Killer Typhoon Rakes Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Typhoon Nina lashed across the Philippines today with 127-mph winds and heavy rains, sweeping away shanties and knocking down telephone and power lines. Officials said more than 200 people were killed.

Philippine Red Cross and civil defense officials said thousands more were rendered homeless. But final, overall figures were not expected for several days because the storm knocked out communications to remote provinces, the most seriously affected areas.

Social Services and civil defense officials placed the preliminary death toll at 234, most of them in Sorsogon province in the southeastern part of the main Luzon island. Sorsogon province bore the brunt of the storm, which came ashore about midnight Wednesday.

The typhoon then roared across southern provinces of Luzon and smaller islands to the south, uprooting trees and sweeping away thousands of homes before heading into the South China Sea.

Sorsogon radio station DZGM initially transmitted a report quoting local authorities as saying at least 1,600 people were confirmed dead and that hundreds more were missing in the province. Station manager Rev. Gerald de Mesa later told The Associated Press by radio that the figure was erroneous but that the death toll stood at about 200.

He said local authorities confused figures of missing and dead in giving the erroneous report and that many of the missing had been accounted for.

The government civil defense office put the death toll in Sorsogon at 206. Government agencies said 11 more were killed in neighboring Albay province, five in Masbate province, one in Marinduque, and a total of 11 in four provinces of southern Luzon.

Most of the victims in Sorsogon lived in coastal shanties that were swept away when huge waves began lashing the beaches Wednesday night, de Mesa said. He said the storm damaged or destroyed about 90 percent of the buildings in the province.

Nicholas Bayalo of the Philippines Red Cross said initial reports indicated that Nina was considerably more destructive than a typhoon which swept across the same area last August.

Celebrants Remember Hostages

By MICHAEL HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

Americans offered thanks today as they prepared to gorge on turkey-and-stuffing Thanksgiving feasts, gawk at giant balloons parading city streets and, soberly, remember the homeless, the helpless and hostages old and new.

For Francois Kissel, Thanksgiving Day meant inviting 3,000 homeless residents to his Seattle restaurant, the Brasserie Pavilion, which is about to shut down.

A group of volunteers spent all night cooking a half-ton of turkeys donated by Domino's Pizza to lay on a sumptuous meal complemented by 50 gallons of ice cream.

"I guess he's French and he's a real good cook and he's showing us some techniques," said Stephan Davis, an official with Strand Helpers, the homeless organization that organized the meal.

But as surely as turkey precedes pumpkin pie on Thanksgiving Day, parades come before the turkey, and about 80 million television viewers and spectators were expected to view the biggest of them all, in The Big Apple.

Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, which faced the threat of rain, featured the Spiderman balloon, who "does whatever a spider can"; Garfield, that cynical cat; and Baby Shamu, a 62-by-38-foot killer whale.

Scheduled to head the procession of

Negotiations Continue

Bragg Army Unit Supports Security Forces At Prison

By MARC RICE

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal authorities bolstered by military special forces professed willingness to wait out the revolt of Cuban inmates here and in Louisiana and today considered seven proposals written by the prisoners holding 122 hostages.

Facing a worry-filled Thanksgiving Day, relatives of the prisoners and the hostages gathered outside the stone prison, where tents were set up for a holiday meal.

Salvation Army worker Martha Mothershed said 300 dinners would be served to people waiting news from inside the prison, which 1,500 Cuban inmates fearing deportation took over Monday.

"There is no progress," Kathryn Morse, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, said this morning. "Negotiations are still off and on. We've been dealing with 12 different groups (of inmates)."

Lawyer Dale Schwartz earlier said negotiations were continous. He had asked authorities in the U.S. Penitentiary to relay an offer by the American Immigration Lawyers Association of free counsel for inmates if the crisis ends peacefully.

In Oakdale, La., inmates who have controlled a federal detention center since Saturday night resumed talks late Wednesday with federal negotiators for the first time in 24 hours, said Justice Department spokesman Mark Sheehan.

"We are reasonably confident that the four spokesmen we are talking to represent a majority," he said.

Lenoir Area Evacuated After Wreck

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — As many as 200 Lenoir County residents were evacuated from their homes early today after three cars collided with a tractor-trailer that was carrying methanol, authorities said.

The accident occurred shortly after 11 p.m. Wednesday four miles south of Kinston on N.C. 11. Troopers with the North Carolina Highway Patrol said one car was trying to pass two other cars, and all three vehicles rain into the tractor-trailer, which was travelling in the opposite direction.

The tractor-trailer skidded 427 feet after the collision, including about 200 feet while it was on its side, troopers said. Officials blocked off the highway for about two miles in each direction, and were trying to upright the rig at about 5 a.m. so the road could be reopened.

The tractor-trailer was carrying about 7,000 gallons of methanol, a colorless, poisonous liquid that is highly flammable. Firefighters, concerned about a possible fire, sprayed foam on the rig. No fire was reported.

Five people — the drivers of or passengers in the three cars — were treated and released from Lenoir Memorial Hospital for scrapes and bruises, officials said. One firefighter was treated at the hospital after he complained that he was having trouble breathing.

The driver of one of the cars, Ian Artis of Camp Lejeune, was charged with driving while impaired and driving left-of-center, authorities said.

Turkey Day Fares Limited But Holiday Fetes Available

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Does anyone eat barbecue or Chinese food on Thanksgiving? Not many, at least not in Greenville area restaurants, because most restaurants of all types are closed for Thanksgiving.

"That's one of the few days a year our employees — and our managers — get a holiday," a manager at Smithfield Barbecue said.

Telephone answerers at both Chinatown Express and Szechuan Garden said Wednesday they were planning to be closed, too — Chinatown for the whole weekend beginning today, Szechuan today and Friday.

Joann Shumate at Shoney's is not vacationing on Thanksgiving, however. "Come on out. We're offering a feast," Ms. Shumate said. She said for $5.59 for adults and $2.99 for children under 12, an all-you-care-to-eat meal of turkey, trimmings, vegetables, fruits and pumpkin pie with creamy topping was being offered on a buffet. Lines began forming at 11 a.m.

And the Colonial Inn in Farmville was serving a Thanksgiving smorgasbord already bargained for by everyone who dined there today. Reservations were completely filled by Wednesday, owner-manager David Whitley said.

For people who didn't care to eat out, yet didn't want to cook but wanted a sumptuous Thanksgiving meal, there was a take-out plan that several supermarkets have instigated in the past few years. At both Overton's and Farm Fresh, one could buy family-sized turkey or ham dinners with all the trimmings. According to Annette Bynum, head cook at Overton's, a $29.95 turkey with mashed potatoes, green beans, stuffing, gravy, cranberry sauce, bread, and pumpkin, sweet potato or quince pie was enough to serve eight to 10 people, she said. The ham meal had the same trimming as the turkey.

A few Pitt Countians may have

ECU Geographer Seeking Names Of Tar Heel Places From The Past

By GEORGE A. THREEWITTS
ECU News Bureau

Names of little known places in North Carolina, not found on today's maps, are being sought by a geographer at East Carolina University in a research project for the U.S. Geological Survey.

Dr. Richard A. Stephenson, a geography and planning professor at ECU, is doing the study in which he hopes to pinpoint the exact location of thousands of old and forgotten places — towns, crossroads, streams, hills or islands. It doesn't matter as long as the place had a name at some time in history.

"Kendrick's Mount and Pain Fort are a couple of examples," said Stephenson, who also directs the newly established Office of Geographic Names in the ECU Department of Geography and Planning.

Both of these places were on the North Carolina coast and were well known at one time. Today they don't exist.

Kendrick's Mount or Cape Kendrick was a point off the North Carolina coast 16 miles out to sea. It has eroded away since the middle of the 18th century and today is covered by ocean. Pain Fort was noted on 18th century maps as well. This fort was on the north end of Roanoke Island but today it doesn't exist either.

"We're going to get the latitude and longitude of these places and make a complete file. It will be a computer listing for the Gazetteer of the U.S. Geological Survey," Stephenson said.

He said that as many as 40,000 of these places exist in North Carolina. Their exact longitude and latitute positions were never recorded.

A $105,000 grant from the U.S. Geological Survey is supporting the project.

"It is important that a single, unbiased, standardized system for geographic names be available for research and for general use," Stephenson said.

Stephenson said that work has already begun in finding names of places in Dare County. He said he chose to study Dare County first because this is where North Carolina

Calendar

Scenes and dates from East Carolina's history appear on the "1988 ECU Historical Calendar," a recent publication of the Friends of the ECU Library.

Photographs used to illustrate the calendar's cover and 12 pages depict the two-acre lake formerly located on the southeast part of campus, "Old Austin" Building, a 1956 Maypole dance, the 1917 girl's basketball team, clad in uniform berets and middy blouses, an interior view of the library when it was housed in what is now Whichard Building and other scenes.

Each month lists significant events in the institution's history.

The calendars are available for purchase at the Archives and Manuscripts area, 115 Joyner Library. They are also available by mail from Friends of the ECU Library, c/o Archives and Manuscripts, Joyner Library, ECU, Greenville, N. C 27858.

Man Killed

A dispute Wednesday at 1709 W. Conley St. ended in the death of a 25-year-old Greenville man, Greenville police said today.

The name of the dead man was withheld pending notification of next of kin.

A news release issued by Capt. Nelson Staton and Detective John E. Nichols said the man was reportedly being detained at that address by one or more persons when someone reported the fight in progress at 9:23 p.m.

Police said the cause of death had not been determined and that an autopsy will be performed.

The Greenville Athletic Club and the Marine Corps Reserves will sponsor a "Toys For Tots" program for Pitt County children on Friday.

The campaign will include "Cardiac Arrest" warrants issued for a fee. Those arrested will have their "bail" determined by their blood pressure. The bail may be paid by obtaining pledges of toys or cash while incarcerated.

The GAC is the official drop off location for new toy donations to Toys for Tots.

Two Former Players Enter Guilty Pleas

Two former East Carolina University basketball players, John Aaron Williams, 20, of Atlantic City, N.J., and Howard Elliot Brown, 22, of New York, pleaded guilty in Pitt County Superior Court Wednesday to two charges each of breaking and entering.

Brown, in addition, pleaded no contest to a charge of felonious possesion of stolen property.

The two were involved in the December 1986 break-ins at ECU residence halls in which almost $6,000 in property was stolen.

Other charges against Brown and Williams were dropped as part of a plea agreement. Both had been charged with five counts of felonious breaking and entering.

Charges are pending against two other former ECU basketball players, Theodore "Blue" Edwards of Walstonburg and Tracy Clayton King of Hampton, Va. Edwards was charged with three counts of breaking and entering, while King was charged with four counts.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Day For Sharing

The American tradition of Thanksgiving was born of hunger and deprivation. It was born of hopes that an autumn harvest would nourish and provide sustenance for a harsh winter.

The tradition was also born of fellowship and of the need to gather together in peace and share the bounty. To the colonial Pilgrims who initiated feasting to mark harvest's end, the holiday was a time to forget about the hardship and heartaches of life on the brink. Today, that spirit remains, but the nation's heritage of abundance makes it much less piercing.

Most Pitt Countians who sat down today for their Thanksgiving feast didn't have to worry about living on the brink. Starvation and disease are far-removed from their realm. For most, it was yet another joyful family holiday. The biggest worry was indigestion or "Are you sure we have enough dressing?"

Yet there are those people that continue to exist on the edge of society. Although they are less visible here, our community has its share of disadvantaged, homeless, shut-ins, sick, poor and lonely. You can bet the pain of these conditions wasn't eased today any by the knowledge that others were enjoying fellowship, food and leisure.

Many churches and community groups make efforts to assist the less fortunate at Thanksgiving. Many individuals generously share their abundance with needy in the community. These efforts should be recognized for their humanity and encouraged to continue throughout the year. It is keeping with the best in the human spirit to provide where need is seen.

In addition to the bounty that most people enjoyed today, Pitt Countians should be thankful for the community's ability to care for those bestruck by tragedy. The Pitt County United Way, for example, raised an ambitious $1.36 million in 1987 — the largest goal ever for the organization. In Greenville, plans are under way for a night shelter for the homeless, a safe, warm place for street people and the poor to sleep.

So in 1987, as it did three centuries before, Thanksgiving should also prompt hopes for nourishment through an upcoming winter. The community should give thanks for its bounty and its capacity to produce this goodness. It should also give thanks for the ability to share this abundance.

Reagan: 'SDI Will Not Be Traded Away'

WATERTON, Colo. — President Reagan celebrated recent scientific advances in his anti-missile Strategic Defense Initiative program Tuesday and vowed "it will not be traded away" in forthcoming talks on reducing strategic weapons with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan did not explicitly rule out a possible delay in future deployment of the space-based missile defense system as part of an agreement with Gorbachev on reducing strategic arms.

However, Reagan sprinkled a speech to Martin Marietta Corp. workers here with promises that the project would not be stopped by the Soviets. "You're not working to build a bargaining chip," he said to enthusiastic applause. "It will not be traded away."

The president repeatedly criticized Soviet and congressional attempts to limit the missile shield program. "Let there be no doubt, giving up the Strategic Defense Initiative and the protection it will provide is too high a price for any agreement" with Gorbachev, he said. While the Soviets are waging a "propaganda campaign" against SDI, Reagan said, "We must not be lulled into reducing our commitment."

Responding to congressional budget cuts in the program, he said, "America cannot afford not to do everything necessary to develop this missile defense system and put it into operation."

'Reagan reiterated his contention that the missile defense program would succeed in protecting against nuclear attack, but he did not repeat earlier, more ambitious claims that SDI would make ballistic missiles obsolete.'

Reagan received a classified briefing here on the "Zenith Star" project, a feasibility study being conducted by Martin Marietta Astronautics to come up with a "road map" for a space-based laser experiment. The tour and the president's subsequent address are part of a White House effort to influence public opinion before the Gorbachev summit Dec. 8-10 in Washington.

Tuesday, Reagan reiterated his contention that the missile defense program would succeed in protecting against nuclear attack, but he did not repeat earlier, more ambitious claims that SDI would make ballistic missiles obsolete. "SDI is not a weapon of war, but an insurer, a protector of the peace," he said.

Navy Capt. John Dewey, a spokesman for the Pentagon's Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, said Tuesday that the Zenith Star tests are currently being developed to remain within the restrictive interpretation of the 1972 Antiballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty. Congress has insisted that the administration honor this interpretation, at least for the time being, although Reagan has asserted that a broader interpretation of the treaty is legally correct. Dewey said the tests could be altered later — and done at less expense under the broader interpretation — if so decided by the president.

Columnists Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta reported recently that the Zenith Star project was ordered by Reagan last December in an effort to accelerate the missile defense plan before he leaves office next year. The columnists said Reagan acknowledged at the time that the tests envisioned by Zenith Star could eventually breach the restrictive interpretation of the treaty but that he ordered it to go ahead anyway. SDI spokesman Dewey denied that the Zenith Star project was an effort to acceierate the missile defense effort.

Reagan Tuesday renewed his charge that the Soviets have violated the ABM treaty by constructing the Krasnoyarsk radar. As for the U.S. program, commonly called "Star Wars," he said only, "It is totally within the limits of the ABM treaty."

In remarks just before Reagan's address, Frederick Seitz, president emeritus of Rockefeller University, severely criticized any restrictions on SDI testing. "Early in the 1990s," Seitz said, "the Soviets should have it all together, ready to break out of the treaty if and when they wish. It will be their gain."

Restrictions on the U.S. program "are the death knell of SDI," he added, and "could deliver us into the hands of the potential enemy."

For all his rhetoric insisting that the program will not be stopped, Reagan has not ruled out the possibility of delaying deployment as part of a deal for deep cuts in strategic arsenals. Asked Tuesday if he would be willing to accept such a delay by agreeing to a longer period of compliance with the ABM treaty, Reagan responded:

"I'm not going to discuss that right now about SDI. But as I've said before, I'll just answer it with this: SDI is not a bargaining chip."

Reagan stopped here en route to a Thanksgiving vacation at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., where he will be preparing for the summit. In addition to briefing papers, Reagan will be screening a 20-minute film on Gorbachev's policies put together by the National Security Council, according to White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The spokesman said Reagan has spent more time with Gorbachev "than any other world leader." Fitzwater added, "Certainly nobody in Washington knows Gorbachev as well as the president."

By The Book

Those outbursts of violence at federal detention centers where some of the dregs of Castro's society are being detained tell us a lot about that island country's regime. The prisoners would risk anything rather than return.

The great majority of the lunatic fringe and habitual criminals involved were freed by the Castro government to take advantage of an agreement reached almost a decade ago when the United States agreed to accept thousands of refugees. At that time our government expected it would be providing asylum to a waiting tide of politically oppressed refugees.

America got more than it wanted from among the thousands of Cubans who reached the Florida coast aboard a fleet of small boats which in time became known as the Mariel boatlift.

The nation might have smelled a rat when the process of embarking became a disorderly tangle which provided all kinds of concealment for mentally impaired and criminally-inclined people. Too, the Castro regime never did distinguish itself as one to be trusted.

In all, a total of 2,746 of the new arrivals to our shores were determined ineligible to enter the United States because of nonpolitical crimes or mental illness. Cuba eventually agreed to accept return of the illegal immigrants but only 201 of them had been returned before Cuba suspended the program.

Now another agreement is shaping up which permits return of the "illegals" and Washington's resumption of accepting applications for immigration to this country. The United States is said to have agreed to give priority status to 3,000 political prisoners as well as immediate relatives of U.S. citizens and another 20,000 Cubans could be admitted annually under normal immigration procedures.

Despite the new agreement, news reports say the two countries are far apart on many of the involved issues.

If the agreement is ever completed on reopening of immigration and return of the illegals is ever formalized, there must be no repetition of the disorder marking those hectic days and nights of the Mariel exodus.

It must be done "by the book".

The Public Owns The Airwaves

Yes, we do own the airwaves.

The public is the landlord and the broadcaster is the tenant. Broadcasters, who volunteered to serve as exclusive licensees, agree to the terms of the lease, which, besides free rent, include the duty to contribute to a well-informed citizenry, a citizenry that receives access to diverse sides of controversial issues. This duty exists regardless of the number of licensed stations.

The concept is simple enough. Anyone who can't accept these rules doesn't have to; after all, plenty of buyers are in the wings, willing to pay millions of dollars for a station.

Unfortunately, the Reagan Federal Communications Commission has turned its back on the notion that broadcasters must serve the public, in direct contradiction to the 1934 Communications Act, which requires broadcasters to serve the "public interest, convenience and necessity." Networks and local stations, especially in radio, have responded by cutting news staffs and abolishing public affairs programming. Some stations have cut locally originated programming altogether — in Vineland, N.J., for example, the only local TV station is a 24-hour home shopping network program.

Congress will shortly revisit the worst of the commission's deeds: the repeal of the fairness doctrine. For 40 years, the fairness doctrine required broadcasters to cover contrasting viewpoints regarding controversial issues of public importance, and to do so fairly. The FCC abolished it last August.

Congress should not underestimate the importance of the pending vote to reinstate the regulation. If it had any doubts, it should look at the behavior of some broadcasters in the four months since the FCC repealed the doctrine. We see that the only broadcaster in Jackson County, N.C., can use his station to promote a school bond referendum, ignoring the viewpoints of bond opponents. We see that a Florida labor group was unable even to buy issue ads responding to broadcasters' spots opposing the Florida advertising tax. From Maine to Louisiana, broadcasters have used the repeal of the doctrine as an excuse for ignoring the viewpoints of those with whom they don't agree, or those who cannot pay commercial rates but nonetheless have information the voting public has a right to hear.

What is more, without the fairness doctrine, broadcasters who endorse or oppose a candidate on the air are no longer required to inform other candidates of that fact, much less let them reply. Thus, a broadcaster can shower the airwaves with praise for his or her hand-picked choice for office, ignoring altogether the needs of the audience — the voters — to make informed choices among all the candidates.

Newspapers do not have similar obligations. Unlike the public airwaves, newspapers are privately owned. To start a newspaper, one doesn't require a license. Broadcasting is a more immediately persuasive medium than print. The beverage industry in the District of Columbia did not rely on ads in The Post to defeat the bottle bill — it went on the air. Clearly, the broadcast license — given to the lucky applicant selected by the government — can confer the power to determine the outcome of debate at the local level.

The genius of the fairness doctrine is that it promotes debate without interfering in the editorial process. Nothing in the fairness doctrine ever denies a broadcaster the right to say what he or she pleases. Rather, compliance is attained by carrying more, not less, discussion of issues. Indeed, in the handful of cases where a formal complaint is even considered on the merits — six or so per year — the FCC never contemplates more than a directive to provide more coverage. And even that remedy hasn't been used in years.

Not surprisingly, the public supports the fairness doctrine. A recent poll commissioned by Electronic Media magazine shows that the public — by almost a two-to-one margin — favors the protection the fairness doctrine provides. That support, the poll shows, crosses all income brackets and educational levels. Moreover, support for the fairness doctrine is truly bipartisan: its supporters include such diverse groups and individuals as General Motors and Common Cause, the National Rifle Association and the National Organization for Women, Phyllis Schlafly and Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass. Many broadcasters support the doctrine, including group station owner Westinghouse.

Why? Because they know that the public has a First Amendment right to the widest possible dissemination of information from diverse and antagonistic sources. And that right, the U.S. Supreme Court has said, unanimously, is "paramount."

Earlier this year, Congress overwhelmingly passed a bill that would codify the fairness doctrine, but President Reagan vetoed the legislation. This time it will be attached to a bill he will find more difficult to refuse. As Congress again debates the fairness doctrine, it should not have trouble understanding that those renting valuable public property for nothing have some modest limits on their power to exclude contrasting viewpoints.

Strength For Today

In most parts of the world aristocrats are people who for some reason do not need to work. They may have been born to high station. They may have plenty of income without working. In countries that place their primary emphasis on freedom, however, the people who really stand out as aristocrats are the ones who are willing and anxious to work. In the Western Hemisphere rich men frequently subject themselves to the discipline of a heavy schedule of work from youth to retirement.

Some of these men grow immensely wealthy. Most of them live in modest, well-kept homes and are not worried about the position they hold in this world or what people think of them. Most of us hold this to be aristocracy in its best sense. We like tasks and accomplishment.

Study Says Ultrasound Can Identify Fetuses Carrying Down's Syndrome

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Ultrasound tests can safely reveal fetuses with Down's syndrome by looking for two tell-tale signs of the common birth defect, according to a study published today.

Ultrasound is frequently used to check fetal development inside the mother's womb. However, said Dr. Beryl R. Benacerraf, "Down's syndrome has eluded ultrasound for many years."

Her study, based on her experience with ultrasound on more than 5,500 fetuses, suggests that doctors should look for signs of Down's syndrome when examining fetuses on ultrasound.

The signs of the syndrome can be distinguished during the second three months of pregnancy, which is early enough to end the pregnancy with an abortion. Children with Down's syndrome are mentally retarded and show retarded physical growth and a characteritic facial appearance.

Benacerraf, a Harvard Medical School radiologist, said physicians can accurately identify fetuses with Down's by looking for two signs: thighbones that are slightly shorter than usual and an extra roll of skin on the back of the neck.

Ultrasound uses sound waves to produce a picture of fetal growth. The test is frequently done to measure the size of the fetus, determine its rate of development and detect twins, among other things.

The latest research suggests that if doctors find the Down's signs on ultrasound, then the mothers should undergo amniocentesis, the test that is the main way of determining Down's syndrome. Ultrasound is performed far more often than amniocentesis but carries no known risks to the fetus.

Benacerraf calculated that ultrasound can identify 82 percent of fetuses with Down's syndrome, and only 2 percent of normal fetuses would be subjected to amniocentesis because they were misidentified.

"I would never, ever say that ultrasound would be sufficient to make that diagnosis" by itself, she said in an interview. "I would simply use ultrasound to identify women who are not currently candidates for amniocentesis to have it."

Down's syndrome affects about 1 or 2 of every 100 babies. However, the risk of producing a baby with the syndrome increases as women get older.

FDA OKs Testing Of AIDS Vaccine

WASHINGTON (AP) — A University of Washington researcher is setting up clinical trials for a second experimental AIDS vaccine newly approved for human testing.

The Food and Drug Administration announced Wednesday that it has given the go-ahead for first-stage human testing of a new vaccine developed with biotechnology techniques by Bristol-Myers Co. of New York.

It is made from vaccinia virus — the virus from which smallpox vaccine has been manufactured. Genes from the surface, or protein envelope, of the AIDS virus are injected into the vaccinia virus using recombinant DNA techniques.

The proteins themselves are not infectious but researchers believe they may stimulate the body to produce antibodies that may be effective against AIDS infection.

In a statement announcing approval for the tests, FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young called the new experimental vaccine "a major step in recombinant vaccine development."

But he emphasized that it is in the earliest phase of clinical testing and cautioned that "even the most optimistic experts predict that an AIDS vaccine will not be in general use until well into the 1990s."

The new studies will be carried out at the Pacific Medical Center under the direction of Dr. Lawrence Corey, director of the virology division at the University of Washington School of Medicine.

The vaccine will be tested in 30 to 60 healthy homosexual volunteers who are not infected with the AIDS virus. A control group will receive smallpox vaccine.

The first potential AIDS vaccine approved for human testing was developed by Microgenesys Inc. of West Haven, Conn. Approved for testing on Aug. 18, it is cultured from an insect cell.

Those trials are being conducted near Washington, D.C., by a branch of the National Institutes of Health.

Approximately 100 different studies are under way, with FDA sanction, on a variety of drug therapies aimed at either treating AIDS or developing a vaccine to prevent infection.

That includes preliminary work on more than a dozen potential vaccines, but only two of them are far enough along to have progressed past the test tube or animal testing stage.

Martin Says Lawmakers Have Usurped His Power To Make Appointments Of Judges

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — After a state official ruled that his appointment of a Republican to replace a Democrat as a special Superior Court judge is not valid, Martin said state lawmakers appeared to have usurped the gubernatorial power to make judicial appointments.

"In effect, what the Legislature did was not just extend terms but also assign individuals to serve those terms," Martin said Wednesday. "We don't see any provision in the Constitution giving the Legislature the authority to appoint people to judgeships."

Franklin Freeman, executive director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, said Wednesday that Martin's appointment ran counter to a law enacted this year. Freeman said his interpretation of a measure passed by the Democrat-controlled Legislature was that it extended the term of Judge Lamar Gudger of Asheville through Dec. 31, 1988.

"Should he see fit to continue in office accordingly, I have left him on the payroll," Freeman said in a telephone interview. He said he had conferred with Jim Exum, chief justice of the state Supreme Court, who "has concurred in my administrative action."

Following Freeman's ruling, Martin told Jim Trotter, his senior legal counsel, to review the case and consider further legal action, said Tim Pittman, Martin's press secretary. Pittman said no decision would likely be made until next week.

Martin announced Tuesday he had appointed Raleigh lawyer Jack B. Crawley Jr., a Republican, to a special judgeship. Martin's special counsel, Jim Trotter, said Crawley would succeed Gudger, whose term had expired.

Freeman, however, said that under his ruling, Crawley "is not on the payroll, is not subject to assignment by the chief justice and cannot hold court."

The governor said he had spoken with Gudger before the legislation was approved and had told him he would let him serve until he became vested in the retirement system.

Over Martin's protests, the Legislature approved the bill this year to eliminate 10 special Superior Court judgeships, eight in 1988 and two in 1990. Those judges are appointed by the governor and hold court wherever assigned by the chief justice.

Other Superior Court judges are elected.

Gudger, whose term would have expired in June, won an 18-month extension under an amendment secured by his friend, Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe.

The section in question provided "that if any special Superior Court judge who is holding office on June 30, 1987, ... will have three years of such service on or before Dec. 1, 1987, if continued in office, the term of office of that judge is extended through Dec. 31, 1988."

Trotter told The News and Observer of Raleigh that Gudger's term technically had expired June 30 but was held over "until his successor was duly appointed and qualified." That happened Monday when Crawley was sworn into office, Trotter said.

White Jury Convicts Supremacist

WILMINGTON (AP) — A white supremacist defended his actons following his conviction on charges of failing to appear at an April conspiracy trial after an all-white jury rejected claims that he had stayed away because White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller had threatened him.

"If George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Patrick Henry were alive today, it's likely they'd be co-defendants with me and in jail with me," Robert Eugene Jackson Jr., said Wednesday.

Jackson, a 26-year-old Oklahoma construction worker and supporter of the disbanded WPP, never disputed that he did not show up for his trial in April. Defense attorneys said Jackson had intended to appear at the Elizabeth City trial until Miller threatened to harm him and his family if he testified.

In April, Jackson was convicted in absentia of conspiracy to obtain military weapons. That case is being appealed.

Miller, however, testifying for the government, said this week that he never threatened Jackson or co-defendant Douglas Sheets, and that both willingly accompanied him last April on a month-long journey through the South during which they stockpiled weapons and Miller publicized a declaration of war against the federal government.

After the verdict, Jackson told The Wilmington Star News that Miller had bowed to the federal government to receive immunity to prosecution and now is obligated to say whatever the federal government tells him to say.

"He's just a weak man," Jackson said in a telephone interview.

Jackson said he expects the federal government to ask him to testify against other white supremicists but he vowed he would never do that. "They realize I can't be threatened, intimidated or bribed," he said.

Jackson, Miller and Sheets were arrested April 30 after an informant led federal agents to a mobile home park in Springfield, Mo. In a mobile home, where the men were living, agents confiscated an arsenal of weapons and explosives.

Miller agreed to become a government witness in exchange for a prosecution agreement to reduce charges against him and recommend that he receive no more than a five-year prison term. Miller was also granted immunity from prosectution for any other crimes he may have committed in other states.

"Obviously, we're quite pleased," said Michael Williams, a prosecutor with the U.S. Department of Justice.

UNC Spreads Word On Admissions Rules

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina system officials have intensified efforts to ensure junior high and high-school students are aware of tougher, system-wide admission requirements, some of which take effect next fall.

The UNC Board of Governors has approved an eight-point plan to help get the message out. The proposals are part of UNC's five-year plan, which was passed by the board earlier this month.

"The effort has been very flat out for a long time," Wyndham Robertson, UNC vice president for communications, said in an interview. "But all these things are stepped up efforts."

One of the most significant is a conference next spring between officials from UNC, the state Department of Public Instruction and the Department of Community Colleges to discuss ways to improve educational preparation of students prior to and during high school.

"I don't think we have sat with all these groups and talked about this specific problem of educational outcomes," said Lloyd Hackley, UNC vice president for student services and special programs. "This problem cannot be dealt with by any of these elements acting independently."

The groups, hosted by UNC President C.D. Spangler, will also discuss ways to increase awareness of the new admissions standards.

In addition, beginning next fall, UNC's 16 campuses will collect information on each student applicant to determine who is and isn't meeting the standards.

Reports then will be sent to officials at each high school in the state, showing how many of their students had the courses they needed.

Volunteer Restores Courthouse Clock

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The hands of time are again turning atop the old New Hanover County Courthouse, thanks to the hands of Roger Clark.

Last week, Clark, whose regular job is as an electronics technician with the National Weather Service in Wilmington, pulled the lever that reactivated the tower clock after a four-year hiatus. Three loud clangs of the big brass bell a floor below alerted those within earshot that the old clock was telling time.

Clark had the honor of starting up the four-faced clock because he made it work. In his spare time and without charging a dime for his services, Clark reworked the electrically driven mechanism. It took more than a month, and the job wasn't completed until shortly before the clock was set to strike.

Tinkering with mechanical objects has always held a certain fascination for Clark. "I've always had a knack for anything mechanical," he said.

He had a small clock shop for a while but closed it about 10 years ago because it was taking too much of his time. But the old courthouse clock was a tempting prospect.

"I've never worked on a clock this size before," Clark said. "I've always wanted to get in here and see what this clock was like."

On a whim, he called the county and offered to do the work for free, "just for the experience and just so I could say I did it."

"I guess no one could beat the price," he said.

Ed Hilton, the county's director of engineering and facilities, was receptive to Clark's offer. "I am delighted," he said. "I am happy we found someone that has the personal interest. It is heartwarming to see someone with so much community spirit."

One of the biggest challenges Clark faced in his endeavor was conquering his fear of heights. The tower is about 90 feet above the ground, and there are two ways to get there — climbing up scaffolding on the outside of the courthouse or going through the inside of the building to the floor below the clock and scaling a tall, wooden ladder to the top level.

Either way, it's scary for someone not used to it.

Clark's fear of heights or sense of self-preservation would not permit him to go outside to put the hands back on the clock — Ray Tchorz, an employee of Security Building Co., which is doing the building renovations, did the honors.

Helping with the work was Clark's 15-year-old son, Jason, who missed school to help his father finish up. "He's helped me a lot," Clark said. "I wouldn't have come this far if I hadn't had some help, and free help's the best kind."

He didn't mind his son being out of school a day to be part of a somewhat historic occasion. "It's an experience most people his age haven't had," Clark said. "He was learning something here he wouldn't learn in school, and that's important, too."

Clark spent many of his free hours doing the needed work. He said some parts were damaged because the clock apparently had been struck by lightning at some point, and a man who threatened to jump from the tower in September threw a few pieces to the ground.

Working on a small budget, Clark had some of the damaged parts remade by local machine shops. The clock used to be weight-driven but was converted to electricity many years ago. Some of the parts are from the original weight-driven mechanism.

"A lot of this stuff you can't buy now — you have to have it made," Clark said.

The mechanism itself looks like anything but a clock. It resembles a small printing press, with gears and levers of various sizes all over. Long, wooden shafts connect inner workings to the redwood hands on the four faces, causing the hands to move as the minutes tick by.

Eure's Departure Adds Luster To State Post

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — For half a century, the office of North Carolina secretary of state has gotten about as much attention during election campaigns as the weather conditions of Siberia.

Folksy, beloved Thad Eure's hold on the post was so strong that few bothered to mount a challenge.

But the 88-year-old Eure's decision to step down next year after 51 years on the job has opened the floodgates. Nearly a dozen people have voiced interest, and three have declared their candidacies.

Former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, the best known of the aspirants to succeed Eure, said this week he was "totally amazed" that so many are thinking of running.

Recalling that he compared the crowded 1984 gubernatorial field to "Pharoah's army," Edmisten said, "I've decided now that the multitudes are gathered to eat the fish and the loaves and it's even more than Pharoah's army."

All of which raises two questions: Why has the post of secretary of state suddenly become a plum? And, how can candidates without Edmisten's name recognition focus enough public attention on the race to have a chance of winning?

The answer to the first is that while the job isn't as prestigious as, say, that of governor or lieutenant governor, it is far from unimportant.

The secretary of state is a member of the Council of State, the 10-member group of elected executive-branch officers. All except the governor are paid $64,092.

Additionally, the secretary of state presides over a 70-person staff responsible primarily for regulating corporations and securities, publishing official documents and regulating lobbyists.

While the activities of the secretary and his staff seldom make headlines, some of the candidates suggest they would be higher-profile officials than Eure.

"The fact that it has been a low-profile position does not mean it will remain so," said Brad Miller, the former 4th District Democratic chairman who declared his candidacy in September.

"The kind of issues that office will deal with in administering corporate securities laws are going to become more important in North Carolina," Miller said.

He and Edmisten said if elected they would be heavily involved in any revision of legislation enacted this year to protect North Carolina corporations, including Burlington Industries, from hostile takeovers.

State Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg, one of two Republicans in the race, said he would emphasize reform of lobbyist registration laws if elected.

"We need to strengthen the income reporting requirements," Warren said, "requiring them to give more detail on how they spend their money. Now there's lots of loopholes. We've got lobbyists who make 40 times what a legislator does."

Edmisten, Miller and Warren acnowledged the race for secretary of state typically has gotten little news coverage and public attention. But they said Eure's absence might draw the campaign a bit more of the spotlight.

They said they planned to wage old-fashioned campaigns, relying on legwork, personal appearances and local media coverage instead of television commercials.

"I do not plan to just sit back," Edmisten said. "I do intend to travel the state far and wide." But he said he didn't expect to spend more than $100,000 — in contrast to the $4 million with which he bankrolled his 1984 bid for governor.

SENTENCED — Lilliam Thomas, 24, of Winston-Salem sits with her lawyer, Danny T. Ferguson, after being sentenced to life in prison Wednesday for first degree murder. Ms. Thomas was convicted in the death of Vickie M. Calhoun, 37, who was killed by what authorities say was a random shot from an automobile. Jackie Ray Brewer of Winston-Salem will be tried next month on charges that he fired the shot. (AP Laserphoto)

Jobless Rates Rise Slightly

RALEIGH (AP) — Unemployment rates rose slightly in 77 of North Carolina's 100 counties in October and in eight of nine metropolitan statistical areas, the state Employment Security Commission reported Wednesday.

The state's seasonally unadjusted jobless rate increased to 3.9 percent from a September rate of 3.5 percent with an October labor force of 3,354,100 and 129,200 out of work.

Rates for September and October in eastern North Carolina counties included Greene, 2.8 percent and 3.1 percent; Martin, 4.1 and 4.8, and Pitt, 2.9 and 3.0.

Graham County was the only one with unemployment of more than 10 percent. Its rate rose from 11.8 percent in September to 13.4 percent in October.

The October rates for metropolitan statistical areas were: Asheville, 3.7 percent, from 3.4 percent in September; Burlington, 3.4 percent, unchanged; Charlotte-Gastonia-Rock Hill, S.C., 3.3 percent, from 3.2 percent; Fayetteville, 5.2 percent, from 4.4 percent; Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point, 3.3 percent, from 3 percent; Hickory, 3.2 percent, from 2.7 percent; Jacksonville, 3.2 percent, from 2.9 percent; Raleigh-Durham, 2.9 percent, from 2.6 percent and Wilmington, 5.8 percent, from 5.2 percent.

Holiday Traveling Causes Jams In Airports, Stations

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

You've got a lot to be thankful for today — your family, friends, and the fact that you survived the year's worst day for traveling and made it home in time for Thanksgiving dinner.

On Wednesday, tens of thousands of travelers hurried through airports, train stations and bus terminals in North Carolina. Officials suggested that people bring books and plenty of patience.

"People (are) not arriving early enough," said Teresa Damiano, public relations manager at Raleigh-Durham Airport. "They underestimate the traffic approaching the airport. Usually leaving on a trip is pretty emotional anyway, and parking makes you nervous."

Don McGuire, a spokesman for Piedmont Aviation based in Winston-Salem, said Wednesday's travel would undoubtedly be a record for the carrier, which handled more than 1,300 departure flights across the country and about 300 in North Carolina.

"We are concerned about two things today," he said. "First, we watch the weather. Second, when every flight is full, we encourage passengers to come as early as possible and be prepared to check-in their luggage.

"We also urge people, that if there is a delay, to bear with us and bring a book. We'll eventually get you there," McGuire said.

The peak travel days for the Thanksgiving holiday are Wednesday and Sunday, while Christmas travel is usually spread over two weeks, McGuire said.

"It started the first of the week, and today (Wednesday) is when things go crazy," said Floyd McKenzie, chief operating officer of Regional Airport near Greensboro.

McKenzie recommended that passengers bring patience to the airports.

"You're not going to experience many delays out of here, but when you get to Atlanta, Chicago, Charlotte and the bigger hubs there's a good possibility you'll experience delays," he said.

Parking was the major problem at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport, where construction of several parking decks has taken away some ground parking, according to Josh Birmingham, airport manager.

"This is one of the busiest days we have. As far as I've been able to tell, it's probably a record here," he said.

"It'll be a relief when it's over," said Birmingham, who will retire at the end of the year after 16 as the airport's manager. "I call them all good days, but it is kind of hectic."

On the state's highways, the cost of driving has risen sharply from a year ago, according to the AAA Carolina Motor Club.

The average price of gasoline is up more than 15 cents from levels of a year ago, the club said.

However, with the exception of last year when gasoline averaged 89.6 cents a gallon, it is still less this year than what it has been on any Thanksgiving since the decade began.

In North Carolina, the cost per gallon of gasoline now averages $1.04.1, while South Carolina's average cost is $1.05.5.

A survey of 146 service stations in both states showed that 58 percent of the monitored stations planned to remain open Thanksgiving Day, the club said. More than 30 percent indicated they would remain open 24 hours a day during the holiday.

Long Denies Concern Over Insurance 'Trouble' List

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials say there is no reason to worry about the news that 14 insurance companies operating in North Carolina have been cited by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners as needing "immediate regulatory attention" to head off financial trouble.

"I don't see that the public should have any concerns about these companies," North Carolina Insurance Commissioner Jim Long said Wednesday.

"Whatever caused these (companies) to make the list, we are fully aware of it and are working with the companies," Long said. "We are on top of the situation."

A previously secret list, known as the Insurance Regulatory Information System, was made public in August under a freedom-of-information lawsuit filed by Joseph Belth, a professor of insurance at the University of Indiana. Belth published the list in the December issue of "The Insurance Forum," a publication he edits.

Long declined in an interview to say why the 14 companies were on the list. He said state law prevented public disclosure of the IRIS list and a similar rating system that his staff began using this year.

Long said he had opposed release of the list.

"I see it as a very dangerous move," he said. "We fully support the public's and agents' right to know what the financial health of the companies are, but there comes a time when the public, the agents and even myself may not fully understand what the changes mean."

But Belth said: "You have to weigh the public's right to know against the possible consequences of the information becoming public. I weighed it and decided that the information should be in the hands of the public."

Insurance companies also are worried about the consequences of the list becoming public.

Gordon E. Rhodes, chief executive officer of Sturdivant Life Ins. Co. of North Wilkesboro, said he was concerned that competitors would try to use the list to take over his company's accounts.

"Our business is highly competitive," Rhodes said. "The only thing that we have that binds an account to us is service and performance. Any negative publicity about the company, particularly relating to financial conditions, would certainly be detrimental and be used to our competitive disadvantage."

Glenn H. Martin, president of Twentieth Century Insurance Co., said he was concerned about the list's release because without additional information, ratings might lead consumers to false conclusions.

The list was prepared by a team of insurance commissioners who placed each company in one of three categories: "immediate regulatory attention," the most serious rating; "targeted regulatory attention;" or no attention.

"The designation requiring 'immediate regulatory attention' does not necessarily indicate that a company is facing financial adversity," the NAIC said in a booklet explaining its rating. "The designation is a recommendation that the state insurance department accord that company highest priority in the surveillance process."

From 1985 to 1987, 57 life and health insurance companies and 68 property and casualty companies appeared on the list annually under the designation of immediate regulatory attention. They included 11 life and health insurance companies operating in North Carolina, four of them chartered in the state.

The North Carolina firms were American Defender Life Insurance Co. of Raleigh, Consumers Life Insurance Co. of North Carolina, Sturdivant Life Insurance Co. of North Wilkesboro and Twentieth Century Life Insurance Co.

Out-of-state companies were Capitol Life Insurance Co. of Colorado, CM Life Insurance Co. of Connecticut, Fidelity Mutual Life Ins. Co. of Pennsylvania, First Commonwealth Life Insurance Co. of Virginia, Hartford Variable Annuity Life Insurance Co. of Connecticut, National Benefit Life Insurance Co. of New York and World Service Life Insurance Co. of Colorado.

In addition, there were three property and casualty companies with the designation operating in North Carolina. They were Centaur Insurance Co. of Illinois, Georgia Casualty and Surety Co. of Georgia and Millers National Insurance Co. of Illinois.

Alex Spencer, a senior deputy insurance commissioner in charge of company services, said a company could appear on a list because of a dramatic change in its net worth, in the amount of premiums it collects each year or in its reserve fund — the money companies set aside to pay expected claims.

Kenneth Toft, vice president and treasurer of American Defender Life Insurance Co. of Raleigh, said the firm was placed on the list because it reinsures about 50 percent of the insurance that it sells.

Reinsurance is an arrangement by which one insurance company transfers a portion of the risk from a policy to another insurer.

At Consumers Life Insurance Co. of North Carolina, the company reported a net 1986 profit of $37,024, up from a $563,694 loss in 1985. Its net worth was listed as $2 million. During 1986, it also received a $700,000 contribution from its parent corporation, Consumer Financial Corp.

James C. Robertson, president of Consumers Life, attributed his company's listing to a reinsurance program in which it has passed some of the risks it was insuring to larger companies. He said the firm was in its strongest financial position since it was purchased in 1979 by Consumer Financial Corp. He said its annual premium volume had grown from $789,000 in 1982 to $4 million on Dec. 31, 1986.

Sturdivant Life Insurance Co. of North Wilkesboro reported a net profit of $423,386 and a net worth of $2.3 million on its 1986 financial statement. Rhodes attributed the listing to the firm's heavy use of reinsurance. He said the company also had a high ratio of commissions and expenses to premiums, but that was because it dealt only with credit life insurance, which generally required higher commissions for agents.

In operation since 1956, Sturdivant collects $21 million a year in premiums for credit life insurance, which borrowers get to cover loans in case they die or become disabled.

Twentieth Century Life Insurance Co. company reported a $208,067 loss in 1986, according to its annual financial statement, but its net worth almost doubled, from $1.7 million to $3.6 million.

Martin said his firm was on the list because of its large real estate holdings. About two-thirds of its $21.1 million in assets are in real estate, according to the financial statement.

He said the company has worked out an agreement with North Carolina regulators to lower its percentage of real estate holdings by 1988 so its assets are more readily available.

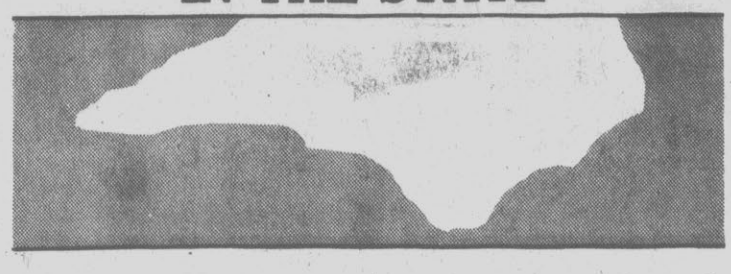
IN THE STATE



Handicapped

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina must increase spending on handicapped children under a new federal law requiring that state programs include 3- and 4-year-olds, a legislative panel has been told.

Under the law enacted this fall, states that receive matching federal funds for education and other services for the handicapped no longer will be able to exclude preschool-age children as of 1990, officials said Wednesday.

"We have to look at that and see what the implications are," Rep. Edd Nye, D-Bladen, co-chairman of the Study Committee on Children With Special Needs, said. "We need to serve the children, but we need to know what it's going to cost."

Officials with the Department of Public Instruction and the Department of Human Resources were reluctant to speculate on how much additional state money was needed. But they estimated that the number of children served — now roughly 18,000 — would rise to 24,000 and agreed to come up with more precise numbers.

Company Fined

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The A.T. Williams Oil CO. has been fined more than $3,000 for allegedly dumping gasoline-contaminated water that drained into a tributary of Muddy Creek in February.

The North Carolina Environmental Management Commission said the company didn't notify the commission about the spill until six days after it happened.

But Arthur T. Williams Jr., the chairman of the board, said Tuesday that the company probably will appeal the fine.

"We haven't settled the matter yet," Williams said. "We haven't admitted that this took place." He declined further comment.

Plant Sold

GREENSBORO (AP) — Burlington Industries Inc. announced Wednesday that it had completed the sale of its Erwin, N.C., denim plant to Dominion Textile (USA) Inc. for $205 million in cash.

Burlington's two other denim plants in Mooresville, N.C., and Stonewall, Miss., will continue to operate.

Burlington also said that Burlington Holdings Inc. expects to prepay $235 million of the bank term loan taken on in connection with the acquisition of Burlington Industries Inc.

Settlement

RALEIGH (AP) — Attorney General Lacy H. Thornburg said that Heilig-Myers Co. of North Carolina, a retail furniture chain with 81 stores statewide, a has agreed to pay $70,000 in legal and administrative costs as part of an out-of-court settlement.

The settlement was with Thornburg's consumer protection agency following an investigation of the firm's price advertising practices.

The Attorney General's Office concluded from its investigation of Heilig-Myers pricings that the firm made unsubstantiated savings claims in mass-mail circulars sent to North Carolinians from June through October of this year. It also was concluded that in some cases the prices of furniture groupings were deceptive because pictured items were left out of the advertised total price.

Director Dies

WILMINGTON (AP) — Robert Dennerline, the marketing director of the North Carolina State Ports Authority, has died of a heart attack. He was 52.

Dennerline, who headed the department efforts at the state ports the past two years, collapsed at his home Tuesday, officials said.

He had just returned from an eight-day ports authority trade mission to Europe.

Funeral services will be held Friday in Iowa.

Resignation

CARTHAGE, N.C. (AP) — Moore County school board member Sue Black has resigned in the wake of the board's firing of school superintendent Robert Tyndall.

Ms. Black announced cited objections to the board's handling of Tyndall's dismissal. The board voted 6-2 Monday to buy out the final 19 months of Tyndall's contract. Tyndall had been superintendent since 1985.

Oil Disposal

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina environmental officials are making plans to meet with county officials across the state to discuss problems with disposal of oil products, said Bill Meyer, head of the Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch.

The Raleigh meeting is set for Feb. 23, 1988, according to Meyer.

The disposal problems result from automobile owners who change the oil in their vehicles and who do not know what to do with the drained oil product, Meyer said.

Smoking Rules

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Five Monroe High School students watched two top officials and a board member smoke for two hours at a school board meeting Monday night.

Then the students learned they couldn't ask the board for smoking privileges because they didn't get prior permission.

The five students said they will come back Dec. 7.

Smoking is forbidden at Monroe High this year, a switch from last year when parents could give permission. Penalties for violating the policy include clean-up duty, in-school suspension, detention and expulsion.

Smoking is allowed on board meetings.

CP&L Brunswick Plant Sets Trouble-Free Work Record

WILMINGTON (AP) — A record set at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick nuclear plant represents a departure from problems that plagued the plant between 1980 and 1986, officials say.

From 1980 to 1983, the plant consistently received low ratings in several areas, according to assessments by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. Paul Frederickson, section chief of the NRC's Reactor Projects Division, cited maintenance and operations as two sections with the worst track records.

But on Wednesday, the Brunswick plant set a world record for 143 days of continuous dual-unit operation for boiling water reactors.

"This is very exciting and gratifying for all of us who work at the Brunswick plant," said Pat Howe, vice president of the Brunswick Nuclear Project. "Setting a new world record says a lot about the work of our employees and draws attention to the outstanding job our team is doing here."

At 12:02 p.m., Unit 2 of the plant near Southport had been operating for 180 days, and Unit 1 for 143 days, Howe said.

The previous General Electric Co. dual-unit record for boiling water reactors was held by Kuosheng Units I and II, in Taiwan, which operated continously for 142 days, 23 hours and 4 minutes. GE designed about 62 percent of boiling water reactors used worldwide, according to GE officials. The remaining units were designed by GE licensees and one former licensee.

To set the record, plants must avoid systematic shutdowns — known as "scrams" — that begin when either a computer or an operator sense that something is not running properly. The two units had eight shutdowns last year, according to Nuclear Regulatory Commission records.

"If a plant runs for a long period of time, it's a good indication that people are doing things right," said Paul Frederickson, section chief of the NRC's Division of Reactor Projects. "It doesn't prove that Brunswick is the best, but it is an indication of how good their performance is."

Charles Dietz, the plant's general manager, said the long run benefits consumers. "If we can operate for long periods of time, it means less cost to consumers," he said.

The plant's previous record for continuous operation of both units was 46 days, set earlier this year. Unit 1's previous operating record was 133 days, set in 1986, and Unit 2's was 147 days, reached in 1985, CP&L officials said.

Last week, the plant set a new domestic record of 133 days of continuous dual-unit operation for boiling water reactors. The old mark was held by Commonwealth Edison Co.'s Quad Cities plant in Moline, Ill.

The plant's potential for continuous operation is limited by its having to shut down for refueling every 18 months, Dietz said. Unit 2 is scheduled for refueling in early January, he said. Some other reactors — including many in Canada — are designed so that they are capable of refueling while operating.

Plant officials credit the record to improvements in equipment and training programs. The addition of a site-specific stimulator, which models the hardware and dynamics of the reactors' system, has helped to better train plant operators, Dietz said.

"It's not necessarily improvements in the short-term, but the result of changes made over several years," Dietz said. "And as in any business, people play a key ingredient. A large part of the success is due to the people."

Dietz called criticism of the plant's operations by anti-nuclear organizations such as Ralph Nader's Public Citizen group "unfounded," adding that efficiently operated nuclear fuel plants cost customers less than other fuel sources.

"I think our plant is technically sound," he said. "The expense for fuel for a nuclear facility is much less than for other sources."

Soviets Will Have Right To Inspect Utah Plant

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet inspectors will be stationed at a Pershing missile plant in Utah under the treaty to be signed at the superpower summit banning medium-range nuclear weapons, administration officials say.

U.S. officials, returning from Europe with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, said Wednesday the Russians will be there to make sure rocket engines made at the Hercules plant at Magna, Utah, west of Salt Lake City are not used illegally in a banned medium-range version of the Pershing missile.

The Soviets will have the right to remain at the plant for up to 13 years, said the officials, who spoke only on condition of anonymity. This is in exchange for stationing American monitors at a Soviet plant in Votkinsk where SS-25 missiles are assembled.

The idea is to make sure the long-range SS-25s, which are not banned under the treaty, are not modified to replace outlawed SS-20s.

Also, the officials said, Soviet inspectors will be permitted to make short-notice checks at a San Diego factory where launchers for ground cruise missiles are manufactured.

The launchers will not be produced because the ground-launched cruises are also being eliminated under the treaty President Reagan will sign next month at the White House with Soviet General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The selection of the two American sites for Soviet inspection was one of the last issues resolved during talks in Geneva on Monday and Tuesday between Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

Meanwhile, Shultz said Wednesday in Brussels that there will be no further deployments of cruise missiles in Western Europe after the treaty is signed.

Technically, installation of missiles could continue until the accord is ratified by the Senate, Shultz said at a news conference in Brussels.

But, he said, the United States would "kind of hold things constant" after the signing.

There are now 256 ground-launched cruise missiles in West Germany, Britain, Italy and Belgium, and 108 Pershing 2 missiles in West Germany.

Another 208 cruises were to be deployed in the four countries and in The Netherlands by the end of next year.

Those and 436 other U.S. missiles now in storage will be scrapped over three years.

The Soviets, meanwhile, will eliminate 683 deployed missiles and 1,317 back-up rockets.

Until recently, the United States had been urging NATO allies to continue with the scheduled missile deployments until the ratification process was complete.

Some of the allies, including Belgium, had insisted that they would not accept more missiles once the treaty was signed.

It is not clear how long the Senate will deliberate over the treaty, or whether it will win the necessary two-thirds Senate approval.

Already, a number of conservative Republicans have criticized the agreement. U.S. negotiators Paul H. Nitze and Max M. Kampelman will begin initial lobbying for ratification after the Thanksgiving holiday break, with Shultz following later.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Wednesday the weapons pact is "a dangerous agreement" that undermines Western credibility. However, he said Senate failure to ratify the treaty would only make matters worse.

Kissinger, in Washington interview videotaped for broadcast Saturday on "American Interests," a public television program, said it was too late to reverse course on the treaty.

Kissinger said he finds the treaty flawed because "it establishes the principle that zero is a desirable objective with respect to nuclear weapons."

"For 40 years, the defense of the West has been based on nuclear weapons to offset the perceived or real Soviet conventional superiority," Kissinger said. "It is not clear to me what kind of defense the West will have after all of these agreements are made."

Shultz stopped in Brussels on his way back to Washington and briefed the 15 NATO members from Western Europe and Canada on the outcome of the discussions.

He reported they were all "delighted with the treaty, and they said so in our meeting today."

"This is something we have done together. ... There is a full sense of support," he told repoters.

Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the West German foreign minister, and other allied officials said after meeting with Shultz that they were pleased with the outcome of the Geneva negotiations and hoped the Senate would ratify the treaty.

"This is a treaty that we feel is our treaty, an alliance treaty, not just one between the United States and the Soviet Union," said Giulio Andreotti, the Italian foreign minister.

Shultz Says U.S. Would Halt Deployment At Once

By ROBERT J. WIELAARD
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The United States will stop deploying cruise missiles in Western Europe as soon as the U.S.-Soviet intermediate-range missile pact is signed, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said.

The treaty calls for the removal over three years of more than 1,900 nuclear warheads on missiles in Europe and an estimated 1,900 more held in reserve, sources said.

Technically, the United States could continue with scheduled deployments even after President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev sign the treaty at their summit in Washington next month.

The pact doesn't take force officially until the U.S. Senate ratifies it, which could take months. Shultz said the United States would "kind of hold things constant" until then, affecting NATO plans to deploy 208 more missiles in the next 13 months.

He gave this rough outline of what happens upon ratification:

The United States will begin immediately to remove the 256 Tomahawk cruise and 108 Pershing-2 missiles, each with a single warhead, from Italy, West Germany, Belgium and Britain.

Moscow will remove the warheads on 441 triple-warheaded SS-20s, 112 SS-4s, 130 SS-12s and up to 20 SS-23s. It has not publicly stated the total number of warheads, but the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies puts the figure at 1,585.

Within three years, both sides will have scrapped all warheads. The ground-based missiles have ranges of 300 to 3,000 miles. The total number of deployed warheads covered under the agreement is 1949.

U.S. sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the United States has about 800 missiles in all, meaning about 430 are in reserve. The sources said the Soviet Union has 2,000 missiles with 3,000 warheads in all that would be affected by the treaty.

In the three years after ratification, each side can conduct up to 20 inspections a year of the other side's missile sites to ensure they are being destroyed.

During the following five years, the number of inspections drops to 15 a year and during the second five-year period it drops to 10 a year.

Officials said once an examiner arrives in a country for an inspection, he has four hours to declare which "suspect" site he wants to see and the host nation ha nine hours to get him there.

"The agreement is that no more than 50 percent of the inspections in any one year will take place in one country," Shultz said. He said this was to avoid the possibility that either side would "concentrate on everything in one country."

In addition to visiting the European nations where missiles have been based, Soviet inspectors will also be allowed to see U.S. missile production facilities in California and Utah, and U.S. monitors can inspect a Soviet missile factory.

The inspectors also will be able to check on warheads on each side that are not deployed but are held in inventory.

Reagan Says He's Ready For Summit To Take Up 'A Wide Range Of Issues'

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan is preparing for a business-like summit with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev after voicing gratitude that negotiators "cleared away remaining obstacles" to a first-ever treaty to destroy part of the superpowers' nuclear missile arsenal.

In a statement the White House released after he was briefed Wednesday on the status of arms-control talks and the December 8-10 summit, Reagan said the three-day meeting in Washington will give him and Gorbachev "ample opportunity" to discuss "a wide range of issues."

"We have also included social and other events that will provide the general secretary insight into our intellectual and business communities," the president said of the Gorbachev visit.

Reagan, White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. and spokesman Marlin Fitzwater began Wednesday to provide details on the summit, which comes in the aftermath of final agreement by U.S. and Soviet representatives on the basic elements of an intermediate-range nuclear forces (INF) treaty.

"While details remain to be worked out" on the language of the INF pact, Reagan's statement said, "I look forward to signing this historic agreement with General Secretary Gorbachev at the Washington summit next month."

"This brings to realization the objectives which I laid out in my 'zero option' proposal of 1981, and to which we and the allies have adhered firmly through all these years of INF negotiations."

Reagan said that Gorbachev "will also be in contact with members of Congress," and the president's aides said there was no longer any talk of the Soviet leader making a formal address to a joint meeting of the House and Senate. That prospect had infuriated conservatives on Capitol Hill.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Mstislav Rostropovich, a world renowned cello virtuoso who fled from the Soviet Union in the mid-1970s, has accepted an invitation to attend the White House dinner given in Gorbachev's honor.

A source who declined to be identified said that Rostropovich will attend the dinner, but will not play there. This source said that concert pianist Van Cliburn will be among the entertainers. Cliburn was the first American to win the Tchaikovsky piano competition in Moscow.

Meanwhile, Baker and Fitzwater talked confidently of prospects for Senate ratification of the treaty that Reagan and Gorbachev are expected to sign.

"I think this treaty is so attractive on its face and produces such a positive result in terms of reducing the risk of nuclear war, and is so verifiable by its terms, that it will be very attractive and very appealing to the vast majority of senators," Baker told reporters after returning from the Reagan briefing at the president's 688-acre ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains.

But both Baker and Fitzwater acknowledged that conservatives in the Senate are mounting opposition to the pact, even before it is finalized, and said much work will be needed to win ratification.

"I haven't made the head count in the Senate," Baker said. "So far, most Republican senators simply haven't made up their mind."

He said he was sure Reagan would ask that the treaty be approved without amendments on the Senate floor. "This is Ronald Reagan's treaty," he said. "This is the treaty that he's asked for, for a long time, that the Soviets have turned down out of hand."

Baker said Reagan would have "an extensive schedule of consultations" with members of the Senate, including conservative skeptics.

Defending the INF treaty, which would eliminate short- and medium-range missiles in the intermediate-range class, Baker said: "By any measure, the removal of an entire weapon system — 1,850 nuclear devices — in my mind, reduces the risk of nuclear war. I think, standing alone, it is a major achievement. It is unprecedented. It has never happened before since the dawn of the nuclear age."

But Baker also said it must be linked to negotiations to reduce long-range, or strategic missiles, as well as to correct an imbalance in the conventional fighting force strength in Europe, which currently tilts in the favor of the Warsaw Pact.

Fitzwater and Baker disagreed somewhat on the question of what facilities would be provided for Soviet participants in the Reagan-Gorbachev summit.

Fitzwater said it was possible the Soviets would be given space in the Old Executive Office Building, which is in the White House complex on Pennsylvania Avenue. But Baker said, "This is not going to happen."

He did say that Reagan and Gorbachev will have at least five one-on-one meetings.

Reagans Enjoying Traditional Holiday

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan paused with millions of Americans to observe Thanksgiving with his family and to indulge in the traditional turkey-with-all-the-trimmings dinner.

For their Thanksgiving meal, the Reagans flew from the White House to the 688-acre Rancho del Cielo nestled in the Santa Ynez Mountains near Santa Barbara. The president scheduled his late-fall vacation to last through Saturday.

He and first lady Nancy Reagan will return to Washington on Sunday, at which time Reagan will immerse himself in a hectic schedule of meetings in preparation for his summit with Soviet General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Reagan also will push for enactment of the two-year, $76 billion budget-cutting agreement he reached with congressional leaders last week.

The president mixed business with pleasure Wednesday. He went horseback riding and chopped wood from a large fallen oak tree, and also received national security adviser Colin Powell, chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. and other aides for a briefing on the U.S-Soviet arms control treaty and an array of other matters.

The Reagan Thanksgiving menu included turkey and cornbread dressing. It also featured cranberries, peas with pearl onions, monkey bread, mashed potatoes, Waldorf salad and persimmon pudding with whipped cream. Monkey bread is a sweet bread usually criss-crossed and baked in a mold.

The Reagans were joined for dinner by adopted son Michael, his wife Colleen and their two children, Cameron and Ashley Marie, along with Maureen Reagan and her husband, Dennis Revell.

Ron Reagan and his wife, Doria, were to join the family Friday. Patti Davis, their younger daughter, had made other plans, White House officials said in advance of the Reagan trip to California.

NEW MAYOR — Chicago Vice Mayor David Orr, right, announces Wednesday that he is taking over the reigns of government following the death of Mayor Harold Washington, who suffered a heart attack. Death Of Chicago Mayor Sets Off Power Struggle

By WILLIAM C. HIDLAY
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The death of Harold Washington, the street-smart politician who became the city's first black mayor, stunned the nation's third-largest city and set off a power struggle that threatens to plunge it into political chaos, observers say.

City Hall workers wept after Washington's death Wednesday afternoon, about two hours after the 65-year-old mayor suffered a massive heart attack at his office.

And by the end of the day, political anaylsts said the City Council fight over Chicago's highest office was under way.

"The pushing and shoving has begun, just as it did after (the late Mayor Richard J.) Daley died" in 1976, said Eugene Kennedy, a Loyola University professor, writer and biographer of Daley, Chicago's longtime political boss.

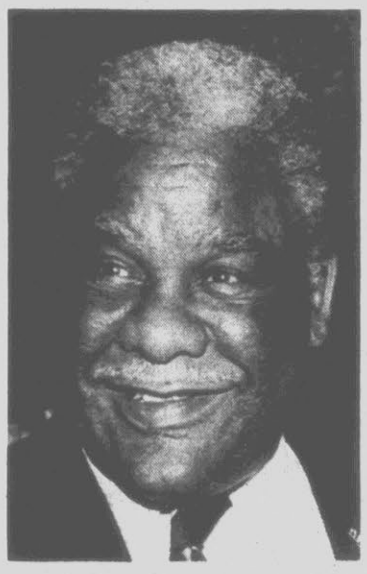
Vice Mayor David Orr, a white alderman who strongly supported Washington, will serve on an interim basis, until the City Council selects an acting mayor from its ranks.

The job of acting mayor is the focus of the battle, although a special election could be held later to fill the office for balance of the 3½ years remaining in Washington's second four-year term.

Prospects for a smooth selection process are poor, said veteran political strategist Don Rose.

"I think we'll be plunged back into some substantial degree of political chaos as the factions which have not been glued together begin to struggle among themselves," said Rose, who worked for Washington's re-election campaign.

Orr, a critic of the old-guard Democrats who stymied Washington until he forged a City Council majority near the end of his first term, is unlikely to hold the mayor's office long, observers said.



HAROLD WASHINGTON

Washington, a former congressman and state legislator, won his first term as mayor in 1983 after a bitter, racially charged election. That victory, his triumph in the so-called Council Wars, and his re-election last spring — the first time a mayor here won a second since Daley — helped make him a leading symbol of urban black political power.

As word spread of his death, Washington was praised by political, religious and civil rights leaders around the nation.

President Reagan said Washington would "truly be missed, not only by the people of Chicago, but also by many across the country for whom he provided leadership on urban issues."

"In the Illinois Legislature, the Congress and as mayor, he dedicated his life to the service of his fellow Chicagoans," the president said.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who campaigned for Washington last spring, called his death "a tragedy for Chicago and for civil rights."

Democratic presidential hopeful contender Jesse Jackson, a longtime ally of Washington's, said in Kuwait he felt a "great sense of personal loss and a great sense of family loss," and would cut short his Mideast trip to return for the funeral Monday.

Before he was stricken Wednesday, Washington had attended a groundbreaking ceremony for a neighborhood housing development and then met with aides.

"He suddenly, in general chit-chat, slumped to one side," said press secretary Alton Miller. "I thought he was trying to pick something up off the floor. I quickly realized it was more serious than that."

Washington, who missed two days of work last week because of chest congestion, was rushed to Northwestern Memorial Hospital, where doctors kept his blood circulating with a heart-lung machine while they worked feverishly to get his heart beating again using electric shocks and drugs.

He was pronounced dead at 1:36 p.m., 95 minutes after his heart stopped.

One of the heart specialists, Dr. John Sanders, had also worked unsuccessfully on Dec. 20, 1976, to revive Daley from a heart attack.

"It's one of those things where you think, 'Here it comes again.' You swallow a couple of times and then you do things just like you do them every day on every other case," Sanders said.

Washington had been taking medication for high blood pressure, Sanders said, adding the mayor had faced "insurmountable odds" for recovery.

After performing an autopsy late Wednesday, Dr. Robert J. Stein, Cook County's chief medical examiner, said clots had blocked 95 percent of Washington's major blood vessels.

Washington's 280-pound weight had contributed to the death, Stein said.

Impeached Federal Judge Allowed To Practice Law

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — The state Supreme Court ruled that ousted federal judge Harry Claiborne, released from prison after 17 months, can practice law in Nevada despite being convicted of tax evasion.

The high court's two-page order was issued Wednesday, one day after a hearing in Las Vegas on Claiborne's bid to practice following his recent release from a half-way house.

The justices said the State Bar of Nevada suggested sanctions on the 70-year-old Claiborne, but "we decline to impose additional punishment ... by way of professional discipline."

In 1986, the flamboyant Claiborne became the first sitting federal judge impeached by the U.S. Senate in more than a half-century. He was never disbarred in Nevada, where he had practiced since the 1940s.

Representatives of Nevada's legal elite appealed Tuesday to the state Supreme Court, recounting legal ties to Claiborne, who was one of Nevada's top criminal defense attorneys before being named chief a U.S. district judge for Nevada in 1978.

Claiborne, who was convicted of failing to report $107,000 on his 1979 and 1980 tax returns, was impeached after he refused to resign and continued to collect his $78,700 annual judge's salary.

In its interim order, the state's high court said the main objective of bar disciplinary proceedings is not more punishment but to protect the public from unfit attorneys and to maintain public confidence in the legal profession.

Citing an earlier case in which a lawyer convicted of tax evasion was permitted to continue practicing, the court said it must consider "the isolated nature of an attorney's conduct as well as his prior, exemplary professional standing."

Claiborne had maintained he was a victim of a Justice Department vendetta and he alleged misconduct by federal agents and bias on the part of his trial judge, Walter Hoffman.

The case against Claiborne started out as an investigation into allegations that Claiborne took a $30,000 bribe to derail an FBI probe of a brothel owner.

A trial in Reno on bribery and other charges ended in a hung jury and on a retrial the bribery allegations were thrown out.

Society Wants Humans To Explore Mars

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A galaxy of notables including ex-President Jimmy Carter, comedian Johnny Carson and filmmakers Steven Spielberg and George Lucas have signed a declaration urging the human exploration of Mars.

"The Mars goal provides a coherent and stirring goal for an American space program now in disarray," Cornell University astronomer Carl Sagan, president of the Pasadena-based, non-profit Planetary Society, said in a statement Wednesday.

Since July, the society has collected 189 signatures from politicians of both major parties, military and peace group leaders, Nobel Prize winners and other scientists and every administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration except incumbent James Fletcher.

Also among the signatories are Hollywood celebrities, poets, university presidents, journalists, industrialists, labor officials and Pennsylvania State University football Coach Joe Paterno.

More signatures will be solicited during the coming year from the society's 100,000 members and from the public, spokesman Tim Lynch said.

Putting humans on Mars during the next century "is affordable (and) has powerful scientific, technological and political justifications," Sagan said. "If done cooperatively (with other nations, especially the Soviets), it would command the respect of people all over the world."

The declaration reads in part: "We endorse the goal of human exploration of Mars and urge that initial steps toward its implementation be taken throughout the world."

Signing actors, musicians and directors include John Denver, Richard Dreyfuss, James Earl Jones, Quincy Jones, "Star Wars" filmmaker Lucas, Paul Newman, Gregory Peck, Sidney Poitier, "Star Trek" creator Gene Roddenberry, "E.T., the Extra-Terrestrial" filmmaker Spielberg and Lily Tomlin.

Nobel laureates who signed include Linus Pauling, Luis Alvarez, Hans Bethe, Norman Borlaug, Melvin Calvin, Richard Feynman, Val Fitch, William Fowler, Robert Holley, Dr. Bernard Lown and Glenn Seaborg, who once chaired the old Atomic Energy Commission.

Among the writers, journalists and broadcasters who endorsed the declaration were columnist Jack Anderson, Isaac Asimov, Ray Bradbury, Arthur C. Clarke, Walter Cronkite, Norman Cousins, Hugh Downs, Louis L'Amour, Ursula LeGuin, the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale and Turner Broadcasting president Ted Turner.

Government officials who signed include San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, astronaut and Sen. Jake Garn of Utah, former ambassador to the United Nations Jeane Kirkpatrick, Sen. Spark Matsunaga of Hawaii and former ambassador to the Soviet Union Malcolm Toon.

Other signers include former chief U.S. arms control negotiator Paul Warnke, retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Chuck Yeager, former National Security Agency director Noel Gayler, the Rev. Robert H. Shuller of the Crystal Cathedral and astronomer Clyde Tombaugh, who discovered the planet Pluto.

Deaver Had Reagan Letter For Korean

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael K. Deaver gave South Korea's president a letter of "personal greeting" from President Reagan while negotiating to be a lobbyist for the Seoul government, according to testimony at Deaver's perjury trial.

Former U.S. Ambassador Richard L. Walker testified Wednesday that when he accompanied Deaver to a meeting with President Chun Doohawn, the former White House deputy chief of staff said: "I have a personal greeting to extend to you from our president."

Deaver handed Chun a sealed envelope, similar to one he had presented to the South Korean president during a visit in 1983 before President Reagan's trip to Seoul that year, Walker said at Deaver's trial in U.S. District Court.

The 30-minute meeting at the Blue House, South Korea's White House, was described by Walker as cordial. "President Chun was very happy to greet Mr. Deaver."

Walker said Deaver traveled to Seoul on his advice to discuss with Korean officials the possibility of representing South Korean interests in Washington.

In a telephone call shortly after Deaver quit the White House in May 1985, Walker said Deaver "wanted to know whom he should be getting in touch with" about representing South Korean interests.

Walker testified that he cabled Deaver on May 29, 1985, to advise him to come to Seoul to "meet with key people."

On cross-examination Walker said he was not aware that no record of Reagan's letter to Chun had ever been found by the U.S. or South Korean governments.

"As far as I know the Blue House doesn't disclose what's available there," Walker said.

Nicholas Platt, ambassador to Manila who was previously a State Department official, testified earlier that there was no record of the letter but allowed that strictly personal correspondence of the president would not turn up in diplomatic files.

Deaver, who was retained as a $475,000-a-year lobbyist by the Seoul government, is accused of lying to a House subcommittee when he denied helping arrange for a South Korean trade envoy to get a brief appointment with Reagan.

Walker said the South Korean government requested the appointment for Kim Kihwan but the State Department wouldn't relay the last-minute request. Walker said he asked Deaver whether he should contact the National Security Council and was told that was a good idea.

Walker asked for help getting the appointment in a telex to NSC aide Gaston Sigur, noting, "Mike Deaver suggested this might require some official request from me."

On a follow-up question, independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. asked Walker if he learned "that Mr. Deaver seemed to be trying to ingratiate himself with the government of South Korea in order to become a consultant."

Walker said "yes," but he was not allowed by U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson to explain his answer.

CIA Officials Resign In Wake Of Arms Scandal

By MICHAEL WINES and DON SHANNON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency, apparently beginning a long-anticipated housecleaning in its executive ranks, Wednesday accepted the resignations of its top covert operations official and its inspector general, both casualties of damaging revelations in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Deputy Director for Operations Clair George, a 32-year agency veteran who served undercover in Africa, Lebanon and Europe, announced his resignation at a senior CIA staff meeting Wednesday morning, sources said. A CIA spokesman said George's departure will occur at year's end.

Later Wednesday, CIA Inspector General Carroll Hawver also disclosed to the agency's staff that he will resign at year's end, said knowledgable U.S. officials who declined to be named. CIA spokesman Sharon Foster said that the agency could not confirm or deny Hawver's retirement decision.

The resignations are the first of several senior job changes widely expected to occur at the intelligence agency this winter now that inquiries into the Iran-Contra affair by Congress and by a CIA special counsel, Russell Bruemmer, are at an end.

CIA Director William H. Webster said this week that he will not decide whether to make personnel changes at the intelligence agency for another two to three weeks, until after Bruemmer has reviewed Congress' report on the scandal and made last-minute revisions to the agency's own internal inquiry, which is essentially complete.

Agency spokesman Bill Baker said that George's departure is voluntary. Informed government officials contended Wednesday that he resigned after he asked senior CIA officials this month for their backing in the face of congressional criticism but failed to get it.

George, 57, had been under especially sharp attack from Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman David L. Boren, D-Okla., who had made George's departure from the covert-operations post almost a condition for his continued support of the CIA. The Los Angeles Times reported in July that Webster had agreed to relieve George and two other senior agency officials of their duties.

Both George and Hawver became early targets for criticism as the Iran-Contra affair unfolded last fall, and Congress' report on the scandal was indirectly critical of both men's conduct during the affair.

George said Wednesday that he resigned "because of about 10 different things" and that he believes Webster should be free to choose a new executive team at the agency.

"I've been in government service for about 35 years, and I've done everything but fly to the moon," he said. "Now I would like to see my family, and I want to retire while I'm still young enough to try something else."

He said he will remain at the agency long enough to break in his successor.

In a one-sentence statement, Webster praised George as a man who "served his country and this agency with courage for over 32 years, often overseas and often in most demanding circumstances."

Among other duties, George became CIA station chief in Athens after anti-U.S. factions killed the previous chief, Richard Welch, in 1975. He also served in Beirut before Lebanon's civil war disintegrated into a series of terrorist actions.

But his decision in mid-1984 to accept the top covert operations job when it was offered by former CIA Director William J. Casey apparently proved a mistake.

George held the post when the White House began the arms-for-hostages swaps with Iran in August 1985. He later testified that he opposed many controversial aspects of the operation, including National Security Council aide Oliver L. North's use of retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord as a private, unsupervised "cutout" for arms shipments to Iran.

Romanian Tanker Attacked By Iranians After U.S. Ship Issues Warning, Leaves

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iranian warship shelled a Romanian tanker and set it ablaze today in the southern Persian Gulf, shortly after a U.S. Navy warship warned the tanker to steer clear of the Iranian vessel, maritime sources said.

"Attention all ships, I am being challenged and fired upon by an Iranian warship," the master of the 86,940-ton Romanian tanker Dacia yelled through his radio. "We need immediate help."

The unidentified captain kept repeating his appeal for help as the Iranian vessel struck, about two hours after the U.S. warship had sailed away.

Maritime executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Dacia had been shadowed by the Iranians since mid-morning, when the Navy helicopter carrier USS Okinawa was in the vicinity.

Along with the Okinawa were the guided missile frigate USS McLusky and the guided missile destroyer Chandler. The convoy included a Navy-chartered vessel, possibly a tanker.

Iran attacks neutral commercial shipping in the oil-rich region in retaliation for Iraqi strikes on Iranian oil tanker routes. Iran and Iraq have been at war for seven years.

The Iranian shells set the Dacia's engine room ablaze but injured no one among the all-Romanian crewmen, maritime agencies' radio monitors said.

It was the second attack by Iranians on a Romanian ship in the gulf this week.

The Dubai-based executives and private monitors said they picked up radio exchanges involving the Okinawa, the Iranian warship and the Dacia before the attack happened.

According to the sources, the Americans first questioned the Iranian warship about its intentions, and the Iranians were heard replying: "American warship, this is Iranian warship ... We are trying to identify a tanker which is not responding."

The Okinawa was heard telling the Dacia "You'd better get on the other side ... Something might happen."

When the U.S. warship disappeared beyond the horizon, the Iranians reappeared and ordered the Dacia by radio to "shut off your engine or we will hit you."

The Dacia responded six minutes later, but the words of the captain were mostly unintelligible to the radio receivers in Dubai.

"Iranians, this is Romanian tanker Dacia" was one phrase that the captain said repeatedly.

Subsequently, the Iranians unleashed a barrage of cannon fire on the Dacia.

While the captain of the stricken tanker clearly said he was attacked by a warship, shipping sources here variously reported the raiders were in gunboats, speedboats or a warship.

The gunboats are units of the Iranian navy, and the speedboats are manned by Revolutionary Guards armed with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades.

The Okinawa-led convoy is part of the U.S. Mideast Force that shepherd reflagged Kuwaiti tankers up and down the 550-mile stretch between Kuwait and the Hormuz.

U.S. warships protect these tankers against possible Iranian attack. The 19th such escort operation set sail late Monday from Kuwait.

The convoy included the three reflagged Kuwaiti tankers — Gas Queen, Gas Prince and Townsend — protected by the guided missile frigate USS Elrod.

The shipping sources did not immediately know the destination of the Dacia or whether it was loaded when attacked.

On Monday, an Iranian navy frigate attacked another Romanian vessel destroying its superstructure in a fire that raged for several hours. The master of the 8,850-ton freighter Fundulea was severely injured and two other crewmen also were hospitalized.

The attack on the Fundulea came within minutes of a raid on the Panamanian-flag contaniner vessel Uni-Master, which sustained lesser damage.

The Fundulea was carrying a cargo of Italian marble to Kuwait and the Uni-Master was en route the Saudi Arabian port of Dammam with stops in Dubai and Bahrain.

In another development, Iranian opposition guerrillas said today they killed 200 government soldiers and wounded another 100 during an attack in oil-rich Khuzistan.

The Mujahedeen Khalq, largest of the exiled groups fighting the government, said the attack Monday raised to 3,680 the number of soldiers killed or wounded in one week.

Hostages Are Recalled

13 marching bands, 20 floats and clowns too numerous to count were celebrities like Emmanuel Lewis and Phylicia Rashad of the "Cosby Show."

In Philadelphia, Miss America 1988, Kaye Lani Rae Rafko, was scheduled to join the arrival of Santa Claus in the city's 68th annual Thanksgiving Day parade, the nation's oldest.

Hundreds of thousands also were expected to line streets in Dallas and in Detroit, where "Alf," the furry extraterrestrial star of the NBC-TV series, was an honorary grand marshal.

But the giving of thanks this day was strained for some.

In Louisiana, the families of 28 hostages held since Saturday by rebellious Cuban inmates at the Oakdale Detention Center prepared for a meal of a dozen donated turkeys and Louisiana dirty rice at the Sacred Heart Catholic Church, which has become temporary home for many hostage relatives.

More than 100 prison workers and inmates in Oakdale and the U.S. Penitentiary in Atlanta were taken hostage by Cuban prisoners threatened with deportation following an agreement announced Friday between Cuba and the United States.

"There's just not a lot you can say to these families," said the Rev. John Poerio, Sacred Heart pastor. "We just want to be there with them. The presence is more than any words you can say."

George Orton of DeRidder, La., whose brother-in-law is among those held, says the real Thanksgiving celebration will come when he is released.

"My family is already planning a get-together, and he'll be the honored guest," Orton said Wednesday.

In Huntington Beach, Calif., former Beirut hostage David Jacobsen said that despite his own happiness he cannot escape from thoughts of the eight other Americans who remain captive in Lebanon.

Most likely they will be eating pita bread and cheese instead of turkey with all the trimmings, he said.

"I just wish my friends in Lebanon could also be home to have a joyous reunion with their families," Jacobsen said.

President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, gathered with their family in Santa Barbara, Calif., around a meal of turkey, cornbread dressing, cranberries, peas with pearl onions, Monkey Bread, mashed potatoes, Waldorf salad and persimmon pudding with whipped cream. Monkey Bread is a sweet bread usually criss-crossed and baked in a mold.

More than 3 million vehicles were expected to travel the New Jersey Turnpike from Wednesday to Monday, while Los Angeles International Airport officials expect to handle a record 682,000 passengers during the five-day Thanksgiving period.

"Not even a roach could get on the train," said Janet Sullivan, an Amtrak ticket agent. "It's been the busiest we've been in our existence."

Across the country, Salvation Army and rescue mission officials reported no shortage of help for free turkey dinners being served to the homeless, the aging and the helpless.

"We've had a surplus of people wanting to come in and serve, in fact we've had to turn a lot down," said the Rev. Ed Carnell, director of the Rescue Mission of Salt Lake City.

In a church hall in San Francisco, a family scattered by adoption during the Great Depression were gathering for their first Thanksgiving together in 58 years.

Ed Maddox, 62, said that "on a scale of 1 to 10, (this Thanksgiving) would be a 10," because of the jubilant reunion with four of 10 brothers and sisters who were separated by their poverty-stricken parents, Agnus and Harry Bunan.

Places

history began. Also it may be the most difficult to study because many places that were known and recorded on maps 400 years ago are now covered by water.

Much of the research done by Stephenson in the past involved the study of changes in shape and position of North Carolina's barrier islands.

Serving as consultants for the names study will be historian William S. Powell, professor emeritus at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Powell's book "The North Carolina Gazetteer" is a dictionary of place names in the state.

Another consultant is Professor Neil Linebach, chairman of the department of geography at Appalachian State University.

Those assisting with the project include Dr. Owen J. Furseth, a professor in the department of earth sciences and geography at UNC-Charlotte; Hardee R. Cox of Washington, director of Global Map Services of Greenville, and ECU students Lynn Marie Muter of New Bern, Kyle Schick of Falls Church, Va. and David Jones of Centreville, Va.

Stephenson said that anyone wishing to submit a place name can contact him at the ECU Department of Geography and Planning. Give the name of the place, its location and its features — was it a hill, an island, a crossroads or a stream?

He said the name will be researched on historial maps and documents. Once the name is verified its longitude and latitude will be recorded.

Previously, officials had said the Cubans were divided into factions, some wanting only assurances against punishment for rioting, others insisting on promises they will not be deported and some demanding they be freed.

When asked whether the Cubans had made new demands, Sheehan said, "I characterize them as proposals." He refused to disclose specifics. But Rep. Clyde Holloway, whose district includes the center, said the requests included food and water.

"The detainees are cleaning up the area in front of the entrance this morning," Holloway said. "They're putting signs up marking the area near the entrance as off limits for their fellow inmates. It looks like a poster contest."

One sign says "Stay Out." Another says "Off Limits."

Oakdale Police Chief Virgil Chamberlain, whose 24-year-old son, Webster, is a hostage, expressed ambivalance toward the Cubans.

"They haven't burned our flag. None of us wants to go to a communist country," he said. "They want freedom and to be fairly treated. I think this will be all worked out."

A Catholic church in Oakdale set up cots for relatives of the 28 hostages there, and scheduled a Mass, an ecumenical service and a Thanksgiving dinner of turkey, ham and Louisiana "dirty rice."

In Atlanta, where about 1,000 of the 1,500 Cuban inmates appeared to remain in revolt Wednesday night, relatives of the prisoners held a vigil outside. Twenty to 30 people alternately sang and prayed in Spanish.

One Cuban inmate was shot to death Monday, when prisoners rioted and set fire to three buildings. Four inmates were taken to a hospital Wednesday, bringing to 20 the number of Atlanta guards and inmates reported receiving treatment.

The government's announcement last week that Cuba had agreed to accept 2,545 refugees who came to the United States in the 1980 exodus from Mariel set off the rioting.

An Army Special Operations Forces team was sent from Fort Bragg, N.C., to the prison, said Pentagon sources who spoke on condition of anonymity. They said the "military experts" would "give technical advice to the civilian authorities" and would not be used to mount an assault.

A two-way radio transmission by a man identifying himself as a captive guard warned against a rescue attempt.

"They're going to kill us if something stupid is done," he said.

The Atlanta inmates continued to stress that the hostages were unharmed, at one point Wednesday sending out a tape recording on which 23 captives said they were being treated humanely.

"My patience is endless," Bureau of Prisons Director Michael Quinlan told a Washington news conference. "I think the situation will go on so long as the hostages are unharmed."

Authorities offered no information on how long the inmates' supplies could hold out or whether food was being sent in.

"We're not releasing any information on any internal things," said prisons spokeswoman Maryellen Thoms in Washington.

There was a flurry of activity by armed officers outside the prison Wednesday night, but as in previous such incidents there was no apparent result and no official explanation.

The exodus of surrendering inmates continued, and Ms. Morse said today that 243 Cubans and 176 Americans have turned themselves in. As prisoners boarded buses to be moved to other prisons, some relatives shouted with joy at seeing their loved ones safe.

The Cubans were being moved as far as Lompoc, Calif., where officials at a federal prison said they were setting up a maximum-security wing in anticipation of receiving up to 100 inmates from Atlanta.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III has promised the Cubans a moratorium on deportations and individual hearings, and Cuban Deputy Foreign Minister Ricardo Alarcon pledged Wednesday that none would be jailed on their return to Cuba.

At the United Nations Security Council, however, U.S. Ambassador Vernon Walters said Cuba has a human rights record that casts doubt on whether the prisoners could expect fair treatment there.

Meese briefed President Reagan by telephone, but Reagan will not get involved in negotiations, said Howard H. Baker Jr., White House chief of staff.

The American Bar Association called on the Justice Department to try to defuse the uprisings by releasing some Cubans who have served their prison terms and are only being held because the government considers them excludable.

raised their own turkeys, but Leroy James, head extension agent for the county, said he knows of no commercial turkey growers in the county. Prices for turkey have been off this year, he said, so it's probably fortunate.

Rufus Daniels, meat department manager at the Farmville IGA, said he has sold 25-30 cases of turkeys so far this week. Actually, he said, turkeys started selling well about a month ago when people believed they were getting a bargain by buying them early. That hasn't turned out to be the case, he said, because prices have fallen. He predicted that prices will be up by Christmas and that, therefore, buying now for Christmas would be a good idea. Ham sales are up, too, he said.

A spokesman for Collins Grocery Co. at 109 W. Ninth St. said its chicken sales for this week have not been higher than usual, even though people were anticipating Thanksgiving.

"If anything, people are going to eat turkey this year," he said, "because it's so cheap. Low turkey prices cut into our chicken sales."

Revocation

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Board of Medical Examiners has revoked the medical license of a former Durham doctor who admitted writing prescriptions for painkilling drugs for himself.

The board revoked Dr. Jeffrey T. Martin's license in September after finding that he engaged in unprofessional conduct associated with the prescriptions, according to information on file at the board's offices. Disciplinary action taken against Martin and several other doctors was announced last week.

North Pitt's Jesse Frank (71) signals that the Panthers are number one as they prepare for Friday night's game with Ayden-Grifton in the Eastern semifinals. Frank, a tackle for the Panthers, is expected to play a key role in the line, along with, left to right: Tony Hopkins, Kevin Briley, Dennis Wilkins and Dennis Palmer. Roller Coaster Ride Season For North Pitt Still Headed Up, Panther Players Hope

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — North Pitt coach Larry Bolger said the Panthers' season has been a roller coaster ride, but he hopes the trip doesn't end when his team takes on county-rival Ayden-Grifton in the third round of the state 2-A football playoffs Friday.

"Coming off our non-conference schedule, we went into our conference schedule 1-2-1 and we don't have our quarterback (Calvin Hunter, who was out with a foot injury,) Bolger said.

"This coaching staff, Wayne Jackson coaching defensive line, Stuart Ennis our offensive coordinator and secondary coach, just did an outstanding job of keeping everybody together. (Then) with Calvin coming back up, we had hit the dip and now we are back on the upswing. Hopefully, we haven't reached the top of the roller coaster ride yet."

The Panthers rebounded from an abundance of early season injury and personnel problems to tie Ayden-Grifton for the Eastern Plains Conference title. They also garnered the conference's top seed by virtue of a 16-14 regular season win over the Chargers.

As Hunter has gotten back into sync, so has the Panthers' offense. But while Hunter's return was a big key, Bolger said the development of the offensive line has also been a big reason why the Panthers are still playing football at this time of year.

"Up through the Greene Central game (a 17-12 loss), it was a question of who is going to start this week," Bolger said. "We just never had the same five young men in there tackle to tackle week to week.

"We got settled on a line against Ayden-Grifton and it sort of fell back apart against Greene Central. We had some problems but right now we're pretty well set on Jesse Frank and Tony Hopkins at the tackles, Kevin Briley and Danny Wilkins at guard and Dennis Palmer at center.

"They've been jelling as an offensive unit and moving people off the ball and controlling the line of scrimmage."

North Pitt, 8-3-1, has won six straight games since the loss to Greene Central, including playoff victories over Capital Area 2-A conference members Zebulon (26-21) and Clayton (18-12).

When North Pitt last faced Ayden-Grifton, there was a question whether Hunter would be available. As it turned out he was, and that was one of the big reasons the Panthers came out winners in the game."

"Maybe in the back of their mind, they weren't expecting Calvin Hunter to participate in that game," Bolger said. "In our minds, he was still a question mark. We didn't know how effective he was going to be in that game.

"As it turned out, he turned in an outstanding performance for being out over a month. With the option game, they sort of went in with stop the dive and stop the pitch and Hunter shouldn't be able to run, which wasn't the case. He turned it up right away."

While North Pitt has improved since that time, Bolger said the Chargers are also a much better team.

"I think we're a little better than we were then," he said. "I don't think we have improved as much as AG has improved. We are improving every week but Ayden-Grifton is like a runaway freight train right now. They're just blowing over everybody."

The Chargers are indeed on a roll. They have knocked off Edenton and Ahoskie, two of the top-rated Eastern 2-A teams, in their two playoff games.

The key for the Panthers, Bolger said, is their option attack.

"North Pitt has a basic game plan," he said. "We're going to run the option at you. If we can't run the option we're going to try and throw the ball. People are going to have to stop the option. With Calvin Hunter in there and the offensive line we have in there, they're going to do a good job to open that option.

"This week, they are going to have stop all phases on the option. They're going to have to stop (fullback Collier) Mullins on the dive, Hunter on the keep and (halfback Michael) Daniels and (halfback Michael) Blow on the pitch."

But while Hunter and company try to find ways to exploit the Charger defense, the Panthers could also find themselves in trouble with the Ayden-Grifton offense led by all-purpose back Eric Blount.

The senior halfback has rushed for at least 100 yards in eight games this year, including two straight 100-yard games against the Chargers' two playoff foes.

Bolger said the Panthers know they have to stop Blount, but they also know that Ayden-Grifton has other weapons.

"Eric is a super offensive back. I think we should be prepared against AG this week.," he said. "We're going to have to gear up to stop that kind of runner. (But) we just can't focus on him. We know Darryl Moye can throw the ball. He proved that against Ahoskie. Tony Reeves is a good runner. Aaron Harper is a good runner.

"We're going to have to gear up to stop Ayden-Grifton. We can't gear up to stop one man. We know that he is about 50 percent or better of their offense, which we'll keep in our mind. But just to strictly key on him, it's going to turn somebody else and we can't do that."

First Game With Panthers A Crossroads For Chargers

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Following a 16-14 loss to North Pitt earlier this season, Ayden-Grifton coach B.T. Chappell said his team was at a crossroads. They could either regroup or fall apart.

Fortunately for Chappell, the Chargers chose the first option and came back to tie the Panthers for the Eastern Plains Conference title for the second year in a row.

"The guys have pulled together," Chappell said. "We were doing some struggling at that time and our team morale was such that players were pointing fingers and fussing among themselves.

"We had a lot of frustrated people after that game. But the guys, as a result of that first time we lost to them, they had a choice. They could go downhill or they could work. They've done a good job working the last few weeks. I think the biggest change is the attitude."

An open date after the North Pitt loss was the first step for the Chargers. They righted themselves, came back to defeat Greene Central 24-6 the following week and rolled through the rest of their conference schedule to tie the Panthers for the crown.

Then in the playoffs, Ayden-Grifton, 10-2, handed fifth-ranked Ahoskie a 45-17 loss and came back the next week and beat undefeated and third-ranked Edenton, 30-13.

And now, in a sense, the Chargers are back where they started as they prepare to take on North Pitt once again. But the stakes are higher this time. The winner moves on to the Eastern 2-A finals to take on the winner of the Whiteville-East Duplin game.

Chappell said he would like to see his team do a better job of handling the Panthers' option game, which hurt them the first time around.

"I hope we'll improve our execution on defense," he said. "We're going to have to take away all three of the triple threats, the dive, the quarterback keeper and the pitch.

"Clayton (which lost to North Pitt 18-12 last Friday) didn't do a good job of stopping the fullback. Then when they finally stopped the fullback, he pitched the ball and Michael Blow ran for a touchdown. You just can't key on one person.

"If you miss your responsibilities, you don't get much help. Each man on the defensive line has to do a good

Lady Pirates Open Year At The Lady Kat Classic

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Lady Pirates open their 1987-88 basketball season Friday in a tough situation with a new head coach.

Pat Pierson, who succeeded Emily Manwaring last spring, will field her first edition of the Lady Pirates in the Lady Kat Classic at the University of Kentucky Friday evening, facing Central Michigan. Tipoff is set for 5:30 p.m.

In the other game, hosting Kentucky takes on arch-rival Louisville at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, at 2 p.m., the consolation game will be played with the championship at 4 p.m.

For all four teams it will be the opening game of the year, although Central Michigan has played an exhibition game, defeating Brock (Ont.) 103-58.

While Pierson will be the new face on the Lady Pirate bench, there will be few others who are new to the East Carolina scene. All five of this year's starters were members of last year's squad, which saw Pierson add only three new members after taking over the helm.

"I guess we're as ready as we're going to be," Pierson said of the tournament. "We're certainly ready to play someone other than ourselves."

Central Michigan brings in a team that put together a 17-11 record and finished second in the Mid-American Conference last season. The leading scorer off that team is gone, Jody Beerman, but the Lady Chippewas return a strong player in 6-2 senior center Nancy Melissa, who averaged 14.2 points and 8.9 rebounds last year.

However, she is not listed as a probably starter for this year's opener. Those five include 5-6 senior Molly Pinche (5.9 ppg), 6-0 junior transfer Malisa Bryant at the forwards, 6-0 freshman Sue Nissen at center; and 5-7 junior Shirley Joiner (7.3) and 5-5 junior Sherry Kelly (3.6) at the guards.

"They lost three starters off last year's team," Pierson said. "Melissa and Pinche are the only two starters back — so they're probably about like us in what they have back."

However, Pierson pointed out, the Chippewas are tall. "They have six people on the roster who are 6-0 or better," she said.

Like the Lady Pirates, the Chippewas will have a new point guard. "They've played a tough schedule in the past and will be real strong. They are well coached and very patient on offense."

The Lady Pirates have experience and all five starters have a great deal of it. Monique Pompili (6-0, Sr., 12.1 ppg, 8.0 rpg) and Alma Bethea (6-0, Sr., 11.8 ppg, 6.2 rpg) will be at the forwards, while Gretta Savage (6-2, Jr., 7.9 ppg, 4.1 rpg) will be at center. The guards will be Chris O'Connor (5-9 Jr., 7.3 ppg) and Irish Hamilton (5-3, So., 2.3 ppg).

Top reserve off the bench will probably be 5-8 junior guard Pam Williams, who averaged 4.9 points a game last season and, like the others, saw starting action at times.

This will be the second meeting between the Chippewas and the Lady Pirates. In their only previous meeting — in 1986 — East Carolina took a 77-71 victory.

Pierson said she is worried about the poor shooting of the Lady Pirates going into the touranment. "This is not the way I would prefer to open the season — playing in a strong tournament like this," Pierson said, "especially in my first year. I don't know how the players will react and they don't know how I'll react.

"And unfamiliarity breeds fear," she added. "I'm very nervous about the opener. But that may be unfounded since we do have so many experienced players here."

Pierson said the Lady Pirates will have to play strong defense, contain Melissa and execute the offense with patience. "And, we've got to shoot better than the 30 percent we shot in our last scrimmage," she added.

The Lady Pirates, following the Lady Kat Classic, will return home next Friday to host their own Lady Pirate Classic.

Richmond Has Experience, Talent To Win CAA Crown

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

University of Richmond Coach Dick Tarrant says that while he has a veteran team returning, the key to it all will be whether the Spiders are the most ready when it comes to the Colonial Athletic Association's post-season tournament.

The winner of that automatically advances into the NCAA tournament, a place the Spiders have been before.

And, most observers believe, they will be returning there come spring.

Tarrant is blessed by having lost not one single player off last year's squad that turned in a 15-14 overall record and an 8-6 CAA mark. And with that wealth of experience, most coaches in the conference are saying that the championship trophy might as well be sent on to Richmond to place in its trophy case right now.

"I'm excited that we have kids who think we can be pretty good," Tarrant said. "If things go right for us, I believe we can be a formidable team."

With all five starters back from last year, the Spiders field, by far, the most experienced team in the conference. And with such superstars as David Robinson and Brian Rowson out of the league now, the Spiders may be the most talented — even with the lack of a superstar.

University of Richmond

□1986-87: 15-14
□CAA Record: 8-6 (tie for third)
□Coach: Dick Tarrant (7th year, 111-69)
□Top Losses: None
□Top Returnees: Scott Stapleton (6-4, F/G, 4.9, 3.9), Peter Woolfolk (6-5, F, 13.9, 8.1); Steve Kratzer (6-8, C, 12.0, 6.7); Rodney Rice (6-3, G, 12.0, 3.1); Ken Atkinson (6-0, G, 7.5, 1.9)
□Top Newcomers: Gary Rich, 7-0, Jr. (transfer from Ohio State).
□Projected Finish: First.

Returning at the center position is 6-8 senior Steve Kratzer who averaged 12.0 points and 6.7 rebounds a game last season.

He'll be flanked by 6-5 senior Peter Woolfolk, who hit 13.8 points and 8.1 rebounds last season — the leader in both categories — and 6-4 sophomore Scott Stapleton (5.4 ppg, 4.5 rpg).

In the backcourt will be Rodney Rice, a 6-3 senior with a 12.0 point average and Ken Atkinson, a 6-0 sophomore with a 7.5 point average.

Atkinson was the CAA's Rookie of the Year last season while Woolfolk grabbed the honor three seasons ago.

That experience — coupled with the factors of balance, depth and enthusiasm — makes the Spiders look like a champion, although Tarrant admits that it still must be proven on the court.

Atkinson, in his freshman year, proved an able leader on the court for the Spiders. His final shots in games either won or extended games on seven different occasions last season. Thus, despite being a rookie, he played like a veteran. He has the ability to drive the lane and either score or dish off to a teammate with a better approach to the basket.

Rice is expected to carry much of the outside scoring load. He definitely is a 3-point range shooter and can help open up the inside game with his shooting from the perimeter.

Woolfolk's junior year saw him

Blackman Paces Mav Victory

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Rolando Blackman was a little worried when he started slowly and the defending Midwest Division champion Dallas Mavericks fell into third place behind Denver and Houston.

"Sure it bothered me," said Blackman, a Western Conference all-star the past three seasons. "I've been really inconsistent and tonight I asked my teammates to really look for me. You want to execute the offense, but you also want to show your skill level."

Blackman scored 30 points Wednesday night, leading the Mavericks to a 113-107 victory over Detroit. He scored 17 in the third period as Dallas outscored the Pistons 40-29 for a 90-70 lead, then held off a Detroit comeback in the final quarter.

"It was just a matter of time before Ro had a game like this," said Derek Harper, who had 18 points and 10 assists. "When he hits his shots, it opens a lot more shots for me."

A career 51-percent shooter from the field, Blackman hit only 45 percent in his first nine games. He was 12-for-18 on Wednesday night.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was New York 104, Cleveland 101; Indiana 133, San Antonio 102; Boston 117, Atlanta 102; Chicago 103, Milwaukee 101; Houston 109, Phoenix 103; and Washington 101, Los Angeles Clippers 96.

Dallas lost its shooting touch in the face of a Detroit press in the fourth quarter, missing 11 of its first 14 shots in the period.

A 24-10 run cut Dallas' lead to 104-100 with 3:10 left, but Sam Perkins made four straight free throws and Blackman hit a 20-footer to clinch the victory. In the fourth period, Detroit outscored the Mavericks 37-23.

"We had an excellent three quarters offensively but then they created problems for us," Dallas Coach John MacLeod said.

"We just dug ourselves a hole that we couldn't get out of," Pistons Coach Chuck Daly said. "We made a scramble at them but just couldn't get over the hump."

Joe Dumars led the Pistons with 19 points and Adrian Dantley added 17, 13 of them in the first half. Mark Aguirre had 20 points and Perkins 18 points and 12 rebounds for Dallas.

Bulls 103, Bucks 101

Chicago edged Milwaukee as Michael Jordan scored 33 points and rookie Scottie Pippen added 12 of his 18 in the fourth quarter.

Paul Pressey, who led the Bucks with 18 points, 13 rebounds and 10 assists, had a chance to tie the score in the final seconds, but Pippen slapped away his shot with two seconds left.

Jordan gave the Bulls the lead for good at 100-98 with 1:19 left, and Charles Oakley, who had 19 points and 14 rebounds, made it 102-98 29 seconds later. Pippen then missed two free throws before John Lucas' 3-pointer made it 102-101 with 12 seconds left, and Oakley's free throw with six seconds remaining completed the scoring.

Celtics 117, Hawks 102

Darren Daye shot 10-for-11 from the field and scored 26 points, while Larry Bird shook off painful Achilles tendons to spark a decisive fourth-quarter spurt against Atlanta.

The Hawks, who trailed by 11 points in the third period, got as close as 82-80 starting the fourth quarter, before Bird keyed a 14-4 spurt with four points and a rebound that set up another basket. He left the game with Boston ahead by 13 points with 6:46 left.

Danny Ainge and Dennis Johnson had 21 points each and Robert Parish 20 for the Celtics, while Dominique Wilkins topped Atlanta with 22 points.

Knicks 104, Cavaliers 101

New York snapped a 14-game road losing streak dating back to March 6 as Gerald Wilkins came off the bench with 20 points and Mark Jackson and Kenny Walker keyed an 18-7 surge in the fourth quarter against Cleveland.

The game was tied 80-80 on a dunk by the Cavaliers' Mark West with 9:02 left in the game. Jackson then scored seven points and Walker six in the next 6:12 as the Knicks took a 98-87 lead.

Jackson and Walker scored 16 points each for the Knicks, who lost their first five road games this season. Phil Hubbard had 16 for Cleveland, which got as close as two points in the final minute.

Rockets 109, Suns 103

Allen Leavell scored a season-high 23 points and Houston, trailing Phoenix by eight with 9:22 left, rallied behind the scoring of Akeem Olajuwon and World B. Free in the fourth quarter.

Free scored six of his eight fourth-quarter points during a 15-4 run that gave the Rockets a 97-94 advantage with 4:15 left. The lead then see-sawed until Olajuwon, who scored eight of his 18 points in the fourth period, put the Rockets ahead to stay at 101-99 on two foul shots with 1:42 remaining.

Phoenix, which scored just seven points in the final three minutes and was outscored 46-21 at the free-throw line for the game, got 26 points from Walter Davis.

Bullets 101, Clippers 96

Washington snapped a five-game losing streak as Bernard King scored 13 of his 25 points in the fourth quarter and Jeff Malone hit a pair of clutch baskets in the final minute against Los Angeles.

Malone, who had 20 points, hit jumpers of 18 and 12 feet in a 44-second span, giving the Bullets a 101-96 margin with nine seconds remaining.

The Clippers were led by Mike Woodson's 26 points and a season-high 23 from rookie Joe Wolf. Washington won although Moses Malone scored only two points and missed all seven of his field-goal attempts.

Pacers 133, Spurs 102

Indiana took control of its game with San Antonio with a 23-7 spurt in the second quarter.

Wayman Tisdale scored 10 of his 26 points during the 6½-minute run that turned a 38-35 lead into a 61-42 bulge.

Final Battle Only Fitting For Rivals

Tom Morris

They've been mentioned in the same breath since the early days of August. And in all fairness, you couldn't say one without mentioning the other. From Bethel to Grifton, any high school football follower worth his weight in gold knew the Eastern Plains conference title would probably come down to a matchup between North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton.

After all, they had history on their sides. The two schools tied for the EPC crown in 1986 and both returned enough key players to challenge for the title again.

Now people in Farmville may argue this point, and with just reason. The Jaguars had a fine year and gave both North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton all they could handle before succumbing in close games.

But nevertheless, here it is almost four-and-a-half months later and the Chargers and the Panthers are getting ready to tangle again.

This time the stakes are higher.

Now the two teams are battling in the semifinals of the Eastern 2-A playoffs. The winner advances to play the winner of the East Duplin-Whiteville game. The loser gets to begin basketball season.

The conference title was decided long ago. The teams tied once again, with North Pitt getting the top seed by virtue of a 16-14 win over the Chargers.

The Panthers could have had won the title outright but they stumbled against Greene Central, 17-12.

But still, it's kind of ironic that these two teams are meeting again.

"We knew Ayden-Grifton had a strong team going into the conference schedule," said North Pitt coach Larry Bolger. "I believe, in the back of B.T. Chappell's mind and in the back of my mind, we sort of both felt we'd see each other down the road in the playoffs."

That's mighty prophetic, but Chappell, to a lesser extent, was of the same thinking as Bolger.

"We told each other maybe it would happen," he said. "It was a possibility. Both of us knew it would be a long road and a lot of hard tough games before we ever got back.

"The odds were against both of us getting back together, but we both beat the odds."

That they did. Ayden-Grifton knocked off two of the more highly-ranked teams in the state in third-ranked Edenton (30-17) and fifth-ranked Ahoskie (45-17).

North Pitt was no slouch either as the Panthers took care of the best the Capital Area 2-A conference had to offer in Clayton (18-12) and Zebulon (26-21.).

"We knew how strong Ayden was," Bolger said. "They'd played a tough schedule. They beat a 4-A school (Kinston), a couple of 3-A schools (Washington and D.H. Conley) and got beat by a strong Wallace-Rose Hill team (2-A). Wallace had to come back for the last quarter for the winning touchdown.

"Edenton and Ahoskie were ranked in the top four all year. It didn't surprise me at all that Ayden-Grifton knocked them off.

"B.T. proved that the EPC was tougher than the NEAC (Northeastern 2-A Conference). By the same token, North Pitt proved that the EPC is better than the Capital Area conference, this year."

Now, the teams meet again and that in itself is unique. Rarely do two teams so close in proximity get a return engagement this far into the playoffs.

And for a rivalry that runs extremely high during the regular season, temperatures will be raised just a little bit higher this time around.

"That's a definite factor, knowing the other players," Chappell said. "We didn't have that problem with Edenton and Ahoskie. We've been trying to tell the boys, that it doesn't matter who we're playing.

"(We've been telling them) this team has made it to the third round of the state playoffs. No matter what you think about some of the players, you're going to have to be ready to play a good football team."

Bolger, though, knows the Chargers are more than a little upset over losing the last two games between the two, and in effect a chance at sole possession of the EPC title, to his Panthers.

"Sure they are," he said. "They were upset in '86. They were upset in '87. A lot of people think that Ayden-Grifton has a stronger team than North Pitt does.

"You can look at it on paper and black and white and that may be the case. But when you have two schools as close as North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton are, and a county rivalry such as it is, and all the kids know each other, that is one intangible you can't add into the game plan."

But while emotions will no doubt be running high, Chappell hopes to curb that fire somewhat.

"The first time we played them that is one of the things that hurt us. We went out there and played good against Edenton and Ahoskie and they (the players) don't know anybody on those teams. They were using their heads to think more and they weren't letting their emotions play for them. They were playing better fundamental football."

And no doubt, emotion will play a big part in this game. With a few exceptions, such as Charger running back Eric Blount, North Pitt end-linebacker Ashley Sheppard or tackle Jesse Frank, this is not a game chock full of college football prospects.

Rather, this may be the last game for many of these players.

And that's where the competitive factor comes in. These kids play football because they love the game, not necessarily for the chance to earn a college scholarship.

And in that same vein are players like Ayden-Grifton center Ben Vaughn or North Pitt guard Danny Wilkins, just to name a few, who are undersized for the rigors of the offensive line yet excel through determination.

"It's something that is kind of built into athletes," Chappell said. "If you are a competitor, you are not going to go out there and expect to get beat. You expect to win.

"I used to coach at North Pitt (when the Panthers first started finding success in their program). We had boys that would come out there that had never played football but they expected to win. They have good competitors. They've got good kids. When they walk out there, they expect to win."

But, unfortunately, only one team will emerge as the victor.

First Game...

job. If one of them is having a bad night and they realize they can run the ball at him, then they'll do it. Last time we played them, our defensive tackles did not do that good and they hurt us there."

One key for Ayden-Grifton here could be Steven Tucker, who has since moved from linebacker into a starting defensive tackle position.

In the earlier game, Hunter was starting his first game in five weeks due to a foot injury. Despite missing four games during that span, he still ended up with 193 yards rushing and another 572 yards passing.

Hunter has the offense in full sync now, according to Chappell.

"I've looked at North Pitt lately," he said. "They're doing an excellent job of coming off the ball. Those guys come off low. They've done a good job of blocking.

"The fact that (fullback) Mullins has so many yards in recent games is Hunter is doing such an excellent job of reading on the tackles. This is a much better North Pitt team than we saw the first time out."

But the Chargers are also improved. While they are led on offense by halfback Eric Blount, they are not really a one-man show.

Blount had 1,103 yards rushing in the regular season and two plus-100 yard rushing games in the playoffs. But halfback Tony Reeves contributed 510 yards rushing in the regular season while fullback Aaron Harper added another 482.

Quarterback Darryl Moye threw for 110 yards and two touchdowns against Ahoskie.

Blount's load was light during the Chargers' non-conference schedule but it picked up once the conference schedule began as the games became more competitive. He has had eight 100 yard rushing games this season.

"Since the competition like against North Pitt, there wasn't any need to take him out," Chappell said. "All year, we've had pretty much the same ratio of running between the backs. Eric's been getting it a little more than the other backs all year."

"(But) they're doing a good enough job that if somebody specifically wants to shut him down we've still got a running attack."

If the first game between these two teams was any indication, the Chargers will need a big game out of all their offensive weapons Friday night

"Offensively, we had trouble moving the ball on them," Chappell said. "We scored twice on them but it was very hard to move the ball. They did a good job keeping us from breaking any long runs. We got a couple of scores but they didn't come easy.

"They can just about play you honest anyway with what they have up front. Their people up front do a good job. That allows their other guys to just sit back and play the pass."

Letter Says Crum Being Forced Out

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — The faculty chairman at the University of North Carolina wrote in a letter that he thinks Dick Crum is being forced out as the school's head football coach, despite denials by university officials.

George Kennedy, faculty chairman at the school, said in a letter sent last week to two UNC professors that Crum was being fired, the Durham Morning Herald reported in its Thursday editions. The newspaper said it obtained the letter Wednesday.

Reports that Crum would not return next year as coach have been circulating since Nov. 17. On Nov. 19, UNC athletic director John Swofford released a statement endorsed by Chancellor Christopher Fordham III saying negotiations between Crum and school officials had taken place, but that no conclusion had been reached and that the coach had the option to stay.

Kennedy, a professor in the classics department, said in a letter dated Nov. 18 that, after meeting with school administrators, he concluded the coach was being forced out.

"My inquiries lead me to conclude that the real reasons for Coach Crum being fired are deeper than loss of games," Kennedy stated in the letter to history professor Don Higginbotham and Dan Okun, a professor emeritus of environmental science and engineering.

"The decision that he go seems to have been made almost entirely on what could be described as educational grounds in the wide sense: the judgment that the football program is not meeting the internal standards of what it should be within an academic setting."

Kennedy was unavailable for comment Wednesday night. G.K. Sams, chairman of the UNC classics department, said Kennedy and his wife were out of town for Thanksgiving.

Swofford said Wednesday he had not talked to Kennedy and could make no comment. However, Swofford said, "This is in (Crum's) court. We're trying to talk through it."

Crum refused to comment on Kennedy's letter.

There was no further word Wednesday on negotiations between Crum and UNC officials. Settlement talks are believed to have been going on for some time, but appear to have stalled. Crum has four years remaining on his contract.

Crum has been coach at UNC for 10 years, compiling a 72-41-3 record, making him the winningest football coach in school history. But the Tar Heels have fallen on rough times recently, going 24-25-2 in their last 51 games and recording only one winning season in the last three years.

Seton Hall Ready For Glory Days' Return

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though Seton Hall has posted only one winning record in seven seasons, Coach P.J. Carlesimo is convinced the Pirates are ready to return to the basketball glory days that began in the late 1930s and lasted through the early 1960s.

"We're going to win," Carlesimo said as the Pirates prepared to face New Mexico in Friday night's opening semifinal game of the Big Apple NIT at Madison Square Garden. Iowa State meets No. 14 Florida in the other semifinal.

The semifinal winners play for the title Saturday night, following a consolation game between the losers.

The Pirates have won twice so far in the NIT, beating George Mason 85-63 and overwhelming Middle Tennessee 93-61. Middle Tennessee went to the NCAA Tournament last season and was a preseason pick to win the Ohio Valley Conference title.

Seton Hall outplayed the Blue Raiders in every aspect of the game, convincing Carlesimo of the strength of his team.

"I don't like to praise people that much, but it was important to let them know what a solid effort that was," Carlesimo said. "Our team could not have responded any better. You don't want to super-magnify any game on Nov. 24, but the effort was unbelievable."

Great Alaska Shootout Set To Begin

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The usual scenario for an in-season college basketball tournament is to line up the host school against a team that guarantees a victory and the host's appearance in the chapionship game.

Somebody should deliever that message to Alaska-Anchorage.

The 10th Great Alaska Shootout gets under way Friday with host Alaska-Anchorage going against a team that misses fitting the above description of a first-round dog — No. 1 Syracuse.

Always the only Division II school in the eight-team field, Alaska-Anchorage has never shied away from playing a tough team in the opening game.

Last year, the Seawolves lost to Iowa 91-81 and the year before it was another Big Ten school, Purdue, which beat Alaska-Anchorage 92-70. In fact, the Seawolves have won just one of the nine opening-round games — 86-85 over Pacific in the 1979 tournament.

"I think the idea is to get us national exposure playing the best in the nation," Coach Ron Abegglen said. "We're probably going to take some lumps with the caliber of teams that are in there."

Syracuse is joined by two other ranked teams, No. 9 Michigan and No. 16 Arizona.

Friday's other first-round matchups have Southwest Texas State facing Alabama-Birmingham, Michigan meeting Miami, Fla., and Arizona against Duquesne.

The semifinals will be played Saturday and the championship game on Monday night.

Five games will be televised nationally by ESPN and that's where the exposure Abegglen mentioned comes in.

Last year was the first Shootout in which the Seawolves managed to win more than one game. Alaska-Anchorage beat Texas 80-68 and Washington 77-75 to run its nine-year Shootout record to 7-20.

All but one of those seven came as a result of the tournament containing a losers' bracket, guaranteeing each team three games.

Alaska-Anchorage was ranked No. 1 in Division II for a time last year and finished 23-7 in Abegglen's first season. But three starters, including Division II first-team All-Americans Hansi Gnad and Jesse Jackson, graduated.

The team began this season with victories in three of four games, beating Alaska-Southeast, Alaska-Fairbanks and splitting two games with Angelo State.

"I know I should be worried as heck, but I really think we're going to have a pretty good ballclub," Abegglen said.

Good enough for Syracuse?

return to the form he had shown as a freshman, earning him All-District IV honors by the National Association of Basketball Coaches. Strong, and a good leaper, he has a history of making clutch baskets also.

Kratzer may be the best big man in the league this year. He made the all-star team in two tournaments and was also a first-team all-CAA selectee. He led the Spiders in field goal percentage at 67.3 and was second in scoring and rebounding to Woolfolk.

Off the bench, the Spiders have a wealth of guard talent in Benjy Taylor, a 6-2 junior, William Massenburg, a 6-0 sophomore, and Eric English, a 6-2 junior.

Mike Winiecki, a 6-7 junior, will provide backup duty for Kratzer along with Steve Floyd, a 6-7 junior, who can go outside into the 3-point range.

Gary Rich, a 7-0 junior transfer from Ohio State, could also play a key role as a relief man.

With so much experience, Tarrant brought in only three freshmen. They include Bebe Bocachica, a 6-6 swingman from Ponce, Puerto Rico; Hank Dudek, a 6-7 forward from Dallas, Texas; and Paul Webb, a 6-9 forward from Brisbane, Australia.

"We're ahead of where we were last year at this time because of the experience," Tarrant said. "Our goal is to get to the NCAAs and I'm not sure that our league can put two or three teams in this year.

"So, we have to pinpoint the season for one weekend in March."

That weekend, March 4-6, will decide the CAA champion — and unless there are some surprises, it would appear that Richmond is the heavy favorite to wear that crown.

Defense Of America's Cup May See Changes In Race

NEW YORK (AP) — America's defense of the America's Cup may happen sooner than anticipated, and that isn't the only change that could occur in sailing's biggest show.

The competition could be held next summer, instead of 1990 or 1991 as previously scheduled, and could be staged in boats considerably larger than the 12-meter yachts that have been sailed for nearly 30 years.

All that, because a Manhattan judge refused Wednesday to allow a reinterpretation of the deed that sets the rules for the competition and awarded a New Zealand yacht club a victory in the first leg of its effort to make a bid for the trophy.

The judge rejected the San Diego Yacht Club's request to alter the Cup's Deed of Gift, the trust document which established the competition and its rules.

"The court finds that the San Diego Yacht Club has failed to make the required showing to justify making truly radical and fundamental changes in the deed," state Supreme Court Justice Carmen Ciparick wrote in a 19-page decision.

The San Diegans "may either accept the challenge, forfeit the cup, or negotiate agreeable terms with the challenger," she wrote.

Ciparick also refused to allow the 1887 deed to be reinterpreted so contests would be held under the same terms as the past 30 years.

She noted that after a valid challenge, the parties are free to make rules and arrangements for the competition by mutual consent.

The San Diego club won the America's Cup in 1987 in Australia from the Royal Perth Yacht Club which won the it in 1983 from the New York Yacht Club.

On July 15, the Mercury Bay Boating Club, led by businessman Michael Fay, issued a challenge for a one-on-one match in 90-foot boats in June 1988. Fay said he spent $16 million trying to win the cup in the Australian competition.

San Diego rejected the challenge as invalid because the New Zealanders' boat had not been built when the challenge was issued.

The New Zealanders sued to have their challenge honored, saying a literal reading of the Deed of Gift makes their challenge valid.

Roanoke, Bears Take Wins

ROBERSONVILLE — Hosting Roanoke High School and Bear Grass came away as winners in the second round of the Williamston Enterprise Tipoff Classic Wednesday night.

Roanoke swept a pair of games from Jamesville, winning the boys' contest, 61-27, and taking the girls' game, 52-26. Bear Grass surprised Williamston in both games, winning the boys' game, 61-40, and adding the girls' affair, 40-27.

In the opening boys' game of the evening, Bear Grass built up a 12-7 lead and never let go of it. The Bears outhit the Tigers, 16-15, in the second period to take a 28-22 lead into the dressing rooms.

Bear Grass continued to pull away in the third period, upping its lead to 48-36. Williamston managed a 14-13 margin in the final frame.

Cowan led Bear Grass with 13 points while Steve Brown added 10. Felix Purvis had 12 to pace Williamston.

Roanoke's boys inched out into an 11-9 lead in the first quarter of its game with Jamesville. The Redskins then pulled away with a 15-6 advantage in the second frame to earn a 26-15 halftime lead.

Roanoke continued to pound the Bullets in the third period, 22-4, raising its lead to 48-19. The Redskins polished off Jamesville, 13-8, in the final quarter.

Richard Moore and Paul Council each scored 15 points to lead Roanoke. No one scored in double figures for Jamesville.

In the opening girls' game, Roanoke shot out to a 13-4 lead over the Lady Bullets in the first period. They continued to dominate play in the second quarter with a 12-2 margin, running the lead to 25-6 at the break.

Roanoke added 21 more points to Jamesville's 7 in the third period, making it 46-13. Jamesville rallied, 13-6, in the final quarter to no avail.

Germaine Wallace led Roanoke with 12 points while Val Clark had 11 to pace Jamesville.

Williamston and Bear Grass battled to an 8-8 tie after one period in their girls' game. The Bears then inched out into an 18-16 halftime lead.

In the third period, Bear Grass began to pull away, running its lead to 27-20 at the buzzer. In the final quarter, Bear Grass held a 13-7 advantage to wrap it up.

Janet Rogerson led Bear Grass with 16 while Kim Hawkins had 17 to lead Williamston.

Boomer Asks To Be Traded

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Boomer Esiason is no longer the brightest star among all Cincinnati athletes, and it took only two months for him to become the target of heavy criticism which has him hoping for a trade.

He's mad as can be and not going to take it anymore. But a trade does not appear to be on the offing, according to Mike Brown, the NFL team's assistant general manager.

Brown confirmed Wednesday that Esiason and his agent, David Falk, are seeking as trade.

"I explained to both of them it's not in the cards," Brown said.

"He knows we're counting on him. There will be better times. He'll look back on this as a learning experience."

Esiason may not be swayed by talk that won't do much to blunt fan criticism, however.

"I feel I might be better off in another city, just for a change of venue," Esiason said in a telephone conversation. The fourth-year quarterback admitted that the poor treatment he feels he has received from Bengals fans has made him consider going elsewhere.

"People back here say, 'He is in the public eye, he makes a lot of money, he should be able to handle the criticism.' I could handle criticism of my playing, but not of me as a person and what I believe in and stuff like that.

"I don't have to deal with that. I'm not the President of the United States or running for the Supreme Court. I'm a damn football quarterback.

"Everyone wants to attack someone and I'm just the one."

The Bengals are 3-7, with six straight home losses. Esiason has been booed in every game since the NFL players strike, during which he was an outspoken leader of the players who walked out.

"I feel I'm a person who stood up for everything I was taught in Boy Scouts," he said. "I stood up for those less fortunate. I feel it was one of the most unselfish things I did during the strike. I lost $300,000.

"The thing that hurts most is that it's character assassination, directed at me personally (by the fans). Especially during the strike, in Cincinnati, I was a focal point."

As was Coach Sam Wyche.

Judge To Rule Friday On Howard's Protests

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge will decide Friday whether the Division I-AA football playoffs, scheduled to begin this weekend, can be held up by a suit brought by Howard University.

Howard sued the NCAA on Wednesday, claiming its team wasn't invited to the tournament despite a 9-1 record "for unlawful and racially motivated reasons."

Lawyers for the university asked U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn to issue a temporary restraining order to stop the first-round games.

The $9 million suit alleges antitrust and breach of contract violations by the NCAA in overlooking Howard, whose 9-1 record is better than any of the 16 teams in the playoff field.

"When the time for championship consideration arrived, defendants blatantly ignored Howard's superb record and instead imposed irrational, arbitrary and racially discriminatory criteria," the suit charges.

Also named as defendants were the four members of the playoff selection committee — Indiana State Athletic Director Bernard Cooper, Northeast Louisiana AD Benny Hollis, Jackson State AD Walter Reed and Boston University AD Rick Taylor. The suit alleges they "have developed friendships which influence their ability to rank or rate a fellow competitor school objectively."

Howard's 9-1 record was second only to unbeaten Holy Cross in Division I-AA, but the Bison were denied a playoff slot when they finished 18th in the NCAA's final rankings. That was one spot short of getting a post-season bid.

Holy Cross, 11-0, didn't go to the playoffs because its conference, the Colonial, had voted not to send a team into post-season play.

Howard won the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, but its cause was hurt because of the weakness of its schedule. Four of the victories came over teams classified below I-AA.

Howard President James Cheek called the suit part of "an all-out war" on the NCAA.

Other schools involved in the playoffs scoffed at the legal action.

"I am not to judge that they are not better than other teams, but as I look at Howard and examine schedules, they are not on par with the teams that made it," Marshall Coach George Chaump said. Marshall, Richmond and North Texas State share the worst records among the playoff teams, 7-4.

"You can't just take the win-loss record," Chaump said.

"You have to look at strength of schedule," Dr. Richard McDuffie, athletic director at North Texas State, said. "We played Oklahoma (the top-ranked major-college team) the first week of the season and were the only team to score two touchdowns against them."

The suit mentioned that North Texas State had moved ahead of Howard in the final rankings even though Howard beat No. 14 Delaware State 12-7 on the last weekend of the season while North Texas State was also cited his team's schedule.

"I'm convinced we played a difficult schedule," he said. "Whenever you're in a selection process, the first two or three are easy and then it gets hard. I'm sure Howard has a right to feel it should be there, but I certainly can't contest the field that was selected."

Asked why Howard didn't complain previously about the selection system, Howard deputy general counsel Francis Smith said the school only sought legal action "when the door was closed in our face."

"I don't think we're involved in sour grapes," he said. "We believe we have a compelling argument. We believe a fair-minded judge will listen to our complaint."

Latin American Presidents Discuss Area's Debts

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Eight Latin American presidents gathered today in this Pacific coastal resort in an attempt to jointly confront the United States and other industrialized nations on foreign debt and trade, twin problems that have devastated the region's economies.

The summit of the so-called Group of Eight is not expected to produce significant results, but its participants see the gathering as an important first step toward greater overall cooperation.

Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda has denied widespread speculation that the summit is aimed at creating a new Organization of American States without the United States.

The OAS was formed in 1948 to address joint problems of North and South America.

At a news conference earlier this week, Sepulveda also discounted suggestions that the eight Latin nations would try to form a "debtors' front" against the industrialized lending nations of Europe and North America.

Nonetheless, the meeting will be the largest of its kind since 1967, when President Lyndon Johnson convoked a meeting of Latin American leaders in Uruguay to discuss the Alliance for Progress program begun by his predecessor, John F. Kennedy.

The meeting brings together presidents Miguel de la Madrid of Mexico, Jose Sarney of Brazil, Raul Alfonsin of Argentina, Alan Garcia of Peru, Eric Arturo Delvalle of Panama, Virgilio Barco of Colombia, Julio Maria Sanguinetti of Uruguay and Jaime Lusinchi of Venezuela.

Their countries have foreign debts totaling $343 billion. Brazil alone owes $105 billion, making it the biggest debtor nation in the developing Third World.

At a preliminary meeting in Punta del Este last October, Argentina's foreign minister, Dante Caputo, told his colleagues that sine the explosion of the debt crisis in 1982, Latin American nations have paid $180 billion in interest, while their debt has increased by more than $100 billion.

While their debt has been rising, the Latin American countries collectively have seen their export earnings fall in recent years, largely due to a decrease in prices for the oil, gas and other commodities they produce. They also have expressed concern recently about what they view as the growth of protectionist sentiment in the United States and elsewhere.

The Mexican foreign minister noted that each of the eight nations has taken a different course in dealing with its debt problem, "which makes joint negotiations rather impractical.

"But what we can do," Sepulveda said, "is develop a common platform ... and within the framework of the one-on-one negotiating strategy favored by world financial institutions such as the World Bank (and) the International Monetary Fund ..., secure individual advantages for each country."

Sepulveda said that by "waging a concerted effort, Latin American nations can also persuade developed countries to scrap protectionist provisions from their trade policies and open their markets to heavily indebted economies."

The presidents will conduct working sessions Friday and Saturday and end their meeting with a joint declaration on Sunday.

Arab Guerrilla Uses Hang Glider For Israeli Attack

KIRYAT SHMONA, Israel (AP) — An Arab guerrilla on a suicide mission landed a hang glider in northern Israel and killed six soldiers before he was shot dead. Israeli troops today killed a second guerrilla fleeing into Lebanon.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir called his 10-member inner Cabinet on an emergency session to discuss Israel's response to the Wednesday night attack, the deadliest from Lebanon in nearly a decade.

The Damascus-based Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, headed by Ahmed Jibril, issued a communique in Syria claiming responsibility for the attack.

It was the deadliest attack on Israel from Lebanon in nine years, and it sent jitters throughout northern Israel. Civilian border settlements stationed guards overnight and thousands of panicked residents spent the night in underground bomb shelters.

Major cities along a 35-mile stretch from the Mediterranean sea to the foot of the Israeli-annexed Golan Heights went on alert as teams of anti-terrorist commandos continued searching today for other guerrillas.

Many schools and businesses were closed today in Kiryat Shmona, a settlement 100 miles north of Jerusalem. Residents were advised to stay home or in shelters.

"We don't want to take any chances. We'd rather be safe today and not sorry tomorrow," an army officer said. "It is not recommended to travel in the Kiryat Shmona."

Military officers spoke on condition of anonymity in keeping with Israeli military regulations.

Shamir telephoned Kiryat Shmona Mayor Prosper Azran today and promised the government would act to protect the settlement.

"The terrorists will not succeed in shaking the security of the Galilee," Shamir said, referring to northern Israel's border zone.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin visited the area before dawn.

Using two motorized hang gliders, the guerrillas flew from south Lebanon over one of the world's most heavily-monitored borders.

One red-and-white glider landed 600 yards inside Israel near the communal farm of Beit Hillel at about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday, according to an army officer who briefed reporters in nearby Kiryat Shmona.

The second craft landed 700 yards inside the Israeli-patrolled border zone of south Lebanon, the army said. Search troops killed a guerrilla fleeing the area today.

"What characterizes this action is that it was a suicide attack," Israel's Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron said on Israel army radio. "There was no chance of returning alive."

Haitian Junta Says Election Vigilantes Won't Be Tolerated

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Vigilantes who have set up barricades and killed gunmen trying to disrupt upcoming elections "will not be tolerated," a member of the governing junta said.

Maj. Gen. Williams Regala's statement and the sight of trucks carrying government troops through the capital were the government's first response to pre-election violence that has gripped this city of 1 million people.

"The maintenance of order and public security is the exclusive responsibilty of the armed forces of Haiti," Regala, who is also minister of Defense and the Interior, said in a communique.

"It will not be tolerated that certain groups or associations substitute themselves for the armed forces," said the communique, broadcast nationwide Wednesday evening.

Balloting is set for Sunday to choose a president and National Assembly to replace the three-man junta led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy that has governed Haiti since dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to exile in France in February 1986.

Vigilante groups were set up in one neighborhood Monday night.

North Sea Pollution Plan OK'd

By WILLIAM TUOHY
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LONDON — The eight nations bordering the North Sea agreed here Wednesday on sweeping measures to reduce pollution of the vital European body of water.

The accord was reached by the environment ministers of the North Sea nations during a two-day meeting, which conference chairman Nicholas Ridley of Britain called a "great success."

The ministers decided to give the North Sea the designation "special protection area," which guarantees a list of safeguards to reduce pollution.

Ridley said that these include ending the disposal of garbage at sea, reducing and eventually ending incineration of wastes at sea and controlling the dumping of material offshore.

The environment ministers also said that effluents entering rivers emptying into the North Sea would be more strictly controlled, and that the nations would set up a system of air surveillance to check on offshore pollution.

Radioactive discharges and radioactive wastes would be the subject of a special study to determine how to keep them from polluting the sea, said Ridley, who is also Britain's environment minister.

While the attending states — Britain, France, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden and Norway — did not formally ratify a convention, they agreed, Ridley said, "to a common declaration of political will."

"The conference represents a major step forward against the pollution of the North Sea," he said. "Pollution in the Rhine River will be reduced, and contamination of other sorts will be reduced or ended by certain, fixed dates."

Technically, the North Sea coastal nations can only control activities up to 12 miles offshore, but the ministers agreed to act cooperatively since the North Sea is viewed by scientists as a single ecosystem.

The North Sea, too, is historically a maritime crossroads for the northern European nations, and serves as a rich fishing ground, a beach resort area, and most recently, the site of almost 100 oil and gas platforms supplying 30 percent of the bordering nations' energy needs.

But in recent decades, the cold waters of the sea have been badly polluted, mostly by the rivers flowing into it from industrial nations, by fallout from atmospheric effluents and from dumping of wastes by ships.

Despite the admitted need for action, trouble had been forecast for the eight-nation conference, mainly between Britain on one side, and all the others.

The prevailing winds and currents affecting the North Sea tend to shift pollutants in an easterly and southeasterly direction, piling them up near West Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, and to a lesser extent, France to the west, and Sweden and Norway to the northeast. Thus most of Britain's pollutants are ending up on Continental shores.

Politicians in some Continental nations, particularly West Germany, have expressed the belief that Britain is dragging its feet on establishing stricter pollution controls. It is, for example, the only country that dumps treated sewage, known as sludge, into the sea.

But Britain claimed that the sludge was dumped and sinks into the deepest part of the sea, toward the northern outlet to the Atlantic, and was not particularly harmful.

British officials also said that they had cleaned up the rivers flowing into the sea — the Thames, Humber, Tees, and Tyne — while by far the major pollutant villains were the Continental rivers — the Rhine, Meuse, Weser, and Elbe — which empty into the shallowest part of the North Sea.

The West Germans had taken the lead in pressing for tougher controls on pollutants and the first North Sea conference was held in Bremen three years ago.

Some British observers Wednesday attributed the willingness of the British government delegates to go along with Continental neighbors over tough controls to the conference's opening speech by Prince Charles. The heir to the British throne made a tough speech calling for severe restrictions to protect the North Sea, including immediate action "to cut the input of dangerous substances," and "to tackle the garbage that lines some of our beaches with a ribbon of filth."

Referring to his days in the Royal Navy, he remarked, "Knowing how long this stuff lies around, I fear that some of the rubbish tossed overboard from the ship I commanded 10 years ago may still be there."

Koreans On Alert

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police at international ports were on top alert today after receiving warnings about terrorist plans to kidnap presidential candidates or stage bombings to disrupt next month's elections.

News reports said meanwhile that at least eight policemen were injured today in clashes at four university campuses with students who demanded government candidate Roh Tae-woo withdraw from the presidential race.

The alert was triggered by the arrest Saturday in Tokyo of Osamu Maruoka, a Japanese suspected of being a Red Army terrorist.

Authorities said Maruoka was booked to fly to Seoul Dec. 7 and they believed his aim was to stage kidnappings or bombings in South Korea before the elections.

"A top alert went out last night," said a police official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Red Army is a Japanese radical leftist group formed in 1969 to push for "simultaneous world revolution." It has been involved in a number of international terrorist attacks.

Government officials, who also demanded anonymity, said the South Korean Embassy in Tokyo learned from Japanese authorities that the target appeared to have been the Dec. 16 elections rather than the 1988 Seoul Olympics, as had first been thought. The games are scheduled to begin next Sept. 17.

Police Accuse Couple Of Using Son To Rob Store

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A man served as a lookout and his wife drove a getaway car as the couple sent their 10-year-old son to burglarize an audio store, police said.

Howard Bucahanon, 34, also known as Howard Kitman, and his wife, Stormy Bucahanon, 29, were being held Wednesday in the Allegheny County Jail on charges of burglary, criminal conspiracy and corruption of a minor. Mrs. Bucahanon also is charged with receiving stolen property.

Police said the couple waited outside an audio store Tuesday night while the boy was sent inside to pilfer audio speakers. The boy's brothers, ages 3 and 4, reportedly were panhandling in nearby taverns during the burglary, police said.

In responding to an alarm at the store, police said they found Mrs. Bucahanon in the car with $500 worth of sound equipment and Bucahanon and his son outside with a $300 speaker set.

Climate, Politics Block Road For Ecuadorans

By FERNANDO LARENAS
Associated Press Writer

ARCHIDONA, Ecuador (AP) — A hostile equatorial climate and angry political winds have brought a halt to an effort by U.S. soldiers to build a road through Ecuador's jungle linking farm settlements with civilization.

Most of the 600 U.S. Army reservists and National Guardsmen have withdrawn from their base camp in this steamy town in the Amazon jungle, 75 miles southeast of the capital, Quito. A small group remaining will be gone by December, the U.S. Embassy said.

The Americans have been the focus of controversy since they arrived here seven months ago to repair roads and bridges severely damaged by earthquakes that isolated more than 75,000 people last March.

"Yankee go home" slogans were scrawled on walls and buildings in large cities but out here in the villages the soldiers were greeted warmly.

Some Ecuadorans maintained that the political protests were solely aimed a undercutting President Leon Febres Cordero, a conservative and bitter enemy of the nation's powerful leftist opposition.

But the Americans rebuilt or repaired 15 bridges before running into the political and natural obstacles, U.S. Ambassador Fernando Rondon said.

They battled frequent rains, tropical insects and temperatures that at times reached 100 degrees. They also wrestled with some of the most inaccessible terrain in South America.

The soldiers were able only to construct three miles of the new road that was to link the jungle town of Loreto with Archidona and the outside world.

"It's the first leg of a dream," said Rondon, adding that he hoped the Americans can return and complete the 20-mile road when the political turbulence subsides.

A series of powerful earthquakes rocked northern Ecuador the evening of March 5 and early the next day. Hardest hit was the province of Napo, east of Quito.

Resulting floods and landslides destroyed roads, farms, bridges and villages. The government said 1,000 people were killed or had disappeared and 75,000 more left cut off from the outside world.

The damage, which also included an important oil pipeline that paralyzed Ecuador's oil exports for six months, reached $1 billion and sparked an economic crisis.

Vice President George Bush toured the stricken area and later he and President Febres Cordero agreed to the U.S. construction project and as well as aid for disaster victims.

About 6,000 troops, mainly from engineering battalions in the southeastern U.S. states, had come to the jungle station on a rotating basis with no more than 600 in the country at any one time, according to the U.S. and Ecuadorean governments.

A proposal to extend the work for six more months or until the road could be completed was first supported but later rejected by Febres Cordero as mounting opposition appeared to threaten his Social Christian Party's chances in January's presidential elections.

Congress, which is controlled by a coalition of center-left and Marxist parties, voted in July for the Americans to leave on grounds that their presence violated Ecuadorean sovereignty.

The Ecuadorean opponents also raised charges that the U.S. personnel also were building a permanent military base, battling cocaine traffickers, planning to invade Nicaragua and of introducing AIDS into the country.

Ambassador Rondon dismissed all those accusation as groundless.

"I'm sorry we became part of their debate," he said. "We don't want an internal conflict."

The Americans transformed Archidona from a sleepy tropical town to a bustling construction center and an enclave of American accents and customs, earthmoving equipment and helicopters.

Restaurants changed their Spanish menus to English, offering "chicken" or "beer" instead of "pollo" and "cerveza." U.S. dollars were freely accepted as payment of the checks.

The soldiers also distributed more than 600,000 pounds of food and supplies to about 5,000 of the region's hardest hit families.

Lt. Col. David Powell, a unit commander, said the experience was rewarding even if the road could not be completed because the GIs were able to help the earthquake victims.

Government opponents claimed the road project was a waste of time.

Canadian Film Company Finds Spot In N.C.

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Yanceyville may not bring visions of Hollywood to everyone, but an official of Canada's largest independent filmmaker predicts a studio the company is building there will be North Carolina's largest.

"Dad was traveling through the South looking for a spot when he happened upon Caswell County and fell in love with the place," said Ricky Magder, vice president of Magder Entertainment Corp.

Magder, 24, the son of company founder Zale Magder, is in Yanceyville overseeing site development of what he predicts will be North Carolina's largest studio complex.

Zale Magder bought land near downtown Yanceyville, cleared some forestland and is building an artifical lake-dam.

"Some people expected things to happen much faster, but in this business it takes time to set things up," Ricky Magder said. "The lake on the 275-acre tract of land is ready and we hope to fill it soon. We are taking our time because we intend to have the best production facility in the South."

Magder said the studio will employ hundreds of people and provide a retreat for artists who want to make movies, but don't want to do it in California.

"We intend to provide a haven for the creative artist far away from the Hollywood rat-race," he said. "Film producers and writers are getting fed up with the Hollywood life and are eager to find retreats like we plan to build."

Magder said his father considered several other locations, including Atlanta and Asheville. The company's production team was in Asheville last summer filming a movie at Lake Lure.

"That was a major reason for my father deciding on North Carolina," he said. "There is an overabundance of natural beauty and most locations are convenient to metropolitan areas."

Magder said once the Yanceyville studio is in full operation, all work will be done locally, with the exception of film development. He said most of the film will be developed in Atlanta or Miami, because there is no movie-film developer in the state.

"We want to see this area become a major film state," he said. "And, we are eager to boost the economic picture here, too."

Several hundred local people will be added to the payroll next year, he said.

"I am in the middle of a talent search for actors and writers right now, some local writers have already sent me scripts to review," Magder said, adding that he will help faculty at Piedmont Technical Institute set up a drama and film curriculum this winter.

"We are right in the middle of major universities, so we are looking forward to hearing from this talent source," he said.

Ricky Magder says he hopes the studio is involved in the continuous production of major motion pictures, television commercials and music videos.

Depending on winter weather conditions, Magder plans construction of buildings to begin in early January.

Physical plans include a 20,000 square foot studiosound stage and support facilities around the lake and dam area. Six more stages will be added later, Magder said.

But things are quiet on the sets of another North Carolina film studio, Dino De Laurentiis' DEG Film Studios.

Since the completion of a television documentary and two other films made at the studio this summer, there have been no lights, no cameras and little action on the 40-acre movie-making complex in Wilmington.

Since he established the studio, De Laurentiis has employed as many as 999 people in Wilmington, 200 of them full time. Currently, DEG's permanent staff is down to 30. There are no immediate plans to begin shooting a new film.

But DEG President Martha Schumacher said concern about the studio's future was exaggerated.

"We're still alive and well," Ms. Schumacher said in an interview from California. "The studio is in a very good financial situation, and we expect to be in a better financial situation by the end of the year."

Biologist Will Put His Experience To Work

By CLARK MILLER
Associated Press Writer

HILLSBORO, W.Va. (AP) — Retirement for wildlife biologist Len Walker means he will finally get a chance to apply the lessons he's learned in 35 years of managing wildlife preserves from Canada to Cuba.

"Come back and see this place in a year," is Walker's standard comment to visitors to his 261-acre farm in Pocahontas County.

Walker, who will retire next year from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Elkins office, plans to turn the land into a model of wildlife management.

"My goal is not to let the land go back to nature. It's to manage the land for the sake of wildlife," he said.

The farm, bordered on the west and south by the Greenbrier River and on the north and east by the rugged, forested hills of Calvin Price State Forest, already is rich in wildlife.

On a recent walk around the farm, forester John Thayer, a co-owner of the land, spotted 25 deer — 18 bucks and seven does — and five foxes.

Walker says other animals abound on the farm — turkeys, coyotes, beavers, snakes, owls, hawks and field mice. The quail population has declined, but Walker plans to rectify that.

DISTANT COLORS — The Muppets' Miss Piggy comes to life as Myrna Gibbs, an inker-painter at Marvel Productions in Los Angeles, paints a color model cell. The cell later is sent overseas so that the production company there can match the characters' colors exactly. U.S. Cartoon Companies Find Costs More To Their Liking In Alien Lands

By NANCY YOSHIHARA
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — No one seems immune these days from economic pressure, not even the Muppet Babies, G.I. Joe or Little Clowns of Happytown.

These stars of the Saturday morning cartoon scene have been hard hit by the dollar's steep decline against the Japanese yen. A good deal of the animation work for U.S. cartoons for television has been done in Japan, but now American companies like Marvel Productions of Los Angeles are prowling other parts of Asia for cheaper alternatives.

"The major trend now, because of the yen strengthening so vastly, is to go out of Japan," explains Margaret Loesch, president and chief executive of Marvel, which produces Muppet Babies, Fraggle Rock, G.I. Joe and Little Clowns of Happytown. "Korea has benefited, as well as other studios in Taiwan and the Philippines. We are now investigating other areas of the Orient. There is a constant effort to find economical animation."

Until this year, about 75 percent to 80 percent of Marvel's production work came out of Japan. "We've pulled three-quarters of our work out of Japan and put it in the Philippines and Korea," said Loesch, adding that the company also sends work to Brazil and is considering Malaysia, Thailand and Australia.

U.S. animators began their emigration to Japan from North Hollywood (Los Angeles) — the center of the U.S. animation industry — about 10 years ago because labor-intensive, technical tasks like inking and painting could be done cheaper by production houses such as Toei Animation and Tokyo Movie Shinsha.

In most cases, however, the writing, designing, directing, development of story boards and post-production work generally is done in the United States.

Since February 1985 when the yen began its dramatic rise against the dollar, U.S. cartoon companies have faced prohibitive increases in overseas production costs. "This yen valuation going up, it kicked everybody in the butt," says Fred Wolf of Murakami Wolf Swenson Inc. in Hollywood.

If Marvel, for example, continued to use its Japanese sources, its overseas costs alone would have risen $30,000 to $50,000 per half hour show, according to Loesch.

Adds Wolf: "When you start to Professor Is Sending Blues Around World

By ROBERT NAYLOR JR.

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — While most youngsters were dancing to a new musical form called rock 'n' roll or humming along with a new star named Elvis Presley, young Bill Ferris was singing the blues.

Ferris, 45, recalls that as a boy growing up on a farm outside Vicksburg, he often listened at night to radio shows that featured the blues, such as those on Nashville, Tenn., radio station WLAC with disc jockeys "John R." Richburg and Gene "Horseman" Allen.

"They played a blues format that I listened to with great pleasure," remembers Ferris, now director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at the University of Mississippi. As an undergraduate student in English at Davidson College in North Carolina, Ferris made tape recordings of blues singers who lived near his home in Vicksburg.

In 1969, Ferris received the doctor of philosophy degree in folklore from the University of Pennslyvania, expanding his graduate studies into what he calls "a major focus on blues," concentrating his work on Mississippi Delta blues singers.

Now, Ferris is hosting an hour-long blues show that is being heard around the world by U.S. military personnel on Armed Forces Radio. He also does a weekly blues show, "Highway 61," which airs on Public Radio in Mississippi. Audiences for

TV Industry Turns Eyes To Producer Steven Bochco's Tieup With ABC

By DIANE HAITHMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Steven Bochco, co-creator and executive producer of NBC's "L.A. Law," co-creator of ABC's "Hooperman" and co-creator of "Hill Street Blues," made what he called a "terrible confession" during a recent interview: He does not watch TV.

TV, however, is definitely watching him.

Just a few weeks ago, CBS had its eye on Bochco. The network offered the 44-year-old writer-producer the job of president of its entertainment division, even before the Oct. 30 resignation of then-President B. Donald "Bud" Grant. He turned down that offer, which would have put him in charge of all CBS-TV programming except for news and sports, then had all three networks watching as he considered exclusive development deals offered by CBS and ABC.

Bochco went with ABC in a landmark six-year, seven-series deal, with three more non-exclusive commitments over a flexible period of several years.

Now just about everyone in the television industry will be watching over the next decade to see if that deal will be worth it to ABC.

The "it" is somewhere around $10 million. When asked, Bochco called that a wrong figure and would not disclose the correct one. His attorney, Frank Rohner, said the figure was "very close" but "slightly less" than $10 million.

In addition, Bochco will own the 10 series he develops for ABC, meaning whatever profit they eventually earn following their broadcast on ABC will be his.

Though reticent about the specific dollar amount of his deal, Bochco readily acknowledges that that "certain cash chunk" carries with it a huge responsibility. "I will work very hard not to screw this one up, to validate this deal," Bochco said thoughtfully in a conversation at his office in the Old Writers Building at 20th Century-Fox studios.

"There will be an awful lot of angry people if I screw this one up," he continued. "I want to justify the enormous commitment they (ABC) have made to me. If I can't do that, I'll kill it for the next person who comes down the road."

Bochco's ABC deal comes only months after the network dissolved its 18-year exclusive arrangement with producer Aaron Spelling ("Charlie's Angels," "The Love Boat," "Fantasy Island," "Family," "Hotel"). At the time, it seemed the era of long-term exclusive deals was ending because the arrangements were no longer profitable for the networks, and limited the producer's options as well.

Bochco believes his contract will be beneficial to both the network and himself — in a creative sense as well as providing the Certain Cash Chunk. "There's never been anything quite like it before," he said.

The arrangement seems virtually without drawbacks for Bochco. When his current contract with 20th Century-Fox Television expires June 30, 1988, his contract with ABC begins. Bochco will open his own production company shortly thereafter.

He said he is currently discussing joint ventures with almost every studio in Hollywood but may decide to go it alone. Or Bochco could devise a similar arrangement to that of former NBC Chairman Grant Tinker, who formed his own production company, GTG Entertainment, with financial backing from outside the Hollywood mainstream — the Gannett Co.

Bochco's contract requires his new company to create and develop 10 shows — tentatively 5 half-hour and 5 hour shows — but he will not have to be executive producer of all of them. Rather, he sees his production company developing similarly to his "Hill Street Blues" alma mater, MTM Enterprises, in which other creative people could take the responsibility of producing some of the shows.

"Realistically, I can't executive-produce 10 shows," Bochco said. "I would like to do some of them myself, but I also know I don't want to do what I've been doing for the past 18 years, which is sitting in rooms every day of my life — writing scripts, writing stories, re-working stories, story meetings endlessly. It's time to step back a little bit."

'Glasnost' Opens New Door For Touring Soviet Jazz Group

By CHARLES J. GANS
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Onstage at Congress Hall, where Communist officials hold major party meetings, Soviet jazzman Vladimir Chekasin simultaneously squawked on two saxophones, blew a toy whistle, shouted into a synthesizer and kicked his feet in a Russian folk jig.

The audience at Warsaw's Jazz Jamboree, which usually is extremely tough on Soviet jazzmen, responded with enthusiastic shouts to the performance by Chekasin and his longtime partner, drummer Vladimir Tarasov, the top Soviet free jazz musicians.

"It was a great surprise to me; these Russians have great fantasy," said Waldemar Debski, a Polish rock musician, referring to recent concerts which were billed as "Glasnost Jazz."

"I personally couldn't believe that the most avant-garde groups at the festival were the Soviets," he said.

During the Solidarity labor upheaval and subsequent martial law crackdown in 1981-84, no Soviet bands were permitted to perform at the Jamboree, Eastern Europe's oldest and biggest jazz festival.

But this year, the Soviets sent the largest group of jazz musicians, critics and promoters ever to travel abroad to any event — about 25 people — showing the growing acceptance of jazz since Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev proclaimed his "glasnost" (openness) policy.

At one club, Soviet musicians jammed with Poles and even a few Americans, including saxophonist Ravi Coltrane, the 21-year-old son of the late jazz legend John Coltrane.

For years, the Polish Jazz Society wanted to present the top Soviet avant-garde jazz groups at the Jamboree, but instead had to settle for humdrum bands favored by Soviet officials.

"The audience used to be very rude (to the Soviets)," said Tomasz Tluczkiewicz, the Polish Jazz Society's chairman. "But now that's changed. ... The Soviets have discovered the power of their jazz scene is in the real creative music."

Theater Owners Dreaming Of 'Green' Holiday Season

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — America's movie theater owners are dreaming of a green Christmas to climax a record year at the box office.

The return of Steven Spielberg, Bill Cosby and Barbra Streisand, a drama about Wall Street and such promising comedies as "Three Men and a Baby," "Planes, Trains and Automobiles" and "Moonstruck" are among the reasons film exhibitors are looking forward to the holiday season. In fact, they don't need to wait, since some of those movies will be on the screens by Thanksgiving.

"'Three Men and a Baby' is going to do fantastic business," predicts Millie Gautier, a booker for the 100-screen, New York-based Creative Entertainment Consultants.

In a survey of theater circuits, "Three Men and a Baby" was the film that most bookers mentioned first. The Touchstone Picture comedy stars Tom Selleck, Steve Guttenberg and Ted Danson as bachelors in charge of an infant. Based on the French film "Three Men and a Cradle," it will open Nov. 25.

"Planes, Trains and Automobiles," a John Hughes comedy about the sorrows of modern travel, has also drawn glowing comments from theater people.

"It's got money in it," said Bruce Corwin, president of the 80-screen Metropolitan Theaters, all in Southern California. The Steve Martin-John Candy film also has a Nov. 25 release.

Corwin adds that he has high hopes for "Empire of the Sun," though it has not yet been previewed: "It's (Steven) Spielberg, and his track record is the best in the business." The story concerns an 11-year-old who witnesses the Japanese invasion of Shanghai in World War II.

"Nuts," with Barbra Streisand and Richard Dreyfuss in a courtroom drama, has "excellent possibilities," says Ross Wheeler, booker for the 160-screen Cinemette chain, mostly in Pennsylvania.

"A fantastic movie with a great cast," agrees Gautier.

"Cry Freedom," Richard Attenborough's extraordinary and powerful movie about the slain South African leader Steve Biko and the newspaper editor who forms a friendship with him, has already hit movie theaters but should last through the holidays. It stars Denzel Washington and Kevin Kline and has won rave reviews from critics.

Bookers are predicting that "Wall Street" will profit from the stock market crash in the manner that "The China Syndrome" did after the Three Mile Island nuclear disaster.

"It couldn't be more timely, but the cast alone would make it seem like a winner," Gautier said. The movie was directed by Academy Award

Soviet Life Exhibit Set For Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-week exhibition of Soviet life from space flights to polka dancing will open here Monday for an engagement that coincides with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's summit here with President Reagan.

The show, titled "The U.S.S.R.: the Individual, Family, Society," is aimed at giving Americans a glimpse of Soviet life under Gorbachev's "glasnost" policy of a more open society.

"There are great differences in our systems, but ... we are very much alike and have common strivings," Oleg Benyukh, chief information officer at the Soviet Embassy, told reporters Tuesday. "We extend a hand of good will with the hope of better relations and better peace."

Benyukh said with a smile that it was a "lucky coincidence" that the exhibition will be here during Gorbachev's Dec. 7-10 visit to Washington.

The exhibition, which occupies the sprawling Commerce Department auditorium on Constitution Avenue, is halfway through a nine-month tour of six American cities that began in New Orleans last August and continued in Atlanta. After it closes here Dec. 22, it will travel to Memphis, Tenn., and Cincinnati before ending in Kansas City, Mo., in May.

The show features photographs, movies and displays highlighting the life of Soviet people and their accomplishments since the Bolshevik Revolution 70 years ago. The displays range from Soviet spaceship models to children's art, folk crafts, vodka and fashion furs.

Modeling of Soviet fashions and performances of polka dancing will be staged at the exhibit, and Soviet athletes, scientists and cosmonauts will be available for conversations with visitors. A souvenir shop will offer books, jewelry, records and tapes and other goods for sale.

Therapy Sessions Seek To Bolster Self-Worth

By TANYA MADISON
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The subject of women who love too much has exploded onto the market in books and on television talk shows, but some say it is a behavioral pattern that has always existed.

"Women who love too much are a phenomenon about women's relationships of all times," said Elizabeth Reed, a Methodist minister who leads several therapy groups for women. "It's catching on now because we've found a way to control it."

Co-dependency is the clinical name for women who love too much, who land in abusive or manipulative relationships because they lack the self-esteem to be sufficiently self-reliant.

Books about it have been around for about 10 years, Ms. Reed said, but the issue was focused by Robin Norwood's 1985 book, "Women Who Love Too Much," largely because of its title.

Co-dependency, which can lead to physical and mental abuse, is a learned behavior that is perpetuated in American society by the family, church and school, Ms. Reed said.

"Our parents teach us to be nice little girls ... to take care of others before we take care of ourselves," she said. She contends that women's personalities are molded this way as children, and many never develop their own self-identity.

"Women who look outside themselves for self-worth and identity seek reassurance from outside things and other people," she said. "They set themselves up for fear, guilt, confusion and hurt."

Co-dependency can manifest itself as chronic headaches, backaches, gastrointestinal problems and cancer, she said.

Men can also be co-dependent, but it's not as common as with women and is shown in other ways, Ms. Reed said. Men are more concerned with impression management, which is demonstrated in sports, on the job and on dates.

The Women's Diagnostic Center of the Mount Carmel Medical Center recently began a six-week seminar on co-dependency. The 15-person limit was reached so quickly that a second group was created. Most of the women registered for the $45 seminar belong to other support groups, such as Children of Alcoholics, CHOICES for battered women or Incest Survivors Anonymous.

At the group's first meeting, several women clutched paperback copies of "Women Who Love Too Much," which is the name given the seminar. Two women had traveled 80 miles from Cambridge to attend.

As Ms. Reed described some primary characteristics of co-dependent women, participants nodded in agreement. They recognized relationship addiction, "clinging" relationships and the need to feel indispensable.

"Loving too much puts us out of touch with our own feelings because we keep wanting to please others," Ms. Reed told the group.

One woman — participants are not asked to identify themselves — said, "I've been in bad relationships and I keep making the same mistakes."

"I'm a child of an alcoholic mother, and now I'm married to an alcoholic," said another.

Trying to hold back tears, another woman told the group, "I was abused when I was a child and now my husband abuses me. But I still love him. I just want to know why."

Ms. Reed told the group that the only way to overcome co-dependency is to first understand and recognize it.

"The term co-dependency came out of an alcohol abuse context to describe the spouse of an alcoholic," she said. A number of books were written about alcoholics, but it wasn't until the mid-1970s that books began to appear describing partners of alcoholics and their problems.

"Most of us have an addiction to something, and women tend to have an addiction to relationships, even when they are bad," she said.

Co-dependents try to nurture their mate while denying themselves emotional and even physical well-being, Ms. Reed said. For example, many battered women stay with abusive partners.

However, symptoms can be displayed in less extreme ways, such as a mother who continues to pamper her adult children, fussing over them and discouraging them from leaving the nest, she said.

During the first few weeks of the seminar, Ms. Reed will discuss the characteristics of co-dependency and assess the co-dependency level of each participant. Then the women will learn to recognize when they are engaging in co-dependent behavior.

The best way to treat co-dependency is to talk about it through individual or group therapy, Ms. Reed said.

"Co-dependency is a disease like alcoholism, compulsive overeating or overspending," she said. "It's a disease that can be treated, but not cured."

Strategy Will Help Dieting

By CHARLES BLACKBURN

DURHAM — The holidays wouldn't be the same without traditional holiday foods, but between Halloween and New Year's, the calories will get you if you don't watch out.

Registered dieticians at the Duke Diet and Fitness Center have developed a number of strategies to help people stick to their diets during this difficult season.

Abstinence is probably an unrealistic goal, they say. Holiday parties and family gatherings often center around food. But planning will help you deal with temptation.

The Diet and Fitness Center tactics are based on the philosophy that our daily habits dictate how much about our weight and health.

The same philosophy is behind the four components of this effective, medically supervised weight-loss program affiliated with Duke University Medical Center. The DFC emphasizes nutrition, exercise, counseling and health education.

Diet and Fitness Center dietitians say it's okay this time of year to shout "Hurrah for the pumpkin pie!" But at 250 calories a slice, don't get too carried away.

The trick is to prepare a daily caloric budget and to spend those calories wisely by knowing the caloric content of the foods you eat.

The average sugar cookie, for example, has 60 calories. Plum pudding weighs in at 400 calories per half cup. Eggnog is 250 calories a gulp (1/2 cup). Four ounces of champagne will cost you 85 calories; most cheeses go for 100 calories an ounce; and a small candy can (2.5 inches) is 100.

One square inch of fudge has 90 calories. A quarter cup of hollandaise has 250. Stuffing has 260 a half cup. Pecan pie has 430 calories a slice.

The following tips are taken from the Duke Diet and Fitness Center's Nutrition Manual, prepared by registered dietitians Dianne F. Cogburn, M.P.H., Linda S. Janick and Linda Sakiewicz, M.Ed.

•If you are on a diet, a temporary increase in calories – say, from 1,200 to 1,600 a day – will allow you to taste or eat the foods that make holidays special. Maintaining you present weight may be more realistic this time of year than trying to lose.

•Eat three meals a day, and if you must dine at a party, decide how many calories you will spend. Allow extra calories for the party, but keep within your budget at other meals.

•Be generous. Share gifts of food rather than collecting them. Don't bake gifts for others. It may be too much of a temptation to eat a few cookies before wrapping them.

•At parties, indulge in conversation instead of food. Position yourself away from the hors d'oeuvres or buffet table.

•Survey all the foods and then choose two or three favorites. Taste, if you must, small samples of the others, but charge these calories to your budget.

•Limit or skip the alcohol. Choose non-alcoholic beverages instead.

Take A Thanksgiving Guilt Trip

Well, today we begin our annual day-long celebration of the Guilt Olympics ... better known as Thanksgiving.

If there is any other holiday that zeroes in on our sins, I don't know what it is. Why do you think we sit around all day with our heads bowed? Praying? We're confessing!

First, there are those of you who didn't go home to be with the family. So you didn't have the money, couldn't get a flight and would have ended up losing your job. Is that a reason?

Then, there are the people who must make a decision on whom to eat dinner with: his folks or hers. Your father and stepmother or your mother and stepfather? A boyfriend in town or a widowed mother out of town? Don't give it a thought that whichever mother is left without her child for Thanksgiving will drape your empty chair in black and burn a candle at your empty plate. As for the widowed mother, maybe Meals on Wheels will serve turkey.

Add to this all the women who feel guilty for sticking someone else with all the work while they get by bringing four folding chairs and the paper napkins with the turkey on them.

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

How do you think they feel watching a woman who has been up since 4:30 a.m. orchestrating 15 menu items, getting all of them to come out at the same time, only to have everyone finish the meal before she can turn off the oven and pick up her fork?

And don't forget the cook. Just because she's working doesn't mean she isn't in the kitchen flogging herself to death with chains because the pies are out of a box, the vegetables are from a bag, the jellies from a jar, the gravy from a can, the potatoes are instant, the rolls are brown 'n' serve and the turkey is from the deli. The only fresh thing at the table is her brother-in-law.

And let us not forget the dieters who are on their knees begging forgiveness for what they have just done to their bodies. After months of eating food with no salt, no fat, no sugar, no starch and no taste, they are now grazing around the table eating like livestock. Some will never recover from the shock of being happy.

Repent, all thee little children who race for the bathroom immediately following dinner so they don't have to help clear or wash dishes. God forbid you'd help put the chairs back to where they belong. It's something you have to live with.

These are just general guilt events, but each one has his or her own offense. A couple of weeks ago, a very pregnant woman stood up at the "Donahue" show and confessed to several million listeners that she didn't particularly want another baby, but she planned it for this Thanksgiving because she was sick of cooking the dinner every year for everyone.

Even if she delivers a 15-pound boy after 32 hours of labor, it won't take care of her guilt!

My advice? Give guilt about 15 minutes. Then have a wonderful day!

Cancer Makes Single Woman Fear Life Has Passed Her By

DEAR ABBY: I am nearly 40 years old and have just had a breast removed because of cancer. I am single.

When I was in high school, I was extremely popular, and friends said I would be married before I finished college. Somehow, I found something wrong with every man I went out with. I kept thinking someone better would come along. I realize now that I was self-centered and shortsighted.

Abby, please print this letter so that other women don't make this same mistake. How wonderful it would be to have a family and someone to share my life with. Now I'll never be able to because of the surgery.

My mother kept telling me that no one was perfect. Now I know she was right. True, I have many female friends, but they are basically interested in their own lives and families. Please, tell your readers not to postpone happiness. Life marches on very quickly, and none of us knows what lies ahead. — HALF A WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: Your chances for sharing your life with someone and having a family are not necessarily over because of your mastectomy. Please contact your local chapter of the American Cancer Society and let them introduce you to their Reach to Recovery program. You will learn that thousands of women have lost one or both breasts and have gone on to live full and happy lives. You can, too. Good luck and God bless.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My three sisters, our brother and I want to thank you for that unique idea for children who want to give their parents something special for their 25th, 35th and 50th wedding anniversary.

We used it for our parents' 35th, and the response was terrific! We wrote to their friends, relatives and all the people who had been important in their lives, and asked them to send pictures, letters or a few paragraphs telling about an experience they had shared with our parents. Even a wish or congratulatory message — something to be included in a "memory book." Some sent letters that made us laugh — others made us cry. Some composed poems in honor of our parents.

We added pictures and messages of our own and put together a collection of memories that touched their hearts in a way that no other gift ever could. They have read it from cover to cover at least 100 times. They've taken it on all their trips. (They even took it to Hawaii!)

Thank you, Abby, for helping us give our parents a fabulous gift that will surely be an heirloom for future generations. — JUDY SCHULZ, CHICAGO

DEAR JUDY: Thank you for taking the time to write. It enables me to let others know once more about this great idea. Readers, contact those friends and relatives at least six months in advance of your parents' anniversary, and send a reminder if necessary. (Most people tend to procrastinate, but they'll come through if you give them a nudge.)

'Earth Shakers' Are Checking Ohio Farmlands For Ancient Mountains

By DOUG FISHER
Associated Press Writer

WEST MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — At a leisurely 4 miles per day, a curious caravan of earthshaking trucks is wending through the rolling farmlands of western Ohio, helping scientists probe miles below the surface where ancient continents may have collided.

If underground mountains can be found, scientists say, they could be loaded with valuable minerals and provide a picture of what Earth was like 1 billion years ago.

"This is the beginning of the effort to understand the large-scale architecture, and ultimately the history of Earth is wrapped up in the architecture of the crust," says Doug Nelson, a senior researcher at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

Nelson is with the Consortium of Continental Reflection Profiling, COCORP, at Cornell, which is funded by National Science Foundation at a cost of about $3 million a year. Scientists hope to build a model geologic cross section of the crust under the United States by 1990, based on the work in Ohio and other states.

The journey by a crew from Seismograph Services Corp. of Houston, Texas, began in August at the Ohio-Indiana line in Mercer County and was to conclude in early November at a point along the Ohio River across from West Virginia.

In between, the trucks will have shaken the path along back roads and state highways, sending vibrations up to 30 miles deep which are reflected back to a constantly changing 7.5-mile string of geophones — instruments designed to pick up the smallest tremors — spaced about 14 feet apart.

Minute changes in the vibrations tell scientists what kinds of rocks are underground.

The sophisticated underground mapping technology was developed by the petroleum industry, not to search for oil minerals, but to aid in the understanding of the formation of the Earth's crust.

"We're able to understand the history of the Earth," says Larry Brown, another Cornell geophysicist who is one of the co-directors of the project.

Work in the Appalachians has revealed, for example, that those peaks were not pushed up from underneath, as some had theorized, but rather were created when a thin layer of rock from the east was pushed westward, up and over existing rock layers.

That discovery, as it happens, had immediate practical consequences. It turned out that the rocks on the surface of the mountains were masking rocks below that might be likely to contain petroleum deposits. Oil companies have already begun searching for deposits there, Brown says.

This is the first time researchers have ever conducted this type of exploration of the deep crust, Brown says.

In Ohio, the scientists are searching for what some believe is an ancient fault line where two continents collided a billion years ago, forming a mountain range that may be similar to the Himalayas, which were produced by the collision of India and Asia.

Ricky Vuittonet, 27, of Kress, Texas, as the senior observer, sits in a tiny trailer twisting dials and punching buttons for 12½ hours a day, four days a week. His caravan draws a lot of onlookers.

"They want to know if we're widening the road or putting in cable TV," Vuittonet says. "They all want cable TV. We had one old fellow in here always looking at the data. He said he's sure there's a big old cave down there."

The five trucks alone are guaranteed to draw a crowd. Like ungainly 22-ton ballerinas, they slowly push themselves up on legs attached to a pad that for 28 seconds vibrates the ground from 10 to 45 times per second.

The vibrations penetrate the soles of your shoes and seem to shake every bone.

The trucks wait 15 seconds for the vibrations to come back, then they move 20 feet and repeat the process.

Seismograph Services does most of its work for oil and gas exploration companies. Nelson stresses that COCORP is not prospecting.

But Michael C. Hansen of the Ohio Geological Survey is excited by the prospects of discovering the mineral-rich Grenville Front, one reason the state was proposed for inclusion in the COCORP project in 1983.

Rocks of the Grenville Front surface in Canada, then dip under the Great Lakes. Geologists theorize the front runs under western Ohio near Anna and Sidney, areas of earthquake activity.

One theory is that the front was formed by two land masses "that collided and sutured to each other, stuck together," Hansen says.

Jazz

Jazz has been banned or grudgingly tolerated since coming to the Soviet Union 60 years ago. However, in recent years the Soviet jazz scene has had opportunities to develop and increase contacts with the outside world, including jazz's birthplace, the United States.

"I think jazz means glasnost because it is an open form of music," said Tarasov, who added that the high point of his jazz career was a coast-to-coast tour of the United States last year with Chekasin in the Vyacheslav Ganelin Trio from Lithuania.

Under a U.S.-Soviet cultural agreement, two American jazz groups — pianist Dave Brubeck's quartet and guitarist Pat Metheny's band — toured the Soviet Union, playing to sold-out crowds in Moscow, Leningrad and other cities.

The Ganelin trio was the first Soviet jazz group ever to tour the United States, opening the JVC Jazz Festival in New York, which is sponsored by Japanese Victor Corp., an electronics firm. The trio broke up last year and pianist Ganelin emigrated to Israel in October.

This year, another Soviet band, Leningrad Dixieland, was the surprise hit at the Sacramento Dixieland Jubilee and appeared on the "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

Both tours were organized with the help of East Wind Records, a Washington-based label that has released six albums since 1965 by Soviet jazzmen.

"The first time I heard a variety of recordings with Soviet musicians, I heard music that was just totally unique and unexpected from the Soviet Union," said Steve Boulay, East Wind's president. "I feel great about the whole thing because it has opened up a whole new world for me and these musicians too."

Back in the Soviet Union, Tarasov said, there is a new feeling that the country might again become a center of avant-garde music, poetry, art and film as in the early 1920s before dictator Jozef Stalin imposed a tight culture yoke.

"We have many conservative jazz musicians, especially in Moscow and Leningrad, who play typical American jazz like bebop, trying to play like (saxophonist) Charlie Parker all their lives, which is not too interesting," he said. "They say what we play is not jazz, but we want to play music that has feelings from the country we are born in."

Within the past five years, the number of jazz groups granted professional status by the Soviet culture ministry has almost doubled to about 40, and the Soviet jazz discography now totals about 250 albums, according to Alexei Batashev, the foremost Soviet jazz critic, record producer and promoter.

About 35 jazz festivals are held each year, and some half dozen music conservatories from Moscow to Irkutsk in Siberia now teach jazz, he said.

A former engineer, Batashev learned his jazz and English listening to the Voice of America during the Stalinist era when jazz was condemned as a symbol of American decadence.

But rather than something which divides the superpowers, jazz is a bridge, he said. "In jazz, Americans will always be friends and good human beings because it's the people's music. We just need more opportunities to play together."

The strong point of Soviet jazz is its ethnic diversity, in "the one and only country which broadly lies on two big continents with a great musical legacy — Europe and Asia," Batashev said.

'Dignity ... At Low Cost'

Women's Shelter Will Use Mobile Units For Homeless

By KATHLEEN MACLAY
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Officials of a chronically crowded shelter for homeless women hope to use mobile homes to create space for dozens of new beds, and architects say their plan to link trailers "like so many Lego blocks" could serve as a national model.

"Our plan provides essential shelter, sanitation, supervision and security," said Merrill Budlong of the local chapter of the American Institute of Architects. "We intend to show that there can be dignity for the homeless at a relatively low cost."

The executive board of St. Anthony's Foundation, which operates the women's shelter, has agreed to try the plan as a pilot program, using a neighboring parking lot to be leased by the foundation.

There, 40 to 48 women will be housed in trailers overseen by the shelter, where every night women line up for showers, hot meals and mats to sleep on — and where, usually, many are turned away.

In San Francisco, an estimated 5,000 to 10,000 people are homeyess each night, according to Seamus Kilty, St. Anthony's executive director. Of that number, 700 to 1,500 are children, said Maureen Gammon of the Larkin Street Youth Center.

Community shelters can accommodate about 300 people, and 2,500 more can be housed through a city-run hotel program, Kilty said.

"It's a fact that the numbers are increasing and the people who are providing shelter are turning people away," he said. A study by Public Advocates Inc., a San Francisco-based, public interest law group, estimated that only 6 percent of area homeless people can find beds in the shelter system.

Even if a mobile shelter program won't solve the problem, it's a start, supporters say.

"It would be an appropriate alternative to the use of the homeless motels, which is very costly and isn't accomplishing very much," said Jean Mariani, aide to Supervisor Nancy Walker, who's been involved in discussions about the plan with city officials.

According to Robert Herman of the architects group, a portable shelter would have an average life span of 10 years.

Even if moved six times in that span, he said its cost has been estimated at $2.25 per night per person, compared to an average of $10 a night in a city-sponsored hotel.

A shelter for 48 people would cost about $125,000 and relocation would run $7,000, the group said.

Rotea Gilford of the Mayor's Office said a planning council that advises Mayor Dianne Feinstein on homeless issues believes the plan at St. Anthony's, however worthy, is another in a string of temporary proposals to a longstanding problem.

"We've created an institution of people who think of themselves only as homeless," Gilford said. "We have to get away from the notion that we're providing shelter, and move to the notion that we're providing housing instead."

David Burness of the architects group said that while architects realize structures alone can't solve the homeless problem, advantages include being able to erect the structures at temporarily vacant sites and then relocate them easily and cheaply.

This allows shelter operators to avoid expensive land costs and neighborhood opposition that could surface with a permanent site.

Herman said local architects brainstormed about the homeless problem and decided to use trailers and "try to assemble them like so many Lego blocks in a site plan that would accommodate the needs of the homeless."

Plans call for shelters that can be expanded to house 40 to 80 people, with restrooms, staff offices and a small courtyard, but no cooking areas.

Shelters would include reception areas so that homeless people could come in from the streets at times when the rest of the shelter was being cleaned or closed.

Plans call for an attractive facade — murals or architectural trim — and a fence at the property line to provide privacy and appease neighbors.

"Some people worry about the scheme being too enclosed and out-of-sight, but we don't see it that way at all," Herman said. "To the contrary, I think it increases the dignity of the homeless to have some turf of their own."

According to Herman, mobile homes are regulated by state codes.

Films Set For Holidays

winner Oliver Stone ("Platoon") and stars Michael Douglas, hot from "Fatal Attraction," and Charlie Sheen of "Platoon."

There is wary optimism about "Leonard: Part VI," which will bring Bill Cosby back to the big screen.

"He's the most popular man in America, so his movie should attract business," says Corwin. The Columbia Pictures comedy has undergone revisions after test previews drew negative reactions.

Another popular funnyman, Eddie Murphy, will be a holiday attraction but not as a fast-talking cop. "Eddie Murphy Raw" is expected to be just that. The unexpurgated concert film is rated R because of his language, and hence the audience may be curtailed.

Other comedies for the holidays include the following:

"Throw Momma From the Train," starring Danny De Vito and Billy Crystal, directed by De Vito.

"Overboard," a domestic comedy with Goldie Hawn and Kurt Russell, directed by Norman Jewison.

"Moonstruck," Cher and Nicholas Cage in a romantic comedy.

"Batteries Not Included," a fantasy from the Spielberg company starring Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn.

"Good Morning, Vietnam," a "M-A-S-H"-like story with Robin Williams as a Saigon disc jockey.

The holidays also will bring dramatic films, some of them aiming for the Academy Awards.

James Brooks, directing his first film since "Terms of Endearment," offers William Hurt, Holly Hunter and Albert Brooks in "Broadcast News," about a Washington TV station. Woody Allen turns dramatic again with "September," featuring Mia Farrow, Diane Wiest and Sam Waterston.

Those Oscar veterans Meryl Streep and Jack Nicholson reteam in "Ironweed," directed by Hector Babenco ("Kiss of the Spider Woman"). Ed Harris and Oscar winner Marlee Matlin appear in "Walker," about an American soldier of fortune in Central America in the last century.

Bernardo Bertolucci's epic of recent Chinese history, "The Last Emperor," may have Academy possibilities. The same for John Huston's final film, "The Dead" and "The Lonely Passion of Judith Hearn," with Maggie Smith and Bob Hoskins.

The holiday attractions are likely to add more jubilation for the theaters' New Year's celebration. By that time, estimates Art Murphy of Daily Variety, 1987 will have produced a record high of $4.1 billion at U.S. and Canadian box offices. That will top the previous peak of $4.03 billion in 1984. Last year's total was $3.78 billion.

'Wild Kingdom' Host Finds Life Full Of Surprises

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Big Jim Fowler, naturalist, adventurer and talk show regular, once had to break up a fight between two grizzly cubs who were wrecking the kitchen of his Manhattan apartment.

How do you do that?

"Throw them some meat," answers the host of "Wild Kingdom," television's longest-running syndicated half-hour show.

But problems are not always so easily solved for a man in Fowler's line of work. For the past 25 years he's been showing animals for education, charity and profit — he's a frequent guest on the "Tonight" show — and he and his traveling companions have caused a few flaps.

It was Fowler who produced a 12-foot Burmese python at a Sept. 19 charity fund-raiser in Greenwich, Conn., that frightened the Duchess of York, better known to Americans as Fergie, the wife of Britain's Prince Andrew. Her hysterical tears prompted speculation among "royal watchers" that such behavior may indicate she was pregnant.

There was the time he had to wrestle down a cheetah about to make a meal of Zsa Zsa Gabor's "dahlinks," three little poodles.

When Johnny Carson once started making faces at an irate ape with 2-inch incisors, Fowler quickly stepped in to head off an attack.

And there was the time he had to order fresh sirloin to lure down an eagle that had flown to the chandelier of a ballroom in New York's Plaza Hotel.

Fowler's friends have also trashed a few hotel rooms in their day, some have gotten loose in baggage compartments of airplanes, sending security men diving for cover, and he's been known to sneak unusual guests past the doormen at his apartment building.

Fowler, who has befriended birds and animals since his boyhood on a Georgia farm, has had many close calls.

There was the time an anaconda "swallowed" most of his arm — up to the shoulder — before he got free, the time a helicopter swooped him out of the path of a charging moose protecting her calf, and the time a wolf attacked somebody's lunch bag just as Art Linkletter was suggesting "Julie" seemed to be a German shepherd.

The late Marlin Perkins originated the "Wild Kingdom" show, with Fowler as his sidekick. The show currently runs on 200 stations. Twelve new episodes were filmed last year, 16 the year before and the rest are reruns of the classic winner of more than 60 awards, including four Emmy's.

Last year Fowler filmed six "Spirit of Adventure" specials for ABC and will do that again this year. He also syndicates a daily 90-minute radio spot called Nature Newsbreak.

Fowler bumped into the Gabor poodles while running a cheetah to a lure on a polo field for a World Wildlife Fund benefit.

"The cheetah had already noticed the polo ponies on the other side of the field. That's on the food list," Fowler says. "I had some food rewards but I knew I would have to grab her as soon as she finished because of the ponies."

"It was a great show. She got up to 50 miles per hour. I mean where else would people get to see that if we didn't do things like this?" asks Fowler, at 55 still excited at watching animals do what comes naturally to them. Such as, in the cheetah's case, run.

"Just then another car pulls up and Zsa Zsa gets out with three little fluffs of poodle. I dove on the cheetah," explains Fowler in a this-is-what-daddy-did-at-work-today voice.

He wasn't hurt. But he'll show you tracks on his right arm from a not-so-successful encounter with a cheetah. He has been nipped, bitten and clawed, but was most seriously injured when he was gored by a white-tailed deer.

A deer?

"More zoo keepers are killed by members of the deer family than anything else," he explains. "We think of those antlers as hat racks, but they are very lethal weapons."

Born near Albany, Ga., Fowler trained birds of prey as a boy, walking through the fields of Mud Creek Plantation, the family farm. He graduated from Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., with degrees in geology and zoology, unsure of his career. He turned down a "bonus baby" offer from the Philadelphia Phillies, raised cattle for a while and continued working with raptors as a hobby.

He has traveled the world, diving for great white sharks off Australia, walking unarmed in tiger preserves in India, and becoming the first man to trap a harpy eagle in Brazil and bring it back to the United States alive.

He's lived with the Kalahari Bushmen in Africa, led expeditions to Peru to study the Andean condor, and walked, unarmed, footsteps away from a polar bear that had just killed another polar bear, a feat he would not repeat unarmed.

Besides his Manhattan apartment, Fowler has a home in New Canaan, Conn., and keeps the 1,000-acre family farm, where he raises elands, ostriches and zebras.

Married and the father of two teen-aged children, one of whom is missing his pet boa constrictor, Fowler has become a spokesman for endangered animals. Fowler also consults in designing zoos and parks. He wishes more zoo directors would do what he is doing.

"Some zoo directors have multimillion-dollar budgets for education and they bring black snakes and ferrets to demonstrations," he says. "That won't do it anymore. You've got to capture people's imagination, especially young people's.

"I can't go on a show with field mice and rabbits after I've appeared with a water buffalo."

Fowler, a big man just under 6-foot-6, uses zoo animals and trained animals in his demonstrations, sometimes meeting the animals just minutes before curtain time.

He also knows when to quit.

"I've always got backup animals in case one of the animals is out of control," Fowler says. "I would never put an animal in a situation where it could get hurt or be uncomfortable."

Once he was traveling by van with a 6-month-old cheetah named "Arthur," two anteaters that he used to walk on leashes in a Chicago park, a harpy eagle, and a python.

"I put the snake in the drawer. Hotel drawers make perfect little snake boxes," Fowler says.

Blues

both programs know him as the "Blues Doctor."

Ferris began doing the show for Armed Forces Radio in July. Jerry Fry, programming director for the service, said the show is sent on audio disc to affiliate radio stations around the world for about 1 million military personnel, military-affiliated civilians and their dependants to hear.

The service began taking the program on a 26-week trial basis and began shipping it out in time for audiences to hear last month. Fry said Armed Service Radio officials will know the success of the program by late December.

Fry said the service already offered its audiences country and western, pop, classical, jazz and various ethnic musical forms, and "we decided it would be interesting to try a blues show."

Ferris, who authored "Blues From The Delta," published in 1970 by DaCapo Press, said he tries in his show to give listeners some information about the history of blues and the background of the singers. He also responds to requests, dedications and inquiries, he said.

The show, Ferris said, tends to focus more on contemporary blues artists and usually on a theme, such as female blues singers or Chicago blues.

Ferris is assisted in production of his shows by two people. Brett Bonner, a graduate student from Jackson, who works part-time at the center, pulls records and writes the text for the show. Pontotoc native Britt Fitts, a staff member of the university's communication and resource center, serves as engineer. Ferris said it was Fitts who suggested doing the show to begin with.

Ferris notes that blues is not to be confused with jazz, as some people do.

"Jazz is essentially a classical musical form performed largely by trained musicians who are formally educated in music theory and composition," Ferris said. "Blues, on the other hand, is folk music, which is passed on orally from generation to generation and is taught through an apprenticeship between an older musician and a younger aspiring musician."

He said blues is a musical form that has traditionally "been part of the life of the working class black experience."

"It was born after the Civil War and took shape in areas such as the Mississippi Delta around the turn of the century in a form known as the country blues.

"Later, as black families moved North to urban centers ... blues was reshaped in that environment in a form that became known as the urban blues."

Ferris said the newer form of the musical style "featured a faster beat with electric guitars."

Many urban blues artists, he said, grew up in the Mississippi Delta. "These two worlds of country and urban blues are the great classic sound that we study today."

Ferris, who taught at Yale and Jackson State University before coming to the University of Mississippi, said the Center for the Study of Southern Culture provides a "home" for the blues.

Biologist Looks Toward Retirement

"Wildlife does a pretty good job of taking care of itself," he said. "The exception is where man cleans out the habitat."

In recent years, the farm operation consisted of two large pastures leased for hay. The most recent tenant operated a dog kennel, a business venture that ended in bankruptcy. Nearly half the property was submerged during the 1985 floods.

The land is so rich, however, that Walker's primary goal is to fine-tune natural cover and introduce more food crops.

At the center of the farm are two large fields of hay, which he will use as a cash crop. Around the periphery, Walker plans to build up the "edge," a wildlife management term for strips of grain and natural cover that provide food and cover for animals.

The surrounding forests also can be used as a long-term cash crop.

One exception is a pin oak swamp on the lower half of the property near the river. Pin oak swamps are rare in West Virginia, Walker said, and provide an excellent environment for beaver and the heavy cover needed for a variety of wildlife.

Walker has several plans for the low-lying acreage.

Based on his experiences managing wildlife in the Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge of Georgia, he believes the swamp would make an excellent "green tree reservoir," land that is flooded in the fall then drained in the spring.

It will provide a habitat for wood ducks, mallards and black ducks. He said flooding wouldn't damage the stand of pin oaks because it occurs when the trees are dormant.

Walker said his experience on wildlife projects from the U.S.-Canadian border to Guantanamo Bay Naval Air Base in Cuba had taught him that all of man's efforts to control nature have their limits.

Walker speaks with reverence when he describes the intricate balancing act of nature.

Cartoons

think 13 shows at a clip, or in some cases 65, that 40 percent factor (the dollar's drop) turns into millions and millions of dollars."

Hanna-Barbera, whose work continues unchanged in Japan, has moved into Poland and the Philippines mostly because of a big workload, according to a spokeswoman. But at the same time, she added, the company is trying to bring back some production to the United States — to a computer, that is. About 30 percent of the Hollywood company's cartoon production this year has been done with computer-assisted coloring and camera work systems in the United States.

To stay competitive, Japanese animation houses are attempting to be more flexible. "The Japanese want us back, and we say, 'How is that possible?' So we'll go to the bargaining table," Loesch says.

In at least one case, the Japanese are keeping work by subcontracting some tasks out to another Asian country. Wolf, for example, is working with Toei on a new syndicated cartoon series.

"They managed to keep prices competitive and I'm fully aware that 60 percent of the work is done in Korea with Japanese supervision. What I gain is the comfort level of working with a well-established Japanese company without risk of working with Korea directly, because Korea has not shown me, or many others, production stability and consistency."

Indeed, work returning from overseas still needs some touching up. "A lot of our employment for years and years has been doing corrections from overseas production," says Bud Hester of the Motion Picture Screen Cartoonists Union, whose membership is down to 1,250 from more than 1,600 four years ago.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

With a combined total of 27 high-card points and a six-card suit, you might think that three no trump should be an simple contract. But even looking at all four hands, it is not easy to see how South can make his contract.

Note that, because his high cards are not in his long suit, South's hand does not have the trick-taking potential that his count might suggest. We feel his decision to rebid two no trump was a practical solution to a difficult problem. All that was left to do was to make nine tricks after a heart lead.

If declarer could take seven tricks in the black suits, he would be home. He won the opening lead with the king, cashed the ace-king of spades and then led a low club toward the dummy. West could not rise with the king without presenting declarer with three tricks in the suit, so he played low. When the jack won, declarer still had the problem of getting back to the table to cash a long club if he could establish one. He solved that beautifully by cashing the queen of spades and discarding the ace of hearts!

After taking the ace of clubs, declarer exited with a club, and the defenders were dead. In with the king of clubs, West was forced to lead a diamond—any of the other suits would have provided declarer with his avenue into dummy. But a diamond proved to be no better. East could take his three tricks in the suit, but that was the end of the defense. No matter what he did after that, dummy would take the rest of the tricks.

What A Turkey Is Thankful For

By Warren Whitley

A turkey is thankful for his wings so he can flutter.
A turkey is thankful for his legs so he can run.
A turkey is thankful for his owner so he can live.
A turkey is thankful for his eyes so he can see.
A turkey is about thankful for everything except one thing that's coming up and that's, Thanksgiving!

Warren Whitley, 8, a student at St. Peter's School receives special mention.

Thanksgiving Morning

By Keisha Dixon

I awoke to the warmth of my bed and the door softly closing. The light came in through my window, soft, flickering, orange, as the last of the golden leaves of autumn waved back and forth before it.

There was a soft treading of feet in the hall. "Mom," I smiled to myself. "She's on time as usual." I could hear her silent effort in trying not to wake us, the gentle clatter of the pans.

As I lay listening, I heard the soft snap of the refrigerator door and scouring sound of steam directed against the lid. Suddenly I heard the humming of a lovely hymn coming to haunt every corner of the room. Each refrain echoed off the walls. I felt surrounded by it.

After getting dressed in a soft wooly sweater and stiffly starched jeans, I emerged into the spicy smell of a small feast in preparation, the same smell faint and airy in my room. I sat silently at my place at the table and watched Mom doing a slow waltz with her robe. I said "Good Morning."

She gave a slight jump, then returned my greeting although she was slightly irritated. She kept on as if I weren't there. I had stumbled upon a rare moment alone with her. I felt quite smug and a little selfish too. Rarely was I alone with her now because of my sister and brother.

As I sat staring, she turned and asked why I was so quiet? I tilted my head onto the back of the chair and smiled in a way I knew would annoy her. I just looked into her brown eyes and her wrinkled frown. I wondered what could be more beautiful than time spent alone with the one you love.

Keisha Dixon, 17, a student at D.H. Conley High School receives special mention.

Thankful

By Rachel Clark

I am thankful for,
The turkey on our table,
My friends and friends and family,
And the people around the world.
But I am mostly thankful
For Thanksgiving and Everything that it brings.

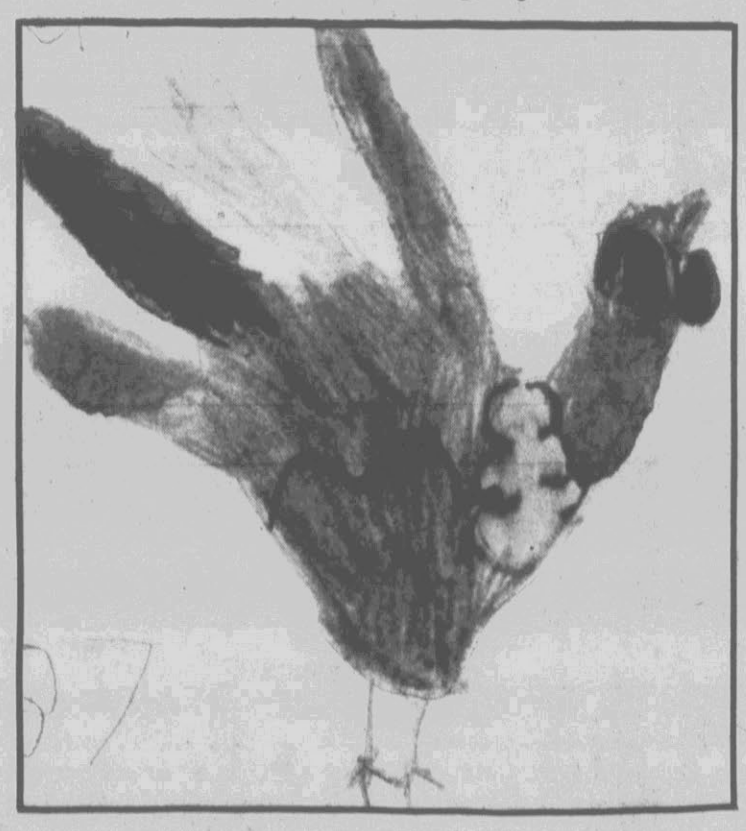
Rachel Clark, 10, a student at Falkland Elementary School receives special mention.

Thanksgiving

By Aimee Rigsby



A turkey climbed up to her shelf. She hid and cried. Then she said,"I am going to be eaten up soon." She ran away and never came back. So the family ate sausage for Thanksgiving.

Scents, Sounds, Sights Of Thanksgiving

By Julie Brew

Breath in.
Oh, you can almost taste the hot, juicy turkey. Mmm, my favorite--sweet potato pudding has already been set on the table. Lift the towel on that basket there and smell Grandma's famous sourdough biscuits.
Listen.
You can hear Dad's football game on T.V.
Shhh. If you listen carefully you can hear the cranberry sauce oozing slowly from the can.
Amy's laughing. She must have burned something again.
Look around.
Watch the steam rise from each hot dish of food.
The whole gang is seated around the table, fourteen people. Four generations. Notice the love on each face. Do you see me, a tear in my eye? These people are what I'm thankful for.

Julie Brew, 17, a student at D.H. Conley High School wins this week's writing contest.

My First Turkey

By Wendy Lewis

Thanksgiving is a special day at our house. My mom always fixes pineapple cake and strawberry pie. This year, she asked me to cook the turkey. Let me tell you how I did it. First I bought the turkey. Then I stuffed it with pepper, barbecue sauce and peaches. Then I put it in the oven for four minutes. Next, I turned the oven off. I took the turkey out. Then I ate it.

Stuffing Ingredients Spice Up The Menu

If yours is like most American families, menu planning for your festive Thanksgiving dinner centers around the turkey. And, at the heart of that beautiful roast bird is the stuffing -- moist, flavorful and nutritious -- if you follow a few simple steps.

The trick for making holiday stuffing that is both delicious and healthful centers on reducing the fat content and increasing ingredients that are good for you -- including vegetables, fruits and whole grains.

For less fat:

•Omit or reduce the oil, butter or other fats called for in your regular stuffing recipe or packaged stuffing mix.

•Add chopped onions, celery or other vegetables raw or steamed to your stuffing, instead of frying them first.

•When using broth or pan drippings to moisten the stuffing, first skim off the fat.

For more vegetable, fruit and whole grain goodness:

•Substitute high-fiber, whole grain bread for white bread.

•Try stuffing made with other whole grains, such as brown rice or barley.

•Increase the ration of vegetables or fruit to bread (since vegetables and fruit have high moisture content, decrease the liquid called for by 1/2 cup for each additional cup of chopped vegetables or fruit.)

WHOLE WHEAT STUFFING

This moist, fruity stuffing complements chicken, veal and pork, as well as holiday turkey. If made without the dried fruit and with slightly more of the herbs, it adopts a more "traditional" character. Either way, it's great for adding whole grain fiber, vitamins and minerals to your meals.

Thanksgiving Dinner Means Turkey, Fixings

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Happy Thanksgiving!

Perhaps the most wonderful thing about Thanksgiving, besides recognizing the Pilgrims and Indians and their historical feast, is the wonderful meal prepared by diligent hands.

Turkey, stuffing and all the fixings of the Thanksgiving dinner may represent the best meal many people have all year, next to Christmas. Try some of the traditional and creative recipes listed below that may be used for the Thanksgiving meal or anytime.

PECAN-CRUMBLE SWEET POTATOES

1/2 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
1/2 cup firmly packed light-brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter or margarine
2 1/2 to 3-pound sweet potatoes, pared
1/2 cup pecan halves
1/2 cup maple syrup

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In medium bowl, combine flour, sugar and allspice. Mix well. With pastry blender or two knives, cut in butter until mixture forms coarse crumbs; set aside.

Grease 2-quart shallow baking or casserole dish. Cut potatoes in 1/4-inch thick diagonal slices. Place about one-third of potato slices in baking dish;

Leftovers: Next Day Table Fare

Probably not too many people realize that it wasn't until 1863 that President Lincoln designated the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving. Until then the holiday had not been officially since the First Thanksgiving in 1621.

This quintessentially American celebration of thankfulness for our country's bounty spawned the traditional turkey dinner that was served at the First Thanksgiving. It also inadvertently started another tradition: that of eating leftover turkey the day after.

Thanksgiving dinner itself always challenges the homemaker to somehow maintain the essential traditions of the meal while adding personal touches. Preparing the feast in a major performance. Days are spent planning the menu and shopping, then baking desserts, making vegetables, relishes and garnishes, and finally, preparing the stuffing for the bird.

For the focal point of the meal, the turkey, one goes to extra lengths; this Leafy Green and Pine Nut Stuffing is well worth the effort. It's made with Her Seasoned Stuffing mixed with Swiss chard, spinach, leeks, bacon and pine nuts, all of which impart a wonderfully different flavor.

Then comes the day after the great meal. The cook, quite understandably, might not be interested in assembling another feast, but all that wonderful leftover turkey is waiting to be eaten. This meal-in-one turkey platter with roasted vegetables can be put together in short order using convenient Distinctive Wild Rice and Mushroom Stuffing Mix. The platter consists of slices of turkey arranged over a bed of the Wild Rice and Mushroom Stuffing Mix. The stuffing takes only 15 minutes to make on top of the stove. In the center of the platter are the meal's vegetables: green

Harvest Foods 'Rooted' In Flavor

When cool, fall days inspire nature to parade her most brilliant wardrobe, good things unseen beneath the soil are waiting to be harvested and enjoyed on America's dining tables.

Root vegetables cover a wide spectrum of seasonal bounty. Most familiar to us are turnips, rutabagas, carrots, beets and sweet parsnips, but the family is extended and boasts dozens of lesser known cousins.

Salsify, scorzonera, celeriac, white Chinese and round black Spanish radishes are part of the international clan with Latin American entries, jicama, yucca, malanga and manioc.

Another relative, usually considered a "tuber," is the sweet potato, which in fact is the root of a trailing vine similar to the common "Morning Glory."

Growers all over the United States are placing increased emphasis on this delicious and nutritious produce group.

Ann Henry, one of "Frieda's Finest," Los Angeles-based consumer consultants, commented, "Although many food trends start in the upscale restaurants, consumers not only taste, but they read about food and want to 'play' at home with the new offerings. This in turn spurs the farmers into experimentation with new hybrids and varieties. This is how the miniature vegetable fad gained such popularity."

Speaking of the delightful mini-veggies, Janet Christenson of the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture remarked, "Many of our New England growers are growing 'on demand' from the are chefs. Boston favors 'baby carrots'; tiny but with a BIG taste, they're most popular with the tops wleft on...many cooks feel they're sweeter that way."

Marian Morash, public television's host/cook/author, of the "Victory Garden" series is a parsnip partisan, "I think of parsnips almost as garden candy. Parsnips break the rule that only the youngest vegetables are the most tender. A mature parsnip root can sometimes grow to 20 inches, yet stay as tender as can be. One giant parsnip can feed a family of four, and there are so many great ways to prepare them...from soups to pies!"

Celeriac and Parsnip Soup, for example, showcases parsnip and its root vegetable cousin, celeriac. Swanson chicken broth provides an easy-to-prepare base for this flavorful soup, delicately seasoned with white pepper, thyme and fresh dill.

Lamb Stew with Yam Rosettes will take the chill out of a cool fall night. This hearty main dish stew incorporates Swanson beef broth, turnips, peas and rosemary...topped with delicate mashed yam rosettes.

Sweet Potato Stuffing offers a delicious twist on traditional stuffing recipes. Pork sausage, chicken broth, sweet potatoes and walnuts are combined into an easy stuffing that could star at any harvest feast.

CELERIAC AND PARSNIP SOUP

4 cups water
2 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar
1 pound celeriac, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch pieces
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
2 cans (14 1/2 ounces each) clear, ready-to-serve chicken broth
2 medium carrots, sliced
2 medium parsnips, peeled and cut into 1/4-inch pieces
1/4 teaspoon dried thyme leaves, crushed
1/8 teaspoon white pepper

Q. My husband has Parkinson's disease. I heard that restricting protein until late in the day will be helpful to him. Have you heard this to be true? Mrs. E.M., Greenville.

A. As always, I encourage you to discuss with your doctor how your diet, any drugs or supplements you may be taking and your disease interact. Many of you have probably read the label on your prescription drugs that says "take with meals" or "take 3 to 4 hours after eating." We do know that in some cases, the foods, drinks and supplements you take can change the action of drugs. Sometimes the combinations improve the action of the drugs and sometimes not. And yes, one researcher at Georgetown University has been experimenting with an anti-Parkinson's diet that has his patients eating high protein foods only at night. The reports are that these patients find their medications, L-dopa, Sinemet, work better and with fewer side effects if they eat their protein late in the day. There are no known negative nutritional effects from eating your protein all at one time. Dr. George Pincus has reported his work with 40 patients and 34 of them had relief from tremors and stiffness that Parkinson's patients have. He does not recommend that you try this diet without discussing it with your doctor since his experiments have been with a few people and not all are helped.

Foods high in protein include meat, fish, egg whites, dairy products, nuts and beans, cake, cookies, chocolates and products labeled high protein (such as some cereals). The program has the patient avoiding foods that have more than 2 grams of protein in a serving. You can find out how much protein is in the food by reading the label. Oh yes, Dr. Pincus' program also has patients avoiding foods that are sweetened with NutraSweet since it is made from amino acids which are the building blocks of protein. There are also some reports about the roles of iron, selenium, vitamin E and ascorbic acid in the treatment of Parkinson's disease. These are all in experimental stages. Again, talk with your doctor about diet and your disease.

Dear Readers: I have been reading reports of the new cholesterol guidelines in our regional papers. I am dismayed that most focus on cholesterol in foods but forget to mention the two main points of the new cholesterol report. They forget to write that to lower your blood cholesterol, you need to: 1) Maintain appropriate weight for your size. Do this by eating only the amount of food that will keep you from gaining weight. If you are already overweight, lose weight by eating less and increasing your activity. And, 2) Reduce your saturated fat intake. In eastern North Carolina, we need to work at these two points by eating smaller portions of meat (I recommend 3 ounces lean cuts) and using less fat (butter, margarine, bacon grease, mayonnaise) in seasoning our food.

Turkey Carving Easy As 1, 2, 3!

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Food Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Is everyone ready for Thanksgiving? The following is a selection of recipes to help you through the holidays.

First, the turkey. The Bureau of Nutrition, Department of Health, City of New York, has these recommendations:

BUYING: Allow 3/4 to 1 pound per serving from an 8- to 12-pound turkey. Plan to roast a fresh turkey within one day of purchase. Purchase frozen turkey several days in advance to allow sufficient time for thawing.

THAWING FROZEN TURKEY: Leave turkey in original wrapper. Place turkey on shallow tray in the refrigerator. Allow 2 to 3 days to defrost a 12- to 16-pound turkey. Or place the turkey in a pan or sink and cover with cold water. Change water often. Allow about one-half hour per pound of turkey. Thawing at room temperature is not recommended because surface bacteria can multiply to dangerous levels at room temperatures 60 degrees F and above.

If you've never prepared a turkey, or you'd like to try something new, here's a recipe for turkey and stuffing from "Apples, Apples, Apples" by Judith Comfort and Kathy Chute (Doubleday).

Cranberries Perfect For Holiday Dishes

The crisp autumn flavor and colors of cranberries make them a natural for nutritious cooking this time of year. In years past, the first big frost marked the end of the regular harvest and the start of the "crimson harvest" of plump, juicy cranberries. Fresh cranberries are most readily available from September through December, so no is a good time to take advantage of them.

Too often we tend to think of cranberries only in terms of a jelly or whole berry sauce to accompany a roast turkey, but cranberries are much more versatile than that. North America's native berry makes luscious pies, cakes and breads, not to mention jams, relishes and sauces. Cranberry drinks, cranberries in vegetable dishes and cranberries in zesty fruit salads -- the list seems endless. And their distinctive, tart taste goes particularly well in hearty main dishes of meat, fish or poultry.

Cranberries also store well, either in the refrigerator or the freezer. To freeze, simply rinse the berries, drain well, and pack them fairly tightly into a plastic freezer container and freeze.

Here's one new and tasty way to enjoy cranberries:

CRANBERRY SOUP

Served hot or cold, the sweet-tart-spicy flavor of this soup will start any meal on a good note. Although it's rich in taste, the use of evaporated skim milk means it's not high in fat.

1 pound fresh cranberries (4 cups)
1 large cinnamon stick
1/2 to 3/4 cup sugar (depending on tartness of berries)
2 cups evaporated skim milk
1/4 cup plain lowfat yogurt
Nutmeg

Place cranberries and cinnamon stick in a large saucepan. Add water about 1/2 inch above the berries. Heat to a boil at medium heat; then reduce the heat and simmer until cranberries are very tender and begin to fall apart. Remove cinnamon stick.

Pour the cranberry mixture into a blender or food processor. Puree, slowly adding sugar to taste. Strain. Place the cranberry mixture and evaporated milk in the saucepan and reheat to just under a boil.

This can be served either hot or cold, but prior to serving, top with a tablespoon of yogurt and a dash of nutmeg.

This recipe yields four servings containing about 280 calories and one gram of fat each.

STEP 1 — With tip of knife, cut leg and thigh from body at joint.

STEP 2 — Repeat for other leg and wings.

STEP 3 — Cutting at an angle and working downward, carve breast meat in thin slices.

STEP 4 — Alternate front and back ends of breast. Repeat on other side.

beans and zucchini strips that have been coated with oil and oven roasted on a cookie sheet for 30 minutes. Cherry tomatoes sauteed in oil and garlic sprinkled with basil add more spirited flavor.

A delicious, equally easy-to-fix alternative is Turkey Gratinee. Here, a simple cheesy sauce is poured over layers of sliced turkey and Distinctive Harvest Vegetable and Almond Stuffing Mix. Leftover turkey and convenient packaged Distinctive Stuffings make taste-tempting entrees.

LEAFY GREEN PINE NUT STUFFING

1 package (16 ounces) Herb Seasoned Stuffing Mix
1/2 cup currants
1/2 cup golden raisins
1 cup hot water
2 packages (10 ounces each) frozen spinach, chopped, or 1 package (10 ounces) frozen spinach, chopped, and 1-1/2 pounds fresh Swiss chard, ends trimmed, coarsely chopped
1/2 cup unsalted butter or margarine
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 pound (3 cups) leeks, washed, chopped, or 3 cups Bermuda onion, chopped
1/2 pound bacon, diced
1 cup (5 ounces) pine nuts
2/3 cup chopped parsley
1-1/2 cups unsalted chicken broth
1/2 cup Marsala wine

Put stuffing mix into a very large bowl. In a small bowl soak currants and raisins in hot water for 30 minutes; drain. In a medium-size saucepan combine spinach and Swiss chard with about 1 cup water. Cook 5 to 7 minutes or until spinach is thawed and chard is cooked; drain and squeeze dry. In a large saucepan heat butter and olive oil until butter is melted and hot. Add leeks and bacon; saute until bacon is crisp. Add pine nuts, parsley and spinach mixture; saute until all moisture evaporates. Add currants and raisins; toss well. Add spinach mixture to stuffing; toss thoroughly. Add chicken broth and wine; toss until moistened. Makes enough stuffing for a 16 to 18 pound turkey. Bake extra stuffing in a covered casserole at 350 degrees F. for 20 minutes.

TURKEY PLATTER WITH OIL-ROASTED VEGETABLES

3/4 pound green beans, trimmed and left whole
3 small zucchini squash, trimmed and quartered lengthwise
1 package (12 ounces) mushrooms, washed
Olive oil
Salt
1 package (6 ounces) Wild Rice and Mushroom Stuffing Mix
1 tablespoon olive oil
10 cherry tomatoes
1 teaspoon minced garlic
1/2 teaspoon dried basil leaves
12 slices leftover roast turkey

Put beans, squash and mushrooms in a large plastic bag; sprinkle liberally with olive oil and toss in bag until vegetables are thoroughly coated with oil. (This can be done in small batches if desired.) Arrange vegetables in a single layer on two baking sheets; sprinkle with salt. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 30 to 35 minutes or until vegetables are tender and slightly shriveled. Remove from oven and set aside. Prepare stuffing according to package directions. Meanwhile, heat 1 tablespoon oil in large skillet; add tomatoes and garlic. Saute 2 minutes or until tomatoes are hot and the skins just begin to pop. Sprinkle with basil and stir; remove from heat.

To assemble: arrange turkey around outside edge of oven-proof or microwave-proof platter; top with a ring of stuffing and arrange oil-roasted vegetables and cherry tomatoes in center. Either cover and bake at 350 degrees F. for 10 to 15 minutes or cover and microwave at medium power for 3 to 4 minutes until turkey is hot. Serve immediately. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

TURKEY GRATINEE

1-1/2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1-1/2 tablespoons scallion or green onion, minced
1-1/2 tablspoons all-purpose flour
1 cup dairy half-and-half cream
1/4 cup milk
1 teaspoon country-style Dijon mustard
Salt and pepper to taste
3/4 cup shredded Swiss cheese
1 package (6 ounces) Harvest Vegetable and Almond Stuffing Mix
12 slices leftover roast turkey

In a small saucepan heat butter over moderate heat. Add scallion and saute until soft. Stir in flour and cook 1 minute. Remove from heat and stir in cream and milk; stirring to remove lumps. Add mustard, salt and pepper. Return to heat and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Remove from heat and stir in about half of the Swiss cheese. Prepare stuffing according to package directions.

To assemble: arrange 6 slices turkey on an oven-proof or microwave-proof platter; top with prepared stuffing and remaining turkey slices. Pour cheese sauce over all and sprinkle with remaining cheese. Either bake at 350 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes until hot and bubbling or cover with plastic wrap and microwave at medium power for 3 to 5 minutes, turning once after 2 minutes. Serve immediately. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CRANBERRY-ORANGE RELISH

1 pound (4 cups) fresh cranberries
2 cups sugar
1/2 cup water
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
1/2 cup orange juice
1/2 cup slivered almonds

In a saucepan combine all ingredients except almonds. Cook uncovered for 10 minutes or until cranberries begin to pop, stirring once or twice. Remove from heat; stir in almonds. Cool; cover and refrigerate. Makes about 4 cups relish.

Carving Turkey Easy

to remove the package of giblets from inside the turkey cavity. Line a shallow roasting pan with foil. You might also want to season the outside of the turkey. Do not stuff the bird until just before roasting.)

HOLIDAY TURKEY

8 to 9 pound turkey
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1/2 teaspoon marjoram
STUFFING:
1 cup finely chopped mixed dried fruits (apricots, pears, peaches)
2 tablespoons raisins
2 1/2 cups diced peeled apples
1 cup day-old bread crumbs
BASTING SAUCE:
1/2 cup red wine
1/2 cup orange juice
Juice of a lemon
1/8 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
1/2 cup sour cream

Rinse turkey under cold running water and dry with paper towels. Sprinkle cavity with salt, pepper and marjoram.

Mix dried fruit, raisins, apples and breadcrumbs in a large bowl. Stuff turkey and skewer openings closed. Rub skin with salt.

Place turkey, breast up, in a roasting pan. Cover with aluminum foil and bake on lowest rack at 350 degrees Fahrenheit for 2¾ hours to 3 hours or until internal temperature registers 190 degrees F when inserted in turkey thigh.

When turkey is cooked, transfer to a platter and keep in a warm place for 20 minutes before carving. Skim excess fat from pan. Stir in sour cream and add a little water if necessary to make a thin sauce. Heat over low heat; season with salt and pepper. Serve with turkey and stuffing.

Makes 12 servings.

CARVING THE BIRD

Now that you've baked the turkey, how do you carve it? Here's one suggested way: With the tip of a knife, cut leg and thigh from the body of the turkey at the joint, then repeat for other leg and wings. Starting with the front end of the breast, cut at an angle and work downward, carving breast meat in thin slices. Carve the back end of the breast, then repeat on the other side.

DON'T THROW THAT CARCASS AWAY!

What about the day after Thanksgiving? And all those leftovers?

There's always turkey sandwiches .... Or delicious turkey soup! The following recipe is from "I Must Have That Recipe," compiled by the Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University in Bronx, New York. Corrine Katz of White Plains, New York, who edited the cookbook, is the contributor of this recipe:

TURKEY SOUP

1 turkey carcass plus bones (carcass may have to be broken in half)
8 cups water
1 large onion, left whole
4 carrots, peeled and left whole
4 stalks celery with tops, cut in half
1 bunch Italian parsley
1 clove garlic, peeled
Salt and pepper to taste
One 6-ounce package vegetable soup mix with mushrooms

Put all the ingredients in a large soup pot except for the small packet in the soup mix. Bring to a boil and then reduce heat to simmer. Cover and cook 1 1/4 hours stirring occasionally. Add the packet from the soup mix and cook another 15 minutes.

When the soup is finished, remove carcass. When cool enough to handle, remove meat from bones and return meat to soup. Carefully remove any bones remaining in the pot. Slice the carrots and return to soup. Serve hot.

Yield: 2 to 2 1/2 quarts.

Stuffing Ingredients Can Be Both Delicious As Well As Healthful

This recipe will yield about 3 cups of stuffing, or about 4 average servings. To figure how much stuffing is needed to stuff a chicken or turkey, figure about 1/2 cup of stuffing per pound of fowl and increase the recipe proportionally. Thus a 12-pound turkey would require about 6 cups of stuffing. For that much, simply double the amounts shown in this recips.

3/4 cup dried mixed fruit (optional)
1/2 cup celery, chopped
3/4 cup onion, chopped
1 1/2 tablespoons margarine
3/4 teaspoons paprika
1/2 teaspoon marjoram
1/4 teaspoon sage
3 tablespoons fresh parsley, chopped (or 3 teaspoons dried)
6 slices whole wheat bread
1/2 to 3/4 cup chicken broth or low-sodium bouillon (or water)

Cover the dried fruit with water and let it soak. Meanwhile, steam the celery and onion in 1 cup water in a large skillet or saucepan until tender. Add the margarine and seasonings, and stir until well blended. Cut the bread into 1-inch cubes. Drain the fruit and chop. Add bread and fruit to pan and toss well. Stir in the brother or water.

Cook over a low heat until heated through. If the mixture is to be used as stuffing for meat or poultry, cool enough to handle, stuff meat, and cooking will be completed as the meat or poultry is roasted. If this is not being used as a stuffing, continue cooking on stove top for 5 to 15 minutes over low heat, stirring occasionally. This stuffing may also be baked alone in a 325 degree oven for about 15 minutes.

This recipe yields four 3/4 cup servings, each providing 150 calories and 6 grams of fat.

CRANBERRY STUFFING

Here's a simple, low fat stuffing variation that provides vitamin C from the cranberries and fiber from the whole wheat bread. It is a colorful, tasty accompaniment to poultry, game or pork.

1 cup fresh cranberries (about 3 ounces)
2 tablespoons sugar
3/4 cup celery, chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
2 tablespoons margarine
7 slices whole wheat bread, cubed

Combine the cranberries and sugar with 1/3 cup of water in a medium saucepan. Bring to a boil over medium heat and simmer for 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and drain.

In a large skillet over medium heat, steam the celery and onions in 1 cup of water until tender. Drain and remove to a bowl. Melt the margarine in the same skillet, add the bread cubes, and cook until golden on all sides.

Return the celery and onion to the skillet, add the cranberries and 1 and 1/3 cups of water. Heat through, stirring occasionally, and serve.

This dish can be prepared ahead of time and refrigerated. When reheating, use a low heat and stir occasionally, adding a few drops of water, if necessary, to prevent sticking to the pan.

This recipe provides about 6 servings, 3/4 cup in size, with each providing 137 calories and 5 grams of fat.

A Cooking Star Is Born

By Irene Sax
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

One day in early September, Barbara Kafka put on her striped Chanel dress and went to Bloomingdale's in New York, where she showed a group of shoppers how to use their microwave ovens to make garlic soup, striped bass and peaches in blueberry sauce.

It was the start of a campaign that will take her from Boston to California and from Florida to Minneapolis. She will be interviewed by talk-show hosts and food editors and make her soup, fish and peaches in housewares shops and cooking schools.

And when she's done, if all goes as planned, her name will be a household word and her book, "The Microwave Gourmet," will be a best-seller.

About 500 cookbooks are published every year, estimates Nach Waxman, proprietor of Manhattan's Kitchen Arts and Letters bookshop. Of these, only around 25 get any publicity worth mentioning.

"An author puts in two years on a book and expects his publisher to promote it," Waxman says. "He learns that he's lucky to get a review in Publisher's Weekly and a squib in the company catalog."

The 'ecision to spend megabucks to publicize a book is part of a circular process that begins when a publishing house decides the book has a chance to be a best-seller. They up the first printing from the usual 7,500 to, in Kafka's case, 50,000. With so many books to sell, they then have to allocate money for the job.

"We had been looking for the right author for a gourmet microwave book for a long time," said Sherry Arden, Morrow's publisher and president. "There are too many ovens out there and no good book on the subject. Then Anne Bramson (Kafka's editor) brought Kafka, and something exploded in the house. Everyone got excited."

All the signs, Arden said, were right. Company salesmen said booksellers were enthusiastic. The Book of the Month Club beat out The Literary Guild in an auction, adding more copies and more advertising dollars. Family Circle bought the first serial rights. Six editors at Morrow bought microwave ovens on the basis of the manuscript. That's when a free-lance publicist was hired to work on the book.

"I aim for saturation," said the publicist, Lynn Goldberg. "It takes the public a long time to get something into their skulls. What I want is that if you don't catch the news of this book in the paper or hear it on the radio, you'll see it on TV when you get home."

Meanwhile, Kafka, who has two cookbooks behind her and knows the value of publicity, was doing her bit. Since last spring, she has had a regular microwave column in the New York Times and has done articles for the Times Sunday magazine.

She signed to do a bi-monthly microwave page in Family Circle. As publication date neared, microwave articles by her appeared in Cooks and Food and Wine magazines.

To do this, she could count on her contacts and reputation in the food world. "It was as though the food establishment was waiting for Barbara to do something big," said Goldberg. "But that's not enough to make a best-seller. Now we're going to take her around the country, and when she's done, we hope she'll be a media star."

LAMB STEW WITH YAM ROSETTES

1/4 cup vegetable oil
2 pounds lamb for stew
1 cup coarsely chopped onions
3 medium cloves garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon dried rosemary leaves, crushed
2 cans (14 1/2 ounces each) clear, ready-to-serve beef broth
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 medium turnips, peeled and diced (about 1 cup)
1 package (10 ounces) frozen peas
1/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/3 cup water
2 cups cooked, mashed yams
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

In 4-quart Dutch oven over medium-high heat, in hot oil, cook lamb 1/3 at a time, until browned on all sieds; set aside. Spoon off all but 2 tablespoons drippings.

In hot drippings, cook onions, garlic and rosemary until onions are tender. Add beef broth, pepper and reserved lamb. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low. Cover; simmer 30 minutes.

In cup stir together flour and water until smooth; gradually stir into lamb mixture. Cook over medium heat until mixture boils and thickens, stirring often.

Spoon mixture into 3-quart baking dish. Combine yams and butter. With pastry tube or spoon, arrange yams around edge of dish. Broil 6-inches from heat 5 minutes or until yams are browned. Makes 6 servings. Calories per serving: 674.

SWEET POTATO STUFFING

1 can (14 1/2 ounces) clear, ready-to serve chicken broth
1 cup sliced celery

1/4 cup sliced green onions
1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley
1 medium clove garlic, minced
4 cups cooked, mashed sweet potatoes
1 package (7 ounces) herb-seasoned cube stuffing
1/2 cup chopped walnuts

Lightly grease 3-quart casserole. In 10-inch skillet over medium heat, cook sausage until browned, stirring to separate meat. Remove to paper towels to drain.

Stir in chicken broth, celery, butter, green onions, parsley and garlic. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low. Cover; simmer 10 minutes.

Spoon mixture into prepared casserole. Cover; bake at 350 degrees F. for 30 minutes or until hot. Makes 10 cups or 8 servings. Calories per serving: 411.

HARVEST SOUP — At the root of many harvest time favorites are deliciously fresh root vegetables. Celeriac and Parsnip Soup, for example, combines two root vegetablels with chicken broth in a soup that is certain to take the edge off a crisp fall night.

Think Simple For Party Success

Simplicity is the key to successful parties, even for experienced cooks. Place the emphasis on a few interesting foods, elegantly presented. Paring down the menu eases preparation and serving, reduces after-meal cleanup, and leaves more time for socializing, which is the real purpose of the gathering.

Festive turkey dinners can be a part of holiday entertaining plans for beginners as well as experienced cooks, when the meal begins with Louis Rich boneless breast of turkey. These fully-cooked and quartered real turkey breasts are a natural for entertaining because they're convenient, versatile, and ready to serve inshort order. Sliced and heated on top of the range in a non-traditional sauce, they provide an innovative yet easily-prepared entree that sets a party mood.

The following special but uncomplicated party plan is designed for novice cooks, but will be equally appreciated by experienced cooks who are short on time. Turkey Marsala, Buttered Egg Noodles with Seasoned Croutons, Sliced Zucchini with Toasted Walnuts, Bread Sticks and Butter, Chilled Lemon Souffle with Rasberry Sauce.

Foods cooked with wine always seem more festive, and Turkey Marsala has an elegance that belies its ease of preparation. Begin with oven roasted breast of turkey. Early in the day, slice and wrap the turkey and mushrooms, and place on a tray in the refrigerator with remaining sauce ingredients. When it's time to prepare for serving, all necessary ingredients will be at your fingertips in an instant. The recipe serves four, but when the size of the group increases, simply double all ingredients and prepare in a 12-inch skillet. Because there's virtually no waste, a pound of Breast of Turkey will serve four amply.

In advance of guests' arrival, have noodles measured, water ready to heat in a saucepan on the range, and croutons handy. Toast walnuts and slice zucchini in preparation for a quick saute at the last minute. Prepare dessert early in the day, or better yet, the day before.

Another time, serve a menu planned around Turkey will serve four amply.

In advance of guests' arrival, have noodles measured, water ready to heat in a saucepan on the range, and croutons handy. Toast walnuts and slice zucchini in preparation for a quick saute at the last minute. Prepare dessert early in the day, or better yet, the day before.

Another time, serve a menu planned around Turkey in Tarragon Cream. Follow the same "game plan" for maximizing enjoyment and minimizing time spent away from guests in the kitchen. Turkey in Tarragon Cream, Buttered Steamed Brussel Sprouts, Long Grain and Wild Rice with Pecans, Apple Tart with Whipped Cream.

Oven roasted breast of turkey takes on a "haute cuisine" identity when warmed in a richly flavored tarragon cream sauce.

TURKEY MARSALA

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup dry Marsala wine
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

Cut turkey into 1/4-inch slices. Melt butter in large skillet. Add mushrooms; cook until tender. Stir in remaining ingredients. Cook and stir on medium until mixture thickens and boils. Add turkey. Bring to a boil; turn down heat. Cover. Simmer 10 minutes. Place turkey on platter. Serve sauce with turkey. 4 servings.

TURKEY IN TARRAGON CREAM

1 pound oven roasted breast of turkey
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
3/4 cup milk
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
1/2 teaspoon tarragon
1/2 cup sour cream
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

Cut turkey into 1/4-inch slices. Melt butter in large skillet. Stir in flour. Add milk, parsley, and tarragon. Cook and stir on medium until mixture thickens and boils. Add turkey. Bring to a boil; turn down heat. Cover. Simmer 10 minutes. Place turkey on platter. Add sour cream and mustard to skillet; stir and heat through. Do not boil. Serve with turkey. 4 servings.

Decorate Your Holiday Table

McLEAN, Va. (AP) — Looking for something to decorate the Thanksgiving table? If you've been busy picking apples, you might want to try apple baskets or apple candle holders.

APPLE BASKETS

For apple baskets, start with cold, fresh apples. Keep a bowl of lemon juice on hand to apply the juice to all exposed apple flesh, so it won't turn brown. Cut a disk off the blossom end of the apple to form a stable base.

Cut away two wedges at the top of the apple, on either side of the stem, so that you are left with a basket on the bottom and a handle arching over the top. (The stem, which should be removed, will be sticking straight up from the center of the handle.)

Hollow out the inside and underneath the handle, being careful to leave ¼ inch of flesh on the apple for strength.

Use your imagination to scallop the edges of the basket, carve designs on the side or cut the basket into an interesting shape.

After rubbing all exposed flesh with lemon juice, fill the basket with ice cream, fresh fruit, spiced applesauce, berries and cream, jelly or anything you can think of, and serve.

APPLE CANDLE HOLDERS

For apple candle holders, use large, round and squatty apples (Rome or large Stayman). Select apples that will sit stably on a flat surface. Core the apple from the stem end; do not puncture through the calix or blossom end of the apple. Insert the candle, then decorate with holly or other greenery.

The techniques for creating these apple baskets and apple candles are offered by the International Apple Institute, which also suggests:

— Decorating the dining room with baskets of fresh apples and whole nuts.

— Serving hot spiced apple cider, topped with whipped cream and a dash of cinnamon and clove. (Use a whole cinnamon stick as a swizzle for a special touch.)

— Mixing apple preserves or coarsely-chopped fresh apples and chopped walnuts into cranberry sauce — or serving cranberry apple jelly.

These suggestions — like the apple baskets and apple candle holders — are appropriate, of course, for Christmas and other special occasions.

Canned Tuna Good Catch For Dinner

By Toni Tipton
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

A plain, unadulterated "tuna on wheat — hold the mayonnaise" is a perfect option for a light high-protein lunch. For dinner, most people tend to rely on the usual tuna casserole of noodles, cream soup and peas.

But there is a large variety of other uses for a can of tuna. When combined with a wholesome group of ingredients, it provides a healthy boost of the day's recommended allowance for protein. Tuna, like other deep sea fish, also is high in omega-3, the highly touted substance linked to a lower risk of heart disease.

Health agencies are currently recommending fish meals two to three times per week, which is easy to do alternating between the afternoon and evening meals. Try substituting tuna for beef in dishes like tacos, enchiladas and tettrazini, but always select tuna packed in water. A 3 ½-ounce serving of the fish packed in oil contains about 265 calories and 18 grams of fat, whereas the same amount packed in water, boasts a mere 117 calories and a trace of fat.

OCEAN GARDEN FETTUCCINE

1 1/2 cups sliced mushrooms
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 small yellow squash, sliced

1/2 cup frozen peas, thawed
1/2 cup diced tomato

Melt butter in skillet. Add mushrooms, onion and squash and saute until tender. Add flour and oregano. Cook and stir 1 minute. Slowly add milk, stirring and cooking over medium heat until thickened. Popular Cheesecake Gains On Apple Pie

Tis the season for cheesecake lovers everywhere to unite and share special variations of their most treasired indulgence. After all, a holiday just wouldn't be a holiday without a cheesecake.

James Beard once said that whoever thought up such a fantastically wonderful concoction deserves a statue in his memory. Unfortunately, no one has the slightest idea who he, or she, was. The best guess is that the originator might have been an ancient Greek, since cheesecakes of a very simple kind were offered as treats at that time.

In fact, the cheesecake is a rediscovery. In the 1700's, cheesecakes were a standard item in most family cookbooks. Those were the days when farmers laboriously made their own cheese, and the farm housewife created a variety of "chess pyes," as they were referred to then. Around 30 years ago the cheesecake was found mostly in restaurants serving German, Austrian and French cuisine.

Today, the popularity of cheesecake rivals the apple pie as an American favorite, and modern cheesecake lovers need only to go to the nearest food store for the makings of their favorite dessert.

The recipes offered here featured two new delectable cheesecakes created by the Kraft Kitchens especially for the cheesecake lover's holiday season. Each is easy-to-prepare to leave time for the season's numerous duties and delights. Both begin with Philadelphia Brand cream cheese, a choice ingredient of cheesecake connoisseurs.

"Light" Philadelphia Brand neufchatel cheese with 25 percent less fat and 20 percent fewer calories than cream cheese can be substituted in each of these recipes and will perform the same as regular "Philly" cream cheese.

Gala Apricot Cheesecake presents an elegant finale to a holiday meal. This no-bake recipe with an unusual oatmeal crust combines the creamy rich texture and dairy fresh flavor of cream cheese with brandy and apricots in an extraordinary cheesecake that is easily made in advance. And a last minute topping of apricot preserves and brandy makes it extra special for holiday guests and family gatherings.

Chocolate Mint Meringue Cheesecake brings the most indulgent ingredients together for the holiday season. Melted chocolate mint pieces are combined with the cream cheese mixture and set in a chocolate crumb crust. Topped with a light, fluffy meringue, this creation is baked to perfection and presents a rich gift to cheesecake and dessert lovers of all kinds during the holiday season.

This time of the year is the sweetest time of the year. Good cooks share their finest and embrace the festive tradition of providing an abundant table for friends and family. These new cheesecakes serve well to herald the holiday season in the spirit of making and giving.

In further celebration of the holiday baking season, Philadelphia Brand cream cheese is offering a free cheesecake recipe booklet in addition to the specially created recipes shown here. For a copy of the booklet, send your name, address and zip code to: "Philly" Tempting Cheesecake Recipes, P.O. Box 3598, Libertyville, IL 60198. Booklets will be available throughout the holiday season. Offer expires January 31 or while supplies last. Please allow six to eight weeks for delivery.

GALA APRICOT CHEESECAKE

2 1/4 cups quick oats, uncooked
1/3 cup packed brown sugar
3 tablespoons flour
1/3 cup margarine, melted
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/3 cup cold water
2 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons brandy
1/2 cup finely chopped dried apricots
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
1 10-ounce jar apricot preserves
1 tablespoon brandy

Combine oats, brown sugar, flour and margarine; press onto bottom and 1-1/2-inches up sides of 9-inch springform pan. Bake at 350 degrees, 15 minutes.

Soften gelatin in water; stir over low heat until dissolved. Combine cream cheese and granulated sugar, mixing at medium speed on electric mixer until well blended. Chill until slightly thickened; fold in apricots and whipped cream. Pour into crust; chill until firm.

CHOCOLATE MINT MERINGUE CHEESECAKE

1 cup chocolate wafer crumbs
3 tablespoons margarine, melted
2 tablespoons sugar
3 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
2/3 cup sugar
3 eggs
1 cup chocolate mint pieces, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 egg whites
1 7-ounce jar marshmallow creme

Combine crumbs, margarine and sugar; press into bottom of 9-inch springform pan. Bake at 350 degrees, 10 minutes.

Combine cream cheese and sugar, mixing at medium speed on electric mixer until well blended. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Blend in chocolate mint and vanilla; pour over crust. Bake at 350 degrees, 50 minutes. Loosen cake from rim of pan; cool before removing rim of pan. Chill.

Beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add marshmallow creme, beating until stiff peaks form. Carefully spread over top of cheesecake to seal. Bake at 450 degrees, 3 to 4 minutes or until lightly browned. 10 to 12 servings.

Mushrooms — Reliable Classics

When it comes to entertaining, you can always count on the classics – enduring recipes and fresh mushrooms – to pull off a meal in style. Fresh mushrooms have been adding flavor and texture to recipes for centuries, and somehow manage to add a touch of glamour and sophistication, as well.

Throughout history the "star quality" of mushrooms has been duly recognized. Egyptian pharaohs, wanting to ensure their own supply, forbade commoners to eat mushrooms; and Romans like the morsels so well, they were dubbed "food of the gods."

Today, with more than one-half billion pounds of mushrooms cultivated annually in the United States, and with the increased popularity of consistent-quality branded mushrooms, there are plenty to go around. Keeping perfect, fresh mushrooms on hand is a basic to many cooks as keeping assorted cheeses, Dijon mustard or a good bottle of wine in stock and ready for drop-in guests. The reason? The many quick but special dishes that can be made with mushrooms. You don't even need recipes, just a knack for combining food ingredients. For example:

•Or, simply saute mushroom caps in butter (gill side down first, to retain moisture), add a splash of wine and serve as an unbeatable side dish.

If you have a little more time, add sliced mushrooms to a classic French entree tart for a delightful brunch or lunch dish, or slice and serve as a prelude to dinner. Here is a recipe for a rich egg custard flavored with buttermilk and dill week. The flaky piecrust can be made weeks ahead of time, baked and then frozen. Before filling with the egg-mushroom mixture, thaw pastry shell at room temperature or heat at 400 degrees F. for about 10 minutes.

Firm-fleshed, blemish-free mushrooms make a welcome addition to fresh salads. And, while salad greens and dressings may be prepared early in the day, mushrooms should always be cleaned and sliced just before using to keep them firm and to prevent discoloration. To clean, wipe with a damp cloth – don't soak, or you'll wind up with soggy mushrooms.

BUTTERMILK MUSHROOM TART

1 package (12 ounces) fresh mushrooms
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup sliced green onions
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 cups buttermilk
4 eggs, beaten
2 teaspoons chopped fresh dill weed or 3/4 teaspoon dried dill weed, crushed
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
9-inch baked piecrust

Slice 1 ounce mushrooms (about 1/2 cup); set aside. Chop remaining mushrooms.

In 10-inch skillet over medium heat, in 1 tablespoon hot butter, cook sliced mushrooms until golden, stirring occasionally. Remove from pan; set aside.

In same skillet over medium heat, in remaining hot butter, cook chopped mushrooms with green onions until mushrooms are golden and all liquid is absorbed, about 5 minutes.

Stir in flour until blended; cook 1 minute more. Remove pan from heat; add buttermilk, eggs, dill, salt and pepper. Stir until well blended.

Place piecrust on cookie sheet. Pour mushroom mixture into crust. Arrange reserved cooked sliced mushrooms around center of pie. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 1 hour or until set. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

TIP: If piecrust edges begin to brown too much during baking, cover them with strips of foil to prevent overbrowning.

RIGHT-FROM-THE-GARDEN MUSHROOM SALAD

4 1/2 cups salad greens, torn into bite-size pieces
1 medium yellow pepper, coarsely chopped
8 ounces fresh mushrooms (about 2 cups)
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup buttermilk
3 tablespoons chopped fresh chives or 2 teaspoons dried chives, crushed

In large bowl, combine greens, pepper and mushrooms; toss gently.

Coconut-Lime Soup A Pleasant Menu Addition

Culinary SOS

By Rose Dosti
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Dear SOS: The Somerset Catering Service served a marvelous coconut-lime soup at the opening of the "Voyager" show at the Natural Science Museum in Los Angeles last June. I would love to have the recipe. —LYNN

Dear Lynn: The soup also makes a stunning first course for a holiday menu.

SOMERSET COCONUT-LIME SOUP

4 stalks lemon grass
4 (14-ounce) cans coconut milk
12-ounces boneless chicken, diced
1 1/4 teaspoons ground ginger
Generous dash ground cinnamon
½ bunch green onions, minced
1 tablespoon chopped cilantro
2 to 4 Serrano chiles, seeded and minced
4 tablespoons fish sauce (nam pla)
1 tablespoon lime juice

Crush and chop lemon grass stalks and tie in cheesecloth. Combine coconut milk and lemon grass tied in cheese cloth in saucepan. Bring to slow boil and simmer 10 minutes.

Add chicken, ginger and cinnamon and simmer, uncovered, until chicken is tender.

Add green onions, cilantro and chiles and bring soup just back to boiling. Remove from heat. Discard cheesecloth bag. Add lime juice and fish sauce. Taste to adjust seasoning by adding more lime juice, cilantro or seasonings, if needed. Serve at once. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Note: Lemon grass and fish sauce are available at most Oriental food stores. If lemon grass is not available, substitute the thinly peeled rind of 1 lemon. Discard before serving.

Dear SOS: Do you have a recipe for Persimmon Pie? —CANDI

Dear Candi: Persimmons are at peak supply right now to brighten your holiday menus.

A word of advice, however, if you are unfamiliar with persimmons. Many users often make the mistake of serving them before they are fully ripe. Hachiya persimmons should be used when very very soft to the touch for peak flavor. Unripe persimmons may be ripened overnight by wrapping in foil and freezing in the freezer compartment of the refrigerator. They will be ready for eating when unwrapped and thawed at room temperature for 24 hours. Fuyu persimmons are ripe when pale orange with no green showing and still firm to the touch.

Persimmon pulp may be pureed and kept frozen until ready to use just as you would mashed pumpkin or applesauce in cakes, cookies and puddings.

PERSIMMON PIE

2 cups persimmon pulp
1 egg, beaten
1 cup milk
1/2 cup sugar
Dash salt
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 (9-inch) unbaked pie shell

Mix persimmon pulp, egg and milk in bowl. In separate bowl, mix sugar, salt and cornstarch. Combine sugar mixture and persimmon mixture. Pour filling into pie shell. Bake at 450 degrees 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 50 to 60 minutes longer. Makes 1 (9-inch) pie.

Dear SOS: I wish I could find a recipe for Wild Rice Casserole similar to the one I had years ago. It was a perfect buffet dish to serve with cold ham or fowl. Now, in these days of diminished interest in meat, it would make a good main course. —RUTH

Dear Ruth: Well, how about this one? It is fairly close to the one you describe. And what a nice side dish it will make for holiday meals, too.

WILD RICE CASSEROLE

4 strips bacon, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 cup chopped onions
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1 cup wild rice, rinsed
3 stalks celery, chopped
1 teaspoon seasoned salt, optional
4 1/2 cups chicken broth
Salt, pepper

Cook bacon until crisp. Drain and set aside. Drain all but 2 tablespoons bacon fat. Add onions and cook until tender. Add mushrooms and cook until warmed through. Combine bacon, onions and mushrooms with rice, celery, seasoned salt and broth in 2-quart casserole. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and bake at 325 degrees 2 hours or until rice is done. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Dear SOS: I've lost my recipe for Spiced Apple Rings. Do you have one in your files?

When canned (use the pressure-cooker method) they make much appreciated hostess or Christmas gifts. Thanks for your help. —BETTY

Dear Betty: Thank you for your good suggestion.

SPICED APPLE RINGS

1 1/2 cups water
1 cup sugar
1/4 cup red cinnamon candies
6 drops red food color
1 teaspoon whole cloves
8 apples

Combine water, sugar, candies and food color in wide shallow saucepan or skillet. Simmer until candies are dissolved. Add cloves. Slice apples crosswise. Place a few slices at a time in simmering syrup and cook until tender. Skim out with slotted spoon and drain on wax paper. Continue until all apple slices are cooked and drained. Makes 36 to 40 slices.

Only recipes of general interest will be printed. We are unable to answer all requests. Please include restaurant address when requesting recipes from restaurants. Send your letter with self-addressed, stamped envelope to Culinary SOS, Food Section, Los Angeles Times, Times Mirror Square, Los Angeles, 90053.

Winter Squash

With its unusual shapes and colors, and its somewhat intimidating hard skin, winter squash has never enjoyed the widespread popularity of the summer varieties.

Yet winter squash — including acorn, butternut, chayote, hubbard, turban and spaghetti squash — is an exceptional source of beta-carotene. This is a nutrient which is converted into vitamin A in our bodies, and which has been linked in many scientific studies to lower cancer rates.

Winter squash has other advantages, too. It can be kept for up to two months in the refrigerator or other cool, dry, dark place. its outer skin retains its shape after cooking, and the inside texture doesn't turn mushy if you leave it on the stove a bit too long.

When selecting winter squash, look for those with hard, thick rinds that feel heavy for their size. Avoid winter squash with tender skin, since it usually is immature, and those with soft spots, which indicates a rotted spot below the surface.

One nutritious way to prepare winter squash is to slice it in half; scoop out the seeds and tough fibers; sprinkly with nutmeg, cinnamon or cloves and a bit of brown sugar or honey; and bake for an hour or so at 350 degrees. Or try the following recipe:

ACORN SQUASH A L'ORANGE

If the only way you've ever tried winter squash is baked and mashed with butter, then you've got to try this recipe! Orange juice and cinnamon add a special sweetness to this simple-to-prepare dish.

2 medium acorn squash
1/2 cup orange juice
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon

Slice the squash in half lengthwise and scoop out the seeds and stringy portion. Place the squash on a cookie sheet or baking pan with the cut sides down and bake at 375 degrees for 20 minutes.

Remove from the oven and turn the squash so that the cut side faces up. Pierce the hollowed out part with a fork in several spots. Add 2 tablespoons orange juice and 1/16 teaspoon cinnamon to each squash half, sprinkling some on the upper cut surface and the remainder in the scooped out cup. Return the squash to the oven and bake for another 30-40 minutes. (The longer cooking time is preferable to achieve the sweetest, most pleasing flavor.)

ALMOND POTATO DESSERT

3 medium potatoes (about 1 lb.)
10 eggs, separated
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup blanched, ground almonds
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon almond extract

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Peel, quarter and boil potatoes until just tender. Cool and grate with large grater. Measure out 2 cups and refrigerate. Beat egg whites until frothy. Add cream of tartar and continue beating until stiff, but not dry. In another bowl, beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Beat in 3/4 cup almonds, sugar and almond extract. Fold in cold grated potatoes. Thoroughly fold about 1/4 of egg whites into yolk mixture. Gently fold in rest of egg whites. Butter 10-inch springform pan and dust sides and bottom with remaining ground almonds. Pour in batter and bake 1 1/2 hours. Remove from oven and cool before removing outside of springform pan. Dessert will puff up during baking, but will fall slightly in middle and around sides when cool, giving it irregular shape. Garnish with seasonal fruits and dust with powdered sugar. (Makes 12 servings.)

Good Italian Cooking Gives Community Its Own Identity

By DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press Writer

KREBS, Okla. (AP) — When the Italian food at Pete's Place overwhelms the senses of the customers, someone might spout out a few phrases in Italian. And the response from Joe Prichard often is "No capiche."

Prichard says although he knows much about the Italian heritage that makes up the complexion of this Oklahoma community, the language was left behind a long time ago.

Prichard says the rest of a diminishing heritage may not be far behind.

Krebs inherited the Italian movement in the early 1900s during the coal mining days.

"They were so poor, it didn't make any difference what they did to make a living," said Prichard, whose grandfather's name was actually Peigare, but changed to Prichard because his schoolmates couldn't pronounce it properly.

"Any ethnic group was always discriminated against terribly, and Italians were the lowest on the ladder. They were given jobs no one wanted," he said.

Prichard now runs one of the four Italian restaurants that punctuate the community. Pete's Place was named after Prichard's grandfather. It has been serving pasta out of the same house since 1925, after a coal mining accident disabled Grandpa Pete.

Grandpa Pete loved to cook, Prichard said, and the restaurant evolved from Pete's need to earn a living.

Pete's Place is a two-story colonial house, where each room is distinctly separated from the next, and each group of diners is seated in a separate room.

The lobby wall is covered with framed pictures of some of Pete's celebrated guests — nearly every U.S. senator and representative from Oklahoma, former governors and former baseball pitcher Warren Spahn.

The kitchen is the same as it was 60 years ago. A handful of cooks stir up items from a menu that has virtually remained the same throughout the years.

Perhaps the only thing missing from the old place is the old language. There isn't much Italian chatter echoing from the kitchen or the dining rooms.

"We're talking about an entire generation gap," Prichard said. "Italians were so discriminated against that my Grandpa never formally taught Dad how to speak (Italian). Now everyone wants to speak Italian."

Indeed, times have changed, but not completely.

"The two most important things at this restaurant are the great food and the design of the building," said Prichard, a 1983 graduate in hotel and restaurant management from Oklahoma State University. "But above all, what we keep in mind is that by putting our food on the table, they'll come back."

Down the street from Pete's Place is Michael Lovera's Italian Market, a small community grocery store that specializes in Italian sausage.

Sammy Lovera, who runs the store with his brother, Michael, says the store is the only reason he is still in Krebs. "A lot of people are leaving. There's nothing here to hold them back."

Lovera said the decline of the Italian populace in Krebs began after a coal mine accident in the 1920s and the economic depression that followed.

"Everyone moved off to Chicago or Cleveland, some to Detroit," he said. "Those of us with restaurants or stores stayed because it is our livelihood. We made a good living."

Last year, Lovera's brother, Mike, started a Krebs Ethnic Festival, which is scheduled to be held each year.

The site for the festival is near St. Joseph's church. It is perhaps this building that has been the heartbeat of the remaining Italian settlement.

"Krebs has the oldest diocese in eastern Oklahoma," Prichard said of the 102-year-old church. "If you had to find a center, that would be it. The most visible sign of any ethnic background in an Italian community is the church."

Lovera is quick to agree. "Everybody knows everybody, everybody cares about everybody," he says. "The majority of the 2,000 people here are Catholic, so it's a chance to be together with everyone."

If the Italian community is evaporating in Krebs, it is only a matter of time before more families move on to more prosperous lifestyles. But the food in Krebs is the town's genesis — a birthmark that never goes away.

"The restaurants and the store will always be here," Lovera said. "People come to Krebs to eat."

Put up only the best—Motto Barbed Wire & High Tensile Field Fencing. They're Class III Galvanized.

Your satisfaction guaranteed!

We believe you'll agree Motto is the best. String a roll of Motto field fence or a reel of Motto barbed wire and let it stand for a year. If you don't agree it's the best you can buy, we'll return your money and you can keep the wire.

Motto Class III Barbed Wire & High Tensile Field Fence

- Made of higher tensile strength, higher carbon steel than standard fence and conventional barbed wire.
- Easier to carry and put up. Saves labor. No stretching—simply pull it tight. Goes up faster too.
- More than twice the zinc coating of standard fence or regular barbed wire. Your fence lasts longer. Greater impact resistance too.
- Won't sag when properly installed.
- Reverse twist of Motto barbed wire makes handling easier. It lies flatter with less recoil.

When we make it so good, I can't figure why they want to sell it so cheap."

Solid Cochrane

Solid Wood Furniture from Some Solid Folks.

"Fireplace mantels. That's what we started making over 82 years ago. Beautiful. Elaborate. Hand-carved. Solid wood fireplace mantels. And the Cochrane Family and hundreds of our neighbors' families in Lincolnton, North Carolina, have been making nothing but solid wood home furnishings ever since.

"There's a lot of pretty furniture made with veneers and plywood, but there's something special about SOLID wood.

And when you see the difference, feel the difference nobody has to explain it to you. If we make it, you will treasure the quality. That's not just my word. That comes from all of us."

—T.E. "Red" Cochrane

No fancy machine makes wood as pretty as a lot of elbow grease and hand-rubbing. Take it from an old hand."

Few species of wood by their very nature give furniture a look of royalty. Such is the subtle, curvaceous character of Solid Cherry. Less plentiful today, it still imparts the same confident substance that it did to the furnishings of our forefathers in the 18th Century for those fortunate enough to own it today.

I've seen a 200-pound man pull out one of our drawers and stand on it. Then slide it back in, pretty as you please."

You'd have to use cast iron to make stronger furniture than solid oak. But whoever saw cast iron with the warmth of a honey-toned oak grain. Chesapeake Oak, the strong and silent type. Oak tree strong. Warm, sensitive, a lifetime member of the family.
