more than 9600 ranked in the top 10% of their high school graduating classes.

To attract more applicants from minority groups, Stanford has prepared a series of 24-page tabloids for blacks, Chicanos and American Indians. Interested students should write to: Undergraduate Admissions Office, Stanford University, Old Union, Stanford, Calif. 94305.

Should the increase generate strong resistance at the box office, the exhibitors will roll it back. If not, the motion picture theater-owners in other communities will gradually and proportionally raise their admission prices too.

What's New At Disney

BY MARK GOODMAN

DISNEY HAS changed.

Once upon a time, the words "Walt Disney" evoked, for most people, the magical worlds of animated feature films and comic books that set forth the misadventures of Mickey, Goofy, Donald and their pals. Later, an excited public was invited to enter these worlds themselves—to visit the theme parks Disneyland and Disney World and mingle with their famous cartoon friends.

But when Walt Disney died in 1966, The Walt Disney Co., its guiding spirit gone, fell into a deep slumber. Mickey, Donald and the gang lost their power to enchant, vitality waned, new ideas did not spring forth and profits dwindled. Corporate raiders hovered about with the idea of selling off Disney's assets—the theme parks, the shelves of animated films—like hubcaps at midnight.

That was then. Today, with the huge success of its blockbuster live-action films, TV ventures and renovated theme parks, the Disney magic—a different, up-to-date magic—is back. (And so, of course, is the money.) And the studio is working to keep it that way. (See "Coming From Disney," next page.)

The Prince who woke up the sleeping organization was Michael Eisner. Three years ago, Roy E. Disney, nephew of Walt Disney, joined with investors to hire Eisner away from Paramount Pictures to revive the Disney empire. As chairman and chief of The Walt Disney Co., Eisner, 45, has proved to be the tonic Disney needed—that rare individual of spirit and imagination who also knows how to balance the books.

First, he got Disney back into the live-action film market. Eisner's tally to date is five box-office successes under the Touchstone logo: Down and Out in Beverly Hills, Ruthless People, Outrageous Fortune, The Color of Money and Tin Men. In television, Eisner secured distribution rights to NBC's The Golden Girls and reintroduced The Disney Sunday Movie on ABC, with himself as host. He revamped Disneyland and Disney World, building new hotels on the grounds and persuading his friend, Star Wars creator George Lucas, to design new rides. And he moved the Disney cartoon classics off the warehouse shelves and onto videocassettes, releasing one or two a year.

Aaron Rapoport

The result: Disney's profits have tripled (more than $247 million last fiscal year, against $2.5 billion in revenues) and its stock value quintupled. All this from a man whom many in Hollywood had predicted would flop, if only because of his TV background. For, despite his successful eight-year tour at Paramount, he still was considered a television type, and three years ago a barrier still existed between movies and TV.

At his desk at Disney's Art Deco studios in Hollywood, Eisner seems impervious to both praise and criticism. "The truth is," he says, "all that television training was a big help to me. That's because of the voracious appetite of the TV schedule: You have to produce good ideas, and lots of them. Barry Diller [now head of 20th Century-Fox] and I had won Emmies by the time we got to Paramount, but people insisted we'd be disasters as studio heads. Now people are asking, 'Where can we get a TV guy?' " Eisner laughs. "The secret is to hire someone about whom people say, 'Are you crazy?' And you don't hire someone to do the same job he has done before. You hire him to do something new, so that people say, two years later, 'Where do we get a guy like this?' "

The son of an attorney, Eisner grew up in New York City. He graduated from Denison University in Ohio in 1964, majoring in English literature and drama. By 1966, he had begun what was to be a

He tells about a time during these years (1966-76) when he became a vice president in charge of children's programming. "Since I knew nothing at all about children's entertainment," he says, "I took my wife and son—he was only 6 months old at the time—out to the old Bruckner Drive-In in the Bronx to see Pinocchio. I'd never seen anything like it. It was fabulous. Sitting there, watching this marvelous puppet, I couldn't believe I was in the same field, putting commercials in Quick Draw McGraw cartoons. From that point on, I was obsessed by Disney."

After 10 years at ABC, he joined Barry Diller at Paramount, where the pair made movie history. For instance: Eisner was pulled over to the roadside one day by a California state trooper. This slender incident gave him an idea for a movie, and Beverly Hills Cop became a box-office bonanza. Tales Eisner was told of a friendly watering hole in Boston swelled into Cheers. During the eight years that Diller and Eisner ruled Paramount, they produced an unrivaled string of triumphs: Raiders of the Lost Ark, Saturday Night Fever, Terms of Endearment, An Officer and a Gentleman, Ordinary People. After that list, it was on to Disney.

What's Eisner's formula for picking a hit? "It's hard to describe," he says, "but you know when it's there. It's the script you put on top of the pile at your bedside, the one which confirms that the grass is greener on the other side. To me, the familiar is boring, excessive violence is anti-social, and stupid is just stupid. In this business, the script is the base of the pyramid. I'd rather hire 10 good writers than one big-name star. And it's self-defeating to be obsessed with any one star or director. If you can't get Steven Spielberg—well, there's another Spielberg coming of age in Columbus, Ohio, or someplace."

Then he adds thoughtfully: "Of course, if we still had Walt Disney, we wouldn't need anyone else. We could save a fortune in scripts."

Yet Eisner plays it both ways. He has hired a lot of behind-the-camera talent, but he also hired Bette Midler, a longtime favorite of his, to do Down and Out in Beverly Hills, followed by Ruthless People and Outrageous Fortune. Tom Hanks, the most sought-after comic actor in Hollywood these days, has signed a three-picture deal with Disney, and Eisner personally lured Carol Burnett into a movie/TV agreement. He plainly has a nose for who's hot and who's not.

Eisner lives in Los Angeles with his wife, the former Jane Breckinridge, and their sons Breck, 17, Eric, 14, and Anders, 9. "My priorities are simple," he says. "My family comes first and Disney second. When I have to choose between them, I'll always choose the family, whether it's a school play or a hockey game or whatever. I also want to keep them out of the spotlight, and they're happy to stay out of it. After all, the corporate world doesn't impress kids."

When I ask about his role in the Disney legend, Eisner laughs and waves me off. "I'm not touching that one," he says. "That's like shooting yourself in the foot. Look, there's nothing revolutionary about my approach to movies. I go on what catches my eye and where the trends are. Today, the blockbuster movies are for everybody, like E.T. and Crocodile Dundee. If you'll notice, they're usually of a higher quality than the 'niche' movies. There's no 'niche' market that we're trying to achieve."

"My theory is, don't try to second-guess the audience," he adds. "It's like, in basketball, you don't throw the ball all the way down the court or shoot for three-pointers all night. The trick is simply to take quality shots from close-in. That's what we're doing here—taking quality shots, over and over again, and not worrying about the audience. If we make good pictures, they'll find us."

When Walt Disney died in 1966, the Disney company, its guiding spirit gone, fell into a slumber. Vitality waned and profits dwindled. Today, the Disney magic—a different, up-to-date magic—is back.

Walt Disney in 1966. "If we still had Walt," says Eisner, "we wouldn't need anyone else."

Katharine Hepburn

KATHARINE HEPBURN IS THE ONLY movie star I know who lives right around the corner from me. It's a brownstone house on East 49th Street in Manhattan, and sometimes her chauffeur is sitting outside in the car, waiting to take her shopping or up to Connecticut, where she has a country place. A few years ago, we had a big snowstorm, and a neighbor reported that Miss Hepburn, who was then about 75 years old, was out shoveling the sidewalk and the stoop.

"Miss Hepburn, why are you shoveling the snow?" he demanded.

"Because it's on the ground," the great lady sensibly replied and went right on shoveling.

She was 78 years old last week (she's a Scorpio, and you know how they are!) and is having a perfectly splendid year. She has written a wonderfully funny and insightful book about the making of The African Queen and what it was like being in Africa with Bogie and Lauren Bacall and John Huston. She overcame her distaste for interviews to do one with Newsweek and another with Barbara Walters for 20/20 on ABC. And last month she was up in Vancouver filming a two-hour NBC movie called Guest Appearance, all about a famous woman who moves in with an average, everyday family to win a bet. It'll be shown later this season.

All this is pretty good for an actress who won her first Oscar 54 years ago (as the theater prodigy in Morning Glory) but whose earlier Broadway performance drew the nasty critical remark from Dorothy Parker that Hepburn had run "the gamut of emotions from A to B."

Hepburn grew up in Hartford, Conn., where her father, a doctor, insisted on cold baths every morning for the six Hepburn kids and where her mother campaigned for women's suffrage. She attended Bryn Mawr, one of the toniest of women's colleges, and was married briefly to a Philadelphian named Smith. Can you see her as Mrs. Smith? I can't.

Her own true love was Spencer Tracy. They made nine films together and carried on a long and apparently deeply felt affair (he was married and would not divorce) until his death.

While we think of her successes—such as On Golden Pond, The Lion in Winter and Guess Who's Coming to Dinner—she turned out a series of flops in the 1930s, and in 1938 movie exhibitors voted her "box office poison." But the following year, she bounced back with a vengeance, starring on Broadway as Tracy Lord, the heroine of The Philadelphia Story. In 1940, she repeated the role in Hollywood, with Cary Grant and Jimmy Stewart.

Miss Hepburn likes to wear pants, to play tennis and golf, and to paint and sculpt ("badly," she confesses). She says it's a man's world but doesn't complain since, she admits, "I have lived like a man."

BORN: Nov. 8, 1909, in Hartford, Conn.
FILMS: Include A Bill of Divorcement*, 1932 (debut); Morning Glory, 1933 (Oscar); Little Women, 1933; Alice Adams, 1935; Stage Door, 1937; Bringing Up Baby, 1938; Holiday, 1938; The Philadelphia Story, 1940; Woman of the Year, 1942; Adam's Rib, 1949; The African Queen, 1951; Pat and Mike, 1952; The Rainmaker, 1956; Long Day's Journey Into Night, 1962; Guess Who's Coming to Dinner, 1967 (Oscar); The Lion in Winter, 1968 (Oscar); On Golden Pond, 1981 (Oscar).

BRADY'S BITS

When Alan Jay Lerner wrote the Broadway musical Coco, about the great French fashion designer Coco Chanel, it was Coco who decided who would play her. When the producer, Freddie Brisson, brought in his wife, Rosalind Russell, Coco complained, "The woman never draws breath." Miss Hepburn then appeared. Kate, who usually talks a lot, had the good sense to shut up and let Coco chatter on. She got the role. Said Chanel later, "She's very nice but doesn't have much to say."

SPEND A LITTLE MORE...AND GET THE VERY BEST!

All "sound wave" pest repellers are not alike. And that's why the ONLY model now offered by the HOME SHOPPING CLUB is truly the BEST one — This is the first (and only) ultrasonic device to be registered by the Canadian Agriculture Department for sale in Canada as a repellent for both rats and mice (PCP ACT Reg. #19674)! This — and not any 'cheap' imitation — is the first (and only) ultrasonic pest repeller manufacturer to be recognized with membership in the National Pest Control Association. And this is the one (and only) pest repeller that offers you a FULL 90-DAY UNCONDITIONAL MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE...and the incomparable quality of 'Made In USA' electronic craftsmanship!

DANGEROUS POISONS AND DISGUSTING TRAPS? UGH!

DRIVE UNWANTED PESTS OUT OF YOUR HOME SAFELY — with powerful, pulsating ultrasonic sound that only the pests can hear. If you have a problem with mice, rats, fleas, or other unwanted pests, the ULTRASONIC PEST REPELLER can repel them starting immediately by 'broadcasting' high-frequency sound waves at 32 to 62 KHZ (or 32,000 to 62,000 cycles per second) that people and pets can't hear...but that make rodents, fleas and other pests scatter! It costs less than 1¢ per day to operate and may eliminate totally the need for costly poisons and traps — and it's completely harmless to dogs, cats, birds, fish or farm animals. It won't interfere with radio or television sets, electrical appliances, garage door openers or pacemakers. And you can use it SAFELY AND EFFECTIVELY in houses, apartments, offices, barns, stables — even boats and RVs!

WARNING! Don't confuse our top-rated ULTRASONIC (Pestrepeller made in the U.S.A. by Sonic Technology*...) with those non-working, 'cheap' imitations advertised elsewhere for less than $10! Our ULTRASONIC PESTREPELLER guarantees you safe, fast, reliable pest repelling capability.

'Poor Little Rich Girl': Love And Scandal

By Evan Levine

Passion, romance and scandalous behavior are key elements in the NBC miniseries "Poor Litle Rich Girl: The Barbara Hutton Story," which centers on the lavish and self-destructive life of famed heiress Barbara Hutton. (It airs Monday, Nov. 16 and Tuesday, Nov. 17.) But Bruce Davison, who plays Jimmy Donahue, the flamboyant cousin and confidant of Hutton (portrayed by Farrah Fawcett), says that much of the juicy material didn't even make it into the script.

"Donahue did the most insane things," says Davison, best known for his roles in the movies "The Strawberry Statement" (1970) and "Willard" (1971). "A lot of the crazy stuff he did didn't make it into the movie; the people at the network were concerned about how much of the stuff he did should be included. But he did the most amazing things. He would dig up Fifth Avenue in the middle of the night, or put a corpse in a cab and give the driver 10 dollars before the guy knew what was happening. Despite the craziness, he had a heart and soul that were really joyous."

Donahue and Hutton were brought up together as children. "They had no parents," Davison explains. "As they got older, he was incredibly jealous and possessive of her.

"But he was a bad influence on her. And he did crazy things for her. One time he stepped off an ocean liner in his pajamas, brandishing a revolver, telling the press that he was her press secretary and no one could talk to her. Their relationship was really like a dance of death to the grave."

In researching the role, Davison was able to talk to people who had known Donahue in Tangier, where much of the footage was shot. "I had heard about him, about these decadent parties he gave. But everyone I talked to had a story. He's a dishy character to talk about."

Farrah Fawcett stars as Woolworth heiress Barbara Hutton in the five-hour NBC miniseries "Poor Little Rich Girl: The Barbara Hutton Story." It airs Monday, Nov. 16 and Tuesday, Nov. 17.

"In one party scene, I asked if Donahue could be drunk," explained Davison, "and the director said sure. Then I decided that it would be great to use the bannister. So we ended up having various characters slide down the bannister, breaking things, in this wild mess."

Davison claims that many veiwers will tune in because it plays on what everyone wants to see — the richest woman in the world suffering. "But even apart from that," he promises, "it's really a fascinating story."

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: Are actresses Missy Gold ("Benson") and Tracey Gold ("Growing Pains") related? — HEIDI BUEHLER, GRIFFITH, IND.

Tracey Gold is the eldest daughter of a show-biz family. Her younger sister Missy appeared on "Benson," while another sister, Brandy, starred on ABC's "Baby Makes Five." Their father,Harry Gold, is an actors' agent, and their mother, Bonnie, had her own radio show in Montana.

Dear Michele: Please settle a bet between my spouse and me. Who is Debra Winger's husband, and who is Tom Cruise's wife? — LIZ THOMPSON, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

Winger married actor Timothy Hutton on March 16, 1986. Their first child, Emmanuel Noah Hutton, was born April 29, 1987. Winger is currently at work with Hutton on her first post-parenthood film, "Summer Lightning." Tom Cruise and actress Mimi Rogers exchanged vows on May 9, 1987.

Dear Michele: I'd like to know the name of the 1979 made-for-TV movie starring Bette Davis. This film had a profound effect on me, but no one remembers the title. — LORRAINE E. LAING, LAUREL, MD.

I believe you are referring to "Strangers: The Story of a Mother and Daughter," also known as "Strangers." Davis played a resentful widowed mother of an estranged daughter who returnshome. Gena Rowlands co-starred as Davis' daughter. Davis won an Emmy for her socko performance.

Dear Michele: I know William Daniels and Bonnie Bartlett (who play Mark and Ellen Craig) of NBC's "St. Elsewhere" are married. My question is, for how long? Do they have any children, and did they really meet at the University of Pennsylvania? — ANNETTE DECKER, BENSALEM, PENN.

Daniels met Bartlett at Northwestern University, where he was a teaching assistant and fellow drama student. They both graduated with a B.A. in drama, moved to New York and married in 1951. Despite their on-screen estrangement, Daniels and Bartlett have one of those Hollywood rarities — a successful, two-career marriage. In the early '60s, the couple adopted two sons, Michael, now 24, and Robert, now 21.

Please address questions to Michele Will Tell, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 2315, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163. Because of the volume of mail received, personal replies cannot be sent.

Although most moth damage occurs during the summer months with woolens, warm weather garments that are not properly cleaned can also be attacked by insects. So, just don't forget about your warm weather garments as you change to your winter wardrobe.

TV Chatter

Valerie Harper may be out, but Willard is in! TV's craziest weatherman, Willard Scott of the "Today" show, is co-starring on "Valerie's Family" as Peter Poole, the Hogans' next-door neighbor and husband of Patty (played by Edie McClurg). Did Scott have any trouble making the transition from his unscripted shenanigans on "Today" to the structured silliness of a sitcom? "They're two different animals," says Scott. "I'm not a structured person. I'm a free-form, ad-libbing fool! If only I can learn to memorize my lines, I'll be all right. But it's totally different from 'Today.' I'm in love." Scott confesses to being as star-struck as any tourist visiting Tinseltown. "Valerie's Family" is shot on the lot previously owned by MGM and now owned by the show's producer, Lorimar. Scott recalled the excitement of his first day on the set: "For me, little Willie Scott from Alexandria, Va., to walk out the same set where they filmed 'Gone with the Wind,' 'Singin' in the Rain' and 'The Wizard of Oz' ... well, all I can say is, 'Toto, I don't think we're in Alexandria anymore!'"

Thank goodness for sexism in the State Department! Without it, Barbara Babcock, one of TV's classiest actresses, might now be Barbara Babcock, Madame Ambassador, instead of co-star of CBS's "The Law and Harry McGraw." After graduating from prestigious Wellesley College, she interviewed with the State Department, planning on a career as a diplomat. Babcock quickly realized Foggy Bottom was no place for a woman when a career ambassador confided to her that the most she could hope to become was a glorified secretary. Instead, the young woman enrolled in acting school. The long-term result: an Emmy Award for best actress as the passionate Grace Gardner on "Hill Street Blues." And to think she might still be in the steno pool at State! "I probably would have been happy as a diplomat, but I'm happier as an actor because diplomats don't get to play different people," she says.

On "The Law and Harry McGraw," Babcock plays Boston Brahmin lawyer Ellie Maginnis. There's just one problem with her new series, however. How are we supposed to believe that the patrician Ellie is chasing after lowlife detective Harry McGraw (played by Jerry Orbach)? "Ellie is not chasing after Harry," Babcock says firmly. "We respect each other, but we come from different worlds."

Until her recent co-starring role on "The Tracey Ullman Show," Julie Kavner seemed in danger of becoming a permanent resident of second bananaland. After a career-making role as Valerie Harper's lovelorn sibling Brenda on "Rhoda," Kavner was fast becoming a question in a Trivial Pursuit game. Kavner insists, however, that she has kept busy since the heady days of the '70s. "I was in several pictures, like 'National Lampoon Goes to the Movies,' which it didn't. It went straight to cable. I also did quite a bit of theater." These days, Kavner doesn't have to worry about her career.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Exercise guru Jane Fonda takes on weighty matters

By Frank Lovece

Jane Fonda

The addition of weight training for women to a line that has stressed aerobic conditioning is a sign, says the star, of the times. "When we opened the original Workout studio, women would come seven days a week," says Fonda. "Then, about three years ago, these same women would take an aerobics class three days a week, and the other days would go somewhere to work out with weights. It became clear that we had to add weights to the Workout."

It also became clear that safety precautions had to be built into the tape to help prevent another injury lawsuit like the one that eventually drove the original "Jane Fonda's Workout" from the market. "We were very careful," Fonda asserts, "to show people the right way to pick up weights and how to hold them properly. We're very careful to tell people what signs to look out for."

The fitness-video boom Fonda initiated has allowed other women instructors, like Kathy Smith, to flourish in a field dominated by the likes of Jack La Lanne.

"I know Kathy and I like Kathy," says Fonda. "Among all of us, we're only touching the tip of the iceberg. I think it's real good for people to try different things." Her own success, she feels, "is partly that while I'm not an expert or a doctor, I am a communicator. It's not just that I'm an actress; other actresses have tried this, too. But I've been exercising for 30 years, and when I believe in something strongly I have a real ability to communicate it.

"When I was young," she elaborates, "I had a screwed-up image of myself and thought I was fat. And doctors gave me amphetamines and diuretics. It took me a long time to recover. I think that's another reason I have an ability to talk to women and particularly to young girls. I've had that kind of anxiety," she confesses. "I've had that kind of warfare with food."

CINDY SAYS

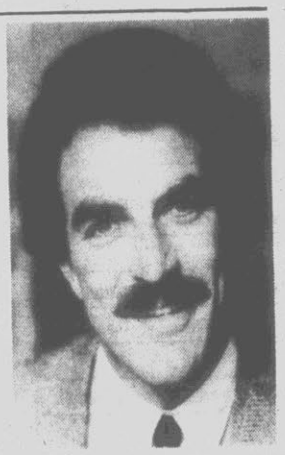
Monroe: A Miami show; Selleck: Broadway bound

By Cindy Adams

Marilyn Monroe will rise yet again. "Marilyn ... In Her Own Words," a one-woman show exploring MM's life, is coming at us. Playing Marilyn will be Julie Miller, holder of the title "Atlantic City Entertainer of the Year." I don't know which year. The musical/drama is headed for Broadway and then HBO. It will break in at the Castle, the new Miami Beach hotel owned by Abe Hirschfeld, who, for an hour, was nearly NY's lieutenant governor. Hirschfeld the Humble has built in his hotel a 1000-seat theater called The Hirschfeld.

Marilyn Monroe

After six months the six-hour miniseries "Hemingway," which airs in April and stars Stacy Keach, finally wrapped in Puerto Rico, where the Cuban sequences were shot. Keach stood the company of 70 to a fiesta.



Tom Selleck

Tom Selleck is going legit. This young man's looking to go to Broadway. Nobody involved will speak to a newscreature as scruffy as myself. But somebody, namely myself, will tell you what I know. Tom Selleck wants to do a New York stage show. He has cast his bread upon the waters, and it has already come back buttered. Negotiations will be protracted. They're only in the early stages. But they're inching along. The production is costly enough to require multiple producers. In terms of production, we're looking at a year from now. The house will be the Neil Simon. Selleck has ordered No Publicity. Grown men are shivering lest this scorching news get out. Lordy, I haven't seen this much fear since the barber nicked John Gotti's face.

Farrah Fawcett Still Guards Her Privacy

By Jon Burlingame

HOLLYWOOD — After more than a decade of media attention, one would expect that Farrah Fawcett would be accustomed to the cameras, the questions, the exposure. Not yet, it seems, and her apparent shyness provides a surprising parallel to the title character of "Poor Little Rich Girl: The Barbara Hutton Story," the five-hour miniseries airing Monday, Nov. 16 and Tuesday, Nov. 17 on NBC.

"Poor Little Rich Girl" chronicles the sad, sometimes scandalous and frequently tragic life of Barbara Hutton, the heiress whose fortune bought her seven husbands, worldwide fame and little happiness. Based on the best seller by C. David Heymann, it also stars Kevin McCarthy, Bruce Davison, Burl Ives (as F.W. Woolworth, Hutton's grandfather) and James Read (as Cary Grant, Hutton's third husband).

"We are such opposites," Fawcett says. But like Hutton, she guards her privacy and tends to avoid the press. "I find it difficult talking to someone I don't know, much less somebody who's going to go and write down things that I say, because I feel I have been burned, misquoted, misinterpreted."

Chita Rivera May Be Her Own Worst Critic

By Lynn Hoogenboom

It was for one line that Chita Rivera agreed to play Risa Dickstein, Sydney Biddle Barrows' no-nonsense lawyer in "Mayflower Madam."

"When she's in the detective's office, she says, 'If you call all the girls in and insist on ruining their lives, I guess I'm just going to have to call in 472 — or however many there were — senators and lawyers.' " Rivera recalls. "It was probably just for that one line that I took it. She really had the ammunition."

In fact, the most fascinating part of the whole saga of Barrows, the debutante turned madam, is how her lawyer got her off with a mere $7,000 fine when the cops reportedly had the goods on her. Unfortunately, that's not what the CBS movie that airs Sunday, Nov. 15 is about.

"It was this lawyer who did it for her," says Rivera. "But it's a very small part. Don't drop your pencil when you're watching 'Mayflower Madam.' You'll miss me."

Breeders' Cup Ought To Be A Real Horse Race

By Marty Linehan

NBC's big project this week is the presentation of the Breeders' Cup from Hollywood Park on Saturday, Nov. 21. The network started this annual event as a sort of Super Bowl of racing, a year-end wrap-up with the possibility of influencing the choice for horse of the year.

So far this hasn't happened, but NBC has presented some really good races in this $10 million extravaganza. The network has also presented some good race commentators.

For the fourth year in a row, the NBC mikes will be graced, along with other NBC regulars, by Sharon Smith. NBC recently signed her to a multi-year contract, so from now on she'll be a network regular herself.

Smith started broadcasting in 1970 and joined ESPN as a race commentator back in 1981. Since then she has covered — for the cable network — the Kentucky Derby and the Jersey Derby.

* On Nov. 15, ESPN will present its second of eight Sunday-night professional football games when it features the San Diego Chargers hosting the Los Angeles Raiders. The Chargers have been a surprise team, and if the replacement games are counted, they are right up there shooting for the playoffs. As for the Sunday-afternoon games, the best match-ups appear to be the New York Giants vs. the Philadelphia Eagles and the Dallas Cowboys at the New England Patriots on CBS. The one late game will have the Cincinnati Bengals visiting the Atlanta Falcons on NBC.

* ABC's "Monday Night Football" could be a good one on Nov. 16. The Denver Broncos host the Chicago Bears in what might be a preview of Super Bowl XXIII.

* ESPN cable gives us a chance to see Holy Cross' Heisman Trophy candidate Gordie Lockbaum when the Crusaders play Villanova on Thursday, Nov 19. Lockbaum is something out of the past: A manwho plays both offense and defense.

* Saturday, Nov. 21, should prove to be one of the best college football days of the dwindling season. ABC will have a double-header, Ohio State vs. Michigan and UCLA vs. USC, two traditional rivalries that could determine this year's Rose Bowl rivals. If that's not enough, CBS will have Notre Dame vs. Penn State.

* For those who can't wait for the basketball season, ESPN will have North Carolina playing highly touted Syracuse in the Tip-Off Classic in Springfield, Mass., on Saturday, Nov. 21.

Namath Has Changed Little

Joe Namath has changed remarkably little since his playing days; the leonine head, Roman nose and quick smile are all still in evidence. Of course, his moustache is long gone, his hair is shorter and a touch of gray has been added, but he is still unmistakably Broadway Joe.

But Namath is now a father and husband, and he picks his work more carefully than he did in his carefree bachelor days. "The Mobile Opera has been in touch with me about doing some work down there this spring and I'm still considering the offer," he says."I'd gotten away from theater because of my daughter, Jessica."

For now, Namath's traveling is limited to his weekend duties as an NBC color commentator. This marks a broadcasting comeback for Namath, who experienced an unhappy season two years ago as the third voice on ABC's "Monday Night Football."

"There were some difficult times in the course of the season," he admits. "The only sad part for me was not having an opportunity to do it a second year to correct my mistakes."

Namath seems wonderfully at ease with himself. Has he mellowed since his days as the Jets' brash bachelor quarterback? He flashes his still-boyish grin and replies, "I find the more I move along, the more mellow I become."

• SUM MAGIC! The prime number 37 has an unusual characteristic. Multiply it by 3 and the result is 111. Multiply it by six and the result is 222.

Now then, try multiplying it by 9, then 12, 15, 18, 21, 24, and 27. In each of these steps, the result is the same — a trio of similar numbers.

WHAT'S THE PROBLEM?

Solve this by experimentation if you like. However, there is a key to a quicker solution in letters of the words FAST ENOUGH, at top.

Assign zero to F, one to A, two to S, etc. Then, 426 x 315, etc.: 134190.

• NAME GAME! Six girls and six boys in the Hildebrand family have first names consisting of letters in their last name. All are fairly short names. Can you find a name for each?

ON STAGE! What can you draw to complete this dot picture? To find out, add lines from 1 to 2, 3, etc.

FUNNY FACE! Apply crayons or colored pencils neatly to this circus scene. Code: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Green. 7—Dk. brown. 8—Orange.

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.
