Oakdale Hostages Freed; Atlanta Siege Continues

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

OAKDALE, La. (AP) — Nearly half the Cuban inmates who freed 26 hostages and surrendered after an eight-day siege were transferred today to other prisons, but no progress was reported in efforts to free 90 hostages still held in an Atlanta penitentiary, authorities said.

Cuban inmates at the U.S. Penitentiary in Atlanta were briefed on the agreement that ended the standoff at the Federal Detention Center here Sunday afternoon. But federal officials declined to say if progress was made in talks with the Atlanta inmates.

Four Atlanta hostages were released Sunday morning, well before the Oakdale settlement was discussed with inmates holding that prison, officials said.

"There has been no reaction, no celebrating, nothing discernible" from the 1,139 Atlanta inmates to developments at Oakdale, U.S. Justice Department spokesman Thomas Stewart said.

Of the 950 Cubans in the prison near Oakdale, 419 had been identified, searched and removed today for transfer to more than 40 other federal lockups around the country, said Art Espinoza, the associate warden at Oakdale.

Federal prisons at Leavenworth, Kan.; Fort Worth and Texarkana, Texas; Englewood, Colo., and Memphis, Tenn.; were among the destinations for the Cubans, Espinoza said. He declined to say how many might go to each prison.

Espinoza said authorities hoped the prison would be emptied by the end of the day.

The U.S. Medical Center for federal prisoners in Springfield, Mo., received 66 Oakdale inmates today, said Keith Hayes, an administrative assistant there.

The Cuban riots followed a government announcement of the deportations to Cuba of 2,500 undesireables — criminals or mentally ill — who were among the 125,000 to arrive during the 1980 Mariel boatlift. Oakdale was seized Nov. 21; the Atlanta riot began a week ago today. The rioting inmates demanded that they be allowed to remain in the United States.

The Oakdale hostage release followed a videotaped message from Auxiliary Bishop Agustin Roman of Miami, who said he had reviewed a document offered by the government promising individual case reviews for those facing deportation.

The agreement also promised no reprisals for damage to the 1½-year-old $17 million prison, which was badly damaged by fires during the riot. Officials said it would be rebuilt.

Hostages who began walking out to freedom from the Oakdale prison at 2:25 p.m. were greeted with joyous relief. Freed hostages beamed, and their relatives and the inmates wept and cheered.

Search Is Under Way For Missing Airliner

By VISETSAK SANGUANGPONG
Associated Press Writer

KANCHANABURI, Thailand (AP) — An search of thick, mountainous jungle along the Thai-Burmese border today turned up no sign of a missing South Korean airliner, officials said.

A senior police official overseeing the air and ground search said wreckage of the plane that disappeared Sunday with 115 people aboard had not been found as earlier reported.

"We did not spot the wreckage or find out anything about the aircraft," Police Lt. Gen. Chit Boonyachai told reporters in Kanchanaburi province, on the Burma frontier. "Initial police reports were uncertain."

Earlier, Air Vice Marshal Sommot Sundaravej, spokesman for the Thai air force, told reporters in Bangkok that the Korea Air Lines jet had plunged into the rugged border area.

The search was suspended at dusk today and was to resume Tuesday.

In South Korea, government and airline officials said they were not ruling out the possibility the plane had been hijacked or destroyed by a bomb.

In another development, officials in South Korea said today the missing Boeing 707 had made two crash landings in the past 10 years and had a history of mechanical problems.

Airline officials confirmed that it had made a belly landing at Seoul's Gimpo Airport Sept. 2 after the flight crew was unable to lower the front landing wheel after a domestic flight. The plane also made a belly landing in 1977, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Nobody was hurt in the September incident, but the airline officials said the aircraft had a history of maintenance problems and had recently been overhauled by the Seattle-based Boeing Co.

The four-engine jet disappeared on a flight from Baghdad, Iraq, to Seoul. It was to have landed in Bangkok for refueling and was last heard from when it was off the Burma coast over

Violence Halts Elections

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Sporadic gunfire echoed early today through nearly empty streets where a voter-targeted terror campaign forced cancellation of Haiti's first presidential election in 30 years.

More than two dozen people were killed in the violence, including 15 people shot or hacked to death at a polling place Sunday before the election was called off by the Electoral Council.

Within hours, the independent council was dissolved by the military-dominated provisional government, led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

Before it was disbanded, the Electoral Council repeatedly complained that the provisional government and the military had failed to protect the council and the candidates from attacks.

Namphy said in a televised announcement Sunday that elections can still be held by February and that he plans to step down as promised Feb. 7, 1988, to make way for an elected president.

That assurance failed to satisfy the State Department, which in Washington announced the immediate cut off of U.S. military and other non-humanitarian aid and withdrawal of military personnel.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz blamed supporters of deposed President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier for the violence and said the Haitian people's desire for democracy will prevail.

Duvalier, in exile in France, today called for calm in his homeland.

In a statement released in Paris, he expressed "immense sadness over the confrontations that took place in Haiti" over the weekend.

Duvalier, who lives near the southern French city of Mougins, has refused to give interviews and the statement was his first comment on events surrounding the elections.

Armed bands, suspected by many Haitians to be former members of Duvalier's disbanded Tontons Macoute paramilitary force, rampaged through the streets of Port-au-Prince Sunday, armed with machine guns and machetes.

They fired randomly at passers-by, but attacked voters and election officials more methodically.

By CAROL TYER

Dr. Randolph Chitwood, chief surgeon in the East Carolina University School of Medicine cardiac surgery program, will leave the school in February to assume a post at the University of Kentucky School of Medicine, Lexington, ECU announced today.

Chitwood will serve as chief of cardiothoracic surgery at Kentucky. He will be developing the training program for cardiothoracic surgeons at a medical school affiliated with both the University medical center and a Veterans' Administration hospital.

Dr. Walter Pories, who heads the ECU medical school's Department of Surgery, is expected to appoint a successor to Chitwood.

Both Chitwood and ECU School of Medicine officials expressed regret today over Chitwood's announcement.

"My wife and children and I hate to leave Greenville," Chitwood said. "We wish we could pick the town up and take it with us. But this is an opportunity I can't afford to turn down. I am an 'academician' and this is a

60 Feared Dead In Avalanche

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Rescuers searched today for about 60 people feared dead after an avalanche that sounded like "huge planes" roared into an Andean valley near Santiago and buried a workers' camp and picnic area.

Two bodies were recovered following the Sunday avalanche, both several miles from the workers' camp. One was the body of a boy about eight years old.

Government television said up to 60 people were missing.

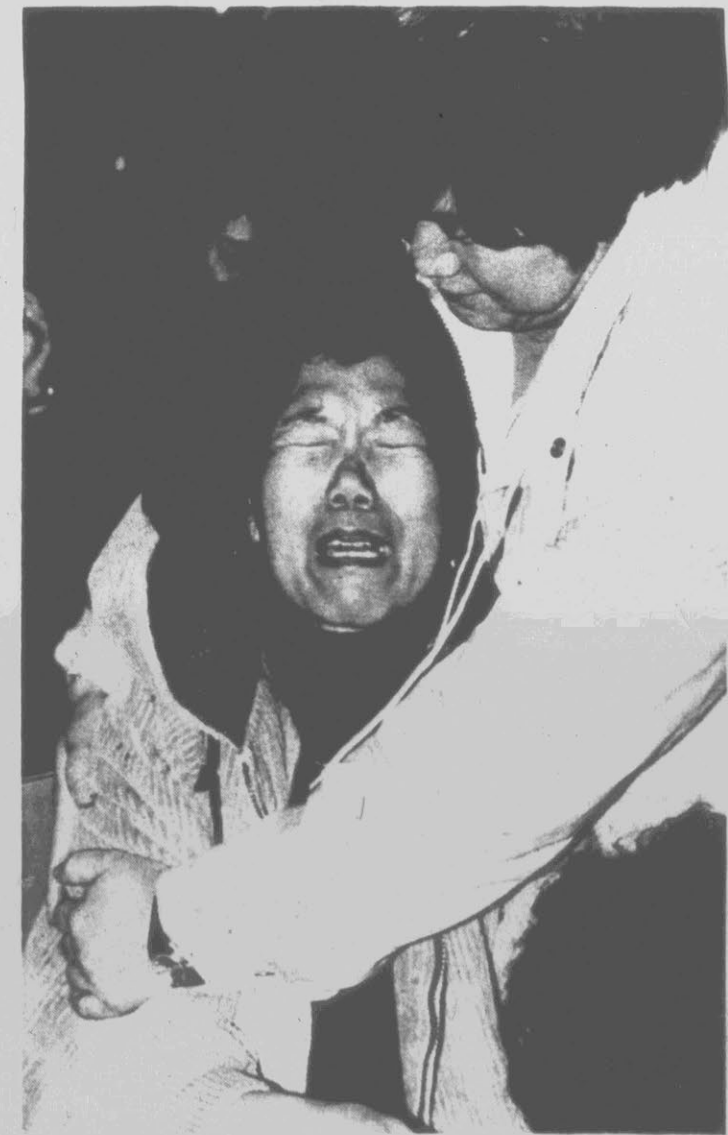

Radio stations earlier said 25 workers were missing from their camp. Police said in a preliminary report that 18 people from the workers' camp were missing and that many people at the picnic grounds also were not accounted for.

"We lost everything, our house and our car," said Victor Hugo Carvallo, who was at his nearby weekend home with his family when the avalanche struck. "All we have here are the clothes we are wearing."

Authorities said dozens of people were injured, some seriously, when snow, rocks and mud swept down the mountainside at 12:50 p.m. Many of the injured were on Sunday outings in the area near Los Maitenes, a village 45 miles southeast of Santiago.

"I heard a deafening noise, similar to the noise of those huge planes, and in minutes the camp was gone, disappeared. We ran up the hill. We were lucky," said Carvallo. "There was this couple with two children enjoying a picnic near where we were. They disappeared."

Rescue crews and military and police helicopters rushed to the region. Police said scores of people had been evacuated by dusk Sunday, but nearly 200 were still stranded. Rescue work was suspended at about 8 p.m. Sunday because of darkness and resumed at dawn today, police said.

Eakin Withdraws Conversion Plan

Plans to convert the East Carolina University band practice area on College Hill Drive to a paved parking lot were withdrawn today by ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin.

According to the ECU News Bureau, Eakin said he decided to proceed with other aspects of a previously announced plan to alleviate a parking space shortage on campus. He will recommend the remainder of the plan to the university's Board of Trustees Friday.

The original plan called for adding 1,269 parking spaces by building several new lots and expanding others at a cost of $936,000. The plan would be financed by a $25 increase in campus parking fees to $50 a year.

The Student Government Association (SGA) opposed the part of Eakin's plan to earmark the band practice area west of College Hill Drive for a new 318-space parking lot, and the SGA legislature adopted a resolution last week opposing the loss of the green space. The resolution's sponsor, Michael Bartlett, said he had 600 signatures on a student petition opposing paving of the field which is now used for band practice, ROTC drills and ceremonies and leisure time recreation.

The green space lies along the southside of Green Mill Run, which parallels Tenth Street in the College Hill area of the ECU campus.

Eakin said when announcing the parking plan that the proposed parking lot in the green space area would be 'controversial.'

Schools Question The UNC System

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Some UNC officials say North Carolina's consolidated public university system "levels" the universities' quality, but others say the 16 universities are more powerful united than they were standing alone.

David Dill, assistant to UNC-Chapel Hill Chancellor Christophert Fordham, said that regulation of salary scales and tuition levels — most of which come from the General Assembly — not only homogenizes the state's universities but throttles their capacity to develop and serve the state.

Dill told The News and Observer of Raleigh that too much regulation is a handicap to the system.

But Philip Carson, chairman of the UNC Board of Governors, said any talk of "leveling" is nonsense.

"In the 15-plus years that the Board of Governors has been in existence, the very opposite has happened," Carson said. "The flagship institutions have maintained their independence and their vitality. They have far exceeded their sister institutions in the progress they've made."

Former Gov. Bob Scott, who led the move to join the campuses under one governing board, recalls the days before consolidation as something of a "free-for-all."

Scott sees the issue much as Robinson does.

"Those that think they'd be better off (without the system) are whistling in the dark," Scott said. "They know not whereof they speak. They're much more powerful united than they are standing alone."

Officials at the University of Maryland were about to overhaul that state's public university system when the 13 colleges and universities under a single governing board. But instead of encouragement, officials in Maryland got warnings from some Tar Heel officials.

Joseph Gilmour, executive assistant to Chancellor John Slaughter of the University of Maryland at College Park, said that faculty at his campus have "some genuine concerns" about a consolidated university system. They fear such a system will "level" the College Park campus, which is the Maryland flagship, shifting the money and attention it otherwise might get to the state's weaker campuses.

"Certainly, our colleagues at Chapel Hill and N.C. State talk about that," Gilmour told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "The feeling is that they've lost ground."

Consolidated under one system in 1972, North Carolina's 16 public universities are governed by a 32-member board appointed by the Legislature and the governor. The Board of Governors hires the president, directs long-range planning, sets salaries and enrollment levels, approves all major appointments and submits a single unified budget request to the legislature.

Will Baptist Church on Route 1, Winterville, will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday for a business meeting.

Student Council

A.G. Cox School has announced its student council officers for the year. They are Chris Claybrook, president; Aaron McKinney, vice president; Virginia Hall, secretary; Kendra Williams, treasurer and Joanne Robertson, sponsor. The council annually sponsors the Halloween Carnival, food collections for needy families, a Campbell Soup label collection and gifts for rehome residents.

Agriculture Study

Kindergarten through fourth-grade students at Bethel Elementary School recently were involved in a week-long study of agriculture in North Carolina. The week was called "We Salute Our Farmers," where students learned about the importance of farming to the economy of the state.

The system was created, in part, to stop the political infighting that erupted in the legislature every two years when the 16 schools sparred over limited education funds. "Politics has everything to do with funding," Scott said. "Merit does not have a damn thing to do with it. The only way the university at Chapel Hill would get more money for research would be to have a speaker of the House living in Chapel Hill."

Richard Chait, executive director of the National Center for Post-Secondary Governance and Finance, contends that money rather than governance is what determines quality.

"Chapel Hill richly deserves all the praise and credit as a top-flight research university," Chait said. "Whether that is a function of statewide governance system, a function of William Friday, a function of demographics or levels of state support for higher education has to be sifted through."

Forced to choose, however, Chait said that the money a state puts into its university system determines quality more than any other factor. In state appropriations for higher education in 1987-88, North Carolina ranked seventh in the nation, pouring nearly $1.3 billion into its public universities and community colleges.

Robinson said he would unequivocally recommend UNC's system of governance to other states.

"Every place I go — and I may be naive — they're amazed at how we get along and how we do this," he said. "I've yet to run into an outsider who is not envious of our system."

Search Under Way For Missing S. Korean Jet With 115 Aboard

 the Andaman Sea, officials said.
 Chitr said three helicopters and two L-19 light observation airplanes mounted the aerial search but could not land in the area where the crash initially had been reported.
 He said his helicopter did land in a nearby village and those questioned there came up with "confusing stories" about what some said had been a plane crash.

 Lt. Col. Preecha Saensuk, who heads Kanchanaburi's police aviation unit, said 15 square miles were surveyed from the air while about 80 policemen trekked into the area and were in radio contact with his headquarters.
 Thick jungles, dense fog and lack of access roads in the region where peaks rise to nearly 4,000 feet hampered the operation.

 Initially, the province's police chief, Col. Punlop Roongsomphun, said a helicopter crew spotted the crash site between two border hamlets. The search then concentrated on that area about 100 miles west of Bangkok.
 A 21-member delegation of government and airline officials left

Bangkok for Kanchanaburi today to aid search efforts for the plane.
 South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan expressed sadness over the incident and said an investigation had been launched. "The government is doing its utmost to determine the facts about the incident," he said.
 KAL and South Korean officials were investigating the possibility that a bomb or freak atmospheric conditions caused KAL flight 858 to crash. Government officials said they suspected terrorists could have been involved.

 Airline officials said the plane was 130 miles south of Rangoon when it made a routine radio contact before entering Burmese air space. It was flying at 37,000 feet at the time, they said.
 The plane was not heard from again, officials said. The flight crew had given no indication anything was wrong, they said.
 The jet was carrying 95 passengers and a flight crew of 20, the airline said. All but two of the people, an Indian and a Lebanese living in Abu Dhabi, were South Korean, officials said.
 About 300 relatives of the passengers were being housed by KAL to await word on the missing plane. Hundreds of crying, sobbing people waited for hours at Kimpo Airport on Sunday night after the plane failed to arrive.

 Airline officials said the South Korean consul general to Iraq, Kang Suk-jae, was among the passengers.
 Most of the other passengers were construction workers returning from jobs with South Korean companies in the Middle East.
 KAL officials said the Boeing 707 left Baghdad at 5:40 a.m. Saturday and was to have arrived in Seoul at 8:20 p.m. Sunday.
 Its first stop was Abu Dhabi in the United Arab Emirates.
 The plane was purchased from Boeing in 1971 and served as the private jet of South Korea's president in the 1970s, airline officials said.
 The last fatal incident involving a KAL plane occurred in September 1983, when a Boeing 747 jumbo jet was shot down by Soviet fighters with the loss of all 269 people on board.

Violence Forced Halt In Haiti Elections

 1 million people, was quiet this morning. When the polls opened Sunday morning, it reverberated with explosions and machine-gun fire.
 The shooting died down shortly after the election was called off, but echoed through the night from the city's slums.
 Radio Metropole, the only station broadcasting news this morning, said all was quiet in the city this morning. There were no reports of violence from the countryside.
 Several radio stations that normally have extensive news coverage were silenced by Sunday's attacks on their transmitting towers.
 A manager of Radio Soleil, a station run by the Roman Catholic Church, said he saw uniformed soldiers knock out his tower with a flamethrower.
 Radio-Haiti was broadcasting, but skipped its early morning news reports.
 On Sunday, 15 people were shot or hacked to death at a polling place at the Ecole Nationale Argentine Belegarde school in Port-au-Prince.
 At least 12 others, including a Dominican reporter and a 1-year-old girl, were killed in other locations in Haiti on Sunday. At least 67 people were wounded, radio stations reported.
 Unidentified gunmen also shot up the Electoral Council headquarters.
 Diplomatic sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said a Swiss election observer, a French photographer and a British reporter were among the wounded. Their identities were not immediately known.
 ABC television cameraman Javier Carillo, 33, of Mexico, was shot in the thigh, and soundman Alfredo Mejia, 29, of El Salvador, was shot in the elbow, said a company spokesman in New York. They were flown to Miami for treatment.

 Robert White, former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador who was in Haiti as an election observer, said he and other members of the group were shot at twice by assailants firing from speeding cars.
 Sunday's attacks climaxed a week of pre-election violence in which at least 28 people were killed, a huge market in the capital was burned, and ballots and campaign literature were seized and destroyed by unidentified gunmen.

 Haitians were to have voted for a president and a National Assembly, which was to replace the provisional government. The junta has ruled Haiti since Duvalier fled to exile 22 months ago, ending a 29-year family dictatorship.

The electoral council canceled the elections less than three hours after the polls opened, saying they could not be held amid the violence.
 Six hours later, the three-man National Governing Council issued a decree dissolving the electoral council and repealing all electoral legislation.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Ticking Clock

When a communist leader in the prolonged communist insurrection against the Philippine government acknowledged killing three Americans last October, he was also telling the world his confidence in an ultimate victory was rising. His confidence had risen so much he felt no additional risk would be incurred by admitting the slayings.

He also took the opportunity to do a little bit of bragging about the support his forces enjoyed from outside the Philippines...claiming the communists have "support networks" in more than 25 countries, including 15 in Western Europe. Among them were a little known group in The Netherlands and another was said to be within Greece's ruling Pan Hellenic Socialist Party.

A Manila newspaper recently said private left-wing European groups have given the communist rebels millions of dollars to step up their nearly 19-year-old insurgency.

The communists controlled broad areas in some of the islands even during Marcos' years of misrule, and they expanded them during the early presidency of Corazon Aquino.

Failure of the Aquino government to pull the country together has been painfully evident but never really explained. We suspect if five analysts were asked to tell why the Aquino regime fell short of expectations the world would get five different explanations.

The United States did not exactly rush to help her in the early days after winning a national election; but that was understandable. Mrs. Aquino was an unknown quantity and the quality of her leadership had never been tested. Too, she had been checking public opinion over popularity of the policy permitting the U.S. to "rent" (by treaty) the large Clark Air Base and a huge naval installation maintained by the United States. That did not sit too well in Washington.

Eventually, American arms and cash began to be dispatched to Manila.

Another problem surfaced. Mrs. Aquino was intent upon putting a representative system of government into place but it also became evident there was no follow-up program in the works as to what the government would strive for and the priorities involved. An important factor of leadership was lacking.

The clock is ticking and while Mrs. Aquino is conferring, listening and seeking an acceptable course of action, her foes also are being given time to plan how to make her role in government untenable.

Breathing Room

Tobacco growers have enjoyed a relatively placid year in 1987. Thanks to an agreement with the tobacco companies, Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation stocks are being reduced and the growers' assessments are lower.

Quality was good in most growing areas and prices received for tobacco were reasonable.

Next year could be better. Tobacco quotas are likely to be increased for the first time in 12 years. Tobacco growers don't dare look two years ahead, but Sen. Jesse Helms says the quotas could be increased by 15 percent in 1989.

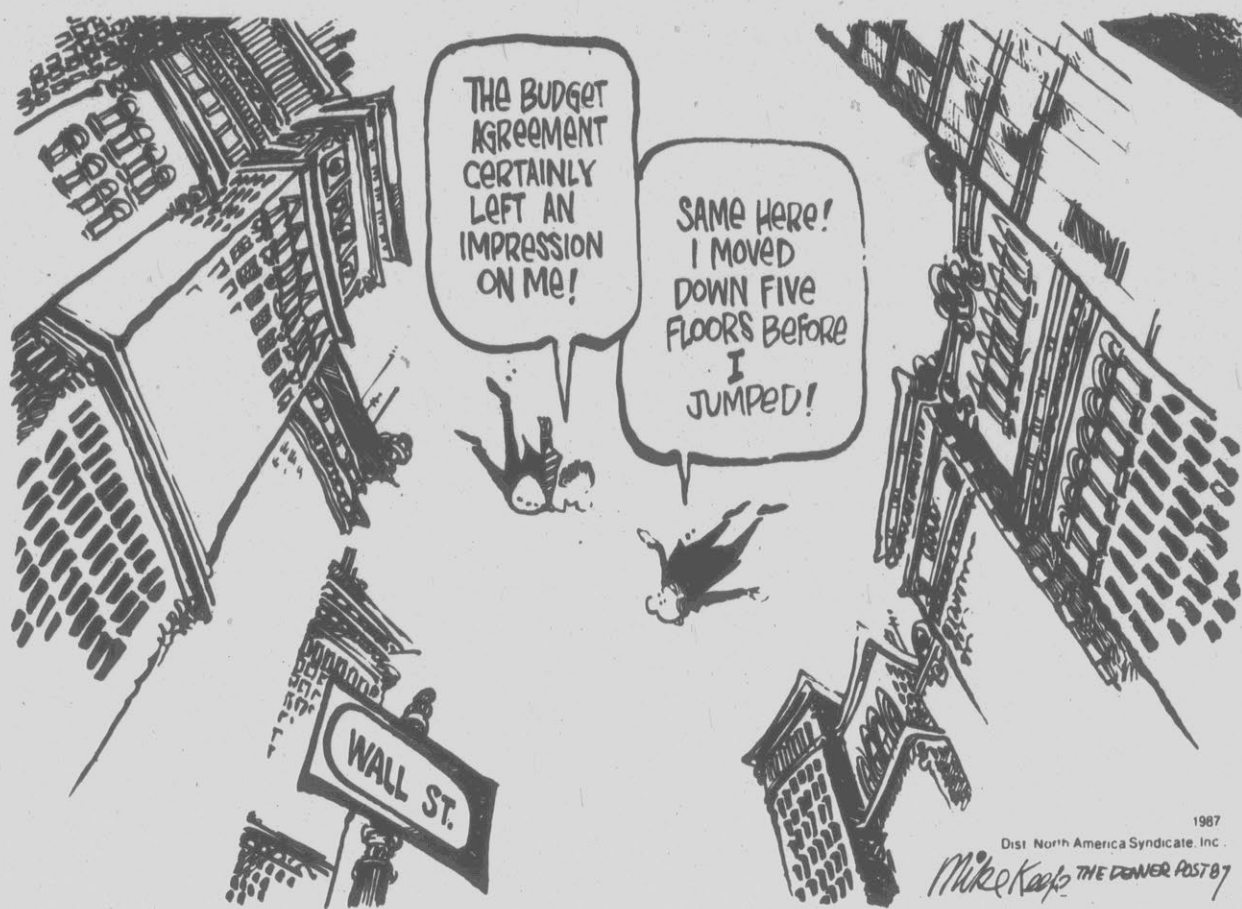

Each 5 percent increase next year could mean another 23 million pounds or $35 million. Thus it can be seen that considerably more cash could be coming to growers if the increases are accomplished. It is not a certain situation, however.

Weather is always an important factor in tobacco production. A poor growing season can reduce yields and can affect quality. Either can reduce the money that growers receive for their crop. "I wouldn't say troubled times are ever over for tobacco farmers, but we've got a little breathing spell now where things look much more secure and attractive to growers," T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, said.

A breathing spell is welcome. North Carolina's leaf growers have had a hard decade in the 1980s. It would be nice to end that decade on a more positive, profitable and optimistic note.

Quotas may increase because U.S. companies are committed to buying more American tobacco and American tobacco is also selling well overseas. There has also been an easing of restrictions on sales of U.S. cigarettes in Japan.

The reasons are many but the end result could be more revenues for tobacco growers. That translates into money for the farmers of Pitt and other eastern North Carolina counties and it could mean a more robust farm economy for our area.

A 'Communitarian' Political Purpose

WASHINGTON — The stock market crashes one October Monday; the Soviet leader cancels and then agrees to a summit meeting; the secretary of defense resigns suddenly; American ships patrol the Persian Gulf; the president seems disconnected, out of touch, unaware of events and out of contact with people. And over all this looms the 1988 election, the first in 28 years in which the incumbent has not been a candidate.

Not since 1960, when Dwight Eisenhower was completing his presidency, when the U-2 was shot down, the Paris summit canceled and Castro consolidating his rule in Cuba, has there been such uncertainty about what is ahead. We know that the world is about to change and that a year from now we will have elected a new leader. But we have little idea how it will change and who that leader will be.

Despite this uneasiness, voters are not displeased with the current state of affairs. Satisfaction, sometimes guarded satisfaction, with the facts; anxiety about the absence of formulas for governing; This is the mood in which Americans approach 1988. Pleased with the achievements of politicians in the 1980s (tax cuts, slowdown of domestic spending, roads tax, tax reform, defense buildup), they see no need for further changes in those directions but want some midcourse corrections.

Many analysts and most campaigning Democrats mistake these desires for dissatisfaction with things as they are. But Americans are bursting with pride about many of their states and local communities, and they have been giving higher job ratings to their politicians and their government than they have since Vietnam and Watergate. In 1984 for the first time in 20 years, voters enthusiastically reelected an incumbent president. They also reelected the highest and in 1986 the third highest number of incumbent House members in American history.

But in 1988 voters know their world must change. Forced to choose a new leader from among a dozen candidates they know little or not at all, Americans are faced squarely with the fact that no one seems to have a formula for governing any more. 1988 is not just an election to choose a new leader. It is also a chance for Americans — voters and politicians, responding to each other — to get a better understanding of what they want government to do and what kind of country they want America to be.

America today is the product of 40 years without a major depression and without a big-power war, years of economic plenty, peacetime fragmentation and cultural diversity — a country predisposed to distrust government and to have little interest in economic redistribution. It is a country where each culturally-defined group lives in its own little cubicle, watches its own cable TV channel and shops at its own kind of shopping center, ignorant of how its fellow citizens live and what they care about.

What is lacking in this country is a communitarian spirit. The Americans who voted in record numbers in 1960, veterans of the armed forces and the home front of World War II, did not need to be mobilized for a national purpose; they already had been. Today's Americans do. The economic success of the Reagan years has left Americans uneasy with their own selfishness, concerned about whether they are doing enough for their fellow citizens, worried that we seem to be unable to do anything together as a nation.

The Democrats helped millions of Americans to move themselves upward on the economic ladder, and the Republicans helped to promote the trend toward restraint which improves the quality of life on all rungs. But both trends seem pretty well played out. From the 1988 Democratic candidates you hear no proposals for national health insurance, no calls for a guaranteed annual income, no demand (aside from Paul Simon's history-inspired public works program) for a guaranteed job that was the stated purpose of the Humphrey-Hawkins bill.

The Republicans' moral agenda has had its successes. But abortion is not likely to be banned in most states, even if the Supreme Court overturns Roe v. Wade; sniggering sexual innuendoes are likely to remain a staple of even family-hour TV and PG movies, even if AIDS has prompted Hollywood to stop celebrating promiscuity; schoolchildren may some day be dragged into prayer sessions, but history tells us that the strongest unbelievers are those who rebel against the imposition of belief.

Where, in the absence of a persuasive macroeconomic theory and of a consensus on foreign policy, can this communitarian policy usefully lead? The answer, I think, lies in looking at the policies which created the prosperous, peaceful America that was so confident of its formula for success in 1960. These were policies that concentrated not on redistributing income (until this decade there was no significant change in income distribution after 1947) or in helping the very poor. Instead they encouraged and rewarded production and upward mobility. This tradition is embodied in the fabulously successful post-World War II policies of the GI Bill of Rights, FHA home mortgage guarantees, and the family allowance created by steeply progressive income-tax rates combined with generous exemptions for dependents.

These three policies helped change the grade-school-educated, renter, economically stagnant Americans of the 1930s into the college-educated, homeowner, economically dynamic Americans of the 1960s. Instead of aiding and therefore taking the risk of seeming to encourage those who engaged in sociopathic and deviant conduct, these policies encouraged, rewarded and (importantly, I think) honored those who served in the military, went to college, bought houses and raised good-sized families. They helped to stimulate the unprecedented economic growth of the three decades after World War II. These specific policies cannot be duplicated precisely in today's different nation. But they suggest a direction for a communitarian-minded politics, a direction that could be taken by both of today's major parties.

USSR Makes New Move In Bargaining

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has made a new move in the bargaining over a strategic arms treaty by suggesting to senior American officials in Geneva a possible limit of 5,100 intercontinental ballistic nuclear warheads in each side's arsenal, U.S. officials said Friday.

The Soviet suggestion was characterized by an administration official as "a step forward" in the negotiations but still not acceptable to the United States. The strategic arms negotiations, which are the top priority of President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, are expected to the centerpiece of their Dec. 8-10 Washington summit meeting.

Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, chief of staff of the Soviet armed forces, presented the suggestion as a possibility under consideration but not as a formal proposal in discussions this week with senior officials accompanying Secretary of State George P. Shultz, according to the sources. Akhromeyev's willingness to discuss it, even on a conversational basis, was taken as a sign that Gorbachev is ready to make a new Soviet move on the difficult nuclear "sublimits" issue at the Washington meetings.

Akhromeyev's hints evidently were the basis for Shultz's statement in a press conference at Geneva late Tuesday that "we made some progress — no question about it" in the field of strategic arms while completing work on the intermediate-range nuclear forces (INF) treaty to be signed at the summit.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., Friday a senior administration official appeared to be referring to the same development when he told White House reporters without elaboration that, "based on what we discussed with the Soviets in Geneva, the two leaders, I think, can make some progress with respect to the sublimits issue" at the summit. "We can expect some useful discussion and movement on this sublimits question."

A ballistic missile limit of 5,100 warheads would require the United States to eliminate about 35 percent of its existing 7,800 strategic ballistic missile warheads, of which about 2,200 are on land-based missiles and about 5,600 are on submarine-based missiles. The same limit would require the Soviet Union to eliminate about 40 percent of its estimated 8,400 strategic missile warheads, of which 6,400 are land-based and about 2,000 are submarine-based.

The crucial and unsolved question for the U.S. side is finding a way to limit sharply the number of Soviet land-based missiles, which have the greatest speed, range, explosive power and accuracy and thus are considered by the United States as the most destabilizing weapons. The United States is reluctant to accept sharp limits on submarine-launched warheads, which are more survivable and less useful in attacking missile silos of the other side, and where the United States has an advantage.

The U.S. problem with the Soviet idea of a 5,100-warhead limit is that, as discussed by Akhromeyev, it would allow either side to structure its forces as it wished within that overall total. The United States has proposed a limit of 4,800 ballistic missile warheads on each side, but with the provision that no more than 3,300 of these could be land-based. This would require a cut of almost half in Soviet land-based missile forces but leave the U.S. free to maintain most of its submarine-based force.

In Moscow on Oct. 23, Gorbachev shifted his position from refusing to accept any sublimits to proposing limiting land-based intercontinental missile warheads to 3,000 to 3,300 and submarine-launched ballistic missiles warheads to 1,800 to 2,000. However, Gorbachev did not propose any overall ballistic missile total such as Akhromeyev has put forward. U.S. officials said that plan was unacceptable because of the relatively low limit on U.S. submarine-based missiles.

In other summit-related developments, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the administration has received "no indications" that Gorbachev is considering extending his visit to the United States if a breakthrough is near on nuclear and space arms. A statement that such an extension was possible was made in Moscow Thursday by Georgi Arbatov, director of the Soviet Institute of the USA and Canada.

Meanwhile, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh arrived in Washington Friday for detailed preparations for the Gorbachev visit. U.S. officials said he will head a Soviet team that is to begin a new round of summit preparatory meetings next week with White House national security adviser Gen. Colin Powell, Communications Director Thomas Griscom and Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne Ridgeway.

Strength For Today

An ancient Greek philosopher remarked that if everyone could take his troubles, cast them in a closet, and then go and examine the troubles of everyone else, he would come back and eagerly rummage around in the closet to get his own troubles back.

Whenever we feel that our own burdens are insupportable, it is wise to look around and study the troubles of other people. Certainly we will find people with burdens lighter than our own. More important are those who have troubles which would be crushing if placed on our own backs. Often people are broken down by worrying about troubles that never happen, or regretting things which cannot be undone. It could be trite to say, "Things could be worse," but this if often a healthy way to regard life.

Rights Workers: Cubans Are Caught In Legal Nightmare

ATLANTA — The big gray stone federal prison here was bound to erupt sometime, or so people warned. "The Joint Could Blow," headlined a story in Atlanta Magazine back in 1985.

A year later, two Cubans inmates were acquitted of inciting a riot in one of the cellblocks. The jury felt sorry for them. "We are somewhat ashamed of our government and the way things are going for those people," the foreman said.

Civil rights lawyers championed the Cubans' cause, but few listened. "I had politicians in Washington I respect tell me the problem is there is no constituency for the issue," said attorney Gary Leshaw. "They told me it's too bad they aren't dairy farmers."

Last week, the joint in Atlanta did blow, just like the joint in Oakdale, La. It brought to fact the worst fears of several clergymen and lawyers' groups that have championed the cause of Cubans detained in federal facilities.

Those champions include Cuban-born Roman Catholic bishops and lawyers with the ACLU and Atlanta Legal Aid. They have argued that most of the Cuban detainees are not the dregs of Castro's Cuba, as often portrayed, but decent men caught in a nightmare because of flaws in U.S. immigration laws.

"The indefinite imprisonment of human beings who are not serving their sentences due to crimes they have committed cannot be justified," read a recent joint statement of Bishop Augustin Roman of Miami and Enrique San Pedro of Galveston-Houston.

Most of the inmates in the Atlanta and Oakdale facilities technically are not prisoners, but detainees. They have served their time for past crimes and are now awaiting release in a sluggish immigration process or a trip back to Cuba, the place they least want to go. Some have been waiting seven years.

"They have been caught up in a legal fiction, that they are not really here in America, but in some suspended condition where they have no rights to due process," said Atlanta lawyer Dale Schwartz, past president of the American Immigration Lawyers Association.

Dr. Charles King, head of the Urban Crisis Center in Atlanta, said he does not condone the Cubans' prison uprising, but he certainly understands why they did it. "All they've ever asked for is a fair hearing. What a little thing to ask!"

The Department of Justice, however, insists the Cubans have had their day in court. "The federal courts ruled they should be deported," said spokesman Tom Stewart. And officials make the case that they require discretionary powers over who gets to stay in America if the borders are to be controlled.

The 125,000 Cubans who arrived from Mariel, though welcomed by President Carter, were actually illegal entrants. Almost all were given immigration paroles. They have melded quietly into society.

But some had been lawbreakers in Cuba — and they were locked up immediately. Others, the Department of Justice says, violated their immigration paroles by committing crimes here.

Some 3,600 Mariel Cubans, two-thirds of them detained in Atlanta and Oakdale, have finished their sentences for crimes and now find themselves in the legal limbo of being unwelcome here or in Cuba.

They languish in lockups. The Atlanta facility, a honeycomb of steel five stories high, is one of the most overcrowded in the system. Violence is common.

In 1983, U.S. District Judge Marvin H. Shoob ruled that this indefinite detention was unconstitutional. But a panel of appellate judges overturned his decision, agreeing with the government that the Cubans were not entitled to the same rights as American citizens. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case.

Shoob, in an uncommon posture for a federal judge, has spoken out in favor of the detained Cubans. "The American people have never understood about these people," he said Friday. "They think they are all dangerous criminals and ought to be sent back...."

"But I've been through so many of the files. Many of them are not criminals at all, not unless you call people a criminal because they left an area without reporting to a parole officer or have a (drunk driving) violation."

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has not provided a breakdown of the crimes for which the Cubans were originally imprisoned, but spokesman Verne Jervis said they "run the gamut," from misdemeanors to murder.

Many have been through INS hearings. In fact, nearly 600 of the men were scheduled for transfer to halfway houses as a step to release.

"They were just caught up in red tape," said Leshaw, who defends many of the Cubans for Atlanta Legal Aid. "Then the State Department made its deal to return prisoners to Cuba, and pulled the rug out from under them."

"STOCKPILED IN A SMELLY, RAT-INFESTED PRISON... SERVED THREE RANCID MEALS A DAY... STRIPPED OF ANY PRIVACY OR HUMAN DIGNITY... AND THEY ACTUALLY EXPECT US TO TRADE THIS FOR CASTRO?!!..."

— Morris Thompson —

Cuban Stalemate Frustrates Authorities

ATLANTA — A fifth day of stalemate in negotiations for release of 94 hostages held by Cuban inmates here led to growing frustration on the part of authorities and fueled concern about the course of the crisis.

Authorities also turned aside an offer by Miami's Cuba-born Mayor Xavier Suarez, who flew here Friday, to exchange himself for the hostages. "It doesn't fit with what we're trying to do," said FBI Special Agent Joe Hardy.

There had been some hope late Thursday that three prison guards would be released here after a face-to-face appeal by three prominent Cuban Americans from Miami, but a majority of the prisoners vetoed the plan.

Justice Department spokesman Thomas M. Stewart said authorities were "frustrated" by Thursday's stalled talks and as a result are taking a "firmer posture" in their dealings with the detainees.

A statement released by Stewart said the detainees "are not helping their position by being unable to deliver on proposals seriously discussed in the negotiations."

"By leading us to believe that they were prepared to resolve the situation, they have... raised the concerns and fears of the detainees' families as well as the families of the hostages," the statement said.

Stewart described continuing, intermittent negotiations with the inmates by telephone as "quiet" and "flat." Government negotiators, he said, "are waiting for new indications from the detainees."

Following the lead of other Cuban detainees in Oakdale, La., inmates here seized hostages Monday and Tuesday to protest a revived accord to deport 2,500 Cuban refugees, including the detainees, who arrived in the 1980 Mariel boatlifts. Attorney General Edwin Meese III promised a case-by-case review in hopes of ending the crisis.

Friday, a Justice Department official said he is worried that the situation inside the prison might deteriorate rapidly if the detainees here are disappointed with the provisions of the prospective agreement in Oakdale.

"We could be here for 18 or 19 days," he said.

The official expressed further concern about how tense law-enforcement officers, who are being held at a state of readiness inside the prison grounds for a fifth day, might react, especially if inmates seek reprisals against hostage guards whom they perceive to have been abusive in the past.

But J. Michael Quinlan, director of the Bureau of Prisons, was more positive during a briefing for reporters in Washington. He said negotiations in Atlanta "continue to be productive." Although the situation is "not as close to resolution" as the one in Oakdale, Quinlan said, it is "much closer to resolution than it was yesterday."

Asked if a peaceful resolution at Oakdale would help end the Atlanta uprising, Quinlan told reporters, "They're not tied together, but it certainly is something we see as a very hopeful sign."

"The (inmate) leadership at Atlanta is still not quite at the level that it is at Oakdale, but they're very close to that level," Quinlan said.

Friday afternoon, men in windbreakers who appeared to be sharpshooters were visible for the first time atop a portion of the prison power plant that juts two stories higher than the prison walls.

It was shortly before noon on another gray, rainy day when Miami Mayor Suarez and a delegation that included five other Dade County elected officials who were born in Cuba arrived, seeking a meeting with the inmates.

Instead, they were greeted by government officials in a building on the prison grounds but outside the penitentiary proper.

There, an FBI agent adamantly opposed allowing Suarez or others in the delegation to meet with the protesting inmates. A Justice Department official also questioned the ability of the affluent, white Miami officials to relate usefully to the poor Cuban detainees, many of whom are black.

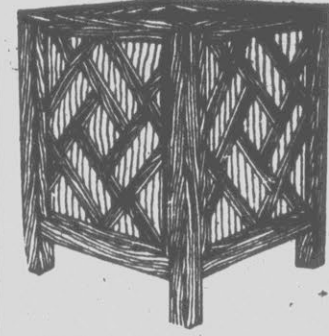

Quinlan said offers of help from Suarez and others were "very gracious." He said, however, that "at this point, we do not think we want to accept any of the offers of switching outside people for any of the Bureau of Prisons hostages."

Charles King, an Atlanta-based specialist in urban crisis management, lambasted Suarez's offer to take the hostages' place.

"The idea from the inmates' viewpoint is not to free the hostages," he said. "The point for them is what's going to happen to them."

The detainees' position, King said, is "ironic. America has mistreated these men for seven years, and they still say, 'We want to become American citizens.' The government, King argued, could improve the negotiating atmosphere "with a lot of perks to secure their trust: to let them converse with their families, so they know the negotiators have a heart. Then the detainees could let the hostages talk with their families."

King noted that relatively few of the Cubans ordered deported had been imprisoned for violent crimes.

Insiders Say Loan Probe Won't Hurt Rose's Future

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political insiders say Rep. Charlie Rose will probably sail into re-election in the 7th District, even though he likely will be criticized by a U.S. House Ethics panel for failure to properly report loans to and from his campaign.

"I don't think it's going to make any difference at all in the 7th district," one North Carolina political observer told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

If the House Ethics Committee, which could rule on the case by Christmas, concludes that Rose's campaign did indeed owe him money, then the eight-term Democrat from Fayetteville stands a good chance of getting by with a wrist-slap or no punishment at all, sources told the newspaper.

But if the panel doubts that the debt was owed Rose, he could suffer some sort of reprimand — and possibly some political embarrassment.

The decision may rest on evidence that includes bank records from Fayetteville and a six-word phrase from a 1974 campaign document. Those items are the best direct evidence that Rose's campaign organization has owed him about $50,000 since 1972, sources told the newspaper.

The claimed debt is the cornerstone of Rose's defense against charges that he improperly borrowed $63,995 from his campaign treasury between 1975 and 1985.

Lawyers and politicians who are knowledgeable about Rose's political standing say Rose is entrenched in the 7th District, noting that he easily defeated GOP nominee Tommy Harrelson last year even though Republican had unveiled the main ethics allegations against him two months before the election.

A Washington-based lawyer familiar with the ethics case told the newspaper that the worst possible scenario for Rose would be unlikely to involve the committee's harshest punishment — some kind of rebuke or censure on the House floor. Even if the committee rejected Rose's contention that the campaign owed him money, the lawyer said, "I don't think the sanction would be overwhelming."

The attorney speculated that some type of letter of reprimand from the committee might be the stiffest penalty Rose would face. Because Rose is in good standing with the House leadership, the lawyer said, it's not likely that such a reprimand would jeopardize his chairmanship of the House subcommittee on tobacco and peanuts or otherwise harm his standing in Congress.

There are four main charges against Rose stemming from the committee's investigation, which was prompted by a 1986 complaint by the N.C. Republican Party. The committee announced last month that there was "reason to believe" that Rose was guilty of alleged violations, and it launched a further inquiry to see if the charges could be proved by "clear and convincing evidence."

Since then, Rose, his father and other witnesses have testified in closed sessions before the panel, and Rose has issued a statement saying he expected to be cleared of all charges. Rose has declined to discuss details of the case publicly.

Rose's defense against the charge is simple: Beginning in 1972 when he loaned about $50,000 to his campaign treasury, the campaign organization always has owed him more than he ever took from it at any one time. Rose says he has repaid all the money he took from the campaign, and the campaign still owes him money.

According to lawyers familiar with the case, the original $50,000 debt stemmed from loans that Rose and his father, Charles G. Rose Jr. of Fayetteville, took out in 1972. In those pre-Watergate days, campaign spending reports were much simpler and looser than they are today, the lawyer says, and Rose's campaign staff failed to keep clear records of the debts owed to Rose and his father.

McKissick Still Hopeful Soul City Will Become Thriving Community

SOUL CITY, N.C. (AP) — Almost 10 years after governments spent $27 million in a failed effort to nurture a city in the pine fields of Warren County, the project's founder says he has not given up hope that Soul City someday will become a bustling community.

"Let's say I'm sorry that the government withdrew its support," Floyd McKissick said. "I'm not disappointed. I'm the eternal optimist. I believe that Soul City will go and that we will have a city where it is now. I believe that it is going to go because it's right."

"I don't intend to leave Soul City; I intend to stay and help it grow," McKissick told The Winston-Salem Journal. "I will never leave, period, because I believe in the concept. I see it taking root, and the new-town concept is a valid concept, notwithstanding what anyone says."

Notwithstanding what McKissick says, the concept was put to rest — at least as far as the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development was concerned — in the summer of 1978, when the government shut down the ill-fated New Communities program.

McKissick expected 13,000 homes to be occupied by 46,000 people by the turn of the century. Today, there are 42 homes occupied by about 200 people.

In September 1978, HUD announced that it would liquidate seven of the 13 projects, but would commit additional money to six of 13 "new town" projects across the country that it thought might survive. Soul City was among the six still given a chance, but it, too, got the ax nine months later.

But Johnie Johnson still lives in Soul City. She came in August 1977, with three children and the memory of a husband who had died of cancer a year earlier in Newark, N.J.

Mrs. Johnson, 67, saw the potential of McKissick's dream, but she came mostly because Warren County was home. She was born and raised on a cotton farm 20 miles east of here.

Mrs. Johnson lives in a brick ranch-style house and is alone except for David, her youngest child. He is 16 and a sophomore at Warren County High School. Mrs. Johnson stays busy with her flowers and a garden and a part-time job at the ABC store in Littleton.

She also is the chairman of the Warren County Political Action Council, a non-partisan group that is concerned about getting people registered to vote and otherwise active in politics.

Mrs. Johnson and her husband moved from Warren County to Norfolk and later to Newark, where he worked as a plasterer and she kept children as a foster parent. They came back periodically to visit her mother, and Mrs. Johnson would stop by Soul City.

"I used to always come up here; it had a future in it for me," she said. "It had good recreation here for the kids. It was quiet. And it looked like it had potential."

Story Denied

NEW YORK (AP) — Jessica Hahn, whose sexual tryst with Jim Bakker led to the PTL founder's downfall, denies "every line" of a Penthouse magazine article that says she once worked as a call girl.

January's Penthouse quotes a woman claiming to be a former madam as saying Miss Hahn worked for her as a call girl for two years.

The article quotes Roxanne Dacus as saying she had been a madam on Long Island until a police raid in December 1978.

Ms. Dacus said a woman named Jessie worked for her in 1977 and 1978 and that she recognized the woman as Miss Hahn in recent appearances on television.

"Every line of that thing is a lie and I'm through with them playing games with my name and my life," the 28-year-old Miss Hahn said after a copy of the article was released Sunday.

The Thanksgiving weekend started at 6 p.m. Wednesday and ran through midnight Sunday. The holiday period claimed 18 lives last year and 20 in 1985.

Breast Surgery

DURHAM (AP) — A patient who undergoes a mastectomy and breast reconstruction during the same operation can decrease the number of required reconstructive procedures, a Duke University Medical Center surgeon's study shows.

"Of course, we don't always know the exact extent of the disease until the time of surgery," said Dr. Gregory Georgiade, an associate professor of surgery and plastic surgery at Duke. "However, we actually perform breast reconstruction on about 95 percent of the patients who are considered appropriate candidates for it preoperatively."

"Patients are generally satisfied and adjust to the surgery much more easily when breast reconstruction is performed immediately. And there's no increased risk of recurrence (of disease), based on the results of this study."

Georgiade recently evaluated the results in 290 patients who underwent immediate breast reconstruction at Duke in the past 11 years. The study includes the largest series of patients examined so far in the world medical literature, he said. He presented the results at the recent International Society of Aesthetic Plastic Surgery meeting in New York.

Most of the patients in the study had modified radical mastectomies, including removal of the breast as well as the lymph nodes under the arm.

Breast reconstruction — which involves placing a silicone gel-containing prosthesis at the incision site and covering it with the chest wall muscles and remaining skin — adds about one hour to the procedure, Georgiade said. A nipple may be constructed several months later, after the healing has occurred.

Sheriff Dies

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Cumberland County Sheriff Otis Jones died at his home this morning after a long bout with lung cancer. He was 55.

Jones had been in declining health since last year, when he underwent surgery for lung cancer shortly after he suffered a heart attack.

He had been sheriff since 1972, when he was appointed to succeed W.G. Clark, who retired. Jones was first elected in 1974 and won re-election three times.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Jones was a past president of the North Carolina Sheriff's Association.

Harold Little, a spokesman for the sheriff's department, said Maj. Charles Smith was appointed to command the department until the Cumberland County Commissioners choose someone to serve out Jones' term, which expires in 1990.

The Cumberland County Sheriff's Department is one of the largest in the state with an annual operating budget of $9 million and a force of more than 200 sworn deputies.

Sales Tax Dispute

RALEIGH (AP) — Some small merchants are mounting a campaign to recover some of the $42 million a year that they say a new state law is costing them, but the companies that benefit from the law are balking.

For decades, merchants who collected sales taxes from customers and turned the money over to the state got to keep 3 percent as a collection fee. The 1987 General Assembly abolished that, requiring merchants to turn over all the sales tax they collect.

The fee was abolished as part of a tax reform bill, which also abolished the inventory tax — an annual property tax paid to local governments by all manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers on their stock.

One Killed As Small Plane Crashes On Calif. Freeway

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A single-engine plane crashed Sunday night on the busy San Diego Freeway, killing one person aboard the aircraft and setting off a rash of auto accidents, authorities said.

It was unclear if the plane struck any vehicles before it slammed into the highway's center divider near the Long Beach Airport and burst into flames, authorities said.

Two people were aboard the Piper aircraft when it crashed about 6:45 p.m., said police Lt. Gary Whinery. One of those on board was killed on impact and the other was taken in critical condition to Memorial Hospital of Long Beach.

The crash triggered freeway accidents involving at least five cars, said Long Beach Fire Department dispatcher Craig Beck. He said he didn't know if any cars were hit by the plane, and it also wasn't immediately known if any motorists were injured.

The fire department was also working to clean up fuel spewing onto the freeway from the plane, said Beck.

"The plane was en route to Long Beach Airport and had some type of problem," said Long Beach Airport Security spokesman Sam Sansenbach. The pilot had radioed the problem to the control tower, he said.

The freeway was closed in both directions, said California Highway Patrol dispatcher J.R. Losenno, and traffic for homeward bound holiday motorists was at a standstill in both directions of the freeway.

"It sounds like a parking lot out there," said Whinery. Numerous car accidents were reported in the vicinity of the crash, Losenno said.

Latin Nations Issue Plea For Economic Assistance

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Eight deeply indebted Latin American nations are pleading for economic relief from the United States and other industrialized countries, and threatening to retaliate if help is not forthcoming soon.

In a 29-page document signed Sunday, the nations' presidents called for negotiations with the industrialized countries, commercial bankers and international lending institutions aimed at lifting their economies out of one of their worst depressions in history, a decline greater than that of the 1930s.

Should the international lenders balk, the presidents said they might have to arbitrarily lower the amount of interest they now pay on a combined debt of $343 billion, either individually or in concert. Two nations, Brazil and Peru, already have done that, and the others firmly supported their action.

"The cry (for help) is getting louder and louder and louder," said a Mexican diplomat who attended the eight-nation summit. "We've been saying these things for a long time, but nobody has been listening."

"What we're saying now is that you (the United States and other industrialized nations) must listen and heed, or we'll be forced to take drastic, unilateral action," said the diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The joint declaration by the presidents at the close of their summit in the Pacific coastal resort of Acapulco said the debt negotiations they seek "will be carried out within the sphere of permanent coordination and consultation among our governments."

"If the progress foreseen is not achieved within a suitable time, some countries, in accordance with their own circumstances, may be forced to take unilateral measures to limit their debt servicing in a manner consistent with their development needs," the communique said.

A financial analyst who attended the Acapulco meeting as an unofficial observer suggested the declaration by the so-called Group of Eight would have little immediate impact. The analyst, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said U.S. bankers "will probably be pleased" that the Latin Americans didn't take an even tougher stance.

The meeting brought together presidents Raul Alfonsin of Argentina; Jose Sarney, Brazil; Virgilio Barco, Colombia; Miguel de la Madrid, Mexico; Eric Arturo Delvalle, Panama; Alan Garcia, Peru; Jose Maria Sanguinetti, Uruguay; and Jaime Lusinchi, Venezuela.

The presidents said the proposed negotiations should establish mechanisms that would protect them from having to make higher debt service payments when interest rates rise and take advantage of the low resale value financial markets have placed on their old loans.

Some smaller banks have recently begun selling Latin American debt notes to investors, discounting them at 40 percent or more of their face value. Major banks holding most of the debt, however, have not followed suit, fearing a loss of bargaining power with the debtor nations.

"The region's economic crisis manifests itself ... in a decline in development which involves simultaneous and persistent deterioration in production and savings and a drop in real income," the Acapulco declaration said.

Returns Show Premier Leading Turkish Voting

By EMEL ANIL
Associated Press Writer
ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Premier Turgut Ozal today appeared headed to an election victory and a new five-year mandate in Turkey's first civilian-run general election since the military ceded power in 1983.

With 70 percent of the votes counted, Ozal's free-enterprise oriented Motherland Party had 36 percent of the ballots, a drop from the 45 percent vote he commanded four years ago, the government television reported early today.

That would give Ozal's Motherland Party about 270 seats, or a majority, in the 450-seat, one-house Parliament, said the semi-official Anatolia News Agency. Complete results were expected later today but it would take several days to determine representation in Parliament, election board officials said.

Ozal claimed victory late Sunday and predicted a legislative majority, but opposition leaders criticized an electoral system that favored large parties.

"This was not an election under equal conditions," said former Premier Suleyman Demirel. Television reports ranked Demirel's center-right True Path Party third with 19.7 percent of the vote.

Running second with 24.5 percent of the vote was the main opposition Social Democratic Populist Party, the television reported. It is led by Erdal Inonu, a nuclear physicist turned politician.

Job Outlook Looking Up

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Employers scaled back their hiring plans after last month's stock market plunge but still plan to hire more college graduates this year than last, a survey shows.

Michigan State University's annual survey of employers showed an expected 3.8 percent increase in hiring, with chemical engineering graduates drawing the highest starting salary.

Responses from 1,019 employers in business, industry, government and education showed that large corporations plan to cut back at middle and top management levels and increase hiring by 2 percent to 5 percent for 1987-88.

Before the plunge, employers indicated they would hire 5.5 percent more graduates. Following the downturn, the figure dropped 1.7 percent.

Starting salaries for graduates with a bachelor's degree average $22,600, the survey by placement services at Michigan State said.

The survey also found: —The regions with the best employment opportunities for new graduates are the Southwest and the Northeast.

—Twenty-seven percent of employers surveyed test new graduates for drug use. Two percent test for AIDS.

—At $30,190, chemical engineering graduates head the list of highest starting salaries. They are followed by industrial and civil engineering majors. The lowest starting salary of $16,600 goes to geology majors.

—The greatest increase in demand will be for graduates majoring in hotel, restaurant and institution management, up 4.3 percent from a year ago.

—Demand is also strong for graduates with degrees in marketing, geology, accounting and electrical engineering.

—Hiring at small businesses will increase a robust 10 percent to 17 percent over 1987 levels.

—Salaries for graduates with a master's degree edged up 2.3 percent from 1986, to $27,700 this year.

The other four parties in the race were below the minimum 10 percent required to send members to the Parliament, and leaders complained about this barrier. "This election was not legitimate and polls should be renewed as soon as possible," said Necmettin Erbakan, leader of the Moslem fundamentalist Prosperity Party, which was in fifth position.

Former Premier Bulent Ecevit's Democratic Left Party came in fourth with 8.5 percent of the votes.

Unlike the 1983 elections that brought Ozal to power, Sunday's balloting was open to all legally established parties. It was the first time in a decade the elections were opened to all parties.

Turkey, a nation of 52 million people, has about 26.3 million eligible voters. Those who do not vote are fined the equivalent of $13. Turnout figures would not be available until later today, election officials said.

The Hurriyet News Agency said supporters of Motherland and the center-right True Path Party clashed with sticks and stones in the southeastern province of Siirt on Sunday. Five people were injured, it said.

In the eastern province of Bitlis, a ballot box official died of a heart attack trying to separate two groups fighting with knives, Anatolia reported. It said three people were injured in the fight.

No other election-related violence was reported.

The elections followed a September referendum that freed former politicians from military-imposed bans against political participation. Ozal campaigned on the strength of his economic reforms which liberalized foreign trade, established value added tax and cut down bureaucratic controls.

Launch Keeps Space Recovery On Target

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — America's most powerful unmanned rocket had its second-consecutive success by launching a spy satellite, and officials called the latest flight a major step in restoring the nation's space program.

The satellite launched toward a stationary 22,300-mile-high orbit Saturday night by a $65 million, 16-story-tall Titan 34D rocket was not identified by the Air Force.

But John E. Pike, a space policy expert for the Federation of American Scientists in Washington, said it is one of a series intended to provide up to 30 minutes warning of an all-out nuclear attack.

The launch continued the U.S. rebound from last year's space failures, and improved the Pentagon's chances of orbiting a backlog more than 30 vital military satellites, officials said. It was the second-straight success for the Titan 34D, which was grounded by the explosion of a Titan in April 1986 at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. A redesigned version of the rocket carrying a reconnaissance satellite blasted off from Vandenberg last month.

Without the Titan 34D and with the space shuttle grounded by last year's Challenger explosion, the Air Force had been unable to orbit heavy military payloads, which have been accumulating.

The satellites are needed to monitor compliance with the nuclear arms agreement to be signed next week by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, as well as for reconnaissance, communications, navigation and communications interception.

Another U.S. rocket, the Delta, also was grounded for months last year by a failure but has resumed flights. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to resume shuttle flights next June.

Air Force Secretary Edward C. Aldridge called the back-to-back Titan successes major steps in America's space launch recovery, and said they "demonstrate our operational launch capability from both the East and West coasts ... and emphasize our confidence in the Titan launch system and its ability to launch critical national security payloads."

"We are really back in business now," said Col. Lawrence L. Gooch, commander of the Eastern Space and Missile Center, which includes the Cape Canaveral launch area, site of Saturday night's blastoff.

More Bodies Found

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Search teams found four more bodies today in the Indian Ocean near where a South African Airways jumbo jet crashed with 159 people on board. So far nine bodies have been retrieved, the airline said.

The crash occurred early Saturday after the Boeing 747's pilot reported smoke inside the plane as it approached Mauritius for a refueling stop en route from Taiwan to Johannesburg. Only small pieces of debris have been found, and all aboard are presumed dead.

M. Bagaunt, civil aviation director in Mauritius, said the five bodies found Sunday were brought to the Mauritian capital of Port Louis early today and taken to a hospital for an autopsy. None of the recovered bodies has been identified, said airline spokesman Nico Venter.

Contact with the plane was lost 10 minutes before the scheduled landing, after the pilot, Capt. Dawie Uys, radioed to the control tower: "There is smoke coming into the cabin. I think we have a fire."

Ships from France, Mauritius, Taiwan and Japan are participating in the search, as well as spotter planes. South Africa today sent two airplanes, two helicopters and a navy ship to join the hunt, centered about 100 miles northeast of Mauritius.

Passengers on Flight 295 came from 12 countries. The lone American on board was identified from a passenger list as William G. Murlless, South African Airways said. The airline did not release Murlless' hometown.

Officials would not speculate on the cause of the crash of the 747-200B "Combi," a jumbo jet designed to carry both passengers and cargo.

Mauritius is an island chain 2,200 miles northeast of Johannesburg and about 500 miles east of Madagascar, a larger island nation east of southern Africa.

Double-Ring Vows Solemnized Sunday

The wedding ceremony of Monica Patricia Gay and Patrick Caddell Jones, both of Greenville, took place Sunday at 3 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dan Wilkers. Organist Dr. Robert Irwin and vocalist Becky Carraway presented wedding music. Ms. Carraway sang "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Jonanna Pearson of Bailey and W. Gerald Gay of Greenville. Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Jones of Route 3, Laurinburg, are parents of the bridegroom.

Debby Godwin of Greenville was maid of honor. The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Alex Jones, Ed Jones and Gib Jones of Laurinburg, all brothers of the bridegroom, and Dwayne Wright of Dayton, Ohio.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a tea-length candlelight gown styled with lace applique over the entire dress. The gown was fashioned with a high scalloped neckline, short puffed sleeves and natural waistline corded in self-material. She wore baby's

Is Retouch Artist Sick?

DEAR ABBY: One of my co-workers is polite, kind, handsome and fun to be with. He always buys the newspaper you are in, then he draws mustaches, blacks out teeth and disfigures everyone whose picture is in the newspaper. Men, women, children, the pope, Dear Abby — go one is safe from this pen-pushing fiend.

Abby, could this be some kind of mental disorder? — WONDERING IN MISSOURI

DEAR WONDERING: I'm not qualified to interpret the psychological implications behind idle doodling. Your co-worker could be a normal but somewhat nervous fellow who needs to keep his hands busy. Why assume there is something sinister or sick about a compulsive retouch artist?

DEAR ABBY: Please, am I being too sensitive, or is it just plain rudeness on the bride's part? I am about to marry a man who has three daughters — all grown.

Several months ago, his eldest daughter was married. He took me to the wedding. His daughter insisted that her father be in the group pictures — standing next to his ex-wife. Not only that, but he had to have the first dance with her and stand in the receiving line next to her, which I thought was rather tacky since I had nothing to do with the wedding.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Also, I resented being left alone while all this was going on. I thought once a man is divorced, he doesn't have to play the part of a "husband."

Do I have to go through this with the other two daughters when they get married? — TEED OFF IN N.J.

DEAR TEED OFF: When a divorced man has daughters, he is usually expected to play "father of the bride" in order to keep the peace with his first family. It matters not how "Dad" — or the new lady in his life — feels about it; it's the bride's day, and she wants to preserve the illusion of Mom and Dad together (for the bridal book) no matter how lousy the marriage was.

Gribe and hear it. That's part of the price you pay for loving a man with a first family. It's only one day out of the year for you. It's his daughter's wedding day.

DEAR ABBY: I am deeply in love with my boyfriend and he says he loves me, but he has a lot of women calling his apartment night and day — and he won't ask them to stop calling him even though I am living with him. He also keeps phone numbers in his wallet. He's a disc jockey and says he has to keep in touch with these women; it's part of his work. He says there is nothing wrong with calling them or them calling him.

Abby, I love him so much, I would never allow another guy to call me, and I certainly wouldn't be calling anyone else. What should I do? I'm so tired of being hurt and feeling sick every time the phone rings — hoping it's his mother, his sister or a guy.

It's to the point where I just don't trust him anymore. Please give me your best advice. I'm going absolutely crazy! — CRAZY IN LOVE IN BALTIMORE

DEAR CRAZY: I know you are hoping for some kind of magic solution that will transform your "boyfriend" into a faithful one-woman man. Sorry, I have none because there isn't any. Pack your things and move out. If you're looking for "Old Faithful," head for Yellowstone Park in Wyoming.

Dear Abby's Cookbooklet is here! To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064 (postage and handling are included).

SPOTTING SAFETY

Ninety percent of all spots on carpet can be removed with a mild detergent if acted on immediately (within a few minutes). Since it would take a fleet of Supermen to respond that fast, that leaves you as the only defense against permanent stains around your home.

If you're going to use the spotters necessary to keep your carpet looking beautiful through the years, you'd better be aware of some basic precautions, which apply to all spotting agents.

Store chemicals in a cool, area away from food products and well out of reach of children. Keep the product in its original container so that label directions can be referenced. Then read the directions before using! Protect your skin and eyes from direct contact with spotters, especially dry-cleaning solvents. Should contact occur, flush immediately with clear water. Remember, dry-solvent fumes may be toxic, so provide plenty of ventilation. Use only enough spotter to "wet-out" affected face yarns. Excess use of dry solvent, for example, can destroy or swell latex or foam rubber backings.

Dry solvents may be flammable—never use them near a flame, electrical outlet or while smoking—and don't mix chemicals unless specified by the label. Particularly, avoid mixing bleaches and spotters, since highly toxic fumes may result. In fact, chlorine bleach should never be used on any fabric which can't be rinsed in the washing machine, since delayed bleaching effects are common. Also, dishwashing liquids containing lanolin get the spot, but soil will be attracted to the residue and the spot will reappear time and again. Be sure to rinse or dry one spotter before proceeding with a second.

Whenever you have a problem with a particular spot or stain, don't hesitate to call us for advice. We may not be able to work miracles, but at least you'll know there's someone who cares and who's willing to help.

Surgeon Is Leaving

much larger medical school where I'll be doing less surgery myself and more program development in both surgery and basic science research. It's just the next step and I have to take it."

"It's hard for me to put into words what Dr. Chitwood has done for our heart program," Dr. William Laupus, dean of the ECU Medical School, said today. "He's a very strong leader and I believe he will be one of the major figures in American surgery over the next two decades. I regret that he's leaving, but I understand that it's necessary for him to do so if he is to pursue his appropriate role in academic surgery."

Chitwood came to Greenville in July, 1984, but had been developing and directing the start-up of the cardiac surgery program here for at least nine months before he arrived, while he was still associated with the Department of Surgery of the Duke University School of Medicine. Several members of his cardiac-surgery team preceded him here to help set up the program.

The first bypass surgery in the new program was performed in July, 1984; the first heart transplant here Feb. 17, 1987. The program has averaged 500 surgeries per year and the cardiac surgery intensive care unit has been expanded from two beds to six.

"I'm leaving this program in very capable hands," Chitwood said. "Dr. Erle Austin and Mark Williams are some of the best cardiovascular surgeons in the country. If I didn't feel that this program could go on without a hitch, I wouldn't be leaving. This is my baby and I know I'm leaving it in capable hands."

Laupus said Chitwood "initiated our cardiovascular surgery program from scratch. We gave him a set of goals and objectives and he did the rest. He's provided the leadership and focus. It's my belief that Dr. Chitwood has brought in fine associates in cardiovascular surgery who will carry on in the fine style and with the high standards that he has established here."

According to Pories, "Having had Dr. Chitwood here and having him move on to such a prestigious new position is an indicator of the vigor and excellence of our medical school. I consider it a great celebration. The purpose of a young department of surgery is to bring the best people in and train them to assume positions of leadership throughout the country. That's how we get the best people. We don't consider this a loss at all. We consider it a great success. Dr. Chitwood has done a superb job and we wish him and his wife and family the best."

Oakdale Hostages Are Freed

"For the hostages and the relatives, this is a day of jubilation," Roman said. "For the Marielitos, it is a day of hope for the community, a day of peace."

Roman, the highest-ranking Cuban-born priest in Miami's Roman Catholic Archdiocese, expressed willingness to work to end the Atlanta prison takeover if officials asked him.

The Oakdale agreement could be helpful in negotiations with the Atlanta inmates, said Rafael Penalver, Roman's lawyer and chief negotiator.

"I think it can be applicable and I think it's an agreement that when it was worked out it was perceived with a much broader picture than just the Oakdale situation. We were thinking of all the detainees of Mariel who are detained in several prisons around the country," he said today on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

The agreement still could lead to some Cubans being deported to their homeland, Penalver said.

"What the bishop wanted to ensure was that we have a fair process in which each individual case could be reviewed before a panel that would listen to each individual story," he said. "Each of those Mariel detainees has a story and many feel that they have never had a chance to tell that story."

Patrick Korten, the Justice Department's deputy director of public affairs, ruled out an immediate invitation to the bishop to participate in Atlanta talks.

After their release, the Oakdale hostages were taken by bus to Humana Hospital.

"They're dirty. They're in good spirits. They're hungry. They all appear to be stressed somewhat," said Dr. Roy Harding. "All have been checked and appear to be doing very well."

As the bus pulled into the emergency entrance, Ronald Thompson of Mobile, Ala., spotted his twin brother, Donald, who had been a hostage, and began screaming his name until he became hoarse. As his brother waved at him, Ronald kept repeating, "Oh God, thank you!" until he broke down sobbing.

"He looked great, didn't he?" Ronald said. "I prayed for God to let him loose. Oh, God, thank you."

Harding said one hostage guard had a sprained knee or ankle, but was not seriously hurt.

"They got tired of wieners, but they were treated well," said Harding. "They ate the same thing as the inmates. They drank a little swamp water because the water ran out. The people I saw show no signs of physical abuse. Mostly, they have a lack of water and soap."

Guard Leon Smith said he and the other hostages had been treated fairly and with respect.

"But we were all scared because it was the first time we had to deal with a situation like this," he said. He said he believed the hostages were treated well because guards had treated inmates fairly.

He said the only time he felt threatened was when helicopters swooped overhead. "They (the Cubans) really got upset when that happened," Smith said.

The Cubans had insisted on Roman's involvement a few days after the siege began.

The agreement, typed on stationery from Attorney General Edwin Meese III's office, included guarantees of individual reviews of inmates' status and medical treatment for those needing it.

"We did not give away the store," said J.D. Williams, a regional director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons. "I think it's a good agreement."

Meese, in a statement released in Washington, said, "While this is understandably a time of rejoicing and thanksgiving, the Department of Justice will not rest until the situation in Atlanta is also peacefully concluded and all the hostages there are released."

In a videotape played for the inmates earlier Sunday, Roman said he had discussed the accord with Meese in Washington and urged them to accept it.

Eakin Proposal

The chancellor said he would meet with representatives of the SGA "to set up a committee" to work with him to develop alternatives to the green space paving idea.

By deleting 318 spaces from the overall plan, Eakin will recommend parking lot construction and expansion for 978 spaces at a cost of more than $750,000.

The SGA legislature cited figures indicating that ECU issues 22,010 campus parking permits a year but provides only 5,547 spaces on campus.

The SGA resolution urged "more efficient plans for solving the current and future parking problems." It said the Eakin plan would only postpone a long-range solution to the problem and Bartlett said "we need a long-term plan."

Bills Blank Miami, 27-0

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

For the first time since 1985, Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula had nothing good to say about his quarterback.

In fact, he was struggling to find anything good to say about anything.

"The only thing we had today was Reggie Roby's punting," Shula said, "and anytime you have to talk about the punter as the highlight of the game, you're in deep trouble."

On Sunday, the Buffalo Bills beat Miami for the second time this season, handing the Dolphins a 27-0 shutout and preventing Dan Marino from throwing a touchdown pass for the first time in more than two years.

Marino had passed for at least one touchdown in 30 straight games. The last time he had failed to throw a TD pass was Nov. 3, 1985 at New England.

The shutout was the first against Miami since 1982, and Buffalo had not beaten the Dolphins twice in one season since 1966, the year Miami joined the old American Football League.

Buffalo's victory helped break a five-way tie for the AFC East lead. The Bills remained in the tie at 6-5 along with Indianapolis and the New York Jets. Miami and New England fell a game back at 5-6.

Indianapolis clobbered Houston 51-27, the Jets beat Cincinnati 27-20 and Philadelphia used an overtime field goal to beat New England 34-31.

In the rest of the NFL, New Orleans clinched its first winning season with a 20-16 victory over Pittsburgh, the Chicago Bears defeated Green Bay 23-10, Washington beat the New York Giants 23-19, Denver defeated San Diego 31-17, San Francisco outscored Cleveland 38-24, the Los Angeles Rams clobbered Tampa Bay 35-3, and St. Louis beat Atlanta 34-21.

The Monday night game had the Los Angeles Raiders at Seattle. On Thanksgiving Day, Kansas City beat Detroit 27-20 and Minnesota beat Dallas 44-38 in overtime.

Bills 27, Dolphins 0
Buffalo's defense held Miami to 229 total yards, including just 23 on the ground. The Buffalo defense intercepted Marino three times, and Don Strock replaced him in the fourth quarter.

Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly threw two touchdown passes, while Ronnie Harmon ran for 119 yards. Kelly completed 15 of 21 passes for 217 yards, while Marino was 13 of 28 for 165 yards.

"Regardless of whether you get pressure on him, he's going to get the ball off," Bills defensive end Bruce Smith said of Marino. "But we got so much pressure on him, he was always aware of who was around."

The Bills beat Miami 34-31 in overtime in the first game after the strike, and Dolphins linebacker Jackie Shipp said it was embarrassing to lose to a team that had gone 8-40 in the previous three seasons.

"We were really pumped up," Kelly said, "especially after Jackie Shipp made some comments about it really hurts inside to lose to Buffalo. Everybody took it personally."

Colts 51, Oilers 27
The Colts ran up their highest point total since a 58-20 victory over Buffalo on Dec. 12, 1976, when the franchise was still in Baltimore.

Albert Bentley caught two touchdown passes, and Eric Dickerson ran for two more scores — all in the first half. With 136 yards, Dickerson has gone over 100 yards in each of his four starts since coming to Indianapolis from the Rams.

The Colts led 28-10 at halftime as Houston dropped to 6-5.

Jets 27, Bengals 20

Barry Bennett blocked a Cincinnati field goal attempt and Rich Miano returned it 67 yards for a tie-breaking touchdown with 1:48 to play as Cincinnati fell to 3-8.

Jim Breech missed a 46-yard try seconds earlier, but the play was nullified by the two-minute warning. Bennett blocked the second attempt, and Miano ran the ball down the left sideline for the score.

Miami then intercepted a long pass attempt by Boomer Esiason to seal the victory.

Eagles 34, Patriots 31, OT

Paul McFadden, who had missed a 39-yarder two minutes earlier, kicked a 38-yard field goal with 2:44 left in overtime as Philadelphia knocked New England out of the AFC East tie.

Tony Franklin missed two chances to win the game for New England. He missed a 31-yard field goal attempt with five seconds left in regulation and one of 46 yards with 9:59 to go in overtime.

Philadelphia is 5-6.

49ers 38, Browns 24

San Francisco stayed a game ahead of New Orleans in the NFC West as Joe Montana threw four touchdown passes, three to Jerry Rice and one to Dwight Clark, against Cleveland.

San Francisco, 9-2, rolled up more than 400 yards on offense, with Montana passing for 342, against Cleveland's defense, which went into the game ranked No. 1 in the NFL. The Browns had allowed only nine touchdown passes in their first 10 games.

Rice had his second consecutive three-touchdown game and totaled 126 yards on seven catches. His 30-yard TD catch in the second quarter sent the 49ers ahead to stay at 14-10.

Saints 20, Steelers 16
Bobby Hebert's 19-yard touchdown pass to Eric Martin in the fourth quarter put the Saints ahead, giving them an 8-3 record and guaranteeing an over-.500 finish with just four games left. The Saints have never had a record better than 8-8 since joining the NFL as an expansion franchise in 1966.

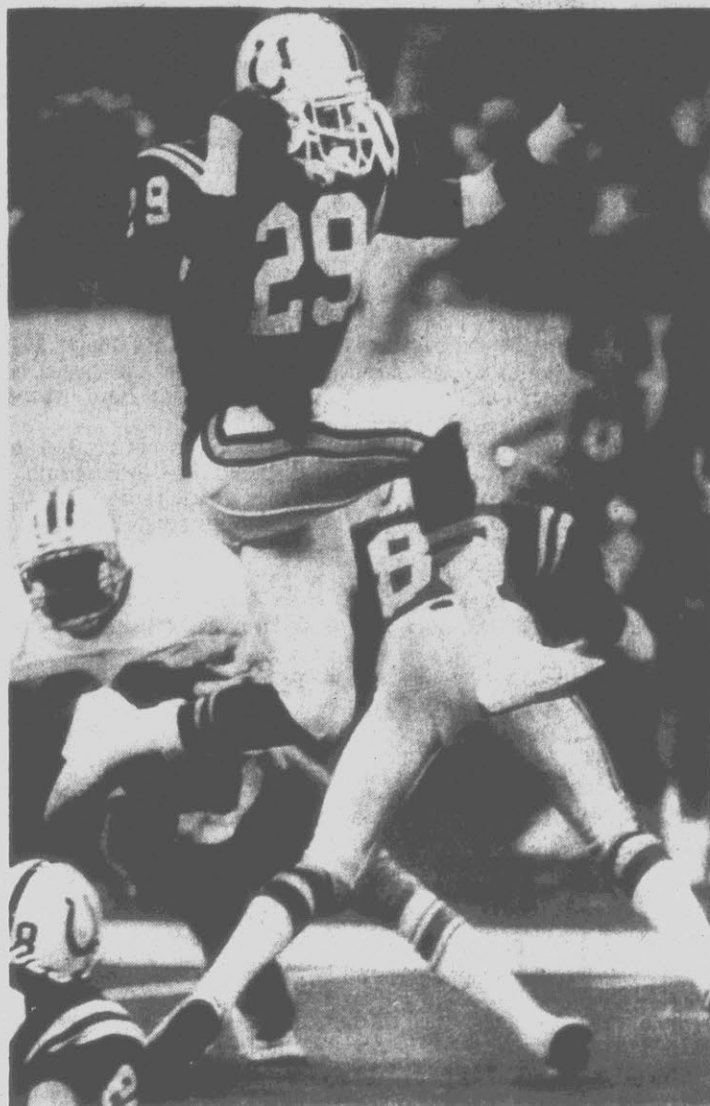

"We're winners. Finally we can say we're winners," Saints tackle Stan Brock said. "This was our chance, our golden opportunity and we didn't let it slip away."

New Orleans' defense set up three scores and held Pittsburgh, 6-5, on two fourth-quarter goal-line stands.

Bears 23, Packers 10
One of Kevin Butler's three field goals broke a 10-10 halftime tie, and Neal Anderson and Thomas Sanders each scored touchdowns as the Bears improved their NFC Central Division-leading record to 9-2. Green Bay fell to 4-6-1.

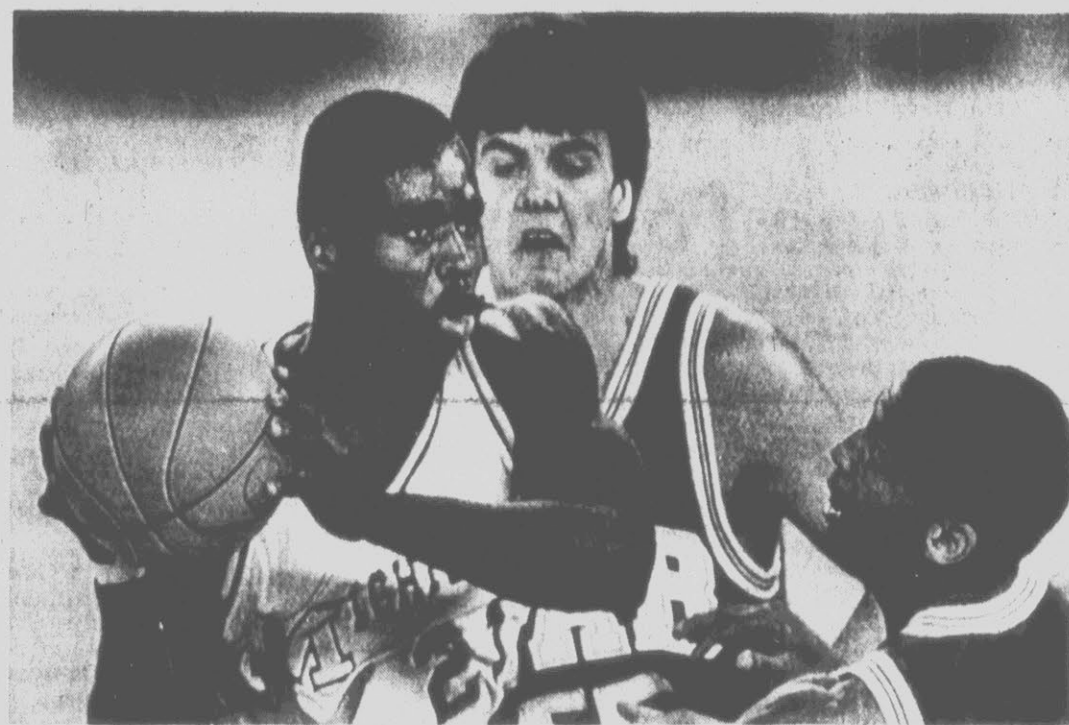

Anderson caught a 20-yard scoring pass from Jim McMahon in the first half, and Sanders ran 7 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Iowa Claims Maui Classic To Top Tournament Action

By The Associated Press

Most visitors go to Hawaii for sun and fun. The Iowa Hawkeyes had something else on their minds.

"I think it's a tribute to the tournament that you see players working this hard to win it," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said after his 11th-ranked Hawkeyes used a potent pressing defense to overwhelm Villanova 97-74 Sunday night to win the Maui Classic.

Iowa trailed 38-37 at halftime, but Jeff Moe, who scored all 13 of his points in the second half, had a 3-point basket and two free throws as the Hawkeyes outscored the Wildcats 7-0 in the first 50 seconds of the second half and never trailed again.

In other games Sunday involving schools ranked in The Associated Press' Top Twenty, Illinois took third place in the Maui Classic by upsetting No. 7 Kansas 81-75, and No. 9 Michigan edged Alabama-Birmingham 78-76 to take third place in the Great Alaska Shootout.

Reserve center Ed Horton had 17 points, Al Lorenzen added 11 and Bill Jones 10 for Iowa, 3-0, which had its entire roster named as most valuable player of the tournament.

The Hawkeyes fought back from a 10-point deficit in the first half to win their fourth regular-season tournament under Davis, who took over as coach last season.

"I really didn't think we could go 3-0 in this tournament," Davis said. "There was too much good competition for me to feel that way. I was hoping for 1-2 at the worst and maybe 2-1, but I didn't think 3-0."

"For this early in the year to play of this caliber with that intensity is really unusual. It usually takes you into January, into the conference season, to get this kind of intensity."

Iowa played the second half without starting forward Roy Marble, who caught an elbow in the face in the final minute of the first half. He scored nine points.

Kenny Wilson led Villanova, 2-1, with 20 points, Doug West added 17 and Mark Plansky had 13.

"I think Iowa is a great basketball team," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said. "They really played well. I thought in the first half we played a really good game. We just couldn't get the ball to drop down the stretch."

In the third-place game, Ken Battle, a 6-foot-6 transfer from Northern Illinois, scored 21 points, including two key second-half baskets, as Illinois handed Kansas its second straight loss.

Battle's effort against Kansas came after he scored 28 points in a 78-76 loss to Villanova Saturday.

"Battle had an outstanding game," Henson said. "They shut him down a little in the second half, but he's really doing an outstanding job."

"His offense is tremendous and his defense is getting better. Once his

Fenner's Charges Reportedly Dropped

By Keith Harriston

(c) 1987, The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — Prince George's County, Md., prosecutors plan to dismiss murder and attempted murder charges Monday against Derrick Fenner, the former University of North Carolina football star who police had said was involved in a shootout over drug turf, sources familiar with the case said.

Prosecutors, who have been considering new information from county homicide investigators since last month, decided last week to dismiss the charges against Fenner and to make the announcement this morning at a previously scheduled pretrial hearing, according to two courthouse sources familiar with the meeting last Wednesday afternoon.

The latest action in the case is another twist this year in the life of Fenner, who saw a promising collegiate football career grind to halt with his arrest in April on charges of possessing cocaine and transporting a handgun and then his arrest in June on charges of first-degree murder, attempted murder and using a handgun in the commission of a felony.

A year earlier, Fenner, a 1985 graduate of Oxon Hill High School in Maryland who drove a $24,000 BMW and wore what he said was a $1,500 gold necklace, had broken an Atlantic Coast Conference record when he rushed for 328 yards against the University of Virginia. The running back also had impressive games in 1986 against The Citadel, 216 yards, and the University of Maryland, 173 yards.

Fenner, 20, was indicted in June on charges of slaying Marcellus Leach, 19, who died of a gunshot wound to the head, and of attempting to kill a 17-year-old youth during a shooting rampage at the Kirkwood Apartments at 2717 Nicholson St., Hyattsville. Five others have been charged in the May 23 shootings.

The information presented to the grand jury that indicted Fenner was gathered by detectives with the Hyattsville police force, which initially led the investigation.

But county homicide detectives, who began investigating the shootings because other men charged with Fenner were suspects in county slayings, told prosecutors several weeks ago that they had determined that Fenner was not at the apartment complex when the shootings occurred. One county police source said that detectives have witnesses who can place Fenner elsewhere when the shooting spree started in a courtyard at the complex.

Wooten, Langley Lead Rose Hopes

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

(Editor's Note: This begins a series previewing the five men's high school basketball teams in the county.)

Rose is going to rely on returning starters Erroll Wooten and Keyford Langley early on, but Rampant coach Jim Brewington said some younger players are going to have to develop in order for a return to the state playoffs.

Last year, Rose went 19-6 and won the Big East thanks in large part to the senior trio of Melvin Jenkins, Terry Warren and David Lee.

Wooten, a 6-4 forward, and Langley, a 5-9 guard, are back from that team, but the rest of the team is relatively young. That, coupled with what shapes up to be a very tough conference race, makes a repeat title season a tough order.

|------------------|---|
| J.H. Rose | |
| □ Conference: | Big East 4-A |
| □ 1987 Record: | 19-6 |
| □ Coach: | Jim Brewington |
| □ Key Losses: | C Melvin Jenkins, F Terry Warren, G David Lee |
| □ Top Returnees: | F Erroll Wooten, G Keyford Langley, G Brian Wille, F Kevin Cobb, C Andy Johnson |
| □ Key newcomers: | C Carlester Crumpler, G James Peele, C Paul Powers |

"We figure we'll be playing about eight people," Brewington said. "We're hoping that we'll have some people come through for us like Brian Wille (5-9, Sr.), Erroll and Keyford. Those two (Wille and Langley) are the two guards and they know what is going on."

Up front is where the question marks are. But Brewington has a few options here. He is looking to 6-5 junior Carlester Crumpler to fill the void in the middle, with support from 6-4 senior Andy Johnson and 6-7 junior Paul Powers.

"The biggest thing is we have to establish some rebounding with Carlester and (6-2 senior forward) Kevin Cobb," Brewington said. "The way it's looking, we're depending on Carlester Crumpler."

"It (success) will depend on our big men and our rebounding. We feel we have as good a shooting team as anybody. Carlester Crumpler has the ability. He'll probably be one of the premier players in the conference. We expect a lot of him. Carlester is a growing kid. He had flashes during the summer. He just rolled along. He got more aggressive."

In Wooten though, the Rampants have a pure shooter and, along with Langley, a real weapon with the new three-point goal to be used in high schools this year.

Wooten averaged 14 points a game last season, while Langley chipped in with an average of 9.0 per game.

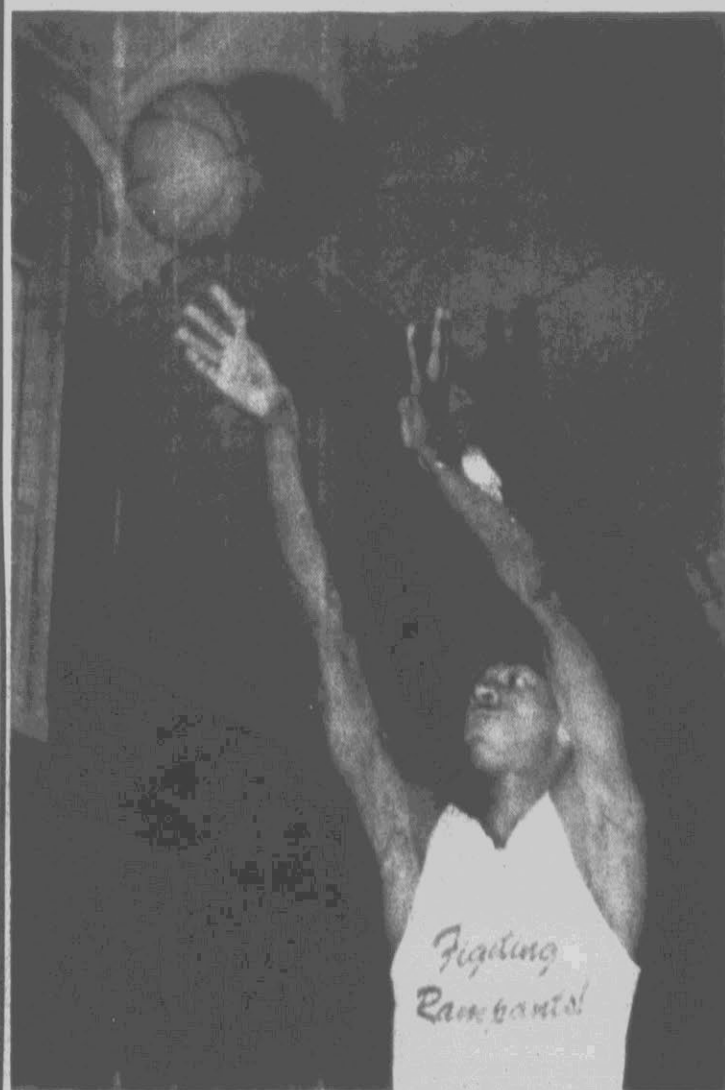

"Erroll is being highly recruited and Keyford also had a real good recruiting year," Brewington said. "(But) the biggest thing is, I don't want them to think they have to do it all themselves. That would kind of hurt us."

Another player who could figure in for Rose is 5-7 junior guard James Peele, who will play when the Rampants go to a three-guard lineup.

"We'll be running a little more (this year)," Brewington said. "We'll have a little more quickness at the guards. But it depends on what type of guards the other team has. We're hoping to put pressure on them."

Rose got a late start this year, due to the state high school football playoffs. Four players, Johnny Ebron, Jamie Brewington, Crumpler, Billy Carr, just joined the team last week.

The biggest challenges for Rose this year will come from Northeastern and Wilson Fike.

Moore pinned Robinson of Lejeune in the first round, then lost to Hollis of Dixon, 8-3. He pinned Joey Robertson of Washington before losing to Logan of Charlotte Latin, 12-2, to finish fourth.

Gardner beat Luhm of Lane, 7-4, then beat Prince of Cary, 5-3. He lost to Chatman of New Bern, 9-7, in the finals, finishing second.

Daniels beat New Bern's Chagaris, 13-9, but then lost to Cary's Boyer, 14-4. He pinned Owen of Lane, then decisioned James Boyd of Washington, on criteria after they tied 4-4 in overtime, taking third place. Boyd finished fourth.

Hamby lost to New Bern's Latham, 10-7, then beat Lyons of Cary, 12-6. He beat Wallace of Lane, 8-5, before losing to Latham again, 9-4, to finish fourth.

Hole In One Keys Trevino's Day

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — The reward was great, Lee Trevino said, "but I paid the price."

He came into the area more than a week early to practice for the 1987 edition of golf's Skins Game.

"I practiced daylight to dark — play nine holes, play 18 holes, hit 300-400 balls a day, putting, practice from the sand," Trevino said.

He didn't mention practicing 167-yard 6-iron shots. Maybe he figured it wasn't necessary.

But it was that shot that found the cup for a hole-in-one on the 17th hole at PGA West on Sunday, and was the centerpiece of his last-day sweep of all the money in the two-day, 18-hole, made-for-television Skins Game.

"It looked like a Rembrandt," Trevino said of the shot he lofted into a bright, blue desert sky on Sunday.

"I knew it would be close when I hit it, but never in my wildest dreams did I think it would go in."

And then the chattering 47-year-old Trevino launched into a story. "I've been playing golf for 35 years and that's only the second hole-in-one I've ever had," Trevino said. "And I didn't get to see the other one."

"It was at Pleasant Valley on the first hole. I was in the second group off the tee and I'd been out all night and I couldn't focus very good."

This time he saw it, and it stunned him. "I think that's the first time in my life I've heard him shut up," Jack Nicklaus said. "He was speechless. For once, he was at a loss for words."

That didn't last long. Trevino began bounding about the 17th tee, hopping into the air, waving his cap.

He trotted to his caddy, rotund Herman Mitchell, and hugged him. "How 'bout my man!" howled Mitchell. "He did it. He did it."

"God, can you believe it?" Arnold Palmer asked.

The ace, thanks to carryovers from four previous holes, was worth $175,000. Trevino also scored birdies on the 10th, 12th and 18th holes, collecting $310,000 and two automobiles for two days of play.

Nicklaus and Fuzzy Zoeller each won $70,000 on Saturday. But they, along with Arnold Palmer, were blanked by Trevino's sweep on Sunday.

Warner, Seahawks Set For Raiders

SEATTLE (AP) — Curt Warner, despite being hobbled by a painful toe injury, shoots for his third straight 100-yard rushing game tonight when the Seattle Seahawks play the slump-ridden Los Angeles Raiders.

The Seahawks, who can tie San Diego for the AFC West lead, are looking for their third straight victory and fifth in six games since the end of the 24-day NFL players' strike.

Seattle, 7-8, is favored by nine points to pin an eighth consecutive loss on the Raiders, 3-7, in the 6 p.m. PST game in the Kingdome. Seattle beat the Raiders 35-13 last month.

Despite a painful turf toe, Warner played a key role in Seattle's 24-13 victory over Green Bay and last week's 34-3 defeat of San Diego.

Against the Packers, Warner carried 25 times for 123 yards, and he had 23 carries for 119 yards against the Chargers.

San Diego, which had a two-game lead in the division two weeks ago, dropped its second straight on Sunday, 31-17 to Denver. The Broncos moved within a half-game of the division lead at 7-3-1.

The big toe on Warner's right foot was badly sprained in Seattle's 28-17 victory over Minnesota in the Kingdome on Nov. 1. The toe was so swollen that he had to use crutches to walk after a 30-14 Seattle loss to the New York Jets at the Meadowlands Nov. 9.

Warner will wear a plastic protective sleeve on the toe tonight. The injury has kept him from practicing this week.

"It always helps when you go out and practice because you can see things a lot better," Warner said. "Sometimes you have to wing it. That's what I've had to do."

Warner says the injury doesn't really hamper him during a game. "It's the next day that's not so much fun."

After the 10th week of NFL play, Warner ranked second in the AFC in rushing with 654 yards in 147 carries. His three 100-yard rushing games this season give him 19 in his five-year career. The Seahawks are 16-3 in those games.

Warner will be matched against the Raiders' running back tandem of rookie Bo Jackson and Marcus Allen, each a Heisman Trophy winner. Jackson, brought along slowly since he ended his baseball season with the Kansas City Royals, excited his teammates when he ran over Denver's Mike Harden on a 35-yard scoring run last week. The Raiders lost that game 23-17.

"For the first time in a long time, I got tingles down my back when I saw that run," Raiders defensive end Howie Long said. "It's exciting. It pumps a whole team up."

"He's God's gift to halfbacks," Raiders cornerback Lester Hayes said. "He's a godsend. He's unreal. He was destined to be a football player. He's a step beyond stupendous."

"The future may be now but we have something to look forward to," Allen, a six-year NFL veteran, said. "We have the makings of something very good here."

"Every week Bo gets a little better," Raiders Coach Tom Flores said. "With him and Marcus in the same backfield, we're obviously trying to utilize both of their talents. I think it's a pretty good combination. Obviously, you'd like to have Bo for the whole year, meaning the off-season and mini-camp and training camp, so you can refine the combination of the two."

Missimo's Goal Lifts UNC By Loyola

BALTIMORE (AP) — Derek Missimo's 12th goal of the season with just 2:33 remaining in the first half lifted North Carolina to a 1-0 victory over Loyola College of Maryland in the quarterfinals of the NCAA Division I soccer tournament Sunday.

With the victory, North Carolina raised its record to 20-4-0. Loyola saw its 17-game unbeaten streak snapped as it fell to 17-4-2 for the season.

Loyola lost despite outshooting the Tar Heels 10-8 in the foul-plagued game.

Kersey's Defense Lifting Portland

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Portland Coach Mike Schuler says Jerome Kersey has given the team the defensive effort needed to win five straight home games in the absence of top scorer Kiki Vandeweghe.

Kersey scored a season-high 27 points and Clyde Drexler and Steve Johnson scored 28 each as Portland beat New Jersey 125-104 in Sunday's only NBA game.

The loss was the fifth in a row for the Nets, all on the road.

Without Vandeweghe, who has missed the last five games with a lower back strain, Kersey, Drexler and Johnson have led Portland to five straight home victories, four over teams with losing records.

"The thing we've done on this home stand is play terrific defense," Schuler said. "Jerome allows us to do a lot of things defensively. He makes us more alert and active."

Kersey, who had 21 points in the first half, scored 12 in the last 6½ minutes of the second quarter as Portland outscored the Nets 27-12 to turn a 42-34 deficit into a 61-54 halftime lead.

"I think Kersey hurt us more than anyone else in the first half," New Jersey Coach Dave Wohl said. "We slowed Drexler in that half, but we didn't honor Kersey as much as we should."

Drexler then scored 18 points in the third period, including 10 of Portland's first 11 of the second half, as the Blazers extended their margin to 72-58 with 6:49 left.

"In the second half we did a pretty good job with Kersey and Johnson, but Drexler just had a field day," Wohl said. "Drexler has the ability to be a tremendous defensive player as well as an offensive threat. He read our patterns and messed up our patterns and messed up a lot of our offense. He's a great player in this league."

The Nets closed the gap to 91-80 at the end of the third quarter, but Portland scored the first 10 points of the fourth period and New Jersey didn't get close again.

The Nets were led by rookie forward Dallas Comegys with 19 points. Comegys, who was making his first NBA start, scored 15 in the first half.

Buck Williams, New Jersey's leading scorer with 18.7 per game, was held to 11 points before fouling out.

Giants' Shortcomings Continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Their championship reign ended in the rain at RFK Stadium on Sunday, a few yards away and a few seconds short, which is about how the New York Giants' entire post-Super Bowl season has gone.

The Giants weren't officially eliminated when they lost a 23-19 decision to Washington, but that's only because of the vagaries of the NFL tie-breaking system. When you consider that the Giants would have to win the rest of their games while Minnesota loses its last four by a combined 65 points, you see how remote the possibility really is.

The Giants have even less of a chance of all that happening than Washington appeared to have in Sunday's game after falling behind 16-0 at the half and trailing 19-9 in the fourth quarter. Yet Washington pulled it off in a manner typical of this Giants season.

The end for New York came with Tony Galbreath gaining 14 yards on a last-gasp pass play. The problem was that the Giants needed 16 yards for the winning touchdown.

Phil Simms had taken New York from its own 20 with 56 seconds to play and no timeouts left to the Washington 14 on two passes to Galbreath and another to Lionel Manuel.

The sequence used 52 of the 56 seconds Simms had on the clock. With one play left in the game, the call was to the end zone for either Stephen Baker or Manuel. The pass went instead to Galbreath in the middle of the field.

"The problem was I was undecided," Simms said. "I made the decision quickly. I moved up. I didn't know who was behind me. I looked at the defense. I didn't know what to do."

I saw Tony. I made the decision to dump it. I thought it had a chance."

Simms, remember, is the guy who made a fourth-and-17 pass for a first down to set up a win at Minnesota last season. No wonder he thought he could pull off this little miracle.

"We've done it many times," the quarterback said. "We just didn't get it done. It was close."

A year ago, when the Giants had a little magic working for them, Galbreath would have danced his way around the tacklers into the end zone. Last year, the play goes for 20. That was then. This is now.

defense improves, he'll be a great all-around player. He's one of the hardest workers I've ever coached. He doesn't know what it is to slow down."

Battle's clutch shooting and Illinois' balance offset a 28-point performance by Kansas forward Danny Manning. The Jayhawks had lost to Iowa 100-81 on Saturday.

"We're going to be real good," Kansas Coach Brown said. "Hopefully our kids will understand that this is a learning experience and benefit from it."

Nebraska took seventh place at Maui, edging Chaminade 76-75.

Great Alaska Shootout
In Anchorage, Gary Grant, the only senior starter for Michigan, sank three free throws in the final 35 seconds to keep Alabama-Birmingham at bay.

"Gary Grant took over and did what he has to do, lead us," Michigan Coach Bill Frieder said. "He was in control down the stretch."

The Wolverines seemed to be in control of the game early, but Alabama-Birmingham had a 16-2 run that gave the Blazers a 62-58 lead with 6:58 left. Frieder attributed the Blazers' run to the loss of sophomore guard Rumeal Robinson.

"He's gone to be checked out, and it's a possible fracture," Frieder said of Robinson's foot injury. "Without him, all of a sudden there was no depth on a team I hear has so much depth."

Glen Rice finished with 27 points for Michigan, seven more than Grant, who had 17 points in the second half.

In consolation games on Sunday, host Atlanta-Anchorage won the tournament's fourth-place game 78-77 over Miami, Fla., and Southwest Texas took seventh with a 88-84 victory over Duquesne.

Other Tournaments
Michael Ansley scored 30 points and Alvin Lee had 24, including a game-winning three-point shot at the buzzer, as Alabama defeated Central Michigan 83-80 to win the round-robin Hawaii Pacific Thanksgiving Tournament.

Alabama completed the three-day tournament with a 3-0 record.

Shelton Jones scored 25 points and grabbed 16 rebounds to lead St. John's to an 88-85 victory over Loyola Marymount in the final of the Lapchick Memorial tournament in New York. St. John's, 2-0, has won all 13 Lapchick tournaments.

In San Juan, Puerto Rico, Bill Stinnie scored 22 of his 24 points in the second half as Virginia Commonwealth won the first San Juan Shootout with a 79-67 victory over the Puerto Rico national team. Arkansas State defeated Lamar 74-65 for third place; Morgan State crushed Cayey 100-58 for fifth, and American College of Puerto Rico downed Sagrado Corazon 109-93 for seventh place.

Saturday

In games involving Top Ten teams, No. 1 Syracuse beat Alabama-Birmingham 79-63 and No. 17 Arizona beat Michigan 79-64 in the semifinals of the Great Alaska Shootout; No. 3 North Carolina beat Richmond 87-76 to win the Central Fidelity Classic; No. 4 Pittsburgh downed Robert Morris 96-70; No. 5 Kentucky defeated Hawaii 86-59 and No. 6 Indiana beat Miami of Ohio 90-65.

In games involving teams in the Second Ten, No. 14 Florida edged Seton Hall 70-68 to win the Big Apple NIT; No. 15 Duke beat Appalachian State 110-74; No. 16 Georgetown beat Hawaii-Loa 92-39; No. 19 Oklahoma defeated Texas A&M 104-80 and Pepperdine upset No. 20 DePaul in overtime, 84-76.

Sherman Douglas scored 24 points to lead Syracuse, which plays Arizona for the Alaska Shootout title tonight, over Alabama-Birmingham.

"I think we did a great job using our half-court trap and pressing them both man-to-man and zone," Douglas said. "In the first half, the flow was going to me. And when I get on a roll, it's kind of hard to stop."

Despite the victory, Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim was upset because the Orangemen were only 14 of 28 from the free throw line.

"We are not going to beat anybody from the free throw line," he said.

"We work at it every day, but that's something I have no control over. It's going to cost us, but we have no real control over it."

Jeff Lebo scored 21 of his 28 points from 3-point range in leading North Carolina to its third victory of the season. Richmond trailed by only six points with 13 minutes left, but North Carolina scored the next five points to break the game open.

Pittsburgh used an 18-2 run in the second half to break away from tenacious Robert Morris, which trailed by just three points at the half.

Robert Lock scored 18 points to lead Kentucky, which put visiting Hawaii away with a 17-0 run in the second half.

Dean Garrett scored 25 points and Rick Calloway added 19 as Indiana began defense of its NCAA championship.

Vernon Maxwell hit two free throws with six seconds left to give Florida the Big Apple NIT title over Seton Hall. Maxwell, who missed Florida's first two games because of disciplinary action, scored 27 points for the Gators.

"It was a chance for me to live up to my boast to the team," Maxwell said. "I told the guys to get us to Madison Square Garden without me and I would carry them to the Promised Land. That went through my mind as I went to the foul line, and I'm happy that I lived up to my boast."

Kevin Strickland scored 17 points to pace Duke over Appalachian State, which had 31 turnovers.

At Norman, Okla., Stacey King scored a career-high 33 points as the Sooners crushed Texas A&M.

Pepperdine's Tom Lewis scored five of his 26 points in overtime as the Waves upset DePaul. The Blue Demons played without point guard Rod Strickland, who was declared academically ineligible.

Lebo's Bombs Keyed UNC Win

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

Jeff Lebo tossed in seven three-point shots and had a total of 28 points as third-ranked North Carolina defeated Richmond 87-76 in the championship of the Central Fidelity Holiday Classic basketball tournament, but coach Dean Smith is not resting easy.

"Our defense was effective and, of course, Lebo made some 3-point shots," Smith said. "If we keep improving, I'll feel a lot better about this team."

After trailing 43-30 at intermission Saturday night, Richmond cut the North Carolina lead to six points twice in the second half, but North Carolina went on a 5-0 spurt midway through the half and Richmond got no closer than 10 points in the final eight minutes.

"It's pretty obvious that we were overwhelmed on the boards," said Richmond coach Dick Tarrant. "We played hard, but we just couldn't rebound with these people."

North Carolina, which had to struggle past Southern Cal in the first round, outrebounded Richmond 43-22.

J.R. Reid finished with 15 points. Scott Williams added 11, and Kevin Madden and Ranzino Smith scored 10 points apiece.

In other ACC action, No. 15 Duke trounced Appalachian State 110-74, Maryland defeated Mississippi 77-69 and Rhode Island edged Virginia 76-73.

The Blue Devils used man-to-man pressure defense in their season opener to dominate the Mountaineers and force 31 turnovers.

"We're a more talented team," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "We should have won and did. But I thought we played hard, and I thought we played hard for 40 minutes."

Kevin Strickland led the attack with 17 points, while John Smith added 15, Phil Henderson 13, Danny Ferry and Robert Brickey 12 each, and Greg Koubek 11.

"I think we played pretty intense and it was nice to see it with a big lead," Krzyzewski said. "I think there is a tendency to let up. Being human, we all do that..."

"They scored enough points off their defense in the first half to give them the lead, let alone what they did score when they were able to set up," Appalachian State coach Tom Apke said.

Kemp Phillips led the Mountaineers with 13 points.

Derrick Lewis scored 27 points and freshman Brian Williams added 20 as the Terrapins, 2-0, won the MCI Harbor Classic at Baltimore.

"In order to build anything, you have to build a foundation," Maryland coach Bob Wade said. "These young men built a fine foundation the past few days. This (the tournament championship) is a tremendous foundation we can build from. It's great for the program, great for Baltimore."

Tom Garrick hit a pair of free throws with 16 seconds left, and Rhode Island held off a Virginia rally to defeat the Cavaliers in the title game of the Investors Classic tournament.

Following Garrick's free throws, Virginia's Richard Morgan and John Crotty each missed 3-point shots in the final six seconds.

Reserve Kenny Green led Rhode Island, 2-0, with 21 points while Garrick and Carlton Owens each added 19.

Virginia, 1-1, lost the title game for the first time in the 11-year history of the tournament. John Johnson led the Cavaliers with 19 points. Bill Batts and Richard Morgan each added 16 points for the Cavaliers.

Hurricanes' Romp Deeper Than Score

MIAMI (AP) — Miami beat Notre Dame 58-7 again Saturday.

The scoreboard had it only 24-0. But linebacker George Mira Jr. said Miami "dominated them more than two years ago because they scored a touchdown on us then" and free safety Bennie Blades said the Hurricanes "intimidated" Notre Dame's explosive Tim Brown.

In addition to Melvin Bratton's two short touchdown runs, Leonard Conley's 6-yard run and Greg Cox's 30-yard field goal, Miami was intercepted at the Notre Dame 33 and fumbled the ball away at the Irish 1-13 and 34-yard lines.

By contrast, Notre Dame only advanced inside the Miami 30 once, reaching the 26 midway through the second quarter before Blades intercepted a pass at the 8 and returned it to the 29.

"If we hadn't had so many turnovers, they'd have accused me of running it up again," said Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson, who was criticized for that lopsided 58-7 score two years ago in Gerry Faust's final game as Notre Dame coach.

The Irish were out for revenge. But instead of an eye for an eye, they came away with two black eyes.

The second-ranked Hurricanes outgained Notre Dame 204 yards to 82 on the ground and 213-87 in the air. They also put a Miami vise on Brown, who came into the game ranked fourth nationally with 174.8 all-purpose yards a game. But he was involved in only 10 plays for 95 yards, his second lowest output of the season.

He returned three kickoffs for 42 yards, three punts for 14 yards — including a fair catch — caught three passes for 37 yards — he also dropped three — and rushed once for two yards.

"I guess he's worthy of All-American status, but he definitely is not worthy of a Heisman Trophy," Blades said of the favorite in the Heisman race.

Then he reconsidered. "We told him in a nutshell that he wasn't worthy of being an All-American," Blades said.

Brown was philosophical about his Heisman chances.

"If one bad game a year hurts my chances for the Heisman, so be it," he said. "There's nothing I can do about it. How can you explain dropped passes? There's nothing you can say about it."

Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz said Miami "double-covered him. They did an awful fine job."

Although Notre Dame linebacker Wes Pritchett said that "overall it was a pretty class game," Brown was upset with some of the things Miami's players told him.

"If they can taunt you and talk about your mama ... well, that's the way they play," he said. "They play with no class, definitely no class. They were the worst, a million times worse than anyone else. But that's the way they feel the game should be played."

It was the 31st consecutive regular-season victory for Miami, 10-0, which finishes against eighth-ranked South Carolina next week and then meets No. 1 Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl on New Year's night.

Cotton Bowl-bound Notre Dame suffered its second straight setback and finished the regular season 8-3.

Miami had beaten six teams with losing records since opening the season against nationally ranked Florida, Arkansas and Florida State. "People were still doubting us, talking about us being pretenders instead of contenders for the championship," said Bratton, who scored on a 2-yard run in the second quarter and a 1-yard plunge in the third period. "I think we proved to everyone that we're for real."

"Before the game, we were asked how we'd stop Notre Dame's potent running game (ranked 10th nationally and averaging 330.5 yards in the last six games)," Johnson said. "I think the defense answered that. They also asked how were going to shut down Tim Brown and their kick-return game. I believe the defense answered that, too."

NFL Playoff Scene Getting Clearer

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

There are four weeks left in the NFL season, but the suspense about who will be in the playoffs is just about over. That is assuming, of course, that someone actually wins the AFC East.

Or, as Chicago Coach Mike Ditka said Sunday after his Bears beat Green Bay 23-10: "We're jockeying for position. We're not where we want to be, but we're getting close."

The Bears, 9-2 and two games ahead of the Minnesota Vikings in the AFC Central, will be one of the playoff teams.

The other NFC representatives will almost certainly be the Washington Redskins, San Francisco 49ers, the Vikings and the New Orleans Saints. A 20-16 victory at Pittsburgh on Sunday guaranteed the Saints the first winning season in their 21-year history.

The AFC is a little more complicated but three of the playoff teams — the Seattle Seahawks, San Diego Chargers and Denver Broncos — are likely to come from the West.

Seattle can move into a first-place tie with San Diego at 8-3 with a victory tonight over the Los Angeles Raiders. Denver, 7-3-1, is a half-game behind following its 31-17 victory over the Chargers on Sunday. Denver has three of its remaining four games at home, with its only road game a Dec. 13 showdown at Seattle that could decide the division title.

"We have a long way to go, but I like our chances," Coach Dan Reeves said after the Broncos' third straight victory got them out of what could have been a deep hole in the division.

Cleveland, 7-4, should win the AFC Central despite its 38-24 loss at San Francisco Sunday night, since Houston and Pittsburgh, both a game behind, has the manpower to compete with the Browns. Moreover, the Browns' remaining games are hardly overwhelming — Indianapolis and Cincinnati at home, followed by the Raiders and Pittsburgh on the road.

Then there's the East, where the Jets, Colts and Bills are 6-5 and the Patriots and Dolphins 5-6. The Colts, with a 4-2 division record and two victories over the Jets, may have the tiebreaker edge. But the loss of quarterback Gary Hogeboom with a shoulder separation on Sunday could hurt.

The real edge may belong to Buffalo, which despite playing three of its last four games on the road has been playing better than anyone. With Cornelius Bennett becoming a factor on defense, the Bills shut out Miami 27-0 on Sunday, the Dolphins' first shutout in five years. It ended Dan Marino's streak of 30 consecutive games with a touchdown pass.

The East was locked up at 4-4 and 5-5 and it is conceivable that each of the five teams could be 6-6 next week. In any event, there are likely no wild-cards there.

As Ditka said, the NFC is simply jockeying for position. The Super Bowl champion Giants were all but eliminated on Sunday after their third come-from-ahead loss of the season, a 23-19 defeat by Washington. No team is within two games of the Vikings, who would be the last wild-card team. If anyone has an outside shot, it might be St. Louis, 5-6, particularly with quarterback Neal Lomax playing back to his 1984 form.

Minnesota, 7-4 overall and 7-1 in non-strike games, actually has a shot at the Central division title.

The Vikings, who beat Dallas 44-38 on Thanksgiving, could cut the deficit to one game by beating the Bears at home next Sunday night. The Vikings then close with Green Bay, Detroit and Washington, the latter probably having wrapped up the NFC East by then.

The Bears, on the other hand, must play at San Francisco and then visit third in a row to go 4-7. Tampa Bay, meanwhile, lost its fourth straight to fall to 5-6.

Everett, a second-year pro, completed 14 of 19 passes for 208 yards, and White rushed for 137 yards. His scoring passes were to Henry Ellard for 19 yards and Ron Brown for 39 yards.

Cardinals 34, Falcons 21

Neil Lomax passed for 369 yards and two touchdowns for St. Louis, which scored on three of its first four possessions, building a 21-7 lead.

Earl Ferrell also scored twice on 1-yard runs, and the St. Louis defense set up two touchdowns and a field goal by forcing turnovers. The Falcons have lost six in a row to go 2-9. St. Louis is 5-6.

"It's a win on the road and that's very important," said St. Louis Coach Gene Stallings. "We've won two in a row and two on the road. That shows progress for us."

The Cardinals defeated Philadelphia on the road last Sunday 31-19.

"We're starting to gain a little confidence in ourselves," said Stallings. "It gives us a lift having won two straight for the first time this season. This puts us in the hunt."

He was referring to the playoffs as a wild card team, something that Lomax did not want to talk about yet. "Talk to me when we're 7-6, then I might have something to say. Right now we're still considered a middle team and I really don't want to talk playoffs," he said.

But linebacker E.J. Junior was another Cardinal who wanted to talk playoffs.

"We're still in the hunt for the playoffs with a victory despite what a lot of people might say. We're on a roll now," he said.

Houston AD Is Set For Punitive Action

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Athletic Director Rudy Davalos said forfeiting a football victory is only the first step in his handling an eligibility case involving Cougars safety Randy Thornton.

After a review of Thornton's class records, Davalos said Sunday that the Cougars would forfeit a 37-7 victory over Temple because Thornton was scholastically ineligible when he played in the Nov. 14 game.

Davalos said two courses were added to Thornton's class schedule on Nov. 12 to bring him up to the Southwest Conference and NCAA minimum of 12 semester hours.

Davalos said it was obvious to him that someone in the athletic department added the courses to Thornton's record, and that he planned disciplinary action.

"I'm making a very strong statement to the university and to my own people that I'm not going to tolerate this, and if we have to forfeit victories to do this, then we'll do that," Davalos said.

"There is going to be a real keen look at that operation; there's just going to be a real tough check-out system," he added. "We're going to have disciplinary action appropriate for that. I won't say who it is, but it's people in our department."

Thornton was a defensive standout in Houston's 60-40 victory over Texas. He returned an interception 17 yards for a touchdown and added five tackles.

That earned him a start against Temple, and he responded with six tackles and a 19-yard interception return for a touchdown.

After the Temple game, Thornton was dropped from another class, giving him only nine semester hours.

Scherstrom and Michelle Hotten — referred questions to Alexis D. Revis, a spokeswoman for State's Attorney Alex Williams. Revis said that pretrial motions in the Fenner case were set for 9 a.m. Monday before Circuit Judge Jacob Levin.

Fred R. Joseph, one of Fenner's attorneys who met with prosecutors last Wednesday, said he could neither confirm nor deny that charges against his client would be dismissed. Fenner, who has maintained his innocence throughout the murder investigation, could not be reached for comment.

Dismissal of the charges would not affect the drug and handgun charges brought after a county officer stopped Fenner in April and allegedly found 25 bags with traces of cocaine in his jacket and a handgun under in his car.

Fenner had been suspended from the university in fall 1986 for academic problems but was enrolled in summer school when he was charged in the shootings.

How Members Of Congress Voted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Nov. 20.

HOUSE
THE HATCH ACT — By a vote of 305 for and 112 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 3400) enabling federal civilian employees to run for office and engage in other partisan political activity on their own time and away from the office.

Federal employee unions supported the bill, while the Administration and Common Cause opposed it. The legislation repeals many of the Hatch Act's bans on partisan activity by civil servants while off duty. But it retains safeguards in the law that insulate federal employees against political interference and keep them from politicizing their work. "No longer should those who serve the federal government be denied the basic rights enjoyed by other Americans," said William Ford, D-Mich. Opponent Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said "we are opening up the door to some real scandals in the future."

Members voting yes supported the bill. Voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no were Howard Coble R-6, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10.

FOREIGN AID CUT — The House adopted, 235 for and 186 against, an amendment to lower fiscal 1988 Military Assistance Program spending from $1.03 billion to $950 billion.

This cut of about 8 percent freezes MAP spending at the 1987 level. The vote occurred during debate on the 1988-89 foreign aid authorization bill (HR 3100), which awaited final action.

The MAP provides grants that about 40 countries use to acquire pentagon-approved military equipment on American markets. It is one of the fastest growing federal programs, its cost having increased eightfold this decade.

Amendment sponsor Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., cited Haiti and Zaire as examples of MAP recipients that do not need this military aid.

Opponent Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said now is not the time to cut military aid to Middle Eastern and Central American allies.

Members voting yes wanted to cut the Military Assistance Program by 8 percent.

Voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, McMillan, Ballenger.

Voting no were Hefner and Clarke.

DEFENSE BILL — By a vote of 264 for and 158 against, the House approved the conference report on the fiscal 1988 defense authorization bill. The Senate followed suit (below) and President Reagan was expected to sign the measure.

The bill (HR 1748) authorizes a Pentagon budget of up to $296 billion, compared with President Reagan's request of $312 billion.

Disagreement centered on the bill's requirement that the Administration adhere to the unratified SALT II treaty and a narrow interpretation of the ABM treaty with the Soviets. Also disputed were provisions to continue a moratorium on space testing of anti-satellite (ASAT) weaponry, restrain development of the proposed SDI shield against incoming missiles and link resumed production of chemical weaponry to the pace of chemical arms control talks with the Soviets.

Supporter Robert Badham, R-Calif., said the measure "will maintain for at least one year the adequate defense of our country."

Opponent Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., complained that by limiting Administration negotiators the bill "gives up a number of chips to the Soviet Union in arms control..."

Members voting yes favored the bill. Voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

Voting no were Coble, McMillan and Ballenger.

Senate
MILITARY BUDGET — By a vote of 86 for and nine against, the Senate approved and sent to President Reagan the fiscal 1988 defense authorization bill (see preceding vote).

Supporter Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said the bill "fully preserves the prerogatives of Congress to control the power of the purse while also giving the president needed flexibility" in upcoming arms control negotiations with the Soviets.

Opponent Jess Helms, R-N.C., called the bill a victory for "the unilateral disarmament antidefense lobby in Congress..."

Senators voting yes supported the $296 billion defense budget for fiscal 1988.

Terry Sanford, D, did not vote. Helms voted no.

HOUSING BILL — The Senate failed, on a tally of 57 for and 43 against, to achieve the three-fifths majority needed to waive the Congressional Budget Act with respect to the 1987 Housing and Community Development Act.

This appeared to kill the sweeping legislation, which needed the waiver because its projected cost of $15 billion to $19 billion exceeded limits the House and Senate set earlier this year as part of the Congressional Budget Resolution.

In addition to keeping existing housing programs in place for two more years, the legislation created several new programs, some of which had open-ended price tags.

Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who supported the budget waiver, called the bill "fiscally responsible — even financially conservative."

Opponent Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., called it "incredibly ironic" that the Senate would debate a bill of uncertain cost at the same time the Washington budget summit was struggling to cut a minimum of $23 billion from 1988 expenditures.

Senators voting yes wanted to waive the budget act.

Sanford voted yes. Helms voted no.

Museum, Indians Feud Over Bones

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Indian leaders are trying to get the Smithsonian Institution to stop displaying the bones of their ancestors.

Museum officials say they are willing to remove bones that can be identified as having been stolen from graves or coming from people with living descendants, but they would like to keep others for study.

The Smithsonian has about 34,000 skeletal specimens, of which some 14,500 are North American Indians. Many of them are prehistoric. Eskimos, Aleuts and Koniags account for 4,061 of the specimens; whites, 6,829; blacks, 1,744, and "all others," 7,033.

"It means something to the rest of the world to have us next to the elephants and the dinosaurs, things past and things not quite human," said Suzan Shown Harjo, executive director of the National Congress of American Indians.

Indian leaders have met several times with Smithsonian Secretary Robert McCormick Adams to discuss removing Indian remains from display at the National Museum of Natural History.

Some of the Indians' demands already have been met. For instance, a display of South American Indian skulls was removed last Feb. 23 after North American Indian leaders complained.

Smithsonian spokeswoman Madeleine Jacobs said the exhibit, which illustrated a population explosion, was out of date. She added: "Native American groups did find it offensive."

Ms. Jacobs also said the museum plans to return remains that are known to have been stolen from a cemetery of Blackfoot Indians in Montana in 1892.

Before returning the remains, casts will be made, a process that could take a year, Ms. Jacobs said. But replacing all bone displays with casts presents a problem of authenticity, and will not be done, Ms. Jacobs said.

"In most museums, the artifacts' being the real thing is very important," she said. "You would not want to see a replica of a Van Gogh painting; you want to see the real thing."

The Smithsonian would like to continue to use some remains to study the history of human health problems, demography, behavior and social and political history, Adams said.

Ms. Harjo, however, said the Indians have a legal right to the bones. "Nowhere in the Constitution does it guarantee the scientific right of anthropologists to study Indian remains," Ms. Harjo said. "It does talk about religious freedom, and the collection and display of human skeletal remains is violative of our religious freedom."

Service Denied

DURHAM (AP) — John N. Smith of Durham, who has served on the North Carolina Central University board of trustees since this summer, has learned that he'll be prohibited from serving on the board.

Smith, a manager at International Business Machines and a 1964 graduate of N.C. Central, is prohibited from serving by state statute 116-31 (H), which prohibits the spouse of a state employee from sitting on the board of trustees of a state university. Once the spouse accepts employment with the state, the spouse sitting on the board is automatically off the board, the statute says.

Parades Attract Throngs

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Three holiday parades, led by the bizarre antics of the Doo Dah anti-parade, lured more than 750,000 Southern Californians curbside for a weekend brush with celebrity and an infusion of Christmas cheer.

The Rubbish Queen, resplendent in black plastic and crowned with a trash can lid, reigned over Pasadena's 11th-annual Doo Dah Parade as 150,000 people gathered beneath sunny skies at noon Sunday.

Six hours later, more than 500,000 stargazers lined Hollywood and Sunset boulevards to watch grand marshal Jimmy Stewart and more than 80 other celebrities inch their way in the 56th-annual Hollywood Christmas Parade.

In Hollywood, "Bronx Zoo" star Ed Asner waved to the crowds from a giant sleigh float, along with actress Cindy Williams and singer Tony Orlando. "Growing Pains" star Kirk Cameron drew squeals from teen-age fans.

And actor Ricardo Montalban wished "Feliz Navidad" to an estimated 100,000 people at the East Los Angeles Christmas Parade, led by grand marshals Laura Martinez Herring, Miss USA 1985, and 1984 Olympic gold medalist Paul Gonzales.

In Pasadena's "Other Parade," conceived as a send-up of Rose Bowl pageantry, the Doo Dah queen rode in a trash bin carried by a court of five flies, people wearing black tights and white wings.

She presided over a delighted crowd who cheered and whooped at entries such as the Night of the Living Dead Dishonor Guard, which featured a man suspended on a meat hook and a wheelchair trauma victim spurting fake blood at the crowd.

The Doo Dah march also included a team of flashers dressed in trenchcoats and undershorts and an appearance from the "Nixon In '88" campaign committee, who carried signs reading "He's Tan, Rested and Ready."

There were even marching bands — a group of monks, for example, played the '60s hit "Louie Louie."

A generic Doo Dah entry was preceded by a banner labeled "Banner," followed by a group of people surrounded by signs reading "float," wearing shirts reading "shirt."

Lawsuit Spoils Purpose Of Stars' Charity Album

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "A Very Special Christmas" should represent the best of pop music and the holiday spirit, with stars such as Bruce Springsteen, Madonna, Whitney Houston, Sting, Run-D.M.C. and John Cougar Mellencamp singing to benefit the mentally handicapped.

But there's an ugly flip side to the charity project. Two aspiring record producers have filed lawsuits here and in Indianapolis seeking $10 million, claiming their ideas were stolen to produce the LP.

The album is likely to be a million-seller and is already on Billboard's Top 100 list. It is the latest in a series of charity records to hit the charts in recent years, including the Grammy winners "We Are the World" in 1985 for the hungry, and "That's What Friends Are For" in 1986 for AIDS research.

Profits will go to the Special Olympics, which promotes opportunities for the mentally handicapped through athletic events. The Washington-based organization is overseen by former Peace Corps chief R. Sargent Shriver and his wife, Eunice Kennedy Shriver.

"Everybody who did a song took a day off from the record business to make this," said A&M Records producer Jimmy Iovine, who donated five months to the project.

But Jon Lyons and M. Scott Sotebeer allege in lawsuits filed in August and October that they had their own creative and marketing ideas for an all-star Special Olympics album and they were stolen by A&M and Special Olympics officials.

The two further allege that Special Olympics officials sabotaged an agreement to produce their song, "A Time for Heroes," as the official theme of the Summer Special Olympics, held last August in South Bend, Ind.

Frank Blundo, an attorney for the pair, said a federal court suit in Los Angeles alleging unfair competition, unlawful interference and slander may be combined with a similar federal lawsuit filed in Indiana.

Defendants are still being served with a Los Angeles Superior Court lawsuit alleging breach of implied contract, breach of confidence and conspiracy. Among those named in the suits are A&M, Special Olympics Records, Sargent Shriver, Robert Shriver III, Milt Olin and Jimmy and Vicki Iovine.

Diana Baron, a spokeswoman for A&M said the record company had not been served and had no comment. Shriver would not discuss the lawsuit.

"A Time for Heroes," recorded by Meat Loaf, was released on Lyons' and Sotebeer's Orpheum Records label after receiving endorsement from the local Special Summer Olympics Committee in Indiana.

However, Special Olympics officials in Washington ordered the song replaced with "We're Looking Good" by composer John Williams, who conducts the Boston Pops.

"It's true they came to some agreement with the Indiana group, but they had to seek our approval, and they never did," said Ted Beitman of the Special Olympics International in Washington.

"I don't care if we are painted as the heavies. I think in the long term we will be vindicated," said Lyons, a former member of the music group Tommy Tutone.

Sotebeer denied allegations by Special Olympics officials that the two only wanted to make money. "There was no way we were going to get filthy rich off this," he said.

Lyons and Sotebeer concede they expected a career boost if they managed to pull together an all-star charity album. And they acknowledge support for such a project would have necessitated using 30 percent of Orpheum's revenues from "A Time for Heroes," had it succeeded.

The 15 artists appearing on "A Very Special Christmas" largely donated their talents and royalties on the drawing power of the highly respected Iovine, who has produced such hot groups as the Pretenders and U2.

His wife, attorney Vicki Iovine, has been a past volunteer for the California Special Olympics and is a longtime friend of Robert Shriver III, son of Sargent and Eunice Shriver.

Robert Shriver formed Special Olympics Productions as the label for "Special Christmas."

"It's got nothing to do with this album," Iovine said of the lawsuit. "It's got nothing to do with me."

Sargent Shriver said he learned of a proposal for a Christmas charity album when he met Iovine for the first time last year in California.

"The truth is, I hadn't heard about it until he told it to me, and it sounded like a fantastically original idea," Shriver recalled. "I don't know much about rock 'n' roll music, but I'm not so dumb that I couldn't recognize a good idea."

Lyons and Sotebeer said they decided in March 1986 to approach A&M Records with a proposal to distribute and market "A Time for Heroes." They also wanted A&M to enter a joint venture for the superstar album project.

A&M chief Herb Alpert was enthusiastic, and the two met with Alpert and A&M vice president of business development Milt Olin in November 1986, resulting in a request from Olin for a deal memorandum, according to their lawsuit.

Pieces Fall Into Place As Actress Lands Role

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Katharine Schlesinger says the romance of Jane Austen's novels were partly responsible for inspiring her to become an actress.

So it seems only natural that she's starring in "Northanger Abbey." The 90-minute television adaptation of Austen's 1799 novel airs Dec. 6 as part of the "Mobil Masterpiece Theatre" series on the Public Broadcasting Service.

"I love Jane Austen," Schlesinger said. "I love all those romantic classical books — 'Little Women' and the books that you read as a child."

A second factor, no doubt, helped push Schlesinger toward acting — her family tree. Her paternal uncle is John Schlessinger, the Academy Award-winning director of "Midnight Cowboy," "Marathon Man" and "Yanks."

Her maternal great-aunt is Dame Peggy Ashcroft, the Oscar-winning actress from "A Passage To India," who will be 80 on Dec. 22.

John Schlessinger's current film, "Madame Sousatzka," starring Shirley MacLaine in the title role of a piano teacher, is a family affair. It costars Dame Peggy and features the young Katharine Schlesinger in her big-screen debut as one of MacLaine's students.

"I suppose it is nepotism," Schlessinger said with a laugh during an interview backstage at London's Royalty Theatre, where she was starring in a stage production of Graham Greene's 1953 play "The Living Room."

She is adamant, however, that her family was nonetheless neutral about her decision to act.

The BBC production of "Northanger Abbey" catches the book's wry comedy and its satire of Gothic novel conventions. But Schlessinger's wide-eyed appeal as Catherine Morland, the ingenious heroine, is what caught the British press.

Herbert Kretzmer in The Daily Mail said the 24-year-old Schlessinger "plays the girl with a pleasing, persuasive simplicity, eyes rounded and mouth slightly agape ..."

Rosalie Horner in The Daily Mail heralded Schlessinger's "huge blue eyes," praising the show itself as "a masterpiece of filmmaking."

Schlesinger plays down her features, preferring to point out that the character itself makes the role.

"I loved Catherine Morland," Schlessinger said. "She's very direct and honest. She has no pretensions and admits to everything. She even admits to her own ignorance."

Catherine's naivete in the movie gives rise to both her problems and her charm.

On holiday at the spa in the town of Bath, the ringletted 17-year-old confuses herself with the overemotional heroines in the Gothic novels she adores.

When she finds that her beloved Henry Tilney, played by Peter Firth, has a haunted abbey in his family, Catherine seizes the opportunity to live out her own sensational Gothic tale — until she finds that the ways of life, and the printed word, do not always coincide.

"Catherine lets her imagination run away with her," explained Schlessinger. "She's very open. That's what makes Henry Tilney fall in love with her."

"Northanger Abbey" is from the same producers responsible for last season's "Silas Marner" on PBS. Maggie Wadey wrote the teleplay. Giles Foster directed.

A drama graduate of London's Arts Educational Schools, Schlessinger has made her name on the British stage. After stints in regional repertory playing Shakespeare's Juliet and other roles, she had a year's run on London's commercial West End in the undemanding comedy "The Secret Diary of Adrian Mole."

Next was five months as the despondent Irina in Anton Chekhov's demanding classic play, "Three Sisters." Now, in the somber "The Living Room," she shares above-the-title billing with established British actresses like Judy Campbell and Dulcie Gray.

"I like the sort of material that deals with emotions and relationships and all the odd subtleties of people," said Schlessinger, who followed up "Northanger Abbey" with the BBC production of "The Diary of Anne Frank" in which she played Anne.

Schlesinger has no firm projects lined up to follow "The Living Room," but her ambition remains strong.

"I want to do a mixture of everything," she said.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠72 ♥9542 ♦KJ93 ♣875
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 2 ♣ Pass 2 NT Pass
 3 ♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—What you want to do is tell partner you have a hand with excellent trump support and neither first nor second-round control of any side suit. There is a bid available that says just that—a jump in the suit you like. Bid five diamonds.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A6 ♥AKQJ52 ♦— AQ1073
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 2 ♥ Pass 2 NT Pass
 3 ♣ Pass 5 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—From the first question, you should know that partner has at least four good trumps and little else. Since you expect to be able to draw trumps in no more than three rounds, you will be able to discard all of dummy's spade losers on your good hearts and ruff your losing spade on the board. Bid seven clubs. (Switch the suits in Q. 1 and see how the hands match.)

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠7 ♥AKQ62 ♦A5 ♣KJ965
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Potentially, you have a very good hand—if you can find a fit. A jump to three clubs on a potential misfit could easily rob you of the room you need to probe for the best spot. Bid two clubs. Unless partner can act again, this hand is going nowhere.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KJ943 ♥A7 ♦AJ8542 ♣—
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ 2 ♣
 What do you bid now?
 A.—From a hand that might have been going nowhere, you should now be thinking in terms of a possible grand slam. The way to communicate your joy to partner is to cuebid the enemy suit. Bid three clubs.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠9762 ♥8763 ♦QJ93 ♣6
 Partner opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?
 A.—If you could be sure that partner has a four-card fit for one of your suits, and if you could be sure the bidding won't get beyond two in that suit, you might have been willing to act. But since there are no guarantees, any action by you courts disaster, whether you play four-card majors or five. Pass.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q10762 ♥9 ♦K8753 ♣84
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Dbl ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have tremendous offensive potential but little defense, and your fifth spade ruins partner's defensive potential. Make it as difficult as possible for the opponents to enter the auction. Jump to four spades.
