Trade Deficit Zooms, Markets Plunge

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. foreign trade deficit soared to a record $17.6 billion in October, a giant 25.3 percent above the September imbalance, the government said today in a report that sent immediate shock waves through edgy financial markets.
The Commerce Department report, which showed the October deficit was $3.56 billion higher than the $14.1 billion September deficit, pushed the dollar down to record lows in frantic trading on foreign currency exchanges and triggered a 27.85 point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average after 90 minutes of trading.

Most economists had been forecasting an October deficit of around $14.6 billion, not the record figure that did occur.
"You are sitting there looking for one thing and here comes a hurricane that almost takes your head off," said Jay Goldinger, an economist with Cantor, Fitzgerald, a Los Angeles bond house. "Everyone is shaken because the numbers are so dramatically different than had been expected."

Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers, called the report "startlingly bad" and predicted a sharp negative impact on financial markets "with the implication that it could raise interest rates" by forcing down the value of the dollar.

Jasinowski said that he doubted that intervention by central banks such as the Federal Reserve or the Bank of Japan could do much to stop a new dollar plunge. "I don't think the central banks can move against figures this large," he said.
The Reagan administration tried to play down the significance of the October figure, but Commerce Secretary C. William Verity conceded that the record deficit was clearly "disappointing."

"There are a number of forces at work in trade matters — many of which have been in the making for a long time and cannot be reversed quickly," he said in a statement.
On Capitol Hill, House Speaker Jim Wright used the new numbers to renew his call for a Democratic trade bill, saying it would be the top priority of the House when lawmakers return to work in January.

"For years, we've listened to the Reagan administration tell us not to worry about a few 'sunset industries,'" Wright said. "But the worsening trade figures and the declining dollar raise the specter of something even more troubling — a sunset economy for America. That is something to which we must not surrender."

City's Population Could Top 50,000 During 1989

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer
New population figures show Greenville's citizenry is rapidly approaching the 50,000 mark, a milestone City Manager Greg Knowles calls "the magic figure."

According to July 1986 estimates released recently by the N.C. Office of Budget and Management, Greenville ranked 12th in population among North Carolina cities, with 41,912 citizens. The figures are based on a study by the budget office and the U.S. Bureau of the Census.
However, 1987 population figures compiled by that office show Greenville with a population of 42,021, according to Bobby Roberson, Greenville's director of planning and development. Roberson said approximately 2,000 more residents have been added through annexation since that figure was released.

Knowles said the majority of the city's growth has come through annexation, but added that there has been significant growth within the city even without annexation.

He said proposed annexations, including the controversial addition of the Brook Valley area, could add 1,700 more citizens to Greenville's population.

"We're looking at 49,500 by the summer of '89," Knowles said.

"The magic figure is 50,000," he said. "When you have 50,000, federal money comes directly to you instead of going through the state or the county."

Knowles said an example of this funding is block grants, which Greenville presently must compete for. When the population reaches the magic number, Knowles said, Greenville will become an entitlement city and receive the funding automatically.

Roberson said the newest population figures and projections show Greenville is no longer a rural economic community.

"With a 50,000 figure, it does place us into the realm of being one of the largest cities in North Carolina. Commerce and industries outside of North Carolina have a tendency to look at those cities," he said.

Roberson said there are three keys to positive growth in the future: the continuing growth of the medical district, cooperation between the city and county, and updating the city's comprehensive plan, especially south of Greenville.

"The other thing we've done," he said, "is ask the commissioners from each of the planning commissions to explore the possibility of a joint planning effort."

Janice Faulkner, director of the Regional Development Institute, a public service economic development institute associated with East Carolina University, said those population changes bring with them both benefits and problems.

"The increase in population will stimulate the economy by developing new markets for retail sales and service industries and creating new de-

Summit On Edge As End Nears

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev met with Vice President George Bush at the Soviet Embassy today near the end of a three-day White House summit that has produced progress — but no breakthroughs — on sticky superpower issues.

Gorbachev was heading for the White House and his final scheduled discussions with President Reagan after meeting with Bush and then having breakfast with the vice president and other American guests.

Bush spent more than 20 minutes alone with the Soviet Communist Party general secretary. Bush declined to say whether he thought any agreements were possible by the end of the summit, beyond the treaty signed Tuesday banning intermediate-range missiles.

"You can't predict until we get to the meetings this morning," he said. "I'm trying to keep expectations under control."

Gorbachev, asked whether he would end the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan, said, "I think it's possible, but you need two people." A Soviet aide broke in to say, "It takes two to tango."

Arms control and Afghanistan are high on the agenda for the three-day summit.

As Reagan and his Soviet counterpart resumed personal diplomacy, they awaited word from aides on whether there was sufficient progress toward a second arms control agreement to anticipate a 1988 Moscow summit in the closing months of Reagan's presidency.

"We see a little progress here and there, but they are tough issues," said Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who is flying to Brussels tonight to brief NATO allies.

Bush's presence at the embassy and his decision to invite prominent residents of Iowa and New Hampshire to the breakfast produced cries of foul from some of his rivals for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination, who said he was using the summit to further his political ambitions.

An aide to Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said it was "blatantly political" for Bush to invite his New Hampshire campaign chairman and two Iowans to sit down with Gorbachev. Both states provide critical, early tests in the presidential battle.

Bush is the only GOP contender to endorse the arms control treaty that Reagan and Gorbachev signed on

Bomb Injures Three In Athens Building

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — An bomb exploded in the Athens Chamber of Commerce building in downtown Athens today. Police said it injured three people, one seriously, and damaged a conference room.

Early police radio reports said there were "fears that there are dead and injured." Later, police said no one was killed and that three people were injured by glass shards.

Police said the bomb went off under a chair on the 6th-floor conference hall where about 20 people were having lunch.

Tuesday. He has said he looks forward to further accords on conventional arms, chemical weapons and reducing the long-range nuclear missiles stockpiled by the superpowers.

Those weapons were the subject of behind-the-scenes talks between the Soviet and American arms experts. Secretary of State George Shultz said today there is "general agreement" for the two leaders to meet in Moscow next year, but only if there are assurances that "something im-

The explosion blew out the windows and damaged most of the furniture in the room. As smoke cleared from the area, police entered the building to search for victims.

"Obviously the explosion was politically motivated since we are having elections for new members in the Chamber of Commerce," Dionysios Sotiropoulos, vice president of the Athens Chamber of Commerce, said in an interview.

No one claimed responsibility for the explosion, police said.

Study Under Way Of Highways 11-13

About 21 industrial developers and regional mayors attended a meeting in Greenville Wednesday to discuss the feasibility of changing N.C. 11 and U.S. 13 to four-lane highways from the Virginia state line to I-40 in Magnolia.

Also attending the meeting were Randy Doub and Philip Godwin, members of the state Department of Transportation Board representing Districts 2 and 1, respectively.

Expanding the highways would "give us access to the Wilmington ports and other destinations south," Barbara Woods, manager of the Public and Governmental Affairs Division of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said this morning in a telephone interview. The chamber sponsored the meeting held at the Sheraton.

During the meeting, a study committee was formed with a representative of each of the six counties that would be affected by the expansion — O.A. Ritch of Lenoir, David Cannon of Martin, woody Brinson of Duplin, Charles Pierce of Hertford, Edward McDuffie of Gates and Phil Dixon of Pitt.

"They will go back to their respective counties to formulate information on their respective counties" and will discuss the data at a later meeting, Ms. Woods said. Compiled information from each county will include population, industry, traffic count, educational institutions and medical facilities.

Heroin Possession

George Davis Jr., 37, of 912 Douglas Ave. was arrested early today on a heroin possession charge. Officer S.D. Hilliard said Davis was charged with possession with intent to sell and distribute heroin in connection with a 1:06 a.m. incident at the intersection of Fifth Street and Albemarle Avenue.

Robbery Attempted

A man made an unsuccessful attempt to rob Bailey's Store on Dickinson Avenue Wednesday night, Greenville police said.

Officer B.W. Lewis said the man, wearing a monkey mask and camouflaged suit and armed with pistol, demanded money from the clerk but ran from the store without the cash in the 8:48 p.m. incident.

Sale Planned

Boy Scout Troop 340 will sell luminaries Saturday at four locations to benefit the troop's Scouting program at St. James Methodist Church and to prepare emergency food boxes for needy families in Pitt County.

The troop will sell luminaries from 9 a.m. to noon at First Federal and University Church of Christ, both on Greenville Boulevard, and at the Cherry Oaks clubhouse shelter and 405 Oxford Road, both from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Group To Meet

The Pitt County Council on Aging will meet Tuesday at the Pitt County Senior Center, 1717 W. Fifth St. to elect directors for 1987-88. The meeting will be followed by a cover dish luncheon hosted by the Pitt County Senior Club.

Theft Arrests Made

Greenville police arrested three men on theft charges over the past week, investigators reported Wednesday.

Detective J.E. Nichols said Bruce Wayne Tetterton, 17, of 401A Azalea Gardens was arrested about 9 a.m. Wednesday on charges of larceny by an employee and false pretenses in connection with a theft at Rose's at The Plaza which was reported Tuesday.

Detective D.R. Best said John David Carpenter, 21, of 204 Ash St., Apartment 7, was arrested Dec. 2 on two counts of breaking, entering and larceny.

Best said the charges stemmed from break-ins reported on Nov. 30 — one at 206 Ash St., Apartment 7, where food and cleaning items were taken, the other at 204 Ash St., Apartment 5, where textbooks valued at $248 were taken.

Best said Milton Dwayne Haddock, 20, of E9 Highland Trailer Park was arrested Monday on two counts of breaking, entering and larceny.

One of the charges against Haddock, Best said, stemmed from an Oct. 21 break-in at 1402 E. Greenville Blvd., where jewelry, a camera and a video cassette recorder valued at $1,289 were stolen. The other charge resulted from the theft of a radio from a vehicle parked at Sam Stewart's Body Shop at 3012 S. Memorial Drive on Nov. 2, according to Best.

Dwellings Damaged

Greenville Fire-Rescue Department officers said fires caused heavy damage to a house at 419 W. Roundtree Drive early Wednesday night and to a mobile home in Hillcrest Trailer Park on Brownlea Drive this morning.

Chief Jenness Allen said the fire on Roundtree Drive, reported at 6:12 p.m., heavily damaged "a third of the house" and caused smoke damage to the remainder of the dwelling.

The fire, which started in the attic, was blamed on an electrical short-circuit.

Allen said the house trailer at Hillcrest Trailer Park was "a total loss" following the fire reported about 5:30 a.m.

The chief said an occupant of the mobile, John Watts, awakened to find fire in the dwelling and attempted to put out the blaze before calling the fire department.

Allen said the man was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of burns to his right hand and forearm and for possible smoke inhalation.

Judge Candidate

Greenville attorney David A. Leech has announced that he intends to file as a candidate for the office of District Court judge for the Third Judicial District comprised of Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico counties.

Leech is a member of the law firm of Underwood and Leech.

Papers On Display

A selection of documents and illustrations regarding North Carolina's role in the ratification of the U.S. Constitution is on display in East Carolina University's Joyner Library through Wednesday.

The exhibited items are arranged chronologically on eight panels, and signify the progress of Constitutional ratification in the state, beginning with the General Assembly bill of 1778 endorsing the Articles of Confederation and the 1781 legislative bill appointing delegates to the federal convention in Philadelphia in 1787.

Also represented in the display are the state's two Constitutional conventions, the first in Hillsborough in 1788 which voted not to ratify without a declaration of rights, and the second in Fayetteville in 1789 which voted for ratification.

The final panel displays a 1790 letter to Gov. Samuel Johnston from President George Washington congratulating North Carolina on its ratification.

The exhibition was mounted by the N.C. Division of Archives and History and is on a tour of various cities in the state. Sponsors are the Friends of the Archives Inc. and the N.C. Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

Workshop Planned

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's Environmental-Utilities Technical Advisory Committee and the Pitt County Emergency Response Planning Committee will co-sponsor a workshop on Title III, which requires industry, federal, state and local officials to establish emergency planning and community right-to-know reporting of hazardous and toxic chemicals.

Pierce Scholarship

The family of the late author Ovid Williams Pierce has announced that it will establish a memorial fund at East Carolina University to provide a scholarship named for Pierce in the English department.

Pierce, who died Wednesday at the age of 77, taught creative writing at ECU for 20 years prior to his retirement in 1976. He was a native of Weldon and had taught at Southern Methodist University and Tulane University before coming to ECU as a professor of English and as writer-in-residence in 1956.

Pierce was awarded the O. Max Gardner award for his contributions to humanity through literature in 1974. He was also a recipient of the North Carolina Award.

His best known novels include "The Plantation", "On a Lonesome Porch", "The Devil's Half", "The Wedding Guest" and "Old Man's Gold and Other Stories".

Pierce's family requested that contributions to the Ovid W. Pierce Memorial Fund be made through the ECU Foundation Inc., c/o Taylor-Slaughter Alumni Center, East Carolina University, Greenville, 27858.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Give It Time

The religion policy adopted by the Pitt County Board of Education should be given an opportunity to work before it is criticized by the community.

The policy was needed to protect the rights of students in an increasingly diverse society. The approach the board selected is reasonable and appears to be legally sound. It was the board's duty to devise guidelines helping educators plan Christmas activities. In addition, the board had a responsibility to ensure the constitutional right of freedom of religion for students of all faiths.

Implementing the policy before conflicts arose was a timely move. But no sooner had the policy been adopted than criticism of the measure surfaced. It is easy to see how Christians might react critically to the policy. After all, Christmas celebrates the birth of Christ, an event many consider the centerpiece of Christianity. But the policy is not designed to threaten or diminish in any way the significance of Christian doctrine or Christmas itself.

Instead, it safeguards the beliefs of Christians, just as it protects the rights of those of other faiths from being trampled. The policy does not ban Christmas in the schools, it simply requires that similar celebrations in other faiths be given fair billing. In this respect, it is a valuable tool to educate children about the richness of differing beliefs.

The Board of Education has an obligation to set policies reflecting fairness and tolerance. As Greenville and Pitt County continue to grow more heterogenous, this responsibility assumes more and more significance. The school system must respond to this diversity by encouraging understanding between those with varied beliefs, and the religion policy effectively accomplishes this goal. It is this type of open-mindedness and appreciation of differences that is most conducive to successfully blending traditional and divergent creeds while protecting the intricacies of each belief.

The community would be wise to wait until the policy has had time to work before assessing impact. Its effect on religion in the schools has not had time to be gauged.

It is certain, however, that those Christmas celebrations which stay within the confines of constitutional protection of individual rights will be acceptable under the policy and should continue in the schools.

Example Needed

It's almost a ritual. Rather than projecting an aura of teamwork in resolving points of disagreement at a conference table, there are always a few voices raised on the eve of a critical meeting that apparently try to exacerbate the wounds.

The most recent example includes a shrill judgment by Nicaragua's President Daniel Ortega that a "peace proposal" by the Contras appears to him "a document prepared by the most right-wing sector of the Reagan administration intended to kill chances for agreement on a cease-fire."

Even so, he said his government would work to achieve a cease-fire, the key element of a regional peace plan signed Aug. 7 by leaders of Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala, Costa Rica and Honduras.

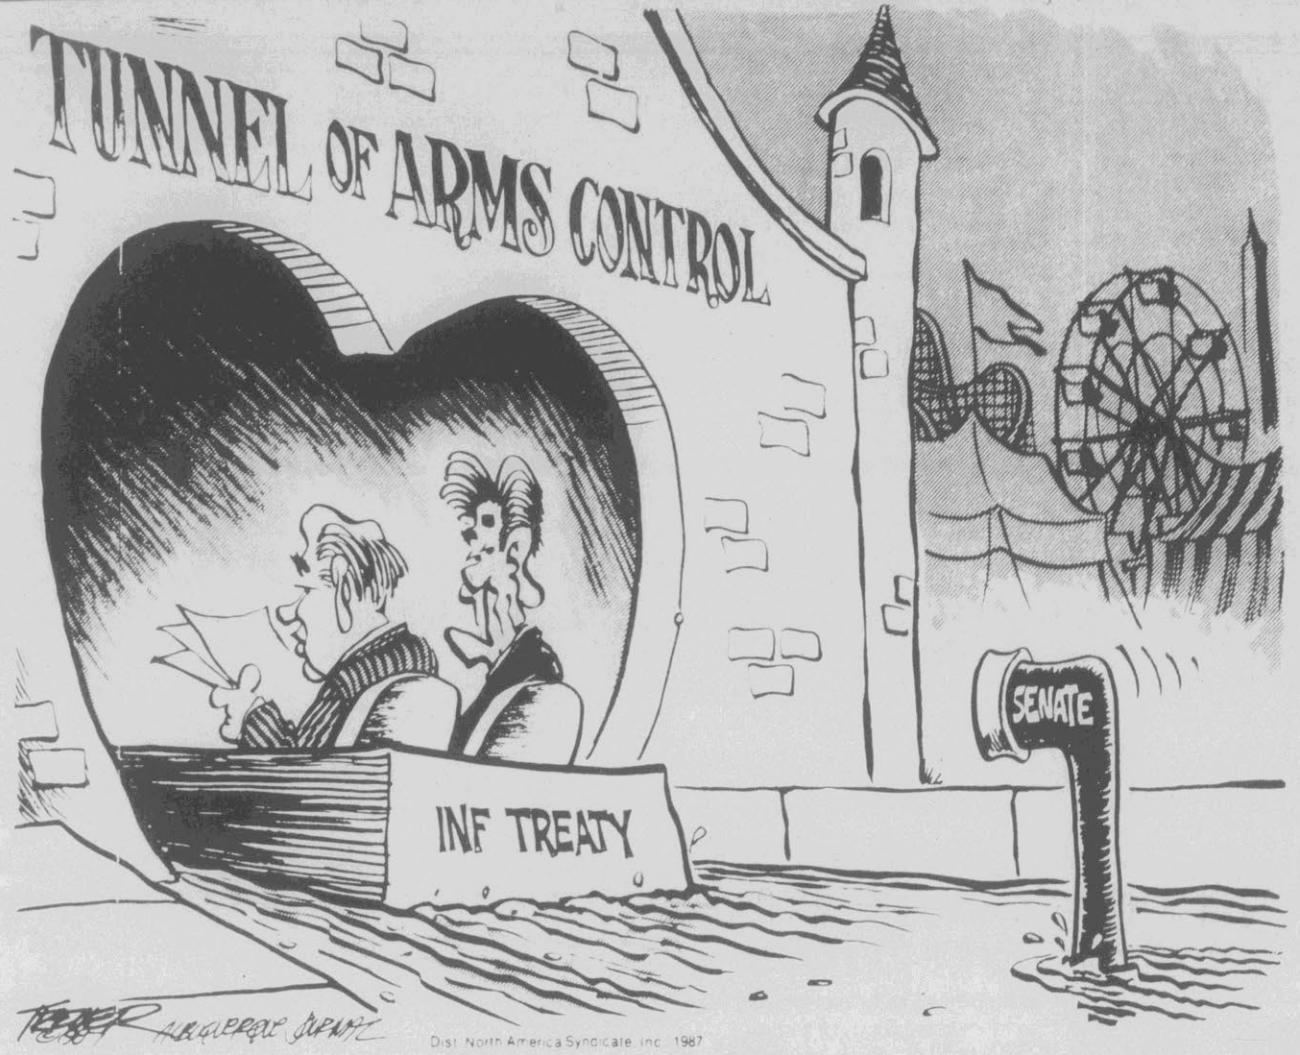

Contra leaders responded with their own inflammatory statement to the effect that Ortega's proposals were tantamount to surrender. It does not create the kind of atmosphere for a meeting of minds.

Both sides have goals extending beyond the immediate cease-fire. The Contras are demanding the Sandinastas army be disarmed and a new, smaller national force incorporating the rebels be created. They also want the government to lift the state of emergency as well as keep its troops in the 45 percent of Nicaragua they claim to control.

Ortega wants the Contras restricted to three demilitarized zones much smaller than the Contras now claim. As for the state of emergency — which curtails civil rights — he says it was imposed because the Contras made it necessary. And so it goes.

Eventually, the two sides may get around to the heart of the regional peace plan which broadly includes cease-fires, amnesties, democratic reforms, a halt to foreign aid for insurgements, and an end to use of any country's territory to attack another nation. On the face of it, the basic program does not call for too much, but enough.

Some of the other feuding neighbors may show prompt progress than the Nicaraguan factions, and that would be welcome if only to prove reasonable adversaries can achieve a reasonable deal. A good example would be timely.

The Threat Lurking In The Weeds

'Some arms-control strategists already are worrying about what may be lurking in the weeds, waiting to take the place of the monster missiles. What they see is the cruise missile ...'

The cynical view of arms-control negotiations is that they are more trouble than they are worth. No sooner might the superpowers get a handle on one kind of weapon than something even worse will be flung out of a national laboratory.

Americans and Soviets are smiling through an extraordinary summit thaw in Washington, thinking ahead to a day next spring when, if nothing goes wrong, they can both pound half their intercontinental missiles into scrap.

But some arms-control strategists already are worrying about what may be lurking in the weeds, waiting to take the place of the monster missiles. What they see is the cruise missile, a pilotless airplane with stubby wings that lopez along at speeds no faster than the average airliner. Some analysts think that, compared with the intercontinental missiles, the cruise variety — even those that carry nuclear warheads — is almost benign. It is so accurate that it could destroy many targets with conventional explosives.

Because it is slow, advocates contend that it would give plenty of warning that it was coming. A cruise missile could take hours to cross the Atlantic and reach the Soviet Union after it was launched from an airplane, a submarine or a surface ship. That would allow more time for leaders in a targeted country to decide how to respond than the 10 minutes that they would have once an intercontinental missile was launched.

To understand what makes cruise missiles seem less malevolent than rocket missiles in the context of the nuclear age, start with a wild-eyed Italian prophet of air power, Brig. Gen. Giulio Douhet. Between World War I and World War II, he wrote that armies were, as we might now say, impotent and obsolete because airplanes carrying bombs, incendiary material and poison gas could wipe out an adversary's forces and cities and that war would become something that you fought between breakfast and lunch.

Early American air commanders naturally were devoted to Douhet and his theoretical support for long-range bombers. World War II, with its big air losses over Europe and the failure of air power to shut down Germany completely, took the luster out of Douhet's theory. Nuclear weapons put it back.

Thus, for much of the 40 years since nuclear weapons first appeared, Douhet's prophecy guided nuclear strategy. Going first in a nuclear exchange could mean winning if the job were thorough enough — that is, if in a first strike one nation could destroy enough of the other's weapons to make retaliation impossible. It is the ghost of Douhet — getting there first — that has driven the nuclear arms race, with every move designed to make it impossible for the other to hope for a crippling first strike.

In that, both have succeeded — so far. Few, if any, nuclear specialists any longer argue that either nation is capable of a disarming strike. But in the process both nations have put into place, or are putting into place, weapons with no other mission than to strike first. For the Soviets it was the fleet of SS-18s capable of launching 3,080 warheads, enough to destroy all of America's land-based missiles. The MX was to be America's answer to the SS-18; not enough were built to handle the mission by themselves, but new missiles for the Navy's Trident submarines will be accurate enough to do any job that the MX could do.

If there is no hitch, negotiations between now and next spring would give the highest priority to pounding these first-strike weapons into scrap under the next nuclear treaty. At Reykjavik, President Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev talked of getting rid of all nuclear weapons, but leaving a few hundred would still make the nuclear world more stable.

Enter the cruise missile. As bigger missiles are scrapped, it would inherit a role as the best offensive weapon. It may be too good. It is slow, but satellites cannot detect its launch as they can rockets. As one specialist put it recently, "If you don't know it's been launched and you don't know it's coming, it doesn't matter how long it takes to get there." Knowing that it's coming is another problem. Most early-warning radars are pointed in the direction of known fields of missile silos. Cruise missiles are maneuverable; they could simply detour around the radars. Finally, the cruise missile is so accurate that it would have a better shot at crippling a field of SS-18s than any other U.S. weapon.

Cynicism And Impatience Threaten Peace

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Four months after the birth of the Central American peace accord, none of the predictions made by those interested in minimizing its importance have come to life. In fact, the efforts to project a pessimistic and negative image only wound up strengthening the efforts to defend the viability of the plan and to push for its consolidation.

The meeting of the five Central American presidents in Guatemala in August got off to a spectacular start, but the actual signing of the treaty after only two days came as a surprise to almost everyone. The momentum was maintained as Nicaragua proceeded to unilaterally implement various aspects of the accord at a pace that few had expected.

Costa Rica's President Oscar Arias Sanchez, the accord's key architect, moved into the forefront as a mediator: between El Salvador's Farabundo Marti Liberation Front and the Duarte government, to reestablish a direct dialogue between the two parties; with the government of Nicaragua, to facilitate the reopening of the opposition newspaper La Prensa, and in cease-fire talks among Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, the Contras and the government. In Madrid, representatives from the Guatemalan government and the guerrilla insurgency held official talks for the first time in 20 years. Several meetings of foreign ministers from Central and Latin America were held, according to the schedule approved at the August summit meeting, with positive and concrete results. And, of course, Oscar Arias was awarded this year's Nobel Peace Prize.

To be sure, not all was triumph and glory. In a sense, the initial burst of enthusiasm overshadowed several negative developments. Conservative and oligarchic forces in the region had sensed early on that the accord could turn into an instrument that would threaten their interests.

This position was shared by parties outside the region that believe in the viability of old-style U.S. hegemony in Central America. As the peace plan moved from drawing board to reality, it became clear that a counteroffensive couldn't be postponed; the agreement was rapidly taking away initiative and maneuvering room from the right in Central America.

Perhaps the most dramatic sign of this counteroffensive has been the cruel resurrection of the death squads in El Salvador. The Oct. 26 assassination of the president of the Salvadoran Human Rights Commission, Herbert Anaya, was a warning of just how far the region's de facto powers are willing to go. Today the range of maneuvers that can be used to sabotage the peace process is extremely broad.

The far right's reaction has been made clear. But there are other, less extreme, sectors in the region opposed to challenges to the status quo and uninterested in adjusting to new models. Their best defense? To project a narrow and legalistic interpretation of the accords and a skeptical view regarding the possibilities for successful compliance.

To evaluate the initial steps taken in the region toward fulfilling the treaty's requirements implies lining up behind one or another interpretation of the accord. Those who interpret it as a historic opportunity for the Central American people know that new and often unforeseen possibilities and problems will be encountered on the long road to peace. While the hour of judgment has not yet arrived, a few worrisome trends can be detected. Amnesty, dialogue and cease-fires are more than a matter of government decree. In order to contribute to the building of peace, as opposed to merely fulfilling a treaty commitment, each of these points demands the opening of new political spaces, the creation of new bodies and mechanisms for participation by the population and its representatives, the abandoning of old schemes and positions and, above all — indeed, as a prerequisite to all — guarantees for the physical integrity of the individuals who choose to take part.

In this sense no one can deny that the first warning cries have been sounded: Hundreds of Salvadoran political prisoners have expressed reluctance to leave their jail cells for fear of persecution on the outside; for similar reasons, Guatemalan refugees in Mexico and Salvadoran refugees in Honduras have refused to return to their homelands; death threats against many opposition leaders in El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala have increased.

In spite of these alarms, the peace process continues to move forward. While Nicaragua clearly needs to yield more ground — and all signs indicate that it is so disposed — it is impossible to ignore the broad measures already adopted regarding amnesty, press freedom, dialogue, national reconciliation and a comprehensive cease-fire proposal. These demonstrate Managua's intention to go beyond formal compliance and to use the accord reached in Guatemala City as a means to put an end to military conflicts in Central America.

Certainly achieving peace will be difficult, but it is a task that must not be sabotaged by premature criticism and unwarranted pessimism.

Strength For Today

"Why should I go to church?" some people ask.

"Is it not possible for me to worship God anywhere I happen to be? Some of the best people I know never go to church at all, and some of the worst people I know are waiting every Sunday morning for the doors of the church to open."

The simplest answer to these questions is that we go to church chiefly to honor God. A day is set aside for that purpose. Some people use that day for work, play or protracted rest. But the Sabbath is given us as a day on which we appear at a certain hallowed place to honor the God who made us.

We can honor God anywhere we happen to be, but if we do not have enough interest in the church to worship him there, the chances are we will not worship Him on the beach or on the golf course.

COUNTERFEIT EQUIPMENT — C.R. Powers of the Division of Motor Vehicles shows off equipment used to make counterfeit licenses. The equipment was seized when two N.C. State University students were charged with counterfeiting driver's licenses and selling them to other students. (AP Laserphoto)

Students Charged In License Scam

RALEIGH (AP) — Two N.C. State University students have been charged with counterfeiting North Carolina drivers' licenses and selling them to classmates who would use the cards to buy alcohol, authorities said.

Roger Blackstone Alley III, 18, and Joseph Raymond Gaydeski, 18, both of Raleigh, were arrested Tuesday night at their apartment, a Department of Motor Vehicles official said. Each was charged with two counts of counterfeiting and selling drivers' licenses, a felony charge that carries a maximum three-year sentence.

Alley and Gaydeski are registered as full-time students in NCSU's engineering school.

"We feel like we got it in the early stages," said T.R. Powers, administrative assistant with the DMV enforcement section. He estimated that fewer than 50 of the fraudulent licenses were in circulation. Nineteen were seized in the search of the students' apartment.

Powers said the fraudulent licenses were "fair replicas" of state licenses. They carry the state seal across the picture. License information as well as the vehicle classification and restriction code are on the back of the cards.

A search warrant was obtained for the apartment after two DMV agents bought the counterfeit licenses. The investigation was a joint effort by DMV and the Raleigh police.

Materials used to manufacture licenses — including a 3½-by-3-foot cardboard replica of a license that a person would stand behind to have his photo taken, a camera, 109 laminating cases to enclose the license and an iron to seal the cases — were seized in the search. Powers said the fake licenses were being sold for about $25 to $40.

State Office Drops No-Smoking Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — The administration of Republican Gov. Jim Martin has snuffed out a plan to make the state Division of Health Services the first North Carolina agency to ban smoking in work areas.

Don Cummings, personnel director for the N.C. Department of Human Resources, said Wednesday he would not act on the proposed ban. "It's a dead issue with me at this time," Cummings said.

There is no state policy on smoking, he said, and it would be improper for an individual agency to adopt one.

Cummings' move officially extinguished the precedent-setting proposal that began going up in smoke Tuesday.

Dr. Thad B. Wester, the deputy state health director, had said the ban had been approved by the state health director and would go into effect early next year. But, after two top Martin aides expressed concern, Wester said the proposal was a draft that needed Cummings' approval. He said he had been unaware that it required approval by personnel officials.

On Wednesday, Wester was still optimistic.

"Certainly, my hopes are that it would be approved," Webster told the News and Observer of Raleigh. He declined to comment further.

Administration officials said the plan would languish in the Department of Human Resources, the parent agency of the health services division.

Phil Kirk, Martin's chief of staff, acknowledged that the ban's effect on Martin's re-election bid next year had been considered. He said that the State Employees Association of North Carolina this year rejected recommendations for any smoking restrictions in state agencies.

"I'm glad that it apparently is a bad idea whose time has not yet come," Kirk said. "We've gotten along for over 200 years without a ban on smoking, and I would like to see common sense prevail, rather than a potentially controversial and divisive policy be established."

Kirk and Human Resources Secretary David Flaherty conferred about the plan this week. Neither liked the idea of banning use of a product that is North Carolina's top agricultural crop.

Kirk and Flaherty discussed the matter with Cummings Wednesday.

Legislators Back Aid For Red Tide

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative panel has recommended using state emergency funds to aid commercial fishermen and businesses hurt by the toxic red tide that has infested North Carolina's coastal waters since late October.

The panel passed a resolution urging the N.C. Council of State to offer affected coastal residents loans from a $1 million contingency and emergency fund.

"We're looking for some immediate financial help now — and we want it right this minute," Sen. Franklin L. Block, D-New Hanover, said Wednesday at a meeting of the Coastal Water Quality Legislative Study Committee.

Committee members also urged North Carolina congressmen to continue efforts to gain federal aid for red tide victims, whose losses are expected to exceed $3 million.

The Council of State, which includes the state's top elected officials, is not scheduled to meet until Jan. 5, officials said, but Gov. Jim Martin could call a special meeting to consider the request.

"We will apprise the governor of this," said Karen Rotterman, director of communications for Martin. "I'm sure that when this resolution comes in, obviously they'll take a good look at it."

Meanwhile, fisheries officials said the algae causing the poisonous tide had shown no signs of abating, with concentrations increasing in some areas.

"If the red tide continues through December — and we believe now that it will — the loss to commercial fishermen will total $1.7 million for oysters and clams, $500,000 to $1 million for scallops, and $1 million for finfish," William T. Hogarth, director of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries told the committee. "Some of them are going broke, losing their boats and their fishing tackle."

The outbreak has prompted the state to close more than 300,000 acres of shellfishing waters along a 175-mile stretch of coastline between Carolina Beach and Avon. The algae, Ptychodiscus brevis, produces poisons that concentrate in shellfish, making them dangerous to eat.

Recent tests show that clams and oysters taken from affected waters remain unsafe, officials said, and the state is unlikely to reopen any of the closed waters soon.

"We hope to open it back up in January, and get things back to normal," Hogarth said. "Right now, there is nothing good to report — except that you can eat finfish from anywhere in the state as well as oysters and clams from non-affected areas."

Red tides never had been observed in North Carolina before this year, but they are fairly common along the Gulf Coast between Florida and Texas.

Benefactor Gives School White Pines

RALEIGH (AP) — A private school in Franklin County may not have such a blue Christmas after all, thanks to a benefactor who is offering free Christmas trees to replace a scrawny batch the school had hoped to sell.

Board members of the Tri-County Academy in Louisburg had expected to dig into their own pockets to come up with $3,000 by Dec. 18 to cover teacher salaries that had been invested in the venture.

But a Winston-Salem woman said she would donate as many white pines as school officials thought they could sell.

"I was planning to clear them off my property," Becky Cole said Wednesday.

"It makes me angry," she said of the school's problems with 375 white spruce trees purchased from a New York company.

The white spruces are thin and, in some cases, missing branches, said Ted Jeans, secretary of the school's board of directors. The school, which has 42 students and six teachers, had hoped to use proceeds from the sales to finance school improvements.

But even at cut-rate prices of $10 to $15 each, the school has sold only a few trees to dedicated parents of students.

Jeans said school officials hoped to have a truck lined up today to pick up Mrs. Cole's trees so they could be sold this weekend.

"It feels really good. She said we could come and get all we wanted," said school secretary Connie Pendergraft. The new trees probably would be sold for about $25 each, she said.

The school has gotten calls from across the state seeking information about the trees purchased from Evergreen Forest Tree Co. of Williamsville, N.Y. The school has filed a complaint with the N.C. Attorney General's Office.

A spokesman for the tree company said the school could have checked the trees upon delivery and refused acceptance. Jeans said he had to give a truck driver a certified check before the bundled trees were unloaded.

Adoption Privacy Law Returns To Haunt Legislators

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — For much of his life, David J. Coster hasn't cared to know who his "real" parents are.

But Coster, who was adopted as an infant, says he's having second thoughts. At 23, he's gotten married and is thinking about having children of his own. "I have a feeling that as I approach that decision, those feelings of wanting to find out will be a lot stronger," he said.

He says his biological family might have a medical history that would give him second thoughts about having children.

But the odds are that Coster, director of corporate planning and development for a Raleigh nursing home, will have trouble learning his biological parents' identity and other information about them if he makes the effort.

North Carolina law requires that records of adoptions handled by private or public agencies be sealed unless a judge orders the limited release of information out of medical necessity.

It's a controversial law, as members of the General Assembly found this year when a bill was introduced to allow the release of information — short of identifying the biological parents — to the adoptive parents such as the biological family's medical history.

"I didn't know there were so many people with adopted kids, but there are," Rep. Gordon Greenwood, D-Buncombe, said. He and other lawmakers were flooded with letters supporting or opposing the bill, which failed to win enactment but is eligible for consideration during the 1988 short session.

The issue is one of several that a legislative panel will examine over the next year. At their organizational meeting Tuesday, several members of the Legislative Study Commission on Adoption and Surrogate Parenting said the group should recommend that the law be changed.

"It seems to me it's time for North Carolina to face this issue," Charles Powers, an attorney and father of an adopted child, said.

Sarah Austin, president of Family Services Inc. of Winston-Salem, says efforts to liberalize adoption-record privacy laws are opposed vigorously by some adoptive parents.

"I think it's ignorance," she said. "I hate to say that, but I think it's alarming to adoptive parents. Many of them maybe have felt insecure throughout the years — 'does this child love me as if I had birthed it.'"

"It's not a matter that they don't love their adoptive parents," Ms. Austin said, adding that she was visited "every week" by children she had placed who wanted information about their biological parents. "It's an unknown that they want to know." Coster agreed.

"There is in a lot of adoptees a feeling of displacement or lack of heritage ... and it's hard to explain to someone who hasn't lived it but it's real," he said. "It's not so much you want to know why you were given up for adoption; it's just 'what are those parts of my character that I've inherited from people I don't even know.'"

He and Ms. Austin, both members of the study committee, say they favor changing the law to allow release of information if the biological and adoptive parents and the adopted child agree.

One reason such a policy makes sense is that it's becoming harder to keep the information secret anyway, Ms. Austin said. State and national groups assist biological parents in finding out who adopted their children, she said.

There are three types of adoptions: those handled by government agencies such as social services departments or private adoption agencies; those within families; and those arranged independently between the biological and adoptive families. The confidentiality issue usually arises in agency adoptions since they are the ones in which the biological and adoptive parents don't know each other.

"Whether we pass a law about open records or not, people are finding out," Ms. Austin said. "Adoptees are finding out. Biological mothers are finding out.

"You're putting social agencies, particularly the person sitting at that desk talking to someone, in a bad position. I mean, you just sit there and lie all the time. And whenever they say 'I know who my mother is,' you sit there and say 'well, I don't know.' You feel like a fool."

IN THE STATE

Sentenced

WILMINGTON (AP) — Edward Lee Cummings has been sentenced to death for the murder of the teen-age sister of his girlfriend.

Cummings, 46, of Hoke County was convicted of first-degree murder Wednesday in the death of Teresa Puryear, 15, of Wake County. He had been convicted in Hoke County last May and received the death sentence for the slaying of Teresa's sister, Karen Puryear, 22. That conviction and death sentence are being appealed to the state Supreme Court.

The bodies of both sisters were found in January 1986 in shallow graves near the McCain Prison Hospital about a mile from Cummings' home. Teresa Puryear had disappeared in September 1983 and her sister was last seen alive in November 1985.

Check Writer

GREENSBORO (AP) — A jobless Greensboro man has been charged with writing worthless checks totalling more than $114,000 to obtain property including a 1988 Jaguar valued at $46,916, authorities said.

Jerry L. Hardy "allegedly told everyone that he won a lawsuit for $14 million and people believed it," said Greensboro Police Detective J.J. Lawson. "He said he sued a bank."

Senators Say Soviets Will Need To Back Up Words

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders said today there's no reason to think the Soviet communist system has changed, and that Mikhail S. Gorbachev must follow summit deeds with action on Afghanistan and other East-West disputes.

"There's nothing to indicate the communist system, the Soviet communist system, has changed. So I think we need to keep our guard up but do our best to improve relations," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

"I think we need to see Mr. Gorbachev do something," said Senate Republican Leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

"He's been very charming. He's a very charming communist," Dole said. "Now if he would just follow through in Afghanistan, maybe do some other things, then I might move over to the president's position."

Byrd and Dole made their comments on NBC-TV's "Today" show the day after congressional leaders met with the general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party at the Soviet Embassy and emerged saying they were impressed by his blunt, direct style.

"I think Gorbachev is charming, articulate, animated, but let's face it, we're all sort of suffering, I guess maybe enjoying, glasnost fever in this town," Dole said today.

Dole, a contender for the 1988 GOP presidential nomination, expressed skepticism over Reagan's suggestion in an interview Wednesday that perhaps the Soviets are no longer seeking world domination. Reagan said Gorbachev "is the first (Soviet) leader that has never affirmed that."

"He's going to get on his plane tonight and fly back into that closed society and we're going to wake up tomorrow morning in the freest country in the world. ... So we want to keep our guard up," Dole said. "We're going to go through the processes, trying to be helpful to the president, trying to get the treaty ratified. But first we'd like to study a while."

Dole said he believes the Senate will ratify "without any killer amendments" the treaty to ban medium-range missiles that the two leaders signed on Tuesday.

"It was a ... remarkably, stunningly frank discussion," Senate Majority Whip Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said following Wednesday's session with Gorbachev at the Soviet Embassy.

Both sides spoke a common language — that of politicians. And liberals and conservatives alike left their encounter with the Soviet leader if not trusting him, at least eager to deal with him and learn more.

"His eyes sparkled the whole time," said House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif. "Trent Lott (R-Miss., the House GOP Whip) turned to me and said, 'God, I can't believe this guy. He's so blunt.'"

"He dealt with us as equals, and let me tell you, that turns on other politicians," he said in an interview.

Coelho even kept a list of Americanisms which kept popping up during translation of Gorbachev's remarks: "Take the bull by the horns," "pick up speed," "beat around the bush."

"I had the impression he knew some American phrases and used them deliberately," Coelho said.

Gorbachev also showed an understanding of Congress' crucial role in the success of the accord banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe which he and President Reagan signed a day earlier, participants said.

The Senate will debate the treaty and vote on ratification early next year. It is expected to endorse the pact.

Gorbachev Hints Soviets Set To Leave Afghanistan

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's assertion that the Soviets "have no intention of staying" in Afghanistan drew a wait-and-see reaction from administration and congressional officials.

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, assessing the prospect of a Soviet withdrawal, said, "I wouldn't say it's impossible. The Soviets are prepared to discuss the subject."

Despite Gorbachev's comments, the two sides remained far apart and prospects that the summit would produce a U.S.-Soviet deal on Afghanistan appeared slim unless there was a major shift.

President Reagan was sticking by his position that he would reject any deal that was unacceptable to the Afghan guerrillas who are battling an estimated 115,000 Soviet occupation troops, officials said. Resistance leaders have they will not accept a deal brokered at the Washington summit.

Gorbachev told congressional leaders on Wednesday that the Red Army would not leave Afghanistan until the Kremlin could be sure that a hostile government would not rule in Kabul.

"We have no intention of staying in Afghanistan. We just don't want others to fill the vacuum. We want a non-aligned Afghanistan," Gorbachev said, according to Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., one of nine congressional leaders who met with him. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan would keep his promise not to undercut the guerrillas.

"Our position is that the question in Afghanistan is the removal of Soviet troops and that is the first issue that has to be resolved," Fitzwater told a joint U.S.-Soviet briefing. "The president is pursuing the question of Soviet troops leaving Afghanistan and by what date."

Carlucci said that "any effort by the United States to link their departure to a government that stays in place — that's very difficult."

The leader of the Soviet-backed government in Kabul, who goes by the single name of Najib, has said that the Red Army could leave over a 12-month period, a timetable that the guerrillas and their supporters reject.

Reagan, in a pre-summit speech, said the Soviets should "pack up, pull out and go home."

The president gave the same message on Nov. 12 during a White House meeting with Younis Khalis, chairman of a seven-party alliance of Afghan resistance groups. Reagan received Khalis and three other resistance leaders at the White House and pledged to "stand by" the guerrillas.

Even if Reagan should waver, say Senate sources, Congress is unlikely to shut off the estimated $500 million it is sending the guerrillas annually in covert military aid.

Congress has made support for the Afghan guerrillas the law of the land. The State Department authorization bill, under which Congress funds the main administration foreign policy agency, says that before U.S.-Soviet relations can improve, the Red Army must pull out within the shortest period that is logistically feasible.

Chinese TV, Papers Play Up Summit

BEIJING (AP) — Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev were seen by millions of television viewers and given front-page play in newspapers as China welcomed the signing of the superpower arms accord with just a touch of skepticism.

China, a nuclear power, closely followed the arms talks and the summit, which affect its own strategic interests along the Sino-Soviet border.

The accord, signed Tuesday in Washington, will destroy all shorter- and medium-range nuclear missiles in the arsenals of the Soviet Union and the United States. Under the treaty, the Soviet Union is to eliminate 171 SS-20 missiles located in Soviet Asia and within striking distance of China.

"The Chinese government and the official press have stressed in numerous commentaries that although the accord is welcome, it will eliminate only 4 percent of the superpowers' nuclear arsenals and is just a first step in the disarmament process."

"The large amount of strategic nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction possessed by the United States and the Soviet Union remain a grave threat to the security of mankind and the arms race is far from being halted," the Foreign Ministry said in a statement.

There is no grounds for optimism, the People's Daily and the official Xinhua News Agency said in commentaries.

"The crux of the problem is that neither side appears to have changed its fundamental policy of seeking strategic superiority," Xinhua said.

China, long critical of Reagan's Space Defense Initiative, popularly known as Star Wars, insists that both sides end their arms race in space "so that the people of the world can live freely and peacefully under a pure and azure sky," the People's Daily said.

Much of the 10 minutes devoted to international news on television newscasts Wednesday night was taken up by the summit.

China's viewing audience of 300 million was shown film footage of Gorbachev being greeted at ceremonies in Washington, and Reagan and Gorbachev bantering at the White House signing ceremony.

There were also shots of Moscow residents watching the summit leaders on a huge screen in the Soviet capital, and crowds outside the White House demonstrating against the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan.

House Prohibits 'Third Country' Aid For Contras

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House won't let the Reagan administration turn to other nations for aid to the Nicaraguan Contras if Congress bans direct U.S. military help.

The Democratic-run chamber split generally along party lines Wednesday as it approved the ban by a 215-200 vote, despite complaints by administration supporters that the restriction is an unconstitutional limit on a president's power to make foreign policy.

The ban is part of a pending bill authorizing $11.5 billion for a wide variety of foreign aid programs. When the House finally finishes the measure, it will go to a House-Senate conference committee to be reconciled with the different measure approved earlier by the Senate.

During last summer's congressional hearings into the secret sale of U.S. weapons to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contras, there was testimony that the Reagan administration sought military aid for the rebels from a number of other nations after Congress ordered a halt to direct U.S. military help.

Money was sought from Brunei, South Korea and Saudi Arabia, legislators on both sides noted during Wednesday's debate. Supporters of the "third-country" ban said the money was offered because those nations were solicited by the United States. Opponents said the countries simply believed in the Contra cause.

The third-party ban was added to the bill by the Foreign Affairs Committee, and opponents of the ban failed to strip it from the bill. The 215-200 tally rejected an amendment to strike the ban from the foreign aid bill.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., said allowing the third-nation aid to be solicited "will make the Iran-Contra affair and the resulting scandal meaningless."

But Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said, "this restriction is so ludicrous, so full of constitutional problems that I don't know whether to ridicule it or oppose it."

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., added that "we cannot tell the president he can't enter into understandings with other nations. This is shoutingly, seismically unconstitutional."

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., said it differently. "What we are dealing with here is extortion at the highest level. This administration engaged in the practice of extorting money from foreign governments."

Testimony during the Iran-Contra hearings indicated that the Reagan administration tried to keep its attempts to obtain third-country support for the Contras secret and later misled Congress about the solicitations.

In one instance, according to the Iran-Contra committee's final report, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams traveled to London under an assumed name for a meeting with the sultan of Brunei to seek money for the Contras.

Abrams later gave "technically correct, but misleading" testimony to Congress to keep members from learning of the solicitation, according to the panels' minority report.

Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., said Wednesday that "if there is one lesson we have learned from the Iran-Contra scandals, it is that a policy conducted in secrecy is a policy doomed to failure. The United States should not be going abroad to win support for policies that are not supported at home."

Pilots May Have Been Shot Before PSA Jetliner Crashed

CAYUCOS, Calif. (AP) — Investigators have found a gun in the wreckage of a Pacific Southwest jetliner, and a cockpit recording reportedly revealed "a terrible commotion" shortly before the crash.

Sources in Washington who spoke on condition of anonymity said Wednesday investigators believe the pilot and co-pilot may have been shot by a former airline employee who had been fired.

One source said gunfire could be heard on the tape of the flight voice recorder recovered from the wreckage of Pacific Southwest Airlines Flight 1771, which crashed Monday and killed all 43 aboard.

Investigators have not ruled out the possibility the crew was prevented from flying the four-engine BAe-146 jet because of a struggle or by sudden decompression of the cockpit from bullets shattering sections of the windshield, the sources said.

Today's editions of the Los Angeles Times, meanwhile, quoted sources familiar with the cockpit recording as saying sounds of "a terrible commotion" could be heard on the flight deck. That was followed by a mechanical screeching that would indicate accelerating rapidly, likely the beginning of the plane's rapid descent.

About 40 searchers going through jet debris and body parts strewn over the 15-acre site found the gun Wednesday in 2 or 3 inches of mud, said FBI special agent Richard Bretzing.

Papers will be filed in court today showing that David A. Burke, the fired airline employee under investigation in the crash, owned a "legal handgun," said Assistant United States Attorney Steve Czuleger in Los Angeles.

"We know where the gun came from," he said, declining to elaborate.

News reports have said that Burke, fired last month by USAir, which owns PSA, may have carried a .44-caliber Magnum handgun aboard the plane seeking revenge against former boss Ray Thomson. Both were among the victims.

Bretzing said the flight voice recordings showed someone entered the cockpit without authorization just before the disaster. He wouldn't say if gunfire could be heard on the tape.

He also refused to discuss Burke or give details about the weapon found. He said the weapon was being examined for fingerprints, although it wasn't immediately clear if prints could be obtained.

One source told the Times that the pistol had been traced to a person who gave it to Burke. The source said shots had been fired from the weapon but would not say whether all six rounds were used.

On Friday, Burke had pulled a gun on his former girlfriend and demanded that she drive him around for five hours so they could talk, Hawthorne police Lt. Jan Korn said Wednesday.

Police took a report on the incident, but the woman, Jacqueline Camacho, 33, declined to file charges, Korn said.

Squirrel Puts Crimp In Trading

NEW YORK (AP) — A stray squirrel that electrocuted itself at a Connecticut power station triggered an outage that disrupted over-the-counter stock trading here for three hours and left brokers nationwide in the dark, officials said.

The squirrel's trespassing Wednesday deprived brokerage firms of vital trading information and piled up a backlog of orders to process on the National Association of Securities Dealers Automatic Quotation system.

However, while dealers had to resort to trading by telephone, many said business had been slow and was not significantly affected by the shutdown.

William Howard, a vice president and manager of over-the-counter trading for Sutro & Co Inc. in San Francisco, said the power failure was "more frustrating than anything else."

"It didn't really knock us out of kilter in terms of doing business because things have been slow anyway," he said. "Had this occurred when the market crashed on Oct. 19 ... it would have been horrible."

Nonetheless, the 10:43 a.m. shutdown might have kept slightly more than 20 million shares from being traded, said a NASDAQ official, Enno Hobbing. Daily volume averages about 130 million shares, he said.

The main computer that runs the system from Trumbull, Conn., lost its power when the squirrel, carrying a piece of aluminum foil, ventured into the system, according to Jack Dolan, a spokesman for United Illuminating Co. of New Haven.

He said the outage affected about 2,200 customers, but that all customers were back in service by mid-afternoon.

Dolan said NASDAQ apparently did not suffer an outright outage, but a power dip that affected its computer system.

The system started to come back on line at 12:05 p.m. through a backup computer facility in Rockville, Md., the association said. It said most service, including current price information and volume, was restored by 2:30 p.m.

The problem affected the data that the association reports to the news media for stock tables. The group said there might be inaccuracies in some of the high and low prices and volume figures reported in its National Market System list.

The over-the-counter market is the busiest stock trading system in the country after the New York Stock Exchange. The OTC market primarily involves stocks of smaller companies, although shares in better-known companies, such as Apple Computer Inc., also are traded.

The system was out for 10 minutes in August and for two hours due to a hardware problem in October 1986.

Conviction

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — John Silver Murdock was convicted Wednesday of first-degree murder in the September 1986 death of his 96-year-old grandmother.

Murdock, 31, of Salisbury, had also been charged with first-degree rape and first-degree sexual offense in connection with the death of Janie Brown Murdock. He was found innocent of the rape charge but was convicted of second-degree sexual offense in the case.

The Rowan County Superior Court jury deliberated about eight hours before announcing the verdict. The trial is in its fifth week.

Mrs. Murdock's bruised and partially nude body was found by neighbors on Sept. 14, 1986, on a bed at her Spencer home.

'Ridgerunner'

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — A California man was convicted Wednesday of three cocaine-related charges and could face up to 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine on each count stemming from the "Operation Ridgerunner" investigation.

Charles A. Henry of Lake Elsinore, Calif., was convicted of conspiracy to possess and distribute cocaine, possession with intent to distribute cocaine, and distribution of the drug.

U.S. District Court Judge Woodrow W. Jones delayed sentencing at the request of Henry's counsel.

Widow Charged In Deaths Tied To Drug Tampering

SEATTLE (AP) — A woman who was the first to suggest her husband might have died from cyanide-laced pain relievers has been charged with two deaths in what is believed to be the first U.S. arrest in a fatal product-tampering.

Stella Maudine Nickell of suburban Auburn was indicted Wednesday for the 1986 deaths of her husband, Bruce, and another Auburn resident, Susan Katherine Snow.

Twenty-five FBI agents locally and 60 nationwide worked on the investigation that involved thousands of hours of police work, said Auburn Police Chief Jake Evans.

The FBI, Auburn police and federal prosecutors refused to comment on a possible motive. However, the Seattle Times quoted sources Wednesday as saying Mrs. Nickell had purchased two $20,000 insurance policies on her husband before his death.

Both died after taking cyanide-laced Extra Strength Excedrin capsules, tests showed. Authorities have not suggested any other connection between the victims.

Mrs. Nickell, 44, appeared briefly before U.S. Magistrate Philip Sweigert Wednesday to hear the charges against her, and was jailed pending a Friday bail hearing.

She was charged with causing death by product tampering, a federal offense under a law passed in October 1983 after seven people died in the Chicago area from taking cyanide-laced Tylenol.

Robert Lasnik of the state prosecutor's office said his office was following the progress of the federal prosecution to determine whether state charges should be filed later. If state murder charges are filed, they could carry the death penalty.

Mrs. Nickell, who made no statement at her arraignment, faces a maximum penalty of life in prison if convicted, said FBI spokesman Joe Smith. She also was charged with three counts of tampering with a product involved in interstate commerce, charges carrying possible 10-year penalties.

Those charges involve pain reliever bottles found in Mrs. Nickell's home and on the shelves of two suburban stores.

Tim Hillier, a public defender representing Mrs. Nickell, said last June that she was considered a suspect.

Because of a grand jury investigation, an insurance company that carried a policy on Nickell refused to pay benefits to Mrs. Nickell.

JoAnn Oliver, an assistant public defender, said Mrs. Nickell would plead innocent at her arraignment. Ms. Oliver refused to discuss the case further.

Nickell died June 5, 1986, at age 52 of what was initially thought to be natural causes. Ms. Snow, 40, died six days later. Toxicology tests found Ms. Snow died of cyanide poisoning, and cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were found in her home.

Mrs. Nickell notified police that her husband had used Extra-Strength Excedrin from the same lot as that involved in Ms. Snow's death, Bill Grigg, a Washington, D.C.-based Food and Drug Administration spokesman, said at the time.

Tests determined Nickell died of cyanide poisoning, prompting Excedrin's manufacturer, Bristol-Myers, to issue a nationwide recall of all its non-prescription capsule medications in June 1986.

"We are very pleased with the efforts of the FBI," Bristol-Myers spokesman Jerry Parrott said from the company's New York headquarters. "Because there will be a criminal trial it would be inappropriate to comment further."

Fourteen product-tampering fatalities have been investigated since the first Tylenol poisonings were discovered in 1982.

Smith and U.S. Attorney Gene Anderson said they were unaware of any other arrests in connection with deaths in U.S. product-tampering cases.

Two weeks after the Chicago deaths, James Lewis wrote Johnson & Johnson threatening more deaths unless the Tylenol manufacturer deposited $1 million in a bank account.

Lewis is serving a 20-year prison sentence for extortion in that case and other crimes.

In October 1986, Edward Marks was sentenced to 27 years in prison in Orlando, Fla., after he pleaded guilty to putting rat poison in some over-the-counter drugs in a scheme prosecutors said was designed to make money in stock options. No one was injured in that case.

Florida Abolishes Service Tax, But Boosts Sales Tax

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Legislature repealed the state's 5 percent services tax early today, after months of intense pressure from the advertising industry and angry, confused voters.

The legislation eliminates the tax on Jan. 1 and compensates by boosting the state sales tax from 5 percent to 6 percent on goods. The hike, effective Feb. 1, would bring in $1.2 billion annually.

"I feel I did lead the charge to repeal," boasted Gov. Bob Martinez, the freshman Republican who initially championed the tax but reversed himself under intense attack from advertisers and other interest groups targeted by the tax.

He was expected to sign the new bill into law today.

"The special interests have carried this day, but there will be another day," said Rep. Winston "Bud" Gardner, a Democrat and chief architect of the tax. "There is more than one way to skin a cat."

The 5-month-old levy on a wide variety of services provoked protest from across the nation because it taxed out-of-state services used by Floridians.

For example, companies buying advertisements in national magazines or from broadcast networks had to pay a tax based on circulation or audience in Florida. Conventions were canceled and some national advertisers stayed away.

At the same time, other economically pressed states considering a services tax hesitated after seeing the furor it created for Martinez and other political leaders in Florida.

The Senate started the repeal rolling Wednesday evening by voting 30-10 to rescind the tax and replace the lost revenue, estimated at $800 million in its first year, by raising the goods tax.

After nearly 15 hours of negotiating, the House voted 75-42 at about 1 a.m. to pass an amended version of the Senate bill and sent it back to the Senate, which in turn voted 29-9 to accept six House amendments giving the governor more control over the state's infrastructure trust fund.

AP Reporter Is Captive 1,000 Days

WASHINGTON (AP) — Friends and supporters of Terry Anderson, the longest-held foreign hostage in Lebanon, are marking his 1,000th day in captivity today in a ceremony on Capitol Hill.

The event, which is expected to attract members of Congress, other U.S. officials, Anderson's colleagues from the journalism community and relatives of the hostages, coincides with the United Nations' international human rights day.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped March 16, 1985. The 40-year-old journalist is among the 21 foreigners, including seven other Americans, missing in Lebanon.

Among those slated to speak at the ceremony were Phyllis Kaminsky, a U.N. official; Peggy Say, Anderson's sister; Walter Mears, the AP's executive editor and Nicholas Daniloff, a contributing editor of U.S. News and World Report who was detained in the Soviet Union in 1986.

"The goal of the ceremony is to increase public awareness of the hostages' plight and to make a moral and spiritual plea to the captors to release the hostages," said Carmella LaSpada. "Denying them their freedom is an abuse of human rights."

LaSpada is head of No Greater Love, a humanitarian organization that co-sponsored the ceremony with the Journalists Committee to Free Terry Anderson.

The program will consist of prayers, songs and brief remarks by the participants.

WUSA-TV of Washington will tape the ceremony, and a tape will be shipped to the Middle East in hopes that it will be shown in Lebanon.

In addition, No Greater Love will send olive branches to religious leaders in the Middle East encouraging them to work for the release of the hostages.

Anderson, a native of Lorain, Ohio, was last heard from Oct. 3, 1986 in a videotape released by his captors, Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, a Shiite Moslem faction believed loyal to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

"We have no information on Anderson or any of the 21 foreigners missing in Lebanon," said a police spokesman in Lebanon, speaking on condition he remain anonymous.

The other American hostages are Thomas Sutherland, Edward Tracy, Joseph Cicippio, Frank Reed, Alann Steen, Robert Polhill and Jesse Turner.

Council Votes To Add Brook Valley Area

would be pretty upset," Mrs. Shinn said. "I think in all fairness to them, we can compromise even more than we have."

Many residents of the annexation area opposed the annexation, and voiced their opinion at a public hearing before City Council on Nov. 23.

The council also passed unanimously an ordinance extending the extraterritorial jurisdiction of the city.

The extension is located south of White Road and east of S.R. 1700, including the treetops sections I-V.

Zoning was divided into four separate sections: the tract on the corner of Cannon Crossroads was designated CS (shopping center); the tract immediately south and east was zoned O&I (office and institutional); Treetops sections I-IV were zoned R-6 (high density residential) and Treetops section V was zoned R-9 (medium density residential).

The area voted on was approximately 30 percent of the land originally placed before the council for extraterritorial consideration.

The remainder of the 362.5 acres, stretching east to S.R. 1709, will go before the Planning and Zoning Commission again for further zoning consideration.

Council also voted unanimously to pass an ordinance amending the Zoning Ordinance for bufferyard requirements.

Bufferyards are a combination of land and physical barriers which separate various land uses to reduce the negative impact resulting when incompatible land uses adjoin one another.

According to City Planner Jack Simoneau, the amendment increases the level of protection given to residential properties when they adjoin commercial and/or industrial development.

Simoneau said the amendment provides a landscaping requirement along street right-of-ways for all kinds of development and it also increases the amount of separation between non-residential uses when they adjoin other non-residential uses.

A decision whether to allow flower shops as permitted uses in the Medical District 2 Zoning District was put off until the next council meeting.

A representative for Clyde Simmons, who is requesting the change in ordinance, asked the Council to place a continuance on the matter until a full, six-member council could vote on the issue.

Under the current code, flower shops are allowed as special uses in the MD-2 zoning district.

The Planning and Zoning Commission has unanimously made a recommendation against permitting florists in the MD-2 zone as permitted uses.

Council members also unanimously approved the rezoning of two tracts of land currently zoned RA-20 (residential-agricultural), located north of the 264 Bypass, east of Tobacco Road, and west of the Rollinwood subdivision.

The first tract, 1.91 acres adjacent to Alice Drive, was rezoned R-9 (residential-medium density) and the second tract, 6.24 acres located south of tract 1, was rezoned R-6 (residential-high density).

An ordinance amending the 1987-88 General Fund and Capital Reserve Budgets was also unanimously approved.

The ordinance provides the transfer of $876,068 from the General Fund to the Capital Reserve Fund for 1987-88 and redesignates the money as well as accrued interest earnings, to additional capital improvements. The ordinance also provides $350,000 in the Capital Reserve Fund to be used for the Evans Street widening project from 10th Street to Howell Street.

In other matters, the Council unanimously approved a request by the Greenville Community Life Center to rezone the Agnes Fullilove School site, on the corner of Chestnut Street and Manhattan Avenue from R-6 (high density residential) to O&I (office and institutional); unanimously approved a request by the St. James United Methodist Church to close the 600 block of Hilltop Street; approved an annexation request by Four W's to annex 10.44 acres of the Paramore Farms subdivision, located west of the intersection of York Road and the 14th Street Extension; approved a voluntary annexation request to annex a .35 acre lot located at 3322 Cadenza St.; approved an amendment to the Electric Fund and Gas Fund Budgets of the Greenville Utilities Commission, revising estimated values of various net properties with actual audited figures, approved the appointment of David C. Dennard to the Planning and Zoning Commission, and unanimously approved a resolution requesting the release of state funds to the Mid-East Commission.

The Council unanimously approved the consent agenda which included a resolution affirming the need for an Airport Land Use Plan, an amendment changing the city's observed Easter holiday from Easter Monday to Good Friday, and approved the tax release of $632.

mands for housing and for other kinds of recreational-cultural facilities," she said.

However, she said population increases will mean added burdens in increasing the city's safety system: police, fire-rescue, and other public safety departments. In addition, she said, there may eventually be problems with Greenville's water and sewer systems.

"None of these need be a problem if the growth is anticipated and planned for," she said.

She said that while the city had done a number of things to prepare already, "our big problem right now is traffic."

"Our utilities and our water supplies are perceived to be adequate, and we have monitored the carrying capacity of those services. I think there's been good planning in those areas," she said.

Roberson said the city was aware of traffic problems, and that some alleviating proposals include the widening of 14th Street between Red Banks Road and Greenville Boulevard, and the eventual extension of Arlington Boulevard to the medical park area. The widening of 14th Street has already been approved, Roberson said.

"I think we need to look at thoroughfare plan projections," he said. "I think its going to take a joint effort between the Department of Transportation, in some cases the county, and the city to make sure our priorities are the same."

"The city needs to make sure that we go out in our subdivision process and make sure that right of ways are adequately set aside," he said.

But with growth comes the financial burden of finding additional funding for those services Mrs. Faulkner mentioned, according to Knowles.

"I have a lot of ideas on how we can do it, but I have to check state statutes first," he said.

According to the 1986 estimates,

Charlotte was the largest city in the state with 368,212 people, with Raleigh finishing second at 201,447. Greensboro was third with 181,039 citizens; Winston-Salem fourth with 148,631 and Durham fifth with 115,750. Fayetteville, with 71,108 residents, was the sixth largest city in the state.

Greenville finished just behind Rocky Mount, which had a 1986 population of 47,214.

The state figures show Pitt County with 97,406 residents in 1986, compared to an April 1980, total of 90,146, representing an 8.1 percent increase in population. Greenville had 35,740 residents in 1980, meaning there was a 17.3 percent population increase in a little more than six years.

Candidates Refuse To Enter Haitian Elections

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Leading candidates from last month's aborted election said they would not participate in the junta's plans to appoint a new Electoral Council on Friday and hold a new election next month.

The presidential candidates from the canceled election vowed Wednesday to boycott a new election. A fourth presidential candidate was expected to join the others in calling the junta's actions illegal.

The boycott plan was the strongest show of political unity by the opposition in the aftermath of election violence.

Candidate Louis Dejoie II said he and the other three presidential hopefuls have the support of a vast majority of Haitians and would "produce a 95 percent boycott of the election."

"No government that considers itself a friend of Haiti can recognize the junta's elections. Democrats cannot take part in such elections," he said.

The candidates' criticism of the junta was backed Wednesday by the governments of France and Canada. The United States said it would support new elections only if they had the full support of Haiti's people.

The military dominated government on Wednesday said it will name a new Electoral Council on Friday, swear it in on Saturday, publish new election rules on Dec. 18, and hold a new election on Jan. 17.

The junta's announcement, carried on state-run television, did not say who would be appointed to the new council or what the new rules would be.

The Jan. 17 election date would presumably allow the junta to honor its pledge to turn power over on Feb. 7, 1988 to a newly elected president and National Assembly. The junta has been in power since Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to exile Feb. 7, 1986, ending a 30-year family dictatorship.

The government dissolved the original nine-member Electoral Council after the independent panel on Nov. 29 canceled Haiti's first presidential election in 30 years. The panel stopped the election when armed thugs killed at least 34 people, many of them trying to vote at polling places.

The junta, headed by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, was criticized for failing to protect the voters from the attacks, which were blamed on supporters of the former Duvalier regime, including a private militia the Duvaliers formed.

Before Wednesday's announcement, the three-man junta asked the nine groups that named the first Electoral Council to nominate new members. But six of the groups refused, saying they wanted their original appointees reinstated.

"The Haitian government media have made believe there is unanimity in the country in support of the (junta)," a French Embassy spokesman said Wednesday. "The four candidates have the support of the electorate."

France still recognizes as legitimate the original Electoral Council, said the spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said American aid to the Western Hemisphere's poorest nation hinged on democratic elections. "We retain our commitment to a genuine democracy," said the U.S. diplomat, who also spoke on condition of anonymity. "Any election must have the support of the Haitian people."

Washington withdrew $62 million in aid to Haiti after elections were canceled, leaving in place only $44 million in humanitarian aid.

Paris sends $32 million in technical and other humanitarian aid to Haiti, which ousted the French in 1804 to become the New World's second republic.

In Ottawa, Canada's ambassador to Haiti said Wednesday that Prime Minister Brian Mulroney is "shocked by recent events in Haiti and worried about the safety of Canadians there."

Ambassador Claude Laverdure, in Ottawa to brief Mulroney on the Haitian situation and receive new instructions, said the Cabinet would decide today whether to alter diplomatic relations with Haiti or cut Canadian aid.

External Affairs officials have said there are no plans to instruct the 2,500 Canadians in Haiti to leave.

Haiti will receive about $15 million in aid from Canada in the current fiscal year, most of it channeled through non-governmental organizations.

Dejoie and two fellow candidates, Marc Bazin and Gerard Gourgue, issued a joint communique on Wednesday pledging unity in opposing the junta and vowing not to participate in government-run elections.

An aide to Sylvio Claude, the fourth top candidate and leader of the Christian Democratic Party, said Claude intended to support the communique.

A continuation of international study was highlighted at the annual day meeting Tuesday of Pitt County Extension Homemakers Association.

Lucille Evans received special recognition as the international program of work chairman and for the international tasting tea. She was instrumental in developing the outline of international study for clubs throughout the county for the past year.

Other focuses were provided by Donna Whitley of Greenville. She told of Mid East folk dance and culture. Dressed in a caftan, she demonstrated the dance of the stomach. "The dance is a great stress reliever. In the Mid East, women dance for women and men dance for men," she said. Ms. Whitley told of marriage and birth celebrations, births and deaths.

The Mexican legend of the poinsettia was also given.

Dot Simmons, president of the county council officers, presented special awards. Pactolus Extension Homemakers and Swift Creek Extension Homemakers were named outstanding clubs. The Winter-Green Club was recognized as being newly organized with nine members.

Extension homemakers having perfect attendance were cited. Those having perfect attendance of over 25 years included, Bernice Clark, Belvoir, 25 years; Margaret Briley, Sweet Gum Grove, 35 years; Geraldine Alexander, Sweet Gum Grove, 38 years; Clara Jane Hardee, Red Banks and Margaret Tetterton, Sweet Gum Grove, 41 years, and Margaret Barnhill, Belvoir, 43 years.

Greetings were extended to the women by Kenneth Dews, Pitt County commissioner, and Leroy James, county extension director.

Others participating on the program were Rubelle Goin, Jo Costello,

Moms Try To Freeze Teen Appetites

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I read about "Ma in Melrose," whose kids always ate up all the leftovers intended for another meal, I had to laugh. One of my most traumatic memories of raising teen-agers was the day our son ate half a standing rib roast for an afternoon snack. His comment (while we were having scrambled eggs for supper): "But, Mom, you didn't have a note on it!"

A special shelf — as you suggest, Abby — is fine, but not everything fits on some shelves. Notes are better. Just put a note — "Do Not Eat" — on anything you want to keep for later, and never assume, as I did, that any fool would know better than to eat half a standing rib roast! — KATE REEVES, FULLERTON, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I read you in the Clearfield Progress, and did I ever relate to "Ma in Melrose"! My grandfather had five strapping teen-age boys who could clean out a fridge of a whole week's groceries in one day! Nothing could be left alone for another meal: cheese, lunch meats, poultry — always gone.

Solution: A good old-fashioned padlock was placed on the icebox door. And he held the key! My aunt had four teen-age boys and they all ate like horses. She says it was years before she realized that refrigerators didn't come with behinds sticking out of the door.

Now I have a 13-year-old son, and when I can't find him, I always know where to look — in the fridge.

The "reserve shelf for off-limit stuff" per your suggestion was a good idea until the famous teen-age excuse, "I forgot," came along. — MA EISENHAUER, MORRISDALE, PA.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns how to designate which foods in the fridge are "off limits." My teen-age stepdaughter's appetite was legend. After school, her first priority was to raid the fridge. Believe me, she missed nothing.

Because I worked, I would frequently prepare casseroles and other items in advance, but coming home to find these items gone was more than I could tolerate.

I started placing an ordinary poison label — complete with skull and crossbones — on everything that was not to be eaten. It worked extremely well.

When my stepdaughter moved out to live with a roommate, she faced the same problem, so I gave her a supply of "poison" labels and it was very effective. She will be married soon, and I suspect her new husband will be seeing some of those same labels in their refrigerator. — JANICE STEPHENS, RICHARDSON, TEXAS

DEAR JANICE: I hope not! It's his fridge, too, you know, and he is not a child who needs permission to eat certain foods. If your stepdaughter is serious, however, you'd better save some of those "poison" labels. You might see her back home.

All kidding aside, never use the skull and crossbones poison insignia on edibles. A child could identify them as such, and later accidentally drink iodine or some other poison bearing that label!

Difficulties Of Toying With Kids At Christmas

By MARY JO KOCHAKIAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

You may be ready — even eager — to hear "Blue Christmas" or "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town" again. But are you prepared to hear from your children that enduring holiday sentiment, "Are there any more presents for me?"

Does it put a pall over the holiday as you sit amid the gift-wrap debris from several dozen carefully selected gifts?

Are you justified in your irritation? If the kids in question aren't beyond the preschool stage, you shouldn't expect anything but that, says Allen Carter, chief child psychologist at the Institute of Living in Hartford, Conn. "When they're still young, by nature they're self-centered," Carter says. "It's normal for them to want everything they can get."

By the time children are 5 or 6, they should understand that giving is part of the holiday, too. The self-centeredness should be less extreme. And by the time children are 7 or 8, Carter says, they should have learned to modulate their acquisitive desires. If they haven't, "it's a problem," he says.

Not that parents should expect grown-up propriety from kids, Carter says. The hope of getting more is "a perfectly normal reaction," he says, in light of what adults have made of the holiday.

"There's tremendous anticipation (about Christmas morning), overstimulating for most kids. When they reach the end of the unwrapped presents, there's a kind of natural letdown at that point. The anticipation has been extreme. It's not possible to come down really gently. Every child experiences some of that every Christmas."

If you fear your children are unreasonably acquisitive, you should reconsider the way your family celebrates the holiday, says Karen Andersson, chief of pediatric psychology at Newington Children's Hospital.

Are you repeatedly soliciting gift suggestions, having the children write out lists and letters to Santa, taking them to Santa breakfasts, Santa sleigh rides, Santa visits at the mall? Are gifts the centerpiece of your own holiday celebration?

The children should be able to take some pleasure in the other events of the day, Andersson and Carter say. There should be something to look forward to in visiting with relatives, eating a special meal, simply being together as a family.

Other steps to guard against greed: —Stress the religious aspects of the holiday, if appropriate for your family.

—Emphasize giving. "Parents are so often busy shopping, they forget to provide the child with the opportunity to purchase or make gifts for others," Andersson says. "Children don't automatically realize that gift-giving is a reciprocal enterprise. They really need the opportunity to learn what it is to give a gift."

—Encourage children to make cards or gifts. If they don't want to, at least involve them in making decisions about gifts for others, Andersson says. "It doesn't even mean having to bring a child to the mall. You can bring home three or four carefully chosen gifts and ask, 'Which one would you like to give Daddy?'"

—Community activities, such as carol sings, can broaden children's views.

By age 5, children are old enough to learn about giving by taking part in contributing toys, food or other items to collections for the poor. Make time for charity work that parents and children can do together, Andersson says. "The true spirit of the holidays is not something we were born with. Children rely on adults to teach them what sharing and caring are about."

And if you are faced with "Are there any more for me?" questions, engage the children in play with the toys they did get, Andersson says. If children are surrounded by new things but are whining for more, it could be they are looking for something else. "That something else is likely time and attention."

'Computer' Kids Always Know

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

It is written somewhere — possibly in the Parenting Bill of Rights — that all children are created equal. And don't you forget it!

Kids have little computer bodies with disks that store information on every gift, favor or punishment ever accorded them. At any given time, they can push a button and punch it up for you to bear witness to.

For example, if their brother got a watch on his fifth birthday and he didn't get one until he was 6 1/2, heaven help you. Or if a sibling got the maraschino cherry in the fruit cocktail six months ago and you promised him the maraschino cherry the next time you had fruit cocktail, don't even think of making a mistake.

They remember who had to do dishes the last time you had spaghetti, who lost the knob off the TV set six years ago, who got punished for teasing the dog when he wasn't teasing the dog, and who had to wear the girl boots the last time it snowed.

And that is why parents get paranoid at Christmas. And that is also why we view holidays with all the sentiment of an accountant. They made us that way.

Here's how it works. If a parent buys each of her kids a sweater and one sweater is $10 cheaper than the other one, she will equal it by buying a shirt to give with the cheaper one. You can't buy a shirt for $10, so she spends $20 and adds a shoehorn for the other one as a stocking stuffer. Only the kid doesn't own a pair of hard shoes, so she has to buy a pair of shoes. Things are out of whack again, so she goes for a money clip for the other one to even things up. Then she realizes the kid doesn't have any money either so she puts a check in an envelope. But wait! She's now short a stocking stuffer for one and an envelope to put in the tree for the other one. So she buys soap on a string for the stocking and a subscription to TV Guide to put in an envelope on the tree. Hold it! Now, one has more boxes to open than the other, so it's back to the stores again. It's like a bad haircut. A snip here and a snip there. It never comes out even.

I want to tell myself that our kids have outgrown the need to be reassured that they are loved equally, but then we all sit down at a dinner and when I cut the cake, rulers come out of the pockets and vigorous trading begins.

That's why there is no doubt in my mind that some day in our future we'll all be sitting around remembering the good times we've had as a family and someone will punch up a disk to reveal the Christmas his brother got a shoehorn AND a pair of shoes to go with it, while he got a TV Guide subscription when he didn't even own a TV set!

Floyd-Tyson Vows Spoken

The wedding ceremony of Hosea W. Tyson and Jessie James Floyd, both of Greenville, took place Saturday at 3 p.m. The Rev. Clarence B. Gray conducted the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her nephew, Jeffrey Willoughby. Lucille Randolph was honor attendant and the best man was William M. Floyd of District Heights, Md.

The couple will live at the home of the bridegroom and both are retired. A reception was given by the bridegroom's daughter, Doris Cox.

Chapters Have Christmas Meet

Delta and Beta Alpha chapters of Delta Kappa Gamma Society had a Christmas meeting last week at the Greenville Country Club.

A program of Christmas music was given by the Elmhurst Elementary School Chorus, directed by Tammy Walker. The chorus includes approximately 55 second and third graders. The program was arranged by Elizabeth Wilkerson.

Guests included Jackie Inman of Lexington, currently living in Greenville, Dorothy Johnson of Lexington, Mass., a former member of Delta chapter, and Nell Everett of Chatham, N.J., a former member of Beta Alpha.

The welcome and invocation were given by Dr. Carolyn Hampton, Beta Alpha president.

Decorations were provided by Beta Alpha's committee on social affairs with Irma Worthington as chairperson.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market suffered a broad setback today, abruptly reversing its advance of the past three sessions in the face of another unpleasant surprise on the nation's trade deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen 135.78 points in the week's first three trading days, fell 33.82 to 1,868.70 in the first half hour today.

Declining issues swamped advances by about 11 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 112 up, 1,227 down and 253 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 29.12 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Summit

portant is to be done." Interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show, Shultz said he expects talks to begin early next year on reducing the Soviet advantage in conventional forces in Europe.

The summit atmosphere has been good, but there's been scant evidence of solid achievement.

Both leaders referred to progress in their toasts at a state dinner given by the Soviets on Wednesday night, but Gorbachev added, "In some areas we remain far apart."

Gorbachev's meeting with Bush and others marked a continuation of his three-day campaign to sit down with Americans of different interests.

He arranged a meeting with businessmen for later in the day, before a scheduled news conference and a mid-evening departure from Washington.

Gorbachev and Reagan also were expected to issue a joint communique summing up their three days of summitry, which was highlighted by Tuesday's signing of a treaty to ban intermediate-range missiles over three years.

For his part, Reagan planned to make a nationally broadcast speech from the Oval Office at 9 p.m. EST, about an hour after Gorbachev returns to Moscow, to report on summit achievements.

Diplomatic sources in Europe said Gorbachev would meet with his Warsaw Pact allies in East Berlin before returning to Moscow.

Gorbachev responded testily Wednesday to pressure from the Reagan administration, Congress and the American media about Soviet human rights issues.

"What moral right does America have to assume the pose of the teacher? Who has given it the right to teach moral lessons?" he asked at a meeting with American editors, publishers and broadcast executives at the Soviet Embassy.

"I told the president yesterday, 'Mr. President, you are not the prosecutor and I am not the accused. ... I am not on trial,'" Gorbachev said.

Soviet and American arms experts labored until past midnight at the State Department, searching for ways to reduce long-range nuclear weapons without restraining Reagan's Star Wars program to devise a space-based missile defense.

Credit Program

East Carolina University's Testing Center will offer the College-Level Examination Program monthly, January through July, in 1988.

CLEP is a national program of credit by examination which enables adults to acquire college credit for material learned through independent reading or experience. Exams are offered in history, literature, mathematics, physical and social sciences, and various fields of business.

In order to receive credit for examinations passed, adults should be enrolled in a college, university or technical institute which grants academic credit for CLEP examinations. Each campus determines the tests for which it will award credit and the minimum passing scores.

Test dates are Jan. 12 and 14, March 15 and 17, April 12 and 14, May 17 and 19, June 14 and 16, and July 12 and 14.

Further information is available from the ECU Testing Center, 105 Speight Building, ECU.

Staff Contributions

The staff of Joyner Library at East Carolina University has contributed $1,437 to the Pitt County Foster Children's Fund.

The fund, administered by Becky Starkey, foster care licensing specialist with the Pitt County Department of Social Service, provides gifts for children in foster care, especially at Christmas.

About 10 years ago, the Joyner Library staff started gathering money for the fund from among staff members and has become a pre-Christmas tradition. For several years a talent show was held to raise money and this year a special fundraising project was held. The presentation was made Wednesday.

Any group or individual who would like to contribute to the Foster Care Fund should contact Ms. Starkey at 758-2167.

Honorary Member

Kimberly Lynn Dawson, a student at Ayden-Grifton High School, was selected an honorary member of the board of directors of the Pitt County Red Cross.

Miss Dawson's term is through June 30.

She was selected among six other applicants at the school for her school and community involvement.

Miami Gets Another Shot At Being Football's Top Team In The Orange Bowl

NEW YORK (AP) — Coach Jimmy Johnson still thinks Miami was the nation's best college football team last season "regardless of the score of the last ballgame," a 14-10 loss to Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl's national championship shootout.

This year, despite being "less dominant at some positions and a more inexperienced football team," the second-ranked Hurricanes will have another shot at the national championship when they meet Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl, the 23rd No. 1-No. 2 matchup in the 52-year history of the Associated Press poll.

Johnson and Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer go back to the 1960s at the University of Arkansas where Switzer was an assistant coach from 1962-65 and Johnson played from 1962-64. They later served on the Oklahoma staff together (1970-72). They spent a good chunk of Wednesday praising each other's teams at an Orange Bowl news conference.

"Our families spent summers together on Galveston Bay and we had a lot of good times," Switzer said.

Johnson remembers those days, but needed Switzer that "when I see Barry now, the good times that flash back are 1985 and 1986," when Miami handed Oklahoma its only two setbacks in the last 35 games.

"A lot of things have been said that the only way to beat Oklahoma is to throw the football," said Johnson, whose team rushed 441 times this season but still threw 336 passes despite the departure of Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde.

"More than anything else, what we do is a little bit different from what Oklahoma sees year in and year out in the Big Eight Conference. But performers like Testaverde, Alonzo Highsmith, Jerome Brown, Dan Sileo — that's what allowed us to beat Oklahoma; not necessarily the system, but the talent that we had in the system.

"From what little I've seen of Oklahoma, they're a more talented football team this year, especially against the pass. They are very talented in the secondary, they have great defensive backs, they have more speed in the secondary, they have more experience. For those reasons, I believe it'll be more difficult to throw the football on Oklahoma."

Johnson also said he doesn't think Miami is "as dominating a football team as what we were a year ago" and called Oklahoma "as talented a team as I have ever seen, and they're that way year in and year out."

"One indication of the caliber of their football team is that when they have a quarterback that's injured — Troy Aikman two years ago — they have a player like Jamelle Holieway step right in and win the national championship. Then they have Holieway injured this year and Charles Thompson comes in and they don't miss a beat."

Switzer, somewhat the worse for wear after a late night on the town — including a disagreeable bowl of "6 a.m. chili" — was chipper enough to call Miami "a great football team."

"Our coaches have looked at a lot of film of them. I haven't because I'm a coward.

"(Quarterback) Steve (Walsh) is an excellent player. He's better than I wanted him to be. He throws the ball well. Their offensive coordinator, Gary Stevens, does a great job attacking defenses and coaching their people. They do a great job in the passing game — a three-step drop, five-step, they get rid of the ball. It's hard to blitz them.

"They're a great football team, but I think we are, too. I think we're an excellent team that can run, play defense and play offense. I think we're a better team (than last year) because of our offensive line, the strength of our team.

"Our offensive line is the All-Big Eight team. We had the center, both tackles and one guard make first-team All-Big Eight. I don't think there's a player in the Big Eight who could start for us over the people we've got playing.

"Defensively, we're without the Boz (All-American linebacker Brian Bosworth), but that's probably the only difference in our team from a year ago. They're the same defensive team with seven or eight starters returning. We're just a year older, a little better."

Lady Pirates Host Tough Opponents In Next Three

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, fresh off a second-place finish to nationally-ranked Vanderbilt in their own Lady Pirate Classic, return to the basketball court tonight hosting Georgia Southern. Tipoff is at 7:30 p.m.

The game is the first of three straight home appearances against strong competition. Next up is a Saturday date with highly-regarded Duke, followed by a visit by a strong Howard University team on Tuesday.

"The next three are all toughies," Coach Pat Pierson said.

Georgia Southern brings in a 2-1 record, having defeated Augusta and Florida. Its only loss came at the hands of Southern Mississippi.

Duke, which plays here Saturday at 6:30 p.m. as part of a twinbill with the Pirate men, is 4-0 with a game tonight against East Tennessee State in Durham.

Howard is 4-2, having beaten U.S. International and Miami of Ohio to win the Lady Diamond Athletic Classic this past weekend. One of their losses was an 11-point one to Duke in Durham, but the Lady Bison followed that up with a 61-60 victory over N.C. State in Raleigh.

"Georgia Southern was 20-8 last year and won the New South Conference title. They return all five of their starters from last year's team, including a true all-American candidate in Phyllette Blake," Pierson said.

Blake, a 6-0 junior forward, is averaging 13 points and seven rebounds a game on a team that features balanced scoring. Sharon Thomas, a 6-0 senior, plays the other forward spot and averaged 13.7 points a game, while 5-11 senior Regina Days is the center, hitting 12.3 per game. The guards are 5-5 senior Antonette Brown, scoring 12.3 per game, and 5-7 senior Christa Couch, hitting at a 3.3 pace.

East Carolina played in the Georgia Southern Invitational last year, but did not face the Lady Eagles. This will be the first meeting between the two.

Duke is led by 6-0 junior guard Katie Meier, scoring 25.3 points a game. Meanwhile, 6-1 senior forward Chris Moreland, hitting is 22.0 points a game and pulling 11.5 rebounds. Front-court mate Sue Harnett, a 6-4 sophomore center, hits 14.8 points a game and drags 10.3 rebounds.

Rounding out the starters are 5-11 senior forward

Paula Anderson (9.8 ppg) and 5-3 sophomore guard Leigh Morgan (5.0 ppg).

The Pirates lead the series with Duke, 9-2, with the Blue Devils winning last year in Durham, 84-70.

Howard, which is tied with ECU in its series, each winning one game, visits Minges on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Vanessa Graham, a 5-7 senior guard, is the top scorer for the Bison with a 15.2 average. Close behind is 6-2 senior forward Darlene Beale at 15.0. She's also pulling 17.3 rebounds a game. No other starters are in double figures.

The others include 6-0 junior forward Lisa Lewis (5.7 ppg), 6-4 freshman center Marlene Henderson (4.3 ppg), and 5-5 junior guard Yolanda Lockamy (3.1 ppg).

Howard was to face American, Maryland and James Madison prior to coming to Greenville.

"I feel positive about our team," Pierson said. "We're getting better with every game. We've got to get our guards to contribute more. Chris (O'Connor) and Pam (Williams) are good shooters and Irish (Hamilton) is a streak shooter. But they've got to look for their shots and take them. Teams are going to see how strong we are on the inside and collapse on them, so we need that outside shooting to take the pressure off them."

Despite poor shooting nights by Alma Bethea and Monique Pompili in the Lady Pirate Classic, Pierson feels that they will come around. "You can't dwell on what is past. You have to forget it and move forward. We've had lots of shooting drills this week and they are getting better.

"But at the same time, I'm so pleased with the play of Gretta Savage. She gives us more power inside and she gained a lot of confidence from her play in the Classic," Pierson said.

She added that playing against top 20 teams as the Pirates have already done with Kentucky and Vanderbilt, and staying close, has to help the team. "They just need to believe in themselves, because I believe in them."

Savage is the leading scorer for ECU with a 17.5 mark. Bethea is hitting 15.3 and Pompili, 12.3. Bethea and Pompili are both averaging 9.0 rebounds a game.

Ueberroth Hasn't Decided On Seeking Second Term

DALLAS (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, who says he's had trouble with club owners because he's not afraid to make unpopular decisions, still hasn't decided whether to seek another five-year term.

Ueberroth, the former Los Angeles Olympics chief whose term expires Dec. 31, 1989, acknowledged Wednesday that he'd probably have difficulty getting enough votes to be re-elected.

"I've said that every year ... that I don't have enough support," Ueberroth told reporters at baseball's winter meetings.

Ueberroth was quoted Wednesday in The Dallas Morning News as saying, "if I needed to get re-elected right now, I wouldn't be able to put that together. Let's say I couldn't get double-digit votes."

Ueberroth needs the votes of 14 of the 26 owners to win re-election. He has often said he intends to be a one-term commissioner, but he has never publicly ruled out seeking another term. Commissioner's terms were seven years, instead of five, until Ueberroth was elected in March 1984.

"I might not be able to get enough votes now if I had to ... but I have a vote on the matter, too," he said, adding that he would reconsider his future in baseball the closer he gets to the end of his term.

"I still have my right of choice. The owners have the right to their choices. We'll probably come to the same conclusions."

Ueberroth said chief among the reasons for his troubles with some owners is his willingness to take a stance on controversial issues, such as the umpires' strike preceding the 1984 World Series.

He sided with the umpires in their request for more money "and some of the owners still haven't forgiven me," he said.

"I've made more decisions — good, bad and indifferent — than anyone since the first (commissioner, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis)," he said.

Ueberroth also cost some owners money by pressuring them into remaining in their cities — he opposes the relocation of teams.

"Obviously they could have gotten a lot more money if they were able to move. I'm not going to have moving vans rolling up in the middle of the night," he told the Morning News, a reference to the NFL Baltimore Colts' late-night move to Indianapolis.

Ueberroth didn't discuss his own status during a half-hour news conference with NL President Bart Giamatti and AL President Bobby Brown following a joint meeting of the American and National leagues Wednesday.

He hasn't held an individual news conference in 18 months and reporters had to chase him down a hotel corridor to question him about his future.

Criticism that he was using the commissioner's office to boost his political future led to his cutback in interviews, Ueberroth said. He has long been rumored as a possible candidate for the U.S. Senate from California.

"Some people say I'm too accessible. Some say I'm not accessible enough," Ueberroth said. "I think I'm independent and that's the way I want to stay."

That independence has led to problems with owners whose primary interest is their own teams or their own leagues. "The job has to be that way," he said.

"You are out in the role of making decisions between two teams, two leagues or two something else."

At one point, Ueberroth declined to answer a question, saying he didn't want to be in the position of "speaking for the owners. ... God forbid I do that."

No Way Out

Krzyzewski Lauds Defense After Win; Cavaliers Roll

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Despite the big score posted by 10th-ranked Duke, it was defense that drew the post-game praise.

"I thought it was one of our best games of the season," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski after the 105-71 basketball victory over Davidson. "We played good defense and I thought we played hard."

"This basically boiled down to us not getting any shots," said Davidson Coach Bobby Hussey, who saw his team give up more than 100 points for the first time in his seven years there. "Against a team like Duke and the kind of defense they play, you're not going to get a lot of set plays out of your offense."

Alaa Abdalnaby scored 19 points, including 13 free throws, to lead Duke's charge Wednesday night. He missed only one free throw as the Blue Devils raced to their fourth victory without a loss.

Davidson, which shot 28 percent and committed 17 turnovers in the first half, fell to 2-2.

Kevin Strickland and John Smith scored 18 points apiece for the Blue Devils, who led 54-24 at the half. Freshman Greg Koubek came off the bench to score 13 points and lead Duke with eight rebounds. Danny Ferry scored 12 points and handed out five assists.

Davidson was led by Maurice Gray, with 17 points, while Jeff Himes had 15. Jay Schmitt and Edward Gaines scored 10 points apiece for the Wildcats.

"We did some things defensively that kept Rucker and Himes from getting started and they had to go to other things that aren't as productive for them," Krzyzewski said.

Davidson ended with 30 turnovers and 42.1 percent field-goal shooting.

Virginia.....69 Dayton.....50

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Freshman guard John Crotty scored 16 points and senior John Johnson added 14 to lead Virginia's Cavaliers to a 69-50 basketball victory over Dayton's Flyers on Wednesday night.

Bill Batts and Richard Morgan each added 10 points as Virginia, 4-1, recorded its 1,000th intercollegiate basketball triumph. The win also was the 275th for Terry Holland in his 14-year tenure as the Cavaliers' coach.

Dayton, 3-1, got 12 points for Negele Knight and 10 points apiece from Troy McCracken and Anthony Corbett.

Crotty and Johnson combined for 23 first-half points as Virginia built a 39-22 intermission advantage.

The Cavaliers used an early 9-0 run to open an 11-3 lead on Crotty's driving layup with 15:20 remaining in the first half.

Leading 19-14 with just under nine minutes left in the half, Virginia outscored Dayton 14-4 over a six-minute span to boost the lead to 33-18 on a Morgan jumper at the 3:00 mark.

Dayton had the ball with 30 seconds left before intermission and a chance to pull within 11 when the Flyers' Ray Springer was whistled for an intentional foul away from the ball.

Crotty sank both free throws, and Johnson hit a layup with six seconds left to move the Cavalier advantage to 17 points at halftime.

Virginia then scored the first seven points of the second half to extend its advantage to 46-22. Dayton came no closer than 15 points thereafter.

Pitt Rolls Past Roanoke-Chowan

WINTERVILLE — Jeffrey Crudup scored 28 points to lead Pitt Community College to a 92-77 win over Roanoke-Chowan Technical College Wednesday night in junior college basketball action.

Pitt forged out to a 39-36 halftime lead gradually extended its lead with 54-44 with 13:33 left in the game.

Roanoke-Chowan rallied to five with 11:44 to go at 58-53, but that was as close as the score would get.

Pitt improves to 3-8 and returns to action Monday at home against Craven Community College in a Region X game.

Jesse Pratt added 18 points, Ricky Congleton 16 and Mike Hathaway 11 for Pitt.

"I was pleased with Jeffrey Crudup's play along with Pratt and Hathaway's," said PCC coach Charles Coburn. "But the two things that concern me are the free throws (11-21) and our 21 turnovers."

Sam Windley scored 32 points to lead Roanoke-Chowan.

Panthers Capture Openers

WILLIAMSTON — North Pitt High School swept its opening basketball games of the year Wednesday night, defeating hosting Williamston.

The Panthers took a 61-49 victory in the boys' game and came away with a 45-34 decision in the girls' contest.

North Pitt moved out into an 18-13 lead in the first quarter of the game. The Panthers again outthit the Tigers, 12-11, to take a 30-24 lead into intermission.

In the third quarter, the Panthers continued to pull away, building their lead to 48-37. They finished off Williamston, 13-12, in the last quarter.

"The key to the victory was the job on the boards by William Morning, Clayton Cherry and Rufus Bynum," Coach Cobby Deans said.

Billy Hardison led North Pitt with 17 points while Morning added 12. Felix Purvis and Frank Clifford each had 12 for Williamston while Vincent Speller had 11.

North Pitt's girls streaked out to a 14-5 lead in the first period and were never in trouble after that. They ran the lead to 23-9 at intermission and sailed through the third period to a 39-17 advantage.

Keisha Pilgreen and Gwen

Pilgreen each scored 14 points for North Pitt. Kim Hawkins led Williamston with 13.

The Tigers drop to 1-4 with the loss. North Pitt travels to Conley on Friday, while Williamston entertains Bertie.

Petition Asks For Apology To Crum

GREENSBORO (AP) — Faculty members at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are circulating a petition that calls for an apology to former head football coach Dick Crum and an investigation of events surrounding Crum's resignation.

The petition, which was started by math professors William Smith and Jon Tolle, is expected to be presented Friday at a meeting of the university's faculty council, along with other resolutions pertaining to Crum's ouster.

"There is a flurry of activity taking place on campus," said Smith, a math professor at the university for 23 years. "We may not know until Friday what some of these resolutions might be."

The petition calls for an investigation into any involvement of the Educational Foundation, better known as the Rams Club, into the administrative affairs of the university. It also calls for a review of the financial operations of the athletic department and the department's connections with the Educational Foundation.

Crum resigned last week after agreeing to an $800,000 buyout of the remaining four years of a 10-year contract he signed in 1982.

In 10 seasons as the Tar Heel coach, Crum had compiled a record of 72-41-3, making him the university's winningest football coach ever. But Crum had only one winning season in the last four, including a 5-6 showing this year.

Crum told the Greensboro News & Record Wednesday he appreciated the faculty's concern.

"But I don't know that the faculty has any reason to apologize to me," said Crum, who recently returned to Chapel Hill after several days at Nags Head with his wife.

"By the same token, I think they are concerned about the situation and that is why they are looking at it."

Asked whether his departure was mishandled, he said, "I don't think anyone is pleased with the way things turned out, (including) the folks in the athletic department."

Faculty members agreed.

"Minimally, all we can do for Mr. Crum is give him an apology or statement of regret," Smith said.

Tolle said he was surprised by the way people were responding, adding that 25 of about 35 people in his department signed the document.

"I've been here 20 years and I've never seen the unanimity of feeling about an issue among this faculty," Tolle said. "I don't know of any issue that you could find agreement among 25 members of our department."

Tolle said the petition is still being circulated. He did not know how many faculty members had signed it.

He described Crum's resignation as "a final straw."

"The feeling has been growing over the past few years that athletics is getting out of hand on this campus. This was an issue that people rallied around," he said.

George Kennedy, chairman of the UNC-CH faculty, said he is unsure what might be decided at Friday's meeting.

"I think the faculty wants to take some kind of action," Kennedy said. "I don't know that there is any one thing that is appropriate at this moment, but an (investigative) committee is one of the possibilities."

Meanwhile, athletic director John Swofford has sent out telegrams to many of the top high school football players UNC is recruiting, but some say Crum's resignation has forced them to look elsewhere.

"They were in my top three most of this year, but not right now," said J.R. Boldin, a linebacker from Hillsborough Orange. "They could get back in, depending on who they get as head coach."

"I hate Coach Crum left," Boldin told The Charlotte Observer. "I really like him. When I visited them, he talked to me more than just about any head coach I've been around."

"Right now, it's just wait and see," said Shrine Bowl member Antonio Rivers, a lineman from West Charlotte. "You want to say there's time, but if they take too much time.... I think almost everybody is waiting to see who they get as coach."

Chargers Hold Off N. Lenoir

LAGRANGE — Ayden-Grifton, still not on its feet from the conclusion of football season, held off North Lenoir to take a 68-66 basketball victory Wednesday night in its first game of the season.

North Lenoir's girls gained a 48-43 win over the Lady Chargers.

With many of the top players still on their football legs, the Chargers pushed out to a 15-9 lead in the first period. North Lenoir rallied, however, outscoring Ayden-Grifton, 17-10, in the second quarter to slip into a 26-25 halftime lead.

North Lenoir inched further out in the third quarter, 21-19, to lead by a 47-44 margin. But Ayden-Grifton rallied in the final period, took the lead, then held off North Lenoir, 24-19, to take the win.

Ronnell Peterson led the Chargers with 22 points while Eric Blount added 17. North Lenoir's effort was led by Will Sutton with 15. Norwood Kittrell with 13, Robert Abram with 11 and Dave Hinson with 10.

North Lenoir's girls jumped out to a 15-7 lead in the first period and held off Ayden-Grifton the rest of the way. Both teams scored 11 in the second quarter, leaving North Lenoir up, 26-18, at the half.

In the third period, Ayden-Grifton outthit the Lady Hawks, 11-4, but still trailed 30-29. North Lenoir then outthit the Chargers, 18-14, in the final quarter to pull out the win.

Tisha Bouie led the Hawks with 16 points while Bashita Kittrell added 12. Alice Brown had 12 to lead Ayden-Grifton.

The Chargers play travel to Washington on Friday.

Group Votes For '91 Race

NEW YORK (AP) — Maneuvering on land is becoming as intricate as the maneuvering on the water during America's Cup races.

In the wake of New Zealand's effort to force a race next year or in 1989 using much larger boats than the 12-meter craft used in America's Cup races, the International 12-Meter Association is trying to keep the U.S. defense as scheduled in 1991.

The association voted without dissent Wednesday to continue plans for a 12-meter America's Cup race in 1991, despite a court order that would allow New Zealand to challenge with a much larger boat.

Gianfranco Alberini, chairman of the 32-member association, said the vote was 28-0 with three nations absent and New Zealand abstaining.

"We have invited the two parties, New Zealand and the United States, to sit down and discuss that there might be a solution they could agree upon for 1991," Alberini said.

Meanwhile, New Zealander Michael Fay was expected to renew his offer to race in 1989 at a news conference today. He was to be accompanied by members of syndicates from five other countries that would like to challenge in 1991, including Australian Alan Bond.

The New York Yacht club lost the America's Cup to Bond in 1983 in Newport, R.I. Dennis Conner, racing for the San Diego Yacht Club, won it back from an Australian syndicate at Perth last February.

These races were held in 12-meter yachts, which are about 65-feet long and 45-feet long at the waterline, as have all other recent America's Cup races. On Nov. 25, however, Fay won an order in New York State Supreme Court allowing him to challenge next year. The order placed no restriction on the size of the boat, but Fay wants to race in a boat that is 90 feet long at the waterline.

The San Diego Yacht Club, which planned to defend the Cup in 1991, reluctantly accepted the court order and agreed to meet Fay's challenge in 1988 in a three-race series.

Herd Draws Well, But Must Go On Road

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Marshall has "probably been the best site we've had" in the NCAA Division I-AA football playoffs, an NCAA official says, but the Thundering Herd finds itself on the road for the national semifinals.

"We've been pleasantly surprised," said Dennis Poppe, the director of men's championships for the NCAA. "What impressed me was the number of people in attendance for the game Thanksgiving week. Traditionally, attendance for all games that week is down."

The Herd attracted 15,584 for its 41-12 victory over James Madison two days after Thanksgiving and 13,197 in a 51-23 victory over Weber State in 37-degree weather last week — totaling 28,781.

Appalachian State, the No. 1 seed in the playoffs, has sold only a total of 13,367 tickets in victories over Richmond (20-3) and Georgia Southern (19-0).

Poppe said Marshall's support would make the NCAA look seriously at a bid for the NCAA Division I-AA championship game in future years, but on Saturday, the Herd has to play in Boone, N.C.

"We had to respect the integrity of Appalachian State's seeding," even though Marshall's guarantees to the NCAA were better, Poppe said.

"Appalachian's financial bid was comparable to Marshall's, even though Marshall's was better. But you can't ignore that No. 1 seeding."

Hokies Upset Hoyas By 87-82

By The Associated Press Attack!
 That's what Virginia Tech felt it had to do to have any chance against 14th-ranked Georgetown. That's what the Hokies did in upsetting the Hoyas 87-82 Wednesday night.
 "We're an aggressive team, we're an attack team," Coach Frankie Allen said after his team went right after the Hoyas, handling their press and controlling the boards. "We have to come out and attack."
 Georgetown Coach John Thompson was impressed by what he saw from Virginia Tech, which forced 18 turnovers.
 "We made some runs at them," he said. "They could have cracked, but they showed a lot of intestinal fortitude."
 Wally Lancaster scored 30 points and Vernell Coles added 25 for Virginia Tech, 41.
 "One of the keys was rebounding," said Allen, who was named interim coach on Oct. 2 after Charlie Moir resigned following an NCAA investigation into academic violations. "We had to use our quickness. We had to send five people to the boards. We had to rebound with them. We couldn't let them have second shots.

 "We planned to attack their press, and we got some easy plays from that."
 "I'm very proud of our effort. When you play against someone of the caliber of Georgetown, you've got to be ready to play."
 In the only other game involving a ranked team, No. 10 Duke beat Davidson 105-71.
 Elsewhere, it was South Carolina 73, Alabama 67; Seton Hall 92, Iona 84 in overtime; St. Bonaventure 74, Niagara 67; St. John's 76, Fordham 71; Virginia 69, Dayton 50; Bradley 94, Colorado 78; Creighton 88, Nebraska 73; DePaul 94, Western Michigan 64; Arkansas 79, Mississippi 40; North Texas State 79, Texas Christian 54; Long Beach State 85, Southern California 66; and Oregon State 84, Loyola, Calif. 69.
 Duke 105, Davidson 71
 Alaa Abdelnaby hit 13 of 14 free throws for his 19 points. Kevin Strickland and John Smith added 18 points apiece for the Blue Devils, 4-0, who held Davidson to 28 percent shooting accuracy and caused 17 first-half turnovers.

Davidson finished with 30 turnovers.
 "I thought it was one of our best games of the season," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "We played good defense and I thought we played hard."
Unranked Teams
 South Carolina, 5-0, beat Alabama for the first time in eight years and is off to its best start since 1971. Freshman Brent Price came off the bench to score 19 points, including a 3-point basket with 7:41 left after the Crimson Tide pulled within a point. Alabama, 4-1, never got that close again.
 "I was a little bit nervous about the game," Price said. "It was my first time on national television (ESPN), and I knew my parents would be watching."
 St. John's, which hasn't lost to Fordham in 16 years, had to go into double overtime before putting away the Rams. Mike Porter, a transfer from San Jacinto Junior College, had 17 points and his free throw gave St. John's the lead for good with 2:32 left in the second extra period.
 Jason Williams, who also had 17 points for the Redmen, forced overtime with a short jump shot with 26 seconds remaining.
 Seton Hall, like St. John's a Big East team, also was forced into overtime by an MAAC team. John Morton scored five of his 19 points in overtime as the Pirates, 7-1, took Iona.
 Rod Strickland, DePaul's star guard, returned after poor grades forced him to miss three games. He had 21 points as the Blue Demons opened a 23-7 lead and coasted.
 Hersey Hawkins scored a career-high 44 points for Bradley, breaking the Carver Arena record he shared with former Wichita State star Xavier McDaniel, now of the Seattle SuperSonics. Hawkins got 30 points in the second half.
 Bradley's individual scoring mark is 50, set by Chet Walker in 1960.
 "What we are talking about is a lottery pick in the NBA draft," Bradley Coach Stan Albeck said of Hawkins. "This is an outstanding player."
 Another big individual scoring performance was turned in by Eric Newsome, whose 40 points were the most ever scored at Miami, Ohio's Millett Hall. The 212 points were the most ever scored in a game there.

Long Beach State surprised Southern California as Andre Purry scored 23 points and John Hatten added 22. Long Beach never trailed and made 61 percent of its shots. USC hit just 39 percent.
 Bill Sherwood and Shawn Freeman scored career highs of 26 and 20 points to lead Oregon State over Loyola Marymount. The Beavers, playing their home opener, picked apart the Lions' full-court press in the second half, using a 14-4 run to put away the game.

 North Texas State scored the first six points, had an 11-0 run later in the first half and routed Texas Christian to end a four-game losing streak. North Texas State was paced by Tony Worrell with 19 points and Ronnie Morgan with 18.
 Rod Mason scored 32 points and pulled down 10 rebounds to lead Creighton. Andrew Lang had 16 points and blocked six shots as Arkansas defeated Mississippi. Patrick Allen got 16 points and Richard McCormick added 15 to lead St. Bonaventure past Niagara.

 Freshman John Crotty scored 16 points and senior John Johnson added 14 for Virginia, which won its 1,000th basketball game.

Hennings Is Outland Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — Chad Hennings of the Air Force Academy, winner of the 1987 Outland Trophy as the nation's top interior lineman, is about to head for the wild blue yonder. He just doesn't know if it will be in the air or on the ground.
 Like running back Napoleon McCallum and basketball star David Robinson of the Naval Academy in recent years, Hennings aspires to a professional career, which would require permission from the Secretary of the Air Force. Robinson's postgraduate commitment was cut from five to two years of active duty because of his 7-foot-1 height.
 "I do realize that I have a commitment to my government, and I fully intend to serve that commitment," Hennings, a 6-6, 260-pound defensive tackle from Elberon, Iowa, said. "But I'm also looking into any possibility that there may be to play professional football."
 Hennings won the Outland Trophy over fellow senior defensive linemen Michael Dean Perry of Clemson and Daniel Stubbs of Miami, Fla.
 If an NFL future isn't realistic, Hennings has other possibilities — "To pursue my graduate studies in finance and management and get my MBA, or to go to pilot training."
 "I'm two inches over the maximum waiverable height (for a pilot), but I've achieved a waiver. My commitment is five years if I choose not to fly, eight years if I do fly."
 "The way I view the situation as far as professional football, at my position, I don't feel I can come back after five years, maintain my weight, maintain the skills and technique that I'd have to have. I'd probably have to play within a year or two after I graduate."

 Gil Brandt, vice president of player personnel for the Dallas Cowboys, rates Hennings the best service academy lineman since former Cowboy Larry Cole, who played at Air Force in 1965 before transferring to the University of Hawaii.
 "If Hennings can run 4.85 or 4.9 (in the 40-yard dash), he'd probably be a second-round choice," Brandt said.
 "He's a very talented college football player and the way they work and study around the clock, there's a lot of room for additional weight. He can easily increase to 280."

Seton Hall, like St. John's a Big East team, also was forced into overtime by an MAAC team. John Morton scored five of his 19 points in overtime as the Pirates, 7-1, took Iona.
 Rod Strickland, DePaul's star guard, returned after poor grades forced him to miss three games. He had 21 points as the Blue Demons opened a 23-7 lead and coasted.
 Hersey Hawkins scored a career-high 44 points for Bradley, breaking the Carver Arena record he shared with former Wichita State star Xavier McDaniel, now of the Seattle SuperSonics. Hawkins got 30 points in the second half.

Nuggets Snap Garden Win Streak

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Denver Nuggets had a rocky mountain high in Boston Garden.

"This might sound dumb, but I don't think another team would have beaten them tonight," Coach Doug Moe said after the Nuggets defeated Boston to snap the Celtics' 34-game regular-season winning streak at the Garden.

The 124-119 victory Wednesday night enabled the Nuggets to join the Los Angeles Lakers and Portland Trail Blazers as the only teams to win there in 84 games since the start of the 1985-86 season.

The Nuggets fell behind 39-29 after one quarter, then held the Celtics to 14 points in the second period. Ball-hawking 5-foot-10 guard Michael Adams, who scored a career-high 31 points, also had five steals and no turnovers for Denver.

"We are very aggressive on defense," Adams said. "That's what won it for us. This is a great boost for our team. The Celtics are the Celtics. They come back at you no matter how tired they are. They are a team you have to beat."

In addition to Adams' big production, Alex English had 27 points and Lafayette Lever added 18 points, 11 rebounds and 13 assists, his fifth triple-double of the season.

Larry Bird scored 18 of his 40 points in the last 10 minutes as Boston rallied from a 108-96 deficit to make the game close until the end.

In other NBA games, it was Philadelphia 94, Portland 86; Washington 120, the Lakers 112 in overtime; Dallas 125, Sacramento 98; Phoenix 117, Atlanta 105, and Golden State 113, Cleveland 112.

Denver's last previous victory in Boston came in 1979.

"This is a big thrill," Moe said. "We might not win here again for eight years. When you beat Boston here you gain a big advantage."

The Nuggets' strong defensive second quarter gave them a 54-53 lead at halftime, and they made it 90-78 at the three-quarter mark before withstanding Boston's rally led by Bird.

"We lost the game on steals," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "They got all the loose balls and the offensive boards. They were really motivated. We came back and had a chance, but we continued to make mistakes."

"Adams tore us apart with the steal. He turned the momentum around. We weren't as alert as they were and we didn't muscle back."

Bullets 120, Lakers 112

Defending champion Los Angeles continued to slide, losing to Washington for its sixth loss in nine games following an 8-0 start.

Jeff Malone scored 29 points and Moses Malone scored six of his 26 in overtime as the Bullets snapped a four-game losing streak.

A basket by Moses Malone early in the extra period gave the Bullets the lead for good at 110-108.

The Lakers, who rallied from a 99-90 deficit in the final 5½ minutes to force the overtime, got 30 points from Magic Johnson, 25 from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and 20 from James Worthy.

76ers 94, Trail Blazers 86

Philadelphia, with frontcourt starters Tim McCormick and Roy Hinson still sidelined by injuries, got 38 points and 24 rebounds from Charles Barkley and outscored Portland 31-15 in the fourth quarter.

Trailing 71-63 at the start of the fourth period, the 76ers scored the first 11 points and kept the Trail Blazers scoreless for 3½ minutes.

Portland, playing without Steve Johnson and Kiki Vandeweghe, tied the score 82-82 on a jump shot by Maurice Lucas with 5:15 to go, but Cliff Robinson's basket with 3:03 remaining gave the 76ers an 86-82 advantage. Robinson scored 11 of his 13 points in the final period.

Clyde Drexler had 24 points and Jerome Kersey 20 for the Trail Blazers, who lost their second game in two nights after winning nine straight.

Mavericks 125, Kings 98

Dallas scored the first 17 points of the game, but still needed a 28-4 run in the third period to beat Sacramento.

Rolando Blackman had eight of his 25 points during the game-opening blitz in which Dallas hit eight of its first 11 shots, while Sacramento, which has lost six consecutive games, missed its first eight attempts and went scoreless in the first 6:03.

Sacramento clipped a 59-49 halftime deficit to six early in the third quarter before Dallas put the game out of reach with its 28-4 run, stretching its lead to 89-61. Mark Aguirre scored nine of his 28 points during that spurt.

Suns 117, Hawks 105

Phoenix snapped Atlanta's five-game winning streak as James Edwards had 23 points and 14 rebounds and Alvan Adams scored 10 of his 18 points in the fourth quarter.

The Suns outscored the Hawks 42-31 in the fourth period after Jeff Hornacek gave Phoenix a 75-74 lead on a 3-point goal with three seconds left in the third quarter.

Adams scored six points in a 1:43 span to make it 101-89 with 4:05 remaining, and Edwards added six more for a 107-96 bulge with 2:16 left.

Warriors 113, Cavaliers 112

Golden State won for only the third time in 16 games when Sleepy Floyd, who missed two free throws with 19 seconds left, made a 15-foot jumper with one second remaining to beat Cleveland.

Mark Price, who scored a season-high 23 points, gave the Cavaliers a 112-111 advantage with a 20-foot jumper with seven seconds remaining.

Jackson Expects 'Rowdy Welcome'

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Bo Jackson vowed a long time ago he would never be caught from behind on a football field. And he's been true to his word.

But his world-class speed doesn't do him a bit of good when it comes to contending with traffic in Southern California.

"After my junior year in college I made a promise to myself I wouldn't be caught from behind," Jackson said. He recalled that, while still at Auburn, he had been run down by Jerry Gray, a defensive back who played for Texas and is now a member of the Los Angeles Rams.

Actually, it wasn't as simple as that. Jackson had a sprained ankle that day — "I had no business playing," he says now — but it prompted the vow.

Now a running back for the Los Angeles Raiders and an outfielder for the Kansas City Royals, Jackson said he expects "a rowdy welcome" from Kansas City fans on Sunday when the Raiders play the Chiefs at Arrowhead Stadium.

"I'm just going back there to play football, football this time," Jackson said. "I expect a big welcome, a rowdy welcome. I know it's going to be crowded."

Arrowhead Stadium is located in the same complex as Royals Stadium, where the baseball team plays. A crowd of more than 65,000 is expected Sunday, which would nearly double what the Chiefs drew in their last home game.

"I've never been in the (football) stadium," Jackson said. "They say it's nice. If it's anything like the baseball field, it's nice."

Jackson spoke to reporters at Raiders headquarters on Wednesday, and used the occasion to discuss a variety of topics — his feelings on living in the Los Angeles area, on being drafted by a professional basketball team, and playing in the same backfield with Marcus Allen.

As for Los Angeles, "It's too crowded for me," Jackson said. "I hate the traffic. I'm five minutes from the supermarket and it takes me an hour to get there." Jackson lives in the Los Angeles suburb of Redondo Beach.

He seemed amused that the Southern California franchise in the fledgling International Basketball Association selected him in the league's first draft.

"I don't know how to play, but if they want to talk money, I'll listen," Jackson said with a smile. "That's why I got these new sneakers."

Jackson was picked in the 13th round of Tuesday's draft. The IBA, restricted to players 6-foot-4 and under, has 10 franchises throughout the United States and Canada.

When Jackson signed with the Raiders last summer, he mentioned football as "an off-season hobby." So far, he has been much more successful in pro football than in major-league baseball.

He said he didn't expect to be affected by the Kansas City fans, who threw footballs at him when he signed with the Raiders.

"I turn a knob and tune them out," he said. "I think every player on the field has to have tunnel vision."

Jackson won the Heisman Trophy at Auburn two years ago and was the first player selected in the NFL draft the following spring, picked by Tampa Bay. He also was drafted by the Royals and stunned the football world by signing a baseball contract.

After playing briefly with the Royals toward the end of the 1986 season, he began 1987 as their starting left fielder. He showed early promise — he hit three home runs and drove in seven runs in one game — but finished as a part-time player with a .235 batting average, 22 home runs, 53 runs batted in and 158 strikeouts in 396 at-bats.

The Raiders drafted him in the seventh round last spring, and signed him in July.

Jackson and Allen, another Heisman Trophy winner, have worked well together in the Raiders backfield.

"Marcus and I are like Mut and Jeff," Jackson said. "Since he moved to fullback, we do a whole lot of communicating."

In six games with the Raiders,

Jackson is averaging 7.1 yards a carry — 553 yards on 78 attempts. He also has caught 15 passes for 132 yards and scored six touchdowns, all in his last three games.

On Nov. 30 at Seattle, he celebrated his 25th birthday by setting a club rushing record of 221 yards on 18 carries.

Jackson admitted he didn't expect to do so well so quickly.

"I came here knowing what was expected of me," he said. "I didn't think the impact would be as big as it's been. I've enjoyed it. I just came here to contribute. I didn't expect this."

Another thing he has enjoyed is quieting his critics.

"I get just as much fun out of making people liars as I do going out on the field playing," he said. "The pleasure I get ... coming here, establishing myself in football and hearing people say, 'I can't believe that.'

"I'm going to continue to make liars out of people who doubt me until they close that coffin. You can only be young once and I'm going to have all the fun I can."

The Raiders, 5-7, have won their last two games, thanks in large part to Jackson's efforts. Before that, Los Angeles lost seven in a row, its longest losing streak in 25 years. The Chiefs, meanwhile, are 2-10.

"I think Bo will just be Bo and play (against the Chiefs) like he's played," Raiders Coach Tom Flores said. "He's a tremendous competitor. He's undertaken the challenge to play two sports and he's doing it very well."

Fulcher's Run Is On Schedule

HIGH POINT (AP) — Sarah Fulcher has run into the record books, again.

The 25-year-old from High Point broke the standing record for the longest continuous run by a woman when she passed through Battle Creek, Mich., last week during her 10,610 mile Run-Around-America.

The previous mark was set by Kanchan Beryl Stott of Ottawa, Ontario, when she ran 3,824 miles across Canada.

"Everything is going great," Ms. Fulcher said in a telephone interview from the 3,900.8-mile mark in Bryan, Ohio. "We're right on schedule."

Ms. Fulcher started the trek around the perimeter of the country July 21 in Laguna Hills, Calif., and has averaged 32 miles a day. The estimated finish date is sometime in May 1988.

"Time goes by so fast," she said. "It doesn't seem like I've been on the road for four months. I met Tony the Tiger; it was real exciting. It's so much different than Australia."

Ms. Fulcher earned a place in the Guinness Book of World Records last year for her 2,727-mile run across Australia. She raised about $51,000 for world hunger then. This time, she's running to encourage participation in physical fitness and to generate funds for the United States Fitness Academy.

The $50 million academy to be built in Laguna Hills, Calif., will serve as a national training and resource center for physical fitness professionals and volunteers.

Ms. Fulcher is taking time out from the run to visit schools and colleges and talk about the importance of physical fitness.

"I do a couple of appearances a week," she said. "I give a little speech and tell them about the run. That's a lot of fun — what I really enjoy."

"I'm learning so much about schools and the fitness of kids," she said. "Every state has its own personality."

Nelson Hopes To Be Back

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Karl Nelson arrived at the outpatient center at Sloan-Kettering Hospital in New York City on time for his 9:30 a.m. appointment.

Two minutes later, the New York Giants lineman's name was called and he walked into a room for a dose of radiation, something he has done five days a week for the past two months.

This 35-second dose of 180 rads was different, though. This was the last one Nelson was scheduled to receive in his battle against Hodgkin's disease, and already he is looking forward to playing next season.

"It's done," Nelson said with little apparent emotion. "I don't have to do it anymore. It's something to be happy about. But I still have to go back for checkups. It's not like it's my last time there."

Nelson will be making a trip to New York City every three months for a chest X-ray to make sure there is no sign of cancer.

If there isn't, Nelson has other plans, such as returning for the 1988 season.

"Oh yeah, I'll be playing next year," he said. "I have to think that way, and I truly believe I'll be playing."

Nelson had the same thoughts this year upon returning to training camp for the post-Super Bowl season. He was an integral part of an offense that chewed up opponents in 1986 and made the Giants world champions.

However, Nelson wasn't on the field when the 1987 season opened. After being bothered by a shoulder problem in training camp, he went for X-rays and the cancer was detected.

His name instantly became a headline. His privacy was interrupted and playing football was no longer his biggest concern.

"The doctors told me as soon as I had the cancer I had a 95 percent recovery rate," he said. "I never looked back after they told me that. I just figured I'll have to do what I have to do to get ready and I'll be back."

The process of getting back involved daily radiation treatments. The first month, he received 20 doses of radiation to his chest, neck and the area underneath his armpits. Three treatments of radiation directly on the mass in his chest followed and that was followed by 20 more on his stomach area.

There were side effects. Nelson said he always felt as if he'd just smoked 20 cigars after the treatments on his chest, while the ones on his stomach sometimes made him nauseous.

Nelson, who has lost 18 pounds while undergoing treatment, said doctors have told him it will take about six weeks for the effects of the radiation to get out of his system.

Nelson plans to undergo arthroscopic surgery in January to remove bone chips from his shoulder and intends to be ready for an off-season training program in March.

"I have been thinking about it," he said. "It's not going to be easy. Nobody said it would be. Just getting ready normally is not an easy job so I am just going to have to do everything I can."

Nelson said his thinking about life has changed a little in recent months.

"It put things in perspective a little more," Nelson said. "Football is still going to be a big part of my life, but it's not going to be everything. During the season, football was No. 1 and family was No. 2, and sometimes there was a pretty big gap in between. I don't think I'm going to let that happen."

The two-point conversion was introduced to college football during the 1958 season.

Report Says Special Classes For Disabled Should Be Abolished

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Education for the handicapped is "segregated and second class," says a scathing report on special education that urges an end to separate classrooms for the disabled.

Special education has been beneficial in opening school doors to the handicapped since the federal Education for All Handicapped Children Act of 1975, says the 28-page report in the Harvard Educational Review.

But it argues that the system is seriously flawed because of the prevalent practice of putting even mildly handicapped youngsters into segregated classes for most or all of each school day despite evidence that such "help" actually hurts.

In most schools, the article said, the handicapped are "separated from other students, exposed to a watered-down curriculum, excused from standards and tests routinely applied to other students, allowed grades that they have not earned, and in some states, permitted special diplomas."

The article was co-written by two former top administrators of New York City, whose handicapped students are among the nation's most isolated.

The authors, Alan Gartner and Dorothy Kerzner Lipsky, who now teach at the Graduate School and University Center of the City University of New York, said that school reformers have largely ignored the problems of special education.

The low expectations educators have for the handicapped are an extension of society's condescending attitudes toward the disabled, said the article.

It said school officials tend to "devalue" and "denigrate" the views of parents even though federal law requires that parents be involved in assessing and placing students with handicaps.

And it said that because of the system's flaws, less than 2 percent of special education students ever return full time to general education.

A five-part series in October by The Associated Press on special education based on visits to 102 schools in 15 states reached similar conclusions. It called special education "a system riddled by confusion, inequity and checkered results largely overlooked by all the reports that have called for education reform over the last five years."

The Harvard Review article proposes replacing the prevailing special education model, where a majority of even mildly handicapped youngsters spend all or part of their day in separate classrooms, with a "unitary system" in which classroom life would be radically altered to accommodate children with all sorts of problems and ability levels.

Some school districts are already moving in that direction, according to the report. About 60 schools, for example, are using the Adaptive Learning Environments Model, which breaks classrooms down into work stations in which handicapped and non-handicapped children alike can work at their own pace and get individual help.

And schools in 20 San Francisco Bay area districts are keeping children with severe handicaps in regular school buildings, providing them a realistic "life skills curriculum" and the chance to join regular education students in all non-academic activities.

While handicapped youngsters are far better off under special education than they were a generation ago when many got no schooling, integration of the handicapped into regular classroom life remains an unfulfilled dream.

Citing a recent analysis of Pittsburgh's schools, the report said that although many handicapped students were in regular school buildings, "over 90 percent of the mildly handicapped elementary students ... were never assigned to regular education academic classes."

The critique of special education goes beyond a report a year ago by Madeleine Will, assistant secretary of education in charge of handicapped programs, that set off a storm by questioning the practice of segregating mild and moderately handicapped students.

Gartner, in an interview, praised Will's report, but said it nonetheless "falls short" because it failed to press for the integration of all handicapped pupils into regular classrooms, including the severely disabled.

"What Dr. Lipsky and I are challenging is the assumption of the dual system, the assumption that children are different one from the other," he said.

Town Gets Apology

VIDALIA, La. (AP) — This city got the apology it wanted from a New York-based investment firm that was using a television advertisement that made Vidalia look like a rundown backwoods town, says Mayor Sam Randazzo.

Randazzo said Wednesday that spokesmen for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. apologized for the TV spot, which aired in New York, Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.

"They didn't think how it was going to affect Vidalia," the mayor said. "The image of Vidalia was wrong. They showed the wrong city. It was a city that was old ... we don't have any dirt streets," Randazzo said. "They were very apologetic and I'm sure they will correct it."

The New York firm helped developer Catalyst Energy Corp. finance the hydroelectric power plant being constructed in Vidalia. The advertisement touts Drexel's use of high-yield, high-risk "junk bonds," and used the plant as an example of how the company will help the economy of Vidalia, which has a population of 6,000.

The ad, however, was filmed near Fort Smith, Ark., 300 miles northeast of Vidalia.

Randazzo said "there was no malice intended" in the commercial, created by Chiat-Day Inc. of Los Angeles.

CHEVY ROLLS BACK TRUCK PRICES.

Full-size pickups, S-10 pickups, S-10 Blazers, all across the line. Equipped with popular options, some of our most popular Chevy trucks are now priced up to $1,595* less this year than last year!

Almost all trucks now offer you "savings." But Chevy gives you real savings where you want to see them most—in the bottom-line price of your new 1988 truck.

Lower 1988 prices that can mean a lower down payment for you. Lower 1988 prices that can mean lower monthly payments for you.

How we did it. Every 1988 Chevy S-10 pickup (except EL models), S-10 Blazer and full-size Chevy pickup is available with new 1988 option packages.

New packages with option savings so big, you'll find our most popular 1988 Chevy trucks, equipped with your kind of options, are now actually priced less than their 1987 equivalents. As much as $1,595 less!*

And we're not talking just one or two models. We're talking about the new Chevy truck you want now. A quality-built Chevy with 6-year/60,000-mile powertrain warranty and 6 years or 100,000 miles of body-rust-through protection.

Bottom line: your kind of truck, your kind of price. Not a stripped truck, not options you don't want. But your kind of Chevy with your kind of options, from moderate to fully loaded—for less than last year. And that includes models of our 1988 full-size pickup, the first all-new full-size pickup introduced in this decade!

See your Chevy dealer now. For the truck you want, equipped with the options you want. And priced less for 1988.

Singer Otis Redding's Work Lives On After His Death

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty years after legendary rhythm and blues artist Otis Redding died, his biggest hit, "Sittin' on the Dock of the Bay," still whistles through the airwaves.

Redding recorded the song slightly more pop than his usual soulful style on Dec. 7, 1967, three days before he died at age 26. Stax Records released it after his death and it became his first No. 1 hit on pop charts. Singer-songwriter Michael Bolton has the tune on his new LP.

Redding died along with four members of the Bar-Kays band when a chartered plane taking them to Cleveland for a concert crashed in Monona Lake, Wis.

Redding had been a favorite among black audiences and was just becoming known to white audiences.

He also wrote "I've Been Loving You Too Long (To Stop Now)" with Jerry Butler in 1965, and "Respect," which singer Aretha Franklin carried to the top of the pop charts in 1966.

Many had predicted he would become a superstar.

In the 1960s, with his grainy voice and galvanizing stage shows, he was the personification of soul, second in popularity only to James Brown. In 1967, readers of Melody Maker voted him the world's best male vocalist, the first time during the 1960s they had not chosen Elvis Presley.

The same year, Redding was the only soul performer asked to appear at the Monterey Pop Festival. His intense performance was captured in the film "Monterey Pop" and on the LP "Otis Redding — Jimi Hendrix."

Redding went to a Sausalito, Calif., houseboat to relax afterward, and there he wrote "Sittin' on the Dock of the Bay," which ends with a long, meandering whistle solo. Guitarist Steve Cropper of Booker T and the MGs, the backup band on many of his early records for Stax in Memphis, Tenn., was the co-writer.

Cropper said Redding had been, "King of soul, king of Stax, king of everything that evolved around us."

His influence reverberates through contemporary music. Disco's roots can be seen in his danceable numbers. K.C. and the Sunshine Band picked up on his styling. Al Green, in the 1970s, was called a cross between Redding and Sam Cooke.

Fourteen years after Redding's death, two of his sons and a nephew formed a group, the Reddings. On their first album they included "Sittin' on the Dock of the Bay."

The Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater has a dance titled "Suite Otis" danced to six Redding recordings: "Just One More Day," "I Can't Turn You Loose," "Lovers Prayer," "Satisfaction," "I've Been Loving You Too Long" and "Try a Little Tenderness."

Redding, who was born Sept. 9, 1941, in Dawson, Ga., and grew up in Macon, came to Stax in an unusual way — as a chauffeur. Working as general assistant and occasional vocalist for Johnny Jenkins and the Pinetoppers, he drove Jenkins in 1962 to a session at the Stax studio in Memphis.

Jenkins finished with 40 minutes of studio time remaining, and Redding jumped in with two songs he'd written. The Stax president liked one tune, "These Arms of Mine," and released it. It went to No. 20 on the rhythm 'n' blues chart, 85 on the pop charts and launched Redding's career.

Over time, Redding's singing became melodic and emotional, but

Series Saved

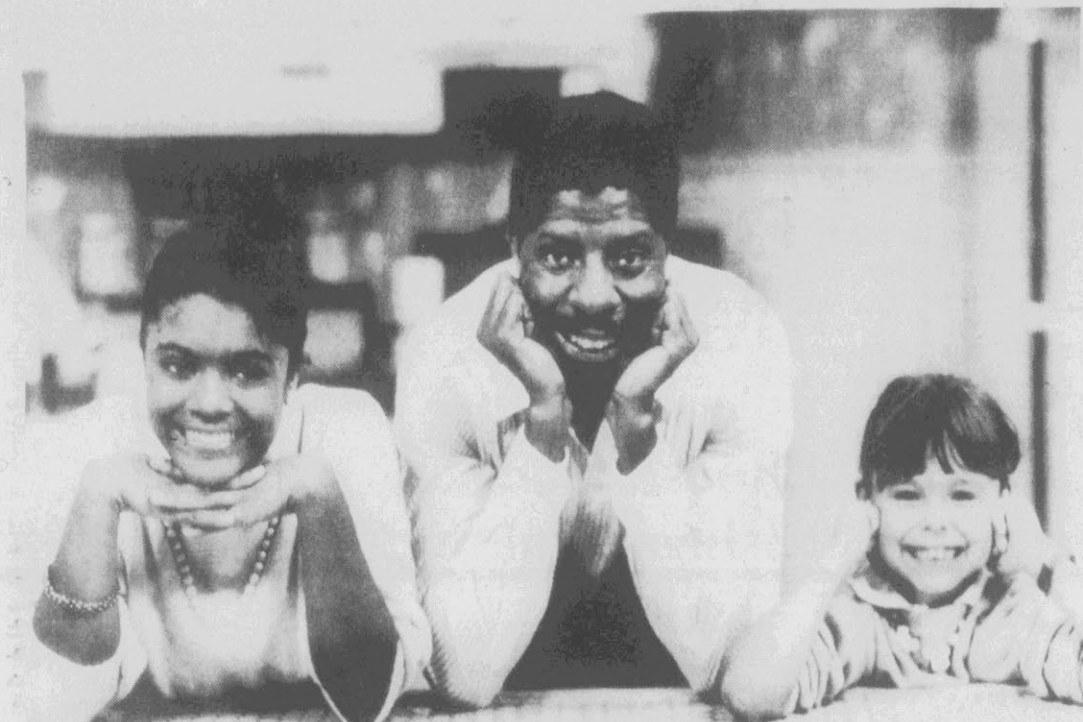

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS has changed its mind and will not cancel "The Law & Harry McGraw," a new detective series starring Jerry Orbach and Barbara Babcock.

"We're all delighted that CBS has ordered four additional episodes," said creator and executive producer Peter Fischer. The show is a spinoff from "Murder, She Wrote."

kept a hint of grit and explosiveness. He could temper his vocal force with sweet, wounded vulnerability. He let power and pain be heard in his "Mr. Pitiful" and "Pain in My Heart."

NEW SERIES — Actor Jimmy Walker, who coined the phrase "dyn-no-mite!" in the CBS comedy "Good Times," has resurfaced without it in the new syndicated series "Bustin' Loose." Walker plays Sonny Barnes, an independent and care-free foster father to costars Tyres Perry, left and Marie Lynn Wise. (AP Laserphoto)

Jimmy Walker Stars In TV Version Of 'Bustin' Loose'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jimmy Walker, a self-styled street entrepreneur in the new syndicated series "Bustin' Loose," is not television's next Cliff Huxtable.

Walker, along with Vonetta McGee, stars in this half-hour comedy about a mismatched Philadelphia family. He's independent and carefree. She's a warm-hearted social worker. They're looking after four foster children.

"He usually has a seam of some kind going," said producer Topper Carew. "It's nothing that ever hurts anybody. Like he's selling tickets to the First Annual Surfing Contest in Philadelphia. Cliff Huxtable has it made. Sonny Barnes is still trying to make it."

Huxtable is the successful New York doctor played by Bill Cosby in NBC's megahit "The Cosby Show."

Carew, who previously produced "The Righteous Apples," calls "Bustin' Loose" a domestic comedy about "four tough-to-love kids and a man and a woman under the same roof. She has book learning. He has street learning. The dynamics of the show is whether his business enterprises will come before the kids. He always puts the kids first, but he's tested.

"To me it's as American as apple pie to see a little guy trying to make it. But he doesn't have all the resources. You want to root for him. I could have been that guy, or Jimmy could have been that guy, but we got lucky. But Sonny does put in the time with the kids."

Carew said there have been episodes about the homeless, about bedwetters and about the Special Olympics, with basketball superstar Kareem Abdul-Jabbar as guest.

The syndicated comedy is based on the 1981 movie starring Richard Pryor and Cicely Tyson. In the movie, Pryor was a thief on parole who was assigned to look after a group of misfit kids on their way to a camp.

"They were traveling across country on a yellow school bus," Carew said. "We bring them back to Philadelphia and put them into a row house. We use all the same names and characters."

Carew said the show, which is telecast in 80 cities, is in the top 20 of syndicated shows. "Bill Cosby is first among the network shows," he said. "We want to be first among syndicated shows."

"We think it will do very well because of its appeal to the large number of black viewers," he said. "It does very well in the urban areas."

He said Walker was always his first choice for the role of Sonny Barnes.

Walker, a standup comic from New York, first came to national attention as J.J. in the CBS series "Good Times." J.J. was going to trade school but always had a get-rich-quick scheme on the back burner. His catchphrase was "Dy-no-mite!"

Time magazine called him the "comedian of the decade." He did a comedy album, fans inundated him with mail and everyone was clamoring for his services. But Walker, who considers himself primarily a standup comic, felt he was living in J.J.'s shadow. People wanted to hear "Dy-no-mite!"

Later, he was in two short-lived series for producer Aaron Spelling, "B.A.D. Cats" and "At Ease."

Walker, who is very animated and talkative as a comedian, attended the interview but was virtually silent throughout. His reply to questions usually was, "I don't remember," or "I don't know." Carew explained later that Walker is "very shy."

'L.A. Law' Creators Splitting Up

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "L.A. Law" creators Terry Louise Fisher and Steven Bochco reportedly won't be working together any longer on the hit NBC-TV series, for which they won a writing Emmy this year.

Bochco has dropped plans to surrender his title as executive producer to Ms. Fisher, who has been a supervising producer on the show, Daily Variety reported Wednesday.

Variety quoted sources it did not identify as saying Ms. Fisher's agent asked for an "astronomical" salary and demanded Bochco have nothing to do with the show next season.

Although Bochco recently signed a contract for a new series for ABC-TV, he has chosen to keep his "L.A. Law" position at 20th Century-Fox Television, while Ms. Fisher works on other productions for the studio, the entertainment newspaper reported.

"It is Fox's position not to comment on these things, and we would prefer not to," Harris Kattelman, 20th Century-Fox Television president, said when asked about the Variety story.

Ms. Fisher and Bochco also collaborated to create and write the first few episodes of John Ritter's hit series "Hooperman."

Opening lead: Six of ♣

We remember clearly the first time we took a finesse and it won. The revelation that tricks could be won so easily ended up costing us thousands of points, for it was many years later before we learned that it was not right to take every finesse in sight. This hand is a simple example of that hard-learned lesson.

Three no trump is a normal contract to reach. Note South's response of one diamond; it left open the possibility of finding a 4-4 heart fit. When North raised diamonds, thereby denying a four-card major, South simply bid what he expected to make.

West led a spade, and declarer saw no problem. He had seven fast tricks, and there were two more to be made if the diamond finesse succeeded. Even if it lost, a 3-2 diamond break would produce the necessary tricks. So declarer won in dummy and led a diamond to the queen. West collected the king and continued with a spade and, to cut a long story short, when the diamonds broke badly and the long club did not set up, declarer had held himself to eight tricks.

We hope you've read between our lines and realized that declarer had only himself to blame going down. While the diamond suit offered an 84 percent chance of landing the contract, playing on hearts would have guaranteed it!

After the opening lead, declarer still had two spade stoppers and only two top hearts to force out. Had he simply proceeded along those lines, he could have set up two tricks in the suit, to bring his total to nine, before the defenders could have gotten their spade suit free.

Mexican-U.S. Border Divides Widely Different Worlds

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — As strongly as they are bonded as neighbors sharing a border nearly 2,000 miles long, Mexico and the United States are separated by a chasm of differences in culture, history, wealth and power.

"At no other border does so much power face so little power," Lorenzo Meyer, academic dean at the Colegio de Mexico, a graduate school and research institution, said in an interview.

The differences often result in serious misunderstanding and friction between the two countries.

To the north, Canadians also sometimes differ sharply with the United States, but they share cultural and historical roots with Americans that soften the way to solutions and understanding.

Mexicans, however, are rooted in Indian cultures, Roman Catholicism and 300 years of Spanish domination. Their history is in stark contrast to Americans' Protestant roots and their emphasis on the individual.

While calling history and culture the chief sources of friction between Mexico and the United States, the author and intellectual Octavio Paz says that "no less a determinant has been and is the immense economic, technical, political and military inequality."

"This inequality has been the origin of many abuses and injustices, mistakes and resentments," Paz wrote in the October issue of the magazine Vuelta.

"There is no reason for the interests of Mexico and the United States to coincide," Jose Juan de Olloqui, a former ambassador to the United States and former assistant foreign minister, said in an interview. "There must be understanding on the part of the United States that ... we must first look after our interests and our principles and that we are not against them but in favor of ourselves."

The diverse interests are wide-ranging and sometimes result in different outlooks.

While the United States worries about Mexico keeping up with service payments on its $105 billion foreign debt, Mexico is concerned about holding on to enough money to finance development.

On the issue of Nicaragua, the Reagan administration sees the threat of a Soviet foothold in the region. Mexico views the conflict as internal and opposes U.S. support for the Contra rebels.

"You think that any movement in Central America is an attack on the security of the United States. We think not," de Olloqui said. "You think that any movement of campesinos is communist. We may think that the only thing they want is food, because they cannot have even an idea of what Marxism and Leninism are."

What does concern Mexico is asserting its independence before a huge and powerful neighbor that took half its territory in the 1846-48 war.

De Olloqui blames the war at least in part for Mexico's hypersensitivity to criticism.

"We are not a country that bears a grudge," he said, "but we are a country conscious of its history. ... Our nationalism is not against anyone, but is an affirmation of what is ours."

Geography has led to extensive trade. Mexico is the United States' third largest trading partner after Canada and Japan, while the United States absorbs 70 percent of Mexican goods, including nearly half its oil exports. Bilateral trade in 1986 was more than $30 billion. More than 3,000

U.S. companies have operations in Mexico.

The wage gap — $3.35 an hour minimum wage in the United States compared with $2.45 a day in Mexico — draws Mexicans across the border by the thousands. Even young professionals, among those hard-hit by the country's 5-year-old economic crisis, see hope in what they can earn washing dishes in U.S. cities or picking crops.

At least half the estimated 6 million to 7 million illegal aliens in the United States are Mexicans and the number has been growing by about 500,000 a year, according to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Yet despite their proximity, the countries fail to work within the other's system and, say some, even to understand it.

Paz said "twin sisters — ignorance and arrogance — define the attitude of the great majority of North Americans."

"The image that North Americans have of Mexico is a mixture of archaic prejudices, simplifications at times naive and at others perverse, stupid stereotypes," he wrote.

"I exaggerate: it is a blank image, an immense mental and historic lagoon. They do not know nor want to know anything about us."

The United States, for example, loses patience with the Mexican judicial system.

U.S. officials have complained of slowness and alleged corruption in the prosecution of reputed narcotics kingpins arrested in the 1985 kidnap-murder of a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, Enrique Camarena Salazar.
