McDonald's Funding ECU Sickle Cell Disease Study

A new study at the East Carolina University School of Medicine will focus on the nutritional needs of children with sickle cell disease in a project funded by Ronald McDonald Children's Charities (RMCC). The one-year study, wholly supported by a $60,593 RMCC grant, will be conducted by ECU dietician Nancy T. Gray and hematologist Dr. C. Tate Holbrook through the medical school's Regional Comprehensive Sickle Cell Program. RMCC, established in 1984 in memory of McDonald's founder Ray A. Kroc, awards grants to non-profit organizations helping children. Sickle cell disease, confined largely to black populations, is the world's most common hereditary blood disorder. In the United States, one in every 500 black children is afflicted with sickle cell disease. According to Holbrook, the disorder damages a child's red blood cells, limiting their ability to carry oxygen to body tissues and distorting their normal disk-like shape into sticky, malformed sickles that can readily clog small blood vessels. With symptoms often developing soon after birth, the disorder can result in anemia, recurrent pain, retarded growth and eventual organ damage. The ECU study will document the nutritional status of children with sickle cell disease.

Consumers Give U.S. Economy Shot In Arm

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy grew at a robust 4.3 percent annual rate over the summer, as higher-than-expected consumer spending helped offset a deteriorating trade performance, the government reported today. The Commerce Department's latest look at the gross national product showed that the economy was expanding at an even faster pace immediately before the October stock crash than had been believed. A month ago, the department had put growth in the GNP from July through September at an annual rate of 4.1 percent.

Many economists had been looking for that figure to be revised downward today based on a belief that the country's trade deficit was worse than had been estimated. The government did revise the trade shortfall to show it worsening at a faster rate, but this was offset by a faster pace of consumer spending and bigger government outlays. Inflation, as measured by the GNP, moderated in the third quarter, reflecting slower increases for petroleum and food. Prices were rising at an annual rate of 3.4 percent, down from a 4.1 percent rate in the second quarter. The 4.3 percent GNP growth rate was the fastest since a 4.4 percent increase in the first quarter. The economy expanded at a 2.5 percent rate in the April-June quarter. For the first nine months of the year, the economy was growing at an annual rate of 3.7 percent. To reach the administration's forecast of 3.2

percent growth for all of 1987, the economy will need to expand at an annual rate of just 1.6 percent in the current quarter. From all indications, the economy is expanding at least at this pace. Many economists believe growth in the final three months of the year will average 2.5 percent or better. However, there is great uncertainty about next year. Analysts are fearful that if consumers cut back sharply on spending because of uncertainty generated by the market turmoil then the economy could tip into a recession early next year. The Reagan administration has conceded that its official forecast of 3.5 percent growth in 1988 will need to be revised downward slightly, but administration officials have insisted that the economy will still expand at a decent clip next year. In a second report today, the government said that corporate after-tax profits rose a healthy 5.5 percent in the third quarter, the best showing since a 6.5 percent increase in the third quarter last year. Today's report represented a revision from a

Korean Hopefuls Decry Vote Tally

By BARRY RENFREW

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition leaders today rejected the victory of Roh Tae-woo, the governing party candidate, in presidential elections and called for nationwide protests to stop him from taking power. The two main opposition parties and the main dissident alliance all charged the government had resorted to massive fraud to win Wednesday's elections. Roh rejected the fraud accusations, appealed for national reconciliation and promised stability. He is scheduled to begin a five-year term in February. The opposition called for a repeat of the June demonstrations that forced the government to agree to democratic elections. But that same opposition came under increasing criticism for its failure to present a single candidacy, thus clearing the way for Roh's victory. Together, the two main opposition candidates received 54.5 percent of the vote. Roh won with slightly more than 37 percent, indicating that a unified opposition could have outpolled him. Parole-Probation Leader Cites Need For Officers

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer
As North Carolina prisons reach and pass their capacity levels, adult probation and parole officers are catching the overflow of criminals in their programs. But, no new officers have been added to the division that has increased its case load about 9.8 percent, the state director of adult probation and parole said. John Patseavouras was in Greenville Wednesday to speak at a pre-release and aftercare graduation service at First Christian Church. A native of Rocky Mount, he is serving his second term as director of the state Probation and Parole Division. Under Gov. Jim Holshoyser from 1974 to 1977, Patseavouras was the first director for the division, which was formed through the merged divisions of probation and parole.

JOHN PATSEAVOURAS

The division "got no new parole officers positions" during the regular budget allocations, Patseavouras said. Yet, "our case load has increased 9.8 percent or almost 6,700 additional cases to the case load. That puts an unreasonable strain upon our officers and staff to properly supervise these numbers."

Gov. Jim Martin is expected "to recommend at least 94 additional probation and parole officers" be added to the division, he said. That is the number the governor requested last year and was denied by the Legislature. Officers handle the current overload through professionalism and dedication, Patseavouras said. "They are dedicated to what they do. This is their life work, and (they have) professional pride in their ability to handle averse situations." The officers are the "unsung heroes of the criminal justice system," he said, as they work in a division that has increased from 31,000 cases to more than 67,000 cases from 1974 to 1987. The probation and parole division very closely is linked with the prisons, said Patseavouras, who is one of only a few to work with both divisions. He served as state director of prisons from March to September 1987. (See OFFICERS, A-22)

MORNING ACCIDENT — A Greenville man was injured this morning when the truck he was driving overturned north of Stokes. According to Trooper B.J. Jones, the truck was driven by Jimmy Allen Hughes of 225 Fairway Drive, Greenville. Jones said Hughes apparently ran off the edge of state road 1551 in a curve and the truck overturned several times. Prosecutor Says Deaver Conviction Won't Stop Peddling Of Influence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecutor in Michael K. Deaver's perjury trial said today the former presidential aide's conviction is only a "thumb in the dike" against the flood of influence peddling in Washington. "The successful outcome of the Deaver trial should not be mistaken as a resolution of the more serious problem which brought about the appointment of an independent counsel in the first place," Whitney North Seymour Jr. said in a statement. "That problem is too much 'loose' money and too little concern in Washington about ethics in government," Seymour said in a statement referring to "vast sums of money" spent by corporations and foreign governments "to buy influence and favors." Seymour said that "until the attitudes of government leaders change, there is little that prosecutors can do except put a thumb in the dike." Without naming the secretary of state by name, Seymour criticized George Shultz for vouching for Deaver's honesty and integrity when he testified as a prosecution witness. Seymour said Shultz demonstrated a lack of leadership among public officials to improve ethics.

"The present level of that leadership has been evident during the Deaver trial itself, as the third-highest ranking official in the U.S. government willingly and publicly endorsed the honesty of a former high official, charged with perjury, without even bothering to read the indictment or inquire whether the charges had substance," Seymour said in a reference to Shultz's testimony. The prosecutor had erupted in anger during the trial when Shultz steadfastly defended Deaver's integrity. The secretary testified that Deaver contacted him on behalf of a lobbying client but lauded Deaver's "very direct, honest approach." Deaver, one President Reagan's closest and oldest political associates, was convicted Wednesday of lying to a House subcommittee and a grand jury that investigated the propriety of the lobbying he did for high-paying clients after he resigned as deputy White House chief of staff. Within nine months of Deaver's leaving the White House staff, his firm had signed $3 million worth of lobbying contracts with major defense contractors, other large corporations and several foreign governments. During the trial, Seymour charged that Deaver had lied to spare Reagan and his wife, Nancy, any embarrassment from revelations that he was using his White House connections to sign six-figure lobbying contracts. In his statement, Seymour attacked loopholes in the Ethics in Government Act that "serve only to breed cynicism by making 'lawful' what otherwise would plainly be improper," Seymour said. These loopholes technically allowed many of the contacts that Deaver made within the White House. The White House is divided, for the purposes of enforcing the ethics law, into nine separate agencies, including the Office of Management and Budget and the Executive Office of the President. Deaver therefore could lobby officials at OMB or the National Security Council because he had served in the president's office. The law prohibits former senior government officials from contacting ex-colleagues in their old agency for a year after leaving public service. The statute contains lifetime bans for contacts on issues in which the former official was "personally and substantially" involved. But with its "loopholes and exemptions," Seymour said, "the present statute does not protect the public."

Neighbors Save Man From Fire

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Neighbors of an elderly man saved his life by pulling him out of his burning home and then helped the fire department turn hoses on the blaze, authorities said.

Charles Grooms, 73, was listed in serious but stable condition Wednesday at East Tennessee Baptist Hospital after neighbors found him lying unconscious inside his burning Knoxville home.

The fire occurred at about 1:30 p.m. EST Monday, said Clyde Parker, of the Knoxville Fire Department.

Doug Nichols, 22, and Robert Mingle, 58, said flames and heavy smoke repelled them on their first try but then they crawled back inside the house on their stomachs and dragged the elderly man outside as glass bottles and windows exploded from the heat.

Greg Hensley, 23, met them at the front door and helped drag Grooms onto the front yard.

"Five minutes after we got him out, the house was gutted," said Mingle. "I got wobbly in the knees about 20 minutes later."

When firefighters arrived, the three men, and Hensley's wife Angie, grabbed for the fire hoses.

"They just didn't have enough manpower, so we had to help them with the hoses," said Greg Hensley. "One of the hoses got away and we had to chase it down so it didn't hit the old man."

Mingle said, "I've read in the papers where people go into a burning home to rescue their children and I thought, 'I could do that.'"

"But now I realize what it's like in a burning building. I thought my ears were going to burn off in there," he said.

Duke Dorm Damaged

DURHAM (AP) — A fire that a student apparently started accidentally damaged a Duke University dormitory, but no one was injured, officials say.

Leonard Pardue, director of university relations, said the fire started at about 11 p.m. Wednesday in a dormitory room in the Pi Kappa Alpha section on the third floor of the Edens Quadrangle dormitory.

Twelve students whose rooms were damaged will be housed at the Brownstone Inn until the holidays begin Sunday, Pardue said. Repairs from the fire, and from smoke and water damage, should be complete by the time students return from vacation Jan. 4, he said.

An investigation into the fire's cause is continuing, Pardue said. The fire was started accidentally by a student, Pardue said, although he called the details surrounding the fire's cause "foggy."

Some clothes caught fire in a closet in one of the rooms, but that was not how the fire started, he said.

Students and Duke Public Safety officers contained the fire, and Durham firefighters brought it under control shortly after it began, Pardue said.

Durham firefighters arrived about 11:15 p.m. and used fans to blow away heavy smoke that filled hallways of the third and fourth floors of the four-story dormitory.

Kennedy Support Increases As Senate Panel Adjourns

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Anthony M. Kennedy must wait until the new year for the Senate to vote on his confirmation, but he can take comfort in a mounting chorus of support and few dissenting voices.

Democrats and Republicans on the Senate Judiciary Committee predict he will win approval. The panel concluded its review of Kennedy on Wednesday, wrapping up its hearings ahead of schedule after three days of testimony.

But the committee does not plan to vote on the nomination until late in January after Congress returns from its holiday recess. A vote by the full Senate may be delayed until February, likely leaving the high court one member short for another two months.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., who previously expressed support for Kennedy, said he had some reservations but believed in the power of education to broaden the nominee's sympathy for the rights of minorities and women.

"I have grave doubts, and frankly I don't know how I could vote for him" if Kennedy's rulings as a federal appeals court judge were the only guide, Biden said.

But the senator added: "I believe in education. Exposure (to minorities) and education are important. It's had an impact on me and I suspect it will have the same impact on Judge Kennedy."

Kennedy, 51, a federal appeals court judge in Sacramento, Calif., is President Reagan's third choice to succeed Lewis F. Powell, who retired as a justice on June 26.

Robert H. Bork, the president's first choice, was rejected by the Senate after a bruising attack that depicted him as a rigid, right-wing ideologue who threatened decades of progress for civil rights and individual liberty.

Douglas H. Ginsburg, Reagan's next nominee, withdrew after admitting he had smoked marijuana in the past.

Kennedy received mixed reviews Wednesday from a variety of witnesses a day after senators of both parties showered praise on him.

National Organization for Women President Molly Yard said the Senate shouldn't take a chance on confirming Kennedy because he might provide a fifth vote to override the high court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling, which legalized abortion nationwide.

"We have no idea what he would do on Roe versus Wade," she said, adding that "women will not accept the overturning" of the ruling.

Ms. Yard also accused Kennedy of insensitivity to women's fight for equality and of failing to see discrimination where it plainly exists.

She told the 14-member committee it might not be as attuned as she is to bias based on gender. "You are, after all, white males who have never suffered such discrimination," she said.

Joseph Rauh Jr., representing the liberal Americans for Democratic Action, also opposed Kennedy and accused the committee of letting the nominee off too easily during two days of questioning.

"I think you played patty-cake with him," Rauh said. "I don't think you know what he thinks. He got away with generalizations. He talks a good game but he doesn't play that game. He almost always takes a side against rights of women and minorities."

Rauh added, "You'll be playing Russian roulette" with the Bill of Rights by approving Kennedy.

Biden and Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, frequently allies of Rauh, bristled at the witness' approach.

"It's not only unfair but off base," Metzenbaum said.

Biden asked Rauh whether he thought his own commitment to the Bill of Rights was greater than Biden's. Rauh replied, "yes," adding that he devoted more of his life to defending the cause of individual liberty than had the senator.

There also were numerous witnesses urging confirmation of Kennedy.

Georgetown University law professor Wendy Collins Perdue, a former law clerk for the nominee, said Kennedy treated her with respect and without prejudice.

"He never indicated he had gender bias," she said. "He treated us as equals. It didn't seem to be a part of his life to treat people differently."

Earlier, the American Bar Association gave its strongest possible recommendation to Kennedy, and Harvard University law professor Laurence Tribe, a prominent liberal who opposed Bork, offered support.

Asked to describe the differences between Kennedy and Bork, Tribe said Kennedy, unlike Bork, believes "liberty extends beyond the substantive points marked out in the Bill of Rights. It includes the substantive protection of privacy, it includes marital privacy, it includes an evolving understanding of what it is that makes us human beings."

Kennedy, meanwhile, paid a visit to the White House on Wednesday and received "season's greetings" from Reagan and congratulations for his testimony before the Judiciary Committee, according to presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

House Gives OK To Major Overhaul of Welfare Plan

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wide-ranging welfare overhaul plan approved by the House includes a major new work program for recipients and provisions for automatic wage withholding to enforce child support orders.

The bill won approval Wednesday after fierce debates over how best to help the poor and whether the five-year plan backed by the Democratic leadership will turn out to be a budget-buster, as Republicans claim.

"This was an extraordinarily difficult battle," Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., said after the measure passed 230-194. "At several points it nearly died, but the leadership went to work."

The cornerstone of the $4.3 billion Family Welfare Reform Act is a job training, education and work program that would have to be established in each state. Most welfare parents would be required to participate and would receive child care and transportation subsidies.

States also would have to identify many more fathers of children born out of wedlock and set up a system of automatic wage withholding when a child support order is issued or modified.

The bill also contains a provision increasing federal funds to states that boost welfare benefits, which have lost 33 percent of their purchasing power since 1970 and in many states amount to less than half the federal poverty standard.

It would require all states to provide welfare benefits to two-parent households — rather than cutting off benefits if, as Downey put it, "the father has the temerity to stay home with his family." Only half the states now permit benefits to two-parent families.

Downey, chairman of the Ways and Means subcommittee that wrote the bill, said two-thirds of those on welfare are children under 16.

"We want them not to be hungry, we want them to have housing, and we want them to have some small opportunity that their lives will be like the lives of millions of other children who have parents with some money. That's not much to ask," Downey said in a floor speech urging his colleagues to reject a GOP alternative.

The $1.1 billion Republican plan contained stringent work requirements but few benefits improvements. It was defeated 251-173, with voting mostly along party lines.

Democrats say the plan would pay for itself in the first three years through a phaseout of child care tax credits for the well-off and acceleration of Internal Revenue Service debt collection.

But GOP opponents contended the costs would skyrocket to billions each year when it is fully implemented. They also complained bitterly about what they called barriers to work, such as a provision that limits workfare in a public job to six months.

West Virginia Scraping Bottom

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — State officials who had to delay sending out payroll checks to 40,000 employees because there wasn't enough money to cover them have to keep a watch on spending every day, a finance official says.

The state had just $3.87 million left in its treasury Wednesday after scraping to meet the $15 million payroll, said Don Adams, chief clerk to state Auditor Glen Gainer.

It was the first time in West Virginia history a money shortage has threatened the payroll, Adams said.

"We're living day to day," he said. "It's a crisis that has been with us a long time and because of that, it has gotten worse."

The auditor's office, which has the last say on what bills are paid and when, on Monday ordered the treasurer to delay mailing the payroll because there wasn't enough money to cover even half the checks.

Bonding companies in New York responded by issuing a credit watch, a warning to investors that West Virginia's bond ratings could drop.

Standard & Poor's Inc. noted that the state, in bad financial shape for more than a year, has yet to develop a plan to address its money problem.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Added Burdens

Greenville's continued population growth is encouraging but serves as a reminder of the tasks facing city leaders.

As the population grows, so do the problems and needs of a municipality. Greenville is already experiencing difficulties — some of them in a most visible manner. Traffic jams snarl major streets. Strip development is rapidly decreasing the aesthetic appeal of the community. Human service needs push public programs and resources to limits.

These inconveniences are to be expected in a rapidly-expanding municipality. But their impact can be minimized by anticipating future needs and constructing long-term plans addressing them.

Greenville has neglected this task too long, and that slight is evidenced in an out-of-date thoroughfare plan, zoning ordinances that often don't address problems and public programs stretched to the limit.

Progress toward improving transportation is being made, zoning restrictions are being tightened and public service departments are being expanded, but these adjustments only meet the needs of today. With growth comes the financial burden of finding additional revenue sources to provide services. More attention must be given to long-range guidance of growth through both planning and funding.

City leaders look toward the magic number of 50,000 to ease the sting of financial growth-related problems. Once Greenville reaches that population, it will qualify for forms of federal funding automatically, such as Community Development Block Grants, without competing with other entities. It is reasonable to predict the city will approach the 50,000 mark by the end of the decade. But unless sound groundwork is laid now for the time this goal is attained, the benefits might be meaningless.

Population growth is the core of any economically sound area. It stimulates an economy by developing new markets for retail sales and service industries. It creates a demand for housing and other essentials. It increases expansion of opportunities for recreational-cultural facilities.

But population increases also mean added burdens for the city's safety system and service departments, notably, fire-rescue, police and public works. More people will place further strain on Greenville's water and sewer systems, as well as increasing the demand for the vital resource of water.

The city should celebrate its vitality by doing thorough, long-range planning that will enable it to accept growth with continued vigor. Greenville should not have to trade quality of life for growth.

No Delays

Environmentalists saw an upcoming House showdown vote on the Clean Air Act as their biggest test in Congress this year, and lobbyists spurred on by support of some of the nation's biggest corporations and many powerful trade associations were more than a little confident a victory was in sight.

The test was tied to what was known as the Murtha amendment that would extend the December 31, 1987 deadline for cities and metropolitan areas to comply with the Clean Air Act's mandate to reduce ozone and carbon monoxide emissions to safe levels. Passage of the Murtha Amendment was seen as setting aside the issue for 21 months and to all intents and purposes killing a major anti-pollution package.

Instead, representatives from both the Republican and Democrat membership voted to reject the prolonged delay.

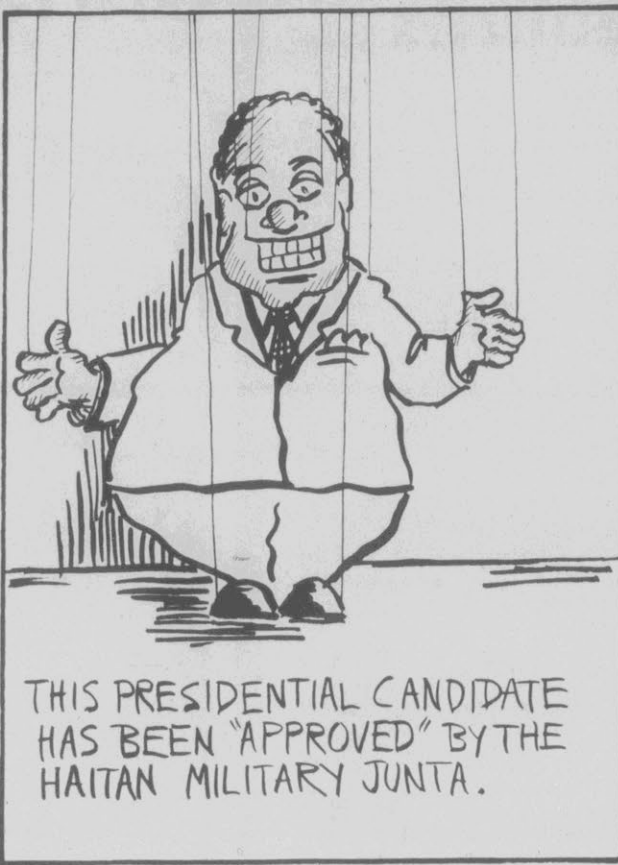

Two North Carolina metropolitan areas have been cited by the EPA for exceeding acceptable air pollution levels and were subjected to sanctions, though state officials said sanctions were unlikely because measures were being taken to curb the areas' pollution problems.

EPA Administrator Lee Thomas says he has been considering construction bans in 12 to 14 cities that have been found to make little or no effort to meet with clean-air requirements set by Congress in 1977.

And, when the issue gets down to the nitty-gritty, it was about time to get into the enforcement of EPA standards adopted 10 years ago.

This is not a perfect world, but there are limits to which Congress should push it ever deeper into imperfection.

The crucial House vote indicates a majority of that chamber favors escalating the battle against air pollution. The Congressmen did something for their constituents by refusing to put up with further delays. That was a correct move and the lawmakers should receive the gratitude of the electorate.

White House Misrepresenting Memo

MEXICO CITY — A stolen Nicaraguan document presented by the Reagan administration does not call for substantial military buildups, as has been widely believed.

The plan, which was obtained from a high-ranking Sandinista defector and is being used in the administration's campaign to persuade Congress to continue aid to the Contras, actually calls for a slight decrease in the number of battle-ready troops.

It also calls for the arming of massive numbers of relatively unsupervised civilians — the same people the Reagan administration has repeatedly said would rise up against the Marxist regime if only they had rifles.

While the plan calls for increased Soviet contributions of tanks and heavy artillery, the only part of the plan that would seriously threaten regional stability, according to U.S. and other military experts in the region, is the proposed introduction of supersonic Soviet MiG-21B fighter planes to the Nicaraguan air force.

However, previous Nicaraguan requests for the sophisticated planes have been turned down by the Soviets and even U.S. military officials say the Sandinistas are unlikely to get the fighters in the near future.

The plan was presented to the Washington press corps Monday by Roger Miranda Bengoechea, a former top aide to Nicaraguan Defense Minister Humberto Ortega. Miranda defected Oct. 25.

While the plan calls for arming 600,000 Nicaraguans by 1995, Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega said such a move was unlikely. But, even if carried out, the plan calls for most of the weapons to be given to civilians to form militias. Currently there are about 150,000 militiamen, mostly "campesinos" who guard government controlled farm cooperatives in rural areas. Although many of them are armed with AK-47 rifles, the Soviet counterpart of the U.S. M-16 assault rifle, few of them are highly trained and most of them are not given more than a handful of bullets — barely enough to defend their farms, let alone create an attack force.

"I really believe that the Sandinistas are a military threat and a totalitarian regime, but the one part of the puzzle that doesn't fit is that there are all these campesinos with rifles," a U.S. official said recently in Central America. "Ortega makes the argument that the large number of armed civilians, who don't run off and join the Contras, proves his government is popular. It is kind of hard to knock down that argument."

The plan calls for a reduction of the full-time army from its current level of between 80,000 and 100,000 to 70,000 by 1995, which would still make it the one of the largest standing armies in the region.

But the Reagan administration, and other supporters of the U.S. backed rebels known as Contras, focused on the 600,000 figure, creating images of an army the size of North Korea. In rural Nicaragua, militiamen, who dress in both civilian clothes and uniforms, many wearing boots meant for horseback rather than infantry duty, do not appear capable of posing a threat to Nicaragua's neighbors.

The Department of State provided reporters with a 44-page document, allegedly smuggled out by Miranda when he defected with his wife, a defection sparked by dissatisfaction with what he called a corrupt regime.

The presentation brought a quick response from lawmakers who support increased Contra aid. Last week, the Senate approved $9 million in non-lethal aid. The House is expected to vote on a similar proposal in the coming days. Washington observers said that while it is still unclear whether Congress will actually approve the plan, Contra supporters said that Miranda's statements improve the chances.

But there is growing skepticism about Miranda in Washington. Wednesday, Newsday reported that suspicions about Miranda's reliability and the possibility that he was a Nicaraguan-Soviet "plant" rather than a true defector led the administration to avoid bringing up the alleged military buildup plan during the summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. However, as early as last month the Miami Herald reported that sources said Miranda had been a "CIA asset" — a term for a spy working inside a foreign government.

Ethics Law Focuses On Official Conduct

WASHINGTON — When the guilty verdicts were returned against former White House deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver at the U.S. Courthouse here Wednesday afternoon, another old friend of President Reagan's, Lyn Nofziger, was sitting at a defense table in another courtroom just down the hall for a hearing on the influence-peddling charges confronting him.

One flight up, on the grand jury floor, Attorney General Edwin Meese III was winding up his fifth interrogation before the grand jury investigating the Iran-contra affair. Earlier in the day, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams testified under oath before the same panel.

The ethics of the Reagan administration are under siege. More than 110 senior officials have been accused of unethical or illegal conduct since Reagan took office in January 1981 and that was a compilation undertaken before either the Iran-Contra affair or the Wedtech scandal became public.

The allegations ranged from lying to Congress to questionable stock deals, from favors for relatives and friends to defrauding the government, from illegal lobbying to inadequate financial disclosures.

Before passage of the 1978 Ethics in Government Act, many of the charges might not have been prosecuted. But for high-ranking officials at least, the independent counsel provisions of the law now require the assignment of court-appointed prosecutors to guard against such deference to power.

The law, as congressional committees that revised it this year pointed out, has not always worked as it was designed. There were only two convictions under it, both the result of prearranged guilty pleas, before Deaver was prosecuted. The verdicts against him Wednesday afternoon are the first jury trial to be conducted under the independent counsel law.

'The ethics of the Reagan administration are under siege. More than 110 senior officials have been accused of unethical or illegal conduct since Reagan took office in January 1981.'

There is more to come. Nofziger, the former White House political adviser, is scheduled to be tried here next month with his lobbyist-partner Mark Bragg on charges of violating federal ethics laws in lobbying the administration on behalf of the Wedtech Corp. and other clients soon after Nofziger left the White House in 1982.

The criminal investigation of the Iran-Contra affair, being conducted by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh, also is expected to result in wide-ranging indictments in late January or perhaps February. The targets include a former National Security Council aide, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a former White House national security adviser, retired rear admiral John M. Poindexter; retired Air Force major general Richard V. Secord and his business partner, arms dealer Albert Hakim.

Critics have charged that Reagan has actually encouraged the "anything goes" atmosphere by failing to condemn influence-peddling and other misdeeds. Instead, he has usually taken the position that no wrongdoing took place.

At the same time, Reagan and the Justice Department have been outspoken in their denunciations of the independent counsel law, assailing it as unconstitutional and unnecessarily costly. Reagan vigorously voiced his complaints Tuesday when he reluctantly signed the reauthorization act extending the system for five more years.

Congressional backers of the law, who had been expecting a veto, quickly concluded that Reagan signed it because he knew a veto would have been overridden. Old friends and advisers such as Nofziger were disappointed.

"If it's a lousy law, then don't sign it," Nofziger said as he walked into the courtroom for Wednesday's pretrial skirmish with independent counsel James C. McKay. "This idea of saying it's a lousy law, but I'm going to sign it anyway never made sense to me."

Besides Deaver, other Reagan administration officials who have been convicted include:

• Rita M. Lavelle, former head of the toxic waste cleanup program at the Environmental Protection Agency, who was found guilty in 1983 of lying to Congress and obstructing a congressional inquiry.

• C. McClain Haddow, chief of staff to former health and human services secretary Margaret M. Heckler, who pleaded guilty this fall to taking $55,330 from a nonprofit foundation he started while working for the government.

• Paul Thayer, former deputy secretary of defense, who pleaded guilty in 1985 to obstructing justice and giving false testimony in an insider trading scheme.

Others were investigated without any charges being brought. Some were tried and acquitted. Former secretary of labor Raymond J. Donovan was investigated three times by a special prosecutor who found insufficient evidence to charge him with any federal crime, then was tried on fraud and grand larceny charges in a New York state court and acquitted last May.

According to statistics compiled by a Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee headed by Carl M. Levin, D-Mich., there are also far more cases processed at the Justice Department under the independent counsel law than have come to light in any detail: a total of 36 since 1982 when the statute was last revised to give the attorney general more leeway in sifting allegations.

Of the 36 cases, the Justice Department closed 25 without ordering a preliminary Federal Bureau of Investigation probe, as the law specifies. It reported closing five of these cases because the allegations did not involve a high-ranking "covered official," but 20 others because a "threshold inquiry" in the Justice Department had determined that the information was insufficient to warrant calling in the FBI.

Strength For Today

The reason we find it so hard to believe in miracles is because they are so common. The whole of life is miraculous, but we have so lost the sense of the miraculousness of the commonplace that we find it hard to believe in the unusual type of miracles.

Yet there is no greater miracle in the world than the miracle of birth. That two cells should carry within them, centuries of inherited characteristics is miraculous beyond description. How the decision to raise one's arm is transmitted into the muscular action involved in raising it is a miracle which no physiologist can explain.

As soon as we appreciate the miracles of everyday life, the miracles recorded in the Bible become much more credible. We live in an order in which the unseen impinges upon the seen.

Vanity: Another Hart Weakness

Analysis

When last we saw Gary Hart, he was a victim of Lust, that most beguiling of the Seven Deadly Sins. Now, in his dramatic 11th-hour re-entry into the presidential race, he returns as a monument to the folly of Vanity, in its sense both as emptiness and as self-regard. In a brief address announcing his new candidacy, Hart said that as president he would be a national teacher. Well, he won't be president, but he still has something to teach us about a common human failing that politicians embody in tumescent proportions.

To begin with, Hart's case should cause us partly to supplement a dollop of the conventional wisdom about politicians, and partly to expand on it. The dollop that I have in mind is associated with the late Harold Laswell, a pioneer in the psychoanalytic understanding of politics. Politicians, Laswell taught, are driven to solve on the public stage, if only symbolically, problems that they are unable to solve in their personal lives. That explanatory construct fits Hart rather nicely.

This self-destructive man, whose conflicts between instinct and reason are the stuff of Johnny Carson's jokes, wants to bring rationality to American politics, and indeed to American society generally. This creature of drives wants to build a campaign, so he said in his announcement, on "ideas." This flagrant Lothario calls for national "reform." He wants to do for us, in short, what he can't do for himself — reform, bring order out of chaos, let reason rule over instinct.

So far as it goes, then, Laswell's theory helps us to understand the motivation for Hart's quixotic decision. (As so, no doubt, do crasser considerations having something to do with the availability of federal matching funds to help candidate Hart pay off his debt as well as finance his rehabilitation.) But the pre-psychoanalytic idea of Vanity also sheds light on Hart's motivation, and I for one am glad to have this old verity back on the boards.

In his memoirs former Secretary of State Dean Acheson says that after he left public life, after the spotlight that had so long been upon him had been snapped off, he felt as if he had undergone a kind of death. Life without the elixir of renown was savorless. Perhaps Gary Hart felt the chill of that public death, and so at the certain risk of ridicule had to clamber back into the cockpit of celebrity, that theater of Vanity. A public man lives by vanity. He craves for the world to notice him.

And if the world, noticing, mocks? Well, better that it mock than not notice at all. Better humiliation than oblivion.

Last week, buried in the local news section of the New York Times, there was a little story about Gary Hart. It seems that Hart gave a lecture — for a fee of $10,000 — at a New Jersey college, and only a handful of students came to hear him speak. They'd come now, you can bet on it, and in coming fill for a moment some of the emptiness of Gary Hart, and gratify his blinding self-regard.

Korean Mirror

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea's presidential election was a perfect illustration of how its people want a stable democracy, and of how political divisions and hatred stand in the way.

Few people were surprised when the opposition refused to accept the victory of government candidate Roh Tae-woo in the first direct presidential election in 16 years. Nor was there much surprise when the opposition vowed to take to the streets to topple Roh before the vote counting was even completed.

"You can bet your bottom dollar that the elected president will face an almost insurmountable situation after his victory," The Korea Herald said a week before the election.

South Korean politics have been dominated by factionalism, regionalism and an outlook that sees compromise as weakness and insists on victory at all costs. That kind of inflexibility was made apparent when opposition candidates Kim Young-sam and Kim Dae-jung said during the campaign that Roh could not win a democratic election. They responded to Roh's election with charges of massive election fraud that the government denied.

If South Korea is to have a stable democratic system, analysts agree, it must break the stranglehold of factional politics and regional divisions. It won't be easy in a country that has never had a peaceful transfer of power.

But there were encouraging signs of change during the election campaign. Many people exulted in the fact they had been able to cast votes to select a new president after a democratic campaign and said they wanted an end to the country's many divisions.

"A grand reconciliation of the people is an urgent requirement coming close on the heels of the presidential election," The Korea Times said in an editorial.

Some analysts saw Roh's victory as a plea for stability. The former general claimed during the campaign he alone could usher in lasting democracy while warning the opposition would bring chaos.

A number of Koreans who voted for Roh said they saw in him the best hope of ending the nation's long tradition of authoritarian government while also ensuring political peace.

"The victory of government candidate Roh Tae-woo means the people chose a resolute political leadership based on the principle of gradual reforms amid stability," the Joong-Ang Ilbo newspaper said in an editorial.

Most observers agree South Korea now has a degree of political freedom that would have seemed unthinkable even six months ago when almost any open show of dissent was broken up by riot police firing tear gas.

There has been broad liberalization since hundreds of thousands of people took to the streets across the nation in June to demand an end to authoritarian rule. President Chun Doo-hwan, a former general who took power with military backing in 1980, bowed to demands for direct presidential elections.

The presidential campaign, in some respects, was democracy at its best. Candidates held rallies across the country, huge columns of supporters marching peacefully through Seoul and other cities and people freely talking about what they wanted.

But the election also bore the hallmarks of the problems and divisions that haunt South Korea. The candidates denounced each other with violent rhetoric, protesters attacked all the candidates with everything from eggs to firebombs and fights raged at many rallies.

Some Koreans also criticized the two Kims for splitting the opposition and throwing away what had seemed a certain victory. Both men insisted they had to run for democracy's sake.

"The two Kims should deeply reflect on themselves ... because the people encouraged their struggle for democracy but did not support their division," the Dong-A Ilbo newspaper warned.

The question facing South Korea now is whether its traditional politics of confrontation and violence will prevail or if there is a chance for the country to make progress.

The answer will be worked out both in the chambers of government and the streets as the ruling party and its opponents make their separate appeals.

Barry Renfrew is chief of The Associated Press bureau in South Korea.

Career Ladder May Become Issue In Campaign

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Undaunted by cries of opposition from some educators, Gov. Jim Martin will take his case for "better pay for better teachers" to the voters as he hits the 1988 campaign trail.

Martin, a Republican who is pushing for rapid expansion of an experimental "career ladder" program, was snubbed by the North Carolina Association of Educators' political action committee when it handed out endorsements for next year's races.

NCAE officials said there were several reasons for their endorsement of Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat, for governor. Among them was Martin's enthusiasm for the career ladder, which NCAE leaders say is highly unpopular among their members.

"That'll be a good political issue," Martin said in an interview this week, "because the people are in favor of setting standards and objectives for teachers and ... evaluating them and holding them accountable for improving the quality of public instruction."

Pocketbook issues, leadership and the outcome of the presidential campaign may have a greater impact on the expected Martin-Jordan clash than the career ladder debate. But it's no small matter to teachers, a politically active group.

NCAE leaders claim an overwhelming majority of their 45,000 members oppose Martin's plan for accelerating the timetable for statewide implementation of the career ladder.

"We've done extensive surveying and gotten a lot of feedback, and I believe every policymaker in the state has gotten that feedback," Karen Garr, president-elect of the NCAE, said. "You do not stop in the middle of a pilot program and decide you're going to expand before you've got the problems worked out."

The Legislature established the career ladder three years ago and funded "pilots" in 16 of the state's 140 public school systems. The experiment is scheduled to end with the 1988-89 academic year.

Under the program, teachers can earn higher salaries and prestige by climbing a five-step ladder. Promotions are based on superior performance in the classroom, acceptance of extra responsibilities, earning of graduate degrees, and other achievements.

In his proposed budget for fiscal 1987-89, Martin called for establishing pilots in another 12 school systems this fall and starting the program on a limited basis in all other systems next year.

The Legislature, dominated by Democrats, rejected the Martin plan, voting instead to stick to the original schedule and decide the career ladder's future after the pilots were evaluated.

Martin called the decision one of the biggest disappointments of his term.

"Here is one reform of our state public education that could have the greatest potential for improving the quality of public education," he said. "It's the first time we've ever been able to offer promotions to teachers in the classroom."

By delaying implementation in the majority of the school systems, "it's creating a great disparity between the pay that's available in those pilot programs and teachers in all the other 124 school systems, who cannot be considered for promotions," Martin said.

The NCAE opposes "any form of ... better pay for teachers," he said. "And in order to get their endorsement, the Democratic leadership realizes they've got to back away from it."

"That's not a reflection on my leadership; it's a reflection on their leadership."

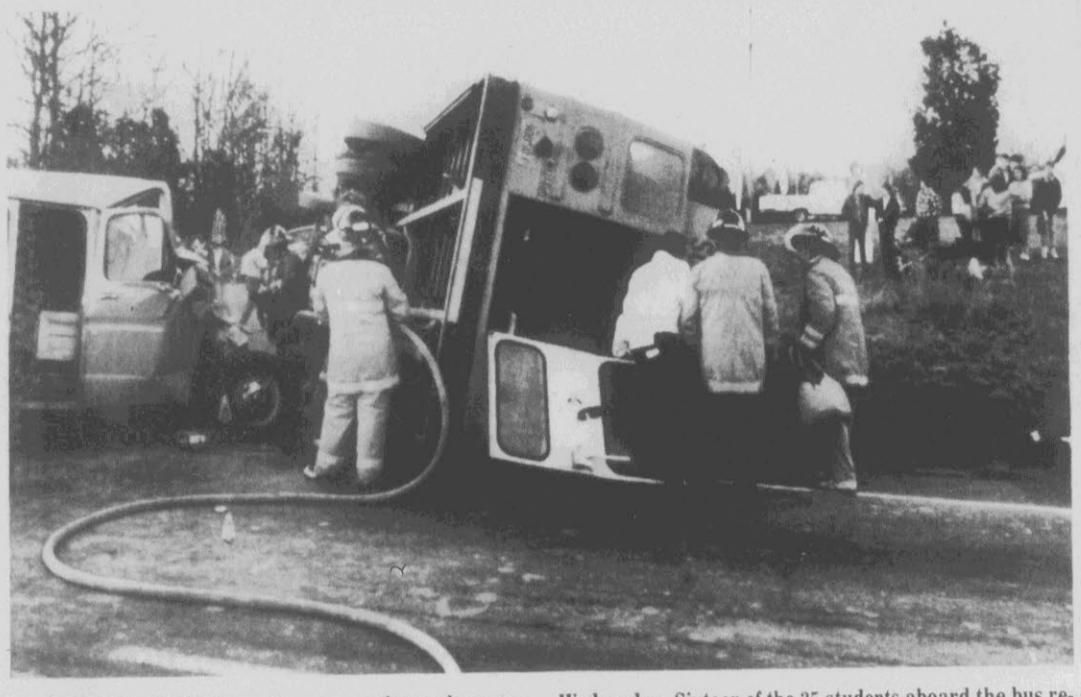

Jordan says Martin is ignorant of how the program works. "If he would spend more time working for education and less time trying to discredit this process, he might be perceived to be stronger in support of education," Jordan said in an interview.

Ms. Garr says the program is riddled with shortcomings but stopped short of saying it should be scrapped.

"We'll look for a way to salvage the good parts and do away with the bad," she said.

Critics believe the pay of all teachers should be improved before a merit system is started, she said, adding that the program does nothing about weeding out bad teachers.

Charged

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Charges of death by motor vehicle have been filed against the driver of a gravel truck in an accident that claimed the lives of three Craven County residents.

Kermit Lee Elliott, 36, of Edenton, was charged in connection with the deaths of Linwood Earl Hardy, 25, Hardy's sister, Dena Hardy Bennett, 20, and her son, David Edward Bennett, 2.

Trooper G.R. Leggett said the accident occurred Tuesday when Elliott was traveling south on N.C. 43 toward New Bern and swerved to his left to avoid hitting the back of a log truck turning onto Irock Lane.

Two School Bus Wrecks Hurt 44

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-eight students received minor injuries when a school bus hit another from behind in Granville County Wednesday, and 16 more were injured when a commercial van hit a school bus near Asheboro, officials said.

Mike Chitwood, a spokesman for Duke University Medical Center, said nine students injured in the crash near South Granville High School were taken to Duke. Linda Flowers of Durham County General Hospital said another 19 students were examined there.

Dot Puckett, assistant principal at South Granville, said one bus rear-ended the other at the school's rear entrance. Officials estimated the bus was going 5 mph on impact.

The Randolph County crash occurred on U.S. 64, injuring 16 of the 35 students riding to school and the driver of the van, the state Highway Patrol said.

The patrol said the driver of the bus, Donna Wright Powers, 18, of Asheboro, was charged with a movement violation.

Trooper R.D. Doss said the bus, transporting students to Farmer School, was turning onto U.S. 64 off a rural paved road as the van approached. Ms. Powers said she did not see the van because she was blinded by the sun, Doss said. The van, driven by Jesse Michael Doby, 27, of Cameron, struck the bus just behind the driver's seat and knocked the bus onto its side, Doss said.

The injured were taken to Randolph County Hospital and treated for assorted bumps and bruises, Doss said. Doby was treated in the emergency room, said Alice Hammond, assistant administrator for public affairs at the hospital.

State Orders Red Tide Study

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin announced Wednesday a $25,000 federal-state grant to evaluate whether the red tide currently plaguing the North Carolina coast is likely to return next year.

The Albemarle-Pamlico Estuarine Study Technical Committee approved the allocation Tuesday to determine if the poisonous algae cells are now forming resistant dormant forms and if these "cysts" are likely to survive through the winter. If they survive in a dormant state, the algae could present a homegrown red tide threat next year.

"An accurate prediction will give our coastal citizens an opportunity to plan alternatives to blunt the economic impact should the red tide recur next year," Martin said.

Federal Study Says Cost Of Jetties Impractical To Stabilize Oregon Inlet

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Building two mile-long stone jetties to stabilize the treacherous Oregon Inlet would cost more than any economic benefits the jetties would create, a new federal study says.

"Basically the report concludes that the economics were not favorable to the project," Robert K. Dawson, associate director of the federal Office of Management and Budget, said Wednesday. "But of course that conclusion has to be reviewed and challenged."

Dawson told the Virginian-Pilot and Ledger-Star of Norfolk, Va., that Gov. Jim Martin "has expressed very strong interest in the matter" and that OMB officials will "make sure that every possible benefit of the doubt is given" to North Carolina's concerns.

Martin said Wednesday that Kearney-Centaur — the Washington, D.C., consulting firm that conducted the study at OMB's request — refused to consider some material given to them by the state.

"We know of information that our Department of Natural Resources and Community Development gave them and they said it was too late," Martin said. "We don't think that's a proper way to do business."

Martin said he will continue working to persuade OMB that the jetties are an economically viable project. He said the cost of eventually losing the Oregon Inlet bridge and the Oregon Inlet Coast Guard Station to erosion would more than offset the cost of building the jetties.

"Jetties work in New Jersey and they work elsewhere in North Carolina," Martin said. "I find it incredible that people who don't know anything about jetties would question the engineers who do know something."

The jetty project, which was authorized by Congress in 1970, has been backed strongly by commercial fishermen and by many of the state's politicians. Supporters of the project say it is essential to build the jetties to strengthen the fishing industry and to save the state-owned Seafood Industrial Park in Wanchese.

The $110 million project has been in limbo since 1979, however, after the Department of Interior refused to grant permits for the Corps of Engineers to use 120 acres of its land to anchor the jetties.

Two Department of Interior agencies — the National Park Service and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service — have objected, fearing construction of the jetties could increase erosion. Interior Department officials also have said they cannot transfer the land without specific congressional authorization.

Since 1983, the Corps of Engineers has spent more than $25 million dredging the inlet. About $5.7 million more is budgeted for dredging during the current fiscal year.

The effect of the Kearney-Centaur report on the eventual chances of funding for the jetties will depend on how the report is evaluated by OMB, Dawson said. "The report is not unequivocal," he said. "Like any report, it has pluses and minuses and strengths and weaknesses.... There's no way to assess that at this point."

However, jetty opponents predicted Wednesday the findings will seriously undermine efforts to obtain funding for the project.

"Some people were suggesting that the economic benefits were of such magnitude that it overrode the environmental concerns," said Dominic Dottavio, regional chief scientist for the National Park Service in Atlanta. "But if the study says there won't be a net economic gain from the jetties...it makes it more difficult for the Corps of Engineers to go forward with the project." Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., a long-time supporter of the jetties, said he expected a negative report. "This is exactly what I anticipated would happen," Jones said.

Raleigh Child Receives Marrow Transplant

SEATTLE (AP) — A 6-year-old girl remained in satisfactory condition early today following a historic bone marrow transplant that was made possible by special arrangements to fly the marrow out of Milwaukee.

The operation on Brooke Ward of Raleigh, N.C., was the first transplant in which donor and recipient were matched through the National Bone Marrow Registry, which was established in September and lists 10,000 potential donors.

The operation lasted more than five hours early Wednesday at Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center. "She's fine. There were no complications at all," said Susan Edmonds, center spokeswoman.

Another spokeswoman, Alice Burgess, said it takes two weeks to determine whether the transplanted marrow had begun producing new cells.

Marguriete Ward said her daughter watched television Wednesday morning after the transplant.

"She's not feeling the best in the world — I'd be lying if I said she did — but she's doing fine," Mrs. Ward said.

The significance of the operation was the new arrangement through the registry, Ms. Burgess said.

"She could have gotten marrow from her brother, which would have been only a partial match, and her chances of survival would have been much lower," Ms. Burgess said.

Marrow from the girl's brother, Jeff, 24, had four of the six major factors needed for a perfect match and would have given Brooke only half the 15 percent to 30 percent survival chance that the perfectly matched marrow provided, Ms. Edmonds said.

Dr. Patrick Beatty, a registry organizer and associate director of the Fred Hutchinson laboratory that analyzes marrow for matches, said he hoped the registry would save lives.

"When it takes six months or more to find a donor — and it often does — the patient could die," he said.

Like most others on the registry, the donor, Diane Walters, 49, of Milwaukee, had been asked at a local blood center where she regularly donates blood whether she would agree to be listed.

Officials said Ms. Walters did not hesitate to undergo numerous needle sticks into her hip bone under general anesthesia to donate the marrow. Her husband died of cancer 10 years ago, and she has a 6-year-old granddaughter.

"It's just something I wanted to do," she told The Seattle Times. "It (marrow) can't be purchased or manufactured, and if a person can give it to another... well, that's the reason I did it."

After doctors at the Milwaukee County Medical Complex removed the bone marrow, the airport was shut down because of a blizzard and special orders were needed to clear the runway for an emergency flight.

Ms. Edmonds said doctors weren't worried about getting the marrow in time.

"We knew it would come in. They always manage," she said. "They have snow there all the time."

An official at Fred Hutchinson said the young girl would have been fine for a day or two, but the risk of infection would increase greatly after that. She already had undergone treatment to destroy the diseased bone marrow, leaving her virtually defenseless against infection.

Brooke has had acute leukemia for the past three years and was in her third and most serious relapse. Doctors said she would have had little chance of survival without the transplant.

Mrs. Ward said she would remain in Seattle for about the next four months while the girl remains at the center.

Professor

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A University of North Carolina at Asheville professor who pleaded guilty in August to mailing anonymous and threatening letters to President Reagan and other officials is still on the faculty and is scheduled to teach this semester, Chancellor David Brown says.

David B. Hopes, a professor of literature, language and communications and a nationally known poet, was sentenced to eight months suspended for two years, was fined $100 plus court costs and was ordered to perform 50 hours of community service.

A Buncombe County grand jury indicted Hopes on the five counts in July. One involved a threatening letter sent to Reagan while the other four alleged Hopes sent contemptuous letters to the city of Asheville about Mike Hahn, an Asheville police officer who arrested Hopes on a drunk driving charge in 1985.

Bladen Voting

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has suspended a lawsuit challenging Bladen County's method of electing commissioners, effectively putting the matter on hold while a related suit between the county and the U.S. Department of Justice proceeds.

In July, a group of black residents filed suit in U.S. District Court in Wilmington asking that the existing at-large election system be declared in violation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, contending that it unfairly diluted minority voting strength.

The Board of County Commissioners approved a plan in April to eliminate the current system of electing a five-member board at large. The new proposal would expand the board to seven members, with two elected from each of three districts and one elected at large.

The Justice Department denied the alternative plan, however, and the county then filed suit in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, asking the court to overrule the Justice Department and allow the plan to be implemented.

Bladen County is one of 40 North Carolina counties that is obligated by the Voting Rights Act to have the Justice Department or the federal courts approve any changes to its voting system.

Picket Rights

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake Superior Court judge has ruled that a Raleigh attorney did not violate a state law when he picketed against the death penalty within 300 feet of the state Supreme Court building.

Judge F. Gordon Battle of Chapel Hill ruled that attorney William B. Crumpler had been engaged in "constitutionally protected conduct" in "peacefully picketing" across the street from the Supreme Court in Raleigh in September 1986.

Battle said Crumpler's action had not violated a misdemeanor statute prohibiting people from picketing "with intent to interfere with, obstruct, or impede the administration of justice, or with intent to influence any justice or judge... within 300 feet" of a courthouse.

Sentenced

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Former Pembroke State University Professor Barney Keester Pauze has been sentenced to 20 years in prison after pleading guilty to six counts of taking indecent liberties with children.

Pauze, 42, of Pembroke, pleaded guilty to performing sexual acts on two teen-aged boys, 15 and 14, according to court records.

Superior Court Judge Samuel T. Currin sentenced Pauze to two 10-year terms, running consecutively, and a 10-year suspended sentence.

Pauze was an assistant professor in the PSU Department of Sociology and Social Work when he was arrested Sept. 24. Pauze had once served as coordinator of the school's criminal justice studies program. He resigned from PSU the day of his arrest.

Artist Dies

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Minnie Evans, a self-taught artist with a sixth-grade education who gained national attention for her paintings and drawings, died Wednesday at Groten Nursing Home in Wilmington. She was 95.

A native of the Long Creek community in Pender County, Mrs. Evans was the longtime gatekeeper at Airlie Gardens. She was nearly 70 before her art works — filled with images of angels, demons, exotic plants and strange animals — were "discovered" outside New Hanover County.

Mrs. Evans' work has been exhibited at the American Museum of Folk Art, the Whitney Museum of Art and the Museum of Modern Art in New York; the Smithsonian Institution in Washington; the Portal Gallery in London; the Los Angeles County Museum; and dozens of other museums and galleries.

Blood Gift

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Race fans who donated blood to the Red Cross today got an unusual gift — a lap around Charlotte Motor Speedway. The program was part of a joint project involving the speedway and the Cabarrus County chapter of the American Red Cross.

Authority

RALEIGH (AP) — Representatives of eight North Carolina counties will meet in Raleigh Friday to finalize arrangements for a new business financing authority designed to provide small firms better access to industrial revenue bond financing.

The effort, which was originally proposed by state Commerce Secretary Claude Pope earlier this year, should improve the availability of low-interest, asset-based financing for North Carolina small- and mid-sized businesses, officials said.

"Over the past 18 months, revenue bond issues of less than $2 million have been prohibitively expensive because of the high overhead costs of bond financing," Pope said. "For that reason, many small firms have not been able to afford bond financing."

State Panel Says AIDS Carriers Should Be Asked To Name Sex-Drug Partners

RALEIGH (AP) — A state commission has decided to ask people who test positive for the AIDS virus to voluntarily supply the names of their sexual or drug-using partners, but not make those lists mandatory.

"People will not go in for (AIDS) testing if they are required to make a list of contacts," Elizabeth St. Amand said at a public hearing before the North Carolina Commission on Health Services voted Wednesday. "We need to remember we are fighting a disease, not people."

The commission, with nine of 12 members present, voted unanimously for voluntary reports along with other rules that accompany changes in the state's communicable disease law approved by the Legislature last summer.

Wednesday's public hearing was the last of seven held around the state on the proposed rules, which take effect Feb. 1, 1988. More than 20 people, including gay rights activists, medical community spokesmen and researchers, urged the commission to reject the mandatory reporting regulation.

Critics said mandatory reporting of sexual and drug-using partners would do nothing to check the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Instead, it would have the opposite effect, discouraging people from being tested, they said.

The mandatory reporting system would have required victims to supply the lists to doctors who would pass them along to state health officials. The state would notify people on the lists that they might be infected.

Jo Ann Griggs, of Raleigh, described a year of "emotional torture" she underwent after learning that a former boyfriend was bisexual. Ms. Griggs said she was undecided about whether to get a test for HIV, the AIDS virus, and worried that if she had it she might transmit it to her husband.

"When it finally did sink in (that I might be infected), I was terrified," she said. "I felt very distressed ... and very, very alone."

"I lived in fear that if anyone found out there was even a possibility that I had AIDS ... no one would even want to take a chance on having me around."

Finally she got the test and found she was not infected. But she said she probably would not have been tested if the contact requirement had been in effect.

David Kittner, of Asheville, a 24-year-old law student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said the contact list rule would make getting an AIDS test even more traumatic.

He said he had gotten the test and "it makes you nervous. ... It makes you real scared." But an equally difficult ordeal was the treatment he received after telling friends what he had done, he said.

"I was amazed at how people suddenly changed their perspective ... just looked at me different," Kittner said.

Lumbees Presenting Recognition Request

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — Almost 100 years after they first asked for federal recognition, representatives of the Lumbee Indians are in Washington hoping to convince federal officials that the Lumbees constitute a distinct tribe.

"This is a historic moment for us," Ruth Locklear, head of the Lumbee enrollment office and coordinator of the petition seeking federal recognition, said Wednesday.

She said the 34,000 people on the tribe's enrollment list are descendants of those who originally asked the government for recognition in 1888, "and we intend to see it through this time."

Lumbee representatives will try to convince the U.S. Department of the Interior that the Lumbees are a separate and distinct tribe of Indians with their own tribal government, said Julian Pierce, director of Lumbee River Legal Services and one of the main organizers of the current petition for federal recognition.

He said the petition and thousands of supporting documents took eight years to compile.

"When you become federally recognized, it's more of a clean-cut effort as to what you're entitled to from the government," Pierce said, explaining why the Lumbees want the federal government to officially recognize them as a tribe.

Pierce said the Lumbees do not want a reservation or many of the other traditional trappings the government has given Indian people.

He said the 34,000 Lumbee Indians living in Robeson County simply want more and better services from their government. And federal recognition would make them eligible for programs under the Bureau of Indian Affairs, which oversees all federal Indian programs.

Indian education, health and employment programs are funneled through the BIA.

"We're looking to make sure our people who need services get them," he said.

School Officials Want More Control

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's next state superintendent of public instruction should push for more local control of schools and consider reducing statewide testing, the state's school superintendents say.

"We are trying to influence whoever might get that position to be proactive on those issues," Swain County Supt. James Causby, chairman of the superintendent's commission of the state Association of School Administrators, said Wednesday.

Eight priorities were drafted through a series of regional and statewide meetings that involved all 140 local school superintendents. The priorities express a general theme, calling for less control at the state level. "I think what we have seen is a move at the state level in the last eight to 10 years away from collegial relations with local units to almost a big brother relationship," Saint Pauls City Schools superintendent Thomas Paquin said.

The superintendents want the next state superintendent to push for "a healthy balance" between state and local decision-making to give local systems more control of their money.

They also advocate a re-evaluation of the state's testing program. The state's effort to show accountability is cutting into class time and burdening teachers and administrators with paperwork, Causby said. "We do have a concern that testing is beginning to interfere with instruction," he said.

The superintendents also called for more political clout for the State Board of Education and a change in the department's hierarchy that would put the controller under the superintendent. Both officials now report to the board.

They said they favored a state superintendent with some background in education. Causby said two likely Democratic candidates for the post — Rep. Bobby Etheridge of Lillington and Henry McCarthy, a professor at Appalachian State University in Boone — have suitable backgrounds.

Paquin said he was waiting for the right candidate to step forward. "I'd like to see a professional educator," Paquin said. "It is ironic that a high school principal has to be certified, a teacher has to be certified, yet we don't have those same requirements for our state leader."

The superintendents also urged a fairer salary structure for educators and higher pay for the state superintendent. They also said they were concerned that some county commissioners were cutting local funding as the state's eight-year Basic Education Program pumped more money into their schools.

"We are seeing a decrease in the total dollars going to local school systems," Causby said.

Pay Raise For Solons Considered

RALEIGH (AP) — A state legislative panel recommended Wednesday that telephone and postage allowances for lawmakers should be more than doubled and began considering a possible pay raise for legislators.

The Executive and Legislative Salary Study Commission unanimously agreed that legislators should receive up to $1,500 per biennium for phones and postage, compared with the current $631.

Democratic and Republican members of the panel also agreed informally that legislators should get pay increases. Some members, including Sen. Kenneth C. Royall Jr., D-Durham, a commission co-chairman, said the base salary should be increased to $18,000 annually from $10,140.

The telephone and postage allotments are used by legislators to stay in touch with their constituents, but panel members said lawmakers are not given enough for those expenses.

The commission is studying whether the salaries North Carolina provides its lawmakers and top government officials are high enough to attract quality people. Jim Van Hecke, chairman of the N.C. Democratic Party, told the panel in a letter that a "substantial increase" in pay and a lighter work load is needed to attract more qualified candidates to the General Assembly. Van Hecke said the legislature should consider meeting three days a week during sessions so members could have Mondays and Fridays to work at home.

North Carolina lawmakers rank 28th in the nation in salaries. In addition, they also receive $79 a day in living expenses during sessions and for attending official meetings at other times.

Friday Panel Appeals For Educational Pact

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A group of educators led by former UNC president William Friday has prepared a report the educators hope will become part of the platforms for the next presidential election.

The Commission on National Challenges in Higher Education, a 33-member blue-ribbon panel of educators named by the American Council on Education, released a memorandum to the 41st president Wednesday.

The agenda, which calls for a new partnership between government and universities, was to be presented first to presidential candidate Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., Friday said. Eventually it will be presented to each of the candidates.

"All of the candidates have put education as their first priority," Friday said.

America's universities will play an increasingly integral role in preparing the citizens of the future, the report says.

"To overcome its problems and take advantage of its opportunities, America depends on educated men and women and the ideas they generate," the report states. "Our colleges and universities are the nation's principal source of both of these vital ingredients."

The nation's primary objectives, the memo states, best can be achieved by a "renaissance of the partnership of higher education and government, a partnership reinforced by the private sector."

The present partnership is strained by cuts in federal money and policy disagreements, the report notes.

To educate Americans to participate in an increasingly global society, the memo calls for financial support for strengthening international studies and research at the collegiate level, encouraging student and faculty exchange programs, and expanded foreign-language programs.

As a means of revitalizing the economy, the memo recommends support of education and research programs to train jobless workers and workers for fields where shortages exist, such as teaching.

To make this training a financial reality, it asks for permanent provisions in the tax code that exempt from taxation the education benefits employers extend to workers.

The memo recommends intensified federal programs, such as Head Start and Upward Bound, to encourage disadvantaged students to continue their education.

The federal government can play a financial role in expanding access to education by increasing grants to needy students and continuing to work to decrease student-loan default rates, the report notes.

More incentive programs to help parents save for their children's education also should be encouraged, it says.

Soviet Writer Seeks Interviews In N.C.

RALEIGH (AP) — A Soviet writer for the Communist Party newspaper wants to visit two tiny communities in Halifax and Franklin counties to get their impressions of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and the Soviet Union in general.

"I would like to talk to as many people as possible, to get their impressions of the summit ... about what's been happening in Washington, D.C. ... to learn how much they know about" the Soviet Union, Ivestia reporter Alexander Shalned said Wednesday.

Shalned said he wants to visit the Franklin County community of Justice and Sunnyside in Halifax County next Wednesday if the U.S. State Department approves. Any time he travels 25 miles or more away from New York, he has to notify the department of his plan and get approval, he said.

Shalned said he had never been to North Carolina. He decided to stop in Justice and Sunnyside after studying a map of the state.

"I was just looking at a map of North Carolina and just trying to figure out what the names of tiny towns, in North Carolina, close to the (Virginia) border were," he said. "I saw Justice, and I thought the name of this town sounds pretty good to me."

Judge Says PTL Needs Tax Status

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The PTL ministry is already in financial trouble and revoking its tax-exempt status would be the "kiss of death," a federal bankruptcy judge says.

"The contributions are dropping off," said Judge Rufus Reynolds, who Wednesday temporarily blocked the Internal Revenue Service from revoking PTL's tax-exempt status. "I look at the (financial) reports every week.

"I feel, balancing all the factors, PTL would definitely be in a position of going under if this were not restrained," Reynolds told U.S. Justice Department attorney Richard Mitchell.

To willingly give up its tax-exempt status would be akin to "accepting our death," said David Clark, the bankruptcy trustee for the ministry.

"I have no doubt whatsoever that such revocation would cause a great deal of harm that would be difficult to overcome," he said during testimony at the 2½-hour hearing.

Clark told the court contributions which are currently deductible pay for about 58 percent of the ministry's operations. He said a loss of the tax-exempt status would cause a reduction in money contributed.

"It also would make it difficult, if not impossible, to restore credibility, which we are trying very hard to do," Clark said. "We would be branded and we would have to wear this badge of dishonor."

Mitchell declined comment when asked if he planned to appeal the decision to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

Clark said he was gratified with the outcome.

"I think justice was served," he said. "To have imposed a death penalty on an organization because of the misuse of funds by its prior leaders would be unfair, and I think the American public would see it that way."

Reynolds urged the IRS and PTL to work out their differences prior to the expected confirmation of PTL's reorganization plan, which is currently before his court.

The IRS contends ministry contributions funded the lavish lifestyles of exiled founders Jim and Tammy Bakker and that some of PTL's enterprises — its hotel and water park — were more commercial than ministerial.

The IRS claims PTL owes at least $62 million in taxes from June 1893 to June 1987. If the ministry is not found to be tax-exempt, the IRS claims PTL could be subject to an additional $20 million for business income taxes.

Mitchell told the judge the IRS filed its request to revoke the tax-exempt status because contributions deducted on tax returns reduce revenues to the U.S. Treasury.

"Because this affects federal revenues that we look to collect from the American body politic, we are putting the American taxpayer on notice that we no longer will consider this a deductible contribution," he said. "We are not seeking to assess a tax against the debtor. We are just trying to protect ourselves in regard to prior notice to the people who would contribute money otherwise."

Bakker resigned March 19 as chairman of PTL following reports he had a sexual liaison with Jessica Hahn, a former church secretary. The Charlotte Observer also reported PTL officials agreed to pay Ms. Hehn $265,000 in return for her silence about the tryst.

As the troubled ministry filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy law, a federal grand jury in Charlotte began investigating Bakker and several of his top aides.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell took over the reins of the faltering ministry, but on Oct. 8 he and other PTL director resigned in protest over competing plans to reorganize PTL.

Robbery

WILMINGTON (AP) — A man used a handgun and what he said was a bomb to rob a Calabash bank Tuesday, then escaped on foot.

The Wilmington Police Department bomb squad spent about two hours dismantling the suspected bomb, which the man left in the United Carolina Bank on N.C. 179.

One of the Wilmington police officers who dismantled the device said it consisted of a large manila envelope heavily bound with tape containing another taped package, inside which was a heavily taped box with a switch on it.

No one was injured in the robbery. Officials would not say how much money the man got.

California Group Starts Anti-Smoking Drive

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Backers of a proposed "Tobacco Rebellion" state initiative billed as the most significant attack ever on smoking and tobacco say the cigarette industry plans to spend $16 million to defeat it.

A coalition of health and environmental groups on Wednesday launched a petition drive to collect 600,000 signatures of registered voters to qualify the measure for the November 1988 state ballot.

Among other things, they say their initiative will raise an estimated $650 million a year by raising cigarette and other tobacco product prices. The money would go to treatment and research of tobacco-related diseases and anti-smoking education programs. On cigarettes, the price increase could be as much as a quarter a pack.

Officials of the Coalition For A Healthy California, speaking at one of eight press conferences conducted statewide, said they plan to spend about $2 million.

State Assemblyman Lloyd Connelly, chief legislative backer of the proposed Tax and Health Protection Act, said the campaign "may be the most significant attack on tobacco use and smoking in the history of the United States." He said it "could save thousands and thousands of lives."

Thirty-five statewide organizations have endorsed the measure and joined the campaign, according to coalition leaders.

A tobacco industry spokesman discounted the group's assertion that the industry plans to spend $16 million or more to defeat the initiative, calling that figure "incredibly inflated" but declining to estimate a spending amount.

Jeff Raimundo, Sacramento-based spokesman for the pro-tobacco group Californians Against Unfair Tax Increases, said he expects the initiative drive to win strong public backing until voters are educated to the measure's "flaws."

He noted that only 5 percent or $32 million would be earmarked for research, with 45 percent or $295 million targeted for health care providers and another 25 percent allocated to the Legislature for related uses.

"What you're seeing is an effort that, while couched in very noble terms, could amount to $450 million in payments to California doctors and hospitals," the industry representative said.

Besides San Francisco, the anti-smoking coalition held press conferences Wednesday in Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Jose, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, San Diego and Eureka.

Sponsors of the measure include the American Cancer Society, the American Lung Association, the American Heart Association, the California Medical Association, the California Hospital Association and Campaign California.

Officials of the organizations stressed the importance of defeating what they called "the tobacco goliath" in the campaign. They said two opinion polls they took earlier this year show 65 percent public support for their measure, including a majority of smokers.

"Smoking cigarettes is really the No. 1 health problem in the United States today," said Dr. Raymond Weisberg, medical director of the Sister Mary Philippa Memorial Clinic.

"It's the only legal product which causes death and illness in predictable fashion."

Dr. Eugene Tolls, president of the San Francisco Medical Society and counselor for the California Medical Association, said: "We are working toward a smoke-free society by the year 2000."

Farm Credit Bailout Is On The Move

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $4 billion bailout for the Farm Credit System appears headed for final congressional action within days amid deepening concern over the system's financial problems.

"Two weeks ago ... you would have gotten odds if you had bet that we could get this consensus and get this bill through this year," Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., said Wednesday after House and Senate negotiators approved the measure.

Leahy, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said enough time remains to win approval in both houses and start the bill on its way to the president in the dwindling days before lawmakers start their holiday recess.

There have been hints of a presidential veto in the offing, but Assistant Treasury Secretary Charles Sethness told reporters Wednesday that the administration has no position yet and must first study any changes in the measure.

Approval by a House-Senate conference committee capped a furious, last-minute drive to avoid delay until February or later. The measure has been a year in the making and represents the only major farm bill of 1987.

Intensified action came a week after the system's Federal Land Bank in Jackson, Miss., said its losses have been so severe that it must seek alternative ways of arranging credit for farmers.

The system is a 70-year-old network of 37 banks and hundreds of borrower-owned lending co-ops that holds a $50 billion loan portfolio and one-third of the U.S. farm credit market.

It is reeling under $4.8 billion in losses in the last two years, brought on by the rural crisis of the early 1980s and long-term borrowing at high interest rates.

The bill would authorize sale of $4 billion in 15-year bonds to shore up the system, with the interest shared by the government and the system itself.

The price tag for taxpayers is estimated at between $1 billion and $1.5 billion over five years. That represents the cost not only of interest but of borrower rights provisions included for the Agriculture Department's unrelated Farmers Home Administration.

Similar rights would be accorded to Farm Credit System borrowers but at no cost to taxpayers, by congressional reckoning. Included would be greater notice of collection efforts, right of first refusal for former owners to reacquire their foreclosed property and homestead protection provisions.

The Farm Credit System, which has been criticized by federal regulators for excessive overhead, would be slimmed down under the bill. Land banks and intermediate credit banks in each of the 12 districts would be merged.

Balloting would be held to decide on mergers of the districts themselves and the number could shrink to as few as six. Banks for co-operators in each of the 12 districts would vote on merging with the Central Bank for Cooperatives in Denver and thus forming a new National Bank for Cooperatives.

The legislation also establishes a secondary market that would pool farm mortgages and use them to back securities sold to investors, similar to the way the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) and other home mortgage secondary markets work.

In the scramble to get the finishing touches on the bill, however, lawmakers made major changes in the secondary market. Under pressure from Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, they placed the securities under full Securities and Exchange Commission regulation, according to Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind.

Simple Mistakes Turning Up In INF Treaty Despite Effort For Precision

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Soviet Union strove for unusual precision in writing the new arms accord signed last week in Washington, but a few glitches have been found.

Take the case of Air Force Plant 19 in San Diego, where launchers were made for cruise missiles.

The residents of that California city might be surprised to learn that — negotiators being human — the plant was given longitude coordinates in a treaty appendix that placed it in the Atlantic Ocean.

At another point, the Soviet negotiators had a hard time with their math in counting second-stage rocket motors.

Those two mistakes were caught before President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev signed the treaty on Dec. 8 eliminating intermediate- and shorter-range nuclear missiles.

But since then, State Department officials say they've found three more mistakes, all described as minor.

"We've already written the Russians and informed them of the mistakes," said Lt. Col. Jerry Myers, a technical adviser to the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

"And there are procedures to update the technical information at the time the treaty enters into force, which is after Senate ratification."

The latest mistakes to be discovered involve two miscounts of missile launchers and the wrong map coordinates for a missile base in West Germany.

As signed, the Memorandum of Understanding that accompanies the treaty — spelling out where all the weapons are — says the Soviets will find 31 launchers for cruise missiles at a military base in Wueschheim, West Germany.

In fact, Myers says, Soviet inspectors will find only 21 launchers there.

The other miscount involves the number of launchers for Pershing 2 nuclear missiles stored at Fort Sill, Okla., a training facility for missile crews. The memorandum says there are 39 when it should read 38.

"Right now, we don't know of any other mistakes," Myers adds. "And at least so far, we haven't heard anything from the Soviets about finding any more mistakes on their side."

"Mistakes like these were not unexpected, since we were dealing with a long list of technical data and trying to get the format set properly," he continued.

"When you consider we were dealing with the equivalent of 135 to 140 pages of data in the computer, it worked out pretty well."

Myers said the reference in the treaty documents to a U.S. rocket launch site at Cape Cod, Mass. — a listing that Pentagon officials had a hard time explaining earlier this week — was not in reality a mistake.

The listing referred to what used to be known as the North Truro Air Force Station, but the site was transferred to the Federal Aviation Administration years ago.

'Doomsday Clock' Being Reset

CHICAGO (AP) — The hands of the "Doomsday Clock" are being moved back from the brink of nuclear midnight partly because of last week's superpower arms reduction agreement, say editors of a scientists' magazine.

The clock on the cover of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists has read 11:57 p.m. since December 1983, when the hands were moved closer to midnight after arms control efforts failed and U.S.-Soviet relations broke down.

The clock has been changed only 11 times since it first appeared on the magazine's cover in June 1947. How far it will be turned back was to be announced today at the University of Chicago, where the journal is published.

"I'm not at liberty to say tonight how far back the hands will be turned," editor Len Ackland said in a telephone interview late Wednesday. "But they will be turned back."

The recently signed U.S.-Soviet treaty on intermediate-range nuclear weapons was only one of the developments the magazine's board of directors considered in deciding to change the clock, Ackland said.

"The clock is not moved on the basis of a single event but is changed to reflect the trend toward or away from nuclear holocaust," he said.

Major improvements in U.S.-Soviet relations contributed to the decision to change the clock, Managing Editor Nancy Myers said last week.

She cited the May 1986 pact to exchange seismic information on nuclear tests and the emergence of the 145,000-member International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, which won a Nobel Peace Prize.

The position of the clock hands is determined by the editors and the 21-member board of directors in consultation with the publication's board of sponsors, Ackland said.

The board of sponsors consists of 45 prominent scientists, 16 of them Nobel laureates.

DOT Says Fatalities Increasing With Higher Speed

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Traffic fatalities on rural interstate highways soared by more than 50 percent in states that increased their speed limit to 65 mph last spring, according to Transportation Department figures.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said 450 people were killed on rural interstate roads over a three-month period last summer in 22 states where higher speed limits went into effect. The same roads claimed 296 lives during the same May-July period the previous year.

Congress cleared the way last April for states to increase their speed limits on rural interstate roads, but not on other highways. So far 38 states have eased speed restrictions over 27,900 miles of roadway, but only 22 had higher speeds in effect and provided enough data to be included in the NHTSA figures, officials said.

The statistics from the 22 states showed that fatalities climbed by 52 percent on the rural interstate roads during the May-July period, while traffic deaths on other roads where the speed limit could not be increased declined by about 10 percent.

In seven states where the speed limit remained at 55 mph on all highways, the number of deaths on rural interstates rose only 10 percent during the May-July period.

The figures were the latest available from the states, highway safety agency officials said.

NHTSA officials cautioned against "drawing any conclusions ... about long-term trends" from the statistics, which covered a relatively small period. In four of the 22 states, fatalities on the rural interstates actually declined, while in other states they jumped by 150 percent or more.

"We don't know what the reason is behind these numbers. ... It's way too early to draw any long-term conclusions," said NHTSA Administrator Diane Steed in an interview.

She cautioned that the figures in some cases could have been influenced by a sharp increase in the volume of vehicles on the road and that actual driving speeds in the states have yet to be determined.

But other highway safety experts suggested that the preliminary figures, nevertheless, provide the best glimpse yet of the possible safety implications of traveling at higher speeds even on relatively safe rural interstate highways.

"It's probably a pretty strong indication that going up to 65 has a great effect on lives lost. But I don't think that should be any surprise. That's what we've estimated would happen," said Allan Williams, a vice president and highway accident statistics expert for the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., who strongly opposed the speed limit legislation approved by Congress early this year, called the figures "an unacceptable increase in deaths and injuries."

A provision was expected to be debated in Congress later today that would allow states to ease speed restrictions on another 5,997 miles of limited access rural roadways that were not covered by last April's law because they are not part of the interstate system.

In several states with increased fatalities were so small that no conclusions could be drawn, experts said. Those increases could be the result of just one or two accidents.

Nebraska and North Dakota, for example, both went from just one fatality before the speed limit change to three afterward — yielding a reported 200 percent increase in each case, but one with little statistical significance.

However, in other states the statistics involved fairly large samples.

Former Wedtech Director Cleared In Bribery Trial

NEW YORK (AP) — A former Wedtech Corp. director was acquitted of bribery by a jury that refused to believe the prosecution's main witness, a former commander of the state militia who admitted to bigamy and lying.

"There was just not enough to back him up," said juror Robin Zlotowitz, referring to the witness, Vito J. Castellano.

"We weren't going to take his word alone."

Bernard G. Ehrlich, a former director of the Bronx defense contracting company and major general in the New York National Guard, had been charged with paying $60,000 to Castellano, his former commander and military chief of staff to Gov. Mario Cuomo, during a two-year period.

Castellano, 61, of Armonk, testified that he was paid "each and every time" he acted on behalf of Wedtech, which made electrical and mechanical equipment.

The alleged payments were for inroductions to members of Congress.

The state Supreme Court jury found Ehrlich, 59, innocent Wednesday on a single bribery count.

Ehrlich, who lives in Bedford, said he harbored no bitterness because of the charges brought against him. He said Assistant District Attorney John Moscov "did his duty as he saw it."

Ehrlich, a former law partner of Rep. Mario Biaggi, was booted out of the National Guard last year for a breach of standards.

Castellano testified as part of a plea bargain. He pleaded guilty in February to a tax charge but has not yet been sentenced. The prosecutor acknowledged that the sentence would depend in part on his cooperation in the case against Ehrlich.

Castellano's character was made an issue in the trial by defense attorney Peter Driscoll. Castellano admitted under cross examination that he was a liar, a usurer and a bigamist — he had had two wives at one time until one of them died of cancer earlier this year.

He also admitted that he had loaned $5,000 at 52 percent interest to a National Guard subordinate whom he regarded as "a son."

Driscoll acknowledged that his client had been a conduit for money from Wedtech to Castellano, but said the payments were not illegal.

Carter Hopes For Cure

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter, taking a break from chemotherapy to spend Christmas with his family, said he hopes to beat the cancer that killed his father and sister so he can speak about alcohol and drug abuse.

"I feel like I'm going to lick this thing," former president Jimmy Carter's 50-year-old brother said in an interview published in The Atlanta Constitution today. "I hope in a couple of months they will give me a clean bill of health. If we don't lick it ..."

He paused, looked at his wife Sybil, and added: "I hope I will have lived a useful life and had something to offer other people. Sybil is going out talking to people about alcohol and drug abuse, and I want to go with her and talk where it will help."

Carter, known for his beer-drinking antics during his brother's 1976 presidential campaign, quit drinking nine years ago after receiving treatment at an alcoholism center.

Billy Carter learned in September that he had inoperable pancreatic cancer. His father, James Earl Carter, and sister, Ruth Carter Stapleton, died of the disease.

Disneyland Closes As Snowstorm Hits California Beaches

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

A Pacific storm crossed Southern California and headed to Western high country today after dropping snow on California beaches, while its forerunner dumped heavy snow on New England. At least 83 deaths were blamed on the weather.

The storm closed Disneyland and other Southern California attractions. "It's so gosh-darn cold and snowing," said California Highway Patrol Sgt. Mark Lunn in Los Angeles, where rain deluged downtown Wednesday while snow fell in the surrounding hills.

The storm that swept over the nation starting Saturday continued to drop snow today south and east of the eastern Great Lakes, and left freezing temperatures in its wake as it moved out over the Atlantic. The Pacific storm caused snow in the Western mountains, even in lower elevations around San Diego.

Up to 3 feet of snow was reported on the ground Wednesday evening at Tehachapi in the central California mountains, and accumulations of 4 to 8 inches were forecast today for southern Nevada mountains.

Icy roads and reduced visibility were blamed for at least four traffic deaths Wednesday in Oregon and California, and a homeless man was found frozen in a doorway in Los Angeles.

Three sea urchin divers were missing and presumed dead after their 42-foot fishing boat was swamped by high seas off California. A Navy helicopter rescued six people in wetsuits who spent 17 hours clinging to the boat's debris, Coast Guard Petty Officer James McPherson said.

The two major highways linking Los Angeles to the north, Interstates 15 and 5, remained partly closed early today, and thousands of motorists were stranded in the high desert near Victorville.

High winds along the coast tore up boats and piers and kicked sand dunes onto roadways. Power outages affected 177,000 Southern California Edison customers and at least 45,000 Pacific Gas & Electric Co. customers, utility spokesmen said.

Snow even reached as low as the scenic coastal community of Malibu. "I can't believe it. I lived here 25 years and I don't recall ever having snow before," said Sharon Daley, who witnessed the two-minute snowfall.

On the East Coast, up to a foot of snow in parts of Maine closed schools in Bangor, Augusta and other towns and made driving treacherous Wednesday. Central Maine Power Co. said downed lines left 3,600 customers in Sanford and 2,000 in Portland in the dark.

Arctic air drove temperatures well below freezing Wednesday in the nation's mid-section from the Canadian border to the Mexican border.

A bitter cold snap in Texas that a medical examiner said contributed to the deaths of two transient men in Dallas was expected to end today after record lows Wednesday of minus 5 degrees in Amarillo, 3 degrees in Lubbock and 7 in El Paso.

Northern Florida had freezing temperatures this morning, and readings were in the mid- to upper 30s as far south as Gainesville.

Icy weather in the Midwest complicated the task of clearing snow. Travel conditions were reported returning to normal in most of hard-hit Illinois, except for northern sections such as De Kalb County, where roads were plastered with a foot of snow and wind-whipped drifts 7 feet high.

"We're still advising against travel unless absolutely necessary," Deputy Lisa Byrd of the De Kalb County Sheriff's Department said late Wednesday.

While driving was an obvious hazard, at least 24 of the weather-related fatalities in Illinois were Chicago-area men who collapsed after shoveling snow.

In West Memphis, Ark., where a tornado linked to the first storm killed six people and injured 241 on Monday, Mayor Keith Ingram took representatives of the Federal Emergency Management Agency on a tour Wednesday of the three-mile strip where hundreds were left homeless.

Gov. Bill Clinton wrote to President Reagan on Wednesday asking for a federal disaster declaration for the Mississippi River town. Ingram expressed confidence that timely aid would arrive.

Airport Scare

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Fire trucks, state police and FBI agents converged on an airport after hearing that a man with explosives was aboard a jetliner, but it was only a sailor trying to refill his cigarette lighter.

There were no arrests following Wednesday night's incident on USAir Flight 86 from Philadelphia, and there was no harm to the 73 passengers on board the Boeing 737 jet, officials said.

The incident began when David Patrick Gapp, 24, tried to light a cigarette while the plane was in the air, discovered his lighter was empty and got out a can of fluid to fill it, said Wayne Alford, special agent in charge of Albany's FBI office.

A flight attendant confronted Gapp, who served with the USS Saratoga in the Persian Gulf, told him it was illegal to carry a flammable liquid on an airplane.

After a "verbal exchange with minor hostilities," Gapp gave up the lighter fluid and the stewardess told the head flight attendant about the incident, Alford said.

She, in turn, told the pilot, who radioed to the Albany County Airport control that he had a man with explosives on board his plane, Alford said.

"When a pilot does that, the full hijacking plan goes into action," he said. Emergency personnel scurried to airport, and Gapp was quickly taken into custody.

After questioning by officials, the sailor from Voorheesville, N.Y., was released.

Indian Court Orders Union Carbide To Pay Bhopal Victims $270 Million

BHOPAL, India (AP) — People injured in the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster cheered and wept today when a judge ordered Union Carbide Corp. to pay $270 million in interim relief to the victims of the world's worst industrial accident.

The payment, ordered by Bhopal District Judge M.W. Deo, works out to about 9 percent of the $3 billion that India is seeking in damages from the multinational company, based in Danbury, Conn.

Deo ordered the relief payment to be allocated within two months.

Union Carbide issued a statement in Danbury saying the payment ordered by the court "amounts to awarding damages without a trial."

In Bhopal, Anil Diwan, a Carbide attorney, said: "We will study the judgment before deciding further action."

Earlier this week, lawyers for lobbying groups representing the victims had demanded $770 million in interim payments from Carbide.

Nevertheless, Vepa Sarthy, the Indian government's attorney, described the decision as "an excellent judgment." Attorney Vibhuti Jha, representing the Poison Gas Episode Struggle Front and the Peoples' Health Clinic, said he is "satisfied to a great extent" with Deo's order.

The judge said the order for interim relief "shall naturally be without any prejudice to the rights and defenses of the parties to the suit and the counterclaim that may be finally adjudicated."

He said he felt interim relief was necessary because "attempts at an overall settlement appear to have bogged down in the din of diverse, loud voices, leaving the poor gas victims, pathetically past even the third anniversary of the unprecedented disaster, to fight out the legal battle."

Deo made no mention of the $46 million that the Indian government already has spent to aid disaster victims.

More than 2,800 people were killed and at least 20,000 seriously injured when gas leaked from a Carbide subsidiary's pesticide plant in Bhopal in central India on Dec. 3, 1984.

It is considered the world's worst industrial accident.

India on Sept. 5, 1986, filed its $3 billion suit on behalf of the victims, accusing Carbide of negligence.

The U.S. corporation blames sabotage by a disgruntled employee.

On Dec. 1, India filed criminal charges, accusing Carbide, several subsidiaries and a number of officers of homicide and injury to people and animals. The criminal case was filed after lawyers for Carbide and the government said they were unable to reach an out-of-court settlement in the case. The lawyers had been discussing a settlement in the range of $500 million, according to sources close to the case.

Scores of gas victims, who were staging a sit-in demonstration outside the courthouse today to demand interim relief, broke into cheers and tears when Deo's decision was announced.

Deo said the money would be distributed by P.D. Muley, a Madhya Pradesh state high court judge who has been named by the government as relief commissioner for the gas victims.

Deo suggested that compensation could be $15,400 for death; $7,692 for total disability, and unspecified lesser amounts for victims with lesser injuries. The judge did say how many people should be compensated.

Robert M. Berzok, Carbide's spokesman in Danbury, today repeated the company's claim that sabotage by a disgruntled employee caused the gas leak.

"Although we are deeply concerned for the victims, interim compensation has never been allowed where the evidence with respect to liability is in dispute," Berzok said in a statement. "In that event, neither Union Carbide Corp. nor Union Carbide India Ltd. should be found liable for damages."

Berzok added that ordering the corporation to pay interim compensation "is likely to prolong litigation."

Deo said many families were suffering because their principal wage-earner had been killed in the disaster or was permanently disabled and unable to work.

"The need for immediate relief to the gas victims is so obvious that nothing more need be said," he concluded.

Earthquake Jolts Tokyo

CHIBA, Japan (AP) — A strong earthquake jolted Tokyo and surrounding areas today, killing two people and injuring at least 11. Many people dove under furniture as their homes and offices swayed violently for several minutes.

The quake was strongest in Chiba prefecture, just east of Tokyo, where a falling statue killed one woman and a collapsing stone wall killed another and seriously wounded her companion, said Susumu Mochihara, a police spokesman.

The earthquake, with a preliminary reading of 6.6 on the Richter scale, knocked objects off desks and shelves, broke windows, disrupted telephone service in some parts of the Tokyo region and briefly halted train service, but the National Police Agency said there were no reports of widespread damage.

The tremor struck at 11:08 a.m. (9:08 p.m. EST Wednesday).

The Central Meteorological Agency reported 99 aftershocks in the three hours after the main quake, nearly all minor.

"It wasn't a panic situation here at all," said a police officer at Chiba station, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "Things were pretty normal." Passing trains often shake the police box where he is stationed, he said. "Frankly speaking, I didn't think it was an earthquake at the beginning."

At least nine people were injured in central Tokyo and one in neighboring Ibaraki prefecture, most of them hit by falling objects, Tokyo Fire Department spokesman Kimiya Ishida said. Most of the injuries were minor, Ishida said.

The city of Tokyo is home to 11.9 million people.

Czechs Name Party Leader

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Gustav Husak, who took over the leadership of the Communist Party 18 years ago after Soviet forces crushed Prague's "Spring," was replaced as party chief today by Politburo member Milos Jakes, the official news agency CTK reported.

Husak, 74, retains the ceremonial and less powerful presidency, which he has held since May 1975.

CTK said Husak, who suffers from poor eyesight, asked to be relieved of the top party post and to retire from the influential Central Committee secretariat, which formulates day-to-day party policy. He will keep his seat on the ruling Politburo.

The change at the top of the Communist Party had been widely rumored in Prague for several days before today's Central Committee meeting.

The CTK report said Jakes was elected party leader by a unanimous vote of just under 200 members of the Central Committee.

Jakes, 65, has been a Politburo member since 1981.

Jakes told the committee he would help the Communist Party accomplish its "revolutionary mission and the tasks set before it in the present times."

He is thought to be a conservative Communist in Husak's mold, but will oversee the limited reforms now being introduced in Czechoslovakia's centralized economy in the wake of more radical reforms in the Soviet economy.

Husak took over leadership of the party in 1969 after the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact invasion that crushed then-leader Alexander Dubcek's democratic reforms.

Super Title Is Within Reach Of Mary Gatling

By RONAVERY
The Daily News

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — To neighbors on 60th Street in West Philadelphia, Mary Gatling is just a pleasant, quiet neighbor and a hard-working practical nurse.

To the Japanese, however, Gatling is one of the "Super People of the World."

In fact, there is now a handsome plaque on her living room mantel from the Nippon Television Network, officially proclaiming her status as one of the world's "Super People."

"I have the longest arms of any woman in the world," she explained. She says it with mild amusement — in the manner of a person who has learned to accept a thing that can't be changed and is making the most of it.

She won the title a couple of years ago, along with a $200 cash prize, when the National Enquirer ran a contest seeking the man and woman with the longest arms.

The tabloid ran a small story and photos of the winners. Gatling thought that was the end of the matter, until later in the year when a theatrical agent from Quebec contacted her about going to Japan for a television show on extraordinary people.

At first, Gatling resisted, but eventually she gave in.

"It was wonderful, the best time I ever had," she recalled. "I was met at the airport in a limousine and stayed in one of the best hotels in Tokyo. Michael Jackson was staying there at the time. I was wined and dined at the best restaurants. I had my own interpreter all the time, and they paid me a nice salary."

Everywhere Gatling and her interpreter went in Tokyo, people suspected she was some kind of special visitor and stopped her to pose for photographs.

It was a heady experience for a woman who never dreamed of having the extra money to travel abroad, let alone to exotic and very expensive Tokyo. It was also one of the few times Gatling's size was an asset rather than a cause for discomfort or mild self-consciousness.

She doesn't like to admit her actual height. At first, she claims to be an even 6 feet tall, but later concedes she is probably an inch or two taller.

"I was always the tallest kid in my school," said Gatling, who was raised in a small Georgia town near Atlanta and definitely stood out. "I guess I always slumped to look shorter."

She was sometimes teased by classmates, but always for being tall, never for the length of her arms or her large hands and fingers.

"I always thought my arms and legs were in proportion for my size," she said. "It wasn't until I started buying clothes for myself that I realized my arms were long. I can't always find clothes with sleeves that fit."

It wasn't until the Enquirer contest that she actually measured her reach. The tale of the tape from armpit to tip of middle finger: 34½ inches. The tabloid said the average measurement for a woman is 24¼ inches.

To demonstrate Gatling's reach for the show, the Japanese filmed various stunts.

"I thought it was kind of silly," she said. "I sat on a bench next to three people and tapped the last person on the shoulder. And I washed the outside of a car window from inside the car ... I mopped something on the floor without getting out of my chair."

Fellow "super people" included a 23-year-old woman from England and her nine children and an American who is so flexible he can play guitar behind his back.

Another amazing aspect of Gatling is her youthful appearance. She's in her mid-50s but appears to be many years younger.

More than 20 years ago, she caught the eye of a tall chap on the subway and he followed her to the place she worked at the time — Hahnemann University Hospital. They've been going steady ever since.

Accepting her size, she now wears high heels when she goes out, making her taller than her steady date. "I don't feel dressed unless I have heels," she said.

Moms Get Christmas Mileage

A mother in our neighborhood called last weekend to say she had run out of threats for her children and she still had a week and a half until Christmas.

No self-respecting mother would run out of intimidations on the eve of a major holiday.

"Have you used, 'If you don't behave yourself, we're going to move on Christmas Eve and won't tell Santa Claus where we're going'?"

"Twice."

"What about, 'Quit arguing with your brother or I'm giving all your presents to a little boy I met hanging around the car wash who is coming to live with us and loves to do dishes'?"

"The kid is rotten ... not stupid," she said.

When you started off with threats as early in the season as I did, nothing was considered too ridiculous. Sometimes, I'd waltz out my Christmas threats the first of March or the early part of April. I'd find myself saying, "OK, Miss Never-Pick-Up-Your-Clothes, on my way to the store tomorrow, I'm going to take a side trip to the North Pole and Santa and I are going to discuss your future. I think a set of math cards would turn you around and, remember, there are only 293 more days to do it!"

At Wits End

The early threats were real creative and personal. I once intimidated the kids by telling them I was going to have their father give directions to St. Nick and he'd never find the house. That gave them a jolt. Another time I promised if I didn't see some change, the closest they'd ever get to a puppy for Christmas was a leash and a piece of stained carpet in their stocking.

Most of the time they were skeptical. They'd look at one another and try to figure out if I was bluffing or not. The year I held a match under my charge card got their attention. They had 15 seconds to take the garbage cans to the curb or face an uncertain future.

One day I got so frustrated I told them I was going to have their Christmas presents gift-wrapped by the same people who packaged bacon and sealed airline almonds in a bag. It was a brilliant analogy, but they didn't relate to it.

Mothers get a lot of mileage out of Christmas. It's a wonderful time of the year when we can march out all the cruel, insensitive, despicable, coldblooded, callous threats we can think of to keep the children in line.

And people wonder why 40- and 50-year-old mothers still believe in Santa Claus.

Temporary Work Is Promising Area For Country's Retirees

NEW YORK (AP) — Is there any truth to the belief that retirees aren't being respected or appreciated for their experience and wisdom?

Not according to the American Association of Retired Persons, which reports that business managers are welcoming retired people back to the workplace in increasing numbers.

There are three factors fueling the return of retirees to the workforce as temporary employees, notes John Hart of Senior Employment Services at AARP:

- Unemployment is dropping and employers are finding it harder to recruit permanent employees.
- Due to low birth rates in the late '60s and early '70s, there is a continuing decline of entry-level labor in the 18-24 age group.
- Labor Department figures show an accelerating trend toward early retirement, with employees 55 and over leaving their jobs in ever greater numbers.

To alleviate the serious labor supply shortage, employers are asking temporary personnel companies to provide retirees to fill entry level as well as more advanced positions. People with general and automated office skills are in high demand, as well as personnel for the hospitality, retailing, communications and many manufacturing industries.

"Managers are truly appreciative of mature persons' efficiency and productivity," says John Fanning, president of Uniforce Temporary Services. "They say retired persons have less turnover and absenteeism and are more reliable than other personnel."

Also, many retirees 55 and over are eager to return to the workplace as temporaries. They have job experiences that are valuable and the flexibility of a second career in temporary employment allows them to combine work with the joys of travel and leisure time.

Although people are retiring earlier today, they still want to be active and involved, he points out, adding that they enjoy the option of choosing when and where they want to work.

"For retirees who temp, there are two kinds of income — financial and psychic," Fanning says. "New goals and a continuing sense of accomplishment enhance the retirees' feeling of purpose and self-worth. And, of course, today's entry level pay rates for temps hardly resemble the starting pay of days gone by. Today's temporaries make anywhere from $4 to $15 an hour, depending on skill levels."

At Opti-Ray in Farmingdale, N.Y., a distributor of eyeglasses, Salvatore Gualtieri, a temporary employed as a production line supervisor, said, "After retirement, I was home for 19 months and felt my mind just stagnating. I wanted to go back to work."

Gualtieri's supervisor, John Balazy, a production manager at the firm, said, "I'm new to middle management, but Sal is not. He has seen it all and knows what to expect. The things Sal tells me, you can't learn in a textbook or in the classroom."

In terms of keeping track of Social Security retirement benefit limits, each Uniforce paycheck, for example, lists income to date. Retirees simply stop accepting temp assignments as their earnings limits are reached. When retirees reach age 70, there is no longer a limit on earnings, and Social Security benefits remain unaffected regardless of income.

"With temp services, age is never a barrier and in the case of older employees, it is a definite plus," Fanning says. "Retirees need not be apprehensive about returning to the workforce. Our client companies continue to welcome retirees for their maturity, dependability and years of work experience."

"Ten percent of our temporaries are now 55 plus," he says. "We project this figure will double over the next three years."

Bonner-Flanagan Vows Said

FARMVILLE — Theresa Gayle Flanagan and Edward Joseph Bonner were united in marriage Saturday at 5 p.m. in the First Christian Church. The Revs. Thomas Tunstall and Kenneth Walsh performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Moffit Flanagan of Farmville. The bridegroom is the son of Mary Wallis Bonner of Dunedin, Fla.

A program of music was presented by organist Charles Elliot Davis of Chapel Hill and James Shaw Smith of Raleigh sang "The Lord's Prayer," "A Wedding Benediction" and "Ave Maria." Cedric Davis was scripture reader.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin floor-length gown with a cathedral train. The fitted bodice of re-embroidered alencon lace, etched with seed pearls and sequins, featured a sabrina neckline, long tapered sleeves and a V back. Scattered lace motifs adorned the cathedral veil attached to a beaded lace Juliet cap. She wore a ruffled petticoat which was worn in her paternal great-grandmother's wedding. She carried a cascading bouquet of roses, stephanotis and mixed greenery on a white Bible which was given to her mother.

Serving as matron of honor was Donna Williams of Farmville and maid of honor was Amelia Ross of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Mary Ellen Bonner of Dunedin, sister of the bridegroom, Martha Paylor of Elizabeth City, Lilly Young of Matthews, Mary George Smith of Raleigh, Terry Richardson of Rocky Mount and Patti Price of Raleigh.

They wore tea-length dresses of ivory satin featuring dropped waistlines, long sleeves and cummerbunds and satin bows. Each carried a brandy snifter with a lighted candle with cascading greenery and ivory ribbons.

Rebecca Blalock, flower girl, wore a long-sleeved ivory dress of organza with a taffeta overlay and round lace collar. The bodice and ruffled hem were accented with rows of ivory ribbon. She carried a basket of greenery. Brent Young, ring bearer, carried a cross-stitched ring pillow.

Joseph Bonner of Orlando, Fla., was best man for his brother. Groomsmen were Thomas Bonner of Dunedin, brother of the bridegroom, Jerry Flanagan, Scott Flanagan and Mark Flanagan, brothers of the bride of Farmville, Scott Wells of Orlando, Noel Vester of Dunedin, Randy Fitton of Boca Raton, Fla., Randy Allen of Farmville and Brian Kitchens of Charlotte.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of cornflower blue georgette designed with a fitted bodice. The mother of the bridegroom wore a powder blue crepe dress with a fitted waistline. Both wore cymbidium corsages.

Mrs. Thurley Strickland and Mrs. Arch Flanagan, grandmothers of the bride, were given corsages of white miniature carnations.

The bride graduated from Farmville Central High School and N.C. State University. She is a sales representative for Rhone-Poulenc Agricultural Products Co. The bridegroom is a graduate of Dunedin High School and Florida State University. He is a district manager for Steele, Inc.

After a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple will live in Carv.

Mrs. Cedric Davis directed the wedding. She was assisted by Mrs. Thomas Tunstall. Mr. and Mrs. Moses Moye presided at the guest register.

A reception was held at the DAR Chapter House. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Farrow greeted guests. Clara Flanagan served wedding cake and Yvonne Flanagan served the bridegroom's cake. Mrs. Harvey Davis poured punch. Assisting in serving were Meredith Owen, Brooks Andrews, Brenda Jones and Suzanne Bradham.

A rehearsal dinner and dance was held at the Hilton Inn in Greenville. A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Chester Don Worthington Jr.

Friend Wants To See Woman Without Hearing Her Kids

DEAR ABBY: Within the last few years, I became very friendly with a young woman I met through work. (I'll call her Jane.) We used to spend a lot of social time together. Jane has two young children. I have one. My child is no angel, but she has been taught good manners and proper behavior. Jane's children are disruptive, ill-mannered and careless (breaking toys, spilling things), and scream at the top of their lungs until they get their own way. They also interrupt every conversation Jane and I try to carry on. Meanwhile, Jane makes no effort to discipline them. Finally, I could no longer stand to go to Jane's house and hold my tongue, so I started making fewer and fewer visits.

Eventually she asked me what was wrong. Did she do something to offend me? I assured her that nothing was wrong and she had not offended me, but I'm not sure that was a fair explanation. Abby, how can I tell her I got fed up with battling for conversation time with her while her children were around? And I certainly couldn't tell her I couldn't invite her to my home because her children were too ill-mannered and uncontrollable.

What should I do? Must I wait until Jane's children grow up? Or tell her the truth, and risk losing her friendship? — NO-WIN SITUATION you can muster. She's doing a grave disservice to her children who cannot be expected to know what they have not been taught. Ill-mannered and badly behaved children are obnoxious and, therefore, friendless. You would be doing Jane and her children an enormous favor.

DEAR NO WIN: Tell Jane the truth with all the love and diplomacy

DEAR ABBY: My mother is giving me the silent treatment. Here's the story: I'm 34, my wife is 33. We've been married for six years, both have good jobs and have never asked our parents for a dime. We are a sensible couple who have always lived within our means.

We just moved into a new condo that we are renting. My mother asked me how much rent we are paying. I said something like: "Oh, Mom — don't worry — we're able to handle it." She wasn't satisfied, so she asked me again. Again I told her she didn't have to worry — but I did not tell her how much rent we were paying.

Ever since then, she's been giving us the silent treatment. Knowing my mother, this is her way of punishing us. Do you think she was wrong to ask me how much rent we were paying? And do you think I was wrong for refusing to tell her? — SOMEWHERE IN THE USA

DEAR SOMEWHERE: Your mother was out of line to have asked. You were within your rights to have politely refused to tell her.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press

HOGS: Market 1/2 lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robertsonville, 40.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 40.50; Wilson 40.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville closed, reopen Dec. 28; Wallace 32.00; Spivey's Corner 30.00; Rowland 32.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 36.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is weak and the live supply is fully adequate to ample for a light demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,552,000, compared to 2,073,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 to 4 cents lower at mostly 1.94-2.06 in East and mostly 2.16-2.21 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 2 to 3 cents lower at mostly 5.56-5.71 in East and mostly 5.61-5.65 in the Piedmont; wheat 2.66-2.76; new crop wheat 2.63-2.83. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 101 to 104 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today as the market's yearend rally ran into some resistance from sellers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 207.73 points over the past eight trading days, slipped back 3.65 to 1,970.82 in the first half hour today.

But gainers maintained a 5-4 edge on losers in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 646 up, 510 down and 444 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 31.25 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Commerce Department today said the nation's gross national product grew at a 4.3 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation, in the third quarter. The figure had earlier been estimated at 4.1 percent.

Among the energy stocks, Exxon dropped 3/8 to 39 3/4; Amoco 1/2 to 65; Mobil 1/2 to 37 3/8; Chevron 3/8 to 37 1/2; and Atlantic Richfield 1/4 to 65 1/2.

Officers Needed

Lawsuits dealing with the prison system are more often aimed at overcrowding, he said. In an effort to combat the problem, more than 2,500 new beds will be added to the system as a result of emergency legislation passed by the Legislature.

Other, more long-term solutions include the probation and parole division's expanded intensive probation and electronic monitoring (or house arrest) programs, Patseavouras said.

There are 50 intensive probation teams in the state that keep very strict surveillances and curfews on criminals, he said. With about 1,200 participants in the state, a "greater majority of these are true deviations from prisons," thereby keeping the prison population down.

The program will reach its capacity of 1,250 participants by early 1988, Patseavouras said. "A lot of the success of this program depends on the confidence judges have in their (probation officers) ability to handle these cases."

Electronic monitoring has been established in Forsyth County with the cooperation of judges, Patseavouras said. "Certain probationers have the option to participate in this program as an alternative to incarceration."

A monitor is attached to the person's ankle and relays electronic signals that are picked up by a device connected to an officer's telephone. The probationers work schedule and other permitted activities are programmed into a computer, which "monitors the probationer's presence in his required environment."

The efficiency of this program may be examined through the incident of a Winston-Salem man facing a 10-year sentence, Patseavouras said. A participant in the program, the man tried to remove the monitor and leave it in a place he was scheduled to be. But, "you can't tamper with it without it showing," because of the material it's made of, he said. "He got an active 10-year prison sentence."

There are 30 ankle monitors available now, Patseavouras said, and the current capacity for the computer is 250. There are plans to expand the program through the state.

Korea Congressman Will Take Defense To House Floor

Korea

"Let us re-enact the glory of the national resistance in June. The rigged election must be rejected with all the peoples' strength," the National Coalition for Democracy said in a statement.

The National Election Commission said that with 97 percent of the vote counted, Roh was winning with 37.2 percent of the vote. It rejected opposition charges of vote fraud. Officials said formal announcement of the final result was not expected before Saturday.

Opposition leader Kim Young-sam was in second place with 27.7 percent, followed by rival opposition candidates Kim Dae-jung with 26.8 percent and Kim Jong-pil with 8 percent. An obscure nationalist got 0.2 percent of the vote.

Kim Young-sam's Reunification Democratic Party and Kim Dae-jung's Party for Peace and Democracy refused to accept the election results.

An angry Kim Young-sam called for a massive struggle against the government as he charged the election had been a fraud.

"I call upon the people to rise up," he said.

Small groups of protesters tried to stage demonstrations against the election in Seoul and the southern cities of Kwangju and Taegu.

Riot police opened fire with tear gas in Kwangju and Taegu, but the clashes were very minor and fell far short of opposition calls for nationwide protests.

"Down with the dictator!" shouted 100 protesters blocking a main street in Seoul before they were scattered by charging police. Riot police outnumbered protesters at least 10 to one.

MASONIC NOTICE

Master Masons will attend an emergent communication at Mount Hermon Lodge No. 35 at noon Saturday. The gathering is for the funeral of Jesse Grimes, said Melvin McLawhorn, worthy master.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defiant Rep. Austin Murphy is going to the House floor with his claim that the ethics committee recommended he be reprimanded because it needed "to simply make an example of someone."

The panel, known formally as the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, concluded Wednesday that Murphy violated House rules by diverting congressional property to his former law firm and twice allowing someone else to cast votes for him.

GNP Moves Ahead

month ago, when corporate profits were put at 5.2 percent.

The growth in the third quarter was led by strong consumer spending spurred by fast auto sales as Americans responded to resumption of cut-rate financing incentives offered by automakers to clear out unwanted inventories before the beginning of the new model year.

Total GNP, after adjusting for inflation, was put at $3.84 trillion, an increase of $4.6 billion from the second quarter. This represented an additional $2.5 billion in activity from the report a month ago.

Consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of overall eco-

The Pennsylvania Democrat also was found to have placed a "no-show" worker on the payroll of a subcommittee he chaired. The worker was said by the ethics panel to have earned $49,500 despite rarely showing up for work.

Murphy, in his sixth term, said in a letter to the panel: "I understand that the committee will recommend a reprimand, and I am prepared to argue that issue directly with my colleagues on the floor of the House."

The panel has been criticized by House Republicans and watchdog groups for being too lenient in handling allegations against lawmakers.

"It is clear that the committee had one agenda from the start, to simply make an example of someone," Murphy said. "To reach its goal, the committee had to sustain a 'ghost voting' charge, because, quite frankly, the other allegations were too weak to bring a reprimand to the House floor."

The committee did dismiss one of the three "ghost voting" counts against Murphy, saying there was no "clear and convincing evidence."

Committee Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., told reporters that a report recommending the reprimand would be issued by the panel soon.

Asked about Murphy's claims that he was made into "an example," Dixon replied: "I would deny that. I think the committee tried to examine the factual situation in this case."

Goodbye, Coach

Tulane University football coach Mack Brown talks with players Brian Estep, left, and Al Dodd, after announcing to the team Wednesday that he would accept the head coaching job at North Carolina. Brown Promises No Early Feast For Victory-Hungry Fans At North Carolina

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina football fans are hungry for a winner, but new head coach Mack Brown says they may have to wait for the feast.

Brown went to Tulane three years ago to rescue a football program on the decline. This season he earned a 6-5 record and a bowl bid. He said that transition wasn't easy, and that Tar Heel supporters should be patient.

"You can ... go in and try and get a good team immediately and a quick fix win-at-all-cost attitude and we were not going to do that at Tulane," Brown said at a news conference marking his arrival in Chapel Hill.

"We took measures to build a program instead of trying to build a team," Brown said. "People have to bear with us. It's going to take all the constituency pulling as one to make the University of North Carolina something that we all can be proud of in our football program. And I'm going to need help from everybody in this state."

Brown, 36, succeeds Dick Crum, who resigned under pressure on Nov. 30. Crum left Chapel Hill as the Tar Heels' winningest coach with a record of 72-41-3. But he had a 5-6 mark this year, when North Carolina won only one of five home games and Crum came under increasing pressure because of a conservative offense and a failure in the past four seasons to win the key games.

Brown comes to Chapel Hill with a 17-27 mark in four years as a head coach and the task of reversing the fortunes of a team which in the early part of the decade was considered a challenger for a national championship.

"Fifteen years ago, when I started coaching, I got a list of jobs that I felt like at some point I would like to have an opportunity to be around or look at," said Brown, whose news conference at the Smith Center was delayed one hour because his flight into the area was late. "One of the jobs that was very, very high on that list 15 years ago was the University of North Carolina."

Biggest on Brown's list of immediate goals is to find high school seniors who will commit to the Tar Heels. Most of his rivals in the Atlantic Coast Conference have gotten a big jump on North Carolina, although Crum's assistants were on the road until his dismissal.

But Brown added that he would not disrupt the talent that Crum left behind.

"I think Dick Crum is a person with very high quality, so I expect to see class young people on this campus when I get here," he said. "And I have tremendous respect for him as a person."

Brown went to Tulane as football coach in December 1984 and added the title of athletic director the following April. The Green Wave had suffered three straight losing seasons before Brown's went to New Orleans.

In his first two seasons, Tulane posted records of 1-10 and 4-7. This year, the Green Wave went 6-5 and gained the bowl spot.

Brown, who returned to Louisiana to prepare for the Independence Bowl, asked the returning Tar Heel players not to base their thoughts of Brown's philosophy on what happens Saturday against Washington.

"... Give us enough credit that our staff will come in here and we will do whatever we can do with the talent that's available here to try and win every football game next year," Brown said. "So, do not evaluate what's been done at Tulane and try to relate that to what will be done at the University of North Carolina."

Brown began full-time coaching at Southern Mississippi in 1974, working with wide receivers for four seasons and then spent one year in the same assistant's position at Memphis State.

He moved to Iowa State in 1979 where he coached receivers before being promoted to offensive coordinator in 1980 and 1981. Brown went to Louisiana State the following year.

In 1983 at age 32, Brown coached at Appalachian State and went 6-5.

"We wanted a leader and a motivator with an enthusiasm and a passion for college football," said UNC athletic director John Swofford, who headed an eight-member committee which interviewed Brown on Monday. "We wanted a coach with an aggressive, effective and entertaining offensive philosophy."

Details of Brown's contract were not discussed at the news conference.

Clemson, Georgia Tech Take Wins; State Takes Exhibition

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson coach Cliff Ellis says a victory over Augusta should help his Tigers work the bugs out of their execution.

"It doesn't matter who we play or what the score is — we have to execute," Ellis said Wednesday after Clemson defeated Augusta 91-45. "The little things like gambling and leaving your man will hurt you. Eighty percent of the time we're doing what we're supposed to. But I demand perfection."

Ellis said he usually doesn't like games on consecutive nights, but the timing of the Tigers' victory was helpful in view of their 88-85 loss to Southern Mississippi Tuesday.

"This win helps get the bad taste out," he said. "If we had practiced today, we'd still be thinking about last night. This gets it out of our system."

In other games involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams Wednesday, Georgia Tech defeated Louisiana State 87-70 and North Carolina State defeated Marathon Oil 122-87 in an exhibition game.

Center Elden Campbell scored 20 points and four other Clemson players joined him in double figures in the non-conference victory, just one night after an 88-85 loss to Southern Mississippi.

Campbell hit nine of 11 shots from the field and blocked four Augusta shots as the Tigers, 6-1, dominated the inside game against the Jaguars, 1-5.

Augusta coach Neal Cody said he would have been happy with a little consistency.

"I saw no leadership tonight," he said, after watching the Jaguars drop their fifth straight game. "I felt we had been getting steadily better every game until tonight. We've definitely hit a valley."

"We've played a rough stretch of games, with Georgia Tech, Georgia and Clemson right in a row. I wouldn't recommend it again," Cody said.

Augusta, which hit 27.7 percent from the field, got a 14-point, 10-rebound effort from starting forward Tim Daniels.

Freshman Dennis Scott hit three consecutive 3-point baskets to start a 16-0 run four minutes into the second half and spark Georgia Tech's victory.

Tech, 5-1, held a 44-43 lead when Scott started the scoring flurry during a time when the Yellow Jackets held LSU, 3-1, scoreless for 5:09.

Tom Hammonds added a pair of free throws and a dunk and Brian Oliver also contributed a 3-point basket as Tech stretched its lead to 60-43 with 12:02 left.

LSU made one brief run on a basket by Ricky Blanton and five points by Bernard Woodside to trim the lead to 10 midway through the half, but the Tigers never got closer.

Blanton led the Tigers with 19 points and Jose Vargas scored 15.

Vinny Del Negro scored 22 points and Rodney Monroe 21 as North Carolina State defeated Marathon Oil.

North Carolina State took the lead at 17-15 midway through the first half and never surrendered it. The Wolfpack then went on a 15-6 spurt to take a 32-21 lead and led 65-50 at the half.

Brian Howard, Chucky Brown and Sean Green each scored 12 points for the Wolfpack.

Chad Kessler led Marathon Oil with 23 points, Bud Greer added 16,

Dokes Begins His Comeback Tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Dokes, the former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion who is serving five years probation for cocaine use, will try to begin putting his career back together tonight at the Felt Forum.

On the same card, Michael Olajide hopes to start back toward a bid for a piece of the middleweight championship, which he failed to win in his last fight.

Both men were favored to win their scheduled 10-rounders. Dokes's opponent has lost his last five fights, three of them by knockout, but the former champion has not fought since March 15, 1985.

James "Buddy" McGirt will appear in another scheduled 10-rounder in what is supposed to be a tuneup for an expected fight against Frankie Warren for the vacant International Boxing Federation junior welterweight title on Feb. 14 at Corpus Christi, Texas. The only loss for McGirt, who has 35 wins and a draw, was a 10-round decision to Warren on July 20, 1986.

Tim Carr had 14 and Alvis Rodgers 10.

Also on the card will be Terminator Coles, who will appear in a four-round middleweight match. Terminator, incidentally, is Coles' legal name.

Introduced at a news conference this week, Coles said, "I have no comment."

"I'm anxious to get back into the ring," said the 29-year-old Dokes, who was released in June from a drug rehabilitation center at St. George, Utah.

The Las Vegas, Nev., resident, who held the WBA title in 1982-83, will fight K.P. Porter of Battle Creek, Mich. Porter has a 13-5-1 record with eight knockouts, but has lost five straight, the first three by knockout. Dokes has a 29-1-2 mark with 16 knockouts. The loss, a 10th-round knockout by Gerrie Coetzee, cost him the title on Sept. 23, 1983.

"For me, it is a must fight," Dokes said.

In his last fight, Olajide lost a one-sided 15-round decision to Frank Tate for the vacated IBF 160-pound class title on Oct. 10.

Twinless Houston Ripped By Denver Five, 132-113

By The Associated Press

The "Twin Towers" are no more. And neither was the Houston Rockets' offense against the Denver Nuggets.

Michael Adams led a balanced Denver attack Wednesday night as the Nuggets blasted Houston 132-113. "It could have been worse," Rockets Coach Bill Fitch admitted.

With Ralph Sampson gone, the other half of the "Twin Towers," Akeem Olajuwon, missed his first six shots and scored only 11 points. He often played forward with newcomer Joe Barry Carroll at center.

"We weren't expecting great things tonight with the new players in there," Fitch said.

In other NBA games, it was Boston 121, Utah 111; Dallas 109, New Jersey 105 in overtime, and Philadelphia 114, San Antonio 102.

The Rockets traded Sampson to Golden State last weekend for Carroll and Sleepy Floyd, who started his 26th consecutive NBA game and scored 14 points before fouling out. Carroll scored just nine points.

"I knew he had a long streak going and it was my decision to start him," Fitch said of Floyd. "I figured he'd play two or three minutes and then get him out. But we were playing well I kept him in a little longer than I had anticipated.

"Sleepy will be better once he gets to know the rest of the guys he's playing with," Fitch said.

"The (starting) streak means a lot to me," Floyd said. "Hopefully we could get a win tomorrow night against the Clippers (at Los Angeles) and then go to practice on an upbeat note. We were limited tonight because I didn't know the players. It seemed like Denver was always two steps ahead of us."

Fitch said Carroll was out of shape and "we're going to work on that."

"I was a little disoriented tonight," Carroll said. "A lot has happened in a few days. If you've never been in a trade, you don't know what it's like ... I'm looking forward to getting acclimated to my new team ... It was just time that I left California."

Adams scored 24 points to lead five Denver players score with 20 or more points. Jay Vincent and Fat Lever each had 21, and Alex English and Blair Rasmussen had 20 apiece. World B. Free led Houston with 15 points.

The Nuggets took the lead for good by outscoring Houston 20-3 in the middle of the second quarter.

Celtics 121, Jazz 111

Larry Bird scored 38 points and teamed with Robert Parish in a third-quarter surge as the Celtics continued their Boston Garden streak against Utah.

The Celtics, who had lost their last two games at the Garden, are 18-0 at home against the Jazz in 14 seasons. Boston hasn't lost three straight home games since the 1978-79 season.

Tied 73-73 with 7:32 left in the third quarter, Parish's jumper began a 21-12 run that gave the Celtics a 94-85 lead going into the final period. Boston's lead ranged from seven to 18 points the rest of the way.

Utah was led by Karl Malone with 31.

76ers 114, Spurs 102

Charles Barkley scored 32 points and grabbed 14 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers defeated San Antonio. David Wingate, in his second season in the NBA, added a career-high 28 points for the winners.

Philadelphia opened up a 51-27 lead with 4:29 left in the second quarter and the Spurs could get no closer than 10 points the rest of the way.

Leon Wood paced San Antonio with 24 points and Walter Berry had 23.

Mavericks 109, Nets 105 OT

Derek Harper's 3-point goal with 29 seconds to play in overtime gave Dallas its victory over the struggling New Jersey Nets. Harper, who had seven of his 27 points in the overtime, hit a 25-foot jumper to give Dallas a 106-105 lead.

The Nets, who have lost 12 of their last 13 games and are 3-16 overall, missed one shot and had another blocked before Sam Perkins converted a three-point play to end the scoring.

Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 31 points. New Jersey's Mike Gminski scored 11 of his 24 points in the fourth period.

New Jersey scored nine of the last 11 points in regulation time, including Ben Coleman's layup with 42 seconds to go, to tie the game 97-97 and force the overtime.

Lenoir Eases Past Pitt, 76-71

KINSTON — Pitt Community College fell behind early, struggled back and fell short at Lenoir Community College captured a 76-71 basketball victory Wednesday night.

Pitt got off to a slow start in the game falling behind 21-8 with just over 10 minutes left in the first half. But the Paladins rallied and pulled back to trail by only nine at the half, 37-28.

In the second half, Lenoir again pulled away to a 47-31 lead with 16:31 left, but Pitt put together a rally that closed the gap to just six, 49-43 with 13:58 showing.

Lenoir then pulled back out to as much as a 13-point lead, 60-47 with 9:23 to go. But Pitt again rallied, closing the gap to 64-63 with 4:16 to go on a shot by Woodrow Wallace. Wallace was fouled on the play, but failed to convert at the line and Joey Wiggins went back down and scored a 3-pointer for Lenoir to open up a 67-63 lead that Lenoir was able to hold the rest of the way.

"We played tremendous defense in the second half, getting 10 steals," Coach Charles Coburn said of the Paladin effort. "But we're still trying to do too much when we get close rather than doing what we do best. And we're still hurting ourselves at the free throw line (4-12). Still, I'm proud of them for the comeback they made."

Marvin Smith led Lenoir with 21 points while Wiggins added 13. Jesse Pratt led Pitt with 25 while Ricky Congleton and Wallace each had 12 and Jeffrey Crudup had 11.

Pitt falls to 3-10 on the year, 0-5 in Region X play. The Paladins will host Clinton Junior College on Saturday at 2 p.m. at Ayden-Grifton High School.

Northern Durham Tops Rose Tankers

Rose High School's swimmers opened the 1987-88 season Wednesday, falling to Northern Durham.

The Knights took the boys' meet 168-115, while the girls came away with an 89-70 victory.

In the boys' meet, Northern captured first place in six events while Rose took five. Edward Chaffin was a double winner for the Rampants, winning the 100-yard breaststroke and the 200-yard individual medley.

Rose's girls won eight of the 11 events, but could not compete with the greater depth of the Lady Knights.

Hope Barwick, Julie Song and Kathryn Barnhill all were double winners for Rose. Barwick won the IM and the 100-yard breaststroke, while Song took the 50 and 100-yard freestyles. Barnhill won the 100 butterfly and 500 freestyle.

Rose returns to action at Durham Jordan on Jan. 5.

In the boys' game, Woodington took a 48-34 victory. Woodington was led by Lamont Graham with 34 points. Whitfield was led by Gary Yarrell with 16 points.

Woodington's girls romped to a 49-2 win in their game. Woodington was led by Delona Best with 22 points.

Whitfield's boys are now 1-2 while the girls are 0-3.

Schembechler Improved

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Bo Schembechler's condition was upgraded from satisfactory to fair a day after the Michigan coach underwent quadruple heart bypass surgery.

Schembechler, 58, remained connected to a respirator but was conscious while recovering from Tuesday's seven-hour operation at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

quarter. In that, Ayden-Grifton, outscored Conley once more, 13-9, to insure the victory.

Ronnell Peterson led Ayden-Grifton with 16 points while Eric Blount had 12 and Aaron Harper hit 11. Conley was led by Paul Merritt with 15 and Terry Williams with 10.

Ayden-Grifton's girls slipped out to an 8-6 lead in the first quarter, and the two teams matched points in the second, 8-8. That left the Lady Chargers up, 16-14, at the half.

In the third period, both scored six to run the score to 22-20, but in the last frame, Ayden-Grifton outthit Conley 11-9, to take the win.

No one on either team hit in double figures.

Ayden-Grifton's boys are now 3-1 while the girls are 1-3. The Vikings fall to 3-1 while the girls are 1-3. The two teams meet again on Friday at Conley.

Cougars Hand Jags 1st Loss

FARMVILLE — Tyrone Sumler led SouthWest Edgecombe through the second overtime to hand Farmville Central its first loss of the young basketball season Wednesday night, 51-47.

Farmville's girls came away with a 46-36 victory over the Lady Cougars in their game.

Farmville eased out into a 6-4 lead in the first period of the boys' game, but SouthWest matched the Jaguars the rest of the half and trailed 17-15 at intermission.

In third period, SouthWest eased into the lead, taking a 31-30 advantage into the final quarter. In that, Farmville came back and Alexander Daniels hit at the horn to tie it up at 41-41.

In the first overtime, SouthWest scored first, but Reggie Barrett hit to tie it again, and neither team hit again, leaving it at 43-43 and forcing a second overtime.

In that, however, Sumler hit four of SouthWest's eight points and Farmville managed but four as the Cougars took the win.

Robbie Wooten led SouthWest with 12 points while David Johnson added 11. Daniels, Tyrone Joyner and Jarvis Lang each had 10 to pace the Jaguars.

In the girls' game, Farmville moved out to a 15-11 lead in the first period, then outscored SouthWest, 11-5, in the second frame. That gave the Lady Jags a 26-16 lead to take into the dressing rooms.

Farmville was outthit 4-2, in the third period, but reversed that with an 18-16 margin in the final frame, to hold to the 10-point edge.

Allison Manning led Farmville with 13 points while Kim Harrison had 12 and Brenda Reid added 10. Kim Elliott led SouthWest with 13 while Yvonne Knight had 11.

Farmville's boys are now 4-1 while the girls climb to 2-3. The boys return to action in the Pitt County Holiday Tournament at Rose on Monday, while the girls are idle until Dec. 28, when they take part in the D.H. Conley Holiday Tournament.

Arizona Has Balance To Stay Near Top Of Poll

By The Associated Press
It takes good balance to stay near the top of the poll and Arizona has it. The second-ranked Wildcats had four starters score in double figures Wednesday night as they beat visiting Arkansas-Little Rock 77-53 to remain undefeated after eight games. Steve Kerr and Tom Tolbert each had 15 points, Sean Elliott added 14 and Anthony Cook had 10 for Arizona, which shot 66 percent for the game, 23 of 35, including a 6-of-7 performance from 3-point range. Kerr made all but one of those. "Earlier in the year, teams were looking for me to shoot the 3-pointer, but now the team has shown a lot of balance, and they are laying off me a little bit," Kerr said. "That left some openings for me tonight, and I hit them."
Kerr made five of six 3s and reserve Ken Lofton made his only attempt from long range while the Trojans were a woeful 1-of-13 on 3-pointers.
In other games involving ranked teams, No. 11 Florida beat Ohio State 102-69; No. 16 Missouri defeated Virginia Tech 105-96, and No. 18 Georgetown downed Maryland-Baltimore County 89-59.
The 8-0 start is the best for Arizona in the five years Coach Lute Olson has been there and it includes victories over three ranked teams — Michigan, Syracuse and Iowa.
Arkansas-Little Rock, 4-2, tried to slow down the Wildcats, running 25 seconds off the 45-second shot clock on each possession but it didn't work. "Their game plan was obvious," Olson said. "They wanted to work the clock down to 20 seconds before even starting to run things. We changed that early (by switching defenses), and after the start of the second half, we tried to pressure them more, and that's what opened the game up."

Arizona led 28-19 at halftime and the Trojans got within 30-25 before the Wildcats went on an 8-0 run to put the game away.
"We wanted to play the game slow, because we have a tendency to get into foul trouble, and this way it keeps (Johnnie) Bell and the others in the game," Trojans Coach Mike Newell said.
Bell led the Trojans with 13 points, one more than Juric Brown.
No. 11 Florida 102, Ohio State 69
Florida pulled away early for the easy home victory as Vernon Maxwell scored 25 points and Joe Lawrence added 20. The Gators, 6-1, used a 16-2 run to take a 34-15 lead and it wasn't close after that.
Maxwell made 11 of 17 from the field and Lawrence was five of six, including all four of his 3-point attempts as Florida, which led 50-33 at halftime, made seven of 10 long-range jumpers.
Jay Burson scored 20 points and Curtis Wilson 18 for Ohio State, 4-1, which was outbounded 51-33.
No. 16 Missouri 105, Virginia Tech 96
Derrick Chievous had quite a night as Missouri prevailed in the game that was postponed one night because of the heavy snow in the Midwest.
Chievous, the Tigers' all-time leading scorer, had a career-high 42 points and grabbed 12 rebounds as Virginia Tech saw a five-game winning streak snapped.
Chievous, who refused to speak with the media after the game, set a new scoring mark in Hearnes Center in ringing up the fourth-highest total in school history. He also tied the school mark for points in a half with 29 in the second half and his 17 free throws were the fourth-best total in Missouri history.
"He always has more points than I think," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said of Chievous, who had established his career best of 34 twice last season as a junior. "Like tonight, I thought he had about 30."
"He played as fine a basketball game as I've seen in a long time," Virginia Tech Coach Frankie Allen said. "He did the one thing that you have to do, and that's score."
Chievous made three consecutive free throws with about eight minutes left to give Missouri, 4-1, a 77-69 lead and the Hokies, 5-2, never got closer than eight points the rest of the game.
Byron Irvin finished with 21 points for Missouri, while Wally Lancaster led Virginia Tech with 26.
No. 18 Georgetown 89, Md.-Balt. 59
Georgetown grabbed 20 offensive rebounds as it dominated the smaller Retrievers inside.
The Hoyas led 37-27 at halftime but with Mark Tillmon scoring 11 of his 15 points in the second half they pulled away for the easy victory to improve to 5-1.
Larry Simmons and Kenny Reynolds each scored 18 points for Maryland-Baltimore County, 3-3.

Georgetown had 15 field goals in the first half and all but an 18-foot jumper by Dwayne Bryant came inside the key.
Other Games
Louisville won for the first time in three games as it beat Cleveland State 93-79. Herbert Crook scored 24 points for the Cardinals, while Pervis Ellison added 22 and freshman LaBradford Smith had 21.
Freshman Dennis Scott had 15 points for Georgia Tech, nine coming on 3-pointers during a 16-0 run in the second half, as the Yellow Jackets beat Louisiana State 87-70.
DePaul improved to 5-1 as it beat Weber State 88-65 behind the 25 points of Kevin Edwards.
Steve Pittman scored 24 points and grabbed 17 rebounds as Dayton beat Rollins 106-74.
Princeton made 11 of 20 3-pointers as it beat intrastate rival Seton Hall 61-59, the Pirates' second loss in 10 games. Dave Orlandini led the Tigers, 4-2, with 21 points, while Mark Bryant's 26 points were tops for Seton Hall.

Soccer Champs

Woman Tries Play-By-Play

NEW YORK (AP) — Gayle Sierens, a news anchor in Tampa, Fla., will become the first woman to do play-by-play on a network NFL telecast Dec. 27 when she works the Seattle-Kansas City game on NBC.
Sierens, 33, will work with commentator Dave Rowe, the network announced Wednesday.
Michael Weisman, executive producer of NBC Sports, said he expects viewers to be shocked the first time they hear a woman doing NFL play-by-play.
"It's going to take a little getting used to," he said. "But I think the shock will quickly wear off, and people will feel comfortable listening to Gayle."
Sierens, who has done several simulated telecasts with Rowe, said she is prepared for the ground-breaking assignment.
"It's not brain surgery, but it is significant," she said. "If I said I wasn't a little nervous, I'd be lying.... But I covered the riots in South Korea this year, so I've been in pressure situations before."
Sierens was a sportscaster for nine years before switching to news two years ago. However, her play-by-play experience has been limited to soccer and equestrian events.
"The only reason she didn't do other sports is because she was never given the chance," Weisman said.

Boat Architect Says Time To Get Work Underway

ESSEX, Conn. (AP) — The architect who will design the boat to defend the America's Cup next summer against an upstart New Zealand syndicate believes it is time to stop griping and start working.

Britton Chance Jr., who was the lead designer of the winning 1987 entry Stars & Stripes, said he is prepared to commence with any of several types of boat he thinks can retain the coveted trophy for the San Diego-based Sail America syndicate.

"But detailed design work has not begun at all," the 47-year-old Chance said. "Conceptually, our path is quite clear, so it's disconcerting that there are no formal arrangements to get on with the work. It's a very dangerous situation. The most likely way to lose this is by inaction."

house office on the lower Connecticut River basin.

"Roughly speaking, the design must be completed by the end of February and construction completed by the end of July at the latest. That's an extremely short time for a project of this magnitude. Normally, the lead time for these projects is measured in years, not months."

New Zealand has had at least a five-month head start in designing its revolutionary "K" boat.

But Chance embraces the task ahead of him, which will entail 80-hour work weeks until the end of February. He called it "the ultimate challenge because of the time constraints, flexibility of engineering and freedom of design."

"I love to compete and, frankly, I've been rather bored since coming back from Perth, (Australia)," he said.

There will be a meeting at San Diego on Friday during which Sail America is expected to formalize its course of action and give Chance and his team the go-ahead to begin design work on any of three types of boat.

"Our whole emphasis and our whole idea here and focus... is to hold the 'real' America's Cup, open to all comers from all over in the world, in 12-meters in 1991 (at San Diego)," Sail America President Malim Burnham said earlier this week.

To that end, Sail America has decided to take on New Zealand's challenge one-on-one rather than allow other countries to enter the 1988 competition. The syndicate has also reserved the right to announce the location of the challenge races at the latest possible date.

"That's our No. 1 objective. In order to get from here to there, we have this little contest going on in front of us," Burnham said.

There is also the possibility that San Diego will hedge its bet and build two or three boats in case its primary boat is successfully challenged in the court battles that Chance expects to take place until the sailing of the regatta in late July or early September.

The final choice will be up to Sail America, but Chance said a multi-hull would be his personal choice.

Experts say 80-foot catamarans are capable of speeds in excess of 22 knots, nearly twice as fast as similar-sized monohulls. A catamaran or trimaran with a 90-foot waterline could conceivably reach speeds of 40 knots.

Abdelnaby Charged

DURHAM (AP) — Duke center Alaa Abdelnaby was charged with driving while impaired Wednesday after the car he was driving hit a utility pole on the Duke campus, officials said.

The crash occurred just after midnight when Abdelnaby, 19, a sophomore, apparently lost control of his 1987 Honda while trying to make a right turn at a high speed, police said.

Abdelnaby was taken to Duke University Medical Center, where he was treated for head injuries and released, police said. He did not practice with the team Wednesday.

Abdelnaby, of Bloomfield, N.J., was scheduled to appear in Durham District Court Jan. 6.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said Wednesday he did not want to comment on the incident until he knew more about the circumstances. Krzyzewski said the team, ranked 10th, had no policy for such situations. "I handle each case separately," he told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Abdelnaby, who was born in Egypt and moved to the United States with his family in 1971, could not be reached for comment.

Abdelnaby played the best game of his career last week, scoring 19 points in a victory over Davidson. He has averaged 9.5 points a game this year as the Blue Devils have gone to a 4-0 start.

Israel Stands Firm On Effort To Halt Protests

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin Wednesday brushed aside U.S. appeals for the use of non-lethal means to curb the current Palestinian unrest in Israeli-occupied territories, saying Israel was determined to show the demonstrators they could not achieve their goals through "the use of public disorder."

State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said that at a meeting Monday Undersecretary of State Michael H. Armacost had discussed with Rabin U.S. unhappiness over the Israeli use of live ammunition to quell the worst outbreak of unrest in 20 years on the West Bank and Gaza Strip. At least 12 Palestinians have been shot dead.

Oakley said representatives of the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv also had raised the U.S. concern with the Israeli government there.

U.S. officials said the administration has asked Israel both to stop using live ammunition and to set up a specially trained police force using nonlethal means to handle demonstrations in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The Israel government has rejected both appeals, they said.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard W. Murphy told a House panel Monday that the United States had been talking "very seriously" with the Israelis "for many, many years now" about the need to avoid using lethal means in controlling Palestinian demonstrations.

He said the Israeli government did not have enough specially trained security forces to deal with what he called the "cycles of violence" occur-ing in Israeli-occupied territories.

Murphy said there was no evidence yet of any pattern to the violence or indication that local Islamic fundamentalists, or any outside forces, were behind the unrest. He said it appeared to be much more the result of "a spontaneous set of individually prompted actions."

Murphy said there was "a sense of hopelessness" setting in among the 1.3 million Palestinians living in the West Bank and Gaza strip, "a sense that the future is stretching out gray and endless without the prospect of any political resolution of this four-decades-old problem."

"Probably the sense of nationalism grows with each passing year of (Israeli) occupation," he added.

Rabin, appearing Wednesday on NBC-TV's Today, said the Israeli military was already using both rubber bullets and tear gas, as U.S. officials have been urging, but added that "whenever it is not sufficient, we are determined to maintain law and order."

Speaking at the Brookings Institution later, Rabin said Israel "would not allow use of public disorder, terror, to show that those who ... carry them out can achieve their goals by these means."

He conceded that the tough Israeli tactics might be damaging his country's image but that Israel had learned "the hard way" not to give in "to the use of force and to the use of terror."

"We are sorry that we have to use force, but whenever there is a violent demonstration, not a demonstration like here ... but a violent demonstration using Molotov cocktail bottles, throwing (stones), setting fire, attacking (car) passengers, blocking roads ... the border police, police and the military will use whatever is needed to prevent it," he said.

While the Israeli defense minister was speaking, 20 to 30 pro-Palestinians staged a peaceful demonstration outside the building.

Despite his tough public statements Wednesday, congressional sources said Rabin was much more restrained in private during meetings on Capitol Hill Tuesday. They said he appeared to be groping for an answer about how Israel could deal more effectively, and with less bloodshed, with the Palestinian unrest.

As defense minister, Rabin is directly responsible for implementing Israeli policies in the occupied territories because they are under direct military rule. Regular army troops or reservists are mostly used to maintain law and order there.

Rabin suggested during his speech that the Palestinian demonstrations in the occupied territories might be an Arab attempt to refocus attention on the Arab-Israeli conflict at a time when the attention of Arab nations and the world generally was centered on the Iran-Iraq war and the aftermath of the U.S.-Soviet summit here.

But he avoided blaming the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO), Iran or radical Shiites for the unrest as some other high Israeli officials, including Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, have done.

Speedboats Hit Cargo Ship In Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian attackers in speedboats today set a cargo ship on fire in the southern Persian Gulf and returned later to shoot around the stricken vessel, a tugboat and a press helicopter.

Shipping sources said at least one speedboat carried out the first attack, which set the crew quarters of the 16,322-ton Island Transporter ablaze. The 37 crew members extinguished the flames, and seven hours later two Iranian speedboats returned and opened fire.

The attacks came one day after an Iranian gunboat hit a Greek tanker with rocket-propelled grenades near the Strait of Hormuz, and Iraq said its warplanes attacked three ships off Iran's coast.

Iran today accused the U.S. Navy of jamming Iranian radar during Iraqi warplane attacks on gulf shipping this week.

"This move by America is tantamount to that country's participation in the Iraqi war with Iran and as such it amounts to support for the Iraqi regime," a military spokesman said.

The spokesman was quoted by state-run Tehran radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. There was no immediate U.S. response to the claim.

During the second attack, the crew began "running, hiding and going flat on the deck," said one of the helicopter-borne press team.

Radio monitors quoted the skipper of the Maldives and Indian crew as shouting on radio emergency channel, "We're under attack again."

The ship carried the Maldives flag.

The two Boghammar speedboats spent about 20 minutes firing, said the sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified. The crew of the American CBS television network aboard the helicopter said they believed the Iranians were firing at them, not the ship or the tugboat.

"We were surrounded by flashes in the water ... We realized they were zeroing in on us," said George Ionides, a member of the crew aboard the Huey 212 helicopter.

Press helicopters are often warned off by Iranian gunboats in the southern gulf waters. The same CBS helicopter had been involved in a rescue mission last Saturday after an Iranian attack on a ship.

Mafia Bosses Convicted On Murder, Drug Charges

By WILLIAM D. MONTALBANO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

ROME — A Sicilian jury convicted top Mafia bosses of murder and drug trafficking Wednesday, and judges sentenced 19 of them to life in jail to climax Italy's most serious attempt in modern times to cripple the mob.

Verdicts and sentencing of 452 defendants came in a bunker-like Palermo courtroom Wednesday night, 20 months after the historic Mafia trial began and 36 days after jurors and two judges began their deliberations inside an armored room.

The mass trial, which was estimated to have cost at least $100 million, including $19 million for construction of the courtroom, is seen as the most severe blow against the Mafia in postwar republican Italy. Still, nobody was proclaiming total victory Wednesday night.

"This is not the end of a repressive epoch, but the beginning of a new legality," said Assistant Judge Pietro Grasso after the findings were reported.

Giovanni Falcone, an examining magistrate who was instrumental in assembling the 8,636-page indictment, called the court's action "an important starting point — not the end, but the beginning."

In all, the six jurors and two judges, who also weigh evidence under Italian law, convicted and sentenced 338 defendants, more than 100 of whom are still at large. Another 114 were acquitted.

With a small army of police on guard outside, more than 1,300 witnesses depicted the Mafia's growth from a Sicily-centered syndicate to an international organization that made billions trafficking heroin, principally to the United States. In addition to the drug charges, prosecutors accused the defendants of 90 murders, racketeering, money-laundering and other crimes, including participation in a criminal organization.

Inside the courtroom, which is connected by tunnel to Palermo's Ucciardone Prison, defendants lounged in barred, bulletproof cages as Chief Judge Alfonsino Giordano read the court's findings, answered by scattered protests and the sobbing of relatives.

During the trial, the most damning evidence came from about 30 repentant Mafia members, called "pentiti," who broke the gang's historic vow of silence and testified for the government in exchange for more lenient sentences.

In a nation that has no death penalty, prosecutors had asked for 28 life sentences and more than 5,000 years in prison.

Michele "The Pope" Greco, undisputed "boss of bosses" in Palermo and chairman of the 12-man commission of Mafia bosses that oversaw assassination and the heroin trade, was sentenced to life in prison.

As the jury began deliberating last month, the 64-year-old Greco wished the members "peace and tranquility." He was among those accused in the 1982 assassination of Italy's most respected anti-Mafia hunter, Gen. Carlo Alberto della Chiesa, and his young wife.

Greco's brother Salvatore "The Senator" Greco, got 18 years.

Giuseppe "Pippo" Calo, a Mafia financial wizard and money-launderer, got 23 years.

Ignazio Salvo, a millionaire businessman and one-time tax collector for the government, got seven years for criminal association. The same charge brought four years and six months for Salvatore Chiaracane, a prominent lawyer.

The jury rejected the prosecution's call for 15 years for bespectacled Luciano Liggio, Mafia boss of the hill town named Corleone, which figured prominently in Mario Puzo's novel "The Godfather." He has been serving a life term since 1974, but the jury acquitted him of four murders that prosecutors charged he had masterminded from his jail cell in Sardinia.

A key prosecution witness, Tommaso Buscetta, was sentenced to three years and six months. Extradicted from Brazil on drug charges in 1984, Buscetta gave investigators detailed insights on Mafia's internal structure and decision-making.

A Mafia member who "turned" after six members of his family were murdered in gang warfare, Buscetta proved as credible to the Sicilian jury as he did to one in New York, which convicted 18 of 19 defendants on heroin charges following his testimony.

Senate Bars Visa Denials Based On Political Views

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In a move to allow more free trade in ideas, the Senate voted Wednesday to forbid the government from denying visas to foreign activists solely because of their political views.

The move would overturn part of a Cold War-era law that permits the government to deny entry to foreigners with ties to communist or other political organizations that it does not like. In recent years, the Department of State has relied on the law — the McCarran-Walter Act of 1952 — to refuse visas to scores of politicians, authors, journalists and activists who planned to speak at rallies or on college campuses in the United States.

"For the past 35 years, legislation to bar non-immigrant aliens on ideological grounds has exposed our nation to needless ridicule and undermined the respect for free speech we hope to promote around the world," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., a sponsor of the amendment to the State Department authorization bill. The amendment would "allow us to preserve our nation's security without eroding our principles," he said.

The conference report containing the new amendment was approved by the House Tuesday and was sent late Wednesday to the White House. The president is expected to sign the bill.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which lobbied for the change in the law, said that the bill promoted free speech by letting U.S. citizens hear other points of view.

But a State Department legal adviser said that the legislation would not give the government enough leeway to exclude activists who might harm U.S. interests.

Under the amendment, "no alien may be denied a visa or excluded from admission in the United States ... because of any past, current, or expected beliefs, statements or associations which, if engaged in by a U.S. citizen in the United States, would be protected under the Constitution of the United States."

The government may continue to exclude people for "foreign policy or national security" reasons. Moreover, applicants who have links to "terrorist" organizations or who are "official" representatives of "totalitarian states" may also be kept out.

In October, the Supreme Court heard the appeals of four foreign political activists who said they had been unjustly denied entry to the United States.

Christmas Truce Set

Ortega Accepts New Proposal For Direct Talks With Contras

By WILLIAM BRANIGAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — President Daniel Ortega Wednesday accepted a proposal for new, more complex indirect negotiations between his Sandinista government and Nicaraguan rebels and agreed to observe a Christmas truce.

After conferring Wednesday morning with Nicaragua's Roman Catholic primate, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, Ortega told reporters that the Sandinista side was ready to hold a second round of indirect cease-fire talks Monday with the participation of as yet unnamed foreign advisers.

Officials of the rebels, who are known as Contras, said their side agreed in principle to the meeting in the Dominican Republic, but did not know yet whether they could assemble their negotiating team there by Monday.

A second round of talks, following an inconclusive first meeting Dec. 3-4, was to have started Monday ago but was called off by the Sandinistas at the last minute.

Wednesday's proposal, as explained by Ortega, appeared to mark a sharp variation on a long-espoused Sandinista theme that Managua should negotiate a peace agreement with the Reagan administration, the Contras' "masters."

Now the Sandinistas seem to be trying to involve Americans as advisers on their side, with the apparent aim of demonstrating to the U.S. Congress that they are sincere about truce talks in view of an upcoming vote on aid to the contras, observers here said.

Alfredo Cesar, one of six civilian directors of the Nicaraguan Resistance, the Contras' political alliance, said:

"If the Sandinistas come with Soviet and Cuban advisers — the people who give the orders in Nicaragua — I would think that would be very advantageous. But if they are from some other, Western country, it doesn't make any sense." He added, "We have no foreign advisers, and we don't need any."

Obando said he had suggested that the Sandinistas and the Contras name teams of "technical advisers," who would then meet face-to-face to iron out details of a cease-fire.

The Sandinistas in recent days have been in touch with the office of Speaker of the House Jim Wright, D-Texas, in an effort to involve him or his representatives in the cease-fire talks in some capacity, congressional sources said.

"It appears there will be teams that both advise the cardinal and represent each side to him," an aide to Wright said. "Our position is we're willing to help the cardinal, but these advisers appear to represent both the cardinal and a party, and this is inconsistent with any role considered by the speaker."

Another American mentioned by a Sandinista official Wednesday as a prospective adviser, former U.S. arms control negotiator Paul C. Warnke, also said he was not interested.

"Nicaragua will have a team of foreign advisers," Ortega said in explaining the proposed new negotiating arrangement. He declined to specify who these advisers would be, and other officials indicated they had not been chosen yet.

Ortega said the Contras also would have a team of advisers, and that the two teams would meet face-to-face with Obando participating as a mediator. He said he did not know what nationality the Contra technical advisers would be, but it appeared that there was no Sandinista objection to their being Nicaraguan Contras.

In addition to the technical team, Ortega said, the Sandinista side would also send its previous negotiating team headed by Vice Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco.

Give your parents the same feeling of security they gave you.

Remember when you were younger? You didn't have a care in the world. Because you knew mom and dad would always be there. You felt protected. And secure.

Now you can give your parents, or anyone, that same feeling. With Lifeline®. The personal emergency response system that provides a link to 24-hour medical assistance at the push of a button.

Lifeline provides freedom and flexibility for people who might have health problems. But even people who have never had a serious medical problem will enjoy the peace of mind and security that Lifeline brings. So look into renting Lifeline from Beaufort County Hospital. And give the perfect gift for the holidays. Peace of mind.

For more information call Sally Miller at BCH, 946-4379 or 946-4188 or fill out this coupon and send to:

$500 CASH BACK ON NEW CHEVY TRUCKS!

Ford limits their $500 cash back to selected trucks with selected transmissions.

Now, Chevy beats Ford with $500 cash back on popular Chevy trucks with manual or automatic.

And that's $500 on top of big options savings.

You know those big "savings" Ford says they give you? Chevy beats them.

Chevy beats Ford in compact pickups. With new $500 cash back,* a new Chevy S-10 pickup is less than Ford Ranger: $264[†] less in 4x2 models, $510[†] less in 4x4 models. And Chevy S-10 pickups (except EL models) are available with options savings of up to $1,900.

Chevy beats Ford in compact sport utility vehicles. With new $500 cash back, a new 1988 Chevy S-10 Blazer is less than Ford Bronco II: $1,203[†] less in 4x2 models, $587[†] less in 4x4 models. Plus additional options savings of up to $1,100 on every Chevy S-10 Blazer.

Chevy beats Ford in full-size pickups. With new $500 cash back, the advanced full-size Chevy is less than Ford:

$268[†] less in long-wheelbase 4x2 pickups, $829[†] less when equipped with available automatic. Plus options savings of up to $1,100 on full-size Chevy pickups.

And get this: even with its more standard horsepower, heavier frame and greater cab room, a full-size Chevy pickup with available 4-speed automatic is rated EPA estimated MPG city 17, highway 22—better gas mileage than any full-size Ford with available automatic or 5-speed manual.

Bottom line: if Ford tries to stick you with a stick, see your Chevy dealer. For real savings on your kind of truck, equipped with your kind of options.

Plus, for a limited time,* $500 cash back. To use toward your down payment. Or put in your pocket.

Chevy beats Ford. With $500 cash back on every new S-10 pickup, and new 1988 S-10 Blazer and full-size C/K pickup.

*You must take actual retail delivery out of dealer stock by January 11, 1988.
†Based on Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Prices for base vehicles including dealer prep. Tax, license, destination charges and available equipment additional.

Levels of equipment will vary.
Savings based on Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Prices of option packages versus options purchased separately.

Best-backed Chevys ever. 6-year, 60,000-mile powertrain warranty and 6 years or 100,000 miles of body-rust-through protection. Solid proof of the quality built into every new Chevy truck.

THE Heartbeat OF AMERICA  TODAY'S CHEVY TRUCK

ABC Temporarily Pulling 'Hotel' And 'Buck James'

By DIANE HAITHMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Plagued by continuing low ratings, ABC undertook a major overhaul of its prime-time TV schedule Wednesday, handing departure papers to three series, moving seven others to new time slots and returning the "ABC Sunday Night Movie" to the lineup.

The changes, which affect Thursdays through Sundays, will take effect in mid-January. The addition of the movie block on Sundays, beginning Jan. 17, means all three networks will be airing movies, as they did for much of last season.

Under the plan announced by ABC Entertainment President Brandon Stoddard, "Hotel," "Buck James" and "I Married Dora" will leave the schedule early next month. Of the 80 prime-time programs that have aired on the three networks this season, those programs rank, respectively, 68th, 56th and 63rd.

ABC said that all three shows will return later in the season, but a network spokesman acknowledged that "I Married Dora," a first-year comedy, would not continue in production — meaning it is canceled. The fate of the "Hotel" and "Buck James" was uncertain, but the ABC spokesman said a full season of "Hotel" episodes had been ordered, so new episodes remain to be shown.

Meanwhile, "Dolly," "The Charmings," "Sledge Hammer!" "Ohara" and "Spenser: For Hire," all consistently low-rated, will move to new time periods, as will "Mr. Belvedere," which recently returned to the Friday schedule.

The schedule changes came a day after the release of ratings for last week, which showed ABC (with an average Nielsen rating of 12.4) well behind NBC (15.6) and CBS (13.6). ABC has finished third in the prime-time ratings for the past three years and resides there again this season, averaging a 13.6 rating to NBC's 16.3 and CBS' 13.7. Each rating point represents 886,000 homes.

Also affected by what the network called its "substantial restructuring" were two midseason replacement shows that previously had been announced for January premieres. "The Thorns," a comedy, still will debut Jan. 15, and "Juarez," which had been slated to debut Jan. 16, has been postponed "to allow more time for production." No new premiere date was announced.

NBC Cancels Two Friday Night Series

L.A. Times-Washington Post

HOLLYWOOD — NBC has canceled two of its Friday night series — "Rags to Riches" and "Private Eye" — and will replace them with two hourlong action shows, but not for another two months.

The new series that will bracket "Miami Vice" in the NBC lineup are "Sonny Spoon," a detective show starring Mario Van Peebles, and "The Highwayman," based on an NBC made-for-TV movie that aired in September and featured an undercover lawman working out of a high-tech truck.

"Private Eye," a stylized, first-year police drama produced by Anthony Yerkovich, will continue to run through Jan. 15. "Rags to Riches," a musical romp set in the 1960s about a wealthy bachelor who adopts a group of teen-age girls, will conclude the following week, Jan. 22. It premiered last March.

"Sonny Spoon" will take over "Private Eye's" Friday night time slot beginning Feb. 12. "The Highwayman" will premiere at March 4. NBC plans to run specials in that time slot during February.

The network also said in its announcement Monday that two other drama series will switch time periods. "J.J. Starbuck" will move to Saturday nights Dec. 26, replacing "Hunter," which will move to Tuesday nights Dec. 29.

"The Highwayman," a New West production in association with Glen Larson, stars Sam Jones as the undercover lawman who operates out of the fancy 18-wheel truck. Among Larson's previous production credits is "Knight Rider," another NBC series about a crime-fighter working out of a high-tech car.

Child's 'Mr. Jesus' Appeals To Listeners

DALLAS (AP) — A little girl's lament about child abuse has quickly become radio's hottest musical phenomenon.

"In 15 years of radio, I have never seen a record that elicited this many requests and so much emotion from listeners," said Bruce Kelly, morning DJ for KZZP-FM in Phoenix, Ariz. "We Are The World" pales in comparison."

Kelly's station got more than 500 requests for the song the first day he played it in late November, he said.

The song, called "Dear Mr. Jesus," is from the album "Shelter From The Storm" by PowerSource, a Bedford-based evangelical youth chorus featuring 9-year-old soloist Sharon Batts.

"Dear Mr. Jesus, I don't understand why they took her mom and dad away," Sharon sings. "I know that they don't mean to hit with wild and angry hands. Tell them just how big they are, I pray."

In New York City, where the adoptive father of 6-year-old Lisa Steinberg is accused of beating her to death, a radio station got more than 3,000 requests in one day asking to hear "Dear Mr. Jesus."

A woman told a Fort Worth radio station the song forced her to think of how she'd beaten her child. "I realized that the cycle of abuse was continuing with this generation. ... The cycle stops with this letter," she wrote.

Since a Top-40 radio station in Tampa, Fla., began playing the song in October, "Dear Mr. Jesus" has been getting attention usually reserved for major recording artists, even though no money has been spent on promotion and the recording is 2 years old.

The record cracked Billboard magazine's Hot 100 singles chart last week at 82. In next week's issue, it will be No. 63 with a bullet, denoting a fast-rising song, said Thomas Noonan, the magazine's director of charts.

"This falls in a different category," Noonan said. "It's a topical record that happens to hit on a sensitive area at a sensitive time. This kind of phenomenon is exciting to our business."

The record's success has also had its effect on its young vocalist. Sharon appeared with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers National Football League team at a benefit for child abuse crisis centers in the Tampa area last week.

She was scheduled to attend a breakfast benefit in Mesa, Ariz., today.

Sharon said she is pleased when she hears stories of people who have been touched by the song. "It makes me feel good because I know that those people haven't had help," she said.

She said, however, that she's getting "a little tired" of the song because she hears it all the time.

Leaders of PowerVision, the group's record company, say the crush of orders has the singers and their parents volunteering time each day to fill orders. Sharon's mother, Jan Batts, the group's creative director, said two phone lines have been busy for weeks. "We'd like to help everybody right away, but it's just impossible," she said.

Only 15,000 copies of the song have been sold, but radio listeners in the last seven weeks have ordered about 100,000 copies, she said. "It has just grown so fast," said Mrs. Batts. "It's difficult to say it's under control."

The Gospel Workshop for Children Inc., a non-profit, non-denominational group, started PowerSource five years ago to produce records and videos for troubled children who have no one to help them.

The group commissioned songwriter Richard Klender to write "Dear Mr. Jesus" at the suggestion of a board member who had been abused as a child.

In some cities, record stores and radio stations are joining to sell the album and giving the profits to local child-abuse crisis centers.

Proceeds from orders made directly to PowerSource will be used to offset distribution costs the tiny record label has accrued, Mrs. Batts said.

"A delightful fantasy for all ages. Just plain miraculous!"

 When Dorothy Rice Sims perfected the psychic bid, its usual form was to open the bidding with values far short of an opening bid, generally in a suit where the opening bidder was short. For a while that sowed confusion in the ranks, and the tactic enjoyed a spell of great popularity.

 Eventually, however, even average players learned to cope with that sort of bluff, and the psychic bid fell into disrepute, only to return in another, more dangerous, guise. Instead of being wielded with a mallet, it was used with a velvet glove to camouflage the distribution of a hand or to deflect an opening lead. It is a tactic that works even in the most exalted company, as this hand from a world championship event proves.
 You won't find North's one no trump overall in any bridge textbook we know of. In those tomes you will learn that you need 8-10 points and a stopper for such action. But North knew that his hand was worthless defensively, and even detracted from his partner's defensive capacity. On offense, however, his trick-taking ability was enormous, so he wanted to deter his non-vulnerable opponents from sacrificing.

 He reaped no immediate reward, for East blasted into four spades. Nevertheless, when North persevered with five hearts, both opponents decided that they had had enough.
 Now North's bidding really paid off handsomely. A glance at the full diagram shows that a club lead would have defeated the hand—West can ruff the third round with a trump higher than anything in dummy. But an unsuspecting West led his ace of spades, and it was all over. Declarer ruffed on the table, drew trumps in two rounds, then set up diamonds by ruffing the third round. A spade ruff provided an entry to dummy, so he ended up with an overtrick, losing only one club.
