Scientists View Actual Creation Of Molecules

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists say they have used laser beams to watch chemical molecules the instant they were created, an unprecedented step in understanding how chemicals react to produce other substances.

"For the first time, we can actually observe the birth of new molecules," which contain atoms of chemical elements, said chemist Richard Bernstein of the University of California, Los Angeles.

"We can observe the formation of a new chemical bond as it's actually being formed on a time scale of one-millionth of a ten-millionth of a second," he added. "We've never been able to observe it before. It's a milestone."

Bernstein was part of a team headed by Ahmed Zewail, a professor of chemical physics at the California Institute of Technology. Their findings, published without fanfare last summer in the Journal of Chemical Physics, were announced Tuesday by Caltech.

"We and the universe around us are made of molecules, and it is of fundamental importance to understand how molecules get together to form new molecules," said Zewail. He compared the laser technique to a camera or microscope that can see exactly how chemicals react to form other chemicals.

"Observing the instant of a molecule's creation is for a chemist what observing the 'big bang' (that theoretically created the universe) would be for an astronomer," he added.

That comparison is "a little overblown," chemist James Kinsey said, but Zewail's method to observe a chemical at the instant it is formed "is a first, and a very important one."

"The essence of most of what goes on around us is really chemical reactions," said Kinsey, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, adding that Zewail's technique allows scientists to "understand the simplest chemical reactions at a level that goes beyond what anybody has done before."

Understanding chemical reactions in detail might make it possible someday to cheaply produce desired substances, such as medicines and industrial chemicals, or to perform laser "surgery" on human genes to correct inherited defects, Zewail said. But he and Kinsey said such efforts will be difficult, and chemists are now less optimistic about the prospects than they were a few years ago.

Sidney Benson, a University of Southern California chemist, said Zewail's method is comparable to using an ultraslow-motion camera so that "when people shake hands, you can see the fingers clench around each other in excruciatingly slow detail."

An article in the Aug. 27 issue of the British science journal Nature described Zewail's studies as "the first experiments to show molecules at the very moment they react."

The experiments involved two simple reactions: that of hydrogen and carbon dioxide to produce carbon monoxide and hydroxyl, and the breakdown of cyanogen iodide to produce iodine and cyanide.

In both cases, the gaseous chemicals were injected into a metal vacuum chamber that had a small quartz window. A single pulse of light from a laser beam was shot into the chamber to start the reactions.

A few millionths of one-billionth of a second later, another laser pulse was shot into the chamber, exciting

Shearson Will Buy Hutton

NEW YORK (AP) — Shearson Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc. has agreed to acquire E.F. Hutton Group Inc. in a deal worth about $1 billion, Dow Jones News Service said today.

The two securities firms reached a tentative understanding on the merger late Tuesday, and intend to sign formal papers this morning, the news service said, quoting unidentified sources close to the negotiations.

Shearson's offer consists of $25 per share in cash and $8 in preferred Shearson stock, which carries a market value of about $5 per share, the sources were quoted as saying.

Based on Hutton's 34.2 million common shares outstanding, such an offer would have an indicated value of about $1.03 billion.

Hutton shares dipped 25 cents to $27.37½ in early New York Stock Exchange trading. Shearson, which is about 60 percent owned by American Express Co., jumped 87½ cents to $15.37½.

Laurel Fry, a Hutton spokeswoman, said she could not comment on the report, although the firm said it planned an announcement later today. Shearson representatives declined comment.

In acquiring Hutton, Shearson emerged victorious over Dean Witter Financial Services Group, a unit of Sears, Roebuck & Co., which had also put in a bid for the firm, Dow Jones said.

The sources reportedly said the value of Dean Witter's offer was difficult to determine and that it had many contingencies.

Waiting in the wings were Merrill Lynch & Co. and Equitable Life

Quick Action Promised

Finance Panelists Say Deficit Cuts Should Be Higher

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic chairman and ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee today pledged swift action as the panel drafts tax increases to help achieve $76 billion in deficit cuts over two years.

The Reagan administration, meanwhile, is urging the committee to drop more than a third of the tax increases in its deficit-reduction package, including a boost in the payroll tax on 8 million workers.

But both Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the chairman, and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the ranking minority member, said they wished White House and congressional negotiators had requested bigger reductions in the federal budget's red ink.

"I think it's going to be easy for our part of the package," Packwood said of the committee's charge to find $23 billion in new tax revenues. "My disapointment is that the whole package when it's all done is so much less than we should have done."

Bentsen, interviewed along with Packwood on CBS-TV's "This Morning" program, expressed hope the committee would complete its work this week, but added, "We should have gone for much more."

If the administration successfully presses its request to substantially cut proposed tax increases, the committee might be forced to look at other taxes — including higher excise taxes on alcohol and tobaccco — to make up the difference. But there is no indication that will happen.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III arranged to meet with the committee today to spell out specific objections to the tax-increase bill that the panel approved in October. The deficit-reduction plan that the committee hopes to approve this week is likely to be built around the October bill.

That means it will not include any increase in income-tax rates.

President Reagan, meanwhile, said in a letter to House leaders Tuesday that he will have "no hesitation" in vetoing the huge spending bill expected to come to the floor for consideration Thursday, if the bill is not brought into line with the deficit-reduction pact.

In a letter to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill.,

Carolina Telephone Wants To Lower Service Charges

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Carolina Telephone customers will receive a 7.4 percent reduction in local service rates begining Jan. 1 if the proposed cut is approved by the N.C. Utilities Commission.

The rate reduction and a planned one-time refund in January are the result of the federal Tax Reform Act of 1986, which reduced the corporate income tax rate from 46 percent to 34 percent. The tax cut became effective July 1, Carolina Telephone spokesman Hubert Terry said this morning.

The refund — in the form of a credit on January phone bills — would range from $2.83 to $4.49 for single

Erma Carr's Nephew Hostage In Atlanta

Related story on A-9

The nephew of a Greenville woman is among those held hostage for the past 10 days by Cuban inmates in the U.S. Penitentiary at Atlanta.

Erma S. Carr of Greenville said today she spent the weekend in Winston-Salem with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lynell Staplefoote, parents of hostage Harvey Staplefoote. Mrs. Carr said the Staplefootes are keeping in daily communication with their daughter-in-law, Bessie Staplefoote, who gets reports from prison officials. She said neither the wife nor the parents have heard directly from Staplefoote since the siege began.

Staplefoote, one of 89 hostages as of this morning, has been a probation officer at the prison for about two years. About 25 years old, he has been in probation work since his graduation from Oakwood College in Tennessee several years ago. He and his wife have a 19-month-old daughter.

"The news this morning sounds a little encouraging," Mrs. Carr said. "It sounds like they might be close to reaching an agreement. Maybe the time is near when Harvey and the others will be released."

Mrs. Carr is a retired home economics teacher who taught at Rose High School. A Winston-Salem native, she has lived in Greenville since 1947. She is a past member of both the Greenville city school board and the interim Consolidated Pitt County-Greenville school board.

Martin Rejects Special Session

Earlier story on A-5

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin said today he would not call a special legislative session to consider repeal of a law that could cost the state control over hazardous waste regulation in North Carolina.

Martin said talks with Attorney General Lacy Thornburg and other officials had convinced him that "an escape clause" in a controversial new state law would prevent the law from leading the federal government to revoke North Carolina's regulatory powers.

"There's no urgency to have a special session of the Legislature ...," Martin said at a news conference at his state Capitol office. "It came down to a decision as to whether we could afford to wait (until the regular session begins in June) and I have concluded that we can afford to wait."

Martin said the Hazardous Treatment Commission should continue its search for a waste facility under the assumption that the law will not be overturned. That means much of the state will be excluded under criteria set by the new state law, he said.

"As long as we don't have a facility, we are not fulfilling our obligation to the environment of this state," Martin said.

Martin said Tuesday that Deborah Parker, chairman of the treatment commission, had told him it would be "desirable" if the Legislature could meet before its regular session in June to sweeten the pot for a community willing to host a hazardous waste treatment facility.

Last month Martin said he would consider calling a special session to urge lawmakers to repeal a law passed this year that could result in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency revoking the state's authority to regulate its hazardous waste program. Martin said such EPA action would embarrass the state and damage its efforts to recruit industry.

The law was an attempt to prevent GSX Chemical Services Inc. from building a treatment plant in Scotland County by creating water-dilution standards the company would have trouble meeting.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and Thornburg said last month that a special session was unnecessary because the law would automatically be repealed if EPA withdrew the state's authority to run the program.

West Germans To Boost Economy

BONN, West Germany (AP) — After months of pressure from the United States to expand its slow-growing economy, the government today approved infusing $13.1 billion into the economy to sharply increase domestic spending.

The move, marking a sharp shift in West German economic policy, is designed to boost the domestic demand for foreign goods, thus helping ease the huge U.S. trade deficit and bolster the falling dollar.

Economics Minister Martin Bangemann, in unveiling the plan, indicated it was a direct response to pressure from abroad. He told a news conference it was the "German contribution" to an international effort to boost economic growth.

Bangemann also said the plan was an attempt to ward off recessionary effects of last month's worldwide stock market crash and the dollar's resulting further fall.

Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg, speaking at the same news conference, emphasized the importance of international cooperation on monetary issues, indicating West Germany was easing objections to a meeting of the major industrialized nations.

In recent days, West German officials have said such a meeting would be useful only if all participants were prepared to reach agreement on concrete steps to boost economic growth.

The plan, drawn up by key ministers Tuesday, is likely to be followed Thursday by a one-half point cut from the current 3 percent in the West German central Bundesbank's important discount rate, government officials said.

A cut in the discount rate, the rate charged for loans to other banks, would help expand the domestic economy by making it cheaper for companies to obtain capital. The Bundesbank has twice reduced interest rates since the Oct. 19 worldwide stock market crash.

The economic expansion plan provides $9.1 billion a year at low interest rates over the next three years to communities and non-profit organizations, government officials said Tuesday.

Murphrey Named Mayor Pro Tempore In Farmville

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners Tuesday night unanimously elected Commissioner Oliver Murphrey as the town's mayor pro tempore.

The board agreed to keep the same date and place for commissioners' meetings — the first Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the muncipal courtroom. It was decided that the agenda of each monthly meeting should go to each commissioner by the Tuesday before the regular meeting and to the Farmville Enterprise by the previous Monday.

A resolution was enacted authorizing purchases from Speight's Service Center even though its owner, Marvin Speight, is a commissioner. The General Statutes allow purchases of not more than $15,000 per 12-month period from a town official if a special resolution is enacted. Speight was excused from voting on the resolution.

A public hearing was set for the Jan. 5 meeting to consider an amendment to the subdivision ordinance and zoning map. The subdivision amendment would allow the town to issue building permits on a street outside the city limits approved by the N.C. Department of Transportation as meeting construction standards, but not yet accepted due to habitation density.

The rezoning matter to be considered is the rezoning of the Quadrangle Internal Medicine property at the corner of Main and Grimmersburg streets from general business to central business district. The town has been informed that Quadrangle Internal Medicine has plans to convert its building into a mini-mall with some shops and a drug store, as well as expanding its medical practice area. More off-street parking appears needed for this to be done, the board is told by the planning board.

A resolution was adopted acknowledging that a street in the Westwood Subdivision planned but never developed is not a part of the town's street plan.

The purchase of electrical materials was approved. $2,641.65 worth was bought from WESCO; $4,112.92 from Eastern Electric.

Three appointments by Mayor Edna Earle Baker were approved. Frankie Moye and William T. Ellis were appointed to the Tree Board. Pete Anderson was reappointed to the Mid-East Commission.

Emma Spruill appeared asking the board to look into any way the town could help in the repair of the home of Lucy J. Ward. The front porch of this 88-year-old blind lady is falling in and something needs to be done, Mrs. Spruill told the commissioners.

Special guests at the meeting were members of the Webelos Den of Pack 25 of the Boys Scouts of America. Dr. Michael Dixon, a former Farmville town commissioner and the den's leader, accompanied them.

New Home Sales, Prices Declining

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new homes fell 1.5 percent in October, the second consecutive monthly decline, while prices dropped even more sharply, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that new single-family homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 657,000 units in October following a 2.8 percent decline in September sales.

The median price of a new home dropped 5.5 percent to $104,000. The median price of a home had been a record $110,000 in September. The decline pushed the median price to its lowest level since April, when it was $96,500. A year ago, the median home price was $96,700.

The average price of a new home fell even more sharply, dropping to $122,400, down 10.1 percent from September's $136,100.

The sales weakness came during a month when mortgage rates had been climbing sharply, jumping to a two-year high of 11.58 percent on Oct. 16.

Rates, however, have dropped by a full percentage point since that time as the Federal Reserve has aggressively pushed interest rates lower in the wake of the Oct. 19 stock market collapse.

The steep decline was concentrated in the Northeast and South.

Drive For More Contra Aid May Be Postponed As House Shapes Voting

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A GOP congressman who supports U.S. aid to the Contras said today that the House fight for more assistance may be postponed, while a Democratic opponent said backers of the aid are short on votes.

"We think it would be tragic if we abandon support for the Contras ...," said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill. "But tactically and politically, we're not sure that the House is the place to make this fight tomorrow."

Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., interviewed along with Hyde on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program, said "the only reason they're not asking for aid is that they haven't got the votes."

Coelho said it was wrong to increase assistance to the Nicaraguan rebels at a time when Central American cease-fire talks are under way.

"That's not the message that you need to be sending to the Contras or to the Nicaraguans right in the middle of peace negotiations," he said.

The Reagan administration has been looking for ways to continue aid to the U.S.-backed rebels, saying their existence as a fighting force is keeping pressure on Nicaragua's leftist government to make democratic reforms called for in a regional peace accord.

Backers of Contra aid had planned to seek an additional $30 million to support the rebels from Dec. 16, when the current aid allocation runs out, into next year, when the success or failure of the peace process will be determined.

The proposal was to have been offered as an amendment when a catch-all spending bill to keep the government running for the rest of the fiscal year comes to the House floor on Thursday.

National security adviser Lt. Gen. Colin Powell has been meeting with House members, pressing for a two-month aid package that includes not only the so-called "humanitarian" aid that has been flowing to the rebels since Oct. 1, but also supply planes, helicopters and military training.

But Powell's proposal stiffened the opposition from House Democrats, who regarded it as an ill-timed escalation at a moment of sensitivity in Nicaraguan cease-fire talks.

Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., a leader of anti-aid forces, said the administration has presented a proposal for new aircraft as a way to deliver food to the Contras in the field. But he contended that since weapons would likely also be delivered, the aircraft amounted to lethal aid.

"This is a major escalation," Bonior said, adding that the Contras have enough money coming in the "pipeline" to last well into February, even without new U.S. assistance.

The administration was hoping to revive a coalition of Republicans and conservative-to-moderate Democrats that has provided the margin of victory in past Contra aid fights, according to administration sources speaking on condition of anonymity.

Iran Tests Homemade Missile

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran claimed today that a new surface-to-surface missile had been tested successfully and that shipments of the Iranian-made weapon would soon be sent to forces fighting at the Iraqi front.

Prime Minister Hussein Musavi received a report on the missile tests Tuesday and the first shipments will be sent soon, said Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency in a report monitored in Nicosia.

It was not possible to verify the report, which gave no further details on the missiles. Iran this year has fired more than two dozen Soviet-made Scud-B missiles into Baghdad, the Iraqi capital.

Iraq also recently claimed it had developed a new surface-to-surface missile that could reach as as far as Tehran, the Iranian capital.

The two countries have been at war since September 1980.

On Tuesday, Iran said its warplanes raided Iraqi positions along the border and that Iranian soldiers had repulsed a ground attack in the northeast. IRNA said tens of thousands of volunteers, called "basijis," left Tehran for the front. Iran is said to be preparing one of its biggest offensives in the war.

The news agency said Musavi told "one of the largest-ever caravans of basijis" to head for the war zone: "Iranians will neither accept compromise with their enemies ... nor cease fighting blasphemous powers."

IRNA said President Ali Khamenei watched military maneuvers in central Arak province and added that the time for "decisive blows" against Iraq and the United States was "fast approaching."

Khamenei, who has been touring provinces with other Iranian leaders to rally support for the war, heads the Supreme Defense Council that plans war strategy.

Student's Family Protests Caste Game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 13-year-old student was asked to withdraw from a parochial school for refusing to participate in a class exercise that creates social castes and requires "fascist salutes" among students, her family says.

The parents of Gabrielle Sanchez-Goyen filed a $2.1 million lawsuit against Holy Family High School in Glendale and the Archdiocese of Los Angeles, arguing that the role-playing intentionally inflicts emotional distress on children.

In addition to the lawsuit, filed Monday in Superior Court, the Argentine-born family has employed a public relations firm and held a news conference Tuesday to denounce the "Color Game" and similar exercises billed as promoting moral development.

According to a family statement, the game "involves mandatory bowing, fascist salutes, informing on fellow students and the infliction of humiliation and verbal abuse."

School officials threatened to give Gabrielle a failing grade for refusing to participate in the class, said her family's attorney, William Hornaday.

When the Sanchez-Goyens stridently protested, school officials asked them to withdraw their daughter from the girls school, Hornaday said.

A lawyer representing the archdiocese said school officials canceled the game after three days. The attorney, Bill Wardlaw, also said, Gabrielle received an "A" for the class and had not been expelled.

Gabrielle's mother, Cristina Sanchez-Goyen, wrote a letter to the school principal denouncing the game as "ungodly, un-Christian and extremely dangerous to children's minds."

Raymond Otero, the Occidental College sociology instructor who invented the game, expressed surprise.

"We've found that minority students learn that abusing power is not attendant on being white," he said. "Students start relating to each other and realizing how ludicrous it is to judge people on external characteristics only."

Otero said he invented the game in 1979 and that it has been fictionalized in a book called "The War Between the Classes," which became the basis of an Emmy-award-winning CBS children's television special.

"It is a very Christian game, a very humanizing game," Otero said. "I'm so proud of this. It's taken eight years of my life to build this up and now they're threatening to tear it all down."

Wardlaw said, "I think it's quite unfortunate that press conferences and litigation are the methods used to resolve disputes of this nature, especially since no steps have ever been taken to expel (Gabrielle) from school."

Hornaday said the Sanchez-Goyens sought publicity in an effort to end all such games, and are amenable to settling the dispute out of court.

"I'm very much against such games," said Mrs. Sanchez-Goyen, a former high school teacher. "The damage or pain is something that stays with you."

The game randomly divides students into a hierarchy distinguished by four color groups and imposes rules that the students must obey eight hours a day for two weeks, according to Hornaday.

For example, girls assigned to a lower-class color are prohibited from talking to girls assigned to higher ranking. Members of higher-caste colors are allowed to cut in lines and allowed to require lower-caste girls to run errands for them.

Five students are designated as police officers and enforce the rules. They must by saluted, along with the teacher, by students who strike their right fist across their left chest.

Violations are cumulative and can lead to the student's grade being cut in half, Hornaday said.

UNC Study Says Corporate Boards Are Not Biased Toward Women

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

Idalene Kesner, an associate professor of business administration at the University of North Carolina, was disturbed by a Wall Street Journal article which cited a decline in the number of women serving on the boards of directors of the nation's 500 largest companies.

"It speculated the reason for the decline was because the government was laying off big business," said Kesner, explaining that there is a common belief that women have been named directors as "window dressing" by corporations trying to appear socially responsible.

"The reason (for the decline) has to do with all of the hostile takeovers and shareholder lawsuits," she said. "People don't want to serve on boards of directors because they may be sued. All boards are declining in size."

Using a computer, Ms. Kesner analyzed data she collected on half the Fortune 500 companies, including board members' age, sex, occupation, tenure, committee assignments and whether they came from inside or outside the company.

She found that while the number of women serving as directors remains low, the women who do serve are playing key decision-making roles.

"I was somewhat surprised how small the number (of female directors) was," she said in an interview from her Chapel Hill office. "But I also found that women were not discriminated against."

Ms. Kesner said recent research on the composition and structure of corporate boards of directors tended to focus on the entire board.

"That approach, however, may create a distorted picture, and I felt it would be more appropriate to examine the composition of the most powerful committees," she said.

The committees are powerful subgroups of directors who make recommendations to the entire board. They include the audit, compensation, executive and nominating committees, all of which are either recommended or required by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"I found that 114 or the 3,128 directors, or 3.6 percent, were women, that outsiders accounted for approximately 63 percent of the directorships, that two-thirds of the positions were held by business executives and that the average age of board members was 59 years," she said. "These figures are consistent with previous studies."

Ms. Kesner said she found that women were represented on the audit and compensation committees in numbers proportionate to their numbers on the boards. But they were not representated proportionately on the executive and nominating committees.

"Although gender was a factor, it wasn't the chief reason," she said. "Much more important was the fact that women tended to be lawyers, educators, doctors or people with a religious affiliation and might have less of the business backgrounds that these committees needed."

Ms. Kesner said women with business experience may not have been on the boards as long as their male colleagues.

"My figures clearly indicate that women are not being discriminated against when it comes to inviting people to serve on the major decision-making committees," she said.

"In fact, the odds of a woman director serving on some of these committees is greater than the odds of a male director being selected."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Sound Planning

It is understandable that some Brook Valley residents, along with residents of other areas surrounding Greenville, might be concerned about the city's annexation plans.

Nevertheless, the proposed annexation of Brook Valley is sound planning for the area and the process should proceed. Certainly city officials should pursue a vigorous educational program to assure Brook Valley residents that they will get benefits from being in town which will make the move worthwhile. A large part of that will be city sewer service. The area already has Greenville water.

Greenville should carefully examine future annexations, however, and make sure land acquisitions aren't capricious and based solely on a desire to increase tax revenues and raise the city's population.

When protesting annexation into Greenville, some Brook Valley residents made the point that their septic tanks were providing adequate sewer service. That may not always be true, however, and the time may come when the area simply won't support all the septic tanks that might be placed in service. Then there could be no quick fixes. It takes a long time to plan for sewer extensions and provide for financing.

Annexation will also provide for city fire and police protection and full access to city recreation programs — benefits that can improve quality of life for residents of the area.

While all these things have to be weighed against the cost of city taxes, it is no slim package of services that is provided to Greenville citizens. Certainly residing within the city limits is more costly than living outside, but in-town residency must be put in perspective by considering the advantages.

From the city government's standpoint, it is impossible to ignore major residential areas which have developed in near proximity to the city limits. The idea is to provide for orderly growth and planned development, and feasible annexations are a part of this. That is not to say that the city should follow a policy of annexing vast land areas only for the sake of growth and control. Rather, each potential annexation area should be the object of careful study to determine if it is economically feasible for the city and in the best interest of the public.

Municipal growth is a part of the population increase such as Pitt County and the Greenville area are experiencing. Annexation should be carefully planned and considered. When it is administrated in this manner, the process is beneficial to both the municipality and those being annexed.

Democratic 'Dwarfs' Hold Their Own

'The two-hour, prime-time NBC debate, with alternating sets of Democratic and Republican aspirants, debunked the notion that there is a huge ''stature gap'' between the rival fields.'

WASHINGTON — The first network debate of the 1988 presidential campaign Tuesday night showed that several of the much-derided Democratic "dwarfs" at least can hold their own on the TV screen with the supposed "giants" of the Republican Party.

The two-hour, prime-time NBC debate, with alternating sets of Democratic and Republican aspirants, debunked the notion that there is a huge "stature gap" between the rival fields.

On a night when Vice President Bush, the GOP front-runner, was hard-pressed to defend President Reagan's foreign policy from Republican dissenters, and his principal challenger, Senate Minority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., tried to straddle the evident intraparty divisions, at least three Democrats impressed their personalities and views on the audience.

Jesse L. Jackson, the leader in the Democratic polls, asserted his experience in foreign policy, his firmness in defending American interests and his compassion for the needy at home.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, D, allowed to go virtually unchallenged by his others, repeatedly showed himself eager to challenge the Republican record on foreign and domestic policy.

And the youngest man on the Kennedy Center stage, 39-year-old Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., managed to be both aggressive and controlled, scoring frequent points in exchanges with Democratic rivals who lead him in the national polls.

On the Republican side, it was another good night for Marion G. (Pat) Robertson, the television evangelist. None of the Republicans tried to undercut the preacher-businessman as he stroked a variety of conservative sensibilities in his most reasonable and engaging manner.

Among the trailers in the GOP field, Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., had a rough night, particularly in comparison to Robertson, whose rise has imperiled Kemp's chances; former Delaware Gov. Pierre S. (Pete) du Pont IV held his ground more effectively than in the previous GOP debate on Public Broadcasting System in October; and former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. rolled his regular quota of grenades at other candidates and, once again, saw some come flying back at him.

On the Democratic side, the chief target was Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who appeared frowning and uncomfortable as his advocacy of spending programs and a balanced-budget commitment was derided by several rivals.

Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., who led the assault on Simon, was himself caught in a blistering cross fire from Gore for his support of the 1981 tax cut, and was left spluttering on the screen.

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, the uncomfortable, head-tossing victim of the PBS Democratic debate in July, appeared strained again last night, even when he contrived, literally, to show up his opponents by asking if any of them would "stand up" and admit, as he has, that it will take tax increases to balance the budget.

Except for a reluctant Gephardt, who advocates an oil-import fee, the Democrats declined Babbitt's invitation.

Gore, who with Dukakis appeared to have the most carefully considered strategy for the debate, highlighted a GOP problem at the outset by pronouncing as "appalling" the Republicans' lack of enthusiasm for the pending arms-control agreement that Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev plan to sign at next week's summit meeting here.

That treaty produced some bruising exchanges between Bush, the treaty's lone GOP defender, and critics Haig, Kemp, du Pont and Robertson.

Dole, the only Republican who will vote on ratification of the treaty, continued to hedge on his stand, saying he still wanted to "read and study" the document.

This was not the only issue on which Dole — who is courting conservative votes while trying to present himself as more capable than Bush of attracting Democrats and independents in the general election — found himself uncomfortably middled. He declined to take a position on a possible pardon for the principal figures in the Iran-Contra affair and managed, in one sentence, to endorse both the strongly conflicting majority and minority reports of the congressional committees that investigated that scandal. Bush ducked a direct Haig question on what advice he gave to the president on arms sales to Iran, and Bush was obvious enough in doing so that it was clear he was skirting the issue. But other challenges from du Pont and Kemp left the vice president largely unscathed. Bush was not really winged Tuesday night; he simply never got off any lines as effective as those with which he demolished du Pont in the PBS debate.

Unknown Office

Rufus L. Edmisten, former North Carolina attorney general and the Democratic party's candidate for governor in 1984, will be seeking a new elective office.

Following the announcement that Thad Eure will retire next year as secretary of state, Edmisten has announced that he will seek the Democratic nomination for that position.

For Edmisten, who has been in private law practice since he was defeated by Republican Gov. Jim Martin, the announcement is a bit of a political comeback attempt. While he had not disappeared from public scrutiny in the four years since he stood in the glare of gubernatorial politics, certainly he hasn't been as visible as he once was.

And, in fact, no one can be certain how the next secretary of state, whoever he or she may be, will use the office. Thad Eure occupied it for so long that there is no way to predict the impact of the secretary of state. The position could be a platform to build a base for seeking higher office, but whether it can be a jumping off place for a future run for governor or U.S. Senate is simply an unknown. Much of that depends on who holds the office next.

Suffice it to say that the North Carolina secretary of state has been a reasonably non-controversial position. The only real controversy which ever seemed to surround Eure was the question of whether he had stayed too long.

Edmisten sees the secretary of state as an important position on the council of state. He noted that the office "deals with the corporate world, the securities establishment, and is the instrument that leads the battle against hostile take-overs of North Carolina corporations by outside corporate raiders." It is, of course, strategic in many areas, and there are already Democratic and Republican contenders for the office.

Whether the new occupant of the office in 1989 can assume an activitist role in state government and politics remains to be seen. If Edmisten should win it, however, it is difficult to envision him holding the office of secretary of state until he is 88 years old.

That tradition likely ended with the "oldest rat in the Democratic barn."

Gorbachev: Deceiving Soviet Charm

WASHINGTON — Monday night's televised interview with Mikhail Gorbachev showed the new Soviet leader to be more charming and less fearsome than any leader in the country's 70 years of existence. Here was a man with a ready smile, a friendly expression and a raconteur's disarming parable. His devotion to glasnost, or openness, came through.

And yet, the one-hour NBC interview showed that Gorbachev, when put on the defensive, retains the instincts of an old-style Moscow apparatchik, argumentative, proud, and eager to best any challenge by settling ideological scores and scoring points — with facts if possible, without them if not.

When pressed by NBC's Tom Brokaw on sensitive points, the friendly Gorbachev disappeared, replaced by a defensive debater steeped in party polemics. On the right to emigrate, on Afghanistan, on the Berlin Wall, the Soviet leader's explanations sounded not like the "new thinking" that Gorbachev has often asked for from his countrymen, but like lessons from a party handbook.

Answering Brokaw's query about the U.S.S.R.'s restrictive emigration policies, Gorbachev — an ethnic Russian, the nationality that dominates Soviet life — argued that the right to live where one pleases is not a universal freedom, as recognized in numerous international covenants signed by Soviet leaders.

"I understand the concern of the American side to some extent," Gorbachev said, "since that is a nation that was formed largely as a result of emigration processes. And therefore our views are different." He accused the United States of exploiting Soviet emigration "to resolve their own problems, and what they're organizing is a brain drain. And of course, we're protecting ourselves."

Gorbachev said the United States didn't want to admit "people from Mexico or other countries ... who don't have the skills that are required," then claimed that "a highly placed representative" of the American government had said in the 1970s that thanks to the emigration of Soviet Jews, "we've resolved the problems of mathematicians by 50 percent."

Prodded by Brokaw's comment that "there is no uglier symbol in the world ... than the Berlin Wall," Gorbachev shot back that it stood as "the sovereign right of a sovereign state, the German Democratic Republic, to defend ... and protect (itself), and not to allow any interference in its domestic affairs." The real wall dividing Germany, he contended, came not when the Berlin Wall went up in 1962, but years before, when the Western allies recognized a West German state.

This theme of self-protection from outside marauders seemed to echo Stalinist formulas of the past rather than those of Gorbachev's perestroika, or restructuring, the modernization drive that welcomes outside investment, joint ventures, and foreign experts of every kind.

Gorbachev also pointed the finger back at his accuser when asked about the sudden dismissal of his former comrade-in-arms Boris Yeltsin, the man he made Communist Party boss in the city of Moscow. What happened to Yeltsin was "a normal process for any democracy," adding: "I don't want to count how many ministers or secretaries were replaced even recently in the United States. ... "

Turning to Afghanistan, Gorbachev explained the 1979 Soviet invasion as a response to calls for help from a Kabul government endangered by "interference from outside." He did not mention the fact that the Soviet invaders helped assassinate the leader of the government that invited them into Afghanistan.

The action "does not run counter to the United Nations charter," Gorbachev declared, echoing Leonid Brezhnev, who drew almost unanimous condemnation from the U.N. General Assembly for ordering the intervention, and whom Gorbachev most blames for the stagnation of Soviet society and economy.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I am disappointed by the tone and language of your editorial, "By The Book" published on Thanksgiving Day. You describe the Cuban refugees in the federal detention centers as "dregs of Castro's society," "the lunatic fringe," "habitual criminals."

The sharing of our abundance should not be limited or exclusive; we give thanks for the care of our common Father before whom we are all brothers, even those who are mentally ill or have committed crimes.

I am disturbed by the way in which we have rejected and incarcerated these refugees. They are few in number, the mentally ill among them probably numbering less than the number of persons with serious mental illnesses in Pitt County alone. To allow them to share in the riches of this country would be in keeping with our historical and generous response to persons in need of shelter.

Strength For Today

We read periodically about eccentric people who shut themselves up for years, and although they have plenty of money to live in comfort, they live instead in filth and squalor until they die or are compelled to go to institutions for the mentally deranged.

Stories of this kind not only tell us something about the people involved, but they illustrate vividly the difference between the permanent and the transcient values of life.

The greatest gifts of life are certainly not those associated with wealth and power, but are unseen. The miserable misers described in the newspaper had only money, and what good did it do for them? Lacking all of the other qualities which make for a rich life, they became at last only objects of curiosity and pity.

Special Session Unlikely

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin is unlikely to call a special legislative session to seek repeal of a strict new law regulating treatment of hazardous wastes, a top aide says..

Martin was scheduled to hold a news conference today to announce his decision.

Chief of Staff Phil Kirk said late Tuesday that Martin had made no final decision, but he said calling lawmakers back to Raleigh would not likely be Martin's top option.

"He probably won't call a special session," Kirk said.

Martin said Tuesday that Deborah Parker, chairman of the state Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission, had told him it would be "desirable" if the Legislature could meet before its regular session in June to sweeten the pot for a community willing to host a hazardous waste treatment facility.

Last month Martin said he would consider calling a special session to urge lawmakers to repeal a law passed this year that could result in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency revoking the state's authority to regulate its hazardous waste program. Martin said such EPA action would embarrass the state and damage its efforts to recruit industry.

The law was an attempt to prevent GSX Chemical Services Inc. from building a treatment plant in Scotland County by creating water-dilution standards the company would have trouble meeting.

Two Children Die In Fire

SPRING LAKE, N.C. (AP) — Two children died Tuesday in a fire that gutted a mobile home just south of the Spring Lake city limits, authorities said.

The names of the children were not available, but Cumberland County sheriff's deputies said the mobile home was occupied by Dewayne Dolphus, a Fort Bragg soldier, and his wife, Linda.

The fire of unknown origin broke out at around 10:30 a.m., authorities said.

A rescue was attempted by trailer park resident Terry Perry, 24, who said he was working at a nearby Arby's Restaurant when he heard a woman screaming. Perry ran into the mobile home park and saw smoke and a woman running around a mobile home yelling for help. He heard children crying inside the trailer and tried to break a rear window with his fist, cutting his hand and arm in the process, he said.

Perry opened a door to the burning trailer while another park resident, Burt Robinson, 20, a Fort Bragg soldier, held onto his legs as he tried to crawl into the burning interior.

The men were forced back, however, when the roof to the trailer collapsed around them, Perry said.

The Spring Lake Police Department was investigating the fire, assisted by detectives from the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department.

This is the second time in less than a month that mobile home fires have taken the lives of Cumberland County children. On Nov. 14, three children, Jason Satterfield, 3, his brother, Elisha, 5, and their playmate Dominick Davis, 3, died in a fire that swept through a mobile home near the Fort Bragg Reservation.

RJR Lawyer Reportedly Concedes Risks

By MORTON MINTZ
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

BOSTON — A Washington lawyer for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. acknowledged to federal health officials that cigarettes are related to lung cancer, heart disease and chronic lung diseases, according to an internal government memo made public Tuesday by an anti-smoking group.

At a meeting in September in connection with Reynolds' announcement of a new low-tar cigarette, Peter Barton Hutt, a partner of Covington & Burling, "asked not to be quoted that smoking was hazardous," according to a memorandum summarizing the meeting written by Dr. Ronald M. Davis, director of the Office on Smoking and Health.

The company released a letter written by Hutt to Davis alleging that the memo misrepresented what happened at the meeting, which had been requested by the company to brief officials of the Department of Health and Human Services, including Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, on its new "smokeless" cigarette that heats but doesn't burn tobacco.

If in fact Hutt made the statements attributed to him in the memo, they could severely weaken the ability of the tobacco industry to defend itself against product-liability lawsuits, according to the Tobacco Products Liability Group, a Boston group that obtained the memorandum under under the Freedom of Information Act.

About 125 smokers' lawsuits are pending, including one each in Mississippi and New Jersey that are to go to trial in January.

Richard Daynard, a law professor who chairs the group, said at a news conference Tuesday that the industry has "shot itself in the foot" because Hutt's alleged statement goes against the industry's resolute, longstanding position that smoking hasn't been scientifically shown to be hazardous. His group seeks to encourage smokers' suits against tobacco companies.

Hutt, who was unavailable for comment Tuesday, sharply disputed Davis' memo in a letter to him dated Nov. 28. "At the end of the presentation, you asked whether Reynolds agreed that cigarettes caused" cancer, chronic lung illness and heart disease, Hutt wrote in that letter. "I responded that they did not. I reiterated that these were allegations by critics, stated that the company does not agree with these allegations, and reiterated that our intent at the briefing was to address the new cigarette, not smoking and health issues." Hutt, a former general counsel of the Food and Drug Administration, also denied asking Davis not to quote his remarks.

Reynolds called the release of the memorandum "yet another attempt by Professor Daynard to divert attention from the fact that tobacco products liability cases have been soundly rejected by juries and courts nationwide."

Davis said Tuesday that he stands by his memo, which was written on the basis of his notes and "recollections" of the meeting. "I am absolutely sure that what I said was correct and what Mr. Hutt says now is incorrect," he told the Associated Press.

Another Public Health Service official at the meeting, James Brown, said the meeting "was so long ago that I quite frankly don't recall who said what ... I'm not sure whether what's in the memo was correct or not."

A few hours before that meeting, E.A. Horrigan, chairman of the RJR Nabisco Inc. subsidiary, announced plans to sell a new "smokeless" cigarette.

In a Manhattan press conference, Horrigan did not describe the new product as being safe or safer than other cigarettes, and he reiterated the industry's contention that the scientific evidence was insufficient to incriminate tobacco as a cause of disease.

Instead, Horrigan spoke of the "controversy" about smoking and health and said the new product addresses the "perceptions" of many smokers.

But in Washington, Davis wrote in the memo, "Hutt, who conducted most of the briefing, began by pointing out that the three major health problems related to smoking were cancer, chronic lung disease, and heart disease. He stated that the new R.J. Reynolds product, by producing a negligible amount of tar, should provide important health benefits by reducing the risk of cancer in smokers. ...

"At the time, I did not know who Mr. Hutt was, and was rather surprised that he referred to cancer, chronic lung disease, and heart disease as problems. I asked if he was briefing us as a representative of RJR, and he said he was.

"I also asked if his explanation of the health benefits was part of the (Horrigan) press conference briefing earlier that day. He said that it was not, and in effect asked not to be quoted as saying that smoking was hazardous. I told him I wouldn't quote him in public."

In his memo, Davis wrote that he was "not exactly sure" why RJR provided the briefing.

"I suspect they would like us to perceive possible health benefits in the new cigarette so that the Public Health Service would have a favorable (or at least neutral) reaction to this development," he wrote

In similar speculation at the news conference, Daynard said it would have been preposterous for Reynolds, at a meeting with officials such as Koop, to try to disassociate smoking from disease the way the industry does in public because the surgeon general "would have walked out."

AIDS Cases Doubling '86 Tally

DURHAM (AP) — The number of AIDS cases reported in North Carolina so far this year is already more than double the number reported for 1986, state health officials say.

On the heels of the announcement, the state Task Force on AIDS recommended a series of measures to try to slow the accelerating epidemic. Central to the recommendations was the endorsement of a plan by which patients infected with AIDS would voluntarily notify their sexual partners that they may have been exposed to the deadly AIDS virus.

"This situation essentially remains a serious one," state Health Director Ron Levine said after the task force meeting, which he chaired. "We're still bearing the bitter fruit of transmission several years ago."

As of Nov. 24, 166 cases of AIDS had been reported in North Carolina in 1987, compared to 81 for all of 1986. Even if the rate of increase slows at the end of the year, more cases will have been reported in 1987 than the 169 reported in all previous years combined.

Levine said some of the dramatic increase this year was because of better reporting by doctors who have learned to recognize the symptoms of AIDS. Part of the increase may stem from broader definitions, released earlier this year by federal health officials, of the diagnosis of AIDS.

Measures already in effect to control the epidemic, such as anonymous, free testing and counseling at county health clinics, may be having an effect that won't show up in AIDS statistics for another few years, Levine said. Studies show that there is a lag of one to eight or more years from the time a person is infected with the AIDS virus until he develops symptoms of AIDS.

Medical experts estimate that there may be 50 people infected for every one person who has been diagnosed with AIDS. In North Carolina, for example, that could mean that as many as 17,000 people are infected.

Growing Tobacco Demand May Bring Quota Increase

By The Associated Press

Domestic cigarette makers plan to boost their tobacco purchases by 24 percent next year, which could trigger the first significant rise in the tobacco quota in 12 years, agricultural officials say.

"We're delighted. It's a long time coming, sort of a Christmas-come-early for us," said T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina. "This is essentially what we said would happen in time when we revised the program a couple of years ago. It's very rewarding to see it come true."

Robert Tarczy, an agricultural economist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said the reason for companies buying more tobacco are "closely guarded trade secrets," but he speculated that a weaker dollar abroad and expanding markets in the Far East contributed to the increase.

The expected rise in the 1988 tobacco quota could translate into $54 million more in profits next year, officials said. Domestic cigarette makers plan to boost their tobacco purchases from 355 million pounds this year to 441.4 million pounds next year.

Tuesday was the deadline for tobacco manufacturers to submit their buying intentions to the USDA. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng must announce the quota by Dec. 15.

More good news for tobacco farmers is that the average federal price support has been set at slightly more than $1.44 per pound, or about a penny higher than this year, said Fred Bond, general manager of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., a grower-owned co-op.

However, tobacco officials are unsure how the price support may be affected by Congressional efforts to cut the national budget deficit.

Preliminary figures used to determine the quota, the amount of tobacco farmers are permitted to grow to receive federal price support, indicate that there will be at least a 6 percent to 7 percent increase in the basic quota, Tarczy said.

The effective quota could increase by 8 percent or higher, depending on adjustments in actual production figures this year, he said.

Preliminary figures indicate the quota will be about 777 to 779 million pounds. The effective quota this year was about 740 million pounds. Only about 690 million pounds were expected to be sold this year, based on an October forecast.

North Carolina farmers produce about 420 million pounds of flue-cured tobacco annually. An 8 percent increase would mean an additional 34 million pounds could be grown. Based on an average price of $1.60 per pound, it would mean more than a $54 million increase in income for tobacco growers.

Plan Would Require Faculty Certification

RALEIGH (AP) — Teacher certification would be required of faculty members in North Carolina teacher-education programs by July 1, 1989, under a recommendation approved by a state committee on teacher preparation.

"If we require our teachers to be certified to teach our children, then it makes sense to have people who teach our teachers to be certified also," committee chairman Norma Turnage said Tuesday.

In all, the committee approved 21 recommendations aimed at upgrading the state's 44 teacher-education schools by tightening standards, strengthening their ties to public schools and revitalizing their faculties. The recommendations were proposed by a state-mandated UNC task force a year ago.

Donald J. Stedman, an associate vice president for the UNC system, estimated that 9 percent of the faculty of the system's teacher-education programs were not certified.

Those who are not may have to take teacher education courses and pass the National Teachers Examination to earn their certifications, he said.

"It may cause some systems to re-evaluate their faculty positions," Stedman said.

Big Card

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Sailors in the Persian Gulf soon will be receiving a Christmas card from people in Burlington — one that its designer conservatively estimates has 15,000 signatures on it.

When Helen Eddingfield suggested that she and her husband, Ed, send a large Christmas card to the Persian Gulf, their son, William Eddingfield, was among the sailors assigned there.

Ed Eddingfield, who retired from the Navy two years ago and is now employed at the SCI plant in Graham, encouraged his wife to pursue the effort and took her to the Burlington Daily Times-News to get some end rolls of newsprint.

On Monday, Helen Eddingfield delivered six of the rolls — measuring scores of yards in length — to the office of Navy Recruiter Steven Rutherford in Burlington.

Rutherford had made arrangements to have the greetings airlifted to the Navy men in the Persian Gulf, who are protecting U.S.-flagged oil tankers.

Many of the messages are from young school children, whose letters to the sailors were attached to the rolls.

Soviet Visit

DURHAM (AP) — Eleven Soviet citizens will touring part of North Carolina next week as part of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Bridges for Peace program.

The 11 Soviets, only one of whom has ever visited the United States before, will arrive in the area Monday and will spend much of their time with host families.

They are returning a call made by 17 North Carolinians who toured the Soviet Union in June. The visit is sponsored by the Physicians for Social Responsibility, the N.C. Center for Peace Education, the N.C. Association of Educators and several other groups.

Body Found

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — The body of a 77-year-old man who wandered away from his rest home was found Tuesday, Wilkes County authorities said.

The body of Lawson Davidson of Taylorsville was found several hundred yards behind the Foster-Richardson Rest Home near Wilkesboro, said Wilkes County Sheriff Fred Myers.

Myers said Davidson apparently had been walking through the woods when he tripped over downed limbs and fell on his face. The coroner is investigating the exact cause of death, Myers said.

Experiment

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — First-graders at Moore Alternative School will be using computers soon to learn Spanish in an experimental course.

The Winston-Salem-Forsyth County school system is one of several in the United States and Puerto Rico participating in a research study of the Spanish version of the Writing to Read program, which will use computers to help students learn to write, read and speak Spanish.

In some of the school systems, the program will be used to develop writing and reading skills fo Spanish-speaking students, said Francis Snow, the school system's foreign-language coordinator.

The computers will use recorded materials so that students can hear how the words are spoken in different Spanish-speaking regions such as Spain, Puerto Rico and Mexico.

Lease Approved

RALEIGH (AP) — The Council of State voted Tuesday to extend for 20 years the state's lease of property in Catawba County for a communications tower despite a complaint that the rate was exorbitant.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks voiced opposition to the continued rental, arguing that the Council ought to buy the land. "We're looking at the permanent use of this site for the state," Brooks said after the Council discussed the issue in a private session.

Gov. Jim Martin acknowledged that the $2,500 annual rent was a 10-fold increase over the rate charged in the lease that expires in February 1988. But he said the current rate was a "considerable bargain."

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles said the purchase price would be steep and that the state could buy the land later if necessary.

The 3,844-square-foot site is located at Baker Mountain in Catawba County. The University of North Carolina Center for Public Television maintains a 50-foot tower there, a facility also used by the state Highway Patrol and the North Carolina Microelectronics Center.

President

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Johnson C. Smith University President Robert Albright said Tuesday he no longer is a candidate for president of Texas Southern University, the nation's third-largest predominantly black university.

"After careful consideration and deep reflection, I have concluded that Johnson C. Smith University is where I want to be," Albright said at a news conference.

Albright, 43, was one of three finalists for the top job at Texas Southern, a 7,300-student university in Houston. He called the regents chairman to withdraw his name on Tuesday.

JCSU, a predominantly black university with about 1,200 students, pays him about $70,000, plus other benefits, he said. Texas Southern was offering about $115,000, plus other benefits that made the salary package worth about $250,000, he said.

Reservoir Fills

SILER CITY, N.C. (AP) — All water restrictions in Siler City have been lifted after rainfall between Thanksgiving and Saturday, City Manager Ben Shivar said.

Shiver said the rain filled the Chatham County town's main reservoir and even left some water flowing over the spillway.

Siler City industries had sliced off one or two days of their work weeks to ease demand on the dwindling water supply. Meanwhile, the town imposed a ban on washing cars and sprinkling lawns and asked residents to conserve water.

Suspension

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Superior Court judge has ruled that the Winston-Salem Urban League's suspension of league President Thomas J. Elijah Jr. last month was legal.

Judge C. Preston Cornelius of Forsyth County Superior Court said the league's board of directors had the authority to suspend Elijah with pay for 30 days. Elijah was suspended Nov. 11 while an internal investigation into management of the league is conducted.

Elijah filed suit against six members of the league's board of directors last month, claiming he was suspended because the six are mounting a takeover of the league.

Agency Says North Carolina Has Competitive 'Two Party' System

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has undergone a major political shift in the last 20 years from one of the pillars of the Democratic-dominated "Solid South" to a competitive two-party system, according to a new report by a non-partisan think-tank organization.

"North Carolina has been transformed from near-total domination by the Democratic Party to a state with a new political balance," said one of the report's authors, Jack Betts, at the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research.

"Democrats still dominate, but Republicans regularly win the big elections, and lately, they've been winning more of the little ones, too," Betts said Tuesday. "The evidence abounds, and each ensuing election gives further proof of the realignment of political parties."

Among the evidence is that the GOP candidate for president has carried the state in every contest but one since 1968, as well as two races for governor and four races for U.S. senator. In all, the Republican Party has won nine of the 14 major statewide races since 1968 — a winning percentage of 64 percent.

But the evidence goes deeper than that, the center said. Republicans hold four of the state's 11 congressional seats, held both Senate seats from 1980 to 1986, hold about 30 percent of the seats in the General Assembly, and have a majority on nearly 30 percent of the county Boards of Commissioners.

How this could happen in state that was long the province of Democrats lies in voter registration and demographics, said the center, which is an independent, non-partisan non-profit organization created to examine state government policies and practices.

— While Democratic registration grew by 37 percent from 1966-1986, Republican registration grew nearly four times as fast — by 143 percent. When the period began, Democrats had nearly a 4-1 edge in registration; by the last election in 1986, it was about 2.5 to 1. The number of unaffiliated voters also grew rapidly in this period. About half of the new registrants are Democrats while the other half are Republicans or unaffiliated. Twenty years ago, 80 percent of new voters were Democrats.

— The evidence shows that while Republican strength is growing across the board, it is soaring in the state's populous areas. In Wake County, Democrats grew by 82 percent, but Republicans grew by 707 percent; in Guilford, Democrats grew by nearly 42 percent, Republicans by 149 percent; and in Forsyth, Democrats grew by 26 percent, Republicans by 134 percent.

— On the local level, Republican strength is growing rapidly, too, the center said. In 1974, 80 of the state's 477 county commissioners were Republicans. By 1986, the number had grown by 76 percent to 141. In 1987, Republicans held a majority on 29 county boards of commissioners — more than double the number they controlled in 1974.

— North Carolina has become a solidly Republican state in presidential elections. In the period 1968-1980, 10 North Carolina counties voted consistently Democratic in presidental elections; 40 counties voted consistently Republican; the rest had mixed voting records.

David Flaherty, former chairman of the state Republican Party and now secretary of the state Department of Human Resources, said the Democratic Party's stronghold on state politics still has an effect.

"I do not feel that it is long gone," Flaherty said.

'Red Tide' May Be Linked To Pollution

RALEIGH (AP) — Red tides have become more common around the world, and the phenomenon — which is caused by poisonous algae — could be related to growing pollution of the oceans, a marine professor at North Carolina State University says.

"No one knows why, but the correlation seems to be there" between red tides and the increase of nutrients in ocean waters, said Daniel Kamykowski.

Kamykowski, a biological oceanographer who just returned from an international conference in Japan on red tides, said North Carolina's coast is one of several locations where conference scientists noted new outbreaks of the algal blooms, which contaminate shellfish.

"There appears to be an increase in general," he said. "North Carolina may just be one part of this global phenomenon."

Scientists from 30 countries attended the meeting and discussed cases from such places as the Virgin Islands, Polynesia, Australia, Sweden and Scotland.

Kamykowski placed a dot on a map at the meeting to indiccate North Carolina's first major red tide, spotted in early November. Other new locations reported included Guatemala and Tasmania, he said.

State officials have closed off about 170 miles of North Carolina to shellfishing because of the algae.

The specific cause of the red tide cannot be determined without analytical study of the algae involved, Kamykowski said. Ptychodiscus brevis, the species causing the North Carolina red tide, is a common Florida species.

Most prevalent in the Gulf of Mexico, that species is thought to have been carried up the Atlantic coastline of Florida by the Gulf Stream. Kamykowski said the Gulf Stream could have carried the algae up to North Carolina.

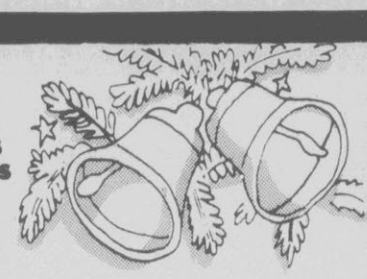

The red tide also could be formed by cysts left in the sediment from a previous intrusion of algae. Cysts, the dinoflagellates' resting stage, maintain the red tide as a recurring regional phenomenon, Kamykowski said.

Algae, made up of tiny dinoflagellates, bloom to make a red tide. Dinoflagellates are one-celled plants with two whip-like flagella which allow them to swim like animals.

While Pychodiscus brevis has not been seen along the North Carolina coast before, red tides are well known along the northern Atlantic coast of the United States and Canada and in Chesapeake Bay. Kamykowski said the patterns of ocean currents probably make it unlikely that those species would occur along the North Carolina coast.

When conditions are no longer right for North Carolina's red tide, "the algae will disappear from the water ...," Kamykowski said. "It is not now known if the cysts from this red tide will germinate to yield future red tides."

Helms Votes No As Senate Backs Major Federal Education Program

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major education bill affecting most of the nation's schoolchildren won overwhelming Senate approval after members unanimously agreed to an amendment outlawing dial-a-porn telephone operations.

The amendment sponsored by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was adopted 98-0 on Tuesday despite some senators' concerns that it might be unconstitutional.

The overall education improvement bill, which renews and expands federal education programs for disadvantaged children and others, won approval 97-1. Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate education subcommittee, called it "a document of which we can all be proud."

Helms voted against the measure even though it contained his anti-pornography amendment. Helms said his vote expressed his objection to federal involvement in an area primarily the concern of local government.

"I am convinced that the problems of education in America can be traced to the time that the federal government began to intrude in what previously had been purely a function and responsibility of state and local government," Helms said in a statement. "I am further convinced that the more our schools rely on so-called federal aid, the worse the problems will become."

The House has passed a similar sweeping education bill which contains no provision similar to the Helms amendment. Negotiators from each chamber must work out differences between the two measures and could drop the Helms amendment in the process.

The American Civil Liberties Union predicted that if they retain the provision and it becomes law, it will be declared unconstitutional by the courts.

The Helms amendment "tries to reduce the entire adult population of America to hearing what is acceptable to children. No court has ever permitted this to occur," said ACLU legislative counsel Barry Lynn.

Current law allows dial-a-porn services to be offered to consenting adults, but it has proven difficult to prevent children from calling to hear the sexually explicit messages.

The Robert T. Stafford Elementary and Secondary School Improvement Act renews federal education programs until 1993, increases spending for some of them and authorizes several new programs. It is named after the Vermont Republican who preceded Pell as subcommittee chairman and is retiring next year.

Teacher Spokesman Says Discipline Major Problem

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina teachers won't be able to control unruly students until they get more support, observers say.

"We are talking about the kinds of situations wherein individual students repeatedly disrupt classrooms and verbally abuse teachers and other students ...," said Davis Bingham, president of the Classroom Teachers Association of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system.

In a statement prepared for the Legislative Study Committee on Unruly Students, Bingham said undisciplined pupils create "a tone, an atmosphere, in which effective teaching and learning and well-nigh impossible."

Teachers, principals, parents, superintendents and the state Department of Public Instruction were represented at the panel's organizational meeting Tuesday.

Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, the co-chairman, said he did not know whether the committee would be able to solve what he called a longstanding problem. "I hope we can bat around some ideas" for the General Assembly to consider, he said.

Sam Houston, superintendent of the Mooresville school system, said in an interview that better community attitudes would do more to solve the problem that additional laws.

"I think we have in place all the legislation we need ... guaranteeing us the right control children," Houston said. "I can do anything and everything to the extent of excluding a child, never to return."

He added, "The willingness to implement those legislative guarantees that we have is maybe the difference between a good school system with good discipline and one without."

Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, said he had discussed the matter last week with 15 teachers from his area. Those talks convinced him that "we have a serious problem with discipline in the schools," he said, complaining that teachers were being taught to fear using corporal punishment although it is legal.

Margaret Hayden, assistant superintendent for legislative services with the state Department of Public Instruction, said in-school suspension was ordered 178,035 times and out-of-school suspension 72,480 times in North Carolina in 1986-87 — a total of 250,515.

She said 146,284 students were suspended, meaning many were suspended more than once.

A total of 2,150 students were expelled for the year.

The Department of Public Instruction has been studying discipline and related issues since the late 1970s, Mrs. Hayden said. But under questioning by Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, she acknowledged the department had no division or officials who deal solely with discipline.

Local school systems have a variety of programs for dealing with poorly disciplined students, she said. They include alternative schools, optional schools, extended day programs, and in-school suspension.

The State Board of Education last year ordered all high schools to establish in-school suspension programs, and many middle schools have done likewise. There were 109 in-school suspension programs in 1986-87 and the Legislature last year appropriated $2.8 million to establish 69 more, Mrs. Hayden said.

Court Orders Medical Hearings

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Court of Appeals has ruled that the state Board of Medical Examiners overstepped its bounds by failing to hold a hearing on its reasons for not reinstating a doctor who had been ruled mentally incompetent at one time.

In a ruling released Tuesday, the panel sided with a Superior Court judge who had said the board must establish rules and procedures for reinstating suspended medical licenses.

The doctor's case stemmed from efforts by Dr. Archibald Carter Magee of Washington to win back his medical license. Magee's license had been suspended in 1983 after he pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity to criminal assault charges and was found to be mentally incompetent due to drug and alcohol abuse.

Magee had been involved in a shooting with Wayne County sheriff's deputies who were trying to serve a warrant on him in connection with his having fired a shotgun at a neighbor, the Board of Medical Examiners said in its findings.

Magee was involuntarily committed to a state psychiatric hospital after he was found mentally incompetent. But after seven months, he was found mentally competent and released. He then asked the medical examiners to reinstate his license.

In another case, the state appeals panel upheld a lower-court jury's decision to award a woman only $1 in damages, despite finding she ahd been a victim of sexual harassment.

In the sexual harassment case, the appeals court rejected Ruby McNeill's contention that the judge in the Moore County Superior Court trial should have declared a mistrial after the jury had trouble reaching a verdict.

She argued that Judge Ronald W. Burris "coerced" the jury to continue deliberating.

"It is well-settled that the trial court may require a jury which appears to be unable to agree to continue its deliberations," the appeals court opinion, written by Judge Hugh A. Wells.

Sawyer Gets Mayor's Job

CHICAGO (AP) — Eugene Sawyer, Chicago's longest serving black alderman, was elected acting mayor today after a chaotic 6½ hour City Council meeting marked by spectators waving dollar bills and shouting "No Deals!"

Sawyer, who succeeds the late Mayor Harold Washington, the city's first black mayor, was elected with the help of white aldermen who once had vigorously opposed his predecessor.

The council vote, which came at 4 a.m., was 29-19, with two not voting.

At one point during the wrangling, an alderman stood on his desk in an attempt to be recognized.

Sawyer, who has ties to the regular Democratic organization, sat quietly in the chambers as aldermen wrangled through the night over whether he or Timothy Evans, another black alderman and Washington's former floor leader, should be elected to lead the nation's third-largest city.

Sawyer and Evans shook hands after the vote. But motions to make it unanimous drew shouts of "No!" from Evans supporters.

The meeting, which began 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, became bogged down by procedural arguments, courtroom maneuvering, and an angry but peaceful demonstration by thousands outside City Hall.

After rejecting repeated motions to adjourn about midnight, aldermen began a marathon debate of the qualifications of Sawyer and Evans.

'Stars & Stripes' Gets Congressional Approval

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The Stars and Stripes Forever" will soon join the national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," as an official part of America's musical heritage when it becomes the national march of the United States.

The House took just six minutes Tuesday to approve by voice vote and send to President Reagan legislation to give that designation to John Philip Sousa's stirring composition.

The Senate passed similar legislation last month and the White House says Reagan does not oppose the measure.

"The Stars and Stripes Forever" was first played before President McKinley and a large crowd on May 14, 1897, at the unveiling of a statue of George Washington in Philadelphia. It has since become part of Americana.

"Not only do Americans instantly recognize this stirring march as America's march, but so do people all over the world," said Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn., a co-sponsor of the House bill. "Whenever a band strikes up 'The Stars and Stripes Forever,' people think of the United States."

Sousa was born in Washington, D.C., in 1854 and served 19 years in the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps, shaping their military musical tradition. For 12 years, he led the Marine Band, conducting across the country and overseas both in peacetime and war.

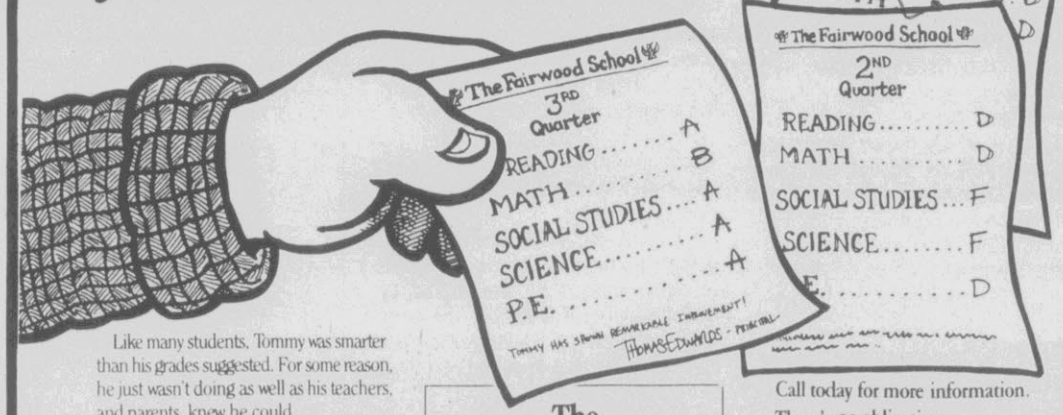

After leaving the military, Sousa continued to travel with his own band giving concerts that inspired U.S. patriotism.

The House legislation was introduced by Quillen and Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif. The Senate bill was sponsored by Sen. David Boren, D-Okla.

More than 250,000 people across the country signed petitions urging the bill's adoption, according to Boren. He said last month that more than 2,500 Sousa-style concerts had been performed by school, college, community and professional bands and orchestras as part of an 18-month "Tribute to Sousa" campaign.

Tommy's teachers always said he could do better. Sylvan showed him how

Like many students, Tommy was smarter than his grades suggested. For some reason, he just wasn't doing as well as his teachers, and parents, knew he could.

At Sylvan we guarantee that Tommy will reach his full potential. It's a promise. And we back it with this simple guarantee: your child's reading or math skills will improve by at least one full grade level after just 36 instruction hours. Or we'll provide up to 12 additional hours of instruction at no further cost. Improvement will be measured by a nationally-recognized achievement test, given before and after instruction at Sylvan.

The Sylvan Guarantee

Your child will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in math or reading skills after 36 hours of instruction, or we will continue up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost.

Measurement will be based on a nationally-recognized achievement test for improvement in either reading (comprehension or vocabulary) or math (computation or application).

Essayist James Baldwin Used Angry Pen To Lance White Pressure Points

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — James Baldwin instinctively knew the pressure points and boils in white America and he lanced them with his angry pen.

But the late essayist, playwright and author never allowed his polemics to overshadow his literary genius. He was remembered by those in American arts and letters as an extraordinary writer with a compelling, passionate voice.

Baldwin died Monday of cancer at age 63 at his Mediterranean hilltop home in St. Paul de Vence, France, where 40 years ago he took "refuge far from the madness of America."

"I think what Baldwin did was to make white America know the extent and depth of black rage," said James H. Silberman, Baldwin's editor at Dial from 1953-63 and now president and editor in chief of Summit Books.

"I'm sure he was an inspiration for a generation of black writers. His style, which came indirectly out of evangelical preaching, was impossible to imitate and his voice was surely unique."

Baldwin, whose father had been a fiery lay preacher, himself became a preacher in a Harlem storefront church during his youth. His first novel, "Go Tell It on the Mountain" (1953), recalled that life. One passage is about young Gabriel, who is to speak at a revival meeting:

"He was to preach on the twelfth night. It as decided, in view of his possible failure to attract, to support him on either side with a nearly equal number of war horses. He would have, thus, the benefit of the storm they would certainly have stirred up before him; and should he fail to add substantially to the effect they had created, there would be others coming after him to obliterate his performance."

The novel was autobiographical in a way: a lusting, demagogic father; a stoical mother; a doomed, rebellious son; a sensitive boy journeying to manhood.

In the haunting "Giovanni's Room" (1956), Baldwin dealt with his sexuality. "No one thought Jimmy should reveal his homosexuality in a novel," said Silberman, who edited the novel. "They thought it would destroy his career."

It didn't. Baldwin went on to write more novels, including "Another Country" (1962), "Tell Me How Long the Train's Been Gone" (1968), "If Beale Street Could Talk" (1974) and "Just Above My Head" (1979). He also produced searing observations on the black experience of America, in profound and eloquent essays: "Notes of a Native Son" (1955), "Nobody Knows My Name" (1961), "The Fire Next Time" (1963), "The Devil Finds Work" (1976) and his last work, "Harlem Quartet," written this year.

"I was reading his essays a few weeks ago," said Joyce Carol Oates, author of "A Garden of Earthly Delights" and "Bellefleur."

"They were just wonderful but they didn't get the attention he should have had. Baldwin was very central, very important. ... He influenced black writers enormously and influenced all of us in terms of thinking and conciousness."

Legal Aid Lawyer Says Prison Talks Progressing

ATLANTA (AP) — Cuban inmates freed one of their 90 hostages in a good-will gesture, and a lawyer who helped win the man's release said today he was trying to clarify for the rebellious prisoners an emerging agreement to end the siege.

"I think a lot of points have been settled. I think there are still a couple of hard points," Gary Leshaw of the Atlanta Legal Aid Society said at an early morning news conference outside the U.S. Penitentiary where the standoff dragged into a 10th day.

"We hope to get all the answers we need to answer their questions. Hopefully, we're close to the end of it," said Leshaw, who described his role in the negotiations as explaining legal matters to the inmates.

He would not discuss specifics as to what kind of agreement might be reached, or what remained to be defined or settled. But he said negotiations were further along than at any point so far.

The 1,108 Cuban detainees still in the prison have been holding hostages since rioting Nov. 23 to protest a U.S.-Cuban agreement that could lead to their deportation as excludable aliens. One inmate was killed and three buildings burned.

Tuesday night's release of senior corrections officer Abdul-Saboor Rushdan, 36, followed an appeal by Leshaw and some inmate wives on a radio talk show popular among the prisoners. The Cubans were asked to free a hostage to bolster Leshaw's credibility and as a birthday present to Carla Dudeck, 29-year-old coordinator of Atlanta's Coalition to Support Cuban Detainees.

The Cubans, who released four hostages Sunday after a similar appeal on the show on radio station WRFG, shouted from a rooftop Tuesday night that only a fair agreement will win release of the others.

When Ms. Dudeck appeared outside the prison, the detainees serenaded her with a birthday song in Spanish and then shouted via public address system that one hostage would be released for her.

About two hours later, Rushdan walked out and was taken to a hospital for a checkup and to be reunited with his family.

"I think it's great," Ms. Dudeck said. "It helps establish our credibility."

The release came a few hours after four representatives of the Cubans met with government negotiators and reached substantial agreement on a number of unspecified issues, a Justice Department spokesman said.

The spokesman, Patrick Korten, said the meeting was "considerably more encouraging than others we have had in the last few days."

Korten would not be specific on the points of agreement, but said the influence wielded by about 100 radicals, who blocked an earlier mass hostage release, seemed to wane.

"This one (session) did not have the grandstanding and role-playing" that has been exhibited in the past by the dissident faction, Korten said.

Shortly after Korten's statements Tuesday, the detainees announced through their makeshift rooftop public address system that they wished to resolve the crisis, but only on their terms.

More than 280 Cuban inmates have surrendered, but only two did so Tuesday.

"We are confident that very soon that this crisis will end and the resolution will be favorable, morally and justly, to everyone involved," an unidentified prisoner said in English.

The inmate criticized the agreement that ended a similar hostage siege in Oakdale, La., where Cuban prisoners released their 26 hostages on Sunday.

"We fear that our Cuban detainee brothers in Oakdale have been cheated and deprived of their legal rights again," he said. "What happened at Oakdale was that the government brought the crisis to an end without really addressing the concerns of the Marielitos."

The detainee referred to immigrants who sailed from the Cubans port of Mariel to the United States in 1980.

Professor Charged

BOSTON (AP) — The Harvard professor once offered the No. 2 job in the U.S. Department of Education by the Reagan administration has been charged with possession of drugs in his second brush with the law in six months.

Glenn C. Loury, 38, a political economist at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, was arrested Sunday and charged with possession of marijuana and cocaine, authorities said.

A hearing has been scheduled Jan. 21 in Municipal Court.

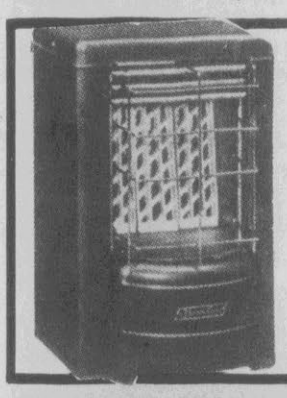

Last June, Loury was charged with assaulting a 23-year-old woman in Boston, but the charge was dismissed when the judge was told the woman had moved out of the state and did not want to proceed with her complaint.

Loury had been President Reagan's personal choice as undersecretary of education, but was never formally nominated.

Loury pleaded innocent to the assault charge days after withdrawing his name from consideration for the position.

Loury is considered a leading black opponent of affirmative action and minority hiring quotas. He has urged blacks to look to themselves, not the government, to solve social problems.

Presidential Hopefuls Spar Over Taxes, Arms

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican and Democratic presidential candidates, sparring over taxes and arms control during a two-hour debate, sharpened the battle lines of a campaign growing more contentious as the first primaries and caucuses draw near.

Each of the 12 candidates claimed victory as soon as Tuesday night's two-hour nationally televised debate ended, but there was no clear signal which of them drew the most applause in the millions of homes where it was seen.

"Nobody got bloodied," said GOP Senate leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

"I think the Democrats won tonight," said Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. "I think we got some important points across."

NBC officials estimated that up to 25 million people watched the debate and the candidates took advantage of that massive exposure to preview the issues striking the most sparks as the campaign moves swiftly toward the first tests in primary and caucus states.

The discussion was shadowed by next week's summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, with the Democratic candidates offering more backing than the Republicans for the arms control treaty the two leaders plan to sign.

"It is nothing short of appalling that five of the six Republican candidates refuse to support the new arms control agreement," said Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn.

"Every Democrat here is for the INF (Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces) treaty. I hope you will ask (the Republicans) why only one of them is supporting their president," said Gephardt.

Vice President George Bush was the only Republican to offer unreserved backing for the treaty.

Referring to Dole's contention that he wants to read the treaty before deciding how to vote on it, Bush said, "I happen to have read the treaty. ... I've read it and I believe it's good."

"I've never let the president down yet," responded Dole. "But I have a right to read and study."

Former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and Pat Robertson, all Republicans, voiced varying degrees of opposition to the agreement to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

Haig indicated some softening of his opposition when he said, "It's too late to scuttle what has already happened."

No opposition was expressed by any of the six Democrats — Gephardt, Gore, Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, Jesse Jackson, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois and former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona.

Broadcast from the stage of the Eisenhower Theater in the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, the debate was divided into 30-minute segments. During the first half hour the six Democratic candidates discussed foreign policy under questioning by NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw. The next segment featured the six Republicans on the same subject.

The final two segments were devoted to domestic issues.

The Republicans clashed most often on foreign policy, while the Democrats were more often at odds on domestic issues.

The debate took place just over two months before the Iowa precinct caucuses test the appeal of candidates in both parties.

Gephardt and Gore clashed on taxes, with the Tennessee senator asking the congressman why he had voted for Reagan's tax cut bill in 1981.

Gephardt said he supported the measure only after fighting unsuccessfully to win approval of Democratic alternatives and then he asked Gore whether he wanted to repeal the tax cut.

Later, the Missouri congressman said, "I don't think middle-income Americans want their taxes increased by $260 billion."

The only time the 12 candidates were on stage together was for the introductions.

But they were clearly aware of the proximity of their potential general election rivals and mixed their jabs at party rivals with partisan shots at the opposition party and its candidates.

An Associated Press panel of high school and collegiate debate experts gave Bush the top GOP grade at the debate and ranked Dukakis and Gore, with equal scores, atop the Democratic field.

The experts were using the same criteria used nationally in collegiate and scholastic debates, awarding points on a scale of 1 to 5 in each of six debate categories: analysis, reasoning, evidence, cross-examination, refutation and presentation.

In addition to his clash with Gore, Gephardt also went after Simon who has called for a balanced budget as well as increased federal spending on domestic programs.

"Simonomics is really Reaganomics with a bow tie," said Gephardt.

That prompted Babbitt to say, "I've just heard a lot of flimflam."

Babbitt dramatically rose from his seat and said, "It's time to stand up and say ... that we must raise taxes." Babbitt, the only candidate proposing a national sales tax to reduce the deficit, said, "There aren't a lot of profiles in courage here tonight."

Robertson uttered one of the most cutting remarks of the night. A former Democrat, he said: "In the old days of Truman and Kennedy, Democrats stood for freedom but they don't anymore. ... Now they stand for appeasement."

Alligator Products Poached

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Christmas shoppers tempted by an alligator belt from Italy or a wallet from Germany are being warned that as many as a third of such products this season are made from animals illegally hunted or traded.

The warning comes from the World Wildlife Fund, which says neither the shopper, trader nor hunter seems to be in much danger of legal action. But the fund points out that the caiman alligator, the source of most of the illegal products, is officially designated as a threatened species.

It says half of all caiman skins come into the market illegally, many from Brazil and Paraguay, where caiman hunting is officially banned.

"In many cases, this trend represents a major threat to these animals' survival in the wild," says Ginette Healey, director of the fund's monitoring program.

The fund reports that in 1984 through 1986 more than 1.1 million imported alligator items were sold in this country, including 710,000 from Italy, 104,000 from West Germany, 70,000 from Spain, 58,000 from France, 58,000 from Switzerland, 49,000 from Hong Kong, 43,000 from Austria, 17,000 from Taiwan and 16,000 from Japan.

Last year sales reached their peak, an estimated $15 million worth.

The fund says many of the animals are poached from protected areas and smuggled out of Latin America with the help of false documents. A few legal skins come from Venezuela, where hunting is allowed, and from New Guinea in the South Pacific, where alligators are raised on ranches.

Most of the skins go to Europe. By the time the products reach the U.S. market it is hard to verify where the skins came from and whether they were legally obtained.

American shoppers were urged to question retailers about the origin of alligator products and to consider buying something else if they are not satisfied.

The U.S. alligator is also on the "threatened" list, but Ms. Hemley recommends that American shoppers buy products marked as coming from American alligators wherever possible.

Lynn Hardie, an information officer for the fund, explained:

"The American program is well managed, an example of what can be done. The American alligator used to be listed as endangered, but it's come back and in some places it's a nuisance and is being legally harvested."

PROPELLER WOUNDS — Animal care specialist Robin Friday looks at three deep propeller wounds on the back of a 2-year-old male manatee at an Orlando, Fla., marine facility. The manatee was hit by a boat in the Blue Springs State Park near Orlando. Friday said the animal was being given antibiotics to ward off infection, and was considered to be in critical condition. NATO Group Says Europe Must Pick Up More Of Tab

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO defense ministers today agreed that Western Europe must contribute more to upgrading defense because Washington cannot be expected to maintain its current share of the spending burden.

The ministers, representing all members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization except France and Iceland, also reaffirmed their support for the U.S.-Soviet treaty eliminating intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

In a joint statement at the close of a two-day meeting, the ministers welcomed next week's superpower summit in Washington, saying it is an "important stage" in the development of better East-West relations.

U.S. Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci, in his first NATO meeting since taking over the job last week, said he told his colleagues that congressional budget-cutting efforts would make it difficult for Washington to maintain its current level of spending for the defense of Europe.

"I simply explained the constraints under which we will be operating," he told a news conference before heading home.

Carlucci said that under terms of the recently concluded budget-cutting agreement between the White House and congressional leaders, U.S. defense spending would fall an inflation-adjusted 3.6 percent next year and by 0.8 percent in 1989.

He stressed, however, that he would resist any congressional pressure to reduce the size of U.S. troop strength in Europe.

Lord Carrington, the NATO secretary general, told reporters that the other defense ministers had acknowledged that the U.S. contribution to allied defenses was likely to decline.

"The United States ... cannot be expected to continue to carry as large a share of the common defense burden as it has in the past. That is the context in which our meeting took place," Carrington said.

But Carrington also said public enthusiasm for disarmament was likely to make it more difficult for NATO governments to increase their spending on defense in the future.

"That is the problem that faces us," he said.

Carrington said that of the 11 European nations in NATO's integrated military structure, only four — Norway, Italy, Luxembourg and Turkey — were meeting the NATO goal of increasing defense spending by 3 percent a year.

In view of U.S. budget constraints, the Europeans will have to try harder to increase their contributions to the common defense, Carrington said.

"It will be necessary for the Europeans ... to do more, not least in the burden sharing that is again coming to the fore," he said. "I think this is very well understood" within the alliance.

Carlucci said he briefed the other defense ministers on the agenda for next week's summit in Washington and reviewed prospects for concluding a U.S.-Soviet agreement on strategic, or long-range, nuclear weapons.

He said good progress was being made in this area of arms control, but that it was unlikely an accord could be concluded by next spring — a timetable suggested by some Reagan administration officials.

In their joint statement, the NATO defense ministers did not specify the order of the alliance's arms control objectives. But they singled out conventional arms as a priority and welcomed progress toward convening a new set of East-West negotiations in this area.

Soviet TV Censors Gorbachev's Views On Wife's Position

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet television censored Mikhail S. Gorbachev's comment to NBC News that he and his wife discuss top government affairs, but broadcast in full his statements on touchy topics such as Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

The exchange between the Soviet leader and NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw about Raisa Gorbachev took just a brief part of the private, hourlong interview taped Saturday at the Kremlin and broadcast in full in the United States.

The fact that part of the passage on Mrs. Gorbachev was deleted when the interview was broadcast Tuesday night in the Soviet Union indicates how sensitive her role is in Soviet society.

Mrs. Gorbachev's stylish clothes and frequent presence at her husband's side have delighted the West but caused some grumbling in the Soviet Union, where families of top politicians have traditionally maintained a low profile.

Gorbachev also has broken from the traditional style of Soviet leaders, pushing for greater openness on certain topics and sweeping economic reforms.

During the interview, which was broadcast Monday night in the United States, Gorbachev spoke about such sensitive subjects as arms control, human rights and Afghanistan. The Associated Press obtained from NBC News an English-language text of the interview and compared it with the Soviet television program that was broadcast at 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Near the end of the NBC text, Brokaw asked Gorbachev:

"We've all noticed the conspicuous presence of Mrs. Gorbachev in your travels. Do you go home in the evening and discuss with her national policies, political difficulties and so on in this country?"

"We discuss everything," Gorbachev responded.

Brokaw: "Including Soviet affairs at the highest level?"

Gorbachev: "I think that I have answered your question in total. We discuss everything."

The Soviet tape picks up after the first response, with Brokaw saying, "I'll accept your answer," and going on to the next question on how Gorbachev learns about the United States.

There appeared to be no other deletions in the Soviet tape.

Mrs. Gorbachev, 55, plans to accompany her husband next week on his trip to Washington, where he will sign a historical agreement with President Reagan eliminating the superpowers' shorter- and medium-range nuclear missiles.

She is an intelligent woman knowledgable about politics, according to foreigners who have met her.

Mrs. Gorbachev, who studied sociology at Moscow State University and later taught there, has also taken a prominent part in cultural affairs.

But for many people in the Soviet Union, which remains deeply conservative on the social roles of men and women, Mrs. Gorbachev has no place with her husband on trips abroad or in taking a highly visible place in Soviet society.

During the Soviet TV broadcast, viewers heard Gorbachev say the 115,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan could come out "very quickly" if the United States wants the issue solved and stops interfering in the country's affairs.

Soviet troops intervened in Afghanistan in December 1979, ostensibly at the request of the Moscow-backed Afghan communist regime and under the auspices of a Friendship Treaty. Soviet troops are now fighting Moslem rebels trying to overthrow the Marxist government.

U.S.-supplied Stinger missiles have allowed the rebel soliders to destroy Soviet warplanes and to force the Soviets to restrict raids on rebel targets.

Gorbachev also discussed the firing of former Moscow Communist Party boss Boris N. Yeltsin last month. Gorbachev said it was not a mistake to sack Yeltsin, who criticized the Communist Party's progress on reforms, and added that it could have happened in any democratic country.

U.S., Soviets Say Data Is Withheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has failed to turn over all the data required to close a nuclear missile agreement at next week's summit meeting, Secretary of State George P. Shultz says.

In Moscow, a senior arms control official attacked Shultz's statement and said the United States is keeping back important information.

"We must have that data," Shultz said Tuesday as he also sharply criticized Iran for the way it has dealt with a U.N. call for a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf.

"The Iranians, I think, are deliberately making a monkey out of the United Nations and I don't like that," Shultz said in an interview with three news agencies.

He also criticized the Soviets, saying they had helped Iran give U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and the U.N. Security Council "a runaround."

Shultz referred to Iran's hedging on whether it intends to observe a cease-fire in its seven-year war with Iraq that the Security Council ordered on July 20.

The Soviets had promised to turn over the missile information by the end of last week. Shultz said he could not explain the holdup.

"We don't quite see what is so difficult," Shultz said. "We don't know why."

"As far as this information is concerned, evidently the secretary of state was misled," Victor Karpov, head of the Foreign Ministry's arms control department, said in a statement carried today by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

"The Soviet delegation has available all necessary data to be included in the memorandum on agreement in connection with the treaty," Karpov said.

"The exchange of data is going on on a mutual basis," he said. "The American side gives us some data, and, at the same time, similar data is given to the United States."

However, he added, "there is one little detail. On some issues, the United States hasn't yet provided us with the necessary information. Consequently, we are holding back similar information."

ANGELS AND SNOWFLAKES — Members of the N.C. chapter of Embroiderers Guild of America were making plans to decorate a Christmas tree at the Ronald McDonald House over 1½ year ago. Angels, snowflakes and candy cane ornaments made of Battenburg lace, pull thread, needlepoint, cross stitch, silk and metal threads and crochet and ribbon were created and designed by guild members for the tree. Additional ornaments will be added each year. The group consists of women from Greenville, Goldsboro and Washington, N.C. Decorating the tree, left to right, are Polly Burke, standing, Janie Adams and Blackie Smith. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Trio Fends Off Chill

Pat's Pointers

Pat Trexler

When it's chilly outside, it's time to step out in this sporty crochet hat and scarf set to fend off winter in style. It's so much fun to make and wear, you'll find yourself wishing for a wintry day!

The ribbed-look fringed scarf drapes beautifully and is completely reversible. Two hats — one brimmed and the other cuffed — are offered. A cloud-soft, sport-weight brushed acrylic yarn is used to complete this snuggly trio in no time at all, using sizes N and J crochet hooks. All three are machine washable and dryable.

To obtain directions for making the Toasty Trio, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-112987 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. C-112987 by sending a check or money order for $10.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and brushed acrylic yarn in your choice of off-white or jade.

Dear Pat: Can you tell me what "carry-along" crochet is? I overheard one lady telling another that it was her favorite type of crochet. — Curious in Pittsburgh.

Dear Curious: Carry-along crochet, portable crochet, granny squares and motif crochet are all terms used to describe the type of crochet done in any of a variety of separate geometric shapes that are then joined to create a finished item.

Just a few squares joined in a long rectangle will make a scarf; make more, and you can have an afghan. You can even create vests, skirts, sweaters, caps or tote bags. Home accessories, too, such as pillow covers, bedspreads, tablecloths or place mats are ideal adaptations of this tried-and-true crochet favorite.

Traditional granny squares are great for using up odds and ends of leftover yarns. For those who have never done this type of crochet, try the following directions for a basic square.

Starting at the center with knitting worsted-weight yarn in Color A and a size H hook, make a chain of 4 stitches. Join to the first chain made with a slip stitch, thus forming a ring.

Round 1: Use the same color. Step 1: Chain 3 and work 2 double crochets into the ring. Step 2: Chain 2 and work 3 double crochets into the ring. Repeat Step 2 twice more. End the round with a chain-2 and join with a slip stitch to the top of the chain-3 made at the beginning of the round. Fasten off Color A.

Round 2: Join in a strand of Color B in any of the chain-2 spaces of the previous round. Step 1: In the same space, chain 3, work 2 double crochets, chain 2, work 3 double crochets, chain 1, for first corner. Step 2: In the next chain-2 space of previous row, work 3 double crochets, chain 2, work 3 double crochets, chain 1 (second corner made). Make 2 more corners by repeating Step 2 twice more; join with a slip stitch to the top of chain-3 made at beginning of this round. Fasten off Color B.

Round 3: Join in a strand of Color C in any of the chain-2 corner spaces of the previous round. Repeat Step 1 of Round 2. Step 2: In the next chain-1 space, work 3 double crochets, chain 1. Step 3: In next chain-2 space, work a corner of 3 double crochets, chain 2, 3 double crochets, chain 1. Repeat Steps 2 and 3 twice more and end by repeating Step 2 once more. Join to first corner with a slip stitch in top of beginnin chain-3. Fasten off Color C.

Round 4: Join a strand of Color D in any of the chain-2 corner spaces of the previous round. Repeat Step 1 of Round 2. Step 2: In next chain-1 space between corners, work 3 double crochets, chain 1. Step 3: Work corner as in Step 3 of Round 3. Repeat Steps 2 and 3 twice more and end by repeating Step 2 once more. Join to first corner with a slip stitch in top of beginning chain-3. Fasten off Color D. Repeat Round 4 until square is desired size, alternating colors for each round.

This is just one of any number of patterns for making the squares, but it will serve to give you the general idea. Any type of yarn can be used depending upon the use you plan for the finished item. Many people make up squares whenever they have a little spare time, deciding later what they will do with them.

Smokers Choke Festivities

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I expect the Christmas holidays will be a lonely time — my own choice. Although I would thoroughly enjoy the companionship and festivities, I shall decline invitations for one reason: Chain-smokers make the air lethal.

Last year I spent the day after Christmas taking costly tests to determine that my chest pains, irregular heartbeat and inability to breathe were not a heart attack, but severe acute bronchitis, induced by several hours in a smoke-filled room.

I never told my hostess this; she's a chain-smoker.

Abby, I will be a hermit forever rather than risk that again. The pain is unbelievable.

To ask people to refrain from smoking in their own homes is unthinkable. They would defend their right to smoke, and my right to stay home!

If I ask people not to smoke in my home, they won't accept my invitations.

Since families consist of both smokers and non-smokers, this is a socially divisive issue. Tell me, Abby, how do you and your readers handle it? — STILL BREATHING

DEAR STILL: Here's how I handle it: There are no ashtrays, cigarettes, matches or lighters visible in our home. When smokers ask if we "mind" if they smoke, we escort them out on the patio where they will find the customary patio furniture, and ashtrays as big as birdbaths.

And, when I am guest in the home of people who permit smoking, I keep my mouth shut, and avoid smokers as much as possible.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been laid off for nearly a year and we are having a really rough time of it. Is there a tactful way to stop exchanging Christmas gifts? We can't afford to send any gifts this year, and we don't want anyone to send us anything. So how can we get the word out? — SHORT IN FORT WORTH

DEAR SHORT: I've made this suggestion in previous years: Come early December, write a note to those on your Christmas gift list saying: "We are thankful for folks with whom we can be honest. We're not in a position to send Christmas gifts this year (nor do we expect any), but please accept our love and sincere good wishes for a happy, healthy, blessed holiday."

DEAR ABBY: I have a 13-year-old son who is in the eighth grade. Yesterday he talked in study hall, so as a punishment, he had to stand at the chalkboard with a small piece of chalk between his nose and the blackboard for a half-hour for three days in a row.

The person who imposed this punishment on him was not a regular teacher; she just watches the kids during study hall period.

What I want to know is this: Would that be considered some kind of child abuse? If so, how can I stop this from happening again? I am very upset about this and need to know. — VIOLET

DEAR VIOLET: It doesn't matter what you call it; humiliating a student in the manner you described is inappropriate punishment for any kind of misconduct. Report her to the school principal.

Women Business Owners Learn Of Growth Area

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Women business owners in the Greenville area heard that their area is the fastest growing segment in the small business community at a recent program given by Sandra Roork of Charlotte.

Mrs. Roork is owner of The Speakers Network in Charlotte. She is also president of the Charlotte Women Business Owners Association.

"Between 1975 and 1985, there was a 76 percent increase in women-owned businesses. This rate is three times greater than for the rate of increase in self-employed men during the same period. Today, women officially account for at least 28 percent of the nation's small businesses, according to the Small Business Administration. A recent verbal estimate coming from the SBA puts this number at one-third," said Mrs. Roork.

"About half of the businesses owned by women are in the service sector — the growth sector of our economy. Another 28 percent are in the wholesale and retail trade. However, women are venturing into new areas of ownership including finance, manufacturing, construction and agriculture," she said.

The fastest growth areas for women entreprenuers are computer-date processing, credit reporting, collection services and construction.

"Factors contributing to this growth rate include women's increased participation in the labor force, changes in society, technology and industry. Two of the most notable trends are the use of the computer and a growing interest in home-based businesses. Because these trends are expected to continue, women-owned businesses can be expected to continue to make significant contributions to the economy. More than half of the women-owned businesses operate from their own residence," she said.

"One study indicated that a 'second generation' of women business owners has emerged in the business arena, one that is barely distinguishable from the average male entrepreneur of today. If there are differences, those differences may favor women. The four-year study indicated in a comparison of new start-up businesses, only one-fourth of the businesses owned by men survived," said Mrs. Roork.

According to SBA, a typical women business owner profile includes women 36-years-old or older, married, has owened her business for 13 years and was a paid employee 11 years before owning a business, has 14.6 years of education, has excellent credit rating and comes from a family that owns a business.

In describing her business, Mrs. Roork said, "A speaker's bureau means we provide speakers for meetings, conventions and training sessions throughout the Southeast United States. We work with meeting planners to help them identify the right speaker for their particular function."

"We actively list approximately 80 speakers from across the country. All are excellent speakers, but all are not right for every group," she said.

"We can suggest persons in such areas as communications-human relations, entertainment, future, humor, image, leadership management, media, motivation-inspiration, patriotic, public speaking, sales-marketing and time management," she said.

SANDRA ROORK

Some of the speakers listed by Mrs. Roork's firm are Ty Boyd, Dr. Joyce Brothers, Dr. Wayne Dyer, Charles Kuralt, Irving R. Levine, Art Linkletter, Bones McKinney, Hope Mihalap, Bess Myerson and Jeanne Robertson.

"By virtue of hearing each of the speakers, we can save our clients time in choosing the right speaker for their needs," said Mrs. Roork.

Family Plays Musical Cars

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Someone asked me how the kids were and I told them, "They're all employed and their cars are running." I remember the day well. It was a Tuesday, Oct. 13, around noon.

Since that day we have played the longest game of Musical Cars in the history of the world. For some reason, we can't seem to get four wheels moving on the same car at the same time.

My husband and I have three cars. Don't get too choked up over that. One runs when you turn the key in the ignition. The other two are too young to be classics and too old to run. Whenever we try to trade them in, we get big laughs. We list them as dependents on our tax return.

One child is going to sell his car, but the car won't stand the strain of running daily. It's a big day when it stalls. That means the motor turns over. So, he borrowed our car number three and parked his in our garage until a buyer can be found.

Another one said his transmission sounded funny and he took our car number two. While he had car number two, the bolt holding the spare tire fell off and had to go in before it flapped open and hit something.

Car number one followed him to the garage where it was discovered there was also an oil leak, so we left car number two. The two of us went home in car number one.

Car number one is a two-seater and we couldn't pick up two other people for dinner, so the one with the car waiting for a buyer returned home with car number three so we could accommodate our guests and then returned car number one the next morning.

When the transmission was fixed in our son's car, we drove him out in car number one and then brought it home. That was good luck because the hubcaps had been ripped off car number three and he had to borrow car number two.

Some naive people in this country think Americans sit around worrying about the Persian Gulf, the economy, the peace talks. We are concerned with our lifeline to the outside world ... our cars. Sever the umbilical cord to our car and we bleed to death.

And what has your car done for you today? We pay exorbitant insurance for it, not to mention backbreaking monthly installments. We pay to have it parked and garaged, pay traffic tickets when we ask it to speed up, and wait in lines for emissions tests. We pay to have it registered and outfitted in license plates, to have it washed, waxed and towed when it won't run. We install tape decks, telephones, sheepskin covers for the seats, sun screens and designer floor mats, not to mention security systems to ward off those who would steal it. (It would serve them right!)

There's no doubt about it. Cars have become one of the major religions in this country. My motor turned over today. Say hallelujah!

Bracelets Are Her Business

By SUZANNE BOYLE
Belleville News-Democrat

SMITHTON, Ill. (AP) — Julie Heiligenstein may not part with the shirt off her back, but she's more than willing to sell you the bracelet on her wrist.

The 17-year-old senior at Governor French Academy in Belleville shows signs of being a born entrepreneur.

Since the beginning of the year she has created and sold about 45 of her one-of-a-kind bracelets, made from huge safety pins adorned with beads that on one wrist may be rhinestone-encrusted and on another may resemble tiny propellers or flower petals.

With a firm handshake and a ready smile, the slender teen-ager will pass you one of her business cards — if you happen to be a boutique owner or store buyer.

"I want people I meet when I go into a shop to take me seriously," Julie said, sitting in the living room of her parents' home in Smithton.

Jules & Co. — "My friends call me Jules" — has sold the thick 2-inch-wide bracelets to a junior and preteen shop in Belleville, as well as a shop in a St. Louis shopping center and boutiques in Palm Beach and Fort Worth.

She has shied away from approaching larger stores to avoid being overburdened with demand and perhaps losing the uniqueness of her work.

No sales pitch is necessary. Her best advertisement is the wristwear itself. Julie is her own walking mannequin. "I've sold more off my wrist than in any shop," she said, surprised but pleased by her success.

When women stop her in the streets and ask whether her bracelet is for sale, she willingly slips it off and pockets the cash. Sentimentality doesn't get in the way of a sale.

"I really don't have a favorite. I sell whatever I have on." On especially frustrating days, when she can't seem to come up with the right design for her next piece, Julie blames the whole idea of making the bracelets on her older sister, Christie, 19.

In January, the two were walking along a sunny street in Palm Beach, Fla., when Christie spied a bracelet in a shop window.

"Christie said she loved it and wanted me to buy it for her. I think it cost about $50 so I said, 'No, it's too expensive, but I think I can make you one.'"

True to her word, she rummaged through arts and crafts stores and came home with elastic, safety pins and beads. She worked off and on for two days to complete the bracelet. She hasn't made one like it since.

"Each one is different. I've never made two that are alike," Julie said proudly, fingering some of the unusual beads.

That's fine with friends, who after seeing Christie's bracelet, started asking for bracelets of their own. And that's fine with Julie.

"They save up their allowance money and buy one." The bracelets are not cheap. Julie sells them to all the shops for the same price, but their markup brings the retail price to between $45 and $65.

There is no secret to making them, she said. But after seeing some of her friends try to imitate her work, she realized that the arrangement of beads strung on the safety pins, as well as how the beaded pins are placed among other pins, gives each piece its special look.

The length of time it takes to make a bracelet, which typically contains 90 pins — depends on the patient teen's frame of mind. "If I'm in the mood and creative, I can make one in 45 minutes," she said. But one made of hundreds of tiny bugle beads took days.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices retreated in quiet early trading today in reaction to the dollar's weakness in foreign exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which gained nearly nine points on Tuesday, was off 4.48 to 1,837.86 in the first half hour of trading on Wall Street.

In the broader market, about two stocks fell in value for every one that rose in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange shares, with 686 down, 358 up and 471 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 19.24 million shares at 10 a.m. EST.

The U.S. currency had firmed in early trading overseas but fell off amid speculation that West Germany's central bank won't cut a key interest rate as had been widely expected.

Among actively traded blue-chip stocks, Exxon fell ½ to 36½; Eastman Kodak was down ½ to 36½; International Business Machines declined ¼ to 111; and American Telephone and Telegraph was down ⅛ to 26¾.

E.F. Hutton fell ¼ to 27⅜. The securities firm said it plans to make an announcement amid reports that it has agreed to be acquired by rival Shearson Lehman Brothers for about $1 billion.

The NYSE composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 0.48 to 130.02. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index stood at 241.01, down 0.67.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 8.79 points to 1,842.34. Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 10 to 9 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 149.87 million shares, compared to 268.91 million on Monday.

Quick Action Promised On Cuts

Reagan said the current version of the bill "clearly violates both the spirit and the terms" of the deficit-reduction agreement.

House officials have said, however, that they intend to amend the bill to conform with the agreement.

The provision in the tax-increase bill affecting the greatest number of individuals would extend for three years the expiring 3 percent tax on telephone service. Most of the burden would fall on upper-income people and corporations.

The administration contends the limited increase in the payroll tax, which finances the Medicare program, could be especially harmful to small business. Half the tax increase would be paid by every employee earning over $45,000 a year and half by the employer.

Under present law, the Medicare tax of 1.45 percent applies only to the first $45,000 of wages that a worker earns in 1988. The provision in the Finance Comittee bill would eliminate that wage ceiling and apply the tax to all earnings. That would bring in $8.5 billion over two years.

The administration dislikes several other provisions, including one that would repeal the "completed-contract" accounting method, a special benefit for defense contractors. The Treasury Department also may oppose a section that would repeal tax benefits available to manufacturers, real estate dealers and others that sell on the installment plan.

Dropping provisions to which the administration has announced its opposition would knock $12.3 billion from the two-year, $30.8 billion tax increase the committee approved in October. Striking the installment-sales provision would cost another $4.6 billion.

A $76 billion, two-year deficit-cutting agreement reached last month by Reagan and congressional leaders requires a $23 billion tax increase. The committee's task is to decide which taxes to raise.

As part of their contribution to cutting the deficit, Finance Committee members are forgoing a jealously guarded perquisite: the right to add special tax-cut amendments to major tax bills. The panel is reluctantly agreeing to drop from the package any provision that would not cut the deficit.

"There was a lot of moaning — including on the part of the chairman," Bentsen told reporters after Tuesday's closed-door session. "But that's part of the deal" with Reagan.

The agreement would bar, for example, Bentsen's proposal to repeal the "windfall-profits" tax on the oil industry.

Special Olympics Soccer To Begin

The winner of Friday's competition will represent Greenville-Pitt County at the State Special Olympics Games at UNC-Chapel Hill in May.

The soccer teams have been training since September. They are part of the expanded local Special Olympics training program sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and the Pitt County schools. whatever molecules were present so they emitted light. The emitted light traveled through the window to a light detector, revealing the makeup and amount of the molecules that were present. When excited by light or other radiation, every chemical emits light in a characteristic pattern of wavelengths, or colors.

The time between the first and second laser pulses was gradually increased, allowing the researchers to see exactly when new chemicals were formed.

"We're seeing the process itself of chemical reaction instead of simply the products," Bernstein said.

Zewail emphasized his research is only the latest in a series of studies aimed at understanding chemical reactions. Dudley Herschbach, Yuan Lee and John Polanyi won the 1986 Nobel Prize in chemistry for developing non-laser methods to study how chemical reactions occur.

"What Zewail has succeeded in doing is looking at these details in real time," not after they occur, as other scientists have done, Kinsey said.

Economy

It also provides $4 billion in additional loans to small and medium-sized companies, also at low interest rates, the officials said.

The loans would be available through the government's rankfurt-based National Bank for Reconstruction.

Government sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the plan was agreed to Tuesday in a meeting of Bangeman and Stoltenberg.

Also present at the three-hour meeting were Labor Minister Norbert Bluem, Postal Minister Christian Schwarz-Schilling, and state secretaries from the various ministries.

The Bundesbank acted on Tuesday to bolster the dollar on local currency markets. That increased speculation among traders that the bank would cut its discount rate at a meeting of its governing council on Thursday.

line residential customers and from $6.92 to $10.87 for business customers, according to Terry, based on the size of the exchange serving the customer.

The 7.4 percent reduction in local service rates would mean a drop of from 47 cents to 75 cents a month in local service charges for single-line residential customers and from $1.15 to $1.80 a month for single line business customers. Again, the amount of decrease will depend on the size of exchange.

For example, residential customers on Ocracoke Island, the company's smallest exchange, would see monthly local service charges drop by 47 cents, while residential customers in Fayetteville, the largest of the company's exchanges, would see a 75 cent reduction.

Greenville residential customers will see their local service bills drop by 68-cents a month (from $12.11 to $11.43), while single line business customers will receive a reduction of $1.66 a month (from $29.25 to $27.95) if the cuts are approved, according to Grady Strickland, Carolina Telephone's district commercian manager in Greenville.

Carolina Telephone and AT&T, a long-distance company, are the only two telephone companies in the state to voluntarily agree to reduce rates as a result of the tax reform act savings, according to Robert P. Gruber, executive director of the utilities commission's public staff.

Gruber said, "The other telephone companies asked the commission to be able to keep the increase by offsetting the reduced taxes with increases in other expenses." But the commission, in October, ordered reductions.

Other phone companies proposals include a 67 cents drop for residential customers and a $1.96 decrease for General Telephone Co. business customers in Durham County and a $1.25 drop in residential rates and a $3.44 cut in business rates for Southern Bell customers in Raleigh.

Assurance Society of the United States, which had said they would be interested in discussing a merger with Hutton if the talks with Shearson failed.

Once completed, the deal would leave Shearson with a retail brokerage force exceeding 12,000, making it one of the nation's largest brokerage firms along with Merrill Lynch, and would greatly enhance its money-management operation.

The report said Shearson would be expected to make large cuts in Hutton's staff of 19,000, while attempting to hold on to Hutton's top stockbrokers and other key employees.

The 84-year-old Hutton has been plagued by inconsistent financial results in recent years, and by a major 1985 scandal in which it pleaded guilty to 2,000 counts of federal mail and wire fraud stemming from a check-overdraft scheme.

Hutton indicated last year after breaking off informal talks with Shearson about a possible $1.5 billion merger that it wanted to remain independent. But continuing financial woes, exacerbated by the stock market's October plunge and two severe bond market slumps this year, prompted the firm to seek a buyer or a major infusion of capital.

Edwards Leads Indiana By Irish

By The Associated Press

Now that Steve Alford is in the NBA, Indiana University Coach Bobby Knight is looking for a new sharpshooter. He may have one in freshman guard Jay Edwards.

After spending the first half on the bench, Edwards entered the game with 9:49 to play Tuesday night with the fifth-ranked Hoosiers leading Notre Dame 58-53. Once down by 14 points in the second half, Notre Dame eventually narrowed the margin to 60-56 with 5:50 remaining.

"We needed this game," the 6-foot-4 Edwards said. "This was our first big game this season. We've got to prove to the rest of the collegiate level that we're ready to play."

Edwards proved he was ready, scoring seven consecutive points and 12 of Indiana's final 16 as the Hoosiers short-circuited the Irish comeback to emerge with a 76-59 victory.

"I came in there prepared to play. I kept my mind in the game, the first half when I didn't get in," Edwards said.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 2 Kentucky whipped Cincinnati 101-77, No. 6 Iowa stopped Drake 70-59, No. 16 Kansas crushed Pomona-Pitzer 94-38 and No. 18 Oklahoma routed Penn State 93-59.

Edwards had two 3-pointers in his spurt and was 5-of-6 from the field.

"I felt that in the last five minutes we didn't do some things right at both ends," Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said. "Then Edwards gave them a spark."

The loss left Phels 1-7 against Indiana and winless in six games at Bloomington, where the homestanding Hoosiers have won 22 straight.

"We just broke down defensively and we missed some key shots. We were not active on the boards," Phelps said.

Indiana, 2-0, spoiled the season-opener for Notre Dame by outscoring the visitors 16-3 in the final 5:07.

Keith Smart led the Hoosiers with 18 points while assigned to guard Notre Dame's David Rivers, who scored 24.

"I think Rivers is a very, very tough player to play against," Knight said. "He's one of the handful of individual players around the country that really commands your attention. You figure out defensively what you're going to do and as the game unfolds. He mades the game difficult to play because you've got to help out on him."

Rivers' outside shooting kept the Irish in the game early. The 6-foot guard scored 14 of Notre Dame's first 21 points and his fourth 3-pointer of the night gave the Irish a 21-20 lead with 9:35 remaining in the first half.

But Indiana switched Smart to Rivers and the Irish star went more than 14 minutes without scoring. But Rivers had a 3-point goal and a three-point play in Notre Dame's second-half comeback.

No. 2 Kentucky 101, Cincinnati 77

Guard Rex Chapman scored 22 points and center Rob Lock added 18 as Kentucky made 35 of 41 free throws.

"It was great for our confidence," Chapman said of Kentucky's free-throw shooting. "We know if we're going to be a great team, we have to make our free throws and this gave us confidence."

Kentucky Coach Eddie Sutton also was pleased with his team's performance at the line.

"The difference between being a great team or a good team is how well you shoot those free pitches," he said.

The Wildcats, 2-0, opened a 73-50 lead on center LeRon Ellis' inside basket with 12:06 remaining in the game. Although Cincinnati battled back within 77-63 on guard Roger McClendon's 3-point goal at 7:48, the Bearcats could get no closer and Kentucky went on a 16-5 spurt.

Cincinnati was led by center Cedric Glover's 22 points, 18 in the second half.

No. 6 Iowa 70, Drake 59

Roy Marble scored 19 points, 17 in the first half, to lead the Hawkeyes, 4-0, over the Bulldogs, 1-1. Marble, a junior forward, scored six points to give Iowa a 6-3 lead and the Hawkeyes never trailed thereafter.

Drake drew within 11 points three times in the second half, the last time on a jump shot by freshman guard Curtis Stuckey with 13 seconds to play. Iowa took its biggest lead of the game at 59-42 with 6:53 left on a long jump shot by Al Lorenzen.

Walter James led Drake with 22 points.

No. 16 Kansas 94, Pomona-Pitzer 38

Kevin Pritchard and Marvin Branch scored 17 points each as Kansas crushed its Division III opponent, to win its 49th consecutive home game. That extended the nation's longest home winning streak and the longest ever by a Big Eight team.

Kansas, which lost two straight games last weekend during the Maui Classic in Hawaii, improved to 2-2. The Sagehens dropped to 1-4.

Pomona-Pitzer's Rick Duque led all scorers with 18 points and was the only Sagehen in double figures. Kansas' Danny Manning scored 12 points while playing most of the first half and just three minutes of the second.

The Jayhawks were never in trouble, scoring the first 14 points of the second half to extend a 45-25 halftime lead to 59-37 with 15:57 left.

No. 18 Oklahoma 93, Penn State 59

Ricky Grace scored 24 points and Mookie Blaylock had 23 to lead Oklahoma past. Grace added eight assists and Blaylock had six for the 2-0 Sooners.

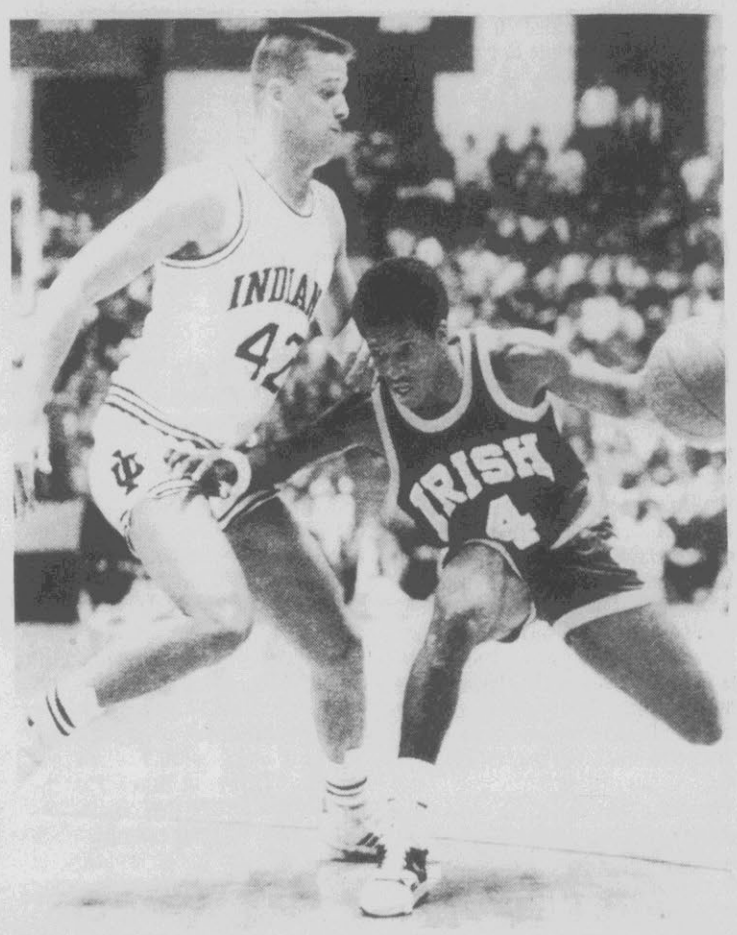

Oklahoma broke open the game with a 21-10 run at the start of the second half, taking a 57-38 lead on a jumper by forward Harvey Grant with 12:51 left.

Penn State, 1-1, was led by junior forward Tom Hovasse with 20 points, including four of seven from 3-point range.

Unranked Teams

Freshman Darryl Oliver made a layup as time expired to give Cheyney State, 2-1, a 91-89 overtime victory over Delaware State, 0-1, and center Dan Weiss sank two free throws with two seconds left to lead Santa Clara, 1-1, to a 72-71 upset over 2-2 Stanford.

Guard Craig Davis' 15-foot jumper with six seconds remaining gave Pepperdine, 2-0, a 91-89 victory over California Irvine, and center Jim Usevitch scored 26 points as Brigham Young downed Utah State 96-92, giving Coach LaDell Anderson his third straight win against the Aggies. Anderson is a former Utah State player and coach.

Wooten, Rose Nip 'Dogs

FAYETTEVILLE — Errol Wooten scored the winning basket and Brian Wille came up with a key steal to give Rose High School a 50-48 basketball victory over Terry Sanford in the opening game of the year for the Rampants.

Rose's girls also came up with a victory, downing the Lady Bulldogs, 43-33.

Rose overcame an early Terry Sanford lead in the game, moved out into as much as a seven-point lead, only to see that vanish in the final minutes of play.

But Wooten, who led the Rampants with 22 points, hit a basket with about 30 seconds to go. Sanford held for a final shot, but Wille came up with a steal with seven seconds to go and Rose ran out the clock to preserve the victory.

Sanford built up a 15-12 lead in the first period of the contest, but Rose came back in the second frame. The Rampants outhit the Bulldogs, 14-10 and pushed into a slim 26-25 lead at the horn.

In the third period, it remained close with Rose taking a 40-37 lead into the final eight minutes. The Rampants quickly built their lead out to seven, but Sanford rallied and finally knotted it but could never take the lead. Wooten then broke the 48-48 tie and Rose went on to win.

Wooten, who hit three 3-point baskets, was the only Rampant in double figures. William McAllister led Sanford with 20 points while Mark Mocrik added 10. James Teel came up with five steals in the second half to help spark the Rampants.

The Rampettes built up a slim 13-10 lead in the first period of their game with Sanford. The action slowed in the second period, with Rose holding a 9-3 advantage. That left the Rampettes in charge, 22-13, at the half.

In the third period, Rose managed only one field goal while Sanford scored seven points and pulled back to within 24-20. But Rose outhit them to the horn, 19-13, to preserve the lead and the win.

Tina Smith led Rose with 13 points while Bullard had 10 for Sanford.

"Our pressure hurt them in the fourth quarter and Andrea Rogers and Tina Smith came up with some big baskets in the period," Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "We did well for a first game, but I was disappointed in the rebounding." Smith led Rose on the boards with nine.

Rose returns to action on Friday, traveling to Eastern Wayne.

Conley In New Role Of Favorite

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
(One of a series)

HOLLYWOOD — Winning the state title last year was a new feeling for D.H. Conley and head coach Walter Claybrook. Now the Vikings find themselves in another new situation — being one of the preseason conference favorites.

"Last year was something entirely new for us," Claybrook said. "This year is something new for us also. We've never been at the top. The only thing I think I've mentioned to the guys is they have to get their minds right.

"In the past, we've always talked about getting ready for the Havelocks and the West Cravens. It's still new to us this year."

When last seen in March of 1986, the Vikings were celebrating at midcourt of the Smith Center in Chapel Hill, following their 64-55 win over North Gaston that earned them the state 3-A title. But that was then and this is now, according to Claybrook.

"We really haven't been talking about last year and living in the past," Claybrook said. "(But) I don't know how much pressure guys are putting on themselves."

Gone from last year's team are forward Ricky Farrow and guard Troy Ebron, two of the leading scorers on that squad. Also gone is sixth-man Bronswell Patrick, who is attending Pitt Community College in his final semester.

"Ricky and Troy are only two out of five but those two out of five handled the ball 60-70 percent of the time for us," Claybrook said.

"We're going to end up losing three instead of two. Patrick is not there. He was the sixth man. He was valuable. He could play two or three postions."

But even with those losses, the cupboard is far from bare.

Back from last year's team are starting center Phil Medlin, a 6-8 senior who has already signed with Wake Forest and averaged just over 11 points a game. Also returning on the front line is 6-3 sophomore forward Paul Merritt. The other returning starter is senior guard James Smith.

D.H. Conley
□Conference: Coastal 3-A
□1987 Record: 22-8
□Coach: Walter Claybrook
□Key Losses: F Ricky Farrow, G Troy Ebron
□Top Returnees: C — Phil Medlin, F Paul Merritt, G James Smith, F-G Jonathon Bonner, F Donald Clemens, G Sherwood Wilder.
□Top Newcomers: G — Emerson Merritt, F — Terry Williams.

Smith played off-guard last year but is being tried at the point this season as a replacement for Ebron.

Also competing for the point guard slot is 5-9 junior Emerson Merritt, along with 5-11 senior Sherwood Wilder, 6-2 sophomore Bershuan Thompson and 5-11 senior Ed West.

"Right now, the big question is the guard spots," Claybrook said. "We're trying not to talk about anybody replacing Troy. What we're saying is here is a postion open for competition. We're just working different people in."

"Right off the top, he probably has the inside track," the coach said. "He's going to have to have some game experience."

But Merritt could also play into the situation. "He's got a lot of potential," Claybrook said. "He's basically inexperienced. He's got the potential to do it. He has to get some game experience and learn to think more like a point guard."

As for off-guard, a lot depends on who wins the point guard job. Between the above candidates, two starters will emerge.

Another option for the Vikings is going to a big lineup and brining in 6-3 Jonathon Bonner at the off-guard.

Moving to the frontcourt, things are much more settled.

"That should be our strength," Claybrook said. "Of course you have Phil. I think he's shown improvement over last year. He's got a wider variety of shots and he can handle the ball."

He will be joined by Paul Merritt and Bonner.

"He (Merritt) is the kind of guy that if he keeps working, he'll do well. He's already drawn some interest (from college recruiters). His biggest assett is his aggressiveness."

Completing the front court are seniors Donald Clemens (6-2½) and Major Best (6-3). They are joined by 6-3 sophomore Terry Williams, who got a late start due to the football playoffs.

"Donald has improved," Claybrook said. "In practice he has looked more improved than anybody and Major Best also has improved."

Last year, the Vikings used the running game as a key component of their success and Claybrook would like to see that develop again this year.

"We're going to try because that's the way the guys enjoy playing," he said. "But if it looks like we're not going to have (the necessary) ball handling, we'll slow it up."

Claybrook said he hopes to get all the kinks worked out before the Vikings begin conference play and that means playing a lot of people early.

"We definitely want to win but i think it is important to give people a chance to play," Claybrook said. "I thought that was something that helped us last year."

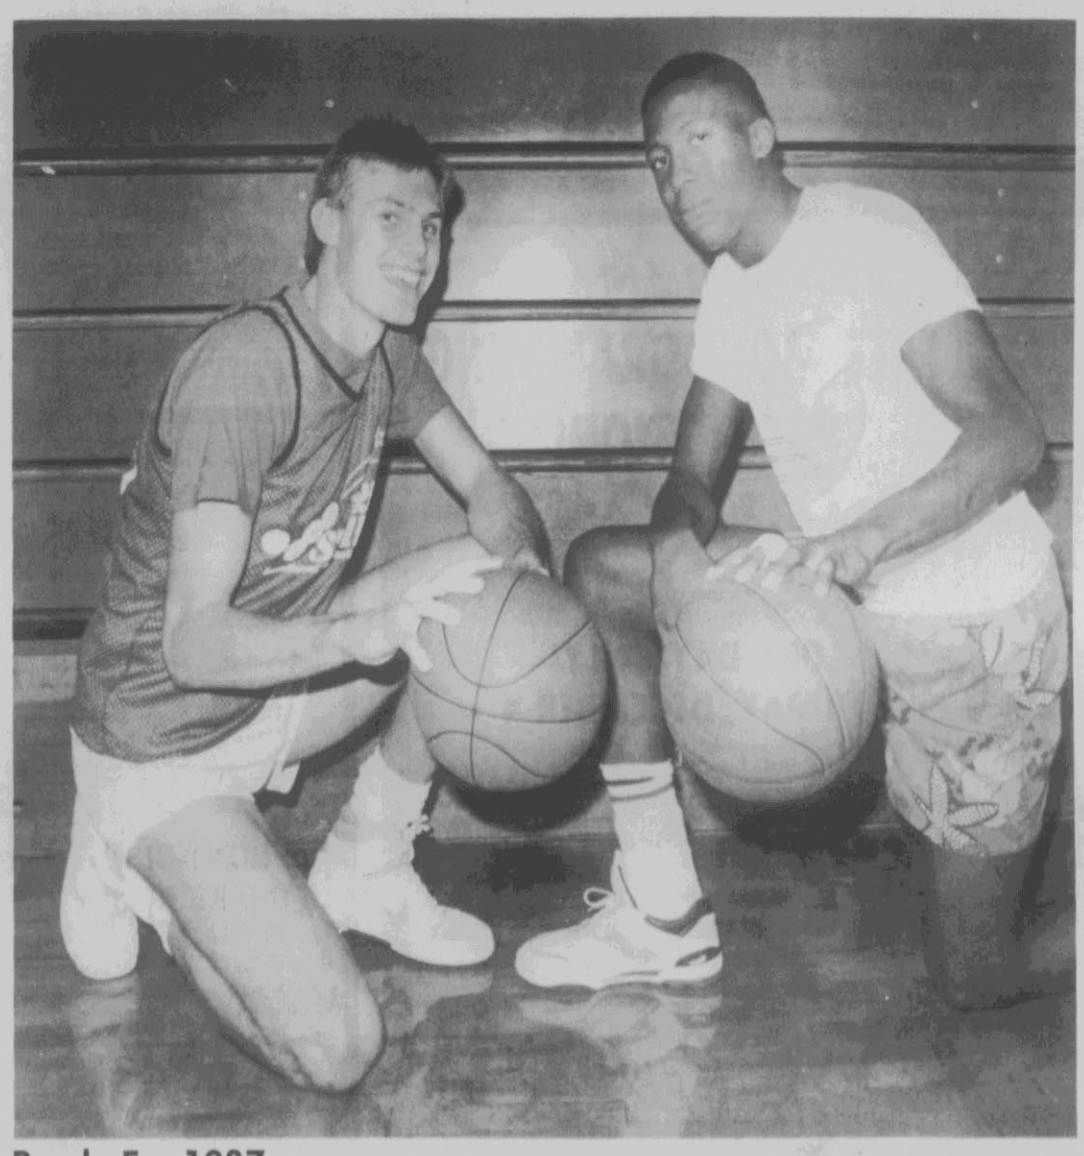

Conley was set to open the season Friday against Ayden-Grifton, but the football playoffs have thrown a wrench into that. The Vikings are now scheduled to begin play Tuesday at Greene Central.

In the coastal conference, the Vikings' big challenges will once again come from Havelock and West Craven, with East Carteret and perhaps Washington playing a spoiler role.

Havelock returns a talented frontcourt led by 6-9 junior Anthony Robinson and 6-5 Derek Borden.

West Craven, led by the return of 6-8 Keith Roundtree and 5-10 point guard Derrick Booker, should again challenge both Conley and Havelock.

East Carteret, keyed by the frontcourt duo of 6-6 Billey Ellison and 6-5 Lewis Jones, along with Washington and 6-4 center Ryan Dixon, should challenge for playoff spots.

Oliver Leads Tech To 79-71 Win

ATLANTA (AP) — Brian Oliver scored nine points during a rally midway through the second half that carried Georgia Tech past Jackson State 79-71 in college basketball Tuesday night.

Tech led by as many as 10 points during the first half, and held a 39-32 advantage at intermission.

After a rally that saw State's Kirk Mitchell score seven points in a row, Tyrone Kidd hit a three-point goal to tie the game 52-52.

But Tech's Craig Neal then made a 19-foot jumper which put the Yellow Jackets up 54-52 with 8:19 to go, a lead than was not relinquished.

Oliver then made six free throws and a three-point goal during a stretch that gave Tech its biggest lead of the night with 3:41 left, 71-58.

Jackson State stayed in the game primarily because of the team's rebounding success. The Tigers outrebounded Tech 37-26, and had 20 offensive rebounds.

Oliver led all scorers with 21 points. Tom Hammonds added 19 points for Tech, Duane Ferrell had 15 and Dennis Scott 10.

Demetrious Abrams led Jackson State with 18 points, Kidd had 15 and Dwight Jimmar scored 14.

Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said his team, 2-1, was lucky to win this game. He said the Yellow Jackets were outplayed and outcoached.

"It's a win, but we feel very fortunate to get out of there with a win," Cremins said. "A good team usually puts them away but we couldn't put them away. They gave us tremendous problems."

The Tigers, 0-2, put pressure on the Tech defense, Cremins said.

"We wanted to play a quicker game. We tried to do some things defensively but they just got hot and kept on hitting those outside shots," he said.

State Coach John Prince said he was glad his team was not intimidated by Tech, but added he found little satisfaction in that.

Crum's Lawyer Is Board Member

RALEIGH (AP) — The lawyer who negotiated Dick Crum's $800,000 settlement to resign as football coach of the University of North Carolina is a member of the UNC Board of Governors and a former chairman of the UNC-Chapel Hill Board of Trustees.

Durham lawyer Travis Porter, elected to the UNC board by the 1987 General Assembly, said Tuesday he is Crum's attorney and handled the negotiations that ended Crum's tenure after 10 years as head coach. The settlement was announced Monday.

Porter, who said he was the coach's lawyer while a university trustee, before joining the Board of Governors, said his professional relationship with Crum has been proper.

"The Board of Governors does not control athletic department matters at constituent campuses," Porter told the Greensboro News & Record. "The Board of Governors does not vote on coaches' contracts, it does not employ coaches, it does not approve coaches' salaries."

And as a UNC-CH trustee, Porter said, he never was involved in approving coaches' contracts.

"I have never voted on the employment, compensation, contracts, approval of any coach, nor have I ever heard of one being on the agenda or being brought before us," he said. "That's all handled by the athletic director and that office."

The $800,000 settlement, which bought out the last four years of Crum's 10-year contract, is being paid through private funds, not public money. It covers his $87,300-a-year salary and about half his non-salary income related to his position as head football coach.

West Craven Defeats Rams

SNOW HILL — West Craven swept a pair of high school basketball games with Greene Central in the season opener for the Rams Tuesday night.

The West Craven boys took a 59-55 win while the Lady Eagles posted a 52-34 victory.

In the boy's game, Greene Central battled back from a 32-20 halftime deficit to pull within one at 53-52 with just over a minute and half left, but the Rams missed three chances from there to close the gap further as Anthony Jones and Reggie Atkinson missed the tail end of one-and-one free throw attempts and Shay Beaman missed the front end of a one and one.

From there, West Craven was able to hold off the challenges to gain the win.

Keith Roundtree led West Craven with 18 points, while William Brown added 14.

Greene Central was led by Tyrone Hardy's 21 points. Jones added 15 points, including two 3-pointers, while Beaman added 14 points with two 3-pointers.

In the girl's game, West Craven moved out to a 33-13 halftime lead and never looked back.

Greene Central played the Lady Eagles even in the third quarter as both teams totaled 12 points but the Lady Rams could close the gap to only 18 points in the final quarter.

Chundra Crouell led West Craven with 18 points.

Greene Central was led by Chanel Hooker's 13 points.

North Edgecombe and the Bears played it even in the first period of the boys' game, which ended in a 13-13 deadlock. But the Warriors took command in the second quarter, outscoring Bear Grass, 22-9, to charge to a 35-22 halftime lead.

North Edgecmobe rallied to close the gap to 38-35 in the third quarter, but the Bears held them off in the final period, 12-7, to take the win.

Janet Rodgerson led Bear Grass with 27 points while M. Ransome had 20 for North Edgecombe.

The Bears are now 1-2 overall, 0-1 in league play while the girls are 2-1, 1-0. The Bears play host to Chocowinity on Friday.

Crum's Wife Reveals Gag Rule In Buyout

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Former North Carolina football coach Dick Crum's buy-out agreement with the school stipulates that he not talk to the media, his wife, Shirley Crum, says.

"Part of the agreement is that Dick cannot talk to the media," Mrs. Crum told The Fayetteville Times Tuesday by telephone from her Chapel Hill home.

Asked what her husband's future plans are, Mrs. Crum said, "Today is the day not to even ask me. We're extremely disturbed about what has gone on. It's more than a trying position. ... The two of us are just exhausted. We just need some time together and time to work out a few things."

Crum, the winningest football coach in the school's history, announced his resignation Monday night.

UNC Athletic Director John Swofford did not return telephone messages. But Dick Baddour, UNC associate athletic director, said he didn't know of any such stipulation.

"I am not aware of any such agreement on that," Baddour said. "My understanding is that the joint statement that was submitted Monday is going to be his statement and the university statement."

Crum, who has remained mum on his resignation, effective Jan. 31, would not comment, his secretary said.

Crum, Swofford and UNC Chancellor Christopher Fordham released a joint statement Monday announcing Crum's resignation after 10 years as head coach.

UNC officials said Crum will be paid an initial $400,000 and $100,000 per year over the four years that remain on his 10-year contract. Crum's 10 assistants also have had contracts since July that will be fully honored, according to the school.

Swofford on Tuesday named a seven-member search committee that will head efforts to find a replacement for Crum. Swofford will head the panel.

Meanwhile, John Schultz, president of the Cumberland County Chapter of UNC's fund-raising Educational Foundation, said the entire process — speculation and reports that Crum would not be retained for the 1988 season began as early as Nov. 17 — had not been handled properly.

"I guess I'm family oriented," Schultz said. "I know this man has a family. I really think Dick Crum is a fine man and it could have been handled better."

"It's fair to say the situation required careful discussions between the university and Coach Crum," Baddour said. "It just took time."

Crum concludes his stint in Chapel Hill with a 72-41-3 record. He also led the Tar Heels to four post-season bowls. This season, however, UNC finished 5-6 with a team that was expected to contend for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

Crum Aide Says Leaving Is Tough

By The Associated Press

After spending more than two decades as former North Carolina football coach Dick Crum's friend and assistant coach, Denny Marcin said the announcement of Crum's resignation didn't come easy.

"They say it comes with the territory," Marcin told The News and Observer of Raleigh from his Durham, N.C., home. "But it's tough after 24 years when you have to look for a job."

A native of Cleveland, Marcin was an assistant high school coach in Ohio for eight years, then head coach in high school for two seasons before joining Crum at Miami of Ohio in 1974. He's been with Crum ever since.

"I've known him (Crum) for 24 years, ever since I got into coaching," Marcin said. "I think Coach Crum has done a lot in this state for football.

"It's tough. It's just one of those things that happens," Marcin said about Crum's Monday resignation. "Some things, you just don't understand."

Crum, who compiled a 72-41-3 mark in 10 seasons at North Carolina, accepted a buyout arrangement on his contract Monday that will pay him a total of $800,000.

"I just think it's a sad day in the university's athletic history," said S. Bobo Tanner III of Rutherfordton, a member of the UNC Board of Trustees. "Apparently it's the first coach that's ever been fired ... You don't pay somebody off to retire, at least I never heard of it."

UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. said he felt there "was no truth" to the reports that individuals other than Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham II and Athletic Director John Swofford had influenced Crum's decision to resign.

"I think the matter was handled as a personnel matter by the chancellor and handled appropriately," Spangler said.

Richmond's Woolfolk Gains CAA Honor

RICHMOND (AP) — Peter Woolfolk of Richmond has been named the men's basketball player of the week in the Colonial Athletic Association, league officials announced Tuesday.

Woolfolk, a 6-foot-5 senior forward, had 42 points, 19 rebounds, four steals and two assists as the Spiders split two games at the Central Fidelity Holiday Classic. He had 25 points and 15 rebounds as Richmond downed Boston University 66-61 in the semifinals and 17 points and four rebounds in an 87-76 loss to North Carolina in the tournament championship game.

Woolfolk's efforts earned him a spot on the all-tournament team.

The CAA said Debbie Wade of William & Mary is the women's player of the week. The senior forward from Blacksburg had 31 points and 24 rebounds as William & Mary took both games and the championship of its own invitational tournament. She also was named to the all-tournament squad.

Marino, Elway Nearing Equality

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Until Sunday, Dan Marino has been the shadow lurking over John Elway's shoulder.

Elway, the first player chosen in the 1983 NFL draft, had an overpublicized nightmare of a rookie season while Marino, taken 26th, emerged as an instant star.

The next year, Elway led the Denver Broncos to the playoffs. But Marino led the Miami Dolphins to the Super Bowl, setting an NFL record with 48 touchdown passes.

But Elway began to catch up, at least in the public eye, when he drove the Broncos 98 yards in the final minutes to tie Cleveland in the AFC championship game last season, setting up the overtime victory that put the Broncos in the Super Bowl. Now he may have reached the same exalted plane — Marino and Elway, Elway and Marino, take your pick.

On Sunday, for example, Marino went without a touchdown pass for the first time in 31 games in a 27-0 loss at Buffalo while Elway was throwing for 347 yards and three touchdowns as Denver won a critical 31-17 decision at San Diego.

"It's a matter of experience," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said. "The more you see things, the more they become second nature and things are becoming second nature to him now."

"I don't think about those things," Elway said with a smile when asked about the rivalry with Marino. "Stuff like that is for the media to worry about."

There's little to worry about. Elway's exploits this year are on the same plane as Marino. He has 15 touchdown passes to 18 for Marino, one less interception and a rating of 89.6 to 89.0 for the Miami quarterback.

In the last three games, Elway has been everything he was touted to be when he left Stanford five years ago. Elway, with the exception of Philadelphia's still developing Randall Cunningham, is the only quarterback around who can throw a 50-yard strike on the run.

In victories over the Bears, Raiders and Chargers, Elway passed for a combined 986 yards and seven touchdowns as Denver improved to 7-3-1 and moving within a half-game behind the Chargers.

"Since he's been here, he's played an awful lot of good games," Reeves said. "But I don't know that he's been as consistent as he's been in these past three."

"I haven't played as consistently at any time as I have in these three weeks," Elway agreed. "It's been my goal since I got to the NFL to play consistently week in and week out and I think I'm finally starting to do it."

How consistent?

Two of the four best total offense totals of Elway's career have come in the last four games.

His 372 yards in the 31-29 victory over Chicago three weeks ago was his fourth best and the 387 against San Diego on Sunday equalled the total he had against the New York Giants last season. His best game, 432 yards, was at Seattle in 1985. All were big games and those against the Bears, Giants and Seahawks came against three of the league's toughest defenses.

Elway was the main reason the Broncos coverted 12 of 15 third-down opportunities on Sunday, when he also rushed for 40 yards in six carries. One of the carries was a 16-yard scramble on a third-and-14 that set up the Broncos' third touchdown.

He also has a resilience that makes him a unique competitor.

On Denver's first possession, he drove the Broncos from their own 20 to the Chargers' 6, only to throw an interception that Vencie Glenn returned an NFL-record 103 yards for a touchdown. Then the scoreboard flashed Elway's career totals against the Chargers: "Two touchdowns, 13 interceptions."

"I don't usually let those things bother me, but this time I said to myself that I'd show them," Elway said.

He did, and quickly, hitting Mark Jackson with a 52-yard bomb that set up the tying score.

"Sometimes I think we have a tendency to let down. We don't have that killer instinct," says Jackson, who with Vance Johnson and Ricky Nattiel gives Elway more receiving speed than he's ever had.

"But John can get us back up. He's a competitor. He wants to be the best. He can do things above and beyond the call. He's at his best when it's long yardage. They have to respect the scramble so they can't pressure him as much. It gives him time and we're learning to know that we have to come back toward the ball."

Soccer Champs

Warriors Limit Jordan, But Can't Stop The Bulls

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Golden State Warriors, who are bullish on stopping Michael Jordan, couldn't stop Chicago's new rookie stars.

The Warriors held Jordan to 16 points, nine fewer than his previous season low, but rookie Scottie Pippen scored on a driving layup with seven seconds left, giving the Bulls a 98-97 NBA victory Tuesday night. Pippen scored 16 points on 8-for-10 shooting and fellow-rookie Horace Grant was 7-for-8 and scored 17.

"Give the Warriors a lot of credit," Bulls Coach Doug Collins said. "They did a great job defensively, particularly against Michael."

Jordan, leading the league with 33 points per game, was limited to 15 shots from the field, nine below his season average.

Ben McDonald, a 6-foot-8 forward, spent most of the night guarding Jordan.

"I'm particularly proud of Ben McDonald's performance," Warriors Coach George Karl said. "He is having a great season and played some outstanding defense on Jordan."

Elsewhere, it was Detroit 124, New Jersey 115 in overtime; Atlanta 120, Boston 106; Seattle 112, New York 109; Houston 106, Denver 101; Los Angeles Lakers 125, Sacramento 120 in overtime, and Portland 102, Phoenix 100.

An 18-2 streak gave Chicago, now 7-1 on the road, a 51-26 lead in the second quarter. But the Warriors, with the NBA's worst record at 2-11, reduced the deficit to 77-67 after three periods and took the lead at 91-89 with 3:52 left on two free throws by Rod Higgins, who had 18 points.

After Pippen's go-ahead layup, the Warriors had a chance to win in the final seconds, but Sleepy Floyd's layup with one second left rolled around the rim and off as time expired.

"We really dodged a bullet when Sleepy missed that reverse layup," Collins said. "The Warriors would take that shot anytime and Sleepy would hit it nine out of 10."

Hawks 120, Celtics 106

Kevin McHale scored 22 points in 22 minutes in his first game for Boston after foot surgery, but it wasn't enough to beat Atlanta.

Dominique Wilkins scored 22 points and Tree Rollins, who had scored a total of 19 points in his first eight games this season, added 20 for the Hawks.

Lakers 125, Kings 120

Los Angeles beat Sacramento for the 25th consecutive time, but the Lakers needed a 3-point goal by Magic Johnson with eight seconds left in regulation to force the overtime.

The Lakers outscored the Kings 16-8 to start the extra period as A.C. Green had five points and three rebounds.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 27 points, while Johnson had 26 and Byron Scott 25. Otis Thorpe had 31 points and Reggie Theus 27 for the Kings.

Trail Blazers 102, Suns 100

Portland won its sixth straight game, all at home, when Terry Porter sank an 18-foot jumper from the top of the key with 22 seconds left against Phoenix.

Clyde Drexler scored 35 points for the Trail Blazers, who played without Kiki Vandeweghe for the sixth straight game because of a back injury and lost center Steve Johnson in the first half with a foot injury. Porter had 24 points and 12 assists.

The Suns had two chances to tie the game after Porter's basket, but both Bernard Thompson and Larry Nance missed. Nance, playing for the first time this season after suffering a hand injury in the exhibition season, scored 19 points.

Pistons 124, Nets 115

The Pistons rallied from a 10-point deficit in the third period and tied the game at 110 on a jump shot by Vinnie Johnson with 13 seconds to go in regulation. Buck Williams missed a 12-footer for the Nets with three seconds left, forcing the overtime.

Johnson, Bill Laimbeer and Isiah Thomas had 19 points each for Detroit, while Williams had 20 points and 14 rebounds for New Jersey.

SuperSonics 112, Knicks 109

Seattle, playing without Xavier McDaniel because of a sprained ankle, got 37 points from Dale Ellis and 32 from Tom Chambers.

With the SuperSonics trailing 109-107, Ellis' three-point play with 1:02 left put Seattle in front to stay after New York had overcome a 102-88 deficit with a 19-3 spurt.

Gerald Wilkins, who led the Knicks with 26 points, missed two free throws with 44 seconds remaining and New York missed another chance to pull ahead when Seattle's Danny Young stole the ball from Rick Carlisle and passed to Kevin Williams for an insurance basket with nine seconds left.

Rockets 106, Nuggets 101

Ralph Sampson had 20 points and 17 rebounds, and he scored the go-ahead basket with 36 seconds left for Houston.

With the score tied at 100, Sampson connected on a hook shot. Allen Leavell and Rodney McCray hit two free throws each in the final 17 seconds to clinch the victory.

Akeem Olajuwon had 22 points and 14 rebounds for Houston. Denver was led by Alex English with 26 points and Blair Rasmussen had a career-high 25.

Georgia Southern Geared For ASU

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Southern is on a roll, but if the Eagles are to remain in contention for an unprecedented third consecutive Division 1-AA national championship they will have to play a near-perfect game Saturday, says Coach Erk Russell.

The Eagles face No. 1 seed Appalachian State in a quarterfinal matchup.

"We've got to play a mistake-free game and then play the best game we've played," Russell, whose squad had won five staight, said Tuesday in an interview from the Statesboro campus.

He also is concerned with the size of Appalachian State, which Russell said "might be the greatest physical mismatch of the century."

"These people are not just big folks, they are outstanding football players," Russell said as he prepared his squad for the 1:30 p.m. EST kickoff Saturday at the home field of Appalachian in Boone, N.C.

"They've just got lots of big, strong, fast people," he said of Appalachian, 9-2, which averages 260 pounds on the offensive line, headed by tackle Derrick Graham, a 6-foot-5, 290-pounder.

"We don't match up very well there. Our biggest guy on defense is probably Jeff Banks at 6-foot-3 and 240," Russell said.

"But their strong point is probably on the other side of the ball," he said, where the Mountaineers defensive line is even bigger at an average of 280 pounds with nose guard Jimmy Snowden the biggest at 6-foot-4 and 310 pounds.

Georgia Southern, 8-3, averages 242 pounds on the offensive line and 235 pounds on the defensive line.

"On offense they run more than they pass it and they're big enough to line up and just drive it down your throat," Russell said. "They just overpower you."

Russell said he will take his team to Boone on Friday for a workout on the artificial turf field as opposed to the grass at Georgia Southern's Paulson Stadium where the Eagles are 6-0 this season and have won 18 in a row.

"We've only played on it (artificial turf) once this season and we beat Western Carolina (37-16), but we'd rather play on grass at home," he said.

Russell, whose Eagles are unbeaten in the playoffs since reaching them for the first time in 1985, ran the string to nine last week in a 31-28 overtime victory over Maine.

Appalachian will be more difficult, he said, pointing out that the Mountaineers have an outstanding defensive team. Asked if they were tougher against the run than the pass, Russell said:

"It's hard to say. That's what we do (run)," he said. "But they don't give up very many yards or very many points. They're only giving up about 10 points a game."

Appalachian, which defeated Richmond 20-3 in the first round last week, is led on offense by running backs Rich Melchor and Tom Sanders. Melchor has rushed for 718 yards and Sanders for 691. Freshman quarterback Bobby Fuller, who became a starter only three games back, has thrown for 414 yards and three touchdowns in completing 36 of 63 passing attempts.

Georgia Southern is led by a pair of freshmen, running back Joe Ross and quarterback Raymond Gross. Ross has run for 1,104 yards while Gross has rushed for 702 yards and passed for another 547 after taking over the first string job midway in the season.

NASA Picks Four Firms For Space Station Contracts

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four companies that won the competition for building parts of the U.S. space station are virtually assured of major roles in America's space program for the next decade, and perhaps far beyond.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced the four winners Tuesday, setting off celebrations in some cities and causing despair in others.

Those selected were Boeing Aerospace of Huntsville, Ala.; McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Co. of Houston and Huntington Beach, Calif.; General Electric Co., Astro-Space Division, Valley Forge, Pa., and East Windsor, N.J.; and Rocketdyne Division of Rockwell International, Canoga Park, Calif.

At stake in the competition were NASA contracts that eventually could be valued at $6.5 billion. The work is expected to create at least 12,000 jobs directly and thousands more indirectly.

The contracts will last 10 years and cover the entire next generation of NASA's space efforts. And they will give the winning companies valuable experience for U.S. space projects in the next century.

NASA Administrator James Fletcher said the orbiting station, expected to be completed in the mid-1990s, is essential for any future U.S. effort to mount a manned expedition to Mars, a project the Soviets already are planning.

Fletcher said the station would be used to develop the technology to keep humans in space for long periods, to assemble a Martian excursion craft and as a departure point for a voyage to Mars.

Fletcher said all of the competing companies submitted outstanding bids, but the winning proposals "were clearly superior."

A Boeing spokeswoman in Huntsville said the company plans to hire 1,500 workers and that another 2,000 jobs will be created by subcontractors. Many of those jobs will be in Alabama, she said.

The NASA announcement stunned officials of Martin Marietta in New Orleans, which lost to Boeing. The city had offered incentives to bring the project to Louisiana, and officials had predicted that a winning bid would attract 7,100 jobs to the New Orleans area. The Louisiana economy, heavily dependent on oil, has been depressed for many months.

With the loss, Martin Marietta now has no part in the space station hardware contracts at all, though it will continue to make the fuel tanks used on the space shuttle.

Another major company, Rockwell International, lost to McDonnell Douglas, but Rockwell keeps a piece of the action through its Rocketdyne Division.

In Houston, also hit hard by the depressed oil industry, city officials cheered. McDonnell Douglas is expected to hire about 550 workers there, and subcontractors will add other jobs.

"Space will play a very important part in the future of this city and this nation," Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire said.

The plans call for a permanently manned space station that will have four habitable modules — two to be provided by the United States and one each by Japan and by the European Space Agency. Canada is to design and build a robot crane similar to one the Canadians built for the space shuttle.

NASA has told Congress the total cost of the station would be $14.6 billion in 1987 dollars.

Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., chairman of the House space science and applications subcommittee, warned that NASA's budget is still in doubt.

Boeing's winning proposal was for what is called Work Package 1. This includes modules used as a laboratory and as crew quarters, along with environmental and life support systems, and associated equipment.

NASA said the proposed cost for that package in the first phase of the station is about $750 million. If a phase II option is added later, another $25 million would be tacked onto the contract.

McDonnell Douglas won on Work Package 2 with a proposed cost of $1.9 billion in phase I and $140 million for the phase II option.

The McDonnell Douglas contract covers development of a metal truss forming the backbone of the station, plus propulsion, navigation, communication and airlock equipment.

Work Package 3 was awarded to General Electric, the sole bidder, on a cost estimate of $800 million. This package includes a free-flying platform that could carrying scientific instruments and a robotic satellite-servicing system. A phase II option could add $570 million to this contract.

The unsuccessful bidder for Work Package 2 was a team led by Rockwell International Corp. of Downey, Calif. Rockwell's Rocketdyne division, however, won the Work Package 4 contract.

Its estimate for Work Package 4 was $1.6 billion, with a phase II add-on option of $740 million.

The work package calls for power generation and distribution. Electricity will be produced by solar arrays in the first phase, but the contract also calls for development of another power system for use in phase II of the station construction.

Horoscope — From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Dec. 3

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Stop living in a dream world; make your dreams reality. It would be wise to get rid of some frivolous items in your budget. Be more practical.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Find some ways to put more beauty and harmony in your life. A good friend is in big trouble. You owe this person a favor, so help out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Take time to handle some private matters you've been neglecting. Pay special attention to anything financial or credit-related.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Contact a friend this morning who can give you some good ideas, but don't make demands of this person or you'll regret it.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Contact an influential person and state your aims clearly. Then you can easily gain your aims. Don't lose your temper where credit is concerned.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Study an associate's views more carefully. This person may have more in common with you than you had previously suspected.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Be sure you know where you stand financially. Collect from your debtors so you can pay your own debts more easily. Be practical.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You can get a partner to go along with a plan you know will be successful if you introduce the subject early and make your case clearly.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Don't interrupt your scheduled activities, and stay within your budget. A fellow worker can give you some great advice today.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Use one of your particularly refined talents to bring you a cherished wish. Do something special for your mate, and you'll be happy you did.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Think more about the needs of your family. This is not a good day to invite strangers into your home. Plan a party for the near-future.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Be sure all of your communications are clear and succinct. This is a banner day for business affairs. Take time out for recreation tonight.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

Preemptive bids are two-edged swords. They will, on occasion, throw a wrench in the opposition's bidding machinery. But if the enemy buys the contract, they will often leave a blueprint of the hand to guide the opponents in the play.

After East's three-diamond preempt, South had a normal three-spade overcall. With first- or second-round control of every suit, North wasted no time in getting to where he wanted.

Before looking at the East-West hands, how do you rate South's chances of bringing home his slam? Unless East is pulling a fast one, and West's opening lead suggests that that is not the case, declarer can claim his contract without having to play to a single trick!

The hand is a simple elimination. Win the ace of hearts and draw trumps in as many rounds as it takes. Cash the ace-king of clubs and ruff the jack of clubs, then cross to the king of hearts. That leaves the North-South hands with nothing but trumps and diamonds, and East is down to five diamonds and a heart.

Since East originally started with seven diamonds for his preempt (confirmed by the fact that West did not lead his partner's suit) and the lead is in the dummy, all declarer has to do to secure his slam is lead a low diamond from the ace toward his jack.

East can win the trick with a high honor, but he is well and truly end played. A heart return will allow declarer to sluff a diamond loser from one hand while ruffing in the other, while a diamond will be away from the remaining honor into declarer's combined ace-jack tenace. Either way, declarer will lose no more than one diamond trick.

'Peace' Is Favorite Message For This Year's Holiday Cards

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

"Peace" is the universal season's greeting for 1987.

The dove, an endangered species in a more militaristic time not long ago, is nesting on many cards this year, replacing last year's pet, the teddy bear.

The Gorbachev-Reagan Washington summit was only a hope in many hearts last year when card creators were at work. Now, just as that meeting is about to begin, the U.S. mails will be filled with peaceful wishes — about 2.2 billion, by the Greeting Card Association's estimate. Think of the power of all those good thoughts!

The message of peace is poignantly expressed in the hope on the face of a tender angel from the Mazarin Tapestry, c. 1500, on a delicate card from the National Gallery of Art.

UNICEF, benefiting the world's children, offers greetings in English, French, Spanish, Russian and Chinese — and the Latin "Pax."

And from Greeting Teas comes a stimulating wish for "Peace and Prosperi-tea," with an Earl Grey tea bag inside the card.

From UNICEF's collection: a dove silhouetted in silver foil by Anna Belli of Brazil, and a pair of cooing doves by Alban Welti of Switzerland.

Amnesty International offers a card with a dove on a cranberry red background, available by mail from Mike and Lisa Myers, 5432 Bradford Ct., No. 232, Alexandria, Va. 22311. A package of 20 cards is $9.

Three-dimensional, die-cut interlocking doves on a clear acetate background, designed by architect Ted Naos, can swing from the Christmas tree as an ornament.

Only Hallmark knows whether the dove on an intricate card by Linda Pozorski is flying through glittering rays of light from a tiny tapestry or an elaborate embroidery.

More exotic birds fly on the note cards from the rare collections of the Library of Congress: Fasciated Trogon, Blue-throated Nyctiornis, Allied Eurylaime and Dalhousie's Eurylaime, from "The Birds of Asia" by John Gould (1850-83).

If peace has a rival this leap year, it's love.

Love and peace are linked around a dove with a red heart. The message reads: "I Love You" on the outside and goes further in the inside with "at Christmas and Always." And a glittering red heart says "Sweetheart, you put me in the mood for mistletoe!" All from Hallmark.

A 25-foot spruce reaches for the vaulted ceiling in the Great Hall of the Library of Congress on the cover of one card. Its 1846 message is from Charles Dickens: "Many merry Christmases, friendships, great accumulation of cheerful recollections ... for all of us."

The tree also grows tall this year on seven cards by Naos — the best one, a three-dimensional tree suitable for hanging from your tree.

From Hallmark's forest comes a tree so glittering it's as though it were made of green garland, to stand on your mantel.

The hottest new too-cute-for-words trend is what Patti Brickman of the Greeting Card Association calls the pet-to-pet greeting — "your pooch sending greetings to your neighbor's cat."

"Merry Christmas From Our Dog to Yours" and "A Christmas Wish From the Cat" (which regrettably carries the message "Merry kittymas to you") are both by Hallmark. For those who have neither kitty nor puppy, there are plenty of teddy bear cards out there — though not, thankfully, as many as last year.

Not all messages this year are full of peace or love. Consider Hallmark's "The Yuppie Days of Christmas": "On the twelfth day of Christmas, my true love gave to me — —twelve lunches doing — eleven banks foreclosing — ten 'k's' a-jogging — nine pairs a-wing tips — eight Volvos revving — seven lawyers suing — six condos leasing — five Krugerrands! — four calling cards — three trench coats — two savings bonds — and a tax-deferred annuity!"

Maine Line Co. of Rockport, Maine, also offers seasonal greetings for our times: "I Dashered and Dancered and Prancered around getting ready for Christmas. And now that I'm Donnered, I'm gonna get Blitzened."

B'nai B'rith Museum lights the way with Hanukah cards, including one with puzzles for children and bright adults, and "Chanukah Seeds: Festivus luminous octalasting" from the Festival of Lights Seed Co., full of bits and pieces of glitter, including a six-pointed star and a gold coin.

Santa, sadly, stands in danger of being held hostage on a Hallmark card: A couple hoists a giant cage over Santa's milk and cookies and the wish "Hope you capture the Spirit of Christmas!" A shortage of that Christmas spirit is also plain on another Hallmark card that shows a reindeer aghast at the reading on Santa's scale.

LIGHTS ON FOR THE HOLIDAYS — Drew Forgerty, 8, holds a lighted candle as she looks at Christmas lights during a "lights on" ceremony in downtown Asheville. Christmas decorations, especially lighted trees and outdoor illuminations, have already begun appearing throughout eastern North Carolina as the holiday season approaches. (AP Laserphoto)

Facility Gives Care To Injured Animals

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — People who have medical or other problems can go to fancy resorts or clinics for treatment. For Tar Heel bears, deer and other wild critters down on their luck, there's the N.C. Animal Care Facility.

The 2,000-acre tract of land in Caswell County has all the makings for a zoo — land, animals, and wildlife officers to care for them. But unlike the North Carolina Zoological Park, it isn't open to the public.

"We don't allow any walkers, hikers, hunters or trespassers," said Harlon T. Hall, who runs the facility. "We don't allow visitors or school groups."

Nestled in the pines and hardwoods of Caswell County, two miles from any public road, are two four-acre pens for deer. There is also a two-acre pen for black bears, which are native to North Carolina and found in the coastal and mountain region.

Bears and deer are the species most frequently rehabilitated at the facility. About 50 deer and five to 10 bears come in annually, "although we do have a gamut of stuff like coons, foxes, squirrels, bobcats and a cougar from time to time," Hall said.

Hall's goal as manager of the facility is to get the animals back where they belong — in the wild, free to ramble the state's backwoods. The facility serves as home for injured or orphaned wild animals found throughout the state.

Those animals can't be sent back to the wild if they become tame, said Hall, supervising wildlife biologist for the N.C. Division of Wildlife Management's 32-county Piedmont region.

Not realizing that state law prohibits keeping wildlife as pets except under special conditions and with permits, folks finding animals in the woods may opt to take them home.

"People think fawns are so cute and cuddly," Hall told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "Then they grow up and start eating and they find out they're not so cute and cuddly anymore."

They call wildlife officials to take the animals, or officials confiscate wildlife kept illegally or under inhumane conditions.

"I've seen bears in little bitty cages that were pretty squalid, loaded with feces, where the bear barely had room to turn around," Hall said.

The bear pen was built in 1976, when the state passed laws against keeping bears because of a trend toward caging them as roadside attractions. "We've pretty well got most of that cleared up," Hall said. The deer pens were built in 1973.

Hall estimated that a third of the fawns brought to the facility die because they arrive in such poor condition — from injuries or misguided treatment from humans. Other animals wind up at the facility because people thought, usually misktakenly, that the animals had been orphaned.

"The best thing for wildlife is don't pick it up," said Hal S. Atkinson, wildlife management division chief. "If you see a fawn, the best thing to do is leave it alone. Chances are the mother will come back for it."

But for injured animals, the faiclity may be the only alternative. This year, the bear keeper nursed a cub with a broken leg and another with sore feet.

CARE FOR THE INJURED — Two bear cubs learn to adapt to a natural environment at the Animal Care Facility near Yanceyville in Caswell County. The facility, which is not open to the public, takes in orphaned or injured wildlife and helps the animals learn to survive on their own in the wild. (AP Laserphoto)

Actress Likes 'Slap Maxwell' Role But Nobody's Watching

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's one of those good news-bad news situations. Megan Gallagher has a great role as smart, funny Judy Ralston on "The 'Slap' Maxwell Story." The bad news is not that many people know it, because they aren't watching the show.

"See, I think one of the misconceptions about the show is that it's like 'Buffalo Bill,' and it's really not like 'Buffalo Bill,' and I think our numbers have reflected that people expect to see 'Buffalo Bill' and they're sort of predisposed against somebody like that," Gallagher said in an interview. "But Slap is a really likable, vulnerable, funny guy."

"The 'Slap' Maxwell Story," Wednesdays on ABC, has reaped critical acclaim, but its ratings have been only so-so so far. It has nevertheless been picked up for the full season.

The misguided notion that "Slap Maxwell" is a reincarnation of "Buffalo Bill" is due, no doubt, to the fact that, like "Buffalo Bill," it stars Dabney Coleman and was co-created by Jay Tarses.

In "Slap," Coleman plays a old-school sports columnist who's made something of a mess of his life and knows it. Bill Bittinger, the egomaniacal talk-show host of "Buffalo Bill," would never, for instance, have had a scene like this:

Slap enlists Judy, his reluctant inamorata, to go along on a birthday outing for Slap's grown son, Eliot, because Slap is so uncomfortable being around Eliot alone. "I don't know. Something happened," Slap tells Judy. "We used to talk to each other back then. Of course, it was baby talk mostly. Then he started to grow up, but we were still thick as thieves. Buddies. Huck Finn and Injun Joe. I'd get home late, he didn't mind. He'd be waitin' up for me, his little eyelids droopin'. Told his friends I was the Moon's chauffeur, drivin' across the sky in some kinda golfcart with propellers. ..."

"In dailies, we're sitting there watching the same thing over and over again, and we're all crying every time," said Ms. Gallagher. "I love it. I love going to work."

Ms. Gallagher has had a run of roles on better-than-average television shows, but none, she says, as rewarding as Judy.

"It was one of the first female characters that I've read, maybe ever, that was so well-drawn," she said. "She gets to do everything. She's smart, she's funny, she's vulnerable, she's a complete person.

"This is a joy, because there's so much to find it in that's there. You don't have to do that horrible kind of let's-make-something-out-of-nothing kind of work. You can do the kind of work that you want to do."

Ms. Gallagher played undercover cop Tina Russo on the last season of the Emmy-winning "Hill Street Blues" and had a part in the pilot of the soon-to-be-Emmy-winning "L.A. Law."

"I loved 'Hill Street,"' Ms. Gallagher said. "I thought it was a wonderful show. You know, I think that Jay has taken this whole thing a little farther, and that's why this show is so great. He's taken the real people, three-dimensional characters, a show that can be ironic, not necessarily, you know, slap-your-knee funny kind of stuff, and then he's taken it a bit farther, because he's made it a style piece."

Ms. Gallagher, a Pennsylvania native, attended the Juilliard School of Drama and later joined The Acting Company, the touring arm of the Kennedy Center. In 1984, she had a small part in the TV movie "Sins of the Past" and did a pilot that wasn't picked up by the network.

After appearing in the "L.A. Law" pilot and declining a recurring role, her agent was appalled, she said, that she wanted to do a play in Baltimore instead of landing another TV role immediately. She did the play and got the "Slap" job anyway.

"I think I've been extraordinarily lucky," she said. "There are a lot of people out there working just as hard as me and they're not making any headway at all. And then not only to make a living, but do something that I actually care about is extraordinary."

GREAT ROLE — Actress Megan Gallagher says she has a great role as Judy Ralson on The Slap Maxwell Story," but is concerned about the show's low ratings. The show airs Wednesdays on ABC. (AP Laserphoto)

Singer's Advice: 'Trust Your Heart'

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Judy Collins' message to the world this year must be "Trust Your Heart." She wrote a song with that title, put it on an album with that title and has published an autobiography with that title.

She also has made a TV commercial for the album. "I think we're doing a first," she says.

"I'm very excited. This is a new way of marketing which I understand is going to be standard operating procedure for many artists. The record store scene is so difficult for many of us who are not in rock 'n' roll."

Ruffles, her beige Persian, settles down next to the interviewer in Miss Collins' living room — where the commercial was shot — and begins an unusual-sounding purr. "Ruffles, the singing cat," Miss Collins says. "When he arrived we thought he had asthma. He didn't stay with me for the cameras; he missed his moment of stardom."

The album is on Gold Castle Records, distributed by PolyGram. "I was on Elektra for 24 years, ignored the last eight," Miss Collins says. "Most of my catalog is still in print, which is not bad after all these years."

From "A Maid of Constant Sorrow" in 1961 through "Home Again" in 1984, Miss Collins made 20 records for Elektra, six of them gold. In 1985 she cut an album titled "Amazing Grace," 16 songs, with orchestra, in England for English release only. Some of the cuts on it are on "Trust Your Heart."

She has sung folk, country, religious, Broadway, protest, pop and art songs. Hits have included "Send in the Clowns," "Both Sides Now," "Suzanne," "Someday Soon" and "Amazing Grace."

It makes her hard to pigeonhole but it also makes it hard for her to choose which songs should be singles.

"I thought 'The Rose' might surface as a single from this album and I wondered if 'Amazing Grace' might come out again as a single. I think we need it. The company seems enthusiastic about 'Day by Day.' I've remixed it from the version I did in London.

"We remixed 'Both Sides Now' before it was a hit. It was out about a year. We went back and made the bass louder and the instruments crisper and brought the voice forward. It was a hit. Maybe that's good luck for me.

"But I always was more concerned with the content and quality of songs and how they fit together than what would be hits. I still am.

"Most people would not try to sing 'Amazing Grace' with an a cappella choir behind them. Everybody had recorded 'Send in the Clowns' by the time I did. I sang it because I loved it. Think of it as a single? Never. The radio people picked that song (in 1975) from 'Judith.' I thought they'd like 'City of New Orleans' — something more up-tempo."

The book, published by Houghton Mifflin, uses the album cover photo from Miss Collins' "Hard Times for Lovers" LP of 1979. In it, she recounts some hard times with lovers and constant searching to understand herself.

She wrote it through 1985, despite a heavy touring schedule. It's a diary of what she thought about and remembered on certain days as the year went on.

She says, "I wrote non-stop. I did not censor. I allowed myself to write it all out and then made the decision about what incidents to take out. For me that's a very good way to work. I find if I censor myself, I'm not as productive.

"Certain things got re-thought and redone in nine drafts until finally there was some sense that I'd said the thing the way I'd wanted to say it," she says. "Dealing with my drinking I found difficult, without overemphasizing or diminishing its value in my life experience. That was one of my nine rewrite sections."

David Frost TV Series Will Focus On U.S. Presidential Candidates

By JAY SHARBUTT
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — David Frost listens intently to a novel theory: In election-year matters, TV has lost its old impact, and candidates who still emphasize TV now face being known only as "Whatshisname."

"I don't think so," he says. "It's up to the candidates to be as interesting as possible. But it's also up to the media to be as inventive as possible."

Now, both propositions are getting a 13-week test run (12 weeks, technically speaking) starting last weekend with "The Next President," an ambitious syndicated series of one-hour programs.

The series was developed by Frost and U.S. News & World Report magazine. The British star, at home in political journalism as well as satire, is wearing his journalist's hat on this occasion.

He serves as the interviewer in the series, which has been bought by more than 115 stations around the United States, a spokesman for the series said.

The first program, interviews with President Reagan and former Presidents Carter and Ford, offers their reflections on the modern presidency and the crises thereof. Succeeding weeks will bring Frost's taped interviews with six Republican and six Democratic candidates for the White House and their wives. Each candidate is getting his own hour.

Frost, who in 1977 made headlines by paying Nixon $600,000 and a share of the profits for his post-Watergate interview series with the former president, began his current venture in July, starting with Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.

He never interviewed one-time leading Democratic candidate Gary Hart, though. Hart, denouncing the press, dropped out in May after the press began raising questions about his relationship with part-time model-actress Donna Rice.

Frost did have a September interview with another leading Democratic contender, Delaware Sen. Joseph Biden. But Biden also bowed out after disclosures about his law school grades and uncredited use of phrases from a speech by British Labor Party leader Neal Kinnock.

Funny thing, though, Frost says: In the interview, taped nine days before the senator's withdrawal, "he talked about Neal Kinnock, how he'd taped a speech by Neal Kinnock and adapted it. He was absolutely open, in fact, about it."

However, the Biden chapter has been dropped from Frost's series, which is limited to active candidates. Still, while politics taketh away, it also giveth, sometimes.

One day, Frost was scheduled to interview another Democratic front-runner. It turned out to be the same day that this front-runner — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis — embarrassedly announced the resignation of two aides who had slipped reporters the so-called "attack tape" comparing the Kinnock speech with Biden's Kinnock-y orations.

That event and the ensuing interview session, Frost says, gave him a perfect opportunity to explore what are the central themes of his series.

Realizing that today's hot issue can be tomorrow's yawn, he says the primary questions he has been posing concern "character, what makes people tick" and how candidates react under pressure.

He first tried that approach in 1968 with a special, also called "The Next President," in which he also interviewed the major contenders, including Nixon, Hubert H. Humphrey, Robert F. Kennedy and George Wallace.

His preface to that program, he says, still applies in his current project: "What I was saying is, however much we deal with the issues ... you can never find out (in advance) what people will do in an emergency.

"And therefore, you've got to vote for the sort of leader who you think would respond in an emergency the way you think a leader should respond."

Like other journalists, Frost seeks the unguarded, unexpected answer. He is considered quite good at getting same, but he concedes there have been times when a candidate responded with what Fourth Estate cynics call a tape-recorded announcement.

"Well, occasionally you do" get patented answers, he said, declining to name the culprits. "But you've just got to keep away from those questions" that result in stock replies.

Obviously, breaking news and new issues that arise in the candidates' campaigns also are important, he noted.

So, he said, to keep the series as contemporary as possible, all the interviewees have agreed to let him revisit them before their show airs to include their thoughts on major events that have occurred since their initial interviews.

AUCTION ITEM — An intaglio, "Line Man (Art Kit)," by Michael Ehlbeck, is one of the pieces of art to be auctioned at 8 p.m. Saturday in Gray Art Gallery, ECU. Proceeds from the auction will go to support activities of the Art Enthusiasts organization.

ECU Art Enthusiasts Schedule Benefit Auction On Saturday

ECU News Bureau

— The Art Enthusiasts of East Carolina University will sponsor an art auction Saturday in Gray Art Gallery for works by ECU's School of Art faculty, visiting artists, students and alumni

The list of contributors includes artists Michael Ehlbeck, Paul Hartley, Norman Keller, Marilyn and Tran Gordley, Chuck Chamberlain and Cynthia Careson.

Fred Kessler of Charlotte, a professional auctioneer, will be assisted by Patricia Fuller, an independent art consultant, who will introduce the art.

"A great deal of planning and community cooperation has gone into making this a gala cultural event," says Stacy Brody, auction committee chairman. "We have had a very enthusiastic response from art donors, and we hope everyone interested in art will join us."

The art will be on display in the gallery Thursday from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m., and on Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

The auction will begin at 8 p.m. Saturday, with the doors to open at 7 p.m. for a final viewing of the art and a reception.

The Art Enthusiasts of East Carolina University is a new organization whose purpose is to develop art programming in eastern North Carolina.

Proceeds from the auction will be used to fund student scholarships, a film series, a lecture series, tours of East Coast museums and galleries, meetings with curators, and visits with contemporary artists.

Members of the auction committee are: Carmen Albea, Adele Callaway, Mary Francis Garret, Marilyn Lancet, and Gail Jeffries.

N.C. Exhibit On Display In London

RALEIGH — North Carolina is one of 10 Southern states taking part in an exhibit in London that opened Tuesday and will continue through Saturday. Nearly 20 representatives from North Carolina's travel industry are manning the Tar Heel booth.

The exhibit is the first major effort to market pecan pie, the Gee Haw Whimmy Diddle folk toy, top-rated golf courses and more than 300 miles of North Carolina coastline to the international traveler.

The exhibit is expected to be seen by 41,000 European travel agents and tour operators at the eighth annual World Travel Market being held in London.

"North Carolina's travel industry has realized that the Tar Heel State belongs in the international tourism market," said Lynn Sizemore, director of the N.C. Division of Travel and Tourism's Welcome Center Program. "North Carolina stands to gain tremendously in both visitors and dollars by participating in the World Travel Market."

This is the first formal step to promote North Carolina as a vacation destinatiion in the international travel arena since the state won government approval last year for non-stop air service to London.

Among those attending the exhibit are a Cherokee Indian, two Moravian women from Old Salem, a NASCAR race driver, a Confederate general, and a golfer, Also, a tinsmith from Old Salem and a basket weaver from Cherokee will demonstrate their crafts.

Two North Carolina natives, singer George Hamilton IV and television commentator Charles Kuralt, are part of the visiting team. Hamilton's album, "Hymns Country Style," topped all other folk and country albums released in the United Kingdom in 1985. He will perform at the exhibit on behalf of the people of North Carolina.

AIR CONDITIONING

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A cooling system which can lower the outside temperature by as much as 30 degrees is available in this desert city, reports Energy User News.

The system enables hotels, bars and restaurants to attract customers to outdoor patios usually deserted in the summer.

It uses a flash evaporative process in which regular tap water is pumped to 600 pounds per square inch through high pressure piping mounted on the eaves of a building adjacent to the area being cooled, the journal explains.

As the water is pushed through the nozzles of the pipe it is broken into a mist of minute droplets which quickly evaporate in low humidity air at temperatures above 90 degrees. Because heat rises, the cooled air is forced to the ground.

However, if humidity is above 50 percent the mist cannot flash evaporate, and the system will not function properly.

An Aging Tale

By Andy Tetterton

Pitter, patter, his feet go through the woods
While he exchanges glances with every movement.
Over the woods falls a frightening hush---
He knows to move fast, or his life is spent.

Once strong body of youth is now just frail,

For his time has come and he feels just that;

Why I Think This Year Will Be My Best Year Yet

By Michael Turner

This school year will be my best year yet. It will also be my most fun year. Basically this is because we are the seniors and we have more authority. We have the chance to be president of clubs. We could be president of the Honors Society, Recast Club, Career Club, and Computer Club. We also have a better chance to play in sports. More eighth graders are chosen to participate in baseball, football, and even basketball. The sixth and seventh graders have to stand up when eighth graders come to assembly.

I also know most of my teachers. So for that reason, I know what is expected of me. All of my teachers I consider to be good teachers. My language arts teacher has had a student who has won the "I Love F.M.S." writing contest. My math teacher has thousands of math books, and my social studies teacher does a lot of fun activities and is planning several field trips. My science teacher works us very hard, but it is still fun. All my teachers are nice, but strict. They would like for us to do a lot of homework.

I even enjoy my subjects. The fact that I made the Farmville Central Marching Band has improved my playing in band class. Now I play the best that I've ever played. I also enjoy chorus. My teacher takes pride in us and plans to take us a long way in music and competition. We are going to King's Dominion and choral day. Math is fun because I am in Algebra I, and I am doing high school work. For these reasons, you can see the 1987-1988 school year will be my best year.

The ACC Wrap-Up

By Susan Grimsley

On the eastern coast where ACC is king
The fall lights up with football,
TV's turn on and radios blast
All hoping their team will stand tall.

The Wolfpack in red, colors standing bright
Lead the way in our Capitol City.
With a strong showing last season and hopes all around
Their record now reflects pity.

The Deacs of Wake Forest--a team on the move
Got off to an impressive start.
They may not go far but the effort will be remembered
By all the fans who love Wake in their hearts.

The Blue Devils, hailing from Durham, N.C.
Are having to work a lot out,
But with a strong head coach and determined men
They'll give a race, no doubt.

The Tarheels, superiorly the cream of the crop,
Are having an up-and-down time.
The players must walk a fine line.

The tigers in the orange and white
Who call Death Valley their home
Entered the season with attitude problems
But will change if they want post-season in a dome.

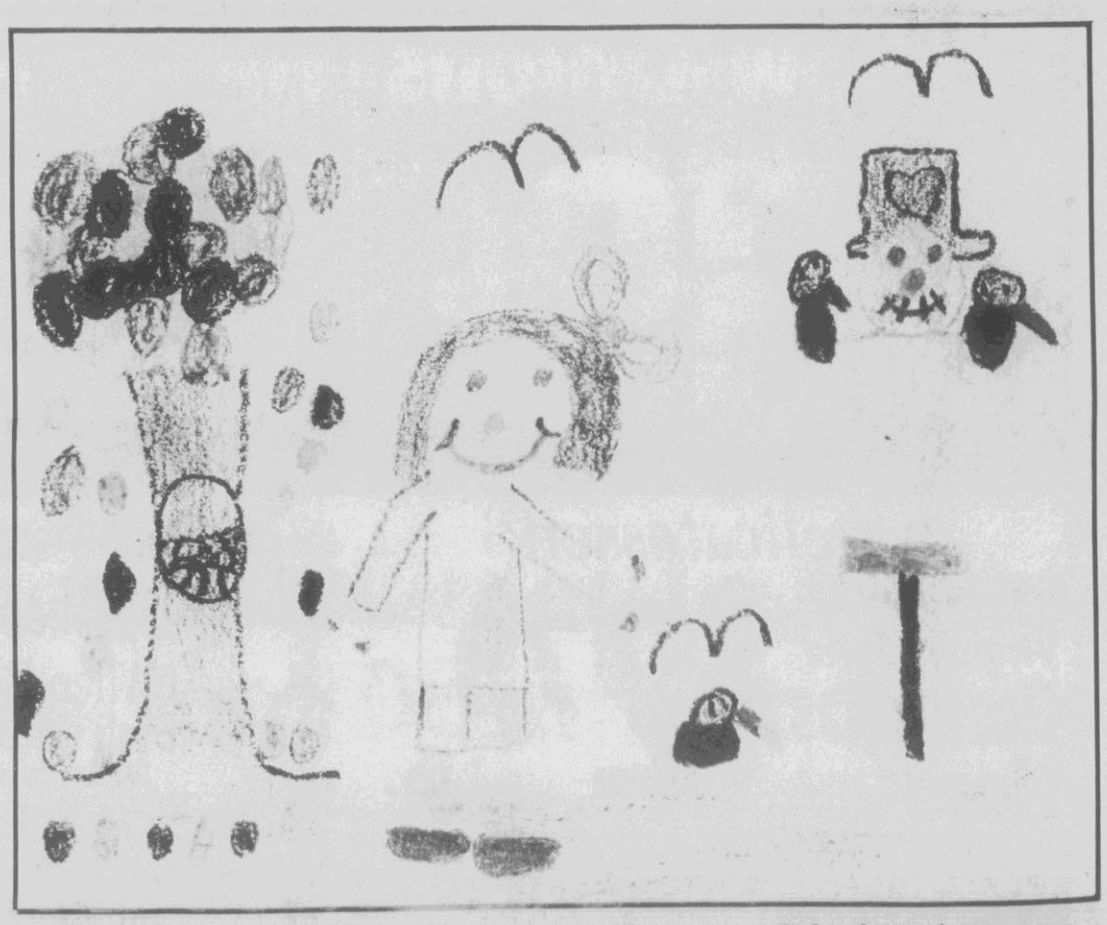

The Virginia Cavs--a struggling crew
Who play in Charlottesville, V.A.
Are standing tall and trying to prove

The Terps of College Park, Maryland
Are making an awesome impression
But--due to past performances--

The Ramblin' Wreck from Georgia Tech--
The Jackets started off strong
But they lost a few and lost confidence
So now they can't afford to do more wrong.

The ACC--by far, the strongest in the nation,
Will rise to the top, as all know
The teams will get stronger; the schedule will, too
And the power of the conference will grow!

Susan Grimsley, 16, a student at J.H. Rose High School receives special mention

Grandma

By Lisa Staton

"Go heat your water upon the wood stove."
"The room is warm and the shades are pulled down."
"Put socks on your feet before you catch cold."
"My cheese biscuits will chase away that frown."
"There are your clothes on the studio cart."
"Lak' up and be ready when Pa gets back."
"Don't you want some goodies from the Shop Mart?"
"When we return I'll fry some apple jacks."
"First, to the laundry. Pa takes us real slow."
"Next, to Harris for collards and salt meat."
"After pizza, how 'bout a picture show?"
"Don't lean on the door. Sit back in your seat."
I still miss my Grandma up to this day.
My love for her forever will stay.

Tar Heel Trivia

Gold

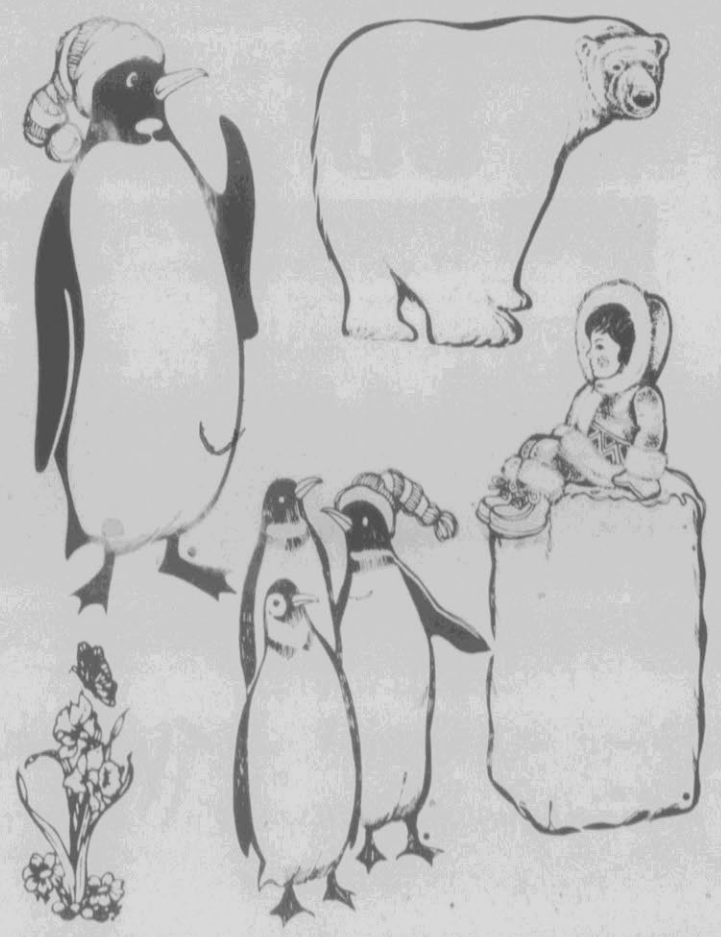

Supposedly the first gold ever found in the United States was discovered in 1799 in Cabarrus County.

Conrad Reed, a thirteen-year-old, while fish hunting with a bow and arrow, broke an arrow on a yellow-gold colored rock. His family used the seventeen pound rock as a doorstop for three years until the boy's father sold it to a jeweler for less than $4 before he knew it was gold. It is said that the father later sued the jeweler for tricking him in the sale and Reed is reported to have won $3,000 in the suit.

After the announcement of the gold discovery in Cabarrus County, people swarmed the area looking for riches. For 60 years, N.C. was called the Golden State, but the high cost of mining and some not-so-honest people brought the decline of N.C. gold mining.

Sandwich Suppers Gain An International Flavor

Good food knows no geographical boundaries, and sandwiches especially offer unlimited possibilities for creating an international taste experience. Hearty Gourment Mexican Burgers and spicy Italiano Sandwiches, topped with hot regular or process cheese spread, are quick-fix main dishes you can "import" easily for no-fuss weekly meals or casual entertaining.

Hamburger patties go from plain to extra flavorful with additional mix-in ingredients: crushed corn chips and, to help heat up appetites in a hurry, zippy Mexican process cheese spread (mild, hot or jalapeno). Cook burgers to desired doneness. Then top with more process cheese spread — prepared in the microwave (or saucepan) — fresh tomato slices, guacamole and chips to complete the Tex-Mex theme. Serve on warm Kaiser rolls for truly hunger-pleasing sandwiches.

Attractive, robust, easy Italiano Sandwiches are made to order for a memorable meal in a hurry. Make use of fall's harvest of fresh peppers, zucchini and onions, sauteed with basil in margarine till crisp-tender. Cook sausages to desired doneness while preparing the instant cheese sauce. It takes only a few minutes since process cheese spread comes in its own microwaveable glass jar. Arrange sausages on buns and then pour hot sauce on top, followed by vegetables.

GOURMET MEXICAN BURGERS

1 pound ground beef
1/3 cup crushed corn chips
1 8-ounce jar process cheese spread
Kaiser rolls, split
Tomato slices
Guacamole

Combine ground beef, chips and 1/3 cup process cheese spread; mix well. Shape into six patties; place in shallow baking dish lined with paper towels. Cover with wax paper. Microwave on HIGH 8 to 9 minutes, turning over and rearranging patties after 5 minutes. Let stand 1 minute. Microwave remaining process cheese spread 45 seconds to 1 minutes, stirring every 30 seconds. For each sandwich, fill bun with patty; top with reamining process cheese spread, tomatoes, guacamole and additional chips, if desired. 6 servings.

CONVENTIONAL: Increase crushed corn chips to 2/3 cup and process cheese spread to 1/2 cup. Prepare patties as directed. Place patties on rack of broiler pan. Broil on both sides to desired doneness. Heat remaining process cheese spread in saucepan over low heat. Continue as directed.

ITALIANO SANDWICH

1 small onion, sliced
1/2 cup chopped zucchini
1/2 cup chopped red or green pepper
1 tablespoon margarine
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves, crushed
6 mild Italian sausages

(See SANDWICH, D-2)

ROBUST MEALS — Turn sandwich preparation into an international affair with Gourmet Mexican Burgers and Italiano Sandwiches. Corn chips and process cheese spread (mild, hot or jalapeno) are added to beef patties for a spicy ingredient boost. Tex-Mex finishing touches — ripe tomato slices, guacamole and hot cheesy sauce — go on cooked burgers, served on a Kaiser roll. Italian sausages become robust meals on a bun when topped with hot-from-the-microwave process cheese spread and lightly sauteed fresh fall vegetables.

Guests Will Love Tasty Puffs And Bacon Bites

Stuffed Puffs are meat-filled appetizers made with frozen bread ready-dough, while Sausage Puffs are filled with cooked Italian sausage and green pepper. Bacon Bites contain crisp crumbly bacon and your choice of chutney or Parmesan cheese. Stuffed Frank Puffs are delicious bites of hot dogs and spicy mustard.

Try Sausage Puffs, Bacon Bites and Stuffed Frank Puffs at your next gathering. These simple and delicious appetizers can be prepared in advance and stored in the refrigerator. Just pop them in the oven as guests arrive and the flavorful bites will be ready in 15 minutes. You can be sure there won't be any leftovers!

BACON BITES

1 (one-pound) loaf frozen bread ready-dough
1 1/2 pounds bacon
3 tablespoons chutney (optional)

Let frozen dough thaw until pliable. (To thaw in the microwave oven, wrap loaf loosely in plastic wrap. Microwave on LOW power for 6 minutes, rotating occasionally.) Cook bacon until crisp; drain. Crumble bacon. Divide bread dough into 60 small pieces. Using a little flour on fingertips and work surface, flatten and stretch dough pieces to 1-1/2 inch diameter circles. Place 1/2 teaspoon crumbled bacon and 1/8 teaspoon chutney in center of each dough circle. Pinch dough around filling, using more flour if needed, to seal completely. Place dough balls seam sides down 1/2 inch apart on lightly greased baking sheets. Let rise at room temperature for 1 hour or in the refrigerator for several hours. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes or until golden brown. Serve warm. Makes 60 appetizers.

Cheesy Bacon Bites: Omit chutney. Roll dough balls in melted butter or margarine (1/4 cup) and Parmesan cheese (1/2 cup) before rising.

STUFFED FRANK PUFFS

1 (one-pound) loaf frozen bread ready-dough
5 hot dogs (1/2 pound)
2 tablespoons hot mustard or horseradish mustard (optional)

Let frozen dough thaw until pliable. (To thaw in the microwave oven, wrap loaf loosely in plastic wrap. Microwave on LOW power for 6 minutes, rotating occasionally.) Cut each hot dog into 10 pieces. Dab a small amount of hot mustard on the end of each piece. Divide bread dough into 50 small pieces, Using a little flour on fingertips and work surface, flatten and stretch dough pieces to 2-inch diameter circles. Plan Ahead In Order To Avoid The 'Dine And Dash' Syndrome

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

With the hectic pace of '80s living, more and more people find themselves eating on the run between work, household responsibilities, exercising and social activities.

But you can get the jump on the "dine and dash" syndrome by keeping some basic ingredients on hand. Then when your schedule leaves the dinner issue up for grabs again, you can smile smugly to yourself. At home in your refrigerator will already await the necessary ingredients to prepare three wholesome and delicious meals in less time than it often takes to complete a business phone call or get through the first three aerobic songs.

All three of these main dish recipes feature flank steak, which can be marinated and cooked ahead of time, to insure time-saving preparation later. It's important to be sure not to overcook the beef for the first recipe, Marinated Flank Steak. Since the meat is heated abain in the second day's recipe, it will become tough if overdone the first time.

For day one, all it takes is three basic ingredients — Italian dressing, lime juice and 100 percent Swiss cheese slices — to turn beef flank steak into a delectably tender, mouthwatering main dish. Start by preheating the broiler, then scoring steak on both sides and trimming off the excess fat. For an easy marinade, combine Italian dressing with two tablespoons of lime juice (one medium lime). Pour mixture over meat that's been placed in a casserole dish; then cover. Or try using a sealable plastic bag (shake occasionally to distribute marinade).

When broiling steak, make sure it's two to three inches from the heat source. Brush frequently with left-over marinade dressing mixture. Generally, it takes about 12 minutes per side for rare and 14 minutes per side for medium doneness. Only one-third of the meat is used in this recipe. Wrap unused portions in plastic wrap or foil and refrigerate for later use in the other recipes.

Melting cheese on top — 100 percent Swiss cheese slices, monterey jack cheese or low moisture, part-skim mozzarella cheese — just before serving Marinated Flank Steak adds the finishing taste touch. Serve

Q. We decided to pay more attention to the fat, cholesterol, and sodium in our diet, but we eat at fast food places often. Is there a way to find out the calories, fat, sodium and cholesterol in fast foods? M.D., Greenville.

A. Most fast food chains have that information for customers who ask. You can ask the manager of the restaurant for a copy of its nutrient composition data. Chains like Hardees, Kentucky Fried Chicken, McDonalds, Burger King or Wendy's have booklets with that information in them. If the manager doesn't have any, write to the company's consumer relations department and they will send it to you.

The companies distribute this informaton to book authors, doctors and dietitians. I have lots of this data, but it is not easy to put in a column. You might check with your doctor's office for lists of nutrition information on fast foods. You also can look in diet books for lists, but I think getting the information from the company is best. Products and menus change often. Those changes can alter the nutritional value. You may have read, for example, that McDonalds has reduced the sodium in some products. Many chains have switched their frying fat for chicken and fish entrees to a less saturated fat. No government agency requires fast food chains to analyze the nutritional value of their foods unless they make a health claim. Many smaller chains have not gotten enough consumer interest to do so. In our area, Bojangles cannot give you the calories, fat and sodium of its food. If you'd like to encourage them to have their foods analyzed, write Bojangles Inc., Box 240239, Charlotte, N.C., 28210.

Dear Readers: As the holidays approach, many of you ask for holiday diet hints. There are at least 37 days in this season — too long to just forget about your nutritional health. You may want to adjust your goal. If you are now safely dieting and losing 1-2 pounds per week and can't bear to diet through the holidays, decide to maintain your weight. Then, restart your weight loss program after the holidays.

The women's magazines and newspaper food pages are filled with tips on how to eat lighter and still enjoy the holidays. Cut out those reminder lists and put them on the refrigerator. I always like the one that tells you not to stand too close to the buffet table. I hope hostesses will try some of the wonderful lighter recipes.

I recently have had the pleasure of working with home economists from food companies and public relations firms. I am impressed with the creativity, skill and time they have invested to develop good-tasting holiday recipes for you. Some have also developed very acceptable low-fat, low-sodium versions of traditional recipes. Give these recipes a try.

If you are having trouble following a prescribed diet, talk with your physician or nutritionist to work out adjustments for you. If you take medications, it is important to review the instructions about alcohol and timing of meals. If your prescriptions do not have instruction labels, ask your family physician or call your pharmacist. People ask me what I do during these times. I am fortunate that I do not have a medical condition that requires a modified diet. However, I do watch my total intake of calories, sodium and fat carefully. I also like all the treats. So, during the holidays I savor tastes of all the foods and beverages but I eat none of them in excess amounts. If I have stuffed myself (at mom's), I will increase my activity to compensate for those extra calories.

Great Desserts Top Off Holiday Feasts

Dramatic endings to festive feasts are an important part of holiday merrymaking. As much as opening the brightly-wrapped gifts, spectacular desserts are eagerly anticipated as the season draws near.

Show-stopping desserts that taste of tradition can be surprisingly easy to prepare. With the help of a "secret ingredient," marshmallow creme, preparation is streamlined, creamy-smooth texture is ensured, and results are party-perfect every time.

The following creations from the Kraft Kitchens showcase favorite festive flavors--cranberry and pumpkin--in new make-ahead desserts that are sure to become Christmas classics. Quick and easy to prepare, each will serve a holiday crowd.

Cranmallow Cheesecake is a happy ending with a delicate cranberry flavor and the added richness of cream cheese and whipping cream. Perfect for dessert throughout the season, it has a light yet luscious texture--especially welcome after a big meal. For extra holiday flair, garnish with whole cranberries and mint sprigs.

Pumpkin Pecan Spice Squares delight with a taste-tempting "twist" on tradition. Accented with lively spices, they boast a creamy-smooth pumpkin filling, lightly sweetened with marshmallow creme, and a gingersnap crumb crust. Fine-textured and velvety, the squares are irresistible when topped with a dollop of whipped cream and sprinkled with pecan halves--the perfect ending to a holiday feast.

CRANMALLOW CHEESECAKE

3/4 cup graham cracker crumbs
1/2 cup finely chopped macadamia nuts
1/4 cup margarine, melted
2 tablespoons sugar
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
2 8-ounce pkgs. cream cheese, softened
1 7-ounce jar marshmallow creme
1 16-ounce can whole berry cranberry sauce
1 cup whipping cream, whipped

Chicken Dish A Family Pleaser

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Treat your family like company with this elegant microwave chicken dish. The cooking time is half the conventional 25-minute cooking time.

MICROWAVE CHICKEN AND MUSHROOMS

One 10-ounce package frozen long grain and wild rice
2 whole medium chicken breasts (1 1/2 pounds total), skinned, boned and halved lengthwise
2 thin slices fully cooked ham, halved crosswise
1/2 cup shredded Swiss cheese (2 ounces)
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon instant chicken bouillon granules
3/4 teaspoon dried tarragon, crushed
1 cup light cream or milk
2 tablespoons dry white wine

Prepare rice conventionally according to package directions. Meanwhile, rinse chicken; pat dry. Place one chicken piece, boned side up, between two pieces of clear plastic wrap. Working from center to the edges, pound lightly with a meat mallet to form a rectangle about 1/4 inch thick. Remove plastic wrap. Repeat with remaining chicken.

Place one piece of ham and twotablespoons of the cheese on each chicken piece. Fold in bottom edge and sides; roll as for jellyroll and secure with wooden toothpicks, if necessary. Arrange rolls, seam side down, in 8- by 8- by 2-inch microwave-safe baking dish. Cover with vented clear plastic wrap. Microcook on 100 percent power (high) 5 to 7 minutes or until tender, giving dish a half-turn after 3 minutes and turning rolls so center portion is moved to the outside. Cover and keep warm.

For sauce, in 1-quart microwave-safe casserole cook mushrooms in margarine, covered, on high 2 to 2 1/2 minutes or until tender. Stir in flour, bouillon granules and tarragon. Add cream. Cook, uncovered, on high 3 to 4 minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring after every minute. Cook on high 30 seconds. Stir in wine. Serve over rice. Makes 4 servings.

Plan Ahead And Avoid Eating On The Run

with green beans almondine, baked or boiled potatoes and a sliced cucumber and tomato salad topped with creamy dressing. This is a meal that looks and tastes like you've been fussing in the kitchen for hours.

MARINATED FLANK STEAK

1 (1 1/2 to 2 pound) beef flank steak
1/2 cup Italian dressing
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
2 Swiss cheese slices

Score steak on both sides. Pour combined dressing and juice over steak. Cover; marinate in refrigerator two to 3 hours. Drain, reserving dressing mixture. Place steak on rack of broiler pan. Broil 12 to 14 minutes on each side or to desired doneness, brushing frequently with reserved dressing mixture. With knife slanted, carve steak across grain into thin slices. Top 1/3 of meat slices with cheese; broil 30 seconds or until cheese is melted. Wrap unused meat in plastic wrap or foil; refrigerate.

Two servings.

Spontaniety is the spice of life — especially when you're prepared. By having these simple ingredients on hand — green pepper, onion, cooking oil, barbecue sauce and flour tortillas, you can create a favorite — Fajitas — in practically no time.

It takes only a few minutes to stir-fry vegetables in hot oil and heat leftover cooked steak in barbecue sauce for a zippy flavor. Fill flour tortillas with meat and vegetables, then top with Chunky Guacamole, made with fresh avocado, chopped tomato and onion, lemon juice and garlic mixed well with salad dressing. Add a dash (or several, if you dare) of hot pepper sauce for an authentic South-of-the-border taste.

Serve Fajitas with Spanish rice or refried beans. Caramel custard makes a cool, light dessert. Leftover Chunky Guacamole makes a great dip with tortilla chips, and the other half of the avocado can be used in the beef salad recipe the next day.

FAJITAS

1 tablespoon oil
1 small green pepper, cut into strips
1 small onion, cut into thin wedges
6 ounces broiled flank steak
1/4 cup barbecue sauce
4 6-inch flour tortillas, heated

In 10-inch skillet, heat oil over medium-high heat. Stir fry vegetables until crisp-tender; remove from skillet. Reduce heat to medium. Combine steak and barbecue sauce in skillet; heat thorouhly, stirring occasionally. Fill tortillas with steak and vegetables. Top with:

CHUNKY GUACAMOLE

1/2 small avocado, peeled
2 tablespoons salad dressing
2 tablespoons chopped tomato
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 garlic clove, minced
1/8 teaspoon salt
Dash of hot pepper sauce

Mash avocado with fork just until chunky. Add remaining ingredients; mix well. Cover tightly with plastic wrap; chill.

Two servings.

The usual combination of greens turns into a simply sensational salad when made with avocado, marinated beef strips, fresh tomato wedges, mushroom slices, alphalfa sprouts, red onion rings and chunky blue cheese dressing, then topped with homemade Parmesan Salad Croutons. Easy to assemble, Encore Steak Salad can be ready in hardly any time to feed the hurry-up hunger of the two of you. While one person is preparing and arranging the greens and vegetables on an attractive platter, the other can fix the Parmesan Salad Croutons. Toss Italian bread cubes (or whole wheat bread if you prefer) with creamy-tasting melted margarine and grated parmesan cheese. Bake until lightly browned for a delightfully toasty, crunchy salad topper over chunky blue cheese dressing. Store unused croutons in an air-tight container in the refrigerator.

Warm some croissants in the oven or microwave and then spread on the margarine before serving with the salad. Finish the meal on a light note with fresh fruit in season, or for that sweet tooth, try brownies a la mode.

ENCORE STEAK SALAD

3 cups torn assorted greens
1 small tomato, cut in wedges
1/2 small avocado, peeled, sliced
1/2 cup mushroom slices
1/4 cup alphafa sprouts
Red onion rings
Chunky blue cheese dressing
Parmesan salad croutons

Arrange meat, greens and vegetables on lettuce-lined platter. Serve with dressing and croutons.

Two servings.

PARMESAN SALAD CROUTONS

2 cups Italian bread cubes
1/4 cup margarine, melted
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Toss bread with margarine and cheese. Place in 15 by 10 by 1-inch jelly roll pan. Bake at 350 degrees, 12 to 14 minutes or until lightly browned, stirring occasionally.

Leftovers Can Provide More Than A Sandwich

For most of us, one of the joys of Thanksgiving is leftover turkey, although too much of a good thing is still too much. But turkey is a versatile, lowfat meat that can serve as the basis for not only tempting turkey sandwiches, but a wide variety of dishes ranging from the simple to the elegant.

It's important, however, to make sure the turkey meat is properly stored to maintain its flavor. Remove any stuffing from the roast bird, and remove meat from the bone as soon as possible. Wrap meat loosely or place in a covered dish and refrigerate promptly. Or, wrap it tightly in moisture-proof wrapping paper or foil to freeze.

There are few meat recipes that can't be converted to include your leftover turkey. Turkey cubes are great in place of beef in stew or in place of fish in chowder. Substitute slices of turkey breast for veal in French cuisine or in place of pork in a Chinese stir-fry. Turkey's mild flavor makes it a natural in "hot" dishes like chili or curry. And give turkey a try in spaghetti sauce, quiche, enchiladas, lasagna, or any of you favorite casseroles. You may find that you don't want to save this economical, lowfat meat just for the holidays!

TURKEY ALMOND CASSEROLE

There's a bit of tang in the sweet flavor of this casserole. Serve it over brown rice, accompanied by a vegetable salad and/or steamed broccoli or carrots.

3/4 cup pineapple chunks packed in juice (about 6 ounces)
2 cups turkey, cooked and diced
2 stalks celery, diagonally sliced
1 green pepper, cut into 1-inch squares
1/4 cup toasted whole almonds
1 1/2 cups chicken bouillon, preferably low sodium
1/2 cup sherry
3 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons soy sauce
3/4 teaspoons ground ginger
1/4-1/2 teaspoons garlic powder
1 small tomato, cut into wedges
2 tablespoons green onion slices, including tops

Drain the pineapple, reserving juice for the sauce. Combine the pineapple with the turkey, celery, green pepper and almonds in a 2-quart casserole. Combine reserved pineapple juice with enough chicken bouillon to measure 2 cups. Blend sherry and cornstarch together well. Add to juice mixture along with soy sauce, ginger and garlic powder; stir well. Pour over turky mixture and mix well.

Bake in a 375 degree oven, uncovered, for 40 minutes or until sauce has thickened, stirring occasionally. Add tomato wedges and sprinkle with green onion. Bake 5 minutes longer or until heated through. Serve over brown rice.

This recipe makes four servings, each with 272 calories and 8 grams of fat.

White Chocolate Shells

6 scallop shells
2 cups chopped white chocolate

Place scallop shells in freezer overnight. Melt white chocolate in top of double boiler over hot water or carefully in microwave.

Spoon to coat back of a scallop shell sprayed with non-stick coating, rotating to spread chocolate evenly and thickly. Place on saucer and freeze quickly just until set. Carefully remove molded chocolate from scallop shell. Repeat with remaining scallop shells and chocolate (Paper cups with fluted sides can be substituted for shells).

Bacon Bites Sure To Please

hours. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes or until golden brown. Serve warm. Makes 50 appetizers.

SAUSAGE PUFFS

1 (one-pound) loaf frozen bread ready-dough
1 pound Italian sausage (6 sausages)
1/2 medium green pepper (optional)

Let frozen dough thaw until pliable. (To thaw in the microwave oven, wrap loaf loosely in plastic wrap. Microwave on LOW power for 6 minutes, rotating occasionally.) Cut Italian sausages in half lengthwise. Fry sausage in a skillet until thoroughly cooked. Cut each piece into 4 to make 48 pieces total. Cut green pepper into 48 1/2-inch square pieces and fry in fat remaining in skillet until slightly tender. Divide bread dough into 48 small pieces. Using a little flour on fingertips and work surface, flatten and stretch dough pieces to 2-inch diameter circles. Place 1 piece Italian sausage and 1 piece green pepper in center of each dough circle. Pinch dough around filling, using more flour if needed, to seal completely. Place dough balls seam sides down 1/2 inch apart on lightly greased baking sheets. Let rise at room temperature for 1 hour or in the refrigerator for several hours. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes or until golden brown. Serve warm. Makes 48 appetizers.

Sandwich Supper Good Option

process cheese spread

In 1 1/2-quart bowl, combine onions, zucchini, peppers and margarine. Microwaave on HIGH 3-1/2 to 4 minutes or until vegetables are tender, stirring after 2 minutes. Stir in basil. Place sausages in shallow baking dish; cover with wax paper. Microwave 10 to 12 minutes or until thoroughly heated, turning sausages over and rearranging after every 5 minutes. Microwave process cheese spread according to label directions. For each sandwich, fill bun with sausage; top with process cheese spread and vegetable mixture. 6 servings.

MICROWAVE TIP: Pierce each sausage with fork before microwaving to prevent rupturing.

CONVENTIONAL: Saute onions, zucchini and peppers in margarine in small skillet until tender. Stir in basil. Broil sausages to desired doneness. Heat process cheese spread in saucepan over low heat. Assemble sandwiches as directed.

Soup Fits Cool Weather Menu

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

With cooler days here, soup heads the menu more often. Here are some tips from our test kitchen for making soup preparation easier and faster:

When cooking dried beans, you don't have to soak them overnight. Rinse and drain them. Then combine the beans with water in a Dutch oven. Bring to boiling; reduce heat and simmer 2 minutes. Remove from the heat. Cover and let stand for 1 hour. Drain off the soaking liquid and add fresh water and other ingredients.

Season beef soup with a bouquet garnish. Tie 2 bay leaves, 2 cloves garlic, 4 sprigs parsley, tops from 3 stalks celery and 2 teaspoons dried thyme in a double thickness of cheesecloth. Add the bag when you add the liquid. Fish out the bag with a kitchen fork when the soup is done.

For smooth pureed vegetables for a creamed soup, cook them until they are very tender.

To thicken vegetable soup, mash some of the vegetables slightly or add a pureed vegetable.

You can use your microwave oven to cook soup, but it's faster only if you're cooking about 6 cups or less. A larger amount will cook just as fast on the range.

Dress up homemade soup or stew with a tortilla soup bowl. Warm 9- or 10-inch tortillas in a large skillet over low heat until warm and pliable. Place it in an oven-proof soup bowl, fluting it to fit. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 10 minutes. Ladle the soup into the tortilla in the bowl.

Refrigerate or freeze leftover soups for a fast meal another day. Do not freeze soups made with milk, cheese, sour cream or yogurt.

Gifts Of Food Appreciated By Recipient

Homemade gifts can be the most personal and thoughtful of holiday gifts, conveying warmth and good wishes better than anything else. And gifts of food, beautifully packaged, are always welcome and appreciated.

Food gifts can be tucked under the Christmas tree or hand-delivered. Some people like to send them instead of cards to special friends and family. However they are presented, choose food gifts appropriately. For example, the more perishable items should be hand-delivered; good "keepers" are best for mailing. Decorative labels can identify each one and provide instructions for proper storage. Include a copy of the recipe and your gift becomes one that will be remembered and used all year.

But what to make? For those who like to plan ahead, bake several loaves of Savory Cheddar Bread, a quick-to-mix loaf featuring ready-shredded natural cheddar cheese and savory seasonings. Cool each loaf completely, then wrap securely in foil and freeze until it's gift-giving time.

Another good "keeper" is Cheesy Popcorn. It's easy and economical and everyone loves it. Simply pop the corn and stir in melted butter and Parmesan, Parmesan and Romano or grated cheese. Pack it in a decorative tin or fill food-safe plastic bags with the cheesy snack and securely tie the opening with festive ribbon.

Convenient shredded Swiss cheese gives you a head start on Swiss Cheese Spread. A gourmet blend of the finest Swiss cheese, sour cream, onion and bacon, this spread can be prepared in no time, perfect for those last-minute gifts. Pack in small covered bowls, crocks, single-size serving casserole dishes or other small containers. For the finishing touch, add a few streamers of holiday ribbon and attach a sprig of holly or evergreen.

CHEESY POPCORN

2 quarts popped popcorn
1/3 cup butter or margarine
1/2 cup Parmesan, Parmesan and Romano, or grated cheese

Spread freshly popped corn in a flat pan; keep hot and crisp in low oven. Melt butter; add grated cheese. Pour mixture over corn. Stir until every kernel is cheese flavored. Makes about 2 quarts.

SWISS CHEESE SPREAD

2 packages (4 ounces each) shredded Swiss cheese
3 tablespoons sour cream
2 tablespoons minced onion
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
4 slices crisply fried bacon, crumbled

Combine all ingredients; beat until smooth and of a spreading consistency. Chill. Makes about two cups spread.

SAVORY CHEDDAR BREAD

2 cups all-purpose flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon onion salt
1/2 teaspoon crushed oregano
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1 package (4 oz.) shredded cheddar cheese
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon butter or margarine, melted

Stir together flour, baking powder, sugar, onion salt, oregano, dry mustard and cheese in a bowl. Combine egg, milk and butter; add all at once to dry ingredients, stirring just until moistened. Spread batter in a greased 4 1/2 by 8 1/2 by 2-1/2-inch loaf pan. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for 45 minutes. Cool 10 minutes on a wire rack. Remove from pan. Makes one loaf.

AFTER DINNER CAFE

2 cups hot coffee
1 whole cinnamon stick
1 small piece lemon peel
2 Tablespoons coffee-flavored liqueur

In small saucepan over low heat, combine coffee, lemon peel and cinnamon stick, covered, about seven minutes. Stir in liqueur. Remove and discard lemon peel. Makes 2 servings. Each serving contains 45 calories, a trace of protein and fat, 5 grams carbohydrates, no cholesterol, and 2 milligrams sodium.

A lot of companies can make you a lot of promises. And if they don't fulfill them, the last thing they want is for you to call them on it.

You should expect our service to be as dependable as our products are. And, to that end, we try to be perfect. But sometimes a gentle reminder can help us become even better.

So, hold on to this ad. The next time we service your Kenmore appliance, or deliver a new one, check our performance against this list.
