Death Spree Leaves 16 Dead In Arkansas

By MARY FREEMAN
Associated Press Writer
RUSSELLVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Authorities found nine bodies today near the residence of a man suspected in the shooting deaths of at least seven other people, including five family members and a woman who had spurned his advances.

The 16 deaths are among the worst mass killings this decade. Twenty people were fatally shot at a McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif., in July 1984; 14 people were shot to death at an Edmond, Okla., post office in August 1986.

Seven bodies were found in a shallow grave near the home of R. Gene Simmons, the man charged in two of the shooting deaths Monday, and two children were found in the trunk of a vehicle parked outside the house, according to Edie Deal, warrant officer for the Pope County Sheriff's Department.

The seven bodies were found about 150 feet from Simmons' house at nearby Dover, said sheriff's Deputy Jim Handy.

The bodies appeared to be those of four young adults and an older woman, Handy said, but identities were not immediately available.

Earlier, Pope County Sheriff Jim Bolin said that Simmons' wife and eight of their children and grandchildren were unaccounted for.

Simmons, 47, was ordered held without bond today by Pope County Circuit Judge John D. Patterson.

Simmons is charged with two counts of capital murder and four counts of attempted capital murder in Monday's 45-minute shooting spree in Russellville.

The bodies were found when crews began searching at Simmons' home where his son, daughter, their spouses, and a grandchild were found Monday amid Christmas decorations and unopened presents, police said.

Simmons surrendered to the police chief after a 45-minute shooting spree through a law office and three former workplaces Monday in which two people were killed and four others wounded, officials said. He faced a bond hearing today on two counts of capital murder and four of attempted capital murder. Authorities say the gunman used two .22-caliber revolvers.

The bodies of the family members were found at Simmons' home about 15 miles north of Russellville after the rampage, but charges had not been filed in those deaths. Pope County Sheriff Jim Bolin said Simmons is the only suspect.

Authorities would not speculate on a motive. "There're some ideas, but thus far, it wouldn't be fair to him or anyone else at this point because the investigation is not complete," Prosecuting Attorney John M. Bynum said.

Cosmonaut Ends Record Space Trek

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri Romanenko, the Soviet cosmonaut who set a world endurance record by spending nearly 11 months in space, returned to Earth today on the snowy steppe of Soviet Kazakhstan, the Tass news agency said.

"The descent capsule of the Soyuz TM-3 spaceship soft-landed in the designated area in Soviet territory, near the town of Arkalyk," the official Soviet news agency said.

It said the capsule carrying Romanenko, who spent 326 days in space, flight engineer Alexander Alexandrov and test pilot Anatoly Levchenko landed at 12:15 p.m. Moscow time (4:14 a.m. EST). Radio Moscow said the cosmonauts underwent medical examinations at the landing site.

Radio Moscow said nothing about what the medical tests showed, but reported doctors were paying "close attention" to Romanenko's condition.

A later Tass dispatch said "upon landing, the cosmonauts feel well."

Scientists say the 43-year-old Romanenko's ability to handle a long period in weightlessness will help them determine the feasibility of manned flight to Mars, which they say would take about three years round-trip.

Dollar Shows Sign Of Holding On After Posting Record Drop

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell slightly against the yen today amid reports of intervention by Japan's central bank, but showed signs of stabilizing after record plunges that chilled a 3-week-old stock market rally.

The dollar's post-Christmas nosedive Monday against Japanese and major Western European currencies pushed interest rates up and the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks down 56.70 points to 1,942.97, its biggest drop since Dec. 3. The Dow average held steady in early trading today.

Currency traders ignored a statement by the Reagan administration, which said further declines in the dollar would be "counterproductive."

In Tokyo today, the dollar closed at 123.50 yen, slightly lower than Monday's close of 123.55 yen but up from its opening of 123.38 yen.

The Bank of Japan would not officially comment on its involvement in the currency market, but it was said to have bought a small amount of dollars, according to Japanese banking sources speaking on condition of anonymity.

In light, holiday-season trading Monday, the dollar sank to 40-year lows against the yen, West German mark, Swiss franc and Dutch guilder, and five- to six-year lows against the British pound, French franc and Italian lira.

The dollar slumped about 1.7 percent against the mark and yen, dropping to 123.7 yen and 1.598 marks by late afternoon in New York, from 125.9 yen late last Friday and 1.625 marks late Thursday.

The yield on the Treasury's key 30-year bond jumped to 8.98 percent by late Monday afternoon from 8.92 percent Thursday, the last day of trading before Christmas.

That helped dampen a rally in stocks that had seen the Dow tack on nearly 233 points, or 13 percent, in the previous three weeks.

Although the dollar has fallen more than 50 percent against the yen, mark and some other Western European currencies since February 1985, it has fallen far less against the currencies of Canada, South Korea, Taiwan and Hong-Kong, and has risen against the currencies of Mexico, Brazil and China.

Airport Official Expecting Terminal Construction To Begin By Summer

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

An expansion of the commuter terminal at Pitt-Greenville Airport may get under way as early as the spring or summer of 1988 if money for the project becomes available as hoped for, officials said today.

The state Department of Transportation's recently approved Transportation Improvement Plan includes $146,000 for terminal building expansion at Pitt-Greenville.

In addition to the state money, airport manager Jim Turcotte said the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and the Greenville City Council each appropriated $37,500 in their budgets this year and are expected to allocate similar amounts for the 1988-89 fiscal years to go toward the project. And Turcotte said the local airport hopes to receive $300,000 in federal money for the project.

"We're looking at a total $500,000 terminal expansion," Turcotte said. "But there's no guarantee. We may have to scale the project back" if the federal money doesn't come through.

But Turcotte said, "We hope to get started this spring if possible ... late spring or early summer."

"We're trying to design a facility that during construction will have little or no impact on our present operations."

The administrative and general aviation section of the present terminal building was built in 1967 and the 5,000 square foot commuter terminal portion was added in a $350,000 project in 1982.

Turcotte also said he has hopes that an instrument landing system, expected to cost $385,000 to $400,000, can be installed at Pitt-Greenville within the next year.

"We're the only commercial airport in North Carolina with scheduled service that was not part of the Piedmont (Airlines) system in the 1950s and 1960s ... and the only one that does not have an instrument landing system," Turcotte said.

Turcotte said instrument landing systems at other commercial airports in North Carolina were installed by the Federal Aviation Administration. But he said the proposed ILS system for the local airport will have to be paid for with city, county and state money because the FAA is no longer installing such systems.

Two other airport projects for which money was included in the

Children Trample 28 On Staircase

BEIJING (AP) — Twenty-eight children were trampled to death and 100 injured when hundreds of pupils at a central China primary school fell over each other on an unlighted staircase, the China Youth News reported today.

The daily said most of the dead at the school in Shanyang county, Shaanxi province, were less than 10 years old.

Eight of the injured were in serious condition, it said.

The report said the accident occurred early Monday when pupils in the four-story school building were called outside for a regular morning meeting on the playground.

One of the two staircases was closed, and pupils from 18 classes on the second floor and above crammed onto a single staircase.

Because lights were not turned on and the stairwell was dark, pupils began to push and many were knocked down and trampled.

The daily did not say how many youngsters were involved, although a Chinese elementary school class of ten has between 40 and 50 pupils.

AFDC Program 'Barely Treading Water'

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The Aid to Families with Dependent Children program in Pitt County is "barely treading water" as the caseload has grown from an average of 1,669 in fiscal year 1984 to an average of 1,826 in fiscal year 1987, the director of the program told the Pitt County Board of Social Services during its meeting Monday.

Each of the 13 eligibility specialist I workers in the program handle about 114 units of work a month, completing an average of 23 face-to-face reviews with clients, 55 monthly report actions, 16 applications and 20 changes in addresses and payments, Debbie Ryals said.

The state recommended levels of work are 20 to 25 cases per worker each month for those handling applications and 140 cases per worker for those with caseloads without applications. Four to seven additional eligibility specialist have been recommended for the Pitt County program.

In addition, the AFDC is a "pivot program" that feeds information to the Community Work Experience Program, food stamps, child support, telephone company, Housing Authority and other government-sponsored programs, she said.

"We're in the business of doing paperwork," Mrs. Ryals said. "What frightens me is we're losing sight of the people (which) waters down the effectiveness of the program."

As a constant referral program and with the turnover in clients, "We're barely treading water," Mrs. Ryals said. Dispelling reports that most AFDC clients indefinitely remain in the program, the average length of time was less than 24 months during the last two years with nearly 30 percent of the people participating less than six months. Seventeen percent of clients participated more than 60 months.

"Our program in Pitt County is falling in the Congress' line of intent" to aid families through rough periods, she said.

During the past two years, 57 percent of the adult households were under age 30, and 39 percent had children under age 6. Seventy-six percent had two or less children.

The program, already swimming in a large caseload, will increase its workload with expanded services becoming effective in 1988.

The AFDC program currently offers financial assistance to families with children under age 18 who are deprived financial support and guidance.

Sun Appears But Cold's Coming

The sun broke through onto Greenville and Pitt County this morning shortly before 10 a.m., interrupting several days of rain and cloudiness.

According to Greenville Utilities, the rainfall for the 24 hours prior to 8 a.m. today was .8 inches. The Tar River level at 8 a.m. was 4.1 feet; the temperature, 40 degrees.

According to Mitch Smith, a Pitt County agricultural extension agent, the recent rainy weather has not yet hampered area farmers' efforts to put in their crops. All grain crops are harvested, he said, and planting of spring crops is not overdue. Most tobacco farmers, he said, would like to have their plant beds seeded by the third week in January. They will need 48 hours leeway before planting to fumigate the beds, he said. Unless it continues to rain steadily until then, they're in good shape, he said.

An early morning flight into Greenville was canceled, a spokesman for Piedmont Airlines said, but flights to and from Pitt-

Greenville Airport the remainder of the day have been on schedule.

Across the state a complex winter storm brought a variety of weather, and the National Weather Service called for temperatures to tumble into the 20s and 30s overnight.

Snow developed in the northern mountains during the early morning and covered the mountain by sunrise today. By 5 a.m., Boone, in Watauga County, and portions of Buncombe County reported 2 inches of snow, and 3 inches of snow had fallen at Soco Gap in Haywood County. Flurries were reported east of the mountains, but they were widely scattered.

A chance of snow existed tonight along most of the coast, including the Outer Banks, but forecasters said it was not expected to spread inland.

The Greenville area forecast for tonight is clearing, windy and much colder, with a low in the mid 20s. Wednesday's high is expected to be in the low 40s.

The special combines elements of "We Remember: North Carolina's 400th Historical Minutes," the 120, 60-second programs, with new footage.

Gunman Holds Up Greenville Store

A 5:20 p.m. armed robbery and the theft of more than $4,000 worth of property from an apartment were among nine thefts reported to Greenville police Monday.

Officer R.S. Sawyer, who said the armed robbery was at the Family Dollar Store at 2518 S. Memorial Drive, said a man armed with a pistol took an undetermined amount of cash from the store and was last seen running toward Arlington Boulevard.

Officer T.E. Evans said property valued at approximately $4,030 — including two television sets, two stereo systems, four speakers, 150 record albums, a video game, a microwave oven and two bicycles — was taken from A3 Langston Park Apartments in a break-in reported at 2:20 p.m.

Officer R.C. Stroud said 300 pounds of copper valued at $350 was taken from Mid-South Metals at 1625 N. Greene St. in a break-in reported at 8 a.m., while a television set and lamp were taken from a guest room at The Comfort Inn on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 1:06 p.m.

Officer T.E. Evans said two television sets were taken from L6 Oakmont Square Apartments in a break-in reported at 10:43 a.m.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said $10 in cash was taken from a desk at the Jefferson Pilot Insurance Co. office at 3106 S. Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 10:58 a.m., while Officer W.E. Davis said a purse containing $125 in cash was taken from an office at First Citizens Bank at 301 ance due to death, disability or desertion of one or both parents. In January, the program will expand to include children deprived due to the unemployment of one parent if both parents are in the home.

Other budgeting changes by the General Assembly will allow increased numbers of working poor to qualify for AFDC. For example, if a family of two with earnings of $3.65 per hour for a 40-hour week has a net income of $319 per month after all allowable deductions, prior to January, the family would not be eligible for AFDC due to excess income. The same family can qualify for $71 per month, including food stamps and Medicaid, under the budget changes.

In addition to Medicaid and food stamps, AFDC households are entitled to child support services.

Officer J.W. Isenhour said a stereo, equalizer and purse were taken from a vehicle parked at Harris Super Market on North Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 3:56 p.m.

Officer L.C. Overby said a television set was taken from 206 Paris Ave. about 10:35 p.m. by a woman who gained entrance to the home after asking to use the bathroom, then ran from the dwelling with the television set to a waiting car.

Child Support Supervisor Says More Agents Needed

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Social Services was briefed on the county's Child Support Enforcement Program during its monthly meeting Monday.

According to unit supervisor John Jablonski, the program is tackling two problems uncovered by the federal audit on the North Carolina services last year.

"North Carolina has deficiencies in locating absent parents and intercepting unemployment benefits" and may face penalties in 1988, he said. Collecting the benefits has been an easier problem to remedy than locating the parents.

The county program has "so many cases and few workers," Jablonski said. For example, the program has about 5,000 cases on the books and only 2,000 currently are being handled.

Before two additional agents were added to the program, Pitt County's ratio of cases to worker was highest in the state at a rank of 84th with 1,200 cases to one worker. With the additional positions, the six agents handle about 800 cases each, bringing the county's rank down to 77th.

The state recommendation is an average of 325 cases per worker, and state analyses have indicated that about nine workers need to be added to the Pitt County staff.

Because of the "great reluctance of County Commissioners to expand staff, ... we've put our eggs in the basket of computerization," department Director Edward Garrison said.

The department has an automated accounting system and currently is installing an IV-D Automated Tracking System to relieve some pressure on workers.

The tracking system will generate

The story is told by John White, governor of the colony. Narrated by Andy Griffith, the film makes use of various locations, including western Orange County where English and Indian villages were constructed to duplicate the ones of the 1580s. Some of the footage is aboard the Elizabeth II, a replicated 16th-century ship berthed at Manteo.

Winter Schedule

Jazzercise has announced its winter schedule, which includes classes on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 9 a.m. at Greenville Dance Co.

The 6:30 p.m. classes on Mondays and Wednesdays will be at Elmhurst School in addition to the Tuesday and Thursday classes at 5:45 p.m. Child care is available at the morning and 5:45 p.m. sessions.

Thursday Service

St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church will have a watch meeting service Thursday at 10:30 p.m. at 911 Perkins St.

Friendship Church

Consecration and dedication services are in progress at Friendship Holiness Church in Falkland. The services, which begin at 7:30 p.m. each day, will continue through Friday.

Speakers include Mary Foreman, tonight; Thennie Graham, Wednesday; Annie Bell, Thursday, and Mamie Gorahm, Friday.

Foundation Meets

The fourth quarterly meeting of the Greenville Foundation for 1987 will be held in the office of Louis Gaylord, 206 Washington St., Monday at 8 p.m.

Seminar At Hospital

A "health-wise" seminar titled "Drugs and Alcohol Abuse" will be held in the dining room at Beaufort County Hospital Jan. 12 at 7:30 p.m.

Guest speakers include Dr. Elisabeth Cook, physician and letters to clients whose cases are currently being handled in an effort to locate absent parents, Jablonski said. Whereas the system may produce the more than 2,000 letters overnight, it would take workers about two months to do manually, he said.

The processes of the new system, which was described to the board, has been loaded with current cases and tracks them through the program's process, Jablonski said. In addition to generating letters, it provides Post Office searches, out-of-state notices and automatically logs information. It also tracks the time frame for each case and alerts workers when cases approach time frames established through regulations.

With the new system, Jablonski estimates the ideal case load per worker may be 500.

Pitt County receives about $5 for each $1 spent in child support services, Jablonski told the board. The state average is $3.95 for each $1. In the third quarter, which encompasses the months of July through September, the county made a profit

Larry W. Rivers, senior vice commander in chief of the national Veterans of Foreign Wars organization, was guest speaker Monday night at a dinner meeting held at VFW Home Post 7032 on Mumford Road.

He was accompanied by Henry Allen of South Carolina, a member of the VFW's governing body, the Council of Administration.

Commenting on his whirlwind visitation tour to VFW posts in the post-Christmas period, Rivers said, "This is my 12th stop in two days. I have five more stops on Tuesday and two on Wednesday before this current visitation tour ends."

of about $24,000 for investing in the child support program, he said.

In other matters, Garrison told the board social services will face about a 3 percent cut in services instead of the proposed 8 percent cut of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Budget Deficit Reduction Act. A funding bill passed by Congress and signed by President Reagan prevents some proposed cuts, he said.

Garrison also told the board that "statewide, North Carolina is in terrible violation" of state laws that require privacy and confidentiality in handling cases. The problem, which exists in Pitt County to a lesser extent, he said, may be controlled through private offices for workers who interview clients or through interviewing rooms.

County social workers and eligibility specialists may be reclassified after a study by state personnel, Garrison said. And, currently the department has six positions vacant. The Pitt County Board of Commissioners recently approved a budget amendment requesting a new eligibility specialist I position, he said.

Rivers said the tour is "basically closely related to membership drives to get more military veterans of all ages to become members of VFW chapters."

"Earlier in December I was a guest at VFW meetings out west in Montana and in the New England states of Vermont and New Hamp-

HIGH POINT (AP) — A South Korean furniture company will relocate its U.S. headquarters from Dallas to High Point, a move which local officials say solidifies the city's reputation as the furniture capital of the world.

"We're obviously ecstatic, especially with the decision to relocate the corporate headquarters" said Harold Craven, chairman of the High Point Economic Development Commission, of the upcoming move by Hyundai Furniture.

Hyundai also will establish an assembly and distribution center in High Point, officials said.

Don Mitchell, president of Hyundai's U.S. operations, said assembly and shipping at the High Point plant are scheduled to begin by late February. Corporate personnel will transfer later, he said.

Fifty workers will be hired initially for the assembly and distribution operations. Mitchell said about 12 employees in the corporate office will relocate from Dallas.

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — A Wake Forest police officer was treated for chest pains and released early this morning from a Raleigh hospital after his son allegedly held him hostage briefly and fired two shots from a 12-gauge shotgun, authorities said.

Officer Richard Branch, in his early 50s, was not injured by the gunfire, said Franklin County sheriff's Maj. W.T. Whitaker.

Branch's son, Richard Branch, 26, was arraigned early today by a Franklin County magistrate on charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and kidnapping, Whitaker said.

Whitaker said the incident stemmed from a domestic dispute between the father and son.

Storm Spreads Snow Eastward After Burying Plains, Midwest

By The Associated Press

A deadly winter storm hit the Northeast today after turning highways into parking lots and stranding travelers at packed airports as it plodded across the Plains and Midwest.

The snow tapered off in the Midwest after the storm, blamed for at least 16 deaths, moved east. In six hours overnight, the storm dropped 2 inches of snow on Cleveland and Toledo, Ohio, and Birmingham, Buffalo and Elmira, N.Y. Up to 8 inches fell on parts of Pennsylvania.

The storm, which hit the Colorado foothills with up to 34 inches of snow, reached New England today with strong winds, the National Weather Service said. It extended from Michigan to West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware.

"It's blowing pretty good now," police dispatcher Shelley Haynes said on Nantucket Island, Mass., where 8 inches was expected. "They're putting the chains on the cruisers now."

In Ohio, 45 trucks began salting and plowing streets in Cleveland before the morning rush hour, while Akron mobilized 32 salt trucks and crews were plowing major streets in Toledo.

Meanwhile, a new Pacific storm blustered into the Northwest, and flooding continued unabated in the South.

The foul weather Monday frustrated holiday travelers, unless they happened to be in Miami, where the 83-degree high tied a record for the date.

In Hastings, Mich., halfway between Milwaukee and Detroit, nearly 10 inches of snow had fallen by Monday night.

"Traffic's moving all right now, but a lot of people are getting stuck on hills," said Kirk Binder, a Kalamazoo, Mich., service station employee taking dozens of tow calls. "We get more business this way. I like this stuff."

Other disruptions included temporary power outages in the Chicago area — between 6 and 12 inches hit northern Illinois — and several Iowa cities; rural mail undelivered around Rockford, Ill., and cancellation of greyhound racing in Waterloo, Iowa.

Heavy snow in Denver and Chicago created a large backup of flights all over the West, said San Francisco International Airport spokesman Ron Wilson.

Some passengers were diverted from Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, where snow fell at a rate of more than 1 inch an hour, to Milwaukee's Mitchell Field, only to be delayed when flights were suspended to clear runways.

Denver's Stapleton International Airport, which reopened Monday after closing for seven hours during a blizzard Sunday, struggled to catch up with a passenger backlog.

"You pretty well need a shoehorn or grease your hips to get through the crowd," said airport spokesman Norm Avery.

Colorado airport conditions kept Gary Hart from flying to Iowa and caused jet-setters to be diverted Monday from Aspen and other resorts to Walker Field in Grand Junction. Singers John Denver and Paul Simon, model Cheryl Tiegs, game show host Bert Convy and Maria Shriver and Arnold Schwarzenegger were spotted there.

The latest Pacific storm brought freezing rain and light snow to the Northwest, and up to 8 inches of snow was forecast for upper elevations of California's eastern Sierra Nevada.

Oregon state police closed the snow-covered southbound lanes of Interstate 5 in southwest Portland this morning after a tractor-trailer rig collided with a pickup truck. Up to 2 inches of snow were forecast for Portland and the northern Willamette Valley.

The weather service predicted the worst flooding of the Ouachita River in 40 years at Camden in southern Arkansas. Heavy rains have swelled the river, which is expected to crest Wednesday at 44.5 feet, or 18.5 feet above flood stage.

In eastern Arkansas, where 13 inches of rain fell over four days, streets remained impassable today in West Memphis.

The flooding extended into northern Louisiana, where lakeside residents tried to protect their property.

The deaths of four men each in Wisconsin and Michigan and two in Illinois were blamed on the exertion of snow removal, officials said. There were two storm-related traffic deaths in Illinois and one each in Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Israel Beefs Up Troops In Anticipation Of Riots

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel has flooded the occupied lands with troops because it expects new riots Friday on an anniversary celebrated by a Palestinian guerrilla group, the military's chief of staff was quoted as saying today.

Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron, in a briefing to Israeli military correspondents, said Israel tripled the number of troops in the Gaza Strip and now has more troops posted there than it used to capture the territory from Egypt in 1967.

It has also doubled the number of troops in the occupied West Bank, seized from Jordan in 1967, he said.

The precautions were taken for the 23rd anniversary on Jan. 1 of the founding of Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla group under the umbrella of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"Fatah Day," as it is known among Palestinians, has often been marked by violence and bloodshed.

"The riots in the territories will not happen again," Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said in an interview published today. "Even if we have to use massive force, we will not allow last week's events to repeat themselves."

The U.S. Consulate in Jerusalem sent a political officer to Nablus, a city in the West Bank, to observe the third day of the military trials of 900 Palestinians arrested during two weeks of unrest earlier this month.

At least 21 Arabs were killed in clashes with security forces that started on Dec. 8. No Israeli soldiers were killed during that time.

Rabin said Israel will "go on using" deportations to punish security offenders, despite concern that "in the long run they (expulsions) can corrode the support for Israel in American public opinion." "Deportation is a meaningful punishment," Rabin told the Haaretz newspaper.

But Foreign Ministry spokesman Ehud Gol said Israel has not yet decided on expelling ringleaders of the riots.

"Israel is acting to restore calm and will continue to do so with the legal means at its disposal," he said. "The whole issue is subject to an Israeli decision, and until now no decision has been taken."

The U.S. State Department said Monday it had cautioned Israel that deportations could trigger more violence. "We have talked to the Israelis about deportations, and we did say that we prefer they not" use that punishment, said Dennis Harper, a State Department spokesman in Washington.

Jordan and Egypt have said they would not accept the deportees, and Israel would likely have to release them in southern Lebanon.

Most West Bank residents are Jordanian citizens, while most residents of the Gaza Strip, which was held by Egypt until 1967, are stateless.

Shomron, releasing revised casualty figures from the two weeks of rioting, said 21 Arabs were killed by army gunfire and 179 were wounded. He said 41 Israeli soldiers and 27 civilians were injured by stones or firebombs thrown by Arab demonstrators.

One more Palestinian, Hosni Saada Museireh, died from a heart attack after Israeli police dispersed a demonstration in Jerusalem with tear gas. Arab sources count him as a riot casualty, raising their toll to 22.

The riots began after a traffic accident in which an Israeli truck driver hit two Arab cars in Gaza, killing four passengers. Rumors spread that the killing was done to avenge the stabbing death of an Israeli the day before.

Shomron said the army would introduce riot-control training for soldiers, an area that has been left until now to the paramilitary Border Police.

At the trials in the West Bank and Gaza, army prosecutors were basing their cases on testimony from soldiers and security agents, and on video films and photographs taken during the rioting.

Rabin told Israeli Parliament on Monday that "every detainee will be entitled to meet his family, to receive legal representation and to benefit from proper legal procedures regarding his detention."

However, in Gaza no witnesses gave evidence and no family members were allowed to watch the proceedings while 60 prisoners were tried.

All but 10 of them confessed to the charges and were convicted, officials said. Many received three-month prison terms for stone-throwing, while some got 20 days for taking part in a demonstration.

Arab Summit Urges Iran To Accept U.N. Cease-Fire

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Leaders of six Arab nations ended a four-day summit today by denouncing Iran for "aggressive acts" against Saudi Arabia and Kuwait and for attacks on commercial shipping in the Persian Gulf.

The nations attending the Gulf Cooperation Council conference urged Iran to "abide by the principles of good neighborliness" and accept a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire in 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Conference sources said the alliance discussed the formation of a joint arms industry and a common strategy for defending their coastlines, offshore oil installations and tankers against Iranian attacks.

The group also discussed whether it would ask Egypt for military assistance to hammer out a defense strategy against escalating Iranian attacks, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

But those topics were not mentioned in the final report released today by the defense ministers from the six nations.

"The Gulf Cooperation Council regretfully noted that Iran has been prevaricating over the U.N. resolution ... and the council demands action by the Security Council and the world community to implement the resolution," the leaders said in the report. It did not specify what actions should be taken.

"The council hopes that Iran will respond to the call for peace and spare the blood of Moslems, so that our potentials may be directed against the (Israeli) enemies of the Islamic nation."

This month alone, 26 ships have been attacked in the gulf by Iran and Iraq in the most devastating assault on shipping of their 7-year-old war.

Early today, shipping executives reported that Iranian navy warships intercepted and seized the 31,205-ton West German freighter Norasia Pearl.

They said it was taken to the Iranian port of Bandar Abbas. The Iranians usually intercept ships they believe are carrying cargo for Iraq, and return them after they seize anything of value to their enemy.

Poor Timing

The lawsuit filed by a civil rights group against the Pitt County Commissioners is a poorly-timed, haphazard move that does not give the new election method an opportunity to move through proper channels and work.

The U.S. Department of Justice has not yet ruled on the proposed plan's feasibility, yet this group felt it necessary to block the plan's progress with an injunction against its implementation. That action prevents the new election method from proceeding and inhibits its intent — which is, ironically, to provide more minority representation on the county commission.

The plan was devised utilizing responsible legal guidelines and with the balanced interest of Pitt County citizens in mind. The issue was thoroughly heard by the public, both at the local and state levels. Input from citizens, minorities included, was considered when the plan was formulated. The plan was discussed and ratified by the N.C. General Assembly.

Now, the actions of a small fraction of the populace has threatened the plan's success.

The election method utilizes a soundly balanced combination of six commissioners elected by district and three commissioners elected at-large. Perhaps the group filing the lawsuit should be reminded of this plan's strengths.

First, a six-three combination addresses the important issue of minority representation. The six district-elected seats — along with the three at-large positions — allows minorities an opportunity for visible voting power on the board without polarizing voters.

Second, the plan provides true at-large voting that is imperative for a balanced county commission. Without at-large voting, the board's perspective could become perilously narrow. It would be easy for commissioners to adopt an attitude of provincialism and disunity.

The plan in question is a strong method of electing Pitt County's leadership. It should be given an opportunity to pass Justice Department scrutiny, then prove its effectiveness by being put into action.

Filing a lawsuit before any type of official legal ruling is available on the plan or before it has a chance to work is a frivolous approach. It impedes progress toward a fairer and more efficient method of election for Pitt County.

Necessary Start

The October stock market crash and subsequent gyrations which spread throughout the financial world have had major effects on the federal budget for 1988 that Congress finally approved and President Reagan signed.

The unsettled financial markets caused Congress and the president to take a hard look at the federal deficit and take steps to lower it.

The budget is not perfect, but it does reduce the projected deficit for 1988 by $33.3 billion. Following a White House-Congress summit an agreement was reached on a two-year $76 billion deficit reduction package which is built into the bill signed by the president prior to the Christmas holidays.

The other side of the bill is the $23 billion in taxes it creates, billions of dollars in reductions of benefit programs and moderation of defense spending.

The president commented the budget is "a first step toward placing our country on a reliable and credible budget course." Reducing the defense spending is a major step forward. A strong military is a must for a world power but the increases in defense spending during the Reagan administration — at the expense of domestic programs and in the light of a huge deficit — are not feasible.

It simply isn't good business to spend money more than is available and the initial reduction for 1988 begins to ease the predicament this trend has placed the nation in.

Everyone is not convinced, however, that the nation's budgetary problems are solved. Next year, after all, is an election year. While Congress may be satisfied to hold to the projected course of spending that is not always assured when election campaigns are underway.

Nevertheless, for the 1988 fiscal year which began Oct. 1, the nation has a $600 billion budget. It is far from a perfect budget and some domestic needs will go lacking. It does, however, address the concerns of investors, and all who are nervous about the huge deficits the federal government has been building.

The goal now should be continued reduction of deficit spending. The federal government must live within its means.

Arms Policy Sets Reagan Apart

'Except on social welfare policies, where there were some differences between them, the hero of the liberal Democrats in 1960 and the hero of the conservative Republicans in 1980 were as alike as peas in a pod.'

History 103: Final Exam. Name the year the following presidential campaign took place: The challenger accused the incumbent of excessive caution and drift in foreign policy, of a failure to seize opportunities to sock it to the Soviets, of a lack of aggressiveness in the Cold War. He also charged that the incumbent was maintaining a burdensome level of taxes that stifled the growth of the private sector. At the same time, he promised that as president he would shed the cautious, penny-pinching defense policy of the incumbent, restore America's military strength, establish superiority, and use it to make the Soviets behave, or else.

The challenger assured the voters that the unbalanced budget that would result from more defense spending and lower taxes would quickly disappear because the tax cut would stimulate investment and spending, and by lowering taxes we would actually raise revenue as the economy outgrew the deficit.

In short, if the challenger won, firmness and resolve would replace hesitancy and doubt as the nation got moving again toward a new dawn. He spoke directly to American pride. He assured Americans they could do anything they set their minds to, that nothing was beyond them, that unbridled optimism was the appropriate political philosophy.

The correct answer is 1960, when the challenger was John F. Kennedy; the correct answer is also 1980, when the challenger was Ronald Reagan.

Except on social welfare policies, where there were some differences between them, the hero of the liberal Democrats in 1960 and the hero of the conservative Republicans in 1980 were as alike as peas in a pod.

For a real contrast with Reagan, we must go to the other two Republicans elected to the presidency since World War II — Dwight D. Eisenhower and Richard M. Nixon.

In Ike's mind, what distinguished Republicans from Democrats was fiscal responsibility and sound management. He refused to lower taxes until he had balanced the budget. And although he made little progress on reducing the national debt, he did balance the budget in three of his eight years and did not add to the red ink. This was one of his proudest boasts.

Eisenhower had an almost mystical faith in a sound dollar and a prudent government, and a horror of high interest rates, inflation and budget deficits. Ike thought the Democratic philosophy of "tax and tax, spend and spend, elect and elect" to be the work of the devil. I can't imagine what he would say about the Reagan philosophy — borrow and borrow, spend and spend, elect and elect.

Many of us believe that because Ike insisted on the fiscal principles of old-fashioned Republicanism, the 1950s were the best decade of this century.

Nixon was not as wedded to the sound dollar and a balanced budget as Ike had been, but in comparison with Reagan on this question, Nixon was a genuine conservative. Through impoundment, a device he invented and used with great effectiveness, Nixon kept within sight of a balanced budget. Reagan, of course, has run up deficits that only seven years ago were absolutely unimaginable.

Eisenhower's views on defense spending were based on his military philosophy, which was retaliation. Ike figured that so long as the Soviets feared we might retaliate with nuclear weapons, they would be deterred from adventurism. To be able to threaten retaliation, it was not necessary to have overwhelming superiority. "One bomb," he once told me, "would be enough, so long as it went off over Moscow." Eisenhower, therefore, was willing to settle for a relatively small defense establishment.

Nixon, too, was willing to settle for sufficiency. The arsenals of the two sides had built up considerably between 1961 and 1969; Nixon's military philosophy, reflecting this growth, was to accept the MAD (mutually assured destruction) policy. He initiated detente and signed the first arms-control agreement. So, like Ike, Nixon was able to bring down and hold down defense spending.

Reagan's approach has been to go for a defensive system that both Ike and Nixon scorned as unworkable, unnecessary, far too expensive and provocative. He started the most expensive weapons system in history, made it the centerpiece of his administration, meanwhile giving to the Pentagon whatever it demanded. In 1957, Eisenhower warned that "some day there is going to be a man sitting in my present chair who has not been raised in the military services and who will have little understanding of where slashes in their estimates can be made with little or no damage."

With Reagan, the day has come as he launches the biggest arms race in history with his Strategic Defense Initiative.

There are many other differences between Eisenhower, Nixon and Reagan. Ike and Dick, for example, were good stewards who guarded our national inheritance carefully; it never occurred to either man to sell government assets as a way to appear to hold down the deficit.

The Nixon administration, of course, set the record for scandal, but it should be noted that none of Nixon's people was ever accused of stealing money from the public treasury, or otherwise enriching themselves through their proximity to power. In Reagan's case, not only has there been wholesale violation of both the intent and the letter of the law by the National Security Council and the Central Intelligence Agency and the White House staff involved in the Iran-Contra affair, but apparent wholesale private enrichment by cronies and supporters of the president. In this last, incidentally, Reagan does have a Republican precedent; it was Warren Harding who once pleaded, "Protect me from my friends."

Eisenhower's presidency (and Gerald Ford's) are proof that corruption and Republicanism are not synonymous, just as Reagan's administration is proof that a sound fiscal policy and Republicanism are not synonymous.

In Manila, Year Ends With Uncertainty

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino survived a turbulent year of coup attempts and rebel attacks, but doubts remain whether she can fulfill the promises of reform that brought her to power.

Mrs. Aquino, a plucky 54-year-old novice politician, defied predictions of right-wing opponents that she would never survive the year. Instead, the leader of the Aug. 28 coup attempt, Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, is in custody.

Suspected leaders of a January coup attempt, Brig. Gen. Jose Zumel and Lt. Col. Reynaldo Cabautan, are in hiding, dogged by problems in raising funds or mustering support.

Teodoro Benigno, the presidential spokesman, said proof "the coup bubble has burst" was displayed when this month's summit of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations took place without incident.

But during the past year the battle for political survival distracted attention from urgent social, economic and political reforms which many Filipino commentators believe must be addressed.

Again, the coffee shops are abuzz with rumors of political corruption. The communist insurgency rages unabated, and no solution has been found to demands for self-rule by the 4-million-strong Moslem minority in the south.

Land reform, one of the early goals of the Aquino administration, serves as an example of the problems in transforming slogans of change into reality.

In July, shortly before the new Congress convened, Mrs. Aquino announced a framework for land redistribution and gave the Senate and House of Representatives 30 days to enact the legislation.

Several redistribution formulas have been proposed, yet none has even been debated on the floor of either chamber thanks to resistance from land-owning groups and differences over such details as compensation and how much land property owners can retain.

"I don't think anybody foresaw the great emotional impact the bill had on the House," said Speaker Ramon Mitra. "Had we forced the bill, it may have had a good chance for enactment but it may have divided the House."

Despite a constitutional provision discouraging "political dynasties," Mrs. Aquino's brother, Rep. Jose Cojuangco; her brother-in-law, Sen. Agapito Aquino; her uncle, Rep. Francisco Sumulong; and sister-in-law, Rep. Tessie Oreta, all serve in Congress. Sister-in-law Mila Albert is running for mayor of Quezon City.

Mrs. Aquino says she cannot stop relatives from exercising their right to run. Critics note, however, that the president has in the past endorsed her office-seeking kin.

Most observers expect little movement toward reform until after the Jan. 18 local elections, when voters choose governors, mayors and other regional and local officials.

The election is seen as pivotal toward building new nationwide power alliances, which will influence not only provincial but national politics by realigning political parties and alliances at the national level.

On the battlefield, military figures show the number of rebel-initiated attacks has increased as much as 65 percent in 1987. At least 10 new fronts opened up this year, mostly in the eastern Visayas islands and the Ilocos region of northern Luzon.

The government's response to the increased rebel activity has been to sanction civilian anti-communist vigilantes. More than 200 such groups have sprung up this year, including in Manila, Cebu and major urban centers.

Human rights groups claim the ill-disciplined vigilantes have themselves been responsible for numerous human rights abuses, including the murders of civilians alleged to be rebels or rebel sympathizers.

Robert H. Reid has been AP chief of bureau in Manila since September 1986 and has been a foreign correspondent for more than 10 years.

Strength For Today

According to an old fable, a young man one day conceived a question he was sure a celebrated sage living nearby could not answer.

"I will go to him," he said, "with a bird in my hand. I will ask him what is in my hand. If he says, 'it is dead,' I will release the bird and it will fly away. If he says, 'it is alive,' I will crush it to death."

When the young man put the question to the sage, he replied, with a smile, "that, my young friend, depends on you."

The universe searches these souls of ours, and in response to many of our questions, says, "it all depends on you."

New Vehicle Tax Laws Take Effect In January

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Officials have said for years that local governments are losing millions of dollars in revenue because many people do not list their vehicles for taxes, so now they're trying to do something about it.

Under new laws that will take effect in January, owners who fail to list their vehicles for property tax purposes will be subject to a $100 penalty, in addition to the penalty already assessed: 10 percent of the tax charged for the particular vehicle. A second law requires drivers to prove they have insurance.

"I certainly think this will lead to greater enforcement of the law," said Bob Underhill, chief of the Ad Valorem Division of the North Carolina Department of Revenue. "If I get a $15 tax bill and end up paying a $100 penalty ... I don't think I'd be caught but once."

Since 1981, state law has prohibited the Division of Motor Vehicles from processing license tag renewals unless the owner attested he owes no delinquent taxes on the vehicle. The owner also must indicate when and where the vehicle was listed for taxes.

The DMV provides each county with a list of vehicle registrations attributed to that county. Local officials have the responsibility of comparing their tax rolls with the DMV lists to catch those falsely claiming to have paid property taxes.

The second law is designed to crack down on drivers not covered by liability insurance.

It requires anyone seeking a North Carolina driver's license for the first time, renewing a license under circumstances requiring him to take a written test, restoring a license after suspension or revocation, or obtaining limited driving privileges to present a certificate proving he has insurance.

The certificates will be available from the driver's insurance agent.

An estimated 700,000 North Carolinians will have to get the certificates each year, according to Vernon Morton, special assistant to the state commissioner of the Division of Motor Vehicles.

"There are going to be some hows and screams when people find out about this," Morton said, noting that the law has gotten little publicity.

He said the primary targets are people who drive cars or trucks owned by parents or friends who have not amended their policies to include the extra drivers.

"It's fair to assume there were many young people being licensed and operating family vehicles whose parents did not add their names to the insurance policy and pay the additional premium," Morton said.

Licensed drivers who are renewing their licenses but do not have to take written tests will not have to present the certificates, he added, although they — as all drivers — must be insured.

Licensed drivers who have moved to North Carolina from another state and are getting their first North Carolina license must obtain certificates.

Otherwise, exceptions will be made only for people who can show they neither own an automobile, live in a household where an automobile is owned nor drive a non-fleet passenger vehicle, Morton said.

Teen-Agers Entering Final Leg Of Cross-State Charity Walk

GREENSBORO (AP) — Students walking across North Carolina to raise money for the Kidney Foundation are more than half finished with the trek that ends Saturday at the South Carolina state line.

"I thought it'd be a way to show that teen-agers have more on their minds beside sex, drugs and alcohol," walker Chris Respass said. "Also, it's another way to share Christmas and a way a lot of people could be helped by a small sacrifice."

The students arrived Sunday in Greensboro where they were greeted by Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., and members of the North Carolina

The students are walking across the state to raise money for the National Kidney Foundation of North Carolina and to draw attention to the need for organ donors.

The students, members of the Durham Hillside High Student Council, asked 1,000 businesses each to contribute $100 each, advisor Eddie Davis said.

"We have been getting some donations along the way," Davis said. "Folks have just sort of adopted us in every town we've gone through."

The walk began last Monday on U.S. 1 at the North Carolina-Virginia state line.

After the eight-hour walk from Burlington, where the group stayed Saturday night, Tony Rosser was tired. But the 16-year-old is glad he's walking.

"I thought, 'Hey, I can walk across North Carolina and bear a little pain for people who have been suffering,'" he said.

The students went home Christmas Eve, and it wasn't easy to leave home on Christmas Day.

"We started back walking at 2 p.m., and it was hard to leave my family," Rosser said.

Tide Payments Reach $15,000

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials say the $15,000 they have paid shellfishermen for transferring oysters and clams has helped some people pay overdue bills, but about $150,000 remains in a fund for a special program for red tide-plagued fishermen.

Under the special state program, fishermen are paid $1 per bushel of oysters and clams they relocate to areas that are usually open to shellfishing but have been closed by the red tide.

Once the red tide dissipates, the transplanted oysters will purge themselves of toxins and pollutants and fishermen will be allowed to harvest them, said Mike D. Marshall, assistant director of development for the state Division of Marine Fisheries.

Marshall said the $15,000 was for work done through Dec. 22. Fishermen have been able to harvest oysters on three other days since then, he said, and soon will be paid for that time.

"We'll continue (with the program) until the money is exhausted or the area is opened up because the red tide has disappeared," he said.

The red tide washed ashore in Carteret, Onslow, Pender and New Hanover counties in October.

Long Seeks Date On Rate Request

RALEIGH (AP) — State insurance department officials say they want to know how insurance industry representatives came up with a proposed 3.5 percent rate hike for car insurance, because consultants for the state have recommended a cut of at least 4 percent.

Insurance Commissioner Jim Long said he expected subpoenas to be issued today to seven industry officials, in an effort to investigate the inner workings of the N.C. Rate Bureau and the Insurance Services Office Inc.

The Rate Bureau, which refused to make the officials available to testify, proposes rate increases for insurance companies. ISO is a trade organization of New York that conducts research for the industry.

Rate Bureau attorney Michael Strickland of Raleigh objected to the subpoena request Monday, calling it a "pure fishing expedition."

"The rate filing stands on its own," Strickland told Long at a conference. "It is the collective judgment of a number of individuals and it becomes the judgment of the Rate Bureau, not of any one individual."

Strickland said in an interview that he did not know whether the bureau would fight the subpoenas. He said the agency might be unable to comply because it does not control ISO employees or those of individual insurance companies that are members of the bureau.

But E. Daniels Nelson, a Raleigh attorney representing the insurance department, said the officials' testimony is needed to determine whether the rate increase is justified.

Nelson said he wants to question the officials about the steps they took in determining the amount of the proposed increase and why they rejected proposals for smaller increases. He dismissed claims the officials could not be required to testify.

The insurance industry contends the increase is needed because Long granted only half of what it requested for 1987.

Hit And Run

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — An investigation is continuing into the death of a hit and run victim, Kinston police said Monday.

According to police reports, Mary Allis Dove, 46, of Kinston was the victim of a hit and run driver Saturday night as she and her companion, Melvin Anthony Cobb, also of Kinston, walked along the shoulder of a road.

Ms. Dove was transferred from Lenoir Memorial Hospital to Pitt Memorial Hospital where she died Sunday. Cobb was treated at Lenoir Memorial Hospital and later released. He received bruises to his left leg from the impact.

Murders

RALEIGH (AP) — The two men found dead next to a burned shack in Raleigh on Thursday were murdered, Wake County Sheriff John H. Baker Jr. said.

Ernest Willard, 67, and another man who has yet to be identified, were found lying face up Christmas Eve just outside the charred debris of a metal corrugated shack where Willard lived. Their lower bodies were burned and Baker said Monday there were several bruises on each body.

Investigators worked through the holiday weekend trying to identify the second man and determine the cause of the fire, Baker said. Baker said the autopsy indicated that both men were "beaten severely."

Rock Assault

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Goldsboro woman was being held under $10,000 bond Monday after being charged with assaulting a man with a rock and taking $19 from him in his home, police said.

Yvonne Thompson, 22, was charged Sunday with robbery with a dangerous weapon, said Officer Robert Blackman, who said the man, Daniel Clark, swore out the warrant against her.

Shooting

WILMINGTON (AP) — The state Attorney General's Office said Monday it is recommending a Pender County deputy be charged with voluntary manslaughter in the August shooting death of a 70-year-old Willard man.

The attorney general's office said it would present the case against Deputy Kim Goodin to a Pender County grand jury Jan. 11, said District Attorney Jerry Spivey, who represents New Hanover and Pender counties.

Goodin was suspended from his job with pay after the Aug. 24 shooting of John Cromartie, who died after being shot in the back while in the bedroom of his home. Goodin and another deputy had gone to the house to serve an involuntary commitment order on the man.

Victim's Parents Suing MacDonald

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former Green Beret physician, convicted of killing his wife and children, is being sued by his slain wife's parents who want to claim a $325,000 settlement he is getting from the author of a book about the slayings.

Mildred and Alfred G. Kassab filed suit in Superior Court on Monday against Jeffrey MacDonald, seeking an order impounding the settlement as well as proceeds from the best-selling book, "Fatal Vision."

To Get Driver's License Is Agony

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer's American driver's license expired recently and she had to get a new one in Austria where she now lives. Although she had been driving for four years, it wasn't easy, as she reports in this article, one of a series of periodic dispatches by Associated Press correspondents on the way of life in other countries.)

By TEDDIE WEYR
Associated Press Writer
VIENNA, Austria (AP) — It can be cheaper, easier and faster to fly to the United States to get a driver's license than it is to get one in Austria. I found that out when my New York State driver's license expired and applied for one here.

Under the Austrian system, applicants must undergo a rigid oral exam followed by a road test. But before that, they must study hundreds of pages of information on traffic safety and road signs, technical aspects of the automobile and details such as the mandated distance between a stop sign and a corner.

It is also necessary to memorize mathematical formulas to calculate the distance one needs to stop at different speeds.

One question on the oral test asks the candidate to calculate the speed at which he would crash into an obstruction from a certain distance away.

Another question: "What is most strained if the car is started without the choke?"

Many applicants answer with what they think is the obvious, "The engine." That's wrong. The answer: "The environment."

It's not yet compulsory to take lessons at a driving school, which can run to the equivalent of $1,000 of if you flunk the first time, and many do. Statistics show that 30 percent of driving school graduates flunk the first time. About 50 percent of those who take the exam without driving-school training fail the first tests.

Alfred Stratil of the Traffic Ministry said a law is in the works to make some driving school lessons obligatory.

Austria has 267 driving schools, 58 in Vienna alone. Theory courses and driving lessons cost as much as 5,000 shillings ($416) and they last a minimum of about 10 weeks. The exam itself costs 1,000 shillings (about $80).

If you flunk, you start over again at the driving school — and you pay again.

A round-trip air ticket to the United States can be bought for about 10,000 shillings ($832). For foreign residents with driver's licenses from home, all that is required is to have the license officially translated.

My New York license expired while I was getting settled in Vienna and couldn't get it translated. In order to drive, I had to take Austria's tests.

The day I took my tests, only one of five candidates from one driving school passed.

As the last of our group to be examined, I settled behind the wheel as the dimmest 10 minutes of twilight settled over the city. The examiner sat in the back seat and complained about the "inexcusable" bad driving of the candidates before me.

At one point in the road test, I stopped for a man and child who had just crossed the street and were getting into a car. I thought I was abiding by an Austrian legal concept that assumes other drivers and pedestrians will obey traffic regulations, but maintains that children, the aged and the handicapped cannot be expected to do so.

Annoyed, the examiner asked why

I stopped. I said that if there was an accident with the child, I would be blamed.

"A father will be able to hold the child," the inspector said. I told him I had five younger sisters and knew from experience that a children often do pull away from their elders.

After one short stretch of driving on a main street, the rest of my test was on empty back streets with no traffic lights and no stop signs.

Everything seemed to go fine, but when we returned to the parking lot, the instructor had flunked me. He said I needed more practice and should take more lessons.

I had driven for four years in New York state and during my lessons in Vienna, my driving instructor was fully confident I would pass.

"If you fail, I'll turn in my teaching license," she had told me one day as I practiced driving in Vienna's city traffic.

My next test is scheduled for Dec. 14.

Girdles To Make Debut Next Year

Lock your doors and hide your daughters! The girdles are coming! The girdles are coming!

After nearly 20 years of letting everything hang out, sag, bounce, jiggle, droop, wrinkle and relocate — this generation of Baby Boomers has decided they want to stuff it all in a compactor. Right now, it is predicted that girdles are the most exciting new trend to debut in 1988.

Could we talk about this? This is not a trend to be taken lightly. Take it from the lips of a woman who bought one of the world's first 18-hour living girdles only to have it die in the middle of watching Jennifer Jones and Bill Holden in "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing." Logistically, girdles are designed under the law of redistribution. This means nothing disappears. When you pull a girdle on over your hips, your stomach goes flat, but within seconds your chin doubles and your kneecaps inflate. We're talking trade-offs here.

This generation has never been "trussed" before. I have a column before me that I wrote on May 18, 1970, in which I reported that a girdle factory shut down due to lack of sales. It is significant to note that no one protested or cared. It was the passing of an era... one that we could never forget, but we could learn from.

Girdles went on to become objects in museums right alongside shackles, gallows, manacles, electric chairs and other forms of torture.

Life was good for women. We were liberated from our vanity. What we grew under our drop-waists, our layered look and our elastic waistbands was nobody's business. For those who had concern over their bodies and couldn't "suck it in" for a whole evening, there was Jane Fonda promoting a human girdle of muscles that spanned your torso.

Now it seems Baby Boomers are bored with exercise and want the "easy way out." In their innocence they see girdles as just another form of tummy control like the pantyhose. Well, they are wrong. Girdles control your mind. There isn't a moment you have one on that you are not thinking, "How many more minutes do I have before I can peel this thing off and let my body bounce against the four walls as it was meant to do?"

At Wits End

I'm trying very hard to understand this generation. They have adjusted the timetable for childbearing so that menopause and teaching a 16-year-old how to drive a car will occur in the same week. They have added a full-time career to the full-time job of keeping house, now extending their workday to 18 hours. And now they are bringing back the girdle.

They are obviously "into suffering."

Bridge Games Start Wednesday

Bridge games will begin on a regular schedule Wednesday at the Senior Center.

Wednesday afternoon winners included Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts and Mrs. John Ulrich, first with 59 percent. Others winning were Dave Proctor and Lewis Newsome, second; Mr. and Mrs. Jeff McAllister tied with Beulah Eagles and Emma Warren, third, and Mrs. Robert Blenk and Mrs. George Martin, fifth.

Morning game winners included Mrs. C.F. Galloway and George Martin, first with 65 percent; Mrs. Roy Hadden and Mrs. Sam Jones, second; Mrs. William Kirkwood and Mrs. Zeb Cummings tied with Effie Williams and Emma Warren for third.

Wedding Vows Are Said On Dec. 20

The wedding ceremony of Lili Marlaine Wall and William Donald Burkette took place Dec. 20 at 3 p.m. in Epworth United Methodist Church. The double-ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Vernon Womack.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Haywood Wall of Route 2, Ayden, and Mr. and Mrs. William Lee Burkette of Kinston are the parents of the couple.

Doug Semour of Pikeville was pianist and vocalist.

Cindy Burkette of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Rhonda Keeter of Winterville and Denise Clark of Chocowinity, cousin of the bride. Peggy Ann Cox of Cove City, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. Brandy Stox of Vanceboro was miniature bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. The miniature bridegroom was Brad Pass of Greenville. Ushers were David Toler of Kinston, cousin of the bridegroom, and Phillip Wall Jr. of Clayroot. The junior usher was Micheal Taylor of Clayroot, cousin of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin designed with a high neckline encircled with clipped Brussels lace in a floral motif embellished with pearls. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke of English net with a sweetheart silhouette torso which extended to a basque waistline, overlaid in floral medallions of Brussels lace and beaded with pearls and iridescent sequins. The long Renaissance sleeves were designed with open shoulders overlaid in English net and applied with beaded Brussels lace. The full skirt and attached cathedral length train were trimmed with open cutwork overlaid in matching lace motifs. The gown was finished with a border of scalloped lace. She wore a white pearl peak headband designed with an asymmetrical spray of silk flowers and pearl streamers. A veil of imported pencil edged illusion flowed to fingertip length and was attached to the headband with a gathered pouf.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. After a wedding trip, the couple is living in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is attending East Carolina University. She is employed by J.C. Penney Department Store. The bridegroom graduated from Kinston High School and is employed by Grady White Boats.

to give him his due credit. He ends his humble album with:

"Fetid, fingered, rancid, rank and frowzy,

"No wonder all my poetry is lousy." — ADAM STERN, LA CRESCENTA, CALIF.

DEAR MR. STERN: Victor Buono was a "heavyweight" in more ways than one. Furthermore, his poetry was far from "lousy" — witness the first few lines of his "Fat Man's Prayer":

"I think that I shall never see ... my feet.

"Lord, my soul is ripped with riot

"Incited by my wicked diet.

"We are what we eat," said a wise old man,

"And, Lord, if that's true, I'm a garbage can."

And judging from the number of letters I received, the brilliant actor/poet is well remembered. Thanks to all of you who wrote to set the record straight.

DEAR ABBY: Re your question about whether to include information as well as letters in your column, I hope my card will be among thousands that affirm the wonderful service you do in disseminating useful information.

Several years ago, you mentioned that putting the newspaper in a warm oven for a minute or two dried the ink and prevented allergic reactions.

Now I write for a newspaper. I don't know how I ever would have accomplished that without being able to read one. — NIKKI ALLEN, SANTA ANA, CALIF.

DEAR NIKKI: Thanks, I needed that. Write on!

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy and how to handle the pain of growing up. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter, an Arizona reader added a few couplets to your dieter's prayer. The addition was, in fact, taken verbatim from the late-Victor Buono's "The Fat Man's Prayer," which he recorded in 1971 for an album titled "Heavy!"

While I doubt that any plagiarism or deceit was intended, the Arizona correspondent failed to mention Mr. Buono, and I thought it appropriate BROILER-FRYERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 35.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. The market is mostly steady to firm and the live supply is adequate for a moderate to good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 1,904,000, compared to 1,639,000 last Tuesday.

GRAIN: No trend for No. 2 yellow shelled corn; mostly 2.00-2.13 in the East and mostly 2.16-2.23 in the Piedmont; No trend for No. 1 yellow soybeans; mostly 5.68-5.93 in the East and mostly 5.73-5.75 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 2.73-2.78; new crop wheat 2.73-2.90; new crop oats 1.57-1.99. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 101 to 104 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed in early trading today. At 10 a.m., the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 2.32 points at 1,940.65.

Volume on the Big Board came to 16.7 million shares. Losers outpaced gainers among

New York Stock Exchange-listed issues by more than 2 to 1, with 724 lower, 338 higher and 502 unchanged.

The early performance indicated that the market was stabilizing after Monday's hefty slide, which analysts blamed on new weakness in the dollar, higher interest rates on the bond market and light holiday trading.

Even so, the U.S. currency continued edging lower in Tokyo and Europe, sending stocks sharply lower in London by midday.

At 10 a.m., the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 0.23 at 137.27. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index stood at 255.53, down 1.11.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 56.70 points, or 2.84 percent, to 1,942.97.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 5 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 273 up, 1,381 down and 304 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 131.22 million shares, against 108.80 million in the previous session.

state transportation improvement program — $100,000 for land acquisition and $4,000 for a runway sweeper — should be completed in about three months, Turcotte said.

City and county money will be added to the state grants to purchase an $8,000 runway sweeper, which Turcotte said should be delivered in mid-January; and to purchase and improve about 20 acres of property — required by the FAA for safety reasons — at a cost of about $200,000, which should be completed in about three months.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Governor James G. Martin has asked that the Pitt County Board of Commissioners appoint a contact person in Pitt County to follow up on the "Challenge '87" project. This project focuses upon a community effort to reduce drug and alcohol abuse, and the person named will coordinate the County's program on a volunteer basis. feared dead, Bolin said. The nine were Simmons' wife, Becky; four of the couple's four children, aged 7 to 17, and four grandchildren, he said.

"The suspect has not muttered a word to us. He will not talk. He just stayed completely mum. He does not say a word. We cannot talk to him. He will not talk to anyone," Bolin said.

If the missing people are not found in the farm pond, "then we're going to have to back up to look at where they may be. At this point, that is the most logical place if the family has been done away with."

"I fear they may be dead," he said. "I feel that if they weren't, they would have contacted us by now."

Bill Wren, who lived about 200 yards from the Simmons' home, said the small children appeared to be "sweet little kids," but that the family kept to themselves. Wren said Simon "was kind of strange. He was anti-social."

Space Trip Ends

Romanenko's extended stay in space aboard the orbiting space station Mir will help scientists determine whether a spacecraft traveling to Mars will have to produce its own gravity, or whether man can live that long in zero gravity.

After the medical examinations, the cosmonauts were taken to the Baikonur Cosmodrome, also in Kazakhstan, from which Soviet space missions blast off.

The cosmonauts' families were waiting there, preparing to celebrate the New Year's holiday. Arkalyk, a city in the north-central part of the Asian republic of Kazakhstan, is 1,240 miles southeast of Moscow.

The return of Romanenko, Alexandrov and Levchenko left two cosmonauts — Vladimir Titov and Musa Manarov — aboard the Mir. Titov and Manarov are to continue a year-long flight that would break Romanenko's record.

Television showed film of Romanenko, Alexandrov and Levchenko saying goodbye to Titov and Manarov before disappearing through the hatch of the Soyuz craft to prepare for their return.

The five, dressed in gray-blue flight suits, crowded before the television camera in the hatch area, and then hugged and kissed before parting. "We give over to the new arrivals this space station and wish them a good fight, and successful work," Romanenko said.

Alexandrov said, "Good luck and best wishes to you, good friend." Titov, the commander of the new mission, wished the departing cosmonauts a "happy landing and speedy adaptation."

The television report said conditions at the snow-covered landing site were good — some clouds and a temperature of 15 degrees. But it said an ice crust prevented search planes and helicopters from taking off to find the capsule. Instead, it said cross-country vehicles conducted the search.

Romanenko rocketed into orbit Feb. 6 along with flight engineer Alexander Laveikin.

During his flight, more than 1,000 experiments in biology, medicine, materials processing and geology were conducted, and with the help of the Kvant astrophysical

State, Maryland Claim Wins; Clemson Is Beaten

By The Associated Press
North Carolina State rushed away from Creighton to take an opening-round victory in the Rainbow Classic, but tonight, things get tougher for the Wolfpack.

Vinny Del Negro and Rodney Monroe each scored 18 points in an 86-55 victory. That takes the Wolfpack, 4-2, into tonight's second-round action against 20th-ranked Louisville, which got past Southern Methodist 87-79.

Creighton, 4-5, rallied to tie N.C. State at 33-33 with four minutes left, but the Wolfpack scored eight straight points to take a 41-33 lead at intermission.

Charles Shackelford had 14 points and Avie Lester scored 10 for the Wolfpack.

For Creighton, Rod Mason had a team-high 14 points, Bob Harstad added 11 and James Farr 10.

Pervis Ellison scored 23 points to lead five Louisville players in double figures as the 20th-ranked Cardinals rallied to beat the Mustangs.

SMU took a 48-37 halftime lead over Louisville as reserve Todd Alexander scored 17 points and Kato Armstrong added 14. The Cardinals rallied with a 21-6 run in the first five minutes of the second half to take the lead.

In other action involving ACC teams, Maryland defeated South Carolina 82-77 and 12th-ranked Michigan held off Clemson for a 93-88 victory.

After Maryland had led from the opening minutes, South Carolina reeled off a 12-4 spurt to open the second half, taking a 51-50 lead. But instead of folding altogether, the Terps responded with an 11-0 run en route to the victory and a 6-2 record.

"I hope it's a good sign," Maryland Coach Bob Wade said of the Terps' decisive spurt. "We executed extremely well going into the stretch.... We rotated the basketball, got it inside, we hit the open perimeter shot, we even got some threes tonight," Wade said. "I'm very happy with what we did considering the layoff."

One player showing no ill signs of a long layoff was sophomore Tony Massenbourg, playing in his first game after sitting out more than a year for academic reasons.

Massenbourg, a 6-foot-9, 210-pounder from Sussex, Va., scored a career-high 25 points, nine coming in the decisive run in the second half. Freshman Brian Williams added 14 points for the Terps.

Michigan, which had won its previous seven games by an average of nearly 27 points, improved to 10-1 with its ninth consecutive victory since a loss to Arizona in the Great

Vanderbilt Beats Pirates At East Carolina's Own Game — The Transition

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. — East Carolina guard Reed Lose said Vanderbilt beat the Pirates at the last phase of the game he ever thought they would — the transition game.

After battling the much taller Commodores close in the first half, ECU fell apart in the second half and suffered a 99-63 defeat at the hands of the homestanding Commodores in the opening round of the Music City Invitational basketball tournament Monday night.

"It was a great opportunity for us, coming in and playing somebody the caliber of a Vanderbilt," said Lose, who scored 20 points in a losing effort.

"We came out with a lot of intensity, we were swinging the ball and looking inside like we are supposed to. Then in the second half they beat us up and down the floor which was the last thing that I thought they would beat us on since we were smaller and quicker."

ECU actually jumped out to an early 6-0 lead.

The game was dead even over the first nine and a half minutes of the game.

ECU shot 53 percent for the first half as Lose scored 16 points in the opening 20 minutes.

But due to the height disadvantage, ECU had to sag in on 7-foot center Will Perdue and that left the Pirates vulnerable to the 3-point shot.

And the Commodores took advantage, hitting on eight of 14 in the opening half. They finished 13 for 21 on the game, led by Charles Mayes, who led Vanderbilt with 17 points, nine of them via the 3-point shot.

The majority of the 3-pointers were wide open shots as Vanderbilt would go inside to Perdue, ECU would then surround him and he would promptly kick it back out for the easy three.

"That's what we've been working on," said Perdue, who had 10 points and four assists. "Pack the ball inside and then kick it back out."

The last tie came with 10:38 remaining in when Lose came up with a steal and hit a layup.

Vanderbilt's Barry Goheen answered with a 3-pointer to make it 22-19.

The closest ECU would get from there was 27-26 on a 17-foot jumper by Lose with 7:30 remaining.

Vanderbilt went on to stretch the lead from there, making it 46-40 at the half.

Still, the Pirates trailed by only six at intermission against a taller and favored opponent, but things did not fare as well for the Pirates in the second half.

ECU had the ball to open the second half. The Pirates worked the ball into Dominique Martin, whose shot was blocked by Perdue. Barry Booker turned it into two points at the other end with a short jumper.

Martin came back to score inside to pull ECU within 50-42 but that was as close as it would get from there.

"That's the best we've played (in the first half)," said ECU coach Mike Steele. "We can't play any better than that."

"In the second half, our transition defense was terrible. We tried to keep it out of Perdue's hands. The Mayes kick kind of ruined that."

"When you've got a 7-footer and you got a 6-5 guy guarding him, we had to pack it in and they just bombed from 3-point land."

After ECU pulled within eight early in the second half, Mayes hit a jumper following a Pirate turnover to make it 52-42.

ECU then turned the ball over again as Stanley Love stepped out of bounds at the baseline and Mayes hit a 3-pointer at the other end to make it 55-42 with 17:33 remaining.

Love came back to score on a follow shot the next trip down for ECU to make it 55-44. Jeff Kelly followed with another jumper to pull ECU within 55-46 but Vanderbilt then

Cornell Tops Miami, 77-71

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Cornell took control of a tight game in the first half and held off Miami of Ohio, 77-71, in the opening round of the Music City Invitational Monday in college basketball.

The two teams played fairly even over the opening minutes of the game but after a 16-16 tie with 10:15 left in the first half, Cornell outscored Miami 21-8 to take a 37-24 halftime lead.

Cornell was able to maintain that lead the majority of the second half. Miami twice pulled within at least 11 points before Cornell would push it back out to 15 points.

It was only in the final minutes of the game that Miami was able to get the lead under 10 points.

Karlton Clayborne hit a layup with 48 seconds remaining to pull Miami within eight at 74-66.

Cornell's Sam Jacobs followed that by missing the front end of a one-and-one attempt. Miami's Eddie Schilling then hit two free throws to make it 74-68.

Jacobs missed another front end of a one and one attempt.

Miami failed to capitalize but until Eric Newsome nailed a 3-pointer with 19 seconds to go to make it 76-71 but it was too little to late for the Redskins.

Jacobs led Cornell with 18 points while Josh Wexler added 15 and Wolfgang Florin chipped in 12 more.

Newsome led Miami with 21 points.

Cornell advances to the finals against Vanderbilt, a 99-63 winner over East Carolina in the late game.

ECU and Miami meet in the consolation game for the tournament tonight at 6 p.m.

"It was a really great win for us," said Cornell coach Mike Dement, a former ECU assistant.

"We might have started to milk the clock too soon as we quit looking for offense about the six minute mark."

Pats Close With 24-10 Win

MIAMI (AP) — The game meant nothing, but Steve Grogan was something.

Grogan, 34, concluded his 13th NFL season by throwing for 238 yards and two touchdowns as the New England Patriots beat the Miami Dolphins 24-10 Monday night to bring the regular season to an end. Both teams had been eliminated from playoff contention a day earlier.

Grogan shared playing time this season with Tom Ramsey and Tony Eason. He had started only five times the last two seasons before leading the Patriots to victories in their final three games.

"He's just a rare guy," Coach Raymond Berry said. "I had a good arrangement with my quarterback when I played with a guy named Unitas, and I've had a good arrangement as a coach."

Grogan, who said he has no plans to retire, directed a ball-control offense that had possession 15 minutes longer than Miami and converted 10 of 15 third-down situations. Grogan completed 21 of 32 passes despite a broken bone in his left, or non-throwing, hand.

"If the game had meant a playoff spot, I'd have played, so there was no reason for me not to play," he said. "That's what I get paid to do."

Grogan and his teammates had the best of a matchup between the NFL's 25th-ranked offense and 25th-ranked defense. The Patriots scored touchdowns the first three times they had the ball and led 24-3 at halftime.

"We wanted to end the season on a positive note," Miami Coach Don Shula said. "Unfortunately, we played one of the sorriest first halves. In the second half, we played better. But overall, it was a poor performance."

Shula declined to answer any questions from reporters.

Both teams finished 8-7, one game behind AFC East Division champion Indianapolis.

"I think we're capable of going to (the Super Bowl) and winning the world championship," Berry said. "But we didn't earn the right to get to go there."

The Patriots called a news conference for today, sparking rumors in the Boston area about Berry's future with the team. Berry denied the rumors, and a Patriots spokesman said the news conference would be to review the season.

One man who is leaving the Patriots is linebacker Steve Nelson, a 14-year veteran who last month announced his retirement. Nelson made three tackles in his final game.

"The past month has been so emotional for me," he said. "And then coming down here and beating the Dolphins, I can't ask for more. It's been lovely."

The victory was the fifth straight against the Dolphins for New England, which has a 4-18 record at Miami.

New England opened the scoring when Grogan hit Irving Fryar with a 3-yard touchdown pass after a Miami fumble. Grogan later connected with Stephen Starring for a 34-yard score to cap a 79-yard drive.

Tony Collins ran five yards for the Patriots' final touchdown, and Tony Franklin kicked a 31-yard field goal.

Miami's Dan Marino threw a nine-yard touchdown pass to James Pruitt in the fourth quarter, and Fuad Reveiz booted a 47-yard field goal.

An obscure rule cost the Patriots an apparent touchdown.

With Miami in shotgun formation, center Jeff Dellenbach hiked the ball out of the reach of Marino, who didn't appear to see the snap. The Patriots' Andre Tippett scooped up the ball at the Miami 38 and broke four tackles as he ran to the end zone.

The officials ruled that because no Miami player touched the snap, the Patriots couldn't advance the ball. They took over at the 38 and moved to the 14 before Franklin kicked a field goal.

Marino and Dellenbach said they were both partly to blame for the weird turnover.

"Dan checked off on an audible," Dellenbach said. "We're supposed to change the snap count. The ball was snapped earlier than Dan expected."

Cardinals Move Back Onto Poll

By The Associated Press
Louisville's trip to Hawaii started off much like its basketball season. After a rocky start, things just had to get better.

What had been scheduled as a 12-hour trip to Honolulu for the Rainbow Classic turned into an 18-hour, eight-stop nightmare. Everybody was dead tired when they deplaned, and even the sunny Hawaiian weather couldn't keep Coach Denny Crum from coming down with the flu. And, of course, the airline lost everybody's luggage.

"I don't think things could get a whole lot more messed up," Crum said. "Things have got to get better from here."

He got his first bit of good news Monday night when he learned that the Cardinals, winners of three straight games, had moved back into the Associated Press poll at No. 20. Later Monday night, the team provided another lift by beating Southern Methodist 87-79 in an opening-round game of the Rainbow Classic.

Crum, still weak from the flu, was surprised the voters brought Louisville back into the Top Twenty soon.

"With a 3-2 record?" he said with a tone that hinted the Cardinals may not deserve such a ranking.

Well, do they? "No, not really," Crum admitted. "I think you've got to do a little better than what we've done so far."

"We've played real well here before, and we've been here when we couldn't play dead in a cowboy movie. What team will show up this year I'm not sure, but I'm hopeful they'll be thinking positively and play like they would if they were at home."

"This time of year, I'm not ever going to put too much emphasis on any one game or tournament. Because then, if it doesn't turn out like you wanted, it's a real downer. I think playing three games will be a positive experience regardless of the outcome."

Louisville opened the season with losses to Notre Dame and Kentucky to fall from its No. 13 position in the preseason poll. The Cardinals gave signals of regaining form with a thrashing of Indiana last week and then beat Eastern Kentucky to climb above 500.

On the other end of the poll, Arizona, 10-0, solidified its hold on the No. 1 spot, collecting 45 first-place votes and 1,220 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Kentucky, with 15 first-place votes and 1,161 points, remained No. 2.

Last week, Arizona outpointed Kentucky 1,096-1,088 despite getting 26 first-place votes, three less than Kentucky.

Arizona beat Washington State 89-55 in its only game last week, while Kentucky, 6-0, was idle.

The first nine spots were unchanged from last week, with Pittsburgh, 5-0, maintaining third with the other two first-place votes and 1,080 points. North Carolina, 7-1, was 60 points further back in fourth.

Wyoming, 8-0, rounded out the top five, followed by Temple, Syracuse, Florida and Duke.

Oklahoma, 10-0, accounted for the only significant change, improving two spots to round out the Top Ten. The Sooners, who have surpassed the 150-point mark twice this season and have averaged 114.9 points a game, won three times in Hawaii last week — 109-61 over Virginia, 151-99 over Dayton and 93-90 over Georgia. Purdue leads the Second Ten, followed by Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, Nevada-Las Vegas, Iowa State, Kansas, Georgetown, Memphis State and Louisville.

Last week's Second Ten was Michigan, Oklahoma, Indiana, Iowa, Nevada-Las Vegas, Iowa State, Missouri, Kansas, Georgetown and Memphis State.

Louisville replaced Missouri, which was ranked 17th before losing to Illinois 75-63 in its only game last week.

Conley Falls In Tourney

FLORENCE, S.C. — Shaun Golden poured in 30 points to lead Riverside High School to a 63-47 victory over D.H. Conley in the first round of the Carolina Classic Basketball Tournament at Florence Monday night.

In other games, Charlotte Independence beat Orangeburg, 84-69; Wilson downed Chapel Hill, 64-54, and St. John's downed South Florence, 71-55.

Today's games send Orangeburg against Conley at 3 p.m., followed by Chapel Hill and South Florence at 4:30 p.m. Riverside and Independence meet at 7 p.m. and Wilson and St. John's at 8:30 p.m.

The tournament winds up on Wednesday.

Details of the game were not available, except that Conley trailed at the half, 30-25.

Phil Medlin led Conley's scoring with 11 points.

No Change On Women's Poll

By MEL GREENBERG
For The Associated Press

A quiet Christmas week schedule made it easy for the voters, leaving The Associated Press women's basketball top twenty exactly as it was a week ago.

No. 10 Duke, which beat Harvard and California, and No. 19 James Madison, which beat Radford, were the only ranked schools which played since the previous poll.

Everyone remained in place, led by No. 1 Texas. The Longhorns received 60 first-place votes and 1,276 points from a nationwide panel of 64 women's coaches, who cast their ballots Sunday night.

Auburn collected the remaining four first-place votes and 1,216 points, followed by Tennessee, Louisiana Tech, Iowa, Virginia, Mississippi, Rutgers, Ohio State and Duke, rounding out the top ten.

Making their encore in the second ten from the previous week were Long Beach State, Stanford, Western Kentucky, Washington, Vanderbilt, Maryland, Georgia, Nevada-Las Vegas, James Madison, and Illinois.

A major shuffle is likely in the next vote, however, since seven ranked teams will be taking part in the Orange Bowl Classic in Miami, Fla., this week.

No. 5 Iowa helped set the stage for the week ahead by upsetting No. 2 Auburn, 73-69, in the first round, Monday, and preventing a potential meeting between the Tigers and Texas. The Hawkeyes can jump a few steps if they beat No. 6 Virginia in today's semifinal. But the Cavaliers could also advance by beating Iowa.

Meanwhile, No. 8 Rutgers, which beat No. 16 Maryland, 79-76, in the first round, meets Texas, a 90-75 winner over No. 20 Illinois, in the other semifinal. The game matches two leading player-of-the-year candidates in Rutgers' Sue Wicks, who scored 34 in her team's win, and Texas' Clarissa Davis, who scored 29 in the Longhorns' triumph.

No. 17 Georgia, which was in danger of slipping out of the top 20 for the first time in six seasons, may have averted disaster by upsetting No. 9 Ohio State 80-66 in the Ronald McDonald House Classic in Raleigh, N.C. The Lady Bulldogs meet host North Carolina State today in the title game, while Ohio State plays Providence for third place.

Unranked Montana made an attempt to crack the next poll by upsetting No. 14 Washington 78-57 Monday night.

The Top Twenty teams in The Associated Press' women's college basketball poll as compiled by Mel Greenberg of The Philadelphia Inquirer on the votes of 60 women's coaches with first-place votes in parentheses, records through Dec. 20, points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 and last week's ranking.

Seahawks Top Davidson, 69-64

WILMINGTON (AP) — Larry Houzer scored 16 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead North Carolina-Wilmington to a 69-64 victory over Davidson Monday night.

The victory was the third straight for N.C.-Wilmington, which improved to 3-3. Davidson fell to 4-4.

The Seahawks led 41-33 at intermission, but Davidson rallied early in the second half. A 3-point field goal by Derek Rucker pulled the Wildcats to 46-44.

N.C.-Wilmington responded by outscoring Davidson 16-6, and Mark Gary's 3-pointer gave the Seahawks its biggest lead, 62-50, with seven minutes left.

But Davidson made one more rally. Rucker and Jeff Himes scored six points apiece down the stretch, and the Wildcats closed to within three, 67-64, with 11 seconds remaining.

Maurice Gray led Davidson with 18 points. Himes and Rucker scored 16 points each, and Himes added 13 rebounds.

Willie Williams scored 14, Gary 13 and Greg Bender 12 for the Seahawks.

went on a 9-0 tear to erase any thoughts of a comeback.

Mays answered Kelly's shot with another 3-pointer. Goheen and Frank Kornet each scored following ECU misses and Kornet added a free throw to make it 62-46.

A dunk by Perdue finished the spurt and gave the Commodores a 64-46 lead with 13:48 remaining.

"Our defense in the first 14 minutes of the second half just triggered everything we did offensively," said Vanderbilt coach C.M. Newton. "We played the first 20 minutes just kind of passive defensively and just content to outscore people."

"In the second half, we got very aggressive defensively and forced them out of what they wanted to do. We limited them to one shot and got us running."

All in all, ECU was outscored 26-12 over the first nine minutes of the second half.

Vanderbilt kept the pressure on from there, building as much as 40-point lead at 97-57 with 1:35 remaining on two free throws by Derek Wilcox.

ECU drops to 2-5 on the year while Vanderbilt is 6-1.

After shooting 52 percent from the field in the first half, ECU went cold over the final 20 minutes, shooting 26 percent, hitting on only seven of 27 attempts from the field.

ECU takes on Miami of Ohio in the consolation game at 6 p.m. tonight.

Conley Ranked In Cup Standings

D.H. Conley is the only area high school which ranks in the top 10 for competition for the Wachovia Cup after the fall sports season.

The Wachovia Cup is presented annually to the schools with the top sports program in the state for each of the four classifications, 4-A, 3-A, 2-A and 1-A.

Points are awarded to each school for participation in each of the sports sanctioned by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. Additional points are awarded for finishing in the top eight (and ties) in playoff and state meet competition.

Greensboro Grimsley, the defending cup winner in 4-A ranks, leads the program after the fall sports season. The Whirlies were the runners-up in boys' soccer and girls' cross-country and added a semifinal finish in football.

Skyland's T.C. Roberson leads the 3-A ranks with second place finishes in girls' tennis, boys' soccer and girls' cross-country, and a third place finish in boys' cross-country.

Mt. Airy captured the girls' tennis and volleyball championship and was a semifinalist in football to lead the 2-A ranks.

Lejeune, which won the boys' and girls' cross country championship leads the 1-A ranks.

Grimsley leads the 4-A ranks with 157½ points while Myers Park is second with 135. No teams from the Big East 4-A Conference ranks in the top 10.

In the 3-A ranks, Roberson has a total of 205 points, while Enka is second with 145 points.

D.H. Conley of the Coastal 3-A conference, is tied for 10th place in the standings with 82½ points.

Mt. Airy has 152½ points to lead the 2-A teams while Monroe is second with 120. No schools from the Eastern Plains or Northeastern Conference are in the top 10.

Lejeune leads the 1-A ranks with 130 points while North Moore is second with 102½. The Tobacco Belt Conference did not place a team in the top 10 despite the fact that Columbia was the state runner-up in football.

Lady Rams in the second period, but still was down at the half, 25-15.

Havelock pulled further away in the third period with a 19-15 advantage, building its lead to 44-30. Farmville outthit the Rams, 13-11, in the final period to no avail.

Louia Maxwell led Havelock with 39 points while Kim Harrison had 19 and Vicki Barrett had 11 for Farmville.

It took Conley three periods to get warmed up, but then the Valkyries blitzed Aycock. Aycock held a 7-4 lead after one period of play and increased that to 17-11 at the half.

Conley outscored the Lady Falcons, 9-7, in the third period, but was still behind, 24-20, as the final quarter got underway.

In that, however, Conley poured in 20 points while holding Aycock to just four. That easily allowed the Valkyries to roar past the Falcons for the win.

Lendora Tyson and Nikki Adams each had 12 points to lead Conley to the win. Connie Lancaster scored 14 to pace Aycock.

In today's action, New Bern faces Ayden-Grifton at 4 p.m. followed at 5:30 by Farmville Central and Aycock. Kinston and Plymouth square off at 7 p.m. followed by Havelock and Conley at 8:30 p.m.

The tournament concludes on Wednesday.

Tongue-Lashed Cats Run Wild

By The Associated Press
Eddie Sutton decided it was time to give his second-ranked Kentucky Wildcats a little extra motivation.

The unbeaten team built a 20-point lead at halftime Monday night against an outmanned Alaska-Anchorage NCAA Division II team, but 12 minutes into the second half it was still Kentucky by 20 points.

During a timeout, the Kentucky coach let his team have it verbally. What ensued was a 28-6 avalanche that buried the hapless Seawolves, who wound up losing 100-58.

In other games involving ranked teams, it was No. 3 Pittsburgh 72, Florida State 71; No. 5 Wyoming 71, Eastern Kentucky 59; No. 6 Temple 70, Mississippi 61; No. 7 Syracuse 110, Morehead State 69; No. 12 Michigan 93, Clemson 88; No. 13 Indiana 94, Penn 54; No. 15 Nevada-Las Vegas 102, Wisconsin 65; Butler 78, No. 16 Iowa State 76; No. 17 Kansas 64, No. 19 Memphis State 62, and No. 20 Louisville 87, SMU 79.

At Lexington, Ky., Winston Bennett, whose 24 points led five Kentucky players in double figures, said, "I can't tell you the total story but what he (Sutton) told us gave us the incentive to go out and give an intensive effort."

Sutton also wouldn't divulge what he told the team during that timeout with 8:25 remaining.

"I thought that they would respond. They did," Sutton said. "That last eight minutes, we outscored them by 20 points. Our intensity level rose."

Anchorage Coach Ron Abegglen said it was a mistake to try to run with the Wildcats.

"We were trying to play up-tempo, like we do in our conference (Great Northwest)," he said. "I thought we could play up-tempo, but it was probably crazy against a team of this caliber."

Kentucky, 7-0, fueled its fast break with a 52-40 rebounding edge over the Seawolves, 11-5, and the Wildcats also took down 17 offensive rebounds.

No. 3 Pittsburgh 72, Florida State 71
Rod Brooklin scored 18 points as the Panthers held off the upset-minded Seminoles in the opening round of the Citrus Bowl Classic.

The victory sent Pittsburgh, 6-0 and off to its best start since 1929, into the tournament's championship game against Alabama, a 65-54 winner over Central Florida in the opening game.

Brooklin hit the last Pitt basket with two minutes remaining, giving the Panthers a 72-67 lead.

Sean Miller had 16 points for Pitt, Charles Smith added 13 and Jerome Lane had 10 points and 12 rebounds.

Tony Dawson led the Seminoles with 18 points.

No. 5 Wyoming 71, E. Kentucky 59
Fennis Dembo scored 19 points to help Wyoming run past in the championship game of the Cowboy Shootout.

Dembo scored 15 of his points in the first half, hitting seven of the Cowboys' first 10 points as Wyoming, 9-0, jumped to a 14-0 lead.

Eastern Kentucky, 5-4, was led by Tyrone Howard with 17 points.

The Colonels did manage to get within 59-53 in the second half, but Reggie Fox came off the bench for the Cowboys to score eight straight points. He finished with 12.

No. 6 Temple 70, Mississippi 61
Tim Perry scored 20 points and Marc Macaulay had 17 to lead Temple in the opening game of the Sugar Bowl tournament.

Joe Hillman added 14 points and freshman Lyndon Jones 11 for Indiana, 7-2, while Phil Pitts topped Penn, 1-6, with 22 points.

No. 15 UNLV 102, Wisconsin 65
Nevada-Las Vegas combined a stingy defense with a career-high 33 points by senior forward Gerald Paddio.

UNLV, which is now 7-0, led 38-8 after 12 minutes and held a 49-23 lead at halftime.

Karl James added 15 points for the Rebels. Danny Jones led the Badgers, who fell to 4-4, with 21 points. Trent Jackson had 20 points for Wisconsin.

Butler 78, No. 16 Iowa State 76
Chad Tucker scored 29 points, including the game-winning layup with 57 seconds left, as Butler upset the Cyclones in the opening round of the Blade Classic at Toledo, Ohio.

Mike Born hit a 3-pointer with 2:32 left to give Iowa State a 76-74 lead, but Darren Fowlkes, who scored 26 points, connected after a drive down the lane to tie it with 1:50 left.

Tucker then put Butler ahead with a layup.

The Cyclones had a chance to win the game, but Elmer Robinson, who had 24 points, missed an off-balance 20-footer with six seconds to go.

No. 18 Kansas 64, No. 20 Mem. St. 62
Danny Manning scored 19 points and Archie Marshall chipped in with 16 to pace Kansas, 8-2, in the opening game of the ECAC Holiday Festival in New York.

Three-time defending Festival champion St. John's, unranked but 7-1, followed with a 66-59 triumph over Marist.

Kansas didn't lock up its seventh consecutive victory until Kevin Pritchard made two free throws with 15 seconds to play for a 64-59 lead.

Memphis State freshman point guard Elliot Perry led all scorers with a career-high 23 points.

No. 20 Louisville 87, SMU 79
Pervis Ellison scored 23 points as Louisville won in the first round of the Rainbow Classic in Hawaii.

The Cardinals, 4-2, also got 19 points from Kenny Payne and 18 from LaBradford Smith 18.

For SMU, 8-2, Todd Alexander finished with 23 points, Eric Longino 20, and Carlton McKinney 16.

Honeycutt In Golfing Win

WHISPERING PINES — Brooks Honeycutt, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Honeycutt of Greenville, captured first place in his age group at the Whispering Pines Junior Christmas Classic golf tournament Monday in Whispering Pines.

Honeycutt, competing in the 13-14 age group turned in a round of 55-38-73. His score was the second lowest of the whole day, which included youths from 10 to 21 years of age.

Honeycutt won his age division by five strokes. Second place went to Eric Geldbach of Pinehurst, who carded a 78.

Veteran Actor, At 80, Plays Willie Nelson's Kid Brother

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At 80 years of age, Dub Taylor says he was amused at being cast as Willie Nelson's kid brother in the CBS movie "Once Upon a Texas Train."

Taylor spent five years in vaudeville and has made more movies and television shows than he can remember.

Nelson played John Henry Lee, a Texas badman who has learned nothing in 20 years behind bars. As soon as he's released from prison, he rounds up his old gang, including baby brother Charlie Lee, and sets out a-robbin' banks and trains again.

"I got a kick out of playing his kid brother," said Taylor. "Willie thought it was funny, too. He's quite a bit younger than me."

This movie comedy, which CBS will air Sunday, brings together two over-the-hill gangs, one on each side of the law. Willie Nelson heads one, Richard Widmark the other. Angie Dickinson is in the middle as the woman they love. Complicating matters is an outlaw gang of young upstarts led by Shaun Cassidy.

"Willie asked me to do some of his concerts," said Taylor, who played the xylophone and harmonica in vaudeville. It was his ability on the xylophone that landed him his first screen role in Frank Capra's "You Can't Take It With You" in 1936. "I could play that kind of music. I'm one of the regulars on 'Hee Haw' doing comedy and music," Taylor said.

"In the movie when he (Nelson) gets out of prison, I'm in the backboard with two horses. He waves goodbye, looks at me and says, 'You got the dynamite?' And we go boom! Right off we rob a bank. I work almost every scene with Willie. He's a real professional. Two things I learned in vaudeville is be on time and know your lines."

Taylor is also the father of actor Buck Taylor, who played Newly

KID BROTHER — Dub Taylor, 80, who spent five years in vaudeville and has made more movies and television shows than he can remember, says he is amused at being cast as singer Willie Nelson's kid brother. Taylor plays Nelson's brother in the CBS movie, "Once upon a Texas Train." (AP Laserphoto)

O'Brien on "Gunsmoke" for eight years. He also has a daughter, Faydean Tharp.

Taylor was born in Augusta, Ga., and lived there until he was 14. He was born Walter C. Taylor. The nickname Dub is short for "W." He moved to Oklahoma, worked on a farm in Texas where he learned to ride, and spent a half-year at the University of Oklahoma before going into vaudeville.

"I came out here in 1936 and saw where Frank Capra was looking for a xylophone," he said. "I didn't know anything about the movie business. Capra asked me one day, 'Dub, you ever done any pictures?' I said, 'No, but I've got to do something. My wife's going to have a baby.'"

"I did a test with Ann Miller, who played my wife in the picture. I played the xylophone with six mallets. I couldn't read music, so I had to hear something first."

Columbia Pictures put him under contract, and he stayed there for 14 years. "I was known as 'Cannonball' because that was my name I used as the cowboy sidekick to Wild Bill Elliott and Charles Starrett and many others," he said. "I just kept getting different parts. I did six pictures with Frank Capra."

He was also in movies with John Wayne, Steve McQueen, Charlton Heston, Claudette Colbert, Rosalind Russell and Burt Reynolds.

Taylor's hobby is buying, selling and collecting guns. "I shoot real good," he said. "I was in the International Quail Shoot at Enid, Okla. I beat Johnny Bench. I won the last Quails Unlimited Shoot in Georgia."

He slaps his thigh and tells stories of "my drinking days," when he smuggled whiskey from Canada in xylophone tubes during Prohibition. But, he said, he quit abruptly 41 years ago and hasn't touched a drop since.

You can almost smell the grits and redeye gravy in Taylor's accent. "Shucks," he said, "I took voice lessons once but I never could learn to talk like a Northerner."

A northern elephant seal was reported at a depth of 2,900 feet, says National Geographic.

Bob Hope Ends Tour

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP) — "What place is this anyway?" quipped Bob Hope as he returned from his 31st around-the-world Christmas tour to entertain American armed forces.

More than 25,000 service personnel saw the Hope shows featuring Connie Stevens, Barbara Eden, Miss USA Michele Royer, country singer Lee Greenwood and eight Super Bowl cheerleaders.

"To see 700 boys at Communion and lighting candles for their families, well I learned what Christmas was all about," said Miss Stevens.

Hope's 76-member troupe performed aboard U.S. ships in the South Pacific, the Indian Ocean, the Atlantic Ocean, the Arabian Sea and the Persian Gulf.

The 84-year-old Hope, clutching his golf club as he got off a military jet Monday at the Air National Guard base in this Los Angeles suburb, got into a car driven by his wife, Dolores, and returned to his Toluca Lake home.

Spokesman Ken Kanter said the comedian drove golf balls from the deck of the Midway toward the battleship Iowa more than a mile away in what Hope called the world's longest water hole. Sailors warned him to watch out for Iran, calling it the world's largest sand trap, Kanter said.

The tour was filmed for a special to be broadcast Jan. 9 on NBC.

Interviews Avoid Bias

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Lesley Stahl, Sam Donaldson and other interviewers on television's Sunday morning political talk shows avoid bias by hitting all their guests with tough questions, a TV Guide analysis concluded.

The magazine, after examining 15 weeks of CBS' "Face the Nation," ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" and NBC's "Meet the Press," said the interviewers fulfilled their mission as watchdogs.

"Not lap dogs, not attack dogs, but watchdogs," staff writer Roderick Townley wrote in next week's issue.

Ms. Stahl's questions ranged from "sharp to stinging," regardless of the target, the magazine said. "Essentially, she'll shoot anything that moves, on the left or on the right."

Of the questioners, Ms. Stahl seems the toughest, perhaps because she is the only host to handle the interviewing alone or because some viewers don't like aggressive women, the magazine said.

"Sam Donaldson asking the same questions might be perceived as just doing his job," it said.

Brinkley tends to play the gentlemanly "good cop," while Chris Wallace on "Meet the Press" often lets guest panelists do the grilling, it said.

Dilemma

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Harold Gould says he is at peace with the character actor's dilemma: A face everyone recognizes, a name no one remembers.

"I'm always Rhoda Morgenstern's father," he said with a laugh in a recent interview. "They never forget that name."

"But sometimes, they'll look at me long and hard and say, 'Gould, isn't it?' And I'll say 'yes.' Then they'll say, 'How's Elliott doing? Aren't you Elliott Gould's father?'" He isn't.

Gould is starring in the Los Angeles Ahmanson Theater production of "I Never Sang For My Father." But he is perhaps best known to the public as the father of Valerie Harper's Rhoda Morgenstern character in the 1970s television series "Rhoda."

Old Jail Will Honor Actress Myrna Loy

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Actress Myrna Loy's latest role won't require much preparation on her part.

The Helena native has consented to have a performing arts center here named after her, project co-chairman Steve Browning said. The Helena Film Society plans to renovate the old Lewis and Clark County jail into a theater.

"She was thrilled by the idea of the jail and quite complimented," said Browning, who, with Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., visited Miss Loy in her New York City penthouse in October.

"You could tell she was a movie star," Browning recalled recently. "Yet, she has a really refreshing quality of being absolutely frank. She's very much a product of growing up on a ranch in a non-affluent family in Montana."

Browning said he assured Miss Loy she would not have any obligations beyond lending her name, and possibly allowing establishment of a Myrna Loy museum inside the new center. Miss Loy, 82, suffers some health problems, and her doctors have warned her against new responsibilities, Browning said.

Miss Loy got her start on the silent screen in 1925, playing vampish, exotic roles, and moved on to romantic leads in her 30s and 40s. She played opposite William Powell in the "Thin Man" series of films from the 1930s, and has shared the screen with Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Cary Grant and, later, Paul Newman — as his mother.

Box Office

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Three Men And A Baby," crawled back on top of the holiday weekend national box office, trading places with comedian Eddie Murphy's "Raw" concert movie.

"Three Men," starring Tom Selleck, Steve Guttenberg and Ted Danson, earned $10.3 million over the three-day Christmas holiday weekend.

Murphy's "Raw," earned $8.6 million for second place, followed by another comedy, "Throw Momma From The Train," which earned $6.7 million.
