Airliner Breaks In 3 Pieces At Denver Airport

By JULIA RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) — Witnesses said a Continental Airlines jet veered back and forth before it crashed on takeoff in falling snow, killing 26 people and injuring 56, but an official said today there were no crosswinds and the airport can operate safely in snowstorms.
The DC-9, with 82 people aboard, broke into three pieces and turned upside down, and 11 survivors were in critical condition today. The Sunday afternoon crash was the deadliest in Stapleton International Airport's 58-year history.

Flight 1713 originated in Oklahoma City, stopped in Denver and was delayed by a snowstorm. It was en route to Boise, Idaho, when it crashed at 2:16 p.m. MST.
A team of investigators was going through the wreckage today, but said it might be months before a cause was known.
Dr. Norm Dinerman of Denver General Hospital, who helped to coordinate treatment efforts, said today that the fact that any passengers emerged alive was due to "tremendous luck, divine providence and the fact that the airplane had not gained a lot of altitude."

Rescue efforts were hampered by bad weather, blinding snow, darkness and ice on the roads and runways. Some survivors were trapped in the wreckage for up to six hours.
Witnesses said the twin-engine DC-9 was barely off the ground when the accident happened.

"That flight lasted five seconds, maybe six," said Navy Lt. Curtis Renfro, an aviation maintenance officer, who saw the crash from another Continental flight landing on a parallel runway.
"The last time I saw it (the plane), it was grossly tilted. He was actually up on his starboard wing. When that happens, the pilot tries to flip to left to correct. He may have overcompensated," said Renfro.
Kevin Fleming, airport operations manager, said about an eighth of inch of wet snow was on the runway, but conditions were normal for heavy snowstorms at Stapleton. "There were no other problems with departures before the incident," he said.

Asked today whether the airport should have been closed, Stapleton spokesman Richard Boulware said, "I don't believe so."
"There were no crosswinds," he said on NBC-TV's "Today" show.
Bob Johnson, chief of National Transportation Safety Board's Denver office, said up to 50 investigators may be involved in the next seven to 10 days.

The plane's black box, containing cockpit voice and data recorders, was recovered and being held for the investigators, but Johnson said a report on the probable cause may not be available for months.
"The right wing dropped, and we veered to the right," said passenger Fred H. Helpenstell, a 56-year-old physician from Nampa, Idaho.

Commuter Plane Falls During Wisconsin Landing

CHICAGO (AP) — A twin-engine King Air plane on its way from Chicago to Baraboo, Wis., crashed today near Madison, Wis., killing as many as eight people, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said.
"The pilot was on his descent toward Baraboo when he radioed 'Mayday, mayday' several times," said FAA spokesman Mort Edelstein in Chicago.
"We think he crashed in a sparsely populated area, like farmland" about 23 miles southeast of Madison, Edelstein said. "It looks like eight dead," he said.
Debra Cunningham, a dispatcher for the Jefferson County sheriff's department, said the plane crashed about 8:20 a.m. today northwest of Fort Atkinson near Highway 12.
"All I know is that we have a plane crash and we're investigating," she said.
"I was in bed," said Mar-Jean Dahlgren, who lives across the road from where the plane crashed. "Then all of a sudden I heard this loud boom."
About 50 police and rescue workers were at the scene, she said.
Light rain was falling and there was 8-mile visibility when the plane went down, Edelstein said.

He said the plane left Chicago's Meigs Field at 7:51 a.m. CST today and lost contact with Chicago radar 23 miles southeast of Madison, where the plane crashed.
FAA investigators were on the way to the crash scene, Edelstein said.
Thirteen other people died in small-plane crashes, including three accidents that killed four people each, in Arizona, Texas and Pennsylvania.
Four California residents died Sunday after their light plane developed engine problems and crashed just short of an emergency landing at the Grand Canyon airport in Grand Canyon Village, Ariz., a Coconino County sheriff's spokesman said.
In Texas, four people aboard a single-engine Piper Cherokee died Saturday when the plane crashed in a field south of Lancaster Municipal Airport, said Dallas County Sheriff's department spokesman Ray LePere.
In St. Marys, Pa., four people were killed Saturday night when their single-engine Mooney 200 crashed minutes after taking off for Muncie, Ind., said Pete Nelson, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman.
In Spartansburg, Pa., a man was killed Saturday when his single-engine Piper Warrior II crashed.

'Orange' Papers Opened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to withhold from public disclosure voluminous chemical company documents about Agent Orange, a herbicide suspected of causing cancer among Vietnam veterans.
The court, without comment, let stand an order unsealing documents from a lawsuit that led to a $180 million settlement for alleged victims of Agent Orange.
The highly publicized case was settled before U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein in New York City in 1984, when seven chemical companies agreed to set up a $180 million fund for the veterans and their families. More than 120,000 people eventually may claim benefits.

Weinstein then ordered the chemical company documents unsealed unless the firms could show a need to keep particular papers secret. The companies had argued that trade secrets might be revealed, hurting them financially.
Weinstein's ruling was upheld by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last June.
The appeals court said that although a document-by-document review of the material will be time-consuming, any inconvenience for the companies "certainly is outweighed by the enormous public interest in the Agent Orange litigation and the compelling need ... to evaluate fully the efficacy of settling this litigation."

The chemical companies argued that unsealing the documents would violate the terms of the $180 million settlement agreement.
The Vietnam Veterans of America said it will assemble a team of experts to begin going through the documents as they are made available over the next 60 days.

Optimism Over Budget Talks Spurs Advance On Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — Optimism that Congress and the White House will agree to cut the federal budget deficit spurred gains on Wall Street and overseas markets today.
The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 26.69 to 1,961.70 by 11 a.m. on Wall Street.
Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 5 to 2 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 1,008 up, 361 down and 381 unchanged.

Trading was relatively quiet. Volume on the Big Board came to 55.47 million shares at midmorning.
More than 75 percent of the 453 analysts, brokers and money managers polled in the aftermath of the collapse said they expect the Dow Jones industrial average to move back into the 2,400-3,000 range by June, assuming progress on the deficit.

Prices rose today on the Tokyo Stock Exchange as participants responded positively to indications that Congress and the Reagan administration may reach agreement on reducing the U.S. budget deficit. The 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average rose 167.18 points in very light trading, finishing the day at 22,615.43.
On the London Stock Exchange, trading also was light as investors awaited word on the budget. The Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index spurred 52.3 points to 1,730.5 by midday.

Court Upholds 'Insider' Verdicts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today upheld the insider trading convictions of a former Wall Street Journal reporter and two other people who profited from stocks he was writing about.
The justices voted 8-0 to uphold mail and wire fraud convictions against the former reporter, R. Foster Winans, and the others.
But they split, 4-4, on whether federal securities laws apply to such cases. The evenly divided vote, caused by a vacancy on the court, means that no national precedent is established with regard to the securities law holding.

Justice Byron R. White, writing for the court, said federal laws making mail and wire fraud illegal apply to a case in which an employer was deprived of exclusive use of confidential information — even if the employer cannot prove it suffered a monetary loss.

"The confidential information was generated from the business and the business had a right to decide how to use it prior to disclosing it to the public," White said.
He said a scheme to defraud does not require a monetary loss "such as giving the information to a competitor. It is sufficient that the (Wall Street) Journal has been deprived of its right to exclusive use of the information."

The court rejected Winans' arguments that all he did was violate the newspaper's work rules and therefore did not break any law.
"We have little trouble in holding that the conspiracy here to trade on the Journal's confidential information is not outside the reach of the (See CONVICTIONS, A-14)

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No Space

Where to park vehicles is a problem that any growing community faces. As more people come there are more cars and they have to park somewhere when they arrive at their destinations.

Downtown Greenville parking abated as large retailers moved elsewhere. In the shopping centers enough land was available for the needed large parking lots.

There is a parking problem in Greenville, however. It is on and adjacent to the East Carolina University campus. On campus the early arrivals quickly fill up the available parking spaces and those who come later do without. Residential streets in the area are soon filled with parked cars.

The root of the problem becomes apparent with the knowledge that 10,000 parking permits are issued annually for students, faculty and staff. There are only 6,000 parking spaces available.

Chancellor Richard R. Eakin is proposing a plan which would provide an additional 1,269 parking spaces. It would require increasing the campus parking fee by $25 a year to pay off the $936,000 in cost.

The plan, which will be presented to the board of trustees on Dec. 4, calls for additional parking between Ninth and 10th streets and a small landscaped lot on Fifth Street. Major projects would be two surfaced parking lots for freshman vehicles in the Minges Coliseum area. One, at a cost of $170,000, would have 245 spaces. The other would have 606 spaces and cost $473,000.

Plans also call for adding 100 spaces to a lot on College Hill Drive. Also, 318 spaces would be added in the band practice area.

The price the University would pay for these 318 spaces would be the loss of the band practice field — one of the few green spaces that remain on the ECU campus. That area is also used as an intramural practice field and an informal recreational gathering place for students.

Parking areas would be, and should be, landscaped, but the loss of this green space is a sacrifice.

The University is facing what all segments of society face — that is the constant clash of the automobile with nature. Yet, if cars are going to be allowed on campus, efforts must be made to provide places for them to be parked. To do nothing is only to push the problem somewhere else.

Chancellor Eakin seems to be meeting the parking situation head on but his solution appears short-term. The proposal should be supplemented with a long-range plan — such as constructing a parking deck — that would adequately provide parking for a growing university.

Tobacco Views

This week holds something for both lovers and haters of tobacco.

For tobacco enthusiasts, the "love of the leaf" celebration is in full blast in Greenville. For opponents of the leaf, the Great American Smokeout is planned for Thursday. Ironically, these two events coincide annually, offering both sides of the spectrum an opportunity to exercise their views. The occurrence is an illustration of the polarization the tobacco issue creates.

Once again, the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival is under way, complete with banquets, decorating and spitting contests and the Tobacco Farmer Show. It is appropriate the festival is held in Greenville, since Pitt County is the largest tobacco producing county in the five-state region where flue-cured tobacco is grown.

Just as the gold leaf brings cash to the county, the Tobacco Festival also spreads money around. Year by year it has grown from a group of loosely organized events to a celebration of the financial benefits of tobacco. The festival is also a recognition of the way of life in tobacco land — a tobacco tying contest and other events celebrate the "old-time" way of handling the crop.

For most citizens of eastern North Carolina who grew up in the tobacco belt, the gold leaf is as much a part of their heritage as humidity. The sticky feel of green leaves as they come off the stalk, the pungent aroma of curing tobacco and the sound of an auctioneer's voice are all found in the background of an eastern North Carolina native. The Tobacco Festival also observes these memories.

For others, the leaf is associated with health risks, not with heritage. On Thursday that group, spearheaded by the American Cancer Society, will sponsor the Great American Smokeout. That event challenges all smokers to kick the habit for one day — in hopes the smokeout will be permanent. For those with serious health problems, that project could be a lifesaver.

Meanwhile, the Tobacco Festival continues its recognition of the financial contribution of gold leaf to the state and region, as well as its celebration of a fast-fading way of life.

So whether enthusiast or opponent, this week in Pitt County offers some form of recognition of the diverse views on tobacco.

Send Spent Nuclear Fuel To Nevada

'Among the sites considered, only the Nevada site would allow the repository to be built high above even the most accessible of the aquifers present — a highly desirable feature ...'

The governor of Nevada thinks it's a terrible idea, but the best place for storage and possibly final disposal of the highly radioactive spent fuel from nuclear power reactors is at the Nevada Test Site.

Understandably, no area of the country welcomes the idea of becoming the repository for this spent fuel — which, by the end of the next decade, will exceed 41,000 metric tons, enough to fill 90,000 large disposal canisters. But with proper incentives and safeguards, a safe and acceptable arrangement can be worked out — if Congress has the courage to accept responsibility for choosing the appropriate site.

Congress thought it had dealt with the problem when it passed the Nuclear Waste Policy Act (NWPA) in 1982. That act called for investigating potential storage and disposal sites around the country. But it's now clear that, politically, this doesn't work. Any far-flung search for nuclear-waste sites becomes an endless procedural and political marathon. Meanwhile, many tons of radioactive waste remain at reactor sites around the country in pools never intended for long-term storage.

The Department of Energy's plans for exploring sites have been stymied by roadblocks thrown up by Congress itself. In May 1986 the fragile congressional consensus supporting the NWPA was shattered as DOE sought relief from election-year political pressures. With the White House looking over its shoulder, DOE picked three finalist sites in the West, but postponed indefinitely the search for sites for a second repository in the East. Now many in Congress are trying to block action on even the first Western site.

Deliverance will come only when Congress makes up its mind to switch to a new siting philosophy. Instead of renewing the mandate for a fruitless search across the country for the "best" deep geologic disposal and surface storage sites, Congress should direct DOE to focus, at least at first, on one particularly promising place.

Legislation that would narrow the search to a single site, and probably to Nevada's Yucca Mountain, is, in fact, now far advanced in the Senate. This measure, sponsored by Sens. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and James A. McClure, R-Idaho, would give a host state financial benefits running to as much as $50 million to $100 million a year.

Gov. Richard H. Bryan of Nevada, protesting "nuclear blackmail," objects on two counts:

First, that it's grossly unfair to single out one state to receive all of the nation's most dangerous radioactive waste.

Second, that to abandon the national search to find the best sites is to throw aside scientific rigor and objectivity in favor of a politically expedient "quick fix."

The first objection could only be addressed by parceling out radioactive waste to every part of the country — an obviously impractical solution. Yucca Mountain isn't a perfect place, but its characteristics indicate that, with appropriate safeguards, it could make a safe geologic repository.

Yucca Mountain, at the southwest edge of the Nevada Test Site, received the highest rating in a DOE assessment completed in May 1986. Two other sites — at DOE's Hanford reservation in Washington and in Deaf Smith County in the Texas panhandle — were also picked for detailed "characterization," including testing from deep exploratory shafts and tunnels.

The latter two sites present extreme environmental or land-use conflicts. The Hanford site is next to the Columbia River, a resource of incalculable value to both Washington and Oregon. The Deaf Smith site is beneath the Ogallala aquifer, the regional groundwater supply on which Texas High Plains farmers rely to irrigate their crops.

The Nevada site, on the other hand, is relatively free of such conflicts. Together with the NTS, Yucca Mountain is part of the immense desert region known as the Great Basin including some of the driest, most remote, most sparsely inhabited and hard-bitten country in the United States. Among the sites considered, only the Nevada site would allow the repository to be built high above even the most accessible of the aquifers present — a highly desirable feature because there would be little or no movement of groundwater to leach waste canisters and, in case of eventual canister failure, to transport radioactive material.

Yucca Mountain does present technical problems needing careful study. In particular, the site is in a tectonically active region. A recurrence of earthquakes or volcanism cannot be entirely precluded over the 10,000-year period of hazard for waste isolation, but the fact that the repository would be 800 feet above the water table makes it very unlikely that such events would result in groundwater contamination.

But all sites present uncertainties not easily resolved, and the high cost of testing a site makes it sensible to proceed with full exploration of the Nevada site before examining any other. Originally the cost of characterizing each site was put at no more than $100 million; now it is estimated at $1.2 billion for Yucca and even more for each of the other two.

Some of the $3 billion saved by characterizing only Yucca Mountain could go toward reducing Nevada's safety concerns. Needed assurances include: 1) development of a robust waste canister designed to last tens of thousands of years and provide a "fail-safe" backup system of containment; 2) creation of an independent project oversight and evaluation board with authority to intervene at any sign of lapses from sound scientific or engineering practice; 3) proceeding more gradually toward a final repository, starting with temporary underground and surface facilities in Yucca Mountain and on the adjacent Jackass flats, then advancing to permanent disposal. Licensing for final waste isolation could even be deferred for 50 years or longer.

Questions Raised About Super Collider

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina environmental groups say more discussion is needed before a proposed $4.4 billion superconducting super collider finds a home in Tar Heel state.

One group, Durham-based Save the Water, announced last week that it opposed the proton smasher, which is expected to bring 3,000 permanent jobs if an area in Durham, Granville and Person counties is selected for the project.

Another group, the Conservation Council of North Carolina, met with Gov. Jim Martin's science adviser last week to express its concerns about the way the super collider has been presented to the public.

"It is my interpretation that it was presented in a very positive way, and I think that it needs to be looked at," said Marion Nichols of Durham, a past president of the Conservation Council who attended last week's meeting with Earl Mac Cormac.

"We're not actually opposing the collider, we just think we need to have a lot more discussion about this," she said.

Jim Clark, a spokesman for Save the Water, said people in the counties where the collider would be located also opposed it.

"Residents we have talked to are very concerned about the situation," he said. "We're concerned about keeping the quality of life high. I believe the advocates are people who have a vested economic interest in this project. But I don't believe there's a lot of support among the people who live here."

Clark said last week that Save the Water considers the super collider a serious threat to the Raleigh and Durham water supplies.

He said the administration of Gov. Jim Martin was ignoring voters in Raleigh and Durham who "clearly expressed in the last election that they wanted to protect their water."

Durham Mayor Wib Gulley agreed voters were concerned about water. But he said there had been little discussion about the super collider yet.

"I think if we make the short list (of possible sites) we're going to want to know a lot more about it in this community," Gulley said. "In particular, its impact from an economic point of view, from a growth management point of view and its impact on the watershed."

North Carolina is competing with 24 other states promoting 42 sites as possible locations for the super collider. The project is expected to create 3,000 permanent jobs and at least 4,500 temporary construction jobs.

The National Academy of Sciences is expected to release a "short list" of possible sites next month, with final selection slated for late next year.

The mayors of two other towns — Oxford in Granville County and Roxboro in Person County — said residents there supported the super collider, which would be a 53-mile circular tunnel used to conduct high-energy physics experiments.

"I think generally the support would range to 99 percent in favor of the super collider," said Mayor Allie Ellington of Oxford. "It's something we welcome, although all of us readily admit we don't understand every aspect of it."

Ellington said he believed the super collider would benefit an area such as Oxford — an area in transition from its agricultural roots.

Roxboro Mayor Revis Carver said he had only heard positive reactions to the super collider from residents there, although he said citizens do have limited knowledge of the project.

"What I see is growth," he said. "I see that our nation will learn more about matter."

Carver said he was pleased that the super collider would provide a lot of jobs, "but I don't care about jobs if it's going to be a hazardous thing."

Those sort of questions are the ones raised by Conservation Council, Ms. Nichols said.

"We feel there just needs to be a whole lot more information about it before there is a decision to go ahead with it," she said. "Once there is a decision to go ahead with it, then the federal Department of Energy has charge. The state really does not have control over that area, it does not have control over the watershed, it does not have control over the water ... We have reservations about that."

State Employment Security Commission figures show Durham County had an unemployment rate of 2.3 percent in September, while Granville's was 4.3 percent and Person's was 6.4 percent.

"The economy here is very healthy," Clark said. "The problem we face is not generating enough growth ... it's maintaining the quality of life. Are we going to go down the same road that other communities have gone down, or are we going to hang on to the high quality of life we have here?"

Clark said Save the Water was not opposed to all growth, but said "it's not a good idea to have urban growth in the heart of the watershed."

Strength For Today

Every day we read about the necessity for more human rights and liberty in the world, but how much liberty is it possible to have?

In this respect it is instructive to note that none of us has been able to choose the family into which we were born or the age in which we might choose to live. Needless to say, we had no choice as to our sex, the color of our skin, the degree of health with which we would start our lives, or the number of economic opportunities which would confront us. All of us live under thousands of laws to which we have never been invited to give our assent.

But the important is that we think we have freedom of choice, and in a small area we really do. In this small area we create the good and the bad, the happiness or unhappiness, that sends our lives toward fulfillment or failure.

Are Robertson's Successes A Fluke?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Establishment Republicans are waiting for a sign that Pat Robertson's early surprises in the 1988 presidential race were aberrations not likely to be repeated once the contest gets serious.

They didn't get their wish when the latest test was held Saturday in Orlando, Fla., a few miles from Disney World.

The best that could be said for the straw poll at the Florida Republican Party convention was that Robertson and Vice President George Bush managed to defy the law of physics that says two objects can't occupy the same space at the same time.

Both were able to claim victory. The other four GOP presidential contenders took a "so-what" approach to the event they claimed was rigged to produce a certain majority for Bush.

On the face of it, Bush came away with what his campaign manager called "a good healthy win in everyone's book of politics."

The vice president received 57 percent of the votes while former television evangelist Robertson got 37 percent.

Bush entered this event hungry for a victory, however meaningless. Robertson had embarrassed the vice president in earlier tests in Michigan, South Carolina and Iowa.

"We got kicked pretty good in Iowa in a straw poll and I vowed I would never lose another one," said Bush.

Analysis

But his campaign was so determined to avoid another embarrassment in Florida, so determined to guarantee a Bush victory, that they gave Robertson an easy opening to claim success with any sort of creditable showing.

Of the 2,500 delegates to the Florida convention, 1,000 were elected and party officials or contributors, a group that was nearly unanimous in its support for Bush. The only real competition was for the votes of the other 1,500 delegates and Robertson, with a total of 849 votes in the straw poll, could and did claim he got more than half of those.

"I'm claiming victory on our terms," said Robertson campaign manager Marc Nuttle. "It's now a two-man race in Florida, a Bush-Robertson race."

Senate GOP leader Bob Dole would dispute that assessment. A recent opinion poll in Florida said Bush was the leader with support of 43 percent of Republicans; Dole was second with 24 percent and Robertson third with 9 percent.

But Dole of Kansas, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, former Gov. Pete du Pont of Delaware, and former secretary of state Alexander M. Haig Jr. refused to compete for votes in the Florida straw poll.

The real Florida contest is the state's presidential primary on March 8, "Super Tuesday," a day that Republican voters in 16 states, most of them in the South, will express their choice for the candidate to succeed Ronald Reagan.

"He is not going to win on Super Tuesday," Lee Atwater, Bush's campaign manager said of Robertson.

Maybe so. But the fact is that Robertson has a lot of Republicans worried and the Bush camp ought to be foremost among them.

Robertson's first display of grassroots organization skill was in Michigan in the summer of 1986 when the state Republican Party held precinct delegate elections. It was a test of recruiting and Robertson won hands down.

As a result, the former host of the "700 Club" is a strong favorite to come away with a majority of the 77-member Michigan delegation to the Republican National Convention when it is chosen in January.

That gives him a likely victory in the first event, makes him the early leader in tallies of delegate strength.

Next on the 1988 calendar comes the Iowa precinct caucuses on Feb. 8.

At this stage, Iowa looks like a three-way race between Bush, Dole and Robertson.

Partisans of the vice president and the Kansas senator prefer to call Iowa a two-man contest, but they also have to admit they don't know how strong Robertson might be.

"It's a more or less invisible organization because it's done through the churches and the pulpits," said Iowan Mary Louise Smith, a former Republican Party national chairman and a Bush supporter.

The conventional wisdom among establishment Republicans is that Robertson's strength lies in events that can be won by a candidate who can get 2,000 or so fervent supporters to an turn out for a given event. They theorize he can't possibly win a primary.

They may be right. But if Robertson does well in Iowa — maybe even wins Iowa — he will head into the New Hampshire primary with a claim to front-runner status in the GOP presidential race.

That could be a boon to the manufacturer of the buttons seen at the Florida GOP convention, the ones that displayed the initials, "A.R.B.R." which stood for "Any Republican But Robertson."

Release Of Mandela Would Be Gain

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — The release from prison of the African National Congress leader Govan Mbeki earlier this month signals a giant leap toward one of the unthinkable in South Africa: Nelson Mandela moving around freely in his homeland. While millions of Africans believe that this will bring about their deliverance from apartheid, many whites fear that freeing Mandela will fatally destabilize white rule.

Before his release Mbeki formed one of the "Big Three" of the ANC leadership in prison. Together with Mandela and Walter Sisulu, Mbeki was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1964 for a leading role in a sabotage campaign aimed at overthrowing the state. With the ANC banned and driven into exile, and with most of the leaders of the internal popular opposition currently in jail or forced underground, black nationalists have come to pin all their hopes on the release of the jailed triumvirate, especially on Mandela.

The government has been extremely wary of releasing Mandela. President P.W. Botha is known to have said privately that this would occur only over his dead body. Yet letting Mandela and his colleagues die in jail as martyrs is now considered as equally untenable.

At first Botha attempted to politically emasculate Mandela, Sisulu and Mbeki by insisting that they renounce violence as a precondition for their release. Unbowed, they refused rather than split the ANC.

As a result Botha has been forced to waive his own preconditions. His strategy now clearly is to make the release of Mandela the final act in a controlled process that starts with setting the 77-year-old Mbeki free, to be followed after a reasonable interval by the release of Sisulu.

Provided no serious upheaval takes place, the release of Mandela could be risked early next year. The event may well turn out to be a less spectacular affair than universally anticipated. The state of emergency will almost certainly still be in place, which imposes severe curbs on public meetings or political reporting. Mandela will be free, but his voice will hardly echo across the land.

One thing is certain: The freeing of the political prisoners would not have started had Pretoria not calculated that this will not weaken the state, but in fact strengthen it. In all, the government attempts to achieve three results with the release.

First, it wants to signal to the world that it considers the black uprising, which started in September 1984, quelled. In government circles the anxiety and gloom of 1985 and 1986 have been replaced by renewed confidence in the state's ability to withstand everything thrown against it.

Tom Lodge, a widely respected analyst of the black nationalist opposition, recently remarked: "When it comes to coercion the state's resources are still far greater than those which can be marshaled by the forces of popular resistance. There is no stalemate, and the state can still tear apart the body of organized political activity."

Second, freeing Mbeki marks the beginning of a new government approach toward finding some political accommodation of Africans. Since 1983 the government has fruitlessly sought to develop a minimally acceptable constitutional structure in which moderate African leaders would participate. However, all significant African leaders have rejected participation in national structures until Mandela and the other jailed leaders are freed.

Far from abandoning its quest for greater legitimacy internally and abroad, the South African state's new attempt represents a far more serious effort to achieve just that. The release of Mandela would clear the way for Chief Mangosuthu Gatsha Buthelezi, acknowledged leader of the 7 million-strong Zulu group, to enter into negotiations and to accept an offer to serve in the cabinet.

With Buthelezi and some other Africans in the cabinet, the South African government can embark on a concerted diplomatic drive (Buthelezi may well be foreign minister) to project its indubitable multi-racial image abroad. Even more important, it will have established the necessary political base for rapidly drawing more Africans (especially Zulus) into the understaffed army and police force. For good reason the ANC-supporting popular opposition fears nothing more than a white-Zulu alliance. Tough action against dissidents by black security forces accountable to an increasingly black executive can hardly be branded as racial oppression — and ultimately this, and not oppression in itself, is the world's charge against South Africa.

Third, the government intends using the release of political prisoners as an instrument to split and marginalize the ANC. Freed political leaders like Mbeki will face major pressure to mediate fairly in intra-black conflicts. Particularly vicious are those between Buthelezi's mass movement, Inkatha, and the ANC's internal ally, the United Democratic Front; that antagonism has been the cause of 150 deaths this year.

Any attempt at mediation by released ANC leaders will inevitably create major tensions in the ANC abroad. Like all exiled liberation organizations, the ANC fears nothing as much as internal political deals that could marginalize them. Inevitably, Mbeki and other freed political leaders will be damned if they try to mediate, and damned if they don't. They can choose to join the ANC in exile — and face the prospect of fading into obscurity.

Study Shows Underage Students Still Drinking

Enactment of North Carolina's 21 year legal age limit for drinking has not reduced the numbers of underage college students who drink alcoholic beverages but many have changed the place where they drink, a study shows.

"The most significant change" noted in the study by an East Carolina University researcher "was in the location of alcohol consumption," says a research report by ECU Professor Jerry F. Lotterhos. "Alcohol was now being consumed in more private or clandestine situations."

"Of interest was that drinking in cars as a primary location increased (over 1986) from 1.2 percent to 3.8 percent of the students," the report said.

Lotterhos, professor and chairman of the department of community health, school of allied health sciences, obtained baseline data by random sampling of 378 undergraduate students. It was the second year of a five-year study of the impact of the 21 year legal age limit law.

Lotterhos said the 1987 information was compared with baseline data obtained in April 1986, four months prior to enactment of the law.

Presenting findings Friday in a paper at the N.C. Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance in Greensboro, Lotterhos said a slight reduction in daily drinking by students "was not statistically significant."

He found in 1986 and again this year that 90 percent of the students sampled were alcohol users. Most, 85 percent, began regular alcohol use by age 18.

"In the year immediately following passage of the 21 year drinking age law, underage university students were not refraining from alcohol use. The great majority continued to drink and disagreed with the law. There appeared to be a slight increase in heavier amounts of use per drinking occasion," Lotterhos said.

The study showed a decrease in use of other drugs by students — a decrease in marijuana use from 60 percent to 51 percent; cigarette use from 55 percent to 47 percent and a slight decrease in use of hallucinogens, amphetamines, barbituates and tranquilizers. There was a slight decrease in percent of daily beer drinkers and slight reductions in all wine use categories, according to the report.

Lotterhos, director of ECU's Alcohol-Drug Program for the past 15 years, said "the locations for alcohol use changed significantly from 1986 to 1987." In 1986, 27 percent of the students said "the public bar" was their primary location for alcohol use. In 1987, the primary locations had shifted to "place of residence," "parties" and automobiles, Lotterhos said.

"In the year immediately following passage of the 21 year drinking age law, underage university students were not refraining from alcohol use. The great majority continued to drink and disagreed with the law. There appeared to be a slight increase in heavier amounts of use per drinking occasion," Lotterhos said.

He said, "Implications of increased private context consumption include the removal of the consumer from the sanctions and controls of the public bar to clandestine settings in which the potential for exaggerated or abusive behavior might be increased."

"It is also possible that persons needing assistance for an alcohol-related problem might find it more difficult to reach out for such assistance in this environment of clandestine use," Lotterhos said.

"Students appear to be ignoring the age law except for efforts to drink in more private situations," he said. "Moreover, they appear willing to run the risks of breaking the law in terms of obtaining alcohol."

"These realities imply that, at this point in time, the law does not appear to be stopping alcohol use in the underage population," he said.

Public Schools Observing Education, Book Weeks

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County students will concentrate on the importance and value of education during American Education Week and Children's Book Week this week by participating in various activities.

The theme for American Book Week is "We The People," honoring the U.S. Constitution.

The Student Council at Farmville Middle School recently held a luncheon for the teachers and community leaders to honor them, said Suzanne Carson. Awards were presented to the teachers, and they received tokens for their service donated by area businesses.

During the week, students will study leaders in education and the history of education in the United States and other countries, Ms. Carson said. The teachers and Student Council will stress the importance of education in society, and "create an awareness of how education functions in our society and show appreciation to those who strive to educate the youngsters of our community."

Eastern Elementary School will celebrate the week with bookmarks, bulletin boards, stickers, discussion and research and a luncheon with parents Wednesday, according to Linda Stapleton, a second-grade teacher.

Story tellers will tell folk tales to students at W.H. Robinson, said Anne Posey, who works in the media center. There also will be a book fair, and children will participate in the poster contest at Carolina East Mall.

The second-grade teachers on Tuesday are going to have the children dress up as their favorite book character, and costumes will be judged. Also second-grade students will read to kindergarten and first-grade students dressed as the characters in the book.

Students at Stokes Elementary School will read for about 15 minutes each day, according to Principal Roscoe Locke. Poetry will be read over intercom, and Tuesday, Bernard Haselrig, volunteer coordinator for the Pitt County schools, will read stories to the students.

Also on Tuesday, the children and faculty will dress as their favorite story book character. Thursday, students will write and read short stories in classrooms using a computer, and Associate Superintendent Charles Ross will read to kindergarten and first-grade students from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.

There will be story readings each day from the intercom at Falkland Elementary School, and fourth and fifth grade students will read books to kindergarten through second-grade students, according to Lydia Carraway.

Fourth-grade students will dress as their favorite book characters, and students will write and save stories on computers. Book markers will be made, and there will be guest speakers.

A "read-in" is scheduled for 15 minutes each day in the fifth-grade classes, while plays will be written and featured in some classes. Fairy tales also will be rewritten and modernized.

First-graders will be role playing their favorite American nursery rhymes and fairy tales, and they will read about American folk heroes. Principal Norwood Randolph will speak on "Why education is important in choosing a profession" and the importance of reading to certain classes.

The Student Council at Ayden Elementary School "is going to compose a paragraph about the teacher and her assistant without name to see if the children can figure out who their teacher is," Cindy Dunn, a media aide, said.

On Friday, students will draw a picture and write a description of education in the year 2087, and they will be displayed in school hallway. One class will do reports on fairs, and children will dress in a bear costume and read stories to the class.

School System Focuses On Potential Male Dropouts

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

School statistics show that male students are more likely to be suspended, fail classes or become dropouts, and education officials in Scotland County want to find out why.

"It's the why that's intriguing to me personally," said Carolyn Debnam, assistant principal of North Laurinburg Elementary School. "Professionally, it's how to manage it."

Schools have to meet the needs of male students better than they have in the past, she said. "There's something we're not doing."

Ms. Debnam's school is the focus of a dropout prevention program aimed at males. The program was developed by Scotland County School and St. Andrews Presbyterian College with the help of a $50,000 grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation.

Aidan O. Dunleavy, chairman of the department of education at St. Andrews, said it was difficult to say why more males drop out of school, "but evidence is very clear that males do fail at a higher rate in our public school system."

"We believe that the expectations of male students in the public school systems are not consistent with the administration of the public schools."

Schools are conservative, conforming institutions. The majority of students we'll deal with in this program are not conservative and conforming. They either don't understand that society or weren't raised in it, or both."

Statistics indicate the school is not as positive an experience for males and that the problem is worsened when males are part of a minority, Ms. Debnam said. North Laurinburg's student body is 70 percent minority. The school also has the highest number of free lunches of Scotland County's primary schools, she said.

At North Laurinburg, a kindergarten through fifth grade school with about 550 students, classes will emphasize language arts, pro-social skills and self concept. Students who seem to be at high risk will participate in after school programs at St. Andrews, where faculty and education students will work with the elementary school students.

"We will target the more high-risk children and those children will be worked with in a more intensive way with the St. Andrews faculty and students," Mrs. Debnam said. She said she expected about 80 to 100 students to be chosen for the after-school work at St. Andrews.

The pro-social skills are necessary because "a lot of our children have stressful home and neighborhood situations," she said. "We want to teach them to deal with anger in socially acceptable way."

The anger must be dealt with, she said, or it will block the learning process.

Dunleavy said the program will emphasize both academic and social success. "The two are not independent of each other. The population we're dealing with one has to educate for social skill success just as much as for academic success."

But the elementary school students aren't the only ones who will benefit. Mrs. Debnam said the education students at St. Andrews also would learn from the program.

"We're not only trying to help our students at our school but train better teachers at the same time," Mrs. Debnam said. "I'm real interested in them having experience with children who have a hard time learning," she said.

The early dropout prevention program is in its first year, and Mrs. Debnam said she anticipated going back to the Reynolds Foundation to broaden the program eventually.

Coalition Backs AIDS Tracing Plan

DURHAM (AP) — A coalition of AIDS groups has endorsed the concept of "contact tracing" — the practice of asking those infected with AIDS to name their sexual partners so they can be notified that they might have been exposed to the fatal virus.

But an official system of contact tracing will crumble unless it is based on the voluntary cooperation of those with the disease, rather than punitive measures such as imprisonment, an AIDS activist told medical students at Duke University Sunday. A recent draft of a state health rule proposes punishing those who test positive for AIDS and refuse to disclose their sexual contacts.

The endorsement is part of a six-point proposal on AIDS the coalition sent to Gov. Jim Martin today. The AIDS service coalition, which includes homosexual members, includes nine AIDS service and support groups in seven North Carolina cities.

David C. Jones told the American Medical Student Association AIDS support groups have long used the informal practice of contact tracing. But the decision to endorse a system of contact notification carried out by state bureaucrats did not come easy, said Jones, who is homosexual.

"We wrestled with this for 10 hours in a meeting this week in Charlotte," Jones told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "We don't like the idea of naming names. But we knew we had to come to grips with the need to control this disease."

A legislative panel formed to study acquired immune deficiency syndrome is considering health regulations that would require AIDS patients to name their sexual partners, under threat of penalties that include quarantine or up to two years of imprisonment. But the rules have come under fire from a range of gay groups, civil liberties groups and some medical officials.

State health director Dr. Ron Levine Friday said he would suggest the rule be changed to rely upon voluntary cooperation, rather than the threat of punitive sanctions. The public will have a chance to comment on the proposed rules when the N.C. Commission of Health Services has holds hearings throughout the state.

Seminary Trustees Meet On Tuesday

By The Associated Press

The trustees of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary are likely to demand that seminary president Randall Lolley resign almost immediately so conservatives can tighten their control of the school, Southern Baptist observers say.

"They want the office vacated so they can put their man in as quickly as possible," said R.G. Puckett, a moderate who is the editor of the Biblical Recorder.

The trustees are scheduled to meet Tuesday to consider the resignation of Lolley, who announced he planned to leave the school one week after conservatives took control of the board. But Lolley did not set a specific date for his departure.

Puckett said he thinks the board will tell Lolley to stay through the class graduation that is scheduled for Dec. 12.

Richard L. Hester, a Southeastern professor and the president of the seminary chapter of the American Association of University Professors, said Lolley has told him that he is going to propose that he and faculty dean Morris Ashcroft, who also announced he would give up his office, remain through a transition period that would end July 31 next year. Lolly could not be reached for comment.

Observers say that conservatives at the North Carolina State Baptist Convention may have known their cause was in trouble when Lolley strode to the podium last Tuesday to nominate E. Leon Smith as president of the body.

Lolley, greeted by a standing ovation, delivered a stirring speech. And hours later, Smith scored a lopsided victory over Ned L. Mathews, his better-known conservative opponent, to capture the presidency and to turn back the fundamentalists' bid to control North Carolina's Baptists.

"Lolley personified the Southeastern conflict," said William H. Boatwright, communications director for the convention. "He connected the events that outraged people with the convention and he struck a responsive chord with a lot of pastors, moderate or conservative, who live and work for congregations that have the power to dismiss them and who thus understand what it means to stand up for their beliefs."

The Rev. Mark Cortis, a conservative who is pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church in Winston-Salem, said moderates used the conservative threat as an excuse to politicize the convention and then outpoliticized conservatives. He said the moderate victory "will have the long-term effect of galvanizing the conservatives into organizing."

Puckett said there is a chance Lolley could retain his job, or be asked to return, if the conservative leadership at the seminary is overturned.

He said there is a good chance that the conservative leaders of the Southern Baptist Convention will be overturned at the annual convention next June.

Center on Sunday.

Raleigh police Detective J.R. Evans said authorities were looking for a suspect armed with a .25-caliber pistol.

Group member Jason Mizell of Queens said the band had refused to go on stage for a scheduled Shaw University homecoming concert at Dorton Arena on the North Carolina State Fairgrounds because the promoter did not have all the money required by his contract and because attendance was sparse.

Group's Director Shot

RALEIGH (AP) — A member of the traveling crew of the rap music group Run-D.M.C. was shot and critically injured shortly after the group refused to go on stage because of problems with concert arrangements, officials said.

Garfield McDonald, 21, of Queens, N.Y., the technical director for the group, was shot once in the head at the Radisson Plaza Hotel Saturday night, police said. He was in critical condition in the neurological intensive care unit at Wake Medical

Alternative Detention Center For Women Set In Guilford

GREENSBORO (AP) — Guilford County's first private, non-profit alternative to prison for women convicts who are pregnant or already have young children is scheduled to open in December, and its creator hopes it will keep families together.

After 18 months of planning, the Guilford County Women's Residential-Day Care Center is set to open Dec. 1. It will serve first-time felons and repeat misdemeanants, aiming to give women with criminal pasts the "skills, resources and confidence necessary" to become successful citizens.

The program's creator, Christine "Tina" Herlinger, also founded Legal Assistance for Mothers in Prison in Durham three years ago. She said most women prisoners are incarcerated for "nonviolent economic crimes" — such as worthless checks and welfare fraud — frequently committed to pay rent or keep food on the table.

But an incarcerated woman often ends up losing the children she had struggled to care for, Ms. Herlinger said.

"Once she's in, that bond has been broken," Ms. Herlinger said.

To make matters worse, when a woman gets out, she has a hard time finding a job. And typically, relatives or government agencies who have cared for a child while the mother was in prison, fight for custody, believing it's in the child's best interest, Ms. Herlinger said.

Ms. Herlinger wants to help these women gain the skills to avoid jail in the future. She feels that women "have an incentive in their kids to do better. "If they can be given the tools..." she said, "we feel they would never be seen in court again."

The women will be referred by the court, but then must be accepted into the program by Ms. Herlinger and the center's staff. Eventually, about six women will live with their children in a huge old Georgian house at the residential center in Greensboro.

During the day, they — along with as many as 29 other women who won't live at the center — will move to the day center in another part of Greensboro to receive psychiatric and drug counseling, and training in job searching and financial budgeting. If a woman wants or needs it, they will be assisted in getting a high school equivalency or college degrees.

The women's pre-school children will be taught at the day center, and if needed, also will receive counseling.

The women could spend from nine months to two years in the program, which costs nothing to them or taxpayers, Ms. Herlinger said.

"We have not arranged with the state to have it pay anything," Ms. Herlinger said. "That is a possibility, but we have not looked into it yet."

The program is being financed through grants totalling $329,600 from six organizations, including the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation and the Kathleen Price and Joseph M. Bryan Family Foundation.

Ex-Legislator Barker Dies

RALEIGH (AP) — Christopher Barker Jr., a state representative for 17 years and a retired rear admiral in the U.S. Navy, died Sunday in his sleep. He was 76.

Barker, a Democrat, represented Pamlico, Craven and Lenoir counties from 1969 to 1986 and spent much of his legislative career on mental health and drug matters.

Barker was chairman of the House Mental Health Committee in the 1983-84 session. In 1981, he sponsored a bill to let parents of a mentally ill or retarded person petition a court for that person's sterilization.

Barker was born in Jones County in 1911, graduated from New Bern High School in 1928 and the U.S. Naval Academy in 1933.

RJR Emphasizing Its Food Products

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — With the modernization of its tobacco plants nearly completed, RJR Nabisco Inc. will now spend $4 billion over the next several years to upgrade its Nabisco food manufacturing plants, company officials say.

F. Ross Johnson, RJR Nabisco's president and chief executive officer, said the company will use the expertise it gained in the $2 billion building of its Tobaccoville factory and upgrading of two existing cigarette plants to improve facilities that make Nabisco cookies and crackers and Del Monte juices and canned foods.

"We have, let's say, nine bakeries, we could be down to five, but the five won't look like anything like the five that we have now," Johnson said.

RJR needs to change its food manufacturing to capture a greater share of the single-serve market, favored by today's consumers, Johnson said.

"With the largest stores, we've always built around them" bringing in truckloads of our products, Johnson said. Those supermarkets are getting bigger, now averaging about 34,000 square feet and stocking more than 15,000 different items.

Wright Says White House Hasn't Asked Him To Stop Peace Effort

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright said today that President Reagan has not asked him to end his involvement in negotiations between Nicaragua and the U.S.-backed rebels.
Wright came under fire from administration officials and the House Republican leader after taking part in a meeting Friday at which Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega proposed a plan for reaching a cease-fire in three weeks with the Contra rebels.

On Sunday, House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel said Wright was "absolutely wrong" for participating in the peace process.
But Wright, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said:
"I'm not trying to be critical of the administration. I'd like to hope we're both on the same team. I want to think that the president and the secretary of state want peace to break out in Central America. I do."
Wright, who has been deeply involved in the process since he and President Reagan put forth their joint peace plan in August, said no one in the administration has asked him to bow out of the talks.

"They have not suggested that to me. Secretary of State (George) Shultz knew I was going; he didn't suggest that. President Reagan hasn't said anything to me. I guess it was Elliott Abrams or somebody who leaked the story — not being willing to identify himself — saying that he was upset with me," Wright said.
Wright said he is not pretending to be a diplomat and had participated only at the invitation of Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, who agreed to act as mediator between the government and the Contras.

The speaker suggested he has a better understanding of Central America than the administration does.
"I don't consider them (Central Americans) inferiors, and I think sometimes the administration unfortunately gives the impression that it looks upon Central Americans as inferiors," Wright said. "It's always lecturing them, holding them up to public ridicule and scoring them and refusing to see them."
But Contra leader Adolfo Calero, appearing on CBS-TV's "Morning News," said Wright should stay out of the talks.
"This is a discussion between Nicaraguans and negotiations between Nicaraguans. We don't want Speaker Wright to be in the midst of it. We don't want the administration to be in the midst of it, and the administration has kept away," Calero said.
Michel also said he did not approve of Wright's involvement.
"I think it's absolutely wrong," he said Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."
"I think there's every reason for us to be parties on the outside. ... For us, as legislators, to get directly involved in what is the prerogative of the president and the secretary of state is just absolutely counter to anything I've perceived during my 30 years around here," he said.
Wright defended his involvement during a weekend fund-raiser in Texas.
"I don't think I have to apologize to anybody," he told a crowd of 3,000 in Fort Worth on Saturday.
Wright was openly critical of Reagan during his appearance in Texas, saying, "I've found him good company, but bless his heart, he doesn't have any knowledge. His mind is filled with a lot of shibboleths that just aren't true."
"He seems to think of Congress as an unnecessary annoyance," he said. "Mr. Reagan doesn't work with Congress. He is a very uncompromising person as demonstrated by his very highly confrontational attitudes."
An administration official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Sunday the president is "angry and concerned" by Wright's action.
"By all evaluations, it's not been helpful for Wright to interject himself," the official said.

Arms Control Talks Under Way Amid Indications Of Progress

GENEVA (AP) — Top U.S. and Soviet arms control negotiators met for a second day today to try to resolve problems blocking a treaty on intermediate-range missiles, and both said they had made some progress during their first meeting.
But the chief U.S. negotiator, Max Kampelman, said the two sides had not attempted to resolve questions of verification, or anti-cheating measures, which U.S. officials have said present main obstacles to agreement.
Kampelman and deputy Soviet foreign minister Yuli Vorontsov held talks today with their top negotiators on INF. They planned to join the top negotiators in the other two issues at the Geneva arms talks — long-range missiles and space-based defense systems.
President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev are expected to sign the agreement to do away with the entire category of such shorter- and medium-range weapons at the Dec. 7-10 summit.
Vorontsov, a Soviet deputy foreign minister, arrived in Geneva Saturday.
Before meeting with Vorontsov at the U.S. diplomatic mission, Kampelman was asked whether the two sides made progress during a two-hour dinner meeting Sunday.
"I think so, yes," he replied. He said the two sides "created a good atmosphere" during the meeting.
Vorontsov, asked whether the two sides made progress Sunday, replied simply, "yes."
Vorontsov said the two superpowers "by all means" could agree on a treaty by the scheduled summit. "We have no doubt about it," he said.
But Kampelman said the two negotiators did not resolve any verification issues Sunday night. "We didn't attempt to do that last night," he said. "We had other matters to talk about also."

He declined to elaborate.

Democrats Could Win, Mondale Says

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale, the Democrats' 1984 presidential nominee, told four of the party's six 1988 presidential contenders that the time is ripe to wrest control of the White House from the GOP.
Mondale also told Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Jesse Jackson that it would be wise for them to pay a lot of attention to Minnesota prior to the state's Feb. 23 precinct caucuses.

"Unlike most states you go to, Minnesota plans to support you in the final election," quipped Mondale, who carried only his home state in the 1984 election.
Mondale and the four contenders appeared before more than 3,000 Democratic-Farmer-Laborites at the annual Hubert H. Humphrey Day Dinner Saturday night.
Mondale told the candidates that he envies them because he believes Americans, after seven years under the administration of President Reagan, are "looking for something fresh."

HOW FLUORIDE HELPS YOU

If you use a fluoride toothpaste, drink water with the recommended level of fluoride, and get regular checkups, your teeth have a much better chance of fighting dental decay and staying where they belong: in your mouth.

Fluoride is a mineral found naturally in water and many foods. In drinking water, the recommended level is one part fluoride to one million parts water. In many communities where the natural fluoride level doesn't meet this standard, just the right amount of fluoride is added to the water supply. The reason is simple: fluoride helps to prevent tooth decay.

Fluoride strengthens tooth enamel. It works its way into tooth enamel crystals and makes teeth harder and more decay-resistant. It is particularly helpful to infants and young children whose tooth enamel is still in the formative stage. Statistics abound on its success on keeping tooth decay to a minimum.

NOTE:
We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Former Skipper Says Stark's Gear Didn't Warn Of Attack

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The former skipper of the USS Stark says his crew did not defend the frigate against an Iraqi air attack last May because four different radar and detection systems failed to indicate the ship was under attack.
Capt. Glenn R. Brindel, in his first extensive comment on the attack and the Navy's resulting investigation, acknowledged "deficiencies in the watch on the night of May 17th."
"Their actions or inactions, however, contrary to what the investigation would have you believe, are not primary causes for Stark's failure to defend against the Exocet (missile) attack. Unfortunately, the ship's radars and electronics did not function as advertised."
Brindel's assertion that the frigate's equipment was ineffective against Exocet missiles directly contradicts the official Navy findings of a board of inquiry, released in a censored version Oct. 15. It also raises new questions about the ability of similar frigates — at least six ships of the same type are currently deployed in the Persian Gulf — to defend themselves against such attacks.

Brindel's version of the events that night is contained in a lengthy letter to the editor, printed in today's edition of the weekly newspaper "Navy Times." The Springfield, Va.-based paper has no official connection with the Navy.
"In fairness to a brave and capable crew, I have decided to respond to your article about the investigation," Brindel wrote.
"I recognize the desire to erase what some believe was an embarrassment to the Navy," he said of that investigation. "This should not be the case. We must take the lessons learned, make needed improvements and ensure a tragedy like this never happens again."
The board of inquiry, chaired by Rear Adm. Grant A. Sharp, harshly criticized Brindel and some of his top officers for failing to defend the Stark. Brindel, the report concluded,

"failed to provide combat-oriented leadership, allowing Stark's anti-air warfare readiness to disintegrate to the point that his Combat Information Center team was unable to defend the ship."
Thirty-seven sailors died in the attack, which has been characterized by both Iraq and the United States as an accident and case of mistaken identity.
The inquiry board recommended courts-martial for Brindel and his tactical action officer, Lt. Basil E. Moncrief, but that recommendation was set aside after the two men accepted responsibility for the incident. Both were reprimanded and Moncrief resigned. Brindel will retire soon at the lower rank of commander.
Brindel, in his letter to the newspaper, did not specifically address the question of why his crew didn't attempt to warn away the approaching Iraqi fighter sooner or to fire on the jet before it could launch any missiles.
Instead, he asserted the Rules of Engagement that were in place at the time for Navy ships were "deficient" and too ambiguous and that other commanding officers in the Middle East force also "were less than happy" with those rules.

Once the Iraqi jet fired its missiles, however, Brindel said the frigate's radar systems — based on what he had been taught — should have detected the two incoming Exocets.
"They did not," he wrote flatly.
"Stark's SPS-49 air-search, SPS-55 surface-search and MK-92 CAS search-fire control radars, all reportedly capable of detecting Exocet, were operating and manned by capable operators," the former skipper said.
The "Combat Systems Doctrine" for such frigates indicates that "two of these radars would detect the Exocet well beyond the visual horizon. They did not," he continued.
Nonetheless, "as commanding officer, I must accept responsibility for the performance of the ship and each man on board," Brindel concluded.

Widow Unhappy With After-Stark Events

HIDDENITE, N.C. (AP) — Bonnie Hansen says she had two love affairs — one with her husband and the other with the U.S. Navy — but her love for the Navy has cooled since her husband was killed aboard the USS Stark.
William R. Hansen was killed May 17 when two Exocet missiles from an Iraqi warplane tore through the Stark, a guided-missile frigate serving with the U.S. Middle Eastern task force.
Bonnie Hansen was also in the Navy when she married her husband in July 1985. The next March, Mrs. Hansen was pregnant, and got her discharge to become a full-time Navy wife.
On Feb. 5, when the Stark sailed for the gulf, most wives weren't fearful, Mrs. Hansen said.

"It was more or less that they were leaving and were going to be gone for six months," Mrs. Hansen said. "That was our biggest thought, not that they might not get back."
But William Hansen did not come back.
Mrs. Hansen said a memorial service for the Stark victims on May 22 in Mayport, Fla., was something less than an occasion for proper and respectful mourning.
And when President Reagan decided to go to Mayport, she said, the resulting need for security caused havoc.
"We were supposed to have a church service before we went to the memorial service," Mrs. Hansen said in an interview. "There might have been two prayers ... The rest of it was telling us how to act, how to seat ourselves at the memorial service, how to get on the bus and what to say and what not to say. They were trying to keep us away from the media."

"I walked into the memorial service, and the first thing I see is a wall of cameras. They had bleachers set up."
Security people tried to seat one widow, who had brought a large family group, behind the media — then surrounded her when she carried her chair up front where she felt she belonged, Mrs. Hansen said.
"My general feeling is that it ... was a great show for the Navy, saying, 'Hey, look. See what we're doing for the Stark widows and the family members."

"Afterwards, when the president came through, I asked him when the bodies were coming home. He looked at me, and he said, 'I don't know.' If he doesn't know, who does?"
The bodies arrived at Dover, Del., on Tuesday, May 26. Mrs. Hansen was there, with a Stark sailor as her escort.
In August, Mrs. Hansen bought a double-wide home and had it erected on her parent's farmland outside Hiddenite, beneath the Brushy Mountains. At age 21, she is starting over with a 1-year-old son, Brendan. But she still wasn't satisfied with what the Navy had told her — or what it had told the world.

Child Care Expert To Speak In Greenville

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Dr. Benjamin Spock, internationally known child care expert, will visit Greenville Tuesday and give two public lectures.

In a telephone interview Friday, Dr. Spock said he has come to believe that the dilemma of children in our society is spiritual in nature — a matter of misplaced values in families.

He said he believes that the competitiveness, the materiality and the condoning of violence with which our society has become imbued have wreaked immeasurably damage on our children.

He said he would encourage parents not to prod their children to excel. "Teaching a child to read at two is absurd," he said, "and is motivated by parents' ambitions, not by what's good for the child."

He said he advocates eliminating the use of grading in schools and promoting cooperative, not competitive, games.

"In no other country in the world," he said, "is there the materiality that there is in this country." As examples, he said that in Greece, allegiance to the family is stressed above all; in Israel, dedication to the country; in Iran, dedication to religion.

"Americans as a whole do not have the spiritual values they once had. And our children are suffering. They need to know what their families' values are and be taught to live by them."

He said he believes one reason the incidence of teen-age suicide has quadrupled in the past 10 years is this lack of clarity about spiritual matters. Teen-agers are seeking their identity, he said, and they need a spiritual background already imparted during their earlier years in order to do this.

"Man needs to believe in something outside himself or he's poor indeed. Most of our children are being taught only that they're in the world to get ahead. They need to be taught that they're here to serve."

He suggested that lessons in service can start with setting the table for the family at age two. A teenager's schedule should include community volunteer work encouraged by the parents.

He said he believes that parents should absolutely refuse to let their children watch violence on television. "Every incident of violence viewed is a desensitization," he said, "and the average child sees 18,000 of these before he's grown. Do we wonder that society is being moved in the direction of violence?"

In addition to monitoring their children's television viewing, he said he believes parents should work to "apply pressure to TV" to bring about a change in this misuse of the public airways. "Television is a great education medium," he said, "and it shouldn't be used to promote violence or sell hair dye or sugar-coated cereals that rot children's teeth."

As well as acting to clean up the use of television, Spock feels that parents have a responsibility to enter the public arena to protect themselves and their children in other areas. "Parents should be politically active," he said. "We need better schools, better day care, better health care, better housing ... freedom from fear of nuclear annihilation."

"These things simply don't happen until we apply pressure." He said he often writes letters to congressmen and other policymakers in government and encourages everyone else to do the same.

He said he has faith that every positive action to make society better has an effect. "Every letter, every demonstration, every positive action works for good. People who care should be doing 10 times as much as they are."

Spock, 84, has been concerned with the physical and psychological health of children since before he received his M.D. degree in 1929. He wrote "Baby and Child Care" in the evenings from 1943 to 1946. This book, which he said he wrote in a tone to support rather than scold parents, has sold 32 million copies and been translated into 31 languages. He has since written or collaborated on five other books on child care and writes a column for "Redbook" magazine.

He joined the National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy in 1962 when he became concerned about the need for a test ban treaty to protect children from radiation fallout. He was arrested in 1968 for demonstrating for peace. He continues to speak for peace and nuclear test ban treaties, as well as on child care. "The two are related," he said. "Virtually every child has a lot of fear about the end of the world by nuclear annihilation. I work and encourage others to work to help alleviate that fear."

Spock will deliver two public lectures tomorrow. He will talk about "Raising Children in A Nuclear Age" at 12:30 p.m. in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Auditorium. This talk is sponsored by the ECU School of Medicine Department of Medical Humanities and the Eastern N.C. chapter of the Physicians for Social Responsibility.

At 7:30 p.m. in Hendrix Theatre of the Mendenhall Student Center at ECU, he will talk about "Stresses Affecting Families and Children." Among the sponsors of this talk are the ECU Schools of Medicine and Allied Health, the Pitt County Medical Society and Medical Society Auxiliary and the Adventures in Health organization.

Snapshots Recalled Happiness

DEAR ABBY: Ever since this past June, when my mother (age 95) died, I have wanted to share our experience with you, and in turn with your millions of readers. We are a large, close family, although geographically we are thousands of miles apart.

My husband and I visited China five years ago. On one of our scheduled tours, we visited a temple where a funeral was in progress. On the altar was a large photograph of the deceased. I thought no more of this picture until this June when we were preparing for a repast in our home following the graveside service for Mother. Suddenly, I thought what a marvelous idea! My sister and I ransacked drawers and albums, gathering more than 100 snapshots. Fortunately, all of Mother's 17 grandchildren, her 26 great-grandchildren, and many friends and neighbors who had been a part of her long life appeared in the snapshots, which we taped on two doors in our center hallway. What a blessing these pictures were! The children chuckled as they looked at Nana with a false face on, Nana holding our big boxer on her lap, Nana at a birthday celebration blowing out candles. Rather than tears, because of these pictures, there was laughter!

As I am writing to you now (1:25 a.m.) on Oct. 20, I am looking at more than 100 different pictures — those of my 34-year-old son, Maj. Dan Haworth of the U.S. Marines, whose helicopter crashed in the Persian Gulf on Oct. 4. He was the only one of four men not rescued.

Dear Abby

These pictures of our son's lovely wife, his two young children, and many members of our large, wonderful family snapped during highlights of 10 happy years helped us once again. — JOAN E. HAWORTH, WILMINGTON, DEL.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married a little more than two years. He has every quality I have ever wanted in a husband — but he turned out to be a very selfish lover. I do not feel desired or appreciated, and I really am very attractive and feminine. When we are both in front of a mirror, he never looks at me — instead he looks at himself and comments on his hair, or asks me if he should grow a beard. Meanwhile, I am standing nude right alongside of him, and he never even throws me a glance.

He is also the laziest lover I have ever come across. He wants me to do all the work while he stays on his back. When I ask him to do something I would enjoy, he tries halfheartedly, then quits before 10 seconds are up.

I would look for an extramarital affair, but I don't want it on my conscience. Please suggest something. — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: There appears to be an appalling lack of communication between you and your husband. An extramarital affair is definitely not the solution. It is imperative that you do whatever is necessary to get your lazy lover to a qualified sex therapist if yours is to be a lasting, loving marriage. Your family physician or gynecologist should be able to recommend a therapist in your area. Don't put this off. The sooner your man is educated in this important part of marriage, the healthier your marriage will be. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the letter from "Neither Hair nor There," the woman who wanted to try the hairdresser in the next booth but hated to offend her own hairdresser: Why doesn't she do what I did? I wasn't happy with the barber who had been cutting my hair, but I liked the work of another man in the same shop, so on my barber's day off, I quietly booked an appointment with the other man. It worked out just fine. — UNHACKED IN TOLUCA LAKE, CALIF.

DEAR UNHACKED: It may have worked out just fine for you, but when a client drops one operator for another in the same shop, trying to keep it a secret would be like trying to smuggle down past a rooster.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WONDERING IN UTICA, N.Y.: As late as you are, send the thank-you notes for your wedding gifts now; do not wait until after the baby arrives so you can enclose them with the birth announcements.

"ANTI-EVERYTHING" TREATMENT

Most homeowners have discovered that the so-called "miracle fibers" fall a little short of the miraculous! The new sales trend is toward "anti-everything" treatments to make up for shortcomings. This term refers to special properties engineered into, or applied onto, fibers by manufacturers. Some of the more popular are anti-static, anti-soil and anti-odor properties.

Today's modern technology involving pace-makers and computers demands anti-static carpet. This property is achieved with stainless steel fibers in yarns, more with static-conducting chemicals in backing adhesives.

Anti-soil/stain properties are provided through the use of products such as Dupont Teflon or 3M Scotchgard Carpet Protector. These treatments are great, however, staining materials eventually will penetrate if removal steps aren't taken within a reasonable period. Soil will still adhere to and damage treated fibers; and therefore, yearly cleaning and periodic retreatment is required.

Less familiar to the consumer are anti-odor treatments. Their purpose is to minimize the growth of odor-causing or allergy-aggravating fungi or bacteria. Already these chemicals have been formulated for use in consumer products, such as camping tents which resist mildew, surgical fabrics which inhibit bacteria and germs and socks which remain essentially odor free. Carpet must be thoroughly cleaned periodically if this property is to remain effective and not simply be covered up.

As you can see, technology is moving forward to serve the homemaker today even better—the object, of course, being to provide more time for family and leisure activities.

Cobbler Adds Repair Award To Honors List

By TARA BRADLEY-STECK
Associated Press Writer

TRAFFORD, Pa. (AP) — Robert DiRinaldo has healed more soles than a clergyman, and that has made him a shoe-in for a national award.

DiRinaldo recently won the Shoe Service Institute's Silver Cup, which is given to the best shoe repairer in the United States and Canada.

It's the culmination of a series of awards DiRinaldo has won in his 47 years in the business of cutting leather and sewing uppers in this small, Westmoreland County town about 25 miles from Pittsburgh.

"When the president of the institute called me he said, 'I've got good news and I've got bad news. The good news is you won the Grand Silver Cup. And the bad news is that there's nothing left for you to win anymore,'" DiRinaldo said.

For the contest, the 55-year-old cobbler half-sole and heeled one woman's black pump and one man's brown sealskin slip-on, leaving their mates in their original, rough condition.

He then mailed them to the Shoe Service Institute of America in LaGrange, Ill., where a panel of judges compared the two and graded them.

In the window of his neat, red-brick shop, several trophies, blue ribbons and letters of congratulation from local politicians, congressmen and President Reagan surround the award-winning shoes and their battered companions.

"I put my heart into those shoes," said DiRinaldo, a trim, tanned man with salt-and-pepper hair.

DiRinaldo came close to winning the top award last year, but ended up instead with the Eastern Silver Cup, which is given to the best shoe repairman east of the Mississippi River. He also won first place in the men's and women's orthopedic shoe category last year and won lesser awards in previous years.

The recognition has brought him clients from all over the country.

"We're in a little, one-horse town, but we could be anywhere," he said. "If you're good, people will seek you out, and that's what happened to us over the years."

On the other hand, though, being off the beaten path has had its drawbacks.

"If you're in a small town, you have to work 10 times harder with your craft," he said. "You have to do something really good to get people to come to you. It's different than being in a hit-and-run area like a mall or a big city where people are always passing your doors."

About 25 years ago, DiRinaldo made a pair of leather sandals for his 6-year-old daughter. That led to requests from neighbors and relatives for handmade sandals and, eventually, to an article in a local newspaper.

"Just after the article, we actually had a traffic jam in Trafford. The police had to be called in," he said. "People came in wheelchairs and everything else. We were taking orders for the next 2 1/2 weeks before we could even start making any sandals."

Today, DiRinaldo has a mail-order business that ships supple, leather-made sandals and sandal kits all over the country. He also custom makes sandals for hard-to-fit feet or hard-to-please customers.

"It used to be, when the summer was over, we'd have a relief. There wouldn't be any more sandals making until early spring," he said.

"But we got in the mail-order business, and now there's no end to the sandals. They come in December, January, February. And so here I am, making sandals in the winter," he said.

DiRinaldo learned his craft from his father, an Italian shoemaker who opened the shop when he moved to Trafford in the 1920s. As a little boy, he'd watch his father work. At 8, he was pounding nails into heels and at 11, he was operating the stitching machine.

By the time he was ready to start a family, DiRinaldo had blossomed into a craftsman, winning his first award from the Shoe Service Institute in 1956.

Although DiRinaldo says he'd rather have chosen carpentry as a lifelong profession, he continued with shoe repair because of his father.

"My first love is woodworking, but I stayed in shoes because my father was sick through the years and I helped him keep the family together by working with him. And then when he died in 1962, I had gotten so involved in it that I just stayed with it," he said.

"But when I won my first award, he was more proud of that than I was. He'd have been a thousand times prouder today. I wish he was living, because to tell you the truth, I really did it for him."

MORE PROTEIN

NEW YORK (AP) — To get more protein into your diet, eat more carbohydrates.

Harvard nutritionist Virginia Aronson says most of us eat too much protein. Although our bodies break protein down for fuel, it's a wasteful source of energy.

Eating extra carbohydrates — a natural fuel — will free your body to use the protein to repair muscles. That's protein's best role, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

Lights Of Love Tree Dedicated To EastCare Crew

A giant Christmas tree decorated with hundreds of lights will serve as the focal point of a fund-raising campaign sponsored by the Pitt County Medical Society Auxiliary.

Members of the auxiliary are collecting contributions to illuminate each of the lights as part of the "Lights of Love" program. The tree has been erected on the front lawn of Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Tax-deductible contributions can range from $5 up and may be made in honor or memory of a loved one.

Individuals, groups or businesses wishing to make a contribution may contact Marti Byrum at 756-8842, Wendy Wilson at 756-9775 or Pam Burkart at 756-7399. All proceeds will go to support PCMH and health education projects in the community. The tree will be lighted in a ceremony at 7 p.m. Dec. 3. It will be dedicated to the memory of the EastCare crew members and their patient, who died in an air ambulance crash Jan. 8.

Contributions to the Lights of Love project can be made by sending a check payable to PCMSA Health Education Foundation. The checks should be sent to Marjorie Dellesga, Health Education Treasurer, 112 Antler Road., Greenville, 27834.

The auxiliary, composed of wives of local physicians who are medical society members, is a civic and philanthropic organization. Some of its past projects include furnishing the playroom at the Ronald McDonald House, purchasing a defibrillator for the hospital's emergency department and supporting the Adventures in Health program at River Park North.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a broad advance today, aided by a stronger dollar and anticipation of an agreement on the federal budget.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 31.34 to 1,966.35 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 4 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 956 up, 230 down and 370 unchanged.

Trading was relatively quiet. Volume on the Big Board came to 23.86 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The dollar rose in foreign exchange markets around the world today following President Reagan's weekend statement that negotiators were close to agreement on a plan to reduce the federal budget deficit.

The government reported this morning that industrial production rose 0.6 percent in October, providing further evidence that the financial crisis came in a setting of robust business activity.

Among actively traded blue chips, Ford Motor rose 1 1/4 to 76 1/2; International Business Machines 1 1/2 to 122 1/2; General Electric 1/4 to 46 1/2, and American Express 1/2 to 25 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 1.79 to 139.39. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.90 to 253.34.

On Friday, the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 25.20 to 1,935.01, finishing the week with a net loss of 24.04 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 7 to 5 on the NYSE, with 672 up, 924 down and 381 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 174.92 million shares, against 206.28 million in the previous session.

Jet Veers Before Denver Crash

 At least nine flights — five United and four Continental — were canceled this morning because the airlines could not get enough planes into Denver after the crash shut the airport for several hours Sunday, airport officials said.

With the exception of the runway where the crash occurred, all runways were open today, said Boulware.

The last major U.S. plane crash took place Aug. 16, when a Northwest Airlines MD-80, a version of the DC-9, crashed on takeoff at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, killing 156 people.

Helpenstell was one of many who suffered minor injuries Sunday, although he was trapped two hours. He was treated for hypothermia, as were several who spent hours inside the crushed wreckage before being freed.

"I remember thinking, 'I'm about to die! This is it!' And then I wondered what's it going to feel like," Helpenstell said.

Libby Smoot of Ketchum, Idaho, who escaped virtually unharmed, said she and other passengers "were petrified. We knew exactly what was happening."

"We took off and veered to the right. We felt the wing touch, then veered to the left. We were off the ground and we knew exactly what was happening as it happened."

"We were skidding on our side and eating dirt. A lot of people were screaming. A ball of flame passed by us as we were skidding along."

The injured were transported to area hospitals, and those not seriously injured were released before midnight.

Three crewmembers, including the pilot and first officer, were among those killed.

Snow had been falling most of the day in Denver and airport officials said visibility was low and some flights were hampered by strong crosswinds. At least 6 inches of new, wet snow had fallen by midday. The east-west runways were closed because of the storm, causing some delays in departures, including that of Flight 1713, which was scheduled to arrive in Boise at 2:28 p.m. MST, minutes after it actually started its takeoff.

Officials in the control tower saw a fireball on the north-south runway and later speculated that the fire came from wing tanks that exploded when the left wing separated from the plane's body. However, the fire went out quickly and the deaths and injuries were not caused by fire, officials said.

The fuselage broke into three main pieces and many of the passengers were trapped inside, some up to six hours.

The plane came to rest about 2,500 feet from the end of the 10,000-foot-long runway with bodies, injured passengers and wreckage strewn between that runway and a parallel runway.

This is the way most people look at funeral prearrangement.

Granted, it isn't the cheeriest of subjects. But, considering the benefits it offers, funeral prearrangement does merit just a little attention.

The puzzling thing is why so many people carefully avoid even thinking about it. The fact is, prearrangement takes very little time. Moreover, funeral prearrangement makes matters infinitely more simple for family and friends in the long run. And ultimately, it's your responsibility—yours alone.

Convictions Upheld

mail and wire fraud statutes," White said. "The Journal's business information that it intended to be kept confidential was its property."

White said that would be true even if it was not spelled out in the newspaper's work rules distributed to employees.

A rule against distributing confidential information "in the employee manual merely removed any doubts on that score and made the finding of specific intent to defraud that much easier," White added.

The ruling is a victory for the Reagan administration, which noted that Winans and his co-defendants netted nearly $700,000 in profits. The Justice Department urged the high court to uphold the convictions.

However, the court's split vote on the application of the securities laws could leave some uncertainty about efforts to crack down on other forms of insider trading.

The government said that if Winans and his co-defendants were exempt from securities violations it would create a loophole for other accused violators of insider trading laws. The government cited takeover speculator Ivan Boesky, investment banker Martin Siegel and former investment banker Dennis Levine.

Winans was sentenced to 18 months in prison for securities fraud and mail and wire fraud.

The mail and wire fraud charges stemmed from the fact that Wall Street Journal articles are transmitted by telephone line to its printing plant and the newspaper is mailed to subscribers.

Winans was one of two Journal reporters who took turns writing the newspaper's "Heard on the Street" column from August 1982 through 1984.

The daily feature is believed to cause sharp, if temporary, fluctuations in the price of stocks discussed in the column.

Winans revealed the subject matter of some columns in advance to two stockbrokers, Peter Brant and Kenneth Felis.

Prosecutors said the stockbrokers made about $690,000 and paid some $31,000 in kickbacks to Winans and his former roommate, David Carpenter, who had worked as a clerk at the newspaper and was said to be an errand-boy in the scheme.

Brant became the government's key witness. Felis was sentenced to six months in prison, and Carpenter was placed on three years probation.

Winans was charged with misappropriating confidential information from the Journal in violation of its rules barring reporters from trading stocks they are writing about or disclosing the content of forthcoming articles to people outside the newspaper.

His lawyers argued that he should have been fired for the violations, not prosecuted criminally.

Chargers Capture Eighth In Row

By The Associated Press
The San Diego Chargers, with a commitment to change this season, might be the best team in the NFL. The Los Angeles Raiders, with their "Commitment to Excellence," may be doomed to mediocrity.

Vince Abbott, cut by the Raiders last year, kicked three field goals Sunday night and the Chargers won their eighth straight game, beating Los Angeles 16-14.

At 8-1, the Chargers have their longest winning streak since 1961 and the best record in the AFC.

The Raiders, slowed by a team-record 186 yards in penalties, lost their sixth in a row and fell to 3-6. The losing streak is their longest since a 13-game skid in 1962.

"That little guy named Abbott nailed the coffin shut tonight," Howie Long, the Raiders' all-pro defensive end, said of the team's flagging playoff hopes.

The Raiders saw flags all night, from the fans and the referees. The record crowd of 60,639 at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium got "Fans Flags" in a pre-game giveaway and twirled them throughout the evening, similar to the "Homer Hankies" that Minnesota fans swirled as the Twins won the World Series.

The other scores Sunday: New Orleans 26, San Francisco 24; Indianapolis 40, Miami 21; New York Jets 16, Kansas City 9; Cleveland 27, Buffalo 21; Dallas 23, New England 17 in overtime; Washington 20, Detroit 13; Houston 23, Pittsburgh 3;

Seattle 24, Green Bay 13; New York Giants 20, Philadelphia 17; Los Angeles Rams 27, St. Louis 24; Minnesota 23, Tampa Bay 17, and Cincinnati 16, Atlanta 10.

Chicago, leading the NFC with a 7-1 record, plays at Denver tonight.

The Raiders finally played mistake-free in scoring two touchdowns in the fourth quarter. But by then it was too late as San Diego swept the season series for the first time since 1981.

"It drives you crazy," Raiders quarterback Marc Wilson said. "If we completed a pass, we all just started looking for the yellow flag."

The Chargers, 4-12 last season and out of the playoffs since 1982, continued to win with their balanced attack. Defense and the running game now get as much attention as the Dan Fouts-led passing attack.

"It was a real physical game. We knew it would be going in," Chargers Coach Al Saunders said. "It was a game of might versus might."

The Chargers might have decided it early, scoring 10 points on Raiders' turnovers in taking a 16-0 lead at halftime.

Abbott, who lost out to incumbent Raiders kicker Chris Bahr last year before coming to San Diego this season, kicked field goals of 38, 47 and 39 yards in the second quarter.

"Personally, I took this as any other game," said Abbott, who kicked game-winning field goals against Cleveland and Indianapolis over the past two weeks. "I don't get any special satisfaction from playing the Raiders, but I did from the Chargers beating the Raiders."

Fouts had thrown a 9-yard touchdown pass to Kellen Winslow in the first quarter.

The Raiders scored with eight minutes left in the game on Wilson's 5-yard pass to Dokie Williams. Wilson threw a 47-yard TD pass to James Lofton with 16 seconds left.

Fouts completed 15 of 32 passes for 149 yards while Wilson hit 15 of 32 attempts for 228 yards. Each was intercepted once, and each turnover led to a touchdown.

Saints 26, 49ers 24

Morten Andersen kicked a 40-yard field with 1:06 to play, atoning for a miss in a similar situation three weeks ago, as the Saints snapped San Francisco's seven-game winning streak.

The victory moved New Orleans within one game of San Francisco in the NFC West. The 49ers are 7-2, New Orleans 6-3.

The field goal was Andersen's fourth of the game. Andersen made five field goals against San Francisco on Oct. 25, but he missed a 52-yard attempt with seven seconds remaining as the 49ers won 24-22.

Joe Montana was supposed to have sat out Sunday's game with a finger injury, but he was pressed into a relief appearance and threw a 29-yard scoring pass to tight end Ron Heller with 2:54 left, giving the 49ers a 24-23 lead.

Tigers Sew Up ACC Title

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Clemson has tucked away another Atlantic Coast Conference football championship, but its 45-16 victory over Maryland was overshadowed by two wild conference games that went down to the wire this weekend.

North Carolina State rallied from a 31-14 halftime deficit to claim a 47-45 victory over Duke. In Charlottesville, Va., Virginia rallied to beat North Carolina, 20-17.

Maryland took a 7-3 lead on Ferrell Edmunds 66-yard touchdown reception from Neil O'Donnell. The Tigers took the lead for good on Rodney Williams' 50-yard scoring pass to Gary Cooper in the first quarter. Terry Allen ran for two touchdowns in the second quarter, and the Williams-to-Cooper connection worked again for a 44-yard touchdown play in the third quarter.

"I think we're pretty close to being the kind of football team we want to be," Clemson Coach Danny Ford said. "I thought that we showed today that we are a very good football team."

Maryland Coach Joe Krivak agreed with Ford.

"It was a good, old-fashioned knockdown, drag-out whipping," he said. "They were by far the best team on the field today."

Clemson took its 10th league title, and it appears to have locked up a bid to the Florida Citrus Bowl, although Ford and his players won't receive an official invitation to any bowl game until next Saturday.

Elsewhere, No. 14 South Carolina pounded Wake Forest 30-0.

The roller coaster which has been N.C. State's season looked to be at another low point when the Blue Devils took a 31-14 lead at halftime.

Shane Montgomery was the N.C. State quarterback after starter Preston Poag hurt his knee last week. But Montgomery directed the Wolfpack to a 20-point run and the lead, passing for 175 yards in the third period and a 52-yard pass play to Todd Varn to give the Wolfpack a 34-31 edge.

N.C. State converted an interception into Bobby Crumpler's 1-yard touchdown run at the start of the fourth quarter for a 41-31 lead, but freshman Randy Jones scored for Duke to cut the gap to 41-38.

Bryan Carter kicked a 47-yard field goal at 10:56 to raise the Wolfpack lead to 44-38 and N.C. State was heading for another apparent score when Anthony Allen recovered a Montgomery fumble. Steve Slayden, who passed for a career-high 458 yards, hit Clarkston Hines on a 12-yard touchdown pass with 5:11 left.

Montgomery, who passed for a school record 468 yards, completed a key 24-yard pass to Danny Peebles. That sustained the nine-play drive that ended with Carter's 32-yard, game-winning field goal.

Doug Peterson missed a 55-yard field goal attempt as time ran out.

"We could have folded the tent and sulked at halftime when nothing was going right in the first half," Wolfpack coach Dick Sheridan said. "But we didn't."

N.C. State is 4-6, but 4-2 in the ACC and still within a game of another second-place finish. Duke dropped to 4-6, dashing first-year coach Steve Spurrier's hopes of a winning season. The Blue Devils are 1-5 in the ACC.

Reportedly, the representative of the Independence Bowl left the Tar Heel-Cavalier game with about five minutes to play. He missed a great finish.

With North Carolina leading 17-7, quarterback Scott Secules directed two scoring drives in the final 4:44. He hit Keith Mattioli with a 9-yard touchdown pass with 30 seconds left for the clinching score.

North Carolina's last gasp ended in the arms Tony Covington, who intercepted a Mark Maye pass at the Virginia 1 with three seconds left.

"I cannot describe the feeling," said Virginia coach George Welsh, whose Cavaliers wrapped up their fourth winning season in six years in climbing to 6-4, 4-2 in the ACC.

"I feel great, and I'm very happy for that team and very happy for that quarterback," Welsh added. "He had some tough times out there today, but if you hang in there, some good things will happen."

North Carolina, finding tough times are only getting tougher, fell to 5-5 and 3-3.

"We had two really hard ball games recently and getting up for this game was hard," Tar Heel Coach Dick Crum said.

Crum, under fire for what some fans say is conservative play-calling and the inability to win crucial games, used part of his weekly television show Sunday to complain about the officiating.

"I think once the momentum gets to building like that, people get caught up in that," he said. "And I think that includes the officials. Virginia threw the ball 51 times in the game. There was one holding call. That's a little bit unusual."

Virginia was penalized nine times for 107 yards and North Carolina lost 79 yards on 12 infractions.

Syracuse Overwhelming Pick As Preseason Choice On Poll

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

Syracuse, which came within one point of the national championship last season and has three starters back from that team, was the overwhelming choice today as the No. 1 team in the Associated Press' preseason college basketball poll.

The Orangemen, who lost to Indiana 74-73 in the title game when Keith Smart hit a jumper with four seconds to play, received 32 of 64 first-place votes and 1,177 points from a nationwide panel of writers and broadcasters in assuming their first-ever No. 1 ranking in the poll. Syracuse was ranked second during the 1979-80 season.

Purdue, one of the three Big 10 teams in the Top Ten, edged North Carolina by one point, tied with Indiana for the conference title last season, has four starters back from a team that went 25-5 and was eliminated in the second round of the NCAA tournament. The Tar Heels, who were the No. 1 choice in last year's preseason poll, were 29-3 last season, but lost three starters to graduation.

Pittsburgh, like Syracuse a member of the Big East, was fourth with 946 points, while Kentucky edged Indiana 918-914 for fifth. Kansas and Missouri, both members of the Big Eight, had 852 and 811 points, respectively, while Michigan of the Big Ten, with 797 points, and Wyoming, 569, rounded out the Top Ten.

The first nine teams in the voting each received first-place votes. Purdue, Kentucky and Indiana each received six, Pittsburgh got five, North Carolina and Kansas had three each, Michigan two and Missouri one.

The Second Ten was Iowa, Temple, Louisville, Florida, Duke, Georgetown, Arizona, Georgia Tech, Oklahoma and DePaul.

Nevada-Las Vegas, which was the top-ranked team for 12 of the 16 polls last season and reached the Final Four, did not make the rankings. The Runnin' Rebels, 37-2, lost three starters from that team.

The Big Ten had four teams in the Top Twenty, all in the first 11 places. The Big East, Big Eight and Atlantic Coast Conference had three teams each in the Top Twenty.

Kentucky is the highest ranked of eight teams which were not in the final poll of last season. The Wildcats, Louisville and Arizona, which all won 18 games, and Georgia Tech, 16-14, were the only teams which didn't win at least 20 games last season.

Louisville is the only team which did not qualify for the NCAA tournament last season. The Cardinals, 18-14, also turned down a bid to the NIT when they were not invited to the NCAA's field of 64.

Michigan, which will get some immediate help from Rumeal Robinson and Terry Mills, both of whom missed last season because of academic problems, and Wyoming, which returns all five starters from a team that went to the third round of the NCAA, were the only members of this year's poll which were not ranked at any point of last season.

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press' preseason college basketball poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, total points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1, 1986-87 record and last year's final ranking.

ECU Hosts Czech Team

East Carolina University's men's basketball team will get their first official test of the year Tuesday night when the Pirates face the Czechoslovakian National team in Minges Coliseum at 7:30 p.m.

The game will mark the debut of new Pirate coach Mike Steele, who comes to East Carolina following a successful tenure at DePauw. He replaces Charlie Harrison, who resigned last year after a five-year stint as the Pirate head coach.

Steele, however, faces an up-hill battle this year with the suspension of Blue Edwards for a violation of the student code, leaving him with only minimal experience on the team. The only two players who have any playing time are guards Reed Lose and Jeff Kelly, both of whom started at one time or another last year. Between them, they averaged less than four points a game.

The Pirates have no seniors on their roster, and just three juniors, Kelly, transfer Dominique Martin and walkon Kenny Murphy.

Gus Hill, recruited two years ago by Harrison, but unable to play until this year because of surgery, and Lose, are the only two sophomores on the team. The remainder of the roster are freshmen.

Woody Peele

The 1987 football season came to an end Saturday for East Carolina's Pirates. It wasn't the ending they had hoped for as they fell to Southern Mississippi, 38-34.

Nevertheless, the Pirate fans and players can take solace in that this was a year in which a great deal of improvement was seen. And, indeed, it can be said that with a couple of breaks in at least two games, the Pirates could have sported at least a 6-5 and maybe even a 7-4 record this year.

Those two games are against Illinois and Southern Mississippi. In both, the opportunity was there for victory, it only slipped through the Pirates' fingers.

And even in a loss like the one to South Carolina, 34-12, there was a positive that can be seen in retrospect. Consider what the Gamecocks did to N.C. State and Wake Forest. Neither managed to score, and neither came close to the yardage the Pirates put on the field.

In many ways, the Pirate team is a young one. ECU is operating with a red-shirt sophomore at quarterback and a true sophomore as his backup. Except for Anthony Simpson, most of the running backs and wideouts are underclassmen. Much of the offensive line will return next year.

Defense, of course, will be hit hard. Much of it will need to be replaced, including just about the entire linebacking crew. Heavy emphasis must be placed on bringing in defensive personnel and offensive linemen.

And if tradition has anything to do with it, next year could be a banner season. As we pointed out last week, only once in five previous attempts at earning a winning season in the final game, did the Pirates win since they school left the "college" division of play.

That was in 1962, Clarence Stasavich's first year at the helm. The Pirates beat Eastern Kentucky, 29-12, to finish 5-4.

But in 1966, Louisville beat ECU, 21-7, for a 4-5-1 record; in 1968, East Tennessee State took a 17-7 win for a 4-6 finish; in 1971, Sonny Randle's first year, Tampa blitzed the Pirates, 43-7, to end up 4-6; and in 1981, William & Mary beat ECU 31-21, for a 5-6 season, Ed Emory's second.

The following years — except for one — produced big winners. Stas' 1963 team went 9-1 and went to a bowl game; his 1967 team was 8-2; Randle's 1972 team was 9-2; and Emory's 1982 team was 7-4.

Only in 1969 did the Pirates post another losers, 2-7, Stasavich's final year.

Hopefully, the Pirates will continue the upside of the tradition and come through with a winner.

Next year's schedule will be no easier. Many of the teams on this year's slate return, along with Syracuse, one of the toughest teams in the country. The Orangemen will pay a visit to Ficklen in 1988.

Meanwhile, just up the road in Chapel Hill, rumors are running strong that the Rams' Club has come up with enough to buy out the remaining contract of Dick Crum, the North Carolina football coach.

Rumors circulated last week that Crum would be leaving after this year. Crum, however, denied it at his weekly news conference. The loss to Virginia this Saturday will certainly increase the hue and cry for Crum's head, however.

Most probably, they will get it.

East Carolina quarterback Travis Hunter put himself into the record book with his play this year, despite being only a sophomore.

Hunter finished the year with 1,478 yards in total offense, which ranks as the eighth-highest in ECU history. He passed John Casazza and Carlester Crumpler and ousted Jimmy Southerland, with 1,190 from the top ten. His passing this year, 1,107, ranks as the fifth best among Pirates. Hunter also completed 76 passes this year, which also ranks fifth best in a single season.

In career lists, Anthony Simpson finished his eligibility with 2,035 yards, which ranks 10th, passing Tom Michel, who has 1,788 yards.

Both Hunter and Libretto, who is also a sophomore, moved into the top 10 in career passing yards. Hunter now stands sixth with 1,622, while Libretto is 10th with 1,126. Hunter, should he continue to amass the yards, appears a sure shot to surpass Carl Summerell's career record of 2,859 yards, having reached the halfway point already.

Hunter is also sixth in pass completions with 118, and again can take sight on Summerell, who had 196 in his career. Libretto, with 94 completions, has moved into eighth place on the list.

Ironically, no receivers moved onto the list for catches or yardage either in a single season or a career.

Lakers Definitely Were On A Roll

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

After the Los Angeles Lakers scored more than 70 points in each half, Coach Pat Riley had to admit that the team is on a roll.

"We're starting to break through offensively," Riley said after the Lakers stayed unbeaten with a 147-130 victory over the San Antonio Spurs Sunday night. "I'm pleased, but not satisfied. Work still has to be done on our defense."

The victory gave the Lakers a 6-0 record, the team's best start ever, spanning 12 years in Minnesota and 27 in Southern California.

"It's a positive way to start the season," said Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 19 points but was only the fifth-leading scorer for the Lakers. "It's still too early to claim that we're the best Laker team ever, but it's a good confidence builder."

"We have to prepare for the tougher teams coming up," said James Worthy, who had 24 points and equaled a career high with 10 assists. "It's nice to start this way, but we still have to finish a long season."

In other NBA games Sunday, it was Boston 103, Indiana 98; Washington 113, New Jersey 109; Houston 108, Seattle 106; and Milwaukee 112, Atlanta 103.

Magic Johnson led the Lakers with 25 points, and he also had 10 assists to become the club's all-time assists leader.

"That was a surprise to me," said Johnson, whose career assist total is 6,245, seven more than Jerry West. "I didn't know anything about it until they announced it at halftime. I feel good about it, particularly because Jerry West is a Hall of Famer as well as a hero here in Los Angeles."

West set the record during 14 seasons with the Lakers; Johnson bettered it in just his ninth year.

Johnson, who is about two-thirds of the way to Oscar Robertson's all-time assists record of 9,887, said he isn't concerned about surpassing that total.

"All I want to do is win championship rings," Johnson said. "I want to be the most 'diamond' man in NBA history."

Johnson was impressed with Worthy's passing. It was the second time this season that the high-scoring forward reached double figures in assists.

"He always has been an excellent passer," Johnson said. "Part of his game goes unnoticed because he scores so much. He can do a lot of things."

Los Angeles outscored San Antonio 24-8 in the last 5:24 of the first half, breaking away from a 47-47 tie to take a 71-55 lead at halftime.

"We were able to stay with them for awhile, but they just seem to play flawless basketball," Spurs Coach Bob Weiss said. "If you stumble just a little, they'll take it to you."

Byron Scott scored 11 of his 23 points during the run, including a 3-point basket on a feed from Johnson with nine seconds left in the quarter — giving Johnson his fourth assist of the game and moving him ahead of West.

A.C. Green had 23 points and 13 rebounds for the Lakers, while David Greenwood led the Spurs with 23 points.

Celtics 103, Pacers 98
Boston also stayed unbeaten after six games as Larry Bird scored 24 points and Danny Ainge 21 against Indiana.

The Celtics led 61-53 at halftime after hitting 68 percent of its shots in the first quarter and 65 percent in the second period. But the Pacers got as close as a point three times in the fourth quarter, the last time at 91-90 with 6:46 left.

Boston then scored the next seven points, including Ainge's third 3-point goal of the game, to regain control. Rookie Reggie Miller came off the bench to lead Indiana with 23 points.

Bullets 113, Nets 109
Washington kept New Jersey winless after four games as Moses Malone had 28 points and 17 rebounds and Jeff Malone 25 points.

The Nets trailed 102-94 midway through the fourth quarter before closing the deficit to one point twice, at 104-103 with 2:38 left and 110-109 with 22 seconds remaining.

John Williams then made two free throws for the Bullets and Orlando Woolridge, playing his first game of the season because of an injury, missed a 3-point attempt with seven seconds to play. Williams grabbed the rebound, was fouled and hit one of two free throws to clinch the victory.

Bernard King scored 21 points for the Bullets. Buck Williams led the Nets with 23 points and 19 rebounds, while Woolridge had 22 points and nine assists, five more assists than his previous career high.

Bucks 112, Hawks 103
Terry Cummings scored 28 points for Milwaukee and helped hold Atlanta star Dominique Wilkins to seven.

Wilkins, averaging 27 points for the Hawks, had only two points after the first quarter.

"With a player like Dominique, you never stop him," Cummings said. "You just hope he has a bad night. I've seen Dominique where's he reached the apex with nobody up there with him."

The Bucks never trailed after breaking a 83-83 tie in the fourth quarter with a 10-3 spurt featuring two baskets each by Paul Pressey and Cummings.

Jack Sikma added 23 points and 12 rebounds for Milwaukee, and Kevin Willis led Atlanta with 21 points.

Rockets 108, SuperSonics 106
Houston beat Seattle when Rodney McCray sank a 20-foot jump shot at the buzzer.

After the Rockets took two timeouts with four seconds left, McCray took the inbounds pass, dribbled toward the basket and lofted the game-winner.

Bowl Choices Fall Into Place

By The Associated Press
Most of the pieces are already in place for college football bowls even though bids can't officially be extended until Saturday.

Some of the conference champions who get automatic New Year's Day berths are yet to be determined, but the at-large bids are already set.

Sources told The Associated Press on Sunday that Miami will meet Saturday's Oklahoma-Nebraska winner in the Orange Bowl, Syracuse will face the Southeastern Conference representative in the Sugar Bowl, and Notre Dame will meet the Southwest Conference champ — Texas, Texas A&M or Arkansas — in the Cotton Bowl.

In other New Year's bowl games, Penn State will play Clemson in the Citrus, Florida State will face the Oklahoma-Nebraska loser in the Fiesta, and Michigan State will play the winner of Saturday's Southern California-UCLA game in the Rose Bowl. The Bruins could also make it to the Rose with a tie against the Trojans.

In Saturday's games involving the Top Ten, No. 1 Oklahoma beat Missouri 17-13, No. 3 Miami defeated Virginia Tech 27-13, No. 4 Florida State beat Furman 41-10, No. 5 UCLA defeated Washington 47-14, No. 6 Syracuse beat Boston College 45-17, No. 7 Notre Dame defeated No. 11 Alabama 37-6, No. 12 Auburn beat No. 8 Georgia 27-11, No. 9 Clemson beat Maryland 45-16, and No. 10 Louisiana State defeated Mississippi State 34-14.

In the Second Ten, No. 13 Michigan State beat No. 16 Indiana 27-3 to clinch a Rose Bowl berth, No. 14 South Carolina defeated Wake Forest 30-0, Pitt beat No. 15 Penn State 10-0, No. 17 Oklahoma State beat Kansas 49-17, No. 18 Tennessee beat Mississippi 55-13, and No. 19 Texas A&M defeated No. 20 Arkansas 14-0.

Miami still has to play Toledo, Notre Dame and South Carolina. If the Hurricanes win those games, it could set up a national title game in the Orange Bowl against the Oklahoma-Nebraska winner.

Sources told the AP that Miami will play in the Orange Bowl even if the Hurricanes lose one or more of their remaining games. But Pete Williams, president of the Orange Bowl's selection committee, said Sunday that the panel probably would invite the highest-ranked team to play the Big Eight Conference champion.

"I'm totally confused by the rumors that I'm hearing," Williams said. "We've said all along we would probably invite the highest-ranked team under the circumstances."

Cotton Bowl officials said Notre Dame conceivably could change the New Year's Day lineup should Coach Lou Holtz insist on going to the Orange Bowl if the Irish can beat Miami on Nov. 28. Under that scenario, the Miami-Notre Dame loser would play in the Cotton Bowl.

Cotton Bowl officials, who want Notre Dame, rejected the plan last week.

Syracuse may be left out of the national title picture even though the Orangemen can finish the regular season 11-0 with a victory over West Virginia on Saturday.

Syracuse will play No. 12 Auburn in the Sugar Bowl if Auburn beats Alabama Nov. 27 to win the SEC title. If Auburn loses, Alabama and LSU would end up in a tie for the conference crown, and the Sugar Bowl would decide which team goes to New Orleans.

Auburn Coach Pat Dye said he's been told that LSU would get the Sugar Bowl bid if Alabama beats Auburn. "That's a heck of a note," he said. "Auburn will be playing for Auburn, but Alabama will be playing for LSU." In other bowls, sources said, it will be Arkansas and Georgia in the Liberty, Tennessee and Indiana in the Peach, Air Force and Arizona State in the Freedom, Michigan and an SEC runner-up in the Hall of Fame, South Carolina and an SEC team in the Gator, Iowa and the Western Athletic Conference champion — probably Wyoming — in the Holiday, and Pittsburgh and the Southwest Conference runnerup in the Bluebonnet.

Sources said Florida will play in the Aloha Bowl and Oklahoma State will play in the Sun Bowl, but their opponents have yet to be determined. Sources also said Tulane will probably play a SWC team in the Independence Bowl. The lineup for the All American Bowl is uncertain.

No. 1 Oklahoma 17, Missouri 13
Oklahoma struggled in what figured to be a warm-up for its showdown with No. 2 Nebraska as quarterback Charles Thompson, subbing for the injured Jamelle Holieway, rushed for 91 yards and passed for 104.

Backup fullback Rotnei Anderson, filling in for injured Lydell Carr, gained 118 yards for the Sooners, 10-0, who came into the game averaging 49 points per outing. Holieway and Carr went down with knee injuries last week and are out for the season.

No. 3 Miami 27, Va. Tech 13
Miami also struggled with unheralded Virginia Tech, finally taking the lead for good when Melvin Bratton, whose fumble one play earlier was negated by a penalty, scored on a 1-yard run with 4:51 left to break a 13-13 tie.

Virginia Tech had recovered Bratton's fumble in the end zone, but the Hokies were offside on the play. The Hurricanes later got a 2-yard touchdown pass from Steve Walsh to Alfredo Roberts.

No. 4 Florida St. 41, Furman 10
Sammie Smith scored on runs of 95 and 20 yards as Florida State beat Division I-AA Furman, which scored the first touchdown of the game. Smith gained 176 yards on 15 carries.

No. 5 UCLA 47, Washington 14
Troy Aikman passed for one touchdown and ran for another as UCLA scored 17 points in the third quarter, setting up a Pac-10 showdown with Southern Cal next Saturday.

The Bruins, 9-1 overall and 7-0 in the league, can become the first team in Pac-10 history to finish with a perfect conference record if they beat the Trojans and earn a Rose Bowl berth.

No. 6 Syracuse 45, Boston College 17
Syracuse fell behind 17-0, then scored the game's last 45 points, 28 in the second half.

Quarterback Don McPherson led Syracuse with two touchdown passes to Tommy Kane. Robert Drummond scored on two short runs for the Orangemen.

No. 7 Notre Dame 37, No. 11 Alabama 6

Tony Rice ran for one touchdown and passed for another as Notre Dame handed Alabama its worst loss in 16 years.

Tim Brown caught four passes for 114 yards to become Notre Dame's career leader in receiving yardage with 2,371.

Notre Dame's Mark Green scored on a 74-yard run early in the fourth quarter, and teammate Ricky Walters added a 75-yard touchdown dash eight minutes later.

No. 12 Auburn 27, No. 8 Georgia 11
Auburn eliminated Georgia from Sugar Bowl contention as Jeff Burger passed for 217 yards and two touchdowns.

Burger, who completed 22 of 32 passes, threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Lawyer Tillman and 3-yard scoring toss to Duke Donaldson.

No. 9 Clemson 45, Maryland 16
Rodney Williams threw two touchdown passes and Terry Allen ran for two more as Clemson won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

Allen scored on runs of eight and two yards in the second quarter for Clemson, 9-1. Williams threw touchdown passes of 50 and 44 yards to Gary Cooper as the Tigers beat Maryland for the first time since 1983.

No. 10 LSU 34, Mississippi St. 14
LSU stayed alive in the Sugar Bowl race as Tommy Hodson threw two touchdown passes and Sam Martin scored twice against Mississippi State.

LSU, 9-1-1, broke a 14-14 tie on Hodson's 32-yard pass to Martin with 3:32 left in the first half. Harvey Williams scored on a 6-yard run in the fourth quarter.

No. 13 Michigan St. 27, No. 16 Indiana 3
Lorenzo White rushed 56 times for 292 yards and scored two touchdowns as Michigan State clinched its first Rose Bowl berth in 22 years.

The Spartans are 6-0-1 in the conference and 7-2-1 overall.

"It certainly is a beautiful day," Spartans Coach George Perles said. "There's not too many of you who are going to have a better time than me tonight."

No. 14 S. Carolina 30, Wake Forest 0
South Carolina's Harold Green ran for two touchdowns and caught a scoring pass from Todd Ellis, and the Gamecocks posted their second consecutive shutout.

The Gamecocks, 7-2, intercepted three passes, recovered a fumble and sacked Wake Forest quarterback Mike Elkins five times.

Pitt 10, No. 15 Penn State 0
Jeff VanHorne kicked a 44-yard field goal on Pitt's first possession and Billy Owens returned an interception 69 yards for a touchdown in the final minute.

Craig Heyward gained 160 yards on 32 carries, his 10th straight 100-yard game this season. Pitt's defense, ranked eighth in the nation, blocked two field goal attempts and held Blair Thomas, the seventh-leading rusher in the country, to 87 yards on 27 carries.

No. 17 Oklahoma St. 49, Kansas 17
Thurman Thomas ran for 202 yards and three touchdowns, and Barry Sanders returned a kickoff 100 yards for Oklahoma State.

Thomas, the Big Eight's leading rusher, went over the 200-yard mark for the fifth time in his career.

No. 18 Tennessee 55, Mississippi 13
Reggie Cobb scored on runs of 1, 13 and 9 yards to lead Tennessee, which scored 28 points in the second quarter.

No. 19 Texas A&M 14, No. 20 Arkansas 0

Third-string quarterback Craig Stump threw for a touchdown, and Rod Harris returned a punt 66 yards for another as Texas A&M kept alive its Southwest Conference title hopes.

The Aggies, 7-2 overall and 4-1 in the conference, sacked Arkansas quarterbacks 10 times.

New Year's Day Could Prove Sweet For Syracuse

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Now let's see if we can solve the mystery of where unbeaten Syracuse might be headed for New Year's Day.

Here's a clue: Coach Dick MacPherson was seen casually flipping a tiny cube of sugar after Saturday's 45-17 blowout of Boston College.

This is circumstantial evidence, of course, but a sugar cube couldn't mean Orange Bowl or Cotton Bowl. Fiesta Bowl? No, that doesn't work either. If MacPherson is flipping a sugar cube, then Syracuse must be ... yes, that's it ... Sugar Bowl-bound.

Oh, the Sugar Bowl folks won't come right out and say so, of course. That's not allowed until next weekend. So they played it coy, handing out cute little souvenirs and letting you figure it out for yourself.

Nobody else had any presents for Syracuse on Saturday. Other bowl representatives had abruptly canceled plans to visit as MacPherson's team ran its record to 10-0. Orange, Fiesta and Citrus Bowl scouts had watched Syracuse in previous weeks, but suddenly vanished, leaving MacPherson's team to the sugar cube contingent.

Jerry Romig, president of the Sugar Bowl, handed MacPherson the sweet stuff and visited the team. "He told the boys they were one of the most exciting football teams in America and he would be back next week," the coach said.

Was that a commitment?
"All I can say," Romig said, "is I will be back next week."

Bowl bids are like Christmas shopping. You like to avoid the last-minute rush. So deals are cut in advance, although nobody will come right out and say so. Coy is in, candid is out.

Syracuse certainly played it coy with BC, climbing into a 17-0 hole early in the second period. If Romig was squirring in his seat, imagine how MacPherson was feeling.

"We didn't settle down early," the coach said. "They came after us. We had to settle down and take care of business."

Business meant buying time for quarterback Don McPherson to operate. "We came out lethargic and lazy," the quarterback said. "It was a matter of getting tough."

McPherson, the quarterback, and MacPherson, the coach, knew the way out of this bind. "We had to calm down and get our poise," the quarterback said. "It looked bad, but it was early and 17 points wouldn't have beaten us all year. We knew what we had to do."

The football firm of MacPherson and McPherson is having a big year. Sometimes confused because of the similarity in names, they are vastly different. The coach is a Maine Yankee with a New England edge still in his voice who heard howls after an 0-4 start last year. The quarterback is a fifth-year senior from Long Island with Heisman credentials although the absence of a pre-season buildup almost certainly will hurt him in the voting.

"Right now," McPherson said, "I'm concentrating on winning 11 games. That's my campaign. If that's not good enough, there's nothing I can do about that."

"He's just an excellent quarterback," the coach said. "Just great. And he's doing it every week on the field. That's the way it should be. If anyone else is doing it like him, then we should look at the two of them and get the right guy. He's a beautiful candidate, though. I just hope we get the right guy."

The coach and his quarterback conspired on the comeback. By halftime, the score was tied. Syracuse scored six touchdowns and a field goal on seven consecutive possessions to put the game away. Quarterback McPherson finished with 10 completions in 19 attempts for 211 yards and two touchdowns. Coach MacPherson finished with a cube of sugar.

Bucknell Leads Blues To Victory

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Steve Bucknell scored 31 points, including 12 of 14 from the field, to lead the Blue team to a 93-88 victory over the White team in North Carolina's second basketball scrimmage of the preseason.

J.R. Reid added 22 points for the Blue, while Ranzino Smith had 21.

The Blue team shot 73 percent from the field.

Jeff Lebo led the White squad with 31 points, including seven of 11 three-point field goals. Kevin Madden and Rick Fox added 16 points each. Fox added a game-high 12 rebounds.

North Carolina opens the regular season next Saturday against Syracuse in the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic in Springfield, Mass.

Mayor Supports Night Ball For Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Community leaders and politicians have accused Mayor Harold Washington of double-crossing them by endorsing a plan to install lights at Wrigley Field, the only major league stadium without them.

On Friday, Washington voiced his support for a plan that allows the Chicago Cubs to play 18 night games while reducing the number of late-afternoon games from last season's 29 to seven.

"He had done a 180-degree turn on this whole thing," said Paul Kendall, president of a neighborhood groups called Citizens United for Baseball in Sunshine. "He told us during the election campaign he favored no lights at Wrigley Field and self-determination for neighborhoods."

Alderman Bernard Hansen, in whose ward the stadium is located, said: "The community is terribly upset. People are outraged and angered."

Hansen said a half-dozen aldermen have already pledged their support in the battle to ban lights at the stadium, which the Cubs want because of increased revenues generated by night television coverage.

The proposal for night baseball still must be approved by the City Council, which passed an ordinance in 1982 banning night games at the North Side park. Washington is expected to introduce amendments to the ordinance this week.

The Cubs are the only major league baseball team that does not play night baseball games in its home park. The team has threatened to move out of Chicago if it is not allowed to install lights.

The Cubs have agreed to stop beer sales after the seventh inning or 9:20 p.m., whichever comes first.

Anti-light advocates have cited a noise pollution law passed by the Illinois Legislature which they say supports their battle to ban the lights.

"If they try to change that statute, we will fight, and I think we will be successful," said state Rep. John J. Cullerton, D-Chicago.

Community leader Kendall said petitions were being prepared to ask for a referendum on lights.

"We would consider the referendum results binding on the community, and we would hope the City Council would consider it binding on the city," he said.

Orange Bowl In Dilemma

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
 AP Football Writer

It has been obvious since Oct. 3, when Nebraska rallied to beat South Carolina 30-21 and Miami came from behind to nip Florida State 26-25, that the Orange Bowl was going to have a problem.

The problem is called Notre Dame. "I'd like to play in the Orange Bowl, but I don't make those kind of decisions," Coach Lou Holtz said Saturday following seventh-ranked Notre Dame's 37-6 rout of No. 11 Alabama. "It's not for me to say. I would like to go, but it's really out of my hands."

As the weeks went by, this was the problem facing the Orange Bowl:

— Oklahoma has been ranked No. 1 and Nebraska No. 2 all season in the Associated Press poll. Each is unbeaten and untied going into Saturday's meeting for the Big Eight championship and the host berth in the Orange Bowl.

— Miami has been ranked No. 3 for the last seven weeks. Miami almost certainly will be 9-0 on Saturday, when the bowl invitations can be officially extended, and the Hurricanes figure to be No. 2 in next week's poll.

— Notre Dame got as high as No. 4 before losing to Pitt in October and dropping to No. 11. But the Irish have worked their way back to No. 7 by winning five games in a row and are 8-1. If Notre Dame defeats Penn State on Saturday, the Irish will be 9-1 when they visit Miami on Nov. 28.

— If Notre Dame beats Penn State and Miami, the Irish probably will be ranked above the Hurricanes, who would still have to face a dangerous South Carolina team on Dec. 5. The Gamecocks were ranked No. 14 last week.

Notre Dame's magical name works in strange ways. For example, despite a 10-10 tie with Michigan State, Notre Dame won the 1966 national championship over an Alabama team which was 10-0 and may have been better than any of Bear Bryant's five national championship clubs. In 1977, Texas was No. 1, Alabama No. 3 and Notre Dame No. 5 after the regular season. Notre Dame hammered Texas 38-10 in the Cotton Bowl, No. 2 Oklahoma and No. 4 Michigan lost their bowls, and the Irish vaulted to the national championship over an Alabama team which trounced Ohio State in the Sugar Bowl 35-6.

"Holtz picked up a lot of cards this weekend," an Orange Bowl spokesman said, and he wasn't referring to the Notre Dame coach's well-known ability as a magician off the football field.

The Orange Bowl proposed a deal involving Miami, Notre Dame and the Cotton Bowl, which needs a television attraction like the Irish since the Southwest Conference champion may not even be ranked in the Top Twenty.

The proposed deal would have put Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl with victories over Penn State and Miami, with Miami going to the Cotton Bowl. But even if Notre Dame beat Miami, the Irish would have given up a shot at the No. 1-ranked team and gone to the Cotton Bowl if Arkansas was the SWC champ since Miami wouldn't savor a return match against Arkansas, a team it crushed 51-7 early in the season.

Notre Dame agreed and Miami agreed, even though Coach Jimmy Johnson said several weeks ago that he would not make any winner-loser deals. The Cotton Bowl turned it down, however, although it became a moot point when Texas A&M defeated Arkansas on Saturday.

Late last week, the Orange Bowl locked up Miami to meet the Big Eight champion on New Year's Night. Notre Dame will go to the Cotton Bowl anyway.

"A sure thing for us at this point if we didn't want to gamble with Miami is (fourth-ranked) Florida State," an Orange Bowl committee member said. "On one hand, it's really not a dilemma because we've got a really good element coming in — the Big Eight champion. It's not like we had to put together both sides (of a national championship game)."

Now that the Orange Bowl has Miami, it would like the Hurricanes to do the right thing and defeat Notre Dame and South Carolina — and, of course, Toledo this Saturday.

The Orange Bowl's new nightmare goes like this:

"What if Lou Holtz starts a campaign and there's a national outcry? Do we get hit with a Notre Dame barrage? We'd have to feel the pressure, Miami would have to feel the pressure, everybody would have to feel the pressure."

The Orange Bowl may not even be home free if Miami wins its last three games. Nebraska could beat Oklahoma and rise to No. 1, then lose to Colorado on Nov. 28. After all, Colorado beat the Cornhuskers last year.

Coaches' Style Patterns Teams

DENVER (AP) — Mike Ditka and Dan Reeves both played and were assistant coaches for the Dallas Cowboys, bringing different qualities to their performances that have carried over into their head coaching careers.

"Mike was always a physical player," Dallas Coach Tom Landry recalls. "He believed you had to whip the guy across from you. Danny wasn't as gifted a player. He had to use his intelligence and knowledge of the game. I always felt he'd rather trick you than beat you up."

Thus, Ditka's Chicago Bears are one of the NFL's most physical, intimidating teams, while Reeves' Denver Broncos tend to rely on finesse and deception.

The contrasting styles will be on display tonight when the Bears, 7-1, visit Mile High Stadium for an inter-conference clash with the Broncos, 4-3-1.

More than six inches of snow fell on Denver on Sunday, but game-time conditions were forecast to be dry with temperatures in the 30s.

Neither team has been especially impressive during this strike-interrupted season. Chicago, despite its record, has had to come from behind in the fourth quarter to win its last three games. Denver has looked awesome in knocking off Seattle and Detroit, but pathetic in losses to Minnesota and Buffalo and in a tie with Green Bay.

"I don't think we're playing with the intensity it takes to beat good teams, playoff-type teams," Ditka said. "An ingredient is missing right now."

"Our concentration level evidently isn't that good. Maybe we just felt we didn't need to work hard against the teams we played the last three weeks (Tampa Bay, Kansas City and Green Bay)."

The Bears' defense has surrendered 77 points in the three games since the strike ended — the worst three-game stretch since Ditka became Chicago's head coach in 1982. They have also given up eight touchdown passes in the last three games.

That defensive unit has been crippled even further by the loss of two starters. End Dan Hampton and linebacker Otis Wilson will be sidelined at least four weeks with knee injuries suffered in last week's 26-24 victory over Green Bay.

NFL Sunday Roundup...

field goals as the Colts overcame a 14-0 deficit and ended the longest losing streak against one team in the NFL. The Dolphins had beaten the Colts 14 straight until this loss, dating back to 1980 when the Colts were still in Baltimore.

Five teams were tied for first place in the AFC East going into the game. Only the Colts and the New York Jets remained in the tie after Sunday's play, both with 5-4 records.

Dickerson, who came to Indianapolis on Oct. 31 in a trade with the Los Angeles Rams, had the first 100-yard rushing day against the Dolphins this season. Miami, which also was in the AFC East tie, dropped to 4-5, as did Buffalo and New England.

Jets 16, Chiefs 9

Freeman McNeil, benched a week ago, returned with the second-best rushing day of his career, gaining 184 yards and helping set up three Pat Leahy field goals. Replacing the injured Johnny Hector, McNeil had a day surpassed only by his 192 yards on Sept. 15, 1985, against Buffalo.

The loss was the eighth in a row for the Chiefs, a club record. Kansas City has not won since beating San Diego on opening day.

Ken O'Brien threw an 18-yard scoring pass to Al Toon for the only touchdown of the game.

Browns 27, Bills 21

In a duel of former Miami, Fla., quarterbacks, Bernie Kosar passed for 346 yards and two touchdowns to lead Cleveland over Jim Kelly and the Buffalo Bills.

Kosar completed 24 of 33 passes and threw touchdowns of 15 yards to Reggie Langhorne and 52 yards to Webster Slaughter. Kelly completed 22 of 35 passes for 222 yards and rushed four times for 42 more.

Kelly, however, couldn't get the Bills into the end zone until he threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to Chris Burkett with 11 minutes left.

Cowboys 23, Patriots 17, OT

Herschel Walker broke up the left sideline and carried the ball 60 yards for a touchdown with 1:50 gone in overtime to lead Dallas over New England. The Cowboys' Roger Ruzek sent the game into overtime with a 20-yard field goal with 28 seconds left in regulation.

Walker's scoring run gave him 173 yards rushing on the day, an NFL career high.

The Patriots had a 17-14 lead with 1:55 to play, but Dallas went 78 yards in 11 plays for the field goal. Danny White kept the Dallas drive alive with a 43-yard, fourth-down completion to Mike Renfro.

Dallas is now 5-4, while New England is 4-5.

Redskins 20, Lions 13

Doug Williams earned the starting job at quarterback next Sunday by coming off the bench halfway through the second quarter to replace an ineffective Jay Schroeder and throwing two touchdown passes.

Williams had scoring completions of 16 yards to Kelvin Bryant and 42 yards to Gary Clark in the first half, giving the Redskins a 17-3 lead and their 12th straight victory over the Lions going back to 1965.

The Redskins are 7-2, leading the NFC East, and Detroit fell to 2-7.

Oilers 23, Steelers 3

Warren Moon threw touchdown passes of 14 yards to Curtis Duncan and 42 yards to Drew Hill in the third quarter as Houston defeated the Steelers at Pittsburgh for the first time since 1978.

The loss knocked the Steelers out of the AFC Central first-place tie, while Houston ended a four-game losing streak against Pittsburgh.

The Steelers, 5-4, managed to score only on Gary Anderson's 22-yard field goal in the final minute of the first quarter.

Seahawks 24, Packers 13

Dave Krieg and Eugene Robinson ran for touchdowns in the final 2:06 of the first half, giving Seattle a 21-13 lead, and the Seahawks held on to beat Green Bay. Curt Warner scored Seattle's first touchdown on a 57-yard run on the first play of the second quarter and finished with 123 yards rushing.

The Packers were unable to score in the second half without their No. 1 quarterback, Randy Wright, who sprained his right ankle on the next-to-last play of the first half. Rookie Don Majkowski finished for Green Bay.

Giants 20, Eagles 17

Raul Allegre kicked field goals of 53 and 52 yards, the second — 3:48 into the fourth quarter — snapping a 17-17 tie. Philadelphia had a chance to send the game into overtime, but Paul McFadden missed a 39-yard field goal attempt with 25 seconds to play.

Backup quarterback Jeff Rutledge, subbing for the second straight week for injured Phil Simms, completed 16 of 29 passes for 298 yards and a touchdown as the Giants ended the Eagles' three-game winning streak.

Philadelphia, 4-5, led 10-0 and 17-10 before comebacks by the Giants, 3-6.

Rams 27, Cardinals 24

Los Angeles wiped out a 24-14 St. Louis lead in the third quarter, then got a 20-yard field goal from Mike Lansford on the final play of the game to beat St. Louis. Charles White gained 62 of his career-high 213 yards on a 94-yard winning drive, helping the Rams end a three-game losing streak.

Still, the Rams are only 2-7, off to their worst start since 1962, while St. Louis is 3-6.

Vikings 23, Buccaneers 17

Tommy Kramer came off the bench to throw his first touchdown pass since Dec. 14, and Chris Doleman forced a pair of fumbles that Minnesota converted into 10 points against the Buccaneers.

Besides forcing the fumbles, both recovered by Keith Millard, Doleman helped key a Vikings defense that held Tampa Bay to just 15 yards rushing.

Minnesota 5-4, Tampa Bay 4-5.

Bengals 16, Falcons 10
The Bengals gained 270 yards rushing, including 100 by Larry Kinnebrew, and beat the Falcons on Kinnebrew's 2-yard scoring run with 23 seconds left. The victory ended a four-game Cincinnati losing streak, and the Bengals went to 3-6.

The Bengals had an apparent go-ahead touchdown nullified on an offensive interference call late in the game and had to settle for Jim Breech's third field goal, a 30-yarder, two plays later with 3:42 left to cut Atlanta's lead to 10-9.

Tornadoes Kill 10, Leave Trail Of Woe In 2 States

By JODY COX
Associated Press Writer
PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — National Guardsmen helped shattered towns recover today from swarms of tornadoes that killed 10 people, injured at least 207 and left a trail of destruction more than 200 miles long in Texas and Louisiana.

"We are hit hard ... It looks like an atomic bomb hit," Don Harris, manager of radio station KLIS said here after one of Sunday's twisters tore a seven-mile swath through the west side of town.

The twisters inflicted heavy damage from east-central Texas just west of Austin to Tyler in the state's northeast corner, and into Louisiana. Thirteen tornadoes were reported, the National Weather Service said.

The twisters killed nine people and injured at least 162 in Texas, officials said. In Louisiana, a man died and at least 45 people were hurt.

A tornado watch for central and eastern Texas and central and northern Louisiana remained in effect this morning.

The same storm system was blamed for the West's first major snowstorm of the season, which blew through Colorado and into Nebraska on Sunday, dumping up to 22 inches of snow, slowing airport operations and closing some roads with near-blizzard conditions.

A Continental Airlines jet taking off from Denver's Stapleton International Airport during the storm flipped over and broke apart, killing 26 people and injuring 56.

The tornado that blasted Palestine hit in mid-afternoon.

"It was just a complete surprise; we had no warning at all," said Dexter Shores, who rode out the storm with his wife and two sons in their small house.

Across U.S. 79, John Reed and several other Palestine firefighters hid beneath tables at a sub-station. "By the time we got out the door, there were people running down the street screaming," Reed said.

National Guardsmen, law enforcement officers and workers from relief agencies such as the American Red Cross and the Salvation Army streamed into Palestine.

Utility crews worked through the night to restore phone, gas and electric service to this town of about 16,000 people 120 miles southeast of Dallas.

The tornado leveled a school and two churches, destroyed dozens of homes and damaged up to 150 buildings, officials said.

City Manager Warren Driver said he expected the damage would run into millions of dollars.

The twister killed a man at his home just outside town, critically injured his wife and hurt 59 others, said police Capt. Tony Perry. Only six of the injured were hospitalized, and others suffered minor injuries, Perry said.

A woman was missing after her car and two other vehicles were smashed under a huge tank lifted by the winds, he said.

Three emergency shelters were opened for those left homeless. Ten people went to shelters, Perry said, but he could not say how many others spent the night with friends or relatives or at motels.

Blasts At Chemical Plant Kill Three Workers In Texas

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press Writer
PAMPA, Texas (AP) — Officials have begun trying to find out what caused two powerful explosions that rocked a chemical plant, killing three workers, injuring 35 and igniting a huge fire.

"We have a lot of information to go through and a lot of people to talk to," plant manager Ron Guard said Sunday, one day after the accident.

Teams of safety experts and damage assessors on Sunday surveyed what was left of the plant.

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Texas Water Commission officials patrolled the plant, and U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration officials were expected to arrive today, said Celanese spokesman Herb Reed.

"Right now, that would be an area of speculation," Guard said.

The first blast killed operator Richard Wilson, 25, of Pampa, and mechanic Joe Barnet, 43, of White Deer, Guard said. Flying debris killed maintenance supervisor Eugene Turner, 60, of Pampa.

The explosions blew out windows in at least 15 buildings six miles away in downtown Pampa, and set off a huge fire that burned itself out before dawn Sunday, officials said.

About 60 people living near the plant were evacuated, but were allowed to return to their homes late Saturday, said Department of Public Safety trooper Wayne Beigle.

Officials have determined that the first blast occurred near a turbine in an auxiliary utility area, where natural gas is used to produce steam. The second, more powerful explosion occurred in a butane reactor unit next to the utility area, said Guard.

"Two of our major units were damaged extensively," Guard said. "Other units have damage but most of what we saw was superficial."

The plant contains nine operating units. Celanese Hoechst is the largest single employer in this Panhandle town of 23,000.

Company officials evaded questions about whether the 35-year-old plant would reopen. "I think to get into speculation on that point is far down the road from where we are now," said Guard, who said he would like to see it return to normal operation.

Celanese held a private meeting Sunday night with the approximately 400 workers at the plant.

Afterward, most workers were close-mouthed, several women were in tears, and many employees hugged each other.

However, some said they felt reassured their jobs were safe.

"They said that right now it's too early to tell" about the plant's future, said Frank Biggs, a mechanic for three years at the plant. "They said they're not planning on shutting it down, but right now it's just wait and see. I feel pretty confident about it."

Don Quarles, a welder at the plant for 15 years, said employees were told they would get regular pay until the company decides what to do with the plant, which makes acetic acid and other products.

The most recent accidents at the plant were in 1979, when 12 people were injured, four seriously, in two accidents, the company said.

The company also said it received safety awards in 1978-79 from the National Petroleum Refiners Association.

School System Stands Behind Plan To Flunk Kindergartners

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — School administrators favor keeping a 3-year-old program that flunks the one in 10 kindergartners who don't pass a year-end exam, though a study shows some of the students continue to struggle in later grades.

"We feel pretty good that it's the right direction to be taking," said Deputy Superintendent William Phillips.

"Children shouldn't be moved on and moved on automatically without the skills to be successful," said Donna McClellan, kindergarten lead teacher for the city's public schools.

The first study of the program shows that while test scores of kindergartners who were flunked jumped at first, the benefits of the special help they received appeared to diminish over time. Last spring, 56 percent passed a second-grade test, compared with 87 percent of all second-graders in the district, officials say.

Phillips and others say there would be more students flunking second grade if they were not held back for a second year of kindergarten. The study shows that there are overwhelming social factors that handicap the children in the first place, not that programs to help the low-achieving students aren't working, Phillips said.

In the past three years, an average of 10 percent of kindergartners in Minneapolis public schools have flunked, Phillips said. A disproportionately high number of the students who fail come from low-income homes, he said.

Minority groups account for 45 percent of the student body in the city's public elementary schools, but 75 percent of students repeating kindergarten are minorities, Phillips said.

McClellan said parents have been surprisingly supportive of the program, but only when notified early in the school year that their child is at risk of failing.

In those cases, children are assigned an "intervention" teacher to supplement their regular kindergarten education and increase their chances of passing the year-end test.

"We know many of those children come from low-income families — not a lot of language, no books in the home," McClellan said. "It's very difficult to make up for deficiencies in the first five years. The earlier you catch them the better."

Phillips said the benefits of keeping children in kindergarten for a second year outweigh the possible negative peer responses the children might experience.

McClellan said kindergartners are questioned at the end of the year in one-on-one sessions with trained testers. Children are asked to count objects, identify shapes, and print their name. A teacher's evaluation of a student also is considered before a student is flunked, Phillips said.

Phillips and McClellan said the tests have put additional pressure on teachers to do their best because the number of students who are flunked becomes a competitive measure between classrooms and schools.

"We have to watch that tests don't become such an overriding factor that it's the only thing you teach for," McClellan added. "There are other things these children need."

The tornadoes killed two people in Caldwell, a ranch foreman and another ranch employee in Madison County, two people in or around Jacksonville 25 miles northeast of Palestine and two people in Smith County.

At least 75 people were injured in and around Jacksonville, 10 in Caldwell, seven in Giddings and 11 elsewhere, officials said.

"What is left of homes is nothing more than the concrete foundations," Broaddus said.

The destruction extended for eight miles on each side of town, said Burleson County sheriff's dispatcher Cory Crajoalk.

"We have lots of trailer houses overturned, barns torn up. We have lights out all north of Caldwell," Crajoalk said.

An emergency shelter was set up at the town's First Baptist Church.

Some people spent the night by bonfires under intermittent rain to protect their property.

In Louisiana, a man was found dead in DeSoto Parish south of Shreveport on Sunday night, the sheriff's office said.

A twister smashed a Shreveport area convenience store, trapping four people for more than an hour, said Bill Duncan of the Caddo Parish Sheriff's Department.

Forty-five people were taken to hospitals, but most had only minor injuries, said Duncan.

Iranian Speedboats Again Attack U.S.-Owned Supertanker In Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian speedboats attacked a U.S.-owned supertanker and two other vessels today in the southern Persian Gulf and the Strait of Hormuz, shipping executives said.

The Iranian attacks followed Iraqi reports that their warplanes blasted two ships near the Iranian coast during the night. Iraq announced Sunday it put its army on full alert and was poised to defeat Iranian forces if they launch a widely expected offensive in the 7-year-old conflict.

The shipping executives said two Iranian speedboats attacked the Esso Freeport off the emirate of Ras Al-Khaimah at 11:30 a.m., and about two hours later, hit the Greek-flagged tanker Filikon L. Both attacks were in the Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the gulf.

In London, Lloyds Shipping Intelligence Unit reported that a Liberian-flag tanker, the Lucy, had been attacked at 3:00 a.m. just inside the gulf and had anchored off Dubai.

The Esso Freeport, owned by the U.S. oil company Exxon, was heading out of the gulf with a load of Saudi Arabian crude oil. It suffered only minor damage, and there were no casualties reported among the crew.

The speedboats, apparently operating from the southern Iran-held island of Abu Musa, fired on the Esso Freeport with rocket-propelled grenades.

The 126,943-ton vessel, one of a large fleet of Exxon-owned tankers, flies the Bahamian flag, according to Lloyds.

Iran has attacked several ships on charter to Exxon and the three other American companies that are partners with Saudi Arabia in the Arabian American Oil Co. But today's incident was the first involving a tanker owned by one of the firms and carrying its name on the hull, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Lloyds said the Lucy, with a gross weight of 36,512 tons, was managed by a New York-based firm, Maritime Overseas Corp. It gave no other details.

The gulf shipping executives said the Iranians, firing rocket-propelled grenades, hit the Filikon L about 20 miles off the United Arab Emirates coast, where the Strait of Hormuz flows into the Gulf of Oman. They had no details on damage or casualties.

Farther north in the gulf, the U.S. Navy was escorting its 18th convoy of reflagged Kuwaiti vessels south through the 550-mile waterway.

The convoy, consisting of the 81,283-ton Surf City and the 79,999-ton Chesapeake City, both oil products carriers, left Kuwait early Sunday, according to a Pentagon announcement.

It said the ships, escorted by the U.S. missile frigates Thach and Carr, safely passed Farsi, an Iranian island used for speedboat attacks on shipping.

The warships had arrived at Kuwait a day earlier with three other reflagged tankers. The latest convoy was the fourth this month, all without incident.

As the Iran-Iraq war on maritime routes in the gulf escalated this year, U.S. and other Western navies began accompanying their flagged commercial vessels through the waterway. The Soviet Union does likewise.

Iraq has claimed about 15 ship attacks since Nov. 9, but only three have been independently confirmed.

The latest Iranian attacks brought to five the number of neutral ships raided in retaliation over the same period.

The two belligerents have attacked about 400 ships of all nationalities and killed about 250 sailors.

The official Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Iraqi warplanes scored "accurate and effective hits on two naval targets," a reference to oil tankers, in simultaneous raids at 9.54 p.m. Sunday.

There was no immediate confirmation of either attack from independent sources and Iran rarely reports on such strikes.

Iran said its forces shelled the Iraqi port of Basra and the northern border township of Sirwan Sunday to retaliate for Iraqi bombing of southern Iran. An Iraqi communique said 10 civilians were killed and nine wounded.

In Tehran, President Ali Khamenei said Sunday after a Cabinet meeting that "a new movement is going to occur on the war front," including "major blows against Iraq."

Abdul-Jabar Muhsin, a top Iraqi military official, said that Iraqi troops had been on alert for four days.

Western military analysts and diplomats in Baghdad estimated the Iranians have massed about 20 divisions, about 250,000 soldiers, in the southern sector of the front east of Basra.

House Likely To Approve Welfare-Reform Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill making major changes in the welfare system for poor children and their families is expected to win passage this week in the House, despite some concerns about awkward timing.

"Most of us would like to see this budget conference settled before we take up welfare reform. There's some uneasiness about spending any money" until negotiators complete a deficit-reduction package, said Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y.

But Downey, floor manager of the welfare bill, said his vote count looks "very good" and the plan is to act on welfare on Wednesday or Thursday.

The cost of the Family Welfare Reform Act could reach $2 billion in its first three years, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

The bill would require most parents on welfare to participate in new education, work and training programs. And, in the interest of preserving families, it would require states to give cash assistance to households in which two parents are present and the chief wage-earner is unemployed. Half the states now give benefits only to single-parent families.

The act also would provide child care and transportation help for people in the work program and require stronger efforts by states to collect child support from absent parents. And it would raise federal contributions to states that boost cash benefits.

"Members recognize that the welfare system is broken and needs to be fixed and this goes part of the way toward fixing it," Downey said in an interview. "It doesn't go far enough for me and it goes too far for some, so it's probably politically just right."

But the cost of the welfare overhaul has been a major concern as negotiators from Congress and the White House struggle to agree on some combination of spending cuts and tax hikes to reduce the federal deficit. Their deadline is Friday, and if they fail to meet it, automatic across-the-board cuts go into effect.

There has been some fretting among lawmakers that they may be obliged to vote on an expensive welfare plan, a tax hike and spending cuts in the same week. But others minimize the prospect of political damage.

"Some people just see the word welfare and they see that as kind of a danger signal or a red flag," said Rep. Buddy McKay, D-Fla. He said he will vote for the Democratic plan on the floor this week though he expects to have to defend his action in his district.

"It's designed to put in place a work requirement in welfare. I personally think it can be sold as a conservative measure," McKay said. "It makes one's life exciting (in the district) but I don't see it as a career threat."

An earlier House attempt to pass the welfare plan failed when some two dozen Democrats forced their leadership to remove it from a huge tax-hike package. Those lawmakers are expected to back the plan when it comes up by itself this week.

U.S. Families Are Evacuated

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The U.S. Embassy in Bangkok evacuated the families of American government officials in northern Thailand because of a narcotics-related threat, the embassy spokesman said today.

"We recently received reports of a potential narcotics-related threat to U.S. government personnel at our consulate in Chiang Mai. We took this seriously," said spokesman Ross Petzing. He declined to give further details on the threat.

Petzing said an undisclosed number of American dependents began leaving Chiang Mai, about 430 miles north of Bangkok, for the capital last Monday.

"The families will remain in Bangkok until we have determined the situation has improved," he said.

Police have stepped up security measures on roads leading to the consulate and at the officials' homes, said Police Superintendent Lt. Col. Manote Cholvisit.

Manote said the threat against U.S. officials may be related to the Oct. 20 seizure of about 1,500 pounds of heroin off southern Chumphon province. Authorities called the raid on a fishing trawler the biggest heroin seizure in the country's history.

U.S. To Check Radars

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States has accepted a Soviet offer to permit inspection of several of its radars, according to a report published today, but U.S. officials say details for the inspections have yet to be worked out.

Some Reagan administration officials believe the radars may violate the 1972 Antiballistic Missile Treaty.

The inspection offer was made to Secretary of State George P. Shultz during his visit to Moscow last month, according to the report in today's editions of The New York Times. American acceptance was not made known to the Soviet Union until late last week, the newspaper said, and procedures for carrying out the inspections have yet to be resolved.

The two types of radars, known in the West as "Pawn Shop" and "Flat Twin," had been kept at Soviet antiballistic missile test ranges, and the Reagan Administration charged there was "ambiguous" evidence that the radars were a "potential" violation of the 1972 treaty, which bans mobile ABM radars.

Kenyan Troops Pummel Students In Campus Riot

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Paramilitary troops pummeled students and broke down dormitory doors today as they enforced a police order for protesting students to leave the University of Nairobi campus. The government then ordered the university shut down.

The closure order, signed by university Vice Chancellor Phillip Mbithi, directed students to pack and leave the campus within two hours. It was the third time the university had been ordered closed in five years following protests over the arrests of student leaders.

There was no indication how long the school would be closed.

Hundreds of students who had fled the violence rushed onto campus to meet the deadline to depart. They were met by a stream of students who were fleeing the campus, lugging suitcases and boxes.

The government also announced it had banned the student government association, the University of Nairobi Student Organization.

"The interest of peace, welfare and good order in Kenya would likely suffer prejudice by continued registration of the organization," said a statement from registrar general Joseph King'arui broadcast on the radio.

Police moved in with tear gas Sunday after students stoned cars on a Nairobi highway in protest against the arrests of seven newly elected leaders of the organization.

The seven were arrested at gunpoint between midnight and 3 a.m. Sunday by plainclothes police who gave no reason for the detentions, students said.

Kenya's three English-language dailies Monday reported that the students had been picked up for interrogation concerning matters discussed at a student rally Friday. The issues discussed were not disclosed. Government sources said the students had been freed today but the Central Police Station declined to confirm the report.

During Sunday's demonstrations, four Western journalists were beaten and then detained for three hours. Today, troops chased five foreign correspondents from the university, prodding them with batons. They confiscated film from two photographers.

Journalists on the campus today saw 50-60 people forced to trot in front of whooping and screaming riot troops who beat them and herded them toward a police truck. Among the group was a man in a chef's uniform, apparently a cook.

Reporters heard two shots, but could not tell whether it was gunfire or tear gas.

Journalists watched as police struck students with batons, continuing to hit them when they fell to the floor.

Police bludgeoned their way into one dormitory, smashing down doors. Blood poured from the head of one man forced from the building.

"It's not the students who are rioting anymore. It's the police," said one man, who refused to give his name.

In the city, truckloads of police chased hundreds of students running from the campus.

On Sunday, police beat and detained four Western journalists covering the rioting, saying they were trespassing and should not have been at the scene.

Those injured were: Lindsey Hillsum, 29, of the British Broadcasting Corp.; Patrick Moser, 30, of United Press International; Peer Meinert, 36, of the German news agency Deutsche Presse-Agentur; and Didrikke Schanche, 31, of The Associated Press.

Doctors at Nairobi Hospital said Ms. Hillsom, who was beaten on the back, sustained severe bruises, and Moser suffered a broken nose and possibly a perforated eardrum.

The other two reporters were hit with batons, kicked, punched and slapped. They were not seriously hurt.

It is not known how many students have been arrested or injured.

A secretary at the university said only the vice chancellor could comment on the unrest, and that he would be busy in meetings all morning.

The police commissioner referred queries to the minister responsible for internal security. But the minister's secretary said he would not be available until next week. She referred questions to the permanent secretary, whose assistant said he was unavailable.

Disturbances are not uncommon at the university, which has about 5,000 students. But trouble today and Sunday was among the worst unrest August 1982, when the government ordered the university closed for a year after an attempted coup against President Daniel arap Moi by disgruntled junior air force officers. At that time, authorities banned the National University Students' Organization.

In 1985, the university was closed for 10 weeks following violent demonstrations in which one student was killed. Students were protesting the arrests of eight students accused of "activities similar to those which led to the disturbances of 1982."

South Korea Schedules Its National Elections Dec. 16

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan today announced a Dec. 16 date for the nation's first direct presidential elections in 16 years, and the 120,000-man police force went on alert to prevent campaign violence.

In the announcement, Chun said authorities would not allow violence to disrupt the election.

"The peaceful transfer of power can be achieved only through a peaceful election," he said.

But opposition candidate Kim Dae-jung charged today that the government was behind two disruptions at weekend rallies to discredit the opposition and alienate moderate voters.

Police officials rejected the charge.

Chun, a former general who seized power with military backing in 1980, bowed to opposition demands for direct presidential elections after massive anti-government protests in June. He has promised to step down Feb. 25 at the end of a seven-year term.

Representatives for government candidate Roh Tae-woo and main opposition candidates Kim Young-sam, Kim Dae-jung and Kim Jong-pil registered them to run immediately after Chun's announcement today.

Minor party candidates Kim Sun-chuk and Shin Chung-il also registered with the election commission. Candidates must register by next Monday.

National police headquarters in Seoul said the police had been put on alert to protect presidential candidates.

The move came after Kim Young-sam and Kim Dae-jung were attacked during weekend rallies in different parts of the country. Neither candidate was hurt.

Police said 22 people arrested over the weekend for campaign violence had been charged with assault and other criminal offenses. Officials said dozens of other suspects were still being questioned.

Police officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said a nationwide roundup had been launched to seize radical students and leftists allegedly involved in the campaign violence. The officials said 59 radical leaders were being sought.

"We firmly believe government authorities tried to disrupt campaign rallies in Pusan, Taegu and Kwangju from behind the scenes by taking advantage of regional antagonism."

The two Kims failed to meet promises that just one of them would run in the elections. Opposition supporters fear the two leaders will split the opposition vote and boost the government's chances of winning.

Government candidate Roh Tae-woo and opposition conservative candidate Kim Jong-pil have also been attacked at campaign rallies in recent weeks. Roh Tae-woo was attacked with firebombs and tear gas in the south of the country late last month.

The government has repeatedly charged that leftists are behind political violence and are trying to stage a violent revolution to usher in a leftwing state.

Opposition and dissident leaders charge that authorities have been using accusations of leftism to crack down on its opponents.

Paper Says Alcoholism On Increase

MOSCOW (AP) — Police and health officials have registered more than 4.5 million alcoholics and despite an anti-drinking campaign, moonshine production and alcohol-related crime are on the increase, Pravda said.

The Communist Party daily on Sunday printed readers' questions on drinking and crime with answers from Interior Minister Alexander V. Vlasov, head of the country's uniformed police.

Vlasov said the anti-drinking campaign led by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has led to a dramatic drop in the production of wine, vodka and other alcoholic beverages — from 3.7 billion gallons in 1984 to 2.1 billion gallons last year.

He said problem drinking on the job and in public had decreased, but in some instances it had shifted into the home, where it is harder for authorities to control.

Illegal distillation of liquor is on the increase, however, apparently to compensate for the reduction of alcohol available in state-run stores, according to the report.

Vlasov said that in the first nine months of 1987, courts and administrative agencies dealt with five times as many people for making illegal alcohol as they did in 1985. It wasn't clear if Vlasov was comparing figures for all of 1985 or during the first nine months of that year.

In the last two years, more than one million stills have been confiscated and a million gallons of moonshine destroyed, he said.

Vlasov said authorities have registered more than 4.5 million alcoholics, and about one million required treatment. The Soviet Union's population is estimated at around 278 million.

In Lithuania, Kirgizia, the Ukraine and some areas of the Russian Federation, alcohol-related crimes have shown a "significant increase," Vlasov said.

Gorbachev has campaigned against the abuse of alcohol as part of his drive to tighten discipline and improve economic efficiency.

According to Vlasov, 259,000 people were punished this year for being drunk on the job.

Indian Troops Kill 27 Sri Lankan Rebels

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Indian troops killed 27 Tamil rebels in eastern Sri Lanka after foiling a guerrilla ambush, Sri Lankan military officials said today.

The independent Island newspaper reported, meanwhile, that a ship carrying more Indian troops was arriving today in Sri Lanka, but no number was mentioned in the report.

The battle Sunday between Indian forces and fighters from the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam capped a weekend that saw two government supporters slain by Sinhalese radicals and four Tamil rebels killed by their own land mine, authorities said.

Military officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity under military regulations, said one Indian soldier also died in the fighting Sunday in the village of Vandaramoolai, 12 miles northwest of Batticaloa on the island's east coast.

The ambush was detected by a helicopter providing surveillance for an advancing column of Indian troops, the officials said.

The helicopter crew warned the Indian force that militiamen were nearby and knocked out a rebel van, the officials said. They said intercepted rebel radio messages indicated a number of Tamil fighters were wounded in the encounter.

On Saturday, four Tiger rebels set a mine near Kondavil, five miles north of Jaffna, and then apparently drove their own vehicle over the device by accident, officials said. The Tigers have often used mines or buried explosives to kill Indian and Sri Lankan soldiers.

More than 20,000 Indian soldiers are in north and east Sri Lanka to enforce a peace accord aimed at ending the rebels' four-year war for a separate Tamil nation.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Rudy Schulte

DOING THE BUYER'S HOMEWORK!

When it's time to sell your home, you may consider selling on your own, without the help of a real estate agent. If so, there's some "home" work you'll probably need to do for your buyers.

Why? Because, one of the first questions buyers ask a real estate agent is "How much cash do I need to purchase this home?", and "How much will my monthly payments be?"

Since selling your home by yourself won't eliminate the buyers' questions, here are some tips to help prepare you for the answers. The cash requirements to purchase your home will depend on the type financing chosen by the buyers. For example, if financing is available on 75% of the purchase price, the down payment would be 25%. Also, other cash would be required for attorney's fees, credit reports, appraisal fees, etc., as well as any other "upfront" charges by the lender.

The monthly payment would depend on the amount borrowed, the interest rate, and the term of the loan. This figure can be found by using an amortization book. In addition to the monthly payment for principal and interest, add additional amounts for taxes and insurance.

Actually, it is possible to itemize all of the buyers' expenses and the monthly payment - to the penny. With a simple phone call to me, I'll be happy to explain further.

Programmers Tighten Hold On Television Game Shows

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It seems somewhat fitting that King World's newest game show is called "Monopoly."

The company that started as a small, family run business in New Jersey distributing "The Little Rascals" reruns is listed on the New York Stock Exchange and has the three top shows in syndication — "Wheel of Fortune," "Jeopardy!" and "The Oprah Winfrey Show."

In the first three quarters of fiscal year 1987, King World earned $175 million.

The company recently announced that it had acquired the rights to the board game "Monopoly," introduced by Parker Bros. in 1935, and will turn it into a television game show.

King World has been at the forefront of an explosion in first-run syndicated programming in recent years.

"With all the changes of ownerships, including all the networks, there's a lot of pressure to earn more money with their stations," said Michael King, president of King World. "The only way you can earn more money is through big ratings, and that means successful programming."

King's late father, Charles, founded the company in 1964. It's now run by Michael and his brother Roger, chairman of the board.

"I'm not saying other companies don't care about their shows, but their names aren't on the wall like ours are," Roger said. The brothers talked in Roger's Manhattan office. Michael is based in Los Angeles.

King World's success was built on the phenomenon "Wheel of Fortune." The Merv Griffin-produced game show had been an obscure part of the daytime schedule for nine years before the Kings acquired the rights to it. Instead of trying to sell the show to any station that wanted to buy it, they offered "Wheel" only where research showed it would get especially high ratings. Out of 212 markets, the show was sold in only 59, and those did not include the three biggest, New York, Los Angeles and Chicago.

"That was very bold, because if you put a show in syndication and it doesn't work, all those markets you could've sold aren't interested anymore," Michael said. "Here you have a fairly small company, basically my family, and we put up basically everything we had using that philosophy and turned down millions of dollars worth of business."

The gamble worked, ratings soared, and the show was soon in demand. The Kings followed suit with Griffin's other game show, "Jeopardy!"

The Kings launched the Winfrey show, they said, because the 20-year-old "Donahue" was getting beaten in the ratings by local talk shows in some markets.

The Kings had hoped Oprah Winfrey would star in their first prime-time show. They had a deal with ABC to produce a sitcom starring the actress, nominated for an Oscar for her supporting role in "The Color Purple," but neither they nor she liked the the pilot, and the project was scrapped for the time being.

Miller Says Writers Scared

LONDON (AP) — Playwright Arthur Miller, a campaigner on behalf of writers imprisoned for their political views, is skeptical about how much writers in the Soviet Union will benefit from the liberalization under Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Miller, 72, knows the problem well. His writings were blacklisted in both the United States and the Soviet Union. He has traveled frequently to the Soviet Union, and in 1986 he was one of 15 writers who spent nearly three hours with Gorbachev.

"If you talk to writers in the Soviet Union, they say it is getting better, but they are scared; the better it gets the more dangerous it is; the sleeping ogre gets unhappier," Miller said in an interview during a visit to London to promote his autobiography, "Timebends-A Life".

"I can't believe the whole bureaucracy has shifted," said the Pulitzer Prize-winning American playwright.

Miller also said he believes there are Soviet writers who oppose "glasnost," or openness on selected topics.

"They are in a non-competitive society," he explained. "A writer can write a fistful of poems or a few short stories and, as they told me themselves, they don't have to work anymore."

"The idea like the one we have in the West that a writer is continually producing is completely alien to them. They just get the perks: apartments, vacations. It's like they are on the faculty of a university; they have meetings, go to lunches."

Miller spoke from the unusual position of having had some of his work blacklisted in the United States, during the 1950s, and in the Soviet Union, after he became president of International PEN, a writers' organization that campaigns for the release of writers imprisoned for their political views.

Asked what impact next month's summit between President Reagan and Gorbachev might have on human rights, Miller said: "It might go better if they (Reagan and Gorbachev) moved ahead with arms reduction talks. The pressure for human rights needs to be separate."

It's More Difficult To Find Air Time For Negative Ads

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — At the start of this decade, a sudden wave of harshly negative TV ads against liberal senators unsettled the political establishment and helped defeat several incumbents.

But it's no longer so easy to attack on the air, as the anti-apartheid lobbying group TransAfrica learned the past week in Iowa.

No stations in the state have accepted the group's 30-second ad criticizing GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole's stand on economic sanctions against South Africa. As Senate Republican leader he voted for sanctions, but the group complains that he later worked to sustain President Reagan's veto of them.

TransAfrica's experience highlights the reluctance of local television stations to accept negative advertising from groups unaffiliated with a candidate.

"It has become standard practice among many in the broadcasting industry to refuse to air negative ads prepared by independent groups," said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political science professor with a personal video collection of some 1,600 campaign ads.

Randall Robinson, executive director of TransAfrica, said he had no idea his group would have trouble placing its anti-Dole ad on television.

"We ran a full-page ad on Dole in the Des Moines Register. You will never have a problem doing this in a newspaper. Why is it that you have a problem with television?" Robinson asked.

It was less of a problem in the pioneering days of the National Conservative Political Action Committee. The well-financed group targeted six liberal senators in 1980, and four of them lost — in large part, some say, because of the sharply critical advertising.

The idea was to let the GOP challengers take the high road, with NCPAC doing the dirty work.

Tom Edmonds, a Washington media consultant associated with NCPAC, said the group often encountered resistance from television stations apprehensive about being sued or having to air an opposing viewpoint without getting paid.

"Many times NCPAC said, fine, we'll pay for the opposing point of view, or we'll pay if you get sued," Edmonds said.

NCPAC prevailed in many cases. In addition to financial offers, the group applied political pressure to local stations through sympathetic members of Congress and media pressure through news conferences and print ads.

Other tactics included recruiting a candidate to introduce a negative ad. That worked because "TV stations cannot refuse candidate advertising in any way, shape or form," said former NCPAC spokesman Craig Shirley, now a Republican consultant.

Sabato said stations started getting cold feet in 1982 when Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., had his lawyer threaten to demand equal time or sue stations airing negative ads about him.

"That was passed around the broadcasting industry very quickly," Sabato said. "It helped to chill the industry to these sorts of advertisements."

Negative advertising is still a major force, but it's being done by candidates themselves, who have guaranteed access to television, Sabato said. Many independent groups are moving into favorable promotion of candidates they support, he said, and doing their sniping via direct mail.

Edmonds acknowledged that NCPAC is spending a lot of money on positive ads — the kind that help a favored candidate win name recognition without slashing at his or her opponent. But he and Shirley contend the era of the independent negative television ad is not over.

"It's not been shut down," said Edmonds. "It takes negotiating. It takes supplying them with good documentation."

The TransAfrica ad notes that Dole worked to sustain Reagan's veto of sanctions and says, "We don't want a president who will do business with racists in South Africa." Television station managers in Iowa characterized the spot as partisan, in bad taste and character assassination.

Robinson called the ad an accurate and relatively mild account of Dole's record, and he said the group will go ahead with plans to try to air it in New Hampshire and other primary states.

"If candidates are allowed to buy time to present themselves in the light that they choose to," he said, "then others ought to be able to buy time to present a different view."

Comics Hold Charity Drive

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Dozens of top comedians brought in more than $2 million in pledges with humor and passionate pleas during the Comic Relief '87 fund-raiser to help the homeless.

The show at the Universal Amphitheatre featured such performers as Billy Crystal, Dick Gregory, Dudley Moore and Rue McClanahan and Estelle Getty of NBC-TV's "Golden Girls."

"Comedy is a great healer," Crystal told reporters backstage before Saturday's show. "If you can laugh at a terrible situation, it helps. If people sense that we care... maybe they'll give a dollar or two."

Crystal said he and comic Robin Williams got a personal view of the homeless last year when they delivered checks and medical supplies to shelters.

About 6,000 people at the theater and viewers nationwide of cable television's Home Box Office watched about two dozen comedians joke, sing and plead for donations during the four-hour show.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AQ10762 ♥J983 ♦7 ♣K3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—With a dead minimum opening bid and a possible misfit, it is better to rebid your six-card suit than to change suits and show your four-carder, even at the risk of missing a possible fit in the other major.
Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AKJ852 ♥7 ♦AQ95 ♣63
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Your hand is not quite good enough for a jump to three spades. However, two spades would tend to be discouraging, so we recommend you rebid two diamonds. Partner should bear in mind that you might have extra values.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠9 ♥J642 ♦AK763 ♣KQ6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—What do you know about partner's hand? He has no more than six cards in the major suits (he would have shown a four-card major), so he has at least seven cards in the minors. Bid two clubs. Partner either has a five-card club suit or else diamond support, in which case he will correct to two diamonds.
Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K10762 ♥AJ ♦KQ6 ♣J104
 The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
 2 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You surely are going to bid a slam. However, you don't yet know whether you want to play the hand in a suit or no trump. The solution is to make a waiting bid of three diamonds, to see whether partner takes a spade preference to tell you has three card-support for you.
Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK7 ♥KJ984 ♦K7632 ♣—
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have to be careful because of the possible misfit. However, partner has not denied three-card heart support or a diamond suit, so there is no need for you to do anything other than make your normal rebid—two diamonds. Remember, a change of suit by responder is a one-round force.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K1053 ♥K6 ♦AQ854 ♣43
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ 1 NT ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Your side, by far, has the preponderance of the strength, and you should tell partner that right away. The obvious means to accomplish that is to double.

Astronomers Say Mysterious Space Arches Are Only Cosmic Illusions

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Astronomers say arches of glowing blue light stretching trillions of miles through space are merely illusions, but the existence of such mirages suggests the universe is fated to collapse in a "big crunch."

The discovery of two and possibly three arches, or arcs, was announced last January by astronomers Roger Lynds and Vahe Petrosian, who said they are trying to explain them "gives theorists nightmares."

One arc appeared to stretch 1.9 million trillion miles through a cluster of galaxies named Abell 370. That cluster is about 7 billion light years or 41 billion trillion miles from Earth, twice as far as reported in the January announcement. Another appeared in galaxy cluster 2244-02, and there were faint signs of a third arc in cluster Abell 2218.

Light from the arc in cluster Abell 370 recently was analyzed by Petrosian, astronomy chairman at Stanford University, and Lynds, of Kitt Peak National Observatory near Tucson, Ariz. They concluded that the arc is a "cosmic mirage" created when a massive galaxy bends light from a galaxy almost directly behind the first galaxy but roughly twice as distant. They believe the other arcs also are illusions.

Light from the distant galaxy spreads out as it moves toward Earth. But gravity from the intervening galaxy in Abell 370 acts as a "gravitational lens," bending the light like a glass lens so some of it is seen from Earth as an arc, Lynds said in a telephone interview.

Petrosian said the light-bending galaxies, though they may contain billions of stars, still don't contain enough visible stars to exert such tremendous gravity. That means they must contain huge amounts of "dark matter" invisible from Earth, he added.

Scientists believe the amount of visible matter in the universe is not enough to exert the gravitational force that would be needed to stop the universe from expanding forever.

So they have searched for evidence of dark matter because it might make up the difference, supplying enough gravity to eventually slow the universe's expansion, and then make it collapse in a reverse of the "big bang" believed to have formed the universe.

If all galaxy clusters contain as much dark matter as those that formed the arcs, "it means the expansion is eventually going to be halted and the universe will start collapsing and end up in a big crunch," Petrosian said.

In January, the National Optical Astronomy Observatories, which operates Kitt Peak, called the arcs "the largest optically visible structures yet observed in the universe."

Progress Reported In Treating Colds

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers have identified a substance that induces an immune response to some of the viruses that cause the common cold, but one scientist cautioned: "Don't throw away your chicken soup just yet."

Scientists from the Sandoz Science Institute in Vienna, Austria, reported they have injected rabbits with a chemical synthesized to mimic a portion of a certain cold virus. The substance induced the animals to make antibodies against the virus.

That demonstrates the feasibility of a cold vaccine, researchers Joseph McCray and Gudrun Werner write in today's issue of Nature, a British scientific journal.

ever, an American scientist noted that many difficulties remain before such a substance could lead to an effective cold vaccine.

"Don't throw away your chicken soup just yet," said Ann Palmenberg of the Institute for Molecular Virology at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. "It will be some time before we can cure the common cold."

She said that the levels of antibodies produced by the rabbits in response to the synthetic substance did not appear to be strong enough to ward off a cold.

The substance injected into the rabbits is called a synthetic peptide. It is a replica of a portion of a protein on the outside of the cold virus tested. The rabbits' immune systems recognized it as a foreign substance and produced antibodies that would latch on to it, the first step in the body's destruction of an intruder.

Celestial 'Chain' Of Galaxies Covers Tenth Of Our Universe

By MICHAEL SPECTER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — An astronomer has reported discovering an immense string of galaxies — 100 times more massive than our structure known to exist — that stretches across 10 percent of the universe.

Linked like beads on an enormous celestial chain, the new "supercluster" appears to challenge one of cosmology's most fundamental assumptions: that galaxies are spread randomly — but equally — across the universe. Discovered by R. Brent Tully of the University of Hawaii, this "supercluster" is so large that theorists may have to develop new models to explain the formation of galaxies.

"If this is accurate it will be very difficult to understand what physical process could have organized galaxies on such large scales," said Simon White, an astrophysicist at the University of Arizona. "We will really have to sit down and rework many of the basic notions we have."

Galaxies are clusters of billions of stars grouped together over a distance of hundreds of millions of light years. Until 10 years ago most astronomers believed that the galaxies did not form clusters on a large scale but were scattered randomly through space.

Over the past decade, as sophisticated computers and telescopes have become essential tools of the astronomer's trade, there has been a growing realization that galaxies seem to fall into coherent clumps and strings separated by vast voids.

The supercluster described by Tully, however, is bigger than anything envisioned before, and most scientists say they will remain skeptical until they read his article describing the discovery. The article will be published in the Dec. 1 issue of Astrophysical Journal.

"The data is all new and we have to be sure he was not seeing an accidental pattern, one that could have been random," said James Peebles, professor of physics at Princeton University. "At this point I prefer to say I look forward to seeing his work."

Tully named the structure the Pisces-Cetus Supercluster Complex, after the constellations in which it was found. He said Monday that he had preliminary evidence of similar superclusters in other regions of the universe.

"I am comfortable that this is no flake," he said. "I'm not bold enough to suggest that all the theories are worthless. But I do think they will need some adjustment."

Theorists, creating hypothetical galaxies on computers, already are scrambling to see if they can make sense of Tully's discovery. Calculating the motion of galaxies and plotting their distance from each other, astrophysicists will feed millions of bits of data into huge supercomputers, like the one used by Tully, to create a simulated universe that can accommodate the new supercluster.

How the universe was formed is the most basic question of astrophysics. To answer it, it has been necessary to return to the Big Bang, the cataclysmic explosion that created all celestial objects.

The largest structures in today's universe are actually the results of infinitesimally small fluctuations set off by the Big Bang billions of years ago. As the universe expanded the fluctuations grew and eventually reached the massive proportions of today's cosmos.

Tully has been mapping galaxies for more than a decade. Once he identified clusters, he compared their distance from each other with the distance of random spacings between clusters of galaxies in the universe.

By gauging the density and volume of galaxies he then computed the statistical chances of their being in certain locations in relation to other, neighboring galaxies. He concluded that the clusters were related to each other because the probability of their relationship occurring by chance was statistically unlikely.

"This is very exciting, but we have to take it for the pioneering new information that it is," said Michael Turner, a physicist at the University of Chicago. "We are just now beginning to get a three-dimensional picture of the universe. It is coming in bits and pieces."

Turner cautioned that the Tully discoveries need to be confirmed and that even now only a small fraction of the universe has been mapped by scientists.

"It's hard to know what will happen," Turner said. "It's like watching that woman on 'Wheel of Fortune' turn over the very first letters. You need a certain amount of information before you can even guess what the whole word is."

Bishops Glide Over Past Disagreements With Pope

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's Roman Catholic bishops are beginning their national meeting with a glowing account of Pope John Paul II's recent U.S. visit, a far cry from the contentiousness between the bishops and the Vatican at the church leaders' meeting one year ago.

Archbishop John L. May of St. Louis, in his first "state of the church" address as president of the bishops' national organization, gives barely a hint of any disagreements between the bishops and the pope.

Instead, in a speech prepared for delivery at the annual meeting's opening session today, he embraced the words of a Catholic publication that recently declared, "The itchy matters of ferment which make headlines do not touch most American Catholic lives."

May also praised the pope's September trip to the South and West, defending it in particular against complaints that the millions of dollars involved could have been better spent.

In contrast, last November the church's 300 U.S. bishops went behind closed doors for lengthy and sometimes-stormy discussions of what some of them saw as unfortunate Vatican disciplining of a fellow bishop.

Dilution of the authority of that colleague, Seattle Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen, was seen by some as a warning shot by Vatican officials — if not the pope himself — over the heads of U.S. church leaders who are sometimes seen by church officials in Rome as too independent-minded.

Since then, Hunthausen was given back full authority and the pope returned for his second lengthy U.S. visit — a trip judged a great success by church officials.

After May's speech today, the bishops were to quickly dig into a list of prickly issues ranging all the way from dissenting theologians to impoverished aging nuns to U.S. involvement in Central America.

Later in the week, they also will decide whether to formally call for federal and state law changes to ban public schools from handing out contraceptives.

They decided at the last minute to put off until June a discussion on the morality of the nation's nuclear deterrence policy, waiting until after the U.S.-Soviet summit on arms reduction.

The pope's trip, an emotional high point for many church leaders, also included an unblinking papal lecture advising the bishops not to tolerate dissent — a sore point in Vatican-U.S. relations.

May, however, accented the positive throughout his speech, declaring that people who made negative predictions about the trip were proven wrong.

"The pope was coming to scold us. He didn't," May said.

"The pope would be greeted by massive protests and demonstrations. He wasn't."

"The trip would be greeted by vast indifference. It wasn't."

"The trip would cost too much!" he quoted nay-sayers as predicting. In fact, complaints have continued after the trip, which May has estimated cost more than $20 million.

However, he said, "The benefits which the local churches derived, and in which the entire church in the United States also shared, proved the enduring value of this pastoral visit."

May made only one reference to possible disagreements with the pope, and he put a positive twist on that lone negative.

The pope, he said, "expressed his appreciation for the candor and honesty with which even the occasional difficult issue was joined, and time and again showed himself a good listener."
