Inmates Storm Hospital, Seize More Hostages

(Related story on A-8)

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Cuban inmates overran the federal penitentiary's hospital today and seized 25 more hostages as negotiations resumed to free the 94 hostages held in Atlanta and the 28 held at a Louisiana detention center.

The factalism among inmates that has made negotiations difficult both here and in Oakdale, La., became further evident overnight as five hostages in the main prison here were freed about midnight Tuesday, before another group took the new hostages.

One of 26 hostages taken this morning was released with an unspecified medical problem, said Sylvia Simons, a federal Bureau of Prisons spokesman in Washington.

Negotiations resumed after FBI agents summoned television reporters and photographers who they said the inmates requested as witnesses, and continued as dawn approached, Simons said. "They are slow, but they are continuing."

Talks also continued today in Oakdale, officials said.

A Cuban prisoner at the U.S. Penitentiary here said today the inmates were prepared to continue the siege indefinitely.

"We are willing to die here if you make any attempt to send us back to Cuba," inmate Carlos Marrero-Gonzales told one of three television crews allowed inside the prison early today.

"We have all the time to negotiate," he said. "We want to make sure we are not going back to Cuba."

Fires continued to smolder today, but helicopters which had dumped water on the blaze had not been used since night fell Tuesday.

Relatives of the Cuban inmates maintained their vigil outside the prison. In recognition of the Thanksgiving holiday, one carried a sign today asking, "What if the Indians sent back the Pilgrims?"

Two Salvation Army vans offered coffee and doughnuts for the families while neighborhood children waiting for the school bus strained to see what was happening.

Outside the Oakdale detention center, where Cuban prisoners rioted Saturday night and seized 28 hostages, Sen. John Breaux, D-La., told a news conference this morning that the Cubans may be willing to be deported to a third country.

"The inmates are talking of the possibility of having some other country to go to," Breaux said. "Our position is that we would be happy if another country would accept them."

One inmate was shot dead and three prison buildings have been destroyed by fire since the rioting in Atlanta began Monday. At least a dozen people have been injured in the riot.

Board Says Warehouse Firm Knew Fire Was Set

RALEIGH (AP) — The owners of a Wilson tobacco warehouse destroyed in a fire last fall knew the blaze had been intentionally set when they tried to collect insurance benefits, an underwriting association said in a court document filed Tuesday.

The owners of Liberty Warehouse filed suit in September against the N.C. Joint Underwriting Association, saying the association had failed to pay off an $800,000 insurance policy.

The owners, William C. Moore of Live Oak, Fla., Robert and Elizabeth Oldham of Nashville, Tenn., and J.T. and Addy B. Worthington of Pitt County, sought $610,000 in damages and asked the court to triple the amount.

In an answer and counterclaim to the suit filed in Pitt County Superior Court, the association said the warehouse owners "and—or their managing agent and employee, Tommy Worthington, and—or others who conspired on behalf of the plaintiffs and—or Tommy Worthington, intentionally caused, procured or acquiesced in the fire for the fraudulent purpose of obtaining insurance proceeds from NCJUA."

Neither the owners nor Tommy Worthington, son of J.T. and Addy Worthington, could not be reached for comment. Gary H. Clemmons of New Bern, an attorney for the owners, declined comment, saying he had not read the answer and counterclaim. Tommy Worthington, of Greenville, was manager of the warehouse.

Federal prosecutors have confirmed that a federal grand jury has received evidence about the fire that destroyed the Liberty Warehouse, a five-acre building on U.S. 301, on Oct. 3, 1986.

Acting U.S. Attorney J. Douglas McCullough said Tuesday that the federal investigation was continuing.

In their lawsuit against the underwriting association, the owners contended there was no evidence of intentional burning and accused the association of refusing to pay the claim to force the owners into settling for less.

In its counterclaim, the association said the owners' complaint contained "false and groundless information relating to the origin of the fire."

The association said the owners' allegations "were made by plaintiffs and their counsel of record in the face of contrary evidence to the effect that the fire was not accidental but was intentional."

The association is composed of companies that write basic property insurance in the state.

SBA Denies Red Tide Application

WILMINGTON (AP) — As the lingering red tide along a 170-mile stretch of North Carolina coast began clearing, the federal Small Business Administration refused Tuesday to declare the area an economic disaster.

In a letter to Gov. Jim Martin, an SBA official said the red tide did not qualify as a disaster as defined by the administration's regulations. A disaster designation would have allowed fishermen, pier owners and tourist-related businesses along the affected coast to obtain low-interest loans.

"A disaster is defined in our regulation as a single sudden physical event of catastrophic nature, such as floods, riots or civil disorders, which causes severe damage," SBA Administrator James Abdnor wrote. "As an infestation of red tide does not meet that definition, I have no authority to approve your request."

Martin had asked the SBA to declare the red tide an economic disaster in Carteret, Onslow, Pender and New Hanover counties. During a visit to the coast Monday, Martin said commercial anglers, boat operators and hotel and restaurant owners faced losing millions of dollars if the red tide lasts until the end of the year.

U.S. Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., who is chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, denounced the SBA's decision.

Meanwhile, the red tide began breaking up Tuesday, but not enough to reopen shellfishing areas that were closed because of the toxic algae bloom, state officials said.

Scientists with the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries found algae counts lower after examining the red tide off Bogue Inlet, New River Inlet and Beaufort Inlet, where the highest levels have been found since the tide appeared more than three weeks ago.

"We're not sure if the wind or the cold dispersed it, but it did clear up some," said Jim Shepard of the Division of Environmental Management.

"The fact that it is down should only bring some cautious optimism," Shepard said. The algae count, which is measured in parts per liter, could rise again with the return of warm weather, he said.

Officials got a scare Monday when a large algae slick near Morehead City was sighted from a Marine Fisheries airplane. After taking samples, scientists learned it was a blue-green algae, which is not a threat to shellfish, said George Gilbert, assistant supervisor of the shellfish sanitation section.

Samples of the red tide, tested Monday about a half-mile off Beaufort Inlet, showed an algae level of 185,000 parts per liter, Gilbert said. Marine Fisheries officials recommend closing shellfishing areas when algae levels exceed 5,000 parts per liter.

Shellfishing is banned from Avon in Dare County to Carolina Beach in New Hanover County.

"We're still a long way from reopening the areas to shellfishing," Gilbert said.

P&Z Panel Hears Zoning Update

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Representatives of Greenville Planning and Development presented the second part of a proposed zoning ordinance update to members of the Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday at a special call meeting at city hall.

The presentation, second of a five part review process, dealt with the issues of Medical District regulations, signs, mobile home park requirements, and off-street parking requirements.

Jack Simoneau, City Planner and spokesman at the meeting, said the five-part topical review is part of an effort to thoroughly review and update the Greenville zoning ordinance in its entirety.

The last comprehensive update of the ordinance occurred in 1969.

According to Simoneau, a comprehensive update of the zoning ordinance will benefit the city by insuring that all sections of the ordinance work in unison and by guaranteeing that any zoning contradictions, created by passing amendments, are eliminated.

Simoneau said in addition to coordination, the zoning update is intended to modernize Greenville zoning practices.

"This is something we have done together ... there is a full sense of support."

Shultz Says NATO Foreign Ministers Approve Of Arms Pact

 deployed in West Germany, Britain, Italy and Belgium.
 The Soviets agreed that 683 of their missiles, nearly all of which are aimed at Western Europe, will be scrapped.
 The United States and the Soviet Union will exchange inspectors to observe the dismantling and make sure the missiles are not illegally replaced over the next 10 years.
 Soviet inspectors would also be allowed in the Netherlands, where cruise missiles would have been installed next year at a base under construction.

The United States will suspend its deployment of cruise missiles — another 208 were to be installed through the end of next year — once the treaty is signed, Shultz said. Technically, the accord will not take force until the Senate ratifies it, a process that could take several months.
 Shultz said the Soviets were free to make their own decisions about any additional deployments before Senate ratification.
 The deal was sealed Tuesday by Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze at the U.S. mission in Geneva after two days of talks.

Shultz said there would be an exchange of notes with each of the NATO countries to authorize the Soviet inspections. In Belgium, Lord Carrington, secretary-general of the Western alliance, said the agreement "is excellent news — the result which the alliance position and U.S. negotiating efforts were designed to achieve."
 The Soviets would have access to two missile plants in the United States, one in San Diego and one in Utah at an unidentified location, said officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.
 In San Diego, Soviet monitors will make periodic checks of a plant where cruise launchers were manufactured, the officials said. They will not have access to another factory in San Diego where other missile work is being done.

 In Utah, the Soviets will be allowed to remain as long as they wish at a plant where engines for Pershing II missiles are made, the officials said. Engines for the MX intercontinental ballistic missile are also produced there.
 It is Reagan's first nuclear weapons accord after nearly seven years in the White House and the first since the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, which Reagan has disavowed.

Among the unprecedented features is a system of short-notice inspection of sites, to be used when one side suspects the other is illegally hiding missiles.
 Already, a number of conservative Republican senators have lined up tentatively against the emerging treaty. Ratification requires the approval of 67 senators if all 100 vote. But Shultz expressed confidence the administration would win Senate approval.
 "I don't have to defend myself," he said at a news conference in Geneva, before flying to Brussels. "The critics have to defend themselves. This is a good step in a positive direction."
 "The critics have to stand up and say why we should have more nuclear weapons instead of less," he said.
 He acknowledged the procedures for guarding against Soviet cheating were not airtight but said, "nothing is 100 percent perfect."
 Reagan also predicted Senate ratification and said he and Gorbachev would discuss extending limitations to long-range missiles when they met.
 "It appears that all of the (INF) issues have been resolved," Reagan told reporters after landing in Denver on a flight from Washington. "The treaty will be finalized when General Secretary Gorbachev and I meet in Washington."
 Shevardnadze called the treaty "a triumph of peace" and "of tremendous importance for the world."
 He voiced hope "a political thaw is starting which may lead to a change in the political climate on our planet."
 It took four meetings between Shultz and Shevardnadze over less than three months to work out the terms of the treaty. U.S. and Soviet negotiators also grappled with the accord for 2½ years.

 One of the last obstacles to be cleared away concerned U.S. inspection of a Soviet plant east of the Ural mountains where SS-25 intercontinental ballistic missiles are assembled.
 U.S. monitors will go there to make sure the SS-25s are not modified to replace SS-20 missiles being scrapped.

Hostages Are Seized By Cuban Inmates

 There were believed to be several groups of inmates operating within the prison. They differed on demands to be met before hostages would be released but all were angered over an agreement to send some detainees in the United States back to Cuba.
 Two of the five hostages released Tuesday said they had been well treated. "We were treated almost like we were their fathers," former hostage Bob Gravitt told the TV station. "They gave us hot meals, they gave us medical attention."
 "They fed us so much I think I put on some weight," former hostage Bob Gravitt told the TV station. "And they had lots of cigarettes. We were treated like gentlemen."
 The Atlanta inmates posted banners with messages including "Every hostage is all right."
 Warden Joseph Petrovsky told a news conference Tuesday afternoon that negotiations had broken down because of rapidly changing demands from inmate factions.
 He added, "As long as the hostages are not being injured, and as long as we're making headway, we're going to negotiate this thing out."
 He said 315 inmates had surrendered since the takeover began Monday morning and had been placed in secure areas of the prison.
 Tomas Garcia-Fuste, a Spanish-speaking radioreporter from WQBA in Miami, said negotiations with Louisiana prisoners that he was aiding were stalled because, "They are afraid. There are too many opinions inside."
 A SWAT team Tuesday dispersed about 30 Louisiana inmates who had been brandishing crude weapons and taunting guards at an entrance building, the only part of the complex not controlled by inmates.
 High-pressure fire hoses were used to blast down a makeshift, 80-foot-long barrier constructed by inmates, who have painted slogans such as "liberty or die" and "freedom or blood" around the prison.
 Detention center spokeswoman Luenette Johnson said the prisoners brought out two hostages, and allowed one to speak through a megaphone, but offered no details on the discussion.
 In other developments:
 — Attorney General Edwin Meese, who had offered a moratorium on deportations Monday, canceled a six-day European tour that was scheduled to begin Tuesday.
 — Relatives of Cuban inmates met with Justice Department officials in Washington, and appealed to the rioters to release their hostages, saying the government has promised there will be no reprisals.
 — Ramon Sanchez Parodi, head of the Cuban Interests Section in Washington, said his government would take no reprisals against deportees.

He said the Communist government made the announcement in an effort to defuse the prison crisis.
 — Officers said they had captured all but two of 17 Cubans who had escaped from a detention center in Laredo, Texas, on Sunday.
 — Congressmen and a federal prison warden accused the State Department of giving inadequate warning about the deportation agreement. In response, State and Justice department spokesmen noted that the major disturbances occurred more than 30 hours after Friday's announcement of the agreement.
 — Cuban inmates in at least six prisons around the country have been segregated to prevent further protests, while prison officials in Atlanta began moving their approximately 200 American inmates elsewhere, Simons said.
 — Twenty-three Cuban inmates were transferred Tuesday from Glades Correctional Institute in Florida to a maximum security prison in Starke after they donned black arm bands in a show of support or rioting inmates, said superintendent Chester Lambdin.
 About 75 Cuban inmates who surrendered were flown late Tuesday from Georgia to Indiana for transfer to the federal penitentiary in Terre Haute, said Tom Delaney, a spokesman for that facility.
 About 1,000 detainees in Louisiana and most of the 1,500 prisoners held in Atlanta are Cubans facing possible deportation. "We want to be free," said Fernando Lugo, an Atlanta inmate who phoned a television station. "If they try to pass the wall and do anything crazy and they gonna shoot ... everybody is gonna die in this place."

Refinery Blast Probed

By BRUCE V. BIGELOW
 Associated Press Writer
 TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — An explosion at a refinery shattered windows and launched a fireball hundreds of feet into the air, sparking a blaze that continued to burn today, officials said.
 "It's well under control. The firefighters are going to let it burn itself out," Torrance police Lt. Wally Murker said early today of the fire at the Mobil Oil Co. refinery 25 miles southwest of downtown Los Angeles.
 Two refinery workers suffered minor injuries from the blast, which occurred just before 6 p.m. Tuesday. The fire, which at its peak sent orange flames billowing hundreds of feet into the air, was declared contained late Tuesday night.
 The FBI was investigating the cause of the blast because of a bomb threat called in to the Tustin Police Department shortly after the blast, Torrance police Sgt. Ron Traber said.
 However, a Torrance fire official said the explosion apparently was set off by a break in a high-pressure line in a 20-foot tower used to produce propane and butane gases.
 A man who said he was a member of "a South American terrorist group" called an emergency operator in Tustin to claim responsibility for the explosion after the blast at 5:50 p.m. Tuesday, said Tustin police Sgt. Jim Peery.
 The caller said "one bomb had gone off and there were two more that were set to go off," Peery said.
 The operator notified Torrance police, then called the Tustin Police Department, he said.
 Firefighters said there were secondary explosions at 6:12 and 6:15 p.m.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Knowledge Needed

There is an incurable, highly contagious disease that frequently afflicts young, productive members of society. Like most diseases, though, it is not selective about its victims. It can kill anybody.

It doesn't strike suddenly. It is debilitating and cruel, robbing victims of the ability to fight infection. Once it is entrenched in the body, the disease kills slowly and painfully. Medical science has developed a tentative treatment, but no cure. The spread of this illness could reach epidemic proportions in a decade.

It has the frightening potential to touch every household in America.

Unlike other serious diseases, however, this illness has drawn little attention from mainstream America. Politically and socially, it has been the victim of a "that's somebody else's problem" mentality.

The disease is AIDS — Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, caused by a persistent virus. November has been designated AIDS Awareness Month, and in Pitt County public lectures and seminars have attempted to educate the public about this killer. But there is a dearth of information about the disease. It is difficult to get adequate answers. The only information the Pitt County Health Department has is a question and answer brochure.

AIDS is exactly like cancer in that it is fatal and medical science doesn't know what causes it. It is like polio and tuberculosis in that it is highly contagious, but only under the right circumstances. It sharply differs from these other afflictions, however, because AIDS is a sexually transmitted disease. It is most common to homosexual men — a fact which has prompted profuse public emotionalism.

AIDS does not call for hysteria, however. It calls for education, knowledge and money to find a vaccine and cure. While the disease is fought on the frontier of medical science with complex diagnostic tools and methods, the only defense the public has against it is information and rationality. AIDS awareness is essential to stopping the spread of the disease. Only a cool-headed approach will work.

Citizens should take advantage of the information available on the topic. Health authorities should offer more. The East Carolina University Medical School, because of its prominence as a regional medical center, needs to initiate more dialogue on the issue.

AIDS is everybody's problem. It's no "punishment from above." It is an indiscriminate killer virus that must be battled with knowledge, not spread with ignorance.

Rich History

Few areas of the nation are more rich in history than eastern North Carolina.

The Indians inhabited the area for centuries prior to the coming of the Europeans. The story of the Lost Colony on Manteo Island is well known. Eastern North Carolina was a colony of England and Tryon Palace at New Bern is a monument to that era. In Bath, Beaufort, Edenton, Washington, New Bern and other communities, dwellings which stretch back to the early years of our nation, and even before, are preserved. There is Hope Plantation near Windsor and other preserved historic sites.

The War Between the States heavily involved our area and the Ram Neuse remains at Kinston attest to this.

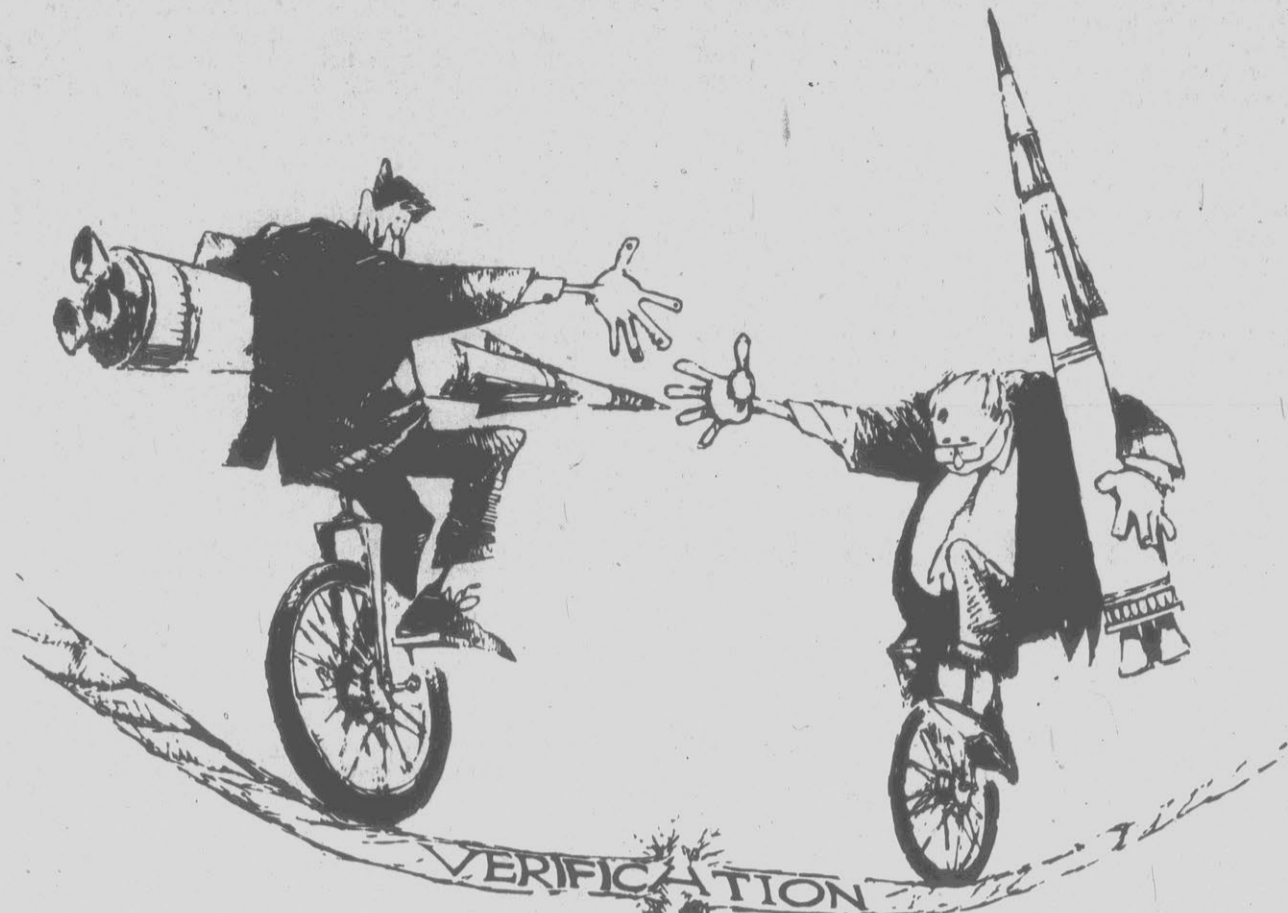

While we often lament the lack of physical objects from eastern North Carolina's involvement in our nation's history, there is still much there.

On a recent weekend, Fort Branch in Martin County near Hamilton — a site which played a part in the American Civil War — was memorialized.

The old fort was virtually forgotten until several cannons were brought up from the Roanoke River in the summer of 1977. The cannons are now housed in a building at the site. The owners of the land, Henry and Nancy Winslow, have offered the site to the state and planning is under way for restoration.

In the meantime public access is restricted to preserve the fragile earthworks.

We can applaud the efforts of the Winslows and others who are attempting to preserve this site and restore it to a semblance of its state at the time of the Civil War. It is a large part of eastern North Carolina's history and it can loom even larger in future decades as the generations ahead come to appreciate their heritage.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Friday, Nov. 27, and Saturday, Nov. 28, have been proclaimed "International Days of Protest Against War Toys."

With the Christmas season approaching, I hope every parent will make thoughtful decisions in choosing their children's gifts. The sale of war toys has risen 350 percent in the past six years. Of the six biggest-selling toys, five are war-related.

I'm frustrated and angry at the bombardment of programming and advertising aimed at children that depict war and violence as fun and acceptable. Numerous studies have been done showing a direct correlation between violent behavior and the acceptance of it in children who are exposed to this attitude via the media.

At this time in history, when tension and hatred are at an all-time high, we need to begin to bring peace and cooperation into our homes as an example for our children to follow.

Please consider joining many other parents this weekend and look for quality non-violent toys for your children.

We are molding the world leaders of tomorrow ... Let's begin 1988 as peacefully as we can.

Time To Put The Heat On Soviets

The time has come to "out-Gorbachev" Mikhail S. Gorbachev. The Soviet leader, master of diplomatic orchestrations, should be challenged to join with President Reagan in bringing the Iran-Iraq war to a peaceful conclusion.

The war, approaching its eighth year of carnage, must be stopped. More than a million lives have been lost on the battlefields and in urban attacks, a statistic that only tightens the grip of human suffering around the belligerents.

The precedent for peace talks mediated by the two superpowers was created in October when Secretary of State George P. Shultz proposed American and Soviet oversight responsibility for negotiations on another Middle East conflict, this one between Israel and Jordan. King Hussein vetoed the idea, but a new model for superpower cooperation was thereby established.

So far, all efforts to resolve the Iran-Iraq war have failed. The Reagan administration charges that Moscow is one of the principal obstructionists.

Although Gorbachev has been making many constructive overtures throughout the Middle East (including Israel), he has directed a clearly disruptive policy in the Persian Gulf. Moscow is a major arms broker and trading partner to Iraq, while simultaneously assuming the role of Iran's ace-in-the-hole against the United States.

Moscow recently advised Washington that it would be compelled to abide by a dust-laden 1921 treaty with Iran, which empowers the Soviets to send troops into Iran in the event of third-party aggression.

The Iranians and the Soviets are already sharing intelligence information picked up in the gulf from electronic listening posts. An agreement was recently reached in which Iranian crude would be piped to the Black Sea, ensuring a steady influx of money into Iran. A railroad link also will be established between the two countries, giving the Soviets much-desired access to a warm-water port.

Some Western analysts believe the Soviet plan is to render both Iran and Iraq economically dependent on the Soviet Union, thus giving Gorbachev the means (and glory) to force both to a Moscow peace table.

If true, Gorbachev's plan could take years to gel, by which time several million Arabs and Persians will have killed and maimed one another.

Discussions regarding the gulf war have, to this point, focused on strategic and political dimensions of the conflict. Many Westerners, understandably weary and cynical, have concluded, "This war couldn't be happening to a nicer bunch of guys."

But there is a bigger price for the world to pay as this war drags on. Our children, and children of the gulf war, will bear a cruel burden.

Studies of the long and bitter civil wars in Northern Ireland and in Lebanon conclude that there is an exponential increase in the probability that children exposed to terrorism turn to terrorist activities themselves.

The last thing the world needs is a bolstering of the ranks of the next generation's terrorists and malcontents.

The economies of Iran and Iraq also have been devastated by the war. Before 1980, Iraq held more than $30 billion in currency reserves. Now Baghdad is steeped in debt exceeding $50 billion. How will Iran and Iraq bankroll the staggering cost of domestic reconstruction, while caring for millions of broken families, the injured and permanently disabled?

'Bums and Scum' Back To Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The United States has always picked the best brains of Cuba. Let them also take the bums and the scum."

Cuban state radio offered that description of the criminals whom Cuban authorities released from prison and placed aboard the "freedom flotilla" that brought 125,000 Cubans to Florida in 1980.

Now, after seven years, Cuba has agreed to repatriate "the bums and the scum" as part of a wide-ranging immigration agreement announced last Friday.

It is a duplicate of an accord that was signed in December 1984 but suspended by Fidel Castro five months later in a display of pique over the startup of Radio Marti, the Voice of America broadcast operation to Cuba.

A measure of the desperation of many of these Cubans can be found in the rioting by the affected Cubans at their detention centers in Louisiana and Georgia following last Friday's announcement.

In an attempt to cool tempers, Attorney General Edwin Meese III offered on Monday to impose a moratorium on sending these Cubans home pending a "full, fair and equitable" review of each case.

The rioting has tended to obscure what Reagan administration officials consider to be a diplomatic victory of sorts. The United States, first under Jimmy Carter and now under Ronald Reagan, has been trying for seven years to get the Cubans to take back the criminals and their mentally ill companions, but only a small fraction have returned.

The initial hint that Cuba might be willing to revive the 1984 agreement occurred two weeks ago during an unannounced meeting in Montreal between Cuban and American officials. The decision was formalized late last week at a meeting — also unannounced — in Mexico City.

Just why Cuban authorities decided to reverse their position has intrigued U.S. officials and other experts.

The most commonly voiced theory relates to Cuba's economic problems. Clearly, the 2,500 prospective Cuban returnees will be a burden for the Cuban government. Most probably will face the same fate there as here: confinement to detention centers.

But the deal will enable Cuba to resume normal immigration ties with the United States, meaning that more than 20,000 Cubans will be eligible to move to this country annually.

Under a situation of economic hardship in Cuba, that signifies 20,000 fewer people to feed, house and employ each year. Beyond that, Cubans who wish to emigrate are probably considered by the government to be politically unreliable in any case and the authorities won't lament their departure.

While the economic picture is bleak, Castro has always maintained that the level of social services in Cuba is unmatched anywhere in Latin America. But the rioting Cubans in Louisiana and Georgia are not impressed and seem ready to go to any lengths to avoid deportation.

The most significant accomplishment for the U.S. Cuban relations is the revival of the 1984 immigration agreement. But, as the recent disturbances in Louisiana and Georgia suggest, not everybody thinks that was a good idea.

Strength For Today

Father Divine, a figure who attracted a great deal of attention some years ago for his unusual acts and his even more unusual comments on the meaning of life, sometimes said that the trouble with philosophers and other highbrows is that they don't "tan-gi-bil-ate." By this he seems to have meant that the result of a great deal of the world's high thinking is not practical.

It is amazing how few people have had ideas which really changed the thought and life of their generation. For example, Thomas A. Edison and Dr. Einstein had concepts which turned the world upside down. Washington and Lincoln, in the field of politics; Columbus and Magellan in the field of discovery — these men stand out as beacon lights. But a lot of ideas and policies don't get the world anywhere today because they don't "tangibilate."

Long Injects New Blood Into Insurance Network

By ANN MORRIS
The Greensboro News & Record
An AP Member Exchange Feature
RALEIGH (AP) — When Jim Long moved into the Insurance Department in early 1985, the commissioner's office was blockaded from the rest of the world by an electronically locked security door.

Down the hall, consumer specialists spent their days dialing rotary telephones, and auditors crunched numbers on ancient adding machines.

Department lawyers were exhausted from too many late nights trying to keep up with the insurance industry in court battles. A record of three wins in 44 cases had demoralized them, as well.

Three years later, the security door has been ripped down and a sign reading "Welcome to Your Insurance Department" placed in the hall outside the commissioner's office.

Touch-tone telephones and computers are now standard office equipment, and staff members come to work wearing lapel pins in the shape of red ties — the signature of their personable and popular boss.

While insurance industry executives still have their complaints, particularly about the slashing of their rate hike requests, they've taken on only one case to court. Their complaints are balanced by praise for the department's new professionalism, efficiency and openness.

Since taking office three years ago, Insurance Commissioner Jim Long has modernized and streamlined the department, ushered the state through an insurance crisis and restored the department's competence, morale and prestige.

His predecessor, John Ingram, had a 12-year reign punctuated by campaigns for governor and U.S. Senate.

On their first day in office, Long's staff discovered piles of correspondence, uncashed checks and other documents stacked in a trash compactor.

But the improvements haven't come cheaply.

Through skillful politicking of the Legislature, Long has doubled his department's budget — from $5 million to $10 million a year. His staff has grown from 197 to 350 people, making the department the sixth largest in the country.

Long says the expansion has more than paid for itself.

Policyholders are better protected now because the department can closely monitor companies' financial health, he says. In rate cases, the department now has the expertise to effectively challenge insurance industry rate hike requests.

"For the first time, we're on a level playing field with the industry," Long said. "Yeah, we've grown, but we're now able to do lots of things we couldn't before, to the public's benefit."

For consumers, the Long era has meant a slow-down in insurance rate hikes. Automobile insurance rates, for example, have risen 11.5 percent in his three years, compared with 47 percent during the previous six-year period, under Ingram's tenure.

Although Ingram routinely denied the insurance industry's requests for rate increases, his decisions were almost always overturned by the courts. The result was that the industry ended up getting about 80 percent of the increases it asked for.

Long has taken a more pragmatic approach, negotiating with the industry rather than going to court.

"We've compromised left and right with the industry," he says. "Our philosophy has been there's no point in making the Raleigh lawyers rich. If we can settle it on a reasonable basis, let's do it."

His approach has paid off for consumers. The industry has only gotten about 30 percent of the rate increases it has sought during Long's term.

Long has used his political skills to win several major victories in the Legislature.

In 1986, the liability insurance crisis was at its peak. Doctors, local governments and many businesses were seeing their premiums skyrocket, and some were losing their coverage overnight.

Long helped persuade the Legislature to call a special one-day session to deal with the problem. Legislators gave him almost everything he asked for — including the power to form mandatory insurance pools so that everyone needing coverage could get it.

He's never had to use that power, but says that having a "long stick," as he jokingly calls it, has encouraged insurance companies to cooperate.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, an Asheville Democrat who worked closely with Long during that session, praises his leadership.

"He had the courage to step out front and say we need to take drastic measures," Nesbitt says.

Last session, Long led the charge on a bill to overhaul the automobile insurance system. After months of lobbying and negotiating, the Legislature passed a bill that protects drivers with minor violations on their records from large increases in their insurance rates.

Long's political savvy has also served him well in dealing with the insurance industry.

"If you're able to sit down eyeball to eyeball and talk things out, then you certainly have a situation you can work with," says Art Ivey, chairman of the N.C. Rate Bureau, which represents the insurance industry in rate cases. "It's certainly better than it was before."

Lawmakers Want More Beef In Safe Roads Act

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Drunken driving arrests have fallen since enactment of the 1983 Safe Roads Act, a legislative panel was told Tuesday, but some lawmakers said the law still was not tough enough.

The discussion came at the first meeting of a special committee that will examine the state's drunken driving laws and may recommend changes to the General Assembly in 1988 or 1989.

The panel was created at the urging of Gov. Jim Martin after the bulk of a 10-bill package his administration offered this year failed to pass.

"You've got to continue your attention to this subject," Ward Purrington, the governor's chief lobbyist, said. "People have got to be aware of the seriousness of the problem." He said Martin wanted to "strengthen the swiftness and sureness" of punishment.

Drunken driving arrests in 1982, prior to passage of the Safe Roads Act, totaled 79,562, said John H.

Lacey, program manager for alcohol studies with the University of North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center.

In 1986, the total fell to 49,579, Lacey said.

In 1982, there were 46,922 convictions while 32,640 of those charged were not convicted — a ratio of 59 percent to 41 percent. Last year, 33,760 — 68 percent of those charged — were convicted while 15,819 or 32 percent were not convicted.

Lacey said the Safe Roads Act had been "quite effective" but might need fine-tuning. Problem drinkers apparently are ignoring the law, he said.

Most of the Martin bills were bottled up in the Senate Judiciary III Committee chaired by Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, also a member of the study committee.

Swain said his panel devoted little attention to the bills because the administration did not present them well. Also, some legislators felt "the 1983 law was effective and that it was adequately reducing the vehicle death rate," he said.

"There is a time when laws can become too oppressive, and when that happens they are not enforceable," Swain said. "The question is... whether we can tighten the string any more without breaking it."

Three of the administration-backed bills passed, but were largely technical. Among those held in Swain's committee were bills to:

- Increase from 10 days to 30 days the period for which a driver's license is revoked immediately after a DWI arrest.

- Reducing from 0.10 to 0.04 the blood-alcohol content threshold for classifying as impaired a driver of trucks or other commercial vehicles.

- Stiffen the punishment for felony death by vehicle from a maximum of five years in prison to a maximum of 50 years, prescribing for the offense the same punishment as for second-degree murder.

- Require permanent driver's license revocation for those convicted of first- or second-degree murder involving a motor vehicle.

- Increase the period of license revocation for provisional licensees convicted of driving after drinking.

- Require judges to revoke a limited driving privilege if he finds the driver has violated its restrictions or has violated other motor vehicle laws.

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, co-chairman of the study panel, said all those measures would be considered. But he said he was not convinced wholesale changes in the Safe Roads Act were needed.

"I think it's a good, tough law," he said. "There's no plea bargaining, it sets up a class of punishment, the punishment that is set up is tough..."

But Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said the law was insufficient. He said more law enforcement officers should be hired to heighten drivers' fear of arrest.

Buyer Backs Down

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A prospective buyer has backed away from buying an organ for which PTL founder Jim Bakker spent $300,000 in an effort to install the world's largest pipe organ at the television ministry's Heritage Village Church, the ministry's attorney said.

The prospective buyer, The Charlotte Observer reported today, was Sam Walton, considered one of the nation's wealthiest men.

The organ has been sitting in a California warehouse for three years, and a prospective buyer now has withdrawn his offer to buy it, PTL attorney Eddie Allman said Tuesday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbia.

Walton, founder of Wal-Mart Stores Inc., had offered $70,000 for the pipe organ but withdrew after he lost a reported half-billion dollars in the October stock market crash, a source told the Observer.

Allman said the organ is worth only $35,000 to $40,000 and that it "probably doesn't work right now." He said Bakker, who was deposed from the television ministry this year amid a sex and money scandal, paid a California man $300,000 for it.

Bakker commissioned the man to buy the parts to build what would be the world's largest pipe organ, which Bakker would place in the church at the Heritage USA theme park at Fort Mill, the Observer said.

No parts were ever bought, and the man bought an old organ after Bakker began to complain, the Observer said it was told by its sources.

Bakker sued, but settled for "less than $50,000" after the man threatened to bring discovery motions to get into the ministry's financial records, the source said.

"I think we were taken a little bit," Allman said.

Meanwhile, former "PTL Club" singers Howard and Vestal Goodman are refusing to give up their PTL-owned house at Tega Cay, and the PTL administration is proceeding with a lawsuit to force them out.

Bankruptcy Court Judge Rufus W. Reynolds ruled Tuesday that both sides have until Feb. 1 for discovery of evidence in preparation for taking the case to trial.

The Goodmans are claiming they are entitled to the house for back salary and wages. They were employed by Bakker, but were dismissed by his successor, the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

They were given an eviction notice in May by Falwell's administration.

Man Sentenced In Price-Fixing Probe

ROANOKE (AP) — A former vice president with a Coca-Cola bottler was sentenced Tuesday to two years of probation and fined $7,500 for his guilty plea in an ongoing federal probe of price-fixing in the cola industry.

U.S. District Judge James Turk could have sentenced Raymond H. Rissmiller to three years in prison and imposed a fine of $250,000. Justice Department attorney Peter Goldberg asked for no specific penalty but pointed out during Rissmiller's sentencing on one count of conspiracy to fix cola prices that three other men convicted in soda price-fixing cases had received four-month prison terms.

Defense attorney Charles Dorsey of Roanoke called for a light sentence, saying Rissmiller has cooperated with authorities.

Turk fined Rissmiller $40,000 but suspended all but the $7,500. He also ordered Rissmiller to perform 150 hours of community service.

Rissmiller entered his plea in June under an agreement that called for him to testify before a grand jury investigating allegations of price-fixing in the soft drink business. The grand jury that has been convening sporadically in Roanoke is one of several federal grand juries probing cola price-fixing allegations, most of them dealing with Coca-Cola and Pepsi, around the nation, sources familiar with the case have said.

In exchange for Rissmiller's guilty plea to a charge of conspiring to fix the prices of drinks sold by Wometco Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Roanoke Inc., later known as Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Roanoke Inc., prosecutors agreed not to charge him further in the case.

Dorsey has said his client should receive a light sentence because his involvement in the price-fixing was minimal and had been done under orders from superiors, none of whom has yet been charged.

Wometco was purchased in 1985 by Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Consolidated of Charlotte, N.C., where a spokesman has denied any corporate involvement in price-fixing.

Dorsey has declined to identify the officials who allegedly told Rissmiller to discuss prices with competitors.

IN THE STATE

Chairman Leaving

RALEIGH (AP) — Jere Drummond, chairman of the State Board of Education and a vice president of Southern Bell Telephone Co., is being transferred to Atlanta and will resign as board chairman, it was announced Tuesday.

Drummond, appointed to the board by Gov. Jim Martin in April 1986, has been Southern Bell vice president for North Carolina since 1982. He was promoted to senior vice president-regulatory and pricing for BellSouth Services Inc.

He left his Charlotte office Tuesday afternoon and could not be reached for comment.

Martin has not reacted to the news and has given no indication whom he might appoint to the education board to replace Drummond, according to Tim Pittman, the governor's press secretary. Martin was in New Bern and could not be reached for comment.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who serves an ex-officio board member, said he regretted Drummond's departure but knew it would be "only a matter of time before he would be promoted."

"Jere Drummond worked cooperatively with members of the State Board of Education and with members of the General Assembly," Jordan said in a prepared statement. "He has been one of the most effective leaders we have had as chairman of the State Board of Education."

past while building new tourism, Gov. Jim Martin on Tuesday offered a plan to aid small coastal towns in need of economic development.

Martin said his "Coastal Initiative," which appeared to focus on northern coastal counties, would promote development in small communities while protecting environmentally sensitive areas.

Outlining his plan to some 200 representatives of coastal communities, Martin did not rule out Southeastern North Carolina. However, he noted that development has come more rapidly to the coast of New Hanover, Brunswick and Pender counties than to towns along the sounds and rivers of the northeastern counties. He suggested that towns like Swan Quarter, Oriental or Manteo could benefit from the voluntary program.

"Cities that have strength won't need it," he said of the plan, which is still in the formative stages.

The plan calls for:

- Limiting development along sounds, rivers and the Intracoastal Waterway to existing communities.
- Identifying "fragile" areas and protecting them from development.
- Dredging or marking channels to encourage pleasure boats to stop at small ports.
- Helping communities expand water and sewer capacities to accommodate development.
- To ensure protection of certain sensitive areas, acquisition by the state, such as the case of Permuta Island.

More detailed plans will be presented at a series of public hearings scheduled for January, Martin said.

Cuba Pledging Amnesty To Inmates

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba is giving assurances to rebellious Cuban inmates in Georgia and Louisiana that they will be free to pursue normal lives once they are repatriated, even if they committed crimes before coming to the United States.

Washington, told a news conference Tuesday night his government was offering that pledge in an effort to bring a peaceful end to the turmoil at detention centers in Atlanta and Oakdale, La.

Cuba will take "no reprisal whatsoever" against Cubans who face deportation under the migration agreement Havana signed with Washington last Friday, Sanchez Parodi said.

The Cuban inmates, in a desperate bid to avoid repatriation, were holding more than 100 hostages Tuesday at the two institutions.

Many of the inmates had been serving jail terms in Cuba and were placed by Cuban authorities aboard the 1980 Mariel boat lift that brought 125,000 Cubans to the United States.

As proof of his country's good will, Sanchez Parodi cited the example of the 201 Cubans who returned to Cuba in 1985 before a prior agreement with the United States was suspended by President Fidel Castro in May of that year.

He said the "vast majority" are free, have rejoined their families and "enjoy full possibilities of employment." He promised similar treatment for the 2,500 inmates subject to deportation under the revived agreement.

"They will be exonerated for illegal activities they might have committed before their departure from Cuba," he said.

On Monday, Attorney General Edwin Meese III attempted to defuse the crisis at the detention centers by offering to declare a moratorium on deportations pending a "full, fair and equitable" review of their eligibility to remain in the United States.

Castro suspended the 1985 agreement in a display of pique over the opening of Radio Marti, the Voice of America broadcast operation to the island.

Sanchez Parodi said Cuba decided to revive the agreement partly because of Americans who have "strongly presented their opinion" that the Mariel "excludables" should be returned.

Among these Americans are those who favor a more normal relationship between the United States and Cuba, he said.

Cubans who committed crimes or are mentally ill are ineligible to remain in the United States, and U.S. officials have been attempting since 1980 to persuade Cuba to take them back.

Sanchez Parodi said about "30 or 40" of the 201 who were sent back two years ago are serving prison terms for crimes committed since their return.

He said American reporters are welcome to go to Cuba to corroborate his statement that the Cubans who returned in 1985 are being treated well.

"We are willing to do whatever is necessary in order to try to solve this problem," the diplomat said.

Sanchez Parodi, who has met with American reporters only rarely during his 10 years in Washington, said families of Cuban inmates subject to deportation will be allowed to go to Cuba as well. The agreement calls for about 100 Cubans a month to be sent back, he said.

Asked about Cuban inmates who are mentally ill, he said they will be treated according to medical records provided to Cuban authorities by U.S. officials.

A Grateful Recipient

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A woman who received what her surgeon says is world's first transplant of a complete knee joint says she went into the operation frightened but came out thankful her doctor was willing to take risks.

"If it wasn't for this procedure, I wouldn't have a leg right now," 32-year-old Susan Lazarchick said Tuesday. "It was new and experimental but I chose to go for what I really wanted and it was scary."

"You're taking a risk where you have no idea how it was going to turn out."

Ms. Lazarchick, a housewife from Absecon, N.J., had a grapefruit-size tumor protruding from the front and back of her right shinbone. The tumor eroded her thighbone, strangled veins and arteries and left her unable to walk.

Dr. Richard Schmidt, director of the Bone Bank at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, replaced the diseased joint in September with the bones, tendons and ligaments of an 18-year-old Philadelphia man who died in a motorcycle accident.

Ms. Lazarchick should be out of a cast in a month and eventually regain almost complete use of her leg, Schmidt said.

"I don't think her leg will ever be quite as strong, but she'll be able to bend it, use it, walk on it, kick things, walk up and down steps," he said.

Macy's Thanksgiving Parade A Product Of Yearlong Work

By ANDREA HAMILTON
Associated Press Writer
HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — Manfred G. Bass works all year to create his versions of the miracle on 34th Street to the delight of children on Thanksgiving Day, then goes home and collapses.

Bass designs the giant helium-filled balloons and floats for the annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, and to him this Thursday's event is another work day — but one he relishes.

"Parades are for the young at heart and there are a lot of big kids like me out there," said the 52-year-old sculptor and illustrator by training.

He describes vividly the festive atmosphere that descends on New York City as hundreds of thousands of spectators line the 2½-mile parade route to watch the extravaganza along with millions of television viewers nationwide.

"A parade is a special event. It's done on a very special scale using all the elements of fantasy that make up a parade," he said last week as workers put the finishing touches on floats such as the Marvel Universe, featuring characters from the comic book series.

This year, the parade will feature 10 huge balloons and more than 30 floats, all designed and constructed at Macy's studio in a Hoboken warehouse by Bass and 20 artists, carpenters and others.

Bass, who attended the New York Phoenix School of Design, joined the studio in 1960 after spending two years in the Army sculpting monuments at the Infantry Museum in Fort Benning, Ga.

Bass and others begin transporting the brightly painted floats and balloons across the Hudson River to New York City the night before Thanksgiving. The floats, constructed of fiberglass and steel, are collapsible so they can be transported more efficiently through the Lincoln Tunnel.

"I set up the whole parade," said Bass. After the Santa Claus float — always the last — begins to roll, he hurries to the end of the route to dismantle the traditional parade beginning, the turkey float.

"And after it's all over, I go home and collapse," he said. "My wife is very good about it. She doesn't know Thanksgiving as a holiday."

"The next day, the hammers begin again," Bass said, adding that he already has a float for next year on the drawing table.

Like the floats, the balloons are designed after a creative meeting to choose a subject, usually a storybook or cartoon character.

A blueprint and clay models are used to guide workers as they lay out urethane-coated nylon on massive tables and cut pieces of material that are sealed together to create up to 30 chambers in one balloon.

Artists then hand-paint the balloons, which can be as large as 100 feet long and 35 feet wide. The chambers are filled with helium on parade day.

Spider-Man and Snoopy will make their debuts in the 61st annual parade, and an old favorite, Kermit the frog, will make his 11th appearance.

Response To General Strike Call Will Test Muscle Of Labor Union

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Union leaders predicted millions of Italians would heed their call for a general strike today, but there were signs that the appeal was not followed by all.

Rush-hour traffic flowed more smoothly than normal in downtown Rome, apparently because thousands of Romans chose either to stay home from private jobs or to come in later. Schools and universities had announced that they were shutting down for the entire day.

Some bus drivers and bank employees were on the job in Rome and Milan, Italy's commercial capital.

Labor leaders urged striking workers to attend speeches and rallies in Milan, Turin, Florence, the southern city of Potenza and other urban areas.

Those who might have stayed home couldn't read about the day's strike. There were no major newspapers published because journalists heeded Tuesday's call for a nationwide strike.

The unions claim a membership of 9 million but have predicted the strike might be heeded by as many as 14 million workers. The last general strike was three years ago.

The unions called the one-day strike to protest the government's economic policy as laid out in the 1988 budget plan, but the invitation is also a challenge of how well they command the allegiance of the work force.

The federations' credibility has been tested in recent weeks by wildcat strikes. They have been criticized for being too rigid to represent the changing face of the work force, with increasing automation and growth of service industries.

Railroad and airport workers, bus and truck drivers, employees of banks, hospitals and state offices have vowed to stay off the job today.

Schools, universities, post offices and banks were to be closed all day. Factory workers said they would quit work for four hours each shift. Cinemas said they would suspend the first showing.

Hospitals promised to provide only emergency care, and the state telephone, light and gas companies as well as firefighters have said they will do what is necessary for public safety but no more.

The three unions are joined in a confederation but each has different political leanings. The General Italian Federation of Labor is dominated by the Communists, the Italian Federation of Free Unions is close to the Christian Democrats and the International Labor Office is identified with the Socialists.

The Communists, Italy's second-largest party, are outside the recently revived five-party governing coalition, but the Christian Democrats and Socialists are part of the government.

The three federations are protesting the government's reneging on a promise to lower income tax rates in the proposed 1988 budget. The government said last week it would lower the rate by an average of 2 percent next year only if inflation is kept at 4.5 percent, the coalition's goal. The proposed tax cut would take effect July 1.

The federation also complains that the government has been talking for years about bringing more industry to the underdeveloped south but has not done enough. Another objection is that the proposed budget won't adequately combat unemployment, which is running 12 percent nationwide and that efforts to cut the nation's $93.5 billion deficit rely too heavily on cutting social services.

The general strike call has been portrayed as a test of workers' allegiances. On Sunday, 60 flights were canceled at Rome's main airport after ground workers loyal to wildcat groups defied the unions' appeal to stay on the job while negotiations for higher pay are nearing completion.

Similar wildcat strikes by groups known as "base committees" have involved teachers and railroad workers in the past few years.

The unions have largely been on the defensive since 1980, when a five-week strike failed against the automaker Fiat, Italy's largest employer in the private sector. That dispute began after Fiat announced plans to lay off 23,000 workers for 18 months and ended when 40,000 workers marched demanding to go back to work.

Another stinging setback occurred in 1983, when the employers' association Confindustria announced that it would no longer grant wage increases pegged to rises in the cost of living.

It was a bitter blow to the Italian labor movement, which had its heyday in the "hot autumn" of 1969. Strikes and protests then led to the granting of automatic pay escalators and nearly complete job security.

Typhoon Threatens Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Tropical typhoon Nina gathered more strength as it approached the Philippines today, and officials raised weather alerts over wide areas of the country, including Manila.

A bulletin issued by the government's weather service said the typhoon was estimated at 10 a.m. to be about 440 miles southeast of the capital, with peak winds gusting to nearly 110 miles an hour.

It was moving northward at 12 miles an hour. Weathermen said that if it maintains its present course, the typhoon would make a landfall at dawn Thursday in the vicinity of Legaspi City, 210 miles southeast of the capital.

The bulletin said the typhoon was expected to begin battering southeastern Luzon and several islands in the central Visayas chain tonight. It warned coastal residents of possible floods because of heavy rains and big waves.

The weather alert covered an area 500 miles wide, stretching from Manila to the northeastern tip of Mindanao island.

Leaders Of Street Gang Convicted In Libyan Plot

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — A federal jury struck one of the nation's deadliest street gangs a near-fatal blow when it convicted five El Rukn leaders in a scheme to blow up planes and buildings in return for $2.5 million from Libya, authorities say.

Tuesday's verdict marked the first time U.S. citizens have been convicted of conspiring to commit terrorist acts in this country for a foreign government in exchange for money, said Assistant U.S. Attorney John Podliska.

"The evidence showed this is an organization that presents itself as peaceful, but really what they are is killers. They engage in drug trafficking and killing," Podliska said.

Jeff Fort, El Rukn leader, and co-defendants Leon McAnderson, Reico Cranshaw, Alan Knox and Roosevelt Hawkins had contended the El Rukns were a religious organization that planned no violence and met with the Libyans only to raise money for a mosque.

"Jeff Fort is a very confident man. He is at peace with himself," said Fort's attorney, Terry Gillespie. "He was disappointed with the verdict but he showed very little emotion."

The U.S. District Court jury returned the verdict after six days of deliberation, which followed a five-week trial. Jurors were sequestered throughout after several reported getting threatening phone calls.

Sentencing was set for Dec. 29. Fort faces a maximum sentence of 260 years in prison after being found guilty on all 50 counts of the indictment alleging conspiracy, interstate or foreign travel or use of the telephone in furtherance of the conspiracy, and weapons charges.

McAnderson and Cranshaw, convicted on charges including conspiracy and weapons violations, face up to 190 years. Knox, who was convicted on those charges, faces a maximum of 130 years, and Hawkins, who was convicted of conspiracy, interstate travel and a weapons charge, could be sentenced to 25 years.

FBI spokesman Bob Long said the verdict will seriously damage the El Rukns, once described by police as one of the nation's deadliest and most sophisticated street gangs.

"The El Rukns are not quite dead, but the people left in the organization are down the ladder quite a way," said Long. "With these guys gone, the void will be difficult to fill."

Prosecutors contended the defendants bought a disabled anti-tank weapon from undercover FBI agents, then traveled to Libya, Panama, New York City and elsewhere in 1986 to meet with Libyan representatives.

During the meetings, the El Rukns offered to blow up planes and U.S. government buildings in exchange for $2.5 million, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors said Fort masterminded the conspiracy over a four-month period through scores of telephone calls from a Texas prison, where he was serving time on cocaine charges.

Federal authorities said the gang initiated the contact with the Libyans and that none of the terrorist acts discussed in tape-recorded conversations played for the jury ever took place.

Gang member Trammell Davis, formerly security chief for the El Rukns, provided authorities their biggest break in the case when he entered into a plea agreement.

In addition to testifying against fellow gang members, Davis served as translator for a code used by gang members in telephone conversations.

For example, money was referred to as "color," Washington, D.C., as the "Big Actor," an apparent reference to President Reagan, and Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi as "young friend."

Kent Brody, an attorney who represented Knox, said the jury was probably prejudiced because of the Libyan connection.

"When you talk about Libya and Moammar Gadhafi, it brings up feelings that are anathema to Americans," he said.

Authorities say about 50 of the 250-300 hard-core members of the gang have been charged with a convicted of state or federal crimes, most since 1983. Two El Rukns are on death row.

Seven members, including Davis, originally were charged. One, Melvin Mayes, is a fugitive and authorities say he fled to Libya.

The gang was formed in 1976, soon after Fort became a Muslim, and takes its name from the cornerstone of the Kaaba, the sacred shrine in Mecca, Saudi Arabia.

TRIAL IS OVER — Assistant U.S. Attorney John Podliska talks to reporters Tuesday in Chicago after a federal jury found five members of the El Rukn gang guilty of a terrorism-for-hire scheme to obtain money from Libya. The verdict marks the first time U.S. citizens had been convicted of conspiring to commit terrorist acts in the United States for a foreign government in exchange for money. (AP Laserphoto)

Fatality Predictions

CHICAGO (AP) — Between 350 and 450 people may die in traffic accidents during the four-day Thanksgiving Holiday weekend, the National Safety Council says.

For counting purposes, the holiday period begins at 6 p.m. Wednesday local time to midnight Sunday locally, the council said.

Last year, there were 428 traffic deaths over the four-day weekend.

Council statisticians did not provide an estimate of how many deaths might be expected over a four-day, non-holiday period at the same time of the year, saying methods for gathering and analyzing the data are not comparable.

The worst toll for a four-day Thanksgiving weekend was recorded in 1968, when 764 people died.

Since the 55-mph speed limit was instituted in 1974, the highest toll for the holiday was in 1978, when 508 deaths were recorded.

The speed limit was increased to 65 mph earlier this year on many interstate highways in rural areas.

Carlucci Forecasts Different Approach To Congress

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci says that even though he's more amenable to spending cuts than his predecessor, he won't allow a return to "the days of the hollow Army."

Carlucci, in his first working day as the nation's 16th defense secretary, told Pentagon workers Tuesday his command of the nation's armed forces will be a change in style but not substance.

Carlucci suggested the most noticeable difference between him and Caspar W. Weinberger, who resigned after seven years as defense secretary because of his wife's health, would be in his approach to working with Congress on the Pentagon budget.

While Weinberger adamantly refused to negotiate defense cuts, Carlucci said, "Once it becomes clear that the Congress has a different set of priorities or if they are going to cut that budget, as undesirable as that might be, then I would be prepared to work quietly with them to do that."

His goal, he said, would be to maintain military strength and readiness even if the actual size of the force has to be reduced.

"We cannot and will not go back to the days of the hollow Army, planes that won't fly and ships that won't sail," he said.

"Any change, of course, is unsettling," Carlucci told workers at the Pentagon after he was welcomed by an honor guard ceremony in the inner courtyard.

"There will be changes in style. But make no mistake about it... the president has laid down the policy and we intend to continue to implement that policy," Carlucci said.

Dealing with budget cuts will be one of three initial top priorities, he told reporters later. The other two include pursuit of further arms control accords and continued reform of Pentagon weapons-buying procedures. Defense contractors also should realize that budget cuts mean "somebody's going to have to feel the pain," he said. "There are going to have to be some cutbacks somewhere."

Carlucci underlined his commitment to administration policies by telling reporters he fully supported the effort to develop a "Star Wars" anti-missile defense system; did not foresee any reduction in the U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf; and he thought there was room for further improvement in Pentagon contracting procedures.

He also hailed word of a new arms accord with the Soviet Union eliminating intermediate-range weapons, said another pact reducing long-range nuclear arsenals could be reached if the Russians stopped trying to curtail Star Wars research, and promised there would be no purge of top Pentagon staff despite last week's forced departure of Frank Gaffney, an avowed hard-liner and Weinberger's top arms-control expert.

Gaffney resigned after Carlucci informed him he wanted to select someone else to become the assistant defense secretary for international security policy. In departing, Gaffney criticized the administration for its haste to finalize the new intermediate-range arms accord with the Soviets — criticism that Carlucci dismissed on Tuesday.

"The Pentagon has a sensitive and crucial role to play in the (arms control) area," Carlucci said.

"We need to support the president and the secretary of state as they move the ball forward. At the same time, we have a solemn responsibility to advise the president on the national security implications of recommendations that he is considering. Secretary Weinberger took this responsibility very seriously... and I intend to do likewise."

President Reagan would never accept a treaty just for the sake of having something to sign at next month's summit meeting, Carlucci said.

The 57-year-old Carlucci, served as Weinberger's first deputy and most recently as Reagan's national security advisor, was welcomed to the Pentagon Tuesday by Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV.

Taft characterized Carlucci as an insider who already knew how the Pentagon operates.

"The secretary knows what we have set out to do and why and how we have set out to do it," Taft said.

Summit On Reagan's Agenda

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer
SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan is preparing for the summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, saying he welcomes agreement on an intermediate-range nuclear weapons treaty but that his "Star Wars" program is "bounding forward."

While en route Tuesday to his ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains north of Santa Barbara, Reagan delivered carrot-and-stick statements on superpower arms-control dealings.

He said he was "pleased" that U.S. and Soviet representatives in Geneva sealed the intermediate-range nuclear force (INF) treaty, which he and Gorbachev will sign at the Washington summit Dec. 8-10.

But Reagan, using a Martin Marietta manufacturing plant in Denver as his setting, also vowed that America can never "rely on words alone" as evidence of Soviet compliance with nuclear arms-limiting accords.

Reagan called his Strategic Defense Initiative missile defense program, known informally as "Star Wars," "a moral as well as a scientific endeavor" and suggested that reductions in superpower offensive missiles would be impossible without it.

Martin Marietta has a $10.8 million contract to start experiments with the Zenith Star, a chemical laser gun designed to shoot down enemy missiles in space. After being given a classified tour of the Denver plant and a briefing by Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson, chief of the SDI Office,

Reagan told Martin Marietta employees "it is clear that the project is bounding forward, and I couldn't be more pleased."

Reagan's speech was the latest in a series of appearances touting SDI. Reagan said the United States "must not be lulled into reducing our commitment" to a missile defense shield.

Reagan on Tuesday also asked Congress to exempt the SDI program from the $11.5 billion in automatic defense cuts that could be imposed under the Gramm-Rudman Act, which was triggered last Friday.

The president's request apparently was aimed at protecting the "Star Wars" program from the automatic cuts in the event the negotiated two-year, $76 billion program of budget cuts fails to be enacted in time to avert the full implementation of the cuts under Gramm-Rudman.

Reagan will spend Thanksgiving in California with his wife, Nancy, and return to Washington on Sunday. During his short respite at his mountaintop ranch, Reagan will review briefing books on the summit.

Delinquents See Military At Boys Base House

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer
PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — There's no Father Flanagan of Boys Town fame at Florida's Boys Base. But officials believe the sailors who share their naval station with the unique halfway house are setting the kind of example needed by delinquent teen-agers trying to turn their lives around.

Boys Base, in a far corner of Corry Station Naval Technical Training Center, is the only facility of its kind on a U.S. military installation, state and Navy officials say.

Delinquent youths ages 14 to 18 live and attend school an average of four months at the state-operated halfway house.

"They have a lot of good role models out here ..., especially at this base," said Jack Coppenger, Boys Base superintendent. "All the buildings you see are school buildings and they go 24 hours a day."

Some of the Navy's best and brightest are trained in cryptology, electronic warfare and photography at the Florida Panhandle installation.

"They don't have a lot of problems like we do," said one 17-year-old resident of Boys Base. "You can tell they've got their stuff together."

Boys Base is an agency of the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. It occupies a pair of old wooden barracks, but they are being replaced by a new $1 million building slated for completion by mid-1988.

With 11 full-time staffers, including two teachers provided by the Escambia County School District, Boys Base is the temporary home of up to 25 youths at a time.

"They all have one thing in common," Coppenger said. "They broke the law in one way or another."

The teen-agers spend nearly all of their time at Corry, but are allowed off base to hold down part-time jobs and participate in civic projects such as community clean-up work.

Their exposure to the military comes mainly at mealtimes when they eat with enlisted men at a Navy dining hall and while using the gym, swimming pool and other on-base recreation facilities. Sailors sometimes work as Boys Base volunteers, usually in recreational activities.

Just being around the military has an effect, said teacher Bob Cotton. "I don't think it's something you can put your finger on," he said. "It's more subtle, an indirect effect."

Cotton said the boys are tested and get individual study programs that begin at levels slightly below what they achieve on the exams to make sure they can be successful at something, building self-esteem. Individual study also helps avoid disciplinary problems.

"The more they are kept separate the less problems we have," he said.

Only two miles from the Pensacola Naval Air Station, Corry itself once was an airfield but its runways now are used as roads and its hangars are classrooms.

Boys Base has been at Corry for 15 years. Coppenger said before then the state had a similar facility at McCoy Air Force Base, but the base was closed and became Orlando International Airport.

Boys Base can be particularly beneficial to youngsters from military families, Coppenger said.

Some parents try to impose military style discipline at home and overdo it, causing children to rebel, he said. When they come to Boys Base some youngsters discover actual military discipline is not as harsh as what they were getting at home.

One 17-year-old boy from a service family in Fort Walton Beach said he once had a negative view of the way the military treats people.

"Since I've been around here I've seen it's not like that," he said.

No follow-up is done to determine what happens to youngsters after they leave, but it is known some have joined the military, one even being stationed at Corry.

Lt. Cmdr. Ray Nixon, head of the Support Department at Corry, said the Navy is pleased to host Boys Base as part of its community involvement effort. He said it's a good deal economically for the state. It also provides extra security although boys can and sometimes have walked off the base.

Coppenger said the Navy environment is particularly good in comparison to some other state halfway houses in neighborhoods where undesirable characters often come onto the campuses. Although the Navy doesn't stop anyone from leaving, those who wish to enter are checked at the gate and must obtain a visitor's pass.

The Navy benefits, Nixon said, because the boys help clean up the base and do other chores, including assistance with the Special Olympics program Corry sponsors.

He said the Chief Petty Officers Wives Club at Pensacola Naval Air Station has developed a partnership with Boys Base, holding birthday parties there once a month and making sure the boys get Christmas presents. The boys help the club by setting up tables and doing other odd jobs its membership drives.

"It's a model example of how the federal and state governments and local community can cooperate to create something that is unique," said Chelley Schembera, HRS district administrator. "I always try to show it off to people who come in from out of town."

Abby's Reminder: Be Thankful

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: An update on my traditional Thanksgiving column:

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day, so take a few minutes to think about what you have to be thankful for.

How's your health? Not so good? Well, thank God you've lived this long. A lot of people haven't. You're hurting? Thousands — maybe millions — are hurting more. (Have you ever visited a veterans hospital? Or a hospital for crippled children?)

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal cords to utter human sounds, walk to the breakfast table on two good legs and read the newspaper with two good eyes (or even one), praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't.

How's your pocketbook? Thin? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. No Medicare. In fact, one-third of the people in the world will go to bed hungry tonight.

Are you lonely? The way to have a friend is to be one. If nobody calls you, pick up the phone and call somebody. Go out of your way to do something nice for somebody. It's a sure cure for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern. Concern for fair play under the law. If you don't like your elected officials, you can go to work and vote them out of office. We still have the soapbox and the ballot box. Or would you rather be in Central America, Ethiopia or Afghanistan?

Freedom rings! You can still worship at the church of your choice, or not worship at all. You can cast a secret ballot, and even criticize your government without fearing a knock on the head or a knock on your door in the middle of the night.

And if you want to live under a different system, goodbye and good luck! You are free to go. There are no walls or fences to keep you here.

As a final thought, I'll repeat my Thanksgiving prayer; perhaps you will want to use it at your table tomorrow:

O, heavenly Father: We thank thee for food and remember the hungry.

We thank thee for health and remember the sick.

We thank thee for friends and remember the friendless.

We thank thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.

May these remembrances stir us to service

That thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen.

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving, and may God bless you and yours. Love, ABBY

An afterthought: Want an instant high? The surest cure for the post-holiday blues is to do something nice for someone. Why not call someone who lives alone and invite him (or her) over for dinner?

Better yet, call and say, "I'm coming to get you, and I'll see that you get home." (Many older people don't drive, and those who do don't like to go out alone after dark.)

P.S. Special greetings to those of you in the military who wrote from remote corners of the world to tell me that you are using my Thanksgiving prayer.

Children Work For Allowance

If there's one thing that can spark a bone of contention between parent and child, it's the weekly allowance.

But now we've got more information on that infamous matter.

For example, the average child's weekly allowance is $3.34. That's somewhere between the dollar forty that a five-year-old might get, and the eight dollars plus that a 16-year-old hauls in.

And these allowances are no "gimmees." Parents expect something in return — a clean room, good grades, help with family chores.

All this information comes from a survey done by Working Mother magazine, along with the surprising information that income has little to do with how much allowance a child gets.

Homemaker's Haven

Evelyn Spangler

At each age level there is rarely more than 50 cents difference between what the poorest and richest households a lot.

But children from lower incomes are expected to do more for their money. And boys are asked to do more chores for their allowances than girls.

Boys started off getting more money than girls, but by age 12 the girls took the lead. And they maintained that lead right through the teen years.

The survey offers some good news about allowances. It seems most parents approve of the way their kids spend the money. The lion's share goes for toys, followed by foods and gifts. Greatest satisfaction comes when both parents and children understand precisely what the allowance is to cover.

Call the Agricultural Extension Service at 830-6370 for a copy of the home study course "Teaching Children About Money." Special workbooks are developed according to the age of the child. A separate guide is available for the parent or adult teacher.

Today's preteens often seem more grown up than they really are. So without thinking adults may sometimes load them down with more baggage than they can handle.

What do I mean? Well, some parents may force unrealistic expectations on them. And if the child's natural parents have divorced and remarried, he has to cope with the expectations of stepparents, too. Add peer pressure to be hip, and the anxieties and stresses to perform pile up.

That leaves preteens walking a tightrope between expectations and what they're really like. Scratch below the sophisticated surface of a preteen and you'll probably find a young person who's constantly worried about his appearance. And he probably finds it hard to finish a project he starts. That's because he's plagued with self-doubts; the conflict between wanting to grow up and not wanting to grow up.

And as any parent knows, preteens love adults one minute and hate them the next. They want rules and regulations, but they also want their parents to be scapegoats — so they can say "I'd like to do that, but my old man won't let me."

And preteens are trying out relationships, falling in love one minute and out the next.

How can you help them cope with this roller coaster existence? Well, offer security — the knowledge that family members will stand by them, no matter what. And give them chances to develop responsibility and independence — but gear those chances to maturity level. Third, let your preteen know what you expect from him. Fourth, keep the lines of communication open. And last, but not least, be a good model of responsible behavior.

Mrs. Spangler is a certified home economist with the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service. She can be reached Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. at 830-6365.

Surgery Gives Sarah A Chance

By CYNTHIA HUBERT
The Arizona Daily Star

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — When Chris Medvescek kisses the top of her daughter Sarah's head these days, it is something of a spiritual experience. Beneath her dark brown hair, under the jagged scar on her scalp, deep inside her skull, something is different in Sarah.

Five months ago, in what's viewed as an astonishing medical feat, surgeons removed the diseased left hemisphere of the girl's brain, ending her relentless seizures — but leaving her personality, her intellect and her spirit intact.

At 4½, Sarah Medvescek has a long way to go to catch up to her peers. But just three months after the radical operation, she was doing things her parents never imagined possible.

She is an effervescent, hazel-eyed triumph of love and medicine; a bold statement on the mysteries of the human brain.

Sarah arrived by Caesarean section, following a rough and lengthy labor. She was a beautiful baby, outwardly perfect, her mother and father remember. But before long, they began to realize something was terribly wrong.

At first, the seizures were deceptively subtle: she would clamp her eyes shut, roll up in a tight ball and clench her tiny fists.

"Babies do those things," doctors and nurses reassured Ron and Chris when they described the symptoms. But by her third day of life, Sarah's seizures became more pronounced and much more frequent. Soon, they were bombarding her every five minutes.

During the next four years, the family heard a seemingly endless string of conflicting diagnoses and prognoses. Journeys were made to California, to Florida, to Missouri. All kinds of treatments — drugs, vitamins, manipulation therapy — were tried. Hopes were lifted and then dashed.

And Sarah kept shuddering. No one knew why. Either her brain simply developed abnormally, doctors said, or a portion of it was deprived of oxygen during birth — possibly as a result of a hidden stroke or bleeding episode.

Meanwhile, the jumbled signals held the girl's development to that of a newborn. At 3½, she couldn't sit, crawl, stand, talk, chew, hold a toy or even hold her head up for more than a couple of minutes.

But when she wasn't seizing violently, Ron and Chris Medvescek saw a different child: a bright, energetic youngster searching for a way to get out.

"When I looked in Sarah's eyes, it was like somebody had pulled the curtain," says Ron, 35. "I knew there was a person in there."

In 1984, they took her to St. Louis. There, doctors opened her skull to explore whether the damaged portion of Sarah's brain — perhaps a small area — could be removed to stop the storms.

Their crushing conclusion: The seizures were virtually constant, and they were coming from the entire left hemisphere. If they continued to pummel Sarah's brain with electrical activity, she would be left severely mentally retarded and physically disabled.

"They told us that the only way to stop the seizures would be to remove the left side of her brain, and that was too radical," says Chris, 32. "It really wasn't presented as an option. They told us to take her home and watch her."

They celebrated her smallest triumphs, and her father — a photographer for The Arizona Daily Star — recorded them all on film. Any new sound, any new movement, was cause for joy.

Sarah went to physical therapy, and to school at the Cerebral Palsy Foundation of Southern Arizona. Ron and Chris, a free-lance writer who devotes most of her time to her child, began to root for their daughter against the doctors.

Then, at the suggestion of University of Arizona pediatric neurologist Peggy Ferry, they decided to look into a rare operation performed at the University of California at Los Angeles to correct disabling seizures in children.

It seemed almost beyond belief: By cutting out the diseased half of the brain, the doctor said, conditions like Sarah's sometimes could be cured. In time, the body produces cerebrospinal fluid to fill the cavity left by the operation. And, in most cases, the youngsters emerge having lost none of the functions controlled by the missing hemisphere.

The procedure is called a hemispherectomy, which can only be performed on people whose uncontrollable seizures are confined to one side of the brain. The left half of the organ — the portion affected in Sarah's case — controls intellect, personality, speech and motion.

In children born with problems like hers, many of those tasks migrate over to the healthy half of the brain. So when the bad portion is cut out, the patients lose only the seizures.

"This is one of the most remarkable things I know of, this migration," says UCLA pediatric neurosurgeon Warwick Peacock, who performed Sarah's operation. UCLA is among a handful of institutions worldwide where hemispherectomies are performed.

Peacock calls Sarah's gains "fantastic" and says he expects her to continue to improve. And the seizures have stopped.

She is learning to crawl, and can stand with the help of someone stronger. She has begun feeding herself, and chewing.

Peacock believes Sarah will walk. Although her IQ is difficult to measure, "I anticipate she will develop. And I believe that speech is not very far away," he says. Doctors at UCLA have assured the Medvesceks that the right side of Sarah's brain is fine.

A stunning display of pattern stitchery on the front of this knit pullover embellishes its comfortable, easy shape. Cables and lacy open-work combine against a backdrop of simple rice stitch in fluffy yarn to create a snugly, kitten-soft top you won't be able to resist. The classic crewneck and dropped shoulder add to its appeal.

Easy-to-follow directions are given for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 40, 44 and 48½ inches respectively. The gauge is five stitches per inch.

Dear Pat: Help! I once made lacy scarves for many of my family and friends from a one-row pattern stitch you gave in one of your columns. My daughter asked if I would make her another, but I can't find the directions anywhere and can't remember how it was done. I do remember that I could make one in just a couple of evenings, so I'll bet other readers would like to have this in time for making Christmas gifts. — Sally C., Birmingham, Ala.

This is truly a good "oldie," Sally, so here goes. I get a gauge of 4 stitches per inch with worsted-weight yarn and size 6 needles. It has a stitch multiple of 4 plus 2 — meaning that you cast on any number of stitches evenly divisible by 4 and then add 2 more.

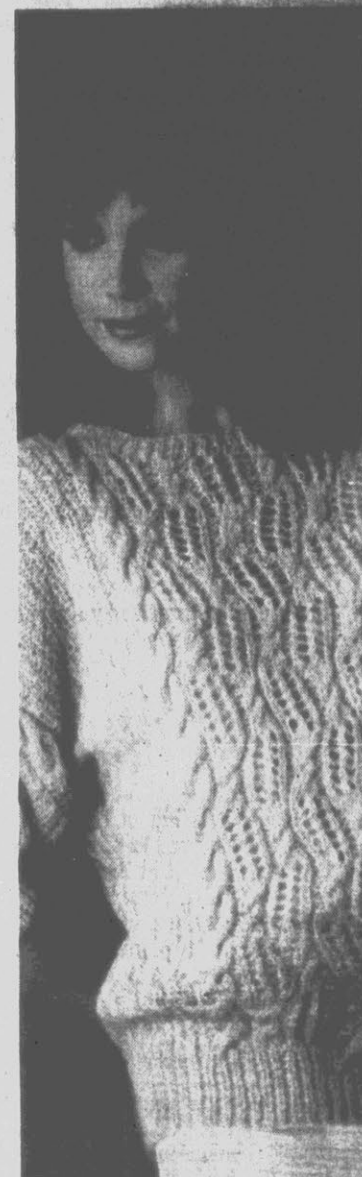

For every row, work as follows: Step 1: Knit the first 2 stitches. Step 2: Purl 1, purl 2 together, yarnover, knit 1. Repeat Step 2 over and over to the end of the row. Continue repeating this same row for the desired length of the scarf. Finish it off with fringe if you wish.

Once you have worked a few rows, most of you will find that you can work on a stockinette stitch pattern without having to refer back to the directions.

The real beauty of it is that this makes a completely reversible pattern, the same on the right and wrong sides, making it ideal for a scarf. With my gauge, I cast on 34 stitches, which gives me an 8½-inch width. You can make one scarf from a 3½-ounce skein with some left over.

Often, just by altering a pattern stitch by 1 or more stitches you can create an entirely different effect. Here's a letter I received last year that illustrates this point quite well.

Dear Pat: Having enjoyed your knitting tips for several years, I would like to return the favor and share a variation of one of your old patterns. I discovered a whole new pattern by working your Lacy Knit Scarf pattern on a multiple of our plus three. I start each row with knit 2, work in the regular pattern all the way across and end with purl 1, working every row the same.

It makes a closer pattern, with a beautiful ridge and is warmer for hats, firmer for scarves. Hope you

Here's hoping this will encourage some of you to occasionally sit down with yarn and needles and just "play" with pattern stitches. I'm betting you may come up with a "new" stitch you can proudly proclaim as your own.

'Canes, Irish More Evenly Matched

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson was accused of running up the score the last time the Hurricanes played Notre Dame. He doesn't expect to have that problem when the teams meet Saturday.

"The chances of that happening are quite remote, so remote I don't even think about it," Johnson said with a smile. "If we could squeeze out a one-point win, I'd be the happiest guy in the world."

The second-ranked Hurricanes and No. 10 Notre Dame appear more evenly matched than two years ago, when Miami won 58-7. After that game, Johnson received more than 400 letters from angry fans around the nation.

"We did not try to run up the score," Johnson said Tuesday. "I hate that we have the controversy we have right now. I really wish it hadn't happened."

In Gerry Faust's last game as Notre Dame's football coach, the Hurricanes threw for one fourth-quarter touchdown, blocked a punt for another and ran a reverse on the next-to-last play.

"At the end of the ballgame, I was surprised when the issue was brought up, because we had played so many second- and third-team players. I did not feel it was an issue," Johnson said.

"I just don't understand the subject. Maybe once the score gets to a certain point, the opposing coach should give you a list of plays you can run and what you can't."

After the game, Notre Dame quarterback Steve Beuerlein said the Fighting Irish would remember what happened. People in South Bend, Ind., are now wearing buttons that say, "The Irish never forget. 58-7."

At a news conference Tuesday at South Bend, Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz said his team is not seeking revenge.

"I can't believe that a good Christian school like Notre Dame would speak about revenge as a motivating factor," said Holtz, a coach known for dry humor.

"I don't think you ever get ahead of anybody if you're trying to get even with them. Sure, there are some feelings, but all we want to do is win the football game."

Holtz agreed with Johnson that the teams are too evenly matched for running up the score to be a possibility Saturday. That removes revenge as a factor, Holtz said.

"Revenge is when you're a lot better than they are, and you got them down and then you say, 'Now we're going to do the same thing as you did,'" he said.

The Hurricanes also discount revenge as a source of inspiration for the Fighting Irish.

"It's a motivational thing for them, but you can't play for 60 minutes on motivation," linebacker George Mira said. "When somebody sticks a helmet in your face, it's all over. You've got to forget about emotion."

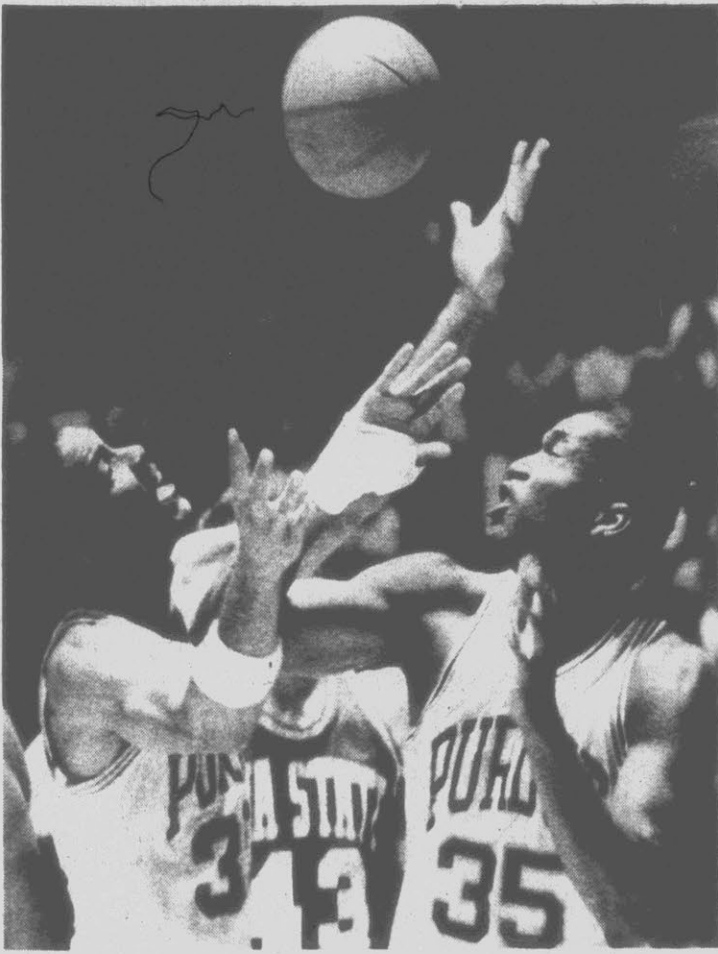

Mira said charges of running up the score in the Miami-Notre Dame series are stupid.

"They can say all they want to about two years ago," Mira said. "We can go back six, seven, eight years to where they did the same thing to us."

Notre Dame's biggest margins of victory in the series were 44-0 in 1973 and 48-10 in 1977.

"There was already bad blood, I thought, between Notre Dame and Miami," wide receiver Michael Irvin said. "That (1985) game doesn't have anything to do with it. We're going to go out there and play our best, and they're going to play their best."

Miami, 9-0, has accepted an invitation to play top-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day. Notre Dame, 8-2, is bound for the Cotton Bowl against the Southwest Conference champion, Texas A&M or Texas.

Seton Hall Takes NIT Win

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Seton Hall's basketball team is no longer the whipping boy of the tough Big East Conference.

In any given year, the Pirates were almost a shoo-in for last place.

Not any more.

The Pirates on Tuesday night gave notice they are for real this season by getting 19 points from Darryl Walker, building a big first-half lead and routing Middle Tennessee 93-61 to advance to the semifinals of the Big Apple NIT.

Seton Hall, 2-0, will face New Mexico on Friday night, while Iowa State, a 104-96 upset winner over No. 2 Purdue in Tuesday's other quarterfinal game, takes on Florida in the other Final Four game at Madison Square Garden in New York City.

This was no ordinary victory. Seton Hall dominated every aspect of the game in beating Middle Tennessee, a team that went to the NCAA tournament last year and was a preseason pick to win the Ohio Valley Conference.

"I don't like to praise people that much, but it was important to let them know what a solid effort that was," Seton Hall Coach P.J. Carlesimo said. "Our team could not have responded any better. You don't want to super magnify any game on Nov. 24, but the effort was unbelievable."

The first half might have been Seton Hall's best effort in a long time. The Pirates shot 62 percent from the field in opening a 55-34 lead in the game played before an estimated crowd of 2,100 at the Rutgers Athletic Center.

Seton Hall had to play the game there because its home arena does not meet the 5,000-seat requirement mandated by the NIT.

But the change of scenery did not affect Seton Hall, which last season posted its first winning campaign since 1979-80.

Walker and Mark Bryant, returning from a one-game NCAA suspension, were the keys for the Pirates. They scored seven points apiece in a 16-5 run midway through the first half that gave Seton Hall a 33-15 edge, and Middle Tennessee never got closer than 12 points the rest of the way.

"For whatever reason, they just couldn't get started," Carlesimo said of the Blue Raiders. "We were the opposite. Shots were going in, guys were blocking shots and the balls were bouncing our way. The thing just snowballed. We're not that much better than they are by any stretch of the imagination. It was nice to happen our way."

Middle Tennessee Coach Bruce Stewart didn't think it was so nice and called it his worst experience as a coach.

"I apologized to P.J. because we gave them no contest," he said. "We got outcoached, outhustled, outdefensed, outexecuted on offense, outbounced. They played with a lot more heart than we did and we took a 30-point whipping which is very embarrassing."

Carlesimo said making the Final Four bodes well for Seton Hall.

"In past years, the teams that have made the Final Four have gone on to have very good years," he said. "It's not a guarantee, but it really seems to have been an accurate barometer."

Carlesimo said he is familiar with some of the New Mexico players because he tried to recruit them.

"New Mexico is a great basketball program. Gary Colson does a great job," he said. "They are very talented. It's a tough draw, but there is no good draw. Each round gets more and more difficult."

Ramon Ramos and James Major added 13 points apiece, while Bryant and Martin Salley had 12 each for Seton Hall.

Freshman Leslie Gregory topped Middle Tennessee with 20 points. Chris Rainey added 14 for the Blue Raiders, now 1-1.

Iowa St. 104, No. 2 Purdue 96

At West Lafayette, Ind. Jeff Grayer scored 19 of his game-high 29 points in the second half for Iowa State.

Purdue led 93-90 with 3:52 remaining before the Cyclones outscored the Boilermakers 14-3, including 10 straight points that made it 100-93 with 40 seconds left.

Iowa State's Mike Born closed the gap to 93-92 on a jump shot with 3:40 to go, and Lafester Rhodes, who finished with 18 points, had two free throws to give the Cyclones a 94-93 lead with 3:09 left. Iowa State never trailed again.

Purdue, 1-1, missed five of its final six shots in the final four minutes. Everett Stephens, who finished with 17 points, scored the Boilermakers' final points on a 3-pointer with 30 seconds to go.

Gary Thompkins scored 15 points for Iowa State, 2-0.

Purdue was led by Troy Lewis with 28 points, 18 in the first half. Todd Mitchell scored 22 points for the Boilermakers and Melvin McCants had 16.

Long Drought Is Over For Herd

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Mired in a string of losing seasons that would eventually reach 18, laboring under its sixth coach in 10 years and still suffering from a plane crash that killed the entire team, Marshall University almost gave up football.

On Saturday, the Thundering Herd will play its second postseason football game — the first since the 1947 season.

In the 40 years since its appearance in the Tangerine Bowl, Marshall has had 30 losing seasons and 10 head coaches. And on Nov. 14, 1970, a chartered plane carrying the team crashed near Huntington's Tri-State Airport, killing all aboard.

Sam Clagg, a former Marshall football player who has been affiliated with the school since 1946, recalled many people "said we should forget about football. At the time, I found myself agreeing with them, but I kept my mouth shut. I didn't give up on them."

Not that there wasn't good reason. Marshall didn't win more than four games in any season from 1966 through 1983.

"Did we suffer? You know I did," Clagg said. "I played on Cam (Henderson)'s great teams in 1940 and 1941 (8-2 and 7-1, respectively). The old fans knew what it was like to win, but the younger ones didn't."

Rather than keep trying, and failing, they wanted to close up shop and forget Marshall's past, Parker Ward Jr. said. Ward, president of the Marshall Quarterback Club, lost his father in the 1970 crash.

"I think you always have to remember the past or you'll lose perspective of where you are now," Ward said. "Look at it compared to the last 20 years — it's great to be where you are right now."

The Thundering Herd finished the 1987 season 7-4, its fourth consecutive winning season after 18 losers in a row. Marshall finished second in the Southern Conference and was ranked 18th in the NCAA Division I-AA poll.

James Madison travels to Huntington on Saturday for a first-round playoff game, with the winner moving to the quarterfinals against the Weber State-Idaho winner.

The turnaround at Marshall started under Stan Parrish, who installed a passing attack four years ago. When Parrish left for Kansas State two years ago, George Champ added a rushing game.

Most of Parrish's recruits now are seniors.

"They made it in? Isn't that great! Isn't that great!" Parrish said. "I'm delighted. They've come a long way in four years."

Senior Tony Petersen, a Champ recruit, is second in Division I-AA in passing (343.4 yards per game) and Mike Barber (7.1 catches) and Sean Doctor (6.4) rank first and third, respectively, in receiving. Sophomore Ron Darby is 11th in all-purpose yardage (146.9) and 17th in rushing (92.7).

"It would have been a shame to have a team with a quarterback who has thrown for over 3,000 yards, a running back with more than 1,000 yards and two receivers over 1,000 yards not to be in postseason play," Champ said.

In Parrish's first year, the Herd ended 18 seasons of losing football by beating East Tennessee 31-28 to finish with a 6-5 record.

"Until that game," Ward said. "they had been associated with losing, and that finally made the players realize that we can win."

Marshall went 7-3-1 in 1985 and 6-5 in 1986, Champ's first year.

A victory Saturday would be Marshall's first in either an NCAA football or basketball tournament.

"This is, by far, the biggest modern-day football game for Marshall," Ward said. "If we win, well, I don't know what's going to happen in Huntington Saturday night."

Mike Woodson came to the rescue so many times, it brought back memories of the Saturday afternoon movie serials.

"It was a marvelous performance because we looked like we were out of it several times," Coach Gene Shue said after his Los Angeles Clippers edged the Golden State Warriors 123-120 in double-overtime Tuesday night.

And, in a performance worthy of Hollywood, it was Woodson in a starring role.

His off-balance jumper with one second remaining in regulation tied the score at 99 as the Clippers rallied from a 98-91 deficit with 54 seconds left.

His two free throws with four seconds remaining in the first overtime period knotted the score at 111.

And when he sank a long jumper with 21 seconds left in the second extra period, the Clippers had a 121-118 lead.

While he had top billing, finishing with 31 points, Woodson had a strong supporting cast, including Larry Drew and Benoit Benjamin.

"It was sensational the way we fought our way out of the holes we kept getting ourselves into," Shue said.

The biggest hole was the seven-point deficit with 54 seconds left in regulation. But Drew made two 3-point goals — he was 3-for-3 on those for the night — to set the stage for Woodson's heroics.

"We were in a position that we had to make a couple of 3-pointers," Drew said. "They were designed plays, but we just didn't launch the ball. They had to be good shots."

Drew finished with 24 points, while Benjamin scored 26, hitting 11 of 12 from the field, and grabbed 13 rebounds.

Elsewhere, it was Philadelphia 108, Cleveland 104; Detroit 97, Houston 83; Denver 132, New Jersey 104; Utah 100, Washington 83; Portland 98, Sacramento 94, and Seattle 103, the Los Angeles Lakers 85.

"What I remember most was missing some free throws down the stretch that could have put the game away," said Warriors Coach George Karl, whose team made only 23 of 34 free throws and hit only 45.7 percent from the field. Golden State lost for the seventh straight time and saw its record drop to 1-10, the worst in the NBA.

Rod Higgins put on a show for Golden State, sinking 15 of 17 shots from the field, including 13 straight, and scoring with a career-high 33 points. Eric Floyd, held scoreless in the first half, finished with 22.

"It just goes to show that when it's going bad, it's going bad," Karl said. "So far this season we've had our faces pushed in the mud."

Nuggets 132, Nets 104

Lafayette Lever scored 21 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and handed out 14 assists as Denver routed New Jersey.

Lever just missed becoming the fourth player in NBA history to record double figures in points, rebounds, assists and steals in one game since the league began keeping the statistic. Lever had eight steals and sat out the entire fourth quarter.

The Nuggets' defense set a team record with 19 blocked shots, eight each by Wayne Cooper and Blair Rasmussen, and had 18 steals.

Mike Gminski and Buck Williams led New Jersey with 15 points each.

Jazz 100, Bullets 83

Karl Malone scored 22 points and Thurl Bailey 18 as Utah held Washington to 13 points in the fourth quarter. Utah led 74-70 going into the final period, but went on a 15-3 streak in a seven-minute stretch to put the game out of reach.

The Bullets outscored the Jazz 17-5 early in the third period to take their only lead of the game, 62-59, on Moses Malone's 3-point play. Malone topped the Bullets with 17 points.

Trail Blazers 98, Kings 94

Clyde Drexler scored 32 points and the Portland Trail Blazers held off a fourth-quarter comeback by Sacramento to defeat the Kings. It was the Blazers' third consecutive victory and the Kings' fifth straight loss.

Otis Thorpe led Sacramento with 21 points.

SuperSonics 103, Lakers 85

Xavier McDaniel's 34 points led Seattle to a fight-marred victory over the Los Angeles, which dropped its second game in a row. Both benches cleared in the third period when McDaniel and Wes Matthews battled for a loose ball. McDaniel came up from the pile with his hands around Matthews' neck, drawing a personal foul and a technical.

Magic Johnson led the Lakers with 23 points. But James Worthy, who entered the game as the team's leading scorer with a 21.3 average, was held scoreless.

"They're struggling right now," Sonics Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said of the Lakers.

76ers 108, Cavaliers 104

Charles Barkley scored 14 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter as Philadelphia defeated Cleveland. Barkley, who sat out most of the third quarter, returned to the game with eight minutes remaining and the 76ers leading 85-82. In a 72-second span, he blocked two shots, hit a layup and handed off two assists as the 76ers scored eight straight points, six by Roy Hinson.

After the Cavaliers pulled within 105-102, Barkley scored four consecutive points to ensure the victory.

Maurice Cheeks also scored 22 points and Hinson added 21 for Philadelphia, while Brad Daugherty had 23 and Williams 18 for Cleveland.

Pistons 97, Rockets 83

Vinnie Johnson had 26 points, including 13 in the fourth quarter, to lead Detroit over Houston. The victory was Detroit's third straight and its fourth consecutive on the road. Houston had a six-game home winning streak snapped.

After Houston pulled within 79-75 on a three-point play by Akeem Olatunji and a basket by Rodney McCray, the Pistons scored eight straight points, including six by Johnson, and were never threatened thereafter.

The eagles came on the par-five second hole at the club while they were playing with Ed and Diane Murphrey. Gaynell made her third shot with a 5-wood from 130 yards out while Cobby chipped in with a pitching wedge from around 90 yards.

Boyd Leads Deacs By Belgian Team

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest junior Cal Boyd scored 22 points to spark the Demon Deacons to an 86-67 victory over a team from Ghent, Belgium, in exhibition basketball Tuesday night.

Wake Forest jumped to a 17-6 lead in the first five minutes, using frequent fast breaks against the slower Belgium team, which was playing its eighth and final game of a two-week American tour.

After taking the 11-point lead, the Deacons went four minutes without scoring. With 11 minutes left in the first half, the Belgian team took a brief 18-17 lead on a hook shot by Mark Wade, one of two American players on the Belgium team.

Wake Forest regained the lead for good on a basket by sophomore center Greg Keith and gradually pulled away. The Deacons outscored the Belgians 16-6 in the final four minutes of the first half to take a 45-34 lead at intermission.

Boyd scored seven points during the spurt. Wake Forest stretched its lead early in the second half behind the 3-point shooting of sophomore Antonio Johnson. Johnson's third long-range jumper with 10 minutes left gave the Deacons 68-49 lead.

After that, the Belgians never got closer than 13 points.

Johnson finished with 14 points for Wake Forest, freshman Daric Keys added 13 and center Ralph Kitley had 10.

David Moss led the Belgians with 29 points, and Wade added 16.

Gooden Willing To Sign 1-Year Pact

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dwight Gooden wants to spend his career with the New York Mets and is willing to sign a one-year contract for 1988 season, his agent said Tuesday night.

Jim Neader, representing the star right-hander, began contract talks with Mets vice president Al Harazin during the afternoon and called it "a good session."

"We got to express how Dwight really feels," Neader said. "And the way he feels is that he wants to be a career Met."

Gooden, married last Saturday and honeymooning in Hawaii, indicated recently that he wanted to sign a multiyear contract, preferably for three seasons. Harazin said the Mets will only offer a one-year deal.

"For 1988, their feeling is one (year)," Neader said. "Their feeling is let's do one year and then go from there."

"Sure we could accept that," Neader said. "But we'd want to talk sometime in the middle of the season about doing something more."

Harazin said he and Neader had a "frank exchange of views. No yelling."

"No discussion of numbers," Harazin said. "The club's position was stated. For this year, one year. But the door was left open to discuss a longer term later."

Gooden, who turned 23 this month, signed a one-year contract last season for $1.5 million. Gooden did not pitch until June because of cocaine rehabilitation and went 15-7 with a 3.21 earned run average.

Not A Good Year For OSU

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ohio State's football season is over and, even though a 6-4 record is disappointing to the Buckeyes, Chris Spielman is sorry to see it end.

It wasn't a very good season by Ohio State standards — "Disappointing would be an understatement," Spielman said — but the all-star linebacker would have liked to go to a bowl game as a reward for "a slightly successful season."

Spielman and Syracuse quarterback Don McPherson were in town Tuesday as members of the Kodak All-America team selected by the American Football Coaches Association. The seasons they went through were almost exact opposites.

Syracuse had won as many as seven games only once since 1967 but the Orangemen went 11-0 and earned a Sugar Bowl invitation. Ohio State had won as few as seven games only once since 1971 and had gone to a bowl game in each of the last 15 years.

"At Ohio State you expect to go to a major bowl," Spielman said. "We went to the Rose, Citrus and Cotton bowls my first three years. If you had told me at the beginning of the year that we weren't going to a bowl, I would have shot you or punched you right in the face."

Even after Ohio State fired Coach Earle Bruce and informed the various bowl committees it would not accept an invitation, the Sun Bowl urged the Buckeyes to reconsider. They didn't. Spielman at least would have liked to have had a vote.

"We had an opportunity to go to the Sun Bowl, but here we go again with the president of the university (Dr. Edward H. Jennings) saying no without the players even having a say in it," he said. "The players go through the two-a-days, the players go through the ups and downs. You laugh, cry and sweat together and all of a sudden you have a chance for a reward for the season."

"It meant a lot to the seniors to go to a bowl and you have a guy up there who's not even involved in the program, someone you see once a year or something, say, 'Sorry, guys.'"

Pam Pack Pins Rose

Washington High School opened the 1987-88 wrestling season Tuesday night with a 46-15 victory over Rose High.

The Rampants, who also opened their season, won but three of the 13 weights, taking two of them by pins. Mo Dar at 125 and Ehyin Youssef at 135 both claimed pin victories while Jeff House at 189 won by a decision.

Washington's 10 wins included five pins.

The two teams will meet again next Tuesday in Washington. The Pam Pack, meanwhile, will take part in the Dixon Tournament on Saturday.

Meanwhile, McPherson will lead the Syracuse team to New Orleans for a Jan. 1 date with the Southeastern Conference champion.

"We knew that we had a good team coming back and we always felt if we worked hard enough that we could win every game on our schedule. By the same token, we knew we could lose every game on our schedule."

"We knew that we had to take one game at a time and we established a theme of 'one down, one to go,' 'two down, one to go,' that kind of thing, just to keep focusing on the next game."

Still, McPherson says the Orangemen didn't really start thinking about a possible national championship "until we were 7-0, and we knew that with seven wins and a win over Penn State that we had a good chance at a bowl game."

"Now being No. 4 and there being only two undefeated teams left, and two of them (Oklahoma and Miami) having to play one another in the Orange Bowl, we think that if we can end up 12-0, we've got a chance for it. Everything has to fall into place and we know all the ifs and buts — if Miami loses and then let's say they beat Oklahoma. The bottom line is we have to beat whoever we play in the Sugar Bowl."

Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson survived rumors that his job was in jeopardy; Earle Bruce didn't.

"The only reason he (MacPherson) is probably still here (at Syracuse) is because (athletic director) Jake Crouthamel had a great deal of faith in him," McPherson said. "Last year at this time they were calling for his job. The year before that, I think the Cherry Bowl (1985) really saved him."

"Last year, there were a lot of rumors going around that he was going to be gone after the season, but Jake really stuck by him."

Spielman wishes Ohio State had done the same for Bruce.

"I felt that they had no justice in doing what they did when a man's won over 75 percent of his games," Spielman said. "He's a leader, he's a proven coach, he's won everywhere he's been. We had an off year, but he got us ready. Every offensive play was designed to score a touchdown, every defensive play was designed to stop the other team from scoring."

"My understanding from the release was that he didn't express leadership qualities and lacked charisma. He got us ready to play Michigan, and we beat Michigan. A man who'd do that under the circumstances that he was under, under the pressure that he was under, that shows a tremendous amount of leadership to me. That was one of the finest acts of leadership I've seen in a long time.

"As far as the other reason, charisma, I have never seen charisma win a football game."

"It was tough to keep your mind on what you're supposed to do, but he would keep us focused on our next opponent as well as he'd keep himself focused. He said, 'Don't worry about the people, don't worry about the press. I can handle it. I'm a professional. I'll take care of it.' Unfortunately, they took care of him."

Spielman said there was "a lot of talk" among the players about winning the last game for Bruce.

"We felt that we owed him our best game," he said. "He gave us everything he had. He put his time and effort into coaching football and into the Ohio State program. He's a Buckeye, he always was a Buckeye and he always will be a Buckeye, and he let us know that."

"We felt as a team that we owed it to him to go out there and play the best game we possibly could. We tried to show our support for him by breaking out the headbands at the coin toss. We wore 'Earle' across them on national TV. Hopefully, that would give maybe some more support that he needed."

"The president does have a right to hire and fire who he wants to; we all understand that. It's just the timing of the thing and the way he did it. He did not give him a reason, he did not give us a reason."

Pitt Defeats Methodist JVs

WINTERVILLE — Pitt Community College got 20 points each from Eric Dunn and Paul Hollingsworth to rolled up a 95-65 victory over the Methodist College junior varsity Tuesday night at the A.G. Cox gym.

After both teams hit opening 3-point baskets, the Paladins went on a 21-3 spree that sped them out to a 24-6 lead in the game. From there through the end of the half, the Paladins were in complete control, taking a 51-29 lead into the dressing rooms.

In the second half, Methodist came out firing and outhit Pitt 10-2 in the opening minutes to cut the lead back to 53-39. Pitt regained control, however, and turned the tide with a 14-2 advantage, running the lead back to 67-41.

"I was real pleased with some points of our defense and offense," Coach Charles Coburn said. "But we got ragged at times. I'm still concerned with our turnover rate and our free throw shooting. We had 17 turnovers, but 13 of them came in the second half. I'm afraid that the free throws and turnovers are going to come back and haunt us unless we improve."

Overall, Pitt had six players in double figures. In addition to Dunn and Hollingsworth, Jeffrey Crudup had 13, Otis Barnes had 12, Mike Hathaway had 11 and Joel Isley had 10.

Methodist was led by Tim Foster with 30 while David Eubanks had 16 and Eric Ramsey had 10.

Pitt is now 2-3 on the year and plays host to Richmond Community College on Monday.

Knight Reprimanded By University

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Coach Bobby Knight, who admitted he "let some personal feelings outweigh good judgment" is under reprimand by the University of Indiana for pulling his team off the floor during an exhibition game with the touring Soviet national basketball team.

The walkout occurred Saturday night after Knight was whistled for a third technical foul and ejected. The Soviets, leading 66-43, won by forfeit.

The university said in a statement Tuesday, "Coach Knight said that he had made a serious mistake of judgment, and that he recognized it caused great embarrassment not only to himself and the basketball program, but also, and most importantly, to the entire university and its supporters."

Meanwhile, Knight turned up Tuesday as speaker for a meeting in Bloomington of the Rotary Club and apologized again for the incident. He said he "let some personal feelings outweigh good judgment as far as the general scope of things in that particular game were concerned."

Knight also told Rotarians, "Over the years I have put personal thoughts aside far more than anyone in this room will ever know. And yet on Saturday night, I didn't. I let a couple of personal feuds interfere with what was the overall objective of that evening. And I was very, very sorry about that."

"I was not particularly pleased with the way I handled the situation and certainly even less so relative to depriving people that were in the stands of an opportunity to watch our players play."

"I was wrong, and I've got to go on from there," Knight said.

The coach said earlier he was angered by a lane violation game officials ignored during free throws taken by a Soviet player.

Tuesday's statement from the university said, in part, President Thomas Ehrlich and Athletic Director Ralph Floyd strongly reprimanded Coach Knight, who gave his assurance that such an incident would not occur again.

"The university has apologized to the sponsor of the game, Amateur Basketball Association-USA, and — through the sponsor — to the Soviet team and coach," the statement read.

The nature of the reprimand was not specified.

It wasn't the first time the former Olympic and three-time NCAA champion coach has been involved in controversy during his 17 years as coach.

Knight was convicted of assaulting a policeman in Puerto Rico during the 1979 Pan American Games. In 1975, he taunted a touring Soviet team by pounding his shoe on a table. He has chewed out Indiana home crowds for not cheering loud enough and at other times for chanting obscenities at opposing teams.

Last season, he stomped and slammed a chair to the floor, kicked a megaphone and yelled at Indiana cheerleaders.

Soccer Champs
The Rowdies captured the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's Girls Soccer League (Grades 1-4) championship this year. Members of the team are, first row, left to right: Sara Malloy, Jessica Maira, Katie Yeager, Beth Adams, Sarah Davenport; second row, Sarah Hughes, Becky Tomaszewski, Meredith Warren, Tara White, Lesley Coleman; rear, Coach Joey Reardon. INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Williamston, Roanoke Post Opening Victories

ROBERSONVILLE — Williamston and hosting Roanoke came away with a pair of basketball victories in the Enterprise Tip-Off Classic Tuesday night.

Roanoke beat Bear Grass, 61-52, in boys' action and also recorded a 50-38 win in the girls' contest. Williamston bested Jamesville, 44-39, in the boys' game and won the girls' event, 34-30.

Williamston's boys inched out into a 13-9 lead after the first quarter of the game, then continued to pull away in the second quarter with a 12-7 advantage. That gave the Tigers a 25-16 lead over the Bullets at the half.

In the opening game of the evening, Williamston's girls pulled out to a 10-5 lead in the first period. The Lady Bullets came back, 11-8, in the second quarter, but trailed, 18-16, going into the dressing rooms.

Jamesville outthit Williamston, 6-3, in the third period, inching ahead, 22-21, but couldn't hold it. The Lady Tigers came back with a 12-8 advantage in the final quarter to pull it out.

Kim Hawkins led Williamston with 10 points while Val Clark had 15 to pace Jamesville.

Roanoke pushed into a 13-8 lead in the first period of its game with Bear Grass. Roanoke continued to build on that in the second period, 12-8, taking a 25-16 halftime lead.

Ivy Raynard led Roanoke with 16 points while Robbie Harris added 12. Janet Rogerson led Bear Grass with 16 while Tameka Little had 11.

Tonight, Jamesville takes on Roanoke while Williamston meets Bear Grass.

In the third period, Jamesville mounted a comeback, outthitting Williamston, 13-6. That cut the lead back to 31-29 with but a quarter to play. Williamston managed to hold off the Bullets, however, 13-10, in the final period to pull out the victory.

Fred Huff led the Tigers with 12 points while Michael York added 11. Ben James paced Jamesville with 18 while Craig Hagan added 10.

Roanoke burst out to a 17-8 lead in the opening period against Bear Grass. The Redskins continued to hold sway in the second frame, 19-15, building a 36-23 halftime lead.

Bear Grass outscored the Redskins in the third quarter, 14-12, but still trailed, 48-37, as the final eight minutes got underway. The Bears again outthit the Redskins, 15-13, but to no avail.

Richard Moore led Roanoke with 17 points while Jasper Council hit 16, Paul Council had 12 and Ricky Howard added 11. Almer Riddick led the Bears with 16.

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — It's only fitting that the Southeastern Conference title and a Sugar Bowl berth are on the line when No. 7 Auburn plays 18th-ranked Alabama this Friday, said Coach Pat Dye.

"It's going to be a fine, competitive football game played to the hilt by both teams," Dye said Tuesday. "It will be a game of inches, just like the rest of them."

Sometimes, the games have been decided by less than inches. In the last five years, a total of 12 points has separated the two teams, and the games often are decided in the last seconds.

The people of Alabama give near total attention to the rivalry, with cries of "War Eagle" alternating with shouts of "Roll Tide" in the stands, on the streets and in bars.

Dye said there's no danger of either team being flat when they collide Friday at Legion Field in Birmingham. Kickoff for the "Iron Bowl" is 1:40 p.m. CST, with CBS televising the contest nationally.

"We won't play a Florida State game and Alabama won't play a Memphis State game," he said, referring to disappointing losses earlier in the season by both teams. "I think we'll be at our best, and that's the way it should be."

Auburn is 8-1-1 and 4-0-1 in the SEC, and a victory will hand the Tigers a Sugar Bowl berth against No. 4 Syracuse. Alabama, 7-3 and 4-1, has an outside shot at the Sugar Bowl with a victory, which would leave the Tide in a tie for the championship with Louisiana State.

The last time Auburn confronted Alabama with a chance to win the title, in 1984, the Tide shocked the heavily favored Tigers 17-15. Alabama finished 5-6 that year but redeemed themselves in the eyes of their fans by winning state bragging rights.

Dye promised Tuesday that Auburn won't make the same mistake twice.

"I don't think that we'll go into this game the way we did in 1984," Dye said. "I think we were overconfident in 1984, because Alabama was already assured of a losing season and all we needed was a win to go to the Sugar Bowl."

Auburn lost again in 1985 on a last-second field goal but won last year, 21-17, despite 204 yards rushing and 27 yards receiving by Alabama junior tailback Bobby Humphrey.

Dye, asked Tuesday about Humphrey compared to other collegiate tailbacks, was quick in his assessment.

"He's the best. I think Bobby Humphrey is the best running back in America. Period. There's no comparison," he said.

Auburn's main guns are senior quarterback Jeff Burger, who has thrown for just less than 2,000 yards, and a defense that has given up only 11 points per game this year. Dye said he expected no major changes in the Auburn attack on offense or in its defensive schemes.

Dye alluded Tuesday to Auburn's dim hopes of a mythical national title, noting that there are possible combinations of victories and losses among teams at the pinnacle of the Top Twenty poll that could vault the Tigers to No. 1.

"When two good teams get together, strange things happen," he said. "There's still a lot of that

Elliott Has A Near Miss In Air Force Jet Collision

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — After winning the Atlanta Journal 500 one week after four members of his pit crew had been injured during a race in California, driver Bill Elliott asked, "What else can happen to us?"

On Tuesday, Elliott, one of the NASCAR circuit's most popular and successful drivers, was a passenger in an Air Force F-16 fighter that clipped a Georgia Air National Guard F-15 while flying over east-central Georgia.

The pilot of the F-15, Lt. Col. Bruce MacLane of Atlanta, was forced to eject from his jet, which crashed. MacLane was admitted to an Augusta hospital, but reportedly wasn't injured.

The pilot of the plane carrying Elliott, Maj. Wayne F. Conroy, managed to limp his damaged F-16 back to Dobbins Air Force Base in Marietta, where it landed without incident.

"It was a great job of maintaining it and flying back here," Elliott, himself an experienced pilot, said. "The pilot did a heck of a job."

"Everything happened so fast I couldn't tell you what happened," Elliott said. "The impact was there. The pilot got the plane back with the wings level. We made a pass over the pilot and saw he had ejected out and saw he was safe. ... Then we did some maneuvers to see if we'd be able to land it. We lost contact at that point. He (the pilot) gave me a note that said if we lost control we'd have to eject."

fairs officer at Dobbins, said the F-15 Eagle is attached to the Georgia Air National Guard, while the F-16 is based at Hill AFB in Utah.

Coffman didn't have an explanation or description of the mishap.

He said Elliott had done a recruiting commercial for the Air Force Reserve and was being given an "orientation ride" when the collision occurred.

It has been a strange and difficult two weeks for Elliott. Two Sundays ago, his brother, Dan, was among the four pit crew members hit by a car during a pit-road accident at Riverside, Calif. No one was killed, but one crew member remains hospitalized.

Last week, one of Elliott's friends from his hometown of Dawsonville, Ga., was killed in an automobile crash.

Cowboys Remain Quiet On Which QB Will Start

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tom Landry is trying to make the Minnesota Vikings sweat.

The Dallas Cowboys coach may wait until the last minute to announce whether Danny White or Steve Pelluer will start at quarterback in the Thanksgiving Day NFL game.

"They'll both get equal work this week," Landry said Tuesday. "We'll have both of them ready to go."

White, nursing a sore right wrist, watched Sunday night's 20-14 loss to the Miami Dolphins from the sidelines while Pelluer made his 1987 debut as the starter. White said the rest did wonders for his wrist.

"It feels better than it has all year," he said. "I'm ready to go."

Pelluer threw two touchdown passes but suffered two interceptions in the loss. He didn't complete a single pass to a wide receiver.

"I could play both," Landry said. "I know Danny is anticipating he will start and I'm pleased he is feeling as good as he has. We still won't work him hard this week."

Landry said a White-Pelluer combination in the game "could work to our advantage."

"The Vikings will have to be careful when Steve is in there because he can really run," Landry said. "That will be a big danger they face."

Pelluer scrambled 10 times for 84 yards against the Dolphins. He gained two more yards than Dallas tailback Herschel Walker.

"We were 50 percent (converting) on third downs because of Steve's runs," Landry said. "That's a pretty good percentage."

Landry said Tony Dorsett, who has been nursing a shoulder injury, would play against the Vikings, but Walker would again start.

CBS Hopes New Anchors Will Help Morning Show

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In a hotel suite overlooking Central Park where they are meeting the nation's television critics, "CBS This Morning" anchors Kathleen Sullivan and Harry Smith and producer David Corvo are getting a little silly.

They are tired, but also positively giddy with enthusiasm. They represent a new day for CBS News, which took a punch to the belly in 1986 when it lost the 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. EST time period to a non-news division replacement, "The Morning Program."

But after 10 months of miserable ratings, "The Morning Program" was canceled. When "CBS This Morning" premieres Monday, the 7 a.m. to 9 a.m. EST time period will be back under the news division's wing officially.

So how will Sullivan and Smith do what no CBS team — including Bill Kurtis and Diane Sawyer — could do before: compete in the ratings against NBC's "Today" and ABC's "Good Morning America?"

"What's different about this show is their personalities," says Corvo. "The collective personality of the broadcast is primarily the anchors, supplemented and supported by the rest of the group, both on air and off."

"We're not trying to come in and invent a new form of television in the morning. I think that viewership has shown that they're interested in information, and we happen to work for the best information and broadcast group in the history of the world, so we think that's something we can do."

The success of the broadcast hinges largely on that nebulous quality "chemistry" between the co-anchors.

Sullivan, casual and outgoing, sets off Smith's button-down image. They already seem relaxed, finishing each other's sentences, Smith often cracking Sullivan up.

Sullivan leaped into the public consciousness in 1984 when she became the first woman to anchor American television coverage of the Olympics at the winter games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia. She then became morning news anchor on "Good Morning America" and was frequent guest co-anchor.

Smith, a former talk-show host on public television in Denver, joined CBS in 1986 and was named correspondent earlier this year. His wife, Andrea Joyce, is a sports anchor and reporter for WFAA-TV in Dallas.

Mark McEwen, the weatherman on "The Morning Program" is staying, as is Dr. Robert Arnot, a regular contributor of health features on "The Morning Program." Jim Lamley, sports director for KCBS-TV in Los Angeles, will be sports anchor, and CBS and National Public Radio's Robert Krulwich will report on business and economics.

Faith Daniels and Charles Osgood will co-anchor the "CBS Morning News," which continues in the 6-7 a.m. EST time period, and the newsmagazine during "CBS This Morning."

Corvo, who has been executive editor of "CBS Morning News" and "CBS Early Morning News" since 1985, said the staff was cut in half when the news division lost the morning time period in 1986. Dramatic budget cuts followed, laying waste to the morale of the news division.

The division is on a high since it got the morning show back. CBS is also adding a new prime-time news show, "48 Hours," in January.

Sullivan said even an impromptu staff meeting turned into a virtual pep rally.

"I've been at New Year's Eve parties that weren't half as jubilant and as celebratory as that," she said.

"Somebody said, why are we going on the air so soon?" said Smith, "and I said, you know, we can't hold people back."

In other TV news: TUNE IN TRACEY, SEE BIG STARS — Despite its high-quality, low-key humor, "The Tracey Ullman Show" hasn't hit it big in the ratings. In an apparent try to get more viewers to sample the Fox Broadcasting Co. show, airing Sundays at 9 p.m. EST, the multitalented English actress is getting some heavy-duty guest stars. Last Sunday was Cheech Marin. Next Sunday is Steve Martin.

M-M-MISS M-M-MAX? — A group of dissatisfied viewers has begun a write-in campaign to bring back "Max Headroom," the computer-generated wiseguy whose innovative and critically praised show was canceled by ABC when it didn't score in the ratings. Viewers Appeal for Max, based in Hollywood, asks Max supporters to write ABC. The tactic worked for "Cagney & Lacey" and "Designing Women" when they faced cancellation by CBS.

THE MAN WHO WOULD BE A TV MOVIE — Production has begun in England on a CBS movie about King Edward VIII and Wallis Simpson, the divorced American woman for whom he gave up the crown. Jane Seymour is Mrs. Simpson and Anthony Andrews is Edward. No title has been selected and no air date set.

GETTING READY FOR GORBACHEV — "The Jennings-Koppel Report" on Dec. 6 will set the stage for the arrival the following day of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. ABC "World News Tonight" anchor Peter Jennings and "Nightline" host Ted Koppel will examine the status of cultural exchanges as well as the circumstances surrounding the summit between Gorbachev and President Reagan.

Stage Role Educates An Actress

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Eighteen months ago, Linda Basset could neither pronounce nor define the word "arbitrageur."

Since then, she has become one — on-stage, at least — in an acclaimed performance that has brought her to New York's Public Theater for the third time in Caryl Churchill's play, "Serious Money." Now in previews, it opens next month.

"I had no idea how to say it," the 37-year-old actress recalled in an interview prior to one of her last performances in the play at London's Wyndham's Theater.

Now she not only says the word, she understands that an arbitrageur is a person who buys stocks in one market to sell them at a profit in another. It's part of the jargon of London's financial world, where "Serious Money" is set and in which Churchill's rhymed script is steeped. Backstage, the soft-spoken, down-to-earth Basset seems the alter ego of her arbitrageur, the ruthless American, Marylou Baines.

A woman whose forthright demeanor masks a heart of steel, Marylou is the venal vortex of Churchill's kaleidoscopic tapestry. The author of the off-Broadway hits "Cloud Nine," "Top Girls" and "Fen," the playwright here takes a satiric cudgel to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's deregulated Britain. With eight actors as 20 players (and victims) in the high-stakes, economic game, the play also casts Basset as a posh British stockbroker, Mrs. Etherington, and as a public-relations consultant, Dolcie Starr.

Basset likes none of her characters but admits they are rewarding to play.

"As Caryl has said, I acknowledge that they're attractive, but I would differentiate between attractiveness and admiration," said the British actress. "Etherington is old money, hypocritical, smug. Marylou takes (an) ... old line and says, 'Greed is great.' But she's just as smug."

"It's the smugness they have in common, and the complete inability to see anything the matter with what they're doing."

Basset will return to England following her stint off-Broadway to star at the National Theater in "A Place With the Pigs," by South African playwright Athol Fugard.

Critics have responded well to Basset's acting. Michael Coveney in The Financial Times called her "an actress who never ceases to astonish me."

On film, she has elicited a similar response.

Her performance in "Waiting for the Moon," in which she played Gertrude Stein to Linda Hunt's Alice B. Toklas, prompted John Leonard in New York Magazine to call her a "revelation" when the film was aired on Public Television in June.

New Yorkers have seen Basset at the Public twice before in other plays which premiered at London's fringe Royal Court Theater before finding prolonged life elsewhere.

In Churchill's 1982 "Fen," she played a quartet of characters beaten down by life in the marshy English fens. Three years later, she was the mother of a sickly fascist in Wallace Shawn's "Aunt Dan and Lemon."

Under The Weather

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor James Woods, whose intense portrayal of a photojournalist in the movie "Salvador" earned him an Oscar nomination, is recovering from pneumonia, his spokeswoman says.

Woods was hospitalized for a week before being released last weekend, publicist Andrea Jaffe said Tuesday. Work on his film, "The Boost," has been halted for at least two weeks but resumes Monday.

"The Boost" co-stars actress Sean Young as Woods' wife. Woods plays a New York hustler and tax-shelter salesman who burns out and turns to drugs.

King Surgery Set

NEW YORK (AP) — Radio and television talk show host Larry King undergoes heart bypass surgery next week at New York Hospital, his attorney said.

"Larry has decided to have this surgery now, rather than later, as a preventive measure," said attorney Bob Woolf.

Woolf said King expected to resume his normal schedule on Cable News Network and the Mutual radio network within four to six weeks.

CNN said Rona Barrett would take over the nightly King show temporarily beginning Monday.

Davis Operation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. will undergo surgery next month to restore a hip reconstructed two years ago, a spokesman said.

The 62-year-old actor-singer-dancer will return to Cedars Sinai Medical Center, where he will be evaluated for a possible hip implant, spokesman Arnold Lipsman said Tuesday.

Davis, who just finished an appearance at Bally's Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev., underwent reconstructive hip surgery at the hospital in November 1985 after injuring his hip while filming a television version of "Alice in Wonderland."

Pageant Chief Quits

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The man who fired Bert Parks and weathered the scandal of a nude Miss America says he has ended his 35 years as head of the Miss America Pageant.

Albert A. Marks Jr. handed over his duties and title as chief executive officer Tuesday to the pageant's legal counsel, Leonard C. Horn, who has been associated with the show for 25 years.

Marks, a 74-year-old stockbroker, said he decided to give up joint responsibility after "some soul searching" following the Oct. 19 stock market crash. "I decided you can't have split authority," he said.

Marks was the man who replaced Parks first with actor Ron Ely and then with the current host, Gary Collins. He also handled reporters when nude photos of Miss America Vanessa Williams appeared in a men's magazine.

"Cameras shrink us so Grandma can carry us around in her wallet."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Nov. 26

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Someone may be pressuring you to keep a promise, but it's not imperative that you immediately do so. Wait until you have the time.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't become involved in an altercation between a superior and an associate, and don't let it disrupt your schedule or peace of mind.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You've noticed an opportunity for advancement, but have not acted on it as yet. Now is the time to seize the bull by the horns.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Forget that recreational activity you have in mind. Now is the time to make some definite plans for advancement in business.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): A family friend and a new business associate may get into an argument, but don't assume that it's your duty to be the peacemaker.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Tread lightly at home today. A volatile situation there could erupt in your face unless you control your temper and use tact and wisdom.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Don't argue with a friend over money. There's a good chance that the disagreement is a result of a misunderstanding between you.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Don't rely on your preconceived opinions about a close family friend. You may be totally wrong about this person's intentions.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Think along more modern lines and you can make much better progress. Be sure that you drive with the utmost care this evening.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't allow a friend to distract you and waste some valuable time. Keep your nose to the grindstone and your shoulder to the wheel.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't give in to any unreasonable demands which might be made of you. Show some extra affection to your loved ones tonight.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Keep busy at that home-improvement activity you've been working on. Going off on crazy tangents would be unfortunate today.

Male bridge players tend to look down on competitors of the opposite sex. At the recent World Championships in Ocho Rios, Jamaica, however, our vote for the best-played hand would have gone to Luciana Capodanno of Italy for this effort.

South's takeout double is typical of the Italian style, where all hands of opening bid strength compete with a double, regardless of shape. The result was a rather ambitious four-spade contract, and the expert commentators forecast a one-trick set. They were proved wrong.

Declarer won the opening lead, cashed her remaining high diamond and ruffed a diamond in dummy. The king of spades was taken by East's ace, and the trump return was won by the table's ten. Reading the hand perfectly, declarer now led a low club from the board, taken by

East's jack. East did as well as she could by reverting to a diamond, which declarer ruffed in hand and drew another trump to bring about this position:

 When declarer led her last trump, West had to hold all her hearts, so she discarded a club. Declarer then crossed to the ace of clubs and ran the jack of hearts to West's queen, to complete an end play. West's forced heart return allowed declarer to hold her losses to one trump, one heart and one club.

Survey Says Home Equity Ads Skimp On Details

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of home equity loan advertisements by a consumer group showed Tuesday that most ads did not disclose important information about fees, interest rates and repayment terms.

Consumers Union, the non-profit publisher of Consumer Reports, released the survey of ads by 20 financial institutions as Congress considers legislation that would require lenders to disclose terms of home equity lines of credit.

The American Bankers Association, the chief trade group for commercial banks, has said it would support some disclosure requirements but urged Congress to give voluntary industry efforts a chance to work.

However, Consumers Union said: —80 percent of the ads surveyed failed to include information about closing costs such as fees for title examination, appraisal and recording. Ninety percent failed to say whether or not there was an annual maintenance or membership fee.

—65 percent did not say whether the loans had an interest rate cap or what the cap was, if present. Thirty-five percent failed to disclose the formula for calculating the interest rate and 40 percent lacked an understandable disclosure of how often the interest rate will change.

—60 percent did not describe repayment terms, including whether or not a balloon repayment would be required at the end of the loan term.

—One in four ads promoted the tax deductibility of home equity loans without explaining restrictions. Homeowners cannot deduct interest on loans greater than the original purchase price of the home, plus the value of improvements, unless the loan is for home improvements, medical expenses or education.

The popularity of revolving equity lines, secured by a second mortgage on the borrower's home, have mushroomed since the 1986 tax law began phasing out the deductibility of other forms of consumer borrowing.

Consumer advocates have warned that such loans are 'dangerous,' attracting applicants through low initial "teaser rates" and subjecting the borrowers to the danger of losing their homes.

The concern prompted the bankers association in January to suggest a series of guidelines for home equity line advertisements.

But, according to Michelle Meier, a Consumer's Union attorney, the ads in the survey "don't even live up to the bankers' own standards for what an honest ad should tell consumers about home equity loans. ... Not a single ad fully complies with the trade association's guidelines." Mary-Liz Meany, a spokeswoman for the bankers association, said the guidelines were intended as a suggested checklist, not a requirement for inclusion of each and every item.

"Such a requirement would be unreasonable given the space limitations of print advertisements," she said. If all the points on the check list were included in an ad, "it would look like a novel" and discourage consumers from reading it, she said.

Consumers Union looked at advertisements placed by 20 financial institutions in major newspapers in four cities: New York, Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Two midweek and the Sunday editions of each newspaper were examined during the six weeks between Oct. 1 and Nov. 10.

Fifteen of the institutions were banks and four were savings and loan institutions. American Express, a diversified financial services company, placed one of the ads.

BIW Fights OSHA Citations, Fine

By GLENN ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
BATH, Maine (AP) — Bath Iron Works officials said Tuesday they are contesting a proposed $4.2 million fine for more than 3,000 federal health and safety citations, though they confirmed that some violations occurred.

The shipbuilder will contest the fine, which has been recommended by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, before a federal administrative judge, BIW Chairman William E. Haggett said.

Haggett said BIW met with OSHA officials in Augusta on Monday to seek a reduction in the number of violations, downgrade the degree of some and reduce the fines for others. Representatives of Local 6 of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, BIW's largest union, also attended the session.

OSHA Area Director William O. Masters said that BIW did not present specific proposals, making it impossible for him to make any changes.

The fine is the most severe penalty ever proposed by OSHA.

BIW spokesman Jim McGregor said 80 percent of the violations cited by OSHA have been corrected or resolved.

Haggett claims that BIW, Maine's largest private employer, was singled out by OSHA to set an example for industry. He said each citation will be contested on grounds that the fine is excessive, facts are misrepresented or that the violation is classified in too serious a category.

Fines totaling $3.8 million were proposed for safety violations classified as willful, the most serious categories, while fines totalling $344,000 were proposed for health violations in the same category.

Some citations were duplicated and others are barred by the statute of limitations, Haggett contended.

Masters said the citations were based on "extensive reviews, signed statements and historical data," adding that BIW has "a history with us that goes back quite a ways."

Parolee A Glutton For Punishment

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A man released from prison on parole last year has confessed to robbing five banks since then because he missed prison life and found life outside too stressful, his attorney says.

"I believe that was the primary motivation for these crimes," Kenneth Lerner said of his client, Robert I. Knapp. "He just wants a place where he can live out his life."

Knapp turned himself in to FBI agents in Portland in late August.

Knapp, 59, was released from the Oregon State Penitentiary in Salem last year, pleaded guilty Monday to five bank robberies in Oregon, Washington and Arizona. The robberies occurred in July and August and involved the theft of about $7,000 total.

Knapp had been convicted in 1979 of three counts of second-degree robbery and was on parole at the time of the recent robberies, said Robey Eldridge, spokesman for the Oregon Corrections Division.
