Prospects Seen For Progress On Strategic Pact

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev headed today for summit talks with President Reagan capping an agreement to dismantle their medium-range nuclear missiles but clouded by concerns over U.S. "Star Wars" plans and the plight of Soviet Jews.

Even as Gorbachev met with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher outside London for presummit discussions en route to Washington, U.S. and Soviet diplomats predicted that the Gorbachev-Reagan summit will yield progress toward a bolder, more far-reaching accord to reduce arsenals of strategic nuclear weapons.

Success in Washington this week could pave the way for an agreement signed in Moscow as early as next June.

The general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, making his first visit to the United States, was to arrive with his wife, Raisa, at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., outside Washington in late afternoon.

Gorbachev will be welcomed officially by Shultz, and the two men and their wives will meet for tea at the Soviet Embassy this evening. That was the only other event on Gorbachev's schedule before he meets with Reagan on Tuesday.

About two hours after Gorbachev's blue-and-white Ilyushin 62 jetliner touches down, U.S. arms control negotiator Maynard Glitman was to arrive from Geneva carrying the 150-page text of the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces or INF treaty in his briefcase.

Glitman's rush to Washington on the eve of the summit underscored the difficulties that confronted American and Soviet negotiators in meeting the deadline for completing the final draft of the treaty, which would scrap all medium-range missiles over the next three years.

"In my view the centerpiece is the next step — to talk about guidelines to our diplomats, to sign next year when the president comes to Moscow another treaty which will be much more important, cutting by half our nuclear strategic defense forces," Soviet spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said today.

"I see we have political will on both sides to reach it, and if you have political will on both sides, then there is a way," Gerasimov said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show.

Said Secretary of State George Shultz: "I feel quite sure that we'll make some progress ... but we will not be anywhere near a treaty."

Shultz, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said that besides the signing of a treaty to eliminate medium-range missiles, U.S. officials hope there

Thatcher Endorses Arms Pact

BRIZE NORTON, England (AP) — Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev got a resounding endorsement from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of the U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms treaty when the two met today on the eve of the superpowers' Washington summit.

"We are living in historic times and the treaty which Mr. Gorbachev is going to sign is a historic treaty," Mrs. Thatcher said after two hours of talks and shortly before the general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party departed.

Gorbachev, standing next to the British prime minister, said in his reply: "We are prepared to go on acting in this spirit."

The Communist Party leader's Ilyushin 62 airliner took off at 1:59 p.m. (8:59 a.m. EST). It was expected to land in Washington late this afternoon.

On Tuesday, Gorbachev and President Reagan are to sign an accord eliminating all intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Defense Calls No Witnesses In Deaver Trial

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense lawyers in Michael K. Deaver's perjury trial today rested their case without calling any witnesses after the judge refused to dismiss any of the charges against the former presidential aide.

"Based on the evidence we've heard presented over the past several weeks, we have decided we have no need to put on any defense at all. Accordingly, we rest, your honor," lead defense attorney Herbert J. Miller Jr. told U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson.

Miller rested his case after Jackson had denied a series of defense motions for directed verdicts of acquittal on all five charges that Deaver lied to a House subcommittee and a grand jury about his lobbying activities.

The former deputy White House chief of staff is accused of lying when he said he could not recall a series of contacts with former Reagan administration colleagues on behalf of lobbying clients.

After the jury was excused, Miller explained that he was basing his decision not to put on a defense on the judge's refusal to strike portions of the indictment on the basis that the prosecutor had not proven Deaver had lied.

Last week the prosecution rested without calling three witnesses whom Deaver is alleged to have met. But in a ruling today Jackson said he could not extract from the indictment those alleged false statements because the law provides that other portions of the counts have been sufficiently proven.

"The fact that other specifications may not be sufficient does not entitle the defense to dismissal of either that count or motions to strike or withdraw" those allegations, said Jackson.

The judge ruled that those motions could be renewed after the defense had completed presentation of its case. But Deaver's lawyers had hoped to strike the allegations from the indictment before deciding whether to put their client on the witness stand.

Last week independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. argued that he would be entitled to ask Deaver about certain unproved allegations if the former presidential aide testified in his own behalf.

Jackson last week said he was "sufficiently troubled" by the prospect that Deaver could incriminate himself and reserved decision on the defense motions, but today Jackson sided with the prosecution, saying its interpretation of the law meant that those specifications of false testimony

Iranian Missile Fired At Kuwaiti Installation

By ABDEL-JALIL MUSTAFA
Associated Press Writer

KUWAIT (AP) — Iran today fired a Silkworm missile at an installation in Kuwaiti waters but it missed its target, the Kuwaiti Defense Ministry said.

The missile crashed into the water off southern Kuwait, causing no damage, an unidentified ministry spokesman said in a statement carried by the Kuwait news agency. The statement, which did not identify the intended target, said the missile was fired at 7:53 a.m. local time.

There was no immediate reaction from Iran about the incident.

Shipping sources in Kuwait, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the missile hit an unused facility, about one mile south of al-Ahmadi, Kuwait's offshore oil loading terminal. They did not name or describe the facility.

Other shipping executives based in neighboring Saudi Arabian ports said they were told the missile struck one of the decoy barges the Kuwaitis had placed off Ahmadi to help protect installations from Iranian missile attacks.

Earlier today, the official Iraq News Agency reported the missile struck a floating industrial platform off southern Kuwait. The dispatch, monitored in Cyprus, gave no other details and did not identify the Kuwaiti platform.

It was not immediately possible to reconcile the differences in the four reports on the missile firing.

Iran has lobbed at least six missiles into Kuwait and its territorial waters this year after accusing the Arab state of actively aiding Iraq in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war. Three of the attacks were carried out in October.

Silkworm missiles, believed to have been fired from Iran-held territory in Iraq's southern Faw peninsula, hit oil tankers off Kuwait on Oct. 15 and Oct. 16. A third on Oct. 22 crashed into Sea Island terminal.

U.S. Urges Restraint From Israel

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has asked Israel to refrain from retaliating against Syria for a hang-glider attack by a Syrian-backed guerrilla group that killed six Israeli soldiers, State Department officials said today.

U.S. diplomats have also asked Israel to use its influence with the Palestinian guerrilla group that carried out the Nov. 25 attack in northern Israel and prevent further actions by the group against Israel, the officials said.

"We've asked both sides to exercise restraint," said one official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "It's much better to avoid escalation between Syria and Israel," he added, noting that the two enemy states had enjoyed relatively calm relations in recent months.

The requests to both sides were made last week in the wake of concern expressed by Jordan's King Hussein that Israel was planning a retaliatory strike for one of the bloodiest attacks against its troops in recent years, said the official.

The summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev was also a factor, he added. The Soviets support Syria while the United States supports Israel in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Policy Would Allow Carols In Schools

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Are students allowed to sing Christmas carols such as "Silent Night" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem" during the school day in the Pitt County schools?

The proposed religion policy, earmarked for consideration by the Pitt County Board of Education tonight, says "yes."

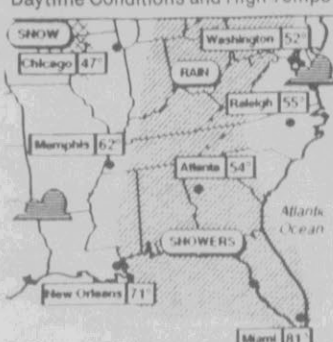

But, according to question and answer exhibit presented in the proposed policy, "The setting for the singing of religious carols must be in a secular instructional context."

Suggested ways of doing this include having teachers "explain the historical background and the musical significance of the carols in a non-indoctrinating manner. It would be helpful to include in any carol singing program some non-religious music relevant to the holiday, for example, 'Jingle Bells' or 'White Christmas' as well as songs from other faiths such as Hanukkah songs," the exhibit says.

From Leaf To Vine

GREENSBORO (AP) — Tobacco farmers are hearing through the grapevine the benefits of switching from the leaf to the vine.

At the 10th annual Vinifera Wine Growers Association conference in Greensboro last weekend, speakers came to praise the economic virtue of the grape.

"You can harvest three tons an acre and gross maybe $1,200 a ton," said Larry Somers, a Reidsville man who is preparing farmland for a vineyard. "Tobacco you can get a ton to the acre and get $2 a pound, but the cost of growing tobacco is greater because you need fertilizer."

DECAY AN OCCUPATIONAL HAZARD

Did you ever think of tooth decay as being an occupational hazard? Well, it is, at least indirectly.

Certain types of dental decay, especially those occurring on the neck of the teeth (gingival decay), are frequently associated with occupations involving constant and direct contact with the public. Salespeople, secretaries, and bank clerks, to give just a few examples, need to talk to their customers from a distance of only a foot or two. Concerned about stale or unpleasant breath, many of these people make almost constant use of chewing gum, fruit drops, or candy mints as breath sweeteners. Dental decay is then almost inevitable.

This habit should be avoided strenuously. Sugarless gum and drops can help. Keeping a toothbrush handy for use after lunch and coffee break should also do the trick. Remember, your breath doesn't have to be minty to be acceptable.

We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

LOCATION, CONDITION, PRICE & TERMS!

How do buyers decide what price to pay for a home, once that perfect home has been located?

It is generally thought that the seller sets the price on his home, not the buyer. Yet, when the buying decision is made, it is really the buyers who decide how much value they expect to receive for the money spent, and how much to spend for the value they expect to receive.

Thus, buyers take into account four major items when making a decision to purchase: 1) location, 2) condition, 3) price, and 4) terms. All four are used to compare the various homes available which meet the buyers' needs.

For example, in deciding between two possible homes, one of which is near an elementary school, and the other three miles from the nearest school, purchasers with three school-age children may be willing to pay a slightly higher price for a comparable home with the more desirable location near schools.

Especially favorable terms, such as generous owner financing, may also influence some homebuyers favorably, resulting in a higher price being paid. On the contrary, a home begging for maintenance and physical repairs may generate a lower than expected offer.

Prospects Seen By Diplomats For Progress On Arms Agreement will be some progress on "the more important issues," including human rights.

Shultz also expressed confidence that Reagan "does very well" in negotiating with Gorbachev, based on their two past summit meetings in Geneva in November 1985 and at Iceland in October 1986, although recent domestic criticism of Reagan might hurt.

"It of course hurts a little bit because the Soviets want to deal with somebody who has strength and can deliver," Shultz said.

On the same TV show, former White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan said the president "can handle Gorbachev," but Malcolm Toon, who was President Carter's ambassador to Moscow in the late 1970s, said he was "very uneasy" about Reagan.

"He doesn't do his homework very well," Toon said, while Gorbachev "is on top of all these issues. I'm afraid that we may wind up with a near-disaster, such as we had at Reykjavik."

On his way to Washington, Gorbachev met with Mrs. Thatcher at Brize Norton air force base 65 miles northwest of London for two hours of talks.

Afterward, Mrs. Thatcher said the "historic treaty" that Reagan and Gorbachev are to sign on Tuesday represents "a source of extra security and extra joy" for the world, "and is the promise of more progress to come."

Standing next to the British leader, Gorbachev said: "We are prepared to go on acting in this spirit."

British sources said she was telling Gorbachev that superpower agreement on a research timetable for Star Wars, the space-based missile defense system, could lead to a new treaty on cutting long-range nuclear weapons by 50 percent.

It was Reagan's Star Wars program that stalemated the last U.S.-Soviet summit in Reykjavik, Iceland. The plight of Soviet Jews, dramatized by a rally that brought 200,000 demonstrators to the capital on Sunday, also loomed large as Gorbachev begins his American visit.

Reagan, in a written message to the demonstrators, said: "I have high hopes for new, forward steps by the Soviets. I shall press for them in my talks with General Secretary Gorbachev in the coming days — for the release of all refuseniks, for full freedom of emigration and for complete freedom of religion and cultural expression."

Star Wars and the human rights issue will color the atmosphere, if not the eventual outcome, of the talks Reagan will hold with Gorbachev at the White House.

On Star Wars, the Soviets again on Sunday appeared willing to put aside differences over an anti-missile defense in space in order to make progress on a treaty to reduce long-range nuclear arms.

But Shultz, taking a hard line, warned that Reagan would be "pressure-proof" to any attempt by Gorbachev to slow down the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is known officially, during the talks opening Tuesday.

Shultz said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley" that the United States intended to "go ahead with the tests — the specific tests that will allow our research to continue in a profitable way. That is what we need to do." Meanwhile, a massive demonstration in Washington on behalf of Soviet Jews who want to emigrate — plus a violence-marred protest in Moscow — dramatized superpower differences on human rights.

Gorbachev's first visit to America marks the third effort by the president and the general secretary to lower nuclear tensions and put the U.S.-Soviet relationship on a more stable footing.

Both have their critics at home. Some of Reagan's old conservative allies even suggested he was being duped by Gorbachev to weaken U.S. defenses. The Soviet leader has his own problems inside the Kremlin over pursuing economic reforms.

And yet, both Reagan and Gorbachev seemed firmly in charge as they ascended the summit again.

Their first, mostly get-acquainted session in Geneva in November 1985 produced little of substance. But they agreed on a scenario for arms reductions in Reykjavik — before that summit collapsed under the weight of Star Wars.

Awaiting their signatures in this go-round is a treaty to scrap all intermediate-range nuclear missiles over three years.

It will make history by being the first accord to ban an entire category of nuclear weapons — that is, if the Senate overcomes the opposition of a determined contingent of conservative Republicans and votes for ratification.

Still, the INF treaty is considered only a preliminary step toward a wide-ranging pact to cut long-range bombers, missiles and submarines on both sides by up to 50 percent.

Gorbachev and other Soviet officials indicated they might not be so demanding during this summit on the subject of Star Wars.

Farm Scene

By PHILLIP ROWAN
Pitt Extension Agent

Hay is generally used in this part of the state as the primary feed for cattle during the winter months when no green forage is available.

Often, top quality hay will have enough nutrients to maintain certain classes of cattle, such as mature dry cows.

Frequently, however, hay used in our area is low quality and needs to be supplemented with a protein and/or energy source.

The best way to find out the nutrient content of a hay is to have it analyzed by a lab.

The North Carolina Department of Agriculture Forage Testing Facility tests feeds for North Carolina farmers for a nominal fee.

The information derived from this test can let a cattle producer know how much supplement (if needed) and what type of supplement is needed to balance a ration for cattle fed primarily hay.

Many times a farmer will purchase hay before it has been analyzed for nutrient content.

When buying hay on visual observation, one should consider the following factors:

(1) Stage of harvest — higher quality hay should be cut before blossom or heading, so look for hay that has few seed heads and blooms.

(2) Leafiness — very leafy hay is best; stemmy hay is unpalatable and low in nutrients.

(3) Color — hay should be a natural green color and not brown or black.

(4) Odor — good hay has a clean, "crop odor"; it should not be dusty, moldy or burnt.

(5) Softness — quality hay is very soft and pliable, not brittle.

(6) Other factors — free of trash, weeds, dirt, and foreign material.

Of course, the ultimate test of hay quality is animal performance.

To achieve good animal performance from cattle fed hay, cattle producers should look for the factors mentioned above, analyze hays for nutrient content, and balance rations accordingly.

Contact the Agricultural Extension Office at 830-6361 for more information.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Hard Lesson

Forty-six years ago today, the United States learned a lesson.

It was a hard lesson, taught by destruction and needless death. The lesson was: be prepared. Don't tout your might to the world, then sleep.

When Japanese fighters shrieked through the sky at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, dropping their deadly bombs on an unsuspecting American Pacific Fleet, the focus of American military strategy changed. It had to. The nation had been attacked by an aggressor. The unthinkable had occurred. Isolationism was effectively dead.

The act also altered the lives of many Americans — those in uniform and those at home. Some of those whose lives were most poignantly affected by the attack — the North Carolina survivors of Pearl Harbor — met in Greenville Saturday to commemorate the incident. The group brought its memories and stories to share. Their words remind the public of just how fragile peace is, and how political folly can destroy it.

Pearl Harbor was more than a simple sneak attack. It was the result of a nation out of touch with global affairs. The United States made several mistakes in the pre-war years that encouraged the Pearl Harbor catastrophe.

For example, the United States did not recognize the escalation of the hostile relationship between itself and Japan and did not heed the warning signals of the approaching conflict. Buried under a policy of isolationism, the nation had little appreciation of the political and military situation in the Far East. The balance of power in that area had changed without the United States' knowledge, and the nation could no longer achieve its objectives in the Far East without force.

Therefore, when negotiating with Japan to ease tension, the United States made unrealistic demands. There was no meaningful dialogue.

In addition, the United States misinterpreted danger signs. Leaders knew, because of a key crack in the code the Japanese used to communicate, that an act of aggression was impending. They simply underestimated the Japanese threat and were caught sleeping.

The scenario is not inconsistent with the United States' present foreign policy interpretation of Middle East and Central American relationships. That is why, when the Pearl Harbor survivors meeting in Greenville relived their tales of 1941, the stories of tragedy and bravery should be remembered.

They are the lessons of a nation whose incognizance and naivete changed the course of a century, a divergence that began 46 years ago today.

Growing Potential

The second North Carolina Vegetable Expo held here this week has a message for farmers of the area.

It is that vegetable cultivation can play an important role in continued farming for eastern North Carolina.

The exposition, sponsored by the North Carolina Vegetable Growers Association, offered 48 different presentations on vegetable cultivation and marketing. It included such topics as potato growing and precooling and packaging of vegetables. Video tapes were prepared which will be available to vegetable farmers. There were also displays provided by suppliers which included seeds, irrigation equipment and greenhouse packages.

While Pitt County is not yet a major vegetable growing county, it was the site of the expo because of its central location.

North Carolina grows 180,000 acres of vegetables and two-thirds of that is within a 100-mile radius of Greenville. Much of the acreage involves potatoes grown in northeastern counties, and cucumbers and squash grown in Sampson and Johnson counties.

Obviously vegetable production is important to eastern North Carolina and it can be important to Pitt and surrounding counties. Two factors influence its success. First, development of a major canning facility in the area would provide a ready market for locally grown produce. Second, the Farmers Market can also provide a way to extensively market vegetables.

North Carolina is capable of great diversity in horticulture, but that variety is dependent on good markets — a fact witnessed by the growth of asparagus and grape farming in the southeastern sector.

Developing these markets locally is an effort that will involve farmers, the Pitt Development Commission and potential buyers of vegetables. The county has the land and climate for vegetable production and heavily populated areas which provide potential markets are not far away. It is an opportunity that should not be overlooked.

Gorbachev Studying American Methods

'You're learning too fast how to sidestep the tough questions without sounding rude, how to charm your audience without telling them what they really want to know.'

WASHINGTON — Hold on, Mikhail! You've been watching us too closely. You're learning too fast how to sidestep the tough questions without sounding rude, how to charm your audience without telling them what they really want to know. You've probably even been screening those great old videotapes of President Reagan in action — the ones they gave you to take home before the summit.

Of course the things that Soviet leaders would rather not discuss are a lot harder to gloss over than those an American president would just as soon avoid. Budget deficits and arms-for-hostages trades are bad things, but they're not in a league with the Berlin wall or forced labor camps. Even with glasnost, you don't have to put up with reporters like me dogging your every step. Still, you're learning fast.

In your interview with NBC's Tom Brokaw last week, for example, you put to excellent use all the modern techniques with which our president has so endeared himself to the American audience. Your people must have managed to get a copy of the White House manual on television speeches because you've clearly mastered some of the hardest chapters, such as, "How to take a flying leap over history," or "How to make people forget who's been in charge" and "When in trouble, skip the details."

It wasn't hard for seasoned White House watchers to spot these tricks in your maiden appearance on U.S. television. But don't worry, you can go on using them for a long time. For all our efforts to police his rhetoric, Reagan still never lets the truth get in the way of a good line. I suppose he'll retire to Santa Barbara in 15 months believing that Congress appropriates every nickel and presidents don't spend a dime.

Just like Reagan, you made it clear how hard it is for the man at the top to know about all the troublesome things that a big government may get into. For example, take Brokaw's suggestion that the Soviets are also developing a strategic defense program. I had just assumed you knew what was going on out there at the Shary Shagan Missile Test Center. But your response made me realize that nitty-gritty details never make it to the highest levels of the Kremlin. "Well, it's really hard to say what the Soviet Union is not doing," you answered. "Practically, the Soviet Union is doing all that the United States is doing, and I guess we are engaged in research, basic research..." You (ital) guess? (unital) It's (ital) really hard to say? (unital) Nice touch.

And then there was the human rights discussion in which you said the United States, in pushing for increased emigration from the Soviet Union, was selfishly trying to organize a "brain drain" from your country. How does this square with the fact that Soviet leaders were so willing to allow a "brain drain" at the height of detente in the last decade, when, for example, Soviet Jews were permitted to leave by the tens of thousands?

Where better to learn this lesson than from Reagan: "What we did before has nothing to do with what we're doing now."

There's another favorite Reagan line you might want to borrow, this one from the Iran-Contra affair: "Mistakes were made." It has a nice ring to it. If anyone asks you who made the mistakes, borrow another favorite White House response: "They know who they are."

It was hard to sit still when Brokaw asked you about the Berlin Wall. As you know, there was speculation earlier this year that you would call Reagan's bluff and, in a stunning gesture, take down the Wall, as he had demanded at Brandenburg Gate last summer. Instead you told Brokaw the Wall was erected to protect East Germany from the "great harm" done to it through West Berlin.

The history books tell a different story. Between 1949, when the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) was founded, and 1961, when the Wall was built, almost 3 million people, or one in every six, are estimated to have abandoned East Germany for the West.

In other words, the Wall was built to keep people in, not to protect them from outsiders.

But if you do decide to change your mind and order the Wall destroyed, don't worry about consistency. Reagan has perfected the quick retreat, and you're welcome to steal any of his material. Remember how the president went on television to tell us that keeping the Marines in Lebanon was vital to American national security? When he pulled them out a few months later, he simply issued a written statement saying they were being "redeployed" a few miles to the West. This put them aboard ships in the Mediterranean.

Perhaps this last term of art will also come in handy if you decide to "redeploy" Soviet forces out of Afghanistan.

Whatever your next move in Afghanistan, remember that even the best rhetorical devices finally get stale. Don't you get tired of hearing that SDI is not a bargaining chip? Well, the same goes for your use of the old explanation — first proffered by Brezhnev to Jimmy Carter — that the invasion of Afghanistan was simply a response to an "appeal" for Soviet help.

True, there was an appeal from the government of President Hafizullah Amin. But this "appeal" was followed by a Soviet invasion in which Amin was killed. The announcement of the new government under Soviet-backed leader Babrak Karmal came from a transmitter inside the Soviet Union purporting to be Radio Afghanistan.

As they say, Mikhail, "mistakes were made." Reagan offered you a polite way out last week when he said "there were other leaders under which this happened." Or, as the president might say in private, it was not on your watch.

While you're at the White House, stop in at the family theatre. No doubt the president would be delighted to show you some of those slick commercials from 1984, "It's morning again in America."

You might want to adapt them for selling perestroika.

Black Success Independent Of Programs

WASHINGTON — At a crucial moment, a federal program made the difference.

For James McNeil, it was a trumpet. The federal Title I program provided his rural Alabama high school the funds for a trumpet that he was loaned for free. That federal trumpet got him to college, courtesy of three music scholarships. Today, he is president of his own high-tech business.

For Arthur Smith, it was a federal civil service exam. Until he took it, he was stuck as a building guard. The exam got him a job as an accountant. Today he is a GS-13 with the Maritime Administration.

For Dwight Ford, it was the federal 8A minority contractor program. Under it, a company called Athena Technologies was established as a "Beltway Bandit" professional services firm. Athena gave Ford his first real job after college, and that led him to a high-flying high-technology career with Control Data and now Electronic Data Systems, the firm founded by H. Ross Perot.

All three of these people are black. All three tell success stories that bring a small tear to your eye. And for all three, at absolutely crucial moments, one federal program in social engineering or another appeared and made the difference, literally changing their lives and allowing them to lift themselves to the success they enjoy today.

What's more, these federally funded nudges seem undeniably to have had a multiplier effect. McNeil's daughter, Ashley, Smith's children, DeMaurice and Cheryl, and Ford's daughter, Christina, are as hard-wired into a path of education and achievement as any young people you're likely to meet. Their life paths seem virtually to guarantee that they and in turn their children will be propelled into tomorrow's upper middle class.

I come by this thinking as a result of the reporting I have been doing for the past six months on the new black middle class in the Washington area and in America. I have interviewed countless so-called Buppies, black upwardly mobile professionals. As I have collected their life stories, just about all of them volunteered stories like McNeil's, Smith's and Ford's. Sooner or later they mentioned a federal program that dramatically affected their lives.

Full disclosure: I am a true believer in the forces of the marketplace. I love Thomas Sowell's analyses. He is the black economist who makes liberals crazy by doing statistical work showing how minorities worldwide succeed or fail largely without regard to well- or ill-meant social programs.

Frankly, I have applauded some of the changes in thinking I have seen in Washington in the past decade. The conservative analysis has been convincing: the solution to a problem and the creation of a federal program are not necessarily the same thing.

Many federal programs could not look such a challenge straight in the eye, and some of them are no longer with us.

Certainly none of these programs caused the successes I have been looking at. The stories I have collected are ones of individual grit, of people grasping opportunity for themselves. Hard work. Long nights. Multiple jobs. Higher education. The whole drill. Makes you proud to be an American.

It really does. There are also vast historical forces at work. A pent-up high-velocity gush of black ambition and frustration and drive was unleashed by the legal end of American apartheid with the 1964 Civil Rights Act. High school graduation rates for blacks almost tripled in 25 years — a blink of an eye in historical terms. This drove those with the guts to persevere into the heart of an economy that, as it happens, simultaneously was being transformed into one that was producing mostly white-collar, middle-class jobs, instead of blue-collar, manufacturing jobs.

One result is this new and growing middle class.

Despite all that, I want to leave a note to future historians. It's about those few lonely souls left in this town who created all those Great Society programs and really believed in them. Maybe believe in them still.

Strength For Today

John Adams and his wife Abigail trained their son, John Quincy Adams, for the greatness he attained. The father took the boy on an important diplomatic mission when the youngster was only 11 years old, and at 15 John Quincy was secretary to the diplomatic mission to Russia.

Abigail Adams, writing to her son at this time, said: "Your conscience is the minister plenipotentiary of God in your breast." John Adams lived to see his son become president of the United States as the father himself had been. John and Abigail Adams stand out as two of the most conscientious and successful parents in the history of our country. It is interesting to note that their training of their distinguished son always emphasized the vital role of religion.

Sum Of Summit Larger Than Petty Politics

Analysis

WASHINGTON — In the good old days, when everything naturally was better, American politics was supposed to stop "at the water's edge." It seldom did, of course. The history of this century is replete with examples of how extreme partisanship — the U.S. politician's penchant for exploiting narrow, emotional issues for personal or party gain — worked against the nation's long-term interests.

These included:
 • Senate rejection of the League of Nations treaty, wrecking President Woodrow Wilson's post-World War I dream of an effective international organization to ensure world peace.
 • Fanning of isolationist sentiments, keeping America from becoming militarily strong and nearly leading to defeat of the Selective Service Act after World War II had begun.
 • Politically inspired scapegoating about "who lost China" after that war.
 • Witch hunts of the McCarthy era that paralyzed America, scarring its politics and policy-makers for years.
 This, it is no surprise that the air here these days is filled with predictably partisan political rhetoric as the first visit of a Soviet leader in 14 years approaches.

House Republicans, to their discredit, threaten to walk out if Mikhail Gorbachev is granted the same privilege allowed such dictators as Ferdinand Marcos: addressing Congress. That action virtually guarantees that President Reagan would be denied a similar opportunity to address the Soviets on his expected visit to Moscow next year. It also runs counter to the most fundamental notions of free and open exchange of opinions in a democracy.

Reagan, who deserves bipartisan praise for seeking a practical reduction of the arms race by negotiating with the Soviets, has felt compelled enough by right-wing Republican criticism of the proposed arms treaty to have injected harsh Cold War invective days before Gorbachev's arrival.

In a Florida political speech, he offered Gorbachev the kind of gratuitous advice that would infuriate American politicians if it came from a Soviet official. The Soviets should "make their country like ours — a place that people don't want to leave," Reagan said. He followed that up by putting out the word, through his spokesman, that the talks with Gorbachev should not be regarded as a meeting between "old friends" but as "a summit between old enemies."

Such political posturing need not detract from the very important business at hand — seizing yet another opportunity to reduce the destructive impact of Cold War politics on life here and everywhere.

Now, as in the past, the issue is not whether America surrenders its principles by dealing with communists. It is a question of self-interest. For two generations, the Cold War has diverted massive amounts of U.S. energy and resources from what former Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., called "the creative pursuits of civilized society to the conduct of a costly and interminable struggle for world power."

U.S.-Soviet competition also produced constructive results. As Fulbright noted, in a masterful speech 23 years ago:

"Directly or indirectly, the world struggle with communism has stimulated economic and industrial expansion, accelerated the pace of intellectual inquiry and scientific discovery, broken the shell of American isolation and greatly increased public knowledge and awareness of the world outside the United States. At the same time, the continuing world conflict has cast a shadow on tone of American life by introducing a strain of apprehension and tension into a national style which has traditionally been one of buoyant optimism. ...

"Overriding all these changes, however, good or bad, has been the massive diversion of wealth and talent from individual and community life to the increasingly complex and costly effort to maintain a minimum level of national security in a world in which no nation can be immune from the threat of sudden catastrophe. We have had to turn away from our hopes in order to concentrate on our fears, and the result has been accumulating neglect of those things which bring happiness and beauty and fulfillment into our lives."

One doesn't have to dream that the Reagan-Gorbachev talks will lead to a world of happiness and beauty. Considering the superpower realities of the late 20th century, too much is at stake to permit partisanship to wreck next week's chance at establishing a more stable, secure world. The sum of this summit is far greater than any of its petty political parts.

— Stephen Rosenfeld —

It Takes Two To Summit

WASHINGTON — The Washington argument that ushers in the Reagan-Gorbachev summit is whether credit for the considerable promise of it should go to Ronald Reagan for putting on the pressure that brought Mikhail Gorbachev to the table or to Gorbachev for being flexible, reasonable and ready to take major political risks.

This is in the first instance a narrow, forgettable debate between partisan Reaganites who seek celebration of their man and critics who choke on the thought that Reagan may have done something right after all.

It's also a broad inquiry into the essence of Soviet-American relations. By now we should know there is no single sure way to achieve "true peace," in Reagan's latest formulation of his goal. Nonetheless, the hope persists that if we could somehow get the formula straight, we could bottle it, reproduce it, use it again.

There is a strong case that the Reagan strategy of proclaiming ideological war, building up the American arsenal and trying to roll back the Third World gains Moscow made in the 1970s is working, in part anyway. This strategy convulsed some and troubled others among us. But the Soviets found they could not easily intimidate either Reagan or the European allies or the United States' Third World chargers or their own dissidents and would-be emigrants, and here is Gorbachev touching down for summit No. 3.

This has put some of Reagan's old critics in the awkward position of hailing a prospective goal — arms control accords, tentative regional easings — whose means they protested or were skeptical of along the way. Meanwhile, many Reaganites who cheered the means back off from their first major result, the new missile agreement, and mutter darkly about what may yet come. It is one of those delicious turns on which American politics thrives.

There is another sort of turn behind Reagan's ostensible strategy. In a sense he made Gorbachev: he applied the pressure that could not have failed to contribute to the Soviets' decision to go with a younger reformer in order to get the Soviet Union moving again. But Gorbachev could be, if not saving, then embellishing Reagan's presidency by providing the wherewithal for a foreign-policy triumph now.

When Reagan pushed, the Kremlin might just have pushed back in the familiar pattern of great-power confrontation. To a point, however, Gorbachev did otherwise. Demonstrably, he has wanted to shift

Soviet energies and perhaps later some resources toward domestic renewal, at least in this phase.

Did he make a tactical decision that the Soviet Union needed a breathing space and he had best do what he can to neutralize American conservatives, who make or break detente? Did he tap into a kind of unspoken global assumption that, after the careless Soviet imperial surge of the 1970s, the Americans needed to even things out in the 1980s?

Or — to pass over to the strategic possibilities — did Gorbachev actually start feeling that it is no longer so important and may be too costly and dangerous to continue fighting the class war around the globe in the old harsh ways? In short, did he find himself, wittingly or not, in the grip of the famous "mellowing" that George Kennan posited 40 years ago as the condition that the Soviet Union might eventually come to if the West successfully contained Soviet power?

I promise good answers to these questions in 10 or 20 years. Meanwhile, it is worth contemplating the crucial factor of timing.

Ronald Reagan had the good fortune to arrive in the White House just as — we all know now — the Soviet Union was coming into an economic dead end that had fed into an authentic society-wide crisis. Having said for years that communism was a failing system, he went around the country in 1980 insisting that a rapid U.S. arms buildup would strain the defense-burdened Soviet economy and force the Soviets to negotiate arms reductions.

Some of us sophisticates thought he was spouting a right-wing fairy tale, and perhaps he was. But for a similar diagnosis of Soviet rot, Gorbachev is now hailed as a courageous reformer, and for going down the very negotiating path that Reagan charted, Gorbachev is now right up there with Reagan, or ahead, in the who's-a-nice-guy? polls.

I'd settle for saying it takes two.

IN THE STATE

Drug Policy

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina Faculty Assembly has adopted several resolutions on a new systemwide drug policy which they hope will push the emphasis from punishment to rehabilitation.

"I don't know if these resolutions will help or not, but they reflect faculty thinking," said Assembly Chairman Meada Gibbs, a North Carolina A&T University professor. "I can't say if they'll help or hinder."

The UNC Board of Governors approved on Thursday the policy of its drafting committee. The committee has worked for eight months to come up with the final draft, which sets systemwide minimum penalties for the most severe drug offenses.

The severity of the penalties is dependent on the "hardness" of the drug, as defined by state law. Selling heroin, for example, would call for the harshest penalty, expulsions or firing.

The 44-member assembly, which includes representatives from each of the 16 UNC campuses, spent nearly an hour and a half Friday discussing and approving the three resolutions, including one that urges greater emphasis be placed on drug and alcohol rehabilitation.

Unsettled Market

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Manufacturers went into the Southern Furniture Market six weeks ago with a sense of optimism — optimism that deflated quickly with a dip on Wall Street.

"Black Monday scared the hell out of everyone," said Gordon Schiffman, president of the National Home Furnishings Association of Columbus, Ohio. "But the initial reaction was over-reaction."

As the dust settled from the unsettling news from the stock market, some manufacturers say the fallout appears to be slight.

"What we've seen, surprisingly, is that business is strong," said Fred Starr, president of Thomasville Furniture Industries. "We've seen some mild softness, and I mean mild, in the northeast sector."

But Jerry Epperson, an analyst for Wheat First Securities in Richmond, Va., said concern is growing among manufacturers, and the reaction may just be delayed.

"It's gotten pretty mixed," Epperson said of manufacturers' confidence. "For the first three weeks (after the market) I saw no reflection of uncertainty. I've begun to see a slowdown in the last two weeks."

Good Guys Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — State corrections officials say they are running out of low-risk inmates to send out from prison, at a time when the swelling inmate population might force their release.

"We're running out of good guys who should be worthy of parole," said David Guth, a spokesman for the North Carolina Department of Correction.

The average inmate population exceeded a state limit of 17,460 prisoners for nine days in November. If that level is exceeded for 15 consecutive days, a state law enacted this year requires the Department of Corrections to begin releasing inmates.

Sam F. Boyd, administrator for the N.C. Parole Commission, agreed that the panel's choices have slimmed.

"Primarily, we don't want to let anybody go that we think will hurt someone, and we would rather not let someone go who doesn't have a good situation on the street — a job, a family," Boyd told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Senators Offer Different Views On Nuclear Arms Treaty Merits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford says a proposed nuclear arms treaty will allow the United States to keep nudging the Soviet Union toward a more open society, but Sen. Jesse Helms appears to be more skeptical.

"We're about to have a hand in encouraging freedom in the Soviet Union," said Sanford, D-N.C. "That's on the table."

Helms, a Republican, said he would reserve judgment on the proposed treaty until he has seen the document.

"How could I be opposed to something I haven't seen?" Helms asked. But he criticized certain aspects of the proposal.

"I think a fundamental mistake is being made in doing this by bits and pieces," Helms told the News and Observer of Raleigh, referring to the treaty's focus on intermediate-range weapons rather than on conventional forces, long-range missiles and other weapons systems.

"I think we ought to know where we are going to end up before we start to say, well we agree to this and we agree to that, because backing up from that is going to be next to impossible, even though the last turn of the crank ... would be a disaster for the free world."

"Everybody thinks that a treaty is going to bring peace," he said. "And when has a treaty brought peace, any time in the history of this country, and prior to that?"

As the ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which will conduct hearings before the Senate votes on whether to ratify the treaty, Helms could play a crucial role in helping to speed approval or in tying it to conditions requiring further concessions by the Soviets.

One of the biggest differences between Helms and Sanford is their attitude toward linking the proposed treaty to requirements that the Soviets set a timetable for removing troops from Afghanistan, agree to more human-rights policies and make other concessions.

Sanford said Reagan and his negotiators should raise such issues, but the treaty should not be subjected to excessive amendments in the Senate.

"Trying to link too many things to the treaty would become burdensome," Sanford said. "You could link everything that they complain about us and everything we complain about them. You can't do everything all at once. We can't expect instantaneous glasnost," a reference to the Soviet move toward openness.

But Helms said he could find nothing wrong with linking ratifications to specific agreements by the Soviets in the areas of human rights and non-nuclear military activities.

"A lot of ingredients need to go into this thing," Helms said, "including if the Soviet Union really wants to demonstrate some good faith ... in Afghanistan ... Africa, Central America and all the rest of it."

"If they want to come clean now and stop this business of the spread of worldwide communism, that's one thing. And I can't think of a better time to get all the marbles on the table ... I don't want us to be victimized by a horrendous shell game."

Blacks, Women Press For Changes In Party

RALEIGH (AP) — Most North Carolina Democrats are either women or blacks, but white men traditionally have controlled the party. Some people say it's time for a change.

"Many black Democrats across the state are very restless," said G.K. Butterfield, a Wilson lawyer and candidate for a Superior Court judgeship. "That is not rhetoric on my part. That is the reality."

Party leaders such as Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and state Democratic Chairman Jim Van Hecke have voiced concern about the lack of blacks and women at the top and have said they hoped blacks would be elected to high offices soon.

"I think the Democratic Party would be wise to nominate a black person or a woman on the ticket in November for one of those statewide offices," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison.

But although women represent a majority of registered Democrats and blacks represent about 25 percent of the Democratic vote, Democrats might be on the verge of nominating an all-white, all-male Democratic state ticket again in 1988. That possibility prompted a group of black party activists from across the state to meet recently at N.C. Central University in Durham to discuss ways to get a black on the state ticket.

And next week, representatives of such women's groups as the state chapter of the National Organization for Women and the N.C. Women's Political Caucus plan to meet in Raleigh to discuss ways to get more women on the ballot.

"We are concerned about elective offices and appointive offices," said Robin R. Davis of Raleigh, president of N.C. NOW.

"Women are just under-represented everywhere," Davis said. "The issues that have the biggest impact on women get ignored or get pushed to the back burner if there are not women there."

Although it is a long-standing question, the issue has surfaced recently because three statewide offices will be vacated in 1988 — lieutenant governor, superintendent of public instruction and secretary of state. The Democratic front-runners for all three positions are white men.

Democratic leaders say they are reluctant to play kingmaker by interjecting themselves into primaries, fearing such a move would create resentment and divide the party. Even if they did try to influence the outcome, they say there is no guarantee they would be successful.

Black Democrats say that though the Democratic leadership is required by party rules to remain neutral in primaries, leaders can play a behind-the-scenes role in helping nudge candidates in or out of races.

Butterfield said Democratic Party leaders were able to apply subtle pressure to persuade Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, and State Auditor Ed Renfrow not to run against Jordan in the Democratic primary for governor.

"The party can act on behalf of a black Democratic candidate the same way they told Billy Watkins and Ed Renfrow to get off Bob Jordan's case," Butterfield said. "In religious circles, it would be called a prayer meeting."

The party is shrewd enough to persuade people not to run when the stakes are high," he said.

Martin Has Challenger

RALEIGH (AP) — A conservative Republican says he hopes to "send a message" to Gov. Jim Martin by running against him in the 1988 gubernatorial primary.

"I have absolutely no expectation to win that race," congressional candidate Daniel Lawrence, a Dare County businessman, told the News and Observer of Raleigh Sunday.

"I want to give the opportunity to conservative Republicans that we must send a message to our party leadership that it is inappropriate to go around praising liberals," said Lawrence, 42.

Lawrence said his own congressional campaign was undercut last month when Martin praised Democratic Rep. Walter B. Jones, a 21-year incumbent, in a speech in New Bern. Lawrence charged that Martin was playing up to Jones in an effort to appeal to the overwhelmingly Democratic electorate of the 1st District.

As a result of what he called a "betrayal" of area Republicans, Lawrence said he planned to drop out of the congressional race to run against Martin in the May primary.

Although a challenge by the little-known Lawrence would not likely pose a threat to Martin, it could be a headache for him at a time when he is in a tough re-election fight with Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

Phillip J. Kirk, Martin's chief of staff, said he was not concerned about a primary, noting that Martin had turned back a challenge by Ruby Hooper in 1984.

"Maybe a challenge, if it materializes, will push our people to organize earlier and more thoroughly," Kirk said. "If he does file, we will certainly treat him as a serious candidate."

Kirk denied Lawrence's allegation that Martin had praised Jones in an effort to win points with eastern Democrats.

"I disagree with that assessment, except to say we have to secure many votes from conservative Democrats in eastern North Carolina who will also be voting for Congressman Jones," Kirk said.

Lawrence, owner of a mobile home park in Frisco, had been campaigning against Jones since September.

Woman Is Sought In Jet Bomb Probe

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea expects a woman linked to the suspected bombing of a Korean Air jet that vanished with 115 people on board will be extradited from Bahrain to Seoul, officials said today.

Park Soo-gil, assistant foreign minister, was to leave for Bahrain today to negotiate the extradition of the woman, the government officials said. A plane was being prepared to fly her to Seoul, they said.

The KAL Boeing 707 disappeared Nov. 29 somewhere near Burma on a flight from Iraq to Seoul. The woman and a male companion flew on the plane from Baghdad to Abu Dhabi. They later took poison and the man died when authorities in Bahrain stopped them for questioning Dec. 1 about the missing plane.

South Korea has charged that North Korean agents planted a bomb on the airliner to disrupt the south's Dec. 16 elections and the 1988 Seoul Olympics.

President Chun Doo-hwan sent a message to President Reagan asking him to seek Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's help in guarding the Olympics from any threat from the communist north. Chun asked Reagan to raise the issue with Gorbachev when they meet in Washington this week, Seoul officials said.

"President Chun asked President Reagan to emphasize the need that the Seoul Olympics should be protected from any disruptive moves by North Korea," said a government spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

South Korean officials in Seoul and Bangkok said today that airline officials in Burma were to continue searching jungle areas for signs of the missing plane. Extensive searches in Thailand and Burma have failed to find any trace of the jet, which disappeared without sending any distress signal.

Hong Soon-young, South Korean assistant foreign minister, and other officials were to conduct a search in a Thai government helicopter after receiving permission from Rangoon to fly over Burmese territory.

The government officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they were confident the woman would be extradited to Seoul. The woman is the key to finding out what happened to flight 858, they said.

"Bahrain, through a third country, has informed South Korea that it plans to turn her over," said one official.

South Korean authorities have said the Asian couple who took poison appeared to have left several small bags on the plane that disappeared. Authorities believe a bomb made from a plastic explosive that cannot be traced by normal airport security devices was planted on the plane.

National police officials in Seoul said today they had not been able to identify the couple from fingerprints sent from Bahrain.

The pair were traveling on forged Japanese passports in the name of Mayumi Hachiya and Shinchi Hachiya.

Chicago Schools Earn Poor Marks

By LINDSEY TANNER
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The U.S. education secretary says Chicago's public schools are the nation's worst: Low test scores, high dropout rates and teacher strikes signal a "meltdown" in the system charged with educating 430,000 children.

Local officials acknowledge that change is desperately needed in the nation's third-largest public-school system, but they say Chicago's woes, like those of other cities, are rooted in economics and ethnicity, not education.

"The major problem facing the Chicago schools is the terrible social and economic problems in the black and Hispanic communities of Chicago," says Gary Orfield, a University of Chicago professor of political science and education.

The statistics are compelling:

- An estimated 48 percent of the system's high school students drop out each year and almost two-thirds of 1985 graduates were either unemployed or in dead-end jobs.
- Half of its high schools rank in the bottom 1 percent of U.S. schools for student scores on the American College Test, according to state statistics.
- Nine teachers' strikes have halted classes during the past 18 years, the latest a record month-long walkout in September.
- And, 67 percent of Chicago's public school children come from low-income families.

From 1970 to 1986, the white enrollment in Chicago public schools dropped by 21.1 percent, from 34.6 percent to 13.5 percent, while the black student population rose from 54.8 percent to 60 percent and the Hispanic population jumped from 9.7 percent to 23.4 percent, according to teachers' union statistics.

In the nation's public schools, the white population dropped 19 percent between 1968 and 1984, while the black sector increased 2 percent and Hispanics rose 80 percent.

U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett last month said Chicago's system was so bad that parents should consider private education. "It's an education meltdown. If there's one that's worse, I don't know where it is," he said.

Former President Jimmy Carter, also visiting Chicago last month, said the system "suffers from a very low quality."

"We don't need cheap shots from a couple of people who blow into town," said Hal Baron, Mayor Eugene Sawyer's chief policy adviser.

"We know the schools need reform, and we're working on it," Baron said, adding, "What they should be asking us is what can they do to help us."

Orfield says overall federal aid has decreased. "They've taken a really troubled set of situations, and they've tripped them and kicked them in the shins, and then they said, 'You guys are doing just awful,'" he said.

Illinois' elementary and secondary school funding, about a third of which goes to Chicago, was cut by $94 million this year. Gov. James R. Thompson says schools get no new funds without a tax increase legislators generally oppose.

This fall, the school board gave a 4 percent salary increase that teachers grudgingly accepted to end their walkout. With average salary of $28,500, Chicago teachers earn far less than comparable districts.

The situation is similar in the nation's two larger public school systems, New York and Los Angeles.

New York's dropout rate exceeds 50 percent. Nearly 33 percent of its 946,000 students last year received public assistance, and more than 10 percent had limited English proficiency. Whites form 21.3 percent of the student population, compared with 38.1 percent for blacks and 33.9 percent for Hispanics, board statistics indicate.

Los Angeles' dropout rate averages 18 percent, said school board spokesman Shel Erlich. About 25 percent of its 592,000 students need bilingual education, but he said he didn't know how many students are from low-income families.

In October 1986, then-Mayor Harold Washington organized an "education summit" that has united Chicago business, civic and community groups, education unions and city and state government.

Its goals include improving the curriculum to better prepare students for higher education and employment, expanding job opportunities for graduates, and increasing parental involvement in decision-making about reforms.

Chicago Teachers Union President Jacqueline Vaughn says her group will offer recommendations early next year to Sawyer, who has vowed to keep education at the top of his agenda.

1988 American Rhodes Scholars Are Selected

By BARBARA METZLER
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Montana woman who worked with Mother Teresa and a Thai immigrant who dreams of curing multiple sclerosis were among the 22 men and 10 women named American Rhodes Scholars for 1988.

Sarah McNamer, 24, wasn't the only high achiever from Billings, Mont., to be awarded the prestigious two-year scholarship to Oxford University in England on Sunday. A former neighbor also won.

The 32 finalists were picked from 1,100 applicants in committee meetings Wednesday and Saturday. They had known the scholarship announcement was coming Sunday, making for some anxious waiting.

"It was a shock — a really nerve-racking afternoon," said Marilyn Richtarik, an American history and literature major at Radcliffe who got the news at her family's home in Lawrence, Kan.

The scholars come from 25 states, and Kansas and Ohio claimed the most recipients with three each, said David Alexander, U.S. secretary of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust and president of Pomona College in Claremont, Calif. There were 10 from Harvard University.

Billings was the only city to have more than one recipient.

Stace D. Lindsay, 22, now a senior at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service, "lived just down the block," said Ms. McNamer, who is seeking a master's degree in English at the University of California at Los Angeles.

"I didn't know him that well," she said, noting that they attended different high schools.

The group includes aspiring doctors, scientists, journalists, actors, musicians, three congressional interns and a West Point cadet who writes romantic poetry.

"They're a very diversified group of people, and they combine a strong academic ability with a sense of public responsibility," said Alexander. "I think they're typical of the kinds of interest in public service and cultural and academic talent that this very difficult national competition will often produce."

Past recipients include Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., entertainer Kris Kristofferson, former Los Angeles Rams quarterback Pat Haden and U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White.

The Rhodes Scholarship was established in 1902 by the estate of Cecil Rhodes, a British philanthropist and colonial pioneer, who hoped the scholarships would contribute to world harmony.

Students must have proven academic and intellectual excellence, show integrity of character, a respect for fellow human beings, the ability to lead and use their talents fully. Women have only been accepted since 1976.

In creating the scholarship, Rhodes expressed a desire that the recipients would aspire to public service.

Ms. McNamer spent two months in 1985 working with Mother Teresa, the nun who won the Nobel Peace Prize for her work with the poor in India.

In her Rhodes essay, Ms. McNamer said she was concerned about receiving a $2,000 scholarship from the National Endowment for the Arts when $1 would feed a starving man in India.

"Having seen that my concrete actions — bathing the sick, rubbing ointment on parched skin, feeding babies — can serve immediate, tangible needs, how could I justify devoting my life to the abstractions of academics?" she wrote.

Three recipients were born in Asia, including Surachai Supattapone, 22, of McLean, Va., who came to the United States with his family from Thailand in 1971 and is a fourth-year student at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

"If I had my dream fantasy — which is the disease I'd cure — it would be multiple sclerosis," Supattapone said. "We had a close friend who died of it. It's a dreadful disease."

Since the first selection in 1903, 2,500 Americans have been chosen. Other Rhodes Scholars represent 17 foreign countries.

Strike Call Ignored By Many Haitian Workers

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Many Haitians crammed into the few minibuses on the road or walked several miles to work this morning despite the general strike called to pressure the ruling junta to allow free elections.

"If I don't work, I don't eat," said a 28-year-old machine operator standing outside the fence at a factory that did not open because of the strike.

"I left my house at 5 a.m. and just got here," a young woman said at about 6:45 a.m. Both workers spoke on condition of anonymity.

The strike was called by several unions, including the one representing the so-called "tap tap" minibuses drivers, and the Christian Democrat Party. Three major presidential candidates from the canceled Nov. 29 election backed the strike.

Presidential candidates Sylvio Claude and Louis Dejoie said the strike should last until the junta led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, blamed for failing to control — and some cases participating in — the violence that forced the cancellation of the national elections, steps down.

Presidential candidates Marc Bazin and Gerard Gourgue said the strike should last only today and Tuesday, with the goal being to pressure the junta to reinstate the Electoral Council it dissolved.

The military-dominated junta has pledged to hold elections in time so a new president can take office Feb. 7. But the junta has not said how it plans to conduct a national vote, and many Haitians don't want an election run by the army.

The provisional junta, which took power 22 months ago when dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to exile in France, made no comment on the strike, but state-run television all weekend broadcast what it said were open letters of support from Haitians for the junta, and segments from a recent speech by Namphy in which he says:

"Certain ill-intentioned sectors are trying to divide the people from its army. Fortunately, the people are now mature and are not that easily fooled."

Truckloads of soldiers patrolled the streets this morning, and police encouraged minibuses drivers to ferry people to work.

By 8 a.m., most stores and businesses remained closed, as is usually the case during periods of unrest or when violence appears imminent. Government ministries were open, but it was unclear how many workers showed up.

Clearly, however, there were far more people and vehicles on streets in the capital this morning that was the case during anti-government strikes last summer.

"We don't respect the strike. We need money. We need to work," said a seamstress standing outside a closed factory this morning. "The people who called the strike have a lot of money and full refrigerators. We don't."

The independent Electoral Council called off the election Nov. 29 hours after it began when unidentified guerrillas killed at least 34 people, many at polling places. Namphy then disbanded the civilian Electoral Council.

Opposition leaders accused the junta of doing nothing to stop the attacks, blamed on the army and supporters of the ousted Duvalier regime.

Opposition Candidate Is Attacked

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Kim Young-sam, an opposition presidential candidate, was attacked today by hundreds of stone-throwing protesters who broke up a campaign rally and pursued his motorcade.

Kim was not hurt in the incident in the southern coastal city of Yosu, but the windows in about 20 cars in his motorcade were smashed by rocks as protesters chased it for a half-mile.

Protesters shouting the name of Kim Dae-jung, a rival opposition candidate, surged forward and hurled rocks as Kim Young-sam tried to address a crowd of 8,000 people. The protesters called on Kim Young-sam to drop out of the race.

Yosu is in the Cholla Provinces, the main political stronghold of Kim Dae-jung. The two Kims rely to a large extent on regional support in a country split by strong provincial antagonisms.

Some political observers have suggested that by refusing to settle on one main opposition candidate the two Kims could hand the election to government presidential candidate Roh Tae-woo. The election is Dec. 16.

Later today, Kim Young-sam called off two other rallies he had scheduled in the area after 500 protesters chanting Kim Dae-jung's name surrounded a Yosu restaurant where he was meeting with local supporters. The protesters overturned two of the vehicles in the candidates' parked motorcade.

Cardinal Stephen Kim of the Roman Catholic Church issued an appeal for fair elections during a special mass today and called for the eradication of regional and class divisions and an end to political violence.

"Those people who gather at campaign rally sites are all neighbors who have to live by joining hands," the cardinal said at the service in Seoul.

The top three presidential candidates have been attacked by rival supporters in various parts of the country during the presidential race.

Kim Dae-jung was attacked by rock-throwing protesters during a rally Sunday in the southeast port of Masan, a stronghold of Kim Young-sam. He was not hurt.

Cardinal Kim called for an end to regional rivalry in the Seoul mass, saying all Koreans had to be united in peace. He said the purpose of the elections was to unite the nation and urged all candidates to seek unity.

"The purpose of the coming election is the realization of democracy ... (the candidates) should give careful consideration to how to resolve the problems of deepening confrontation between regions and classes resulting from their words and deeds," he said.

Flowers Appear In Dishes

By BILL VALE
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — When Barb Bernstein read about California restaurants serving flowers as food, she thought it would be a good marketing ploy for one of the five restaurants she and her husband, Jim, operate.

But they anticipated complaints. "I think it's a lot like retailing," said Mrs. Bernstein, a former department store buyer. Her husband, whose father, Ben Bernstein, developed the family's restaurant empire, didn't agree.

"To tell you the truth, people weren't beating the doors down for it," said Brad Boston, manager of Crockett's River Cafe, owned by the Bernsteins, one of several floating restaurants on the Ohio River here.

Boston chalked it up to Cincinnati's conservative attitude.

But the flower entrees are being talked about, and interest is picking up.

"In California, the clientele is more receptive to new things," Boston said. But he says many patrons like the flower dishes and the restaurant gets a lot of calls from housewives, gourmet cooks, other restaurants and suppliers.

When sous chef Tony Barber, a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y., was told it was up to him to come up with the dishes, he was skeptical. But after talking with classmates in Los Angeles and San Francisco, he became enthusiastic about the possibilities.

"People eat with their eyes first," says Barber. "Flowers are beautiful. They give a hint that the best is still coming ... You have to be open minded. I'm not a fan of deep fried fish, but I have to respect the people who like it."

They found out that nasturtiums and pansies were good; one is peppery and the other sweet. And there are dried flowers, such as certain strains of marigolds.

First, they started mixing the flowers in salads.

"It was spectacular," said Boston. Barber said the return to flowers in food is a return to history.

"A hundred years ago, everybody had herb gardens. Before that, people in Europe didn't have a lot of seasonings as we have today so they used herbs and flowers."

In the Orient, chrysanthemums and jasmine are widely used. Buds of lilies and other flowers enhance food. Rosewater and orange flowers are popular in the Middle East.

The Romans used roses, violets and gladiolus in their foods, and lotus eaters are mentioned in ancient Greek poetry.

Some flowers are poisonous. Some cooks warn against lilies of the valley and nasturtium seeds, although the flowers are good until the plant goes to seed. They warn users to strictly follow recipes.

ANNUAL DOLL TEA — The Salvation Army Auxiliary sponsored the annual doll tea Sunday afternoon. Approximately 200 dolls were dressed by church groups and individuals. Mrs. Douglas Paige of the First Christian Church adds a finishing touch to their display. "Holiday Festivities" was the decorating theme for this year. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Old, New Quilts Meet

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Pieced quilts are like mom and apple pie — nobody has a bad word for them in general. Yet, many people hold strong opinions about whether they prefer the traditional or the contemporary variety.

An exhibition at the American Craft Museum in New York pairs 12 antique quilts from the Museum of American Folk Art and 35 contemporary art quilts that won awards in a national competition.

In place of the attitude of old is old and new is new and never the twain shall meet, the current show, through Jan. 10, 1988, explores the relationship between the old and the new.

After closing in New York, it will tour Japan in 1988 and then Kutztown, Pa., Wilmington, Del., and Pueblo, Colo. in 1988-89.

"I have always thought of quilts as on a continuum from old to new," explained Penny McMorris, a quilting authority who is guest curator of the exhibition. She selected the 12 folk quilts and was one of three jurors for Quilt National '87, the biennial competition organized by The Dairy Barn Southeastern Ohio Cultural Arts Center in Athens, Ohio. The 35 contemporary quilts have been chosen from the competition.

McMorris says there are more similarities than differences between quilts of past and present.

"Quilters today employ exactly the same techniques as in the past." In fact, she added, some abandoned techniques such as labor-intensive stippling, in which stitches are so fine they form a texture, have made a comeback lately.

Stenciling, applique of photographs onto the quilt face, and painting directly on the quilt — supposedly all modern innovations — actually were employed in the 19th century. Today's quilts dripping with beads and embroidery remind her of examples from the late Victorian period.

McMorris says most quilters have acknowledged their debt to their antecedents. But the appreciation of both old and new among collectors and writers is new.

The old, more regular patterns "soften the blow" for those just beginning to learn about art quilts, she added. That's important now because quilts, once very isolated from the art world, "are being shown in art exhibitions and piquing the interest of critics and collectors."

The exhibition, which juxtaposes contemporary artist's quilts with historical predecessors, reveals that abstraction was as important in old quilts as in new, that current events affected the old quilts, just as they do the new. In 1900, for example, Amish quilt patterns changed because of the vogue for crazy quilts.

The 19th-century penchant for portraying patriotic and religious values and for telling a story in pictures continues today, as current examples in the show reveal.

The differences: In contrast to folk quilters who had little formal art training, contemporary quilters often have an academic art background and are aware of current art movements. Intentions have changed, too. Artists today make quilts for the wall. The traditional quilts are treasured for their visual appeal but were originally made to function as bedcovers.

If a new interest in making connections is evident among quilt fanciers, the ecumenical spirit also prevails in exhibition opportunities. A number of national competitions, such as the Dairy Barn's, are open to all quilters on an equal footing, regardless of level of training.

The Museum of American Folk Art recently announced a national quilt celebration for April of 1989, repeating an event first held in 1986. Quilters from all over the world are invited to try for a prize in the competition for the best crib quilt based on the theme, "Memories of Childhood."

Three top prizes of $7,500, $5,000 and $2,500 as well as promise of widespread exhibition over three years and appearance in a book are among awards being offered.

For contest rules, write The Museum of American Folk Art, 444 Park Avenue South, New York, NY 10016.

Clothing Offers Cold Protection

NEW YORK (AP) — High-tech underwear may not appear to be any more glamorous than grandpa's long johns, but there's a major difference, according to textile technologists at the Polypropylene Council of America Inc.

Today's textile know-how makes a science of dressing for the cold, whether you're an Arctic explorer, a pleasure skier, or just an ordinary person who dreads winter's blasts.

Although layering clothes for the cold isn't a new idea, it helps to know which layer serves which purpose in the process. Fabrics of new-generation manmade fibers are engineered to perform specific functions in keeping you drier and warmer, the Polypropylene Council points out.

It's not difficult if you understand the principle, notes the council, which offers some tips on how to layer against the cold, particularly if you're engaged in strenuous activities.

There are three basic layers to a cold-weather clothing system: the vapor transmission layer (sometimes referred to as the "wicking" layer); the insulating layer, and the protective layer.

The vapor transmission underwear layer is most important, now as always. The news is in fabric of polypropylene, the most effective fiber for transporting moisture away from the skin and for preventing the heat loss that so readily occurs if you're active and perspiring in cold weather.

Polypropylene actually can't absorb moisture. It transmits vapor from the skin, keeping a dry layer next to you. This keeps you warm and comfortable. For the same reason, polypropylene is also recommended as an under-pair of socks and for shoe or boot liners.

The next layer is for insulation; that is, to keep a space of still air around your body, and to absorb the wetness being thrown off by the first layer. Many of the new fabrics are designed for this layer, and even old-reliable wool is often used.

The First Grade Shapes Attitudes

By MARY JO KOCHAKIAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HARTFORD, Conn. — You shouldn't rely on kindergarten to prepare children for first grade, in the opinion of first-grade teacher Susan Anderson.

The first-grade year can be a crucial one in shaping children's attitudes about school. With so much at stake, Anderson, co-author of "Getting Ready for School" (Scott, Foresman and Co., $8.95), advocates some homework for parent and child.

Anderson, an Avon, Conn., resident who teaches in Farmington, Conn., and Carol Honess, the co-author, found considerable differences in children's readiness when they taught in South Carolina, where kindergarten was not required.

Those differences are not likely to be as pronounced in Connecticut children, Anderson says, but it's certain that any child will benefit from working on some basic skills with a parent — when the activities are presented as play.

"I'm not trying to push the kids, but some kids are ready," Anderson says. "I would hate to see a child capable of doing something fall by the way simply because he is allowed to watch television (to the exclusion of more enriching activity)." But it is essential that parents not pressure the child and realize that some are not ready for certain activities.

Some ideas, from the hundreds in the book:

—Have your child place four toys or different colored blocks in a row, and then tell him or her to remember the order in which they are lined up. Have your child look away while you rearrange them. See if the child can restore the original order.

—Introduce addition by counting out four buttons, putting them in a stack, and then counting out three more, putting them in another stack. Count each stack separately, then count the total. Rearrange so that one stack has two buttons and the other has five. Count separately and then together. Explain that though the sizes of the stacks change, the total number of buttons remained the same.

—Show your child a family photograph and have him or her try to recall the event pictured. As your child retells what happened, encourage the use of complete sentences.

—Give your child toothpicks or straws and ask him or her to form as many capital letters with them as possible. Or use raisins, small pretzel sticks or peanuts.

—Have your child lace up and tie as many shoes as possible.

—Using a variety of small jars, measuring cups or plastic containers, let your child guess which of any two containers holds more. Let him or her test the answer by filling one container with some plastic packing pellets and then pouring the contents into the other.

—Ask the child to dictate a story to you. It can be an original story, one he or she already knows, or just a sentence or two. Then have the child find all the letters or words that are the same in what you wrote down. Highlight the letters to distinguish them.

—Ask your child which takes longer: washing a car or washing a beach ball; walking to school or riding to school in a car; baking a cake or drinking a glass of water.

—Have your child choose five or six toys, put them in a line and tell you which is first, second, etc. Then mix them up and ask the child which one now is third, fifth and so forth.

—Let your child use lengths of string or yarn to figure out if the distance around a waist is greater than around a leg. He or she can also check the measurements of knees to toes vs. around the waist; elbow to wrist vs. around the thigh and so forth.

—Ask your child to name from memory as many things as he or she can think of that are the color of a snowflake. Then ask what the child would do if he or she suddenly changed into a snowflake. Where would he go? Would he or she want to be near people, on a tree, etc.?

TV Soaps Fan Annoyed By Mom's Static

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the 30-year-old mother of three beautiful children. Every weekday while my eldest is in school, I put the two younger ones down for a nap, then I sit down and watch my favorite soaps on TV. I find it very relaxing after a hectic morning.

My mother-in-law never misses an opportunity to tell me that she thinks the afternoon soaps are disgusting, a waste of time, and that I am a rotten mother because I've allowed myself to get hooked on garbage written for morons!

Abby, I am not a moron — I just enjoy having two hours a day to myself. It's an entertaining hobby, nothing more.

I was raised to respect my elders, so I have never answered "Mom" back, but she really hurts my feelings. What should I do? — LIKES THE SOAPS

DEAR LIKES: You are to be commended for holding your tongue when confronted with these insulting remarks. You need not apologize for enjoying the soaps — millions of people do. It's time you told "Mom" that she hurts your feelings when she puts you down as a "rotten mother." Then tune her out and enjoy your hobby.

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for those grandparents who tell their children who now have little ones: "I raised mine — you can raise yours."

When my husband and I retired, we moved near our daughter so we could care for her children while she worked. We loved our grandchildren, and felt we could give them better care than any day-care center.

Now that we are approaching our "second childhood" and will need looking after, we know that our loving daughter will be willing to give us the care we need. — GROWING OLD IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR GROWING OLD: And what would happen to you had you not been in a position to look after your daughter's children? Would she then have no good reason for looking after you in your "second childhood"?

A true gift is simply that — a gift. And it never obligates the recipient.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 54-year-old widow. My husband died two years ago. We had a fairly good marriage, but it wasn't perfect. (Whose marriage is?) About a year ago I met a man 15 years younger than me. It was wonderful at first, and now I have to decide whether to stop seeing him or not.

In the first place, he has never introduced me to any of his friends or family members. He met my family and friends a long time ago. He seems to enjoy my company, but he never takes me anywhere. It's either my home or his apartment. I am beginning to think he wants me for just one thing (a bed partner).

Please tell me what to do. — FEELING USED

DEAR FEELING USED: If you want to find out if he wants you for just "one thing" — all you have to do is quit making that "one thing" available, and see how long he hangs around.

CONFIDENTIAL TO THOSE INTERESTED IN SEPARATING FACTS FROM FICTION: According to the Dallas Times Herald: In a recent survey of local teen-agers about AIDS, 65 percent of the respondents thought they didn't need to use a condom if the girl was taking birth control pills. Sixty percent believed they wouldn't get AIDS if they had sex with someone they loved.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose modestly in early trading today, supported by the strength of the dollar in foreign exchange dealings overseas.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 9.12 points to 1,775.86 in the first half hour on Wall Street.

Advancing issues outpaced decliners by a margin of about 8 to 7 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed shares, with 656 up, 463 down and 470 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 18.61 million shares as of 10 a.m. EST.

"We had a bit of a bounce at the opening because of the dollar," said Hildegard Zagorski, a market analyst with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

The dollar rose against all major currencies in European trading. The currency was supported by the belief that the Reagan administration may have shifted policy in favor of a more stable dollar following moves last week by several European nations to stimulate their economies.

But Zagorski was skeptical that stock buying would continue throughout the day.

Lawyers Rest Case

ny within a specific count of the indictment could not be dismissed if there was other evidence supporting the count.

The prosecution had rested without presenting evidence that Deaver had discussed the issue of acid rain during a Jan. 5, 1985, luncheon with Canadian ambassador Allan Gottlieb. Gottlieb invoked diplomatic immunity and refused to testify at Deaver's trial about the lunch.

Deaver is accused, in part, of lying about the degree of his involvement in the selection of Drew Lewis as U.S. acid-rain envoy to Canada before Deaver left the White House and signed on as a $100,000-a-year lobbyist for the Canadian government.

Seymour contended on Friday that he probably would be able to ask Deaver about the luncheon during cross-examination.

But Seymour said that he would move to strike all reference to the Gottlieb luncheon from the indictment if no evidence was presented during the rest of the trial.

After the defense rested, Seymour joined a defense motion to strike the reference from the indictment.

The defense had contended that Deaver should not have to defend against the allegation because prosecutors had failed to prove it. But Jackson ruled that because there was evidence supporting other allegations of false testimony dealing with acid rain the prosecution was entitled to carry the luncheon allegation forward during the defense case.

Miller, meanwhile, moved to strike from the indictment references to other contacts involving Reagan administration officials who did not personally testify about the encounters.

The prosecution had rested without calling former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole to testify about a phone call she allegedly received from Deaver on behalf of Trans World Airlines.

Seymour said Friday that Mrs. Dole "has amnesia on this particular subject."

The prosecutor also said he did not call Assistant Secretary of State Gaston Sigur to testify about a meeting he had with Deaver because he couldn't vouch for Sigur's credibility.

Prosecutors presented other evidence suggesting that Deaver called Mrs. Dole, including her former secretary's identification of a phone log indicating the call had been completed.

TWA officials also testified that Deaver had been hired at an annual rate of $250,000 to contact Mrs. Dole to persuade the Transportation Department to convene a hearing that would delay a hostile takeover of the airline.

Deaver's former lobbying associate Doral Cooper testified that she and Deaver discussed trade issues with Sigur on behalf of a South Korean steel company.

Missile Misses Target

Kuwait lies closest to the warfront, only 50 miles south of the Faw peninsula. Silkworm missiles can hit targets up to 50 miles away. They can carry warheads up to 1,000 pounds.

Sea Isle City, a U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tanker, was heavily damaged in the second missile attack in October and 18 of its crew members, including the American captain, were wounded.

The Sea Island terminal was closed after the third attack. But Kuwaiti Defense Minister Sheikh Salem Al-Sabah was quoted as telling a visiting British delegation last week that it had been reactivated.

However, gulf-based oil shipping executives believe the minister was referring to a single floating buoy mooring the Kuwaiti authorities had reactivated to help load tankers while the main facility was being repaired.

They said repair work was not expected to be completed until January.

Iranian attacks on Kuwait and Kuwait-related ships have escalated since the summer, when the U.S. Navy began escorting 11 Kuwaiti tankers, sailing under the American flag, through the gulf. Kuwait requested the reflagging to protect its oil tankers from attacks by Iran.

Today's reported missile firing followed unusually devastating Iranian gunboat attacks Sunday on two neutral-flag tankers in the Persian Gulf.

The attacks killed a Danish sailor aboard one ship, and ignited the highly volatile naphtha cargo the other.

The abandoned Singapore-flagged ship Norman Atlantic burned more than eight hours after the attack in the Strait of Hormuz at the southern end of the Persian Gulf. Flames were visible 30 miles away. No casualties were reported.

It was not immediately clear if the 85,129-ton tanker was in danger of sinking. London-based Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit said the ship was "drifting and on fire nearly the whole length... and listing."

At dawn Sunday, an Iranian gunboat ambushed the 50,600-ton Danish tanker Estelle Maersk in the southern gulf off the United Arab Emirates coast.

Danish sailor Eric Johnson, 37, was killed while watching the attack on the Estelle Maersk from the deck. A second crewman, Italian Zani Luciano, 47, suffered shrapnel wounds and was hospitalized in Dubai.

Policy Allows Carols

It also is suggested that children sing songs of other faith's holidays throughout the year.

Another question asks, "If religious carols are to be included in a school presentation or program, must parents be notified beforehand?" The answer — no.

"No advance notice to parents is needed. Once the policy is adopted, parents have the responsibility for making any inquiry about the content of a holiday program," the exhibit says.

These questions and answers are among 12 in the exhibit to provide a tangible guide for principals and teachers as they plan various programs.

Also, "programs and lesson plans prepared for holidays with a religious or secular basis shall be submitted for review to the superintendent's office to ensure that the spirit and intent of the law and board policy is met," according to the proposed policy. "Following the initial year of implementation of this policy, examples of such approved programs and lesson plans may be shared with school system personnel as examples of programs which satisfy the requirements of this policy."

Specific points covered in the policy include prayer, distribution of religious literature, prayer during official functions, speakers, baccalaureate services, extracurricular student groups, use of school facilities by community groups, student absence for religious holiday observance, school observance of religious holidays, academic study about religion and exculsal from school activities on religious grounds.

The new Board of Education will be sworn in during a ceremony today at 7:15 p.m. in the Commissioners Auditorium, Pitt County office building, second floor. The board will begin its regular monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium. In addition to the proposed religion policy, items on the agenda include electing a chairman and vice chairman for the board, the revised school calendar and the search and seizure policy.

Treaty Is Endorsed

New Year, said Mrs. Thatcher, the treaty will be "a source of extra security and extra joy for the peoples not only of our two countries and of Europe and the United States but also for the world as a whole, and is the promise of more progress to come."

She was expected to contact Reagan and brief him on her talks with Gorbachev.

Mrs. Thatcher had just returned from a weekend summit of European leaders in Copenhagen, but her statement contained no hint of the worries voiced by some West Europeans that nuclear reductions will expose them to the Soviets' superiority in conventional arms.

Gorbachev landed under sunny skies at this Royal Air Force base at 11:26 a.m. (6:26 a.m. EST) for a private exchange of views in the base's officers' lounge, then a lunch.

Two hours later, standing outside the officer's lounge, Gorbachev murmured "after you" to Mrs. Thatcher and she gave her short statement.

He thanked her for inviting him and said the talks were "convincing evidence of the fact that our relations have acquired a new dynamic and more businesslike and constructive cooperation."

"We are prepared to go on acting in this spirit to broaden and to deepen our mutual understanding and our cooperation, our interaction," Gorbachev added.

Gorbachev was the first Soviet leader to visit Britain in 31 years.

Mrs. Thatcher has developed a close relationship with Gorbachev since first meeting him three years ago and declaring: "We can do business."

She had been expected to urge Gorbachev to agree with Reagan on a timetable for U.S. "Star Wars" weapons development, thus paving the way for cutting long-range nuclear missiles.

It's as inevitable as taxes, but don't ask your CPA about it.

The two inevitabilities. When it comes to questions about taxes most people don't hesitate to make plans and arrangements with their accountant. But when it comes to the other inevitability, it's amazing how few people make any arrangements at all.

And that's a mystery, considering the benefits to family and friends that funeral prearrangement offers. It makes things simple. It offers peace of mind. Reassurance to loved ones. And it takes very little time.

So if you're tax planning, ask your CPA or tax lawyer. The other inevitability? Ask us.

Saints Continuing March Toward 1st Playoff Berth

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

They'll be dancing and partying as usual on Bourbon Street. This time, the festivities have been spurred by the New Orleans Saints marching into the NFL playoffs for the first time.

It took 21 seasons, but a 44-34 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on Sunday clinched at least a playoff berth for the Saints, 9-3. New Orleans never had a winning record before this season.

"It's a great feeling," said tackle Stan Brock, who remembers playing for the Saints who went 1-15 in 1980. "I feel a little sorry for the Joe Federspiels, the Archie Mannings, the Derland Moores — all the guys who spent so much time here and tried so hard and never felt this."

"I'm just thankful my career lasted long enough to enjoy this." Coach Jim Mora was quick to remind his team that making the playoffs is just one step, although a mighty big one for the only NFL franchise that had never made played a post-season game.

"Remember that we're not done yet," Mora said. "We've got a lot more to do. Their attitude is that they have done a lot so far, a winning season, a playoff berth are great, but they want more."

The Saints were joined by San Francisco and Washington as playoff qualifiers. The 49ers, led by Joe Montana's record-setting passing, moved to 10-2, one game ahead of the Saints in the NFC West, with a 23-12 decision at Green Bay. The Redskins routed St. Louis 34-17 for their fourth NFC East crown in seven years.

Chicago won its fourth successive NFC Central title with a 30-24 comeback victory over Minnesota. The Bears also are 10-2.

Denver jumped past San Diego and Seattle and into first place in the AFC West with a 31-20 victory over New England. The Broncos, 8-3-1, have the best record in the conference.

Houston beat San Diego 33-18 and Pittsburgh took Seattle 13-9, creating a three-way tie atop the AFC Central when Indianapolis edged Cleveland 9-7. The Oilers, Steelers and Browns are 7-5.

The Colts, also 7-5, lead the AFC East. Buffalo, which was tied with Indianapolis and the New York Jets, lost to the Los Angeles Raiders 34-21. The Jets are in Miami tonight.

Also on Sunday, it was New York Giants 23, Philadelphia 20 in overtime; Cincinnati 30, Kansas City 27 in overtime; the Los Angeles Rams 37, Detroit 16; and Atlanta 21, Dallas 10.

Saints 44, Buccaneers 34

Bobby Hebert had the biggest day in his three seasons of NFL duty, completing 16 of 24 passes for 255 yards and two touchdowns. Those scores came after Vinny Testaverde, the first pick in this year's draft, fumbled two of the first four snaps for the Buccaneers, losers of five straight.

Testaverde fumbled on the third play of the game on a sack and Bruce Clark recovered on the Bucs' 19-yard line. Hebert hit John Tice on an 8-yard scoring pass four plays later.

Testaverde fumbled the snap on the next play and Pat Swilling recovered at Tampa Bay's 38. Hebert found Tice from the 6.

"Winning and making the playoffs is wonderful," Hebert said. "We have to use this as a stepping stone."

Goal-Line Stand Keyed Chicago

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Chicago Bears, always ready for a challenge, wanted the Minnesota Vikings to go for a touchdown with fourth down and two feet to go.

But the Vikings couldn't meet the challenge, and as a result, the Bears have their fourth consecutive NFC Central championship.

The challenge came with just over five minutes left in the Sunday night's game and Minnesota holding a 24-23 lead. Chris Doleman had just sacked Mike Tomczak and stripped him of the ball just inside the Chicago 2 and the Vikings were about to take a 31-23 lead.

It never happened. On first down, Rick Fenney went off left tackle and got about a half-yard.

On second down, Fenney went to the right side. No gain.

On third down, Wade Wilson tried a quarterback sneak.

No gain.

"On the first one, we ran a trap and got it pretty close," Wilson said. "The next one, they stuffed pretty good. The next one, on my quarterback sneak, they stuffed us again."

So the Vikings called time out to decide whether to kick a field goal that would give them a four-point lead. Instead, they decided to go for it as the Bears cheered them on.

"We kept telling them to go for it," said Dave Duerson, Chicago's free safety. "I think they thought we were crazy. Our whole team was telling them to go for it."

And they did, pitching to Darrin Nelson, who started to the right on a power sweep. Todd Bell, the strong safety, broke through and dumped Nelson for a 4-yard loss.

Chicago Coach Mike Ditka said the Bears figured the Vikings would try a play-action pass and had a full blitz.

"It worked just as we had thought," he said. "Todd just shot through there and Darrin never had a chance. It was just the right defensive call."

Pirates Begin Second Season

From Staff Reports

East Carolina's basketball Pirates, after a week's layoff, open what new coach Mike Steele calls the "second season" Tuesday when the team entertains Campbell University.

Tipoff is set for 8 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Earlier this year, Steele said that he looked at the 1987-88 season as five different seasons, and he had goals for each of those.

The goal for the first season — the first two games of the year — was a split. And that's just what the Pirates got, defeating Longwood, 65-57, before losing to nationally ranked Duke, 94-45.

Now, according to Steele's plan, the next four games — Campbell, Maryland, Virginia Commonwealth and Radford — constitute the second season.

And once again, the goal is to at least break even.

That, however, may prove difficult.

The Camels, the first of the four opponents, comes into Minges with an unbeaten record, having won the Merrill Lynch Classic in Orlando, Fla., this past weekend. Campbell beat Florida International, 90-77, in the opening round, then topped hosting Central Florida, 91-82, for the championship.

Earlier, the Camels had beaten Averett, 95-64, and crushed Methodist, 133-84.

The 133 points was a school record — by a whopping 27 points.

Campbell is coached by former ECU aide Billy Lee.

As they will be in nearly every game this year, the Pirates will be at a height disadvantage against the Camels. While the tallest ECU player is 6-5, the Camels boast 6-9 junior center Sanders Jackson and 6-7 junior forward Henry Wilson in the starting lineup.

Others in the starting lineup include 6-4 senior forward Derrick Hensley, 6-2 junior guard Chris Springs and 5-9 sophomore Brad Childers.

The meeting with Campbell will be followed on Thursday night by a trip to the home court of the Maryland Terrapins. Maryland is 3-1 following a crushing defeat at the hands of West Virginia Saturday afternoon, 75-49.

Maryland won its first three games, downing Loyola of Maryland, Mississippi and Winthrop before suffering its first loss.

The Terps are led by 6-7 senior forward Derrick Lewis, who averages 23.5 points a game and 9.5 rebounds. (Averages prior to Saturday's game.) They have three others in double figures also, 6-6 sophomore forward Steve Hood, 10.5, 6-10 freshman center Brian Williams, 12.5, and 6-1 junior guard Rudy Archer, 12.5. Rounding out the starters is 6-1 sophomore guard Teyon McCoy, hitting 6.0 per game.

The Terrapins will play Mount St. Mary's tonight in their last game prior to facing the Pirates.

Finishing off this week's play, Virginia Commonwealth visits Minges on Saturday night for a 8:30

Early-Season Challenges Could Spur North Pitt

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
(One Of A Series)

North Pitt coach Cobby Deans said a good measure of what type of success the Panther basketball team enjoys this season will be in how it responds to some early season challenges.

Right off, the Panthers are handicapped by a lack of experience returning, as well as a late start due to part of the team just getting to practice due to the football playoffs.

"We are going to be very young," Deans said. "What makes it even more complicated is that we have a tougher non-conference schedule with (3-A) Havelock and (3-A) D.H. Conley. That's not going to help us."

"But with the kids we have, they'll make a good showing. It should be a learning experience early on. If we can just make a good showing there, it would be helpful. Being late in football, it put us way behind."

Last year's starting center, Ashley Sheppard, decided not to play this season. In addition, the Panthers also lost Maurice Jones, Michael Wilkes, Michael Brown and Darin White.

But they do return three starters in guard Calvin Hunter (6-0, Sr.) and forwards Reggie Daniels (6-3, So.) and William Morning (6-3, Jr.).

Other veterans include 5-9 guard Billy Hardison and 6-2 center Rufus Bynum.

They will be joined by younger players such as 6-1 junior forward

Clayton Cherry, 6-0 sophomore forward-guard Roosevelt Hines 5-9 guard Randy House, 6-0 junior forward Malcom Wiggins 6-0, 6-0 junior forward Willie Taylor and 6-2 junior forward Darrell Moore.

And while the late start due to football may have hurt the team's overall preparation, it may have helped some of the younger players, according to Deans.

"If anything else, us being so late, we probably have practiced more with the second team," he said. "If we can survive our non-conference schedule, I think it will help our depth."

Deans said he looks for Hardison and Hunter to start at the guards, with Daniels and Morning at the forwards, provided he can come up with a center. Bynum and Cherry are the candidates there.

"I'm going to try to come along with another center," Deans said. "I'm trying to work with Bynum and Cherry."

"A lot of our success is going to depend on their job at the center position. If they progress, I can put William at the forward. I think they are coming along."

Deans said he hopes the Panthers are able to get their running game in gear and also hopes to take advantage of the new three-point shot that is in use in the high schools this season.

"We're going to have adequate shooters," he said. "Some of the returnees and the JV guys are fine perimeter shooters. I think we'll have seven or eight boys that can run the ball well."

North Pitt finished 11-14 last year, including a 6-6 conference mark that was good for fourth place in the Eastern Plains Conference.

Deans said he expects Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central to be the league favorites with Pamlico, Greene Central and his team not far behind.

"I think Farmville Central, they are going to be pretty decent," he said. "Ayden-Grifton will also be (good). I think they (the Jaguars and the Chargers) might be a little bit ahead of us on paper, which doesn't mean a lot."

"We'll be in the upper group. (But) I'm really enthused by the chance for them to come through and I think they will."

The Panthers first game is Wednesday at Williamston.

Blazers Continue Hot Streak

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers are within a game of breaking their team record for consecutive victories, but Coach Mike Schuler says they almost left their record-tying victory at the airport.

The Trail Blazers defeated the New York Knicks 117-99 Sunday night for their ninth straight victory after returning earlier in the day from a triumph Saturday night over Phoenix. The victory gave the Blazers a half-game lead over the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division.

The Knicks used the Blazers' weariness to jump out to a 16-4 first quarter lead. New York forced 10 first-quarter Portland turnovers and led 52-44 late in the first half.

"I fully expected us to play as we did in the first quarter," Schuler said. "Our guys probably didn't get home from the airport until 2:30 this afternoon. But you have to do that in this league. It's all part of it."

Phoenix beat the Los Angeles Clippers 97-96 in the only other NBA game on the schedule. There are no games tonight.

Steve Johnson scored eight of his 22 points in the last 3½ minutes of the first half to lead Portland on a 13-2 burst to a 57-54 halftime lead. The Trail Blazers opened the third period with a 22-8 streak and were never threatened thereafter.

"I think Portland is very close to being a great team. They are a center away from being one of the dominant teams in this league and that's no knock on Steve Johnson," New York Coach Rick Pitino said.

"He's a big forward who is forced to play center and he's doing it very well," Pitino said.

Pitino, in his first year coaching in the NBA, wasn't as impressed with the Knicks after they dropped their fourth consecutive game and eighth straight to Portland.

"I'm at the breaking point. I'm finished with excuses. We can't keep losing leads," Pitino said.

Portland's Clyde Drexler led all scorers with 27 points and Jerome Kersey, playing again for injured top-scoring forward Kiki Vandeweghe, added 23.

Schuler, though, said the winning streak was a tribute to his entire team. "We're the most unselfish team in the league right now," he said.

Portland has won eight of the nine games without Vandeweghe. The Trail Blazers also lost starting center Sam Bowie before the season with an injury.

"How many teams have lost a potential starting center and another player who has averaged 30 points a game?" Schuler said. "Tell me who has done it and won nine straight besides us. We have to appreciate what this team is doing."

Portland's winning streak equals the its streaks of nine straight in 1979-80 and in 1980-81.

Kenny Walker led New York with 18 points and Patrick Ewing added 15.

Kevin Duckworth and Maurice Lucas had 10 rebounds apiece coming off the bench for Portland.

Suns 97, Clippers 96

At Los Angeles, Larry Nance scored 26 points and James Edwards added 17 as Phoenix Suns held off the Clippers for its first road victory of the season.

Phoenix appeared to have the game in hand, leading 97-91 with 1:33 left. Los Angeles rallied to within one point and had a couple of chances to take the lead, only to fall short.

The Clippers' Mike Woodson broke out of a 6-for-38 shooting drought over the previous two games to score 30 points. Michael Cage, who pulled down 19 rebounds for Los Angeles, made only four of 12 free throws, missing three in the last four minutes of the game.

Trailing 97-91 with 1:33 left in the game, the Clippers cut the deficit to 97-95 when Cage hit a jumper, then stole the ball from Alvan Adams under the Phoenix basket to set up a layup by Benoit Benjamin with 47 seconds left.

Cage then stripped Jeff Hornacek of the ball, was fouled at the other end by Nance with 25 seconds left and went to the line with a chance to tie the score. But he made only one of two free throws to leave the Clippers a point down.

Los Angeles got another chance when the Suns' Jay Humphries missed two foul shots with 10 seconds left, but Woodson missed a 22-footer near the left sideline as the buzzer sounded.

Heisman Trophy Returns To Notre Dame

NEW YORK (AP) — When the name of the 53rd Heisman Trophy winner was announced, Tim Brown cried and Don McPherson was relieved.

Brown, the versatile flanker and punt returner, became the seventh player from Notre Dame to receive college football's highest award, but the first in 23 years. And he won it big, outdistancing McPherson, who quarterbacked Syracuse to an unbeaten season and into the Sugar Bowl, 1,442 points to 831.

"I felt mostly relief for Tim Brown," the Syracuse captain said. "He went through the whole season as 'Heisman Trophy candidate' and by mid-season he was the 'Heisman Trophy winner.' That's a great deal of pressure."

That pressure appeared to get to Brown in his last two games, where he had subpar performances against Penn State and Miami. But Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz said Brown played the final five weeks of the season with a dislocated shoulder.

"We didn't want to say much about it for obvious reasons," Holtz said. "He suffered a slight separation in the sixth game of the year. We think he will be much better by the Cotton Bowl" on Jan. 1 when the Irish take on Texas A&M. "Timmy took a pounding. He also played with a broken ring finger."

Brown became only the second flanker-kick returner to win the Heisman. Nebraska's Johnny Rodgers was the other, in 1972.

The Notre Dame star finished first in the voting in five of the six sections: Mid-Atlantic, South, Southwest, Midwest and Far West. In the Northeast, he was second to McPherson.

"I just wanted to cry because I was so relieved," Brown said in recalling the moment when his name was announced Saturday. "Everything was behind me and I didn't have to worry anymore."

Gordon Lockbaum, a wide receiver and defensive back for Holy Cross, finished third in the voting with 657 points. Running back Lorenzo White of Michigan State was fourth with 632 points, followed by running back Craig Heyward, Pittsburgh, 170; linebacker Chris Spielman, Ohio State, 110; running back Thurman Thomas, Oklahoma State, 99; running back Gaston Green, UCLA, 73; freshman running back Emmitt Smith, Florida, 70; and running back Bobby Humphrey of Alabama, 63.

Brown had 320 first-place votes, nearly double the 167 garnered by McPherson. Every player in the Top Ten got at least two first-place votes. Only the 10 highest vote-getters were named by the Downtown Athletic Club.

"After everything I heard this week, I thought the vote would be close," Brown said. "I wasn't shocked, but I was surprised. After all that went on this week, I thought I wasn't even going to be invited."

Brown had been favored all year to capture the Heisman, but his candidacy appeared to sag when he dropped three passes in Notre Dame's 24-0 loss to Miami in the final regular-season game.

"I thought the Heisman was supposed to go to someone who dominated his position," Heyward said, "not someone who runs all over the field playing hide and seek."

After Brown was named, Heyward said the Irish star "won it in the off-season."

McPherson finished the season with outstanding performances against Boston College and West Virginia. But it wasn't enough to gain him enough votes.

"It didn't surprise me at all," McPherson said. "Tim had the momentum before I even became a candidate."

"I'm proud to be one of the five players in this room as opposed to the thousands who play football on every level. I dreamed of the Heisman since I was a kid, but I'm not disappointed. It's just that if you don't dream about the Heisman, you're not dreaming high enough."

Only Brown was more consistent in the voting than Lockbaum, a rarity in that he plays on both offense and defense. Lockbaum finished second in the Southwest and third in every other section.

"I'm happy with the finish," said Lockbaum, who plays for a Division I-AA school. "To finish third is a great experience."

This season, Brown scored seven touchdowns, including two against Michigan State in a record-tying performance. He scored on consecutive punt returns, the first for 66 yards, the second 71.

Although Brown didn't duplicate his junior year total of 1,937 yards, he did manage 1,843 against defenses rigged to stop him. On plays from the line of scrimmage, he averaged nearly 14 yards every time he touched the ball.

"Week after week, Tim Brown does things that just amaze me, with and without the football," Holtz said. "The attention defenses pay to him dictates so much of what we do offensively."

Other Notre Dame Heisman winners were Angelo Bertelli in 1943, Johnny Lujack in 1947, Leon Hart in 1949, John Lattner in 1953, Paul Hornung in 1956 and John Huarte in 1964.

He also became the second player from Woodrow Wilson High School in Dallas to win the Heisman. Davey O'Brien, who played quarterback for Texas Christian, won the award in 1938.

Kentucky Takes Over Top Spot

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

Kentucky, which beat Indiana in overtime in the Big Four Classic, was voted the No. 1 team in the Associated Press college basketball poll today, replacing North Carolina, which fell to fifth following its loss to Vanderbilt.

The Wildcats are the third team in the three polls released this year to hold the top spot. Syracuse was the preseason No. 1, while North Carolina had the top spot last week in the first regular-season poll.

The Wildcats, 3-0, received 46 first-place votes and 1,090 points from a national panel of sports writers and broadcasters to move one spot in the poll and easily outdistance Pittsburgh for the No. 1 ranking, the first for Kentucky since the 1983-84 season when it went on to the Final Four.

Pittsburgh, 2-0, received four first-place votes and 928 points in jumping from fourth to second, while Iowa, 6-0, moved from sixth to third with two first-place votes and 902 points.

Arizona, 5-0, improved from ninth to fourth as the Wildcats received two first-place votes and 852 points. North Carolina, 4-1, was fifth with 833 points, followed by Indiana, Wyoming, Syracuse, Missouri and Duke.

Indiana, which lost its first game to Kentucky on Saturday before 43,601 in the Hoosier Dome, had 760 points in falling one place. Wyoming, 3-0 and 10th last week, had 674 points, four more than Syracuse, 4-2, which followed its loss to Arizona in the championship game of the Great Alaska Shootout with two victories as host of the Carrier Classic.

Missouri, 2-0, which was extended into double overtime before prevailing over Eastern Michigan 77-75, received the final first-place vote and 656 points in dropping one spot. Duke, 3-0, jumped from 13th to round out the Top Ten with 565 points, one more than Temple which leads the Second Ten.

Temple was followed by Florida, Purdue, Georgetown, Michigan, Oklahoma, Nevada-Las Vegas, Kansas, Notre Dame and Memphis State. Last week's Second Ten was Purdue, Temple, Duke, Louisville, Michigan, Kansas, Georgetown, Oklahoma, Nevada-Las Vegas and Memphis State.

Notre Dame, 1-1, replaced Louisville in the Top Twenty as the Fighting Irish beat the Cardinals 69-54 in the second game of the Big Four Classic.

Notre Dame was ranked for the final two weeks last season but was passed over so far this season until the victory in Indianapolis.

Oklahoma and Nevada-Las Vegas put on some impressive performances last week. The Sooners beat Penn State 93-59 and Loyola, Ill. 123-73, while the Runnin' Rebels broke the 100-point mark in all three of their games.

Nevada-Las Vegas beat Hawaii-Loa 114-46, Hawaii-Hilo 113-65 and Hawaii-Loa again 120-47 in its opening three games of the season.

Vanderbilt, which beat North Carolina 78-76, was 21st in the voting despite the upset of the No. 1 team. The victory over the Tar Heels gave the Commodores a 3-0 record.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The very latest in color matrix boards is in use at the Meadowlands race track.

It's called the Sony JumboTron and it's part of $3.3 million package which eventually will replace 500 closed-circuit television monitors at the course.

The JumboTron, which shows pictures of a race being run and other pertinent information, is 19 feet 6 inches by 47 feet 1 inch. The picture is shown in color.

game. East Carolina's women face nationally ranked Duke in a 6:30 p.m. game that will start the doubleheader action.

VCU suffered its first loss of the year on Saturday, bowing to Auburn 93-80. The Rams had opened the year with wins over Puerto Rico-Cayey (99-74) and Arkansas State (77-68) in the Puerto Rico Sunshine Classic. They also added a 78-76 win over James Madison at Harrisonburg, Va.

Virginia Commonwealth features a former D.H. Conley player in Lou Bryant, who played his last two seasons at Merced (Calif.) Junior College. The 6-8 junior has earned the starting center role and was hitting 5.3 points a game prior to Saturday's game.

The leading scorer for the Rams is 6-8 senior forward Phil Stennie at 22.7 with an 8.3 rebounding mark. Guard Chris Cheeks, a 6-4 junior, is right behind at 20.0 ppg, while 6-7 senior forward John Thompson, is averaging 15.7 points and 11.7 rebounds. Guard Vince Wilson, a 6-3 junior, hits 10.7 per game.

After VCU, the Pirates have a week off before cloing out their pre-holiday 'season' at Radford on Dec. 19.

The Pirates are led in scoring by freshman guard Jimmy Hinston with a 12.0 per game mark. Gus Hill and Reed Lose are also in double figures with 11.5 and 11.0 averages, respectively.

The Pirates, however, have been hurt on the board, being outbounded 77-60 in the two games. They have also been shooting poorly from the floor, with only a .385 shooting average.

With only two of the 11 players having any experience, the Pirates are still very, very young.

"It's really been an interesting start," Steele said. "We had to struggle to beat Longwood, and then we were totally outmanned at Duke. Our guys just have to keep battling and make good things happen."

"We've got another stretch of tough games this week, but all our games are going to be tough this season. The Campbell game will be our first at home with the students back, and we're looking forward to their support."

The East Carolina men's and women's swim teams swept American Sunday in a Colonial Athletic Association swim meet. The men won by a score of 122-87 while the women won by a 106-80 margin. Perry Smith, Raymond Kennedy were double winners for the Pirates. ECU's men improve to 4-4 while the women are 7-2. "American was the second team that was fully shaved for us," said ECU coach Rick Kobe. "I think it helped propel us to a total team effort. We were very pleased with the efforts of all our swimmers and totally dominated the meet." Patty Walsh was the meet's best swimmer for the women. Walsh, Ginger Carrick and Carolyn Green were double winners for the Lady Pirates. Both teams return to action Jan. 3 against Johns Hopkins in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Pam Pack Rolls By Williamston

WASHINGTON — Washington High School opened the 1987-88 basketball season with a 76-51 victory over Williamston High School Saturday night. Ryan Dixon scored 21 points to spark the Pam Pack, which had had several of its scheduled games reset because of football playoff action. Williamston eased out into a 21-20 lead after the first eight minutes of the game, but couldn't hold onto it. Washington outthit the Tigers, 21-14, in the second quarter, building a 41-35 halftime lead. Washington continued to pull away in the third quarter, running its lead out to 56-41. The Pam Pack then outraced Williamston to the wire, 20-10. Joe Daniels added 17 points while Donell Albritton had 10 for the Pam Pack. Williamston was led by Shawn Reed with 12 and Guy Spruill with 11. Williamston falls to 1-3 with the loss and will play host to North Pitt on Tuesday. Washington, now 1-0, will play host to Plymouth on Tuesday.

Crum Situation Troubles Board Member

In the wake of the resignation of North Carolina football coach Dick Crum, a member of the university's board of trustees says he thinks the trustee board should reexamine its role in athletics.

"Crum's leaving could have a far-reaching effect on the trustees' relationship with athletics," said trustee Bobo Tanner, a Rutherfordton business executive.

"The whole Educational Foundation, the Rams Club — everything — has been hands off.... We have an athletic committee and we tried to keep in touch with how clean the program is," Tanner said. "And I think it still is very clean."

"But I think that we will have to look into a different relationship, become more involved," he said.

Some observers said it wasn't the fact that Crum left the program that bothered them — it's how he left.

"The most troubling aspect is (that) the pressure for change appears to have come from people outside the university," said Daniel Okun, a retired Kenan professor of environmental engineering. "The university had had a reputation for not having fired its athletic people and now that seems to have gone down the drain under great pressure."

The Charlotte Observer said in its Sunday editions that some faculty and alumni believe the Rams Club was behind Crum's ouster — despite assurances from club members, UNC officials and Crum that the club had nothing to do with it.

The club is a nonprofit fundraising group officially known as the Educational Foundation. It provides about $2.25 million a year in athletic scholarships, raised nearly $38 million to build a new basketball arena, and, in Crum's case, put up the $800,000 to buy out the remaining four years of his 10-year coaching contract.

Crum, 53, was hired 10 years ago from Miami, Ohio, to elevate UNC football to national prominence equal to that of UNC basketball. He has the distinction of being UNC's winningest football coach, but fans were nevertheless disgruntled with his conservative offense and reserved personality.

Several sources told the newspaper that Crum, aware of discontent, talked about leaving last year. But he returned, and on Nov. 10 said he'd also be back in 1988.

On Nov. 19, amid speculation about Crum's future, UNC athletic director John Swofford said the decision was up to Crum. A statement issued Nov. 30 by Crum, Swofford and Chancellor Christopher Fordham said Crum had been given the option to continue, but that UNC and Crum had decided it was in the best interest of all concerned that he should leave.

Even after Crum resigned, contradictions continued. His son, Jeff, told a Raleigh television station that Crum had told him Nov. 17 he was being fired. Crum, in a written statement printed in the Durham Morning Herald Thursday, scolded those who would speak on his behalf, and reiterated that the decision to quit was his.

Clemson Claims NCAA Soccer Crown

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Freshman Richie Richmond, subbing for injured All-American Bruce Murray, drove home a 12-yard shot in the final minute of play as Clemson clinched a 2-0 victory over San Diego State in the championship match of the NCAA soccer tournament Sunday.

The championship was the second for Clemson in the past four years and represented the third national title for an Atlantic Coast Conference team in four seasons. Duke won the title in 1986.

Sunday's title match was the most improbable of pairings as Clemson, the 23rd team selected to the 24-team playoff field, and San Diego St., the last team selected, tangled before a sellout crowd of 8,000 fans.

The Tigers, 18-5-1, and unranked going into the playoffs, dominated the first half, taking nine shots on goal to only two for the Aztecs.

Senior Paul Rutenis gave the Tigers a 1-0 lead at the 22:31 mark of the half on a 5-yard header off an assist by Murray following a throw in from the corner.

That lead held up despite San Diego St.'s more aggressive second half play as the Aztecs missed three opportunities in the final 45 minutes.

Richmond, who came on after Murray suffered an ankle sprain with 18:25 left, took a long pass from freshman Pearse Tormey, and chipped the ball past Aztec goalie Bryan Finnerty to start the Clemson celebration with 41 seconds left to play.

Clemson finished with 13 shots on goal to six for the Aztecs. Finnerty was credited with six saves, and Clemson goalie Tim Genovese, recording the first shut out of a San Diego St. team in 48 matches, was credited with two saves.

"Their team worked very hard to get us off our tempo," Clemson coach I.M. Ibrahim said. "The hardest thing to do is get the tempo back when it slows down."

Playoffs Taking Shape ...

Testaverde stepped up his performance after the dismal start. He wound up hitting 22 of 47 passes for 369 yards — eight to Mark Carrier, who accounted for a Tampa Bay team-record 220 receiving yards. Testaverde threw for two touchdowns and ran for one.

"As the game went on, I got hit more, and when that happens, I tend to get angry, and I play better," Testaverde said.

When the game ended, Saints owner Tom Benson circled the field in a Mardi Gras strut, accompanied by a line of girls from the dance team.

49ers 23, Packers 12
Joe Montana completed a streak 22 consecutive pass completions, including 17 in a row Sunday, breaking the NFL record of 20 by Ken Anderson of Cincinnati. Montana had completed his last five passes a week ago against Cleveland.

On Sunday, he completed 26 of 35 passes for 308 yards and two touchdowns, and ran for another score. Montana has a personal-high 29 touchdown passes this season.

Jerry Rice caught a 57-yard TD pass, giving him at least one in 10 straight games, one shy of the NFL record.

"The touchdown streak doesn't mean a lot to me," Rice said. "I just want to get to the Super Bowl and get a ring."

Redskins 34, Cardinals 17
Jay Schroeder, who had a hot second half in a comeback win over the Giants last week, hit eight of nine passes for 126 yards in the third quarter as the Redskins scored three touchdowns in a span of 5:48. Schroeder, benched two weeks ago in favor of veteran Doug Williams, ran for one score and passed for another in the quarter.

Schroeder, also threw an 84-yard touchdown pass to Gary Clark and George Rogers rushed for 134 yards. "This is a great feeling," Schroeder said. "I think at the beginning of the year if anybody had told me we'd win the title with three games to go, I'd have thought they were crazy."

Bears 30, Vikings 24
Jim McMahon suffered a hamstring injury with 11:01 remaining. So Mike Tomczak came on and calmly guided the Bears to the winning touchdown, which came on a 38-yard pass to Dennis Gentry.

With Minnesota trailing 20-7 in the third quarter, Wade Wilson came off the bench to give the Vikings the lead with three touchdown passes, including 60 and 35 yards to Anthony Carter.

But the Vikings were stopped four times inside the Chicago 2 while holding a 24-23 lead and never got close to scoring again.

Broncos 31, Patriots 20
John Elway helped Denver with his arm, as usual, and with his foot, executing a quick kick that was downed on the Patriots' 5. Mark Haynes soon picked off a Tom Ramsey pass and ran it 14 yards for a TD.

Elway threw two second-half touchdown passes in Denver's fourth consecutive victory after the Broncos fell behind 17-3 at halftime.

Oilers 33, Chargers 18
The Oilers were talking about working together after two weeks of falling apart with one-sided losses to Cleveland and Indianapolis.

"The last two weeks have been full of turmoil," safety Keith Bostic said. "It was kind of like impostors were out there the past couple of weeks. Now we can look forward to the weeks coming up. Today, we were just throwing people out there and the chemistry worked."

Not on the first two plays, when Mike Rozier suffered a bruised shoulder, then Warren Moon threw an interception.

But the Oilers came back for 20 straight points in handing San Diego its third consecutive loss.

"Give the Oilers credit," Chargers Coach Al Saunders said. "They took advantage of their opportunities and they deserved to win."

Steelers 13, Seahawks 9
Pittsburgh, taking a page from its championship days, rushed for 209 yards and forced a pair of second-half turnovers in its territory. Frank Pollard ran for 106 yards, including 11-yard fourth-quarter TD.

With Seattle ahead 9-6 and driving late in the third period, Paul Skansi fumbled at the Steelers' 19 and linebacker Bryan Hinkle recovered for Pittsburgh. The Steelers marched 81 yards on 14 plays to go ahead.

Dave Krieg was intercepted on the Seahawks' next possession.

"It was really fun to play a game reminiscent of the old Steelers, the way we were running the ball," said center Mike Webster, who played in a club-record 201st game. "It was a fun game for the linemen."

Colts 9, Browns 7
Indianapolis took sole possession of the top spot in the AFC East — pending tonight's result — with a superior defensive effort and three Dean Biasucci field goals. The Colts held Cleveland to 87 yards on the ground and Bernie Kosar, the AFC's leading passer, was just 15-for-35 for 178 yards.

Biasucci hit from 33, 37 and 41 yards in the second quarter. He has made 20 of 23 field goal attempts and didn't let the poor field conditions bother him.

Raiders 34, Bills 21
Marc Wilson had one of the best days of his inconsistent career, completing 21 of 32 passes for 337 yards and three touchdowns.

The Raiders trailed 14-13 at halftime, but Wilson hit James Lofton with a 41-yard scoring pass and Los Angeles never trailed again.

Giants 23, Eagles 20

The Giants won for the sixth consecutive time and 12th in the last 14 meetings with Philadelphia. Raul Allegre, who earlier missed two field-goal attempts, kicked a 28-yarder to win it. In the fourth quarter, Allegre had a 31-yard field goal attempt hit the upright. His 50-yard attempt in overtime was partially blocked.

Eagles punter John Teltschik set an NFL record by punting 15 times.

Bengals 30, Chiefs 27

After six consecutive home losses, and four defeats in the final moments, the Bengals finally found a way to win. Jim Breech's 32-yard field goal, his third of the game, won it, but not before some more heartache for Cincinnati fans.

Last week, the Jets blocked a Breech field goal try and returned it for the winning touchdown. This week, Kansas City took its first lead of the game, 24-20, with seven minutes left when Bill Maas batted down a field goal attempt and Kevin Ross returned it 65 yards for a touchdown. It was Cincinnati's fourth blocked field goal attempt this season.

Rams 37, Lions 16

Jim Everett, who has languished near the bottom of the passing ratings, threw for a career-high 324 yards and two touchdowns. He had plenty of help from Charles White, who rushed for two TDs and 102 yards, his sixth 100-yard rushing game this season.

Everett hit on 20 of 26 passes as Los Angeles won its fourth straight. White, who had only 1,378 rushing yards for his six-year career, now has 1,054 this season.

Falcons 21, Cowboys 10

Before the smallest Cowboys home crowd in 22 years, Atlanta won for the first time since the strike. Robert Moore recovered a pair of fumbles, returning one on a kickoff for a 20-yard touchdown. That gave the Falcons 14 points in 13 seconds and a lead they never lost.

The game drew just 40,103, the smallest Texas Stadium crowd in Cowboys' history.

Hoyt, Former Teammate Meet During A Drug Bust

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A narcotics officer who played high school baseball with LaMarr Hoyt crossed paths with the former San Diego Padres pitcher again over the weekend — during a drug bust.

Hoyt, 32, was arrested Saturday at his Columbia apartment. Richland County Sheriff's Department narcotics investigators served a search warrant and found about two grams of cocaine and several plastic bags containing marijuana, Inspector Allen Sloan said.

Hoyt, a Cy Young Award winner, was charged with possession with intent to distribute cocaine and marijuana, authorities said.

At Keenan High School, Andy Jones and Hoyt traded playing shortstop and pitcher on the baseball team, Jones recalled Sunday.

After graduation, Jones put down his bat and eventually joined the Richland County Sheriff's Department. Hoyt went on to become an all-star pitcher with the Chicago White Sox.

The two men had seen each other only in passing since high school, Jones said. Saturday, he helped arrest Hoyt.

"Anytime you arrest somebody, you feel bad for them," Jones said. "It's a shame it had to happen to someone like LaMarr, with the talent he had and he had the whole community behind him."

"We've all followed his career," Jones said of Hoyt's boyhood friends and neighbors. "All of us from those days were really glad someone from our old neighborhood got to the pros. It was something we all wanted to do."

Richland County Sheriff's Lt. Leon Lott said investigators received information last summer, soon after Hoyt returned to Columbia, that he was involved in drugs.

Hoyt, who served a brief sentence in federal prison this year on drug charges, said, "Oh no, not again," when officers rushed into his home, Sloan said.

Along with the cocaine and marijuana, Sloan said investigators seized drug paraphernalia, including "instruments used to cut cocaine," Sloan said. That led to the possession with intent to distribute charges, which carry minimum 10-year sentences upon conviction because of Hoyt's previous drug arrests. Hoyt also faces revocation of a five-year parole on drug charges.

"We were not going on him as somebody who was just using," Lott said. "A lot of people may think we focused on him because he was a professional ball player and had a lot of notoriety. That wasn't it."

"We were investigating the distribution of drugs, and we got him charged with distribution."

Hoyt was taken to the Richland County Detention Center and released Saturday after he posted a $20,000 bond.

Hoyt also must answer federal charges in San Diego alleging he violated probation by testing positive for cocaine use, according to a published report.

It was the first time Hoyt has been accused of using cocaine. His drug problems in 1986 involved sedatives.

Hoyt, who is trying to return to major league baseball with the Chicago

White Sox, is scheduled to answer charges in U.S. District Court in San Diego on Thursday. The San Diego Union reported Saturday. The charges were made in a South Carolina probation report Nov. 12.

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth suspended Hoyt for the 1987 season because of the pitcher's sedative abuse, but the suspension was reduced to 60 days by arbitrator George Nicolau. The Padres released Hoyt on Jan. 7.

Hurricanes Back In Title Hunt

By The Associated Press
The Miami Hurricanes are on their way to another national championship showdown. This time, they won't have to travel far.

The Hurricanes, who lost a No. 1 vs. No. 2 national title showdown to Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl at Tempe, Ariz., last season, will be at home in the Orange Bowl this time for another 1-2 battle, this on New Year's Night against top-ranked Oklahoma.

That confrontation was set up when the second-ranked Hurricanes defeated No. 8 South Carolina 20-16 Saturday night to complete an 11-0 regular season.

"We can now start thinking about Oklahoma," Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson said. "Playing for the national championship is a great privilege."

"South Carolina is a great ballclub, but our kids came out and did what they had to do to win. We did whatever it took. Whatever juice I had is drained out. My heart's going 90 miles an hour. If I didn't have a heart attack tonight, I never will."

The Miami-South Carolina game marked the end of the regular season in college football. The day featured a lot of action, including Army's 17-3 victory over Navy in their traditional season-ending battle, as well as a game on the other side of the world and playoff contests around the nation.

Jeff Feagles, the holder for Miami's field-goal team, ran 24 yards on a fake kick to set up Melvin Bratton's 4-yard go-ahead touchdown run in the second period.

Steve Walsh, the successor to 1986 Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde, threw his 18th and 19th touchdown passes of the season — 46 yards to Michael Irvin in the first period and 56 to Brian Blades in the third quarter.

The Hurricanes became the fourth team to put together consecutive 11-0 regular seasons since the NCAA went to an 11th game in 1970.

"The fake field goal was the key in getting the go-ahead TD," Johnson said. "It was something we thought we could get."

South Carolina, 8-3 after having a six-game winning streak snapped, will play LSU in the Gator Bowl.

Bit Rambusch kicked a 40-yard field goal in the first quarter and Andy Peterson and Tory Crawford ran for fourth-quarter touchdowns as Army downed Navy in the 88th renewal of their service academy rivalry.

The victory, before a sellout crowd of 68,000 at Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium, was the Cadets' third in the last four years and narrowed Navy's lead in the series to 41-40-7.

Elsewhere, James Rouse rushed for 96 yards and three touchdowns as Liberty Bowl-bound Arkansas routed Hawaii 38-20 at Honolulu.

At Melbourne, Australia, Friday night, Brigham Young beat Colorado State 30-26 in a Western Athletic Conference contest billed as "the Melbourne Bowl." Quarterback Sean Covey ran for one touchdown and threw two touchdown passes to Matt Bellini in leading BYU.

NCAA I-AA Playoffs
Ritchie Melchor gained 156 yards and scored two touchdowns to lead Appalachian State to a 19-0 victory over defending champion Georgia Southern in the quarterfinals of the NCAA I-AA playoffs.

Georgia Southern, 8-4, hadn't been shut out in 75 games since reviving its football program in 1982. Appalachian State, 11-2, the tournament's top seed, will host Southern Conference foe Marshall in the semifinals next week.

Tony Petersen threw four touchdown passes and Marshall's defense intercepted six passes as the Thundering Herd rolled over Weber State 51-23.

Stan Humphries passed for four second-half touchdowns and Teddy Garcia kicked a 48-yard field goal with 14 seconds remaining to rally Northeast Louisiana to a 33-32 victory over Eastern Kentucky.

Northeast Louisiana will meet Northern Iowa, which defeated Arkansas State 49-28 in the other Division I-AA quarterfinal. Quarterback Mike Smith threw a 78-yard touchdown pass to Wes Anderson to trigger a 28-point second-half burst for Northern Iowa.

NCAA Division II
Quarterback Mike Turk ran for two touchdowns and threw for another as Troy State downed Central Florida 31-10 and earned a berth in the Division II championship game.

The Trojans won their 11th consecutive game and improved their record to 11-1-1. Troy State has been in the Division II playoffs three of the last four years and won the championship in 1984.

Joe Rodgers intercepted two Northern Michigan passes in the final four minutes to preserve Portland State's 13-7 victory over the Wildcats in the other Division II semifinal.

Portland State, 11-1-1, and Troy State will play for the championship next Saturday at Florence, Ala.

NCAA Division III
Dave Jones scored three touchdowns, rushed for 118 yards and set a Dayton career scoring record as the Flyers defeated Central College of Iowa 34-0 in the Division III semifinals.

Jones has 254 career points, breaking the record of 246 points held by Gary Kosins.

The Flyers, 11-2, advanced to play Wagner College of New York on Dec. 12 in the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl at Phenix City, Ala., for the Division III championship.

Greg Kovar completed 16 of 27 passes for 209 yards and two touchdowns to lead Wagner to a 20-15 victory over Emory & Henry in the other semifinal.

Wagner, the East Region champion, improved to 12-1.

NAIA Division I
Placekicker Louis Reveiz booted a 20-yard field goal to break a tie and boost Carson-Newman to 27-24 victory over Gardner-Webb in the second round of the NAIA Division I playoffs.

The Eagles trailed 21-10 at the half before coming back against the Bulldogs, who won the South Atlantic Conference regular-season title.

Mike Vaughn scored touchdowns on bursts of 63, 77 and 17 yards to lead fourth-ranked Mesa College to a 38-7 victory over Southern Oregon. Mesa, 11-0, put the game out of reach in the first minute of the second half on two Vaughn touchdowns.

Blaise Bauer caught two touchdown passes and ran for another as Pittsburg State built a 28-7 halftime lead en route to a 42-21 victory over Presbyterian College.

Pittsburg State, ranked No. 1 in the nation, amassed 417 total yards, while Presbyterian, of Clinton, S.C., failed to capitalize on 357 yards in total offense.

Robert Whitman's 43-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter broke 7-7 tie and led Cameron University to a 14-7 victory over Central Arkansas.

The results set up semifinal pairings of Mesa at Carson-Newman and Cameron at Pittsburg State.

NAIA Division II
A 92-yard kickoff return by Aatron Kenney boosted Wisconsin-Stevens Point past Geneva College of Pennsylvania 48-25 in the semifinals of the NAIA Division II playoffs.

Kenney also scored in the third quarter on an 89-yard pass-play from sophomore quarterback Kirk Baumgartner after the Pointers took a 25-19 halftime lead.

Freshman Eric Cultum kicked a 35-yard field goal in overtime to lift Pacific Lutheran to a 17-14 victory over Baker in the other semifinal game. Cultum's winning field goal capped a comeback from a 14-6 deficit in the fourth quarter.

Blaise Bauer caught two touchdown passes and ran for another as Pittsburg State built a 28-7 halftime lead en route to a 42-21 victory over Presbyterian College.

Pittsburg State, ranked No. 1 in the nation, amassed 417 total yards, while Presbyterian, of Clinton, S.C., failed to capitalize on 357 yards in total offense.

Robert Whitman's 43-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter broke 7-7 tie and led Cameron University to a 14-7 victory over Central Arkansas.

The results set up semifinal pairings of Mesa at Carson-Newman and Cameron at Pittsburg State.

Maravich Auditions

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Pete Maravich said he was impressed with many of the 300 or so boys who dribbled basketballs and performed layups at the first of 20 auditions nationwide for a movie about the life of the LSU basketball legend.

Each boy hoped for the on-court role of a youthful Maravich in the film "The Pistol: The Story of How the Legend Began."

"There were a couple of kids who have a good talent," said Maravich, who conducted Saturday's auditions at the LSU Assembly Center. "I would love for the kid to come out of the Baton Rouge area — or the Louisiana area."

Quiet Returns To Federal Prison

By TOM SHARP
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Scattered debris and yellow ribbons tied to a prison fence remained Sunday, but most of the Cuban inmates who held 89 hostages in an 11-day uprising had been scattered in federal prisons throughout the country.

Outside the gray stone U.S. Penitentiary, the street was littered with cigarette butts where an army of reporters, relatives and onlookers had kept vigil since the Cubans seized the prison two weeks ago Monday. Heavily armed federal agents swept through the fire-damaged facility on Saturday, searching for bodies, booby traps and any Cubans hiding among the rubble since releasing the hostages Friday. They found none, but did uncover bottle bombs and thousands of crude machetes ground on prison machinery. Authorities transferred 936 inmates to 47 other federal prisons and returned 186 to cells undamaged by the riot.

The bulk of those transferred went to Leavenworth, Kan., where 519 had been received by late Saturday.

The inmate revolt, and an eight-day riot by Cuban inmates in Oakdale, La., followed a U.S.-Cuban agreement that prisoners feared would lead to their return to Cuba.

After negotiations that involved a Cuban-born Roman Catholic bishop, federal officials agreed to postpone any deportations until the Cubans' cases are reviewed individually. And the government agreed not to punish the inmates for damage caused during the riots.

Prison officials have not said what impact the relocation of the Cubans will have on an already overcrowded federal system, although Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten said authorities may send other inmates to halfway houses or parole them earlier than planned.

Damage to the two prisons is in the millions of dollars, though no official estimate has been made. The industries building in Atlanta was destroyed and will have to be rebuilt, said Gary McCune, regional director of the Bureau of Prisons. Two other buildings that were burned had been scheduled for demolition anyway under a $63 million renovation plan, he said.

Sunday morning at the prison looked like Sunday morning after the traveling circus leaves town.

Workers removed the tents where television stations had kept crews throughout the siege, leaving behind front lawns beaten to dust. Yellow ribbons that families of the hostages had tied Thanksgiving Day to trees and the fence around the prison yard remained.

The bright lights, cameras and portable heaters were gone. Smoke rising from the prison came mainly from fires set for warmth, not destruction.

Canada, U.S. Settle On Free-Trade Deal

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada and the United States agreed to a final text of a free-trade deal that would reduce tariff barriers in the world's biggest trading partnership, a Canadian official said today.

"You'll be pleased to know we reached agreement," chief Canadian negotiator Simon Reisman said after weekend negotiations in Ottawa. He called the 1,000-page document consistent with the outline of the sweeping trade pact initialed in Oct. 4 in Washington.

"From Canada's point of view, it is a very good agreement," said Reisman.

Neither he nor Peter Murphy, the chief U.S. negotiator, would divulge details of the agreement. But sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the final text differs from the October agreement on provisions for automotive trade, maritime shipping and the process for settling trade disputes.

The tentative deal reached in Washington in October would eliminate all tariffs over a 10-year period, starting Jan. 1, 1989.

Over that period, U.S. access to Canadian energy and financial markets would be improved, and trade disputes would be submitted to five-member panel chosen from both countries.

Canadian access would be improved to U.S. markets, including agriculture, fisheries, lumber and paper, minerals, manufacturing and retail.

Reisman said both sides would proofread and initial the final text within the next 48 hours, submit it to their governments for approval and release it to the public. Under a U.S. congressional timetable, President Reagan is scheduled to sign the completed pact by Jan. 2.

Differences over maritime shipping, automotive trade and the proposed dispute-settlement mechanism had prevented negotiators from drafting a final legal text of the October agreement.

Both governments say the pact will create jobs and spread prosperity, but it raised strong opposition in Canada, where Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's political foes have accused him of buckling under to the United States.

The Canadian Labor Congress, the nation's largest labor coalition with 1.3 members, claims 800,000 jobs could be lost, while Mulroney says up to 350,000 will be created.

Reisman refused to say whether any tradeoffs had been made during a weekend of intense talks needed to break disputes over the wording of the deal.

Murphy said he was relieved to get the job done.

"It's been a long hard two years, but I must admit I can even agree with Simon (Reisman) here," Murphy said.

Higher-level officials were brought for the weekend talks after Murphy and Reisman failed to complete the final draft during two days of negotiations last week in Ottawa.

Mulroney's chief of staff, Derek Burney, and U.S. Ambassador Thomas Niles headed trade officials on both sides.

Completion of the text was originally expected by late October.

Act Of Compassion

ATLANTA (AP) — A father in mourning taken hostage by Cuban inmates at the U.S. Penitentiary here was released two days later, due in large part to the courage and generosity of a fellow captive.

Wayne Autry, 42, and Gary Stephens had worked together for seven or eight years as foremen in the prison's mailbag factory, and were taken hostage when the inmates rebelled Nov. 23, beginning an 11-day siege.

The following night, the Cubans decided to let some of the hostages go, apparently so that those who were freed could report that the others were being well treated.

Autry said the Cubans originally included him and Stephens among 10 hostages to be released. They then cut the number in half, and excluded Autry.

Stephens and the inmates knew that Autry's 16-year-old son, Chris, died in August of injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident.

"When they came back in," Autry said, "Mr. Stephens told the Cubans, 'Don't let me go. Let Mr. Autry go. You know why.' It wasn't something he thought over. He just came up with it immediately."

Five Die In Fire

CLEVELAND (AP) — Fire broke out early today in a house on the city's east side, killing a man and four of his grandchildren, authorities said.

The man, whose name and age were not immediately available, was pronounced dead at the scene, authorities said. Firefighters pulled the four children from a first-floor bedroom, said Battalion Chief David Glauner.

The children were taken to St. Vincent Charity Hospital and Health Center, where efforts to revive them failed, officials said.

The children were identified as Darven, 6, Dawn, 8, and Ernest Simms, 5, and Wayne Epherain, 3, said Bernadette Reitz, a nursing supervisor who added that the children were the dead man's grandchildren.

RESOLUTION

PRESENTED TO THE
PITT COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION
DECEMBER 7, 1987

WHEREAS: Christmas Day was originally called as a national holiday to commemorate the birth of Jesus Christ,

AND WHEREAS: Such commemoration has traditionally involved the singing of Christmas carols about Jesus Christ and the display of such traditional decorations as a Nativity Scene,

AND WHEREAS: According to the First Amendment of the Bill of Rights and according to Supreme Court decisions, the observance of Christmas through such as the aforementioned activities are expressly permitted in the Public Schools,

AND WHEREAS: In the United States it is a part of the cultural heritage of our nation to sing Christmas carols and display Nativity Scenes at Christmas,

AND WHEREAS: It is a definite responsibility of educators in the United States to inform children of and involve children in the activities that comprise our national heritage and traditions,

AND WHEREAS: The report by the Task Force on Religion to the Pitt County Board of Education states that the observance of a religious holiday in the public schools must be conducted in a "prudent and objective" manner,

AND WHEREAS: In at least one instance in a Pitt County elementary school in 1987 no traditional Christmas carols are included in the program, but songs which reinforce the commercial nature of Christmas comprise exclusively the music in the program,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED BY THE UNDERSIGNED: That we feel that the Board of Education should modify the Report by the Task Force on Religion so as to encourage administrators, principals, and teachers to include the traditional Christmas carols in Christmas programs and other activities prior to Christmas held at the Pitt County schools, permitting the singing of Christmas carols and the display of Nativity Scenes and other related activities during the weeks prior to the Christmas holidays.

Wynton Marsalis Is Enjoying Teaching As Much As Playing

By KAREN McGRATH
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Wynton Marsalis, snappy dresser, controversial trumpeter and young near-legend, stood among eight awed Harvard University students and displayed the difficult art of blowing into a trumpet while simultaneously taking in more air through the nose.

After more than 100 continuous seconds of rotary breathing, Marsalis rested while the students looked at each other in disbelief. Then he explained the maneuver.

"It's just a gimmick," he said. "I do that in jazz so I can get applause." The difficult maneuver came at the end of a 14-hour day for Marsalis, who is increasingly scheduling lectures and working with students when he is not performing jazz tunes or recording classical albums.

The latest album for the 26-year-old Grammy winner is "Standard Time."

"I have an enthusiasm for teaching that I can't explain," said Marsalis, in his trademark tapered suit and wire-rimmed glasses, while resting after conducting a recent master class at Harvard as part of the university's Learning From Performers Program.

"I'm happy to do it because I'm always learning more," he said. "I had so many free lessons when I was young. This is kind of payment back." His lessons have included one from trumpeter Alvin Batiste.

Marsalis' father, jazz pianist Ellis Marsalis, who conducted a music workshop at Harvard the day before his son, made sure his children grew up in a musical environment in New Orleans. Of six boys in the Marsalis family, four are musicians.

Wynton Marsalis began studying classical trumpet when he was 12. As a child at home, he listened to his father and developed jazz heroes: Art Tatum, Louis Armstrong, Charlie Parker, Duke Ellington, Max Roach, Charles Mingus, Thelonius Monk and John Coltrane.

At 17, Marsalis spent a summer at the Tanglewood Music Center, a program for young musicians run by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He then spent time at the Juilliard School in New York, where he joined Art Blakey and the Jazz Messengers.

His involvement with the group led to a contract with CBS Records and a deal touring with keyboard player Herbie Hancock. In 1982, CBS issued Marsalis' debut album, "Wynton Marsalis," which Hancock produced. It was dubbed album of the year by several jazz publications. Marsalis eventually became the first musician to win Grammy awards for jazz and classical performances in the same year.

However, Marsalis has said he's ashamed of his time with Blakey. "I put on my old records with Art Blakey and hang my head in shame as I listen to the confidence I had in disrespecting the bandstand of that great man," Marsalis told Down Beat magazine.

"Every time I see Art Blakey now I apologize, then thank him for tolerating such an aberration and continuing to remind me that I was not playing much of anything other than the horn itself — and very little of that, come to think of it."

Marsalis hates the free-form and abstract jazz of the 1960s as much as the rock-influenced fusion music on today's jazz charts. He has said many of today's artists, including the legendary Miles Davis and his brother, Branford Marsalis, who tours with the rock star Sting, have abandoned mainstream jazz for trendier music.

At Harvard, he argued with a student who said today's jazz artists simply are evolving the music.

"In order for the tradition to be maintained, you have to know what it is," a fired-up Marsalis told the disquieted Harvard student. "If you think light bulbs are dead just because Thomas Edison isn't around, you're wrong."

Marsalis believes jazz is an "important expression of the 20th century black experience in America ... the nobility of the race put into sound."

He has indicated he wants to teach young people that jazz can be their own personal form of expression. And during the next month, Marsalis will visit several junior high and high schools in Los Angeles, and perform a benefit concert there for the city's Music Society before traveling to Washington for another benefit concert for the National Black Association scholarship fund.

"I don't know who I am to talk about music, but as long as I'm around it, I'll be happy," Marsalis said.

raised over $2 million since the group was founded and this year's proceeds are targeted for research and detection of cancer. Wayne is the son of the late actor, while Morton performs cancer research and treatment. (AP Laserphoto)

'Foxfire' Might Be Best Of December's TV Movies

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Viewers are about to be besieged by family oriented television movies for the holidays, but the TV movie event of the month has nothing to do with Christmas and is a fine reason to gather the family together around the set.

It's the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" presentation of "Foxfire," starring the esteemed stage actors, husband and wife Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy, and it's on next Sunday on CBS.

Based on the play by the same name by Susan Cooper and Cronyn — they also collaborated on the play and Emmy-winning TV movie "The Dollmaker" starring Jane Fonda — "Foxfire" is the story of a couple who have scratched out a living on a piece of farmland in the beautiful Blue Ridge Mountains, now crawling with vacationers and land developers.

Cronyn plays stubborn, Bible-quoting Hector Nations. He has a right to be crotchety. He's been dead for five years. His wife, Annie (Tandy), has conjured up his image to keep her company now that her children are gone.

Of the five, two died and the other three drifted away. She only maintains regular contact with one of them, Dillard, a moderately successful country-western singer in the throes of divorce and with two young children. He is played with unusual reality by John Denver.

Dillard comes home for a concert and stops off to plead again with his aged mother that she give up the farm and move to Florida with him. He bumps consciousness with Holly, a hometown girl who stayed to teach school instead of taking the usual route to Atlanta that most of the young 'uns have.

After setting up what looks like a predictable tale, the story reaffirms the deepest of values of life and family in an unexpected way.

"Foxfire" comes from the name of a glow-in-the-dark kind of lichen that grows on dead trees in the Appalachian forests, and also the name of a magazine in which young people record the remembrances and folkways of their Appalachian elders. A story in the magazine inspired Cronyn and Cooper to write the play, which had a successful run on Broadway.

The story of Annie and Hector's lives on the mountain is told in flashbacks, but with the actors remaining in their current incarnation, no younger stand-ins or makeup jobs.

The movie was directed by Jud Taylor, who was nominated for an Emmy in 1977 for "Tail Gunner Joe," a TV movie based on the life of Sen. Joseph McCarthy. His direction of "Foxfire" is sometimes reminiscent of Peter Weir's "Witness."

There are some delightful moments in "Foxfire," like when the real estate man, played by Gary Grubbs, comes up the hill to the farm to try to talk Annie into selling out. Oblivious to his shock, she slaps a huge hog-head onto the table, then sweetly asks him to help her gouge the eyes out of it.

Nothing New

NEW YORK (AP) — When the movie "Roxanne" was shown on a recent Los Angeles-to-New York flight, at least one first-class passenger didn't seem to care — Steve Martin, the romantic comedy's star, a magazine says.

"He never lifted his eyes to look at the screen," this week's issue of People quoted a fellow passenger as saying. "He had a complete lack of interest."

Martin, wearing what the unidentified passenger described as "a very goofy black hat," declined earphones and spent most of the flight reading scripts and working on his laptop computer.

Telethon Successful

PARIS (AP) — International stars including Paul Anka and George Harrison helped comedian Jerry Lewis raise more than $35 million in pledges to fight muscular dystrophy in France's first national telethon, organizers said.

"Now I know why I love France and the French people so much," Lewis, a favorite of the French, said as the 28-hour telethon came to a close at midnight Saturday.

Also joining Lewis on the telethon were the Australian rock group the Bee Gees and French stars Mireille Mathieu, Michel Legrand and Annie Girardot.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

- Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ762 ♥QJ7 ♦K85 ♣102
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—If you chose to bid any number of spades, you must brush up on your basic bidding; two spades would show a weaker hand with at least a six-card suit, and three spades, though invitational, would promise a much better suit. All you can do is invite game by raising to two no trump.
- Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q7632 ♥95 ♦AJ3 ♣872
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

- 2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner is showing a balanced hand of 19-21 points. If you bid three spades, partner will expect a better suit and a more distributional hand. Since you, too, are balanced, simply raise to three no trump.
- Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ92 ♥Q84 ♦KJ632 ♣5
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—If you thought we were trying to trap you into bidding one spade, you are wrong. We believe in bidding naturally, and any response other than one diamond will deserve any fate it meets.
- Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ92 ♥Q84 ♦KJ632 ♣5

- The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—In support of spades, your hand is worth 14 points. Since an opening bid facing an opening bid should produce game, jump to four spades. Don't jump to three spades—a jump raise of opener's second suit is only invitational and can be passed.
- Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ7 ♥QJ10 ♦AQ872 ♣73
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—You have a balanced hand of 13-15 points, and the textbook method of describing such a hand is to jump to two no trump. Since you - don't want to explore for an 11-trick contract unless you really have to, there is no point to a one diamond response.

- Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ72 ♥QJ103 ♦AQ7 ♣63
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—You have the values for two no trump, but that would bypass a possible major-suit game. You have a ruffing value, and if partner has a four-card major and a ruffing value as well, the suit game should be superior. Respond one heart, and wait for partner's rebid.

Thousands Rally For Soviet Jewry

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Holocaust cast a long shadow over the Capitol grounds at a rally of more than 200,000 people who had marched there to show solidarity with Soviet Jews denied permission to leave their country.

"This day is a day of pride but also of melancholy," Nobel laureate Elie Wiesel somberly told the crowd stretching down the National Mall toward the Washington Monument.

Had there been such a demonstration of concern in 1942 and 1943 and 1944, said Wiesel, "millions of Jews could have been saved. But too many of us were silent. We are not silent today."

"Freedom Sunday" for Soviet Jews, sponsored by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry on the day before Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev was due to arrive for a summit with President Reagan, attracted hundreds of thousands of American Jews and others concerned about human rights in the Soviet Union.

"Where is glasnost for Soviet Jews?" asked placards held by the demonstrators as they marched under the winter sun from the White House to the Capitol grounds. Free Meshkov, the signs begged. Free Gusak and Shostakovsky and Meiman.

"If I had been given more than three minutes, I would spend the next three hours and three days reading more names and more names and more names. All must be known for all need us," said Wiesel. "Never shall we allow them to be abandoned. Never shall we allow them to be alone."

Many speakers made similar vows as they repeatedly invoked painful, potent memories of the Holocaust — Auschwitz, poison gas, world indifference.

"Never again can we remain silent about the abuse of human rights — never again!" said Vice President George Bush. He exhorted Gorbachev to release not 10 or 20 refuseniks at a time but "all those who want to go. And those that want to stay — let them practice their religion in freedom."

black across a white star of David. A huge Hanukkah menorah was lit candle by candle, flaming against the Capitol dome behind it. Former refuseniks were introduced to speak with mournful, emotional music, some songs sung in Hebrew and others in English.

"We will not be silent," said former refusenik Natan Sharansky, a tiny man nearly engulfed by his blue down jacket. "History will judge if the world had enough will and resolve to do what you are doing today — to stand up, to be counted and make your voices be heard."

Sharansky, a human rights activist, was imprisoned in the Soviet Union for eight years before being released in 1986 to join his wife in Israel.

Asked at a news conference afterward whether he thought the demonstration would have an impact on Gorbachev, Sharansky said, "You cannot impress him simply by shouting or crying or a big crowd." But he added that Gorbachev is a realist and is concerned about public opinion, so the rally was very successful in that sense.

In a letter read at the rally, President Reagan said he would press this week in his talks with Gorbachev for "the release of all refuseniks, for full freedom of emigration, and for complete freedom of religion and cultural expression. We shall not be satisfied with less."

The official Soviet news agency, Tass, took a dim view of the demonstration, calling it a "provocative action."

"In a bid to poison the atmosphere of the upcoming negotiations, U.S. Zionist organizations held in Washington an anti-Soviet demonstration, having brought to the city from all parts of the country those whom they managed to argue into participation in a provocative gathering," Tass reported.

The rally drew a broad spectrum of Americans — white-haired senior citizens, teen-agers with Jewish youth groups, perfectly coiffed women in fur coats, young parents wheeling strollers.

"It's important for her to know these are the kinds of things you can do in America," Betty Shallett of Tampa, Fla., said of her 11-year-old daughter. "As an American citizen, she ought to know what kind of citizenship duties she has."

They and the other demonstrators had gathered for the march near the White House, where their Israeli flags and Hebrew messages flew in the wind next to a huge Christmas tree sparkling with tinsel and ornaments. A string band played Jewish folk music and some marchers broke into an enthusiastic rendition of the Horah, a folk dance.

The estimate of 200,000 people at the march was arrived at by the U.S. Park Police and District of Columbia police, said spokeswoman Shannon Cockett of the D.C. police.

The march and rally were studied with scores of senators and congressmen, several mayors, at least one governor and a scattering of presidential candidates — Republicans Bush, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, former Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, and Democratic Sen. Albert Gore Jr.

One of the officials, New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, eloquently summed up the mood of hope and resolve.

"Holocaust history will not repeat itself," he said. "This time it is different. This time we speak with strength and we speak with numbers. This time there is no guilt of silence. This time there is a resounding roar."

Raisa Gorbachev To Get Rare Glimpse Of Western Christmas

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer
BRIZE NORTON, England (AP) — Raisa Gorbachev gets a taste of a traditional Western Christmas at a country school today, a rare experience for anyone from the Soviet Union where religion is discouraged and atheism promoted.

She arrived today at the Brize Norton air force base with her husband, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, aboard an Ilyushin 62 aircraft. She was to travel from the base, 65 miles northwest of London, to the nearby school.

The 55-year-old Mrs. Gorbachev asked to see how children are taught in English schools during her husband's brief stop at the base for talks with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher en route to the Washington summit.

The Edith Moorhouse Primary School in Carterton, a five-minute drive from the base, was chosen because it uses modern teaching methods. The county also is highly regarded in educational circles.

In an apparent coincidence, Carterton's history also is linked to a 19th century revolutionary movement that inspired two fathers of Soviet socialism, Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, who were living in Britain then.

Education Secretary Kenneth Baker was to escort Mrs. Gorbachev to the school, which is now preoccupied with Christmas rather than classwork.

"We tried to give her a very small taste, because she's only with us for half an hour, of what's happening in English primary schools generally, but particularly at this Christmas time," said Headmaster Brian McCutcheon.

"We thought, particularly as our Nativity play is being performed by the very young children, 5- to 7-year-olds, that might be something she'd enjoy. It's a real traditional one, with shepherds, kings and angels," he said.

The spirit of an English Christmas won't end with the story of the birth of Jesus Christ. Some of the school's 200 children prepared a special Christmas card for Mrs. Gorbachev, school cook Ann Jones baked hot mince pies and a tinsel-trimmed Christmas tree was on display in the main entrance.

The Soviet constitution purports to ensure freedom of religious expression and separation of church and state, but church members must register and religious propagation is outlawed. The Communist Party, which dominates all spheres of society, is officially atheist.

When the Communists came to power, they transformed all Christmas rituals into a non-religious New Year's holiday.

Soviets buy New Year's trees and exchange New Year's presents and a bearded old man called Grandfather Frost visits children.

McCutcheon said there would be time in between the Christmas festivities to show Mrs. Gorbachev the more serious side of the school's education program.

Mrs. Gorbachev, who holds a doctorate in sociology and has lectured at Moscow State University, was to tour a few classrooms and watch youngsters up to the age of 11 work on computers, make lace and learn to read.

"We want her to see the school as it would normally be on a Monday," McCutcheon said. "We weren't prepared to do something very special, although obviously we wanted her to enjoy it."

The Edith Moorhouse Primary School is implementing a program developed by Baker that gives parents more say in running the schools, and has them take part in sessions with teachers so that students' learning can continue at home.

Carterton's history is linked to a revolutionary movement called Chartism which flourished from 1838-50 and inspired Marx and Engels.

Historian Martin Gilbert said Carterton was one of the original settlements of the Chartists who favored universal male suffrage, equal electoral districts and abolition of the property qualification to be a member of Parliament.

The Chartists failed in their drive to enfranchise the masses. Gilbert told The Associated Press, but many of the small houses they built for their supporters in Carterton remain standing.

"The Chartists were the first group of ordinary working people who demanded the right to have their own land," he said. "They are regarded by the Marxists as their precursors."

Apparent Suicide

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Former Finance Secretary Jaime Ongpin, among the most controversial and influential Cabinet members until his September removal, was found fatally shot today in what his son said appeared to be suicide.

Security guard Angelito Villacorta said he and a janitor found the body of the 49-year-old Harvard graduate slumped in the chair of his second-floor office after hearing a single gunshot about 3 p.m.

Police said Ongpin had a single bullet wound in his right temple and was slumped over clutching a .38-caliber pistol in his hand.

"My father's death is an apparent suicide," said Ongpin's eldest son, Rafael. "He had been unhappy for some time following his end of tenure from the government when he resigned."

Ongpin was relieved as finance secretary Sept. 16 in a Cabinet shakeup following the bloody Aug. 28 coup attempt, which elicited widespread criticism over rancor, policy differences and lack of coordination within President Corason Aquino's administration.
