Tentative Tax Values Raising Hackles Of Property Owners

By CAROL TYER
 Reflector Staff Writer
 Property owners in Pitt County are reacting to the tentative values of property that are reflected in many of the tax abstracts that were mailed around Jan. 1.

Some of the by-mail tax abstracts state that revaluation is pending, but most have tentative values on them. This is revaluation year, county Tax Assessor Jimmie Hardee said, and the formal notices of revaluation of property will go out by Jan. 31. Then will be the time to contact the tax office about any questioning of the values assessed, Hardee said. Current values placed on the abstracts are tentative ones, he emphasized.

He said that state law requires revaluation of property at least every eight years and Pitt County Commissioners have had Pitt's completed after seven. The last was in 1981.

Hardee said the new values reflect current market values. Selling prices of property in the county are studied daily by the staff of the tax assessor's office, he said, and some help has been obtained from an outside consulting firm. He said every property in the county has been visited by a tax assessment official at some time and that changes in properties are kept up with through building permits. All tax information is now computerized, he said.

A Belvoir area resident said the value assessed on her house went from well under $100,000 to $187,000. "You can bet my husband and I will be over there protesting," she said. "Our house couldn't be worth that!"

Realtor Jeanette Cox said she believes that the tentative values placed on her house and the building which houses her business are fair. "I think they really do reflect the market value," she said.

A local businessman who asked that his name not be used said, "I think it's a shame that they hire consultants to come in here and assess our property. You know they'll raise taxes on everybody just to make themselves seem worthwhile."

A homeowner who asked not to be named said her house's value increased $70,000. "I really think they made a mistake," she said. "We've added a $5,000 garage since we bought the house, but that couldn't make that much difference. And the houses — and trailers — near us aren't all that great. There has to be a mistake."

Ayden realtor Louise Moseley said she hasn't seen her new assessed values yet, but said she has heard a lot of comment from others. "I know people are really concerned," she said, "about how our taxes are going up. Something needs to be done."

County Board Seeking Compromise To Settle Suit Over Election Plan

By STUART SAVAGE
 Reflector Staff Writer
 Pitt County Commissioners hope to negotiate a settlement to a suit filed last month which challenges the present method of electing members of the board, according to an attorney representing the county. The board met in executive session

Monday afternoon to discuss the suit and the rejection of a new "six-three" plan by the U.S. Justice Department.

Following the session lawyer Mike Crowell, a member of the Raleigh law firm Tharrington, Smith & Hargrove, said commissioners will "continue to seek a compromise" in an effort to settle the suit, brought by the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice and several individuals.

Crowell said he would meet with lawyers representing the plaintiffs in the suit, which was filed in U.S. Eastern District Court on Dec. 21, in an effort to reach a compromise. But he declined to give any specifics of what might be discussed.

Commissioners last year, at the request of the local chapter of the National Association of Colored People, adopted a new method of electing members of the board, which they contended gave blacks an equal opportunity to elect representatives. That plan called for the election of six members of the board from new residency districts and three at-large.

During a series of public hearings, blacks voiced objections to having any at-large seats. The suit also charged that the new six-three plan, enacted into law by the General Assembly, was unfair and diluted the voting strength of blacks, and asked that the court throw out the six-three plan even if the Justice Department precleared the new law.

The Justice Department did not preclear the plan so, according to Crowell, until some action by the court, the election this year must follow the old method of electing six commissioners at-large from residency districts.

A letter from the Justice Department notifying the county of its action against the six-three plan, dated Dec. 29, said, "To obtain preclearance ... a submitting authority must demonstrate that the voting changes are non-and in Orange County by noon.

"Ice-covered trees and power lines were the chief threats from the Triangle area to Charlotte.

"I saw it coming Sunday morning when I walked out on my deck and promptly fell," said Ron Olsen, owner of Captain Timber's Tree Service. "I had my guys ready to go by daybreak and all the chains sharpened by last night.

"Seven o'clock came around, and the phones started ringing and haven't stopped since."

The thaw began in Charlotte even as freezing rain continued to fall early Monday. Shortly after noon, the sun came out, raising the temperature to 47.

By 10 p.m. Monday, only 50 Mecklenburg County homes were

State Braces For Even Colder Weather

By The Associated Press
 North Carolina has experienced colder temperatures in the New Year, but forecasters say you'd better stoke up the wood in your fireplace. The worst may be yet to come.

Temperatures dipped into the teens in the North Carolina mountains and 20s in the Piedmont early today. Lows tonight are expected to fall farther, perhaps to single digits in the mountains and teens in the Piedmont and Coastal Plain, the National Weather Service says.

And the weather bureau said another storm carrying frozen precipitation could hit the state by the end of the week.

"This should be the strongest cold air — the coldest of the season," Stan Smith, a weather service specialist with the National Weather Service office at Regional Airport outside of Greensboro, said Monday of the arctic air entering the state.

Although a slight warm-up is expected Friday, the Weather Service says the cold trend will last at least through mid-January.

"We're looking at cold air for the next week, anyway," Smith said.

About 40,000 people were without power Monday afternoon, about half the number that lost electricity at the height of the freezing rain and sleet storm Sunday.

By early today, only about 1,200 Carolina Power & Light customers still were without power, including 500 people in Henderson. Electricity had been restored to customers in Cary, but about 300 households in the Sanford area were still in the dark.

"We're really in a good situation this morning," CP&L spokesman Kyle Hampton said at 5 a.m. today. "Our crews have been working through the night. We hope that sometime later today, all those customers will have their power back."

Tony Ferguson, a line-and-service worker for CP&L, said he had been on the job since Sunday afternoon.

"Most of our problems have been the feeder lines," Ferguson said. Only a few transformers have blown, so it's mainly been repairing the feeder, or main power, lines and going on to the next."

At 8 p.m. Monday, about 2,000 Duke Power customers were without electricity in Durham, and less than 1,500 were without power in Orange and Chatham counties, officials said.

Duke Power spokesmen said the company hoped to have electricity restored by this morning in Durham,

More Funds Set For Collider Bid

RALEIGH (AP) — The Council of State today allocated $260,000 to continue North Carolina's pursuit of the superconducting super collider, including funds to lobby Congress and the Reagan administration.

The 10-member council unanimously approved the request after Earl Mac Cormac, science adviser to Gov. Jim Martin, said the state had spent nearly all the $1.25 million appropriated by the Legislature over the past two years.

The National Academies of Science and Engineering has included North Carolina on a list of eight finalists to host the $4 billion project, which is expected to produce 3,000 jobs.

"We know there's some strong competition there," Martin said. "I think we're in good shape."

The $260,000, taken from the contingency and emergency fund under the council's control, includes $120,000 to pay the Washington lobbyist who is handling North Carolina's case full-time; and $30,000 to pay project director Bill Dunn.

There's also $50,000 for a further geological survey of a site in Butner where the facility's research center would be located and the removal of two live World War II artillery shells discovered there. The area was used for an Army firing range, Mac Cormac said.

"... One of our geologists went out and actually found one of the shells and thought it was a stump," Mac Cormac said.

"The last thing I want to have happen is when we bring in people to see

Incumbents Strickland, James Seek New Terms On Pitt Board

Two incumbent members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners — Bruce Strickland and Eugene James — filed as candidates for reelection this morning.

Strickland, of Bell Arthur, filed for a seat — representing District 3, which includes Falkland, Farmville, Fountain and Arthur townships — he has held since 1960.

James, a Bethel native, filed as a candidate from the Belvoir, Bethel, Pactolus and Carolina townships district. James was first elected to the post in 1984.

"I really think Pitt County is one of the leading counties in the state," Strickland said. "I'm glad to have had a part in it's development and hope to continue. I think we've just scratched the surface in the county's growth and progress."

"My record stands for itself," Strickland added.

During his tenure, Strickland has served five terms as chairman of the board, has been chairman of the Pitt County Board of Health and has been a member of the board of the Department of Social Services, the board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority and the Pitt County Development Commission.

He is in the warehouse business and owns and operates several farms in the county.

Strickland and his wife, Virginia, are the parents of two children, and are members of the Disciples of Christ Church in Bell Arthur.

"I appreciate what the people of Pitt County have done for me," Strickland said, "and would certainly be happy to serve them again."

James, a resident of the Belvoir community, graduated from Bethel High School and received undergraduate and master's degrees in agriculture education from N.C. State University.

He began his teaching career at Chicod High School in 1950 and taught at Belvoir and North Pitt high schools before he retired in 1978 and began full-time farming.

James saw combat in France, Germany and Austria during World War II with the U.S. Army.

He has coached basketball and Little League baseball, served as Scoutmaster for Boy Scout Troop 160 for 20 years, and is a past president of the Ruritan Club.

School Board Members Urged To Handle Their Work As Team

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The executive director of the North Carolina School Board Association, speaking at a workshop session stressing teamwork, has cautioned Pitt County school board members they cannot act individually on board issues.

Gene Causby backed up his statement Monday by citing five principles of teamwork adopted from Jack Ramsey, coach of the Indiana Pacers in the National Basketball Association.

A team, first, must have a common goal as a statement of purpose and direction, Causby said. "A team goal takes precedent over an individual goal," but a team goal should be a blending of individual goals.

The team goal should be realistic, should have enough board commitment for achievement and should be measurable for effectiveness, he said. "If there aren't ways you can measure it, I'm not sure you have a goal."

The second step is developing a game plan to achieve the goals, Causby said. The plan needs to consider allocations and resources, and "time needed for things to be in place."

Evaluation is the third principle and should be based on facts, evi-

The course deals with changes in perception which can enable one to recognize love's presence in one's life. While it will be helpful to attend as many sessions as possible and complete short individual daily studies, it can be entered into at any time, facilitator Bill Katrobos said.

The course will involve group discussion. Each session will last about an hour.

Workshop Planned

Danielle Withrow, director of the community development section of the North Carolina Arts Council, will direct a one-day workshop, "Building an Effective Arts Organization," Wednesday at the Sheraton Greenville.

The workshop is designed to help arts organizations build successful structures of operation, fund raising, administration and management.

A fee covers lunch and workshop material, which includes a 150-page workshop manual.

Jenkins On Panel

Dr. Leo Jenkins, former chancellor at East Carolina University, has been named to the executive committee of a steering panel to elect State Sen. Harold W. Hardison lieutenant governor in 1988.

Named to the 69-member general steering committee were John S. Rainey of Enfield, former ECU student body president, and Mary Catherine Jackson of Greenville.

Ed Walker, chamber president, said the recipient of the award will be someone who has made significant contributions to the Greenville-Pitt County area. Qualifications include civic activities, business involvement, general reputation and contribution to the community.

For more information call the chamber at 752-4101.

Financial Workshop

The Ayden-Grifton High School guidance department will have a financial aid workshop for 11th- and 12th-grade students and their parents Monday at 7 p.m.

Debra Albritton of the financial aid office at East Carolina University will explain the needs analysis forms and discuss scholarship and grant programs.

dence and reasonable judgement, he said. "A good evaluation may result in changing the game plan and maybe even the goal."

In a fourth step, the team should clearly define roles for each team member, Causby said. There are gray areas in the practice of the board setting policies and the administration carrying out the policies, he said. The key is "you understand what you expect from each other."

A school board should expect several things from a superintendent, Causby said. Those include loyalty in administering policy, accurate and specific information, professional recommendations on issues, responsibility in recommending employees and the establishment and maintenance of a credible financial system.

A superintendent may expect the board to advise and counsel the administration, to consult with the superintendent on making decisions, to make all employees responsible to the superintendent and to accept responsibility of administrative procedures based on board policies.

The fifth principle and the hardest to attain is "trust and confidence not only in ourselves but in each other," Causby said. "No team ever succeeded without a high level of trust

Three Physicians, Consultant Join Staff For ECU School Of Medicine

Three physicians and a consultant have joined the faculty in the East Carolina University Medical School.

Dr. Lawrence Lewkow and Dr. Paul Dainer are assistant professors in the Department of Medicine's Section of Hematology-Oncology.

A specialist in bone marrow transplants, Lewkow will assist in directing autologous bone marrow transplantation within the department.

Before coming to Greenville, the New York native was assistant professor in the Department of Internal Medicine-Division of Hematology at Wayne State University School of Medicine in Detroit.

Lewkow received his medical degree at New York Medical College in Valhalla, N.Y., and finished his undergraduate education at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

After medical school, he completed an internal medicine residency and a fellowship in hematology at Wayne State University Affiliated Hospitals.

His professional associations include membership in the American Federation for Clinical Research and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dainer comes to Greenville from University Hospital in Jacksonville, Fla., where he was acting chief of the division of hematology-oncology as well as assistant professor of medicine at the University of Florida College of Medicine in Gainesville.

Dainer received his bachelor's degree from the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., and his medical degree from Jefferson Medical College. He completed an internship in internal medicine at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital in Philadelphia followed by an internal medicine residency at the Hospital of the Medical College of Pennsylvania. He furthered his studies in hematology through fellowships at Naval Regional Medical Center in San Diego, Calif., and the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle.

Among his professional affiliations are membership in the American College of Physicians, American Society of Hematology, American Society of Clinical Oncology and the North Carolina Medical Association.

Dr. Louis J. Dolinar has joined the faculty as an assistant professor in the Department of Psychiatric Medicine.

Before assuming his post at ECU, he practiced psychiatry at Albemarle Mental Health Center in Elizabeth City.

He received his medical degree from the University of Louisville in Louisville, Ky., and completed his undergraduate education at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh. Following medical school, he completed an internship in internal medicine at the University of Missouri-Kansas City affiliated hospitals, after which he pursued residencies in psychiatric medicine at the University of Cincinnati Medical Center and the University of Louisville affiliated hospitals.

Roy S. Selby, former executive director of Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, has joined the faculty as an administrative consultant to the medical school and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Selby was employed as the agency's director for 11 years before assuming his post at the medical school.

A Beaufort County native, Selby will assist the medical center in preparing certificate of need applications for a variety of health care projects. Certificates of need provide documentation which specifically assesses and outlines the health care facility needs of an area based on the population and other demographic data.

Additionally, he will be a liaison between the medical center and area community hospitals as they seek to develop an efficient and effective health care system in the eastern section of the state.

The ECU graduate's 15 years of experience in health planning include his work with the Mid-East Commission as director of comprehensive health planning. He helped to develop and supervise a family planning program and an emergency medical services plan for Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford, Hyde and Martin counties.

Housing Authority Votes To Join Insurance Program

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

To help reduce the cost of insurance, Greenville Housing Authority commissioners unanimously approved involvement in a statewide, housing authority insurance pool at their monthly meeting Monday night.

According to Kenneth Noland, executive director of the Greenville Housing Authority, obtaining insurance from the N.C. Housing

Rotary Guest

State Rep. Walter Jones Jr. will be the guest speaker for the Rotary Club of Greenville's Thursday meeting.

Jones' topic will be "Limiting Campaign Expense."

The club meets for breakfast at 7 a.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant on Memorial Drive.

Authority Risk Retention Pool should save the GHA approximately $15,000 to $20,000 per year.

"The coverage we receive from the pool will be greater than what we have been receiving from common carriers," Noland said.

The N.C. Risk Retention Pool, organized by the Carolina's Housing Authority Council, will begin offering insurance policies this year to housing authorities throughout the state, including Charlotte, Greensboro and High Point, Noland said.

"It's tough sometimes, just finding someone to cover housing authority projects," he commented.

Noland said the yearly premium would cost approximately $42,000 plus a pool startup fee of $21,000, which Noland said would eventually be reimbursed.

The GHA Commissioners also verified a cutoff date of Jan. 8 for accepting bids on the renovations for a residence at 407 Roundtree St., which was damaged by fire on Dec. 9.

Noland said if everything goes according to plan, renovation of the five-bedroom unit should be completed by late April.

Meanwhile, GHA commissioners approved a $67,000 contract to Bradford and Associates from Atlanta for modernization improvements to the Moyewood development.

In addition, the commissioners adopted a revision in the authority's personnel policy, banning sexual harassment on the job.

Noland said the revision was made to align GHA's personnel management policy with city policy.

In other action, GHA commissioners passed a cost increase for minor, maintenance charges such as lawn mowing, screen replacement and litter pick-up, increased the GHA's security deposit policy from $50 to $100, and approved a quarterly write-off of $1,712.64.

Commissioners also redesignated a clerk-typist position to secretary, which increases the position's grade from three to four, and approved the purchase of an office copier costing approximately $1,500.

Director of Resident Affairs Sallye Streeter reported average rent at authority developments in December totaled $130.96. Rent at Meadowbrook was $125.94; Kearney Park, $135.85; Moyewood I, $137.21; Moyewood II, $138.75; Newtown, $126.76; Hopkins Park, $115.95, and West Meadowbrook, $123.44.

Ms. Streeter reported 12 vacancies at the end of December.

Utility Crews Try To Divert Water To Pittsburgh Areas

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
WEST ELIZABETH, Pa. (AP) — Utility crews worked today to jury-rig pumps and bring water to Pittsburgh suburbs where thousands of residents have been forced to buy bottled water or lug buckets from tank trucks in the aftermath of a million-gallon oil spill.

"I was shocked when I got home," said Judy Schramm, pouring water into a plastic container from an emergency tank. "Not a drop came out of the spigot. Nothing. I just don't think people prepared enough."

Ms. Schramm, of Robinson Township, was among 14,000 to 15,000 Allegheny County residents without running water as of 9:30 a.m., said county Health Department spokesman Guillermo Cole.

Authorities were optimistic that jury-rigged pipes and hoses pumping water in from other districts would avert further water cutoffs today. Many public and Catholic schools and several businesses were closed. "Most of our tanks are depleted. They're empty," said Robert Ross, vice president of Western Pennsylvania Water Co., which serves 750,000 people and had to close one of its two Monongahela River intakes.

"It's really a bad situation. It's close to panicky," said Joseph Facenda, senior vice president at Giant Eagle supermarkets, where bottled water sold out almost as quickly as it hit the shelves.

On Saturday, a 40-year-old Ashland Oil Co. tank crumpled and spilled 3.5 million gallons of diesel fuel as it was being filled. A dike captured 2.5 million gallons, but 1 million gallons splashed over the barrier and poured into the Monongahela 27 miles upstream from Pittsburgh.

The Coast Guard said today that patches of oil were visible on the surface up to 27 miles downstream from the city, and officials said that the oil was mixing into the water and might reach the Mississippi.

Only 30,000 gallons of the diesel fuel had been siphoned off the river by late Monday, with 1.4 million gallons sopped up from the tank site, officials said. Workers spread 23,000 feet of booms on the rivers to trap the oil.

The Monongahela, which usually churns with commercial traffic, was closed from the Ashland terminal to Pittsburgh until a channel was opened at 10:30 p.m. Monday, said Coast Guard spokesman Todd Nelson.

No drinking water was polluted, but water companies shut down their intake pipes from the Monongahela and Ohio rivers Monday as patches of smelly oil were reported 53 miles downstream from Pittsburgh at Newell, W.Va.

West Penn was getting 3 million gallons per day from temporary hydrant-to-hydrant connections with Pittsburgh's water system, and crews were installing a permanent connection that would supply an additional 10 million gallons. They hoped to have the pipe operating today, Cole said.

With high-capacity pumps flown in by the Coast Guard, officials planned to search for clean water from deep in the Monongahela or fill barges in the unaffected Allegheny River, Nelson said.

Eight public school districts and a number of Catholic schools were closed to help conserve water, affecting more than 20,000 students, according to Pam Dudd of the Allegheny Intermediate Unit, an school umbrella organization.

Mobay Corp., Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., Calgon Corp. and smaller businesses closed, idling more than 1,000 workers, and other employers planned to close or curtail operations.

Ross estimated it would be "at minimum three to four days, more than likely five to six days," before the closed West Penn intake pump can be turned back on.

West Penn officials on Monday feared that up to 50,000 residents in Pittsburgh's suburban South Hills would lose water within a day. About 23,000 residents were reported to have lost their water Monday, but officials said today that number was high. The city of Pittsburgh's water comes from the Allegheny and was unaffected.

"Conservation is the password for the time. This is a regional disaster," said Joseph Dinkel, a West View Water Authority spokesman.

The state ordered mandatory conservation in affected areas and Gov. Robert Casey declared a disaster in Allegheny, Washington and Beaver counties so the National Guard could haul water. More than 70 tankers, each holding 400 gallons, were available along with eight larger tankers.

Communities downriver in Ohio and West Virginia also were alerted. A Coast Guard helicopter spotted oil on the surface of the Ohio 27 miles downstream today, and officials said they feared that oil mixed into the water would flow much farther.

Candidates Begin Filing For State Offices To Beat Deadline On Feb. 1

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Now that the holidays are over, a new season is dawning in North Carolina: the 10-month period of full-fledged political campaigns for statewide offices.

The opening day of the month-long filing period is usually busy, and Monday was no exception, said Johnnie McLean, secretary to State Elections Director Alex Brock.

"This day and the last day are traditionally the busiest," Ms. McLean said. "This morning, I would have estimated from the phone calls that there'd be 1,000 (filings), but when (the candidates) find out they can file by mail, it slows down."

The filing deadline is noon on Feb. 1.

"North Carolina needs mainstream Democratic leaders in the lieutenant governor's office, and as lieutenant governor, I will provide leadership and vision to keep this state moving ahead," Rand said.

A Cumberland County lawyer endorsed by the North Carolina Association of Educators, Rand said mainstream Democrats were fiscally responsible and favored better schools and a cleaner environment — issues he said his campaign would address.

Rand estimated it would cost $750,000 to $1 million to campaign for the Democratic primary. Three other Democrats have said they would run for lieutenant governor, including state Rep. Jim Crawford, D-Granville, Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, and former state Rep. Parks Helms of Charlotte.

Also filing for lieutenant governor Monday was Rep. Bill Boyd, a Republican from Randolph County, who said he would campaign as a compatible partner to Martin. He said he would take a message of experience to Republican voters.

"I'm an experienced legislator," Boyd said. "If you want someone who has experience, if you want someone who has been crisscrossing the state for 11 months, if you want someone who can win in the fall, I am that candidate. This is not a johnny-come-lately campaign. I understand the legislative process."

Boyd said he began exploring the possibility of running for lieutenant governor in February, and announced last month after traveling the state to gauge support.

"I don't think I'm the underdog," Boyd said, acknowledging that many GOP insiders rate former U.S. Rep. Jim Gardner as the favorite. "I don't mind being considered that, because we're going to go out and work on experience and issues. I'm very confident."

Rep. Stephen Neal, a Democrat, said he would file Monday for an eighth term as the 5th District representative.

"Each time we've had tough races, and I assume that we will again," Neal said. His main opponent is expected to be Lyons Gray, a businessman who failed to secure the Republican nomination in 1986.

Robert Orr, a Martin appointee to the state Court of Appeals who is running to retain the seat, showed up wearing a Minnesota Twins baseball cap. Orr has said the Twins' upset World Series victory last fall proved that underdogs could win elections. Orr hopes to become the first Republican elected to an appellate judgeship in North Carolina this century.

Democrat John A. Friday of Lenoir, a former Superior Court judge, also filed to run for the Court of Appeals, along with Democrat Alan Hicks, an attorney from Roxboro and member of the Person County School Board.

Other filings Monday included Democrat Wayne S. Hardin, a radio station owner running for Secretary of State; and Harlan Boyles, a Democrat seeking his fourth term as state treasurer.

George G. (Jerry) Thompson, of Lumberton, filed as a Republican candidate for the 7th U.S. House District, and Robeson County District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt filed for a Superior Court judgeship.

Accused Kidnapper Issues Plea For Hostage's Release

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — A Lebanese on trial for kidnapping two West Germans in Beirut today denied any role in the crime, but issued a statement in court calling for the release of the one hostage still held.

The statement by defendant Abbas Ali Hamadi was read to the packed courtroom by defense attorney Eckhard Hild. It called for the release of Rudolf Cordes, a West German businessman held hostage in Lebanon since Jan. 17, 1987.

"While the defense rejects any direct or indirect participation of (Abbas) Hamadi in the abduction of Cordes, the defense calls on the kidnapers to set him free immediately," Hild said.

Asked by one of the judges whether it was his statement, Hamadi responded in German: "I authorized him (Hild) to read that statement."

Court officials, speaking to The Associated Press on the condition of anonymity, confirmed the statement was Abbas Hamadi's.

Abbas Hamadi is charged with kidnapping Cordes and another West German to win freedom for his brother, Mohammed Ali Hamadi.

Mohammed Hamadi was arrested in Frankfurt on Jan. 17, 1987, and accused in the hijacking of a TWA jetliner in which an American sailor died. He is being held in Frankfurt and will be tried later.

Shortly before Abbas Hamadi's trial opened today, the group that claims to be holding Cordes in Lebanon released a statement in Beirut accusing West German authorities of mistreating Mohammed Hamadi.

The statement, which did not offer evidence of mistreatment, was delivered before dawn to a Western news agency, along with a snapshot of Cordes.

Abbas Hamadi, sporting a full beard, was dressed in a gray sportcoat for the first day of his trial.

More than two dozen police officers guarded the heavily fortified courtroom. Witnesses are expected to include his brother.

The trial in Duesseldorf was held in a former police barracks gymnasium that was converted into a courtroom for leftist terrorists in the 1970s.

Shuttle May Not Go Until August

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA officials say it may be as late as mid-August before America's astronauts again fly into space.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Monday that the puzzling breakup of a rocket nozzle part during a test may add six weeks to 10 weeks to the delay in getting the shuttle Discovery off the ground.

That could push the resumption of shuttle flights into mid-August, 2½ years after an explosion destroyed the shuttle Challenger and killed its crew of seven.

NASA at first hoped to be able to fly again in the summer of 1987. But the complexity of redesigning the shuttle booster rocket caused that first-launch date to slip steadily — to February this year and then to June 2.

The new failure has pushed that liftoff target even farther into the distance. A full-scale test firing of the redesigned booster on Dec. 23 was considered a success until engineers found pieces of an 8-foot-diameter "boot ring" inside the nozzle and on the ground outside.

"My Letter to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers"

— Rebecca Troxler

Dear Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers,

My family was more concerned with my health than I was. When I was 32 years old and weighed 444 pounds, my mother asked me bluntly who was going to raise my children after I died of a heart attack! That remark made me stop and think.

When I began the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program, I had a 71" bust, a 71" waist and 72" hips. It was an exciting day when it no longer took two people and two tape measures to measure me! I was thrilled to give away my size 52 clothes and 13 months later be wearing a size 13!

In addition to my sisters, parents, two daughters and a loving husband, I found a "family" of supporters among the staff at Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers. They cheered me on and helped me to "think thin." Thanks, girls, and thanks Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers!

Thinsincerely,
Rebecca Troxler

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Southern Strategy

The direction North Carolina Democrats will follow in supporting a presidential nominee became clearer over the weekend when former governor Jim Hunt and Sen. Terry Sanford gave their endorsement to Sen. Albert Gore, Jr.

There is little doubt the endorsement is a move to strengthen Southern influence in the nominating process and consequently the presidential race.

Hunt saw Gore as an attractive candidate to Southern moderates.

"It's time the Democrats started focusing on electing a president ... not just getting a nomination," Hunt said.

"If you can win a majority or plurality of Democrats in the South, then you can win a majority of Americans in November." He felt Gore was the man capable of accomplishing this goal.

Sanford said Gore has cast votes with care and courage. "I think he has the talent and skill to lead the nation."

Both Hunt and Sanford had kind words for other Democratic candidates, but indicated they felt Gore was most qualified.

Former governor Hunt and Sen. Sanford are the state's ranking Democrats and their endorsement of any candidate for the presidential nomination is certain to do much in the way of rallying support. Not all Democrats will follow the lead of the two but we can be certain that uncommitted party leaders are considering following the Hunt-Sanford lead.

There might be some risk in the move for both men, but not all that much. As a southerner, Gore should be acceptable to North Carolina. Even if he does not win the nomination he could be in a position to swing delegates to whoever does win and thus develop some influence with the nominee. If Gore wins the nomination and ultimately the presidency, the North Carolina leaders would have enormous influence with the White House.

Sanford will still be in the Senate when the next presidential term begins and Hunt may still be considering a Senate race. They would like to have a working relationship with the next president and the first step has been taken.

Now many North Carolina Democrats must be considering following the Hunt-Sanford lead.

Tough Choices

North Carolinians have embarked on a brand new year and a hard choice faces them: what cause in the name of social improvement should be adopted to lend texture and significance to 1988?

It might be likened to deciding on New Year's resolutions.

Education is a recurring matter for attention. Other issues of the past have included concern for the homeless, agriculture, drugs, highways and highway safety, famine in Africa, and liability insurance with its accompanying backlash — an issue which stirred attention in the General Assembly.

Solving such problems has never been completely accomplished but a lot of public attention has been focused on needs as well as bringing some effort to meet them.

One of North Carolina's oldest social problems still needs answers. That is poverty.

It involves about one in five of our state's people. The state's poverty rate is said to be 20 percent higher than the national average.

The most highly visible causes for the pervasive in North Carolina have long been identified as the rise of the single-parent family — usually a household headed by a female. Others include aging of the population, a transition in agriculture accompanied by the disappearance of the small family farm, a loss of jobs caused by imports and automation in the state's traditional big four industries.

The Human Services Institute has drug and alcohol addiction at the top of its list of poverty causes. That puts it right up there above catastrophic illness or disability, natural disasters, old age, minimum-wage jobs, prison, mental illness, migrant workers, physical handicaps, mental retardation, teenage single parents, under-education, unemployment and just plain bad luck.

One cause about which literally nothing can be done is being born in a poor family.

Reviewing identified causes of poverty makes it clear we have a multi-faceted, complex problem requiring more than one solution. Any final answer is bound to be expensive in funding and in time. But the problem is approachable and solvable, but a high degree of constancy is necessary for success.

In short, "the war on poverty" is winnable if the public is willing to pay the price in funds and involvement.

To the editor:

The Cheks, OGPU, NKVD, now named KGB, has an ugly history, as a broad U.S. public has realized since Koestler's major novel "Darkness At Noon" was published 40 or 50 years ago. Some realized earlier.

The OSS, then NSA and CIA, have an ugly history, as a broad public now has the opportunity to know since Woodward's "Veil: The Secret War of the CIA" has become a bestseller. Some knew earlier.

Of course, there's ugliness in this wicked world. But much CIA ugliness is gross, so we are likely (now that we know) to take a step or two away from the blackest shadows. Abolishing the CIA would be such a step which Americans could take.

Such a giving up of covert operations (like disarming) might mean sacrifice and surely requires courage. (Nations have spies and armies; individuals gossip hurtfully and keep guns. Both have their strong reasons and it's hard to stop.) But love, of enemies, casts out fear.

P.S. For information on the CIA "secret team" with its opium and cocaine connection and assassinations, write Christie Institute in Washington. For information on CIA destabilization or overthrow of governments in Iran, Guatemala, Iran, Cambodia, Brazil and Chile, go to your local library; include for general reference on these matters, Wall Street Journal's report Jonathan Kwitny's "Endless Enemies" and for specific reference to the supersecret NSA, Seymour Hersh's "The Target Is Destroyed" (on KAL-00). To the editor:

Callousness toward the unborn is pandemic. Many think we've the "freedom to choose" whether or not to murder our unborn children.

Every day innocents are scalded and torn apart because someone decided they didn't want them. Do we honestly believe God smiles on such practices?

What about hard cases: the mere three percent of abortions that end pregnancies resulting from rape or incest or involving handicapped children or danger to mother's life?

Handicapped children have as much right to live as anyone else: All human life is of equal worth. "Concern" for the unborn child who shouldn't have to live a life of suffering is often really concern for those who'd care for the handicapped child and the suffering they'd experience.

Cases where pregnancy must be prematurely ended in order to save the mother's life don't involve choosing to save the mother or the child. The doctor must save the mother or lose both mother and child. There's no "choice" involved, and thus these cases aren't abortions.

Pregnancy from rape or incest is extremely rare. But should an innocent victim ever be killed for the crime of another? In rape/incest, the woman is the victim, but in abortion the unborn is the victim and the woman is guilty. Abortion does not change the fact that rape/incest has occurred; indeed, it often worsens the situation. Murder is never a solution. The intent and moral status of the sex act doesn't alter the value of the child that may result. If a human life weren't at stake, no woman should be required to undergo the degradation of bearing a child in such circumstances, but even degradation and emotional disruption aren't the moral equivalent of life. Only life is.

In Virginia, No Religion At The Polls

'Fighting between the religious right and traditional "country club" conservatives has weakened party organizations in the state's two most populous and politically crucial areas, Northern Virginia and Tidewater.'

Democratic governor Charles S. Robb in a hypothetical Senate race. Robertson lost by a 4-to-1 margin — the worst showing of four potential GOP contenders.

"I've never seen a poll where (Robertson's) negatives are not higher than his positives," said Brad Coker, president of Mason-Dixon Opinion Research, which conducted the polls. "His 'unfavorable' recognition in polls we've done across the South is typically 35 to 45 percent among Republican voters. And these are people who are a step or two to the right of the voting public generally."

An endorsement from Falwell has become more a kiss of death than a badge of honor for Virginia politicians and causes. And Falwell-bashing has become one of the Democratic Party's favorite — and most rewarding — tactics.

Early last year, Falwell threatened to move his Liberty University out of Virginia unless the state legislature forgave $1 million in back taxes owed by his organizations and approved a tax break worth $225,000 a year. A poll showed that even in Falwell's home town of Lynchburg, 54 percent of all voters opposed the concessions and only 34 percent approved. To get just part of what he wanted, Falwell had to pay the back taxes, hire high-powered lobbyists and mobilize the local Chamber of Commerce, which stressed material rather than spiritual concerns: Falwell is Lynchburg's third-largest employer.

In 1986, the state's hardest-fought election involved the U. S. House of Representatives seat in Robertson's home district, Norfolk and Virginia Beach. Republicans were in danger of losing a seat they had held for 18 years and threw everything they had into the race. Robertson, however, never lifted a finger. In fact, the GOP candidate never appeared with Robertson or so much as mentioned his name in public. Why? Internal campaign polls showed that even in his hometown, Robertson alienated more voters than he attracted.

The state senator who has represented Falwell's hometown of Lynchburg for more than a decade, Elliot S. Schewel, is Democratic, Jewish and pro-abortion. In the late 1970s he defeated Harry Covert, a staff member of Falwell's Moral Majority. Covert beat out a longtime Republican activist for the party nomination. Enraged, local GOP leaders bolted and formed "Republicans for Schewel." Covert was trounced.

Twice, candidates supported by a coalition of Christian conservatives and New Right activists have run for lieutenant governor; twice, they have failed even to capture the GOP nomination. One of these candidates, direct-mail fundraiser Richard Viguier, brought years of national political experience to his 1985 campaign. Virginia was unimpressed; Viguier finished third in the GOP's field of five.

Fighting between the religious right and traditional "country club" conservatives has weakened party organizations in the state's two most populous and politically crucial areas, Northern Virginia and Tidewater. In the Norfolk-Virginia Beach district, religious activists elected Carl Bieber, the principal of a Christian school, as party chairman. Bieber's minister has called the Catholic Church "the mother of harlots." Since his election, his party has lost the congressional seat it held for 18 years and the longtime Republican prosecutor in Virginia Beach has switched parties to become a Democrat. Northern Virginia voters have also purged many Republicans from their local governments, with internal bickering contributing to the factors involved in the losses.

Strength For Today

Wise men live their lives as if they expect to die tomorrow.

The wise businessman tries to keep his affairs in such order that his family will be amply provided for and his business has some chance of survival if he should die. Young men with vision take out life insurance policies. A wise man makes a will early and revises it often to meet new conditions.

No one knows when the moment of his calling will be. Therefore, if a person is realistic he lives as if he expected this call to be imminent. If he does so live, he is able, as William Cullen Bryant says in "Thanatopsis" to enter the mysterious realm with the unfaltering trust of one who wraps the draperies of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

Supremacist Sentenced

RALEIGH (AP) — White supremacist Glenn Miller and his family will assume new identities under the federal government's witness protection program, acting U.S. Attorney Doug McCullough says.

In a related development Monday, Miller, who threatened a race war last spring, was sentenced in federal court to five years in prison. He had entered into a plea-bargain arrangement in which he agreed to become a government informant and pleaded guilty to mailing a "declaration of war" and illegally possessing hand grenades.

Miller will probably end up serving 2½ to three years of the sentence, McCullough said.

U.S. District Judge Earl Britt sentenced Miller to five years on the charge of mailing a threatening communication and gave him a 10-year suspended sentence on the weapons charge. He ordered Miller to remain on probation for five years after serving his active sentence.

announced in Raleigh and immediately hit the streets for handshaking. Jordan, a Democrat, made his announcement at his family-owned business in Mount Gilead, the first of a series of stops across the state that will end in Raleigh on Friday. Neither man is expected to have serious opposition for nomination. (AP Laserphoto)

USDA Says Tobacco Exports Likely To Increase

RALEIGH (AP) — Cigarette consumption in the United States is declining about 2 percent a year and cigar, chewing tobacco and snuff use are also dropping, but federal officials say the export market looks good for tobacco growers.

"Output is up because of a jump in cigarette exports, which will set a record of about 100 billion," according to the 1987 tobacco yearbook produced by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"U.S. exports of unmanufactured tobacco in 1987 likely will be up from last year's 217,000 metric tons," the report says. "Exports rose about 4 percent from January-October. If the 1988 crop is of good quality, exports will increase further, given lower prices in recent years and the weakening dollar."

The report says stronger exports could mean an end to the tobacco industry's blues.

"The thing that's in the gigantic upswing is the sales of U.S.-made cigarettes overseas, particularly Japan," said W.K. Collins, a tobacco specialist at North Carolina State University.

Japanese tariffs against U.S. tobacco were reduced considerably last year, resulting in a U.S. market share that has "increased from last spring from roughly 2 percent of the market to about 10 percent," Collins said.

Collins said a spiraling dollar had thrown the competition for a loop.

"We did have tremendous competition from foreign-produced tobacco," he said. "Now we are somewhat the competition. It's because our prices have been lowered, and also major tobacco companies have announced the cessation of using foreign-grown flue-cured tobacco or burley."

Asia is the largest market for U.S. tobacco, and it could grow larger.

The federal report said West Germany had joined Japan as the nation's leading tobacco market, importing 900,000 pounds of U.S. tobacco from January to October 1987, compared with imports of less than 50,000 pounds two years ago. Belgium-Luxembourg also remains a major U.S. importer, buying 19.3 billion U.S. cigarettes in the first 10 months of 1987, compared with 14.9 billion for the first 10 months of 1986.

T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, noted that many experts predicted the U.S. cigarette share of the Japanese market would soar as high as 25 percent.

But Japan and West Germany are anomalies, he said, since most developed countries are cutting down on cigarette smoking.

"In the more developed countries of Europe — England, for example — cigarette consumption is going down like here in the U.S., probably about 2 percent a year," Blalock said. "In the developing countries where income is increasing, we find that paralleled with increased consumption."

China remains an enormous question mark in future exports.

"It's a gigantic market," Collins said. "Many people are concerned about getting involved because they don't know how to take a profit, and the same ones are afraid of not getting involved because it's such a gigantic market."

Collins called mainland China the largest tobacco grower in the world, but, when asked about the quality of their crop, he laughed.

"It's terrible," he said. "That's why the multinational companies are trying to get the traditional multiblend American cigarettes in there. And they're making some inroads." He said most U.S. imported cigarettes in China were sold only from stores catering to foreigners and Chinese politicians.

Blalock said 15 percent of the cigarettes produced in the United States was exported and that the percentage was likely to grow.

"Now what that means to growers is that that can translate into increased demand for their tobacco, which translates into increased quotas," he said. "All the factors that we look at would indicate that we should look forward to quota increases again in 1989 and perhaps in 1990."

Deputy Wounded In Fatal Shootout

TAR HEEL, N.C. (AP) — A Bladen County man was shot to death Monday night and a sheriff's deputy was wounded after a shootout near an elementary school, authorities say.

Keith Lamar McDonald, 29, of Tar

Heel was killed in the incident. Deputy Michael George Andrews, 32, of Bladenboro, was treated for gunshot wounds to the arm and thigh. He was in stable condition at Bladen County Hospital in Elizabethtown.

Bladen County Sheriff Earl Storms said Andrews had radioed headquarters about 6 p.m. to say he was stopping a pedestrian who resembled a man described earlier in the day as a suspect in an attempted break-in.

When Andrews got out of his car, the man pushed the car door, knocking the deputy down, Storms said. He said Andrews later told him the man shot him and fled into nearby woods.

"The deputy was hit and he returned fire," Storms said. He said he did not know how many shots were fired.

Andrews radioed authorities that he was in trouble and called for the rescue squad, Storms said. The deputy told Storms he did not know whether his gunfire had struck the pedestrian, Storms said.

Deputies from Bladen County and neighboring Robeson County, state Highway Patrol troopers, Elizabethtown police and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation converged on the scene, Storms said. They used bloodhounds to search for the suspect.

About 7:15 p.m., McDonald's body was found about 50 feet into the woods near the scene of the shootout, about three miles northwest of Tar Heel, Storms said.

Phone Discounts To Be Available

By The Associated Press
Low-income families in North Carolina will get a discount on telephone installation costs when a federal program takes effect March 1.

The state Utilities Commission has approved the "Link-Up Carolina" program, a version of the Federal Communication Commission's "Link-Up America" subsidy plan.

A person eligible for the program could receive up to a 50 percent reduction in connection fees. The maximum discount is $30 and does not include a security deposit.

Link-Up Carolina targets recipients of three income-assistance programs: Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Supplemental Security Income and food stamps. To be eligible for the telephone subsidy program, a person must be without service for at least three months.

Applications are available at social services offices.

Daniel Long, assistant attorney for the Utilities Commission, said the program will aid income groups particularly in need of telephone service.

"An older person who becomes sick needs to be able to contact a doctor or friends," Long said. "For young people who are job hunting, being able to list a telephone gives more credibility to the job application."

IN THE STATE

Officer Assaulted

LINCOLN, N.C. (AP) — A Lincoln County man was being held Monday on two counts of assaulting a law enforcement officer with a deadly weapon, authorities said.

The charges stemmed from a Saturday night incident in which a Lincoln County sheriff's deputy was forced at gunpoint to give up his own gun after he stopped a suspicious vehicle on a rural road.

Officer Jerry Burgess was shaken but unharmed after the man held a shotgun to the back of the officer's head and ordered him to lie on the ground, officers said.

Robert Johnson Jr., 45, of Alexis was charged with two counts of assault with a deadly weapon on a law enforcement officer. He was being held Monday in the Lincoln County Jail on $15,000 secured bond.

No Cameras

TAYLORSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Cameras will not be allowed in the courtroom for the trial of a man being tried with murder in the death of an Alexander County man.

Superior Court Judge Lamar Gudger ruled Monday that television and still cameras will not be allowed in the courtroom for the trial of Estil Herman Ward of Johnson City, Tenn.

Ward is charged in the death of Robert Daniel Mayse, 19, of Bethlehem.

Gudger said cameras would not be allowed because the court could not easily accommodate them, and because of other limitations in the courtroom in which the trial is being held.

Shirt Plea

WILMINGTON (AP) — Two Wilmington men pleaded guilty Monday in U.S. District Court to trafficking in counterfeit Coca-Cola shirts and could face possible five-year prison terms and $250,000 in fines, authorities say.

Donald Jackson Gordon and Marvin Eugene Fendley were charged with selling about 140 shirts bearing the Coca-Cola emblem to undercover U.S. Customs agents last August, said John Deacy, the Customs agent in charge of the case. They pleaded guilty under a plea-bargain arrangement, authorities said.

The counterfeit goods were distributed through outlets in North Carolina and South Carolina, Deacy said.

Milk Prices

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina dairy farmers, rebounding from a drop in milk prices in 1986, will face another price decline in 1988 because of national industry trends, a North Carolina State University economist said Monday.

Geoffrey Benson, a dairy industry specialist with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service, said the price farmers receive per 100 pounds could drop by 50 cents to reflect a cut in the federal price support. He said it would take three or four months for the lower prices to show up.

Education Payment Needs Plan

By DEBRA WHITEFIELD
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — None of the young Michigan couple's four children are older than 6, but the college their parents hope that they will attend someday already has collected their college tuition in full.

For the $30,000 the couple borrowed against the equity in their home, Hope College in Holland, Mich., guarantees four years of college for each of the toddlers — assuming that they can meet the admission requirements when they're old enough to enroll. Four years of college for four students at Hope already costs about $136,000.

Parents searching for affordable ways to finance their children's college education in an environment of soaring educational costs and dwindling tax benefits have been forced to become more creative. So they are borrowing against the equity in their homes, buying growth stocks, investing in savings bonds and zero-coupon municipal bonds and even — as the Hope College case illustrates — giving money to schools many years in advance in hopes of forestalling further tuition increases.

Although advisers say these options are the best still available to parents now that tax reform has undermined the usefulness of the most popular college-savings schemes, none is a panacea.

Investment advisers only recommend prepaid college tuition plans, for example, to the very conservative investor: Parents or grandparents who don't want to hassle with watching over their investment and who fear falling short of the actual schooling expenses if they don't take advantage of the prepaid tuition plans now. Both Duquesne University in Pittsburgh and Hope say their participants overwhelmingly are grandparents and parents with newborns.

"We admit that it's a little bit of a gamble on both sides," said John Fedele, a spokesman for Duquesne, believed to offer the first tuition-futures program in the country. If tuition costs rise faster than the school predicts or if the college's investment of the prepayment falls short of expectations, the college suffers. And if the child fails to make the grade, selects another school or doesn't want to go to college at all, the parents may not get all of their money back and, at best, must forfeit the interest on their investment.

Amassing such a large up-front sum poses another problem for parents who choose this route, as does the uncertainty over whether the Internal Revenue Service will start taxing the income earned by the prepaid tuition contributions.

The state of Michigan, which is designing an umbrella tuition futures program under which parents could pay for four years of schooling at any Michigan college or university for as little as $4,000, has asked the IRS for a ruling on the taxation question and hopes to get a response soon. Also awaiting the outcome of the ruling are Indiana, Tennessee, Maine and Florida, all of which have plans on the drawing board, and Wyoming, the first state to offer a statewide prepaid tuition program.

Tax considerations have always been important for parents trying to salt away money to put their children through college. The less one has to fork over to the IRS, the more goes toward the student's education and the faster compounded interest accumulates.

The home equity loan has become popular for financing college expenses, tax advisers say, because the interest expense on such borrowings is still tax deductible. Conversely, interest on most other consumer debt is no longer fully deductible and, beginning in 1991, won't be deductible at all.

But tax deductibility should not be the only consideration when borrowing for college, cautions Gregory P. Kushner, director of executive financial services at the Los Angeles office of Price Waterhouse & Co. With a home equity loan, the borrower's home is at risk in the event of a default and a 5 percent loan whose interest is not deductible is still more attractive than a 12 percent loan whose interest is, he noted.

Stanford, Harvard and Duke are among the universities that will lend students up to $15,000 a year with 20 years to repay through a private nonprofit institution called Nellie Mae Inc. The fixed and variable rates available are not any more favorable than the going rate for a home equity loan, but they do have the advantage of not putting the borrower's home at risk.

Some smaller colleges offer more attractive rates. Duquesne lets students finance their tuition and room and board with a 5 percent loan backed by home equity or other collateral.

Financial advisers were steering parents toward growth stocks that pay no dividends because the increase in the stocks' value would not be taxable until the shares were sold. Hence, parents could save money for college tax-free by keeping the stock at least until the child turned 14 — at which point earnings on cashed-in stock are taxed at the child's rate.

But in the aftermath of the Oct. 19 stock market crash, some advisers are steering clear of stocks, favoring instead variable life insurance policies — which provide money for college tax-free as long as the policy is in force — tax-free municipal bonds or tax-deferred savings bonds for parents who have many years to save before their children head off to college.

For those who lack the money or sophistication for such savings plans as tuition futures, bonds or variable annuities, or who didn't plan far enough in advance, there are the home equity loans or new types of financial aid plans through certain colleges and universities.

Annual Flower Show Scheduled

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The 1988 Philadelphia Flower Show, the nation's oldest horticultural exhibition, will be held March 6-13, at the Philadelphia Civic Center.

In addition to the major landscape exhibits, there are more than 1,500 individual entries showcasing the talents of designers in competitive classes ranging from balcony treatments and window boxes to dining table settings and miniatures.

Proceeds from the show, produced by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, help to support another society program, Philadelphia Green, said to be the largest comprehensive community greening program in the United States.

Fashions Provide Leading Questions

This country has such a news glut, I knew it was only a matter of time before the media ran out of questions and the subjects ran out of interesting answers.

It's no longer a matter of "What do you think?" and "What are you feeling?" They've done that. Today, everything comes down to, "So, what are you wearing?"

When Imelda and Ferdinand Marcos fled the Philippines to live in exile while the Aquino government took over, what was the first question that was raised? "How many shoes do you have, Imelda?"

And how did the world discover that Ferdinand planned a take-over of his country? Someone leaked to the press that he was in the Banana Republic buying a take-over wardrobe.

Even the important business of the Peace Summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Gorbachev lost its headlines to Raisa and Nancy's fashion face-off. I read a McStory on the paper's front page that detailed what the American public needed to know were the real differences between Russia and America: Raisa Gorbachev uses Henna Hair Dye (Kraska in Russian) and prefers fashions by Viyacheslav Zaitsev, Tamara Mokeyeva and Yves Saint Laurent. Nancy Reagan, on the other hand, uses Clairol Chestnut and Moonlight Blond highlights and prefers designers Adolfo, Galanos, Blass and Valentino.

Mikhail Gorbachev tried to compete with the story by announcing he refused to wear a 'tux' do at the state dinner, but no one cared.

The American public has no idea why Prince Charles and Princess Di, Fergie or Prince Andrew come to this country... only that Princess Di is bringing three tiaras and eight new dresses with her and Fergie bought a new coat but will have to wear some things twice because her clothing budget is inadequate.

In recent years, even the winners of the Academy Awards pale over who can dress in the most outrageous, revealing outfit. Quick now, who won the best actor and actress award the year Cybill Shepherd wore Reeboks with her formal gown?

With America staging the longest presidential campaign in the history of politics, how long can the media deal with issues? We're finally getting around to the important question, "Who launders your shirts?"

We now know that Bruce Babbitt, Democrat from Arizona, never does his shirts on the road, but saves them until he gets home. Albert Gore, a Democrat from Tennessee, sends his out, but requests a lot of starch. Sen. Robert Dole, Senate Majority Leader, "doesn't change all that much" because he doesn't spill, and has someone on his staff take them to the cleaners. Are we talking destiny here?

I noted with some alarm when the Pope visited the United States last year, all the preliminary stories were about his stand on abortion, celibacy, birth control and women's role in the church. Thank goodness, some reporter got around to asking him his shoe size. That's what inquiring minds REALLY want to know.

Womens' Session Set For Feb. 20

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 3,000 women entrepreneurs will explore ways to achieve business success at a conference Feb. 20, 1988, sponsored by American Woman's Economic Development Corporation (AWED).

The Eighth National Conference for Women in the Businesses of Fashion, Beauty, Fitness, Food and Home Fashion will feature more than 30 workshops designed for women who want to start a business, improve their existing business, or get ahead in their corporate management positions.

The conference, to be held at the New York Hilton hotel, is co-sponsored by the New York State Department of Commerce and the New York City Mayor's Office of Business Development. A non-profit organization, AWED has helped more than 40,000 women in business through training, counseling and support services exclusively for women entrepreneurs, according to its founder and president, Beatrice A. Fitzpatrick. Headquarters are at 60 East 42nd St., New York, NY 10165.

Hearing Aid Given To Pitt Resident By Quota Club

The Quota Club of Pitt County has provided a new hearing aid to Theron Pollard, a 57-year-old Pitt County man with moderate to severe hearing loss in both ears.

Pollard, who lives with his daughter and two grandsons on Route 5, Greenville, has been paralyzed and disabled as a result of a car accident. He was discharged from the Regional Rehabilitation Center of Pitt County Memorial Hospital Dec. 23.

The Quota Club is a service organization of professional women whose primary service project is to help the hearing impaired of Pitt County.

Pollard received his hearing aid Dec. 30. Nadine Bowen, club president, and Martha Dixon, service committee chairperson, were present when Pollard was fitted for the hearing aid.

Donation Made To Endowment Fund

The Greenville, Kinston and Washington chapter Bennett College Alumni had a meeting Saturday in Washington, N.C. A $2,000 donation was made to the endowment fund.

Making the donation was Beulah Mebane and family in honor of her father, G.R. Whitfield. The money will be used for senior scholarships.

Final plans were made for the White Breakfast to be held at King's Restaurant in Kinston March 12. Dr. Gloria Scott, president of the college, will be a special guest. Tentative plans were made for a weekend at the college for area high school students.

The recruitment tea held in December was discussed.

President Gail Dove-Stevens said the next meeting will be held in Greenville. Erlean Dawkins was meeting hostess.

GOING WILD — The exotic markings of jungle animal pelts are increasingly popular pattern themes, translated in a wide variety of fabrics, from jerseys to wool sweater knits of furry mohair prints. At left, leopard print of collar and cuffs is repeated in miniskirt of

Routine Physical Probes Too Personal For Worker

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are both employed by the same large company. Recently we were required to take physical examinations for health insurance.

We were each given a questionnaire to fill out. On the form was a section "for women only." The women were asked: "At what age did you have your first sexual encounter?" (The men were not asked this.)

I refused to answer it, and told the examining nurse that I thought it was nobody's business. She insisted it was "scientific and important to complete the report." As a matter of principle, I left that question unanswered, but I suspect the nurse filled it in for me so the questionnaire would be "complete."

Abby, would you have answered that question? And of what possible use could that information be in a routine health examination? — A PRIVATE PERSON, ATLANTA

DEAR PRIVATE PERSON: Congratulations. You are also a thinking person. I would not have answered that question. It was inappropriate, irrelevant and an invasion of privacy.

Thank you for giving me this opportunity to again tell my readers that they are not obligated to answer a question in a questionnaire simply because it is asked. Leave a blank space, or write in "not relevant" to the questions you find an invasion of your privacy.

DEAR ABBY: I am so disgusted I don't know what to do, but I have to tell somebody, so I'm telling you.

We had a telephone with a clear-ringing bell for as long as I can remember — and I am not young. The phone gave out and had to be replaced, so I just went to AT&T and bought a new one. Well, this phone does not ring. It sounds like a sick turkey!

It cannot be heard if the TV is on, and worse yet, it came in a box marked "Manufactured in China." That did it! I will not have anything in my house that is not made in this country. I am taking this phone back — I don't care if I have to resort to smoke signals. And another thing, why did they change the bell? I was so accustomed to the old ringing sound.

Lord knows we pay enough for telephone service without having to put up with an instrument that not only is made in China but sounds like a sick turkey gobbling. — HAD ENOUGH

DEAR HAD: You may have had enough — but there's more! In order to buy a telephone like the one that gave out, you may have to buy a second-hand instrument. New is not always better. We're lucky these days if what we can get is as good as what gave out.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently become a vegetarian (it's been a

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices surged higher today in early trading as a continued rebound by the dollar in foreign exchange helped extend the new year's sturdy market rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 76 points on Monday, rose another 49.74 to 2,064.99 by 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Broader market indicators also moved higher in heavy trading.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by nearly 14 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,355 up, 101 down and 209 unchanged.

Big Board volume was 43.74 million shares in the first 30 minutes of trading.

As on Monday, the dollar's continued rise from the record lows it reached in the final days of 1987 was credited with boosting optimism on Wall Street. After rallying in late trading Monday, the dollar surged higher in overnight trading in Japan and Europe.

Among active blue chips, IBM was up 2 1/2 to 123 1/4, American Express rose 1 to 25, General Electric rose 1 1/4 to 47 1/4 and Eastman Kodak rose 1 1/4 to 52 1/2.

On Monday, the Dow industrials jumped 76.42, or 3.94 percent, to 2,015.25, its fourth largest point gain ever.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 8 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,592 up.

Collider Funding Is Approved By Council

this site ... to have one of the (Department of Energy) officials, one of the congressmen ... step on a 105 mm shell."

Meanwhile, North Carolina's bid for a huge underground proton smasher did not provide a lot of information about its potential effect on the environment, according to a national scientific panel.

The panel also said that transportation to the state's proposed site in a mostly rural stretch of Durham, Granville and Person counties was less than the best.

Those observations are part of a report that recommended sites in North Carolina and seven other states as best qualified for superconducting super collider. The News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

The report, prepared by a panel of the National Academy of Sciences and National Academy of Engineering, also outlined weaknesses and strengths of all the favored sites, located in North Carolina, Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, New York, Tennessee and Texas.

In addition, the panel briefly discussed why it rejected 28 other proposed locations in 17 other states that applied in September for the coveted project.

Details of the academies' recommendations reached state officials Monday. They had been delivered Dec. 24 to the Energy Department, which is expected to announce its official list of best-qualified sites Jan. 12.

The super collider would be the world's largest scientific machine, featuring an oval tunnel 53 miles in circumference. Speeding protons in the tunnel would be accelerated by magnets and smashed together to answer some fundamental questions about physics.

In its discussion of North Carolina's site, the academies' report cited as pluses the "immediate proximity of several major research universities (and) the presence of urban amenities including those of Research Triangle Park."

It rated local transportation as adequate "but less strong than for some other sites," while acknowledging that Raleigh-Durham Airport had been significantly expanded as a hub for American Airlines.

"The site is generally favorable on environmental grounds, with no major risk to identified species or critical habitats and very little long-term impact on wetlands or water quality," the study says.

But it goes on to say that "the discussion of this last matter in the proposal was not very extensive."

Mac Cormac acknowledged Monday that some of the other panel-favored sites, like those in Illinois and Texas, offered proximity to larger airports than RDU.

But he said he wondered whether the academies' panel was aware of North Carolina's pledge to provide four-lane highway access all the way from RDU to the proposed super collider site.

Mac Cormac also questioned the panel's statement about North Carolina's environmental assessment.

"Having looked at the other proposals, we provided more data on the environment than almost anyone else," he said in a telephone interview.

But John Runkle, an attorney for the Conservation Council of North Carolina, said the panel's environmental views bore out his own group's concerns.

"I think they certainly recognized what we did, the inadequacy of a lot of the (North Carolina's) analyses," Runkle said.

Trent Enters Plea Of 'No Contest'

Dr. Lee Trent, a Greenville physician, entered "no contest" pleas to two counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor in Pitt County Superior Court Monday and is scheduled to be sentenced later this week.

Trent was charged with rape and two indecent liberties counts in August 1985. The charges involved the alleged rape of his then-13-year-old daughter in July 1981, and indecent liberties incidents involving the same girl in June 1981 and in May 1985.

He was convicted in Pitt County Superior Court in 1985, and sentenced to concurrent life and three-year prison terms.

But the N.C. Supreme Court in September 1987 overturned the rape conviction and ordered a new trial in the indecent liberties cases.

Trent was reindicted on the rape and sexual offense charges last September.

Court officials said this morning that a sentencing hearing for Trent was initially scheduled for Wednesday morning. But the spokesman said the hearing may be postponed until Wednesday afternoon or Thursday.

Warren Enters Race

chairman of the Appropriations Expansion Budget panel and vice chairman of the Election Laws Committee.

This year Warren was also appointed by the speaker of the House to serve on several study commissions, including property taxes, the public school forum board, salary schedule for teachers, chairman of tourism and jobs, and interstate banking.

Warren has guided several bills through the Legislature.

Among those were proposals covering crime victims compensation, motel tax for tourism in Pitt County, appropriation for East Carolina University, and fire and rescue workers' relief funds.

Warren said he has enjoyed the challenge of working for constituents in Pitt and Greene counties.

"My experience these four terms along with my prior experience on the Board of County Commissioners has prepared me with invaluable experience as well as seniority to serve the 9th District effectively again in 1988," he said.

"I have supported legislation which I felt was in the best interest of the people, and will continue to be close to the people in the district. The opportunities and challenges will be varied and many during the next term, and I look forward to promoting Pitt and Greene Counties as I have done in prior years," he said.

Warren is a member of First Christian Church. He and his wife, Joan, reside in Greenville.

Suit Filed In Crash Of 'Copter

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Lawsuits seeking $47.5 million in damages from the maker of a CH-53E helicopter that crashed in 1984 at Camp Lejeune have been settled, the attorney for two plaintiffs said Tuesday.

Six Marines were killed and 11 were injured in the fiery crash of the Super Stallion on Nov. 19, 1984, at Tactical Landing Zone Penguin.

"It has been settled at this point. The settlement figures are confidential as part of the agreement with Sikorsky (Aircraft). We're not allowed to divulge that," attorney Dan Albers of Louisville, Ky., told The Jacksonville Daily News.

He revealed that lawyers for 14 plaintiffs suing Sikorsky Aircraft Co. for negligence had videotaped a deposition on the Super Stallion from Matthew Ellis, Sikorsky's former chief flight safety engineer. Ellis says he quit Sikorsky over safety concerns.

The lawsuits against Sikorsky, a division of United Technologies Corp., were scheduled to be heard Jan. 12 in U.S. District Court in Houston.

Bob Stangarone, Sikorsky's director of communications, could not be reached for comment.

Settlements were reached between the plaintiffs and Sikorsky's insurer, Associated Aviation Underwriters, following a Nov. 30 conference in Houston, Albers said.

"We're very satisfied with the settlement. It was considerably more than the previous death settlement" from the Super Stallion, Anders said. Damages awarded in that settlement totaled $95,000 for one of the Marines killed.

Alders said he remains convinced the crash was caused by failure of the tail rotor drive shaft. "I believe our proof would have shown that. Their (Sikorsky's) position was they should be shielded from liability by the government contractor's defense."

Popular Football Rivalry May End

ECU-N.C. State Series May Be Over

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina Athletic Director Dave Hart says N.C. State's refusal to go to a home-and-home football series with the Pirates has put an end for now to one of the most popular rivalries in the state.

The announcement Monday temporarily ends the Pirates' 18-year football series with the Wolfpack. N.C. State was the last Atlantic Coast Conference team that was committed to playing ECU.

A one-year moratorium on the series was called for by N.C. State officials after last September's game in Raleigh, which was won by ECU, 32-14, when fans rushed the field, causing property damage to Carter-Finley Stadium and injuring a security officer who was attempting to keep students from tearing down the goal posts.

N.C. State leads the series 12-6-0, with all games having been played in Raleigh.

The decision to end the series was made after N.C. State declined to accept a proposal by ECU officials to play the game in Greenville beginning in 1991 on a home-and-home basis.

"Our intent all along was to see if we couldn't negotiate a continuation of the series, however, in a manner that was equitable to both parties," Hart said. "The focal point in our agreement was the home-and-home agreement beginning in 1991. N.C. State informed us that this was not acceptable. Therefore, for now, we have decided that it is not in the best interest of East Carolina University nor its fans to continue the football series with North Carolina State University."

DAVE HART

East Carolina has never hosted N.C. State at Ficklen Stadium, which has a 35,000-seat stadium. N.C. State, though, has 47,000-seat Carter-Finley Stadium, including a grassy bank that can accommodate an extra 10,000 fans.

The 1986 game between the two teams drew 58,560, the largest crowd ever to watch a football in the state. The game annually was one of the bigger payoffs for both schools.

"The ECU-N.C. State series grew into one of college football's most exciting rivalries, not to mention the fact that it had become the biggest football game in the state of North Carolina," Hart said.

"It is with extreme regret that we announce the continuation of the series has reached an impasse for the immediate future."

Wolfpack Athletic Director Jim Valvano said in an Associated Press report that discussions on a number of topics had been held in the last several months, but that an impasse had arisen over the home-and-home proposal.

"The problem with home-and-home is that schedules are done so far in advance, we had always counted (East Carolina) as a home game," Valvano said in a telephone interview. "To go home-and-home would have put an imbalance in that schedule. We will continue to discuss it."

Hart said ECU was willing to fulfill a previously reached verbal agreement between the two schools that would have had the Pirates playing at N.C. State until 1990, but that in order to do that the series would then have to come to Greenville on a home and home basis beginning in 1991.

"N.C. State did not feel that was acceptable and therefore, we made a decision that it was not in the best interest for East Carolina and its fans to continue the series for the immediate future," Hart said.

"The future negotiations, in all frankness, would have to include the home-and-home agreement. I feel sorry for the fans of both institutions and I feel for the student bodies. The fans are the losers."

"There is no question there is a financial loss, but I don't think the financial loss outweighs the fact that we have gone to N.C. State for 18 years," Hart said.

Valvano did not rule out the possibility that the series would be renewed.

"We felt we had to get on with the business of scheduling," he said.

"We can continue discussions in the future."

Hart said he felt the ECU fans deserved a home-and-home agreement.

"We wanted the home-and-home to be part of the future. We were not interested (in a continuation of the series as it stood)," the ECU official said.

"You look at the 1987 season and there were only two undefeated teams in the nation (Miami and Syracuse) and they're both scheduled to play in Ficklen. As we move into the 1990s, to be totally fair and equitable for all parties, our focal point has to be on the home-and-home."

Slumbering Bucs Fall To UMBC

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

BALTIMORE, Md. — East Carolina basketball coach Mike Steele summed up Monday night's ECU-Maryland-Baltimore County game like this:

"We had a horrible bus trip up here, and the kids slept all the way. Then, they'll sleep all night, lay around tomorrow and probably sleep some more. They probably won't wake up until sometime in the second half," Steele said.

Wrong tense? Nope. He made the statement Sunday night, some 20 hours before the game was played.

And he was right. The Pirates were lethargic against the Retrievers Monday night, bowing 84-73. And the Bucs were down by 19 points midway through the second half when they finally began to wake up to the fact that they were behind in the ball game.

"No one was ready to play the game," Steele said afterward. "This team just can't seem to understand the difference in playing on the road. You're not just in different surroundings on the court, you don't have the crowd behind you, you're sleeping in an unfamiliar bed, you're eating at different times than you are used to, and so on. It really shows up in an experienced team."

Amazingly, the Pirates shot 49 percent from the floor and 91 percent from the line. They also outrebounded the taller Retrievers, 32-28.

But they turned the ball over 18 times while forcing only eight by UMBC. The Retrievers also benefited by hitting 15 of 20 free throws as compared to just 10 of 11 for the Pirates.

"They lost to Robert Morris by 20 points the other night (on the road) and I'm sure that they got through to their kids about how difficult it is to play on the road. Our kids just don't realize how different it is (playing on the road)," Steele said.

East Carolina is now 0-5 on the road, with one neutral court victory to their credit outside their own Minges Coliseum.

The Pirates did start out like they were going to own the contest, scoring the first six points of the game, two of the baskets coming by Kenny Murphy, and the other by Stanley Love off an assist by Murphy.

But UMBC took over at that time, scoring the next six to tie it up. Gamel Spencer hit the tying bucket with 16:32 left before Love hit a running jumper to put ECU back on top.

Larry Simmons scored off a fast break with 15:40 showing to tie it again, drawing a foul from Jeff Kelly on the play. Simmons completed the 3-pointer to give the Retrievers their first lead in the game, 9-8.

Love once again scored on a drive with 15:18 left to put the Pirates back into the lead, 10-9, but it was to be the last time.

Duane Faust hit a jumper from the lane with 14:46 left to put UMBC up, 11-10, and the Retrievers never trailed again. Kenny Reynolds and Levi Franklin both added baskets before the Pirates scored again, giving them a 15-10 lead.

From there, UMBC continued to slowly pull away from the Pirates, gaining a 36-24 halftime lead as Simmons swished a 3-pointer with seven seconds left for the biggest lead of the half.

UMBC promptly improved that to 18 by scoring the first six points of the second half, four of them by Simmons for a 42-24 lead.

But the Pirates then began to stir and over the next five minutes cut the lead back to 11, 51-40, the last basket coming on a Jimmy Hinton to Reed Lose fast break basket with 13:45 left.

But after another exchange of baskets, Spencer got a 3-point play and Reynolds hit a jumper from the free throw line. Simmons followed with another basket to raise the lead back to 19, 61-42.

From there on out, East Carolina outscored the Retrievers, 31-23, but it was too little, too late.

"We got nothing out of Dominique (Martin) and Marc (Lacy) tonight," Steele said. "Both of them are hurt, but it's easy to play when you are home and healthy. It's hard to play on the road when you're banged up. Gus Hill had three baskets that he lost because he walked. You can't have things like that and expect to win."

"We did get some improved play from Jimmy (Hinton) tonight. And Stanley had his best night offensively," the coach added.

Love finished with a career high 23 points while Hill and Lose each added 16.

For UMBC, five players scored in double figures, led by Reynolds with 19. Simmons had 17, Reggie Truitt and Spencer had 14 and Faust added 10.

Truitt led the UMBC rebounding with 10 while Love had eight to lead East Carolina.

The Retrievers got to 6-5 with the win, while the Pirates fall to 4-6.

East Carolina will remain on the road for their next two games as they open Colonial Athletic Association play. Saturday, they visit George Mason, traveling on to James Madison for a Monday night game.

Hard Workout Earns Duke Win

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The score may not have reflected it, but Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said William & Mary gave the ninth-ranked Blue Devils a defensive workout.

"That man-to-man defense forced us out of some things," Krzyzewski said after Duke beat the Indians 101-70 Monday night. "In the first half at times, we didn't think as well because of the pressure they were putting on us."

"You can see they have good work habits and good shot selection," Krzyzewski said. "Overall it was a good effort against a team that we're more talented than, but a good basketball team, a team that is much improved."

Forward Danny Ferry led the offensive effort for Duke, scoring 26 points — 18 in the first half.

The Blue Devils took an 11-4 lead behind six points from Ferry, and increased the advantage to 55-30 at halftime.

Duke, 7-1, scored the first eight points of the second half, including two layups by Kevin Strickland. The Blue Devils held a 69-45 lead before going on a 14-2 spurt sparked by Strickland, Quin Snyder and Alaa Abdelnaby.

William & Mary may have caused early defensive problems for Duke, but first-year Indian coach Chuck Swenson, a former Duke assistant, said the Blue Devil defense bothered his team even more.

"We couldn't even run our offense ... we couldn't get the ball to Tim Trout because of Duke's pressure on the basketball," Swenson said. "Duke's pressure was relentless."

"Duke has a tremendous amount of pride. They were up 25 points and were working harder than we were," Swenson said.

Strickland and Phil Henderson added 12 points each for the Blue Devils. Robert Brickley, making his first start of the season, scored 11 for Duke.

Jimmy Apple scored 21 to lead William & Mary. Trout added 14 for the Indians, who fell to 2-7.

Perry Showing Offensive Prowess

By The Associated Press

Tim Perry was recruited by Temple mainly for his defensive potential.

John Chaney, coach of the sixth-ranked Owls, said, "When we first got Timmy, there was no question he was going to be a great shot-blocker."

We didn't anticipate his offense to come along like it has."

On Monday night, the 6-foot-9 senior forward scored 16 points to lead Temple to an 86-60 Atlantic 10 victory over Rutgers. More important, he became the 26th player in Temple history to break the 1,000-point plateau.

In other games involving ranked, it was No. 8 Oklahoma 109, Austin Peay 69; No. 9 Duke 101, William & Mary 70; No. 10 Purdue 81, No. 19 Illinois 68; No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas 71, Long Beach State 68; No. 15 Florida 77, Towson 55; No. 18 Kansas 67, Washington 57 and Villanova 69, No. 20 St. John's 62.

Perry, who now has scored 1,003 points, also grabbed 10 rebounds and blocked four shots as the Owls raised their conference record to 4-0 and remained unbeaten in eight games this season, defeating Rutgers for the 11th straight time.

It was a big night for Perry, made bigger because his brother, Lee, plays for the Scarlet Knights and a number of their family members were in the stands for the game in Philadelphia.

"I really wanted it bad tonight," Temple's Perry said. "Playing against my brother and with my family here, I wanted to do it tonight."

The brothers were not matched against each other during the game, but Tim was uncomfortable playing against Lee.

"It's pretty hard playing against your brother," he said. "You want him to do well, but you want your team to win."

Mike Vreeswyk had 17 points and Howard Evans 10 points and 10 assists for Temple, while Darren Campbell had 15 points for Rutgers, now 3-6 and 0-3.

No. 8 Oklahoma 109, Austin Peay 69
Harvey Grant's 22 points and 13 rebounds and 20 points and 11 assists by Ricky Grace led Oklahoma.

The Sooners, 13-0, set a school and Big Eight Conference record by going over the 100-point mark for the tenth time this season. Oklahoma had set the previous mark of nine during the 1984-85 season.

Austin Peay, 4-7, had only eight players suited up. Coach Lake Kelly said four others had been suspended for violating team rules and did not accompany the team to Norman. The Governors then lost starting point guard Marshall Ayers early in the game with an ankle injury.

Mookie Blaylock and Stacey King each added 18 points for the Sooners, while Barry Sumpter led Austin Peay with 14 points.

Gatlin Gains Eligibility

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Former D.H. Conley standout Keith Gatlin was reinstated Monday as a member of the University of Maryland basketball team, head coach Bob Wade announced.

Gatlin, a 6-foot-5 senior guard, has not played for the Terrapins since the 1985-86 season when he averaged 10.2 points a game. He is Maryland's all-time assist leader.

The playing status of junior forward Rodney Walker, a transfer from Syracuse, is still unclear pending certification by a university committee. Certification is a standard administrative procedure for transfer students.

Both players have been on academic restriction imposed by Wade. Another player, Tony Massenburg, had his restrictions lifted last week.

"Keith will resume playing immediately," Wade said. "He has done the necessary things as far as I am concerned to lift the academic restrictions."

Gatlin will be available to the Terps Wednesday night for their game at Missouri. Maryland is 8-2 this season.

Ex-Warriors Are Happy Rockets

By The Associated Press
Last year, Joe Barry Carroll, Sleepy Floyd and Purvis Short toiled for the Golden State Warriors, who finished with a 42-40 record.
This year, all three are with Houston and currently riding a four-game winning streak.
"It's a feeling that we have reached a point of arrival. We can beat people in different ways," Carroll said after the Rockets' 117-107 victory over the Dallas Mavericks on Monday night. "I've come to a team with a winning tradition."
Carroll and guard Sleepy Floyd were acquired by the Rockets in a Dec. 12 trade. Short was obtained in a trade before the season began.

Akeem Olajuwon led the Rockets on Monday with 31 points and 11 rebounds. Short had 25 points and Floyd added 23.
"We're looking at every game as a game we have to have," Short said. "It makes it a lot of fun playing like we are now."
Elsewhere, it was Philadelphia 122, Phoenix 114; Cleveland 122, Denver 101; Boston 107, Utah 99; and the Los Angeles Lakers 133, San Antonio 115.
The victory snapped Dallas' five-game winning streak and pulled Houston within 2½ games of the Midwestern Division-leading Mavericks.

"It was an important game to win," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "We've really got to have intensity to beat a team as good as Dallas. We had a good effort from almost everybody."
Mark Aguirre paced Dallas with 31 points and 10 rebounds.
Celtics 107, Jazz 99
Larry Bird scored 28 points and Danny Ainge added 20, including six 3-point goals, to lead Boston over Utah. Kevin McHale had 24 points for the Celtics, who had to come from behind in the fourth quarter.
One minute into the final period, Utah held an 85-79 lead. But the Celtics went on a 19-5 run and held a 96-90 advantage with 4:53 remaining.
Bird said the difference in the fourth quarter came when "we played really well, came up with some good defense and, of course, Danny hit those 3-pointers."
Ainge was 6-of-6 from 3-point range and made half of them during the final period.
"I hit my first two 3-pointers and it felt good, so I felt I had the range," he said. "I feel just as comfortable shooting the 3-pointer as I do from 20 feet."
Karl Malone led Utah with 25 points and Mel Turpin came off the bench to score 22.
Lakers 133, Spurs 115
James Worthy scored 23 points and Byron Scott added 21 as Los Angeles won its 11th straight game, extending the longest streak in the league this season.
The Lakers led 47-46 with 5:15 remaining in the first half when Kareem Abdul-Jabbar blocked Greg Anderson's dunk shot attempt by reaching through the hoop with his left hand. No goaltending was called despite vehement protests by the Spurs' players and coaches.

Los Angeles then outscored the Spurs 12-2 over the next 3:26 to take a 59-48 lead. The Spurs were able to close to 69-63 early in the third quarter, but the Lakers outscored San Antonio 16-3 and took an 85-66 lead.
Alvin Robertson led the Spurs with 20 points.
76ers 122, Suns 114
Cliff Robinson scored 31 points and Charles Barkley added 28 to lead Philadelphia, snapping the '76ers' five-game losing streak.
Phoenix led 36-26 with 42 seconds remaining in the first period. But Robinson led a 23-7 run with 10 points to give Philadelphia a 49-43 lead and the Suns never got closer than five points thereafter.
Eddie Johnson paced the Suns with 27 points. Phoenix forward James Bailey was ejected from the game with 7:41 to go after getting into a shoving match with Philadelphia's Tim McCormick.
Cavaliers 122, Nuggets 101
Brad Daugherty came off the bench to score 25 points and Mark Price added 23 for Cleveland. A 28-4 Cleveland run, including 10 by Price, gave the Cavaliers a 38-20 lead late in the first quarter.
Denver rallied to within 50-47 midway through the second quarter, but a 19-6 spurt by the Cavaliers gave them a 69-53 halftime lead and they were never seriously threatened the rest of the way.
Mike Evans paced Denver with 28 points.

Scott Gets 2nd ACC Freshman Honor

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — For the second time this season, Georgia Tech guard Dennis Scott has been named rookie of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference.
The 6-foot-7 freshman from Oakton, Va., contributed 42 points, 17 rebounds and 14 assists in Yellow Jacket victories last week over William & Mary, Auburn and George Washington.
The selection was made by a committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association, which earlier named N.C. State's Charles Shackelford as the conference's player of the week.

UTC's Lyons Named Tops In Southern

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Morris Lyons, a guard for the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, has been named basketball player of the week in the Southern Conference.
Lyons, a 6-foot-2 senior from Memphis, scored 17 points, pulled down five rebounds and had 10 assists as the Moccasins defeated Southwestern Louisiana 83-72 to win the University of Tennessee Coca-Cola Classic.
In the University of Alabama at Birmingham Classic, Lyons had 11 points, six rebounds, four assists, four steals and one blocked shot to lead Chattanooga over Missouri-Kansas City. He also had 12 points, four rebounds, five assists and two steals in a 81-67 losing effort to UAB.
Lyons was chosen Monday by a panel of sportswriters and sportscasters in the fourth week of balloting by the Southern Conference Sports Media Association.

Gray Decides To Remain A Tar Heel

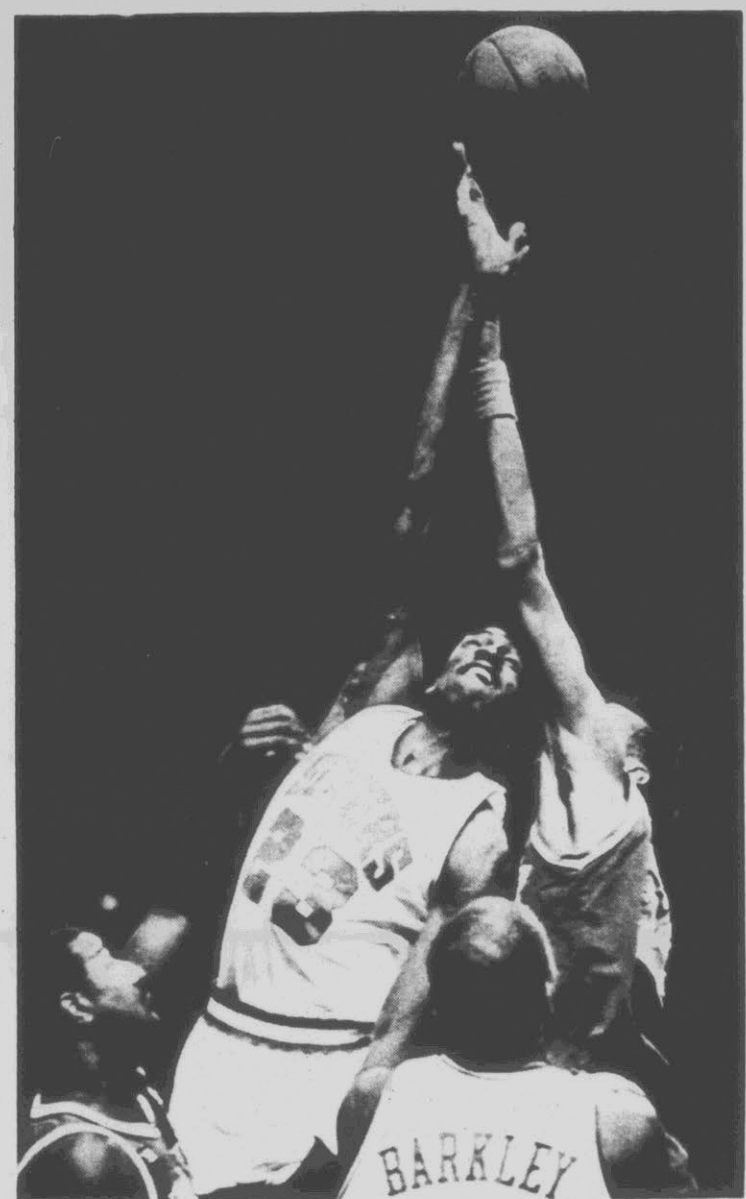

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina defensive end Cecil Gray, who said he was considering transferring from the school, announced Monday that he will remain at Chapel Hill, Coach Mack Brown said.
Gray, a 6-foot-5, 287-pound sophomore from Chesapeake, Va., was the top reserve along the Tar Heel defensive line last season. With the graduation of Reuben Davis and Tim Goad, Gray was expected to challenge for a starting position.
"Cecil is an outstanding young man who has made a commitment to the University of North Carolina," Brown said in a prepared statement after meeting with Gray. "I'm looking forward to working with him this spring."
Gray had announced his plans to leave North Carolina after the Clemson game, which the Tar Heels lost 13-10 in Chapel Hill. He started two games last fall and played extensively throughout the remaining nine games.

Christain May Transfer From Georgia Tech

ATLANTA (AP) — Freshman guard Michael Christian probably will transfer to another college. Georgia Tech basketball Coach Bobby Cremins said.
"I would say the chances of him coming back are slim," Cremins said. "He's the type of kid that wants to play right away, and I don't see him playing very much right now."
"I have not talked to him in the last couple of days, and I really don't know where he might transfer," Cremins said Monday.
Christian left the team and returned to his home in Denver Saturday to decide his future.
Since being replaced by Craig Neal at point guard in the starting lineup after the second game, Christian's role diminished.
"There is no doubt that I tend to play a small number of people and Christian is now the eighth man," Cremins said.
Christian came to Tech in 1986 as one of the country's top guards despite missing his senior year at Denver's Mullen Prep with a broken leg. He broke the same leg again and missed the 1986-87 season.

UNCW Posts Win Over Appalachian State

The Mountaineers pulled within 41-37 on a jump shot by Sam Gibson at 19:42, but the Seahawks retaliated with eight straight points to take control.
Mark Gary's layup with 7:15 left gave the Seahawks their biggest lead at 62-47.
N.C.-Wilmington's final 22 points came at the free throw line, where Bender hitting 18-of-18.

USSR, USA Both Set For 88 Games

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — For the first time 12 years, the Soviet Union and the United States will face each other in a Summer Olympic Games.
"We do not intend to boycott the 1988 Seoul Olympics," Marat Gramov, chairman of the Soviet Sports Committee and chief of the National Olympic Committee, said Monday.
The final decision on Soviet participation will be made at an NOC meeting next week, Gramov said.
The United States and the Soviet Union last competed together in the 1976 Games at Montreal. The United States boycotted the 1980 Games at Moscow in a protest of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. The Soviets responded with a boycott of the 1984 Games at Los Angeles, citing security concerns.

"We find the Olympic movement positive, as it unites the youth of the world," he said.
He said that the Soviet athletes were "seriously preparing" for both the winter and summer games. The Winter Games will be held at Calgary next month.
The official deadline for accepting invitations to the Summer Olympics is Jan. 17. The Games will be held Sept. 17-Oct. 2.

Gramov, whose committee oversees all sports activities, including Olympic preparations, was the official who announced the Soviet boycott in 1984.
Gramov said the Soviet NOC has discussed the question of participating in the Seoul Games.

Lady Gamecocks Roll By ECU, 71-53

From Staff Reports
COLUMBIA, S.C. — The University of South Carolina ran past East Carolina's Lady Pirates, 71-53, in basketball action Monday night.
The Lady Gamecocks took the lead after the opening tap and never trailed on the night, leading all the way.
South Carolina got off 14 more shots from the floor than did the Lady Pirates, hitting on six more to provide them with much of the lead. Four of those goals were 3-pointers, giving the Lady Gamecocks a 16-point advantage from the floor. Karen Middleton nailed three of four from the 3-point range to lead that parade.
East Carolina took only one shot from behind the arc, that by Wendy Morton, and it missed.
The Lady Pirates also had seven more turnovers which helped South Carolina in its edge. The Gamecocks, however, held only a 40-38 advantage on the boards.
The Gamecocks also used a balanced scoring attack to help them among. Martha Parker led the way with 16 points while Lisa Diaz had 12, Middleton had 11 and Schonna Banner had 10.
In contrast, East Carolina had only two in double figures, Gretta O'Neal Savage and Monique Pompili, each with 12.
The loss dropped the Lady Pirates to 4-6 on the year. They remain on the road to face South Carolina State on Wednesday.

Unseld Still Feeling His Way As A Rookie NBA Head Coach

BOWIE, Md. (AP) — Wes Unseld admits he's not comfortable yet with being the head coach of the Washington Bullets. He's had only 27 games experience as an NBA assistant.

"It happened so quick. To be honest with you, I was asked a question and I gave an answer," Unseld said Monday after running his first practice at the team's training facility at Bowie State College.

Bullets owner Abe Pollin offered the job to Unseld on Sunday afternoon after meeting with team Vice Chairman Jerry Sachs and Vice President-General Manager Bob Ferry.

Ferry said that, at Sunday's meeting, it was decided "something had to be done."

"The team was not functioning as a unit," Ferry said. "It was really a case of 'It's the coach's job.' Hopefully, Wes can come in and blend the talents together."

He added that Unseld "brings a new dimension, a new look. Something fresh, something new."

Unseld inherits a team, after expecting to improve upon its 42-40 record last year, that lost eight of its first 10 games this season and has already had three losing streaks of four or more games.

The Bullets lost 111-100 Saturday night to the Houston Rockets for their fifth straight loss under former coach Kevin Loughery.

"I don't feel thrust into anything," Unseld said. "It was my decision (to take the job). I could have turned it down."

He met with the team for more than 30 minutes before Monday's practice.

"I told them what I expected from them and what they could expect from me," said Unseld, who still looks much as he did when he led the Bullets to the 1978 NBA championship as a player.

Unseld hasn't given up on the 1987-88 season, but isn't about to rush into any changes.

"At this point, there isn't enough time," he said. "The only thing I've done is eliminate a number of plays. We're somewhat groping, but I've explained the way I envision this team to be."

Unseld said that changes will be made gradually, but added that "there is still time to make this a season."

Unseld takes over a team 8-19 this season that never came together under year for Coach Loughery.

Bullets forward Bernard King said the team has "tried to find the solutions to the problem. There has been a problem. If that will be resolved by a coaching change, we'll soon find out."

Unseld said, "You can pick any aspect of it, shooting, rebound, defense. ... Certain games we played well and moved the ball very well and other times we didn't."

The new coach "hasn't been specific" about any changes, according to guard Frank Johnson.

"He just wants us to go out there and work hard," Johnson said. "We've got a long way to go. This is not going to be a quick fix."

Are The 49ers Tough Enough To Win It?

By Scott Ostler
(c) 1988, Los Angeles Times
I worry about the San Francisco 49ers.

This is a fine team, supposedly destined for the Super Bowl. I don't worry that they might get beat because I have no rooting interest. I worry that they might get hurt. They just might be too wimpy.

A harsh word, I know, but how else can I say it?

Pro football is a barbaric, savage, cutthroat, ruthless sport. And that's the action in the stands. On the field, it's caveman time, survival of the meanest.

So, check out the 49er quarterback, Joe Montana.

Montana marries a beautiful actress, and they decide to go on a strict, healthy diet together. Joe loves his junk food, but hey, marriage is all about teamwork and sacrifice.

Well, Joe sneaks out one day in his sports car. He cruises into the drive-through at a Jack-in-the-Box. His car phone rings. He answers. It is his lovely wife, Jennifer. Just then, the voice in the speaker booms out, "Welcome to Jack-in-The-Box. May I take your order?"

Joe is the first husband ever to be caught red-handed on his way to a secret rendezvous with a Bonus Jack.

No big deal for the average Joe, but this is Joe Montana, king of the quarterbacks. Do you think that anyone ever told Norm Van Brocklin or Johnny U they couldn't eat Twinkies?

Next example: I'm interviewing Montana one day at 49er team headquarters, the day after he leads a typical 49er slaughter of Los Angeles' sacrificial Rams. Joe had been merely brilliant, at least to the untrained eye.

In a few minutes, Joe will meet with players and coaches for a film review of the game. Each player will be issued a computer evaluation of his performance. A report card.

Joe is actually nervous. He explains that the report card features coach's markings — pluses for good, circles for OK and minuses for bad. He figures he's in for a few minuses.

"You get a lot of razzing," he says. "I hate getting ridiculed. In a way, I'm a perfectionist."

I stare at Montana.

"Can't you just tell them who you are?" I ask.

He shrugs. And, I swear, he blushes.

I form a mental picture of an assistant coach handing Bobby Layne a report card. Next scene, Bobby is in some smoky lounge shooting 8-ball and knocking down shooters, while back at the team camp three rookie linemen are trying to dislodge a rolled-up report card from an assistant coach's mouth.

In real life, Joe Montana, brow furrowed, heads for his team meeting.

But that's one guy. Surrounded by drippy-fanged Hell's Angels in cleats, right?

Montana's star receiver is nicknamed Fifi, because he stole his hair style idea from a poodle.

Fifi? Think about that.

How tough is Jerry Rice? As a kid, his claim to juvenile delinquency fame was that he skipped school one day. As punishment, the principal made Jerry try out for the football team.

In college, Rice laundered his own uniform so it would look nice, and he sometimes wept after losses.

What about on the field? Like any great receiver, Rice comes to the huddle demanding that the quarterback throw him the ball, describing how he will embarrass the defense. Right?

"Jerry is pretty quiet," Montana says of Rice. "He might say, 'My guy's playing me too tight, I think I can get open long.' But that's rare."

See what I mean? And the coach... Bill Walsh plays tennis, reads books without pictures, drinks wine poured from corked bottles and probably doesn't even chew gum, let alone throw it.

This is a team in big trouble, then? So it would seem. But you check the standings; the 49ers are just about unbeatable.

Walsh lays out a game plan like Napoleon. You get the impression that he is working with the unfair advantage of a few million extra brain cells. Rice steps onto the field, and suddenly it's the man trying to defend against Fifi whose hair stands on end. Rice not only moves as well as any receiver alive, he has hands like pastry bear claws. Soft and sticky.

And his polite and shy manner notwithstanding, Rice has that lean and hungry look. The word Montana and other admirers use most often to describe Rice is hungry.

Maybe Fifi's wife doesn't let him eat junk food.

Montana? Mr. Meek steps onto the field and it is his. This is a personality transformation modern science cannot explain.

Joe analyzes defenses and rips them to shreds with his audibles. He sneers at blitzes and flying forearms. He sees the field in wide-screen slow motion.

Above all, he is cool. Opponents would like to make Joe bleed, but they'd settle for making him perspire.

Defying all logic and convention, the 49ers have the best quarterback, wide receiver and coach in football, maybe the best defense, and probably the best team.

Go figure. Maybe this is the first step in the Big Game Plan, where the meek inherit the earth.

Wright Seized Starting Position

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Felix Wright waited more than two years to become a starter for the Cleveland Browns before he finally took matters into his own hands.

Wright became a minor overnight sensation with two long interception returns against the Los Angeles Rams on Oct. 26. He became the Browns' starting free safety two weeks later.

"I think that (Rams' game) was the turning point, because that very next game I was getting more playing time," Wright said after a workout Monday at Dodgertown, where the Browns are practicing Saturday's AFC divisional playoff game against the Indianapolis Colts.

Wright is the third player to start at free safety for the Browns since former first-round draft pick Don Rogers died of a cocaine overdose in the summer of 1986.

Chris Rockins, a No. 2 pick in 1984, was Cleveland's free safety in 1986, and Al Gross started at that spot for the first four regular games this season.

But Gross injured a knee shortly after Wright's performance against the Rams, and Wright has held the starting job despite Gross's return to health a month ago. Rockins continues to get plenty of playing time at safety and linebacker.

"This is the first position I've ever started at in the NFL," Wright said. "It's something I always wanted to accomplish. I would get down and out, but I had people around me trying to help me keep my head up. This is a great feeling."

Wright, 28, joined the Browns in 1985 after three standout years with the Hamilton Tiger Cats of the Canadian Football League.

He was Cleveland's "nickel" back for two-plus seasons, entering games as the fifth defensive back in passing situations, until Oct. 26.

In that game, Wright stopped one Rams' drive with a goal line in-

Diplomat's Abused Son To Stay In U.S. During Court Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — A boy allegedly abused by his diplomat-father has been temporarily spared from returning to Zimbabwe despite an attorney's argument that the African country believes the United States kidnapped the youngster.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Monday that 9-year-old Terrence Karamba can stay in a Long Island foster home while lawyers battle against his immediate transfer to State Department custody.

The three-judge panel tentatively scheduled a hearing on the boy's appeal for Thursday.

"We want the status quo of the child maintained for a short period time," said Circuit Judge Ralph K. Winter.

The panel sent the case back to federal court for Judge Jack B. Weinstein to appoint a guardian to represent the boy, who was placed in foster care Dec. 11.

The boy was removed from his family after his elementary school teachers here noticed suspicious scars and injuries.

City attorneys said the boy's father, Floyd, an administrative attaché to the Zimbabwean Mission to the United Nations brutalized the boy.

Weinstein has ruled that because of Karamba's diplomatic status, the boy should be turned over to the State Department for return to Zimbabwean mission.

But attorneys for the city Human Resources Administration and Legal Aid Society said that transfer will result in his being returned to the southern African country against his will. They said the boy needs counseling to make the transition easier.

"He is terrified of going back to Zimbabwe," Legal Aid lawyer Henry Weintraub told the judges.

Weintraub said the boy has been under tremendous psychological stress and had attempted to jump from a moving car and from a second floor window to avoid returning home.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Igou Allbray argued that "Zimbabwe is angry and frustrated and has accused this country of kidnapping the child."

When the appeals judges expressed doubt the boy could win political asylum here, Weintraub countered that the diplomatic fight with Zimbabwe was "causing that country great embarrassment." The attorney said the boy has "a very real fear of political persecution."

Karamba, who was not prosecuted for child abuse, returned to Zimbabwe Dec. 28. His wife and two daughters, ages 3 and 6, remain here but are expected to return to Zimbabwe shortly, said Legal Aid attorney Elizabeth Johans.

The boy's injuries included "whipping scars all over his body" and "pieces of skin missing," said Robert F. Wayburn, an HRA attorney.

"The issue here, your honors, is strictly one of diplomatic immunity," Allbray told the appeals judges. "It's as if this child never left Zimbabwe."

Winter countered: "Diplomatic immunity is a shield, not a sword. No one is suing the child."

New Violence Leaves Palestinian Dead In Clash With Israeli Troops

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers today shot and killed one Palestinian and wounded seven others during a clash with stone-throwing protesters in the Gaza Strip, the army said.

"There were severe disturbances of order in Khan Younis during which one local man was killed and seven wounded," said an army official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The military said five Israeli soldiers were injured in stone-throwing incidents in the towns of Khan Younis and Rafah, about 50 miles south of Tel Aviv.

The death brought to 24 the number of Arabs shot to death by Israeli soldiers since a wave of increased unrest began Dec. 8 in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The Arab-run Palestine Press Service identified the dead man as Ali Mohammed Dahlam, 25, of Khan Younis. The news agency said his 16-year-old cousin, Basil Dahlam, was wounded.

Also today, police said a firebomb was thrown at an Israeli bus carrying tourists through an Arab neighborhood in east Jerusalem. It exploded but there were no injuries.

Youths in Gaza City used stones to block the main shopping thoroughfare, Omar Al Mukhtar Street, where shops were closed in a commercial strike.

Maher Nasser, a spokesman for the United Nations agency that administers refugee camps, said Israeli troops in four or five vehicles had entered Al Shati camp while demonstrations were taking place.

He said the sky was black from the smoke of burning tires in the towns of Khan Younis and Rafah.

Palestinian moderates threatened a campaign of civil disobedience to protest the Israeli actions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, seized during the 1967 Middle East War.

Mubarak Awad, a campaign organizer, said Palestinians would be urged to boycott Israeli products, withhold labor and taxes from the Israeli market, and dress in black to protest the Israeli crackdown on Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

About 60,000 Palestinians from the Gaza Strip and 55,000 from the West Bank go to Israel each day to work in factories or on assembly lines, and Israel has become dependent on the cheap source of labor they provide.

Awad, a Palestinian with U.S. citizenship, said 14 moderate Palestinians were organizing the disobedience campaign.

"People are open and ready to act. They got a little feeling of power (during the unrest) and they don't want things to die down and return to the way they were before," said Awad, who has challenged authorities by staying in Israel after the expiration of his visa.

Awad said he envisioned marches of hundreds of Palestinians to prisons, where they would demand to be jailed along with their brethren.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, speaking on Israel army radio, said acts of civil disobedience would only harm Palestinians.

"I don't think it will happen because the residents of the (occupied) territories also have their own limitations. Whoever disobeys will make his own life miserable..." said Peres. "Whoever suggests making conditions more difficult will just be kicking the ball into his own net."

Israel has come under international criticism for its shooting of protesters and its issuance of deportation orders against nine Palestinian activists accused of instigating unrest.

The United States, Israel's close ally, and Egypt, the only Arab country to have made peace with the Jewish state, warned Israel that deportation orders could cause more unrest.

U.S. Will Release More Cubans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service says the balance of 1,149 Cubans approved for release from federal prisons will be freed as space opens up in halfway houses or relatives' homes.

The INS said Monday that only about 100 of the Cuban detainees approved for release so far had actually been freed.

"We expect to release more to close relatives or to halfway houses as space becomes available," said

INS spokesman Vern Jervis.

Cuban detainees turned down by the INS for release can take their cases to three Justice Department panels set up for the purpose.

"INS has been conducting its reviews, but hasn't referred cases to the Department of Justice yet," said Joe Krovinsky, a Justice spokesman. "It's possible some of the cases will come over later this week."

After rioting by Cuban inmates in the federal prisons in Atlanta and Oakdale, La. in late November and early December, the Reagan administration created special appeals panels to give each of some 7,600 imprisoned Cubans a forum of last resort to wage a fight against continued detention and possible deportation.

Among Cubans scheduled for deportation are 2,545 who were to have been returned home when Cuba suspended a 1984 agreement. All were convicted of crimes in this country.

Israel Says Deportations Necessary

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli officials said they had no choice but to order nine Palestinian activists deported, and they rebutted allegations by the United States and other nations that the move was illegal.

Four of the activists have appealed the ouster orders, handed down Sunday. The same four began hunger strikes Sunday, according to the Arab-run Palestine Press Service.

Their attorney said they would starve rather than be deported.

On Monday, Israeli officials defended the expulsions as necessary to prevent more unrest in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Since rioting broke out there Dec. 8, troops have shot and killed at least 23 Palestinians.

Robbie Sabel, a Foreign Ministry legal adviser, said the deportations were authorized by Jordanian law in effect in the West Bank when Israel seized it from Jordan in 1967.

"Israel's actions are in full conformity both with the law in force in the territories, which is Jordanian law, and international law," he told reporters.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told Israel radio: "Deportations are the maximum deterrent punishment we have today, and we use this measure in the smallest possible manner. We use it with people that cannot be reformed, who keep inciting and initiating disturbances."

The deportations have been criticized by Israel's normally close allies, Britain and the United States, as well as Egypt, the only Arab country to make peace with Israel. They

Haitian Coalition Joins In Boycott

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — A coalition representing professional, student and labor organizations has joined opposition politicians in calling for a boycott of the national election the junta will hold Jan. 17.

"We declare null any election carried out under the auspices of the present junta," the Civil Society coalition said in a statement released Monday. It claims it represents nearly 50 civic and religious organizations.

The military run junta, which is led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, issued no response to the coalition's declaration.

Haiti's first presidential and legislative election in 30 years was canceled hours after it began Nov. 29 when thugs rampaged through Port-au-Prince, shooting or hacking to death at least 34 people.

Opposition leaders charged the thugs included supporters of the former Duvalier regime and members of the military.

The independent Electoral Council, which canceled the election because of the violence, was dismissed by the junta, a provisional government established when dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to exile in France in February 1986.

The junta then appointed a new Electoral Council, revised the election law and set the Jan. 17 date for a new election. The new law allows the military to closely supervise balloting and could permit some supporters of the former Duvalier regime to run for office. They were barred from the Nov. 29 election.

On Monday, the president of the former Electoral Council, Ernst Mirville, was barred from leaving Haiti, according to a television broadcast.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Recognize the obstacles in your path, and find a way to remove them without changing your plans. Have a polite chat with your mate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You would be wise to use your charm if you want to achieve an important goal today. Postpone fun with your friends until your mood improves.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Study every detail of a new venture, but keep the main issue firmly in mind. Enjoy an amusement with your mate, but avoid arguing.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): An influential person with an inflated ego could give you a very difficult time if you don't maintain your sense of humor tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Figure out a way to make your home more charming and harmonious, and you'll be happier there. Get plenty of rest tonight.

Singer Lynn Anderson Tries To Find Fame She Gave Up

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Lynn Anderson, clad in black leather from head to toe, jumps boldly on a huge motorcycle and roars away to a radio station.

"Play my record or I'll smash your face in," she snarls at the befuddled music director.

No, it didn't really happen — not from this gentle country music star who made "(I Never Promised You a) Rose Garden" a national hit in 1970, who sang for two years on the Lawrence Welk Show and has performed for four presidents.

But it's an image she jokes about cultivating as a way to seize the spotlight that has evaded her for the last few years.

"I'm going to do what Tina Turner did — break all the rules," she said.

Miss Anderson is re-emerging in the music industry after quitting the business in 1978 to marry a Louisiana oil man, Harold Stream III. They divorced in 1982, and she's still trying to re-establish herself.

"For a while there, I felt like the Lone Ranger," she said about her lonely comeback.

The 40-year-old singer with a strong, husky voice wants to capitalize on her past to reclaim her future.

"I am the Annette Funicello of country music," she said in an interview. "People remember me from the Lawrence Welk Show, like they remember her from the Mickey Mouse Club and the beach movies. I want to use those good memories and expand on them. They stopped for a while."

"People think I left and got married to a millionaire and got out of it filthy rich. That's dead wrong. But I got two gorgeous kids and then proceeded to build up my self-esteem."

She sang on the Welk show from 1967 to 1969, then signed with Columbia Records of Nashville and became one of the top country music vocalists in the 1970s. Then she ended her singing career.

"I called CBS and said, 'I'm quitting. They had a fit,' she said. "I threw away what a lot of people would have loved to have. I lost a lot of credibility."

Apologies

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Joe Elliott, lead singer for the heavy-metal band Def Leppard, says he still suffers "sleepless nights" because of his insult to El Paso residents five years ago, but his apologies have fallen on deaf ears.

Mayor Jonathan Rogers has urged a boycott of Def Leppard since 1983, when Elliott told a concert crowd in Tucson, Ariz., that the band had played the night before in El Paso, "that place with all the greasy Mexicans."

Elliott later broadcast an apology to El Paso residents and Def Leppard offered to donate $10,000 to needy children here. The band is scheduled to play in the border city Feb. 15, but Rogers has refused to be placated.

COMEBACK — Country singer Lynn Anderson, famed for her 1970 hit "(I Never Promised You A) Rose Garden," is trying to re-establish herself in the recording industry. She quit the business in the 1970s to marry a millionaire oil man. That marriage ended in divorce in 1982. (AP Laserphoto)

"I quit cold. I'd reached a lot of goals I'd set at age 16 or 17. I'd made a lot of hit records, traveled all over the world and won a lot of awards."

The honors included a Grammy for "Rose Garden," which had sold 16 million copies the last time she checked.

"It was popular because it touched on emotions," she said. "It was perfectly timed. It was out just as we came out of the Vietnam years and a lot of people were trying to recover."

"This song stated that you can make something out of nothing. You take it and go ahead. It fit me well and I'll be proud to be connected to it until I die."

She remembers Welk as a superb judge of music and the public. "He liked all kinds of music; he's a true eclectic musician. His belief was to give the people what they wanted, just like P.T. Barnum."

"He was absolutely wholesome," she said. "Having a family entertainment show, he tried to include something for everyone. He felt country music was coming into its own and deserved to be on national TV. At that time, I was the only one singing country music on national TV every week."

"He's one of my heroes and always will be."

Most recently, she had the single "Read Between the Lines" on the country charts. She also has teamed up with Gary Morris on the duet "You're Welcome to Tonight."

She can add those credits to an impressive resume despite her time away from music. She has performed for Presidents Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan. She has made television appearances with such stars as Lucille Ball, Bing Crosby, John Wayne and Tom Jones. She acted in episodes of "Starsky and Hutch" and in the TV-movie "Country Gold."

Miss Anderson recorded the song "At This Moment" on an album a few years before Billy Vera had a No. 1 pop hit with the same record. Likewise, she had recorded "Cry" years before Crystal Gayle and says the Carpenters followed her version of "Top of the World."

Right now she's weighing the chance to appear in three television specials, plus other projects.

"Music is my blood and bones," she said. "I ain't done yet."

Actress Joining 'Falcon Crest'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mariska Hargitay joins CBS' "Falcon Crest" on Friday as Carly Fixx, a role she describes as a "little Angela Channing."

She plays the half-sister of Dan Fixx. He's the protege of Angela Channing, and she's the matriarch of the wine-growing Gioberti family of Tuscany Valley. Carly is the half-sister that Fixx never knew he had.

Younger viewers will likely recognize Hargitay from last year's "Downtown" and from Ronnie Milsap's music video "She Loves My Car." She's also appeared in a few small movies.

Older viewers would recognize the names of her parents. She is the daughter of Jayne Mansfield, the 1950s blonde sex symbol, and Mickey Hargitay, a former Mr. Universe. Mansfield died in an automobile accident in 1967.

Hargitay, who was three when her mother died, has her beauty, but her hair is brown and her complexion is dark.

"When I was 12, my father taught me gymnastics," she said. "We did it in the living room. He was an adagio dancer and a gymnast before he was a weightlifter. They told him he was too old. That's why he tells me I can do anything I want to do."

She was studying acting when her agent asked her to audition for "Falcon Crest." It was for the role of Shannon. "I read for it and they called me back two days later," she said. "They said I did good, but Tahnee Welch, the daughter of Raquel, got the role."

"They called me back the next week and said they loved me so much they were writing me a part. I love that."

A further examination of the lineage and family connections of this long-running, prime-time soap opera might require the services of a genealogist.

Since the show made its debut in 1981, there has been much traffic in and out of Tuscany Valley of mysterious strangers with vague relationships. Hargitay's character is simply another traveler in the tradition.

"I find out I have this rich brother in California, so I come looking for a father figure," she said. "I'm this wild, crazy girl in a lot of pain looking for a family. She finds Dan, who's a protege of Angela Channing and is having an affair with Melissa Cumson. He's a good guy, mysterious, a loner."

"Carly's a person who'll do or say anything. I'm not disrespectful, I just don't know better. I'm like a little Angela Channing. She manipulates me, she uses me to get information on other people. Yet, I treat Angela in a way no one else ever has. I call her a 'groovy old lady' or 'Angie' or 'Angie Baby.'"

Hargitay adds, "I'm in love with Lance Cumson, but he thinks I'm a kid. You have to laugh. It's so funny. But the other side is this kind of stuff does happen. But what makes it so weird is that it all happens to one family."

Hargitay said she auditions regularly for parts, which is also how she landed the role of the street kid in "Downtown." While a student at UCLA she kept going to auditions and got roles in small films.

Not So Bad

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Valerie Harper says 1987 wasn't all that bad, despite losing her TV sitcom "Valerie" in a dispute with Lorimar Television.

She says she's had more time to spend with her 4-year-old daughter, whom she and husband Tony Cacciotti adopted last March. She also had more time to devote to UNICEF and anti-hunger projects.
