Storm Racing Across State Brings Snow

By The Associated Press

A vicious snowstorm that pelted much of the Southwest with more than a foot of snow roared into North Carolina today at 40 to 50 mph, as officials opened shelters and closed schools, and residents raced to grocery stores. "Hopefully people will just sleep all day," said Fuller Rice, a dispatcher with the state Highway Patrol.

The entire state was under a winter storm warning today, according to the National Weather Service in Raleigh. As much as a foot of snow is expected to fall in the mountains, while the foothills and Piedmont may get 8 inches and the Coastal Plains 2-4, said weather service meteorologist Larry Gabric. The coast may receive an inch by tonight, he said.

"You can expect lots of snow and cold temperatures," said Odell Sluder of the National Weather Service in Asheville. The snow started falling there at about 2 a.m., he said.

By mid-morning, Franklin had received 8 inches, while the Asheville airport had 5 inches on the ground, the weather service said.

"If people take time there shouldn't be problems," said Buncombe County Sheriff's Department dispatcher Danny Bagwell.

Road crews from the state Department of Transportation and the city of Monroe began salting roadways about 5:30 a.m., but many motorists still slid into ditches, authorities said.

According to city and county officials, as of 8:15 a.m., about 20 wrecks had been reported within a couple of hours.

Richard Jones, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham Airport, said the storm had formed over Texas and moved eastward, colliding with bitterly cold arctic air over North Carolina and creating ideal conditions for snow.

The storm is expected to move away from the state's coast by early Friday, he said.

The chance of snow in North Carolina varies from 30 percent along the coast to 70 percent in the mountains, and increases for Friday, he said.

On Wednesday, Gov. Jim Martin ordered that 101 armories in 74 counties remain open as refuge centers for people who need shelter from the cold.

The shelters are for people who have suffered power outages, stranded motorists and others in need of aid, Martin said.

Schools Close Early, Armories Offer Haven To Area's Cold

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County schools closed early today as the county braced for more cold in a winter snow storm that was sweeping across the state.

Several people fled the frigid temperatures Wednesday night to stay at the National Guard Armory in Greenville, and Sgt. Mack Tripp, the supervisor there, expects more tonight.

Greenville and Farmville National Guard Armories, like all others in the state, were opened following a directive from Gov. Jim Martin that they provide shelter for the public until the current cold weather subsides.

The Farmville armory had no guests Wednesday night, but Sgt. Stanley Mercer, supervisor there, said if the weather becomes as severe as is predicted, he believes there will be some people there tonight. His staff and the building's heating plant will be in full operation, he said.

Tripp said his seven full-time staff members will be rotating round the clock and "the troops" will be called in only if the governor directs that they be. Tripp and Mercer said that anyone who stays at either armory should bring blankets and/or sleeping bags and food supplies. No food will be provided unless the governor so directs.

Tripp said all National Guard vehicles are gassed up and ready if they are needed to transport people to the shelter or to assist people in jobs essential to the public welfare in getting to work. This was done during a 20-inch snow in 1980, he recalled. National Guard volunteers transported Pitt County Memorial Hospital workers and some others to and from their job sites.

This is not the first time the armory has been used as an emergency shelter, he said, but in his 22-year career, he believes its the first time all the armories in the state have been directed to be open at the same time.

N.C. Department of Transportation maintenance division employees for the eight-county region served by the Greenville DOT office will be on call throughout the winter storm, Andy Brown, division maintenance engineer, said. He said the division has a winter storm plan that is being carried out. Salt and sand spreaders and snow plows are in readiness and will be activated as soon as it appears appropriate. Priority is given to U.S. and N.C.-designated roads, with secondary ones following, he indicated.

Mayo Allen, director of the Greenville public works department, said snow plows, motor graders, sandspreaders, dump trucks, etc., were ready for whatever precipitation the storm brings to Greenville. He said main traffic arteries will be gragged first and then secondary streets will be worked on. Sand will be used first, salt only as a last resort, he said, because it damages both streets and vehicles.

"We won't have a big problem clearing snow unless we get six or eight inches or more," he said. "Sleet or ice will be the big challenge. We hope those don't come."

The Pitt County schools closed at noon, according to plans announced by John McKnight, deputy superintendent, shortly after 10:30 a.m.

Martin also directed state agencies to work with emergency management coordinators to provide refuge sites within state buildings where National Guard facilities do not exist.

"Weather reports indicated that this will be the most severe weather to hit North Carolina this winter," Martin said. "We want to have at least one facility in every county opened and manned as a refuge of first resort to provide the public with shelter from the cold if there is a need."

The centers, which opened at 6 p.m. Wednesday, will remain open until the severe weather subsides, Martin said.

As residents prepared for the snow, so did city street department employees and schools. "We started putting chains on the trucks and getting ready for the snow (Wednesday) morning," said Mike Evans, Asheville street superintendent. "But we won't actually do anything until the snow hits."

In Raleigh, L. Mac Jones, Raleigh street superintendent, said, "We're getting all equipment ready so we can take action immediately ... There'll be problems with bridges and hills immediately."

Mecklenburg and Wake counties — the state's two biggest school districts — closed their doors today, officials said, as did many others.

At Raleigh-Durham Airport, 14 motor graders were available to keep runways cleared. Decisions on canceling flights will be up to individual airlines, an RDU spokesman said.

Carter Sets Jan. 18 For King Observance

In commemoration of the slain civil rights leader, Greenville Mayor Ed Carter has proclaimed Jan. 18 as Martin Luther King Jr. Day in Greenville.

King, assassinated in April 1968, was awarded the 1964 Nobel Prize for Peace for his applications of the principle of non-violent resistance in the struggle for racial equality in America.

"Martin Luther King Jr., is probably one of the greatest humanitarians of all time, both nationally and internationally," Carter said. "I'm particularly pleased we are recognizing this day, as it signifies unity and comradery in promoting good will in our community."

The Baptist minister played a pivotal role in the organization of the historic March on Washington D.C., on Aug. 28, 1963, when 200,000 people gathered in front of the Lincoln Memorial to hear King's famous "I have a dream," speech.

"Not only was it a great speech," Carter said, "but its meaning touched the heart of every American."

"King was a great orator with an ability to move you," Carter added. "He had a great ability to articulate, he commanded respect."

Carter said he heard King speak at Virginia State College in Petersburg, Va., and he met King after his speech.

"I'd never been so impressed with a speaker in all my life. He lived a very modest life. He lived by example, and I think that's a sign of true greatness," Carter said.

RUSTY DUKE

Rusty Duke Enters Race For Judge

Rusty Duke, a Greenville attorney with the firm of James, Hite, Avery & Duke, has filed as a candidate for judge of District Court in the 3rd Judicial District.

Kenneth Dews, a Pitt County Commissioner will serve as treasurer of his campaign. Frankie Moye, Duke's sister, will serve as campaign manager and co-ordinator.

The North Carolina General Assembly created a seventh District Court judgeship for the 3rd Judicial District, which consists of Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico counties.

Duke is a former mayor of the town of Farmville.

Soviets Again Signaling Possible Afghan Pullout

MOSCOW (AP) — Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said the Soviet Union hopes to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan this year in a plan that could be worked out at U.N.-sponsored talks in Geneva in February.

Soviet officials have been saying for months that the estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan could be withdrawn within a year.

But U.S. analysts said they believed Shevardnadze's comments Wednesday were the clearest signal yet that Moscow intends to meet its public pledge to be out of Afghanistan over a period of 12 months.

Shevardnadze's comments came in Afghanistan, where he held two days of talks. His remarks were carried by the Afghan news agency Bakhtar and distributed in Moscow by the Soviet news agency Tass.

Shevardnadze returned to Moscow on Wednesday from Kabul, the Afghan capital, where he met twice with Afghan leader Najib.

The foreign minister was quoted as saying again that the United States and other Western countries must stop supplying arms to the Islamic rebels fighting Afghanistan's Marxist, pro-Soviet government.

He indicated the United States had agreed to do so as part of a Soviet withdrawal package and that the deal could be wrapped up next month in Geneva.

"The U.S. side agrees to stop its assistance to armed groups staging combat operations in Afghanistan," Shevardnadze was quoted by Tass as saying.

However, a U.S. diplomat in Moscow, who spoke on condition of

Dollar Falls As Caution Hits Foreign Trade Marts

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After a stunning three-day surge, the dollar slipped lower against most other major currencies today as caution returned to foreign exchange markets.

The dollar was up sharply against the Japanese yen in Tokyo, rising to 128.95 yen from 127.13 yen late Wednesday, although it closed below its high for the day.

The same factors cited in the dollar's climb Wednesday in Europe and New York were cited in today's Tokyo activity — coordinated central-bank intervention and reports of a secret agreement among Japan, the United States and West Germany to maintain the dollar at between 125 and 140 yen.

But the dollar fell in Europe, trading at 1.6435 West German marks, down from 1.6500, and also declining against other currencies. Dealers in Europe and Tokyo said investors were becoming wary in advance of next week's scheduled release of U.S. trade figures for November, and experts warned a new assault on the dollar could come if the trade numbers are worse than expected.

On Wednesday, the report of a pact among the United States, Japan and West Germany dominated trading.

The lack of official comment on the report suggested to many traders that it was credible, and they scoured the market for dollars in a hectic buying spree. Skeptics were compelled to do likewise when the dollar's value jumped.

"Traders are a little scared, so they're not inclined to press the dollar lower, especially when the Officer C.M. Credle said a bank bag containing several items was grabbed from the hands of a woman as she left Diener's Bakery at 815 Dickinson Ave. in an incident reported at 6:24 p.m.

Officer L.C. Overby said a purse containing $90 in cash was taken from the Fast Fare on South Charles Boulevard in an incident reported at 6:50 p.m.

According to Officer R.G. Mendenhall, a bicycle was taken from 14B Langston Park Apartments in an incident reported at 11:37 p.m.

Larceny Arrests

Greenville police arrested four people in connection with three separate thefts incidents reported to the department Wednesday.

Officer L.R. Kepler said Elva Parkinson Smiley, 75, of 249 Lochview Drive was charged with shoplifting in connection with the theft of a book valued at $4.46 from Kroger Sav-On on Greenville Boulevard that was reported at 11:42 a.m.

Officer J.W. Isenhour said David Lynn Paige, 23, of 1500 W. Fourth St. was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of a smoked ham valued at $26.75 from the Sav-A-Center at Greenville Square Shopping Center that was reported at 6 p.m.

According to Officer R.L. Smith, Timothy Wayne Gaunce, 17, of Wilson was arrested on a larceny charge in connection with the theft of a power surge control from Nichols Discount Center on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 6:31 p.m.

Officer M.A. Jordan said Daniel Lee Kelley, 28, of Wilson was charged with aiding and abetting larceny in connection with the incident.

Drug Charges

Robert Michael Etheridge, 32, of Route 2, Wilson, was arrested on drug charges by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer L.E. White said Etheridge was charged with possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia, as well as with driving while his license was revoked, in connection with a noon incident at the intersection of Tyson Street and Greenville Boulevard.

Annual Gathering

The Pitt County Historical Society's annual "Old Christmas Tea" will be held Sunday from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the home of Frank Wooten, 519 Longmeadow Road.

Organized in 1927, the society seeks to preserve historical information on the county.

Teacher Of The Year

W.H. Robinson Elementary School has selected Kathy G. Harrell as its 1988 Teacher of the Year.

Ms. Harrell, who has taught in Georgia and Pinetops, is completing her ninth year at Robinson. She received her bachelor's degree from Georgia State and her master's degree from East Carolina University, where she is continuing her education.

Grimesland Board

The regular board meeting of the town of Grimesland will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Town Hall on Pitt Street.

McKinney To Speak

Bones McKinney, who is known for his color commentary during Atlantic Coast Conference basketball games, will speak about diabetes Monday in Greenville.

McKinney will speak at 7:30 p.m. in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital auditorium. The program on "Take Care of Yourself. It's Later Than You Think!" is being sponsored by the Pitt County chapter of the American Diabetes Association.

McKinney is a former head basketball coach at Wake Forest University.

Solicitation Permit

The Greenville Police Department has issued a solicitation permit to the Winterville Jaycees allowing the chapter to raise money for needy children by calling Greenville residents for donations from 0 a.m. to 9 p.m. through April 15.

Media Notifications

The Pitt County school system has identified area news media to be notified in the event of delayed openings, school dismissals and early closings because of adverse weather conditions.

Students and parents should consult broadcasts of WNCT-TV, WITN-TV, WRQR-FM, Greenville Cable Television, WNCT-AM/FM, WBZQ-AM, WRNS-FM, WKKE-FM, WRAL-FM, WTRG-FM or WDLX-FM, public information director Barry Gaskins said.

During these procedures, calls should not be made to the school system's central office or to individual schools, he said.

Planning Award

The town of Bear Grass will receive a $2,000 development planning award as part of $50,644 appropriated for the grants by Gov. Jim Martin.

The money will enable Bear Grass and other small communities to be competitive in the application process for the $37 million in Community Development block grant funds which are allocated to North Carolina each year.

New Term On Panel

Dr. L.H. Zincone of Greenville, chairman and professor of decision sciences and director of the Bureau of Business Research at East Carolina University's School of Business, has been reappointed to the N.C. Alcoholism Research Authority by Gov. Jim Martin.

A graduate of the University of Virginia, Zincone is chairman of the Greenville Utilities Commission and is on the board of directors of the Greenville Noon Rotary Club.

Program Auditions

The Greenville Choral Society will audition for its spring program Sunday from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at Memorial Baptist Church.

The spring program will feature Benjamin Britten's Festival Te Deum, Mozart's Solum Vespers, and a patriotic work by Howard Hanson.

For more information call Rhonda Fleming at 756-3618.

Awareness Day Set

The radiation oncology department of the East Carolina University School of Medicine will sponsor a "Breast Cancer Awareness Day" Feb. 6.

Cancer physicians and nurses will volunteer their time to give free breast examinations and instructions in breast self-examination using simulated models. For women whose exams or ages indicate a need for mammography, a reduced rate certificate for a mammogram will be issued.

Each session will take about 30 minutes. Appointments may be made by calling the center between now and Feb. 5 at 551-2207. The toll-free number for people in the Greenville telephone exchange is 1-800-722-3281.

Class Had Reunion

Twenty-three of the 39 members of the Belvoir-Falkland High School class of 1957 and most of their spouses attended the group's 30th reunion recently in Greenville.

Also attending were two former faculty members, O.V. Harrell of Goldsboro and Eugene James of Belvoir.

William "Bud" Little was recognized by the class members for having the youngest child, and Loyce Corbett Caraway was recognized for having the most grandchildren and the youngest grandchild. Shelby James Hunt was cited for overcoming the most trouble to attend the event.

The class meets for a reunion every five years. This year's gathering was coordinated by Joan Parker Bullock and Harold E. Harris.

Recycling Activities

Recyclable waste materials can be deposited at a collection site open seven days a week with the recently established service at the Pitt County compacting site at Bell's Fork, adjacent to the Farmer's Market.

With the cooperation of the county engineering department, workers from the Pitt County Mental Health Center will be on hand much of the day to provide assistance in receiving and sorting the materials brought in by the public.

Collection sites operated by the Greenville Recycling Committee with the help of volunteers, the Mental Health Center and East Carolina Vocational Center will continue to operate one Saturday a month to receive aluminum cans, newspaper, clean waste paper including shiny ad inserts, and cardboard.

The three recycling areas will be open from 8 until noon Saturday in the parking lots at Buyers' Market, Eastgate Shopping Center and Overton's Supermarket. The first Saturday of the month is the customary date for the sites to be open unless it falls on a holiday weekend.

For information about fund-raising through recycling contact the county engineering office at 830-6354. Other information about recycling may be obtained by calling 758-7832 or 756-9669.

Pitt Commissioners will discuss waste disposal at Monday's meeting.

Motorists Urged To Use Caution

With the weatherman predicting snow, changing to sleet and freezing rain, to move across the state today, Greenville police are urging drivers to be more cautious as they move over local streets and highways.

In fact, interim Police Chief Randy Nichols suggested that unless you have to be traveling, the best suggestion is don't drive.

Motorists should "drive safely and defensively and wear seat belts" if they have to be on the streets, Nichols said. And they should "be aware of winter driving hazards."

Nichols said drivers should "anticipate situations that call for reduced speed — slick road surfaces, poor visibility, turning maneuvers, stopping, intersections and bridges."

"Make sure the windshield and rear and side windows are free of dirt, ice or fog, and make sure headlights and taillights are clean so other drivers can see you," Nichols suggested.

Tires should be in good condition, windshield wiper blades and defrosters operating, batteries should be fully charged, brakes working properly and exhaust systems checked for leaks, he said.

"Compensate for bad weather by driving slower, using low headlight beams and turning on your directional signals well in advance of a turn," Nichols said, and "allow extra space between you and the car ahead (rain, ice or snow on streets increase the car's stopping distance), and avoid turning or breaking movements which can cause a skid (pump the breaks to give the car more traction with the road)."

Nichols also warned drivers to watch out for icy spots under shaded areas, at intersections and on bridges. He noted that ice may form on bridges before other road surfaces because of the circulation of air underneath.

North Carolina Highway Patrol officials said that road conditions in unprotected rural areas may be worse than conditions in municipalities. They suggested that drivers should carry emergency equipment such as a glass scraper, snow brush, booster cables, flares or emergency lights, a shovel and blankets for added safety if emergency situations occur.

And if snow or icy conditions are bad enough, tire chains may be needed.

Two States Hoard Water As Oil Slick Nears

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

West Virginia residents hoarded water in bathtubs and garbage cans and Ohio officials filled outdoor swimming pools as a million-gallon oil slick pushed down the Ohio River today, threatening water supplies for hundreds of thousands.

Pittsburgh-area residents, however, rejoiced as water gushed from spigots Wednesday for the first time in three days, although a makeshift connection failed this morning and 15,000 customers of the Robinson Township Municipal Authority were again without water.

"At least I got my dishes done" while the water was on, said Nancy Smarsh of Coraopolis.

Utility officials lifted glasses of water in toasts as water pumps roared back to life following Saturday night's fuel spill.

"It is great. It's absolutely great," Pat Pierce, 42, of Robinson Township, said Wednesday night as the tap water went back on, temporarily as it turned out.

More than anything, Ms. Pierce and her three daughters were looking forward to "nice warm baths."

"I'm the first one," said Ms. Pierce. "They come after me."

Farther west, however, about 8,000 customers of Midland's municipal water system near the Ohio border still were conserving water.

They avoided running out at 10 p.m. Wednesday, as earlier feared, and town emergency management director Vincent D'Itri said this morning that "if the trend continues, we could probably make it through the day." Emergency water tanks were in place as a precaution.

Diesel fuel from the Ashland Oil Co. tank that collapsed Saturday along the Monongahela River near West Elizabeth, Pa., reached Steubenville, Ohio, 94 miles downstream, Wednesday. The slick was expected to reach Mingo Junction, then Wheeling, W.Va., 114 miles downstream from the Ashland plant, sometime today.

Dry spigots did not seem an imminent threat in Ohio River communities today, however, thanks to reserve and alternate supplies, conservation and enhanced purification.

In Steubenville, municipal swimming pools were filled despite near-zero temperatures, and some school restrooms were closed.

Crews in Wheeling rushed to finish a second pipeline spanning the Ohio River, and five tanker trucks were ready to keep hospitals open in case the water system is forced to close.

"I think we're as prepared as we possibly can be," said City Manager Mike Nau. "We might be criticized for doing too much if we don't have to shut the system down. But we've planned for the worst case scenario."

Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste said more than 1 million people could be affected if the slick reaches Cincinnati as expected by Jan. 24. He declared a state of emergency for Ohio River communities preparing to close water intake pipes or step up purification processes.

"This is the kind of situation that teaches you the lesson that when it comes to environmental protection there is no room for negligence, no room for carelessness, not even room for accident because the consequences are too great," said Lt. Gov. Paul Leonard.

The trouble was spreading downstream along with a surface slick estimated by the Ohio River Sanitation Commission to be 17 miles long, down from 28 miles Tuesday. Spokeswoman Jeanne Ison said the slick, which is breaking up, is accompanied by submerged, emulsified oil at least 16 feet deep.

Toronto, Ohio, a town of about 7,000 north of Steubenville, was forced to close its intake Wednesday, said Richard Shank, director of Ohio's Environmental Protection Agency. But nearby East Liverpool was able to turn its pumps back on and joined Steubenville in treating water with chemicals to make it clean enough to drink.

"I hate to be really optimistic ... but personally I think things are going to be OK," said East Liverpool Mayor James Scaife.

Near Pittsburgh, water began flowing to low-lying neighborhoods Wednesday night after a connection with neighboring Moon Township was completed. Residents cheered the return of water, which also brought hope to 1,000 workers laid off because of shortages and other problems stemming from the oil slick.

Conditions were expected to be almost normal by the weekend for residents of Robinson Township, the only municipality where water was entirely cut for some residents.

Texas Carries Out Death Penalty After Long Delay

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 27-year-old high-school dropout who murdered a woman during a burglary that netted a dollar was put to death by injection early today in an execution delayed three hours by confused state officials.

Robert Streetman, who repeatedly said he wanted to die after he was convicted, was pronounced dead at 3:26 a.m., seven minutes after the lethal drugs began flowing through his arms.

He had no final statement, replying only, "No, sir," when asked if he wished to do so.

The execution came only after cautious state officials, concerned that an unprecedented middle-of-the-night second appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court may have been pending, halted the execution about 2:10 a.m. as Streetman was being strapped to the death chamber gurney.

Less than 30 minutes earlier, the court had deadlocked 4-4 on a request for a stay, apparently clearing the way for the nation's first execution in 3½ months.

A Supreme Court spokeswoman, Suzanne Ward, however, said no second appeal was filed.

"We're willing to take as much time as possible," said J. Kirk Brown, Texas Department of Corrections legal counsel.

Brown said once the Texas attorney general's office and the governor's office were certain no appeals were pending, the execution went ahead.

Brown said he Streetman was annoyed at the last-minute confusion.

"He was prepared to go forward with the process and had readied himself," Brown said.

Streetman was convicted of the December 1982 slaying of Christine Baker, 44, who died when a single shot was fired at her through a window while she sat knitting and watching television in the living room of her home in Kountze, her dog lying at her side.

Streetman was among four men who planned to rob the house because they believed a large amount of money was there. Trial testimony, however, showed the only item taken was Mrs. Baker's purse, containing $1.

They unknowingly missed $64,000 in cash and checks hidden in the house. It wasn't until more than a month after her death that relatives accidentally found the money.

"It was a stupid thing," the slain woman's husband, Nyle, said this week of her death. "There was no purpose, no reason. Streetman to me was just a foul kid who went crazy — a total waste. His death won't correct anything."

One of Streetman's accomplices received probation, another was granted immunity and the third is serving a 45-year prison term.

Streetman refused requests for interviews in recent months, but said in the past that he had been ready to die since the day he arrived on death row in 1983.

"Why stay here 10 years and still have the same thing happen in the end?" he asked. "It's going to happen anyway."

Last week, he had a change of heart, and the Capital Punishment Clinic at the University of Texas Law School took over his case. On Wednesday, he changed his mind again, asking to be executed. Appeals continued, however, and federal judges in Beaumont and New Orleans denied a reprieve, sending the case to the Supreme Court.

Streetman spent his final day in his cell, writing in a notebook and reading, and visited with his mother and three sisters.

Streetman, who came within 30 hours of execution two years ago, was a ninth-grade dropout who worked as an oil derrick hand. Records show he started using drugs when he was 8 and was in and out of trouble with the law since then.

Streetman's execution was the nation's first since one in Georgia on Sept. 21.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Appropriate Offer

When it comes to the East Carolina University-North Carolina State football series, N.C. State has egg on its face. ECU, on the other hand, has a clean visage.

If N.C. State's refusal to play ECU on a home-home basis is the end of the series, then it ended for the right reasons. The misbehavior of fans at the 1987 series was despicable and regrettable, but canceling the series because of it would not have been the correct approach. However, asking that it be maintained on a financially workable home-home rotation, then ending the series because this request is refused, is sound.

ECU properly handled the question of continuing the rivalry between the two schools. It correctly proposed the series be maintained on a home-home basis only, with the home team keeping all gate proceeds. That offer was a reasonable approach to preserving what has become an important game to each entity.

It left N.C. State with no financial excuse for ending the series. The school would receive full profit from gate proceeds in Raleigh rather than splitting the booty with ECU, as it has for 18 years. Granted, N.C. State would not benefit monetarily from the years the game was played in Greenville, but keeping the full profit from the Raleigh years would compensate.

Besides, it is fair to expect N.C. State to come to Ficklen Stadium. ECU's students and football supporters deserve an opportunity to watch a match-up which has created so much enthusiasm in the past in their home stadium. It is correct for ECU to offer to take responsibility for its share of crowd control and amenities for the event.

In addition, ECU has consistently hosted top 20 teams in the past three years, such as Miami and Florida State, and these series have been based on a rotating home-home basis. The University has drawn large crowds in Ficklen with teams from much more distant cities than Raleigh and has in turn taken a respectable number of fans to other stadiums. N.C. State's refusal to schedule a home-home series with ECU raises a question of why the school considers this type of working relationship not feasible.

The ECU-N.C. State series was a popular rivalry that prompted energetic, if sometimes rowdy, support from fans. N.C. State should reconsider the deal ECU offered but ECU should not back down from its position. N.C. State's reasons for refusing the bid were confusing and vague and the school's handling of the issue is less than admirable.

ECU, however, has made a sound, strong statement. The series should end if a satisfactory home-home rotation cannot be facilitated.

Race Begins

Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan have made official what was already apparent.

Martin is seeking the Republican nomination for re-election as governor and Jordan is after the Democratic nomination in an effort to unseat the governor.

The campaign has actually been under way for two years and the two have often been on opposite sides of issues that came before the N.C. General Assembly. The 1987 session, in particular, was marked by political innuendos associated with these unofficial opponents.

There, of course, Lt. Gov. Jordan was the ranking Democrat, given the absence of a Democratic governor. Gov. Martin, with no veto power, could only do by persuasion and marshalling of public opinion what he could to move the Democratic legislature in the direction he wanted to go.

At this point the two party leaders are not facing each other. Rather they are entering their respective party's primary and either could face party opposition before the nomination is theirs.

Both must certainly be considered the front runners and the possibility they will face each other in the fall elections is large. It should be a classic race. Martin, while not powerful insofar as legislative action is concerned, has presented a good image for North Carolina. Jordan has done a smooth job of controlling his Democratic compatriots in the Legislature.

Martin will be relying on his image as a governor and the fact that he is an incumbent to obtain a victory. Jordan will portray himself as an efficient organizer of the state legislature. He will also be hoping for a return by the North Carolina voters to their traditional Democratic voting ways. That factor, to some extent, will depend on how popular the party nominees for president are in North Carolina.

Anyway the battle is officially under way — Martin versus Jordan, although the candidates won't know for certain it will be that way until after the primaries.

Rural N.C. Outlook May Worsen

RALEIGH — If you think things are bad on the farm right now, just wait a few years. They're likely to get worse.

That's the word from North Carolina's most powerful senator, Ken Royall of Durham, in a new report from the Council of State Governments. Royall and Mississippi state Rep. Charles Capps Jr. wrote on the imbalance in wealth between rural and urban areas.

The two list a number of current economic, social and governmental trends, most of which are working to the detriment of rural areas.

Rural population, for example, continues to decline while the metropolitan areas of the United States continue to grow by about 1 percent a year. The rural population of the northeast has grown so small that it is nearly negligible, the two say.

There will be some population growth in rural areas, the two say, but it is likely to come on the fringes of urban areas. As metropolitan areas grow, the rural areas right outside of the suburbs, areas like

'Major economic trends are working against rural areas Metropolitan areas are growing because urban-based industries — namely services and high tech — are doing well. Rural industries like agriculture, mining and forestry face severe problems in America.'

Chatham and Franklin counties near The Triangle, will prosper.

Major economic trends are working against rural areas. Metropolitan areas are growing because urban-based industries — namely services and high tech — are doing well. Rural industries like agriculture, mining and forestry face severe problems in America. Manufacturing, which used to be drawn to rural areas by a supply of cheaper labor, is now more likely to move abroad, where the labor is even cheaper.

Finally, there is government deregulation and the dawning of a new federal-state relationship. Royall and Capps say that rural areas are getting the short end of this shift.

Deregulation is most likely to help metropolitan areas, they say. For example, deregulated air travel has meant a drop in the cost of flying from Raleigh to New York. But deregulation has meant higher airfares to fly out of the smaller airports that serve rural areas, the two say.

Deregulation of bus lines means that small towns are being dropped by commercial carriers. Rural phone rates were always subsidized by metro customers, but not in today's deregulated economy. So rural phone bills are higher. Deliveries by truck cost more to rural businesses than to urban businesses and small town banks are losing much of their business to deregulated metropolitan super banks, Capps and Royall write. "By most of the common economic measures, rural America seems to be faring worse than urban areas," they write. When the 1981-82 recession hit, rural jobs arrived, however, rural unemployment remains higher than urban joblessness.

The two legislators provide a long list of specific recommendations for helping rural areas. At the heart is an improvement in rural public schools. They recommend that states provide extra financial resources to the poorest rural schools. The students who graduate from these schools must be flexible, the two say, so that they can shift jobs to meet a shifting economy.

They also recommend the development of better rural infrastructure. That would mean better roads, and water and sewer lines. It would also mean better facilities to help home grown businesses get started. It's clear that the two are speaking of incubators such as those operating in a good number of North Carolina communities.

Bush Dogged By Iran-Contra Questions

'Since the clandestine arms sales were first disclosed in 1986, Bush has never given a full public accounting of how he fit into the puzzle of secret deals and failed policies. Instead, he has given partial accounts, saying he never talks about his private advice to the president.'

WASHINGTON — On the threshold of the critical early tests in his presidential campaign, Vice President Bush is still dogged by the unanswered questions and apparent contradictions over his role during the gravest foreign policy blunder of the Reagan presidency, the Iran-Contra affair.

Before the latest revelations about Bush's knowledge of secret arms sales to Iran, questions were being asked by his rivals for the Republican nomination, by journalists and by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh. Since the clandestine arms sales were first disclosed in 1986, Bush has never given a full public accounting of how he fit into the puzzle of secret deals and failed policies.

Instead, he has given partial accounts, saying he never talks about his private advice to the president. "I'm not a kiss-and-teller," he said this week when asked about what he knew.

While public opinion polls show that concern over the scandal has receded in the minds of many voters, it remains a potential political trouble spot for the vice president. His aides fully expect, for example, that he will be confronted with the issue at Friday's GOP debate in Iowa, as he was at the last Republican debate.

The questions about his role go directly to what Bush has described as some of his greatest assets as a future president — his experience in intelligence and diplomacy, his concern for ethics in government, his loyal service to President Reagan, his leadership in devising a strict policy against making deals with terrorists.

Former secretary of state Alexander M. Haig Jr. said last month in a speech pressing Bush for answers about his role in the affair. "He's running for president now. The American people are entitled to know what position he took during this storm that imperiled our nation's vital interests."

"Where was George Bush during the storm?" Haig asked. "Was he the co-pilot in the cockpit, or was he back in economy class?"

If Bush were truly a participant in all the major decisions of the Reagan presidency, as he has said, how could he have been "out of the loop" during the Iran arms sales decision process, as he has also said? If Bush were a seasoned professional in diplomacy and covert operations, as he has advertised, how could he sit through hour upon hour of meetings on an operation that violated the administration's policies and may have violated the law, and not object?

Bush has faced similar questions repeatedly in recent weeks. On the campaign trail in Iowa yesterday, the questions came again from voters. He has answered them indirectly, saying that he generally supported Reagan, that he had some "reservations" about the Iran arms sales, that he would not trade weapons for hostages, that "mistakes were made." And he has invoked the confidentiality of his discussions with Reagan as a reason not to "fine tune" the details of his role in the affair.

Bush recently added an unspoken twist to the questions about his role by inviting two key figures to his annual Christmas party — former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, the fired National Security Council staff member. Both men are targets of Walsh's criminal investigation and have acknowledged destroying key documents and evidence in the Iran scandal.

The vice president also has responded to questions about his role by calling attention to the report of a task force on combating terrorism that he chaired in late 1985. "It is the best anti-terror report that a country has," Bush said this week.

But the counter-terrorism effort also illustrates the problems for Bush created by the Iran-Contra affair. The decisions made by the president and his top policymakers to ship arms to Iran in hopes of winning the release of American hostages were directly in conflict with the policy being developed by the Bush task force — that the United States should not make concessions to terrorists.

Over a period of several months, Bush seems to have advocated one policy publicly and consented to another privately.

The terrorism task force was set up in the aftermath of the TWA hijacking in 1985. The study was written virtually the same time that Reagan and his advisers were grappling with the early clandestine Iran arms sales through Israel. The 14-member task force of senior U.S. officials and staff dealt with a broad range of U.S. policies toward terrorism and repeatedly emphasized that concessions should not be made to terrorists or states that sponsor them.

For example, in its final report, the task force criticized private "individuals and companies" that have "paid ransoms to terrorists for the return of kidnaped employees or stolen property. Such action is in direct conflict with the national policy against making concessions or paying ransoms to terrorists."

The panel said the U.S. government "will make no concessions to terrorists. It will not pay ransoms, release prisoners, change its policies or agree to other acts that might encourage additional terrorism." At the same time, it said, the United States would use "every available resource" to gain the safe release of American hostages.

As these words were written by the Bush task force, ransom was paid to terrorists with the approval of the president, as several witnesses testified to Congress last summer.

According to retired admiral James L. Holloway III, who was executive director of the anti-terrorism task force, Bush never informed that panel of the secret arms sales to Iran or that some of the weapons shipments were made while the policy against concessions to terrorists was being reaffirmed by the task force.

"We knew nothing about ongoing operations," Holloway said. He said the task force focused on "policy questions" and did not examine actual covert operations. Holloway said this week that the Iran arms sales were "inconsistent with that policy" laid out in the task force report, but that sometimes operational necessity forces a temporary change in policy.

The Iran arms sales initiative began in August 1985.

Strength For Today

Francis Thompson was one of England's greatest poets. His parents sent Francis to London to be educated. There he became enamoured of skeptical ideas, took up with bad company, and developed degrading habits — the worst being the use of drugs. He sank down and became a moral derelict.

One day a shoemaker, seeing this wretched fellow lying on the street, bent down and said to him, "let me take you home and give you a square meal." He did so, with the aid of his shoemaker friend, Francis gradually found his way back to decency and light. After eating some of the shoemaker's bread he became receptive to the shoemaker's advice. And it was this experience which stimulated his creative powers of poetry. The whole process started when a good man who had little offered to help a friendless man in desperate need.

State Has Even Chance Of Landing Super Collider

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Seven competitors stand between North Carolina and the $4.4 billion superconducting super collider, but the Martin administration rates the state's chances at 50-50 for landing the coveted project.

"We are very close to winning," Earl Mac Cormac, science adviser to Gov. Jim Martin, told the Council of State on Tuesday before the group voted to spend another $260,000 to continue North Carolina's pursuit of the super collider through July.

Mac Cormac, who has spearheaded the state's drive to be selected as host, tried to reassure council members in the wake of news reports that the proposed North Carolina site had drawn some criticism from the scientific panel that nevertheless included it among eight finalists.

In its report to the U.S. Department of Energy, the National Academy of Sciences and the National Academy of Engineering found fault with access to the would-be project site in Granville, Person and Durham counties.

The panel said other finalist states, including Texas and Illinois, offered proximity to larger airports than the Raleigh-Durham Airport. It acknowledged, however, that RDU Airport had been expanded significantly as a hub for American Airlines.

The report also called for more information about the project's potential impact on the environment while praising the area's proximity to three major universities, Research Triangle Park and "urban amenities."

Shortcomings with the other finalists also were discussed in the report.

Mac Cormac said Texas, which this week beat out North Carolina and nearly a dozen other states for the Sematech semiconductor consortium, had made a strong bid for the super collider.

But he said Texas — and Colorado and Illinois — have called North Carolina their toughest competitor. The other finalists are Arizona, Tennessee, Michigan and New York.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks, one of 10 elected officials on the Council of State, asked Mac Cormac whether it was prudent to continue pouring money into the pursuit of the super collider in light of the problems cited in the report.

The two best technical reports were (from) Texas and North Carolina," Mac Cormac said. "Nature magazine said the four contenders were Texas, North Carolina, Illinois and Colorado and that's probably correct."

"We are in the first four. We are probably in the first two or three, and our chances are very real."

Constructing the underground 53-mile tunnel, in which subatomic particles would be smashed together to answer fundamental questions about physics, would be easier in Texas than North Carolina, Mac Cormac said.

That's because engineers will have to tunnel through chalk in Texas and granite in North Carolina.

But he said the Triangle area would be a more attractive place for the project's scientists to live than "the Texas ... prairie."

The Energy Department is scheduled to announce a tentative decision on the site in July and a final decision in January 1988.

The next step is for the eight states to prepare statements on how the project would affect their communities. North Carolina's will come from a public hearing in Butner next month.

Mac Cormac has established a foundation called the SSC Educational Fund for North Carolina, hoping to raise $250,000 to support the state's campaign.

The process of arriving at a winner is largely political, Mac Cormac said in an interview. The state has retained Washington lobbyist Edward Forgotson to work the Reagan administration and Congress.

North Carolina is trying to establish alliances with other Southern states, an effort hampered by the surprise inclusion of Tennessee on the "short list."

"We have a selling job to do," Mac Cormac said.

State Says Sematech Loss Won't Hurt Collider Effort

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's $147 million incentive package wasn't enough to lure a semiconductor research center, but state officials say the failure won't hurt the effort to land the U.S. government's superconducting super collider.

"There's not much point dwelling on what might have been ...," Gov. Jim Martin said Wednesday. "Let's go out and climb another mountain. We're not going to lick our wounds or bleed all over the place."

Directors of Sematech, a consortium of computer companies trying to put the United States in the forefront of semiconductor technology, on Tuesday chose Austin, Texas, for the facility. North Carolina, one of 12 states competing for the facility, had been considered a front-runner.

"Yesterday (Tuesday) I was confident we would win it," Martin said.

North Carolina is one of eight states still vying for the $4.4 billion super collider. State Commerce Secretary Claude Pope said the loss of the Sematech project wouldn't hinder the state's campaign to land the giant science project.

"I don't connect the merits of both proposals," Pope said.

Pope said the semiconductor consortium's decision to locate its center in Texas puzzled North Carolina officials.

"We have some very serious questions about ... the final moments of the selection process and what took place," he said. "Maybe at some point in time we can compare the proposals in great detail ..."

State officials on Wednesday released North Carolina's bid for the project, which had previously been kept under wraps.

Gov. Jim Martin and Pope said North Carolina's proposal to Sematech was estimated at about $147 million by Price Waterhouse, an accounting firm. But Martin said the state's costs, beyond donating existing facilities and land, would have been only $23 million.

The centerpiece of the North Carolina proposal was the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, which was valued at $41.9 million by the accounting firm. Also valued at $30 million was a long-term clean room that would have expanded MCNC's clean room space by 20,000-square feet.

Martin downplayed the possibility that the state's failure to lure the facility would become a political issue in his 1988 race for governor against Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan. The campaign was a bipartisan effort, he said.

Martin said he wasn't worried that Jordan would try to reap political benefits from the administration's failure to land the project.

Schools To Test Proposed Standards

RALEIGH (AP) — Proposed standards for a mandatory accreditation program for North Carolina's school districts will be tested next school year and be used for accrediting the state's 140 school districts the following year.

"If you have a school system that meets these standards, you will have a quality school system," said William J. Brown, assistant state superintendent of research and testing for the Department of Public Instruction.

In a presentation to the board's program committee Wednesday, Brown said the new standards will be tested next school year and be used for accrediting the state's 140 school districts the following year.

He said the standards are tough and some school systems — though it is not clear how many — will not meet them. But there will be no sanctions against districts that fail to get accredited other than unwanted publicity and more scrutiny from state education officials, Brown said.

The standards measure student achievement and how well school districts succeed in offering courses and educational opportunities prescribed by the Basic Education Program, the state's ambitious eight-year plan to upgrade public schools by 1992.

Standards include student dropout rates, attendance and achievement. For example, districts must show that:

- the average number of students over three years passing the state's reading, writing and mathematics competency tests on the first attempt exceeds 88 percent.
- the three-year average scores of students in grades three, six and eight must exceed those of 40 percent of all students taking the California Achievement Tests.
- the three-year average median raw score of students on the state's algebra, biology and U.S. history tests must exceed 40 percent of all students taking the tests.

The 50-page draft, created during the last year with help of a 16-member committee of superintendents, also lists standards on class size, course offerings, textbooks and facilities.

The board is scheduled to adopt the standards in April after local school boards give them further review at regional meetings. Barbara M. Tapscott of Burlington, who heads the program committee, said adopting the accreditation standards will be the most important act by the board in six years.

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Gov. Jim Hunt said Tuesday a fund-raiser for Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, will be held Jan. 17 at the Bermuda Run Country Club near Winston-Salem.

For $500 per couple, people will be able to meet Gore at a reception and attend a dinner. Those who prefer to skip the reception will be charged $100 per person for dinner.

Hunt said he and Sen. Terry Sanford, both of whom announced their support of Gore last weekend, would co-chair the fund-raiser.

Christmas

ST. HELENA, N.C. — Along the country road that marks this wayside Pender County farming community, the silver dome of Sts. Peter and Paul Russian Orthodox Church shines above the frozen fields surrounding it.

At the kitchen table of Constantine Hodaba's small wooden house a few hundred yards away, he and John Wulzyn described how Christmas would be today. The two men, among the few surviving members of the once vibrant church, will hold their Christmas service without a priest.

Russian Orthodox Christians celebrate the birth of Jesus on Old Christmas, Jan. 7.

"We feel lonely," said Hodaba, 75. "We light up candles and nobody is here but me and him." His words are coated with his Ukrainian accent. The retired farmer emigrated to the United States in 1939 at the age of 27 to join his sister already in St. Helena.

"We're still going to go church," said Wulzyn, explaining that, like every Sunday, a sermon taped at a church in Washington will be played for today's service.

Falwell Suit

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — A lawsuit charging that the Rev. Jerry Falwell and his organization accepted money from an elderly Alamance County woman suffering from Alzheimer's disease has been settled out of court, but the preacher's spokesman denied any wrongdoing.

Graham attorney G. Wayne Abernathy would not reveal the amount of the money settlement, but said Tuesday, "we reached an amicable agreement that was satisfactory to everyone."

Abernathy represented Sarah Anthony of Greensboro, daughter and legal guardian of Johnnie Eureka Jackson, 84, of Twins Lake, who has Alzheimer's disease.

The suit, filed last March and settled in late November, said Mrs. Jackson contributed $79,000 to various Falwell organizations while she was mentally incompetent to handle her financial affairs.

Sex Scandal

RALEIGH (AP) — The Division of Motor Vehicles' sex scandal widened when a female employee confessed to having sex at the division's Raleigh offices.

"Now that the can is open, the worms are crawling," state Transportation Secretary James Harrington said Tuesday.

Two DMV employees, Marsha Hicks Molden, 24, and Fred Martin Thorne, 47, have been charged with sexual offenses at the division's headquarters.

DMV Commissioner William Hiatt would not identify the second woman, whom he said was a temporary clerk about 20 years old. He said she confessed to having sex with a male employee of the Department of Transportation in an office and in a boiler room.

Ms. Molden and Thorne have been suspended without pay Tuesday pending completion of the investigation, Hiatt said.

Red Wolves

RALEIGH (AP) — Eight more red wolves will arrive in North Carolina Jan. 24 for eventual release in the Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge, officials of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said.

The eight wolves from a federal breeding facility in Tacoma, Wash., will join six survivors who were released into the refuge last year as part of a project to reintroduce the red wolf to the wild.

"We plan right now to have the eight red wolves flown into Raleigh-Durham Airport Jan. 24," John Taylor, manager of the refuge, said Wednesday. "Depending on how many hours they've been in the air and other factors, we'll either airlift them to the refuge or truck them down here."

Taylor said the eight animals would go through a six-month acclimation period that will help them adjust to North Carolina's climate and begin to learn to fend for themselves.

Fire Deaths

CLEMENT, N.C. (AP) — A 4-year-old girl and her 18-month-old sister were killed in a fire at their Sampson County home Wednesday, authorities said.

Marketta Louise Hoobs, 4, and her sister, Tamica Ann Hobs, were burned beyond recognition, fire officials said.

Firefighters said the blaze began about 3 p.m. in the house's living room. The bodies of the girls were found in a front bedroom. Fire officials said by the time they arrived, the house near Clement was almost destroyed.

Officials said a 74-year-old aunt who was babysitting the girls escaped unharmed. Sampson County fire officials and the State Bureau of Investigation are investigating.

Fuel Leak

GREENSBORO (AP) — Homeowners have been asked to join the search for 17,000 gallons of fuel that leaked from an oil-company pipeline in a Greensboro subdivision last week, officials said.

Meanwhile, Greensboro officials were scanning Lake Brandt for an oil slick that would indicate the chemical has drained into city drinking water, while officials of Plantation Pipeline are digging trenches to look underground for the missing liquid.

Ten days ago Plantation officials said they first suspected trouble on the line, which transports gasoline products between Greensboro and Roanoke, Va. The leak finally was located, repaired and reported to environmental authorities New Year's Day.

Hunters Safe

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. Coast Guard helicopter searched Wyeocock Bay in Hyde County on Wednesday for two missing duck hunters, but both men walked ashore after spending the night on their stalled boat, authorities said.

James Gamble Jr. of Davidson, owner of the 14-foot boat, and another Davidson man, were reported missing about 10 p.m. Tuesday, according to Seaman Bill Smith at the Coast Guard station in Portsmouth, Va.

A 41-foot Coast Guard patrol boat from Ocracoke searched the area Tuesday night and a helicopter was brought in from Elizabeth City on Wednesday, officials said.

However, both men floated the boat across the sound to Ocracoke at about 12:15 p.m. Wednesday, Smith said.

Neither man was injured, Smith said.

Break-In Foiled

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Goldsboro man who is paralyzed from the waist down foiled a break-in and attempted assault when he opened fire with his .32-caliber pistol, police said.

A man broke into the home of James Person and attacked him, but Person wounded him in the shoulder and both sides with the gun, authorities said. The man fled.

Scholarship Applications Boosted By Plan To Attract Black Teachers

RALEIGH (AP) — More blacks are retiring from teaching than are entering the field, but officials hope to reverse that trend with a program that is designed to draw more talented black students into the profession.

So far, the program has helped double the number of black applicants for scholarships for prospective teachers, officials said Wednesday.

"I think it's going to have a tremendous effect," Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, said. "We are losing minorities in the teaching profession more rapidly than ... in any other profession."

Since Project Teach was started in July, 144 minority youngsters have applied for scholarships under the North Carolina Teaching Fellows Program, which provides 400 scholarships per year to students who agree to become teachers after college.

In the 1986-87 academic year, 69 blacks applied for the scholarships, which provide $20,000 per student over four years.

Leaders of the Public School Forum of North Carolina, a non-profit group that promotes better public education, reported on Project Teach to an audience of legislators, members of the State Board of Education and educators.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said teaching was more attractive to blacks and women when few other paths were open to them.

"With changes in society's views, they have more opportunities and ... they're going elsewhere where they can make more money," Rand said.

Project Teach was modeled after get-out-the-vote drives in political campaigns, said Jo Ann Norris, a Public School Forum officer.

Local black leaders compiled lists of black youngsters in their areas who scored 750 or better on the SAT or PSAT as high school juniors in 1986-87. They were recruited to apply for teaching scholarships.

Eight school systems participated in Project Teach: Cumberland County; Durham City; Greensboro City; Pitt County; Robeson County;

Halifax County; Northampton County and Warren County.

A total of 99 black community leaders acted as recruiters, telephoning or visiting the young people. More than 500 students were contacted.

Additionally, the recruitment teams and forum staffers sponsored "parent chat nights" in which 479 students and their parents were given information about the teaching fellows program, the teaching career and college curriculum requirements.

The program also offered free workshops to give the students tips on preparing for the SAT. The workshops drew 154 students.

Another 76 students participated in another component of the program: workshops on how to make a good impression at interviews.

There also were field trips to two predominantly black universities: North Carolina A&T State in Greensboro and North Carolina Central in Durham.

Greenville Native Is Nominated In Nobel Peace Prize Competition

RALEIGH (AP) — A North Carolina native has been nominated for the 1988 Nobel Peace Prize after working for more than a decade to abolish the death penalty and improve prison conditions.

The Rev. Joseph B. Ingle, 41, director of the Southern Coalition on Jails and Prisons in Nashville, Tenn., said his nomination highlights the whole issue of the death penalty.

"If you're going to be a civilized country at the end of the 20th century, you're going to do away with the death penalty," he said.

Ingle has been a champion of prisoners' rights since 1971 and has sought abolition of the death penalty since 1975. He has traveled twice to Western Europe to observe prison reform and to talk about the United States' death penalty.

During his most recent trip — a spring 1987 speaking tour in Sweden sponsored by the country's chapter of Amnesty International — Ingle's call for abolishing the death penalty received more support than he usually gets in the United States, he said.

"It was like being lifted by the nape of the neck and being lowered down into a bath of affirmation," said Ingle. "There are millions of people in this world who regard us as uncivilized because of our utilization of the death penalty."

Just before Christmas, Ingle received a letter from five members of the Swedish Parliament saying they had nominated him for the Nobel Peace Prize.

The letter, dated Dec. 15, said, "An abolition of the death penalty, this cruel, inhuman and degrading form of punishment, would be decisive for an increased recognition of the inviolability of human life and thereby a major (step) toward a peaceful development in the world."

The letter added that Ingle's efforts have been of "vital significance" for the people he has worked with and for the United States.

"It's so nice that it has happened to someone so deserving," said Roger W. Smith, a Raleigh lawyer who defended convicted murderer James William Hutchins in 1984. "It's tremendous recognition to be nominated."

Smith said Ingle came to Raleigh and raised the morale of lawyers struggling to halt Hutchins' execution, which eventually was carried out. He said Ingle attended late-night strategy sessions with lawyers and helped family members understand court procedures.

"He does every day what he feels called to do and goes at it with everything he has," said Adam Stein, a Chapel Hill lawyer who worked on another case with Ingle in 1984.

"That is very hard work to devote your life to, developing very close personal relationships with someone the state is about to kill," Stein said. "A lot of these people grew to trust him completely and to love him."

Ingle, a United Church of Christ minister, was born in Greenville and graduated from Raleigh's Enloe High School in 1964. He studied philosophy and religion at St. Andrews Presbyterian College in Laurinburg, from which he graduated in 1968. He later became involved in prisoners' rights issues as a student at Union Theological Seminary in New York.

After graduating from Union in 1973, Ingle returned to the South. In 1974 he helped found the Southern Coalition on Jails and Prisons as a way to monitor conditions for prisoners. The coalition began the fight against capital punishment prior to the Supreme Court's 1976 decision to uphold the death penalty.

Since then, Ingle's Southern Coalition has lobbied to abolish the death penalty in several states, petitioned state governors to offer clemency to death row inmates, helped the inmates hire defense lawyers and counseled inmates and their families.

Ingle said his work with prisoners in the last 14 to 15 years has been rewarding, but he added, "There's a lot of pain with it. I've worked with 17 people who have been executed. It has its moments where you say, 'Oh Lord, why am I doing this?'"

Ingle said the nomination for the Nobel Peace Prize affirms that his work has been worthwhile.

Syrians Succeed In Persuading Iran To Cancel New Attacks On Kuwait

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Syria has persuaded Iran to stop attacking Kuwait in a bid to ease rising tension in the Persian Gulf, Arab diplomatic sources reported today.

Syria, which undertook the initiative at the urging of Saudi Arabia, also persuaded Iran to delay its long-anticipated winter offensive against Iraq, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The agreements were aimed at buying time for a dialogue between Tehran and the six-member Gulf Cooperation Council in an effort to end the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

The Syrian mediation effort began in late December.

Gulf-based Arab diplomats and officials of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council told The Associated Press that Iran has indicated its willingness to open a dialogue and hold back on a new ground offensive.

Diplomatic sources in Damascus said Saudi Arabia and the other council states have persuaded Iraq to curb its air strikes on Iranian tankers in the gulf.

That, in turn, has halted tit-for-tat Iranian attacks on neutral shipping in the waterway. More than 400 vessels have been attacked in the waterway since 1981.

U.S. warships began escorting 11 U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers in July to protect them from attack by Iran, which considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq.

The so-called "tanker war" has wound down sharply since Dec. 26 after a record 36 vessels were hit in one month.

The Iraqis claimed to have hit four ships since then, but only one was confirmed. The Iraqis have not retaliated against neutral shipping since Dec. 26, and none of its tankers appear to have been hit in recent days.

Iran last year fired at least seven Chinese-made Silkworm missiles at Kuwait's coastal oil installations.

The Iraqis have been massing troops in the southern sector of the war front for weeks and have vowed to unleash "punishing blows" against Iraq.

Arab diplomatic sources in Damascus said the Iraqis have assembled more than 500,000 men for the big push.

If the Syrian initiative succeeds, it would mark a major breakthrough in Arab efforts to stop the war from escalating and open the door to talks. The conflict has threatened to engulf other states in the oil-rich region.

Syria's foreign minister, Farouk al-Sharaa, and Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam have been shuttling between Tehran and Arab capitals in an effort to defuse the conflict.

The involvement of Khaddam, one of Syrian President Hafez Assad's most trusted advisers, indicated that Syria takes the mediation effort very seriously.

He and Sharaa are visiting gulf capitals briefing Arab leaders on their talks in Tehran.

The initiative was seen as a key factor in the unexpectedly mild criticism of Iran by gulf council leaders at their Dec. 26-29 summit in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, despite mounting friction between Iran and conservative gulf countries such as Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

The council groups Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar and Oman in a security and economic alliance.

"Iran has been very responsive," said a knowledgeable source in Damascus. "So has Riyadh." He said the council would form a committee to start "a face-to-face dialogue" with the Iranian government.

By Western estimates, the Persian Gulf war has killed more than 1 million people and wounded 1.7 million.

The Syrians, Persian Iran's closest Arab ally, have been under mounting pressure from other Arab states to break its 5-year-old alliance with Tehran. Assad has been reluctant to do that. He said it was more useful for him to use his influence with Tehran to scale down the war and find a formula for negotiations.

Meanwhile, U.S. Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci today began a four-day visit to Saudi Arabia after reaffirming the U.S. commitment to protect moderate Persian Gulf nations.

On Wednesday, Carlucci said the United States was committed to protecting U.S.-flag vessels and denied reports it decided to reduce its 33-ship force in and near the gulf. But he said the size and composition of the force were always under review.

Mubarak Plans Six-Nation Tour To Reassert Influence

By MAURICE GUINDI
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Underscoring Egypt's return to the Arab fold, President Hosni Mubarak is setting out to visit six Persian Gulf nations in search of a consensus on the Iran-Iraq war and the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Egyptian officials said an Arab consensus on the Middle East's two hottest issues could strengthen Mubarak's hand when he visits Washington in late January for talks with President Reagan and other leaders.

The trip also could help Egypt reassert its influence in the Arab world after eight years of isolation because of its peace treaty with Israel.

Mubarak's tour Jan. 9-16 will take him to Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Bahrain and Oman, all considered moderate and friendly to the United States.

Among them, only Oman maintained formal diplomatic relations with Egypt after the peace treaty was signed with Israel in 1979.

The others restored diplomatic ties in November. They were among nine Arab League members who resumed relations after an Arab summit in Amman, Jordan, freed members of a collective diplomatic boycott.

"Mubarak's tour is to show the (Egyptian) flag at the highest level on the Arab scene, to express gratitude and to try forging a unified stand on important issues," said a Foreign Ministry official connected with preparations for the trip.

"This can be considered a prelude to Mubarak's visit to Washington," said the official, who under Foreign Ministry regulations could speak only on condition of anonymity.

He added that the tour also sends a message to Persian Iran that Egypt, which has the strongest Arab military force, will support its Arab brothers around the Persian Gulf against Iranian threats. One of them, Kuwait, has been the target of at least seven Iranian missile attacks in recent months.

Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid told members of the Mubarak's National Democratic Party recently that Egypt "considers its own security part of the security of the Gulf states and is keen to preserve stability in this vital region."

The likelihood is that Egypt would be willing to make available arms and know-how, such as instructors and advisers, to the Gulf states but not military forces.

"Some have interpreted the Egyptian-Arab patchup as an Egyptian entry into the Gulf war," wrote Mahfouz al-Ansary, editor of the government-owned newspaper Al-Gomhouriya.

Such an interpretation, he added, "makes it appear that the Arabs have decided to wage all-out war or that they reject peace. In fact, the opposite is true."

Makram Mohammed Ahmed, editor of the government weekly Al-Mussawar, termed Mubarak's tour "a peace mission" designed to deter Iran, an Islamic-fundamentalist nation led by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

"In supporting Arab rights in the Gulf, Egypt wants Iran to realize that Arab-Persian dialogue must be conducted on a sound political and Islamic basis and that what has been happening on the battlefield will not solve any problem," Ahmed wrote.

The Gulf Arabs and Egypt support the United Nations Security Council resolution this past July, calling for a cease-fire and troop withdrawals to international borders, followed by Iranian-Iraqi peace talks. They favor international military sanctions against Iran unless it goes along.

Another high-priority issue on Mubarak's tour is the Arab dispute with Israel and the unsuccessful effort to convene an international peace conference to solve it, particularly in the face of recent Palestinian rioting in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Despite the diplomatic reconciliation with the Arabs, who still oppose Egypt's peace with Israel, Mubarak's government has made it clear it has no intention of abrogating the treaty.

Nevertheless, Egypt has condemned Israel's crackdown on the Palestinian protests in which more than a score of protesters were killed.

South Korea May Release Prisoners For Inauguration

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government may grant amnesty to thousands of political prisoners when President-elect Roh Tae-woo is inaugurated next month, sources in the governing party said.

Also today, riot police hauled away 50 cattle ranchers who shouted slogans and waved placards outside the governing party headquarters to protest U.S. demands that South Korea import American beef.

And, Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., said there appeared to be irregularities in the Dec. 16 presidential election, but it was not clear that they were extensive enough to have affected the outcome of the race.

"There do appear to be serious and substantial indications of widespread irregularities," said Solarz, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs. "The real question is whether the number of illegal or improper votes had the effect of changing the results of the election."

Roh, candidate of the governing Democratic Justice Party, defeated rival opposition leaders Kim Young-sam and Kim Dae-jung with 36.6 percent of the vote. Kim Young-sam got 28 percent and Kim Dae-jung 27 percent.

Many opposition supporters blamed the two Kims for splitting the opposition and enabling Roh, a former general, to win.

On Wednesday, governing party officials said a possible amnesty was expected to take effect about a week before Roh's Feb. 25 inauguration. The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, declined to elaborate.

Local newspapers quoted government sources as saying more than 900 dissidents held for political reasons may be included under the amnesty.

As a candidate, Roh had promised to release all prisoners held for minor offenses, except for leftist radicals.

The amnesty was being considered because Roh wants to lead the government in a mood of "reconciliation and harmony," the party officials said.

It would be the second amnesty since Roh declared himself in favor of full democracy for South Korea last June following weeks of massive public protests.

About 500 political prisoners were released at that time. South Korea is thought to have about 1,200 political prisoners, many of them detained in labor unrest last fall and violent protests related to the election.

Ranchers demonstrated for an hour today outside party headquarters in Seoul. Inside, Deputy Prime Minister Chung In-yong briefed Roh on trade talks Chung held earlier this week with U.S. officials in Washington.

Chung told a group of economic ministers today that "it is urgent for Korea to open up its market for insurance, cigarettes and beef."

In another rally near the central government building in Seoul, about 160 members of the National Livestock Cooperatives Federation urged the government not to succumb to U.S. pressure.

About 100 tobacco farmers in Daeduk resolved to lead a boycott of American cigarettes, and some 200 cattle farmers in the eastern city of Chunchon held a rally opposing foreign beef.

There were reports the United States threatened to impose trade sanctions if South Korea did not open its markets. South Korea's trade surplus with the United States was estimated at about $10 billion in 1987.

Korean farmers contend most local cattle ranches are too small to compete against American ranches, and domestic beef prices would plunge if U.S. beef were imported.

Solarz spent four days here meeting with the candidates and other politicians to assess the election. South Korea's first direct presidential balloting in 16 years.

The opposition has challenged Roh's victory. But their calls for protests to overturn the result have drawn little attention and the opposition so far has failed to provide evidence to substantiate its claims.

Tributes Removed

MOSCOW (AP) — A Moscow neighborhood, town squares and a city named for Leonid I. Brezhnev have had their names changed as authorities erase tributes to the late Kremlin leader now blamed for bureaucracy and stagnation.

The moves Wednesday were the latest example of the reform campaign by Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev.

Brezhnev, Communist Party chief from 1964 to 1982, has come under increasing criticism for fostering complacency and cronyism.

After Brezhnev died of a heart attack on Nov. 10, 1982, Naberezhnye Chelny, a city of 460,000 people in the Tatar region 500 miles east of Moscow, was renamed in his honor.

Ex-Wife Of Accused Terrorist Says He Was Not A Militant

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — The former wife of an alleged Lebanese terrorist on trial for kidnapping two West Germans in Beirut testified that she saw no evidence he was a Moslem militant during their seven-year marriage.

"I would have noticed if he had political interests," 43-year-old Maria Hamadi said Wednesday of her former husband, Abbas Hamadi.

"I think if that was so, he wouldn't have gone with our daughter into the Catholic Church" for the child to be baptized, said Mrs. Hamadi, a native of West Germany. Her testimony came during the second day of Abbas Hamadi's trial. After she and others testified, the trial was adjourned until next week.

Abbas Hamadi is charged with the kidnapping two West Germans in 1967 in a bid to win the release of his brother, Mohammed Ali Hamadi, who is accused of hijacking a TWA jetliner and being held in West Germany.

One of the two kidnap victims, Rudolf Cordes, is still held hostage in Beirut by the Shiite Moslem group Holy Warriors for Freedom. The other West German, Alfred Schmidt, was freed in September by the Holy Warriors.

Mohammed Hamadi is in a Frankfurt prison and is accused of masterminding a June 1985 TWA hijacking in which an American sailor was killed.

Mrs. Hamadi testified Wednesday that she knew Mohammed Hamadi and was certain he was not the man shown in photographs of the hijacking.

She married Abbas Hamadi in 1980, one year after he moved to West Germany from Lebanon. They were divorced last October.

She began her testimony by telling the judge that she'd rather not say why they decided to divorce.

Another witness was Wael Ramadan, a friend of the defendant. He testified that the two came to West Germany in 1979 as tourists and decided to stay because there were better economic opportunities than in Lebanon.

As the trial opened Tuesday, authorities stepped up security at all major airports in West Germany and at key border points, Interior Ministry spokesman Roland Bachmeier said.

The security measures were imposed after the Holy Warriors for Freedom issued a statement indicating that West Germany may be targeted for terrorist attacks because of alleged mistreatment of Mohammed Hamadi.

Chief Judge Klaus Arend reacted firmly to that statement before testimony began Wednesday. "This trial is taking place in a constitutional nation. Every constitutionality would be set aside if the law allowed itself to be influenced by threats," he told the heavily-guarded courtroom.

Defense attorney Eckart Hild also had a response. "We would like to talk to those responsible for the kidnappings, whoever they may be, and explain to them what justice is all about," he said.

Cordes and Schmidt were abducted in January 1967, days after West Germany authorities arrested Mohammed Hamadi at Frankfurt Airport. Two weeks later, Abbas Hamadi was arrested in Frankfurt.

Abbas Hamadi is charged with taking hostages, blackmail, and carrying explosives and could be sentenced to three to 15 years in prison if convicted.

Mohammed Hamadi was sought by U.S. officials in connection with the hijacking of TWA Flight 847 from Athens to Rome. Thirty-nine Americans were held hostage 17 days in Beirut, and U.S. Navy diver Robert Stehem was killed.

West Germany turned down the U.S. extradition request but said Mohammed Hamadi would be charged and tried for the hijacking in a West German court.

A third Hamadi brother, Abdul Hadi Hamadi, is believed to be the leader of the Holy Warriors. He is the Beirut security chief of Hezbollah, a radical Shiite Moslem group allied with Iran.

Candidates Are Killed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Three more candidates were slain in soaring pre-election violence in the Philippines, and assailants hurled a grenade into the home of a fourth candidate, killing one of his relatives.

In another development, at least four communist rebels and four soldiers were killed during a five-hour battle in the northern Philippines that broke out when the guerrillas stormed a town. Fourteen soldiers were wounded, including two critically, the military said.

The election-related violence brought to at least 62 the number of people who have been killed during the campaign, including 29 candidates, the government-run Philippine News Agency reported.

Six candidates have been wounded and 10 others kidnapped since campaigning began last month for the Jan. 18 regional elections, when voters will choose provincial governors, mayors and other local officials.

Police said an explosion early today ripped through the home of Benjamin Arcayena, opposition candidate for town council in the Manila suburb of Makati.

Arcayena was not home at the time of the blast, but a relative, Elvira Alison, 40, was killed as she slept.

He said the senator was never in danger.

Chafee, who went on to Jordan after the incident, could not be reached immediately for comment.

In Ramallah, an army officer threatened to arrest an Associated Press photographer and reporter after stopping their car in front of a restaurant to talk to a Palestinian youth.

The officer earlier turned them away from Kalandia and said the camp was a closed military area. In Ramallah, the officer told them they were under arrest because they had ignored instructions to leave the area. He said all of Ramallah and the surrounding refugee camps were declared a closed military area.

The officer relented after several minutes of negotiations, but ordered the news team to leave.

Military officials denied that large areas of the West Bank had been closed to reporters.

"The area is open to the press," said an army spokeswoman who spoke on condition of anonymity.

U.S. Senator Breaks Off Refugee Camp Visit As Troops Fire Tear Gas

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Soldiers fired tear gas to break up violent demonstrations in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip today, forcing a U.S. senator to cut short a visit to a refugee camp.

From the gate of the Kalandia refugee camp near this West Bank city, Sen. John Chafee saw soldiers firing tear gas to disperse rock-throwing protesters, a U.S. diplomat said. Chafee, R-R.I., decided not to enter because of the violence, according to the diplomat.

Police arrested a Palestinian journalist covering one of the protests, and the army ordered 15 Palestinians, some accused of involvement in recent rioting, held for up to six months in administrative detention without trial.

The detentions follow the army's decision to deport nine Palestinians. They are part of a crackdown on rioting in which 24 Palestinians have been killed by army gunfire since Dec. 8.

Nearly 2,000 Palestinians have been arrested. About 900 detainees have been released and the rest are standing trial.

In a main thoroughfare of Arab east Jerusalem, about 80 high school students threw stones and raised the red, black, green and red Palestinian flag, according to Arab reports and Israel radio. Display of the banner is illegal in Israel and the occupied territories.

Police arrested Elias Zananiri, managing editor of the Palestine Press Service when he took pictures of the protests, said Ibrahim Karraen, co-owner of the Arab-run agency.

Police told Zananiri not to take pictures and demanded that he surrender his camera, said Karraen. When he refused, he was beaten with a club and arrested, he said.

Police spokesman Alex Lapidot said nine women and one man were arrested but could not provide further details.

Clashes between Israeli soldiers and Palestinian protesters were reported in half a dozen cities and refugee camps in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel occupied after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Merchants closed their shops in Ramallah, east Jerusalem and parts of the West Bank city of Jericho, a tourist center that has been unaffected by the recent arrests.

In the Gaza Strip refugee camp of Jabaliya, stone-throwing demonstrators erected barricades of burning tires. In one incident, a car carrying Maj. Gen. Yitzhak Mordechai, the military commander of Gaza, was struck by stones, said a Palestinian reporter who spoke on condition of anonymity.

At the entrance to Kalandia, protesters hurled stones at soldiers who responded with tear gas, said David Goode, a spokesman for the U.S. Consulate in east Jerusalem.

Chafee, who had planned to visit Kalandia as part of a tour of the area, saw the demonstration, said Goode.

"He waited until things seemed to calm down, and wanted to go in, but the demonstration flared up again, and he decided to leave," Goode said.

Reagan Signs Farm Credit Rescue Bill

By DON KENDALL
 AP Farm Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has signed the $4 billion Farm Credit System rescue bill but says the financially troubled system should do more to help itself.
 Reagan said Wednesday at a White House bill-signing ceremony that the measure "ensures that the farm credit system will continue as a principal source of private credit to America's farmers."
 The Farm Credit System is a 70-year-old network of 37 banks and hundreds of local lending co-ops. It provides credit to one-third of the nation's farm borrowers but has registered losses of $4.8 billion over the last two years.
 The system's problems are generally blamed on the financial crunch on rural America in the early 1980s, when land values plunged in the wake of falling crop prices, combined with long-term borrowing at high rates.
 Congress authorized the federal land banks in 1916 with federal money, and the rest of the Farm Credit System came along in 1935 with more government funds.
 The system continued to rely on federal backing through the Depression and for some time afterward, said Joe Terrell of the Farm Credit Council, the system's private trade association. The last of the federal "seed money" was paid off in 1968, he said.
 Reagan used the bill-signing ceremony to criticize some provisions that he said encourage continued reliance by farmers on federal aid and are too expensive.
 "Unfortunately, the Congress declined to require the system to provide as much self-help as we believe was appropriate, and created new and potentially expensive federal support mechanisms for secondary markets for private sector agricultural loans," Reagan said.
 "Of principal concern is the additional forbearance provided the producers that have been substantially delinquent on loans issued directly by the Farmers Home Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture."

Bakker Denies He's Seeking PTL Funds

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Former PTL leader Jim Bakker denies he and his wife are seeking $1.3 million from the PTL ministry for a home they once occupied and says the ministry is conducting a "hate campaign" against them.
 The State newspaper in Columbia, S.C., reported the Bakkers filed a claim in August in U.S. Bankruptcy Court seeking $1.3 million from the television ministry for the lakeside parsonage they lived in while heading PTL.
 David W. Clark, the latest person to head the PTL, apparently just learned of the claim and similar claims filed by other former PTL officials. He said he is "amazed at their gall."
 Clark said the PTL intends to respond with legal action by "doing whatever we can to recover assets" belonging to the ministry.
 "It sounds like somebody is trying to stir up some more propaganda to hurt Tammy and I again," Bakker said in a telephone interview Wednesday from his home in this desert resort town. "We gave up that house months ago. There's almost like a hate campaign coming out of PTL."
 Ryan Hovis, Bakker's attorney in Clark Hill, S.C., acknowledged the claim was filed, but said it was a legal move so the Bakkers could be involved in PTL's bankruptcy hearings.
 "It's not that we want the $1.3 million. If we got it, we'd give it back. We filed it to have a standing in

Strip Search

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Four Beddingfield High School students have filed suit against county law enforcement officers and the Wilson County Board of Education, claiming they were strip-searched in an effort to locate $30 allegedly stolen from a member of a visiting basketball team.
 The plaintiffs are seeking $10,000 each, attorney's fees and costs for damages.
 The complaint, filed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh, alleges that the plaintiffs' civil rights were violated when they were subjected to a strip search "without probable cause, reasonable suspicion or justification."
 It also claims the strip search was the result of discrimination against the plaintiffs because of their race and sex and was in violation of the Civil Rights Act and the Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. All the plaintiffs are black females.

Ramsey Announces

ASHEVILLE (AP) — House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey says he will seek another term as state representative and will run for an unprecedented fifth two-year term as speaker if elected.
 Ramsey, 68, is only the second House speaker to serve more than one term, and the first to serve more than two.

Congressman Plans Help For Children Of American GIs

By JEFF BARKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventeen years after leaving Vietnam, Rep. Tom Ridge plans to fulfill a longtime dream by returning there on a mission to help more than 8,000 children of American servicemen emigrate to the United States.

While he is in Vietnam, the Pennsylvania Republican hopes to revisit "where we marched, and where we camped, and where we were ambushed" when he was a staff sergeant with the Army's Americal Division during 1969-70.

The official purpose of the trip is to follow up on a 2-week-old law designed to make emigration easier for the estimated 8,000 to 15,000 Amerasian children still in Vietnam.

Ridge, 42, said the bill will help America meet its "tremendous moral responsibility to bring these children to this country." The measure was signed into law Dec. 22 as part of a massive funding bill.

Ridge, a Harvard-educated lawyer with working class roots, said he has long yearned to return to Vietnam to help Amerasian children and to retrace his wartime experience.

"I've made a specific request to return to a village and an area that I operated in in I Corps" in the northern provinces, Ridge said.

"I knew the social structure there. I knew where the churches and the schools and the villages were, and I'd like to see what changes have occurred," he said.

Since Washington and Hanoi have no diplomatic ties, Ridge made his request through Vietnam's United Nations mission in New York. He and Rep. Robert Mrazek, D-N.Y., plan to go during this month's congressional recess.

Ridge is one of a dozen House members to serve in Southeast Asia during the war, and the only one who saw combat as an enlisted man. He is a member of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, which is underwriting the trip.

Drafted after his first year of law school, he served in Vietnam about eight months. In 1982, Ridge was elected to Congress from a district with ethnic, blue-collar neighborhoods and heavy manufacturing in Pennsylvania's northwest corner around Erie.

He has voted against President Reagan's policy in Nicaragua, saying his Vietnam experience gave him "greater pause to reflect that when you commit troops or surrogates, it better be a last resort."

Ridge said that in South Vietnam's northern corridor, "my company commander gave me two or three Americans and a company of Vietnamese and gave me my little outpost and I was pretty much on my own."

He said he wants to return to the village of Duc Pho and to Highway 1, which was labeled "the street without joy" during the war. In conjunction with the trip, Ridge is considering making public a journal he kept during the war and letters he wrote to his wife.

Ridge doesn't want his desire to revisit his Vietnam war sites to jeopardize the mission of smoothing the way for bringing to the United States children fathered by American soldiers during the war.

"The Vietnamese call them 'bui doi,' which means 'children of the dust.' They are completely rejected by their culture for the unpardonable sin of being half American," Ridge said.

Ridge and Mrazek hope the new law will speed immigration of the Amerasians by changing their status from refugees to immigrants. The Amerasians have been subject to annual limitations placed on all Indochinese refugees.

Bush Says He's Not Arms Probe Target

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

Vice President George Bush, on his first campaign trip of the new year, faced a drumbeat of questions about the Iran-Contra affair, while the Democratic presidential contenders turned their fire on one another.

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt derided Illinois Sen. Paul Simon's budget plan as "laughable," and Jesse Jackson criticized Simon, Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. for "abandoning the needy."

Gore, who was campaigning again today in the South, defended his decision to bypass Iowa and stake his hopes on a good performance in the March 8 Super Tuesday primaries and caucuses.

Bush, in Iowa, told reporters he expects more questions from Iran-Contra investigators, but said neither he nor President Reagan is the target of any probe.

"I will answer any question put to me by the special prosecutor," he said Wednesday. "It has been made clear to me I am not a target of any investigation, nor is the president."

Bush said he has not yet been contacted by special prosecutor Lawrence E. Walsh or any of his aides, "but I will be."

Earlier, in Goffstown, N.H., Bush refused to say whether he had been contacted by Walsh, telling reporters: "We don't discuss what happens at a grand jury."

The Washington Post reported today it had obtained classified notes from Bush's Dec. 18, 1986, interview with the Tower commission, a panel appointed by Reagan to investigate the Iran-Contra affair.

Notes of the Bush interview say he "did have a general knowledge of arms sales to Iran as a result of attendance at various briefings on the hostages and ... with the president," the newspaper said.

Bush told the Tower commission that if only half the allegations about Lt. Col. Oliver L. North were true, "he has run amok," the Post said. Bush told reporters Wednesday he considers North a hero, although the fired national security aide "clearly made some mistakes."

The Post said it obtained the Tower commission notes from someone who is not connected with any of the other presidential campaigns, Republican or Democratic.

Bush has consistently downplayed his role in the Iran-Contra affair, saying he was "out of the loop" on details and decision-making.

However, the committees last month released a White House memo dating from February 1986, which described Bush as supporting arms shipments to Iran.

Bush said earlier this week he would not reveal his private advice to the president on the arms sales. Bush has said he expressed "reservations" to the president about the affair but has declined to say exactly what he told Reagan.

"I'm not a kiss-and-teller. I'm not going to go out there and try to look good," he said.

The Post quoted sources as saying Bush's reservations did not concern the basic policy of selling arms to Iran, but rather whether Israel might gain leverage over the United States by participating in the secret Iran arms sales.

Bush's chief of staff, Craig Fuller, said there was "nothing new" in the Post report, and said he found it "very curious" that it appeared a day before the GOP candidates debate in Des Moines.

The campaign of Rep. Jack Kemp is complaining that Bush has tried to change the format of another upcoming GOP debate, set Jan. 16 at Dartmouth College, to avoid being questioned by the other candidates about the Iran-Contra affair and other matters.

A Bush spokesman, Andrew Card, said the Bush campaign has no problem with any format, including one in which the candidates question one another. Such a format was used at an earlier debate on NBC-TV, during which Bush was needed by a GOP rival, former Secretary of State Alexander Haig, about the arms-for-hostages deal.

Bush was campaigning today in Iowa, where a poll of registered Republicans indicated he was trailing Dole. The vice president acknowledged he is "in a tough fight" in the state.

Relationship Is Linked To Job

By ELIZABETH MEHREN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — In the latest entry in the great debate over quantity time vs. quality time, a team of Boston researchers has found that the quality of father-child relationships seems linked to a man's job satisfaction while the amount of time he spends depends on his wife's independence and feelings of self-worth.

Boston University psychologist Frances K. Grossman and her associates found that, at least in the case of first-born children, mothers "are the gatekeepers," de facto determiners of how much time a father spends with his child.

The husbands of women who displayed the highest degree of what psychologists call "autonomy" — a sense of separateness and self-worth — tended to spend the least time on child-care duties, Grossman and her colleagues found, particularly with "obligatory" time involved in child-rearing.

But what they also discovered, Grossman said in a telephone interview, was a strong connection between the gratification and fulfillment men felt on the job and the degree of warmth and support they exhibited toward their offspring.

"That was interesting," Grossman said, speculating that the reason male job satisfaction played such a significant role in the quality of fathering is that "it's a mental health measure for men, a key factor in reflecting and enhancing men's mental health."

But there was also a Catch-22 in that aspect of her group's findings, Grossman said, in that "the more satisfied you are with the job, the more you're likely to be working a lot of hours a week, and therefore the less likely you are to have time for your family."

A further complexity came from the women's high autonomy factor. "These tend to be educated, energetic women," Grossman said. "When they put all their energies into child care, it somewhat excludes the father, making him automatically less involved."

"My own view," Grossman said, "is that that's not so good for the kids."

Often, the conundrum feeds into "an unspoken collusion" between father and mother about division of child-rearing labors. "Neither understands it, but they're both doing it," she said.

The Grossman team's study subjects fell largely under the heading of what she termed "new-traditional" marriages, working and upper middle-class couples in their late 20s. For the most part, the husbands were the primary wage earners, but most of the women said they planned to re-enter the work force at least part-time.

The fathering study, reported in the journal Developmental Psychology, involved 23 Boston-area couples in their first pregnancy. The couples in turn were part of a larger, longitudinal (or long-range, ongoing) look at how pregnancy affects family life.

Of 100 couples involved in the original, broader study, 59 were still active and eligible at the time of the study's five-year mark. Grossman's data analysis on fathering targeted only those with first-born children; hence the smaller number. Those couples were visited during the course of their first pregnancies, and again, 5 1/2 years later, during the pre-kindergarten "peak child-care year."

The Grossman group's research, now known as the Boston University Pregnancy Project, began informally in the mid 1970s when Grossman, trained as a clinical psychologist at Yale, and several of her graduate students all found themselves pregnant at the same time. Soon the five researchers were launching into the longitudinal study that has so far produced about 25 doctoral dissertations and at least one book, "Pregnancy and Parenthood: Adaptations of Mothers, Fathers and Children" (Jossey Bass, 1980).

In its first decade of existence, the study also yielded "about 12 babies," Grossman said.

"It got to be a joke in the department. 'Stay out of that research if you don't want a kid,'" she said.

As the group examined the data emerging from their research, "I got stuck with the fathers," Grossman said, "because most of the people working with me were women, and they were most interested in mothers and children."

But Grossman soon became fascinated with her findings.

"I think fathers are very important players in this business of running families in America, and nobody knows anything about them," she said.

In fact, Grossman said, "we know very little about how normal families function" in general.

"We think we know," she said. "We imagine it, because we have all lived in families, but we don't know."

As a consequence of that kind of complacency about families, Grossman said she and her colleagues were themselves unprepared for much of what they uncovered.

"First of all," she said, "we didn't like the data. As good, Northeastern feminist types we would have liked to have seen much more support for fathers."

Grossman said also that her group was surprised by the extent of "the difference between quality time" — how much, in this case, "the father supported the child's closeness and the child's separateness" — and quantity, or the amount of time a father spent doing things with his child.

In their initial interviews "the men in the studies thought that they had learned to parent from their wives — they had told us that," Grossman said. Therefore her group also expected to find that the wives' characteristics would predict the quality of the parenting.

"Mostly it didn't," she said. "Mostly it was the psychological characteristics of the men themselves."

Young Designers Are Shedding Tiers

By NINA HYDE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

For a while it looked as if you had to be tied up like a Christmas gift to be in fashion this season. Puffs and bows, ruffles and tiers. The bungee of tassels and other trimmings, turned on by Christian Lacroix, has been a turnoff to many younger designers who like clothes lean, clean and mean.

Actually the lean and clean gang is not all that young. Calvin Klein is the granddaddy of them all. His remarkably spare separates established the theme for American sportswear and gained respect for American fashion worldwide. Klein still designs a portion of his collection within this scheme, but he also dips into a world that is often dressier and fussier than his earlier, easy-to-wear, spare styles.

No matter. There are lots of others opting for unfancy fashion and doing it well. Michael Kors, for example, trims his collection down to a lean, untricky line with short skirts and long shorts with easy-fitting, blazer-cut shirts. Cathy Hardwick shortcuts intricate tailoring with fabrics that stretch into the shape of the wearer. Marc Jacobs, David Cameron and Stephen Sprouse are others in this less-is-more modern school.

At the head of the class this season, however, is Ronaldus Shamask, whose pared-down style is a natural development of the architectural clothes that first gave him recognition. In the past year he has started manufacturing in Italy, a natural progression, as he points out, since he has been importing fabric from Italy for some time. "I used to have to compensate for the lack of quality manufacturing by making the design more complicated. If something simple is not made perfectly, it shows," says Shamask. "You see the puckers in gabardine and the bad stitching. With enough froufrou you can hide it. Fortunately, I don't have to do that anymore."

In fact, his collection for spring is quite the opposite. "My clothes have never been more simple, never more to the body," says Shamask, 42, whose clothes are available locally at Saks-Jandel and Saks Fifth Avenue. He achieves the lean silhouette in a most sensible and comfortable way, for example, with a wedge of elastic in the high-rise waistband of a skirt.

"Elastic in the fabric is very practical," says the designer. "It not only affects the fit but also makes it more comfortable for the wearer."

Using stretch has made the cut simpler as well. "There are fewer darts and seams. That makes it a much simpler and more modern way to make clothes," says the Dutch-born designer, who moved with his family to Australia after World War II, when there was a shortage of work in Europe. At 18, he moved to London and sold fashion illustrations to the Observer and the Sunday Times.

In 1970, along with composer-conductor Lukas Foss and artist Larry Hiller, he was invited to become part of a group of artists-in-residence in Buffalo, an attempt by a multimedia company to make Buffalo a cultural center. But after several years of unfocused work there, he left for New York City. "I wasn't sure if my field was architecture or what. I needed to do something definite with my life."

In New York, he saw the extraordinary designs of the late Charles James, who constructed gowns with the intricacy and complicated arrangements of an architect. And he discovered the works of the Russian constructivists who were creating for Popova and others. "To me that was the true art of designing for the masses. I was not interested in trends. I thought that this was for me."

Fortunately his timing was right. "It was the time of architectural fashion, of self-conscious fashion. I got it all out of my system." Now, he says, fashion is much more relaxed, more like sportswear. "If a woman looks self-conscious, or tries too hard, she looks wrong," says Shamask. "Now I can concentrate on clothing vs. design. It is a new step for me."

He has applied this same sensibility to menswear — and these designs have won him an honor from his peers, the Council of Fashion Designers Award, to be presented in January. "It is great. I can put the clothes on and I can see if it makes me look powerful, taller, sexy, businesslike or whatever it is supposed to do. I can get the emotional reaction that I see from women in my clothes."

The women's line, he says, "is like children's building blocks. There are a limited number of pieces and you can create anything you want with them." He uses the same dark colors — purple, green, brown — in both the men's and women's lines. "Other designers have puffs and fantasy. My fantasy is in color and shape."

There is not a pouf or a bow anywhere in the collection. "I don't do that," says Shamask. "Only so many people want to dress up like Marie Antoinette's milkmaid."

U.S. Merchants' Sales Never Change

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

A few years ago my husband and I took a trip to Papua, New Guinea, down the Sepic River. In every village we visited, natives offered their hand carvings for sale. In response to the question, "How much?" they had an interesting answer. They said, "First price, $150... second price, $20" and then they waited patiently for you to make up your mind which price you wanted to pay.

OK, so they'll never make the world's greatest poker players, but there was something charming and innocent in the way they did business. I couldn't help but compare them to American merchants.

Do you realize you could travel the length and breadth of this country and not find two people who paid the same price for their airline tickets, books, hotel accommodations, housing, appliances, clothing or food?

Car salesmen are the worst. No matter how clever you think you are, you will never get a direct answer to the question, "How much is this car?" First, you have to go through how much you are willing to spend for a car, how much you think your own car is worth on a trade-in, and what is the safety of your family worth to you. Then you must watch the salesman do a little dance called "Check-with-the-boss-two-step." This is where he skips back and forth between the manager and you with a series of figures that are written down. When the manager's figures become blood-stained, you agree to buy the car.

The airlines can't even come up with a standard price anymore. The cost of your ticket depends on what season, what day of the week, how many days before your flight you bought the ticket, where you bought it, how many days you're going to stay before your return trip, whether or not you've contributed bonus miles, if you bought it during a price war or a package deal, or if your father gave birth to the stewardess and is wearing a suit and tie and will play well in first class.

And who can believe a "sale," anymore when post-Christmas sales are held two weeks BEFORE Christmas. One store I know starts each year with their WHITE SALE followed by INVENTORY and the PRESIDENT'S SALE. These banners are taken down to make room for the STOREWIDE CLEARANCE. The one I like is the OOPS IS MY FACE RED WE'RE OVERSTOCKED SALE which we talk about at the BACK DOOR MOONLIGHT MADNESS SALE for preferred customers. The HARVEST SALE and the END-OF-THE-MONTH GALA are real close together, but not as close as the PRE-CHRISTMAS and POST-CHRISTMAS. Following the holidays, there's the END OF THE YEAR PRICES SLASHED, the FINAL REDUCTION, SIDEWALK SALE, COST PLUS 15 PERCENT, followed by EVERYTHING MUST GO OUR LEASE IS UP AND GOING-OUT OF BUSINESS ALL SALES FINAL.

What is interesting is that in 10 years, not one sale has changed at the store.

Experts Warn Parents Against Overinvolvement

By MARY JO KOCHAKIAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

You are at increased risk if you were in your 30s before you became a parent, or you are divorced or never married.

Or if it was difficult conceiving or delivering your child, or if the child has medical problems.

The affliction is overinvolvement. The result is "the too precious child," as described in the book of the same title by Drs. Lynne H. Williams and Henry S. Berman, and Louisa Rose (Atheneum, $17.95).

It is an increasingly common condition, according to Berman, a Spokane, Wash., pediatrician who, like his wife, Louisa Rose, grew up in Hartford. Williams is a psychiatrist in Spokane.

People have fewer children, and often expect a lot from them. The pressure can be compounded by many other factors: The child was adopted, the child is gifted or the child is "difficult." Or the child was conceived to help a marriage or was born after the death of another child in the family. Or the parents themselves were overvalued or undervalued as children.

Berman and his co-authors are not recommending that parents simply stop paying so much attention to their children. "You want a very precious child, not a too precious child," he says. The latter "have parents who are constantly shaping, molding, worrying or indulging them. They can do very little, if anything, without parental interference and attention," the book says.

On the other hand, "Precious children have parents who spend time with them (and some time away from them), who enjoy them (and also enjoy time without them), who care about their education (but don't insist on competitive performance), and who help them discover their unique abilities (without insisting that they be stars). They have empathetic parents who are attuned to their children's needs and love them for what they are."

As motivations for overinvolvement vary, so do consequences. Overprotected children "can end up having a lot of psychosomatic problems, be anxious about medical symptoms or change, or doing things that require some mild risk — swimming, camping," Berman says. Children who are pressured to excel can become "very anxious overachievers or very anxious underachievers," he says.

Also, children may feel that they must always be "on"; they may have difficulty separating from their parents; they can have trouble with following rules outside the home; they can have trouble making smooth developmental progress, with either too much or too little being expected of them, the authors write.

Perhaps the children likely to suffer the most have parents with "the single-minded approach," Berman says. "These are the children who at age 3 never had a babysitter, not even grandparents." Such children often have trouble adapting to peer relationships and school.

Divorce is probably the most common cause of the too precious child, Berman says, as parents are likely to indulge their offspring in order to win the war for affection. "Obviously, the parents do not get along well, but it is important to figure out some way to guard against this," he says.

Often overinvolvement stems from parents imposing their needs on children. To determine if you are being unrealistic in your expectations, ask yourself these questions, the book advises: What kind of parent do I want to be? What kind of child do I want to have? What kind of parent do I not want to be? What kind of child do I not want to have? The answers can show "agendas," parents' ideas of what a child should be, which can have little to do with the kind of person the child really is.

"People who are the most overinvolved seem to have the most trouble acknowledging it. If you think you're overinvolved, that may be a good thing," Berman says. "All good parents at certain times will have these problems. We're very well aware that a good parent who really wants to do well is going to fall into some of these traps." Step back, evaluate and make changes to straighten things out, he advises.

Above all, don't let it become another obsession. "It would be terrible if this became a new thing everybody worried about," he says.

Focus On Divorced Parents Is Blurred In Wedding Photo

DEAR ABBY: You were wrong, wrong, wrong to tell that woman who is about to marry a divorced man to "grin and bear it" when her fiance takes her to his daughter's wedding, and is asked to stand next to his ex-wife so his daughter can have a picture of her parents together. Abby, they are not together anymore, and the daughter had better live in the present and forget the past.

The man I married was married before. He has two daughters in their teens, and when they marry, I do not intend to stand by and let my husband take a picture with his "ex" and children to preserve the illusion of a "family." They are no longer a family. As the wife of the father of the bride, I should be in the picture — not the ex. — BURNED UP IN NEW CASTLE, PA.

DEAR BURNED: Please simmer down and read on:

DEAR ABBY: A letter in your column struck a nerve with me. I was 12 when my parents' marriage ended in a bitter divorce. When I married at 19, my mother had remarried and my father was soon to wed. My wedding went smoothly. I did not seat my divorced parents together. Neither did I expect them to dance together. All I asked them to do was to stand together for one picture with me and my new husband. I didn't do it to "preserve the illusion" of Mom and Dad together. It was my gift to me as a grown woman standing next to her parents.

DEAR ABBY: After years of searching for "Mr. Right," I have finally found him. We are very much in love and absolutely sure of our feelings for each other.

Dear Abby

There is, however, one major obstacle standing in the way of our marriage. He wants children, and I do not. We each have sound reasons for our opinions and we respect each other's views.

Have you or your readers any suggestions? We are in desperate need of some creative thinking, and are quite open-minded. — STUMPED IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR STUMPED: There can be no compromise. Either you must agree to have a family to please him, or he must agree to forgo having children to please you. Either way, you are bound to resent each other. Keep looking. Your "Mr. Right" is wrong for you.

DEAR ABBY: Why do people brag? I have a friend who really overdoes it. She brags about how well her married children are doing, how beautiful their homes are, what fabulous trips they take, and the expensive gifts they give her on all occasions. Of course, her grandchildren are smarter than anybody else's. One of them (she says) has the IQ of a genius.

By the way, before her husband left her for another woman, she bragged about what a great marriage they had.

How can I get her to knock it off? Her constant bragging gets on my nerves. — CAN'T STAND BRAGGERS

DEAR CAN'T: Some people brag to impress or convince others. Your friend was probably bragging to cover her unhappiness. Braggers are a pathetic lot. You can't get people to do — or not do — anything. But you can absent yourself from their company.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help, as do thousands of other nuns. Years ago, we worked for small salaries or none at all — in hospitals and parochial schools. Donations helped supplement our small salaries, and we nuns were able to survive.

Today these same communities are in serious financial difficulty because we have more and more elderly members and fewer younger members to support them. Many of us now send out begging letters requesting donations. Why? Because most people think that the Catholic Church totally supports us. That is not true. While many dioceses do what they can to help offset some of our financial difficulties, they are not able to fully provide for us. Abby, we need funds for food, utilities, upkeep of buildings, health care and funds for education in order to continue to help the sick, the abused, the homeless, etc.

The real problem then is: How can we let people know that Catholic nuns need their help and support? — A NUN IN NEED

DEAR SISTER: I, too, was unaware of your situation, and if this letter alerts members of your faith to offer more support, then your prayers have been answered.

Provisionals To Have Training Meet

The Greenville Service League held its meeting Monday. A training meeting for provisionals will be held Monday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital starting at 2 p.m.

The Bloodmobile visit at Procter and Gamble resulted in 36 workers collecting 55 pints of blood. Mary Wesley Harvey gave a report. Mrs. Howard Dawkins said 16 workers decorated the hospital for the Christmas holidays including coordinating 500 candycane tray favors and miniature Christmas trees were placed on nurses' stations.

A Valentine workshop will be held Feb. 2. Mrs. R. Kelly Barnhill answered eight calls for the Laughinghouse Fund. Mrs. C.W. Harvey Jr. responded to two calls for layettees and Mrs. Raymond MacKenzie answered four calls for the lending chest.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, giving up some of the gains from its early-1988 rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 98.97 points in the first three sessions of the year, dropped back 21.55 to 2,016.25 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by nearly 3 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 290 up, 823 down and 393 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 28.90 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

After a stunning three-day surge, the dollar slipped lower against most other major currencies today as caution returned to foreign exchange markets. The dollar was up sharply against the Japanese yen in Tokyo, rising to 128.95 yen from 127.13 yen late Wednesday, although it closed below its high for the day. The same factors cited in the dollar's climb Wednesday in Europe and New York were cited in today's Tokyo activity — coordinated central-bank intervention and reports of a secret agreement among Japan, the United States and West Germany to maintain the dollar at between 125 and 140 yen.

Losers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, down 1 1/8 at 121 1/4; Chrysler, down 1/8 at 25 1/8; General Electric, down 1/2 at 46 1/2, and American Express, down 1/8 at 24 1/8.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 1.15 to 143.67. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.47 at 273.53.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 6.30 to 2,037.80.

Gainers outpaced decliners by about 7 to 5 on the NYSE, with 935 up, 661 down and 365 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 169.74 million shares, against 209.52 million in the previous session.

Jobless Rate Increases

RALEIGH — Unemployment rates in November showed a slight increase in 63 of the state's 100 counties and in four of the nine metropolitan statistical areas (MSAs).

Employment Security Commission of North Carolina figures show that only four counties experienced November unemployment rates over 10 percent. They were Graham with 16.6 percent, up from 13.7 percent in October; Hyde, 12.8 percent from 5.5 percent; Swain, 11.4 percent from 7.3 percent, and Tyrell, 11.4 from 9.9 percent.

The November MSA's were: Asheville, 3.9 percent, from 3.6 percent in October; Burlington, 3.4 percent, unchanged; Charlotte-Gastonia, N.C.-Rock Hill, S.C., 3.3 percent, unchanged; Fayetteville, 4.9 percent, from 5.2 percent; Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point, 3.4 percent, from 3.3 percent; Hickory, 3.2 percent, unchanged; Jacksonville, 3.6 percent, from 3.2 percent; Raleigh-Durham, 3.0 percent, from 2.9 percent and Wilmington, 5.7 percent, from 5.8 percent.

The state's seasonally unadjusted rate of unemployment increased slightly to 4 percent from 3.9 percent. The November figures also show the state's labor force at 3,335,800 with 3,210,700 employed and 124,100 unemployed. In October, those figures were 3,354,100, 3,224,900, 129,200 respectively.

One year ago, unemployment rates increased in 77 of the state's 100 counties and in six of the nine MSAs. Four counties experienced unemployment rates over 10 percent. Graham's rate was highest at 27.1 percent.

The state's seasonally unadjusted rate of unemployment for November 1986 was 5.4 percent compared to 4 percent for this year.

Rape Charges

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fort Bragg soldier has been indicted on 38 felony charges involving a series of sexual assaults and burglaries between November 1986 and October 1987.

Clyde Delson McIntosh Jr., 23, was indicted by a Cumberland County grand jury on 15 counts of first-degree burglary; three counts each of first-degree rape, attempted first-degree rape, attempted second-degree rape and felony breaking and entering; two counts each of second-degree rape, first-degree sex offense, second-degree sex offense and larceny; and single counts of attempted first-degree burglary, armed robbery and attempted armed robbery.

In addition, McIntosh was charged with two misdemeanor counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

McIntosh, a combat medic who has been stationed at Fort Bragg since April 1985, is being held in Cumberland County Jail under a bond of more than $2 million, jail officials said Wednesday.

Dollar

central banks have shown their strong intention to intervene," said Gary Dorsch, senior money market analyst at LNS Financial Group Inc. in Chicago.

Others said the currency market's behavior Wednesday reflected the heavy dollar-buying by the Federal Reserve and its counterparts in Japan and Western Europe earlier in the week.

"You had the central banks coming in Monday and Tuesday, and that really provided direction to the market," said James Hohorst, managing director of foreign exchange at Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in New York. "If the dollar fell, they just pushed it back up, they were in the driver's seat."

In late New York trading Wednesday, the dollar gained nearly 1.5 West German pfennigs to equal about 1.64 marks, and gained 1.45 yen to equal about 129 yen. On New Year's Eve, the dollar was worth 1.57 marks and 121.10 yen.

Despite the dollar's rebound, strategists said the currency faces an enormous test Jan. 15 when the Commerce Department releases November trade deficit figures. The monthly announcement has become a fixation with the markets because it is considered a major reflection of U.S. economic strength.

When the department said last month that the October deficit had swelled to a monthly record of $17.63 billion, traders sold dollars relentlessly in the belief that the Reagan administration would let the currency fall in order to make American goods cheaper and more competitive.

"If the November number is acceptable, then it's possible the dollar can maintain current levels," said Robert Hatcher, vice president on the corporate foreign exchange desk at Barclay's Bank PLC in New York. "If it's worse, that means the central banks will have to get their boxing gloves on."

Wednesday's rise in the dollar again helped the stock market, though not as much as in the previous two sessions.

Bethea Paces Lady Pirates To 78-68 Win Over 'Dogs

ORANGEBURG, S.C. — Alma Bethea came off the bench to score 21 points and lead East Carolina University's women's basketball team to a 78-68 victory over South Carolina State Wednesday night.

Bethea had not started the game since she has been struggling with her play lately. In addition, starter Gretta O'Neal Savage also did not start due to an ankle injury, with Sandra Grace and Rose Miller taking their places.

But Bethea came on to lead the way while Monique Pompili added 20 points.

Lisa Brown paced the S.C. State effort with 21 points.

The Lady Pirates turned in a hot hand in the game, hitting on 52 percent of their shots, their best night of the year. At the same time, they held the Lady Bulldogs to just 34 percent.

East Carolina fell behind early in the game, but came on to take the lead near the midpoint of the half. After that, the Pirates led all the way. By halftime, ECU had forged a 39-31 lead.

During the second half, the Lady Pirates continued to hold the lead, although the Lady Bulldogs did put on a rally toward the end.

"We maintained the lead most of the time, which was nice," Coach Pat Pierson said. "I thought Pam (Williams) did a real good job at the point in directing the offense. We were more patient on offense and executed well. We played real good defense down the stretch when we needed to."

Pierson also thought that benching Bethea may have been an important factor. "It seemed to light a fire under her," she said. "She played real well, like she's capable of doing."

The victory boosted the Lady Pirate record to 5-6. They will open Colonial Athletic Association play on Saturday when they play host to George Mason in a 7:30 p.m. game. That will be followed on Monday with a 7:30 p.m. meeting in Minges Coliseum against nationally-ranked James Madison in another CAA game.

Pam Pack Tops Chargers, 66-63

LITTLEFIELD — Eric Blount poured in 31 points for Ayden-Grifton Wednesday night, but Washington came away with the eventual victory in their basketball meeting, 66-63.

Washington's girls also pulled off a win, taking a 43-25 win.

Ayden-Grifton inched out into a 13-11 lead in the first quarter of the contest, but Washington took control in the second quarter. The Pam Pack outthrew the Chargers, 22-12, and built up a 33-25 halftime lead.

Ayden-Grifton rallied throughout the second half but was unable to pull it off. The Chargers cut the lead back to 50-43 in the third quarter and outscored the Pam Pack, 20-16, in the fourth, but fell short.

Blount connected on 10 field goals, five of them from the 3-point range and added six of seven free throws for his 31-point total. Ronnell Peterson added 16.

Nico Hines led Washington with 16 while Bob Rhodes and Ryan Dixon each had 15.

In the girls' action, Washington eased out to a 10-6 lead in the first quarter, then pulled away strongly in the second period. The Lady Pack held a 17-5 margin in the quarter and took a 27-11 lead into intermission.

In the third period, the Pack continued its domination, 13-2, and ran the lead out to 40-13. Ayden-Grifton was allowed a 12-3 rally in the final period to no avail.

Deanna Davis led Washington with 13 points while Tonya Holley added 10. No one scored in double figures for Ayden-Grifton.

The victory boosted Washington's record to 9-1 on the year, and was their fifth straight win. The Lady Pack is now 8-0. Ayden-Grifton drops to 5-4 while the girls are now 1-9.

Ayden-Grifton plays host to Greene Central on Friday in its first Eastern Plains Conference action. Washington is idle until Tuesday

State Overcomes Jet Lag To Down Clemson; Terps Lone Loser Among Others

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

North Carolina State got over lingering jet lag and other assorted problems and joined Maryland atop the Atlantic Coast Conference with a 70-61 victory over Clemson.

The Wolfpack was back in Raleigh for its second game following its victory over Arizona State in the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu. Despite beating Cornell 95-72 on Sunday, N.C. State was not in the best of shape.

Kenny Poston was on crutches, Avie Lester was bandaged up after he fell off a moped while in Hawaii, and Charles Shackelford was still trying to regain feeling in his left elbow after he fell asleep on his arm during the flight back to the mainland.

"I just wish we were 100 percent healthy," Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano said prior to meeting the Tigers. "We're hurting now, but that's the way it goes."

But Chris Corchiani, who several weeks ago was facing an early end to his freshman year after contracting mononucleosis, provided the key ingredients in the Wolfpack's initial conference victory.

After trailing 50-40 with 12 minutes left, an 11-4 run in which Vinny Del Negro scored six points got the Wolfpack within 54-51 with 9:32 left. Corchiani tied the score with a 3-point shot from the left side with 9:01 remaining. Del Negro added a jumper from the right baseline at 8:19 to break the tie.

Clemson called a timeout to break N.C. State's momentum, but the Wolfpack scored 10 straight points to complete the run and took a 66-54 edge on two Corchiani free throws with 1:43 left.

During the Wolfpack rally, Clemson missed the only two shots taken and committed five turnovers. After Bruce scored at 9:18 for the Tigers for the 54-49 advantage, Clemson didn't score again until an Eldon

Campbell layup with 1:28 left.

It was Corchiani's first game, and it was the type of performance that Valvano is expecting from his prized recruit.

"Corchiani did a great job off the bench," Valvano said. "He was super directing traffic for us."

Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis was obviously displeased.

"I didn't know how we would react. Obviously, we have to execute better," Ellis said, adding, "We just didn't play very smart."

Del Negro finished with 20 points for the Wolfpack, who improved to 8-2. Charles Shackelford had 14 points, Chucky Brown scored 12 and Corchiani added 11.

Jerry Pryor scored 15 points, 13 in the first half, as the Tigers dropped to 7-3. Campbell scored 14 points and Bruce scored 12 for Clemson.

Outside the league, ACC teams were four-for-five in non-league action. Fourth-ranked North Carolina was taken into overtime by Fordham, but the Tar Heels held off the Rams for a 76-67 victory. Ninth-ranked Duke trounced Miami, Fla., 107-69. Virginia defeated Radford 65-56 and Georgia Tech slipped past Louisville 62-61. Missouri defeated Maryland 93-85 in the lone ACC loss. J.R. Reid scored 23 points, and Scott Williams scored the first five points of the overtime period.

"It took St. John's two overtimes to beat them and it only took us one," North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said. "They did some good things tonight. You have to give Fordham credit. I would not have been surprised if we had lost."

Meanwhile, the Rams lost their touch in overtime, hitting their first basket with 25 seconds left.

"We got a little tired (in the overtime). The guys got worn down a little bit," Fordham coach Nick Macarchuk said.

The Tar Heels, 10-1, played without starting guards Jeff Lebo and Ran-zino Smith, both injured in practice.

Danny Ferry scored 23 points to lead five Blue Devils in double figures. The Blue Devils led 30-22 with 9:31 left in the first half, but Quin Snyder scored six points to spark a 16-5 rally and the Blue Devils grabbed a 58-36 halftime lead.

Duke scored the first 10 points of the second half and coasted the rest of the way. The Blue Devils also forced 26 Miami turnovers while committing only 15 and out rebounded the Hurricanes 45-35.

Kevin Strickland added 17 and John Smith 16 points as Duke improved to 8-1. Robert Brickey scored 12 while Snyder and Alaa Abdelnaby added 11 points each.

"They have probably the deepest team I've seen at Duke," said Miami coach Bill Foster, who has seen plenty of Duke from his days as Clemson head coach. "They go to the bench with really good people and they play the best defense I've seen at Duke."

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski agreed.

"I thought our depth really hurt them," he said. "They (Miami) did a good job of attacking the offensive boards against us early. We tried to keep them off, but they are very competitive on the boards."

At Charlottesville, Va., Mel Kennedy scored 17 points and Richard Morgan added 14 as Virginia raised its record to 7-6 at the expense of a cold-shooting Radford team.

Tom Hammonds made a 12-foot jump shot with eight seconds remaining to give Georgia Tech a victory over the Cardinals in Louisville.

Mike Abram had given Louisville a 61-60 lead with 32 seconds left on a jumper from the right baseline before Hammonds hit the game-winning shot.

Georgia Tech, 10-2, was led by Duane Ferrell, who scored a game-high 28 points.

Pitt, Georgetown Square Off, Fight; Hoyas Get Win

By The Associated Press

The Big East race always is a fight to the finish. And No. 2 Pittsburgh and No. 14 Georgetown got started with the fists early.

Both benches emptied Wednesday night during Georgetown's 62-57 victory in the conference opener for each team.

Mark Tillmon, Georgetown's leading scorer, was ejected midway through the first half after scuffling with Nate Bailey and Jerome Lane.

"Those kids should have been in my neighborhood if they thought that little thing was a fight," Georgetown Coach John Thompson said.

The game later turned into a battle of Charles Smiths. Charles Smith of the Georgetown scored 13 of his 20 points in the second half; Charles Smith of the Panthers, the more heralded of the two players, finished with 12 points after missing the final 13:44 of the first half with three fouls.

"I'm not worried about publicity," Georgetown's Smith said. "There can be 50 Charles Smiths, as long as we win I don't care who gets the notoriety."

The Hoyas improved to 10-1. Pitt is 9-1.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 1 Kentucky crushed Mississippi State 93-52. No. 4 North Carolina got past Fordham 76-67 in overtime. No. 6 Temple routed Pennsylvania 84-50. No. 9 Duke defeated Miami, Fla., 107-69. No. 11 Michigan beat Northwestern 92-69. No. 16 Iowa stopped No. 12 Indiana 84-70. Auburn upset No. 15 Florida 72-67 and No. 18 Kansas downed American 90-69.

Perry McDonald scored 15 points as Georgetown won its seventh straight game. The Hoyas led 58-56 in the final minute when Pitt Coach Paul Evans was called for two technical fouls.

Smith made a pair of free throws for a 60-56 lead and the Panthers never got a chance to get closer.

The brawl broke out with 11 minutes left in the first half when Tillmon and Bailey got tangled up and exchanged angry words. Tillmon elbowed Bailey, and then Pitt's Lane shoved Tillmon.

Lane finished with 12 points and 16 rebounds. Pitt has never won at the Capital Centre.

"This team is going to come back," Evans said. "We've got those three freshmen in there (including starting guards Jason Matthews and Sean Miller) and we made freshman mistakes."

No. 1 Kentucky 93, Mississippi St. 52
Winston Bennett led Kentucky's balanced scoring with 17 points.

The Wildcats ran to a 14-2 lead and shot 70 percent from the field in building a 55-17 halftime margin. Kentucky is 10-0 overall and 3-0 in the Southeastern Conference.

Rob Lock finished with 15 points and Eric Manuel and Ed Davender had 12 each.

Carl Nichols scored 15 for Mississippi State, 8-3. The 41-point loss was the sixth-worst in the Bulldogs' history.

No. 4 North Carolina 76, Fordham 67
Scott Williams scored the first five points in overtime and J.R. Reid finished with 23 as North Carolina got past Fordham.

The host Tar Heels, 10-1, played without starting guards Jeff Lebo and Ranzino Smith, both slightly injured in practice. Fordham, 5-6, forced the overtime at 65 on Greg Pedro's two foul shots in the final seconds but was overmatched in the extra period.

Williams scored 15 points, five in overtime. King Rice, playing in place of Lebo, had 14.

Joe Paterno scored 16 for the Rams.

No. 6 Temple 84, Pennsylvania 50
Mike Vreeswyk scored 20 points and Mark Macon 19 as Temple raced to a 24-0 lead and trounced its Philadelphia city rival.

The Owls, 9-0 and off to their best start since the 1978-79 team won its first 11 games, were ahead 31-2 and coasted to a 52-30 halftime bulge. Vreeswyk set 7-for-11 from the field, including 5-for-9 from 3-point range. Macon, a freshman, was 9-for-14 and has scored in double figures in each of Temple's games.

No. 9 Duke 107, Miami, Fla., 69
Danny Ferry scored 23 points and for host Duke.

The Blue Devils, 8-1, led 30-22 at halftime and scored the first 10 points of the second half. They forced 26 turnovers and made just 15.

Kevin Strickland added 17 points and John Smith 16 for Duke. Dennis Burns scored 21 for Miami, 5-8.

No. 11 Michigan 92, Northwestern 69
Gary Grant had 31 points and moved into third place on Michigan's all-time scoring list as the Wolverines won at Northwestern.

Loy Vaught added 18 points for Michigan, which won its 11th straight game and is 12-1. It was the Big Ten opener for both schools.

Grant passed Rudy Tomjanovich among Michigan's scoring leaders and trails Cazzie Russell and Mike McGee.

Shon Morris scored 17 points in the first half for the Wildcats, 5-6. He injured an ankle two minutes into the second half and did not score again.

No. 16 Iowa 84, No. 12 Indiana 70

B.J. Armstrong scored 27 points and Kent Hill 16, sparking a second-half rally that led Iowa over visiting Indiana in a Big Ten opener.

The Hawkeyes trailed by as many as 16 points in the first half and Indiana still led 33-26 at halftime. But Armstrong scored 17 points in the second half and Hill got all of his points in the final 20 minutes.

Iowa took the lead for good with an 8-0 spurt that made it 61-54 with 7:58 remaining. Dean Garrett, Indiana's 6-foot-10 center, picked up his fourth and fifth fouls four seconds apart during the decisive spurt.

The Hawkeyes are 9-3. Keith Smart and Rick Calloway scored 15 points each for the Hoosiers, 8-3.

Auburn 72, No. 15 Florida 67

Chris Morris scored 26 points and led depleted Auburn over visiting Florida in the Southeastern Conference.

Morris scored 17 points as the Tigers took a 43-35 halftime lead. Morris, a 6-8 senior forward, took up the slack left by center Jeff Moore's broken hand and forward Mike Jones' absence because of academic problems.

Auburn is 8-2. Dwayne Schintzius scored 23 points for the Gators, 9-4 after their third loss in five games.

No. 18 Kansas 90, American 69

Marvin Branch scored 20 points and Danny Manning 18 as Kansas won its 53rd straight game at Allen Fieldhouse, the longest home winning streak in the nation.

The Jayhawks led 44-22 at halftime and were never threatened. Kansas is 10-3.

Craven Tops Pitt By 100-84

NEW BERN — Craven Community College shook loose Pitt Community College in the final 15 minutes of the game and took a 100-84 basketball victory in Region X competition Wednesday night.

Craven moved out early, gaining a 14-8 lead in the first three and a half minutes of play. They built that lead out to 25-15 near the midpoint of the first half, but the Paladins began to come to life at that point.

Pitt pulled back to trail by only two, 40-38 at 4:15 left to go, then outscored Craven 6-0 over the next two minutes to take a 44-40 lead in the game.

But Pitt again went cold for the final two minutes and Craven had its own six-point spurt to regain the lead, 46-44, at intermission.

Craven scored the first two points of the second half, but Pitt came back to tie it at 48-48 with 18:03 to play. Over the next two and a half minutes, Pitt built up a 55-52 lead, but lost control at that point.

From there on, Craven outthit Pitt, 48-29, to post the victory.

"Jesse Pratt played as well as you could ask of him," Coach Charles Coburn said. Pratt had 18 points and 10 rebounds.

"Maurice Williams came off the bench to score his season high (12) and he had a couple of blocked shots," Coburn continued. "Kevin Michaels played well defensively, but the rest of them played as individuals. We had 34 turnovers and four players accounted for 27 of them."

Roy Lee Sutton led Craven with 24 points while Lester Sconyers and Darryl Overton each added 17 and Robert Tripp and Paul Hollingsworth each had 14. Ricky Congleton had 17 and Woodrow Wallace had 16 to go along with Pratt's and Williams' totals.

The loss drops Pitt to 4-11 overall, 0-6 in Region X. Pitt travels to Louisville Junior College on Wednesday.

Bertie Tops E.B. Aycock In Opener

Bertie Junior High School gained a 51-48 victory over E.B. Aycock in basketball action Wednesday.

Aycock's effort was led by Reggie Blount with 14 points while Rodney Williams added nine. Derrick Gaskins had 18 and John Richardson added 12 for Bertie.

The game was the first of the season for both squads. Aycock travels to Nash Central on Friday.

IOC Says 140 Committed To Seoul Games

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — A total of 140 countries will send teams to the Seoul summer games, matching the record participation in the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, the International Olympic Committee said today.

That leaves 27 countries, including the Soviet Union and China, still to respond formally to the invitations before the Jan. 17 deadline set by the IOC. In 1984, 14 countries did not participate, including all but one from the Soviet bloc.

IOC spokeswoman Michele Verdier told The Associated Press the new figure includes the positive replies received today from Chile and Mali.

Romania, the lone Soviet bloc country that did not join in the Moscow-led boycott of the Los Angeles games, is expected to follow suit shortly after a meeting of its IOC Tuesday.

It would be the fifth Soviet bloc country to announce its participation, following East Germany, Hungary, Poland, and Bulgaria. The national olympic committees of the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia are due to meet next week, but top sports officials of both countries have already said there would be no boycott.

China's NOC, originally reported to have scheduled a meeting today, is now expected to make its formal decision Jan. 15.

Countries which have announced participation can still withdraw from the games without risking sanctions.

The question of what "measures" could be taken in such case is to be discussed by the IOC during next month's winter Olympics at Calgary.

Gaetti, Twins Haven't Reached Accord

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins will have to up the ante before midnigh Friday or risk losing third baseman Gary Gaetti to another club, the Gold Glove winner says.

"It's not going the way I figured at all," Gaetti told the Star Tribune of Minneapolis on Wednesday following another session with the Twins and his agent in Chicago.

"I didn't foresee this many problems when there was a chance of me leaving the team. There's a real good chance of that happening now."

Gaetti and his agent, Jim Bronner, expressed dissatisfaction with the latest, improved offer by the Twins for $3.6 million for three years. Twins executive vice president Andy McPhail said the matter now rests with Gaetti and Bronner.

But Gaetti told the Minneapolis newspaper the Twins will have to make the next move.

"At least they agreed to three years. That's positive," Gaetti said. "But if they have made their best offer, it won't happen. I've got to seriously consider not playing here."

McPhail remained confident Wednesday, but said he believes the World Series champions have already gone to great lengths to work out a compromise.

"The significant movement has been, quite honestly, one-sided on the part of the club in terms of years, in terms of dollars," McPhail said. "They never flatly said no, so I think it's pretty much up to them to respond to our offer at this point since we're the one making the movement."

If no agreement is reached by the Friday deadline, the two parties may not resume negotiating until May 1.

Los Angeles Dodgers executive vice president Fred Claire confirmed Wednesday that he spoke with Bronner, but told the Star Tribune he would not elaborate.

WCCO-TV reported Wednesday that the St. Louis Cardinals also have contacted Bronner about Gaetti's availability. The Cardinals on Wednesday lost their top slugger, free-agent outfielder Jack Clark, who signed with the New York Yankees.

Sutton Can Earn More In Bonuses

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don Sutton will get $350,000 for pitching for the Los Angeles Dodgers this year but he can earn more than his salary in bonuses.

Sutton, a 42-year right-hander, signed a contract with Los Angeles Wednesday that gives him the opportunity to earn $425,000 in bonuses that could raise his 1988 salary to $775,000.

Sutton will get a $25,000 bonus if he is still with the Dodgers on May 1, $25,000 more for being on the roster June 1, an additional $50,000 for being on the roster July 1, $75,000 for being there Aug. 1 and $75,000 more for being on the roster Aug. 31.

House Top Area Scorer

Robin House of Greenville Christian Academy and Janet Rogerson of Bear Grass High School are the top scorers in the Daily Reflector coverage area in basketball this far this season.

House is the only scorer over 20 points a game and is nearly 10 points per game above the second place scorer.

Thus far in the season, House has averaged 28.4 points a game, including a number of games over 30 points.

Ronnell Peterson of Ayden-Grifton is the number two scorer among the boys with an 18.6 average, 9.8 behind House.

Third on the list is Bear Grass' Almer Riddick, hitting 18.4 per game. Curtis Myers of Chocowinity is the number four scorer at 17.9, followed by Errol Wooten of Rose at 17.4.

Rogerson tops the girls' scoring by just over a half-point. She had a 17.9 average, while runner-up Drusilla Crawford of Chocowinity is at 17.3.

Close behind them comes Tonya Holley of Washington at 17.0.

Fourth place goes to China Grice of Chocowinity at 16.8 while Roanoke Joyce Outlaw is fifth at 16.0.

Trinity is the top defensive team, giving up but 44.4 points a game. Roanoke is second at 49.6.

Among the girls' teams, Greenville Christian leads in offense, scoring 57.7 points a game. Chocowinity is second at 54.5.

Rose is the leading defensive team, allowing but 27.8 points a game. Trinity is second at 33.2.

Following are the Top 20 scorers for boys' and girls' and the top five teams on offense and defense. Where two players have the same average, those with differing ranking are carried one more decimal place. Those tied in both average to two decimal places are ranked as tied.

Maryland guard Rudy Archer, who led all scorers with 26 points, hit a jumper with 1:06 remaining to pull the Terrapins to within 83-82. Byron Irvin, who scored 12 points, made a layup on a pass from Lee Coward with 46 seconds left. Archer was called for an intentional foul on the play, and Irvin made one of two free throws for an 86-82 lead.

Coward hit a 12-foot jumper off the inbound pass, was fouled by Archer and made the free throw to widen the gap to 89-82. Maryland's last basket came on Archer's 3-pointer with 40 seconds left, cutting Missouri's lead to 89-85.

The Terrapins fell to 8-3.

Vikes Arrive In Tucson

Minnesota Viking defensive back Joey Browner, carrying a fur coat, arrives at the Tucson airport Wednesday with the rest of his team. The Vikings were scheduled to hold three days of practices in Tucson before heading for San Francisco Friday for their playoff game with the 49ers on Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Reeves Unsure Of Broncos' Strength

DENVER (AP) — Asked how good his Denver Broncos team is as it heads into Sunday's divisional playoff game against Houston, Coach Dan Reeves shrugged his shoulders. "I really don't know," Reeves said Wednesday. "Every week it's just like a Cracker Jack box. You open it up and there's a surprise inside. "How good are we? I don't know if any coach has a good feel. There have been so many distractions this season."

The difficulty in evaluating — mainly because of the 24-day player strike — is something Reeves has bemoaned for weeks. He had numerous questions about his team even before the season started, especially with the spate of off-season retirements that stripped his defense of its leadership.

But Reeves does take some comfort in his team's current status. The Broncos, after all, compiled the best record in the AFC at 10-4-1, winning six of their last seven games.

"I feel good about our team right now," he said. "We're as healthy as we've been and we have people playing hard."

The Broncos probably will activate their versatile running back, Steve Sewell, for this game. Sewell has been sidelined for six weeks with a broken jaw. To make room for Sewell, reserve linebacker Marc Munford, who has a back injury, is expected to be placed on injured reserve.

In addition, safety Randy Robbins, out since mid-December with a knee injury, should be available if the Broncos advance to the AFC championship game on Jan. 17.

If there is a single factor that could decide the outcome of Sunday's game, Reeves said, it is the Broncos' ability to give John Elway time to throw.

"That's the real key, to get the time to throw the ball whether they're in man-to-man or zone coverage," he said.

"I'm sure the Oilers will try to keep John inside the pocket, and then they'll cause some pressure up the middle with (Doug) Smith and their other linemen."

"I think we can get some people open, but getting the time to throw will be the key. They have two excellent blitzing linebackers, and our running backs will probably be isolated on them some, so our backs have got to block well."

Reeves insists he isn't blowing smoke in praising the Oilers. Reeves, in fact, predicted last week that Houston would be the Broncos' first playoff opponent.

"They have an awful lot of talent, and they're playing very well right now," he said. "They've won some critical games. They've been in sort of a sudden-death situation the last three or four weeks, and they've come through."

"Their defense is very aggressive and they're playing with intensity and enthusiasm which we'll have to match. We'll have to get after it on offense and not be intimidated by them."

"The most impressive thing about their offense is the balance they have. They've got two good running backs, and (quarterback Warren) Moon has played very well, especially the last two weeks."

Denver has been installed as a 10-point favorite over the Oilers, who defeated Seattle 23-20 in overtime in a wild-card game on Sunday. Reeves believes the point spread is out of line.

Schools May Sue Agents

ATLANTA (AP) — The way to stop agents from signing college athletes before their eligibility expires is to sue both the agents and athletes, according to the counsel for the American Football Coaches Association.

"I can assure you that if agents are sued for interfering with student-athletes who still have eligibility, that you're going to see some results," Gene O'Connor told the AFCA's annual business luncheon Wednesday.

He said the prohibitive cost of defending themselves would act as a deterrent to unscrupulous agents. And he also predicted that juries "will award substantial punitive damages against these agents who have corrupted the situation."

"Also, student-athletes should be sued for fraud in the event that they file a false affidavit stating that they have not taken money and that they are truly eligible, but in fact they are not."

O'Connor also said the NCAA should impose substantial fines when recruiting violations first occur instead of waiting for "repeated and serious violations" to crop up.

"I don't believe there are sufficient economic penalties for the day-to-day garden variety violations which will deter and really curb those persons who violate the recruiting process," he said.

"If somebody is going to fine substantial recruiting violators at the outset, on the first violation, the administration, the athletic director and the coaches are going to take notice and be more vigilant."

"Waiting until the very end, only after repeated and serious violations, does not stop and curtail what goes on."

"Taking some of the TV money away or imposing the death penalty is not enough economically, as far as I'm concerned. The absence of a substantial fine for a first violation is a mistake."

He suggested early fines of $5,000-$10,000 against an institution and also recommended a policy of total amnesty for self-disclosure "as long as the situation is rectified satisfactorily."

He said college presidents and should be made "personally responsible under the NCAA code for the violations that occur. I'd put into their contracts the same language that coaches have in their contracts if they violate the rules. I don't think there ought to be two standards — one for coaches and one for presidents and trustees."

He pointed out two cases in which the U.S. Supreme Court has held the heads of major food and drug corporations criminally liable even though they were ignorant of the violations in question.

"There's no criminal standard on presidents or boards of trustees," he said. "What public policy in America justifies an exemption for chief executive officers of institutions of higher education and boards of trustees from the same penalties that officers of public corporations are subject to?"

The coaches also received a report from Baylor Coach Grant Teaff, chairman of the AFCA's Ethics Committee, which heard eight cases involving 13 coaches who allegedly violated NCAA regulations or the AFCA's code of ethics.

The most serious case involved an unidentified head coach who failed to respond to alleged NCAA violations while his school was on probation. Teaff said the coach's membership in the AFCA could be suspended but that no action would be taken until he has been given due process.

The names of the coaches and schools in all eight cases were not made public. In one case, Teaff said a head coach used the media to accuse two members of an opposing staff of unethical conduct. Both head coaches appeared before the committee and Teaff said the coach who made the accusation will be sent a letter of reprimand while the coach of the accused school will be asked to "correct situations that occurred during the ballgame that may have contributed" to the disagreement.

In another case, a head coach requested the ethics committee to look into alleged violations of the code of ethics by another coach and his staff. The accused coach also asked the committee to look into the matter, which resulted in a letter asking certain assistant coaches to review some of their teaching techniques.

The other cases resulted in letters of reprimand to coaches for violations of NCAA rules or the AFCA code of ethics.

Vikes Have Been Strong Vs. 49ers

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — For the last two years, the San Francisco 49ers have played like gangbusters against the Minnesota Vikings. They outgained them and generally wrought havoc upon them.

What they didn't do was win.

"It shows two things: You haven't won it until the game is over, and the Vikings are among the most resourceful teams in football," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said just a few days before his team meets the Vikings in the NFC divisional playoff game.

In 1985, the defending Super Bowl champions carried a 12-game winning streak into their opening game with the Vikings. The 49ers went on to outgain the Vikings by 221 yards — and still lost, 28-21.

In 1986, the 49ers again met the Vikings and proceeded to take a 413-306 yardage advantage when kicker Ray Wersching lined up a 38-yard field goal try on the last play of regulation time to break a 24-24 tie.

The kick hit the left upright, the 49ers lost the coin toss in overtime, and the Vikings went on to a 27-24 victory on a Chuck Nelson field goal.

Although both losses were tough, the first one hurt the most, and the Vikings 3-13 season the previous year added more sting for the 49ers.

"We were Super Bowl champs and that sort of popped our bubble," linebacker Riki Ellison said.

"It was tough because all of a sudden everybody was jumping on us. 'What's wrong with the 49ers?'" linebacker Mike Walter said.

The 49ers, who had pounded the Miami Dolphins in the Super Bowl just seven months earlier, were favored by 11 points that day.

"We have to go back into the dark ages, maybe as far back as 1980, to find a game when we played this poorly," a disgusted Walsh said that day.

The 49ers, again heavily favored against the Vikings in Saturday's game, haven't forgotten the two losses.

"We got ripped off on both the games," Ellison said. "They beat us and that's what counts. It's still there to remember."

Slower Speeds Set For Daytona, Alabama Tracks

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

The slowdown has arrived in NASCAR stock car racing.

Qualifying speeds for the 1987 Daytona 500 ranged between 200 and 209 mph. Next month at Daytona International Speedway, the pole for the $1.2 million race is likely to go to the driver who can reach 193 mph in one lap around the 2.5-mile, high-banked oval.

NASCAR, in a continuing effort to slow the cars down in the name of safety, has ordered a more restricted carburetor plate for 1988 races at Daytona and at Alabama International Motor Speedway, the two fastest tracks on stock car racing's premier circuit.

For the other 25 Winston Cup races in 1988 — all over tracks two miles or shorter — the standard carburetor, with a 1 1/16-inch opening, will be used. At Daytona and Talladega, however, the opening will be 1 inch.

The size of the opening determines how much gasoline and air is mixed in the carburetor, thereby controlling the amount of horsepower the engine is able to produce.

"That smaller opening probably cuts those engines down more than 200 horsepower," car owner Junior Johnson said. "There'll be more competition for the pole and, in the races speeds will be down even more. And there'll be a lot of guys running with the better cars who wouldn't ordinarily be there. That could be dangerous."

"But I know why they (NASCAR) are doing it," he said. "I know they're trying to make things safer for everybody."

Last year in the Daytona 500, Phil Barkdoll's car became airborne at more than 200 mph. Then, in May on the 2.66-mile AIMS oval at Talladega, Ala., Bobby Allison's car nearly flew into the packed main grandstand.

Neither driver was badly hurt and the Talladega spectators also escaped serious injuries. But those accidents made NASCAR determined to slow the cars dramatically at the two NASCAR tracks where speeds routinely exceed 200 mph.

Carburetor restrictor plates were required last year for the July races at Daytona and Talladega, but those plates had somewhat bigger openings than the ones to be used this year. Speeds for the July events were down about 5 mph from the races earlier in 1987.

NASCAR had several teams test restrictor plates of various sizes at Daytona in December before deciding on the 1-inch model.

Leo Jackson, co-owner of the Oldsmobile that Phil Parsons will drive on the Winston Cup circuit this year, said, "I basically build a motor, then test it on the dynamometer without the restrictor plate to give me a baseline. Then I dyno it with the restrictor plate."

"Then," he added with a laugh, "I get sick. From my calculations ... the 1-inch takes away about 240 horsepower," Jackson said.

Race speeds in the high 180s are being forecast by most NASCAR teams for the Daytona 500, the NASCAR season opener on Feb. 14.

Alex English Joins Elite Group

By The Associated Press
 Alex English, the newest member of the NBA's 20,000 career points club, says it's just part of his job. English scored 35 points to become the 14th player in league history to score 20,000 career points as the Denver Nuggets rallied from a 19-point deficit and defeated the New Jersey Nets 98-93 Wednesday night. "It's a great honor to be included in a very elite group," said English, who now has 20,024 points in 11-plus seasons. "This, of course, is a milestone for me and something very special. "But then again, it is my job to score points." He did his job well against the Nets, who suffered their fourth straight loss. English surpassed the 20,000-point mark late in the first quarter, and his jumper with just less than 10 minutes to go in the game gave the Nuggets their first lead at 79-77. English has been averaging 24.9 points per game this year, and his 35 points were just two shy of his season high of 37. Elsewhere, it was Boston 117, New York 108; Philadelphia 116, Utah 93; Cleveland 116, the Los Angeles Clippers 100; Detroit 90, Atlanta 87; the Los Angeles Lakers 103, Dallas 89, and Seattle 110, Houston 95. Nuggets 98, Nets 93. New Jersey built a 58-39 lead late in the second period and was still ahead 60-47 at the half. But Denver rallied behind the defense of T.R. Dunn and 11 points by English to take a 79-77 lead. Then Jay Vincent went to work, scoring 11 of his 21 points in the final 12 minutes to wrap up the Nuggets' victory. "We couldn't do anything to stop them," Denver Coach Doug Moe said of the Nets. "T.R. Dunn really turned the game around for us with his defense. We couldn't afford to take him out in the second half. We would have lost without him." Moe said that defense is actually the key to the high-scoring Denver squad. "We live and die by our defense," Moe said. "We score a lot of points, but to be able to score those points we have to be able to play great defense." Lafayette Lever added 16 points for Denver, while Dunn came of the bench and contributed nine steals. Mike Gminski paced the Nets with 25 points and 16 rebounds. Lakers 103, Mavericks 89. James Worthy led the Los Angeles Lakers as they came from behind to defeat Dallas for their 12th straight victory.

Worthy, who finished with 17 points, missed 11 consecutive shots before connecting with a little over six minutes to play. Dallas led 82-74 when Worthy found the range and the Lakers went on a 29-7 spurt to extend their longest winning streak since 1978. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had 21 points, gave the Lakers the lead for good at 87-85 with a slam-dunk. Byron Scott led the Lakers with 28 points before fouling out in the fourth quarter. SuperSonics 110, Rockets 95. Tom Chambers scored a career-high 46 points and pulled down eight rebounds as Seattle defeated Houston, snapping the Rockets' four-game winning streak. Xavier McDaniel added 22 points and 12 rebounds for the Sonics, who won for the 11th straight time on their home court.

Houston was led by Purvis Short with 21 points. Akeem Olajuwon had 15 points and 13 rebounds before being ejected after arguing a call with 2:11 to play. Pistons 90, Hawks 87. Isiah Thomas scored six of his 18 points in the final 4:32 as Detroit snapped Atlanta's six-game winning streak. The victory avenged Detroit's 81-71 loss to the Hawks a night earlier in Atlanta and moved the Pistons to within 1 1/2 games of the first-place Hawks in the Central Division. Thomas hit a jumper with 1:07 left to give Detroit an 88-86 lead. After Atlanta's John Battle made one of two free throws with 48 seconds left, Detroit's Joe Dumars sank two free throws with six seconds left to cap the scoring. Atlanta's Glenn Rivers scored 22 points before fouling out in the fourth quarter. 76ers 116, Jazz 93. Cliff Robinson's 25 points and Charles Barkley's 23 paced Philadelphia as the 76ers handed Utah its third straight defeat. Robinson scored 21 of his points in the second half and triggered a 14-0 Philadelphia run late in the fourth quarter to end a Utah threat. Robinson also held Utah's top scorer, Karl Malone, to 12 points, less than half his 25.2 average. John Stockton led the Jazz with 14 points. The Jazz cut a 20-point Philadelphia lead to 94-87 with 5:42 to go, but two jumpers by Robinson triggered the 76ers as they opened the margin to 108-87. Cavaliers 116, Clippers 100. Brad Daugherty scored 29 points as Cleveland headed the Los Angeles Clippers their eighth consecutive defeat. The victory was Cleveland's third straight and evened the Cavs' record at 15-15. The Cavaliers scored the last eight points of the first half to lead 53-46, then built the lead to 88-71 after three quarters behind 12 points by Daugherty and seven by John Williams. Cleveland coasted to its seventh triumph in 10 games as the team led by at least 12 points throughout the fourth quarter. Michael Cage led the Clippers with 26 points and 13 rebounds. Celtics 117, Knicks 108. Larry Bird scored 32 of his 41 points in the first half and Boston survived a late New York surge. Boston led 107-95 with 3:54 left. Then Johnny Newman, who scored 24 points, hit a field goal and a 3-point basket and Gerald Wilkins dunked the ball after a steal, cutting the lead to 107-102 with 2:07 remaining. But the Knicks were forced to foul and came no closer as Boston scored eight of its last 10 points on free throws. The victory was Boston's ninth in 10 games and 12th straight at Boston Garden against the Knicks. New York has won just one of its 13 road games this season.

Highsmith's Emergence Has Not Gone Unnoticed

HOUSTON (AP) — Alonzo Highsmith's sudden emergence as an offensive force for the Houston Oilers has not gone unnoticed by Denver Broncos Coach Dan Reeves. "I think personally, he's the best true fullback to come out of the draft since I've been in pro football," said Reeves, who has played or coached in the NFL 22 years. After a lengthy contract holdout and an adjustment period this season, Highsmith started his fourth game against Seattle in the AFC wild card game last Sunday. He led the Oilers in rushing with 74 yards on 12 carries for the first time and could figure in an expanded running game when the Broncos host the Oilers in this Sunday's AFC semifinal playoff game at Mile High Stadium. "There have been an awful lot of good running backs that came out and played halfback and tailback," Reeves said. "But he's the best fullback and that's a dimension that really causes you a problem. "He has the speed to go outside, the strength to run inside and he's a tremendous blocker for (Mike) Rozier. And with his size, there's no linebacker he can't block." Highsmith, 6-1, 235, appreciates Reeves' compliments, but he's not going to start reading his press clippings. "That's a great compliment coming from someone like Dan Reeves," Highsmith said. "But I'm not going to let that take my mind off this game. Sometimes, if you hear a lot of comments and you read about yourself before a game, then you go out and mess up." Highsmith "messed up" in his first pro appearance. He carried twice, gained one yard and lost a fumble. Highsmith then retreated to the sidelines and Coach Jerry Glanville brought him along slowly. He started producing at playoff time. The Oilers, 10-6, reached the playoffs with a wide-open passing attack featuring four wide receivers on many downs. Highsmith wouldn't be bothered if the Oilers chose to play the clock against the Broncos, keeping quarterback John Elway on the sidelines. "I think it's imperative that our offense control the ball for a large amount of the game and keep Elway off the field," Highsmith said. "Instead of giving him 70 plays, give him 50 and keep the ball out of his hands." The Oilers defeated Seattle 23-20 in overtime in last Sunday's wild card game when they held the ball 47 minutes, 44 seconds to just 20:21 for the Seahawks. The Oilers worked out in 40-degree temperatures Wednesday with a deafening roar of crowd noise in the background, simulating the hostile crowd they'll face on Sunday. But Glanville wants his team ready. "The crowd can take away what you do in a game," Glanville said. "This gives us a chance to work on audibles and signals." It had another side effect for receiver Drew Hill: "It gave me a headache."

Subzero Cold Could Chill Game Plans For Contest

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The Chicago Bears practiced indoors while the Washington Redskins practiced outdoors, but both coaches hope the Midwestern cold won't chill their game plans for Sunday's NFL playoff meeting in Chicago. "The weather is the weather. Both teams are outdoor teams," Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs said in a conference call Wednesday. But Bears Coach Mike Ditka said wind and subzero temperatures could change the game. "If it's as cold as it's been, it's going to be a problem holding on to the football, period," Ditka said. The Bears practiced indoors this week at Notre Dame, the Redskins outdoors in Herndon, Va., where temperatures were in the teens. If the cold spell continues, Ditka said, "It's going to be a problem kicking the football, and it's probably going to be a problem catching the football." "If it's a bad cold factor and a wind, I think the team that can effectively control the ball and not turn it over is going to be the team with the best chance of winning." The Redskins beat the Bears 27-13 in the playoffs last year, and Ditka said turnovers and big plays made the difference. Both clubs enter Sunday's game 11-4. "Washington is a big-play team," he said. "Basically what they've done is make the big plays when they've had to make them." But Ditka expects the Bears to have some big-play potential of their own Sunday. Speedy Willie Gault, who scored the Bears' only touchdown against the Redskins last year, will be used on kickoff returns along with Dennis Gentry, Ditka said. Quarterback Jim McMahon and wide receiver Dennis McKinnon, who were injured last year, will be ready. The Bears will be without running back Neal Anderson, who has a knee injury. Ditka said Mark Rodenhauser, who has snapped ball for special teams in the past two games, is questionable with a bruised shoulder. Gibbs said he's seen no letup in the Chicago defense, even though the Bears made several lineup changes before their last regular-season game against the Los Angeles Raiders. "I think every time we've gone against the Bears defense I have nothing but respect for them," Gibbs said. "I think the fact that they were able to put other players in there and do so well is because they're deeper than most people," Gibbs said. "I think they have a lot of exceptional athletes, and I thought they played an exceptional game against the Raiders. They shut them down." Redskins quarterback Doug Williams sees tackle Dan Hampton and end Richard Dent as big threats. "I know Dan Hampton from way back. He's always been a thorn in my side," Williams said. "I've never had a chance to play against Dent but ... I know he comes right at the left side better than anybody I know." Redskins running back George Rogers, who missed practice Monday with a sore back, is listed as probable, along with safety Alvin Walton, with a sprained ankle and tight end Clint Didier, with a groin injury. Wide receiver Art Monk has a sprained knee and won't play Sunday, Gibbs said. Monk scored two touchdowns against the Bears in the playoffs last season. Gault said he's looking forward to a matchup with Redskins cornerback Darrell Green. "We bring out the best in each other," he said. Ditka said Green has been playing man-to-man against opponents' best receivers and while he's been beaten, he's also beaten others. "He's scared other teams away from throwing to the key receiver," Ditka said. Gibbs said the return of McMahon gives the Bears more confidence than last year, when the quarterback missed the playoff game with a shoulder injury. McMahon is recovering from a pulled hamstring but is expected to start in the matchup of 11-4 teams. Gibbs said he's satisfied with Williams as his starter and doesn't expect to go to Jay Schroeder, who was replaced by Williams in the Redskins' 27-24 overtime victory at Minnesota in the last regular-season game.

Chance To Get Clark Proved Too Tempting

NEW YORK (AP) — Start spreading the news: Jack Clark is coming to New York and the Yankees are back in the multimillion-dollar free-agent market. The Yankees, who built World Series teams by signing Reggie Jackson, Dave Winfield, Goose Gosage and other prominent players, made baseball's biggest off-season move Wednesday. They signed Clark to a two-year contract worth $3 million plus another $1 million in incentives. "We've had a tradition since Catfish Hunter of bringing in top free agents," Yankees General Manager Lou Piniella said. "Jack is truly one of the superstars of the game. We know he can hit. This is a signing of the magnitude of a Reggie Jackson." The Yankees still need pitching and might have benefited more by spending their millions on the likes of Jack Morris, Mike Witt or Charlie Leibrandt. But the chance to get Clark from the St. Louis Cardinals proved too tempting for Yankees owner George Steinbrenner. So when negotiations broke down with the Cardinals during the weekend and Clark's agent, Tom Reich, called Steinbrenner on Monday. By then, the move was imminent, especially because Steinbrenner was upset that the Yankees had been unable to trade for power hitters Dave Parker and Kirk Gibson during the winter meetings. "George knows how to do a deal," Reich said. "This is one of the quickest negotiations I've ever been involved in, or will be involved in, as general manager," Piniella said. "I spoke with Jack Clark's agent Monday, we spoke yesterday and signed today." Clark, 32, is one of baseball's most feared hitters. He had 35 home runs and 106 RBI last season. But he has been injury prone and has spent time on the disabled list the last four seasons. Clark did not start after Sept. 9 because of an injured right ankle. He pinch hit once in the National League playoffs and was dropped from the Cardinals' World Series roster. "I've got a clean bill of health, even from the Cardinals' doctors," Clark said. "They were trying to beat me down about the injury, but I'm going to be healthy." Clark said his decision to leave St. Louis was based primarily on the Cardinals' attitude toward keeping him. Clark rejected salary arbitration and the Cardinals had until midnight Friday to re-sign him or lose that right until May 1. Other free agents who rejected salary arbitration from their teams and are still facing that deadline are Gary Gaetti, Charlie Leibrandt, Dave Smith, Bill Gullickson, Atlee Hammaker, John Candelaria, Danny Darwin and Larry Andersen. Reich hedged when asked whether Clark's signing would loosen the free-agent market, which has been in a freeze since the winter of 1985. "I'm not saying this is a breakthrough," Reich said. "But it is part of an evolving change. Markets tend to correct themselves." Reich said no other teams made firm offers for Clark, although the Los Angeles Dodgers had expressed mild interest. Clark was paid $1.3 million last season in the final year of a four-year contract. He will get $1.5 million per year with incentives worth $500,000 each season. The bonus money is hinged on the number of games he plays. Clark would receive an additional $100,000 if he played 110 games. He would get another $100,000 each for reaching levels of 120, 130, 140 and 145 games. By joining the Yankees, Clark got $250,000 from the Cardinals because of a clause in his previous contract that called for a quarter-million dollars if St. Louis did not re-sign him. On Tuesday night, the Cardinals offered a similar $3 million, two-year contract after learning of the Yankees' interest. "If they (the Cardinals) had made the same offer earlier, it would have been done," Clark said. "But it was too late." "I had a better offer from St. Louis for the money, but this is where the deal was," Clark said. "I came here essentially on a handshake." St. Louis General Manager Dal Maxvill, at a press conference after Clark's signing was announced, said the Cardinals' last offer was a two-year contract at $1.6 million per season with an additional $100,000 for appearing in 120, 130 and 140 games. There was also a signing bonus of $250,000 plus standard award bonuses which could be earned. "If Clark would have preferred, we offered an alternative contract which would have yielded Jack a two-year guaranteed contract of $1.75 million for each season, without regard to number of appearances, plus a $250,000 signing bonus and standard award bonuses," Maxvill said. But Clark said the Cardinals had plenty of time to work out a new deal and failed to do so.

'60 Minutes' Producer Lets Stars Join News Staff

By JAY SHARBUTT
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — "60 Minutes" executive producer Don Hewitt said Wednesday he had no objection to the network's decision to begin using his five star correspondents on the "CBS Evening News," although he had balked at the idea when it was first proposed last year.

Hewitt, in charge of CBS' Sunday-night news program since it went on the air in 1968, said his change of heart came after the proposal was revised to make his reporters irregular — instead of regular — contributors to the "Evening News."

The five are Mike Wallace, who next week will be the first contributor, and Morley Safer, Harry Reasoner, Ed Bradley and Diane Sawyer.

"This will work out all right," Hewitt said. "If I didn't think that, I would have objected."

The five are to take turns appearing on CBS' weeknight newscast with their former "60 Minutes" colleague Dan Rather, joining the anchorman in the program's New York studio to do reports that provide perspective and background on major stories.

This analytical segment, originally employing correspondents Bob Schieffer and Bruce Morton on alternating weeks, began last summer during the Iran-Contra hearings.

However, with those and other top correspondents now heavily involved in covering the presidential campaigns or working other assignments, including CBS' new prime-time series "48 Hours," the "60 Minutes" quintet is being brought in to help out on Rather's program, CBS officials said.

CBS News President Howard Stringer conceded that some critics may say the move is merely cosmetic, intended to add the luster of five top news names who in reality will not be fully involved in the stories they are explaining.

"But we're not doing that," he said. "That was what they did not want to do; that's what Don Hewitt was afraid of before when we thought about it."

When they appear on the "CBS Evening News," he emphasized, it will be as fully involved journalists, and "they have the contacts and the connections to make the phone calls, and they have the writing skills.

"So they're doing real work, and they help us — particularly in an election year when, with coverage of the candidates, you're spread thinner than usual, and we've also got '48 Hours' to work on too."

Scheduled to premiere Jan. 19, "48 Hours" is a weekly documentary series giving an in-depth look at one subject. Rather will anchor the broadcast.

There seemed to be some uncertainty within CBS News on how often and for how long the "60 Minutes" correspondents would be appearing on the "CBS Evening News."

Late Tuesday, when CBS News disclosed their planned appearances, a spokesman said that they would contribute to Rather's program on a regular basis, depending on their availability from "60 Minutes."

However, Hewitt said Wednesday that "each one is going to do it one week a year."

In a separate interview, Tom Bettag, executive producer of Rather's program, said that nothing is definite and that "there's no commitment that it's one time in the whole year or that it's going to be three or four or whatever."

"It's just, 'Let's start it and see where it takes us.'"

Americans Now Own More Screens, But TV Is Being Watched Less Often

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Most homes in the United States have more than one television set, but the families who live there are spending less time in front of them, according to a report by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Nielsen's year-end report on television viewing for 1987 says more households than ever have more than one televisions — 59 percent, up 2 percent from last year.

But the study also suggests families logged less viewing time in 1987, 49 hours and 48 minutes on an average week, down from 50 hours and 16 minutes in 1986.

NBC analyst Gerald Jaffe said he isn't worried about the drop-off — yet.

rose by 3 percent, according to the Nielsen figures.

Other network analysts have suggested that the reduction in viewing might be attributable to an increase in the popularity of videocassette rentals.

Nielsen's audience measurement system can tell when a television show is taped, but can't detect VCR playback.

An increase in cable viewing also has been gradually reducing the network audience for years. It's hard to tell how much the network audience has decreased, however, because Nielsen switched last September to a new method of audience measurement and recruited a whole new batch of Nielsen families. The new numbers are registering lower across-the-board.

According to figures for last May, before people meters were used, Nielsen showed network viewing had dropped from an average of 36.16 million viewers in 1986 to 34.61 in 1987. The network share of the viewing audience dropped from 72.3 percent in 1986 to 68.6 percent in 1987.

Meanwhile, the number of television households has increased. Nielsen estimated at the beginning of the television season that there were 88.6 million homes with televisions, consistent with the pattern for the last several years of about a 1 percent increase per year.

Cable households are increasing, too. Nielsen recently announced that for the first time slightly more than half of all television households had cable, and it is estimated that more than 30 percent of all television households can receive 30 or more channels.

Cable has been steadily cutting into network audiences. According to the Cable Advertising Bureau, cable viewing rose from 11 percent of all viewing during the 1985-1986 television season to 13 percent during the 1986-1987 season. Just counting cable households, viewing was up from 20 percent to 23 percent.

Bochco Signs New Contract With ABC

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steven Bochco has signed a multimillion-dollar, 10-series deal with ABC, but the Emmy Award-winning co-creator and executive producer of "L.A. Law" should be back next season to work on the NBC series.

That's according to NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff.

Bochco and Terry Louise Fisher, a co-creator and supervising producer of the hit show, have been feuding over her position and how much authority she would have next season in running "L.A. Law."

NBC is only a third party to the dispute, Tartikoff said, but he expects Bochco to remain with "L.A. Law" next season, despite the deal with ABC.

"I think the 'L.A. Law' situation is being handled by the appropriate parties — 20th Century Fox, Bochco and Terry Louise Fisher," Tartikoff told a meeting of the nation's television press Wednesday.

Robin Williams May Have Found Niche In 'Vietnam'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Robin Williams seems less manic these days, it may be due to a science prodigy named Zachary Williams.

"When I start to get a little crazy, he says, 'Don't do that' or 'Drop it,'" Williams said. "He's a peculiar kid. He's now 5 — or rather, 4 3/4 — and already he demands mesquite dishes in his lunch box."

The comedian made the comments admiringly. Separated from his wife for a year and a half and living in San Francisco, he has custody of son Zachary for half of the year.

"It's addicting, watching the changes in a child and seeing the mind form. Zachary and I go to a place called the Exploratorium in San Francisco, and he understands everything. I expect him to build his own laser by the age of 10."

Williams may be somewhat more restrained around the younger set, but his hurricane-force comedy hasn't diminished. It can be viewed to best advantage in the Touchstone Pictures film, "Good Morning, Vietnam." Williams plays an irreverent disc jockey who battles the brass to present his comedy and play rock records on Armed Forces Radio in Saigon. Critics have been saying Hollywood has finally found the right casting for Robin Williams.

"The movie started with a one-paragraph premise," he said in an interview. "Then it took about four or five different forms until it finally developed. I didn't take part in any of the scripts; the production was put together by my management company."

Mitch Markowitz wrote the original script, and Barry Levinson ("Diner," "The Natural") became director.

"Obviously the radio stuff offered me the chance to do some open-field running," Williams said. "Barry had been a comic himself, and he would spark to some of my suggestions and let me go with them. Many of the things in the movie, like the James Brown impression and playing records at different speeds, happened spontaneously."

"Good Morning, Vietnam" was filmed in and around Bangkok, Thailand, in the summer. It was not exactly a fun location. The Thai authorities were helpful, but a key scene — a terrorist explosion in a bar frequented by U.S. soldiers — could not be filmed because of complaints by squatters in the neighborhood.

"So we had to shoot the scene back here in the desert," Williams said. "The trouble was in finding Vietnamese who seemed authentic. Most of them had become too Americanized."

"Good Morning, Vietnam" is Robin Williams' seventh film, and the one that might finally achieve the success that's been predicted from the beginning. He has played amazingly diverse roles, starting with the brave attempt to impersonate "Popeye."

The black comedy "The World According to Garp" proved too dark for the wide audience. Williams was appealing as the Soviet immigrant in "Moscow on the Hudson." But "The Survivors," "The Best of Times" and "Club Paradise" somehow missed.

He was born July 21, 1952. His father was a Ford Motor executive in Chicago. He retired when Robin was in high school, and the family moved to Marin County, north of San Francisco.

Williams became entranced with theater at Claremont Men's College, studied under John Houseman at the Julliard School in New York and began stand-up comedy in Los Angeles in 1976. After the hit TV series "Mork and Mindy" he moved to films.

He continues doing standups to hone his skills, despite the punishing prelude: "It's that last two minutes before you go on. I sit there and undergo narcolepsy, the loss of oxygen sending me into a catatonic dive. It's pure terror."

Does he ever bomb?
"Sure. It happened recently in England. They booked me into a big drinking hall filled with 2,000 people. What would work? I wondered. I tried my American references, and nothing happened. It was like hanging nude over the Grand Canyon," he said.

Traina said his wife began to write on top of a bouncing washing machine, putting in midnight work hours while the couple's nine children slept. Since then, she has vaulted to the best-seller lists, writing 23 books in 15 years and publishing 85 million copies worldwide.

"When it's 1:30 or 2 in the morning and I feel like reading something, I don't want to read Thomas Mann," she said. "After you reach the age of 12, you have enough pressure and stress that you just want something you can flow with."

Bob Hope Puts His Christmas Tour On TV Saturday Night

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Hope says the best wakeup call for a weary entertainer on an eight-day, "round-the-world tour is stepping in front of thousands of cheering servicemen in the Persian Gulf.

"It was great to be back on a Christmas tour overseas," he said. "It was like old times. But it was tough getting your rest. You didn't know what time it was, what time zone you were in or whether you should lie down or go jogging."

"But when you get up in front of the troops they wake you up, I can tell you that."

Hope, 84, revved up his engine once again for the most ambitious USO Christmas tour since he began entertaining U.S. troops in 1941. In eight days he circled the globe, traveled 27,000 miles, put on eight shows, and entertained an estimated 25,000 service people.

As usual, he got it all down on videotape for a 90-minute special to air on NBC on Saturday.

Making the trip with Hope were Barbara Eden, Lee Greenwood, Connie Stevens and her daughters, Tricia and Joely Fisher, Miss USA Michelle Royer and Hope's Super Bowl Dancers. The U.S. Pacific Fleet Band also appeared at some of the stops.

Hope's overseas Christmas specials traditionally get big ratings, perhaps in part because thousands of families tune in to see if they can catch a glimpse of a son or daughter. His January 1970 show from Vietnam drew a whopping 64 percent of the viewing audience, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Hope, who traveled to many war fronts in World War II, began doing Christmas tours in 1948.

"This was our longest trip ever," Hope said in a telephone interview as he prepared to leave for Palm Springs to attend the dedication of the Bob Hope Cultural Center. "We got a little ambitious. It was exciting as hell, but I don't know how the rest of the people feel. We didn't have much time for rest. I had to have a fresh 20-minute monologue ready for every stop."

This year Hope and crew stopped briefly in Honolulu, put on a show at Clark Air Base in the Philippines, then headed for Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean. On Christmas Eve, they were aboard the aircraft carrier Midway in the northern Arabian Sea. They followed with shows on the carrier Okinawa and on the battleship Iowa.

"Those people were so happy to see you," said Hope. "Especially when you bring in a cast of beautiful girls. And Lee Greenwood broke them up. He does a number called 'God Bless the U.S.A.' I'm so happy I took him.

It brought the kids to their feet and they cheered. I said, 'The Navy's a little confused about this Gulf problem. They ought to drain this sucker, then it'd be the Army's problem.' They loved that."

The only rest stop was at Bahrain, an island emirate in the Persian Gulf. "It was like being back in 'The Road to Morocco,'" said Hope, referring to his 1942 movie with Bing Crosby. "I bought a big suitcase to put in all the memorabilia they (the servicemen) were giving me. They give you pictures and plaques, and every outfit has a hat. You have to wear their hat."

The final show was to be at Lajes Air Base in the Azores, but winds of 51 knots kept their C-141 Starlifter transport from landing.

They did put on a show for the servicemen in the Azores, but it was by radio. "We had a lot of wind jokes ready for the Azores," Hope said, such as, "I never saw wind like that. Are the presidential candidates here?"

Celebrities' Pets Live High On Hog

NEW YORK (AP) — It's no dog's life for celebrity pets. Just ask Joan Rivers' Yorkshire terrier or Richard Simmons' six Dalmatians.

The tiny Yorkie, named Spike, is "treated like a member of the family," Miss Rivers said in the current issue of Us magazine. At dinner time, Spike eats from a fine china bowl.

"To me, they are children," agreed Simmons, "except I don't have to spend any money for a college education or a big wedding."

Simmons does, however, pay a full-time staffer for canine care. He also bought the house next door, tore it down and erected a 10,000-square-foot run. He said he sleeps with a different dog each night.

Michael Jackson also retains a staff to care for his birds, snakes, llamas, giraffe, swans, lion and chimpanzee. The chimp, named Bubbles, is having a tuxedo made by Rick Pallack, the tailor to Sylvester Stallone, Michael J. Fox and Corbin Bernsen.

Knots Landing's Joan Van Ark says her five cats and Old English sheep dog relieve stress.

"They never call for a second take or criticize my makeup," she said. "And they always give me great support and input when I run my lines at home."

Hollywood producer David Wolper rescued his cat, Willie, from an animal shelter. Now she lounges amid a priceless collection of Picassos at his Bel Air estate.

And for years now, tough guy Clint Eastwood has been serving up free vittles to strays living on the lot of his Burbank studio.

Author Finished Her Novel In Bathroom

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Danielle Steel, known for such steamy best sellers as "Passion's Promise," "Wanderlust" and "Kaleidoscope," says her first "desk" was a jostling washing machine and she once finished a novel atop the toilet.

A week before Miss Steel, 39, and third husband, businessman John Traina, were married, the author found herself between movers and a book deadline.

"So I had the typewriter on the toilet and I was sitting on the floor trying to finish the book. And that's exactly where I did it. In my bathroom," Miss Steel said recently.

Traina said his wife began to write on top of a bouncing washing machine, putting in midnight work hours while the couple's nine children slept. Since then, she has vaulted to the best-seller lists, writing 23 books in 15 years and publishing 85 million copies worldwide.

"When it's 1:30 or 2 in the morning and I feel like reading something, I don't want to read Thomas Mann," she said. "After you reach the age of 12, you have enough pressure and stress that you just want something you can flow with."

The Family Circus By Bil Keane

"Mind if I suggest a better spot for your snowman?"

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Jan. 8
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be sure you handle your regular duties in a very precise and conscientious fashion, whether at home or in your place of employment.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Find out more about a recreation you've been planning before you get into it. Buy a nice gift for your mate and improve home conditions greatly.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Check your newspaper and other periodicals for ideas on how to improve your home. Be quite precise in any written communications.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): This is a good day to do some shopping for things which you and your family need. Use great caution while driving.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Study your assets and liabilities very carefully, then pay your overdue bills. Stay within your budget if you make any repairs to your home.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't allow your perfectionist nature to annoy your friends and family. Decide on what it is you want, and make plans accordingly.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Once you have collected the important information you need, keep it confidential or you might end up losing out on a great opportunity.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If you need some advice, go only to those persons who have had success in that particular area. Enjoy a favorite hobby with your mate.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Credit and community matters should not be neglected today, but stay at home with your mate this evening and be safe and happy.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Try to find new and improve methods of operation so that you can add to your present abundance. Use your imagination.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Keep a promise to your mate or your home situation could become very unpleasant. This evening can be a very happy one.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): If you're having any problems with a co-worker, sit down together and come to an agreement. Don't take any risks while in motion.

The bidding:

 3 NT Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Ten of ♠ Choosing the right line, more often than not, is a matter of simple logic. Looking at all four hands, there's little problem here. But let's see how you go about planning the play.

 The auction is straightforward enough. North's five-card suit and intermediates just make his hand good enough to issue an invitation, and the quality of South's 17 points make acceptance more or less automatic.
 West leads the ten of spades, you play low from dummy, East contributes the jack and you win the queen. Obviously, if diamonds are 2-2 you have no problem, so you cash the ace-king of diamonds only to find that, as expected, the suit breaks 3-1. What do you do now?
 You can't answer that question until you discover who holds the long diamond. From the lead, you presume that West has the long spades, so you want to eliminate his entry right away. (If he holds both the long diamond and ace of clubs, you are not making this contract.) If it's East who has shown out on is out of spades. Since he started with a doubleton, you are home.
