Ice Leaves Thousands Without Power

By The Associated Press
Thousands of North Carolinians, from the Charlotte area to the Research Triangle, were without electrical power after a long holiday weekend today after freezing rain snapped tree limbs and power lines across much of the state.
An estimated 85,000 people were plunged into darkness Sunday, including some holiday travelers at Raleigh-Durham Airport.
"Temperatures will be warmer (today), but it's also going to be windy," said Ruth Aiken of the National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham

Airport. "That means ice will be flying off trees in the morning. It's going to be a problem, especially on bridges and overpasses."
Additional power outages were a possibility, Ms. Aiken said.
"A lot of the power lines are already heavily loaded with ice," she said. "I saw a number of crewmen out tonight as I came to work."
In western North Carolina, the weather service office in Asheville reported icy spots on roads, bridges and overpasses across the mountains and foothills.
Ice-covered trees were the chief threat in Charlotte, said Scott Burns of the city's street maintenance division.

"We're still watching ice on bridges, but we don't really have any problems except for fallen trees. That's one of the biggest things we have right now," Burns said. "The roads are clear ... and the temperature has been rising since I believe 5 a.m."
The freezing rain in the morning was expected to diminish to scattered freezing drizzle, the weather service said. There was a small chance of rain over eastern sections of the state, along with a chance of some freezing drizzle in the piedmont and foothills.

School openings were delayed for two hours in many school systems, including Catawba, Union, Guilford, Chatham, Davie and Moore counties, and the city school systems in Monroe and High Point. Classes were called off for students in Rockingham County and in Eden and Reidsville.
Roger Hannah of Carolina Power & Light Co. said 10,000 Wake County customers were without power at daybreak today, with scattered outages in Henderson, Warrenton, Southern Pines, Asheboro and Sanford.

The Raleigh-based utility serves Asheville and from the Research Triangle Park east, but a system-wide report on outages was unavailable.
"Once the temperature warms up and the ice starts melting, the problems should lessen substantially," Hannah said. "It's going to be slow going between now and then."
In Durham, 45,000 customers of Duke Power Co. — more than half its Durham customers — were without service Sunday, officials said. The company was forced to draft employees from as far away as Greensboro, Hickory and other Western North Carolina cities to work on repair crews and most customers were expected to have power restored Monday.

"It's been total chaos," said Percy Evans, a firefighter at Station 1 in Raleigh. He estimated the station had gone out on more than 25 calls as felled trees blocked streets and downed power lines sparked fires.

Pitt Area Gets Chilly Rainfall

An unseasonably warm New Year's Day was followed Saturday and Sunday by much colder weather marked by slow, chilly rainfall in Pitt, Martin and Greene counties.
No problems were reported due to the moist beginning of the first 1988 weekend.
Temperature readings at Greenville's Water Plant showed a high of 71 degrees and a low of 47 for Friday; a high of 47 and a low of 35 on Saturday, and on Sunday an almost unvarying reading of 36 high and 34 low.
Rainfall was heaviest for the 8 p.m. Sunday to 8 a.m. Monday 12-hour period, with 1.8 inches registered. Earlier readings were .34 of an inch on Saturday and .06 of an inch for similar 12-hour periods.
The water level in the Tar River in takes several days for the river level to rise in Greenville after heavy rains in the Piedmont area of the state.

Public Works Department director Mayo Allen said there were no flooding problems or difficulties in collecting refuse because of the rainy weekend. "The way the rain came down, a generally light rainfall over several hours is not the type of rain that creates problems," Allen said. "Another thing that has helped in avoiding flooding problems is that every ditch, every catch basin in the city is thoroughly cleared on a periodic schedule, and a check made frequently to see that they remain clear."
Officials in Bethel, Robersonville and Williamston all said there were no problems due to the rainy discomfort of cool, rainy weather on winter days.

Rich Square Woman Receives New Heart

A Rich Square resident has become the first woman to undergo a heart transplant at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The heart, implanted when her life appeared endangered, was a New Year's gift.
The 57-year-old woman, whose name has not been released, received a donor heart during six-hour surgery which began between 10 p.m. and 11 p.m. Friday. Dr. Mark Williams of the East Carolina School of Medicine was the transplant surgeon. He was assisted by Drs. Randolph Chitwood and Erle Austin.
The donor heart was obtained from Birmingham, Ala. Chitwood, a scrub nurse and Carolina Organ Procurement Agency officials traveled there by private jet to remove and transport the heart.
The patient had suffered from ischemic cardiomyopathy and had been on a waiting list for a donor heart since Nov. 30. She had been admitted to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital critical care unit last Tuesday.
According to nurse Art Schneider, transplant coordinator, the patient is considered in critical but stable condition.
This is the third transplant done at Pitt Memorial. The first was performed on a Washington, N.C., man on Feb. 17, 1987; the second, on a Jamesville man on July 6 of last year.

Martin, Jordan Formally Launch Their Campaigns

By The Associated Press
Gov. Jim Martin, the second Republican governor of North Carolina this century, and Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan were launching formal campaigns for party gubernatorial nominations today.
Martin, 51, who has made no secret of his intention to run again, planned officially to enter the race with a speech outside the state Capitol, then lead a parade of supporters on a four-block walk to the State Board of Elections to pay his $1,050 filing fee.
Jordan planned to announce his candidacy outside the family lumber business in Mount Gilead that has grown from a fledgling enterprise in the late 1950s to one of the biggest producers of pine products in North Carolina.
Martin's speech was delivered underneath ice-laden trees, the result of freezing rain and sleet which fell on much of North Carolina on Sunday.

"I want to serve a second term so that I can continue a strong and fair administration where Democrats and Republicans alike can serve the people with pride and without being forced to change their registration or support candidates they don't like," Martin said in remarks prepared for his announcement. "I want to serve a second term so that I can reach the strategic goals that I have set forth for our state."
The selection of the Mount Gilead location, Jordan aides say, was symbolic of the can-do image they hope he will cultivate as he tries to convince North Carolinians to deny their governor a second term.
"What we have to do is get people to understand that North Carolina will be better off with Bob Jordan as the governor ... than they would be with Jim Martin," Jordan said recently. "I will make the machinery of government work. I have the experience. I understand the process."

Jordan enjoys the rare luxury of being able to focus immediately on the general election. With the month-long period to file for the 1988 campaign opening today, no one has announced plans to challenge him for the Democratic nomination.
O. Max Gardner, elected in 1928, is the only Democrat to capture the party's gubernatorial nomination without opposition this century.
Martin also apparently will win the GOP nomination without opposition. The only Republican who had spoken publicly of challenging him, Dare County businessman Dan Lawrence, announced last week he had decided against it.
The filing period for the 1988 campaign ends Feb. 1.
With his announcement, Jordan kicked off a five-day campaign swing through Charlotte, Asheville, Wilmington, Greenville and Raleigh, where he will pay his $1,050 filing fee after a noon rally Friday.
Most observers regard Jordan as the underdog, citing Martin's popularity — a recent university of North Carolina poll showed his approval rating at nearly 66 percent — and the advantages of incumbency.
But Jordan apparently will not be plagued by the intraparty squabbling that beset Rufus Edmisten, the 1984 Democratic nominee who lost to Martin after a bitter Democratic primary.
"I sense within the party ... a strong willingness to reach a middle-of-the-road consensus, get behind someone who can win," Jordan said.
He plans to model his campaign after Sen. Terry Sanford's of 1986, emphasizing party unity and utilizing the Democrats' organizational strength in a state where they outnumber Republicans 2½ to 1.

Jones Files For Fourth House Term

Walter B. Jones Jr. of Farmville, incumbent representative for North Carolina House District 9, today filed notice of candidacy for election to a fourth term.
In an announcement released as he filed at the Pitt County Board of Elections office, Jones said, "For the past five years, it has been my privilege to represent the citizens of Pitt and Greene counties in the North Carolina House of Representatives. I believe that the people of the Ninth District deserve the very best representation possible. I have tried to make the services of my office available to the citizens of Pitt and Greene counties."
He added, "I believe that my voting record in Raleigh indicates my interest in and concern for the people of my district. I hope that my willingness to sponsor and support legislation that is beneficial to our

U.S. Denies Gulf Role Is Expanding

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci begins a trip to the Persian Gulf today, but the Pentagon denied assertions by diplomatic sources that his visit signals an expanded U.S. military role in the region.
Knowledgeable diplomatic sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said American Navy ships apparently have been escorting merchant vessels not flying the U.S. flag. They said such actions were "a forerunner" of what Carlucci would make official.
Carlucci was to arrive today in Kuwait, beginning an eight-day trip that will include Bahrain, Saudi Arabia and Oman. It is his first visit to the area since taking over from Caspar Weinberger in November.
The Defense secretary is to inspect the 30-ship U.S. naval force assembled in and near the gulf to protect 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers from attacks by Iran, which has been at war with Iraq since September 1980.
In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said Sunday there was "no basis" to the report of an expanded U.S. role in the gulf.

A Western diplomat in the region said any change in the force could be decided only after Carlucci returned to Washington Jan. 11 and reported to President Reagan.
"We think Carlucci is coming with an open mind, and that the decision to increase or decrease the force will be made after his return to Washington," said the diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity.
Newspapers around the gulf criticized any American buildup.
"Carlucci will be asked to report to his administration that any new American stand on the gulf that does not emanate from working to end the war will have no credibility," the Dubai newspaper Al-Bayan said in an editorial.
The Al-Khaleej newspaper of Sharjah in the United Arab Emirates said Carlucci "must hear on every spot that his country's military presence in the gulf has ... complicated the prospects for ending the war and enforcing the U.N. cease-fire call."
It noted that the U.S. naval buildup had not halted Iranian attacks.
The United States admits only to protecting U.S.-flagged ships.

In The Area

Early Dismissal

Ayden Elementary School dismissed students at 10:45 a.m. today because of a boiler problem that left the school building without heat, according to Barry Gaskins, public information officer for Pitt County schools.

The school is expected to operate on a normal schedule Tuesday, Gaskins said.

Morning Thefts

Police said three thefts were reported to the Greenville department early today.

Officer S.D. Hilliard said a radio-tape player and two speakers were taken from a vehicle parked at Georgetown Apartments in an incident reported at 12:03 a.m., while Officer C.G. Alphin said a radar detector, a tow-chain and a gym bag were taken from a car parked at 1801 E. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 12:25 a.m.

According to Officer K.D. Lingerfelt, seven cartons of cigarettes were taken from the Fuel Dock at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Fifth Street in a break-in reported at 3:15 a.m.

Mills Chapel

Bishop Ralph Love, the choir and ushers of Holy Trinity United Holy Church will lead a quarterly meeting service at Mills Chapel Free Will Baptist Church today at 7:30 p.m. Members of Holy Trinity will meet at the church at 7 p.m. to ride the bus.

The church will hold a bible study Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. on "How to Improve Your Prayer Life."

Choir number one will practice at Holy Trinity Thursday at 7 p.m.

Top Employee

Warren Bowman has been named "Employee of the Year" by the Regional Rehabilitation Center at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Bowman has been a licensed practical nurse at the center since 1985. A native of Mount Vernon, N.Y., he attended Richmond Academy and Paine Community College in Augusta, Ga., and received certification as a licensed practical nurse from Pennsauken Community College in Pennsauken, N.J. Before coming to the rehabilitation center, he worked at the Walter B. Jones Alcohol Rehabilitation Center in Pitt County. He is a volunteer with the Pitt County Boys Club and a member of the Sadie Sautler Parent-Teachers Association.

Pittsburgh Rushes Cleanup Of Fuel

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Emergency crews worked today to contain a 20-mile-long oil slick that has contaminated two of the city's three rivers, threatened the drinking water for 750,000 people and halted shipping along the Monongahela.

About 7,000 of the approximately 1 million gallons of diesel fuel floating in the Monongahela River was recovered by late Sunday, officials said.

More equipment was heading to the area today to help, but officials said the cleanup could take weeks.

The fuel stretched at least 20 miles, from the Monongahela at West Elizabeth into the Ohio River near downtown Pittsburgh. The rivers were moving early today at only 1 to 2 mph, the National Weather Service said.

The cleanup was suspended Sunday evening and resumed this morning.

The spill occurred Saturday night when a new storage tank collapsed at Ashland Oil Co.'s Floreffe Terminal near West Elizabeth, officials said.

One million of the estimated 3.5 million gallons in the tank flowed into the river; the rest was contained near the tank, Coast Guard Lt. John Farthing said. About 820,000 gallons have been recovered from the tank area.

Traffic on the heavily used Monongahela was halted, and adjacent rail lines and highways were temporarily closed.

No communities downstream from the spill lost water service Sunday, officials said. The Western Pennsylvania Water Co. closed one of two Monongahela intakes to prevent the fuel from contaminating water supplies serving about 750,000 customers in Allegheny and Washington counties.

"The water supply is low. ... We are at a dangerously low level, but we were able to make it through today," utility spokesman Greg McKevey said late Sunday. "Now, tomorrow morning may be another question."

The public apparently has heeded calls for water conservation, Western Pennsylvania Water Co. consultant Dennis Casey said today. No water shortages or outages have been reported, but the company expects some areas to be without water today, he said. Water trucks will be available to dispense potable water.

Area hospitals were notified of the conservation plan and transferred their most serious patients to facilities unaffected by the crisis, Casey said.

Pittsburgh's water is from the Allegheny River and was unaffected. The Allegheny and Monongahela rivers converge near downtown Pittsburgh to form the Ohio River.

Gov. Robert P. Casey placed the Pennsylvania National Guard on alert to deliver emergency water supplies.

Authorities don't know what caused the collapse. A damage estimate has not yet been set.

The cleanup could take weeks, said Roger Schrum, an Ashland spokesman.

On Sunday, Allegheny County's hazardous materials team, private contractors, the Coast Guard and others helped stretch booms across the Monongahela to dam the oil as it floated on the water. Specialized pumper trucks skimmed the oil from the surface, but downstream of the booms, greasy ribbons of oil meandered on a 5 mph current into the Ohio.

The company planned to bring in several skimmer barges to recover oil in areas inaccessible to workers Sunday. Those areas made up most of the 20-mile stretch, Schrum said.

Speed was important because the fuel is slowly dissolving into the water, making it more difficult to recover, he said.

"It may become almost impossible to recover at all," Farthing said.

Authorities had not determined how much fuel has flowed into the Ohio River or how far it traveled, Farthing said.

Casey said he's invited the governors of Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois and member of Pennsylvania's congressional delegation to join him in asking the federal Environmental Protection Agency for aid.

A spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers said the cold weather should minimize the impact on wildlife.

Students Encouraged To Cry Over Deaths Of Classmates

DOVER, Ark. (AP) — Teachers met with professional counselors to help students cope with a holiday killing rampage that left 16 people dead, including four of the youngsters' classmates.

Superintendent Danny Taylor of the 1,150-student Dover School District said tears would be encouraged today from students returning to school after a holiday vacation.

The four students killed were children of R. Gene Simmons, 47, the man police say is their only suspect in the 16 deaths from Dec. 23-28. They were Loretta, 17; Eddie, 14; Marianne, 11; and Rebecca, 8.

The suspect's attorney, John C.

Harris, said a plea of innocent by reason of insanity was possible.

Professional counselors were to be available at the Dover school, which has kindergarten through 12th grades on the same campus, while next door at First Methodist Church, ministers from several churches established a religious counseling center for students.

Ministers said Sunday's sermons and Sunday School lessons dealt with the tragedy. All said open expression of feelings was crucial to recovery.

"We're not going to discourage any feeling," Taylor said by telephone Sunday night. "We want it out in the open, we want to get the frustration behind us, we want to get on with school and get on with our lives as quickly as possible."

Representatives from two counseling services in nearby Russellville talked with teachers Sunday "on how to deal with our own emotions and with students," Taylor said.

"We look toward having a pretty normal school day," Taylor said. For that reason, he said, there would be no assembly, no statement made by the school, and no reporters or photographers allowed on campus.

He said, however, that teachers would begin the day by bringing up the slayings.

The Rev. Royce Savage, pastor of First Methodist Church, said there have been "all types of emotion here, but we must bury the dead and go on. There is nothing you can do to bring them back. As far as Mr. Simmons is concerned, he's going to get his, one way or the other."

Savage and other preachers said they had talked about how to deal the events during Sunday's sermons.

"Most of us brought it in, to let the people know about what happened and about trying to get on with our lives and life of the community," Savage said.

"The older ones, they've worked it out. The younger ones, who haven't experienced death very much, they're the ones still asking why, still mad at him."

The Simmons family did not have a church. "They didn't go anywhere, he wouldn't let them go anywhere," Savage said.

Robber Hits Theft Victim With Board

Investigators said eight thefts, including two armed robberies Sunday, were reported to police over the weekend.

Officer C.G. Alphin said $230 in cash was taken from a woman at Bailey's Store at the intersection of Line Avenue and Farmville Boulevard after she was hit in the head with a board in one of the robbery incidents reported at 5:54 a.m., while Officer R.L. Smith said $407 in cash and a .22 caliber pistol was taken from a man at 102D Lakeview Terrace in the second robbery incident, which was reported at 8:01 p.m.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said a radio-tape player was taken from 307 Watauga Ave. in a break-in reported at 8:45 a.m. Sunday, while Sgt. K.R. Evans said three lamps and a bedspread were taken from a second floor guest room at the Camelot Inn on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 12:55 p.m.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said three packages of meat were taken from Harris supermarket on South Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 7:41 p.m. Sunday, while Officer J.G. Bridges said $56 worth of sheets and towels were taken from a second floor guest room at the Comfort Inn on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 12:45 p.m. Saturday.

Officer R.G. Mendenhall said a television set and a stereo system were taken from 42 Langston Park Apartments in a break-in reported at 4:02 p.m. Saturday, while Officer M.A. Jordan said four cartons of cigarettes were taken from the Blount's Petroleum station on North Greene Street in an incident reported at 10:09 p.m.

Russian Roulette

PLATTE CITY, Mo. (AP) — A man was charged with voluntary manslaughter in the death of a companion he had challenged to Russian roulette, authorities said.

Gary L. Hibbs, 45, was charged Saturday, a day after 46-year-old Gene W. Cadman died from a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, said Prosecutor Michael Reardon.

The charge carries a possible sentence of five to 15 years in prison.

The shooting occurred at Hibbs' house, authorities said.

Authorities said Hibbs unloaded the .357-caliber Magnum, placed a single bullet in its chamber and handed it to Cadman.

Collections On Schedule

After working a special holiday schedule last week, Greenville's sanitation crews resumed normal operating service today, according to Mayo Allen, director of public works.

The schedule during the week between Christmas and New Year's was modified so that collection service normally handled in five days was handled in three.

Allen said that, despite an increase in the amount of garbage and the adverse weather conditions, there were no complaints received by his department involving trash collection.

"It worked beautiful last week. We're not running behind at all," he said.

Allen said while he expects the amount of garbage to be high again this week, he also expects department of sanitation workers to be picking up a lot of Christmas trees.

Allen said trees will be collected as part of the normally scheduled, curbside trash pickup.

Farm Scene

By PHILLIP ROWAN

Rodent control failures often occur when one or more elements of a good baiting program is ignored. Using too little bait for the job, poor placement and failure to keep baiting for a sufficient length of time are the most common errors. Learning how to use multiple and single dose rodenticides correctly will help you avoid these and other costly mistakes.

Rodenticides must be put where they will do the most good in order to be effective. This means that a rodenticide should be placed between the rodent's nesting site and its food source whenever possible. Active burrows or nesting sites, runways and feeding sites must first be located and marked before control is attempted. The time used to find nesting sites and the routes that rodents take to their food supply will help eliminate a lot of wasted bait and effort later on.

The baiting method used will depend on the type of rodenticide you have purchased. Multiple dose rodenticides such as those containing warfarin, fumarin, diphacinone or chlorophacinone are most effective when a "saturation baiting" approach is used. Whenever this method is used, bait must be kept available to rodents for a period of 10 to 14 days without interruption. Any break in the cycle means that baiting must again start in order to be effective. Someone must check each of the burrows or other locations daily and replenish the supply of bait as needed for the entire baiting cycle. Baiting may be discontinued once it is clear that no bait has been eaten during a 24 hour period.

Rodenticides containing cholecalciferol, brodifacoum, bromadiolone or bromethalin are single dose rodenticides that make "pulse baiting" possible. This method of baiting is particularly effective where a large number of burrows are present. In order to determine which burrows are active, all entrances should be closed with soil or crumpled newspaper. Those burrows that rodents have reopened at the end of 24 hours should be marked for treatment. Active burrows are then baited in short "pulses" of one or two days followed by a break of seven days during which rodents that have eaten bait will become ill and die. A new round of baiting begins at the end of this waiting period. Burrows that are still active are identified, and another short "pulse" of baiting is used to kill the remaining rodents. This cycle should be repeated until all burrows remain inactive.

Sometimes burrows and nesting sites are not visible or cannot be safely baited. This is especially true when mice are major pest inside a poultry house. In order to make sure that most of the mice will discover bait placements put a small amount of bait in a lot of different places. Bait can be placed on seals, in the feed rooms, or scattered in the attic area if the building has drop ceilings. Bait stations (shallow boxes of or six inch sections of inch and a half PVC) may be used in more exposed areas. Some baits area also sold in block form that can be nailed or wired to the rafters. Replace bait as needed until rodent activity ends.

For more information on rodent control, contact the Agriculture Extension office at 830-6361.

Betty Ford Goes Home

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford has left the hospital where she spent the New Year's holiday undergoing treatment for complications of earlier heart bypass surgery, a hospital spokesman said today.

The wife of former President Gerald Ford was released from Eisenhower Medical Center on Sunday, five days after being admitted for emergency surgery to stop bleeding from stitches made during November's bypass surgery.

"Mrs. Ford was discharged from the medical center at 10:15 a.m. and she will be recuperating at home," hospital spokesman Michael McFadden said in a statement.

Mrs. Ford, 69, entered the hospital Tuesday after telling her husband she felt weak after dinner. Dr. Jack Steinlieb, who performed the quadruple bypass surgery, operated Wednesday to stop bleeding from stitches closing the incision, hospital officials said.

Ford and the couple's daughter, Susan, joined the former first lady in a bedside New Year's Eve celebration, toasting 1988 with sparkling apple cider, Steinlieb said.

MA BELL ALWAYS ANSWERS!

Imagine yourself at home alone, when, without warning, an emergency arises. You pick up the phone, dial "0" for the operator, and there is no answer. Or, imagine a worse scenario, you dial "0", and hear a strange voice say "I'm sorry but we are unable to answer your call right now. Please leave your name and phone number, and we'll call you back when we return!" Fortunately, we are not likely to experience such a situation.

But, let's change the cast of characters for a moment. Imagine that you are a home buyer who is moving into the city. You are prepared to purchase a home, have sufficient ready cash to make the purchase, and need to move into the home you choose within 45 days. When you arrive in town, you begin looking in the newspaper at the homes that are "For Sale". You pick out three homes which seem to have possibilities. Two of them are "For Sale By Owner", and the third is offered by a local real estate company. You call the first number and no one answers. The second number yields a voice recording of a homeowner who promises to call back. At the third number, the real estate office, a pleasant voice offers not only complete information on the home you had circled in the paper, but offers to devote the day to locating other homes which meet your needs. You agree, and the outcome is your purchase of the home you've always wanted. Being available to buyers is but one of many services offered by a real estate professional.

Reagan Ready For Budget And International Travels

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is buckling down to work on a new federal budget and making more international travel plans after winding up a year-end interlude of golf and relaxation in California.

Aboard Air Force One, as the president flew back from Palm Springs on Sunday, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said budget director James C. Miller III would begin briefing Reagan on the fiscal 1989 budget this week.

Fitzwater said the briefings probably would start Tuesday or Wednesday. The budget, covering the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, is expected to be submitted to Congress in mid-February.

Asked about reports that the president plans extensive overseas travel during 1988, Fitzwater said "a Mexican summit is possible in February" and the president hopes to go to Moscow in May or June, but "it will be pretty difficult to work in other trips."

Besides the Moscow and Mexican summits, Reagan will attend an economic summit in Toronto, Canada, in June.

The president made no public comments as he and his wife, Nancy, returned from eight days in Southern California, six of them spent at the estate of multimillionaire publisher Walter Annenberg near Palm Springs.

Aides said Reagan played golf almost daily at the Annenberg estate. The president's golf scores are not given out, but are not believed to be notably good since he seldom plays.

On another issue, Fitzwater said Reagan will participate in a ceremonial signing sometime this week of a bill pumping additional millions into the troubled Farm Credit System.

He said the National Security Council and the Economic Policy Council of the White House will hold joint meetings to discuss "economic and social issues" in preparation for the president's meeting Jan. 13 with Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita.

Before leaving California, the president addressed the primary items on his plate for the coming months.

In his Saturday radio address, Reagan opened his New Year's campaign with an international tack, prodding the Senate to act on the ratification of the arms control treaty with the Soviet Union.

The president also called on both houses to approve the new U.S.-Canadian trade pact, which binds the two nations into the world's largest free-trade zone.

The president's drive to get Senate approval for the treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear weapons comes amid the Geneva negotiations on a second accord to slash by half the superpowers' strategic arsenals and his administration's preparations for a fourth summit with Moscow.

The president and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in their exchange of New Year's greetings Friday, both expressed hopes for a strategic accord that could be ready in time for the Moscow summit.

The No. 1 item on Reagan's domestic agenda is the confirmation of Judge Anthony Kennedy to the Supreme Court. The nomination has received a generally favorable reception in contrast with Reagan's failed attempts to place Douglas H. Ginsburg and Robert H. Bork on the high court.

Reagan lauded Kennedy, who is on the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, saying he has "made clear his belief that it's a judge's job to interpret the law, not make it."

The Senate Judiciary Committee is expected to vote on Kennedy's nomination when Congress returns from its midterm recess late this month.

Reagan signed the Canadian free-trade agreement on Saturday in separate ceremonies with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. Earlier in the week he also signed an executive order giving 4.3 million military and civilian federal workers a 2 percent pay raise.

Peres Says Talks Could End Violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres says negotiations with Israel's Arab foes could end the violent crisis in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and lead to a long-term regional accord.

Peres, who has expressed conditional support for an international conference, on Sunday renewed his call for discussions to solve the unrest that has disrupted 20 years of mostly peaceful occupation of the region.

"I think what we have now to start is meaningful negotiations and I do believe that the negotiations will result with some solutions that nobody has suggested until now, because in addition to the partition of the land, you can have other solutions like a federation, a confederation, sharing the government," Peres said.

"We are in a terribly complicated situation. There is no simple solution," he said.

Peres, interviewed from Jerusalem on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," urged directing all energy toward negotiations to end the Mideast conflict.

POLITICIANS IN PRINT — A number of books authored by politicians or former political luminaries fill the shelves of booksellers across America. Many of the books are memoirs or autobiographies. Among the offer-

Lawmakers Seem To Have Love For Pen And Paper

By BOB McHUGH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Along with writing the nation's laws, members of Congress have shown a 200-year penchant for pen and paper by writing everything from biographies to spy novels.

Not even the Library of Congress is certain just how many books have been written by House and Senate members. But, according to librarians, historians and booksellers, there are hundreds.

They range from John F. Kennedy's "Profiles in Courage," which the then-senator wrote in 1956 while recuperating from spinal surgery, to the inglorious story of former Maryland Rep. Robert Bauman's homosexuality, and the unrepentant "I'd Do It Again" by former congressman, Boston mayor and convict James Michael Curley.

Lawmaker literature often takes the form of memoirs. Some books express a partisan political point of view. A few are written secretly by staff members or ghost writers.

Stephen Hess, a governmental studies fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington, says most books written by lawmakers contain "the odds and ends of history."

"They're rarely great literature," he notes. Some congressional books are published only by tiny "vanity" presses. A few, like the current remembrances of ex-House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., and Reps.

Claude Pepper, D-Fla., and Morris Udall, D-Az., hold their own in bookstores.

Kennedy's book even won the Pulitzer Prize for biography in 1957.

Congressional diaries have been kept by some of history's most famous lawmakers, such as John Quincy Adams and Tennessee Rep. Davy Crockett.

More widely read books include "Life on the Run," the account by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., of his career in professional basketball. Ex-Congressman Sen. Gary Hart wrote two novels of international intrigue, one co-authored with Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine.

House Historian Raymond Smock said books by members can be valuable historical tools. But many members' works, even those deemed useful by Smock, have limited audiences.

A paperback authored in 1987 by 10 Republican House members was financed jointly by the authors' campaign funds. Called "A House of Ill Repute," it expresses frustration with the Democratic leadership and outlines steps for "refurbishing our House."

About 3,500 have been printed, of which some 25 percent have been distributed to the press, according to Kieran Mahoney, a spokesman for Rep. Joseph DioGuardi, R-N.Y., one of the authors.

"Each of the members' campaign accounts kicked in 500 bucks. It was essentially vanity press," Mahoney said. "Any profits have been committed to charity, although we won't make a profit."

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, is among the most prolific authors currently in Congress, with at least five titles to his credit. His "Reflections of a Public Man," contains poetry, and pictures the speaker on horseback in a 10-gallon hat.

Wright was accused of making a deal with a publisher friend for an unusually high 55 percent royalty on each copy. He has denied the allegations.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., has written more than a dozen books. Presidential candidate Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., lists some six titles.

Books that made a splash include Bauman's "The Gentleman From Maryland" in 1986 and John LeBoutillier's "Harvard Hates America" in 1978.

Bauman, a conservative Republican, saw his career destroyed by a sexual rendezvous with a male hustler. "I did not want to write this book," he said in the preface. "I wrote it because I need the money."

LeBoutillier, a Republican, wrote his "Odyssey of a Born-Again American" two years before being elected to the House from New York.

LeBoutillier, who lost his bid for re-election in 1982, was recently cited by O'Neill in the Massachusetts Democrat's own 1987 book, "Man of the House."

"He (LeBoutillier) had gone to Harvard, and had written a book in which he charged that the university was filled with hypocritical, bleeding-heart leftists," O'Neill wrote. "At twenty-seven, he was the youngest member of the House — and possibly the most obnoxious."

White House Will Get New Barriers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rubbernecking motorists driving along Pennsylvania Avenue will have a poor view of the White House for a few months while workers build a new cement-post barrier to protect the front of the executive mansion.

An eight-foot-high plywood fence around the construction site will obscure part of the north side of the White House beginning today, but the famed view across the South Lawn will be undisturbed for the time being, a National Park Service spokeswoman says.

Money has not yet been appropriated to install the new barrier on the south side of the presidential residence.

The new barricade will consist of 38-inch-high posts called bollards. They will be next to the curb, spaced four feet apart and be linked by a thick chain.

"When finished, it will be very attractive, much more attractive than the jersey barriers," NPS spokeswoman Sandra Alley said in reference to solid barriers along Pennsylvania Avenue designed to prevent a vehicle from ramming onto the White House grounds.

MARY COOK PROMOTED BY MARK'S INC.

Mark M. Bulluck, President of Mark's, Inc., a Franchisee of Hardee's Food Systems, Inc., in Eastern North Carolina, has announced the promotion of Mary Cook to General Manager.

Mary joined Mark's, Inc. September 25, 1986 as manager of Hardee's of Greenville #3 on 10th Street. She was responsible for the day-to-day operations of this restaurant. With her promotion, she is now responsible for the day-to-day supervision of Hardee's on 10th Street and Hardee's on Greenville Blvd.

A native of Baraga, Michigan and daughter of Mrs. Cecelia Cook, who resides in Michigan, Mary has made Greenville, N.C. her home for the past nine years.

PAINLESS DENTISTRY methods of treatment, improvement in traditional dental instruments and equipment, and the invention of new, more efficient devices.

Not long ago, toothache or fear of toothache was the most frequent reason for seeking dental treatment. The treatment itself was often not much more pleasant than the toothache.

In recent years, however, significant advances in dentistry have enabled the dentist to treat his patients with little or no discomfort. These advances have been made possible by a better understanding of dental disease and the behavior of diseased mouth tissues, the introduction of better medication and

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Major Factor

In Pitt County large industries have grown up where corn and tobacco once held sway.

A huge medical complex has developed west of Greenville on land which only a few years ago was used for farming. As our county becomes more urban, farms are being converted into subdivisions and paved streets, houses, condos and apartments develop in areas often surrounded by farm fields.

It is clear that Pitt County's economy has diversified in the last 30 years. Education, industry and medicine are pouring hundreds of millions of dollars into the economy and spurring exciting growth.

The community should not lose sight of the fact that farming, once king of the Pitt County economy, is still an important part of it and thousands of families still depend on farm income for their livings.

The income from farm holdings and production is a major factor in the county's tax revenues. When that income decrease, tax revenues reflect this decline.

Mitch Smith, a Pitt Agriculture Extension agent, reports that, while exact figures for 1987 are yet to be available, it is certain that gross crop sales will exceed $100 million. That is quite an industry.

Tobacco still brings farmers about $40 million annually and that crop had a good year.

Soybeans did well and livestock and poultry brought farmers considerable income. Farm Agent Phillip Rowan reported gross income for broiler and egg production will come to about $20 million for 1987.

Hogs and cows grossed about $9 million for 1987.

An interesting note is the comeback of cotton. With cotton prices up, about 3,000 acres were planted in Pitt County during 1987. It is a crop which virtually disappeared from the county but now has the possibility of becoming a good cash crop once again.

Only corn suffered a disastrous growing year.

With all the development under way in the county it is well to recall that more land is used for farming than anything else. The cash derived from farming operations is a major contributor to Pitt County's economy.

Blessing

One of the final gifts of 1987 was a blessing long sought and long wished for: a better screening test for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved distribution of a new screening test for the disease in the United States during the closing weeks of the year. The testing process was demonstrated to have a very low rate of false positives compared with other licensed tests and has a safety feature that inactivates the AIDS virus in the sample to protect health care workers.

The improved test is a blessing for blood banks in the nation. Until now, screening has been marginally accurate — a painful fact for health organizations who depend on donations for their blood supplies.

It can be used in large volume testing facilities such as blood banks and commercial laboratories, says president of Organon Teknika, the Durham company that developed it. The test is also said to have detected AIDS antibodies in 100 percent of the AIDS patients tested in clinical trials. It is also said to produce results as rapidly as the best tests now in use.

The new screening couldn't have come at a better time. All signs indicate a rash of increased counts in AIDS cases.

Countries previously unwilling to acknowledge AIDS within their borders have begun to change their point of view and the number of reported cases has dramatically increased, says the World Health Organization.

The United States has by far the largest number of AIDS cases with 49,342 reported as of Dec. 21, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control. The reliability of AIDS surveillance in the United States, while far from perfect, is generally regarded as a global pace-setter. In other industrialized countries the majority of cases are reported but in developing countries it appears the majority of cases have neither been recognized nor reported.

Cases recorded by WHO through Dec. 2 show France as second, with 2,523. The other countries with more than 1,000 cases are Uganda, Brazil, Tanzania, West Germany, Canada, the United Kingdom and Italy.

Worldwide, WHO estimates between 5 and 10 million people are infected with the virus and experts estimate between 500,000 and 3 million new AIDS cases will occur over the next five years.

Each improvement in the reporting technique will be helpful when and if remedial measures become available.

Gore Endorsement In Character

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford's decision to end his neutrality in the Democratic presidential primary and endorse Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore should not surprise even a casual observer of Sanford's political career.

Presidential politics always has fascinated Sanford, the former governor who was elected to the Senate in 1966. He mounted two brief, unsuccessful campaigns for the office in the 1970s and wrote a book calling for reforms in the nominating process.

He was slated to chair President Johnson's 1968 re-election campaign before the president shocked the nation by withdrawing from the race. He was a finalist for the Democratic vice presidential nomination that year, but Hubert Humphrey ultimately chose Edmund Muskie.

And even before his election as governor in 1960, Sanford played a leading role in the election of John F. Kennedy. Risking the anger of fellow North Carolina Democrats who were backing Lyndon B. Johnson, Sanford became the first Southern leader to endorse Kennedy.

"That (the presidency) is where the beef is," Bill Green, Sanford's senior assistant, said last week. "He is vitally interested in the presidency."

Sanford spoke of influencing the 1988 Democratic presidential nominating process during his Senate campaign two years ago.

His victory made him and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan the highest ranking Democratic officeholders in the state. They agreed that Sanford would be the state party's unofficial spokesman on national politics and policy and defer to Jordan on the statewide scene.

In an interview last week before announcing his support of Gore, Sanford said he felt obligated to state his choice instead of remaining neutral as most other Democratic heavyweights across the South have done.

"Since I am an elected official, I feel that I should be in on this," he said.

Early on, he urged fellow party leaders to keep their options open for most of 1987. Meanwhile, he and other top Democrats met privately at least twice to discuss whether they could reach a consensus and make a joint endorsement.

Sanford also talked with some of the Democratic prospects who have passed up the race: New York Gov. Mario Cuomo; Arkansas Sen. Dale Bumpers; Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn. Last summer, Sanford said he would support Nunn if he ran.

Some Democrats expressed surprise at the timing of Sanford's announcement of support for Gore. One insider, speaking on condition of anonymity, voiced regret that Sanford had not moved more slowly or made greater efforts to soothe the feelings of black Jesse Jackson supporters.

Green, however, said it was characteristic of Sanford to move quickly once he had made up his mind: "He decides and he takes off."

Sanford said he had planned all along to reach a decision around the end of 1987. "The candidates have had time to display their wares," he said during Saturday's news conference with Gore and former Gov. Jim Hunt, who also endorsed the Tennessee senator.

At the same time, Sanford has been sensitive to suggestions that he is trying to play a kingmaker's role. He has insisted that he is not telling others how to vote, although influencing others generally is the purpose of making endorsements.

"I have always said I wasn't trying to maneuver any group of people and I wasn't trying to influence any group of people," Sanford said.

But he long has believed that party leaders should have a greater voice in choosing the nominee. In his 1981 book, "A Danger of Democracy," he calls for restoring the independence of party convention delegates eroded by reforms of the 1960s and 1970s.

States should send "thinking delegates" to conventions, Sanford argues — delegates influenced, but not bound, by primary results. He implies that the activists and officeholders who act as delegates should have the same latitude as legislators, reconciling the perceived wishes of their constituents with what they consider the wisest course.

Another reason behind Sanford's action is that he does not want to be left standing on the sidelines if the Democrats recapture the White House, some observers say.

By getting involved in the campaign — even if Gore does not win the nomination — Sanford can accumulate political IOUs and establish ties with the eventual nominee. He thus would be in a better position to influence the new administration than if he sat out the primaries.

And Sanford definitely wants his voice heard.

In an interview during his 1986 campaign, Sanford said one reason why he had not sought a Senate seat earlier is that he had not viewed the upper chamber as a suitable platform from which to promote his policy agenda.

He said he had since changed his mind and believed that as a senator, he could have a substantial impact on the nation's policies in such areas as agriculture, foreign affairs, trade and fiscal policy.

But for Sanford to have the kind of influence he desires, the Democrats must regain the White House.

Fruit Trees For A Famine

'A climate of hopelessness seems to encircle the country but amid apparently endless cycles of drought and famine, a small innovative program has created some hope for Ethiopians.'

winter sales, were donated by wholesale fruit tree nurseries in California's Central Valley.

Background research lasted over a year; climate, geography, sites, transport, import permits and financing details were studied. Unfortunately, there is a stigma against innovation in the international aid community (too many "good ideas" have failed). To ease the burden of working in Ethiopia, TreePeople selected partner organizations such as Oxfam, Concern Ireland and an indigenous church group for links to local villages and for ongoing support.

These groups allowed TreePeople to fit into existing programs rather than waste resources developing yet another organizational infrastructure. They had experience with the Ethiopian government and system. Errors often made by outsiders, who do not understand local customs, were avoided. Most important, the on-site partners could take charge of daily monitoring.

The strategy worked. The crates of trees cleared customs the same day they arrived at Addis Ababa's airport. Within two weeks, they were planted in Sidamo, Harar and Shoa Provinces; Sidamo and Harar turned out to be two areas hit hard by this year's drought. Trainers were sent from Los Angeles to manage the planting process.

Within just one year, the trees started fruiting in the south. And now, in Harar Province, Oxfam reports that their trees, too, have fruit.

How can they fruit so quickly? The trees were three years old at the time of shipment and they were well-cared for throughout the year because the local farmers recognized their value. Fruit trees help feed families, provide small cash crops and protect the soil. They grow well alongside vegetables and, in shedding their leaves, add humus to the soil.

Moreover, older fruit trees can tolerate a year of drought; 3-year-old trees were strong enough to survive. A second year of drought will make mature trees go dormant — but it will not kill them. If trees had been started from seed last year, the seedlings would have died up and died. Villagers were inspired to care for these trees because they grew so rapidly and showed instant signs of being productive.

And the program continues. In 1987, two follow-up trips were made to the Ethiopian villages — one to evaluate survival rates and assess current problems, the other to provide training in disease and pest control, pruning and other forms of care. Next year, the villagers will try producing two crops per year. With two cold seasons and two rainy seasons, they can harvest twice annually, double what growers can do in North America.

The fruit trees will not build a new Ethiopian economy but they make a difference. Each tree bears a few pieces of fruit a year after being planted and, four years later, each produces 30 pounds of fruit annually. In 1990, with just 1,000 trees, 30,000 pounds of fruit can be added to the Ethiopian pantry. For several decades, production levels remain this high.

Will America continue limiting itself to crisis response — sending sacks of surplus grain — or can Americans open their minds to new ideas that can make a difference in difficult countries like Ethiopia, ideas that work despite politics and environment? Will people listen this year, or will we wait for the next drought, stare at the same photos and ask the same questions once again?

Andy Lipkis is executive director of the TreePeople. Susan Becker, manager of international programs for TreePeople, has a master's degree in environmental science from Yale University.

Strength For Today

Some time ago a wealthy adherent of Alcoholics Anonymous purchased a summer home in a wealthy resort. Within a few days there was a paid advertisement in the local paper describing the work done by Alcoholics Anonymous. It said further that if anyone in that summer colony or vicinity felt that he or she needed the help of this organization a certain telephone number should be called and such assistance would be cheerfully rendered.

Here is a wealthy man away on a vacation, yet he is so grateful to the organization which redeemed him from the bondage of drink that he loses no time in a new community to let it be known that the influence of A.A. is in that community if anyone needs help.

This what we know as the missionary spirit — a desire to help other people anywhere, any time.

Jews And Arabs Continue Deadlocked In Nightmares

Analysis

The Arab riots in the West Bank and Gaza are, for now, over. Though the circumstances that spawned them have existed for decades, and though the dilemma of what to do about those circumstances have challenged Israelis, Arabs and many other parties for just as long, the startling ferocity of the riots serve as a reminder that passions of the highest and lowest kind are at work in the region.

Those passions derive from the dreams that have occupied both sides for a long time. For anyone who cares about the fate of the parties to the conflict, those dreams, and particularly the nightmares they have become, are worth an empathic look.

Israelis dream in political colors, and the colors of the left and right make for different nightmares of different hues.

For the Labor alignment, and those further to its left, the greatest nightmare is a loss of the achievement attained in 1948 by the Zionist endeavor. That achievement consisted of the creation of a Jewish state in the Jews' ancestral homeland, a geographic space in which to gather the dazed remnants of their decimated people after two millennia of exile, persecution and powerlessness.

The Jews were able to rule, and to rule democratically, because they were the majority in that small space. And they were the majority because the partition of the Palestine Mandate into a Jewish state and an Arab one, the war that followed and the exodus of a large number of Arabs resulted in an Israel whose population was, in June 1948, 81 percent Jewish. With Israel's victory in the Six-Day War of 1967, a large number of Arabs in the West Bank and Gaza, many of them refugees from the 1948 fighting, came under Israeli administration. Those Arabs, together with Israel's own Arab citizens, now constitute about 38 percent of the total population within the borders ruled by Israel. It is this percentage — and the great likelihood, due to the high Arab birthrate, that it will exceed 50 percent within 25 years — that lies at the heart of Labor's nightmare.

For if Israel annexes the occupied territories, and in so doing makes the Arabs living there Israeli citizens, it will soon cease to be the Jewish state its founders struggled to establish. And if it doesn't annex the territories but continues to rule their people without giving them the rights its own Jewish and Arab citizens enjoy, then it will become a chronic occupying power accustomed to oppressing an angry population, thus damaging the democratic and humane principles on which it was founded.

As a result of this nightmare, Labor and its political allies have sought since the Six-Day War to relinquish control over most of the occupied territories. Their greatest hope has been that Jordan's King Hussein, who lost the West Bank during that war, would take it back, together with Gaza but without East Jerusalem and certain strategically sensitive areas; and that he would then make sure that those areas would not be used as a springboard for attacks against the Jewish state.

For Labor's chief political opponents, the Likud and its allies on the right, such a plan is a self-deluding fantasy. They don't believe that Hussein would ever accept Labor's terms and are convinced that, even if he somehow did, the result would be catastrophic.

Hussein, in their view, would be toppled quickly if he took charge of the occupied territories — his kingdom, now about two-thirds Palestinian, would be overwhelmingly so — and the result would be a state run by the Palestine Liberation Organization composed of Jordan, the West Bank and Gaza alongside and flanking a geographically vulnerable Israel. Alternatively, or perhaps first, Hussein, sensing the danger of being toppled, would cut loose the West Bank and Gaza, which would then declare statehood under PLO governance and attempt to liberate the rest of Palestine, which is to say Israel.

Many of these Israelis fear, in addition, that the new and radical Palestinian state, whatever political form it might take, would be supported not only by other Arab states but also by Israel's own Arab citizens, now 17 percent of Israel's population and growing, who have drawn ever closer to their brethren in the West Bank and Gaza during the past two decades and who demonstrated that closeness by organizing a general strike during the recent riots. Those Arabs, who already constitute the majority of the population in the western Galilee — a part of the Palestine Mandate not originally assigned to the Jewish state by the 1947 U.N. partition plan but won by Israel during the subsequent war — would demand self-determination and union with the Palestinian state. It would be a demand that would attract enormous and automatic support in the Third World and the Soviet bloc.

The result of all this would be the Likud's nightmare: An Israel under constant attack; exquisitely vulnerable, as it had been before 1967, to being cut in two at its narrow waist; unable to re-occupy the West Bank and Gaza because they constitute an entire state or recognized parts of a state; facing internal insurrection and terrorism from its own Arab minority; receiving repeated worldwide condemnations for responding to the external attacks and for attempting to control its internal rebellion; losing the support of its main ally, Washington, and ultimately, losing large portions of its Jewish population, who would emigrate in fear and disgust.

The nightmare of the Likud, then, is not a loss of the Jewish identity of the state, or of its democratic principles, but of the state itself. As a result, the Likud and its allies advocate holding on to the occupied territories, feeling that the damage that is being caused by the continued occupation is far less than the damage that is likely to be caused by abandoning it. To be sure, the political right, and especially its religious allies, also see the occupied territories as belonging historically — and, in the eyes of some of them, also religiously — to Israel, and therefore as areas whose abandonment would constitute a betrayal of history and of the Jewish people. But it is the nightmare of national dissolution, rather than the nightmare of such a betrayal, that plays the primary role in generating the opposition to Labor's hopes for territorial compromise.

Can anything be done to break this deadlock of nightmares and the paralysis of action it has caused? By the Israelis, for the foreseeable future, probably not. Opinion polls suggest that the riots have provoked a hardening on the part of the electorate against any attempt at compromise, at least in the short run. Pressures from the United States are likely to harden this resolve even further, and in any case are not likely to be exerted in an election year. For most Israelis, the nightmares seem more stuck and more frightening than ever.

For the PLO, any movement toward peace is bound to require a formal recognition of Israel's right to exit within defensible borders — a recognition that ends the dream of the return for the Palestinians who are refugees or the descendants of refugees of the 1948 fighting.

To be sure, such a recognition ends the dream in an absolute way, only on paper — the dream could be revived, and militarily pursued, after Jordanian or Palestinian sovereignty were achieved in the West Bank and Gaza. But even a strategic compromise, hedged with a long-term plan to resume the battle once geographic space is secured, is anathema to the hard line factions in the PLO as well as to their teeming constituencies in the refugee camps who grew up dreaming of the return to Haifa, Jaffa and Lydda. And the moment such a step toward compromise were about to be taken, the PLO would be split, as it has been split before, by fratricidal conflict. The PLO's nightmare, then, is a loss of the unity that has given the Palestinians the only independent political and military strength they have had.

For the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza, the nightmare is more palpable and immediate. They live on the land itself, and those of them who aren't refugees from the part of Palestine that became Israel are seeing that land ever more filled with Jewish settlers who believe that it's rightfully theirs. The nightmare of those Palestinians, then, is a loss of the land as they wait for the PLO to act.

That the PLO will, in fact, act in any effective way is highly unlikely — the paralysis of unity has taken far too powerful a hold. And independent action by the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza is also unlikely — local leaders who in the past have attempted to take matters into their own hands have been assassinated or intimidated by the PLO if their positions have been inconsistent with the organization's, or have been expelled by the Israelis if they have managed to achieve the kind of standing that could galvanize local opposition against Israeli rule.

The Israeli response to the emergence of local leaders seems especially unfortunate, since it removes the possibility not only of a leadership that does the bidding of the PLO, but also one whose primary constituency is the indigenous population of the occupied territories — a population that, in still living on the land, still has something in Palestine to lose, certainly more than the Palestinians who have been in Syria or other countries for their entire lives, and a population that is, therefore, more likely than they to seek an accommodation with Israel.

In fact, it's worth wondering, in the wake of December's riots, whether the fearlessness shown by the young rioters might be reflected, someday, in a greater willingness among their elders to take independent positions despite the danger of PLO reprisals against them — and whether that same fearlessness and its accompanying rage might yet affect the Israelis' perspective sufficiently that they would welcome West Bankers and Gazans who are prepared to talk, rather than throw stones.

Clearly, the nightmares of both sides, and of the factions within each side, make the possibilities for a resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict remote. It would be wonderful if the shouting dreamers could be shaken from their agitated slumbers by caring hands; but hands that have attempted such shaking in the past have been bitten for their efforts, and no hands are now available for that tender but thankless act.

Some nightmares end with the dawn, some last for generations. In the case of these nightmares it will have to be the sleepers themselves who devise their own, and each other's, awakening.

Recovering

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A man and woman who were stabbed New Year's Day were listed in satisfactory condition at N.C. Baptist Hospital, although the woman lost her unborn child when she was assaulted, a warrant says.

Michelle Annette Wilson and Jerry Lee Gordon were stabbed in Ms. Wilson's home, said Winston-Salem Police Sgt. Jerry G. Matthews. A warrant drawn Jan. 1 says Ms. Wilson was stabbed in the abdomen with a knife, killing her unborn child.

Albert Williams, 33, was charged with two counts of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury.

Williams was being held in the Forsyth County Jail with bond set at $100,000.

Name Accord

GREENSBORO (AP) — Chapel Hill's Hardback Cafe & Bookstore has agreed to change its sign by Jan. 1, 1989, to settle a federal lawsuit filed by the chain of restaurants with a similar name, Hard Rock Cafe.

Hard Rock Cafe had sued the North Carolina restaurant, alleging that Hardback's name "is likely to cause confusion, mistake or deception of customers." Hardback owners said it chose the name because "it fit."

In a settlement agreement filed in U.S. District Court in Greensboro, Hardback Cafe & Bookstore agreed to make the words "Cafe" and "Bookstore" the same size. In the current sign, "Hardback Cafe" is larger than "& Bookstore."

Hardback Cafe & Bookstore also agreed to: not depict its name in a design or colors similar to that of Hard Rock Cafe; use its name only in its entirety; and use it only on a business with both restaurant and bookstore services.

Rape Charge

RALEIGH (AP) — A resident of Briarwood Rest Home in Raleigh was arrested Saturday and charged with raping a 98-year-old woman, a fellow resident.

Raleigh police arrested Larry Sanders, 39, at the home. He was charged with first-degree rape and was being held at the Wake County Jail, with bond set at $50,000.

The victim was treated at Wake Medical Center.

Staff members who reported the assault declined to discuss it, as did Thomas Marshburn, the home administrator who lives in Greenville.

Lost Hikers

PILOT MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — A walk in the woods almost turned into a camping trip for a Guilford County couple who got lost in Pilot Mountain State Park Friday night.

Mark R. Dean of Colfax and Dorris D. Hoyle of Greensboro were hiking in the park when rain forced them to seek shelter under a ledge, Capt. Dennis Manuel of the Pilot Mountain Rescue Squad said.

Darkness fell before they could find their way back to the car. They were found by rescue squad workers about 1 a.m., after a park ranger noticed that their car was still in the park at closing.

"Those woods look a lot different in the dark than they do in the light," Manuel said Saturday.

He said the couple were cold and wet but otherwise OK.

Service

RALEIGH (AP) — Mark Waple invited about 60 people who attended a monthly memorial service for prisoners and those missing in action to also attend the Feb. 2 session in the U.S. Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., where his current lawsuit against the U.S. government will be heard.

Waple said he is taking action under the Hostage Act, which says the president must do all he can, short of war, to gain the release of Americans held captive.

Chief litigants in the case are retired Maj. Mark Smith, retired Sgt. 1st Class Melvin McIntyre, Ann Hart, Kathryn Fanning, Marian Shelton and the family of Jerry Dennis.

Eighteen other MIA families have joined the suit, Waple said at the ceremony, held Saturday at the N.C. Vietnam Veterans Memorial on the Capitol grounds.

IRS Says Jessica Was Paid $363,700

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service says PTL paid $363,700 — nearly $100,000 more than previously reported — to try to keep Jessica Hahn from revealing a tryst with Jim Bakker.

Initial reports said the payments totaled $265,000. But The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer reported Sunday an IRS report filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court says the total spent was much more.

The IRS, which says the Fort Mill television ministry owes at least $55.7 million in back taxes, filed the reports to support its arguments that PTL's tax-exempt status should be revoked.

In its report, the IRS said the total spent in the case of the former PTL secretary included:

Superior Court Judges Seek Pay Raise

By The Associated Press
Superior Court judges in North Carolina are asking for a pay raise, saying they often have to take pay cuts to become judges, but state Supreme Court Chief Justice James Exum says judicial salaries are inadequate.

"The trial judges are of the opinion that it is imperative that the starting salary for resident Superior Court judges be raised to a level that will attract the most qualified attorneys," Judge Robert Hobgood of Louisburg, chairman of the conference's committee on salaries and allowances, wrote lawmakers in a letter earlier this month.

Superior Court judges are asking for a 25 percent raise in their starting salary, which would make their starting pay more than that of the chief justice of the N.C. Supreme Court.

The Conference of Superior Court Judges, which represents the state's 72 active judges plus others who are retired, has sent letters to every legislator requesting that their annual base pay be raised from $64,092 to $80,000.

The judges also are asking that expense allowances for travel be raised from $6,500 to $9,000 a year, a 38 percent increase.

If both requests are granted, the salary and allowance increases would cost an extra $1.6 million annually. It also would mean the starting pay of Superior Court judges would be $3,000 more than that of the chief justice of the N.C. Supreme Court.

Hobgood cited in his letter a survey of judicial salaries that showed Superior Court or trial court judges in other Southern states were starting at salaries from $76,000 to $78,000 a year. In Pennsylvania, the base pay is $80,000.

"The quality of judges I have taught at the National Judicial College varies from state to state in direct relation to salary," Hobgood said.

Private attorneys who have been practicing about 10 years in cities with at least 35,000 residents and earn in the top 25 percent of their profession would have to take a $22,000 pay cut to become a Superior Court judge, the letter said. The pay cut would jump to $38,000 for a lawyer who had practiced 15 years.

But Exum said salaries were inadequate at all levels of the court system. Salaries for attorneys have increased substantially in recent years, he said, while court officials' salaries have kept up only with inflation.

Last year, Exum requested a 20 percent raise for District Court judges and a 13 percent increase for Superior Court judges. The General Assembly approved a 10 percent increase for District Court judges and 5 percent for all other court officials — the same raise given to all other state employees.

Rep. Dan Blue Jr., D-Wake, a member of the courts committee, said the proposed $80,000 salary "was not a ridiculous figure, especially when you consider the governor earns $105,000."

If Superior Court judges were granted a 25 percent raise, they would start at roughly $8,000 more than Court of Appeals judges and $4,000 more than associate justices of the Supreme Court.

"If you move one group up, it will set off a chain reaction," said Franklin reeman, director of the Administrative Office of the Courts in Raleigh.

School Board To Consider Expanding Testing Policy

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Board of Education will consider this week expanding statewide high school testing to include eight subjects and requiring teachers to use the scores as part of a student's final exam grade.

But teachers are worried that the tests could be used to grade them, as well as their students, and to limit their classroom freedom.

The N.C. Testing Commission will recommend Wednesday that the board develop two-hour achievement tests for chemistry and geometry this school year and for freshmen English and health the next year. The state already has begun end-of-year testing in Algebra I, Algebra II and biology and will add U.S. history this spring.

In a two-page report, the 15-member commission recommends putting the scores in permanent records used by university admission offices and guidance counselors. If adopted by the state board, the commission's recommendations would take effect this spring.

Leaders of the state's two groups of teachers say they fear that more testing will diminish their discretion by forcing them to teach to the tests.

"I think we as teachers have just given up too much to the detriment of the quality of education, and teachers should say, Enough is enough; we are going to take control," said John I. Wilson of Raleigh, a member of the N.C. Association of Educators' executive committee. "We have gone overboard with centralization."

Larry J. Hauser, president of the N.C. Federation of Teachers and a high school math teacher in Wilmington, said teachers were frustrated by state tests that force them to cover prescribed material, sometimes against their better judgment.

"At what point do you forget about the test and stay with students until they learn a concept?" Hauser asked.

James B. Hemby, president of Atlantic Christian College and vice chairman of the commission, said he shared that concern, but added that the tests did not keep teachers from going beyond the basic curriculum.

"It seems to me all teachers would be first of all concerned about the basic curriculum and then exploring beyond that," Hemby said.

Some teachers also fear administrators will "come back to teachers and say, 'your kids did poorly on the standardized test, and you are not a good teacher,'" Hauser said.

But Hemby said the commission had no intention of seeing test scores used to grade teachers.

William J. Brown Jr., assistant state superintendent for research and testing, said the tests at the end of courses gave teachers useful information about whether students were meeting the goals outlined in the N.C. Standard Course of Study.

"I think it is one of the most exciting things that has happened in the state in a number of years," Brown said. The tests would put North Carolina among the nation's leaders in measuring educational progress, Brown said.

Surrogate Mother Does Repeat Couple Marries In Evening Ceremony

By ITABARI NJERI
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — If she were doing it for the money, it would be a pretty poor part-time job, says Karen Hill, a surrogate mother who gave birth to a girl for another couple on March 30.

But it wasn't the money — a $10,000 fee for agreeing to bear a child for an infertile couple. It was, Hill said, because she enjoyed being pregnant and wanted to help a couple who couldn't have a child experience the joy of parenting.

She liked it so much, she added, she's doing it again — for the same couple, Vicki Van Valer and Happer Campbell of San Jose, Calif. It may be the first time any surrogate mother gives birth to siblings.

"Yup," Hill said over the phone from her home near Riverside, Calif. "We had been approached by an attorney representing another couple to become a surrogate. I was talking to Vicki one night and told her all about it."

The next day, Hill said, Van Valer's husband, Hap, "called and said they didn't want to take advantage of us, but if I was willing to be a surrogate again, they wanted to know if I would do it for them?" They wanted their daughter to have a sibling.

Hill and her husband, Jon, a Los Angeles County deputy sheriff, said definitely.

The two couples had become close during the entire surrogate process — Hill being artificially inseminated with the biological father's sperm, visits to the obstetrician with the adopted mother, the birth — and the 10 months since. The two women talk on the phone frequently, said Hill. And when the biological father — Hap — is in town, "We play golf," says her husband, Jon.

Both couples credit the Surrogate Parent Center in Los Angeles, run by Dr. Nina Kellogg, a psychological counselor, for helping make such a perfect match. The couples were carefully screened before they even met.

"That some couples who do this don't even meet" until the baby is born is criminal, said Van Valer.

She points to the Baby M surrogate custody dispute as an avoidable tragedy. "It takes a very special person to be a surrogate, and Mary Beth Whitehead was definitely not meant to be one," she said. If she had undergone the proper psychological screening, that would have been obvious, Van Valer believes.

Van Valer, 41, tried for eight years to become pregnant before deciding to seek a surrogate.

The adoptive mother, who quit her job as vice president of her husband's construction company to go back to school last year, said she identifies with the women's movement. Feminists, however, are among the groups that have denounced surrogate parenting as a rent-a-womb operation for the rich that exploits the poor.

It would be "unconscionable" to engage as a surrogate a woman who was doing it just for the money, said Van Valer. But Hill, a real estate agent, is not that type of woman, she says.

She adds: "I would have to ask feminists, and other people in general, if any of them are infertile and want to have children? There is no greater grief."

Van Valer says the women's movement was, in great part, about women wanting to have control of their own bodies, their own lives. "It really boils down to Karen and me. It's a woman-to-woman thing." And if it works for them, and no one is being exploited, "that's what matters."

Salem United Methodist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Anne Marie Harrison and William M. Paramore Tuesday at 7 p.m. The Rev. C.B. Owens conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Sherry Welchel of Greenville and William Harrison of Richmond, Va., and Myrl and Patsy Paramore of near Simpson.

Lois Jane Stocks was organist and Jean Evans directed the ceremony. Edith McLawhorn of Winterville was honor attendant for her sister. Bridesmaids were Laura Covington of Powell, Tenn., cousin of the bride, and Michelle Robbins of Greenville.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Martin Coward and Doug Herring, both of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown styled with a lace-over-satin bodice with long lace sleeves, square neckline with a V back edged with lace. The skirt was tea-length and extended into a cathedral train. She carried a bouquet of lilies and roses. She wore a crown headpiece accented with pearls attached to a tulle veil trimmed with pearls.

Each attendant wore a teal-colored tea-length gown fashioned with a rounded neckline, short full sleeves and V back with a double bow at the back waistline. They carried long-stemmed white carnations with greenery.

A reception was held in the church fellowship building. Wendy Baker and Christi McLawhorn assisted in serving.

The couple will live in San Diego, Calif.

The bride is attending college. The bridegroom is serving in the U.S. Navy.

MRS. PARAMORE

'Cooks Tour' Leaves Friend With Doubts

DEAR ABBY: I recently went on a short trip and asked a good friend and neighbor to water my plants. Naturally, I gave her a key to my house. When I returned from my trip, someone told me that in my absence, this friend had taken several people through my house on a "Cook's tour," made coffee and entertained them in my home!

Needless to say, I feel disappointed and betrayed that my "friend" would invade my privacy in this manner.

Am I being too sensitive about this unscheduled "tour"? It's weighing on my mind and has affected my friendship with her. How would you handle it? — BETRAYED

DEAR BETRAYED: At the appropriate time, I would tell my friend what I had heard, and give her a chance to confirm or deny the story. It is unfair to silently buy a tale without giving the accused an opportunity to defend herself — or at least explain the circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: I noticed with sadness the letter from "Half a Woman." She should know that any truly caring man would not be put off after learning of her mastectomy.

At the ripe old age of 32, my wife was diagnosed with metastatic breast cancer. Both breasts were removed. In the next five and a half years, she had extensive chemotherapy and radium treatments, numerous surgeries (including total hysterectomy), and finally ended up in a wheelchair.

After her death, I was left with her memory and three children (12, 8 and 6) to help heal my pain.

However, not once during all those years of her trauma did I ever consider her less than the most remarkable, beautiful, loving person that she had always been. Not once did anyone who knew her consider her as less than a whole woman.

I did not marry her breasts or any other part of her anatomy; I married her, what she was at any given point in time — her personality, her essence, if you will.

"Half a Woman" should understand that the physical "problem" is hers, in her mind, and should really be no problem at all. If I could find any woman who is half the person my wife was with no breasts, I would never let her go! Sign me ... STILL LOVING AND STILL LOOKING

DEAR STILL: You appear to be a very special man who deserves to find another high-quality woman. I hope with all my heart you do.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter about the mother-in-law who complained about her 30-year-old daughter-in-law who puts her two small children down to nap while she watches the soaps for two hours. I am furious!

I also have a 30-year-old daughter-in-law with two small children. She never watches soaps or anything else. She also never puts her children down for a nap; instead she gets up in the morning and heads for the mirror. She has a beautiful face and she knows it. She thrives on constant attention wherever she can get it. So off she goes every day with the two little ones in the car. She runs to tennis lessons, clubs and wanders through stores and malls shopping, dragging her tired, sleepy children with her.

On weekends the kids get a nap

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

while my wimp son baby-sits so his wife can run and shop some more! He treats her like gold, telling her how "beautiful" she is.

What I wouldn't give for a daughter-in-law who would stay home and watch the soaps every afternoon while her little ones nap! — FURIOUS IN PHOENIX

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago, I wandered into a small cafe in Santa Fe, N.M. They asked me if I was alone. I was. They then asked me if I wanted to sit at the "maverick table."

I didn't know what that was, so they explained. It was a large table where those who came in alone could sit — and perhaps visit with others who were also alone.

Abby, I sat there and met some of the nicest people — and I didn't have to eat alone.

I think this is such a wonderful idea, but I've never seen it done at any other restaurant. Since so many people are alone and lonely these days, perhaps if you printed this, some cafe owners would consider it. — M.E. SKIPWORTH, WICHITA, KAN.

DEAR M.E.: Great idea! Of course some people prefer to eat alone, but with the "maverick table," at least they'll have a choice.

Weekly Bridge Winners Named

Regular duplicate bridge games were held last week at the Senior Center.

North-South winners Saturday afternoon were Mrs. A.L. Roque and M. Mel Wright, first, with .59 percent; Lee Hastings and Donald Dunbar, second; Maggie Gentile and V. Srinivasan, third, and Alice Johnson and Mable Hankerson, fourth.

East-West included Dr. Charles Duffy and Mrs. Robert Hankerson, first with .64 percent; Bertha Jones and Natoma Owens tied for second with Mrs. J.M. Horton and Mrs. Zeb Cummings; Don McKinney and Joe Hatch, fourth.

Les Hastings and George Martin were first place winners in the Thursday night game. Others placing were Bertha Jones and Natoma Owens, second, and Maggie Gentile and Ed Yauck, third.

Wednesday afternoon winners, North-South were Mr. and Mrs. Jeff McAllister tied for first with Beulah Eagles and Mrs. W.R. Harris with .58 percent; Mrs. Lacy Harrell and Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts, third.

East-West winners were Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Dave Proctor, first with .67 percent; Mrs. Gene McKemie and Mrs. Robert Blenk, second, and Mrs. Zeb Cummings and Mrs. Sam Jones, third.

Mrs. Zeb Cummings and Mrs. Bill Kirkwood were first place winners in the morning game with .64 percent; Mr. and Mrs. George Martin, second; Mrs. Roy Hadden and Mrs. Sam Jones, third, and Effie Williams and Emma Warren, fourth.

Walston-Noble Vows Performed On Dec. 27

Kelly Janine Noble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Thomas of Route 11, Greenville, and Frank A. Noble III of Harrelstown, Pa., became the bride of Steven Craig Walston, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Walston of New Bern, Dec. 27 at 3 p.m. in Parkers Chapel Church.

MRS. WALSTON

Dr. Harold Greene performed the double-ring ceremony. Cathy Thomas of Greenville, stepsister of the bride, was organist.

Heather Marie Noble of Greenville was maid of honor for her sister. Michelle McEwen of Laurinburg and Becky Melton of Greenville were bridesmaids.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Johnny Walston of New Bern, brother of the bridegroom, and John Worrell Jr. of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of organza over peau de soie styled with an off-shoulder neckline accented by iridescent sequins and pearls. The sleeves were formed by self-fabric pouf ruffles. The gown had a natural waistline and the skirt extended into a cathedral-length train trimmed with a ruffled flounce. She wore a beaded tiara attached to a double fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of silk white sweetheart roses, blue and white carnations, mums, baby's breath and ivy tied with white ribbon.

The grandmother of the bride, Margaret Macon, directed the wedding.

Grandmothers of the bridal couple were remembered with corsages.

The bride is a student at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is serving in the U.S. Army and is stationed in Massachusetts. He will leave for a tour of duty in Korea in February.

A reception was given by the mothers of the bridal couple in the church fellowship hall.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the Shriner's Club given by the parents of the bridegroom. Mrs. Hugh Carroll entertained at a lingerie shower for the bride prior to the ceremony.

Shannon Avera Is Bride

The private wedding ceremony of Shannon Lynette Avera and Michael John Balas took place Dec. 23 at 6 p.m. in Oakmont Baptist Church. The Rev. Gregory P. Rogers conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Avera of Greenville, John G. Balas of Fairbanks, Alaska, and Lorraine Balas of Rochester, Minn., are parents of the bridal couple.

The couple will live in Houston, Texas.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University. Both are special agents with the Internal Revenue Service, Criminal Investigation Division.

A wedding dinner was given by the parents of the bride at the Beef Barn.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 37.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 97 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 37.22 cents. The market is about steady and the live supply is adequate, instances fully adequate, for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,872,000, compared to 1,901,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market began a new year with a broad advance today, encouraged by an easing of pressure on the dollar in foreign exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial climbed 25.53 points to 1,946.36 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 5 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 1,106 up, 218 down and 248 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 22.28 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The dollar showing signs of steady- ing against leading foreign currencies today.

The Commerce Department reported today that construction spending jumped 2.2 percent in November, the largest increase in nine months. Spending on new construction rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $419.5 billion in November following a 0.1 percent drop in October. It was the biggest one-month increase since a 4.4 percent gain last February.

 said an unusually high number of accidents had been reported, but he did not know how many were weather-related.

Officials in Lee and Moore counties also reported extensive power outages.

"CP&L is just run ragged," said Detective Bill Street of the Lee County Sheriff's Department. "They've got calls just back to back."

A spokesman for the Sanford Police Department said power was out all over the city and in Lee County, while officials at the Moore County Sheriff's Department said much of that county was without power. The sheriff's department operated Sunday night with power generated from a communications van, but power had been restored this morning, said Bill Currie, a dispatcher.

The storm also knocked several radio stations off the air Sunday, including WKIX, WPTF and WDCG in the Triangle area.

Chapel Hill's WUNC, a public radio station, was on the air with .05 percent of its power Sunday night.

"We're getting about the equivalent energy to run a 100-watt light bulb," said David Wright, chief engineer at the station in Chapel Hill.

Except for a brief respite from the cold today, the week is expected to be unusually cold. An outbreak of arctic air is expected to enter North Carolina tonight and Tuesday, bringing the possibility of more wintery precipitation towards the end of the week, the weather service said.

Vikings Roll Over Saints, 44-10

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Anthony Carter turned New Orleans' playoff songfest into a farewell chant with an 84-yard punt return, and Wade Wilson and Hassan Jones connected on a "Hail Mary" touchdown pass as the Minnesota Vikings shocked the Saints 44-10 in the the NFC wild-card game Sunday.

It was the first playoff game in the 21-year history of the Saints, who had won nine straight to finish 12-3. And, it got off to a rousing start when the Saints took a 7-0 lead just 1:23 into the game.

But the Mardi Gras atmosphere that had produced seven Saints songs and had fans milling outside the Superdome as early as 7 a.m., was darkened quickly by Carter and Wilson, who replaced Tommy Kramer at quarterback after the Vikings' starter fumbled on Minnesota's first two possessions.

Carter's return, an NFL playoff record, gave the Vikings the lead for good at 10-7 with 3:03 left in the first period. Carter, who had returned just three punts in the regular season, also had six receptions for 79 yards in the game.

But the crusher was a call of too-many-men-on-the-field that allowed a 44-yard Wilson to Jones "Hail Mary" touchdown pass after time had expired out in the half and gave the Vikings a 31-10 lead at intermission despite six New Orleans sacks on Kramer and Wilson.

Chuck Nelson added second-half field goals of 32 and 19 yards, and D.J. Dozier ran eight yards for a touchdown with 1:46 left in the game to close out the scoring.

The Vikings, who lost three of their final four games and backed into the playoffs with an 8-7 record when St. Louis lost to Dallas last Sunday, now go to San Francisco for an NFC semifinal on Saturday with Washington visiting Chicago next Sunday.

The Saints now have to spend an off-season convincing an entire region that their first winning season wasn't a mirage.

Only the start was bright for the Saints. Kramer fumbled on the second play of the game and Vaughn Johnson recovered for New Orleans, setting up Bobby Hebert's 10-yard TD pass to Ethan Martin two plays later and New Orleans had a 7-0 lead.

Chuck Nelson's 42-yard field goal after Mel Gray muffed a punt cut it to 7-3.

Then came the explosion, set off by Carter's return. He side-stepped and tiptoed past four Saints and burst into the clear 70 yards from the goal line.

It gave the Vikings a 10-7 lead with 3:03 left in the first quarter.

Wilson added a 5-yard TD pass to Steve Jordan and running back Allen Rice threw a 10-yard TD pass to Carter on an option in the second quarter as Minnesota completely controlled the ball. Following the Rice-Carter connection with 6:10 remaining in the half, Minnesota had run 34 plays to just 12 for New Orleans.

For the game, the Vikings were 12 of 19 on third-down conversions. They ran up 28 first downs to nine for the Saints, who were 1-for-9 on third down.

That was the work of the defense, led by linemen Keith Millard and Chris Doleman, that had four interceptions for the game and the Saints turned the ball over six times.

Millard created havoc, forcing Pro Bowl guard Brad Edelman into three holding calls and Millard, Chris Doleman and Doug Martin were constantly on top of Hebert.

Still, it might have been a different story had it not been for the way the first half ended.

Morten Andersen's 40-yard field goal with 3:06 left in the half cut it to 24-10 for the Saints, who had come back from deficits of 21 and nine points in their last two regular-season games.

But as the two teams were trotting off the field after Darrin Nelson, who carried 17 times for 73 yards and raced 37 yards to the 1 with a short pass to set up a touchdown, had been stopped on a screen pass at the 44, the officials called the teams back.

It turned out that the Saints had 12 men on the field and the Vikings had one last shot.

Wilson, who had been knocked groggy and replaced by Kramer for two plays, lofted the ball high to the end zone where four Saints and three Vikings leaped for the ball. Jones, a second-year wide receiver with one of the best set of hands in football, tipped the ball with one hand, then grabbed it again and fell into the end zone.

The second half was simply an exercise in time consumption as Minnesota ran its interception total to three with one off Dave Wilson, who replaced Hebert, who had thrown two in the first half.

Kramer, meanwhile, returned and ran a controlled game, using Darrin Nelson's running and well-timed short passes to control the clock.

'Canes Gain Top Ranking

For the first time in the 52-year history of The Associated Press college football poll, two teams from the same state — Miami and Florida State — have finished the season 1-2.

The Miami Hurricanes, the nation's only 12-0 team, were a unanimous choice for the national championship Sunday following a 20-14 victory over No. 1-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl.

The Hurricanes, who had been ranked No. 2, were No. 1 on all 57 ballots and received a perfect score of 1,140 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Florida State, 11-1, which defeated Nebraska 31-28 in the Fiesta Bowl, moved up from third place to second with 1,071 points.

The Seminoles' only loss was to Miami 26-25 on Oct. 3 when a two-point conversion pass in the final minute failed.

Oilers Triumph Over Seahawks

HOUSTON (AP) — Tony Zendejas' third field goal, a 42-yarder in overtime, gave the Houston Oilers a 23-20 victory over Seattle in the AFC wildcard game Sunday.

Zendejas had first-half field goals of 47 and 49 yards, but he missed a 52-yarder late in the second quarter and failed to convert a 29-yarder with 1:47 left in regulation. That gave Seattle a final possession, and the Seahawks capitalized when Dave Krieg connected with Steve Largent for the second time in the game to tie the score 20-20 with 26 seconds to play.

Zendejas was convinced he would not wind up the joker in the AFC wildcard game.

"I was grateful I got a second chance," Zendejas said after his 42-yard field goal gave Houston a 23-20 overtime victory over Seattle on Sunday. "I felt I let the whole team down."

All year long, he was perfect on field goals inside the 30-yard line, trying eight and hitting eight. When he lined up Sunday with 1:47 left in the fourth quarter, he faced a 29-yard chip shot that would give the Oilers a 10-point cushion.

But the kick slammed off the left upright and fell back to the turf. Given a last chance, Seattle moved 80 yards in 10 plays to tie the game at 20-20 and force overtime.

The Houston defense forced Seattle to punt in the extra period and quarterback Warren Moon engineered a 61-yard drive to give Zendejas a second chance.

"I was just thankful that I had another opportunity," Zendejas said. "I was pretty sure I could make it. I was kind of nervous, but you're nervous all the time."

Houston Coach Jerry Glanville was on his knees along the sideline as Zendejas lined up. Moon, so drained he doubted whether he could return to the field, huddled close to fullback

Injured Pack Rolls By Cornell

By The Associated Press

Injuries to Wolfpack centers Charles Shackelford and Avie Lester kept them out of the lineup against Cornell, but Senior guard Vinny Del Negro filled in from the outside with a season-high 27 points to pace North Carolina State to a victory.

"We have the only program in the country where your starting center (Shackelford) can play great in Hawaii and then get hurt on the plane coming home," North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano said. "He apparently slept on his hand in such a manner that he injured a nerve in his elbow."

Lester, the backup center, was bruised in a moped accident in Hawaii. But the Wolfpack still managed to come away with a 95-72 victory over Cornell Sunday, climbing to 7-2 for the season.

Cornell took a 7-2 early lead behind a steal and dunk by Wolfgang Florin before Del Negro sparked a 17-4 Wolfpack run with a pair of field goals and a 3-point basket.

The Wolfpack, 7-2, shot 60 percent in the first half, taking a 53-31 halftime advantage. Cornell, 4-3, never threatened in the second half.

"We knew that if we were to have a chance in the game, we'd have to keep them off the offensive glass," Cornell Coach Mike Dement said. "I was disappointed in the way we constantly gave up layups and offensive rebound baskets. Obviously, N.C. State is a Top 20 team. We won't play anyone with this size and speed in the Ivy League."

Rodney Monroe had 15 points, Chris Corchiani had 11 and Brian Howard and Brian D'Amico 10 each for N.C. State, which outrebounded Cornell 33-22.

Greg Gilda came off the bench to score 17 points for Cornell while James Paul had 13 and Mike Millane 12.

Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano said his team played well, especially since centers Charles Shackelford and Avie Lester could not play.

"We have the only program in the country where your starting center can play great in Hawaii and then get hurt on the plane coming home. He apparently slept on his hand in such a manner that he injured a nerve in his elbow," Valvano said.

Lester, the backup center, was bruised in a moped accident in Hawaii.

Arizona Loses First, Cats Move To No. 1

By JIM O'CONNELL

Kentucky returned to the top of The Associated Press college basketball poll today as Arizona, which had held the position for the past two weeks, dropped to No. 3 following its first loss of the season to unranked New Mexico, 61-59.

Kentucky, 9-0, had been No. 1 for two weeks before being replaced by Arizona, 12-1. Arizona lost at New Mexico 61-59 Saturday night to end its first-ever run in the No. 1 spot.

Arizona had nine first-place votes and 1,061 points, 27 more than North Carolina, 9-1, which remained fourth. Wyoming, Temple and Syracuse also occupied the same spots as last week.

Blazers Getting Closer, But Not Yet Close Enough

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers insist that they genuinely feel threatened by the Portland Trail Blazers.

The Blazers claim they're inching closer to the defending NBA champs in the Pacific Division.

But when the two tangled Sunday night, the result was familiar: a Lakers blowout and the 23rd Los Angeles victory in the last 27 games between the two teams.

"We were so bad. We really stunk up the joint," Portland's Clyde Drexler said after Los Angeles won 98-81, their 10th straight victory.

Portland's shooting was as icy as the weather outside Memorial Coliseum. The Blazers' .284 field goal percentage was an all-time franchise low and the worst in the league this season. Their 27 field goals also was a team record-low.

The only other NBA game Sunday night was no prettier. Atlanta beat the visiting Los Angeles Clippers 121-84.

Lakers Coach Pat Riley pointed to the absence of Portland center Steve Johnson and forward Kiki Vandeweghe, especially Johnson, whose post-up offensive game was sorely missed.

"I think this game should tell Portland people how important it is to have a player like Johnson," Riley said.

Johnson missed the game because of bone spurs on his feet, an ailment that team doctor Bob Cook says may bother him the rest of the season. Vandeweghe is out with a sore back.

Portland beat the Lakers in Los Angeles a month ago. But without Johnson and Vandeweghe, the Blazers didn't have enough firepower to challenge the Lakers' defense.

"We got them tired," Magic Johnson said. "That's what we wanted because they could only play so many guys."

Byron Scott had his third straight big offensive game for the Lakers with 31 points, most of them from long range. He had a career-high 37 in his previous game and scored 26 the time before that.

"Magic's created a lot of my shots with his passes," Scott said. "But he's the one doing the shooting," Johnson said. "We read each other so well."

Johnson and Scott may have been satisfied with the victory, but Riley wasn't.

"I'm still confident we can win it all but the thing that bothers me is that from the efficiency standpoint, we are down from last year but our record is better," he said. "We're not concentrating. We're not sustaining things."

But Johnson said the players know they're improving.

"I don't know what it takes to please him (Riley). ...He always wants more but it takes time to get more. We're playing better than we were 10 games ago. We have a way to go but at least it's getting better," Johnson said.

The Lakers took control of the contest in the second quarter, boosted the lead to 25 in the third period, then withstood a minor Portland rally that cut the lead to 15 in the final quarter.

The loss snapped Portland's 11-game homecourt winning streak. The Blazers' 81 points was their lowest total of the season.

"We just never got anything going," Portland Coach Mike Schuler said.

Drexler scored 24 for Portland, but only nine in the last three quarters. Maurice Lucas added 15 for the Blazers and got into minor altercations with Scott and Johnson during the game.

"He was trying to intimidate me and I told him it wouldn't work," Johnson said. "He told me what he was going to do to me and I said 'Come on. I'm right here.'"

Lucas said it was nothing personal. "I was just trying to inject some fire in my teammates," he said. "It worked for four or five minutes."

Hawks 121, Clippers 84
Atlanta crushed the Clippers for its fifth straight victory, with Dominique Wilkins scoring all of his 26 points and Doc Rivers passing for all of his 15 assists as the Hawks grabbed a 74-40 half-time lead.

Wilkins scored 14 points in the first quarter, including eight in a row during a 12-0 streak that put the Hawks ahead 24-9 with 5:42 left in the period. Randy Wittman scored 12 of his 18 points in the opening period, which ended with the Hawks ahead 42-22.

Los Angeles, which has lost six straight, was led by Mike Woodson and Quintin Dailey with 14 points apiece.

Atlanta's biggest lead was 106-63 in the fourth period.

Miami Named Top Team ...

It was Miami's second national championship. The other one came in 1983 under coach Howard Schnellenberger.

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden was delighted with a second-place finish, the Seminoles' highest ever.

"This year we changed our goals for the first time ever," he said. "Everybody else's goal is to win the national championship. Our goal was to win the state championship. I felt if we did that, it would put us in the running for the national championship."

Oklahoma, 11-1, which had been No. 1 in 14 of the previous 15 polls this season, slipped to third place with 1,008 points. The Sooners were the preseason choice to win the national championship. They also finished third last year after winning their sixth national championship in 1985.

Syracuse, 11-0-1, was No. 4 prior to its 16-16 Sugar Bowl standoff with Auburn and finished fourth with 966 points.

Late Kick Lifts Oilers ...

Alonzo Highsmith along the Oilers bench. He chose not to look.

"From where I was, it was going close to the middle," Zendejas said.

"I was trying to decide whether or not to watch," Glanville said. "I watched. I was watching the blocking. I was looking at our guards and center to see if there was any penetration."

"I couldn't even watch," Moon said. "I just grabbed Alonzo and listened for the crowd reaction and hugged him."

The victory advanced the Oilers to the second-round of the NFL playoffs against Denver on Sunday.

Houston got a break on its winning drive when, on first down from the Oilers 37, Warren Moon appeared to have thrown an interception that was tipped by Seattle's Jeff Bryant and snagged near the ground by linebacker Freddie Young. Officials, however, ruled the ball was trapped and later upheld the call on instant replay.

Seattle won the toss and took the kickoff, but had to punt. Houston took over at its 15. Moon, who passed for 273 yards, completed passes of 11 yards to Alonzo Highsmith and Ray Wallace prior to the controversial call. Moon then hit a 15-yarder to Drew Hill to the Seattle 41, and Mike Rozier had runs of 9, 2 and 7 yards to the Seattle 23.

Two plays and a 5-yard penalty against Houston put the Oilers at the 24, and Zendejas kicked the winning field goal with 6:55 left in overtime.

Krieg threw his second touchdown pass of the game to Largent with 26 seconds left, capping an 88-yard drive that began after Zendejas was wide left on the 29-yarder. Prior to the miss, Zendejas was 8-of-8 inside the 30.

Krieg also had passes of 10 and 24 yards to Largent in the drive, and he hit Ray Butler with a 32-yarder to the Houston 12 with 31 seconds left to set up the tying touchdown.

Moon hit Willie Drewrey with a 29-yard touchdown pass that put Houston ahead with 2:34 to go. Drewrey, a third-year player, ran under Moon's third-down pass in the end zone, breaking a 13-13 tie with his first NFL touchdown.

The Seahawks, playing without injured running back Curt Warner, the AFC's No. 2 rusher, reached Houston's 15- and 23-yard lines but had to settle for field goals of 33 yards in the second quarter and 41 yards in the third by Norm Johnson. Seattle was held to 29 yards rushing for the game.

goal was a disappointment at the time, but he believed the Oilers defense could hold the Seahawks. It didn't.

Seattle marched 80 yards in 10 plays, with Dave Krieg hitting Steve Largent with the 12-yard scoring pass with 26 seconds left.

"We were fortunate to be in a position to tie the game," Largent said. "The guy missed a field goal that would have put us out of it. I know he was feeling a lot of pressure before that last kick, but they deserved to win."

Seattle won the coin toss to get the first shot in overtime.

"Winning the coin toss was a big break for us but we couldn't move the ball," Krieg said.

"We started out in overtime trying to take what the defense gave us," Seattle Coach Chuck Knox said. "We were right back in it. We got the ball and couldn't do anything with it. And they got it and drove down the field with it."

"We nickel-and-dimed them," Moon said, describing the final drive. "We weren't going to do anything foolish. We didn't get conservative, but we moved the ball downfield and the rest was up to Tony."

"I knew it was just a matter of making the plays."

"They drove the ball down the field on us when they had to," Largent said.

Except for the first time they had the ball in the game and the last possession in regulation, the Seahawks struggled on offense, gaining just 29 yards rushing without the injured Curt Warner, the AFC's No. 2 runner.

"They brought a lot of people up on the line of scrimmage and made it difficult to run the ball," Krieg said. "We had some success throwing the ball but unfortunately we couldn't move it the last time we got it."

"Three points — that was the difference in the game," Knox said. "We were right there at the end, forced overtime, won the toss, but had to punt it. We couldn't control the ball."

"There's always pressure, even when you miss before," Zendejas said. "You just concentrate on what you have to do. I've been playing this game long enough to know you're going to miss some field goals."

"My hat's off to the Oilers," Largent said. "They played well. Their offense moved up and down the field and their defense did a good job of stopping us. It's real disappointing. The Oilers deserved to win. But it's always a bitter taste in your mouth to end your season."

Loughery Is Axed, Unseld Takes Over

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Kevin Loughery, who coached the Washington Bullets to an 8-19 start this season, was fired Sunday and replaced by assistant coach Wes Unseld.

Unseld, a five-time All-Star and 1969 NBA Most Valuable Player, will take over coaching responsibilities starting with practice Monday, the team said in a statement.

"It was personally one of the hardest decisions I have had to make in my years in pro sports," owner Abe Pollin said. "Kevin is one of my favorite people, but with the team playing as it is, a move had to be made."

The Bullets lost their fifth consecutive game Saturday night, falling 111-100 to the Houston Rockets. Following the game, Pollin denied planning any major changes.

"I'm not thinking about changes. I'm trying to figure out what's wrong," Pollin said.

"I think Wes will do a good job," Loughery said Sunday. "He's intelligent, he knows the game and he gets along with people. That's really all you can ask of a coach."

The Bullets, 42-40 last season in Loughery's second year with the team, lost eight of their first 10 games and already have suffered through three losing streaks of four or more games this season.

"I don't think it's too late for us to still be competitive," Unseld said. "Whether we have enough talent to win consistently is still open to question, but we've at least got to go out and play up to our potential."

Prior to the start of the season, the Bullets signed former NBA scoring champion Bernard King to take some of the scoring load off of Moses Malone and Jeff Malone. King has averaged more than 18 points, but none of the three is been shooting better than 49 percent this season.

The Bullets have also been among the worst shooting teams in the league since the beginning of the season, with a 45.3 percent average going into the Houston game.

Unseld, whose affiliation with the Bullets started in 1968 as a first-round pick out of the University of Louisville, played 13 years before becoming a team vice president in 1981. He was named assistant coach prior to the start of this season, the team said.

Unseld, who was named both Rookie-of-the-Year and Most Valuable Player in his first NBA season, helped the Bullets to 12 consecutive playoff appearances.

Loughery, 341-503 as an NBA coach, previously coached the New York-New Jersey Nets, Philadelphia, Atlanta and Chicago in the NBA. He was the coach of the Nets for three years in the American Basketball Association before moving with them to the NBA in 1976.

Loughery coached the Nets to the ABA title in 1974.

Mike Rozier reversed field and scored on a diving 1-yard touchdown plunge, and Zendejas kicked two field goals to give the Oilers a 13-10 halftime lead.

Seattle's Melvin Jenkins returned an interception 28 yards to set up a 20-yard touchdown pass from Krieg to Largent on the game's first series, and Johnson kicked a 33-yard second-quarter field goal following a 54-yard punt return by Bobby Joe Edmonds.

Johnson's second field goal tied the score with 8:23 to go in the third quarter, but Moon put the Oilers back on top with the touchdown pass to Drewrey.

Moon said Zendejas' missed field

Lobos Hand Arizona First Loss

By The Associated Press
No time like the present for a loss, Arizona Coach Lute Olson figured. And no place like "The Pit."
"It was going to happen eventually," Olson said.
Unranked New Mexico, which calls "The Pit" in Albuquerque home, got off to a 25-9 lead before 18,100 frantic, red-clad fans and beat Arizona 61-59 Saturday night, ending the top-ranked Wildcats' 12-game winning streak.
"I know they have played all over the world," Lobos Coach Gary Colson said of Arizona, "but I have to think the environment had something to do with their shooting."
In other games involving Top Ten teams, it was No. 2 Kentucky 84, Georgia 77; No. 3 Pittsburgh 80, No. 8 Florida 68; No. 4 North Carolina 80, UCLA 73; No. 5 Wyoming 94, Stephen F. Austin 55, and No. 7 Syracuse 123, Siena 72. In the Second Ten, it was No. 15 Nevada-Las Vegas 69, New Mexico State 64; No. 16 Iowa State 95, South Dakota 67, and No. 18 Georgetown 82, Miami, Fla. 78.
The loss dropped Arizona to No. 3 in the latest Associated Press poll, behind Kentucky and Pittsburgh. North Carolina, Wyoming, Temple, Syracuse, Oklahoma, Duke and Purdue rounded out the Top Ten.
Michigan is 11th in the new poll, followed by Indiana, Nevada-Las Vegas, Georgetown, Florida, Iowa, Iowa State, Kansas, Illinois and St. John's.

Top Ten
New Mexico 61, No. 1 Arizona 59
"Anyone who thinks you can go out and be undefeated is ridiculous beyond the point of talking about it," Olson said.
Arizona closed to 37-30 at halftime, but the Lobos never trailed in the game. Jimmy Rogers had 15 points and Darrell McGee 13 for the Lobos, 12-3, who play host to Wyoming on Saturday.
Sean Elliott, who had 27 points, twice got Arizona within a basket in the final five minutes, but New Mexico held on for its eighth straight victory.
The Lobos also got 10 points and 10 rebounds from 7-foot center Rob Loeffel.
No. 2 Kentucky 84, Georgia 77
Kentucky scored 12 consecutive points, six by Ed Davender, to erase a 51-48 Georgia lead with 16:04 to play, and the Wildcats went on to raise their record to 9-0 overall and 2-0 in the Southeastern Conference. Davender wound up with 22 points.
Georgia fell to 8-5 in losing its conference opener.
Georgia made 56 percent of its shots in the first half but just 11 of 33 in the second half after Kentucky switched to a 3-2 zone defense.
No. 3 Pitt 80, No. 8 Florida 68
Pittsburgh outscored Florida 16-4 to erase a five-point Florida lead in the first half and went on to lead by as many as 21 points in a rout of the Gators.
Charles Smith scored 30 points and Jerome Lane had 21 rebounds for the Panthers, 9-0, who held Florida's high-scoring center, Dwayne Schintzius, to just two points and five rebounds.

Florida, 8-3, got no closer than eight points in the final 15 minutes.
No. 4 N. Carolina 80, UCLA 73
J.R. Reid scored 25 points for North Carolina and Ranzino Smith scored five straight points as the Tar Heels broke away from a 69-69 tie with 3:27 left. North Carolina had led 53-43 before UCLA rallied for the tie behind David Immel, who had 25 points.
Smith wound up with 18 points for the Tar Heels, 9-1. UCLA fell to 4-7.
No. 5 Wyoming 94, Stephen F. Austin 55
Fennis Dembo scored 19 points as Wyoming routed Stephen F. Austin, outrebounding the Lumberjacks 51-23. Wyoming shot 57 percent for the game to 30 percent for Stephen F. Austin.
Wyoming, 11-0, led 45-18 at te half, limiting the Lumberjacks to fewer first-half points of any Wyoming opponent so far this season.
No. 7 Syracuse 123, Siena 72
Syracuse set a Carrier Dome scoring record in beating Siena. Rony Seikaly had 30 points, a season high, and Derrick Coleman had 21 as Syracuse, 10-2, won its eighth in a row.
The old Carrier Dome record was 111 points that Syracuse scored against South Florida last Dec. 4. The school record is 144 against Siena in 1979.

Second Ten
No. 15 UNLV 69, New Mexico St. 64
Nevada-Las Vegas held New Mexico State to just two field goals over the final 5:44 to pull away from a 55-55 tie and beat the Aggies. New Mexico State pulled into the tie when Steve McGlothlin picked up a loose ball and hit a layup.
Clint Rossum scored six of the Rebels' final 14 points, giving him 18 for the game. Gerald Paddio had 19 for UNLV, 10-0.
No. 16 Iowa St. 95, S. Dakota 67
Lafester Rhodes had 26 points, giving Iowa State its 11th victory sooner than any other Iowa State team in history. The Cyclones are 11-2.
Iowa State led by as many as 18 points in the first half, but the Cyclones scored just eight points in the first 8:30 of the second half. Iowa State needed a 12-3 run to open a 72-50 lead with 7:25 left.
No. 18 Georgetown 82, Miami 78
Seven points down in the second half, Georgetown rallied behind Mark Tillmon to beat Miami. Tillmon scored 24 points, including a 3-pointer that put Georgetown ahead with five minutes left.
Tito Horoford put the Hurricanes ahead 69-64. Then Georgetown scored 12 straight points over the next five minutes to go ahead 76-69.
Georgetown is 9-1.

Graham Team Wins Tourney

Doug and Chris Graham of Wilson took first place in the New Year's Day Mixed Doubles tournament held this weekend at the River Birch Tennis Center.
The Grahams, one of 18 teams in the tournament, defeated Rick Stang of Greenville and Paula Cox of Wilson in the finals.
Jim and Karen Akers of Greenville took fourth place, followed by Jack Mitchell and Dolly Brantley of Washington in fourth; Doug and Cheri Getsinger of Greenville in fifth and Al King and Frances Cain of Greenville in sixth.

Hurricanes Top Final DR Poll

The University of Miami's Hurricanes, who defeated Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl Friday night are the champions of the Daily Reflector Computer Performance Rankings for 1987.
The Hurricanes, who went 12-0 this season, completed the season with a total of 4,726 points on the computer rankings.
The rankings rate teams on the basis of their success against the strength of their schedules. Points are awarded for each victory a team gains during the year. Then, each time a team it has beaten wins, additional points are awarded. On the third level of competition, further points are awarded when a victim's victim wins.
The Hurricanes went into the bowls with first place in the standings, and the number two team then, Florida State, also came through win a win over Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl to hold to second.
The Seminoles, whose only loss was by one point to Miami, finished with an 11-1 record and 4,202 points to take second place in the final rankings.
Louisiana State, which downed South Carolina in the Gator Bowl, ended up 10-1-1 and took third place with 3,552 points.
Syracuse, which tied Auburn in the Sugar Bowl, ended up with an 11-0-1 record and gained fourth place in the final standings with 3,450 points.
Michigan State, a winner over Southern California in the Rose Bowl, finished 9-2-1 and took fifth place in the standings with 3,436 points.

The second five included Texas A&M, Nebraska, Notre Dame, UCLA and Auburn, in that order.
The second ten were Clemson, Alabama, Oklahoma, Pittsburgh, Georgia, Iowa, Eastern Michigan, Tennessee, Southern California and Penn State, respectively.
This year's final top 20, along with the standings of Atlantic Coast Conference teams, East Carolina, and the Pirate opponents:

- Miami (12-0).....4,726
 - Florida State (11-1).....4,202
 - Louisiana State (10-1-1).....3,552
 - Syracuse (11-0-1).....3,450

- Others: 24 South Carolina 2,440; 30 Virginia 2,016; 38 Southern Mississippi 1,480; 41 Maryland 1,428; 43 Wake Forest 1,404; 44 West Virginia 1,400; 53 N.C. State 1,280; 63 Illinois 1,094; 70 Temple 1,014; 71 North Carolina 1,006; 74 East Carolina 936; 76 Duke 850; 87 Cincinnati 642; 94 Virginia Tech 348; 97 Georgia Tech 192.

ACC Is Gearing Up ...

coach Bob Wade earned his first regular-season victory against a conference foe with a 93-76 victory over Wake Forest. North Carolina held on to defeat UCLA 80-73, Georgia Tech defeated George Washington 93-76, and Villanova downed Virginia 63-54 in Pennsylvania.
Wade didn't mention the Terrapins' losing streak when he talked to his players about their game against Wake Forest. But the players knew what he meant and what they had to do.
"Coach Wade never mentioned it before the game," said Derrick Lewis, who led Maryland to its 93-76 victory over the Demon Deacons with 21 points in Saturday's game at College Park, Md. "He just emphasized that it was our first ACC game of the season and how important it was for us to get off to a good start."
"But among the players, we wanted to win it for him — and for ourselves. It's good to get the first win out of the way early. It takes the pressure off our back. Hopefully, we'll be more relaxed now."
Sam Ivy scored 18 points and David Carlyle added 17 for Wake Forest, 4-6. Cal Boyd had 14 points and Ralph Kitley had 10.
"Their (Maryland's) inside game is really improved," Carlyle said. They've got bigger guys. They're stronger, more physical. They are much tougher inside."
In the game against Cornell, the Wolfpack shot 60 percent in the first half, taking a 53-31 halftime advantage. Cornell, 4-3, never threatened in the second half.
Rodney Monroe had 15 points, Chris Corchiani had 11 and Brian Howard and Brian D'Amico 10 each as N.C. State improved to 7-2.

Greg Gilda came off the bench to score 17 points for Cornell, while James Paul had 13 and Mike Millane 12.
The fourth-ranked Tar Heels, 9-1, needed a late push in the final 3 1/2 minutes to break away with an 80-73 victory over UCLA at Pauley Pavilion in Los Angeles. Last year, the Tar Heels lost 89-84 to the Bruins.
"We knew what to expect today," said the Tar Heel's Jeff Lebo. "UCLA always has quick, athletic players who come at you with their pressure defense and never back off."
"But we learned our lesson last year. We weren't prepared to play and got our butts kicked pretty good. It was a long plane flight home, and we didn't want to have to make it again knowing we didn't give 100 percent."
Smith ended the game with 18 points, while teammate J.R. Reid scored 25 to lead the Tar Heels.

Junior forward Steve Bucknall had 13 points.
For the Bruins, Kelvin Butler had 12 points and Charles Roschelin had 10.
Tom Hammonds scored 27 points, including 11 consecutive points in a streak where Georgia Tech built a 63-28 lead, to lead the Yellow Jackets to an 86-57 victory over George Washington.

NBC TV Plans To Return 'Molly Dodd' To Schedule

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It is a freezing cold night on the Manhattan street, and Blair Brown, playing Molly Dodd, comes out of the apartment building without a coat.

James Greene, playing Davey the doorman, notices the stunned look on her face. He drapes his coat around her shoulders and puts her in a taxi-cab.

A small crowd has gathered on the street to watch. They murmur to each other and nod approval when they're told that the filming is for new episodes of "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd."

The show's 13-week run last summer was a ratings success, and even though NBC has always said the series would be back midseason, fans were beginning to wonder where it was.

"Molly" doesn't have a time period yet, but NBC plans to put it back on the air and hope that the show's loyal following will return to it despite the confusing hiatus. The network had talked about resuming the show in mid-January but now has no firm date.

"The first day back, they start saying those words, and it's magic to me," said the show's creator, Jay Tarses. "It's like they were never gone. It fits 'em like gloves. It's like we didn't even take a break. We're back and it's so terrific."

"Molly" was Tarses' first show after he and former partner Tom Patchett parted following "Buffalo Bill," a brilliant comedy starring Dabney Coleman that was ultimately judged too inaccessible to a mass audience. Coleman now stars in Tarses' other series, "The 'Slap' Maxwell Story" on ABC.

Tarses' heart still belongs to "Molly," though.

"I think 'Molly' is such an elusive show," said Tarses. "I think it's really hard to capture what it is in words. It's a lot of things to a lot of people. I just think it's something very special and personal to me. I care about it desperately."

Brown has been doing movies and miniseries during the hiatus — "Hands of a Stranger" for NBC and a theatrical film that hasn't been released yet, "Stealing Home," with Jody Foster and Mark Harmon. After months in other roles, she had to become Molly again.

"We did the first shot and all looked at each other like, 'Well, where have we been?'" said Brown. "It does feel like sort of later that same day."

"What you really have to get back to is, do what you like to do, because that's all we ever did in the first 13. We had to get that same kind of cavalier spirit back this year — we're doing this in the dark and no one's ever going to see it."

In the new episodes, Molly gets some new men in her life and a job in a bookstore.

"She does not become a publishing magnate," said Brown. "That is what's different about Molly. On most shows about women, she would end up the head of a publishing company. But she just works in a bookstore."

"It's going to open up a little bit more," said Tarses. "There's going to be more people. There's going to be more men in her life. There's going to be a lot more family kind of crises. It's just going to be more of the same. We're not ready to change it yet. If it ain't broke, you know, don't fix it, right?"

Reagan Joins In Dedicating Cultural Center In Honor Of Comic Bob Hope

By JUDITH MICHAELSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

PALM DESERT, Calif. — "Naming a cultural center for me," Bob Hope said with the kind of self-deprecating wit that makes troops stand up and cheer, "is like naming a monastery for Gary Hart."

At his side, toward the close of dedication ceremonies for the new Bob Hope Cultural Center here Saturday night, President Reagan laughed. After all, Hope had let Reagan off easy, thanking the president for saying "nice things about me — even if I'm not Russian."

What the president said about the 84-year-old entertainer was that Hope "has given us the most precious gift of all — the gift of laughter."

Presenting the first "America's Hope Award" to the comedian, who recently returned from a Christmas-cheer gig for U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf, Reagan noted that as "commander-in-chief I have a special place in my heart, as do all Americans," for all that Hope has done "to entertain our servicemen and women overseas, especially in times of conflict and crisis."

Hope's name, Reagan added, is "a description of his life, and where there is life, there is Hope."

In subsequent years, the Hope Award will be presented annually by Cultural Center officials to "outstanding individuals who exemplify the spirit of America."

In his remarks, Hope suggested to Reagan that "after you finish your term (next year) you might want to come here and do a stage run of 'King's Row.'" (The 1941 movie had been one of actor Ronald Reagan's better ones.)

Hope also targeted his desert neighbor, former President Ford, who was seated next to the presidential box in the plush, mauve-colored McCallum Theatre for the Performing Arts. The 1,166-seat theater is the main feature of the Cultural Center at present.

Alluding to Ford's controversial pardon of former President Nixon in 1974, Hope quipped: "I bumped into President Gerald Ford this afternoon and I said, 'Pardon me.' And he said, 'I don't do that anymore.'"

Hope's audience laughed and applauded all at once. Ford appeared to enjoy the joke and blushed a little.

Despite some no-shows, which included Kirk Douglas, Mary Martin and George C. Scott, who had been touted as celebrity guests, everyone at Saturday's event clearly was in good spirits. Among those in attendance were California Gov. George Deukmejian, Sens. Alan Cranston and Pete Wilson and a batch of Reagan administration officials, including White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker and Charles Z. Wick, director of the United States Information Agency.

With tickets ranging from $2,500 to $10,000 a pair, another $2 million was raised for the $20 million Cultural Center, which is blessed with a $5 million endowment.

In addition, the sand-colored, concrete Cultural Center, which is accented in mauve and set off by a three-tiered fountain, lots of glass and row upon row of palm trees, got the kind of commercial that all the money in the desert couldn't buy: a TV special. The entertainment portion of the evening — "America's Tribute to Bob Hope" — was taped, and will air on NBC Feb. 6.

Here, after all, in the middle of the tribute was composer Andrew Lloyd Webber ("Evita," "Cats"), unveiling for television several numbers from his latest musical, "Phantom of the Opera," and also giving a plug to the Cultural Center.

"What a space!" he exulted. Van Cliburn, touted by executive producer Greg Willenborg as performing for the first time on television in more than a decade (despite all the coverage the pianist received last month during the Reagan-Gorbachev summit), played the National Anthem and about a four-minute portion of the Schumann-Liszt piece "Widmung," which he had also played at the White House in December for the two world leaders.

The 53-year-old pianist, a national hero 30 years ago after becoming the first American to win the prestigious Tchaikovsky competition, also acted as a kind of lead-in master of ceremonies, introducing "our current head of state and beloved first lady...."

Looking elegant and fit, Nancy Reagan wore red satin with a gold and diamond necklace.

"Without the performing arts," Cliburn said, not using a TelePromp-ter as virtually everyone else did,

"we would all truly lack an important spiritual dimension to our daily living. After all, music and beauty, dance, drama and poetry ... represent the deepest longings of the human soul."

Lucille Ball, wearing a shimmering, aquamarine gown with a thigh-high slit that sent audience members into admiring whispers about the great shape of her legs, got humor back on track by tweaking Hope about his extensive desert property.

"Dynasty's" John Forsythe served as the second master of ceremonies, introducing Diahann Carroll and Vic Damone, who held hands tightly while singing a medley of romantic musical comedy numbers.

Damone and Carroll, who were married a year ago Jan. 3 in Atlantic City, said at a brief press conference in the Gerald R. Ford Founders Room after the performance that they would have gone to the Persian Gulf with Hope this year had Damone not developed kidney stones.

Carroll noted that Hope played an important role in her career and her life about 10 years ago following the death of her husband, Robert De Leon, the managing editor of Jet magazine, in an automobile accident. "It was a very painful time for me," Carroll said. "I was in shock, I was down, I didn't want to do anything."

Hope helped her get back to work, she said. Saturday's dedication ceremonies were hosted by Ambassador and Mrs. Walter H. Annenberg, at whose desert estate the Reagans spent the New Year's holiday.

Willenborg, who also is the Cultural Center's fund-raising director, said the facility was named for Hope because he is "an American institution" and because he has long been a resident of the Coachella Valley.

Cultural Center officials said the site already is booked until 1990, with the exception of 30 days in 1988. Hope said he will do a concert performance here in February.

New Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS is developing a new comedy series, "Bargains," based on a play by Jack Heifner that chronicles the lives of three department store saleswomen in a small Texas town.

Heifner also wrote the play "Vanities" and will write the pilot for the series, according to his publicist.

"Bargains" has yet to officially premiere on the stage. A producer spotted it when it was getting a tryout at the New Dramatists theater lab.

Fess Parker Says He Considered Politics

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor-turned businessman Fess Parker, remembered best as television's coonskin-clad woodsman Davy Crockett, has considered entering a new frontier: politics.

Family obligations, however, kept Parker from challenging Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., last year, the 63-year-old actor said in an interview published in this week's People magazine.

"I thought I could win," said Parker, a conservative. "But I didn't want to be away from my family more than I was."

Walt Disney chose Parker for a 1954 television special on Crockett, the woodsman and hero of the Alamo. Parker re-created the role in a subsequent TV series.

Parker, who made his last film in 1972, cashed in on his fame, earning millions on profits from merchandising of coonskin caps and Old Betsy toy rifles. With that money he turned to full-time real-estate development in California and Kentucky.

Last July, he opened his $50 million Fess Parker Red Lion Resort Hotel in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Jan. 5

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Help your kin to gain their wishes this morning, but later try to improve your own talents. Drive carefully, and be sure your brakes work well. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Clear up the loose ends connected with your work and you can make greater progress. Use your sense of humor to relieve tensions at home. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Plan a new budget, but before implementing it, talk over your plans with an expert. Take care of any neighborhood responsibilities. MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Take any treatments that can improve your health and appearance. Don't be extravagant in the spending of money tonight. LEO (July 22 to August 21): Handle all your important private matters before making plans to get together with friends. A new acquaintance can be very helpful to you. VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't be so casual about achieving your goals—go after them with a vengeance. Your friends can give you good advice if you ask for it. LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Get your duties finished up early today so you'll have plenty of time to take care of some important personal affairs which have been put off. SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Try to gain the favor of a superior who can further your career interests. Be sure to take care of any important credit matters. SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be sure you're armed with the proper information before you begin any new activities. Rely on common sense, not on hunches. CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Study the promises you have made, and either carry through with them or make some revisions which will make them more practical. AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): If a friend asks for your support, give it willingly if the plan is feasible. Study civic matters carefully so you won't end up looking foolish. PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Be efficient, and use more patience with co-workers. This will make everyone happy and more cooperative. Get plenty of rest. (c)1987, The McNaught Syndicate Inc.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠KJ95 ♥AQ63 ♦K103 ♣76. The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♣ Dbl Pass 1 ♣ Pass? What action do you take? A.—You have a minimum takeout double. While you have excellent support for partner's spades, it is no more than he expects. Since his hand is limited to about 9 points, you have no game, so tell him that you are near the bottom of your range by passing. Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠KQ83 ♥AQ9 ♦AK87 ♣76. The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♣ Dbl Pass 1 ♣ Pass? What do you bid now? A.—You have a strong hand with fine support for partner's suit, and the fact that your high cards lie behind the opening bidder adds to its potential. However, you don't have nearly enough to bid game. Invite by jumping to three spades. If partner has a smattering of cards, he should go on. Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠KQ95 ♥3 ♦832 ♣Q10952. The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 ♥ Dbl 4 ♥? What action do you take? A.—Not only do you have little to contribute to the defense, your length in the black suits detracts from partner's defensive capabilities. Offensively, however, you have a potentially fine hand because of a likely double fit. Bid four spades, confident that partner has at least four cards in the suit. Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠AQ6 ♥AJ5 ♦A10 ♣J9652. The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 NT Pass 2 NT Pass? What action do you take? A.—With only 16 points in high cards, it might seem that you should gracefully decline partner's invitation. However, your three aces, five-card suit and intermediates enhance the value of your hand, so we would carry on to three no trump. Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠A83 ♥K ♦KQ63 ♣QJ542. Partner opens the bidding with three hearts. What action do you take? A.—According to the Rule of 2 and 3, partner should have seven tricks for his bid. You are delivering three plus (your king of hearts is worth a full trick.) Raise to four hearts. Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠873 ♥95 ♦AQ10542 ♣94. Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond? A.—At first sight it might seem that, with 6 points, you should be happy to pass. However, your hand has an excellent chance of producing five or six tricks, which is more than many 10-point holdings would yield. We would gamble out three no trump. U.S.-Canada Pact Sets Off Protest

OTTAWA (AP) — Celebrations and protests at assorted border points between Canada and United States marked the weekend signing of a historic trade pact by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and President Reagan.

In Windsor, Ontario, Sunday traffic was brought to a halt on the Ambassador Bridge by about 900 Canadians protesting the free trade agreement.

"We're looking at losing a lot of employment here in Windsor," said Bernie Molche, one of the marchers Saturday on the bridge between Windsor and Detroit. "I don't believe that, really, it's going to benefit anybody."

The agreement was signed separately Saturday by Reagan and Mulroney. It lifts trade restrictions between the world's largest trading partners but still faces approval in Congress and in Parliament.

Another Windsor protester, Bert Rovers, accused Mulroney of "a betrayal of the Canadian public" by abandoning his opposition to the agreement after becoming prime minister.

Another Saturday protest at the Peace Bridge between Fort Erie, Ontario, and Buffalo, N.Y., was brief and peaceful, said Mike McAllister of the Niagara Regional Police. About 300 people held a rally about noon and then left.

Surrounded by the media in his Parliament Hill office, Mulroney declared the pact will "uphold the national interest and strengthen the unique fabric of Canadian society."

Reagan, who signed the deal at his Palm Springs, Calif., retreat, hailed the creation of the world's largest free-trade area as "a mark of leadership and presents an historic opportunity to the U.S. and Canada."

The deal would gradually lift all tariffs and ease or eliminate restrictions on investment, energy, and certain services over the next 10 years.

It was reached in October although details weren't completed until last month.

Two-way trade between the two countries amounted to $150 billion in 1986.

Opposition leaders in Canada, notably Liberal leader John Turner and New Democrat leader Ed Broadbent, have vowed to kill the deal.

The two political leaders were not alone in their opposition.

Besides Windsor and Fort Erie, demonstrators also flocked around Parliament Hill, carrying signs reading: "Lyn' Brian" and "Free Canada, Trade Mulroney."

But in other parts, there was support. At a small Prairie airstrip straddling the Minnesota-Manitoba border, about 50 Canadians and Americans ventured into sub-zero weather where officials shook hands, traded letters and memorabilia.

Similar ceremonies were marked at two other border spots: in White Rock, British Columbia across from Blaine, Wash.; and in Prescott, Ontario across from Ogdensburg, N.Y.

Honolulu Flood Area Declared Disaster

HONOLULU (AP) — Gov. John Waihele declared the city and county of Honolulu a major disaster area as the estimate on the number of homes sustaining damage from flooding passed 1,000.

Most of the damage occurred in the southeastern section of the island of Oahu, where up to 20 inches of rain fell New Year's Eve and early New Year's Day.

Federal Emergency Management Agency teams arrived Sunday to help city and state officials assess the damage, which has been estimated at $29 million.

The American Red Cross had counted eight homes destroyed, 315 with major damage and 748 with minor damage by late Sunday, said spokesman Ken Sanders. Earlier, the Oahu Civil Defense Agency reported 175 people as homeless, with most staying with family or friends. Only 11 people showed up at a Red Cross emergency shelter by night, Sanders said.

The governor's proclamation Sunday makes available state disaster funds to repair damage to public property such as roads, sewers and water lines. Qualifying victims will be able to get individual and business loans, as well as tax relief.

City and state officials faced more than 1,000 angry Kailua residents who complained the heavy destruction in their area was caused by poor drainage facilities that led to the overflow of Kawaiinui Marsh.

"We, the people of Kailua, have lost everything," one man yelled out during Sunday's meeting at Kalaheo High School.

But other areas also were hit hard. "We've had a major disaster in East Honolulu," City Council Dennis O'Connor said. "Niu Valley, Hawaii Kai, and Kuliouou have all had major damage."

"We're going to have to look at these drainage systems very carefully in the future to make sure that they do the job they're supposed to," O'Connor said. "I would say a lot of it's natural disaster, but I think we haven't planned well enough."

Homeowners, assisted by volunteers, family and friends, continued cleaning up and saving what they could as crews, some with prisoners, labored to clear roads of mud.

"There was about 2 foot of water and about a foot of mud under the water, through the whole house," said Ron Nelson, a resident of Niu Valley. "The swimming pool looks more like a frog pond now."

A neighbor, Police Sgt. Robert Lung, said he and his family were just about to light New Year's Eve fireworks when the flood hit, forcing the temporary evacuation of 2,800 people.

"We could do nothing," said another neighbor, Asa Koki. "We just seen a big stream of water gushing down down. ... We were surprised. We've never seen anything like this before."

China Holds Mass Rally, Executes 17

BEIJING (AP) — Authorities called a mass rally to try and convict 17 accused criminals and immediately after had them shot in one of the largest reported group executions of recent years.

A report reaching Beijing today said the 17 were convicted of various crimes, including murder, rape and robbery. Five other prisoners were convicted at the same rally of robbery and were sentenced to terms of up to life imprisonment.

The Christmas Day rally in Shenyang, capital of northeast China's Liaoning province, was reported by a provincial radio station monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp.

The report did not say how many people came to the Shenyang gymnasium for the rally. The usual practice at past such rallies has been for authorities to gather thousands of on-lookers by ordering work units to send some of their employees.

The convicts were taken immediately after their trial to the execution ground and shot, the report said. It did not give details of any of the crimes or identify those executed.

Over the past decade, there have been fewer and fewer reported mass trials as China has attempted to force its highly politicized criminal justice system to hew to defined law.

Rallies at which a dozen or more suspects are convicted, sentenced and led away for execution in the space of a few hours are clearly aimed at teaching the public a lesson, but have earned China criticism from abroad because of the haste and lynching atmosphere.

By law, convicts are given 10 days in which to appeal death sentences. In the Shenyang case, it was not clear if those convicted waived their right to appeal.

Swimmer Dies

PALM BEACH SHORES, Fla. (AP) — An avid swimmer died after being stung by a Portuguese man-of-war, a blue bubble-like relative of the jellyfish that is rarely deadly.

Emily H. Small, 67, a former housekeeper who swam in the surf daily, screamed and lost consciousness when she was bitten about 30 feet from shore, said friends who were with her. She was in a coma for five days before she died Friday at St. Mary's Hospital in West Palm Beach.
