Accord Fate Underlines Superpower Differences

MOSCOW (AP) — The government is certain to approve the superpower arms accord because it already has cleared hurdles in the Kremlin, in contrast to the United States, where Senate ratification faces opposition. Apart from its immediate effect of scrapping intermediate-range nuclear missiles, the treaty signed Tuesday by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev gave a glimpse of how the Soviet government operates. Under the Soviet Constitution, treaties must be ratified by the Supreme Soviet, a nominal parliamentary body referred to in the state-run media as the highest authority in the nation. Its 1,500 deputies meet twice a year, and their next session is expected in late spring next year.

Historic Arms Pact Signed Gorbachev Says Citizens Favor Better Relations

By BARRY SCHWEID

AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev met with senior congressional leaders at the Soviet Embassy today in advance of new summit talks with President Reagan expected to focus on the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

The Soviet leader told lawmakers in an ornate embassy salon that ordinary citizens in both their countries favor improved relations.

"If that is not perceived properly, this process will not have the necessary impetus," Gorbachev said of the drive for arms control agreements and other examples of superpower cooperation.

"It will develop in a painful way, and that should not be the case," said the Soviet Communist Party general secretary.

Gorbachev declared that the United States and Soviet Union should congratulate one another on the signing Tuesday of a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

"I have familiarized myself with the initial reaction in the world and I can see that it has had major repercussions in the world," he said, seated he sat across a long table from House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and a handful of other Democratic and Republican congressional leaders.

Gorbachev invited the House and Senate leaders to the embassy after his hopes of addressing a joint meeting of Congress were scotched by conservatives. Several of his congressional critics threatened a demonstration on the House floor if the Soviet leader appeared.

Some of the legislators said in advance they would question Gorbachev about human rights and Afghanistan.

Senators who sat across from Gorbachev will help decide the fate of the missile ban treaty when the Senate votes on ratification next spring. And the

August Coup Leader Arrested

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Renegade Col. Gregorio Honasan, leader of a bloody August coup attempt, was captured today during a raid in suburban Manila, the government announced. Presidential spokesman Teodoro Benigno told The Associated Press that four or five truckloads of soldiers arrested Honasan at about 8 p.m. at a home in Valle Verde, a subdivision in suburban Pasig. State-run television and radio said Honasan was arrested at the home of Juan Guillermo Hernandez, a former secretary to opposition Sen. Juan

Ponce Enrile. The reports said eight people with Honasan also were arrested. Honasan was Enrile's chief of security when Enrile was minister of defense. The senator was fired as defense chief in November 1986 after the government announced it had foiled an attempt by his followers to oust President Corazon Aquino. The president said she was "overjoyed" by the arrest of Honasan's ar- (See COUP, A-16)

Asbestos Removal At Old Power Plant Said Costly

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

The cost of disposing of unwanted, cancer-causing asbestos at an abandoned power plant off West Third Street may run as much as $500,000, members of the Greenville Utilities Commission board were told Tuesday.

John Ferren, the commission's assistant general manager, said the old power plant, abandoned years ago, has significant quantities of asbestos, including roofing and siding on the structure which contain the substance.

"Because of this," Ferren said, "we feel there is a need to investigate the level and costs which would be associated with the removal." He recommended the board hire a specialist to survey the building to pinpoint the location and amount of asbestos.

The next step, Ferren said, would be to hire a contractor to remove the asbestos, a job he said preliminary estimates indicate could range from $450,000 to $500,000.

Ferren said under current federal and state regulations, as long as the building remains untouched, nothing has to be done with the asbestos. But if the building is renovated or demolished, the asbestos must be removed.

However, expected changes in regulations may require removal. In that case, Ferren suggested, the cost

Parent Considers Lawsuit

By CHERIE EVANS

Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education may face a lawsuit challenging its handling of religious-related Christmas activities in the schools, according to a concerned Greenville parent.

"I'm suing on what's already been done, if it's possible," Tracy Lupton said in a telephone interview today. Ms. Lupton said she is consulting a lawyer on the feasibility of suing the board.

Ms. Lupton said an administrative memo distributed to the schools in 1986 requesting neutral Christmas programs and activities denied students a constitutional right to practice religion.

"That was like dropping a bomb on our community," she said. In addition, she said the memo and the new religion policy adopted by the board Monday have been misinterpreted by principals and teachers, further denying students' rights.

"I've had phone calls from all over the county" since the policy was adopted, Ms. Lupton said. "Teachers are scared to do this, they're scared to do that."

"I'm not a fanatic," she said. "I'm pushing cultural and religious heritage of the holiday that's protected by law and could be misinterpreted."

read the Christmas and Easter story from the Bible to students.

The suggested ways to present these stories — which include providing information on similar beliefs from different religions — is what Ms. Lupton said disturbs her.

"This really concerns me — 'Give examples in other faiths of significant births, deaths and rebirth stories,'" Ms. Lupton said. "Why do you have to do that? If they want to acknowledge Mohammad's birthday that's fine, but do it on his birthday."

"The teachers' hands are tied and they're being suppressed," she said. But, a video explaining the policy and what is allowed in the schools by school administration may help

Scholarship Fund

The Elia Dean Broughton Memorial Scholarship Fund has been established at East Carolina University by Vera Broughton Lentz and her husband, John Lentz of Greensboro. The scholarship honors Mrs. Lentz's mother, who was an elementary school teacher in eastern North Carolina for 30 years.

Born in 1892, Mrs. Broughton postponed her education to help support her parents and seven brothers. She graduated from Stonewall High School in Pamlico County in 1925, even though she had been married to William Oscar Broughton for 11 years and had a daughter, Vera, in the sixth grade.

Mrs. Broughton received her teaching certificate from ECTC and began teaching elementary school in 1931. She taught in Lowland and Stonewall in Pamlico County and Chocowinity in Beaufort County before retiring in 1961. Mrs. Broughton died in 1964.

Because of Mrs. Broughton's devotion to Pamlico County students, the Lentzes have requested that the scholarship assist deserving graduates of Pamlico County high schools who attend East Carolina University.

Jones To Speak

One of Pitt County's state lawmakers has been asked to address a special committee of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce to explain a bill regulating campaign spending.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt, will speak to members of the governmental affairs committee of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce Thursday to talk about a bill to curb campaign spending he sponsored during the 1987 General Assembly.

The legislation, house bill 1124, proposes alternatives for financing the cost of running for public office in North Carolina. Jones describes his bill as "an attempt to cap campaign expense" and said it has generated a great deal of attention.

"The interest expressed in this bill statewide is tremendous and I'm very pleased with the reception it has received," Jones said. He has spoken at meetings in Asheville, Laurinburg and Kinston on the issue.

Jones said the legislation was aimed at keeping the cost of running for office within the reach of every citizen. "If the amount of money spent to win public office continues to rise the way it has in the past five years, it will soon be, if it is not already, too high for the average citizen," he said. "For this reason it is necessary to have some form of guidelines or limits and that's what this bill effectively does."

Jones' bill passed the N.C. House of Representatives in 1987 and will be considered by the N.C. Senate in the 1988 short session. His interest in the issue of campaign spending is in connection with his membership on the House Committee on Governmental Ethics, he said.

Extension Services' 'Pathways' Plan Shown To Officials

The Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service unveiled its four-year work plan, "Pathways to a New Century," for members of the board of county commissioners and Pitt's delegation to the General Assembly at a noon meeting Monday.

Everette Prorise, the extension service's southeastern district director, described the Pathways plan, developed as part of a state-wide extension service master plan, "a milestone ... for the agricultural extension office.

"Agriculture in Pitt County and in North Carolina has never been under as much stress. Our job as an educational organization is to provide programs as the need arises ... to anticipate and respond to needs that you have."

And the Pathways plan is designed to help meet the needs of agriculture and natural resources, community and rural development, home economics and 4-H and youth.

The agriculture and natural resources section proposed to help farmers identify and adopt cost-effective techniques, improve the quality of products, use pesticides wisely and find a niche for new products, among other goals.

The home economics section proposes to help families improve health and lifestyle management, strengthen families and encourage good financial management practices, while the work plan for the 4-H and youth portion of the plan proposed to help children adjust to change, set life goals, learn how to learn and to help and share with others.

Under community and rural development, the Pathways plan proposes to help rural communities to assess their potential for growth, encourage small businesses, protect their natural resources and plan for such things as water and sewer service.

"This is a roadmap for the next four years in Pitt County", Leroy James, Pitt's extension service chairman said.

Agency Has Hearing On Disease Rules

The need for confidentiality in dealing with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) patients was the theme of a public meeting held Tuesday in Greenville by the North Carolina Department of Human Resources Division of Health Services.

The purpose of the hearing was to gather public input on proposed communicable disease rules for the state.

These rules, with some changes from previous ones, are written based on legislation passed during the last legislative session. Similar meetings are being held in Winston-Salem, Chapel Hill, Asheville, Wilmington and Raleigh. An statewide public hearing will be held in Raleigh Dec. 16 and a Commission for Health Services meeting to consider adoption of the proposed rules will follow.

Dr. Rebecca Meriwether, head of the communicable diseases section of the health service division, said one of the major changes in the rules is the strengthening of confidentiality measures. She said two diseases have been added to the list of reportable diseases and conditions. These are hepatitis B carriage and typhoid carriage (Salmonella typhi).

She explained that while AIDS is a reportable disease, having HIV infection, the virus which causes AIDS, is not. Those who test AIDS positive have a need for protection from the possibility of jeopardizing jobs, and acquaintances, she said.

Most of those attending the hearing were health professionals from several eastern North Carolina counties. Most voiced the opinion that efforts must be made provide confidentiality for AIDS patients and AIDS infected people who don't show symptoms.

Several participants said education and counseling should be the major thrust in assisting people with AIDS or AIDS infection, both to provide for their own well-being and for the protection of others.

One speaker said not filing reports on those requesting AIDS counseling creates problems for health department workers and often causes duplication when doctors and other health professionals who treat these individuals do not have reports already prepared. Measures to address these problems need to be better worked out, she said.

Certification of labs doing HIV testing is also addressed in the proposed rules. John Barkley, attorney for the health services division, said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Good Start

Treaties with the Soviet Union are a subject certain to raise the ire of America's rightists. They don't trust the Soviets, and judging by some past performances, with good reason.

Nevertheless when a treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union reduces the threat of nuclear holocaust, that has to be a time to cheer. Tuesday President Reagan and Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev signed a treaty which will eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles. Perhaps of even more importance, the two leaders pledged to continue work on further arms control pacts.

President Reagan said on the historic occasion, "For the first time in history the language of arms control was replaced by arms reduction, in this case the complete elimination of an entire class of U.S. and Soviet missiles."

And Gorbachev said, "We can be proud of planting this sapling which may one day grow into a mighty tree of peace."

Reagan and Gorbachev signed numerous documents which place the treaty into effect. They exchanged copies and shook hands. Words like "nuclear-free world" began to creep into the verbal exchange. Both leaders have to battle criticism in their respective countries for initiating the treaty. Reagan got it from the far right in his own Republican party. Gorbachev hears it from his generals and militarists of the communist party.

Nevertheless, the treaty is now signed even though it faces ratification in this country.

What the document means is that there will be fewer nuclear missiles which can be set off intentionally or mistakenly on both sides. And it is an act of faith that might eventually lead to the destruction of all missiles.

A nuclear free world is not just a euphemistic phrase used to describe some elusive state. It is the only reality capable of reversing the threat of annihilation and destruction.

Those who feel that the nation can't rest easy with such a treaty should understand that we can never rest easy as long as the nuclear missiles are poised for deadly attack.

Nuclear weapons will eventually and inevitably spell world destruction. Perhaps the world may never get rid of all of them. At least, however, the world's two most powerful nations are now trying.

No Closer

A deliberate campaign of terror succeeded in canceling a national election for the people of Haiti. It was just one more dreary chapter in the life of the very poor little Caribbean country which seems unable to find peace or stability.

Haiti is just one of those small self-ruled countries largely supported by Uncle Sam's generosity — a generosity sometimes linked to despotic rule and misuse.

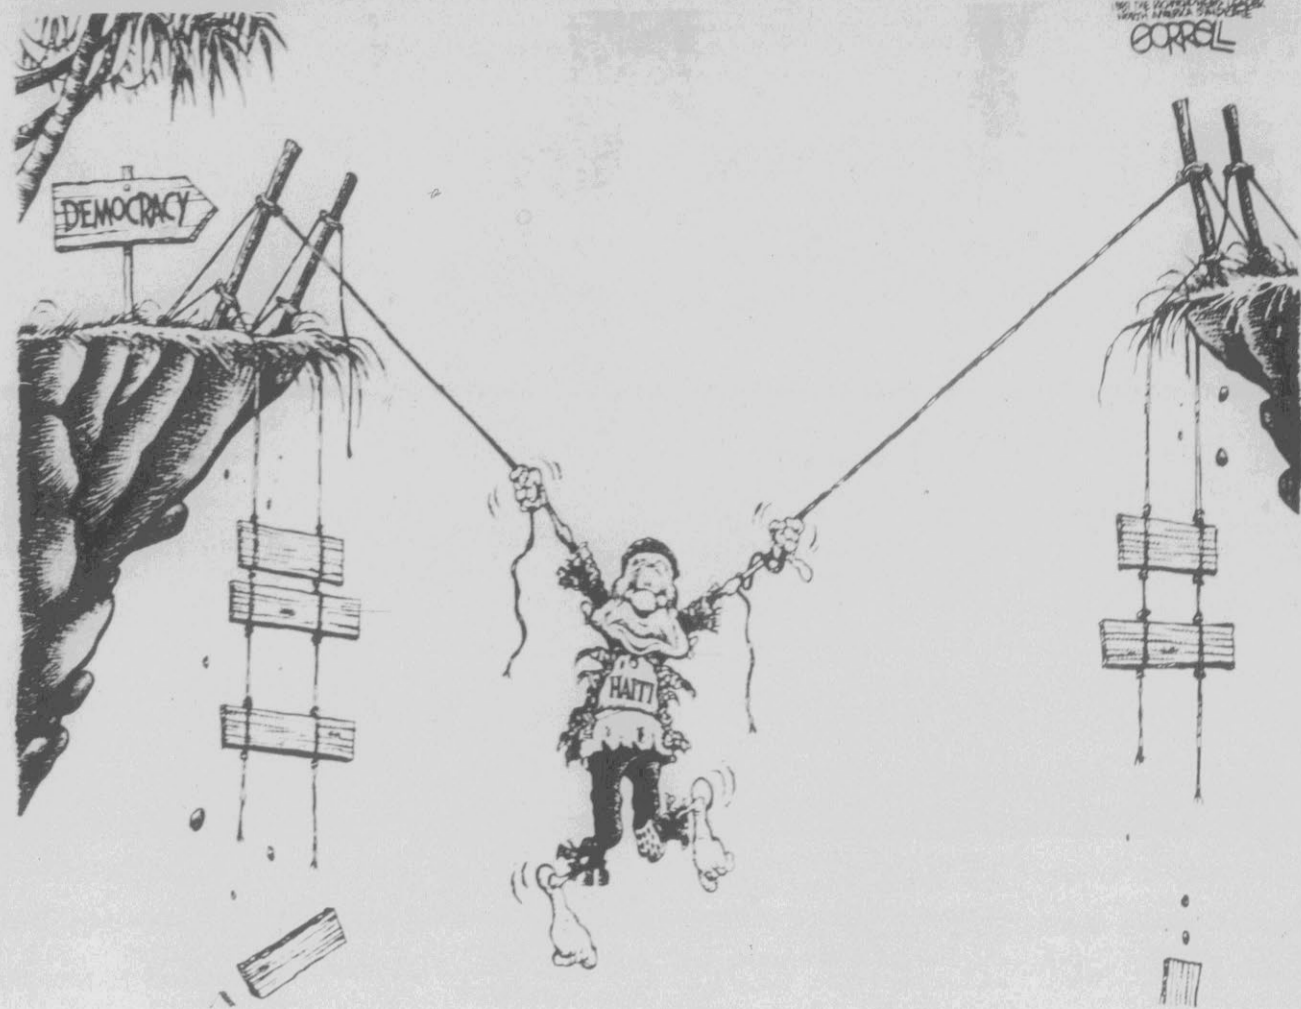

The recently deposed president-for-life Jean-Claude Duvalier, now living in princely exile, found the occasion ripe for expressing his immense sadness over the confrontations that have claimed Haitian lives in the current disorders. U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz blames supporters of Duvalier for the voter-targeted violence that prevented Haiti's first presidential election in 30 years. The unrest was spurred by armed bands rampaging through the streets, firing guns randomly at passers-by and more methodically at voters and election officials.

The gunmen are believed to be former members of Duvalier's disbanded Tontons Macoute paramilitary force. They were a part of the heritage left him by his father, Haiti's first president-for-life. The Tontons Macoute were basically a private army of gunslingers whose purpose in life was to stamp the fear of God and Duvalier deep into the people.

The rise of petty tyrants and private armies (or the power of the little country's military establishment) seems to have a poisonous relationship with American aid and there appears little room to avoid it.

Treaties for American aid to small countries in need involve the pretense of agreements and dealings between equals, but suspicions of corruption are not enough, alone, to permit requirements of accountability by the recipients. The problem will probably be raised again and again (in private discussions) until a means can be devised to keep aid funds out of the hands of the greedy and ambitious. But that will not be soon.

Haiti has been bled and bled by the Duvalier family despite American help and there's no reason to think the end is any closer today than a week ago — or a year ago.

A Hard Rock, Not A Safety Net

WASHINGTON — The summer soldiers of the Reagan Revolution are going back to their farms. But before they plant the seeds of a bitter harvest, they should recall that it was in a sunless winter at Valley Forge that the victory of the American Revolution was secured. So, too, will it be in the winter of the Reagan Revolution that its blessings will be either secured or allowed to dwindle.

Yes, it was easy in the summer of '81 for conservatives to dream of the imminent elimination of liberalism, root and branch. Each of us traveled the long road from home to Washington that spring, and brought with us our own vision of a conservative Eden. And yes, it's true that unicorns do not yet graze on the Mall, nor do lions lie down with the lamb. But if Washington is not yet as we wish it, it is far better than we found it.

Tax rates are much lower, conservatives are filling the courts, federal programs no longer expand, regulations are abated, moral values are reverently defended, national defense is enhanced, communism is fought, business is respected, inflation is down, jobs are up, patriotism is revived, and, if you ask me, the weather has improved these last seven years.

It is true that as our dreams brushed up against the reality of an entrenched liberal establishment, we experienced uncertainties, errors, accidents, technical difficulties, the unforeseen and their effects on decisions, morale and actions. But thus has it been in all great enterprises. Winston Churchill, at the beginning of World War II, warned his nation that "a steady flow of losses must be expected, occasional disasters will occur. . . . We are buffeted by the waves, but the ocean tides flow steady and strong in our favor."

So, too, is it with American conservatism. We have made mistakes, and we will make more. Only the dead no longer err. The only fatal mistake would be to walk away from Ronald Reagan because he fails to do precisely as each of us may wish. Oliver Wendell Holmes observed that "a great man represents a great ganglion in the nerves of society, or to vary the figure, a strategic point in the campaign of history, and part of his greatness consists in his being there." Reagan is the great conservative leader both because of what he has said and done for a quarter of a century and because he is here at this pivotal moment in our history.

I do not mean to suggest that conservatives on the outside should remain silent when the administration appears to be violating the president's longheld principles. All of us, including the president, want to hear from our allies. But advice and criticism should be tempered by the fact that no one over the years has done more for the conservative movement than the man now sitting in the Oval Office.

Regardless of the particular concerns of the new right, old right, social right, fiscal conservatives, supply-siders, evangelicals, libertarians or strong-defense advocates, American conservatism will be judged in history by the success of Reagan. If he completes his term successfully, all branches of the conservative tree will thrive. If the liberals beat him in the last year with the aid and comfort of disheartened conservatives, we will all lose.

And, I would remind the summer soldiers, the disgruntled, the dejected and the defeated, that it is not Reagan who voted for budget-busting pork barrels such as the highway, water and housing bills. It was not Reagan who voted against Robert Bork. It was not Reagan who spoke free trade while voting to protect inefficient industries in his district.

Reagan has been on the political high-wire for seven long years. On one end are the liberals and Democrats shaking the wire for all they are worth. On the other end are some of our disgruntled friends doing likewise. Beneath him is not a safety net, but the hard rock of history.

As we enter the last months of this administration, let us remember that whatever disagreement may exist over important policy issues, there is more that unites conservatives than divides us.

No Premature Pardons, Please

WASHINGTON — Talk of presidential pardons for Adm. John Poindexter and Lt. Col. Oliver North "before the independent counsel concludes his investigation" is suspicious. A pardon now would be bad politics and highly questionable law.

All legal systems have some version of clemency to individualize the law, to correct sentences and, mostly in modern times, to return lost civil rights. But a pardon presupposes an offense: it forgives it but does not eradicate it. American law has limited pardons to the post-conviction process, with a few extraordinary exceptions not pertinent to the current situation involving North and Poindexter.

Devotees of original intent might be interested in the views of the Founding Fathers. The U.S. Constitution (Article II, Section 2) gives the president the "power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment." On Aug. 27, 1787, during the Constitutional Convention debates, Luther Martin of Maryland moved to add the words "after conviction" following the word "pardons." James Wilson of Pennsylvania objected, arguing it conceivably might be necessary to pardon before convictions "in order to obtain the testimony of accomplices." For that reason, Martin withdrew his motion. Of course, we have ways to secure accomplice testimony now without granting pardons — offering witnesses immunity in exchange for testimony, for example. As to the danger of a president's misusing the pardon power to cover up his own guilt or the guilt of wrongdoers who might be "his own instruments," the Founding Fathers noted there was always the impeachment power.

The one and only Supreme Court decision covering this question was Ex parte Garland, decided in December 1866. However, the Garland case pertained to amnesty (group clemency), which is not the same as pardon. Garland never dealt with either the legal question or a factual situation relevant to North and Poindexter. It is not extraordinary to grant amnesty before trial, but scholars agree that pardons are issued after conviction. The language of Garland is, as we lawyers say, dicta, meaning that the specific question was not before the court and the particular words were not necessary to the court's decision.

There are no other pertinent Supreme Court cases and only one relevant lower federal court case. In 1975, a federal court in Michigan upheld President Gerald Ford's unconditional pardon of Richard Nixon, quoting the language in Garland. Of course, Nixon's wrongdoing had been established in the House, where the Judiciary Committee had voted for his impeachment before he resigned. The Michigan case did state that a pardon implied guilt of an admission of a crime, and it noted the national need for a return to the political tranquility that Ford thought would follow his pardon of Nixon.

Pardon attorney David C. Stephenson recently said that there are reords of some pardons before sentences late in the 19th century and early in the 20th. Nine were desertion cases, in several of which pardons were conditioned on the party's re-enlisting in military service; three others occurred in order to ensure the parties' testimony, federal records show. More recently, in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, there were three instances of pardons aimed specifically at returning civil service retirement benefits to government officials whose rights had been forfeited administratively under the Hiss Act. There were "administrative findings" of their having violated the law in all three cases.

A client of mine who ran a successful program for ex-offenders proudly displayed his framed pardon on his office wall where others hang diplomas and awards. He got his pardon the old-fashioned way, as the Smith-Barney ad goes: he earned it. A pardon before trial is a perversion of the law that could only heighten skepticism about the whole process.

Ronald L. Goldfarb, a Washington attorney, was a Justice Department prosecutor in the Kennedy administration.

Strength For Today

Have you ever tried making a phone call in a place where crowds were milling back and forth? No use trying to catch what the person at the other end of the line is saying if the noise at the other end is so great that it drowns out his words. Likewise in the spiritual life we listen in vain for any message God may be trying to send us if we stand at the center of life's clamor and noise. This does not mean that those who honestly seek God should withdraw from the ordinary secular activities of life. God can, and of course does, speak to us in a wide variety of circumstances, but a two-way communication can be most clear for us if it is carried on in those sacred places where His name is honored in the experience of worship.

Here, without distractions, we may pursue that dialogue we call prayer.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The Concerned Citizens for Justice, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and others continue to support a six-district plan as an equitable method of electing commissioners in Pitt County.

The Concerned Citizens for Justice, the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters, and other supporters opposed any at-large system of electing commissioners.

This opposition is based on historical evidences, past and present patterns of voting and electing commissioners, and the current absence of minority representation on the board proportionate to the minority population of the county.

The at-large method of election violates the Voter Right Acts, Section 5. Additionally, public hearings conducted by the commissioners resoundingly voiced the elimination of the present at-large system for support of the six-district system.

Therefore, we hope that citizens throughout the county will once again join in denouncing the at-large system and support a six-district system for electing county commissioners.

Exclusive List
Analysis

Special to The Hartford Courant
 The guest list for the summit meeting this week in Washington is an exclusive one. It is confined to the two superpowers — the United States and the Soviet Union. That is inevitable; the term "superpower" implies the possession of a vast arsenal of nuclear and conventional weapons. It is of vital importance that the United States and the Soviet Union move ahead with negotiations in order to reduce the threat of nuclear conflict.

But these negotiations have serious implications for the United States' allies in Europe and for the Soviets' East European partners. In essence, the origins of the Cold War lie in a dispute over control of Germany; this enlarged itself to become a confrontation over the future of Europe. And European questions remain at the center of world politics.

Almost four decades have passed since Americans have had to think critically about relations with Western Europe. But several near-simultaneous occurrences — the agreement to eliminate certain nuclear missiles from Europe, Black Monday on Wall Street and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's commitment to "glasnost" — have forced a new look.

There are also signs of independence within Europe. West Germans are grappling with the problem of establishing closer ties with East Germany, though they are also conscious of the difficulties; in Poland last week, citizens voted in a national referendum to reject a government-backed package of economic and political reforms.

There is every reason to encourage the new spirit of independence emerging in Europe. The world will be safer if the strictures of a bipolar world, dominated by two superpowers, are replaced by the flexibility of a more decentralized system of power.

By itself, the Intermediate-range Nuclear Force Treaty is a sensible and stabilizing agreement. It removes provocative weapon systems from Europe. But critics are correct in suggesting that it has weighty symbolic meaning.

The placement in 1983 of the intermediate-range missiles in Europe was taken as tangible evidence of American commitment to Europe's defense. Their removal eliminates that evidence. In reality, of course, the Soviet Union must remove its much larger force of SS-20 missiles in Eastern Europe, and the West maintains a vast arsenal of nuclear weapons in Europe.

Still, the psychological impact of the removal of the intermediate-range forces is significant. Its repercussions in Europe should not be minimized.

In the United States, these events may work wonders in concentrating attention on the larger political problems in the relationship with Europe. To understand those problems, it may help to put the potential shifts in Europe in a historical framework.

The creation in 1949 of NATO, followed in 1955 by the establishment of the Warsaw Pact, firmed up the division of Europe and created two vast military and political bureaucracies. The Cold War was institutionalized. In the years that followed, Washington fiercely defended the structure it had erected. European initiatives to break from or modify the bipolar confrontation were seen as threats to peace.

In the late 1950s, Adam Rapacki, Poland's foreign minister, urged the creation of a demilitarized or nuclear-free zone in Central Europe. But the Eisenhower administration dismissed the proposal as a propaganda ploy. After all, German armies joined NATO in 1955, and German military might was not a card to be dealt away frivolously.

More significantly, in the 1960s, Charles de Gaulle withdrew French forces from NATO and envisioned the return of "historic Russia" to its European relationships. A special understanding appeared to be forming between France and the Soviet Union. However, in 1968, the brutal Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia destroyed both the hopes embodied in the Prague spring and De Gaulle's grand design.

In the early 1970s, despite protests by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, West Germany's Willy Brandt seized the initiative. His "Ostpolitik," which renewed practical political contact with the Soviet Union and its Eastern European satellites, finalized the border between Germany and Poland and allowed West Germany to establish a useful relationship with East Germany.

Along with the first Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, Brandt's policies ushered in the era of detente that culminated in the Helsinki Agreement in 1975 — a far-reaching accord that outlined a broad accommodation between the Soviet Union, Western Europe and the United States. However, these accomplishments were partially eroded in the late 1970s when hard-liners in the East and West allowed the spirit of detente to fade.

Now there is hope again. Economic forces have drawn the great powers toward accommodation as the cost of the Cold War begins to show.

For the Soviet Union, the economic problems are enormous. The unremitting troubles of lagging agricultural productivity are matched by insufficient industrial productivity for domestic consumption. Gorbachev is attempting to face the challenge. He has brought a new generation of leaders to power and committed himself to perestroika — the reconstruction of Soviet society. The policy of glasnost is the starting point for rejuvenating the economy.

Gorbachev has said that democratization is a key component of Soviet reconstruction. Even though this may amount only to minimal changes within an authoritarian system, it could have a sweeping impact on Eastern and Western Europe. In 1956, Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev's condemnation of the Stalinist system provoked upheaval in Eastern Europe. Similarly, repercussions from the changes in the Soviet Union can be anticipated today.

Meanwhile, the United States has its own economic problems. The stock-market crash, with its attendant economic difficulties, surely will hasten cuts in weapons systems and lead to questions about U.S. defense expenditures in Europe. It is against the backdrop of these economic difficulties that the INF Treaty was signed, with both nuclear powers pledging to negotiate further cuts in strategic nuclear weapons.

So the INF Treaty comes at a time when serious economic readjustment is required in the United States and as a vast new policy of social and economic change is under way in the Soviet Union. The convergence of events may well be fortuitous. If it brings about a cautious examination of the United States' political and military role in Europe, it is all to the good.

As the century nears its end, Europe may move beyond the artificial structures that were the unavoidable legacy of World War II. The United States should not fear to let Europe be Europe — pursuing its own autonomous interests.

The emergence of such a Europe can be beneficial to the United States and the Soviet Union. The European states should properly assume the political burdens equivalent to their economic power.

Agreement May Spur N.C., Italy Exchanges

By GEORGE A. THREEWITTS
ECU News Bureau

North Carolina and Italy may do more business together thanks to a new agreement signed by economic development groups here and abroad.

"It's a cooperative agreement between North Carolina and Italy to exchange business and technical information," said Albert A. Delia, director of the Eastern Regional Small Business and Technology Development Center at East Carolina University.

Delia said the agreement also includes the exchange of people, both students and professionals. But most importantly, he said the agreement is one of the first of its kind, anywhere in the U.S., that provides American businesses with help overseas in marketing and distributing products.

The agreement was signed in November by the N.C. Small Business and Technology Development Center and its Italian counterpart the Economic Development Commission of Umbria (Sviluppumbria) in Perugia, Italy. The N.C. SBTDC, with seven regional centers, is a part of the University of North Carolina.

Delia, who spearheaded the exchange agreement as a way to help the development of small businesses in eastern North Carolina, said the agreement will be of mutual benefit to business and education interests in the state as well as in Italy.

"This relationship that we have established is a cooperative institutional agreement and relationship," he said. "We now have a place to send people where they can learn about new methods of economic development."

He said the agreement will allow graduate students in business to work in Italy as interns where they will get a wide range of exposure in international business. From the professional side he said people who work in economic development will be sent to Italy to examine specific problems that affect American companies doing business overseas.

Perhaps the most important aspect of the agreement, Delia said, is that now there will be more cooperation in the development of business interests in Italy and eastern North Carolina. This is something that hasn't been done before.

"For the first time...our clients who want to do business overseas will have somebody literally holding their hand throughout the (process)," he said.

He said this will be a big benefit to North Carolina companies wanting to export products. He said U.S. companies get all the help they need now in getting a product shipped out of the U.S. but the companies must rely on private resources at the other end in getting the product distributed.

Under the agreement Delia said an agency in Italy will help American and eastern North Carolina companies in checking out distributing points and in examining the potential for marketing that product before it gets there.

"Of course we will be providing the same kinds of services to the Umbrian companies that want to sell products in eastern North Carolina," he said.

The Umbria region of Italy begins north of Rome in the piedmont part of the country and extends almost to the Alps. It is called the "breadbasket of Italy" and its economy depends on textiles, small businesses and tobacco, much like the economy of eastern North Carolina.

Delia and Scott Daugherty, executive director of the NCSBTDC, were in Italy in November to work out details of the agreement with Italian officials. Italian officials visited the state last July and plan to return to North Carolina for further meetings in January.

Asbestos Removal At Power Plant Costly

The board then approved a proposal to move ahead with selecting a specialist to survey the old building.

This is the second time in recent months that the board has faced problems with asbestos. The substance was found in ceiling tiles on the third floor of the commission's office building at the intersection of Fifth and Washington streets, as renovation of the area got under way several months ago. A subsequent survey located asbestos on the first and second floors of the building also.

Those discoveries have upped the cost of the original $380,000 project by some $153,500 because the asbestos must be removed for work to continue.

Meanwhile, Clauson Jernigan, program administrator for the N.C. Department of Commerce's energy division, praised the GUC for a state-funded energy efficient rebate program that begins today.

Jernigan said the pilot project, funded with a grant of $92,400, is one of 20 energy conservation programs across the state paid for with a portion of $47 million the state received as a result of a federal court ruling against the Exxon Corp. for overcharging consumers during the 1970s.

"We received over 500 proposals," Jernigan said, and the GUC project — to make rebates to qualified customers who invest in energy-efficient heating and cooling equipment — "is the only program of its kind in this state."

The GUC is the only utility in the state to receive any of the Exxon overcharge money, and Jernigan said, "statewide, the Greenville Utilities Commission has an excellent reputation in the energy conservation area." The GUC, he said, "is a utility this community can be extremely proud of."

Robbie Tugwell, of the commission's energy service office, said the rebates — designed to encourage the installation of high efficiency units — will equal about half the difference in the cost between standard heating and cooling units and high-efficiency models.

The use of high efficiency equipment, Tugwell suggested, will result in savings for both the customer and GUC, because less energy is required to operate them.

Roger Jones, GUC's director of electric systems, reported that operations of the commission's load management program during the month of November resulted in a savings of some $146,776 in wholesale power costs.

Radio-controlled load management switches on water heaters accounted for $80,811 in savings, while voltage adjustments resulted in a savings of $60,667, Jones said. Operation of generators at the commission's water plant and at Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co. accounted for a total savings of $5,298.

Since January 1985, the load management program has resulted in a total savings of more than $4.5 million.

In other business, the board approved changes in the commission's holiday schedule — making Good Friday, rather than Easter Monday, a holiday — to coincide with federal, state and county changes. The board also recognized member Andy Warren for his five years of service.

Warren, who has served on the board since 1982, has also been secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency, chairman of the power agency's budget committee, and is a member of the agency's negotiating committee.

The Greenville City Council has appointed Pat Kelly to replace Warren, effective Jan. 1.

The board also recognized Jean Verdick, who has served as the commission general manager's secretary for the past 15 years, and who will retire at the end of this month.

Contracts for the purchase of 40,000 feet of cable from Rigby Electric Supply Co. for $35,080 and for 50,445 pounds of conductor from Mill-Power Supply Co. for $49,436, were also approved by the board Tuesday.

Council Plans Emerald Isle Retreat

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

One of the first actions the new City Council will take after being sworn into office Thursday involves leaving town.

The Council won't be skipping out to avoid their responsibilities, however, said city officials. The newly-elected council members, along with the City Manager Greg Knowles, will spend Saturday and Sunday at Emerald Isle in what officials say is a retreat to discuss issues.

According to Mayor-elect Ed Carter, council will be spending the weekend at a secluded location to discuss strategies, priorities, and concerns which will arise during the council's two-year term.

The retreat will be paid for by public funds and according to Ron Kimble, city finance director, it will cost the city an estimated $1,200.

"This retreat is going to give us (the council) an opportunity to sit down and collectively identify both long-range and immediate problems which face the city," Carter said.

Carter, who originated the idea for the getaway, said conducting the retreat at Emerald Isle would allow council to better concentrate on the issues.

I think there's a need to get away and isolate ourselves so we won't be distracted," he said.

Carter said a wide range of topics would be discussed at the two-day affair at the Ramada Inn at Emerald Isle, including Greenville traffic problems, street design, and police, and fire services.

"The sky's the limit," he added.

Carter said another primary goal of the retreat is to increase communication skills between council members.

"I want to start with the basics, by coming up with some rules of interaction. We need to learn how to be courteous and to better respect each other's opinions," he said.

To assist the council, Carter has asked a communications specialist to participate during the retreat. Mary Margaret Means, a safety and health official at Burroughs-Wellcome, to lead the group through various brainstorming exercises.

"She's had considerable communications experience and she's quite skillful," he commented.

Also sitting in on the retreat will be City Attorney Mac McCarty.

Carter said he hopes all council members will attend the session.

"We need full participation by all council members to accomplish the goals of the retreat," he said.

Council-member Inez Fridley said she plans to attend the retreat.

"I think we have a lot to discuss about the way we do things on the council," she said. "We need a higher level of responsiveness to each other," she added.

City Manager Greg Knowles said the retreat will provide a good opportunity for council members to set priorities and goals for the future.

Knowles also said that retreats were common among councils across the country and in fact have been held by previous Greenville City Councils.

"dissipate some of the fears" as teachers and principals view it, Ms. Lupton said. She also said she has been asked to help develop the video.

Donovan Phillips, vice chairman of the Board of Education, said today he is confident in the newly-adopted policy. "I think the policy of the board is quite secure. I think we are legal as well as fair.

"It's a flexible and it's a workable policy. I'm not really worried about the legality of the policy itself."

Phillips said a religion policy needs to be in place to provide guidelines for teachers and principals, but "I don't think the memo causes as much damage as people have said."

The memo emphasized neutrality and did not criticize or promote religion, he said.

N.C. Said On Rumored List For Super Collider

By The Associated Press
Published reports say North Carolina is one of six finalists for the $4.4 billion superconducting super collider, but spokesmen for the federal agencies making the selections say no list of finalists has been compiled.

An unnamed congressional aide, apparently confirming reports in the Chicago Tribune and the Dallas Morning News, said the identities of the six states came from Energy Department sources working with a National Academy of Sciences selection panel for the atom-smasher sought by 25 states.

Besides North Carolina, the other states on the supposed list are Illinois, Utah, New Mexico, Colorado, and Texas, according to the aide.

Edward Forgotson, a Washington lobbyist hired by Gov. Jim Martin's office to push North Carolina as a site for the project, said, "I just think it's an unconfirmed rumor and I don't think we can make any book on it at all."

Phil Keif, an energy department spokesman, said, "It's not true."

"There may be such a list but it's not our list and it's not the academy's list. The academy hasn't compiled such a list yet. ... When they do, we'll announce it with full flair," Keif said.

Raphael Kasper, executive director for the academy's Commission on Physical Sciences and director of the site selection project, said, "We don't have a report or a list yet."

"That list does not look like any list I've seen," said Kasper, referring to the six states named by the congressional aide.

"I have been informed that such a rumor exists. I can't confirm or deny that any such list exists," Roger Strickland, legislative director for U.S. Rep. Tim Valentine, D-N.C., told The Durham Sun.

Strickland said the leak about the list "did not originate from our office." He said he suspects it may have originated with congressional staff members in some western states trying to land the project.

"It's a wonderful rumor, if it were only true," Strickland said, adding that the Department of Energy has said it will be at least two more weeks before a finalists' list is made public.

The site suggested by North Carolina for the project would be located in northern Durham County and in southern Person and southern Granville counties.

Gov. Jim Martin, in a statement released by his office, said he had received "no word directly" on the short list.

Suicide Attempt

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Chatham County man convicted of having sex with his 7-year-old son and a 5-year-old girl has been transferred to Central Prison after attempting suicide at the Chatham County Jail, officials said Tuesday.

Jeffrey Lynn Klomser, 34, was treated and released from Chatham Hospital after cutting his throat with a razor blade, said Chief Deputy Don Whitt of the Chatham County Sheriff's Department.

Whitt said Klomser attempted suicide just after midnight Tuesday after he apparently removed a blade from a razor provided prisoners in the jail.

Jury Gets Case

WILMINGTON (AP) — A New Hanover County jury began deliberating Tuesday in the first-degree murder trial of Edward Lee Cummings, a Hoke County man charged with killing the teen-age sister of his girlfriend.

"Our journey in search of truth is over, and now we're asking for justice," District Attorney Jean Powell said during closing arguments. Ms. Powell represents Cumberland and Hoke counties.

"Here today a man is on trial for his very life," said defense attorney William Davis. "His life has been examined under a microscope. He has literally been stripped bare before you," Davis said, referring to photographs shown to the jury of Cummings having sex with women.

Cummings, 45, who is charged in the slaying of Teresa Puryear, 15, of Wake County, was convicted in Hoke County last May and received the death sentence for the first-degree murder of Teresa's sister, Karen Puryear, 22. That conviction and death sentence are being appealed to the State Supreme Court.

Wound Self-Inflicted

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A homeless man who lived in a tent outside Wilson killed himself with a gunshot wound to the chest, Wilson law enforcement officers say.

Autopsy results from Pitt Memorial Hospital were released Tuesday, confirming that Johnny Ray Wilson, 32, of Fuquay-Varina, died from a self-inflicted gunshot wound. Dr. Stan Harris, the pathologist who conducted the autopsy, said that Wilson died between Nov. 18 and Nov. 20.

Wilson Police Capt. R.J. Pittman said the body was discovered around 12:30 p.m. Saturday. A shotgun was found near the body.

The body was found by Ray Batchelor of Wilson, who discovered the decomposed remains while he was out walking his dogs.

Batchelor told the Wilson Daily Times on Tuesday that he knew Wilson had been living in the wooded area and while on his walk Saturday had decided to look in on him.

"He (Wilson) moved out into the woods late in the summer," Batchelor said. "I noticed him walking back and forth down our road and decided to see where he was going. Once I found out, I notified the police and they came out and talked to him."

Batchelor said after that, when he walked his dogs, he would always go near where the tent was pitched and look in. "I just wanted to keep my eye on him," he said.

Smoking Ban Proposed By DHS

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Division of Health Services has become the first North Carolina agency to propose a smoking ban that would cover all work areas — including private offices — as well as most public areas.

Deputy State Health Director Thad Wester said Tuesday the ban had been approved by the state health director and would go into effect shortly after Jan. 1. But later Tuesday, Wester said the policy was only a draft and would have to be approved by the Department of Human Resources personnel office.

"The policy will have to be approved by the personnel department, but our expectations are that it will be implemented," Wester said. "I did not know that they (personnel officials) had to" approve the policy.

The proposal, Wester said, followed a survey in June in which most of the division's 1,200 employees said they favored such restrictions.

"We are not anti-tobacco industry," Wester told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

"This is politically sensitive,"

Wester said. "But it's clearly been shown that smoking poses health risks for people. As a physician, I feel like smoking is an adverse situation."

Phil Kirk, chief of staff for Gov. Jim Martin, said he thought the division's policy was too restrictive and he would suggest that Human Resources officials have "a conference or prayer meeting ... over this."

Wester said he had not discussed the matter with Kirk, but he learned Tuesday night that the smoking policy needed additional review.

The policy would forbid smoking in all work areas, including individual offices and conference rooms, and in restrooms, elevators, hallways and stairways, Wester said.

Designated areas for smoking would be determined later, according to the policy, but if no area can be found in a building, all smoking would be banned.

Kirk said the restrictions could set a precedent. While smoking shouldn't be allowed in crowded work areas, especially where people have allergies, it should be allowed in individual private offices, he said.

Human Resources Secretary David Flaherty said the policy was "pretty far-reaching. I wouldn't go with that."

The plan also sparked complaints from employees who smoke and supporters of the state's top cash crop.

Debbie E. Houston, a smoker who works as a clerk in the division, said she would consider seeking another job if the policy was implemented.

"I think it's bad, and it's going to be hard for me," Mrs. Houston said. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said he would oppose the "smoke-out" vigorously.

"People need to remember that North Carolina's roads, public schools, universities and hospitals and more were built with tobacco money," Graham, a cigar smoker, said in a statement.

The Division of Health Services already bans smoking in dozens of medical and screening clinics that it operates across the state, Wester said.

Dealer Indicted In Car Theft Ring

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Chatham County car dealer has been indicted in federal court on charges that he and four New York car dealers operated a ring that stole more than 500 cars in New York and resold them in Siler City.

The five men ran a seven-year "salvage-switch" ring in which late-model luxury cars were stolen from New York streets, retagged with vehicle identification numbers from junked or salvaged cars and sold at or near wholesale book value.

"This is the largest salvage-switch ring ever uncovered in the New York City area, and one of the most significant stolen car cases in FBI history," U.S. Attorney Bob Edmunds said Tuesday in Greensboro.

Howard Clinton "Clint" McLaurin Jr. and his business, Silk Hope Automotive Inc. of Siler City, were named in the 36-count indictment handed down last week by a federal grand jury in Winston-Salem. The indictment was unsealed this week.

McLaurin, 48, was arrested Tuesday and released on a $10,000 surety bond. Efforts to reach him for comment were unsuccessful.

Also arrested Tuesday morning in New York were four Staten Island men — Charles Donald Chorman, 33; John L. Erdman, 75; Thomas A. Bosco, 42, and his brother, John Bosco, 38. Thomas Bosco and Erdman served at various times as presidents of Island Auto Wreckers, Inc., a Staten Island used car dealership named in the indictment.

If convicted on all counts, each man theoretically could face up to 180 years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

So far, investigators have recovered 117 of the stolen cars in North Carolina, and 17 in other states, said Paul V. Daly, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina. The FBI believes that 500 cars valued at $4.8 million were stolen in 1985 alone and resold by McLaurin to other dealers or directly to the public.

"Most of the cars recovered in North Carolina were taken from the possession of innocent purchasers, some of whom had been told that the vehicles they were buying had once been damaged and were there after rebuilt," Edmunds said.

The ring also left dealers in 17 North Carolina cities with stolen cars.

A Raleigh dealership, Thompson Cadillac-Oldsmobile Inc., sued DMV officials, charging that North Carolina regulations had made the state a dumping ground for stolen vehicles.

The suit was dismissed by the N.C. Court of Appeals in November, but the state has adopted a new salvage title law to stamp out further "salvage-switch" schemes, DMV Commissioner William Hiatt said.

Investigators said the scheme worked this way:

Wrecked vehicles were purchased from insurance salvage auctions in Michigan and New Jersey to obtain their titles and vehicle identification number tags. Cars would then be stolen in Staten Island that were of the same make, model and color as the wrecked vehicles.

A stolen car would have its vehicle identification tag removed and confidential numbers obliterated from its frame and motor parts. The identification tag and confidential numbers from the salvaged car would be placed on the stolen car, and new titles would be obtained. Investigators say cars were sold in North Carolina, New Jersey and Connecticut over the seven-year conspiracy.

Gardner To Seek Nomination For Lieutenant Gov.

RALEIGH (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Jim Gardner of Rocky Mount says he will seek the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor to help Gov. Jim Martin push his agenda through the legislature.

"The last three years have proved that we must have a lieutenant governor who can work with Governor Martin," Gardner said in a letter to members of the state GOP executive committee. "Imagine the difference it will make if the head of the Senate is supporting the governor and his proposals instead of opposing them."

"This is a year of great opportunity for us to truly establish a two-party system in North Carolina," Gardner wrote in the letter dated Tuesday. "We cannot let the Democrat obstructionists continue to keep Governor Martin from reaching his true potential."

Gardner, 54, is a two-time gubernatorial candidate, co-founder of the Hardee's hamburger chain, and a former co-owner of the old Carolina Cougars professional basketball team.

He pulled an upset in 1966 when he defeated Democratic U.S. Rep. Harold W. Cooley, then chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. He later lost close races for governor, to former Democratic Gov. Bob Scott in 1968 and to former Gov. Jim Holshouser in the 1972 GOP primary.

"There is no question in my mind that this is the year to elect a Republican lieutenant governor," Gardner said in the letter, which was obtained by The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Gardner could not be reached for comment Tuesday, but he has said he views the lieutenant governor's office as a potential stepping-stone to the governor's mansion in 1992.

The announcement pleased key allies of Martin and other party leaders who vigorously lobbied Gardner to become Martin's running mate.

"This is a helluva ticket — fantastic," said former state GOP Chairman Frank A. Rouse of Emerald Isle, a key Martin supporter who worked to get Gardner in to the race. "He has more charisma than any candidate I have ever met. That is not taking anything away from the governor."

State Rep. William T. Boyd, R-Randolph, is expected to make a similar announcement Thursday, and Raleigh businessman John H. Carrington and former state Sen. Wendell Sawyer of Greensboro also have said they plan to seek the Republican nomination.

"I can't imagine anyone beating Gardner in the primary," said Theodore S. Arrington, chairman of the political science department at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, and a Republican.

WFU On Debate List

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Representatives from the Commission on Presidential Debates have visited Wake Forest University, which is still under consideration to host a 1988 presidential debate, commission members said.

Janet Brown, the executive director of the commission, and Donna Constantinople, a counsel on the commission, met Monday with Wake Forest student leaders, administrators and faculty members to discuss voter education for the 1988 debates.

The commission, which was formed in February, is a bipartisan, non-profit organization financed by the National Democratic and Republican Parties to sponsor general election presidential and vice presidential debates. The dates for the four debates the commission will sponsor in 1988 are scheduled for Sept. 14 and 25, and Oct. 11 and 27, officials said.

Sandra Connor, director of the Wake Forest Office of Public Information, said the university hopes to know the commission's decision in January.

Other universities who applied to the commission to host a debate include DePauw, Georgetown, Harvard, Northwestern, Stanford and the University of California at Berkeley, commission members said.

Furniture Plant

MARYVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rubbermaid Inc. will build a lawn furniture plant in Blount County, creating jobs for 150 people, company officials said Tuesday.

The company, based at Wooster, Ohio, initially plans to invest $25 million in the plant, which is expected to be finished by the end of 1988, said company spokesman Bruce Taylor.

Future investments would total $75 million and create jobs for up to 500 people in addition to the first-phase 150 positions, company officials said.

The plant will be built on a 100-acre site near Maryville Industrial Park.

On Monday, the Blount County Commission voted to allow the county's Industrial Development Board to sell bonds to pay for improving the 100-acre site.

Rubbermaid Inc. was established in 1920. The company reported 1986 sales of $795 million and profits of $70 million.

Authorities Arrest 32 Summit Demonstrators

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the superpower leaders met in the White House, the park across the street was filled with strains of "World War Three is Coming to Town," Hare Krishna chants and Pentecostal exhortations about the coming of Christ.

Small bands of demonstrators, and a large group of about 300 Afghans protesting Soviet intervention in their country, vied for a place in the summit spotlight as President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev signed an arms treaty Tuesday.

Police arrested 15 Jewish protesters for demonstrating too close to the Soviet embassy and 17 Afghans for demonstrating in Lafayette Park without a permit.

The park, across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House, was filled with competing chants, megaphone speakers and singers.

Among them, separate groups of Turkestanis, Crimeans and North Caucasians demanded national freedom for their regions of the Soviet Union.

Cymbal-banging Hare Krishnas chanted and decried the plight of Soviet Krishnas who they said are in psychiatric hospitals, prisons and labor camps under religious oppression.

Chanting Buddhist monks beat drums in their call for total disarmament and peace.

Pentecostal followers of Elijah Hong of Taiwan carried signs proclaiming, "The power to rule over the universe belongs to God and Jesus Christ." A speaker shouting through a megaphone criticized Reagan for "joining hands with ... an anti-God regime."

Members of the New York-based No Business As Usual Action Network sang their own version of Christmas carols with lyrics such as "World War Three Is Coming To Town," and "Jingle Bells, Jingle Bells, Star Wars all the Way."

Another went: "Sirens ring, are you listening? Do you see the bombs glistening? A terrible sight, as day turns to night, nuclear winter wonderland."

A handful of Vietnamese exiles distributed an open letter to Gorbachev asking him to cut off Soviet military aid to Vietnam's communist government and "order Vietnam" to release political prisoners.

White-turbaned Sikhs called for a halt to U.S. aid to India because of its alleged oppressive policies toward the Sikhs, and said the Soviet are trying to pit Sikhs against Hindus by masterminding terrorist acts and making it look like the Sikhs committed them.

Ethiopians and Eritreans criticized the Soviet-backed Ethiopian government for promoting alleged human rights abuses, repression and famine.

The 17 Afghans, protesting Soviet military intervention in their homeland, were arrested for demonstrating without a permit in the park. They were a dissenting faction of the larger Afghan group that did have a permit for the park and the sidewalk in front of the White House.

Members of the factions scuffled briefly over the smaller group's objection to raising the flag of the deposed Afghan king. Those arrested were cited, fined $50 each and released.

The Jewish activists, including two rabbis, were cited for demonstrating within 500 feet of the Soviet Embassy. They offered themselves for arrest to spotlight their opposition to U.S. trade agreements with the Soviet Union unless pressure is brought on the Soviets to free all Jews who want to emigrate.

The Jewish protesters said the administration should link future trade dealings with the Soviets to human rights progress. Rabbi Avraham Weiss, one of those arrested, said the Jewish community will try to pressure companies that do business with the Soviets. "We want peace with the Soviets and even trade, but not over Jewish bodies," he said.

Those arrested for demonstrating too close to an embassy faced a maximum $100 fine and the possibility of 60 days in jail.

Leaders Quote Emerson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev may be weary of hearing President Reagan reciting the same Russian proverb over and over, but both world leaders appear to share a fondness for Ralph Waldo Emerson, the 19th Century American poet, essayist, thinker and transcendentalist.

The 19th-century intellectual won double plaudits in quotation-laden addresses at Tuesday's arms-control treaty signing ceremonies.

Said Gorbachev: "It is probably still too early to bestow laurels upon each other. As the great American poet and philosopher Ralph Waldo Emerson said: 'The reward of a thing well done is to have done it.'"

Gorbachev's quote from Emerson's essay, "Nominalist and Realist," was matched by an Emerson quote from the president. Reagan said: "The American philosopher Ralph Waldo Emerson once wrote that 'There is properly no history; only biography.'"

The president then elaborated on the quote from Emerson's essay "History" by suggesting that the writer meant that "History is ultimately a record of human will, human spirit, human aspirations ... We have made history."

In the spirit of East-West cooperation, Reagan then moved on to Russian sayings.

He repeated a favorite quote, citing "the wisdom of an old Russian maxim. The maxim is 'Doverlyai no proveryai.' Trust — but verify."

Interrupted Gorbachev with a smile: "You repeat that at every meeting."

After laughter subsided, Reagan said: "I like it."

Reagan then produced another

Russian saying, quipping, "I'm becoming quite an expert in Russian proverbs."

This one, rendered in English by the president: "The harvest comes more from sweat than from the dew."

Gorbachev quoted Vladimir Lenin, the leader of the revolution of 1917: "We are willing to consider any proposal leading to peace on a just and solid basis."

Jet Fires Warning Shot

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese jet fighters scrambled and fired several warning shots with tracer ammunition today when a Soviet bomber violated Japanese air space off Okinawa, the Defense Agency said.

It said this was the first time Japanese planes had fired warning shots at Soviet aircraft.

An agency official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said two F-4EJ jet fighters scrambled from a base in Naha, Okinawa, after radar showed an unidentified plane flying into Japanese airspace.

The official said the Japanese fighters first gave warnings by radio and, when these were ignored, fired warning shots as the plane entered Japanese airspace. The plane, however, stayed inside Japanese airspace until several more warning shots were fired, he added.

One of four Soviet medium-range Tu-16 "Badger" bombers heading north entered Japanese air space twice for a total of 11 minutes, starting at 11:24 a.m., the official said.

He said it was the second violation of Japanese airspace by Soviet planes this year and the 20th since 1967.

Dinner Featured Sing-Alongs, Bear Hugs, Caviar

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Communists and capitalists alike kicked off their heels at a glittering state dinner at the White House, as Mikhail and Raisa Gorbachev joined an impromptu sing-along of the soulful ballad "Moscow Nights."

It was a night, President Reagan said, "I'll remember for a long time."

The U.S. and Soviet delegations returned Tuesday evening to the elegant, chandeliered East Room, where only hours before the two leaders had signed the first-ever pact to do away with an entire class of nuclear weapons.

For the 126 guests attending the festive dinner, it was an evening in which the strains of both the "The Internationale" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" filled the room, courtesy of concert pianist Van Cliburn.

"Music is the universal language of mankind," Reagan reminded his guests in announcing the pianist, who had not played in public for nine years. He is renowned in the Soviet Union, being the first American to win the coveted Tchaikovsky competition.

At the end of his performance of Schubert, Rachmaninoff, Brahms and Debussy, Gorbachev leapt from his seat to give the pianist a bear-hug and kisses on the cheeks. Mrs. Gorbachev followed suit, asking him to play again.

Van Cliburn then played and sang in Russian the plaintive song, "Moscow Nights." Soon, the Gorbachevs and the entire Soviet delegation sang along softly.

"Wasn't that something?" first lady Nancy Reagan said of the impromptu performance, after her guests had departed.

"We'll get you some bookings," Reagan quipped to the Gorbachevs and Van Cliburn afterward.

Appearing in a very upbeat mood after seeing his guests off, Reagan told reporters there had been no surprises in the first day of talks. Asked if there was more work ahead, he said, "I figure you work right down to the last day."

Queried if this summit were better than the one that fell apart in Reykjavik, he said, "So far. We signed a treaty."

The president, clearly elated by the day's events, said he and Gorbachev now are on a first-name basis. "He calls me Ron," Reagan confided.

The Soviet leader, however, was described as being all business at the dinner table.

"We talked a lot of substance," said dinner partner Sen. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo. "He was very sharp, very quick, very dynamic, as he always is. He gave as good as he got."

Across the table sat former assistant secretary of defense Richard Perle known for his stiff opposition to arms control treaties with the Soviets.

"I'm not sure either of us persuaded the other," Perle told reporters. "We defined the issues."

Helena Shultz, wife of Secretary of State George Shultz, who had escorted Mrs. Gorbachev on her whirlwind auto tour of Washington monuments, proclaimed her "a wonderful woman."

"She had a great time," Mrs.

Shultz said. "She liked the Jefferson Memorial the best."

The White House fired off a 21-gun salute to greet the Gorbachevs, beginning a hectic day of summit festivities culminating in the pageantry of the elaborate state dinner.

The Reagans braved the chill night air to greet their guests, who arrived ten minutes late.

The couples then went to the State Floor for their formal pictures, the Reagans smiling and the Gorbachevs appearing somewhat stiff and ill at ease.

The Soviet leader eschewed the traditional White House black tie, and chose instead to sport a dark, three-piece blue suit, white shirt, and dark blue and red tie. His wife wore a full-length, black moire brocade two-piece suit and a long double strand of pearls.

The president held to his traditional black-tie finery, with Mrs. Reagan attired in a beaded, full-length black Galanos gown, its sleeves decorated in pink, black and white spangles.

The guests dined on the red Reagan china, at tables adorned with white freesia, amaryllis, and dark green leaves.

In making their toasts, the president said the two sides had made "significant progress," and that they had "the opportunity with mutual commitment and hard work to achieve much more in the coming months."

Gorbachev, saying U.S.-Soviet relations had improved, declared "the winter is on the wane."

He expressed hopes for a nuclear-free world, saying it would be difficult to achieve. "But with new thinking, it is attainable."

The two sides exchanged gifts, with Gorbachev presenting Reagan with an embroidered leather saddle and a case of caviar, while the president gave the Soviet leader a nine-inch diameter Tiffany sterling silver bowl.

Mrs. Reagan presented the Soviet first lady with a pair of Steuben "Teardrop," candlesticks, which contain a captured teardrop in the stem. Mrs. Gorbachev gave Mrs. Reagan a crystal serving set and some chocolates.

The Soviets also presented a Boehm porcelain sculpture, depicting the flight of doves around the globe, entitled, "Global Peace."

The guests dined on a menu that included Columbia salmon and caviar sauce, veal with wild mushrooms, tarragon tomatoes and a medley of garden greens, as well as tea sorbet with honey ice cream for dessert.

Mall Waited, But Mrs. Gorbachev Didn't Pay Visit

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer
BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — As the afternoon wore on, the ice in the champagne bucket melted, along with hopes that Raisa Gorbachev would come to call.

Rumors had spread quickly through the posh White Flint Mall in the Washington suburb of Bethesda that the fashion-conscious Soviet first lady was planning a shopping visit on Tuesday. And the reporters, photographers and television crews quickly descended.

There was no official word that Mrs. Gorbachev would come to the mall — let alone what shops she might visit.

But just in case, mall officials rapidly spruced up the place, clearing delivery trucks away from the main entrance to make way for that hoped-for long black limousine.

Bloomingdale's put two bottles of champagne on ice in a small section of the store where elegant designer-label women's garb is displayed in a cozy setting.

They also were ready with gifts for the Gorbachevs: a white sweat shirt for him — extra-large with a Bloomingdale's Athletic Club logo in red and blue on the front — and for her a white "sleep shirt" with broad vertical stripes in royal blue, one size fits all.

The front of the shirt had the words "West East" and between the two words was a red and blue emblem with a map of the world encircled by the words "Bloomies Worldwide."

Both shirts, of course, were made in the U.S.A.

Bloomingdale's manager Gary Kaufman said the store had another gift, a "serious" one, for the Gorbachevs, but he declined to say what it was. Other store officials said it was an "American designer" gift, and was not clothing.

All afternoon, Bloomingdale's offices were crowded with reporters and camera crews, who seemed to ask only one question over and over: "Is she coming?"

Store officials were asking reporters the same question, and soon shoppers were asking it too.

And the more the question was asked, the more it seemed she would come. No clue was overlooked. At one point, a helicopter was circling over the mall. Surely, reporters and mall personnel told each other, something was up.

Later, mall officials heard that police had begun blocking off an intersection near the mall, which could mean a motorcade was on the way.

Inside Bloomingdale's, few shoppers were aware of the rumored visit. But the ones who were talked about the Soviet first lady, wondering what size she wears and what kind of clothes she likes.

As it turned out, Mrs. Gorbachev apparently spent the afternoon at the Soviet Embassy in downtown Washington.

At 4 p.m., with no Raisa, no official word and the ice in the champagne bucket nearly melted, store officials dismantled their reception table.

But they didn't give up hope.

"Maybe tomorrow, or Thursday. There's still time," one store official said.

Fired Airline Employee's Home Combed For Clues To Jet Crash

By GEORGE GARTIES
Associated Press Writer

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — FBI agents removed boxes and a metal briefcase from the home of a fired airline worker killed in a jetliner crash that reportedly stemmed from a revenge plot against his former boss.

David A. Burke, 35, was portrayed by friends and neighbors as an amiable man who championed civil rights at his longtime employer, USAir, but who got into trouble for it and had a stormy side that included brushes with the law.

"I don't know how he could've done what they said he done, not David," Burke's older brother, Allan Burke of Rochester, N.Y., said in an interview in today's Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Investigators declined comment on an ABC News report that a revenge-crazed Burke left a suicide note and smuggled a .44-caliber Magnum onto Pacific Southwest Airlines Flight 1771, whose crew reported gunfire and smoke in the cockpit just before Monday's crash killed all 43 people on board.

"It appears at this point — and has yet to be substantiated — that it was a criminal act on board that caused the craft to come down," said Richard Bretzing, FBI special agent in charge.

USAir, PSA's parent corporation, has confirmed that Burke was fired Nov. 19 for "misappropriation of funds," and that he and his former boss, Raymond F. Thomson, 48, of Tiburon, were aboard the doomed flight.

Police and agents spent much of Tuesday inside Burke's condominium about 25 miles south of downtown Los Angeles, interviewing a woman neighbors said they believed was his girlfriend. They later returned with a search warrant.

Paul Breen, who supervises the FBI's Long Beach office, refused to say why authorities removed the two cardboard boxes and metal briefcase.

The tall, stocky Burke, a native of England whose parents are Jamaican, was the father of as many as 11 children, though he apparently had never married, according to the Rochester newspaper.

Burke, who lived in Rochester 14 years, was investigated by police and the FBI there for alleged cocaine trafficking and car theft, but wasn't charged in either case, the newspaper said.

Al Nitto, a former next-door neighbor in Rochester, said police were occasionally called to Burke's home to investigate alleged domestic disputes and Burke once "blew out all the windows in his garage door," although Nitto did not know if he used a gun.

Even so, Nitto's wife, Marie, said that when they heard the reports about Burke in connection with the crash, "We couldn't believe it."

"Dave was a very classy person. He always had things under control.

He drove nice cars, wore nice clothes," she said.

Burke fought fiercely for equal opportunity employment at USAir at Greater Rochester International Airport, friends said. A year or two after he was hired, Burke sued the airline, claiming it was discriminating against him on the basis of race by promoting people with less seniority, his brother said.

"They held that against him for years," Allan Burke said.

"The reason black employees are out there (working for USAir) is because of David," said Terry Stith, a longtime friend. "If he thought something wasn't right, he'd do something about it."

After 13 years with the airline, Burke transferred to California about a year ago. Residents in Long Beach, where he had lived since June, described him as a nice neighbor, though with a temper.

"We heard him hollering at his daughter," said Roger Krause. "To me, when I talked to him, he was real nice."

Allegations that Burke stole $80 to $90 from a USAir office on Nov. 15 led to consideration of misdemeanor charges against him, said Mike Qualls of the Los Angeles City Attorney's Office.

Military Plane Down; 9 Hurt, 2 Are Missing

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (AP) — A U.S. military transport plane with 11 Americans aboard crashed in Antarctica today, and two people were missing and the nine injured, an official said.

"I have no information ... of any fatalities. That would be merely speculative," said Cmdr. Bob Harler, head of Operation Deepfreeze, which coordinates U.S. activities in Antarctica from Christchurch.

He said an emergency medical team had been sent by plane to the crash site, 862 miles northeast of the U.S. McMurdo Station on McMurdo Sound, the main U.S. base in Antarctica.

Harler said the C-130 Hercules, a four-engine plane equipped with ski-type landing gear, crashed at 9 a.m. today (5 p.m. Tuesday EST) during an operation to recover another Hercules that went down at the same site 15 years ago.

He said all 11 aboard were Americans and that two U.S. Navy personnel were missing. The Hercules crashed as it attempted to land on a runway made of packed snow. Harler described the crash site as being on a massive, flat and featureless plain about 3,300 feet above sea level.

There was no immediate word on weather conditions or the cause of the crash. Harler said the airstrip, like most in the Antarctic, was in constant need of maintenance because of winds and blizzards.

The crashed plane was one of six U.S. Hercules in Antarctica.

All are equipped with landing skis and are the main workhorses for about 1,200 Americans on the frozen continent during the polar summer, which lasts from October to mid-December.

Despite round-the-clock daylight because of the Southern Hemisphere's summer, the area is susceptible to strong winds and below zero temperatures.

Harler said everyone on the aircraft was well versed in polar survival techniques and would have been wearing regulation extreme cold clothing of several layers. The aircraft was equipped with shelters, fuel and sleds and had at least a week's food rations, he added.

BACK TO COURT — Former presidential aide Michael K. Deaver arrives at U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., Tuesday with his wife, Carolyn. Deaver's defense rested its case in the perjury trial without calling any witnesses and is now renewing attempts to dismiss allegations Deaver lied about lobbying contracts. (AP Laserphoto)

Judge Cuts Meetings References From Deaver Perjury Indictment

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The jury in Michael K. Deaver's perjury trial will be asked to decide if the former White House aide lied about his lobbying activities, but alleged meetings with Canadian officials won't figure in the decision.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson on Tuesday deleted references to any alleged meetings with Canadian officials from the indictment that will be submitted to the jury.

Deaver is accused, among other things, of lying when he said he couldn't recall discussing the subject of acid rain until 11 days before the March 17, 1985 summit meeting between President Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

Independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. was unable to prove that Deaver had a Jan. 5, 1985 lunch with Canadian Ambassador Allan Gottlieb during which the acid rain issue was discussed. Gottlieb invoked diplomatic immunity and refused to testify.

"The failure of proof is not of trying," said Seymour, whose attempts to secure Gottlieb's testimony provoked two diplomatic protests from the Canadian government this year.

Deaver is charged with five counts of lying to a House subcommittee and a grand jury when he said he couldn't recall contacting former Reagan administration officials on behalf of his lobbying clients.

Shortly after he resigned as deputy White House chief of staff in May 1985, Deaver became a $100,000-a-year lobbyist for Canada, which wanted an agreement with the United States to reduce acid rain.

Other counts against Deaver concern his activities for other lobbying clients. Each perjury count carries a possible five-year prison term and fine of $6,800.

Deaver's defense rested without calling any witnesses. Jurors are scheduled to hear final arguments in the case on Thursday and legal instructions on Friday.

Jackson also deleted a reference to a Dec. 11, 1984 meeting with Gottlieb and other Canadian officials at which Deaver was alleged to have discussed the issue.

Even though the Canadians refused to be witnesses at the trial, prosecutors have presented testimony from three other former senior White House officials who disputed Deaver's account of his involvement with the acid-rain issue.

Former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, former White House communications director Patrick Buchanan and ex-White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan all said Deaver advocated appointment of a U.S. envoy to Canada on the issue.

Buchanan recalled a meeting in which then-Budget Director David Stockman "went ballistic" during an argument with Deaver about whether to appoint an acid-rain envoy to Canada.

Buchanan said Deaver favored the idea as a way to defuse the political problem facing the Canadian government while Stockman expressed the fear it would eventually lead to a costly program to clean up acid rain.

Sympathy, But No Apologies Offered In N.Y. Race Case

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An attorney defending one of four white teen-agers accused of killing a black man in Howard Beach offered condolences to the man's family for the first time in court, but contended the death was the victim's fault.

Michael Griffith, 23, was not the victim of a racist assault, but died because of his decision to cross a busy highway, attorney Ronald Rubinstein said in closing arguments Tuesday.

Rubinstein, who represents 17-year-old Jason Ladone, was one of three defense lawyers who gave closing arguments in the eight-week trial Tuesday. The case is expected to go to the jury Thursday.

"On behalf of (Ladone's mother) Joanna Ladone, Jason and myself, I want you to know that our sincere sympathy goes out to the family of Michael Griffith," he said in the first such statement in court by anyone associated with the defendants.

Mrs. Ladone has attended the state Supreme Court trial in the borough of Queens daily, as have Jean and Christopher Griffith, the dead man's mother and brother. Mrs. Griffith has said that none of the teens' parents has ever spoken to her.

The four youths are accused of attacking three black men who strayed into the predominantly white Howard Beach neighborhood, and of causing Griffith's death by chasing him onto the highway, where he was struck by a car.

In Tuesday's arguments, defense attorneys Stephen Murphy and Bryan Levinson ridiculed the testimony of two white prosecution witnesses, Robert Riley and Dominic Blum.

The defense lawyers also insisted that racism had nothing to do with the incident. "Racism, one way or another, is an ugly thing," said Murphy. "But it's got nothing to do with this case."

Riley, 18, admitted taking part in the attack but cooperated with prosecutors in exchange for leniency. Blum, who drove the car that hit Griffith, testified that he was not aware he had hit somebody.

Murphy said Blum's story was "absolutely ridiculous," and that Riley was the aggressor among the white teens.

He said the three black men ran from the whites because a drunken Riley was charging at them with a baseball bat. But he said the blacks probably would have stabbed the whites if Riley hadn't intervened.

Levinson, representing Jon Lester, 18, said Riley lied in order to corroborate the prosecution's scenario.

"Big, bad Bobby Riley. ... The boy is perfect," Levinson said, his voice dripping with sarcasm.

Another major thread running through defense arguments was that the alleged victims — Griffith, 37-year-old Cedric Sandiford and 19-year-old Timothy Grimes — were shady characters who were up to no good in Howard Beach.

Engineer Training Keys Strike Flap

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Railroad Administration says the Springfield Terminal Railway Co. is using a number of inadequately trained engineers in an attempt to keep operating in the Northeast during a strike.

About 1,200 union workers walked off the job in a protest over safety on Nov. 12, several days after a fatal accident in the railroad's Lowell, Mass., freight yard.

The union blamed the accident on the inexperience of the train's engineer. FRA reported that it found traces of marijuana in the bloodstream of a brakeman, but the accident remains under investigation by federal officials.

FRA Administrator John H. Riley, in a letter Tuesday to union and company officials, agreed with a complaint by the United Transportation Union about the qualifications of some recently hired engineers.

Riley praised Springfield Terminal's engineering training program, but said FRA is concerned about the qualifications of some engineers hired during the past year.

"While we found many qualified individuals, we have come to believe that in an effort to fill vacancies created by the strike and remain in normal operation, management has in a number of cases pressed into service newly hired engineers whose training and experience does not meet the levels we deem acceptable," he said.

At the same time, Riley dismissed several other union complaints.

He said 300 on-site inspections by agency officials over a 10-day period showed that, contrary to union charges, dispatchers were adequately qualified. Federal investigators also ruled out a union allegation that locomotive inspection records were destroyed by the company.

But Riley said inspections of 79 Springfield Terminal locomotives uncovered 21 cases of oil leaks or accumulations that can seep into operating engines or generators and lead to engine fires.

Inspectors also discovered cases of exhaust gas leaks, inoperative alerting devices, faulty traction devices and defective brake shoes.

On the other side, Riley pointed to a "pattern of violence" against the railroad that has endangered operations, employees "and members of the public who are unfortunate enough to be near railroad property when one of these incidents occurs."

He cited the discovery of 75 cut brake hoses on idle trains in Lowell, Mass., over a three-week period, placement of bear traps on a Massachusetts rail bridge, the destruction of a power station by gunfire and two derailments in Maine.

"We have found no evidence linking these incidents to striking personnel," Riley said.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Newly elected Mayor Art Agnos said his overwhelming victory over city Supervisor John Molinari proves "politics can still belong to the people."

Agnos, a liberal assemblyman who began his grassroots campaign as an underdog more than eight months ago, handed a stunning defeat Tuesday to Molinari, the one-time front-runner who was considered Mayor Dianne Feinstein's heir apparent.

With all 711 precincts reporting, Agnos garnered 101,519 votes, or 69.5 percent, to Molinari's 43,566 votes, or 29.8 percent, in the runoff election. Several write-in candidates received a total of 974 votes, or 7 percent.

"I promised you that in this campaign we were going to make a difference," Agnos told jubilant supporters. "It was going to be a campaign that every San Franciscan could be proud of and together, we kept that pledge."

"We proved that in 1987 in San Francisco, politics can still belong to the people," said Agnos, a Greek immigrant's son who arrived in San Francisco on a Greyhound bus in 1966 with $500. He was elected to the state assembly in 1976.

The non-partisan post of mayor pays $112,084 a year.

In a surprise move, Molinari, who was raised in the city's Italian North Beach section, made a gracious appearance at Agnos' campaign headquarters after conceding defeat.

"I have come here tonight to congratulate him on his tremendous victory and to pledge to him my cooperation in making this city great ... because I believe the people of San Francisco want Art and I to do that," Molinari said.

As the city's 37th mayor, Agnos inherits a growing number of AIDS patients and a major league baseball franchise, the San Francisco Giants, that wants to leave town unless it gets a new stadium.

More importantly, he will lead the city of almost 700,000 for the next four years, beginning with a predicted $87 million budget deficit for the coming fiscal year. If it's not eliminated, the city controller warns up to 1,300 workers must be laid off.

Late in the campaign, the 49-year-old Agnos was given a 3-1 edge over his 52-year-old rival, who described himself as a centrist.

Agnos and Molinari together spent more than $3 million on the campaign and found themselves the top two vote-getters in a field of 11 on the November ballot. A runoff was required because no candidate received more than 50 percent.

Molinari, a 16-year supervisor and current president of the board of supervisors, slipped steadily in popularity as his campaign took on a mudslinging image, even though he was endorsed by Feinstein.

Network Difficulties

NEW YORK (AP) — Peace talks between NBC and ABC followed the treaty signing by Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev and President Reagan after NBC inadvertently swiped ABC's exclusive live shot from Moscow.

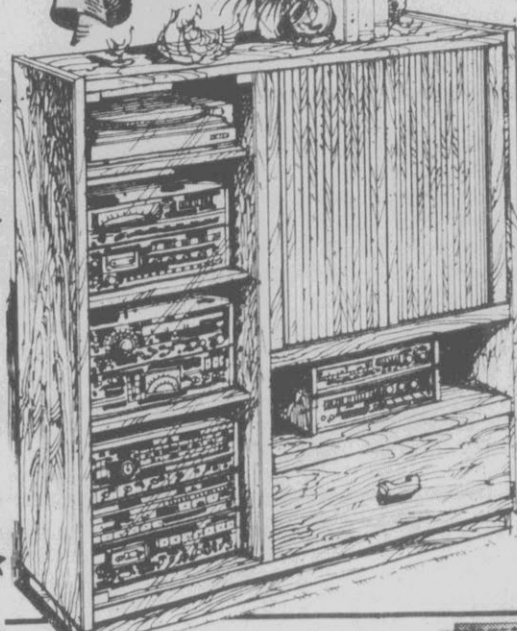

An ABC spokeswoman said the network toiled for two weeks to set up the exclusive footage of Soviet citizens watching the White House ceremony from Moscow's Kalinin Prospekt Square, where there is a large television screen.

But shortly after the networks went live with Tuesday morning's White House ceremony, ABC's shot appeared on NBC.

NBC spokesman Andrew Freedman said an NBC producer in Moscow thought the footage would look nice on his network and got a Soviet Gostelradio technician to switch it to NBC's satellite, not knowing it belonged to ABC.

"It was totally unintentional," Freedman said. "Vice presidents from our side have talked to vice presidents on their side and expressed our apologies. I understand as a sign of good faith, we're sharing satellite time with ABC this afternoon."

ABC, NBC and CBS said they had no firm plans for live coverage of the summit today. Cable News Network planned to continue live coverage throughout the day.

Teens Experience Pioneer Living

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — Pulling a handcart through the Rocky Mountains in a rainstorm was no lark for 15-year-old Zanetta Van Zyverden, a participant in a "Pioneer Trek" for teen-agers.

But she wouldn't have traded the four-day experience for a year's supply of free pizza.

"It was hard work, but it made me feel good about what I could accomplish. The experience was a turning point in my life," said Zanetta, now 16, as she recalled the adventure.

The modern-day pioneer experience is designed to give teen-agers an appreciation for what the Mormon pioneers experienced on their 1,200-mile trek west. Each summer nine groups of 200 young people spend four days traveling over 25 miles of rugged mountain trails in Utah's Wasatch National Forest.

For some participants, the impact can be profound. Zanetta was one of those people.

"That was a year ago, when I was going through hard knocks with my family," she said. "I was always the rebellious one, battling with my mom, doing poorly in school. My goal in life was to become an alcoholic. I'd laugh about it. Life was ups and downs, but mostly downs. A lot of the time I didn't want to live."

"I look back now and think maybe it was my fault. On the trek, family unity is emphasized. My 'ma' in our pioneer family told me to hug my mom and tell her how much I love her when I got home. I told her 'no way,' but when I got home I gave mom a hug, and it was the start of getting along. Now we're real close."

The groups are divided into "families" of about 16 people, with adult leaders as the "parents." Each family is given a handcart to pull, just as the pioneers did.

"That first night we pushed and pulled our handcart from noon to midnight on mountain trails, everyone pulling together," Zanetta remembers. "The last mile was uphill, and we started running when we pulled into camp because we wanted to get there so bad."

The would-be pioneers had broth the first night, typical pioneer fare, and cornmeal mush the next morning.

"The food was really gross, but we ate it because we were so hungry," Zanetta says.

The next day the families pulled the carts to basic camp, where they would learn to shoot a black powder gun, make candles and play pioneer games. For dinner, there would be freshly roasted turkey. But someone had to catch it first.

"I was chosen to be the turkey catcher for our family," says Zanetta. "I caught it with help from my family, then we had to kill it, pluck it, and put it in a pit to cook it. I didn't want to do that, but we needed the food. I cried because we killed it. But then we cooked it with sage, and it was really good."

There's more to the Pioneer Trek than catching your own food and pulling a handcart, though, says 19-year-old Heidi Moffat, assistant director of the program sponsored by the educational system of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. She works part time in the program while she is a student at Brigham Young University.

"The experience changes people, and helps them build self-esteem," says Heidi, who first went on Pioneer Trek when she was 14 years old. "The kids see themselves accomplishing hard tasks, and learn confidence. They also learn to appreciate friends and family more."

Adds Zanetta, "In the pioneer families, you stick together with total strangers, and grow close. We depended on each other, and I learned from that."

Each participant was assigned to go blindfolded a short distance from camp and bring back five objects — something hard, soft, dead, alive and yellow. They would typically bring back flowers, twigs and rocks.

"We had to rely on our leaders' directions to get out safely, and trust them," says Zanetta. "After I got back, the leaders asked if I would help the others come back safely, even though I was still blindfolded. Something happened to me at that point. My life had been chaotic, and I was surprised to find a new calmness. I found something in myself I didn't know was there."

"I've done a lot of growing outside of Pioneer Trek, but it was the beginning of feeling good about myself," says Zanetta. "My grades are good and I've cleaned up my life. I still have problems, but I've made some good decisions about my life. I learned some important things on the trek."

CROPPED SWEATER

Sweater Has Cropped Style

Merry Christmas wishes come your way with this super-simple cropped top that even beginning knitters will find easy to make. The garter stitch (where every row is knit) is worked from side to side in only one piece to assure a fast and easy finish.

Shaping is minimal. An attractively priced mohair and wool blend yarn provides a soft, feminine texture with a stitch gauge of four stitches to the inch. Directions are for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 36, 38 and 40 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for knitting the Side to Side One Piece, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-120687 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-120687 by sending a check or money order for $14.95 for all sizes to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and mohair and wool blend yarn in your choice of jade, garnet, navy or cream.

Dear Pat: I love to learn new pattern stitches for knitting and crocheting. When I find one I haven't done before, I pick up needles and leftover yarn and make a sample swatch to see how I like it.

I keep the swatches in my pattern stitch file — really a loose-leaf notebook — slipping the pattern stitch directions, swatch, and notes about the yarn, needle size and gauge into a plastic sheet protector. Thus I have at my fingertips all the information to use later in planning sweater designs.

One day, after realizing that I'd never have the time to use each pattern stitch separately — a frustrating thought to me — an idea dawned on me. I gathered up a basket of leftover yarns of similar weight, and planned an afghan using squares and strips, each in a different pattern.

Before the project reached full afghan dimensions, I realized I had made a lovely lap robe, which I took to a local nursing home (after photographing it so I would have a permanent record of what I had done) and asked that it be given to a patient.

It was so warmly received that I vowed to make many more, and enlisted several friends to do the same. If they don't have their own collection of stitch ideas, I photocopy some from my file, and my friends put them together in whatever way they like so no two are alike.

I do advise using yarns of similar fibers in any one lap robe.

First Lady Nancy Reagan Keeps Perspective

By DONNA RADCLIFFE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service
(EDITOR'S Note: This is the second part of a two part story)

WASHINGTON — Nancy Reagan has learned to joke about her alleged behind-the-scenes work running things at the White House, a role she denies.

"Oh, of course I am. Yes. Yes," she said to the suggestion that she was involved in preparation for this week's arms talks. "I just broke away from a meeting to come over here and see you." She even joined in kidding about the treaty having room for her and Raisa Gorbachev to sign along with their husbands.

But there are things she doesn't joke about. "I'd like to see (Supreme Court nominee Anthony) Kennedy (confirmed) — get that done," she said. "I'd like to see the budget-deficit talks come to a conclusion. And let Ronnie go ahead with things that she wants to do under a more peaceful atmosphere."

Her mother's little gold ring glistened on her finger and from time to time she touched it. She thought a bit about the fishbowl in which she has lived for the past seven years. That's one thing she won't miss when she leaves.

"No, no, I won't. No, I won't," she said. "I'll enjoy a little more privacy. I'll enjoy not being under that microscope all the time. That gets a little wearing."

And meanwhile, how will she keep her perspective?

"You just do," she said. "I mean, maybe I got that from mother. I hope I got something from mother. If you have a job to do, you have to do it."

News photos of her taken at the Oct. 14 Duarte dinner show her staring straight ahead, unsmiling. There was no hint of her preoccupation as she chatted with guests, though she made sure that one of them, fashion designer Ralph Lauren, who underwent surgery for removal of a brain tumor last spring, sat next to her at dinner.

She flew to New Hampshire the morning of Oct. 16, keeping her drug abuse-Foster Grandparents commitment. "I very much want to get those two programs together," she said.

"You wouldn't have known anything was wrong," said speech writer Landon Parvin, in whom she confided on the trip up. He noticed that only when her plane was airborne heading back to Andrews Air Force Base did she seem as if a weight had been lifted from her shoulders.

A few hours later, she, Reagan and her stepbrother climbed into the presidential helicopter for the flight to Bethesda.

"I hadn't been in a hospital since my children were born," she said. "I didn't even know what to pack." She did know to take along some family pictures — she had hung pictures all over the room those times Reagan was in the hospital — and hairdresser Robin Weir suggested her hot curlers.

In the hospital that night she signed the necessary papers authorizing surgery in the event the lesion proved malignant. By then she had ruled out a lumpectomy and decided upon a modified radical mastectomy, a traditional surgical procedure in which the breast and the lymph nodes are removed. Her health and state of mind were primary considerations, but part of her reasoning also had been recovery time.

"If I had gone for the other, there would have been radiation, and I couldn't possibly carry on the schedule that I have with radiation. I mean — there would have been no way," she said.

The next morning, Oct. 17, fog grounded the president's chopper, and he and Richard Davis had to ride to Bethesda by limousine. They saw Mrs. Reagan briefly in a hallway, and not again until they joined her in the recovery room. Groggy but vocal, she implored them: "Please don't let Bob Woodward in my hospital room."

Woodward's book, "Veil: The Secret Wars of the CIA, 1981-1987" tells of a hospital bedside interview with the late CIA director William Casey. Casey and his wife Sophia were personal friends of the Reagans, and the first lady had told an interviewer a few weeks earlier that she found it "distasteful" and "ghoulish" that Woodward tried to interview Casey as he lay dying from brain cancer.

Reagan had a quip ready. "Honey, I know you don't feel like dancing, so let's just hold hands," he comforted.

Others have told what came next. "I don't remember this — but I evidently did keep saying to him, 'I'm so sorry. I'm so sorry for you.' And he kept saying to me, 'It doesn't make any difference. It doesn't make any difference.'"

Was she apologizing for being a burden to him, or taking up his time? "No," she said, "this is something else."

She kicked up her heels when she got home five days later, on Oct. 22. "I do that a lot," she said, giggling.

Reagan led her away from the carnival-like welcome engineered by the White House staff to begin a recuperation they both expected to last a minimum of three weeks. But the death four days later of Edie Davis, who had been in poor health for several years, changed that. As Mrs. Reagan told it:

"It was late in the afternoon and I was lying on the bed. It was about 4 p.m., I think. And Ron called. And just then, the door opened and Ronnie walked in. I thought, 'What in the world is he doing here at 4 o'clock in the afternoon?' And I looked at his face and I knew something was wrong. But I didn't know what it was. And I said to Ron, 'Hold on a minute. Daddy just came in and something's wrong.' And he came up and sat down on the bed beside me. And I kept saying, 'What is it? What's wrong? What is it?'"

"And this man's face was just really so agonized. And it was — obviously, he didn't know how to tell me. And he finally said, 'Edie's with Loyal.' Well — and Ron is hanging there on the phone hearing me saying, 'Oh, no, no, no, no, no. Let me go to her. Please, let me go to her.' And not knowing what's happening."

"But poor Ronnie."

Already vulnerable physically, she went to pieces.

"I thought if somebody was testing me up there, that maybe it was time to stop," she said.

The next morning Reagan took her to Phoenix. Aboard Air Force One, a tersely worded White House announcement informed reporters that Ron, Maureen and Michael Reagan would be at the funeral but that Patti Davis would be "traveling with her husband." Patti's most recent split with her parents, reportedly rooted in her autobiographical 1986 novel "Home Front," had come out in the open.

In Phoenix, she sorted and packed, reminiscenced and cried throughout the week. "No one will ever know the debt I owed my mother, no one will ever know what my mother meant to me," she told Nancy Reynolds.

She came across little things that took on new significance: the little red wool gloves Edie Davis wore, regardless of the Arizona temperature; a tiny gold ring engraved with the letters "E-N."

"I can only assume — because it has her E and then mine, N, that she must have had it made after I was born, because obviously it is not a baby ring or else I couldn't have gotten it on my finger," she said. "So she must have worn it after I was born, but I never knew."

She was called by son Ron. They sifted through mementos and took walks through around the hotel grounds, though she never could locate for him the honeymoon cottage she and his father had occupied.

"I don't know what I would have done without him," she said.

Her stepchildren Maureen and Michael Reagan, whose relationships with her in the past have not always been smooth, closed ranks for a show of family solidarity.

But Patti, her firstborn and rebellious since childhood, was not with them. "Another crack in an already broken heart," Crispin said of Patti's failure to join the family for her grandmother's funeral.

Others said Patti's behavior was characteristic of her. "As a little girl she has always been different from the rest," said Betsy Bloomingdale. "She didn't want her father to be governor. And she didn't want him to be president."

Whether such assessments were fair to her daughter wasn't of concern to Nancy Reagan when she talked in the White House. "I am more concerned about what is fair to my mother," she said.

Asked if it was hard for her to understand her daughter's seeming indifference, not only to her grandmother's death but generally to witnessing and even being a part of history in the making, she said, "That's a problem that someday she'll have to face. I don't — Ron more than makes up for that, you know."

Close as Patti and her grandmother once had been (as a schoolgirl in Arizona, Patti often visited the Davises, whose name she later took; five years ago, she attended Loyal Davis' funeral), Nancy Reagan said she sees none of Edie Davis in her daughter.

"No, no, no, no," she protested at the suggestion. "Mother was the most considerate of people and the kindest of people. ... It wasn't just surface — you know, 'How is your little boy?' Pat on the head. Not that at all. No, there was nothing selfish or self-centered or anything about my mother."

It Pays To Teach Children Young

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A short time ago, my niece, Mrs. Donald Palumbo, had an accident at home. She was helpless and couldn't reach the phone. Fortunately, she had taught Gina, her 3-year-old daughter, how to make a few phone calls, so that child called the operator and told her to send the police and an ambulance!

The police came right out, this child let them in, and from that point on everything was taken care of. So you see, it pays to teach them young. — MRS. JOSEPH BIRITELA, BRONX, N.Y.

DEAR MRS. BIRITELA: Hooray for Mrs. Palumbo! She taught little Gina well. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am a radio dispatcher for the local police department. I answer all the calls and dispatch the police, paramedics, firefighters, etc. These are all emergency calls.

Lately our department has been having a serious problem that I am sure we share with other dispatchers.

We receive at least 25 calls a day from children who are "playing" on the phone. I can understand that parents want their children to know how to contact the police or fire department in case of an emergency, but these children should be taught to call us only when there's a real emergency because it ties up our lines.

Abby, I hope you think this is important enough for your column. — BUSY DISPATCHER

DEAR DISPATCHER: It is and I did. Parents: Let the little ones practice on a toy phone, and leave the dispatcher's line free. One day it could be you calling for help.

DEAR ABBY: You recently stated that a full colonel has a "chicken" on his shoulder. No, no, Abby! A full colonel has an eagle on his shoulder. You may recall the old military song: "Would you rather be a colonel with an eagle on your shoulder or a private with a chicken on your knee?"

Please apologize, and sign me "Old Railroad Tracks." — CAPT. CORTEZ, SAN ANTONIO

DEAR CAPT. CORTEZ: Error acknowledged and apology rendered for a fowl mistake. However, there is more to apologize for (same letter): I identified the silver leaf worn on the shoulder of the lieutenant colonel as a maple leaf. Wrong again. It's an oak leaf.

DEAR ABBY: We are having a family problem. Our daughter is being married in Santa Fe (our hometown). We are preparing our guest list for the wedding. Two couples from New York have already told me they cannot attend.

I say they should not be sent an invitation since they have already said they cannot attend.

My husband says we should send them an invitation regardless. What do you think? — MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: I vote with you. Since they have already been invited — and declined — inviting them again would be pointless. However, a wedding announcement later might be in order.

Medical Services

GREENSBORO (AP) — The elderly in rural areas generally are in poorer health than most other people, and they can do little about the problem because of a lack of medical services in their area, a University of North Carolina at Greensboro professor says.

Dr. Vira Kivett, professor of child development and family relations, says rural areas, on a per capita basis, have 58 percent fewer physicians, 38 percent fewer dentists and 29 percent fewer nurses than urban areas.

Too often, she says, the rural elderly must travel long distances to reach facilities offering medical screening and health monitoring and don't have services available that would help them stay in their own homes, such as respite care, hospice programs and day care centers.

"Health maintenance and illness prevention services are less available and less accessible in rural areas and the ratio of physicians and other health care professionals to the population is substantially lower than in urban places," Ms. Kivett said.

During his 20 years on the ECU faculty Pierce continued to write and lecture, dividing his time between a Greenville apartment and his farm at Pierce's Crossroads near Enfield in Halifax County, which he dubbed "The Plantation."

Pierce's native Roanoke River Valley region provided the inspiration and the setting for his novels, some set in the post-Civil War era. His prose and style of handling his characters' dialogue and dialects won acclaim from major literary critics, among them Orville Prescott of The New York Times and Harnett Kane of The Chicago Tribune.

In 1973 Pierce was awarded the University of North Carolina's most prestigious faculty honor, the O. Max Gardner Award, for having "produced, with artistry and integrity, an authoritative portrait of the South."

Earlier he was twice awarded the Sir Walter Raleigh Award for Fiction and the North Carolina Gold Medal for Literature.

Pierce was a defender of the Southern literary tradition, which he perceived as rich, complex and inextricably rooted to its land and landscape.

Gorbachev Meets With Senior Lawmakers

Soviet leader was expected to address the issue of ratification. "Now, as soon as the press leaves us alone we can talk to one another," Gorbachev said. Moments later, television cameras were shut down and the session was closed.

Gorbachev played host at the outset of his second day of summit talks after attending a glittering White House state dinner Tuesday night. He and his wife Raisa joined an impromptu sing-along of the soulful ballad, "Moscow Nights," played as an encore by pianist Van Cliburn.

After his meeting with U.S. legislators, the Soviet leader headed for the White House for his third meeting alone with Reagan in two days.

Behind the scenes, American and Soviet experts were picking up discussions of a new pact aimed at reducing the superpowers' arsenals of long-range nuclear weapons launched by missiles, bombers and submarines.

A senior American official said there were "no surprises or new proposals" during the first summit sessions on Tuesday.

In the White House talks, squeezed in between the congressional leaders and a Gorbachev meeting with prominent editors and publishers, Reagan and the general secretary intended to focus on touchy "regional issues," including the conflicts in Afghanistan and the Persian Gulf.

The Soviets already have indicated they are prepared to withdraw their estimated 115,000 troops from Afghanistan in a year's time. But Reagan and his key advisers are operating on the assumption the Soviets are so weary of the bloody conflict between the pro-Moscow government in Kabul and U.S.-aided Afghan rebels they may be ready to accept a much shorter timetable.

Other regional disputes also were on the agenda as Reagan and Gorbachev entered their third White House session and deferred further substantive discussion of arms control, the dominant summit topic, until Thursday.

That would give a working group headed by chief arms adviser Paul H. Nitze on the U.S. side and Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev for the Soviets more time to search for ways to speed completion of a treaty to reduce long-range nuclear weapons.

Pact Offers Glimpse

But the Supreme Soviet always gives its unanimous approval to legislation and policies set before it by the all-powerful Communist Party.

President Andrei A. Gromyko is head of state in the Soviet Union, in his role as president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet. But Gorbachev signed the treaty on behalf of the Soviet Union.

The Presidium is comprised of about three dozen members, including Gorbachev, who can be empowered by the president to act on behalf of the state.

As one of the members of the Presidium, Gorbachev has the legal right to sign on behalf of the whole body.

In the past, the Soviet leader was often the president of the Presidium, a title now held by Gromyko. Legally, however, any of the members can act on behalf of the body.

Through the years of superpower diplomacy, it has been the party general secretary who has stepped into the spotlight to sign treaties or carry out official visits such as the three-day summit in Washington.

Any concerns about the treaty being approved by the Soviet government have been overcome.

The ruling body of the party, the 13-man Politburo headed by Gorbachev, on Nov. 26 endorsed the draft agreement reached a few days earlier in Geneva by Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze and Secretary of State George Shultz.

The Politburo approval signified the end of any debate that may have taken place among the country's top military and political leaders.

In a traditional show of unity, the Politburo not only endorsed Shevardnadze's report on the Geneva meeting but declared that "an important step is taken on the road to a nuclear-weapons-free world."

Coup Leader Caught

rest, which took place amid heightened security in preparation for next week's summit of the leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

News reports said he did not resist. "His capture should reassure all peace-loving Filipinos that our country is headed for much better times," Mrs. Aquino said in a statement.

Military and government officials had expressed concern that Honasan or other dissident leaders might stage attacks to disrupt the Dec. 14-15 ASEAN summit.

ASEAN leaders had been hesitant about holding the meeting in Manila because of security concerns.

The army said it was deploying thousands of extra troops throughout the capital to ensure their security, and officials today said they were determined to go ahead with the meeting.

Honasan had been sought since a failed attempt Aug. 28 to oust Mrs. Aquino. Fifty-three people were killed and scores injured in the assault, the gravest challenge to Mrs. Aquino since she took power in a February 1986 military-civilian uprising that ousted Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Honasan played a key role in the 1986 revolt, but he and his followers later grew disenchanted with the Aquino government because of what they saw as its weakness in fighting Communist insurgents.

Honasan and several hundred followers escaped when the August revolt was crushed by troops loyal to Mrs. Aquino.

Both Reagan and Gorbachev are trying to get the accord ready for signing at a Moscow summit next June.

They took an important first step along the road to nuclear arms control Tuesday by signing a treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

"We can only hope that this history-making agreement will not be an end in itself, but a beginning," Reagan said.

Over three years, about 850 U.S. deployed and stored missiles and about 1,750 Soviet rockets will be dismantled.

"We can be proud of planting this sapling which may one day grow into a mighty tree of peace," Gorbachev proclaimed.

The 24-minute signing ceremony was broadcast live in America and the Soviet Union.

The treaty sets precedent with an intrusive system of on-site inspection that will send American monitors to the Soviet Union, East Germany and Czechoslovakia, and Soviet inspectors to the United States, West Germany, Britain, Italy, Belgium and The Netherlands.

In making final arrangements, the Soviets sought to have the U.S. inspectors enter East Germany in the vicinity of Berlin — a move the Americans rejected as an attempt to gain status for East Berlin. A U.S. official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said Leipzig was chosen instead.

In a pre-summit briefing, White House officials stressed they wanted a "date certain" for a Soviet pullout from Afghanistan and dangled the prospect of a cutoff of U.S. aid to the rebels once Soviet troops begin to withdraw.

Apart from a short timetable, the United States wants to make sure the Afghan resistance gains a prominent role in a new government in Kabul and that it is not dominated by communists backed by Moscow.

Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne Ridgway said today the Soviets had made a political decision to withdraw, "but the political decision is not enough." Interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, she said: "Getting out, knowing when the withdrawal is complete, is what's required."

But Vice President George Bush, who is to meet with Gorbachev early Thursday, said on CBS-TV's "This Morning" program that "I think we'll have some good, hard discussions about Afghanistan" but it won't block progress on other U.S.-Soviet issues.

On the Persian Gulf, Reagan wants the Soviets to support a U.S. drive for an arms embargo against Iran. The idea is to force Iran to accept a cease-fire in its seven-year war with Iraq.

For Second Victory

Pirates Top Camels, 61-54

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

One of the hardest things for a young team to do is to play with a lead.

Tuesday night, East Carolina's Pirates played with one and held onto it, gaining a 61-54 basketball victory over Campbell University.

It was the first loss for the Camels in five outings, while the Pirates were winning their second game in three attempts.

It also was the first win of the year against a Division I NCAA team — a feat that such observers as "The Sporting News" said might not be accomplished by the young Pirates.

"It was a great win for us," Coach Mike Steele said. "But the biggest thing they can be proud of is that these are the same kids who got beat by 50 points by Duke. They played (against Duke) with no patience and no poise."

Steele said that the Pirates have to be patient and try to win games with 50 or 60 points — like they did against the Camels. Campbell was averaging 102 points a game.

To accomplish that, the Pirates had to play strong defense and be patient on offense. They did the former and — sometimes — the latter.

East Carolina held Campbell to only a 33.3 percent shooting night, while hitting 45.8 percent of its own shots. And, the Pirates also did a good job on the boards, although Campbell did enjoy a 42-37 advantage.

"I think the turning point was in the opening minutes of the second half when we go four minutes without a point and they score only one in the first six minutes," Steele said. During those first six minutes, the Pirates went from a 27-27 tie to a 28-27 deficit to a 33-28 lead.

Campbell hung close after that however, never letting the Pirates get more than six ahead, cutting it back to one on several occasions.

But with a 53-51 lead and time running out on the shot clock, Gus Hill — who played only sparingly in the first half — hit a key 3-point bucket with 1:46 remaining, pushing the Pirates back out by five, 56-51.

"We have a signal we call from the bench, 'White! White!' when the (shot) clock gets down to under 10," Steele said. "The guys on the bench really got into it, because they were hollering too. When Gus heard that, he had the job of either getting a good shot or getting it to someone who can make the shot."

From there on out, the Pirates made good on five of nine at the charity stripe as Campbell was forced to foul. Jeff Kelly and Jimmy Hinton each made a pair during that period.

"At the end," Steele said, "we were trying to get people in there to make free throws. Jeff came in and banged in a couple."

Steele said that the reason Hill didn't start as he usually does or play much in the first half was because "he gets tired and doesn't play defense. He has to improve on that. But right now, he needs to play four or five minutes at a time until he gets in better shape."

Hill finished with 16 minutes of play, hitting 13 points and pulling seven rebounds.

Campbell led only briefly in the whole game. The Pirates led throughout the first 16 minutes of play except when it was tied at 2-2. Reid Lose, who led the team with 19 points, hit on a layup to run the lead to 11-6, the largest lead of the half for East Carolina. That lead was equaled several times, but Campbell came back behind three baskets by Henry Wilson to take a 25-21 lead with 3:15 left in the period.

Lose hit a 19-footer just before the half ended, tying it at 27-27.

Derrick Hensley hit the first of two free throws with 19:29 left in the second half to put Campbell back up, 28-27, but the Camels missed their first 11 shots from the floor, allowing the Pirates — despite a slow start of their own — to take the lead.

Stanley Love hit a short jumper to put ECU back up, 29-28, and Kelly followed with a pair of free throws. Love scored again to make it 33-28 before Campbell added two more free throws.

The Pirates, however, continued to hold onto the lead, despite more pressure from the Camels, building the lead back from as little as one to 48-42, a 6-point bulge.

Wilson made two free throws with 2:55 left to close to 52-51, but Hill hit the first of two free throws with 2:44 showing.

A minute later, as the shot clock ran down, Hill hit the 3-pointer to put the lead to 56-51.

Campbell did cut it back to three, but ECU scored the next five points, all at the line, to wrap it up.

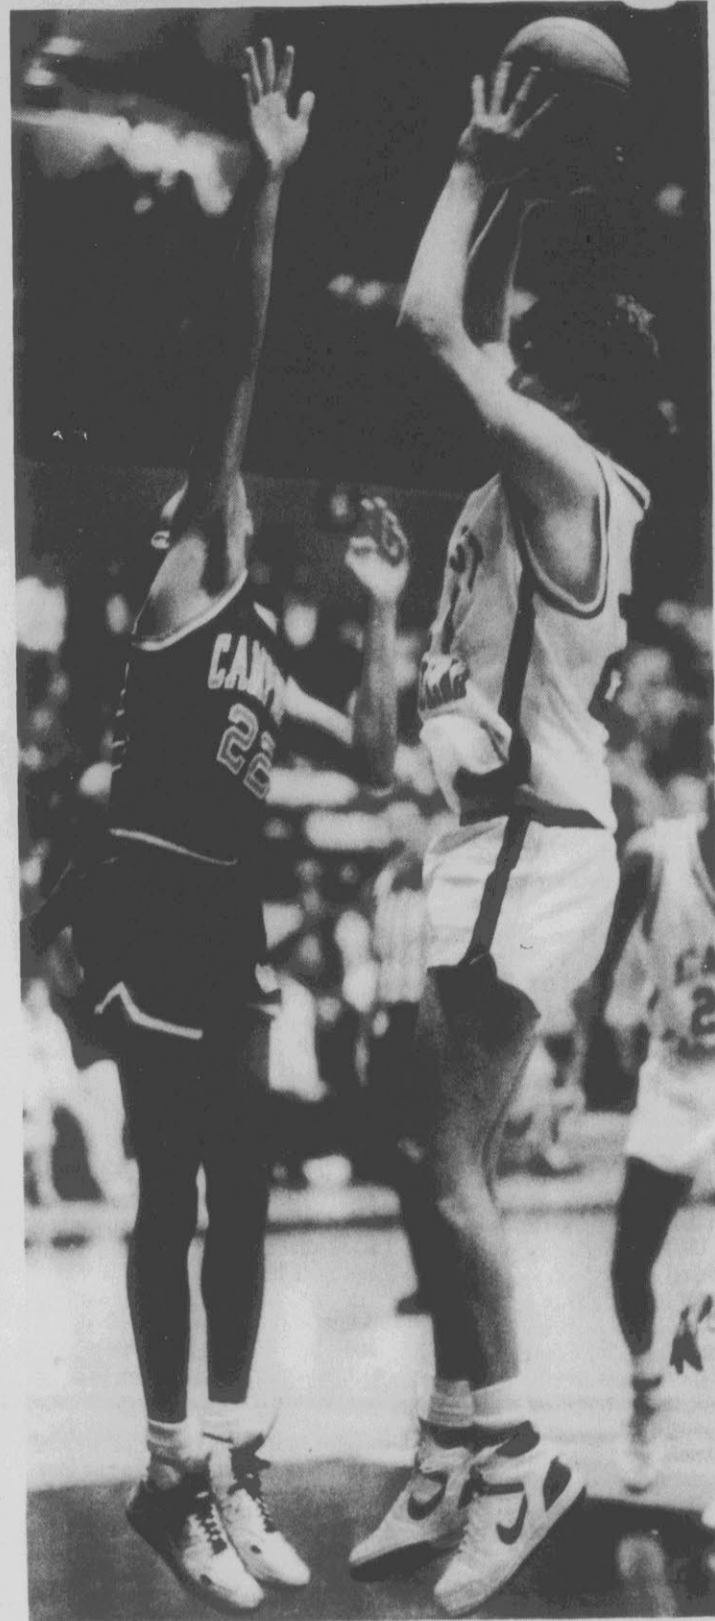

Lose, who played little last year, appears to have settled in as one of the Pirate leaders, but Steele said that the sophomore still needed to be more under control. "We try to get him to slow down and read the defenses. He's got to play smarter. He has a better feel for things when he slows down. But he is making great strides."

As to Kenny Murphy, a walk-on who not only made the team but has earned a starting role, Steele says he's mystified. Murphy has not scored in two games in Minges Coliseum, and is 0-14 on the home court. He was three for seven at Duke. "He's not playing as well now as he was a month ago. I think he's putting right much pressure on himself now."

Love added 12 points for the Pirates, giving them three in double figures.

Wilson led Campbell with 20 points and also pulled 14 rebounds. Chris Springs added 18 points.

Lose Learns Slow, Sure Paying Off

A hard week of practice taught Reed Lose that you have to walk before you run, and the lesson paid dividends for the Pirates Tuesday night against Campbell.

The 6-3 sophomore from Harrisonburg, Pa., made a renewed effort to slow himself down and not rush things against the Camels and the strategy helped him score a team-high 19 points in the Pirates' 61-54 win.

"One thing we're trying to work on with him is to slow down, read the defense and just understand that he's not quick," said ECU coach Mike Steele. "He needs to play slower than he is so when does make a quick move, it shocks everybody."

The change in speeds made things quite a bit easier, according to Lose. "That was definitely the key for me," he said. "The whole week I was telling myself just to slow down and just set your man up."

"Early on, I thought I had to get everybody else in the game too. Coach Bell told me to get everybody else in the game and when your shots come, take them, because you'll get your shots."

Steele said Lose's performance was a big improvement from his showing at Duke, where the Pirates lost 94-45.

"I thought he made great strides," the coach said, "probably as good as anyone in comparison to Duke where I thought he was going to hyperventilate the first five minutes of the game."

And it was Lose along with Gus Hill, who had 13 points and seven rebounds, down the stretch that keyed the Pirates by the Camels.

Over the last eight minutes, they scored 11 of the Pirates' final 16 points when the game was on the line.

That's a far cry from the Reed Lose of last year. Playing his freshman year on a senior-laden squad, Lose wasn't often put in that type of situation.

"I wasn't really in there (at the end) last year, but I (still) felt calm (this time)," he said. "I was just trying to help the freshman hit their free throws. They didn't hit some but down the stretch we hit the key ones."

Teammate Jeff Kelly said Lose is a different player this year. "He's a sophomore now," Kelly said. "The biggest thing is he has some playing experience."

"Last year, he hit some big shots, but last year there weren't really enough shots to go around. We had people like (since-graduated) Marchell (Henry) and Blue (Edwards, who is suspended for this season) who were the scorers."

"This year, Reed has been thrust into a situation where he has to score and now he looks to shoot."

"This year, he's playing with a lot more confidence. I think Reed was a scorer in high school and he's showing he is also a scorer now."

But while Lose's 19 points were a career high, he said a bigger key to the game might have been the Pirates' defense, which held the Camels to their lowest point production of the young season.

"That was one of our goals," he said. "They had scored had scored like 133 points in one of their games. For us to win, we had to keep it down in the 50s."

The win leaves ECU with a 2-1 record in a season where many have said the Pirates would be lucky to win at all.

"It (the win) is very important," Lose said. "Now we have some confidence. We're going into Maryland. Maryland just got blown out by West Virginia but West Virginia is a good team. But still we have to go in with a lot of confidence."

Hill echoed that sentiment. "We just play hard and hope it works out," he said. "Everybody keeps telling us that we could not win any, so any win is important."

Rose Tops Cards In OT

JACKSONVILLE — Errol Wooten missed on a chance to put the game away in regulation but he came through in overtime, scoring five of the Rampants nine overtime points in a 56-50 high school basketball win over Jacksonville Tuesday night.

Jacksonville's Neal Jones tied the game at 47-47 with 30 seconds to go, but Rose still had a chance to ice it.

Wooten went to the line for two free throws with seven seconds left but missed both so the game went into overtime.

Wooten, though, came through in the extra period, matching the total

Jacksonville points for the extra period by himself as Rose outscored the Cardinals, 9-5.

Jacksonville led 27-20 at the half but pulled within 35-27 by the end of the third quarter. The Rampants then outscored Jacksonville 15-12 in the final frame to even the gap.

Wooten had 18 points to lead the Rose scoring, while Keyford Langley added 12.

Jones led Jacksonville with 15 points.

In the girl's game, Tina Smith scored 17 points and pulled down 17 rebounds as the Ramettes took a 39-30 win over Jacksonville.

Knights Sweep Past Pungo

BELHAVEN — Greenville Christian Academy's boys' and girls' basketball teams both came away with victories, scoring 71 points each Tuesday night. The boys took hosting Pungo Christian, 71-59, while the girls claimed a 71-67 victory.

Greenville pushed out to a 23-16 lead in the first quarter of the boys' game. Pungo rallied in the second quarter, 16-10, but still trailed 33-32 at intermission.

In the third period, however, GCA pulled away, outscoring Pungo, 21-6. That gave the Knights a 54-38 advantage. Pungo tried to rally, 21-17, in the final period, but fell short.

"We made some changes in the defense in the third period," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "We boxed out better and played a good game most of the way. The high point would have been our turnover-assist ratio. We had less than 10 turnovers and had 24 assists."

Robin House led the Knights with 25 points while Clint Parker added 19 and John May had 12. Jerry Baker led Pungo with 22 while James Boyd had 13.

In the girls' game, GCA inched out to a 13-11 lead in the first period, then streaked away, 24-15, in the second quarter to take a 37-26 halftime lead. In the third period, GCA outthrew Pungo, 22-11, then allowed a 30-12 rally in the final period.

"We pretty much took control in the third period and built up a 22-point lead. But then rallied against the subs in the final minutes to within two," Thatcher said.

Sandy Johnston led GCA with 29 points while Joanie Cherry had 13 and Kim Faulkner had 10. Sylvia Newman led Pungo with 30 while Gina Baker added 16 and Wendy Respass had 14.

Both GCA teams are now 5-0. The Knights play host to Wake Christian on Friday.

GAME CALLED: GUNS

NEW YORK (AP) — Game called because of an attempted revolt. That was new to the sports pages this past August. A group of 21 NBA players, coaches, referees and trainers journeyed across the Pacific to Manila for a pair of exhibition games.

They landed just in time to have box seats at a protest mounted by dissidents at the government of President Corazon Aquino.

"The morning after we arrived, Lenny Wilkens and I and four players walked across the street from our hotel," said Sonic Coach Bernie Bickerstaff.

"We saw soldiers with guns coming at us. We did a 180 and returned to the hotel."

Tarboro Nips Roanoke, 63-59

TARBORO — Tarboro outlasted Roanoke in overtime to come away with a 63-59 basketball victory Tuesday night.

Tarboro's girls also downed Roanoke, 61-39.

Tarboro eased out into a 12-11 lead in the first period of the boys' game. The Vikings were able to add two to that in the second quarter, 17-15, and took a 29-26 lead into the dressing rooms.

The two teams played evenly through the third period, which ended with Tarboro up again, 44-41. But in the final quarter, Roanoke erased the deficit, with Paul Council scoring twice to tie it at 54-54, although both teams had the chance to score again.

In the overtime, however, Tarboro outscored the Redskins, 9-5, to claim the win.

Jeffrey Battle led Tarboro with 17 points while Eric Williams had 12 and Mike Braxton had 10. Roanoke was paced by Paul Council with 15 while Jasper Council had 13 and Richard Moore had 10.

Perry Among The Outland Finalists

NEW YORK (AP) — Miami, the Air Force Academy and Clemson have never had a player win the Outland Trophy — until now. The 1987 winner comes from one of those schools.

The three finalists, all seniors, are All-American defensive linemen Daniel Stubbs of Miami, Chad Hennings of Air Force and Clemson defensive linemen Michael Dean Perry. They were announced Nov. 25 by the Football Writers Association of America, which awards the Outland Trophy annually to the nation's outstanding interior lineman.

The announcement of the winner was scheduled today, the first time the Outland Trophy has been awarded in a live format.

Hennings, a 6-foot-5, 260-pound tackle from Elberon, Iowa, was the Defensive Player of the Year in the Western Athletic Conference. He had a WAC-record 24 sacks for minus-182 yards among his 87 tackles this season. He had seven other stops behind the line, five forced fumbles, three fumble recoveries and five pass breakups.

Stubbs, a 6-4, 250-pounder who plays end in Miami's four-man defensive line, is the Hurricanes' career leader with 39½ sacks and has at least one sack in 21 of the last 27 regular-season games. He finished the regular season with 70 tackles, 9½ sacks and 13½ other tackles for minus yardage in helping Miami rank third nationally in scoring defense, sixth in total defense and fifth in rushing defense.

Clemson was fifth in total defense and second in rushing defense with an average of 80 yards a game, second-best in Atlantic Coast Conference history. The 6-2, 275-pound Perry was a major reason with 72 tackles, including 24 behind the line of scrimmage for minus-128 yards and 10 sacks for minus-86 yards.

Mereer's Three-Point Shot Lifts Creswell By Bears

BEAR GRASS — Anthony Mereer scored a 3-point basket at the horn, then pitched in seven points in overtime to lead Creswell to a 75-71 Tobacco Belt basketball win over Bear Grass.

The Bear Grass girls took a 36-27 win in their game.

Bear Grass held a slim 17-15 lead after the first period of the boys' game, but Creswell erased that in the second quarter, 15-10. That put Creswell up, 30-27 at intermission.

In the third quarter, Creswell outthit the Bears, 22-19, to run its lead to 52-46. But the Bears came back in the final period to take a 3-point lead before Mereer hit at the horn to tie it at 64-64.

In overtime, Mereer scored seven of the 11 Creswell points to pace his team to the win.

Mereer finished with 36 points, including five 3-point goals. Neal Jones added 17 and Darnell Norman had 11.

Almer Riddick led the Bears with 27 while Steve Brown had 15 and Tyrone Bailey had 10.

In the girls' game, Bear Grass took a 10-2 lead in the first period.

Creswell rallied, 12-10, in the second period, but still trailed, 20-14, at the half. The Bears upped their lead to 29-20 in the third quarter and matched points with Creswell the rest of the way.

Janet Rogerson led Bear Grass with 14 while Brenda Johnson had 13 for Creswell.

The Bears are now 1-2 in league play and 2-3 overall. The girls are 2-1 in the league and 3-2 overall.

His grade point average for the month was 2.2. He also averaged 3.2 rebounds and 1.4 assists a game.

Crum To Consider Taking Over SMU?

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina football coach Dick Crum wants to remain in coaching and will not rule out reports that he could be considered for the Southern Methodist University job.

The Dallas Times Herald newspaper Tuesday listed Crum among possible candidates to rebuild the SMU program.

Crum, who resigned as head coach Nov. 30, told The News and Observer of Raleigh on Tuesday night that he would not discuss the past at UNC but said it had been a "disruptive period."

In one of its toughest penalties, the NCAA barred the SMU program from competing this year under its "death penalty" provision because of a pay-for-players scandal.

The school was permitted to play a schedule of seven road games in 1988 but later voted to cancel the season. SMU is planning to play a limited number of games in 1989.

"The SMU job is something that I might would want to get more information on, but I certainly haven't given it a great deal of thought," said Crum, UNC's winningest coach, who compiled a 72-41-3 record in 10 seasons. His 1987 team finished 5-6.

Crum resigned from UNC after agreeing to an $800,000 buyout on the remaining four seasons of a 10-year contract he signed in 1982.

Meanwhile, the New York Jets have given defensive coordinator Bud Carson permission to discuss the head coaching with UNC officials, the New York Daily News reported Wednesday.

Carson joins former Kansas City Chiefs and Wake Forest University coach John Mackovic, Tulane's Mack Brown, Air Force's Fisher DeBerry and former UCLA and Philadelphia Eagles coach Dick Vermeil as those being considered for the Tar Heels' post.

Carson was defensive coordinator for the Pittsburgh Steelers during their Super Bowl years and also handled the Chiefs defense until he was fired by Mackovic and moved on to the Jets.

The 57-year-old Carson is a former Tar Heel player, who served as an assistant at the Chapel Hill school from 1957 to 1964.

Holland May Soon Reinstate Kennedy

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia basketball Coach Terry Holland will consider reactivating Mel Kennedy at the end of the semester, which could make the senior forward eligible to play in the Chaminate Classic.

The semester ends Dec. 21 and the tournament is set for Dec. 23-25 in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Kennedy, from Long Island City, N.Y., was indefinitely suspended by Holland on Sept. 15 because of poor class attendance. At the time, Holland said he would not reconsider the suspension before Jan. 1.

"At the time of the suspension, I felt that I had to make the penalty a substantial one for Mel to get the message," Holland said. "There is no doubt in my mind that he has gotten that message."

Ford Says Tigers Are Ready For Penn State

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Clemson football coach Danny Ford says he has no plans to open up his offense against Penn State when the two teams meet in the Citrus Bowl on New Year's Day.

"Absolutely not," Ford said Tuesday. "I'm as hardheaded as that wall. We just need to do what we can do a little better."

Clemson, 9-2, is a run-oriented team for an obvious reason, he said. "I wish we could throw better," Ford said. "I'd like to have a little more balanced attack. But we're just going to do what we do best."

"I don't know if the game's going to be the good, the bad and the ugly," he said. "But if it is, I hope we're the good, the bad and the ugly."

Clemson ran all the way to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship and a Top 20 finish in 1987.

The Tigers averaged nearly 250 yards a game on the ground behind the efforts of fullback Tracy Johnson, and tailbacks Terry Allen and Wesley McFadden.

Ford said he hasn't had the opportunity to review films of Penn State, which is coming off a 21-20 upset of Notre Dame on Nov. 21. The victory improved the Nittany Lions' record to 8-3 and enabled them to hold onto their No. 20 ranking in The Associated Press poll.

The Citrus Bowl will be the first meeting between Clemson and Penn State. "I see it as a good chance to see how Clemson's program is coming along compared with a team that's been there many, many years," Ford said. "They have a solid program and you can't forget that they are the defending national champions."

Ford said he has been introduced to Penn State's Joe Paterno but said he wouldn't say they are friends.

"I do know he'll beat your brains out if you're not careful," he said. "They have a tremendous amount of pride in their football program."

Clemson, which finished 14th in the final regular season AP poll released Tuesday, will have to play a near-perfect game to beat Penn State, Ford said.

"Right now after our last game (a 20-7 loss to South Carolina) we'd like to beat anyone to get the bad taste out of our mouths," he said. "But I really like to beat the people with big names like Notre Dame, Ohio State and Nebraska. There's a little pocket change there."

In order to beat Penn State, he said, they will have to contain tailback Blair Thomas, who posted eight 100-yard games this season.

Led by All-America tackle Michael Dean Perry's 10 sacks and 24 tackles for loss, Clemson ranked second in the nation in rushing defense, allowing just 80 yards a game.

"Coach Paterno has said Thomas is the most exciting and talented running back he's ever had," Ford said. "And he's had some great ones. He's in some pretty high cotton, I'd say."

Braves Send Ramirez Packing To Houston

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves traded for the future, sending starting shortstop Rafael Ramirez to Houston for a pair of highly rated minor leaguers.

"We like the way this turned out," Braves General Manager Bobby Cox said Tuesday from baseball's winter meetings in Dallas. "We think we really helped ourselves in our system. That's what we're trying to do."

The Braves traded Ramirez, 28, the starter since 1980, who led national league shortstops in errors for five years, beginning in 1981, for third baseman Ed Whited and right-handed pitcher Mike Stoker. Both played Class A ball last season.

Houston Manager Hal Lanier, who had six shortstops last season, named Ramirez his starter.

"We gave up some pretty good prospects, but our thinking is for '88," Houston General Manager Bill Wood said. "This is exactly what we were looking for."

The trade makes Andres Thomas, 25, Atlanta's starter. He had 20 errors in 81 games this season and 41 errors in 189 major league games at shortstop. He hit .231 last season and his success percentage in scoring runners from third with less than two out is .353, the lowest on the team.

He began 1987 as the starter, but was benched for poor performance and for injuries.

"I think there was a little pressure factor for Thomas in the regard that Ramirez was there," said Braves Manager Chuck Tanner. "This is it for him. After those two years, he has to go now."

College Basketball ... Dolphins Criticize Block By Lyons

(Continued From B-4) game," Knight said of the junior from Colombia. "He has scored well on occasion in practice. I think he was the whole difference for us in the game."

Vanderbilt Center Will Perdue finished with 27 points, 15 in the second-half comeback.

No. 4 Arizona 77, Northern Arizona 59 Arizona's balanced scoring attack was led by Sean Elliott with 14 and Steve Kerr with 13 as the Wildcats remained unbeaten in six games.

Arizona went on an 11-0 run for a 24-7 lead midway through the first half and the visiting Lumberjacks, 0-5, never got closer than eight points the rest of the way as the Wildcats enjoyed a 32-20 rebounding advantage with Elliott grabbing eight.

Mark Anderson finished with 20 points for the Lumberjacks, all but two on 3-pointers.

Arizona's next game is Saturday night at No. 3 Iowa in the first trip back to Iowa City for Coach Lute Olson since he left the Hawkeyes program in 1983.

No. 9 Missouri 76, Drake 74 Missouri had to rally, then hold on for its second straight two-point victory.

Derrick Chievous scored 24 points to lead four double-figure scorers for the visiting Tigers, who outrebounded the smaller Bulldogs 42-26.

Drake, 1-3, led 58-53 with 9:41 left, but Chievous and Greg Church converted successive three-point plays to bring Missouri, 3-0, back. Missouri led 75-69 with 22 seconds left.

"We made a move at the right time in the second half," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said. "They made a run at us and our kids came back from that. It's great to see that. But I'd like to see our ballclub do a little better at the end of the game."

Nathan Buntin and Byron Irvin added 11 points each and Church 10 for the Tigers, while Walter James led Drake with 18 points.

The Tigers' last victory was a 77-75 double overtime win over Eastern Michigan.

No. 17 UNLV 98, Nev.-Reno 96 The cross-state rivalry went 10 extra minutes and came down to a missed free throw by Nevada-Reno's Byron Strachan with five seconds to play.

UNR led 94-90 with less than two minutes to play when UNLV's Clint Rossum, who finished with 11 points, hit two 3-pointers in less than 30 seconds. Gerald Paddio, who scored 30 points, made one free throw with 48 seconds left for a two-point UNLV lead.

MIAMI (AP) — Two Miami Dolphins say a cheap shot ended center Dwight Stephenson's season, and Coach Don Shula says the all-pro player was the victim of an unnecessary block by a former college teammate.

Stephenson suffered ligament damage in his left knee when he was cut down by the New York Jets' Marty Lyons. The block occurred as the Jets' Bobby Humphery returned a fumble 46 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter of Miami's 37-28 victory Monday night.

"It happened about 20 yards behind the play," Shula said Tuesday. "It really seems like it was unnecessary. But, to give him (Lyons) the benefit of the doubt, he may not have known where the runner was. And the play was still going on."

"It wasn't an illegal block. It was from the side. Dwight didn't see it."

Stephenson, who has been selected to the Pro Bowl the last five years, underwent surgery Tuesday. After the game, Stephenson said he wasn't mad at Lyons. The players were teammates at the University of Alabama.

"He's a good football player and he was just trying to do things to help his team win," Stephenson said.

Shula said Stephenson and Lyons "are good friends, so you hate to think anything was deliberate or intentional."

But Dolphins offensive linemen Jon Giesler and Ron Lee called Lyons' block a cheap shot, and guard Roy Foster said Lyons is known to be a cheap-shot artist.

When asked about his players' comments, Shula said, "I'm not going to get into Marty Lyons. I've said what I've had to say about him."

Lyons said he felt terrible about the play.

"I really didn't see who it was, and I didn't see the ball either," Lyons said. "I just peeled back to catch the block."

Jeff Dellenbach, a third-year pro who has started NFL games at guard and tackle, will replace Stephenson on Sunday when the Dolphins visit the Philadelphia Eagles.

Trade-Offs May Have Watered Down Trade Pact

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — Last-minute trade-offs built into the historic free-trade treaty between Canada and the United States indicate the world's biggest trading partnership will remain less than free.

Canadian officials said Tuesday the pact initiated in October was altered last weekend to protect the U.S. shipping industry as well as Canadian publishers, textiles and East Coast fish exporters, among other sectors.

The officials spoke on condition of anonymity.

The final text is to be released within a few days so President Reagan and Prime Minister Brian Mulroney can sign it by a Jan. 2 Congressional deadline.

If ratified by both countries, the treaty would eliminate all tariffs over a 10-year period starting Jan. 1, 1989.

Four-fifths of the annual $130 billion U.S. partnership is already duty-free. The real impediments to more relaxed trade are non-tariff barriers and restrictions which the agreement was supposed to dismantle.

Mulroney, who proposed the treaty in 1985, spoke all along of a "comprehensive" package, while Reagan envisioned the start of a North American free-trade zone that would serve as a global model.

The original agreement initialed Oct. 3, following 16 months of talks, contained concessions by both sides. Canadians didn't get the free access to lucrative U.S. defense and procurement contracts they wanted, while American publishers and broadcasters still face discriminatory treatment in Canada.

Canada's beer industry and state marketing boards for grain, dairy, poultry and eggs remain protected, while Washington refused to exempt Canadian industries from punitive U.S. countervail and dumping legislation.

Despite those compromises, both sides had further second thoughts and a new round of talks culminated in last weekend's final text.

Here are some of the last-minute changes made, according to official sources in Ottawa:

—All references to transportation have been deleted. The U.S. commercial shipping industry, enjoying a monopoly in coastal transportation, had complained of possible future Canadian competition. Canada's truckers feared they could lose business in their own turf.

—The 22-year-old Auto Pact responsible for a third of the trade between the two countries was to have been restricted to the "big three" car makers — General Motors, Chrysler and Ford.

U.S. negotiators, however, agreed to extend the pact to a planned $385 million GM-Suzuki joint-venture plant in Ontario Province. The North American content quota for duty-free treatment of cars will remain at 50 percent, not the 60 percent the auto parts industry sought.

—The five-member bilateral panels that will resolve trade disputes are to consist of at least three lawyers, in answer to a U.S. demand that the panelists all be lawyers, and their decisions can be appealed to a further three-member panel in cases of conflict of interest. Canada fended off U.S. demands for the right to appeal decisions to the courts.

—Fish caught in Canada's Atlantic waters will continue to be processed in Canada, but the protection will not extend to Pacific waters, where the Council of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade recently found Canada in violation of fair trade laws in the processing of salmon and herring.

The Geneva-based council, the world's main free-trade body, oversees compliance with the GATT treaty, which pledges its members to free trade.

—Canada won the right to retain postal subsidies for its magazine publishers, giving them an edge over U.S. competitors.

—Canadian textile and clothing manufacturers using fibers imported from a third country will get special export quotas for the United States.

After the accord is signed, both nations must produce legislation to implement it. Congress will have 90 working days to accept or reject the terms and their deliberations could run into the 1988 election.

"But we don't think they'll require the full 90 days," said one Canadian official, forecasting U.S. ratification.

Mulroney may have more difficulty, despite his Progressive Conservative Party majority in Parliament.

Three of Canada's 10 provinces and the labor union movement oppose the treaty, saying jobs could be threatened and Canadian sovereignty compromised.

Dollar Falls To New Low In Japan

TOKYO (AP) — The dollar dipped to a record low closing against the Japanese yen, and share prices fell slightly in Tokyo trading today, as investors waited for the release of U.S. October trade deficit figures.

The dollar opened at 132.60 yen, down 0.18 yen from Tuesday's close of 132.78 yen, and slipped to 132.35 yen at the close despite moderate intervention by the Bank of Japan, sources said.

The dollar's previous record low closing was 132.42 yen on Dec. 1, when it fell at one point to 132.10 yen, its lowest since modern exchange rates were set in the late 1940s.

It had inched up 0.20 yen in three days before today's fall.

On the Tokyo Stock Exchange, the Nikkei Stock Average of 225 selected issues, a 361.82-point gainer Tuesday, fell back sharply from its gains in early trading and ended up losing 62.64 points, closing at 22,885.70 points.

"The market had a fairly good start," but there was "no conviction about a strong rally for the yearend until the U.S. releases the deficit figures" due Thursday, said Julian Jones, a broker at Vickers da Costa.

Ron Napier, a vice president at Salomon Brothers, said the trade figures are "a piece of puzzle nobody knows." A worse-than-anticipated U.S. deficit would hurt the dollar.

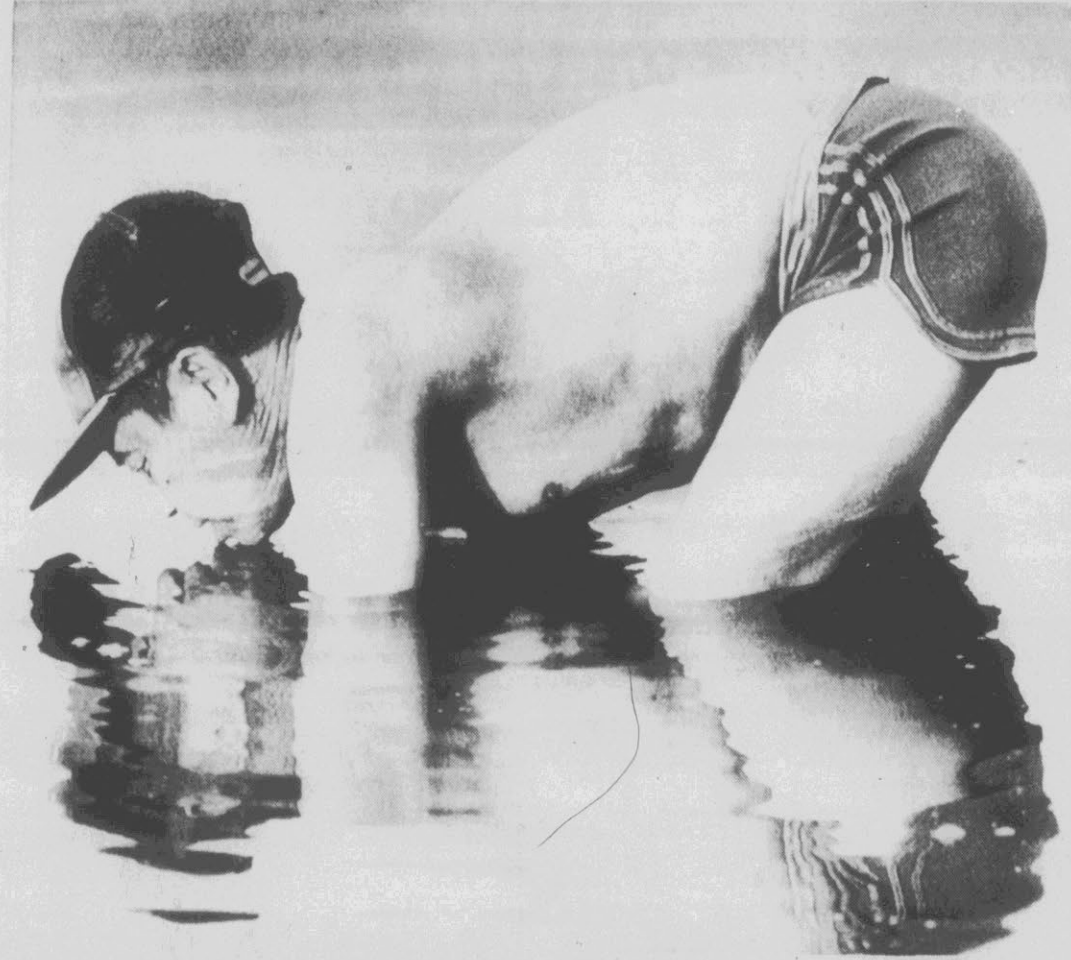

For now "people are hanging back and waiting," Napier said.

Volume totaled 500 million shares, up from 430 million Tuesday.

Jones said "profit-taking was opportunistic" in steel, heavy industrial and export-led issues.

An official of a major commercial bank in Tokyo, speaking on condition of anonymity, said trading was thin in advance of the Christmas holidays.

"The market mood has changed as many foreign investors shifted to a buying drive" since the worldwide market crash in October, said Michio Katsumata of Nomura Securities.

Singer Dies

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Popular singer Yolanda Vadiz died at age 29 at the Puerto Rico Medical Center on Tuesday, a week after she was overcome by toxic fumes.

A relative, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Ms. Vadiz and her husband, Vittorio Luissi, inhaled toxic fumes apparently caused by a faulty heating system in their apartment in Rome.

Tensions High As Haitian Violence Victims Buried

By PIERRE-YVES GLASS
Associated Press Writer
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — A funeral service today for victims of last month's election-day violence was expected to heighten tensions between the military-dominated junta and the opposition.

On the eve of the service in a Roman Catholic cathedral in Port-au-Prince, the junta said it might name its own appointees to a new Electoral Council.

During a two-day general strike Monday and Tuesday, the opposition demanded the junta's ouster and the reinstatement of the original Electoral Council.

Radio reports said survivors, family members, church officials, civil rights activists and foreign diplomats were invited to attend the service.

Dozens of people were killed Nov. 29, when violence aborted Haiti's first free elections in 30 years to choose a president and National Assembly.

Estimates of the number of those slain range from the official count of 34 to as high as 80. At least 75 people were injured when thugs and soldiers using guns and machetes attacked people lining up at polling places to vote.

The independent Electoral Council canceled the balloting, and was immediately disbanded by the junta, led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

The junta, which was to surrender power early next year to a new president, asked the nine organizations that appointed the original council to name new members, but so far six of the groups have refused.

The Ministry of Information said Tuesday night the junta would name a new council by week's end if the organizations continue refusing to participate.

The strike appeared to end when many Haitians returned to work

Tuesday for fear of losing Christmas bonuses and paychecks that often mean the difference between eating and going hungry.

Most shops and businesses in the Port-au-Prince capital of 1 million people remained shuttered Tuesday, but many factories in an outlying industrial park appeared to be back in operation at near capacity.

People in Haiti, where per capita annual income is only $379, said they could no longer afford to stay away from jobs that pay as little as $3 a day.

"We can't do a strike because we don't have any savings," said Miguel Lizarre, a gatekeeper at Caribbean International, an American-owned factory that makes children's clothing for U.S. department stores. The factory was operating at full capacity with 235 workers Tuesday.

"We have to feed the kids," he said. "There's nothing we can do.

They (the junta) have all the guns. They'll do what they want. We have no choice."

The strike was peaceful, with soldiers patrolling the streets and guarding businesses and bus stops. Organizers said they tried to avoid violence.

In another development Tuesday, the government swore in a six-member inquiry commission to investigate the election-day violence.

The group included two military officers, officials of the Ministries of Defense and Justice, a private lawyer and a human rights representative. They were given no deadline for submitting their report.

Most politicians and international elections observers say the violence was largely carried out by Tontons Macoute, the private militia of the Duvalier family regime, aided and in some cases abetted by the Haitian army.

After a popular uprising chased dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier into exile on Feb. 7, 1986, the junta gathered some of the weapons of the Tontons Macoute, but the group is not believed to have been completely disarmed.

Volcano Link To Famine Backs 'Nuclear Winter' Theory, Astronomer Says

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An ancient volcanic eruption in Iceland likely triggered a famine that killed half China's population, bolstering fears that a "nuclear winter" would cause mass starvation after a nuclear war, says a NASA astronomer.

Kevin Pang said the sunlight-blocking effect of a very large eruption in 210 B.C. resulted in a "volcanic winter" forcing "very severe disturbances in world agriculture."

"This fairly big eruption in Iceland caused something like half the Chinese people to die," he said. "If you scale it up to a nuclear winter, you can imagine how much worse it would get."

Chinese famine that started in 207 B.C.

He and his colleagues ruled out theories linking a planetary alignment or solar activity to the famine, and showed the eruption played a much bigger role in triggering starvation than wars that replaced Chinese emperors with the Han dynasty.

Pang said Monday he plans to present his findings Thursday during the American Geophysical Union's fall meeting.

The study's co-authors are James Slavin, a scientist at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland, and East Asian languages and cultures professor Hung-hsiang Chou of the University of California, Los Angeles.

The chronicles were compiled about 250 years after the famine by Pan Ku, historian of the later Han dynasty. The history says that half China's population died in the famine, a number Pang says probably reached the millions because the first official census about 200 years later showed China had tens of millions of people.

The famine was so horrible "the chronicles said people were eating each other" Pang said.

Seven years ago, a Danish glaciologist dated Laki's eruption to 210 B.C. by studying varying levels of sulfuric acid deposited in ice in Greenland.

"A large volcanic eruption would put a cloud of sulfuric acid droplets in the stratosphere that blocks out (some) sunlight for a few years," with acid slowly falling to Earth, Pang said. He noted that the gigantic 1883 eruption of Krakatoa "created several years of cold climate."

By 209 B.C., the gas cloud had encircled the globe, the astronomer said.

"It was not pitch black, but (other Chinese records say) the stars were not seen for three months starting in August 208 B.C.," Pang said, blaming stratospheric haze from volcanic gas.

The famine started a year later as stored food supplies were exhausted, he said.

Pang verified that the cold, damp climate wasn't limited to China by examining another study, in which layers of Denmark's bogs revealed heavy rainfall in northern Europe about 205 B.C.

Next, Pang used Han chronicles of grain prices to show that volcanic climate change, not the war of succession, was the main cause of famine.

He found that 205 B.C. grain prices west of the Yellow River — a northerly area with short growing seasons vulnerable to climate change — were six times higher than in 215 B.C., while they were only three times higher where the wars were fought, mostly east and south of the river.

Scientists Eye Comets As Cause Of Craters

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Data from Voyager II indicates that the craters on the moon, Earth, Mercury and Mars may have been caused by small, ice-coated comets previously undetected because they have no tail, scientists say.

The shower of comets streaming through the solar system had enough force and frequency to cause all craters up to 600 feet in diameter and some up to 2 miles in diameter on the moon during the past 3.2 billion years, the University of Michigan announced Tuesday.

Thomas M. Donahue and Tamas I.

Gombosi of the school's College of Engineering and the University of Arizona's B.R. Sandel based their findings on data from the Voyager II spacecraft, which was launched in 1977 and has explored the outer reaches of the solar system.

"We've always known that enough objects were out there to create the craters on the moon," Donahue said. "We just didn't know what they were."

Scientists believe the earliest comets formed about 4.5 billion years ago were swept out of solar system by encounters with the giant planets. They now orbit the sun about 20,000 times farther away from it than the Earth.

The small comets, or cometesimals, had eluded detection because of their size and their coats of pure ice, which prevent them from forming the comet's characteristic tail of dust and debris, the researchers said.

Only comets larger than about 1,000 feet in diameter would be visible to telescopes on Earth.

Enough collisions from the cometesimals could account for all craters 1,500 feet to 2 miles in diameter on the moon, Mercury and Mars over billions of years, Donahue said.

Scientists had assumed the craters were created by some small objects, like asteroids.

The smallest of the comets also would have struck the Earth about every five to eight years, and the largest every 10,000 years, the study concluded. The most intense collisions likely left craters as deep as the famous depressions in Arizona and the Soviet Union.

Some scientists have speculated comets deposited the seeds of life on Earth in collisions that released amino acids or even frozen organisms.

Few comets survive their initial trip through the solar system and develop an orbit, such as Halley's comet.

Scientists have identified about 600 comets that make periodic appearances as their elongated orbits carry them through the solar system toward the sun. Only a few are visible at night with the naked eye.

The results of the research are to be reported in the Dec. 10 issue of Nature, the university said.

Note Left By Australian Gunman Studied By Police

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A man who killed eight people in an office building before plunging to his death from an 11th-floor window wrote a note beforehand that may provide a clue to his motive, police said today.

A newspaper said the man may have been depressed by poor exam results that had forced him to leave law school. But the report contained no evidence because Melbourne University declined to release the student's records.

The shooting on Tuesday, which also left four injured, was the worst mass killing in Australia's history. Police, who identified the gunman as 22-year-old Frank Vitkovic, were unsure whether he jumped or fell from the window.

They said the gunman, firing an automatic weapon, attacked people randomly during a 10-minute shooting spree Tuesday afternoon at the Australian Post building in downtown Melbourne.

Vitkovic entered the building at 4:20 p.m. and went to the 5th floor office of the Telecom Credit Union. There, he spoke animatedly with a friend before he drew the weapon and began firing. The unidentified friend was not hurt.

Vitkovic then went from floor to floor, shooting at random. There were about 100 people in the building at the time, police said.

Vaughan Werner, assistant police commissioner for crime, said the gunman was armed with an weapon he had recently purchased.

The Australian newspaper said Vitkovic grappled with a security guard before plunging to his death, 120 feet below. "I can't take it any more," the gunman was quoted as screaming as he toppled over a balcony.

The daily Mirror said Vitkovic was distressed about a poor showing in examinations that forced him to abandon his law studies.

Werner said Vitkovic left a lengthy handwritten letter at his parents' home but he rejected suggestions it was a suicide note. The man's parents said they were too distressed to answer questions from the media.

Werner said a motive would be established by the Victoria state coroner who would read the letter and examine the body and the scene of the crime.

The shooting triggered renewed calls for tighter gun laws.

Prime Minister Bob Hawke said he favored such a move but felt he could not impose his will on other state governments.

"My disposition is toward tough guns laws, but I am not here to try to impose a view on the sovereign states," Hawke told a news conference.

The massacre came almost four months to the day after a former soldier shot seven people dead in Melbourne and wounded 18.

Diseases Spreading

BEIJING (AP) — Venereal diseases, long thought to be wiped out in China, are spreading and China is blaming the West, experts said today.

Experts at a national symposium in Nanking said a re-emergence of the diseases was due to "blind" adaptation of decadent Western lifestyles by some Chinese youths, according to the official Xinhua News Agency today.

They also said increased international exchanges and the developing tourism industry were to blame for bringing in new cases of VD.

Surveys presented at the symposium showed most people with VD were in their early 20s, have higher than average incomes, and are middle-school graduates.

The report did not give any figures on the number of people in China with VD. Most departments dealing with venereal diseases were dismantled in the 1960s and medical colleges no longer offer courses on the diseases.

Young medical workers who are not familiar with VD have misdiagnosed or delayed treatment of the diseases, the news agency said.

China announced in 1964 that it had eliminated VD through a 15-year program of prevention and treatment.

Only comets larger than about 1,000 feet in diameter would be visible to telescopes on Earth.

Enough collisions from the cometesimals could account for all craters 1,500 feet to 2 miles in diameter on the moon, Mercury and Mars over billions of years, Donahue said.

Sandinistas Link Denby To Assassination Plot

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Papers seized from an American whose private plane was downed by the Sandinistas show he was involved in a Contra rebel plot to kill the foreign minister, the government said.

The charge was made Tuesday by Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, who told reporters that James Jordan Denby, 57, of Carlinville, Ill., was "in good health" and being interrogated by state security police in the capital.

Ortega said at a news conference that Denby may be placed on trial. He did not specify the charges that would be filed against Denby. The Sandinistas also said the evidence showed the American was affiliated with the CIA.

"All of this confirms the deep ties (Denby has) to the war of aggression against our people," Ortega said, gesturing to papers and items found on board the small plane Denby was flying when he was shot down Sunday.

Ortega was alluding to U.S.-financed Contras, who have been waging a war against Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government for more than five years.

The Contra umbrella organization known as the Nicaraguan Resistance denied that Denby was affiliated with the rebels.

"Mr. Denby or whatever his name is had absolutely no connection with us," Adolfo Calero, one of six members of the Resistance directorate, said in Miami.

But Ortega claimed otherwise, showing reporters notes on a small pad that Denby allegedly took during a meeting with Calero, and a paper mentioning Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto as the target of a "plan to assassinate him."

In a recent interview, Denby said he sometimes gave the Contras food or flew their wounded to hospitals but did not supply them with weapons.

In Carlinville, his brother William told reporters Tuesday, "I'd be surprised if he was carrying the documents they said he was carrying."

Lou Falino, the U.S. Embassy spokesman in Managua, said the Sandinistas gave permission for a consular officer to see Denby but has not yet said when.

"We are obviously concerned about Mr. Denby's well-being and can offer no insight into the circumstances surrounding his apprehension by government of Nicaragua authorities until we speak directly with Mr. Denby," Falino said.

A Defense Ministry statement said troops in San Juan del Norte, along the Costa Rican border, punctured the fuel tank of Denby's Cessna-172 with rifle fire and forced it to make an emergency landing on an Atlantic Coast beach.

The communique claimed the plane was violating Nicaraguan airspace, and a video-tape played at the news conference showed Denby wearing a flowered shirt, his hands tied behind his back, walking with Sandinista troops in a jungle.

"At the time he was captured he was frightened because he thought the soldiers would kill him," Ortega said.

Denby had filed a flight plan on Friday in the United States giving his destination as Costa Rica, with stops in Mexico, Belize, Honduras and Nicaragua, Ortega said.

Ortega showed reporters Denby's passport, his flight book, and a permit to work with explosives issued by the Illinois Department of Minerals.

He also exhibited military patches and insignias, a black notebook with a small, blue plastic bag taped on it. Ortega claimed some color negatives showed "mercenary camps and a mercenary helicopter."

He said Denby was linked with John Hull, an American living near Denby in Costa Rica who allegedly aided the CIA and the Contras. It was not immediately possible to contact Hull for comment.

Among the paraphernalia was a letter from Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., attesting that Denby was a constituent, with a handwritten note on it saying:

"I don't know if my letter will persuade the Sandinistas to leave you alone, but I hope it helps."

Ortega claimed that Denby had "tricked" Durbin into giving him the letter, adding: "The manipulation of congressmen is part of the dirty war the United States conducts against our country."

Ortega likened Denby's capture to an incident Oct. 5, 1986, when Sandinista troops shot down a cargo plane carrying ferrying supplies to the rebels.

The only survivor, cargo handler Eugene Hassenfus of Marinette, Wis., was captured, convicted and sentenced to 30 years in prison, but was later pardoned by President Daniel Ortega shortly before last Christmas.

"This time the laws of the country should be applied more severely," said Humberto Ortega, Daniel's brother.

CIA's New Chief Spy Hailed As Right Man

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly all opposing factions among CIA veterans are praising Director William H. Webster for choosing a chief of clandestine operations with years of undercover experience and no links to the controversies of William J. Casey.

On Tuesday, Webster lured 31-year intelligence veteran and Soviet specialist Richard F. Stolz out of a retirement he began in 1981, well before then-director Casey embroiled the agency in the Iran-Contra affair.

Stolz, 62, who spent more than half of his CIA career under cover in Western Europe, retired after Casey passed him over as head of the operations directorate in favor of Max Hugel, a businessman with no intelligence experience.

Among other European posts, Stolz served in Moscow in 1964-65 and rose to chief of station in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, in 1973-74 and later in London.

"I think the reaction is almost uniformly favorable, from what I've heard today," said former CIA Director Richard Helms. "He's a real professional, and he has a good reputation with the fellows over whom he will be presiding."

he was running things," particularly the Hugel appointment.

Bobby Ray Inman, Casey's deputy director, said he had pressed Casey to name Stolz instead of Hugel, because Stolz "was very widely respected as a manager who got the job done within the rules."

Inman added, "When Hugel got the job, Dick Stolz made a career decision to do other things and retired."

Turner said he almost gave Stolz the same job in 1977, but "ended up giving him an equally important job in the operations directorate that I can't talk about."

One intelligence source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, and an account in the leftist "Covert Action Bulletin" in 1980 both indicated that the job Stolz got was CIA station chief in London.

State Department publications list Stolz in 1979 as political attache at the U.S. Embassy in London, a common cover job for a top CIA official overseas. "Covert Action Bulletin" also said he had been chief of station in Belgrade.

State Department publications show Stolz, at a relatively youthful 39, served in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

From July 1964 to February 1965, he held the title "first secretary and political officer" in Moscow. His CIA rank in the station could not be learned, but Colby said, speaking of cover ranks generally, "First secretary is no slouch. You don't give it to the garbageman."

U.N. Security Questioned

NEW YORK (AP) — Security around the United Nations War Crimes Commission files was so lax until earlier this year that almost anyone at the United Nations could get access to them, according to a report published today.

Until several months ago, the closed files were stored with unrelated, less restricted material, said the New York Post, quoting unidentified U.N. security sources.

According to the Post, U.N. researchers — often accompanied by people whose credentials were rarely checked — were allowed to remain alone in the same rooms containing the war crimes files.

The war crimes records were separated from the less sensitive records late last year, after the disclosure of the file on former Secretary General Kurt Waldheim sparked a campaign to open all the files.

"It went on like this for years," said one security source.

Missing are 433 of the commission's 8,100 files, the Post reported earlier.

Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar ordered an investigation Tuesday into the disappearance of the files.

Francois Giuliani, a spokesman for the secretary general, labeled the charges of lax security "absolutely untrue."

Two other ex-directors, Stansfield Turner and William Colby, also hailed the choice, as did John K. Greaney, executive director of the Association of Former Intelligence Officers. Greaney's group had bitterly criticized Colby and Turner for curbing the clandestine service during the 1970s.

Stolz's appointment as deputy director for operations is effective at year's end. He replaces Clair E. George as chief of the division that collects intelligence abroad and mounts covert actions to influence foreign events.

George announced his retirement Nov. 25. At the time, he and other agency officials connected with the secret sale of U.S. weapons to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contras were under review by a special counsel Webster named to advise him whether to take disciplinary action in the affair.

Stolz's appointment "will do a lot for morale in the operations directorate," Greaney said. "My opinion of Webster goes much higher. It demonstrates he is sincere in wanting to build up the agency, not tear it apart."

Colby called Stolz "a fine officer, with lots of field experience, which is what that job needs: someone who knows what life is like out in the field."

Turner said Stolz "has a broad grasp of the agency and its role, and he has the morals and ethics to obey the law and yet get the job done."

"He's not tarred by the improprieties of Casey's era," Turner added. "In 1981, Stolz left because he did not agree with Casey and the way

 It is amusing to see what problems players have in counting the hand. We often find them, faces contorted in agony, trying to count 13 cards on a mere 10 fingers. They are going about things the wrong way—it is far simpler than that.

South's jump to three no trump showed a hand of 16-18 points and specifically a 4-3-3-3 distribution. North decided that his good five-card club suit merited a grand slam invitation. Five no trump was just that—it asked partner to bid six with a minimum and seven with a maximum. South obliged.

The play did not take long. Declarer cashed three top spades, discarding a heart from dummy. East shuffled a diamond. Next came the queen-king-ace of hearts. Dummy let go a club as East parted with another diamond. Finally, declarer cashed the ace-king of diamonds and ace of clubs, and he had all the information he needed.

He recalled that East had shown out on both the third spade and third heart. That meant West had started with six spades and four hearts, and he had followed to three rounds of minor-suit winners. Thus, all 13 of West's cards were known—he could not have another club. So declarer led the ten of clubs from dummy and ran it when East did not cover. It was then a simple matter to unblock the king of clubs, re-enter dummy with the queen of diamonds and take the fulfilling trick with the queen of clubs.

CHECKING THE LIST — Santa Claus, usually known as Herman Dail of Ayden, recently was checking the lists of children who visited the Plaza Mall in Greenville. He said Alf, teddy bears and computers are most wanted by children this Christmas. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis).

Santas Are Back In Town For The Holiday Season

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

It's almost Christmas and Santa's in town.

Santas make appearances in malls, schools, hospitals and many other places before finishing his work on Christmas Eve. He recently was in the Plaza Mall collecting lists of toys from good boys and girls.

"Alf is one of the main things" children are asking for, said Santa, usually known as Herman Dail of Ayden. Teddy bears also are at the top of the lists.

And, as may be expected, children of the 1980s also are asking for electronic equipment such as computers, keyboard and tape recorders, he said. "A lot of the girls are interested in clothing."

Dail said he has been a Santa for 12 years. "When I retired, I thought maybe I'd break the monotony of sitting around," he said. He listened to the wishes of children in Ayden and at East Carolina Mall for two years each before bouncing children on his knees at the Plaza.

The Santa known in America emerged about 125 years ago and is a composite of many European legends and images including St. Nicholas, according to The Time-Life Book of Christmas.

The Dutch named St. Nicholas as the patron of their settlements when they arrived to New York in 1624. He had been named a good saint in Holland, a protector of sailors, tradesmen, pawnbrokers and maidens. A champion of children and a generous gift giver, he became associated with Christmas.

Dating back to the fourth century, St. Nicholas was a bishop in Asia Minor known for his kindness and miraculous deeds. "In one story, he saved three poverty-stricken sisters from unhappy marriages by tossing three bags of gold coins through the smoke-hole of their home. One sack fell in a stocking hung by the fireplace to dry, inspiring Dutch children to begin the tradition of hanging holiday stockings," the book said.

In addition to St. Nicholas, the American Santa has adopted traits of figures such as the pagan, Father Christmas, associated with mid-winter celebrations. Scandinavians and others of northern Europe and of Russian heritage contributed the fur-trimmed coat, the sleigh, the far North residence and the toy-making elves, according to the book.

Greenville Community Band's First Concert Is Scheduled At The Plaza Thursday Night

By KAREN E. SIMMONS

Christmas shoppers should look closely at members of the Tar River Community Band when they make their debut in a free, public concert Thursday night at the Plaza in Greenville.

They might see a familiar face. More than 50 musicians who range in age from 19 to 70 have played with the band since its first rehearsal only a few weeks ago on Oct. 15.

Their occupations are as varied as the instruments they play.

Kevin Lamn of Greenville, a teacher with the Kinston City schools, plays the clarinet.

Henry Slocumb is the owner of Plymouth Garment Company and drives the two-hour round trip weekly from Plymouth for the chance to play his saxophone.

Dick Rodebaugh, a trombone player, is department head of chemical development at the Burroughs-Wellcome pharmaceutical plant.

Sonia Gallop, who plays the French horn, is a nurse with the American Red Cross.

The band is designed for adults who enjoy playing music, but haven't had an outlet since high school or college days.

"This is not a high-pressure organization," says director Harold A. Jones, a faculty member of the School of Music, East Carolina University. "Some of these people haven't touched their horns in a long time."

Bethel resident Ebern Allen, a baritone horn player, was pleased with his first rehearsal in 29 years. "I did surprisingly well," he said. "I was surprised that I could even play it."

Snare drummer Charles Horne of Greenville says it's been 50 years since he'd picked up a drum stick. "I had forgotten what a note looked like," he said. "Some of it is coming back, so I plan to stick it out for a while."

Horne, who retired in 1985 as director of the Greenville Utilities Commission, was a member of what may have been the city's first community band in the 1930s.

"It was put together by the fire chief of that time, George Gardner, and we practiced over the old fire station on East Fifth Street," Horne said.

"We probably didn't have as many as 25 members, but we did give a concert one Sunday afternoon in front of the Pitt County Courthouse."

The Tar River Community Band is the brainchild of Charles Alford, a vocational rehabilitation counselor with the Pitt County schools. A trumpet and saxophone player, Alford has been a member of community bands in Kinston and Washington, N.C. for several years.

Last spring he decided it was time for Greenville to form its own band.

"When I had tried to get people from Greenville to participate in other bands in the area, none of them would come," he said. "They always wanted to know why we didn't have a band here in Greenville."

Alford found six other persons who shared his conviction — Alice Keene, Pitt County community schools coordinator; Ralph Shumaker, an assistant professor with the ECU School of Music; Dottie Jo Knight, Pitt County schools elementary band director; Bill Frazier, band director at E.B. Aycock Junior High; Mike Fussell, Rose High band director, and Ralph Brown, minister of the Holy Trinity United Methodist Church.

After several meetings and considerable legwork, they lined up some sponsors — Pitt County schools, the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, and the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Music and some of the larger instruments were borrowed from Rose High and other area bands, and a director was chosen.

The director, Harold Jones, has taught percussion at the ECU School of Music for the past 25 years and currently serves as acting chairman of the instrumental department and acting director of the ECU Symphonic wind ensemble.

"We wanted a director everybody could get along with," Keene said. "I don't think anybody will complain about getting Harold Jones. We're real grateful that such a qualified professional is willing to volunteer his time."

Jones declares that he is pleased with the progress the group has shown in its first two months. "The band has a lot of potential," he said. "I'm very pleased with the sound they create."

In November, the band selected The Tar River Community Band name and voted in its first slate of officers — Ralph Shumaker, president; Charles Alford, vice president; Dottie Jo Knight, secretary; Alice Keene, treasurer; Karen Simmons and Jo Ann Allen, publicity chairman; Janet Hofstetter and Sandra Russell, music librarians, and Michelle Hairston, social chairman.

Rehearsals for the band are held every Thursday evening from 7:30 until 9 in the Rose High Band Room.

Interested persons are invited by band members to attend, even if they don't have an instrument. "We'll try to find you one," Keene said.

Thursday night's concert begins at the Plaza at 7:30 p.m.

This first community concert program will feature a medley of popular Christmas songs, a march, highlights from "The Music Man" and several classical pieces.

'Rudolph Reindeer' Success Story

NEW YORK — "Rudolph the Red Nose Reindeer" is now one of the most popular songs in the world. But back in 1949, when songwriter Johnny Marks tried to get his then new song recorded, he faced the same problem as poor Rudolph: rejection.

"You're not talking about Winston Churchill," roared one recording executive. "It's just a reindeer with a ridiculous nose. How can you say he'll go down in history? Change that last line, Johnny, the one that says

'you'll go down in history,' and I'll submit the song to Perry Como for his next recording session.

Johnny Marks faced a tough decision, he recalled in later years. Every major music publisher had already rejected the song; and Perry Como was then one of the hottest recording artists in the country. But Marks resisted changing the lyric, and Como did not introduce the song.

Marks next sent a demo recording of the song to Gene Autry; but he too turned it down. Autry felt that the song didn't fit his image as a cowboy singer.

But this time fortune was on Mark's side. Gene Autry's wife happened to hear the demo, and urged Autry to include it on a new single he was scheduled to record. "You put whatever song you want on the 'A' side," she said, "and put Rudolph on the 'B' side for me. I just love the song."

The rest of the story is, indeed, history. Autry's record was released in September of 1949, and instantly became a phenomenal hit. In fact, "Rudolph" went on to become perhaps the most successful pop song ever written.

To date, it has sold approximately 150 million records worldwide. The original Autry record has gone over the 12,500,000 mark, making it the all-time best seller of Columbia records. More than 8,000,000 copies of sheet music and 25,000,000 copies of 200 choral and band arrangements have been sold. The song has been translated into almost every language.

His other Yuletide hits include: "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day," first recorded in 1956 by Bing Crosby; "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree," which became a hit when introduced in 1960 by Brenda Lee; and "Holly Jolly Christmas," recorded by Burl Ives in 1963, after he introduced it in the "Rudolph" TV special.

Marks also went on to become a prolific composer of scores for television specials. This December, his "Rudolph the Red Nose Reindeer" special will air on CBS for the 24th consecutive year. It is the longest-running special in television history.

Marks' other specials include "Rudolph's Shiny New Year," with Red Skeleton; "Rudolph and Frosty," with Ethel Merman, Shelly Winters, Mickey Rooney and Red Buttons; "The Tiny Tree," with Roberta Flack and Buddy Ebsen; and "The Ballad of Smokey the Bear," with James Cagney.

John D. Marks was born in Mount Vernon, New York, in 1909. He attended Colgate University, after which he studied music at Columbia University and in Paris. In the French capital, he supported himself by playing piano in small bistros. It was in one of these that he performed for author Ernest Hemingway.

He returned to New York after his studies, and became an active songwriter from 1935 until his death in 1985. He wrote over 150 published songs, among which were such hits as: "Address Unknown," with the Ink Spots; "Who Calls," with Bing Crosby; "She'll Always Remember," with Glenn Miller; "Don't Cross Your Fingers, Cross Your Heart," with Sammy Kaye; "Anyone Can Move a Mountain," with Kate Smith; and "Ev'rything I've Always Wanted," with Porter Wagoner.

However, Marks certainly became best known as the composer of Christmas music. As one writer put it, "he is identified with Christmas songs as Stephen Foster is with sentimental ballads of the old south."

Asian Rites Are Followed When Filming In Malaysia

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer

KUCHING, Malaysia (AP) — The producer of the movie, "Farewell to the King," ordered his cast and crew not to start filming until a local spirit medium, a Buddhist monk and a master of feng shui visited the film's production office and the main set.

The local rites didn't take place, though, because the American and Australian crew didn't think these rites applied to Westerners.

Producer Andre Morgan wanted Asian traditions observed, as this Malaysian state on the north coast of Borneo made its first feature film.

He didn't discover that the rites had not taken place until the main set, a native longhouse that cost $120,000 to build, collapsed and injured one of the crew. All work was immediately stopped while the various ceremonies were arranged. Clergymen blessed the set while the actors, including star Nick Nolte, looked on.

The feng shui (pronounced fung shway) specialist said the original wooden longhouse had been built in an "unpropitious" location. A replacement was positioned to his satisfaction and also mounted on a concrete foundation.

He took measures to shoo away bad spirits, atone for not checking the set earlier and sealed the site during reconstruction to protect it from further woe, Morgan said. Another $120,000 was spent on the second longhouse.

Devised more than 2,000 years ago in China as a quasi-scientific land-surveying technique, feng shui (literally, wind and water) mixes fortune telling with geomancy (divination by random figures). Practitioners are supposed to calculate a building's "prosperity" by its shape, site and the presence or absence of benevolent dragons in the neighborhood.

A new door was cut in the production office at a more favorable angle to the nearby Sarawak River than the original entrance. Then the feng shui expert checked the Holiday Inn suites occupied by director John Milius, Nolte, supporting actors Nigel Havers and Frank McRae and others in the crew.

Milius switched rooms after the feng shui determined that he was originally given a completely unpropitious suite. Nolte's accommodation was deemed acceptable, and rooms assigned to the others were approved only after furniture was rearranged.

"I just don't want to take any chances 6,000 miles from home," said Havers, who lives in England. His bed was moved so that it faced a wall instead of a door.

Once the formalities were properly observed, filming resumed without incident. With a budget of more than $16 million, "Farewell to the King" is scheduled for release late next year.

Set in Japanese-occupied Borneo during World War II, it is based on a novel by French writer Pierre Schoendoerffer and was adapted for the screen by Milius.

Nolte plays an American soldier named Learoyd who escapes the fall of Corregidor by boat and is washed ashore on Borneo. He flees from the Japanese into the interior where he is captured by Dyak tribesmen. They nurse him back to health and he emerges as their king after fighting the top warrior.

The allies parachute commandos (Havers and McRae) into the jungle to incite the tribes to help overthrow the Japanese. They team up with Learoyd's Dyaks for a series of battles, betrayal and the king's farewell.

The cast includes scores of local tribesmen as extras. Some are descendants of Borneo's legendary headhunters and Penans — Sarawak's last known tribe of nomadic hunters who still use blowguns, spears and headhunter swords.

"It pays to come here," said Elliot Schick, executive in charge of production. "We could not duplicate the people — the faces of women especially — in Mexico or anywhere else."

Still, the jungle near Kuching required some help. Special effects experts sprayed green paint on plants that were not lush enough for the filmmakers.

With "Farewell to the King" near completion, a second movie under way and several others in the planning stage, Malaysia hopes to join neighboring Thailand and the Philippines as a prime location for Hollywood producers.

"Hollywood Film Project," a campaign by the government-controlled Malaysian Airlines System, aims to sell the country to Hollywood. The airline opened service to Los Angeles in July 1986 and now offers free tickets to filmmakers who want to see what Malaysia has to offer.

There is no domestic film industry, but a newly created company called Cine Location Services offers support, location advice, technical staff and equipment, and functions as a liaison with government agencies.

"Bat 21," a film about the Vietnam War starring Gene Hackman, was recently completed in the Malaysian state of Sabah on Borneo.

Other movies tentatively set to shoot in Malaysia include "Aces," "Air America," "How Sleep the Brave" and "Outcast of the Islands."

Navy, Marine Aviators Give To Expand Museum

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Retired Brig. Gen. Joe Adams of the Marine Corps Reserve has a special feeling for the open-cockpit, F-6C Curtiss Hawk biplane he flew in 1930 while training here at the Navy's Corry Field.

"That was the principal, if not the only, fighter the Navy and Marines had" in the late 1920s, the Pensacola resident recalled. "Oh, it was the most responsive plane that was ever built. ... It was a dream of a plane."

Adams and his wife, Margaret, have had a hand in helping keep alive the memories of his 400-horsepower dream plane with a $50,000 contribution to sponsor a gleamingly restored Curtiss Hawk at the U.S. Naval Aviation Museum.

The museum at the Pensacola Naval Air Station is trying to raise $7 million for a major expansion by offering corporations, former aviators and other individuals a chance to sponsor historic aircraft.

The Naval Aviation Museum Foundation is distributing a catalog filled with photographs of aircraft in the museum's inventory.

They include the Bell TH-13M Sioux helicopter that astronaut Jim Lovell used to practice simulated lunar landings, a Coast Guard J4F-1 Grumman Widgeon that sank a German U-boat in the Gulf of Mexico off Louisiana, the tiny Cessna O-1 Bird Dog that a South Vietnamese Air Force pilot landed with his family aboard on the USS Midway to escape the communist takeover of his homeland and the D-558-1 Skystraker jet that set two world speed records in 1947.

Those and dozens of other aircraft used by the Navy and Marines, from early open-cockpit flying boats to modern jets and exact replicas of spacecraft, can be sponsored for donations ranging from $25,000 to $100,000. Pensacola banker Roy Hess, a former state legislator, and more than 20 of his old shipmates from the carrier USS Coral Sea have pledged $75,000 toward sponsorship of a Douglas AD-6 Skyraider that he said may be one of the planes they flew as members of squadron VA-104 in 1954-55.

The AD-6 was the Navy's last pro-pellor-driven attack plane but the first carrier-based aircraft capable of carrying nuclear weapons, the specialty of its sponsors who were based in Mayport, Hess said.

So far, the foundation has raised $4.75 million in cash and "hard pledges," about half from corporations and the rest from individuals, said retired Rear Adm. G.M. "Skip" Furlong Jr., executive vice president.

The expansion, slated to begin early next year and end in October 1989, will more than double the museum's 107,000 square feet of floor space and enhance its place as one of the Florida Panhandle's top tourist attractions, said retired Capt. Bob Rasmussen, its director.

At least 350,000 visitors are expected this year, almost a 50 percent increase in two years, Furlong said. Annual visitation is expected to increase to 2 million by the turn of the century.

It is the smallest of the three national aviation museums. The others are the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum in Washington and the Air Force Museum in Dayton, Ohio. But future expansion plans would increase the size to 500,000 square feet by the year 2000 and make it the biggest, Furlong said.

Unlike the Air Force Museum, which received a federal grant in addition to donations, Furlong said, the Naval Aviation Museum has been built and will be expanded without federal money.

The foundation has enlisted some famous names to help with fund rais-

The campaign's national advisory committee includes Vice President and former naval aviator George Bush, former President Gerald Ford, newscaster Walter Cronkite, golfer Arnold Palmer and former astronaut Alan Shepard.

Navy Secretary James Webb kicked off the campaign Oct. 2 with the keynote address at the foundation's annual board meeting.

The campaign's general chairman is Robert F. Daniell, chairman and chief executive of United Technologies Corp. of Hartford, Conn., parent company of engine manufacturer Pratt & Whitney and Sikorsky Aircraft, the world's largest builder of helicopters.

Other top corporate officials and retired admirals serve as regional directors.

The largest single gift of $500,000 has been contributed by the McDonnell Douglas Foundation of St. Louis, which is sponsoring four McDonnell Douglas A-4 Skyhawks retired last year by the Pensacola-based Blue Angels Flight Demonstration Squadron.

The Blue Angels' jets will hang in their familiar diamond formation in a glass-enclosed atrium that will join the existing museum building to a second one of the same size. Future plans call for two more virtually identical buildings attached to the atrium and a free-standing theater.

The current expansion phase will add 35 aircraft to the 33 now inside the museum and 20 parked outside.

Exhibit Chronicles 40 Years Of Rothschild Wine Labels

By TARA BRADLEY-STECK
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Baron Philippe de Rothschild has taken famous art off the wall and put it on bottles of his exclusive wine. Now his daughter is once again hanging those labels in art galleries around the world.

In the traveling exhibit, "Mouton Rothschild: Paintings for the Labels," Baroness Philippine de Rothschild has gathered the many labels her father commissioned from such artists as Chagall, Picasso and Dali for his Chateau Mouton Rothschild, one of the world's most celebrated wines.

The exhibit is in the middle of a five-year tour of the United States under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution.

"The exhibition is a sort of strange affair," she said at a recent opening at Carnegie Mellon University. "Is it art? Is it wine? What it is really is art put on bottles of wine, which happened to be art themselves."

For about the first 10 years after World War II, the labels were painted by Rothschild's artist friends. Since then, other artists have wanted to design them.

That's partly because the pay-in-kind was wine — 10 cases of Chateau Mouton Rothschild which, like fine art, increases in value over the years. The artists get some cases from the year they have illustrated and also a few cases from any other desired year.

The most recent vintage, 1985, sells for $76 a bottle in the United States. Older vintages cost hundreds of dollars, said the baroness, who is vice president of her father's company, La Baronnie.

Rothschild first established the "designer label" tradition in 1924 when he became the first French vintner to bottle his wines at the chateau instead of selling them in barrels to wine merchants to bottle, label and sell.

To draw attention to the new practice, the baron had graphic designer Jean Carlu produce a label featuring a Cubist ram's head — Mouton means ram in French and the ram is the baron's astrological sign — cocked over the square buildings of the chateau.

No other art was commissioned until 1945. That label, which features a "V" for victory surrounded by a vine, was drawn by artist Philippe Julian to commemorate the end of the war.

"My father put that on the label only for the idea of celebrating this new freedom, freedom recovered," the baroness said. "The next year, because people liked it, he said 'Let's go on.'"

"But in 1946, the event people were talking about was Gandhi's death. Unfortunately Gandhi had never touched a drop of wine, so nothing could be done about Gandhi or the event. Gandhi indirectly helped my father figure out that the interesting part was the art, not the event, and that the art would remain but the event would pass."

Most of the paintings are variations of the theme of wine, grapes, the ram or the joy of drinking. Some, however, such as Hisao Domoto's 1979 label depicting bright, radiating colors, have little, if any, connection to wine.

The late Andy Warhol's 1975 label features a photomontage of the baron. Robert Motherwell's 1974 label is a shapeless, black form on a gold background. The 1973 label is a drawing of nude women by Pablo Picasso. The 1969 label by Joan Miro is dominated by a blood-red grape surrounded by the blue and yellow of the Rothschild racing colors.

Most of the artists never intended their work for Chateau Mouton Rothschild would leave the confines of a basement cellar or wine rack, Baroness Philippine said.

"I can tell you that none of those painters, when they did those things, ever thought for one minute they would be shown, whether in Pittsburgh or anywhere in the world," she said.

However, the baroness was determined to have their other sketches, tools, newspaper clippings, poems, photographs and any other background on the artist or the work accompany the full-scale drawing.

As a result, the shoebox Bernard Defour used to sketch his drawings is part of the exhibit for 1963 label, as is a clump of weeds Hans Hartung used to make sweeping yellow and black strokes for the 1980 label.

The 1986 label is a secret and won't be revealed until next year because the wine is aged about 2½ years before it is bottled, said the baroness.

What she looks for in future labels is "pleasure."

"I would hate to choose a label, however well-known the painter would be, that wasn't in accordance with my own taste," she said.

But after all is said and done, the drawing is still a label and has to be able to function as such.

"A painting can be very good just as a painting, but not good on the bottle," she said. "We would never decide on choosing a painting without having seen it on the bottle."

State Tourism Grants Awarded

RALEIGH — A total of $250,000 in non-profit tourism related grants have been awarded to North Carolina agencies and organizations on a matching grants basis.

For Region 4, which encompasses Pitt, Martin, Beaufort, Craven and Bertie counties, the tourism grants amount to $10,300. The seven recipients of these grants are: Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, $1,910; Fort Branch Battlefield Commission, Hamilton, $1,910; Martin County Economic Development Commission, $1,910; New Bern Area Chamber of Commerce, $1,910; Craven County Tourist Development Authority, $1,910; N.C. Civil War Reenactments, $600, and Historic Bath Commission, $150.

Pitt Man Wins Media Award

RALEIGH — A Pitt County man, Franc White, is a state winner in the North Carolina Take Pride in America Award Program. White is the sole state winner in the media award category, honored for "the promotion of environmental appreciation as an integral part of sportsmanship" as manifested in his television features, the "Southern Sportsmans Show." Awards were made in 11 separate categories.

Gov. Martin will recognize the winners with plaques at the "Take Pride in America" awards banquet scheduled for Jan. 22 in Raleigh. Winners will be considered for national awards to be given at the White House at a later date.

State Parks To Close Christmas Day

RALEIGH — The 30 state parks throughout North Carolina will be closed this year on Christmas Day. This is a change in the previous policy of keeping the parks open 365 days a year. Studies made on Christmas Day, 1986, indicated that attendance at the parks was extremely low on Christmas Day. All the parks will reopen on Dec. 26.

Magazine To Feature Liberty Hall

KENANSVILLE — A leading publication, "Early American Life," which specialized in publishing photographic coverage of outstanding historic homes, will feature Kenansville's Liberty Hall Restoration in a future issue.

The staff and crew of the magazine will be in Kenansville on Friday and Saturday to gather information and take photographs of Liberty Hall, the 19th century home place of the Kenan family. The main house, outbuildings and the grounds of the home have been fully restored and furnished in recent years.

Liberty Hall is presenting its annual Candlelight Christmas on Saturday, with festivities to begin at 5 p.m. and will continue through 10 p.m.

A Review

Story Spins To The Past

FIRST LIGHT. By Charles Baxter. Viking. 286 Pages. $17.95.

Charles Baxter's "First Light" is one of those rare novels that starts at the end and ends at the beginning. It's a bit discomfiting at first but as the reader gets used to Baxter's smooth storytelling, the problem soon vanishes.

Hugh Welch and his younger sister, Dorsey, once were close but as they grew they went their different ways. Hugh was a handsome boy and a fine athlete. His sister was attractive in a way but not terribly popular. They also differed in intelligence. Dorsey was brilliant. Hugh was plodding.

Despite the differences, life has not treated them especially well. Dorsey, an astrophysicist, was made pregnant by an admired professor. She had raised her son as a single parent until recently, when she married a charming, itinerant actor.

Hugh, after flunking out of college, has settled in as an automobile salesman. He is married to a woman he doesn't really understand, nor she him. They have two children. Having promised his now dead father long ago to look after Dorsey, Hugh is troubled by her life but he also is troubled by his own.

After a long separation, Dorsey, her son and her new husband come to visit Hugh and his family at the Five Oaks, Mich., home in which both were raised and where Hugh now lives.

It is after the brother and sister come together again that Baxter begins to relate their story, going slowly back to show them at various points in time when their lives were together, as teen-agers, as children and, finally, when they first met. Dorsey, a baby, Hugh, a very young boy who "reaches forward and, with unpracticed tenderness, touches his sister's hand for the first time."

Dealer's Specialty Is Fakes

BY MARILYN AUGUST
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — If you fall in love with Modigliani's "Petite Marie," but don't have the millions to pay so it can hang over the fireplace, go see French art dealer Daniel Delamare.

From his luxury offices on the Avenue Matignon in the heart of Paris' most prestigious gallery district, he deals openly, legally and proudly in fakes.

These fakes are guaranteed, one-of-a-kind copies of such masterpieces as Edouard Manet's "Le Cafe-Concert," Vincent Van Gogh's "Les Oliviers (Ciel Bleu)," Paul Gauguin's "Les Seins aux Fruits Rouges" and Auguste Renoir's "Madame Henriot." The signatures on the paintings also are forged.

"This collection represents a chance for many people to see dozens of paintings that haven't been seen in decades because they're either in private collections or in vaults," Delamare, 34, said in an interview.

"And for those who absolutely love a certain Degas, Renoir, Toulouse-Lautrec or Klimt, but who can't and never could afford to pay their million-dollar prices, my copies are as close as they'll ever get."

The gallery opened last January with 100 reproductions selling for $5,000-16,000. About 20 have already found buyers, Delamare said, including museums and art collections.

Other customers are private collectors who already own the originals and want to put them in safekeeping, while hanging a copy on the wall, he said. He declined to give names of his clients, but said some homes of artists — open to the public as museums — had expressed interest.

The copies are the handiwork of 15 European artists who, Delamare said, also do not wish to be identified. Although each painting bears the signature of the original artist and a stamp on the back saying it is a copy, the copier's name is nowhere to be found.

"For the most part, the artists are well known in their own right," said Danielle Van Santen, Delamare's associate and former consultant to the Belgian Culture Ministry. "Three artists are having shows of their work right now in Paris, and they can't afford to let their galleries find out."

Van Santen said it took nearly three years to seek out artists with enough experience and technical know-how to be able to produce perfect copies. "I mainly looked at the artists who used classical and impressionist techniques in their own work. They were artists who were more interested in technique — color and brushwork, for example — than the elaboration of an abstract idea," she said.

For centuries, reproducing masterpieces was an accepted and widely practiced method for a student artist to polish his technique. Copying fell into disrepute in the mid-1800s with the rise of France's status-conscious bourgeoisie and the emergence of the art dealer.

"Paintings used to be exchanged among the artists themselves or commissioned by the potential buyers," Van Santen said. "When it became important to have a painting by so-and-so, authenticity became an issue."

Delamare has patented his idea and sells each painting with a guarantee that it will never be reproduced — legally, anyway.

"I can't go into the details, but believe me, it took three years to get through the red tape and legalities," he said. The fakes will one day be seen as good investments, he said, and he hopes the venture will open up a "second art market."

"Since the number of paintings done by each of the most famous impressionist or post-impressionist artists is limited, the market could really be explosive," he said. "If you have the copy I want, you can sell it to me at a profit."

The collection also includes works by Rousseau, Paul Cezanne, Fragonard, Alfred Sisley, Turner and Pissarro.

In two years, Delamare plans to mount a show of the fakes and take them around the world. Meanwhile, the gallery is open by appointment only.

Trafficking

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Nine people were charged with drug trafficking and possession in connection with a $350 million cocaine shipment seized last month en route to Miami, a judge said.

Judge Miguel Angel Izaquique of the Atlantic coastal resort of Tela said four of the men were in custody. He said the defendants included six Hondurans, a Spaniard, a Nicaraguan, and a Peruvian.

Izaquique said the men were accused of trying to ship about four tons of cocaine from Medellin, Colombia, to Miami. The shipment was seized by U.S. authorities Nov. 20, the judge said.

The case is being prosecuted in Tela, about 175 miles north of Tegucigalpa, because the alleged drug traffickers had their operations there, authorities said.

here I sit, waiting

I've been through all to support my country why me?

that would not be afraid to be killed by the enemy
I used to lead a "normal" life the pain and pressure is too much

The Peace Of The Country

By Marcey Spain

The freshness of the air is all around
As I look out at the green forest trees.
This is the only place I have found
That gives me comfort and serenity.
In the calm and quietness of the meadow,
You think you're alone. But look up! You'll see

That life moves within the shadows,
Like a doe watching her fawn sleep silently.
Some people need excitement of cities,
With fast moving people and busy streets.
But me, I need the peace of the country,

With clear skies and green grass beneath my feet.
This is the only place I've ever known,
And I'll never leave, even when I'm grown.

Marcey Spain, 17, a student at D.H. Conley High School receives special mention.

Why We Should Keep North Carolina Beautiful

By Denise Strickland

We the citizens should keep N.C. beautiful because it's our responsibility.
We should keep N.C. beautiful because it will give our future generation a sense of the Tarheel heritage. N.C. was a beautiful place when it was founded, and it should be kept that way. If our generation sets a good example for the future generation, then they will want to follow in our footsteps. It will give them a feeling of accomplishment, if they keep N.C. a clean and beautiful place in which to live.
Initially I think we should stop pollution. If we don't stop pollution, it can cause diseases, such as lung cancer and heart disease. All the diseases are harmful to our health, and our health is very important to us. It may also cause our plants to die.
If our state is more beautiful, then more tourists will want to visit some of N.C.'s historic sites, such as Kitty Hawk, the N.C. battleship, and Fort Macon. These are really some interesting places to visit. Our state would make a lot of money from the tourists.
With this money we could help keep N.C. beautiful.

Then more people would want to live in N.C. because it is such a beautiful and well-kept state.
I feel very strongly about keeping N.C. beautiful and clean. If we don't, who will?

Denise Strickland, 13, a student at Farmville Middle School receives special mention.

The Mysterious Woman

By Juliana Whitehurst

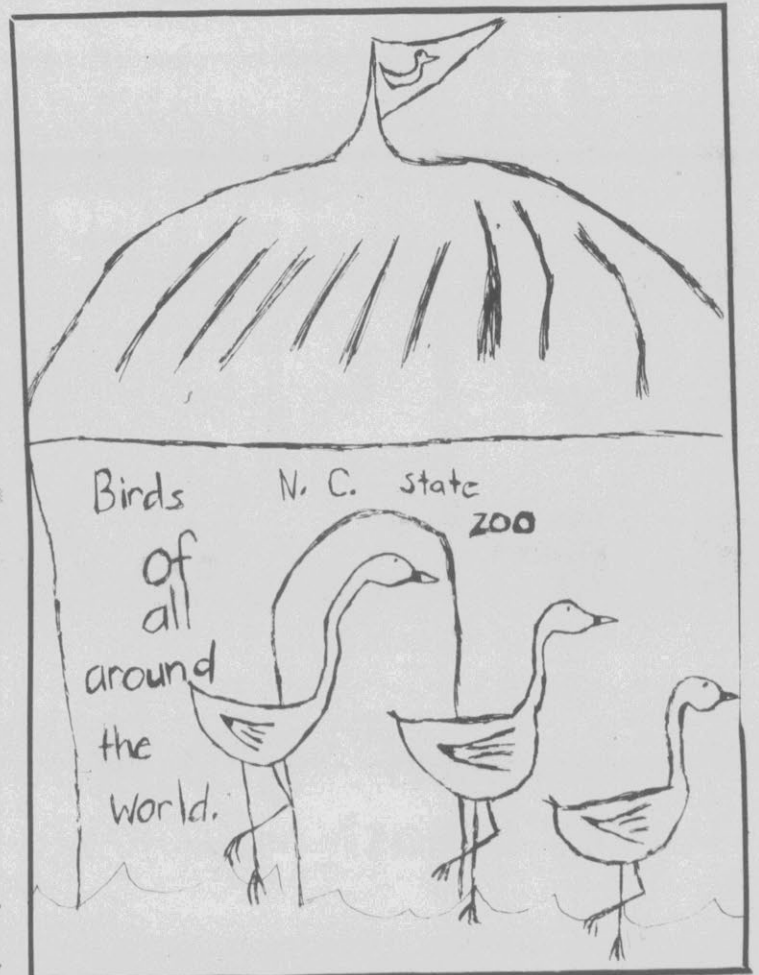

We walked up the steep steps and knocked on the brown door.
A fat lady answered.
She told us to sit on the floor.
We gathered 'round the woman who looked so very queer.

She told us lots of stories,
And then she disappeared.
We left the house in quite a hurry, afraid she might return.
As we passed her bed of flowers,
John knocked over a fern.

We didn't bother to clean it up.
It was left a total mess.
With broken pots and clumps of dirt,
She'll probably call us careless.
So, if you go to a woman's house,
And a fat woman answers the door.

Just turn around with your back to her
And don't come back any more.

Juliana Whitehurst, 11, a student at Bethel Elementary School receives special mention.

Kelly Burke, 7, a student at St. Peter's School receives special mention.

A Party

By LaChauncey Worsley

We had a pizza party,
Then we went to Hardee's.
We ate cookies and ice cream.
We made a scene,
We dance and dine
Until half past nine.
The show is going
So we went home.
When we got home we went to bed.
We went to bed to rest our heads.

LaChauncey Worsley, 10, a student at Bethel Elementary School receives special mention.

Tar Heel Trivia

N.C. Triangle Park

The N.C. Research Triangle Park has grown from an idea of one person to become the largest center for research of its type in the entire world.
Former N.C. Governor Luther H. Hodges dreamed of a complex where research and technology could join together and add to the state and the world.
Three towns and three universities make this triangle. The cities are Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill while the three universities are N.C. State University, Duke University and UNC at Chapel Hill. It is from this imaginary triangle formed by the towns and universities that the name Research Triangle Park was conceived. The park is also located in three counties-Wake, Durham and Orange.
Such companies as Burroughs Wellcome, DuPont and IBM are a part of the research park which was founded in 1959.

Accomplished Cake Decorator Received On-The-Job Training

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Karen Cavender of Greenville said she learned her hobby of baking and decorating cakes by being attentive and "soaking everything up" from her mentors.

"I worked at Baskin Robbins for about seven years, and the owner's wife there did a lot of decorating," she said. "I watched her and did little things... soaking everything up."

The store, located in Anderson, Ind., was sold the sixth year Mrs. Cavender worked there, she said, and she became the manager of the store.

"It was really well known for pretty decorations and a nice party case," she said. So, "that forced me into teaching myself."

There also was a "lady at church who did wedding cakes and cakes for people," Mrs. Cavender said. "I spent time with her, watching her, and I got some of her secrets that she really didn't like to tell people."

Mrs. Cavender, who makes the cake and decorations from scratch — icing and all — began decorating cakes for her family, developing her skills and confidence, she said. Then, "friends would have birthdays and would say 'could you do a cake?'"

With an average of about 10 cakes a month, many of the cakes are decorated with symbols from invitations, napkins or hats people bring her as a model, Mrs. Cavender said. "I love children's cakes because you can use bright colors" and a variety of designs.

"The kids don't mind if it's not exact as long as they can tell what it is," and, it's always rewarding to watch the excitement of their faces when they see the cake, she said.

But, "I don't like to draw people on cakes" because of the detail required in the face and flesh color, Mrs. Cavender said. "I'm not an artist at all."

rated with a woman in shades, she said. The skin "was a light peach color. It turned out all right. I'll try about anything" on the cake.

Mrs. Cavender said she has decorated cakes with the Cookie Monster, Big Bird, Transformer Laser Tag and even Rambo.

The Rambo cake featured brown sugar for sand, a standup tent made from an Army jacket and little rubber men.

A picture is taken of each cake and will be placed in a photo album, she said. And in addition to caring for her husband, Cary, and her daughter, Christy Lynn, Mrs. Cavender said she also enjoys music.

The only flaw in preparing the cakes is "it's very hard to go on a diet when you do this because you tend to snitch," she said.

Tasty Foods Exist For Dieters

If being on a diet during the holidays is a necessity for you, be of good cheer. Today, there are many tasty desserts, snack foods, and side dishes which will guarantee that you won't be deprived during the season.

If you want to try adjusting some of your old favorites during the holidays, try lowering the sugar and shortening content back to the next measure. For example, if your recipe called for 3/4 cup sugar and 1/2 cup shortening, the revised recipe would read, 2/3 cup sugar and 1/3 cup shortening. Many times when the sugar and shortening are reduced, the true flavor of the food is enjoyed. The following recipes are easy to prepare, fun to eat and found to be lower in sodium, cholesterol, and calories.

Happy Holidays from the Tarheel Kitchen

LIGHT APPLE CAKE

- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 2 medium N.C. apples (1/2 lb.) unpeeled, cored, and chopped

- 1 egg, slightly beaten

Invitation To A Party May Be The Best Gift During Holidays

With the holiday season approaching, most of us thinking about gift-giving. What are the ingredients of a really good gift? First, the most important first impression — the wrapping or presentation. Next, the element of surprise — the unexpected. And finally, the fulfillment of expectations.

With these thoughts in mind, the nicest gift for your friends could be an invitation to a party. Apply the same standards to your party as you would to any good gift. Use the recipes below to lay a dazzler of a spread — and a dramatic first impression. There will be a few tasty surprises for the jaded palate; and it will all taste as good as it looks.

First, the presentation. To highlight the holiday theme, complement the fresh green of ingredients with a cheerful red tablecloth. Or, for drama and added formality, cover the table in starchy white sparkled with red seasonal flowers. Add candles, mistletoe, red ribbon — just like wrapping a gift, it's up to your imagination.

For most of these finger food recipes, the basic ingredients are party breads and crackers. Both are so easy to handle, are substantial enough to cover with meaningful morsel, and come in different flavors.

The first surprise is a blend of fiery hot and minty cool — Red Hot Cayenne Toasts served with cream cheese and mint jelly. One package of party pumpernickel bread makes 40 hors d'oeuvres. Another favorite, deviled eggs, are translated into canapes here and spread onto party pumpernickel or rye bread.

Garnish them with a touch of red, perhaps pimiento or radish — or a bit of green watercress — to complete a lovely picture. A third canape, Ham and Kiwi Fruit, combines the cool,

For an appetizing spread, Dilled Sour Cream Mousse is garnished with fresh dill or sun dried tomatoes. The Three Cracker Assortment's mild English Water Biscuit, flavorful Hearty Wheat cracker, and zesty Sesame cracker make the perfect accompaniment on other details on party day.

All of these recipes are hard to beat — but they are easy to make, easy to serve and easy on the holiday pocketbook. So plan your party, please your friends — and have a happy holiday.

RED HOT CAYENNE TOASTS WITH CREAM CHEESE AND MINT JELLY

- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar

- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 3/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 3/4 teaspoon onion powder
- 1 package (8 ounces) party pumpernickel bread
- 1 jar mint jelly

1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, at room temperature

In a small bowl combine olive oil with cayenne pepper, salt, sugar, pepper, paprika, garlic powder and onion powder. Brush liberally on both sides of each piece of bread. Place on baking sheet and bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes or until crisp. Remove from oven and cool. Serve cayenne toasts with mint jelly and cream cheese. Makes 40 canapes.

Something Substantial For Dinner

By Peggy Katalinich
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

It hits this time every year — the desire for comforting, warming dinners, nothing spare or nouvelle, but rather a country-style menu.

For me, that means potatoes and one of the hearty fall vegetables; here I've paired leeks with mashed potatoes and borrowed from a French theme and put cream on cabbage.

And for the main event, a garlic-fragrant platter of pork ribs.

PARSLEYED RIBS

- 1 cup loosely packed Italian parsley
- 3 cloves garlic, peeled
- 2 teaspoons dried rosemary
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- Grated rind of 1/2 lemon
- 1 bunch chives or 3 scallions
- 3 to 4 tablespoons olive oil
- Salt and pepper
- 4 1/2 pounds country-style ribs (pork loin, rib end)
- 3/4 cup white wine

1. Blend parsley, garlic, rosemary, 2 tablespoons oil, lemon rind and chives in a blender or food processor until finely chopped. Set aside. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

(See DINNER, D-3)

PARTY TIME — Send out the invitations, it's party time. Here's a dazzler of a spread that looks like a picture and delivers some tasty surprises: Red Hot Cayenne Toasts served with cream cheese and mint jelly, Dilled Sour Cream Mousse, and Canapes of Deviled Egg, Ham and Kiwi Fruit.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q. I recently heard on the national news about a study that proved vitamin C helps cure colds. Can you give me more information? J.S., Greenville.

A. Well, vitamin C sure doesn't cure the common cold! But, you did hear that vitamin C might help reduce the symptoms of cold. A study done by Dr. Elliott Dick got lots of television and newspaper attention a few weeks ago. Since the 1970s, researchers have been trying to test vitamin C as a common cold preventive. They continue to have mixed results. It is difficult and expensive to set up an experiment that can control how people are exposed to cold viruses.

The media spotlighted Dick's new study of 16 students in a special setting. The students lived and played cards with others who already had colds. Dick gave them either vitamin C or placebo. He reported that the students who took the vitamin C had fewer coughs, nose blows and sneezes. Dick said his study suggests that taking vitamin C, after being exposed to a virus, might reduce the miseries of a rhinovirus cold. I watched several interviews where the reporter kept trying to get Dick to make a recommendation for taking vitamin C. But, Dick was firm in saying that this was just one study and more study is needed before he could say that vitamin C helps cold sufferers.

There are a couple of points in this news story. As you know, I never recommend that anyone take vitamins without consulting the family physician. But everyone can make sure their diet has enough vitamin C. The adult's normal vitamin C need is 60 milligrams per day. That is about the amount you get in 1/2 cup of orange juice, 1 orange or 1/2 cup broccoli, or in many vitamin C fortified foods. We all need vitamin C to promote healthy gums, capillaries and teeth, to better use the iron we take in, to maintain normal connective tissue and to aid in wound healing. There is evidence that it may be helpful in preventing cancer and making colds less severe.

Vitamin C mainly is found in citrus fruits, green vegetables, strawberries, tomatoes, cantaloupes, sweet peppers, potatoes, peas, beans and liver. Our local habit of cooking food too long, especially vegetables, too high temperature or in too much water can destroy some of the vitamin C. If you do take vitamin C supplements, remember there are dangers in taking too much of anything. There have been no serious reports of toxic symptoms with large doses of vitamin C. However, there are people who have nausea, diarrhea and gastric upset after taking between 2,000-5,000 milligrams per day.

Some people tell me they take the vitamin C all the time to avoid colds. I generally discourage that practice. One thing Dick's work and other researchers show is that vitamin C supplementation may work if taken after a person is around a person with cold virus, not all cold season. We also know that it's possible to cause a "conditioned deficiency" if you take high doses of any nutrient for a long time. That means that your body gets use to the higher dose and if you stop taking that high dose, at least for a time, your body might not react to normal dose.

Also, if you take more than 1,000 milligrams of vitamin C a day, make sure you tell your doctor if you're having some diagnostic work done. The test results could be affected.

The Apple Orchard Offers Some Inside Secrets

By BARBARA MCDERMOTT
International Apple Institute
I felt as though I was on a secret and important mission: Find out how the people who spend their lives growing apples serve up this favorite fruit when the day is done.

The quest is somewhat akin to walking through the home of a famous interior designer of being invited to dinner at Julia Child's house. I felt as though I was going to the source. After all, who should know better how to eat apples than those that know them best?

My recent search for excellent recipes focused on past and present leaders of the International Apple Institute, the trade association representing the U.S. apple industry.

It's not surprising that many of the apple growers, processors and shippers I spoke to do eat an apple a day, a habit which continues to be endorsed by doctors and nutritionists.

There was a wide range of ways apples were preferred: from main dish to dessert to beverage. Ben Lacy from Virginia offered the simplest recipe: Just pop the bottle on the sparkling cider he produces and dispense with cooking altogether!

Nearly everyone made a point of advising cooks to take the time to choose the right variety for the right purpose. Some apples are best for eating fresh out of the hand, others for baking, still others for sauce-making or salads.

In addition to sharing their favorite recipes, growers also told me that this is a vintage year for quality apples due to the generally good weather during the growing season throughout the country.

Straight from the orchard, here are several wonderful apple recipes.

"L.F." and Marge Garrett bring this favorite recipe of President Harry Truman's to neighborhood potluck dinners where they live in Marcos, Colorado.

OSARK PUDDING

- 1 egg
  - 3/4 cup sugar
  - 2 tablespoons flour
  - 1/8 teaspoon salt
  - 1 1/4 teaspoon baking powder
  - 1/2 to 1 cup chopped apples
  - 1/2 cup nuts
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla
- Beat egg and sugar well. Mix flour, salt and baking powder. Add to sugar mixture. Add chopped apples, nuts and vanilla.

Bake in buttered pie tin at 350 degrees fahrenheit for 35 minutes. (May fold top in every 10 minutes.)

APPLE CRISP

- 4 cups baking apples (about 6 medium)
- 3/4 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/2 cup rolled oats
- 3/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- 3/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/3 cup butter

Peel and slice apples. Put sliced apple in greased 8-inch square pan. Blend flour, oats, cinnamon, nutmeg and butter together until crumbly. Spread over apples. Bake 35 minutes at 350 degrees fahrenheit until topping is golden brown. Put a great big blob of ice-cream on top.

Some variations on the apple pie were offered by Alton Wendzel and his wife, Millie, who grow apples in Benton Harbor, Mich.

APPLE PIE WENZEL

- 6-7 Jonathan Apples
  - 1 cup sugar
  - 2 tablespoon all-purpose flour
  - 1 teaspoon cinnamon
  - Dash of nutmeg
  - Dash of salt
  - 1 tablespoon butter
  - Pastry for 2-crust pie
- Pare apples and slice thin. Combine sugar, flour, spices and salt; mix with apples. Fill pastry-lined 9-inch pie plate and dot with butter. Adjust top crust; sprinkle with sugar. Bake in 400 degree fahrenheit oven for 50 minutes or until juices bubble through the top.

Steve and Mary Putnam have been baking this pie for years using a blend of Cortland and Northern Spys when they lived in upstate New York, and changing to York and other apple varieties now that they live in Winchester, Va.

PUTNAM APPLE PIE

- Crust:
  - 3-1/2 cups all-purpose flour
  - 4 tablespoons sugar
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 1-1/2 cup margarine
  - 1/2 cup cold water
- Combine flour, sugar and salt. Cut in margarine. Add water. Toss until evenly moistened throughout. Divide and gather into two approximately equal balls. Transfer one ball to lightly floured board. Roll into circle for bottom crust and place in 9-inch pie plate. Repeat rolling process with second ball for top crust.

- Filling
  - 8 tart apples (blend 2-3 varieties)
  - 1/3 cup all-purpose flour
  - 1 cup sugar
  - 1 egg
  - 2 teaspoons vanilla
  - 1-1/3 cup sour cream
  - 1 tablespoon cinnamon
- Preheat oven to 450 degrees fahrenheit. Peel, core and slice apples. Combine with flour, sugar, egg, vanilla, sour cream and cinnamon. Mix well and spoon into lower crust. Cover with top crust. Bake 10 minutes, reduce oven temperature to 300 degrees fahrenheit and continue baking for about 40 minutes.

Bob and Debbie Lievens of Londenberry, N.H., shared this recipe which they often serve to dinner guests. Debbie admits it's a time consuming recipe, but says the rewards are great: "The finished product looks like an elegant dessert served at a fine restaurant."

RICH APPLE TORTE

- Butter or margarine, softened
- 1 to 1/2 cup blanched almonds

- 3 eggs
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 3-3/4 ounce package instant vanilla pudding and pie filling
- 2 cups milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 3 red apples (Baldwin, Rome, etc.)
- 1/3 cup red currant jelly
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice

Grease well 9" layer cake pan. Line with wax paper, then butter paper. Cream 1/2 cup margarine until light and fluffy; set aside. Grind almonds until fine; set aside. Beat eggs and sugar until foamy. Alternate adding creamed margarine and ground almonds to eggs and sugar, mixing well after each addition. Stir in flour until well mixed. Pour into pan and bake in preheated oven 30-35 minutes or until cake tests done. Cool on rack. Turn out on serving plate and remove paper; cool.

In mixing bowl, combine pudding mix, milk and vanilla. Beat until smooth then chill until thick enough to spread on cake. Refrigerate while preparing apples.

Core apples and cut in nine 1/2-inch slices. Melt 2 tablespoons margarine in large non-stick skillet. Add apples and saute on both sides until apples are golden and soft, but still retain their shape. Cool slightly. Spread custard over cake. Arrange apples, overlapping slices on top of custard.

Combine jelly and lemon juice in small saucepan, melt over low heat, stirring. Cool, then spoon over apple slices. Serve in wedges.

Serves 8-10.

Apples can add spice to many main dishes. This is a family recipe of Keurt and Ruth Eckert, Bellesville, Ill.

- 1 cup sour cream
- 1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped
- Garnish: sprigs of fresh dill or oil-packed sun-dried tomatoes
- 1 package (9 3/4 ounces) three cracker assortment

In a small saucepan, sprinkle gelatin over water; let stand 5 minutes to soften. Heat over low until gelatin is completely dissolved; set aside. In bowl mix mustard, paprika, pepper, garlic, dill, parsley and sour cream. Stir in gelatin and fold in whipped cream. Pour into an oiled 2 1/2 to 3-cup mold. Refrigerate for 4 hours or until firm. Unmold and garnish with dill or tomatoes. Serve as a spread on crackers.

DEVILED EGG CANAPES

- 1/3 cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon white vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon white pepper
- 20 slices party pumpernickle or party rye bread

2. Heat remaining oil in an oven-proof pan large enough to hold ribs in a single layer. Season ribs with salt and pepper; saute on both sides until browned, about 15 minutes total. Remove ribs from pan. Pour off grease. Add wine to pan, reduce over high heat, about 5 to 8 minutes. Turn off heat. Return ribs to pan. Spread parsley mixture on top of ribs and place in oven. Cook 30 to 40 minutes or until ribs are tender. Makes 6 servings.

MASHED LEEKS AND POTATOES

- 3 pounds potatoes
- 3 to 4 leeks
- 6 tablespoons butter
- 1/4 to 1/2 cup milk
- Salt and pepper to taste

1. Peel potatoes and cut into chunks. Place in pot with cold water. Cut off green part of leeks. Slice leeks in half and clean thoroughly. Chop leeks and add to potatoes. Bring to a boil, then simmer until tender, about 20 to 25 minutes.

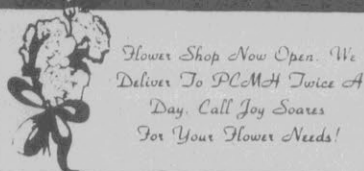

2. Drain and mash with hand masher. Add butter, milk and salt and pepper. Makes 6 servings.

CABBAGE WITH CREAM AND WALNUTS

- 1 medium head cabbage (about 2 1/2 pounds)
- 3 to 4 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 medium onion, cut in half and thinly sliced
- 4 to 6 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- Salt and pepper
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 3 tablespoons chopped walnuts

1. Remove tough outer leaves from cabbage and cut cabbage in half. Cut out tough stems, then slice into thin strips. Heat oil in saute pan and add cabbage and onion. Set cover ajar and cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, 20 to 30 minutes or until tender. Add vinegar, sugar, and salt and pepper to taste.

2. Meanwhile, reduce heavy cream until quite thick; it will look yellow when reduced. Be careful not to burn. To serve, drizzle cream over a portion of cabbage and top with nuts. Makes 6 servings.

Holiday Delicacies Can Be Prepared Ahead

By Minnie Bernardino
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Knowing the shelf-life of a dessert or dessert accompaniment can broaden a host's list of sweet selections for an appropriate ending to a holiday menu. Here are suggestions, some of which were shared by Susan Holtz, a dessert expert, that will inspire and assist a dessert cook.

Puff pastry shells, those crisp casings for fresh fruit or pastry cream, can be baked ahead and cooled. They may be left on the baking sheet for protection, covered with foil and stored in the freezer for up to one week. Remove from freezer two hours before filling and recrisp in 325-degree oven five minutes or until warm.

Pate a choux, or cream puff pastry for eclairs or cream puffs, can be stored in rigid airtight containers in the freezer up to five days. Do not store in the refrigerator because pastry absorbs odors and can become stale quickly.

Baked cream puffs freeze beautifully up to one month, tightly covered. When filled with ice cream and frozen (as in profiteroles), cream puffs should be made with milk instead of water, which freezes more solidly, making the puffs hard and dry.

Classic puff pastry dough can be wrapped in plastic and stored in the refrigerator up to three days. If freezing, overwrap plastic-wrapped dough with foil and freeze up to three months. Thaw in refrigerator 24 hours before rolling.

Butter cream, well covered to prevent odor absorption, can be stored in the refrigerator up to one week, in the freezer up to one month. Allow to stand at room temperature one hour after removing from freezer or refrigerator, then beat until smooth.

Whipping cream will be more stable if beaten slowly and not over-whipped. Sugar (granulated or extra fine) and vanilla may be added before whipping. To stabilize one cup cream with gelatin, soften 1/2 teaspoon gelatin in 1 tablespoon cold water, then melt over low heat. Whip cream to soft peaks, then fold 1/4 cup cream into gelatin mixture. Return to whipped cream, folding gently just to blend.

Royal icing will keep three to four weeks in the refrigerator and can be beaten before used. To keep it from hardening, cover with plastic wrap and place damp towel over the top.

Store baklava or other sweet, sticky filo pastries at room temperature, uncovered, up to eight hours. To refresh, bake for 10 minutes at 400 degrees.

Baked sweet- or short-crust pastry shells can be stored in plastic bags in refrigerator up to two days or frozen up to one month.

Unbaked pastry dough can be shaped into a disc, placed in freezer plastic bag. Defrost at room temperature or refrigerator until softened but still very cold for easier rolling.

Pavlovas, dacquoise or other meringue sheets or circles may be stored in airtight metal containers at room temperature up to one week (This may not work in humid areas). In humid or rainy weather, dry them in 225-degree oven 20 to 30 minutes longer and use immediately.

Butter cream-filled and frosted meringue tortes freeze well up to three days but taste best at room temperature.

If assembling genoise-based dessert the next day, leave genoise on rack to air-dry at room temperature. A drier cake will absorb liqueur or flavored syrup better. If prepared two to three days in advance, wrap in plastic wrap and store at room temperature. If freezing, wrap in plastic and foil and keep no more than 10 days.

To preserve fresh-baked ladyfingers, freeze in plastic container with wax paper between layers up to 10 days. Refrigeration hastens drying and staling. Because they thaw quickly, ladyfingers may be used frozen in cold desserts.

Prepare cake decorations ahead to keep on hand for unexpected times for show-off desserts. Royal icing flowers may be stored in metal containers at room temperature up to one month. White or dark chocolate shapes or molds can be stored in covered plastic container in refrigerator or freezer.

Marzipan roses, flowers or other molds may be rolled and shaped up to two days in advance and stored at room temperature (Unless cornstarch is used instead of powdered sugar, which attracts moisture, refrigeration will cause sweating on the marzipan's surface). Marzipan dough, however, may be formed into a log, wrapped in plastic and foil and refrigerated up to two months.

Spongecake, chiffon and angel food cake will keep at room temperature up to two days, wrapped in plastic wrap. Otherwise, freeze up to two months, wrapped in plastic and foil. Frosted cakes can be frozen up to one month.

Keep fruit purees on hand in the freezer; they make easy but tasty sauces for plain cake slices.

Jellyroll can be filled with jam and moistened with liqueur, rolled and left at room temperature overnight. If not, freeze up to one week.

Crème brûlée can be partially made ahead. The custard can be refrigerated up to two days; just before serving cover with sugar and blowtorch to a rich dark brown.

Steamed plum puddings may be refrigerated in the mold up to two days then reheated in boiling water until warm. Puddings or fruitcakes wrapped in brandy-soaked cheesecloth may be refrigerated several months. Brandy or other alcohol may be re-sprinkled every month.

Choose a chocolate glaze made with cocoa powder as it does not lose its gloss when refrigerated. This can be reheated over very low heat. Ganache or glaze made with chocolate and whipping cream may be stored for three days but will thicken. Reheating in double boiler will make it thinner. Add a little butter for a shinier, darker glaze.

Chocolate-glazed chocolate cake may be held at room temperature uncovered overnight or refrigerated up to two days.

Lemon curd made with egg yolks, lemon juice and butter will keep up to 10 days, covered, in refrigerator.

Caramel sauce may be prepared several days in advance, chilled and reheated.

Crème anglaise (English custard) will keep two to three days in refrigerator. Pastry cream (custard thickened with flour or cornstarch) will keep for three to four days in refrigerator; cover top with film wrap and do not freeze.

Poached pears or other fruit will keep in refrigerator up to three days; use slightly underripe ones. Poaching syrups made with liqueurs keep indefinitely. Streusel topping can be made up to one week in advance; it will keep one month in freezer.

Bavarian souffles made with gelatin will keep up to two days in the refrigerator.

Lighter fruit and chocolate mousses will keep overnight in the refrigerator. Heavier, richer mousse keeps longer; store well-covered in the refrigerator for up to three days.
