County's Election Plan Rejected

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County's new method of electing members of the Board of Commissioners has been rejected by the U.S. Justice Department.

County Manager Kramer Jackson said Wednesday afternoon that he had been trying to notify members of the board of the action.

"They did not preclear the plan," Jackson said of the Justice Department.

Jackson said commissioners may meet with Raleigh lawyer Mike Crowell, hired by the board to help with designing a new election method, on Monday to discuss the Justice Department ruling.

County Attorney W.H. Watson said the Justice

Department "objected to the proposal. They said the plan was discriminatory. All they have to do is object. They don't have to give you a reason."

Watson said he was notified by telephone of the Justice Department action. "I haven't seen anything official yet," he emphasized.

"We haven't gotten the official report yet. Chances are," Watson said, "we won't get that (written notification) until the first of the week."

What now? "The board needs to meet and discuss that," Crowell said this morning.

But, "A short answer is that for now, the six-three plan cannot be put into effect. It has to be precleared under Section 5 of the voting rights act before it can be implemented," Crowell said.

"That means that the current form of election is the one that has been existing for some time ... six members elected at-large from residency districts," Crowell said. "We're back to the old plan and ... the Board of Elections would have to proceed on that basis unless the court orders otherwise."

The six-three voting plan adopted by commissioners earlier this year expands the board to nine members — six of whom would be elected from newly created districts, and three elected at-large.

During hearings to receive public input on the proposed plan, blacks voiced support for the district portion of the plan (two of the new districts are predominately black). But they objected to having any commissioners elected at-large.

On Dec. 21, the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice and several individuals filed suit in U.S. Eastern District Court asking the court to throw out both the present election method and the proposed six-three plan — even if the Justice Department had precleared the new method.

Instead, the suit, which alleges neither the old nor new plans are constitutional, asks that a new, unspecified method of election be used "in 1988 and thereafter (that) does not dilute the voting strength of black citizens," and one that "offers ... black citizens an opportunity to elect candidates of their choice ... equal to the opportunity of white citizens."

IT'S IN THE MAIL — Just when you thought you had your Pitt County tax bill paid, you will be getting an abstract to list your taxes in the mail. Pitt County Tax Department employees David Turnage, left, and Glenn Cutrell load a truck with over 40,000 tax abstracts to go into the mail today. Cutrell said he had 14 abstracts going overseas to listed property owners in Pitt County that were not military. One, he noted, was being mailed to Africa. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

PCC Used Year To Build Its Campus, Endowments

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The year 1987 was one for building at Pitt Community College as two new facilities have been named and new programs have been added to benefit the community.

"We opened new facilities, added new programs and increased student enrollment," President Charles Russell said. "The quality of our educational programs and services have continued to rise."

The PCC Board of Trustees named the college's new learning resources center for board chairman Clifton W. Everett. The facility was dedicated during a ceremony in June.

The vocational education building to be constructed will be named for board member A.B. Whitley, who this year was reappointed to the board by Gov. Jim Martin. His term will expire in June 1991.

R.E. Davenport Jr. of Farmville was reappointed to the board by the Pitt County Board of Education, while Raymond Reddick of Greenville was reappointed by the Pitt County Commissioners.

1987 was a year of building programs in addition to facilities at PCC. The establishment of the college's Rural Agricultural Assistance Center was announced this year, and it is designed to provide assistance and training for farm families and agribusinesses.

The college also was presented several endowments this year. Mrs. William E. Fulford Sr. and her family established a memorial endowment honoring the former PCC president. And, Michael Richardson, president of Service Roofing and Sheet Metal Co. of Greenville, also presented the college a scholarship endowment and foundation contribution.

PCC received grants for more than $300,000 to computerize the library and provide additional equipment for vocational and technical programs and staff development training.

In response to statewide scrutiny of the community colleges' use of adult basic education funds in April, PCC defended its practice to the community of only using the funds for adults.

Several people assumed new responsibilities at the college this year. Dr. Charles Deter, the assistant dean of instruction, taught biology, chemistry and microbiology at PCC for five years before attaining his current position. He succeeds Willard Finch.

In addition to Finch, James Brooks, chairman of the carpentry and cabinetmaking department, also retired this year.

Susan Nobles was named the director of marketing and public relations. She succeeds Earl Aiken in the public relations duties and also assumed those of marketing.

Roy C. Lanier, department chairman and instructor of welding, was presented the second annual Joseph E. Downing Award for Excellence in Teaching.

PCC held its annual Sponsor-Recipient Recognition Luncheon in November to unite scholarship sponsors and their recipients. More than 40 sponsors and 75 recipients attended the luncheon.

"Looking to 1988, with the increased economic growth and development in Greenville and Pitt County, PCC will be an integral part of those efforts," Russell said. "Our commitment to meeting the educational needs of business and industry and the citizens of our area remains our highest priority. ... From all indications, 1988 will be another outstanding year for PCC."

Critics Say Pact Limiting ATVs Is Really 'Sellout'

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says it did the best it could to prevent deaths caused by all-terrain vehicles, but the president of the American Academy of Pediatrics said today an agreement "missed the mark" and children should have been banned from driving them.

In other criticism of a court-approved pact announced Wednesday, a congressman said it "isn't so much a settlement as a sellout."

"We think they've missed the mark totally in regard to children," said Dr. Richard M. Narkewicz, president of the American Academy of Pediatrics. "In the hands of a kid under 16, an ATV is an accident waiting to happen."

Under the preliminary consent decree, the Japanese-dominated ATV industry will quit selling the more-dangerous three-wheeled versions of the stubby vehicles with balloon-like tires. But the industry may continue to produce fourwheelers. There will be no recalls or refunds to consumers involving either version.

The agreement, negotiated among the industry, the Justice Department and the Consumer Product Safety Commission, also requires the makers to desist from marketing techniques aimed at children, though there still would be no age limits on who could ride the machines.

It also requires the industry to offer "hands-on" training to new purchasers and recent owners and to issue strict warning about the hazards associated with ATVs.

Nearly half of all ATV accidents, which have caused 7,000 injuries per month and 900 deaths over five years, have involved children, according to the commission.

Narkewicz, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said four-wheeled ATVs are less dangerous than three-wheelers, but he said they are complex vehicles to drive,

Amerasian Kids En Route To U.S.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Dozens of Amerasian children arrived in Thailand on New Year's Eve to prepare for resettlement in America under new arrangements that ended a long dispute between the United States and Vietnam.

The children and their relatives carried small American flags as they arrived from Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon. They were the first group of Amerasians to leave under a revived Orderly Departure Program, which Vietnam agreed to resume in September after having interrupted it since January 1986.

At a welcoming ceremony, William A. Brown, U.S. ambassador to Thailand, said: "This is going to be a very exciting new year for you and your new homeland as you get to know its people ... and its language."

He presented two of the half-American children, Pham Hung Huy, 14, and Le Thi Thao Ly, 17, with a picture book entitled "All-America: The Catalogue of Everything American."

They were among 65 Amerasians and 91 relatives who were to arrive

Mugabe Gets New, Broadened Powers

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe was sworn in today as Zimbabwe's first executive president, armed with sweeping powers to transform one of Africa's few Western-style democracies into a one-party socialist state.

In a ceremony with military pomp and tribal pageantry, Mugabe was handed the symbolic chain of office by Canaan Banana, outgoing titular president, before a cheering crowd of 60,000 at the national sports stadium in Harare.

Banana, 51, a Methodist church minister, retired from government.

Chief Justice Enock Dumbutshena installed Mugabe as executive president, a title that brings with it the powers of prime minister, head of state and commander of the armed forces.

Mugabe, 63, was then embraced by visiting heads of state from Botswana, Ethiopia, Mozambique, Tanzania, Zambia and Uganda.

Jet warplanes roared over the stadium, brass military bands played the national anthem "God Bless Africa" and tribal singers, drummers and dancers cavorted before the crowds.

Mugabe is a former schoolteacher who turned guerrilla chieftain to fight for independence in the former white-ruled British colony of Rhodesia.

Haig Has Reaction

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was "doing fine" today after being hospitalized for an allergic reaction to drugs he had taken for a tooth problem, a hospital official said.

Fairfax Hospital spokesman Lon Walls said early this morning that the 63-year-old candidate for the Republican presidential nomination was expected to be released today after an overnight stay.

Haig, President Reagan's first secretary of state and a former NATO commander, was treated Wednesday morning at Walter Reed Army Medical Center for the tooth problem, hospital officials said.

Late in the afternoon, he went to the Fairfax Hospital emergency room complaining of a reaction to the medication, which included penicillin and Tylenol.

Haig's face was flushed, his tongue swollen and "he became faint or lightheaded," said Dr. Thomas Barsanti, an emergency room physician.

"We think it was the penicillin, but it's hard to isolate what exactly the problem was," Walls said.

On The Farm, '87 Was Uplifting

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Except for the corn crop, which Mitch Smith termed "pretty much disastrous," the agricultural picture in Pitt County during 1987 was brighter than it has been for the past few years.

"I'd say it was a better year than most farmers had expected," said Smith, a Pitt County Agriculture Extension agent specializing in field crops.

"The exact figures for crop sales are not yet in final form, but it's apparent that the gross will be over $100 million for 1987."

Tobacco remains the leading cash crop for Pitt County farmers, with an estimated sales figure for 1987 at about $40 million.

"Tobacco was very definitely a bright spot on the Pitt County farm scene this year," Smith said. The amount planted in 1987 was 11,842 acres. "That is an increase in acreage quota of three and a half percent over 1986, which helped considerably. Since 1975 Pitt farmers have lost 52 percent of their quota at that time."

Smith said "one of the pleasant surprises in 1987 was the good quality of tobacco on the market. Because of the quality, tobacco sold on an average of 10 cents a pound above the government support level."

Without much fanfare, cotton also is beginning to come back into its own as a viable cash crop. "About 3,000 acres were planted in cotton this past year," Smith said. "The price for cotton at this time indicates its possibility as a good cash crop. This is definitely a turn-around from the picture of past years."

Cultivation of wheat by Pitt County farmers, Smith said "fluctuates tremendously from year to year. It is not a major crop, but one of a number of farmers cultivate. The harvest this past year was about what was expected, around 38 bushels per acre, with approximately 7,800 acres under cultivation."

Soybeans, long a widely cultivated crop in Pitt County, "again had a pretty good year," Smith said. "The late rains that came after a dry spell actually benefitted soybean farmers. Many farmers plant soybeans as a needed rotation crop in their overall cultivation pattern. With something like 50,000 acres planted, it constitutes a major field crop in Pitt County."

"Tentative figures for the year show that the yield for 1987 will be about 26 bushels to the acre."

Growing cucumbers and sweet potatoes continue to be minor field crops for Pitt farmers. "A number of farmers grow these crops as a source of additional income, but at this time they do not represent a significant

State Pays 3 Victims Of Crime

By The Associated Press

Three victims of crime have received money to compensate them in the first distributions from a fund set up under the state's Crime Victims Compensation Act.

"It feels great," said Robert Hassell, director of the N.C. Crime Victims Compensation Commission, after the awards were made this week. "There are so many tragic stories — people who didn't even have the money to bury a family member."

"I think it's the most significant thing that's happened to victims in a long, long time. It demonstrates a commitment to do something to help victims of crime."

The act has been in the law books since 1983. But it wasn't until August that the General Assembly appropriated money to pay crime victims — $2 million over the next two fiscal years.

The first victim to receive compensation was a 25-year-old Durham woman who was awakened by a masked man standing over her couch. She was blindfolded, cut across the neck and dragged to a bedroom, where her arms were tied behind her back.

Her assailant, armed with a butcher knife, then raped her as her 4-year-old daughter watched. During the assault, she suffered stab wounds and bites.

She received $623.40 in state money to cover her medical expenses.

Hassell also approved two other awards Wednesday.

A 21-year-old Durham woman raped while on a date in August was awarded $318.05 for her medical expenses. The father of a 10-year-old who was molested in Nags Head will get $660 to help pay for counseling for the child.

But not every crime victim will be eligible for compensation. Crime victims must have been injured in North Carolina on or after Aug. 13, 1987.

Victims of violent crime can receive up to $22,000. They can recover medical expenses, as much as $200 a week for lost wages, and for families of murder victims, up to $2,000 for funeral costs.

Claims are limited to actual damages not compensated through sources such as medical insurance or unemployment benefits.

The compensation does not cover losses for personal property or reimburse victims for pain and suffering. The state also will not pay for any injuries or losses that result from motor vehicles violations.

Criminals injured while committing crimes aren't eligible for compensation.

Unemployment

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's unemployment rate increased slightly from October to November, and the jobless rate also rose in 63 counties and in four of the nine metropolitan statistical areas.

Employment Security Commission figures show four counties had unemployment rates of more than 10 percent in November. They were Graham with 16.6 percent, up from 13.7 percent in October; Hyde, 12.8 percent from 5.5 percent; Swain, 11.4 percent from 7.3 percent, and Tyrrell, 11.4 percent from 9.9 percent.

The state's seasonally unadjusted unemployment rate increased slightly to 4 percent from 3.9 percent.

Capture Of Voodoo Princess Ends Year Of Attacks Against Uganda

By JERRY GRAY

Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The capture of legendary voodoo priestess Alice Lakwena ended a year of attacks against the Ugandan government by thousands of troops who believed the oil she rubbed on their chests would ward off bullets.

At the height of her power as leader of the Holy Spirit Movement, Ms. Lakwena commanded as many as 7,000 warriors who sang hymns as they marched into battle with sticks and stones they believed would explode like grenades. Army troops with modern weapons mowed them down.

Only seven followers remained with the 27-year-old clergyman's daughter Saturday, when she was arrested crossing illegally into Kenya, Justice ole Tipis, Kenya's minister of state in charge of security, said Wednesday.

"She was subsequently convicted and sentenced to four months imprisonment," Tipis said in a statement. "She will be repatriated to Uganda at the expiry of her prison term."

Her men called her Mama Alice. She told them she could change bees into bullets and that spirits, including one called "Wrong Element," spoke through her and ordered the attacks.

But her army, one of about six fighting the Ugandan government, was never a serious military threat, and the government was embarrassed by the extensive publicity foreign news media gave her.

Ms. Lakwena's rebels fought the government of President Yoweri Museveni, who came to power Jan. 26, 1986, when his rebel National Resistance Army routed the army of a 6-month-old military government.

The defeated army fled north, where its soldiers regrouped and began rebel attacks of their own. Ms. Lakwena, from the small Acholi tribe in the north, started her movement with 4,000 soldiers in the region last December.

In January, 3,000 of the rebels attacked government positions near Kilak Corner about 300 miles north of Kampala. Museveni said then that 300 insurgents died over two days. "They just came wildly singing and shouting, so our forces massacred them," Museveni said.

Captured soldiers said Ms. Lakwena anointed their chests with animal blood, oils and herbs and told them the potion would protect them.

In September, more than 500 Holy Spirit rebels reportedly attacked an army base at Ngora about 200 miles north of Kampala and 185 were killed. Officers said the rebels were after cattle the army had recovered from rustlers.

The rebels were armed with guns and white stones, their bodies were smeared with oil, their ears were stuffed with cotton and they carried bags of drugs they believed would cure them if wounded, news reports said.

Minister Ousted

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A bloodless army coup ousted Prime Minister Stella Sigcau after less than three months in office in the nominally independent homeland of Transkei.

It was the second coup in Transkei this year led by Maj. Gen. Bantu Holomisa, 32, the army commander.

He announced on Radio Transkei Wednesday that he had taken power as head of a military council and accused Mrs. Sigcau of corruption. Holomisa said Mrs. Sigcau, 50, was "on leave." Her whereabouts were not immediately known.

Holomisa declared martial law, suspended the constitution and outlawed political activity.

Transkei is one of four black homelands designated by South Africa as independent but not recognized abroad. Established in 1976, Transkei has been troubled by corruption and debt problems.

The South African Broadcasting Corp. said there were no reports of violence or arrests. Soldiers patrolled the streets and set up roadblocks around Transkei's capital of Umtata, the radio said.

Mrs. Sigcau took office Oct. 5, two weeks after Holomisa and his troops ousted George Matanzima and forced eight of his Cabinet ministers to resign.

Holomisa said it was "regrettably established" that Mrs. Sigcau was "involved in the corruption and bribery which we are fighting and which was practiced by the former ministers that had recently been removed for their posts."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

1987: A Year Of Growth, Change

1987 wasn't an easy year for Pitt County, but that's because the county is growing and progressing. Progress and growth mean change and change doesn't come without a price.

It was the year of redistricting for Pitt County and Greenville. The county school district lines were redrawn as were the Greenville City Council-district lines.

After the November election, the school board is functioning as the first fully elective board, following the consolidation of the Greenville and Pitt County School districts. It is, of course, far too soon to judge the effectiveness of the elected board but its focus should be to fully unify the once separate districts.

Greenville, after years of city wide elections for council members, now has a district system with one at large council member. The result of the recent election was the placement of two black members on the council. But also the Greenville voters, in an historic move, elected the first black mayor of modern times — Ed Carter, elected in a city wide vote. The Pitt County commissioners also developed a redistricting plan but at year's end it faced U.S. Justice Department disapproval and a suit in federal court.

There was progress in other areas. The city's population is now estimated at 42,021 and Pitt County's at 97,406. Evidence of that growth can be seen everywhere as new housing units go up. A major — and late — move for Greenville was the annexation of Brook Valley and other areas to the east.

Growth continued at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University Medical School. The tragedy of the year was the crash of EastCare helicopter killing its crew and a patient. The crash is playing a part in bringing about new safety regulations for helicopter ambulances.

A number of highway projects came to fruition. The most exciting was the opening of U.S. 264 from west of Farmville to east of Wilson and the later opening of the section to be named the John P. East Freeway from Greenville to west of Farmville. The sections are eventually to form a four laned freeway to Raleigh.

Addition of American Arrow service at Pitt-Greenville Airport brought the number of outgoing flights daily to 16. Completion of a new paved parking lot made Pitt-Greenville Airport one of the few with long term parking at no charge.

East Carolina University got a new chancellor in Dr. Richard Eakin. It also has a new athletic director in Dave Hart. His predecessor, Dr. Ken Karr, remains on the faculty.

While there were some negative incidents, such as the so-called riot after the N.C. State-ECU game, it was also a positive year with the Pirates finishing 5-6 in football while playing one of the nation's toughest schedules.

On campus at ECU, a new classroom building was completed late in the year.

At Pitt Community College the Clifton W. Everett Learning Resources Center was completed and occupied.

In industry, Weyerhaeuser announced plans to build a high technology lumber mill between Ayden and Grifton and Burroughs Wellcome's AZT drug for treating Acquired Immune Deficiency was announced. The drug is manufactured in Greenville.

Good or bad, life in Pitt County was seldom dull during 1987. There were a few warts but it was a year of accomplishment for the area.

Remember Safety

A familiar word of warning on New Year's Eve 1987: Don't drink and drive.

There is no responsibility more important on a traditional night of revelry than this reminder. The consequences of drunk driving — injury, destruction and death — should be enough to convince all party-goers who carry car keys to abstain from alcohol.

If you're a host, make sure each party guest has a designated driver and provide them with non-alcoholic drinks. Serve food as well as alcohol. Keep a pot of coffee available and offer it to guests before they leave. Intervene if you feel someone isn't alert enough to drive.

If you're a party-goer, insist one individual stay sober and drive. If you're that person, take the responsibility seriously.

New Year's should be a time of celebration, a time to look ahead to the coming year. It should not be a time of senseless tragedy. Don't drink and drive.

What The Reflector Said ...

A Review Of Editorial Comment In 1987

Eastcare Tragedy

For the Pitt County community that watched EastCare grow from idea to life-saving reality, the announcement that the air ambulance crashed felt like a hard kick in the stomach.

The crash should not be a death blow to the service. Time is needed to find facts and restructure the program. But PCMH should keep the service, and the community should continue to embrace the life-saving assistance it offers.

City Managers

The Greenville City Council's firing of city manager Gail Meeks may have been correct in its intent but the manner in which the issue was handled was reprehensible, haphazard and unprofessional.

Such gross mishandling of a critical issue will hurt the city, both immediately and in the long-run.

Selecting a city manager in a Sunday night executive session is not an appropriate way to conduct important public business.

The City Council has a responsibility to choose a new city manager in a professional and credible fashion. Delaying an announced decision, then scheduling a weekend meeting is not consistent with this commitment.

That approach simply raises more questions about the way Greenville's future is being planned.

Remarks

Greenville Mayor Les Garner's apology for his now-famous "watermelon remark" was correct but it does not excuse the fact that the statement was highly inappropriate and should not have been made.

It is important for the mayor of a municipality recognized as a regional leader be cognizant of what should and shouldn't be said. As the city's top official, he is its key representative, not only at City Council meetings, but at governmental functions across the state. The image he portrays directly reflects on the city.

Greenville mayor-elect Ed Carter has not only made a comment unbecoming to the office he will soon assume, he has also created a credibility problem for himself.

Greenville has more important issues than tasteless, off-the-cuff remarks to deal with. By electing him, the voters of the city put their faith in Carter's ability to address these problems, not further them with inappropriate behavior.

East Carolina University

Eakin's thrust at ECU's helm can profoundly affect Pitt County's major resource. His direction could place the University at the genesis of another "golden era" similar to its advancement in the 1960 and 1970, yet distinctly different in perspective. The upcoming era will likely be a period of maturation, strengthening and emphasis on quality. It is with these high hopes that the community embraces the beginning of Eakin's tenure.

The University's respect, credibility and possibly, its bright football future were sacrificed by ECU fans who vandalized Carter-Finley Stadium to celebrate the team's victory.

If ECU is to become a big-time university and a big-time football team, it can't allow small-time, childish, delinquent actions like those occurring Saturday.

Election Methods

In Pitt County the issue has been thoroughly heard. Input from citizens, minorities included, was considered when the six-three plan was formulated. The Pitt County Commission acted in the best interest of the county when it opted for a plan that provides citizens with sound representation.

Now, the legislators should support this carefully conceived plan with the same assurance that it is the most beneficial plan for effective government.

Environment

The Pamlico is an important asset to eastern North Carolina, a beautiful and fragile playground and workspace beleaguered by mistreatment. The promise and potential it holds must not be allowed to diminish beyond recovery, or else the waterway will find itself flowing along the same course as the abused Chesapeake Bay.

The blue crab disease is perhaps the most disturbing recent evidence of environmental ill health in the Pamlico. The nation's second largest estuary cannot afford to lose ground or productivity. Incidents like the blue crab disease emphasize the importance of safeguarding the environment fostering this productivity.

1987 General Assembly

Hoopla aside, state lawmakers must do some serious work this session. They must take measures to spur rural development. They must improve N.C.'s public school teachers' salaries and find funding and programs for Basic Education requirements. They must also make an impact on the state's popping prison population and create laws to protect environment and resources.

These issues are not mere paper tigers.

The newly-approved school construction fund for North Carolina is a fair package that can provide the state's school systems with needed capital for new buildings.

The key to the plan's complete success, however is whether county commissioners — including Pitt County's — live up to financial commitments.

Economic Growth

If what a BB&T study on economic prospects for eastern North Carolina says is true, the region may as well cover its head in despair and sink into the sea. In fact, if the study is to be believed, the sea may be the area's only advantage.

Eastern North Carolina is not a wasteland of decline. Neither is it an area characterized by continuous poverty without outlook for improvement, as the study suggests.

More likely, it is a region with numerous small areas of prosperity and expansion sandwiched between larger no-growth areas.

Pitt County Schools

As a widely-divided group, the Pitt County Board of Education cannot make sound decisions about the schools' future. The vote on grandfathering is a blatant illustration of that fact. A verdict on a far-reaching public issue such as redrawing attendance lines should not be made by a board marked by sharp dissension. The result is a policy of little use.

That situation is potentially damaging to the future of Pitt's public school system. For this reason, the board must respond to a challenge to work together and dissolve this disunity.

The Election

Greenville's voters signaled a direction change when they elected Ed Carter as the city's mayor.

Carter must project a professional and progressive image for the city. He must provide leadership consistent with Greenville's position in the state — one of a diverse, forward-thinking metropolitan area capable of significant growth.

As Greenville's mayor, Carter can make an impact on the city's future. But he must address its problems with acuity and skillfully present an image congruent with Greenville's potential.

The newly-elected faces on the Pitt County Board of Education should build on the foundation of progress the previous board laid for the school system.

Five incumbents were ousted in Tuesday's election. The makeup of the new board represents a shift in voting power from Pitt County to Greenville. That fact could significantly alter the focus of the board.

Gary Hart

Those who run for president are opening their lives to public scrutiny. Like everyone they need a private life too, but they have no assurance that any areas of their lives won't be invaded.

Anything that compromises a presidential candidate can hamper him in making unfettered judgments in the event he becomes president.

Iran-Contra Affair

Even if he was carrying out orders, by no means is Col. North a hero. He was circumventing the will of Congress. Regardless of how candid he was in his testimony before the Senate Iran-Contra Committee, what has been done cannot be erased.

Strength For Today

When we think about our annual income it is well to take into account the intangible as well as tangible items. The famous American historian of the 19th-Century, John Fiske, was once visiting the great English philosopher, Herbert Spencer. When Spencer asked him about his family, Fiske showed him a picture of his wife and their three small children.

lonely he was without a wife and children of his own," Fiske wrote later, "I was sorry for him. As I watched him intently studying the faces in the pictures I said to myself, 'these loved ones are worth more than all philosophy combined.'"

In the light of Fiske's experience we can see that although friends and loved ones are not taxable income, they are certainly real income.

A Year Of Humbling Moments, Personal and Political

WASHINGTON (AP) — This is the day you want to look back at the year with fondness and satisfaction, but for some of the most prominent people in Washington, 1987 was dominated by sad moments, personal and political.

Meese, Deaver and Nofziger. Hart and Biden. Bork and Ginsburg. It has been a humbling year for one and all. Perhaps inevitably, Christmas week in the Capital seemed at turns poignant and preposterous.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III, whose 14-month-old grandson died in his crib in October, marked the holiday as the subject of an ongoing criminal investigation and target of an boisterous "Meese is a Pig" poster campaign across the city.

The posters were plastered on utility boxes just as Meese's former lawyer and former financial adviser were indicted in the Wedtech scandal, an affair that already had brought charges against former White House political director Lyn Nozinger.

The red, white and blue "Meese is a Pig" posters refer to the Wedtech scandal in small print and describe the attorney general as a "weasel." City workers started obliterating the placards after receiving a call from Capitol Hill, a Department of Public Works spokesman said. Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten described the anonymous poster campaign as "not nice."

In many ways it's been a not-nice year all around, considering the Gary Hart-Donna Rice rendezvous, the Joseph Biden plagiarism episode, Nofziger indicted, former Deputy White House Chief of Staff Michael Deaver convicted, Meese under investigation. Even the judiciary was not exempt from embarrassment and rancor. Judge Robert Bork, nominated to sit on the Supreme Court, saw his reputation maligned before suffering defeat in the Senate. Judge Douglas Ginsburg then was nominated, but withdrew his name after it became synonymous with marijuana jokes.

And now Ginsburg is under investigation for conflict-of-interest. It's been that kind of year.

"It's been the lowest I think you can get," Nancy Reagan said in a year-end assessment with The Associated Press remarkable for the fact that the first lady was willing and able to talk about 1987 at all. For her it was a year of cancer (her own and President Reagan's), death (her mother's), scandal (Iran-Contra, Deaver, Meese) and estrangement (from her only daughter).

You had to feel a tug in your heart surveying the first lady's Christmas dinner guest list — not for who was on it, but for who was not.

None of the Reagan children spent Christmas at the White House. The first lady said they had seen most of the children at Thanksgiving and that they were spending Christmas with their spouses' parents, yet there has been no mistaking the generation gap in the Reagan household.

Just a week before Christmas, Mrs. Reagan said she "just doesn't know" how to patch things up with her daughter, Patti Davis.

"Mother was very nice to Patti," Mrs. Reagan said of Edith Davis, who died in October. "... Not coming to mother's (funeral) services was really hard to take."

Among the Reagan's 21 Christmas dinner guests were good friends from the years gone by, but missing was Deaver, his wife Nancy and their children. The Deavers had enjoyed previous Christmas dinners at the White House, but their absence last Friday served to symbolize what is surely one of the most pathetic Washington collapses in years.

Deaver came to Washington in 1981 as one of Ronald Reagan's chief aides and confidantes. He was devoted to the Reagan family and imaginative in crafting the public image of Reagan's presidency.

Deaver left the White House to set up as a lobbyist, but he practiced without finesse. Earlier in December he was convicted of perjury in connection with conflict-of-interest investigations.

As his legal problems mounted, Deaver revealed that he became an alcoholic while working for Reagan, drinking "up to a quart" of scotch a day (and hiding the evidence with breath mints) in his final months at the White House.

"I can just say that I feel sorry for him and his family and the kids," Mrs. Reagan said after Deaver's conviction. As for an invitation to Christmas dinner, she said the lawyers had counseled against it.

A Time Of Profound Change And Transformation

WASHINGTON — In ancient China, when familiar words and ways of thinking no longer accurately described the realities of the day, philosophers spoke of the need to "rectify names" so that concepts would correspond to the new order of things.

This is one of those times. Developments in science and social organization are altering the world profoundly — too profoundly for conventional habits of thinking to grasp.

History suggests that mankind rarely understands revolutionary change at the time it is coming about. When concepts eventually catch up with the pace of change, new definitions and descriptions are applied: the Agricultural Age, the Bronze Age, the Industrial Revolution were named long after the fact.

So if we are in such a time of transformation, what kind of age is it that we are entering? What do we need to know and do about it?

I am not here to offer a definitive analysis of the global trends now under way, but to survey the present scene — in Emerson's words — from "an original relation to the universe." In this time of profound change, one of the hardest adjustments to make is intellectual adjustment. We must discard outdated habits of thinking and make room for new possibilities.

Just how different is this era we have entered?

From one point of view, it was the 19th century's radical intellectual, ideological, spiritual, moral and social revolutions that shattered the "eternal verities." In a way, we have not fully adjusted yet to those epic events.

Today's — and tomorrow's — revolutionary changes are of a different nature. They are characterized by greater size and speed; they are both centrifugal and centripetal in their impact, dispersing yet concentrating activities, influences, and decisions.

First, the very material substances that surround us in everyday life are being transformed. Physically, synthetic materials make objects lighter, stronger, more durable. But they are changing societies and economies too, because their emergence affects supply and demand for natural raw materials. One new material substance — ceramics — has led researchers around the world to superconductivity, which in turn may profoundly alter one foundation stone of all human activity: energy. Another such foundation — food — no longer limits by its production the possibility of world population growth. Biotechnology in agriculture has stood Malthus on his head.

The same scientific progress that has altered the nature of these basic substances has also accelerated the speed of human transactions. Time and space are calculated in ever-smaller units. Success in every field depends increasingly upon how quickly ideas can be transformed into reality. The speed at which information flows has already created a global financial market. Markets are no longer places, but electronic networks.

Along with these alterations in substance and speed have come changes in magnitude. Scientific, economic, political matters are global in dimension and enormous in extent. They are outstripping the traditional means by which governments dealt with them. The amount of money that changes hands in the global financial market in one day exceeds $1 trillion — more than the entire budget of the U.S. government for a year. Such flows transcend national boundaries and can overwhelm rigid economic policies. Manufacturing processes similarly are becoming global in scale. I recently saw a snapshot of a shipping label for some integrated circuits produced by an American firm. It said, "Made in one or more of the following countries: Korea, Hong Kong, Malaysia, Singapore, Taiwan, Mauritius, Thailand, Indonesia, Mexico, Philippines. The exact country of origin is unknown." That label says a lot about where current trends are taking us.

The thread that runs through all these things is knowledge: its discovery, its rapid transmission as information and the education needed to use it. Access to ideas, no matter where they are developed, becomes the key to scientific and economic progress.

For example, the growth sector for employment is the "service sector," particularly in finance, data processing, software, engineering and management consultation. "Services" is a misleading designation. These activities are centered on ideas, but have all the characteristics of the production of what we traditionally call "goods." So it is time, as the ancient Chinese would have recognized, for "a rectification of names."

Changes in materials, magnitudes, knowledge and the speed of its dissemination: the opportunities offered by these changes are immense — and America and other open societies are beautifully situated to make the most of this era ahead. But there are troubling implications of change to consider as well. Emerson would put it down to his principle of "compensation" — no aspect of progress comes free of some drawback.

For many nations, the emerging era means new problems. Countries that cannot or will not compete in the global marketplace and interact with ideas from other societies will find themselves falling behind the advanced innovators and producers. Some of those countries may be able to absorb what the innovators develop and may register moderate growth. But the quality and technological content of that growth will remain limited by the inability of such countries to adjust to rapid change.

Other nations — single-commodity countries and agricultural and industrial subsistence economies — are in danger of becoming marginal participants in the "Information Age" economy, living as in eras past. Some lack the human and physical infrastructure to create and exploit economic opportunities. Others are held back by the inflexible nature of their political and social systems.

Yet even those that fall further behind economically can partake of some of the fruits of the new age — fruits that unfortunately are not sufficiently forbidden. Wars in the Third World are being fought with increasing sophistication and firepower. The spread of modern technical skill coincides with the modern resurgence of age-old ethnic, religious and communal conflict.

Beyond the Iran-Iraq war, we see fighting in Sri Lanka, ethnic conflict in Fiji, the devastation of Lebanon, Sino-Indian border tensions, the New Caledonia and Cyprus disputes, the continuing Arab-Israeli conflict.

We have long feared the dangers of nuclear proliferation. Now we face a worldwide diffusion and use of chemical weapons — thus breaching the international moral consensus of more than half a century. But this growing capacity to acquire or produce and employ such weapons unfortunately is not the whole story. Violence itself is undergoing a qualitative change, as terrorists and narcotics traffickers spread new forms of destruction around the world. We now recognize the long, tough battle we are fighting with these modern-day barbarians, equipped with effective weaponry and uninhibited by traditional norms of civilized conduct.

Drawing from the example of science, we must create a more just and decent social order from the elements of our understanding. Human society has no unique or preordained social pattern. Our God-given goal is to fulfill ourselves through the social and cultural institutions that we ourselves create, and to leave this world a better place than when we entered.

George P. Shultz is secretary of state. This is excerpted from an address before the World Affairs Council of Washington on Dec. 4.

Census Takers To Get Early Start On Calculating State's Population

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — About 1,000 North Carolinians will fan out across the state next summer to collect mailing addresses, the first step toward development of the 1990 census.

"The census is the data benchmark for the entire decade," William Hill, director of the U.S. Census Bureau's regional office in Charlotte, said Tuesday. "Everybody uses it: state and local planners, businesses, academics."

It also is a powerful political arbiter: census data is used to apportion representation in Congress and state legislatures. States often gain or lose representatives based on population growth or reduction over a decade.

Officials hope to make the 1990 population survey the most accurate ever by getting a head start, Hill said. But he said some people might be suspicious when bureau representatives come calling because they are starting so early.

The process begins next summer, when about 1,000 people hired by the bureau start combing an area east of Cleveland County and west of Wayne County.

The representatives will be given maps and address registers and asked to list every address in their area. Later, the lists will be compared with those kept by local post offices. People will be hired to investigate contradictions on the lists.

In mid-1989, bureau representatives will begin verifying addresses in North Carolina's major cities.

The process will begin in mountain and coastal counties near the end of 1989, Hill said. The reason for the delay in these areas is that the populations are less stable and many, especially on the coast, are experiencing rapid growth, he said.

In March 1990, questionnaires will be mailed or hand-delivered to the state's 2.2 million households. When compiled, answers to these questions will provide a demographic profile of North Carolina.

"The census is the starting point for many activities," Hill said. "If you want to know where to put a bus route, or a new hospital, you check the census. It can give you a clue as to where the population has been growing and ... where it's likely to grow or not grow."

There are two types of questionnaire: the "long form" and the "short form."

The long form will go to roughly one in every six households. It will ask questions about people's income, line of work, residential history (the places where they've lived), dwellings (such as what type of heating system they have), and ancestry.

It also will include more basic questions that make up the short form: name, age, sex, marital status, race.

There have been few major changes in the questions over the years, Hill said. "You can't study how the population has changed if you make too many changes in the questionnaires," he said.

But some questions become outdated and are bumped in favor of replacements judged more useful, he said. Congress has directed that the questionnaires not become too bulky, so the addition of a question nearly always requires that another be removed.

One question that has been scratched is whether a household has indoor plumbing. "That's virtually universal, so there's not much sense in asking about it," Hill said.

One new set of questions for 1990 focuses on family members' disabilities, he said. Another new question will be when people leave for work each day. The census already asked how long it takes to get to work, information valuable for officials planning road improvements. The new question will help employers decide whether to change work schedules so their employees can avoid rush-hour traffic, Hill said.

UNC Short Of Racial Standards

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina system fell short of a self-imposed goal for black enrollment at historically white schools, but exceeded the goal for white enrollment at black schools this year, school officials say.

In its seventh annual report on a federal consent decree on desegregation, school officials say black enrollment at white schools was 8.2 percent, short of the goal of 10.6 percent.

But white enrollment on historically black campuses was 16.5 percent, exceeding the 15 percent goal, said Raymond Dawson, vice president for academic affairs at UNC.

The consent decree expired last year, but university officials agreed to voluntarily comply with its terms for another two years.

Total black enrollment at all 16 UNC campuses declined by 130 to 24,077 from 24,207, Dawson said. During that same period of time, the number of black students graduating from North Carolina high schools declined by 5 percent to 17,731 in 1987 from 18,614 in 1986.

But the report also shows that there were 3,774 first-time black freshmen on system campuses, up 20 from 1986, a statistic that Dawson said he considered important.

The 1981 decree between the system and the U.S. Department of Education was entered in U.S. District Court to avert a cutoff of federal funds to the system, Dawson said.

New Laws, And Taxes, Go Into Effect

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The state gasoline tax will increase slightly, political groups will be forced to clearly identify themselves and phosphate detergents will disappear from store shelves Friday under new laws that take effect that day.

The changes are among 66 laws enacted by the 1987 General Assembly that take effect Jan. 1, or laws enacted in previous years that go into effect on that date.

Laws enacted in previous years include boosting the state gasoline tax from 15.5 cents per gallon to 15.8 cents per gallon and continuing a phased-in reduction of the inheritance tax.

A number of election law changes take effect with the new year, including a "truth in labeling" measure for political advertisements.

Under the law, any political ad must bear the name of the sponsoring organization or candidate as listed on the sponsor's statement of organization filed with the State Board of Elections. The commercial must state clearly which candidate the sponsors support and oppose.

The law is similar to another measure that took effect last October requiring political action committees to adopt titles that make clear which politicians or causes they support.

"What it's trying to do is do away with those many committees that call themselves 'Citizens for Good Government,'" Alex Brock, state elections director, said. "They're going to have to identify themselves more clearly. You know, are you a communist trying to wreck the country or a patriot trying to save it?"

The corporate income tax increase, which has stood at 6 percent since 1933, will increase to 7 percent — the centerpiece of a program to raise $3.2 billion over 10 years to finance public school construction.

The school financing bill contained a sweetener for business: elimination of the property tax on inventories paid by manufacturers, retailers and wholesalers.

Also taking effect Friday is a reduction in the tax employers pay to support the unemployment insurance program. The typical employer who paid about $106 per worker in taxes in 1987 will pay $91 per employee in 1988 — a 14 percent drop.

The phosphate detergent ban is a major victory for environmentalists, who overcame fierce business resistance by enlisting Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's support.

Supporters of the ban said phosphorus was a leading cause of algae blooms that have siphoned off oxygen in many of the state's rivers and lakes, polluting the water and killing fish.

Opponents said detergents were not the biggest source of phosphorus and that the ban would have little practical effect.

"I still think it's swatting a gnat," Rustin said, adding that most phosphate detergents already have disappeared from North Carolina store shelves.

John Runkle, general counsel for the Conservation Council of North Carolina, said the new law would remove "a substantial portion" of the phosphorus flowing into the state's waterways.

"It's very important ... but there are many more steps that have to be taken before the waters of North Carolina are all healthy again," Runkle said.

The gasoline tax increase was authorized by a $220 million highway financing package enacted in 1986 that levied a 3 percent sales tax on motor fuels at the wholesale level. That portion of the tax fluctuates every six months with the wholesale price of fuel.

A $171 million tax cut package enacted in 1985 included a partial elimination of the inheritance tax. The tax was abolished for bequests between spouses and a five-year reduction for bequests between individuals and their parents and children.

As of Jan. 1, bequests between relatives will be taxed only if they involve cash or property totaling $400,000 or more, up from the current $300,000 or more. The deduction will increase to $500,000 or more in 1989.

Meanwhile, a key provision in the economic development package enacted this year kicks in Jan. 1. It will grant a state income tax credit to businesses that create new jobs in the state's 20 most economically deprived counties. For each new job, a $2,800 credit will be allowed.

Other laws that take effect Jan. 1 require that:

— School bus drivers be at least 17 years old.

— Restaurants post their sanitation ratings in places visible to customers picking up food at a drive-in window as well as those eating inside.

— Cities not adopt zoning regulations that exclude manufactured homes from entire zoning jurisdictions. The law allows cities to designate a manufactured home "overlay district" within a residential district.

— Physicians who dispense drugs for profit must register with the state pharmaceutical board. A lawsuit has delayed implementation of the board's requirement that such doctors pay annual fees and register personally at the board's Carrboro office.

— Any state employee found to have falsified his job application to meet minimum qualifications be fired.

Acreage Increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national acreage allotment for flue-cured tobacco grown next year has been increased to 379,588 acres from the 353,600 acres announced previously, Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng said Wednesday.

The increase was required under legislation approved recently by Congress, he said. The 1988 flue-cured marketing quota will remain at 755 million pounds as announced earlier.

College Admission Requests Increasing

By The Associated Press

College admission directors in North Carolina say there are supposed to be fewer potential college students in the population, but it would be hard to prove by the landslide of applications pouring into their offices.

"These are supposed to be our lean years," says Kay Leager, associate director of admissions at N.C. State University, where applications are up 20 percent.

"It's a strange phenomenon," says Richard Steele, director of undergraduate admissions at Duke University, where applications are up 7 percent to 8 percent so far.

"There's not a weekend that we don't work now," says Joanne Soliday, dean of admissions and financial planning at Elon College, where applications are up 13 percent.

Ms. Soliday says her staff will process about 4,000 applications.

"That's almost a 100 percent increase in three years," Ms. Soliday says.

"We came in here a week ago and had 1,300 pieces of mail," says Vonda Reece, associate director of financial aid at Wake Forest University, where applications are up nearly 10 percent.

Applications are up 36 percent at High Point College, 52 percent at Greensboro College and 40 percent at UNC-Greensboro, where officials had to order 5,000 additional applications.

"It's a good problem to have," says Charles Rickard, UNC-G's director of admissions.

By mid-November, the admissions office at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill had run out of applications and had to order 15,000 more.

"We simply didn't have any (applications) to send for about two weeks," Anthony Strickland, associate director of undergraduate admissions, told the Greensboro News & Record. "We would expect to run out every year, but not until late spring or early summer."

Higher Speeds Considered

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina is studying whether to apply for a new federal program that would allow the state to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on certain rural highways, a spokesman for the state Department of Transportation said.

The program, created last week by Congress, allows the speed limit to be increased on divided rural highways that meet the safety standards of interstate highways.

The first 20 states to apply will be allowed to raise the limit. Seven states have already acted: California, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky and Oklahoma.

Jim Sughrue of the state Department of Transportation said that the state has been aware of the program since it was incorporated into a big spending bill one month ago.

Sughrue said that the department has identified 300 miles of rural highways that might qualify for the program. The program specifies that they be outside of urban areas with more than 50,000 people and connected to stretches of interstate already designated 65 mph.

Republican Rules Out State Race

RALEIGH (AP) — A Dare County businessman who had announced he would challenge Gov. Jim Martin for the Republican gubernatorial nomination says he has changed his mind for the sake of party unity.

But Dan Lawrence, a political newcomer, said Wednesday he continues to have philosophical problems with Martin, whom Lawrence said was not conservative enough.

"All I can say is tensions have been resolved, problems have been resolved at least for the short term," Lawrence said. "It was a situation where I could not do any good for anybody (by running), and in a no-win situation you just don't play the game."

"He's not my kind of Republican, but he's better than Jordan," Lawrence said of Martin. Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan is the likely Democratic gubernatorial nominee.

"Martin's the lesser of two weevils ... like boll weevils," Lawrence said.

Martin campaign manager Kevin Brown was not immediately available for comment.

Lawrence's decision may mean that neither Martin nor Jordan will face opposition for his party's nomination. Aside from Lawrence, no one has announced plans to challenge either.

Lawrence, 42, said he would run for the Dare County Board of Commissioners instead of challenging Martin.

Bill Cobey, deputy transportation secretary, said North Carolina law allowed the higher speed limit only on rural interstate highways and that the Department of Transportation cannot raise it on other roads.

DOT officials said there are only two roads in North Carolina that qualify for the non-interstate speed limit — sections of U.S. 64 between Raleigh and Rocky Mount and U.S. 264 between Zebulon and the Wilson area. Both roads intersect a section of Interstate 95 with a 65 mph speed limit.

Park Land

WILMINGTON (AP) — State parks officials, with the help of the N.C. Nature Conservancy, paid the Georgia-Pacific corp. $369,753 Wednesday for 888 acres of land to expand the undeveloped Lake Waccamaw State Park.

Ben Taylor, of the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said the additional land includes the headwaters of the Waccamaw River and the dam on the south side of the lake, along with a corridor to the undeveloped state park land more than one mile away.

Scout Award

STANLEY, N.C. (AP) — Christopher Dunsmore lacked only the finishing touches on his final requirement for the Eagle Scout award, but his death in a traffic accident prevented him from completing his work.

The 25 other Boy Scouts in Troop 49 chose to complete the task themselves, spending the past two days completing improvements Christopher was making to a walking trail at the Stanley Total Living Center. They want the Boy Scouts to award Christopher his Eagle Scout medal posthumously.

Because he already finished the other Eagle Scout requirements, Scoutmaster Charles Kotlowski will ask the scouts to award Christopher's medal posthumously. The troop also will dedicate the trail to him and his brother, Clayton.

Clayton and Christopher died of injuries they suffered Sunday morning when their car crashed into a tree.

DWI Statistics

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Drunken driving arrests in North Carolina, on the decline for most of the decade, are edging back up. But a highway safety researcher says the raw numbers may not tell the story in the state.

Drunken driving arrests in 1985 — 67,489 — were down 30 percent from the peak year of 1981, when 96,404 arrests were made, state Division of Motor Vehicles statistics show. During 1986, arrests rebounded to 77,020.

Accidents and fatalities tied to drunken driving also are up.

But more important is the ratio of alcohol-related crashes to all crashes, said John Lacy, program manager for alcohol studies at the University of North Carolina's Highway Safety Research Center. That ratio has dropped about 30 percent since early in the decade and has held relatively steady for the past several years.

Identified

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — The body of a woman found by hunters Saturday afternoon in Lenoir County has been identified as Dorothy Mae Burney, 28, of Kinston, authorities said.

The body had been in the woods for several months and was badly decomposed, Detective Capt. Lester Gosnell of the Lenoir County Sheriff's Department said. Dental charts were used by the medical examiner to make a positive identification of the woman, he said.

Cause of death has not been determined.

Director

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — Rodney Barfield has been named director of the North Carolina Maritime Museum, replacing the retiring Charles McNeill, officials said.

Prior to joining the state Department of Agriculture, Barfield was curator for the Museum of the Cape Fear in Fayetteville. The Maritime Museum is administered by the state Department of Agriculture.

Salami Recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pennsylvania meat processor is voluntarily recalling an estimated 5,000 pounds of small salami suspected of being contaminated by salmonella, a food poisoning bacteria, the Agriculture Department said.

North Carolina is among the states where the recall order is in effect.

The recall involves 12- to 14-ounce salami made by Citterio U.S.A., Freeland, Pa., officials said. It was distributed under the name "Sopressata Campagna." The recall affects 19 states, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia.

"If you have this product, return it to the place of purchase," said Lester M. Crawford, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "Do not taste the salami."

The salami has a wrinkled surface and is individually vacuum-packed in clear plastic. The establishment number "Est. 4010" appears inside the Agriculture Department inspection legend.

The packages also have a stamped code, which represents a sell-by date. Any Sopressata salami with the code 06 14 88, which means June 14, 1988, or earlier code is being recalled, Crawford said.

Murder-Suicide Leaves Seven Dead

ALGONA, Iowa (AP) — Four adults and three children were shot to death in an apparent murder-suicide at a holiday gathering, stunning this small town which hadn't had a homicide in at least five years, authorities said.

There were no survivors in the home of John Dreesman, 79, and his wife, Agnes, 74, where the killings are believed to have occurred Wednesday afternoon, said Kossuth County Attorney Jim Murphy.

"It appears it was a murder-suicide situation at the residence," Murphy said. "I think it would be too early to speculate who did the shooting."

The Des Moines Register, quoting authorities it did not identify, reported today that the focus of the investigation is the Dreesman's 40-year-old son, Robert, who friends and neighbors described as a loner.

In addition to John, Agnes and Robert Dreesman, the victims were identified as daughter Marilyn Chuang, 48, and her children, Jason, 12, Jennifer, 11, and Joshua, 8. The daughter and grandchildren had traveled from Honolulu for Christmas, neighbors said.

Authorities said they would not discuss where the bodies were found, whether there were signs of a struggle, or what led them to call the case a murder-suicide.

"We just as soon not talk about that at this time, until we get some more preliminary things done in the laboratory," Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation agent Ron Makin said at a news conference Wednesday night.

Makin said Dr. Thomas Bennett, the state medical examiner, would join the investigation today.

It was the nation's second mass killing of relatives in a week. R. Gene Simmons Sr. was accused of killing 14 family members and two other people in the Russellville, Ark., area.

Asked if it was possible that the Algona slayings may have been a "copycat" crime, Murphy said he was not aware of any connection with the Arkansas deaths.

Firearms were found at the Dreesman home, Murphy said, refusing to say how many or what kind or whether they were used to commit the shootings.

Sporting goods stores in the area were being questioned about recent purchases of .223-caliber ammunition, the type used in M-16 rifles, the Mason City Globe-Gazette reported today.

Algona, a north-central Iowa community of 6,300 about 110 miles north of Des Moines, had not had a homicide in at least five years, and residents were left stunned, Murphy said.

"I've been here 22 years and I haven't seen anything like that," said Sheriff Charles Day.

"I guess that people I've talked to in the last two or three hours, everybody's shocked, everybody's numb. I think there's a hope that what they've heard isn't true," said the Rev. Gary Dehnke of Trinity Lutheran Church, where the Dreesmans took the grandchildren for Christmas services.

Neighbors said John Dreesman, a former city council member, and his wife were well respected, but that their son went out of his way to avoid people.

"Nobody knew him," said Brian Keith, one of several Algona residents who gathered at a house across the street from the Dreesman home.

Neighbors said Robert Dreesman was a 1987 graduate of Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport and had a medical degree from the University of Manila in the Philippines.

Israelis Use Rifle Butts To Disperse Crowd

By MAX NASH
Associated Press Writer
NABLUS, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli troops used truncheons and rifle butts today to disperse a crowd of angry Arabs who gathered outside a military court to await word of relatives standing trial.

Violent demonstrations were also reported in several West Bank refugee camps — the most serious unrest in a week. It came as Palestinians began observing Fatah Day, the Jan. 1 anniversary of the founding of Yasser Arafat's guerrilla group. Fatah is the biggest guerrilla faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

No serious injuries were reported in today's confrontations, an extension of a wave of Palestinian rioting this month in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Twenty-two Arabs have been killed by Israeli troops during the disturbances and nearly 1,000 Palestinians have been arrested.

In a related development, 160 Israeli army reservists, including 28 officers, signed a petition saying they would refuse to serve in the occupied territories. The petition was organized by the anti-war group Yesh Gvul, which was initially formed to protest Israel's invasion and occupation of Lebanon in 1982.

The latest wave of unrest began Wednesday night with a demonstration at the Gaza Strip camp of Jabaliya. The rally took place after a 17-year-old camp resident, Mussa Al Baq, died from wounds sustained last week when he was shot by soldiers during a protest.

The Arab-run Palestine Press Service said there were violent protests today in a refugee camp near Ramallah and in Daharia, a West Bank town where Arabs detained in recent riots are being held.

The agency said two Israeli soldiers were hurt in the clash near Al Amari camp outside Ramallah and that tear gas was used to disperse protesters who smashed the windows of two Israeli cars.

Israel radio said one Israeli officer was injured by a stone.

An Associated Press photographer in Ramallah saw soldiers detain one man.

Shops were closed in Nablus after leaflets were distributed overnight calling for a commercial strike to observe Fatah Day, Israel radio reported. Palestinian residents said school children were sent home at 9 a.m. today as part of the anniversary observance.

In Nablus, a lieutenant colonel issued an order putting Nablus and the nearby Balata and Askar refugee camps off limits to reporters and photographers. The trials of Arab rioters remained open to coverage, however.

The courthouse confrontation began when soldiers brought in four teen-agers picked up after a demonstration in central Nablus, 40 miles north of Jerusalem. The jeep stopped in front of 100 Arabs, most of them relatives awaiting word on youths standing trial on riot related charges.

Women in the crowd began chanting and shouting at soldiers, who then drove through the gate into the compound of the military headquarters. Soldiers freed two of the youths but took two others inside the building where trials were being held.

The crowd advanced towards the steel gate with some protesters throwing stones. Soldiers chased some down the street, arresting a man.

Journalists heard the sound of rubber bullets being fired in a side street but the army denied any were fired.

As the arrested man was brought towards the compound, some of the families, mainly women, regrouped and attacked the soldier bringing the prisoner to the compound.

Border police charged into the crowd to release the soldier and his prisoner, using nightsticks and rifle butts to disperse the crowd. Army reinforcements were brought in and the road leading past the headquarters was closed.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin warned further unrest would be met with a firm response.

"If we have to choose between doing what should be done to calm the situation and being criticized, which is not pleasant, I would prefer to do what needs to be done. It would be best (for demonstrators) not to test the army," Rabin was quoted as saying by the Jerusalem Post today.

At a news conference in Jerusalem, anti-war activists announced they would not serve as reserve soldiers in the occupied territories.

"The uprising in the occupied territories, and its brutal suppression by the armed forces graphically illustrate the terrible price of occupation and the absence of a political solution," the petition said.

"As army reservists, we declare that we can no longer bear the burden of shared responsibility for this moral and political depravation."

China Says Diplomats 'Framed'

BEIJING (AP) — The government today said that two Chinese diplomats expelled from the United States last week were victims of a frame-up.

The incident represented the first such expulsion since Washington and Beijing restored diplomatic relations nearly nine years ago.

The Foreign Ministry also said in a statement that it had lodged a strong protest against the expulsions, which the U.S. State Department said were for activities "incompatible with their diplomatic status."

"The charge made by the U.S. side is a frame-up against the Chinese diplomats in the United States. We have lodged a strong protest with the U.S. side against such action and reserved the right to make further reaction."

The statement did not specify what further steps it might take or how the protest had been lodged. The U.S. Embassy in Beijing said it was not aware of any protests from China concerning the diplomats.

The State Department on Wednesday confirmed the diplomats were expelled, but spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley refused to identify them or say what prompted the expulsion. Published reports said they were suspected of espionage.

Wu Zulong, a second secretary in the press office of the Chinese Embassy in Washington, identified the two men as Hou Desheng, an assistant military attache, and Zhang Weichu, the Chinese consul in Chicago.

Ms. Oakley said the incident left U.S.-Chinese relations unchanged, and that the administration considers the case closed. No charges were filed because both envoys were protected by diplomatic immunity

G-Men Say Pay Too Low For Big Apple

NEW YORK (AP) — The new agent in charge of the FBI's office here has a problem: New York City, where movies cost $7 and apartments $700,000, is an assignment even Elliot Ness wouldn't take.

"Nobody wants to come here," says James M. Fox, who this week was named to succeed Thomas Sheer, a 25-year FBI agent and one of the city's most celebrated law enforcers.

Last month, after only 14 months on the job, Sheer announced he was resigning to take a more lucrative job as a security consultant. Part of his explanation: "I'm broke."

FBI agents from Manhattan to Boise, Idaho, start around $500 a week — making them half-a-G men. Many New York police officers and sanitation workers earn more. Sheer made $72,500 a year — $22,000 less than the police chief, whose department numbers 27,345 employees. The FBI has 2,000 employees here.

Resignations just before the holidays are rare, Fox said in an interview, "but I'm a little frightened about what's going to happen after Jan. 1."

Fox said he hopes to succeed in one of the few areas where Sheer failed: persuading Congress to approve a 25 percent geographic cost-of-living increase for all the employees in the FBI's largest field office, including 1,200 agents.

"I can't actually lobby, but I'm telling anyone who will listen to me about our problem," said Fox, 50, who was Sheer's deputy.

Since New York area prices are as much as 50 percent higher than the national mean, the only young agents who volunteer to work here are natives, some of whom live with their parents, he said.

Agents in other offices routinely quit rather than come to New York, and those who are here often accept less desirable jobs elsewhere with the FBI just to get out.

No-Booze Fun And The Gospel

Some New Year Parties Will Take On New Looks

By The Associated Press
New Year's celebrations include traditions like tonight's crowds in Times Square, cakewalking mums in Philadelphia and the Tournament of Roses parade, but there are newer forms of holiday fun: no-booze parties and a gospel celebration.

In Philadelphia, 25 string bands and 20 brigades of marchers are refining the flamboyant costumes, musical arrangements and cakewalking talents expected to attract at least a million people to the 2 1/2-mile route of the annual Mummers Parade.

The nation's oldest and longest New Year's Day parade has been a tradition in Philadelphia since 1901, and mummy dates to the 1600s, when Scandinavian immigrants pounded pots and rang bells to drive away new year demons.

By comparison, the New York tradition of ringing in the new year by crowding Times Square dates to 1905. Three years later, immigrant electrician Jacob Starr created a lighted ball to descend from a rooftop. His granddaughter, Tama Strarr, plans to keep the tradition this year with a 400-pound ball.

A difference will be addition of a "leap" second at midnight, so that international timekeepers can bring their clocks in line with an ever-slight slowdown in the Earth's rotation.

At the big moment, some people may be sipping champagne in romantic ballrooms or reveling at wild parties. But the television networks and cable companies are counting on millions of Americans to be staying home, leaving the countdown chores to "Dick Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve," or a special with Ben Vereen or the late-night talk shows.

"It used to be that I couldn't live without a party on New Year's Eve," said San Francisco financial analyst Lisa Reiss, 31. "Now, I couldn't care less." She plans to watch old movies at home with her boyfriend after dinner out.

The anti-spirits spirit has swept Massachusetts, where organizers in Boston and Springfield have prepared a gamut of public no-alcohol parties and gatherings. About 10,000 gospel music fans are expected in Atlanta for "Jubilate," a New Year's Eve party being billed as "the largest Christian New Year's celebration in the country."

Fans of the Rose Parade in Pasadena, Calif., were already claiming viewing spots Wednesday, despite a police ban on earlybirds.

Surgery

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford, who underwent heart surgery last month, was resting early today following an unplanned operation for "a minor wound problem," a hospital spokesman said.

The 69-year-old wife of former President Gerald R. Ford was recovering in the cardiac surgical unit at Eisenhower Medical Center, where she was "doing well," hospital spokesman Michael McFadden said.

McFadden said he did not know Mrs. Ford's condition or how long the surgery had taken. The operation was "to correct a minor wound problem," he said.

According to KESQ-TV, Mrs. Ford went into surgery about 9 p.m. Wednesday and was out by 2 a.m. today.

Hospital administrator Michael Rembis said the operation was unanticipated.

Mrs. Ford had been reported in good condition earlier Wednesday.

In the past, soldiers refusing to serve in a certain area were either transferred to a different assignment or sent to jail, said a spokesman for the group, Lt. Ishai Menuhim, 30. He said he was previously jailed for 35 days for refusing to serve in Lebanon.

Latest Failure May Push Shuttle Back Three Months

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA officials say the failure of a full-power booster rocket test means a delay of two weeks to three months in getting the first post-Challenger shuttle flight into space.

"It is a setback," James C. Fletcher, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said Wednesday. "But at this point it does not appear to be a major one and we are thinking of a launch delay in terms of weeks."

At the Kennedy Space Center, launch director Bob Sieck said a three-month postponement "would be pretty close to the worst case."

Engineers at the Morton Thiokol plant in Utah, where the shuttle is built, had only partially dismantled the nozzle used in the full-scale firing last week and did not expect to complete that task until Sunday night or Monday.

"We want to make sure the work we do does not destroy evidence."

Thiokol spokesman Rocky Raab said.

Broken pieces of a "boot ring" was found inside the nozzle and on the ground after the Dec. 23 test firing. The boot ring joins the swiveling part of the nozzle to a fixed part on the bottom of the last segment of the booster rocket.

Engineers focused on the nozzle's movement for a clue and Morton Thiokol canceled the scheduled Saturday shipment to Cape Canaveral, Fla., of two aft rocket segments for the June flight.

"Several things should be noted about this incident," Fletcher said. "First, had it occurred in flight, the flight would have been successful. Secondly, this is what tests are for — to discover problems. Thirdly, we have a sequenced program to return to flight. Once we understand the nature of our problem and correct it, we can move ahead at our previous pace."

Russ Bardos, director of propulsion for NASA, said the ring may have broken when the rocket nozzle was swiveled to an extreme position that would be used only in an emergency return to the launch site.

During a normal launch, the nozzles on the two boosters are turned a few degrees to help steer the shuttle in its first two minutes of flight. They are designed to turn as much as eight degrees in a launch abort.

"On this test we moved the nozzle seven degrees to the right and to the left," Bardos said. "That extreme testing may or may not have something to do with breaking that piece."

The turning of the nozzle is called "slewing."

"We are looking at data we think shows that the test was the most severe slewing of the nozzle we have ever seen," Bardos said.

Thiokol-spokesman Raab said the swiveling test is only one of a number of factors being considered.

Kings, Queens Remain 'New Year's Eve Is Exciting' Popular In Denmark

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
FREDENSBORG, Denmark (AP) — Logically, the kings and queens of Scandinavia should have lost their thrones 50 years ago when the builders of the region's welfare states designed a society of equals.

But even socialists like the fairytale castles and flaxen-haired princesses, and today the monarchies of Denmark, Sweden and Norway are more popular than ever.

Queen Margrethe II of Denmark, and her cousin, King Carl XVI Gustaf of Sweden, have brought youth to the stodgy business of officiating regal pomp and ceremony. She's 47 and has reigned for 15 years; he's 41 and has reigned for 14 years.

Europe. Queen Margrethe gives us our identity."

A Nordic striving for consensus has left the monarchs awkward to speak out on contentious issues. Olav stirred Norwegians in November when he scolded them for behaving badly toward refugees and immigrants.

Swedes are still talking about the interview Carl Gustaf gave just as Crown Princess Victoria, now 10, entered school. He suggested primary schools should return to the system of giving grades, which they abandoned several years before, and was criticized for interference.

Social Democrats, who have dominated politics here since the 1930s, made republicanism a cornerstone of their dogma. In practice, the platform is ignored.

In Denmark, a recent poll gave the monarchy a 69-percent approval rating, 27 percent more than when Margrethe assumed the throne in 1972 at age 31. In another poll, many of those who favored a presidency said they would vote for Margrethe for president.

Margrethe heads the oldest dynasty in Europe: the house of Oldenburg, which took the throne in 1448. Virtually every royal family in Europe has Danish lineage.

Carl Gustaf, who inherited the throne in 1973 at age 27, is a descendent of a French marshal in Napoleon's army, Jean Baptiste Bernadotte, who was chosen for obscure reasons as Sweden's king in 1810 after noblemen deposed the old king.

At a Social Democratic conference in Stockholm in September, a proposal to dispense with the monarchy was hooted off the floor without a vote. In November, a Communist Party-sponsored resolution in Parliament calling for a republic was crushed.

There has been no serious questioning of Olav's throne, which was established in 1905 when Norway became independent of Sweden. A Danish prince, Olav's father, was invited to become head of state.

The royal families enjoy the protection of a sympathetic press and have avoided the whispers of scandal that have plagued the children of Queen Elizabeth II in Britain.

"I would never think of hiding in the bushes or going through their garbage," said reporter Bo Draebel, who has covered the Danish royals for more than 20 years.

"We respect our royal family too much for that," Ms. Draebel added, standing outside the 18th-century Fredensborg Palace where Queen Margrethe was hosting a visiting head of state at her summer residence.

The three monarchs have struck a balance between regality and informality. They sent their children to state-run schools and military academies. Queen Margrethe did survival courses with the Danish Women's Air Corps.

When her two teen-age boys were younger, it was not unusual to see the six-foot-tall Margrethe standing in line with them at the Tivoli amusement park or at an ice cream stand. She often did her own shopping until her security detail tightened measures after the assassination in 1986 of Prime Minister Olof Palme of Sweden.

The multi-talented queen is an amateur archaeologist, an artist who illustrated the Danish edition of "Lord of the Rings," and a linguist who, with her French-born consort, Prince Henrik, translated a book by Simond de Beauvoir into Danish.

King Carl Gustaf, who reportedly suffers from dyslexia, had a reputation as a not-too-bright jetsetting playboy when he inherited the throne from his grandfather. His father died in a 1947 plane crash.

His image settled after he married the German-born Silvia Sommerlath, whom he met when she was chief hostess of the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich.

But he can still be unpredictable. Last summer he spent $16,000 to buy a discarded torpedo boat from the navy. Police officials said he wanted to preserve it as a piece of naval history, and would use it for vacations with his three children.

When it comes to holidays, New Year's Eve has to have the greatest PR firm in the world.

In just a few short years, they have managed to create an image of the observance featuring party revelers in hats and horns dancing on the piano until the wee hours of the morning when they struggle home exhausted. The next morning, they walk around on their knees repenting for all the good times they had the night before.

They expect us to believe that an entire nation stands around on its collective feet for six hours on New Year's Eve eating bait off crackers. At the stroke of midnight, we turn to the stranger on our left (who smells like onion dip) and plant a kiss on his stiff mustache and yell "HAPPY NEW YEAR!" while balloons fall from the ceiling.

I ask you, where are those people?

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

For years on New Year's Day, I used to lie. I told everyone I had taken enough Alka-Seltzer to sustain the Lawrence Welk Show for an entire season and that the dog was cooking his own dinner as we spoke. I was ashamed to admit my evening had all the excitement of a dial tone.

The truth is, the last time I was up at 3 a.m., I had flu. My husband and I last until about 9:30 on New Year's Eve, at which time he kicks my foot and says, "Is the front door locked?"

I answer, "Yes."

In bed, I turn to him and yawn, "Happy New Year."

He says, "Did I tell you all thoroughbred horses are 1 year old tonight?"

I say, "You told me already."

Throughout the years, most of our friends have finally admitted that they do nothing on New Year's Eve. Old habits die hard, and when you're used to going to bed right after the news, the promise of eating dried fish and sauerkraut for good luck just doesn't do it. Besides, it's safer to stay at home.

Last year, in a feeble attempt at gaiety and jubilation, we invited our best friends from Ohio to come celebrate with us on New Year's Eve.

Around 9:45 I buzzed both of them and said, "Happy New Year. I'm going to bed."

My husband said, "Did I tell you all thoroughbred horses are 1 year old tonight?"

We left them nodding over a Woody Allen movie on the VCR.

We invited them again this year, but she said they weren't sure they could stand the excitement.

Owners Prosper In Grinding

By ALBERTO ENRIQUEZ
Medford Mail Tribune
EAGLE POINT, Ore. (AP) — When Peter Crandall quit working with moon rocks at North American Rockwell in 1972, he started working with century-old millstones instead.

Crandall, an engineer without previous business experience, and his wife, Cora, took a chance and purchased the 100-year-old Butte Creek Mill in Eagle Point for $50,000.

Along with the shell of the building, water rights and 1½ acres of land came the 1872 grist mill the Putham family had run for 40 years. George Putham had paid $600 for the mill in 1932. His 71-year-old son, Frank, agreed to stay on during the first months to pass on his father's knowledge.

The mill since has become the last operating water-powered mill in the West, says Crandall.

The business included a profitable frozen locker rental, but centered on a feed store and a meat-cutting operation, both in decline. A small amount of meal was ground.

Over the next 15 years, the couple parlayed that initial investment into a food processing firm, which Crandall says generated $250,000 in gross sales last year. Two months ago, the mortgage was paid off and tucked into a drawer without fanfare, he says.

The meat-packing operation was the first to go, within months of the takeover, eventually followed by the high labor but low profit feed store. The frozen lockers, with their economical water-powered compressors, remain the only public freezers in the area.

But the Crandalls focused their efforts on the small milling operation, which grew to be the heart of their food processing and retailing operation.

"Our goal was to go into the whole grain business," says Crandall.

That goal happily coincided with a growing interest in high-fiber diets. With rising public concern about new artificial colors and other additives in the 1970s, Crandall says, customers found traditional stone-ground products comforting. After all, people had consumed the stone-ground products of water-driven mills since Roman days.

"Identity is important," notes Crandall. "People love our labels. I tried to give them an old-fashioned look."

Along with the look, he put the Butte Creek Mill address on every package of meal, cereal or flour, to encourage mail-order sales. He has prepared "a modest catalog" for the company's first direct-mail campaign. Tourists who star their names in the guestbook in his store at the mill receive a catalog. Customers gain free admission to the antique museum Crandall operates next door.

The mill's status on the National Historic Register has provided a tax windfall. The county currently assesses both land and improvements at $16,950 — considerably less than a comparable modern structure. But an all-wood structure, built just seven years after the Civil War, presents special liabilities, too.

"Fire District No. 3 has it listed as a major fire hazard," says Crandall. "And it's irreplaceable."

Crandall, at 65, has considered retiring. Neither of the couple's two children is interested in managing the property.

Mr. Universe Continues On Training Plan

By FRAN RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sheer determination transformed Steve Strunk from a fat teen-ager into a Mr. Universe.

"When I started high school I had a 48½-inch waist. I was a fat person — I weighed 235, 240 pounds," said Strunk, a 5-foot-7 physicist from Indianapolis.

But he also was "born to be an athlete," so he got involved in football, shed enough pounds to get into the 177-pound wrestling class and started lifting weights.

"I enjoyed the weightlifting a lot more than anything else," he said, explaining that his inspiration was seeing his body change from fat to fit.

"I was extremely motivated. My senior year in high school, I decided I wanted to be Mr. Universe. I wanted to be the best at something in life," he said.

Now, after 10 years of intensive training, he's reached the goal. During competition last September in London, he won a Mr. Universe amateur division title.

But the 28-year-old who can bench press 585 pounds still isn't satisfied with himself. He already is working to fine-tune his 215-pound frame even more.

"There's a lot of improvement I'm going to make this year," said Strunk, who is thinking about turning pro in the next few years. "I hope to be 220 to 225 pounds next year."

The reason for adding the weight is the nature of the competition.

"The biggest guy with the most 'cuts' (lines of muscle definition) wins. That's what bodybuilding is all about. You also have to have symmetry — a small waist, wide shoulders," said Strunk, who measured 55 inches across the chest and 29 inches at the waist when he won the contest.

Developing those kinds of proportions takes a lot of effort. And Strunk became increasingly aware as he was doing post-graduate work in physics at Purdue University in 1981 that he had to make a choice about how to spend his time.

"I decided I could be a bodybuilder or a low-level physicist," he said, adding that he saw no alternative but to quit school and intensify his training.

These days he spends 40 hours working under exclusive contract to Naval Avionics as a consultant in radar design and 30 hours a week working out.

The training involves not only exercise but also intense study of how the body works.

"You have to know anatomy backwards and forwards," Strunk said. "If you didn't, it would be like being an auto mechanic and not knowing the sequence of how the pistons work."

"Bodybuilding takes very deliberate forethought, a deliberate sequence of events. It's like manipulating an equation over a period of years," he said. "Your muscles are like little puppets on a string. You have to isolate them and train them to contract on command."

In addition to manipulating their muscles, bodybuilders also must manipulate their diets to ensure maximum muscle definition during competitive poses.

Strunk says he gets down to about 2 percent body fat 10 days before a show. After that he must cut his calorie intake in half for a few days, then stock up on carbohydrates. If everything is timed right, he said, the body "peaks" in time for the show.

Strunk acknowledged that his training includes the use of anabolic steroids.

"Anyone who's competing on a national or international level is on steroids," Strunk said.

Medical experts say steroids can have dangerous side effects, including aggressiveness, kidney malfunction and inflammation of the prostate.

However, some athletes use steroids because they reportedly can help add muscle mass quickly if used in conjunction with a special diet and exercise program.

Strunk refers to the chemical as "a pharmaceutical training aid," saying it hastens the healing process for muscles torn during workouts.

"If you don't have the natural proclivity, steroids won't make you a champion. That takes a lot of hard work," he said.

Taking A Day At A Time Is Right Pace

DEAR ABBY: Last New Year's Eve you published some New Year's resolutions. I cut that column out and taped it on my bathroom mirror where I could read it every morning. I want you to know that it has helped me to become a better person. I am not saying that I kept every one of those resolutions every day, but I kept most of them, and they have now become habits that have made a remarkable improvement in my personality and character.

I hope you will run it every New Year's Eve. I'm sure it will benefit many others as it has me. — NEVER TOO OLD

DEAR NEVER: My "resolutions" column has become an established annual tradition.

DEAR READERS: These New Year's resolutions are based on the original credo of Alcoholics Anonymous. I have taken the liberty of using that theme with some variations of my own:

Just for today I will live through this day only, and not set far-reaching goals to try to overcome all my problems at once. I know I can do something for 12 hours that would appall me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

Just for today I will be happy. Abraham Lincoln said, "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." He was right. I will not dwell on thoughts that depress me. I will chase them out of my mind and replace them with happy thoughts.

Just for today I will adjust myself to what is. I will face reality. I will correct those things that I can correct and accept those things I cannot correct.

Just for today I will improve my mind. I will not be a mental loafer. I will force myself to read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

Just for today I will do something positive to improve my health. If I'm a smoker, I'll make an honest effort to quit. If I'm overweight, I'll eat nothing I know is fattening. And I will force myself to exercise — even if it's only walking around the block or using the stairs instead of the elevator.

Just for today I will be totally honest. If someone asks me something I don't know, I will not bluff; I'll simply say, "I don't know."

Just for today I'll do something I've been putting off for a long time. I'll finally write that letter, make that phone call, clean that closet or straighten out those dresser drawers.

Just for today, before I speak I will ask myself, "Is it true? Is it kind?"

And if the answer to either of those questions is negative, I won't say it.

Just for today I will make a conscious effort to be agreeable. I will look as good as I can, dress becomingly, talk softly, act courteously and not interrupt when someone else is talking. Just for today I'll not improve anybody except myself.

Just for today I will have a program. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it, thereby saving myself from two pests: hurry and indecision.

Just for today I will have a quiet half-hour to relax alone. During this time I will reflect on my behavior and get a better perspective on my life.

Just for today I will be unafraid. I will gather the courage to do what is right and take the responsibility for my own actions. I will expect nothing from the world, but I will realize that as I give to the world, the world will give to me.

Have a happy, healthy New Year. And pray for peace! — LOVE, ABBY

Conflict Managers Settle Disputes Among Peers

By MARYLEE SCHNEIDER
The Lancaster
Intelligencer-Journal
LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — It sounds, at first, like any other American home — parents arguing, children listening.

But when Bill and Ruth Ann Smith argue, their 11-year-old daughter Cherie no longer just sits back and listens.

"When my mom and dad are arguing, I tell them, 'I feel mad when you argue because it hurts my feelings.' Sometimes they listen, sometimes they don't," said Cherie.

A mature and mild-mannered sixth-grader at Fulton Elementary School, Cherie is one of the school's elite — a conflict manager who works as a counselor on the school's playground.

She has been managing conflicts here since last spring, when the school instituted Mediation in the Schools, a program that teaches children that verbal communication is an alternative to fighting.

Cherie has been honing her counseling skills on the playground and at home.

"My interest in doing it ties into what we do at the center," said Sheri Carlyle, executive director of the Lancaster Mediation Center, the organization behind the program.

"We believe there is a positive way to handle conflict. We recognize that conflict is a natural part of life," she said. "This is the type of program that at an early age gets kids realizing that conflict is natural and that there is a better way to handle it than fighting, arguing or going to someone else to make a decision. It empowers kids to take responsibility for themselves."

Mediation in the Schools was started last spring as a pilot program by then-principal David Rentschler. The project worked so well — fights on the playground dropped from 20 to 25 a week to four or five — that other area elementary schools are becoming interested.

Rentschler, now principal at Burrows Elementary School, hopes to start the program there soon. Students at Buchanan Elementary School, under Principal Mirianne Herzog, are currently undergoing the 15-hour training.

The young student counselors who are fourth-, fifth- and sixth-graders chosen by the school's students — do not take the place of adult supervisors. Playground aides still man the grounds and the school's staff still handles serious incidents.

Conflict managers, who range in age from 9 to 12, work in teams of two. Students in conflict are approached by the managers, who have been trained to help their peers work out their problems for themselves.

"The biggest thing I learned is not to solve their problems, but for them to solve it for themselves," said Cherie.

"We're not supposed to help them. They're supposed to do it for themselves because then they learn to solve their problems and we don't have to help them," she said.

Conflict managers have been taught the effectiveness of eye contact and have learned how to read eye messages and the feelings of their peers.

"We ask them what the problem is about, and then we repeat it back," said 11-year-old conflict manager Dana Moore. "We say, 'Do you have a way to solve your problem?' Sometimes it keeps going back to each other. We don't suggest things, but sometimes there are solutions."

Fulton principal Richard Baracane says the biggest benefit he has seen is that children are learning to solve their own problems and relying less on playground and lunch-room aides.

The young counselors wear white "Conflict Manager" jerseys when working.

"Instead of things escalating, they diffuse things at a much earlier stage," Baracane added.

"I like doing it," 12-year-old Keeshond Cole said. "It cuts down on more fights. More people know about conflict managers ... and they know if they talk to us, the principal knows about it. Then they stop fighting."

Third-grader Ryan Speidel, 8, said conflict managers really work: When a girl on the playground started fighting with Ryan's friend, Ryan hit the girl. She quickly sought the expertise of the conflict managers on duty.

"Erin and I talked to the conflict managers. They asked us how we felt and how to not do that again," he said. "We talked for 5 or 10 minutes, and then I wasn't mad. We solved our fight."

Hospital Computer Listens To Doctors

By DONNA GORDON
Associated Press Writer
ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Arthur L. Chambers says illegible handwriting no longer gets in the way of emergency room work at Nash General Hospital.

Instead of scrawled records, a voice-activated computer system Chambers developed with a Massachusetts company prints out patients' reports.

"It's the beginning of a new era of emergency medicine," Chambers said during a recent interview at his eastern North Carolina hospital.

The computer system, which will cost about $28,000 including training, will replace handwritten reports and hospital typists, who cost some hospitals as much as $50,000 a year.

Chambers says the Nash General emergency room has patient files that are comprehensive and easy to read.

The technology that made the VoiceEM system possible was first developed for hospital radiology

SPINAL ARTHRITIS
ATLANTA (AP) — An important advance in treating spinal arthritis may be on the horizon, says the Arthritis Foundation.

Sulfasalazine, a drug already approved by the Food and Drug Administration for treatment of ulcerative colitis, a bowel disease, has been shown to relieve painful symptoms of the spine without the adverse side effects common to other medications used to treat spinal arthritis.

The foundation says that while it has not yet been approved by the FDA for treating spinal arthritis, tests show the drug may actually treat the disease itself instead of just treating the symptoms. That, it says, means it could slow down or prevent the stiffening of the spine and other problems that occur in people with spinal arthritis.

departments. Raymond Kurzweil developed the technology and Dr. Alan H. Robbins adapted it for use in hospitals last year.

One of Chambers' colleagues saw the radiology computer demonstrated at a seminar in March and told him about it. Chambers called the company, looking for a similar system for emergency rooms.

And within a month he was involved in helping Kurzweil create a system for emergency doctors.

Chambers says he had resisted learning about computers. But once he got involved in this project he saw the way computers could save him time and he learned to enjoy it.

So far, Nash General is the only hospital using the system. Chambers and his colleagues are working out the kinks in the program before it is formally introduced at a national conference.

A doctor's main job is caring for patients. But, Chambers says, a surprising 30 percent of his or her time is spent writing up reports and doing other paperwork.

The computer system is saving him time and printing up reports faster than most doctors can write them. And the computer doesn't have bad handwriting.

So why don't doctors use less expensive personal computers to type their reports? Because most of them can't type and the voice-activated system is a lot faster than typing, Chambers said.

"The nice thing is that everybody knows how to speak," he said. Doctors do have to speak slowly and distinctly so the computer doesn't misunderstand any words.

Nash General's emergency room handles about 75 to 100 patients a day, Chambers said, so speed is important.

The computer gives the doctor multiple choices for symptoms, treatment and follow-up care, thus speeding the process. On a simple report, Chambers can give the computer a few commands and have a printed page in less than a minute.

Chambers demonstrated a report on a fictitious patient who visited the emergency room with a bad cold. He was finished in about 30 seconds.

Because the vocabulary of the computer is limited, some complicated reports cannot be done on the system, but he says the computer is used for 85 to 90 percent of emergency room cases.

Hospital administrators and attorneys are interested in the legal benefits of computer typed reports, Chambers said. Because they are more complete and a lot easier to read than handwritten reports, the printouts are easier to defend in court than scrawled notes.

Chambers predicted family doctors and internal medicine specialists will benefit someday from similar computer systems. "It's not perfect, but it's awfully good," he said.

N.C. BROILER-FRYERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 37.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate to good demand. Average weights desirable to occasionally heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,596,000, compared to 1,601,000 last Thursday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply heavy for a light demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 4 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly steady to 2 cents lower at mostly 2.00-2.11 in the East and mostly 2.13-2.20 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 3 cents higher at mostly 5.82-6.02½ in the East and mostly 5.82-5.83 in the Piedmont; wheat 2.74-2.84; new crop wheat 2.73-2.88. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1 percent lower and ranged from 101 to 104 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today, weighed down by renewed weakness in the dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 22.88 to 1,927.22 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by nearly 3 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 314 up, 904 down and 430 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 35.46 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

As the business day began in New York, traders were confronted with the news of a drop in the dollar to new lows in currency markets around the world.

Losers among the blue chips included DuPont, down 1½ at 87½; Eastman Kodak, down ¾ at 49¾; General Motors, down ¼ at 60¾; and International Paper, down ¼ at 42. The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell .95 to 137.57. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .66 at 256.69.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 23.21 to 1,950.10.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 1,071 up, 506 down and 407 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 149.28 million shares, against 111.58 million in the previous session.

ATV Pact Criticized

 requiring prowess that children don't have.
 "As long as they're unregistered, freely available and hopelessly hazardous, I don't want my grandchildren to be on them, and I don't want your children to be on them," Narkewicz said.

Terrence M. Scanlon, safety commission chairman, said on the same program that training required under the agreement would eliminate a large part of the problem. He said the alternative to the agreement would have been years of litigation with the manufacturers.

"We negotiated for as much as we could get at this time," said Scanlon.

Actually, the makers — Honda, Kawasaki, Suzuki and Yamaha — already had dropped the three-wheel version from their 1988 model lines in favor of the more popular four-wheel varieties. But Deputy Attorney General Arnold I. Burns said there are "tens of thousands" of three-wheelers still in dealer inventory which the manufacturers must now take back.

Burns called the settlement "a giant step toward reducing the risks of death or injury associated with these vehicles."

But Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., called it "woefully deficient" and "less than half a loaf." He said his House subcommittee on commerce and consumer affairs would press its study of whether ATV sales should be outlawed.

Rep. Jim Florio, D-N.J., chairman of the separate House subcommittee on consumer protection, said:

"This isn't so much a settlement as a sellout. It simply doesn't address the crucial issue of protection for people who have already purchased ATVs that they mistakenly believed to be safe."

The agreement takes effect immediately under a temporary court decree which allows 45 days for public comment before a permanent order is entered. The manufacturers have until Monday to notify their dealers to cease sales of three-wheel ATVs, and will face various deadlines, ranging to several weeks, to implement the warning and training requirements.

The off-road vehicles, costing up to $2,000 each, are characterized by their large tires, large saddle seats and handlebar steering, and are especially popular among youngsters. The machines look sturdy, even innocuous, but achieve speeds up to 50 mph and can be extremely tricky to control.

About 2.3 million ATVs are in use, shared by an estimated 6.7 million riders. According to the safety commission, nearly half of all ATV accidents involve children who lack the size and skill to handle the machines, even though some models are tailored for youngsters.

Florio is sponsoring a bill that would require manufacturers to give refunds or offer some other way for owners of three-wheel ATVs to turn in their machines.

"With their advertisements portraying ATVs as merely fun and not dangerous, it is clear that the industry can't be counted on solve this problem on its own," he said. "And now we see that the federal government can't be counted on either."

More than a year ago, the safety commission declared that ATVs presented "an imminent and unreasonable risk of death, serious injury or severe injury" and asked the Justice Department to sue for refunds.

 part of the overall field crops," Smith said.

Livestock and poultry constitute a considerable portion of the total income for Pitt County farmers.

Phillip Rowan, another Pitt County Agriculture Extension agent, "the poultry industry is an important source of income in Pitt County. In the total production of broilers and eggs, the gross for these last year will amount to about $20 million.

"The poultry industry is primarily one conducted on a contractual basis, with producers selling to a few major egg and broiler outlets."

A general breakdown of the poultry industry shows a gross income of about $16.5 million for a production of 32 million dozen eggs, and about $3.5 million for broiler production."

The hog industry almost matched in gross income for Pitt County farmers that of the poultry industry.

"The way things turned out, 1987 was an excellent year in profits for the hog industry," Rowan said. "That was due to the low price of corn, and until late in the year, a high price for hogs."

Countywide, hog farmers had about 13,000 to 14,000 breed sows to raise litters to be fed and sold. "Some farmers bought hogs from other sources, and topped them out locally."

The cattle industry is on a much smaller scale than poultry and hogs, according to Rowan. "Countywide, there were about 3,000 brood cows. Some farmers bought feeder calves and fattened them for market.

"All in all," Rowan said, "this past year was a good one for hogs and cows. Together, they grossed something like $19 million, which is up an estimated million dollars over 1986."

"There was little growth in the amount of livestock raised over the past year, but in terms of profit, 1987 turned out to be a good year."

Rules Are Changing For Country Hams

By DON KENDALL
 AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it comes to paperwork involving country ham, the Agriculture Department wants it well done, even if it has to sizzle for a few years.

Today is supposed to be the deadline for ham producers to comply with a new food safety requirement. But until USDA completes writing the regulations, makers of old-fashioned country hams can continue using traditional dry-curing methods for up to another year.

Back in March 1983, the department proposed rules intended to help prevent trichinosis, a disease caused by microscopic parasitic worms that can occur in improperly cooked pork. It was directed at ready-to-eat pork products and dry-cured country hams.

Country ham processors were told to show by Aug. 6, 1985, that their methods produced meat free of trichinae, the worms that cause trichinosis. Department officials said no trichinae problems had been associated with the dry-cured products, although the traditional process did not conform to USDA rules.

After the industry protested that dry-cured hams would suffer and that not enough time was allowed to prove their methods safe, a new deadline of Dec. 31, 1986, was set by the department. Meanwhile, producers were allowed a "partial waiver" to continue using traditional "but not specifically approved" methods of curing hams.

But a year ago USDA postponed it again to Dec. 31, 1987, to allow "proper completion of the work and proper interpretation and analysis."

Lester M. Crawford, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said Wednesday the latest delay will be until Dec. 31, 1988, or until a new rule is issued, whichever occurs first.

"Based on experimental data submitted to us on Nov. 9, 1987, we are preparing a proposed rule on trichina control methods for dry-cured hams that we plan to issue in early 1988," Crawford said. "Difficulties in establishing a protocol, conducting the studies, and interpreting the data have made it impossible to develop a rule before the 1987 waiver expires."

Heels Run Past UN-Reno

By The Associated Press
Nevada-Reno concentrated on North Carolina stars J.R. Reid and Jeff Lebo, but that left Tar Heel centers Scott Williams and Pete Chilcutt free to run wild.

"I was pleased with our defensive rebounding and with the play of our young centers," North Carolina coach Dean Smith after his fourth-ranked team handed Nevada-Reno a 115-91 defeat Wednesday night. "They (the Wolf Pack) were watching Reid and Lebo close, so the middle opened up."

Williams, a 6-foot-10 sophomore, connected on eight of 11 shots for a career-high 25 points in 19 minutes. Chilcutt, a 6-9 freshman, made seven of 10 shots, scored a career-high 18 points and grabbed a game-high 10 rebounds in 20 minutes.

"The shot was there for me," said Williams. "We knew we had a height advantage, so we exploited it and took it inside."

"We played hard, but we had a 6-4 guy (Matt Williams) guarding their centers," Wolf Pack coach Len Stevens said. "We couldn't zone them because they can throw it over you. We just couldn't stop their inside game."

"It's awfully tough to beat a team with that much talent when it shoots 63 percent and goes to the (free throw) line 47 times," said Stevens, whose club dropped to 5-4.

In other games involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams, North Carolina State defeated Arizona St. 83-71 to win the Rainbow Classic, top-ranked Arizona defeated 9th-ranked Duke 91-85 in the Fiesta Classic, Georgia Tech defeated Auburn 83-72 to win the Cotton States Classic tournament, Wake Forest defeated American University 79-66 to take third place in the Palm Beach Classic, and Maryland defeated Arkansas 88-61.

Jim Valvano credit Charles Shackelford with North Carolina State's victory in the championship game of the Rainbow Classic.

"Shackelford dominated the game in the last 12 minutes. He did it on the boards, offensively, defensively, and even threw a great pass," said Valvano of the tournament's most valuable player.

Shackelford scored 25 points and Chucky Brown added 19 as NC State downed Arizona State in the title game.

"When we came on this road trip, we wanted to learn how to play the last five minutes of the game. With Chris (Corchiani), Vinny (Del Negro) and Rodney (Monroe), we can play the possession game," Valvano said.

"They run 25 seconds off the clock and then can really make things happen," he said.

Arizona State Coach Steve Patterson said the Sun Devils' effort was good, "but it was only a 32 or 34 minute performance. We've played good basketball, but haven't turned in a 40-minute performance."

Also in double figures for the Wolfpack, 6-2, was Del Negro with 18. For the Sun Devils, Arthur Thomas scored 21, Eric Holloway added 17 and Mark Becker had 10.

Lute Olson said Arizona's Fiesta Bowl Classic championship game with Duke was a classic example of "the kind of intensity" that has been missing from West Coast college basketball.

There was none missing Wednesday night, as Olson's top-ranked Wildcats, led by 31 points from Sean Elliott, the tournament's most valuable player, never trailed. They staged off a furious final-minute Blue Devils' rally to win 91-85.

Olson said the championship contest was "a great college basketball game. Duke is far and away the best team we've faced to this point."

He pointed to only 12 turnovers by each team as a measure of the game's quality. "When you get that kind of intensity, I think it's a tribute to both clubs that they handled the ball so well."

"We haven't had a team play better against us than Arizona," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "Overall, what you saw was an excellent college basketball game. I think both teams were fatigued at times because it was such an intense game."

The Blue Devils scored three 3-pointers in the last 46 seconds, on baskets by Danny Ferry, Quin Snyder and Greg Koubek, to pull within four points at 89-85, but Arizona held the ball for the final 11 seconds and Elliott dunked at the buzzer.

Duke's Danny Ferry and Kevin Strickland, who were named to the all-tournament team, led the Blue Devils with 25 points apiece.

Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins called it "a great block," but Auburn Coach Sonny Smith complained about the officiating in "the play that changed the whole game."

At issue was a Craig Neal block of a Terrance Howard layup that shut down Auburn in the last 1:25 of the game. (See ACC, B-3)

Bethea scored on a layup to make it 50-48.

In the final 3:13, Chris O'Connor scored on four of four free throws and added a layup to help clinch the victory.

O'Connor finished with 14 while Gretta O'Neal Savage had 13 and Bethea had 11. Savage led the ECU rebounding with 10 as ECU was out rebounded 44-41 by the Lady Flyers.

Anette Melvin led Dayton with 14 points while Tobette Pleasant had 12 and Michele Kruty had 10.

"We're happy to come out of here with a split," ECU Coach Pat Pierson said. "We were lucky to win one of the games because we didn't play very well in either of them."

"Tonight we played well enough to win against a good Dayton team. Monique really stood out in the second half. She carried us at times," the coach added.

"I hope this win can instill some confidence in our players as we prepare for an important road trip to South Carolina and then begin conference play."

The Lady Pirates are now 4-5 while Dayton falls to 3-5.

Cherie Nelson of Southern California was named the tournament's most valuable player as Southern Cal downed Old Dominion for the championship.

Saints' Mora Coach Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Mora, who coached the New Orleans Saints to their first winning season and first playoff berth ever, was named today the NFL Coach of the Year by The Associated Press.

Mora, whose Saints finished 12-3 for the second-best record in the league, was a run-away winner in the voting by three sports writers and sportscasters representing each of the 28 NFL teams. He got 76 of the 84 votes.

Bill Walsh of San Francisco got four votes, Ron Meyer of Indianapolis got three and Marv Levy of Buffalo with one got the other votes.

Mora, who won two of the USFL's three championships as coach of the Philadelphia-Baltimore Stars, took over the Saints last year after having his choice of all four head coaching positions vacant that year. He chose New Orleans largely because of its new general manager, Jim Finks.

After going 7-9 last season, New Orleans won its last nine regular-season games this year, and will host the NFC wild-card game Sunday. The Saints would have won any other division in the league with their record, but had the misfortune of playing in the NFC West, where San Francisco finished with an NFL-best mark of 13-2.

Mora earned the reputation as a no-nonsense coach in the USFL and he kept it with New Orleans.

"Coach Mora lays down the rules and they're the same way for everybody," backup quarterback Dave Wilson said. "There are no favorites at all."

He also runs a no-nonsense team, based on a strong defense and a running attack keyed to second-year man Rueben Mayes.

The no-nonsense approach even runs to Mora. He was embarrassed earlier this year by a newspaper article in which a historian compared him with great American generals and concluded that he most resembled Dwight Eisenhower because of his ability to bring people together.

Football people have compared him more to Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins and Bill Parcells, who coached the New York Giants to a Super Bowl victory last year. Each is a hard worker with a blue-collar image.

Overton Among Dial Nominees

Rose High School senior Kristi Overton has been selected as one of the five finalists for the Dial Award, presented annually to the top national high school athlete/scholar.

Overton, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Overton of Greenville, is a world-class water-skiier.

The award has been presented annually since 1979 when it was established by the Dial Corporation. The two winners, one male and one female, will be chosen by a nationwide panel of coaches, college recruiters and sports journalists who base their selections on three areas of accomplishment: athletic, academic and civic.

The award is considered one of the most prestigious national achievement awards for high school athletes in the country. It will be presented at the Touchdown Club annual banquet in Washington, D.C., on Jan. 23, 1988.

The first award, in 1979, was presented to Herschel Walker. The following year, the award was presented to both a male and female. Among former winners are Bill Fraic, Cheryl Miller, and Chris Spielman.

The nominees for the male award this year include Rockne (Rocky) Lehigh Biegel, who participates in football, wrestling and track at Lincoln High School in Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.; Jeff Boober, basketball, football and track at Brookings High School in Brookings, S.D.; Todd Marinovich, football and basketball at Capistrano Valley High School, Mission Viejo, Calif.; Alonza Mourning, basketball at Indian River High School in Chesapeake, Va.; and Steve Smith, football and basketball at Covington High School, Covington, La.

In addition to Overton, the female athletes include Vicki Hall, basketball at Indianapolis Brebeuf High School in Indianapolis, Ind.; Janel Joregessen, swimming at Ridgefield High School, Ridgefield, Conn.; Sarah Mannes, track and basketball at Yankton High School in Yankton, S.D.; and Michelle Richardson, swimming at St. Andrews High School in Boca Raton, Fla.

Overton began water-skiing at the age of four and began competing in the sport at age five.

This past year, she was named to the U.S. Water-ski team and the junior team. She won the national championship for ages 13-18 in three events, the slalom, tricks and overall. When chosen to the U.S. team, she was the youngest member picked.

She has won over a dozen gold medals in the sport, along with over 20 silver and bronze medals. She had set four national and three world records in her age group.

While she has competed in the open division since she was 10, she has dropped back into age group competition for national championships, but will compete only in the open division from now on.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Coach John Cooper had to wait until the final gun to say goodbye to Arizona State and hello to Columbus.

The Sun Devils, though, effectively said goodbye to the Air Force Falcons at the end of the first half of the Freedom Bowl.

That's when Daniel Ford threw a 61-yard touchdown pass to Aaron Cox to wrap up a 24-point second quarter and a 24-14 halftime lead.

The final at Anaheim Stadium on Wednesday night was 33-28 for Arizona State, which got a career-high 272 passing yards from Ford and lost Cooper to Ohio State.

"I think the turning point of the game was the last play of the first half," Air Force Coach Fisher DeBerry said about the Ford-to-Cox pass. "We didn't break down on that play, we just flat out got beat."

Ford threw off play-action and Cox beat Air Force defensive back Gary Kilmer.

It was a one-play series after Arizona State took an onside kick at its 39-yard line. Air Force kicked off from the 50 because the Sun Devils were whistled for a personal foul on the PAT following Albert Booker's 3-yard run that cut Arizona State's lead to 17-14.

"We tried the onside because we thought we had momentum coming off the score and we wanted to take a chance on getting the ball back and putting some more points up on the board," DeBerry said. "I certainly didn't anticipate them going 60 yards in one play."

"I'm real proud of the team. It was really young at the beginning of the season. I just wish we had a little more time at the end of the game."

The Falcons of the Western Athletic Conference chopped a 33-14 Sun Devil lead down to the final margin when Steven Senn caught touchdown passes of 10 yards and 18 yards from reserve quarterback Lance McDowell in the final three minutes.

And then Cooper bowed out of a Pacific-10 Conference program he had guided to three bowl games in his three seasons.

"This was my final game at Arizona State," he said. "I think it's pretty obvious what I'm going to do."

Cooper wouldn't say he was heading for Ohio State, but the Buckeye administration said it has asked the regents to approve hiring Cooper to replace the fired Earle Bruce.

Cooper said the victory was particularly sweet because he knew the Sun Devil players were "aware of my situation."

"It's not easy to say goodbye," said Cooper, who led the Sun Devils to a victory over Michigan in the 1987 Rose Bowl.

Of the key touchdown, Cooper said, "Daniel Ford called the play — you don't make great plays unless you take risks."

Ford, who completed 16 of 30 passes with one interception, had a previous career best of 233 passing yards in a season-opening victory at Illinois.

Ford and Air Force defensive tackle Chad Hennings, an All-American and the Outland Trophy winner, were the game's MVPs.

Hennings had 12 tackles and two sacks. Sun Devils tackle Shawn Patterson had 13 tackles and a sack.

Arizona State finished the year 7-4-1. Air Force ended at 9-4.

"I think the story of the game was turnovers," DeBerry said. "We certainly gave Arizona State a lot of opportunities. Their entire offensive front executed extremely well ... it just seemed like we were a step slower at times."

Air Force quarterback Steve Letnich, filling in for injured record-setter Dee Dowis, was intercepted twice and fumbled once. The Sun Devils turned those turnovers into 13 points.

Dowis, who set the NCAA single-season rushing record for a quarterback with 1,315 yards, was out with a broken right hand.

Letnich rushed for 90 yards and passed for 51. McDowell threw for 66 yards and rushed for 61.

Air Force, whose 386.3 yards per game rushing average was second only to Oklahoma, got 309 yards from its wishbone.

Arizona State lost the ball three times in the third quarter and settled for a 20-yard field goal from Alan Zendejas.

Kirk Wendorf scored what proved to be the winning touchdown for Arizona State on a 20-yard run early in the fourth quarter for the 33-14 lead.

The Sun Devils got 2-yard scoring runs from Channing Williams and Darryl Harris in the second quarter. Zendejas also had a 36-yard field goal in the second.

Air Force scored first, on Greg Johnson's 12-yard run in the first.

Pam Pack Captures Tourney Title

WASHINGTON — Washington High School rolled up an 88-58 victory over Perquimans in the championship game of the Washington Daily News Basketball Tournament Wednesday night.

Ryan Dixon was named as the tournament's most valuable player, one of three Pam Pack players named to the all-tournament team. The other two were Bob Rhodes and Joe Daniels.

Joining them on the five-man squad were George Frierson of runner-up Perquimans, and Guy Spruill of fourth-place Williamston.

Chocowinity took a 72-67 victory over Williamston to win third place in the tournament, but landed no one on the all-tourney team.

In the championship game, Washington jumped out to an early lead and raced to a 22-7 margin by the end of the first quarter. The Pam Pack slowed but slightly in the second frame, and carried a strong 39-23 lead into the locker rooms at the half.

The third period saw Washington continued to pull away with a 19-13 advantage. That made it 58-36. The Pam Pack then outhit Perquimans, 30-22, in the last quarter to finish off the romp.

Daniels led the Washington scoring with 18 points while Rhodes had 14, Dixon had 13 and Nico Hines had 10. Frierson had 25 to lead Perquimans.

Chocowinity slipped out into a 20-19 lead after one frame of the consolation game. Williamston came back, however, to outhit the Indians, 17-15, and hold a slim 36-35 lead at intermission.

In the third quarter, however, Chocowinity eased back out, 15-12, to lead 50-48. The Indians then outhit Williamston, 22-19, to claim the win.

Martin Abdullah led Chocowinity with 20 points while Curtis Myers had 18 and Vance Bryant had 17. Guy Spruill had 23, Michael York had 12 and Ricky Griffin had 10 for Williamston.

Washington is now 7-1 and travels to Williamston, 2-7 on Tuesday. Chocowinity, 4-3, visits Belhaven on Tuesday.

Greene Central Girls Win Title In Double Overtime

SNOW HILL — It took a couple of overtimes, but Greene Central's girls finally emerged as the champions of the Tri-County Classic basketball tournament Wednesday night, 39-38.

Greene Central's boys won the consolation game in their division, 54-29, beating Acme-Delco.

North Lenoir's boys won the championship, downing South Lenoir, 102-87, while the North Lenoir girls took the consolation game over Acme-Delco, 47-27.

In the girls' championship game, South Lenoir jumped off to a 10-1 lead in the opening quarter. Greene Central came back, however, and trailed, 21-13, at the half.

The Lady Rams fell further behind in the third period, 32-18, but then outhit South Lenoir, 16-2, outscoring the Lady Devils, 16-1 in the final 4:20, led by Chanel Hooker's 11. Using full court pressure, the Lady Rams got back into the game when Hooker hit two free throws to cut it to 34-32 with 55 seconds to go. She again scored with 40 seconds left to tie it up, but missed a chance for the win at the horn, leaving it at 34-34.

In the first overtime, Temiako Blackman hit the first of a one-and-one for a 35-34 lead and Hooker scored with 1:15 left to put the Lady Rams up, 37-34. But Tracy Salter hit a jumper with a minute left and Sonya King hit the second of a two-shot foul with five seconds left to tie it again, 37-37.

In the second overtime, Hooker made two free throws with 2:37 left for a 39-37 lead. King then made one free throw with 1:15 left, and missed a shot at the horn that could have won it for the Blue Devils.

Hooker finished with 23 points while King had 14 for South Lenoir. In the boys' consolation game, Greene Central zoomed out to a 13-6 lead after one period and never was in trouble. The Rams led at the half, 29-14 and upped the lead to 37-18 after three periods.

Greene Central finished off Acme-Delco, 17-7, in the final quarter.

Vernon Sowers led Greene Central with 11 while Anthony Jones had 10. No one scored in double figures for Acme-Delco.

Selected to the all-tournament team for girls were Nichole King of Acme-Delco, Vashita Kittrell of North Lenoir, Soyna King of South Lenoir and Angel Harrell and Hooker of Greene Central. Hooker was named the MVP.

For the boys, Eric Fields of Acme-Delco, Tyrone Streeter of Greene Central, Ray Kooz of South Lenoir and Dave Hinson and Leon Morgan of North Lenoir were named to the all-tournament team. Hinson was named the MVP.

Greene Central's boys are now 2-6 while the girls are 4-4. The Rams return to action on Tuesday, hosting Clinton.

Conley Captures Third In Own Event; Kinston Wins

HOLLYWOOD — Kinston won the championship of the D.H. Conley Girls Basketball Tournament which wound up Wednesday night. The Valkyries defeated Havelock's Lady Rams for the title, 62-60.

Hosting Conley took third place with a 33-32 come-from-behind win over Plymouth, while New Bern defeated Farmville Central, 45-43, for fifth and C.B. Aycock downed Ayden-Grifton, 32-24, to take seventh.

Kinston's Sandra Darden was named as the tournament's most valuable player, joining teammates Melvina Barnes and Shonda Hines on the all-tournament team. Others included Havelock's Laura Maxwell and Dee Godette; Carole Stokes of Ayden-Grifton; Connie Lancaster of Aycock; Clair Norman of New Bern; Kim Harrison of Farmville Central; Paula Owens of Plymouth and Nikki Adams of Conley.

In the third place game, Plymouth scored six first period points and held Conley scoreless. The Conley girls added but three in the second period while Plymouth picked up eight to take a 14-3 lead into intermission.

But in the third period, Conley began to come to life, outscoring Plymouth, 14-13, to trail by 27-17 at the horn. Then, in the final period, Conley dumped in 16 points and held Plymouth to just five. The Valkyries took the lead with about 2½ minutes left and held on from there to take the win.

Owens had 15 points to lead Plymouth and was the only scorer in the game to hit double figures.

Farmville Central held a 14-10 lead after the first period of the fifth place game, but was unable to hold to it. New Bern came back to score a 13-10 advantage and cut the lead to 24-23 at the half.

In the third period, Farmville outhit New Bern, 13-10, to leave the Lady Jaguars up, 37-33, as the last quarter began. In that, New Bern outscored Farmville, 12-6, to pull out the victory.

Norman led New Bern with 17 while Alex Stallings had 11 and Cindy Batts, 10. Farmville was led by Brenda Reed with 10.

Aycock edged out to a 6-4 lead after the first eight minutes of the seventh place game with Ayden-Grifton. The Lady Falcons then took a 13-8 lead at the half.

They extended that to 21-11 in the third quarter and allowed Ayden-Grifton a 13-11 rally in the final period.

Krystal Kennedy led Aycock with 17 points while Iris Brown had 10 to lead Ayden-Grifton.

Conley is now 4-4 on the year and travels to Farmville Central, 3-5 on Tuesday. Ayden-Grifton falls to 1-8 and entertains West Carteret on Tuesday.

Vikes Take Final Game

FLORENCE, S.C. — D.H. Conley's Vikings, stung by losses in their first two games, rallied to defeat South Florence, 69-46, to take seventh place in the Carolina Classic basketball tournament, held in Florence Wednesday.

The Vikings, one of three teams from North Carolina in the field, avoided the shutout by taking command early in the contest.

The Vikes pushed out to a 13-5 lead in the opening period of the game. They came back to post a 19-10 advantage in the second quarter. That allowed Conley to take a 32-15 lead into the dressing rooms at the half.

Conley continued to build on its lead in the third period, outscoring South Florence, 23-10. That ran the lead out to 55-25. South Florence rebounded, 21-14, against the reserves in the final quarter of the contest.

Bronswell Patrick led the Conley scoring with 11 points while Paul Merritt and Jonathan Bonner each contributed 10. South Florence was led by David Craver and Jerome McFadden with 13 each.

The victory boosts Conley's record to 5-3 on the year. The Vikings return to action on Tuesday, traveling to Farmville Central.

Kent State Coach Is Kansas Choice

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Glen Mason says he's not looking at his new job as head football coach at Kansas as a second choice — a sentiment echoed by the man who hired him.

The Kent State coach had sought the top position at Ohio State. Kansas Athletic Director Bob Frederick was pursuing Earle Bruce, the man whose firing created that vacancy.

Mason and Frederick wound up with each other.

"Glen was my first choice all along," Frederick said Wednesday after introducing the 37-year-old Mason as the Jayhawks' 34th head football coach. In fact, he said the reason the search for Bob Valesente's successor lasted more than five weeks was "partially because I was hoping things would work out so we could hire Glen."

Mason, a protege of Woody Hayes who coached Kent State to a 31-17 victory last season over the woeful Jayhawks, is the fourth head coach in eight years at a school that has not won a Big Eight Conference game in two seasons.

"I had no idea when we left Lawrence, Kansas on Sept. 19 that I would be returning to Lawrence as soon as we did," he said. "But I am very proud and very excited. I can't wait to get going."

Kansas ranked near the bottom in most Division I-A statistics the past two seasons while winning only four games. This season its 1-9-1 record included a bitter tie with archrival Kansas State and a one-point victory over Division I-AA foe Southern Illinois.

Mason, flanked by his wife Sally and Frederick, said "My number one priority is to change the attitude. That is the most important thing in any program whether you are 11-0 or 0-11. We're going to work on that. We'll come up with a game plan, a theme, and if everybody is willing to buy into that theme and work hard enough and hang in there, we'll change the attitude."

Mason played at Ohio State and coached there under Hayes and Bruce.

"Glen Mason is characterized by great energy and enthusiasm and his football teams reflect those qualities," Frederick said. "During his six years as offensive coordinator at Ohio State, the Buckeyes were in six consecutive bowl games. In two years at Kent State, he won 12 games when the school had won only 20 in the previous eight years."

Frederick said Mason signed a five-year contract for $78,000 a year.

"Beyond his success in the win-loss column, Coach Mason also insists on productive academic and moral behavior above reproach from his players," Frederick said.

Mason's first Kent State team in 1986 was 5-6. His squad this season finished 7-4, second in the Mid-American Conference.

Bruce and Frederick could not reach agreement on a contract.

Cooper Set For Ohio State Job

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The big decision and the bowl game behind him, John Cooper was both proud and sad to be leaving Arizona State.

Cooper's Arizona State Sun Devils beat Air Force 33-28 in the Freedom Bowl Wednesday night, and he announced moments afterward that it was his final game as the Arizona State coach.

While Cooper wouldn't flatly say he was going to be Ohio State's next coach,

Ohio State Athletic Director James Jones of the Buckeyes took care of that by issuing a statement saying Cooper's name had been submitted to the school's regents for approval. A news conference was scheduled today at Ohio State to announce the appointment.

Cooper will replace Earle Bruce, who was fired by Ohio State President Edward Jennings on Nov. 16, five days before the Buckeyes' last game of the season, against Michigan.

"There were three great years at Arizona State University," said Cooper, whose Sun Devil teams played in bowl games each of those seasons.

"I couldn't ask for a better situation than I've had here at Arizona State; it was a great environment," he said. "It's hard to say goodbye."

"I'm leaving because for me, proessionally, the situation is a better situation."

The 50-year-old Cooper made $225,000 to $300,000 as the Sun Devils coach. He reportedly will make $300,000 to $350,000 annually in his five-year contract with Ohio State.

Cooper's best year at Arizona State was last season, when he guided the Sun Devils to a 10-1-1 record, their first Pacific-10 title, and their first Rose Bowl appearance — a 22-15 victory over Michigan last January.

Arizona State's 7-4-1 record was the worst of his three years at the school, where he was a cumulative 25-9-2. Bruce finished 6-4-1, the same record Arizona State had going into the Freedom Bowl.

Bruce's nine-year record with the Buckeyes was 81-26-1, better than Cooper's mark of 82-40-2 during three years at Arizona State and eight at Tulsa. Bruce had the best overall record among Big Ten Conference coaches.

Cooper said he was particularly proud that the Sun Devils won the Freedom Bowl despite the swirl of reports the past few days tying him to the Ohio State job.

"That was a sweet one because if we had lost, people would have thought it was because of my situation," he said. "I know the players were aware of it."

He told his players of his resignation shortly after the game, and said he had told Arizona State officials the previous day.

"I didn't really make up my mind until yesterday," he said.

"We all pretty much got the message (that Cooper was leaving)," Arizona State quarterback Daniel Ford said. "We knew coming in; we expected it to happen. You want to win for him, he's part of the team."

"But you want to win for yourself, too."

"I'm sorry to see Coach Cooper leaving, but I wish him the very best at whatever he does," defensive end Trace Armstrong said. "He's a great coach with a lot of class."

Considered leading candidates to replace Cooper at Arizona State are Sun Devils defensive coordinator

Larry Marmie and offensive coordinator Jim Colletto.

Bruce, who had been considered for the then-vacant University of Arizona coaching position last January, also might be a candidate for the Sun Devils' post.

Charles Harris, Arizona State's athletic director, said, "There are no leading candidates right now. We've started putting the selection process together."

Cooper, a three-year letterman as a safety and tailback at Iowa State, is a native of Powell, Tenn.

He began his coaching career as a freshman coach under Clay Stapleton at Iowa State in 1962. He spent 1963-65 working under Tommy Prothro at Oregon State, then later worked with Pepper Rodgers at Kansas and Fran Curci at Kentucky.

At Tulsa, Cooper had a 3-8 record his first year, but was 9-2 the next year. His best season at Tulsa was 10-1 in 1982.

He was 8-4 in his first season at Arizona State.

Cotton States Classic championship game, allowing the Yellow Jackets to break open a tight game and go on to win the tournament 83-72.

"The play of the game had to be Neal's block," Cremins said. "We threw an errant in-bound play which really upset me and I thought, 'Here we go, losing the game on a turnover.' But Neal made a great block."

Smith had a different view.

"What bothers me is the play that changed the whole game," he said. "Terrance Howard was all alone for the layup and there's no question that he got fouled on the shot and then someone fell on him. Not only don't we get the foul, the official gives the ball back to Tech. There's no room for that kind of mistake in this game."

The controversial play came after Chris Morris hit a 3-point jump shot to pull Auburn within three at 75-72 with 1:25 remaining.

After a Georgia Tech turnover, Auburn had a chance to come within one when Howard got loose on a fast break. But Neal caught him and blocked his attempted layup. The ball went out of bounds and Tech was awarded the ball.

Sooners, 'Canes Ready For Battle

MIAMI (AP) — For a bunch of good ol' boys, No. 1 Oklahoma sure feels at home among the pink-and-pastel set in Miami.

The fast lane also fits second-ranked Miami, although the sleek Hurricanes will be the visitors — sort of — in the Orange Bowl.

Each team went through final full-scale drills Wednesday in preparation for their game New Year's night for college football's national championship.

For Miami, it was a day of movies, mixing and mingling with Georgetown basketball players and an informal meeting with Coach Jimmy Johnson.

There also was some official business. School representatives today planned to appeal linebacker George Mira's suspension by the NCAA during a conference call. Mira was ruled ineligible for the Orange Bowl because he took a diuretic — a drug banned by the NCAA — and Johnson holds little hope that his leading tackler will be able to play.

"I've blocked it out of my mind," Johnson said of Mira and offensive tackle John O'Neill, who also was suspended after failing a drug test.

Johnson smiled more than he has recently, although his team's workout was again closed to visitors. Last week, he tossed out a member of the Orange Bowl committee who just wanted a few autographs. Armed policemen patrolled the premises to make sure no one would get in this time.

The Sooners, meanwhile, again played it loose. Coach Barry Switzer, whose temperament never seems to change, invited some outsiders in to watch practice and chatted a mile-a-minute as he roamed the sidelines.

This is the fourth straight New Year's that Oklahoma has come to Miami Beach and the Sooners are comfortable in town. They like the Orange Bowl, even though the natural grass slows down their wishbone attack, and really enjoy the off-the-field action.

A favorite hangout is Biscayne Baby, a night-time spot in the swinging Coconut Grove section near the Miami campus.

"You get a variety of people in there and I like to watch people," said defensive tackle Darren Kilpatrick, from little Porter, Okla.

"But the guy who dresses up as a woman in that blue poodle skirt and dances by himself. That just ain't right," he said. "I would like to talk to him to see what the problem is. We don't see that stuff back in Oklahoma. That just isn't right."

There's the jai-alai fronton and greyhound racing, too.

"I like the betting," said offensive tackle Greg Johnson, from Moore, Okla. "You don't get to gamble in the Bible Belt."

While the Sooners camped at the famed Foutainebleau Hotel, the Hurricanes are staying at Orange Bowl headquarters, the Omni International. Tonight, Miami might move to another location to "get away from the hoopla," Johnson said.

Around noon, Johnson gave his players a break from game films and took them to the movies at a mall in the hotel complex.

"They had their choice of a bunch of them," Johnson said. "There was that 'Throw Momma From The Train' and some others."

In early evening, Johnson followed his season-long tradition and held a meeting "just to visit with the players."

"We talk about a whole bunch of things. Like what they're going to do after college. I won't let 'em say professional football. That won't last very long."

Later at night, the Georgetown basketball players drifted through the Omni lobby after routing Florida International. There wasn't much trouble telling the football players from the basketball ones, but they all walked tall.

Today, both Oklahoma and Miami planned to set foot inside the Orange Bowl for the first time this week. It was an opportunity to see the setting again, and no formal practices were planned.

Officially, the Sooners, the champions of the Big Eight Conference, are the home team. But they agreed to let the Hurricanes, who play their regular-season games at the Orange Bowl, have the home locker room and home side of the field.

"I always thought we were on the home side," said Switzer, whose teams instead occupied the visiting end during previous trips to the Orange Bowl.

Both schools were allotted 12,500 tickets, although the crowd will be overwhelmingly on Miami's side.

No beer will be sold inside the stadium during the game in an effort to control the rowiness, although some Oklahomans have already encountered problems.

An Oklahoma City television crew had $50,000 worth of equipment stolen from outside the Orange Bowl this week.

The Sooners' marching band is trying to avoid any scrapes by staying at a hotel north of Miami, beyond Dade County.

"We've had trouble here in the past, even when we weren't playing Miami," band director Gene Thrailkill said.

Bluebonnet Ground-Gainers Present Opposite Features

HOUSTON (AP) — Craig Heyward, Pittsburgh's 270-pound tailback, won't try to avoid any collisions with Texas tacklers in tonight's Bluebonnet Bowl. Eric Metcalf, the Longhorns' 170-pound tailback, will be looking for open spaces.

"Sometimes a game will start and a guy will tackle me and start to talk," Heyward, the nation's No. 2 rusher with 1,655 yards, said. "I'll just come back and run over him on the next play and go back to the huddle laughing."

The 5-foot-11 junior has the size to attack almost any defensive player.

Metcalf, who finished third nationally with 1,925 all-purpose yards, creates new moves to gain his yards.

"What I do is try to make people miss," Metcalf said. "The only time I'd try to run over someone is when I had enough speed built up to where I thought I could do it."

The Longhorns, 6-5 in their first season under Coach David McWilliams, are trying to end a four-game losing streak in bowls while the 19th-ranked Panthers, 8-3, are looking for a victory in their first bowl appearance since in four years.

Pittsburgh ranks fourth nationally in total defense, allowing an average of 233 yards per game, and fourth in scoring defense, 10.4 points per game.

The Panthers had three shutouts this season and allowed only five points in their last three games.

Linebacker Zeke Gadson leads the Panther defense with 124 tackles and 22½ quarterback sacks, second nationally to the 24 registered by Outland Trophy-winning tackle Chad Hennings of Air Force.

Freshman Darnell Dickerson took over as the starting quarterback for Pitt's last three games and will be the starter against the Longhorns.

"He's the kind of athlete that the layoff hasn't hurt," Pittsburgh Coach Mike Gottfried said. "We're trying to add a few things for him. He gets better all the time."

The Longhorns are led on offense by Metcalf, who ran for 1,161 yards, and quarterback Bret Stafford, who owns 13 school passing records.

"The key for us is to avoid the turnovers," Stafford said. "That was the key for us all of our season. If we turned the ball over, we lost; if we didn't, we won."

Texas is conscious of turnovers because the Longhorns committed 27 turnovers in four of their losses and had five miscues in their six victories.

Texas' defense, led by linebacker Britt Hager, must try to contain Heyward.

"It will be a challenge to try to tackle him," said Hager, the Longhorns' leading tackler with 187 stops this season. "I don't think one or two guys will bring him down. I'll have to be a team effort."

Senior safety John Hagy says stopping Heyward is the key to the game.

"We've got to shut down Heyward and that young quarterback and make them beat us with other people," Hagy said.

The Longhorns have a 3-7 record in their last 10 bowl appearances and currently have lost four straight, including a 24-16 setback to Air Force in the Bluebonnet Bowl two years ago.

"We've got to win this game and make it a good start for next season," Metcalf said.

The Panthers are appearing in a bowl game for the first time since 1983 when they lost to Ohio State in the Fiesta Bowl.

"We started out the season with goals of a national championship and that didn't work out," Heyward said. "But we've got a feeling that we can be a better team next year. We've got a lot of young people."

White Named Top Defender

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "I just thank God for the opportunity," Philadelphia Eagles defensive end Reggie White said after The Associated Press named him the NFL defensive player of the year.

The 290-pound White, a part-time Baptist minister when not sacking quarterbacks and stopping runners — he is sometimes called "the Minister of Defense" — admitted he wasn't too surprised Wednesday night when the honor was announced. "My coaches and my teammates all thought I would make it," he said. But he insisted it would never have happened without God's support.

"Without him, I wouldn't have been able to accomplish what I've accomplished. I am glad that I accomplished this because I strive to be a role model for young people, and I think what pushes me more is knowing my responsibilities to my family, to young people and most of all to my God," White said in a telephone interview from his Sewell, N.J., home. "My teammates were a great help also," he added. "And my coaches."

White, who was just one shy of tying the National Football League record of 22 quarterback sacks despite only playing 12 games in the strike-shortened season, was a runaway winner of the award, receiving 63 votes from sportscasters and broadcasters.

Runnerup was defensive end Bruce Smith of the Buffalo Bills, who got 10 votes, followed by linebacker Fred Young of Seattle with three.

The sack record was set in 1984 by the New York Jets' Mark Gastineau in a 16-game season.

"He had a phenomenal year," Eagles Coach Buddy Ryan said of White, who is in his third year with Philadelphia after two seasons in the USFL.

Ohio Tops Seahawks

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Paul Graham scored 23 points and Dave Jamerson hit two 3-point baskets to lead Ohio University to a 72-60 victory over North Carolina-Wilmington Wednesday night.

Graham gave Ohio a second-half offensive spark when he scored 15 points after he was moved from forward to point guard at the start of the half. The Bobcats trailed the Seahawks at halftime, 28-25.

Ohio U. led 49-47 with 5:30 remaining in the game when the Bobcats scored 11 consecutive points to extend their lead to 60-47 with 2:28 left. Leading the OU surge was Jamerson, who hit two three-point shots.

Wayne Rogers Uses Notes To Jog His Acting Memory

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wayne Rogers thumbed through his copy of the script for the CBS movie "Drop-Out Mother" and checked his cryptic margin notes that told him how to play each scene.

He portrays Jack, a former network news producer who's become a political media consultant. His wife, played by Valerie Harper, decides to give up her job as a public relations executive to be a full-time wife and mother.

"Jack tells her, 'You're acting funny. Feminine,'" Rogers said. "I wrote on the side, 'Bulgarian.' I write in attitudes. It gives a line a whole new meaning."

"One of the problems when you get a script just before going into production is that you don't have time to make choices. I like to rehearse. I'll even do it the wrong way a few times to see how that feels."

Rogers was in the conference room of a warehouse he has converted into an office building to house his various business enterprises.

He looked at the script and noted that in dealing with the housekeeper, Mrs. Petty, he'd written into the margin, "a spy?" Rogers frowned. "I don't remember her," he said, "but that certainly gives me a different way to react to her."

The movie, which also stars Carol Kane and Kim Hunter, will air Friday on CBS. It's more or less a companion piece to "Drop-Out Father," an earlier TV movie also written by Bob Shanks and produced by Shanks and his wife, Ann.

In the movie, when Harper, as Nora Cromwell, decides to quit her job, Jack does not react enthusiastically.

"She's terrible in the kitchen," he said. "I tell her, 'You were always exciting when you worked. Now we act like married people.' The drop in our family income isn't something that figures in his reaction. He does react to it, like 'Hey, we're not making as much money.' The essence is that he doesn't like the change in her."

Rogers was Trapper John in "M-A-S-H," but left the hit series after three years. Briefly in 1976, he was a 1930s private eye in "City of Angels," a series apparently inspired by the movie "Chinatown." His last series was "House Calls," which ended in 1982.

"I can't conceive of any circumstances under which I would do another series," he said. "I was asked just yesterday by a studio. They had a project in mind. An hour show is a killer. No way would I even consider it. A half-hour, maybe."

"Right now I'm thinking of doing a play in New York. I've never been on Broadway, although I've produced for Broadway. I've been Off-Broad-

VIEWERS WANTED — Wayne Rogers and Valerie Harper appear as husband and wife when they star in the upcoming CBS telecast "Drop-Out Mother," which is scheduled to air Jan. 1 opposite the Oklahoma-Miami matchup in the Orange Bowl football game. Says Rogers of the time slot, "I think we'll get the women viewers." (AP Laserphoto) way. I don't know which is worst. Neither is good. I'm talking about financial risk. If you don't get one man's review you can't survive."

He has been devoting much of his time to business ventures and in recent years has worked mostly in other people's films. He does produce movies and plays but usually isn't in them. He's developing a movie for Home Box Office called "The Right Thing."

Rogers also has a role in the CBS miniseries "Bluegrass," which will be broadcast at the end of February. Cheryl Ladd stars as a woman who returns to her Kentucky home to fulfill a dream of breeding, training and racing world-class thoroughbreds.

"I play a character who's patrician and is a socially and politically ambitious animal," he said. "He wants to be governor. In my mind he's just behaving as any amoral animal would. But he raped Cheryl Ladd's character when she was 16. Many years later she comes back seeking revenge. She wants to disgrace me and win the Kentucky Derby."

He also plays "a terrible person" in the feature film "The Killing Time." Once again, he has abused a woman. The movie also stars Keifer Sutherland, Joe Don Baker, Beau Bridges and Camelia Katt.

Networks To Carry Gorbachev Message

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC, NBC and Cable News Network have agreed to broadcast Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's New Year's message to the American people in full, spokesmen said.

CBS decided against showing the entire Gorbachev speech, but "will use appropriate excerpts on our news broadcast," spokeswoman Donna Dees said Wednesday.

Spokesmen for ABC and NBC said the networks would broadcast the Gorbachev speech on New Year's Day, along with one by President Reagan intended for broadcast in the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev's greeting, expected to be three to five minutes long, is being made available to the networks as part of a reciprocal agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union.

President Reagan has taped a message to the Soviet people that is intended for broadcast over the state television network on New Year's Day.

American Comic Drawing Packed Houses In Paris

By SYDNEY RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Jango Edwards is a souped-up Chevy on a highway of sleek Citroens, a Detroit native whose driven lunacy has brought to the sophisticated Paris stage a show that is speedy, fun and irresistibly American.

Six nights a week, Edwards bounds through 90 minutes of comedy before packed houses in the city's lively theater district.

The 37-year-old comic clown mimics, mimes, leaps on and off the stage, sings and terrorizes the front row with the energy and mischief of a hyperactive child.

To French audiences, Edwards speaks only English. In a country that prides itself on cultural events that are intellectual and subtle, he has found success hitting spectators over the head with a rubber club.

"It works because I'm a clown and a clown can make anybody laugh anywhere. Clowning is the silliness of youth and the wisdom of age, it's pathos and it's hilarity," said Edwards over an avocado-burger, homefries and coke in a high-tech luncheon in the new, fashionable Bastille district in eastern Paris.

In a series of skits that run from hilarious to awful, Edwards plays a wacky classical pianist who beats spectators with a rubber club, a frenzied French crooner who molests a woman in the front row and a drunk who spews beer and constantly threatens to tumble off the stage.

The show might be called idiocy in Detroit, but in Paris they call it art.

"The show is a gallery of portraits in which each picture is brushed with a tenderness that softens the ridicule and the obscenity," said the news magazine Le Point in reviewing the show that opened in September and has been extended to run through June.

Critics have used such words as gargantuan, poetic and lewd to describe his bizarre gallery that includes a jungle native, a fat rock musician, a screwball cowboy, a pornographic evangelist, all played at breakneck speed.

As a maniacal, respected magician, reminiscent of Jerry Lewis' nutty professor, Edwards selects a member of the audience to assist in a goofy, juvenile card trick.

"Pick one, any one. OK, OK, don't show me," he says, averting his eyes. But instead of selecting from a pack of cards, the assistant has chosen from five sausages. The silly symbolism of the French hotdogs is not lost on the wildly giggling audience. Can this be the homeland of Moliere?

Dashing madly from skit to skit, his shoulder-length hair flying and his rubbery face sweating, Edwards is impossible to not like — he tries so hard.

For an encore, he dons a sequined bikini, diving cap and goofy Mercury wings and dives headfirst from atop a chair into a glass of water.

His inventiveness and the risks he takes nightly recall the early comedians of American television, and Edwards remembers watching Ernie Kovacs, Red Skelton and Milton Berle.

"I used to cry when I heard Jimmy Durante say, 'Goodnight Mrs. Kalabash ...' These were geniuses who could take an audience to the edge," he said. "And you suffered a lot watching them because you could see how pathetic they were, how pathetic we all are."

Leaving the restaurant he grabbed a young woman at the counter and gave her a loud, wet kiss, rapped a stranger on the head, banged the door into his face and turned the "Open" sign to "Closed." Outside, a woman asked him for his autograph.

Edwards, who trained as a clown when he first arrived in Europe 17 years ago, lives in Amsterdam and has a cult following in West Germany and Holland. In January, he is taking a month off from his Paris show to play to 28 sold-out theaters in Germany and Switzerland.

Next year he will play in Montreal and Toronto followed by a year of international bookings. In 1989, he will play for the second time in the Soviet Union where a videotape of his 1985 show has been making the rounds of Moscow cabs.
