PRISON BURNS — Smoke and flame pour from the U.S. Penitentiary in Atlanta late Monday after Cuban prisoners rioted in protest of plans by the U.S. government to ship some Cuban refugees back to their homeland. Arms Talks Ready For Treaty GENEVA (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today announced that he and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze have "completed agreement on all the outstanding issues" of a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Shaking hands with the Soviet foreign minister outside the U.S. mission, Shultz said all that remained was completing treaty language, which lower-level officials would be able to do.

Shevardnadze said: "We have no doubt the summit meeting will be successful." He referred to the talks President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev are to have in Washington on Dec. 8-10.

"The next step should be the abolition of all nuclear weapons," the smiling Soviet minister said.

The announcement came this afternoon after two days of talks between Shultz and Shevardnadze, aimed at clearing all obstacles to the arms agreement.

The treaty would ban about 1,000 U.S. and Soviet missiles with a range between 300 and 3,000 miles.

During this afternoon's session, Shultz and Shevardnadze met with a team of Soviet and U.S. arms experts appointed Monday to clear obstacles to the treaty. The team was headed by Paul Nitze, a veteran arms control negotiator and White House adviser, and Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, chief of staff of the Soviet armed forces.

A morning meeting between Shultz and Shevardnadze lasted more than three hours, followed by a working lunch and then the afternoon meeting.

Both sides on Monday characterized the talks as "constructive," State Department spokesman Charles Redman said.

But a U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity earlier today, said, "We haven't got it (a treaty) nailed down yet."

He said at least two important issues were unresolved. One was a question of data the United States had requested from the Soviets on the location and number of their missiles to be destroyed under the proposed treaty.

The Soviets provided some of this data last week and handed over additional data on the weekend, the official said.

Redman said Shultz and Shevardnadze met twice for a total of 6½ hours Monday.

One Death Confirmed In Atlanta

Rioting Cubans Reject Bids For Release Of Hostages

ATLANTA (AP) — Cuban inmates who seized a federal prison refused to release any of their 75 hostages today despite an offer to delay deportations, while other Cuban prisoners in Louisiana paraded two of their 28 hostages to show they were unharmed.

There were reports of as many as six dead after Monday's uprising at the federal penitentiary in Atlanta, but only one death could be confirmed.

Helicopters circled the Atlanta complex after a new blaze broke out shortly after 6 a.m. today. Spanish-speaking inmates could be heard over walkie-talkies shouting, "What's going on in the factory? What's going on in the factory?"

The riot by Cuban inmates fearing deportation left at least 12 people injured. Eight Cuban prisoners were hospitalized in satisfactory condition today, five with gunshot wounds, authorities said.

The rioting began Monday morning, two days after an uprising by Cuban inmates at the Oakdale, La., federal detention center, left 31 injured.

The inmates revolted after the State Department announced that Cuba had agreed to take back 2,500 refugees, most of them criminals or mentally ill, who had been in legal limbo in the United States since the 1980 Mariel boatlift.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese II offered a moratorium on deportations to Cuba if the inmates ended their uprisings and freed the hostages. Meese said Monday the moratorium would be in effect until each case could be reviewed in a "full, fair and equitable" manner.

At the half-burned Oakdale center, inmates brandished weapons in a show of force early today of force and brought two hostages to the compound's gates to show that they are not being mistreated. The inmates have threatened to kill the hostages if any assault was made.

In Atlanta, one inmate death was reported by Rep. Pat Swindall, R-Ga.

A television reporter sat in on negotiations between authorities and four prisoners representing the approximately 1,500 Cubans to assure that any agreement be made public. The reporter said inmates brought out a body of a prisoner who was shot, apparently to bolster their contention that guards and not other prisoners were responsible.

Mike Caltabiano, executive assistant to the warden, said none of the inmates had guns, and that guards fired warning shots.

California Hit Again By Quake

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A strong earthquake struck the Southern California desert early today, knocking trailers off their foundations, damaging buildings and causing at least three injuries, authorities said.

The quake hit at 5:16 a.m. and had a preliminary magnitude of 6.5 on the Richter scale of ground motion, said U.S. Geological Survey seismologist Lucy Jones at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

The tremor — the second strong quake in the area in 12 hours — apparently hit the southern city of Calexico hardest, according to early reports.

A roof collapsed at a downtown business, a furniture store's wall caved in, and authorities investigated reports of three gas leaks, said police dispatcher Daniel Saenz. One person was injured, but he did not know the extent of the injury.

"The U.S. International port of entry in Calexico has been closed" to guard against looting, he said.

At least two other minor injuries were reported in the county area, including a pregnant woman who fell down her stairs as a result of the jar, said Imperial Valley Assistant Sheriff Ted Whitmer.

"We've had a number of trailers ... that have come off their blocks, but no fires or no injuries so far out of those. We've had reports of cracks in the roadway and some bridges but no closures," he said.

Today's quake was felt as far away as the Palo Verde nuclear generating station 50 miles west of downtown Phoenix, Ariz.

Brook Valley Annexation Stirs Residents

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Brook Valley residents voiced their concerns Tuesday night to Greenville City Council regarding a proposed annexation of their property into the city.

Approximately 40 people living in the Brook Valley vicinity gathered at the public hearing to air opinions and ask questions regarding future taxes, environmental concerns, and other annexation issues.

The city is considering a proposed annexation plan which would add approximately 583 acres of the Brook Valley subdivision and surrounding vicinity into the city limits at the end of next year.

The action is scheduled to be decided at the Dec. 9 Greenville City Council meeting.

"I think the principal concern of most of the homeowners in Brook Valley is the additional out-of-pocket costs it's going to be, as compared to the costs they (residents) now have, and the services that they will get for the costs they're going to be contributing," said Frank Qualliotine, president of the Brook Valley Homeowners Association.

Qualliotine said it's going to cost homeowners of the area over $1,000 a year over the next 15 to 20 years just for the privilege of being annexed.

In addition to the financial costs,

Qualliotine expressed concern over the way the annexation process is being handled.

"We've had no voice other than tonight," he said, "and what we have to say is not going to influence the fact that we're going to be annexed because as the statute states, it's non-participating. ... We're being heard, but it's not going to influence the fact that we're going to be annexed."

Marshall Helms of Brook Valley also questioned the city's right to annex.

"I am opposed to having to be forced to spend $7,000 for something which I do not want or need. I have a very satisfactory septic tank. I don't want anything better than that. ... I can't get anything better than that. I don't think its reasonable or correct

City Leaders Say Annexation Needed

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The annexation of Brook Valley is essential to the future growth of the city of Greenville, the mayor and mayor-elect said this morning.

Ed Carter, a present member of Greenville City Council and the mayor-elect, said of Brook Valley, "I think it will be annexed."

Commenting in light of a council hearing Tuesday night to give Brook Valley property owners an opportunity to express their concerns over the proposed annexation, Carter said, "I think the citizens had an opportunity to provide input last night."

Suggesting that many of the people in the area scheduled for annexation "have valid concerns,"

Carter said, "I think those concerns can be worked around."

"The overwhelming concerns (expressed) last night were from a technical, aesthetic point of view," Carter said. He cited questions such as the "aesthetic qualities of the area not being compromised ... whether trees are going to be cut down ... about the benefits for their area."

"That's the sort of things we have public hearings for," Carter said.

While "we're going to make this thing as acceptable as possible," Carter said it is "critical that we do annex Brook Valley in terms of the city being able to annex other areas."

Brook Valley, Carter said, is "the gateway to the extension of utility service, particularly sewer," to a wide area "southeast of Greenville."

"I think it's critical," Carter said, "it's essential we proceed with the project. I think it will be annexed."

Mayor Les Garner said, "I really don't know," when asked if the area will be annexed. But he said, "If Greenville expects to grow and progress, I think it's necessary for us to annex Brook Valley."

"I'm not sure how the council will feel about this on Dec. 9 (when a vote on the annexation question is scheduled), but hopefully we can come to some agreement on comments made last night. Hopefully that can be worked out."

Garner said, "We need Brook Valley to get other areas. Brook Valley is a necessity for us to annex other areas. Hopefully that will happen."

PCC Establishes Rural Aid Unit

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt Community College and local agricultural leaders are facing the fact that farming may never again be the same in Pitt County and eastern North Carolina as they begin a project to provide assistance and training for farm families and agribusinesses.

PCC administrators met with about 25 agricultural leaders this morning in the Holiday Inn to announce officially the establishment of the college's Rural Agricultural Assistance Center (RAAC).

As agricultural programs at PCC and other schools have been discontinued, the need for training and assistance among farmers has increased, according to PCC President Charles Russell. "I certainly have a great deal of concern for agriculture. I'm real proud and excited this morning that we can announce this program ... a model program."

Funded through the North Carolina Department of Community Colleges with a $30,000 grant, the program was implemented in October, said Edgar Boyd, PCC dean of students. Its objectives and implementing strategies are modeled on a project at Kirkwood Community College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

"Kirkwood Community College in late '84, early '85, realized the crisis in agriculture" and developed its Rural Diversified Enterprise Center (RDEC), Boyd said. It serves seven counties with a population of about 310,000, and has estimated that it has helped save 100 farms through its services.

Boyd and Robert May, a farmer and former agriculture teacher employed by the college to implement the program, visited Kirkwood

College and examined its program for three days. "We feel we learned an awful lot to help us here," he said.

Kirkwood features two paths for its farmers. Core instruction, which improves efficiency by planning rural enterprises, includes workshops on cost containment, profit diversification, sweat equity and value added diversification. Specialized training identifies alternatives for future implementation such as a commercial rabbit production, fish farming, home-based repair shops, country crafts, farm host programs and other alternatives for the farmer that could supplement the farming enterprise without much additional cost to him.

Objectives of RAAC, which would serve Pitt County with a population of about 100,000, include to identify problems and issues faced by farmers and agribusiness employees; to identify and catalog professional and educational resources available to assist them; to provide assistance by placing them in contact with appropriate agencies that will benefit them, and to develop and provide a series of coordinated service courses and programs using PCC, the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, the Pitt County Farm Bureau, East Carolina University and North Carolina State University among other local agencies.

Boyd noted the center has worked very closely with Leroy James, the county agricultural extension chairman, in implementing the program, and there will be a joint sponsorship between RAAC and the Agricultural Extension Service on many activities.

Four initial "attention-getter" workshops the center will offer

PCC Trustees Accept Second Lowest Bid On Humber Project

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt Community College Board of Trustees agreed Monday to accept the second lowest bid for heating, ventilating and air conditioning renovations to the Robert Lee Humber building on campus after the board consented to withdraw the lowest bid from the offers.

In a call meeting, the board agreed to allow Electricron Inc. to withdraw its low bid of $23,000 without penalties due to an error made by the bidder in its calculations. Electricron's bid was more than 35 percent lower than other bids as it left out more than $13,000 in materials cost on its summary sheet totals, according to a letter to the board from George W. Shoe, the architect for the project.

According to board Chairman C.W. Everett Sr., state statutes will not allow a company to participate in a construction project once it has withdrawn a bid from the project.

The second lowest bidder, White's Heating and Sheet Metal at $36,800, was accepted by the board, but "a comparison of the bids received with the total project cost reveals that project cost exceeds available funds by $20,368," said A.B. Whitley, building project chairman.

The total project cost, with additional low bids of $62,700 for general construction from Boyd Associates Inc. and $21,651 for electrical construction from Watson Electrical Construction Co., is $121,151.

The board authorized the transfer of the additional money, $20,368, from the existing prior period fund balance, that is unused money accumulated by the college over previous years, to the project fund. The Pitt County Board of Commissioners approved the transfer during its Nov. 16 meeting.

Smoke Closes Roads

The fire wasn't out of control, but the smoke was following a controlled burning project in the McGowan's Crossroads area Monday.

Federal Paper Co. burned over about 25 acres of land recently timbered in preparation for replanting. The fire was properly contained, state Forest Ranger Tom Harris said. But due to an atmospheric inversion, smoke was held to the ground to the degree that portions of state roads 1755, 1756 and 1770 had to be closed to traffic between 5 a.m. and 8:30 a.m. today.

Drivers of all vehicles, except school buses, were asked to detour. School buses were escorted by state and county officers.

ASHEVILLE (AP) — More than $1 million of the $26 million anticipated for western North Carolina's burley tobacco crop was paid to farmers Monday as auctions of the 1987 harvest opened in Asheville and West Jefferson.

Human Resources Panel Hears Public Input

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Representatives of various agencies and organizations under the umbrella of the North Carolina Department of Human Resources attended a public meeting held at the Willis Building Monday afternoon.

The meeting in Greenville was one of five being held throughout the state during November and December to give representatives of human resources organizations and agencies as well as interested individuals an opportunity to present to state officials needs for funds to be considered in the upcoming budgeting process.

Among state and regional officials at the meeting were Ruby Hooper, deputy secretary of the Department of Human Resources; Claude Meyer, director of vocational rehabilitation of the department; Barbara Matula, director of the Division of Medical Assistance for the department; Roy Bruninghaus, program analyst for the department's Division of Budget and Analysis, and George Adams, mental health regional director for the Greenville area.

Bruninghaus gave a resume of the department's overall function, and its annual budget.

"Ours is the second largest agency in the state after public education," Bruninghaus said. "We have about 18,000 employees and a budget of over $2.5 billion, which covers more than 500 programs to help people, young and old."

"Our goal," he explained, "is to assist all North Carolina citizens, as individuals and on a community wide basis, in efforts to achieve and maintain an adequate level of health, social and economic well being."

Of the 10 major divisions with the department, Bruninghaus said, the "three largest are mental health, medical assistance and social services. The mental health division has more employees than any other."

In terms of service delivery, these services are handled through four regional offices — in Greenville, Fayetteville, Winston-Salem and Black Mountain.

Bruninghaus touched briefly on what will undoubtedly be a tremendous increase in the need for services and programs oriented to the elderly — as the North Carolina population of those over 65 is predicted to be 1 million by the year 2,000.

He also mentioned state legislative action taken in the last session to authorize certain expansions to include four new mental and physical health needs, the expansion of the four children's facilities in the state, and additional technicians for psychiatric hospitals.

For the input session that followed Bruninghaus' presentation, Meyer moderated the session. Each input representative was limited to a five-minute period.

Among spokesmen presenting funding needs along with abbreviated accounts of their missions and programs were Pitt County and area representatives of mental health, nursing home and home care for the elderly and disabled, services for pregnant women, the genetics program at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, environmental issues, early intervention programs for drug and alcohol abuse, educational programs on AIDS, and mosquito control in coastal counties.

With a few exceptions, all the spokesmen stressed a pressing need for additional operational funds, increased personnel staffing, and measures to insure emphasis on securing funding from local, state and federal sources.

The input received at Monday's meeting, along with similar input from meetings at Fayetteville, Greensboro, Asheville, and Raleigh, will be analyzed and considered in preparation of the upcoming budgets of the Department of Human Resources.

"It's totally insane," said Lary Lindo of Certified Grocers Midwest in Chicago. "I just came back from McDonald's, and I spent $4 for lunch. You can buy a 20-pound turkey for that."

Or less. Bridgeport Foods in the Windy City is giving turkeys away — if the purchaser buys $60 in other goods. Similar offers are being made by supermarket chains in Philadelphia and Phoenix, Ariz.

The average price of a complete Thanksgiving dinner for 10 is $25.41, 18 percent lower than last year's $29.75, the American Farm Bureau Federation said Monday.

In addition to a bird, $25.41 buys stuffing, sweet potatoes, peas, rolls, cranberries, pumpkin pie with whipped cream and more, according to the federation's survey of markets in California, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, Minnesota, New York, Texas and Washington, D.C.

For those who don't want to bother cooking all that food, dinner can be had — but it can cost a lot more. In Los Angeles, for example, a caterer called Renta Yenta will deliver turkey with all the trimmings for a party of 10 for $350.

Lila Greene, whose company takes its name from the Yiddish word for a woman who gossips, has 150 orders for her Thanksgiving meals for 10 for busy professionals who either don't have the time to prepare dinner or don't know how.

"And you can say you made it yourself," she said.

Cooler weather means swine producers have a different set of problems to be concerned with compared to the problems of hot weather. Most Pitt County swine producers have facilities designed to deal with cold weather problems. A few problems of swine production mentioned here can be handled with proper management in many cases.

Pneumonia in swine can be triggered by cold, drafty weather. Pneumonia can be prevented by good nutrition and a warm, dry, and dust free environment. For the producers, this means he or she must pay close attention to regulating curtains on buildings and keeping the proper ventilation and heat for pigs. Any sudden change in temperature can cause a pneumonia problem.

Mange mites and hog lice seem to be more prevalent in cold weather. Prevention of these two is to have a good external parasite control program. If a serious problem arises, the life cycle of the parasite must be broken. In this situation, all animals in a herd must be treated twice at 7 to 30 day intervals to eliminate adult, immature, and eggs of the mite.

Pesticides are available today that, if used correctly on a routine basis, can keep external parasites from becoming a serious problem. Injectables and sprays will do a good job. When spraying swine for mites, a pressure of 125-200 psi is needed to force insecticide into tunnels where mange burrow.

TGE (transmissible gastroenteritis) is the most deadly diarrheal disease of baby pigs. When TGE strikes, it is not uncommon to lose most of the pigs farrowed over the next 2-3 weeks. TGE is caused by a virus that is readily inactivated by warm temperatures, sunlight, and drying so it is seen most often in the winter.

Sanitation is the key to prevention of TGE. Producers should put up hardware cloth on barns to eliminate the possibility of birds entering barns and spreading this disease. TGE is also spread by pig to pig contact or by man and his activities from one location to another. Proper precautions should be used in introducing new breeding stock to help eliminate the possibility of this and any other disease of swine.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Needed Links

A steadily improving primary highway system in eastern North Carolina offers hope of solving some long time transportation problems for Pitt County.

The Transportation Improvement Program, approved by the North Carolina Board of Transportation recently, calls for creation of road systems which will particularly benefit the northeastern section of the state.

The improvement of U.S. 64, which is now being constructed as a controlled access roadway to Tarboro, is one such project. That highway's improvements would be continued to U.S. 17. That would affect Bethel, Robersonville and Williamston. From Williamston north U.S. 17 would be upgraded providing a much needed link for all the communities of the east with the Norfolk area.

The effects of these improvements can readily be seen. Improvement of U.S. 17 through northeast North Carolina is about 30 years overdue. Linking all the cities of the east, including, Greenville, Ayden, Grifton, Kinston, along with Elizabeth City, Jacksonville, Wilmington and New Bern, to the Tidewater area can have enormous economic benefit to the state. And it should be remembered that the roads which go north also go south.

For Pitt County the planning of these projects also makes feasible the opportunity to tie in with major routes. A four laned link from Greenville's northwest U.S. 264 bypass (now being planned) to the southern U.S. 64 bypass of Tarboro would be practical in the future. It would tie the growing urban areas of Pitt County to Tarboro and Rocky Mount and could become the primary route to Raleigh for our area. And of course it would provide access to I-95 north at Rocky Mount. Similarly, a four lane highway segment from Greenville's southeast bypass to Williamston — not a long distance — would provide access to a four laned U.S. 17 and at long last provide a decent highway route to Virginia. These projects are not in the plans at present, but they could become feasible as Pitt County continues to grow and traffic counts increase. Meanwhile planning already under way opens a number of new highway travel possibilities for Pitt County.

Better Way

There must be a better way of inviting the head of a foreign state to address a joint meeting of Congress than via public debate about whether he's welcome or unwelcome.

The world was told through news stories Mikhail Gorbachev might be invited by President Ronald Reagan to address a joint meeting of Congress during his summit trip. Soon thereafter there was another story to the effect that likelihood of such an affair was diminishing because opposition to the proposal was swelling and a White House spokesman (otherwise not identified) said he would be very much surprised if the visitor ever ended up addressing a joint meeting.

Seventy-nine members of the House, mostly Republicans, signed a letter to the president urging a forum other than a joint meeting be found for such an historic event.

Rep. Dan Burton (R-Ind.) said such a joint meeting would be "analogous to having Adolf Hitler come before the British Parliament."

The lawmaker may be right, but it would be understandable, too, if the Soviet leader felt insulted. Personal pride and national pride are qualities shared by all. From Gorbachev's perspective, that remark smacked of unfairness, and should not have been uttered.

Washington should recognize the Gorbachev hope and goal of restructuring the Soviet economy would in the long haul be to our benefit and encourage the peace process if only a degree of international stability is attained.

That lack of stability led to an arms race whose costs have dominated thinking of the present administration in Washington as well as an apparently unending buildup in Moscow. The strain of those costs played their part in present economic uncertainties.

The new image of the Soviet leadership includes hopeful signs and they are worth testing with recognition that Moscow's destabilizing role in certain parts of the world cannot be resolved only at a negotiating table.

The Soviets and Americans don't have to like, completely trust, or approve of each other. But there is room for the two to work toward common goals. That can never happen by publicly likening the Soviet head of state to the madman of Nazi Germany.

Reagan Avoids The Big Question

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the most intriguing mysteries in Washington is whether President Reagan would grant pardons to former aides for their roles in the Iran-Contra affair.

Would he allow people he has praised as honorable men and heroes to go to jail? Or would he risk a public uproar and a potential backlash against Republican candidates by granting pardons?

It's a premature question, since no one's even been indicted, but it's being asked frequently at the White House these days.

Gerald Ford, as one of his first acts as president, pardoned Richard Nixon for any wrongdoing in the Watergate scandal. It was a highly unpopular act that analysts believed contributed to Ford's defeat by Jimmy Carter.

Now the pardon issue looms for Reagan as independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh conducts a criminal investigation of former White House aides John M. Poindexter and Oliver L. North for their roles in the secret sale of U.S. weapons to Iran and the diversion of arms sale profits to the Nicaraguan Contras.

True, Reagan will never have to stand for election again, so he doesn't have to worry about the political impact. But his loyal vice president, George Bush, sure might be affected, along with other GOP candidates, as well.

So what would Reagan do? There are scattered clues, a lot of guessing and rumors but no clear answers. And Reagan, himself, isn't talking.

"This is a subject I have not and will not discuss at this time," Reagan said Monday.

Not that reporters didn't try to get an answer.

Four times the question was put to Reagan. And four times he ducked.

"That's a question no one can answer at this point and I'm not going to try," Reagan said. Sure you could, he was urged. "No — no I can't," he replied.

And again, "There is no answer to that and I'm not answering that at all and no one can at this time."

It's entirely possible that Reagan, himself, is not sure what he would do.

Stephen Hess, a political analyst at the Brookings Institution, says he thinks the public believes Reagan would pardon North and Poindexter if necessary. However, he believes Reagan isn't saying anything now because it's wiser to wait and see what happens.

"I feel in my gut that they're not going to go to jail," Hess said of North and Poindexter.

On the other hand, "If they're not convicted, Ronald Reagan doesn't have to do any pardoning. A good politician plays out the string," Hess said.

Reagan does seem sympathetic to North and Poindexter. He said last month he does not think they have broken any laws. And, after Congress completed its hearings into the episode, Reagan went on national television and said North and Poindexter "believed they were doing what I would've wanted done."

He said he was "mad as a hornet" about the damage to his administration but he didn't say he was angry with the former aides.

As the Iran-Contra report from Congress noted last week, Reagan has never condemned his aides for lying, shredding documents or participating in a cover-up.

However, Reagan offered a dim view of that report Monday, saying, "Maybe they labored and brought forth a mouse."

The New York Times reported Monday there was "a hot, widely discussed, wholly unconfirmed report" that Reagan would issue pardons on Thanksgiving, when he will be at his mountaintop ranch in California.

However, Newsweek magazine said Nancy Reagan was "adamantly opposed" to pardoning North and Poindexter.

Newsweek, quoting sources it did not name, said Reagan was ambivalent but that the first lady "is known to blame Poindexter and North for the scandal which she feels has crippled the last two years of the Reagan presidency."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater dismissed the stories as a "media phenomenon" and said, "I don't want to lend any credence at all to these media rumors. It just lends credence to idle speculation and ill-founded rumors."

Promoting Home-Made Products

Are Americans willing to buy U.S.-made products when the quality is good and the price is right? Or are they hopelessly addicted to the idea that made-in-America is the mark of inferiority?

For anybody over 30, it is a depressing sign of the times that such a question need even be asked. Before U.S. industry frittered away its reputation, the superiority of most American products was generally taken for granted. But times have changed — and the massive U.S. trade deficit is the symbol of that change.

The Oct. 19 stock market crash was widely attributed to the perception in the financial community, both here and abroad, that this country was not taking adequate steps to deal with its huge budget and trade deficits. That concern may have been exaggerated, given the positive trends in both cases, but perceptions have a reality of their own.

The American political system's obvious difficulty in dealing with the budget deficit was made plain all over again in the recently completed "summit" negotiations between the White House and congressional leaders.

The concentration of attention on the deficit reduction problem, together with the disappointingly slow improvement in the U.S. balance of trade, has helped to obscure some good news:

U.S. manufacturing, which just a few months ago seemed to be losing the fight for survival against foreign competitors, is making a comeback.

The question is whether the favorable trend will continue or run out of gas in the face of the national affinity for products made elsewhere in the world, especially Japan.

Industrial production is pointing steadily upward. In the last year American manufacturing companies have added 303,000 jobs, of which 63,000 were created in the last two months alone.

Exports are a major part of the explanation. Seasonally adjusted sales to foreign customers have been in a firm uptrend all year, with merchandise exports rising twice as fast in the last four quarters as in the previous four. Many economists expect U.S. sales abroad to grow even faster in 1988.

A lot of factors are involved, including a more competitive spirit and rigorous cost cutting. Most important, however, has been the fall of the dollar's value relative to other major currencies, which is supposed to result in higher price tags on foreign goods sold here and lower price tags on American goods sold abroad.

As the figures cited above suggest, the theory is working on the export side. Companies such as General Electric, Du Pont, and Caterpillar report rising foreign sales.

Even the steel companies, whose problems looked terminal until a few months ago, expect exports to exceed 1 million tons in 1987 for the first time since 1983.

Logic tells you that healthier exports should be translating into an improved U.S. trade balance, and indeed the trade deficit is declining. But it is still at an alarmingly high level, and experts fear that it will remain there — not because of flagging exports but because of stubbornly high imports as reflected in official trade figures.

Part of the reason is that our trade figures are reported in dollars. When the dollar's exchange value goes down, the number of dollars it takes to buy a given volume of foreign goods goes up. The reduction in the actual physical volume of imports thus is much greater than the official data indicates.

Another factor is that many things, whether you are talking video recorders or certain kinds of computer chips, are simply not made in this country anymore. Either you buy products made in Japan, West Germany or other countries, or you don't buy at all.

Fortunately, there is a counter-trend. When they have a choice, many American businesses are cutting down on their purchases of foreign-made components. Many others are bringing major manufacturing operations back to the United States. Economists disagree, however, over whether U.S. industry can ever recover from its unhealthy degree of dependence on foreign suppliers.

On one point, however, practically everybody is agreed: The American consumer has become deeply imbued with the idea that foreign goods are better — or if not actually better, more stylish among the in-crowd — than competing products made in America.

Efforts are being made to change this mind-set by draping old glory around American-made products.

Such big retailers as K Mart, J.C. Penney and Sears Roebuck have run advertising campaigns to promote home-made products. The import-ravaged textile industry has run a "Crafted With Pride" campaign to promote "Made in the USA" label on clothing and home furnishings.

But foreign-made products are still pouring in, finding ready purchasers even when prices go up. To a major degree, of course, that's because American manufacturers of many consumer items have abandoned the field to the competition. The lingering perception of the imports' superior quality remains a big factor, too, however.

Where foreign goods really are better, nobody can expect the prudent consumer to buy an American product which is not up to snuff. But even where U.S.-made items are available and are of comparable quality to the imports, most Americans automatically prefer the imported product these days. This is especially noticeable with regard to autos, where U.S. producers have narrowed if not closed the quality gap.

Given the consumer-driven nature of the American economy, we're all in trouble if that mind-set continues.

The Europeans, Japanese and other East Asians will grow more prosperous and we will grow poorer.

All the flagwaving in the world won't cure the U.S. trade deficit if American products are really shoddy and over-priced. But when they are in the same ball park with imported goods, surely a little pocketbook patriotism wouldn't be out of order.

Strength For Today

"I ain't appreciated."

How come, Big Mouth? You have a good job, a fine wife and a family of children friends aplenty — what more could you want?

You ought to be head of your company? A guy who doesn't know half as much as you was promoted over you with a raise? They made someone else president of your club? Your children don't know what a wonderful father you are? Some of your former friends ignore you?

Most of the world's unhappiness comes from the fact that too many people keep themselves and their problems continually on their minds. People who are really happy don't give a hang whether people appreciate them or not. The people who have nothing more to think about and live only for appreciation can be sad and hungry at times, but the world and events move along just the same.

Legislators Seek Solution To Farm Losses

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — After several bills concerning farmland preservation and farm income failed to pass in the Legislature this year, a special panel of lawmakers has begun a year-long search for ways to save family farms in North Carolina.

At its organizational meeting Monday, the 13-member study committee heard grim descriptions of the plight of small- and medium-sized farms in the state and complaints that federal aid programs were insufficient.

"We're not getting any action on the federal level at all that substantially helps the farmer," said Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union. Acknowledging that state government resources were limited, he said, "We'll just have to get in as deep as we can and do what we can."

Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, said the government was obligated to help because federal policies contributed to the slump in the agricultural economy. Federal officials encouraged otherwise cautious farmers to expand their operations in the 1970s when land and crop prices were higher, he said.

One proposal before the panel involves ordering creditors to accept outside mediation before initiating foreclosures.

That and similar measures on farm debt relief and foreclosure avoidance could form the core of the report that the study panel submits to the 1989 Legislature, according to the co-chairmen, Plyler and Rep. Ray Fletcher, D-Burke.

Linwood Jones, the panel's staff attorney, said farm debt mediation was a policy being tried in many Midwestern states where the farm crisis is most severe.

It requires a period, usually 60 to 90 days, in which the creditor and farmer work with a third party to restructure the debt before foreclosure proceedings are initiated.

Such laws generally don't bar lenders from foreclosing but require that they bargain in good faith beforehand, Jones said.

Plyler and Fletcher said they were attracted to the mediation concept but emphasized they didn't want to treat lenders unfairly.

"We've got to be careful that we don't step on the toes of private enterprise," Fletcher said. "But we have to be sure that the man who owns the family farm has every opportunity to keep the farm."

Betty Bailey, spokeswoman for the Rural Advancement Fund which maintains a crisis hotline for farmers, said the state Department of Agriculture had predicted 5,000 to 6,000 small and mid-sized farms in North Carolina would go under this year.

The farm problem "is still very serious in this state," she said, adding that thousands of other farmers were behind in credit payments to the Farmers Home Administration.

North Carolina leads the Southeast in the decline of land value, which in some counties has fallen 50 percent in recent years, Ms. Bailey said.

She described medium-sized farms as those with gross annual sales of $20,000 to $100,000. "It's the commercial-sized family farm that's the backbone of our economy," she said.

Jones said both houses of Congress were considering bills to provide matching funds to states that establish farm debt mediation programs.

Other possible policies the study committee could examine, he said, include:

— "Right of first refusal," under which the farmer is guaranteed the first opportunity to repurchase or lease his farmland after foreclosure or liquidation.

— "Partial redemption laws," under which farmers can occupy their farm residence plus a set amount of surrounding land after their property is lost through foreclosure.

The committee also is expected to study the problem of declining farmland. Jones said the state's farmland declined from 11.4 million acres to 10.8 million acres between 1981 and 1985 as foreclosures continued and more farmers sold to developers.

'Red Tide' Worsens Job Scene

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
Shellfishing and the tourism that it lures has traditionally provided badly needed jobs in coastal North Carolina counties in the off-season, so employment officials in the region say the red tide has only made a bad situation worse.

"Around here in the wintertime, with so many jobs tied to the tourist industry, there are not that many jobs around," said David Allen, manager of the state Employment Security Commission office in Morehead City.

"It's hard to come up with anything," Allen said. "We'll help them find a job. But jobs aren't plentiful in Carteret County in the wintertime."

The ESC office in Morehead City may have been the busiest business in the area Monday, as workers processed claims filed by employers and employees affected by the poisonous algae.

"One employer came in last week, and said the last Saturday night his restaurant was open he had nine people in the restaurant," said David Allen, manager of the ESC office in Morehead City. "He'd normally have 200 to 300 people. People are not coming down. They're either afraid to eat seafood or afraid to come down."

Allen said the owners of two restaurants, which are usually open seven days a week, called Monday to say they would be open only on Friday and Saturday nights. One employs about 20 people and the other about 35 to 40, he said.

"People prefer not to eat it right now, even though there's a sign on the restaurant saying we're serving safe seafood," Allen said. "They just didn't want to take a chance. I guess that's how a lot of people feel."

About 80 to 100 people have come to Allen's office looking for help after being laid off because of the red tide, he said. That doesn't include employers who mail in all the paperwork, and their employees who have never come to the office, he said.

The algae species, Psychodiscus brevis, was first reported along the North Carolina coast on Oct. 30. Shellfishing bans have been established from Avon in Dare County to Carolina Beach in New Hanover County.

A news release from the state Employment Security Commission office in Raleigh said counseling and job placement services are available at no charge.

The chairman of the state ESC said employers and employees experiencing temporary layoffs because of the red tide should know help is available from local ESC offices.

"Many coastal business operations, from commercial fishing and bait and tackle shops, to motels, restaurants and charter boats, are experiencing temporary losses due to the red tide infestation," ESC Chairman Betsy Justus said. "We want those people affected by layoffs to know that help is as close as their local Job Service Center."

Martin Stresses Safety Of Seafood

By The Associated Press
It's no fish tale, Gov. Jim Martin said after sampling fish, shrimp and crab: although there is a ban on harvesting clams and oysters in a nearly 200-mile stretch of North Carolina shoreline, other coastal catches are safe.

"When people hear that you shouldn't eat certain shellfish, they focus on the word 'fish' and not 'shell,'" Martin said Monday after stops at coastal marinas in Wrightsville Beach and Sneads Ferry.

"We are here to reassure people that the fish are good down here, that (the red tide) is not a problem for fish, shrimp or crabs — they don't filter the algae like clams and oysters," Martin said.

Martin, who traveled with his wife,

Dottie, said fish sales have dropped off because of consumer's cautiousness about the toxic algae along parts of the state coastline.

"The market has dropped off, because I guess people have bought something else," he said. "It's not hysteria. It's just maybe overcaution that is misplaced."

"I thought if we could help to demonstrate that everything is fine with fish and shrimp and crab, then people would realize there is no problem there and would enjoy it," Martin said.

The red tide algae species, Psychodiscus brevis, was first reported along the North Carolina coast on Oct. 30. Shellfishing bans have been established from Avon in Dare County to Carolina Beach in New Hanover County.

Jim Sheppard, a spokesman for the state Division of Environmental Management said Monday the boundaries of the red tide remain the same, but biologists were finding lower counts of the algae in samples taken in all areas.

"It's not enough to suspend the ban, of course," Sheppard said. "We are very cautiously optimistic. The counts could go back up when the weather warms up."

Sheppard said the water temperature would have to drop to below 50 degrees to have any adverse effect on the algae. He said the water temperature around Morehead City was about 54 degrees Monday.

Levine, who also ate some of the fish, said officials had talked to about 60 people who had recently eaten fish from North Carolina waters and showed no signs of illness.

"We've queried many people up and down the coast and they've had absolutely no problem," Levine said.

State officials are trying to obtain federal disaster aid for coastal fishermen, who are expected to lose about $3 million because of the red tide.

Other top contenders among the 12 finalists are said to be Arizona and Colorado, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

Boy, 7, Uses Dog's Warmth To Survive

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 7-year-old Randolph County boy, who had been missing for 18 hours, was found Monday after he apparently survived near-freezing temperatures by sleeping with his dog.

Bobby Campbell was found near a chicken house on a rural road about two miles from his home in the community of Erect, according to Randolph County Emergency Services coordinator Neil Allen.

The boy's father, Robert Campbell, said that other than being a little scared, the boy seemed fine.

"We have a Blue Tick hound. He came to the house last night barking and before I could get a flashlight to follow him, he was gone again," Campbell said. "Then he came home this morning when it warmed up some, but he was alone. I asked Bobby this morning where he spent the night and he said, 'With Blue.'"

About 150 volunteers — including Randolph County Sheriff's Department officers, Asheboro-Randolph Rescue personnel, Emergency Services employees, Civil Air Patrol and countywide firefighters — assisted in the search Sunday night and early Monday, said Randolph County Sheriff's Department Maj. Larry Emerson.

Edmisten

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, who says he has a network of supporters "that is able to produce," says he will run for the post that Secretary of State Thad Eure will vacate next year.

"I have spoken with maybe 50 to 100 of my supporters statewide since (Eure) announced he wouldn't run," Edmisten said Monday. "They all agreed I should do it, that it would give a lot of strength to the ticket."

Edmisten, the unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial nominee in 1984, scheduled a news conference for today to announce his candidacy. He will become the second Democrat to announce an official bid for the post, which Eure has held for almost 51 years.

Edmisten, who was attorney general for 10 years before running for governor, said he did not know how much opposition he would have. But he said he anticipated a "hard battle."

Watkins

RALEIGH (AP) — State Rep. Billy Watkins has decided not to seek the Democratic nomination for governor in the interest of party unity, but he insisted that a poll he commissioned showed he could have given Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan a good fight.

"We are facing a unique situation in the Democratic primary — one that has not been faced since Reconstruction," Watkins said at a news conference Monday.

"If the Democrats were to fight it out ... with the Republican governor having no opposition, he just sits back and gets ready and picks each of you off, whoever wins," said Watkins, who added that he would seek re-election to his House seat.

The decision by Watkins makes it likely that Jordan will have no major opposition in the Democratic primary in May. State Auditor Edward Renfrow also announced this month that he would not run for governor.

Asheville Fire

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A fire destroyed the Airway Foam Industries Co. Monday, but officials said the building did not contain hazardous material.

The foam rubber that burned inside the building did cause some eye irritation for firefighters, according to Asheville Fire Chief John Ruckavina. He said one firefighter was taken to Mission Hospital in Asheville after he was overcome by smoke. The firefighter's name and his condition were not available.

Officials said they did not know what caused the fire, which started about 1 p.m., and was under control by 2:30 p.m. As many as nine fire companies battled the blaze.

Fatal Vision

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Convicted murderer Jeffrey MacDonald has accepted $325,000 to settle a $15 million lawsuit alleging "Fatal Vision" author Joe McGinniss broke an agreement to write a favorable account of the case.

Both sides in the dispute claimed victory Monday.

MacDonald, a 43-year-old former Green Beret doctor, is serving three consecutive life sentences in Texas for the 1970 murders of his pregnant wife and two young daughters at Fort Bragg, N.C.

He charged in the federal suit that he had entered into a contract with McGinniss under which the author was permitted to hear his innermost thoughts for a positive account of the murder case.

"Fatal Vision," a best-seller made into a TV miniseries, concluded MacDonald was guilty. A mistrial in the breach-of-contract suit was declared in August after the jury deadlocked.

Jackson Trial

WILMINGTON (AP) — Ex-White

Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller said he has organized a nationwide network of "freedom fighters" to "eliminate" protected federal witnesses who would testify against him and other white supremacists, according to testimony in U.S. District Court.

Robert Eugene Jackson Jr., a white supremacist and former associate of Miller, is on trial for failing to appear for a federal conspiracy trial in Elizabeth City earlier this year. Jackson said he didn't show up for the trial because Miller threatened his family.

"I had planned to be at the trial," Jackson testified Monday. "He indicated that my family was being watched. It was a threat, a serious threat."

Jackson said Miller also threatened the family of another former White Patriot Party member, Douglas Sheets, who had been subpoenaed to testify.

Convicted in absentia last April in a trial for conspiracy to obtain illegal military weapons, Jackson was sentenced to six months in prison. A trial on the charge of failure to appear ended last month in New Bern in a mistrial when a jury failed to reach a verdict against Jackson.

Jackson, Sheets and Miller were arrested last April at a trailer in Springfield, Mo., where federal agents found an arsenal of military weapons, ammunition, bombs, grenades, gas masks and bulletproof vests.

The three men, who are in federal custody, face federal weapons and explosive charges in Missouri.

Liggett Suit

DURHAM (AP) — Liggett Group Inc., announced Monday that a product liability lawsuit filed against the company by the estate of Joseph Palmer and others has been dismissed.

The plaintiffs had sought money damages from Liggett alleging that Palmer's death was caused by smoking Liggett cigarettes.

The announcement came after Judge A. David Mazzone of the U.S. District Court in Massachusetts granted Liggett's dismissal motion, ruling that the plaintiffs had no basis to maintain their suit in view of a decision in August by the 1st Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals. In that decision, which resulted from an appeal of the same case, the appeals court held that the required warnings on cigarette packages and advertising preclude lawsuits against cigarette makers. The plaintiffs had based the appeal on the alleged inadequacy of the warnings and the propriety of cigarette advertising and promotion.

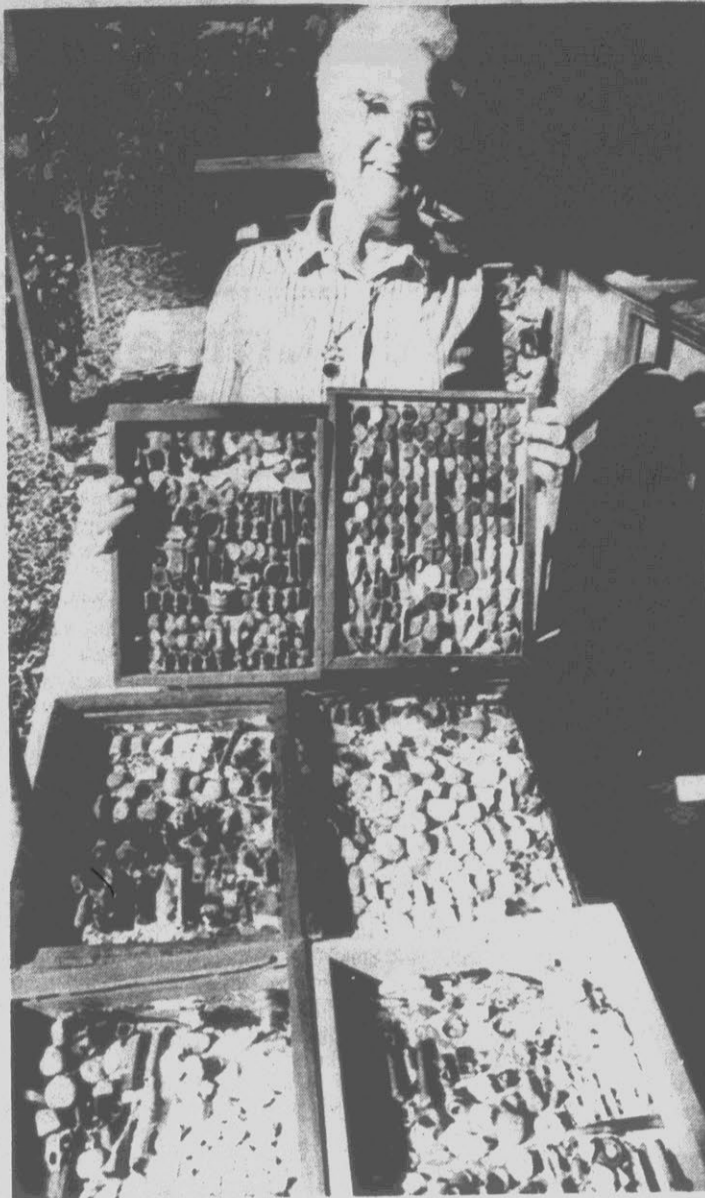

RJR President

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Dolph W. von Arx was named Monday as president and chief executive officer of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco USA, the company's domestic tobacco operating unit, company officials said.

The appointment for von Arx, who succeeds Gerald H. Long, becomes effective Jan. 1. Long will remain chairman of the board of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco USA and senior executive vice president of RJR Nabisco Inc. until his retirement on July 1, 1988.

Edward A. Corrigan Jr., chairman of the board and chief executive officer of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and vice chairman of RJR Nabisco, said the naming of a new president and chief executive officer for the domestic tobacco company is a planned step in the company's executive succession.

Von Arx, 53, joins RJR from Thomas J. Lipton, Inc., where he has been executive vice president of that company's board of directors and executive committee. After joining Lipton in 1973, he also served as senior vice president of marketing and vice president of the company's continental division.

U.S. Will Pay Up Some Of U.N. Dues

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States soon will pay $90 million of the $342.8 million in dues it owes to the United Nations, allowing the world body to pay staff salaries next month, U.N. officials said.

The United States said informally the total amount to be paid will not be known until Congress votes an appropriation in mid-December, Francois Giuliani, spokesman for the U.N. secretary-general, said Monday.

"In the meantime, the United States will pay $100 million," including $10 million already paid, he said.

The U.S. Mission said it was unable to confirm Giuliani's statements and there was no official announcement.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de

Cuellar told employees Friday the United Nations was nearly broke, without reserves and unable to pay December salaries of more than $45 million for about 11,000 people.

The United States, the largest contributor and debtor, owes $342.8 million in assessments, he said.

The United States normally pays one-quarter of the annual U.N. budget of about $800 million but has withheld most contributions for more than a year, citing overspending and anti-Western bias and demanding reforms.

Reagan administration officials have expressed satisfaction with the pace of U.N. reform and urged Congress to restore the annual contribution.

Budget's Imbalance Grows In October

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's attempt to reduce the flow of red ink is getting off to a rocky start in the new fiscal year with a giant $30.7 billion imbalance for October.

The shortfall between government revenues and spending for the first month in the 1988 fiscal year was 21.6 percent higher than the same month a year ago and was much worse than many economists had been expecting.

It was particularly bad news for the Reagan administration and congressional budget negotiators who have been working to come up with a credible deficit reduction package aimed at calming financial market jitters following the big plunge in stock prices last month.

The negotiators reached agreement Friday on a package aimed at trimming the deficit for this fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, by $30.2 billion.

But even with these cuts, the Congressional Budget Office says the deficit will still rise above the $148 billion deficit for the 1987 fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30.

CBO analysts are forecasting a deficit for the current fiscal year of around $150 billion, and some private economists said even this estimate is likely to be far too optimistic.

The problem is that the government had a boost in cutting the red ink last year from an unexpected bonanza of $28 billion in higher tax receipts triggered by the overhaul of the tax law. That revenue increase will not be available this time around.

Lettuce Shortage

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Withered leaves and insects are just the tip of the iceberg when it comes to problems with this year's lettuce crop. Unusual weather conditions and an infestation of bugs are pushing prices higher on the heads that manage to survive.

"Supplies of lettuce have been decimated," said Mike Henry of the Sacramento-based California Farm Bureau.

Most of the problem centers on the iceberg harvests in California and Arizona, where about 90 percent of the iceberg lettuce consumed nationwide is grown.

In response, prices have risen across the nation. Grocers in the West are charging between $1.19 to $1.49 per head — double the usual price — while lettuce prices in the East have moved even higher because of added transportation costs.

"Prices are reaching historical levels," said Barbara Buck, spokeswoman for the Western Growers Association based in Newport Beach.

Mike Markoff, sales manager for the Salinas-based shipper Royal Packing, complained that his company has "never seen this type of market before."

Some grocery stores have put up signs apologizing for the high prices and low quality. Some are even suggesting that consumers consider alternatives such as romaine lettuce and spinach.

The biggest problem for most growers has been unusual weather conditions in recent weeks, with unseasonably hot periods followed by rain and more heat.

Exiled Salvadoran Leftists Return

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Right-wing leader Roberto D'Aubuisson denied he ordered the 1980 assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero and said President Jose Napoleon Duarte's allegations were politically motivated.

D'Aubuisson said Monday the Duarte government implicated him in Romero's 1980 slaying to shore up political power after the return of exiled leftist opposition leaders Guillermo Ungo and Ruben Zamora.

Ungo arrived Monday night and said leftist rebels want to resume peace negotiations with Duarte's centrist, U.S.-backed government.

"With the arrival of Mr. Zamora and Mr. Ungo ... to me it's a very clear strategy the Christian Democrats are carrying out," said D'Aubuisson, a 42-year-old former National Guard major. Duarte is the leader of the Christian Democratic Party.

Duarte said the man who drove the getaway car in the Romero slaying was willing to testify. The president identified the man Monday as Amado Antonio Garay, and said Garay overheard that D'Aubuisson ordered the killing.

D'Aubuisson, who said he was not in El Salvador during the killing, said Duarte was trying to hide his failure to enact social programs and follow the Central American peace plan, designed to end the 8-year-old civil war with leftist guerrillas.

Ungo, leader of a civilian group allied with the rebels, told a news conference that his Democratic Revolutionary Front and the leftist rebels, grouped in the Farabundo

Marti National Liberation Front, had offered "to renew the dialogue" in Mexico on Dec. 5.

He said the proposal was sent to Duarte through the Roman Catholic archbishop, Arturo Rivera Damas, who is acting as a mediator between the government and rebels. Ungo said he did not plan to meet directly with Duarte during his trip to El Salvador.

There was no immediate reaction from the government.

Talks between the two sides on a cease-fire and other measures to bring peace under the new regional accord were interrupted Oct. 26 when unidentified gunmen killed Herbert Ernesto Anaya, the president of the Human Rights Commission.

Leftists blamed the assassination on right-wing death squads.

Ungo, the president of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, and Zamora, the group's vice president, said they were visiting El Salvador to examine the possibilities of returning home permanently to work for political change. Zamora arrived Saturday.

"We are walking a hard and difficult road and you know it very well, after so many years of pain and suffering," Ungo told 3,000 cheering admirers who met him at El Salvador International Airport.

Ungo and Zamora, who were members of a civilian-military junta, fled El Salvador in 1980 under threats from right-wing extremists.

Ungo had been Duarte's running mate in a Christian Democratic-leftist coalition that won the 1972 presidential election, but the military took power before they could take office. Duarte was elected president in 1984.

Chou's Son Named Acting Premier

BEIJING (AP) — China today named Li Peng, a 59-year-old technocrat, as acting premier to replace Zhao Ziyang, who left the post to become head of the Communist Party.

The standing committee of the National Peoples' Congress, China's legislature, followed Zhao's suggestion in appointing Li to the nation's most powerful government job, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

Li, a Soviet-trained electrical engineer, has been called a conservative who believes in Soviet-style central planning. He recently shrugged off that label as a "misunderstanding" and in public has always supported the market-oriented reforms pushed by Zhao and China's senior leader, Deng Xiaoping.

Although ultimate authority in China comes from the Communist Party, the premier, as head of government, is responsible for running the economy and looking after civil, public security and educational affairs.

Zhao, premier since 1980, was formally named Communist Party general secretary at a major party congress that ended earlier this month and resigned as premier.

Li, adopted son of the late Premier Chou En Lai, has been one of five vice premiers since 1983.

He is virtually assured of being officially named Communist China's fourth premier — following Chou, Hua Guofeng and Zhao — when the National Peoples' Congress holds its annual full session next March.

Li has been the top contender for the post since January, when Zhao became acting party chief following the forced resignation of Hu Yaobang. Hu was blamed for not curbing pro-democracy student demonstrations.

Li's appointment today puts the concluding touches on a major rejuvenation of party leadership pushed by Deng at the just-concluded party congress.

Li is expected to hew to China's foreign policy of slowly improving long-strained relations with Moscow while relying on Western investment and technology in its modernization drive.

U.N. War Crimes Records Opened

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Justice Department's Nazi-hunting unit is sifting through U.N. war crimes archives containing facts and allegations about the World War II activities of 36,000 people, including former U.N. chief Kurt Waldheim.

Six researchers from the Justice Department unit looked through the documents Monday, the first day the world body took the wraps off files of the United Nations War Crimes Commission, which completed work in 1949.

The researchers declined to say whether the files contain the name of Josef Schwammberger, an elderly Austrian recently arrested on a ranch in Argentina and alleged to be a Nazi SS captain.

But the World Jewish Congress, hailing the opening of the files, said Schwammberger's name is in the archives.

"There is, indeed, a U.N. war crimes file on Schwammberger," said Elan Steinberg, director of the World Jewish Congress. He told The Associated Press that his organization has obtained the declassified U.S. Army master list of wanted war criminals from the U.S. Archives. That list includes a notation of the U.N. war crimes file for each individual named.

"We have the Army list and know the U.N. file numbers, making it impossible to hide the existence of files," said Steinberg, predicting some "shocking disclosures" of more big names.

He said there are six files on Nazi leader Adolf Hitler, which could be of great historical importance, and more than one file on Alois Brunner who was Adolf Eichmann's lieutenant, now said to be living in Syria.

But he said the first file to be sought by his investigators will be that of Waldheim, the U.N. secretary-general from 1972 to 1981. Waldheim is now president of Austria.

"This is for symbolic reasons to demonstrate that had these files been opened, he never would have been secretary-general," Steinberg said.

Waldheim was an officer in a German army unit in the Balkans in World War II that was accused of sending Jews to death camps. He has denied any wrongdoing. The United States has barred him from entering the country.

The U.N. files also are said to contain the names of 1,100 Jews from Luxembourg, where they were sent and where they were killed. For years they have been listed as missing. "Now their relatives will know and this has humanitarian significance," he said.

The 8,500 files also deal with war crimes committed by the Japanese in China and other parts of Asia.

Monday was the first day for new rules of broad, general access to the files. Jewish groups and Nazi hunters said they would form research teams to search the files and seek extradition and prosecution of war criminals.

Haitian Elections Scheduled Sunday

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The Independent Electoral Council said arson and gunfire attacks on its headquarters and other sites would not force it to delay Sunday's elections.

Two people were killed and 30 wounded Monday when mobs attacked a market, stores and the offices of the council and a presidential candidate.

Hospital sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said some of the injured were beaten, others slashed with machetes and others were shot.

An old man was reported beaten to death and another person died after an attack on a building housing refugees.

Pierre-Paul Marette, the election council's director of civic education, said the council is "working if nothing happened. To delay the election would only prolong the violence."

Armed arsonists shouting "Long live the army!" also smashed cars, shattered storefront windows and burned piles of tires at intersections. Most stores and businesses shut down.

The violence appeared to be aimed at blocking or disrupting the first free national elections in 30 years.

Rebel Leaders Denied Entry

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Two Nicaraguan rebel leaders gave up plans to return to Managua to deliver a cease-fire counter-proposal today after Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government told them to stay out.

Alfonso Robelo, one of two rebel leaders who hoped to deliver the counterproposal, said the U.S.-backed Contra rebels would instead give their cease-fire plan to the Vatican ambassador in San Jose to deliver to Nicaragua.

Robelo and Azucena Ferrey, both directors of the rebel umbrella organization known as the Nicaraguan Resistance, had been named by fellow rebel leaders earlier Monday to deliver the insurgents' cease-fire proposal to Managua.

But Robelo said later that it had become clear that he and Mrs. Ferrey would be unable to enter Nicaragua as planned because the government opposed the visit.

In Managua, President Daniel Ortega said Monday that the two would have to renounce the insurgency and ask for amnesty to come to Nicaragua.

Robelo, once a ranking member of the Sandinista government, and Mrs.

Ferrey said they would not accept amnesty.

He told reporters that regional airlines and charter flight companies refused to carry them. He said it would be useless to try to enter Nicaragua by land at any border crossing.

Nun Lived As She Believed

EDITOR'S NOTE — "Whatever you do to the least of my people that you do unto me." So sang mourners at the wake for Sister Miriam Friday, who had taken the hymn's New Testament admonition to heart. She worked among "the least," those lacking homes and losing heart. She died among them, too.

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — She was a nun with a single-minded mission: help the poor, befriend the lonely, tend to the needy. Her work was dangerous, but her devotion was strong — so strong it may have killed her.

Sister Miriam Friday lived, worked and died in Uptown, a neighborhood that scared off some friends, but one in which she found comfort ministering to street people in need.

One she embraced as a friend, a man with a history of mental illness who had recently become her boarder, now stands charged with her murder.

It is a horror story, yet family and friends say there is some solace knowing Sister Friday died doing what she thought the Lord wanted her to do, in a place she knew she belonged.

"She lived what she believed," said Sister Mary Ann Stoltz, a childhood friend. "She was very, very convinced what she was doing was so right, even if other people would question her. ... She just knew what she was called to do."

Sister Friday devoted herself to society's pariahs — the homeless, the transients, the mentally disturbed. She made sure the hungry had food, the cold had heat, the needy had a helping hand.

She was inspired, in part, by travels to India, where she visited Mother Teresa, and to Assisi in Italy, the birthplace of St. Francis, who rejected his wealth and ministered to the poor and lepers.

As a nun in the Franciscan order, which is devoted to serving the poor, Sister Friday lived like those she served. She wore second-hand clothes, squirreled away coupons and recycled everything, even Christmas cards.

She supported herself cleaning houses or babysitting and lived for years in a spartan, one-room apartment in Uptown.

"I don't think she thought it would be right to go there during the day and go to a nice apartment at night," said her brother, James, who is in the insurance business in Eau Claire, Wis.

Sister Friday made the unwanted feel wanted, inviting them to join others at Friday night Bible classes in her apartment, holding Halloween and Valentine's Day parties, picnics and holiday dinners for them and giving them small gifts.

"Rather than judge how people got where they were or how they were leading their lives, she just wanted them to have a friend," said another brother, Robert.

When others saw despair, she saw promise in Uptown, a lakefront community dotted with halfway houses, decaying transient hotels, bars and a reputation as a dumping ground for ex-mental patients.

She encouraged friends to see her world. Sister Stoltz said she once told her friend she was afraid to attend her evening Bible class, but Sister Friday said: "You have nothing to be afraid of. These people are God's people."

Another friend who attended the class, Marina Sullivan, said she told Sister Friday she had a "dangerous ministry" and asked, "Who would like to be with the street people all the time?"

"The work must be done and it must be done now," the nun replied, according to her friend. "Otherwise, who will do it?"

The 50-year-old nun was strong-willed, didn't compromise easily and was committed to her ministry — and to helping Karl Caldwell, 50, the ex-mental patient who is charged with murdering her and stealing about $30. He has pleaded innocent.

Sister Friday helped Caldwell manage his affairs while they lived in a North Side transient hotel. Authorities say Caldwell's Social Security checks were issued jointly to them and she used the money to help pay his rent and buy cigarettes and groceries.

In September, when Sister Friday and a priest moved to a larger place so they could have more room for Bible classes, she asked Caldwell to come along.

"She thought he was making good progress" toward a more independent life, said James Friday.

Police say that on Oct. 14, after the nun berated Caldwell about his poor hygiene, he bashed her head against the floor and wall. He allegedly tried to set her on fire, bound her hands and feet, placed her in a filled bathtub, and left the water running.

A janitor, responding to complaints of leaking water, found her the next day.

Officials say Caldwell has a 24-year history of mental problems. He was last committed, for two years ending in 1979, when he was found unfit to stand trial on charges of attacking a cab driver.

Family members say Sister Friday spoke of Caldwell often and wanted to help him.

Helping others was her life's goal. Born Mary Ann Friday, she was raised in Stevens Point, Wis., one of six children. She was a talented pianist and enjoyed swimming.

At the end of high school, she wanted to enter the convent, following the path of relatives who'd become nuns and priests. Her father asked her to wait a year and see the world.

She worked for a year at an insurance company, then joined the Sisters of St. Joseph of the Third Order of St. Francis.

She taught school in several small towns before moving to an inner-city school in Milwaukee.

"Being in that kind of area and seeing the poverty ... that might have opened her eyes," said Robert Friday, assistant news editor at the Milwaukee Sentinel.

Sister Friday left teaching and around 1970 moved to Chicago. For a time, she lived with other nuns and priests.

Although afraid to fly, she traveled. In India, she accompanied nuns from Mother Teresa's order as they helped needy people along the wayside, Sister Stoltz said. Sister Friday saw an old man lying in a ditch.

As her friend recalled, Sister Friday said: "When I stooped down and put him in my arms, it was repulsive. (But) something overtook me. He died in my arms. ... I knew from that moment on, I had to reach out to people who are alienated."

Sister Friday's devotion to society's outcasts led her to a way of life that was "a bit out of the ordinary," said her cousin, the Rev. William Grevatch. "Her own community didn't always understand it. Her own family struggled with it."

Mary Ann Friday was buried on the convent grounds. While those who knew her mourn her loss, they also celebrate her life.

"I really felt a sense of joy at the way she lived her life," said Robert Friday. "It just made you proud for the life she lived rather than sadness at the way she died."

"She died doing what she wanted. She had done so much. She didn't get cheated. Maybe God felt it was time."

Father's Suggestion Wasn't Acceptable

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The other day, my wife and daughter and I were talking about our daughter's upcoming wedding. Since our daughter has a closetful of expensive dresses she's worn only once, I made what I thought was a very good suggestion: "Why not let all the girls you want in your wedding party just pick out the prettiest dress they have hanging in their closets and wear it? For those who don't have one or can't afford to buy one, let them borrow one of yours, or another friend's. Guys rent tuxedos for weddings; why should girls have to buy an expensive dress to wear only once? A lot of girls are left out of weddings because they can't afford to buy a dress."

Well, Abby, my suggestion went over like a lead balloon. What do you and your readers say? — PRACTICAL ALABAMA DADDY

DEAR DADDY: You are indeed practical, but if each bridesmaid were to wear the prettiest dress she found hanging in her closet, the bridal procession would look more like a garage-sale fashion show than a wedding.

Nice try, Dad, but I'm afraid your idea would never play in Birmingham, Montgomery or Tuscaloosa.

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor who used to be a good friend, but now he won't talk to me. This is why: My husband was diagnosed as having Alzheimer's disease about six months ago. His memory is very faulty and he has to be watched all the time, but there are times when he is quite all right, so I am keeping him home as long as I can.

Well, I do not drive, and my husband is not able to drive anymore, so I sold his car. This neighbor asked me several times to sell it to him, but I refused. Instead, I sold it to a man who does not live in our neighborhood because I was afraid that if my husband saw that car in our neighborhood he might insist it was his car and want it back.

I know I did the right thing, but the neighbor who wanted to buy it first is still not talking to me. Do you think I did the right thing or not? — HURT FEELINGS

DEAR HURT: I think you did exactly the right thing by selling the car to someone who did not live in your neighborhood. If you explained this to your neighbor and he still refuses to talk to you, shame on him.

DEAR ABBY: "Mrs. Whipple's" problem with her mother stealing toilet paper from motels brings to mind an incident that happened to my wife during a trip last year.

We stopped at a motel for the night and on leaving in the morning, my wife asked the manager for the address of the manufacturer of the excellent little coffee maker that was attached to the wall of our room.

"I can give you the address," he said, "but this would be much easier — and cheaper." Then he reached under his desk and brought out a screwdriver and handed it to my wife.

"Pry it off the wall and take it home," he said. "The one in your room is the only one that hasn't been stolen!"

Maybe he was just kidding, but he certainly didn't act like it. What do you think? — VIRGIL IN BANDON, ORE.

DEAR VIRGIL: I think he was just kidding. Since you didn't take him up on it, we'll never know.

Gospels Have Hard Time

Forget the brilliance of playwright Arthur Miller. Forget the paths of his character, Willy Loman, in "Death of a Salesman."

The next tragedy to hit the Broadway stage is a little thing I've been working on called "Death of an Author." It's the story of what happens when Matthew, Mark, Luke and John hit the book trail to sell their Gospels in today's communication markets.

It all begins when their publisher invites them to attend the American Booksellers Convention in Washington in June to kick off their books. They are told to sit behind a desk and wait for the crowds to come up and shake their hands. The mob, however, seems to be congested around a booth featuring Vanna White.

"What is her book about?" asks Mark.

"Her life selling vowels," says the publicist.

There is a crowd at another booth where a life-sized inflatable of Bill

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Cosby is poised over his book. People are talking to it. Some even ask if it minds if they take a picture of themselves with it.

The decision is made to send the four Apostles on the road. They share the "Tonight" show with Pee Wee Herman and Mame Van Doren, who, if she doesn't write fiction, gives new meaning to the parable of the fallen woman. The appearance of the four Gospel writers is canceled when it is realized they aren't a singing group but four authors.

They talk about homosexuality among the clergy on Donahue, their abused childhood on Oprah and give intimate details of their fantasies on Sally Jessy Raphael.

They check into hotels where the toilet tissue is folded into triangles every time they leave the room, but only one bar of soap is provided and it is the size of a key ring.

They stir-fry cabbage and linguini on "Hour Magazine" and share the "Larry King Show" with Tip O'Neill. At the end of two weeks of one-nighters and book and author luncheons, they call their publisher and say they cannot continue this death march without a sign. By express mail they receive a copy of The New York Times book section. Their books are not on best-seller list.

They continue sitting in department and book stores inscribing books to "My dearest friend who inspired me" and asking them to spell their name. They miss planes, lose luggage, never have the right clothes for the right city and eat in airports. They arrive to large ads and crowds in bookstores in the Bible Belt and would have triumphed ... had their books been there too. Luke is asked to "capsule" his Christmas story to 30 seconds on "Live at Five."

In the last scene of the play, their agent comes to the footlights and makes an impassioned speech ... something like, "Matthew, Mark, Luke and John never made a lot of money. Their names were never in the paper, but they're human beings and a terrible thing is happening to them. So attention must be paid."

I wept as I was writing it.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market surged higher today on news of interest rate cuts in West Germany, France and the Netherlands.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial climbed 31.16 points to 1,954.24, a 1.6 percent gain, in the first half hour of trading.

The European interest rate cuts should give the United States' Federal Reserve room to cut its own interest rates.

Hearing

to be forced to buy something that I don't want," he said.

"I'm not sure that I'm real satisfied with this whole process," he added. "It seems to me to be undemocratic. If America began toward independence on the basis of taxation without representation, then surely, surely, this is taxation without representation."

Not all those attending the three-hour meeting were against the proposed annexation.

J.T. Williams of Oxford Road said the annexation would be a great thing for the good of Greenville.

Williams said the placement of a sewage system would alleviate potential health hazards in the event of severe weather conditions.

Sewer service is not currently available to the annexation area. The proposed sewer system is estimated to cost $5.2 million, funded by Greenville Utilities Commission revenues.

"I believe, in certain areas of Brook Valley, you're sitting on a time bomb as far as sewage is concerned," Williams said.

Mike Beckert, another Brook Valley resident, also addressed the issue of the proposed sewage addition.

Beckert said his temporary septic tank has worked fine for 12 years, and shows no sign of failing.

"When you have a system that works properly," he asked, "why should you be forced to tie in until you have problems?"

Other speakers noted that, if annexation is passed, Brook Valley will be serviced by Greenville Police and Fire-Rescue.

Tommy Elks, owner of Highland Park Mobile homes, said he was concerned with the level of service to be provided.

"We certainly don't want to be annexed into the city and take less than what we have available to us now," he said. "I'm asking questions trying to make sure that we're going to receive something comparable to what we have at the present time."

Another concern expressed during the forum was environmental damage as the result of construction.

Jehu Taff of Oxford Road said he estimated 20 trees on his property would have to be removed due to construction.

"What price do you put on a four-foot wide oak tree?," he asked the council. "It doesn't take long to cut one down, but it takes a long time to grow one," he said.

Greg Gaylord, a new resident of Holly Hills, a heavily wooded section of the proposed annexation, also expressed environmental concerns.

Gaylord said the most attractive feature in Holly Hills is its seclusion and natural beauty.

He said he has no hostility toward the city but has trepidations about having bulldozers and construction affect the land.

"It goes beyond the economic impact," he said. "It's more an esthetic impact and I think it would detract from Greenville itself."

John Ferren, representing the Greenville Utilities Commission, said the commission would make every effort to locate alternative sewerage routes which would minimize damage.

Councilwoman Nancy Jenkins was absent from the hearings. The Brook Valley annexation, if passed, would be added into her fifth voting district.

Commuter Crash Kills 16 In Alaska

HOMER, Alaska (AP) — A twin-engine commuter plane crashed and skidded through a fence while trying to land, killing 16 people and injuring the five others aboard, authorities said today.

The Ryan Air Beechcraft 1900 crashed Monday night in clear skies and came to a halt 200 yards from the runway at Homer Airport.

"There was no fire, but Sgt. Jim Stogsdill, of the Alaska State Troopers in Soldotna.

The flight originated in Kodiak, and after a stop here, was to continue to Kenai and Anchorage, 150 miles north of here.

The fuselage of the aircraft, which can hold 19 passengers and a crew of one or two, came to rest in a snowy field after plowing through the fence.

Susan Polis of Homer said she saw the plane descend awkwardly.

"It was definitely out of control," she said. "It just went down really fast."

Ed Reasor, an Anchorage lawyer who was in the terminal, said he ran out the door shortly after the plane went down.

Take 73-71 Victory

Tar Heels Slip Past Soviets

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Although his team has defeated top-ranked Syracuse and the Soviet National basketball team, North Carolina coach Dean Smith says the Tar Heels still have a lot of work to do.

"We're not a good basketball team yet," Smith said Monday night, after the Tar Heels earned a 73-71 victory over the Soviets in exhibition college basketball.

"I hope we will become one," Smith said. "It really is amazing how much we have to work on our execution still. We did play great defense on that last possession when we had to."

Jeff Lebo scored eight of his 11 points in the second half, including a tie-breaking 3-point shot, as the third-ranked Tar Heels took the victory. The loss left the Soviets with a 6-3 record with one game remaining in their 10-city American tour. The Soviets play Kentucky tonight in Lexington, Ky.

Lebo's shot gave the Tar Heels a 70-67 lead with 3:11 to play and immediately followed a game-tying 3-pointer by Vlas Khomichis. The Soviets tried 25 3-point shots, but made just four of them.

"We got them when they were tired, I'm sure," Smith said. "It had to hurt their 3-point shooting. They're normally a good 3-point shooting team."

After Scott Williams missed a wide-open layup that would have put North Carolina up by five, the Soviets pulled within one on a Khomichus bank shot at the 2:50 mark.

Khomichus scored all of his 13 points in the game's last six minutes.

North Carolina took a three-point lead again on Steve Bucknall's layup with 1:41 left, but 6-foot-11 center Valery Goborov answered with a short hook over Williams at the 46-second mark.

Kevin Madden made it 73-71 when he hit the front end of a one-and-one with 19 seconds left. The Soviets had a chance to send the game into overtime, but Aleksandr Volkov missed a 15-foot shot from the right side with five seconds left and Madden rebounded to ensure the victory.

Sergey Tarakanov led the Soviets with 15 points, while Sharunas Marchulenis added 13 points. Also scoring in double figures were Valery Goborov with 11 points and Aleksandr Volkov with 10.

The Tar Heels were led by Williams and J.R. Reid, who scored 15 points apiece.

Soviet coach Aleksandr Gomelsky, who Saturday night saw Indiana coach Bob Knight pull his team off the court with the Hoosiers trailing by 23 points early in the second half, called North Carolina, "the best team for the tour."

"Our boys gave them a great basketball game, but this (Smith) is the best coach for the United States. Number 42 (Williams) is a great center and number 14 (Lebo) is a great shooter."

Gomelsky also credited North Carolina with "nice play inside. They have good rebounders. My boys did not have good organization on defense though."

Krusen Named Interim Coach

CULLOWHEE (AP) — Former Western Carolina basketball coach Steve Cottrell says he has "absolutely no plans," following his abrupt resignation as basketball coach after 10 years at the Southern Conference school.

"I think it is in the best interest of Western Carolina University, the basketball program, me and my family that I resign," Cottrell said Monday. "I have absolutely no plans, no idea what I am going to do."

Cottrell said his decision to resign was "not an emotional, quick decision."

He cited among his reasons "several players leaving our program the last two years" and "a feeling that the program was not making the progress I felt it should have been making."

Terry Wanless, the school's athletic director, appointed Herb Krusen as interim head basketball coach.

"Krusen will assume the full responsibilities of head basketball coach immediately," Wanless said in a prepared statement issued through the sports information department.

"I have been authorized by Dr. Myron Coulter, our chancellor, to begin a search for a new head basketball coach and that process will begin following the Thanksgiving holidays."

Cottrell was not available for comment.

Krusen, 29, is in his third year on the Catamount staff. He joined Cottrell's staff in September 1985 after serving for three seasons as an assistant to Carl Tacy at Wake Forest. Harry Meeks, another assistant on Cottrell's staff for the last four seasons, will continue in his capacity as an assistant.

"I've gone through this twice, and neither time did I have any indication that this was going to happen," Krusen said in a telephone interview Monday. "It was just an unfortunate situation."

Krusen, who played his college ball at East Carolina, said Cottrell may have placed additional pressure on himself by trying to improve on last year's 10-19 record.

"He put a phenomenal amount of pressure on himself" which wasn't necessary, Krusen said.

Cottrell came to Western Carolina in August 1977 from Southern Methodist, where he had been an assistant basketball coach. He posted a 145-133 record and suffered only two losing seasons in 1978 and 1987. He had eight consecutive non-losing records between those campaigns. The 44-year-old native of Henderson was Southern Conference coach of the year in 1980 and ranked second in the league in tenure before his resignation.

Seven of his 10 teams finished in the conference's first division.

"I personally regret coach Cottrell's decision to step down at this time," Wanless said. "But I know he has given this decision serious thought and he feels it is in the best interest of everyone concerned. We are deeply indebted to Coach Cottrell and appreciate the integrity, hard work and success he has brought to Western Carolina University's basketball program. He was a tremendous asset to this university."

Coulter said he appreciated all that Cottrell has done for the university through the basketball program.

"He has run a class operation that all of us have been proud of. I deeply regret his decision to resign," Coulter said.

Western Carolina opens its basketball season on Dec. 1 against Tusculum, followed by a Dec. 3 matchup against seventh-ranked Kansas. Both games are in Cullowhee.

"They're tough," Krusen said of the Jayhawks. "If you ask people about the Final Four, 90 percent of the people in the country would say Kansas is a Final Four team."

But Krusen added that the first goal is facing Tusculum.

"We're gearing up for Tusculum next week and we'll take on Kansas when they come," he said.

Court Move Fails To Block Firing

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An attempt by an Ohio State alumnus to block the firing of football coach Earle Bruce isn't getting instant support in court.

A judge rejected that move Monday following the filing of a lawsuit in Franklin County Common Pleas Court by Columbus attorney Phillip D. Cameron, a former Buckeye baseball player. It was the latest legal action since Bruce was fired last week after nine seasons.

In a separate legal maneuver, Bruce's attorney, John Zonak, filed a $7.44-million suit Friday in Common Pleas Court against the university and President Edward Jennings, alleging slander and breach of contract.

Judge William T. Gillie on Monday denied Cameron's request for a temporary restraining order. But he set a hearing on Cameron's request for a preliminary injunction against Ohio State for Dec. 7 before Judge Frederick T. Williams.

Cameron asked for a temporary restraining order prohibiting Jennings from firing Bruce "and from continually obligating the taxpayers' funds for the retention of substitute and replacement coaches' services."

Cameron did not return telephone calls and did not comment after the hearing.

Bruce was fired in the second year of a three-year contract, and Ohio State officials have said they will meet the terms of the contract.

Gillie's bailiff, who did not give his name, said the judge turned down Cameron's request because Ohio State coaches are paid from athletic department money and not taxpayer money and because Bruce's contract allows for termination.

Bruce was fired Nov. 16 by Jennings, effective after the Buckeyes' 23-20 victory Saturday over Michigan.

The Plain Dealer of Cleveland reported today that legal questions were raised about whether the university's board of trustees might have violated Ohio's open meetings law by reportedly taking a secret vote to fire Bruce.

Zonak said he would explore whether the trustees failed to give public notice of their Nov. 5 dinner meeting. Board member Deborah E. Casto had told The Columbus Dispatch the decision to fire Bruce was made at that meeting.

A spokesman for the Ohio attorney general's office confirmed the board of trustees was subject to the open-meetings law and must give public notice of meetings and specify the topic of the meeting.

Saturday night, Zonak said Bruce was fired because of a clash of lifestyles between Jennings and Bruce. Zonak's suit also accused Jennings of slandering Bruce, although Jennings has refused to state the reasons for Bruce's dismissal.

Zonak said Monday that Bruce asked him Sunday night to refrain from publicly commenting on the coach's dispute with Jennings. Zonak said he would respect Bruce's wishes and not make further public attacks on Jennings.

In the lawsuit, Zonak asked to take the deposition of Barbara Real, director of OSU's regional fund-raising campaign. The Plain Dealer reported Monday that Jennings and Real were to leave today for London for a nine-day vacation. The newspaper said two reservation clerks for Trans World Airlines confirmed Ms. Real and Jennings had reservations as "a party of two."

TWA's reservations desk at Kennedy Airport on Monday confirmed a reservation for Real, but not for Jennings.

Both the Dispatch and Plain Dealer reported today that a reservations clerk said Jennings' reservation was canceled on Monday but that Real's reservation was rescheduled for another flight today.

Jennings and trustees Chairman Edmund Redmen said at a news conference Sunday they stand by the decision to fire Bruce, who compiled an 81-26-1 record at Ohio State. Redmen said the board fully supports Jennings.

Gov. Richard Celeste said Monday he hoped the matter would be resolved promptly, but sidestepped a question about whether he was satisfied with the way Jennings was doing his job.

"I think the issue is how do we ensure that the university moves forward in a positive way," Celeste said. "I know that that's what Ed Jennings desires, and I know that's what the trustees desire, and that's certainly what I desire."

Rams Upset 'Skins, 30-26

WASHINGTON (AP) — It didn't quite erase the agony of what has been a frustrating season, but the Los Angeles Rams are feeling a lot better about themselves after their 30-26 upset of the Washington Redskins.

Ron Brown returned a kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown and caught a scoring pass from Jim Everett on Monday night to lead the Rams to their second victory in a row after a miserable 1-7 start.

"The last two weeks we have gotten our stuff back, and we're very proud of our performance," Rams Coach John Robinson said.

"We're winners," Brown said. "We had been losing to teams we shouldn't be losing to, but now we're getting the job done."

While Los Angeles has bounced back in the past two games, Brown needed only four plays to rebound from adversity. Moments after he dropped a sure touchdown pass from Everett in the third quarter, he caught a 26-yard toss to give the Rams a 30-19 lead with 3:38 left in the quarter.

"That one I dropped was too easy," Brown said. "I had too long to think about it."

Doug Williams' second touchdown pass to Art Monk cut the gap to 30-26 four seconds into the fourth quarter, and the Redskins drove to the Los Angeles 14-yard line in the closing seconds before LeRoy Irvin intercepted a pass that went through Monk's hands in the end zone.

The play followed a similar sequence in which Monk had an apparent touchdown pass jarred from his grasp by Mickey Sutton.

"Art has probably made more big plays than he's dropped passes," Williams said. "Sometimes you just have nights like that."

Despite the two close plays at the finish, Monk caught five passes for 93 yards, including touchdowns of 17 and five yards.

Williams, who earned the starting spot after replacing an ineffective Jay Schroeder last week, completed 24-of-46 passes for 308 yards and also ran for a touchdown. But his first-quarter fumble was returned 35 yards for a touchdown by Rams linebacker Mike Wilcher and he was sacked four times.

After the game, Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs said Williams performed well enough to maintain the starting job until at least next week, when the Redskins host the defending Super Bowl champion New York Giants. "Doug fought his guts out," Gibbs said. "He will remain the quarterback until I say otherwise."

Washington, which gained only 66 rushing yards, fell to 7-3 and missed a chance to move three games ahead of Dallas in the NFC East.

The Redskins were betrayed by their special teams. In addition to being stung by Brown's fourth career kickoff return for a touchdown, Washington allowed a blocked punt that set up a 1-yard scoring run by Charles White that enabled the Rams to take a 23-9 second-quarter lead.

"We made enough mistakes to lose," Gibbs said. "Our special teams, in particular, were killing us."

Brown's kickoff return, longest in the NFC this season, came seconds after Washington took a 9-7 lead and put the Rams on top for good.

"As soon as I went through I saw the hole open up," Brown said. "I was faking to the outside, then went back to the middle because it was kind of crowded out there."

After cutting against the grain at the Ram 40, Brown outraced Darrell Green to the end zone.

Los Angeles could muster only four first downs in the first half, but used Wilcher's fumble return and help from its special teams to take a 23-16 halftime lead.

White, the NFL's leading rusher, gained 112 yards after being limited to only 29 in the first half.

"Charlie White again proved what I think our football team can do," Robinson said. "We can run the ball on anybody if the game is really even."

It was the Rams' first regular-season victory over the Redskins since 1969 and the first for Robinson in four tries.

"I've lost three times here, and it's nice to finally win one," he said.

Earnhardt Enjoys Record Racing Season

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt enjoyed a season of firsts but he gained two big seconds after Sunday's Atlanta Journal 500 NASCAR Winston Cup race at Atlanta (Ga.) International Raceway.

Earnhardt, a native of Kannapolis, N.C., who made this year's NASCAR Winston Cup championship his second straight and third overall, became the second driver in motorsports history to win more than $2 million in a single season. His season winnings of $1,404,125 will join with more than $650,000 in post-season awards to push him over the $2 million mark.

Bill Elliott, who won $2.3 million in 1985, is the only other driver to have surpassed the mark.

Earnhardt is also assured of becoming the second driver in motorsports history to surpass $7 million in career winnings. The first was Darrell Waltrip, who now has career winnings of $7,791,655. Earnhardt has career winnings of $6,384,641, but his Winston Cup championship winnings will push him over the $7 million mark.

Earnhardt finished the season with 4696 points and a comfortable margin of 489 points over second-place Elliott, who had 4207. Terry Labonte finished third with 4007 points, followed by Waltrip, 3911; Rusty Wallace, 3818; Ricky Rudd, 3742; Kyle Petty, 3737; Richard Petty, 3530; Bobby Allison, 3530, and Ken Schrader, 3405.

Elliott, the only driver in motorsports to have won more than $1 million in three seasons, is second in money-winnings with $1,263,650. Labonte is third with $658,215, followed by Rudd ($572,925); Wallace ($557,760); Benny Parsons ($536,300); Kyle Petty ($480,010); Allison ($470,225); Geoff Bodine ($414,640), and Richard Petty ($388,830).

None of those figures include post-season awards. Final money-winnings figures will be released Monday.

The 1987 Champion-Sears Rookie of the Year winner will be announced Tuesday from Daytona Beach.

The top two contenders are both sons of former NASCAR Winston Cup champions. They are Davey Allison of Hueytown, Ala., son of Bobby Allison, and Dale Jarrett of Conover, N.C., son of two-time Winston Cup champion Ned Jarrett.

Crum Still Mum On His UNC Future

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina football coach Dick Crum still is mum on his plans for next year, but a Raleigh newspaper says the issue of compensation for assistant coaches remains the stumbling block to Crum's resignation.

The News and Observer reported that members of the Educational Foundation, more commonly known as the Rams Club, have offered $350,000 in compensation for the assistant coaches, whose contracts expire June 30, 1988. Crum has asked for $1.3 million for his assistants, sources told the newspaper.

A former high-ranking official in the Rams Club said the buyout is not an official action of the club.

"The Rams Club, per se, does not buy out coaches' contracts, never has and never will," the former official told the News and Observer. "The bylaws of our club specifically forbid it."

The former official said individuals could get together and offer to buy out a coach's contract.

"Anyone has that opportunity," the source said. "Coaches are approached with financial offers on all sorts of things — endorsements, private service ventures, contract buyouts."

Sources have told three North Carolina newspapers that Crum coached his last game at Chapel Hill against Duke. But Crum did not announce his resignation following the game and has not been available for comment since then.

"I understand that I can continue the contract and so everything, as I said the other night, is up in the air," Crum told his television show's host, John Kilgo, who offered his own prediction.

"It's a personal guess and it's nothing more than that at this point," he said. "I think he's coached his last game at Carolina."

Crum, who has four years left on his 10-year contract, met with his players Sunday to take care of routine business that accompanies the end of the college football season.

Two players who asked not to be identified said Crum was composed and reserved when he and the assistant coaches met with the team in Chapel Hill. Those players told The News and Observer of Raleigh that Crum did not mention when, or if, he would announce his resignation.

At the team meeting, players voted on permanent captains for the season and team honors.

University officials, who declined to be identified, told the newspaper that only recruiting coordinator Joe Robinson was expected to be immediately retained if Crum resigned.

Those officials, who told the newspaper that they expected Crum to resign this week, said a new coach would have the opportunity to keep former Crum assistants if he wanted.

Another unidentified official quoted by the newspaper said former North Carolina assistant Jim Donnan, the offensive coordinator at Oklahoma, is the top pick to replace Crum. Donnan was among the finalists when Crum was selected as coach in 1977.

Despite this, North Carolina's assistant football coach have been instructed to begin their off-campus recruiting while the status of head coach Dick Crum remains uncertain, a Durham newspaper reported today.

Several assistants left Chapel Hill Monday following a meeting with Crum, the Durham Morning Herald reported. Crum is reportedly on his way out as coach, although he has made no announcement and said when or if he would be ready to resign, the media would be notified.

Assistants who did not leave Monday morning were scheduled to leave this morning, the newspaper reported.

"Coach Crum said to conduct business as usual and if he knows anything different, he'll let us know," assistant coach Fred Chatham told the newspaper.

Chatham said the coaches are scheduled to be on the road today and Wednesday and to return home for Thanksgiving.

Chatham said in an interview that what he and other assistants told recruits is up to them.

"I'm going to tell them we're in a holding pattern right now. It's still a good school," Chatham said. "And whatever happens, I hope they'll visit North Carolina."

Recruiting at UNC came to a halt last week as reports persisted that Crum would not return next season. The coaches did not scout high school games last Friday.

Chatham said the decision to resume recruiting was Crum's.

"He's still the football coach and I'm still working for him," Chatham said. "I'll recruit until they come get me."

Reports that Crum would not return have been circulating for a week. There have been reports that Crum's resignation is imminent based on attempts to complete a deal which would buy out the remaining four years on Crum's 10-year contract.

North Carolina Athletic Director John Swofford said last Thursday the school would fully honor Crum's contract unless he decided otherwise and a mutual agreement was reached between the school and the coach.

Crum could not be reached for comment Monday.

Sooners Reclaim Top Spot

By The Associated Press

The Oklahoma Sooners have reclaimed the No. 1 ranking from Nebraska after letting the Cornhuskers own it for one week.

Meanwhile, Miami of Florida surged into second place, setting up a possible national championship showdown against Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl on New Year's night.

By defeating Nebraska 17-7 on Saturday to complete an 11-0 regular season, the Sooners vaulted back into first place, the spot they had held all season until surrendering it last week. Nebraska slipped to fifth place.

Oklahoma received 54 of 59 first-place votes and 1,173 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Miami, 9-0 following a 24-14 victory over Toledo, climbed from third place to second with four first-place ballots and 1,108 points. The Hurricanes had been No. 3 for eight weeks in a row.

"Obviously, that's the way the system works," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said. "When you beat No. 1..."

Switzer expressed disappointment with the Sooners' offense, which gained 444 yards but fumbled eight times, losing three, and threw an interception.

"We've done the same thing the last three weeks," he said. "We play well enough to win the game (Oklahoma State 29-10, Missouri 17-13) but we don't put the ball in the end zone when we're down inside the 30."

Miami, which handed Oklahoma its only defeat in each of the last two seasons, will meet the Sooners in the Orange Bowl. But the Hurricanes still have regular-season games left against Top Ten teams Notre Dame and South Carolina.

Wisconsin 30-9 and went from 11th to ninth with 680 points. Notre Dame rounded out the Top Ten with 654 points.

The Second Ten consists of UCLA, Oklahoma State, Clemson, Georgia, Texas A&M, Tennessee, Southern Cal, Alabama, Iowa and Pitt.

Last week, it was Michigan State, South Carolina, Oklahoma State, Georgia, Tennessee, Texas A&M, Alabama, Iowa, Pitt and Indiana.

Southern Cal's upset of UCLA sent the Trojans to the Rose Bowl and returned them to the Top Twenty for the first time since they were 19th in the preseason poll.

The Trojans replaced Indiana in the Top Twenty despite the Hoosiers' 35-14 triumph over Purdue.

Syracuse Atop Reflector List

Syracuse moved back to the top of the heap on the Daily Reflector Performance Rankings this week.

The Orangemen, who completed their season with a perfect 11-0 record, moved from third back to first place after an absence of several weeks. The Orangemen have amassed 3,132 points on the Reflector computer rankings.

The rankings measure a team's success against the strength of its schedule, measuring success to the third level of competition. Points are awarded for each game a team wins, each games its victims wins, and each win that teams' victims also win.

Notre Dame, despite its loss to Penn State this past weekend, held onto the number two spot with 2,956 points. The Fighting Irish have an 8-2 record on the season.

Florida State, first last week with a 9-1 record, slipped to third after an open date. The Seminoles have 2,928 points.

Pittsburgh moved from seventh to fourth. The 8-3 Panthers have 2,828 points while Michigan State moved up from a tie for eighth to fifth with 2,712 points. The Spartans are 8-2-1 on the year.

National poll leader Oklahoma, 11-0, moved from 14th to 8th this week with 2,600 points.

The biggest leap in the rankings was by Southern California, which moved from 20th to 13th, while the biggest drop was recorded by the team it beat this weekend, UCLA, which dropped from fifth to 11th.

Two newcomers joined the top 20 this week, South Carolina, in at 16th and Wyoming, in at 17th.

This week's top 20, plus the standings of Atlantic Coast Conference teams, East Carolina and the Pirate opponents:

Clemson, Cavs Pace All-ACC

GREENSBORO (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference football champ Clemson and runner-up Virginia placed seven and five players respectively on the All-ACC football team chosen by the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

The Tigers, heading to the Citrus Bowl, were 6-1 in the ACC and 9-2 overall, while the Cavaliers finished 5-2 and 7-4 to earn a bid in the upcoming All-American Bowl.

North Carolina placed four players on the all-star squad, while Wake Forest added three. North Carolina State and Maryland earned two spots each, and Duke placed the remaining player. Georgia Tech wasn't represented on the team.

The three leading vote getters on this year's team, announced Monday, were all Clemson seniors led by placekicker David Treadwell, who was named on 75 of 76 ballots cast.

Offensive guard John Phillips and defensive lineman Michael Dean Perry were two of the three players earning All-ACC honors for the second straight year, along with North Carolina defensive lineman Tim Goad.

This year's team was dominated by seniors, who earned 14 places on the all-star squad. There were five juniors and four sophomores, and Clemson running back Terry Allen was the only freshman named to the team.

Several positions were closely contested. Clemson center Jeff Bak received 23 votes, as did teammate James Earle and Duke's Dave Demore as defensive linemen. North Carolina State offensive tackle Joey Page was named on 37 ballots, while Virginia offensive guard Steve Ryan was tabbed 22 times. Duke's Steve Slayden was second in the quarterback balloting with 20 votes.

Treadwell led the ACC in scoring with 82 points, connecting on 18 of 21 field goal attempts and 28 of 29 extra points. Duke wide receiver Clarkston Hines, who received 56 votes, set an ACC single-season receiving record for yards gained with 1,093 on 57 catches.

Clemson running back Terry Allen and Wake Forest running back Mark Young, who received 56 and 43 votes respectively, led the ACC in rushing with 868 and 795 yards respectively.

Virginia quarterback Scott Secules, who was named on 54 ballots, was the ACC leader in passing efficiency, while completing 58 percent of his passes for 2,311 yards.

The following is the All-Atlantic Coast Conference football team chosen Monday by the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association:

Greene, back, Wake Forest, 61; Kevin Cook, back, Virginia, 36; and Craig Salmon, punter, Maryland, 71.

Chicago Gaining Respect This Year

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Chicago Coach Doug Collins doesn't mind victory, but he'd also like to see his team get some respect this season.

The Bulls gained both Monday night after rallying in the final four minutes to hand the Boston Celtics a 107-102 NBA loss behind a 31-point effort from Michael Jordan, 20 points from rookie Scottie Pippen and 19 from John Paxson.

"Chicago is no longer a one-dimensional team," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "Pippen, Paxson and (Charles) Oakley to go with Jordan, that ain't a bad combination."

"They're a young team and this win is a good confidence-builder for them," Jones said. "Just because you have players hurt, you can't just lie down and die."

The Bulls won the game by outscoring the Celtics 32-15 in the final quarter to overcome a 12-point deficit.

In the only other NBA game Monday, San Antonio defeated the New York Knicks 117-112.

Playing without injured stars Larry Bird and Kevin McHale, the Celtics got 14 points from Fred Roberts and 10 from rookie Brad Lohaus in the first half. Boston led 63-51 at halftime after leading by as many as 18 points.

"Boston wins 60 games a year because they have respect and that's what I want our team to establish," Collins said. "They were playing without two of the best in the league and they still played us real tight."

In the second half, Jordan scored 20 of his points while Pippen, with seven down the stretch, helped secure Chicago's fourth win over Boston in 24 games since 1983-84.

"We're 8-2 and something has to be working right," said Jordan, the league's top scorer with a 34-point average. "It's a nice start for us and a good way to begin the road trip."

The Bulls, 4-0 on the road, play eight games over the next 14 days away from Chicago, starting Wednesday at Milwaukee.

Boston was paced by Dennis

Johnson's 23 points and 20 from Danny Ainge.

The Celtics, 8-3 overall, are 2-2 without Bird, who is expected to return to action Wednesday against Atlanta at Boston Garden.

"Hopefully, we can find the team concept," said Robert Parish, who scored 14 points for Boston. "At times, we seemed to be doing it by ourselves and we let them get too many fast-breaks and easy baskets."

Spurs 117, Knicks 112

San Antonio won its first road game in five tries as Johnny Dawkins scored eight of his 24 points in the last three minutes at New York.

The Spurs led 70-60 at halftime, but scored only 15 points in the third quarter and gave up 19 consecutive points in one stretch.

Walter Berry, who had 20 points, scored five during a streak of seven consecutive points by the Spurs that gave them a 105-99 lead with 4:55 left. After New York closed the gap to 106-105 with 3:41 left, Dawkins hit two consecutive jumpers and added another basket and two free throws in the final minute.

Patrick Ewing had 21 points and rookie Mark Jackson 20 points and 15 assists, both season highs, for the Knicks.

Sports medicine researchers at Penn State University have discovered that cyclists pedal differently with each leg, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau. Some bicycle racers produce as much as 30 percent more power with one leg than the other.

Greene Leads Lobos Past Bruins

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It's appropriate that Hunter Greene, so much of New Mexico's present, should lead the Lobos into their future.

The senior forward from Los Angeles wrecked proud UCLA with a 23-point, 10-rebound effort Monday night, leading New Mexico to a 77-66 victory over the Bruins in the Big Apple NIT.

In another NIT game Monday night, No. 14 Florida beat No. 18 Georgia Tech 80-69 to advance along with New Mexico into the tourney's semifinals Friday night in New York.

The other semifinalists will be determined in tonight's games, when Middle Tennessee meets Seton Hall at Piscataway, N.J. and Iowa plays at Purdue.

New Mexico's victory was easily the biggest for the program that survived a recruiting scandal eight years ago and has battled for respectability ever since.

And it was Greene who stamped New Mexico's ticket to Madison Square Garden.

He outdueled his half-brother, Bruin forward Trevor Wilson, repeatedly shaking loose to unleash his quick jumper or coming off with one of his six offensive rebounds.

He scored eight of New Mexico's first 10 points in the second half, and teamed with power forward Charlie Thomas to nullify UCLA's frontline of the 6-8 Wilson, 7-foot center Greg Foster and 6-8 forward Charles Rochelin.

Greene, less-hotly recruited than Wilson coming out of high school, refused to be victimized by the pregame brother-vs.-brother hype.

"I was afraid he might press a little, but he didn't," New Mexico Coach Gary Colson said. "What an effort."

Greene, who by the end of the season should be New Mexico's all-time leading scorer, was a freshman in 1983 when the Lobos upset UCLA 65-60 at the Bruins' Pauley Pavilion. He had eight points and five rebounds in that game, including a pair of free throws late in the contest.

And until Monday night, Colson had ranked that victory as the biggest in his tenure at New Mexico.

Colson said the trip to New York also can accomplish what four straight winning seasons haven't been able to do — turn NCAA heads toward Albuquerque.

Despite 85 victories by New Mexico in its last four seasons, it has not received an NCAA bid, having instead to settle for four trips to the post-season NIT.

"This was the biggest (win) because of the purse involved," Colson said. "It's going to New York, and the publicity that means."

Despite the 11-point margin, the victory over the Bruins was in doubt until the final two minutes.

With New Mexico nursing a 67-63 lead and 2:57 left, freshman guard

Rob Robbins shook loose for a layup, Thomas muscled in an alley-oop slam and point guard Jimmy Rogers converted a pair of free throws. The latter made it 73-64 lead with 1:42 left. The Lobos added six free throws in the final minute.

New Mexico also got 10 points from reserve freshman Kurt Miller and 14 from point guard Darrell McGee.

UCLA, 1-1, the defending PAC 10 champion, got 19 points and 11 rebounds from Wilson, 12 points from Foster and 10 each from guard Dave Immel and reserve Craig Jackson.

Afterward, UCLA Coach Walt Hazzard alternated between blasting the three officials from the Big Eight Conference and his team's inability to hit free throws, where the Bruins were 13 of 27.

"We didn't get a break. Not one," said Hazzard. "Every close call went against us."

The Bruins were no better from the free-throw line, hitting just 36 percent, including 1-of-12 from 3-point range.

Guard Pooh Richardson, who scored a career-high 23 points against Weber State in the Bruins' 119-79 win in the first round of the NIT, was 1-of-8.

"We shoot much better than that," Hazzard said.

Whether the young, unranked New Mexico team — there are only two seniors — can handle the pressure of playing in Madison Square Garden will be answered Friday night. The team is 2-0 so far.

"I probably will have to bring them back down to Earth, but at least I get to do it in New York," Colson said.

No. 14 Florida 80, No. 18 Ga. Tech 69 Livingston Chatman came off the bench to score 25 points for Florida.

Chatman, a 6-foot-8 freshman who missed Florida's first-round game against Jacksonville with a knee infection, scored nine points in the first half when the slow-starting Gators overcame a 12-point deficit by outscoring Georgia Tech 16-2 during a 7:43 stretch.

Georgia Tech got a 28-point performance from freshman Dennis Scott.

"It was an impressive performance by Chatman," Florida Coach Norm Sloan said of the 240-pound forward. "I don't know what else I can say. My suspicions were confirmed about him."

"It was a physical game with a lot of contact. That's the kind of game Livingston likes," Sloan added. "He's a broad-bodied athlete who doesn't get knocked off balance easily."

IOC Looking To Resolve Issues

TOKYO (AP) — The international Olympic community should resolve the issues of drugs and political boycotts as it looks toward the 21st century, International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch said today.

Samaranch, visiting Japan to make arrangements for a once-in-a-decade meeting of the 167 national Olympic delegations in Tokyo in 1990, said more than 1,000 people are expected to attend the congress.

"I can say maybe the most important social movement at the end of this century is sports," Samaranch said at a news conference. "At the peak of the sports movement, we feel, are the Olympics."

However, for this importance, the Olympic movement and sports must pay a price, he said, citing political manipulation, commercialization of the Olympic movement, and "doping" or the use of drugs to improve performance.

He said the Olympic movement will "have to be very careful with commercialism," and that the IOC will have to continue the fight against doping.

"This is also a kind of cheating we will not accept," he said.

Despite the problems, he said, "I see the future of sports and the future of the Olympic movement as very bright."

During his seven years as head of the IOC, Samaranch has seen the Olympics go through some trying times, including a Soviet boycott of the Los Angeles Games in 1984 and a threatened boycott by North Korea of the 1988 Games.

North Korea has demanded that it be made a co-host for the Games with South Korea and warned it would lead a communist bloc boycott if its demand is not met. So far, talks between North and South Korea over sharing the Games have stalled.

despite an offer from the IOC that the North could stage five events.

North Korea said recently it is willing to resume negotiations on the offer only after South Korea selects a new president in December.

Samaranch said the IOC has been able to work out political problems in the past, such as the split between China and Taiwan in which both countries claiming to represent the Chinese people were allowed to participate.

"If we solved this problem, why can't we solve this problem with both Koreas?" he asked.

However, he said, time is running out for North Korea to agree, because in addition to agreement on which events it will stage, North Korea and the IOC also must work out an agreement to allow 25,000 Olympic participants, including 7,000 journalists, to visit isolationist North Korea.

Samaranch said he was disappointed when North Korea refused to allow an IOC delegation to cross the South-North Korean border for recent talks in the North Korean capital, Pyongyang.

"I was very disappointed because I think North Korea lost a very good opportunity to give a good sign to the world," he said.

Another solution might be for the two Koreas to field a joint team in opening ceremonies, followed by separate North and South teams in competition. But Samaranch said he does not favor that approach.

Samaranch said he regretted the Soviet boycott of the 1984 Olympics and said the losers were those who did not take part.

He said the same thing applies for the 1988 Olympics.

"The only losers will be those countries not taking part in the Games, and I think the North Koreans don't like to be losers," he said.

Irvin Is Hoping To Forget About Past

WASHINGTON (AP) — Los Angeles Rams cornerback LeRoy Irvin hopes his critical interception against the Washington Redskins will help him forget what has been a tumultuous season.

Irvin, who was suspended by the Rams earlier this season during a contract dispute, picked off a Doug Williams pass in the end zone in the closing seconds Monday night to help preserve a 30-26 upset victory over the Redskins.

"I woke up this morning and read the paper and it said I was one of the reasons we were 2-7," Irvin said. "It hurt."

Irvin, who made the Pro Bowl in each of the last two years, had his locker cleaned out by the Rams earlier this season and was kicked off the team by Coach John Robinson. Los Angeles took him back after efforts to unload him proved futile, and the eight-year veteran paid dividends against the Redskins.

With Washington driving for the winning score, a pass slipped through the hands of Art Monk into the arms of Irvin. The interception, Irvin's first of the season, enabled the Rams to notch their first regular-season victory over the Redskins since 1969.

Irvin was happy to pass around the credit for his game-saving catch.

"The defensive line has been taking a bit of heat all year because they haven't been getting a good pass rush, but they sure put the pressure on Doug," Irvin said. "He kind of hurried the last throw."

"I didn't do anything special. I was just doing my job," he said.

Irvin even gave credit to his fellow defensive backs on the play, even though replays appeared to show the ball going from Monk to him.

"I think Johnnie (Johnson) or Nolan (Cromwell) tipped it," he said. "Somebody hit it."

First Touchdown

Bo Jackson warms up on the sidelines earlier this season as he prepares for his first NFL campaign. Jackson, a former Heisman Trophy winner, originally passed up football for baseball, but now is trying both. He scored his first NFL touchdown this past weekend. (AP Laserphoto)

Jackson's 1st TD Scamper Resembles A Steamroller

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bo Jackson says he's slower and heavier. So is a steamroller, which Jackson resembled as he flattened a defender during his first pro football touchdown run, of 35 awe-inspiring yards.

Jackson, playing his fifth NFL game with the Los Angeles Raiders, was impressive in his touchdown dash.

Most impressed was Denver cornerback Mike Harden, who was left with an impression of Jackson's helmet in his chest.

Raiders quarterback Marc Wilson said the run that began as a naked reverse, and ended with a 5-yard dive into the end zone "will probably be in every highlight film tomorrow until who knows when."

Jackson, the Heisman Trophy winner in 1985 who rejected pro football to concentrate on baseball for two seasons, made his run when the Raiders trailed Denver 13-0 in the first half of an eventual 23-17 Broncos' victory at the Los Angeles Coliseum Sunday.

Jackson said he now is six pounds heavier and "a step slower" than when he played at Auburn.

In his first four NFL games, he was merely sensational, averaging nine carries per game for 52 yards, before being given a starting assignment Sunday, alongside another Heisman Trophy winner, Marcus Allen.

Both Allen and former Auburn teammate Chris Woods told the 231-pound Jackson early in the game that he should resume his college style — running over people instead of being cute. Woods said teammates at Auburn called Jackson "Bull Hog — I mean he can just run over guys, and he was trying to be too fancy."

Jackson agreed. "I would get out in the open, and I was trying to run around the last guy," he said. "Today, I just said to heck with it, I'll just try to run over 'em."

The 192-pound Harden, honored by his teammates as Denver's best defender last season, was the only Broncos' player within five yards of Jackson when they met at the Denver 30-yard line. Jackson went past him like a tank rolling over a stop sign.

"It was embarrassing to get run over like that," said Harden, who was expecting Jackson to try a fake. "I expected him to come out and shake me down, get me off-balance. The biggest thing I did was hesitate, and you have to know with a guy like that you don't hesitate. I'll definitely remember it the next time I see him."

The touchdown excited the Raiders' players and the crowd of 61,318. Jackson scored again in the second half on a 1-yard run, and totaled 98 yards for the game on 13 carries, a 7.5-yard average. But the Raiders' effort to snap a six-game losing streak fell apart at the offensive line, which allowed Denver to sack Wilson six times.

"The touchdowns felt good at the time, but ... we didn't win," Jackson said. "We are rebuilding. And Rome wasn't built in a day."

Or a play. But Jackson's first touchdown was the kind of play that can spin dreams of renewed glory in the minds of Raiders' teammates.

"Never have I seen a running back like that," cornerback Mike Haynes said. "I've never seen anybody with his size, speed and determination."

"The future may be now," said Allen, who ran for 44 yards in 11 carries and caught four passes for 60 yards. "But we have something to look forward to. We have the makings of something very good here."

Cornerback Lester Hayes said: "He's God's gift to halfback. He's a godsend. He's unreal. He was destined to be a football player. He's a step beyond stupendous."

Jackson rejected a reported $7 million offer when he was drafted by Tampa Bay in 1986. He agreed to join the Raiders on a part-time basis only — after the baseball season, for about half as much money.

But could he be in football to stay, after a disappointing opening to his baseball career in which he hit some prodigious home runs but struck out far too often?

Jackson gave reporters the same answer he had when he joined the Raiders. "Summer is baseball, now is football," he said.

Unbeaten Mark Not Enough For Orange

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A lofty ranking and an 11-0 record would seem to make Syracuse a central figure in talk of potential national football champions.

Think again.

Syracuse is headed for the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1 as a kind of darkhorse. The Orangemen don't like being left out of the national title picture, but they say they're not worried about it, either.

"If we go 12-0, they can't deny us," senior quarterback Don McPherson said. "We'll be national champions in our own minds."

"It's not something we can control," receiver Tommy Kane said. "We're 11-0 and if we win the Sugar Bowl, what more can we do? We just have to keep winning. One thing's for sure, if we lose, we're out of the picture."

Thanks to a dramatic, last-minute 32-31 victory over West Virginia on Saturday, Syracuse is one of only three undefeated major-college teams in the nation. Oklahoma, 11-0, finished its season Saturday by beating top-ranked Nebraska 17-7, while Miami, Fla., 9-0, must still play Notre Dame next week and South Carolina on Dec. 5. Both opponents are ranked in the Top Twenty.

It is possible Syracuse could finish as the nation's only unbeaten team — providing they dispose of their SEC foe in the Sugar Bowl, Miami is beaten by one of its next two opponents, and the Hurricanes then defeat the Sooners on Jan. 1 in the Orange Bowl.

The Orangemen had hoped to secure the Orange Bowl spot opposite host Oklahoma for themselves. That fell through, however, so Syracuse accepted a bid to the Sugar Bowl against the Southeastern Conference representative. The outcome of Friday's Auburn-Alabama game will determine whether either of those teams or Louisiana State will go to the Sugar.

Should Oklahoa or Miami finish unbeaten, MacPherson thinks Syracuse should get serious consideration because of the quality of its schedule. Syracuse victims this season included Penn State and Pittsburgh, both ranked during the year, as well as another bowl-bound team, West Virginia.

Oklahoma has played only two ranked teams through the season while whipping such teams as North Texas State and Tulsa. In its own conference, Oklahoma beat Kansas, Kansas State and Iowa State teams that have combined for four wins and one tie this year.

Burns Not Worrying About Popularity

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Jerry Burns has always been popular with Minnesota Vikings players.

But if that popularity is waning because some of his players are second-guessing his decisions in the NFL team's month-old quarterback controversy, so be it.

"I never said I take any pride in being popular with them," said Burns, who was Bud Grant's offensive coordinator for 17 years before he took over as head coach in 1986.

"Hell, this is a business. It's a business decision I've made. In my mind, it has nothing to do with personalities or relationships. It's a feeling based on productivity. It's not some little sorority."

Actually, Burns couldn't even make a decision Monday. Tommy Kramer, the starting quarterback for eight years and a Pro Bowler last season, was still nursing the bruised right hand he suffered in Sunday's 24-13 victory over Atlanta.

"It hurts only when I throw or take a snap," Kramer joked.

Whether he'll be available Thursday, when the Vikings, 6-4, visit the Dallas Cowboys, 5-5, in a nationally televised Thanksgiving Day game, "I can't speculate on," Kramer said.

"If it was today, I couldn't play," said Kramer, who has started only two games this season because of a combination of injuries, alcohol problems and ineffectiveness.

His hand injury has even further muddled the quarterback situation for the Vikings, who have used solid defense and special teams play to win their last three games despite getting little help from their offense.

"We're waiting for somebody to pick us up," said wide receiver Anthony Carter, whose talents have almost been wasted in the last four weeks as the quarterback job has shifted from Wade Wilson to Kramer to Wilson to Kramer to Wilson to Rich Gannon to Wilson.

"We played some good games last year offensively, really exploded, and lost some of those games," Carter said. "Now we're not exploding and we're winning."

Burns said he might not decide on a quarterback for the Dallas game until just before kickoff. But he then said he wouldn't start Kramer if last year's NFL passing leader wasn't able to practice at all during the week.

Once the game starts, though, "anything can happen," Burns said. And anything has the last few weeks.

With Kramer injured, Wilson led the Vikings to a 3-1 record in non-strike games. But when Kramer healed from a pinched nerve in his neck, he got the nod three weeks ago.

The injury acted up again, however, and Wilson played the second half of a victory over the Los Angeles Raiders, earning the start in the following game. But Wilson struggled against Tampa Bay and Kramer came on at halftime to help the Vikings win.

Kramer started Sunday against Atlanta and "played pretty well," Burns said, until he hurt his hand on the last play of the first quarter. In came Wilson, who was ineffective and was replaced for two series by Gannon, a rookie seeing his first NFL action.

When Gannon faltered, Wilson returned to finish the contest.

Several players on the team have questioned Burns' decision to go to Gannon in a tight game.

"We could have lost," running back Darrin Nelson said.

"I guess Burnsie just wanted to see if Rich could spark something," Kramer said. "But I don't think I would have appreciated it (being replaced by Gannon) very much."

Wilson didn't.

"I'm just totally confused," he said. "What do they want us to do? It's to the point where you've got to make the perfect throw or the perfect read or you're coming out."

Added Kramer: "You just hope you're sitting in the right chair when the music stops."

Burns said Monday that using Gannon was only a last-ditch try at getting some spark into the offense and said that Gannon was not involved in the quarterback battle between Kramer and Wilson. It might not be a battle at all if Kramer could only stay healthy.

Meanwhile, both Kramer and Wilson said they are growing tired of looking over their shoulder at the other guy warming up on the sidelines.

"I don't really concern myself about it," Burns said of his quarterbacks' confidence problems. "There's a lot of pressure in the game itself."

Regardless, all three SEC teams will finish with a lower ranking than the Orangemen. But Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson believes if the Orangemen stay unbeaten, the rest will take care of itself.

"There have been four undefeated teams in the 1980s," he said. "In 1980, it was Georgia. Who won the national championship? In 1981, it was Clemson. Who won the national championship? In 1984, it was Brigham Young. Who won the national championship? In 1986, it was Penn State. Who won the national championship? I think that tells you something about going undefeated."

But there have also been unbeaten teams that didn't win a national title. Southern Methodist was 11-0-1 in 1982, but finished No. 2 to Penn State, 11-1. In 1975, Arizona State finished 12-0 and was ranked second behind Oklahoma, 11-1.

In 1973, no less than five teams — Ohio State, Oklahoma, Penn State, Michigan and Miami of Ohio — were unbeaten, but each fell short of Notre Dame, 11-0.

Notre Dame did it again in 1966, winning the national title after playing for a tie against Michigan State. Alabama finished 10-0 but was third in the final rankings.

Miami will have played three ranked opponents after its games with Notre Dame and South Carolina. But the rest of the schedule includes three teams the Orangemen played — Miami of Ohio, Virginia Tech and Maryland — as well as East Carolina and Toledo.

MacPherson is counting on an impressive performance at the Sugar Bowl to provide an edge if it comes down to a choice between Syracuse and another team for the national championship.

"We took the next-best avenue to the Orange Bowl, which is (the Sugar Bowl) where the strongest conference in America plays, and there is no doubt in any football mind it is the Southeastern Conference," MacPherson said.

"Once we are 12-0, there is nothing more we can do. We're thrilled with it, and I think anything can happen with that," the coach said.

Syracuse Athletic Director Jake Crouthamel said he feels the same.

"Winning a national championship would be nice. But we are not at all going to be disappointed if that doesn't happen," he said. "If we're 12-0, how can you be disappointed? No way."

Falcons Not Changing

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Despite the 2-8 Atlanta Falcons' fifth loss in a row, Coach Marion Campbell said he will continue to use a 4-3 defensive system.

"The 4-3 first came to my thoughts in the Cincinnati game when we were out of people," Campbell said at his weekly news conference on Monday. The 4-3 defense was used in the Falcons' disappointing 24-13 loss at Minnesota Sunday.

Injuries forced Campbell to change his defensive system from the 3-4, which was used in the team's 16-10 loss to the Bengals last week.

"The thing was we just got wiped out of the 3-4 (by injuries)," Campbell said. "We're gonna continue with with it (4-3), and if it stays good, we'll see more of it."

Campbell reported injuries to a trio of players that makes them questionable for Sunday's home game against the St. Louis Cardinals — tight end Ken Whisenunt (separated shoulder), defensive end Rick Bryan (pulled groin) and nose tackle Tony Casillas (knee).

Campbell said he felt good about Sunday's game with the Vikings until two breakdowns on special teams — one allowing a 78-yard punt return for a touchdown and the other a blocked punt to set up another touchdown that expanded a 10-7 lead to 24-7.

Study Shows Basic Cable Rates Rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deregulation of cable television rates is resulting in higher prices for basic service and a small drop in the cost of premium channels, an industry group survey shows.

Overall, the price of cable service increased 6.7 percent during the first six months of rate deregulation, while viewership stayed about the same, the National Cable Television Association said Monday.

"The average subscriber's bill did go up, but clearly satisfaction (with cable service) appears to be constant," said Cynthia Brumfield, the association's vice president for research and policy analysis.

The study found that the average subscriber's bill went up from $21.59 in December 1986 to $23.04 in June 1987.

Basic service, which includes local broadcast stations and a few cable networks like CNN, ESPN and C-SPAN, rose 10.6 percent, while the price of premium channels for which subscribers pay extra dropped 2.3 percent, the survey found.

It also found the percentage of subscribers in areas served by cable remained unchanged at 56.7 percent during the period, which "suggests that deregulation has not diminished consumers' interest in cable television," the report said.

Cable deregulation took effect Dec. 29, 1986, allowing most cable operators to price the basic service without first getting approval from local governments. The price of premium channels was not regulated.

NBC Granted Interview

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC has won the first American TV interview with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, and will broadcast the interview in prime time Monday.

The major networks have had long-standing requests for an interview with the Soviet leader, but CBS announced last week it was turned down. So was the Cable News Network. ABC is awaiting word.

Gorbachev is due to arrive in the United States on Dec. 7 for a summit meeting with President Reagan.

"NBC Nightly News" anchor Tom Brokaw will conduct a one-hour, spontaneous interview with Gorbachev in Moscow on Sunday, said NBC News spokesman Bill McAndrew.

Mister Rogers Tapes Show With Soviet Host As Guest

By MARCIA DUNN
 Associated Press Writer
 PITTSBURGH (AP) — It was a beautiful day in the neighborhood as Mister Rogers welcomed the host of a Soviet children's television program. Tatiana Vedeneva brought along a special friend during her visit Monday with Fred Rogers.

 "In Russian fairy tales, rabbits are traditionally very cowardly," Ms. Vedeneva said through a translator while holding Stepashka, her rabbit hand puppet. "But because he wanted to see Mister Rogers so much, he got on an airplane and flew all the way here to America."
 Ms. Vedeneva presented Rogers with a set of colorful, wooden Matrouska dolls during a special taping of "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," and Stepashka gave him a videocassette explaining how the dolls are made.

Rogers, in turn, sang them a tune he'd written for the occasion.
 "We would like to welcome you. It's good to be in touch. We would like to welcome you. Our friendship means so much," Rogers sang, accompanying himself at the piano.
 Ms. Vedeneva, whose "Good Night, Little Ones" is the Soviet Union's longest running children's program, smiled as Rogers showed her around the set at Pittsburgh's WQED-TV. Because she speaks little English, she was accompanied by a translator.

"Here's my closet where I keep my sweaters," the quiet-spoken Rogers said, displaying a half-dozen sweaters on hangers.
 Rogers wore a green, zippered cardigan along with his customary blue sneakers to greet the first Soviet citizen to appear on his Public Broadcast Service show. Ms. Vedeneva dressed accordingly: she wore a beige sweater, white lace blouse and black leather skirt.
 "Wasn't that nice that she'd wear a sweater today?" Rogers asked.

Later, as the two television hosts viewed a finished portion of the tape, Rogers couldn't help displaying his excitement.
 "It's hard to believe we're seeing this together, right here," he told her, grinning.
 Ms. Vedeneva arrived in the United States last week, her first trip to this country. She and Rogers met with Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin in Washington, D.C., on Thursday, then headed to Pittsburgh, home to Rogers' program for the past 20 years. She was scheduled to return home today.

 The ranks of our contemporaries continue to thin. One of the game's all-time greats, B. Jay Becker, died quietly at his home some six weeks ago. As a player, writer and teacher he had few peers. When the American Bridge League named its original 10 Life Masters in 1936, Becker was No. 6.

 So much will be written about his skills that there is no need for us to extol him further in this column. Rather than reprint one of the many fine hands he played over the years, we have chosen one where he and his partner were the goats—but one which Mr. Becker, as he was known to his friends, would relate with wry humor.

The hand was played during the qualifying rounds of the 1966 World Open Pairs championship, and the hero was Fadi Bustros of Beirut, who held the West cards. When Mr. Becker opened one diamond and his partner responded one heart, Bustros slipped in an innocent two club psychic overcall. It succeeded beyond his wildest dreams.

 After Mr. B carefully rebid his diamonds, South's two no trump response made it obvious that West had psyched. So Mr. Becker simply bid what he thought he could make—six clubs! That seemed to thoroughly confuse South, who bid six spades. Bustros was prepared to defend that contract, and although North improved matters somewhat by converting to six no trump, Bustros was equally enchanted with that contract. He did not double, because he did not want to chase his opponents to seven of a minor. As the cards lie, seven clubs can be made. By the time he made the opening lead, Bustros was almost falling off his chair with laughter, and Mr. Becker had a tale that became one of his favorites.

 It is not often we meet a modest, humorous, intelligent man. It makes his loss harder to bear.
