Reagan Welcomes Gorbachev

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan gave Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev a red carpet summit welcome to the White House today and said "the world is watching" as they sign one nuclear arms treaty and bargain over a second, more ambitious pact.

Gorbachev, received with full military honors, said the two men must strive to "undo the logic of the arms race" during three planned days of summit talks.

After the nationally televised welcoming ceremony on the White House South Lawn, the two men moved into the Oval Office for the first of five private negotiating sessions. Reagan and Gorbachev sat in easy chairs in front of a blazing fireplace while photographers recorded the scene.

The centerpiece of the summit was their signing in early afternoon of a treaty — seven years in the making — to ban intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

Reagan and Gorbachev both used the colorful ceremony outside the White House to hail the medium-range missile treaty and look forward to possible agreement on reducing long-range strategic weapons by 50 percent.

"The world is watching and we've got something to show them," Reagan said as U.S. and Soviet flags fluttered in the cold air.

"And over the next few days it is my hope that progress will be made toward achieving another agreement that will lead to a cutting in half of our strategic nuclear arsenals," the president said.

The general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party struck a similar note.

"This will of course be the first step down the road leading toward a nuclear-free world," Gorbachev said of the INF or Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty. "Yet it is a great step into the future."

Both men cited friendships between their nations but also referred to longstanding Cold War antagonisms, and agreed that issues other than arms control would be on their agenda.

Reagan mentioned human rights. Gorbachev was less specific but mentioned regional conflicts which he did not describe.

Both leaders, however, sounded hopeful before they entered the White House to begin their formal talks.

"It's up to us with hard work, commitment and a heavy dose of realism to change the poor peace that has existed between our countries and make it into a good one," Reagan said.

Said Gorbachev: "On behalf of the Soviet people, I declare that we are prepared to go all the way along our part of the road."

"I've often felt that our people should have been better friends long ago," Reagan said.

Several hundred people thronged the White House lawn as witnesses to the first visit of a Soviet leader to

Pilot Reported Gunfire

Airline Crash Kills 43

By JOE BIGHAM

Associated Press Writer

CAYUCOS, Calif. (AP) — The pilot of a jet radioed that there was gunfire aboard and smoke in the cockpit shortly before the PSA flight crashed onto a cattle ranch and exploded, killing all 43 passengers and crew, officials and witnesses said.

Pieces of the plane scattered across 20 acres of brush and oak grove on a hillside not far from the Pacific, the owner of the ranch said. Among the victims was the president of Chevron USA.

Teams from the National Transportation Safety Board and the FBI examined the wreckage today.

"There's nothing that you would consider identifiable as a human being," said Sgt. Greg Slane of the San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Department.

"We knew there would be no survivors as soon as we got there ...," said Grant Leger, 29, of Santa Barbara, a witness to the crash. "It was like a bomb blew up. I just kept saying, 'Oh, my God.'"

The biggest part of the four-engine BAe-146 found Monday night was about 2 feet long.

Crews found the "black box" flight data and it was being flown to Washington, said Slane, who didn't know its condition.

Pacific Southwest Airlines Flight 1771 was en route from Los Angeles International to San Francisco when it went down at 4:14 p.m. Monday near here, 175 miles northwest of Los Angeles, the Federal Aviation Administration said. Skies were overcast, said Fred Farrar, an FAA spokesman in Washington.

There were 39 passengers and four crew members aboard. The airline initially reported 44 dead, but then said it counted one flight attendant trainee twice.

Gene Katz, who was flying a small plane from Santa Rosa to Los Angeles, reported overhearing the PSA pilot talking to air traffic controllers.

"The PSA pilot ... said he had an emergency, there was gunfire, and he was squawking in 'Seven-seven-zero-zero,' which is a special code," Katz said.

"At that time, the controller said: 'Say again,' and the captain confirmed, he said, 'I have an emergency, gunfire,' and that was the last communication."

"We heard the PSA pilot say gunfire aboard. ... The Oakland terminal tried to call him back, and we didn't hear a response," said attorney Stephen A. Kronick of Sacramento, a passenger in a chartered plane enroute to Paso Robles.

Col. Richard Hill, a spokesman at Vandenberg Air Force Base, said two air traffic controllers at the base heard a PSA crew member say, "We're going down."

The airliner, which can seat 85, was spotted burning on its left side over Templeton, about 20 miles from the main crash site, shortly after radio and radar contact was lost at an altitude of 22,000 feet, said Farrar. The pilot also reported smoke in the cockpit, he said.

An NTSB team from Los Angeles was at the site. Another team from Washington, headed by NTSB Vice Chairman Patricia Goldman, joined the investigation, and the FBI agent in charge in Los Angeles, Richard Bretzing, said 20 FBI agents were working the case and more might be called in because of the reports of gunfire.

Educators Adopt Religion Policy

By CHERIE EVANS

Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education adopted a religion policy with minor editorial changes despite pleas from several local citizens to significantly modify the policy during its regular monthly meeting Monday night.

The board also Monday night elected George Williams as chairman and Donovan Phillips as vice chairman of the board. Williams succeeds Mark Owens as chairman.

Concerning the religion policy, board member Mary Perkins Williams abstained from voting on the policy that brought a congregation of local citizens into the commissioners' auditorium and into the hall of the county office building to express their concern and interest in the religion policy developed by a 14-member task force for the Pitt County schools.

Nine people addressed the board to commend and to offer modifications to the policy as others in the audience periodically signaled their approval of comments by clapping and remarking "Amen," while disapproval often was vented by extraneous individual comments to the board or to speakers addressing the board.

During one such outburst, Rabbi Michael Weisser, who was addressing the board, said, "This hostility I feel tonight is all in the name of love."

A specific policy receiving a lot of public attention, and was a concern of Ms. Williams, was one which allows the superintendent's office to review programs and lesson plans during the initial year of the policy. In following years, the programs and plans would be reviewed by the school principal. This policy was a recommendation made by the board during a recent workshop session and was not part of the initial policy.

Lynn R. Buzzard, professor of Constitutional law and director of the church-state resource center at Campbell University School of Law, addressed those concerns at the board meeting. Buzzard also was a member of the task force, serving as a legal consultant.

The goal of the task force was to draft a "general policy and not the procedural components," he said. And, he suggested the word "superintendent" be substituted with the phrase "an appropriate administrator."

Another concern was the omission

The swearing-in ceremony for new members of Greenville's City Council and Mayor-elect Ed Carter will be held at McGinnis Theatre rather than City Hall this year to allow for increased attendance, according to Mayor-elect Ed Carter.

The installation ceremony is scheduled for Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at McGinnis Theatre on the East Carolina University campus.

The installation ceremony is an official event conducted to swear into office newly elected members of City Council along with the new mayor.

Board Endorses 911 Plans

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

Tentative plans to implement a 911 emergency telephone system in Pitt County were approved by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday, as were funds to establish a pilot mental health clinic program in Bethel and a resolution reestablishing the county planning board.

The board has, for several years, been working toward a 911 system which would allow residents throughout the county to have access to police, fire and rescue service by dialing the three-digit number 9-1-1.

Bobby Joyner, emergency services coordinator told commissioners Monday that the 911 study committee, at a Nov. 18 meeting, approved a time schedule which would begin 911 service Oct. 1, 1988 to coincide with the issuance of new telephone books.

Joyner said he had recommended a phased implementation schedule — designed to save money — which would have the system completed county-wide by October 1992. But he said the committee recommended that the entire county move to 911

Jane Gephardt Stumps For Husband's Campaign

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

"We're Duck Democrats and North Carolina taxpayers," Jane Gephardt, wife of Democratic presidential hopeful Dick Gephardt told a gathering in Greenville Monday night.

And campaign posters along the walls of the American Legion building showed the Gephardt family walking along the beach near the families home north of Kitty Hawk in Dare County.

"We started coming to the outer banks 10 years ago," the wife of the Missouri Congressman said, and "three years ago bought a place in Duck. It's our retreat. We love it."

But Mrs. Gephardt, former governor Jim Hunt and West Virginia Rep. Bob Wise didn't come to Greenville to expound on the beauties of coastal North Carolina. They were rallying support for Gephardt's bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"This may be the most important election of our lifetime," Mrs. Gephardt said, suggesting that voters should vote "not only for a warm smile," and good television ads, but "for policies that effect your lives."

"Dick cares," Mrs. Gephardt said, and "like Harry Truman (will) tell the American people what they need to know, not just what they want to hear."

"We need a leader who has demonstrated leadership and will work with

Annexation Keys Council Agenda

The annexation of 583 acres of Brook Valley subdivision, including Holly Hills, The Azalea Mobile Home Park and the Highland Mobile Home Park, is one of the major issues on the agenda for Wednesday's City Council regular session meeting to be held in Council Chambers.

The 7:30 p.m. meeting will be the last regular session meeting for this council. The new council will take the oath of office Thursday evening at the installation ceremony at McGinnis Theatre.

Should annexation be approved, the 583 acres would, as of Dec. 31, 1988, become part of the city, subject to all its debts, laws, ordinances and regulations.

The area would also be entitled to the city's privileges and benefits, including sewer, police, and fire-rescue services.

Many residents of the area oppose the annexation, and voiced their opinion at a public hearing before City Council on Nov. 23.

Also on the agenda, council will decide whether to allow flower shops as permitted uses in the Medical District 2 zoning district.

The issue, on a request by Clyde Simmons, has been before the council on three separate occasions.

According to Greenville City Code, the purpose of the MD-2 district is to create areas in which hospitals, rehabilitation centers, medical offices and clinics may be compatibly mixed for doctor and patient convenience.

Under the current code, flower shops are allowed as special uses in the MD-2 district.

The Planning and Zoning Commission has unanimously made a recommendation against permitting florists in the MD-2 zone as a permitted use.

Council will also consider amending the zoning ordinance regarding bufferyard requirements.

Bufferyards are a combination of land and physical barriers which separate various land uses to reduce

Students, Parents Have To Adjust

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Joe College is back home for the holidays with a duffle bag of dirty laundry and an insatiable appetite for sleep, loud music and late-night partying with his old high school buddies.

Meanwhile, Mom and Dad have turned down several invitations to cocktail parties so they could spend more time with their son. Strings have been pulled to get ballet tickets and Aunt Gertrude is flying in for Christmas Day.

What they're heading for is a collision course that could determine how the two generations will get along for years to come, says Davidson College psychology professor Cole Barton.

"The holidays are a real period of stress," he said. "The student has just finished exams, probably hasn't been eating very well and is at the end of a tough trip home. He feels deprived."

That's why the student is looking forward to unwinding with generous portions of sleep, loud music and late-night reveling — followed by more sleep, loud music and another party.

But his parents might be looking at the holidays in a different way.

"They want to hear that junior made the honor roll," Barton said. "They also want to hear him say that living away at college isn't as great as being home."

But it often goes deeper than that.

"They also want to know that they still have a relationship with their children," he said. "They're concerned that there may not be room for them in their lives."

Without a compromise, resentment can build and harsh words exchanged, he said. Both parent and child come out losing and feeling guilty.

When college students return home for the holidays, their transition from child to adult requires basic changes in family attitudes, says Barton. Parents need to realize that their offspring are no longer children. Students must remember they have to abide by the rules of the house.

"A lot of decisions are made by what I call management by crisis," Barton said. "Many families wait until things are real tense before they bring up controversial issues. That is not the time to solve problems."

For example, he said, the subject of grades might come up when the student is 20 minutes late for Christmas dinner.

Barton teaches a seminar in family therapy at Davidson, a liberal arts college near Charlotte. His comments are based on the results of research conducted by his students during the fall semester.

"The hypothesis was that parents and students need to work out their differences," he said. "If you look at most conflicts ... they do go down (in number) by the time the student is finishing college."

One of the simplest ways to resolve these conflicts is for each party to put himself or herself in the other person's shoes, he said.

"The student wants to be treated like an adult, so he or she shouldn't expect to have mom do the laundry, make the bed and fix the meals," he said. "On the other hand, the parents shouldn't look at the holidays as the perfect time to put up the storm windows."

Minority Employment

Pitt County commissioners met with Sheriff Ralph Tyson and Bennie Roundtree, a spokesman for the Pitt County Chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, to discuss opportunities for minority employment in the sheriff's department in executive session Monday.

Roundtree and others have been critical of the number of black deputies. And the board of commissioners, on several occasions, has encouraged Tyson — a constitutional officer who under state law has the sole power to hire and fire department employees — to hire more blacks.

Following the executive session, County Attorney W.H. Watson announced to those on hand for the meeting that "a good relationship has resulted."

Tyson said, "We're working, trying to employ minorities," and promised, "we'll employ at least four by the end of January."

"We know that we're low," Tyson said, "we're working to get it in line."

Roundtree commented that "I'm very pleased with the county commissioners and Ralph Tyson. I think we will all be happy."

Authority Picks Firm To Do Housing Work

Greenville Housing Authority announced the selection of an architectural firm to complete the modernization efforts of one of the authority's housing projects Monday at the authority's monthly meeting.

Kenneth Noland, executive director of the Greenville Housing Authority, said the firm of Bradfield and Associates has been selected to complete the planned modernization of the Moyewood development starting next year.

Noland said the firm was selected based upon its capabilities and prior modernization efforts. He said the modernization effort was expected to cost approximately $1.5 million.

In other business, a roofing project at the Newtown development was reported completed $9,500 under budget. The cost of the roofing was $52,900.

The authority also approved the installation of an advanced telephone system which would cost $154 more monthly than the current system.

Noland said the installation of the rented equipment would provide the authority with a considerably more modern service.

Also Monday, Sallye Streeter, director of GHA resident affairs reported monthly rents at authority projects as follows: Meadowbrook, $130.38; Kearney Park, $135.54; Moyewood I, $132.78; Moyewood II, $137.73; Hopkins Park, $128.40; Newtown, $111.86; and West Meadowbrook, $119.86. The average rent in November for the authority's seven housing complexes was $129.59.

Emergency Telephone System Plans Gain Tentative Approval

coverage at the same time if possible.

"If the system is put in immediately," Joyner said, "there would be charges (by Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co.) to implement it. We looked at staggering it (implementation) so there would be no charges."

Joyner explained that the charges would result from modifications to telephone company central office equipment in Ayden, Bethel, Farmville, Fountain and Grifton, that if done immediately would total about $70,500.

But he said if staggered to coincide with telephone company plans to upgrade the central office equipment, the 911 system could be in service on a county-wide basis by October 1992 at no charge to the county.

The telephone company time schedule to replace the equipment and the cost to the county for modifications before those replacement dates include: Ayden, July 1988, $6,080; Farmville, July 1989, $31,950; Grifton, July 1989, $7,130; Bethel, September 1990, $4,400 and Fountain, September 1992, $20,900.

"We could be ready by July 1," Joyner told the board. "But I don't know how long it would take the telephone company to make the changes," if the county decided to pay for the modifications.

"It's time we in Pitt County move on with it," Commissioner Eugene James said.

The board then adopted a resolution asking Carolina Telephone to move up its target dates to replace the central office equipment and agreed to talk with CT&T in an effort to negotiate the cost if necessary.

Commissioners also agreed to work with Carolina Telephone in an effort to make "enhanced 911" available in Pitt County.

Joyner, who said CT&T does not have the computer capability at the present time to offer the expanded program, said enhanced 911 would allow emergency dispatchers to know the location any 911 call is made from even if the calling party is unable to talk to the dispatcher.

As recommended by the study committee, the 911 service would be handled by a central communications center established as a new county department.

The board appropriated $25,330 to fund operations of a mental health clinic — similar to ones in Farmville and Ayden — for a six-month trial period beginning in January.

Steve Creech, director of the county's mental health program, said he estimated that the center would have 400 clients.

Creech said the expenses would include $17,500 for salaries for two full-time employees, $150 per month rent, $250 a month for utilities and $1,900 for equipment.

The planning board was re-established by the adoption of a resolution which received planning board approval last month.

County Planner Jeff Ulma told commissioners that the resolution "is a revised version" of the resolution which formed the county planning body in 1971 and "more accurately reflects current conditions and practices."

Alonzo Mills, a spokesman for the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice, and Judy Kornegay, another speaker, asked the board to reconsider its stand on the new "six-three" method of electing members of the board that was enacted into law by the General Assembly earlier this year, and which is now being considered for pre-clearance by the U.S. Justice Department as required by the Voting Rights Act.

"We ask you to support a six district plan with no at-large" members, Mills said. "We're trying to avoid a bad image for Pitt County."

"It is useless and senseless for us and you to enter a long and protracted lawsuit that can be costly and could possibly translate into a negative image," Mills suggested. "We hope that you will join us in support of a six district method so that we may send a message to all citizens ... that all is well down east in Pitt County."

Ms. Kornegay, an attorney, also asked the board to "reconsider something you've already decided." The six-three plan, she said, "does not offer any attempt at compromise," and "will lead to tokenism instead of effective, representative government," she suggested.

Crash Kills 43

"We'll be looking for any criminal evidence that may point to the crash and the cause of the crash," Bretzing said this morning.

PSA mechanic Mike Doering said the sound of gunfire might actually have been the breaking up of an engine turbine fan blade. In February, a BAe-146 en route from Los Angeles to Reno, Nev., was diverted to Fresno after a blade inside one of its four engines broke, piercing the engine cowling, Hastings said.

All airline passengers and carry-on bags are screened for weapons, and the boarding of the PSA jet's passengers had been routine, said PSA spokesman Bill Hastings in San Diego. The X-ray and metal-detection equipment at the boarding area were checked by the FAA Monday and were operating properly, said PSA spokesman Bruce Nelson in Los Angeles.

Gaskins New Board Chief

Charles Gaskins was elected chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday during the board's annual reorganization session.

Gaskins, a commissioner since 1967, replaces Charles McLawhorn who served as chairman since Dec. 1, 1986.

Eugene James, a commissioner since December 1984, was elected vice chairman. Under the board's long-standing practice of rotating the chairmanship each year, James is in line to become chairman in December 1989.

The board, which in the past has met on the first and third Mondays of each month at 10 a.m., also voted to change the time of its regular meetings to 9 a.m., beginning with the Dec. 21 meeting.

In conjunction with the reorganization, the board appointed: Paul Komanecky, manager of the Sheraton Hotel as a member of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority; Joe Kue of Farmville and Dr. Thomas G. Irons and Roy Selby, both of Greenville, as members of the Board of Health; Raymond Reddick and Denison Garrett to the Mental Health Board; Tony Smart of Winterville (a reappointment) and Charles E. Mayo Jr. of Falkland to the Mid-East Emergency Medical Services Council; and Anne McGaughey of Farmville and Barbara Fenner of Greenville to the Bond Finance Authority.

Commissioners also reappointed Millie Lilley, Dorenda Bryant and Carrie Lin Gurganus to the Women's Commission and named Louis Pritchard, Eunice Messler, Dr. Janice

Busher, Beatrice C. 'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Falls Short

Chancellor Richard Eakin's decision to preserve East Carolina University's band practice area as a green space is correct but his parking lot construction plan stops short of what is needed to effectively ease the University's parking dilemma.

The band practice area on College Hill drive is one of the few green spaces remaining on the ECU campus. It is used by students for leisure activities and informal gatherings. It was not appropriate to sacrifice this valuable area, especially when paving it would yield only 318 more parking spaces — a number that wouldn't come close to impacting the thousands needed. Preserving the recreation area is the right approach.

But Eakin still has not proposed any long-term solution to the University's traffic jams. ECU issues 22,010 campus parking permits a year but provides only 5,547 parking spaces. The result of this inequity is a community and campus problem. Students' cars pack streets in residential areas around campus. Vehicles parked illegally block driveways and are nuisances and hazards. In addition, overflow cars crowd the lots of businesses near campus. The situation has understandably created conflict between the University and community.

Immediate measures are needed to ease this friction. Eakin's proposal to add 978 parking spaces will relax the discord to some degree. But it does not approach the source of the problem — the university has a growing number of registered vehicles and no place to house them.

Eakin should raise the issue of a parking deck. Although a structure of that type is expensive to build, it is the only effective, long-term way of addressing ECU's parking problems. The parking fee will be doubled to pay for the proposed lots. Once those projects are complete, the proceeds from that increase could be used to partially fund a deck.

The University has the space for a parking deck and the flexibility to select from several approaches. There is room for a deck near Mendenhall Student Center, an area convenient to main campus. There is also enough space near fringe areas, such as the Belk Building on Charles Boulevard, to house a deck and operate a campus shuttle system. That course might be the most feasible in the long run.

The parking pressures between ECU and the city will only intensify. As the University continues to grow, neighborhoods surrounding it will become more saturated and more exasperated with student parking. ECU bears the primary responsibility to deal with this problem, and only a long-term aim will have sufficient impact. It is time for planning this approach.

Modern Miracle

Twenty years ago one of the modern miracles of medicine took place in South Africa. Dr. Christiaan N. Barnard performed a human heart transplant in Cape Town on Dec. 2, 1967.

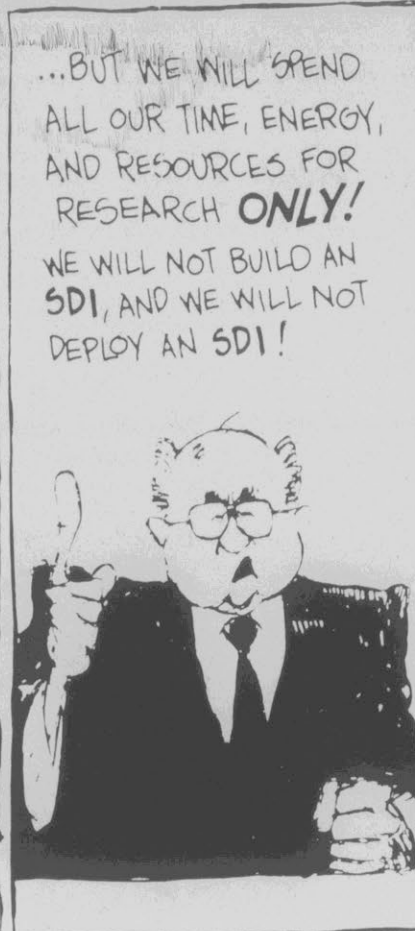

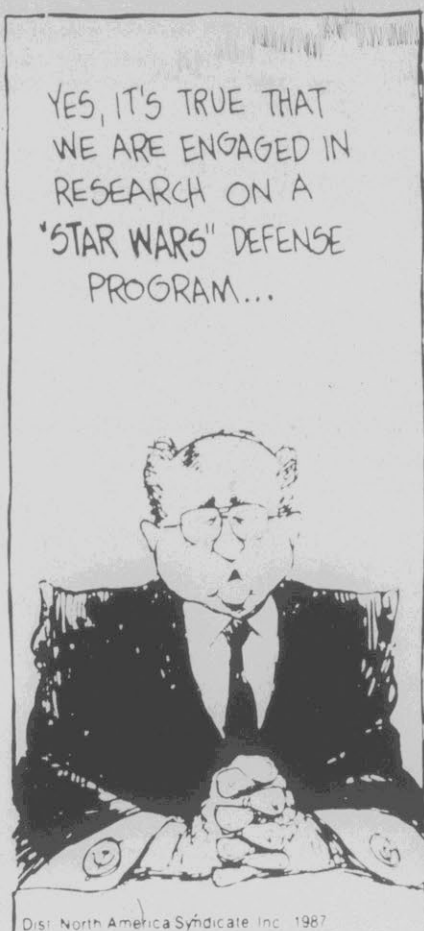

The patient lived only 18 days, but the procedure opened the way to 4,992 heart transplants around the world in the intervening years. Today heart transplants are far from routine but there are 94 centers in the United States which now do the medical procedure. And it is expected that almost as many transplants will be done this year as were done in all the previous history of heart transplants.

When the first transplant was done no one dreamed that heart transplants would be done in Pitt County. Since 1967, however, the East Carolina University School of Medicine and Pitt County Memorial Hospital have developed a cardiac program. Dr. Randolph Chitwood, chief surgeon of the School of Medicine cardiac surgery program, performed the medical complex's first heart transplant Feb. 17, 1987. Dr. Chitwood is leaving to assume the post of chief of cardiothoracic surgery at Kentucky, but two cardiovascular surgeons remain to continue the program, and a successor to Dr. Chitwood will be named.

Developing heart transplants to a practical point proved to be difficult. Early transplants were rejected. The anti-rejection drug cyclosporine was approved for use in 1983 overcame rejection and heart transplants became more viable. Now the primary difficulty seems to be locating enough donors to take care of needs.

As heart transplants developed so did the transplanting of other organs, and many people have been saved from sure death by the transplant of hearts, kidneys and other organs.

Heart transplants are only two decades old but their value to human health is now clear. The transplants began in South Africa and today they extend to PCMH and many other medical centers of the United States. They are one of the exciting medical developments of the 20th century.

Gorbachev's American Connections

WASHINGTON — Alexander Yakovlev whiled away part of his youth on Manhattan's Upper West Side, fashioning the life of an exchange student in New York City.

Anatoliy Dobrynin came to fancy McDonald's as a longtime Washington resident, occasionally biking off on weekends with his granddaughter for a hamburger and a Coke.

Today Yakovlev and Dobrynin are Moscow's highest-ranking specialists on the United States, occupying key positions on the ruling Soviet Politburo and the Secretariat of the Communist Party Central Committee respectively.

When Mikhail Gorbachev landed in Washington Monday, both followed him down the ramp of his special Aeroflot jet, along with the handful of other Soviet Amerikanistii — experts on America — included in the Kremlin leader's delegation.

While this week's summit will give Gorbachev his first look at America, it marks a key phase in the careers of the plenipotentiary of accompanying America experts, climaxing their steady rise in power in the new Soviet leadership.

Their influence, clearly invaluable at a time of close U.S.-Soviet contacts, has already shown through in some of Gorbachev's diplomatic overtures and innovations, such as his policy of flexibility in negotiations with Americans.

Soviet watchers trace Gorbachev's frequent use of television — and his choice of television for a presummit interview — to Yakovlev, for instance. Yakovlev, who undoubtedly watched American television both as an exchange student at Columbia University in the late 1950s and during 10 years as Soviet ambassador to Canada, is now the Politburo member in charge of propaganda.

U.S. and Soviet arms control specialists credit Dobrynin, head of the International Department of the Central Committee, with shifts in the Soviet negotiating position that helped pave the way for the treaty to eliminate medium- and shorter-range missiles that is to be signed Tuesday by President Reagan and Gorbachev.

Dobrynin, 68, was ambassador to the United States for 24 years until last winter, when he was recalled to become one of the key figures shaping Soviet foreign policy with Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Gorbachev does "tend to draw from American specialists right up at the top of the decision-making ladder," U.S. Ambassador to Moscow Jack F. Matlock Jr. said in a recent interview. "We have not treated our Soviet specialists the same way."

Besides Yakovlev and Dobrynin, the experts on the United States who stepped off Gorbachev's plane Monday include Georgi Arbatov, 68, who has headed the official U.S.A. and Canada Institute for two decades and has been a frequent guest on American television.

Shevardnadze, also accompanying Gorbachev as part of the official delegation, was a novice to American politics when he became foreign minister two years ago. But Shevardnadze, 59, has forged close ties to Secretary of State George P. Shultz. Sergei Akhromeyev, the 64-year-old Soviet army chief of staff and senior military specialist in Gorbachev's delegation, displayed a keen ability to negotiate with Americans during the October 1986 summit in Reykjavik, Iceland, and the crucial presummit negotiations in Geneva.

Rejection Of Pact Would Hurt GOP

Listening to the nasty things that the Republican right is saying about Ronald Reagan these days, you would never dream that the president was the most conservative Chief Executive in more than half a century.

Howard Phillips, director of the American Conservative Union, referred to Reagan last week as a "useful idiot for Soviet propaganda."

Conservative fund-raiser Richard Viguerie, who has joined with Phillips to announce the formation of the "Anti-Appasement Alliance," called the president an "apologist" for Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

That's pretty strong stuff. What set the right wing off was Gorbachev's summit visit, finalization of plans for the two leaders to sign a treaty Tuesday that will eliminate missiles with ranges of 300 to 3,000 miles, and Reagan's exasperated rebuke of the treaty's ultra-conservative critics in a television interview last week.

Surely, you say, nobody need take seriously these wanderings into fantasyland.

Here we have a conservative Republican president whose own distrust of the Soviets is deep and indelible, and who has made clear his own conviction that Washington must deal with Moscow from a position of strength.

The treaty being signed Tuesday is basically what Reagan proposed way back in 1981, and it is the Soviets who eventually made the big concessions necessary for agreement.

During six years of off-and-on negotiations, Reagan hung tough — very tough. And, to the surprise of most liberals in the so-called arms-control community, the Soviets eventually caved in.

The Soviets, negotiating from an intimidating position of numerical superiority, agreed to scrap their medium-range missiles if we would scrap ours. They are obliged to give up four nuclear warheads to each one eliminated by the American side. And, for the first time, the Soviets have agreed to seemingly stringent rules for intrusive on-site inspections.

U.S. inspectors will be given access to a Soviet plant that produces SS-20 missiles, which are banned by the treaty, as well as similar longer-range SS-25 missiles, which are not covered by the treaty. The Soviets in turn can station inspectors at plants involved in the production of U.S. cruise missiles.

The agreement calls for detailed exchanges of data, and both sides will have the right to conduct short-notice inspections at missile bases, storage and testing facilities.

The administration concedes that the treaty is not foolproof against cheating — no agreement is. But officials insist that the sort of violations that might go undetected would not pose a major military threat, considering the large number of bombers and strategic missiles that will remain on each side.

There is rising optimism, meanwhile, that the summit meeting will also lead to accelerated negotiations on a much more important treaty — an agreement cutting in half the number of warheads aboard strategic missiles and bombers on each side — and that this can be done without requiring the burial of Reagan's hopes for deployment in the 1990s of a strategic defense, or "Star Wars" system.

The payoff from Reagan's negotiating strategy is a living advertisement for the conservatives' loudly trumpeted peace-through-strength approach to national security. (It is also a tribute, most experts believe, to the economic strains besetting the Soviet system.)

You would expect Republican politicians, facing the 1988 elections, to point with pride to their president's arms-control accomplishments and to defend him against attacks from party extremists. Instead, mainstream Republican leaders go to great pains to distance themselves from the missile treaty being signed at the summit meeting.

Before voting on ratification of the medium-range-missile treaty, members of the Senate have a responsibility to look at the fine print of the verification provisions, and to press for follow-up negotiations aimed at persuading the Soviets to accept the same sort of lopsided reductions in their conventional forces in Europe that they have embraced in the missile treaty.

But civilized, responsible debate is one thing, and vilification of the Phillips-Viguerie brand — basically unchallenged by Republican leaders — is another.

It is a strange fact that, of the six Republican presidential candidates, only Vice President George Bush flatly favors the treaty. For doing so, he has had to endure potshots from the other five candidates, including Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, whose own postures range from studied reserve to hostility.

Strength For Today

The poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow has written:

"Every guilty deed
Holds within itself the seed
Of retribution and undying pain."

Judas had a sore conscience and he hanged himself — the worst possible way to handle a bad situation. St. Paul, similarly afflicted, found a more beneficial solution. He asked, "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" A guilty conscience is one of the things in the lives of all of us which needs to be faced. Never should we allow it to conquer us. The way to overcome it is by acknowledgement of guilt and repentance. Then we should cast ourselves upon the mercy of God and make whatever restitution for past wrongs which we can. A guilty conscience is serious, but not hopeless.

Public Forum

To the editor:

After reading the editorial, "Knowledge Needed," in the Nov. 25, 1987, "Daily Reflector," we are distressed at the inaccuracies reported. AIDS is not a "highly contagious disease," as reported in this editorial. In fact, it is hard to catch. AIDS is transmitted three ways: 1. By sexual contact with an infected person 2. by injecting blood and blood products (i.e. using needles and syringes contaminated with infected blood); 3. From an infected mother to her unborn child.

According to the editorial, "The only information the Pitt County Health Department has (on AIDS) is a question and answer brochure." This statement is inaccurate, as the Pitt County Health Department is very involved in many aspects of AIDS education and prevention. If "The Daily Reflector" staff had inquired about the Health Department's involvement with AIDS education and prevention, they would have learned the following:

- Individual anonymous counseling appointments are available.
- HIV testing (test for the Human Immunodeficiency Virus) is available anonymously by appointment.
- Several current pamphlets are available upon request.
- Several members of the Health Department staff are active members of organizations such as ERASE and committees in the community who address AIDS prevention and education.
- Group presentations on AIDS are available upon request.
- The health director has been on a local television program talking about AIDS.

The Pitt County Health Department, ECU School of Medicine, Pitt Memorial Hospital and Eastern Regional AIDS Support and Education group (ERASE) to name a few, are actively providing various AIDS services in the community.

Indeed, "AIDS does not call for hysteria," as stated in the editorial; however, hysteria is often spread by inaccurate sensational reporting.

AIDS prevention is everyone's responsibility. Anyone with questions may call the Pitt County Health Department, 752-4141, or the AIDS Information Line, 1-800-342-AIDS.

State Panel Gives Tentative OK To Rules For Picking Waste Site

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A state panel seeking a disposal site for low-level radioactive waste says federal parks would be excluded from consideration, but that national forests are not federal parks.
The North Carolina Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority Monday tentatively approved guidelines for designating a site, stipulating that the facility should be on state or federal land if possible.

"We're not looking for a forest," said Raymond L. Murray, the head of the authority's technical committee. "But we don't want to rule out something that may turn out to be ideal."
The federal government owns more than one million acres of forest in North Carolina, said David Felmet, a member of the authority. Two of the federal forests are in western North Carolina, one is in the central part of the state and one is in the eastern part.

One advantage to using a national forest, Murray said, is that it would put a lot of space between the public and the waste.
"If you have development going on in the immediate vicinity of a waste disposal site, you disturb the water table," he said. And if the flow of groundwater near the waste changes, he said, the site could develop problems.
Murray said that the authority is not giving preference to a national forest. "We're just saying that it's not ruled out," he said.
The discussion about forests surprised environmentalists at the meeting. Lisa Finaldi, the acting director of the N.C. Clean Water Fund, said that she had a hard time believing that the law would allow radioactive waste to be put in a federal forest.

"Maybe there is a part of some national forest that's totally of no value to anybody. Then I'd wonder why it was a (part of a) national forest," she said.
Robert Gessner of the Blue Ridge Environmental Defense League said that the authority would find few allies if it tried to put the waste in the Pisgah or Nantahala national forests. Hunters, conservationists and campers in western North Carolina already are protesting the federal government's plan for clearing sections of the forests, he said.
The tentative approval of the 33-page documents opens a month-long period for local officials and the general public to suggest changes.
"It's astonishing that in such a short period of time we've been able to reach our first major milestone," Merrill Eisenbud, chairman of the authority, said.
At his urging, the panel agreed to begin work toward the second "major milestone" — seeking an engineering firm to develop a list of potential sites.

SBA's Red Tide Decision Blasted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The red tide poisoning North Carolina's coastal economy has made waves on Capitol Hill, where N.C. congressmen lambasted the Small Business Administration for denying disaster loans to businesses hurt by the toxic algae.
Rep. Martin Lancaster of Goldsboro Monday called the agency's administrator, James Abdnor, "the Grinch who stole Christmas and Mr. Scrooge all rolled into one." Abdnor has refused government aid for coastal North Carolina communities, which have lost nearly $3.5 million in the past month.
Lancaster, a freshman Democrat, led a House Small Business Committee hearing into the red tide, a natural phenomenon that has spoiled shellfish beds from Cape Fear to Cape Hatteras and made fish eaters leery of all seafood from N.C. waters.
At issue was the agency's definition of disaster: "a single, sudden, physical event of catastrophic nature (such as floods, riots, or civil disorders) which causes severe damage."
Bernard Kulik, the Small Business Administration's deputy associate administrator for disaster assistance, said red tide is not like floods or riots because the red tide algae are always found in warm gulf waters. "Red tide exists all the time," he said.
But Rep. Charles Rose of Fayetteville said that because Florida and Texas have learned to expect occasional outbreaks of red tide does not lessen the effect on North Carolina.
"When it's 20 degrees below zero in Fairbanks, Alaska, that's normal," Rose said. "But when it's 20 below in mid-Florida, it's a disaster."
The administration's position is that a disaster covered by the act (Small Business) is a single sudden physical event of catastrophic nature which causes severe damage," Kulik said.

Alluding to the law's inclusion of riots but not red tide outbreaks as disasters, Rep. Walter Jones asked Kulik, "Then your advice to the fishermen is to go ahead and riot?"
"If we had called this the red flood, instead of the red tide, it would have been covered," Rose added.
Lancaster, Rose and Jones have introduced a bill that would force the Small Business Administration to declare the red tide outbreak a disaster for loan purposes.
But Lancaster said that it is unlikely a busy Congress could act on the measure before Christmas, and many fishermen can't wait that long.
William Hogarth, the director of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries said that fishermen "are in grave danger of losing the boats and vehicles they will need to earn a living after the red tide has disappeared."
More than 300,000 acres have been closed to shellfish harvesting since the first reports of red tide algae on Emerald Isle the weekend of Oct. 31. More than half the annual bay scallop harvest has been lost, state officials said. Clams and oysters can survive red tide, but levels of the microbe toxic to humans will persist in shellfish for two weeks after the algae recedes from state waters.

IN THE STATE

Cooperation Urged

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Rules aimed at fighting the AIDS epidemic should focus on cooperation, not coercion, to convince victims to name their sexual partners, state health officials have been told.
"I ask you to work with us, not against us," Les Kooyman, executive director of the Metrolina AIDS Project, said Monday at a public hearing in Charlotte, one of several held around the state.
"We need to walk away from rules that assume that a person with AIDS is the enemy....," said Charlotte Brody, associate director of Planned Parenthood of Greater Charlotte.
About 60 people turned out in Charlotte to hear more than 10 physicians, gay activists and community leaders criticize the state's proposal to require people infected with the AIDS virus to identify their sexual partners or notify those partners of their infection.
A final public hearing will be held Dec. 16 in Raleigh.

Peanut Prices

FRANKLIN, Va. (AP) — Virginia and North Carolina farmers are hoping that keeping Virginia peanuts out of this season's tight market will force up prices.
The Peanut Farmers Association agreed Monday night to pool about 10 percent of peanuts produced in Virginia and North Carolina in an effort to raise prices from the current rate of about $810 per ton to $900 per ton, or 150 percent of the federal government support price.
Early frosts cut the peanut supply short this year, and the farmers group is betting that prices will rise as shellers and manufacturers compete for a market share.
The association rejected two earlier offers for $810 and $835 per ton.
The association set a 5 p.m. Wednesday deadline for offers for 10 million pounds of peanuts harvested last month.
The farmers agreed to reduce their asking price for additional peanuts — those sold for export and not guaranteed the government subsidy — from 150 percent to 145 percent of support price, or about $870 per ton.

N.C. Agriculture

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Consumer-driven, market-oriented agriculture is necessary for North Carolina to maintain its position as one of the country's leading farm states, Gov. Jim Martin says.

"The lesson is becoming clearer that if North Carolina is to continue as one of the great agricultural states, we will have to change from a production-driven agriculture to a consumer-driven, market-oriented agriculture," Martin told the more than 1,000 people attending the annual convention of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation.
Martin cited teamwork as the key to accomplishments the state has made during his administration — survival of agriculture during an economic downturn, a profitable 1987 for tobacco farmers and a change in the tendency for farmers to specialize.

Duke To Fight Fine

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Duke Power Co. will contest a $100,000 penalty the federal government intends to impose for safety violations at the company's McGuire nuclear power plant near Charlotte, company officials say.
A federal safety agency doubled the usual penalty because it said Duke Power has a "history of poor performance" in the training of operators at McGuire.
Duke spokeswoman Mary Boyd said Monday the company, which provides electricity to 4.4 million customers in North and South Carolina, has improved shortcomings cited by the Nuclear Regulatory Agency.
The NRC cited three similar mistakes since 1985 at the plant 17 miles northwest of Charlotte, and in October said it was proposing twice the usual $50,000 penalty.

Bond Set For Miller

RALEIGH (AP) — Former White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller has convinced a federal judge that he no longer fears the federal government and will return to court for sentencing on firearms and other charges in January.
U.S. District Judge Earl Britt Monday set a $50,000 bond for Miller.
Miller, who once threatened a race war and formerly referred to the federal government as ZOG — "Zionist Occupational Government," told Britt during a bond hearing that he had begun cooperating with federal authorities.
"I told them absolutely everything I know about anything illegal," Miller said.

Marshal's Speeding Case Before Federal Judge

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Federal officials say a U.S. deputy marshal who received a speeding ticket while transporting prisoners should not face trial because he was on official business, but state officials say the ticket should stand.

"Does the federal government in some cases have more power than the state government? Yes," said Rudy Renfer, an assistant U.S. attorney, told U.S. District Court Judge James Fox at a hearing Monday. "But that's not the question here. It's not a question of power." The question, Renfer said, is about security.

"We're not charging him with a crime for performing his duty as a deputy marshal," said Ike Avery, a prosecutor with the state attorney general's office. "We're charging him with speeding."

Fox must decide whether the speeding case belongs in federal court or state court.

Deputy Marshals Dan Eatmon and

Dennis Meehan testified that security was their main concern when they broke the speed limit. They said they were running behind schedule Sept. 13 while driving federal inmates from Lenoir County. They still had two more prisoners to pick up in Edgecombe County and wanted to make the Nash County jail by supperthine, so Meehan told Eatmon to "bump it up" a little on the speed, according to testimony.

Eatmon and Meehan testified that they were trying to get the prisoners to Nash County by supertime to avoid having to feed them on the road, where security would be a problem.

State Trooper Ron Mills stopped their van on N.C. 11 near Winterville in Pitt County, clocking it at 71 mph in a 55 mph zone. Mills, who wrote Eatmon a speeding ticket, said he didn't notice the U.S. government license tag and the U.S. Marshal Service emblem on the doors.

The Marshal Service, citing Article Six of the Constitution making federal law the supreme law of the land, contends the deputies were on official business and security dictated the need to break the speed limit.

The Pitt County District Attorney's Office refused to dismiss the charge. The state Attorney General's Office says no emergency condition existed when the van was stopped, there was no need to speed and Eatmon had no justification to violate the state's traffic laws.

If Fox decides the case belongs in federal court, the federal government would prevail and the speeding charge would be dismissed.

But if Fox sends the case back to the state courts, then Eatmon, a part-time deputy marshal and a full-time employee with a Raleigh fire department, will face a speeding charge.

The two marshals also testified Monday that Eatmon had been fluctuating his speed to determine whether a suspicious motorcyclist had been following them. No motorcycle was ever mentioned to Mills or in court affidavits.

"We wouldn't try to hamper any law enforcement agency, federal or state," Highway Patrol Sgt. Charles Pearce, Mills' supervisor in Greenville, told the Wilmington Morning Star in a telephone interview Monday. "An emergency was never mentioned. There has never been anything about a motorcycle."

Eatmon testified that he did mention to Mills something about his insurance rates going up as a result of the speeding ticket.

Fox is expected to hand down a decision after Dec. 18.

PTL Reports Christmas Sales Brisk At Heritage

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The car count may be down, but the dollar amounts are up at Heritage USA this holiday season.

Heritage businessmen report cash registers are working overtime, despite problems at the PTL ministry. While car counts for the annual Christmas City light display are below those of last year, some merchants say sales are reaching last year's volume.

For Bob Ragsdale, whose company owns Victoria's Boutique on Main Street and the Goody Barn near the ministry's water park, sales for Thanksgiving weekend were the most he has seen in his 2½ years at Heritage.

"If anything, it was probably normal type traffic," he said. "The difference is there's such a difference in the attitude of people over last summer. They're so willing to go out and buy."

Although only a few other merchants experienced as big a weekend as Ragsdale, most of them see the recent increased sales as a good sign.

Hotel attendance is also up and attendance for events on the Heritage USA grounds are holding steady with last year, PTL spokeswoman Linda Ivey said.

"Things are picking up," Ms. Ivey said.

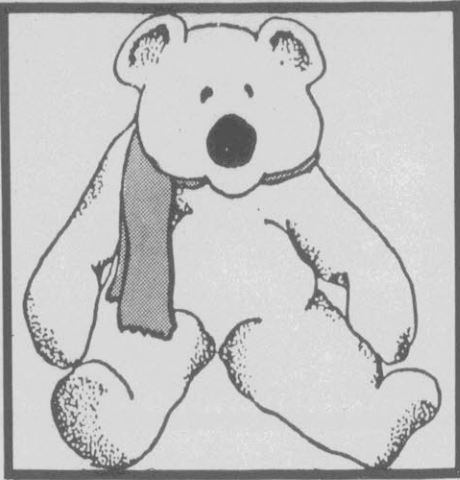

The ministry has been trying to recuperate since PTL founder Jim Bakker resigned in March amid a sex scandal.

That led to PTL's filing for reorganization in bankruptcy court and a grand jury investigation of Bakker. Publicity from those events combined to scare many potential customers away, merchants said.

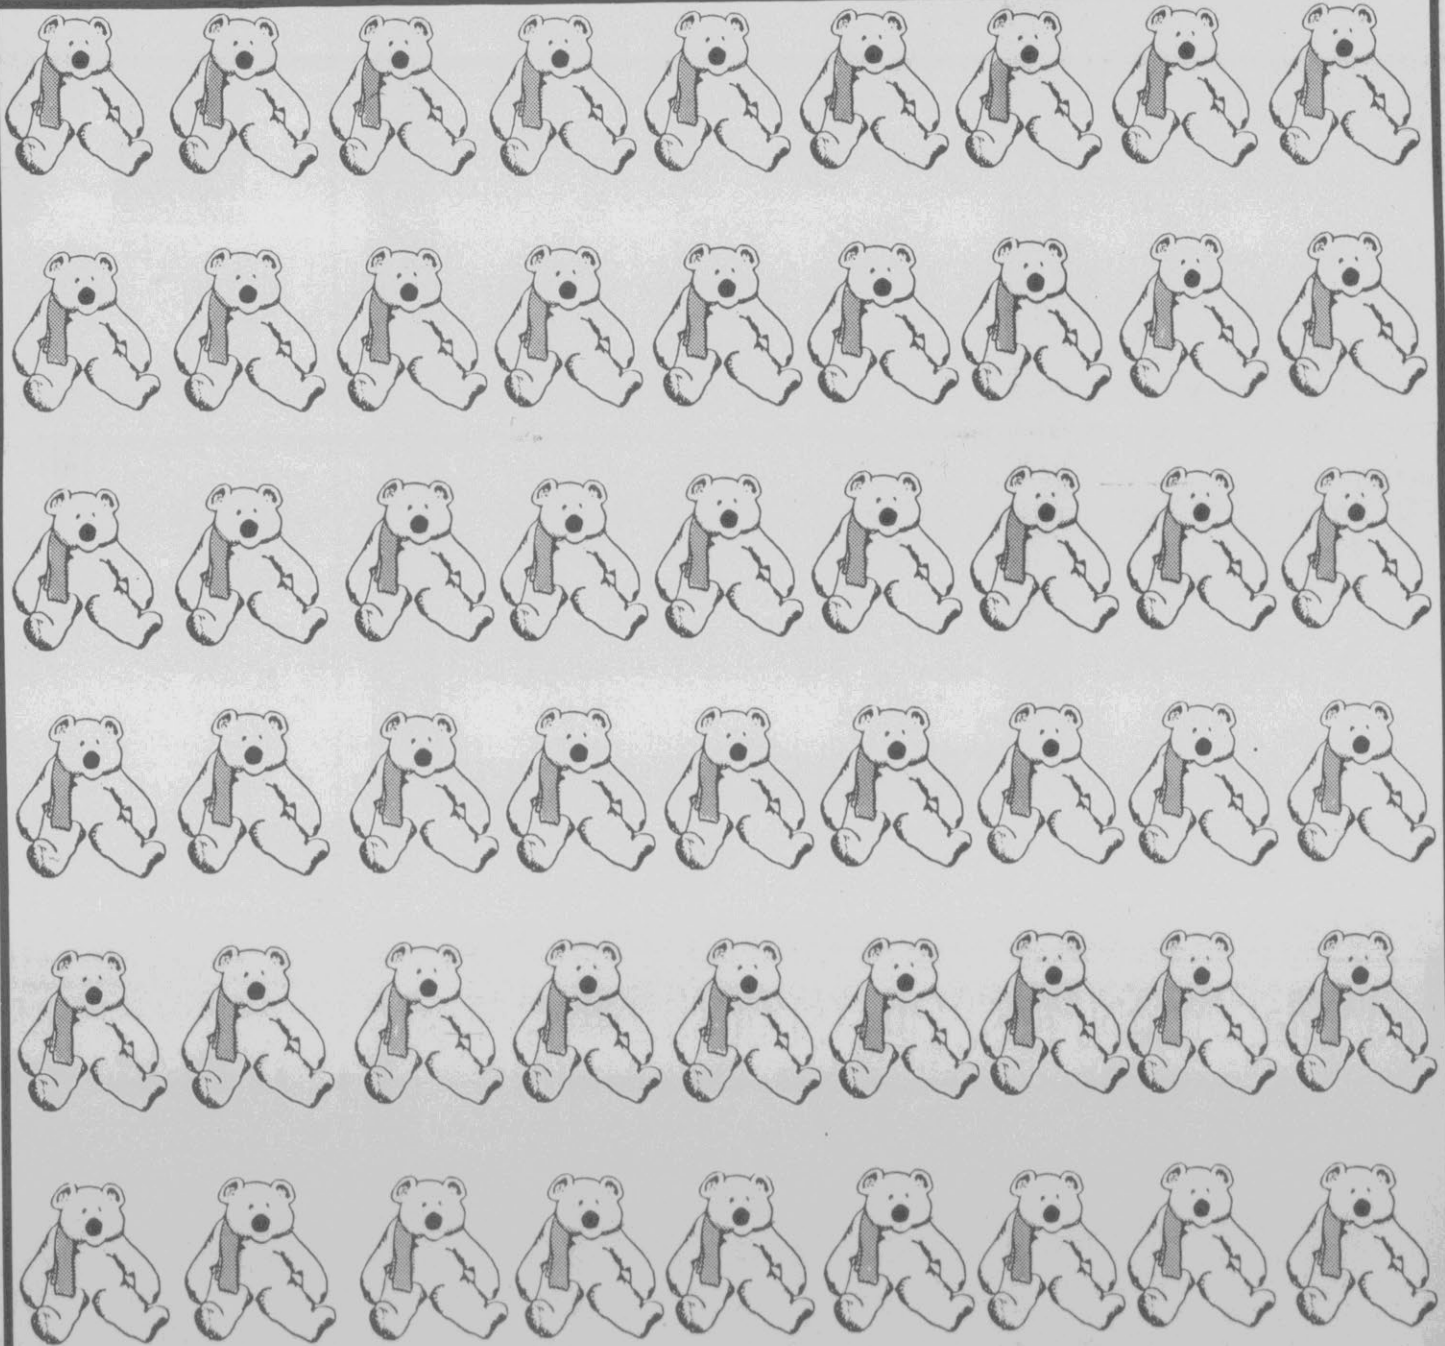

To get the crowds back, shops have reduced prices and begun a sales campaign. Several merchants are participating in the Christmas Maze Craze Game in which a person can win prizes by visiting stores at Heritage USA.

The result has been so much business for Ragsdale that he added three more Christmas employees than he had last year. Others have added one or two extra employees. At least one merchant said his business was hurt so much by the drop in summer business that he did not hire extra employees for Christmas.

Also, the stores are getting a lot of Christmas City traffic, said Jerry Knobe, vice president and retail division head of the PTL shops.

Helms Refuses To Socialize With Guests From Russia

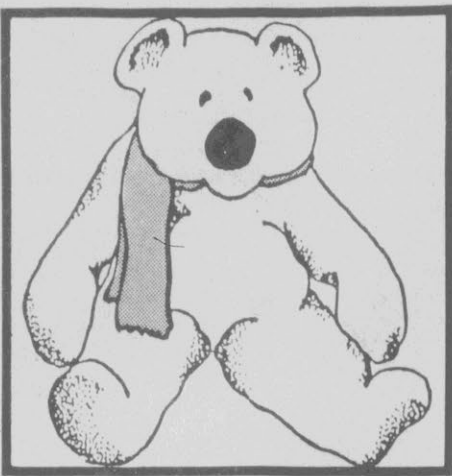

By The Associated Press
Sen. Jesse Helms says he turned down invitations to social events honoring Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev because he didn't want to dignify a government that "has never kept its word."
Helms, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said President Reagan had invited him to a state dinner during this week's summit in Washington. Secretary of State George Shultz invited Helms to another get-together with Gorbachev.

"I immediately turned down both invitations," Helms told the Dunn Daily Record. "I don't want to bestow dignity or respectability on the head of a government that has never kept its word, and I certainly am not going to socialize with him."
Gorbachev and his wife arrived in Washington on Monday to sign a treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe and discuss further weapons cuts and other issues.

Helms said Gorbachev was "a cunning PR man" but was "just a front man. The same people are still running Russia."
Helms said he would like to grill Gorbachev before the Foreign Relations Committee, but said foreign leaders are not allowed to attend committee meetings.

"I want to know more about this man," Helms said, "and whether he is willing to dismantle the Berlin Wall, pull the troops out of Afghanistan" and make concessions in Angola and Central America as well as loosen restrictions on emigration of Soviet Jews and dissidents.
This isn't the first time Helms has rejected invitations to socialize with foreign heads of state with whose policies he disagrees.

"I feel the good Lord put me and everybody else here to stand for something and that's what I intend to do," Helms said.
Helms has reserved judgment on the INF treaty, which some conservatives have said would weaken the United States and its allies and are vowing to fight when the Senate debates ratification.

OATH OF OFFICE — Members of the Pitt County Board of Education pledged their service to the Pitt County schools as Resident Superior Court Judge David Reid led them in a swearing-in ceremony Monday night.

Religion Policy Is Adopted

of grades kindergarten through eighth in the specific policy addressing extracurricular student groups and their freedom to establish groups and conduct meetings on school property during noninstructional time in the school day.

Buzzard said that policy was drafted from the Equal Access Act to protect the rights of secondary school students. While primary school students do have rights to assemble, there is no specific law to quote on that issue, he said.

The Constitutional rights of teachers as citizens and their role while acting in their official capacities also was addressed. The policy was developed to address student rights as opposed to those of administrators and personnel, Buzzard said. It refers to teachers only while they're "acting in their official capacity."

Religion in the Pitt County schools has been a sensitive issue since an administrative memo was distributed to the schools in 1986 requesting that programs and activities be neutral on religion. The board, according to the policy introduction, "seeks to foster among all students and personnel the attitudes of appreciation, sensitivity, and respect for the rich religious diversity of our community and nation, and to accommodate student religious beliefs and practices whenever educationally feasible and constitutionally permissible."

The new religion policy will be implemented immediately to provide a guide for current holiday programs.

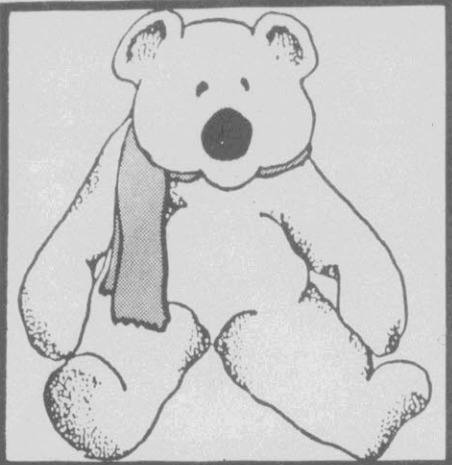

Personnel recommendations and a revision in the school calendar as it relates to Martin Luther King's birthday also was approved. Under the calendar revision prompted by the state Personnel Commission, June 23 was changed from a teacher workday to a holiday for 10 and 11-month employees, and Dec. 21 was changed from a scheduled annual leave day to a holiday for all 12-month employees.

The updated search and seizure policy also was approved by the board in addition to advisory council recommendations.

Robert Dailey of the school system briefed the board on recommendations and suggestions of the tobacco task force, and Dr. Al Driver and Camille Kroll, assistant director of the American Lung Association of North Carolina, Eastern Region, spoke in support of the recommendations.

The board also requested a presentation on the Triad Enrichment Program, which is designed to enrich students who exhibit above average ability, task commitment and creativity, and it met in executive session to discuss property matters.

She's Loyal Fan of Husband

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Jane Byrnes Gephardt has been a fan and political supporter of Dick Gephardt since he ran for student body president of Northwestern University more than 20 years ago.

The two met when she, a native of Columbus, Neb., was a freshman. She soon volunteered to help tout his campaign slogan, "Blueprint for Action."

Having been married to Gephardt for 21 years, Mrs. Gephardt, 45, is still promoting her husband's views and sharing with whoever will listen what a strong, wise man of integrity she believes he is.

The congressman from Missouri and his wife began campaigning for the presidency about 2½ years ago. Now that Democratic nomination time is getting closer, they've gone on the road separately to discuss the issues before more people. Mrs. Gephardt stays away from home about four days each week campaigning.

Yesterday she was in Farmville meeting with women of the community and holding a news conference on her husband's views on agriculture.

She stayed last night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Rouse. She was to be up today at 4 a.m. to catch a plane and be in Biloxi, Miss., by 11 a.m.

Some time in the midst of her busy afternoon and evening schedule in Pitt County, she no doubt called home. She says she spends some time every evening that she isn't at home on the phone with her children. The Gephardt children are Matthew, 17, Christine, 14, and Katie, 10. When Mom's away, they're in the care of live-in nanny, a young woman taking a year's leave of absence from the University of Missouri to assist the Gephardts.

Mrs. Gephardt explained during the news conference the Harkin-Gephardt bill proposed by her husband and Sen. Harkin of Iowa. The first part of their proposal, she said, has already passed the House. This deals with farm credit and sets up matching grants of up to $500,000 to assist states in administering farmer-lender mediation programs to help farmers restructure their debts.

It requires the Farmer Home Administration and the Farm Credit System to participate in such mediation programs. She said she believes this requirement creates a situation in which the leadership of the Farmers Home Administration is made part of the solution rather than a contribution to the problem of family farming collapses.

The second part of the Harkin-Gephardt bill she said will control production by bushels — not acreage — which will eliminate the incentive to overuse pesticides and allow farmers to control production by any manner they choose. "We must control production while utilizing environmentally sound techniques," she quotes her husband.

If this measure is passed, farmers will vote, based on the crops they grow, to enact production controls. She believes the price for each commodity will then be set at a level adequate to cover the cost of production and ensure higher family income.

Gephardt says that, as part of this control, the country must pursue negotiations with its trading partners to coordinate supply management. "It has always been the American farmers who cut back. We need other countries to help eliminate today's surpluses, too," Mrs. Gephardt said. She has faith that passing all of the Harkin-Gephardt proposal will turn the rural economy of this nation around.

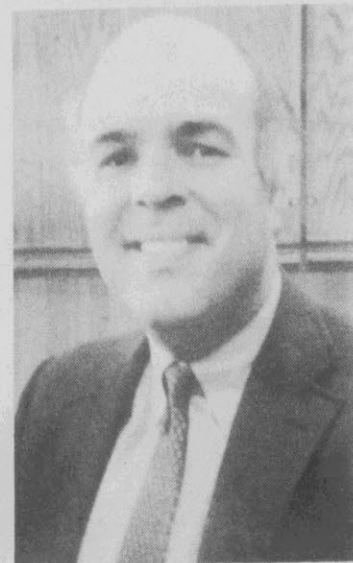

She said, when she becomes first lady, she will work for improved education, improved family life, and fighting drug and alcohol use, particularly among children and teenagers. She said she will do this through activities of her own and, through her husband, whose ear she knows she always has.

Marie Davis Is President Of Realtors Board

He has served as vice president and secretary-treasurer of the local group. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Home Builders Association, supporter of the Boys Club and The Salvation Army. Abby Gets Bouquets And Bricks

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: "Carole, in Itasca, Ill." recently criticized me for trying to help my readers too much, and entertain them too little. She warned: "If you become just another column of safety tips, you might bore your readers to the point where they won't read you."

I thanked Carole for the nudge, and invited my readers to let me know what they liked — and didn't like — about my column.

Well, here's the good, the bad and the ugly:

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading you in The Houston Post for 25 years and think you provide genuinely intelligent answers to some strange and also common problems. I like the way you allow other people to state their views, even when they disagree with you. I skip the long reprints and tearjerkers, because I've read them before. I dislike: repetitious tirades against smokers and people who don't write thank-you notes.

I enjoy the letters from selfish jerks, bigots and busybodies, and I love the way you tell them off! — CATHY MEYER, HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: If "Carole" wants entertainment, let her read the comics or watch "Hee Haw," but please don't change your column. I have been helped many times by your insight and suggestions. People may stop reading it if they are bored, but they will surely stop writing to you if they think their plea for help, or their sharing of a moving experience, will be used for entertainment. — NORMA FOOTE, FRESNO

DEAR ABBY: I agree completely with "Carole." When I see a column full of dry and lengthy facts and tips, I never read it. And I never read your columns when they have poems, or debates about who authored a poem. Nor do I care about round-robin letters, or someone's pet peeve about the English language. Your feature is an advice column, not a literary forum. — S. K. FROM BAKERSFIELD

DEAR ABBY: You ask, "What don't you like about my column?" Nothing! What do you like about my column? Everything!

I like your writing style. I respect your judgment and I love your wit. I appreciate your good old-fashioned horse sense and I trust your advice. Don't change a thing. I read The Seattle Times mainly for "Dear Abby." — WILLIAM B. HOLBERG, SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: Our family agrees that you are going overboard with health, safety and better living tips. We get plenty of those elsewhere. Your column is getting boring. Please stick to the human events format that we have enjoyed for years in the Los Angeles Times. — T.R. OLANDER AND FAMILY

DEAR ABBY: "Carole, of Itasca, Ill." doesn't speak for me or the majority of your readers. Your column has never bored me. As a teacher for 30 years, I've heard your columns discussed repeatedly among my colleagues and students. Your caring and good sense come through, whether you're giving help or entertaining. And I dearly love your excellent recipes! I appreciate the versatility of your columns. You've become a real friend over the years. — ARLINE VOTOUR IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ABBY: You would do well to listen to "Carole." I am completely turned off with all your safety tips and "help" columns. I just like to be entertained. — RUTH NEWTON, NEWARK, DEL.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't change a thing. I am 84 years old, and although I've never written to you, I've read you for years and have learned a lot from you. Keep up the good work! — VIVA RAMSEY KUYKENDALL, KATY, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: If I see one more letter reminding people to tie up their dogs, visit poor old grandma in the nursing home, or a rerun of Fire Prevention Week or "Please, God, I'm Only 17," I will barf. Thank you. — JERRY IN LONG BEACH

DEAR ABBY: Here's a question I've never seen in your column: My recently divorced wife, "Sue," and I would like to get back together, but during our marriage, Sue constantly fooled around.

She says she has changed. How can I be sure? — WONDERING IN WYOMING

DEAR WONDERING: Until you and Sue get to the root of what compelled her to "constantly fool around" and the circumstances are changed, you can't be sure. I would strongly recommend professional premarital counseling before you return to the altar with Sue.

Nancy Reagan Says

1987 Has Been 'Terrible' Year; 'Next Year Has To Be Better'

By DONNIE RADCLIFFE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service
(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first part of a two part story)
WASHINGTON — The Reagans could have done without October — but then they could have done without 1987. Top to bottom, front to back, inside out and beginning to end, Ronald Reagan's seventh year as president has been a struggle.
"Terrible," said Nancy Reagan recently, trying — unconvincingly — to laugh about it. "Terrible. Next year has got to be better."

How could it be worse? His prostate surgery, the Iran-Contra probes, the furor over Chief of Staff Don Regan, the Persian Gulf attacks, the aborted Supreme Court nominations, the stock-market crash, the scandals involving friends and political associates — not to mention her surgery for breast cancer, her mother's death and the resulting exposure of the long-smoldering estrangement of daughter Patti Davis.

"Well," said Nancy Reagan, settling down beside the fireplace in the White House Library 2½ weeks after her mother's funeral, "overall I guess the whole year has been the roughest. The roughest single thing, of course, was Ronnie being shot (in 1981)."

But despite it all, next week — beginning with the Monday arrival of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and his wife Raisa for three days of arms talks — could turn out to be one of his best. Certainly it is one of his most important, and that makes it one of her most important as well. She has invited Mrs. Gorbachev for coffee and a private tour of the White House, and she will join Reagan officially in welcoming the Gorbachevs Tuesday morning and hosting them at a state dinner Tuesday night. Unofficially, of course, she will be Reagan's support, as she always has been.

Nancy Reynolds, Nancy Reagan's unofficial but willing interpreter ever since the Reagans came to Washington, had summed up the Reagan relationship a few days earlier. "They are joined at the hip, truly," she said. "And what happens to one affects the other."

Nancy Reagan of late, though, has begun to look beyond the travails of what Reynolds calls "this soap-opera existence" of death, cancer, personal disappointments, political setbacks and international expectations at next week's summit. There has been an urge to talk more about the future, next year and getting back to the ranch.

As if to explain yet one more notion building about Mrs. Reagan inside Washington's Beltway — that she is fed up and can't wait to leave Washington — Reynolds recounted a prediction she made last year.

"Foolishly," Reynolds said, "I said, 'Oh, the next two years are just going to go like wildfire.'"

Then, changing her voice, Reynolds mimicked Mrs. Reagan more recently: "What happened to the wildfire that was going to spread through the kingdom here?"

Reynolds trotted out the old joke about the reaction of the optimistic kid faced with a roomful of manure: "Well, there's got to be a pony in there somewhere."

Nancy Reagan considered the magnitude of the Reagans' troubles and replied: "This pony is beginning to look like a horse."

At the White House, Mrs. Reagan acknowledged that there are times when she has looked forward to going home to California permanently.

"Oh, sure, you have those — I mean, at this point — particularly after this year," she said, proceeding cautiously. "But then there are lots of things, you know, that I will miss. Like I missed things when I left Sacramento. I'll miss friends. And this is a lovely old home. ..."

She took small consolation from something her friend, columnist George Will, wrote recently about the misery of other two-term presidents. "Eisenhower's seventh year was just awful. There was the U-2; four members of his Cabinet resigned; Sherman Adams — the vicuna coat — he had a stroke. I mean, everything happened to him. Everything," she said.

And the lesson to be learned? "Sit back," she said, "and expect it."

The nadir of Nancy Reagan's roughest year came on a pair of black Mondays in October. She never suspected the chilling disclosure that first Monday, Oct. 5: She had a lump in her breast, and it might be cancerous, the doctor said. Her visit to Bethesda Naval Medical Center had been routine, for her annual checkup. But after surprise came a feeling of inevitability.

"So much had happened to him," she said of her husband's bouts with cancer and the 1981 assassination attempt, "and I just thought, 'Well, maybe the gods are up there deciding now it's my turn.'"

Three weeks later, on Monday, Oct. 26, and just 10 days into her postsurgery recuperation, came the news of her mother's death after a stroke. A few days later she learned that while she had been trying to shield Edith Luckett Davis from her own misfortune — she had cautioned

Davis' nurses to keep an eye on media coverage — her mother had been asking for her.

"Even at the last when she really didn't know ... she kept — they told me, and I found in the notes — kept calling, calling for me, which just about killed me."

"We were always terribly close — really very close — and I adored her," she said. "But I was always sorry that I was so far away from her and I couldn't be with her more." In some ways, Mrs. Reagan's October calendar had seemed predictable, a combination of official and private engagements starting off with the doctor's appointment in Bethesda, Md. A tentative reading of her mammogram that first Monday had alerted John E. Hutton, the president's physician, to a tiny lesion. Hutton told Mrs. Reagan they wouldn't know until the next day if she should have a biopsy. Right then she decided she wanted breast-cancer specialist Dr. Oliver Beahrs, a former student of her father's, to be there when she heard the verdict and to examine her himself.

Not until later did anybody tell her that Hutton had slipped into the Oval Office to warn the president there was a possibility she had cancer. Hutton's news had stunned Reagan — Hutton told her he would never forget the look on his face.

"Knowing him," she said of her husband, by nature an optimist, "he probably thought 'This can't happen. It's not possible. Can't happen.'"

But on Tuesday, "it became a reality."

Joining Hutton at the White House, Beahrs, who had arrived from the Mayo Clinic, talked to her about the quarter-inch-long tumor detected in her left breast. She began to weigh her options, given her circumstances, which included a demanding schedule stretching into next year.

"If I'd been told that I should go in the next day, I would have gone in the next day," she said. But Beahrs never suggested such urgency, so she waited, scheduling surgery for 10 days later.

"There were these things that were coming up," she explained — such longstanding commitments as the Oct. 14 state visit by Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte and the Oct. 16 New Hampshire event combining her anti-drug abuse crusade and Foster Grandparents.

More immediate was that night's dinner for the crown prince and crown princess of Japan. When Reagan came home to dress, she said, "there wasn't much time to talk, really. And I think we both knew that if we started to talk, we would get upset — and we had to go through this dinner — and there was no point in doing that. The main thing was to just get through the dinner."

For all their years in Hollywood, that didn't come easily.

"You keep trying to push it out," she said. "And there's something — I don't know — kind of unreal about it, that this couldn't really be happening. You know, it's like a nightmare. It just couldn't be happening. They must have made a mistake."

The next day, Oct. 7, she flew to Chicago to accept a $100,000 cash award for the Nancy Reagan Drug Abuse Fund from the Ronald McDonald Children's Charities. She had already told her chief of staff, Jack Courtemanche; she told her two other senior aides — press secretary Elaine Crispin and secretary Jane Erkenback — during the flight.

"She was adamant about keeping it quiet," Crispin said. "She didn't want people treating her differently. And we discussed her decision not to tell her family so far ahead."

"There was no point in having them worried for 10 days," Mrs. Reagan said.

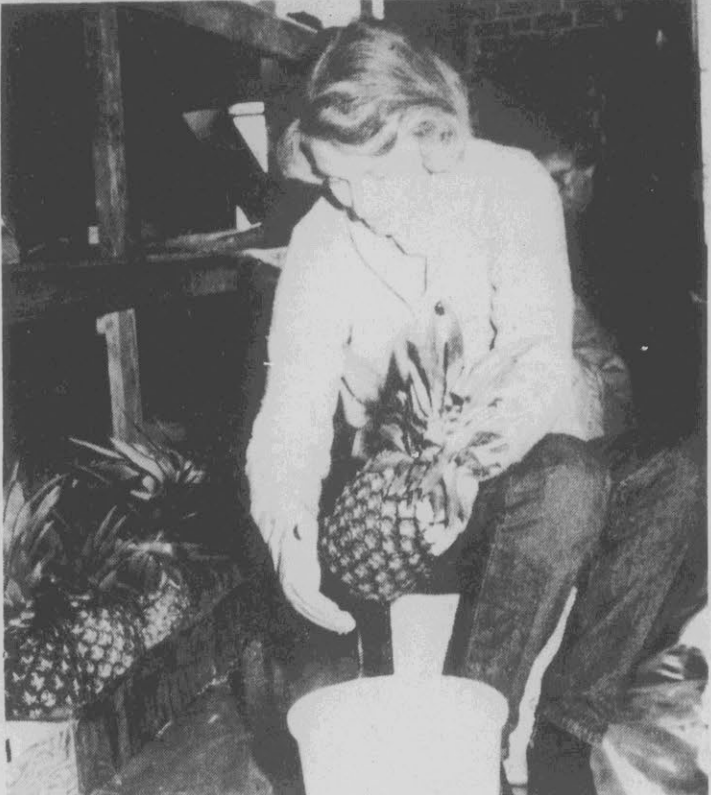

In fact, it wasn't until Oct. 15, the night before she entered the hospital, that the word was passed to daughter Patti Davis, daughter-in-law Doria Reagan, and stepchildren Maureen and Michael Reagan. It fell to Doria, Ron Reagan's wife, to get the word to him in the Soviet Union, where he was on location with ABC's "Good Morning America."

For Reagan, the 10-day countdown to Mrs. Reagan's surgery was interminable and agonizing. Publicly, he was taking a beating on Robert Bork's nomination, and in a speech to New Jersey Republicans he defiantly lashed back that if he had to nominate someone else, "... I'll try to find one that they'll object to as much as they did to this one." Privately, he was shaken, worried about her recovery and the effects of cancer treatments.

Not wanting to add her own anxieties to his, Nancy Reagan turned to her stepbrother, Philadelphia neurosurgeon Richard Davis, the way she once did his father, and to her ever-supportive trusted friends.

"I think anyone does when you have that kind of sudden shock," said Betsy Bloomingdale, a confidant from her California days.

Another friend said Mrs. Reagan "was scared to death, just scared to death," shortly before the biopsy. Already worrying overtime about Reagan's problems ("she always wants everything to be smooth for him," Bloomingdale said), she fretted over the way the media would play her story.

Mothers Work Toward Perfection

Do you remember where you were and what you were doing the first time you realized you would never make your mother happy?

It's a little fuzzy, but I remember being all dressed up to go somewhere in a polka-dot dress, covered by a snowsuit that zipped all the way up to my chin, a little bonnet tied under the chin, and mittens threaded through my coat by strings. My mother picked me up and headed toward the door when I said the P word: potty. She pushed her body in reverse and I can't remember her exact words, but it had to do with my timing and why I didn't want her to be happy.

I will never forget the look on her face. It was somewhere between a blinding migraine and the look of a person who couldn't swallow an anchovy. She was to wear that look for the rest of her life.

Mothers are born with an insatiable appetite for perfection. Their happiness is contingent on how well and how quickly children follow their advice. It is handed down from one mother to another. Everything a child does reflects on the mother.

If you hide your green beans under your plate, your mother's throat will close from grief.

If you lie to the phys ed teacher

At Wits End

about taking showers, your mother will never be able to shop at the market again without wearing a disguise.

If you owe your mother $60 for car repairs and then pick up and go to California to see a girl you've known two weeks, you might just as well put a peg in your mother's heart.

There isn't a mother in this world who consciously sets out to raise a vice president, a second-place runner, a supporting actor, Miss Congeniality in the Miss America pageant or a guest host. "We only want what is best for you" is often accompanied by tears and heavy sighing.

Somewhere out there today is a mother saying to her son who is a Cardinal, "So, does the Pope have tenure? Try a little harder." Somewhere there is a mother who is telling her daughter, "Can Tina Turner's legs last forever?"

There are few celebrities in this world who have turned out to be what their mothers wanted for them. From the day I could walk, my mother was molding me in the image of Shirley Temple. She dragged me to dancing lessons, got me on a local radio show and did everything but paint dimples in my knees. How did I repay her for all her sacrifice and dreams? I turned to journalism. (She wasn't even impressed when I wrote obituaries and got all those people to die in alphabetical order.)

Two summers ago, I met Shirley Temple and told my mother about it. Her face fell to her chest and she sighed, "Did you tell her how you broke your mother's heart?"

besides the extended bus service, associated with relocating the two events, would not be assumed by the city but rather by the event's sponsorship.
Due to limited parking availability near McGinnis Theatre, a free, shuttle bus service will be provided to transport people to the facility.
David Morris, transit supervisor at Public Works, said the shuttle would operate from two parking lots, the lot at Fifth and Evans Streets, next to City Hall, and the Courthouse parking lot at Second and Washington Streets.
Morris said three shuttle buses will operate from each parking lot starting at 6:45 p.m., transporting people to and from the ceremony.
Mayor-elect Ed Carter said having the reception at the Holiday Inn would permit more people to attend and enjoy the festivities.
"I think the reception is a significant affair," Carter said. "I think it's important to give people an opportunity to participate if they so desire."
He said approximately 500 invitations to the reception have been issued.
Carter said the list of guests to the invitation-only affair include supporters, friends, council members and their friends.
According to Bill Dansey, a reception coordinator, approximately 40 sponsors have contributed funds to finance the reception.
Dansey said at this point he cannot estimate the reception's final cost.

Richard Eakin, East Carolina University Chancellor, said city officials contacted the university to make available an auditorium of the size and nature to handle the installation ceremony.
McGinnis Theatre, with seating for 617 people, was selected.
"I'm delighted to cooperate with the City of Greenville on this," Eakin said.
Bunny Williams, director of sales at the Greenville Holiday Inn said she expects approximately 400-500 people will attend the reception.
Williams said the reception will be held in the Holidome with wine and hors d'oeuvres to be served.
According to Williams, the Holidome was thoroughly renovated during the summer.
"This reception will give us an opportunity to show off," she said.

Reagan Welcomes Gorbachev To Summit

Washington in 14 years, and Gorbachev's first trip to the United States since he assumed power in March 1985.

There was pomp and circumstance aplenty as Gorbachev's limousine pulled up bearing twin Soviet and American flags on the fender.

The two men shook hands as Gorbachev stepped from his car, and Mrs. Reagan greeted Mrs. Gorbachev with a nod and a smile.

The leaders then stood side by side while Gorbachev was accorded full military honors. A U.S. military band played the Soviet national anthem and Star Spangled Banner, and they chatted as a fife and drum corps dressed in Revolutionary era uniforms paraded past.

Once the nationally televised ceremony was over, Reagan escorted Gorbachev into the White House for the first of five scheduled negotiating sessions on arms control, human rights, Afghanistan and other issues.

The centerpiece of the first day of the summit — the signing of the treaty to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles — was arranged for early afternoon in the White House East Room.

After seven years of difficult negotiations on the medium-range missile treaty, strains were felt up to the last minute. American officials expressed irritation over the failure of the Soviets to deliver a satisfactory photograph of the SS-20 Soviet missile, one that is to be banned. The photos were to be published in a treaty annex.

The photograph is needed to compare the dimensions of the banned missile with a similar but legal long-range SS-25 rocket. The administration has voiced concern the Soviets might circumvent the accord by substituting modified SS-25s for SS-20s.

"I understand they are sending a photograph here but it hasn't arrived yet," said one American official a few hours before the scheduled treaty signing. He said other photographs of the SS-20 were inadequate because they depicted the missile shielded by its canister.

With Soviet flags bearing the hammer and sickle flying from standards along Pennsylvania Avenue, Gorbachev seized center stage on his arrival Monday, bringing wishes of "peace and well-being to all Americans" and assurances that he means to establish better relations between the superpowers.

"We are hoping that we will hear some new words on their side," the Soviet leader said as a cold wind snapped across Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland.

"We can neither of us shirk the role that we are to play in world affairs. We must act with the utmost responsibility to our peoples and the peoples of the whole world," he said.

A broad smile on his face, Secretary of State George P. Shultz assured Gorbachev his first visit to America was off to "a good start."

Just as Gorbachev used his ceremonial arrival to get across a message of his expectations to Reagan, his host used a ceremony at which the National Christmas Tree was lit to convey one to Gorbachev.

"I hope the general secretary is watching this on TV," Reagan said of the Soviet leader, who had arrived in the United States just two hours earlier. "I'd like him to see what we're celebrating, because for us Christmas celebrates the cause of peace on earth, goodwill toward men."

"I cannot think of a better spirit in which to begin the meetings of the next several days. As a small reminder of that spirit, a star of peace atop the National Christmas Tree will be lit day and night during the time our Soviet guests are here. And as we look out from the White House during our discussions, let the star remind us why we've gathered and what we seek."

As for Gorbachev's appeal for "new words," Reagan told reporters: "He'll hear them in the morning."

Over three years, the United States will scrap 396 missiles deployed in West Germany, Britain, Italy and Belgium, and the Soviets 683 rockets, about 50 of which are in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The shorter-range weapons do not pose a threat to the United States, but are targeted on Soviet and Western Europe. Strategic arms can be fired across the world and are considered the most serious nuclear threat.

The treaty was applauded by Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Miami Blows 27-Point Lead, Holds On To Take 37-28 Win Over The Jets

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Dolphins are puzzled, and the New York Jets are riddled.

The Dolphins continued their up-and-down season Monday night with a 37-28 victory over the Jets. New York, hampered by injuries all year, lost starting linebacker Lance Mehl and cornerback Russell Carter for the rest of the season.

A week after losing 27-0 at Buffalo, Miami built a 27-0 halftime lead and withstood a second-half New York comeback. The performance left the Dolphins shaking their heads about their inconsistency.

"It's been a weird season," rookie running back Troy Stradford said after rushing 30 times for 120 yards and three touchdowns. "It's hard to believe we got shut out last week versus Buffalo. But we didn't sulk about it and we didn't grow apart. We stayed together and worked hard."

Both Miami and New York are 6-6 and one game behind AFC East leader Indianapolis with three games to play.

"We're still in the playoff hunt," Jets Coach Joe Walton said. "It will be tough. It looks like we've lost two starters for the season."

Mehl suffered a knee injury. Carter, one of four New York casualties in the secondary this season, separated a shoulder. The team's leading rusher, Freeman McNeil, injured a hamstring, and Walton said his status is uncertain.

Miami did not escape unscathed. Center Dwight Stephenson, a Pro Bowl player the last five years, suffered a cracked fibula and may miss the rest of the season. Place-kicker Fuad Reveiz bruised his thigh but still managed to boot an 18-yard field goal with the gimpy leg.

The Dolphins dominated the first half, rolling up 18 first downs to the Jets' two, but New York closed the score to 30-21 by driving for touchdowns on its first three possessions in the second half.

Dan Marino, completing 29 of 40 passes for 293 yards on the night, then marched Miami 74 yards and scored himself on a 5-yard naked bootleg. New York's Bobby Humphery returned a Stradford fumble 46 yards for a touchdown with seven minutes left, but the Jets didn't get into Miami territory again.

"This is one we had to have," Miami Coach Don Shula said. "And we have to have the rest of them to stay alive, with the way the Colts have taken the lead."

Miami finished with 432 yards, 30 first downs and a 27-minute advantage in time of possession.

"We need to be more consistent," Marino said. "We did it tonight, but we didn't do it last week. Although it's a good win for us, we have to do it week in and week out."

Marino's 2-yard scoring pass to Dan Johnson and three 1-yard touchdown runs by Stradford gave Miami its big halftime lead. New York nose tackle Joe Klecko said the Jets apparently weren't ready to play when the game started.

"It looked that way, didn't it?" Klecko said. "Then we realized what we had to do."

Ken O'Brien got the Jets rolling with a 44-yard touchdown pass to Al Toon 62 seconds into the second half. Holder Pat Ryan, a 10-year veteran, scored his first NFL touchdown on an 8-yard run from field-goal formation late in the third quarter. Johnny Hector scored on a 14-yard run at the start of the fourth period.

"The guys came back in the second half and played hard," Walton said. "It's tough to do that."

The coach declined to tell reporters what he said to his team at halftime.

Miami's defense, ranked 27th in the NFL, sacked O'Brien four times, allowed only 40 yards rushing and set up a touchdown with Paul Lankford's 44-yard interception return.

"We were making things happen," said rookie defensive end John Bosa, who had his first two sacks of the season. "That's the kind of football we need to play every quarter of every game. We've had problems doing that."

Oklahoma Holds Top As Miami Second On AP Poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Football Writer

It's official. Top-ranked Oklahoma and runner-up Miami will play for college football's national championship on New Year's Night in the Orange Bowl — the 23rd matchup between No. 1 and No. 2 in the 52 years of The Associated Press college football poll.

Miami wound up the regular season with an 11-0 record by defeating South Carolina 20-16 Saturday night. Oklahoma, which finished 11-0 two weeks earlier, received 47 of 57 first-place votes and 1,129 of a possible 1,140 points in today's final regular-season poll.

Nine first-place votes and 1,088 points went to Miami while Florida State, 10-1, remained third with 1,018 points. The other first-place ballot went to No. 4 Syracuse, 11-0, which received 955 points.

Nebraska, 10-1, held onto fifth place with 926 points and Auburn, 9-1-1, remained No. 6 with 847 points. Florida State meets Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl and Syracuse plays Auburn in the Sugar Bowl.

LSU, 9-1-1, stayed seventh with 794 points. South Carolina, LSU's Gator Bowl opponent, was the only other member of the Top Twenty in action over the weekend and the close loss to Miami dropped the Gamecocks, 8-3, from eighth place to ninth with 653 points.

Michigan State, 8-2-1, moved up from ninth to eighth with 687 points and UCLA, 9-2, completed the Top Ten, just like a week ago, with 642 points.

The Second Ten consists of Oklahoma State, Notre Dame, Texas A&M, Clemson, Georgia, Southern California, Tennessee, Iowa, Pitt and Penn State.

Last week, it was Oklahoma State, Notre Dame, Clemson, Georgia, Texas A&M, Tennessee, Southern Cal, Iowa, Pitt and Penn State. The Top Twenty consists of the same teams as last week with some minor shuffling of positions.

Challenges Go On For Gene Mauch

DALLAS (AP) — The challenges goes on for Gene Mauch.

One year after trying to recover from the biggest disappointment in a quarter-century of managing, Mauch now faces a new task — trying to rebuild a last-place team.

Mauch saw the California Angels fall from top to bottom in the American League West last year. He's still trying to figure out how it happened.

"I think I was probably a little too easy early in the season because I just couldn't see any team winning more games than us if we kept on an even keel," Mauch said Monday during an informal session at baseball's winter meetings.

"But I don't know if I'd do anything different if I had it again."

Last December, Mauch patiently but painfully answered unending questions about another stunning collapse by one of his clubs. One out from the pennant, the Angels lost a three games to one lead in the playoffs to Boston and missed out on his first trip to the World Series.

It was a sad reminder of 1964, when his Philadelphia Phillies squandered a big lead in the final week.

"I sincerely tried to minimize the effect that the end of the 1986 season had and I think we did," Mauch said. "We got off good."

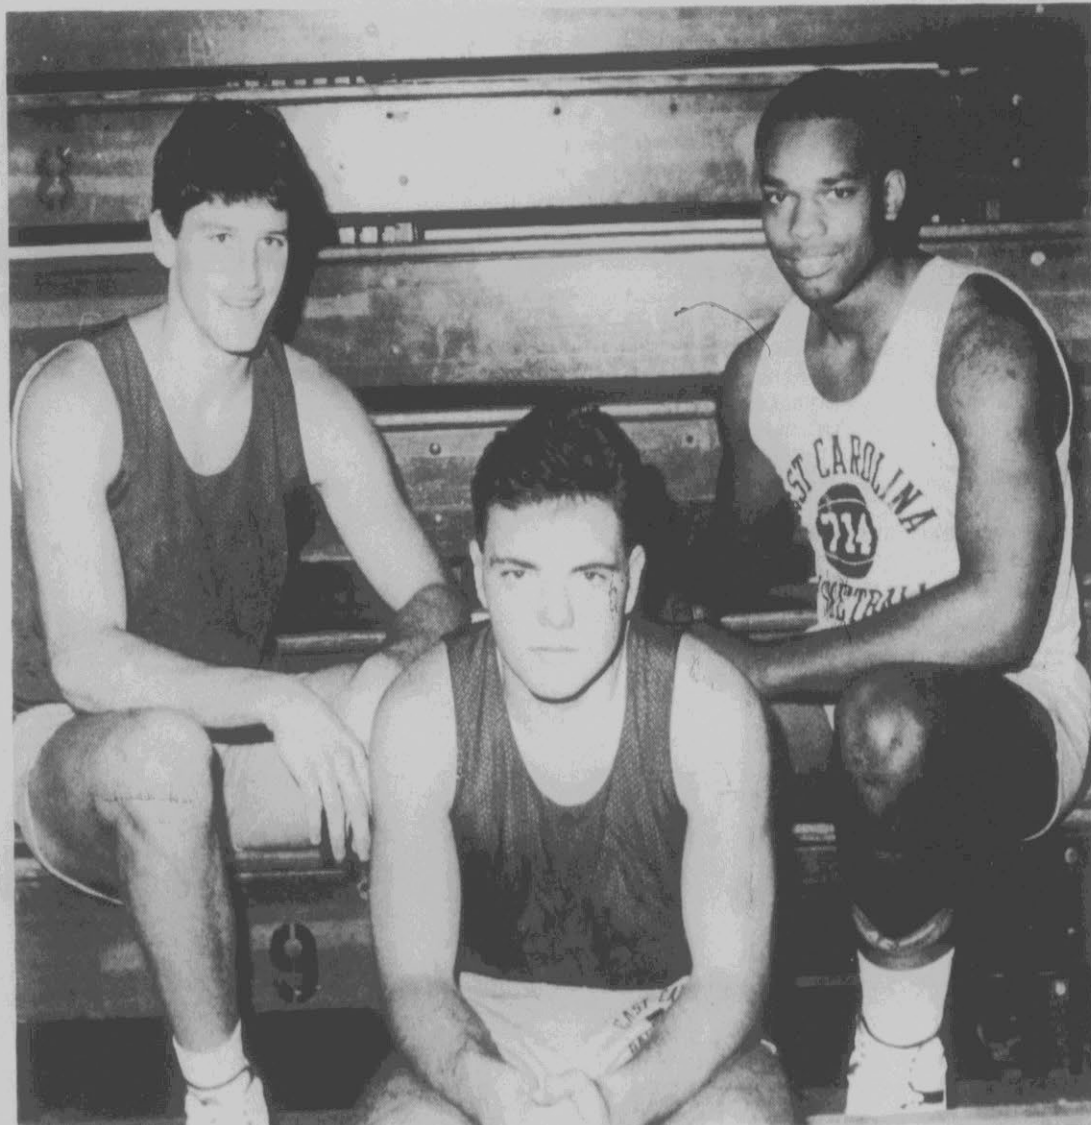

Along the way, however, a weak offense and sketchy pitching drove the Angels down in what is considered the weakest division in baseball. While the team sunk, tension in the clubhouse was on the rise.

"It wasn't as good last year as it had been in 1985 or 1986," Mauch said. "Not having Reggie Jackson or Bobby Grich may have hurt."

On Monday, the silver-haired statesman looked as relaxed as ever, tanned and sitting easily in a chair. Across the conference room was another man in a somewhat similar position — Don Zimmer, the newly hired manager of the last-place Chicago Cubs.

Mauch appeared optimistic as he talked about reversing the Angels' 75-87 finish. At age 62, he has gone through things like this before.

Few Familiar Faces Greet Only Three Players Back

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

When East Carolina basketball players Gus Hill, Jeff Kelly and Reed Lose stepped on to the floor for their first practice this season, they didn't see a whole lot of familiar faces.

They are the only three holdovers from last year's team. This season, they join first-year head coach Mike Steele and five freshman, two walk-ons and a junior college transfer to form a team to which the word young does not do justice.

And the scene the three encountered Oct. 15 on that first day of practice was, to say the least, sobering.

"You walk out there and you don't see many of the guys you started out with," said Jeff Kelly, a 5-9 junior guard from South Orange, N.J.

"There is only one guy (Hill) I started out with, along with a bunch of freshman recruits, a sophomore and a JUCO (junior college) transfer, and you look around and you go 'What happened?'"

Lose, a 6-3 sophomore from Harrisburg, Penn., said that first court appearance was a dose of reality.

"It was real strange," he said. "I thought, we've got a lot of work to do."

Indeed they do. Though the three are the only veterans on this year's team, that term might be a misnomer. Before this season, Hill had never played a game for ECU in two years due to an injury, and neither Kelly nor Lose had extensive playing experience.

So where has that left a Pirate team whose tallest player is 6-6?

At a serious disadvantage, that's where.

But for Hill, 6-3, sophomore from Fairfax, Va., one way to deal with that is a proper frame of mind.

"You approach any situation as positively as possible," he said. "You just work as hard as you can and hope things work out for you. A lot of times you don't get breaks in life."

"That's what I learned with my injury. You just have to work hard and hope things go your way. Usually people who work hard, good things happen to them."

So far, the Pirates are 1-1, with a close win over Longwood (65-57) and a crushing defeat at the hands of 10th-ranked Duke (94-45). Next up for ECU are the 4-0 Campbell Camels tonight at 7:30 p.m., followed by a Thursday road game at Maryland.

For new ECU coach Mike Steele, blending the returning players with newcomers has not been a typical transition period.

"It should be an easy transition for those guys because none of them played very much," he said. "I could see how it could be difficult if one of them had been a two-year starter or played 35 minutes a game and had a great deal of success as a player."

"But here you are looking at (a situation where) both Reed and Jeff's time has been limited and Gus hasn't had any at all. We approach them just like if they were brand new, first year players because, basically, they are."

Be that as it may, the three are the lone veterans Steele has on a team that is beyond young. Experience wise, they are still wet behind the ears.

They are young enough that leadership roles must be taken up by sophomores and a junior because there are no seniors on the team.

"I'm trying to be more of a leader," Lose said. "I sort of like the leadership role myself," Lose said. "You have to talk to the freshmen and calm them down. But then again, since I am only a sophomore, I have to calm myself down at times because I get too excited (also)."

Therein lies the rub.

"You hope that one of the older guys will come through and give you some leadership, even though he may not know your system, in how to prepare for road games, in how to practice and those things," Steele said.

"Right now no one has stepped forward to take that role. Primarily it's because none of those guys had played enough to really command the respect of the players. Right now we're in a situation where all our guys are about the same."

And that is young and inexperienced.

"We're going to be young," Hill said. "We weren't picked to win any games by some magazines, so that goes to show you that you work hard and do as good as you can and let all the negative talk be just that — talk."

In many ways, the Pirates have adopted an attitude of optimism tempered with reality.

"You play this year and keep striving to get better as a team," Kelly said. "Hey, if we went 0-28 and made it to the CAA (Colonial Athletic Association) tournament and won three ballgames, suddenly you are in the NCAA tournament."

"Then you've succeeded. Those three games are what it is all about. You just try to get better every day. If you lose, you just pick your head up and you keep going. It's very simple."

"I don't think we're going to lose every game. I don't see that happening. I think somebody will take us lightly and they'll get beat because we work extremely hard."

Boeheim's Fears Realized In Tough Start By Orange

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

The toughest start to a Syracuse basketball schedule in over a decade confirmed Coach Jim Boeheim's fears that he doesn't have two players to step into the role of role players. The Orangemen fell one Keith Smart jumper short of the national championship last season and returned three starters — the Big Three — so preseason expectations ran as high as the Carrier Dome roof. You can't get any higher than No. 1. Boeheim talked that thought down right away. "We have a whole new team," Boeheim said at the Big East media day. "The big three are back but the other two were the reason we got where we got. We have to get something out of our new people. This team's nothing like the team from last year."

The two players who graduated were Greg Monroe and Howard Triche, the Nos. 3 and 5 scorers in a balanced attack that featured averages ranging from 17.3 points to 11.8.

Monroe, the outside shooting threat, took 180 of the team's 248 3-point attempts and made 44 percent. Triche was the defensive specialist up front who averaged nearly five rebounds per game. Even more, Boeheim knew the team would miss the experience of Monroe and Triche. "The two seniors really helped the freshmen last year," he said. "They did the little things that had to be done. Scoring wasn't the point. They set screens, moved the ball, did things that aren't in the stats." Stephen Thompson has done fairly well in trying to replace Triche at small forward. With Rony Seikaly and Derrick Coleman up front, Thompson doesn't have to be that much of a force on the boards but his defense is crucial to any Syracuse success. "I'm very pleased with Stevie at small forward," Boeheim said after the Orangemen's semifinal victory over Alabama-Birmingham in the Great Alaska Shootout. "People have to realize we're a small team. The two big guys have to do a big job on the boards."

Thompson is averaging 12.3 points through Syracuse's first seven games and, with the exception of having a difficult time with Shootout MVP Sean Elliott of Arizona in the championship game, the sophomore from Los Angeles has been playing more than adequate defense. His fellow replacement from Los Angeles, Earl Duncan, is just not doing the job Boeheim so desperately needs. Duncan missed last season as a casualty of Proposition 48. He won the '2' guard job during preseason and his jumper was needed to prevent zone defenses from collapsing around Seikaly. "We don't have one man to go to for the outside shot," Seikaly said before the season. "We have some good shooters but not that one man."

Duncan has not come close. In the season-opening loss to North Carolina, Duncan went 2-for-6 from the field, 0-for-3 on 3-pointers. In the Shootout, he missed all three from the field against Alaska-Anchorage, made two of five against Alabama-Birmingham and went 0-for-5 in the championship game loss to Arizona. That is 4-for-19, 21 percent, nowhere near Monroe's 49 percent of last year or the 52 percent the rest of the team shot in the first four games. "Earl's been struggling all four games," Boeheim said after the Arizona loss. After the semifinal game of the Shootout, Seikaly publicly aired his frustration over opponents' constantly collapsing defenses when no Orangeman came through as an outside threat. Sophomore Matt Roe showed flashes of long-range success but it was always short-lived. He was 4-for-4 on 3-point shots in the first half against Arizona, but went 0-for-4 in the final 20 minutes. "In the second half, they went to the box-and-1 on Roe and that should have been to our advantage, but we took too long to adjust," Boeheim said. Roe has made 10 of 17 3-pointers and 13 of 25 from the field overall. Syracuse had better make the necessary adjustments before the Big East Conference season begins. The Orangemen returned from Alaska to the Carrier Classic, an on-campus tournament that means two victories and the start of an eight-game swing — seven at home, the eighth a road trip to Buffalo — before the conference season gets going on Jan. 5. Duncan started the home trip right, making five of seven against South Florida but then went 2-for-8 and 2-for-4 against Texas Christian and Cornell. Roe made 11 of 21 in the three games, including six of 13 3-pointers. Thompson has to continue to improve as a small forward and either Duncan or Roe will have to step up and fill the role of outside shooter or Syracuse won't have much of an opportunity to improve on last year's second-place finish in the NCAA Tournament.

Lendl Masters Masters Tennis

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivan Lendl has mastered the Masters. The world's top-ranked tennis player won the tournament a record fifth time by beating third-seeded Mats Wilander 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 Monday night at Madison Square Garden. Unlike Lendl's grueling four-set victories over Wilander in the 1987 French and U.S. Open finals, this one was a breeze. "It may have been the best match I played this year," Lendl said. "I always felt in control. If we were rallying, it was because I wanted to rally. If I came in, it was because I wanted to come in." Wilander tried to vary his bread-and-butter baseline game to keep Lendl off balance, but it didn't work. The 23-year-old Swede rushed the net 52 times, usually at the end of long rallies, but won only 40 percent of those points because Lendl kept peppering him with perfect passing shots. "If he plays this well, there's really nothing you can do," Wilander said. "I tried to mix it up, but he was just too good today."

The victory enabled Lendl to top the four Masters titles won by Ilie Nastase in the 1970s. Lendl has reached the finals eight straight times and won the last three. The victory over Wilander also gave Lendl his 70th career title, tying John McEnroe for second on the all-time list behind Jimmy Connors' 105. But Lendl said he didn't need an extra incentive to win the match. "When you're in the Masters final, you should be inspired by just being there," he said. Wilander won six of his first 13 matches against Lendl, including victories in the finals of the 1983 Australian Open and 1985 French Open. Since then, Lendl has beaten him six times in a row. "I've beaten him before in big matches, and I know I can do it again," Wilander said. "In a way, it's better that I lost because it will make me work harder. I know I have to work very hard to beat him." Wilander isn't the only player to come to that conclusion. Lendl won 74 of 81 matches and eight Grand Prix tournaments this year, including his third French and U.S. Opens. He also won $2 million in official prize money, raising his career earnings to $12.3 million. And that doesn't include the $583,200 he won in last month's made-for-television Stakes Match. What Lendl didn't win were the Australian Open and Wimbledon, the two Grand Slam titles still missing from his resume. He intends to change that in 1988, however. After taking a week off, Lendl will fly to Australia to start preparing for next month's Australian Open under the guidance of coach Tony Roche. "Tony has some definite ideas on how to improve my game," Lendl said. "Hopefully, by the Australian Open, I will have a few more shots in my repertoire."

St. Louis Upsets Tigers; Other Ranked Teams Win

By The Associated Press
With what St. Louis Coach Rich Grawer told his team it is truly an upset that it beat No. 20 Memphis State. "We're not big, we're not strong, we're not quick and we're not smart," Grawer said he told his team before the game. Way to get 'em ready, Coach, although Grawer did tell the team Monday night how he felt it could beat Memphis State for the first time in six games. "I told them that one of those things we can improve on is smartness. We did that tonight. It was a really important game for us," he said of the 55-50 victory. The key to the game was the start of the second half when St. Louis broke from a 22-22 tie with a 12-0 run as Memphis State went 9½ minutes before scoring. "They were hungry — give them credit," Memphis State Coach Larry Finch said of the Billikens. "They played far above what they have been playing."

The Billikens, 2-2, used a tough zone defense and a patient offense to hand the Tigers' their first loss in three games. "Our defense was the key. It really had them baffled," Grawer said. "We also used the clock well. We milked the clock and got the good shots, but most of all the players executed." Anthony Bonner led St. Louis with 18 points while Monroe Douglass added 12. Freshman John McLaughlin led Memphis State with 12 points. In other Top Twenty games, No. 2 Pittsburgh beat Chicago State 89-63, No. 8 Syracuse defeated Cornell 95-59, No. 11 Temple downed Massachusetts 89-71, No. 13 Purdue beat Colorado 72-54, No. 15 Michigan defeated Western Michigan 113-55, No. 16 Oklahoma downed Sam Houston State 111-69 and No. 18 Kansas beat Appalachian State 73-62. Memphis State shot just 31 percent, including nine of 21 3-pointers, while St. Louis managed 42.5 percent. "Sure, their zone looked good when we're not hitting," Finch said. "We weren't hitting, so they stayed in it. We had good shots and took good shots; they just didn't fall." Memphis State's first point of the second half came on a free throw by Marvin Alexander with 10:24 remaining. Cheyenne Gibson then made the Tigers' first field goal in 12 attempts nine seconds later. St. Louis expanded its lead to 42-28 but Memphis State went on a 13-3 run to make it 45-41 with 4½ minutes left. Bonner's three-point play and a 3-pointer by Douglass gave St. Louis a 51-42 lead with 1:56 to play. No. 2 Pittsburgh 89, Chicago St. 63 Senior Charles Smith scored a career-high 34 points and Jerome Lane had 13 points and 16 rebounds to lead 3-0 Pittsburgh. Smith was 13-for-19 from the field, grabbed 10 rebounds and blocked four shots in just 28 minutes. He outscored visiting Chicago State, 1-4, in the first half 19-18. Freshman Jason Matthews added 14 points for Pittsburgh, which led by as many as 34 points. Kenton Terrell had 17 points for Chicago State. No. 8 Syracuse 95, Cornell 59 Syracuse put the Big Red away in the first half but things got interesting in the second half when the benches emptied during a fight. Stephen Thompson scored 15 of his 21 points in the first half as the eighth-ranked Orangemen, 5-2, forced 15 turnovers and led 40-10 with just under three minutes to play. Rony Seikaly added 17 points for the Orangemen and it was the 6-foot-10 center who was the center of the fisticuffs which started with 6:53 to play and Syracuse leading 77-41 at the Carrier Dome. Seikaly was fouled on a rebound by 6-0 forward Greg Gilda of Cornell. They exchanged words and punches before both benches emptied. "If they're going to foul me, fine," Seikaly said. "But they weren't even going for the ball most of the game. They were just trying to grab me any way they could."

Gilda was ejected along with Derrick Coleman and Derek Brower of the Orangemen. Cornell Coach Mike Dement called the brawl unfortunate and said the Big Red didn't handle the deficit "very well." No. 11 Temple 89, Massachusetts 71 The old and the new sent Temple to the road victory in the conference opener for both schools. Senior Tim Perry scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds and freshman Mark Macon had 22 points, 12 on 3-pointers as the Owls used an 11-2 run at the start of the second half for a 59-38 lead with 16:32 to play. Mike Vreeswyk added 16 points and seven rebounds for 2-0 Temple. Freshman Rafer Giles scored all but two of his 26 points on 3-pointers as the Minutemen fell to 1-2. No. 13 Purdue 72, Colorado 54 Troy Lewis scored 12 of his 20 points on 3-pointers to lead the Boilermakers to their fifth victory in six games. Except for a 7-7 tie, the Boilermakers, who were outrebounded 41-31 by visiting Colorado, led throughout, including 32-22 at halftime. With the score 39-29, Purdue scored six straight points, and the closest Colorado, 1-4, could get was 64-54 with 1:20 remaining. Scott Wilke led the Buffaloes with 14 points and 13 rebounds. No. 15 Michigan 113, W. Michigan 55 Michigan and senior guard Gary Grant passed their way through the Wolverine record book. Grant set the single-game Michigan assist record with 14 and established the career mark with his 540th. The Wolverines also impressed the home crowd with a record 37 assists on the night. "We are an unselfish team," Michigan Coach Bill Frieder said. "Terry) Mills and (Mark) Hughes pass it so well for big men." Then, there's Grant. "My teammates run the floor so well," Grant said. "It would be stupid for me to drive past them when they're wide open." The Wolverines, 5-1, were obviously wide open all night. They shot 68 percent, 51 of 75, the second-best mark in school history. Glen Rice led all scorers with 32 points on 14 of 16 shooting and said the Wolverines wanted revenge for last year's loss to the Broncos, Michigan's only non-conference loss at home last season. "We didn't want to ease up on them because they beat us last year," Rice said. Michigan started the game with a 10-2 run and the first half closed with a 25-2 spurt for a 55-24 lead. Freshman forward Greg Rapp led Western Michigan, 2-2, with 15 points. No. 16 Oklahoma 111, S. H'ston St. 69 Six Oklahoma players scored in double figures as the Sooners outrebounded Sam Houston State 58-48 and forced the Bearcats into 33 turnovers. Stacey King scored 20 points and grabbed nine rebounds for Oklahoma, while Rickey Grace had 19 points, six assists, six steals and six rebounds. Oklahoma, 4-0, led 58-27 at halftime after forcing a turnover a minute. Tracy Pearson led visiting Sam Houston State, 2-2, with 22 points and 14 rebounds. No. 18 Kansas 73, Appalachian St. 62 Archie Marshall scored 10 of his 14 points in the second half as Kansas rallied for its 51st consecutive victory at Allen Field House. Marshall and reserve guard Scooter Barry scored eight points apiece during a 20-7 Kansas burst that began with 7:20 remaining and the Jayhawks trailing 55-53. Kansas, 5-2, led 37-32 at halftime and increased the margin to 46-39, but fell behind as the Mountaineers went 9-0 for a two-point lead. The Jayhawks tied the game at 55-55 and went ahead for good on a basket by Danny Manning, who led Kansas with 19 points. The Mountaineers, 3-2, were led by Kemp Phillips' 20 points.

Roby Shouldering Some Responsibility

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Dolphins' defense is shouldering much of the blame for losing most of a 27-point lead against the New York Jets, but Reggie Roby won't allow the unit to bear full responsibility. One of the NFL's top punters for the past four seasons, Roby handled kickoff duties for the first time in his pro career Monday night when Miami's Fuad Reveiz bruised a thigh during the Dolphins' 37-28 victory over the Jets. Reveiz was shaken up when he made a touchdown-saving tackle of New York's Bobby Humphery late in the first quarter. While the play helped the Dolphins, who led 27-0 at halftime, preserve a shutout through two quarters, it also opened the door for a furious Jets comeback that fell short when New York's injury-riddled defense couldn't keep Miami's offense out of the end zone. "He (Humphery) was screaming through the middle. You gotta do something to bring him down," Reveiz said. "I happened to catch him in the middle of my thigh with his knee. I thought he was a truck going through there." Enter Roby, who finished second in the AFC in punting with a 44.2-yard average last season. He admits to practicing kickoffs maybe once a week "at most," but had not kicked in a game since leaving the University of Iowa in 1983. He sent his first kickoff to the Jets' 17, and his next effort bouncing through the New York end zone. Two poor kickoffs in the third quarter, however, helped New York out of a deep hole. "If you don't have your timing down, the ball doesn't go," said Roby whose second-half kickoff sailed out of bounds at the New York 35. Four plays later, Al Toon scored on a 44-yard pass play to cut Miami's lead to 27-7. "If I'd have had good kickoffs they wouldn't have scored, added Roby, whose next kick was returned 13 yards to the midfield and led to Pat Ryan's 8-yard TD run on a fake field goal play. "The runbacks gave them great field position," Roby added. "The defense's morale is down, but with good kickoffs they would've given up maybe seven points, if that." Reveiz, who missed the extra point after Miami's third touchdown, said that under the circumstances Roby was being far too critical of himself.

Whitfield, Chicod Post Opening Wins

G.R. Whitfield opened its basketball season with a 39-38 victory over Frink Monday in junior high school action.

Alkiwan Thompson led Whitfield with 16 points while Adrian Pritchard added 10. Frink was led by Irvin Lovick with 12.

In the girls' game, Frink romped to a 62-0 win. Tiffany Thurman led Frink with 17 points while Pam Sutton added 16.

The win leaves the Whitfield boys at 1-0 and the girls at 0-1.

CHICOD — Chicod's girls took a 38-11 victory over Greenville Christian in a junior high basketball game Monday.

Chicod, 1-0, was led by Stephanie Mills with 12 points.

In the boy's game, Chicod won 43-17. Chicod, 1-0, was led by Patrick Leary, Bobby Grogan and Michael Moore.

Virginia JV's Hold Off PCC, 81-77

CHARLOTTESVILLE — Ron Price went 7-7 from three-point range en route to a game-high 32 points as the University of Virginia JV basketball team took a 81-77 win over Pitt Community College Monday night.

Virginia built up a 44-29 lead by the half but Pitt battled back to trail by four at 79-75 with 1:36 remaining.

From there, Pitt missed four straight chances to close the gap any more as Virginia was able to hold off the late charge.

Pitt falls to 2-8 and returns to action Wednesday at home against Roanoke-Chowan Technical College.

"I thought we played super defense and the offense started clicking the second half," said PCC coach Charles Coburn.

"This makes us 2-8 and I think we're better than a 2-8 team."

Paul Hollingworth suffered a knee injury in the first half and is doubtful for tomorrow's game.

Jesse Pratt scored 27 points to lead Pitt, while Jeffrey Crudup added 12 and Eric Dunn and Mike Hathaway 11 apiece.

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Guards Jeff West and Byron Dinkins scored 15 points each, lifting North Carolina-Charlotte to a 65-57 college basketball victory Monday night over Georgia Southern.

After Georgia Southern, 2-1, scored the game's first basket, UNC-Charlotte, 3-0, never trailed again.

A three-point jumper by West capped an early run of 11 consecutive points, as the 49ers moved to their largest lead, 20-8, with 12:00 left in the first half.

The Eagles pulled within 24-17 on a Jeff Sanders free throw with 8:03 left in the half, but the 49ers took a 35-31 halftime advantage.

A three-point jumper by Charles Earls pulled the Eagles to 35-34 with 19:10 remaining before the 49ers gradually pulled away.

A 12-4 run, capped by Ronnie Bellamy's three-pointer with 15:29 left, gave UNC-Charlotte a 47-38 lead.

Michael Stokes hit a layup to pull the Eagles within 55-51 at the 6:14 mark before a three-point play by West finished five answered 49er points and a 60-51 edge with 5:15 left.

Sanders led Georgia Southern with 18 points, while Stokes had 15.

Frank Persley scored 12 points for the 49ers.

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Brandt Williams scored 24 points, including two free throws with 16 seconds left, to lead North Carolina-Asheville to a 76-71 victory Monday night over Western Carolina.

Williams' two foul shots gave the Bulldogs a 74-71 lead. Western Carolina had a chance to send the game into overtime, but Robert Hill's three-point attempt came up short. Ricky Chatman scored a breakaway basket to seal the victory.

The Catamounts, which fell to 1-3, held a 35-34 halftime edge, but midway through the second half UNC-Asheville opened up a 49-40 bulge. Western Carolina rallied to close the gap to 56-55 with 7:46 remaining, but the Catamounts could get no closer.

UNC-Asheville, 3-1, received 14 points from Brent Keck and William Funderburk, while Chatman finished with 12.

Robert Hutchison led the Catamounts with 18 points and was four-of-five from the three-point range.

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Roy Brow led a balanced attack with 15 points as Virginia Tech spotted James Madison an 11-0 lead and then roared back to defeat the Dukes 91-74 in college basketball Monday night.

The Hokies improved to 3-1 while James Madison dropped to 1-4.

The Dukes scored 11 unanswered points to open the game, but the Hokies outscored James Madison 42-15 over the next 13 minutes and led 49-35 at halftime.

The Dukes got to within 51-40 with 16:51 remaining, but the Hokies pulled away and led by as many as 28 points, 86-58, with 5:18 remaining.

Backing Brow were Wally Lancaster with 14 points and Tim Anderson and Eric Sanders with 12 each. Quinton Nottingham and Sam Cannon each had 9 points for the Hokies while Greg Brink and Bimbo Coles scored 8 points apiece.

Claude Ferdinand paced the Dukes with 19 points while Kennard Winchester and Barry Brown contributed 14 each.

Virginia Tech shot 54.3 percent from the floor, connecting on 38 of 70 attempts, and was 8 of 14 from 3-point range, 57 percent.

James Madison shot only 32.1 percent from the floor, 25 of 78, and hit just 5 of 20 3-point shots.

Shrine Players Learn About Their Cause

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Butch Moses gained a spot in the Shrine Bowl by rushing for 1,500 yards and scoring 81 points for Lancaster this season.

The 6-foot, 205-pound senior found out what he and the other high school football players from South Carolina and North Carolina will be playing for Sunday during a visit to the Shriners Hospital.

With pointsettias and stuffed teddy bears in tow, Moses and some 80 other players and coaches who will play in this Saturday's Shrine Bowl in Charlotte, N.C., descended on the Greenville hospital.

Moses gently put a Barbie doll in a small car for Dana Barrett, a 3-year-old girl in a body brace who stood about knee-high Moses.

"I'll be running for them," Moses said.

"I think this is great," said Dana's mother, Anita, wife of Chester High School football coach John Barrett. "They're really helping us out."

Anita Barrett said Dana, whose legs are paralyzed, will undergo surgery this week to correct club feet. Dana is one of 48 patients at the hospital.

Next Stop: Hall Of Fame

DALLAS (AP) — You can start etching the numbers onto the Hall of Fame plaque and ship it to Cooperstown for display beginning in 1992: 14,053 at-bats, 4,256 hits, 3,562 games. Pete Rose says he's played his final game.

Rose, the Cincinnati Reds' manager, officially announced his retirement Monday at baseball's winter meetings, and said he was surprised anybody thought he'd take another at-bat.

"I thought I already retired," Rose said.

Rose never played all season, so I never saw the reason to make a formal announcement. I'm not going to throw the ball again, go to bat again. ... I'm retired."

A former Cincinnati sandlotter who was never baseball's most talented player but ranks among its greatest competitors, Rose hasn't played since striking out against San Diego reliever Rich "Goose" Gossage on Aug. 17, 1986.

One reason Rose retired without fanfare, fireworks and formal festivities was "because I didn't want a lot of home plate ceremonies. And if I wanted to thank all the Cincinnati fans who've been good to me, there'd be a whole lot more there than the 56,000 they could get in (Riverfront Stadium).

"It's not like I'm out of baseball, like they've taken the uniform off me," Rose said. "I spend twice as much time at the ballpark now as a manager as I did when I was a player, and I almost lived there when I was playing. Sometimes you play the game more as a manager than you ever did as a player."

Then, Rose laughed and said, "I'm 46. If I'm not retired, I should be."

"Sure, I miss playing, I enjoyed taking batting practice last season," he said. "But I've already played a lot longer than you guys (the media) thought I should. I've had 15,000 at-bats and caught a lot of balls."

"There's no reason for me to play because we have people who can do the things I can do today ... even if they can't do the things I could do five years ago."

There was speculation Rose might activate himself as a pinch-hitter late last season, if only to prevent him and longtime friend and Reds coach Tony Perez from going on the Hall of Fame ballot the same year. Rose reportedly fears first-ballot support for him could take away votes from Perez, his longtime teammate with the "Big Red Machine" of the 1970s.

A player becomes eligible for the Hall of Fame five years after playing his final game and Rose and Perez last played in 1986.

Rose had a .303 career batting average in a 24-season playing career that began with the Reds in 1963 and, after stops at Philadelphia and Montreal, ended back in Cincinnati as a player-manager. He got his last hit on Aug. 14, 1986, a single off Greg Minton of the San Francisco Giants.

On Sept. 11, 1985, Rose singled to left-center off Eric Show of the Padres for hit No. 4,192, surpassing Ty Cobb's career hits record that at one time was considered unreachable.

Rose was voted Rookie of the Year in 1963, Most Valuable Player in 1973 and MVP of the 1975 World Series, which the Reds won in seven games over the Boston Red Sox. He was selected to the National League All-Star team 16 times, took part in seven NL playoffs and six World Series.

He retired with major league records for hits, at-bats, games and singles (3,205) and ranked second in doubles (746) and fourth in runs (2,165). His 44-game hitting streak in 1978 established a modern NL record.

Meanwhile, Rose said the Reds will listen to offers for Dave Parker but aren't shopping the former All-Star right fielder. Parker, 36, hit .253 with 26 homers and 97 RBI, but slumped badly in the second half of the season.

"If somebody calls about him, we'll listen," Rose said. "If someone calls us about (Reds managing partner) Marge Schott, we'll listen."

That brought laughter from media members since Rose and several other Reds' front office officials have had several well-publicized run-ins with Schott. Batting coach Billy DeMars and former scouting chief Larry Doughty quit late in the season, citing front-office interference.

If he Reds deal Parker, Rose hinted the team would seek prospects in return since two promising young outfielders, Tracy Jones and Paul O'Neill, will play more in 1988.

The media guide's biographical sketch of the head coach begins, "The fire still burns brightly for Tom Landry in his 28th season as head coach of the Dallas Cowboys."

The only Bright side to this strike-marred season for the highly successful Landry is the dissatisfaction of owner Bum Bright, who said if he had to do it over again, he might not have bought the team.

"I'm very disappointed," Bright said after the Cowboys lost Sunday at home against the hapless Atlanta Falcons, who have 3-9 record.

That left the Cowboys with a 5-7 record and headed toward a second straight losing season after 22 consecutive winning seasons.

Only the cheerleaders are looking good.

"It doesn't seem like we've got anybody in charge that knows what they're doing, other than Tex," said Bright, who put together a limit partnership which purchased the club in the spring of 1984.

"This is the lowest point in my career, which has been 38 years," Tex Schramm, the general manager, said. "Obviously, something isn't right. When you lose to teams with the worst record, it becomes difficult. Sure, I'm embarrassed. When we were an expansion team, we lost games. But we were going forward."

It's a good thing Schramm, a member of the executive committee of the NFL Management Council, pushed to have games during the Players Association strike or things could be worse. Two of Dallas' victories and only one of their losses were achieved by replacement Cowboys.

DALLAS (AP) — The Houston Astros promoted Bill Wood to general manager Monday, filling the two-month vacancy and putting him in charge of pumping new life into the team.

Wood, the Astros' assistant general manager since July 1985, had served as interim GM following Dick Wagner's resignation Oct. 14. Wood has worked for the team for 11 years.

"This is a thing a baseball man dreams about," said Wood, 46. "I know many people say the winter meetings are a boring time, but you'll excuse me if I say this is exciting."

The announcement was made by John McMullen, the Astros' chairman of the board. McMullen interviewed 15 candidates for the job and was criticized for not filling the position sooner.

"I thought it was a fairly reasonable time," McMullen said. "I did it at my leisure."

Wood Promoted To Astros' GM

Wood will try to revive the Astros, who won the National League West in 1986 but slumped to 76-86 and third place last year.

"It was not frustrating," Wood said, describing the wait to see if he would get the job. "I had things to do as interim general manager."

"This has not slowed us down," he said. "Teams still wanted to talk to us."

Wood broke into baseball in 1969 as assistant general at Class AAA Albuquerque.

South African Golf Event Didn't Help All

By SCOTT OSTLER

(c) 1987, Los Angeles Times
How about that Ian Woosnam, folks?

The plucky little Welsh golfer took the big enchilada Sunday. He cashed the only check in the winner-take-all Million Dollar Challenge in Sun City, South Africa.

A big day for the little guy, and another bad day for a lot of black people.

"Everyone dreams of being a millionaire," Woosnam said, hefting his check. "If the tax man is not harsh on me, I might have done it."

Hold it, Ian. Everyone dreams of being a millionaire?

I dream of being a millionaire, certainly. After taxes, I'd settle for being a thousandaire. But in some parts of the world, especially in South Africa, people don't have time to dream that dream.

Instead, the black people there are busy dreaming of being able to vote and being able to get out of prison before they reach puberty.

South Africa has this thing called apartheid, which is defined in Webster's as, "An official policy of racial segregation in the Republic of South Africa."

The policy works fine until someone objects, then it gets sticky. Something like 25,000 anti-apartheid people are in jail in South Africa. Several thousands of them, by some estimates, are not yet teen-agers. All of them are dreamers. None of them are millionaires.

But what's this got to do with sports? And why pick on Ian Woosnam, who never threw anybody in jail?

Sports is the toy department, right? An island of fun in a sea of life's troubles, an escape for the world-weary. Why ruin a perfectly good diversion such as sports by turning it into a political tool?

To answer the last question first: Sports is already a political tool in South Africa. Guys such as Ian Woosnam, by playing sports there, are hammering away, shoring up apartheid against the storm of outside opinion. They are as political as a presidential candidate.

Because South Africa is the only nation in the world where apartheid is an official policy, the United Nations slapped a cultural moratorium on the country in 1980. Entertainers and athletes are asked not to sing, box, golf, run or play ball there. To do so, the reasoning goes, lends validity to a system the rest of the world views as wrong. It helps keep the system going.

To counteract this boycott, South Africa has gone to the jugular. Or the wallet. Same difference. They dangle huge sums of money to big-name athletes.

"The prices are higher in South Africa, per performance, than any place in the world," says Arthur Ashe, former Wimbledon champion and current co-chairman (with Harry Belafonte) of Artists and Athletes Against Apartheid. "We call it a 'guilt premium.' Anyone foolish or brave enough to go can negotiate a guilt premium, over and above the standard market value."

SUGAR RAYS'S GIFT

GRAMBLING, La. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard may be retired from the ring but he still is issuing challenges.

Leonard pledged a gift of $250,000 to the Athletic Foundation at Grambling State University. Leonard, a member of the foundation's board of directors, then challenged alumni of the school, former Grambling athletes and others to contribute.

He extended special challenges to two men: owner George Steinbrenner of the N.Y. Yankees and former Green Bay Packer star Willie Davis.

So, the boycott actually drives up the bounty for the few who choose to ignore it.

Other than resulting in bonanza payday for the Ian Woosnams of the world, is the boycott effective?

"Cultural isolation is one of the most powerful non-violent weapons that we have," Ashe says. "It's political, economic, spiritual and moral persuasion."

It's serious stuff.

"This conversation is probably being taped," Ashe told me when I phoned him. "I know this phone (in his office) is bugged. The CIA and BOSS (South Africa's Bureau of State Security, now known as the Department of National Security) share intelligence secrets. ... When I'm talking to them (anti-apartheid people in Africa), if I'm talking about something they can't read (in the newspapers, because of news censorship), the phone suddenly will be cut off."

The boycott has been generally successful. Hundreds of American artists and athletes have signed pledges that, as Steve Van Zandt, Bruce Springsteen and dozens of other stars sang proudly, "I-I-I ain't gonna play Sun City."

However ...

Some athletes, notably from the worlds of tennis and golf, ignore the boycott.

Tennis star Brad Gilbert has played in South Africa twice in three years. Mike Weaver boxed there a couple weeks ago. And, in the Million Dollar Challenge, American golfers Lanny Wadkins and Curtis Strange were in the eight-man field, after playing in another made-for-South Africa event the week before.

"I think Bradley is against apartheid and the conditions there," Gilbert's agent David Baglibter was quoted as saying in USA Today. "I'm not sure he thinks that sports should be politicized."

It's good to know Gilbert's stand on apartheid. I can hardly wait to hear his stand on other issues. Child abuse — good or bad?

"Golfers all have their heads in the sand, all of 'em," Ashe says. "They are the most apolitical bunch of athletes I know. They're all 5-11, blond, went to Oklahoma; they're all right-wing Republicans. As a group, they don't give a damn."

On the current United Nations list of sports people who ignore the ban, there are 60 male and female golfers.

Golf has never been a great social leveler, of course. In 1943, the PGA, pushed by a delegation from Michigan, passed an amendment making PGA events white-only. The amendment was removed in 1950 after two black golfers sued and settled out of court.

The Masters, the world's showcase of golf, didn't exactly leap into integration, unless you count the black caddies and clubhouse attendants.

Again, you can't blame current stars such as Wadkins and Strange for ancient history. And maybe they truly believe in the old line of reasoning.

"In the early '70s, it appeared South Africa wanted to use sports as an ice breaker," Ashe says. "A lot of people thought that might presage loosening of apartheid laws in other areas. That never happened."

And the old "I'm-not-political" rationale no longer washes.

If you go to South Africa, you have leaped off the fence. You are scoring points for one side, and guess which side?

This is easy for me to say, of course. I-I-I-I ain't gonna type Sun City. I won't cover sports events there. But then, nobody is offering me a million bucks to drop in for a weekend and write a couple breezy stories on Ian Woosnam's backswing.

Still, do guys such as Wadkins and Strange need the money? They were the two leading money winners on the PGA tour this year.

Others, on principal, have pledged not to go to. Craig Stadler, who once played in South Africa, has signed the pledge. John McEnroe, after listening to Ashe, turned down $1 million to show up in Sun City with his racket.

"McEnroe decided not to go, on principal," Ashe says. "To go would lend legitimacy to what they're doing down there. ... With a couple exceptions, no one has resisted (the boycott) after they've had the situation explained to them. ... I never say 'Don't go.' I say, 'Let me explain the situation, you make up your own mind.' If I can sit down for 10 minutes with anyone slightly receptive to rational thinking. ..."

Most decide not to go. But the friendly sports promoters from Sun City always seem to find a enough non-political jocks to put on a slam-bang sports event.

Too bad.

How many times have you heard someone gripe about the big money earned by athletes? "Geez, they're not curing cancer," the gripers gripe.

Now, when they have a chance to help cure a cancer, some golfers are too busy playing golf.

Senate Budget Panel Chairman Bowing Out

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Budget Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles of Florida announced Monday he will retire because of job "burnout," becoming the third Senate committee chairman to announce he will not run for re-election in 1988.

"I just wasn't looking forward to another six years in the Senate," Chiles said at a news conference. "Maybe at some stage there is a little burnout."

The three-term senator said he wasn't worried about competition in his re-election campaign, and his health remained good despite open-heart surgery two years ago.

"I think our campaign was in very good shape," Chiles said. "It was the next six years that I was concerned about, not the campaign."

Chiles, 57, is the youngest of the three Democratic senators not seeking re-election, all of them committee chairmen. The others are Sens. John Stennis, 86, of Mississippi, head of the Appropriations Committee, and William Proxmire, 72, of Wisconsin, chairman of the Banking Committee.

Republicans Paul Trible of Virginia, Dan Evans of Washington and Robert Stafford of Vermont also have announced plans to leave the Senate.

Chiles had already raised $1.3 million for his re-election campaign in spite of a $100 limit on contributions to his campaign, said Dennis Beal, Chiles' budget spokesman. The campaign was already looking at ways to return the unspent money, he said.

With Chiles out of the race, several Democrats were expected to consider bids for their party's nomination, including Rep. Buddy MacKay, who unsuccessfully ran for the Senate in 1980, Rep. Dan Mica, Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter and Florida House Speaker Jon Mills. Rep. Bill Nelson had been mentioned as a possible contender, but his office said he would not run for the Senate.

On the GOP side, Rep. Connie Mack had already entered the race against Chiles. After Mack came forward recently and said he had smoked marijuana, Chiles admitted he too had tried the drug.

"I think I could've beaten him," said Mack, declining to speculate on how the picture would change in Chiles' absence. "This has all happened very quickly. We'll just have to see how things play out."

Chiles entered the U.S. Senate in 1971, after earlier serving 12 years in the Florida legislature. He won the 1980 statewide election after touring the state on foot, and becoming known as "Walkin' Lawton."

He repeated that campaign tactic as recently as this past Thanksgiving, when he says doubts about staying in the Senate came to a head.

"I recently had an opportunity to go home and walk a little in my state ... listen to my inner voice," he said. What he found out, he said, was he had a "different feeling" for the job.

"I didn't have the enthusiasm for it, and I think the people of Florida are entitled to that," he said. In addition, he said, "the Senate has changed," becoming more complex and bureaucratic.

Chiles' congenial manner sometimes has belied a risk-taking politician.

Chiles tried but failed three years ago to oust Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia. Chiles had been mentioned as a possible successor to Byrd, who has not announced whether he will seek another term in that post.

Byrd released a statement Monday praising Chiles for "hard work and the courage of his convictions."

"He deserves national gratitude for his untiring efforts on two of this country's worst problems — the budget deficit and the flow of illegal drugs across our borders," Byrd said.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., senior Republican on the Budget Committee, said his friend's decision to leave was "a total surprise."

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., said he was "shocked."

"We're losing an able legislator and I'm also losing a close friend," said Hatfield.

Chiles took over the chairmanship of the budget committee this year, after toiling for six years in the minority when the Republicans controlled the Senate. Chiles, a moderate, proposed reducing the deficit with tax increases and spending cuts.

But he was frustrated by months of stalemate, and then he participated in the four weeks of closed-door talks that produced a budget pact with the White House.

"It's been a horrendous year, no doubt about that," Chiles said.

With Chiles' retirement, Tennessee Sen. Jim Sasser would appear to be next in line to become chairman of the Budget Committee if the Democrats retain control of the Senate in the 1988 elections.

Sasser, also a political moderate, ranks behind Democrats Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and Bennett Johnston of Louisiana in seniority.

But both of them already hold committee chairmanships which they would have to relinquish to take the helm of the budget panel.

Chiles said he intended to keep serving as budget chairman through next year, and then would spend time with his family and figure out his next task.

"I think there's something out there for me," he said. "I don't have anything specific in mind right now."

Mayoral Candidates In Runoff

By KATHLEEN MACLAY
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A mayoral election left undecided when no candidate won a majority in November headed into a runoff today between two men who reported raising $3 million for their campaigns.

A poll showed state Assemblyman Art Agnos leading 16-year city Supervisor John Molinari by a 3-1 margin. The poll, published Nov. 30 by the San Francisco Examiner, showed Agnos with 56 percent to Molinari's 18 percent.

About 173,000 people, or 45 percent of the city's registered voters, were expected to turn out today, barring bad weather.

The winner will succeed Mayor Dianne Feinstein, a Democrat who by law cannot seek a third term.

The campaign has been the most expensive in the city's history, with finance reports showing Molinari raised $1.6 million and Agnos $1.4 million.

A field of 11 candidates was whittled to two in a Nov. 3 election that gave Agnos 48 percent of the vote and Molinari second place with 25 percent. Molinari opted to call for a runoff even though some of his closest supporters urged him to abandon the race.

Molinari, 52, had run on his reputation as a moderate city supervisor this summer and fall in the non-partisan mayor's race, but after the November election he adopted a strategy of appealing to disaffected conservative voters.

Molinari, a Republican-turned-Democrat, then got the endorsement of the county Republican Party, which some have joked was the kiss of death in a city with strong liberal, Democratic and gay political groups.

Agnos, a 49-year-old former social worker and Democrat, stressed leadership and offered voters a free, 82-page "Getting Things Done" paperback that outlines his ideas for solving the city's problems.

Molinari accused Agnos of having expensive programs at a time when the city has a projected budget deficit of $87.4 million for the next fiscal year. City Controller John Farrell has said the city must find savings or lay off up to 1,300 city employees, because it cannot legally run a deficit.

Agnos opposed basing the battleship USS Missouri in San Francisco, a Navy proposal denounced by anti-nuclear weapons activists. Molinari sided with supporters who argue basing the ship here will revitalize a once-thriving ship-repair industry.

Both candidates said they would lobby for more money to fight AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

War Crimes Papers Said Missing

NEW YORK (AP) — Previously sealed documents missing from the United Nations War Crimes Commission apparently vanished soon after they were filed after World War II, the director of the U.N. archives says.

"We've had no time to determine how they disappeared," said the archives director, Alf Erlandsson.

"Now, we'll see if we can reconstruct what happened."

Of the 8,100 newly opened files, 433 have disappeared, said Erlandsson.

Israeli officials, involved with the archives on a daily basis since war crimes allegations against former U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim surfaced last year, were reportedly stunned by the news.

"It means that vital information concerning the greatest criminals in history may have been destroyed," said Israel's U.N. ambassador, Benjamin Netanyahu.

Some of the records stored at the U.N.'s headquarters, particularly on the reel of microfilm containing Yugoslavia's Waldheim file, were missing in blocks of up to six consecutive documents, the New York Post reported today.

"It's very, very difficult to give any real explanation," said Erlandsson, who suggested "they must have disappeared when the records were filed" in the late 1940s.

Erlandsson said officials learned files were missing in the summer of 1986 when they began microfilming the aging records.

According to Erlandsson, the missing records, all involving accusations of atrocities by Germans, include:

- 123 of the 2,231 files submitted by France;
- 51 of the 672 files submitted by Britain;

- 26 of the 1,563 files submitted by Poland;
- 20 of the 561 files submitted by Yugoslavia;
- 2 of the 258 files submitted by the United States;
- an undetermined number of files submitted by Belgium.

Because the files are not cataloged numerically, it was not immediately possible to determine what was missing.

Netanyahu said the files might be retrievable "from other sources," since the U.N. records are summaries of documents in various national archives.

Opposition Leaders Divided On Strike Goals

By PIERRE-YVES GLASS
Associated Press Writer
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Opposition leaders called for another general strike today but disagreed over its aims. Some demanded the junta step down, while others sought reinstatement of the independent Electoral Council.

On Monday, a hastily arranged general strike closed businesses in the Port-au-Prince capital of 1 million and many factories operated at reduced capacity with absenteeism running as high as 70 percent in some cases.

Radio Metropole, the only radio station still broadcasting news, said the strike was largely ignored in Cap Haitien, a port city on the north coast and the country's second-largest population center.

But it said the strike was partly successful in St. Marc, Hinche and Port-de-Paix and had paralyzed Gonaives, the nation's fourth-largest city.

No violence was reported in any of the cities, as soldiers and police patrolled the streets on foot and in trucks.

The government and opposition leaders differed on the effectiveness of the work stoppage, called to protest a wave of violence that stopped the election Nov. 29 and left at least 34 people dead and 75 wounded.

The Electoral Council, which canceled the balloting because of the violence, was immediately disbanded by the military dominated provisional government, led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

Although Namphy later offered to appoint a new council, five of the nine organizations asked to nominate new council members refused.

Opponents of the junta blamed it for allowing — and in some cases abetting — the bloody rampage by thugs thought to be former members of the Tonton Macoutes, a private army organized by Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier.

Jean-Claude Duvalier, who succeeded his father, fled the country during an uprising on Feb. 7, 1986, ending nearly 30 years of family dictatorship. The junta led by Namphy has ruled as a provisional government ever since.

Namphy has promised to hand over power to an elected president Feb. 7, 1988, but opponents charge he hopes to stack a new Electoral Council so that it favors him or his hand-picked presidential candidate.

"We consider the strike a total success," said Louis Dejoie II, one of four major presidential candidates in the aborted election.

An official of the Ministry of Information disagreed.

"It is clear that the strike today (Monday) was not a success," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Although "most businesses were closed, the strike today was not like the strikes we're used to seeing."

The strike, endorsed by all four major presidential candidates, was called by the Christian Democratic Party and several key labor organization.

But the strike backers had varied goals and deadlines.

Some sought a two-day strike ending today to demand reinstatement of the Electoral Council. Others insisted the strike continue until the junta resigns.

The center-left coalition led by presidential candidate Bernard Gourgue on Monday called the strike "a necessary sacrifice to protest the crimes of the Macoutes with the complicity of the CNG (government)."

Also Monday, a second major union, the Federation of Syndicated Workers, joined the Autonomous Central of Haitian Workers in supporting the strike until the elections council is reinstated.

They are considered two of Haiti's largest three unions.

World Banking Deposits Favor Japan, Fund Says

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Japan dominated world banking in the first half of this year, with people from other countries more than tripling the money they put into Japanese banks, the International Monetary Fund reports.

The amount of foreign deposits rose from $32 billion between January and June 1986 to $110 billion in the same period this year, according to the fund's monthly "IMF Memorandum."

U.S. banks' inflow of deposits amounted to only $17 billion, down from $24 billion in the first half of 1986, the fund reported.

It said much of the money going to U.S. and Japanese banks came from West Germany, Switzerland and Britain.

In 1984 and 1985, deposits in the United States were larger than those in Japan. But the U.S. share did not dominate the market as was the case this year with deposits in Japan. They accounted for nearly nearly half of all the amounts taken in by banks of the industrial countries during the first six months of 1987 — $239 billion.

"Net flows from international banks (to Japan) surged to $47 billion in the first half of 1987, from $8 billion a year earlier," the IMF said.

"A substantial portion of those funds was recycled immediately to finance the purchase of external assets" by the Japanese, such as art, real estate, overseas factories, stocks and the U.S. Treasury bonds issued to cover the federal budget deficit.

Edward J. Lincoln, a research associate at the Brookings Institution, said the net increase of Japanese holdings abroad for the period is shown by the item that experts call the country's "surplus on current account." According to the IMF, that amounted to $44 billion for the first six months of this year, up from $36 billion in 1986.

It added that Japan's current account surplus, supplemented by what Japan absorbed from banks elsewhere, was greater than the value of the assets that the country purchased abroad, by $27 billion. That amount went into Japan's international reserves, bringing these to $64 billion.

Lincoln said Japanese reserves of dollars are high in part because the country's central bank bought huge amounts in an attempt to prop up the international price of the dollar.

"It's still doing that," Lincoln said.

"There's not much effect, and it costs money, because the value of those dollars has been going down after the Japanese buy them, but the bank feels an obligation to Japanese exporters. If it didn't buy dollars, exporters might blame it for the drop in the value of the dollar and the rise in the price of the yen."

A declining dollar makes it harder for Japanese exporters to sell their goods in the United States and easier for Americans to sell in Japan.

The IMF said the huge growth in money going into Japanese banks can be explained partly by the Japanese government's approval last December of a new system of offshore banking, with 181 financial firms licensed to take part. Experts said this move made possible a big growth in deposits of what are called "Euro-yen" — accumulations of Japanese currency outside the control of Japanese bank regulators.

John Williamson, an adviser to the fund, said a rush to deposit money in a new reserve currency is normal.

"People in other countries build up their deposits in yen because it's convenient to have them, and also in this case some of it may be speculation on a rise in the value of the yen," he said.

Gunman Goes On Rampage

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A gunman robbing a finance company in a downtown office building today killed at least eight people and wounded several before plunging to his death from an 11th-floor window, police said.

An ambulance official said the gunman "lost his cool" during a robbery of the Telecom Credit Co-op office in Melbourne, Australia's second largest city.

It was not immediately clear why the gunman fell to his death, or exactly how many people had been injured in the shooting.

An earlier report by the Australian Associated Press put the death toll at 11. There was no immediate explanation for the discrepancy in the death tolls.

'Three Men And A Baby' Tops Slow Movie Week

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Three

Men and a Baby" brought in $8.4 million at the nation's box offices to win a slow weekend in which would-be movie-goers turned to shopping for holiday gifts or studying for final exams.

The Paramount holiday travel nightmare comedy "Trains, Planes and Automobiles" finished second last weekend, with $5 million. "Fatal Attraction," also from Paramount, earned $3.04 million for third place. Walt Disney's "Cinderella," earned $3.02 million for fourth, chased by "Running Man" with $2.8 million. "Nuts," the Warner Bros. film starring Barbra Streisand, came in sixth with $2.4 million. "Flowers In The Attic" finished seventh with $1.4 million, followed by "Baby Boom," "Dirty Dancing," and "Hello Again," all earning less than $1 million.

The box office gross is determined by the amount in tickets a movie sells during the weekend, a much stronger sales period than the rest of the week. Studios use the weekend box office to determine how well a movie is doing. Here are the top films for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations Co., with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, number of weeks in release and estimated production costs. 1. "Three Men and a Baby," Buena Vista, $8.4 million, 1,006 screens, $8,376 per screen, $25 million, two weeks, n-a.

2. "Planes, Trains and Automobiles," Paramount, $5 million, 1,118 screens, $4,534 per screen, $17 million, second week, n-a. 3. "Fatal Attraction," Paramount, $3.04 million, 1,401 screens, $2,173 per screen, $114.2 million, 12 weeks, $21 million. 4. "Cinderella," Buena Vista, $3.02 million, 1,657 screens, $1,825 per screen, $18.7 million, three weeks, $2 million. 5. "Running Man," Tri-Star, $2.8 million, 1,689 screens, $1,708 per screen, $29 million, four weeks, n-a.

6. "Nuts," Warner Bros., $2.4 million, 566 screens, $4,250 per screen, $14.5 million, three weeks, n-a. 7. "Flowers In The Attic," New World, $1.4 million, 1,094 screens, $1,323 per screen $11.9 million, three weeks, n-a. 8. "Baby Boom," MGM-UA, $822,636, 892 screens, $921 per screen, $21.8 million, nine weeks, $20 million. 9. "Dirty Dancing" Vestron, $785,662, 995 screens, $780 per screen, $49.6 million, 16 weeks, $6 million. 10. "Hello Again," Buena Vista, $723,088, 1,051 screens, $688 per screen, $18.1 million, fifth week, n-a.

Author Changes Her Ideas About Sexual Liberation

By GUNILLA FARINGER
Associated Press Writer
COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Fifteen years after she first attacked marriage and family, author Suzanne Broegger has become a mother who advocates fidelity and says AIDS is a consequence of the promiscuity that she once helped to promote.

In "Deliver Us From Love," published in 1973, Broegger presented sexually and intellectually liberated women. It was translated into 13 languages.

As a result of the book, the author became something of a cult figure, aided by her eccentric style of dress and her tall, stately figure.

She lives in a converted schoolhouse in a tiny Danish village, but also has a one-room refuge for visits to Copenhagen.

Seated in her black and smoke-blue apartment with a Modigliani painting over a bed covered with silk sheets and a leopard skin, the 42-year-old writer talked about her ideas and work.

Although she objects to being defined as writing mainly about sex, she admits regarding it as a central factor in life. "It's sexuality that makes the world go around. It's the very motor for all development," she said.

"It is both what makes people reproduce and the Earth's population to carry on, but it is also the very motor that makes us grow and develop as human beings."

"Deliver Us From Love" is a humorous, combative look at the concepts of nuclear family and traditional sex roles, with philosophical and historical reflections on the Western concept of marriage and love.

"When 'Deliver Us From Love' was written, it was symptomatic of that time, when love and sexuality in a way were separated from each other. I think it was necessary," she said.

"I experienced family life in the 1950s, when I grew up, as a very unsatisfactory place, especially for women. I think it was necessary for women to break out, but the costs have been big."

Her ideas changed, though, in her later books. She began striving for a fuller life, and has been inspired by Eastern religions. Broegger lived several years in Thailand during her teen-age years, and still has an interest in Buddhism.

Rebellious even in her literary form, the style of her nine books is a protest against traditional distinctions between fiction, essay and autobiography and the books emerge as seemingly autobiographical episodes written in comical, colorful prose.

Her 1984 book "Ja" (Yes) depicts people, situations, places and impressions in many different parts of the world. It is here that Broegger changes course and re-evaluates the ideas put forward in "Deliver Us From Love."

At one level, it is the story of a failed relationship. On another, it is a story of a woman finding herself, reaching an insight about a fuller life.

"It is 'yes' to what everybody probably searches for, to find one's identity in harmony with nature and the universe, and feel one is not just a means for other people and interests," she said.

"I think we need to learn something from the Eastern traditions. Our own concepts of wholeness are very broken up. Relations have been split, both among some concepts, and concretely, the relations in the family and between the sexes, and parents and children."

Broegger, who lives in a common-law marriage with a university professor, became a mother last year. "The problem is that one is always totally defined by what one rebels against. For me, the goal is to liberate oneself from that either-or," she said.

The latest Broegger-related debate was over her opinions on acquired immune deficiency syndrome. In an article in a literary journal, she blamed the lifestyle of male homosexuals for the disease.

"I don't think AIDS happened by chance. It is not strange that there would have to be some biological consequences of the way we have practiced sexuality in the past 20 years," she said.

"I doubt that sexual liberation really is something to strive for. It was necessary at that time, but I think there has to be a balance between liberation, expansion of the norms, and a tightening again."

"If we totally break off sexuality from its context, it will have consequences. But I couldn't have foreseen that it would be AIDS, I think it is too rough of a consequence," she said.

Smirnoff Laughed All Way To U.S. Immigration Office

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Yakov Smirnoff says the biggest laugh he ever got was when he arrived in America 10 years ago and, unable to speak a word of English, told immigration officials in Russian he wanted to be a comedian.

He was nearly sent back to the Soviet Union on the next plane after the interpreter, groping for the right translation of comedian, came up with "party organizer." For a moment, the immigration people thought he was an organizer for the Communist Party.

Smirnoff, who was sworn in as an American citizen at the Statue of Liberty ceremonies last July 4, has gotten his wish. He's headlined in Las Vegas, made regular appearances on ABC's "Good Morning America," been in five movies and stars in the syndicated series "What a Country!" He has performed at the White House and occasionally supplies President Reagan with Russian jokes.

Smirnoff is also the author of a new book of humor called "America on Six Rubles a Day."

It took Smirnoff six months to learn to get by in English. "I walked into a television studio and said I was an immigrant from Russia," he said. "I told two jokes. I got a good response."

"It took four or five years before I could make a living as a comedian. I worked as a bartender and told jokes in the bar, which gave me my first audience. I know how funny I was by how many tips I got."

On the cover of his book, Smirnoff holds up a fake "Russian Express" credit card. The bottom of the card says, "Don't leave home," a take-off on the American Express motto, "Don't leave home without it."

The summit meeting, the arms reduction treaty and other changes in American-Soviet relations have caused Smirnoff to change his humor.

"Gorbachev is becoming so popular now that I'm making White House jokes instead of Russian jokes," he said. "I've had to readjust my jokes about the KGB and Russian women. I say Gorbachev wants to replace the hammer and sickle on the Soviet flag with a power drill and a Weed Whacker."

"His wife, Raisa, is coming because she wants to see all the Russian ballet stars — who're all here. Gorbachev promises to keep his ships out of the Persian Gulf if the U.S. will guarantee to keep Raisa out of Bloomingdales."

He said people are curious about the Soviet Union and that about 30 minutes of his act is spent answering questions.

Smirnoff left the Soviet Union with his parents in 1977 when he finally got the visa he had applied for two years earlier.

For a strip and end play to succeed, you usually have to eliminate the key suit or suits completely. However, British author Albert Dormer discovered many years ago that you can work a partial strip successfully.

Four spades was a popular contract when this hand was played in a duplicate pair event. At almost every table, West led a high diamond, then shifted to the jack of hearts. Declarer sooner or later led a club toward his hand and tried to guess the position. As the cards lay, much anguish was expended on a no-win situation, and declarer ended up losing two tricks in each minor.
At one table, declarer brought home the contract, and there was nothing the defenders could do about it—it was simply a matter of excellent technique reaping its just reward.
Declarer won the ace of hearts and immediately ruffed a heart. After crossing to the jack of trumps, he ruffed another heart. Then he drew trumps and exited with a diamond.
Upon winning the ace of diamonds, West was faced with a prospect of losing plays. He had no more major-suit cards, and a diamond lead obviously was death. But a club shift was no better—it insured that declarer lost no more than one club trick.

Note that this line did not guarantee success. The hearts might have been 4-4, in which case West would still have had a safe exit. But the odds favored a 5-3 break, and the fact that East had bid the suit enhanced that prospect. And the club finesse, in light of the opening bid, was at best an iffy proposition.
