A YOUNG YEAR — Joel Stocks, 2 weeks old, of Greenville, seems to ponder the new year that surrounds him. As many people use the first days of 1988 to make resolutions and new beginnings, a review of 1987 is featured in today's and Sunday's papers. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Reagan, Gorbachev Exchange Pledges To Seek New Treaty

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev greeted the new year today by exchanging pledges to seek an intercontinental missile treaty during the first six months of 1988.

The two world leaders, who signed an intermediate-range missile accord in Washington in December and plan to meet again in Moscow before midyear, voiced their hopes in an exchange of televised messages to each other's peoples.

Reagan used the prerecorded address to highlight some points of difference between the two superpowers. He pressed for a space-based missile defense and called for steps to foster human rights and settle regional wars.

Gorbachev said there are "profound changes" going on in the Soviet Union. He stressed the value of human life anywhere in the world and said the Soviets are "ready for interaction" in dealing with world trouble spots.

Before turning to any of these issues, however, both leaders expressed their hopes for an agreement on long-range nuclear weapons.

"Perhaps we can have a treaty ready to sign by our meeting in spring," Reagan said. "The world prays that we will. We on the American side are determined that we will."

Gorbachev, for his part, said, "We are ready to continue fruitfully the negotiations on reducing strategic arms with a view to signing a treaty to that effect, even in the first half of this year."

It was the second time Reagan and Gorbachev had exchanged televised messages on New Year's Day. They began the practice in 1986 after their first meeting in Geneva, but skipped 1987 after their summit in Reykjavik, Iceland, collapsed over Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative — the anti-missile plan known informally as Star Wars.

This continues to be an issue in arms control talks between the two countries. Reagan said, "Today, both America and the Soviet Union have an opportunity to develop a defensive shield against ballistic missiles, a defensive shield that will threaten no one."

"For the sake of a safer peace, I am committed to pursuing the possibility that technology offers," the president said in his talk, which ran five minutes and 12 seconds. Gorbachev, in remarks that ran five minutes and 27 seconds, made no reference to the Star Wars issue.

Reagan told the Soviets, "As you know, we Americans are concerned about human rights including freedoms of speech, press, worship and travel."

Saying that "Silence is a form of falsehood," he pledged, "We will always speak out on behalf of human dignity."

In his nearest approach to the issue of human rights, a touchy one between the two superpowers, Gorbachev said, "Human life is equally priceless, whether in the Soviet Union, the United States, or in any other country. So let us spare no effort to affirm peace on earth."

In a reference to such trouble spots as Afghanistan and Nicaragua,

The Year 1987 Medical Center Develops

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Despite a tragic beginning with the EastCare hospital air ambulance crash on Jan. 8, the year 1987 proved to be a continuation of Greenville's securing itself as the medical center of eastern North Carolina.

Positive events included the completion of two successful heart transplants, the opening of a Ronald McDonald House, and a lucrative telethon to benefit the pediatric portion of the regional hospital.

The EastCare medical transport helicopter based at Pitt County Memorial Hospital crashed and burned in Duplin County, killing the four people aboard. Dead in the wreckage were the pilot, Perry Reynolds; the chief flight nurse, Mike McGinnis; the assistant chief flight nurse, Pam Demaree, and their infant patient Xenia Lewis.

The crash brought a halt to the program until every aspect of safety could be thoroughly investigated and staff could be rebuilt. The program started anew April 10 with 12-hour daytime service and went back to 24-hour service Aug. 10. The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Foundation made its annual award for service to the hospital to the EastCare team who died.

The successful transplants were two of many medical procedures that took place here, many of them non-invasive in nature. For most of the work done here to alleviate illness and injury, there was no fanfare. People did their jobs in various areas of health care and these efforts added to the prosperity of the area.

On Feb. 17, a 58-year-old Beaufort County man became the first person to receive a heart transplant at Pitt

Long-Distance Telephone Rates Falling 3.5 Percent

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. dropped its rates for interstate long-distance calls by 3.5 percent today and federal regulators could order further cuts after an investigation into the company's costs.

Daytime rates will fall 6.4 percent, evening rates will drop 1.9 percent and late-night and weekend rates will be trimmed by 0.6 percent, the company said in its New Year's Eve announcement.

To the average AT&T residential customer paying about $9 per month for out-of-state phone calls, it means a savings of about 21 cents or 2.4 percent.

AT&T has said it wants to make daytime rates more competitive. Although the cuts would tend to benefit business customers the most, the company says residential customers account for about 45 percent of daytime traffic.

The cuts mark the sixth major round of rate reductions since AT&T was stripped of its local Bell operating companies by an antitrust decree Jan. 1, 1984. Rates have dropped nearly 36 percent since then.

ECU Sees Changes Occur On Campus

This is the third of a three-part series on education in Pitt County as it developed during 1987.

By CHERIE EVANS

The year 1987 brought administrative changes and student involvement on the campus of East Carolina University.

John M. Howell retired as chancellor of the university after five years in that position. Succeeded by Dr. Richard R. Eakin, the former vice president for planning and budgeting at Bowling Green State University, Howell began his career at ECU in 1957 as an associate professor of political science. He watched the school mount from 4,000 students that year to more than 10,000 in 1987. With the help of university staff and alumni, ECU raised $25 million in private gifts in the past five years and has been ranked seventh of 158 comprehensive universities in the south.

In January, Eakin became the ninth chief administrator at ECU in 80 years. He comes to the university seeking expanded achievements such as stronger academic programs, more private support for scholarships, more black faculty, students and staff, and better communication of present-day strengths through university publications.

In a recent telephone interview,

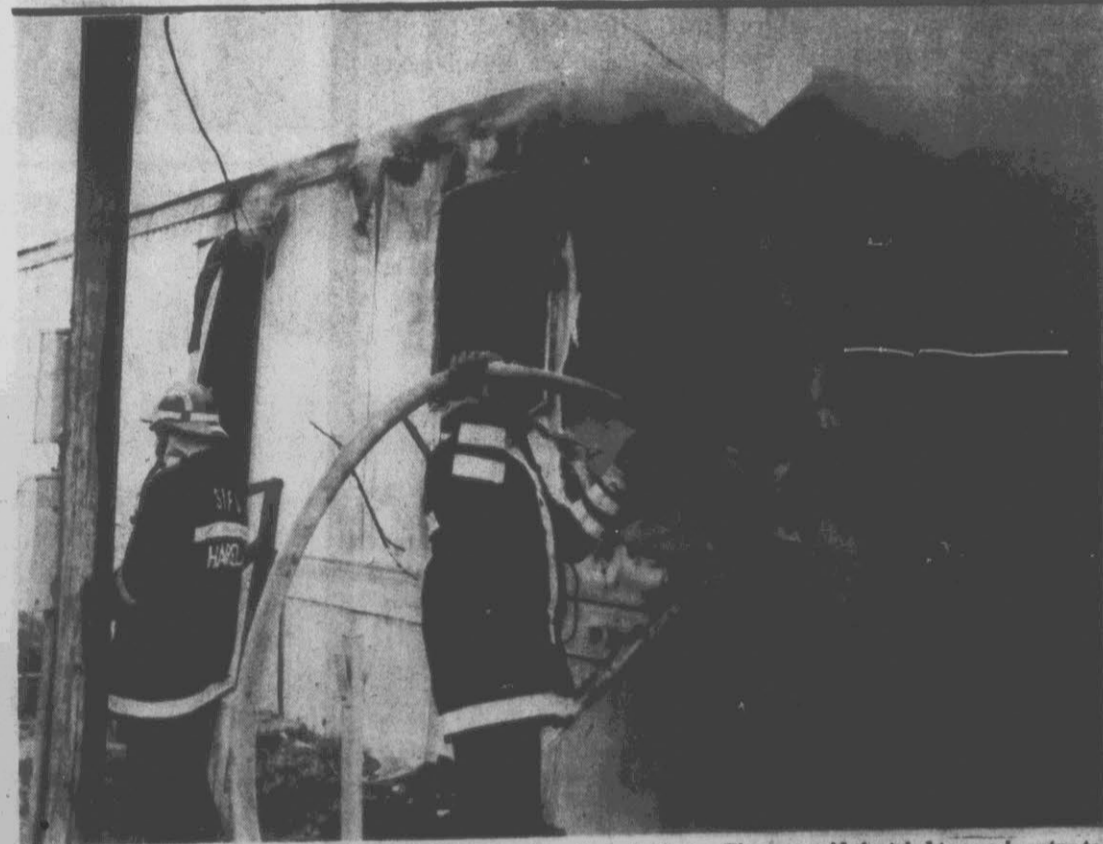

Eakin addressed several events at ECU that occurred in 1987, beginning with contributions to the university. "I have been extremely pleased with the generosity of alumni and friends of the university over the past 10 months. The gifts have ranged from $5 to over a million dollars (and) all of these gifts are important to us."

Two professorships also were established at the university this year, Eakin said. And, "literally thousands have come forth to contribute to us. That's (contributions) been especially pleasant to me in the first few months."

Eakin also commended the faculty and administrators at ECU for their contributions to the university this year. "I have been quite impressed with the faculty and administrators I have been working with," he said. "The faculty has some well deserved ambitions to increase the nature of the offerings we offer at the university" through graduate and undergraduate programs.

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors has granted ECU the opportunity to bring some new programs into the university curriculum, Eakin said. "It granted the sixth (doctorate) program in the medical sciences and I hope we will be able to increase the number of of-

MOBILE HOME FIRE — Four children were rescued by neighbors from a burning mobile home at Smith's Trailer Park Thursday afternoon. The neighbors, Daniel Brown and his brother Joe Brown, who live next door, saw the rear of the home on fire and heard children. The children's mother, listed by officials as Helene Freeman, had just gone to a mail box about 100 yards from the home. Firemen said she tried to regain entry to the burning home and fell, causing minor injuries to her leg. The children and Ms. Freeman were taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The children were not reported injured. Members of the Staton House Fire Department responded to the 1:43 p.m. call. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Greenville Makes Giant Strides To Become Eastern Metropolis

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer
Once considered a sleepy, tobacco-centered outpost, situated between the state capital and the ocean, Greenville made significant strides in 1987 to put away forever its small town image and to emerge as the premier metropolitan community of eastern North Carolina.

It was a year of unprecedented growth; a year marked with change, a year of recognition, and a year of development.

In recalling some of 1987's major events, it becomes evident — Greenville has had a most memorable year.

It was an election year, and on Nov. 3, Greenville voters went to the polls, and after all the ballots were tabulated, Greenville had itself a new mayor.

City Council member Ed Carter defeated the incumbent, Les Garner, becoming the first black mayor in Greenville's modern history. The election marked the first time Greenville had used the 5-1-1 election system.

Under the 5-1-1 plan, five members of the council were elected by district while one council member and the mayor were elected at-large.

Throughout the election, Garner was criticized for comments made during an April 9 City Council session.

After presenting plaques to three black employees of the Public Works Department for the rescue of a girl who fell in a pond, Garner said to the men and their wives as they were leaving: "Why don't you stick around. We may cut a watermelon later, or eat some ice cream."

The Southern Christian Leadership Council called for the mayor's resignation.

Garner said the statement was misinterpreted, and said he had used the statement on numerous other occasions with members of all races as a mere social amenity.

Then on Oct. 15, Garner told an Oriental joke at a Procter and Gamble employee meeting. Once again there was a public outcry at Garner's indiscretion.

Following the second incident, mayoral candidate Carter said of Garner's jokes, "It reflects negatively on the city and the City Council and degrades the efforts by many citizens to make this a desirable place to live."

As the campaign continued, Garner did not attend a candidate forum on Oct. 27, sponsored by the League of Women Voters. He also pulled out of a debate scheduled at the WITN studios.

Final election results: 3,441 votes for Carter, 3,145 for Garner.

After winning the election, Carter and the new City Council took the oath of office at a special installation ceremony at McGinnis Theater on the East Carolina University campus. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the Holiday Inn on Memorial Drive.

Sworn to the City Council for the next two years were Inez Fridley, Bill Hadden, Nancy Jenkins and Lorraine Shinn, who won the at-large nomination and was named mayor pro-tem.

Also voted onto council were newcomers Mildred Council and Rufus Huggins.

Another Greenville newcomer took over the reins of city government in 1987, as Greenville appointed a new city manager.

After a five-month search, City Council on Aug. 31 selected Greg Knowles to assume the duties of the chief executive position.

Knowles, who had previously served as city manager of Inkster, Mich.,

Pitt's Communities Move Ahead During 1987

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County towns counted their accomplishments at the end of 1987 and looked forward to additional ones during 1988.

Farmville
By August of this year, Farmville will have a new municipal building to house its administrative offices, police department, jail complex and courtroom. The 15,000-square-foot structure was begun in August. The town added three new industries, a shopping center and two new apartment complexes during 1987. The industries are Sag Harbor Industries, which makes electrical components; International Screen Printing, a division of Tom Togs sportswear manufacturers, and Southern States, which is developing a seed redrying and distribution center.

Stores are being opened in the Bright Leaf Shopping Center, which was built and annexed by the town during 1987. Cowan Apartments have been completed and Walnut Ridge Apartments are under construction.

U.S. 264, on both the east and west of Farmville, has opened. Clearances have been issued for the state to start work on the section of the highway that will link these two sections and bypass Farmville.

Renovation of the May Museum, a town project being carried out with money bequeathed by the late Tabitha M. DeVisconti, is about 70 percent complete. This former residence of Miss DeVisconti will be a museum and park owned by the town.

Initial work has been done for the town's Dogwood Festival of the Arts to be held April 22-23.

Simpson
Simpson received a federal grant of $276,675. Regina Hopkins, town clerk, said some $27,000 was used for drainage improvements; $217,000 for rehabilitation and improvement of privately owned homes, and $22,000 to improve recreation and parks equipment for the town. Not included in this grant, the town built a $29,000 restroom facility for the town park.

Customers continued to be added to the cable television service begun in the town in 1986.

Ayden
Ayden residents were elated to hear in August that the Weyerhaeuser Co. will build a lumber facility three miles from Ayden that will employ about 140 people. The estimated completion date will be February 1989; the estimated cost, $40 million.

Blue Bell Inc. announced the closing of its Wrangler plant in Ayden effective March 1. Unitec Plastics bought the Blue Bell building and began a plastic molding operation in August. The estimated employment is 35 people.

Mid-Atlantic Fish Farm Inc. constructed a 5,000-square-foot building and opened a catfish processing facility near Ayden in November. The first of its kind in North Carolina, the enterprise includes about 50 acres of catfish ponds.

Stevy Manufacturing Co. leased a building from the town and began operating a sewing facility in November. It employs between 20 and 25 people.

The town held its 13th annual Col-lard Festival in September, attracting about 12,000 people. The chamber of commerce sponsored a Christmas parade Dec. 8, the first for the town in 18 years. Between 4,000 and 5,000 people attended.

Grimesland

Grimesland voters defeated in 1987 a $700,000 waste water bond issue.

For the first time this year, the town had Christmas street decorations.

Town Clerk Dorothy Sullivan's office was moved and renovated.

Grifton
The Chamber of Commerce of Grifton is raising money for the renovation of the town depot to be used for a community building.

1988 promises to be the year of the long-awaited Extended Area Service for toll-free telephone communication two ways between Grifton and Ayden and one way between Grifton and Greenville. The target month is October.

The Pitt Development Corp. announced during 1987 that it had selected a site and has begun plans to develop a shell building to attract industry to the Grifton area.

The N.C. Department of Transportation announced the planned replacement of a bridge on N.C. 11 south of Grifton and the planned paving of State Road 1910 to the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewerage District plant.

The town received a community development grant of $468,336 for housing renovation on Tucker and Contentnea streets.

The town's police department was relocated to the newly renovated fire and police building on Highland Avenue.

The town's 17th annual Shad Festival was held in April.

Fountain

Fountain has a new industry — Energy Savers, a window and door manufacturing firm.

The town began in April buying its water from the town of Farmville.

Its first Christmas parade of the past 30 years was held on Nov. 28 and promises to become an annual event.

Bethel
Bethel built and moved into a new fire and rescue building and renovated its old fire station for use as a public service building. The town has started construction on a $1.7 million waste water treatment expected in early 1990.

The town has a new post office. Package Craft, a manufacturer of corrugated boxes, expanded its facilities and increased its employment.

The new Bethel Family Practice Center, affiliated with the East Carolina University School of Medicine, moved into newly renovated facilities.

Baptist Notes Ethical Decline

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Despite indications of spiritual hunger in America and a surge of interest in religion, there has been a decline in the level of ethics, a Southern Baptist leader says.

The Rev. Roy Edgemon, director of the denominational Sunday School Board's church-training department, told a meeting of state leaders:

"The No. 1 trend of religion in America is the spiritual hunger for depth and meaning in the lives of Christians. But at the same time, the level of ethics is declining. Little difference is found in the ethical views and behaviors of those who go to church and those who don't."

He said many churches are not emphasizing biblical standards: "We are no longer weighing our values by the word of God, but by trends in society. We must come back to weighing our values by the teaching of the Word."

Steady Growth

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) says it experienced steady growth during 1987 and estimated worldwide membership would reach 6.5 million in the first half of 1988, up from 6.17 million at the end of 1986.

Museum Made Major Renovations During Year

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The year 1987 saw more a continuation of established art and entertainment programs rather than any dramatic new additions to the Greenville and Pitt County scene.

Perhaps the biggest story of the year in art was the completion, in early September, of renovations at the Greenville Museum of Art. Extensive improvements were made both in the inner and exterior areas of the building, using funds totaling a little less than $200,000 raised locally for the project. Renovation resulted in the museum being closed during June, July and August.

With the work completed, conditions have been greatly improved, with new wiring, temperature control and a much improved storage system for the museum's collection of art. Interior work, which included revamping woodwork and floors, installation of new carpeting, and fresh paint throughout has resulted in a lighter and brighter decor.

In October, Mary Anne Pennington, the museum's director for eight years, resigned to accept directorship of a museum in Laurel, Miss. Becky Young was named interim director, and a search is under way to find a new permanent director.

At Gray Gallery, at the school of art at East Carolina University, the year was marked by several good exhibitions arranged by gallery director Perry Nesbitt. Highlight of 1987 was a show of Latin American Art during the month of November.

This exhibition, a two-fold one of contemporary Latin American art and items from the university's collection of older artifacts, was held in conjunction with other university departments with special emphasis on Latin America.

Several artists were on the scene at the ECU School of Art as visiting artists or artists-in-residence.

Two local art galleries, Arlington Hall and East Gallery, each presented periodic exhibitions of work by local, university, state and national artists for a look at contemporary art in a diversity of media.

At Pitt Community College, an American Indian artist, Ken Marsh, was chosen as the 1987-88 visiting artist. Following an established pattern, Marsh will be making appearances in county schools and before various area agencies and organizations.

The Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, now several years old, continued its role as an umbrella agency for a variety of arts and entertainment programs. Again, the principal event for the council was another successful week-long festival of arts held in the spring.

The dean of North Carolina artists, Francis Speight, a longtime resident of Greenville, celebrated his 91st birthday in September. Less active than in recent years, Speight and his artist wife, Sarah Blakeslee, nonetheless continue to make periodic trips into the countryside to sketch landscape scenes.

In December, North Carolina lost one its outstanding artists with the death of 94-year-old Minnie Evans, a Wilmington woman legendary for her visionary art.

On the literary scene, the month of December saw the death of 77-year-old Ovid Pierce, North Carolina native and a Greenville resident for many years. He was the author of such well-known novels as "The Plantation," "On A Lonesome Porch," and "The Devil's Half."

Three literary figures saw the publication of their work. Dr. William Stephenson, a faculty member of ECU's English Department, won the North Carolina Victorian Cup for his biography of Sallie Southall Cotton, a prominent 19th and early 20th century Pitt County woman.

Edward Reep, for over a decade a faculty artist at ECU, had the account of his war days, "A Combat Artist In World War II," published by the University of Louisville Press, and J.W. Rivers, a poet who lived three years in Greenville recently, received critical acclaim for his volume, "When the Owl Cries, Indians Die." ECU English faculty member poet Peter Makuck had another volume of poetry published late in the year.

The Greenville Writers Club in 1987 marked its 20th anniversary, with interest and participation still going strong.

Another organization, the Playwrights Fund of North Carolina Inc., headquartered in Greenville, chalked up another year of providing a forum to playwrights locally, statewide and throughout the southeastern United States.

The East Carolina Summer Theater presented four entertainments during the summer months, and the ECU Playhouse offered a wide choice of plays for area audiences throughout the year.

The Theater Workshop Of Ayden had another year of varied offerings, and schools in Greenville and Pitt County continued their tradition of annual plays and musicals.

Medical Center Develops During '87

County Memorial Hospital. An ECU surgical team led by Dr. W. Randolph Chitwood performed the six-hour operation on the former auto mechanic who suffered an incurable condition that had destroyed his heart's ability to pump blood to his body. Six weeks after the successful transplant, Malcolm Huffman returned to his home in Washington, N.C.

Chitwood and his team did the second transplant five months later. Paul Roberson, 42, of Jamesville received his donor heart on July 6.

The pancreas transplant program at the medical center moved ahead with the performance of a successful pancreas transplant on a 28-year-old Greenville woman. ECU transplant surgeon Francis Thomas and Paul Cunningham replaced Pat Pleasant's pancreas Aug. 17. A few weeks after the surgery, Miss Pleasant was on her way home, having enjoyed a slice of coconut cake in her hospital room. Previously she had faced the possibility of early death and had been hospitalized more than 50 times since she was diagnosed with diabetes at age 8.

Weeks later, on Oct. 5, Thomas and Cunningham conducted a successful pancreas-kidney transplant on a 21-year-old Goldsboro woman. At the time compatible donor organs were found, the patient, Tonya Yelverton, was experiencing kidney failure.

A 52-year-old Kinston woman had lived in a silent world for 10 years until Greenville physician Dr. William S. Bost Jr. helped her regain her hearing with a Feb. 19 cochlear implant, the first performed at Pitt Memorial.

The implant involves placing small amounts of electrical current near the recipient's auditory nerve, allowing the brain to interpret the electrical current as sound. Although Geraldine Alcox does not receive sound in the same manner as a hearing person, her world is no longer silent, thanks to the procedure.

Two Greenville physicians performed the area's first free tissue transfer, a relatively new procedure in reconstructive surgery. Greenville plastic surgeons Ricky Clay and Howard Dawkins took muscle, skin and bone from one part of the body of a Snow Hill man and transferred it to another. The man had had his ankle trampled by a horse in early October.

An ECU School of Medicine research project investigating the most common form of diabetes was awarded a $2.55 million grant from the National Institutes of Health, making it the largest research grant in the school's history. The multidisciplinary grant is supporting five years of study on the causes of adult-onset diabetes, which typically strikes people over age 40. Dr. Jose F. Caro, an endocrinologist and principal investigator, is coordinating the efforts of more than a dozen medical school faculty members.

The Ronald McDonald House of Eastern North Carolina, a 20-bedroom facility, opened its doors to its first guests June 21. Located across the street from Pitt Memorial, the house becomes home-away-from-home for families of children hospitalized at the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, Pitt Memorial's regional pediatric referral component. More than $1.2 was donated to construct the house, one of four in the state. The Pitt County Board of Commissioners gave the two-acre site.

In the 10th groundbreaking since 1974 at Pitt Memorial, hospital officials heralded on Sept. 30 the construction of $9.5 million, 96,000-square-foot project including additions and renovations to the hospital's clinical laboratory, medical records department and admissions area.

In a separate ground-breaking Oct. 22, a birthing center and the expansion of the Regional Rehabilitation Center got under way. The $1,448,000 birthing center, a joint project of Pitt Memorial and the ECU Medical School, will provide in-patient services for uncomplicated labor and delivery and post-partum care of both mothers and infants. Expansion of the rehab center includes the addition of outpatient treatment areas and offices.

At the school of medicine, the construction of a $1.9 million Magnetic Resonance Imaging building is under way. The MRI system will permit physicians to visualize internal body tissues with greater clarity than is afforded by conventional imaging technology.

At the same time, construction of a biotechnology laboratory building is progressing on the north side of the Brody Medical Sciences Building. Both projects are expected to be completed early next year.

Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the ECU School of Medicine since it initiated a four-year degree-granting program in 1975, announced his retirement as dean for 1988. He will remain active as vice chancellor of the university's division of health sciences. A banquet and special continuing education symposium on excellence in medical education was held Oct. 23 to honor him.

The Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina completed its second successful participation in the Children's Miracle Network Telethon, raising approximately $107,000, much of which will stay in eastern North Carolina.

Throughout the year the hospital grappled with a nursing and bed shortage that was aggravated by an unusually high patient census in some area. To address those problems, the hospital, in conjunction with other area hospitals, is implementing a media campaign to attract people into health care careers. Also, strategic planning has begun that may result in the addition of beds to PCMH.

Opportunity Ahead

Greenville and Pitt County, 1988 is a year of opportunity.

Rapid and profound changes in 1987 brought both prosperity and problems associated with growth. Now, the challenge of the coming year will be to capitalize on the positive aspects of this change and to minimize its negative impact.

Addressing the needs of a quickly-expanding populace and economy and furthering the base of progress on which this change rests will be the sharpest issue facing leaders.

Greenville is a community in transition from a small municipality to an influential area of urban growth. In this role, it has issues that need attention in 1988.

Both Pitt County and Greenville must address the need for a permanent government complex that will allow services to increase with the population. The two cannot serve the growing needs of an expanding citizenry without a long-term commitment to a suitable facility for city and county services.

Both entities must also look at transportation needs and traffic flow and make concessions to unsnarling the tie-ups that hold back growth. A southwest bypass for Greenville is essential. Completing the Arlington Boulevard thoroughfare will fill a huge gap. Planning a feasible connection from the East Carolina Medical Park to downtown Greenville must be initiated. Both the city and county must wrestle with the impact of the community's expansion on natural resources. Heavy residential development in areas not served by municipal sewer systems prompt public health concerns, as well fears over contamination of groundwater. It may be time for Pitt County to consider a countywide sewer system.

In addition, growth puts sharp pressures on already-stressed groundwater supplies. Perhaps it is time for a new approach in public well placement. It is imperative for the county and city to address its solid waste dilemma in 1988. The current landfill will be exhausted in five years and entities must be ready with new, environmentally sound methods of disposal when that time comes.

The community must also institute a sound planning approach to keep rapid development from damaging the value and aesthetics of property. In Greenville, the effects of strip development must be reduced by strong zoning ordinances. A comprehensive land use plan would address concerns in the county.

The county's major industry, education, faces a challenge to keep abreast of the needs of a citizenry growing both in size and diversity. If numbers in the public schools increase in the coming year at the rate they grew in 1987, administrators face a financial crunch to keep pace.

East Carolina University faces the challenge of academic improvement. The school has entered an era in which its academic prowess must be strengthened by both raising standards and utilizing private support to attract the best students.

Greenville and Pitt County stand on the brink of considerable change. If the community is to capitalize on the opportunities this transition provides, leaders must respond briskly to meet needs. Without this type of attention, the promise that 1988 holds will be of little value.

Behind In Space

Call it a space race or call it competition between the world's two super powers, there's no doubt that United States and Soviet adventures in space are closely watched by citizens of the two nations and all the world.

As a competition the news is disturbing for Americans. Recently Yuri Romanenko, a Soviet cosmonaut, completed almost 11 months in space. Romanenko has spent 326 days in space.

Meanwhile in the United States it was announced that a test firing of the shuttle booster rocket had shown some problems which will require new design. Thus the United States' next mission in space is further postponed.

What difference does it make? The future will reveal that, but for now it is certain that space offers the best vantage point for studying the Universe. It is likely that certain sophisticated manufacturing processes can be successful in space given the absence of atmosphere and gravity.

It is clear that there will be advantages for the nation which masters space living. Safety of the crew should always be foremost for the American space program, but at this point the Soviets are leading.

Predictions For An Election Year

RALEIGH — We're officially into 1988 now and, if all of last night's partying wasn't enough to make you sick, the realization that this is an election year should.

It ought to be a great year for all those interested in political things, so let's get right to predicting how everything will turn out.

The first mud fight comes in just a few days. Daniel Lawrence, who claims that Gov. Jim Martin has not paid enough attention to conservatives lately, plans to file for governor next week and force Martin into a primary.

Prediction One. Lawrence will revive the old Congressional Club ad that blamed former Sen. Bob Morgan for keeping U.S. aircraft carriers out of the Panama Canal. An updated sound script for the ad, however, will focus on Martin's sailing vacation to the Virgin Islands last summer.

In 1984, Republican Frank Jordan stunned the GOP by winning its first primary in the lieutenant governor's race. The unknown apparently benefitted from the ads which Bob Jordan ran in the Democratic primary for the same office. Now Frank Jordan is a Democrat and Prediction Two is that he will file for the governor's race in that party. Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, will endorse him, and at least three television station news programs will refer to him as the lieutenant governor of North Carolina.

Prediction Three. Former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten will file for the Secretary of State's race but then drop out after Gary Hart wins the Southern Primary. Hart, saying that he and Edmisten have been similarly mistreated by the press, will announce plans to make Edmisten U.S. secretary of state in the Hart administration.

Prediction Four. Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham whose knowledge of the state budget is unrivaled, will announce plans not to seek re-election. The Legislative Services Commission will immediately request another $3 million to buy computers to make up for the loss of half of the legislature's collective brainpower. Royall will then say he was only kidding.

Prediction Five. House Speaker Liston Ramsey will run unopposed again, and be re-elected to another term as speaker. Everyone will applaud him, including House Republicans.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, a candidate for lieutenant governor, will sign a long term TV advertising contract with Correctol. (If you don't see the humor here, wait til Hardison's campaign ads start running on TV.)

John Ingram, the former insurance commissioner, will announce for one race or another and immediately inform reporters that he has a poll showing that he is the frontrunner by a wide margin. Ingram will refuse, as is his custom, to release any details of the poll.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks will again be challenged by a former deputy, but be re-elected, anyhow. At least one other Council of State member will seriously consider resignation at the thought of having to listen to Brooks for four more years.

The Congressional Club will begin running anti-Jim Hunt ads on November 9, 1988, in anticipation of a two-year re-election campaign for Sen. Jesse Helms in 1990. On that day, at least three TV new program will air news stories about the ads accompanied by a photo of former legislator Parks Helms, who may be lieutenant governor by that time.

There may be a dozen prediction columns in today's paper, but believe me, this one and Jean Dixon's are the only two which are really reliable.

Reagan Program: More Of The Same

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — If President Reagan has dramatic new proposals up his sleeve as he starts his final year in office, the White House is keeping them under wraps.

To judge from the rhetoric here, as the vacationing president prepares to ring in the new year, 1988 will hold more of Reagan's familiar exhortations to reduce federal spending and the scope of government.

Seven years of this has not stemmed huge federal deficits, but the president's aides say the trend to bigger and more costly government has been put into reverse gear and Reagan wants to keep it that way.

The president has been keeping a low profile during his California stay, and the first indication of his 1988 plans may not come until he delivers his State of the Union message to Congress. Although the date for the address hasn't been announced, aides say privately it will be Jan. 25.

Spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the president has been studying papers in preparation for writing the speech. He insisted it will be more than just a tying up of loose ends and will include new ideas.

Fitzwater was asked the other day whether Reagan had any new strategy to work with Congress so that his budget would not be declared "dead on arrival" as soon as it reaches Capitol Hill.

"No, we think it's most unfortunate that Congress hasn't followed our earlier budgets," Fitzwater said. "If they did, we'd be $200 billion less in the deficit than we are today."

"But they haven't," a reporter argued.

"But they should," Fitzwater said. "The debate over spending priorities is a very real one, and may not change dramatically."

"Most of the people who don't like the budget are people who want to spend more, or they have different spending priorities," Fitzwater said. "Those priorities are going to stay the same. Ronald Reagan is not changing his philosophy, and you can expect a continued emphasis on reduced federal government, and on reduced federal spending."

In other words, Reagan's quarrel with Congress in 1988 will have a familiar ring.

In foreign affairs, 1988 is likely to be a better year for Reagan than 1987, the year that saw him dogged by the Iran-Contra affair.

As 1987 began, the crisis was deepening over the covert sales of U.S. weapons to Iran, and the prospects for an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union were dampened by the collapse of the Reykjavik, Iceland, summit in October 1986.

As 1987 ends, Reagan has a successful superpower summit and an intermediate nuclear arms pact behind him and appears to be headed for Moscow at midyear.

To the editor:

It is the Christmas and New Year's season — a time when we are reminded of how much we are loved and how much love we share with those we care about. There are some people that live among us who are not as fortunate, and I hope that you will find within yourself the desire to share a little of your time with those that may not be as fortunate as you. Be a volunteer at the Greenville Community Shelter.

We live in a land of great wealth. Even with this bounty that many of us take for granted, there is a segment of our population that lives on the very edge of survival. These people have no home to call their own. They do not have a warm bed to crawl into at the end of the day and no bathroom facilities from which they can maintain cleanliness. Often, what they eat is the leftovers that have been discarded by grocery stores or restaurants.

The state of homelessness that people find themselves in is a disgrace for the United States, but there are no easy solutions. The number of homeless people in this country is difficult to ascertain by the very nature of their lifestyles.

You ask, where are these people and why are they homeless? They are just about everywhere. In the larger cities, they are more visible because of their large numbers. If you are in New York City, you should be well aware of the presence of the homeless. Here in Greenville, you may not be aware they are here. There may be 20 to 50 homeless here. The number fluctuates.

The Greenville Community Shelter will open Jan. 11. Two volunteers will be needed each night. For information, call 756-6154.

In your "Elderly Add To Museum's Information" by Elaine Graybill, she wrote that a hog was shaved before being killed. That I would go all the way to Bloomington, Ill., to see. I'm an old crock (68) and, as I remember it, it went like this: The hog was hoisted clear of the ground by the hind legs, the throat was cut to bleed to meat to the desired whiteness. Then the hog was dunked into a big iron pot filled with hot water with wood ashes added as lye. When the bristles were softened, the hog was put on a table to be scraped. Where the bristles were not soft enough, hot wet cloths were pasted on them. Hot water was ladled up onto the hog to cleanse it and to wash away the loose bristles. When the skin was cleaned of both dirt and hair, the butchering was then carried out. Nowadays they even skin hogs, which I had never seen before. I don't know how they hold the meat together. They sure couldn't make bacon or ham.

Perhaps a copy of this should be sent by you to Elaine Graybill, c/o The Bloomington, Pantagraph via AP.

Strength For Today

Some years ago in one of our large cities, a man was sent to prison for something he didn't do. In order to shield a woman who was the real culprit, the man pled guilty and served a prison term.

While in prison he became well acquainted with his fellow prisoners and after his release he decided to dedicate his life to the rehabilitation of men who face the hard and distrusting world after a term in prison. He was elected to a Board of Visitors of the prison in which he had been held.

He might well have spent his time in prison working up a bitterness against the injustice of life. Instead, he now does his best to make the hard lot of prison inmates more tolerable. It is only a man of great character who can treat life's reverses in this fashion.

Scenic Rivers

WILMINGTON (AP) — A state official has proposed including the Lumber River between Fair Bluff and Lumberton in the N.C. Natural and Scenic Rivers system, and the state may consider buying riverbank property to protect it from development.

Tommy Rhodes, secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development, announced this week that he has designated 79 miles of the Lumber River as a potential part of the state rivers program.

Fifty-nine miles of the river between Fair Bluff and Lumberton would be designated as "natural," and 20 miles of the river west of Lumberton would be designated "scenic," said Franklin Boteler, chief of planning for the state parks department.

"Natural" rivers are free-flowing rivers, without dams or other structures, where the adjoining lands exist in a natural state. They are generally accessible only by trails.

and not machine malfunction created the controversy over the King municipal elections.

Olivia Robbins, the county election supervisor, said that 20 test ballots were run through two computerized vote-counting machines Thursday and proved that they work fine. It was the poll workers, she said, who failed to properly count ballots with write-in candidates, possibly because they had not been instructed fully by the county Board of Elections.

A recount of the ballots Wednesday afternoon broke a deadlock in the race for the two seats open on the City Council. The original count had Carl Southern leading the race with 384 votes, while Dewey A. Long, an incumbent, and Jack E. Warren tied with 381 votes apiece for the second seat.

Wednesday's hand count, however, came up with much different totals. Long led all candidates with 365 votes, followed by Southern with 364 and Warren with 353.

Fire Death

THOMASVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An 80-year-old disabled man died Thursday morning in a fire that destroyed his four-room frame house in Silver Valley, authorities said.

Firefighters found John Henry Miller dead in a corner of his kitchen when they responded to the fire about 7:45 a.m., said Randy McClure, the chief of the Silver Valley Fire Department. McClure said that another firefighter noticed, as he drove by on his way to go hunting, that the house at N.C. 109 and Cedar Spring Road was on fire.

RALEIGH (AP) — Failure by the Wake County district attorney to prosecute welfare fraud swiftly may be jeopardizing the Wake County Department of Social Services' ability to recover losses, Social Services Director James Wight said.

In 1986, social services referred 14 cases of suspected welfare fraud to criminal court and another 18 cases in 1987, Wight said. The amount of alleged fraud ranged from $400 to $10,000, he said.

However, none of the cases have been prosecuted, Wight said. As of November, another 54 cases were pending initial review by the courts, he said.

RALEIGH (AP) — Saying on-the-job training is the best way to learn the job, the executive assistant to Secretary of State Thad Eure has announced she will seek the post her boss is leaving.

"The office of secretary of state is one that no one can be formally educated to assume," Brenda H. Pollard said Thursday. "On-the-job training is the only way one learns to function in the office."

Mrs. Pollard became the fourth Democrat to enter the race.

"Fifty-one years ago Thad Eure first campaigned for this office by asking the people to give a young man a chance," Mrs. Pollard, 36, said. "Today I am respectfully asking them to give a young woman a chance."

Mrs. Pollard has worked in the secretary of state's office 17 years, starting as a receptionist. She became Eure's executive assistant five years ago.

Coastal Groups Call For Tighter Limits For Pollution Standards

RALEIGH (AP) — Five environmental, wildlife and fishing groups have petitioned the state to set tight development limits on 12 coastal sounds and rivers so they can be protected from pollution.

The petition would set aside about 3 percent of North Carolina's coastal waters as "outstanding resource waters."

"It's such a very small part of the water in North Carolina, but it's some of the richest," said Lena Ritter, an Onslow County shellfisherman. She is spokeswoman for the Stump Sound Shellfishermen's Association, one of the groups filing the petition. "If the state doesn't protect these waters, the shellfishermen will be devastated."

The waterways proposed for the program include several of the state's largest and most productive estuaries, including northern Stump Sound in Onslow County, the western portion of Bogue Sound in Carteret County and Masonboro Sound in New Hanover County.

The waters also border some of the state's hottest development property — Emerald Isle, North Topsail Shores and Bald Head Island — ensuring that the petition will be controversial.

Intensive development such as condominiums and marinas likely would be banned in those areas if the waters are designated an outstanding resource.

Todd Miller, executive director of the N.C. Coastal Federation, another petitioner, said the waterways deserve extra protection because they have excellent water quality and are important shellfishing grounds, fish nurseries or recreational areas.

Existing state environmental regulations aren't strict enough to protect them in the face of mounting development pressure, he said.

"If you look at what's left of our southern coastal waters, these are the most valuable," he said. "Everything else has been degraded. We're trying to do something now to keep what we have left. These waters are the basis for the whole southern coastal ecosystem."

Miller said the waters meet all the state's criteria for outstanding resource waters. To qualify for the designation, a body of water has to be free of pollution and have a unique characteristic — such as being an excellent fish habitat or water sports recreation area — that is not being protected under current regulations.

But state officials aren't so sure the waters qualify as an outstanding resource. They say the program is aimed at preserving particularly unusual and significant resources and is not supposed to be another layer of environmental regulation.

"It's not a panacea for everyone's concerns about coastal water quality," said Mary Joan Pugh, assistant secretary of natural resources and community development. "It's a very special tool to identify what are really exceptional resource waters."

To determine that, she said, state officials will need to look at specifics about each body of water in the petition. Important considerations are the number of fish species that a nursery supports, how many bushels of oysters per acre an area produces and how clean the water is, she said.

Ms. Pugh said there has been a lot of misunderstanding about the purpose of the program. Last month, the Division of Marine Fisheries proposed that all of the state's primary nursery areas — 100,000 acres, about 5 percent of coastal waters — be designated as outstanding resources.

"They think all those areas are important, and of course, they are," she said. "But we can't handle them in those numbers."

She said the staffs of the Division of Environmental Management and Division of Marine Fisheries are meeting to devise criteria that could be used to determine outstanding resource waters. The goal, she said, is to get as many waterways nominated for the program as possible this year.

Only one waterway in North Carolina, South Toe River in Yancey County, has the outstanding resource designation. But about 30 other waterways across the state have been proposed for the program. Any state resident can propose that a waterway be designated an outstanding resource.

The other groups filing the petition are the N.C. Wildlife Federation, the N.C. Fisheries Association and Carteret County Crossroads, an environmental group.

At least one developer is worried about the potential effects of the petition.

IRS Says Bakkers Paid Excessively

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service says top officials of the PTL television ministry received $14.86 million in excessive compensation between 1981 and 1987, including $9.36 million that went to Jim and Tammy Bakker.

The IRS, in documents filed with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court, said the Bakkers received at least $10.86 million from PTL during those years, but only $1.5 million could be considered "reasonable" compensation.

The ministry filed for Chapter 11 protection in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in June.

The IRS report, filed to support its argument for revocation of PTL's tax-exempt status, says that the "amounts paid to or assets transferred to or for the benefit of Jim Bakker more nearly resemble the distribution by a wholly-owned corporation of its net earnings as a dividend to its shareholder rather than as a compensation for services actually provided."

R. Bradford Leggett, a Winston-Salem lawyer who is the counsel for the PTL trustee, told the Winston-Salem Journal Thursday that the Bakkers collected the excessive pay and benefits without the approval or knowledge of the PTL board.

The IRS said the board did not always know what was going on, but said it was the board's responsibility to see that the ministry operated in a way consistent with its tax-exempt status.

Judge Rufus Reynolds issued a preliminary injunction in mid-December that prevents the IRS from revoking PTL's tax-exempt status. The IRS claims that PTL owes $62 million or more in taxes from June 1983 to June 1987.

Bakker, who resigned last March after being caught in a sex scandal, received $8.28 million his last four years as the head of PTL, the IRS report said. The agency said $7.66 million of that was excessive.

Tammy Bakker, who appeared with her husband on the television show and helped in his appeals for viewer donations, collected $1.28 million in those four years, $728,215 of which the IRS said was excessive.

David A. Taggart, Bakker's administrative aide, got $2.7 million from 1984 until 1987. The IRS said that was $2.26 million more than he was worth.

The Rev. Richard W. Dortch, who was the PTL executive director, didn't do nearly as well.

Dortch got $1.25 million, but the IRS said that was $754,909 more than he should have gotten.

The IRS looked at more than salary and bonuses. It added up the costs of Tammy's plastic surgery in 1985 (two checks totaling more than $4,000); Jim's payments of hush money to Jessica Hahn, the church secretary who was the other central character in the sex scandal ($363,700); Taggart's lodging at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York ($4,585.95 for three nights in 1984 and $5,180.08 for two nights in 1985); and a new shower curtain for the Bakker's daughter, Tammy Sue ($570.35 — the IRS said it was a fancy curtain).

The IRS said the PTL board met 23 times from June 1, 1983, through March 18, 1987. In 13 of the meetings, the board approved bonuses for Bakker. In 12 meetings, it approved bonuses for Tammy, and in seven meetings, it approved bonuses for Dortch.

The board did not specify the amount of the bonuses. Those amounts were added to the board's minutes sometime later, the report said. In fiscal 1987 alone, Bakker got bonuses totaling $900,000. Tammy and Dortch each got $250,000.

Environmentalists Fear Link For Collider, Waste Dump

ASHEVILLE (AP) — North Carolina environmentalists say they are worried that the federal Department of Energy will try to link a temporary high-level nuclear waste dump that nobody wants with a giant atom-smasher that everybody wants.

"I have no information to say that that is clearly happening, but simply because the DOE is involved here, I would question whether those discussions aren't going on," said Lisa

Finaldi, director of the Clean Water Fund of North Carolina. "The Department of Energy is very interested in making deals with anyone who is interested in taking nuclear waste."

Environmentalists say the price-tag for the $4.4 billion superconducting super collider might include a site for the Monitored Retrievable Storage facility. North Carolina is one of eight states chosen as finalists for the super collider.

"People have speculated that there may be some back room political trading using the MRS as a rotten apple and the super collider as a plum," said Bob Gessner of the Blue Ridge Environmental Defense League.

"The (U.S.) Department of Energy sitting there with the super collider in one hand and the MRS in the other makes me nervous," said Leon Lowery, a Tennessee-based lobbyist for the Southern Environmental Network. "I get hives every time I think about it."

But a spokesman for DOE — which will choose a location for the highly sought after super collider by 1989 — told The Asheville Citizen there is "absolutely no linkage between the super collider and any other activity or program of the department."

"We very much want people to know that this (super collider) site, this selection process, is based on technical merit" and has no relation to the MRS, DOE spokesman Guy Pitchford said.

The super collider is a 53-mile circular tunnel used to conduct high-energy physics experiments. The project is expected to create 3,000 permanent jobs and about 4,500 temporary construction jobs.

North Carolina has offered to buy land in Granville, Person and Durham counties for DOE to locate the collider.

In the first year of operation, expected to be in 1996, the proposed proton-smasher would pour $72 million into a host state's economy and raise employment by about 4,000 jobs, according to a North Carolina study.

The state's bid for the super collider may have prompted Gov. Jim Martin to mute his opposition to legislation which opened the way for an MRS in North Carolina, BREDL's Janet Hoyle said.

"The Department of Energy is of course in charge of the MRS program and the super collider program, and although the selection of the potential super collider states may have a technical component ... the (final) decision will be overwhelmingly political," Ms. Hoyle said.

Sanford Expected To Endorse Gore's Candidacy

RALEIGH (AP) — Lloyd V. Hackley says North Carolina's public university system is only as strong as its weakest link, and that's why he wanted to be chancellor of Fayetteville State University.

"If any university needs some dramatic attention, it's Fayetteville," Hackley, 47, said in an interview. "Rather than relegate Fayetteville to the lowest echelon, we need the very best we can offer."

freshman posted a combined score of 602 out of a possible 1600 on the college-entrance exam. In previous years, the administration of outgoing chancellor Charles Lyons had been criticized for admitting out-of-state students with lower SAT scores than their in-state counterparts — a practice that violated UNC Board of Governors' policy.

In 1986-87, 36.9 percent of FSU's education students failed the National Teachers Exam. The previous year, 43.2 percent failed. The UNC Board of Governors has endorsed a policy requiring schools to maintain a 70 percent passing rate on the exam.

problems at Pine Bluff had made him a favorite in the search for Lyons' replacement.

A native of Roanoke, Va., Hackley enlisted in the Air Force in 1959 at age 17. He earned a bachelor's degree in political science from Michigan State University in 1965 and a doctorate from UNC-Chapel Hill in 1976.

From 1974 to 1978, he was an associate professor and course instructor of international relations and political science at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. He also coached track and cross country skiing there.

was very similar to Fayetteville State, that had basically some of the same needs as Fayetteville State," Ms. O'Kelley said. "We certainly need to work on enrollment this year. We need to improve the quality of students we're getting. We need to take a look at students who are in the upper half of their graduating class. And we'll have to go out and be very aggressive in our recruiting."

If historically black schools are to reclaim talented minorities who have been lured away by larger, predominantly white schools, Hackley says they must improve the quality of the education they offer.

"In order attract the kind of student we want, we've got to find out why he doesn't think he can get a quality education at the black school," he said. "The best way to change the perception is to change the reality."

Hackley has been the University of North Carolina system vice president for student services and special programs since November 1985. Today, he assumed the head role at FSU.

"I'm not as satisfied by making policy as I am by making the policy work," Hackley said.

As chancellor of the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff from 1981 to 1985, Hackley drew praise for improving academic standards and for upgrading admissions requirements. Like FSU, the Pine Bluff campus is a predominantly black state university.

FSU has been at the bottom of the heap for years among UNC campuses in terms of freshman scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. Last fall, the average entering FSU

In December 1986, the state Board of Education shut down FSU's graduate education program in curriculum and instruction. Approval for the program eventually was reinstated after Lyons agreed to add more faculty members.

Finally, enrollment at the school dropped this fall by nearly 300 students — from 2,921 a year ago to 2,639.

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore is cutting short a vacation in Tennessee to attend a news conference in Raleigh where Sen. Terry Sanford will endorse him for the Democratic presidential nomination, party insiders say.

Gore also might gain the backing Saturday of former Gov. Jim Hunt, who with Sanford has urged influential Democrats to unite behind a moderate who could carry the South in 1988, sources said.

cratic leaders energetically, winning endorsements from 28 North Carolina state legislators in November. On Monday, Gore will appear at news conferences with the speakers of the House of Representatives in the Florida and Texas legislatures, Kopp said. Both officials are expected to endorse Gore.

"My feeling is that Gore is really making a strong move" in the South, Ken Eudy, executive director of the North Carolina Democratic Party, said in an interview. "Much of that is because he's ... a fellow Southerner. Some of it probably is because of some of the stands he's taken on national defense."

"I will announce my position" at a Saturday news conference at the state Democratic headquarters, Sanford said. "Senator Gore, I am told, will be there."

Mike Kopp, deputy press secretary for the Gore campaign, confirmed that Gore would attend the news conference. "He's flying to Raleigh to meet with (Sanford) and be at his side," Kopp said.

Hunt did not return telephone calls, but Sanford said he expected Hunt to be on hand Saturday. Asked whether Hunt would endorse Gore, Sanford said, "I expect that he and I will be together."

One Democratic leader Thursday called Sanford's endorsement of Gore "the worst-kept secret in North Carolina."

Gore, one of seven Democratic hopefuls, has downplayed the Iowa caucuses and the New Hampshire primary while targeting his native South, hoping for a strong showing in March 8 primaries in 14 Southern and border states.

With polls showing many Democrats undecided, endorsements from figures of Sanford's and Hunt's stature "would be a big shot in the arm for our campaign, not just in the South but nationwide," Kopp said. "What we would gain ... would be a broadening of our political base and also prospects for fund-raising."

Gore has wooed Southern Demo-

Sanford, however, described his move as personal instead of an effort to play a kingmaker's role.

"If you're asking do I expect a great deal of people to come to Gore (because of Sanford's announcement), the answer is no," Sanford said. "That's not why I am doing it. I am simply stating my position in the race because I felt I should have one."

But it was at Sanford's urging that most of North Carolina's Democratic leadership has stayed neutral in the presidential race. Sanford, Hunt and other party leaders met privately twice this year to discuss a possible joint endorsement.

A Democratic insider, speaking on condition that he not be identified, said that Sanford apparently decided to act on his own, catching some state party leaders by surprise. The Democrat said Sanford decided on Gore after New York Gov. Mario Cuomo told Sanford he would not enter the primaries.

Bruce Lightner, state coordinator of Jesse Jackson's campaign, said some black leaders were angered that Sanford likely would endorse Gore.

"From talking to people all over the state, they are very disappointed in Senator Sanford," Lightner said.

Some Democratic leaders, including state Democratic chairman Jim Van Hecke, have questioned Gore's ability to win outside the South. Sanford agreed Gore needed to broaden his appeal.

"The turning point in John F. Kennedy's campaign was his success in West Virginia" and other states outside New England, Sanford said. "I think Gore has to demonstrate that he can excite people everywhere."

GREENSBORO (AP) — A convicted ex-U.S. Customs officer was sentenced Wednesday in U.S. District Court to 25 years in prison and a $35,000 fine on charges of racketeering and conspiracy to defraud the government by evading income taxes.

David J. Vogt Jr., who had substantial property holdings in Guilford County, was found guilty on June 18 after a three-month jury trial.

Judge Frank Bullock sentenced Vogt to the maximum prison terms and fines on both racketeering and the income tax evasion charges.

Testimony presented at the trial indicated that Vogt sold information he was privy to as a Customs Officer and took bribes of more than $500,000 in the process of facilitating the shipment of more than 56 tons of marijuana into the United States.

Federal Magistrate Clears Hart Drive Of '84 Indebtedness

By T.R. REID
and CHARLES R. BABCOCK
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

A federal magistrate in Denver ruled Thursday that Gary Hart's 1988 presidential campaign has no legal obligation to pay the debts Hart ran up in his 1984 race, a decision that could prove both a fiscal and a legal boon to Hart's current drive for the White House.

Magistrate Richard B. Harvey of the U.S. District Court rejected efforts by two of Hart's 1984 creditors to garnish a $100,000 certificate of deposit held by a bank here in the name of Hart's 1988 campaign. The ruling frees the $100,000 — plus $1,440 in accrued interest — for Hart's immediate use, and may give him a precedent to invoke in contesting two new claims filed here this week by 1984 creditors.

"By my ruling," Harvey wrote, "there is a judicial determination that (Hart's 1988 campaign committee) is not legally obligated to pay the bills of Americans With Hart." Americans With Hart was the legal name of Hart's 1984 presidential organization. Harvey said the two campaign organizations are distinct corporate and legal entities, and therefore not liable for each other's debts.

Hart's renewed 1988 campaign has about $53,000 in debts and aides have said he plans to use the $100,000 freed up by Thursday's decision to pay them.

Thursday's ruling was the second Hart court victory on the point. Last July, a federal judge in Los Angeles ruled that "creditors of Americans With Hart are not entitled to levy upon the assets or funds raised by Hart '88."

The Los Angeles and Denver decisions both dealt with money raised through individual contributions to Hart's 1988 campaign — not with federal matching funds. That may distinguish the two cases from those filed here this week, in which 1984 Hart creditors asked a court to attach federal matching funds due Hart's 1988 campaign.

Bernard Schneider, the Los Angeles lawyer working on the debt issue for Hart, said the campaign will argue that the Los Angeles and Denver decisions should control in the Washington cases as well, because they establish that the two Hart campaigns are legally independent of each other.

Hart's legal victory involved garnishment actions brought by Tri-State Envelope, a Beltsville, Md., concern, and Semper-Moser Associates, a Venice, Calif., direct-mail firm. Semper-Moser also was the unsuccessful plaintiff in the Los Angeles case. Representatives of the firms could not be reached immediately for comment Thursday night.

While Hart's 1988 campaign finances were boosted by the Denver court ruling Thursday, more than $2 million in debts, unpaid bank loans and unapproved debt settlements remain from the 1984 race.

The most recent campaign report for Americans With Hart Inc. at the Federal Election Commission shows the 1984 campaign owed $1.1 million to creditors, was carrying nearly $942,000 in settlements that had not been approved by the FEC, and owed the National Bank of Washington $504,000.

Biden Says He Did All 'Wrong' Things In 1987

By DAVID S. BRODER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., closing the book on a year when his presidential campaign crashed because "I was doing all the wrong things," has a 1988 agenda focused on the foreign policy challenges that will face the United States between now and the end of the century.

In the first long interview since he ended his campaign Sept. 23 in a swirl of controversy over alleged plagiarism and exaggeration of his academic record, the 45-year-old senator said the experience taught him "a hell of a lot of lessons" about himself and what he repeatedly referred to as his "naivete."

"I have had an object lesson," he said. "I don't know if I will ever run for president again, but I know if I do, the best way to prepare for it is not to run this time, but to do my job, to learn more about the issues I'm dealing with, to demonstrate the staying power and the seriousness a lot of you (reporters) doubted that I have."

At no point in the two-hour interview did Biden criticize the decision of former Colorado senator Gary Hart to re-enter the race Hart abandoned five months before Biden's withdrawal. But everything Biden said about his own decisions implicitly drew a contrast with Hart.

Biden seethed almost eager to acknowledge his errors of judgment, saying at least five times that he is amazed at "how naive I was" about the demands of a presidential candidacy. He rejected the charge of plagiarism — stemming from several of his campaign speeches and from an earlier incident as a law student — and said, "At some point, I'm going to address that issue again, because there are things there that have to be corrected for the record whether or not I ever run for president again."

But he said even if that issue had not arisen, "my campaign would have been in trouble," because "I just messed up, frankly," so many aspects of it. "I got mired in personalities," he said, "not my opponents' but my own political operatives."

"I never solved the guru problem," Biden said, referring to his previously close relationship with political consultant Patrick Caddell — with whom he has severed professional relations. "When Johnny Apple (New York Times correspondent R.W. Apple Jr.), a reporter I really respect, said Joe Biden was an empty vessel into which Pat Caddell poured a candidacy, I was stunned."

"I was so naive about things. I got into politics because of my concerns about issues, because of my beliefs. People in Delaware, I think, know that. But people here (Washington) didn't know me, and they didn't know what issues were important to me. And suddenly, I'm out there talking about moving a nation, moving a generation, and you guys naturally say, 'What's this guy up to?' And you see me sometimes actually move an audience, so you say, 'Hey, this guy could be dangerous.' Everything I was doing to move an audience made you doubt more that I was fit to lead the country or run the government."

In the weeks after he left the presidential race, Biden said, "I thought about leaving politics. But I have an opportunity to do something I like a lot — being a senator. And that's what I'm doing."

Biden said the work he did in the last four months of 1987 as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on the Supreme Court nominations of Judge Robert H. Bork and Judge Anthony Kennedy was "the first marker" he laid down on his new path. Although he announced his opposition to Bork in advance of the hearings, he drew bipartisan praise for the fairness of his conduct of them.

Biden said he thinks that the hearings, which built the case that defeated Bork, began to answer the doubts of those "who questioned whether I could discipline my temper and my mouth... whether I could prepare substantively."

In 1988, he said, he will focus on his role as the ranking Democrat on the Foreign Relations Committee, seeking to lead a national debate on arms control, the future of U.S.-Soviet relations and the NATO alliance, and ways to resolve conflicts between Congress and the executive branch over the use of force by the United States in Third World or regional conflicts.

The new work begins Monday when Biden leaves for a 12-day European trip, which will include meetings with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Robertson Says He'll Take Federal Campaign Money, But Give It Back

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Treasury is going to send Pat Robertson $4.5 million in campaign matching funds on Monday after all, but the Republican presidential candidate still isn't sure he will keep the money.

Robertson says his reluctance is based on concern about the federal deficit, but the question he raised earlier with the Federal Election Commission concerned the spending limits that accompany the matching money.

The Robertson campaign asked the commission this week whether he would be bound by the spending limits tied to the matching funds if he accepts them but does not use them.

However, a statement issued by the Robertson campaign on Thursday emphasized the deficit instead. It said Robertson's "effort to privately fund his campaign has been an effort to reduce the current deficit." Foremost among the strings attached to the federal matching money is a $27 million cap on overall campaign spending. Candidates also must abide by state-by-state limits in return for the federal funds.

Robertson made an abortive attempt earlier this week to stop the Treasury from sending him the matching money.

Now, according to his statement, he is going to take the federal money on Monday and put it in a separate bank account, pending a decision "about the possibility of giving the money back to the American taxpayers without incurring any liability."

The flipflops of the Robertson campaign capped the last day of the pre-election year, the final work day before nearly $29 million begins to flow to 12 presidential candidates starting on Monday.

Of the major candidates, only

Democrat Jesse Jackson has not yet qualified for the matching money. His campaign submitted more documents to the FEC on Thursday and more were promised on Monday. FEC spokeswoman Sharon Snyder said the commission would examine the documents Monday and make a decision Tuesday.

Robertson, a longtime television evangelist, has been among the most successful GOP candidates at fund raising, ranking second only to Vice President George Bush in documents submitted so far to the FEC.

If Robertson decides not to take the federal matching money, he would be subject to all reporting and disclosure rules but would not have to honor the spending limits.

Connie Snapp, a Robertson aide, said a decision on whether to ask the FEC for a new opinion on the legal consequences of returning the matching money to the government would be made next week.

"We don't want to preclude the option of having the money, should we decide we will need it and take it," she said.

The campaign also said it is still well within state-by-state spending limits.

"In Iowa and New Hampshire, for example, money spent by Robertson thus far is estimated at $250,000 and $200,000, against allowable budgets of $745,000 and $444,000," the statement said.

Earlier in 1987, the Robertson campaign applied for matching funds and was certified by the FEC.

Presidential candidates become eligible for federal matching funds by raising at least $5,000 in individual contributions of $250 or less in at least 20 states. Once eligible, all individual contributions up to $250 will be matched dollar for dollar by the Treasury. The money comes from the voluntary $1 checkoff on personal tax returns.

Government Says Outlook Good For High-Tech

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A government forecast says the new year holds bright promise for U.S. companies connected with computers and other high-technology items but will be disappointing for many industries tied to construction.

The Commerce Department, in its annual projection of winners and losers in industrial America, on Thursday predicted that 1988 will be the sixth consecutive year of growth in manufacturing, with a decade-high 62 percent of producers enjoying rising sales.

In all, shipments of industrial goods should advance 2.4 percent in 1988, compared with an estimated 2 percent increase in 1987, the government predicted. This also would be an increase over the 1.3 percent average rate of growth during the past 15 years.

The forecasts were made in the department's "1988 U.S. Industrial Outlook," a 650-page book that surveyed prospects for U.S. manufacturing and service industries.

The department said 82 percent of the 219 manufacturing concerns studied would enjoy higher sales in 1988, the highest percentage since 1978. By contrast, well over half of U.S. manufacturing companies suffered sales declines in the recession years of 1980 and 1981-82.

"We expect continued strong growth throughout the manufacturing sector in an increasingly uniform pattern," Deputy Commerce Secretary Clarence Brown told reporters.

He said the disparity between the fastest-growing and slowest-growing companies has narrowed steadily since the recovery from the 1981-82 recession began.

In 1983, there was a gap of 29 percentage points from the expected sales increases by the top 10 percent of companies and the bottom 10 percent. For 1988, that difference will narrow to 7.7 percentage points, the government predicted.

Eight of the 15 fastest growing industries are related to defense, electronics or medicine, the department said.

Computer manufacturers were ranked No. 1, with an expected increase in shipments of 22.1 percent in 1988.

Among the losers, the report picked seven industries with close ties to construction, which has been suffering from widespread overbuilding of apartments and office buildings.

The biggest decline in shipments was projected for the flat glass industry, a drop of 10.3 percent, due to the drop in demand for construction.

Commerce officials said the overall prospects for U.S. manufacturers appear bright, as American producers continue to enjoy benefits from the weaker dollar which has made their exports competitive on overseas markets.

The 1988 outlook was based on surveys conducted in September and early October, but Commerce Department officials said they believed the stock market crash of Oct. 19 would have only limited impact on their forecasts.

The survey covered 80 percent of U.S. manufacturing industries and about half of the service industries.

In the service sector, four of the five industries expected to outperform the others in 1988 have links to computer technology.

The top performer was projected to be the burgeoning videotext industry, which links personal computer systems to centralized data networks. The Commerce Department projected 25 percent growth in subscribers to these services.

The computer software industry was projected to rank second in growth, with an expected 22 percent increase in revenues, reflecting growing demand by computer users for products to make their hardware more versatile.

Other top-ranked service firms were companies offering computer services, plus data processing concerns. The one non-computer industry in the top five was cable television, whose revenues were projected to increase by 15 percent in 1988.

In manufacturing, other top-ranked companies were makers of turbine generators, with an expected growth in shipments of 18.5 percent. This would represent a rebound for this industry, which actually ranks at the bottom over the past 10 years because of sluggish demand for electricity.

Other industries in the top 15 were manufacturers of semiconductors, copper, metal-forming machines, metal-cutting machines, optical devices, surgical equipment, surgical appliances, plastic products, engineering and science instruments, lithographic machines, missiles, space vehicles and measuring devices.

Following glass makers, industries expected to suffer the largest declines in 1988 shipments were manufacturers of rubber and plastic shoes, with a projected drop in demand of 9.8 percent.

Other manufacturing industries projected to see sales declines were producers of fabricated structural metal, photoengraving, dolls, shipbuilding, chewing and smoking tobacco, cigars, carbon black, concrete products, inorganic chemicals, ceramic wall and floor tiles, plywood, ready-mixed concrete and concrete block and brick.

The forecast book will go on sale later in January for $24 at Government Printing Office bookstores nationwide.

Passengers Rebel At Smoking Rule

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Trans World Airlines captain had to leave the cockpit to face a revolt of disgruntled smokers who lit up in defiance of a tobacco ban and scuffled with flight attendants, officials said.

There were no injuries during the incident, which occurred toward the end of Flight 853's six-hour nonstop journey from Boston to Los Angeles on Wednesday night.

"There were verbal exchanges, boozing, and it got enough into a physical pushing and shoving on a flight attendant so the captain was called," TWA spokesman Robert Blattner said Thursday in St. Louis.

"He came back, realized he was in a pretty volatile situation, so he called ahead and asked that the police be waiting when he landed."

Four passengers who allegedly lit up were placed under citizen's arrest by one flight attendant, Blattner said. Eleven people were involved in the fracas at one point, he said.

Los Angeles International Airport police interviewed three or four people after the plane landed at about 10:30 p.m., but made no arrests, said Sgt. Wanda Alford.

However, airport police turned the case over to the FBI for further investigation, and Blattner said one flight attendant indicated she would file battery charges against a passenger.

Smoking had been prohibited in the coach and business sections of the Lockheed L-1011 jumbo jet because of the large number of non-smokers on the flight, Blattner said. Smoking was allowed in first class.

"We had so many requests from non-smokers that it exhausted all the non-smoking seats on the airplane," Blattner said. Federal regulations require that airlines put any passenger who requests a non-smoking seat in a row where smoking is prohibited, he said.

Upon boarding the aircraft, the plane's 273 passengers were informed it would be a no-smoking flight, Blattner said.

The TWA spokesman said the trouble began during the last hour of the trip when the passengers "decided to light up their cigarettes in some kind of a protest," and were ordered by a flight attendant and flight service manager to put them out.

One of the passengers involved in the fracas said she had been the victim of rough handling by airline personnel. "First of all, I said, 'Get your hands off me,'" said passenger Heather Kell of suburban Torrance.

The disturbance occurred a little more than day before today's inauguration of a tough new California law banning cigarette, cigar and pipe smoking on all airplane, train and bus trips that begin and end in the state.

Teen Survives Crash

SCOTT'S MILLS, Ore. (AP) — A 17-year-old boy who survived a plane crash that killed three members of his family was in critical condition this morning after spending a freezing night alone amid the wreckage, officials said.

The teen-ager's mother, brother and stepfather were killed in the crash in the remote foothills of the Oregon Cascades Wednesday afternoon, said Clackamas County sheriff's spokesman Russ Williams.

The boy, identified as Timothy Frank Edmon of Lewisburg, W.Va., was taken by helicopter to the Oregon Health Sciences University Hospital in Portland, where he underwent surgery to repair broken bones in both legs and treat frostbite, said Dr. Donald Trunkey, chairman of the university's surgery department.

Williams said the three dead were the pilot, Walter Breeden, 48; his wife, Ann, 47, of Lewisburg; and her son Jeffrey Edmon, 22, of Pleasanton, Calif.

The plane was found 10 miles southeast of here about 10 a.m. Thursday after an all-night search by helicopters and a C130 plane from the Air Force Reserve's 304th Aerospace Rescue & Recovery Squadron in Portland, Williams said.

Sheriff's Lt. Gene Hanners said the crash site was covered with up to 30 inches of snow at elevations up to 2,800 feet.

Messages Of Hope, Mass Street Celebrations Usher In New Year

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
Japanese thronged to temples to ring in the Year of the Dragon, 30,000 people jammed London's Trafalgar Square to usher in 1988 and leaders around the world delivered New Year's messages of hope today.

At midnight in Tokyo, ships tooted their whistles and low-pitched temple bells tolled to mark the end of the Year of the Rabbit in the Oriental calendar.

The bells, sounded by swinging heavy logs into their sides, were rung 108 times to symbolize sweeping away the 108 earthly passions catalogued by Buddhists.

Japanese crowded temples and shrines to buy charms against the uncertainties posed by trade frictions, a rising yen and a volatile stock market.

London police said the crowd welcoming 1988 in Trafalgar Square was smaller than in previous years and less rowdy. At least 50,000 people had been expected.

"People come here to Trafalgar Square, stand there for some hours getting cold and possibly miserable. Midnight comes and then they try to get some form of transport to take them home. I don't see the point of it," said David Meynell, deputy assistant commissioner of the Metropolitan Police.

The London ambulance service said at least seven people were taken to hospitals, most with broken bones, and that 39 more received first aid at Trafalgar Square for cuts and bruises.

Police set up a huge security operation in and around the square, deploying officers on horses for the first time to support officers on foot and in vehicles to clamp down on drunken hooliganism.

In 1982, two women were trampled to death and hundreds of other people were injured when New Year rowdiness in the square got out of control.

A mile away at St. Bride's Church, people held a vigil for Terry Waite, special envoy of the archbishop of Canterbury, and journalist John McCarthy. Both men are missing in Lebanon.

Waite disappeared Jan. 20 in Beirut as he attempted to negotiate the release of captives already held there. McCarthy was seized from his car as he was driving to Beirut airport in April 1986.

In Moscow on Thursday, Mikhail S. Gorbachev told Soviets he is certain 1988 will bring more progress in arms control.

But the Communist Party chief said in his traditional New Year's Eve address that "immense and hard work" lies ahead as his drive for economic change enters a new phase.

At the December summit, Gorbachev and President Reagan signed a treaty to liquidate intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

"We are entering the new year of 1988 in confidence that this movement will keep mounting and further practical steps will be taken along the path of promoting general disarmament, strengthening trust and broadening peaceful cooperation among nations," Gorbachev said.

He said the Soviet Union this year will face "two interrelated key tasks — further democratization of society and radical economic reform."

"Of course, restructuring is not easy and not without pain," Gorbachev said. "The old is giving way to the new, but with struggle."

Poland's leader, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, said Thursday that Poles face "a difficult test" in 1988 in implementing reforms aimed at overcoming the country's economic crisis.

In his New Year's message, Jaruzelski said 1987 "was not easy, worries and cares were not lacking." But he said Poland had made progress in implementing policies of "openness" and "socialist democracy."

President Francois Mitterrand of France urged Reagan and Gorbachev to pursue the road to peace.

Iraq Says Another Tanker Is Attacked

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said today its warplanes made an overnight raid on an oil tanker off the Iranian coast in an attack that would cap the most damaging year for shipping in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

A Soviet official in New York, meanwhile, said he expected a new round of peace efforts by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to end the war.

He said the efforts could determine how the U.N. Security Council follows up on its July 20 demand for a cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war.

The official Iraqi News Agency said Iraqi warplanes scored "an accurate and effective hit" at 10 p.m. Thursday against "a very large maritime target," usually a term for oil tankers trading with Iran.

Quoting a military communique, the agency said the planes returned safely to base.

Shipping sources in the gulf had no immediate confirmation of the claim, the third since Dec. 26 that has not been confirmed or answered by an Iranian strike on other gulf shipping.

Iran generally responds to Iraqi attacks on a ship-for-ship basis by striking at neutral vessels, concentrating on those trading with Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. Iran accuses those two Persian Gulf countries of aiding Iraq's war effort.

The Iraqi communique said the raids "aim at destroying the base of aggression and cutting off oil supplies of the evil gang ruling in Tehran."

Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit in London reported this week that there were 34 confirmed attacks on commercial shipping in December by the two gulf enemies, the worst month in the worst year of the so-called tanker war.

Five vessels were hit twice during the year.

Lloyd's counted 178 ship attacks for the year, 71 more than the previous record toll in 1986.

At the United Nations, Soviet Ambassador Alexander M. Belongov told The Associated Press on Thursday he expects the U.N. secretary-general to hold a new round of talks with Iran and Iraq before the Security Council votes on an arms embargo against Iran.

Perez de Cuellar already has held three rounds of talks.

Nicaragua Still Receiving Soviet Aid, Ortega Says

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega said the Soviet Union has given Nicaragua more than $2 billion in aid since the 1979 revolution but the Sandinista government's war with the Contra rebels has cost even more.

In an interview published Thursday, Ortega scoffed at reports that Moscow was pulling back its support for his government to curry favor in Washington.

"We made a joke of this, of how the imperialists try to manipulate totally false elements and create ideas that don't exist," Ortega was quoted as saying in the newspaper Barricada, the voice of the governing Sandinista National Liberation Front.

He said six years of fighting with the U.S.-backed Contras have cost Nicaragua $3.6 billion.

In a New Year's message Thursday in the town of Muelle de los Bueyes, Ortega said the war has cost the country $376 million in 1987 alone, but export earnings only were $260 million for the year. The war also has killed or wounded 50,382 people on both sides, Ortega said.

Muelle de los Bueyes is 150 miles southeast of Managua on the strategic Rama Road, a favorite target of Contra raids.

Recently there was speculation in Nicaragua and in the U.S. media that the Soviet Union, Nicaragua's largest economic and military backer, was planning to cut back its support.

In the interview with Barricada, Ortega noted his November visit to the Soviet Union and meetings with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"We spoke about the situation in Nicaragua, in Central America and the interest the U.S.S.R. has in backing Nicaragua's push for peace," Ortega said.

In his New Year's message, Ortega accused President Reagan and the U.S. Congress of violating a Central American peace agreement "by approving new funds for the Contras."

Congress in December approved $8.1 million in aid to the rebels. An administration request for $270 million more was postponed until early this year.

Ortega said Reagan "will try to break our arm in 1988 but that will not be possible because there is a nation willing to fight and willing to die to defend the revolutionary conquests."

Government troops in 1987 killed 4,813 Contras, Ortega said in the interview. The Sandinistas say there are as many as 6,000 rebels, while the Contras claim they have 18,000 troops.

Ortega said in the interview his nation would work on the regional peace plan and on Nicaragua's battered economy.

The Central American peace plan, signed by Ortega and the presidents of El Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras and Guatemala, calls for cease-fires, amnesties, democratic reforms and an end to outside aid for insurgents.

Ortega said if peace came to Nicaragua, the country would soon become the most economically and socially developed in Central America.

"But," he said, "Reagan does not want peace and there is no road left but to defend ourselves."

"We are in a survival economy within a war situation," Ortega said in the interview. He said there would be new belt-tightening measures, but he did not elaborate.

Most of Nicaragua's 3.2 million people live in poverty. More than 50 percent of the work force have no jobs. Inflation runs to about 1,000 percent.

The national currency, the cordoba, is weak. A dollar fetches 15,000 cordobas on the legal market and 35,000 on the black market. Barter is a major form of economic exchange.

The United States cut all aid to Nicaragua in 1981 and started a trade embargo in 1985.

Ortega said it didn't matter to his country who won the U.S. presidency in 1988.

Village Attacks Kill 13 People

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Thirteen people were killed and 61 wounded in raids by Tamil rebels on two villages and a bomb explosion in a third town, officials said today.

The rebels staged pre-dawn raids today on two villages near the eastern port city of Trincomalee, killing nine Sinhalese and wounding 11 others, military officials said.

The officials said among those killed in the attacks on the villages of Morawewa and Mahadivulwewa were two children under the age of 6.

Fifteen homes in the villages were set on fire, the officials said, speaking on condition they not be identified.

One military official said the raids appeared to be part of a campaign by the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam to drive Sinhalese out of eastern Sri Lanka.

The Tigers, who have the most powerful Tamil guerrilla organization, want to set up an independent Tamil nation in Sri Lanka's Northern Province and Eastern Province.

In the central hill town of Kandy, 125 miles south of the two villages, a bomb ripped through the aftermath of a New Year's Eve procession to one of Buddhism's holiest shrines, killing four people and injuring 50, police said.

The blast came at 10:45 p.m. Thursday on the sidewalk in front of the Pavilion Hotel less than a quarter-mile from the Temple of the Tooth, said police, also speaking on condition of anonymity.

Hanky-Panky Highlights Top Religion Stories Of Past Year

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As in politics and finance, a lot of shady doings turned up in religious circles in 1987, mostly individual but sometimes institutional.

Except for the Jim Bakker sex-and-money "televangelism" scandal, rated the year's top religion story, few of the other instances made that list.

Nevertheless, hanky panky surfacing in a field stressing morality was extensive and often jarring, as it was in politics and on Wall Street.

Such proliferation of transgressions in the public arena, including religion, led the Religion Newswriters Association to rank signs of general ethical malaise as fourth among the year's major religion stories.

In second place was Pope John Paul II's U.S. visit, his warm mingling with Protestants and stern admonitions against dissent. Ranked third was the unexpectedly strong showing of former religious broadcaster Pat Robertson in the bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

While only the Bakker case made the list of top stories, embarrassing affairs in religion were numerous and varied in 1987. Numerous ministers were involved in sex scandals, while other religious figures were linked to other shames.

Among the cases:

— A Greek Orthodox bishop, Anthimos of Denver, resigned after an inquiry by the church's highest tribunal in Constantinople (now Istanbul, Turkey) into claims he had kept a priest's daughter in sexual servitude for three years.

— The head of the Vatican bank, Illinois-born Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus, became a virtual prisoner in Vatican City after it refused to extradite him to face Italian arrest warrants charging complicity in a 1982 bank scandal.

Italy's top court nullified the warrants, ruling a treaty forbade interference in Vatican affairs, but a prosecutor is challenging the provision's constitutionality.

— Southern Methodist University was suspended from intercollegiate football after disclosures of banned payments to players and charges of an attempted cover-up by former board member Texas Gov. William P. Clements Jr.

— Several Protestant and Roman Catholic clergy were convicted or charged in child sex abuse cases and lawsuits for damages in such cases were pressed against some Catholic dioceses in Minnesota and Louisiana.

A $1.8 million judgment was assessed against the Lafayette, La., diocese. In New York, a court rejected an appeal of a United Methodist minister imprisoned for assaulting children in a day-care center.

— The Bible Speaks Church of Lee, Mass., was forced into bankruptcy after being ordered to return $6.6 million to chain store heiress Elizabeth Dovydenas. A court ruled she had been duped into donations through "clerical deceit, avarice and subjugation."

— In Houston, after the death from AIDS of retired United Methodist Bishop Finis Crutchfield, his son said his father had denied homosexual activity and apparently got the disease from ministering to AIDS victims. But church and gay sources said he had led a double life and had been an active homosexual.

— In Dover, N.H., an avowed lesbian, the Rev. Rose Mary Denman, was tried by a United Methodist court, found guilty of violating church discipline and suspended.

These and the top-rated story, as ranked by religion specialists of the secular press in the RNA poll, clouded the religious scene this past year.

The problems of ex-TV evangelist Bakker included an extramarital sexual episode and hush money paid to the woman. His PTL — for Praise the Lord or People That Love — has filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws and is under federal investigations.

Among the year's other major religion stories were the following, ranked in this order:

— Merger of three Lutheran denominations into the 5.3 million-member Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

— TV evangelist Oral Roberts said God had warned him he would die if he didn't raise $8 million by March 31. He raised it.

— Religious controversy arose over promotion of condoms and sex education in schools to combat AIDS.

— Jewish-Catholic relations were strained by Pope John Paul's audience with Austrian President Kurt Waldheim, accused of complicity in Nazi war crimes, but Jewish meetings with the pope eased tensions.

— A federal appeals court reversed a district judge's order banning use of 44 textbooks in Alabama public schools because they allegedly promote the "religion" of secular humanism.

— Fundamentalists solidified control in the Southern Baptist Convention, re-electing the Rev. Adrian Rogers as president.

Biltmore Estates Baron Basks In Estate's Appeal

By LINDA BRINSON
The Winston-Salem Journal
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — When Bill Cecil was a small child, he lived in a house that covered four acres and was surrounded by an estate that stretched over the French Broad valley and the Blue Ridge mountains, as far as the eye could see.

The house's 250 rooms were filled with priceless treasures from around the world — Renoirs and Chippendales, 16th-century Flemish tapestries, a table that belonged to Napoleon Bonaparte, a rare set of porcelain Meissen Apostles, a ceiling painting by Pellegrini ...

None of it impressed him a bit. "As far as I knew, everybody lived in a house like that," he said recently. "A banister is a banister — you slide down it. It's what you're used to."

Now, of course, Cecil is well aware that Biltmore House, his birthplace and boyhood home, is one of the most magnificent and unusual houses in the world.

Cecil himself now lives in a more modest house near the estate and says he wouldn't want to live in Biltmore House. But he is making a highly successful business out of the fact that hundreds of thousands of people each year find it a very nice place to visit. At least 650,000 people are expected to visit before this year ends, at a price of $17.50 for adults and $13 for students aged 12 to 17.

"It failed as a home because it had no rhyme or reason," he says. "The real reason for that sort of house in Europe was political — visitors would come with their households and stay for months. It never really worked here because this is too big a nation, and we work as a nation. People don't have that kind of leisure time. It's an anachronism."

Under Cecil's steady business hand, Biltmore House has become something almost unheard of — a faithfully preserved historic site that is privately owned and is making money.

Cecil's great-great-grandfather, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, built a railroad empire and became the richest man in America. The commodore's grandson, George Vanderbilt, was a scholarly man, an arts fancier. In the 1890s, he used his inheritance to buy a chunk of mountain and forest near Asheville and build on it a baronial mansion much like castles he had admired in France's Loire valley.

George Vanderbilt's only child, Cornelia, married a British diplomat, John Francis Amherst Cecil, and it was their son, Bill, and his brother George who long ago slid down the banisters in the mansion.

Later, various events resulted in the family's moving out of the mansion. John and Cornelia Cecil divorced; the Great Depression and World War II changed the world.

Bill Cecil, a Harvard graduate employed by Chase Manhattan Bank, married Mary Lee "Mimi" Ryan, a cousin of Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onassis, and his life seemed set.

But with the death of their father in 1954, Bill Cecil and his brother George inherited the Biltmore Estate, which was both a priceless treasure and something of a white elephant.

Attempts to lure tourists to the house met with little success in the early 1930s, and when the brothers took over, the enterprise was losing about a quarter of a million dollars a year.

The only thing that was keeping the Biltmore enterprise solvent was the other part of the Biltmore Co., a profitable regional dairy operation.

George Cecil wanted to run the dairy. But something had to be done with the house.

"So I came back," Bill Cecil said. Cecil speaks of his decision in 1959 as "facing the challenge." In his view, there were two choices: The estate could be turned over to an agency, which would make it eligible for tax money and grants. Or it could be kept in the family and managed in such a way that it would stop being such a financial drain.

"Our hope was that we would break even," Cecil said. "Never in our wildest dreams did we ever think that the preservation could ever be profitable in its own right."

"We went after the tourist industry — I won't say with a vengeance, but with a professionalism that had not been encountered in this field before," he said.

Cecil has been criticized in some circles for his commercialism, for the price of admission, for the nature of the interpretation. At Biltmore House, for example, there are no costumed guides to explain the treasures on display, and you rarely see the busloads of schoolchildren that converge on such places as Old Salem or Tryon Palace.

But James Gray, a Winston-Salem historic preservationist, says no one suggests Cecil's determination to make money has prompted him to sacrifice authenticity or good maintenance.

As for the ticket prices, both Gray and Cecil gave the obvious answer: Each year, more and more tourists come to Biltmore House.

"He charges what the traffic will bear, which is typical of a for-profit operation," Gray said.

Today, Biltmore Dairy has been sold, and the house and its gardens are the profit-making heart of the Biltmore Co. Biltmore Estate, with 450 employees at peak seasons, is one of Buncombe County's largest employers and taxpayers.

Cecil, 59, also is president of two spin-off companies: the Biltmore Estate Wine Co., which held the grand opening for its new winery on the estate in 1985, and Biltmore, Campbell, Smith Restorations Inc., a decorative arts restoration firm.

Success, however, did not come easily or quickly.

"It took eight years to become profitable," Cecil said. "I took over in 1960, and in 1968 we made $16.34. That was the best profit I ever made in my life."

Lifestyle Changes Varies Travel

MEMPHIS (AP) — The nation's travel habits have changed a great deal since 1952, according to a survey commissioned by Holiday Inns in observance of its 35th anniversary.

The respondents, 800 people over age 18, representing all broad geographic areas and economic groups, were asked to identify the single most influential factor affecting American travel habits during that period.

They were almost evenly divided, citing three major factors that have been influential in the change, reports Andrew Lien, senior vice president, worldwide marketing for Holiday Inns:

The increased availability and affordability of air travel; the development of the interstate highway system; and the growing prevalence of two-career households, which leads working couples to take shorter vacations because of scheduling difficulties. A minority of those polled suggested "more disposable income."

Wedding Vows Solemnized

Phillipi Church of Christ was the scene for the wedding ceremony of Cheryl Denise Chance of Greenville and Michael Lance Best of Robersonville Saturday. The Rev. Randy Royal performed the double-ring ceremony.

Soloists Debbie Nunley, David Spruill and Jacqueline Ebron presented a program of wedding music. Myrick Gant was the organist.

The bride is the daughter of Lennie B. Roberson Chance and the late Lucious Chance of Parmele. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Best of Robersonville.

The bride attended North Carolina Central University and is employed by the Department of Social Services. The bridegroom is employed by West Point Pepperell and attended Roanoke High School.

Given in marriage by her brother, Tyrone Roberson, the bride wore a floor-length gown with a cathedral train of traditional bridal satin with beaded schiffli embroidery. The fitted bodice featured a yoke neckline with an organza lattice sheer yoke, a V-shaped back, Austrian shirred long-tapered sleeves and a torso waist. Schiffli-embroidered motifs embellished with pearls and sequins applied the bodice and sleeves. Bridal buttons fastened the sheer organza lattice, the V-shaped back and the sleeves. A pyramid of organza lattice flanked the schiffli embroidered motifs adorned with sequins, and applied the skirt and the scalloped train.

The bride chose a Queen of Scots-designed headpiece of lace embellished with seed pearls, sequins and crystals. Floral sprays interspersed with pearl sprays and cascades adorned the headpiece, and a bouffant tiered veil with an illusion pouff accented with scattered pearls flowed from the back. She carried a nosegay of petite white roses, carnations, mums and baby's breath.

Vanessa Roberson of Raleigh served as her cousin's maid of honor. Marsha Peele of Robersonville was the matron of honor.

Bridesmaids were Teresa Fleming of Greenville, Regina Fleming and Reekitta Grimes, cousin of the bride, both of Raleigh, Delores Bell of Fayetteville, Phyllis Reddick, cousin of the bride, and Evangeline Modica, both of Robersonville, Amy Marshall-Brown and Freda Brown, both of Tarboro, and Sherry Foxx of New Jersey, cousin of the bridegroom. Crystal Peele of Robersonville, the couple's goddaughter, was the junior bridesmaid, while Montoya Andrews of Bethel and Rodshika Congleton of Robersonville were flower girls.

The bridesmaids wore fuschia satin floor-length gowns featuring fitted bodices and shirred long-tapered sleeves. The maid and matron of honor's gowns were similar but featured lace overlay, while the junior bridesmaid's gown featured an overlay of silver sequins. They carried bouquets of white carnations, mums and baby's breath. The flower girls wore white satin gowns with fluorescent lace overlay and carried baskets of carnations and mums.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Larry Brown of Tarboro, Donald Weathersbe of Alabama, Bobby Chance and Curvin Chance, brothers of the bride from Brooklyn, N.Y., Milton E. Best and Reginald Best, brothers of the bridegroom from Newark, N.J., Morgan Best, brother of the bridegroom, and Chris Morning, both of Robersonville, Tony Best of Alaska and Vincent Best of Raleigh, both brothers of the bridegroom, Tyrone Smith of Virginia, cousin of the bridegroom and Maurice Chance of Atlanta. Clayton Peele Jr. of Robersonville, godson of the couple, served as the ring bearer.

MRS. BEST

A reception followed the ceremony in the Holiday Inn Holidome. Several parties and showers were given in honor of the couple prior to the wedding. After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will live in Greenville.

Woman Wants Answers To All Questions

DEAR ABBY: I had a face-lift two weeks ago. My face is still slightly swollen, but my doctor says that is normal and I can get my hair done next week. My problem is I know everyone in this small town who has had a face-lift because my hairdresser has a big mouth. She's an excellent hairstylist, but I am reluctant to go back to her for that reason.

Any suggestions on how to handle this — as well as some of the comments and questions I am sure to encounter — will be appreciated. Please withhold my name and location. — LONGTIME ABBY FAN

DEAR FAN: Living in a small town where some women have had cosmetic surgery, did you really think you could keep yours a secret?

Go back to your regular beauty parlor, where you will surely be told how "wonderful, young and/or well rested" you look. Some may ask you flat-out, "Did you have something done?" Don't lie. Say, "Yes, I had a few tucks here and there. And thanks for noticing." (If nobody noticed the difference, it wouldn't have been worth the money, time and inconvenience.)

DEAR ABBY: I agree that "printing the cause of death in obituaries often serves no useful purpose and can be painful for those who are suffering from the same disease."

But when the deceased was a longtime smoker who died of lung cancer or emphysema, cause of death should be printed so that those who are still smoking can be reminded that if they continue to smoke and torment non-smokers with their offensive secondhand smoke they (the smoker and the non-smoker) may be next.

You have my permission to use my name, address and occupation. — CHARLES A. WRIGHT JR., ATTORNEY AT LAW, CHICAGO

DEAR MR. WRIGHT (What a great name for a lawyer!): You're Wright. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: So you want to eliminate the cause of death in obituaries?

Why not eliminate age, lest the elderly be offended?

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Why not eliminate first names, lest sex be disadvantaged?

Why not eliminate the hometown, lest it be considered unwholesome?

Why not eliminate religion, lest it appear that faith is fruitless?

Why not eliminate obituaries, so that ignorance will gleefully lead us to believe that we'll live forever?

Why not? — C. HARVEY GARDINER, ZEPHYRHILLS, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my husband started expressing his dissatisfaction with my appearance. Why do men expect us to look as good as we did at 20? I would never criticize him for losing his hair, or any of the other changes that occur with the natural aging process.

I am an active wife and mother, and take pride in my appearance. Although I am a little overweight, I feel comfortable with myself. Obviously my husband feels cheated when summer comes around and the beaches are full of young beautiful women with firm bodies.

His comments have hurt, and I find it difficult to respond to his sexual advances when he makes fun of my body. What should I do? — OVER THE HILL

DEAR OVER: I wish all the problems were as easy to solve as this one. You can say, "You hurt me when you make fun of my body, and consequently, it's difficult for me to respond to your sexual advances. Now, what were you saying?"

Wedding bells? Wedding bills! Who pays for what and everything else you need to know if you're planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. East Carolina Has Year Of Administrative, Student Changes

 ferings not only in (doctorate) programs but across the curriculum."

In addition to faculty and administrators, Eakin met face-to-face with students as he dared this year to tackle the parking problem at ECU. Eakin initially proposed to cement green space on College Hill Drive in a $836,000 plan to add 1,269 spaces on campus. The plan would be financed by a $25 increase in campus parking fees to $50 a year, and the bill would be paid over five years.

The chancellor reconsidered his proposal and recommended a $750,000 construction and expansion plan for 978 spaces after opposition from ECU's Student Government Association. The SGA adopted a resolution opposing the paving of the area west of College Hill Drive, which now is used for band practice, ROTC drills and ceremonies and leisure time recreation.

"The students made me proud to be chancellor of ECU in the way they responded to the plan and the differences (they had) to that plan," Eakin said. The students "outlined weaknesses and did so in a way that allowed us to make some changes in the plan. The SGA and the university band expressed their differences and then came forward with some options," he said. "They reacted in a very responsive way."

In another student matter, Eakin said, "When I first arrived to the university there was some controversy around student elections. This was a matter for students to solve," and the university created an atmosphere "so students could deal with it in a reasonable way."

Students had protested SGA election procedures in the spring of 1987 and had accused the election committee of being biased. Steven Pierce and Rick Brown were defeated for president and vice president of the association by Scott Thomas and Dillon Kalkhurst, respectively. Both vice presidential candidates, Brown and Kalkhurst, were disqualified because they did not meet student election requirements.

Grievances against procedures included partisan politicking within 25 feet of polling boxes, students voting without proper identification, destroying ballots and not checking the qualifications of candidates before the election.

A board reviewed the allocations against the election committee and found problems with the procedures but said they did not merit invalidating the election.

"They arrived at a commendable solution on their own," Eakin said. "I was quite impressed with all persons who were principals in that controversy. They simply dealt with it in a manner that was commendable."

In another 1987 incident, students clashed with Greenville police during an unauthorized September block party that spilled onto city streets and resulted in the arrest of three ECU students. Matthew Hall Moore, Anthony Joseph Pistorio and Michael Hart were charged at the party on Biltmore Street between Fourth and Fifth streets for various actions from being drunk and disruptive to assaulting a police officer.

Students at the party said police used unnecessary violence in the arrests, while Sgt. A.S. Fordham of the police department said just enough force was used to make the arrests.

University and city officials discussed several alternatives for avoiding or handling incidents involving ECU parties that get out of control, but there were no plans or firm proposals made.

ECU's first formal fall graduation ceremony in 1987 presented 1,500 graduates. In past years, the university held a small ceremony in the fall for those who completed degree requirements in the summer or fall of the year, and conducted formal commencement exercises only in the spring. The popularity of the fall event prompted the university to conduct two commencements.

Amid student activities, leadership of the ECU Board of Trustees also changed hands this year. Thomas Bennett, an executive vice president of Wachovia Bank and Trust, was named the new chairman of the board, replacing C. Ralph Kinsey. New members appointed to the board this year by Gov. James Martin were Howard Rooks and Craig Souza, graduates of ECU, and Vincent Lowe.

And in other administrative actions this year, Dr. John Kozy Jr., former chairman of the philosophy department at ECU, was dismissed following a series of hearings resulting from complaints by three female students that he had sexually harassed them.

A member of the ECU faculty since 1963, Kozy asked for a review by the school's board of trustees and later by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors. The ECU board reversed three specifications while sustaining six. The Board of Governors denied Kozy's petition for reversal of the dismissal.

Kozy also filed a petition with the Pitt County Clerk of Court to reverse a ruling by university officials to dismiss him for being unfit, but Judge Bradford Tillery of Wilmington upheld the firing of the professor. Robert D. Rouse, Kozy's attorney, said he planned to appeal the case to the N.C. Court of Appeals.

1987 also was a year of changes in East Carolina athletics as Ken Karr director of athletics, resigned in addition to men's basketball coach Charlie Harrison and women's basketball coach Emily Manwaring.

Karr resigned on Nov. 18 and was replaced by associate director of athletics Dave Hart, who was named his permanent replacement on Dec. 21.

Karr, who remains on the ECU faculty, had come under fire for what some termed unfair scheduling of the ECU football team, and his resignation ended a stormy final year in which support for Karr among the school's boosters was at best split.

But, Karr was instrumental in getting the ECU athletic department out of debt as well as aiding the Pirates' entrance into the College Football Association.

"I'm very appreciative of the remarkable contributions that Ken Karr made to the program," Eakin said. Karr left the program in an "excellent position to bring the athletic program to a level I know that students, friends and fans would like to see."

Hart, 38, had been at ECU for just under four years. His primary duties were as executive director of the Pirate Club with his main responsibilities being fundraising and the organization of the Great Pirate Purple-Gold Pigskin Pigout celebration during spring football practice.

"I'm pleased to have been able to appoint Dave Hart as athletic director," Eakin said. "I believe Dave is a man of extraordinary talents and will lead us to new heights in the athletic program."

The resignations of Harrison and Ms. Manwaring both came within the first week of February.

Harrison was replaced by Mike Steele, who had previously coached at Depauw, while Ms. Manwaring was replaced by Pat Pierson of Northwestern (La.) State.

In the first week of May, two ECU basketball players, Howard Brown and William Grady, were charged with larceny and possession of stolen goods.

Before the 1987 academic year got under way, one present and three former members of the ECU men's basketball team were charged in connection with the theft of almost $6,000 in property from ECU dormitory rooms.

As a result of that, Blue Edwards, the leading returning scorer on the Pirate team, was declared ineligible for varsity play for the 1987-88 academic year due to violations of the school's student code.

The other three men implicated in the thefts, Brown, Tracy King and John Williams, had all been removed from the team prior to their arrest.

But that wasn't the only controversy that the ECU athletic program would face in 1987.

Following the Pirates' 32-14 win over N.C. State in the opening game of the 1987 football season, fans rushed onto the field and caused extensive damage to the N.C. State field.

More than 50 people, including a N.C. State public safety officer, were injured in the fracas. Damage to the field, a restraining fence and the two goal posts was estimated at $7,200.

Following the melee, N.C. State officials called for a one-year moratorium to be placed on the series between the two schools. The future of the series still is uncertain.

On a positive note, the 1987 ECU football team finished 5-6 and won more games this season than any team had won in the previous three, when the Pirates suffered through three straight 2-9 seasons.

And, the 1987 ECU baseball team won the Colonial Athletic Association baseball tournament and advanced to the NCAA Atlantic Regionals before being eliminated by Florida State and Central Michigan.

In track, Lee Vernon McNeil, Eugene McNeil, Jon Lee and Kelvin Wright were part of an All-American 4X100 meter relay team that advanced to the NCAA championships in May.

In addition, Lee Vernon McNeil went on to win three gold medals in summer competition in the U.S. Olympic festival, the Pan American Games and the World University Games.

Reflector sports writer Tom Morris contributed to this story.

City Sees Growth

 succeeded Gail Meeks, who had been dismissed from the position on March 16.

"Each and every day I find positive things which have reinforced my decision to come to Greenville," Knowles said in a year-end interview.

Knowles said he believes the city has made great progress in 1987 by moving into a period of enhanced communication and cooperation between other community entities such as ECU, the school board, the county Board of Commissioners, and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"We're pleased with how far we've come in resolving issues and addressing each other's concerns," he said.

Knowles indicated this improved cooperation and communication among community leaders should assist Greenville's growth and expedite future projects.

"There's a lot of vitality in this town," he commented.

"I am very pleased with the reception the townspeople have given the Knowles family," he added.

In 1987 the city proceeded with one of its largest annexations in recent history in taking in 583 acres of Brook Valley and vicinity.

The annexation, which also included Holly Hills, Azalea Mobile Home Park and the Highland Mobile Home Park, generated controversy as many Brook Valley residents questioned whether the annexation was in their best interest.

Members of City Council listened to complaints and criticisms from residents concerning the annexation at a public hearing on Nov. 23.

Among residents' expressed concerns were the additional taxes which would be incurred, environmental damage created by the addition of a complex sewer system, and the quality of fire-rescue service the area would receive beginning Dec. 31, 1988, when the annexation goes into effect.

At its regular session meeting on Dec. 9, City Council approved the Brook Valley annexation by a 4-1 vote.

Another indication of Greenville's rapid growth in 1987 was the additions made to the area's infrastructure.

Greenville residents saw the opening this year of the long-awaited express route to Farmville, which had been under construction since March of 1984.

Gov. Jim Martin, former U.S. Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole, and other federal, state and local officials dedicated the opening of the four-lane, U.S. 264 approximately 2 miles west of Pitt Memorial Hospital on Dec. 3.

The 7.5-mile stretch of road, which cost approximately $13.1 million, was dedicated the "John P. East Freeway" in memory of the late U.S. senator who died in 1986.

Another addition to the community in 1987 was additional fire-rescue service provided by Fire-Rescue Station No. 3, which opened on July 27.

The $500,000 station, located on the southwest corner of Red Banks Road and Charles Boulevard, replaced the former station on Brownlea Drive.

A dedication ceremony for the new station was held on Aug. 30.

Including a meeting room, a kitchen, and an employees lounge area, the station has sleeping facilities for 10 fire-rescue personnel.

Another reflection of Greenville's growth in 1987 was the increased volume of air traffic at the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

According to James G. Turcotte, airport manager, traffic volume at the airport in 1987 has increased approximately 40 percent over 1986.

Turcotte said a major factor in the increase of the airport's volume was where the United States backs guerrillas fighting Soviet-supported regimes, Reagan said. "We Americans are also concerned, as I know you are, about senseless conflicts in a number of regions."

"In some instances, regimes backed by foreign military power are oppressing their own peoples, giving rise to popular resistance and the spread of fighting beyond their borders," he said. "Too many mothers, including Soviet mothers, have wept over the graves of their fallen sons. True peace means not only preventing a big war but ending smaller ones as well. This is why we support efforts to find just, negotiated solutions acceptable to the peoples who are suffering in regional wars."

Reagan videotaped his message in the Roosevelt Room of the White House, across a corridor from the Oval Office. He was seated in front of the Nobel Peace Prize medal awarded to President Theodore Roosevelt, a reminder of the honor his admirers hope he will receive if a nuclear accord is reached.

The Soviet broadcast opened with music and began and ended with views of historic buildings in Moscow. Gorbachev, speaking in Russian with an interpreter translating his words into English as they were heard, sat at a desk with a small, frosty-boughed tree, decked with glass ornaments, at his elbow.

"We would like without delay to address the problem of cutting back drastically conventional forces and arms in Europe," Gorbachev said. "We are ready for interaction in resolving other problems, including regional ones."

Phone Rates Fall

within states are regulated by individual states, and won't be affected by the new interstate reductions.

AT&T, the industry leader with about 75 percent of the long-distance market, is the only long-distance company whose rates are regulated, but its prices largely determine those charged by competitors.

MCI Communications Corp., the No. 2 long-distance carrier, and US Sprint Communications Co., which ranks third, say they will review AT&T's move before deciding when and how much to lower their rates.

The Federal Communications Commission said that while it is letting AT&T put the new rates into effect, the agency will look further at the company's costs to see if more reductions are necessary.

The reductions taking effect today reflect only reduced charges AT&T will have to pay for connections to the local phone network, the FCC said. The reductions amount to $772 million, AT&T said, and the company is passing them through to customers dollar-for-dollar.

But the FCC said changes in tax laws and recent changes in federal accounting rules for pension funds also "could be expected to substantially lower AT&T's costs."

A commission source, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said regulators were concerned that AT&T "wanted to keep their rates as high as possible so if a rate cap comes in, that's what (their rates) would be capped at."

The FCC is considering changing its traditional regulatory approach, which limits AT&T's profits, to a system in which rates would be capped with allowances for increases based on economic conditions.

AT&T is allowed to earn a 12.2 percent return on investment. The company said it expects 1987 earnings to be less than the allowed return and 1988 earnings, based on the new rates, not to exceed the limit.

Gerald Brock, the FCC's top telephone official, said he does not believe AT&T is inflating its rates, but that the company did not file all the data needed to support its rate figures.

"They may be justified rates, but we need more information to determine whether they are or not," he said.

Herb Linnen, an AT&T spokesman, said the company would give the FCC the requested information by Jan. 18.

Hodson And LSU Defense Cruise Past South Carolina

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Tommy Hodson won the battle of sophomore quarterbacks and LSU the showdown of big-play defenses.

"It was obvious that some people didn't think we were a very good football team," LSU Coach Mike Archer said after the seventh-ranked Tigers' 30-13 drubbing of No. 9 South Carolina in Thursday's Gator Bowl. "I think we showed a lot of the people in the United States that we are."

LSU finished its first season under Archer with a 10-1-1 record while South Carolina, still winless after seven bowl appearances, closed at 8-4. LSU snapped a four-bowl losing streak in posting its first 10-victory season since 1961.

Hodson was a hands-down winner of the quarterback derby with South Carolina's Todd Ellis, completing 20 of 32 passes for 224 yards and three touchdowns. Ellis threw for 304 yards but the Louisiana State defense victimized him for a Gator Bowl record-tying four interceptions and sacked him seven times for minus-64 yards.

"We had Ellis on the run the whole day," said LSU defensive end Tommy Clapp, who had two sacks for 29 yards.

The difference in the game was that Hodson had Wendell Davis, and South Carolina's defense never could find him.

"The offensive line did a good job and that was the key. It gave me time to throw the ball and pick up the right guy," Hodson said.

The right guy was usually Davis, who had scoring grabs of 39, 12 and 25 yards among his nine receptions for 132 yards.

"He's unbelievable," Hodson said of Davis. "I always knew where he was."

South Carolina's blitzing defense had hoped to negate Davis by forcing Hodson to scramble. The LSU offensive line handled the pressure well, and left Davis working one-on-one against a South Carolina defender.

"When they line up one-on-one, I smile from ear to ear," Davis said.

"You can live by the blitz or die by the blitz," Archer said. "They died by the blitz."

South Carolina Coach Joe Morrison was impressed by Hodson.

"I thought he did an excellent job, not only checking at the line of scrimmage and eating the clock, but throwing the football as well," Morrison said.

David Brownlyke kicked field goals of 27, 18 and 23 yards to complete the LSU scoring.

Hodson and Davis combined for two scores in the first five minutes and LSU was in control thereafter. The Tigers led 27-6 before South Carolina scored its only touchdown, on a 10-yard run by Harold Green, at the start of the fourth quarter.

The Tigers took a 7-0 lead when Davis caught a sideline pass and eluded three tacklers on a 39-yard

ECU, Winthrop To Open 1988

East Carolina's Pirates return home Saturday night to begin the New Year by hosting Winthrop at 7:30 p.m. in Mingos Coliseum.

The Pirates will be looking for their fourth victory in nine starts against the Eagles, who beat East Carolina last year for the first time. The Eagles pulled off a stunning 66-52 win over the Pirates on their own home court.

East Carolina won the first two meetings between the two schools.

It will be third meeting for the Pirates with a team from the Big South Conference. Earlier, East Carolina defeated Campbell and lost to Radford. They have another meeting with Campbell later this season.

The Eagles are coached by former Duke great Steve Vacendak.

Following the game, the Pirates begin a three-game road trip at Maryland-Baltimore County, a first-time opponent for East Carolina. The two meet at the UMBC Fieldhouse on Monday at 7:30 p.m.

East Carolina had had outstanding play from sophomore guard Reed Lose, who was the only unanimous pick for the all-tournament team at the Music City Invitational earlier this week at Nashville.

Lose, who pulled only 12 rebounds in the first seven games of the year, snatched away an equal number against Miami University, a career high, to double his total.

He also led the team with 31 points, another career high, against Miami to lead the Pirates to victory in the consolation game of the tournament. Lose is averaging 17.4 points a game and is hitting 61.1 percent of his field goals.

Gus Hill, a redshirt sophomore playing for the first time, is the only other Pirate in double figures, hitting 16.5 points a game.

Stanley Love, a freshman, is the leading rebounder for the Pirates, with a 5.0 average.

Jeff Kelly, one of two juniors on the team, has regained his starting position at the point and turned in his career high against Miami, scoring 11 points. Kenny Murphy, a junior walkon playing his first season with the team, also had a career high of 16.

Two members of the team are doubtful for Saturday at least. Junior transfer Dominique Martin, the tallest Pirate at 6-6, is on the sidelines with a foot injury, while 5-7 guard Jimmy Hinton, the shortest Pirate, is also benched with a thigh injury.

Latest information on both Winthrop and UMBC was unavailable because of holiday office hours at the two schools.

Herrin To Tar Heels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Les Herrin, the defensive coordinator at East Carolina for the past two seasons, has joined Mack Brown's staff at North Carolina as outside linebacker coach, school officials announced Thursday.

Herrin, a native of Waycross, Ga., coached linebackers at East Carolina for three seasons and was defensive coordinator for the past two years. Prior to his job at East Carolina, Herrin had been the linebacker coach at Clemson for the past four seasons, including 1981 when the Tigers captured the national championship.

Prior to his work at Clemson, Herrin was defensive coordinator at Appalachian State. He played football at Western Carolina.

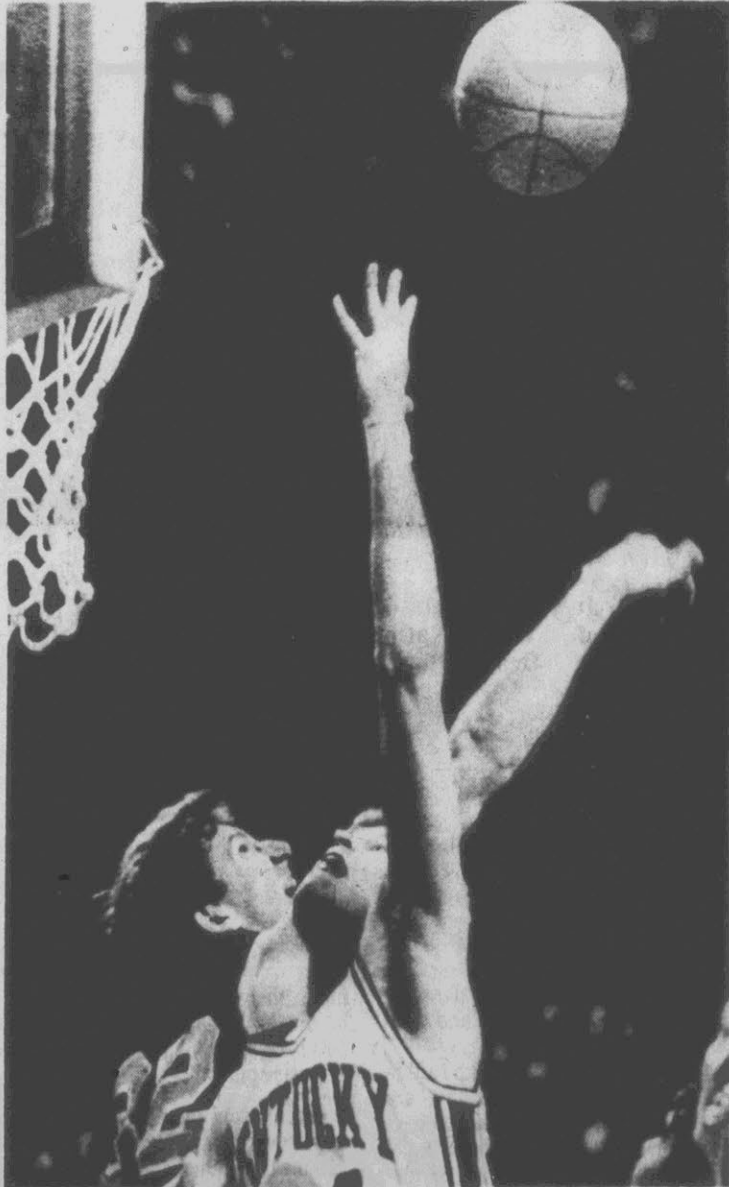

In another move, Jim Cavanaugh, the offensive coordinator at Maryland last season, has joined the North Carolina football staff as wide receivers coach, newly appointed Tar Heel head coach Mack Brown said Thursday.

One Play Keyed Texas To Win Over Pittsburgh

HOUSTON (AP) — It took Pittsburgh's rugged defense one play, its first of the game, to know it was in for a rough evening against the Texas Longhorns in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

Texas split end Tony Jones already knew what to expect after seeing the Panthers line up in a man-to-man defense.

Jones ran under a pass by Bret Stafford on a record 77-yard touchdown play Thursday night, igniting the Longhorns to a 32-27 victory in the 29th annual bowl game in the Astrodome.

"I saw that guy come up to play me bump and run and I knew I could beat him," Jones said. "I got so excited my hands started to tingle. That's what happens when I get excited."

"I knew from about 3 o'clock that the first play would be a long pass to me. But I didn't get excited until they came up to play bump and run."

Jones later caught a 60-yard touchdown pass and finished with a bowl record 242 yards on eight receptions, helping the Longhorns break a four-game losing streak in bowl games.

Stafford completed three touchdown passes and passed for a bowl record 368 yards, completing 20 of 34 passes.

"I couldn't end my career on a more happy note," Stafford said.

"We worked on our passing game since the Texas A&M game (last of the season). I don't think they really knew how quick our receivers are."

Pittsburgh entered the game as the nation's fourth ranked scoring defense, allowing just 10.4 points per game.

The quick-striking Longhorns beat the average with only 2:33 gone in the game on Jones' two touchdown catches.

Only 6:53 had expired when Jones caught a 36 yards pass from Stafford to break the bowl receiving record of 163 yards on only three catches.

The Panthers never recovered, although freshman Larry Wanke came off the bench for Darnell Dickerson to throw three touchdown passes.

"This hurts us, but I guess we were fortunate to come here in the first place," Pittsburgh tailback Craig Heyward said. "The bad thing is you always remember losing the last game of the season."

Texas took a 17-7 halftime lead on Jones' two catches and a 33-yard field goal by Wayne Clements.

The Panthers also scored quickly in the first quarter. Billy Owens returned a kickoff 45 yards, Bill Osborn threw a 45-yard halfback pass to Reggie Williams and Heyward ran four yards for the touchdown to tie the game at 7-7.

Chapman Keys Cats By Vandy

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — It took a little parental persuasion to get Kentucky's Rex Chapman pumped up against upset-minded Vanderbilt.

Chapman said his father, Kentucky Wesleyan Coach Wayne Chapman, was moving his index finger in a circular motion, "kind of like wind it up. I knew we'd have to turn it up or I'd be in trouble at home. I knew we were going to lose if I didn't."

The sophomore guard responded by scoring 13 of Kentucky's final 16 points to rally the second-ranked Wildcats past Vanderbilt 81-74 in the Southeastern Conference opener for both teams Thursday night.

Chapman's inspired play helped Coach Eddie Sutton record his 400th career victory. Sutton, who coached at Creighton and Arkansas before coming to Kentucky in 1985, is 400-140 in 19 seasons. He was presented a plaque by Herky Rupp, son of the late Adolph Rupp, whose 875 victories as Kentucky's coach is a major-college basketball record.

"I'll always remember my 400th victory," said Sutton, who is 58-15 at Kentucky, including an 8-0 mark this season. "I don't think I've ever had to work as hard for one."

Vanderbilt, 7-2, opened a 65-56 lead with 8:01 remaining in the game on Barry Booker's sixth 3-pointer.

But Kentucky scored 11 straight points, triggered by guard Ed Davender's rebound basket at 7:39. Davender and Chapman scored on consecutive steals of inbound passes to put Kentucky up 67-65 with 4:26 to go.

"We got casual against their press once and it got them back in the game," said Vanderbilt Coach C.M. Newton, a former Kentucky player. "I don't think we were tired. We had a good transition game most of the time. I kind of liked their press until that seven-point spurt."

Chapman hit three layups and a free throw as Kentucky increased its lead to 74-71 with 1:54 to go. Barry Goheen's free throw 34 seconds later made it 74-72, but Davender hit two free throws and Chapman sank four to give Kentucky an 80-72 lead with 38 seconds left.

"In the last 1:11, we did not play smart basketball," Newton said.

Davender finished with 24 points, Chapman 21, Rob Lock 18 and Winston Bennett 10.

Will Perdue, Booker and Goheen each had 18 for Vanderbilt, which hit half of its 18 3-point shots.

Kentucky started the game jittery, turning the ball over five times on its first six possessions. Vanderbilt took a 7-2 lead on Booker's 3-point goal at 16:56.

"We were probably forcing things too much at the start," Davender said. "Vandy is a great team overall. When they got their confidence, they got hot."

Bennett completed a three-point play at 13:14 as Kentucky rallied for a 10-9 lead. Vanderbilt went up 16-15 after another Booker 3-pointer and pushed the margin to 27-21 on Frank Kornet's dunk at 6:42.

Chapman's tip-in and 16-footer and Derrick Miller's two free throws tied it two minutes later, but Perdue scored five points to help Vanderbilt take a 39-33 halftime advantage.

"We put ourselves in a position to win," Newton said. "We fully expected to win. I'm disappointed we didn't."

Vanderbilt hit 17 of 28 shots, 60.7 percent, in the first half but cooled to 12 of 31, 38.7 percent, over the final 20 minutes as Kentucky's defense pushed the Commodores farther out on the court.

Orange Teams Play For Image

MIAMI (AP) — When the tropical breezes blow on sultry south Florida evenings, strange things happen.

Tonight could be one of those nights. The palm trees are swirling around the Orange Bowl and all-or-nothing is in the air.

Both top-ranked Oklahoma and No. 2 Miami are 11-0, but looking to reverse their immediate pasts while they battle for college football's national championship.

Coaches Barry Switzer and Jimmy Johnson, lone wolves cut from the same cloth — a black one — are trying to right their bad-guy images.

"You think winning cleanses those things?" Switzer snapped Thursday. "It doesn't. It's a label, and it's wrong."

His father was murdered; his mother committed suicide. A cloud has always hung over Switzer, deserved or otherwise, and he carries the tag by himself.

"I'm not real close to anyone in the business," he said.

The Sooners have never been sanctioned since Switzer took over as head coach, although the NCAA is continuing a preliminary investigation into alleged improprieties.

Switzer's teams have won three national titles and his winning percentage is the third best in the history of college football.

Still, the negative images surround Switzer, 50. Brian Bosworth wore the crazy headbands and injured quarterback Jamelle Holieway sashayed the sidelines in a full-length fur coat while Switzer drew the smirks.

If anyone understands, it is Johnson. They have known each other for 26 years and are friends, in their own way.

That means they might not talk all year, except for Oklahoma-Miami games and some off-season functions both attend.

"I'm not real close to anyone," Johnson said, admitting he did not know what his brother does for a living. "I love my brother, but I just don't really talk to anyone."

Johnson, 44, has been characterized — maybe unfairly — as a mercenary. A highly successful professional who keeps moving to wherever he gets the best offer. Janis Joplin may be the most famous person ever to come from Port Arthur, Texas, but Johnson attracts his share of interest and intrigue.

At Miami, the most winning team in the nation during the past five years, his tenure has been dotted with off-the-field incidents involving the Hurricanes. The suspension of starters George Mira Jr. and John O'Neill for the Orange Bowl because they failed NCAA drug tests added to the aura he is trying to defeat.

"Anytime something happens, it brings out the dirty laundry," Johnson said. "But that does not put an umbrella over the entire program."

Yet it is with sarcastic grins that Switzer and Johnson laugh at the probably accurate notion that neither team would be invited by President Reagan to Washington for winning the national title. The lone college football team to receive such an honor was Penn State last year.

"Is Joe Paterno the only one who gets invited?" Switzer joked, sort of.

For now, Switzer and Johnson have more immediate things to worry about as New Year's Night approaches. Kickoff will be exactly 11 minutes after the Rose Bowl ends, sometime around 8:30 p.m. EST, and partly cloudy skies with temperatures in the low 70s are forecast.

Johnson will be without three starters. The NCAA on Thursday upheld the suspensions of Mira, a middle linebacker, and O'Neill, an offensive tackle, for using diuretics, a drug banned by the NCAA.

The NCAA voted to deny an exemption "due to the lack of convincing evidence of documented medical history demonstrating the need for regular use of diuretics," spokesman Jim Marchiony said.

Diuretics, which Mira said he took to combat water retention, can mask the use of steroids, which are also forbidden by the NCAA.

Matt Patchan, Miami's other starting offensive tackle, will miss the Orange Bowl with an injury.

Bernard Clark, a sophomore, will replace Mira at a position critical to stopping Oklahoma's wishbone. The Sooners led the nation by averaging 500 yards per game.

"I know they're going to try to run at me and try to break everything down," Clark said.

Look for Oklahoma to send fullback Lydell Carr up the middle on its first play. Carr also is a question mark, making his first appearance since injuring a knee Nov. 7.

The Sooners will be minus defensive tackle Darren Kilpatrick, the team's best pass rusher.

Miami has beaten Oklahoma in each of the past two seasons, the only games the Sooners have lost in three years. In a 28-16 loss in 1986, Switzer said his team got tired trying to put pressure on Miami quarterbacks.

Miami gets 232 of its 392 yards each game in the air. Oklahoma has led the nation in pass defense for three straight years, but the Hurricanes are superior to any of the pass-minded teams the Sooners have faced.

Oklahoma threw just 99 passes all season and completed only 34. But Charles Thompson, filling in again for Holieway, may have to throw to loosen up Miami's surging defense.

"I can't remember the last time we played a game that we had to pass," Switzer laughed. "Remember, our quarterback throws like Woody Allen."

The Hurricanes, a three-point underdog, beat five bowl-bound teams this season. But they are 0-3 under Johnson in their own bowl games, including losses to Penn State in last season's Fiesta Bowl and a trouncing by Tennessee a year earlier in the Sugar Bowl — both of which cost them a chance to win the national championship.

"Jimmy hears about his postseason record wherever he goes," Switzer said. "We've all got something someone tries to point out that is negative."

And sometimes, that happens by accident.

Switzer needs no reminder that Miami keeps beating him. Yet when his 18-year-old daughter Kathy watched the Sooners loosen up at the Orange Bowl on Thursday, she was wearing a Hurricanes T-shirt.

Woody Peele

Back when Rose High School was set to play Jacksonville in the second round of the state playoffs, we pointed out in news stories at the time that it was difficult to beat a team twice in the same season.

Dick Barkley, who lives in Pamlico County and keeps up with high school football across the state on a level that is beyond comprehension, backs that up.

Each year, Barkley compiles football schedules for everyone in the state as a service to the news media. At season's end, he also sends out a package of such trivia as the number of state championships won by individual schools (Ayden-Grifton leads our area with four state football titles); teams that have lost every game in a season (there were 14 this year); years in which teams have appeared in the state playoffs (Rose has been in the playoffs six times since 1971); highest and lowest scoring teams, and on and on.

But this year, he has also put together a list of games in which two teams met twice in the season — regular and playoffs.

There were a total of 30 games played in the 1987 season that were rematches. In those, only six times did the team which won the first game win the second.

In the other 24, the winner was the first game loser. Some of those games saw some strong turnarounds too. The biggest switch was between Greensboro Page and Grimsley. Page won the opening game, 56-7, then was beaten 10-7 in the second meeting in the state playoffs. Another big turnaround came when Swain, a 27-23 winner over Murphy, lost to the eventual state 1-A champ, 47-6, the second time around.

In some other tidbits from the list, Reidsville has won or shared the most state football championships with 14. Of the 319 schools currently playing football, 94 have won or shared a state title, leaving 225 waiting on their first.

Fifteen teams turned in perfect 10-0 regular season records this year, but only two, Garner and Whiteville, powered their way through the playoffs to become 15-0. A total of 97 schools have recorded unbeaten-untied seasons at least once since Barkley began keeping records in 1972, while 104 have had seasons without a win. Only 16 schools, including area school Jamesville, have recorded "perfect" seasons in each direction.

Fourteen teams went winless this year. Garner's and Whiteville's 15 straight wins are the existing winning streaks in the state. Murphy and Whiteville have 16 game home winning streaks.

Andrews has the longest losing streak now with 21 in a row. Parkton has the longest gap without a win on the road, 23. Northern Durham has won 20 straight on the road, while Charlotte Garinger has lost 17 in a row at home.

Page hasn't been shut out in 111 games while Central Harnett hasn't had a shutout in 70 games.

It's East, Guys, E-A-S-T. Some folks just never seem to get it right.

This past week at the banquet kicking off the Music City Invitational Basketball Tournament in Nashville, Vanderbilt athletic director Roy Kramer just couldn't seem to take the hint. On a number of occasions in his welcoming speech, Kramer referred to "Eastern" Carolina University as one of the teams participating in the tournament.

He then introduced the participating coaches for a word or two, calling up Mike Dement of Cornell first.

Dement, in his talk, referred — pointedly — several times to East Carolina, noting he had graduated from East Carolina and had coached on the staff at East Carolina.

Kramer thanked Dement for his remarks, then called on Mike Steele, the coach at Eastern Carolina for his words.

Steele Only Wishes. Some folks can't even keep 'em straight. Dean Buchan, the assistant sports information director at East Carolina went to Norfolk, Va., this week to accompany the Lady Pirates as they played in the Reebok Roundball Classic.

As Buchan checked into his hotel, the desk clerk asked him if he was from East Carolina. When Buchan replied that he was, indeed, the clerk asked about one of the supposed Pirate players. "How's J.R. Reid doing for you guys this year?" he said.

And we folks here in Greenville thought WE had an identity problem. HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Crudup Hopes That Good Numbers Aim Him Toward NFL

MIAMI (AP) — Versatile Derrick Crudup says players with "good numbers" usually are the ones selected in the early rounds of the NFL draft, and his best is the number of positions he's played for the top-ranked Oklahoma.

Some pro scouts say Crudup, a senior from Delray Beach, Fla., could be taken in the middle rounds of the draft. Not bad for a fellow who isn't a starter.

"My numbers are not that impressive," Crudup said. "But I'm the type of athlete who can go pretty high in the draft despite not starting. I'm not trying to sound like I'm bragging, but I'm very versatile."

That versatility has taken Crudup from quarterback to wide receiver to defensive back. Tonight, he'll back up cornerback Lonnie Finch when the Sooners play No. 2 Miami in the Orange Bowl.

As for the "numbers," Crudup, a 6-foot-2, 208-pounder, has 17 tackles, fewest of the eight defensive backs who see the most playing time. But he is second with four interceptions, including two during Oklahoma's 44-9 victory over Texas.

Crudup lettered in four sports at Boca Raton, Fla., High School, and went to the University of Florida as a freshman.

"I was a sprint-out passer," Crudup said. "I rolled out and did a lot of scrambling."

Once at Oklahoma, Crudup said he set his sights on pro football, and quickly realized playing quarterback would not be his ticket to the NFL.

Offensive coordinator Jim Donnan lacked depth at wide receiver, so Crudup stepped in and played during the spring of 1985 behind Derrick Shepard.

Crudup stayed there until the fall, when a rash of injuries in the secondary prompted Crudup's latest move.

"They scouted the lineup and I was the one who could best make that switch," Crudup said. "(Secondary coach Bobby) Proctor saw I was a great athlete. I was real green, but he could see that I had talent on the field."

"I told them (the coaches) I want him on my side, but it was really more of a joke," Proctor said. "Then a few days later during our scrimmage, there was a goal-line play and he made a great play. From there, he's been spending time learning the defensive plays."

Proctor said the fact that Crudup had never played defense before coming to Oklahoma has hurt him:

"He just needs more playing time," Proctor said. "I told him if he had one more year here, he'd be an All-American."

The scouts are starting to notice. Crudup said he had confidence in his ability to play and was inspired by reports that the scouts had looked upon him favorably.

"I was real surprised when the scouts said I might be a high draft pick," he said. "All the while I've had confidence that I could play, and this gives me a lot of confidence as far as my football career."

Bond Will Not Challenge

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Australian millionaire Alan Bond, the financial muscle behind Australia's America's Cup victory in 1983, will not challenge for the trophy in 1988, a spokesman for his syndicate said today.

John Longley, general manager for Bond's syndicate, said work on its super-maxi, Waltzing Matilda, would cease immediately.

Bond has contested the last five America's Cup series.

The decision not to proceed with the 1988 challenge was a virtually a fait accompli in light of the recent decision by the defending San Diego Yacht Club not to accept any challenges apart from the one already received from New Zealander Michael Fay.

"It looks as though even pressure from Bondy can't force San Diego to change its mind," Fay said.

 scoring play. That scoring drive was set up when Clapp sacked Ellis for a 20-yard loss, forcing the Gamecocks to punt from their own 16.

The Tigers took a 27-6 lead when Davis pulled in Hodson's 26-yard pass to climax the opening drive of the second half.

On South Carolina's next series, LSU's Greg Jackson picked off an Ellis pass and returned it 48 yards to set up Hodson's second scoring pass, a perfectly thrown ball to Davis in the corner of the end zone.

A Davis fumble at the LSU 32 gave South Carolina a chance, but the LSU defense forced the Gamecocks to settle for a 44-yard field goal by Collin Mackie.

Brownnyke sandwiched field goals of 27 and 18 yards around a 39-yard field goal by Mackie in the second period as LSU took a 20-6 halftime lead

Trojans, Peete Get Another Shot

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Southern California Trojans, backed by tradition and versatile quarterback Rodney Peete, get another shot at tailback Lorenzo White and the Michigan State Spartans in the 74th Rose Bowl.

The eighth-ranked Spartans, their 8-2-1 regular-season record including a season-opening 27-13 victory over Southern Cal, make their fourth New Year's Day appearance in Pasadena today, but their first in 22 years.

The No. 16 Trojans, 8-3, have an impressive Rose Bowl tradition. Their 24 appearances are the most of any team, and they've lost just six times.

Although beaten by Michigan State at East Lansing, the Trojans, losers just twice in their last 26 regular and postseason games against Big Ten teams, are favored by three points.

First-year Southern Cal Coach Larry Smith said his team and the Spartans are much different than the teams that met earlier.

"I was discouraged (with that loss) because of the football we played," Smith said. "Going into the first game, our players and coaches didn't really know each other. I think as a team, we've gotten to know each other and mature."

"I think it's rare that you start and end with the same team. I think both have changed a lot since the first game. They've both matured, developed."

Dave Cadigan, Southern Cal's All-America offensive tackle, said mistakes obviously hurt the Trojans in the loss at Michigan State. But he added that he thought his team played fairly well considering it was the first game under a new coaching staff.

"I definitely think it's a great opportunity being able to play them again," he said.

The Spartans' White gained 111 yards and scored twice against the Trojans, but he said that has no bearing on what might happen in the Rose Bowl.

"I'm taking the approach that we never played against USC," said the Spartan senior, the school's career rushing leader.

"I think they're going to do a lot of things differently. I know they kind of feel at home playing in the Rose Bowl and, I guess, after they lost the first game, it's going to motivate them to work hard."

Smith is most worried about the Michigan State defense, which forced five turnovers — including two interceptions and a fumble by Peete — in the first meeting.

"It's perhaps the best defense I've seen since I've been in college football," Smith said. "It's obviously designed by some great defensive minds, and nobody's really attacked it yet. You're not sure where the defenders are going to be because everybody's moving."

"It's going to take a super game by everybody on our offense if we're to win."

Michigan over Washington is the Big Ten's only victory over the last 13 games.

Not surprising is the fact that Perles has downplayed tradition, and that Smith has emphasized his school's past glories.

"Our tradition and history are a big part of why we're here," said Smith, whose debut with the Trojans was spoiled by the nationally televised loss to the Spartans on Labor Day.

"These young people expected to be fighting for the Pac-10 championship and Rose Bowl. They wanted to add an extra page to that tradition."

Perles, in his fifth year as coach of the Spartans, is more interested in the present.

He said Pac-10 domination "is not my problem. We're not going to get involved with how many years it's been since the Big Ten has won or lost."

"We're going to be our own team, do everything we can to prepare ourselves for one game. Our attitude is, this is a new year, this is a new team. We haven't been out here for 22 years," Perles said.

That 1966 Rose Bowl game also was a rematch of a regular-season contest. Michigan State beat UCLA 13-3 in the regular season, but the Bruins upset the Spartans in the Rose Bowl.

In the other three Rose Bowl games, Iowa State beat Oregon State 14-13 in the regular season and 35-19 in the 1967 Rose Bowl. Ohio State beat UCLA 41-10 in the 1975 regular season but lost 23-10 to the Bruins at Pasadena, and UCLA topped Michigan 31-27 during the regular season and 24-14 in the 1983 Rose Bowl.

Cooper Named Buckeye Coach

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Less than 24 hours after his Arizona State team won the Freedom Bowl, John Cooper was introduced today as Ohio State University's 21st football coach.

Cooper replaces Earle Bruce, who was fired Nov. 16 by Ohio State President Edward Jennings.

Jennings introduced Cooper at a news conference at the school's indoor football practice facility and praised Athletic Director James Jones for his efforts in the search.

"I am absolutely convinced that we have scoured this nation as thoroughly as possible ... and come up with the best coach," Jennings said.

fired and those that are going to get fired, and I'm going to give it my best shot."

Cooper said he had not slept since his Arizona State Sun Devils defeated Air Force 33-28 Wednesday night. He announced moments afterward that it was his final game as Arizona State coach.

"There were three great years at Arizona State University," said Cooper, whose Sun Devil teams played in bowl games each of those seasons.

"I couldn't ask for a better situation than I've had here at Arizona State; it was a great environment," he said. "It's hard to say goodbye."

"I'm leaving because for me, professionally, the situation is a better situation."

He told his players of his resignation shortly after the game, and said he had told Arizona State officials the previous day.

"I didn't really make up my mind until yesterday," he said.

"We all pretty much got the message (that Cooper was leaving)," Arizona State quarterback Daniel Ford said. "We knew coming in; we expected it to happen. You want to win for him, he's part of the team."

"But you want to win for yourself, too."

"I'm sorry to see Coach Cooper leaving, but I wish him the very best at whatever he does," defensive end Trace Armstrong said. "He's a great coach with a lot of class."

Considered leading candidates to replace Cooper at Arizona State are Sun Devils defensive coordinator Larry Marmie and offensive coordinator Jim Colletto.

Bruce, who had been considered for the then-vacant University of Arizona coaching position last January, also might be a candidate for the Sun Devils' post.

Charles Harris, Arizona State's athletic director, said, "There are no leading candidates right now. We've started putting the selection process together."

Cooper, a three-year letterman as a safety and tailback at Iowa State, is a native of Powell, Tenn.

He began his coaching career as a freshman coach under Clay Stapleton at Iowa State in 1962. He spent 1963-65 working under Tommy Prothro at Oregon State, then later worked with Pepper Rodgers at Kansas and Fran Curci at Kentucky.

At Tulsa, Cooper had a 3-8 record his first year, but was 9-2 the next year. His best season at Tulsa was 10-1 in 1982.

He was 8-4 in his first season at Arizona State.

Cooper's wife and two children joined him at the news conference.

"Obviously, it's a great honor for me and my wife, Helen, and my family," Cooper said. "This is a great day in my life. It's been a long, hard week for me."

Of his philosophy, Cooper said, "I'm a fundamental football coach. If you come and watch practice ... you'll find that practice will be very monotonous, very boring. ... I want to win by eliminating the mistakes."

Cooper said he intended to bring some of his assistants from Arizona State and would interview some of Bruce's assistants.

"The important thing right now is to get here, ... and get on with recruiting," Cooper said. "We recognize that we probably are behind in recruiting, but we're going to catch up in a hurry."

Cooper said he had "a long list of athletes to call this afternoon."

He said that as coach at Ohio State, his goal yearly would be to win the national championship.

"You're better off aiming for the sky and hitting an eagle than you are aiming for an eagle and hitting the ground," he said.

Asked how secure he felt with a five-year contract, Cooper said, "The old adage is there's two kind of football coaches: Those that have been

The 50-year-old Cooper made $225,000 to $300,000 as the Sun Devils coach. He reportedly will make $300,000 to $350,000 annually in his five-year contract with Ohio State.

Cooper's best year at Arizona State was last season, when he guided the Sun Devils to a 10-1-1 record, their first Pacific-10 title, and their first Rose Bowl appearance — a 22-15 victory over Michigan last January.

Arizona State's 7-4-1 record was the worst of his three years at the school, where he was a cumulative 25-9-2. Bruce finished 6-4-1, the same record Arizona State had going into the Freedom Bowl.

Bruce's nine-year record with the Buckeyes was 81-26-1, better than Cooper's mark of 82-40-2 during three years at Arizona State and eight at Tulsa. Bruce had the best overall record among Big Ten Conference coaches.

Cooper said he was particularly proud that the Sun Devils won the Freedom Bowl despite the swirl of reports the past few days tying him to the Ohio State job.

"That was a sweet one because if we had lost, people would have thought it was because of my situation," he said. "I know the players were aware of it."

Elway Tabbed As NFL's MVP Choice

DENVER (AP) — When his team was in the midst of a four-game winning streak thanks to big-play quarterback John Elway, Denver Broncos Coach Dan Reeves made the following observation: "If No. 7 is not the MVP in this league, I don't know who is."

Reeves was right. Elway was named the Most Valuable Player in the NFL by The Associated Press on Thursday.

Elway, who threw for 19 touchdowns and 3,198 yards this season in leading the injury-decimated Broncos to the best record in the AFC, beat out San Francisco wide receiver Jerry Rice and 49ers quarterback Joe Montana in the voting by sports writers and broadcasters.

They were the only players to receive votes for the award. Of 84 votes cast — by three broadcasters and sports writers from each NFL city — Elway received 36 votes to 30 for Rice. Montana got 18.

"It's a great honor," Elway said. "It's very flattering. But without the team behind you, you don't have a chance to win an award like this. A quarterback tends to get more credit than he deserves sometimes."

Elway admitted such an award might have seemed impossible after his difficult rookie season.

"I guess I've come a long way in five years. As a rookie, I hit rock bottom. When you start down-and-out and then come back to this level, it makes all the hard work seem worthwhile. That makes this award seem even more special."

Reeves said his quarterback "makes everybody around him play better and play harder. It's well deserved."

Top Story Of Past Year Was NFL Players Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Negative news again dominated the positive as the 24-day NFL players' strike overwhelmingly beat Dennis Conner's America's Cup victory in balloting for The Associated Press Story of the Year for 1987.

State Drops Case Against Moorman

RALEIGH (AP) — Prosecutors have dropped rape and sexual offense charges against former North Carolina State University quarterback Percy Moorman, saying the alleged victim is unwilling to testify at a second trial.

"She's been through a great deal having gone through this case once," Wake County District Attorney Colon Willoughby said Thursday after filing the dismissal forms. "She has put her life back together and does not wish to go through this trauma again."

Moorman, now attending junior college in Oakland, Calif. while out on bond, was elated by the news.

"It's the best New Year's present I can get," Moorman told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "I can't even put it into words. This has been a big burden on me and it's all been lifted off of my shoulders. I never gave up, I never gave up on myself. It's going to take me a while for it to sink in."

Moorman was sentenced to 12 years in prison after being convicted in 1985 on the same charges that were dismissed Thursday. He was accused of raping and sodomizing an 18-year-old NCSU freshman in her dormitory room Sept. 1, 1984.

The woman testified that she awoke to find Moorman raping her, then was forced to engage in anal sex. Moorman testified she was awake all the time and had consented to the sexual acts. That conviction was overturned by the state Supreme Court last July 28, when it ruled that Moorman's trial counsel, New York civil rights activist Jerry Paul, had provided a deficient performance during the trial, possibly affecting the outcome.

Moorman already had served 14 months in Harnett Youth Center at Lillington when he was released on a $5,000 bond. He has been attending Laney (Junior) College in Oakland since September, where he has been playing football.

At the time of his release on bond, Moorman had to serve about five remaining months under the Committed Youthful Offender guidelines of his original sentence, Assistant District Attorney Thomas Murphy said.

Murphy said the woman, who now lives in another state, decided recently that she did not want to testify at the second trial, which was to start Monday.

"We've been going back and forth about it for the last month and it's been in the last couple of weeks where she's kind of decided not to go through the ordeal of going through it again," Murphy said.

The pressure and media scrutiny of the 1985 trial was emotionally draining on the woman, now 22, and her family, Murphy said. He said the woman, who is white, also was exposed to racially-tinged threats and abuse following the first trial. Moorman is black.

"And there was another reason, too," Murphy said. "Those people who believe that Percy Moorman is innocent will not change their minds no matter what the outcome of a second trial. And the people who are her friends and colleagues who believe he is guilty are not going to be swayed by a second trial, no matter what the outcome."

Moorman said he will try to transfer to a four-year school and continue his football career. He said, however, that he has serious doubts about returning to NCSU.

"A couple of my friends there have called and said they would like me to come back," he said. "But how would you like to go back into that situation. I don't need the heckling and all that stuff again."

"I just want to go back to get my degree and play college football and go on and possibly play in the pros," Moorman said. "It can be on the East Coast or the West Coast or whatever. I just want to play ball."

Orange Bowl Becoming The Annual Steroid Bowl

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Happy New Year, and just in case you were concerned about culture shock in 1988, the Orange Bowl provides a fresh supply of stability with its annual drug case sideshow.

It's nice to know there are some things you can depend on in this life. A year ago, Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth was sent to the sidelines when steroids showed up in his drug sample before this bowl game. This time, Miami teammates George Mira, Jr. and John O'Neill fouled the sample bottle with traces of Lasix, a diuretic that helped Alysheba win the Kentucky Derby but has yet to win approval from the NCAA for football players.

Explanations notwithstanding, and Mira and O'Neill had good ones, the controversy was not something Miami needed, anymore than Oklahoma needed the Bosworth affair last year.

This is the third straight year the national championship bowl game has included Miami or Oklahoma. It is the first time, however, it has featured both of them. And that means there are no white hats in this game. Nobody knows who will win. Image, however, surely will lose.

Oklahoma's regular quarterback is out with a knee injury. Miami will have subs filling in on both the offensive and defensive units. Under ordinary circumstances, that might create a little sympathy for these teams. But sympathy is the last thing the Sooners or Hurricanes ever expect.

"When you have a negative image, it takes a long time to change that image," Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson said.

Now why on earth would his team have a negative image? Just because the players spent last season acting like an episode from "Miami Vice?" Just because the team arrived for last year's Fiesta Bowl date for the national championship wearing battle fatigues and got into some pre-game ugliness with Penn State players and fans? Just because a blind-side tackle caused a near riot in the South Carolina game?

Carolina's defense is called "Black Death," and the Hurricanes were still the bad guys in that game. What does that tell you about Miami's image?

And why would folks think so poorly of Oklahoma? Just because of Bosworth and his occasionally antisocial behavior on the field? Hey, the guy's a linebacker. Where is it written that spitting is not allowed?

"A media egomaniac," was the way Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer described Bosworth. "He affected the public perception of our team. I'm disappointed that one guy gave us that image."

In truth, though — and Switzer admitted this — Oklahoma's image problems pre-date Bosworth. "Maybe back as far as the (Coach) Bud Wilkinson days," he said.

"These are two outstanding programs that have won a lot of games," Johnson said. "Any time you're on top, you're going to take some shots. When there's so much visibility, you live under a microscope. We didn't have any controversy in 1984 or 1985. This year was very positive all year until one incident."

A cruel person might suggest that incident involved a positive as well — in the testing lab.

"Unfortunately, anytime something happens, it brings out the dirty laundry."

Only if the laundry is there already. There was, for example, Miami's recent habit of bad-mouthing its opponents. Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown said Hurricane trash talk was the order of the day against the Irish and that he'd never been subjected to that much of it before.

Oklahoma's Switzer was unimpressed with that complaint, though.

"Things are said," he said, "but I don't think it's pre-meditated dialogue. Moments in the game create the dialogue."

In the Orange Bowl, though, the pre-game dialogue was mostly about drugs, and that's becoming a distressingly familiar theme at this game.

Mora Top Coach

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — For the second time in four seasons, Jim Mora is Coach of the Year in a professional football league, but he still can't explain how he does it.

In only his second season as an NFL head coach, Mora, 52, guided the New Orleans Saints to their first winning season, a 12-3 record second only to San Francisco's 13-2, and a first berth in the playoffs.

He was the overwhelming choice for Coach of the Year in voting conducted by In balloting announced Thursday by The Associated Press. Mora received 76 of 84 votes. Three sports reporters in each of the NFL cities made up the selection panel. San Francisco's Bill Walsh finished second with four votes.

Mora was also Coach of the Year in the USFL in 1984, the year in which he guided the Philadelphia Stars to the first of two league championships. It was also his second year as a head coach in that league. The Stars finished second in his first season.

"We work hard, but everybody works hard. We try to be organized, but everybody tries to be organized. I don't know what the difference is," Mora said.

"It's a reflection of the organization. No one person does something like that oneself," he said. "Individual awards are a reflection of the whole organization, starting with the players and the coaching staff."

"Because I need a lot of help, I work hard at getting good people around me."

General Manager Jim Finks hired Mora as one of his first moves after being hired to run the team for owner Tom Benson. Finks said he couldn't pinpoint what it is about Mora that makes the difference.

Ford Misses Hope Event

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Unanticipated surgery to repair bleeding sutures will cause former first lady Betty Ford to miss the opening of the new Bob Hope Cultural Center that she was to have attended Saturday.

"She is back in the cardiac care unit and is doing well," Ford spokesman Bob Barrett said Thursday of the wife of former President Gerald Ford.

Mrs. Ford entered Eisenhower Medical Center Tuesday. On Wednesday doctors repaired the stitches that hadn't healed properly from her quadruple bypass surgery last month.

Ford visited his 69-year-old wife in the hospital for about 40 minutes Thursday, Barrett said.

The spokesman said the Fords canceled plans to attend the cultural center opening along with the Reagans, who are vacationing in California.

Alexis To Be Shot In 'Dynasty' Show

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "Dynasty" vixen played by Joan Collins will soon fall victim to a sniper's bullet that abruptly ends her campaign for governor.

Alexis Morrell Carrington Colby Dexter Rowan, who's survived more perils than Pauline, is struck by a bullet during a televised debate among the candidates for governor of Colorado in the episode to be broadcast Jan. 20.

Her fate will be revealed and the assailant unmasked the following week as part of the ABC prime-time soap opera's new policy of "mini-cliffhangers."

In the story, she has become an independent candidate running against her former husband, Blake Carrington (John Forsythe). The candidates are at a television studio for the debate when a rifleman is seen in the rafters.

Carrington moves toward the podium to speak, but Alexis leaves her chair for a private word with him. She is going to tell him she is withdrawing from the race. At that moment the assailant fires and Alexis falls into Carrington's arms.

There has been talk that this would be the last year for "Dynasty," and that it had virtually exhausted its story possibilities.

Ann Jillian Rescues A Robin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Ann Jillian, whose story of a battle with cancer will be shown on television next week, needed to summon up some more real-life bravery to come to the rescue of a robin.

Walking outside of her home last week, she saw a hawk attacking the small bird. She managed to drive the hawk away. Meanwhile, the stunned robin flew onto the roof of Miss Jillian's backyard dance studio, the Daily News of Los Angeles reported.

The platinum-haired actress, who once garnered an Emmy nomination for her portrayal of Mae West, climbed up on the roof to rescue the bird before she recalled that her fear of heights makes her dizzy. Her husband, Andy Murcia, came to her rescue.

She has said Murcia, her husband and manager, is someone she can depend on, especially during her fight with breast cancer and recovery from a mastectomy performed in 1985. That battle is the subject of Monday night's NBC television movie, "The Ann Jillian Story."

MUSIC MAN
LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Rob Foster doubles in brass, literally.

Foster plays on the Kansas football team and also blows a trumpet in the school's marching band. He is a composer and one of his musical numbers often is played by the band in halftime presentations.

Foster, a music major, is the son of Kansas band director Bob Foster. He serves as lead trumpet in the band that plays at basketball games and toured the world as a member of the McDonald's All-American band.

Musicians Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Musicians Art Blakey, Lionel Hampton and Billy Taylor have been honored for their contributions to "jazz in the African-American tradition," the National Endowment for the Arts has announced.

Each artist was awarded a $20,000 Jazz Masters Fellowship Thursday. The money goes to support a project of the recipient's choice, said endowment chairman Frank Hodsoll.

Blakey, a jazz drummer credited with helping to invent the bebop style of drumming, has been a professional jazz musician for nearly 50 years.

Hampton, described by the endowment as "a dominant figure in the world of jazz," formed his first big band in 1940.

Reagan Signs Pay Increase Measures

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan interrupted his New Year's vacation to sign an executive order granting a 2 percent pay increase to federal employees and a 4.2 percent cost-of-living increase for federal retirees.

Reagan signed the order and four other bills Thursday as he relaxed at the 205-acre retreat of wealthy publisher Walter Annenberg, the White House announced.

The president and his wife, Nancy, have traditionally rung in the New Year with their long-time friends at the festive, black-tie gathering in the desert hideaway. Reporters were not permitted to attend the party.

The Reagans are to remain secluded on New Year's Day, when the president and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev are to exchange videotaped messages to the Soviet and American people.

White House deputy press secretary Lesley Arshst said the pay raise signed by Reagan excludes members of Congress, federal judges and executive officials and military officers making more than $72,500.

The executive order affects nearly 2.2 million military personnel, as well as 2.1 million civilian workers in all government agencies. The order also provides for a 4.2 percent cost-of-living increase for 3.6 million military and civilian retirees.

The overall cost of the bill amounts to $2.3 billion, Ms. Arshst said.

The basic pay increases for the military go into effect Friday, while the pay raises for all others are effective on the first day of the first applicable pay period on or after Friday, the executive order said.

Reagan also signed legislation increasing benefit payments to more than 2.2 million veterans with service-connected disabilities.

The bill, which also applies to about 310,000 surviving spouses and children of veterans whose deaths were service-connected, provides a cost-of-living increase of 4.2 percent in monthly benefit checks.

The increase is the same as Social Security beneficiaries and recipients of veterans' pensions will receive.

The increase is payable beginning in January, retroactive to Dec. 1, but the White House said it will not show up in checks until March when computer systems are changed. The March payment will include a retroactive lump sum adjustment.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the closing days of the 1987 session of the 100th Congress.

HOUSE
REPRIMANDING REP. MURPHY The House voted, 324 for and 68 against, to reprimand Rep. Austin Murphy, D-Pa., on the basis of its ethics committee's findings that he kept a no-show employee on the government payroll, diverted equipment and other public resources to the private use of his former law firm and permitted another member to "ghost vote" for him on the House floor.

A reprimand is the mildest penalty the House can level on one of its errant members. Murphy is the first House member disciplined by the ethics panel since 1984.

Members voting yes wanted to reprimand Rep. Austin Murphy, D-Pa.

North Carolina voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Howard Coble, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10, James Clarke, D-11.

Members voting no: None.

Members Not voting: Stephen Neal, D-5.

DEFICIT BILL By a vote of 237 for and 181 against, the House approved "reconciliation bill," one of two pillars of the anti-deficit agreement that the White House and Congress reached in the Wake of the Oct. 19 stock market crash.

The Senate also passed the bill (HR 3545) in the closing hours of the 1987 Congressional year, and President Reagan signed it.

Combined, the two bills will scale back the projected deficit for the current fiscal year, 1988, by about $33 billion, from $180 billion to about $147 billion.

The reconciliation bill is designed to achieve about $17.6 billion of the 1988 reduction, mainly through tax hikes on corporations and the wealthy and cuts in farm subsidies and Medicare outlays.

Members voting yes supported the reconciliation bill.

North Carolina voting yes: Valentine, Lancaster, David Price, Neal, Hefner, Clarke.

Member voting no: Coble, McMillan, Ballenger

Members not voting: Walter Jones, Rose.

CONTINUING RESOLUTION By a vote of 209 for and against, the House approved the $600 billion "continuing resolution" that wraps all 13 appropriations bills into a massive spending measure for fiscal 1988.

The bill was necessary because Congress could not follow the traditionally normal procedure of passing the bills individually.

In addition to funding most of the federal government this fiscal year, the measure (H.J. Res 395) achieves nearly half of the $33 billion in 1988 deficit reductions called for in the White House-Capitol Hill budget summit (see preceding vote.)

The Senate (below) also approved the measure and President Reagan signed it into law.

Among hotly-disputed provisions, the bill provides $8.1 million for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, enables up to 20 states to permit 65 mph driving on limited-access highways in addition to interstates, designates Yucca Mountain in Nevada as the primary site for underground storage of the nation's nuclear wastes and enables President Reagan to bar Japanese companies from federally-funded construction projects under certain conditions.

Members voting yes supported the continuing resolution.

 A new year has dawned, so it's time for us to wish that 1988 will be a year full of good bridge for all our readers. No matter how bad things might have seemed in 1987, you can take solace that nothing you did could be as bad as what befell a pair at the World Team Championship last October.

 It has become fashionable to make a cue-bid in the enemy suit on the slightest pretext. We like North's takeout double; his hand was too strong for any other action. However, we have no sympathy with South's cue-bid of two diamonds. Despite the fact he was a passed hand and had values close to an opening bid, he could easily have expressed his game ambitions with a natural jump to two hearts. The auction really went off the rails when North cue-bid four diamonds. Why should he want his partner to name a suit when he is really not interested in any contract other than spades? Surely a jump to four spades would have described his hand quite adequately.

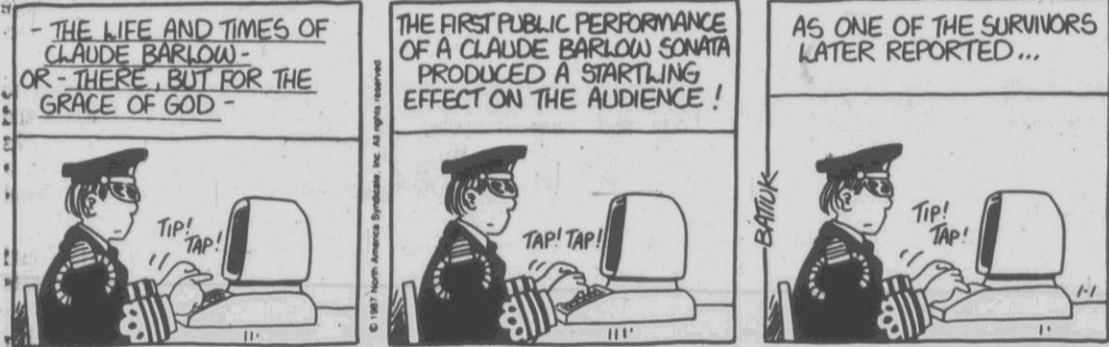

Not surprisingly, South envisaged big things, and jumped to the heart slam. Too late North decided to show his spades. South "knew" that if partner did not have hearts, he had to have a black two-suiter, so he cheerfully trotted out his second suit at the seven-level! West was on firm ground with his double, and two trump tricks came his side's way.

At the other table in the match the contract was a mere four spades, a contract complicated by the evil break. Declarer won the diamond lead, cashed three spades and the ace of hearts, then decided that the finesse of the heart ten was his best shot for the contract. He ended up down four, so the swing on the board was a scant 3 International Match Points!
