Budget Plan OK'd But Cuts Coming Anyway

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House and congressional negotiators today reached tentative agreement on a two-year, $75 billion deficit-reduction pact and plans were being made for a White House announcement.

Nevertheless, President Reagan intended under the Gramm-Rudman law to order $23 billion in across-the-board cuts to kick in by midnight. "I think we have an agreement," said House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas.

"A lot of people have said it is short of heroic expectations," he said, adding that it was the best that could be done given the divisions in Congress and with the White House.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., called a Capitol Hill meeting of House and Senate leaders and the president's top aides to review the product of the four weeks of talks.

The goal of the meeting was "closure," said Byrd's spokeswoman, Linda Peek, and if there were no last-minute snags the congressional leaders would go to the White House for an announcement.

The talks were originally aimed at avoiding the automatic spending cuts of the Gramm-Rudman law by producing a substitute deficit-reduction plan.

The Gramm-Rudman cuts would trim 8.5 percent from domestic agencies, spanning a range of programs from farm price supports to education to law enforcement. Social Security, welfare and veterans programs are protected, however.

White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. said Thursday night that, as far as the president was concerned, the clock had run out and the cuts were to be imposed today.

The tentative agreement would cut the deficit in fiscal 1988, which began Oct. 1, by about $30 billion, including about $9 billion in as-yet-undetermined new taxes. Ground rules for drafting the tax bill, which would raise $14 billion in fiscal 1989, was one of the final issues in the talks.

The agreement would restrain both domestic and military spending. Federal agencies would be forced to absorb many inflationary costs. Pentagon spending would be held to about $285.4 billion this year, about $12 billion less than Reagan requested but more than the House had approved.

With the tentative agreement still being revised, large numbers of House and Senate Republicans were already opposing it.

House Majority Leader Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said he considered the tentative agreement, which he cautioned was not yet finished, would clearly meet its primary goal of supplanting the automatic cuts of the Gramm-Rudman law with more selective deficit cuts.

"I do not consider the agreement as failing in any respect," said Foley.

Kennedy Hearings Scheduled Dec. 14

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confirmation hearings for Supreme Court nominee Anthony M. Kennedy will begin Dec. 14, the Senate Judiciary Committee said today.

Peter Smith, spokesman for the committee chairman, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said the date was agreed to by the committee's ranking Republican, Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, and White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr.

Biden said on Thursday that no matter when hearings began, Senate floor debate would not likely begin until the first week in February.

He said the hearings could be wrapped up in three to five days, compared to 12 days for Robert H. Bork's confirmation hearings.

Shultz Joining Talks On Arms

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz will meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze next Monday and Tuesday in Geneva, where an arms control treaty continues to elude negotiators.

The announcement was made in Washington by the State Department and in Moscow by the Soviet news agency Tass.

The brief State Department announcement stressed they also would discuss regional conflicts and a "full range of issues" on the U.S.-Soviet agenda. A U.S. official, who demanded anonymity, said Shultz would also go to Brussels on Wednesday to report to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization foreign ministers.

In the arms control field, the official said, Shultz and Shevardnadze would focus as much on hopes for an agreement next year to reduce strategic nuclear weapons as on the elusive treaty to ban medium-range missiles.

In the regional area, he said, the top two items for discussion are the Iran-Iraq war and U.S. efforts to persuade the Soviets to withdraw the Red Army from Afghanistan.

School Task Force Briefed On Changes

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

"It's now study time," according to Pitt County School Superintendent Eddie West as he presented to the school system's futures task force a demographic breakdown of specific economic and academic conditions in Pitt County Thursday night.

West's presentation to the task force, a committee of community leaders and school personnel selected to address predictable major changes in population, demographics and other areas, was the last of four made to the group. The information will be organized and synthesized into a report to be submitted to the Pitt County Board of Education.

Saying he had brought the information he thought was most important to the goals of the task force, West told members Pitt County had grown more between 1970 and 1983 than either North Carolina or the United States as a whole.

West noted that 59.8 percent of the mothers (over 16 years of age with children 6-years old or younger) in Pitt County were in the labor force in 1980, compared to 58.3 percent for the state and 46.3 percent for the nation.

West showed task force members a chart demonstrating projected population changes in the Pitt County schools between 1985-86 and 1990-91. According to West's figures, there will be a 4.4 percent increase in K-5 students, a 6.5 percent increase in sixth through eighth grade students and a 1.8 percent increase in high school students.

The schools in the system are racially and sexually balanced, West said, noting that the black-to-white and female-to-male ratios are almost 50-50 in every grade.

Another statistic West presented showed a slight drop overall in student CAT (California Achievement Test) scores in comparing 1982 scores with 1986 scores. West attributed this to a new CAT, which he said was more difficult and up to date than the one administered in 1982.

The largest drop came on language scores, while mathematics scores

VW Closing One Of Two U.S. Plants

NEW STANTON, Pa. (AP) — Volkswagen said today it will permanently close its western Pennsylvania automobile production plant employing 2,500 people, with the shutdown coming sometime next year.

Volkswagen, in an announcement from its corporate headquarters in Wolfsburg, West Germany, said the decision was due to declining demand for the cars produced at the factory, about 50 miles southeast of Pittsburgh.

Volkswagen said that its Fort Worth, Texas, factory, which produces air conditioning equipment and other parts, would remain open.

The statement said that the production would stop at the Pennsylvania plant at "the end of the 1988 model year." The statement did not specify a date.

The first car, a white two-door Rabbit, was assembled at the Westmoreland County plant on April 10, 1978. The millionth car was driven off the assembly line Nov. 14, 1985.

Volkswagen of America Inc. acquired the plant in 1976 from the Chrysler Corp. and moved from a shell building with a dirt floor to full production in just 18 months.

Rabbit production was phased out in June 1984 and the plant was refitted for the production of the company's Golf and GTI models.

John Taylor, spokesman for Pennsylvania Gov. Robert Casey, said state government officials were advised of the closing today. He said Casey has summoned officials of the company to Harrisburg to discuss the matter.

Geography Specialist Says Blacks Returning To South

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

"These are very, very trying times" for blacks as American economics and demographics change, an associate professor of geography at the University of California at Los Angeles said in an interview at East Carolina University Thursday.

Dr. James H. Johnson Jr., a native of Falkland, was in Greenville Thursday as the keynote speaker for National Geography Awareness Week activities at ECU. His address and the interview focused on black counterstream migration from metropolitan areas, especially Los Angeles, back to the South.

He noted that from 1975 to 1980 four metropolitan areas — Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit and New York — experienced a deficit in their number of blacks coming into the cities. Only Los Angeles, with about 40,000 newcomers, gained black residents, but it signified a sharp decrease from previous years.

Through studies sponsored by a grant from the Ford Foundation, Johnson said he found the South gained about 85,000 blacks from 1980 to 1985. He characterized them into groups such as returns or natives of the South, primary migrants or new-

Cuba Will Allow More Emigration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Cuba have reached an agreement under which up to 27,000 Cubans will be allowed to emigrate to this country annually, a State Department official said today.

In return, Cuba has agreed to repatriate the more than 2,700 Cubans who came to the United States in 1980 aboard the Mariel boat lift but have been ineligible to remain because of mental illness or past criminal records, the official said.

The agreement was worked out between U.S. and Cuban officials during an unannounced meeting this week in Mexico City.

The accord is similar to the one the two countries negotiated in December 1984 but which was suspended by Cuba the following May in protest against Radio Marti, a Voice of America broadcast operation to Cuba.

Changes In Road Program Will Delay U.S. 264 Wilson Bypass

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

An increase in costs — particularly in right-of-way acquisition — has caused the Department of Transportation to delay a planned four-lane U.S. 264 bypass at Wilson.

Randy Doub of Greenville, a member of the Board of Transportation, said today the Transportation Improvement Plan approved by the state board a week ago delays the 13.1-mile project for two years.

Last year's TIP, which estimated the cost of the project at $62.1 million, scheduled right-of-way acquisition to begin in fiscal 1993 and construction to begin in fiscal 1994.

But the TIP approved last Friday estimates the cost of the project at $69.75 million and schedules right-of-way acquisition to begin in fiscal 1993, with construction scheduled for fiscal 1996.

"Two years ago," Doub said, "it was a $55.1 million project. A lot of the increase is in right-of-way costs. It's something we're seeing all over the state."

"When you get a $14 million increase, you have to stretch it out some," he said to be able to pay for the increase.

Doub said "a similar thing" has occurred with the proposed northwest Greenville bypass, which was kept on schedule in the new TIP (for right-of-way acquisition in fiscal 1988 and 1989 and construction to begin in fiscal 1990) at a cost of $38 million. "It was first included in the TIP at $17.1 million," Doub said.

But he suggested that the bypass at Greenville is needed more than the Wilson bypass.

Doub said "you have one option" in Greenville. All the traffic coming into the city on the new four-lane U.S. 264 "runs into a dead-end at Memorial Drive (and has) to take a left turn."

"In Wilson, you've got several different ways to get through," Doub said, including the present U.S. 264 bypass, the business route through town or N.C. 42 north of Wilson.

The new TIP includes $16.3 million for the purchase of right-of-way for the Wilson bypass and $53.4 million for construction. Last year's TIP estimated right-of-way costs at $10

Hayes said a carton of cigarettes was taken from Harris Super Market on East 10th St. in an incident reported at 6:30 p.m. Hayes said that Jaja Lynn McDade, 16, of 401A Azelea Gardens was charged with shoplifting in connection with the incident.

Reunion Planning

The 1968 graduating class of C.M. Eppes High School will meet Saturday at 4 p.m. at the home of Charles Gatlin, 717-D Hooker Road. Plans for the 20th class reunion will be discussed.

For more information call 756-7358 or 757-3614.

Team Won Trophy

Stokes Elementary School's fourth- and fifth-grade soccer team recently won second place in the annual soccer tournament at Wellcome Middle School.

The team received a trophy and a special activity for the first- through third-grade team and fourth- and fifth-grade team is being planned.

Sheryl Clifton's exceptional class at the school participated in the Special Olympics basketball tournament sponsored by the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department. Students participated in various activities and won first through fourth place ribbons and awards. Teresa Green was chosen to compete in the state Special Olympics in Elizabeth City in December.

Theft Arrests

Investigators said arrests were made in connection with two of three thefts reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officer S.A. Person said a 1983 Dodge van was taken from Carwerks Inc. at 220 Airport Road in an incident reported at 8:25 a.m. But Officer N.B. Rice said the van was recovered at Ninth and Washington streets about 4:25 a.m. today and Michael Stevenson, 22, of 404 Gum Road, who was driving the vehicle at the time, was charged with possession of stolen property.

Officer J.G. Bridges said a bicycle

Three Arrested In Theft Cases

Greenville police since Tuesday have arrested three people in connection with theft cases reported to the department in past months.

Detective T.V. Woolard said Robert Lee Taylor, 30, of Route 2, Windsor, was arrested about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday on breaking, entering and larceny charges in connection with a break-in at Anthony's Food Mart on West Fifth Street in July 11, 1984, and said John Ray Hopkins, 27, of Route 11, Greenville, was arrested about 3:50 p.m. Wednesday on auto larceny charges in connection with the theft of a car from 103 W. 13th St. on Oct. 3 of this year.

Woolard also said Eddie Carl Strickland, 30, of Route 4, Greenville, was arrested about 12:30 p.m. Thursday on charges of insurance fraud and filing a false police report.

According to the officer, Strickland, who reported his car as being stolen on Oct. 29, recovered the vehicle — wrecked on a rural road — himself a half-hour after reporting it stolen. Woolard said Strickland later filed an insurance claim and collected more than $1,900.

Education Events

National Children's Book Week and National Community Education Week will be celebrated through "Connecting the Generations Through Reading" at Carolina East Mall Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Activities include presentations by the North Pitt High School Library Club, storytellers, the Chicod Chorus, the North Pitt Chorus and Jazz Band.

There will be a read-a-thon from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. with a goal of 300 participants and face painting, a poster contest, bookmarks and balloons.

The event is sponsored by Pitt County Community Schools, the North Pitt High School Library Club and John Moore of North Pitt High School.

Adjustment Board Denies Use Permit

The Greenville Board of Adjustment has denied a request to renew a permit maintaining the operation of Beau's Nightclub in the Carolina East Center.

The board denied the request when its petitioner, James A. Arnold Jr., did not attend a scheduled meeting in the City Council chambers Thursday night.

When contacted about the action today, Arnold said he was unaware of the board's ruling and that he would contact city officials regarding the matter.

The board also granted a special use permit requested by The Jockey Club and Phillip K. Flowers to operate a nightclub in Suite 13 of the Flowers Office Complex, 101 W. 14th St.

In other action, the board granted a request to operate a service station at 101 E. 10th St.; approved a variance to use a detached garage as a dwelling unit at 310 E. 13th St.; granted a permit to allow the sale and rental of light construction equipment at 101 Hooker Road; continued a special use permit to operate a salon and health club at 2408 S. Charles St.; granted a special use permit to operate a specialty and accessory furniture store at 612 E. 10th St.; and continued a special use permit to operate an automobile service station on the southwest corner of Stantonburg Road and Memorial Drive.

PCC Board To Meet

The Pitt Community College Board of Trustees will meet Monday at 11 a.m. in the board room of the White Building on campus.

Bids received for the renovation of the old library facilities in the Humber Building will be considered.

The meeting is being held in lieu of the regularly scheduled meeting Nov. 26.

Mission Dedication

Greenville Mayor-elect Ed Carter will dedicate the Faith House Mission at 1112 Dickinson Ave. on Saturday at 7 p.m.

The mission houses students from East Carolina University who are pursuing undergraduate and graduate degree programs, and individuals who qualify for rehabilitative services to become productive citizens of the Greenville community.

The mission also provides free clothing and some household goods for the needy through a clothes basket service.

Reception At PCC

The Compensatory Education Program at Pitt Community College recently held a reception for its students' family members, community leaders and PCC staff.

A slide presentation illustrating activities and materials used in the classes taught through Project S.E.E., the special compensatory education program at PCC, was featured.

Class Had Guests

Carol Whitaker's first-grade class at Stokes Elementary School was visited recently by Bettye Hinnant and Doreen MacDougall, student nurses in the East Carolina University School of Nursing.

The guests discussed how they use the five senses in their jobs, and students were lead in activities and experiments to discover how to use their senses.

Outstanding Teacher

Lynn F. Howard of Huntersville has been named the Outstanding Earth Science Teacher in North Carolina for 1987.

Howard, who teaches at J.M. Alexander Junior High School in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg County school system, was to receive a $500 award, a plaque and other honors today at a meeting of the North Carolina Science Teachers Association in Greensboro.

The award is presented by the National Association of Geology Teachers as part of its nationwide program to recognize excellence in teaching earth science in each state and region.

North Carolina winners were announced by Dr. Charles Q. Brown of Greenville, professor and chairman of the geology department at East Carolina University. Brown is president of the southeastern section of NAGT.

Fellowship Planned

The Nobles and Daughters of Iris will have a pre-Thanksgiving fellowship with their families Sunday at 4 p.m. with a Dutch buffet at Bill's Restaurant, Downing Street, Wilson.

At 6 p.m., there will be a social hour at the Temple.

Office Nomination

Jean Tripp, health occupations teacher at Ayden-Grifton High School, has accepted the nomination for president-elect of the North Carolina Health Occupations Teacher Association for 1988.

The elections will be held during the North Carolina Summer Vocational Workshop Aug. 4 in Greensboro.

Ms. Tripp designed and planned implementation of a "New Teacher Survival Kit" to be used by North Carolina vocational teachers. She also initiated an annual "New Professionals Scholarship" to be awarded to a new teacher in each discipline of vocational education. The scholarship will be used for professional development activities in the summer workshop.

Presentation Made

Kim Dawson and Tammy Waters, president and treasurer, respectively, of Health Occupations Students of America at Ayden-Grifton High School, helped to promote awareness of the "silent killer," hypertension, by presenting a talk on the causes of hypertension, how to change lifestyles to prevent it, how to modify diets and when to seek medical attention.

The officers demonstrated the proper procedure for taking a blood pressure. Club members served as patients.

Peel Endowment

The J. Woolard Peel University Scholars Award endowment fund has been established at East Carolina University in memory of the late Martin County resident and former mayor of Everetts.

The endowment was funded by Peel's wife, Helen K. Peel of Everetts, and their son, Dr. Jesse R. Peel of Atlanta.

A University Scholars Award provides full tuition and fees for a recipient's entire four years at ECU. University Scholars are chosen on the basis of superior academic and leadership capabilities through a competitive selection process.

J. Woolard Peel earned a bachelor's degree in 1935 from North Carolina State University and was mayor of Everetts from 1947 to 1963. He served in Europe in World War II as a U.S. Army captain. He was a lifelong Martin County resident and farmer before his death in 1986.

A Los Angeles native, Wheeler earned his medical degree at the University of California at Los Angeles School of Medicine.

Republican Wants To Succeed Eure

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The saying goes "Out with the old, in with the new".

State Rep. Ray Warren of Mecklenburg County hopes that saying has special significance in next year's elections.

Warren, at 30, is seeking the Republican nomination for North Carolina Secretary of State, the position which 88 year-old Thad Eure has occupied since 1936.

Warren, the state House minority whip, was in Greenville Thursday addressing a group of Republican women at a luncheon at Three Steers restaurant.

Currently, Warren is the sole GOP candidate for the position which registers and regulates corporations and securities, publishes state documents and regulates lobbyists.

"Hopefully, I won't have a primary," he said. "I think the Republicans have an excellent shot to win, and I don't want to see the party divided up in a primary."

Warren said he feels the state needs a young leader as secretary of state, who can assimilate the highly fluid and changing business world.

He said he wants to be a part of a bipartisan movement for modernization and reform in the state government.

"There's a tremendous amount of data (involved), and what I see the next secretary of state having to do, is to be able to manage that data efficiently, and the way you manage data is changing rapidly," he said.

Warren points out that in terms of technology, what was efficient in 1980 is not necessarily efficient in 1986, and by 1990, that efficiency may be outdated.

"The position needs someone young enough, someone in touch with the changing financial world to adapt to those changes," he added.

Warren said he has no complaints about Eure, who already had served 21 years in that capacity when Warren was born.

"I don't have any criticism of Thad," Warren said, "but what he did was appropriate for the time period 1936 through 1986. The next secretary of state is going to have to be appropriate for the 1990s."

Warren, born and raised near Charlotte, graduated cum laude from UNC-Wilmington in 1979, with a bachelor's degree in history.

While studying for his undergraduate degree, Warren started a college Republican club.

"It became clear to me after the 1976 elections that there would never be a Democratic presidential candidate that I'd support," he said. "I was more conservative than that and the Republican party was just the natural place for me to be."

After graduation, Warren returned to Charlotte and worked in real estate as a licensed real estate broker. Warren then went to law school at UNC at Chapel Hill, graduating in 1983.

REP. RAY WARREN

He said the Republican Party in Mecklenburg County at that time was looking for a candidate to run for the state Legislature.

"I filed against a two-term incumbent, and wasn't given much of a chance," he said. "I had very good demographics, however; 40 percent of the registered voters were Republican, and I won the election."

In 1986, Republicans in the state Legislature elected Warren minority whip (second in command).

If elected, one of Warren's key concerns is to seek changes in the laws regulating lobbyists.

"Lobbyists are paid hundreds of thousands of dollars to influence the state Legislature, and they don't have to report, in any great detail, where their money comes from, or how they spend it," he said.

Warren says these reporting requirements are ridiculously weak and need to be changed.

"The Democrats will not do it. It's their system. They made the laws the way they are, and it's ridiculous to think they're going to reform them," he said.

Warren said he is not looking past the secretary of state election. "This is not a stepping stone for me," he said. "This is what I want to do."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Lifeline Needed

The Pamlico and Albemarle sounds are drowning, and they can't wait five years to be thrown a lifeline.

A five-year state and federally funded study on the problems plaguing the waterways is essential. The study will provide concrete data on water quality and factual information on the sources of stress for the sounds. From this data, objective decisions on environmental issues can be made. In addition, long-range use and protection plans for the waterways can be drawn. For this reason, the study should receive the support of the public and those who use the sounds.

But the waterways — especially the Pamlico — can't wait half a decade for help.

Municipal wastes, farm runoff, industrial discharges, drained wetlands and overfishing have exceeded the sounds' capacities. If data on declining water quality isn't convincing enough, then take a look at ulcerous fish sores, diseased crabs and retreating oyster beds as evidence. Some environmental measures addressing these problems — even if temporarily — should be devised and implemented now.

The pressures on the Pamlico-Albemarle estuary are immense. Some 553 upstream municipal treatment plants, schools and industries dump treated and untreated contaminants into the estuary. Eroding farmland bleeds fertilizer nitrogen into the water, robbing the water of oxygen as it decomposes and killing fish. Fishing methods can kill 20 to 30 pounds of undersized young fish for every pound of marketable catch. The coastal population is expected to double by the year 2,000 — a fact which will significantly increase all these stresses.

Granted, a long-term solution must address all the factors that contribute to the waterways' troubles. Researchers already know the simple solutions. Scientists know not to build a trailer park or boat ramp in a marsh. They know not to approve draining wetlands for development. Now they need to assess the impact of all these no-nos. To do so effectively requires the big picture perspective the five-year joint study can provide.

But harm to the estuary will only increase in the period the study is under way. As the phases of the study are complete, stop-gap measures must be devised to minimize further deterioration. The waterways should not be allowed to sink under the expert scrutiny of researchers.

Not Governing

The U.S. Senate and House investigating committees have announced the final report on the Iran-Contra affair and the findings are bad news for the White House circle as well as for the president, personally.

There is nothing ambiguous in the report about assigning the blame.

These committees found no direct evidence suggesting that the president was a knowing participant in the effort to deceive Congress and the American public. But it makes it clear the president's actions and statements contributed to the deception. Nothing could be more explicit.

The report comes three months after a summer-long hearing into secret sales of United States weapons to Iran and the diversion of some profits to forces fighting to overthrow the government of Nicaragua, a government with which America maintains diplomatic relations.

Reagan is fond of repeating a Trumanesque slogan that "the buck stops here," and he's repeated it time and again. But the president also insists he really didn't know all the details of the Iran-Contra project and of what was going on.

Something is terribly incongruent here.

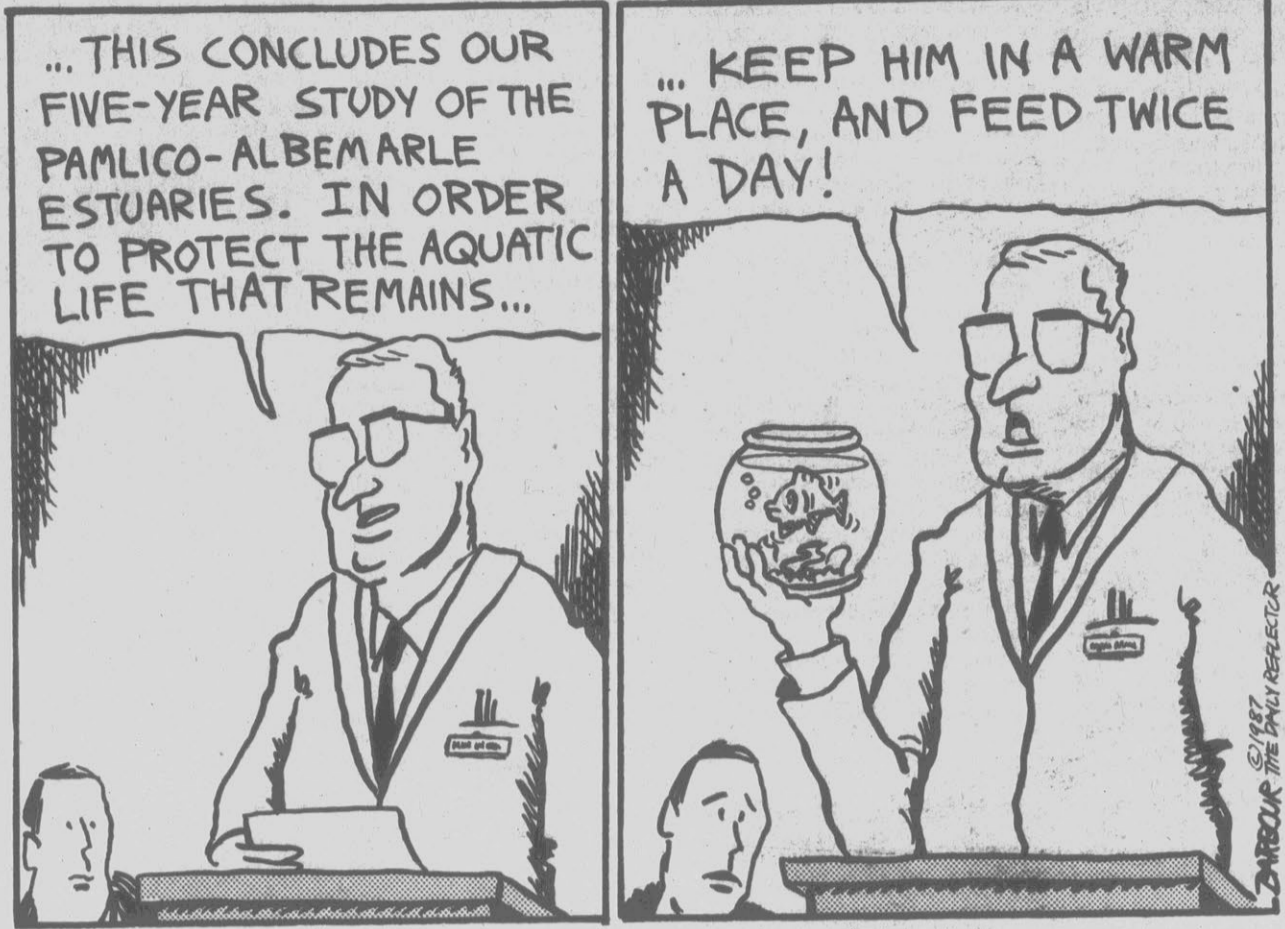

If Reagan didn't know what his national security advisers were up to, he should have. After all, it was his desk where the proverbial "buck stopped." The situation prompts the image of a White House in disarray, an executive branch not able to manage its own affairs.

Investigators were unable to substantiate Lt. Col. Oliver North's story about CIA Director William Casey's deep knowledge of the Iran-Contra program but concluded Casey did encourage North and adviser John Poindexter in the project and promoted the concept of an extralegal covert operation.

On that point they had no proof, and apparently based their opinion on testimony by North and Poindexter who together admitted "misleading" Congress and the American public.

Six Republicans on the House investigative panel and two on the Senate panel felt it necessary to say they found no wrongdoing by the administration, only possible "errors of judgment." That statement alone is frightening in these days when so much depends on best-judgment calls.

There's no avoiding the pungent truth the report presents: the recognized head of our government was not governing.

Power Flowing To The Center

'The constructives in both branches and both parties will not leave the field to the destructives. The distemper of the immoderates is the anger of creeping impotence. Once again, power is flowing to the Center.'

In the long history of scapegoating, few incidents surpass in gall attempts to blame those in the Reagan administration — White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker, Treasury Secretary James Baker and Secretary of State George Shultz — whose advice, if accepted, might have prevented the president's recent troubles. But there is an air of desperation in the shrill references on the Right to "gutless wonders," in the demands that moderates be booted. It betrays the fact that, in the waning days of the administration, the "immoderates," weakened by their own failures and excesses, are losing their leverage.

The current debate reminds us that the really important distinctions in American politics are those between "constructives" and "destructives," between those who seek common ground on which to unite Americans and those who would destroy that labor of community by imposing their own divisive values on others.

Which brings us to Patrick J. Buchanan, a prototypical destructive. Buchanan's familiar diatribes grow more acrid as he flirts with the tantalizing notion that he, himself might be the messiah of the Right. To be sure Buchanan glosses his tirades with protestations of continuing fealty to Ronald Reagan, but they ring hollow. They are the mouthpieces of a frustrated manipulator, a sycophant who still hopes that playing on the president's vanity and prejudice will lead Reagan to adopt the policies Buchanan favors.

Buchanan and his cronies seem scarcely aware of the utter condescension they exhibit toward President Reagan. The vicious polemics against the two Bakers, Shultz and Alan Greenspan, against those GOP legislators he portrays as "cocker spaniels" — these are essentially admissions that Buchanan does not trust Reagan to be his own man. Contempt is never so contemptible as when it wears the garb of feigned regard.

That wormwood and gall percolate through Buchanan's circles is not surprising. While Buchanan extols the "us-versus-them politics of the flank that today dominates both parties," Reagan, no less than his chief of staff and Republican leaders in Congress, understands that polarization has its limits. Confrontation may be a useful entering position, but if it is the only posture assumed by a president, it guarantees paralysis and impotence.

Reagan has learned to identify potential allies, where his fanatic camp followers count only enemies. For all his steadfastness in holding to certain principles, Reagan has shown time and again that he wants results. That instinct is alien to Buchanan et al. They are content to strike bold stances without regard to the consequences.

For what have the Buchanan types actually done for Reagan? They have sniped at any hint of diversity in his administration. They have exploited backroom power to thwart confirmation of innumerable Reagan appointees — and then had the chutzpah to complain when others dared openly to oppose presidential nominees they favor. They have embarrassed Reagan and the country by sowing the seeds of disunity in the administration and advertising its disarray to the world.

They have goaded Reagan into carrying good ideas too far, leaving fiscal excesses that bred today's horrific deficits and defense-spending excesses that sapped popular support for the long-haul investments needed for national security. They have robbed his party of its powerful critique of the Democrats as the party of "tax and spend," and armed his adversaries with the potent critique that Republicans are the party of "borrow-and-spend." And now, having wreaked such political and economic havoc, they damn the Bakers and other constructives for attempting to clear the debris and heal the wounds.

The vitriol spread by the destructives betrays a profoundly anti-American animus, a disrespect for the opinions of fellow citizens and a compulsion to suppress them. Speaking the language of religious war, they aim explicitly to set Americans against each other, all the while proclaiming patriotic devotion. A strange nationalism, that; it wraps itself in the flag to justify condemning fellow countrymen.

There is no escaping the invidious comparison to authoritarians of the right and left — the fascists and Bolsheviks of other lands and times — that Buchanan evokes by his glorification of executive leadership and hostility toward Congress, by his exaltation of the "politics of passion" and his depiction of opponents as "kennel-fed hounds" rather than "attack dogs." But, as spokesmen for the authoritarian fringe, the Buchanan faction is selling hard to a shrinking market. The constructives in both branches and both parties — including Ronald Reagan — will not leave the field to the destructives. The distemper of the immoderates is the anger of creeping impotence. Once again, power is flowing to the Center.

Assistance Practical As Well As Moral

Hunger. Long the forgotten issue on the world agenda, it blazed briefly in public consciousness during the African famine of 1985 and abruptly faded from attention again.

But even if hunger has vanished from public debate, the gnawing problem continues — and grows. Half a billion people endure numbing malnutrition each day, often too weak to work or too debilitated even to produce the food they need to energize themselves. That number is growing, not diminishing.

The growth of chronic hunger not only presents the glaring paradox of want in the midst of plenty; in fact, the grinding poverty itself actually helps create gluts of unsold food. The ample surpluses of American agriculture, with production capacity 40 percent in excess of domestic needs, would find eager buyers in the fast-growing countries of the developing world if only their people could earn money with which to buy them.

A decade ago hunger emerged as a major issue on the global agenda. As secretary of state, Henry Kissinger went so far as to set an ambitious goal for both the United States and the world community: the elimination of world hunger by 1980. Long-range programs to accomplish both food and development strategies were established, funding was provided and considerable progress was made, even if the goal was not quite reached.

After 1980 hunger disappeared as an issue. The United States' multilateral development aid was slashed from $2.3 billion in 1980 to $949 million this year. Our three-year commitment to the International Fund for Agricultural Development fell from $254 million pledged for 1981-83 to $80 million pledged for 1987-89. Our Food for Peace allocation was halved in just two years, from $2 billion in 1985 to $1.1 billion today. And for 1986-87, payments on our $101 million obligation to the United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization have amounted to only $13 million.

No wonder the numbers of chronically hungry are growing once again. The United States has gone in default on a serious moral obligation, which is hardly attenuated by the episodic response to public concern about outright famine two years ago. This is the thrust of a new report titled "A Time To Plant: International Cooperation to End Hunger" by the United Nations Association of the United States.

This is truly a moral obligation of first priority. At the same time, it is an economic issue of inestimable importance for American agriculture. For an all-out development war to conquer world hunger is also at the core of building future markets for agricultural products.

The plain fact is that the necessary markets for American farmers are not in Japan and the countries of Western Europe. The fastest-growing markets today for U.S. food exports are the developing countries that are undergoing rapid economic growth. South Korea, once a poverty-stricken recipient of U.S. food aid, is now purchasing more than $2 billion a year in American farm products — even as its own food output grows by a healthy 3 percent a year. Brazil, while expanding its agricultural production by 5 percent a year (and becoming a stiff U.S. competitor in the soybean sector), increased the volume of its imports of U.S. farm commodities by 15 percent over the last decade.

There is, in short, a fundamental relationship between the crisis of hunger in the developing world and the crisis of surplus in U.S. agriculture. The solution to both crises lies in rapid growth of earning power in the Third World. And economic expansion in developing countries must be led by rising purchasing power in the rural sector, where the bulk of Third World people live. That underscores the importance of carefully targeted international development aid that can spark increased productivity and an economic take-off.

It is increasingly clear that poorer nations' development policies need to be targeted to the poor in rural villages. Growth in their purchasing power both fuels local consumer industries (generating increases in urban income) and allows them to buy more varied foods. Similarly, development aid provided by wealthier countries, both directly and through multilateral institutions, should focus more on investment in productive "micro-enterprises" among the poor. Happily, initiatives in Congress to do just that have recently gained ground.

This is the epiphany that American policy makers must recognize: American interest in Third World rural development is practical as well as moral. The dollars invested in multilateral development banks are creating consumers, not competitors, and carefully targeted food aid stimulates productivity, not passivity. The possibility becomes ever more real of restoring a broad constituency against hunger amid this "action" triangle of interests: humanitarian aid, Third World development and commercial market-building.

Orville L. Freeman, a former secretary of agriculture, is chairman of the board of governors of the United Nations Association of the United States.

Strength For Today

The English man of letters, Thomas Carlyle, said facetiously of himself, "You may hear it said that I am cross-grained and disagreeable. Do not believe it. Only let me have my way at all times and I will be a paragon of sunny good nature."

Carlyle was speaking for legions of people in his own day and in ours. Nobody has trouble being pleasant when everything is going his way. The people of real self-control and inner charm are those who can still smile and be pleasant when trouble rolls down upon them like an avalanche.

We know that patience brings its reward in the fields of business, research and administration. But Jesus once said that the patience makes it possible for us to possess our very souls.

Reagan's Distrust Led To Iran-Contra

Analysis

WASHINGTON — The actions of Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, national security adviser John M. Poindexter and other officials who led American foreign policy into the disaster of the Iran-Contra scandal were the reflection of one of President Reagan's most deeply held and often-expressed convictions — that government is part of the problem, not the solution.

That assessment lay at the heart of the massive report released Wednesday by the two congressional committees after their 10-month review of the Iran-Contra affair. At bottom, the report found, it was the president's own disdain for government and its established procedures — the anti-Washington attitude around which he built his campaign for the White House seven years ago — that fostered the climate in which the scandal flourished.

"It became almost a theology for these people that government was muscle-bound, and that for America to be great again, you have to turn to these unorthodox, out-of-government operations," Arthur L. Liman, chief counsel to the Senate Iran-Contra panel, said in an interview.

North, the National Security Council aide who has come to personify the affair, put the prevailing attitude inside the White House succinctly in a December 1985 message about his new boss, national security adviser John M. Poindexter.

"My part in this was easy compared to his," North wrote. "I only had to deal with our enemies (inside Iran). He has to deal with the Cabinet."

Noting that the presidential oath of office prescribed in the Constitution requires that the chief executive shall "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," the committees' report said: "If the 'take care' clause has any vitality, it invests in a president the responsibility for cultivating a respect for the Constitution and the law by his staff and closest advisers."

In the Iran-Contra affair, the panels concluded, that respect was absent.

Instead, the report charged, a curious "cabal of zealots" carried the president's mistrust of government and preference for private action to the point of creating a secret network, outside the government and answerable to no one, to carry out policies that either had not or could not have been approved within the normal framework of American government.

The Cabinet, some of whom protested the Iran arms sales and were then excluded from knowing about them, was as much an enemy as the Iranians, the committees' report suggested. So was the Congress, which was not told of the Iranian arms sales and had already prohibited most U.S. military aid to Nicaragua rebels when the scandal unfolded.

In the committees' view, North was but one of "a small group of senior officials (who) believed that they alone knew what was right."

North's commitment to the Reagan view of government had been reinforced by his experience in the American military debacle in Vietnam. So had that of his first White House boss, former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane.

Similarly, retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, North's private operative, was a cynical veteran of the Pentagon's bumbling "Desert One" effort to rescue U.S. hostages from Tehran during the Carter administration. So were two of his deputies in the scandal, Richard Gadd and Robert Dutton.

Albert Hakim, Secord's financial partner, told this summer that he had usurped the powers of a secretary of state by negotiating U.S. foreign policy with the Iranians, shot back: "I still believe that I have it better than the secretary ... I can achieve more, too."

Felix Rodriguez and Rafael Quintero, low-level operatives in the Contra resupply network, lived through the CIA's Bay of Pigs disaster.

By many accounts, William C. Casey, former CIA director and North's apparent godfather, believed the intelligence community was hobbled by post-Watergate legal restrictions that would have been laughable in his days as a World War II spy.

Like their president, Liman said, all these participants in the Iran-Contra affair shared a disdain for what they saw as the lethargy and clumsiness of normal government procedures — disdain rooted in their own unhappy experiences of past years.

In those experiences they saw "the inability of the Pentagon, of established government, to deliver, and so you saw this kind of allusion to Desert One in a number of people," he said. "Secord can do what the Pentagon can't do, what the CIA can't do.

must observe the law, even when they disagree with it," the panels said.

"Here we had people who acknowledged that they did these things and said that they were justified in doing them because they didn't agree with the laws."

That an administration which billed itself as the bulwark of democracy would hide its most controversial actions from Congress and the public is ironic indeed, Liman said.

Yet constitutional expert James Sundquist, a Brookings Institution scholar in Washington, noted Wednesday that most scandals are remedied by passing laws to prevent future ones. Not so when it comes to preventing future Iran-Contra affairs, Sundquist said.

"All the legislation has already been passed," he said. "If the executive branch doesn't obey the law, the Congress is pretty frustrated. All they can do is chastise the president, which is what I guess they're doing now."

Supporting Sundquist's view, most of the recommendations made by the panels at the end of the majority's 427-page report are comparative raps on executive knuckles, dealing less with laws than with moral injunctions. "Government officials

No Fades

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the dreams of White House officials could somehow be turned into reality, the embarrassing findings of the congressional Iran-Contra report would be a one-day flash, fading fast from public memory.

As other presidents have tried to do in times of deep trouble, President Reagan and his aides wanted to turn the page Wednesday and put their problems behind them.

And if that doesn't work, the White House is ready to minimize the report and underscore that the majority conclusions are countered by a minority report and separate dissenting views.

Brushing aside all specific charges in the 690-page report, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "The American people have had the opportunity to make their own judgments and it serves no purpose for us to argue with the opinions of the committee members."

He called the document the culmination of "the long summer of self-examination for America and for the administration. And now we are through it. We are moving on and we trust that out of this experience has come a new wisdom about the process of governing in America."

Wisdom for whom? Reagan? His statement was ambiguous.

The report says the president wasn't doing his job properly, was not ensuring that "the laws be faithfully executed."

It pinpointed onetime White House officials Oliver L. North and John M. Poindexter as the key figures in the diversion of Iran arms-sale profits to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

However, it added, "If the president did not know what his national security advisers were doing, he should have."

Despite the White House's wish, the Iran-Contra episode surely will not die easily, as the past year of damaging revelations already has demonstrated.

Reagan's presidency has been deeply tarnished by the affair and his credibility and effectiveness have been eroded.

And there is more ahead.

Independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh is preparing a broad conspiracy charge against Poindexter, the president's onetime national security adviser, and North, a National Security Council aide, in connection with the Iran-Contra affair, according to sources familiar with the case.

Will Reagan pardon North and Poindexter? The White House won't say, arguing it's premature to discuss it.

Noting that Reagan's aides have admitted lying, shredding documents and covering up their actions, the report said those actions "do not comport with the notion of a country guided by the rule of law."

"But the president has yet to condemn their conduct," the report noted.

In a statement remarkable by the fact that he felt obliged to say it, Fitzwater declared, "The president did not violate any laws; even the majority report does not so state."

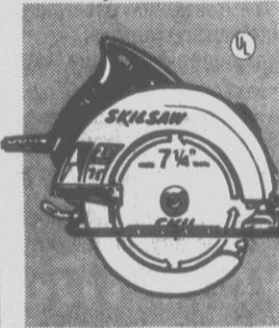

Terence Hunt has covered Ronald Reagan since his 1980 campaign for the presidency.

Explosion

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — An electric spark caused an explosion earlier this week that tore the top off a storage tank at the Caldwell County hazardous waste incinerator, the State Bureau of Investigation says.

Investigators, who reported no criminal activity is suspected in the blast, said the Tuesday explosion occurred when the spark ignited gases in the tank.

Dave Campbell of the SBI said it appears there was no damage to the remaining five tanks from the blast. He added an ultrasound test will be done to make certain the "integrity of those tanks is sound" before the incinerator is put back in operation.

Dave Wall, a spokesman for Caldwell Systems Inc., said he anticipates that the incinerator will reopen around the latter part of next week. The official closing, ordered last week by the Board of County Commissioners, could take as long as six months to a year. But once it is officially closed, Caldwell County Manager William D. Forbes said the hazardous waste incinerator probably never will operate again.

Divorce

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca and his second wife, Peggy Johnson Iacocca, put rumors of reconciliation to rest by signing papers to end their 1½ year marriage.

"These things happen, and you move on in life. What can you do?" Iacocca said Thursday afternoon after leaving the Oakland County courthouse, where Circuit Judge Robert Templin entered a divorce judgment. Neither Peggy Iacocca nor her lawyer, John Schaefer, attended the hearing.

Iacocca, questioned for about nine minutes, told Templin that he and Mrs. Iacocca had signed an agreement under which neither could collect alimony.

The agreement also included a property settlement that would neither be made public record nor divulged by either Iacocca, said Lee Iacocca's attorney, Robert Z. Feldstein. Iacocca, 63, and Peggy Johnson, 37, a native of Kinston, N.C., each wed for the second time on April 17, 1986, in New York.

Escalators

RALEIGH (AP) — Lawmakers have voted down a proposal to install escalators in the Legislative Building, but tentatively approved replacing the elevators in the 25-year-old building.

Escalators were studied as a possible solution to human traffic jams that clog the stairs and three elevators when the General Assembly is in session. But members of the Legislative Services Commission balked Wednesday when it came time to give preliminary approval to the project, which carried an estimated cost of $750,000.

In lieu of installing escalators, members of the commission agreed to pursue the replacement of the building's elevators, which are slow and tend to break down. New elevators would cost about $285,000, the commission was told.

Arrests

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Thirteen more people were arrested in Wayne County during a drug roundup on charges stemming from possession of heroin to marijuana, authorities said.

Several others were charged on alcohol violations.

Law enforcement officials began making arrests in Goldsboro and Wayne County Wednesday after a six-month investigation. Twenty-four people have been arrested.

Bonds for those arrested were set as high as $1 million, police said.

Judge Elected

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Sol G. Cherry, chief judge of the 12th District Court of Cumberland and Hoke counties, has been elected president of the N.C. Association of District Court Judges.

Cherry was elected last week at the association's meeting at Appalachian State University in Boone. Cherry succeeds Judge Harold Fowler of Arden.

Tunnels Closed

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Two tunnels on the Blue Ridge Parkway north of Asheville will be closed to visitor traffic until next spring, the National Park Service announced.

The Rough Ridge Tunnel and the Wild Acres Tunnel will undergo rehabilitation by Cowin and Company Inc. of Birmingham, Ala., at a cost of about $1.9-million. Superintendent Gary Everhardt said this week.

Lawmakers Say Tobacco Quota Likely To Be Increased Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of tobacco that U.S. growers are allowed to sell is likely to increase in 1988 for the first time in 12 years, North Carolina's two leading tobacco lawmakers say.

Republican Sen. Jesse Helms told the News and Observer of Raleigh the quota probably would increase in 1988 and could increase by as much as 15 percent by 1989. Helms said the probable increase was evidence that the 1985-86 revamping of the federal tobacco program — in which he played a leading role — was working well for farmers.

"For the first time in a dozen years," Helms said, "the prospects are very bright for tobacco farmers."

Democratic Rep. Charles Rose agreed Thursday that the quota would likely go up. But Rose — Helms' political adversary in reshaping the tobacco program — added, "I'm not ready to say it's because the tobacco program is working."

A quota increase of 5 percent would mean Tar Heel farmers could sell about 23 million more pounds of tobacco next year, said T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina. That would translate into a $35 million boost in gross tobacco income, he said.

"I wouldn't say troubled times are ever over for tobacco farmers, but we've got a little breathing spell now where things look much more secure and attractive to growers," Blalock said.

Rose and Helms Thursday continued the sparring that marked their 1985 fight over the revamped tobacco program. The new program reduced the average price support paid to growers, making domestic tobacco more competitive on world markets, and gave tobacco companies a greater say in setting the quota.

Helms said that if his basic plan had not prevailed in 1986, giving cigarette manufacturers a major role in setting quotas, "I'm confident there would not be today a tobacco program."

Under the 1986 law, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng must use a formula to decide what quota he will announce in mid-December. The formula's three main elements are: the amount of domestic tobacco that six major U.S. cigarette makers say they plan to buy; the amount of raw U.S. tobacco expected to be exported; and the amount of surplus tobacco in storage.

But Rose said a major reason for the probable increase in the 1988 quota is the decision by the two major U.S. cigarette makers this year to buy more U.S.-grown tobacco to stay on good terms with Rose and other tobacco-state legislators who lead the fight against higher cigarette taxes and proposed smoking bans.

Robert H. Miller, an economist for the U.S.

Department of Agriculture, agreed Thursday that the 1988 and 1989 quotas are likely to rise. The main reasons, he said, are that U.S. cigarette companies have indicated they plan to buy more domestic tobacco as opposed to foreign-grown leaf, and the sale of U.S.-made cigarettes is soaring in several foreign nations, especially Asian countries.

Under the highly regulated federal tobacco program, quotas are the amount of tobacco that flue-cured growers are allowed to sell in a year with the guarantee of federal price supports. The last increase in the quota for flue-cured tobacco came in 1975.

Rose said his subcommittee on tobacco and peanuts deserved some of the credit for the expected higher quota. The panel, he said, prompted a change in how the USDA calculates the quota, resulting in a larger increase based on exports of U.S. tobacco.

But Helms said that a major reason for the growth in tobacco sales was the easing of restrictions on sales of U.S.-made cigarettes in nations such as Japan — something he said he personally had lobbied for.

"I want to stop a bit short of an absolute forecast that there will be an increase in the quota," Helms said. "But the prospects look better than they have in 12 years."

Alternate Seminary Considered

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Reacting to recent turmoil at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, the moderate Southern Baptist Alliance has voted to study the possibility of starting a new Baptist seminary.

A task force will study the possibility of using professors now at Southeastern as the core faculty for the new seminary or divinity school.

The new institution would be based on the alliance's founding principles of inclusiveness for women and minorities and cooperation with other Christian faiths, the group's executive committee said Thursday.

"This could expand theological education for Baptists beyond anything we've ever done before..." said the Rev. Henry Crouch, alliance president. "I think the money is there. I think the leadership is there."

Crouch said he had already spoken with Thomas Hearn, president of Wake Forest University, about creating a divinity school on that campus.

He said discussions also have been held with officials at Mercer University in Macon, Ga., and the University of Richmond.

Federal Officials Debating Status Of Red Tide Disaster

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina is seeking federal disaster relief for damages caused by a "red tide" of toxic algae off the coast, but a similar request last year from Texas was denied, a federal disaster official says.

"We have (North Carolina's request) under consideration and there should be a decision on it in the next day or two," Bernard Kulik, deputy associate administrator for disaster assistance, said Thursday. "Now, the question is whether red tide itself meets the definition of disaster in our regulations."

Last year, Texas applied for disaster relief, saying commercial fishing had been injured by a red tide as well as a drop in salinity due to flooding. The agency only provided relief for the areas damaged because of the drop in salinity, Kulik said.

Later, Kulik said, a bill was introduced in Congress to aid the red tide area. It failed.

Under SBA rules, a "physical disaster" is defined as "a single, sudden physical event of a catastrophic nature, such as floods, riots or civil disorders, which causes severe damage."

Gov. Jim Martin called for a declaration of disaster Nov. 6, hoping to obtain low-interest SBA loans for scores of coastal businesses losing money because of the red tide. The tide, which has killed scallops and some finfish, has led the state to close about 170 miles of coastal waters to shellfishing.

In the first week alone, Martin claimed algae caused more than $676,000 in losses to fishermen, coastal hotels and restaurants.

An estimate prepared by the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, which handles disasters, predicted that shellfishermen could lose $1.5 million through December because of the red tide. Other fishermen and businesses such as restaurants, hotels, piers and seafood distributors could also lose hundreds of thousands of dollars through December, the department predicted.

The red tide, which actually is yellow and orange, is caused by a population explosion of microscopic organisms known as pyrodinium brevis.

Different strains of toxic algae blooms have occurred both south and north of North Carolina, but this is the first time the state has had an outbreak. The type affecting North Carolina is normally limited to tropical waters.

Martin Says Falling Dollar Spurs European Investors

By GEORGE BOEHMER
Associated Press Writer
FRANKFURT West Germany (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin, on the West German leg of his European tour, said today that the fall in the U.S. dollar has boosted interest among potential European investors in North Carolina.

The governor also said he discussed a trip to West Germany by the state's Winston Salem School of Arts' Band with local businessmen. The visit is slated for next year.

Martin met early today with officials from the Philipp Holzmann Ag Construction Company of Neuss, a suburb of Duesseldorf.

"We discussed Holzmann's sponsorship of a series of concerts here by the School of Arts' band in 1988," said Martin, speaking in a telephone interview. "This will be in conjunction with Duesseldorf's 750th anniversary next year."

Philipp Holzmann Ag owns the J.A. Jones Construction Company, which is located in Charlotte.

The Republican governor is on a four-nation European trip to promote trade and expansion of business investments in North Carolina.

He met with business officials in The Netherlands, France and England before arriving in West Germany Thursday.

Martin said he was "very pleased" with the interest shown by West German business officials during his meetings on Thursday in Frankfurt and Duesseldorf.

Among those attending the sessions were company officials from Mercedes-maker Daimler Benz, Teves GmbH, and Hedrich Vakuumanlagen, which have already have business interests located in North Carolina.

Officials from the West German Chamber of Commerce and several other local businessmen were also on hand.

"I'm very pleased that several people came just to learn what North Carolina has to offer," Martin said.

The governor said the fall in the U.S. dollar against the West German mark has boosted interest in North Carolina among potential West German investors.

A lower dollar makes investments in the United States cheaper for West Germans.

"These are companies who established customers in the United States when the rate of exchange was higher," Martin said. "Now they are thinking about serving the market they had previously exported to" through local facilities.

The dollar reached a 1980s high of 3.47 marks in February 1985, but has since dropped more than 50 percent, to around 1.70 marks.

"This makes it a very attractive time for us to be here," the governor said.

Martin was to meet for talks with North Rhine Westphalia state Governor Johannes Rau and other government officials later today.

Helms, New York Officials Tangle Over AIDS Funds

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — New York City officials say Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is endangering the lives of homosexuals by cutting off federal funds for safe-sex literature for gay men, but Helms says abstinence is the best safe-sex practice.

New York City Mayor Edward Koch, in a guest article Nov. 7 in The New York Times, referred to "the profound perversity of the (Helms) policy." He warned, "Cutting off federal funds to organizations like the Gay Men's Health Crisis may only help spread the disease."

In a response to Koch sent to the Times late last week, Helms wrote, "The facts are self-evident: Abstinence from sex outside of marriage, including abstinence from sodomy, is the most effective way to avoid contracting the AIDS virus."

Koch and Dr. Frank Lilly, chairman of the genetics department at the Albert Einstein School of Medicine in the Bronx, were upset over a Helms bill, passed 96-2 by the Senate last month, that would end federal support of explicit safe-sex literature for homosexual men. Four of every five AIDS cases involve homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

Lilly wrote in a letter to Helms this month, "Do you really hate them (homosexuals and intravenous drug users) so much that, instead of trying to stop the spread of HIV-infection, you want to facilitate it among them?"

A note Helms fired off Tuesday to Lilly began, "Thank you for your absurd letter of Nov. 2." It said: "I do not hate homosexuals; I do reject what they do in placing the lives of countless innocent Americans in great peril."

"Perhaps you should ask yourself whether you are seeking a solution, or whether you are part of the problem."

Koch told The Winston-Salem Journal on Thursday: "I don't want to fight Senator Helms. He wants to reduce the spread of AIDS, and so do I. You have to look at it in a responsible way."

Koch said that the Gay Men's Health Crisis has curbed the spread of AIDS in New York's homosexual community by preaching safer sexual practices.

"Senator Helms can't have it both ways," Koch said. New York does broadcast television commercials urging abstinence among young people, Koch said. But "to take the position that adults, heterosexual or homosexual, are going to engage in abstinence until they are married is another inanity."

"To deny gay advocate groups funding unless they are willing to promote heterosexual sex is an inanity," he said.

The gay health group used federal money to distribute pamphlets urging sexually active gay men to use condoms and practice safe sex. Helms told his fellow senators the literature included graphic comic books on gay sex practices and other literature that was "sickening."

He charged that the government was promoting homosexuality by subsidizing the literature, and his bill bans the use of federal money "to promote or encourage homosexual activity." It also requires that federal AIDS education efforts promote sexual abstinence outside of marriage.

Koch wrote that the literature does not promote homosexual activity, because the homosexual men it targets "already practice sex."

"They want to know how to practice it more safely," he said. "The organization tells them and thereby helps save lives."

By passing the Helms bill, Koch charged, Congress yielded to "homophobic hysteria."

Helms' reply to the Times said, "The mayor can proclaim to his heart's content that there's such a thing as 'safe sodomy' — and he can foolishly imagine that the use of condoms by homosexuals is an 'effective way' to prevent the spread of AIDS."

A staff member of The New York Times said Thursday that the paper intends to run Helms' letter but that a publication date had not been set.

White House Scraps Plans To Ask Gorbachev To Speak To Congress

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is backing off a plan to ask Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev to become the first communist leader to address a joint meeting of Congress, administration and congressional sources say.

The idea all but died Thursday after House Republican leader Robert Michel joined 79 other congressmen in asking President Reagan to find a less formal setting for lawmakers to meet with Gorbachev during the Dec. 7-10 summit.

Faced with a GOP revolt, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater issued assurances that "we have not proposed or asked for a special session of Congress.... The Soviets are considering what they want to do, and will let us know in a few days."

Another senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said, "I would be very surprised if he (Gorbachev) ever ends up addressing a joint meeting."

Michel, R-Ill., said asking Gorbachev to address a joint meeting of Congress "would be a terrible mistake and I have relayed my views to the State Department."

Aides to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said "a White House liaison officer" had requested that Gorbachev be invited to address a joint meeting of Congress, and that Wright and Senate Majority leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., had set the time for 10 a.m. on Dec. 9.

"A request for a visit by a leader is made by the White House and then the speaker and the majority leader come up with the time when it would be best to do this," said Charmayne Marsh, Wright's spokeswoman.

An aide to Byrd said the majority leader endorsed the idea in a meeting last Friday with the Soviet ambassador to Washington, Yuri Dubinin.

Three congressional sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the idea was discussed without any apparent objections Tuesday at a breakfast meeting attended by Wright, Byrd, White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr., Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and James C. Miller III, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Some Democrats said the dispute was between the White House and the conservative wing of the Republican Party.

"If they don't want Mr. Gorbachev here, all they have to do is pick up the telephone and say, 'We don't want it,'" said another Wright aide, Wilson Morris.

"Really, it's a fight between the president and his own party. When they settle it, they can let us know. There is no reason to point fingers."

The Democratic whip, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, endorsed the proposed appearance, saying that "giving Gorbachev the cold shoulder is no way to end the Cold War."

Byrd said an appearance by Gorbachev "would make sense only if the Soviets would agree in advance to allow Reagan to address the Soviet people live and unedited and through his own interpreter on prime-time Soviet television."

Fitzwater said administration officials had told the Soviets that "if there is any kind of nationwide address (by Gorbachev), we would want the same kind of opportunity in the Soviet Union."

Asked whether Gorbachev had been invited formally to address Congress, Fitzwater said "not as far as we're concerned."

Negotiators Clash Over Treaty Limits

TOOLEE ARMY DEPOT, Utah (AP) — A top Soviet arms negotiator has proposed a May deadline for an international treaty to reduce and eventually ban chemical weapons, but his U.S. counterpart rejected the idea.

Yuri Nazarkin made the proposal Thursday after he and five other Soviets arrived to visit the Army's chemical weapons disposal plant. The delegation was to tour the prototype plant 50 miles southwest of Salt Lake City today.

Despite U.S.-Soviet differences on verification and other matters, Nazarkin said in an interview that a treaty could be reached by late May, when the third session of the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva is scheduled.

"I think it is feasible if the other side takes a more optimistic approach," said Nazarkin, the top Soviet bargainer on chemical weapons.

Chief U.S. negotiator Max Friedersdorf said he would not accept an arbitrary deadline before all details were worked out.

Friedersdorf said in an interview that the Soviets want the deadline to put congressional and public pressure on U.S. negotiators.

"The Soviets are always wanting to set artificial deadlines," he said. "We don't deal with them on trust; we deal with them on making a treaty so tightly bound and ironclad that they can't cheat."

On Thursday, the Soviets tried on gas masks, and were shown live and simulated chemical bombs, rockets, mortar rounds and mines from the U.S. arsenal.

The weapons are filled with liquid nerve or mustard agents, which are vaporized and dispersed by explosives on impact. Nerve agents attack the central nervous system, while mustard agents blister the skin, mucous membranes and lungs.

The Soviet Union refused to attend a United Nations workshop at the plant in 1983, but earlier this year accepted an invitation from the State Department's Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

New York's Bond Rating Upgraded

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City's bond rating has been raised by the Standard & Poor's Corp., reflecting what the rating agency called a vote of confidence in the city's ability to manage its finances.

The hike to A- from BBB+, announced Thursday by Mayor Edward I. Koch and Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin, was the city's highest since 1975.

Koch called S&P's decision "wonderful news, particularly since the decision was made following recent events on Wall Street."

"It clearly demonstrates confidence in our ability ... to manage the city's budget and finances while providing city services, to react aggressively and wisely when confronted with adversities," he said.

The change ranks New York on a par with Boston and Chicago, but below the AA rating given Atlanta and Los Angeles, and the AAA of Dallas, the New York Times reported in today's editions.

Still in the BBB category are Detroit and St. Louis, and Philadelphia is at BBB+, it added.

In practical terms, the higher rate means New York City will be able to pay lower interest rates when it sells bonds, while outstanding bonds should be worth more on the open market.

In making the change, Standard & Poor's officials said they were recognizing the city's willingness to cut spending and keep the budget in balance, regardless of whether the economy was weakening, the Times said.

Municipalities typically sell bonds to raise money for major projects.

New York underwent a fiscal crisis in the mid-1970s and was not able to sell bonds until April 1981.

Energy Costs Drop But Consumer Prices Rise Slightly In October

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose a moderate 0.4 percent in October as a decline in energy costs failed to offset increases for food and a wide range of other goods, the government reported today.

It was the steepest gain since a 0.5 percent rise in August.

The report, following one last week showing that wholesale prices had dipped an unexpected 0.2 percent in October, was viewed by analysts as further evidence that inflation remains generally tame this year despite other economic problems stemming from the stock market crash.

Retail price gains for the first 10 months of the year amounted, on an annualized basis, to a moderate 4.8 percent, the Labor Department said, with much of that gain due to the sharp rebound in energy prices earlier in the year.

If October's 0.4 increase continued for 12 consecutive months, the annual inflation rate would be just 4.6 percent. September's inflation rate had been a subdued 0.2 percent.

By contrast, consumer prices last year rose a minuscule 1.1 percent, largely the result of the collapse in world oil prices.

Inflation this year is running more in line with the 4 percent levels that prevailed from 1982 through 1985.

As for last month, gasoline prices fell 0.3 percent after a 0.2 percent drop in September.

Overall, energy costs were down 0.9 percent following a 0.5 percent fall. Natural gas and electricity costs dipped 1.6 percent, after a 0.6 percent decline.

Home heating oil costs fell 0.4 percent following a 1.8 percent decline.

Food costs were up 0.3 percent after a 0.5 percent rise in September, and were paced by a sharp 1.3 percent drop in fruit and vegetable prices.

For goods other than food and energy, prices rose 0.5 percent following a 0.2 percent rise in September.

This included a 0.6 price increase for new automobiles following a 0.1 percent increase in September. Part of this higher cost reflects more expensive imports due to the declining value of the dollar against other major currencies.

The retail price gains of October were far above the 0.2 percent decline posted at the wholesale level. But some disparity had been expected by economists.

For one thing, the wholesale price index reflects prices of goods only from U.S. industries and farms. It does not include two categories in which prices have been rising more rapidly: imported goods and services, such as medical expenses and rent.

In fact, the recent sharp fall in the value of the dollar is expected to eventually drive up the cost of most imported goods. That would lead directly to higher inflation and give U.S. companies more latitude to raise prices.

So far, however, this effect has been muted, although prices of many imports were shown to be up in today's report.

Yet, companies in Europe and Japan have generally not raised their export prices to the same degree that their currencies have risen against the U.S. dollar — about 50 percent since mid-1985. Instead, such companies have taken smaller profits to retain their share of the lucrative U.S. market.

Son Of Actress Kills His Wife, Daughters, Self

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Three days before he killed himself and his family, the son of Oscar-winning actress Mercedes McCambridge was fired from a brokerage house over a secret account he controlled, the firm says.

The disclosure came after a burial and memorial service Thursday for John Markle, 45, who police say shot himself in the head after slaying his wife, Chris, 45, and two daughters, Amy, 13, and Suzanne, 9, early Monday.

At the service, Miss McCambridge, 69, clad in a fur coat and surrounded by hundreds of spectators, fell to her knees and put her face to a patch of clover under which the ashes of her son and his family had been placed in a church cemetery.

About 600 people attended, including Arkansas' first lady, Hillary Clinton, wife of Gov. Bill Clinton; their daughter, Chelsea, a playmate of one of Markle's daughters, and Winthrop Paul Rockefeller, son of a former Arkansas governor.

Stephens Inc., the nation's 15th-largest brokerage firm, said Thursday night that Markle was placed on medical leave the day after the secret account was discovered Oct. 6 and fired on Friday after discussions with the firm.

Markle, a vice president, had handled investments of the firm's owners, brothers W.R. "Witt" and Jackson T. Stephens, along with his mother's account, employees said. Both brothers were on the Forbes list of the 400 richest Americans.

Authorities revealed no details of their investigation of the secret account, but The Arkansas Democrat reported today that Markle set up the account for his mother and worked out a scheme so that Stephens would absorb losses from investments he made for her.

When the investments made gains, Miss McCambridge's account would be credited, the newspaper reported, citing unidentified sources.

The company would not say how much money was involved, but KARK-TV, citing sources close to the investigation, said Thursday it was $1.7 million.

Miss McCambridge won the best supporting actress Oscar in 1950 for "All the King's Men" and played the demon's voice in "The Exorcist." She also appeared in the role of the mother in a Little Rock production of "Night Mother," a play about a mother and a suicidal daughter.

KARK-TV and another station, KATV, reported that Markle left his mother an embittered letter which referred to problems with Stephens and said he was displeased with Miss McCambridge, sometimes thanking her sarcastically.

At one point, the letter used the expression, "Night Mother."

Miss McCambridge has declined to comment on the shootings.

The bodies were found after Markle called a lawyer friend at 4 a.m. Monday, said there was an emergency at the house and asked him to come over.

The body of Mrs. Markle, clad in a nightgown, was found in a bed on the third floor, shot three times. The girls, also wearing nightgowns, were discovered in a bed on the second floor. Amy had been shot four times and Suzanne five, the state medical examiner said.

Markle's body was on the ground floor of his three-story Victorian house. A Halloween mask of an old man found nearby may have been worn during some of the shooting, police said. Police also said they found a videocassette of the horror movie, "A Nightmare on Elm Street," in the family's VCR.

In a brief note, Markle said he alone did the killing.

Report Says Cities Hurt By Tax Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new tax law and other federal policies are undercutting the two economic incentives that cities use most often to lure development, municipal leaders said today.

A report by the National League of Cities said making improvements in local infrastructure, such as streets and sewers, and issuing tax-exempt bonds to assist private development are the chief tools cities and towns use in promoting development.

Mayor George Latimer of St. Paul, Minn., who was releasing the report at a news conference, said the 1986 federal tax revision, reductions in federal aid to cities and other federal actions have made both tools more difficult for cities to use.

"As our cities and towns must cope with more restrictions, they will have less opportunity and latitude to help build their economies," Latimer said in prepared remarks.

The federal tax law has sharply reduced the types of development-related activities eligible for tax-exempt funding, and it also has limited the volume of tax-exempt revenue bonds," Latimer said.

"Besides that, cuts in federal aid programs are bringing cut-backs in local capital outlay for infrastructure improvements and for maintenance as well."

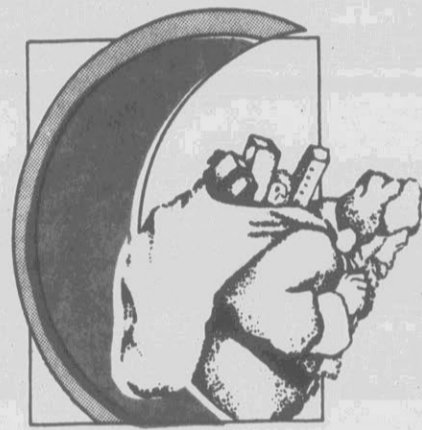

The League of Cities report said it found the tax-exempt bonds and infrastructure improvements were used to attract business by eight out of 10 cities surveyed. The report was based on a survey of 322 cities and towns.

The report said the time is past when a city government could consider the local economy to be out of its hands and a province of business.

A city today "creates an environment for growth by supplying and maintaining infrastructure, and it intervenes in the local economy to attract new firms and support existing business by providing preferential financial arrangements," the report said.

The study predicted that the use of tax-exempt financing will decline by 20 percent in the future.

In its place, it said, cities can be expected to make increased use of taxable bonds, venture capital, foreign trade zones, loan funds and other assistance to business.

Budget Plan OK'd

who served as chairman of the talks. Under the law, the president must order the $23 billion across-the-board cuts today unless another way to trim an equal amount from this year's deficit has been enacted.

Although the cuts become legally binding today, subsequent legislation can undo them. The law contains special procedural advantages for that to be accomplished on a congressional fast-track.

It is likely to take weeks before an accord stemming from the Capitol Hill negotiations could become law. And some federal agencies, under orders from the White House Office of Management and Budget, began cutbacks Nov. 10.

Legislative leaders had said for some time that if a budget agreement appeared near this week, they would ask Congress to approve a postponement of today's Gramm-Rudman deadline.

But on Thursday, with administration officials and numerous GOP lawmakers saying they would oppose an extension, Baker said the president would order the Gramm-Rudman cuts.

"He says he won't go along with postponing," Baker said.

Lawmakers could partially or completely restore the withheld money with future legislation. In addition, because of government spending procedures, the full impact of the cuts will not be felt for weeks.

But unless the money is provided later, $11.5 billion will automatically be pared from military spending and $11.5 billion will be taken from domestic programs.

The cuts would translate to 8.5 percent reductions in domestic programs and 10.5 percent cuts in military spending. Social Security and many programs for the poor and veterans are exempt.

Some Republicans said they believed the automatic spending cuts would help pressure the bargainers to nail down a deal, while others said Gramm-Rudman is preferable to the plan envisioned by the negotiators.

"A lot of us don't think the Gramm-Rudman fix is that bad," said Rep. E. Clay Shaw Jr., R-Fla. "We just feel there's too much emphasis on taxes."

In separate meetings Thursday, large numbers of Senate and House Republicans indicated they would vote against the package under discussion because it calls for $9 billion in new taxes this year, and it cuts too much from the Pentagon budget.

Asked if the votes would be there to approve the deficit-reduction plan, Michel said, "No, they're not there right now."

And Democrats conceded that without GOP support, congressional passage of the plan was unlikely.

"You have to have the Republican leadership committed to it, and the president aboard," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Budget Cuts Will Hit Most Americans As Federal Programs Get Financial Ax

By ROBERT A. ROSENBLATT
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Farmers will receive smaller price-support checks. The federal meat inspection service could be forced to shut down for a month. The AIDS research budget will be reduced. And the Federal Aviation Administration might become a "disaster."

Those, officials warn, are just some of the consequences of the across-the-board spending cuts mandated by the Gramm-Rudman law, which President Reagan was to implement today.

Reagan's action became all but inevitable Thursday, when congressional and administration budget negotiators failed to reach agreement on a plan to trim the federal deficit by at least $23 billion for fiscal 1988, which began Oct. 1. An agreement was announced today, but apparently too late to forestall the automatic cuts.

Under order from Reagan, the government's domestic agencies will have to cut most of their programs by 8.5 percent from the spending levels in effect when the fiscal year began. And the Defense Department will have to cut its programs — except military personnel, which Reagan exempted — by 10.5 percent.

By law, some domestic programs are also exempt. Government benefit payments will not be touched. Social Security recipients, veterans, the unemployed and welfare recipients will continue to get their checks without cuts.

Even for those program managers who face cuts, there is no immediate rush. For now, they can make modest trims — by reducing overtime and travel, for example — or even try to get by with no cuts at all. But they would have to implement deeper cuts later unless Congress comes to their rescue with more money.

"How the agencies make the cuts is up to them," said an official of the White House Office of Management and Budget who asked not to be identified. "We are not dictating to them."

Under Gramm-Rudman, the Department of Agriculture will have less money for the federal payments and loans that many farmers rely on. And, for the local offices that handle the paper work for federal farm programs, Stephen Dewhurst, the department's chief financial officer, predicted "abbreviated hours or days when they don't open."

Joseph A. Powers, a deputy administrator of the Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service, which oversees the nation's meatpacking plants, said that the service has cut its budget deeply. An 8.5 percent cutback, he said, would leave his office no money to run its operations for about a month at the end of the fiscal year.

"We would not be able to stay open. There are no options beyond that," Powers said. "And, if we can't stay open for business, the meat and poultry business closes as well, because they can't operate their plants without federal inspection."

But, outside Agriculture, no one expects such drastic consequences. "They can't do that," said an officer of a meatpacking company in Washington. "That would mean that all the grocery stores would have to shut down."

James H. Burnley IV, nominated to be secretary of transportation, told a congressional hearing recently that the potential budget cuts could virtually cripple the Federal Aviation Administration. The Gramm-Rudman law does not leave the department the flexibility to transfer funds from highway programs to the financially strapped FAA.

"We would literally have a disaster on our hands," Burnley said, because the FAA would be unable to hire the additional air traffic controllers it needs. It now employs 11,200 fully certified controllers, compared with 16,250 before the 1981 strike in which most controllers were fired.

Burnley said that the FAA would need "immediate help from Congress."

Other government agencies foresee less drastic consequences.

At the Drug Enforcement Administration, spokesman Cornelius J. Dougherty said that the expected cut of $41.6 million "is not going to affect any operational programs. It will amount to a kind of belt-tightening."

Likewise, the $70 million cut at the Immigration and Naturalization Service "is not going to have a major effect" on programs, spokesman Verne Jervis said.

Public schools and college students will feel no immediate impact from Gramm-Rudman cuts because the federal aid they are receiving this year was voted by Congress last year. This year's budget cuts, unless reversed by Congress, will mean program reductions next year. Education Department officials said that next year college students might be required to pay higher fees for guaranteed student loans.

At the National Institutes of Health, spending for AIDS and other major activities will be trimmed, but officials probably will keep some projects going at full speed and sharply curtail or even eliminate others. "Individual judgments can and will be made," said Norman Mansfield, the institutes' director of financial management.

Even on the eve of the Gramm-Rudman cuts, some government program managers remained unsure of what they would mean for them.

"There are all sorts of contingencies and exigencies," said Jonathan Moore, director of the State Department's Bureau for Refugee Programs. "I can't predict how that's going to come out."

A Department of Labor spokesman had the same uncertain reaction. "We simply don't have anything at this time in terms of impact," he said.

Agencies that distribute benefit checks must trim administrative costs even though the benefits themselves will remain intact. Spokesman Phil Gambino said that the Social Security Administration would reduce office hours only as a last resort.

Shultz To Join Arms Control Talks

The announcement also listed human rights on what will be a busy agenda of the two foreign ministers' fourth round of talks in three months.

All these issues also are likely to be taken up by President Reagan with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev during their scheduled talks at the White House Dec. 8-10.

The treaty to ban nearly 1,000 medium-range U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles is simply not ready with less than three weeks to go before the Washington summit.

Privately, senior U.S. officials have set the end of the month as the deadline for reaching agreement on all outstanding issues. They calculate it will take another week to compose treaty language once there is a decision.

Publicly, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said confidently Wednesday that the summit would be held as scheduled and the treaty signed.

This will be Shultz's fourth round of talks with Shevardnadze within three months. The unusual frequency of their meetings points up the difficulty the two sides have experienced in finishing the treaty after 2½ years of negotiations.

Reagan wants to make it the centerpiece of his talks with Gorbachev. It would be the first U.S.-Soviet treaty to restrict nuclear weapons in more than eight years, and the first during Reagan's presidency.

A State Department official said Monday that if the treaty were not ready by the end of the month, the United States and the Soviet Union would face a "series of choices," including postponement of the Washington summit.

"Whether you decide to have the summit without the treaty, I don't know," said the official, who spoke to a reporter only on condition of anonymity. "You might end up postponing it."

Since then, U.S. and Soviet negotiators have resolved two issues and made headway on the two tough problems that remain.

The Soviets dropped their demand for follow-on negotiations, which the U.S. side opposed as an apparent attempt to restrict American aircraft in Western Europe. And there is virtual agreement on a provision to live up to the treaty's letter and spirit.

On the other hand, several U.S. officials said, the Soviets have not provided sufficient information about their missiles and are not opening their facilities wide enough for thorough U.S. inspection.

Shultz is expected to see Shevardnadze in Geneva on Monday and return before Thanksgiving. In the meantime, U.S. and Soviet negotiators will work through the weekend in the Swiss city.

The unresolved issues involve ways to verify compliance with a ban on U.S. and Soviet missiles in the range of 315 miles to 3,125 miles.

In a sign of progress Wednesday,

Soviet negotiators provided U.S. negotiators in Geneva with some additional missile information.

But the data dealt mostly with deployed missiles and did not include all the specific data the U.S. wants on SS-20s and SS-4s that might be in storage and where they are being kept, administration officials said.

In the regional arena, the United States has been seeking Soviet support to impose a worldwide arms embargo on Iran and for a commitment to withdraw the Red Army from Afghanistan. The two governments also have been discussing prospects for Arab-Israeli peace talks.

All 533 of the SS-20 and SS-4 deployed Soviet missiles would be scrapped under the treaty. The Soviets also would dismantle 130 shorter-range rockets, while the United States would eliminate 364 missiles installed in West Germany, Britain, Italy and Belgium.

Behind the U.S. demand for more data is a concern that SS-20s might be kept in reserve and out of sight while the deployed weapons were removed.

"We really have not gotten the kind of data we need before signing the treaty in terms of location and deployment," a senior U.S. official said.

Redman, meanwhile, said, "I don't believe you could get to a treaty unless you had all the data. But the Soviets say it will be forthcoming."

On another sticking point, the Soviets have agreed to allow U.S. inspectors to take up positions outside a plant where SS-25 missiles are assembled. That means they could observe any finished weapons as they were brought out.

But, two officials said, the United States was asking for continuous rather than occasional inspection, and the Soviets were holding back. A third official said, "What they have not agreed on is inside inspection of test, storage and maintenance facilities."

Additionally, the officials said, the Soviets want a reciprocal right to inspect a plant where U.S. cruise missiles are assembled. U.S. negotiators rejected the demand, but might make a ballistic missile plant available.

Fatal Fall

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Bonita JoAnn Robinson Tyndall, 21, of Kinston died Tuesday when she apparently fell from the hood of a car.

Witnesses told State Highway Patrol troopers that Ms. Tyndall jumped onto the hood of the car after it turned off a highway and onto a street. Authorities said the victim fell or jumped from the hood of the car and struck her head on the street.

No charges were filed.

Carlucci Confirmed

dedicated public servant nominated to be secretary of defense," Nunn said. "He has demonstrated he is well aware of the tough defense budget decisions that will be needed."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was the lone senator to vote against the nomination. Carlucci was approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee last Friday on a 20-0 vote.

"I predict the working relationship between Mr. Carlucci and the Senate and perhaps the House will be best working relationship in the history of that office," said Sen. John Warner, R-Va.

During today's debate, Nunn and others took note of published reports that several people who had been business and government associates of Carlucci had lobbied last summer to relieve press and congressional pressure on a large Japanese trading company accused of the illegal sale of sensitive propeller-milling machinery to the Soviet Union.

The company, C. Itoh, reportedly acted as an export broker in an allegedly illegal sale of the equipment by Toshiba Machine Co. The machinery is said to have enabled the Soviets to build quieter submarines which are more difficult for U.S. forces to locate.

The report, by columnists Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta, did not allege that Carlucci was involved in any way himself although it repeatedly referred to the alleged activities of "Carlucci's friends."

Nunn said that despite Carlucci's long public record, a dozen separate federal agencies were asked for their files on the nominee, "who's been in government 27 years and has been confirmed by the Senate six times previously."

Nunn said he and Warner, the ranking Republican on the armed services committee, "find nothing in this material which gives any reason Mr. Carlucci should not be confirmed."

Video Bible Adventures Score A Hit

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After watching one of the animated adventure stories from the Bible, a youngster asks questions about it, touching off a religious discussion with his parents.

In some non-religious households, it's the first such talk. This conversation-triggering effect is part of the impact attributed to the large, growing sales of drama-packed home videos of Bible stories by Hanna-Barbera Productions of Hollywood.

A rabbi wrote, "Millions of parents better re-acquaint themselves with the Bible so they can answer the questions."

In the highly secularized modern atmosphere, studies find widespread biblical illiteracy. But distribution of the recently launched video Bible stories already has reached nearly a million.

"These are tremendous action adventure stories that you just can't top," says Joseph Barbera, the company's president. "It's terrific, exciting stuff."

Not only that, they're important for their moral content, he added in a telephone interview, but emphasized that "I'm not preaching, just telling good stories."

They're the foundation of American culture, he said, but many people don't read anymore, "least of all that classic, the Bible," and don't know its gripping stories, but should.

"Underlying them all are moral points," said Barbera, a Catholic. "But you don't have to be religious to be fascinated with these stories.

They're superb, thrilling adventures."

The latest of the animated series, "The Greatest Adventure: Stories from the Bible" is "The Nativity" which came out in October, telling the Christmas story as its celebration approaches.

It's the seventh story produced so far, all of the others from the Old Testament, but with six others in production, including two more from the New Testament. The total eventually is expected to go to 24 or more.

Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish clergy serve as advisors on the project, with extensive research to keep the material historically and biblically accurate.

"Everything, the buildings, the landscape and clothing, have to be authentic," he said. "We stick closely to the book. We don't play around with it."

Professional actors provide the voices, while the animation is overseen by William Hanna, also a Catholic and a long-time partner of Barbera's going back 50 years to their work in the movie industry.

Barbera, 76, launched his own company 17 years ago, and from the start had wanted to produce animated Bible stories, but network television rejected the idea.

However, he revived it on his own when video cassette recorders for home use came along, turning out the first stories in 1986. Each runs 30 minutes, costs $19.95.

In an age that doesn't read much but depends on visuals, Barbera says, "I think we've created something perennial, timeless."

A KING'S JEALOUSY

WHEN KING SAUL, BESET BY MELANCHOLY AND INSANITY, FIRST LAID EYES ON DAVID, THE BIBLE REPORTS THAT SAUL "LOVED HIM GREATLY" (I SAM.16:21). SO MUCH SO, THAT SAUL MADE DAVID HIS ARMOUR-BEARER AND CALLED UPON HIM TO REFRESH HIS SPIRITS WHENEVER HE, SAUL, WAS SO DISTURBED! HOWEVER, DAVID WAS SO VALIANT AGAINST THE PHILISTINES AND SO SUCCESSFUL

WHENEVER THEY MET IN BATTLE THAT WOMEN IN ALL THE ISRAELITE CITIES USED TO SING PRAISES TO DAVID ABOVE THAT TO KING SAUL! (I SAM.18:6-9) THE JEALOUSY THAT WAS INSTIGATED IN SAUL'S MIND ERASED ANY FEELINGS OF LOVE AND FRIENDSHIP FOR DAVID TO BE REPLACED WITH THE DESIRE TO KILL DAVID AT ALL COSTS! (I SAM.19:1)

Bishops Condemn Support Of Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Conference of Catholic Bishops says U.S. support of the Nicaraguan Contra rebels is a "morally flawed" policy, but some individual bishops strenuously disagree.

A broadside criticizing U.S. policy in Central America was approved by the bishops Thursday on a voice vote, just before they ended their week-long annual meeting.

However, the document won approval only after contentious debate that included assertions by some conservative bishops that the rebels are comparable to Americans in the Revolutionary War or to fighters against Nazi Germany.

The final document says there have been reliable reports of human rights abuses by Nicaragua's Sandinista government as well as the Contras. And it notes in particular "the extremely unfortunate conflict that has developed between the government and the leaders of the Catholic Church" in Nicaragua.

Still, the bishops conclude, "As troubled as we have been by aspects of today's Nicaragua, it seems to us far from clear that Sandinista abuses could merit such lethal response."

Help And Determination Bring Fantasia Home

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A Greenville woman's dog wandered the streets of Portsmouth, Ohio, for four weeks. But due to the determined effort of her owner and the helpfulness of several people, the toy poodle named Fantasia was reunited with her owner here Wednesday night.

Tiffany Manning, owner of The Village Groomer, a pet grooming service at Rivergate Shopping Center, was returning to Greenville on Oct. 20 with her fiancé, Cpl. Ron Strehl, from having visited his parents in Michigan. In Portsmouth, Ohio, their car was rear-ended by a semi-truck.

Miss Manning, though not seriously injured, was taken to the emergency department of a hospital in Portsmouth. Strehl followed the rescue vehicle, bringing along her two dogs. He left the dogs with a security guard in a waiting room, while he went into an examining room to visit Miss Manning. While he was away, someone opened a door and Fantasia darted out and away.

"We searched the area from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock that night," Miss Manning said. "We never saw her at all. We had to be back to work Monday morning, so we came on home."

Miss Manning made dozens of phone calls to publicize her and her dog's dilemma. She called the Portsmouth veterinarians, pet groomers, police, animal shelter, and newspaper. She placed advertisements in the newspaper.

"At first I felt pretty hopeless," she said, "because I didn't hear anything. Then on Nov. 10, three weeks after Fantasia was lost, a woman named Arlene Cook called me from Portsmouth. She said she'd been seeing a little gray poodle in her neighborhood, but couldn't get her hands on her. From her description, I knew it was Fantasia. I wasn't surprised she could not get my dog to come to her. The only people in the world that Fantasia really loves and trusts are me and my grandmother, Mary Virginia Lanier of Little Washington.

"As soon as I closed the shop that afternoon, my mother, Tina Fulcher, my 15-year-old brother, Daniel Fulcher, and I took off. We drove all night, except for a three-hour nap at a rest stop, and got into Portsmouth about 7 a.m. We called Mrs. Cook, went to her house and searched the rest of that day and until 11 o'clock the next day. We never saw Fantasia. After talking to the animal control officer there, we came on home again."

Miss Manning got another phone call on Nov. 13 from Ellen Irving in Portsmouth who said she had almost hit a gray poodle with her car about three blocks from Mrs. Cook's house.

And a Mrs. Smith who lived on Michigan Avenue near Mrs. Cook's called the next day to say she'd seen her in her back yard but couldn't touch her. Sunday morning, Mrs. Cook called and said Fantasia was in her back yard and looked around when her name was called, but then ran away. "I knew it was time to go for her again," Miss Manning said.

Miss Manning's mother and grandmother, Mrs. Fulcher and Mrs. Lanier, left for the 550-mile trip to Ohio Sunday afternoon. They searched all day Monday and didn't see her. Tuesday they were sitting in front of a vacant house near Mrs. Cook's where Fantasia had been spotted. They were talking to a man who said he'd seen the dog that they described in his garden, when he said, "There she is!" Mrs. Fulcher took off running behind her, followed her for some distance, but did not catch her. She obtained a live trap from the animal shelter and baited it with beef.

The next morning, Fantasia was in the trap.

"My mother said the first 10 minutes she and my grandmother had her, Fantasia just acted like she was in shock," Miss Manning said. "Then she came around, they said, and acted like herself. They took her to a vet and got about three dozen cockleburs out of her coat and confirmed she was in good shape otherwise.

"They rolled into Greenville Wednesday night while I was at the bowling alley and brought her to me there. You've never seen such a happy reunion! She was all over me — so glad to see me! Everybody who witnessed it seemed to enjoy it," she said.

"Thursday, I gave her her first haircut in four weeks. She's just fine — just as happy as can be to be home," said Miss Manning.

Miss Manning says she plans to place an advertisement in the Portsmouth newspaper to thank everyone there who helped her and tell them the good news that her dog is home. And she said she will take her

How Much Should She Give?

CONFIDENTIAL TO 'A LOVING MOTHER': So far you have given your son a car for his 18th birthday. He totaled it after three days. You gave him another car, which he totaled in two months. You gave him a chance for a college education. He dropped out in his sophomore year. You paid for the diamond ring that he gave his fiancée. He then broke the engagement, she returned the ring, and he hocked it and kept the money.

And now you ask me if you should borrow on your home to put this son in business.

My answer is an unqualified NO! Give him one more gift: a chance to prove that he is a man. Let him find his own job, stick to it, and learn how to stand on his own two feet.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, the woman I had loved for six years moved to another city. We lived together for the last three years. Finally, she said she needed to get on with her life, and she left me.

In the process of moving, she inadvertently left behind a gift I had given her last Christmas. It was a beautiful, expensive (not that the price matters), sexy, very revealing nightgown. Our relationship is over, but I can't bear the thought of her wearing that nightgown for another. I feel that I should mail it to her, but, as I have said, I hate the idea of her wearing it for someone else.

What do I do, Abby? — BEWILDERED IN LA CROSSE

DEAR BEWILDERED: You pack up the lady's property and send it to her, that's what you do. If it's any consolation, Freud said, "There are no accidents." Could she have left it behind because, unconsciously, she wanted to come back?

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Jeffrey's Mother" hit home with me. It seems that Jeffrey had been dating Karen exclusively for two years, a fact well-known to his mother, but in introducing Karen to her friends, she said, "This is my son, Jeffrey, and his friend, Karen."

Dear Abby

Karen took offense, saying she should have been introduced as "Jeffrey's girlfriend."

Here's my situation: My boyfriend and I have been living together for six months. Although we are not formally engaged, we plan to marry next year.

Last month, at his sister's wedding, I had a chance to meet his whole family, who all live out of state. His mother, who is aware of our relationship and future plans, introduced me to all the aunts, uncles, sisters, brothers and grandparents as her son's "little friend!" — BELITTLED IN EL PASO

DEAR BELITTLED: The letter from "Jeffrey's Mom" sparked other memorable introductions. For example:

DEAR ABBY: Years ago when I was just a poor college kid, I was invited to spend the Christmas holidays with the family of a girl I'd been dating for about six months. We liked each other a lot, but I was in no position to make any kind of commitment. Well, can you imagine how I felt when her mother introduced me all over the place as "Jennifer's fiancé"? — GIL (STILL SINGLE)

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.50 ($3 in Canada) and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Sitters Find Challenge

By JULIE SHIPPEN
Medford Mail Tribune
MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — Baby sitters who find children a challenge haven't seen anything compared to "barn sitters" Pat Beck and Mary Raby, whose charges include horses, cows, pigs and other livestock.

"I'll take just about anything on," says Ms. Raby, who in May started "Barn Sitters" out of Ashland. "I do horses, cows, goats, pigs, egg collecting, milking and mucking — whatever it takes," adds Ms. Beck, a rural Medford farmer who began "Critic Sitters" more recently.

"Like kids, you just have to deal with the animals on an individual basis," Ms. Beck says, describing barn sitting. "But you don't have to deal with whining or complaining — and no diapers."

The idea for Ms. Raby's business originated last summer when her vacation was dampened by lack of someone to look after her seven horses and pony, among other animals.

"I wanted to go away and I didn't have anyone to take care of them, though," she says. And, like her 40-plus customers so far, Ms. Raby didn't feel comfortable leaving hundreds and often thousands of dollars' worth of animals alone with the neighbor kid, she says.

Beck got the idea for her business the same way this year when she hired five people to look after her family's farm and dairy goats. "It took all five of them to milk one goat. It was hysterical," she says. "It made me think why not give someone the opportunity to have a professional do this."

Both women believe there are more than enough barns to sit in southern Oregon, and although things are quiet now they expect their businesses to grow and prosper.

"It definitely is a business that is needed around here," says Ms. Raby. "I'm sure there's more than enough room for others to get into it."

Ron Mobley, a livestock agent and director of the Jackson County Extension Service, agrees there's a growing need for barn sitters.

"In this day and age, it really is necessary," Mobley says. "It used to be in the farming community that everybody up and down the road, their whole life was farming. And if someone left, a neighbor would just pick it up for them. Nowadays, in a small farming community like this, there's less people that can come in and take care of a farm."

The fee for barn sitting depends on the location, number and type of animals and number of days and visits per day required. At $6 or $7 an hour, Ms. Raby guesses the average one-week sitting job would cost about $30. Ms. Beck goes on a base fee of $25 per day, adding charges for milking, cleaning stalls and other extra jobs.

"I'm not out to make big money," Ms. Raby says. "I just want to get by and pay the bills."

Ms. Beck, however, says she is hoping the business will pay well someday.

Like other businesses, barn sitting clients get an estimate of the job's cost before they sign. Clients also get a chance to show the sitters around the farm — "to do chores with them," Ms. Raby says — and to introduce them to the animals and their personalities.

The jobs are pretty routine, Ms. Raby says, with mostly horses and a few dogs or cats thrown in. "I did get one farm that had everything: goats, sheep, chickens — the whole works," she says.

Besides feeding, watering, grooming and checking the animals' physical shape and surroundings each day, Ms. Raby also offers exercising and training of horses. Clients also are welcome to board their animals in one of Ms. Raby's four sites, which she visits each day. The stables are cooperatively run by other horse trainers and owners.

The former waitress, nursery school teacher and paste-up artist says barn sitting and working with horses, riders and stables is perfectly suited to her.

"One day I just said, 'Hey, I'm not doing what I want,' and before I knew it, I was living on a horse ranch," Ms. Raby says.

Surviving Marital Stress

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
A Meredith Magazine

Some marriages seem to hum along for years without troubles, but most eventually face a stern test of the "for better or for worse" vows. Professional counselors know that facing a crisis in the right frame of mind is the key to a marriage's survival.

Even rock-steady marriages can be stressed by the jolt of a crisis. Whether it's facing cancer surgery or learning a spouse is addicted to drugs, stress points arise in every couple's life.

Not all stress points develop from tragedy, says Better Homes and Gardens magazine. Many predictable, life-in-progress episodes such as the birth of a first child or retirement can cause strain. Any sudden shift in the direction of either or both members of the marriage carries the potential for generating stress.

All of these situations cause stress because they require change, upsetting the "ground rules" on which the marriage was based. "Unless a couple is good at coordinating the process of change, they will be torn apart," says family therapist and psychiatrist Dr. Frank Pittman of Atlanta.

Most couples can identify one or more ways to solve their problem, notes Pittman. The difficulty lies in overcoming the inflexibility that interferes with putting those solutions to work. "As human animals, we devote much of our energy striving to avoid change," Pittman says. Yet, couples who can change are the ones most likely to survive and even grow from the inevitable stresses.

Often 20-20 foresight is the best way to get through a crisis. Couples who have planned for the storm before it brews are best able to weather the crisis. But no matter how well prepared, there will be stress points in marriage. Here are some strategies to help stress-proof a marriage.

First, talk to one another and ask each other what the options are for dealing with the problems. Discuss feelings, fears and hopes.

Try to get help from others. Too much sharing can be a burden when the couple has no outside support. Dr. Marilyn Jean Mason of the Family Therapy Institute in St. Paul tells of a man whose wife had cancer. The husband helped her cope, but couldn't tell her his worst fear: "What if she dies and I'm left alone?" A men's support group gave him help.

A third strategy is to be ready and willing to change roles and rules. Established patterns may need to be changed abruptly in a crisis. Adapting to even small changes of routine can lead to big arguments. Rigidity often produces more problems than the stressful event itself.

Another important consideration is to allow angry feelings. Anger is a common response to stress, yet many people feel they must always be caring and understanding. Couples need to be willing to conflict to solve problems and discover what the other partner might be feeling. Anger doesn't have to be directed toward a spouse, however. Anger can be directed toward the circumstances and can be released outside the marriage.

Keep active in times of crisis. It's important to have a plan for coping with the problem. Schedule activities such as meetings or exercise classes.

Another strategy is to be prepared to change established family goals. Couples usually agree, either tacitly or openly, on certain objectives for the marriage, yet even the most important goals may be altered in a crisis. However, avoid unnecessary changes.

Finally, recognize that life has suffering. "We often forget that we are sometimes powerless over what can come tomorrow," says Masn. "Everything in life is not in our control, but we get duped into thinking it is because we can control so much."

In times when things are going well, prepare for a crisis by following these additional tips.

Talk about feelings daily.
Make periodic changes just to stay comfortable with change. Vary schedules and chores so as to be prepared to adapt when a crisis requires flexibility.

Hold "what if" conversations.

Keep in touch with others who can step in during a crisis.

CELEBRATIONS

NEW YORK (AP) — Starting with Delaware on Dec. 7, 1987, and continuing through 1988 in all 50 states, celebrations much like those held in 1787 and 1788 will mark the anniversary of each state ratification or admittance to the Union.

The nationwide program will feature special events, some in period costumes, similar to the celebrations attended by our founding fathers.

AROUND THE GLOBE — Dr. Leo Zonn, left, chairman of the department of geography and planning at East Carolina University, chats with Dr. James H. Johnson, an associate professor of geography at the University of California at Los Angeles, Thursday in the Brewster Building on ECU's campus. Johnson, a native of Falkland, presented the keynote address Thursday night for ECU activities in recognition of National Geography Awareness Week. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis).

comers, repeat migrants or those who moved to a metropolitan area from their native region and are moving again.

Other black migrants include those who leave the Los Angeles area or some other metropolitan city and "spill over" into adjacent, smaller cities.

He also noted the rate of blacks leaving the southern regions has slowed down. "There has been considerable intra-regional population shifts," he said. For example, someone from Greenville may move to Charlotte or Atlanta.

The South has become "less oppressive" for blacks and is "much more hospitable," he said. Newcomers have come to perceive several Southern cities, such as Atlanta and Dallas, "as a center for black social and cultural life" for the young, middle-class, well-educated black person. The South has become a "regional center of activities" for blacks, he said.

Native migrants are coming back home to retire, and as more single mothers become head of the household, "the extended family becomes a crucial component," Johnson said.

The migrational trend also may be attributed to "structural changes in the U.S. economy," he said. A once-manufacturing economy slowly has emerged into an advanced services economy, and "blacks are concentrated in the manufacturing sector."

Iraq Says Tanker Bombed Off Iran

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes today bombed a tanker off Iran, the fourth vessel in about 24 hours, and the British navy said it found four mines in the central Persian Gulf.

The reported tanker raid raised to 20 the number of ships Iraq has claimed to have attacked in 12 days. Only four of those reported attacks have been confirmed by salvage officials and other sources in the gulf.

The British Royal Navy said its mine sweepers discovered the four mines in waters off the Qatar peninsula which had been marked out as potentially hazardous to shipping, according to Cmdr. Pat Gale, a Royal Navy spokesman.

In Amman, Jordan, Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher of West Germany left for home today after concluding talks with King Hussein on the 7-year-old gulf war and the outcome of the Arab League summit held last week in Amman.

Genscher told reporters that "Germany will support the Middle East peace process during its chairing of the European Economic Community next month ... and will share effectively to implement U.N. Security Council Resolution 598," which calls for a cease-fire in the gulf war.

Iraq's official news agency, monitored in Cyprus, reported today's tanker attack. It said Iraq was determined to "destroy all sources of revenue that the enemy is using to finance the war." About 400 vessels of different nationalities have been attacked by both sides in the gulf seaplanes.

The Iraqi tanker raids have focused on ships that shuttle crude oil from Kharg Island, Iran's huge northern Persian Gulf terminal, to makeshift loading facilities in safer waters about 450 miles down the waterway.

On Thursday, the northern Iraqi city of Dohuk, 3,000 people shouted for revenge during a funeral procession for 10 civilians killed when rockets crashed into a hospital the day before. Iraq said 64 were wounded.

Iran denied it had launched the raid. The official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted a military spokesman as saying no raid occurred and contending that Iraq was "paving the way for committing fresh crimes" against Iran.

Journalists based in Baghdad were flown to Dohuk on Thursday and saw the seven-story Dohuk General Hospital, which had been badly damaged by rockets.

At the hospital, four of the seven missiles that struck the facility were still lying unexploded, waiting to be dismantled by military experts.

Dr. Bahij Yassin Mohammed, hospital director, said the 400-bed could no longer function because of the damage.

Pickup trucks carried the 10 coffins wrapped in Iraqi flags along the main avenue of Dohuk, a Kurdistan city that is near the Turkish border.

The protesters lined the sidewalks shouting, "Revenge! Revenge for the martyrs!"

Officials said two Iranian F-5 jets fired the missiles. One hit the main operating room just after doctors finished surgery on a child, and another killed four infants in the nursery for premature babies, staff members said.

million and construction at $52.1 million.

"There's no reason to think there's a change in attitude on 264," another transportation board member, Jack Bishop of Rocky Mount, said, suggesting that the delay is a result of spreading the right-of-way costs over a longer period of time.

Doub said the first construction contract for the Farmville bypass — $10.2 million has been set aside for grading, drainage and structures — is scheduled for letting in December, with board approval scheduled for January. And paving of the project, estimated at $4.6 million, is scheduled for fiscal 1990 and 1991.

Pitt females dropped 35 points behind the nation in verbal and 34 points behind in math (391 compared to 426 and 417 compared to 451). The county scores were much closer to the North Carolina average, however.

White students accounted for 53.65 percent of all withdrawals in the school system.

Prison Space Will Be Ready In 1988

RALEIGH (AP) — State budget officer C.C. Cameron told a legislative commission today that the majority of more than 2,500 new prison beds will be available by the fall of 1988.

Cameron told the Governmental Operations Commission that contracts totaling more than $29 million have been negotiated to add an extra 2,554 beds to the state prison system.

"As a result of this effort, we will have improved the conditions on confinement to the level mandated by the Constitution of the United States," Cameron said in his report to the commission.

The emergency prison facilities development program, enacted by the 1987 General Assembly, ordered the state to provide 2,500 beds and facilities at 21 locations in North Carolina. In addition, the legislation provided for renovation of 51 existing dormitories in order to meet standards adopted for the south piedmont area.

Cameron said renovations have been completed on 13 units and 17 more are practically completed. All units are expected to be completed by February 1988, he said.

"There was no way to accomplish what we've done in this time span without the authority you've provided us in the legislation," Cameron said.

DICK CRUM

Crum To Decide His Future

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — It is up to head football coach Dick Crum whether he remains with the Tar Heels after Saturday's game against Duke, University of North Carolina officials say.

Meanwhile, Crum, who had earlier indicated that he would return to North Carolina in 1988, backed off that statement during his radio call-in show Thursday night.

UNC Athletic Director John Swofford said in a prepared statement Thursday the school intends to give Crum "the opportunity to fulfill (his) contract unless he decides otherwise."

"While some discussions have taken place in recent weeks between Coach Crum and me, as well as Chancellor (Christopher) Fordham and me concerning the best possible circumstances for the future of our program, it has never been a conclusion by any of us that Coach Crum would not be returning next year. Any reports to the contrary are inaccurate," Swofford said in a prepared statement.

The statement was endorsed by Fordham, the university said.

Swofford said it was the university's intention to continue the discussions about Crum's status and the football program "privately after the season, but the current public nature of the situation, I think, deserves comment now."

Swofford in his statement, said the honoring of a contract is "a fundamental aspect of the University's integrity."

He added that while the "support and interest of the private sector and the sporting public is vitally important to the success of intercollegiate athletics, policy and personnel decisions must remain with the University itself and its appropriate authorities."

On his weekly radio talk show, Crum said declined specific comment on what his move would be in light of Swofford's statement.

"Really, I'm not in a position to say anything right now," Crum told a listener. "Keeping my mouth shut is probably the best thing I can do."

"That's really up in the air right now. I haven't made any decision on what's going to happen here. I've got to have time to think about this," he added.

Officials in the university community have said the tradition of never firing a coach should stand. University of North Carolina system president emeritus William Friday told The Charlotte Observer that "if you do these things, you strike a scar on this great old institution it doesn't deserve."

To break a contract would "send a message to the faculty and other employees that other forces outside the university can cause an abrogation of a contract," Friday said. It also would tell students, he said, that "on a contrived series of allegations, someone can get fired."

Crum, UNC's winningest coach, has four years left on a 10-year contract he signed in January 1982. Crum earns a base salary of $87,300 a year and it is estimated a buyout or settlement of the contract would cost $500,000 or more after adding compensation for Crum's television show, football camp and other coaching perks.

Criticism of Crum has been constant, and stems from his conservative play calling and failure to win important games.

Speculation on Crum's future hit a high point Monday when The News and Observer of Raleigh reported that unidentified sources said Crum would not be retained as head coach. The Durham Morning Herald and the Greensboro News & Record reported the same thing in Wednesday's editions.

"I'm not even going to discuss that. I addressed the matter last week," said Crum in reference to comments in which he said he would be back in 1988.

"You never know who those people (sources) are," Crum told his news conference on Tuesday. "They're kind of faceless. So you don't know how accurate that is."

Crum surpassed predecessor Bill Dooley earlier this year as North Carolina's winningest coach with a record of 72-40-3 in 10 seasons. This year, North Carolina is 5-5 and 3-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. It hasn't won an ACC title since 1980.

Judge Rules Against NCAA Drug Testing

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Involuntary drug testing by the NCAA is unconstitutional, according to a judge who barred it in all but football and basketball at Stanford University, while ruling there is no "compelling need" to test college athletes.

Attorney Robert Van Nest, representing students who challenged the drug testing, called Thursday's decision a "sweeping repudiation" of the program's value.

Superior Court Judge Conrad Rushing said he would allow limited tests to continue in basketball and football because of evidence of some steroid and cocaine use in those sports.

"I hope everyone interested in this matter will read the (judge's) opinion because it has much to say about our commitment to dealing with this problem in ways better suited to an educational institution," Stanford President Donald Kennedy said.

Rushing ordered the NCAA to cease testing in 26 sports and to return to court Dec. 4 with a plan for testing in the two excepted sports. Rushing issued the order in a preliminary injunction and said he would decide at the December hearing whether to make the ruling permanent.

Although the decision applies only to Stanford, Rushing's finding that the testing program violates the U.S. Constitution, as well as the state Constitution, could influence athletes and schools throughout the country to challenge the program.

"Until we receive a copy of the ruling we will have no comment," Jim Marchiony, a spokesman for the NCAA, said at its headquarters in Mission, Kan. He would not say whether the NCAA plans to appeal.

Van Nest, attorney for Stanford football player Barry McKeever and soccer player Jennifer Hill, who fought the NCAA testing, said the decision "declares (the program) vastly overbroad both in testing for too many drugs and too many athletes."

Kennedy added that the decision "vindicates Stanford's belief that student athletes should be treated like other students."

Evidence presented by students' attorneys showed of 3,511 students tested, only 34 were declared ineligible. Of those, 31 were football players. Of the 34, 26 were positive for steroids and seven for cocaine. No women were declared ineligible in any sport.

"All of the evidence taken together demonstrates that except for the sports of football and men's basketball, there is no evidence of any kind of drug involvement," Rushing said in his 36-page decision.

Van Nest said that at the December hearing he will oppose testing even for basketball and football.

"We're disappointed any testing will be permitted," he said. "We don't think even in football there's a compelling need to test for any drug."

The exception of football is moot this season, since the school's season ends Saturday. The testing program is in effect only for post-season play and Stanford will not be participating in any bowl games.

Andy Geiger, Stanford's director of athletics, said he was "pleased that our original impressions about this drug-testing program appear to be accurate."

He added that the university's position from the start of the case was that athletes should not be treated any differently from students engaged in any other extracurricular activities.

Rushing wrote, "The NCAA drug program as it is administered violates the California Constitution and the U.S. Constitution in that there is no evidence of a compelling need to engage in drug testing of college athletes."

"Moreover, even if a compelling need were shown, the program is not narrowly tailored to meet its goal."

Rushing, who last summer began taking testimony and briefs in the case, previously told NCAA attorney Christine Hanson of San Francisco that he doubted the accuracy of drug tests and said the issue of privacy was crucial to the legality of the program.

Rushing issued a temporary restraining order against the NCAA on Aug. 26 allowing athletes to compete without signing written consents for mandatory drug tests.

Hill was captain of Stanford's women's soccer team and last spring joined the suit originally filed in January by diver Simone LeVant.

NCAA attorneys argued that the requirements for court relief had not been met by Stanford and that only three of the school's 600 athletes had objected to the testing.

Stanford, which was allowed to join the case, argued it did not want to enforce an unlawful program and that it was caught in the crossfire between students challenging the drug-testing program and the NCAA, which insists the university enforce it.

Lockbaum Makes Most Of Final Game

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP) — The Colonial Conference won't let Holy Cross play in the NCAA's Division I-AA playoffs, so Gordie Lockbaum and company decided a nationally televised game against Villanova would have to do.

Lockbaum broke seven school receiving, rushing and touchdown records and Jeff Wiley set one passing record and tied another as Division I-AA's top-ranked Holy Cross defeated Villanova 39-6 Thursday.

"I don't know what more you can ask for," Wiley said after the Crusaders, 11-0, completed their first perfect season since winning both games in 1918. "It would be nice if we had an opportunity to play (in playoffs), but right now we're ecstatic."

Lockbaum said the game, which was broadcast on ESPN, was a fitting final chapter to his college career.

"I don't think you could have written it better," Lockbaum said. "We came down here and Villanova thought they could beat us and rightly so, but we played hard and we hope our offense is regarded as exciting."

The multi-talented offensive and defensive player was fifth in voting for the Heisman Trophy last year and said he felt fortunate to be considered for it again this year. "I just hope some of the voters got a chance to see me play," he said.

Lockbaum scored on a 3-yard run in the third quarter for the 27th rushing touchdown of his career, breaking the school record of 26 set by Gil Fenerty from 1983-85. He also caught touchdown passes of 29 yards in the second quarter and 21 yards in the fourth.

All told, he caught 15 passes, a single-game record that gave him a season record 78 receptions and a career record 130.

Craig Cerretani had set the previous single-game record of 13 against Boston College in 1976, and Dave Quehl set the earlier records of 63 season receptions in 1975 and 130 career receptions from 1973 to 1975.

Lockbaum also set a season receiving mark of 1,152 yards and a career mark of 2,012 yards, surpassing Quehl's 959-yard season in 1975 and 1,837-yard career record set from 1973 to 1975.

Lockbaum's two touchdown receptions in the game raised his career total to 16, one more than Johnny Turco had from 1950 to 1952.

Wiley's .663 completion percentage broke the Division I-AA record .638 set by Gregg Wyatt of Northern Arizona in 1986.

Wiley, who completed 29 of 45 passes for 381 yards, also became the division's seventh player to pass for more than 200 yards in each of 11 games during a season. The most recent was Willie Totten of Mississippi Valley State in 1985.

Thurston Dukes, Follow Same Plan

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
(One of a series)

James Madison basketball coach John Thurston said that after his team went 5-23 two years ago, he was scared when his Dukes prepared to open the 1986-87 season.

"Our goal was to try and get better every game and not slip back," he said.

That goal was met as the Dukes turned in a 20-10 record, including a tie for third place in the league and a berth in the National Invitational Tournament.

This year, Thurston says, the goal is the same — to continue that improvement.

But he will have to replace a couple of strong players for the Dukes, forward John Newman, who averaged 12.6 points and 6.8 rebounds, and guard Eric (Boo-Boo) Brent, who scored 11.8 points a game.

"We lost two four-year starters that were our scoring and rebounding leaders, which leaves question marks as far as replacing them. We have nine new players, so there are a lot of unknowns."

"Our strengths should be our quickness and athletic ability at all positions, and this will be as deep as we've been. We've got a nice combination of veteran and new players. Our chief concerns are perimeter shooting and rebounding."

Thurston has nine newcomers to the roster, including seven freshmen, a transfer and a walk-on, with six returning from last year's squad.

The coach is looking for immediate help from at least four of that group.

The transfer is one of those most likely to provide that help. He is junior forward Anthony Cooley, a 6-5 forward. He transferred from North Carolina, where he played two years on the junior varsity, averaging 19 and 22 points a game those two seasons.

Among the freshmen likely to help are 6-5 forward Barry Brown and 6-1 guard Keith McMillan. Thurston says Brown is the best shot blocker and rebounder, as a scholastic player, that the Dukes have signed, while McMillan is a perimeter scorer who could fill Brent's shoes.

The three returning starters, seen as likely to regain their roles, are senior guard Ben Gordon, 6-0, junior forward Kennard Winchester, 6-5, and sophomore forward Claude Ferdinand, 6-6. Winchester is the leading scorer among that group with a 13.6 average from last year while Gordon averaged 11.8 points a game. Ferdinand scored 5.9 per game.

Winchester is also the top returning rebounder with a 5.7 average.

Gordon, at the point, was named to the all-conference second team and the league's all-defensive team. He had 22 assists and 63 steals, both school records, last season.

Also back is senior forward Ralph Glenn, 6-4½, who started the final nine games of the 1986-87 season. He averaged 4.2 points and 3.5 rebounds for the season.

Other returnees include 6-11 junior center Thom Brand, the tallest of the Dukes and a likely candidate for the center position. He averaged 6.7 points 3.9 rebounds and 1.1 blocked shots a game last year.

Also back are guards Robert Griffin (Sr., 6-2) and Ken Halleck (Jr., 6-2). They will provide additional depth for the Dukes.

As far as the conference race is concerned, Thurston is optimistic about the Dukes' chances. "There is no superstar in the league this year, so you're going to have to have the chemistry. That's one of the great things about the Colonial. You never know who the great players are going to be. And year-after-year the league surprises people by its caliber of play."

"We'll have a tournament where anyone could win; it won't be a foregone conclusion who the league's NCAA representative is going to be."

Whether it's the Dukes will depend on how quickly Thurston can mix the veterans and the newcomers into that chemistry that does work.

Timing Could Be Better, But Syracuse Set To Play

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — It's not usually the way Syracuse starts its basketball season and Coach Jim Boeheim isn't sure playing North Carolina to open the season is going to benefit his team come March.

But playing the third-ranked Tar Heels Saturday in the annual Tip-Off Classic at Springfield, Mass., will be fun, and the national television exposure provided by ESPN can't hurt.

"That just happens to be when the Tip-Off is. If they had said do you want to play North Carolina in January, I would have said yes," said Boeheim. "I like to ease into the season before we get going. That's the way I prefer it. Games like this don't prove a hell of a lot in November. You've still got three, four months to go."

For the top-ranked Orangemen, who will travel to Alaska during Thanksgiving for the Great Alaska Shootout to play teams like No. 9 Michigan, No. 17 Arizona and the University of Alabama-Birmingham, it's just another game.

"The guys on the team don't make up the schedule. We just go out and play it," said junior forward Herman Harried.

"It doesn't matter to us," agreed center Rony Seikaly. "We're ready to play anybody, anywhere, anytime. If nothing else, playing the Tar Heels will give us a quick fix on what kind of team we have — if we're really as good as people are saying."

In the past, Syracuse has packed the early part of its schedule with arguably weaker teams. Last year, Syracuse began its season with an 87-86 rout of Loyola of Chicago, followed by games against George Washington, Cornell, Canisius and Fairfield. The only ranked team the Orangemen encountered before January and the start of conference play was Northeastern, which came in for the Orangemen's fourth game of the year ranked 19th.

Boeheim said the tougher games this year don't indicate a shift in his philosophy, nor are they a response to the critics who have accused Syracuse of loading the front end of its schedule with easy pickings.

"Our philosophy has been to play games at home so we can get the semester over with so the kids don't have to go on the road," he said.

"We use the first part of our schedule to get ready for the conference, and I think we've been able to get ready for the conference with what we've done in the past," said Boeheim, who is 89-11 in the first 10 games of the season in his 11 years at Syracuse and the winner of every season opener during that span.

Morris Leads By Five Over DR Pollsters

Tom Morris moved another game in front of the pack with last week's results, while the last three spots are once again packed.

Morris boosted his record for the season to 94-36 last week and leads Vickie Spivey by five games. Spivey is 89-41 going into this week, the final week of picking before the bowls.

While a few games remain before the season ends, they are spotty from here on in until the bowls. So after this week's picks, we'll return just before bowl season opens.

Tom Baines is in third place going into this week with an 88-42 record, just one behind Spivey, while this writer, Joe Jenkins and the combination of Don Reuter and Clay Deanhardt are tied for fourth with 84-46 records.

Last week, our high school picks saw us post a 5-2 record, missing Ayden-Grifton's stunning upset of Ahsokie and Gates County's win over Chocowinity. The week brings us to 68-21 for the year.

This week, there are only two games to look at on the high school level, with the panel doing the picking in the Edenton-Ayden-Grifton game.

North Pitt takes its show on the road against Clayton. The Panthers rallied from behind to beat Zebulon this past week while Clayton just nipped Williamston on an extra point.

It promises to be an outstanding game. Clayton, in tying for the Capital Area 2-A title, lost to Zebulon during the regular season. That would seem to mean that North Pitt should be the easy pick here. Not so. The Panthers certainly can win the game, but it won't be easy. We will go with them, however, by a 17-15 score.

Rose High School takes on Jacksonville in another tough game. Rose faced Jacksonville early in the season, earning a 12-7 Monday night win on a sloppy field.

Since then, both schools have improved, certainly. But can Rose overcome the mental block of having beaten the Cards. In football, it is difficult to win that second one. Rose appears to have the better rushing game and the better passing game. But Jacksonville seems to find the way to the victory as it has so many times in the past.

This should be an emotional game, but I will go ahead and stick with the Rampants, 20-14.

The panel picks the Aces-Charger game. Edenton is unbeaten while Ayden-Grifton has lost a couple of games. The Aces — like Ahsokie — have an outstanding defense, and if the Chargers can crack it, watch out. Our own pick is the Chargers, 35-21. The panel calls it a toss-up, three each going with the Chargers and Aces.

Our other consensus picks: North Carolina over Duke, Vanderbilt over Maryland, Nebraska over Oklahoma, Stanford over California, Texas A&M over Texas Christian, South Carolina over Clemson, Wake Forest and Georgia Tech, a toss-up; N.C. State and Virginia, a toss-up; Michigan over Ohio State, Mississippi over Mississippi State, and Rutgers over Temple.

33rd World Cup Of Golf Plagued By Bad Weather

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — Sam Torrance, a Scot who grew up playing in wind and rain, called the conditions "wicked."

"Awful," Payne Stewart said. "Slimey," added Ben Crenshaw, who then looked at his soaked shoes and mused: "I think my feet have rotted off."

They hadn't. But the Americans' opening-round lead in the 33rd World Cup of Golf was whisked away by howling winds and driving rain in second-round play on Thursday.

And, too, there were the Scots, Torrance and Sandy Lyle, who handled the adverse conditions much better and opened up a three-shot lead over the Americans at the halfway point of the 32-nation competition.

"Sandy played great, and I got my act together," Torrance said.

Lyle, a former British Open champion who has a history of extremely strong play on Kapalua's 6,171-yard, par-72 Bay course, had a second-round 69. He played without a bogey and was the only man in the field to break 70 in the extremely difficult conditions that extended rounds to as much as six hours.

He made only one mistake.

"In the first round, on the 18th tee, Sandy gave me a great piece of advice," Torrance said. "He told me, 'Don't hook it.' But today," Torrance said, tongue firmly in cheek, "he forgot to tell me."

Torrance hooked his tee shot out of bounds, leading to a bogey that finished off a 71. The Scots had a 140 total for the day and are five under par at 283 for two days.

The Americans dropped back to second at 286. Stewart and Crenshaw each had second-round 73s and each is at 143 for two days' play.

"We haven't seen good weather yet, and we haven't played to our potential," Stewart said.

Sweden and Australia, each at 287, were the only other teams under par at the halfway point of the chase for the $200,000 prize that goes to the winning team.

Sweden, with Mats Lanner and Ove Sellberg, and Australia, with Rodger Davis and Ossie Moore, each had a second-round 144. Lanner had a 71 for 143, Sellberg a 73 for 144. Moore is at 143 after a 73 while Davis checked in at 144 after a 71.

Wales, with Ian Woosnam leading the way, and Ireland were tied at 288, and defending champion Canada was at 289.

In the individual competition, Woosnam, was tied for the lead with Lyle at 137. Woosnam had a second-round 70 despite missing eight putts of 12 feet or less. Kiochi Suzuki of Japan was third at 139 after a 70.

Gooden Wants Mets To Offer Big Pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden says he may consider leaving the New York Mets when he becomes a free agent in 1990 if he does not get a multi-year contract, while the team appears reluctant to offer such a package, according to a published report.

"This upcoming contract is going to tell me a lot about how the Mets feel about me," Gooden told the New York Post in Tampa, Fla., where he will be married Saturday.

Gooden signed a one-year contract last spring and earned $1.5 million. He did not pitch until June because of cocaine rehabilitation and went 15-7 with a 3.21 earned run average.

Gooden's agent, Jim Neader, and Mets vice president Al Harazin are scheduled to meet Tuesday in West Palm Beach, Fla. Gooden has told Neader to seek a three-year contract for about $5 million, the newspaper said.

But the Mets apparently are reluctant to offer that, with Harazin citing 11 missed pitching assignments due to drug rehabilitation as contributing to the 1986 World Series champions' second-place finish last season in the National League East.

"It would have been interesting to see what kind of season we would have had if Dwight was pitching all year," Harazin said. "That's why I'd say a long-term deal is a long-shot in Dwight's case."

Gooden acknowledged that his absence hurt the Mets.

"Look, I know I missed 11 starts," he said. "I know I hurt the team. But there's no guarantee I would have been 8-3 or even 7-4 in those starts."

But Gooden says he will not be deterred in his bid for a multi-year pact.

"I've gotten to the point where I don't want to keep proving myself every year," said Gooden, the NL Rookie of the Year in 1984 and Cy Young Award winner in 1985. "The Mets should know how they feel about me by now."

"If they don't think I'm worth signing for more than one year, I guess they that means they don't want me."

In that event, Gooden says he has a game plan for 1990, and warns that the Mets should take him seriously.

"I definitely have to think about playing somewhere else," he said. "It's something that's crossed my mind."

"I don't know if there's going to be free agency like there was in the early eighties, but I'd have to explore it if the Mets don't want me."

The Mets, according to the newspaper, already had prepared themselves for Gooden's request.

"We have to ask ourselves, is it (a three-year deal) in the best interests of the club?" Harazin said.

Clarification

East Carolina University will likely play a Division I-AA opponent as its 11th football game next fall.

In a story on the naming of Dave Hart as interim athletic director at East Carolina, it was inadvertently stated that ECU would face a Division I-A foe.

Hart also, in saying he would be accessible to the media, did not state that his predecessor had been inaccessible, as may have been implied by wording of an indirect quote.

HOW IT BEGAN

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — It may not turn up in many trivia games but it is a part of American sports history: Who called the Dec. 9, 1905, meeting that resulted in the formation of a group that became the NCAA?

The answer: Henry MacCracken, the chancellor of New York University. The meeting was to decide whether to abolish football or reform the game. MacCracken acted a few months after President Theodore Roosevelt had called for rules changes to make the game safer.

Johnson Out To Disprove Polls

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Most preseason polls have predicted mediocrity for Virginia in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball race this season, and that doesn't sit too well with the Cavaliers' John Johnson.

"My first goal is to prove everybody wrong about our team," said Johnson, Virginia's 5-foot-11 point guard. "Coming into the regular season, we're always picked to finish so low in the ACC."

If the Cavaliers are to prove the pollsters wrong, much of the responsibility for that likely will rest on the shoulders of Johnson, a senior and Virginia's captain this season.

Graduation has claimed Andrew Kennedy, the team's leading scorer and rebounder last year, and Tom Sheehy, the Cavaliers' No. 2 rebounder who also contributed 11.2 points a game.

The net result is a relatively unproven corps of forwards and centers.

"In any of the years that I've been here," Johnson said, "the strength has always been the big men."

This season, Coach Terry Holland will rely on Johnson and shooting guard Richard Morgan, a junior, to carry the burden, at least early in the season while the frontcourt players gain experience.

One product of that probably will be a faster-paced Virginia attack, and Johnson said Holland doesn't always feel comfortable with that.

"I know it makes him nervous sometimes, seeing us run up and down the court taking jumpers," Johnson said. "But I think he knows you have to use the personnel you have. And we're going to pick our spots to run. It won't be uncontrolled."

Setting the tempo is where Johnson comes in. When he arrived at Virginia from Tolentine High School in Brooklyn, N.Y., Johnson experienced the typical adjustment problems of a freshman thrown into Division I play.

But since then, he has made steady progress, and with the departure of Kenny Smith of North Carolina, Wake Forest's Tyrone Bogue and Tommy Amaker of Duke, Johnson said he is ready to make his mark in the ACC by becoming the type of floor leader opponents fear.

"I've always wanted to be in that role, and now's the time," he said. "I'm ready for it. I don't think I could be more prepared."

Holland concurs.

"He's had the opportunity in previous years to play against some great point guards, both in the ACC as well as outside the league," Holland said. "He's benefited from those opportunities and I think is ready to step forward as one of the best point guards in the league."

Last season, Johnson rose to the occasion when matched against three point guards who later became first-round NBA draft choices: Bogue, Smith and Mark Jackson of St. John's. In the ECAC Holiday Festival last December, Johnson dished out a career-high 12 assists against St. John's, and matched that figure in an ACC tournament game against North Carolina in March. In a February contest at Wake Forest, Johnson scored a career-best 24 points and had six assists and five rebounds.

Johnson averaged 12.0 points and 6.3 assists last season. His 194 assists were the second-highest single-season total in Cavalier history, and he turned the ball over just 90 times while playing in a team-leading 1,128 minutes. He played at least 38 minutes in 13 of Virginia's last 17 games.

"John had an exceptional 1986-87 season," Holland said, "and we're going to expect him to build on last season."

Johnson said the foundation has been laid for him to do that.

"I think I'm pretty much where I want to be or where I expected to be as a player," he said.

Johnson's agenda doesn't end with leading Virginia to what he hopes will be a surprisingly successful season. His second goal has to do with getting himself in a financial position to show his mother, Beverly Johnson, his gratitude for her support of him over the years.

"I don't know exactly how it will work out, but I just want to get paid for playing basketball so I can help my mother out," he said.

"Obviously, money can't talk for how much love I have for her, but it can help take care of some things she may have missed."

Lady Pirates Sign Two Guards

East Carolina University's Lady Pirate basketball team has signed two Colonial Heights, Va., players to grants-in-aid for next season.

Pat Pierson, entering her first year as the Lady Pirate coach, announced that Laura Crowder and Mechelle Jones, two members of the Colonial Heights High School backcourt for the last three years, have inked with ECU.

Crowder, a shooting guard, and Jones, a point guard, led their team to a 20-2 record this year, including a district championship and a second-place finish in the Central Virginia regional. (Note: girls basketball is a fall sport in Virginia.)

"We are very pleased to sign two players of the caliber of Laura and Mechelle," Pierson said. "Both are hard workers, good students and outstanding players. We feel both girls have very bright futures at East Carolina."

Crowder, 5-4, averaged just under 15 points and five rebounds per game the last two seasons while shooting just under 50 percent from the floor. She was the school's most improved player last year and was named to the all-Tri City team.

Jones, also 5-4, averaged just under 11 points a game for the past two years, hitting 55 percent of her shots from the field. She was all-district, and second team all-regional this fall.

Both are also talented softball players and may also compete in that sport at East Carolina.

Three Vikes Named All-Conference

Three members of the D.H. Conley volleyball team were named to the All-Coastal Conference team, announced today.

The Valkyries won the championship of the conference this year again. Named to the team from Conley were Miriam Fulford, Hannah Hill and Rhonda Mills.

West Carteret, the runner-up, also landed three members on the team. They were Leanne Mason, Stacy Kyle and Kim Nelson.

Others named included Marcie Sorensen and Lisa Mason of Havelock, Stacy Bergman of West Craven, Ellen McCotter of Washington, Carol Willis of East Carteret and Paula Hughes of North Lenoir.

Lewis Lone Repeater On All-ACC Team

GREENSBORO (AP) — Derrick Lewis, the lone returning member of last year's all-Atlantic Coast Conference first team, leads this season's all-ACC preseason team, the league announced Thursday.

Lewis, a 6-foot-7 senior center for Maryland, is the only senior on the first team. He is joined on the squad by two members of last year's second team, Danny Ferry of Duke and J.R. Reid of North Carolina. Reid, a 6-9 sophomore, is the only unanimous selection for the preseason team.

Tom Hammonds of Georgia Tech, a 6-9 junior forward, and Jeff Lebo of North Carolina, a 6-2 junior guard, round out the first team.

On the second team are North Carolina State's Charles Shackelford and Vinny Del Negro, Virginia's John Johnson, Georgia Tech's Duane Ferrell and Clemson's Grayson Marshall. Shackelford is a junior and the other four are seniors.

Reid was picked as the preseason player of the year and Maryland's Brian Williams, a 6-10 freshman from Santa Monica, Calif., was picked as the top newcomer.

North Carolina was chosen to win the league in balloting at the annual Operation Basketball.

Atlanta Track Home To Elliott

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Atlanta International Raceway is Bill Elliott's track.

Not only is it the NASCAR stock car track closest to his home at Dawsonville, Ga. — 60 miles north — it also is one on which he has had more than some success.

"If Bill Elliott drove one of the wreckers around here Sunday, he'd finish fifth," one observer said with a laugh.

Elliott's Ford Thunderbird won both races on the 1.522-mile, high-banked oval in 1985. In fact, until a transmission problem relegated him to a 28th-place finish in the race here last spring, Elliott had finished no worse than fifth in five straight Atlanta events.

He also held the track qualifying record of 172.905 mph until Dale Earnhardt beat him out for the pole last March with a sizzling lap averaging 175.497 mph.

Earnhardt, who has won 11 times this season and has clinched his second straight Winston Cup championship, likely will be the major competition for Elliott in Sunday's Atlanta Journal 500, the NASCAR stock car season finale.

Elliott has won five races and seven poles this season and virtually has clinched second place in the standings.

"What we'd like to do is win the last race and take that feeling into next year," Elliott said. "We've got things going good lately."

As for the Atlanta oval, Elliott said, "We consider it our home track and it's a good one to race on. I always enjoy it and I think what we've done here in the past shows that."

One problem Elliott's team will face this weekend is that it will have to use a makeshift crew for pit stops.

Four of Elliott's crewmen were injured in an incident in the pits during the Winston Western 500 two weeks ago.

All are recovering from the injuries, but none will be available this weekend.

Joey Knuckles, who was crew chief for rookie Davey Allison until a recent parting, has volunteered his help this week and will bring along several of his former crewmen to work with regular crew chief Ernie Elliott, Bill's brother.

"We got offers from a lot of people to help," said Alexis Leras, a spokeswoman for Elliott's team. "It's been impressive how everybody has rallied around."

Elliott said, "Joey and those guys know what they're doing and I don't think we'll have any problem with pit stops Sunday."

Practice is scheduled to start Friday morning, with a session to determine the top 20 qualifiers later in the day. The rest of the 40-car field will be determined in time trials Saturday.

A 500-kilometer ARCA stock car race also is scheduled Saturday.

UNCC Tops Ireland In Scrimmage

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Byron Dinkins scored 17 points to lead 49ers in double figures as North Carolina-Charlotte defeated the Neptune Club of Ireland 86-66 in exhibition basketball Thursday night.

Cedric Ball and Dan Plondke each scored 13 for UNC-Charlotte and Jeff West added 10.

Dinkins sparked the 49ers to a 21-5 scoring run that led to a 10-point halftime lead.

Gerald Kennedy led all scorers with 30 points for the Neptune Club while teammate Fred McKinnon added 17 points.

Hines' New Allegiance For Blue Devils

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — When he was a teen-ager in Chapel Hill, Clarkston Hines remembers going to Kenan Stadium and cheering for North Carolina. But this weekend, he's thinking Duke blue.

Hines, a Duke wide receiver up for all-conference honors, lived in Chapel Hill until the end of his sophomore season, when he moved to Jacksonville, Fla. There were still plenty of links to the Tar Heels, however.

He has a dozen aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews and uncounted cousins who live in and around Chapel Hill. One of his high school buddies was Skeet Baldwin, now a North Carolina defensive back. His mother teaches at a Chapel Hill elementary school and his sister, Evika, is a freshman at UNC.

On top of all that, one of his cousins is married to Lawrence Taylor, the former UNC all-American and New York Giants' all-pro.

"But Lawrence and I don't talk much about football," Hines said. "When we're together, he'd rather just play cards, or we'll play with his three kids."

Taylor saw Hines play football this year. It was Duke's 7-0 loss to Rutgers at Giants' Stadium and Hines didn't catch a pass.

Hines was disappointed then, but it was nothing compared to 1985.

"It was in one of the early practices. I went out and Anthony Dilweg threw a pass that came over my opposite shoulder," Hines said. "I tried to turn and jump, and it felt like somebody hit my knee from behind."

The damage, a torn anterior cruciate ligament, required surgery. Hines was redshirted his first season and it took four months before he could get his knee back to its normal size. Seven months passed before the swelling went down, Hines said.

Hines played the 1986 season wearing a knee brace and caught three passes. He has reinjured his knee twice since then, the latest in last spring's practice before the 1987 season.

Emotions Running High In Columbus

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — In most cities of more than a half-million people, the firing of a football coach might stir little more than a temporary ripple in life's terrain.

In Columbus, the effect of last week's firing of Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce was more akin to an earthquake.

In a city often consumed by the fortunes of a college football team, where weather prognosticators begin making game-day predictions days before the kickoff, and where private residences sport scarlet-and-gray flags on Saturdays, Bruce's dismissal became more than dinner conversation.

"I suspect the death of Ronald Reagan is the only thing that would have matched it," Hamilton Teaford, one of nine members of the university's board of trustees, said.

At the start of last week, emotions here were running against Bruce, in his ninth and worst season as Ohio State coach.

A last-second 29-27 loss to Iowa on Nov. 14 in Ohio Stadium, the team's third straight, dropped Ohio State to 5-4-1 on the season. And it served to fuel the fires of Bruce's detractors. After the game, at least one radio sportscaster said Bruce had to go, and the sports letters column in The Columbus Dispatch the following day was filled with anti-Bruce venom.

At his Monday media luncheon, Bruce brought along his wife, Jean, to answer the wolves howling for his scalp.

"I'm staying at Ohio State," he said, nearly spitting out the words.

Across campus, university President Edward Jennings had something far different in mind. Jennings had already decided to fire Bruce and called Athletic Director Rick Bay to give him the news. Bay, perhaps Bruce's staunchest defender on campus, was not entirely surprised but was disturbed nevertheless.

Bay told Jennings he would resign. He also refused Jennings' request to keep the firing of Bruce and his staff secret until after Saturday's season-ending game at Michigan.

"The coach is fired and then he asks me not to announce it," Bay said. "I said, 'Ed, I can't do that. I have to go back and deal with those coaches the next five days. They're very suspicious about their futures at Ohio State, and they ask me daily what lies ahead. I am not going to put myself in a position where I have to lie to their faces.'"

Bay called a news conference, announced Bruce's firing and his own resignation, and in the process turned the ire of fans away from Bruce and toward Jennings.

A television station offered viewers a chance to call in their opinions for 50 cents a call. More than 12,000 did so, with opinion running 10-1 in favor of Bruce. Radio station call-in lines lit up, and there were angry voices at the other end. The story was front-page news around the state on Tuesday, and columnists zeroed in on Jennings. Cowardly was the common adjective.

"It certainly could have been handled better," Trustee John W. Kessler said.

Jennings called his own news conference Tuesday, claiming sole responsibility for firing Bruce but refusing to give a reason. The president acknowledged Bruce's fine win-loss record — 80-26-1 at Ohio State — and denied any wrongdoing on the part of the coach.

The question remained.

The Dispatch, in an editorial Wednesday supporting Jennings, said Bruce's dismissal had less to do with the current season than his personality.

"He failed to engender good will for the institution," the newspaper said. "He failed to subjugate his personal interests to those of the university. He failed to develop civic ties that would enable him to extend the university's influence."

But Jennings' critics were not silenced. Across the country, Bruce's fellow coaches were scathing in their attacks on the university. On campus, student sentiment ran strongly against Jennings, according to Jim McCann, campus editor of The Lantern.

"It's just more or less the way it was handled," McCann said. "It's just confirming the place is a big football factory."

Suzie Glickman, vice president of the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce, said the school's reputation as a football power might also explain the strong reaction to what happened.

"It's really our home sports team," she said. "We look at Ohio State as our home sports team, and when anybody follows it the way fans do here, there's some emotions that are ... stirred."

Even Gov. Richard Celeste was not spared involvement in the fray.

In Des Moines Tuesday for a news conference with Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, Celeste met with editors of the Des Moines Register. The next day, the Register reported Celeste had linked Bruce's firing to Jennings' unhappiness over the way the coach had handled former quarterback Art Schlichter's gambling problems.

Celeste's office spent the next day trying to explain it.

"I should have stuck to being governor, I think," Celeste said finally.

Teaford, a Columbus lawyer, says he has been baffled at the outcry.

"It's, to me, quite astonishing," he said. "If only we could generate such interest in academics."

Kessler agreed.

"I guess you should never be surprised at what happens when it relates to Ohio State football," he said. "I was a little surprised at the intensity of it. I think we're overshadowing a little of what the university is trying to do."

Survival Key In Slims Tennis

NEW YORK (AP) — The Virginia Slims tennis championship is turning into a survival contest.

On Thursday night, seventh-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia became the second player in the 16-woman field to retire from a match because of injury.

Sukova was trailing top-seeded Steffi Graf 6-2, 2-0 when painful muscle spasms in her neck forced her to walk off the Madison Square Garden court in tears.

"She said she couldn't turn her head anymore," Graf said. "She was having problems serving and with her forehead."

Two nights earlier, fifth-seeded Hana Mandlikova pulled a hamstring in her opening-round match against Raffaella Reggi and had to quit after losing the first set.

Mandlikova also withdrew from the doubles competition. But Sukova returned to action late Thursday night after receiving heat treatment and won a doubles match with partner Claudia Kohde-Kilsch.

Mandlikova, Sukova and Chris Evert, who was upset by Sylvia Hanika in the first round, were the top players in Graf's half of the draw.

Now all Graf has to do to reach Sunday's final is beat Hanika, the only unseeded player left in the $1-million tournament. Hanika advanced Thursday night with a 6-2, 4-6, 6-0 victory over Reggi.

Graf and Hanika are both West Germans, but their records this year put them in different worlds.

Graf has won 10 tournaments and 73 of 75 matches. Hanika, who has a 32-18 match record, hasn't won a tournament in 1987.

"I don't think she (Hanika) can win, not the way Steffi has been playing," Reggi said.

But Hanika said she won't be intimidated by her 18-year-old opponent.

"I have nothing to lose," she said. "All the pressure is on her."

Woolridge Follows Axiom To Lift Nets By Knicks

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

An NBA axiom: When in doubt, go to the big man.

The New York Knicks did just that, but Orlando Woolridge also knows that rule and was able to turn it into a victory for the New Jersey Nets.

"When it comes down to the wire, all teams want to get the ball to their best player," Woolridge said following New Jersey's 108-107 NBA victory Thursday night.

With one second to go, the Knicks were inbounding the ball from under their own basket.

"I saw a little eye contact between Gerald Wilkins and Patrick (Ewing), so I cheated in that direction and made the interception," Woolridge said as he capped a night that saw him score a game-high 25 points, including the tying and winning points from the free throw line, and blocking a shot with 35 seconds remaining.

"I'm just happy I was able to come back in the fourth quarter, after playing poorly, to make some big plays," Woolridge said. "I was hurting physically and I think I lost my concentration early in the second half."

Elsewhere, it was Houston 105, Cleveland 97, and Milwaukee 117, Sacramento 113 in overtime.

With 4:47 to play, Woolridge scored a basket that started an eight-point spurt that saw the Nets tie the game at 101 on a Woolridge free throw. After the Knicks went ahead 103-101 on a jam by Ewing, Woolridge scored on a driving layup, was fouled and hit a free throw.

Chris McNealy's two free throws for the Knicks were matched by Dennis Hopson's jumper. Mark Jackson put the Knicks back in front at 107-106 on two free throws, but with 35 seconds remaining, Woolridge blocked Jackson's driving layup.

Woolridge then hit his game-winning foul shot with 22 seconds left. After Ewing missed a baseline jumper with four seconds to play, the ball was knocked out of bounds by New Jersey. But Woolridge intercepted Wilkins' inbound pass as the Nets won their second straight game following a season-opening four straight losses.

"I like the character we showed at the end of the game," Nets Coach Dave Wohl said. "We easily could have folded. We were really struggling, but we stayed in it and made a comeback."

Trent Tucker led the Knicks with 18 points, while McNealy had 17 points and 12 rebounds.

Rockets 105, Cavaliers 97

Houston held Cleveland scoreless from the field for nearly six minutes late in the fourth quarter and made their 15 points from the foul line to defeat the Cavaliers.

Akeem Olajuwon had 27 points to lead the Rockets, who won their eighth straight over Cleveland. The Cavaliers were paced by Brad Daugherty's 24 points.

Bucks 117, Kings 113, OT

Terry Cummings scored five of his 34 points in overtime to lead Milwaukee over Sacramento. Paul Pressey added 23 points and Jack Sikma 20 as Milwaukee posted its 10th straight win over the Kings.

Sacramento tied the game at 100 with one second left in regulation when Derek Smith tipped in a rebound after rookie Kenny Smith missed the second of two free throws. Smith hit the first free throw to pull Sacramento within 100-98.

Otis Thorpe led Sacramento with 33 points, while Smith added a career-high 23 and backup center Jawann Oldham grabbed a career-high 15 rebounds.

Yesterday's Powers Meet In NFL Action

By BARRY WILNER

Big Game Weekend

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The traditional "big" games are this Saturday: Oklahoma-Nebraska, Ohio State-Michigan, UCLA-Southern California, Tennessee-Kentucky, Kansas-Missouri, Oregon State-Oregon, Washington-Washington State and Utah-Brigham Young.

And then there's what always has been known as "The Game," Harvard-Yale.

For third-ranked Miami of Florida, there's a big temptation to overlook Saturday's game against Toledo, a contest definitely not in the "big" category. It's especially true this year because Miami still has a regular-season game against Notre Dame and a possible national championship game against the Nebraska-Oklahoma winner in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day.

Even Toledo Coach Dan Simrell can understand how the Hurricanes might be looking past Saturday night's game.

"We understand what we're up against," Simrell said.

Toledo has a 3-6-1 record against Miami's 8-0 mark. And, thanks to Virginia Tech, Toledo won't even be able to sneak up on the Hurricanes.

Last week, Miami had to score two touchdowns in the final five minutes to down Virginia Tech, 1-9, 27-13.

"Virginia Tech put a big scare in us," Miami safety Bennie Blades said. "We know that right now we've got to focus ourselves on the Toledo game. If we don't do what's expected of us, the Orange Bowl won't be for the national championship."

Wide receiver Michael Irvin said the Hurricanes will have something to prove against Toledo after last week's close call.

"We were in a dogfight, and we weren't able to have fun like we like to have on Saturdays," Irvin said. "I'll tell you, right now I wouldn't want to play for Toledo. I wouldn't want to play for anybody that was playing Miami this week."

Still, Hurricanes Coach Jimmy Johnson is worried that his team might look past Toledo to the Notre Dame game. "I think there's a real danger of that," Johnson said. "We've got to make sure we do everything possible in practice to go into the ballgame Saturday night without any thoughts of anybody else."

The injury-plagued Rockets may not tax Miami much in their season finale. Toledo used three quarterbacks in last week's 17-17 tie with Central Michigan, and all three are hurting. In addition, leading rusher David Rohrs has missed the last three games with a back injury and won't play Saturday.

"We're not in the position we expected to be in," Simrell said. "And we're playing the No. 3 team, which could just as well be the No. 1 team. I don't think there's any doubt about that."

In what will be the regular-season finale for most of the nation's major schools, traditional matchups are the norm. This year, the Harvard-Yale battle is even more special.

The Ivy League championship will be at stake Saturday in the 104th renewal of what the influential Harvard and Yale alumni refer to as "The Game."

More than 70,000 spectators, many of them powerful captains of business and industry who attended the prestigious universities, are expected to cram Yale Bowl.

The teams have identical records of 7-2 overall and 5-1 in the league, with Harvard's lone Ivy loss coming against Cornell six weeks ago and Yale's against Brown in the first game of the season. Yale is favored by one point.

"We get a big crowd for this game no matter what our records, but to have the season come down to a game at the Bowl for the championship of the Ivy League is something special," Yale Coach Carmen Cozza.

The Nebraska-Oklahoma game will pit the nation's top-ranked teams, with the winner heading to the Orange Bowl for a Jan. 1 meeting against Miami and the loser heading to the Fiesta Bowl.

In other games Saturday involving The Associated Press Top Twenty teams, it will be No. 5 UCLA at Southern Cal, West Virginia at No. 6 Syracuse, No. 7 Notre Dame at Penn State, No. 8 Clemson at No. 12 South Carolina, No. 9 Louisiana State at Tulane, No. 11 Michigan State at Wisconsin, Iowa at No. 13 Oklahoma State, No. 15 Tennessee at Kentucky, No. 16 Texas A&M at Texas Christian, Minnesota at No. 18 Iowa, Kent State at No. 19 Pittsburgh and Purdue at No. 20 Indiana.

No. 4 Florida State, No. 10 Auburn, No. 14 Georgia and No. 17 Alabama are idle this week.

night's game is especially intriguing. Both teams need victories to remain viable playoff contenders. Both have weak areas which could play right into the strengths of the opponent — Dallas is ranked 20th against the pass, Miami 22nd against the run.

And, of course, there are the coaches — Tom Landry of Dallas and Don Shula of Miami. Shula is 4-3 in games against Landry, but the Cowboys won the biggest of those encounters in the 1972 Super Bowl, a 24-3 victory.

Shula, in his 25th year, is the NFL's winningest active coach and second to George Halas. Landry, in his 28th season, has 265 victories, two fewer than Shula. Only Curly Lambeau, who coached the Packers for 29 seasons, has more consecutive years with the same team than Landry.

"You've got to stand back and admire everything that he's (Landry) done," Shula said. "Not only the way he's handled himself, but the positive influence he's had on young people and people in general."

"We don't get to go against each other very often," Landry said. "Don is just a great coach. Right now, he's struggling like we are, but his teams are always well coached."

The Cowboys are 5-4 and coming off a 23-17 overtime victory over New England, which dropped the Patriots to 4-5 in the AFC East, the same record as Miami. Shula is hoping the Cowboys help his team again this week.

He's also hoping the Dolphins can find a way to stop Herschel Walker, whose 60-yard touchdown run won last Sunday's game.

"He's a great talent," Shula said. "Walker was amazing last year. He has showed he's a great receiver and runner."

The Dolphins don't have any comparable all-around threats. Their forte is passing, with Dan Marino, the league's top-rated quarterback, throwing to standout receivers Mark Duper and Mark Clayton.

"As a pure passer, I'd rate him tops," Landry said of Marino, who has thrown touchdown passes in 29 straight games. "It's hard to put pressure on him. He has a great feeling of when to let the ball go."

Dallas might have other quarterback problems, too. Danny White has a sore wrist and Steve Pelluer might start. Pelluer hasn't thrown a pass during a game this season.

Several key AFC divisional games are set for Sunday. Central co-leaders Cleveland and Houston meet, as do the West's top two teams, San Diego and Seattle. In the East, where Indianapolis and New York are 5-4 and the other three teams are 4-5, the Colts are at New England and the Jets host Buffalo.

Also, it's Atlanta at Minnesota, Detroit at Chicago, Green Bay at Kansas City, Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, St. Louis at Philadelphia, San Francisco at Tampa Bay, the New York Giants at New Orleans, and Denver at the Los Angeles Raiders.

On Monday night, the Los Angeles Rams are at Washington.

Cleveland and Houston are 6-3. The Browns are used to being in first place, winning the division in 1985 and 1986. The Oilers haven't been in such a heady position since 1980.

The game will feature big-play defenses that could steal the show.

The Browns lead the NFL in total defense and pass defense and have allowed an NFL-low 131 points. The Oilers' defense is second in the NFL with 18 interceptions, including six by safety Keith Bostic, the AFC leader. Replacement back Domingo Bryant has four interceptions.

"We knew we were much improved last year but it was hard to sell that," Coach Jerry Glanville said, citing Houston's 5-11 mark. "I think everybody else believed it, but when you're not winning, the bottom line is nobody believes it."

After 1980, the Oilers lost more games than any NFL team over the next five years. But they won four of their final seven games in 1986 and this year have beaten all three divisional rivals on the road for the first time ever. Houston's 15-10 victory at Cleveland came during the strike.

"We've put ourselves in a position to win our division just as Houston has," Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar said. "I think both teams have improved over last year."

"We are in the second year of this offensive system and our defense has played better and it's the same with Houston."

San Diego, 7-1 and two games in front of Seattle, can just about cement a playoff spot for the first time since 1982, the last strike-torn season. But the Chargers, who have won eight straight games and are off to their best start since 1961, could be without quarterback Dan Fouts, who has a pulled calf muscle. They haven't won at Seattle since 1980.

"We've made so much progress so quickly that I don't think people felt that we would do that," Chargers Coach Al Saunders said. "I think maybe all of us felt it would take a little more time ... That's being realistic about it."

6 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD TEST DRIVE THE ALL-NEW 1988 MAZDA 929.

"Wrapped in leather and supported in luxury... the 929 felt fantastic, or more to the point, it felt like the best from Germany."

MOTOR TREND, November 1987

The new Mazda 929 is a high-performance luxury sedan combining the most civilized of creature comforts with performance that outstrips some of Europe's finest luxury sports sedans.

Yet 929 is substantially less expensive to own. About $8,000 less than Mercedes-Benz 190E, about $11,000 less than BMW 528e.

"This car is roomy like no other car from Japan."

The 1988 Mazda 929 gives you "a feeling of being in a car nearly twice the size..."* Mazda 929 offers more interior room than Mercedes-Benz 190E or BMW 528e—even Mercedes-Benz 300E.

There is over three feet of legroom for rear-seat passengers. And the 929 is actually quieter inside than the costlier Mercedes-Benz 300E and BMW 735i.

You'll also find a 6-way adjustable driver's seat with lumbar support. Plus rich velour upholstery (leather is optional). To quote MOTOR TREND:

"Large, overstuffed seats front and rear with adjustable headrests and a rear seat center armrest, electronic climate controls with excellent vent placement, optional electronic instruments, and a six speaker AM/FM cassette audio system with graphic equalizer are all things we'd expect, and all so nicely integrated into the interior's flow. Here, clearly, is the new benchmark at which Japanese manufacturers will be shooting."

"The 929's V-6 pulls for the moon with a seductive silkiness."

At the heart of the Mazda 929's high performance lies an advanced, all-new, 158-horsepower, 18-valve, 3.0-liter V-6 engine with electronic fuel injection. Its smooth, quiet power can take 929 from 0 to 60 in just 9.2 seconds and to a top speed of 121 mph—outperforming Mercedes-Benz 190E and BMW 528e.¹

It has been matched to a unique handling package that thrusts the 929 into the ranks of the world's great road cars. "Lean hard into a corner and the 929 stays on its feet... Throw it into a series of ess-bends and you're surprised at how well it follows your lead. Enough motive power is available to flatten hills or fry asphalt..."

"Smooth, quiet and quick, the 3-liter is the stuff 'real' luxu-sport sedans are made of, and just the stuff some German car makers had better start to fear."

All-new Mazda 929 is built the time-honored way.

With quality and care. With a front-engine, rear-drive chassis. "Mazda's reasons for bucking the front-drive trend are perfectly sound: to produce a more even weight distribution, to promote better handling, and to achieve a more refined drive. Besides, the space efficiencies of front drive would be of minimal value in a car that is already roomy enough for everybody but land-yacht die-hards."²

The luxury of all these standard features.

The 929's serious instrumentation includes speedometer, tachometer, and gauges for vital functions. You also get cruise control. Front and rear reading lights. Plus your choice of a 5-speed manual or 4-speed automatic over-drive transmission at no extra cost.

This world-class tourer comes with a long list of luxury features as standard equipment, including:

- E-Link independent rear suspension that continuously tunes suspension geometry to provide optimum balance of handling, stability and ride.
- 4-wheel power disc brakes
- Electronically controlled automatic air conditioning
- Variable-assist power steering and brakes
- Power windows and door locks
- Tilt/telescopic, leather-wrapped steering wheel
- Theft-deterrent system.

Each is designed to add to your comfort and control. And together they make the 929 an even more impressive value.

A 36-month/50,000 mile "bumper-to-bumper" warranty.

A high-performance luxury sedan as remarkable as the Mazda 929 should have a warranty to match. So like all 1988 Mazdas, the 929 comes with a "bumper-to-bumper" warranty for 36 months or 50,000 miles (see your Mazda dealer for details). It offers you the kind of comprehensive protection common 5, 6 and 7 year "drivetrain-only" warranties don't provide.

Come on down to your Mazda dealer's and try out the all-new Mazda 929 high-performance luxury sedan. You'll discover that when it comes to value, performance and luxury, nobody delivers like your Mazda dealer. That's the Mazda Way.

Come drive the new 929 at your Mazda dealer's today.

Syrian Troops Beat Students In Beirut Raid

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops stormed the American University of Beirut and beat up dozens of students with rifle butts at the dormitories during the night, witnesses said today.

Fifty students, most of them Lebanese, were rushed to the neighboring American University Hospital for treatment of "various head, leg and chest injuries," said one witness, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The witness said 14 students were discharged today and the others, whose injuries were more serious, remained in the hospital.

Classes were suspended at the university today as about 400 students demonstrated on campus to protest what they called "Syrian highhandedness."

One demonstrator told reporters that Syrian troops imposed strict security measures on campus after two bloody bombings at Beirut airport and the American University Hospital. Thirteen people were killed and 110 wounded in the two explosions, one Nov. 11 at the airport and the second at the hospital Saturday.

The Syrians, who took up a law-enforcing task in Moslem west Beirut nine months ago, closed all but of the university's entrances after the bombings, forcing students to line up on the so-called Main Gate for thorough security checks as they move into and out of the sprawling campus.

A student, seeking to avoid the queue, tried to jump over walls fencing the campus late Thursday night. Syrian soldiers caught him and beat him.

"When the student showed up at the dormitory with blood all over his face and head, his colleagues rushed out after midnight and shouted protests at the Syrians," added the witness. Then "the Syrians stormed in."

This was the second Syrian raid on the university in eight months.

FREED — Five-year-old kidnap victim Melodie Nakachian gets a hug from her father, Lebanese businessman Raymond Nakachian, and mother, Korean child, Princess Kimera, in Estepona, Spain, today. The child, kidnapped 11 days earlier, was freed when police raided a house in Cadiz. (AP Laserphoto)

Police Storm Home, Rescue Girl Held Hostage 11 Days

ESTEPONA, Spain (AP) — Police today stormed a home and rescued the 5-year-old daughter of a Lebanese millionaire who was held hostage for 11 days. Officials said shots were fired, and three kidnapers were arrested.

The girl, Melodie Nakachian, was unharmed, but one of the three kidnapers was seriously wounded, police said. No ransom money had been paid, they said.

No members of the elite police unit that rescued the child were injured in the 5 a.m. raid seven miles from Estepona on the southern Costa del Sol.

During the girl's captivity, her abductors had demanded millions of dollars in ransom money.

The father of Miss Nakachian told reporters his daughter's first words to him after being freed were "I'm fine Papa, don't cry."

Jose Maria Rodriguez Colorado, director of the national police, told Spanish National Radio three men were arrested in the raid and that police were searching for two other abductors who remained at large in the area.

Rodriguez Colorado said the suspects were from a gang of known criminals who had been active in France and Spain. He did not elaborate.

The radio later reported that police also had arrested a man and a woman in Malaga in connection with the kidnapping. The identities and nationalities of the arrested man and woman were not immediately made public, the radio said.

Raymond Nakachian, 55, called the Spanish police "the best in the world and part of my family forever more" and added he "had not paid a penny and hadn't intended to do so."

The kidnapers had threatened to kill the girl several times and demanded a ransom of $13 million, which they later reduced to $5 million and then to $4 million, Nakachian told reporters.

He thanked the Spanish people for their support, including those who had sent small amounts of money to the family.

Rodriguez Colorado said the three kidnapers arrested included a Spaniard identified as Angel Garcia Menendez, and two men identified only as Frenchmen. Spanish state television quoted a Malaga hospital spokesman as saying the injured man was of French nationality and suffered a bullet wound to the chest.

The girl, who was born in Las Vegas, was snatched from a family car Nov. 9 by four hooded gunmen as she was being driven to school in the Mediterranean resort of Marbella on Spain's Costa del Sol.

The Nakachian family has lived in Estepona since moving to Spain more than a year ago from Paris.

Her mother is popular singer Princess Kimera, 33, whose real name is Kim Hong-Hee. She launched her singing career in France and she is known for performing with her face painted with colorful designs. Her last album "Femme Sauvage" ("Wild Woman") was released in France in September.

The kidnapping drama was heavily covered in the media and dozens of foreign reporters had surrounded the family home in Estepona for more than a week.

The kidnapping drew attention to the seamer side of the Costa del Sol where Middle Eastern arms dealers, Saudi princes, West German nobility and suspected British bank robbers have luxury homes and frequent lavish restaurants and clubs on the "Golden Mile" of real estate between Estepona and Marbella.

Before moving to Spain, Nakachian studied engineering, construction and business in England. A Lebanese source in Paris says Nakachian opened a nightclub in London after finishing school in the 1960s.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also said Nakachian had been a building contractor in Saudi Arabia for a decade.

Several Spanish and British newspapers have claimed Nakachian had ties to the London underworld and was barred from re-entering Britain in 1966 in connection with illicit activities.

Nakachian had denied the press reports.

Antique Car Goes For $9.9 Million

LONDON (AP) — A vintage car dealer paid a record $9.86 million for a black and blue 1931 Bugatti Royale that still cruises at 70 mph and is only one of six in existence.

"I consider this car to be the finest example of engineering and coachwork design in the world," Nicholas Harley said in a brief statement Thursday night after placing the winning bid at an auction at Royal Albert Hall.

"It is my intention that it will remain on show in England and possibly become the ultimate jewel for the most discerning collector in the world," Harley said.

The Bugatti was one of 10 cars Christie's auction house offered for sale. The auction was preceded by months of heavy publicity and attracted about 4,000 people, including about 300 bidders.

The 19-foot long, eight-cylinder Type 41 Bugatti, with its distinctive prancing elephant hood ornament, shows less than 5,000 miles and remains in excellent working order.

Harley, of London, indicated he planned to offer it for sale sometime in the future.

The seller of the Bugatti was not identified. Until recently, it was part of the Briggs Cunningham Automotive Museum collection in Costa Mesa, Calif. Cunningham, a former racing driver and America's Cup yachtsman, bought the car directly from the Bugatti family in 1951, which had driven it since it was new.

Japanese Unions Form Federation

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's labor unions today formed a nationwide federation in a bid to stem decades of declining membership and to rekindle their drive to shorten the 48-hour work week and improve working conditions.

Sixty-two unions from four federations merged into a single united front to try to boost the clout of a movement hurt by the apathy of an increasingly affluent and white-collar worker pool.

The new labor federation, the Japanese Private Sector Trade Union Confederation, will at the outset represent 5.6 million workers.

Japan's unionization rate has fallen steadily since the late 1940s, when more than 50 percent of the labor force was organized. Last year, a record low 28 percent of the nation's 43.8 million working people were union members, according to the Ministry of Labor.

"White-collar workers and the younger generation don't feel any attraction to the unions," said Masakazu Tsukamoto, a ministry assistant director.

"Before the war, people joined the unions to protect their jobs," he said. But now, because of growing affluence and job security in Japan, "labor and management enjoy a good working relationship."

Unlike in other countries, where unions are industrywide, unions are organized from within companies in Japan and then join industrywide unions as well as one of the four umbrella federations.

In the new confederation, two of the four federations disbanded and a third is expected to do so soon, making the new body by far the largest grouping of private-sector unions.

The fourth and largest federation is the 4.4 million-member General Council of Trade Unions of Japan.

"How do you get your legs to stretch so far?"

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Nov. 21

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A friend whose opinions differ radically from yours can give you some very helpful advice. A short trip will help you relax.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't let a secret worry prevent you from handling your responsibilities. Say nothing which could start a distracting argument.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If you help a friend with a problem, be sure to remain objective and don't let the problem become your own. Be polite in conversation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Be exact when handling business and credit matters. This will get your week off to a good start. Don't ask any big favors.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): This would be a bad time to begin any new projects. Don't listen to advice from a person whose opinions you have never respected.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Be sure to stick "to the letter" when dealing with contracts or agreements. Thing of your true feelings and avoid arguments at home.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): An associate is apt to be stubborn, so drop the subject until later. This is not a good day to get into any public or charity work.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You may find it difficult to get your surroundings in the order you want, so concentrate on your person well-being and be happy.

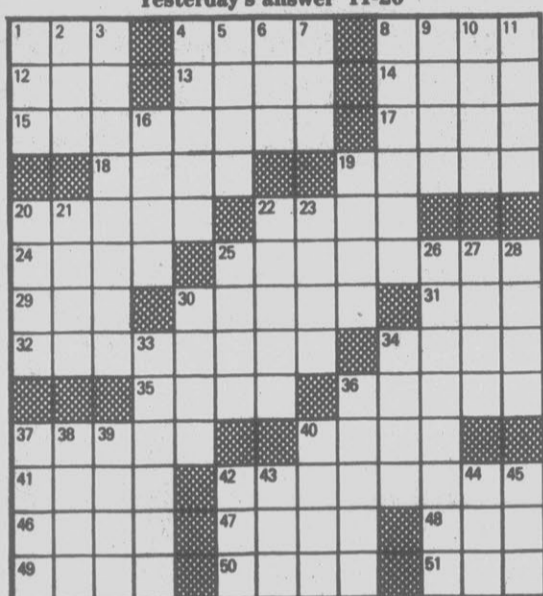

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A troubled friend could upset you, but be kind since this person may have an illness. Don't indulge in an expensive pleasure.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): If a close tie has problems, be a good listener. Show your devotion and create a greater harmony at home with your mate.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Use great care when driving today. Don't make any new friends too quickly today, since they may be harmful to your career.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Plan how you'll get your financial ideas across to others, but don't take any action yet. You may have a unique and profitable idea, so guard it.

 We have said it before: The average player watches the high cards; the expert notes every card. When the average player thinks of a finesse, he thinks in terms of an A-Q or a K-J tenace; the expert looks for any tenace. You can't go much lower than today's example.

Sitting in the South seat in a duplicate event was an old-fashioned player who liked to bid by the seat of his pants—we don't recommend Blackwood when you have two fast losers in a suit. However, the final contract was reasonable—only the duplication in diamonds and spades put the contract in any jeopardy.

West led the eight of spades, covered by the nine and jack and won by the king. Declarer drew trumps in three rounds, ending in dummy, then led the ten of spades, intending to let it ride if East played low. When East put up the queen and West dropped the seven, declarer noted that he had a finesse position in spades—his 6-4 were poised over East's 5-3. The ace of clubs provided an entry for a spade lead, and when East followed with the three spot, declarer confidently finessed.

When that held, declarer was able to discard the queen of diamonds from dummy. He made an over-trick, and a top score, as a result, because most declarers took the plebian diamond finesse and ended up with just 12 tricks. At rubber bridge, the overtrick would have yielded only personal satisfaction.

At duplicate, the dividend was more tangible.

Faye Takes Wrong Turn

SUN CITY CENTER, Fla. (AP) — Actress Alice Faye had a date with 600 fans, but a chauffeur apparently took her to the wrong town by mistake, promoters say.

Ms. Faye, who starred in movies in the 1930s and '40s, was to visit this sprawling retirement community south of Tampa on Wednesday.

She had made an appearance in Clearwater earlier in the day and was scheduled to address the gathering of senior citizens here that afternoon as a touring good-health spokeswoman for Pfizer Pharmaceuticals.

The program started with film clips. Many in the audience stuck around for two hours until the appearance was scrubbed when it was learned Ms. Faye had been driven to Sarasota 40 miles away and had a plane to catch.

The promoters will try to reschedule the visit, said publicist Scott Grogan.

'Mister Rogers' Joins His Soviet Counterpart In 'Puppet Detente'

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a beautiful day in the neighborhood for Mister Rogers and his Soviet television counterpart, Tatiana Vedeneyeva, who worked their "puppet detente" on a group of American and Russian youngsters.

"Kids throughout the world are alike," Ms. Vedeneyeva, host of a Soviet children's TV program, said through a translator.

"They like to play, they like to discover something interesting, and of course they want to have their parents love them," she said.

Fred Rogers, creator and host of "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," and Ms. Vedeneyeva, host of "Good Night, Little Ones," are bringing a bit of each other's worlds to the children of both lands to show them they are different, yet the same.

Rogers, whose program has aired on the Public Broadcasting Service for 20 years and on other networks before that, visited Moscow for two weeks in September and taped an episode of "Good Night, Little Ones" with Ms. Vedeneyeva that will air later this year on Soviet TV.

On Monday, Ms. Vedeneyeva is to visit the set of "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" in Pittsburgh to tape segments that will be used March 7-11 in Rogers' program.

Each program relies extensively on puppets.

"They call it puppet detente," Rogers told Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin before they greeted 30 Soviet and American children invited to the embassy for the occasion.

The children sat attentively, their legs dangling over the seats of their adult-sized chairs, as the Soviet official welcomed them in English.

"Your concerns are the same," he said. "It's important for you to be friends, friends across the borders."

The message of the exchange is "that there are adults all over the world who care about children," said Rogers, who wore a conservative suit rather than his trademark cardigan sweater and sneakers but spoke in the low-key manner that marks his style.

Ms. Vedeneyeva speaks only a few words of English and Rogers knows even less Russian, but he said the two can communicate with children of both countries through their actions and those of their puppets.

Fourteen 3- and 4-year-olds were brought from a local day care center to join 16 Soviet children, who recited poems in English, sang in Russian and danced for their young guests.

After the welcoming ceremony and refreshments of soda and cookies, the youngsters crowded around Ms. Vedeneyeva while she entertained them with a puppet she called Steps, a fuzzy gray bunny.

Ms. Vedeneyeva, who said she has a young son, declined to tell reporters how old she is.

"If they (children) know my true age they might feel more distant from me," she said.

Carol Burnett Joins Daughter On Book

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Carol Burnett is writing a book with her daughter Carrie, a former drug abuser, about the dark times the addiction caused in their household and what it took to overcome the problem.

Carrie, 23, who last month celebrated six years of freedom from drugs, came up with the idea of writing the book after talking to junior high school students about drug abuse, Miss Burnett said.

"We came up with the idea of doing the book separately," the 51-year-old actress-comedian said in a telephone interview from her home in Honolulu. "I would write my point of view as the mother, and she would write her point of view as the kid. We would alternate chapters. And we would write the last chapter together."

Carrie, a budding singer and actress, also just finished co-starring with her mother in a CBS-TV movie, "Hostage," in which she plays a troubled girl who forms a friendship with a widow portrayed by Miss Burnett.

Miss Burnett was in Hawaii to film an episode of "Magnum, P.I."

Tuning Up

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — British rock star Sting was tuning up for tonight's opening of a world concert featuring music from his new record, "Nothing Like the Sun."

Sting arrived here Thursday accompanied by a six-piece band and a technical crew of more than 20.

He is scheduled to perform in five Brazilian cities, then appear in Argentina next month.

CBS Begins Shuffling Prime-Time

L.A. Times-Washington Post
HOLLYWOOD — In the first round of major prime-time reshuffling this season, CBS Thursday canceled one of its new fall shows, "The Law and Harry McGraw," and said it would add two new programs and the returning "Simon & Simon" to its lineup.
 "Simon & Simon," renewed last spring despite its failure to win a spot on the fall schedule, will begin its seventh season Dec. 3 in the time slot it occupied last season, Thursday nights. Back as the brothers who work as private detectives will be Jameson Parker and Gerald McRaney.
 "High Mountain Rangers," a new action-adventure show starring Robert Conrad, and "48 Hours," a series from CBS News that will be anchored by Dan Rather, will join the schedule in January, CBS Entertainment President Kim LeMasters said.
 "The Law and Harry McGraw," starring Jerry Orbach as a Boston private eye and Barbara Babcock as a patrician criminal lawyer, will have its final broadcast Dec. 22, the network said. CBS had already canceled two other first-year series this season: the private-eye show "Leg Work" and the comedy "Everything's Relative."
 "High Mountain Rangers" will premiere Jan. 2. Filmed in the Sierra Nevada, the series stars Conrad and his sons, Christian and Shane, as members of an elite unit of mountain rangers.
 Installments of "48 Hours" which debuts Jan. 19, will be shot during 48-hour periods and will explore contemporary issues.
 CBS, running third in the prime-time ratings so far this season, said it also will move five shows to new time periods.
 "Frank's Place" and "Kate & Allie" will trade time slots Monday nights, beginning Dec. 7, with "Kate & Allie" starting the evening, followed by "Frank's Place."
 "Cagney & Lacey" moves from Monday nights to Tuesday nights Jan. 5; its Monday position will be filled as of Jan. 4 by "Wiseguy," which is moving Thursday nights, the spot being given to "Simon & Simon."
 "Houston Knights," currently seen Tuesday nights, will move to Saturday nights beginning Jan. 2.
 "Simon & Simon" ranked 68th out of 104 prime-time network series with a 20 percent share of the audience at the end of last season.

ABC Special To Celebrate Rolling Stone Anniversary

By KATHRYN BAKER
 AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It's about time the don't-trust-anybody-over-30 crowd started feeling old. The 20th anniversary of Rolling Stone magazine? Yikes!
 ABC celebrates a coming-of-age for the don't-ever-grow-up generation Tuesday with "Rolling Stone Magazine's 20 Years of Rock 'n' Roll." The special was co-produced by Rolling Stone editor and publisher Jann Wenner and "Saturday Night Live" producer Lorne Michaels. Dennis Hopper is host. The special features nostalgic footage of stars in performance then and interviews with some of those same stars now.

 "It's funny. I look at our special. I look at events I was in 20 years ago and see what people I know looked like 20 years ago and see how they look today and there are little pang," Wenner said in an interview. "People definitely thicken up around the waist and get a few wrinkles and go a little gray."

"No, I don't feel too old about it. I think we're lucky. Some of these people that are in the special, they're back at the top now. Like the Grateful Dead, Paul Simon, George Harrison, Robbie Robertson. These are the old timers, and each of them this year has done some work that looks to be among their best ever. It makes me feel good, actually."

Included in the interviews are Mick Jagger, Tina Turner, Sting, Cyndi Lauper, David Bowie, Jerry Garcia, Grace Slick, George Harrison, Neil Young, Lou Reed, David Byrne, Randy Newman, Joni Mitchell and Robertson.

Missing, however, are two biggies who are so cool they rarely give interviews even to this magazine — Bob Dylan and Bruce Springsteen.

Performance footage includes Jimi Hendrix at the Monterey Pop Festival, Otis Redding in London, Jim Morrison and the Doors and Bowie as "Ziggy Stardust."

"If you're a rock fan, or even just a mild rock fan, it's so packed with good moments and good material," Wenner said. "It's got some very, very funny interview material in it. All the interviews were new. We brought the people into studios and filmed them a la 'Reds' style against a plain backdrop and had a Rolling Stone interviewer there."

Networks Consider Films On Bakkers

CHARLOTTE (AP) — NBC and CBS are considering films about Jim and Tammy Bakker, but there is no guarantee either will reach completion, officials say.
 On Wednesday, NBC confirmed that Ken Trevey had been hired to write a script for a film called "Fall From Grace." Michael O'Hara, director of publicity for special programs at NBC, told The Charlotte Observer that Jeff Franklin will be the producer.
 The earliest that "Fall From Grace" could air would be the 1988-89 season, O'Hara said.

Meanwhile, producer Bill Finnegan put his chances of getting an unauthorized biography of the Bakkers on CBS at "8-to-1 against."
 Finnegan said he hoped to produce a drama as a "study of what happens when things go awry with somebody who has the position that (Bakker) has." But he said the story would not require having the rights to Jim and Tammy Bakker's story.
 Bakker resigned as leader of the television evangelical organization PTL amid reports that he had a sexual liaison with church secretary Jessica Hahn.
