ECU Names Hart Interim AD

By WOODY PEELE

Dave Hart, associate athletic director for external affairs and executive director of the Pirate Club, was named this morning as acting director of athletics by East Carolina University Chancellor Richard Eakin.

The move came just 24 hours after the resignation of Dr. Ken Karr as athletic director, a post he had held for seven years.
Eakin, in a 10 a.m. press conference, also named a committee which will choose a new full-time athletic director from inside the present ECU staff.

"I expect that the position vacancy will be advertised by Dec. 1, and that a new director of athletics will be selected by Dec. 30," Eakin said. "Candidates for the position will be limited to persons who are presently employed by East Carolina University."

Named to the committee were C.G. Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs, who will chair the group; Richard A. Edwards, executive assistant to the chancellor; Riley Roberson, board of trustees member; Scott Thomas, student government president; Pam Penland, assistant director of athletics for academic affairs; Jo Ann Bell, director of the Health Services Library; Jack Edwards, president of the Pirate Club, and Ernie Schwarz, chairman of the faculty athletic committee.

Meanwhile, Eakin said, Hart will be in full charge with authority to act in any capacity.

The chancellor said the decision to limit the search to a present staff member was "the need to get on with the program with stability. I believe we already have people on campus who can handle the job."

Hart said that he would be a candidate for the full time position.

Hart said that while he had great respect for Karr, who brought him to Death Toll Put At 30

London Subway Fire Turns Station Into Flaming Cave

LONDON (AP) — The cause of the fire that killed at least 30 people and turned London's busiest subway station into a hellish cavern of flames and smoke remained a mystery today.

Pandemonium broke out when thousands of commuters found themselves trapped by the blaze Wednesday evening at King's Cross station and struggled to escape through walls of dense smoke and fierce heat.

The London Fire Brigade said 34 people died, Scotland Yard put the figure at 32, and British Transport Police later said 30 were killed.

There was no explanation for the discrepancies.

About 80 people were injured, including 21 who were hospitalized.

"I am absolutely horrified by this dreadful fire," Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said after visiting some of the victims.

The cause was under investigation. Initially it was believed that trash under an escalator caught fire, but London Underground said it found the machine room under the mechanical stairway "clean as a whistle."

There also was speculation that a discarded cigarette caused the fire. Smoking was banned in Underground stations and trains in January 1985, but the ban is sometimes ignored.

"The cause of the fire is at present not known and is being investigated," Chief Constable Kenneth H. Ogram of the Transport Police told a news conference.

He said telephoned claims of sabotage were received, but gave no details and said he had no grounds for believing them. He appealed to witnesses to contact police and help piece together what happened.

The fire erupted at 7:36 p.m. at the tail end of the capital's commuter rush period, and undoubtedly would have claimed an even heavier toll had it occurred an hour earlier.

Sir Keith Bright, chairman of London Regional Transport, said the fire started about halfway up a wooden escalator and quickly spread "into the ticket area, which is completely burned out."

Witnesses said they saw people with burning hair and others lying face down and motionless in the charred main ticket hall of the mammoth station, which is served by five lines of the London Underground running below a British Rail intercity terminal.

Students Skills Studied

By CHERIE EVANS

Pitt County students seem to be lacking in reasoning skills or cause and effect relationships, members of the Pitt County schools minority task force said after reviewing 1986-87 competency test scores at a meeting Wednesday night.

The task force, comprised of teachers, principals, central office personnel and local citizens to address perceptions school personnel and the community have about minority students, was briefed by school Superintendent Eddie West on data related to the education of minority students and selected demographic data on Pitt County.

In 1987 sophomore competency test scores, 16 percent of all Pitt County students failed skills of comparing and contrasting information, matching the percentage of students that failed the test statewide. About 25 percent of the black students in Pitt

The local 400th Anniversary Committee formally transferred the Pitt County Tobacco Museum to the American Legion's Pitt County Fair Association during a ceremony Wednesday afternoon at the fairgrounds.

Gladys Howell, chairman of the 400th Committee, presented the transfer to Norman Wilkerson, president of the fair association, which operates the Village of Yesteryear in which the newly established Tobacco Museum is located.

"Raising funds for the development of a tobacco museum in Pitt County, and for a commemorative quilt to be displayed at Joyner Library, were the two main objectives of the 400th Committee," Mrs. Howell said. "Our committee operated from 1983, the beginning of the four-year statewide celebration honoring the first English settlement in America, which officially concluded last August on the occasion of the 400th birthday of Virginia Dare."

Reagan Ignores Report

Related stories on A-10.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, contending that Congress' Iran-Contra report is a partisan attempt to discredit President Reagan, today refused to offer a rebuttal to the documents' findings and sharp criticism.

Brushing aside questions from reporters, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "I won't go into any of the details of the report."

Asked if Reagan would ever address the findings, Fitzwater, "I don't think we'll ever discuss these kinds of details, no."

He said Reagan has the report and "probably will read some of it."

Reagan kept to a round of ceremonial duties on Wednesday, and refused to comment on the 690-page study of his administration's worst foreign policy entanglement.

The report says Reagan contributed to a massive deception of Congress and the American people and allowed a band of zealots in his administration to seize control of U.S. foreign policy.

"You don't want to hear it," Reagan told reporters who sought his response as he walked to an event in the Old Executive Office Building.

"There isn't much new here. It's mostly subjective opinions," White

Farm Show Ending On Low Attendance

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector staff Writer

With attendance down from last year, the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show concluded its three-day occupation of the Farmers Warehouse today with a scheduled tobacco-spitting contest and a performance by country comedian Jerry Clower.

Jim Swindell, show manager, said that, although attendance numbers are down from last year, it still has been a successful show.

"Tuesday we had somewhere in the neighborhood of about 5,000 to 6,000 bodies through here," he said. "Today (Wednesday) it looks like we've had around 8,000 to 9,000 people through here and it looks real good quality-wise; quality as I'm talking about in terms of good agricultural people."

Last year the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show drew 35,000 visitors.

Swindell said he attributes lower attendance this year to good weather which, he says, has kept farmers in the fields rather than visiting the show.

Over 200 exhibitors were registered to participate in the annual three-day affair which started in 1975.

The show, tailored for professional farmers, offers farming-related businesses the opportunity to show new products and services.

Steve Groak of Greenville Turf and Tractor, an exhibitor at the show, said he's seen many old customers and made some new ones.

"The farm show lets people know what we have and what there is available," he said. "It gives dealers a chance to show off new and improved items."

Bill Boykin from Beechnut Chewing Tobacco said he had passed out over 11,000 free sample packs of chewing tobacco through Wednesday.

"We are reaching the tobacco chewers of eastern Carolina," he said.

Boykin said this was his first time

Men Save Sisters In House Fire

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville residents Mildred Thompson and Marilyn Perry are thankful to be alive. And much of their gratitude is directed toward Carlos Dawson and Wayne Wilson, who pulled the two women from their burning house.

Sunday shortly after 5 a.m., Mrs. Thompson was awakened by a loud crashing noise. She thought at first, she said, that someone had had a wreck near her house on Nash Street. Then it occurred to her that the sound might have come from inside her house, so she got up to investigate. She quickly discovered that the house was filled with smoke and started yelling for her sister, Mrs. Perry, asleep in another room, to get up. The two struggled toward the front door.

Then Mrs. Thompson heard her name being called from a nearby window. And an instant later, she saw Carlos Dawson coming through that window. He, assisted by Wayne Wilson of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, helped the two women to leave the house through the window.

"I realized later that we couldn't have gotten out the front door," Mrs. Thompson said. "That area of the house is really charred."

Also, there was a serious depletion of oxygen in the house, Greenville

Assistant Fire Chief Raymond Carney said, which may have hampered the women's efforts to free themselves. He said the breaking of the picture window and some other windows upstairs was a result of pressure inside the house caused by a buildup of gases. The toxicity of these gases, coupled with oxygen depletion, could have overpowered the women if they had not had assistance, he said.

Dawson, a Greenville resident and an employee of the Mid-East Housing Authority, told fire-rescue officials he was on his way home from a laundromat when he observed the front picture window of the Thompson-Perry house blowing outward. The bursting of that window is what awakened Mrs. Thompson, she now believes. Dawson, who knew the two retired public school teachers who lived in the house, went into action to assist them.

Wilson arrived at the scene before fire trucks were dispatched. He was on his way back to the station from Pitt County Memorial Hospital and observed the fire.

A neighbor who told Mrs. Thompson she just happened to wake up and see the house afire called the fire department.

Assistant Chief Carney said that the fire started from faulty wiring in 'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Important Tool

The Otter Creek Natural Heritage designation is significant for both for the cause of preservation and for East Carolina University.

As a natural area under the auspices of the state's protective Natural Heritage program, the tract will be preserved in its natural state. It should be. The area's ecological value in an increasingly developing Coastal Plain is immense.

The area is a mini-wilderness. It contains varied topography and flora, and this diversity makes the reserve an important tract of land. The natural area contains, for example, steep ravines that harbor a cool, moist environment, where galax and mountain laurel grow. Because the property has not been timbered in this century, it contains natural forest communities seldom seen in the Coastal Plain.

As a designated natural area, the tract can continue to be effectively used as an outdoor laboratory by ECU. Because its environment is natural and unaffected by development, this tract will be especially important in pinpointing the impact of development on the ecology of similar areas.

As growth changes the face of more and more of Pitt County, this calculation will become increasingly significant. The reserve will function as a gauge to environmental harm, perhaps assisting researchers to compile data and make recommendations to minimize damage in developing areas.

The tract will also provide excellent opportunities for research and education in forest succession and other ecological processes. Because of timbering, mature forest tracts in eastern North Carolina are scarce. Trees in the ravines of the tract are estimated to be 150 to 200 years old. Few examples of old-growth woodland and the habitat it supports remain.

The natural area is of further value to ECU. In addition to research by the biology and geology departments, the tract can be used by parks and recreation, and leisure systems studies. It may even be used by the school of art as a site for painting landscapes and outdoor scenes.

None of these immense benefits would be possible, of course, if the land had not been donated to the University by its original owners. Its location and scenic beauty make it desirable for development, but it is impressive that these individuals, Mrs. Reid Parker Ellis and Howard Ellis, choose protection and research over profit.

The Otter Creek Natural Heritage area is a valuable tool for ECU and a boon for preservation. As Pitt County's first designated natural area, the management of the reserve should set an example for future potential.

Back Together

Several pressures combined to convince the Arab states they needed to bring their act together and restore Egypt to becoming a member in good standing.

The rift between the two entities existed ever since President Sadat and Israel's Prime Minister Begin decided to try peace instead of war to settle differences. Egypt's friends in the League of Arab States turned a cold shoulder to the idea.

It didn't work out the way they expected.

Iran's aggressive policies have since made Egypt an even more valuable ally to the Arab League. After all, Egypt's population makes up more than a quarter of the Arab world population. Egypt also has an armaments industry capable of supplying Iraq $1 billion worth of weaponry a year (since 1984) and Egypt maintains the largest standing army in the area — 500,000 men.

In plain language, the League needed Egypt more than Egypt needed the League. That fact was the motivation for the Arab states to call Egypt back to the fold.

The advantages were clear. Right now the Iran government poses a threat to several Arab countries. They are all nervous because the Ayatollah is inclined to lash out in any direction and at least two of the Arab states feel they are under the Ayatollah's gun. Encouraging good standing with Egypt could provide some degree of protection.

The switch also implies a helpful hand being extended to Washington policies in the Persian Gulf as well as easing the threat to Israel.

Analysts are telling us the return of Egypt to Arab ranks reflects a new order of priorities among the Arab states who now see their main threat is Iran and no longer Israel.

An analysis of the circumstances preceeding the move makes it clear Jordan's King Hussein largely made it possible. His guidance represents a positive contribution.

To the editor:

As a cadet advisor with the Greenville Police Department, I have had the chance to ride with some of the best police officers Greenville has to offer. I have seen police work first-hand and know that these well-trained officers will give the city of Greenville their very best.

Many times society overlooks what the good police officers do in their city. Police officers provide constant 24-hour protection to this city and ensure the citizens of Greenville peace of mind when they sleep at night.

We as a community must support our men and women in uniform and let them know that their professionalism will not go unnoticed. So let's just be proud of such a good job that the Greenville Police Department does and the good that the police officers do as well. Always keep in mind that these men and women who serve your city risk their lives every day and that they keep your safety on their minds constantly.

Committee Report: The Picture Is Clear

WASHINGTON — When nationally televised Iran-Contra hearings ended last August, what former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter called a protective "wall around the president" had withstood months of inquiries and revelations.

The majority report of the congressional investigating committees, issued Wednesday, jumped over that wall. The report contained only a few factual surprises and it leaves many critical aspects of the affair still unresolved — but it unambiguously affixes historical responsibility for the Iran-Contra affair on Ronald Reagan.

It does so in terms that come just short of suggesting the president had committed potentially impeachable offenses by failing to follow his constitutional charge "to take care that laws be faithfully executed."

The essence of the majority report was that Reagan, as the nation's chief executive and principal law officer, could not escape responsibility for actions of his subordinates because of ignorance of their actions or the climate of secrecy that flourished in his administration.

He had a responsibility, the report concludes, "to leave the members of his administration in no doubt that the rule of law governs." But he failed to do that, the report says. It was the president who set the tone that led aides to believe they were carrying out his policies, the president who must accept responsibility for failing to let them know he disapproved of their actions after the nation learned that several of them had "lied, shredded documents and covered up their actions." Instead, the president "has yet to condemn their conduct."

The power of the majority report lies in the way in which it presents a direct, unequivocal, coherent and unsparing portrait of the multiple complex activities that came to be known collectively as the Iran-Contra affair.

It makes them understandable, and does so in sober and straightforward tones throughout. It has the sweep of a historian's narrative rendering of serious, fateful events. It does not read like a polemic.

The judgments it renders are simply, bluntly stated. "Again, North lied," it says at one point. It calls a coverup a coverup. It brands lies as lies, deception as deception. Its section headings read like pithy guidelines to a tragic episode with overtones of high corruption coupled with high purpose: "The Money Begins to Run Out" ... "The Decision to Bring the Situation to a Head" ... "Keeping 'USG Fingerprints' Off the Contra Operation: 1986" ... "Authority to Lie" ... "Taken to the Cleaners": The Iran Initiative Continues."

Its text is free of bureaucratic jargon, unusual for a document that is the product of many authors struggling against a tight deadline to achieve a consensus in a highly charged political atmosphere.

For example, here's how it summarizes why the secret Iran arms sales failed disastrously, and what are the implications of that failure:

"Too many drivers — and never the right ones — steering in too many different directions took the Iran initiative down the road to failure. In the end, there was no improved relationship with Iran, no lessening of its commitment to terrorism and no fewer American hostages."

"The Iran initiative succeeded only in replacing three American hostages with another three, arming Iran with 2,004 TOW's and more than 200 vital spare parts for HAWK missile batteries, improperly generating funds for the Contras and other covert activities (although far less than North believed), producing profits for the Hakim-Secord Enterprise that in fact belonged to U.S. taxpayers, leading certain NSC and CIA personnel to deceive representatives of their own government, undermining U.S. credibility in the eyes of the world, damaging relations between the executive and the Congress, and engulfing the president in one of the worst credibility crises of any administration in U.S. history."

Seldom has a president been so blamed for creating, or tolerating, what the committees found was a pervasive atmosphere in which members of his administration repeatedly lied to other high government officials, and deceived Congress and the American people.

Treating Independents Differently

RALEIGH — The state's two major parties will be treating unaffiliated voters differently when it comes to primaries.

The Republican Party has invited unaffiliated — or independent — voters to participate in its primaries while the Democratic Party has not.

Action taken by the 1987 General Assembly empowered political parties to open their primaries to voters who had not affiliated themselves with any party at registration. There are about 133,000 of these voters and they represent about 4 percent of the electorate.

State GOP Chairman Jack Hawke said his party is "trying to open up the political process and welcome people to the Republican Party." He said that by asking these voters to participate in Republican primaries, his party would be encouraging independents to support GOP candidates in the fall vote.

Ken Eudy, executive director of the State Democratic Party, said that his party was taking a risk by not allowing unaffiliated voters to participate in Democratic primaries. "It's a gamble. If you had half of them voting in the Republican primary and they become invested in the Republican candidate in the fall, then, yes" there's a risk.

But Eudy said that the Democratic Executive Committee felt that "Democrats ought to nominate Democratic candidates. That seems to make sense. If you want to vote to nominate the party's standard bearers, then you ought to be a member of the party."

Hawke feels that the move will pay big rewards for the Republican Party. In addition to the "investment" strategy that Eudy mentioned — that is, if you vote for the eventual GOP nominee in the spring, you're likely to vote for him again in the fall — Hawke says the GOP will be helped in other ways. When independents vote in a GOP primary, the party will learn their names. Then the GOP can put those voters on their mailing lists, and even pitch to them to register Republican. They will have identified GOP-leaning independents.

Eudy says he's not sure the change will make any difference. "I'm just not sure that everybody is all that concerned about it. If it has any effect, I think it will be very, very gradual."

The impact would have been much more significant if the Democrats, who outnumber Republicans by almost three-to-one in the state, had also changed. It would have changed the entire nature of party affiliation in the state.

Had the Democrats also changed, then unaffiliated voters would have been able to participate only in their own primary. By giving the unaffiliated voter greater primary options than the affiliated voter, the parties would have been encouraging voters to register as independents. The parties, in short, would have been encouraging people to take the action which most threatens the existence of the parties.

The GOP is split over the issue of allowing Democrats to participate in Republican primaries, as is allowed in many southern states. Hawke and the National Congressional Club think it would be a wise move. It would bring conservative Democrats, who tend to vote Republican in federal elections, into the GOP fold, Hawke said. But the traditional wing of the Republican Party — the wing from which Gov. Jim Martin sprung — fears that this could lead to a takeover of their party by disaffected Democrats.

Strength For Today

Why is gambling wrong? Perhaps the most important reason is because it commits one, temporarily at least, to a policy of getting something for nothing. As a practical illustration, a large proportion of individuals convicted of embezzlement started their careers by gambling for continually higher stakes.

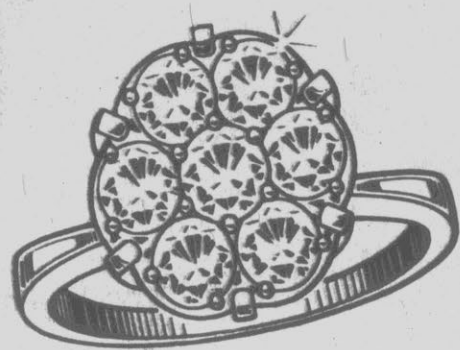

With some people, gambling very quickly becomes a compulsive neurosis like drug addiction. It feeds on illusion, it becomes a compensation for many things which the individual knows he will never have. Also, studies have demonstrated that many compulsive gamblers have a feeling of worthlessness, and subconsciously they want to lose in order to prove that their judgement about themselves is correct.

Gambling, therefore, can easily become a destructive force in anyone's life.

Ban On Shellfishing Extended To Avon As Red Tide Spreads

By The Associated Press

The state has extended the area of North Carolina coast affected by the red tide by 55 miles, and the area now includes part of the Pamlico Sound, officials said Wednesday.

The southern boundary remains at Carolina Beach, said Jim Sheppard, a spokesman for the Division of Environmental Management.

The northern boundary, which had been Cedar Island for several days, was extended to a point nine miles off Ocracoke in the Pamlico Sound, he said. From there, the red tide boundary goes in a straight line to Avon on Hatteras Island, he said.

Shellfishing is prohibited in the area where the toxic algae has been found.

The extension of 55 miles makes the entire area under the red tide watch about 170 miles "as the crow flies from Avon to Carolina Beach," he said.

But the area is "a rich shellfish area" that includes "hundreds of miles of coastline that could be fished," Sheppard said.

The extension was caused by a strong wind from the south that blew all day Tuesday, he said.

In addition, the counts of algae in Core Sound, between Harkers Island and Cedar Island, increased, he said.

The watch affects only clams and oysters, he said. Fin-fish and shrimp taken from the area are safe.

Sheppard construction workers at a project on the beach in the Morehead area were sent home when the red tide caused them to cough and suffer respiratory problems.

Legislative Panel Agrees On Need To Study Taxes

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — It has been 21 years since the last broad study of North Carolina's tax code, and a legislative commission has agreed with the Martin administration that it's time for a review.

"Over these 20-some years, the economic character of the state has changed from primarily agriculture to a mixed agriculture and manufacturing economy," state Revenue Secretary Helen Powers told the Revenue Laws Study Commission Wednesday. "At the present time, it appears well-advanced in a transition to high-tech and service industries and an increase in the number of small businesses."

The legislature has conducted only two broad studies of the tax code since the last major revision of state tax laws in 1939 — one in 1956, the other in 1966.

Miss Powers said it would also be useful for the panel to examine the effect of tax laws on individual taxpayers and whether the state tax base is adequate for projected spending needs.

And although she said that she would not endorse any particular changes in the tax laws, she urged the commission to take a close look at a recent report prepared by her department. The report identifies more than 650 tax preferences that have been written into law over the years.

"Some of these exemptions, exclusions, deductions, allowances, credits, deferrals, refunds and preferential rates date back 50 years or more," Miss Powers said. "Others have been added in a haphazard fashion in years following major rewrites of important tax schedules."

"Tax preferences in actuality are revenue reductions often promoted by special interest groups — not always, but often — and once enacted, they are seldom reviewed," she said.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, the commission's co-chairman, said such special interests would receive no advantages.

"I think we said today that we are not going to put our emphasis on special interest requests," Rauch said after the meeting. "We're going to look out for those people who don't have lobbyists to come here."

Although the panel is authorized to present a report to the legislature's short session in June 1988, Rauch said that it will probably save any recommendations for bills for the next full session in 1989.

Cholesterol Tests High In Triad Area

GREENSBORO (AP) — Most of the 22,000 Piedmont residents who took a special blood cholesterol screening test last month are getting some disturbing news: heart disease is in their future.

Medical experts are both surprised and puzzled by the results, which show Triad residents have blood cholesterol levels two to three times the national average.

Fatty deposits like cholesterol build up in the blood vessels and those deposits are linked with many of the heart attacks that strike 500,000 people each year.

Dr. Richard St. Clair, professor of pathology and a cholesterol expert at Bowman Gray School of Medicine, says people with troubling results should get a second opinion.

"The concern in a communitywide screening like this is that you're going to sort of panic a lot of people," said Dr. George Lawson, a biochemist at Wesley Long Community Hospital in Greensboro.

Last month, 6,300 people came to a

Greensboro shopping center and paid $5 for basic cholesterol screening by Moses H. Cone Memorial and Wesley Long Community hospitals.

Preliminary results show that 1,590 people — 25 percent — showed elevated cholesterol levels that placed them at high risk for heart disease. Another 1,968 — 31 percent — showed cholesterol levels indicating moderate risk.

Some 3,172 people were tested at Bowman Gray-N.C. Baptist Hospital Medical Center and at Forsyth Memorial Hospital. They report that 1,217 people — 38 percent — faced a high risk of heart disease. Another 1,095 — 34 percent — faced a moderate risk.

By comparison, the National Institutes of Health suggests that 10 percent of the nation will register blood cholesterol levels in the high risk category. Another 25 percent will register in the moderate risk range.

Day Care Board Orders Reduction In Ratio Of Children To Workers

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Child Day Care Commission has agreed to tighten regulations for licensed day-care centers by cutting the ratio of children to workers in 1989.

On a 9-5 vote Wednesday, the commission tentatively approved the change after members agreed that North Carolina day-care centers need major improvements in class size and worker training, with one member saying conditions in some centers were inhumane because of high ratios.

"What we are trying to do is something for the future and the children of our state," said commission member Ronald Saucier, a Wilmington day-care center owner.

Under the commission's proposal, the current ratio of seven children under 2 years of age for each day-care worker would be cut on July 1, 1989, to a ratio of six children per worker.

On the same date, the ratios for children ages 2 to 3 would drop from 12 per worker to 11; from 15 to 14 for children ages 3 to 4; from 20 to 19 for children ages 4 to 5; and from 25 to 20 for children 5 and older.

Critics said the cuts could force some day-care centers to close because lower ratios would mean less money at a time when some centers aren't faring well financially.

"In some situations, we don't have enough day-care facilities," said commission member Linda Willey. "If some centers are closed, where will those children get day care?"

A proposal for deeper cuts in the ratios on July 1, 1991, failed on an 8-6 vote after some members said the panel was moving too fast without knowing the impact.

The cuts proposed for 1989, if approved by the commission after a public hearing in March, would not drive up costs for day care significantly, said James L. Hall, president of the N.C. Day Care Association.

"I like the idea," Hall said. "It's good for the state to move to better staff-child ratios, because the fewer children for each child care provider, the better the job each provider can do. It's as simple as that."

There are 2,600 licensed day-care centers that serve 110,000 children in North Carolina, officials said.

"This is a small step in the right direction toward insuring quality care for children," commission Chairman Lois T. Queen of Waynesville said after the meeting.

Nancy H. Brown, chief of the child day-care section of the N.C. Division of Facility Services, unsuccessfully recommended that the commission move more slowly in reducing class sizes, saying the impact on day-care centers wasn't known.

North Carolina is "third from the bottom" among the states in the ratio of workers to children under 2 years old, Ms. Brown said.

She said 27 states have a ratio of one teacher for every six children in day-care centers who are ages 2 to 3, compared with North Carolina's current one-to-12 ratio.

"The two youngest groups are where we are most out of whack nationally," Ms. Brown said.

Duke Studies Tuition Plan

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University officials are considering a tuition plan that will establish different rates for returning and incoming students during the next four years.

For sophomores, juniors and seniors, that means tuition will likely go up from $10,000 a year by about 6 percent next year, the lowest increase in a decade. Freshmen will see a larger increase, although how large won't be known until December, said David Roberson, executive director of the Duke University News Service.

But the plan calls for new students to pay a one-time adjustment to help finance substantial academic improvements on campus expected to benefit them the most. Returning students would be exempt.

The academic improvements include hiring more faculty, adding new courses, erecting new academic buildings and improving the campus computer network.

RELIGIOUS BILLBOARDS — Andrea Morgan of Rutherfordton stands before one of the billboards she raised money to rent after becoming upset over similar billboards proclaiming the cartoon series called

"Masters of the Universe." She and friends raised money to have signs erected proclaiming Jesus as "Master of the Universe." (AP Laserphoto)

Cartoon Billboard Prompts Woman To Rent Own Sign

By ROBERT FIELD

The Shelby Star
RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — Andrea Morgan just couldn't go along with cartoon characters being proclaimed "Masters of the Universe."

Not only did the phrase sound wrong to her, it offended her sense of religion. Kiddie toys as rulers of the world? No way, she thought.

That was Mrs. Morgan's reaction after seeing a billboard announcing a movie based on a series of children's toys called "Masters of the Universe." Unlike some people who might have seen the sign and forgotten about it, however, Mrs. Morgan took action.

"I looked above it and there was an empty billboard that said, 'Available,'" she said. "It was like the Lord just spoke to me and said, 'No, Jesus is master of the universe.' I felt him saying to me, 'Move on it, now.'"

In a few days, she convinced a group of churchgoers to pay for two billboards reading, "Jesus, Master of the Universe."

Downplaying her role in the episode, Mrs. Morgan says she merely responded to a request from God. Two years ago, she felt a similar calling, but didn't pursue it.

"Sitting in church one day, I had a vision about billboards," she said. "It was like the Lord was saying, 'I want somebody to put my word on these billboards.'"

Mrs. Morgan, a member of Evangel Fellowship Church in Spindale, felt so moved by the vision that she stood up and told the congregation about it. In this case, however, she wasn't sure of the meaning. In search of direction, she turned to the Bible.

"I wanted to confirm his word," she said. "So one day, I didn't have my Bible and I used my son's, and that led me to Habakuk 2:2."

Mrs. Morgan was dumbstruck to have found a passage that spoke to her directly. The verse, according to The Living Bible translation, reads: "The Lord said to me, 'Write an answer on a billboard large and clear so that anyone can read it at a glance and rush to tell the others.'"

"It blew me away; it's right there," she said. "I was fairly new in the Lord then, so I wasn't familiar with the Scriptures to begin with. To find the exact thing was really exciting."

The excitement wore off, however, when Mrs. Morgan had trouble choosing her next step. "I had no idea this was for me to do," she said. "I just sat and listened and waited on the Lord."

Two years passed. Mrs. Morgan studied intently all the signs and billboards she saw, trying to picture how a certain Bible verse would look; but she kept waiting. Then, two months ago, she saw the "Masters of the Universe" billboard and knew her time had come.

She drove to church and talked to her pastor, Roger Gosnell, who encouraged her to "go for it." She called the billboard company, Carolina Posters Corp., and asked if billboards were available to private citizens.

"I was kind of hemming and hawing and wondering, 'How am I going to say this?'" she said. The man asked if she wanted to put up something like a happy birthday message. She replied, "Not exactly."

When she finally got around to telling him what she had in mind, he said, "Praise the Lord!" The man, Operations Manager Billy Justice, recently had become a Christian.

"He was really excited about doing something for the Lord," said Mrs. Morgan. "I told him my vision and he said he'd see what he could do about it."

"I got chills, to be honest with you," Justice said. "Her faith was very touching. Talking about it today, I still get chills."

Mrs. Morgan set about trying to raise enough money for the billboard by calling people she thought might be interested in helping. But she hit another snag.

"I got nowhere," she said. "It was getting to be 10 o'clock at night and I didn't want to bother anybody later than 9, so I just kind of laid it aside and said, 'Whatever, Lord. I'll see you in the morning.'"

By 10 a.m. the next day, however, most of the people had called her back and pledged more than enough money to pay for one billboard. By the end of the following day, she had enough to pay for a second one.

"It really came through; it was so beautiful," she said. "It was only seven people; seven blessed little saints — people who really had a feel for it."

Today, her billboards have been replaced by more standard advertising signs, but Mrs. Morgan trusts they had an effect.

"It's got to work on you," she said. "I had faith to know that God was speaking to me and that I had to move out in action. He knows what he's doing far better than I do."

Watauga Church Denies Any Role In Plotting Kenyan Coup

By SUSAN PRICE WILSON

Associated Press Writer
A Watauga County preacher whose small church has been accused by officials in Kenya of plotting to overthrow that African nation's government says the charges have left him "surprised, shocked and saddened."

Kenya deported seven U.S. missionaries Friday, then Wednesday ordered eight more American missionaries and one Canadian missionary to leave. The government is accusing the missionaries of plotting to topple the government of Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi.

"To my knowledge, there really is no connection to the congregation here," the Rev. Kenneth Caswell of Foscoe Christian Church near Boone said Wednesday in a telephone interview.

Caswell, who leads the congregation of 200 in the mountain community, said the State Department told him that on Nov. 12, a letter addressed to Ku Klux Klan members, bearing Foscoe Christian Church letterhead and dated Aug. 15, 1987, was published in the Kenyan newspapers.

Caswell said the letter "allegedly urges Klan members to assist in raising some $80 million to be raised in the overthrowing of the Kenyan government."

Caswell said the letter "goes on to name certain individuals serving as missionaries in Kenya who were supposed to be part of this plot."

In Washington, Charles Redman, a State Department spokesman, dismissed the coup charge as "patently absurd," and added: "The reports of the alleged plot appear to be based on a memo which we believe to be a forgery."

An official of the U.S. State Department told the Winston-Salem Journal Wednesday that a Kenyan student, David M.S. Kimweli, is suspected of using church stationery to forge the letter.

Kimweli, who has traveled across the South in recent years collecting money and volunteers for mission efforts that he claimed to have organized in Kenya, spoke at Foscoe Christian Church in February after being invited by Caswell and other church leaders.

The U.S. Embassy on Tuesday said the alleged plot was a hoax or part of a fraud being investigated in the United States.

In a statement, the embassy said it was keeping the Kenyan government informed on results of the investigation and "is seeking the support of the government of Kenya in explaining the facts to the public."

Caswell said he had no idea who wrote the letter or how they got his church's letterhead. He added that the State Department told him the signature on the letter is illegible.

"I certainly did not write the letter. The congregation did not write the letter and I firmly believe no one in our congregation had any part in writing the letter," Caswell said.

"The seven missionaries had no connection with our congregation," he said. "We do not support any missionaries. Our congregation supports no missionaries in Africa."

"The whole thing is a fraud. There is something really rotten here," Dick Hamilton, one of the missionaries ordered out, told The Associated Press in an interview Tuesday.

CARS ON A DIET?

DETROIT (AP) — America's preoccupation with weight loss even extends to the automobiles it drives, reports a metalworking weekly journal.

The estimated weight of structural materials in a typical U.S.-built car in 1987 is 3,178 pounds, notes Metalworking News. This is 487 pounds lighter than the 3,665 figure of 10 years ago.

Increasing use of such lightweight materials as aluminum, plastics, composites and lightweight but high-strength steel and carbon steel account for the major differences, says the publication.

Survey Shows Students Using Alcohol Most

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Despite the campaign against drinking and driving, a statewide survey of 10,000 junior and senior high school students shows more than half of them have drunk alcohol while riding around or sitting in a car at night.

"The first thing we have to do is educate parents about the information in the report," said Steve Hicks, director of the Alcohol and Drug Defense Program. "I think parents ... are really going to be shocked by some of this information. Too often we find parents who are relieved that their children are using alcohol and not using some of the other products."

"The drinking and driving setting and situations are very, very alarming," Hicks said.

The survey released Wednesday shows that alcohol remains the drug of choice among students and 60 percent of them say they've had an alcoholic drink.

More than 10 percent of high school juniors and seniors reported riding 10 or more times with a teen-age driver who was drinking in the past year, and more than 5 percent of all students said they believe some drivers can drive safely after five or six beers.

"We (drug treatment doctors) found no surprises," Dr. James Palmer, ADD assistant director and project director for the survey, said. "I think there's going to be people in the general population that will be surprised."

"We don't want to hedge on the fact that it (drug use) does concern us greatly," state Superintendent Craig Phillips said. "It's going to be tough (to stop). It's going to take a lot of work and time."

The results of the survey, the first statewide effort, was released at the start of the three-day Alcohol and Drug Defense Conference. The random survey was conducted in the spring of 1987.

"I am an optimist A good drug substance prevention program will work if we get enough people involved," Phillips added. "We are willing to roll up our sleeves and get at it. This is a serious issue."

The most widely used drugs in order of popularity among students included alcohol, cigarettes, smokeless tobacco, marijuana and hashish, inhalants, uppers, downers, cocaine and crack, and hallucinogens, the survey showed.

Some of the alcohol figures in the survey included:

— Almost one in three 7th-12th graders in the state report said they were drunk or very high at least once in the past year.

— More than 13 percent of all students reported binge drinking — drinking five or more beers at one time when they drink.

— More than 7 percent of all students said they drink beer on almost a weekly basis.

— More than 13 percent of all students reported coming to school drunk or high on alcohol last year.

The survey also asked about opinions and attitudes about drug use, where young people get drugs, and the places and situations they are most likely to use drugs.

Palmer said the results will provide the state with a valuable baseline data for future statewide surveys to be conducted every two years so drug use trends can be used in prevention and educational efforts.

Some other findings in the survey included:

— Cigarettes were used by about half the students, while smokeless tobacco was used by 30 percent.

— Marijuana was reported at a 40 percent usage, and about 7.5 percent said they combined alcohol with marijuana almost every time they used either.

— Cocaine and crack use was reported by less than 1 in 10 students.

The state was broken into eight regions for the survey and Phillips said the regional findings will be released Thursday.

Conviction

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) — Harry Lyn Neal was convicted in U.S. District Court Wednesday on six counts of cocaine-related drug charges.

Neal, 27, received two 15-year active prison sentences to run concurrently and was fined $20,000.

Neal was charged with 18 cocaine-related drug charges, but several charges were dropped by the government after some witnesses, who had given statements to officers concerning Neal's alleged drug trafficking, changed their stories on the witness stand and denied that Neal sold cocaine.

Neal testified Wednesday that he used marijuana, but denied that he and his wife, Elizabeth, used cocaine. Neal also denied selling cocaine.

Prosecutors said admitted cocaine user Charles Lee Capps Jr. of Franklin was given $100 before being sent into Neal's house Oct. 1, 1986 and returned with 1.2 grams of cocaine he said he purchased from Neal.

Services

RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislative Services Committee voted Wednesday to reopen the Legislative Building to groups that had been barred from meeting there because they didn't have enough lawmakers as members.

The action reverses a decision the panel had made in September. The new policy allows any group created by the General Assembly to study a state issue to meet in the building on Jones Street in Raleigh.

"It basically puts it back like it was for 25 years and we didn't have any trouble until we started messing with it," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison.

Holiday

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State University will celebrate the Martin Luther King Jr. birthday holiday, but school officials are struggling to fit the new holiday into a tight academic calendar.

At a meeting with about 30 student leaders Wednesday, university administrators sought to explain the options for adding the holiday in honor of the slain civil rights leader.

Despite the problems, NCSU Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton says the King holiday will be observed sometime this spring.

Gorillas

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Zoo has received approval to acquire three more Lowland gorillas from other U.S. zoos, a move that will give the zoo a gorilla collection among the 10 largest in the country, officials said.

Permission to move the apes to North Carolina was granted by the Gorilla Species Survival Plan of the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums.

The keeping of Lowland gorillas, an endangered and highly prized species, is strictly regulated in the United States, and the only way a zoo can acquire the apes is through the Species Survival Plan, zoo spokesman Rod Hackney said Wednesday.

Some Questions Go Unanswered

Iran-Contra Report Falls Short
In Telling Whole Story Of DealsBy WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators say they provided a comprehensive picture of what went wrong in the Iran-Contra affair, while acknowledging that some questions may never be fully answered.

"You do not have to see each grain of sand to recognize a beach," Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate investigating committee, said Wednesday in dismissing the questions that linger.

The massive 690-page report issued by the Iran-Contra investigating committees noted that the death of former CIA Director William J. Casey and the destruction of records by former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter and aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North have robbed the nation of the full story.

The panel's majority ultimately concluded that it believes Casey "encouraged North, gave him direction, and promoted the concept of an extralegal covert organization."

But the report acknowledged this version comes almost solely from North, that it "was used by North to exculpate himself, and that Casey could not respond." Similarly, it found no evidence to contradict Poindexter's testimony that he never told President Reagan of the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contras from the sale of arms to Iran, although doubters may not be satisfied by Poindexter's word.

There are other questions left in the affair, some of them raised in the report:

—Did Attorney General Edwin Meese III participate in a cover-up during his weekend inquiry last November? And did he tell the true story of his involvement in the private ransom plan financed by Texas industrialist H. Ross Perot?

—What did Casey plan to do with the off-the-shelf covert capability, unhampered by the legal restrictions on the CIA, that North described?

—What happened to two crucial cables from CIA officers in Europe to CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., that revealed the contents of a shipment to Iran to be U.S.-built Hawk missiles? The cables, which contradicted the official U.S. government cover story that the shipment was oil-drilling equipment, are "inexplicably missing," the report said.

Several members of the congressional committees added their own sections to the report pointing to unfollowed leads and missing information. A group of eight Democratic congressmen said the committees never got all the computer messages that could have been retrieved from White House computers and said "the lack of White House cooperation made the committees' task impossible."

"As a result, the documentary record is not complete and our conclusions are qualified," they wrote.

But some committee members said they believed what is missing falls into the category of detail, not gaps in the big picture.

"I do not think there was a big rock we left unturned," one committee source said, speaking only on condition of anonymity. "If the investigation had gone on another year — and I think it could have — we probably would have gathered some greater detail."

House Committee Chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., identified dangling strands that will need to be followed up by others, including details about the private funding network for the Contras and possible new evidence in Swiss bank account records which were not obtained by the committees but are being made available to independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

"There is a lot of follow-up work to be done," Hamilton said.

Perhaps the biggest questions suggested by the report involve the role of Meese.

Without using the word cover-up, the report noted that once the diversion was uncovered last Nov. 22, Meese changed his tactics in conducting his investigation.

"Before discovery of the diversion memorandum, all interviews were conducted by the attorney general with another Justice Department official and notes were taken. Thereafter, with the exception of the North interview, all interviews conducted by Meese were one-on-one, with no notes taken," including interviews with Casey, Poindexter, Vice President George Bush, former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane and former White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

It questioned why the Justice Department made no move to secure North's files on Nov. 23, although North in that day's interview with Meese expressed surprise on finding out the attorney general's staff had a copy of a memo revealing the diversion.

"No one asked North if he had shredded or otherwise disposed of documents," the report said. After the interview with Meese and the attorney general's staff, "North shredded additional documents at his office until at least 4:30 a.m.," the report said.

Meese has denied knowing the specifics of Perot's involvement in a failed hostage ransom plan in 1985-86, which the Iran-Contra committee concluded probably violated laws based on constitutional requirements that all money spent by the government be appropriated by Congress.

Meese telephoned Perot, who had contributed $200,000 to the initiative, the day after the Iran-Contra scandal broke last November, according to the congressional report. A week later, on Dec. 3, a note taken by Meese aide John Richardson reflects an instruction by the attorney general to call Perot to check on whether the Texas billionaire would respond that the attorney general knew of or authorized payments.

A Justice Department spokesman said late Wednesday that the note had nothing to do with an instruction by Meese to make a phone call to Perot, and that the Iran-Contra committees had misconstrued the facts.

Chairman Says Probe
Worthwhile

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "agonies" of the congressional Iran-Contra investigation will have been worth it if they teach Congress and the White House to respect and trust one another, the chairman of the House Iran-Contra panel said today.

Speaking a day after the House and Senate committees released their final report on the secret arms deals, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said, "no matter how carefully we structure our government, it really doesn't work very well unless there is mutual respect and confidence and trust between or among the branches of government."

"If we've learned that lesson, at least better than we have in the recent past, the agonies of this past summer and the hearings will have been well spent," he said on CBS-TV's "Morning News."

When the report came out on Wednesday, Hamilton said he thought that President Reagan already had suffered the biggest blows to his standing and that the report would have little additional effect on public opinion.

"In a very real sense, the American people are out in front of us here by a good measure, by months," he said. "So, I don't think the report will change that."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a member of the Senate Iran-Contra committee, agreed that the affair already has "seriously eroded public confidence in our government."

Numerous surveys of the American public show that Reagan's popularity, consistently high during his first term as president, fell sharply after revelations last November that his administration had sold arms to Iran and diverted some of the profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The task now, lawmakers agreed Wednesday in a series of interviews, will be to restore the American public's confidence in government and rebuild the frayed relationship between the legislative and executive branches.

"The key failure in the Iran-Contra affair was the administration's conscious decision not to consult with Congress and not to follow the law," said Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, a member of the House panel and chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

Reagan was singled out in the House and Senate report on the Iran-Contra affair for allowing a "cabal of the zealots" in his administration to seize control of policy.

Study Panels Say Meese's
Investigation Had Lapses

By PETE YOST

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III's failure to keep records and seal Oliver L. North's offices raises the possibility that he participated in a cover-up to protect President Reagan, according to Congress' Iran-Contra report.

The report was issued Wednesday as Meese spent more than four hours before a federal grand jury answering questions about his role in the Iran-Contra affair. The grand jury is hearing evidence in the criminal investigation being conducted by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

The congressional Iran-Contra committees' 690-page report said Meese "departed from standard investigative techniques" during his November 1986 investigation of the affair.

The report said Meese "never asked (then-CIA Director William) Casey about the diversion" of profits from the administration's secret Iran arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. It also says he waited two days to speak to then-national security adviser John M. Poindexter "and then did not ask him what the president knew."

The report also says he "waited too long" to seal the offices of North, the National Security Council aide who coordinated the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. As a result, it said, North was able to shred many documents relating to the activities.

"These lapses placed a cloud over the attorney general's investigation," the report said.

Meese was told of the diversion — the first indication of possible criminality — the day after launching his weekend inquiry of the Iranian arms sales, and "the attorney general's methodology for conducting the inquiry changed at this point," the report said.

"Before discovery of the diversion memorandum, all interviews were conducted by the attorney general with another Justice Department official, and notes were taken," according to the report. "Thereafter, with the exception of the North interview, all interviews conducted by Meese were one-on-one, with no notes taken" — including interviews of Casey, former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane, Poindexter, White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan and Vice President George Bush.

Meese refused to speak with reporters about the report, but his actions were defended by a minority of the congressional panel. In a dissent issued Wednesday, eight Republicans said Meese and his political aides "conducted themselves honorably."

"We reject as completely unsupported by the record any suggestion that the attorney general or his staff ignored signs of potential criminal behavior or consciously sought not to obtain information in an effort to assist or protect the president," they said.

The majority report also suggested Meese may have tried to cover up his role in a privately financed and probably illegal hostage-ransom plan financed by Texas industrialist H. Ross Perot.

The unsuccessful ransom initiative in 1985-86 for U.S. hostages in Lebanon involved the use of two agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration.

After the Iran-Contra affair became public last November, Meese instructed an aide to call Perot to check on what the Texas billionaire would say if questioned about whether Meese knew of or authorized the payments, according to a Dec. 3 note taken by Meese aide John Richardson and referred to in the congressional report.

When Meese testified before the Iran-Contra committees last summer, he said he was unaware of a plan to use private funds to ransom people in foreign countries and didn't recall addressing such an issue.

Last March 5, Meese told the House Judiciary Committee he had known only that the DEA agents in the operation were collecting information.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said Wednesday that "the attorney general's phone call with Mr. Perot on November 26 did not relate to this DEA operation."

But the Iran-Contra committee report says "the evidence points toward the conclusion that the attorney general approved the use of private funds for the ransom-resource operations."

Perot told the Dallas Morning News late Wednesday that he never received a call from a Meese aide. "I may be old and senile, but I would remember that call," he said.

"The thing I find fascinating is that if any of these congressmen had questions, why didn't they call me?" he said.

Smokeout Puts Focus On Stopping

By MICHAEL HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

Millions of hard-core smokers across the country faced a day of raw nerves and ragged fingernails today as they pledged to join the Great American Smokeout — no ifs, ands or butts.

"If you're like me, you have not found a day that says 'This is it.' That is probably what the American Cancer Society has been doing ... providing that day," said Pat Stewart of San Angelo, Texas.

The 11th annual smokeout is the society's effort to get some of the nation's 46.8 million smokers to air out their lungs for at least 24 hours.

"To meet the challenge of creating a smoke-free society by the year 2000 we must not only help adults deal with kicking the cigarette habit one day at a time, but also help young people choose not to smoke," said Deborah Prothrow-Stith, smokeout chairwoman for the society's Massachusetts division.

According to a Gallup survey, a record 23.8 million people — 43.7 percent of the nation's smokers — participated in last year's smokeout by quitting or cutting down for one day.

Seven million successfully made it through the day without smoking and 3.5 million were still not smoking close to five days later, the survey said.

Today, hospitals around the country were to present newborn babies with pink and blue T-shirts labeled "I Was Born A Non-Smoker." Elementary school children in Lawton, Okla., were being given balloons to release with an anti-smoking message.

In New York, an assortment of celebrities and the cast of Broadway's "Starlight Express" turned out Wednesday to urge a citywide cigarette stoppage for the event.

"I'm giving up my pipe up as an example to the people who know and love me," said Mr. Potato Head, the cartoon and toy character who was a special guest at the affair in the Ger-shwin Theater.

Other celebrities who turned out included actress-singer Marilyn Sokol, who sang "Don't Let Your Life Go Up in Smoke," singer Laura Branigan, actress Sylvia Miles and actor Aidan Quinn.

Army, Navy and Air Force bases across the country also planned to hold anti-smoking events, including a 10-kilometer "Adopt-A-Smoker" relay race at the Naval Amphibious Base in Coronado, Calif., the society said.

The battle against butts reached the airwaves in Dallas, where an easy listening radio station planned to broadcast subliminal messages featuring a male voice softly explaining the hazards of smoking.

The messages were to be broadcast simultaneously with regular music at four pre-announced times. The Federal Communication Commission says the messages are legal because they were announced in advance.

The society is hoping tobacco-chewers also will participate.

"Too many people, especially young people, think chewing tobacco and dipping snuff are safe alternatives to smoking. The fact is these products are not harmless substitutes," said Karen Givens, smokeout chairman for Corpus Christi, Texas.

Not everybody, however, was happy with the anti-smoking campaign.

Harold Boots, owner of Edward's Pipe and Tobacco Shop in Dallas, said smokers should unite and fight for their rights. He views city ordinances that outlaw smoking in public areas as discriminatory.

Boots, 62, said he has been smoking since "the time I could walk."

"One thing that really bugs me is why don't they have a booze-out?" he asked.

Kennedy Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Organization for Women says it will oppose the Supreme Court nomination of Anthony M. Kennedy, while other women's and civil rights groups say they still are studying his record.

NOW scheduled a news conference today, saying that its president, Molly Yard, would announce the group's opposition to Kennedy.

A federal appellate judge from Sacramento, Calif., Kennedy has written more than 400 opinions in 12 years on the bench.

One of the most significant to women's groups came in 1985, when Kennedy threw out a lawsuit by Washington state employees working at jobs predominantly held by females. The suit contended that state workers in comparable jobs predominantly held by men were paid more.

Kennedy said such a disparity, without proof of a discriminatory motive, does not violate a federal law banning on-the-job sex bias.

"It is evident ... that Congress, after explicit consideration, rejected proposals that would have prohibited lower wages for comparable work as contrasted with equal work," he wrote.

Agents Seize Three Tons Of Cocaine Stored In Boxcar Aboard Cargo Ship

MIAMI (AP) — The nation's largest single seizure of cocaine — more than three tons — was found stuffed inside hollowed-out boards of a cargo ship boxcar, and drove drug-sniffing dogs crazy, U.S. officials said today.

"It's become clear that cargo containers are the method of choice for shipping large amounts of cocaine," said Michael Sheehan, a U.S. Customs spokesman.

The wholesale value of the 6,292 pounds of cocaine seized Wednesday was estimated at $62 million by Paul A. Teresi, agent in charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration office in Fort Lauderdale.

No arrests were made and an investigation was continuing into the source of the shipment, which arrived aboard the cargo ship Stena Mariner from Honduras, authorities said.

Sheehan, meanwhile, said officials later today planned to announce a second seizure of cocaine found about the same time and shipped in an almost identical way. He would not disclose any more information about that find.

The Stena Mariner investigation began with a Nov. 9 tip about drugs on the ship, Sheehan said.

Teams of customs, DEA, and Florida Department of Law Enforcement agents met the ship two days later at Port Everglades, which serves Fort Lauderdale.

"We pulled some of the boards off this container and our drug-sniffing dogs went crazy," Sheehan said. When the 4-foot-long, 3-inch-thick boards were drilled and X-rayed, agents found they were hollowed out to form two compartments each packed with about 2.2 pounds of cocaine.

A total of 110 of boards on the boxcar, actually a huge crate, were stuffed with packs of the cocaine, carefully wrapped in plastic.

The bundles were repacked and agents allowed the delivery to go ahead as planned early Wednesday to the suburban Dade County warehouse of Valos Woodwork, a company purported to build wooden lawn furniture and picnic tables, officials said.

"We staked out there most of the day, but apparently they knew we were on to them and took off," said Sheehan, who added that he didn't know if the firm was a legitimate business.

The warehouse was then raided at night, when about 30 agents cracked open the wooden boards and stacked the bundles of cocaine, which were packed in boxes covered with plastic wrap.

"There's no telling how many ordinary shipments move through our ports every day with cocaine. We were lucky to have a coordinated effort to catch it this time," said Jack Hook, spokesman for the DEA in Miami.

Federal agencies have seized a total of 66 cargo containers during the past six months, finding 18,000 pounds of cocaine. Teresi and Garnet J. Fee, assistant regional Customs Service commissioner, said Wednesday's find was the largest ever.

Wednesday's haul surpassed the previous record for a single confiscation of cocaine, which occurred in Chicago in August, when about 5,400 pounds was seized, the DEA said.

Other large hauls include a total of 6,900 pounds in two seizures from a freighter ship in West Palm Beach in October 1986; and 4,700 pounds in 27 containers in Miami, 25 containers in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Airliner Flies 400 Miles With One Engine Silent

HONOLULU (AP) — A Delta Air Lines jumbo jet with 112 people aboard lost power in an engine over the Pacific but landed safely after flying 400 miles on its two remaining engines with a military escort, officials said.

The 100 passengers aboard Flight 1563 continued watching a movie during the incident Wednesday night and were unaware the engine had shut down, said Lew Malin, Delta's customer service supervisor here.

The incident was the second in four days involving engine shutdowns on Delta flights to Honolulu.

Flight 1563 was on its way from Los Angeles to Honolulu when the pilot declared an emergency 400 miles northeast of Honolulu International Airport, said James Miura, a Federal Aviation Administration air traffic controller.

The plane landed safely here at 10:14 p.m., Miura said. Malin said it will take an inspection of the DC-10's No. 2 engine, located in the tail, to determine why it conked out during the flight.

"It is a rare occurrence, but not an extraordinary one," he said.

A Coast Guard C-130 search and rescue plane was dispatched from Barber Point Naval Air Station to intercept and escort the jetliner, said Coast Guard spokeswoman Melissa Youngberg.

The C-130 was equipped with survival equipment such as rafts, which would have been dropped if necessary.

The airliner, with a fuselage width of nearly 20 feet and a length of 182 feet, can carry up to 380 passengers. It had 12 crew members aboard Wednesday.

It is a wide-bodied, three-engine plane that entered commercial service in 1971. Aside from the engine on the tail, the two other engines are under the wings.

Tip O'Neill Recovering

BOSTON (AP) — The surgeon who removed a golfball-sized tumor from the bowel of former House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill said no further cancer was detected during surgery, although final test results are expected by Friday.

The rectal cancer was removed during the seven-hour operation Wednesday, said Richard Wilson, chief of surgical oncology at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

The 74-year-old O'Neill, who was in stable condition following the operation, also received a permanent colostomy, which provides an artificial route for defecation, Wilson said.

"He's tolerated it beautifully and I think he'll have no problem with it," said Wilson.

Results of tests on lymph nodes and surrounding tissue to determine if the cancer spread to other organs are expected by Friday, he said.

On Monday, Wilson disclosed that O'Neill had cancer and predicted a successful operation because it was detected early. In such cases, 77 percent of patients survive at least five years, according to statistics.

He also said patients who go through colostomy operations "live an absolutely normal life. This is our plan for (O'Neill) and this is what we will teach him." O'Neill will remain hospitalized for about two weeks.

The former speaker was admitted to Brigham and Women's for tests Sunday after leaving Sibley Memorial Hospital in Washington, D.C., where he underwent a biopsy and other medical examinations.

Investigators Say Pilot Tried To Get Controls Before Crash

DENVER (AP) — The captain of the doomed Continental Airlines jet tried to seize the controls from his relatively inexperienced co-pilot in a desperate attempt to save the aircraft, evidence released by investigators indicates.

Capt. Frank Zvonek and co-pilot Lee Bruecher were among the 28 who died after the DC-9 jet crashed during takeoff Sunday in a snowstorm at Denver's Stapleton International Airport.

Investigators who recovered the cockpit voice recorder from the wreckage of Flight 1713 said Wednesday it showed no indication of trouble until two seconds after the plane began to climb. A crew member uttered an expletive, which was followed by the sound of impact.

"We heard no warning systems. There were no warning systems audible with the tape at this time. A rhythmic thumping can be heard — not much can be made of that at this time," said Jim Burnett, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

"We also have determined the captain's yoke was broken during the impact and we also have established the captain's arms were broken," Burnett said, referring to Zvonek's control column.

That may have occurred if Zvonek's hands were on the controls. Continental officials confirmed Wednesday that Bruecher, 26, was handling the takeoff.

Burnett said it is routine for the pilot who is not controlling the takeoff to handle radio communications. He said the voice recording showed that Zvonek was speaking at takeoff "but that does not equate with the fact that the first officer was flying the plane. The captain always has the right to take over the controls."

Among the issues raised since the crash are an apparent miscommunication between the crew and the control tower and the captain's decision to take off despite a 23-minute delay after the plane was de-iced. Authorities said that ice buildup on the wings could have caused the crash, which injured 54 people, including five who remain in critical condition.

Air safety experts have been highly critical of having two pilots relatively inexperienced with the DC-9 in the same cockpit.

Bruecher had 3,100 flying hours with commuter airlines before joining Continental last July, but only 36 hours flying the DC-9. The Continental captain with whom Bruecher had flown to gain certification described his performance as "slow" but typical for his limited experience, Burnett said.

Zvonek, 43, had 8,800 commercial flying hours, many of them flying the larger Boeing 727 jetliners as a co-pilot or engineer, according to the Federal Aviation Administration. He had 198 hours on the DC-9 with the last 33 hours as captain.

Continental executives defended the pilots' experience, saying such levels are not unusual in a rapidly expanding industry.

"If it's as standard as Continental claims it is, then we are in deep trouble," said John B. Galipault, president of the Aviation Safety Institute in Worthington, Ohio.

"If Continental thinks this is the norm, then they're blowing smoke," Galipault said.

He said every commercial flight should have "at least one person in it who is high-time on that aircraft. I think persons should have at least 400 or 500 hours on that specific aircraft."

C.D. Miller, an independent aviation consultant in McLean, Va., said the matching of two pilots with low-hour experience in an aircraft is not common, even at growing carriers.

"Normally, you find much more experience on a given airplane by one of the crew members and usually, of course, the captain," Miller said.

Capt. Richard Hillman, Continental vice president for flight operations, said it was not improper for the captain to have assigned Bruecher to handle the takeoff.

"There were no flaws at all in the procedure followed by this group," he said. "There was absolutely no sign of complacency or sloppiness."

Republicans Seeking Alternate Site For Gorbachev To Address Congress

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican leaders are negotiating with the White House to end a party revolt over a plan for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to address a joint meeting of Congress.

At least 75 House members, mostly Republicans, signed a letter urging President Reagan to find another forum in which Gorbachev could speak with members of Congress during the Dec. 7-10 summit in Washington.

A leader of the GOP revolt, Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., said a meeting Wednesday of the House Republican Conference, the party caucus, turned into "one hell of a donnybrook" over the White House invitation for Gorbachev to address a joint meeting Dec. 9.

Gorbachev would be the first communist leader ever to address a joint meeting of Congress. If that happens, Dornan said, "I and 100 others will walk out."

The top three Republicans in the House — Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois, Minority Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi and Dick Cheney of Wyoming — were talking with White House officials to forestall more embarrassment, House members and aides said.

"Most Republican members feel very strongly that the invitation to speak to a joint session is a high honor that should not be extended to the head of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union," said Cheney, chairman of the GOP caucus.

But the White House showed no signs of backing down.

Michel sought to calm the waters when the issue erupted into emotional debate on the House floor Wednesday evening, as conservative Republicans asked Reagan to withdraw the invitation and Democrats urged Congress to open its doors to Gorbachev.

"People are quite aware of the strong feelings," Michel told the House.

The minority leader did not indicate his sympathies. But he echoed the White House argument that a session between Gorbachev and Congress could help the Senate in considering a treaty on Intermediate Nuclear Forces that the two leaders are expected to sign at the summit.

In the floor debate, which did not produce a vote, Democratic Rep. Kenneth Gray of Illinois urged Congress to "open the doors" to Gorbachev.

"Let's vote unanimously to bring him to that podium," Gray said, pointing at the speaker's platform. "What are you afraid of? Let the man come and talk. We don't have to believe everything he says, but let's show him our hand" in friendship.

Rep. Robert S. Walker, R-Pa., said he had collected 45 signatures on a letter asking Reagan to find another forum for members of Congress to meet with Gorbachev. One of Walker's aides said the list swelled to at least 75 by late afternoon.

It was not clear whether opponents of the visit could muster the legislative support to block an appearance by Gorbachev, despite the uproar. The congressional parliamentarian said Tuesday that unanimous consent was required in the House for a joint meeting, but that no action was needed by the Senate.

Opponents of the visit, however, noted the opposition in 1959 to a proposal that Nikita Khrushchev address Congress during his summit with President Eisenhower. The administration, fearing that many members of Congress would embarass the United States by refusing to attend, preferred to have Congress adjourn before Khrushchev arrived. Khrushchev met instead with a group of senators the day after Congress adjourned.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., a conservative presidential candidate, called the invitation a "scandalous travesty," and proposed that "members of Congress be provided the opportunity to ask direct questions of Mr. Gorbachev" outside the House chamber where joint meetings are held.

Kemp suggested the caucus room of the Cannon House Office Building, one of the largest meeting halls on Capitol Hill. A Kemp aide said all 535 members of Congress could fit in the room.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, criticized those who promised to walk out of a joint meeting.

"I can't imagine that kind of a thing," the speaker told reporters. "There is an atmosphere of civility that must be maintained."

Wright said that over the years many guests have been invited to address Congress, "some who could be described only as dictators." He did not name anyone.

Court Tells Widow To Sell Home

MILPITAS, Calif. (AP) — A disabled widow ordered to sell her home to pay damages to a teen-ager hurt on a motorcycle her son once owned is a victim of a legal system that sometimes doesn't deliver justice, her attorneys say.

"I know it's legal, that's what the lawyers tell me, but I feel it's immoral," Norma Arjo, the 49-year-old mother of four, said Wednesday.

Arjo, who is nearly blind and uses a wheelchair, lost a judgment by default for $108,000 after she failed to contest a lawsuit last March. She said she wasn't aware of the trial date, couldn't afford a lawyer, and didn't understand how she could be liable for the accident.

With interest, the sum has grown to $116,000, and she now faces the prospect of seeing her house auctioned to pay the award to the teen-ager who lost a leg in the accident while riding with the cycle's new owner.

Ms. Arjo was held accountable because the motorcycle, sold a few days before the crash, was still registered in her name, and the new owner, a co-defendant in the lawsuit, had no money or property to pay the claim.

"My son didn't have the accident," she said Thursday. "My son didn't even own the lousy motorcycle. The kid who had the accident and owned the motorcycle didn't pay a cent."

Ms. Arjo, who barely supports herself and her 17-year-old daughter on $696 a month from Social Security and a small pension, said she's "all cried out" over the situation and can only hope a way can be found for her to keep her home.

"I'm not real optimistic," said Santa Clara County Legal Aid Society attorney Gen Fujioka, who began representing Ms. Arjo in September after she was given notice of the impending auction of her house in this bedroom community of 43,000 residents about 20 miles northeast of San Jose.

"Unless there's a real breakthrough I don't think we are going to be able to set aside the judgment," he said. "That's the rules of the game."

Biological Mom Awarded Custody In Beating Case

By SAMUEL MAULL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A 17-month-old boy who was found in an apartment where a girl was allegedly beaten to death by their adoptive father has been returned to the temporary custody of the teen-ager mother who gave him up at birth.

"He's my baby!" said a sobbing 18-year-old Nicole Smigiel as Family Court Judge Jeffrey H. Gallet decided Wednesday to return the boy to her.

The judge stayed his order until late this afternoon to give lawyers for the adoptive parents, Hedda Nussbaum and Joel Steinberg, a chance to appeal.

Ms. Nussbaum and Steinberg are charged with murdering 6-year-old Elizabeth Steinberg and endangering the welfare of a child because of their alleged neglect of the boy, whom they called Mitchell.

The boy was found tethered to a chair and drinking spoiled milk when police arrived at the apartment Nov. 2. Elizabeth, known as Lisa, was unconscious and died three days later.

Neither child had been officially adopted, authorities said.

Pending appeals, Ms. Smigiel will have custody of the boy at least until Jan. 13, the date set by Gallet to begin a trial to resolve the case. Ms. Smigiel, who completed a year's study at Loyola College in Baltimore, will live at her family's Massapequa home.

"A parent remains a parent until declared otherwise," Gallet said. "The child has not been adopted and as far as I know the parental rights have not been extinguished."

Lawyers for Steinberg and Ms. Nussbaum opposed the judge's decision.

"Nicole may be the mother, but she has not been the parent," said David Gilman, Steinberg's attorney. "We would suggest that a much more careful study be conducted" before the child is placed with her.

Nussbaum's attorney, David

Lansner, told the judge, "To give her this child, whom she has never seen, would be, in a sense, to prejudge this case."

"I am not predeciding this case," the judge said. "I just don't want this child bounced around."

Should the Appellate Division overturn the judge's decision, the city's Special Services for Children will have to place the child in a foster home.

Steinberg attended Wednesday's hearing. Ms. Nussbaum has been hospitalized since Nov. 2 with fractured ribs, jaw and nose and ulcerous sores on her legs. She denies Steinberg battered her.

Gallet denied her request to be allowed to visit Mitchell.

The judge said the child's biological father, whose name was not disclosed, learned on Nov. 13 while staying at Ms. Smigiel's home that he had fathered her child. The man is a college senior who lives with his mother in Massapequa, Gallet said.

U.S. Marshals Sell Confiscated Ferrari GTO For $1.6 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal marshals have sold a Ferrari 250 GTO confiscated from an accused drug dealer for a record $1.6 million to a U.S. partnership that is already trying to resell the sleek, red race car.

Culling bids from here and abroad, the U.S. Marshals Service selected a Providence, R.I., group which agreed to pay the highest price on record for one of the two-seat hardtops. The Italian auto company produced only 36 of the cars in 1963 and 1964; only 32 survive.

U.S. Marshal Pasquale A. Mangini said in a telephone interview from New Haven, Conn., that the partnership, known both as Douglas Auto Sales and as GTO Partners, was headed by Leon H. Cornell Jr.

Cornell is a real estate investor and game manufacturer who has been buying and selling expensive Ferraris for several years. Gerald Roush, publisher of the Ferrari Market Letter, said Cornell "buys cars to resell them."

Roush said Cornell told him more than a week ago he hoped to resell the vehicle "at a profit over what he was going to pay the government." Roush said he also has talked to several prospective buyers who were sound-ed out by Cornell even before the marshals turned over the car Wednesday in exchange for final payment.

"Dr. Karr has put East Carolina in the position to move into the national spotlight and we will continue this trend," he said. "I will work hard and I know I will receive excellent support from the staff here. We want to keep (the athletic) program in the direction the people want it to be in."

Asked if he would have the authority to fill in the missing date on the football schedule left by N.C. State canceling the 1988 date, Hart said he expected to make an announcement on that within the next 10 days. He indicated that the contest would be against a Division I-A opponent and would be played at Ficklen Stadium. If so, that would give the Pirates six home games next fall.

As to further scheduling, Hart said he thought the program was headed in the right direction. He would not call future schedules a softening of competition, but did say that upcoming foes included such teams as Southwestern Louisiana, Bowling Green and Louisiana Tech, teams against which the Pirates would be more competitive than Syracuse, Miami and Florida State.

"We compete within a group of Southern independents and we must reach the point where we compete with them. Some of them (on our schedule) this year have losing records. But we should be able to compete with Southern Mississippi, Southwestern Louisiana, Temple, Virginia Tech and the like."

As to other programs, Hart said he would like to see the non-revenue sports improved, moving "from the back of the bus to the front." He also indicated he would like to see an improvement in the baseball funding, noting that it has been one of the school's most successful programs and should be rewarded.

Hart, 38, would be one of the nation's youngest athletic directors, should he get the job, but he said that age should not be confused with experience. "The ability to be productive is the key. I'll admit that I have a lot to learn, but when you reach the point where you don't think you can learn, you're in trouble."

Hart said that he would be an accessible athletic director, either in the interim or full-time position, unlike his predecessor, who was often accused of being unavailable to supporters and the media. "I may not have all the answers, but I will tell you so and I will be available," he said.

Eakin, in fielding questions, refused to talk about Karr's resignation, sticking by the wording of his written statement of Wednesday announcing the resignation, even when asked if Karr was, in effect, fired.

He did add that Karr and he had first discussed the athletic director's resignation on Sunday.

Present football coach Art Baker has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the job, as has current Associate Athletic Director Henry VanSant.

at the show and that he'll be back next year.

For the farmer in the market for new products, the farm show offered one-stop shopping.

"The show lets you see new trends and products on the market which might save the farmer money," said Sam Viverette, a farm show patron from Greenville.

"It's interesting to me to come out here and see what they have, like new seed hybrids, tractors, weed killers, and insecticides," he said.

Viverette, who visits the show every year, says some years he visits more than once.

"You just can't see it all in one visit," he said.

Closing the farm show this afternoon were Clower's scheduled appearance and the tobacco-spitting contest sponsored by the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival.

The tobacco festival sponsored several events at the farm show, including a clogging contest and a Pig Feast in which 1,400 pounds of pork were prepared and served Wednesday evening.

Melissa Arrowood, executive director of the tobacco festival, said the event has gone exceedingly well this year.

"I think I've seen more community involvement with the festival, more city-wide involvement than ever before," she said.

Subway Fire Kills 30 At Station

Some survivors said transport staff directed them to escalators that carried them into flames and smoke. One fire official said the blaze was so hot that it blew tiles from walls of the station.

All the dead were civilians except for fire station officer Colin Townsley, 45, the Fire Brigade said. Twelve of the injured were in serious condition, including three burn victims in intensive care.

It was by far the worst fire on the 124-year-old London Underground, the world's oldest subway, and its second deadliest accident. Forty-three were killed and 74 injured in a 1975 subway train crash.

Passengers aboard trains that rode into King's Cross described watching helplessly through glass windows as commuters on the platform dashed about in panic.

Leroy Bigby, 23, said he was on a train pulling into the station, when he began to smell smoke.

"Then as the train pulled into the station it hit a cloud of smoke," he said. "I could hear people screaming and running in every direction on the station. The train carried on and did not stop."

Witnesses described passengers turning into human torches as the escalator carried them into the flames, or struggling in vain to make the few yards to safety despite encouragement from rescuers.

The ticketing plaza was a chaotic scene of blackened turnstiles and molten ceiling tiles caking the floor. Large posters advertising winter holidays and West End theater shows peeled off the walls.

Leaf Museum Set Up At Fair

"All of us involved in the campaign to raise funds for these two objectives are grateful for the generous support from private and corporate donors in the area. Part of our ceremony was to recognize these donors, most of whom contributed their support during 1983."

The museum, which will soon have a sign in place, is in one of the original buildings at the site which has been renovated and partially furnished with tobacco artifacts.

"We were able to install wiring, air conditioning, lighting and to refurbish the interior of the building," Mrs. Howell said. "One of the problems there has been that of proofing the building against the entry of birds, squirrels and other animal life, and that has been accomplished."

Agencies and individuals recognized as being instrumental in continued assistance during the time of fund raising, renovation and assemblage of artifacts include Janice Faulkner of the East Carolina University Regional Institute; Dr. Edward Keeler of the East Carolina University Industrial-Technology Department, his students, and Dr. John Tilley of the ECU History Department and his students.

"Students from these classes provided invaluable service in all phases of the work done at the museum. Will Hinson, decent of artifacts for the museum, provided a set of guidelines. At this time, some of the tobacco artifacts are in place as well as 25 photographs of earlier tobacco farm scenes in Pitt County," Mrs. Howell said.

"We feel good about what has been done, and hope that the whole complex can be further developed, that the tobacco museum will be a catalyst for the future of the village so that it can be used more extensively for the public. I understand the next step to move ahead will be made through state authorities."

The Village of Yesterday, located in one corner of the fairgrounds, was conceived and put into place over the years by the late Connor Eagles with constant assistance from Les Turnage. The complex consists of several representative buildings, including an old school, a country store, an early Pitt County church, a railroad depot, a typical early Pitt County home, and other buildings and collections.

"Pitt County owes a sincere debt of gratitude to Mr. Eagles for his vision in establishing the village and in collecting artifacts that are now fast disappearing from the scene," Mrs. Howell said. "He left us a heritage to build on for all the people in our area and statewide."

Wilkerson said "The subscription of funds raised by Mrs. Howell and her committee members has been sufficient to establish and equip the tobacco museum as well as leaving a residual fund. The remaining funds will be used to maintain, improve and operate the museum."

"Our primary objective now is to, at the earliest possible date, make the museum and the village more accessible to the public. While we have no definite date in mind at this time, the idea of having the village open for public use is foremost in the association's plans for the future of the Village of Yesterday."

Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Perry have lived together since shortly after Mrs. Perry's husband, a former Goldsboro school principal, died. Mrs. Thompson retired from teaching at Rose High School in 1972; Mrs. Perry from teaching in the Goldsboro school system in 1975. They are living in the home of their friends, Mrs. E.B. Graves, until their house is made livable once again, a process that may take up to three months, Mrs. Thompson said.

"I am so thankful for the young men who assisted us and for the fire department," Mrs. Thompson said.

"I have known Carlos all his life — I taught his father — but little did I know he would save my life and the life of my dear sister."

Traffic

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The N.C. State Motor Club estimates that 17 people may die in traffic accidents over the upcoming Thanksgiving weekend.

The state will count its toll over a 100-hour period beginning at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 25 until midnight Sunday, Nov. 29, the club said Tuesday.

Last year 18 persons were killed and 2,454 injured on North Carolina highways during a similar period, while 20 were killed in 1985.

As of Tuesday, the N.C. Division of Motor Vehicles' records show reported traffic fatalities have fallen to 1,354 from 1,432 during the same period last year.

Holidays Cause Problems

Some Women Can't Cope

CARMEL, N.Y. (AP) — The holiday season can be stressful for everyone, but for women struggling with a drinking problem it can be devastating, says an expert on alcohol and drug abuse.

The holidays tend to intensify feelings of shame, guilt and failure that women drinkers experience, explains Susan Heath, director of the women's program at Arms Acres, an alcohol and drug abuse treatment center in Carmel.

"Many drinkers set very high standards for themselves, especially around religious holidays," she says. "But alcoholics recognize there's a big gap between the way they think they should behave and the way they actually behave. If they keep doing things that go against their values, their self-esteem plummets. So they drink even more, spiraling down faster."

Women juggling additional holiday responsibilities carry another burden, Christine Lubinski, Washington representative of the National Council on Alcoholism points out.

"The holidays are supposed to be a family time," she says, "and expectations for peaceful, loving behavior are at their highest. Stress is at its highest, too, because of all the pressures on women to perform as the ideal wife, mother and hostess. This can be a dangerous combination, especially for alcoholic women."

As stress increases with the holidays, so do the number of opportunities to drink, she notes, adding that the availability of alcohol at most holiday parties can often mask a serious drinking problem.

An estimated 4 million problem drinkers are female, according to an NCA study. During the holidays the hot line operated by the Washington office of the NCA is deluged with telephone calls, many from family members upset because mom was drinking and burned the turkey or knocked over the Christmas tree. Still, few confront mom right away, says Mark Shottinger, executive director of Arms Acres, who suggests that friends and relatives of alcoholics look the other way because they don't want to upset the family.

"Women in particular want to maintain a semblance of family peace during the holidays," Shottinger says. "To pressure a woman drinker is to take her out of her role as nurturer and care giver, and that's too disturbing for family members to face at this time of the year." After the holidays, though, family members face reality, Heath says. They've just observed the disastrous effects of alcoholism first-hand, and now urge mom into treatment.

"Twice the number of women enter treatment at Arms Acres in January compared to the rest of the year," she says.

Alcohol treatment experts report that most men seek help because of pressure from their employers, but most women are motivated by family pressure.

These experts have recently begun to recognize that women drinkers have their own special issues and needs that must be addressed. Facilities such as the Mediplex Group's Arms Acres and Mountain Wood in Charlottesville, Va., are among the nation's treatment centers now offering special women's programs.

Women alcoholics meet in separate groups at such facilities as Conifer Park, Scotia, N.Y., and Spofford Hall, Spofford, N.H., also operated by Mediplex.

"Alcohol is also an escape valve for many single women who are in mediocre jobs or who are unhappy with their lives," says Alice Petropoulos, director of referral services at the National Council on Alcoholism of Greater New York. She reports a dramatic increase during the past decade in the number of women under the age of 40 who are seeking treatment for alcoholism.

Treatment programs tailored for women help female alcoholics develop self-esteem by learning to put themselves first, says Shottinger. "At Arms Acres we show women how to take care of their own needs in the context of their responsibilities," he says.

These are warning signals for women to look for during the holidays, according to the NCA:

— Drinking to relieve stress caused by the additional responsibilities women take on during the holidays — a major problem for women juggling home, career and family.

— Having a couple to "loosen up" before going to a party where liquor will be served.

— Combining alcohol with drugs such as tranquilizers and cocaine — especially common among women 30 and under, according to an Alcoholics Anonymous membership survey.

— Sneaking more drinks because detection is less likely during holiday celebrations.

— Getting defensive about drinking. Although they may not show their anger like men, women drinkers will feel resentful if a holiday host questions their ability to drive safely.

Aunt Mae's Crochet Decorates House

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

I turned the page of a leading magazine recently and my heart skipped a beat.

There in full glorious buttercup yellow were 11 crocheted pieces for your bathroom. There were a crocheted cover for the toilet seat and the tank, a contour rug, an oval rug for use in front of the bowl, a cover for the toilet tissue and a tieback for the shower curtain. There also were crocheted covers for the bar of soap, the nose tissue, cleanser can, facial tissue and a little hat to decorate the wall.

I pray my Aunt Mae will not read the article and crochet herself blind by next Christmas.

Don't bother to write and tell me that gifts made from the heart are the most beautiful gifts one can receive, or that I am a pile of worthless slime who doesn't deserve to be remembered in such a personal way. Don't you think I know that and feel rotten enough about it?

It's just that I have a whole house full of gifts from Aunt Mae's heart already. Aunt Mae leaves nothing undressed. There is a Mexican serape and 10-gallon hat over my Tabasco sauce. Every bottle on our bar is dressed like a poodle. There's a costume for every door knob for every season beginning with a crocheted valentine and ending with a Santa Claus.

There are crocheted coasters, afghans, pillows, tablecloths, sachet holders, lamp shades, bookmarks, chair-back doilies, place mats and a cover for the phone book.

Poor Aunt Mae succumbed to the talents of her nimble fingers years ago. And who among us has not at one time or another nearly drowned in our handiwork? With me, it was a knitting class I joined back in 1973. By 1974, everyone who nodded to me within a 200-mile radius had a pair of knitted one-size-fits-all bedroom slippers. I was a woman possessed.

With my sister-in-law, it was seashells. She moved to a Florida beach a couple of years ago and worked the beach like a minesweeper. Shells became her life. Christmas ornaments, mirrors and lamps.

The last time I walked the beach with her, she only picked up two shells, thought about it, then discarded one. She's recovering.

They tell me amateur painters are the same way. At first, they fill up their own walls with their talents. Then when they run out of space, they start passing out their paintings like senior class pictures.

I know Aunt Mae will read this. I will understand if she crochets me a noose... in buttercup yellow.

Pictures Upset 2nd Wife

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in regard to "Steaming in Georgia," who had passed around a family album for visiting relatives to enjoy. She observed one "in-law" looking at two pictures of her husband and his first wife for a very long time. Then after everyone had left, she noticed that those two pictures had been removed from the album. "Steamed" was sure Wife No. 2 had taken them, and asked how to handle that situation at the next family gathering. You suggested she stand guard while guests looked at the album. Not very helpful, Abby.

I am also Wife No. 2, whose mother-in-law keeps pictures of her son and Wife No. 1 in an album permanently displayed on her coffee table. This offended me. After six years, I finally told my husband how I felt about it. It wasn't as though his mother didn't have any pictures of her son and me together. After all, we have taken her on several vacation trips with us, and took plenty of pictures, which she has — but none are in her album.

Couldn't you have said a few words in defense of Wife No. 2? — J.O. IN MINNESOTA

DEAR J.O.: I could have, and I should have. Read on:
DEAR ABBY: Why did both

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

"Steamed in Georgia" and you assume that the two pictures removed from the album were lifted by Wife No. 2?

When my second wife and I were visiting my mother, I noticed that her family albums contained pictures of me and Wife No. 1, but none of me and my present wife, so I removed those pictures from the album, gave Mom a big hug and promised to replace them with some new ones of me and my present wife. What could she have done? — LIVING IN THE PRESENT

DEAR LIVING: She could have given you a belt in the chops and ordered you to keep your paws off her album. But I'm glad she didn't.

DEAR ABBY: I would suggest that "Steamed" use a little better judgment in the future, and remove — ahead of time — any pictures that could be offensive or hurtful to her guests.

As the wife of a divorced man, I know exactly how Wife No. 2 must have felt. True, the "in-law" had no right to remove those pictures, but she shouldn't have been subjected to them in the first place.

If anyone has the right to be steamed, I say it's Wife No. 2. — WIFE NO. 3

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point. I am planning to marry "Audrey" soon. I love her very much. I would like to have my friend "Stewart" be my best man. I've known him for 18 years, and we have always been the best of friends. The problem: Audrey and Stewart were lovers at one time.

I don't want either one of them to be uncomfortable. What should I do? — CHICAGOAN

DEAR CHICAGOAN: Don't agonize over it. Ask Audrey how she feels about Stewart being your best man. If she has any negative feelings, ask someone else. If she's agreeable, ask Stewart. If he's willing, no problem.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 ($3 in Canada) and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Rose Tests Cardinals Once More

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School goes for a second-round victory in the 4-A State Football Playoffs Friday night at Minges-Farley Athletic Complex, but must be wary of overconfidence.

The Rampants will be playing host the Jacksonville Cardinals, a team they defeated in the second game of the regular season, 12-7 this fall.

Kickoff in the contest at Daniels Field is at 8 p.m.

Beating a team twice in the same year is difficult. The last time Rose had an unbeaten regular season, the (then nicknamed) Phantoms went to the eastern finals, where they met Tarboro, a team they had beaten handily in regular season, only to bow in a lopsided football game.

Then, just a few years ago, Rose beat Jacksonville during the regular season, only to be shut out by the Cards in a playoff meeting.

"I've only had one experience like that," Rose coach Chip Williams said. "We had to go up against a team we had beaten when I was at Bertie, and we were fortunate enough to win the second time also."

While a team does win twice, it's usually more difficult the second time away. And Williams is expecting just that sort of game.

Rose advanced to the second round by defeating New Bern, the Midwestern third place team, 20-7. The game was closer than the score indicates, with Rose leading only 12-7 as the fourth quarter got under way. But in the final period, Tom Moye hit Malcom Wilson on a 30-yard scoring pass on fourth-and-20 to put the game out of reach.

"New Bern played real well," Williams said. "But I thought we did a good job on defense against them. David Daniels had an outstanding game both on offense and defense. It wasn't so much that he ran the ball that well on offense, but he blocked quite well."

"With the exception of a couple of trap plays, and the one (scoring) pass, I thought we held them in check pretty well," Williams said. "Their defense did a good job of stopping our rushing game, but I was pleased with our passing. We are going to have to be able (to pass) the rest of the way if we are to be successful."

Jacksonville, meanwhile, beat Rocky Mount, 27-7 on the Gryphons' home field. But here, too, the game was closer than the final score indicates. Rocky Mount had 203 yards in total offense in the first half of the game, and was twice stopped on fourth down inside the Jacksonville 10.

Jacksonville led at the half, 3-0. In the fourth period, Rocky Mount turned a Jacksonville fumble into a touchdown, taking a 7-3 lead. But Jacksonville drove back down the field to take a 10-7 lead.

The Gryphons fumbled the ensuing kickoff and the Cardinals scored off that, then got another touchdown when Rocky Mount tried to earn a first down on a fake punt from their own three and failed to make the needed yardage.

"Jacksonville will be tough," Williams said. "It doesn't matter whether we play them once or 20 times in the season, they'll still be tough. When we beat them earlier, people were saying that this was not a good Jacksonville team — yet here they are again in the second round of the playoffs."

"They are a very good defensive team. They shut Rocky Mount down pretty well and beat them in the kickoff game," the coach said.

That, too, must worry Williams. New Bern got itself into good field position on kickoff returns against the Rampants — the weakest part of their overall game.

A key man in the Jacksonville scheme is McGrew Booker, who has scored 11 touchdowns, six of them on kick returns.

Tailback Ted Elliott is the leading rusher for the Cards with 179 carries for 968 yards and 13 touchdowns. Keith Austin, who usually plays fullback, but has played tailback also is next with 71 carries for 395 yards and three touchdowns.

Quarterback Rod McLean has completed 50 of 119 passes for 710 yards and eight touchdowns, with only two interceptions. His top receivers have been Rodney Clemons, 14 catches for 254 yards and four TDs, and A.D. Hutley with 12 grabs for 235 yards and one score.

"Their backs are small and run hard," Williams said. "They may not have all that much offense, but they win, and that's what counts."

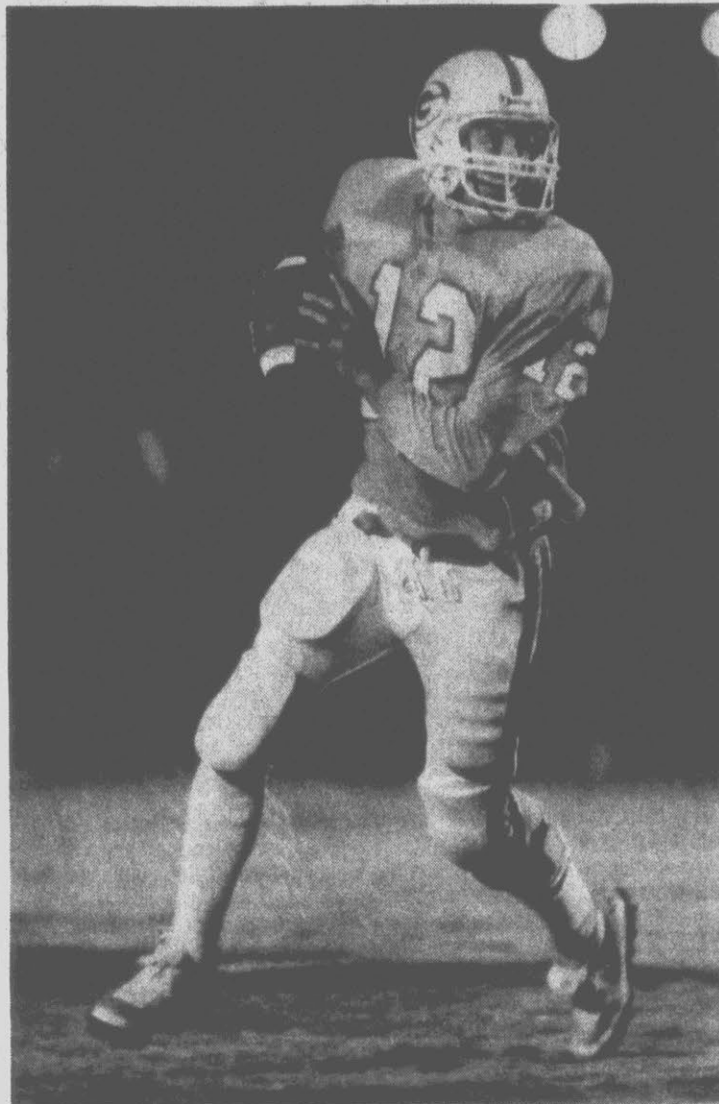

Rose's offense is led by Timmy Moore, who has carried 127 times for 1,058 yards and 11 touchdowns. Three other running backs are near equal in yardage — Axel Smith, 68 for 440 and three TDs; Daniels, 72 for 437 and seven TDs, and Adrian Barnhill, 70 for 397 and one touchdown.

Through the air, quarterback Tom Moye has hit on 48 of 106 passes for 851 yards and seven scores. He's been picked off five times. Moore has also completed three of eight for 75 yards and one score.

Top receivers are Wilson, with 13 for 285 yards and six touchdowns, and Eric Morris with 12 catches for 250 yards and one score.

The winner of the game will take to the road for the third round game, playing the victor in the game between unbeaten Northern Durham and New Hanover.

Unwanted Dawson's Year Makes Him Most Valuable

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs' Andre Dawson, who began the season unwanted, ended it by being named the Most Valuable Player in the National League.

While the Cubs were failing and falling to last place in the NL East, Dawson was stunning — leading the majors with 137 runs batted in and tying for the lead with 49 home runs.

"I would wake up in the morning and just look forward to going to the ballpark," Dawson said Wednesday after learning of the award. "You can only dream about those kind of numbers. I didn't want to go out and try to perform above what I was capable of. I just try to do the best I could."

In becoming the first member of a last-place team to be named MVP, Dawson beat St. Louis shortstop Ozzie Smith 269-193 in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Dawson, 33, was so determined to play for the Cubs after 12 seasons with Montreal that he offered Dallas Green, then general manager of the Cubs, a blank contract at the beginning of the season. Leery of another multimillion-dollar free-agent contract, Green filled in the amount of $500,000, making Dawson the second-lowest player on the team.

"I wanted to convince the baseball world that I would indeed perform better under different circumstances — those circumstances being to get away from the AstroTurf and onto a natural playing field," Dawson said.

"Grass was an important factor. I felt strong all season, and I worked out, got into a weight training program. I felt I could stay strong."

The finest moment of the season, Dawson said, came in his last Wrigley Field at-bat, when he ran the count to 3-and-1 against St. Louis reliever Bill Dawley and then drove the ball out of the park. As he circled the bases, the fans chanted, "M-V-P."

"I never really get goose bumps, although I do get nervous," he said. "But when I hit the home run, something just seemed to go through my body. I've never felt anything like it before."

While the Cubs floundered to a 76-85 finish, Dawson batted .287 and played a strong right field. He earned an additional $150,000 for staying off the disabled list and an extra $50,000 for making the All-Star team for the fourth time, but did not have an incentive clause for winning the MVP.

Dawson says he's leaving contract negotiations now to his agent, although both he and Jim Frey, who succeeded Green as the Cubs' GM, have no doubts he'll be back in right field.

"I've only asked that they be fair," Dawson said. "I'm going to be the starter in right field. This is a new home for me."

Jack Clark, Smith's teammate with the NL East champion Cardinals team that finished 18½ games ahead of Chicago, was third in the MVP balloting with 186 points. Montreal's Tim Lincecum was fourth and San Francisco's Will Clark was fifth. Cy Young winner Steve Bedrosian of Philadelphia finished 16th.

Dawson and the two Clarks were the only players named on all 24 ballots. Smith was named on 22. Dawson got 11 first-place votes, Smith had nine, Jack Clark three and Wallach one.

"I'm not disappointed," said Smith, who batted a career-high .303 with 75 RBI and 43 stolen bases. "It's one of those things I didn't give much

Run Game Ill-Fitting For Libretto

By TOM MORRIS

Reflector Sports Writer

When quarterback Charlie Libretto decided to attend East Carolina, he thought that the Pirates would move to a pass-oriented offense.

That change never materialized and now the sophomore from Middleburg, Fla. has decided he would be better off somewhere else.

Libretto announced earlier this week his intentions to transfer, possibly to the University of Florida. He said he would know more after all the schools have ended their seasons and begun their recruiting.

"When I was recruited the offense was to be that of a passing game," Libretto said. "It was a run and shoot offense—minimal run with more throwing than anything else."

"It would feature the quarterback and the receivers, but they told me when they recruited me that it was a half sprint out so I knew it wasn't a straight drop back like I had in high school."

And that was the Pirates' intention. Libretto came in, earned the starting nod as a freshman over incumbents Berke Holtzclaw and Travis Hunter and started eight games that year. He passed for 833 yards on the season, including 339 in the first two games against N.C. State and West Virginia.

"They were kind of hesitant with me starting," Libretto said. "To build my confidence, we started out with the run game. I figured as we got a little more experienced in the passing offense that that would change, especially after the West Virginia game (in which he led a late game touchdown drive keyed by his passing)."

"It just never panned out that way. It became a trap-option offense. That's when Travis (Hunter) came in and started playing a lot more."

And for Libretto, that move was the beginning of the end. He was a passing quarterback stuck in a run-oriented offense which was in many ways more suited to Hunter's talents.

"I don't see any problems with the running game, but it's not for me because I'm a passing quarterback," Libretto said.

Libretto was called upon to start against N.C. State in his first collegiate game after missing the majority of his senior year in high school with a broken leg. That's a tall order for anyone, but Libretto said the magnitude of the game didn't really faze him.

"It wasn't as hard as I thought it would be," Libretto said. "I can honestly say I wasn't all that nervous before the N.C. State game. It was a great feeling when I heard 60,000 people stand up and yell."

"It just sent a chill down my spine. It was a good feeling. It was a real experience and I won't say it's a bad one. It was a very positive experience."

Hunter and Libretto went into last year's spring practice in a battle for the number-one job and Hunter came out the winner. He then started all 11 games this season. Libretto spent the year as his backup, throwing for 293 yards, two touchdowns and five interceptions.

Libretto left the squad earlier this season following the opening game against N.C. State but rejoined the team prior to the next game against Florida State.

"What made me come back was I didn't want to hurt the team," he said.

Libretto leaves ECU holding on to 10th spot in career passing with 1,126 yards. In his two years, he has led late game touchdown drives four times, including two against Southern Mississippi in the last game of this season, a 38-34 loss.

In that game, he entered the game with just over six minutes remaining with the Golden Eagles leading 38-21. He helped pull the Pirates within 38-34 but that was as close as the score would get.

Despite all the ups and downs, though, Libretto said he is not bitter about his experience at ECU.

But would he do it all over again? "That's hard to say," he said. "I would have come here for the experience and now that I've got it I can be happy with myself. I've got two years experience."

"I've played against the top teams in the nation. I can't complain. I would have done the same thing. It's better than a junior college transfer would ever come out. He's not getting that kind of experience. He's transferring and only has two years. I have two years plus a redshirt year."

Leaving East Carolina

Sophomore quarterback Charlie Libretto, who started most of 1986, has announced he will leave ECU. Libretto said he is a passing quarterback on a team with a run-oriented offense. Libretto, who played sparingly this year as a backup to starter Travis Hunter, said he has not yet decided where he will transfer. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Woody Peele

The Ken Karr era at East Carolina University officially comes to an end tomorrow when the athletic director steps down from the position he had occupied for over seven years.

Now, East Carolina will begin a search for a new man to head up their program, one which has grown under Karr's administration.

Karr's departure is met with mixed feelings in many quarters. When he was brought to ECU, his primary task was to get the athletic department on a more sound financial footing. He did this by scheduling the Pirates into some of the toughest stadiums in the country.

A $1 million drive initiated under former Chancellor John Howell also helped make up some of the now-in-the-black bankroll of the Pirates, too.

But Karr made enemies along the way for his heavy-handed handling of some things within the ECU program and his lack of availability with fans and with the media — one group he had to be up-front with.

Karr generally was frank, once you got up with him. He would answer just about any question although, like all ADs will do, he might not give you the full answer every time.

However, there were times when he made himself absent from the scene at times when his presence was almost demanded. On a number of occasions, his absence caused temporary embarrassment to the school when he could have cleared up the matter quickly with a public appearance.

An example is the weekend when the old "University" Division was broken down into Division I and I-A by the NCAA. Karr attended the meeting and, indeed, the Pirates were placed in Division I.

But the following morning, headlines in the Raleigh News & Observer, had the Pirates dropped into Division I-AA. A writer from UPI in Kansas City had mistakenly believed that ECU was still a member of the Southern Conference and had included the school in a list in a wire story published under the headline.

Karr, meanwhile, was on his way back from Kansas City, arriving back in Greenville in midafternoon. However, despite constant attempts to reach him, he remained out of touch with the media, and the story persisted until Monday when Karr returned to his office. Although in town and certainly aware of the mistake in the wire story, he did nothing to clear the issue, even on Monday refusing to call a news conference, despite urging by the sports information office.

What ECU needed then was prompt, clear action to clear up the confusion.

Karr's firing of former football coach Ed Emory created more anger against him by some fans because — again — of his reluctance in making any public statement other than the brief official line when some statement might have gone a long way to clear the air.

Karr was at odds with both of the women's basketball coaches who preceded Pat Pierson, the current coach, and drew additional ire from some fans for his outright refusal to consider a potential bid to the Women's NIT.

He drew further fire when he refused a budget increase to baseball, leading to the resignation of highly successful coach Hal Baird.

And his scheduling in football — while it does bring in the big bucks — has led to a number of Pirate Club members — and members of the board of trustees — asking for his resignation or dismissal.

But to give Karr his due, he certainly did put the athletic program on a firm financial footing. He has brought national recognition to the program with the schedule — even if it is overpowering. He has gotten the Pirates into a non-football conference, and into the College Football Association, two moves which have certainly helped the overall athletic program.

Now, the task ahead is to find a successor.

The man needed is one who, like Karr, has national contacts. He must also have a good background in the business, since he manages a multi-million dollar program. While the program is on sound footing, it must stay that way.

But perhaps most of all, the man hired must be willing to be a public figure for the university, to be available to not only the media but the fans. The public relations job is one of the most important facets of being an athletic director.

Smith Leads Duke Hoop Scrimmage

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — John Smith scored 20 points to lead Duke's Blue team to a 54-49 victory over the White team in an intrasquad scrimmage at E.E. Smith High School Wednesday.

Sophomore forward Robert Brickey, a Smith alumnus, scored 12 points and grabbed a team high 10 rebounds for the Blue team while Greg Koubek also scored 12.

Alah Abdelnaby led the White team with 18 points and eight rebounds while Kevin Strickland added 12 points.

Duke opens the season Nov. 28 against Appalachian State at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

Ivy Scores 19 In Deacon Scrimmage

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Sam Ivy scored 19 points and grabbed 16 rebounds to lead the Gold squad to a 56-54 victory over the White team in a Wake Forest intrasquad basketball scrimmage Wednesday.

Cal Boyd added 14 points and four assists for the Gold squad while Antonio Johnson led the White with 17 points.

Wake Forest opens its season Nov. 30 against Siena.

UNCW Lands A 6-9 Post Man

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Matt Fish, a 6-foot-9, 225-pound center from Washington High School in Washington, Iowa, signed a college basketball grant-in-aid with North Carolina-Wilmington on Wednesday, Coach Robert McPherson announced.

Fish was UNC-W's only high school player to commit during the early signing period which ended Wednesday. He averaged 17 points and 11 rebounds as a sophomore on the junior varsity team. He did not play his junior year at Washington because of mononucleosis, according to his coach, Dave Tremmel.

Crum Reportedly Tells Squad He's Gone

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina football coach Dick Crum has told his players he believes Saturday's game will be his last at UNC but that he will not resign, a Raleigh newspaper quoted a Tar Heel player as saying.

The player, who asked that his name not be used, said Wednesday that Crum had told the team before Tuesday's practice "he expected the Duke game to be his last game," The News and Observer reported.

The player said Crum also added, "It's out of my hands."

UNC Chancellor Chris Fordham declined Wednesday when asked whether a decision had been made about Crum. Crum, contacted at his office Wednesday, also refused to comment.

A former high ranking official in the UNC Educational Foundation, who asked not to be identified, said Crum wanted a payoff totaling more than $1 million for his nine assistant coaches before he would resign.

"It's the last stumbling block in the way of a deal, but it's a very big stumbling block," the official said.

Crum, UNC's winningest coach, has four years left on a 10-year contract he signed in January 1982. Crum earns a base salary of $87,300 a year and it is estimated a buyout or settlement of the contract would cost $500,000 or more after adding compensation for Crum's television show, football camp and other coaching perks.

Porter Says Jackets Playing For 1988

ATLANTA (AP) — Sophomore linebacker John Porter said Georgia Tech's 1988 football season may begin a little early — with the last two games of the disappointing 1987 campaign.

"The season isn't going that good," the soft-spoken Porter said this week, a simple acknowledgement of fact. Tech is 2-7 with an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday against Wake Forest and its traditional season finale against Georgia.

As Coach Bobby Ross' first season winds to a close, "Each and every player is looking to himself to say, 'What more can I do?'" Porter said.

Porter, 5-11 and 235, was intensely recruited from Valdosta High School's 1984 state and national championship team, for which he made 185 tackles in 15 games. He had 16 tackles against Virginia two weeks ago, a season high for the team. He said last week's open date was good news.

"It was a rest we needed, a chance to sit down and see where we go from here," he said.

And where is that for a team that cannot contend for an ACC title, a bowl or even a winning season?

"Back to work," he said. "The attitude is there aren't two games left, there's a whole season left. We need to get two more victories this year, and have something to carry over into next year."

When asked whether some of the Yellow Jackets may not have written the season off and begun looking to other pursuits, Porter said, "The guys I've talked to, their attitude is just as I've described: to work harder this week, to see if we can do something for the team to win."

But, he added, "I haven't talked to everybody."

Graf Vulnerable Only In Practice

NEW YORK (AP) — The secret is out: If you want to beat Steffi Graf, play her in practice.

"I've been playing very badly in practice," Graf said Wednesday night after beating Zina Garrison 6-0, 6-3 in the opening round of the Virginia Slims tennis championships. "Maybe I was just anxious for the tournament to begin."

Graf, the top-ranked player in the world, needed just 47 minutes to defeat Garrison, who won only nine points in the first set.

"She's so quick," Garrison said. "I'm used to hitting shots that would be winners against any other player, but she gets to them."

Garrison, who had split two previous matches with Graf, never had a chance in this one at Madison Square Garden. Graf won the first eight games before her 24-year-old American opponent could break a sweat.

"I was concentrating very well," said the 18-year-old West German, who has won 72 of 74 matches this year. "I wanted to get off to a good start."

Graf's opponent tonight will be seventh-seeded Helena Sukova, who beat Lori McNeil 2-6, 7-5, 6-2 in another first-round match. Tonight's other quarterfinal features two unseeded players, Sylvia Hanika of West Germany and Raffaella Reggi of Italy.

Sukova beat Graf the first time they played in 1983, but has lost their last five matches.

"I will have to serve better than I did at the beginning tonight," Sukova said. "I have nothing to lose. She has all the pressure. She's supposed to win."

Sukova has a history of playing well in major tournaments like the $1-million Slims championships, which feature the top 16 singles players and top eight doubles teams in the world.

The 6-foot-2 Czechoslovak was a finalist at the 1986 U.S. Open and a semifinalist this year, losing both times to Martina Navratilova. She also lost to Navratilova in the 1985 Slims final.

"I get psyched up for the big ones," Sukova said.

Also advancing Wednesday night was fourth-seeded Pam Shriver, who beat Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

Shriver will play Maleeva's older sister, Manuela, in the quarterfinals Friday night. In the other quarterfinal, second-seeded Navratilova meets No. 6 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina.

Shriver, who has been in top form lately, played erratically against the younger Maleeva.

"I think I got tired mentally," said Shriver, who played a three-set doubles match the previous night that didn't end until 1:15 a.m. "I thought I'd be all right, but I really felt it after the first set."

In a book she wrote about the women's tennis tour, Shriver referred to the Maleeva sisters as "Boo-Hoo" because they rarely smile.

"Even after one point tonight when I should have been frustrated, I turned around and smiled at her, and she didn't do anything," Shriver said. "Then I remembered it was 'Hoo.'"

UNC's Tipoff Game Won't Be True Test

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

Ask North Carolina basketball coach Dean Smith about playing Syracuse in the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic this weekend and he would suggest that Tar Heel fans shouldn't use this game as a gauge for the 1988 season.

"I think it will be an interesting game, one that won't make or break our season," Smith said. "We certainly take every game seriously and try very hard."

Besides the fact that it is an exhibition game, the Tar Heels are sending one of their youngest teams ever to face another tough schedule. Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim has said it should be a good contest, even if J.R. Reid and Steve Bucknall are on suspension and won't be there.

"I hope it will be a good basketball game," Smith says. "It's designed to promote the Basketball Hall of Fame and it's on ESPN and there are two fine programs. I hope it will be a very good game."

If Smith is hesitant, there is reason. Only one senior, Ranzino Smith, is on the roster and he will start against the Orangemen. Junior Jeff Lebo will join him in the backcourt and it gets younger from there.

"I don't like that situation," Smith said.

With 6-foot-9 starter Reid sitting out the suspension, 6-11 Scott Williams will have to play a lot of center. He will be flanked by Pete Chilcutt, who sat out last year, and Kevin Madden, who is coming back from academic probation that forced him to miss last year.

Madden has an injured hand, but Smith doesn't expect that to stop the 6-5 sophomore.

"Madden's doing very well offensively. Defensively, as a freshman it was tough on him, guarding quicker people," Smith said.

And while Smith says he and his players are anxious, they must top the performance of the last meeting with Syracuse.

"We've got to rebound better than we did last year. We had Reid, Popson and Wolf last year and the same rebounding problem," Smith said. "And Scott Williams will have to be an ironman and play a lot."

Williams and Reid have bumped knees twice in practice and both are hobbling. But the knee, as well as a bad back, are the least of Williams' problems.

The 6-11 sophomore is returning to action several weeks after the funerals of his mother and father in California, victims of an apparent murder-suicide.

"Scott is doing remarkably well from an emotional standpoint. He's just been physically banged up," Smith said. "He had hurt his back before the practice began, so he still plays with pain. Fortunately, he's such an intelligent young man, he's picking up any new changes we have."

Smith doesn't expect freshmen King Rice or Rick Fox will start this year, but he will get them a lot of playing time.

That lineup and its young substitutes will face virtually the same team that beat the more experienced Tar Heels en route to the NCAA championship game last season. Rony Seikaly is still in the middle and Smith says the Orangemen will hold the speed advantage with Derrick Coleman and Steve Thompson.

"They have tremendous team quickness. Seikaly is very quick, Coleman is very quick, Thompson is super quick," he said. "Fortunately, we're not playing 'em in track."

As for strategy, Smith said he will keep it basic.

"Defensively, we're way behind still. We haven't even gotten to out-of-bounds plays. We'll probably take only one or two into the ball game," he said. "It's early. It's a week earlier than usual."

Focus Is Still On UNC And Crum

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

With the Atlantic Coast Conference championship settled and bowl bids virtually sealed, the spotlight on this weekend's football action shines again on North Carolina, where Coach Dick Crum is battling criticism and rumors.

The criticism has been constant, and stems from Crum's conservative play calling and failure to win the so-called important games. The rumors are that he will not keep his job beyond the finale against Duke in Chapel Hill.

Speculation hit a high point with word from The News and Observer of Raleigh that unidentified sources said Crum would not be retained as head coach. The Durham Morning Herald and the Greensboro News & Record reported the same thing in Wednesday's editions, that Crum would be ousted as head coach.

Meanwhile, no one is commenting on the record and Crum has been mum.

"I'm not even going to discuss that. I addressed the matter last week," said Crum in reference to comments in which he said he would be back in 1988.

"You never know who those people (sources) are," Crum told his news conference on Tuesday. "They're kind of faceless. So you don't know how accurate that is."

North Carolina is 5-5 and 3-3 in the ACC. It hasn't won an ACC title since 1980.

Duke was hoping for a winning season, but is 4-6 and 1-5 in the conference after a 47-45 loss to North Carolina State last weekend. The Blue Devils had led by a 31-14 halftime count before surrendering a 20-point third quarter and Bryan Carter's game-winning field goal in the final minute.

"I think the past few years the Duke players have had more reason to be motivated than the North Carolina players," Duke coach Steve Spurrier said. "They might not be too excited for us because this is a team that hasn't had a winning record in five years now. If both teams had outstanding records and a lot on the line in the game, it makes it a much bigger game."

Wake Forest goes to Georgia Tech and Virginia visits North Carolina State in the league action, while Maryland is at Vanderbilt and No. 8 Clemson and 12th-ranked South Carolina tangle at Columbia.

The Demon Deacons have a chance at going 7-4 in Atlanta, but no one has mentioned the possibility of a bowl bid. Still, if first-year Coach Bill Dooley wins, he will have guided Wake Forest to the seven-victory level for just the third time in the last 43 years.

A victory could lock up a second straight bowl bid for Dooley, who took the 1986 Virginia Tech team to the Peach Bowl. A representative of the Independence Bowl will attend the Atlanta game, and it could cap a season which wasn't expected to turn out so well.

"It has been a pleasant surprise," Dooley said. "People went out and got the job done. It's a real tribute to our players. They have worked hard."

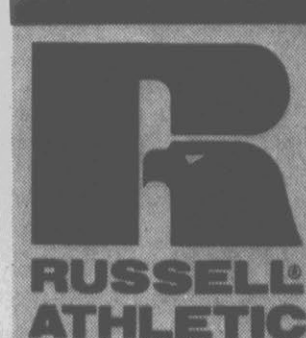

Georgia Tech hasn't won an ACC game in five outings and is 2-7 overall. If it fails to beat Wake Forest, the Yellow Jackets will have just one more chance to beat a Division I-A team, and that will come at Georgia.

"We had three days of fundamental work and quite a bit of conditioning this past week," first-year coach Bobby Ross said of last week's open date. "It also gave us some time to heal up some of our injured players."

Virginia is said to have an invitation to the All-American Bowl in Birmingham against Brigham Young. The Cavaliers are looking to improve on a 6-4 mark, which is Coach George Welsh's fourth winning season in the last six years.

The Wolfpack is out of bowl range at 4-6, but it is 4-2 and can finish in second place in the league for the second straight season.

"At least we're playing for something," N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan said. "It's not first place, which is what we'd like it to be. But that certainly is a motivating factor."

Big 8 Showdown Top Game For Huskers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Oklahoma is Nebraska's arch rival. Nebraska may or may not be Oklahoma's arch rival.

"An Oklahoma coach could lose to Nebraska 10 years in a row and he wouldn't be in trouble," says a member of the Oklahoma athletic department. "But he wouldn't be around long enough to lose to Texas 10 years in a row."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, one of college football's least uptight people, gets uptight the week of the Texas game. Before the Nebraska game, however, Switzer is as loose as ever.

"The Texas game is a classic game because of recruiting and the pressure of the two states," former Oklahoma quarterback Steve Davis says. "Oklahoma doesn't want Texas to go to the Cotton Bowl because that's an indication that things are on the rise."

"Texas kids have their heartstrings pulled if Texas is mediocre. They'll consider going to Oklahoma where they might play for the national championship. I'm sure Barry feels he can outrecruit (Nebraska Coach) Tom Osborne for a Texas kid, but it's a different story with Texas."

On the other hand, Nebraska defensive end Broderick Thomas, tired of hearing about the Cornhuskers' many close-but-no-cigar meetings with Oklahoma, calls Saturday's game "something I've been waiting on for a year. I've been boiling. Every time someone brings it up I begin to sweat."

Mark Hutson, Oklahoma's All-American guard, says he has been "looking forward to this game since midseason. It has really been hard to get up for each week with this game always in the back of your mind."

Oklahoma and Nebraska have been playing since 1912, and have met annually since 1928. They played twice in 1978 when Oklahoma aveng-ed a 17-14 regular-season loss, which Osborne called "the biggest game we've ever had," with a 31-24 Orange Bowl victory. But the rivalry really didn't develop seriously until Bob Devaney became Nebraska's head coach in 1962.

Osborne and Switzer, the rival coaches, are as opposite as personalities can be. They became head coaches the same year, 1973, after serving as assistants under the earthy Devaney and introvert Chuck Fairbanks, who also were opposite personalities.

Perhaps opposites attract in this series, which has seen one of the participants win or share the Big Six, Big Seven or Big Eight title 41 times in the last 44 years and every year since 1962, including five national championships in the last 17 years, a stretch in which one or the other has come into this game ranked No. 1.

Saturday's winner almost certainly will be No. 1 in the Associated Press poll since Oklahoma was No. 1 all season until Nebraska overtook the Sooners this week.

The game will have to go some to match the 1971 meeting which Nebraska won 35-31 in Norman en route to its second straight national championship. That contest was voted the best college game ever by a national panel of sports writers.

Oklahoma leads the series 37-27, with three ties, the last in 1937. Nebraska took an early series lead of 16-3-3 before Oklahoma embarked on a 16-game winning streak (1943-58), the last 12 under Wilkinson.

Nebraska won seven of the next 13 meetings, but since 1972, Oklahoma has dominated again, 12-4. Oklahoma has a one-sided 34-11 advantage since 1943.

Oklahoma's 17-14 victory in 1972 — the Sooners erased a 14-0 fourth-quarter deficit — began a string of late-game comebacks.

Switzer is 11-4 against Osborne, many of those triumphs coming late in the game, something Switzer terms "Sooner Magic."

In six of Switzer's triumphs against Osborne, Oklahoma came from behind or broke a tie in the fourth quarter.

In 1974, Oklahoma reeled off three long touchdown drives in the fourth quarter to erase a 14-7 deficit and win 28-14. Three Sooners — Davis, Joe Washington and Jim Littel — each rushed for more than 100 yards and Oklahoma went on to capture the first of Switzer's three national championships.

In 1975, Oklahoma scored 28 consecutive points en route to a 35-10 triumph and another national championship.

In 1976, a rare year when the winner could only share the Big Eight title with Colorado and Oklahoma State, a crippled Oklahoma team, trailing 17-13 and backed up near its goal line, went to its bag of tricks for a flea-flicker 47-yard pass from reserve halfback Woodie Shepard to split end Steve Rhodes and beat the clock to win 20-17.

Oklahoma won 21-17 in 1980 thanks to a late 43-yard run by Buster Rhymes.

Nebraska was ranked No. 1 for the 1984 contest and outgained Oklahoma 373-201, but the Sooners won 17-7 with 10 fourth-quarter points and a goal-line stand with 5½ minutes left.

"Maybe about as disappointing a loss as we've had," Osborne said.

Last year, Oklahoma, thanks to some sparkling catches by All-American tight end Keith Jackson, scored a touchdown and field goal in the final 4:10 and won 20-17.

Oklahoma, ranked No. 1, almost pulled out the 1978 game but lost 17-14 when Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims fumbled at the Nebraska three-yard line on the final possession. "Most years, I think the team with the best players has won the Oklahoma-Nebraska game," Switzer says. "But not '78."

THE game, however, took place in 1971 and remains the game by which all others are judged. The teams took turns driving up and down the field, swapping touchdowns and four lead changes.

Nebraska, led by tailback Jeff Kinney, quarterback Jerry Tagge and slotback Johnny Rodgers, who won the Heisman Trophy in 1972, was seeking its second consecutive national championship and steamrolled its first 10 opponents to the tune of 389-64.

Rodgers scored the game's first touchdown on a 72-yard punt return. Kinney rushed for 174 yards and scored four times on short plunges, the last one the game-winner with under two minutes remaining.

Oklahoma, utilizing the wishbone offense for just the second season and featuring Jack Mildren at quarterback (he scored two touchdowns and threw for two) and Greg Pruitt at halfback, was 9-0, scoring 405 points but yielding 146.

Nebraska was ranked No. 1,

Oklahoma No. 2, and that was the way they finished. It was the only previous 1-2 matchup in the series and the pregame hype grew to such proportions that Devaney had his team's food flown in from Lincoln rather than trust an Oklahoma hotel.

Nebraska's defensive line included Outland Trophy winner Larry Jacobson at tackle, nose guard Rich Glover (he made 22 tackles playing opposite All-American center Tom Brahaney and went on to win the 1972 Outland and Lombardi Trophies) and end Willie Harper. John Dutton, later a pro star, alternated at tackle with Bill Janssen and Monte Johnson was a backup tackle who never started for the Cornhuskers but was good enough to be a regular on the Oakland Raiders' 1977 Super Bowl champs.

Devaney remembers at one point yelling at his defense, which was in the process of giving up 467 yards, "Why don't you guys give Glover some help once in a while?"

Edwards Retained By The Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — Doc Edwards has managed the Cleveland Indians long enough to know it's no easy task.

"Just because you want a Cadillac doesn't mean you're going to get one," Edwards said Wednesday after he was rehired to manage the team next season.

Edwards was promoted from bullpen coach to manager when Pat Corrales was fired July 16. Cleveland was 31-56 at the time and went 30-45 the rest of the way, finishing with a 61-101 record that was the worst in the majors.

"When you take over during the summer, the wheels are already spinning in the direction the club's going to go," Edwards said. "You start implementing some of the things you want the players to do. Then when you go to spring training, they should know what you expect of them."

Although the Indians had three players — Cory Snyder, Joe Carter and Brook Jacoby — hit more than 30 homers, they finished 12th in the 14-team American League in runs scored. They also had the worst earned run average in the majors (5.28) and led the AL with 153 errors.

"I think they all know I want to play team baseball," Edwards said. "I want to move runners. I want some more bunting from some people, more hitting and running so your power hitters can hammer away and drive in runs."

He said new team President Hank Peters is prepared to do some dealing to improve the Indians' pitching.

"When you finish last, you have to be open to anything," Edwards said. "You have to listen to any offers. I don't think you can say anyone's untouchable at this point."

Peters, the former Baltimore Orioles executive hired by the Indians earlier this month, said no one else was seriously considered for the managing job.

Earnhardt Is Driver Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Dale Earnhardt is the 1987 Driver of the Year in auto racing, earning nine of 10 first-place votes from a national panel of motorsports writers and broadcasters.

The NASCAR stock car star, who closes out his season on Sunday at Atlanta International Raceway, already has won 11 races, more than $1.5 million and his second straight Winston Cup championship and third overall.

Earnhardt, the son of the late Ralph Earnhardt, a sportsman division champion, was away from home on a hunting trip Tuesday when the award was announced and was unavailable for comment.

The other first-place vote went to NHRA pro stock drag racing champion Bob Glidden, who finished his season with four straight victories. Panelists vote for only one driver in the final balloting.

Earnhardt will be honored on Dec. 4 at a luncheon in New York. He will receive a diamond and sapphire ring and a specially designed Steuben glass trophy.

The 35-year-old North Carolinian is the 12th stock car driver and the 15th different racer in 21 years to win the prestigious award.

He also is the third consecutive first-time winner, joining 1965 winner Bill Elliott, another NASCAR star, and Indy-car champion Bobby Rahal, who won in 1966.

Other former winners of the Driver of the Year Award include Mario Andretti (1967, 1978 and 1984), Bobby Allison (1972 and 1983), Darrell Waltrip (1979, 1981 and 1982), Johnny Rutherford (1980), Cale Yarborough (1977), David Pearson (1973 and 1976), A.J. Foyt (1975), Bobby Unser (1974), Richard Petty (1971), Al Unser (1970), Lee Roy Yarborough (1969) and Mark Donohue (1968).

Results of fourth-quarter balloting by the panel also were announced Tuesday, with Indy-car star Michael Andretti, winner of two of three races during the period, taking the honors with 70 of a possible 90 points and six first-place votes.

Elliott, who also won twice, was second with 51 points and one first-place ballot, followed by Glidden with 38 points and two first-place votes and Rahal with 34 points and the other top vote.

Also receiving votes in the fourth-quarter balloting were sports car driver Jochen Mass of West Germany, Trans-Am champion Scott Pruett, Earnhardt, drag racers Dick LaHaie, Mark Oswald and Darrell Gwynn, and sprint car racer Steve Kinser.

Earnhardt won the first- and third-quarter voting, while Rahal, who earned his second straight CART-PPG series driving championship, was the second-quarter winner.

The Driver of the Year Award is sponsored by Ki Cuyler, grandson of baseball Hall of Famer Kiki Cuyler, and Cuyro Services, a Pittsburgh-based company specializing in the creation and marketing of awards programs for corporations.

Soviets Battle Thousands Of Protesting Latvians

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Thousands of Latvians protesting the takeover of their homeland by the Soviet Union 47 years ago fought a "bloody battle" with Soviet authorities, a human rights group said.

About 8,000 Latvians fought with police Wednesday in the Latvian cities of Riga and Liepaja, said the Baltic-Helsinki group, citing Latvian exile sources in West Germany. It mentioned many arrests and injuries, but gave no figures.

The official Soviet Tass news agency said 10,000 Riga residents also turned out Wednesday for a separate government-sponsored rally protesting alleged U.S. interference in Latvian affairs.

The United States has not recognized the Soviet Union's incorporation of the Baltic nations of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia.

On Nov. 5, the House Foreign Affairs Committee called on the Kremlin to allow peaceful demonstrations marking Latvian Independence Day.

Tass said Riga residents carried streamers saying "Latvian people needed no instructions from across the ocean as to how they should live."

The demonstrations took place on the anniversary of Latvia's independence from Russia on Nov. 18, 1918. They protested the forced incorporation of Latvia into the Soviet Union in 1940.

Latvia is in the western Soviet Union on the Baltic Sea.

"Several thousand young people broke through double police cordons and fought a bloody battle with security forces around Latvia's freedom monument in Riga," said the Baltic-Helsinki group, citing a report from the World Federation of Free Latvians in West Germany.

The Baltic-Helsinki group is an organization based in Stockholm that monitors human rights movements in the Baltic republics.

A Latvian activist quoted by the West German exile group said she saw rioting break out Wednesday evening in Liepaja when security police seized a young man carrying the red-and-white flag of independent Latvia.

The witness, Eva Bitenieks, said at least one person was seriously injured during clashes between protesters and police near a cemetery. She was quoted as saying three busloads of people were arrested and taken away.

Ms. Bitenieks, who is a member of the Baltic-Helsinki group, said the rioting in Liepaja lasted about four hours.

An editor of Express Chronicle, a Moscow-based dissident journal, said he was told by Mikhail Bombim, a Latvian activist, that police cordoned off much of Riga's downtown and stopped car traffic Wednesday to prevent a repeat of demonstrations in the Latvian capital last summer.

Protests in Riga on June 14 and August 23 were believed to be the largest unsanctioned rallies since the signing of the Soviet-Nazi pact in 1939. That pact consigned the three Baltic nations to the Soviet sphere of influence.

Exile sources said those protests involved thousands of people.

On June 14, Ms. Bitenieks, who is 19, led a march in Liepaja in memory of the deportation of 15,000 Latvians by Soviet leader Joseph Stalin to Siberian labor camps after the signing of the Nazi-Soviet pact.

Raimonds Bitenieks, Ms. Bitenieks' father, was a founding member of the Helsinki '86 group, a human rights group formed in the summer of 1986 in Liepaja.

Iraq Says Iranian Jet Shot Down

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its ground batteries today shot down one of two Iranian warplanes that penetrated Iraqi airspace. Iraq also said its air force attacked another tanker off Iran overnight.

In another development, shipping executives reported that British warships today detonated a mine they found earlier in the central Persian Gulf.

Baghdad radio, monitored in Cyprus, said the Iranian jet, a U.S.-built Iranian F-5, was hit over northern Kurdistan province and crashed in Iraqi territory near Aqra, 35 miles west of the border.

The broadcast did not say what happened to the pilot.

An earlier broadcast said Iraqi planes hit a "large maritime target," meaning a tanker, off the Iranian coast Wednesday night. It was the 17th vessel Iraq claims to have hit in the past 10 days.

Only four of the 17 attacks have been confirmed.

On Wednesday, Iraq said Iranian warplanes bombed a hospital, killing nine patients and wounding 64, but Iran denied the claim.

Reports from Baghdad said one Iranian aircraft bombed a hospital at Duhok, in Iraq's northern Sulaymaniyah province. Tehran television said the Iranian air force attacked "military and economic installations."

Guerrillas Stage Raids In Lima

U.S. Embassy Guard Hurt In Dynamite Attack in Peru

By ROBERT SEAVEY
Associated Press Writer

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Leftist guerrillas threw dynamite at the U.S. Embassy, injuring a guard, and attacked an auto plant with gunfire and bombs after destroying power lines to cause a widespread power failure, police said.

Under cover of the blackout Wednesday night, guerrillas also attacked a tourist hotel and several government facilities in Lima, police said.

Four guerrillas were killed and two captured in the attack on the auto plant in Lima, police said. Besides the embassy guard, no injuries were reported to civilians or police who responded to the attacks.

A police guard outside the U.S. Embassy in downtown Lima was wounded when a bomb exploded near the front of the building, police told The Associated Press. "Someone in a passing car must have thrown a stick of dynamite," said an embassy spokesman who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The extent of the guard's injuries was not immediately known.

The spokesman said a small part of the steel fence around the embassy was destroyed and some lights and windows were shattered.

Police said four rebels were shot to death and two wounded and captured after more than a dozen attackers, riding in a stolen bus, raided the Nissan auto assembly plant, firing guns and exploding firebombs.

Nissan security guards and police who reached the plant site five miles west of downtown fought off the attackers in a fierce gun battle. A fire inside the plant had been brought under control by midnight, police said.

At about the same time, leftist guerrillas bombed the Hotel Riviera, a branch office of the state bank Banco Continental, and separate offices of the ministries of health, labor and justice. Police said the bombings damaged building facades and shattered lights and windows. All of the attacked sites are within one-half mile of the U.S. Embassy, which is on the fringes of downtown Lima.

Radio Programas, Peru's main news station, said more than 15 explosions rocked the capital, but police could not account for that many.

The attacks came shortly after a blackout at 8 p.m. darkened the capital and areas along Peru's central coastline. Police said guerrillas blew up six power pylons in the mountains east of Lima to cause the blackout.

Power was restored 45 minutes later in central Lima, but flickered off and on for the remainder of the evening because power officials had difficulty maintaining a steady flow of energy.

Police blamed the attacks and power outage on leftist guerrillas.

But they refused to say which of Peru's two main guerrilla groups, the Mao-inspired Shining Path or the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement, which endorses a Cuba-styled Marxism, was responsible for the violence.

Both guerrilla bands have staged similar blackouts and attacks in Lima.

Shining Path guerrillas have been fighting for power for more than seven years, and the government has reported that more than 10,000 people have been killed.

The smaller and less violent Tupac Amaru guerrillas have been active since 1984. They focused their attacks in Lima and a few other urban centers, but began an insurgency in Peru's eastern Amazon jungle earlier this year.

On Oct. 8, Tupac Amaru guerrillas bombed the U.S. Consulate, damaging the facade and shattering windows but causing no injuries.

Nicaraguans OK Proposal That Could End Emergency

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The National Assembly approved bills that would lift the state of emergency and grant amnesty to some prisoners when aid to the Contra rebels ends and the other nations comply with a regional peace plan.

The proposals, made by President Daniel Ortega, were approved late Wednesday by the assembly, which is controlled by the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front.

The measures would not grant amnesty to 2,500 former members of the national guard under dictator Anastasio Somoza, ousted by the Sandinistas in 1979. The bills also would not cover those charged or convicted of espionage.

In another development Wednesday, Ortega said a joint statement by the U.S. secretary of state and the House speaker could lead to talks with Washington about ending the Contra rebel war against his government.

"While it doesn't clearly define, it doesn't deny bilateral talks. I think this is an important element," Ortega said in a taped television discussion on national issues.

Contra rebels Wednesday attacked and blew up a microwave transmission tower, cutting off communication between the capital and eastern parts of the country, military sources said.

The tower on Cerro Las Cuchilas, about 90 miles east of Managua in Chontales province, was dynamited before dawn Tuesday, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity for security reasons. Power was still out Wednesday.

On Tuesday, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, issued a statement backing the Central American peace plan.

Although the statement did not mention direct U.S.-Nicaraguan talks, it repeated President Reagan's proposal for regional discussions.

Ortega's leftist Sandinista government has pressed for direct talks with the United States, which sponsors the Contras in their 6-year-old war, on grounds that the Americans "are the financiers."

The Reagan administration has refused to negotiate directly since several meetings resulted in deadlock three years ago. It says Nicaragua should negotiate directly with the rebels.

For the last fiscal year, U.S. aid to the Contras totaled $100 million. The Reagan administration has put its request for another $270 million on hold to see how the regional peace plan develops.

That plan was signed by Ortega and the presidents of El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Costa Rica at a summit Aug. 7. It is designed to end guerrilla wars in Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala.

Among its provisions are cease-fires, amnesties, negotiations, national reconciliation and reforms to bring greater democracy to the region. It also would end outside aid to insurgent movements.

The Sandinistas earlier agreed to indirect cease-fire talks with Contra leaders mediated by Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo of Nicaragua.

Repeating a long-held position, Ortega said Wednesday that a "political dialogue with the Contras ... could only be possible with President Reagan, the American government, as the head of the Contras."

His government insists the Contras lay down their arms, accept a government amnesty and join discussions of national reconciliation between the Sandinistas and political opposition, as called for by the peace plan.

A proposal he gave Obando y Bravo last week calls for the rebels to go to three demilitarized zones starting Dec. 5 and put down their arms by Jan. 5, then join the political process.

CAR TALK

From Joe Cullipher Chrysler Plymouth, Dodge, Peugeot

By James Phillips

DANGER SIGNS

Doctors normally explain the condition of a patient by his vital signs: blood pressure, pulse, temperature, etc. If any of these areas dip, the patient is in trouble. Your car also has vital signs or danger symptoms.

BRAKES: a sagging pedal may indicate a hydraulic leak. Other danger signals are squealing, grabbing or locking of brakes. The hand brake should be capable of holding the car on a steep hill when the transmission is in neutral.

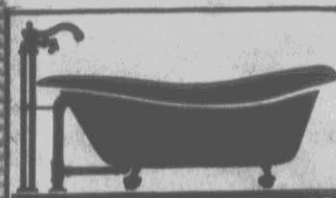

TIRES: Look periodically for cuts, embedded nails and worn spots on the treads and sidewalls. Tire pressure should be checked every two weeks and before every long trip.

MUFFLER: Holes that rust through mufflers not only broadcast noise, they let deadly carbon monoxide fumes escape and cut down on a car's performance.

If you find symptoms of something wrong, take your car to an expert before more serious trouble develops.

Protestant Politician Shot In N. Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A leading Protestant politician who once recommended burning Roman Catholics was shot in the head today as he got out of a car, police said.

George Seawright, an elected city councillor, was admitted to Mater Hospital in critical condition with two bullet wounds in the head, authorities said.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary said Seawright was shot by "terrorists," but there was no immediate claim of responsibility.

The Scottish-born Seawright is a member of the Democratic Unionists, led by the militant Rev. Ian Paisley. The party opposes any concessions by Protestants to the Catholic minority in the British province.

Seawright, 35, was shot as he got out of a car at a supermarket on Dundee Road, in the Protestant Shankill district, a police statement said.

Seawright gained notoriety in 1984 when he declared to a Belfast council meeting that the city should buy an incinerator and burn all Catholics in it.

He was the second Belfast councillor to be shot this year. In May, Alex Maskey of the Irish Republican Army's political wing Sinn Fein was shot in the stomach by a Protestant gunman.

Seawright's incinerator remark was too harsh even for his party.

Jet Pilot Defects

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A Chinese air force squadron commander flew his MiG-19 jet fighter across the narrow Taiwan Strait and defected to the Nationalists today, the Defense Ministry reported.

The ministry said Liu Chih-yuan, 28, took off from a base in Lungshi in the southern coastal province of Fujian, 113 miles across the Taiwan Strait from Taiwan, and landed at the Ching Chuan-kang air force base in Taichung, 120 miles south of Taipei, at 3:38 p.m.

The ministry issued a brief statement that said Liu was from the 49th Chinese air force flight division, and a native of Jinan in the northeastern province of Shandong.

Taiwan's official Broadcasting Corp. of China said two Nationalist Chinese jet fighters scrambled to intercept the MiG-19 as it approached Taiwan, and later escorted it to the air base, where Liu was greeted by Nationalist Chinese air force officials.

Officials declined to provide additional details on the defection.

A number of Chinese pilots have defected to Taiwan since the Nationalist government retreated to this island in 1949 after losing a civil war on the China mainland to the Communists.

Police Say All But One Of 19 Accused Filipinos Still At Large

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Nineteen Filipinos were charged with murdering the three Americans slain outside Clark Air Base last month, but 18 remain at large, police said today.

Also today, U.S. military bases ended a drill to test defenses against guerrilla attacks. The drill began Wednesday morning at Clark, Subic Bay Naval Base and smaller American installations throughout the Philippines.

In Angeles City outside Clark, Lt. Col. Orlando Macaspac, a police deputy commander, told reporters charges of murder and attempted murder were filed Wednesday against Romeo Valencia and 18 others still at large. The 18 have not been publicly identified and aliases were used in the charges.

Murder charges were not filed against a 20th suspect, Crisanto Lalu, because he agreed to testify against the others, Macaspac said. He said Valencia and Lalu face charges of illegal possession of firearms.

Police blamed communist rebels waging a 17-year insurgency in the Philippines for the attack outside Clark Oct. 28 that killed two American servicemen, a former American serviceman and Filipino of American descent.

The rebels have not claimed responsibility for the killings near Clark, 50 miles north of Manila, but have said repeatedly that Americans are "targets for attack" because of U.S. aid to the government of President Corazon Aquino.

Macaspac said prosecuting attorneys have not indicated when formal hearings will begin in the case. Under Philippine law, prosecutors must conduct a preliminary investigation to determine if enough evidence exists for a trial.

The law does not allow for trial in absentia.

During the drill, the U.S. military's television station, the Far East Network, flashed frequent reports throughout Wednesday ordering troops to report to their units and ad-

Execution Date

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Robert Henry McDowell's execution date was set for Jan. 21, 1988 during a hearing Wednesday in Harnett County Superior Court, but his attorney is hoping another stay will be granted in the case.

McDowell, who was convicted in 1979 of the first-degree murder of four-year-old Carol Ann Hinson of Sanford, lost his latest round of appeals Aug. 7 when U.S. District Judge James C. Fox rejected his petition for a writ of habeas corpus and revoked his stay of execution.

McDowell's attorney, Richard Rosen, of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Law, said Wednesday that he has filed a notice of appeal with the Fourth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va. and is preparing papers to take to the court for a stay of execution.

Murder-Suicide

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Investigators with the Lee County Sheriff's Department have concluded that evidence shows a Swanns Station woman was murdered last month and her assailant then committed suicide.

Bobbi Sue Page, 21, was found dead Oct. 14, apparently from stab wounds received in a struggle with her assailant, officials said. Also found was the body of Michael Wayne Mance, 29. He had a gunshot wound to his head.

Lee County Sheriff Billy Bryant said evidence from the autopsy report and State Bureau of Investigation reports supported the conclusion of a murder-suicide.

Younger Sheen Is Starring As Member Of Star Family

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — You wonder how Charlie Sheen keeps his feet on the ground. After all, he's 21 and during a short period has starred in four major films, including one that collected an Academy Award.

"It's simple," he said. "I visit my family twice a week. They kick me around a little bit."

That's the amazing Sheen family. There's father Martin Sheen, one of the most visible and respected of today's actors. Then comes Emilio Estevez, actor-writer-director who broke out of the Brat Pack when he starred as Richard Dreyfuss' sidekick in "Stakeout."

Ramon Sheen and Renee Estevez are actors on the rise, and Charlie (real name: Carlos Irwin Estevez) is on the brink of superstar status. However, there's no chance of his new status going to his head, not amid the give-and-take of the Sheen household in Malibu.

"I haven't placed a label on myself the way society or the moviegoing public might," Sheen said. "So maybe they say, 'Now you're a star.' I have a hard time with that. People ask, 'What's it like to be a movie star?' I say, 'I'm a movie planet.'"

"I just try to maintain the perspective of longevity. If I'm going to be in this business as long as I'd like to be, then I'm going to take it one day at a time, one film at a time, one relationship at a time. I'd like to plan my strategy and still take the risks as an actor."

Sheen admitted that growing up in the family of a working film actor gave him the opportunity to have a jump on the inner workings of the business and to learn how movies are made.

"If I were to become an actor, I could judge exactly what my role would be as a professional. Witnessing my dad as early as I can recall, doing his thing, I naturally took an interest," he said.

"It has helped me tremendously not to lose sight of the reality of what I'm doing now, because of Dad's devotion to what he does."

Born in New York City, Sheen moved to California at the age of 3 when his father's film career began to blossom. As a boy, he spent much time on his father's movie locations, including eight months in the Philippines on "Apocalypse Now," during which Martin suffered a near-fatal heart attack.

"When I went back to the Philippines to do 'Platoon,' after having been there as a 10-year-old and returning as a 20-year-old, it was amazing," marveled Charlie.

"If you looked at it on paper, you wouldn't believe it: narrating the film, playing the central character. It was the same place, but I was different. I'd come home."

Sheen admitted that members of the now-legendary "Platoon" location didn't anticipate the film's impact.

"We were in the jungle, tired, hot, bored, miserable, ticked-off," he said. "We knew we were capturing moments, certain things were working, and we had a pretty good story. But we didn't think anybody would see the film. We didn't think anybody would care about the film. The fact that it was received critically so well — and commercially — was an amazing surprise to all parties involved.

"Except maybe Oliver (Stone, writer-director). The rest of us were blind to it. There was no 'epic' feel on the set. It just felt like 'quality' film."

Sheen is a startling carbon of his father: same dark unruly hair, serious eyes, wide smile, gravely voice. The young actor recently came to Los Angeles to promote his new release, "No Man's Land." He came from Indianapolis where he is filming his fourth film in a row, "Eight Men Out," John Sayles' tale of the Chicago "Black Sox" scandal of the early 1920s.

In "No Man's Land," he plays a role far removed from the impressionable idealist of "Platoon": He's the leader of a Porsche-stealing ring who is capable of murder.

"I received a script and read a role that would offer me an opportunity to wear a different hat," Sheen said. "(The character) is an adrenaline junkie. He steals Porsches not because he needs the money; it's just being on the edge for a few moments. He's grown up wealthy, and to be on the edge for five seconds or 10 minutes is what his life is about at this time."

Sheen's next release could scarcely be more timely: "Wall Street," again with Oliver Stone.

JACK OF ALL TRADES — Walt Aldridge of Muscle Shoals, Ala., does a little bit of everything in the music business. He sings, plays guitar, writes No. 1 songs and produces albums. (AP Laserphoto)

Veteran Musician Walt Aldridge Goes To Front As Writer, Guitarist

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — He sings, plays guitar, writes No. 1 songs and produces albums. He has worked with entertainers ranging from rock 'n' roll pioneer Bill Haley to singer Marie Osmond. Mikhail Baryshnikov has danced to his music.

"I'm cheap labor here," 31-year-old Walt Aldridge said by telephone from the Fame Recording Studio in Muscle Shoals, Ala., where he usually can be found. "I'm handy."

"A lot of people have come and gone through the doors here. I've been lucky to have been involved with most of those projects. I'm sort of a utility player; I play a little of everything and not a lot of any one thing."

Millions of people have heard two of the songs he wrote or co-wrote.

"(There's) No Gettin' Over Me," recorded by Ronnie Milsap in 1982, was co-written over the course of a week with Tom Brasfield. It quickly was recorded by Milsap who carried it to No. 1 on the country music charts.

"It was a fairy tale story," Aldridge recalled. "This was my first single as a songwriter. We finished it, did a demo record the next day and Tommy took it to Nashville and it was soon recorded."

"In a matter of two weeks, we had written a song and it was coming out. I was soon hearing it on the radio. It was a big thrill and I said, 'This is easy. Let's do it again.'"

His "My Love Is Chemical" was on the soundtrack to the movie, "White Nights." Baryshnikov turned on the music and danced for Gregory Hines in a scene designed to show how odd Western music had become since Hines' character had been in the Soviet Union.

"One of the biggest thrills of my life was to have Baryshnikov dance to my music," Aldridge said. "It's amazing to see him dance but when he does it to your music, it's special."

However, he considers his best song "Holding Her and Loving You," which was a No. 1 song by country star Earl Thomas Conley.

"It was very important because it was voted song of the year by the Nashville Songwriters Association which was a nice bonus from your peers. That's one of the songs that people continually come up to me and say, 'You told my story with that song.'"

Aldridge, born and raised in Florence, Ala., has worked for about 10 years at the Alabama recording studio where he has been a musician, singer, record producer and engineer.

Besides Haley and Miss Osmond, Aldridge also has done recording work with Wilson Pickett, Mac Davis, T.G. Sheppard, Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers, Jerry Reed, Terri Gibbs, Clarence Carter and others.

"I started as a 'studio rat' as it's called," he said. "I got a job at Fame being a 'gofer,' getting hamburgers and cleaning up and making tape copies."

"After a while, I could play or sing well enough and I got a little work as a musician and I worked into other areas. Music was my first love."

He had written his first song at age 18 while in college at the University of North Alabama.

"It was a good escape from studying," he said. "College is a time of turmoil and I needed to get a lot of things out of my system."

His first musical experience was taking guitar lessons at age 8. Music has been his life since.

"I'm not sure if it's a blessing or a curse," he said of his musical talents. "I guess it's all I know how to do. Others can do several things well."

"I guess it's all I've ever tried to do and I've given 24 hours a day to it. While others are worried about who won the game last night, I'm thinking about a song or doing something musical."

"I think it's true of most talented people. They're one-talented people and not distracted by other things."

"As far back as I can remember, I beat on a guitar or banged out notes on the piano. While other kids were doing other things, I was happy to learn Ricky Nelson's new song or whatever."

"I remember seeing him sing on 'Ozzie and Harriet' and seeing the girls swooning. I said, 'That's for me.'"

Aldridge has stepped out of the background to become guitarist and one of two lead singers for The Shooters, a new five-piece country-rock band.

Performing songs he's written ranks first among his many satisfying moments. "Standing in front of 50,000 people or so, and doing your own songs, nothing can replace that," he said.

CBS Selling Record Division To Sony

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Inc. announced Wednesday that it had agreed to sell its worldwide record division to electronics giant Sony Corp. of Japan for about $2 billion.

The deal should become final in early 1988 pending the necessary government approvals, CBS said in a statement.

Although the deal was announced long after the stock market closed, CBS stock jumped Wednesday on reports that its board planned to hold a special meeting to discuss the sale of its lucrative records business.

Despite the volatility of the records business, the records group has been increasingly profitable in recent years, helped by hits from entertainers such as Michael Jackson, Bruce Springsteen, Ricky Skaggs and Cyndi Lauper.

CBS president and chief executive Laurence A. Tisch said Sony presented "a very attractive offer in terms of value to the shareholders, while it also provides an important source of capital and allows us to focus all of our energies and resources on our core business of broadcasting."

Jason Farrow, spokesman for New York-based Sony Corporation of America, said late Wednesday he had no immediate comment.

Under Tisch, CBS has undergone a major restructuring since last fall, selling its magazine, book and music publishing units for about $1.2 billion.

He was reported to favor selling the records group if the price were right because of the volatility of the records business.

CBS stock closed at $176 a share on the New York Stock Exchange on Wednesday, up $8.62½ from Tuesday's close. Sony climbed $2.75 a share to $35.62½.

Last year, CBS Records had an operating profit of $162.1 million on revenue of $1.49 billion, accounting for 37 percent of CBS's total operating profit and 31 percent of its revenue.

Sony reported net income of $52.5 million on revenue of $4.41 billion for the six months ended Sept. 30.

Dirk Bogarde Suffers Stroke

LONDON (AP) — Actor Dirk Bogarde was recuperating in a hospital Wednesday from a slight stroke.

Bogarde, 66, became ill at his London home Monday and was taken to King Edward VII Hospital, press spokesman Theo Cowan said.

"He had a very slight stroke from which he has now almost completely recovered. He will be coming out of hospital in a couple of days," Cowan said.

Bogarde returned to England a year ago after living in France for 20 years when his friend Tony Forwood became seriously ill with Parkinson's disease and needed to be near a hospital.

A film idol in the 1950s, Bogarde starred in "Doctor In The House," "The Servant," "Night Porter" and many other films. He has also written four volumes of his autobiography and two novels.

A REAL CUT-UP — Dom DeLuise stars as the owner of a barber shop across from a movie studio in his new television variety show. The rotund actor also has finished a cook book, and combines his humor with his cooking skills to make the syndicated show a bid more down-home. (AP Laserphoto)

Dom DeLuise Real Cut-Up As Barber On TV Show

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — You'll need a magnifying glass to find the plot in Dom DeLuise's television show.

But don't bother. "The Dom DeLuise Show" is sort of like stopping in for a visit. Relax and enjoy it.

"What you will find are relationships and people who care for each other," said DeLuise. "I have a girlfriend, and we talk about going together. It's not unlike 'Allen's Alley.'"

He's referring to Fred Allen's radio show in the 1940s, in which Allen strolled down the alley and met such characters as Senator Claghorn ("That's a joke, son!"), Mrs. Nussbaum ("You were expectin' maybe President Roosevelt?"), and Titus Moody ("Howdy, bub").

In the syndicated show, DeLuise runs a barber shop, and you never know who's going to drop in. The shop's across the street from a movie studio, so an occasional star pops in for a trim and a chat. When John Forsythe was the guest they did — what else? — a "Dynasty" spoof. DeLuise played Joan Collins.

"When Greg Garrison and I created the show we wanted as few restrictions as possible," he said. "I sat down and wrote about a manicurist whose husband was a retired football player who saves all his strength for his sexual prowess. Charlie Callas is a paranoid detective who thinks he's being followed.

"I like being a barber on the show. I like to handle the props. The visiting stars are comfortable. They're sitting down and restricted. Right off, the barber shop is a living room and a kitchen. Sometimes we go in there and cook up something. It's not scripted, and I never know what people are going to say. It's nice to have a spontaneous moment."

The rotund, bearded actor loves to cook and has written a cookbook called "Eat This ... It'll Make You Feel Better," due out in January. "It's a depiction of me and food and growing up with my father and being Italian," he said. "It has a lot of anecdotes about growing up in Brooklyn, where my father was a garbageman. I had no idea how to write a book. The publishers sent me to a woman collaborator, but I decided to do it myself. I wanted to be responsible for my own book."

He grows his own vegetables. "I have a tomato tree," he said. "I have a plastic tube with holes drilled in it. The tomatoes grow out of the holes."

DeLuise was wearing a white cloth cap given to him by K-Paul, chef Paul Prudhomme of New Orleans. There is a strong physical resemblance between the two.

"I dressed up like him and went to K-Paul's restaurant in New Orleans," he said. "I said I was the real K-Paul. If you like the food, I cooked it. I said I was cooking some fish, the phone rang and it burned and became blackened redfish."

He got his start on the stage in New York and met his wife, Carol Arthur, when they appeared together in a production of "Mixed Company" in Provincetown, Mass. He gained some fame on television as the comic magician Dominic the Great, performing with Ruth Buzzi on "The Garry Moore Show." Later, he teamed up with another graduate of Moore's show, Carol Burnett, plus Bob Newhart and John Davidson for "The Entertainers." He was a regular on "The Dean Martin Show."

He starred in "The Dom DeLuise Show," a 1968 summer replacement for Jackie Gleason, and "Lotsa Luck," a short-lived show on NBC. DeLuise appears frequently at the Golden Nugget in Las Vegas and Resorts International in Atlantic City.

He and his wife have three sons and may be starting their own acting dynasty. Son Peter, 20, is a heartthrob on Fox's teen-appeal "21 Jump Street." Michael, 17, was on "One Big Family" with Danny Thomas. David, 16, is an aspiring actor.

'Super Dave' To Premiere Saturday As Cable Spinoff

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Einstein might give a thumbs-up sign as "Super Dave" Osborne, the hapless stuntman he plays on Showtime's "Super Dave" series. But more often than not, his "stunts" leave him bottoms up.

"Super Dave," a comedy and variety show that premieres Saturday on the pay cable network, is the first spinoff from a cable series, Einstein said. He developed the "Super Dave" character in the six years he and Allan Blye did "Bizarre" for Showtime.

"Super Dave" looks and talks like a stuntman, from his aw-shucks attitude to his red-white-and-blue jumpsuit. But somehow nothing ever seems to go right.

"I'm wishing luck to everyone, then my head is pounded into my shoes," Einstein said. "I think everything will come out fine, but it never does. The stunts always go wrong. They're planned, they're rehearsed, but when it comes time to do them for the show we have problems. I have great recuperative powers."

"Everybody's trying to find a new way to do variety," said Einstein. "So, instead of singing songs, I get killed. All our guests have a great time on the show. It's a different feeling doing a variety show as a character."

"It's hard to do a variety show. It's hard to do all that small talk and make it sound real. When you have a star, he becomes the focus of a variety show, and he has to take himself seriously. But with Super Dave, it's all phony anyway. The baloney is really baloney, and it's a way of not taking yourself seriously."

The first show features guest star Ray Charles and a cameo by Carol Burnett, plus a real stunt by a group of acrobats who perform precision basketball slam-dunk routines after leaping from trampolines.

"Super Dave" will become a weekly series in January.

Einstein is primarily a writer and producer and got into performing only after Tom Smothers spotted him on a local TV show.

"I did a put-on character who said he was responsible for putting the names of stars along Hollywood Boulevard," Einstein said. "Someone asked me how to get a name on the sidewalk, and I got huffy and said I couldn't be bought. He asked me again and I said, 'Have you got $5?' Tommy saw it and bought the character until I did the switch."

The award-winning advertising copywriter became a writer and performer on "The Glenn Campbell Summer Series." Later, he became head writer for "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour." His writing partner was Steve Martin.

It was on the Smothers show that he developed the character of Officer Judy. "He was the show cop," he explained. "Once I arrested Liberace for playing too fast. I would keep the show on its toes."

He and Blye, his partner for the past 14 years, wrote and produced "Van Dyke and Company." Einstein also wrote and directed his own movie, "Another Fine Mess," and was head writer for two Andy Williams specials and "The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour." He was co-host of 45 segments of "The Steve Allen Show."

The tall, lanky Einstein grew up in a show business family in Beverly Hills. His father was Harry Einstein, better known as Nick Parkayakarkus, the host of the radio show "Meet Me at Parky's" who also starred on shows with Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson. Einstein's mother was Thelma Leeds, a singer and actress. A half-brother, Charles Einstein, is a sports writer and author.

A brother, Albert, changed his name to Brooks and had made such films as "Real Life," "Modern Romance" and "Lost in America."

"I loved humor," Einstein said. "I had that in me. But I had no ambition to go into show business when I was growing up. I started out as an advertising copywriter and evolved into it. Once you get into it, however, it's very difficult to get out. It gets into your blood. You don't want to do anything else. You want that excitement."

Einstein has never lost his love of radio. "I used to go to the studio with my father," he said. "It was very exciting. I loved listening to Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy as a kid. You could really use your imagination."

"Television is much tougher. People have heard all the jokes. Radio was fresher. People could use their imaginations and help the writer."

His father died in 1957 while doing a Friar's Club Roast of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz. "He had just done a fabulous speech, sat down and died at the dais," Einstein said. "He was 54 years old."

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER 11-19

"Mommy, a nightgown isn't the same as an evening gown, is it?"

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Nov. 20

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be sure to carry through with a promise you made to your mate some time ago. Pay special attention to financial matters.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): An associate may be difficult at times, but this person can be very beneficial and can lead you into a profitable situation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Take care of your present commitments before beginning a new job. Be very careful in motion, especially while driving.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may find it hard to stick with the plans you have made, but persevere and all will go smoothly for you.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): You may feel very "up in the air" today, so take some time to relax and decide on a positive course of action before beginning anything new.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Be very exacting in your communications with others, be it in writing, using the telephone or visiting anyone in person.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Make collections of debts owed to you. This will make it easier for you to pay your bills. Take time to make necessary repairs at home.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Don't be a spendthrift today. In fact, now is the time to revise your budget and find a way to economize more for future goals.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Try to avoid any arguments with friends over trivial matters. You may have to bend a bit to do this, but it will be worth it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): An advancement project which you've been working on will now be easy to complete. Avoid any arguments with your mate.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't take out your aggravations on friends; find a more sensible outlet. Be objective in your everyday dealings and get good results.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You are able to meet a person you have long wanted to contact. This person can give you some information which will be very useful.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♠ 2 ♦ Pass Pass
4 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♦

We've all heard that, at times, you have to take one step backward to take two steps forward. This hand is surely the bridge equivalent of that principle.

There are those who would open the South hand with a demand bid. While we are not strongly opposed to such action, our personal taste is for slightly more in the way of high cards for such action. We like the way South bid his hand, and have even higher regard for the way he played his four-spade contract!

West made his normal opening lead of the king of diamonds, taken by the ace. It would seem that, since dummy is entryless, the contract hinges on finding West with the ace of clubs. After the early play revealed that East had more trumps than West, and that West had started with six diamonds, declarer found a hidden line that guaranteed the contract. It involved losing an unnecessary trick, but getting back two in return.

The king of spades forced the ace, and declarer took care to ruff the diamond return with the six as East failed to follow. When West showed out on the queen of spades, declarer could claim his contract. He cashed the jack of trumps and ace-king of hearts, then threw East on lead by exiting with the three of trumps!

Poor East was faced with losing alternatives. A heart return would be into dummy's tenace, allowing declarer to discard two club losers. And a club would make the king of clubs an entry for declarer to take a discard on the queen of hearts. Either way, declarer would lose only two trump tricks and a club.
