Bombs Found Hidden In Cards Sent To Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — A letter bomb hidden in a Christmas card exploded today and injured two people, and at least seven other such bombs were received in Israel and at a Jewish settlement in the occupied West Bank, police said.

Seven of the letter bombs were defused safely, but police spokesman Adi Gonen said authorities believed more explosives had been mailed. Israel radio quoted unidentified police officials as saying 10 bombs were found.

"Logic says that it's Palestinian terror," said one senior police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The explosives were sent from Turkey in identical white envelopes containing Christmas cards, according to a police statement. The typewritten return address on each envelope was listed as D. Nissim, Istanbul.

"It looks like one of those greeting cards that starts playing music when you open them up," said Liat Collins, a spokeswoman for the postal service. She said authorities were checking whether there was anything to link the bomb recipients.

Israeli radio stations broadcast appeals through the day for residents to beware of suspicious letters. Three bombs were discovered in the West Bank settlement of Kiryat Arba on Tuesday. Today, another bomb was found in Kiryat Arba, and one bomb was found in Tel Aviv; in the Tel Aviv suburb of Ramat Gan; in Haifa; and in the town of Or Yehuda, near Ben Gurion International Airport.

In Or Yehuda, two men suffered slight hand injuries today when they touched a letter bomb and it exploded, the radio said. One of the men was hospitalized.

A security official in Kiryat Arba said a resident alerted authorities there Tuesday when she saw two cables sticking out of the envelope.

As police defused the bomb, a mailman passed by and told authorities he had delivered two identical letters to two other Kiryat Arba residents, said the official, Yaacov Gadon. Police picked up the additional envelopes and examined them in a laboratory, Gadon said.

Asked if he had any idea why the bombs were sent, Gadon said: "We are Jews, that's enough."

The domestic news agency Itim quoted unidentified police officials as saying it appeared the addresses were selected at random from Israeli telephone books.

Yitzhak Taub, general director of Israel's postal service, said that after the bombs were discovered in Kiryat Arba, postal employees were placed on alert throughout the country.

Suspect In Mass Murders Fled Incest Charges

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer
RUSSELLVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A man linked to one of America's worst mass killings was described by enraged relatives as a wife-abusing recluse who once was charged with incest, and his sister-in-law said "you knew he was capable" of the 16 slayings.

R. Gene Simmons Sr., 47, was ordered held without bond Tuesday in connection with two of the killings, about the same time authorities started to uncover the bodies of nine relatives in a shallow grave and in the trunk of two cars near his rural home.

Five other slain family members were found in the home Monday after a 45-minute shooting spree in downtown Russellville in which two people were killed and four others wounded.

Russellville Police Chief Herb Johnston filed information Tuesday accusing Simmons of two counts of capital murder and four of attempted capital murder stemming from Monday's shootings. The actual charges probably will not be filed for at least two days, said Pope County Sheriff Jim Bolin.

The retired Air Force master sergeant's 46-year-old wife, Becky, was among the dead found Tuesday, Bolin said.

Her sister, Edith Nesby, of Briggsdale, Colo., said the few surviving family members, who were to help authorities make formal identifications today, felt pain and rage. "You don't want to think he would do something like that, but you knew he was capable of doing it," Mrs. Nesby, 41, said in an interview published today in the Arkansas Gazette.

Mrs. Nesby said Simmons moved to Arkansas from Cloudford, N.M., six years ago because he had been charged with sexually abusing his daughter, Sheila.

Records in the 12th New Mexico Judicial District show Simmons was charged Aug. 11, 1981 with three counts of incest, and that the charges were dismissed Aug. 10, 1982, the newspaper reported.

Former District Attorney Steven Sanders of Alamogordo, N.M., 13 miles southwest of Cloudford, said Simmons fled the state after being indicted, the El Paso Times reported today.

Sanders confirmed that Sheila was the alleged incest victim, and said she was about 16 years old and pregnant when the charges were filed.

Mrs. Nesby said the family believes Simmons fathered Sylvia McNulty, 6.

Sheila McNulty, 24, was identified Tuesday as one of the five found dead Monday in Simmons' house. She was killed along with Sylvia; her husband, Dennis McNulty, 23; the

Pitt's Election Debate Continues

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The adoption of a new election method and purchase of additional land and buildings in downtown Greenville are two of the major steps taken by members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners during 1987.

Reflecting recently on the past 12 months, County Manager Kramer Jackson said the new election plan — which creates three at-large seats and six one-seat districts — was the most time consuming. "It's taken more time than anything else. The board held 20 meetings addressing the district election plan. And it's still pending," he said.

The plan was adopted after the local National Association for the Advancement of Colored People chapter asked commissioners to consider changing the method of election in an effort to give blacks an equal chance to be elected.

The U.S. Justice Department is scheduled to rule on the new voting plan by Jan. 8.

But last week the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice and several individuals filed a suit in U.S. District Court asking that both the present method of electing six commissioners at-large and the new six-three method be thrown out. Instead, the suit, which contends the present method and the new plan dilutes black voting strength, asks that a method of election be used "in 1988 and thereafter (that) does not dilute the voting strength of black citizens."

Because of overcrowding at the courthouse, commissioners last spring approved the purchase of the block bounded by First, Washington, Second and Evans streets — and three buildings on the block — to provide expansion room for offices in the courthouse, according to Jackson.

The $1.9 million purchase included buildings at the intersections of Second and Evans and Second and Washington streets, where some county offices have already been moved, and a building at the intersection of First and Evans streets.

And to help matters even further, a dirt lot on Greene Street, between Second and Third streets, was turned into a paved parking lot during the year.

Another big step during 1987, Jackson said, was "the establishment of the convention and visitors authority... setting up that board and collecting motel room occupancy tax to provide dollars" to promote Pitt County and Greenville, "with the goal of one day having a large convention center here."

Construction projects at the mental health center, including a new detoxification center, and a new multipurpose building for Pitt County Memorial Hospital, took place in the past month.

Winter Returns To N.C.

By The Associated Press

Trees toppled, power lines fell, snow fell over mountain ski slopes and travel proved a test for some as winter winds of more than 40 mph blew across parts of North Carolina.

Mark Anthony Stack was driving his Chevrolet Monte Carlo in Winston-Salem at 12:30 p.m. when a tree crashed into the hood and windshield of his car.

Stack, 16, was not injured, said Officer D.W. Scales of the Winston-Salem Police Department.

The tree, which stretched across the road, was 1½ feet around its trunk, Scales said.

"It landed right on top of the car," Scales said. "The car was a total loss."

A house under construction in Catawba County just south of Hickory was knocked over by wind gusts of 40 mph to 50 mph.

County Schools Enter Second Year Of Merger, Scoring Several 'Firsts'

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The year 1987 was one of development and foundation building for educational entities in Pitt County.

Pitt County schools have begun their second year as a consolidated system and steadily are establishing the groundwork for preparing students for the 21st century by modernizing facilities and enriching educational programs.

Continued growth at the community college level in Pitt County also has spurred Pitt Community College to dedicate new facilities this year. It established new programs to address changing agricultural trends in the county and paved the way for additional equipment for vocational and technical programs and for staff development training.

And the sentiments of East Carolina University students were heard throughout the year as they voiced their views and took firm stands on various issues. It also was a year of administrative changes at the university from chancellor to athletic director.

Taking a summative look, first, at the Pitt County schools, 1987 encompassed several "firsts" in the school system as well as improvements on established programs, Superintendent Eddie West said.

"It was a year of continuous progress in all areas," he said. "Instructional, facility, staff and financial improvements were made while the system experienced the normal cyclic phenomenon that accompanies consolidation. Overall, it was a year in which much was accomplished."

"I feel confident that, based on the firm foundation which is currently present and the commitment of everyone in the system toward building a future, significant progress will continue," West said.

As part of the consolidation cycle, the first consolidated Pitt County Board of Education was elected in November, following the consolidation of the Pitt County and Greenville school systems in July 1986. Five incumbents from the predecessor boards and seven new members assumed seats on the 12-member board, which elected incumbents George Williams as chairman and Donovan Phillips as vice chairman. Williams succeeded Mark Owens, who had served as chairman of the former county board for 17 years.

The six-board, elected under a new district plan for electing members, faced its first controversial issue — consideration of a religion policy for the schools — at its first meeting in December.

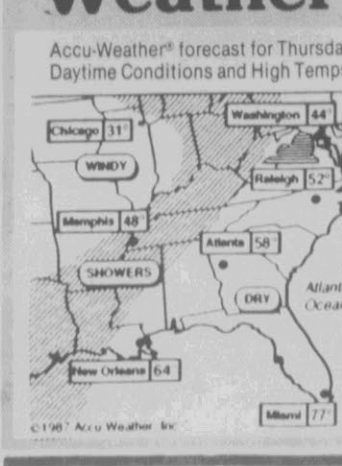

Before a "standing room only" crowd in the commissioners' auditorium of the Pitt County office building, the board adopted the policy, which was created to help teachers and principals plan educational activities around religious holidays.

Also with the consolidation of the Pitt County and Greenville schools, 1987 marked the first year of implementing a new attendance line policy that brought considerable public attention. The policy features a grandfather clause, extending to students in grades nine through 12 in the 1988-89 school year.

Wintergreen Elementary School, a new school in the Winterville area, opened its doors to students for the first time in 1987. It provides an educational environment for about 500 kindergarten through fifth grade students in Pitt County.

Pitt Schools Rack Up 'Firsts'

The Educational Foundation for Pitt County Schools also was established in 1987 to enable the school system to secure funds for more educational experiences. The interim Board of Education served as the initial board members for the foundation, which now has its new board.

A membership drive for the foundation was kicked off with a brochure sent to parents, and community roasts were held in each attendance area to generate funds. The first main focus of the foundation this year was to provide minigrants for teachers to do creative, instructional activities in classrooms in addition to the establishment of the Minges-Farley Athletic Complex.

The athletic complex provided the first football stadium for J.H. Rose High School. The complex also will provide the school's first baseball and softball fields, soccer field and track course.

Other significant events included the conviction of a J.H. Rose High School English teacher for assisting a student to obtain a grade by fraudulent means. Madeline Jordan Taylor was found guilty of accepting a video cassette recorder for a passing grade and was sentenced six months in the Pitt County jail, which was suspended for five years. She also was placed on two years' unsupervised probation in addition to having to pay a fine and restitution to the Greenville Police Department.

And, Pitt County schools made strides in affirmative action this year as 10 black teachers were hired in the first quarter of the school year. Eleven percent of the applicants in the first quarter were black, compared to 5 percent for the same time in the 1986-87 school year.

A supplemental affirmative action policy and changes made in employment standards also were approved early this year by the Board of Education to promote the recruitment and employment of qualified minorities.

West's announcement that he is not a candidate for state superintendent of instruction also was significant in 1987. He dispelled rumors to the contrary during an October news conference and outlined the school system's "blueprint" for the future.

An element in the blueprint considers the trek of kindergarten students in 1987 toward becoming the first graduating class of Pitt County in the 21st century by providing a path for the school system in educating the children.

The minority and futures task forces, both comprised of school personnel and community leaders, were established this year to provide future guidance to the school system.

The minority task force addresses perceptions of the black community, while the futures task force addresses predictable changes in social, demographic, economical and educational realms as the year 2000 approaches. Both task forces will make recommendations to the Board of Education to be used in long-range planning for the schools.

In addition to planning and academic programs, the Pitt County schools had a successful year in athletic programs.

D.H. Conley won the state 3-A basketball championship and Farmville Central won the Eastern 2-A title and advanced to the 2-A basketball championship finals, while Ayden-Grifton's football team went to the Eastern 2-A title game before bowing to eventual state champion Whiteville.

It also was a good year for high school football. All five high schools in Pitt County placed in the state playoffs. Rose High went undefeated during the regular season to win the Big East title.

Eric Blount of Ayden-Grifton received the Daily Reflector Player of the Year award. North Pitt's Ashley Sheppard was named an All-State linebacker and also played in the Shrine Bowl.

During 1987, D.H. Conley pulled off a surprise season by beating North Gaston, 54-55, in the title game at the Dean E. Smith Activities Center in Chapel Hill. The Vikings had a losing record after the 1986 Christmas holidays but jelled over the first few months of the year to claim the Coastal Conference title and continued that roll all the way to Chapel Hill.

Farmville overcame the loss of two key players in mid-season to tie for the Eastern Plains Conference title with Ayden-Grifton and advanced on through the playoffs before bowing to Salisbury in the 2-A title game, 63-45.

Debate Continues

Another major accomplishment during 1987 was "the employment of a county planner to work full time as a planner," Jackson suggested.

And the planner, Jackson said, is currently "cooperating with the city" on an airport land use plan and on planning for the medical park district, as well as on a project to erect road name signs throughout rural areas of the county.

Ultimately, Jackson said, having a full-time planner will "lead to land use planning and orderly growth ordinances," for the county.

"For the fourth year in a row,"

Jackson said, commissioners appropriated $3 million for school capital outlay needs. And the board approved funding an additional courtroom (in the courthouse), as well as water and sewer line extensions to serve new industries; a catfish processing plant at Ayden; a state-of-the-art lumber mill north of Grifton at Hanrahan, and a distribution center in the industrial park north of Greenville.

"I feel good about the strides we've made in county government," Jackson said. "There's a sense of professionalism in county government (and) a good spirit of cooperation between the city and county."

Tip Leads Police To Man Sought In Deaths Of Rhode Island Boys

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A man arrested in the killings of two boys was a troublemaker who liked to dress in fatigues and stab trees and buildings, neighbors said.

City police arrested William Sarmento unarmed and without incident Tuesday afternoon, three hours after announcing that he was a murder suspect and the subject of a nationwide manhunt.

Sarmento, 21, was found hiding in a cellar after someone called police with a tip, Police Chief Anthony Mancuso said.

Sarmento was being held at police headquarters, Mancuso said, and would be arraigned today.

The chief said police would not be looking for any further suspects in the slayings, which had scared many parents here into keeping their children indoors.

"We now believe we have probable cause and sufficient evidence to present this case to a grand jury," state Attorney General James E. O'Neil said at a news conference Tuesday.

Mancuso said Sarmento became a suspect after writing a letter the police chief received the day after Christmas.

Mancuso declined comment on the contents, but the Providence Journal and WJAR-TV reported over the weekend that the author said Satan had ordered him to kill the two boys.

"I hope you will kill me, cops, because I don't know why I killed the children. Keep boys and kids away from me," the note reportedly said.

A neighbor recalled that Sarmento liked to dress in fatigues and thrust a machete or smaller knife into a boarded-up house.

"He'd stab the house with a knife, for at least 20 minutes to half an hour," said William Perry, who lives next door to the apartment Sarmento shared with his parents. "Sometimes he'd wake me up at seven in the morning."

Carole Perry said Sarmento would climb a tree "like a monkey" and jab knives into it.

Sarmento's girlfriend, 19-year-old Paulette McAlpine, said she would not believe the accusations "unless he tells me himself." She described Sarmento as "a real nice guy," who dropped out of school after the seventh grade.

Sarmento had a "job in a jewelry shop and was going to night school classes to get a high school diploma," McAlpine said. "He wanted to get ahead."

Sarmento lived about a mile from where the bodies of Frankie Barnes, 9, and Jason Wolf, 6, were discovered this month.

Frankie, who disappeared Nov. 4 while riding his bicycle near his home, died of stab wounds and drowning, authorities said. Jason disappeared Dec. 14 when his mother sent him downstairs to check the mail. His body, battered and sexually abused, was discovered a week later, police said.

The Sarmentos' apartment was searched Monday night and evidence was recovered, Mancuso said. He declined to specify the evidence, but neighbors said they saw trash bags and a shovel being taken out.

Sarmento had been arrested seven or eight months previously for possessing a sawed-off rifle, but had no other police record, Mancuso said. The charge was still pending at the time of his arrest, Mancuso said.

Amy McAuslan, who lives near the Sarmentos, said of the suspect, "He caused a lot of trouble. He went after a friend of mine with a knife."

Iran Contradicts Arms Report

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Prime Minister Hussein Musavi of Iran today denied his country was producing outlawed chemical weapons, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said, contradicting an earlier report.

IRNA quoted the prime minister as telling Parliament on Sunday that Iran was producing "sophisticated offensive chemical weapons," in violation of a 1925 Geneva agreement.

After a Cabinet meeting today, Musavi was quoted as telling reporters: "The Islamic republic is capable of manufacturing chemical weapons and possesses the technology. But we will produce them only when Islam allows us and when we are compelled to do so."

The IRNA reports were monitored in Nicosia. There was no explanation for the contradictory reports.

Also today, the Independent newspaper in London quoted pro-government Iranian sources today as saying Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini had vetoed the use of chemical weapons on moral grounds.

The Independent, quoting informed sources in Tehran and the Libyan capital, Tripoli, said Iran agreed to supply Libya with Iranian-produced chemical weapons in exchange for advanced Soviet-made missiles.

Ortega Again Calls For Peace But Wants To Strengthen Army

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega said he plans to increase the nation's defense forces from 300,000 men to more than 1 million, but he also called for a new round of peace talks with the Contra rebels.

Ortega's comments came Tuesday when reporters asked him about a recent statement by his brother, Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, who said that Nicaragua's armed defense forces would be doubled to 600,000 by 1995.

"We don't have this plan for 600,000 but for 1 million or 3 million people to defend the country, disposed to take up arms," the president said.

The nation has 3.2 million people. Ortega also said he wants "3 million rifles, too... We are negotiating with everyone to obtain rifles."

The president spoke to reporters after meeting with Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, the archbishop of Managua, to discuss holding another round of cease-fire talks with the U.S.-financed Contra rebels.

Ortega said he hoped the talks could take place within 15 days in either Belize or Panama. Two previous rounds of indirect talks in the Dominican Republic ended in deadlock. Obando y Bravo has been trying to mediate an end to the civil war, which began in November 1981.

The cardinal said Tuesday he would only meet with the two sides if they negotiated face to face. The Sandinistas have said the only direct talks to which they could agree would be with the United States, since it finances the Contras. Ortega did not indicate Tuesday that he had changed that position.

The peace talks are part of a Central American peace plan signed last August by Ortega and the presidents of El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala and Costa Rica. The plan is designed to end the Contra war as well as leftist guerrilla insurgencies in El Salvador and Guatemala.

The plan calls for cease-fires, amnesties for political prisoners, democratic reforms and an end to outside support for rebels.

The leftist Sandinista government has received its arms from the Soviet bloc since it came to power following the overthrow of rightist President Anastasio Somoza in 1979.

Humberto Ortega said Dec. 12 that if economic and population conditions allow, the Sandinistas would double its military force of 300,000 by 1995. The figure includes troops, reserves, police and civil defense forces.

The next day, the president said the plan was "nothing new" and added, "We have the obligation of having a reserve in all the country, as the United States has."

Ballet Dancer Found Dead

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — Dancer Patrick Bissell's death at age 30 has deprived the ballet world of one of its brightest lights, said Mikhail Baryshnikov, artistic director of the American Ballet Theater.

Bissell, a principal dancer for the company, was found dead in his apartment Tuesday.

The cause of death was undetermined and under investigation, said Detective Sgt. Paul DiMartino. An autopsy was to be performed today.

"We believe he was probably dead for a couple of days," DiMartino said. "He died alone in his apartment."

Police said today that they knew that Bissell had been treated for drug addiction, but they would not speculate on whether drugs played a part in his death. "He supposedly has been clean for at least two months," said Detective Sgt. Thomas Golizio.

No drug paraphernalia was found in the apartment, Golizio said.

Bissell's fiancée, dancer Amy Rose, found his body when she returned to the apartment after several days in Los Angeles performing with the ballet company, authorities said.

DiMartino said there was no evidence of violence in the apartment, where the couple had moved from New York in the past few weeks.

"Patrick Bissell was without a doubt one of the brightest lights in the history of American Ballet Theater, or for that matter, in the entire ballet world," Baryshnikov said in a statement read by ABT spokesman Bob Pontarelli.

"Patrick also possessed an artistry that touched us all," Baryshnikov said, and his death "leaves a tremendous void in the dance world and in our lives."

Bissell had performed with the Boston Ballet and joined the ABT's corps de ballet in 1977, becoming a soloist the following year and a principal dancer in the spring of 1979.

The company dismissed him in 1980 for missing rehearsals, but reinstated him in 1981 or 1982, Pontarelli said.

Bissell interpreted major roles in most of the company's ballets and performed as a guest with companies in Australia, Canada, China and Taiwan. He also performed with Natalia Makarova in Manila, Philippines, and Hong Kong.

In 1980 in Edinburgh, Scotland, Bissell danced the title role in "Cheri," a ballet created for him by Peter Darnell, artistic director of the Scottish Ballet.

Bissell was born in Corpus Christi, Texas, and began his training at age 10 in Toledo, Ohio. He continued his studies at the National Academy of Dance in Champagne, Ill., the North Carolina School of the Arts and ABT.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Cleaning Up

After years of debate, North Carolina is on the verge of activating a phosphate ban in laundry detergents Jan. 1. It is a move which represents a significant shift of focus toward protection of the state's natural resources.

The phosphate ban was adopted by the N.C. General Assembly to protect the state's environment. Phosphate, which is also valued as a fertilizer, has been blamed for feeding algae growth in the state's lakes, streams and rivers.

Store managers and grocery executives are saying few customers have noticed phosphate-based laundry detergents are disappearing from store shelves in preparation for the deadline.

While some manufacturers are urging grocers to put their backlog of phosphate detergents on sale so they won't have to buy them back, there are limits as to how much of the merchandise can be left in store stocks.

A strong opponent of the phosphate ban, Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, does have some lingering doubts about the law. In his home county, he says South Carolina's border is relatively nearby and his misgivings include visions of consumers crossing the state line to obtain phosphate-laden detergents in a state where they remain on the shelves.

The possibility exists that some Tar Heels whose rural homes are so close to the Palmetto State line could feasibly buy phosphate detergents but the danger is remote. The numbers are likely to be so small as to have little real impact on the phosphate ban.

Instead, South Carolina may be encouraged to develop its own phosphate ban because of North Carolina's success. Environmentalists in one state are similar to environmentalists in another, and the South Carolina breed are apt to be emboldened by North Carolina's progress and press their own campaign for legislation. The anti-smoking crusaders found that to be the case in initiating no-smoking areas, and their varied area bans are spreading.

As Jan. 1 nears, North Carolinians will see the implementation of an important law designed to protect the state's fragile rivers and streams. It is a significant step toward further nourishment of natural resources in a state heavily dependent upon these attributes.

Confusion

Comments from Pitt County Democratic party leaders indicate they are as bewildered as anybody about the campaign for the Democratic nomination for president.

The front runners, however, seem to be Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, Rep. Dick Gephardt of Missouri and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Gary Hart? Virtually no one seems to feel he has much of a chance in eastern North Carolina and probably has little chance of capturing the Democratic nomination in 1988.

The support for Gore is not surprising considering his southern roots. Jesse Jackson's charisma makes him an important factor in the race for the nomination.

The real question about Hart's re-entry in the presidential race is whether or not it will harm the Democrats' chances for winning the presidency in 1988. It has likely made the political waters quite a bit muddier. In addition, if Hart succeeds in attracting his former supporters away from other contenders, his re-entry can disrupt the Democratic race. He could be a formidable factor when delegates begin the nominating process.

Janice Faulkner said the Hart campaign has gained much press coverage that other candidates might not have gotten. "If that's good, then it's helping. The fact that a lot of the press is negative may be hurting. Who knows?"

Marvin Speight of Farmville said "I don't think Hart is back in there for anything but to recoup (federal) matching funds."

Betty Speir of Bethel sees Gore, Gephardt and Jackson leading the field in eastern North Carolina. She expects one or two front runners to emerge in the next two months.

With large numbers of candidates in the race for the Democratic nomination the situation is no more clear here than it is anywhere else. And the Hart re-entry didn't make things any clearer. It is certain, though, some candidates will falter in the coming year. Potentially strong candidates may not yet be in the race, awaiting the wilting of the early runners. It is no wonder that Democratic party leaders don't want to commit to a candidate too soon.

Disposable Houses And Tuition Futures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousand-story skyscrapers and a return of the blimp, rationed medical care and sale of "tuition futures" by colleges all could be part of America's destiny, according to the World Future Society.

The Bethesda, Md.-based group has summarized its predictions of the likely, possible and improbable, for both the near and long term, in "Outlook '88 and Beyond," a collection of the reports issued by the group during the past year.

Rapidly rising college costs could lead to the introduction of tuition futures, suggests the group which includes academicians, scientists and others whose work focuses on trends for the future.

Under such plans, parents would begin paying into a college fund for their child when the tot is as young as age 2, allowing them to pay for the future college education at the current tuition rate — and spreading the payments over more time.

Costs too will have a bearing on health, says the group, which projects that "expensive life-saving technologies may be rationed if younger Americans are unwilling to support massive health-care expenditures to keep alive the growing number of elderly in poor health."

Added to this bleak prospect is the possibility of an increase in suicide among the elderly, according to the futurists.

'Thousand-story skyscrapers and a return of the blimp, rationed medical care and sale of "tuition futures" by colleges all could be part of America's destiny, according to the World Future Society.'

As this becomes more acceptable, elderly people in poor health may be able to apply for suicide licenses, the group says.

Death specialists may dispense potent drugs that kill painlessly, and special ceremonies may be created for these occasions, the futurists say.

This could occur at a time when the massive increase in the number of elderly means there will be an acute shortage of physicians trained in geriatrics, and thus health care for older Americans may often have to be provided by physician assistants and nurses.

All isn't negative on the health front, though, according to the futurists.

For example, they foresee a time when drugs will be available to help people with spinal cord injuries regain the use of legs or other paralyzed body parts. The drugs could replace chemical signals the brain could no longer transmit, thus stimulating the spinal cord to activate the muscles, the futurists say.

They also foresee increased surgical removal of plaque in the arteries to reduce the chance of stroke, correction of birth defects before birth, a reduction in heart attacks and creation of "medical malls" which would include a hospital, medical office buildings, a hotel and health-oriented retail stores.

At least one less-than-modern technology is likely to see a comeback — lighter-than-air craft, according to the futurists.

They look for increased use of balloons and blimps to provide disaster relief and to reach remote areas.

Thousand-story skyscrapers likely will become technically feasible, the group also says, with a proposed tower in Houston said to be able to grow a mile high.

Other outlooks for the near and distant future, according to the annual assessment:

- Resorts and hotels will market vacations to older consumers, taking a "Club Medic" approach with special menus, nursing care and physicians on staff in the event of emergency.

- Orchestral music may make a comeback as computers and synthesizers offer a less expensive substitute for hiring a full orchestra.

- Robots with computer brains could take over dangerous police jobs, such as quelling riots and rescuing hostages.

- Japan will see a major restructuring of its educational system to foster individuality and creativity among its future workers.

- Recent emphasis on high-tech rather than home-ec educational programs could lead to a generation of nutritional illiterates in the United States.

- The nation may be heading for electricity shortages by the year 2000.

- Prospective lovers may sign dating contracts to deal with potential legal problems involving sexually transmissible diseases, pregnancy and abortion, ownership of property and financial compensation if the relationship ends. Dating services may evolve into brokerage firms, using standard contracts.

- Houses may become disposable. Factory-built homes will have increasingly sophisticated components, but will be cheaper, making it less costly and simpler to scrap the house than to repair it when something goes wrong.

- Seventy-five percent of all current workers will need re-training by the year 2000.

Philippines Faces Grim New Year

MANILA, Philippines — In 1987, the Philippines has suffered attempted coups, calamities and crises of often epic proportions. Grim evidence of the latest misery — the sinking of the ship Dona Paz with more than 1,500 souls aboard — was still washing up on island beaches at week's end.

One tends to forget that 1987 began on a high note of hope for most Filipinos. A cease-fire agreement between the government and communist rebels had just been concluded. Until the first week of February, when the truce ended, Filipinos enjoyed a brief and fragile peace, a respite from the often brutal insurgency war that has raged in this country for 16 years.

But the conflicts that had always torn at the political fabric of this fractious nation became more intense as the months wore on. At year's end, that fabric is drenched in blood.

President Corazon Aquino has remained single-minded in keeping to her timetable of setting in place the institutions of political democracy that her predecessor Ferdinand E. Marcos had discarded. But beyond the establishment of these formal structures — a constitution, a bicameral legislature — the Aquino administration has provided little in terms of democracy's substance. The president, for example, surrendered the initiative for land redistribution to the debating halls of a conservative Congress. Moreover, her government has become increasingly susceptible to charges of corruption and a regression to the patronage-based politics of the past.

As the reformist image of the Aquino government is cracking, its pattern of governing has also come unraveled. For Mrs. Aquino is a reactive president who takes decisive action only at the very peak of crisis. While such action brings renewed vigor to her administration, it is almost always followed by long periods of indecisiveness and drift

'The outlook for the coming year is not optimistic. In many parts of the country, contending ideological and political forces appear to be on a violent collision course' until the next crisis comes along.

After the August coup, for example, Mrs. Aquino, in quick succession, reshuffled her Cabinet, increased the pay of soldiers and delivered tough speeches stating her intention to "govern directly." After these, however, there have been no major new initiatives from her government.

It is a style of governing that tends to sweep problems under the carpet. Much, for example, has been made of the arrest earlier this month of the renegade Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, the leader of the bloody August coup. While the detention of the colonel and several of his key men precludes any more takeover attempts in the near future, it does not eradicate the dangers posed by a politicized armed forces.

Military analysts say that the August coup, the bloodiest of five attempted against the government since it assumed power, exposed and deepened the cleavages within the armed forces. The government tried to address the grievances of the rebellious soldiers by, among other things, raising military pay and removing allegedly left-leaning Cabinet officials. But these do not seem to have totally quieted the restiveness in the barracks.

The retirement early next year of about a third of the armed forces generals will mean the ascendancy into the military hierarchy of a younger, more politicized and more activist batch of colonels. This group is expected to assert the armed forces' role in formulating security policy and also to articulate military sentiments on the conduct of government affairs.

The increasing role of the armed forces as a whole in defining government policy and of rebellious military factions in pressuring government to take drastic steps it would otherwise not take is a cause of concern among the administration's more liberal and radical supporters.

Last October, the communist New People's Army killed three American servicemen outside Clark Air Base, a U.S. military installation. The killing of the Americans marked a new phase in the insurgency and is one of the indications of the escalation of guerrilla warfare.

There is likely to be more blood on the streets and villages in 1988 as guerrillas battle with soldiers. Civilians, too, are being drawn into the conflict with the government's organization of anti-communist vigilante groups which have been mobilized to fight the insurgents.

Some 200,000 candidates are running in the polls scheduled next month. Already, the campaign death toll is rising. By mid-December, with only a quarter of the campaign period over, 22 people had already been killed in election-related violence. The killings are expected to increase as the campaign peaks in the coming weeks.

In short, the outlook for the coming year is not optimistic. In many parts of the country, contending ideological and political forces appear to be on a violent collision course; within the Aquino coalition itself, a variety of groups and personalities are slugging it out in the contest for elective posts.

The coming year will be one of continued, if not heightened, conflict. More than ever, real leadership is needed.

Strength For Today

For some reason known only to Himself, God has given us free will. He marks out pathways in which we may walk and gives light that we may see, but we can walk in pathways of our own choosing if we so desire and turn our backs on the light.

We can do these things — but we cannot do them with impunity. We can disobey God if we want to, but in the end we shall have to pay for this disobedience. That is the meaning of the Garden of Eden story. The pair in the Garden has everything the heart could wish for; but by a wrong use of free will they turned themselves out into a harsh and hostile world where they had to live by the sweat of their brow.

Freedom of will is a great blessing if we use it properly; a great curse if we do not.

Japan: Economic Giant But Military Midget

Analysis

TORONTO — While their nation grows ever richer from trade, Japanese defense planners increasingly worry about the startling vulnerability of their island nation. "I fear," said one strategist, "that Japan may go the way of ancient Carthage."

Japanese take their history seriously; Carthage, the great trading power of the classical world, had few of its own soldiers and relied, instead, on mercenaries. In the end, neither wealth nor brilliant generals saved Carthage from destruction by the superior military power of Rome.

Today the Third Rome, as Soviets like to style themselves, presents Japan with its most serious strategic challenge. Soviet forces in the Far East have increased their combat power by 50 percent over the past decade. Establishment of a major, permanent Soviet naval and air base at Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam, threatens Japan's oil routes through the Strait of Malacca and in the South China Sea. Increasing Soviet overflights and naval penetration of Japan's airspace and waters are of growing concern. Only weeks ago a Japanese fighter intercepted and fired warning bursts in front of an intruding Soviet bomber — the first shots fired at the Soviets by a Japanese aircraft in more than three decades.

The warm winds of detente do not reach the Far East. A volatile mixture of historical and geographical tensions have kept relations between Moscow and Tokyo as cold as the gray waters of the Sea of Okhotsk.

The Japanese islands, extending from Sakhalin to Korea, neatly cut off the Soviet Far Eastern coast. In wartime, ships from every Soviet Pacific port except remote Petropavlovsk would have to fight their way through Japan's narrow Tsugaru, Soya or Tsushima Straits.

The Soviets and the Japanese have been bad neighbors for a century. At the end of the 1800s, both powers were expanding into the wilderness of Manchuria and the Korean Peninsula. A clash was inevitable and it became the 1904 Russo-Japanese War. The upstart Japanese trounced the Russians and sank their fleet at Tsushima Strait, a disaster that still rankles the Soviets. Since then, the two nations have argued over Sakhalin and the Kurile Islands, vied for influence in Korea and fought, on and off, from 1936 to 1945.

As a result of the brief Soviet attack in 1945, Japan was forced to cede the Kuriles and lower Sakhalin. The Soviets also seized four islands off Hokkaido that Japan claimed were never part of the Kuriles. Japan refuses to sign a final peace treaty with Moscow ending World War II until it gets back the "Northern Territories." The Soviets have responded by fortifying these barren hunks of rock, moving in more troops and MiG-23s. Some Japanese even suspect that Washington encouraged the Soviets to seize the islands, knowing that the dispute would force Tokyo into permanent alliance with the United States.

For crowded, land-hungry Japan, loss of any territory is serious and guaranteed to sustain strong anti-Soviet feeling. Equally galling is Moscow's persistent refusal to treat Japan as an equal. While Japan's gross national product reaches superpower size, the Soviets dismiss Japan as no more than a rich American satrap and "henchman of Pentagon militarists." Soviet policy toward Japan can be summed up by paraphrasing Stalin's old barb about the pope: How many divisions has the Mikado? Japan may be an economic giant, but militarily it remains a midget.

For a nation of 123 million people generating 10 percent of the world's economic activity, Japan's "Self Defense Forces" are tiny: an army of 155,000 troops in 13 small divisions; 67 warships; and fewer than 400 combat aircraft. Professionalism and motivation do not make up for lack of aircraft, ships, guns, missiles and the high-tech accessories of modern warfare. Japan's stock of munitions are a paltry 104,000 tons; the country would be unable to fight a major war for more than a few days.

Imported oil supplies almost all of Japan's energy needs. Virtually all raw materials that fuel Japanese industry come in by ship; the maritime blockade of Japan by U.S. submarines and mines brought the island empire to its knees in World War II. Nagasaki and Hiroshima only made Japan face the reality that it had already been defeated by late 1944.

And the Soviet Union is not Japan's only worry. Quietly, Japanese security officials are also uneasy about China. Japan now provides about 80 percent of China's economic aid but as recently as a decade ago, debate still raged within the Japanese government over the wisdom of helping the sleeping giant build its economy and armed forces. Japanese understand the need to offset growing Soviet military power in the Far East by helping China modernize, yet there remains a deep sense of distrust and residual wartime animosity between the two nations.

Still more worrisome to Tokyo is the chronically explosive Korean Peninsula — only 120 miles across the Tsushima Strait. Japan is a principal financial backer of Seoul and relies on South Korea's 542,000-man army as its first line of defense. Discreet Japanese aid has allowed South Korea and Taiwan to build powerful armed forces without crippling their civilian economies. At present, Japan's overriding fear is that war will break out between the two Koreas. Interestingly, Japanese strategists believe that U.S. forces in Korea play as important a role in restraining any adventurism on the part of Seoul to "liberate" the North as they do in keeping Pyongyang's forces at bay. Yet Japan does not want to see a united Korea. Such an event, in the worlds of one senior strategist, would "tremendously threaten Japan."

Japanese defense planners are aware of the hostile environment and know that their armed forces can only fend off a limited attack. Anything more will require urgent military action by the United States, at a time when U.S. power in the Pacific is on a decline to be accelerated by cuts in the U.S. defense budget. Until now, Japan has taken refuge behind its U.S.-imposed constitution limiting the size of the military and forbidding foreign deployment. Tokyo also relies on its security treaty with Washington and the 64,000 U.S. military personnel based in Japan and Okinawa, for whose presence Japan contributes $1.3 billion annually.

Shades of Carthage's Numidian mercenaries. Even former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's breaking of the psychologically important barrier of 1 percent of GNP spent on defense has done little to remedy Japan's military anemia.

Curiously, most Japanese oppose military spending, convinced that the U.S. will protect Japan no matter what. Collective shame for Japan's crushing World War II defeat — and the suffering involved — is still strong. The government is trying to get around public resistance, by building paramilitary forces that could quickly be turned into regular combat troops in wartime, or by projects like the costly new underwater rail tunnel linking Honshu to Hokkaido — a linkage that may have more military value than commercial application. There is even talk about sending Japanese troops on United Nations peacekeeping missions as a way of showing the public how Japanese soldiers perform a useful role.

Federal Judge Censures, Fines Lawyers For 'Frivolous' Suit

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal judge has ordered two plaintiffs and their lawyers to pay nearly $84,000 for pursuing what he described as "frivolous" allegations of racial discrimination in civilian employment at Fort Bragg.

U.S. District Judge James Fox said in the order that many of the "broad-side" race-discrimination claims had been filed in bad faith and that many were withdrawn by the plaintiffs when it became clear that they would not prevail.

"The absolute lack of credible evidence supporting so many of the allegations heard is deeply troubling," Fox wrote in a 482-page document filed Monday in federal court in Raleigh. "Yet, time after time in this case, plaintiffs' evidence, shorn of all its incredible underpinnings, simply came down to an assertion by the plaintiff that she-he was black, the supervisor or selecting official was white, and an adversary employment action had occurred."

Fox said he was equally disturbed by the "utterly incredible nature" of testimony by four of the plaintiffs.

"Reading the transcript of their testimony, particularly the government's devastating cross-examination, leads to one undeniable conclusion — on a number of occasions (the four plaintiffs) lied," Fox wrote.

Fox said the case, which cost "millions of dollars" to litigate, was the largest civil rights action ever tried by the Department of the Army. It involved 93 days of testimony, 256 witnesses and 1,200 depositions.

"The wholesale, long-term waste of physical, mental and financial resources engendered by the extraordinarily reckless, frivolous conduct of both plaintiffs and their counsel mandate a substantial monetary sanction against both," Fox wrote. "A mere slap on the wrist or minor fine is unacceptable for reasons of both general and specific deterrence."

The lawyers represented black civilian workers at Fort Bragg who filed two race discrimination suits against the Army in 1980 and 1981. The suits were filed under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits employment discrimination on the basis of race. The suits were consolidated and tried in 1984.

The suits alleged discriminatory practices in the merit promotion process in areas including evaluations, Reduction in Force procedures and disciplinary policies. Plaintiffs also alleged that when they voiced their complaints they were harassed and subject to retaliation.

Army attorneys had asked Fox to impose sanctions on the plaintiffs and their lawyers.

Fox's order assessed $30,000 against Julius Chambers, lead counsel in the case and attorney for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund. But Fox said none of that money should come from the NAACP or its legal defense fund, saying he wanted no diversion of funds from its "crucial mission."

Fox also ordered lawyer Geraldine Sumter to pay $12,500, and assessed $5,000 each against Gilda Glazer and Penda Hair, who also participated in the case. The balance of $1,414 was assessed against the Charlotte law firm of Ferguson, Stein, Watt, Wallas and Adkins, where Chambers formerly was a member and where the other lawyers in the case practice.

Fox ordered Sandra Blue, a plaintiff who now lives in California, to pay $8,000 in defense fees plus $5,000 in court costs. He ordered another plaintiff, Beulah Mae Harris, a former clerk, to pay $15,000 to the Army for its legal fees plus $2,000 to the court.

Fox required the attorneys to pay $23,009 to the Army and $30,905 to the court.

State Makes List

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has made the first cut in the competition for a massive, $4.4 billion atom-smasher, emerging as one of eight finalists on a list by the National Academy of Sciences and the National Academy of Engineering.

The "short list" released Tuesday for potential sites of the superconducting super collider also included Texas, Arizona, Colorado, Tennessee, New York, Illinois and Michigan.

"We are confident that we will be included on any short list until the list gets down to two or three states," Gov. Jim Martin said.

Landing the super collider is a top priority for Gov. Jim Martin's administration, which spent $1.25 million developing a presentation that touted a site in Durham, Granville and Person counties north of Research Triangle Park.

If it is built, the collider will be a 53-mile-long circular tunnel in which beams of protons will be smashed into each other at energies 20 times what is now possible.

This will permit physicists to concentrate more energy in a small space — the collision region — than has existed at such density since the creation of the universe in the "Big Bang" 20 billion or so years ago.

Candidates Advance

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson appear likely to win approval for the North Carolina ballot for the March 8 primary, a state election official says.

Elections Director Alex Brock said Tuesday he expects the State Board of Elections to declare Hart and Jackson eligible for the primary when it meets Jan. 5 to take a final vote on the ballot.

The board this month voted to place the names of former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Rep. Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee and Sen.

Paul Simon of Illinois on the ballot as Democratic candidates.

Republican contenders approved for the ballot were Vice President George Bush, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, former Delaware Gov. Pierre du Pont, former television evangelist Pat Robertson and former Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

Presidential hopefuls can qualify for the North Carolina ballot by qualifying for matching campaign funds from the Federal Elections Commission or by presenting a petition signed by 10,000 of the state's voters.

Most State Students Fail To Meet Bennett Standards

RALEIGH (AP) — Only 11 percent of North Carolina's students are meeting the ideal high school standards set by U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett, state officials say.

North Carolina requires only 22 semester courses for high school graduation compared to the 36 courses that Bennett recommended Tuesday in a report titled "James Madison High School: A Curriculum for American Students."

To graduate, North Carolina's high school students must pass four years of English, two years of mathematics, social studies and science and a year of physical education and health combined.

Bennett envisions a curriculum with four years of English; three of math, social studies and science; two years of physical education, two years of a foreign language and one semester each of art and music history.

State and local education officials said Bennett's plan may be too demanding for some students and could cause more of them to drop out of school.

"It is predicated on the assumption that everybody has the ability to achieve that kind of rigorous schedule, and I'm not sure that is totally correct," William Peek, senior associate state superintendent, said Tuesday.

Henry C. Knight, chairman of the Wake County Board of Education, agreed.

"I am convinced that additional academic studies for all of the students in our school system is not necessarily appropriate," Knight said.

Last year about 7,500 — about 11 percent — of the state's 65,800 graduates qualified as scholars, said William Church, secondary education specialist for the Department of Public Instruction.

State Business Income Tax Goes To 7 Percent Friday

RALEIGH (AP) — For the first time in 45 years, North Carolina corporations will enter the New Year facing higher income taxes.

The tax increase, part of a 10-year program to create a $3.2 billion school-construction fund, takes effect Friday and raises the corporate income tax rate from 6 percent to 7 percent. Estimates are that the increase will generate an additional $95 million in 1987 and $190 million by 1997.

But at the same time, North Carolina corporations no longer will have to pay inventory taxes — a $52 million tax break for manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers.

Corporations also can get new income-tax credits for jobs they create in low-income counties. Employers can get a $2,800 income-tax credit for each job they create in those counties. And companies or individuals that invest in North Carolina corporations can earn up to a 25 percent tax credit.

"They giveth with one hand and taketh with another," said Susan R. Valauri, state director of the National Federation of Independent Businesses, which represents 13,500 small businesses in North Carolina.

The tax change is among 66 laws passed by the N.C. General Assembly last summer that take effect Jan. 1.

The corporate tax increase is the first since 1933, when it was set at 6 percent. Corporations did not pay an income tax until 1921, when a 3 percent tax was first levied.

"If old trends continue, it will be a long time before you see it change again," said William H. Baker, audit supervisor for corporate income taxes in the N.C. Department of Revenue. "But trends have a tendency these days to change a little faster than they have in the past."

Mrs. Valauri said higher taxes likely would mean higher prices for retail goods.

"I think you will see pass-alongs," she said. "It may not be the corporate income tax alone, but coupled with all the other changes, prices will have to be increased merely to stay even with 1987. Otherwise it would cut into their profits and most of the small businesses in the state don't have very large profits to begin with."

Bill Rustin Jr., president of the N.C. Retail Merchants Association, said that the income tax increase alone did not trouble merchants.

"We were willing to have the corporate income tax increased to get rid of the inventory tax," said Rustin, whose organization represents 10,000 merchants. "Because when you are taxed on your income, at least you have an income to pay it. Inventory taxes you pay regardless."

Federal Campaign Funds Ready, But Still Doubtful

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson doesn't want the check to be in the mail to him on Monday, because he's just not sure he wants that $4.5 million in federal money for the 1988 election.

On the other hand, Democrat Gary Hart definitely wants the $100,000 in federal matching funds due him next week, but Xerox Corp. doesn't want that check to go into the mail either.

Jesse Jackson wants his federal funds, but he's having trouble getting an OK from the Federal Election Commission.

Xerox obtained a District of Columbia Superior Court order Tuesday aimed at seizing Hart's matching money to settle a 1984 presidential campaign debt owed for copier rentals.

Sue Casey, a Hart campaign aide in Denver, said there would be no immediate comment on the matter because the campaign had not seen the court order.

The FEC has approved money for both Robertson and Hart, and on Monday, the money is scheduled to flow to Robertson, Hart and 10 other candidates who have qualified for nearly $25.6 million in the first installment for the 1988 campaign. Checks will be written or the money will be wired to the campaigns.

Jackson is the one remaining uncertified candidate. The FEC staff found problems with the documentation submitted by his campaign, and the campaign has been asked to resolve the problems. FEC spokeswoman Sharon Snyder said Tuesday, Ms. Snyder would not specify what those were.

Jackson pledged to clear up the problems with his submissions today or Thursday and get in line for his matching money.

Robertson, in an unprecedented request, asked the FEC to delay sending the money for as much as 30 days beyond Jan. 4.

Robertson campaign attorney Marion Edwyn Harrison, in a letter to the FEC, said the delay would "enable Americans For Robertson to determine whether Americans For Robertson wishes to accept matching funds and participate in the matching funds regimen."

Robertson, the former television evangelist, has expressed opposition to accepting money from the government for his campaign. But the campaign filed all the documents necessary to be ruled eligible for matching money.

No candidate has ever refused matching funds once qualified, said the FEC's Ms. Snyder. And the letters from the FEC to the U.S. Treasury telling it to issue Robertson the check have already been sent.

Harrison's letter said Robertson wanted to avoid testing whether the campaign must abide by the spending limits attached to matching funds, even if it later rejects the money.

Robertson, who already has raised and spent at least $11 million, would have to abide by state and national spending limits in the primary season if he takes the money. The national limit will be about $27 million. If he takes no federal funds, he would have to abide by all contribution and disclosure rules, but could spend as much money as he could raise.

Through last week, the Robertson campaign had qualified for $4,495,607.72 in matching funds, more than any other candidate except Vice President George Bush.

The latest round in Hart's problems with the $1.3 million in debts left over from his 1984 campaign is just as complicated as the legal arguments earlier this year over who should pay the bills.

Warren Rosenfeld, a Washington attorney for Xerox, said the 1984 Hart campaign owed the company $10,480 plus interest for copier rental fees that have not been paid. Xerox sued in local court and received a judgment the Hart campaign did not oppose.

When the FEC certified Hart on Monday, Rosenfeld said it was time to move.

"We thought we would take a shot and filed an attachment order rather hurriedly," he said.

Rosenfeld said he wasn't certain the FEC could be required to hold up the payment to Hart. Nor was he certain that the 1988 funds could be attached to pay the 1984 bills.

Technically, he said, the order requires the FEC to tell the court within 10 days whether it has any money due to Hart. If it does, then Xerox can ask the court to seize the money.

Hart's campaign early this year — before he dropped out the first time — was dogged by lawsuit and court actions involving the 1984 debts. At one point, federal marshals seized the receipts from a Hart fund-raiser.

But the money was returned when the court decided the 1988 funds could not be used to pay off the 1984 debts. After withdrawing, Hart asked the FEC if the 1988 matching money could be used to pay the earlier bills. But that request for an opinion was withdrawn and Hart aides say a decision on a new request will come this week.

Presidential candidates can win eligibility for federal matching funds by raising at least $5,000 in individual contributions of $250 or less in at least 20 states. Once eligible, all individual contributions up to $250 are matched dollar for dollar by money from the Treasury. Those funds come from the voluntary $1 checkoff on personal income tax returns.

Southern, Western States Keep Up Population Gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm and energy-depressed states continue to lose residents while the South and the West are booming, with states such as Florida and California posting large population gains in the 1980s, the Census Bureau says.

Florida's population has grown 23 percent since 1980, pushing it past Pennsylvania to become the nation's fourth most populous state, after California, New York and Texas, the bureau said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Alaska, the least populous state at the time of the 1980 census, is now second-smallest with an estimated population of 525,000. Wyoming now ranks last, with a population of 490,000.

The estimated mid-1987 overall U.S. population was 243,400,000, up from 241,096,000 in mid-1986 and 226,546,000 in 1980.

The bureau said the South and the West continue to be the fastest growing regions, accounting for 15 million of the nation's 17 million increase in population since 1980.

However, population losses continued between 1986 and 1987 in the farm states of Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota, Montana and Idaho.

Iowa was down from 2.83 million to 2.85 million in 1986; Nebraska was down to 1.59 million from 1.60 million; North Dakota to 672,000 from 679,000; Montana to 809,000 from 817,000; and Idaho to 998,000 from 1 million.

Energy-depressed states such as Louisiana, Oklahoma, West Virginia and Wyoming also showed losses, and Texas grew far more slowly than earlier in the decade, the agency said.

Louisiana declined to 4.46 million from 4.50 million in 1986, Oklahoma to 3.27 million from 3.31 million in 1986, West Virginia to 1.90 million from 1.92 million and Wyoming to 490,000 from 507,000 in 1986.

Florida, with a mid-1987 population put at 12.02 million, nudged Pennsylvania, population 11.94 million, into fifth place, the bureau said.

Ranked seventh at the time of the 1980 census, Florida moved past Ohio in 1984 and past Illinois in 1986.

Florida was the only state in this decade to cause a shift in the relative rank of the nation's Top 10 states.

Those states, in their present order and estimated population, are: California, 27.66 million; New York, 17.82 million; Texas, 16.79 million; Florida, 12.02 million; Pennsylvania, 11.94 million; Illinois, 11.58 million; Ohio, 10.78 million; Michigan, 9.20 million; New Jersey, 7.63 million; and North Carolina, 6.41 million.

Shuttle Ring Fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA says its engineers clearly "missed something" in redesigning a critical booster-rocket component whose failure in a test firing will force postponement of the nation's first manned space launch since the Challenger disaster.

The failure of a new, rubberlike ring that is part of the rocket motor nozzle mechanism presented the National Aeronautics and Space Administration with a stunning new setback as it struggled to resume space shuttle flights two years after their grounding.

Tuesday's announcement reversed a glowing assessment that NASA and rocket contractor Morton Thiokol had made a week earlier following a cold-weather test of the redesigned booster.

Ironically, it came as the Soviet Union was celebrating a new outer space record with the return of a cosmonaut from 326 days in orbit.

"It was a good day for them and a bad day for us," said John Pike, a space analyst with the Federation of American Scientists.

Plant Fire Kills Five

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Morton Thiokol Inc. defended its safety record after the explosion of an MX missile motor killed five workers and turned a building into a skeleton of twisted girders.

Morton Thiokol officials described the tragedy as the worst accident to befall the company's Wasatch Operations since it began building solid-fuel rocket motors for the government in 1958.

An MX motor containing nearly 100,000 pounds of propellant exploded in flames about 6:20 a.m. Tuesday, instantly killing four workers and burning another who died later.

The explosion's cause was unknown. However, the company said the five probably were removing a casting from the center of the motor in the solid-fuel first stage of the four-stage missile.

Raab said it was too early to tell how the accident might affect production of the MX, an intercontinental ballistic missile dubbed the "Peacekeeper" by the Reagan administration.

U.S. Colleges Are Focusing On Health Programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — On many college campuses around the country, students are learning that there is more to fitness than working up a sweat, notes the Council of Independent Colleges (CIC), which reports that many colleges have introduced a new concept in overall fitness.

Called the "Wellness" programs, these comprehensive health programs include many elements of a healthy lifestyle — social, emotional, spiritual and physical.

"Small colleges have always been concerned with the development of the whole person, not only academically but in other dimensions as well," says Allen P. Splete, president of CIC, the national association of small independent colleges, based in Washington. "The development of wellness programs is a natural extension of this concern."

"Wellness is not just a good workout, it's a way of life," says Jane Moritz, director of the Wellness Program at Buena Vista College in Storm Lake, Iowa. "We live in an age where a finely tuned body is all important. But now we're looking at the whole person to see if all aspects are balanced — mind, spirit, body."

Says Donna Behler, director of the health center at Gettysburg College in Gettysburg, Pa., "Struggling to come to terms with one's identity can put a lot of pressure on a student. The integration of wellness practices in the student's life should be one of the main focuses at college."

Because wellness programs are new on campus, educators are finding a range of applications. Some campuses feature wellness programs as part of their general curriculum degree program. Other campus wellness programs directly serve and address the health needs of the entire student body and community.

At Buena Vista College the program, which began in 1984 with just physical education majors, has been expanded to all majors and now involves some 1,500 participants. The program covers six aspects of development: social, emotional, vocational, intellectual, physical and spiritual.

Buena Vista offers credit and non-credit courses, as well as seminars and workshops. Several juniors and seniors have designed their own majors mixing courses in stress management and fitness with psychology, sociology and business management courses.

"The broad base of subjects having to do with wellness make it a valuable skill in the workplace," says Moritz, who explains that many of her students plan to teach in or manage fitness or wellness facilities, or teach fitness in elementary schools.

The Wellness Program at William Jewell College in Liberty, Mo., was developed in response to poor fitness testing on the part of the college's employees. Designed for both faculty and students, the program includes regular seminars on aerobic exercise, stress, weight management and related issues such as breast cancer screening and CPR.

Rodger LaBeth, director of the Mabee Center for Physical Education at William Jewell College, believes the philosophy behind the program is, "If the body is working well, it naturally follows that mental ability is sharp."

At Hanover College in Hanover, Ind., students are required to take a new physical education course called Introduction to Wellness. The course combines lectures and lab work, introduces students to basic aerobic exercise and teaches them how to measure body fat, monitor heart rate and assess their overall wellness.

Salem College in Salem, W.Va., incorporates The Salem College Health Awareness Program into its core curriculum, requiring freshmen to take two courses in health awareness. Fitness programs for students, faculty and employees include testing, individually tailored programs and a computerized health profile.

The Krost Life Enrichment Program at Texas Lutheran College in Seguin, Texas, encourages students to have a health and fitness evaluation, followed by a Life Enrichment Planning Session. There, individual goals, values and commitments are discussed with the program's director-professor and seniors who are trained as peer counselors. Students participate in individually prescribed exercise programs with regularly scheduled reassessments.

The College of St. Catherine in St. Paul, Minn., sponsors a campus Health and Wellness Center that provides counseling to students and faculty in subjects as diverse as relaxation and biofeedback, personal fitness and eating disorders. The center is run by nurse practitioners and includes campus outreach programs about nutrition, anti-smoking and alcohol awareness.

"We emphasize wellness during students' visits," says Pat Hannon, an adult nurse practitioner and director of the center. "We try to prevent illness. We ask them about lifestyle habits, relationships and how they're doing in school. We offer lifestyle counseling, to help them set goals and go after what they want."

At Gettysburg College, the comprehensive wellness program includes a required health course for freshmen and a health center with a wellness resource center. One of its most important parts is outreach. The college offers individualized attention to students who need to discuss problems involving depression, stress, nutrition or eating disorders.

Diamond Design Adds Sparkle

Diamonds really are a girl's best friend — especially when they're knit into the yoke of a soft, pretty sweater. Consisting of only two pieces, front and back, with the sleeves knitted in as you go, the sweater is super-easy to put together. Best of all, this classic looks great with everything. With a change of accessories, it's perfect for any occasion.

The slightly nubby texture is achieved by using machine-washable sport-weight crimped yarn in simple seed stitch with a gauge of five stitches to the inch. Easy-to-follow directions are given for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 36, 40, and 44 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Soft and Sassy Sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-125287 with $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-125287 by sending a check or money order for $9.95 for small or medium or $11.95 for large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of white, peach or mint green.

Dear Pat: I have a pullover pattern that fits better than any I have ever tried, so I would like to use the same basic pattern to make a jacket, but don't know how to make the necessary adjustments. To complicate matters further, I don't want to use ribbing for the lower edges and front bands. Could you advise me? — Carol G., Winchester, Ind.

Dear Carol: First, divide the number of stitches required for the front by 2. For example, let's suppose your stitch gauge is 5 stitches to the inch and your pattern calls for 100 stitches for the front. Half of that is 50. So, for each front section, cast on 50 stitches plus enough extra stitches for the front band, and plan to use borders of a non-curling stitch such as garter or seed stitch.

The exact number of extra stitches would depend upon the desired width of the front border bands. Usually this would be from 1 to 1 1/2 inches. So, with a gauge of 5 stitches to the inch, you would cast on from 5 to 8 extra stitches for each front.

Another good choice would be to have a hem at the lower edge and turned-back facings for the front bands. Years ago, after making a jacket with these features, I was unhappy with bulkiness where the hem and front facings met. So I devised a way of making metered corners that works like a charm:

Cast on the number of stitches required for one-half of the pullover front, which in our example would be 50. Then, work a hem in stockinette stitch on needles a couple of sizes smaller than the needle you will use for the body of the sweater.

As you work the hem, increase 1 stitch at the front edge on every knit row, until you have added the number needed for a front band. In our example, for a faced band with a finished width of 1 1/2 inches, you would increase until you had added 7 stitches for a total of 57 stitches on the needle. Your hem is now completed.

At this point, change to the larger needles and with the wrong side facing, work a knit row for a horizontal hem-turning ridge. Now, at the front edge, continue to increase 1 every other row until you have added 8 more stitches (65 total) to complete the facing. The first stitch added will be slipped, purlwise on every right-side row to form a vertical turning ridge for the facing.

No more figuring is needed if you want an open front jacket, but if buttons are desired, you will have to fig-

Double-Ring Vows Spoken Saturday

Carolyn Jean Ward and Calvin Eugene Linton, both of Ayden, were united in marriage Saturday at 5 p.m. The Rev. Mary L. Phillips conducted the double-ring ceremony which took place at the Comfort Inn.

Sylvia Bullock and Wrenn Locke sang. Selections were "Give me Your Hand," "The Lord's Prayer" and "Here She Comes."

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Ward of Ayden and Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Linton of Philadelphia are parents of the couple.

Sheila Freeman of Winterville was maid of honor. The matron of honor was Irene Phillips of Greenville, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Patricia Mabry of Maury, cousin of the bride, and Linda Harrell and Velma Jones, both of Greenville. Konosha Harrell of Greenville was the flower girl.

Cecil Jones of Greenville was best man. The ring bearer was Jason Freeman of Winterville. Ushers were Nelson Cox of Ayden, and Jesse Phillips of Greenville, brothers-in-law of the bride, Fred Grimes of Greenville and Willie Goins of Bethel.

Sgt. Arthur Lee King of Goldsboro gave the bride in marriage. She wore a formal gown of white whisper satin designed with a high neckline of English net applied with satin floral motifs with sequins. The long sleeves of English net featured satin floral motifs with sequins and ended in calla points at the wrist. A pleated ruffle of satin accented the shoulder and encircled the back bodice. The fitted bodice of satin was designed with an asymmetrical floral motif ending in a dropped waist which featured a satin bow. The full skirt and attached chapel-length train were finished with a border of satin leaf motif. She wore a white satin teardrop chapeau with jeweled floral applique. It was attached to a fingertip veil of imported illusion with a pouf and French net with streamers. She carried a bouquet of white roses, bridal flowers with white and fuschia silk and lace ribbons.

The honor attendants wore fuschia brocade taffeta dresses styled with basque bodices and sweetheart necklines with full puffed sleeves. Bridesmaids wore dresses of fuschia tissue taffeta styled like those of the honor attendants. The dresses were tea-length and had full skirts. They wore baby's breath in their hair and carried bouquets of white roses, baby's breath and other flowers. The flower girl wore a full-length white dress.

Margarett Suggs of Greenville directed the ceremony.

A reception was held in the Arbor Room of the Comfort Inn.

Reader Prefers Given Name

DEAR ABBY: I am expecting a baby soon. If it's a girl, I want to name her "Abby." It's a beautiful name, but I'm not sure if it's a real name, or the nickname for "Abigail."

I have found "Abby" listed in one book of baby names, but most books list it as the nickname for "Abigail." In a world where we call a president "Jimmy," I still believe in using a formal name where proper, but I would rather give my child the name I am going to call her.

What do you think? You would know! — KAREN ROSIER, ELGIN, ILL.

DEAR KAREN: If you have a girl, name her whatever you wish, whether or not the name is listed in a book of baby names. Some people "invent" their own names. I have met some "Abbys" who were never "Abigail." Good luck to you and the new baby, whatever her (or his) name is.

DEAR ABBY: I sat in the seat ahead of you on a flight to Los Angeles. Although I was dying to talk with you, I understand that thousands of people must have that urge — and follow it daily — so I said nothing. But since you welcome letters, may I speak with you now?

I have known you to devote many columns to getting people to quit smoking. I doubt if those columns will cause one smoker to stop. They are addicted to nicotine just as heroin addicts, etc.

The best deterrent to cigarette smoking is peer pressure and legislation. Praise those people who demand that smoking not be allowed in their homes. If enough people were firm about it, more smokers would feel like outcasts and perhaps decide to quit. Making it difficult for a smoker to have a cigarette makes the time between his cigarettes increase, making it easier to quit.

Please, Abby, use the great power you have to persuade non-smokers to assert themselves when smokers try to light up in their homes. Persuade non-smokers to write to restaurants, sports arenas, airlines, any place where they are bothered by smoke, and complain! These complaints are heard!

Now, aren't you glad I didn't talk with you on the plane? — SANDRA LIPPS, SANTA MONICA

DEAR SANDRA: No, I would have taken notes in shorthand and used it in my column. You and I agree about smoking. Some smokers are, indeed, addicted. But neither peer pressure nor legislation will cure an addiction.

A smoker has to want to quit for his or her own reasons. Some get the "will" after the doctor says, "I just saw your X-rays, and I have some bad news for you."

I hate for that to happen to people I care about. Too many smokers say, "Well, I enjoy smoking — and it's my life." Actually, they more "crave" than enjoy it; they don't realize it's not only their lives, unless they have no one in the world who loves them, or depends upon them for something — if it's only friendship.

I could write a book — and one day I may. Thanks for writing, Sandra.

DEAR ABBY: After reading about the double standard concerning women wearing men's clothing, and vice versa, I had to write. I am happily married to a man who shares his closet with me. On a trip to Hawaii a few years ago, my luggage was lost, so I wore my husband's clothes until mine arrived — five days later! We are the same size — I am large for a woman, and he's small for a man.

He has worn some of my things, too, which doesn't make him less masculine in my eyes. He likes to wear my nighties and negligees because they feel so soft next to his skin.

Clothes do not make the man or the woman, Abby. — NO HANG-UPS IN OHIO

To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 ($3 in Canada) and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Center Studies Drugs For Kids

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Figuring drug dosages for children is more complicated than it might seem, and doctors must often rely on educated guesses when prescribing medicines for youngsters, a researcher at a Tennessee medical school says.

"There's a lot of information about drugs in adults when drugs come on the market and doctors start using them. But the general rule is that there is very little information, maybe almost no information, about these drugs in children," said William Evans, a pharmacy professor at the University of Tennessee, Memphis.

Evans directs the university's Center of Pediatric Pharmacokinetics and Therapeutics which coordinates the work of up to 20 drug researchers and their support staffs.

Wrapping up its second year in operation, the center spends about $1 million annually, most of which comes from various grants lined up by the individual researchers. The state of Tennessee chipped in $230,000 this year, and Evans said he hopes to get work in the future that will be financed by drug companies.

"Our studies range from clinical studies in which we give the drugs to patients to molecular studies in which we try to look at the level of genetic control of drug metabolism in children," Evans said.

It may seem, he said, that prescribing drugs for children would simply require cutting adult dosages to allow for younger patients' smaller size.

But a child's body metabolizes drugs differently than an adult's does, just as children burn food at different rates than grownups, Evans said.

"If you give the adult dose adjusted for their body size, you'll be giving too little and won't get the response you're looking for," he said.

Evans said his center, which includes researchers and clinical workers at LeBonheur Children's Medical Center and St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, looks at six to eight drugs a year.

"We try to focus what we're doing and not get spread too thin," he said.

Because of its involvement with St. Jude, an internationally known leader in leukemia research and treatment, the center has worked with several anti-cancer drugs.

"If you give enough of these drugs you can potentially cure a patient with certain types of cancer, but if you give too much you can produce a lot of toxicity," Evans said. "If you give too little, you don't get as good a response."

The program includes a computer center for analyzing research data and a laboratory where scientists search for new ways of measuring the way children metabolize drugs. Clinical studies generally rely on young patients from St. Jude or LeBonheur, Evans said.

One longterm study under way will involve 300 to 500 children who will take an across-the-counter cough suppressant called dextromethorphan. Through urine analyses, researchers will gather information on how the medicine is used by the youngsters' bodies.

The drug is especially suited for the kinds of studies the center conducts because it's safe and apparently is metabolized in the same way as many other related but less safe substances, Evans said.

"We can use that as our model and it will tell use something about 30 other drugs, many of which we couldn't give 300 children because they produce side effects," he said.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market swung upward in quiet trading today in an atmosphere of continuing caution as a number of 1987 approaches.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which fell 72.78 points Monday and Tuesday, recovered 16.74 to 1,943.63 in the first half hour today.

Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 713 up, 370 down and 532 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 21.37 billion shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said it was difficult to read much of significance into the market's recent fluctuations, given strong seasonal influences on stocks. In the past couple of days, they said, it was apparent that some investors were still selling stocks for tax purposes or to ready their portfolios for year-end reports to clients.

On the other side of the coin, some traders have been buying lately in hopes that depressed stocks might rally once those year-end pressures are lifted.

In today's economic news, the Commerce Department reported that the index of leading indicators fell 1.7 percent in November. A substantial drop had been widely expected.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines rose 1 to 117; American Telephone & Telegraph 1/8 to 26 7/8; General Electric 1/2 to 44 3/4, and American Express 1/8 to 22 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .85 to 137.69. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .51 at 255.79.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 16.08 to 1,926.89.

Decliners outpaced gainers by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 974 issues down, 511 up and 491 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 111.58 million shares, against 137.5 million in the previous session.

Standard & Poor Says Inflation To Be About 5 Percent In 1988

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer prices should rise a moderate 4.5 percent to 5 percent next year, helped by a decline in oil prices, according to an annual forecast.

Fears that a cheaper dollar will touch off high inflation by boosting import prices are overstated, Standard & Poor's Corp. chief economist David Blitzer said in releasing the report Tuesday.

"Moderate inflation is likely to be with us for a while," Blitzer said. This year's consumer price rise is likely to be about 4.5 percent.

Standard & Poor's analysts predicted modest price increases for natural gas, air fares, health care, leisure-time goods and food. They predicted auto prices would remain steady and electric bills would drop.

However, they predicted clothing prices would rise 7 percent to 10 percent because of higher raw materials costs and more expensive imports. Personal insurance rates are expected to climb at a 10 percent annual rate.

Blitzer said inflation will be helped by the recent plunge in oil prices and that the dollar's drop "is not the inflation threat that many have feared."

Here are the predictions by Standard & Poor's, a business information company owned by McGraw-Hill Inc.:

—AUTOS: Domestic auto prices will remain near current levels throughout 1988 and will continue to be below the prices of comparable foreign models. The average price of a domestic-made car was $13,418 in October 1987, 7.9 percent less than the average $14,573 for an imported car.

—NATURAL GAS: Consumer natural gas prices should rise about 3 percent, although regional shortages may lead to increases of slightly more.

—CLOTHING, APPLIANCES AND FURNITURE: Higher costs for cotton and wool will push up clothing prices, while higher costs of steel and other raw materials will make appliances more expensive. Furniture prices should remain unchanged.

—ELECTRICITY: Lower fuel costs and reduced construction activity will help cut electric bills in 1988. Lower taxes and reductions in utilities' allowed return on investment will also put a lid on bills.

—AIR TRAVEL: Air fares will be slightly higher, but discount fares will continue to be available, especially on heavily traveled routes.

—HEALTH CARE: Extensive government and corporate efforts to curb unnecessary spending and promote competition will reduce inflation in health care costs, but the rate of increase will continue to exceed the general inflation rate.

—INSURANCE: Homeowner insurance rates will rise 8 to 10 percent, while auto insurance will rise about 10 percent, which is more than the general inflation rate but less than the increases of the past two years.

—LEISURE GOODS: Consumer electronics goods from Japan may go up because of the stronger yen. Compact disk prices should fall, while movie tickets will increase about 5 percent to a national average of about $4.10.

—FOOD: Prices for food at home and in restaurants should rise 2 to 4 percent. Low feed costs will lead to increased production of red meat. Packaged foods will rise faster than the rate of inflation, while fresh fruit and vegetables will stay the same or possibly get cheaper.

Economic Activity Index Shows Plunge

The government's main forecasting gauge of economic activity plunged 1.7 percent in November, the biggest decline in more than six years, the Commerce Department said today.

The steep drop in the department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators, the first setback since January, reflected primarily the steep tumble in stock prices that occurred this fall.

The disappointing economic news followed continued declines in stocks and the dollar Tuesday in light trading wedged between Christmas and New Year's Day.

Also on Tuesday, oil prices rose and forecasters predicted moderate inflation but sharply decreased job growth in 1988.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials on Tuesday fell 16.08 to 1,926.89 in light trading, as two issues fell for every one that rose on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said buying interest was virtually non-existent, in large part because most traders already had closed out their books for the year last week.

Overnight temperatures from the Outer Banks to the mountains were in the 20s — the coldest in almost a year.

"We haven't had one this cold since Jan. 27, when it got down to 19," said Bob Phillips, a National Weather Service forecaster in Charlotte.

In the North Carolina mountains, where rain and warm weather washed out the Christmas weekend, up to 4 inches of natural snow blanketed the slopes Tuesday. Operators were ecstatic.

"It couldn't be any better," said Brad Moretz, a spokesman for Appalachian ski mountain in Blowing Rock. The resort had a capacity crowd within an hour of its 9 a.m. opening.

"It's snowing, 20 degrees, we're open, making snow and everybody's happy," he said.

The snow was an inch deep in Asheville Tuesday, 2 inches in Boone, 3 inches on Grandfather Mountain and 6 inches on Mount Mitchell. The North Carolina Highway Patrol said roads were snow-covered in eight northwestern counties.

Highs will be in the 40s in North Carolina today, with lows once again in the 20s tonight. New Year's Day should be sunny with highs around 50.

The Catawba County house that was knocked down was framed but had no siding.

"The wind got caught in the garage," said Jean Killian, wife of builder Ervin Killian. "It blew straight into the garage and blew it down."

No one was injured.

Three crews from the state's Department of Transportation removed 12 trees Tuesday that had fallen on roads around Forsyth County.

"The wind was really whipping up there," said Paul A. Yates, road maintenance supervisor at the Winston-Salem office.

"We are getting pretty well caught up if the wind would just quit blowing so hard," Yates said.

At the National Weather Service office at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport Tuesday, the wind gusted to 47 mph between 1 p.m. and 2 p.m., Phillips said.

Officials said recent rain was partly responsible for the many fallen trees.

"It's been soaking in for some time," said Charlotte assistant city arborist Marmon Thompson. "The ground is softer and less likely to hold up the big trees."

Duke Power Co. officials said some 5,000 customers were affected by scattered outages in Mecklenburg County.

Power crews began working at noon to restore power to nearly 4,300 customers in Winston-Salem and Forsyth County, said George J. Wackerhagen, the manager of engineering, construction and operations at Duke Power Co.

"We were barely able to keep up," he said.

In most cases, only small areas were affected by each power outage.

Wackerhagen said, however, that 1,400 customers along U.S. 158 near Hanes Mall were affected when a tree knocked down a power line in that area. Power was restored there by 5 p.m.

Power companies in other areas also reported outages.

Joe M. Price, electrical superintendent for Duke Power's Elkin branch, reported scattered outages in that service area, which includes Yadkin County, southwestern Surry County and a small part of eastern Wilkes County.

At one time, about 1,500 customers were without power, he said. Power had been restored for most customers by late afternoon, although some customers were without power for as long as two hours, he said.

Lose Leads East Carolina To 86-63 Win Over 'Skins In Music City Consolation

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Scoring 31 points was nice, according to East Carolina swingman Reed Lose, but he said the key to the Pirates' 86-63 win over Miami of Ohio was defense.

"We work so hard on defense and our pressure makes a lot of teams get uptight and hurry things," said the sophomore from Harrisburg, Pa. "Our defense was the key."

Lose's 31 points and 12 rebounds were both career highs and keyed the Pirates past the Redskins in the consolation game of the Music City Invitational basketball tournament Tuesday night.

The win broke a four-game losing streak and raised ECU's record to 3-5 on the year.

ECU jumped out in front early, moving out to a 21-9 lead with 9:59 remaining in the opening half on a 3-point basket by Kenny Murphy. Lose had eight points during the early spot.

Miami pulled within 21-11 on a follow shot by Jeff Fuerst, but that was as close as the Redskins would get from there.

"Our pressure defense put them out of it early," said ECU coach Mike Steele. "I was worried about how tired our guys might be but the guys responded well."

After Miami pulled within 10 at 21-11 early on, ECU went on a 12-3 spurt to regain control.

Jeff Kelly scored on a jumper off the fast break to make it 25-11. Fuerst countered for Miami with a free throw to make it 25-12.

With 5:29 to go in the half, Lose nailed a 3-pointer to move the lead to 28-12. After a Miami miss, Gus Hill hit another 3-pointer for the Bucs and the lead was up to 19 at 31-12. Hill added another basket with 3:14 to go to make it 33-12 and the Redskins were sinking fast.

The Pirates led by 20 at the half, 38-18, but unlike the night before against Vanderbilt, they didn't falter in the second half.

"We got down too much in both games," said Miami coach Jerry Peirson, whose team also fell behind early in a 77-71 loss to Cornell Monday night.

"I was surprised at that. I thought we were ready to play. We tried hard but we made too many mistakes."

The Pirates maintained the lead throughout, overcoming a slight drought midway through the second half, to record their largest victory margin of the year.

After trailing by as many as 25, Miami pulled to within 13 at 57-44 with 7:33 to go on a free throw by Fuerst.

But that was as close as the Redskins would get. Murphy hit two free throws with 7:10 to go and Hill added two more less than 20 seconds later to make it 61-44.

From there, it was just a matter of how wide a margin the victory would be.

Still, despite the big lead, Steele said he was worried.

"The hardest thing for a young team to do is to play with a lead," he said. "I was concerned in the second half."

But the Pirates' youth didn't seem to hurt them on this night.

"We played like a young team and East Carolina played like a veteran team," Peirson said. "Yet we have a lot of veterans."

In addition to Lose, two other Pirates' had career high scoring totals against the Redskins. Murphy scored 16 points while Kelly had 11.

Gus Hill also added 21 points for the Pirates.

Miami guard Eric Newsome was averaging 23.7 points a game coming in to the game, but scored only six against the Pirates.

Putting together two good halves was a key, according to Steele.

"I think it (the win) was important," he said. "It was just a consolation game but we can't be satisfied with playing a good half against Maryland or a good half against Vanderbilt. We can't get into the habit of losing too many games."

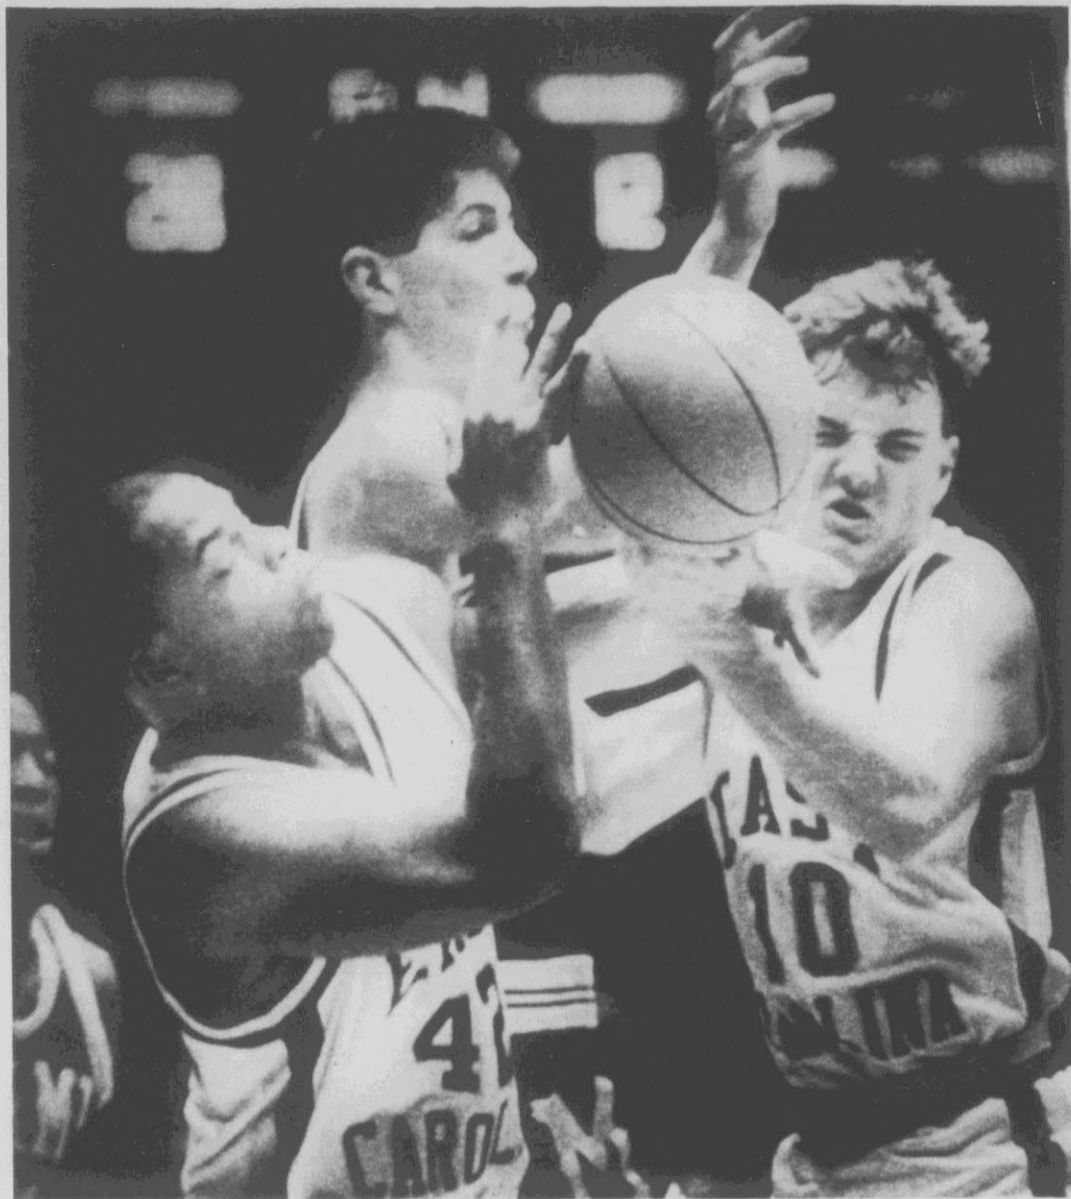

Miami falls to 2-8. ECU returns to action Jan. 2 hosting Winthrop.

Vanderbilt Wins Its Own Tourney; Lose Is All-Star

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vanderbilt went ahead early and then held off a second half charge by Cornell to take a 93-79 win in the finals of the Music City Invitational basketball tournament Tuesday night.

Vanderbilt led 44-36 at the half but Cornell closed to within 79-72 on two free throws by Greg Gilda, but that was as close as the score would get as Vanderbilt, behind Will Perdue, took control from there.

First, Barry Booker nailed a 3-pointer to make it 82-72. Then, Perdue dunked after a Cornell turnover to make it 84-73.

Mike Millane countered with two free throws to pull the Big Red within 84-75.

Barry Goheen then hit two free throws to make it 86-75. Perdue followed with a dunk and was fouled. His free throw made it 89-75. The Big Red turned the ball over on the next possession and Perdue drew a foul on the other end. He hit two more free throws to make it 91-75 and that, for all intents and purposes was it.

Botched Reunion...The consolation game for the tournament could have featured a matchup of former high school teammates had it not been for injuries suffered to the Pirates' Dominique Martin and the Redskins' Trimill Haywood.

The two were teammates at Martin Luther King High School in Chicago. Martin, a 6-6 junior college transfer, graduated with Haywood, a 6-6 red-shirt sophomore forward. Both suffered foot injuries in Monday night in the first round of the tournament as ECU lost 99-63 to host Vanderbilt, while Miami dropped a 77-71 decision to Cornell.

Diminutive guards...Miami's leading scorer is 5-8 senior Eric Newsome, who plays the off-guard for the Redskins. Coming into the game he was averaging 23.7 points per game and he hit for six against the Pirates.

For one of the few times this season, ECU guards Jeff Kelly (a 5-9 junior) and Jimmy Hinton (a 5-4 freshman) were not at a height disadvantage. Hinton, however, did not play against Miami because of a thigh injury.

Scrappy Pirates...Vanderbilt coach C.M. Newton said he was impressed that ECU never gave up against his taller Commodores in their 99-63 win.

"I'll tell you, and I told Mike Steele this, his team plays hard, boy they play hard," Newton said. "(Especially) to be as small as they are, and they don't have a lot of players, but they play hard."

Commodore center Will Perdue echoed his coaches' sentiments. "It's got to be really difficult in Division I

Southern Cal Tops Lady Bucs

NORFOLK, Va. — Southern Cal used a pressing defense all over the floor and forced East Carolina into 35 turnovers Monday night, racing to an 89-61 victory in the first round of the Reebok Roundball Classic basketball tournament at Old Dominion University.

Old Dominion defeated Dayton in the other game and will meet Southern Cal in the championship game tonight at 8 p.m. ECU will face Dayton in the consolation game at 6 p.m.

After not playing for two-weeks, the rust was evident on the Lady Pirates, who also went with an experimental lineup for the game. Coach Pat Pierson started Chris O'Connor at the point, instead of her usual off-guard position, with Pam Williams at the off-guard.

It met with mixed results. "It's hard to win anytime you may have many turnovers," Pierson said. "I'm really concerned about (that). You also have to give credit to Southern Cal's defensive pressure. They were very quick and gave us fits all night."

"We have to put this game behind us and try to come out of this tournament with a .500 record."

The Lady Pirates never led in the game and were tied only at 2-2. After that, Southern Cal took complete control of the game.

They ran out to a 20-9 lead, stretched it to 30-12, 40-19 and 50-26. Their biggest lead of the first half was 53-26, just before the half ended at 53-28.

In the second half, the Women of Troy boosted their lead to 75-39 with 11:17 left, their biggest edge of the night.

Ironically, East Carolina outrebounded Southern Cal, 46-33, led by 14 by Alma Bethea and 12 by Monique Pompili.

Southern Cal's scoring was paced by Karon Howell with 21 points. She hit in seven of nine shots from the floor, including one 3-pointer, and was six of eight at the stripe.

Tammy Hammond added 17 while Holly Ford had 16, Cherie Nelson had 13 and Paula Tyers had 12.

East Carolina's scoring was led by Gretta O'Neal Savage with 20 points while Pompili had 15.

The loss drops the Lady Pirates to 3-5 on the season.

Georgia Rallies To Nip Arkansas In Liberty Bowl

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Georgia Coach Vince Dooley figures his 15th-ranked Bulldogs' come-from-behind victory over Arkansas in the Liberty Bowl may be a good omen.

The Bulldogs capped a 9-3 season with a 39-yard field goal by John Kasay as time expired Tuesday night to defeat the Razorbacks 20-17.

"I'm very proud of the way our team came back and won the ball game. We've lost games in the last second recently, so it's good to win one in the same way," Dooley said.

The Bulldogs escaped disaster with 1:42 left in the game when Arkansas placekicker Kendall Trainor was wide to the left as he attempted to break a 17-17 deadlock from 36 yards out.

Arkansas forced the Bulldogs to punt and wanted to mount a last-gasp drive from its own 40-yard line.

The Razorbacks' victory hopes were dashed quickly, however, as Georgia cornerback Carver Russaw intercepted a first-down pass by Greg Thomas at the Arkansas 43.

Four plays later Kasay sent the Bulldogs home a bowl winner for the first time in four years.

"I guess the turning point in the game was Russaw's interception," Dooley said.

Kasay, a freshman who had hit only one of two field goal attempts during the regular season, was given placement duties for the game after junior kicker Steve Crumley was suspended for the game by Dooley for breaking team rules.

Kasay said he was ready for the final-second pressure.

"You prepare for this (the pressure) in your mind for hours and hours," he said. "I knew the kick was good when I hit it. I could just feel it. It's a feeling a kicker gets when he hits the ball good."

Georgia's 13-point comeback in the fourth quarter took some of the luster off the performance of the Razorbacks' Thomas, who was voted the game's MVP.

Thomas rushed for 79 yards on 13 carries, scoring on runs of 10 yards and 1 yard. He completed seven passes for 86 yards.

Arkansas took a 3-0 lead with 6:37 in the first quarter on a 43-yard field goal by Trainor.

After Georgia moved in front 7-3 on a 1-yard run by Lars Tate, the Razorbacks appeared to take control.

Thomas guided the Razorbacks 68 yards in the final minutes of the second half to push Arkansas into a 10-7 lead.

Arkansas retained its momentum at the start of the second half, taking the kickoff and driving 76 yards in only eight plays to forge a 17-7 advantage on Thomas' 1-yard scoring run.

Georgia refused to fold, however, pulling within 17-10 on a 24-yard field goal by Kasay on the first play of the fourth quarter and moving into a 17-17 deadlock with 10:23 left to play on a 5-yard scoring run by James Jackson.

The Bulldogs got the opportunity to pull even when cornerback Rusty Beasley intercepted a deflected pass thrown by Thomas at the Razorback 39 with 13:20 remaining.

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield said the decision may have turned on a holding penalty that pushed his Razorbacks from field position at the Bulldog 5 to the 19-yard line.

"We had a great drive in the fourth quarter from our 12 to their 5. Then we had a crucial holding penalty. If not for the penalty, we would have been kicking from the 5 to win," Hatfield said.

Hatfield said the loss mirrored some the Razorbacks' frustrations during their 9-4 season.

Washington, Perquimans Claim Tourney Victories

WASHINGTON — Washington and Perquimans earned opening round victories in the Washington Daily News Invitational Basketball Tournament Tuesday night.

The Pam Pack had a record-breaking performance in routing Chocowinity, 92-41, while Perquimans put down Williamston, 75-69.

Washington set new tournament records for field goals (39), field goal attempts (86), points (92), winning margin (51), and rebounds (64) in taking its victory.

The Pam Pack shot out to a 25-8 lead in the first quarter and was never in trouble after the opening minutes of the game. By halftime, Washington held a 40-22 margin.

In the third quarter, the Pam Pack continued to pull away, holding a 64-34 lead as the final eight minutes opened. In that, they outscored Chocowinity, 28-7.

Ryan Dixon led Washington with 15 points while Tyrone Lodge had 13, Jason Smith had 12, and Joe Daniels and Bob Rhodes each had 12. Martin Abdullah had 14 to pace Chocowinity.

In the first game of the evening, Perquimans inched out into a 19-14 lead over Williamston in the first period. Williamston came back in the second frame with a 24-18 margin, and claimed a 38-37 halftime lead.

Williamston held onto the lead in the third period and was up, 58-55 going into the final quarter. In that, however, Perquimans outit the Tigers, 20-11, to charge ahead and take the win.

George Frierson led Perquimans with 22 points while Jojo Parker and Rodney Hill each had 13 and Darnell Spellman had 10. Williamston was led by Guy Spruill with 25 while Vince Speller had 10.

Tonight, Williamston faces Chocowinity for the consolation title while Washington and Perquimans meet for the title.

Hess Gets First Start In Bowl

SAN DIEGO (AP) — In his last college game, Jay Hess of Iowa is getting his first start.

A fifth-year senior, Hess is one of two reserves thrust into starting roles for Iowa, 9-3, in tonight's Holiday Bowl against Wyoming, 10-2, because of the suspensions of free safety Dwight Sistrunk, defensive end Joe Mott and reserve defensive lineman Paul Glonek.

Hess was switched to defensive back last spring after he couldn't quite make it into the Iowa lineup as a quarterback and wide receiver following his transfer from Texas A&M four years ago.

"It's more or less a dream that's turned into reality. Starting in the Holiday Bowl makes up for five years of frustration," said Hess, who missed most of the year with a knee injury after seeing no action in 1986.

He will play at strong safety while Kerry Burt, who usually starts at strong safety, shifts to free safety in place of Sistrunk.

"I'm just really starting to feel the pressure now," Hess said. "But I'm a person that really doesn't get nervous. When the pressure is on, that's when I'm at my best. I feel they (my defensive teammates) have confidence in me, too."

Reserve defensive lineman Sean Ridley is the numerical replacement for Mott, who played strongside end across from the opponents' tight end.

Defensive end Mike Burke, who normally plays weakside end, has been shifted to the strong side for tonight's game. That makes four personnel shifts forced by last week's suspensions, which were imposed for undisclosed disciplinary reasons.

"Those guys definitely made a quality contribution to the team and turned in some big plays for us," Ridley said of the suspended players. "But we just have to step in there. It's not like we haven't done it before."

Bill Brashier, defensive coordinator for the 18th-ranked Hawkeyes, said Iowa's preparations were complicated by the suspensions as well as the challenge posed by Wyoming, which ranked fourth in the nation in total offense (471.3 yards a game).

"You know we're a little pressed without them, but the other kids have to take up the slack," Brashier said.

He likened the suspensions to an injury situation.

"Any time you're missing a player it might concern you a little bit but we've never been a team to really worry a whole lot about injuries," Brashier said. "We just put the next guy in there and they're usually ready to play."

Wyoming quarterback Craig Burnett described Sistrunk and Mott as two of Iowa's best defensive players, but he added he didn't think their suspensions would sap Iowa's defensive strength. The Hawkeyes have the nation's 16th-ranked defense, anchored in the middle by noseguard Dave Haight, an all-Big Ten selection who led the team with 119 tackles and six quarterback sacks.

"Haight is a great ballplayer," Burnett said. "I hope we can shut them down up front. I think that's going to be our main problem. If we can hold them off up front, I think we have a real good shot against them."

Wyoming went 8-0 in Western Athletic Conference play to gain the Holiday Bowl bid as WAC champion. It is the Cowboys' first bowl appearance since a 41-7 loss to Oklahoma in the 1976 Fiesta Bowl.

"I think that they feel this is a rewarding experience to participate in the Holiday Bowl," Paul Roch, Wyoming's first-year coach, said. "Overall, their attitude is good and they're enthusiastic about playing in the game."

While the defensive juggling concerns Iowa Coach Hayden Fry, he noted that the Hawkeyes have enough offensive firepower to match Wyoming's wide-open style. Iowa, led by quarterback Chuck Hartlieb, averaged 437.8 yards a game to rank 11th nationally and had the best passing game in the Big Ten with a 296.6-yard average.

"We have very similar type football games, actually," said Fry, who has taken the Hawkeyes to seven straight bowl games, including a second straight trip to the Holiday Bowl.

"Both teams are capable of moving the football, and for years in my opinion the Holiday Bowl has been the most exciting bowl game in America," Fry said. "I see no reason to change that pattern. I think it will be an exceptional ball game, an explosive ball game. I'm not belittling either defense ... but there's just something about the environment of a bowl game."

With the exception of the 1982 Holiday Bowl, a 47-17 victory for Ohio State over Brigham Young, no Holiday Bowl has been settled by more than seven points. All of those eight close games have been decided in the final two minutes, including four by one point.

In last year's Holiday Bowl, Iowa beat San Diego State 39-38 on a last-second field goal.

A sellout crowd of about 62,000 was expected for tonight's Holiday Bowl at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium.

Charles Barkley of the Philadelphia 76ers led the NBA in rebounding average in the 1986-87 season with 14.6. He is 6 foot 6 and was the first man 6 foot 6 or shorter to lead in rebounds in over 30 years.

Lady Rams Gain Tourney Finals

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's girls advanced to the finals of the Tri-County Basketball Tournament, being played at the Rams' home court, but the Rams fell short in their try for the finals.

Greene Central's girls topped Acme-Delco, 52-25, and will face South Lenoir, a 48-44 victor over North Lenoir in the other girls' contest, for the championship tonight.

North Lenoir slipped past Greene Central, 72-70, in the boys' division, and will go up against South Lenoir, a 64-54 winner over Acme-Delco.

Greene Central's boys slipped out into an 18-11 lead in the first quarter of their game and added a 17-15 margin in the second period. That left the Rams up, 35-24, at intermission.

But in the third period, Dave Hinson led a 3-point barrage, hitting three himself as the team hit a total of four, outscoring the Rams, 28-13. That pushed the Hawks into a 52-48 lead. The Rams tried to rally, gaining the ball with 1:12 left and tied at 70-70. They managed to hold onto the ball until eight seconds remained, then had the ball stolen and fed to Hinson, who scored the winning goal at the horn.

Hinson led North Lenoir with 23 points while Leon Morgan added 16 and Glen Whitley and Will Sutton each had 10. Tyrone Hardy led Greene Central with 21, while Tyrone Streeter had 18 and Anthony Jones had 11.

Acme-Delco held a slim 10-9 lead after one period of the girls' game, but Greene Central came back with a 12-8 margin in the second period. That gave the Lady Rams a 21-18 lead to take into the locker rooms.

In the third period, Greene Central outit Acme-Delco, 15-4, to push out to a 36-22 lead. The Lady Rams added a 16-3 margin in the final period to win going away.

Chanel Hooker led Greene Central with 21 points. Nichole King led Acme-Delco with 12.

Duke Crushes Florida By 93-76

By The Associated Press
Duke ranks one notch behind Florida in the national rankings, but the Blue Devils finished 17 points ahead when the two teams met in the opening round of the Fiesta Bowl tournament.

"I was surprised we won by as much as we did," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said Tuesday after his ninth-ranked Blue Devils defeated No. 8 Florida 93-76. "I think if we played them tomorrow they might beat us."

"It was an outstanding game. I was pleased with our defense. It created a lot of fast breaks and opened up a lot of breaks."

Duke's victory improved its record to 6-0 and sent the Blue Devils into the championship game tonight against No. 1 Arizona.

In other games involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams, North Carolina State defeated 20th-ranked Louisville 80-75 in the Rainbow Classic; 11th-ranked Purdue defeated Wake Forest 81-73 in the first round of the Palm Beach Classic; Georgia Tech defeated William and Mary 90-59 in the first round of the Cotton States Classic Tournament; and Clemson defeated Florida International 98-47 to take third place in the South Florida Invitational tournament.

"We were ready to play, but you get into a game like that and you're all shook up, and all of a sudden you're 25 down," Florida Coach Norm Sloan said. "We haven't played against a team that quick on defense and also we played a poor game." Kevin Strickland led five Duke with 21 points. Danny Ferry finished with 16, John Smith 17, Robert Brickey 13 and Phil Henderson 11.

Florida's 7-2 center, Dwayne Williams & Mary

Schnitzius, scored 21 points and guard Vernon Maxwell added 17. Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said it was his team's work on the boards that paid off with the upset over Louisville.

"The game came down to critical rebounds. We did a great job. We got the rebound when we had to," Valvano said following the 80-75 victory.

"Our game plan was to take it inside tonight. Charles Shackelford and Chucky Brown did it for us underneath," he said.

Louisville Coach Denny Crum said "it came down to shots. We missed ours. They made theirs. That's the nature of a great team."

Crum said the Cardinals "had no patience on offense and they capitalized on our mistakes."

Brown scored 25 points lead North Carolina State, 5-2. The Wolfpack got 18 points from Charles Shackelford, while Vinny Del Negro and Rod Monroe had 15 each.

Pervis Ellison had 13 for Louisville, 4-3, while Mike Abram had 12, Keith Williams and Felton Spencer 11 each and Kenny Payne 10. Horrible and horrendous were among the adjectives Purdue coach Gene Keady used in describing the 11th-ranked Boilermakers' 81-73 victory over Wake Forest.

Troy Lewis made seven 3-point shots, all in the first half, and scored 31 points to lead Purdue, but Keady qualified his praise of the senior guard.

"The first half was about as well as he has ever played," Keady said. "The second half his defense was just horrible. He couldn't stop anybody."

"In the first half we played about as well as we have all year," Keady said. "In the second half, instead of running their offense, they just took the ball to the hoop on dribbles, and we couldn't contain any dribbles. Our defense was really horrendous the second half."

Everette Stephens had 12 points and eight assists for Purdue, which has won eight straight. Melvin McCants and Todd Mitchell added 12 points each.

Sam Ivy scored 19 points, Robert Siler 15, David Carlyle 12 and reserve

Cal Boyd 11 for Wake Forest, 3-5. Ralph Kitley grabbed 14 rebounds for the Deacons, who had a 42-28 rebounding advantage.

"They're a great team," Deacons Coach Bob Staak said. "They're going to be heard from around the country, although I know they play in a tough conference. I think they're as good as any team in our league and better than most."

Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins admitted William and Mary was mismatched against his Yellow Jackets.

"Obviously William and Mary was outmanned," Cremins said after his Yellow Jackets beat the Tribe 90-59. "They're a better team than they showed tonight, I think."

"Offensively, we're tough," Cremins admitted. "We wanted to go to (Tom) Hammonds and (Duane) Ferrell down low. Defensively, we're not there yet."

"Georgia Tech was ready to play," said William and Mary Coach Chuck Swenson said. "The only chance we had is if they wouldn't have been ready to play."

Five Yellow Jackets scored in double figures, led by Ferrell with 20 points and 10 rebounds. Dennis Scott added 18 points, including four-of-four from 3-point range. Bryan Oliver got 17, Munlyn wound up with 11 and Hammonds scored 10. Craig Neal was the only starter not in double figures, but he had 11 assists to go with five points.

Tim Trout led the Tribe, 1-5, with 23 points and 11 rebounds. Mark Batzel added 17 points.

Clemson's Elden Campbell scored 24 of his 26 points in the first half to match Florida International's halftime total.

Clemson, a 93-88 loser to Michigan in Monday's first round, improved its record to 7-2. It was the seventh consecutive loss for Florida International, 1-7.

Steve Truiett and Robert Rowe each scored eight points to lead Florida International.

Florida International, playing its first season in NCAA Division I, trailed by as many as 52 points in the second half after cutting Clemson's lead to 27.

multiple thereof. The principal of and any redemption premium on each bond will be payable to the registered owner thereof or his registered assigns or legal representative, upon the presentation and surrender thereof, at the office of the Trust Company, Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, N.A., in the City of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, the registrar, transfer agent and paying agent for the bonds. Interest will be payable on June 1, 1988 and semiannually thereafter on each December 1 and June 1 to the person appearing on the registration books of the Town as the registered owner at the close of business on the record date for such interest, which shall be the 15th day (whether or not a business day) of the calendar month next preceding such interest payment date, by check mailed to such person at his address as it appears on such registration books.

The bonds will be general obligations of the Town of Bethel, all the taxable and tangible personal property within which will be subject to the levy of an ad valorem tax, without limitation as to rate or amount, to pay the bonds and the interest thereon. The bonds maturing on June 1, 1989 and thereafter will be subject to redemption prior to maturity, at the option of the Town, from any moneys that may be made available for such purpose, on not more than 60 nor less than 30 days' notice mailed to the registered owners, either in whole on any date not earlier than June 1, 1988 or in part in inverse order of their maturities on an interest payment date not earlier than June 1, 1988, at the principal amount of the bonds to be redeemed, together with interest accrued thereon to the date fixed for redemption, plus a redemption premium of 1/2 of 1% of the principal amount of each bond to be redeemed for each calendar year or part thereof between the redemption date and the maturity date of such bond, such premium not to exceed the amount of such principal amount. If less than all the bonds of any one maturity shall be called for redemption, the particular bonds or portions of bonds to be redeemed shall be selected by lot by the Town in such manner as it may determine.

Bidders are requested to name the interest rate or rates, in multiples of 1/4 or 1/10 of 1%, and each bidder must specify his bid and the amount and the maturities of the bonds of each rate. No interest rate named for any maturity may be lower than the interest rate named for any prior maturity. No bid may name more than six interest rates, any of which may be repeated. All bonds maturing on the same date must bear interest at the same rate, and the interest rate on any bond shall be the same throughout its life. No bid for less than the face value of the bonds plus accrued interest will be entertained. The bonds will be awarded to the bidder offering to purchase the bonds at the lowest interest cost to the Town, such cost to be determined by deducting the amount of any premium bid from the aggregate amount of interest upon all of the bonds from the date until their respective maturities.

Each bid must be submitted on a form to be furnished with additional information by the undersigned, must be enclosed in a sealed envelope marked "Bid for Bonds" and must be accompanied by an official bank check, a cashier's check or a certified check upon an incorporated bank or trust company for $7,600, payable unconditionally to the order of the State Treasurer of North Carolina, on which no interest will be allowed. Award or rejection of bids will be made on the date above stated for receipt of bids and checks of unsuccessful bidders will be returned immediately. The check of the successful bidder will be cashed by the State Treasurer and invested for the benefit of the Town and at closing the principal amount of such check will be applied as partial payment for the bonds. In the event that the successful bidder fails to comply with the terms of his bid, the proceeds of such check will be retained as a deposit for full liquidated damages. If the Town fails to deliver the bonds, then the proceeds of such check and any interest earnings will be remitted to the successful bidder as and for full liquidated damages.

It is anticipated that CUSIP identification numbers will be printed on the bonds, but neither the failure to print such number on any bond nor any error with respect thereto shall constitute cause for failure or refusal by the successful bidder to accept delivery of or pay for the bonds in accordance with the terms of his bid. All expenses in relation to the printing of CUSIP numbers on the bonds and the CUSIP Service Bureau charge for the assignment of said numbers shall be paid for by the Town.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish prior to the delivery of the bonds a certificate substantially in the form attached to this Notice and Blank Proposal relating to the bonds and acceptable to Bond Counsel as to the "issue price" of the bonds within the meaning of Section 1273 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code").

The bonds will be delivered at the corporate trust office of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, N.A., in the City of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, on or about January 19, 1988 against payment therefor in Federal Reserve funds and the successful bidder will be responsible for making arrangements with Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, N.A., regarding such payment. The bonds will be delivered in such authorized denominations and registered in such names as the successful bidder may request no later than five business days prior to the date of delivery. If the successful bidder fails to submit such information by the required time, then a single bond will be issued for each maturity date registered in the name of the successful bidder or the senior manager of the successful bidding group.

The approving opinion of Brown & Wood, New York City, Bond Counsel, will be furnished about January 19, 1988 and will be printed on each bond. There will also be furnished the usual closing papers. The Code prohibits the deduction of interest on indebtedness incurred or continued by a bank or other financial institution to purchase or carry tax exempt obligations, such as the bonds. The Code, however, contains a limited exception to this provision which permits a 60% deduction for interest for financial institutions to the extent that they purchase directly or in the secondary market obligations of certain governmental units (i) that, together with all subordinate entities thereof, do not reasonably expect to issue more than $10,000,000 of tax-exempt obligations (not counting private-actively bonds except for qualified 501 (c)(3) bonds) in any calendar year and (ii) that designate such obligations as qualifying for such exception. In the resolution providing for the issuance of bonds the Town has (i) represented that it reasonably expects that it and all subordinate entities thereof will not issue more than $10,000,000 of tax-exempt obligations (other than private-actively bonds except for qualified 501 (c)(3) bonds) during calendar year 1988 and (ii) designated the bonds as qualifying for such exception. The right to reject all bids is reserved.

Copies of the Notice and Blank Proposal relating to the bonds may be obtained from the Local Government Commission, Albemarle Building, 325 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina 27611. ## Great Dismal Swamp: History Comes Alive For All Visitors

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

GREAT DISMAL SWAMP — For centuries in this huge mysterious swamp astride the Virginia-North Carolina line, a marshy place — thick with a tangle of dense forest, vines, canebrakes, briers and shrub bogs — there have been reported sightings of a ghostly woman paddling her white canoe.

It goes back to an Indian legend handed down one generation to the next, a legend repeated to this day.

An Indian maiden died just before her wedding, so the story goes, and she is still seen from time to time — especially on gloomy, foggy days and moonlit nights — paddling her white canoe across Lake Drummond, a circular three-mile-diameter lake in the middle of the Great Dismal Swamp.

The lake, you should know, is named after William Drummond, first Colonial governor of North Carolina (1663-1667), who discovered it while serving as a member of a survey party. Drummond was later hanged, drawn and quartered for being a traitor.

Other well-known 19th-Century poets and authors, in addition to Thomas Moore, wrote about this place, including Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," who did an 1839 novel called "Dred: a Tale of the Great Dismal Swamp."

No one lives here today, but runaway slaves did before the Emancipation Proclamation. History records that more than 1,000 slaves lived in the thick undergrowth — many surreptitiously eking out a living making shingles. Stowe's novel "Dred" was about the slaves who lived in the Great Dismal Swamp.

The runaway slaves were hunted down by men following packs of dogs. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was so disturbed by that inhumane practice that in 1842, he penned the poem "The Slave in the Dismal Swamp."

The Great Dismal Swamp can be a spooky place. Strange glows and eerie lights spiraling up in the middle of the night in the dense watery thickets are luminescent, caused by burning methane from decaying vegetation.

All who live nearby recount a litany of folklore, swamp tales about characters like an old lady named Aunt Paula who haunts the neighborhood.

The Great Dismal Swamp, 78,000 acres in Virginia and 26,000 acres in North Carolina, today is one of 430 U.S. Fish and Wildlife refuges in America.

"We get phone calls everyday from people who want to know if the name is a joke. They ask: 'What in the world is a Great Dismal Swamp?'" said Jim Oland, 44, manager of the refuge. "They cannot imagine what it is."

"It can be pretty dismal on hot, humid summer days when the mosquitoes, yellow flies, ticks and red bugs are biting," Oland admitted.

There is minimal public use of the area other than deer hunting in the fall and bird watching mostly in the spring. No one is permitted to drive into the Great Dismal Swamp, but there is a network of 150 miles of old dirt roads for hiking or bicycling. Fish and Wildlife personnel use the roads to patrol and manage the area.

If George Washington had had his way, there would be no Great Dismal Swamp today. As it is, the swamp is one-third of what it was.

Washington visited the swamp many times, the first time in May 1763. He envisioned draining the swamp with a series of canals, harvesting the timber and then converting the swamp into rice and cotton farms.

"In spring, water flows throughout the woods a foot deep and deeper," Oland noted. "Most of the rest of the year this is all marshland, but you don't see water everywhere as you do during spring."

Washington and six friends, including Patrick Henry, formed two companies, the Adventurers for Draining the Great Dismal Swamp and the Dismal Swamp Land Co., to log and eventually farm the swamp.

A sign marks the site of Dismal Town, Washington's headquarters, near the beginning of the 4½-mile-long Washington Ditch, which was dug by one of the first president's companies and is still here.

"But the ventures failed. If Washington had been successful, the Great Dismal Swamp would be but a memory today," Oland said. "If Washington had the equipment and modern-day techniques, the swamp would have been gone a long time ago."

Through the years, loggers, however, did harvest most of the cypress and Atlantic-white-cedar (juniper) stands in the swamp. The loggers built the dirt roads and the drainage ditches that are in the Great Dismal Swamp. Cypress, once the predominant tree in the swamp, now covers only about 12 percent of it.

What's left of the Great Dismal Swamp became a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Refuge on Feb. 22, 1973, George Washington's birthday, when the Union Camp Corp. deeded 49,000 acres, its landholdings in the Great Dismal Swamp, to the federal government in return for a tax write-off of $12.6 million. It is one of the few large wild areas left in the East.

On a hike along a mile-long boardwalk through the swamp, Oland talked about Fish and Wildlife's 125-year master plan to manage the Great Dismal Swamp.

"Most places have 5- or 10-year master plans. Not here. Our goal is to try to bring the swamp back to what it was in George Washington's time, to restore the ecosystem that was here," he explained.

"Of course, that will never happen in my lifetime. The cypress trees will require an awful long time to get back to the numbers that were here. Same for the Atlantic white cedar. Red maples have taken over as the predominant tree. We will have to cut way back on the red maples."

The Great Dismal Swamp is alive with black bears, white-tailed deer, otters, minks, beavers, bobcats, water moccasins, rattlesnakes and other poisonous snakes, flying squirrels, bats, wood ducks, barred owls, yellow-bellied and spotted turtles, butterflies, katydids, a small indigenous shrew and much much more.

More than 230 species of birds are here at various times during the year. Now the swamp is a cacophony of 25 million blackbirds that fly in every winter.

It is home for one of the last native breeding populations in the East of black bear — in excess of 500. There are, however, no alligators in this swamp.

Bottle Evangelist Sets The Gospel Adrift In The Bering Sea Each Year

By LISA LEVITT RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Almost every spring for 33 years, Everett Bachelder has set God adrift in the Bering Sea in 2,000 mayonnaise jars, ketchup bottles and plastic wrappers.

Their inspiration came from a Tacoma, Wash., bottle evangelist who pitched his religion into Puget bottle evangelist Bachelder and his wife, Mina. Theirs is a mission of faith, dropping bits of Scripture into the powerful Arctic currents at the top of the world. The Lord's message in a bottle, in 100 different languages.

Their inspiration came from a Tacoma, Wash., bottle evangelist who pitched his religion into Puget Sound and received letters from around the world.

Nine months after the Bachelders put out their first batch, one of their bottles was retrieved near Borneo, 10,000 miles away.

"It was 10 years before we heard from the Atlantic Ocean," said Bachelder, a silver-haired, square-jawed 74-year-old believer in fundamental Christianity. "When the wind is right, all the bottles go to Siberia."

Bachelder figures for every 1,000 bottles sent out, 100 are found. Of every 100 found, he hears from 10 finders. But what bottle evangelism lacks in the immediate gratification of saving souls face to face, it makes up in divine drama.

A man in Singapore was ready to jump off a cliff over an unhappy love affair when a bottle washed against the rocks below him. "I'll jump when the bottle breaks," he told himself.

But the bottle wouldn't break. The fascinated man carefully climbed down the treacherous cliff to examine it. It was one of Bachelder's.

"There wasn't any Sinhalese in it, but there was enough that he could understand," Bachelder said. "He knew about the Bible and missionary stories, and he went and found a missionary and came to Christ."

A seminary student in Aruba was sitting on the beach, depressed over his future, when a Bachelder bottle, rolled in. Inside, there were the usual eight or 10 tracts in different languages, Dutch among them. His life was changed.

"He had to choose between continuing at his school and serving the Lord or going into a business venture," Mrs. Bachelder said. "When he found the bottle, he felt he should go ahead and serve the Lord instead of making bucks on this business venture."

A submarine retrieved a Bachelder bottle in the Mediterranean Sea.

The serviceman who picked it up took it to the commander who said,

CBS Hoping 'Wiseguy' Will Take Off In Monday TV Slot

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Wiseguy" on CBS must have set some kind of record this season for being the best show on prime-time network television to be completely overlooked.

That could change beginning Monday at 10 p.m. EST, the new time CBS has given the show to get it out of the Thursday night rabbit hole where it's been hiding all season. "Cagney & Lacey" moves from Monday to Tuesday nights.

Ken Wahl plays Vinnie Terranova, an undercover agent whose job it is to get dangerously close to crime bosses. The first of these was the alternately vicious and vulnerable Sonny Steelgrave, played by Ray Sharkey. After seven superb episodes, Steelgrave was killed off to make room for new baddies, a brother-sister duo with a vaguely incestuous relationship and worldly criminal interests.

Judging from the two-parter that marks the resumption of "Wiseguy," the new villains won't be disappointing.

Kevin Spacey and Joan Severance play the brilliant and disturbed Mel and Susan Profitt, a couple of psychopaths who, it turns out, were abandoned as infants and abused in a series of foster homes. Vinnie gets in with their top henchman, played by William Russ, and soon draws the attention of both crazy kids. Mel invites Vinnie to his quarters for a late-night game of Russian roulette, noting "the idle rich are hard to entertain."

The new story line will focus on the interesting subcarriers who break "Wiseguy" out of the mold. Vinnie's boss, sarcastic Frank McPike, will break up with his wife and have an affair.

McPike is played by Jonathan Banks, whose name might not ring bells but whose face will be familiar from the numerous bad guys he's played in the movies. Among his many malevolent portrayals was the cold-blooded killer hurled through a banquet table by Eddie Murphy in "Beverly Hills Cop."

Banks co-starred in the short-lived series "The Gangster Chronicles" on NBC and in a comedy called "Other World," of which he recalls without sentiment, "I played a Nazi in space."

He was nursing along what he calls a "paltry" film career when "Wiseguy" came up. The part wasn't exactly written for Banks, a compact, balding man with piercing eyes.

"Originally the McPike character is written as a big, red-headed guy, strong and a lot more straightforward and burly. I think I brought the acerbic quality to it, and they (the writers) started playing on it," he said.

"I never want to get up next to a buddy-buddy situation. It's evolved into McPike doesn't know how to be friendly. McPike is the kind of guy who could go watch people having a good time and really enjoy it. But he could never take part in it. It's just too painful. He just doesn't know how."

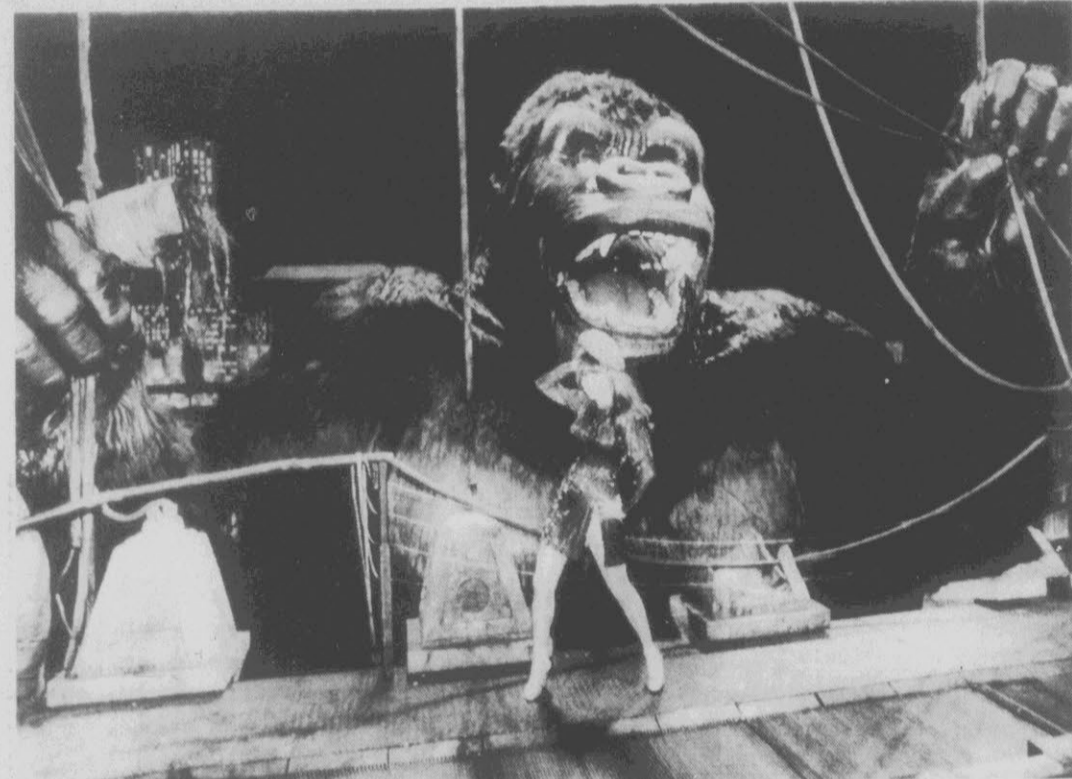

Banks talked in a telephone interview from his hotel in Vancouver, British Columbia, where the series is shot. He likes the work, the scenery and the nice folks in Canada, but misses his home, a recently acquired fixer-upper in Malibu, Calif. While he's gone, he's renting it to the mother of the shortstop on the Little League team he coaches.

"It's really sane to be around those kids," he said. "That part I really miss."

Though he may be a good guy in real life, Banks misses being a bad guy on the screen. "I've sure liked some of the bad guys I've played. You bet. My bad guys usually have a pretty good time being bad."

Not only that, the good-guy image may be starting to stick. Banks had a supporting role in the NBC movie "Downpayment on Murder," starring Connie Sellecca.

"I play a nice cop," he said. "I'm starting to play nice people. Not that I like it very much."

Ronstadt Returns To Roots With Album In Spanish

By VICTOR VALLE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Linda Ronstadt's "Canciones de mi Padre" (Songs From My Father), her first album sung entirely in Spanish, is both a musical recognition of her Mexican roots and a personal reminder of childhood memories.

"My brother and I used to say that we could taste ashes in our food when we heard certain (Mexican) songs," Ms. Ronstadt said in a recent interview. "There's a certain kind of a huapango (a haunting malagueñalike song style from Eastern Mexico's Huasteca region) sung as a trio, and it makes you taste ashes in your beans. I don't know why."

Like her three-album series of classic American pop ballads recorded several years earlier, "Canciones" was intended as an act of memory, in this case of the popular and traditional Mexican music she learned from her father, Gilbert, in her native Tucson, Ariz.

"It was very important to me that this record sound like it was made before World War II," she said of the period she considers the golden age of Mexican popular music. "The things that came later are very nice, but this is stuff that I was exposed to" through her father's records, the songs he played on the piano, and her family's vacations in North Mexico. "When I was 8 years old," she said, "I would follow the (mariachis) around the town, standing outside the cantinas, because I loved it so much."

But Ms. Ronstadt credits her father for the special way he introduced her to Lola Beltran and other legendary Mexican singers whom she still idolizes. "When (my father) would play these records, his whole spirit would come up," Ms. Ronstadt said. "My dad was not cut out to be a business guy. He was a singer, a real artist."

Indeed, a strong sense of family tradition runs throughout "Canciones." The desert scene on the album's back cover, for example, was painted by her father. Ms. Ronstadt also sings trios with her brothers Mike and Pete in such songs as "La Calandria" (The Lark), a traditional folk tune from Veracruz sung in a huapango style.

Ms. Ronstadt insists that "Canciones" does not represent a recent ethnic rediscovery, but a dream she has clung to since she started her career more than 20 years ago. The delay, she says, was due to her need to explore other musical styles and the resistance of record producers uninterested or unfamiliar with Mexican music.

"They just didn't understand it when I would elaborate on it," she said. "I think they thought it was something to be discounted. Maybe they thought I should be ashamed of it."

In 1974, after a frustrating decade in which she struggled to define herself as a folk- and country-rock singer, Ms. Ronstadt recorded "Heart Like a Wheel," the first of four gold albums that thrust the singer into rock mainstream. Soon afterward, Ms. Ronstadt formed her partnership with Peter Asher, the manager-producer who has since produced the singer's biggest and most eclectic string of hits.

The singer's desire to record an album of Mexican songs was rekindled in 1978 when Joan Baez recorded "Gracias a la Vida," an album of Latin American folk songs. Asher discouraged the idea, citing poor sales of Baez's album, Ms. Ronstadt said.

"Why not just do one or two songs," Ms. Ronstadt remembers Asher suggesting. Ms. Ronstadt followed the advice, recording "Lo Siento, Mi Vida" in her then-fourth platinum album, "Hasten Down the Wind" in 1976. She followed with "Lago Azul," a Spanish-language version of "Blue Bayou," and a duet with Panamanian salsa star Ruben Blades.

Hard Times Eroding Trust In U.S. Farm Belt

By PAUL HOUSTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

DOW CITY, Iowa — For many years he had been growing corn and raising livestock on several hundred acres of Iowa's most fertile land, and until the last months he had earned a decent living — not great wealth, but enough to provide comfortably for his wife and three children, whom he reared as honest, churchgoing sons and daughters of the prairie.

The Farm Belt recession ended all that. When the farmer could no longer feed his family, he did something that rasped against his moral grain — and the law. He butchered a cow after telling his bank that the animal had been lost. It was a lie that prevented the bank from seizing the cow and selling it to pay his debts.

"It makes you feel like you're really crooked," said the farmer's wife, who has put beef from the cow on the table for nearly a year, "but you've got to do what you've got to do."

Across the Farm Belt, where the struggle for survival is the fiercest since the Great Depression, the dark, rich topsoil is not all that is eroding. Trust, honesty and good will — values long considered part of the fiber of American farmers and their compatriots on the rural landscape — seem to be slipping away.

"In the depths of the Depression, trust and integrity were still the most important elements in farm people's lives," said Neil E. Harl, an agricultural economist at Iowa State University, "but in the current crisis they are eroding, and that is disturbing, profoundly so. I suspect the problem won't decline quickly, and those values probably will never go back to where they were."

"It's the kind of cancer that eats away at the community." Here in Iowa, the epicenter of an economic quake that has lasted five years, the deterioration of values and relationships has bred division and confrontation.

There are hopeful signs, to be sure — down-and-out farmers coming to each other's aid, for example. Some borrowers and creditors, encouraged by a new state mediation service, have begun working more cooperatively to settle debts short of foreclosure.

RECOVERING — John and Regina Lally lost their 620-acre farm near Denison, Iowa. But three years and a lawsuit later, they have been able to buy back 40 acres of it. Across the Farm Belt, the struggle for survival has brought an erosion of trust, honesty and good will. (L.A. Times-Washington Post Photo)

Yet desperation, bitterness and breakdown persist. One-tenth of Iowa's farmers have already been forced out of business; of the survivors, fully one-tenth are facing almost certain bankruptcy and another quarter of them are suffering from financial stress. Banks are failing and farm-dependent businesses are going under.

The erosion of values, first noted by University of Minnesota economist Michael Boehlje at a congressional hearing two years ago, is most easily seen in business relationships gone sour.

"What causes all the damn problems is money," said Dick Zaun of Indianola, a longtime farm equipment dealer who was forced out of business last year. "Money is, indeed, the root of all evil."

The changes have several dimensions.

—The trust once symbolized by a handshake in rural communities has deteriorated substantially. Merchants are demanding more legal documentation of transactions. Farmers are insisting on getting credit pledges in writing. Bankers are requiring far more collateral and farmers are threatening to go bankrupt to gain concessions from lenders who used to be their hunting and fishing companions.

—Honesty, though still prized in the Farm Belt, has suffered under withering economic pressure. Hiding and converting assets to shield them from bank seizure, misrepresenting loan security agreements, exploiting loopholes in government programs — these and other strategies have been widely observed to circumvent legal and ethical standards.

—Good will — a unifying force that helped farmers get through the emotional strain of the Depression half a century ago — has begun to yield to a growing split between those who are relatively prosperous and those who are not. Neighborliness, in many situations, is but a nostalgic memory.

"Everybody was having trouble in the '30s," Harl said. "There were relatively few who escaped unscathed. In this current phenomenon, not everybody is facing jeopardy, and I think there is among some a feeling of unjustness about this."

Moreover, he added, many of today's farmers believe that their troubles are "aided and abetted by the fact that corruption exists everywhere, in government and business."

When the economic shock waves hit, trust was the first casualty.

"In the past," said Iowa Assistant Attorney General Tam B. Ormiston, "farmers probably shared more with their lender than they shared with their family doctor, relatives and close friends. It was a cooperative venture in every respect: The farmer did well, the banker did well.

"When agricultural economics came off the tracks, a part of that wreckage was the farmer-banker relationship.

"The lender started saying to the farmer, 'Well, you borrowed the money, you have to repay it. You didn't tell us last year that you were as deep in the hole as you really are. You're lying to us.'"

"On the flip side, the farmer was saying, 'Here at the very time I need you most, you're stabbing me in the back. I've banked with you for 20 years and you're letting me down.'"

From this breakdown, arms-length relationships developed.

John and Regina Lally learned that the hard way. They lost their 620-acre corn and livestock farm near Denison three years ago but got back 40 acres of it last summer.

"At one time, if your banker said jump in the well, you'd just about jump in the well," John noted.

"You completely trusted them," Regina agreed.

"That's changed considerably," he said. "People are getting a lot smarter about business, and they keep records. Therefore, when they go to the banker, they can dispute this point and that."

"We were guilty of not keeping good records," she acknowledged. "So today, we keep records of everything we do and we take copies of everything we sign at the bank."

Alan R. Tubbs, speaking from the other side as president of First Central State Bank in DeWitt, said: "The days of unsecured lending, where you did business on a handshake, are pretty much gone." Lenders, he said, "are looking much more at management and how it shows up in past performance: income tax records, crop records. We're approaching everything in a much more businesslike manner."

Even though trust may be shaken and ethics eroding, tales of honesty still can be found. Neal Conover, chairman of First National Bank of Creston, told of one farmer who negotiated a huge debt reduction with Conover's bank and later made a killing in the Illinois lottery. Although the farmer was not legally required to do so, he paid off his bank debt in full, Conover said.

Still, as Conover said, there are also plenty of cases of farmers who have slipped over the line.

Good will has fared no better than honesty in the Farm Belt recession.

don't spend much money, don't have very good equipment," he said. "I don't mind seeing them get a break with the bank, but for everyone like that, there are five that take their living first — they'll go buy new pickups, new tractors, new combines, and then they'll get a break on their interest rate or get a restructured loan."

"I guess I'm paying enough interest to the Federal Land Bank that it gripes me when I see other people getting a break, and I'm sick and tired of paying their debts off."

Alarmed at what they see as the mutually destructive consequences of increasingly bitter relations between borrowers and lenders, some rural bankers are beginning to explore ways to work out their problems voluntarily, away from courtrooms and auction blocks.

Key to this development was the creation last year of the Iowa Farmer-Creditor Mediation Service, which helps warring parties pursue compromise when foreclosure is imminent.

"We're all in a leaky little rowboat in a very threatening ocean," said Assistant Attorney General Ormiston, "and we'd all better be bailing together."

Bottles

"It's somebody in Nome who's thinking about us. Let's all pray."

Bachelor leaned back in his easy chair and sorted through his stack of letters, the source of these stories. On the wall near him, inscribed on a seal skin, words from Proverbs 4:12: "As thou goest step by step, I will open up the way before thee."

So it has been for Bachelor in Alaska these past 40 years. The couple landed in Nome in an Arctic storm with seven dogs, three children and a washing machine to take over the Nome Gospel Home from the departing missionaries. Over the years, they had five more children and dropped more than 50,000 bottles and wrappers stuffed with water-proofed Scripture into the icy waves 100 yards from their modest front door.

Now the Nome Gospel Home sits between their house and religious bookstore and the sea, sagging with age and disrepair. There are no more prayer meetings there. Times have changed; the native people have changed. Boredom and alcoholism, a different kind of religion in a bottle, have made it tougher to have an impact.

Other missionaries have come and gone, chased away by the loneliness and the barren landscape. The Bachelers remain, as do four of their children.

"People say, 'Why would you want to be in Nome? There are no trees there. You're so isolated.' But I love the people — and then there are the bottles," Bachelor said. "We've had a lot of inspiration to stay here."

 There are times when it is wiser to let the opponents buy the contract even though you have the strongest hand at the table. One of the participants in the Venice Cup, symbolic of the World Women's Team Championship, learned this lesson the hard way.
 East's opening bid was strong and artificial, showing a hand of 16 points or better. South's first two bids described a weak one-suiter and, after North elected to pass two hearts, East chose to compete with a takeout double. When North could support hearts freely over West's spade bid, South felt that she had the values to go on to game. Insulted at the turn of events, East doubled and North upped the ante even further.
 West's opening club lead was taken by the king, and declarer immediately led a diamond. East split her honor and she was allowed to hold the trick. She shifted to a trump. West scored her king and returned the suit to dummy's queen. The jack of diamonds was successfully finessed, and ace and another heart brought about this ending:

Declarer led a trump, discarding a spade from dummy, and East was ruined. She could not let go a card in either minor without presenting declarer with her fulfilling trick in that suit, so she perforce sluffed the queen of spades. Declarer now ducked a spade, fetching the ace from East and establishing the king as her 10th trick.

Christmas Memories

By Michelle Rogers

On a cold Christmas Eve, Sarah and her grandfather sit before their fireplace.

Sarah: Grandpa, what was Christmas like when you were young?

Grandfather: What do you think it was like?

Sarah: I think the men sat around the fire all night, relaxing and thawing out from their hard day's labor, while the women cleaned the dishes. The children played with the toys they had opened that night and they tried to figure out what great surprise lay in the brightly papered unopened boxes stacked beneath the tall, full tree.

Grandfather: Oh no, it wasn't like that at all. It was indeed different from the way it is today.

Sarah: Well, what was it like then?

Grandfather: We didn't go out and buy our Christmas tree. We went out on Christmas Eve and cut down our own. While we were out tree hunting, the women would cook the last meal of the night, and the girls would make the decorations to be put on the tree.

Sarah: What about the boys, Grandfather? What did they do?

Grandfather: We went out and helped the men with the tree, preparing it for trimming and decorating.

Sarah: I bet the tree was very beautiful with the brightly colored lights and tinsel, along with the angel on top.

Grandfather: It most certainly was. As a matter of fact, it was the same angel that you have on your tree.

Sarah: That angel must really be old.

Grandfather: It sure is. It belonged to my great-grandmother. That angel has been passed down from generation to generation. It will belong to you someday.

Sarah: I'll be very happy to have it on my tree, but that's in the future.

Grandfather: Your mother will give it to you when she feels that you are ready to receive it.

Sarah: I'd wait forever for that lovely angel, if that's what it takes.

Grandfather: I don't think it will be that long.

Sarah: Me either. What did you do after you decorated the tree?

Grandfather: Well, the whole family would go to the den where the relatives who'd traveled great distances to be with us told about their trips.

Sarah: Is that all you did, Grandfather? It sounds boring.

Grandfather: Oh no, dear. It wasn't boring at all. After the stories were told, my grandfather read "Twas the Night Before Christmas" to the kids before they went to bed.

Sarah: I sure can tell there was a difference. Tell me another difference. Grandfather: Well, the presents were made by the person giving it, not bought in a store.

Sarah: I bet that made the present special, knowing it was made of love.

Grandfather: I think you get the idea of how Christmas was when I was young. It's getting late. You'd better get into bed. I don't want your mother mad at me, especially tonight of all nights.

Sarah: I guess you're right. Would you read me "Twas the Night Before Christmas"?

Grandfather: It would be my pleasure.

Sarah: I'm glad you shared your Christmas memories with me. After Sarah's grandfather has finished the story, he walks out of the room. Sarah, half-asleep calls out, "I love you, Grandpa." She then falls asleep to dream about the surprises she will discover in the morning.

Magic Words

By Tamara Council

Once Santa was making toys. He was making horses and trains and stuff like that. Some mean men threw a note through the window and told Santa not to make any more toys. When Santa went to bed, the mean men became invisible. They wrapped Santa up and took him to their cave. Snakes and spiders were going to get on Santa. But Santa said the magic words: "Ho, Ho, Ho" and the snakes and spiders went away. Santa got free and went back to his home. All of his friends were still making his toys! When Santa tried to deliver his toys, the mean invisible men took his bag. Santa said, "I'll try one more time" and he thought of an idea. The elves made more toys. Santa got on his sleigh with his new bag and took toys to all the children. The mean invisible men got nothing for Christmas.

Letters To Billy

By Patrick Lewis and Jalane Allen

Answering a letter from a second grade student who questioned if there really is a Santa, the following responses from Farmville Middle School students were received.

Dear Billy,
Yes, there really is a Santa Claus. How do you think the toys get there? If your parents bought them, how would they hide the toys without you finding them? And even if they did buy them, you would be awakened by all the noise of them trying to put the toys together. Anyway, your parents don't have enough money to buy all those toys.

Another way I know he exists is that I have been to his house. I went because he invited me. I saw all the machines making the toys. I've even written letters to him.

Last, Santa Claus represents the spirit of Christmas. Christmas is a time of sharing, giving, and loving. Santa Claus is all of that. And once you stop believing in Santa, he stops coming. So you see, Billy, there really is a Santa Claus.

Your friend,
Patrick Lewis

Dear Billy
Yes, there is a Santa Claus. There is only one Santa though you may see Santas in a parade, the mall, or other stores, but these are not the real Santa. Santa is in your heart. There is only a Santa as long as you believe that there is a Santa.

Santa Claus is the spirit of giving. At Christmas you, your family and your friends get and receive gifts. Those toys don't just appear. Santa brings them. So Santa is real and a right jolly old soul.

Your friend,
JaLane Allen

Patrick Lewis and JaLane Allen, 11 year old students at Farmville Middle School, receive special mention.

What Christmas Is About

By Chris Evans

Christmas is a time for joy. It's a time to play in the snow. But really Christmas is a time to remember a man who gave up his life so everybody could live in peace. So whenever Christmas comes around, remember this holiday is to honor a very special man.

Chris Evans, 10, a student at Wintergreen Elementary School receives special mention.

The Santa Claus Who Did It

By Brad Moldin

Once there lived a little boy named Claus. He was a nice little boy. He helped his mom and his dad. When he was twenty, they named him Santa. When he was thirty, they named him Santa Claus. Then he thought for a while and he said, "I will deliver presents." And he did. Then he met an elf. The elf had a buddy that laughed and said,

"I will get my friends. We will make toys for you to deliver." And Santa got six more reindeer and they got magic corn. The reindeer flew and delivered the toys.

Brad Moldin, 8, a student at Elmhurst Elementary School receives special mention.

SECRET INGREDIENT — As the holiday season moves toward New Year's Day, let leftover eggnog be your new secret ingredient. This frothy yuletide beverage — which is essential for holiday get-togethers — can add a special zip to many of your favorite recipes. It can be used in Pain-Perdue (French Toast), Festive Comfort Cake and Date Nut Pudding with Chantilly Sauce.

Eggnog Can Be Secret Ingredient For Recipes

If you've ever hosted a holiday bash, chances are you've also been an unsuspecting victim of L.O.S.S. — Left-Over Stress Syndrome. Common symptoms include: stomach-aches from overeating to prevent excessive leftovers; backaches from spending hours wrapping up all the leftovers you have anyway; and headaches from trying to figure out new, creative ways to re-serve the reserves to your troops.

While many publications and companies have come to the rescue with ideas on what to do with your remaining turkey, ham or roast, no one really seems to know what to do with extra eggnog.

Don't throw it away, says Beverly Hills caterer Randy Fuhrman! Left-over eggnog can be the tastiest secret ingredient in your culinary repertoire.

"Whenever family or friends are staying over for the holidays, I always substitute the leftover eggnog for milk or cream in my pain-perdue (french toast), pancake or waffle recipes at breakfast or brunch," adds Fuhrman.

As a "caterer-to-the-stars," Fuhrman has planned some of the most extravagant and original parties Tinseltown has ever seen. Reading a list of his clients is a lot like persuading "Who's Who in Hollywood" with names including Barbara Mandrell, Robin Williams and Chuck Norris. "It adds such a rich delicious taste to my creations that everyone clamors for a second helping! Best of all, it's so easy."

The first step, of course, is to make a delicious batch of eggnog. Fuhrman suggests making it form scratch—using fresh eggs, cream, sugar, vanilla, a dusting of nutmeg, and if you'd like, a splash of your favorite spirit — to treat your guests to something really special. But if frenetic holiday schedules tend to limit your time to "create," it's also fine to use pre-made eggnog from your grocer's dairy case. Fortunately, as Fuhrman has found, there are new store-bought brands that possess that down-home flavor. Made with fresh egg yolks, whole milk, nutmeg and other spices, these premium-quality, non-alcoholic beverages rival many a homemade batch and beat them hands down when it comes to convenience.

"It's always best to offer two bowls of eggnog for your holiday get-togethers," adds Fuhrman. "One non-alcoholic batch and one enhanced with a flavorful spirit. That way everyone can enjoy this holiday beverage any way they choose."

Once the party's over, you should store the leftover eggnog in a sealed container in the refrigerator to maintain freshness. Or better yet, put the container in the freezer for some quick and easy eggnog ice cream. Just be sure to reuse the refrigerated portion within a few days to prevent spoilage.

"The options for using leftover eggnog in other recipes are only limited by your imagination. For example, I even love to use my extra eggnog in pudding and cake recipes, especially chocolate," Fuhrman concludes.

RANDY'S COMFORT EGGNOG
6 eggs
1/2 cup sugar
3/4 cups flavorful spirit
1/2 quart cream (whipped) vanilla to taste

Separate egg whites from the yolks and place in separate bowls. Lightly beat sugar in with yolks and slowly add spirit. Whip cream and add to egg yolk mixture. Whip egg whites

Non-Alcohol Drinks Good Party Option

Entertaining without alcohol takes a new style of party planning, but today more and more people realize that less is better when it comes to social drinking. Fortunately for the New Year's host and hostess, there are plenty of delicious alcohol-free options for maintaining the holiday spirit without distilled spirits.

Excessive drinking has long been recognized as a health and safety hazard. And heavy drinkers are even at higher risk for developing certain forms of cancer, including cancers of the head, neck, esophagus and liver. The combination of smoking an heavy drinking greatly increases this risk. Even moderate drinking has come under question in some recent studies indicating higher rates of breast cancer for women who drink.

So consider non-alcoholic party drinks to ring in the New Year with lots of "good" cheer. Here's to your health.

APPLE-SPICE EGGNOG
2 12-ounce cans evaporated skim milk

1 beaten egg
2 slightly beaten egg whites
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon
2-1/4 cups apple juice, chilled
1 tsp. vanilla

Chill 3/4 cup of the evaporated skim milk in a small bowl in the freezer about 30 minutes or until ice crystals form around the edge. Meanwhile, combine the remaining evaporated skim milk, egg, egg whites, sugar and cinnamon in medium saucepan. Stirring constantly, cook over medium heat until slightly thickened. Do not boil. Remove from heat; pour into a 3-quart mixing bowl; cover and chill 15 minutes.

Remove the chilled evaporated milk from freezer and beat at high speed for about 3 minutes or until soft

Savvy, Not Sacrifice, Is The Key To Post-Holiday Slimming Efforts

Resolutions to diet follow the holiday season as surely as Monday follows Sunday. Armed with good intentions, some dieters succeed in shedding unwanted pounds while others don't.

To make post-holiday dieting a success story, experts agree on the following calorie-cutting basics:

- Learn which foods are high in fat. Avoid them.
- Experiment with low-calorie flavor boosters to make diet fare more satisfying. Enjoying the foods you eat is essential to attainment of the svelte shape you seek.

•Use non-stick cookware and cooking methods that do not require fat. Smart choices include poaching, steaming, baking, grilling and broiling.

Diets based on self-denial seldom succeed. A diet including great-tasting, "comforting" foods such as creamy pasta and buttery potatoes makes successful slimming easier. No longer dieting "no-noes," these formerly-fattening foods become low-calorie luxuries when prepared with low-calorie butter substitutes.

Kick off your diet with Creamy Fettuccini Indulgence, a super side dish to add pizzazz to any simply-prepared poultry or seafood supper. With creamy-rich comforting taste and only 177 calories per serving, it's sure to become a diet menu mainstay. Indulge your fancy for zesty Italian tastes with Better-Than-Pizza Potatoes. At only 153 calories per satisfying serving, it makes super snack fare, too!

For additional indulgent diet recipes and a wealth of tips to help you shed and keep off unwanted pounds, look to "Savvy Slimming With Molly McButter," new from Alberto Culver Company. The information-packed brochure, available free, provides slim-style serving suggestions, low-calorie cooking tips and hints on easing into new eating habits. To receive

Q: One area that I would like for you to write about is the strange life of commercially canned and soft package edible goods. I like to put some products in the refrigerator, for I like them cold and available when I want to eat. But recently I have been told that this practice causes condensation of moisture inside and outside the can, speeding up the rusting of the container, thus rendering the product unfit. S.D., Greenville.

A: We have all watched fresh foods spoil or become unacceptable to eat in a short time right before our eyes. So it is easy to realize that the quality of food products is a very fragile thing. We are fortunate that the food packaging industry has developed better and better packaging. This lets us have high quality food at reasonable prices. All types of packaging are used today to keep food from spoiling or losing nutrients; to keep insects out; or to stop color, flavor, and texture from changing or to keep ingredients like baking soda or starches from losing the ability to do their jobs of leavening or thickening. You probably have noticed lots of changes in packaging and your questions are good ones. Today we'll look at canning and later at other types of packaging.

Canning is the most widely used process in food preservation today. Heat processing is used to kill microorganisms. It also destroys the enzymes in food that change something about the food like flavors (from apple cider to vinegar) or color (from bright green to gray broccoli) or texture (from a green, firm banana to a mushy, overripe one). The can is a sterile, airtight barrier keeping new contaminants out. As home canners know, the food is preserved with out the use of preservatives or other additives — it's the heating and keeping oxygen out that does it. I wish you'd sent the clipping or reference because you stumped me. It's always recommended that once a can is opened, the food be removed and stored in another container. It's true that condensation of moisture on the outside of cans and inside of OPEN cans can speed up rusting. But I never recall seeing rusting inside an unopened can. Patrick, my husband, is more observant, so I asked him if he recalled any cans with rusting inside. He lived for many years in a very humid area and stored, as you do, some unopened cans in the refrigerator. No, he said. Your question wasn't answered in any of my texts either, so, I called Cleve Denny at the National Food Processor Association. He agreed with me that if a can is unopened and undamaged, refrigeration would actually slow down all chemical reactions, including rusting. It's possible, but quite unlikely, that tiny pinholes could develop and let oxygen seep in, causing rust. Dr. Denny noted that refrigerator temperature is good for canned goods. For example, cooler temperatures can slow down the browning of green peas. But it's not practical for most families to use refrigerator space for canned foods. Neither of could think of a good health reason why you shouldn't store your unopened canned goods in the refrigerator.

Substitutes For Lowfat Foods Yield Nutritious Hors D'oeuvres

The holiday party season can present a real challenge to good nutrition, but with a little imagination, your hors d'oeuvres can be festive, delicious and nutritious.

The high fat content of sour creme, high-fat cheeses and cold cuts is often the culprit in party-time bad nutrition. However, using sour creme substitutes, such as lowfat yogurt and creamed, lowfat cottage cheese can still yield delicious dips and sauces.

Try substituting lowfat cheeses made with skim milk, and lower fat meats, such as chicken, turkey or fish, on party trays.

When serving dips or spreads, substitutes for high-fat chips can include Middle Eastern pita bread, Scandinavian flatbreads or Italian bread sticks.

Vegetables, either raw, or cooked and then chilled, can be arranged to make colorful platters of nutritional-sound party delights.

Here's an idea for hors d'oeuvres that are festive but not fat-laden!

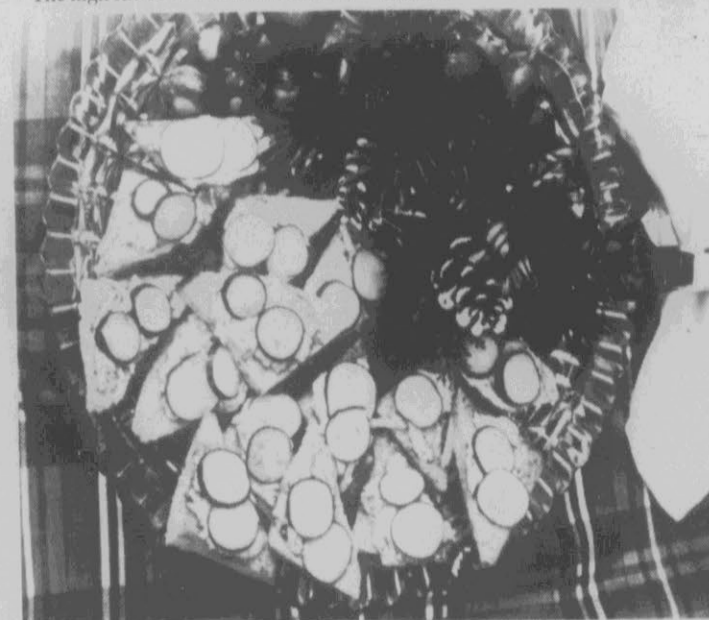

The sliced radish topping makes them attractive and the radish and horseradish combination provides a bit of bite.

RADISH TRIANGLES
9 medium radishes, cleaned and trimmed

1/2 cup part-skim ricotta cheese
1 1/2 tbsp. prepared horseradish, squeezed dry
1/8 tsp. pepper
6 slices whole wheat or other whole grain bread

Grate five of the radishes and blot excess water with a paper towel. Mix the grated radishes in a small bowl, with the ricotta, horseradish and pepper. Cut each bread slice diagonally into four triangles, then lightly toast them in a single layer under a preheated broiler, about two minutes per side. Cool to room temperature.

Slice the remaining four radishes paper-thin. Spread cheese mixture on bread triangles. Top each triangle with 2-3 radish slices. Cover with plastic and refrigerate until serving time. This recipe yields 24 pieces (8-12 servings) with 24 calories and 1/2 gram of fat for each portion.

RADISH TRIANGLES — These hors d'oeuvres are festive but not dripping with fat. They make an attractive New Year's Eve party tray.

SPINACH DIP

1 1/2 cups fresh spinach (or 1/2 cup thawed frozen, spinach) chopped
1 scallion, chopped (or 2 if preferred)

3/4 cup lowfat cottage cheese
1/4 cup plain lowfat yogurt
2 tsp. lemon juice (orto taste)
freshly ground pepper, to taste
Combine all ingredients, preferably in blender or food processor. Chill for at least 30 minutes to blend flavors. Adjust flavor with lemon juice and pepper. Serve with almost any raw vegetable, or with breadsticks or lowfat crackers.

This will yield about 1 cup, with each 2 tablespoons containing about 1/2 gram of fat and 28 calories.

CABBAGE AND CARROT SOUP — This hearty, homemade soup makes a great main course on a cold, winter evening.

Homemade Soups Hit The Spot On Those Cold, Winter Evenings

Whether it's borscht from Russia, minestrone from Italy, bouillabaisse from France, or wonton soup from China, virtually every nation on earth has its famous soups. American also has a rich soup tradition, from New England clam chowder to Southern gumbo.

Hearty, homemade soup makes a great main course on a cold winter evening. Soups allow you to cut back on meat (and limit fat) while increasing your consumption of vegetables rich in vitamins and fiber. Be sure to skim off any fat from the surface of your homemade soup. (One easy way is to let the soup get cold in the refrigerator and then lift off the hardened fat before reheating.)

1 1/2 tbsp. vegetable oil
1/4 cup onion, chopped
1/4 cup celery, chopped
1/4 cup flour
1/2 tsp. salt (optional)
3 1/2 cups chicken broth
2 cups cabbage, shredded
2 cups carrots, chopped and pared
1 cup frozen peas, thawed

Saute the onions and celery in the vegetable oil until tender. Blend in the flour and salt. Gradually stir in chicken broth; cook over high heat, stirring constantly, until the mixture comes to a boil. Add the cabbage and carrots. Reduce the heat, cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Stir in the peas and cook 3 minutes more. This will make 4 bowls of soup (1 1/4 cups each) with 112 calories and 5 grams of fat per serving.

BLACK-EYED PEA SOUP
Black-eyed peas are a variety of legume -- high in fiber, B-vitamins and minerals including iron and zinc. Accompanied by a salad and whole grain muffins, this soup is a tasty way to practice good nutrition.

12 ounces black-eyed peas (2 cups)
2 medium potatoes, peeled and diced
3 stalks celery, sliced
2 carrots, sliced
3 tbsp. tamari soy sauce
1 medium onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, diced
1/4 tsp. pepper
1 tsp. basil
1 tsp. dried dill weed

Rinse black-eyed peas well. Place in a large pot and cover with 1 inch of water. Soak overnight.

Drain off the soaking water. Add 7 cups of fresh water and remainder of the ingredients. Bring to a boil for 2 minutes. Reduce heat and simmer 1 to 2 hours or until beans are tender. Stir occasionally, mashing beans and potatoes against the sides of the pot to thicken the soup.

This recipe yields 10 bowls of soup (1 1/2 cups each) and contains 130 calories and less than one gram of fat per serving.

Turn Leftover Bird Into A Great Recipe

If the supply of turkey in your household exceeds the demand for turkey sandwiches after Christmas, you may want to turn some of the leftover bird into one of the following simple and nutritious recipes, offered by extension foods and nutrition specialists at North Carolina State University.

Use yogurt instead of mayonnaise in the turkey salads if you are interested in cutting back on fat and calories.

TURKEY FRUIT SALAD

2 cups diced cooked turkey or chicken
2 apples, diced
1 cup drained pineapple chunks
3 tablespoons vanilla low-fat yogurt
3/4 teaspoon curry powder
1/4 cup chopped nuts, optional

Toss all ingredients together. Chill. Yields 6 servings. Approx. 170 calories per serving without nuts.

TURKEY-VEGETABLE SALAD

2 cups diced cooked turkey or chicken
1/2 cup diced celery
1/4 cup diced green pepper, optional
1/4 cup chopped onion
1/4 cup mayonnaise or yogurt

Toss ingredients together. Yields 4-5 servings.

BRUNSWICK STEW

1 tablespoon fat or oil
1 medium onion
2 cups liquid from cooked turkey or chicken
2 cups cut-up cooked boned turkey or chicken
2 cups cooked or canned tomatoes
2 cups cooked or canned lima beans (1 lb. can)
2 cups cooked or canned whole corn

Cook onion in fat until tender. Add rest of ingredients. Heat.

Meat-Stretching Can Help Budget As Well As Diet

If some of your New Year's resolutions have to do with improving your eating and spending habits after the holiday splurge, there's one useful practice that can help you keep both: meat-stretching.

It may sound like a silly term, but it simply means using smaller amounts of meat and making them go further. That's an idea that can do good things for you nutritionally, and can help lower that weekly supermarket bill, since meat continues to be one of the higher priced items on our shopping list.

While meat is an important protein source, the fact is that most of us consume far more protein than we need for sound nutrition. In addition, meat is also a major source of dietary fat which has been closely associated with higher risk for cancer, heart disease and other serious health problems.

Creative cooks use a variety of "stretchers" — including vegetables, whole grains, legumes, tofu and whole grain pasta and stuffing — to produce delicious, low-meat meals. Consider the variety these stretchers can give you in preparing stews, soups, stroganoffs, salads, meat pies, meat loaves, casseroles, hash and many other dishes.

Here's an absolutely delicious example of how to enjoy meat without consuming too much fat. Although it's quite filling, the many vegetables mean that a relatively small amount of meat is included in each serving.

onion for 4-5 minutes or until just tender. Add the broth, soy sauce and cornstarch mixture. Cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Add the vegetables and peaches. Continue cooking until heated through. Serve at once with rice.

This recipe yields six servings, each containing 312 calories and 13 grams of fat.

If you would like to learn more about the relationship between dietary fat and your health, send for a free copy of "All About Fat and Cancer Risk." Cover with damp cloth and let stand in warm place (70 to 80 degrees) 4 to 5 days. Stir mixture down each day.

Stir well before using. Always reserve at least 1 cup starter batter for future use. Store in refrigerator.

BEEF FUJI

2 tbsp. vegetable oil
1 small onion, sliced
1 pound beef steak (round, chuck, blade or flank) 1 to 1-1/2 inch thick, trimmed of visible fat and cut into thin strips

Cake Mixes Can Speed Breadmaking

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Wait a minute — cake mix in a yeast bread? That's right. We've shortcut measuring and mixing by starting this bread with a white cake mix. This way you can treat your family to homemade bread more often.

To store the second loaf for another time, remove the baked loaf from the pan, let cool completely, and wrap in moisture- and vaporproof wrap. Freeze for up to six months. Let the loaf thaw, wrapped, at room temperature for several hours before slicing.

APPLE SWIRL BREAD

3 3/4 to 4 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1 package 1-layer-size white cake mix

1 package active dry yeast
1 1/4 cups warm water (120 degrees to 130 degrees)

1/2 teaspoon salt
1 egg
2 1/2 cups finely chopped peeled apple

1/3 cup sugar
1/3 cup finely chopped pecans
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
3 tablespoons margarine or butter, melted

In a large mixer bowl combine 1 1/2 cups of the flour, cake mix and yeast. Combine water and salt; add to flour mixture. Add egg. Beat with electric mixer on low speed 30 seconds. Beat at high speed 3 minutes. Using a spoon, stir in as much remaining flour as you can.

Turn dough out onto a lightly floured surface. Knead in enough remaining flour to make a moderately stiff dough that is smooth and elastic (6 to 8 minutes total). Shape dough into a ball. Place in a lightly greased bowl; turn once to grease surface. Cover and let rise in warm place until double (about 1 1/4 hours.)

Punch dough down; divide in half. Cover and let rest 10 minutes. Meanwhile, in bowl stir together apple, sugar, pecans and cinnamon. On a lightly floured surface roll half the dough into a 12- by 8-inch rectangle. Brush surface with some margarine. Sprinkle with half the apple mixture. Roll up jellyroll style, beginning with narrow end; seal edge and ends. Place in greased 8- by 4- by 3-inch loaf pan. Brush top with some margarine. Repeat with remaining dough, filling and margarine to make a second loaf.

Cover; let rise until nearly double (about 1 hour). Bake in 375-degree oven about 35 minutes or until top is golden. Remove from pans immediately; cool on wire rack. Makes 2 loaves (36 slices).

6 cups air popped corn (salt-free)
1/2 cup unsalted dry-roasted peanuts

1/2 cup toasted oat cereal
1/2 cup miniature marshmallows
1/2 cup raisins

3 tablespoons creamy peanut butter
2 tablespoons margarine.

Combine popped corn, peanuts, oat cereal, marshmallows, and raisins in a medium bowl; mix well. The mixture may be stored in an airtight container until ready to serve.

Just before serving, combine peanut butter and margarine in a small saucepan; cook over medium heat until melted, stirring constantly. Drizzle peanut butter mixture over popcorn mixture, tossing gently to coat.

American Cooks Are Spicing Up Home Meals

Fueled by a burgeoning interest in ethnic and regional cuisines, full-flavored food with fiery accents now star on innovative restaurant menus across the country.

Given our new-found sense of adventure with food, it's no surprise that the assertive flavor trend has spread to home kitchens. Distinctive seasonings such as oregano, garlic and red pepper are familiar items on pantry shelves. Fearlessly, Americans are "spicing up" family meals.

Inspired by the trend toward vivid flavors, The Quaker Test Kitchens have created two new recipes for emphatically-seasoned dishes with strong roots in ethnic cuisines. Heartily and colorful, each pleases the palate with a combination of intense and earthy flavors. Both are streamlined versions of classics, easy to prepare with readily-available ingredients.

Rich and robust, Westward Bound Chili owes its lively flavor and nutritional bonus of fiber, protein and complex carbohydrates to convenient canned Mexican style chili beans. The spicy-hot beans, combined with colorful chunks of cob corn, zucchini, green pepper, tomato and onion, make a crowd-pleasing, meatless main dish. This chili is for today's busy lifestyles; it can be prepared and served within 45 minutes. Cool the heat in each steaming bowl with a dollop of sour cream or a sprinkle of shredded cheese.

A unique departure from the tomato sauce-and-cheese classic, Pesto pizza boasts a wholesome corn meal crust and a zesty topping of broccoli, bell peppers, parsley, garlic and parmesan cheese.

For more full-flavored, taste-tempting recipes, consult "Hurry, Let's Eat!," a new booklet from The Quaker Oats Company. This colorful, 48-page recipe and idea collection provides creative tips as well as practical information on nutrition, menu planning, shopping and streamlined meal preparation. - WESTWARD BOUND CHILI
- 1 medium onion, chopped
  - 1 medium green bell pepper, cut into 1-inch pieces
  - 1 clove garlic, minced
  - 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
  - 1 28-ounce can tomatoes, coarsely chopped, undrained
  - 1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
  - 1 tablespoon chili powder
  - 2 teaspoons oregano
  - 1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon ground red pepper
  - 1 15 1/2-ounce can Mexican-style chili
  - Beans, undrained
  - 2 5 1/2-inch ears frozen corn on the cob, thawed, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
  - 1 medium zucchini, sliced and halved

In Dutch oven, saute onion, green pepper and garlic in oil until vegetables are crisp-tender. Add tomatoes, tomato sauce and spices. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Cover; simmer 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add remaining ingredients; continue simmering 10 to 15 minutes or until zucchini is crisp-tender. Serve topped with shredded monterey jack cheese or dairy sour cream, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

Note: Substitute 1 7-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained or one 8-ounce package frozen baby cob corn. Soup can be made ahead and frozen in a moisture-vapor proof freezer bag or tightly covered container for up to 6 months.

- PESTO PIZZA
- 1 cup fresh packed parsley leaves
  - 1/3 cup chopped walnuts
  - 1 clove garlic
  - 1/2 cup olive or vegetable oil
  - 1/2 cup plus 1 tablespoon enriched corn meal
  - 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
  - 1 tablespoon baking powder
  - 3/4 cup milk
  - 1/4 cup vegetable oil
  - 1 medium green, red or yellow bell pepper cut into strips
  - 1 cup broccoli flowerets
  - 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
  - 1/2 cup sliced ripe olives
  - 2 cups (8 ounces) shredded mozzarella cheese

Place parsley, walnuts and garlic in blender or food processor; cover. Blend about 1 minute or until mixture is finely chopped, stopping occasionally to stir. With machine running, add oil in a thin steady stream blending until mixture is smooth. Stir in parmesan cheese.

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Grease 14-inch round pizza pan or 15x10-inch jelly roll pan. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon corn meal evenly onto prepared pan. Combine remaining 1/2 cup corn meal, flour and baking powder. Add milk and oil; stir with fork until mixture forms a ball. With floured hands, pat dough evenly into prepared pan; shape edge to form rim. Bake 15 minutes.

While crust is baking, saute bell pepper and broccoli in oil until crisp-tender. Spread pesto sauce over partially baked crust. Top with vegetables, olives and mozzarella cheese; continue baking 8 to 10 minutes or until cheese is melted. Makes 8 servings.

'Tastings' Mean Good Taste, Bite Size Treats

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Food Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A toast to the New Year!
 Before the clock strikes midnight, party guests can enjoy an elegant spread of "tastings" — one of the nation's newest dining trends, says Michael Foley, chef of Foley's and Printer's Row Restaurants in Chicago.

What is a tasting? A tasting is a bite of this or a morsel of that, a dining trend that combines good taste with a smaller serving size.
 Here's a perfect recipe for tastings — Foley's Spiced Pork Wontons.

SPICED PORK WONTONS
 If you prefer, you can use hot sausage in place of the mild sausage as indicated in this recipe. — Michael Foley, chef, Foley's and Printer's Row Restaurants, Chicago

- 1 tablespoon peanut oil
  - 1/2 pound mild Italian sausage (casing removed)
  - 1/4 pound hot Italian sausage (casing removed)
  - 1 tablespoon minced scallion
  - 1 clove garlic, pressed and worked into a paste
  - 1 teaspoon light soy sauce
  - 1 teaspoon dry sherry
  - Pinch salt
  - Pinch freshly ground pepper
  - 1 teaspoon cornstarch
  - 2 teaspoons water
  - 1 teaspoon sesame oil
  - 30 to 32 wonton wrappers
  - Cooking oil for deep fat frying
- In a 10-inch skillet, heat the peanut oil. Scatter in the pork sausages, scallion and garlic. Saute lightly until meat is brown. Add the soy, sherry, salt and pepper.

Dissolve the cornstarch in the water and the sesame oil. Add cornstarch mixture to the meat mixture. Cook and stir until well blended. Set aside; cool. To assemble, spoon about one heaping teaspoon of the meat mixture into the center of one wrapper. Moisten fingers and edges of wrapper. Fold the wrapper into a triangle to enclose the stuffing. Press to seal edges. Pull outer edges of wrapper around to make wreath shape. Moisten fingers again and press the two edges together to make a wonton. Repeat with remaining wrappers.

Fry wontons, six at a time, in deep, hot cooking oil or shortening (375 degrees) for 1 minute or until golden brown and crisp. Remove with a slotted spoon. Drain on paper towels. Makes 30 to 32 wontons.

For your holiday hors d'oeuvres table, try Walnut Quiche or Chicken Rolled with Crushed Pecans, recipes developed by Mark Fahrer Caterers, one of New York City's leading off-site party specialists.

WALNUT QUICHE
 3 cups of fresh walnuts, baked in oven at 400 degrees until they crack. (If fresh walnuts are not available, substitute canned walnuts.)

When the nuts are cooled, unshell, and puree with 1 cup of heavy cream in a food processor until mixture reaches a creamy consistency.

Add some salt, pepper, freshly ground nutmeg and 1 whole egg.

Cover the bottom of twelve 2-inch pastry molds with puffed pastry, rolled flat, and pour the walnut puree into the mold. Bake at 400 degrees for about 8 minutes.

CHICKEN ROLLED WITH CRUSHED PECANS

3 skinless chicken breasts, about 4 ounces each

- 1 cup sesame oil
- 2 soup spoons of soy sauce
- Salt, pepper and paprika, mixed together
- 1 soup spoon thinly diced shallots

Mexican Potato

By NANCY BYAL
 Better Homes and Gardens
 Food Editor

Jicama (pronounce it hee-ca-ma) is sometimes called the Mexican potato because its color and texture are like a raw potato. It tastes like a water chestnut.

TOSSED SALAD SUPREME

- 4 cups torn leaf lettuce
- 1 cup cubed, peeled jicama
- 1 small zucchini, cut into thin strips
- 2 medium tomatoes, cut into wedges
- 1/2 cup skim milk
- 1/4 cup plain low-fat yogurt
- 1/4 cup reduced-calorie mayonnaise
- 1/2 of a 4-ounce can chopped green chili peppers
- 1 tablespoon snipped cilantro or parsley

In a salad bowl toss together lettuce, jicama and zucchini. Arrange tomato wedges around the edge of the bowl.

For dressing, in a small bowl stir together the milk, yogurt, mayonnaise and chili peppers. Spoon into the center of the lettuce mixture; sprinkle with cilantro. Toss before serving. Makes 4 servings.

- 1/2 cup peanut butter
  - 1/3 cup milk
  - 1 cup coarsely chopped pecans
- Slice each chicken breast lengthwise into four pieces. Put chicken pieces on wooden skewers and arrange in a bowl, allowing the skewers to stand. Pour the sesame oil and soy sauce on the meat. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

Saute the shallots with a little butter. Add the peanut butter and milk until it reaches a creamy consistency. Roll the skewered chicken in the peanut butter mixture and then roll in the crushed pecans. Bake for 6 minutes at 375 degrees.

Don't forget dessert! This recipe for Chocolate Cherry Fudge Cake was developed by the Glace Fruit Processors.

- CHOCOLATE CHERRY FUDGE CAKE
- 1 cup butter or margarine, cut into pieces
  - 4 ounces unsweetened chocolate, cut into pieces
  - 1 1/2 cups packed light brown sugar
  - 3 eggs
  - 1 cup all-purpose flour

- 1/4 teaspoon salt
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla
  - 3 cups (24 ounces) glace whole red cherries
  - 1 1/2 cups pecan halves
- Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Melt butter and chocolate in medium saucepan over low heat, stirring frequently. Mix in brown sugar until blended; beat in eggs, one at a time. Combine flour and salt. Stir in vanilla and the combined flour and salt into chocolate-brown sugar mixture. Mix in cherries and pecans. Spread mixture in greased 9-inch square baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees until top springs back when touched, about 35 minutes. Cool in pan on wire rack for one hour. Invert onto wire rack and cool completely. Cut into thin slices or small squares. Makes one cake.
