By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

A little sunshine and warmer temperatures on Saturday melted some of the up to 16 inches of snow dumped on the Tar Heel state, but state police warned drivers that conditions could be even more dangerous when the melted ice refreezes.

"What we would like to do is continue to emphasize that although the temperatures may rise today, causing right much melting and an improvement in the roads, but when the sun goes down and the temperature falls, roads will ice again and be an even more dangerous situation than when there was six to nine inches of snow on the ground," Lt. Fred Patton of the North Carolina Highway Patrol said Saturday from the state's emergency operations center, which was scheduled to remain open until 7:30 a.m. Monday.

The Department of Transportation said more than 500,000 man hours had been spent removing snow from 76,000 miles of state-maintained roads and more than 16,000 bridges. More than 600 tons of salt were used on roads in Anson, Cabarrus and Stanly counties alone.

Authorities blamed the storm for at least five traffic fatalities and the death of a Rutherford County man. From midnight Wednesday until 9 a.m. Saturday, the highway patrol had investigated 1,609 traffic collisions, including 585 between 5:30 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Saturday, Patton said.

In the southeastern part of the state, Nash Johnson and Sons Farms lost 700 to 1,000 turkeys when five turkey houses collapsed under the weight of snow. Steve Quinn, vice president of the company, said 75,000 turkeys were in the houses when they collapsed. In addition, Quinn said power failures forced the company to shut down its processing plant in Rose Hill, leaving it unable to meet orders for chickens.

All main roads in North Carolina were open, although the highway patrol recommended snow tires or chains for people driving on Interstate 40 in Haywood County near the Tennessee border. Secondary roads were still snow covered three days after the winter storm hit Thursday.

In the central part of the state, one lane in both directions of the interstate system was clear.

"The Department of Transportation continues to salt and clear the highways," Patton said. "We have 76,000 miles of state-maintained roads. ... (They) go to the main roads first and then get the secondary roads and they're working on those around the clock."

The National Weather Service said there was chance of rain, possibly mixed with sleet or freezing rain, along the coast Saturday night. The chance of rain continued along the coast Sunday with a chance of snow late in the day in the mountains.

"There's no reason to think we're going to get any significant amount of snow similar to what we've had in the last few days," Jim Brackett, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham Airport, said Saturday. The new system headed toward North Carolina is "a weak upper level disturbance rather than a well-developed surface storm," he said.

The heaviest accumulation was in Canton, Franklin and Tryon in Western North Carolina, where 16 inches were recorded. Fourteen inches were reported at the Asheville airport, 13 inches in Murphy, 12 in Hickory and Charlotte, 10 in Winston-Salem and Greensboro, 8 in Raleigh and Wilson, 7 in Oxford, 6 in Fayetteville, 5 in Halifax and 3 in Gates County.

Judge Gives Physician Option To Receive Psychiatric Help

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

The courtroom ordeal of Greenville physician Dr. Lee Royal Trent ended Friday as Superior Court Judge John Lewis handed down a sentence requiring Trent to seek psychiatric help in order to avoid additional time in prison.

Trent pleaded "no contest" Monday to two charges of taking indecent liberties with a minor after his 1985 convictions on charges of rape and taking indecent liberties with a minor were overturned by the state Supreme Court in September 1987.

The charges stemmed from Trent's alleged sexual activity with his daughter in 1980, 1981 and 1985, when she was 10, 11 and 15 years old.

After hearing testimony from the defense and the prosecution in a sentencing hearing Friday, Lewis took approximately 30 minutes to deliberate before announcing his decision.

Lewis sentenced Trent to two three-year prison terms, one for each count. He suspended the second term for five years, during which time Trent will be on probation. Lewis said Trent will receive 673 days credit for the first term, based on the time he has already spent in jail. Trent will have to serve the remaining 422 days unless he files a plan by noon Friday for psychiatric treatment from a public or private institution, in which case the remaining time will be suspended.

"My desire is he receive treatment as his daughter asks," Lewis said after reading his decision. He said an extended jail term would not be persecution, but neither would it be corrective.

As part of Trent's probation, he is forbidden contact with his daughter, now a freshman in college. He can have or view no pornographic material, and is subject to warrantless searches by probation officers or Social Service personnel for verification. He must be home each evening by 11 p.m., and must make at least monthly visits with his probation officer. In addition, the Department of Social Services will work with Trent's present wife and daughter, filing quarterly reports with the court.

Deputy Sheriff Larry Parker, who initially investigated the case in 1985 and testified for the state Friday, said the sentence was "a slap on the wrist."

But Milton Fitch, Trent's attorney, disagreed. "Anyone who says it's a

Allen Says Workers Did Their Jobs Well

Allen said crews of street clearers worked through the night Thursday. By Friday at 5 p.m., all major streets in the city were cleared of snow and as much ice as possible, he said.

The spokesman said the sun helped out more than any snow plow Saturday to enhance the work already done.

"We haven't had any complaints today, not even any calls from the police department," Allen said. "I think our guys did great. About 30 men worked Thursday afternoon and Friday and another 30 worked from 8 p.m. Thursday until 8 a.m. Friday, he said.

The seven sites in Greenville barricaded for people to play continue to be closed, Allen said. "We had people out there sledding and having fun at 1 a.m. Friday," he said. "People really have seemed to enjoy it. So we'll leave the barricades up as long as there's enough snow to have it make sense."

Allen said the practice of barricading a few streets with good inclines during snowy times began during the 20-inch snow of 1980 and seems to have been received well by the public.

"We don't get much snow here, and it's good to see people enjoy it when we do," Allen said.

Troops Kill Palestinian

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops shot and killed a Palestinian protester Saturday as Arab residents of the occupied Gaza Strip observed a general strike ordered by an Islamic group.

The army said troops wounded five other protesters. Arab reports said 19 demonstrators were beaten or wounded during several violent protests in the Gaza Strip and that one woman was seriously hurt.

Futrell Part Of 12-Man Group Visiting Vietnam

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, N.C. — A young journalist, 31-year-old Ashley B. "Brownie" Futrell Jr. expresses eagerness about the nearly month-long visit he is making to Vietnam with 11 other American newsmen.

Futrell, president and publisher of The Washington Daily News, departed from the Pitt-Greenville Airport late Saturday afternoon on the first leg of the Far East trip.

"There are any number of issues I'm concerned about, that I'll try to look into," Futrell said. "I hope to study a broad spectrum of political, social, ecnomic issues, to perceive something of the climate of the situation in Vietnam at this time. I'll be seeking both general and specific impressions and gathering as much concrete information as possible."

American prisoners of war and those missing in action, Futrell says, "is certainly one of the primary issues I'm deeply concerned about. I think the time has come that the average American, whether they were for or against the Vietnam war, now feels it is no longer a military matter, but a humanitarian one. Hopefully, our team of newsmen will be able to unearth something specific."

Shelter For Homeless Dream Becomes Reality

Reflector Staff Writer

For many Greenville residents, Thursday's winter storm meant going home from work early, preparing a cozy fire in the fireplace, and enjoying a relaxing night watching television.

For some people in the community, Thursday's snowstorm wasn't a holiday, but rather an added hardship in the nightly quest to seek out a place ... any place to spend the night.

For the unfortunate citizens of the community, the homeless, whose every night in the frigid, winter temperatures becomes a question of survival, relief will soon be available.

A dream, envisioned nearly 20 months ago, becomes reality Monday night as organizers of the Greenville Community Shelter plan to open the doors of the facility to the homeless of the community.

"I'm very excited about the opening of this shelter," said the Rev. Sam Loy, Greenville Community Shelter president. "It's amazing to think of how many people have been involved in this project so far."

In preparation of Monday's opening, many of those volunteer workers are spending this weekend at the shelter, performing last minute tasks which must be completed in order for the shelter to obtain its occupancy permit from the Greenville building inspector on Monday.

"Things are coming along pretty good," said Al Furbush, a volunteer worker, as he installed a smoke detector on the ceiling of the facility.

"When I see homeless people on the news, it makes me want to go out and do something about it," he said.

A member of Chapter 272 of the Vietnam Veterans of America, Furbush said his organization has collectively logged approximately 350 hours of renovation work at the shelter.

Located at Myrtle and Manhattan avenues, the shelter occupies the multipurpose building of the formerly vacant Agnes Fullilove School property.

The once abandoned building, previously exploited by local children as a hangout, now is filled with the construction sounds of saws, hammers and drills.

Three recently installed sinks and showers wait for the plumbing which will provide water to bathe those people destitute by circumstance. A donated washer and dryer sit next to electrical connections which will provide power to clean soiled clothing. Sawdust has accumulated on the floor where mattresses will be placed, allowing homeless men, women and children to receive a good night's sleep.

"There are a lot of people coming out and helping to get things in place, but we sure could use a lot more people," Furbush said.

According to Jack Brinn, chairman of the shelter publicity committee, the shelter will open every day at 9 p.m. and guests will be required to leave at 7 a.m. the next morning.

Upon arrival, shelter residents will go through a checking-in procedure and be required to shower. Towels will be provided. Shelter doors will be closed at 10 p.m. and lights will be off at 11 p.m., he said.

A night captain will oversee the slap on the wrist, I don't think they heard the same judgement that I did," Fitch said after the hearing.

Fitch said the judgment was not what he was hoping for. "Going back to 1985 we were looking for a not guilty," he said. "After 1985 with two years plus odd in prison, we then were trying to see how we could put Lee Trent's life back together, how his family could move forward from that point on."

Later Fitch said the decision will help Trent put his life back together.

Trent refused comment on the advice of counsel.

During the hearing, which lasted approximately four hours, the prosecution relied on testimony by Barbara Turcotte, the social worker who first uncovered the allegations, and Parker to recount the evidence that convicted Trent in 1985.

The defense then paraded a string of character witnesses for Trent through the court, including Greenville Mayor Ed Carter, Dr. William Laupus, dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, and several area ministers and physicians.

Carter said Trent was a "real honest, intelligent and professional individual." He also said Trent was a positive example for all people, especially minorities.

Trent's wife, Francisca, testified that Trent was a good husband and that his daughter had once told her the allegations of early sexual activity were false. Mrs. Trent, who openly wept on the stand, said she thought Trent had spent enough time in jail for things he didn't do.

In his own testimony, Trent maintained his innocence in the matter, saying he pled "no contest" for the benefit of his family and especially his daughter.

"I have been patient to see justice done and am still at the mercy of the court," he said.

Futrell On Visit To Vietnam

Futrell cites the plight of American-Asian children, those fathered by American servicemen during their tours of duty, as another of his primary interests. "As chairman of the Washington School Board, I naturally feel close to children," he said. "Many of the Vietnamese children who came to the U.S. at an early age and mastered English have become exceptionally high achievers.

"I'm interested in finding out more, seeing what can be done, about the welfare of these mixed-blood children who are still living in Vietnam."

On the economic front, Futrell says, "I will talk to officials about the possibility of export of American tobacco to Vietnam. We are doing lots of business with other nations in the Far East, especially in tobacco export, with Taiwan, Japan, Korea. Perhaps there will be opportunities for me to have dialogues with government officials on this matter."

Futrell is the only newsman of the 12 from the southeastern United States. "The others represent newspapers in the Northeast, the Midwest and the West Coast areas," Futrell said. "I'm fortunate in that my roommate for the trip, a newsman from Kansas, is a Vietnam veteran. I feel he'll be able to give me a perspective in relations to his experiences there during the war, his reaction on returning to Vietnam at this time."

For pictorial coverage, Futrell will rely on taking color slides. "I figure this is the best approach. I don't want to be laden with extra camera gear. And when I get back home, my camera men can make black and white prints from the slides."

Near the end of the month, Futrell hopes to receive authority to stay on a week longer for a visit "to Cambodia, Laos, or possibly both. To date, the chance of going to either of these countries is still up in the air. I applied for visas some time ago, but to date there's been no confirmation. The State Department has told me that it might be that visas will be issued to us in Vietnam. It's now a matter of waiting to see."

This tour is sponsored by the National Newspaper Associaton, approved by the Vietnamese government "and is sanctioned by the U.S. government who has given us its blessing and embraced the idea of our going there," Futrell said. "American officials explained that since we do not have diplomatic relations with the Vietnamese government, they cannot give official approval. We have also been told that in the event of difficulties, they have a limited ability to help us out."

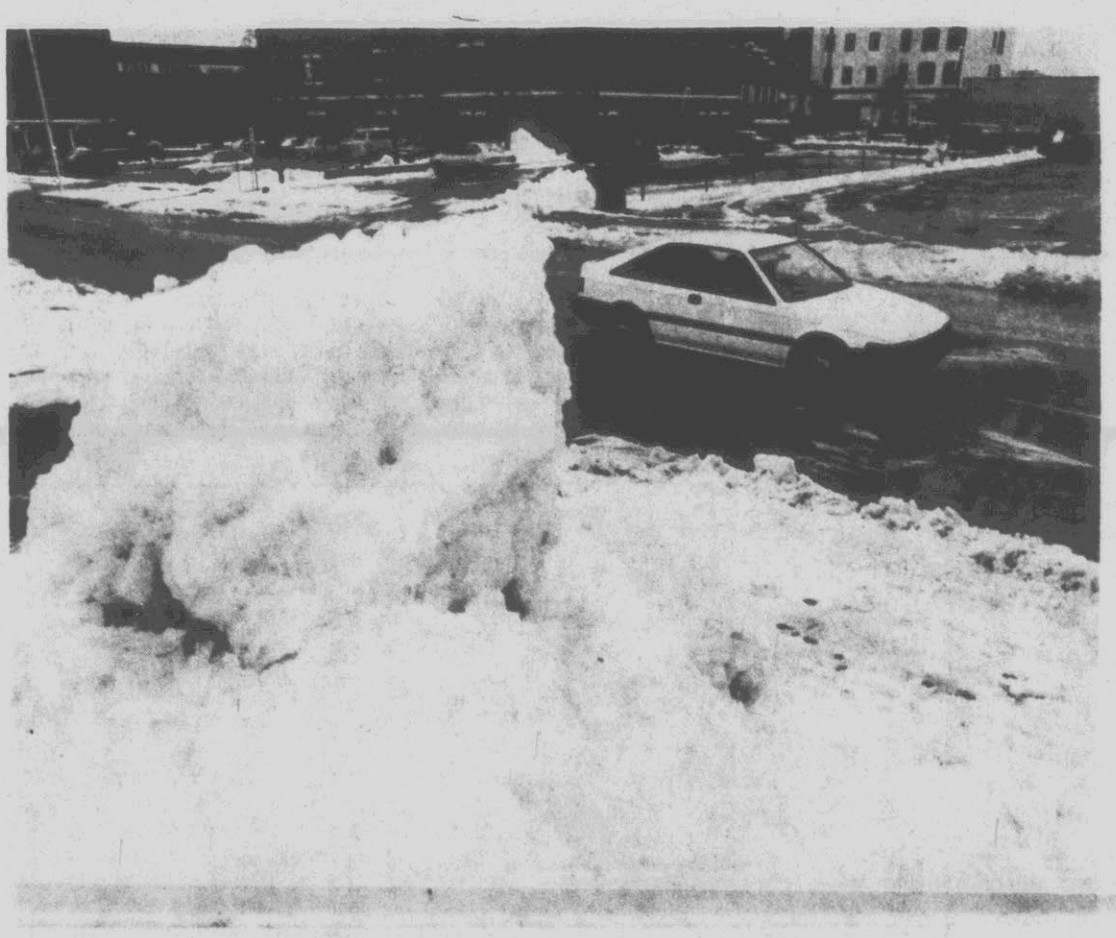

The itinerary of the trip will take Futrell to San Francisco for a flight to Tokyo. From there, the team will proceed to Bangkok, Thailand. "We'll be in Thailand four days where we'll get briefings from the people at the Australian embassy there.

"After that, we are scheduled to fly to Hanoi for various tours on Jan. 16 and 17. Meetings with Vietnamese government officials are scheduled Jan. 18 and 19, to conclude with a banquet in our honor," Futrell said.

"We are due to arrive in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, on Jan. 20, and have been scheduled for tours of the city and some areas of South Vietnam Wednesday through Friday that week," the journalist said.

"Saturday, the 23rd of January is the date we'll find out if visas to visit Cambadia or Laos are approved. If so, we expect to spend a week in one or both of these countries. If not, we'll begin the return trip home."

Once back home at his newspaper in Washington, Futrell says he plans to "write a series of articles about the trip. I hope the trip will be informative, and that I'll be able to pass on to readers my personal accounts and impressions of the cultural, social, and economic life of that area of the world at this time."

Feeding Birds

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Birds will flock to your yard in winter if they are offered a tempting bill of fare.

— Locate feeders close to trees or shrubs. Birds feel more secure if they have an escape perch nearby.

— Vary heights of feeders to cater to the dining habits of different birds. Place foods at ground level, at tabletop height, in hanging feeders and against tree trunks.

— Restock feeders often to ensure repeat visits.

Lottery Problems

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Lottery officials halted a 10-day-old game after learning that some numbers could be seen through rub-off spots intended to conceal them.

A customer tipped off the lottery agency and a computer message ordering a halt in sales for the "High Card" game was sent to the 253 places that sell tickets, said Lottery Director Otho R. Brown.

their electricity at 7:30 p.m. Thursday when the substation in Walnut Cove shut down, said Tim Gause, the Walnut Cove branch manager for Duke Power.

In some northern areas of Stokes County, power was off for 5½ hours. The cause of the shutdown hasn't been determined.

Carol Scott was sledding when the lights went out.

"Danbury went completely black," she said. "It was like a New York power outage."

Sheriff Tony Blalock said deputies checked on several families but found no problems.

About 90 people spent Friday night at the 101 National Guard armories that were opened for stranded travelers or people who had home heating problems. The armories were to be open through the weekend. The Salvation Army sheltered about 350 people statewide Friday night and fed 200. The Red Cross reported sheltering another 25 in Smithfield, N.C.

The storm was blamed for the death of James Turner Jr., 11, of Mebane, who died in a traffic accident at 2:15 p.m. Friday on N.C. 49 just north of Haw River in Alamance County.

His parents, James Turner Sr., 38, and Ruby Turner, 35, were flown to Duke Medical Center in Durham, along with their 5-year-old daughter, Tomeka. Tomeka was listed in critical condition Saturday. Her father was listed in serious but stable condition and Mrs. Turner was in serious condition. All three were suffering from massive head injuries.

The accident occurred when the father lost control of the car and skidded on ice, slamming broadside into a pickup truck. The driver of the truck, Jeffrey Michael Woods, 18, of Burlington, was not injured.

William Henry Clemmons Jr., 21, of Jamesville, died at 9 p.m. Friday on N.C. 171 in Beaufort County when he lost control of his car on ice and overturned. He was thrown from the vehicle, the patrol said.

Ranga Mohan, 50, of Silver Springs, Md., died Thursday night when the van he was driving slid off Interstate 95 in Robeson County and overturned, said Highway Patrol Trooper H.L. Covington.

In Nash County, Brenda Joyce Smith, 24, was killed Thursday when her car skidded in the snow and was hit by an oncoming car.

Barbara Alston, 46, of Williamston, was killed at 9:13 a.m. Saturday on U.S. 13 in Bertie County when her car slid into the path of an oncoming vehicle north of Williamston.

Ernest Panther, 76, of Caroleen in Rutherford County, died Thursday after suffering a heart attack as he walked from the post office toward his home about a mile away.

Since the school is residential, the school works on a slightly altered schedule during snow days instead of closing, said Bill Youngblood, principal.

"Some teachers who have family responsibilities need to go home," he said. "Others volunteer to meet classes and give assignments."

"One of my big responsibilities during the day is to go outside and be a good target," he said.

Pitt County will receive $50,000 in spot safety funds for use in the redesign of the intersection of N.C. 43, Secondary Road 1729 and SR 1708 at Bells Fork, thanks to action by the N.C. Board of Transportation at it's meeting in Raleigh, Friday.

Randy Doub of Greenville, a transportation board member, said transportation department staff engineers "are presently conducting an in depth review of this unusual intersection (and) trying to come up with a redesign of the intersection which will eliminate the traffic congestion" now on the Cannon's Crossroads Road, the County Home Road, and the Bell's Fork Road.

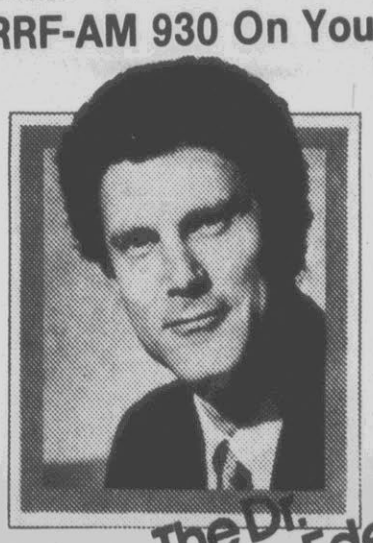

Doub said "we expect to obtain additional monies for the redesign and construction of this intersection from the small urban construction funds, statewide discretionary monies or secondary road construction funds."

In a letter to Charles Gaskins, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, Doub said, "I know that this intersection is of vital concern to several of the commissioners and you can be assured that we will do everything we cAn possible to make corrections to this congested area."

Southern GOP Strategy Talked

By JAY REEVES
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Southern Republicans discussed traditionally Democratic issues Saturday and received a campaign blueprint that calls for making the "Super Tuesday" presidential primaries an ideological test.

Members of the Southern Republican Exchange talked over topics such as child care, drug abuse and education, the environment and growth management in the last of two days of partisan brainstorming.

Marguerite Sallee, welfare commissioner under former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, said embracing an issue such as day care could help push the Republican Party to the forefront in the South, traditionally a Democratic stronghold.

"I think the voting public is tired of hearing about anti-communism as the Republican Party line," she said. "I don't want (the Democrats) to be the only one discussing family issues."

Commissioner Ken Wilson of Shelby County, a rapidly growing Birmingham suburb where Republicans won control of the county governing board in 1986, said increased child care could help "break the welfare cycle."

Ken Suffridge, a commissioner in Gwinnett County, Ga., said the Republican Party's 1984 takeover of every countywide office in the booming area northeast of Atlanta showed the GOP can win local offices as well as the White House.

Suffridge denied that Republican leaders were just beginning to concentrate on local, voter-oriented issues that long have been favorites for Democratic candidates.

"Counties have the same problems — wastewater is wastewater — no matter who's in power," he said.

Alabama Gov. Guy Hunt, host of the meeting, said the discussion of solutions to problems rather than solely highlighting Democratic shortcomings showed the GOP has "come full circle" in the South.

"I think the message we're putting out today is we're the party of new ideas," he said in an interview.

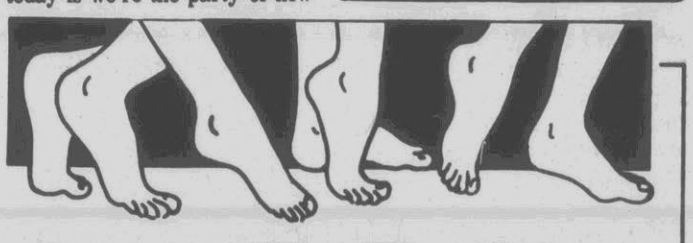

One of the ideas presented at the meeting was not so new: portraying the Democratic presidential candidates as liberal, big spenders.

"Actually, there will be a liberal primary and a conservative primary on Super Tuesday," said a memorandum from GOP strategist Haley Barbour of the Washington-based Southern Republican Primary Project.

Shelter Is Almost A Reality

proper checking-in of guests and two volunteer workers will stay at the shelter through the night to handle any problems. A telephone will be connected, providing access to Greenville police and fire/rescue services in case of emergency, he added.

Brinn said volunteer orientation sessions are scheduled at the shelter Tuesday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. and on Jan. 17 at 3 p.m.

"We sent letters to civic organizations and churches immediately after Christmas, requesting both financial donations, clothing and volunteers for the shelter," he said. "At this time, volunteers willing to spend the night at the shelter are especially needed."

The idea for a community shelter for the homeless in Greenville was first idealized by Dick Welch, an official in the Alcohol Intervention Program at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, in May of 1986.

Welch, who had previously worked with other shelters, together with Sam Loy, and the Rev. Dan Naugle of the Greenville Bible Church, arranged luncheons with local church officials and gained community church interest and support.

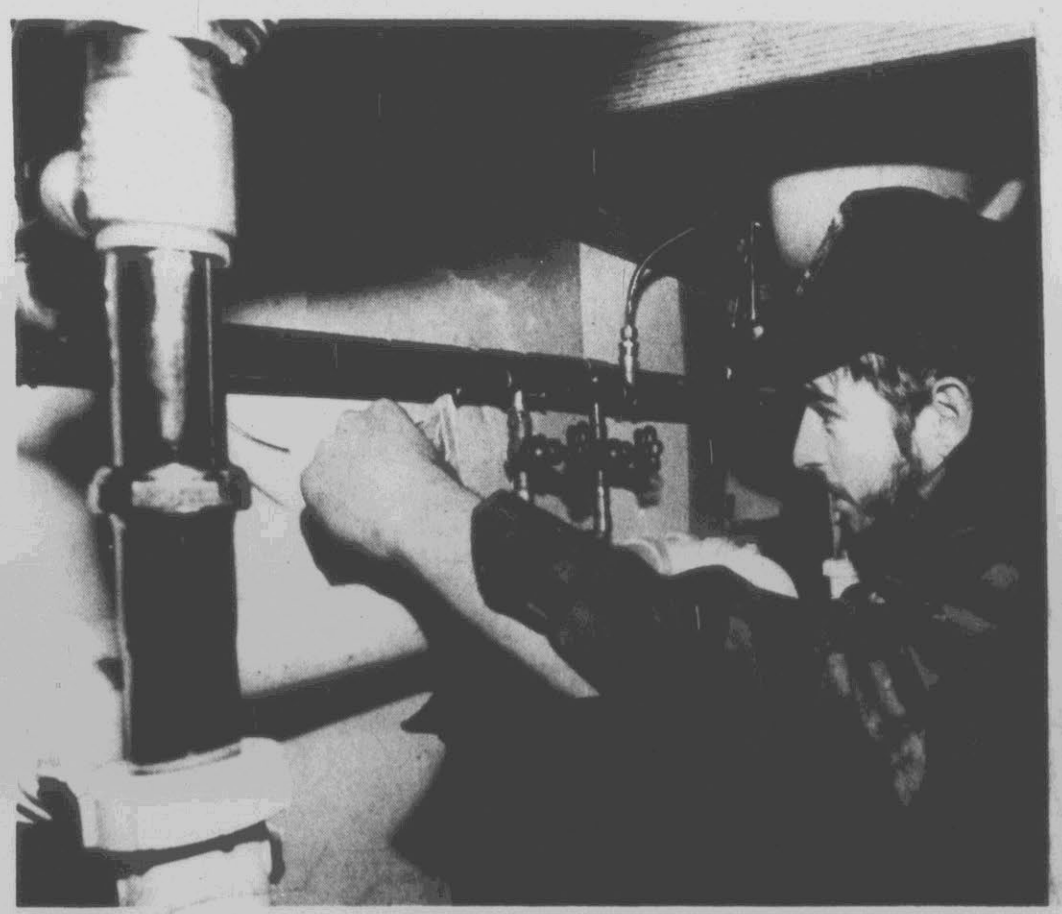

Working with Andrew J. Harris, assistant director of planning and development for the city, shelter officials presented the shelter plan to members of the City Council, who requested a state grant on the shelter's behalf.

In addition, the council approved a $40,000 Community Development Block Grant to the Community Life Center for the purchase of the Agnes Fullilove school site. The shelter is leasing the auditorium from the Community Life Center.

After requesting the city to rezone the property and obtaining a special use permit with no public opposition, the only legal hurdle the shelter now faces in order to operate is the approval of safety standards to receive a certificate of occupancy.

"I think we're in pretty good shape," Naugle said.

"My Letter to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers" — Rebecca Troxler

Dear Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers,

My family was more concerned with my health than I was. When I was 32 years old and weighed 444 pounds, my mother asked me bluntly who was going to raise my children after I died of a heart attack! That remark made me stop and think.

When I began the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program, I had a 71" bust, a 71" waist and 72" hips. It was an exciting day when it no longer took two people and two tape measures to measure me! I was thrilled to give away my size 52 clothes and 13 months later be wearing a size 13!

In addition to my sisters, parents, two daughters and a loving husband, I found a "family" of supporters among the staff at Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers. They cheered me on and helped me to "think thin." Thanks, girls, and thanks Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers!

Thinserely,

Rebecca Troxler

Weekend Fatalities

RALEIGH (AP) — Three people died in weekend traffic accidents in North Carolina, including a 60-year-old pedestrian who was hit by an unidentified vehicle in Craven County, the state Highway Patrol said Saturday.

Theodore Tillman of New Bern was walking north on a rural paved road less than a mile south of New Bern when he was struck at about 6:30 p.m. Friday.

William Henry Clemmons Jr., 21, of Jamesville, was killed at 9 p.m. Friday, on a rural paved road 7.9 miles north of Washington. The patrol said Clemmons lost control of his car on the ice, ran off the road and hit a ditch. The vehicle overturned and landed on top of him.

Richard Wayne Ruff, 29, of Carolina Beach, died at 12:01 a.m. Saturday on a rural paved road less than a mile south of Carolina Beach. He drove his car off the road, hit a utility pole and the vehicle overturned.

So far this year, 12 people have been killed in accidents on North Carolina roads, compared to 41 people killed at this time in 1986, according to the highway patrol.

Allegations Denied

GREENSBORO (AP) — An official of Ashland Chemical Co.'s Greensboro plant denied allegations from a former Ashland employee in Roanoke, Va., that there have been acid spills in Greensboro and at 11 other company plants.

"I would agree with the Roanoke (Va.) plant manager that it was the claim of a disgruntled employee," said John Gravett Jr., general manager of the Greensboro plant.

Environmental contamination problems occurred at the 12 plants, according to a lawsuit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Roanoke by Randolph H. Cunningham, a hazardous waste program administrator for Ashland until his dismissal Feb. 3, 1987.

Cunningham alleged in the $3 million lawsuit against the company that he was fired for trying to stop the company from concealing chemical spills or potential problems at the Greensboro plant and 11 other sites in five Southern states.

The other sites were in Raleigh, Charlotte and Greenville, N.C., Roanoke, Va., Savannah and Atlanta, Ga., Columbia, S.C., and Tampa, Miami, Jacksonville and Orlando, Fla.

According to the lawsuit, severe surface ground contamination was present in the acid churning area at the Greensboro plant.

Space-Age Fixings

JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — When winter weather hits North Carolina's mountains, some shut-ins are treated to space-age food instead of traditional Meals on Wheels.

For the third year, the Council on Aging in Ashe County is using so-called Skylab meals as a backup system when the weather is so rough that volunteers in its Meals on Wheels program can't make it to the houses of the elderly with hot food.

"It's the kind of thing the astronauts use," said Mannon Eldreth, director of the council. Entrees are in a freeze-dried bag that is dropped into boiling water for three minutes. You then have ham and gravy and vegetables or even hamburgers.

"I tried them myself, and they're pretty good meals," Ms. Eldreth said.

A few days after Thanksgiving each year, 10 of the Skylab meals are given to each client, she said.

Meals on Wheels programs are common throughout the country, but mountain counties with their rugged roads present challenges.

Amanda C. Miller operates the program for 70 people in Watauga County.

"I've got clients back in the hills and hollers," she said. "Even though U.S. 421 may be clear (of snow), it takes a while for the sun to get back to these places. We instruct our volunteers never to put themselves in danger by driving."

The Skylab meals cost about $3 each and are supplied by a private company in White Plains, N.Y. The product has the endorsement of the National Council on Aging.

Economic Boycott

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (AP) — The Pastors' Protest Against Abortion Committee announced an economic boycott against Northern Hospital of Surry County and three doctors because the hospital provides abortions on demand, officials said.

The boycott is in response to a unanimous decision Dec. 28 by the trustees of the hospital not to change the policy. The committee asked the hospital trustees in November to allow abortions only if the mother's life were threatened.

The Rev. Wayne O. Paton of Claudville, Va., chairman of the pastors' committee, said: "We're going to hit them in their pocketbook because that is the only thing they understand. The hospital board has shown a complete and total disregard for the sanctity of human life."

Paton said the committee represents at least 50 conservative and fundamentalist churches in Surry and Stokes counties in North Carolina and in Patrick and Carroll counties in Virginia. He said that those churches have 4,000 to 5,000 members.

Aide Resigns

RALEIGH (AP) — F. Daniel Bell III, a Democratic candidate for secretary of state, resigned Friday from his job as an aide to Thad Eure, the long-time secretary of state who will retire next year.

Bell has served as deputy securities administrator for the secretary of state's office for more than six years.

Back Pay Ordered

GREENSBORO (AP) — APAC-Carolina Inc. has been ordered to reinstate and pay back two union employees who were fired June 1 after demanding that one be allowed to witness the other's discussion with a supervisor about a disciplinary matter.

The order, issued Dec. 31 by an administrative law judge with the National Labor Relations Board, came in the case of William McGee Jr. and Jimmy R. Howard, who were employed by T&A Trucking Co. in Greensboro.

Judge Hutton S. Brandon found that the company had engaged in unfair labor practices, violating the National Labor Relations Act, by firing McGee and Howard and denying an employee's request to have a union representative present during a discussion that the employee believed could result in disciplinary action.

A company spokesman in Atlanta said the company intends to appeal the judge's order to the five-member board in Washington.

Fire Charges

NORLINA, N.C. (AP) — A 16-year-old Norlina youth who confessed to starting a fire that destroyed much of a public school in Johnston County Christmas night has been charged in connection with a second school burning, officials said.

Norlina Police chief Charles Galantis charged Robert Edward Norris with setting fire to the Norlina Middle School on Nov. 19, 1986. The fire caused $7,000 in damages.

Galantis said Norris had been a prime suspect in the Norlina Middle School fire for more than a year. Norris was formally charged with the crime Thursday morning after being transported to the Warren County Jail from Smithfield, where he was being held for an arson charge stemming from the burning of Four Oaks school in Johnston County, Galantis said.

Minor Earthquake

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — A minor earthquake registering 2.9 in magnitude on the Richter Scale occurred at 7:17 p.m. EST Friday along the Tennessee-North Carolina border, the National Earthquake Information Center said.

Geophysicist Waverly Person said "you wouldn't expect any damage" from the temblor that occurred near Etowah, Tenn., and Unaka, in Cherokee County, N.C.

Candidates Don't Impress Town's Common Folk

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Doug Adams wipes his hands on his apron and leans across the counter, an intense expression on his beefy, red face. Morning sunlight streams through the large front window of the Downtown Soda Shop.

"I don't know too much about these Democrats," Adams says. "Don't make any difference to me whether they come or not. They come through here, a few elites get to see 'em, then they're gone."

Down the street, the regular crowd at the Rib Room lingers over morning coffee and cigarettes. College football, not politics, is on the minds of nine businessmen seated around a corner table.

Are they aware that three Democratic presidential hopefuls visited their town in 1987, and that the wife of another passed through?

"I heard something about that," real estate developer Richard Smith says with a grin. Has he gone to see any of them? "Nah. I don't think they've gotten much of a turnout."

Welcome to Wilson, population 37,000, the typical town in North Carolina's 40-county "coastal plain" separating Raleigh from the Atlantic. The area is known for flat terrain, pine forests, humid summers and pork barbecue. And for conservative politics.

Democrats have been as dominant in Eastern North Carolina most of the 20th Century as has tobacco, the region's economic lifeblood. But q(f GOP hasm de inroads. Even former Gov. Jim Hunt, the pride of nearby Rock Ridge, barely held his own in Eastern counties in 1984 when he failed to unseat Sen. Jesse Helms.

Former Sen. Gary Hart, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Sen. Albert Gore have made campaign stops in Wilson. Last month, Jane Gephardt, wife of Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., made the pilgrimage. Jesse Jackson was scheduled to visit but changed his plans.

North Carolina is the third-largest of 14 Southern and border states holding primaries on "Super Tuesday" — March 8, 1988.

Most observers believe a desire to curry favor with the still-influential Hunt, who recently endorsed Sen. Albert Gore, is behind Wilson's popularity with the Democratic hopefuls.

But common folk seem unimpressed.

"I think most people are so damn disgusted with the deficit and everything, they're disgusted with politicians," Smith says in the Rib Room.

Who would he like to see in the White House?

"A Christian businessman, not a politician." Then, after a pause: "But if a Christian businessman becomes a politician, then he probably wouldn't be a Christian businessman any more."

At a downtown barber shop, John Whitley snips a customer's hair. David Lewis, 56, who retired early because of arthritis in his hands, looks on.

"I haven't decided who I'm voting for," says Lewis, a Democrat who often crosses party lines. "Some people say 'I was born a Democrat and I'll die a Democrat.' You ain't born nothing."

Whitley is a Democrat but hasn't voted that way in two decades. He gestures toward a framed photograph on the wall. The faces are of Lyndon Johnson, wife Lady Bird, and former Vice President Hubert Humphrey. But the picture has been doctored: all three have the bodies of gangsters clad in pinstriped suits, clutching tommy guns.

"They ran me off" from the Democratic Party, Whitley says.

James Boswell, 53, a retired Army sergeant, voted for Ronald Reagan in 1984 but says he'll return to the Democratic fold in 1988 "if I vote. They (Democrats) haven't got anybody worth voting for yet."

Bill's Barbecue is a Wilson landmark. The walls are lined with trophy cases, plaques and pictures of hogs and stock car driver Richard Petty. Menu favorites are pork barbecue, fried chicken, Brunswick stew and corn sticks.

Many visiting politicians eat here. Mrs. Gephardt and her entourage were the latest. But owner Bill Ellis doesn't take sides: "I feed everybody."

Ellis, 54, has the look of an outdoorsman: sandy hair, ruddy complexion, sports shirt opened at the neck, windbreaker jacket.

"I haven't talked to anybody who's excited about the presidential race," he says. "Nobody's made up their minds yet." Has he attended the candidates' appearances? "If he doesn't come to see me, I don't go to see him."

Parkwood Mall is Wilson's link with Everytown, USA: fast-food restaurants, department stores, Radio Shack, Baskin-Robbins. It's early afternoon on a weekday, but stores are crowded with Christmas shoppers.

Ruth Liner, a retired schoolteacher, cuddles her 2-year-old granddaughter. She's a Republican, but hasn't decided whom to vote for. She's dimly aware that Democratic candidates have visited.

"He's a caring man, and we have too many politicians who don't care any more," McKinnon says.

Gladys Tucker, a black woman who operates a small "outreach ministry" with her husband, says she's no political junkie but probably will vote for Jackson.

Tobacco Firms Eye Asian Market

By MONIKA JAIN
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — While health experts counsel smokers to quit, American tobacco firms are expanding their sales in the lucrative Asian market.

"The decline in sales in American cigarettes has forced companies in the U.S. to look for new markets," said Dr. Gregory Connolly, a member of the World Health Organization Expert Advisory Panel on Smoking and Health.

According to statistics from the WHO, the smoking rate in the West is declining at a rapid annual rate of 2.1 percent, prompting many tobacco firms to channel their products to Asia, where smoking is increasing in some countries.

"What happened by 1983 was that the high U.S. trade deficits merged the interests of the U.S. government with those of the multinationals," Connolly said on a visit to Tokyo. "The multinationals then manipulated U.S. trade interests to put tobacco high up (on the list of trade priorities)."

A recent estimate by the U.S. Agriculture Department showed that American tobacco exports to Asia soared 76 percent to $1.2 billion in the first nine months of 1987.

It attributed the rise to aggressive American negotiations and threats of trade retaliation.

However, a spokesman for the R.J. Reynolds tobacco firm in Tokyo, denied that U.S. producers were relying on political pressure to increase their Asian market.

"We're not using any political pressure," said the spokesman, Akio Tabata. "We're just selling our products like (other cigarette makers)."

Connolly, also director of the Office for Nonsmoking and Health in the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, said Japan Tobacco and Salt, a government monopoly corporation, was denationalized in 1985 because of foreign pressure.

But the government retained all the shares of the new Japan Tobacco Inc., and also kept a 20 percent import tax on foreign cigarettes, prompting the U.S. to file an unfair trade practices suit.

Connolly showed a copy of a letter written by North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms to former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone in July 1986, demanding "a reasonable share of the Japanese market."

"I sense a growing determination among my colleagues to act boldly to show their constituents that they do not intend to remain silent, and very damaging decisions are often made in such an environment," Helms wrote in the two-page letter.

"May I suggest a goal of 20 percent (share of the market) within the next 18 months," the senator added.

In October 1986, Japan suspended its entire import tariff on foreign cigarettes and tobacco products, ending the year-long unfair trade practices suit, and U.S. cigarettes now account for 10 percent of sales in Japan.

Dr. Judith Mackay, a Hong Kong-based member of the WHO smoking panel, said the British colony also faced strong pressure from the United States when Hong Kong decided in January 1986 to prohibit sales of smokeless tobacco.

"Letters were written by Senator Bob Dole and others to our chief secretaries that such a ban would constitute an unfair and discriminatory trade restriction," she said in an interview.

Ms. Mackay added that the U.S. consulate and American Chamber of Commerce in Hong Kong also joined the crusade against the ban, but the colony nevertheless passed a law against smokeless tobacco imports in January 1987.

The U.S. Agriculture Department said in a report that American market shares in Taiwan and South Korea also increased through trade pressure, and in Taiwan sales of U.S. cigarettes multiplied by 34 times in the first nine months of this year to 4.2 billion cigarettes worth 94.5 million dollars.

"Only last year, the mere possession of imported cigarettes had been illegal for citizens" in South Korea, the U.S. Foreign Agricultural Service reported earlier this month. Fearing trade retaliation, the South Korean government agreed in September 1986 to allow 1-percent market access for U.S. cigarettes, the report said.

The state-run Korea Monopoly Corp. remains the only licensed cigarette importer and the sole domestic manufacturer. American officials are seeking permission to set up joint ventures and an easing of restrictions on tobacco advertising.

Three rounds of recent talks by U.S. and Korean officials in Seoul ended in deadlock after South Korea said it would open the market but without hurting its tobacco growers and cigarette producers. Still, U.S. imports have risen 8 percent this year, worth $2.5 million.

Lawyers in the Philippines are suing American giants Philip Morris and R.J. Reynolds to force them to put warning labels on cigarette packs sold through local licensees.

"The companies have no right to sell something they know — or at the very least they ought to know — is dangerous to health without warnings," said Francis Jardeleza, who filed the suit in February with four other attorneys.

"If the home country is the United States and you have certain labelings there, then you should treat the Third World country at par," he said, adding, "They cannot prove that the lungs of an Asian are any different from the lungs of an American."

Arizona Governor Denies Felony Charges, Rules Out Resignation

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham, indicted on felony charges of fraud and perjury, said Saturday that he was "completely clean" and would not resign despite "political opportunists in the attorney general's office."

In his first formal response to Friday's six-count allegation that he violated the law by concealing a $350,000 campaign loan, Mecham said he would welcome a public trial as "a breath of fresh air" and called the indictment "political persecution, not legal prosecution."

He said "a swirl of manipulation, deceit and skulduggery" was being used in an effort to "overthrow a constitutionally elected official."

"I am completely clean," he told reporters in the Capitol lobby. He declined to answer questions and left immediately after reading his 15-minute statement.

Attorney General Bob Corbin, a Republican like Mecham, scheduled a news conference to respond to Mecham's claims.

The embattled Mecham, who took office a year ago, also faces an impeachment inquiry in the state House of Representatives and a recall campaign that is likely to force an election this year.

Mecham, 63, will not resign and will not accept a plea bargain, press secretary Ken Smith said before Mecham's brief appearance.

"Obviously the governor and his attorney believe that they have a rock-solid case" and will win acquittal, Smith said. "I don't pretend to be a lawyer ... but my exposure to him for four months (since going to work for Mecham) tells me that he had no criminal intention in concealing the loan."

State Republican Party Chairman Burton Kruglick said Saturday that party leaders will meet soon to assess whether the party should continue supporting the embattled governor.

"Obviously we've said there's a problem here and we need to look at it," said Kruglick, who was reached in San Diego. "I don't believe in blind loyalty either. There is no question that this is damaging to the party."

Friday's indictment led to renewed calls for Mecham's resignation from legislators in both parties.

The state grand jury indicted Mecham and his brother and campaign treasurer, Willard Mecham, on charges of perjury, fraud and false filing for omitting the loan from a campaign-finance disclosure report. Signing a false financial-disclosure statement constitutes perjury, officials said.

Mecham also was charged with fraud and two counts of perjury for omitting the loan from two personal-finance disclosure statements.

If convicted on any count, the governor would be automatically removed from office. He would face almost 23 years in prison if convicted on all counts.

Meanwhile, Phoenix fire officials said Saturday there was no word on possible suspects in an arson fire Friday night that damaged records in the law office of the state House's special counsel, William French.

French has been investigating whether Mecham should be impeached and is scheduled to present his findings to House members Friday. French said his paperwork on the Mecham case was not affected.

House Speaker Joe Lane said Friday the indictment would have no bearing on the House investigation and decision on whether to impeach.

Mecham also faces possible recall from office resulting from a petition campaign by the Mecham Recall Committee. Although the count has not yet been declared official, county recorders have certified well over the 216,746 number of signatures required to force an election, probably in May.

The auto dealer won the governorship on his fifth try in a three-way race and took office on Jan. 5, 1987. He has been embroiled in controversy since his first month in office, when he canceled a Martin Luther King holiday for state employees.

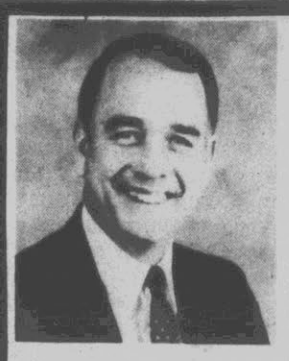

Mecham further angered black leaders by defending the use of the word "pickaninny." He also has said that working women cause divorce and that homosexuality is an unacceptable lifestyle, and in December he angered Jews by defending an earlier statement that the United States is a "great Christian nation."

Mecham's legal problems began in October when it was revealed that he had received but failed to report a $350,000 campaign loan from Tempe developer Barry Wolfson. The loan made up about one-third of Mecham's campaign warchest but was lumped in with other contributions on his campaign financial statement. Wolfson's name did not appear on the statement.

In a letter to Wolfson, Mecham had promised that the loan would "remain confidential." When he revised his personal and campaign financial reporting statements in November, the governor said the failure to itemize the loan was an "honest mistake" and blamed it on his brother, Willard, who was indicted Friday on three similar counts.

MECHAM ANSWERS CHARGES — Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham (with speech in hand) approaches the podium at a press conference Saturday in Phoenix. Mecham said he was "completely clean" and will not resign his office. He was indicted by the state grand jury Friday on six felony counts, including perjury and filing a false campaign contribution. Ohio Oil Spill Cuts Off Wheeling's Water Supply

By RAY FORMANEK Jr.
Associated Press Writer

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Shops closed and firefighters worried about a water shortage Saturday as the city stopped pumping water from the Ohio River because of a million-gallon diesel oil spill that has traveled 100 miles in a week.

Water stockpiled in city storage tanks dwindled to critical levels by 8 a.m., when all businesses served by the city's system were urged to close, an assistant to City Manager Mike Nau said.

"We're telling people do not use water unless you absolutely have to," said Nancy Vapner.

"Showers and baths are out. Those are the kinds of things that people have to stop. We are in an emergency situation and people have to get serious about conserving."

A check of downtown Wheeling showed that most businesses had complied with the city's request.

It could be weeks until the 1 million gallons of diesel fuel that spilled into the Monongahela River south of Pittsburgh, then flowed into the Ohio through three states, is skimmed off or becomes diluted, environmental officials say.

The fuel is part of 3.5 million gallons that spilled Jan. 2 after a 40-year-old Ashland Oil Co. tank crumpled as it was being filled. The company has offered to pay all cleanup costs.

On Saturday, Ashland Oil President Charles Luellen apologized to the people of Wheeling.

"Very briefly, but very importantly, we're sorry," Luellen told reporters at the city's emergency operations center. "We regret very deeply this accident. One other reason that we are here today is to see what more we can do. We can understand that people are very frustrated and angry. ... But we regret that they are so angry and so frustrated that they sued us."

He refused to comment further, citing several lawsuits filed by residents in the Pittsburgh area.

Nau ordered Wheeling's two Ohio River water intakes closed at 5:30 p.m. Friday after tests indicated that diesel fuel had reached untreatable levels.

At the same time, officials put into effect an emergency plan designed to furnish the city's 42,000 residents with about 70 percent of the 9 million gallons they use on an average day.

Four barges, each with a million-gallon capacity, were part of the plan to keep the city's spigots flowing. The barges are drawing water from Big Wheeling Creek and carrying it four miles upstream to be pumped through the city's filtration plant.

A faulty pump prevented the city from retrieving the barges' water for a time, but it was fixed by midday and another pump added to assist it.

Wheeling continued to get 1.3 million gallons of water daily from two pipelines running from wells in the Ohio communities of Martins Ferry and Bridgeport, plus an old well in Wheeling, Nau said.

"The problem is that water from the pipelines isn't keeping up with what's being drawn from the reserves," Nau said.

In Steubenville, Ohio, about 35 miles upriver, businesses reopened Saturday after officials lifted a state of emergency when they were able to modify the city's water treatment plant so it could remove the oil.

"Business is back to normal, but we are asking people to conserve still because we're not back at full function yet," said Cindy Antill, a billing operator for the city water department.

Joe Habowski, an operator at the treatment plant, said the city used bentonite clay and activated carbon to filter the foul odor and taste out of the water. A similar treatment was used by the town of East Liverpool.

Wheeling officials said their water system's intakes were too direct to allow this type of treatment.

In the nearby village of Wintersville, whose water is supplied by Steubenville, emergency measures remained in effect.

"We're still asking businesses to stay closed until Steubenville can guarantee us that they won't let our tanks go dry," Wintersville Mayor Frank Layman said.

And in Toronto, Ohio, about nine miles upstream from Steubenville, city Water Superintendent George Wise said officials asked non-essential businesses to remain closed Saturday while the city rebuilt its reserve water supplies.

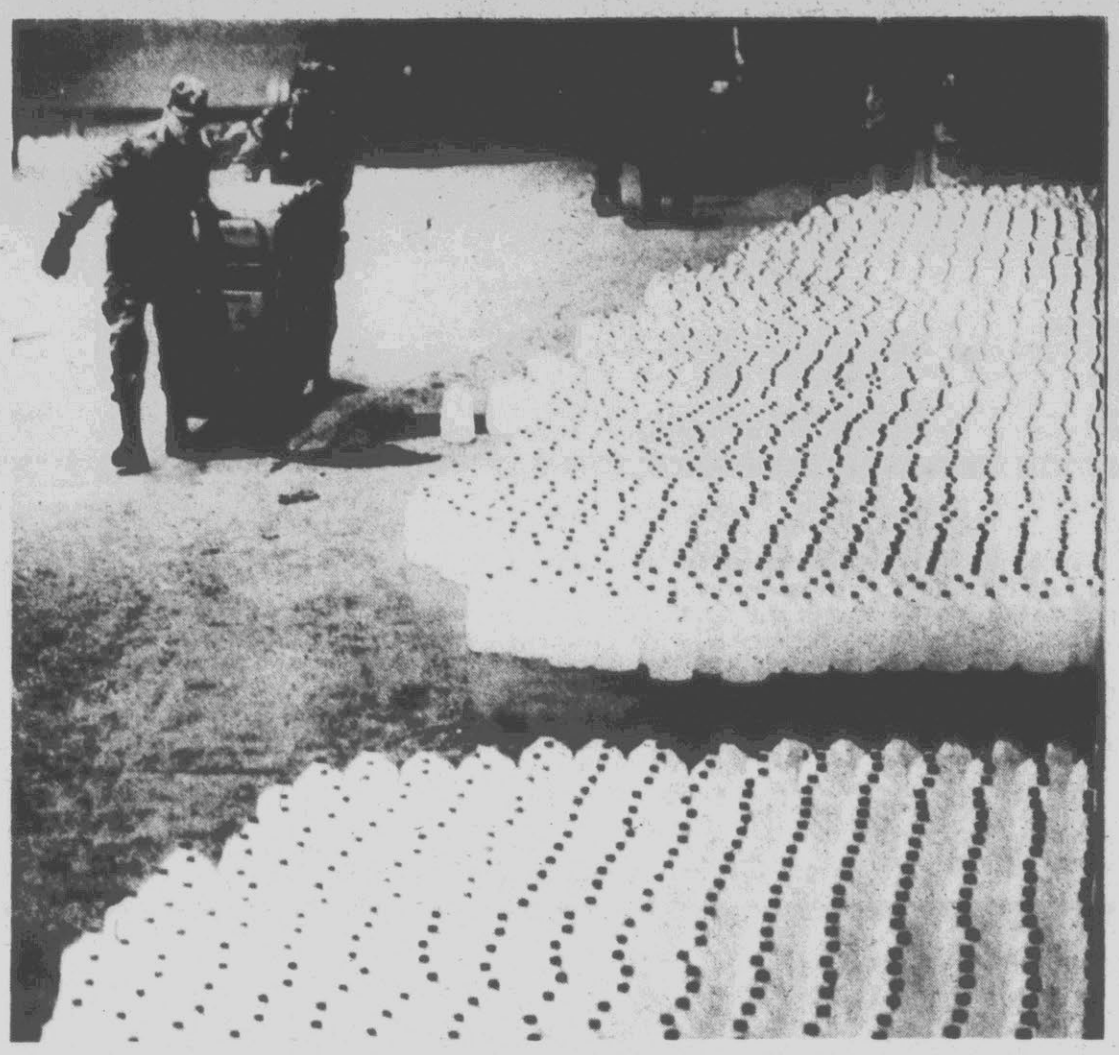

In Wheeling, Nau said the reserve tank that supplies half the city had been drained to 5 feet from its normal level of 22 feet by 1 p.m. Saturday.

"And that's at a critical stage," Nau said. "People must conserve."

Ten National Guard water tanks were put at fire stations and in strategic areas around Ohio County early Saturday and five more were to arrive later, Vapner said.

Six water pumpers from neighboring communities were on standby, if needed for a large fire, said Cliff Sligar, the city's fire chief.

"We're prepared for an average house fire," Sligar said. "But if we have a big fire downtown, then we have problems."

Plant Explosion Kills Worker

By STEWART TAGGART
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — An explosion Saturday at a petrochemical plant destroyed about a third of the facility, killed one worker and injured two others, and rousted about 50 people from their homes, fire officials said.

The explosion and fire occurred about 5:10 a.m. at the three-acre ArChem Co. plant off Interstate 45, Southeast Houston Fire Department Chief David Renfrow said.

"About one-third of the plant was destroyed," Renfrow said. "It took about an hour to get (the flames) extinguished."

ArChem officials at the scene said they could not provide an explanation for the blast and declined to speak further with reporters. Repeated calls to ArChem's offices went unanswered.

About 50 residents of a nearby trailer park evacuated after the blast were allowed to return home late Saturday morning, Renfrow said. The park was the only residential area near the plant, Renfrow said.

"We thought someone ran into the side of the house," said Chris Martinez, who lives near the plant.

"I was sitting here and I heard something go boom and the trailer went rattle," said Ed Smith, another evacuee.

The explosion was believed to have occurred in a reactor tank holding toluene, an industrial chemical used as a solvent and in making dyes, Renfrow said.

The 27-year-old worker killed apparently was working on top of the reactor tank when it exploded, said Renfrow. Other tanks also were destroyed.

The two injured workers were taken to Southeast Memorial Hospital, said hospital spokesman Bill McGlashen.

One was in serious condition, suffering from a fractured skull, facial and skin burns and chemical inhalation. The other was in stable condition, suffering from facial and skin burns and chemical inhalation, McGlashen said.

PLO Leaders Continue To Resist Government-In-Exile Formation

By SALAH NASRAWI
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — PLO leaders called Saturday for a U.N. force to protect Palestinians in Israel's occupied territories but failed in a two-day meeting to decide whether to form a government-in-exile.

Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat said the month-long "uprising" in the West Bank and Gaza Strip "is the beginning of a new phase in confronting the Zionist settler conquest of Palestine."

He told a news conference that Palestinians there "face a real massacre" by Israeli security forces. More than two dozen Arab youths have been killed by army gunfire in the West Bank and Gaza since Dec. 8.

"The uprising is creating new realities in the Palestinian territories and paving the way for the attainment of freedom," said a communique issued by the PLO's Central Council.

The council called for international protection for Palestinians in the occupied lands, which Israel seized in 1967.

Arafat said the PLO already has asked the United Nations to support the proposal, which could take the form of a special peace force.

The statement said the meeting also established a special committee to "undertake special responsibility in following developments in the occupied territories."

But the Central Council referred a controversial proposal for the formation of a government-in-exile to another special committee for further study. Arafat said that could take at least six weeks.

The PLO has resisted setting up a government-in-exile on the grounds it could exacerbate internal disagreements.

The Central Council is the upper house of the Palestine National Council, the Palestinians' parliament-in-exile.

Arafat said the council rejected a proposal he said was made Friday by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir for granting autonomy to Palestinians in the occupied territories if they halt their protests.

"This is a cheap bribe and our people who have been sacrificing precious blood will never be bribed," he said.

There have been no reports that Shamir has made such an offer and Arafat did not elaborate.

The council also decided to establish a special fund to support the uprising and called on Arab states to do the same.

Meanwhile, a PLO spokesman charged that Israeli troops stormed Palestinian refugee camps in the Gaza Strip Friday night, using tanks for the first time since the riots began.

There was no immediate reaction to the claim from authorities in Israel, where the Jewish Sabbath was being observed.

The guerrilla spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said, "At 11 p.m. last night the Israeli troops stormed several camps in Gaza and Khan Yunis, supported by military armored vehicles and tanks."

Meanwhile, a senior PLO official was quoted Saturday as saying Islamic fundamentalist activists have increased their protests in the occupied territories following an agreement with the PLO.

In Gaza, Israeli troops battled demonstrators Saturday during a commercial and school strike ordered by the Jihad Islami, or Islamic Holy War.

Salah Khalaf, considered the No. 2 political figure in the PLO's mainstream Fatah movement, said the PLO had given concessions to Islamic fundamentalists to encourage their participation in the protests, according to the Abu Dhabi daily newspaper Al-Bayan.

"Some Islamic elements have been admitted to the National Council and two others to the (Fatah) Central Committee," Khalaf was quoted as saying. The Central Committee is the ruling body of the Fatah guerrilla group led by PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

Israeli and Western observers have said that growing Islamic activism in the Gaza Strip has been a major factor in Palestinian unrest for more than a year.

Snowman Search Starts

MOSCOW (AP) — A society created within the Ministry of Culture has begun a search for the abominable snowman, a large manlike creature that has been sighted at least 100 times, the official Tass news agency said Saturday.

Tass said numerous reports collected by search enthusiast Zhadnf Kofman of Moscow indicate the creature, known in Asia as the yeti, has a protruding forehead and eyebrows like cap peaks.

The news agency said anthropologists have associated those features and the knot of hair at the back of the yeti's skull with the prehistoric Neanderthal man.

"If one analyzes the whole available information he will find realistic features of the hominoid corresponding also to the anthropological data and his supposed way of life and behavior," Tass said.

"The society of cryptozoologists set up under the aegis of the U.S.S.R. Ministry of Culture will engage itself in the search for man's shy next-of-kin," Tass said.

No other information was disclosed about the planned search for the abominable snowman.

The hairy behemoth, said to roam the snowy expanses of Siberia, is a favorite legend with superstitious Soviets, and the official society likely is aimed at keeping the government informed about the efforts of people who search for it.

Rebels Mine Train

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Explosives buried under a railroad track blew up as a train carrying fuel passed by and eight people were injured, including six Indian soldiers, officials reported.

They blamed the attack on guerrillas of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, the most powerful rebel group seeking an independent homeland for the Tamil minority.

The officials said the train was carrying gasoline and diesel fuel to the eastern port town of Batticaloa and the Indian soldiers were aboard as a security force. They said the two other people wounded were Sri Lankan troopers who also were serving as guards.

A spokesman for the Batticaloa Citizens' Committee said two cars of the train were damaged by the explosion near Kiran village, 140 miles northeast of the capital of Colombo.

The spokesman, speaking with the condition he not be identified, said the two cars were tilted off the tracks but they did not overturn. He did not say how many cars were in the train, but there were no indication it carried any passengers.

"The attempt to set off a fire failed and the train minus the two wagons came to Batticaloa later," he said.

Officials in Batticaloa said the Liberation Tigers were responsible.

That group has vowed to disrupt civil administration in the north and east where most of Sri Lanka's Tamils live.

Uganda Violence Leaves 121 Dead

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Government troops attacked rebels loyal to former dictator Milton Obote's defense minister, killing 121 and capturing 58, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The Catholic Church-backed Munno daily said National Resistance Army troops attacked the rebel camp in Lwakaka forest, about 180 miles northeast of Kampala, on Wednesday.

The troops seized several weapons and 200 cattle, the newspaper said.

Munno said the rebel camp belonged to Uganda People's Army guerrillas loyal to Peter Otai, defense minister during Obote's 1980-85 rule. Obote was ousted in a coup led by Tito Okello, who was overthrown six months later by President Yoweri Museveni's National Resistance Army.

Taking medication becomes a part of everyday life to people with diabetes. Whether they require insulin shots or special pills, most diabetics have to take one or the other to support their pancreatic deficiencies.

Everyone needs insulin. It is the major regulator of glucose (sugar) metabolism. The pancreas of a diabetic produces too little insulin or diabetics may ineffectively use the little insulin they do produce. Appropriate medication helps to solve their problem.

An understanding of the correct way to take medication is very important to diabetics. This, coupled with a sound knowledge of meal planning, exercise needs and blood sugar monitoring is the key to successful management of diabetes. Successful self management of diabetes equals healthier lives. This is winning with diabetes rather than losing because of diabetes.

The Diabetes Education Program, developed by Pitt Internal and Renal Medicine Associates, Ltd. (PIRMA), is a program about winning. It is a teaching program structured to help diabetics develop goal standards and good self care techniques. The program supports the efforts of physicians who care for diabetics.

Iran, Iraq Spar On Southern Front

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said Saturday that Iranian shells killed eight civilians in Basra, and Iran said it destroyed scores of missiles on converted oil platforms in a naval raid that killed 120 Iraqis.

Despite the clashes in the southern warfront, an eight-day lull in tanker attacks continued in the Persian Gulf, where Iran and Iraq staged a record 34 raids on merchant shipping last month.

Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak and U.S. Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci held talks with officials in Saudi Arabia about how to protect gulf Arab states from threats posed by the 7-year-old gulf war.

State-run Tehran Radio announced Saturday that Iran had launched "deterrent operations" against economic and military installations in Iraq to retaliate for an air raid Friday on the northwestern town of Tabriz.

Iranian shelling of Basra in southern Iraq started Friday night and continued Saturday, killing eight civilians and wounding 27, the official Iraqi News Agency said. It said the shelling killed women and children and destroyed 12 houses and a nursery school.

Iran has shelled Basra repeatedly over the last two years.

Arab diplomats based in Damascus said Iran has massed as many as 500,000 men east of Basra, once Iraq's second-largest city, for a winter offensive.

But they said Syria has persuaded Iran to delay the attack to permit time for mediation efforts by gulf Arab states. Shipping sources say the Arabs have persuaded Iraq to curb its attacks on Iranian oil shipping.

The speaker of Iran's Parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, was quoted as saying Saturday that no peace proposals have "taken justice seriously" by dealing with the damage his country has suffered, an apparent reference to war reparations Tehran has demanded.

"We wish to be on friendly terms with the Persian Gulf countries," he said, stressing that the only condition was that they remain neutral in the conflict.

Iran has concentrated its ship attacks on vessels trading with Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, which Tehran sees as allies of Iraq.

Iran and Iraq both reported fighting around two converted oil platforms about 20 miles south of Iraq's Faw Peninsula, which was partly overrun by the Iranians in February 1986.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said a flotilla of Revolutionary Guard gunboats raided the al-Bakr and al-Amaya terminals Friday night, setting fire to missile and radar sites. It said they killed 120 Iraqis and sank five Iraqi Navy ships that sought to aid the Iraqi garrisons on the platforms, causing "heavy casualties."

The platforms have not pumped any oil since early in the war.

Iraq denied that any of its five frigates were destroyed and said it beat off the attack, sinking 13 of 50 small Iranian vessels involved in the raid.

Carlucci, on the last leg of a week-long gulf tour that included stops in Kuwait and Bahrain, met Saturday with Saudi Arabia's King Fahd and defense minister, Prince Sultan.

Carlucci is scheduled to return home Sunday. There were no substantive details of his meeting with the monarch, but the official Saudi Press Agency said Sultan termed their own, separate meeting "good," and expressed hope that there would be "better meetings between the two sides."

Asked if new agreements were discussed, Sultan replied: "There is nothing new in that connection." He was apparently referring to proposals for new U.S.-Saudi arms sales.

U.S. congressional resistance to Saudi arms sales has led the kingdom, a major customer for U.S. weapons, to turn increasingly to Europe for warplanes, ships and other weapons in recent years.

A few hours later, King Fahd welcomed Mubarak, the first Egyptian head of state to visit the kingdom since Egypt's 1979 peace treaty with Israel. Diplomats said the two would discuss Egyptian defense assistance to gulf states, but that any aid would stop short of troops.

Gulf shipping sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Iran has released a West German freighter, the 31,205-ton Norasia Pearl, seized Dec. 28 in a search for Iraq-bound cargo. The sources said the vessel's German crew was unharmed and its cargo intact.

Reconciliation Talks Scheduled

By M.H. AHN
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Three top opposition leaders Saturday accepted an invitation by President Chun Doo-hwan to meet with him and discuss national reconciliation.

Chief Presidential Secretary Kim Yoon-whan said Chun's separate meetings with Kim Young-sam, Kim Dae-jung and Kim Jong-pil are expected to be held next week.

Kim Young-sam, head of the main opposition Reunification Democratic Party, sid he will accept the offer. The other leaders, through aides, expressed their willingness to meet Chun.

The presidential aide said Chun wants a frank exchange of views with the three Kims before stepping down as president Feb. 25, when he will be succeeded by Roh.

The proposed talks could be a significant signal that the opposition might be ready to end years of confrontation with the government and resolve its bitter dispute over the alleged election fraud.

Opposition spokesmen said the early release of political prisoners and the restoration of their civil rights and other democratic reforms should be taken up when the opposition leaders meet Chun.

Roh earlier proposed meetings with the three Kims to seek national reconciliation while trying to defuse tension over the opposition's charges of election fraud.

The opposition so far has failed to present concrete evidence to substantiate the fraud charges and there has been little public response to the opposition leaders' calls for a fight.

Roh won by polling 36.6 percent of the vote, Kim Young-sam finished second with 28 percent and Kim Dae-jung finished third with 27 percent.

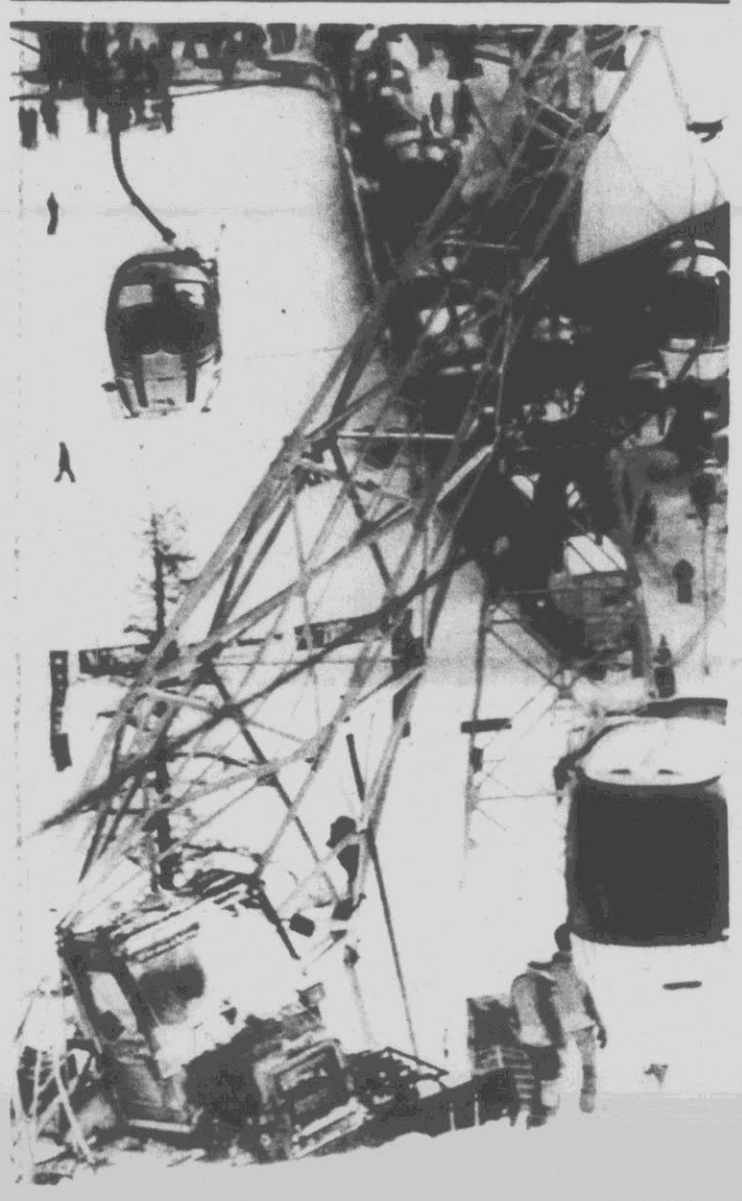

Many opposition supporters blamed the two Kims for both running rather than putting up a unified front against Roh. The two Kims have apologized for their split but are refusing to unite in the coming general elections.

In another other development, news reports said hundreds of student demonstrators hurled firebombs and stones at a police substation, a fire station and a broadcasting station in Kwangju.

The Yonhap News Agency said no injuries were reported, but window panes were smashed at the fire station. It said one student was arrested.

Police said the students were protesting Friday's raid to drive out about 200 radical students who seized the main university building and other school buildings for nearly four months.

The radicals demanded that the president and his family members be removed from the administration and accused him of mismanagement and of being undemocratic.

SNOW CAT CRASHES — Gondola cabins hang suspended over a wrecked snow tractor Saturday which hit a ski lift pylon, causing two lift cabins to fall to the ground in Val d'Isere, France. One person was killed and three injured in the accident, police said, which took place before the World Cup downhill men's ski race. The finish area of the race can be seen in the background. Royal Wedding

LEITH, Scotland (AP) — The Earl of St. Andrews on Saturday married Canadian scholar Sylvana Tomaselli and became the first member of the royal family to wed in a civil ceremony in Britain.

Lord St. Andrews, 25, married Ms. Tomaselli in a private, 20-minute ceremony at a registry's office in this town on the outskirts of Edinburgh, the Scottish capital.

1 Dead In Ski Lift Accident

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — A snow tractor hit a ski lift pylon at this Alpine resort and knocked two lift cabins to the ground, killing one person and injuring three, police said.

The tracked vehicle, normallyy used to flatten the snow, was transporting supplies to a restaurant on the slope when it slid on hard-packed snow and crashed into the pylon.

The collision caused the pylon to tilt over, derailing the cables and causing the cabins to drop. Police said the driver of the tractor was killed and three passengers in the cabins were hurt.

The injured were evacuated by helicopter.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Safety Requires Interchanges

Pitt County citizens can offer their appreciation to the Wilson County Board of Commssioners who recently voiced their "grave concern" for the safety aspects of the new U.S. 264 from Wilson to the Pitt County line.

Unfortunately, the same can't be said for Pitt County's commissioners, nor for Pitt County's legislative delegation.

The Wilson County Commissioners expressed their concern to the N.C. Department of Transportation about the design features of the recently opened highway in a letter. The board stated that since the highway opened, three fatalities and thousands of dollars in property damage have occurred on the roadway. Grade crossings at N.C. 222, N.C. 91 and N.C. 58 were cited as the problem on the otherwise fully controlled access highway.

Preston Harrell, chairman of Wilson County's commission, said the situation is dangerous. "What we really need is overpasses," he said. The commissioners are asking for flashing lights, traffic control lights or other immediate safety features until overpasses can be planned.

The Wilson County Board of Commissioners concern is commendable.

Here in Pitt County, the U.S. 264 highway planning was even worse and yet the county's commissioners and legislative representatives have not uttered a word. Citizens have already found that the Pitt County portion of the new U.S. 264 comes to a precipitous halt and dumps traffic on a two-laned circuitous route east of Farmville. The 10-mile section from Greenville to Farmville has one grade crossing which is already dangerous since it is the exit for residential areas along Stantonsburg Road and the Voice of America Road.

Construction on the section north of Farmville is expected to be contracted next month but it will include more grade level crossings rather than overpasses with access ramps.

It might be recalled that while the highway was being planned, the county commissioners and the legislative delegation were ineffective in preventing the overpass accesses from being dropped from the planning. This was at a time when our elected representatives had easy contact with the Democratic administration in Raleigh.

Fortunately, our elected officials can correct their mistakes of the past. This highway can be, and should be, made a fully controlled access highway with no grade crossings. Since only a few grade level intersections are involved the overpasses can be constructed at a cost far less than building an entirely new corridor.

Why wouldn't the county commissioners and our legislative representatives leap at the opportunity to work for safety, convenience and economic development for their constituents? They certainly now have the initiative. They only have to follow the laudable lead of the Wilson County Commissioners who have expressed their concern for those who use and pay for U.S. 264.

Mourning The Loss Of A Special Star

"Pistol Pete" Maravich never played collegiate basketball in North Carolina. The state claimed him, however, because he first showed his great ability as a basketball star while a high school student in Raleigh.

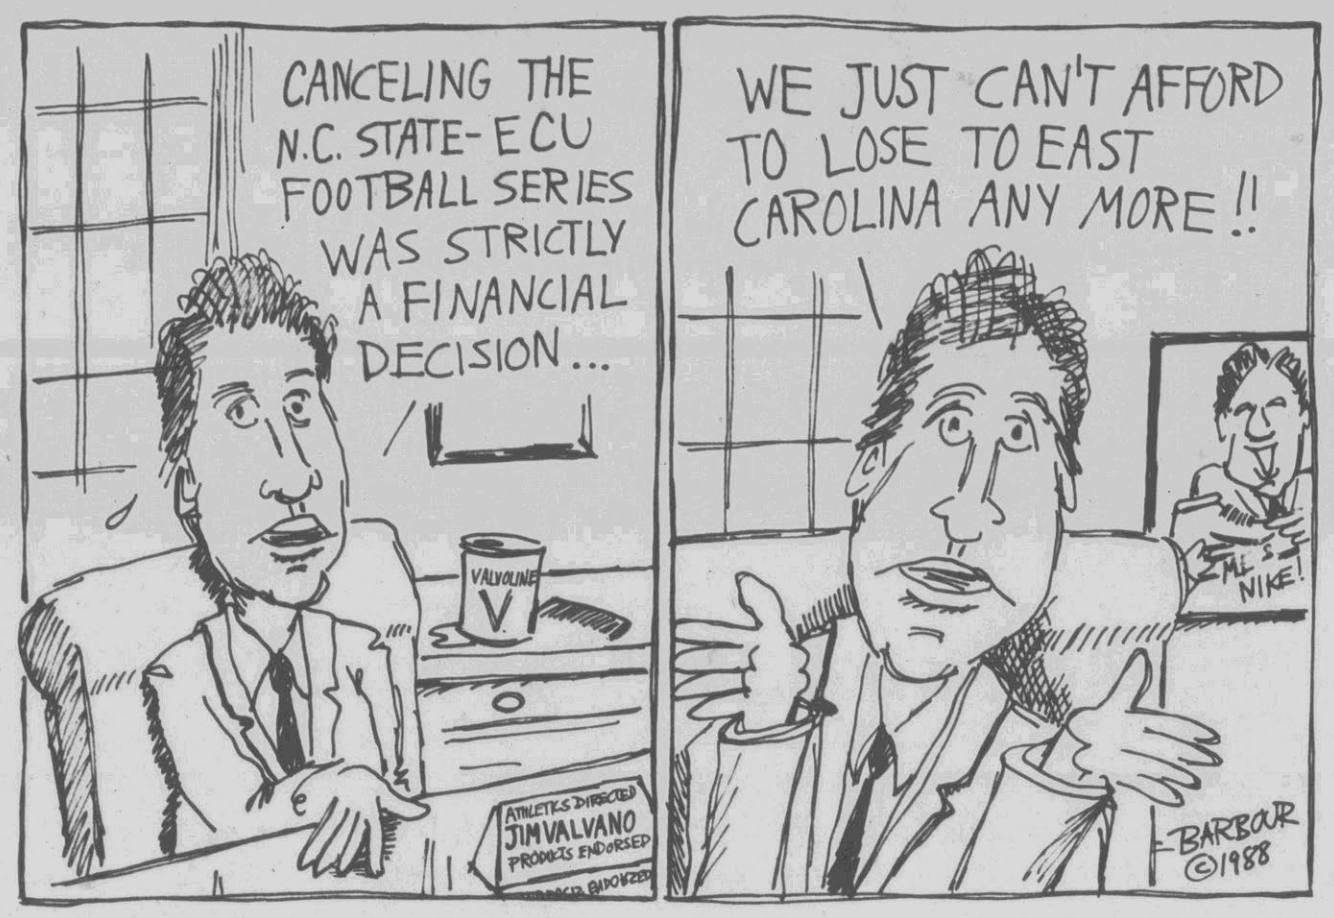

Pete Maravich was clearly a star. Following a college career at Louisiana State University where his father coached, he played for Atlanta, New Orleans, Utah and Boston and was the idol of countless young people who dreamed of emulating his success in basketball.

For Maravich, it was a matter of the more he practiced the luckier he got. He practiced basketball incessantly as a youngster under the watchful eye of his father, the coach. No doubt he gave up much of the social and academic life that other teenagers had. It served him well through a career that ended with his retirement from the Boston Celtics in 1980.

Later, recognizing he could do much good as a respected former basketball star, he turned to religious work.

Maravich died suddenly in California Tuesday. He was only 40 years old. He had been engaged in a game of pick-up basketball, the game he loved so well, only moments before.

It seems forever since Maravich played the sport at Raleigh's Broughton High School. The basketball legend started in the Tar Heel state. The sports world's loss had particular meaning in North Carolina.

Believe It Or Not, It Can Happen Here

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

A steady downpour of rain and temperatures in the 30s last Sunday reminded snow lovers — and haters — that this is the season when snows can move into our usually snowless area.

Later in the week there were bitter cold temperatures and a snow watch was in progress as clouds moved in on Thursday.

There was a pretty good snow storm Thursday that left several inches of snow on Pitt County. No one knows how much more snow we are in for this winter.

The snow reminder, however, sent old timers all the way back to March 2, 1980 to recall the Great Snow of this half of the century.

It was, of course, late in the winter and most people thought we had avoided a big snow for the winter of 1980. As sometimes happens here, however, the winter storms come late in the season.

That one was a big one. The precipitation, which lasted throughout the weekend, left 16 inches of measured snow in the Greenville area. That was only part of the story, however. The wind-blown snow drifted considerably and drifts six feet high were common. Some people opened their front doors to a wall of snow. Others couldn't find their cars buried in snow drifts, let alone drive them.

On Monday morning, March 2, both the Department of Transportation and Greenville city street crews reported no progress in opening up thoroughfares. There were also reports of cars stranded along U.S. 264. At Pitt County Memorial Hospital many personnel stayed on duty as long as 36 hours because relief shifts could not make it to the hospital, nor could the ones there leave.

Most businesses were closed and most who had to make it to work simply trudged through the snow. Interestingly the snow duplicated the previous big snow of March 2, 1927, the one which had been cited as a "real snow" prior to 1980.

Now, however, March 2, 1980 is the "benchmark" snow. It is fairly recent history but there has been no major snow since then. In the meantime, thousands of new residents have moved to the area and no doubt they can't believe it could happen here. It did — twice.

Stop Sending Mixed Signals To Pinochet

Lance Compa

WASHINGTON — Federal law requires a U.S. "No" vote on international loans to countries engaged in gross human rights violations. On Dec. 15, however, the Reagan administration abstained in a vote on a $250 million "structural adjustment" loan from the World Bank to the dictatorship of Gen. Augusto Pinochet, who overthrew Chile's constitutional government in 1973. The loan was approved, and Pinochet trumpeted the U.S. non-action as proof that President Reagan really backs his iron rule.

But the general crowed too soon. One week later, under pressure from U.S. congressional, church, labor and human rights groups, the administration eliminated Chile from two preferential trade programs because of its violations of workers' rights to organize and to bargain collectively. Now, instead of crowing, Pinochet is moaning that the United States is abetting an international communist conspiracy by imposing new economic sanctions.

Nearly $60 million worth of Chilean goods enter the United States each year under a program of trade benefits called the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP), which permits developing countries to export selected products to U.S. markets duty-free. Another program run by the Overseas Private Investment Corp. (OPIC) insures nearly $300 million in U.S. corporate investments in Chile.

Amendments to federal laws governing GSP and OPIC, passed in 1984 and 1985, mandate stripping benefits from countries that systematically violate worker and trade union rights. Last year the administration announced it was placing Chile on a one-year "probation" status to see whether the labor rights situation improved. Instead, it got worse.

Throughout 1987 church and human rights organizations in Chile recorded abuses against workers and trade unionists: arbitrary arrests, kidnappings and beatings by armed men in government cars; sacking of union halls and seizure of union books and records, and similar incidents designed to cow Chilean workers, who have a history of strong, militant, democratic unionism.

The government has arrested Manuel Bustos, head of Chile's largest labor federation, and charged him with subversion for organizing a protest strike in October. More ominously, Bustos has been the target of death threats from something called "Chilean Anticommunist Action," a death squad linked to the military. Five years ago, another prominent union leader, Tucapel Jimense, was kidnapped, shot and decapitated following similar threats.

In August 1987 the Pinochet government imposed an extraordinarily repressive labor code that bars trade unions from political activity and requires sworn statements from union leaders that they do not belong to any political party. Collective bargaining is limited to the single work site, preventing effective company-wide or industry-wide bargaining. A strike may last only 60 days, at which time workers must accept the employer's last offer or abandon their jobs.

Administration spokesmen sought to play down the trade moves, pointing out that only $60 million of selected Chilean exports would be affected by the GSP cutoff, out of more than $800 million in total exports to the United States. But the OPIC ban is more ominous for Pinochet. It was a powerful inducement for U.S. corporate involvement, amounting to almost $300 million worth of OPIC-insured U.S. investments in Chile. Now that inducement has been eliminated.

Chile has been held up as a model Third World debtor by international bankers pleased with its free-market ideology, austerity measures and clampdown on unions. By abstaining on the World Bank loan — in effect letting it go through — the administration did give Pinochet a nod of approval for his economic policies. But now the United States has also said it will no longer insure investments against the political risks that flow from those same policies. We cannot have it both ways.

Pinochet is keeping tight control of procedures for a plebiscite later this year that would prolong his rule to the end of the century. Quiet diplomacy has its uses, but sometimes it helps to speak loudly and carry a big stick. The mixed signals and half-measures aimed at Pinochet by the United States only feed the climate of uncertainty that Pinochet counts on to sustain his rule.

We should not apologize for U.S. enforcement of the new labor rights laws against Chile. Critics have attacked them as "back-door protectionism" aimed at keeping out foreign products. U.S. unionists, though, report a genuine enthusiasm among their rank-and-file members, not for the prospect of shutting out foreign goods but the hope of better pay and working conditions for their foreign counterparts.

Without an accelerated return to democracy, the same kind of turmoil that rocked dictatorships in Haiti, the Philippines and Korea in recent years is likely to occur in Pinochet's Chile. But the general has the guns, and he won't go quietly unless the United States shows a firm, consistent policy that he must go and democracy must come, without years more of "transition."

Jordan & Martin: What Accomplishments?

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — When Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, took himself out of the race for governor, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan probably felt relieved. Without Watkins in the race, Jordan, who filed for governor this week, is a shoo-in for the Democratic nomination.

But Jordan's relief must have been shortlived. Watkins may be out of the gubernatorial campaign, but that means he'll probably be back in the state house next year. He'll again be first lieutenant to Speaker Liston Ramsey, and they're likely to make life miserable for North Carolina's next governor, be he Bob Jordan or Republican incumbent Jim Martin.

Ramsey and Watkins are already an issue in this gubernatorial campaign. The Democrats charge that Martin is an ineffective governor — they call him the "sitting governor," as in sitting on his duff. They charge that he hasn't worked with the legislature — namely Ramsey, Watkins and Jordan — and that's why he's accomplished so little.

Martin counters that he's accomplished much despite the partisan roadblocks erected by Ramsey and Watkins. Jordan has been far more cooperative with the Republican governor than the two House leaders, so the GOP can't honestly characterize Jordan as the perpetrator of the troubles. Instead the GOP calls Jordan a "wimp" for being unable to wrest control of the legislature from the House leadership.

While it is important to examine an officeholder's record of past accomplishment as one tries to assess his ability for future success, the voters of North Carolina deserve a campaign which will also focus on the efforts of these two candidates will make to deal with Ramsey and Watkins in the future. It's a given that they will be back in 1989 and 1991.

Martin's problems in 1985 stemmed in part from the bitter campaign of 1984. The Helms-Hunt race so polarized the two parties in North Carolina that Democrats, who held real power only in the legislature after 1984, were not willing to cooperate with the Republicans.

Martin did well in the 1984 race to distance himself from the ugliness of Helms-Hunt. But he came to office without a plan for endearing himself to enough Democratic legislators to have a working majority. He quicky learned that turning campaign promises into real legislation is difficult when the other party hates your guts and they hold two-thirds of the legislative seats.

As Martin seeks another term, he must explain how he can be any more effective with Ramsey and Watkins in 1989 than he was in 1985 or 1987. What strategy is he developing.

Jordan must answer the same question. He can't assume warm reception from the House leadership if he's the next governor. In fact, there's considerable speculation, denied by Ramsey, that the House leaders would prefer that Martin be re-elected. That way, they'd maintain their power.

If Jordan is elected, he can undercut the power of the House leaders by gaining the allegiance of Democratic representatives. When Jim Hunt was governor, many Democratic representatives felt greater allegiance to him than to Ramsey. Jordan would have to earn the same kind of loyalty. It is fair to ask him how he intends to do that. It will be interesting to count, during the campaign, the number of joint appearances Jordan holds with Democratic House candidates.

Voters should watch Martin and Jordan both, in this campaign, to see if either has a plan for making the office of governor worthwhile again.

U.S. Playing Into Soviet Strategy In Afghanistan

Jim Hoagland

PARIS — The Soviet Union needs American help to carry out the orderly withdrawal it desires from its war against Afghanistan. As soon as American aid to the Afghan mujaheddin stops, Soviet withdrawals will begin. Nothing else stands in the way of a settlement.

That is the message that Soviet diplomats are transmitting to Washington and to other capitals as the most serious diplomatic effort yet undertaken to end the war begins. But there is an important section of small print in the Soviet formulation that suggests that this is more diplomatic strategy than a genuine negotiating "offer," and that peace is probably not at hand.

"We will leave Afghanistan, but we will not leave clinging to the skids of helicopters lifting off the roof of our embassy," a Soviet official said with a hint of defiance in his voice in Washington a few weeks ago while Mikhail Gorbachev was out winning the hearts and minds of Connecticut Avenue. I found it more revealing than Gorbachev's own comments about the war.

The choice of images to represent or to obscure reality is nearly as important in diplomacy as it is in poetry. Both arts depend on the power of suggestion to convey complex meanings that disappear when reduced to a literal formula. In using Vietnam as an analogy to Afghanistan, the Soviets seem to emphasize the double-edged nature of a strategy that still boils down to leaving on their own terms if they leave now.

By denying that they will submit to the sort of humiliation that Americans experienced in Saigon in 1975, the Soviets implicitly concede that such an outcome in Afghanistan is now an idea that has to be confronted, and avoided.

The Vietnam reference is thus a measure of Moscow's awareness that the military situation on the ground in Afghanistan is shifting to stalemate or worse, a view that has to be reinforced by the battles around the garrison town of Khost. The Soviet Army has shown this week that it can keep the road to Khost open, but only at the price of a major offensive.

It is possible that Khost could represent a Soviet version of the gunslinger backing out the saloon door with both guns blazing as a way of getting out of town alive. But placed against the background of the rejection of the Saigon syndrome, it suggests instead a Soviet determination to keep on fighting to preserve its client forces, even in marginal situations.

Analysis of the results around Khost will feed a muted debate that has been going on in western capitals about Soviet intentions in Afghanistan since the Washington summit. For the optimists, Gorbachev provided new hope that a settlement can be reached in the final year of the Reagan administration by personally committing himself in Washington to a Soviet withdrawal within 12 months or less — if the United States shuts off the arms flow to the guerrillas.

This helped trigger the trip by Undersecretary of State Michael Armacost to Pakistan this week, as Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze flew to Kabul on an undisclosed mission.

The Soviets have positioned themselves to follow a double-track strategy. If a retreat "with honor" can be arranged, the cost in Afghanistan has become so high that the Soviets would take it. If it cannot, they will fight on and blame the Americans for making them stay by refusing to cut off supplies to the mujaheddin.

A Sneak Attack

Edward Koch

Since the earliest days of journalism, the press has been fighting for survival against the powers of oppression. The Sandinistas, for example, shut down La Prensa. But sometimes the enemy is closer to home.

Last month several members of the U.S. Senate launched a sneak attack on the First Amendment by furtively passing legislation that forbids the Federal Communications Commission from considering waivers to the rule prohibiting cross-ownership of a newspaper and a television station in the same market. The target of this underhanded assault on open government was Rupert Murdoch, owner of the the New York Post and WNYW-TV in New York, and the Boston Herald and WFXT-TV in Boston. The purpose of the FCC regulation is to keep one owner from dominating competing news media. The purpose behind sneaking the FCC amendment through Congress was to avoid detection of an outrageous mugging of the public interest.

Instead of debating the issues on the Senate floor, thus giving New York Sens. Alfonse D'Amato and Daniel Moynihan a chance to express their opposition, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina acted in the dead of night. He introduced the anti-Murdoch legislation directly to a House-Senate conference committee. By the time our New York delegation discovered that Hollings had short-circuited the legislative process, it was too late.

For some strange reason, however, Hollings did remember to notify Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts that he was introducing a bill "aimed directly" at Rupert Murdoch, who would be forced to sell his papers in Boston and New York. Later it turned out that the trail of ink-stained footsteps led straight to Ted Kennedy's door and that he himself had encouraged Hollings to do what he did.

It's not hard to figure out why. Murdoch's Boston Herald, like his New York Post, generally supports the conservative end of the political spectrum. The Herald has been a constant critic of the liberal Kennedy. It's not surprising he'd like to see it sold to another owner. What is surprising, however, is that a staunch advocate of liberalism would subvert liberal principles in the name of hidden self-interest.

I happen to like both Rupert Murdoch and the New York Post. There are those who will cynically suggest that I am supporting Murdoch because he supported me. Let me make it clear that if this unfair action had been taken against the Amsterdam News — a paper that weekly calls for my resignation — I would respond in exactly the same way. The overriding issue is not whether you like the Post and the Herald. The issue is whether or not we are going to stand by and allow our freedom of the press to be abridged and abrogated by veiled manipulations in the back rooms of Congress. If a fascist gang broke into the Post and burned the building to the ground, we would be up in arms at this blitzkrieg against the press. Should we be any less concerned if the same result is achieved by secret deals in Washington?

Under previous regulations, the FCC had the latitude to make exceptions to the rule prohibiting one owner from running a broadcasting station and a newspaper in the same area. Such waivers recognized that conditions vary from city to city. In New York City, for example, The New York Times owns WQXR radio. The Daily News and WPIX-TV are both owned by the same company. These cross-ownerships are permitted because they were grandfathered in when the new FCC regulations took effect. Does anyone seriously believe that such ownership in any way constitutes a monopoly of the media? Of course not. We have dozens of radio stations and dozens of television and cable channels that represent every conceivable facet of public opinion. In such a market, worries about monopoly of the press are unwarranted.

The former FCC rule recognized that hard-and-fast laws against ownership of a newspaper are likely to be incompatible with the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees freedom of the press. Waivers were appropriate when local conditions called for them. Rupert Murdoch was appealing for such waivers in New York and Boston. I think he deserves them. New York City has four daily papers to serve a population of more than 7 million. Among them, the four dailies cover the complete range of news stories and political viewpoints. Were we to lose any one of them, it would be a blow to the entire city.

It should be noted that the Post has been running a large annual deficit. Rupert Murdoch is keeping it going anyway. I think he deserves our thanks and gratitude. If the Post and the Herald succumb to this submarine attack from Washington, thousands of employees could lose their jobs.

I am calling upon every presidential candidate, Democratic and Republican, and upon President Reagan himself to urge Congress to reconvene immediately and undo this deplorable act. I will support no candidate — in either the primaries or the general election — who does not join in this defense of the First Amendment. I urge others to take the same stand.

The Kennedy-Hollings measure has defamed our legislative process and undermined our freedom of the press. The anti-Murdoch bill is a direct attack on a cornerstone of American liberty. It must be repealed. Let the FCC make its determination based on the merits of the case. Kennedy and Hollings should recognize the harm they have done and lead the effort to overturn their ill-advised legislation. Rupert Murdoch is an American citizen. The fact that he came from Australia does not mean he deserves to be the victim of a kangaroo court in the halls of Congress.

"THEY ALL SAY THEY SHRANK...."

New Day For Travel

Cody Shearer

MILAN, ITALY — Millions of dollars are spent each year by tourist agencies to determine why people travel. Such research invariably reveals the obvious — people want to see for themselves how others live.

For those of us who are inveterate travelers, there is nothing like going abroad. Even unfortunate episodes, like ending up in a Sandinista jail, are not without their value. Travel takes us out of our complacency and comfort; it feeds our senses and intellect; it heightens our understanding and compassion; and it usually bestows upon us, good friends and valuable memories.

It is no suprise then that one in three of us plan to take more trips this year, even if it means cutting back on other spending, according to the latest American Express travel survey.

"Americans today see vacations more as an essential part of life than (as a) luxury," says Tommaso Zanzotto of the American Express Company.

Zanzotto may be right. But for the 600,00 American college students who see Europe for the first time during their summer treks, 1988 will be different. The falling U.S. dollar has radically changed the composition of foreign travel. In the past 12 months, the dollar has fallen 16.2 percent against the French franc, 20.9 percent against the Swiss franc, 21 percent against the British pound, 18 percent against the German mark, 17 percent against the Dutch gilder and 12 percent against the Italian lire. In more practical language, it now costs $3.50 for a cup of coffee here and $8 for a hamburger.

For most parents, the collapse of the dollar will mean that junior visits Mexico instead of Europe — if travel abroad at all. But that should not necessarily be the case for the 7 million Americans who visit Europe each year.

Today's traveler must rethink and reshape his or her expectations to better reflect current conditions. But that should not automatically be viewed as bad news. When the dollar was a robust currency a few years back, the rest of the world was our playground. We often traveled in style, beyond our means. Whereas few of us might venture into expensive restaurants at home, there was no problem visiting similar establishments in Europe. We simply put the bill on our American Express card and went our merry way. And God forbid if we ever had to use public transportation.

As for one on one contact with foreigners, too many of us confined such encounters to hotel bellhops and cab drivers. Service and sales personnel constituted our main exposure to foreign grassroots.

Yes, those were the days when our affluence blinded us to the rewards that intelligent travel can produce. As a result, too many of us missed a valuable chance to interact with the people we were supposed to meet. In the final analysis, the loss was ours. We lived it up like ugly Americans because we carried the all-powerful American dollar.

Having just spent almost two weeks in Europe, I can report what it feels like to come from a Third World country. Because of the dollar, Americans are no longer treated with special handling in Europe. Only the Japanese are accorded the highest level of courtesy and respect.

These days in Europe it takes getting used to having to visit the American Express office every few hours to cash personal checks for additional foreign currency. But once one realizes they can't even afford a second class hotel without spending $150 a night, the challenge becomes all the more appealing. One is forced to rejoice in the pleasures of following in the footsteps of the locals, or else catch the first plane home. Foreign travel today means patronizing neighborhood bars and restaurants, as well as using public transportation.

With a spirit of combined curiosity and desperation, I've found myself willing to bed down in the residence of locals, instead of opting for a modest hotel. This necessity has led me into a number of different values and practices. Armed with a pocket dictionary, I've been forced to appreciate people and communities I've previously taken for granted. Indeed, economic insolvency may make other American travelers abroad better informed and less isolated by forcing then out of their false enclaves. The passing scene through the taxi is yesterday's world for Americans.

Perhaps, we owe a strange sort of thanks to Ronald Reagan for teaching us about lower expectations. Americans will now return from Europe with the realization that there is a world out there beyond beautiful museums and cathedrals.

This world, more often than not, will include encounters with citizens who rejoice in America's faltering economic status. Such dialogue, in addition to hefty travel bills, should jolt traveling Americans into accepting the new world order.

December OPEC Meeting Failure Means Higher Oil Prices

Shaul Bakhash

Predictions in the wake of the abortive December meeting of the OPEC states that oil prices will drop to $12 per barrel or lower have so far not been realized. They are unlikely to be. On the contrary, consumers should anticipate firmer prices and more expensive oil before the spring.

Oil prices dropped from around $18 a barrel to $15 a barrel following the OPEC meeting because the member states failed to incorporate Iraq into their quota system and appeared to have failed to rein in Kuwait and the sheikdoms of the United Arab Emirates (UAE), which have been exceeding their OPEC production quotas.

Too much weight should not be attached to reports that Saudi Arabia and the Arab states of the Gulf are deliberately allowing prices to drop as part of a strategy to force Iran to the negotiating table with Iraq. Iran is facing severe economic difficulties and its foreign exchange reserves are limited. But it is unlikely to be deflected from the tanker war — for Iran a matter of speedboats, hand grenades, machine guns and simple missile launchers — by a drop in oil revenues.

The Gulf Arabs can ill afford a precipitous drop in oil prices. Saudis have been drawing down their reserves at a rate of approximately $15 billion annually over the past two years.

The lesson of 1986, when Saudi Arabia sought to obtain a larger share of the market by a policy of higher production, has not been lost. Oil prices then dropped to below $10 a barrel. Saudi Arabia produced 55 percent more oil, but saw its revenues drop by around 20 percent.

Non-gulf OPEC states — Venezuela, Indonesia, Libya, Algeria — cannot be expected to accept passively a steep decline in per-barrel revenues even as the value of the dollar is dropping sharply. They will demand the imposition of production discipline within OPEC ranks, especially since two of the three main culprits of overproduction — Kuwait and the UAE states — are also among the richest countries of the gulf.

It has been suggested that the Gulf Arab states may feel that cheaper oil is the price they must pay for the protection offered by the Western naval presence in the gulf. Even if this were the case, the Algerians and Libyans (and also the Syrians, who are small oil exporters) feel no such obligation.

If the Gulf Arabs continue to overproduce, these non-gulf states will join Iran in making life politically difficult for Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the UAE by charging that these countries are making a gift of several billion dollars to the United States and the West by a policy of uncontrolled production. Lower oil prices will also severely undermine the besieged Egyptian economy, a prospect the Saudis could hardly welcome.

In the international market, there is a limited oil glut, but the OPEC countries need to reduce their present level of production by only 1 million to 1.5 million barrels a day to firm up prices. This is within reach and requires dealing with Kuwait, the UAE and Iraq.

OPEC has been producing around 19 million barrels of oil a day in the last three months, about 1.5 million barrels a day in excess of market requirements. This excess has gone into inventories that, under normal market conditions, would be drawn down in the winter months.

These inventories would be drawn down this winter, and supply and demand would be brought into balance in the spring, if OPEC limited production to 17.5 million barrels a day. This could easily be achieved by giving Iraq a quota equal to that of Iran and by enforcing production quotas on the two other quota violators, Kuwait and the UAE. By throwing its weight behind such a solution, Saudi Arabia can help restore production discipline without playing the role of swing producer.

Kuwait and the UAE will fall into line for the obvious reason that when oil brings in $15 rather than $18 a barrel, they must pump 15 percent more oil to earn the same amount of money, and in deflated dollars to boot. Iraq, another quota violator, is too dependent on diplomatic and financial support from Saudi Arabia and the other gulf states to go its own way.

The prospect of lower oil prices may be welcomed by some in this country. But it will be of grave concern to American oil producers in Texas, Louisiana and the other oil-producing states, to the banks that have extended loans to the domestic oil industry and to those who fear greater dependence on imported oil.

Trade Issues Cloud Relations As Japan Official Starts Visit

By STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita this week heads for the United States, where he faces growing protectionist sentiment despite what Japan says are major accomplishments in easing trade tensions.

Takeshita, making his first U.S. trip as prime minister, is expected to stress Japanese achievements such as increased domestic consumption and a decline in exports as measured in yen. His three-day visit begins Tuesday.

He will also outline a plan to take over some of the costs of running American military bases in Japan, which Japan hopes will relieve some of the pressure from Washington to take a larger role in its own defense.

The Japanese government reportedly has also decided to begin discussions with the United States over opening some large-scale public works projects to U.S. and other foreign firms in a limited market-opening measure.

Despite these signs of progress, several lingering trade issues still cloud U.S.-Japanese relations. They are likely to come up during Takeshita's talks with President Reagan and other officials.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, head of the Senate Finance Committee, said Takeshita may have an unpleasant reception when he visits congressmen. The Texas Democrat said the omnibus trade bill pending in Congress could still become a reality by spring.

"The trade deficit is still with us (and) there is considerable sentiment, interest, support for the trade bill," Bentsen said after meeting Friday in Tokyo with Takeshita and other Japanese officials.

One trade dispute is a decision announced Friday in Tokyo by Shintaro Abe, secretary-general of the governing Liberal Democratic Party, that Japan cannot liberalize rice imports because of its own overproduction.

The United States has been pressuring Japan to open up its agricultural markets, including beef, rice and citrus, moves strongly resisted by the powerful Japanese farm lobby.

Japan is nejanding that the United States lift economic sanctions imposed last spring over alleged violations of a computer chip agreement.

The leaders probablyy will discuss getting U.S. firms involved in building the new Kansai International Airport near Osaka in western Japan

The leaders also are likely to discuss coordinated intervention in world financial markets in the wake of the October stock market crash. Both Japan and the United States have reportedly been intervening heavily in foreign exchange markets in recent weeks to prop up the falling dollar.

The United States has increased its pressure on Japan to comply with a ruling by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade that Japan lift trade restrictions on some agricultural products.

The Japanese government announced last week it would pay fringe benefits for 22,100 Japanese employees at U.S. military bases in Japan.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat Magnet' Diet Pill Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You will start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patent pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in fat particles. Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested.

Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the doctors, the fat-magnet pills do all the work while you quickly lose fat with no starvation diet menus to follow, no calorie counting, no exercising, and no hunger pangs. It is 100% safe. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

The fat-magnet pills have just been offered to the American public and are already sweeping the country with record sales and reports of dramatic weight loss. It's the "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W634, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) Patriots Roll Past Pirates, 77-63

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Saturday night, his GMU Patriots defeated East Carolina University, 77-63, in their first Colonial Athletic Association game of the season.

Kenny Sanders, who leads the CAA in scoring thus far this year, paced Mason to the victory with 22 points, getting help from outside shooting Brian Miller who had 19 points with five 3-point baskets.

East Carolina took an early 9-point lead in the game, but a 7-minute dry spell at the end of the first half allowed the Patriots to rally from five down to a 9-point halftime lead.

In the second half, the Pirates came back to close the gap to just two points, but a 3-point goal by Miller opened the door again. From there, Mason burst out to as much as a 22-point lead before the end.

"I've got to give East Carolina a lot of credit," Barnes, who himself was one of the five finalists for the ECU job that Mike Steele got, said. "They came out and took it to us. They are going to win some games in the conference this year."

Steele said the Pirates lacked adequate bench support.

"We did a nice job for about 15 minutes," Steele said. "But when we made substitutions, we got nothing positive from them and had to put the starters back in and they got tired.

"Then, the last five minutes or so of the first half was the difference. We got back in it in the second half, but until we find some substitution patterns that will help us, we're going to be in trouble.

After a couple of early ties, the last at 5-5, East Carolina, behind the scoring of Gus Hill, pulled away and scored nine straight to push out to a 14-5 lead with 13:55 left in the half. Hill scored five of the nine, while Lose, who scored but two baskets in the half, added two along with Kenny Murphy.

But Sanders helped pull Mason back to take an 18-17 lead with 9:04 left as he completed a 3-point play.

Hill put the Pirates back into the lead with a layup and Stanley Love added two free throws for a 21-18 lead.

But after Lose hit again for a 25-20 lead with 7:08 left, Steele was hit with a technical foul, his first as a Pirate coach, with 6:43 left. Sanders made the first of the free throws, then Earl Moore hit to cut the lead to two. Brian Miller added a 3-point basket to put Mason ahead, 26-25, and although the Pirates had several chances to regain the lead, they were not to score again in the half.

After several abortive scoring attempts, Mason got back on track and scored eight more before the period finally ended.

In all, the Pats outhit the Pirates, 14-0, over the final seven minutes.

"They stayed with their full-court press, too, and while we handled it for the most part, it eventually hurt us," Steele said. "We did a nice job on Sanders at times, but he's a strong and physical player and we had a freshman on him.

"Too, if Reed (Lose) doesn't shoot well, we struggle offensively. We felt we had to keep it in the 60's to have a chance, but they were able to get a few streaks there," Steele added.

The Pirates came back early in the second half to cut the lead to two, 41-39, with 13:52 remaining. Lose hit a 3-pointer and Hill scored from underneath to reduce it to two, but Miller followed with his 3-pointer and Sanders added two free throws the next trip down the court.

Then, after another Pirate basket, Mason ran off 11 unanswered points to run the margin out to 57-41 with 8:57 to play.

Sanders hit two more free throws with 6:15 showing to run the lead to 66-57, and Miller scored another 3-pointer with the 5:13 mark for a 71-49 lead, the biggest of the night.

Hill, who ia a Fairfax native, finished the game with 24 points for the Pirates and also led the team in rebounding with nine. Both Stanley Love and Lose had 13 each, but Lose was only six of 18 from the field, well below his usual percentage.

ECU shot only 43 percent for the game as compared to 53 percent for the Pats. Both teams pulled 32 re-

Defense and turnovers played key roles Saturday night in East Carolina University's Lady Pirate's 61-53 loss to George Mason University in college basketball action.

It was the Colonial Athletic Conference opener for both teams.

"We had too many turnovers (16) as usual," Pirate Coach Pat Pierson said. "We didn't shoot well at all from the foul line, either."

George Mason Coach Jim Lewis said he was pleased with the defensive effort of his team, especially in the results of their zone-pressure defense.

"When we didn't get the steal, we wore down the clock and gave them only about 12 seconds to set up their half-court offense," he said.

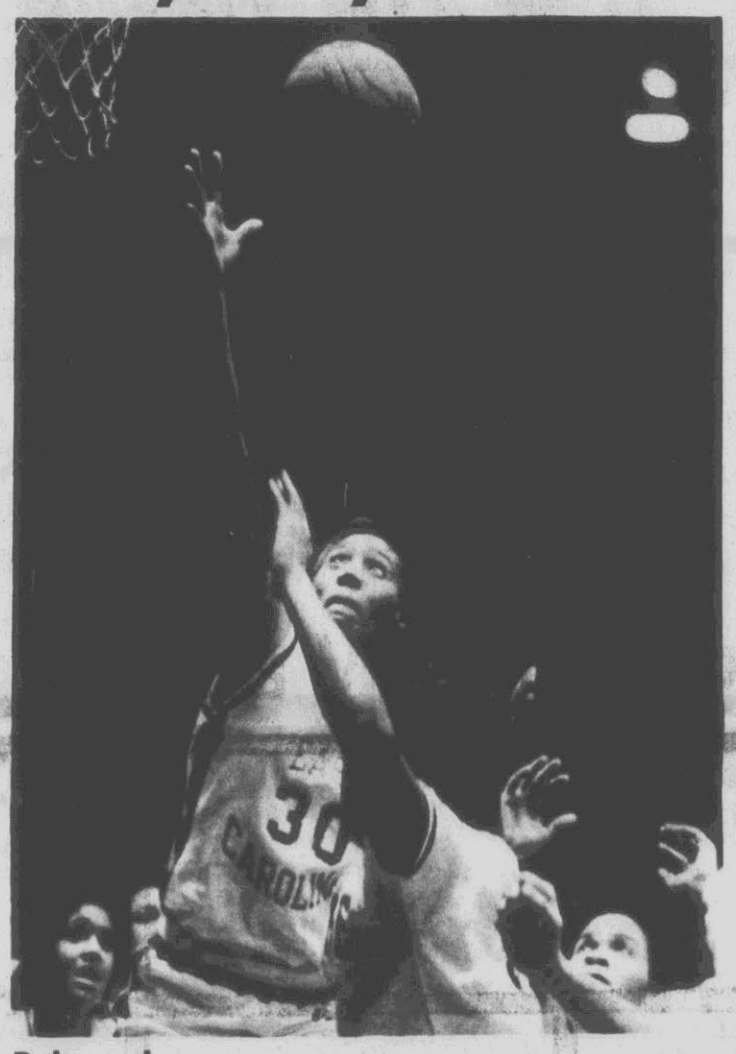

"We maintained our poise and got the ball when we needed to."

The Lady Pirates got the tip-off and jumped to a quick 6-0 lead behind the inside play of Alma Bethea and Greta Savage. The Patriots, though, quickly regrouped and turned in a six-point run of their own to tie the score.

The two teams traded buckets after that until the Patriots switched to a full court pressure defense that had the Pirates stymied. They outscored ECU 16-5 over the next six minutes to take a 28-17 lead with 4:45 left in the half.

The rest of the game became a story of momentum, as the Lady

UNC's 2nd Half Spurt Carries It Past LaSalle

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — J.R. Reid scored 30 points, including 20 in the second half, to lead fourth-ranked North Carolina to a 96-82 victory over LaSalle Saturday night.

The victory, North Carolina's 11th in 12 games, overshadowed a 37-point performance by LaSalle's Lionel Simmons.

Reid scored seven points in a 12-2 run in the first four minutes of the second half to bring the Tar Heels from a 47-42 halftime deficit. North Carolina built a 54-49 lead at the end of the run, and steadily built a 74-62 lead with 9:19 left after Scott Williams' scored on an offensive rebound.

LaSalle pulled to within 85-80 with 2:18 left on two three-point baskets by senior guard Rich Tarr, but Kevin Madden hit a free throw and Steve Bucknall scored in the lane to give the Tar Heels an 88-80 lead.

LaSalle led by as much as nine points at 38-29, mostly on the strength of Simmons' 23 points in the first half. But in the second half, the Explorers missed five of seven shots in the first six minutes of the second half.

Williams added 19 points for North Carolina and Madden had 15.

Ferry Keys Scoring Run Lifting Duke By Virginia

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Danny Ferry scored a career-high 29 points, including nine in a 15-4 run as Duke broke open a tie game, and the No. 9 Blue Devils defeated Virginia 77-59 in the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for both schools Saturday.

Duke, with its 10th straight victory over Virginia, improved its record to 9-1 on the season. Virginia, which last beat the Blue Devils in the 1983 ACC tournament, fell to 7-7.

Ferry put Duke ahead for good on a layup, then added a tip-in and two free throws before sinking a 3-point goal with 5 seconds left in the half to give the Blue Devils a 43-32 intermission lead.

Ferry finished the half with 18 points, five assists and two rebounds.

The Cavaliers cut the lead to 10 points three times after intermission, the last at 58-48 on a 14-foot bank shot by Kennedy with 7:42 to play. But Ferry hit a short jumper and a 3-pointer as the Blue Devils moved to a 65-48 advantage at the 4:29 mark.

Ferry, a 6-10 junior forward whose previous career best was 26 points, also finished with nine assists and five rebounds.

Kevin Strickland added 11 points for the Blue Devils and Quin Snyder had 10.

Carter, Vikings Surprise 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Anthony Carter set an NFL postseason record with 227 yards receiving, and Wade Wilson threw two touchdown passes as the Minnesota Vikings humbled San Francisco's top-ranked defense with a 36-24 upset of the 49ers Saturday, earning a trip to the NFC title game.

Wilson's first touchdown pass, a 7-yarder to tight end Carl Hilton, began a 17-point outburst in the second quarter, carrying the Vikings to a 20-3 halftime lead. The 49ers, whose 13-2 regular season record was best in the league, did not allow a TD over their last three games and had not allowed a passing touchdown in their last four games.

Minnesota virtually shut down 49ers wide receiver Jerry Rice, who set an NFL record by catching touchdown passes in 13 consecutive regular-season games. He had 23 touchdowns this season, but none in this game. In fact, he caught only three passes for 28 yards.

Carter set up a field goal, one of an NFL postseason-record five in the game by Chuck Nelson, with a 63-yard gain on a reception in the second quarter. Carter caught 10 passes for his total, which broke the record of 198 yards by the Los Angeles Rams' Tom Fears in 1950. Carter also gained 30 yards on an end-around running play.

The Vikings advanced to a Jan. 17 conference title game at the winner of Sunday's Washington Redskins-Chicago Bears game. Minnesota, 8-7 in the regular season, beat New Orleans 44-10 last weekend in the NFC wild-card game after backing into the playoffs when St. Louis lost on the final Sunday of the regular season. The Vikings lost three of their last four season games.

The 49ers become the first team in a decade to fail to reach the Super Bowl after compiling the best regular-season record in the NFC. The Los Angeles Rams went to the 1980 Super Bowl with a 9-7 record after Dallas and Philadelphia went 11-5.

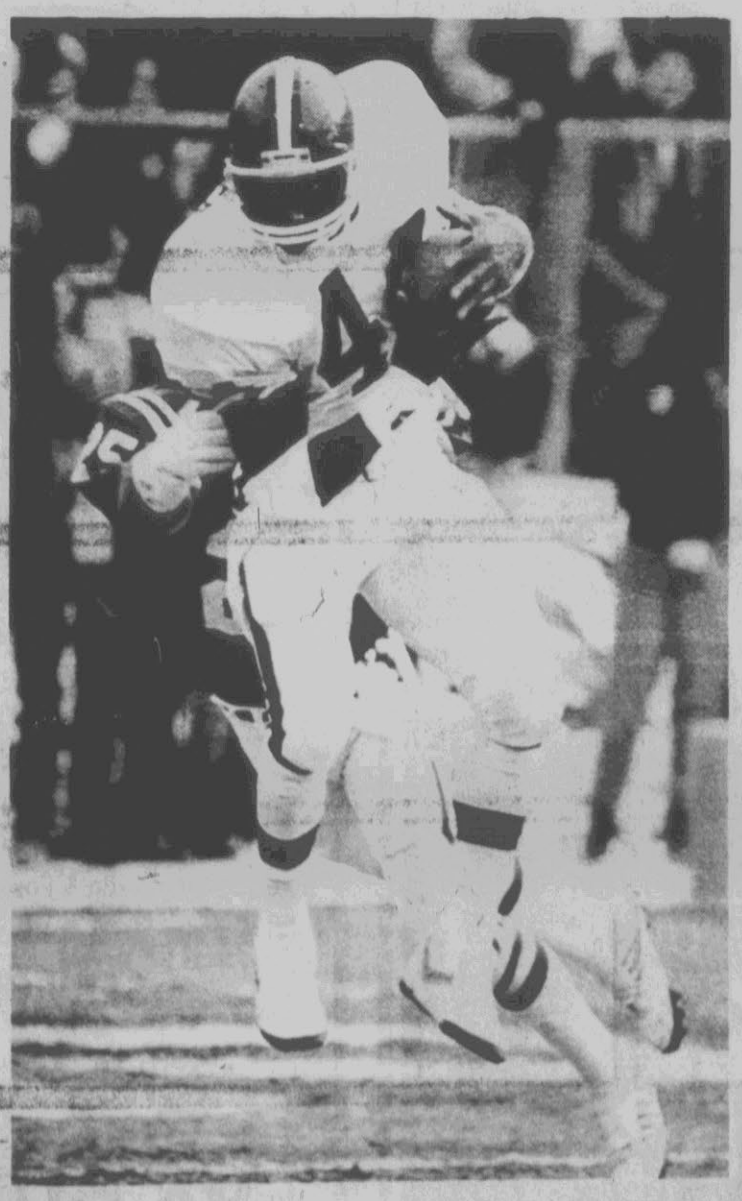

The 49ers' also ensured this will be the first Super Bowl since 1984 that won't be won by the team with the best record in the NFL. The last three Super Bowls were won by the New York Giants, Chicago Bears and the 49ers, all of whom had the best records in the league. The Los Angeles Raiders won the '84 Super Bowl with a record of 12-4, beating Washington, which was 14-2.

The Vikings' defense produced one touchdown, on Reggie Rutland's 45-yard interception return in the second period. The interception was off Joe Montana, top-ranked passer in the league this season, and Montana was pulled from the game in the second half, replaced by Steve Young. Montana completed only 12 of 26 passes for 26 yards and was sacked four times.

Young ran 5 yards for a touchdown and passed 16 yards to tight end John Frank for another.

Jeff Fuller, the 49ers' strong safety, scored his team's first touchdown with a 48-yard interception return in the opening minutes of the second half. That cut Minnesota's lead to 20-10, but the Vikings struck back with a 68-yard drive that ended with

Battling Byner

Byner Carries Browns To Win

CLEVELAND (AP) — An upset stomach turned Cleveland's two-back attack into a one-back attack, and the Browns turned back Indianapolis' upset bid Saturday in the AFC semifinals.

Former East Carolina running back Earnest Byner, carrying most of the load because Kevin Mack had a stomach ache, scored twice, and Bernie Kosar threw for three touchdowns as Cleveland beat the Colts 38-21, moving within a game of the Super Bowl for the second straight year.

Byner rushed for 122 yards on a slippery field, one on which Eric Dickerson was limited to just 50 yards in 15 carries. It was sweet revenge for Byner's role as goat in Clevland's last loss, a 9-7 decision to the Colts a month ago in which he fumbled on the Indianapolis 4 late in the game.

"That was probably the low point of my season," said Byner, who did full-time duty when Mack got sick after gaining 38 yards in six carries on Cleveland's first-quarter touchdown drive.

"After that fumble, I just rededicated myself to doing what I could do and I think I proved that today," Byner said.

Browns Coach Marty Schottenheimer concurred and so did Kosar, who was completed 20 of 31 pass attempts for 229 yards.

"I sensed all week that Earnest byner was planning on a big day," Schottenheimer said. "I think Earnest Byner would have had a big day even if he had to play all by himself."

"He's truly a competitive person and an excellent player," Kosar said. "He came in today and did a great job."

Kosar also threw a 39-yard scoring pass to Reggie Langhorne in the second quarter and a 2-yarder to Brian Brennan with 3:44 left in the game.

Cleveland, which lost the AFC championship game in overtime to Denver last year, will play the winner of Sunday's Houston-Denver game next Sunday for the conference title. If the Broncos win, the game will be in Denver. If Houston wins, it will be at Cleveland Stadium, where 78,586 fans watched the Browns beat Indianapolis in 21-degree temperatures.

Kosar and Byner got help from a defense led by linebacker Eddie Johnson, who forced an interception of Colts quarterback Jack Trudeau just as Indianapolis appeared set to take its first lead midway through the third quarter. Cleveland then marched 85 yards to the go-ahead score on Byner's 2-yard run.

"The unfortunate thing is that we came out in the second half and put a good drive together, and I feel like we're going to really put Cleveland in a bind," Trudeau said.

"Then the tide turns and all of a sudden instead of us being up 21-14, they drive down the field and it's them up instead of us."

"Our defense has had a knack for doing that all year," Schottenheimer

Lady Bucs ...

Pirates first had it and then lost it.

George Mason scored their last bucket of the half with 4:25 remaining, and then the Pirates used a tough man-to-man defense to spark a 10-point run to end the half down by three, 30-27.

The run continued in the second half as Monique Pompili had six of 14 ECU points to put her team ahead 37-32 with 15 minutes left in the game.

The Lady Pirates seemed to find the answer to the Patriot defense, scoring 12 of the points on jumpers outside the Patriot zone.

But the Pirates got cold just as quickly as they warmed up. GMU point guard Earlisha Dill scored a fast-break layup that ignited her squad with just over 13 minutes to go, and the Patriots began to chip away at the Pirate's lead.

Defensively the Patriots stiffened up while the Pirate offense crumbled. After Bethea scored a layup off an offensive rebound with 10:22 left in the game, the Pirates could only score one bucket, by Savage, in the next eight minutes.

"We turned it over a couple of times and they converted," Pierson said of the Pirates sudden loss of momentum.

By the time the dust had cleared, George Mason had a 54-48 lead behind the hustling play of forward Cindy Baruch, who scored 14 of her 18 points, including 12 in a row, to spark the Patriots. They never looked back.

The Pirates remained cold down the stretch and could do little from the free-throw line as the Patriots went 5-8 from the line in the final minutes to ice the win.

The Lady Pirates fall to 5-7 with the loss and 0-1 in the conference. They return to action Monday night in Minges Coliseum against another conference foe, James Madison University.

Trinity Takes FWBBC Title

From Staff Reports

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Trinity Christian Academy, behind the steady play of brothers Kirk and Kreston Welch defeated Mingo Christian Academy, 49-43, and captured the championship of the Free Will Baptist Bible College Invitational basketball tournament for the the third year in a row Saturday.

Trinity defeated Mingo, of Laurel, West Virginia, in the semi-final and then again in the final of the double elimination tournament.

Kirk and Kreston Welch both scored 18 points to lead Trinity while Mark Colegrave had 14 to lead Mingo.

In the final, Trinity fell behind 25-17 at the half but managed to pull within 32-27 by the end of the third quarter.

The Tigers went to a full-court press in the final period and managed to take the lead at 38-37 midway through the fourth quarter following a steal and layup by Kirk Welch off the press.

Then, Trinity hit the key free throws down the stretch to win the game. Over the last four minutes, Kreston Welch was 6-7 from the line.

The final was a far cry from the semi-final, in which Trinity blew by Mingo, 74-58, as Kreston Welch pumped in 24 points.

Mingo led 11-10 after the first quarter, but Trinity, despite the loss of center John Griffin to foul trouble, outscored Mingo, 21-11, over the second period to take a 31-22 lead into halftime.

Harrell was ably replaced by Mike Willis, a reserve who had three points on the game.

Trinity extended its lead to 47-36 after three quarter and again hit the key free throws down the stretch to gain the victory.

Gerard Fulton added 15 points for Trinity while Harrell had 13 and Griffin had 12. Kirk Welch led in rebounding with 13.

Colegrave led Mingo with 27 points.

Trinity moves to 12-1 with the wins.

Wilson's 5-yard TD pass to Haasan Jones.

Minnesota, which has reached the Super Bowl four times but never won the title, moved one step away from a fifth trip. The Vikings' point total was the highest this season against the 49ers, who outscored their last three regular-season opponents 124-7.

Nelson did not miss any field goal attempts, hitting from 21, 23, 40, 46 and 23 yards, breaking the postseason record of four in a game held by seven players. Nelson was 13-of-24 in field goal attempts this season and 1-for-8 past 40 yards.

The 49ers' Ray Wersching made a 43-yard field goal late in the first period, creating a 3-3 tie, and later missed attempts from 26 and 48 yards.

The tie-breaking TD pass from Wilson to Hilton ended a 70-yard drive. Carter gained 12 and 11 yards on two receptions, and Wilson made a 12-yard run for a first down on the play just before the touchdown.

Carter's 63-yard gain on the next scoring drive came on a pass which 49ers cornerback Don Griffin tried to intercept. The ball was tipped into the air and Carter grabbed it, then dashed about 30 yards to the San Francisco 10.

Rutland's interception, for his first NFL touchdown, came on a pass intended for Dwight Clark on a third-down play. The rookie defensive back had no interceptions in the regular season but had one of the four by the Vikings in their victory over New Orleans.

Macon Overcomes Fouls To Lift Owls Past GW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mark Macon, who had sat out most of the first half with foul trouble, scored 12 of his 22 points in the first five minutes of the second half Saturday night to rally unbeaten and sixth-ranked Temple to a 79-66 victory over George Washington in Atlantic 10 basketball.

The freshman guard hit three 3-point field goals during a 16-2 surge that opened the second half and wiped out a Colonial lead that had gotten as large as 10 points in the first half.

Senior forward Tim Perry matched a career high with 24 points and scored the only other four Temple points during the outburst that helped the Owls raise their record to 10-0 and 5-0 in the conference.

Macon hit two 3-pointers and Perry added a layup and a tip-in as Temple scored the first 10 points of the half to give the Owls their first lead since the game's opening minutes.

Perry scored 14 in the first half while Macon sat on the bench with three fouls. Mike Vreeswyk and Ramon Rivas added 14 apiece for the Owls.

Temple has now won 22 of its last 23 Atlantic 10 games dating back to last season.

George Washington, seeking to beat the Owls for the first time in five years, fell to 7-5 and 1-2 with their third straight loss.

Ellis McKennie and Gerald Jackson led five Colonial players in double figures with 16 points apiece. Glen Sitney had 12 and Mike Jones and Joe Dooley 10 apiece.

Jackson, who hit 3 three-pointers in the first half, scored seven points in a 10-0 George Washington run that put the Colonials ahead 23-13, their biggest lead, with 9:01 left in the half.

But with Macon, averaging 19.3 points coming into the game, on the bench with three fouls, Perry started moving inside to keep the Owls in the game.

Perry broke a three-minute Temple drought with a layup and scored 12 of his 14 first-half points in the final 8:36 before intermission. His five-foot jumper at the buzzer of the first half pulled the Owls within 36-32.

Stanford.....65

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Sean Elliott scored 19 points and Anthony Cook had 16 as third-ranked Arizona routed Stanford 90-65 Saturday night in Pacific-10 Conference basketball.

Arizona scored the first eight points of the game and never trailed, taking advantage of Stanford's 24 turnovers. The Wildcats lost the ball on mistakes only six times.

Arizona improved to 14-1 overall and 4-0 in the Pac-10. Stanford is 10-5 overall and 2-2 in the conference.

After the Wildcats took a 44-24 halftime lead, Stanford could come no closer than 18 points.

Cook had 12 first-half points, including three dunks, after Craig McMillan started Arizona's scoring with two free throws and a dunk.

Stanford's Todd Lichti scored 19 points, 15 in the second half.

But that was as close as it would get as the Wildcats followed with an 11-2 spurt midway through the half. Cook had two of his dunks and Harvey Mason hit a pair of jumpers, including one from the baseline with 9:16 left to put Arizona ahead 25-13.

After the Cardinal cut the lead to 27-20, the Wildcats ran off a 17-6 streak in the final 6½ minutes of the half. Elliott had seven points in the run.

N.C.-Charlotte.....87
South Alabama.....80

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Byron Dinkins scored a career-high 33 points to lead North Carolina-Charlotte to an 87-80 Sun Belt Conference victory over South Alabama Saturday night.

Dinkins' effort keyed a strong second-half performance by the 49ers, who pulled away early in the half and withstood a late rally by South Alabama.

Dinkins hit 13 of 19 field goals and the 49ers were 31 of 56 for 55.3 percent in raising their record to 9-3 and 2-0 in the league. South Alabama hit 33 of 59 field goals for 55.4 percent.

Florida Back To Winning Ways

Davis grabbed 14 rebounds and scored 16 points, both season highs, to lead the 15th-ranked Gators to an 87-70 victory over Southeastern Conference rival Georgia. Florida lost its SEC opener Wednesday at Auburn, a game in which Davis was shut out.

"We didn't want to go out and lose two straight," Davis said. "I think as a team we're back now."

Davis had nine points, nine rebounds and two dunks in the second half.

"I wanted that first dunk bad, because I knew the crowd was waiting on that," he said. "It was good to get the crowd going."

Vernon Maxwell scored 26 points for Florida, 10-4. During a 6½-minute stretch of the first half, Maxwell scored 13 points, including two 3-pointers and a slam off a fast break, as Florida went ahead 31-19.

Maxwell had shot 38 percent in his last five games.

"I wanted to show people I had the confidence to stick the ball in the hoop," he said. "I was trying to let the game come to me instead of putting pressure on myself."

The Gators were up 46-38 at halftime and led 69-61 with six minutes left before pulling away. Dwayne Schintzius hit a basket and two free throws, and Davis then made a steal and slammed home a missed shot to make the score 75-61 with 4:26 to go.

Schintzius scored 13 points and Livingston Chatman 10 for Florida.

Toney Mack scored 23 points and Willie Anderson had 17 for Georgia, 9-6 overall and 1-2 in the SEC. The Bulldogs were outrebounded 51-36.

"We didn't have the mental toughness that it takes to win," Coach Hugh Durham said. "Time after time they rebounded (their own) missed free throws, and that shows we aren't in the game mentally."

Florida Coach Norm Sloan said the 6-foot-7 Davis and 7-2 Schintzius made a nice team.

"Davis is a very exciting rebounder," Sloan said. "He's a quick jumper and has quick hands. I'm excited about the inside game of this team in terms of Schintzius and Davis working together."

Kansas.....78
Missouri.....74

Newton scored a career-high 21 points Saturday to help No. 18 Kansas to its 54th straight home-court victory, a 78-74 defeat of Missouri in Saturday's Big Eight opener for both teams.

Newton, a junior who averaged 3.2 and 3.7 points his first two seasons, has scored in double figures in each of the last three games as a replacement for Archie Marshall, who is lost for the season with a knee injury.

"Somebody's got to move up and take charge," said Newton. "I was nervous as hell. I couldn't sleep last night. When I hit that first three-pointer, I said 'uh oh.'

"I pulled out all the media guides last night and looked at (Missouri forward Derrick) Chievous' points. I knew I had to make a run at him."

Newton, who had 14 points in the first half, made eight of 10 shots and had five rebounds.

"I told the kids before the game that we couldn't worry about who we didn't have," said Kansas Coach Larry Brown after the victory over a Missouri team picked to win its second straight league title.

"We had to focus in on our team. We did the things we had to do to win. When we needed a hoop, we executed pretty darn well."

Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said the noisy crowd of 15,800 at Allen Field House may have rattled the Tigers.

"We've played six games in two weeks and, of those, four have been blowouts," Stewart said. "Also, we haven't been used to playing in a situation like this today with 15,000 people screaming.

"We need to have better execution down the stretch. We need to shoot free throws better, too."

Danny Manning had 28 points for Kansas.

The Jayhawks, 11-3, opened a 74-69 lead with 33 seconds to go on four straight points by Manning, who broke a Big Eight record by starting the 119th game of his career.

Lee Coward, who led the 9-3 Tigers with 19 points and who had beaten Kansas with last-second shots the last two times the teams met, hit his fourth 3-pointer with 25 seconds left to draw Missouri to within 74-71.

Kevin Pritchard then scored on a lay-up for a 76-71 lead and Scooter Barry sealed the victory with a pair of free throws with six seconds to go as Kansas ended the Tigers' five-game winning streak.

The two teams traded the lead for much of the second half before Kansas opened up a 66-59 advantage with 3:19 left on four free throws by Marvin Branch and a layup by Manning, who drove the length of the floor.

The Tigers rallied on a three-point play by Chievous and a pair of free throws by Doug Smith to trail 66-64 with 2:51 to play.

The Jayhawks led by nine points twice in the first half, but Missouri rallied back to trail 34-31 at halftime.

Nathan Buntin scored 17 points and Chievous had 16 for Missouri. Greg Church had 13 rebounds for the Tigers.

Michigan St.....62

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Kendall Gill scored 18 points Saturday to lead 19th-ranked Illinois to a 77-62 win over foul-plagued Michigan State in a Big Ten Conference game.

The Illini attempted 37 free throws to five for Michigan State and outscored the Spartans 23-5 at the foul line. Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote, angered at the imbalance in foul calls, drew two technical fouls for complaining to the referees.

The Illini, mired in a shooting slump, started slowly, but ended the first half by outscoring Michigan State 19-10 to take a 36-28 halftime lead.

Illinois outscored Michigan State 13-1 at the free throw line during that stretch, as the Spartans were called for 14 fouls in the first half to seven for Illinois. For the game, Michigan State was called for 26 fouls to 13 for Illinois.

Heathcote was called for his first technical foul with three minutes to go in the half and drew his second when he confronted the officials' near their dressing room at halftime.

Illinois started the second half by shooting two free throws and stretched its lead to 46-34 with 15 minutes to play.

The victory improved Illinois' record to 11-3 overall and 2-1 in the Big Ten Conference while Michigan State fell to 5-7 and 0-2.

Nick Anderson added 15 points for the Illini, Glynn Blackwell added 13 and Lowell Hamilton had 11.

Ken Redfield led Michigan State with 13 points, followed by Bobby Worthington with 12.

Oklahoma St.....80

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Dave Sieger and Stacey King each scored 26 points Saturday in leading eighth-ranked Oklahoma to a 108-80 victory over Oklahoma State in the Big Eight Conference opener for both schools.

Sieger tied his school and conference record by hitting eight 3-point shots, six of those coming in the first half on seven attempts. King, the Sooner center, took over inside in the second half when he scored 22 of his points.

The victory improved Oklahoma's record to 14-0, and marked the 11th time this season the Sooners had scored more than 100 points. Oklahoma State dropped to 6-6.

The outmanned Cowboys stayed close in the early going and trailed only 25-20 with 10:42 left before intermission. Then, Oklahoma went on a 17-4 run in three minutes to make it 42-24.

In the second half, Sieger capped a 13-2 spurt with back-to-back 3-pointers as Oklahoma took a 74-47 lead with 12:05 remaining. Sieger, who attempted only two 3-point shots after that, tied the record he set last season against Nebraska as the Sooners outscored their opponent 33-6 with 3-pointers.

King had only four points in the first half, but came alive by scoring 10 of the Sooners' first 17 points after the break. He later scored eight of 10 during a two-minute span.

Forward Harvey Grant scored 21 for Oklahoma, while Ricky Grace had 17 points and 12 assists.

Memphis State...80 (OT)

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Roy Brow converted a miss by Bimbo Coles with one second remaining in overtime Saturday to lift Virginia Tech to an 82-80 Metro Conference victory over Memphis State.

Brow hit a layup to give the Hokies an 80-78 lead with 30 seconds to play in the extra period, but Memphis State answered 12 seconds later with a layup by Dwight Boyd.

The Tigers, 8-3 overall and 0-1 in the Metro Conference, rallied from a 12-point second-half deficit to force overtime. McClain tied it at 74-74 with a 3-point goal with 42 seconds remaining in regulation.

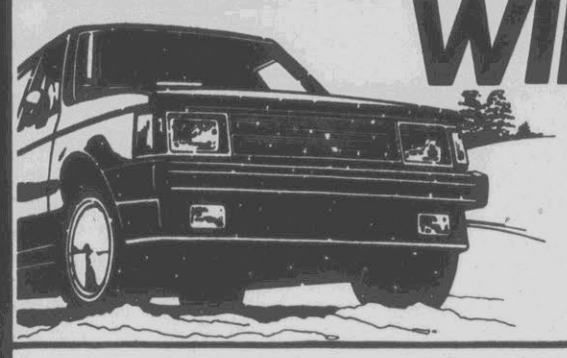

The Hokies missed an opportunity to take the lead when Boyd blocked Coles in the lane. Memphis State rebounded, but Elliot Perry misfired at the buzzer.

The Hokies, 8-3 and 1-1, used an 11-4 spurt over the final 3:05 of the first half to take a 37-28 intermision lead. They boosted the margin to 45-33 on a tip-in by Coles with 15:44 to play.

Wally Lancaster led Virginia Tech with 32 points, including five 3-pointers. Coles added 14 and Brow had 12 points and 11 rebounds.

Terps Gain Win Despite Poor Play

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — The University of Maryland won its second Atlantic Coast Conference game despite not playing well, an accomplishment that would have been beyond the Terrapins a year ago.

Rudy Archer scored 15 points and the Terps defeated Clemson 68-53 Saturday. It was a "sloppy game," according to Archer.

"We might have been tired, but give Clemson credit, I think they played well," the point guard said. "They slowed it down and then made a run. We just pulled together and did what Coach (Bob) Wade told us and came out winners."

The Terrapins committed 16 turnovers, their most in three games. However, Clemson, which had shot better than 50 percent in its last four games, made just 22 of 69 shots (31.9 percent). The Tigers made just one of 18 three-pointers.

Tony Massenburg added 14 points, Keith Gatlin and Derrick Lewis each scored 12 points and freshman Brian Williams 10 for Maryland, which improved its record to 2-0 in the ACC and 9-3 overall.

Last year, the Terps went 0-14 in the ACC and 9-17 overall.

Lewis said the Terrapins would not have won a game like this in 1986-87.

"Our team confidence is high," Lewis said. "Last year, we were just trying to be competitive, to hang in there to the end and then try and win it. We definitely would not have won (a game like this) last year. We didn't have the height or the depth."

After Clemson cut the score from 45-32 to 50-46 with less than five minutes to play, Maryland got a basket from Archer. Gatlin made two free throws and Massenburg made a layin for a 56-46 lead with 2:41 remaining.

A rebound tip-in by Clemson's Jerry Pryor and a layin by Grayson Marshall got Clemson back within 56-50. The Terps recovered again on a dunk by Dave Dickerson and two free throws by Massenburg to lead 60-50 with 1:31 to play. Clemson could get no closer than eitht points after that.

"We went up-tempo and got a crack at it," Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis said. "But we couldn't get over those four points. ... We didn't play as well as we did against North Carolina State."

Pryor led Clemson with 14 points. The Tigers fell to 0-2 in the ACC, 7-4 overall.

Sean Tyson added 12 points and Elden Campbell 10 for the Tigers

"Sean Tyson gave us a spark, earned himself some playing time. That's what we've been looking for," Ellis said. "Had we won, Sean Tyson would have been the key."

said. "The other team moves down the field and suddenly something happens and the ball pops out."

Indianapolis Coach Ron Meyer pointed to the interception as the turning point. But he added: "Cleveland's striking capability is remarkable. For them to go 85 yards down the field and score on you — well, that's discouraging."

Dickerson, who has had trouble in cold-weather playyoff games in the past, said his problem was footing on a field covered with patches of ice.

It was the fourth straight win for Cleveland, 10-5 in the regular season. The Colts won the AFC East title this year with a 9-6 record after going 3-13 a year ago.

But it wasn't easy against a team that kept reprising each Cleveland score — the Browns took 7-0 and 14-7 leads only to have the Colts come right back on the next drive to tie it.

With the Browns geared to stop Dickerson's running, the Colts relied primarily on the passing of Trudeau. Trudeau threw a 2-yard touchdown pass to Pat Beach and a 19-yard scoring pass to Dickerson as the first half ended at 14-14.

They looked looked like they might take the lead, moving from their own 14 to the Cleveland 10 with the opening kickoff of the second half. A holding call on Ron Solt set them back to the 20, then Johnson made the play that turned the game, smashing into Trudeau as he was throwing and causing the ball to flutter into the air to Cleveland's Felix Wright at the 14.

From there, Kosar completed five of seven passes for 65 yards in a drive that culminated in Byner's 2-yard score. Matt Bahr's 22-yard field goal 3:51 into the fourth quarter provided a cushion.

It was set up by a 41-yard play on which Byner ran for 25 yards and was stripped of the ball, with Herman Fontenot recovering for Cleveland at the 6.

That made the final two touchdowns meaningless.

It started out like a shootout as each side mounted long first-quarter scoring drives.

The Browns controlled the ball for the game's first 6:46, taking a 7-0 lead on Kosar's 10-yard touchdown pass over the middle to Byner. It came at the end of an 86-yard, 15-play drive on which the Browns converted all five of their third-down plays.

But the Colts, surprisingly, came out throwing as Trudeau, who finished 21-of-33 for 251 yards, drove 74 yards in 10 plays, finishing it off with a 2-yard pass to Beach, who didn't have a touchdown in the regular season. Trudeau was 5-for-5 for 59 yards on the drive.

Cleveland came right back, driving 63 yards to the Indianapolis 2. But on a third-down play 1:38 into the second period, Freddie Robinson intercepted Kosar's off-balance throw in the end zone as receiver Derek Tennell fell down to end the threat.

Both defenses settled down for most of the second quarter. But the offenses picked up in the final two minutes of the half.

On the first play after the two-minute warning, with a second-and-9 at the Colts 39, Kosar spotted Langhorne cuting all alone over the middle. Langhorne caught the ball on his fingeartips at the 8 and rolled to the 3, then got up and dove over Robinson into the end zone, giving Cleveland a 14-7 lead with 1:51 left in the half.

But following Bentley's 38-yard kickoff return, the Colts came right back, going 59 yards in seven plays to tie the score on a 19-yard pass from Trudeau to Dickerson with 42 seconds left. It was only the third TD catch of his career.

Wright's Play A Key

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland safety Felix Wright saw Jack Trudeau's deflected pass fluttering in the air and knew the game's biggest play was within reach.

"They had been marching down the field and it seemed like, defensively, we couldn't stop them," Wright said Saturday after his third-quarter interception set up the tie-breaking drive as the Browns beat the Indianapolis Colts 38-21.

The score was tied 14-14 when the Colts took the second-half kickoff and drove to the Cleveland 10-yard line in nine plays.

But a holding penalty pushed Indianapolis back to the 20, and on second-and-14, Trudeau read a Cleveland blitz and was trying to throw the ball away when he was hit by linebacker Eddie Johnson.

Barkley Gets $3,000 Fine

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia 76ers forward Charles Barkley has been fined $3,000 by the NBA club, apparently for an outburst criticizing teammates and an incident with a front-row fan in Boston, according to a report published Saturday.

Team spokesman Dave Coskey said the team would not comment on the story in the Philadelphia Daily News because "fines are considered a private matter between the ballplayer and the club." Coskey said he would not comment on any possible discipline of a player.

Barkley was ejected Dec. 29 from what became a 16-point loss to the Los Angeles Lakers. After the game, he referred to the Sixers as "a bad team," and said that "unless we play a perfect game, we can't win, and that's a bad situation to be in."

Bradley's Hawkins Owns MVC Award

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

Bradley's Hersey Hawkins is doing a pretty good imitation of Wayne Gretzky.

Hawkins was named the Player of the Week in the Missouri Valley Conference for three consecutive weeks in December. He still has a ways to go to catch Gretzky, however, as the Edmonton Oilers center was named National Hockey League Player of the Week more than 50 percent of the times the award was given last season.

Hawkins' coach, Stan Albeck, has some strong words on exactly how important to the Braves he considers the senior guard who was averaging 38.9 points through the first 10 games.

"I really don't think we're getting Hawk the ball nearly enough," Albeck said of the man who is averaging 23 shots per game. "I hear this stuff about taking the ball away from the guy who can average 40 to give it to Joe Blow and cutting Hawk off. Why? Who's to say Joe Blow is going to get you the points? Why would anyone take the ball away from a player who can do the things Hawkins can do?"

Sloan's 15-ranked Gators lost to No. 9 Duke 93-70 in the semifinals of the Fiesta Bowl Classic, then he watched Duke lose to then-No. 1 Arizona 91-85 in the championship game.

Florida followed the tournament with an 80-68 loss to No. 2 Pittsburgh last Saturday.

Asked after the game if Pittsburgh were a true Top Five team, Sloan replied: "There are about 30 teams that are good enough to be in the Top Five."

When asked to compare Arizona and Pittsburgh, Sloan answered: "I don't know about them, but I tell you this, Duke is a very good team and if they played Arizona on a neutral court, they win that game. Duke is a very good team."

Marist had just lost to St. John's in the semifinals of the ECAC Holiday Festival and Red Foxes Coach Dave Magarity's team now had to face then-No. 19 Memphis State in the game for third place.

Over the Christmas tournament crush, four other coaches felt just as Magarity did.

The only ranked team to lose to another ranked team in the first round as Memphis State did was then-No. 8 Florida which lost to No. 9 Duke before beating Michigan State in the consolation game of the Fiesta Bowl Classic.

The other Top Twenty teams to lose in the semifinals of a tournament that week were:

Iowa, ranked 14th, lost to Illinois State in the first round of the All-College Tournament before beating Oral Roberts in the consolation game. Iowa State, ranked 16th, lost to Butler in the first round of the Blade Classic before beating Navy in the consolation game. Louisville, ranked 20th, was beaten by North Carolina State in the semifinals of the Rainbow Classic before beating Mississippi State for third place.

They are called at the first dead ball following the 16:00, 12:00, 8:00 and 4:00 marks. That's eight breaks during each game not including the four possible timeouts allotted to each team and the halftime break.

In conference games this season, the Big East is following the format used for the first time last year by the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The teams are called back to the floor by two horns sounded at the scorer's table. The first horn is a warning that play will resume in 15 seconds. A second horn sounds after the 15 seconds and if the offensive team is not in position, the referee places the ball on the court and begins a five-second count. If the defensive team is not ready but the offensive team is, the referee doesn't have to wait for the players to be set, he hands the ball to the offensive team for inbounding.

The rule will be in use for conference games only or if the opposing team agrees to it as St. Bonaventure's Ron DeCarli did and it cost him four points against Syracuse. The Orangemen were handed the ball twice for easy baskets while the Bonnies were slow breaking the huddle.

Marist's 7-foot-4 senior center Rik Smits has been the object of a lot of attention this season and NBA superscout Marty Blake has labeled the native of Holland as a "lottery pick."

One college basketball commentator disagrees.

"He's 7-4 but he plays smaller than that," Bucky Waters said during Madison Square Garden Network's production of the ECAC Holiday Festival when Marist lost to St. John's and Memphis State. "I think you have to look at Smits as a long-term project, no quick fix. I wouldn't draft him in the first round."

The nation's newest Division I conference, the American South, had its first league game last Saturday night when Arkansas State beat Southwestern Louisiana 75-63.

Vols Top Vanderbilt

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Elvin Brown scored a team-high 19 points in Tennessee's 80-72 Southeastern Conference victory over Vanderbilt Saturday after the Volunteers survived a halftime deficit and rallied in the second period.

Greg Bell contributed 16 points to the Vol effort as Tennessee went to 9-1, and 2-0 in the league.

Vanderbilt, led by center Will Perdue's 22 points and 11 rebounds, dropped to 7-4 and 0-3 in the conference after watching its 36-32 halftime lead drift away.

Vol Doug Roth's jumper with 17:13 left had tied the game at 38-all, but the Commodores rebuilt their lead to 44-40 on Perdue's stuff with 15 minutes remaining.

The teams tied three times after that, until Travis Henry's shot from the top of the key with 8:22 on the clock gave Tennessee the lead for good.

Two free throws by Derrick Wilcox drew Vanderbilt as close as 59-57, but the Vols pumped their lead to 69-59 with 3-pointers by Brown and Bell and baskets by Dyron Nix and Ian Lockhart.

Maravich Funeral

Maravich Rites Held In Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Hundreds of mourners heard "Pistol Pete" Maravich eulogized Saturday as a man whose evangelical Christian zeal surpassed his love for the sport that made him a superstar.

"His last 45 minutes on this earth were spent at a church, playing basketball, which seems rather fitting," said Dr. James Dobson, who was with Maravich when the basketball legend died of heart failure Tuesday at age 40.

Maravich had just finished playing a pickup basketball game with Dobson and several other men at a Pasadena, Calif., church when he collapsed. He had traveled to California from his home in Covington, La., to tape a Christian radio show for the Focus on the Family program, a ministry directed by Dobson.

His funeral was held at First Baptist Church of Baton Rouge, not far from the Louisiana State University campus where he wowed fans with his unique brand of athletic showmanship from 1968 until 1970, when he moved on to a 10-year pro career that led to the Hall of Fame. He played with the Atlanta Hawks, New Orleans Jazz and Boston Celtics.

About 600 to 700 people braved icy winds and temperatures just above the freezing mark to attend the service. Maravich's widow Jackie, cried and put her head on the shoulder of another relative as Dobson delivered the eulogy. Their sons Jaeson, 8, and Joshua, 6, were not brought to the funeral.

"Basketball at one time was his greatest love," said Dobson. "But his greatest passion was the love of the Lord he served."

Among Maravich's LSU teammates in attendance were Rusty Bergman, Bill Whittle and Rich Hickman. Also there was Collis Temple, LSU's first black basketball player, who was recruited by Pete's father Press Maravich, then the LSU coach.

LSU's current basketball coach, Dale Brown, also was at the funeral, along with football coach Mike Archer and several members of the current basketball team. Also there were former LSU football stars Jimmy Taylor, Mike Barber, Ben Jones and Mike Anderson.

Jay McCreary, an assistant coach under Press Maravich in the late 1960s and early '70s, said after the funeral that he had maintained contact with Pete over the years. He said the death of Press Maravich of cancer last April hit the younger Maravich hard, but had strengthened the young man's Christian faith.

McCreary also said that one of Pete's career disappointment's was that he never played on a championship NBA team. "I was sorry that he never got a complement of players around him to really do something," said McCreary. "He really wanted an NBA ring."

Officiating with Dobson were the Revs. Alfred Young of Christ Temple Church and Rodney Wood of Trinity Evangelical Free Church, both of Covington.

Pallbearers included Darrel Campbell, who co-authored the book "Heir to a Dream" with Maravich, and Maravich's agent, Frank Schroeder.

Burial was at Resthaven Gardens of Memory.

Medical experts said preliminary autopsy findings could have had an undetected blockage of arteries supplying blood to his heart. Also, he could have suffered a sudden disturbance in his heart's electrical system.

Maravich had told friends he had recently suffered shoulder pains that were sometimes so intense he could barely move his arm.

He said he thought the pain was the result of neuritis, a type of inflammation, and had recently told his doctor about it. But he was never examined for the pain, because he told his physician it had cleared up.

Dr. George Beller of the University of Virginia said the shoulder pain could have been an early warning of a heart whose coronary arteries were diseased.

Maravich, a vegetarian, had also told friends he had lost about 15 pounds in recent months, dropping to around 180.

Colts' Success Keyed By Irsays

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Some people get rejected when they ask dad if they can borrow the car. All Jim Irsay wanted from his father was approval to spend more than $5 million.

Irsay says Indianapolis Colts owner Robert Irsay, who is frequently criticized for not spending to support his NFL franchise, hardly flinched when he was asked to approve the trade that brought Eric Dickerson from the Los Angeles Rams.

Dickerson, unhappy with the contract he had, signed a four-year pact with Indianapolis reportedly worth $5.6 million — a contract that has put the Colts into the NFL playoffs for the first time since 1977.

"On a national level, a lot of people feel that all of a sudden it was an overnight transition, but we've been building through the draft for a number of years," said Jim Irsay, who was given the job of Colts' general manager four years ago and directs the club's daily operations.

"When I made the Dickerson inquiries and I mentioned to him (his father) the possibility, he was excited," Irsay said. "I mentioned to him right away what it might cost us. He hesitated and thought about it for about five seconds and said, 'Jim, I won't mind paying that. He's a proven player. He's one of the best to ever play the game and I don't mind paying for something that I know is a proven commodity.'

"There was never any discussions of trying to twist his arm. I mentioned what the range would be, and I talked to the agent and we settled it at that range."

The younger Irsay says the situation was much different when they discussed signing top draft pick Cornelius Bennett, the second selection overall last year, who was unsigned when he was sent to Buffalo in October as part of the trade that brought Dickerson here.

"I don't know how many times we got in shouting matches over that contract," Irsay said of talks with his father about efforts to sign the All-American linebacker from Alabama. "His main problem with it ... is giving that kind of money to an unproven individual. It bothered him a lot."

Dickerson rushed for 1,011 yards in nine games with the Colts, helping the franchise go 9-6 in recording its first winning campaign since 1977.

"It (the turnaround) was a combination of things, but obviously when Ron Meyer came in here last year you can really look back to that and see the turnaround begin right around there," Irsay said.

The Colts were 0-13 last season when the younger Irsay decided to hire Meyer.

"I just thought that Ron Meyer is a winner. There's no question in my mind that he could come here and win with the talent we had. I felt that one of his strengths is a motivator."

Irsay also told Meyer, who had been fired as New England's coach amid charges he was unable to get along with his staff and players, that he wasn't ready to make wholesale changes.

Meyer, who ended 1986 with three victories and is 12-6 with the Colts, was considered for the job in 1985 when Rod Dowhower — the man he replaced was hired.

"I thought that he was definitely a candidate in '85," Irsay said. "But we just had Frank Kush, which was a discipline program, and I think Ron had just left New England with a lot of rumors coming from the press. I didn't think the timing was right at that time."

Irsay said he decided to investigate obtaining Dickerson, already the league's No. 10 all-time rusher after just five years, after reading about his contract demands.

"I just felt reading some quotes from (Rams' Coach) John Robinson that he had left open the door, mentioning that it (a trade) was a possibility ... From there learning about his salary demands, I felt it was something that we ought to pursue. There's no question offensively we haven't had a lot of production, we've lacked the big play potential the last few years."

He felt that the Colts could trade Bennett because the recovery of Barry Krauss from knee surgery gave Indianapolis depth at linebacker.

"We had four very outstanding linebackers and offensively we needed probably more of a boost there. If it wasn't for the Dickerson trade, Bennett would probably be here today," Irsay said. "But to get a superstar in his prime, such a rare player, who I think is the best running back ever to play the game. It was an opportunity we just couldn't pass up."

NCAA Leaders Set To Meet

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The NCAA will use its annual convention to say goodbye to the man who has led the organization for 36 years but will also find time to discuss football playoffs, bowl invitations, academic standards and scholarships.

More than 1,800 delegates representing about 650 schools will gather this week for the 82nd annual NCAA convention and its first since 1950 without Walter Byers as executive director.

Dick Schultz, who replaced the retired Byers Oct. 1, will do something his predecessor never did and deliver a "state of the NCAA" speech Sunday to kick off the five-day meeting.

Delegates will begin voting Tuesday on 163 agenda items and are scheduled to finish on Thursday. Major items include restoring five football scholarships that were taken away by vote of the 1986 convention, tightening academic requirements for athletes beyond their freshman year and deleting the rule that says schools cannot accept or be offered bowl bids until late November.

There is nothing on the agenda dealing with agents or athletes who sign with agents before their eligibility is up.

Byers, ironically, will be more visible at this convention than he ever was in 36 years as the organization's head. Monday afternoon's annual "honors luncheon," will in effect become Walter Byers appreciation day. Several speakers will recount the colorful and frequently controversial reign of the reclusive Kansas City native and present him with gifts.

Byers will conclude the activities with a "swan song" address to the organization he shaped and guided through almost four decades. He has not been available for interview since relinquishing power to Schultz and becoming "executive director emeritus," but many NCAA insiders expect him to go out with a few parting shots at old enemies.

"Walter's speech might wind up being the most quotable address of the entire convention," said one staff aide who asked not to be named.

Monday morning and afternoon will be taken up with the second leg of the national forum on college sports. Created last year by the NCAA Presidents Commission, the forum is designed to explore issues and problems leading up to the 1989 convention. This year's session will focus on economic issues and speakers will include Georgetown basketball coach John Thompson; CBS Sports President Neal Pilson; Robert Atwell, president of the American Council on Education, and Thomas J. Frericks, vice-president at Dayton University and current NCAA secretary-treasurer.

Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson will be among six former college athletes receiving the Silver Anniversary Award during Monday's luncheon. Jackson will not speak.

One of the proposals voted upon Wednesday morning would do away with the rule that says schools cannot accept or be offered bowl bids prior to the Saturday after the third Tuesday in November. The bowls themselves requested the restriction, but it has become one of the most visibly violated rules in any sport.

"If the Fiesta Bowl wants to invite Notre Dame and Penn State on the Fourth of July, they'll be free to do so," said Chuck Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association. "There is a widespread feeling that the bowls themselves have created this situation and now they should begin policing themselves."

The 63-member CFA has not lined up in support of a Big Eight-sponsored move to rescind the action by last year's convention that cut from 30 to 25 the number of football grants a school can offer in one year.

Smith To Join Tide

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama defensive coordinator Don Lindsey used to stand across the field and admire Homer Smith when they both were coaching on the West Coast.

Lindsey ran the defense at Southern Cal, while Smith was the offensive coordinator at cross-town rival UCLA. Crimson Tide Coach Bill Curry announced Friday that Smith was leaving the NFL's Kansas City Chiefs to take over Alabama's offense.

"My personal opinion is there is not a better man in college football in heading up an offense," Lindsey said of Smith, who literally wrote the book on the wishbone offense.

Smith excels in using his best weapons and plays to attack the defense at weak points, Lindsey told The Montgomery Advertiser and Alabama Journal.

"That's the same approach I have to defense," said Lindsey, who came to Alabama with Curry from Georgia Tech. "Once he evaluates the talent he has here — which won't take very long because he's got Bobby Humphrey — but after he evaluates what he has, he will use what we have to its maximum."

Winning Performance

Watson-Oppegard Take U.S. Title

Watson and Oppegard, bronze medalists at the 1987 World Championships, took their third U.S. crown in the four years they have skated together. They made the U.S. team for next month's Olympics, which will be Watson's second trip to the Games — she paired with Burt Lancon in 1984.

"We felt a little jittery," Oppegard said, "but when we got into our routine, we didn't want to hold back at all."

They couldn't. Gillian Wachsman and Todd Waggoner, the 1986 U.S.champions, were close behind and finished as runners-up for the second straight year. Natalie and Wayne Seybold, who finished third, will join them in Calgary.

"I think that's the best they've ever skated," Pauline Wailliams, Wachsman-Waggoner's coach, said. "They are showing so much more maturity."

But it wasn't quite enough, even though Watson fell on a throw-triple salchow midway through the routine. The couple also botched a combination series a few seconds later.

But a strong start and sensational finish kept Watson, of Bloomington, Ind., and Oppegard, of Knoxville, Tenn., on top.

Skating to "Finlandia" and "Madame Butterfly," Watson-Oppegard performed a perfect split-triple twist, a throw-double axel and a side-by-side double axel.

"I do hope that Peter and I give a better performance .... all I want is a clean performance at Calgary."

Wachsman, Greenwich, Conn., and Waggoner, Schaumburg, Ill., were first on two of the nine judges' cards, thanks mainly to a series of outstanding side-by-side jumps.

The Seybolds, a brother-sister tandem who were supported by a loudly cheering contingent from Marion, Ind., their hometown, edged Katy Keeley and Joe Mero, who were third in last year's nationals. The Seybolds did so despite a fall on a throw-triple lutz, their opening maneuver.

"We knew when Katy and Joe's marks came up," Natalie said, "that there was room left. All we had to do was skate our best.

Payton Has One Goal Left

Fly off the field?

Payton — the all-time NFL career rushing leader — does have a helicopter pilots license but he apparently meant fly like some kind of comic strip hero.

Just don't tell that to Bear opponents the last 13 years.

They might tell you he seemed to fly down the field on the way to rewriting the NFL's record book for rushing.

But to Payton, all those records were merely challenges to overcome, and he stayed around so long — much longer than other running backs — because he liked the competition.

"I think everybody likes to be challenged, for their skills and their talents, to be pushed to the limit," Payton told a news conference last week. "I'm no different than anybody else. I like the competition. I also like to win."

Payton leaves with 23 team records and 10 NFL records, including a career rushing total of 16,664 yards, six consecutive seasons of 1,000 or more yards rushing, and 275 yards gained in a game.

But the Bears will remember the man they call "Sweetness" for other reasons as well — as a man with a sense of humor, a man with a bruising running style and a man who set an example.

Neal Anderson, being groomed as Payton's successor, said Payton shows everyone else that "no matter how good you get, you can always improve if you keep working.'

Running back coach Johnny Roland knows the Walter Payton who sets off fireworks at training camp and clowns around in the locker room. But he also knows the Payton who works hard to keep himself in shape by running up the steepest hill he can find, and lifting weights.

"He's a source of inspiration to other running backs," said Roland, who also is a friend of Payton's and a former NFL running back. "The amazing thing is his durability."

Payton began his career with the Bears as the fourth player chosen in the 1975 NFL draft, after setting NCAA scoring records at Jackson State. His three-year contract, estimated at $150,000 a year with a bonus of more than $100,000, was the highest for a rookie in Bear history.

That first game for the Bears, he carried the ball eight times for no gain. But he finished the season with 679 yards and led the NFL with a 31.7-yard average per kickoff return.

And things only got better from there.

In 1977, Payton won the league rushing title with 1,852 yards and became the youngest player to win the Most Valuable Player award. His season included a record 275-yard game against the Minnesota Vikings.

In 1985, he rushed for 100 yards in nine consecutive games as the Bears won the Super Bowl — though he was disappointed he didn't score a touchdown in the finale.

He has rushed for 100 or more yards in 77 games, and is known as a great receiver and an even better blocker who would get you before you got him.

But this season, at 33, Payton was faced with a different challenge — the realization that time was catching up with him. He seemed to be less effective — slower, though not weaker.

"A lot of times I feel I don't even belong here," a distraught Payton told the Chicago Sun-Times in November.

"He went through mood swings," Roland said, "I'm sure probably in the sense that he was coming to a realization that this was his last year.

"And now he's faced that fact. And now we're involved in the playoffs and it's another three-game season and hopefully ... we have a chance to go back to the big one. That would be the crowning glory of his career."

"He's still running with wreckless abandon. He's not shying away from contact," Roland said. "That's not his style.

"I think he probably thinks he can still play, physically, but we've got some young kids ready to assume a more important role and he just felt, in his own mind, that it was time."

But it will be a long time before people stop talking about Walter Payton.

"I think that when God chose the running backs," Roland said, "he looked down at Walter Payton and said 'you're the guy.' And Walter said 'all right.'"

HAS STORY READY

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bob Boone, the veteran California Angel catcher, has a quote ready for his grandchildren when the time comes. Boone set a major league record for games caught in the 1987 season.

The day he reached a new record, 1,919 games, he said afterward: "Someday when I'm with my grandkids I'll be able to tell them that not only did I set a record for games caught but also for aspirins swllowed to relieve aches and pains."

Glanville Is Planning On Super Bowl

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

You can usually spot a Super Bowl team coming a mile away, or at least a season or two away.

They usually learn how to win by losing in the earlier rounds of the playoffs, building on defeats and adding experience until it all blends together into a Super Bowl team.

That's what makes Jerry Glanville and the Houston Oilers so interesting. No one saw the Oilers coming and Glanville is saying things coaches don't usually say in these situations.

"We've got two more to go," Glanville said. "We're going to San Diego. We're going to the Super Bowl."

Not since Joe Namath guaranteed the New York Jets' longshot victory over the Baltimore Colts in Super Bowl III had anybody gone quite so overboard for his football team quite so quickly. Certainly not a coach.

The language of the coaching fraternity is usually designed to attract as little attention as possible. Glanville, emotional and excited, was having none of that, thank you. He was, instead, climbing out on the limb just about as far as he could go.

That's heady stuff for an outsider team like the Oilers, who continue their playoff quest Sunday in Denver. This is a team that until last Sunday had not won a playoff game since 1979 and never come closer to Super Sunday than a television set.

The NFL title game thrives on regularity. Even though the 1983-84 Washington Redskins are the only division winner to repeat in this decade, Super Bowl teams are traditionally clubs that suggest for a year or two that they are ready to make that quantum leap to the next level, and then, almost predictably, get there.

"You don't know what it takes because you've never been there," said Bob Griese, who quarterbacked the Miami Dolphins into three straight Super Bowls. "You're like an explorer on uncharted ground. "The year before we went the first time, we had an outstanding year. The following year, we beat Kansas City in the longest game and then we went to the Super Bowl and got killed by Dallas.

"The following year, we left no margin for error. We figured a win every week might do it. We were 16-0 and people were still picking the Redskins in the Super Bowl."

Miami's 14-7 victory capped the perfect season.

"The Super Bowl is tougher the first time," Griese said. "When you go back, you know what to expect and that makes it much easier. I remember falling asleep on the bus going to practice and that's something I never did."

Griese said the experience of reaching the playoffs gives a team like New Orleans something to build on for next season.Next year, however, will not be soon enough for Houston's exhuberant Glanville.

Enthusiasm can carry outsider teams a long way said Dick Vermeil, who coached the Philadelphia Eagles to their first and only Super Bowl appearance in 1981 — the season after Houston's last playoff game.

"Part of getting to the Super Bowl is mental," Vermeil said. "It's something that grows all year. We grew into it over a three-year period.

"We weren't a dominating team like the Giants were last year or Chicago the year before. We had to play to our ultimate each Sunday. We couldn't coast."

The Eagles won their division that season on points, finishing with the same 12-4 record as the perennial champion Dallas Cowboys. Before the season, Vermeil had set targets for his team and he said the Super Bowl was not on the agenda.

"That year, our number one thing was to win the NFC championship," the coach said. "We had been a wild card team and lost and then we had been a wild card team and won. Our goal the third year was to get to the NFC championship and win it. We never talked about the Super Bowl."

So, when the Eagles beat Dallas 20-7 in the NFC title game, they had achieved all they set out for that season. Once past the Cowboys, Philadelphia reached the Super Bowl where the outsider Eagles came up short against the Oakland Raiders. That Raider club remains the only wild card team to win the Super Bowl.

Glanville, however, didn't say anything about winning the Super Bowl. He said only that his wild card Oilers would get there.

Vermeil admired Glanville's enthusiasm but he wondered about the propriety of carrying on that way after just one playoff game.

"You should never make a statement you don't believe will happen because if you do that often enough, you lose credibility with your players," he said. "You pick and choose until you have a strong feeling. It's got to be more than impulse. You have to make that judgment in your own mind. I told our team we would win every game we won that Super Bowl season because I honestly felt we would.

"We believed all season we could reach that goal of the NFC championship because we had been so close the year before. It was like a step ladder. We had taken one step, then two steps. We were ready for three."

But not four.

"The year after playing in the Super Bowl, we wanted to be world champions," Vermeil said. "We won six straight at the start of the season."

A four-game losing streak at the end balanced that, however, and the Eagles came into the playoffs as a wild card again. This time they were eliminated by the Giants 27-21 in a game Philadelphia trailed 14-0 before it touched the football.

The Eagles dipped to 3-6 the next year, Vermeil's last season, and have not been over .500 or back to the playoffs since.

"When we got to the Super Bowl, we were on an emotional roll," Vermeil said. "But we were not quite physically good enough to withstand the constant pressure a Super Bowl team faces."

Every Super Bowl team in this decade has learned about that pressure, which may explain why champions don't repeat. Now Jerry Glanville would like the Houston Oilers to get a dose of it, too. He may have unwittingly supplied it himself, however, by planning out his young team's January itinery, right up to and including Super Sunday.

Frustrated Boz Looks Ahead

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Seahawks linebacker Brian Bosworth says expectations that he would be a "Superman" made his rookie pro football season frustrating for him, but that he's had "a great time in Seattle" and looks forward to next year.

Bosworth, drafted by Seattle last spring after playing at the University of Oklahoma, broke a self-imposed silence Friday and talked of "maybe laying a clean slate for next year."

He said some of his comments during the season had been misunderstood, and that he had stopped talking to reporters because he was trying to learn his position on the team.

"I felt, 'Why should I be talking when I'm still learning the system?'" he said.

Bosworth, known for his flamboyant style, colorful hairdos and his nickname of "The Boz," said he was misinterpreted in one widely quoted newspaper article, which quoted him as blaming the coaches and some teammates for making him unhappy and taking the fun out of football.

"It seemed like there were more people against me than there were for me," he said Friday. "I'd never had that situation before. I felt like I was on an island by myself. I never meant that I was unhappy with the coaches or my teammates.

"I've had a great time in Seattle."

Bosworth said Coach Chuck Knox and other coaches "knew I was frustrated. I was 22 years old and wooed into a situation, one where everyone expects you to be Superman. Those first few games, I was so pressured, or felt so pressured. For the first seven or eight games, I was completely lost out there."

He said he found a friend in Keith Butler, who lost his starting job to the rookie from Oklahoma.

"Without Keith, it would have been a much longer season for me," Bosworth said.

He said he felt he was blamed for much of what went wrong with the Seahawks. Seattle was expected to be a Super Bowl contender this year, but finished the season at 9-7 after losing to the Houston Oilers in the first playoff round.

"I knew what I was capable of doing coming into the season," he said. "I remember the first seven or eight games, I was completely lost out there most of the time. Things weren't clicking the way they used to. They started to click a little more regularly toward the end of the season."

Bosworth said Butler warned him that would happen, but that he figured "it's not supposed to happen to me."

The strike hurt the team, said Bosworth, "and definitely killed me for the next three or four games."

"That's where the misconception comes into play," he commented. Local fans "are definitely mountain people. People that are real simple. You don't have any real complex people who try to analyze everything. That's the good thing about it, because that's pretty much the same kind of community I came from back in Oklahoma."

Bosworth said he would be able to look back and "laugh real hard" at his rookie season. "And hopefully it will be better next year."

McCartney To Stay Put

DALLAS (AP) — Colorado Coach Bill McCartney changed his mind at the last minute Saturday night and turned down Southern Methodist's offer to rebuild a Mustang football squad decimated by a pay-for-play scandal.

McCartney had earlier indicated he would accept SMU's offer to become head coach, but suddenly changed his mind, SMU Athletic Director Doug Single said. The Colorado coach called a press conference in Denver for Saturday night.

NBA Players Talking Boycott?

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The NBA Players Association made its first bold move at the All-Star Game in Boston 24 years ago this month.

The players, including Bill Russell, Jerry West, Elgin Baylor, Wilt Chamberlain and Oscar Robertson, voted to boycott the game unless they were given a pension plan by the owners.

Nearly an hour after the game was scheduled to start, the owners agreed to a plan and the game was played.

Next month in Chicago, two days before the All-Star game on Feb. 7, player representatives and All-Stars will meet again. Another All-Star strike vote is a distinct possibility.

Larry Fleisher, general counsel for the union in 1964 and today, said an All-Star strike is one of several options open to the players. The union and the NBA owners are deadlocked over the issues of free agency, the existence of the college draft and the salary cap system.

A federal court trial that could decide these issues will start in the next few months, and Fleisher is even considering disbanding the union to rob the NBA of antitrust violations exemptions earned through collective bargaining.

But the most immediate option for the players is the potential of striking the All-Star Game.

"A strike could be an effective weapon in getting this thing settled," said Denver's Alex English, a six-time All-Star and an NBAPA vice president. "It's something we're strongly considering. I think everyone would go along with it if that's what we decide to do.

"It would get the message across to the NBA owners. They have a contract with CBS to do the game and it's something they do not want to tarnish."

English said the idea has not been discussed with many rank-and-file players. Several possible All-Star selections said they had not heard about the possible strike.

"I haven't heard anything yet," Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, a 17-time All-Star, said. "I don't know what's at stake yet. Once you know what's at stake, you can figure out what's in your best interest. I've got to wait until I get more information."

"It's the first I've heard about it," said Golden State's Ralph Sampson, a three-time All-Star. "I don't know what's going on with the Players Association. I'm sure if they decide to boycott the All-Star game, it's a negotiating tactic.

"I know it would take a little away from the fans. But it's a business. You do what you have to do."

"I haven't heard anything about this," said Clyde Drexler, one of the NBA's leading scorers this season. "I guess we're a little disorganized."

Boston's Kevin McHale, a three-time All-Star who admitted he is not a strong union advocate, said an All-Star strike is a bad idea.

"The NBA has a very good image now and there are a lot of good young players and superstars," McHale said. "It's a good product and to go on strike now would hurt. It's a no-win situation."

Fleisher said that union solidarity has been helped along by the owners in the past.

"It's a good thing the owners do enough silly things to let the players recognize the importance of the union," Fleisher said. "The way they've cheated on the right of first refusal helps a lot. The fact that they've been egregiously selfish helps."

Magic Johnson, a perennial All-Star and always among the leading vote-getters in fan balloting for the All-Star game, said it would be a group decision about whether to strike next month's game.

"If that's what we decide as a group, it's a good idea," said Johnson, the Los Angeles Lakers' player representative.

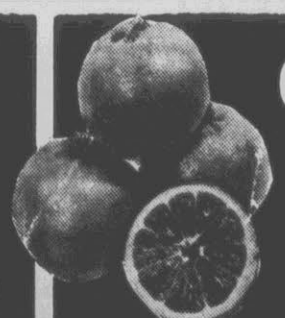

"The All-Star game is a big game for everybody. It means a lot, so we have to make a statement of where it's going to hurt the most. We can boycott, and if that's not enough, we'll do something else."

Scott, Lakers Ruling NBA

Thanks to Byron Scott, the Los Angeles Lakers are lording it over the rest of the NBA.

Scott, averaging 29 points in his last six games, scored 35 Friday night as the Lakers won for the 13th consecutive time, 106-104 over the Detroit Pistons. A crowd 40,278 at the Pontiac Silverdome, the largest in the league this season, saw the Pistons lose for the fourth time in six games after a 10-game winning streak.

"Every shot I take I feel I'm going to make," said Scott, whose recent hot streak has boosted his average to 20.1 points per game.

"Oh, yeah, we're looking for him," said Magic Johnson, who scored 21 points for the Lakers. "Especially when he's rolling like he's rolling now. He's on a streak that's unreal."

"Byron has been awesome," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "This is the 13th straight game where you could almost say he's been the best player on our team."

Elsewhere, it was Boston 125, Washington 109; New Jersey 118, New York 111; Philadelphia 117, Los Angeles Clippers 103; Atlanta 101, Cleveland 97; Utah 111, Milwaukee 107; and Portland 98, Sacramento 91.

The Lakers trailed 56-45 at halftime, then outgunned Detroit 41-24 in the third quarter as Scott scored 16 points and Johnson 12 in the period.

"We lost the game in the third quarter," Detroit's Dennis Rodman said: "We had this game. We had an 11-point lead. It's frustrating when you lose one like that. Things weren't falling for us."

The Pistons, led by 25 points apiece from Joe Dumars and Adrian Dantley, regrouped in the fourth quarter and led 100-99 before the Lakers scored six consecutive points to take the lead for good. A basket by Johnson made it 101-100 with 2:15 left, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar made a free throw and Michael Cooper followed with a 3-point goal for a 105-100 advantage with 1:16 left.

Dumars hit a jumper and Bill Laimbeer a layup to cut the deficit to 105-104 with 35 seconds left. After Abdul-Jabbar missed a shot, Detroit had an opportunity to win the game, but Laimbeer missed a jumper with two seconds left.

Celtics 125, Bullets 109

Washington outscored Boston 43-28 in the second quarter, but the Celtics rallied as Larry Bird scored 35 points and Kevin McHale 31.

Danny Ainge, who scored nine points in the fourth quarter, tied the score 98-98 with a 3-pointer, extending his NBA record to 14 consecutive games with at least one 3-point goal, and then put Boston ahead to stay with a jumper. The Celtics pulled away in the final 8½ minutes with a 30-11 spurt.

The Bullets, losing for the sixth time in seven games, were led by Jeff Malone with 31 points and Moses Malone with 24.

Hawks 101, Cavaliers 97

Atlanta won for the seventh time in eight games, beating Cleveland behind Dominique Wilkins' 34 points.

Phil Hubbard, who led the Cavaliers with 17 points, hit a layup with 1:13 left to cap a 17-10 rally that cut an 89-80 deficit to two. The Hawks then missed two shots, giving Cleveland a chance to tie, but Atlanta forced a 24-second possession violation.

Jazz 111, Bucks 107

Utah won its fourth road game in 17 tries as Karl Malone scored 29 points and Kelly Tripucka added a season-high 25 against Milwaukee.

The Jazz went from a 91-91 tie to a 104-97 lead with a 13-6 run featuring a 3-pointer from Tripucka and six straight points from Thurl Bailey.

The Bucks scored the next five points to pull within two at the 1:22 mark before a jumper by Tripucka and a hook by Malone made it 108-104 with 21 seconds left.

Blazers 98, Kings 91

Portland held Sacramento to 31 points in the first half, but needed 21 second-half points from Clyde Drexler to beat the Kings.

Drexler, who finished with 35 points, had six of the Trail Blazers' 10 points in the opening minutes of the final period as they took an 84-69 lead with 9:08 left.

Mike McGee, who scored 27 points for Sacramento, and Otis Thorpe, who added 24, led a rally that brought the Kings back to a 90-83 deficit with 3:12 remaining. McGee had five points and Thorpe four during the 14-6 spurt, but Sacramento could get no closer than seven.

The Clippers' Norris Coleman tied the score 73-73 with 4:02 left in the third period, but Barkley scored 10 points during a 12-0 spurt. The 76ers finished the quarter by scoring 19 of the last 24 points, including a 47-foot hook shot by Gerald Henderson at the buzzer that gave Philadelphia a 92-78 lead.

Nets 118, Knicks 111

John Bagley scored 12 of his season-high 31 points in the final 5:39 as New Jersey snapped a four-game losing streak and won for only the sixth time in 30 games.

New York led 93-89 midway through the fourth quarter, but Bagley sandwiched a three-point play around jump shots by Mike Gminski as the Nets scored seven straight points to take a 96-93 lead.

The Knicks, who got a season-high 31 points from Patrick Ewing, never led again. Gminski had 23 points and 12 rebounds and Buck Williams 23 points and 13 rebounds for the Nets.

Sikma Free Throws: Awkward, Effective

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Jack Sikma, who leads the NBA in free-throw percentage after hitting 130 of his first 135 this season, has an awkward-looking follow through at the foul line that actually is part of the secret of his success.

After Sikma's behind-the-head release of the ball, he lunges across the line and looks off-balance in doing so.

"It's something people who don't know a lot about basketball kind of laugh at," Milwaukee Coach Del Harris said. "When he falls over the line, some people look at that as a mistake. But that's the key to it all.

"His whole body is following the shot. If you could project it, you'd see the ball go through the basket and then the guy's whole body following the ball right through."

"I'm just staying with the shot, not quitting," Sikma said.

Sikma, a career 83.7 percent free-throw shooter, has a career-best of 86.4 in 1985-86. He said summer practice and concentration are the keys to his improvement, which started late last season.

"I set the trend in the second half of last season when I shot about 90 percent and then shot them well in the playoffs," Sikma said.

Dallas' Detlef Schrempf, second to Kiki Vandeweghe in 3-point shooting last season and second to Larry Bird in the NBA long distance shooting contest, missed 12 of his first 13 3-point attempts in 1987-88.

Despite his high standing in 1986-87, he finished with a 2-for-12 slump, which means he was on a 3-for-25 skein.

Karl Malone of the Utah Jazz has the most dunks in an NBA game this season with seven.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was born on April 16, 1947, the date of the first championship series game in NBA history. Philadelphia beat Chicago 84-71 and went on to win the league's first title.

When Chicago's Charles Oakley made a list of his favorite opponents recently, it was not hard to see why he is leading the NBA in rebounders.

The list, board-bangers all, included Moses Malone of Washington, Atlanta's Kevin Willis, Philadelphia's Charles Barkley, Buck Williams of New Jersey, Karl Malone of Utah and Boston's Kevin McHale.

Rookie Mark Jackson has gotten plenty of attention for averaging nearly 10 assists a game despite falling to the 18th spot in the NBA draft.

Hardly anyone seems to have noticed that the NBA assist leader, Terry Porter of Portland, lasted until the 24th pick of the 1985 draft.

"He's a lot better than anyone anticipated," said Don Nelson, Golden State's executive vice president. "His court sense is better than we anticipated."

Antoine Carr, who signed a seven-year, $4.4 million offer sheet with Boston that was matched by the Atlanta Hawks, has a soft spot in his heart for the Celtics because they solidified his future.

"Boston did something for me that no other team did," the 6-foot-9 forward said. "They gave me a chance to know what I'm going to be doing for the next seven years. They helped me out. If there's ever anything I can do to help them out, besides losing a game, they should just let me know."

While Carr's autumn was splendid, he started the winter off badly.

He was ejected from Atlanta's game at Philadelphia on Christmas night when he broke a backboard in pregame warmups, then wrecked his 1979 Mercedes the following night. A few days later, he was injured in Chicago.

Fines Are Given Out

NEW YORK (AP) — Buck Williams of the New Jersey Nets and Terry Catledge of the Washington Bullets were fined for fighting in a game between the two teams in Landover, Md., Tuesday night, the NBA said Friday.

Williams, was fined $5,000 for starting the fight and throwing several punches, NBA vice president Rod Thorn said. Catledge was fined $2,000 for throwing punches and "escalating the altercation," Thorn said in a statement released by the NBA.

Free Agents Reach Their Deadline

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Smith is home in Houston, Atlee Hammaker is staying in San Francisco while Bill Gullickson has a yen to play in Japan.

They were among the six free agents Friday who faced a midnight deadline to either re-sign with their teams or seek other opportunities.

Smith, Danny Darwin and Larry Andersen settled with Houston and Hammaker remained with the Giants, all with two-year contracts.

Gullickson of the New York Yankees and John Candelaria of the New York Mets did not re-sign and cannot return to their clubs until May 1, and they may soon be elsewhere.

Gullickson was on his way to Japan to sign a two-year, $3.3-million package with the Tokyo Giants. There is speculation that Candelaria is trying to work out a deal with the Yankees.

Friday night lacked the drama of last year's rush when stars Andre Dawson, Tim Raines, Lance Parrish, Bob Horner went past a similar midnight deadline and tested the free-agent market. This time, Smith, one of baseball's best relievers, was the only prominent player whose future was uncertain.

Early in the evening, the Astros announced Smith, along with Darwin and Andersen, had re-signed. Houston also said it signed Joaquin Andujar for one season, extended Mike Scott's contract one year through 1989 and signed Denny Walling for two years.

"With a deal of this size, it's difficult to know where to begin," Astros General Manager Bill Wood said. "You can't minimize the importance of any of the players involved."

Smith, who made $700,000 last season, signed a two-year, $2.2-million contract with an option for 1990 at $1.1 million. The Astros must pay him $250,000 if they do not pick up his option.

Smith wanted a three-year contract at $1 million per season. The Astros had offered a two-year deal at $900,000 each season.

Smith, who turns 33 in two weeks, had 24 saves and a 1.65 earned run average. He was 2-3 in 50 games.

On Thursday, Smith met with the Oakland Athletics and threatened to leave the Astros if they did not offer more money.

Gullickson's departure stung the Yankees, whose primary need is pitching. They bolstered their offense by signing free agent Jack Clark on Wednesday, but lost a pitcher when Gullickson decided to go to Japan.

"The offer from Japan will take care of my family for life," Gullickson said. He, his wife and his agent Doug Baldwin were expected in Tokyo today tpo meet with officials of the Tokyo Giants.

"I'm a pretty adventurous person. I think I might enjoy it," Gullickson said. "I'll be 30 when my two years are up and I can still resume my career in the big leagues after that."

The Yankees acquired Gullickson in a mid-season trade from Cincinnati for left-hander Dennis Rasmussen. He was 10-11 for Cincinnati and 4-2 for the Yankees.

Yankees General Manager Lou Piniella confirmed that the team's final offer was $900,000 per season — a $50,000 pay cut.

"I got an indication yesterday from the agent that he wanted us to revise our figures upward by one-third, from $900,000 to $1.2 million," Piniella said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press from his home Friday night. "We felt at the time, as we do now, that we've got what we consider our best offer."

Piniella said he had not spoken with Gullickson or his agent, Doug Baldwin, on Friday. "He (Baldwin) did not even extend the courtesy to return my call." The Yankees recently re-signed reliever Dave Righetti to a three-year, $4.3-million contract. Righetti had turned down a multimillion-dollar contract with the Tokyo Giants.

Darwin, in Houston's starting rotation for most of the season, signed for $760,000 for this season and $775,000 for 1989. Andersen's contract is for $450,000 this season and $425,000 in 1989. Smith, Darwin and Andersen got incentives in their contracts.

Darwin and Andersen helped fill out Houston's staff. Darwin was 9-10 with a 3.59 ERA as a starter and Andersen went 9-5 and five saves and a 3.45 ERA.

Scott's extension was worth $1.3 million, Andujar signed for $450,000 and Walling got $575,000 for 1988 and $615,000 for 1989.

Hammaker, who rebounded from shoulder surgery and went 10-10 last season, signed a two-year contract for $650,000 in 1988 and $675,000 in 1989.

Candelaria waited until a few minutes before midnight to tell the Mets he had decided not to re-sign. Candelaria said he was considering another opportunity and it may be the Yankees. Candelaria was 8-6 for California and 2-0 for the Mets last season.

"We are surprised and disappointed," Mets vice president Joe McIlvaine said. "We thought we had a deal."

Piniella said, "I had two or three conversations with Candelaria today. But we didn't make an offer."

Andujar, 35, became a free agent when Oakland decided not to re-sign him after the season ended. The former 20-game winner with St. Louis was 3-5 with a 6.08 ERA for the Athletics during another injury-plagued year.

"If he returns to his form of a year and a half ago, we have an All-Star caliber pitcher," Wood said.

Scott, the 1986 National League Cy Young winner, went 16-13 with a 3.23 ERA in 1987. Houston insured he will stay for at least two more years.

The Astros "recognized the fact that he has been one of the finest pitchers in baseball over the past three seasons," Wood said.

Walling batted .283 with five home runs and 33 RBI.

Elsewhere, St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog is not thrilled with the idea of signing Bob Horner. The Cardinals and Horner began talking Thursday, one day after Jack Clark signed with the Yankees.

"I don't like Horner," Herzog said. "Of his lifetime homers, about 70 percent were hit in Atlanta. He never could hit in St. Louis. He can't hit and he can't field."

However, Cardinals General Manager Dal Maxvill said Friday that the team may sign Horner if his salary demands are not too high.

"It depends on what we would have to pay him," Maxvill said. "When people hear you're interested in a free agent, they think you're ready to pay him $2 million, but this is not the case. If the price were right, we'd have to show some interest."

WAC Showing Some Strength

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Coach Benny Dees says his fifth-ranked Wyoming Cowboys are not the only Western Athletic Conference team worthy of a spot in the Top 20, and Texas-El Paso is at least providing him with a bona fide argument.

"The WAC has four teams that belong there: Wyoming, UTEP, New Mexico and Brigham Young," Dees said after his Cowboys were upset Friday night by Texas-El Paso, 68-62 in the WAC opener for both teams.

The game was the only contest involving a ranked team. Snow caused postponment of three of the only seven scheduled Division 1-A games.

Tonight, it will be No. 1 Kentucky vs. Auburn, No. 2 Pittsburgh vs. No. 20 St. John's, No. 3 Arizona vs. Stanford, No. 4 North Carolina vs. La Salle, Wyoming at New Mexico, No. 6 Temple at George Washington, No. 7 Syracuse vs. Seton Hall, No. 8 Oklahoma vs. Oklahoma State, No. 10 Purdue vs. No. 16 Iowa, No. 11 Michigan vs. Minnesota, No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas vs. California-Irvine, and No. 17 Iowa State at Dayton.

Afternoon games were No. 9 Duke at Virginia, No. 15 Florida vs. Georgia, No. 18 Kansas vs. Missouriand No. 19 Illinois vs. Michigan State.

Wyoming, 11-1, wasa lwedf by Eric Leckner with 22 points. Tim Hardaway led UTEP with 18 points.

UTEP became the WAC's second giant-killer in a week by beating Wyoming. Last Saturday, New Mexico defeated then-No. 1 Arizona 61-59.

The Miners, 12-2, used a stingy, man-to-man defense to slow Wyoming's tempo and keep the ball from scoring leader Fennis Dembo. The strategy worked, as Wyoming committed several costly turnovers in the final minutes and Dembo shot 4-for-15 for just nine points.

"Our strategy was not to let Eric Leckner get the ball and not to let Fennis Dembo snowball. When Dembo gets going he's unstoppable," said UTEP assistant coach Norm Ellenberger, who coached the week's practices to allow coach Don Haskins to recover from a bronchial infection. "We did fairly well in those departments."

The Miners did the best they could against Leckner, a 6-foot-11 center. He was the only Cowboy to shoot any free throws, making six of eight attempts. Willie Jones scored 15 points for Wyoming and Reggie Fox added 10.

Dembo began the game with a 3-pointer from the top of the key, but was limited to two field goals thereafter. Terry Stallworth and Chris Sandle guarded him and rarely let him have the ball inside 3-point territory.

"Stallworth did a good job on me," said Dembo, who led the Cowboys with 10 rebounds and three assists. "The crowd got on me and it should have, the way I played. I didn't do anything worthwhile all night."

Sandle scored 16 points for the Miners. Chris Blocker scored 12 and Stallworth had seven.

The Miners saw their 31-27 halftime lead evaporate when Jones sank a layup with 8:01 to go to put the Cowboys ahead 51-49. Four minutes later, with Wyoming ahead 58-54, Hardaway shot a 3-pointer, then stole the inbounds pass and drove in for a layup to give the Miners their lead for good at 59-58.

Haskins said he was not surprised by the victory.

"It's hard to win on the road in the WAC," he said. "I still think they (Wyoming) will do well."

Bears Are Banking On A Miracle From McMahon

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim McMahon gets the opportunity to prove if he truly is the miracle man of the Chicago Bears when they play the Washington Redskins in the NFC semifinals on Sunday.

Although he has had his share of heroics in coming back from injuries, McMahon has been involved in the playoffs only once and that was in 1985 when he led the Bears to the Super Bowl championship.

McMahon missed the last seven games of 1984 and the playoffs because of a kidney laceration. He was sidelined last year with a shoulder injury when the Redskins eliminated the Bears 27-13 in a game in which Doug Flutie started at quarterback.

McMahon, who has won 28 of his last 29 starts, has missed the last three regular season games because of a pulled hamstring but says he is ready.

"I don't think I've ever been 100 percent," said McMahon, whose teammates seem to rise to the occasion along with their cocky quarterback. And Coach Mike Ditka isn't averse to making positive predictions when McMahon is able to play.

McMahon's talents have not gone unnoticed by the Redskins who worked hard this past week in an attempt to stifle McMahon.

"The mark of great quarterbacks is to make the most out of something when something's not there and he seems to be a great playmaker," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said. "He's been that way since he was in college. He just seems to be a winner."

Gibbs remembers the last time McMahon faced the Redskins. That was in 1985 when the Redskins took a 10-0 lead only to have McMahon throw three touchdown passes and catch another touchdown pass in a 45-10 rout.

But McMahon remains a question mark as to how long he'll be able to go in a game that will be played under frigid conditions, at best, in Soldier Field. The city has been under a sub-zero wave most of the week. But a warming trend developed over the weekend and the temperature could climb over 20 degrees Sunday. Swirling winds, always present in Soldier Field, still could pull the wind-chill factor to below zero.

"When it's cold and the wind is blowing, you're not going to throw (the ball) too much," McMahon said. "But when you throw it, you'd better throw it right. Any little thing can backfire on you, in this weather, especially."

McMahon also realizes he will be under added pressure because much is expected of him, especially from the fans.

"I suppose there's going to be a lot of pressure but it's nothing to the pressure I put on myself," McMahon said.

Doug Williams will carry the pressure and do the throwing for the Redskins instead of Jay Schroeder who led the Redskins to their playoff victory over the Bears last season.

Williams has been effective in rescuing Schroeder and did it again in the final regular season game when he rallied the Redskins from a 10-point deficit to a 27-24 overtime victory.

The ability of the 6-foot-4, 220-pound Williams to avoid sacks was a factor in Gibbs' decision to start the former Tampa Bay star.

"I think he's led the NFL in fewest sacks twice," said Gibbs, once Tampa Bay's offensive coordinator. "I think he's hard to sack because he's so big and because he has a real good arm."

If the weather is too brutal and blustry for a passing game, the spotlight could turn to running backs George Rogers of the Redskins and Walter Payton of the Bears.

Rogers has not had a good year because of injuries and totaled only 613 rushing yards. Payton, the NFL's all-time rushing leader with 16,726 yards, had only 533 yards this year mainly because the Bears had to abandon their running game after falling behind.

Rogers appears to have recovered from his most recent injury, a sore back, and Payton will have fullbacks Matt Suhey and Calvin Thomas blocking for him instead of Neal Anderson who has been ruled out of the game because of a sprained knee.

Missing for the Redskins will be wide receiver Art Monk who also is out with a knee injury.

Exuberant Oilers Readying For Denver Playoff Test

DENVER (AP) — The last time these teams met in a non-strike game, in 1985, the Houston Oilers spent most of the day walking backward. They were whistled for a whopping 188 yards in penalties.

The Oilers haven't changed their exuberant style of play that much, but they do hope for a change of direction when they visit Mile High Stadium for Sunday's divisional playoff game with the Denver Broncos.

"They had a lot of penalties that I think resulted from immaturity," Reeves said. "They were trying to intimidate us. Some of their penalties were the result of just too much enthusiasm — late hits, offsides, that sort of thing. Now, they seem to have channeled their energy in the right direction."

The Oilers still are aggressive, to the point that Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll accused them two weeks ago of being cheap-shot artists. Reeves doesn't agree.

"I haven't seen any of that on the film we've looked at," he said. "I just see them playing tough, hard-nosed football. They get after you."

The Broncos are comparing Houston's defense to the Los Angeles Raiders', particularly in their use of bump-and-run, man-to-man pass coverage.

"I think Houston has become the most physical defense in the league," Bronco wide receiver Vance Johnson said. "The Raiders used to be. I don't see them imitating the Raiders. They're just an aggressive bunch of guys.

"They don't try to hurt you after the play, but they'll get their licks in. It was funny watching one receiver's reaction after coming across the middle and getting spun like a top when a Houston linebacker hit him. I know I'd better look for that linebacker when I go across the middle."

Bronco receiver Mark Jackson said the Oilers use the bump-and-run even more than the Raiders, who at one time were the foremost practitioners of the art.

"Not too many teams can play bump-and-run successfully with the speed there is at wide receiver in this league," Jackson said. "I love it when DBs play bump-and-run. If they do that, it's your duty as a receiver to get open."

Rookie Denver receiver Ricky Nattiel said you can tell how aggressive a secondary is "by the way they challenge you at the line of scrimmage. These guys get right up there in your face where they can mess with you."

Steve Brown and Patrick Allen, the Houston cornerbacks, "are playing a lot of bump-and-run and playing it with confidence," Reeves said. "They're covering well. Their strong safety, Keith Bostic, is a 225-pounder. He's an All-Pro and as physical a safety as we've played. We have our work cut out for us. We've got to get after it on offense and not be intimidated by them."

ONE SWING: 3 OUTS

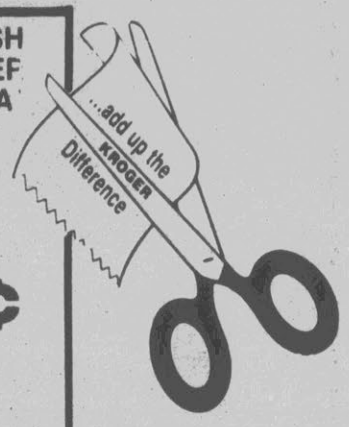

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Phil Garner, a longtime utility man who was playing for the Los Angeles Dodgers last September, lined into a triple play in a game against Houston Sept. 15.

Musing over how it felt to make three outs with one swing of the bat, Garner reflected: "It's a terrible feeling. I felt like jumping off a tall building. But there was one saving grace, we won the game."

Activity Declined

The level of business activity in North Carolina declined 0.3 percent in November, according to the First Wachovia Business Index that measures the level of economic activity in the state on a monthly basis.

First Wachovia said the index gained 4.2 percent over the past year.

The November decline was primarily due to a decrease of 7.5 percent in residential building permits, the corporation said. Non-agricultural employment was up, while initial claims for unemployment insurance dropped. The average manufacturing workweek remained unchanged in November.

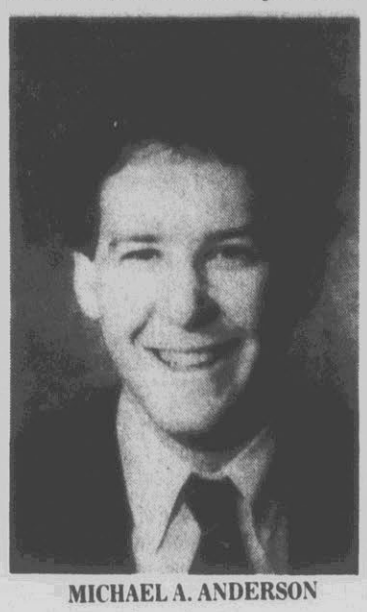

Non-agricultural employment in the state gained 0.2 percent in November, while for the nation as a whole, it was up 0.3 percent. Non-agricultural employment in North Carolina grew 3.5 percent over the past 12 months, according to the index.

Manufacturing employment rose 0.4 percent for the month. Higher employment was reported in the furniture, lumber, textile, apparel, food processing, chemical and electrical and non-electrical machinery sectors of the state.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for North Carolina was 3.9 percent in November, unchanged from October.

Good Contractors Are Like Competitive Divers. The Best Performances Make The Least Disturbance.

Everyone notices the ugly sites; with muddy, beat-up trucks, spitting smoke clouds, stacked helter-skelter with dirty boards and rocks and limbs—hauling things hither and yon on a rutted mess of a construction site.

But what a lot of people don't notice are neat jobs, including C.A. Lewis's work. Because while some contractors are out there creating turmoil, we're trying as hard as we can not to make a big mess. The truth is, a messy job reflects badly on everyone involved. Plus it takes longer, is more dangerous, and most importantly, costs more than a clean job. So we keep our jobs neat.

Whenever you have a job that requires the finesse of a top athlete—like a renovation in a building in which you want to keep doing business—call us. Or the next time you just have a job you'd like to keep clean and neat and do for less money, call us. Because, we'll give you a great performance. And we'll do it with less disturbance.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential task force studying the stock market crash recommended Friday that one agency — preferably the Federal Reserve Board — coordinate the nation's financial markets.

The five-member Task Force on Market Mechanisms, headed by former Sen. Nicholas F. Brady, R-N.J., also calls for coordination of "circuit breaker mechanisms" when the stock market in New York and the futures markets in Chicago get overheated.

Brady, speaking at a White House briefing after presenting the report to President Reagan earlier in the afternoon, said such mechanisms would not necessarily include daily price swing limits on the New York Stock Exchange. He said the panel left that point open for further study.

The report, even before its formal delivery, met with criticism on Wall Street and a cool reception at the White House.

The appointment of the task force headed by Brady, chairman of Dillon, Read & Co., a New York investment banking firm, was a key element in Reagan's attempts to calm jittery markets in the first days after the Dow Jones industrial average plunged 508 points on Oct. 19.

Ironically, analysts attributed Wall Street worries about the Brady report in part for a 140-point plunge in the Dow on Friday.

Reagan, leaving the White House for Camp David, Md., at mid-afternoon, was asked if he thought the panel had gone too far in its recommendations.

"No," he said at first, then added, "I haven't read it yet."

White House officials were given advance copies of the report on Thursday.

In a statement, the president stopped far short of endorsing the Brady recommendations.

"I intend to carefully review this report, along with the New York Stock Exchange and the Chicago Merchantile Exchange studies and the forthcoming studies by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission," he said.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the Energy and Commerce finance subcommittee, said: "I think it is alarming to see the White House try to distance itself from the analysis and conclusions of the commission it appointed."

"Neither a head in the sand nor an invisible hand will solve the problems uncovered by the report," Markey said.

Brady, however, told reporters it was "perfectly understandable" that Reagan wanted to take time to read the 2-inch-thick report before making any comment on it. He said he did not believe it would take "months" before the administration acted on the recommendations.

Richard Torrenzano, vice president of the New York Stock Exchange, also held back from embracing the report pending "an opportunity to thoughtfully review the commission's findings."

He did not comment on the need for coordination of "circuit breaker mechanisms." However, he did say the recommendations for centralizing regulation of securities products "deserve further thought and discussion."

Brady said his panel had concluded that the advance of technology and the instantaneous linkage of markets by computer means that the nation's financial markets in the future should be viewed as "one market."

"With the theory of one market, we strongly recommend that these be harmonized so they work on in coordination with the other," he said. "If you have one market, you ought to have unified views on certain subjects."

The report offered no definitive recommendation of making the Federal Reserve the coordinating inter-market body, but it said, "the weight of evidence suggests that the Federal Reserve is well qualified."

Brady said Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan was non-commital when he discussed such a role with him.

The report concluded that an initial market decline, sparked in part by the high U.S. merchandise trade deficit, set a series of events rolling Oct. 19 that "ignited mechanical, price-sensitive selling by a number of institutions employing" computer trading strategies.

"Throughout the period of the decline ... this trading activity was concentrated in the hands of suprisingly few institutions," it said.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee who received a copy of the report before its formal release, called it "very good overall" and said its "factual analysis is excellent." But he said he did not agree with all of the recommendations.

Among the other recommendations are:

—Harmonizing the margin, or down payment, required to trade stock index futures in Chicago with the margin required to trade the underlying stocks in New York. Currently, stock buyers must pay for half of their purchase in cash, while futures investors can control an equivalent block of stock with a far smaller down payment.

Canadians Get Trade Pep Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan sought Saturday to reassure nervous Canadians that a proposed free trade pact will not submerge their national identity in a flood of U.S. imports.

Canada has "a national character that will not only survive, but flourish in an environment of free trade and expanding opportunities," Reagan said in his weekly radio address delivered from Camp David, the presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains.

He sought to allay Canadian fears by saying that European nations have maintained "vital and distinctive" national characters despite extensive trade cooperation under the European Economic Community.

The pact, signed by Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney on Jan. 2, would expand what is the world's largest trading partnership. The countries had two-way trade of $150 billion in 1986.

The agreement would eliminate tarrifs, some immediately and others within five or 10 years. It would remove export duties on agricultural products traded between the two countries, end Canadian restrictions on the import of auto parts and do away with taxes and duties on energy exports. It also would create U.S.-Canadian arbitration panels to settle disputes.

Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, in the Democratic response to Reagan, offered praise for the agreement with Canada, but said the president's record has been a "dismal failure" in achieving fair trade with other nations such as Japan and South Korea.

"Our current trade deficit is about 170 billion dollars, an amount unimagined until President Reagan took office," Frost said. "Major U.S. industries, like steel, textiles and electronics, suffer from unfair competition from nations that enjoy unlimited access to U.S. markets."

Frost said Reagan should end his opposition to House-passed trade legislation, denounced as protectionist by the administration.

Market Prices Plunge

By MARCY GORDON
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market nose-dived Friday, swept sharply lower late in the trading session on a tidal wave of selling.

Investors' worries about the economy and the possibility of stricter regulation of the financial markets pushed the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials well below the key 2,000-point level. The precipitous drop snapped a four-day advance on Wall Street that had kicked off the new year.

The blue-chip Dow Jones barometer plunged 140.58 points or 6.9 percent to close at 1,911.31, its third-biggest one-day drop. Declining issues outstripped advances by about 7-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,473 issues falling, a scant 229 rising and 236 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board was 197.30 million shares, up from 175.36 million in Thursday's session.

After a lower opening, shares declined steadily but stabilized around midday at about 2,013.76 on the Dow average. Prices turned sharply lower in late afternoon, and traders said the feverish decline in the last hour or so of trading was accelerated by computer-driven "program" selling.

Analysts said the government's report early in the day that civilian unemployment dropped to 5.8 percent in December, its lowest rate since July 1979, was viewed as an indication of a resilient economy. That fueled concern, they said, that the Federal Reserve could tighten credit and nudge interest rates higher to ward off inflationary pressures.

Rising interest rates generally put downward pressure on bond prices, and the prospect of a Fed tightening pushed bond prices lower Friday, traders said. They said the stock market took its initial cue from bonds.

In addition, many investors are anticipating a negative report next Friday on the U.S. trade deficit for December — with some analysts projecting a shortfall of $15 billion to $16 billion. That would put pressure on the shaky dollar, which struggled to its feet earlier this week with the help of intervention by major central banks and helped boost the stock market in turn.

Also dampening share prices was a news report published Friday outlining economic forecasts by experts outside the government. The private forecasts predicted that the federal budget deficit could jump to $167 billion in the next fiscal year, $31 billion over the ceiling set by law.

As the end of the trading session approached, market participants became increasingly nervous about the long-term possibility of more stringent regulation of the financial markets, dealers said.

Among actively traded issues, Tandem Computer tumbled 6¾ to 20⅜, Sterling Drug fell 2 to 74, Texaco declined ¾ to 38⅛, AT&T lost 1½ at 27¾, IBM dropped 8½ to 114⅞, Bell South fell 1⅝ to 36, Du Pont skidded 7 to 81⅛ and Eastman Kodak was down 5¼ at 47½.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 223.41 million shares.

The NYSE index was down 8.86, at 137.03

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 4.95 to 280.91, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 3.68 at 243.40.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 9.55 to 266.44. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 338.47, down 11.19.

Juice Futures Soar

NEW YORK (AP) — Fears of a freeze in the Flori-da citrus region sparked a buying binge that sent orange juice futures soaring the limit for daily trading Friday on the Cotton Exchange in New York.

On other markets, interest-rate and stock-index futures fell sharply; pork futures advanced while cattle futures retreated; precious metals were higher; grains and soybeans were mixed; and energy futures were lower.

Forecasts for cold weekend weather in Florida started the orange juice rally rolling in the morning, said Judy Weissman Ganes, an analyst in New York for Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

Local Roots Affect Her Life

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

When Ann Garrett graduated from North Carolina College, now Durham's N.C. Central University, in 1954 the prospects for the future seemed slim.

A young black woman in the segregated South, Miss Garrett wanted to pursue studies in clinical psychology, a field she became interested in as an undergraduate. However, the prevailing laws of the day kept her from attending another North Carolina college to get the degree.

Undaunted, Miss Garrett began to apply to out of state schools which offered the program she was looking for. "I applied to graduate school in Indiana, and they wrote me that they were pleased with my application and they thought I was a well qualified applicant, but they were sorry, they couldn't accept me. They didn't say exactly why, but I knew why," she said recently.

Eventually Miss Garrett found a college that would give her her chance: Wayne State University in Detroit. A racially mixed co-ed school, Wayne State came as quite a culture shock to Miss Garrett who had spent all of her life at "black" schools.

In addition, she is a newspaper columnist, a historical researcher and a scholar of note. She has studied at Yale and Radcliffe, and is completing work on a collection of black history based on the life of Dr. Charles Walker, the first white-collar black man on Wall Street. The collection is the first of its kind, and is considered an important historical documentation.

Mrs. Robinson said her success springs from her Greenville roots and the dedication, love and strength of her family.

The Mayes and the Garretts

"I guess my story is always ordinary people. I grew up as a combination of two major families in Greenville, and they are the Garrett family and the Maye family," she said.

Mrs. Robinson's father is George Garrett, a civil rights activist instrumental in founding the Southern Christian Leadership Conference chapter here. His wife, Mamie Garrett, was an educator and, like her daughter, a newspaper columnist. She wrote for The Daily Reflector in the early '50s.

"My father tells a story that I really love to hear," she said. "They lived out in Pitt County. He lived on one farm — he and his sisters and brothers lived there; their father was a Methodist minister — and on the next farm were the Mayes. Their father was a Baptist minister.

"So here you've got an AME Zion minister with his children and a Baptist minister with his children, and daddy said he hopped the fence and married mother. Which meant that I think our two families are different and unique because they grew up together."

Mrs. Robinson learned dedication and the value of an education from her mother's family, where the children each worked to put the others through school.

The Rev. Joseph Maye died when the youngest child (of 12) was 17-months old. "Here's a group of 12 people from Pitt County who managed through their own struggles and strivings and difficulties to educate each other. They all became academically successful and that made them unique.

"I didn't know how unique until in New Haven I met a woman who had been to Washington, D.C., and she said, 'You are Ann Garrett,' and I said, 'Yes.' And she said, 'Oh! You're related to those people down in Greenville. That family down there with all those educated people. Those Mayes!"

The Maye siblings worked in education, social work, nursing and the ministry.

George Garrett went on to work at the Daily Reflector as a printer before playing in a professional baseball league. While involved with the civil rights movement, Garrett started the Rudolph Memorial Fund to help the homeless.

Mrs. Robinson said she appreciated her family's religious, hard working background. "We were always told when I was growing up 'Do better than I did. We had the chance and we are making the best of what we had, and now we want you to go into the world and do better than we did.'

"And the entire Greenville community seems to join in and support that kind of lifestyle. I haven't seen it any other place in the world. I'm sure that there are communities like Greenville. I'm sure there are places, communities where people are always encouraging you and telling you that you're beautiful and telling you that you can do it. I'm positive that there are these little niches, but I just in my travel haven't seen it. That's the reason I'm always writing about the way we did things when we were in Greenville."

At present, Mrs. Robinson is working on a column celebrating the birthdate of Martin Luther King Jr., in which she plans to write about Greenville once more to her New Haven readers.

The Walker Collection

But Mrs. Robinson's writing efforts now are mostly concentrated on completing the Walker collection — a documented history of the life of a black man lving through the 20th century.

The 83-year old Walker approached Mrs. Robinson one Sunday after church and asked if she would be interested in writing about him. She had not written about the ministry in any of her columns, so she set up an appointment to interview him.

When Walker came to her house for the interview, he carried with him a scrapbook which he wanted her to examine before the questioning began. With some hesitation, Mrs. Robinson took it, and then her discovery began.

"From the very beginning I was amazed," she said. "Here this man had newspaper clippings, historical memorabilia that went back to the 1920s, and here there were pictures, verification. This man was hailed as part of the Harlem Renaissance by the New York Herald Tribune in the 1920s. Short stories, novels, poetry, acclaimed a genius — in the 1930s he was the first white-collar black man on Wall Street."

Mrs. Robinson interviewed Walker for an entire year, collecting 28 tapes and documentation about his life. The collection has received national acclaim, and is now housed in the Schomburg Center of Research in Black Culture in New York City.

"I realized that what happened in the South and the way we lived, the way we think, the way we interract, all of those things as black people had not been documented or recorded, and yet they are rich in terms of our contributions to an entire culture," she said.

The Migration North

Both Walker and Mrs. Robinson moved from the South to the North to escape segregation and to experience the opportunities many black people of the time felt awaited them above the Mason-Dixon line. Today's demographics show that there is a new migration, back home to the South, but Mrs. Robinson said that first move has had a profound impact on Northern communities.

When she and her husband moved to New Haven, they found a community with only a small black middle class population, unlike the larger groups from where they came in the South.

"In the mid-'50s for some reason or another I have yet to figure out — maybe it was modern cities — Southern blacks moved into New Haven. And we brought with us the South, the way we do things down here, the way we live.

"What happened then was suddenly — not just because of integration but because of what we expected out of live — beautiful communities sprung up which emulated and recreated the South in the north," she said.

Mrs. Robinson said many blacks that were educated in the South moved to the North to teach, leading to the increase in the black middle class.

The impact is so profound, in fact, that Mrs. Robinson said she has discovered New Haven is nicknamed "Little Greenville."

"One of the leading lawyers of the communty approached me in the last two months and said, 'Ann, New Haven is going to be celebrating its 350th anniversary, and we are looking at immigrants from various countries,' because New Haven is full of immigrants — immigrant populations from Italy, Poland, what have you — 'but there is an important population of new immigrants from America here and we want to know about them,'" she said.

"Guess who they are. They're Greenvillians. The people who are from Greenville and North Carolina."

Good Neighbors

Part of the South that Mrs. Robinson said she took with her to the North is the attitude of a good neighbor.

When the Robinsons first moved to New Haven they lived in a middle-class neighborhood with other professionals like themselves. However, they decided to move somewhere where their presence might do some good.

"We decided we were going to move back into the city and do what we knew best, and that was to be good neighbors. Nobody in our crowd thought that we were sane. We moved into inner-city, an absolutely unheard of unconsciencable thing for middle-class people," she said.

Mrs. Robinson said most of her neighbors were unfriendly at first, until it came time to ask for favors. Then people that wouldn't even speak normally would come up to the house to ask for help.

"We decided that our tactic was we weren't going to march. We weren't going to participate in whatever. We were just to live there and be good neighbors. We weren't going to go out and try to change the neighborhood. We were just going to be good neighbors — build up our house, renovate it, meet the people we thought were nice, avoid the ones we didn't think were nice, have the children, the kids who would mind their manners come over, teach the ones around who wanted to learn and if not just be neighbors.

"We've been there for 20 something years and in New Haven we are now called the Missionaries," she said.

But the Robinsons had to live through many other perceptions before they became "the Missionaries." Their friends in the suburbs thought the Robinsons just couldn't afford the house any more and had been forced to move. Some radical groups thought they were trying to "get black," and others just thought they were strange.

The Robinsons had to make some adjustments, too. "I didn't know," she said. "I really didn't know what tough and rough and bad were. I thought I did, but I didn't. I had never seen anything like that, never heard. I didn't know that you really had to protect the little kids. I didn't know that they played fighting games — who could beat up this one, who could beat up that one. I never knew these things."

Mrs. Robinson carried her good neighbor policy over to her workplace, too, becoming somewhat of a surrogate mother to the international students at the college. She decided eight or nine years ago to have some of these foreign students over for Thanksgiving dinner since they had no place to go and no comparable holiday in their native land.

Forty to 50 people showed up that first year, all wearing the costuming of their native lands. Since then the Robinsons have fed between 100 and 125 students each Thanksgiving. They call her Mommy.

She decided to take that idea and apply it to her neighborhood as well. Now, each July Fourth, the Robinsons host a big picnic in their backyard for shut-ins and people in wheelchairs.

"When you begin to talk about lifestyles and what you stand for and what you do, that's the way we've lived. Resultantly, now, no one questions why we're inner-city," she said.

Because of the Robinsons' efforts and the reaction from the community, middle-class professionals are starting to move back in, including a doctor who now services the area.

"We just wanted to do something like the life we had known here. The life we had known here in Greenville was one where you was one were you weren't always in and out of other people's houses. You just tried to do the best you could and live as well as you could, and if you were available you did what you could when you could, and we got along real well," she said.

"That's who we really are. That's where we really are at," she said. "I do say that it's one of the things that if I died tomorrow I'd be most proud of having done it that way.

"You know you don't get medals and awards for that kind of thing, and nobody gives you certificates and nobody honors you. I mean my neighbors are not about to honor me and I don't think they should, but it's meaningful. It really does make a difference."

Coming Home

Dr. Ann Garrett Robinson came back this month to the place where it all began; where she was just Ann Garrett and where school meant C.M. Eppes High School. She came back to the place she writes and talks about so fondly to bring her family home and to relax.

George and Mamie Garrett moved some 13 years ago to Connecticut and later to New York for medical reasons. This year they decided to come home, and Mrs. Robinson came with them to visit. She says it will not be the last time she stays for any length of time.

"I will definitely be back. What I want to do now is I'd like very much to spend no less than six weeks a year here. I am revived and revitalized when I come back to Greenville," she said.

"It's like breathing fresh air. It's what I remembered. And if you don't come back every once and a while you forget that there's a world like this. And I need it. It's going to give me that energy to go back home and continue to do that work that I'm doing."

BACK AT SCHOOL — Dr. Ann Garrett Robinson sits in front of the C.M. Eppes Recreation Center, all that remains of the C.M. Eppes High School. She attended Eppes as a teen-ager in Greenville and now teaches at a community college in New Haven, Conn.

Scott-Howard Vows Exchanged

Hannah Brown Howard and Paul Batteaux Scott III were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at 4:30 in a double-ring ceremony conducted in Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The Revs. J. Malloy Owen and Paul B. Scott, father of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony. Mark Gansor presented a program of organ music and Susie Pair was vocalist.

Parents of the bride are John L. Howard and Melba Stallings, both of Greenville, and the Rev. and Mrs. Scott Jr. of Raleigh.

Marsha Warren Evans of Greenville was honor attendant. Denise Scott of Raleigh, Betsy Hill Howard of Washington, N.C., and Donna Leggett Cockrell of Roanoke, Va., were bridesmaids.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were John Howard Jr., brother of the bride, and Glenn Ferrell, both of Greenville, Steve Furr of Charlotte and Joe Davis of Wilmington.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white satin and schiffli embroidery. The fitted basque bodice featured a pearl and iridescent jeweled Victorian neckline with sheer English net yoke dropping to a low V back with covered buttons. The bodice was overlaid schiffli embroidery and covered with seed pearls and iridescents. The pouf satin sleeves extended into illusion with embroidery and covered button closures. The full satin skirt and cathedral train were edged in a border of scalloped schiffli lace adorned with pearls. She wore a halo of silk roses featuring pearls and iridescents attached to a two-tiered illusion veil edged with pearls. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and miniature carnations, freesia, baby's breath tied with satin streamers.

The attendants wore tea-length gowns of imported royal French laticework lace bordered in a floral patterned chantilly lace motif over matching satin. The gowns were fashioned with sheer yokes with scalloped lace defining the sabrina necklines. The short caplet sleeves were enhanced with patterned lace and the waistlines were accented with cummerbunds and bows of satin. A scalloped border of lace edged the hemlines. Each carried a bouquet of white miniature carnations, baby's breath and delphinium.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

MRS. SCOTT

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and is a social worker at the Pitt County Mental Health Center. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and attended graduate school at ECU. He is a Pitt County deputy sheriff.

Making Second Life On The Sea

By REBECCA JAMES
The (Myrtle Beach) Sun News

MURRELLS INLET, S.C. (AP) — Suzy Roberts pulled several grocery bags out of her car, walked down the dock at the Wacca-Wache Marina and unloaded the bags inside the houseboat where she has lived for the past three months.

She put red grapes in a colander in the sink, wine and low-fat milk in the refrigerator and cans of vegetables — the makings of soup — on the counter. This done, she sat down at the table and talked about how, at 50 years old, she managed to get a job as first mate on three boats now docked at the marina.

Her gray hair is pinned up away from her face and she wears a denim skirt and a cotton shirt with the sleeves rolled up — the comfortable, weathered sort of clothes boat people wear.

This past summer, Ms. Roberts was working in Atlantic Beach, a small town on the Outer Banks of North Carolina, when a series of events led her to a change of careers.

As the executive housekeeper at a large resort, she arranged a week's stay for the captain of a freighter. As a gesture of thanks, the captain and his wife invited her to dinner on board the 860-foot ship.

The freighter was docked several miles from shore and a smaller boat, known as a launch, took them out to the ship.

"Once I stepped on board," she said, "it was like dreams coming true."

Ms. Roberts talked to the launch captain, and he invited her to come back on board the Free Enterprise if she had more questions. Eventually, he made her an honorary second mate.

She continued to work at the resort every day and spent nights — often until 2 a.m. — on the launch, looking after passengers and helping keep the boat clean.

She liked the feeling of being out on the ocean and she began to think that she wanted this to be the work she did with her life. She mailed resumes and asked around in the boating community until she found a job.

In August she came to Murrells Inlet to serve as first mate on three wooden motor yachts docked here. She is also studying for her captain's license.

The idea of a life at sea has appealed to Ms. Roberts since she was a child.

She grew up in inland Alabama on a man-made lake. She was fascinated by water transportation and the business of imports and exports.

"When I was a young girl, I wanted to work on a freighter," she said. "But that was not acceptable to my parents.

"So then I went on with what you'd call a normal life — I had a family."

Now the family is raised. Her only child, Will Morton, works as a stunt man and actor in Hollywood.

Meanwhile, the mother pursues her own work. She will be leaving Murrells Inlet soon, when a call comes, telling her and the captain that it's time to take the boats to Florida.

Mother Cries For Help

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I hit my 5-year-old son today because he didn't spell his name right. I have another son who is 2. Recently I've been very mean to my kids. I have no patience with them anymore. I hit them, fuss at them and cuss them out something terrible. Then I'm sorry and go somewhere and cry.

I've been laid off work for some time. Their father is no help at all. I need to get away from my kids. I'm with them 24 hours a day and they get on my nerves. I'm afraid one day I am going to hurt one of them real bad.

Sometimes I even feel like I hate them. I have thought about suicide, but I worry about who would take care of my kids. I've even considered giving them up for adoption. They deserve a better home than this.

What is wrong with me? Why can't I hug my kids, be patient with them and say a kind word to them? Why am I such a rotten mother? Please help me. I can't afford to talk to a professional. — A ROTTEN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You are not a "rotten" mother. Rotten mothers don't write and ask what is wrong with them. You are not alone. There are many parents who share your feelings, but few have the courage to admit it.

Write to the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, P.O. Box 2866, Chicago, Ill. 60690. It is a non-profit organization with support groups all over the country. They help parents like you who are frightened by their own impatience and violent behavior. Just say in your letter that Abby told you to write, and you will be directed to the support group nearest you for comfort and counseling. Please write to me again, Mother, and tell me how to reach you immediately. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I work at station KLEO as the midday on-the-air personality. I just read the letter from Emiline Zimmerman, who says she is willing to pay $100 for Perry Como's record, "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows."

Abby, please tell Emiline that I have the record and she can forget the $100. I'll be glad to send it to her as a gift because I believe that people should help each other whenever they can. — CINDY BARTON, WICHITA, KAN.

DEAR CINDY: Bless your generous heart. Now, how about playing "The Best Things in Life Are Free" — and dedicate it to yourself.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is involved in a psychologically abusive relationship. She is reluctant to admit that she is being abused — instead she rationalizes and makes excuses for her lover's behavior. ("He has migraines, family stress, business problems, unresolved conflicts and a traumatic childhood." You name it.) She also blames his abusive behavior on herself — saying she provoked it, doesn't give him enough attention and is not responsive enough to his needs. At the same time she is frightened of the consequences of asking him to move out (the apartment is hers) because they work for the same company and he could make it very ugly and embarrassing for her. To top it off, he has insisted that their living together be kept a secret.

This is all subtle mental abuse — controlling, insidious and sabotaging — never loud or violent. There are no broken bones or disturbances of the peace one can point to. I care deeply for this woman, and it's sickening to observe the situation. What can I do to help her? — ANGUISHED IN MENLO PARK

DEAR ANGUISHED: Even though your assessment of your friend's situation may be accurate, there is no way you can "help" her — unless she asks for help, or at least confides that she feels abused. Should that time come, it would be appropriate for you to urge her to get into therapy in order to learn why she not only accepts this kind of punishment, but thinks she deserves it.

Foster Mother Prepares Cubs For Return To Wild Living

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

BLOUNTSTOWN, Fla. (AP) — As far as three orphaned black bear cubs are concerned, Betsy Knight is their mama.

The Florida Panhandle woman feeds natural foods such as grapes, berries and persimmons to bear brothers named Luke and Zeke, whose mother was found dead in the mountains of northern Georgia, and Mandy, abandoned in a trash can at the Ocala National Forest.

Mrs. Knight is the only human allowed near the cubs and her own contact is limited, in order to prevent them from becoming tame.

Her goal, shared with state wildlife authorities in Florida and Georgia and the Tallahassee-based St. Francis Wildlife Association, is to return the cubs to the wild once they are old enough, about 7 or 8 months, to fend for themselves.

They will remain in a fenced enclosure in the Knight family's back yard for another month or two. Luke and Zeke will be set free somewhere in southern Georgia and Mandy back in the Ocala forest.

Mrs. Knight is the first, and so far the only, person in the Sunshine State who has raised cubs successfully returned to the wild, said Jim Brady, supervisor of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission's Wildlife Research Laboratory, in Gainesville.

Bears are only the latest and largest of many species Mrs. Knight and other St. Francis members have released after rescuing injured, sick or orphaned animals and birds.

"If we could prove it could be done, it would open the doors up for the freedom of other bear cubs," said Mary Jane Shaw, St. Francis founder, in Tallahassee. Otherwise, she said, they would be condemned for the rest of their lives to cages in zoos or tourist attractions.

The effort began two years ago when wildlife officials brought Mrs. Knight three orphaned cubs that eventually were set free in the Ocala National Forest. St. Francis purchased the $3,000 enclosure and paid for food. It costs about $2,000 to raise each cub, Mrs. Knight said.

Radio transmitters attached to two of the cubs indicated they had adapted to their natural environment. The transmitters fell off after nine or 10 months as planned.

One cub later was struck by a car and killed while crossing a highway. An examination of her stomach contents revealed she had been feeding on the same kinds of natural foods the cubs were given while at the Knight home.

The third cub apparently had been in captivity at a roadside zoo for too long before she was confiscated and turned over to Mrs. Knight. She remained too tame to make it in the wild.

A few days after the third cub was released, she approached some humans who petted her and fed her people food. She was recaptured and placed in an animal attraction in the Wildwood area, Brady said.

When the first cubs were brought to Mrs. Knight, officials had asked her to raise them for future placement in captivity. But she agreed to take them only if they were returned to the wild, citing successful releases the year before in Tennessee.

"We came to an agreement," she said. "The bears would be raised on their natural food away from human contact. My children aren't even allowed back there."

Mrs. Knight and her husband, Philip, an assistant state attorney, have four children, ranging in age from 9 to 24, and one grandchild.

At times the menagerie has included deer, beavers, opossums, raccoons, foxes, bobcats, turtles, hawks, and an otter that tried the family's patience with antics such as hiding a fish that smelled up the bathroom.

A hallmark of St. Francis is that it will take any native wild animal, but there are some limitations in the Knight household.

"I absolutely put my foot down on alligators, snakes and buzzards," said Philip Knight.

Mrs. Knight, born in Orlando 49 years ago and raised in Coral Gables, says she has had a lifelong interest in animals.

Program Attracts Top Scholars

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Dean Munyon of Germantown, Tenn., turned down a scholarship to Rice University to join a small, select group of freshmen getting special attention in a University of Alabama honors program.

"Everybody in the honors program is so smart," Munyon said. "It puts all the best students in a university setting but we get individual attention."

Michael Bolden of Mobile said he did not know about the honors program when he applied to the university, but that when he heard about it, "I did some exploring and it sounded like something I wanted to get involved in."

Bolden and Munyon are among 65 students from a freshman class of 3,500 with the high school grades — an average of 3.97 out of 4.0 — and college entrance exam scores strong enough to be accepted by the program, which provides full scholarships to both in-state and out-of-state students.

The Alabama program, said Cobb, "is something of a synthesis of the programs of the universities of Georgia, Texas and Ohio State. These programs are regarded as some of the best in the country."

"I went through Georgia's program myself, but our primary concern has been to employ strategies and approaches that will work best for the University of Alabama.

"We have many outstanding students and we don't want them to feel like they are just floating out there," Cobb said. "They need to be in contact with top faculty and with each other to motivate one another. These students are turned on by learning and we want them to be challenged."

The challenge includes a general honors seminar and 15 other hours selected from courses designated as honors courses.

The university, which houses its athletes in a special dormitory, Paul W. Bryant Hall, is considering a special residence for honors program students.

"Universally there may be a swing back to the honors residence hall," Cobb said. "It has proven benefits as a recruiting tool."

With Thomas' emphasis on increased scholarship, Cobb said, "The quality of student we're getting is remarkable. We have a good reputation throughout Alabama and that reputation is starting to spread regionally as well."

In recruiting, he said, he tells students the honors program "can give them the opportunity to feel they're in a small college learning environment but with the resources of a large campus."

Munyon, in a computer-based program, also takes English and is in a seminar on values in society. "There is no comparison between honors English and regular English classes," he said.

The honors program, Cobb said, "is open to motivated students in any field — engineering, communications, the arts and sciences, business."

As the program grows, he said, he wants to create "a community of scholars but I don't want them to withdraw from student life. They are a good influence on other students. They have a sense of community without a sense of isolation."

'Go' Is The Word For Queen Of Romance

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

ESSENDON, England (AP) — It's a gray afternoon in the English countryside, but Barbara Cartland is, as they say, all go.

The 86-year-old romance writer who bills herself as "still the best-selling author in the world" has dictated 7,000 words for her 461st novel, and that's just since lunchtime.

"The thing is to go, go, go," said the white-haired millionairess, whose tales of virginal young women who fall in love with brave, handsome men have sold more than 450 million copies in 24 countries.

On that recent day, Miss Cartland was verbally on the boil. It was television that had her going because one of her earliest books, "A Hazard of Hearts," written in 1948, was made into a TV movie which was shown on Dec. 27.

Set in 1810, it marks only the second time one of Miss Cartland's romantic sagas has come to the screen — the first, "The Flame Is Love," was in 1982 — and the author could not be more pleased with the results.

"It all comes over," she said of the $7.3 million adaptation, a Gothic drama of lechery and love set at a clifftop mansion called Mandrake.

Diana Rigg, Edward Fox, Christopher Plummer and Helena Bonham Carter starred alongside some of Britain's most beautiful stately homes such as Belvoir (pronounced "beaver") Castle and Burghley House.

"The houses look wonderful, because of course they are," she said in a tea-time interview at Camfield Place, her mansion. It was originally built by the grandfather of Beatrix Potter, author of the Peter Rabbit books, and is located 17 miles north of London in the tiny Hertfordshire village of Essendon.

Twice-married, Miss Cartland has been a widow since her second husband, Hugh McCorquodale, died in 1963. She maintains nonetheless that a man is essential to a woman's well-being.

"It's no use saying women are happy on their own because they're not," she said. "A woman is incomplete without a man, without marriage, which is the most important thing in life."

And despite what some women liberationists and feminists might argue, Miss Cartland believes women must be kept pure for their men.

"Women's lib says you must be free, but free from what? I've traveled all over the world and have never met a man of any class, creed, color or nationality who wants to go into a room with the woman who is his wife and mother to his children and wonder how many other men have gone to bed with her.

"You can talk 'til you're purple in the face, but it's not fair: A woman doesn't mind a bit if a man has had affairs before marriage, but a man minds terribly," she said.

Miss Cartland refused to indulge in gossip about a certain well-known marriage she has followed from its beginning: the much-chronicled relationship between her step-granddaughter, Princess Diana, and Charles, the Prince of Wales.

"They've only got for one minute to stop smiling, and the press says, 'Oh, it's very serious. The marriage is breaking up,'" the author said. "It's absolute nonsense."

But she thinks the royal couple might handle the press more skillfully.

"The people around them don't give the press any meat," she said. "The press have got to write, we quite agree; they've got to have something. It needn't be nasty ... (but) when they get nothing, they make stories up as they go along."

Miss Cartland attributes her writing speed to her own journalistic background writing for The Daily Express. She claims since 1976 to have held the world record for the most books published annually: an average of 23 a year.

"I say a prayer, I really do. I say, 'Please God, get me a plot.' It's absolutely extraordinary: then a plot comes."

She shows no signs of slowing down.

"I think old people are so much better when they have something to do," Miss Cartland said. "Nobody yet has ever been known to die from overwork.

"People retire at 65, which is wicked, go home to their boring wives and die at once. The whole thing is you must keep going."

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Can furniture really grow up with a child? A brass or iron day bed with pull-out trundle can be a nice transition from the crib to a bed. For example, the child can sleep on the pull-out trundle, which is low to the floor initially, and later move to the higher bed. When the child is old enough, the pull-out trundle is excellent for a sleep-over guest.

Brass is so versatile, too. One can mix almost any wood with brass to create a more formal look with mahogany or cherry or a casual look with lacquer, especially if the day bed or brass bed has porcelain knobs.

Come in and see our new line of day beds and brass and iron beds by Elliott's Designs, Inc. The brass is solid, not plated, and the hand polished high luster is sealed with a special baked-on clear enamel. The iron bent work is heavy gauge steel and the antique white finish is the most durable baked-on polyester powder paint finish available.

Ancient Oak Tree Is Subject Of Legend

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

ROCKPORT, Texas (AP) — Legend has it that the cannibalistic Karankawa Indians used to hold council and devour other humans around Big Tree.

Another story portrays the massive tree as the site of various hangings for later settlers of European ancestry.

Big Tree, possibly the state's oldest live oak and reputed to be at least 1,000 years old, is surrounded by legend and tall tales.

It's also surrounded by a fence at Goose Island State Park for protection from thousands of visitors who wonder just how many hurricane seasons it has weathered.

Some experts estimate it at 1,000 to 2,000 years old, while some postcards and other tourist literature bump the figure up to 3,000 or more.

"There were some stories I saw in the archives that claim the tree to be over 4,000 years old, and I doubt that seriously," said John A. Haislet, retired assistant director of the Texas Forest Service.

"But you'd have to cut it down to find out," and nobody wants to do that, said Haislet, who researched and edited the 1970 book "Famous Trees of Texas," now in its third edition.

Haislet says two things about the tree are indisputable: It's the state's biggest, and maybe oldest, Quercus virginiana.

To really see it, he says, one has to get up close, because even a short distance somehow diminishes the tree's immensity.

"I was shocked, actually, the first time I walked in that fence," Haislet said. "It's an optical illusion, it really is. When you get up against it, it shocks the dickens out of you."

Big Tree's trunk measures more than 35 feet in circumference, it stands 44 feet high and has a crown spread of 89 feet. It lives just across St. Charles Bay from the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge, where the endangered whooping cranes return every winter.

According to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, the ancient gnarled trunk and sprawling canopy stand in the midst of a live oak forest on Lamar Peninsula, a remnant of what used to be a barrier island formed about 120,000 years ago.

"It's in excellent shape for its age," said Stormy Reeves, superintendent of Goose Island State Park.

Signs at the park point the way to "Big Tree," a name people in the area gave it years ago.

Park officials give the tree a checkup every two years, he said, and occasionally do some pruning.

In 1980, the state removed a road around it, because it was threatened by the steady compacting of soil that often kills trees in public places.

Sometime during the 1950s, Reeves said, some large lower branches were removed, and the scars remain.

"A lot of people ask me if it's gotten any bigger," said Randy Nesloney, who grew up in the area and has known Big Tree all of his life. "I say, 'No, it's gotten smaller.'"

Nesloney and his wife, Barbara, recently opened the Goose Island Oak R.V. Resort with spaces for 25 recreational vehicles on their property across the road from the tree.

He said he and some childhood friends used to have a treehouse in the ancient oak.

"I used to hear about a lot of hangings in that tree," said Nesloney, who also operates Big Tree Treasures, a souvenir shop. "And, of course, the Karankawa Indians used to hold council meetings around it."

Tree researcher Haislet said there was no proof to back up such stories, but they popped up in old documents more than once while he studied the tree's background.

"There was a man in here who was 99 years old, and he said, 'You know, I haven't been here in 50 years.'"

Along with the Karankawa and hanging tree legends, Haislet writes in "Famous Trees of Texas":

"Earlier visitors may have included Spanish explorer Cabeza de Vaca in 1528, Sieur de LaSalle in 1684, and Governor Alonso de Leon, who came in 1689 to find him, but found instead the ruins of St. Louis and rescued the only three survivors of LaSalle's colony from the Karankawas."

Big Tree used to be the national champion live oak, until a larger tree in Lewisburg, La., took away the title, said Mahlon Hammetter, with the Texas Forest Service in Lufkin, who keeps track of the Registry of Champion Big Trees in Texas.

"It (Big Tree) could very possibly be the oldest," Hammetter said.

OK OAK — Big Tree, possibly Texas' oldest live oak tree, is surrounded by legend, tall tales and a fence to protect it from visitors. The tree, near Rockport, is reputed to be from 1,000 to 2,000 years old and measures 35 feet in circumference.

Trash Can Be Recycled

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

I don't want to hear that by 1990, more than half of the cities in the United States will have no place to bury their trash.

The good Lord knows I'm doing the best I can to keep refuse out of the landfills and in the home where it belongs. I've got closets bulging with boxes of newspaper clippings and clothes that don't fit anyone ... drawers overflowing with stray poker chips and warranties that cover appliances that are gone. There are shelves of candle stubs, plastic butter containers and desk drawers jammed with pictures of babies that no one recognizes. I'm within five items of declaring the house a barge and putting it on the Colorado River to find a country that will take it.

I think most Americans recognize the problem and try to recycle trash. Look at garage sales. Throughout the years I've bought back most of my stuff three or four times, including the 30 by 36-inch picture of The Last Supper in bottle caps.

And let's hear it out there for the Christmas bazaars. Those creative, dedicated women who fashion arts and crafts don't waste a thing. I have Christmas ornaments out of prescription vials and birdseed, necklaces out of bent safety pins and petrified potato peelings, and jewelry boxes fashioned from broken eggshells and macaroni.

Charity auctions have also joined in the fight against trash glut. I heard of one group that recycles the same hundred paintings each year. They're bought and then contributed to the auction the next year. Everyone gets two tax deductions and the charity benefits.

Thanks to my mother, not one single cardboard box has ever found its way back into society. It is snatched from the hand of the givee the moment the gift is removed, knocked down and saved for the next occasion. We receive gifts in boxes where the store has been out of business for 20 years.

My kids say they understand the problem, but they don't. Their idea of recycling their trash is to drop it off at our house to store. Nepotism notwithstanding, I remind them of the high cost of disposing of waste these days. In Minneapolis, for example, the cost of burying a ton of refuse was $5 in 1981. Today it is $30. Philadelphia is paying $90 a ton to dispose of its trash as far away as southern Virginia and is weighing a trash export agreement with the island of Curacao in the Netherlands Antilles.

My kids' reaction to this was, "Where is the Netherlands Antilles and how soon will it be before Dad plans a vacation there to take advantage of the sewage rates?"

I know this. If I ever go public with my trash, brace yourself for Garbage Gridlock!

Stan Little Is Guest Speaker

A program on the 24 N.C. historic sites highlighted the meeting of the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club held Tuesday night.

Stan Little, archives assistant at the Eastern office of the N.C. Department of Archives and History, was speaker.

Chris Brueckner said Warren and Laurie Charlton were first place winners in the Christmas decoration contest. Yard of the month competition will resume in March. Amy Morris and Mrs. Brueckner reported on families the club sponsored at Christmastime.

Cindy Erdin and Debbie Bissette gave an update on plans for the tasting luncheon March 19. Members were reminded to turn in favorite recipes and to bring crafts for the country store.

Susan Ferrante was named sunshine chairman for January. Meeting hostesses were Marie Hills, Mrs. Brueckner and Rhonda Till.

Mexico Targets Pacific Coast Strip For Resort

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

SANTA CRUZ HUATULCO, Mexico (AP) — Looking for more tourism dollars to heal its sickly economy, Mexico has targeted an isolated strip of its Pacific coast for a resort that will rival some of its most popular beach spas.

More than $100 million is expected to be invested by the end of next year in the government's drive to create a world-class resort — the Bays of Huatulco — in a sparsely populated area in Oaxaca state not far from the Guatemalan border.

"This is where we put it all together," said Tourism Secretary Antonio Enriquez Savignac. "This is the big one."

Residents are descendants of the Zapotecs and Mixtecs, two of the great pre-Columbian cultures.

Pre-Columbian ruins abound. Artisans are noted for weavings, pottery, wood carvings and other handicrafts.

Against such a background, Enriquez Savignac said, the resort is expected to attract a different segment of the tourism market.

Visitors will be a "different type of people, more adventurous people who are willing to try new resorts at the beginning," he said.

Already, some 5,000 construction workers are turning stretches of palm trees, wooded areas and dusty roads into an international airport, modern hotels and shopping areas.

The government's plans call for the first phase to be completed by the end of 1988. By then, tourism officials say, 1,300 hotel rooms will be ready to accommodate an expected 146,000 tourists along three of the nine bays.

The airport, tourism officials say, will be able to handle jumbo jets flying directly from the United States.

With non-stop expansion, tourism officials project Huatulco will be a vacation spot for 800,000 tourists by the year 2000 and 2 million around 2018.

"I'm quite convinced that Huatulco will be every bit as successful as Cancun," Enriquez Savignac told a group of visiting reporters.

Cancun, which opened 17 years ago on the Caribbean coast, attracted about 700,000 foreigners last year and accounted for nearly one-fifth of total tourism revenues.

Mexico earned $1.75 billion last year from tourism, just a bit better than the $1.72 billion of 1985 when a devastating earthquake frightened away many visitors.

According to Tourism Department figures, more than a half million people left the state between 1950 and 1980, apparently to seek a better life elsewhere. Many of the former residents have set up homes in the shantytowns that now surround Mexico City.

As a result, the government's aim, according to the Tourism Department, is "bringing (Oaxaca) up to the level of growth present in the rest of the country and providing the people with the means to remain in the state and better their standards of living."

But some residents despair that their quiet lifestyle will be irrevocably altered by the new resort.

"It's going to destroy our type of life," said Constantino Flores, a 42-year-old fisherman, who lives a few blocks from the Santa Cruz bay.

"That's a bad thing. We're not prepared for a modern life. We're peasants and fishermen," said Flores, standing outside his tiny house of wooden boards, topped by a corrugated metal roof.

Enriquez Savignac said he discovered the area during a trip along the Pacific coast in 1967 scouting possible sites for resort development.

After initially finding nothing of interest, he said, he urged the plane's pilot to continue down the coast to the town of Tapachula, near the Guatemalan border.

As the plane turned to follow the coastline, the nine bays came into view.

"My jaw dropped," Enriquez Savignac said. "It was love at first sight."

Two years later, Huatulco was one of five sites picked by the government to be developed into major resorts. The others were Cancun, Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo on the Pacific coast, and Los Cabos and Loreto in southern Baja California.

Not The Usual Typical Town

EDITOR'S NOTE — Rent control was the rallying cry three years ago when the residents of West Hollywood, mostly apartment dwellers, voted to incorporate. The new City Council, dominated by tenants, quickly passed one of the nation's strictest rent-control laws. That was just for openers. West Hollywood, long a haven for gays, is hardly your typical town.

By LAUREL K. SUOMISTO
Associated Press Writer

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — It once was home to F. Scott Fitzgerald, a hangout for Bugsy Siegel, an unincorporated haven of gambling and prostitution just outside the city limits of Los Angeles and stuffy Beverly Hills.

Today, three years after apartment dwellers voted in the name of rent control to make a legitimate city of the place, West Hollywood is the bejeweled enfant terrible of Southern California.

Few cities can boast more glitter. Crowded into 1.9 square miles are 28 nightclubs, 20 art galleries, eight theaters, 650 design firms and 100 restaurants, including some of Southern California's finest — Chasen's, Trumps, Spago, Scandia.

Its 37,500 residents — on the lower end of the state's income scale — are in charge of a $2.6 billion revenue base equal to the gross national product of the kingdom of Nepal.

West Hollywood had long been a refuge for homosexuals who preferred the laissez-faire style of the county sheriff to the stern surveillance of the Los Angeles Police Department. There is an annual Gay Pride Parade.

After incorporation, the gay-dominated City Council astonished the bourgeoisie by outlawing discrimination against homosexuals, making an official celebration of the transvestite's favorite holiday, Halloween, and giving rent control is an unconstitutional taking of private property — are ready to go.

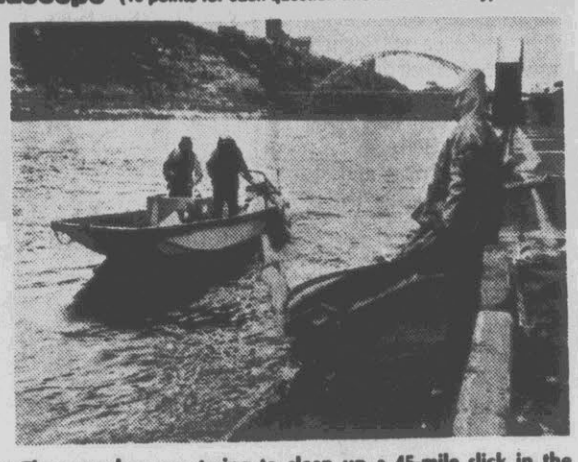

For now, however, the landlords' challenge is no more than a distant ink spot on West Hollywood's rainbow.

"Of course one has to be somewhat concerned when you have a more conservative court," Gross says. "But we feel rent control is constitutional and will be upheld."

Montana Site Yields Significant Artifacts

By MERCER CROSS
National Geographic News Service

LARAMIE, WYO. — Nobody knows for sure who the ice age Indians were, where they came from or how they lived.

A few answers may line on the side of a dusty butte in a desolate corner of southeastern Montana. It's the site of a large bed of 11,000-yaer-old bison bones, perhaps the oldest such collection ever found in North America.

More important is the trove of stone and bone weapons and tools, souvenirs of the tail end of the last ice age, that scientists are finding around the rocky bed, known as the Mill Iron site.

"It's pretty significant stuff," says George C. Frison, a University of Wyoming anthropologist who is one of the country'd leading authorities on Paleo-Indians of the High Plains. "You just learn little bits at a time, and then finally things start to come together. This is really coming together now."

Projectile points are to Frison what fingerprints are to the FBI. He can tell by the way a point is made whethr it was shaped by a member of the Clovis cultural complex about 12,000 years ago or by a Folsom man nearly 1,000 years later.

The Goshen People

What excites him most about the Mill Iron bone bed is that it contains points made by Goshen people, members of a little-understood cultural complex situated chronologically somewhere between Clovis and Folsom. All these names come from the sites where evidence of the complexes were first found. Clovis and Folsome are in New Mexico.

"It's not just a straight line, one coming right out of the other," says Frison, whose research has been supported in part by the National Geographic Society. "There are a lot of things going on" among scientists grasping for hard evidence of the harsh existence of the Paleo-Indians, he says.

Human origins in North America remain a highly disputatious subject among scientists. They generally agree that humans made it over here from Asia during the last ice age, probably via some kind of land or ice bridge across Beringia, which became the Bering Strait.

The Durable Clovis

They agree that the Clovis people, durable ancestors of today's Indians, lived ere more than 11 centuries ago. The distinctive Clovis project point has been described as the earliest trademark of American culture.

On the basis of existing knowledge, some anthropologists, Frison among them, think that Clovis was the first human on the continent. Others cite evidence, based on dating techniques using radioactive carbon 14, that he was preceded by less-developed ancestors many thousand years earlier.

Then along came Goshen, a new ingredient of the mystery. In the late 1950s and early '60s, scientists found a slightly different kind of projectile point at a site called Hall Gap, in Goshen County in southwestern Wyoming.

They didn't know how to classify it, and they still don't. Were the Gosehn points products of a previously unknown Paleo-Indian culture? Or were they just a variant of Clovis points?

Evidence At Mill Iron

Frison and others have been pondering the issue ever since. But until 1985, at Mill Iron, they hadn't found much further evidence of Goshen. The Mill Iron finds assured them that Goshen people were more than a one-shot aberration, that they lived in other places besides Hell Gap.

How many others? Frison and his colleagues probably will spend a long time finding out.

To the frustration of anthropologists, all of these prehistoric Indians, from Clovis on, have been remarkably uncooperative in providing the one thing today's diggers would cherish the most: human bones. Only tantalyzing fragments, too small to provide meaningful information, have been found so far.

Even so, the widely scattered bits of crafted stone and bone, along with nets and other artifacts, have given scientists a broad if sketchy idea of how the nomadic Paleo-Indians lived.

Skilled Hunters

From their kills they obtained meat for food and hides for clothing and shelter. Using bone needles, they fashioned shoes, shirts, and trousers that enabled them to survive the harsh winters.

Bows and arrows lay in the future. The Paleo-Indians relied on distinctive projectiles, chipped or carved from stones or bones, attached to bone shafts, and thrown or thrust deeply into their prey.

Frison grew up on a Wyoming ranch and has hunted all his life. He has used the same tools to kill and butcher buffalo, so he can testify to their accuracy and sharpness. He has even used them to skin elephants in Africa, proving that they could have been used on High Plains mammoths.

"The Paleo-Indians were a proud people," he says. "Look at their weaponry. Look at the individuality and the perfecton that went into their projectile points. It's just like a hunter today who has his favorite rifle, and who polishes it and engraves the barrel and takes care of it. These people knew what they were doing."

Conservancy Adds Additional Land

CHAPEL HILL — The North Carolina Nature Conservancy has announced acquisition of additional land for two nature conservancy areas in North Carolina.

One of these is the purchase of 888 acres of land as an addition to the Lake Waccamaw State Park in Columbus County, bought from Georgia Pacific Corporation.

To date, the conservancy has assisted the state of North Carolina with the acquisition of 1,232 acres involving three separate tracts of land each considered critical to the completion of the Waccamaw park.

Lake Waccamaw and the headwaters of the Waccamaw River support a number of extremely rare species. Of special importance are the endemic species of fish and mollusk that are rstricted to the lake and upper river.

The second recent acquisition is that of a 3.2 acre tract near the town of Maple Hill in Pender County. It is an addition to the larger natural area of approximately 125 acres of longleaf pine savannah and swamp forest communities known as Lanier Quarry Savannah.

The Lanier Quarry Nature Preserve provides habitat for two globably endangered plants, Cooley's meadowrue and Carolina grass-of-parnassus. The rare meadowrue exists, with one exception at only six sites in the world, all within a two mile radius of Lanier Quarry Savannah. Only 15 populations of the rare grass-of-parnassus are known in existence, the majority of these in North Carolina.

In a related development, the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has taken action to designate a 79-mile section of the Lumber River in Robeson County as a potential component of the state's Natural and Scenic Rivers System.

Helsinki Preserves Old Flavor

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Helsinki is struggling to maintain an Old World dignity alongside its night clubs and neon-lighted shopping arcades. But some citizens complain it's all just a facade.

And it is.

Old World Helsinki still rides along in trolley cars that rattle along broad cobbled streets on rails laid at the turn of the century, and they are more popular and reach more places than buses or the city's one subway line.

Built on a peninsula jutting into the Baltic Sea, Helsinki has a population of a half million and serves another half million in satellite towns.

The bulging population has forced city official to grapple with the problem of accommodating 20th-century needs in 19th-century premises, and to keep the graciousness of an age when buildings were the works of craftsmen.

City Hall's solution was to issue building plans ordering that the street-side facades of old structures must be preserved, while owners remain free to do what they want with the rest.

That has led to the gutting of the interiors, which is easier, cheaper and more functional than restoring the elegant old apartments and turning them into offices, said city architect Runo Tyynila.

"Some people are horrified," Ms. Tyynila said in an interview. "(They say) this isn't preservation; this is only for scenery. You think you are walking into an old building and everything is new."

Next door to the Stockmann department store, a 50-year landmark that supplies much of Moscow's diplomatic community by mail order, steel beams prop up a five-story red brick wall with windows framed in sculptured plaster.

Behind it is nothing but industrial rubble. At least a dozen other buildings are in a similar state of disassembly.

Helsinki was founded in 1550, but the city was destroyed again and again by fire and plague. Most of the oldest surviving structures were built in the early 1800s when Finland became an autonomous Russian duchy.

It still has a Russian flavor, which travelers compare with Leningrad, a five-hour ferryboat ride away across in the Gulf of Finland.

The plan to preserve the old facades came after a period of widespread demolitions of old buildings in the 1960s. Glass-encased shopping malls, like the Forum on Mannerheim St., were built to compete with the traditional department stores like Stockmann.

The Forum features boutiques blaring disco music, moderistic fountains and fast food outlets. The Finland Business Report magazine said three more shopping arcades are now planned for the eastern side of old Helsinki.

Ms. Tyynila said Finns had second thoughts about tearing down the old buildings when they began to miss them.

"The attitude before was to get rid of old buildings. We can build better ones. Now it is going the other way," she said.

The first beneficiary of the preservation plan was City Hall itself, which was remodeled and modernized inside its old shell in a project completed in 1970.

The city has encountered some grumbling from owners who must incur the added expense of preservation.

Ms. Tyynila said "it has happened now and then" that some old buildings burned to the ground under mysterious circumstances.

But she added that owners wind up making enormous profits when they convert their old buildings into new downtown offices or shops. Preserving the facade, she said, "doesn't cost much compared with the total."

17-YEAR TEACHING VETERAN SYLVIA HESTER, M.A. Ed., ON THE BENEFITS OF SYLVAN.

"We've all been there. A student begins falling behind in class. The parents, worried, ask for advice. We recommend supplemental education in the basics, reading or math. But how do the parents know where to find it?

"As a teacher, you may not be able to recommend one particular resource over another. But you can help a great deal by emphasizing the importance of finding quality facilities, teachers and methods, like those found at Sylvan Learning Center."

Sylvan is a nationwide chain of private educational centers providing supplemental instruction in basic reading and math. Our goal is quite simple. Like you, we want to help children master the basics of learning, so all possibilities in life are open to them.

We begin just where you might expect: with diagnostic tests that help us pinpoint the exact level at which the student is currently reading or solving math problems.

We then develop an individualized learning program. It begins with what the student knows, to ensure confidence from the start; then progresses at his or her own pace.

The program itself is varied to convey different concepts and hold the child's interest. We use computers, multi-sensory learning aids and math manipulatives, in addition to workbooks.

Along the way, we use the same effective techniques you apply: sound teaching, personal attention, and plenty of encouragement. The difference is, we're able to provide a far more concentrated level of attention. Instruction at Sylvan is given to students individually, with never more than three students assigned to one teacher.

The Sylvan Guarantee

Your student will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in basic math or reading skills after the first 36 hours of instruction, or we will provide up to 12 additional hours of instruction at no further cost.

Measurement will be based on norms from a nationally standardized achievement test for improvement in either reading (comprehension or vocabulary) or math (computation or application).

Of course, the benefits of Sylvan don't end with academic improvement. Most students experience a boost in self-esteem that often carries into home and social life, too.

Please call us for more information.

Designer Making Happy Living With Needlework

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The British are supposed to be very reserved.

But when San Francisco-born Kaffe Fassett appeared on a BBC television program and demonstrated how to make needlework pictures, he must have touched a communal heartstring.

He urged viewers to send him a needlework picture on a six-inch square of canvas, illustrating the theme, "Count Your Blessings." Within two months, 2,500 responded with picures.

"Many of the men, women and children who contributed wrote they had never attempted anything creative before but were now going on to do more decorative work," said Fassett, a needlework and knitting designer and teacher.

He and a small group of helpers sewed borders around the miniature tapestries and created 14 large panels, each eight feet high. These were then hinged together into a textile measuring 28 feet around and it was sent on exhibition in Britain and Japan under the sponsorship of the British Wool Marketing Board.

Eventually, the work came to rest in the public rooms at Chatsworth House, the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire's home in Derbyshire, where it can now be seen by those visiting the mansion.

Fassett is that rare individual whose life's work finds him instead of the other way around. He describes himself as a former jack-of-all-trades who briefly attended art school in Boston and New York.

The designer, who is now based in England, was recently in the United States to promote his newest book, "Glorious Needlepoint" (Clarkson N. Potter).

"I went to England for three months and stayed 22 years," said Fassett. "When I arrived, I knew immediately it was the kind of place I could develop something, where nobody would bother me."

He earned a living first by illustrating travel guidebooks, which showed interesting, little-known places to visit. He began to knit after becoming inspired by a visit to a mill in Scotland where yarns in many inviting colors were made.

Teaching himself to knit so he could use these yarns, Fassett recalled, "I put 20 colors in my first sweater. In the late 1960s, the days of black and beige twin sets, it was quite spectacular."

Soon, he was creating patterns for Vogue Magazine where Pamela Harlech was working. Lady Harlech asked him to draw a design for a pair of needlepoint slippers. Later he designed a cushion for her and decided to stitch some of it himself.

"After watching a friend doing a tent stitch, I filled in a few colors. Before I knew it, I had completed the entire cushion." Soon, he added needlepoint design to his repertoire.

"I kept thinking I would go back to painting one day. But this was pure enjoyment and I could not drop it, so I decided to try to make a living at it," said Fassett.

At first he executed one-of-a-kind garments and accessories. Then he wrote his first book, "Glorious Knits," which widened knowledge of his work. The design of kits and public appearances as a lecturer and teacher soon followed.

His new book combines needlepoint patterns and how-to information with a personal account of his experiences in making a career of the needle arts.

When he speaks to the public, Fassett always emphasizes the secret to artful home accessories and wearables is to use lots of colors. They should depend on color rather than expertise for effect. "What's deadly boring about most needlepoint is that the colors are too simplistic and the stitches too complicated."

Yet, Fassett says "People are a lot more talented than they think. The problem is that 99 percent are traumatized into believing they have no talent and therefore they don't try."

His advice to novice needlepointers: "Get a 6-inch square of canvas, 10 holes to the inch, and play with it." Start small so you don't get discouraged.

Needlepointing is considerably easier than knitting, he added. "Most people can learn in five minutes. Start with at least 15 colors." For subject matter, he suggests copying a favorite painting. Use the small design you create as the center of a pillow.

As for Fassett, what's on his horizon is a new book to be called "Glorious Color." It will document an exhibition of some of his work and will also include new needlepoint and knitting patterns.

On The House

Aluminum is a low-maintenance material, which is why it retains its popularity over the years. But if you want to preserve its "newish" appearance, it must be given some attention, which often involves nothing more than keeping it clean.

If the siding on your house is aluminum, an occasional washing with water or water with mild soap may be all that is required. One of those longhandled hollow brushes designed for automobiles makes a handy cleaning tool. Doing this as little as once a year will keep your siding sparkling and make any other cleaning jobs unnecessary.

Should you have neglected to clean the aluminum and there is a buildup of dirt and grime that has taken several years to accumulate, a cleaning agent stronger than soap and water will be needed. Never forget the saying that holds true for cleaning chores of all kinds: Use the mildest strong product that will do the job. Since there is a chance the selected abrasive might scratch the surface of the aluminum, test it first on some inconspicuous area. If the test shows it cleans but does not scratch, exercise the precaution of rubbing with the grain or texture if there is one.

In using any cleanser, never change the recommended proportions. Too little water, for instance, might damage the aluminum; too much might fail to clean the aluminum properly.

Aluminum screens should be cleaned once a year, too, to prevent a buildup of dirt. They should be rubbed with a stiff brush and washed down with a hose and mild detergent. One way to protect the screens from the dirt buldup is to spray them with thinned screen lacquer or clear lacquer, being certain they are thoroughly dry when you begin the spraying. Should a cleaning ever be necessary, the coating of lacquer will make the task easy.

Cleaning aluminum should be undertaken only in mild weather. It should not be done when the metal is hot to the touch or when the temperature is less than 50 degrees Fahrenheit. When the cleaning agent has a wax or oil base, it should be wiped with a dry cloth to remove all residue. When it has a water base, it must be rinsed with water. The product's label will tell you how to handle this part of the job.

The metal flashing used to form watertight joints on a roof should not be too conspicuous, which ordinary aluminum might be if it is not covered with roofing cement or some other material. Actually, aluminum flashing is available these days in various colors and textures that will blend in with the kind of roof shingles your house has. You can buy aluminum flashing that matches the siding on your house, even if it is not aluminum.

When aluminum has been painted, either at the factory or after installation, it is especially important that strong cleaning agents not be used. First, try plain water, then add a mild soap. Contrary to what many people think, cleaning should be done from the bottom up. If you start at the top of a structure or anything else, the water that runs down will streak the bottom, still-dirty portion. If you begin at the bottom and water later runs down, it can be quickly wiped off without streaking.

Watch out for drips when cleaning aluminum, since cleaners which are harmless to aluminum may damage other materials on contact. In some cases, cleaners tolerated by some materials will discolor aluminum surfaces.

Here's The Answer

Q. — We recently found an old bedroom bureau in our attic. My father says it was varnished many years ago. It looks in good condition structurally, but the finish is very dirty. I would like to refinish it. If I remove all the old finish, will it be all right to refinish it again with varnish? Are there any special tips you can give me to make the job a little easier?

A. — The first thing to do is clean the bureau to determine whether the old finish isn't merely dirty. If so, you may find it doesn't really need refinishing. In fact, it may have a fine patina on it that need not be disturbed. Clean it with denatured alcohol, putting some on a clean cloth and wiping firmly but not roughly. It is better to go over it twice than to rub too hard the first time. Once you have determined that it needs more than just a cleaning, you will not have to exercise such care, since you will be removing the old finish anyway. Use a commercial varnish remover, following the directions to the letter, especially the part about what to use to clean off the residue. If you have a nice even surface and intend to stain it, apply a sealer, followed by a stain and then, when it has dried thoroughly, at least two coats of varnish, sanded lightly between coats. Should the surface prove to be rough or not completely free of the old stain, you will need to smooth it and apply a bleach before going ahead with the sealer, stain and varnish. But see whether the bureau needs refinishing in the first place. The piece might be an antique that would be better left as is.

Q. — I have a concrete job to do and plan to rent a portable mixer. Once the concrete has been mixed, how soon should it be set in place?

A. — Right away, if possible, but no longer than half an hour in any case. Left longer than that, the water will begin to separate from the rest of the mixture, which then will begin to set.

Q. — Some concrete work will be done on my property shortly. The men doing the job say they can work in the cold weather and that the concrete will not be affected by the cold. Is this true? I had always thought concrete should not be laid in cold weather.

A. — Concrete most definitely is affected by the cold, but the professionals use various methods to keep it from freezing while the work is being done. One way is to use a special anti-freeze ingredient in the mixture; another is to heat the materials; a third is to protect the mixture from the cold.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, remover, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Garden Clinic

Q. How should pansies be fertilized?

A. Apply about two pounds of 8-8-8 fertilizer per 100 square feet seven to ten days after you plant your pansies in the fall. Make a second application of the same amount of this fertilizer in early January, followed by a third application in early March.

Q. Please give me information about cross vine.

A. Cross vine is a common name for Anisostichus capreolatus, a native American vine. Cross vine is not often seen in gardens but deserves greater use since it is an excellent vine with essentially no problems or pests. Cross vine produces tubular red and gold flowers in late spring or early summer. Sometimes it flowers lightly again in the fall. Cross vine is a rapid grower and, since it is evergreen, may be grown on fences as a screen. It is very easily propagated by cuttings at any time of year.

A. All vegatables need some sunlight. The garden site should receive at least six hours of direct sunlight each day. Eight to ten hours each day is ideal. Therefore, vegatables should be planted away from buildings, trees and shrubs shading the area. The roots of trees and shrubs will also compete for the nutrients and water.

Q. What is the hardiest camellia?

A. The hardiest camellia species is Camellia olifera. This species received no damage from the record-breaking nine degrees below zero Raleigh experienced a few years ago. Camellia olifera blooms in the fall with white and pink flowers. Although not quite as showy as Camellia sasanqua or Camellia japonica, the extra hardiness would allow those living in areas where camellias are marginally hardy to grow at least one type. By the way, even though many camellias were severely damaged or killed in 1984 and 1985, camellias are still valid and useful plants for our area. Gardeners should plant them again.

Growing Machine Provides Produce

By KEN SOO
The Charlotte Observer

DALLAS, N.C. (AP) — As though unplugging an appliance, Dwayne Crane slides a 4-foot-tall, fruit-laden tomato vine from its growing place.

Crane inspects the vine's thriving root system, growing in a peat-filled cylinder of mesh. He drops the plant back into a 17-inch-long section of 3-inch plastic pipe.

Once again, it is part of a vegetable-growing machine Crane calls the system.

Crane's company, Hanes Honeyacre Farm Inc., is the first in the Carolinas to use the system, a greenhouse operation designed and patented by a Tennessee lawyer-turned-farmer. Crane opened the greenhouse in June with his brother-in-law, airline pilot Joe Hanes, and another investor.

With the process, Crane and his partners want to prove that local growers can make money supplying the local passion for fresh vegetables year-round. The Honeyacre greenhouse already has proved it can produce the vegetables.

"You can see the plants," Crane said, pointing to a row of 7-foot tomato vines, each growing from its plastic pipe. "You can see the tomatoes."

The Honeyacre process stresses mobility. When a plant has grown fully into its mesh root cylinder — "system ready" in Crane's jargon — it can be moved without transplant shock to any growing station in the greenhouse.

The mobility means that when an old plant wears out or dies, Crane's staff can plug in a full-sized and sometimes fruit-laden replacement from the greenhouse's nursery tanks.

When Honeyacre opened in June, it imported tomato vines from a Florida greenhouse using the same process. A week later, Honeyacre harvested ripening tomatoes.

"Most farmers have to set out plants young because of transplanting shock," said Crane, a former teacher and conventional farmer. "But in the system, you can pick up something full-grown and move it anywhere, across the street or across the country."

In the Honeyacre process, each plant grows from a mesh root cylinder packed with peat moss, hydrated lime and perlite, a volcanic glass. The cylinders stand in vertical plastic pipes, which in turn stand in a larger, buried horizontal pipe pumped part full of a weak fertilizer solution.

We need sales people! And we're looking for a few good men and women to come into our sales force with the desire to earn some real money. It's not an impossible dream. Ford Motor Company is the No#2 sales leader in domestic car sales and we want you to be a part of that drive.

If you are interested in being associated with our local dealership, we urge you to come in and talk with us about how your future can change for the better!

OPPORTUNITY IS KNOCKING

If you are self-motivated, quick and eager to learn, personable and diligent in the pursuit of your goals, we have a program designed to help you turn dreams into goals and goals into reality.

We're American Lincoln Homes, the nation's leading telemarketer of log and conventional home packages, and we're ready to share the secrets of our success with you-to show you everything you need to know to be successful.

How successful? Listen to what a couple of those who "answered the door" have to say:

"In my first week with American Lincoln Homes, I wrote Sales Agreements totaling over $110,000.00. That's $11,000.00 in recorded commissions in just one week!"
- Randy Mahoney
Rocky Mount NC

"With one more sale, I'll have booked over $70,000.00 in commissions since January. That kind of 'extra' income means a lot to me, and to my family."
- Mary Lou Batten
Wilson NC

As your training proceeds, we'll give you as many qualified sales leads as you can handle. And, if you show us that you have what it takes to be successful, we'll enroll you in our start-up cash program. Once training is completed, you can begin to take advantage of our flexible hours and set your own schedule.

Our sales program is not for everybody. But, if $50,000, $75,000, $100,000 in earnings per year is where you want to be, we want to talk with you.

Does it sound too good to be true? Isn't it worth a phone call to find out? Call, toll-free, today or send your resume to:

A BUILDING TRANSFORMED — This building in the Stokestown/Swift Creek Community of Pitt County is a now closed country store. The building was originally a wood school building, the Stokestown School, which some years ago was transformed into a country store with the addition of an overhang shelter.

Interesting Discoveries Being Made In An Inventory Of Historic Pitt Sites

Text By Jerry Raynor

Photos By Scott Power

At the halfway mark of his assignment, Scott Power finds the inventory he's making of historic sites in Pitt County "very interesting, both from the architectural, lifestyles and historic points of view."

Power, a native of Greenville, S.C. who now calls Savannah, Ga. home, has been in Greenville since last July "documenting historic sites in the county, including farm complexes, houses, churches, schools, country stores and other commercial structures, even bridges and cemeteries."

The extensive inventory is being carried out under the auspices of the Pitt County Historical Society with guidance and assistance provided by the Eastern Office of the North Carolina Department of Archives and History, located in the Humber House in Greenville.

Three Pitt County communities — Simpson, Grimesland and Falkland, have each contributed funds to assist in the project.

Power hold a master's degree in historic preservation from the Savannah College of Arts and Design. The Savannah college is one of a very few in the U.S. to offer a degree in this specialized field. "Columbia University was the very first to give a degree in historic preservation, about 20 years ago," Power said. "Now, every year sees a tremendous increase throughout the nation in efforts to record and preserve our past heritage."

Recording is the key to the one-year assignment Power has in Pitt County. "What I'm doing is basic generalized research, setting up basic informational files on sites which will form a basis for more extensive research at a later date. Eventually, I think in about two years, the material I'm accumulating and material already on hand from earlier efforts will be used in the publication of a book.

"When the book gets published, it's going to be a fascinating account of the architecture, farm and commercial life of Pitt County in past years."

To date, Power has inventoried "350 sites, large and small, of all types. In some instances, an inventory will cover a complete rural community complex, such as at Littlefield. In other instances, the inventory involves small, individual structures, such as log corn cribs and milk houses."

Power uses U.S. Geological maps in his travels to cover the county. "I'm traveling the county, road by road, surveying places readily identifiable as ones of historic value, as well as making efforts to discover sites that are in themselves significant, even though identifying structures may no longer remain.

"To help do this, I have contacted a large numbers of older citizens to record an oral history of things that were, as well as getting all possible information on things that still exist. One of the happy results in making this survey is the cheerful, willing attitudes I've encountered almost without exception.

"I have discovered that the people of rural Pitt County are deeply interested in what is known of the past, and are giving me an overwhelming positive reception in my efforts."

Power says he relies on a large range of sources to compile the files of basic information. These include research into deeds, family records, oral history and material in archives collections. "The archival collection at East Carolina University is a rich mine of information. It's so complete that I do not have to often turn to sources in Chapel Hill and Raleigh."

Taking photographs is part of the overall file record. "However, there are some sites, where buildings no longer exist, that are not photographed, but only noted on the series of maps I'm preparing.

"Certain trends are discernible," Power said. "One of the most noticeable is that pole, or log construction of outbuildings, particularly mule stables, continued well into the 20th century. Earlier, in the late 18th and during the 19th centuries, evidence points to extensive use of carefully hewn logs for building construction, with a wider use of poles, or logs, simply skinned of bark in later years."

One of the more exciting discoveries has been "a large black cemetery in a wooded section between Winterville and Ballards Cross Roads. Graves there date from slavery days on into the 1950s. There are a lot of markers, but perhaps three times as many unmarked gravesites. Fences still existing there and some of the gravestones are of real artistic as well as historic interest.

"This is one of several sites I've mapped that will merit considerable research to determine the full history of the site," Power said.

Typical of what Power labels "a good example of the combination of farm structures and the system of farm cultivation over a period of time is the Fawcett Farm or Laughinghouse Plantation near Grimesland, adjacent to the well-known Grimes Plantation.

"Now known as Oakland Farms, it was originally the J.J. Laughinghouse Plantation that was sold to the Fawcett family in the early 1900s. The original house burned in 1904, but a number of early buildings from the late 18th century remain. Among these are a molasses house and of exceptional interest, an elaborate privy with five holes, or seats, and inside plaster walls.

"The farm acreage too," Power said, "provides an excellent look in the terms of field systems and layouts of the past couple of centuries. The same pattern, the shape of fields conforms generally to long usage of the past, based on the land's contour and drainage."

One unusual find "is a milk house, or what is sometimes called a dairy house, at the home of Ruth Gardner in the Gardnersville community," Power said. "Like most milk house, it's stilted, or on legs to raise it above the ground. What is different is that it's a rare example with a pierced tin door."

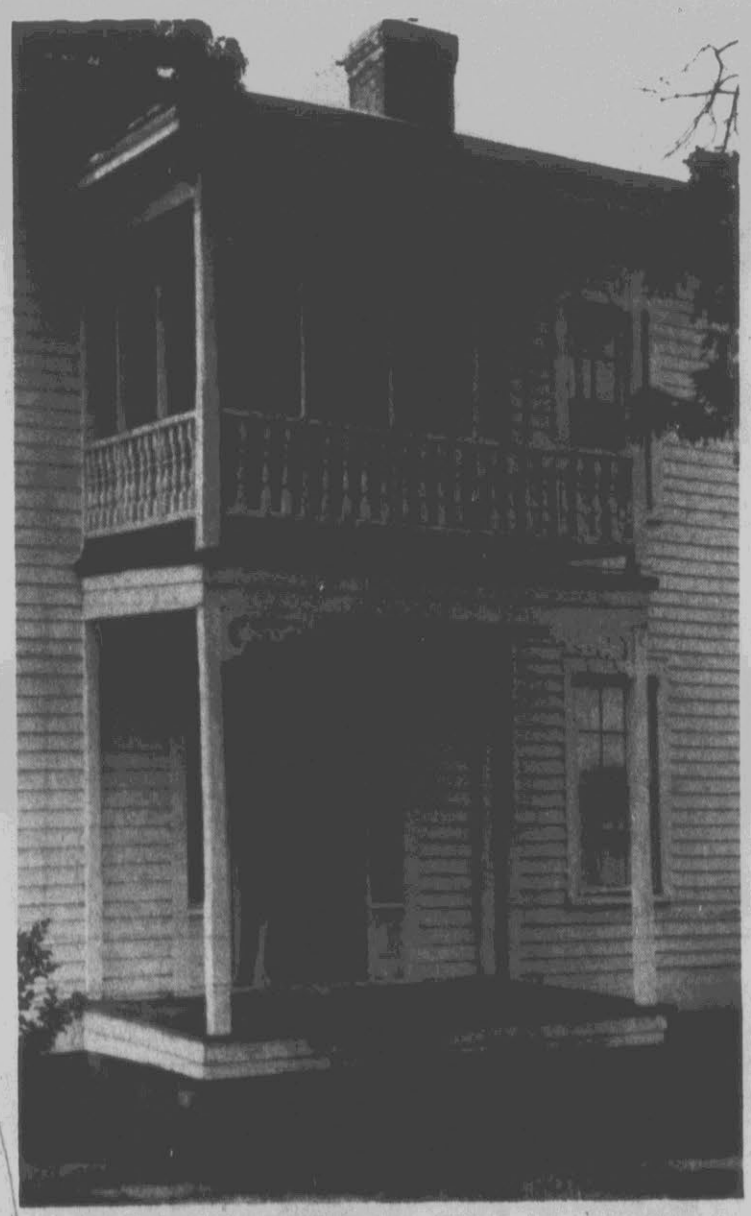

The large black cemetery, a former school turned into a store, some very different church designs, the rare milk house and the land and home pattern at the Fawcett Farm, Power says, "are but some of the fascinating discoveries being made in Pitt County about its rural past. I'm really excited about possible future discoveries and the overall picture of the past that is emerging as I continue the survey of historic sites in Pitt County.

"And I like living in Pitt County. My wife and I are living in a small house near Winterville. We enjoy all the things that are available to people here.

"I'll be looking forward too to the eventual publication of a book based on this survey. I feel that Pitt County citizens will be surprised at the richness and diversity of the county's past history."

SPACIOUS COUNTRY HOME — The spacious Ray Sumrell House in the Ayden community of Pitt County is a good example of an older house still being occupied. An upper and lower porch gallery adorns one side of the house, with a porch of more recent vintage placed on one side of the house. Note the decorative wood trim and the presence of two large chimneys.

You are looking at the biggest hand we have seen in many years. It was dealt in the finals of both the Open and Women's Team Championships at the recent World Team Championship. As you can see, all 13 tricks are there for the taking.

Although, this hand was played at four tables in the finals of the most prestigious bridge event of 1987, not a single pair even managed to bid a small slam! One pair had a bidding misunderstanding and "stole" the contract at two clubs. South played the hand well and with some help from the defense, actually made his contract.

At two tables, brave North-South pairs ventured all the way to five hearts, at which contract South could feel relatively safe. At the fourth table South played it super-safe and never ventured beyond four hearts.

North's one club opening bid showed 0–7 points and any distribution. South's two club response was artificial and forcing. North's two hearts was negative and South raised to show a strong hand and his real suit. North signed off with three no trump, but South persisted by jumping over game. North, perhaps overly cautious because of the fact that he would be declarer, didn't visualize his hand as being worth one trick, let alone two, so he passed.

Could it be that "ferts" are indeed a lot of fertilizer?

A Gift Of Great Art To Warsaw

By Jackson Diehl
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WARSAW, Poland — Thousands of art lovers, churchgoers, academics and journalists have been lining up in the gray early-winter cold here to visit a modest Catholic church annex that almost overnight has become Poland's richest museum.

The archdiocese museum, opened in 1980 as part of a broad effort by the church to nurture independent culture in Poland, has been known until now mainly for its exhibitions of painters and sculptors who shun the communist-controlled art establishment.

Recently, however, the museum took on an entirely new role. Following nearly a year of preparations, it has begun to exhibit a huge new collection of European painting, including works by masters from Rembrandt to van Gogh, donated to the church by an emigre Polish couple.

The stunning gift, which has made the Polish church as important a curator of European art as the Polish state, is the crowning work of two extraordinary benefactors: Zbigniew Porczynski, an Auschwitz survivor who became a hugely successful chemical engineer and inventor in Britain, and his wife Janina, who survived deportation from Poland to Siberia as a girl before making her way to England.

Seven years ago, the couple sold off a rich portfolio of real estate they had acquired around Europe, liquidated their three corporations and even disposed of some of their jewelry so they could begin acquiring their collection for Poland. By the time they finished last year, they had purchased nearly 400 paintings, including works from almost every important European school from the 15th century to the 19th.

Jubilant Polish critics say the Pope John Paul II Collection, as the Porczynskis named the gift, represents a rare and precious acquisition by a country that has seen most of its stores of European art destroyed or stolen by occupying powers over the last century.

"The cultural balance for us for the last two hundred years has been one of constant loss because of occupations and uprisings," said Andrzej Przekazinski, director of the archdiocese museum. "This is the first event that changes that situation — the first time that we are getting, rather than losing, a part of the European heritage."

The collection also has sharpened a growing rivalry between church and state in the sphere of culture. Since 1981, when the imposition of martial law by the government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski caused a large number of artists, writers and actors to abandon official posts and forums, the church has enjoyed growing prestige as an alternative cultural sponsor. Its role has been particularly important in painting and sculpture because of its ability to provide artists with sites to stage independent and uncensored exhibitions.

Art critics say the rich new store of paintings, which in many ways is superior to that of Warsaw's national museum, will help consolidate the church's position and give it an important place in the education of both artists and the public.

"A lot of people who have never been exposed to the art world will now come to see the European paintings and will encounter our modern Polish art alongside it," said Alexander Wojciechowski, a prominent art critic. "Artists will want to reach that new audience through the church."

Government officials deny any resentment of the church's acquisition, but a subtle struggle between church and state over the collection is already underway. Because the five small rooms of the archdiocese museum cannot properly accommodate the paintings, church officials have sought state permission to build an entirely new museum to house the collection, along with preservation workshops, art classrooms and studios.

While not openly rejecting the church request, Jaruzelski's government has responded with an offer that the collection be housed in a recently restored state-owned palace dating from the 18th century. "It's not quite a question of rivalry," said Wojciechowski, "but clearly the state would like to bring the collection on its property and thus have a say in managing it. And that's unacceptable for the church."

While the standoff continues, the church has organized an exhibition of its new treasures in three stages. The first show of 160 paintings, mostly from the Renaissance and early baroque eras, opened in early November and has been besieged by spectators who line up outside the museum's heavy wooden doors for hours.

Crammed inside below low arched ceilings, along the walls of a stairwell and in hallways is a concentration of work by European masters unavailable at any other Polish museum: Rubens' "Flight Into Egypt," Van Dyck's "Portrait of a Nobleman," Titian's "Death of Lucretia," self-portraits by Rembrandt and Velasquez and works attributed to Tintoretto, Correggio and Cranach among others. Waiting to be shown in subsequent exhibitions are works by Gainsborough, Goya, Durer, van Gogh and Renoir.

In a text recounting their art collecting, the Porczynskis said they were able to purchase the majority of the works in 1982 and 1983, when prices were relatively depressed. Since then, the boom in art prices has sent the value of the collection soaring, although church officials are unwilling to estimate its overall worth.

"The importance of the collection is that it is so full and broad," said Danuta Wroblewska, one of the museum's curators. "We are talking about a review of European painting over 500 years in which almost every school is represented. That has great value in a country like Poland, without many great collections, and it is of great educational value for young painters and the public at large."

Carolina Travel Idea: A Winter Coastal Trip

RALEIGH — Winter trip to the coast can include a visit to one of the three North Carolina Aquariums.

The aquariums, which are open year-round, are located on Roanoke Island near Manteo, at Pine Knoll Shores near Morehead City and at Fort Fisher south of Wilmington. Admission is free.

"For several years now the aquariums have been the most-visited state-maintained facilities in the state," Administration Secretary James S. Lofton said. "We are very pleased that so many North Carolina residents and visitors from other states are taking advantage of the opportunities at our three aquariums."

Attendance is expected to reach a record 1.5 million in 1987.

A new exhibit on threatened and endangered sea turtles opened in November at the Pine Knoll Shores Aquarium. "The Loggerhead Odyssey" offers a up-close look at loggerheads and other sea turtles that nest on North Carolina beaches. The exhibit includes live hatchlings, a 300-pound mounted specimen, the assembled skeleton of a 5-foot-long loggerhead, an interactive quiz board and colorful graphics.

The largest aquarium in the state, a 20,000-gallon shark tank, is found at the Fort Fisher Aquarium and is accompanied by an exhibit on sharks of the area, including a life-size 49-foot model of a humpback whale.

The aquariums are open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Author Recreates The Early Days Of Old Montana

ENTER THE DRAGON — For much of Asia 1988 is the Year of the Dragon, and this scaly beast appeared at New Year's above an ancient gate of the Beihai imperial pleasure palace in Beijing, now a park. Japan honors the dragon on Jan. 1, while the Chinese and other Asians attach much greater importance to the Lundar New Year, this year on Feb. 17. (AP Laserphoto)

By MICHAEL KERNAN
L.A. Times- Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — "Dancing at the Rascal Fair" is a daguerreotype of early-day homesteaders in the Montana high country. There they are, scuffing their boots in the dust of Main Street, or galloping through knee-high grass to herd their sheep, or loafing beside the barn on a summer day, and you want to climb right into the picture with them and smell the clean air.

His wife Carol took rolls of pictures of buildings all over Montana, and in Scotland, where the novel starts in 1889, and for hours he would pore over the slides on a light table, arranging them in rows to give himself a sense of what a frontier Main Street might have looked like back then.

He keeps file boxes of Montana lingo and stray bits of dialogue he has picked up from old letters and diaries, from his taped conversations with grizzled sheepherders. Some of it is new. In the small blue notebook he always carries is a snippet he overheard at a Garrison Keillor show last year.

First Woman: "Yes, I'm from St. Paul and my husband, he's from Minneapolis."

Second Woman: "Oh. A mixed marriage, huh?"

Maybe that will find its way into the final volume of Doig's trilogy, due to come out in 1990 for the celebration of the state's centennial.

"I do 800 words a day, four triple-spaced pages," the author said in a visit here. "I don't work consecutively. I might just write some dialogue and store it up."

There is a lot of cutting and pasting in Doig's technique. On the other hand, most of the set pieces — the big blizzard, the sheep-shearing contest, the forest fire in "English Creek," the first of the trilogy — are written as they come up.

Doig is nothing if not methodical. When he visited Scotland three years ago, he found the very dock where his ancestors left for America. He had his wife photograph the scene and wrote notes to himself about exactly what a person could see from that spot. With his 5-by-8 index cards and his careful research, he sounds more like a historian.

Which in fact he is. He has a Ph.D. in American frontier history, obtained early in his 21 years in the Seattle area. Even the fair of the book's title comes from a sociological study he read.

And the accent of the hero's talk is historically accurate, you may be sure, as it changes subtly through the story, almost imperceptibly losing its Scottish lilt and turning into American Western.

But all the tape recordings and photos and research in the world can't make a novel sing — or charm away the wooden heroes and cutout heroines, the travelogue landscapes, the tin-eared talk of so many best-sellers.

Below us in its broad canyon the Two Medicine wound and coiled, the water base for all the world that could be seen. The sentinel cottonwoods beside the river rustled at every touch of wind. Up where we were and out across the big ridges all around, pothole lakes made blue pockets in the green prairie. Anna, you need to see this with me, I vowed that June morning on the green high bluffs of the Two Medicine. Sometime we must come, just the two of us, and on a morning such as this watch summer and the earth dress each other in light and grass.

This isn't something a writer gets from a textbook. It's something you know because you are the son of an easy-going ranch hand named Charlie Doig and Berneta, the woman he loved, and because you remember the night of your 6th birthday in the cabin high in the Bridger Mountains, when you heard your mother's asthmatic breathing labor, choke and then stop, while your father fumbled, crying, to light the lantern in the dark. "She's dead, Ivan. Your mother is dead."

The author remembers Charlie, after that, taking him along on his sheepherding jobs, and into the saloons of White Sulphur Springs, and then making peace with his mother-in-law, widowed Bessie Ringer, and settling with her as housekeeper into a more stable life for the sake of his son.

And the July afternoon when he was still a sophomore in high school, shearing sheep on the Blackfeet reservation and getting hit with a terrific icy rainstorm that stampeded the sheep and even froze some to death, and he decided in that one moment that this was enough, that he was going to get out of Montana, beautiful or not.

And the times he waited in the middle of nowhere, stood by the tracks with his suitcase at Ringling, Mont. (pop. 45), for the depot agent to flag down the train, and it would sit there hissing gigantically, and a guy in a white jacket would jump down and set out a portable step so he could get aboard, just him, to go to Northwestern University in Illinois.

"I got a doctorate. I never used it," Doig said. "I thought about journalism and ended up as a free-lance magazine writer. 'This House of Sky' came out of my exasperation at the money situation."

That first book, a memoir published in 1978, helped some, as did his first novel, "The Sea Runners," but basically his wife Carol, a teacher, supported the two of them until "English Creek" came out.

From the beginning he knew it would be a trilogy. He left little holes — enigmatic references to the past — in the first book, which happens in the '30s, knowing that he would fill them in one way or another in the second.

The third will cover the centennial celebration and will tie up some loose ends in his McCaskill family, Scots like his own grandfather, Peter Doig, who came west to settle the hard country of Montana.

"I tried to figure what Scots guys would look like in those days," said Doig, 48, who with his graying red beard and long Saxon face wouldn't be a bad model himself.

"I thought about Thomas Carlyle, with that long upper lip and big nose. Then there was a woman I wanted for Beth McCaskill, and I found her in the library, but she was 60 years old, so I asked her to get me a picture of herself at 40."

And the family albums. "My mother kept one. There was a photo of my father when he was a rodeo cowboy, young, in chaps, with his bandana flowing. It was terrifically evocative. It reminds you — they were young once too, by God, young and crazy and this and that."

(In "This House of Sky" Doig talks about this picture. " ... He was so slim down the waist and hips that the seat of his pants forever bagged in,and the tongue of his belt had to flap far past the buckle, as if trying to circle him twice. Certain photos catch this father of mine as almost mischievous, cocking the dry half-grin which sneaks onto my own face as I look at him...."

Doig and his wife still live in Seattle. She still teaches, and he still writes on a manual typewriter because word processors affect his eyes. And he remains, still, a Montana boy.

Everything was in place. The continent's flange of mountain range along the west. The dark far butte called Heart and the nearer slow-sloping one like an aft sail. The grass plateaus beyond Gros Ventre and its cottonwood creek. The soft rumple of plains toward the Sweetgrass Hills and where the sun came from. Enough country that a century of Robs and Anguses would never fill it.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MEREDITH FOLTZ

Among recent nonfiction arrivals at Sheppard Memorial Library is "Voyager" by Jeana Yeager and Duck Rutan. The book takes its title from the name of the ultra-lightweight aircraft in which American copilots Yeager and Rutan circled the earth nonstop in December, 1986.

Rutan and Yeager's historic flight in Voyager was accomplished without refueling and was completed two days ahead of schedule. During the nine days of the trip, the copilots were faced with adverse weather, mechanical and structural failures, the risks of unfriendly airspace, and the roller-coaster alternation of exhilaration and exhaustion.

Yeager and Rutan take turns telling not only about the adventures of the recordbreaking flight but also about the development of the project, which was funded without any government support. Rutan, a former fighter pilot in Vietnam, and Yeager, who had trained to be an astronaut, offer glimpses of their youth and the interests that led them to pursue the dream of the Voyager flight.

• "Heroes in Space" by Peter Bond chronicles American and Soviet space missions from "Gagarin to Challenger." The focus here is not on technology but on the men and women who flew in space from 1957 through 1986.

The political pressures, publicity, administrative foul-ups, Russian secrecy, equipment malfunctions, delays, and accidents endured by astronauts and cosmonauts may be eye-opening reading for Americans mostly accustomed, at least until the Challenger disaster, to glowing success stories.

There were, of course, success stores as well as tragedies. "Heroes in Space" provides a refreshingly human-sided view of both the triumphs and defeats in efforts to explore space.

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The Beaufort County Arts Council will observe Black Heritage Month, February, in an exhibit that includes paintings by Wilmington artist Minnie Evans and Greensboro artist Edward Hale.

The show will be on view through Feb. 26 in the council's Lane Gallery and the Belk/Bracy Gallery in the Washington Cultural and Civic Center, downtown Washington. The center is located in the former train depot on Glidden Street.

An opening reception, free and open to the public, will take place from 2 to 4 p.m. today. Jazz flutist Michael Porter, visiting artist at Durham Technical College, will present a concert from 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. Porter's appearance is made possible through cooperation with Joseph Hoey, visiting artist at Beaufort County Community College.

North Carolina's foremost visionary artist, she was born in Pender County in 1892 but moved as an infant to Wilmington where she lived until her death at the age of 94 last December. In 1908 she married Julius Evans, and the couple had three children.

The art of Mrs. Evans, which has won national and internatinal recognition, has been shown in major museums in North Carolina, New York and London. The life and art of Mrs. Evans has been featured in Newsweek magazine and in several national art journals.

Religious experiences and an interest in mythology, along with the flowers and greenery of Airlee Gardens in Wilmington, where she was gatekeeper for many years, served as major inspiration for her art.

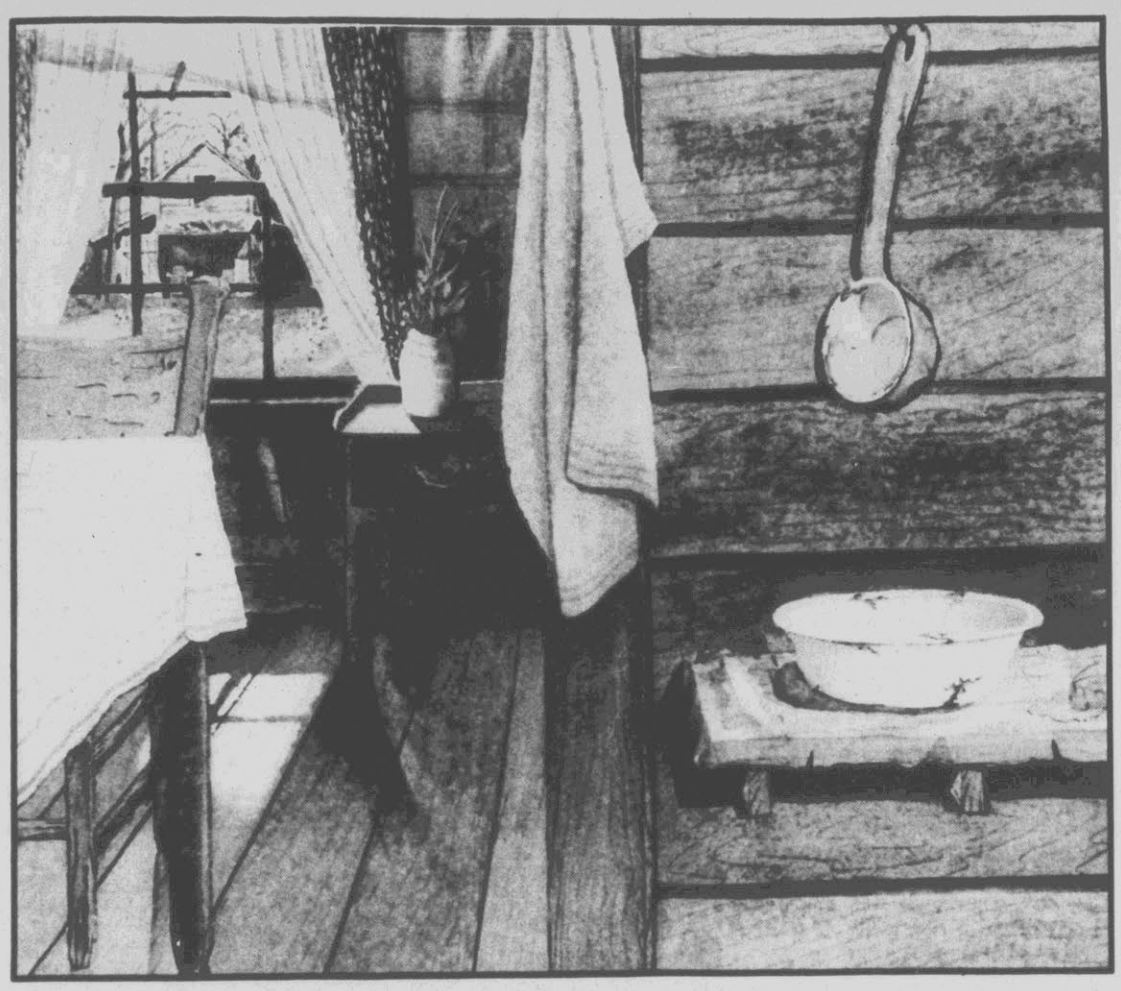

• Artist Edward Hale, a native of Clarksdale, Miss., moved to Greensboro in 1970. His mixed media work, displayed under the title "Moods and Memories," will include several landscape and still-life paintings.

Hale served as coordinator for the Black Arts Competitive Exhibit at the Theater Art Galleries in High Point, which has now become an annual event. He was assistant director for the Black Arts Festival in Chicago that included 47 artists and 300 works of art.

Commenting on his work, Hsle said: "As a black artist, I find that my most emotional and demanding works are those of the black experience. Yet in order for me to grow as an artist, I must reach out beyond my heritage to record the varied stimuli of all that surrounds me."

The Beaufort County Arts Council's galleries are open Mondays-Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is free. Group tours can be arranged by calling 975-6993.

A HALE PAINTING — "Through Lillie's Kitchen Window," a painting by Greensboro artist Edward Hale, is one of the artist's work to be seen in an exhibit of work by Hale and Minnie Evans going on view today in the galleries of the Beaufort Council Arts Council downtown Washington, N.C. A reception, free and open to the public, is being held from 2 to 4 p.m.

A Film About Gaby Was A Six-Year Obsession For Director

IN ARGENTINA — Rock singer Tina Tuner performed Jan. 4 at River Plate Stadium in Buenos Aires, Argentina before a crowd of 50,000. The show was televised live. Police arrested about 130 people at the concert, most for intoxication or stealing stereo equipment from cars. (AP Laserphoto by Alejandro Querol)

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The story of a woman so burdened by cerebral palsy that she can only communicate by moving her left foot may not immediately sound uplifting, but for director Luis Mandoki it was "a song to life."

The result of a what he calls a six-year obsession won critical acclaim in the United States as "Gaby: A True Story."

Mandoki is hoping that word of mouth about the cheerful, sometimes humorous and always inspirational nature of the movie will help pull in audiences as it moves to wider release.

"That's the only way that this movie can achieve a mass public," the red-haired, red-beared Mandoki said in an interview on the porch of a bar in the city's outlying San Angel neighborhood.

Mandoki first met her in 1980. Her drive to get an education and the devotion of Florencia, her childhood nurse who recognized her will to communicate and remains with her, are key elements in the story.

"I saw Gaby one time on television, and then I read the book," the 33-year-old director said. "The feeling became even stronger once I met her.

"Suddenly, the idea was reminding me that life is a gift that I take for granted. Gaby for me became a hope — a song to life."

However, an aspiring movie director still in his 20s has limited options in Mexico. Mexican cinema once dominated Latin American theaters and gained worldwide attention with such stars as Dolores del Rio and such directors as Emilio "El Indio" Fernandez.

But its current fare is mostly cheap sex comedies or lurid epics about drug smugglers and illegal aliens, plus a scattering of "art" films that rarely even make it to commercial release here.

"It's very sad," Mandoki said.

Mandoki, whose parents had emigrated from Hungary to Mexico, studied in San Francisco and London and had some success with short films and documentaries. He had never made a feature.

He said he realized that to be able to work here he would have to become a producer. He met some people with a script for a thriller called "Motel," managed to privately raise the money and then produce as well as direct it.

"As a financial experience, it was a failure," Mandoki said of the 1983 feature. But it made it onto the international festival circuit and he was able to make the connections that led to the $3 million financing for "Gaby."

"It sounds easy, but it was like a maze," he said. "I spent two years in the most tremendous anguish."

Attracting such stars as Liv Ullman, who plays Gaby's mother, and Argentina's Norma Aleandro also helped.

Aleandro plays Florencia, the stoic nursemaid, in her first English-speaking role. She had caused in international sensation with her appearance in the award-winning "The Official Story."

"There was something chemical when I met her" Mandoki said. "She's a very glamorous woman, just the opposite of Florencia. But I felt that she could do it."

A young New York actress, Rachel Levin, plays Gaby in a remarkable performance. Mandoki wanted someone unknown so that the audience would wonder if the handicap was real.

"Gaby" premiered at Mexico City commercial theaters on Christmas Day. It received mixed reviews from domestic critics in its showings at film festivals in Acapulco and Mexico City. The movie was made in Cuernavaca, a resort city 45 miles southwest of Mexico City.

Some Mexican critics snipe that the movie is "commercial," "conventional" or 'too Hollywood," complaints Mandoki dismisses as envy. "We kill each other off so that nobody can have any success," he said.

The real Gaby, who now is about 40, and Florencia attended the showing at the Acapulco Film Festival, where the audience went wild when they were introduced. They caused a similar stir at the Los Angeles premiere.

Gaby Brimmer also spent time on the set during production. "She was the soul of the movie," Mandoki said.

He credits American cult director Sam Fuller, whom he met at a festival in Spain, for helping with his international connections and his ideas of what a movie should be.

Mandoki says Fuller told him: "Movies are movies because they move people. ... Movies have no nationality, if they are good."

'Bright Star' Next For Playwrights Fund

N.C. Symphony And ECU Symphony To Perform At Wright January 17

CONDUCTOR — Gerhardt Zimmerman will conduct the N.C. Symphony with soloist Lynn Harrell in a joint N.C. Symphony and ECU Symphony orchestra concert at Wright Auditorium on Jan. 17. Robert Hause will conduct the portion of the program to be presented by the ECU Symphony.

ECU News Bureau

The North Carolina Symphony will combine forces with the East Carolina Symphony for a joint concert on the ECU campus Jan. 17. Cellist Lynn Harrell will be featured soloist.

The concert, part of ECU's 1987-88 Artists Series, is scheduled for 3:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

Harrell will perform the Dvorak Cello Concerto in B Minor, Opus 104, with the 130-member combined orchestras. Conducting this portion of the concert will be Gerhardt Zimmerman, North Carolina Symphony conductor.

The first half of the concert, performed under the baton of East Carolina Symphony conductor Robert Hause, will consist of the Prelude to Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and the Schubert "Symphony No. 8 in B Minor ("The Unfinished"').

The North Carolina Symphony has toured the state since its founding more than 55 years ago. Its current schedule includes 400 concerts in 100 communities. Zimmerman, formerly associate director of the St. Louis Symphony, became the North Carolina Symphony's artistic director in 1982.

He has been guest conductor of many other orchestras, among them the National Symphony in Washington, D. C., which he led in a special concert on the lawn of the Capitol with composer Aaron Copeland narrating his own composition, "A Lincoln Portrait."

The East Carolina Symphony, comprised of student instrumentalists from the ECU School of Music, has won recognition as one of the nation's leading campus orchestras. The Symphony was selected as one of 13 college and conservatory orchestras in the nation featured on a recent National Public Radio network series.

Robert Hause, professor of music at ECU, has been the East Carolina Symphony's conductor since 1967. He has been assistant conductor of the Michigan and Jacksonville, Fla., Symphony Orchestras and is frequently guest conductor at music centers and music festivals.

Cellist Lynn Harrell, who performed a solo Artists Series concert at ECU a few years ago, averages 100 concert appearances a year and is completing all the major cello repertoire for Decca-London records. He is the winner of many prestigious awards, and has appeared as soloist with the world's greatest orchestras and conductors on five continents.

Tickets for the Jan. 17 concert are available at the ECU Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center. General admission tickets are $12 each and $6 for students and youth. Telephone orders for tickets and further information are available at 757-6611, ext. 266.

For years he has been a consistent performer throughout North Carolina in clubs, coffeehouses, festivals and other events.

In 1987 he was featured nationally when he was selected to arrange and perform the score for the Chicago run of Sam Shepard's play, "A Lie of the Mind."

During the 1980s, Wells has worked with state and local arts agencies reinterpreting the work of such bluesmen as Blind Boy Fuller, Robert Johnson, Blind Blake and Gary Davis.

He has also recorded the music of Big Boy Henry and Algia Mae Hinton.

Hawkins To Receive Dance Award

DURHAM — Erick Hawkins will receive the 1988 Samuel H. Scripps American Dance Festival Award at a special award presentation performance on June 15 at the American Dance Festival in Durham.

The $25,000 annual award was established in 1981 to honor American modern dance choreographers who have made a life-time contribution to the art form.

Hawkins grew up in Trinidad, Col. and graduated from Harvard with a classics degree. It was during one of his semester breaks that he saw the German dancers Harold Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi perform and decided to begin dancing. He studied with Kreutzberg and then enrolled in the School of American Ballet, where he was the first male student.

Balanchine subsequently invited him to teach at the school, the first American so honored. In 1938 he became the first male dancer in Martha Graham's company, creating roles in "American Document," "Every Soul is a Circus," "Letter to the World," "Appalachian Spring" and "Night Journey" among others. He opened his own school in 1951 and began his collaborative relationship with the composer Lucia Dlugoszewski.

Hawkins has consistently felt the musical and visual sides to a dance are as important as movement. He has worked with artists such as Isamu Noguchi, Helen Frankenthaler, Ralph Dorazio and Ralph Lee and composers such as Virgil Thomson, Alan Hovhaness, Henry Cowell, Wallingford Riegger, Ross Lee Finney, Michio Mamiya, Lou Harrison and Ge Gan-ru.

The Erick Hawkins Dance Company's 1987-88 season is for a nationwide tour including a sold-out run at the Kennedy Center and a week-long engagement at the Joyce Theater; a $70,000 grant from Volvo North America; the production of the first television program devoted exclusively to the artist, produced by South Carolina Educational Television, and a move to a 4,500 square-foot studio in Manhattan.

In receiving the 1988 Scripps ADF Award, Hawkins will join the list of past recipients: Martha Graham (1981), Merce Cunningham (1982), Paul Taylor (1983), Hanya Holm (1984), Alwin Nikolais (1985), Katherine Dunham (1986) and Alvin Ailey (1987).

The 1988 American Dance Festival will take place in Durham with various dance events scheduled from June 11 to July 23.

Senior Recital

Mezzo-soprano Lois Carol Hawkins of Wilson, a student of Gladys White in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present her senior voice recital at 7 p.m. Thursday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus.

The recital is free and open to the public.

She will be accompanied by Mark Gansor, piano and Barbara Memory, violin.

For her program, she has chosen works by Bach, Wagner, Ravel, Debussy, Daniel Pinkham and Ned Rorem.

Streep and Sam Neill as Aussie couple in Evil Angels

Q Are Meryl Streep and Jack Nicholson making a film in Australia so they can stay out of gossip's way? Does the film have anything to do with baseball?—Mort Weiss, Honolulu, Hawaii

A You are confused. Meryl Streep and Jack Nicholson worked together several months ago in "Ironweed," a film which deals with an ex-baseball player who becomes a drifter. After finishing "Ironweed," Streep flew to Australia to star opposite Sam Neill in "Evil Angels," a production in which Nicholson has no role. "Evil Angels" is based on the true story of Lindy Chamberlain, an Australian mother jailed for murdering her baby daughter in the outback. Chamberlain insisted her baby was eaten by a dingo (a wild wolflike Australian dog), but the trial court found her guilty nonetheless. She was subsequently pardoned by the government after new evidence was found. The "Dingo Baby Case" was widely publicized in Australia for months.

Q What kind of doctor is C. Everett Koop, the Surgeon General of the U.S.? Where did he go to school, and what is his salary?—Barbara Robinson, Germantown, Pa.

Q Does anyone have any idea how many children in Vietnam were fathered by American GIs who served in the war there during the 1963-75 period?—Carla Ricks, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Bill Kurtis, a reporter and TV journalist for WBBM in Chicago and the CBS network, wrote in 1980: "In the confusion of the 1975 pullout, more than 8000 Vietnamese-American children were left behind." Mark Viggiano, communications director for The Pearl S. Buck Foundation in Perkasie, Pa., estimates that 20,000 children were fathered by our GIs in Vietnam. And John A. Shade, former executive director of the foundation, declares in his book "America's Forgotten Children—The Amerasians" that approximately 100,000 children "without a name, a culture and in many cases even without citizenship" were left by American fathers in Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Okinawa, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos and the Philippines.

Q Did Harold Washington, the first black mayor of Chicago, overeat himself to death? What did he weigh when he died? Why couldn't such an intelligent man control his diet? Was there no wife or other woman who could order him to stop shoveling it in?—Joanna Mae E., Elkhart, Ind.

A When he died on Nov. 25 at age 65, Harold Washington weighed approximately 285 pounds—100 more than he should have. He died of a heart attack, no doubt caused in part by his obesity. Where food was concerned, Washington simply lacked willpower. Apparently his longtime companion, Chicago schoolteacher Mary Ella Smith, could not influence his food consumption.

Q How much did the actor Sylvester Stallone of "Rocky" and "Rambo" fame settle on his first wife, Sasha? And is it true that he has had knives embedded in the wall of his estate in Pacific Palisades, Calif., so that anyone trying to climb over it will be impaled?—Lucy Glass, Bronx, N.Y.

A Stallone settled $32 million on the former Sasha Czack, after 10 years of marriage and two sons. Spikes, not knives, were installed atop the walls of Stallone's former estate to discourage unwanted trespassers.

FROM COAST TO COAST THE PLIGHT OF HOMELESS FAMILIES WORSENS

Mickey Pfleger

The Taylors—Deborah, 26, Hubert, 28, James, 4, and Hubert, 6—are among the 3 million homeless in America. For weeks, their car was their only shelter from nights in Northern California.

WE CAN'T PAY THE RENT

HUBERT TAYLOR, 28, HAS LOST HIS JOB AS A CHROME-PLATER IN THE AILING shipping industry. His wife, Deborah, 26, begins work as a waitress, but they are evicted from their rented home. Unable to find another place where they can afford the first month's rent along with a matching security deposit, they and their children—Hubert, 6, and James, not yet 4—begin sleeping in their car in the parking lot of the Rodeo, Calif., restaurant at which Deborah works.

"We're just grateful that we have each other," Deborah says, "and that the kids are healthy. It could be worse—if we didn't have a car or if I wasn't working. We're committed to getting back on our feet, but it's not easy. We're existing day to day, right on the edge."

BY HANK WHITTEMORE

COVER PHOTOGRAPH BY MICKEY PFLEGER

After living in their car for a few weeks, the Taylors check into a motel room for $30 a night. Day by day, they can manage to pay about $900 a month for the room and just scrape by. Hubert takes care of their sons while Deborah works from 5:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. six days a week. Because she works, the family can't receive public assistance. At $3.35 an hour, Deborah's salary after taxes doesn't cover the motel, so her tips must help pay the rent and buy food and gas.

"We do laundry every two weeks," Deborah says, "but the first priority is nourishment. Some nights in the motel, when there's not enough to eat, we don't turn on the television set because it might make the kids think about food."

On weekday mornings, Hubert drives his wife to work and their older son to school and, until he picks them up again, he takes care of the younger boy. Meanwhile, he keeps looking for work.

By December, as this story is being written, he was still looking. As the holiday season approached, the Taylors said they were merely "holding onto each other." They had joined the ranks of America's rapidly growing numbers of displaced families.

This has been especially hard on young Hubert, who grew up in a home of his own for the first five years of his life and who now goes to school with classmates who live in ordinary neighborhoods and homes. Those children have steady friendships and a feeling that they are in a place where they belong.

Being uprooted and unemployed and a "house husband" without a house is humiliating to Hubert Taylor. He has always been the family provider. He works hard at sustaining himself on Deborah's outlook that they are lucky to be together and healthy. But the climb gets steeper.

When Deborah asked James, who was 4 in December, what he wanted for his birthday, James replied, "I want a house to live in."

"They are the new homeless," says Maria Foscarinis, a lawyer with the National Coalition for the Homeless, a federation of advocacy groups based in Washington. "We're seeing many more intact families who can't find housing they can afford."

These families are not made up of drifters. More than one-fifth of our homeless are employed. Very often they are working parents—one or both of whom hold jobs. But their combined earnings never total a month's rent and a matching security deposit with enough left to buy food. As a result, they are rent-poor, forced to live in overpriced, often substandard lodgings and left with little for life's necessities as they struggle to keep their families united. Some must scatter to survive—with the children living perhaps in various dwellings or the fathers barred from the premises of residences

The coalition estimates the nation's homeless at up to 3 million, nearly 500,000 of whom are children. Worse: Nearly 40 percent of the homeless are families with dependent children and that percentage is rising faster than any other among the homeless.

In July, President Reagan signed into law a bill authorizing about $1 billion in emergency aid for the next two years. It aids in emergency shelter and some permanent housing for the homeless and health care, education and job-training services. The money was to be channeled into new and existing programs.

As the number of employed homeless rises across the nation, Joe Volk of Community Advocates in Milwaukee says that homelessness "is creeping up the economic scale."

During visits to cities and towns across the country, from Boston to Washington, D.C., to Milwaukee and Los Angeles, I found the same situation again and again.

What's being done about it? Far too little and—with the delay last November of passage of the first federal housing bill in seven years, for many—far too late. Since 1981, housing programs subsidized by the federal government were cut by more than 75 percent, from $32 billion to $7.5 billion. In most cities, the waiting lists for these programs are so long that they have been closed.

Ms. Foscarinis says, "Families were the main beneficiaries of federal housing programs for 50 years. So when these programs were cut, families started to suffer. And until it turns around, they will be in progressively deeper trouble."

The housing bill initially had authorized $15.6 billion for both 1988 and 1989. Then the 1988 figure was cut to $15 billion. The bill was passed by the House but defeated by the Senate. Sponsors of the legislation see it as a stop-gap measure to keep existing housing assistance programs in place through 1989 while lawmakers overhaul national housing policy. Opponents see it as too costly in light of a staggering federal deficit. When the bill finally will be passed is anybody's guess at this writing.

Eddie Adams

The Randalls: Tim, 28, Linda, 23, and Jonathan, 20 months, in Salvation Army Family Shelter in L.A. as he job-hunted.

Meanwhile, the situation grows worse, becoming, ultimately, a crisis evolving from the lack of affordable housing.

"Families are the largest-growing sector of homeless people," says Mitch Snyder, an activist for the homeless with the Community for Creative Non-Violence in Washington, D.C. "The first to be affected by the lack of affordable housing were single people—those one-room places we used to see in every city were the first to go. But now all kinds of housing is disappearing. If we don't do something by the end of the century, we're going to see 15 million to 20 million people on the streets looking for shelter with government assistance."

In November 1984, Snyder and his agency won a referendum that forced the city to give overnight shelter to all homeless persons who asked for it. The month before, Snyder began a 51-day hunger strike to force the Reagan administration to renovate an 800-bed shelter that the government had planned for only temporary use. It is now the Federal City Shelter and offers 1700 beds for men and for women. But hundreds more still are without shelter there. Last November, Snyder went on another fast, this time to increase public awareness of the nation's housing crisis.

In the interim, dozens of families—again, mostly single women with children—wait at the Pitts Hotel each evening for emergency overnight shelter. A private hotel, the Pitts has been under contract with the District of Columbia to provide rooms and to act as an "intake center" for the overflow. For those families who are turned away, buses arrive to take them to other hotels that will give them shelter.

Among the women staying at the Pitts was Jennifer, 22, with her 2-year-old daughter and a similar story. "My mother kicked me out during my pregnancy," Jennifer said, "and from then on, I was jumping from house to house. Finally I came here, because I couldn't think of anything else to do."

At the end of the summer in the nation's capital, there were nearly 900 homeless families but only 400 rooms in designated shelters. Until additional hotels could be made available, many families had to sleep in a school gymnasium; before that, they slept outdoors.

Eddie Adams

The Solis family: Jacquin, 52, Adina, 42, and their 10 children. He fled Cuba by boat in 1970. A carpenter/plumber, he's in search of work, refuses welfare. Salvation Army in Los Angeles took them in.

President Reagan has called federal subsidies for housing "budget busters." Gary Bauer, his assistant for policy development, suggested that the practice of rent control has "contributed greatly" to homelessness in large cities by encouraging landlords to abandon their buildings.

In New York City, a spokesman for Mayor Edward I. Koch calls Bauer's statement "totally unrealistic." He adds, "The problem will never be solved if Washington continues to walk away from this housing crisis. The cities can't solve this alone."

Sen. Robert Dole, (R., Kan.), minority leader of the Senate, says, "I have supported legislation and funds for the homeless and am committed to finding a cost-effective solution to their housing problems. But with a national debt of $2.4 trillion, Republicans and Democrats together must develop a program that best serves the homeless and all the taxpayers."

Sen. William L. Armstrong (R., Colo.) opposed the measure because, he says, "This bill skews housing-aid resources away from the truly needy and toward yuppie condos and other well-to-do subsidies." He says he is drafting "a more responsible, cheaper alternative."

Sen. Alan Cranston (D., Calif.), a major sponsor of the bill, disagrees, saying, "This is a financially conservative housekeeping bill, fashioned to allow states and cities to do the things that are necessary if they are to manage. It was hammered out with great care both by Republicans and Democrats. The opposition had since last spring to amend it—and made no effort to do so. At the last minute, they tried using largely misstated and misleading information from the Office of Management and Budget to defeat it because they dislike having government involved in housing at any level. This bill is not a spendthrift measure—it is $600 million below the level at which it was originally budgeted. We have made new refinements to persuade those who opposed it to pass this bill without further delay."

In Boston, at Rosie's Place, the first shelter for single women in the state, increasing numbers of mothers with children are arriving for help. "We're seeing a lot more younger women," says Tamsin Orion, a member of the staff at Rosie's Place, "and a much larger range of ages and races. Many women are on fixed incomes and the market of affordable housing for them is just empty."

One young woman, Martha, holding her baby girl, said she had been forced to leave the building in which she used to live when it was sold for conversion into condominiums. For 18 months, she and her three children had stayed with relatives. "My two older kids are still there," she says, adding that her family would reunite once she finds a low-income apartment. Till then, she and her baby must search for shelter. There are 17,000 Bostonians now on waiting lists for subsidized housing. "I don't think many people have grasped the enormity of the problem," Ms. Orion says.

"You could say that we're seeing a new social class," notes Carol Witthoff, director of the Salvation Army's family services for Los Angeles. "Many families have been struggling to keep a roof over their heads and food on the table. But then a crisis—an illness or a job layoff or an eviction—knocked them right to the ground."

In Los Angeles, the Salvation Army runs a 16-family shelter—the first to be built specifically for families, including fathers. "Families can stay here up to eight weeks," Ms. Witthoff says, "provided they work toward stabilizing. We take those we feel will benefit from the help we give." The families get a chance to build a small nest egg—ideally, enough for a month's rent and a security deposit. Included are services such as child-supervision and help with job-seeking, saving and apartment-hunting. This shelter is always full. Eight weeks, Ms. Witthoff adds, is the "bare minimum of time" needed by most families to begin to get back on their feet.

"Kids from homeless families tend to be much more depressed than others," says Ms. Witthoff, "and they exhibit many more psychological problems. They tend to do worse in school. Because they're shuffled around so much, and haven't a core group of friends, they miss out socially. Later, without the kind of education they need, they can't get jobs. It's a vicious cycle."

Over the past several years in our cities, hundreds of thousands of low-rent dwellings have been replaced by buildings of luxury apartments or offices.

With the $1 billion emergency bill, Maria Foscarinis adds, "Congress, for the first time, has acknowledged homelessness as a national problem, but it's still only a first step toward forming a national housing policy and building more low-cost housing."

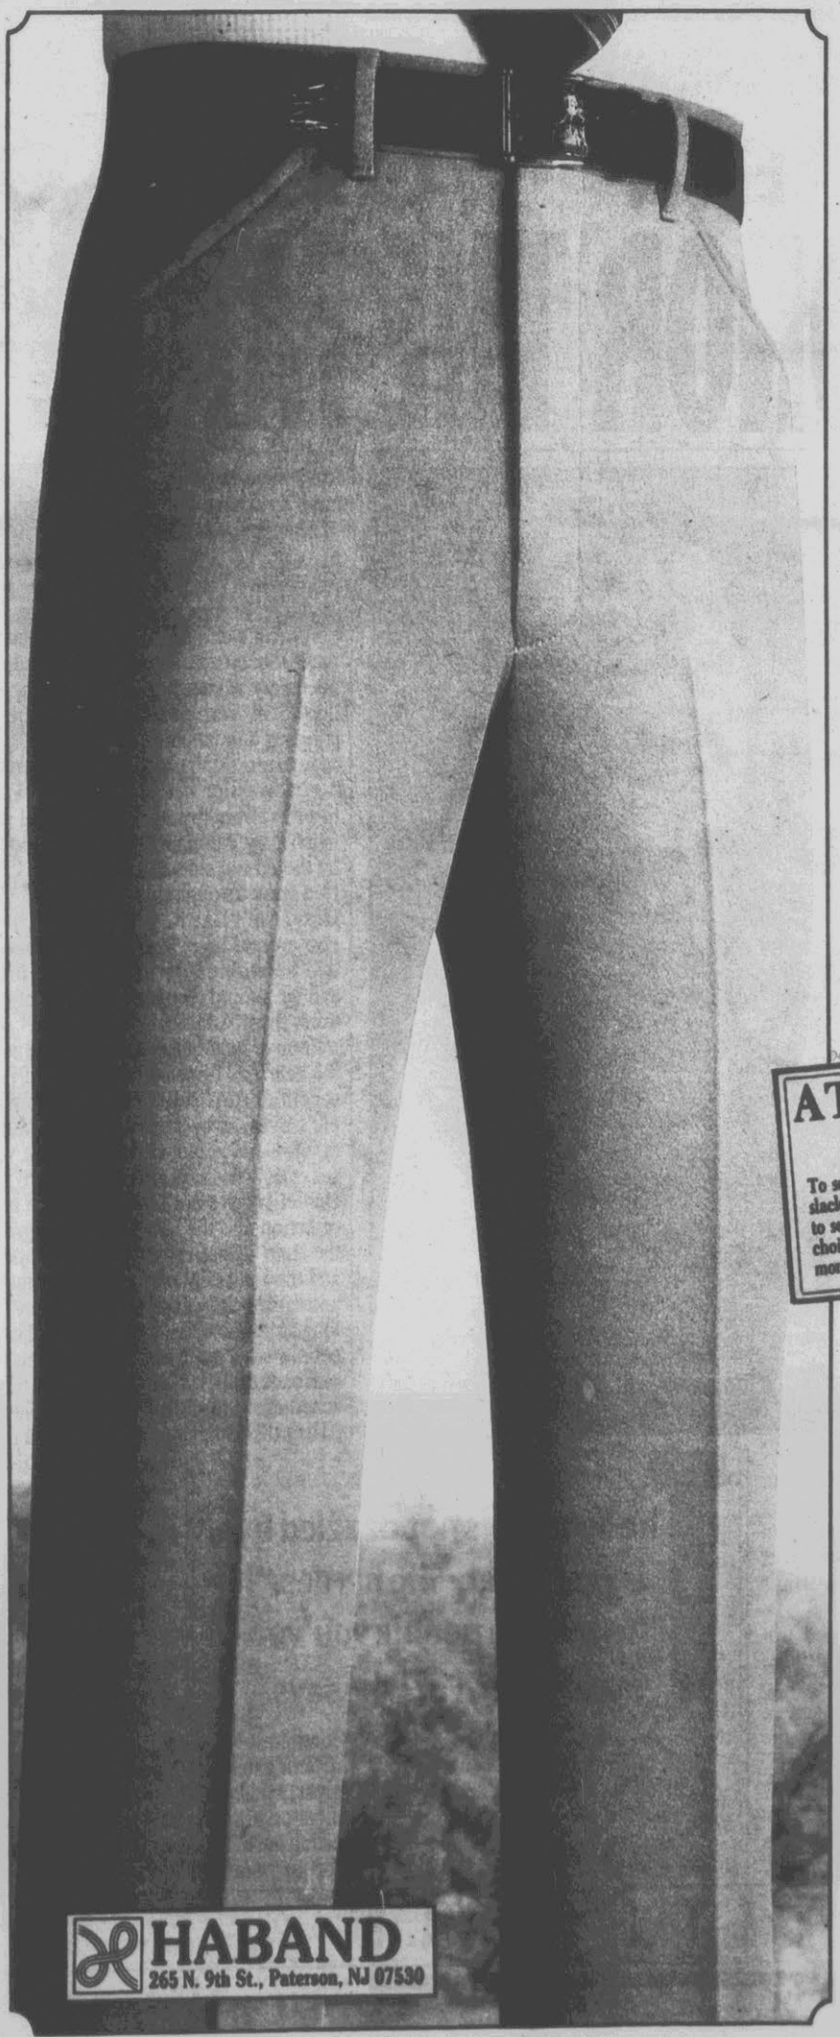

"Let me give you an example of what's going to happen more and more in the future," Mitch Snyder says. "In Alexandria, Va., there are some housing complexes that traditionally have been affordable for up to 10,000 people. These are low-income families, most not receiving any government benefits; a large percentage hold two low-paying jobs.

"Now that those buildings have been bought and are being upgraded," asserts Snyder, "the rents will go from $300 and $400 to $600 and $900 a month. So where are the majority of those people going to go? Over the next year or two, thousands of people will come out of there with no place to live.

"Some will leave, looking for greener pastures, but most will probably try to survive in the D.C. area. They'll hang on by splitting up their families and moving in with friends or relatives, but ultimately they're going to be on the street, applying for emergency assistance. They are the families that we'll read about being put into hotel rooms that rent for $3000 a month."

And those rents will be paid by taxpayers until a solution is found.

For further information, write: The National Coalition for the Homeless, 1439 Rhode Island Ave., N.W., Dept. P, Washington, D.C. 20005. Or write your own Senator and Congressman on your views about the need for legislation for housing aid to the homeless.

THE BEST ADVICE SENATOR DANIEL INOUYE EVER RECEIVED:

Brent Peterzen

IN THE MOST TRYING YEAR OF his political career, Daniel Inouye, 63, still looked like an unworried man. His smile was easy, his laughter was frequent and his surroundings reinforced the image of serenity. Inouye's office—with the bright red figure of a Hawaiian noble at the main entrance and the fish tanks, Hawaiian carvings, paintings and leis—brings an island cheerfulness to the marble mausoleum of the Hart Senate Office Building. Unlike some of his colleagues, the senior Senator from Hawaii doesn't need the trappings of power to remind himself of his own dignity.

The chairman of the Iran-Contra committee was in a reflective mood. "This was not a happy chore," he said of last summer's hearings, "but it had to be done. There were a lot of people out there who would only consider the hearings a success if we impeached the President; on the other side, a lot of people wanted just the opposite. There was a lot of talk about a smoking gun. I told the press at a background meeting before the hearings, 'I pray that if there is such a thing as a smoking gun, we never find it. What would we do if we did find it?'"

Although there was no smoking gun, the committee's majority report did sharply criticize President Reagan for what it saw as laxity in the running of the executive branch. Inouye insists that the committee's conclusions do not represent a political attack. "We were fair," he says, "not just because we wanted to be fair, but because we had to be fair. I have noticed that, often, when the President of the United States is perceived to be wounded, and the country is divided, the Soviet Union acts up. That's why our first priority was to make sure that we did not get into Reagan bashing."

For a man who has spent almost 30 years in Congress as a Democrat, public hearings into an Administration scandal were an opportunity for quick political gain. Instead, Inouye helped engineer a remarkable procedure: Republicans and Democrats sat interspersed on the committee, instead of at opposite sides of the room; they hired a non-partisan staff; and the House and Senate met jointly, holding only one set of hearings instead of two.

Often, on TV, Inouye seemed upstaged by the witnesses, especially Lt. Col. Oliver North, whose appeals to patriotism played better on the screen than Inouye's low-key style. But the senator says he doesn't regret the televised hearings. "I can't think of any activity we could have conceived that would have brought the Constitution in such force and drama to the people of the United States," he says.

The Senator is not dazzled by larger-than-life heroes. "My heroes are people you've never heard of," he says.

Unlike the Senate Watergate Committee—on which Inouye served 14 years ago—the Iran-Contra committee was the target of heavy public criticism. After North's melodramatic appearance, Inouye received calls and letters insulting his Japanese ancestry. Although Republican Sen. Warren Rudman delivered a stinging denunciation of these attacks, Inouye himself ignored them. Even now, his calm voice betrays no anger when he talks about this ugly incident. "I was touched by Warren when he got so moved by the ethnic slurs," Inouye says. "But I've gone through this. It's part of life. If you can't take it, you've got no business around here. Racial discrimination will be with us for a long, long time, and we should recognize the evil of it. I think most Americans do."

Inouye was taken aback by the way the hearings turned into a clash of personalities. "After awhile, in some people's eyes, it became not a committee thing, but a personal thing—Ollie versus me," he says. Oliver North and Daniel Inouye are opposites—the man of action and the man of the Congress, the man impatient to get things done and the man content to let consultation and collegiality take their course. "As long as you have democracy, you'll have people who are frustrated because the railroads don't run on time or the airline schedules are bad," Inouye reflects. "They think that a government run by a few wise people—usually wise men—could do a better job. But democracy is a slow process. We're seeking the truth, and it's a bumpy path."

"I'm old enough to remember General MacArthur defying President Truman," he continues. "I was glued to the radio listening to MacArthur's speech to Congress, and I could imagine the birth of a dictatorship happening. Congress was eating out of his hand. If we were looking for someone to play the role of the mag-

July 7, 1987. Senator Inouye, chairman of the Iran-Contra committee, motions to Lt. Col. Oliver North to be seated, as North's first day of public testimony on the affair begins.

'Some people think that a government run by a few wise people can do a better job. But democracy is a slow process. We're seeking the truth, and it's a bumpy path.'

nificent Caesar, there he was. He even looked like Caesar—or what Caesar should have looked like. But a few years later, he didn't even get 10 votes at the Republican convention. He faded away.

"Most Americans have tasted the fruits of democracy. We know what the good life is. We know what freedom is. We're not going to let anyone deny it to us."

Many people would call Daniel Inouye an American hero. With quiet dignity, he rejects the term. He lost his right arm to a German grenade in World War II, fighting in Italy with a segregated, all-Japanese regiment of the U.S. Army. He holds the Distinguished Service Cross and the Bronze Star, but he does not display his medals, or even talk about them. "I don't look upon my military service as a sacrifice in any sense," he says. "I've got too many friends who are buried out there. That's a sacrifice. They had dreams like all of us. The dream I had of being a surgeon was shattered, but this country was ready to give me another opportunity."

"I don't think a person is a hero if he deliberately goes out to make himself one, through carefully conscious words and phrases," Inouye says. "Throughout history, people have shown a craving for heroes who are larger than life, grand giants. My heroes are people you've never heard of. My father was a hero. He worked two jobs all his adult life, until he had his heart attack. His reward was to see his four children go to college—something that was denied him. You can repeat that story thousands of times throughout the United States. This is a country of heroes."

Inouye's father left a mark on his young son that remains with the senior Senator today. "When I left home, I was 18 years old," he recalls. "My uniform didn't fit right; I was not glamorous at all. He was riding with me on a streetcar—we didn't have a car of our own. He didn't say much. Finally, he turned to me and said, 'This country has been good to you and good to us. It has given you an education. It has given us a good life, so be it.' Then he said, 'Whatever you do, do not dishonor the family.' It took him less than two minutes to say that to me, but it said more than a book."

Daniel Inouye tells the story with no great show of emotion, sitting sedately in a leather armchair, without gesturing or raising his voice. With his slightly pudgy frame and his Hawaiian accent, the man will never be a media star. But, when he rises to show me out, he pauses by a stack of plastic bins bulging with mail. Weeks after the hearings ended, he was still getting more than 1000 letters a day. The criticism had all but disappeared; now, the letters were running about 20 to one in his favor. He could not suppress a smile as he pointed that out.

"In America," he said, "we sometimes get off the track. But in the end, the people rule."

POLL

TOUGHER DIVORCE LAWS?

PARADE received nearly 19,000 responses to its poll "Should Divorce Be Made More Difficult?" The question ran at the end of a June 7, 1987, article by Sylvia Ann Hewlett. More than 17,000 readers agreed with the author that divorce laws should be toughened, while 1627 disagreed.

The article also elicited many emotional letters from both men and women. The majority of readers who wrote letters were women—2275, as of early November—who wrote to say that divorce laws should be made more difficult, and 389 men agreed. Their primary complaint was in the area of child support. Most felt that no-fault laws gave men an unfair advantage in settlements, that men could avoid responsibility to their children and that enforcement needed to be stricter.

But 421 women and 172 men argued against changing the system that way. Most of the men focused on child-custody laws, an issue that had not been raised in the article. They wrote of the pain men endure when separated from their families, of bias against fathers in custody decisions, and they argued that stronger laws were necessary to secure their visitation rights.

They Make Children Smile Again

Mark Edward Atkinson

In 1984, the Operation Smile team corrected Elmer Arcilla's lip. A year later, they repaired the child's cleft palate. This photo was taken when Elmer was 6, during a follow-up visit with the doctors in 1986. Today, the boy is a healthy 8-year-old.

DR. WILLIAM MAGEE believes one man can make a difference, and he has gone halfway around the world to prove it. Not only that, he has persuaded a whole town that it can make a difference too.

Until six years ago, Dr. Magee was a more or less ordinary plastic surgeon who practiced in Norfolk, Va. Then he and his wife, Kathy, a nurse, took a trip to the Philippines with a medical team from Houston. It changed his life. Hundreds of people in need of basic facial reconstruction converged on the handful of American doctors, waiting to be helped. But the doctors, who were pressed for time, could attend to only a fraction of them.

Magee was deeply affected. When he returned to the U.S., he, Kathy and Dr. Benjamin Rigor, an anesthesiologist from Louisville, Ky., organized an annual mission of plastic surgeons from the Hampton Roads, Va., area that would fly to the Philippines to operate. "We knew we had the talent at our fingertips to change the lives of many children," recalls Dr. Magee, at 42, a boyish, soft-spoken, yet driven man.

Since then, the project, called Operation Smile, has grown to include nurses, dentists, pediatricians, speech therapists and social workers. Last year, its reach also extended to Liberia and Kenya. But perhaps what is most remarkable about the program is the way so many people in Norfolk have seized upon one man's dream and made it their own. So much so, that last year the governor of Virginia signed a proclamation declaring January 10-16 Smile Week.

Doctors from three hospitals—Sentara Norfolk General, Children's Hospital of The King's Daughters and Maryview Medical Center—donate their services. The town's manufacturers provide supplies—everything must be brought from home, from surgical gloves to toys that soothe nervous children who've never before seen a doctor. And even high school students have organized their own projects to send Filipino families clothes, food and money for schooling: $2.50 a year for one child.

Operation Smile emphasizes the patients' overall well-being. "We don't want to be just technicians," says Magee. "We try to deliver the same model of care that we deliver to the children back home." For example, the medical team teaches nutrition, genetics and, for those patients whom surgery has enabled to speak for the first time, it gives classes in speech. In fact, of the 70 people who participated last February, only 10 were plastic surgeons. They examined 550 patients and performed 260 operations in six days.

To the Filipinos, Operation Smile is a miracle and the Americans are angels of mercy. Nobody knows exactly why—malnutrition and a genetic predisposition have been suggested—but there is a nearly 3.5 times higher incidence of cleft palate and harelip among this population than in the U.S. It can cost a Filipino a year's wages to correct what in the U.S. is considered a medically routine problem; most can't afford it. Instead, the afflicted children remain hidden at home, stigmatized. A 45-minute operation does more than give them a normal face; it eliminates their shame, restores their self-esteem, dignity and, of course, brings smiles to those who have rarely smiled.

The Operation Smile doctors regularly bring their more complex cases to the U.S. for treatment. Last year, four patients—three children and a diminutive 26-year-old woman who, until two years before, had been thought retarded because she could not talk, flew 30 hours to Norfolk. When they stepped off the plane, crowds surged to greet them, including many of the area's large Filipino community, which serves as host to recuperating patients. The participating hospitals provide all medical care to the Filipinos free of charge, and their staffs fully and eagerly assist the Filipino visitors—who speak no English and have never seen a television set or modern plumbing before. Indeed, the patients, who were shunned at home, even achieve a certain fame in Norfolk: Everyone can recall the stories of those who have long since returned to their country—all stories with happy endings.

Antero, for example. The 16-year-old's nose had been eaten away by infection. Not surprisingly, he was withdrawn and morose. In Norfolk, doctors controlled the infection, and plastic surgeons constructed a new nose for him. A year later, Antero was a typical teenager; he sang, he danced at discos, he smiled. Antero returned home a hero, and even his mother didn't recognize him at first. Today, four years later, he is working as a carpenter in Naga City in the Philippines, and is married.

Despite its success, Dr. Magee says Operation Smile is still only the germ of an idea: He sees no reason why other towns can't do what Norfolk has done, and he's willing to show them how. He'd like the project to be as big as anyone can imagine. Nothing in his experience has indicated that it can't. ■

Intelligence Report

Stamp Out 'Doublespeak'

William Lutz, professor of doublespeak

"In this world nothing is certain but death and taxes." Benjamin Franklin penned those immortal words to a friend in France on Nov. 13, 1789.

"If he were writing that letter today," says William Lutz, smiling softly, "Franklin's update might easily read: 'In this world nothing is certain except negative patient care outcome and revenue enhancement.'"

Prof. William Lutz, 47, is one of this country's foremost authorities on *doublespeak, which is the academic word for double-talk and all forms of deceptive language, including goobledygook and officialese. He teaches English at Rutgers University in Camden, N.J., practices law ("as little as possible," he says) in Philadelphia, edits the scholarly Quarterly Review of Doublespeak and is chairman of the Committee on Public Doublespeak of the National Council of Teachers of English (NCTE), an organization of 90,000 members.

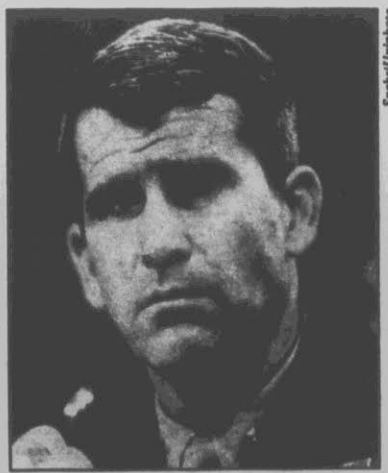

Since 1974, the committee has awarded an ironic "tribute" to American public figures guilty of employing language that is "grossly deceptive, evasive, euphemistic, confusing or self-contradictory." Two months ago, at the annual NCTE convention, Professor Lutz announced that Lt. Col. Oliver North and Rear Adm. John Poindexter had won the 1987 Doublespeak Award. They earned it for the language and the way they used it in testifying before the Congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra scandal. Ollie North "never called any of his actions 'lying,'" according to Lutz. "In speaking of a false chronology of events which he helped construct, North said that he 'was provided with additional input that was radically different from the truth.'" North also used the word "residuals" as a cloudy substitute for "money," says Lutz, and testified that some government documents were not "destroyed" but were "non-log" or "kept out of the system so that outside knowledge would not necessarily be derived from having the documents themselves."

Poindexter's testimony was equally evasive and filled with doublespeak, Lutz charges. He points out that, according to the former national security affairs adviser, "we learn that one does not lie but 'misleads' or 'withholds information.'" Lutz adds: "One can transfer millions of dollars of government money as a 'technical implementation' without making a 'substantive decision.' One also can send subordinates to lie to Congressional committees if one does not 'micromanage them.'"

Lutz maintains that doublespeak has become increasingly prevalent in such government departments as Defense, State and Agriculture, wherein officials use words to conceal rather than communicate, to obscure rather than clarify. He has collected the following examples: Military officers have referred to a pencil as a "portable hand-held communications inscriber." A bullet hole has been defined as a "ballistically induced aperture in the subcutaneous environment." A tent is a "frame-supported tension structure." To kill is to "terminate with extreme prejudice." A parachute is an "aerodynamic personnel decelerator," and a toothpick is a "wood interdental stimulator."

Doublespeak is infectious. In the field of medicine, malpractice is described delicately as a "therapeutic misadventure." Death frequently is referred to as a "terminal episode," and amphetamine pills are classified as "activity boosters."

If you have or come across an example of doublespeak in print that you'd like to share with the public, Bill Lutz would appreciate your sending it to him. Mail it to: William Lutz, National Council of Teachers of English, Dept. P, 1111 Kenyon Road, Urbana, Ill. 61801. He also recommends that you test your aptitude for recognizing doublespeak by trying your hand at the Doublespeak Quiz, which consists of matching letters on the right with the numbers on the left. The correct answers appear below.

I PROMISE ... You Can lose weight, and may keep it off PERMANENTLY with my Deal-A-Meal™ Weight Loss Program!

... Richard Simmons

Over 233,000 people in our first 8 weeks...Makes Deal-A-Meal perhaps the FASTEST GROWING WEIGHT LOSS PROGRAM IN HISTORY!* Here's Why:

Doesn't starve or punish you . . . Gives you a safe, nutritionally balanced way to control your calories, without counting them!

Lost 44 lbs.

Lost 110 lbs.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS

1. Food Groups are divided into 6 colors of cards:

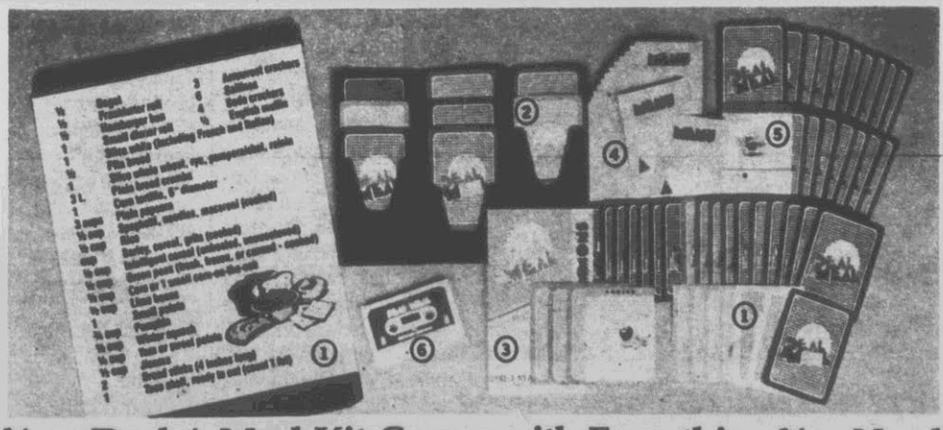

Meats are Red, Breads-Brown, Vegetables-Green, Fats-Yellow, Dairy-White, Fruits-Pink. The back of each card lists the food equivalents that card is worth. For example, one bread (brown) card is worth a slice of bread, a dinner roll, half a bagel, half a bun, a half cup of pasta, a tortilla, etc.

2. You start each day with a set number of cards of each color.

For example, if you want to lose 40 pounds or more, you start off each day with 6 Red cards, 6 Brown, 2 White, 4 Green, 4 Pink, 5 Yellow.

3. Whenever you eat a meal or a snack, you "play" the appropriate cards.

Anytime you eat, whether a snack, or a complete meal, you simply take the appropriate cards out of the left side of your "Deal-A-Meal Wallet," and place them into a "meal" pocket on the right side of the wallet. When you run out of cards, you're done eating for the day. You've eaten the appropriate number of calories in a nutritionally balanced combination.

IN STEP WITH: BY JAMES BRADY

Lauren Bacall

THERE WAS A POIGNANT little item in the paper recently. Lauren Bacall was speaking to a class of film students at the New School in New York and remarked how few roles there were for actresses her age. "I'm unemployed and would like to be employed," she complained. She said she'd soon be doing the narration for Bacall on Bogart—a PBS television special about Humphrey Bogart, her late husband, which airs in March—then added, "but that's not what I call an acting job."

It is difficult to grasp that there are no jobs for a woman as well known as she is and for an actress as talented. But this is showbiz, hard and often cruel.

Betty Bacall (she was born Betty Joan Perske and raised in Brooklyn, N.Y., and friends still call her Betty) was a lean, lithe, young high-fashion model with a couple of small stage roles on her resumé when she arrived in Hollywood in 1943. She later admitted, "I was a commodity, a piece of meat." Bacall may have despised the so-called Hollywood "system" of the time, but it turned her into an instant star. At age 19, she was cast opposite Bogart in To Have and Have Not, a big box-office success loosely based on the Hemingway novel. Her sexy look, her husky voice and one line ("If you want me, just whistle") captivated audiences.

And Bogart. He was a major Hollywood actor and a hard drinker whose previous marriage had fallen apart with charges and countercharges that he and his wife got into boozy fistfights on their yacht. Betty, whom he promptly christened "Baby," tamed the savage. They fell in love and were married before she was 21. Over the next dozen years, she did some wonderful films: Key Largo, The Big Sleep, Written on the Wind and Designing Woman with Gregory Peck, in which she demonstrated a brilliant comic gift.

In 1957, Bogie died horribly of cancer. Betty was there to the end, nursing and loving. On the rebound, she and Frank Sinatra began a relationship that seemed about to culminate in marriage. For whatever reason, Sinatra dropped her. The bitterness has eased, but I noticed one night at New York's "21" Club that the management very tactfully gave them tables as far apart as was geographically possible.

She wed Jason Robards, gifted and difficult, in 1961. Robards was drinking in those days and, after eight years, they were divorced. One night in Paris, I dined with Betty and some French friends, and one woman was complaining about how hard life was. Betty listened for only so long and then snapped, "Listen, I was married to Bogie. I was married to Robards. You don't know about tough."

Betty always has commuted back and forth from Hollywood to Broadway. Her stage hits include Cactus Flower, Applause and the 1981 success Woman of the Year. She has an apartment in Manhattan at The Dakota, the rambling old (and very classy) apartment house outside of which John Lennon was shot, and a weekend place near the beach at East Hampton.

Now all Betty needs, as she says, is "a job."

BRADY'S BITS

I admire people with guts. That doesn't mean they're always easy to get along with. Maybe it was watching Bogart die or handling Robards or trying to domesticate Sinatra, but in the process, Betty Bacall got tough. In the freight elevator of the Broadway theater where she starred for a year and a half in Woman of the Year, someone scrawled her name and then the phrase: "The beast of Broadway." And, during a break, one of the chorus boys allegedly cracked, "I'm not going out there again until they feed her!"

Consider this a full-page want ad: Lauren Bacall, a great star in Hollywood and on Broadway, is looking for work. Any great roles out there? Contact Miss Bacall direct, or call her agent.

"N'YUK N'YUK N'YUK!" It's Moe, Larry & Curly—

THE 3 STOOGES

You loved it when they ran amuck as sculptors, plumbers and cowboys. You laughed yourself silly when the pies went flying. You split your sides roaring when they met Hercules and went around the world in a daze. Now, here are the Three Stooges—the wildest trio in the history of American film comedy—as only their "leader" Moe Howard could tell the story.

MOE HOWARD & THE 3 STOOGES is the only official biography of these much-loved masters of mayhem and slapstick. Delight in their antics as Moe recounts, in words and pictures, the glory days of the Stooges . . . from the early struggles in vaudeville to the nearly 200 comedies they made for Columbia Pictures and, finally, to their phenomenal comeback in television and feature films.

Behind the Scenes— The Curly You Never Knew

In this behind-the-scenes look at the Stooges' show business career and private lives, you'll discover why they took the name "Stooges" . . . how Moe got the haircut that was to make him famous . . . how the wild-haired Larry Fine joined the act . . . why Moe's brother Shemp first left the Stooges (to be replaced by their baby brother Jerome, better known as Curly)—and why he returned . . . and how Joe Besser and Curly-Joe DeRita became Stooges.

And you'll see a Curly you never knew . . . a singer and musician . . . an accomplished ballroom dancer . . . a young man known for his full head of wavy brown hair. To his many fans, the most popular of the Stooges, Curly's zaniness masked the lifelong pain of a gunshot wound . . . and of four unsuccessful marriages.

Over 240 Photographs

MOE HOWARD & THE 3 STOOGES is chockful of stories and anecdotes about the making of their classic two-reel shorts (over 150 pies were thrown during the sixteen-minutes of Slippery Silks—and did you know that their Men in Black was nominated for an Oscar?) and feature films . . . and packed from cover-to-cover with 248 black-and-white photos of the Stooges, both on and off the set (and out of makeup), some spreading across two pages. Many of these photographs are from Moe's private family album and can't be found anywhere else.

A Must for Every STOOGES Fan

Plus, there's a special, complete Stooges filmography, listing all of their films—from their earliest ones with Ted Healy to the two-reelers with Curly, Shemp and Joe Besser to the features with Curly-Joe, and including films in which the Stooges appeared alone—along with the year each was released, the director and the movie studio.

Every Three Stooges fan will want a copy of this one-of-a-kind book, so act quickly. Order your copy—or order several, to give as gifts—today.

Ron Leibman's Explosive Role

By Evan Levine

If you were a lawyer, would you defend someone whose principles were diametrically opposed to your own? What about someone you knew was guilty? While lawyers must deal with such issues every day, CBS's "Terrorist on Trial: The United States vs. Salim Ajami" takes the idea one step further. The movie, which airs Sunday, Jan. 10, deals with what would happen if a Jewish lawyer had to defend a Palestinian terrorist who was on trial in the United States for murdering five American tourists.

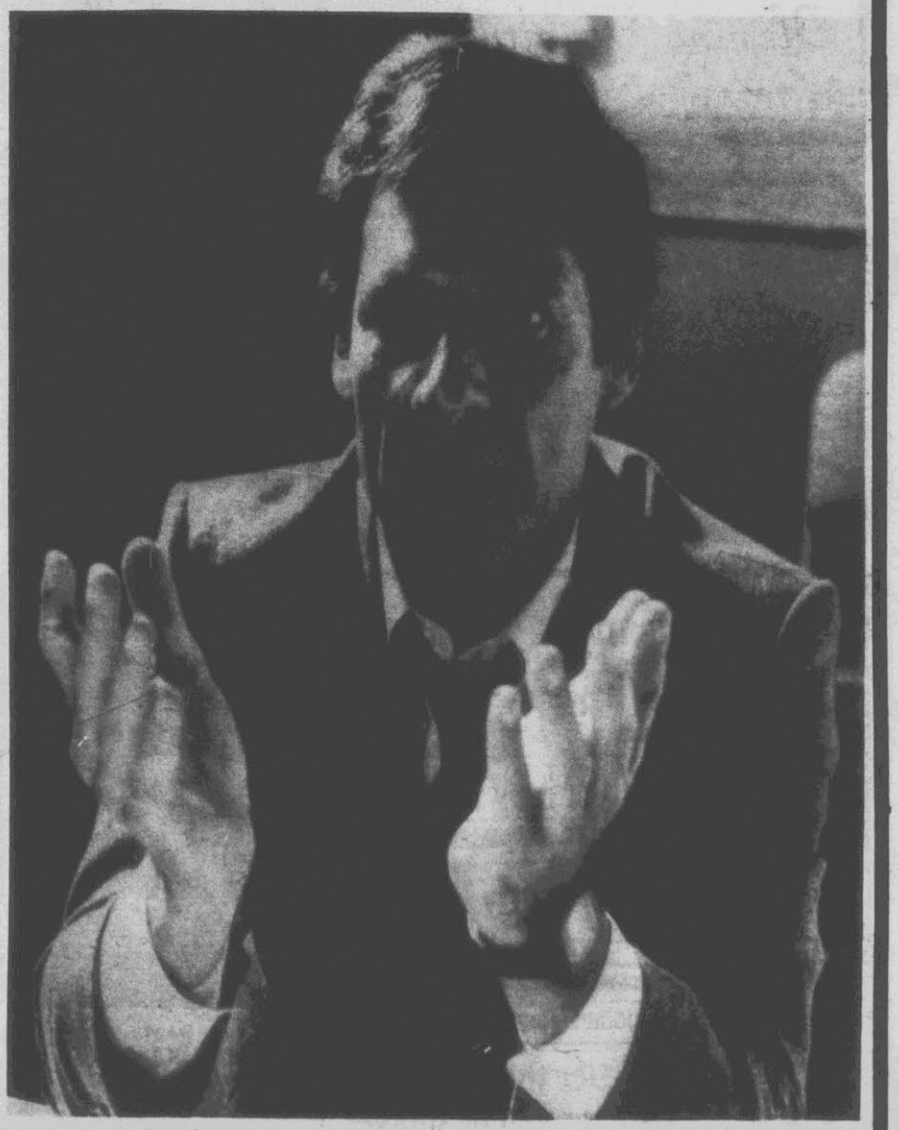

Ron Leibman, best known for playing a lawyer in the series "Kaz," plays the law professor who defends the terrorist. Leibman admits that even though TV has dealt with a variety of formerly taboo subjects, there was concern about airing something of this nature. "But I learned something after talking to (lawyer) Alan Dershowitz," he says. "If you're a doctor and someone has a heart attack, your job is to bring him back to life, even if he's the head of the Mafia. If you're a lawyer, it's the same principle."

Liebman confesses he was at a party when the intensity of the script became apparent. "I was talking to a lawyer about the role," Leibman recalls. "He got incredibly angry, as if I were really the lawyer. It was very scary. I suddenly realized the attitude many people would have towards something like this. That incident did more for me than all my reading, because it wasn't intellectual — it affected my feelings."

Leibman asserts that the point of the movie is to show the importance of the American judicial system. "If you serve the judicial system, you're serving democracy," he asserts. "There's a moment where I'm on my way out of court and I stop when I see the flag. It wasn't in the script, but that flag, the American system, is the point of the move."

Despite the incendiary nature of the piece, Leibman insists that what attracted him to the project were the small moments as much as the dramatic overtones. "I was fascinated because it wasn't just political," he emphasizes. "The lawyer doesn't want to take the case initially. He's trying to get his life together after his wife leaves him. I was interested because of the personal things, the little touches I was able to add.

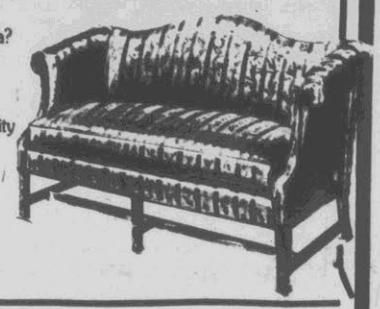

"It's not just hijinks in court," Liebman adds. "This is a man who is good with people, who is trying to get his life in order, who defends the terrorist even thought he doesn't want to. He is very much an American hero."

Ron Leibman plays a Jewish defense attorney who defends an Arab terrorist in CBS's "Terrorist on Trial: The United States vs. Salim Ajami." It airs Sunday, Jan. 10.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: I love Tony Danza in "Who's the Boss?" and adored him in "Taxi." How did he get his start in show business? — JOY BLAIR, OCEANSIDE, CALIF.

Danza fought his way into show business — literally! Success in New York's Golden Gloves competition set him on a boxing career. After retiring from the ring with a winning record, Danza read for a part in the 1979 film "The Warriors." He lost the part, but met "Taxi" co-producer Jim Brooks at the reading. Brooks didn't let Danza get away from him. He immediately cast him as Tony Banta, the sitcom's boxer-turned-cabbie. The character was originally written as an Irish heavyweight, but Brooks rewrote the role for Danza.

Dear Michele: During the opening credits of "Growing Pains," photographs are shown of people as they grow older. It is implied that these are actually childhood shots of the actors involved in the series. Are they? — CLAYTON A. STAHL, MORRISVILLE, PENN.

Dear Michele: Am I right to think that Greg Evigan, who stars on "My Two Dads," used to star on "B.J. and the Bear"? My husband thinks differently. — KIM THERIAULT, HOWLAND, MAINE

You're right! Evigan portrayed trucker B.J. McCay, the better-looking, human half on NBC's "B.J. and the Bear" (1979-81). He has since appeared in the TV movie "Private Sessions" (1985) and the HBO series "The Hitchhiker." Evigan, an accomplished musician, has a development contract with RCA Records. Did you know that Evigan scored, composed and performs the theme for "My TwoDads"?

Dear Michele: I have a bet with my mother concerning the movie "Destination Tokyo." I say James Stewart was in this film, and she says I'm wrong! Would you please give us the cast list so we can settle our wager? — BARBARA J. PHILLIPS, NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y.

Dear Michele: Many years ago, King World distributed "The Little Rascals" and "Our Gang" comedies. Is the King World that today distributes "Wheel of Fortune" the same company? — STEVE GRADY, HICKORY, N.C.

It is one and the same. Along with "Wheel of Fortune," King World also distributes the highly successful "Jeopardy!" and "The Oprah Winfrey Show."

This HBO special examines the question of euthanasia

By Connie Passalacqua

Who shall live and who shall die? And when? These are questions that are not easily answered – ever. But with the advent of advanced medical technology, the decision-making power has been transferred from the hands of God or fate to the hands of doctors and family members of terminally ill patients.

Richard Kiley

The highly emotional issue of euthanasia is examined on "Murder or Mercy: Five American Families," the latest edition of the HBO documentary series "America Undercover" (airing Jan. 11 and 13). It's narrated by Richard Kiley, star of NBC's "A Year in the Life."

Since this is not the happiest topic, the show opens with a warning saying that the following program may be too hard to watch. Yes, this is a dark, depressing show, and of course, you have the option off shutting it off. But think about how gut-wrenching it would be to make the same type of decision concerning the life of someone you love.

The documentary presents the story of five families who had to make the decision about a terminally ill member. All had a relative that was near death and often in terrible pain. Richard Moray, a Beverly Hills lawyer with lung cancer, begged to die after being hooked up on a respirator. His young wife recalls that her husband had been claustrophobic all his life. Unable to talk, he scribbled notes to her that read "gagging" and "let me die." Moray was a commanding presence in life, and his wife let him make his own decision about death.

Some families, however, would not abide by the pleas or decision of the dying patient. Jeanette Brown, who was ill with pancreatic cancer, asked her husband Tom to give her a fatal dose of morphine. "Regardless of how little time she had, it would have been me that had taken her life, and I wouldn't have been able to live with that," he says. She died three days later.

Is euthanasia murder or mercy? You have to decide – or may you never have to. As Robert Moray's doctor says: "It seems like a topic that's great to have a debate about – theoretically. But may you never have to deal with it in reality."

TV Chatter

Frequent "Tonight" guest-host Jay Leno knows how to answer questions whether he'll become the show's permanent host when Johnny Carson retires. "I don't think Johnny is going anywhere for quite some time," he says, diplomatically. Despite the wealth and recognition Leno's guest-hosting role has brought him, the comedian most enjoys the immediacy of the late-night institution. "It's great to be reading something hysterical on the front page of the newspaper in the morning, then make a joke about it later that evening," he says. "Before 'Tonight,' it could be a month between the time I came up with a joke and the time I got a TV booking — and by then the joke would be old news."

Though Leno likes his Doritos commercials, he vows never to plug wine or beer on TV. "You don't see horrible car crashes and teenagers with Doritos all over the road," he deadpans. "I don't put down anybody who does beer commercials, but most commercials are trying to sell beer to kids. That's the audience, anyway. I mean, they're not trying to reach 45-year-old Korean steelworkers. And there are no tragic implications to eating Doritos."

In the CBS movie "Terrorist on Trial: The United States vs. Salim Ajami" (airing Jan. 10), Ron Leibman plays Sy Resnik, a burned-out law professor who the ACLU asks to defend a Palestinian terrorist. When Leibman was first approached about the movie, the producers told him the plot concerned due process and the right to a fair trial. Leibman told the movie's producers to get lost. "I said, 'That's boring. What the (expletive deleted) is that? That's for PBS or '60 Minutes.' " Then Leibman was told he'd be playing a Jewish attorney who defends a Palestinian terrorist in an American courtroom. "Why didn't you say so?" he countered.

While researching the role, Leibman learned what resistance a real-life Jewish attorney might encounter if he defended a Palestinian terrorist. At a cocktail party for lawyers, Leibman describedthe movie's plot to some of the guests. "They literally started backing away from me. One constitutional lawyer was really angry and said, 'Why would you take a case like that?' That's when I really got hooked into the role. I thought, 'This is what Resnik must go through when he goes to cocktail parties.' "

Among the new faces on "Falcon Crest" this season is Mariska Hargitay, daughter of Jayne Mansfield and one-time Mr. Universe Mickey Hargitay. Mariska Hargitay, a former Miss Beverly Hills, plays Carly Fixx, the long-lost sister of Dan Fixx (Bret Cullen). Hargitay was 3 years old when her mother was killed in a grisly 1967 automobile accident, and she was raised by her father, who is now a builder. Despite Hargitay's age at the time of Mansfield's death, she says she has memories of her famous mother. "I have weird, sparse images of crawling into bed with her, having her hold me in bed, having breakfast, eating cereal. They're weird, the things I remember."

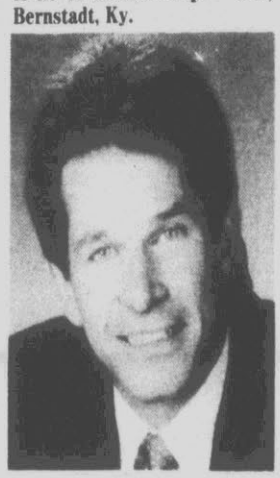

Although "Saturday Night Live" made her a fixture in living rooms across the country, Jane Curtin confesses she prefers her current prime-time hit "Kate & Allie" to late-night comedy. "It's a little more civilized and a lot easier. One character is less of a pain to interpret."... Movie critic Roger Ebert gives this simple advice to his readers and viewers: "If my reviews are any use to you, great. If not, try somebody else."

By Kimberly Redmond

Whatever happened to William Gray Espy, the first actor to portray Snapper Foster on "The Young and the Restless"? Is he on another soap? - C.F., Bernstadt, Ky.

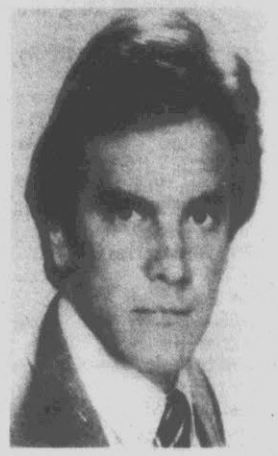

William Gray Espy

Espy, who left "Y&R" in 1975, is currently appearing on "Another World" in the role of Mitch Blake. He resurrected the role over a year ago after portraying the character from 1980-81.

Can you tell me why "Santa Barbara" took the character of Mason Capwell, portrayed by Lane Davies, off the show this past summer? I haven't seen him since. - J.H., Cookeville, Ind.

Davies has a clause in his "SB" contract that allows him to take time off during the summer to go to Atlanta, Ga., where he appears with the Atlanta Shakespeare Festival in various productions.

Lane Davies

I heard recently that Richard Egan, who portrayed Sam Clegg on "Capitol," had passed away. Can you tell me if it's true? - P.B., Belmont, N.C.

Sadly, it is true. Egan, who suffered from cancer, passed away on July. 20, 1987.

Can you tell me if A Martinez, who plays Cruz Castillo on "Santa Barbara," is married? - I.H., Minocqua, Wis.

CINDY SAYS

Bertolucci: Movie emperor; Eleanor Parker: A wig tale

By Cindy Adams

After "The Last Emperor," the new emperor of moviedom is director Bernardo Bertolucci. His next is the $20 million "Puccini," written by Terrance McNally, produced by Jerry Tokofsky, set for spring in Tuscany. ... Villard publishes Roxanne Pulitzer's "Prize Pulitzer" this fall. She'll make a four-week, 18-city tour. And Robert Halmi has bought the rights for an NBC movie. So what's Rox doing with the money? "Paying off my lawyers," she says. "I'm up to my neck in debt."... Diane Keaton's "Baby Boom" is booming into a TV sitcom spinoff.

Bernardo Bertolucci

Ever wonder whatever happened to "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane"? Well, the film's getting reincarnated on Broadway by Hal Hackady (lyricist for "Teddy and Alice") and composer Lee Pockriss. It will be Alexis Smith for Joan Crawford's role, Dorothy Loudon for Bette Davis'.

Julian Lennon will bank a nifty buck doing Fuji commercials in Japan. ... Revlon's new Charlie girl is 25-year-old Terri Jones, a 747 pilot who's competing for a round-the-world jet speed record. ... The newest super hot black-and-white $450 Omega Art Watch is on every yuppie wrist. Angie Dickinson flashed two last time I saw her. One on her ankle.

Eleanor Parker

Remember Eleanor Parker, star of oldie movies like "Scaramouche"? Her son Paul Clemens has written himself a one-man show about Edgar Allan Poe which will tour, then head for Broadway next summer. His Edgar Allan wigs are by the same lady who coiffed mama for "Scaramouche."

'Wojeck' Returns To CBC For A Limited Run

By Bob Remington

Crusading Canadian coroner Dr. Steve Wojeck comes back to TV this week after 20 years in the musty CBC vaults.

CBC is reviving "Wojeck" for a six-episode run beginning Thursday night, Jan. 14. If it proves as popular in reruns as it did when it first aired in 1966-67, viewers could see all 20 episodes back on the tube.

Nostalgia buffs seem to be looking forward to the series, which was the Canadian forerunner to the American TV series "Quincy." "Wojeck" was influential not only in spawning an American counterpart, but also for launching a number of Canadian careers, including that of star John Vernon. Other Canadian actors featured in the series who went on to bigger things included Michael Learned, Margot Kidder and Peter Donat. The series also proved popular in Britain, but Vernon remembers it for another reason.

"Wojeck was the first ethnic TV hero. He was from my heritage," says Vernon, a Canadian of Polish extraction who was born Adolphus Raymondus Agopsowicz.

Vernon, now a Los Angeles-based actor, is best-known for his role as Dean Wormer in "National Lampoon's Animal House" (1978). He attributes "Wojeck" 's popularity to well-written scripts that were based on actual cases from the files of Toronto coroner Morton Shulman.

"It was typical CBC. They didn't have any money and thought every script they wrote would be the last, so they gave each one their best shot."

The Night The Daytime Stars All Came Out

By Connie Passalacqua

The usually dull New York soap social scene came alive last month when more than 50 stars united for "Daytime Cares," a benefit for the organization Stamp Out Aids. The event attracted about 2,000 fans, who paid $25 or $35 apiece to gawk at one of the biggest daytime lineups ever assembled. You could buy popcorn from Peter Davies (Father Jim Vochek on "Loving") or sip a soda poured by Nikki Goulet or Michelle Forbes (Meredith Reade and Sonni Lewis, respectively, on "Guiding Light").

The highlight of the evening was a cabaret-style variety show. It was hosted by Kim Zimmer (Reva Shayne on "GL"), Linda Dano (Felicia Gallant on "Another World") and James DePaiva (Max Holden on "One Life to Live"). "Isn't it amazing the talent we have here in daytime?" Zimmer quipped. And yes, it is.

Hardly anyone takes seriously the usual soap-star boast of having musical talent. But several stars showed they did have talent in the music department. A svelte Candy Earley (Donna Sago on "All My Children") and Perry Stephens (Jack Forbes on "Loving") sang "Suddenly Seymour" from "Little Shop of Horrors." Anne Sward and a newly blond Martha Byrne (Lyla Montgomery and Lily Walsh, respectively, on "As the World Turns") harmonized on "You've Got a Friend."

It's A Perfect Week For Rabid Basketball Fans

By Marty Linehan

Think back! What did we do in mid-January before they invented the Super Bowl and mid-winter football? We watched basketball and hockey, that's what.

But we'll have to postpone that as both the American Football Conference and the National Football Conference head toward Super Bowl XXII with their divisional playoffs on Sunday, Jan. 10. NBC takes care of the AFC, while CBS handles the NFC.

* On Monday, Jan. 11, ESPN presents a double-header featuring Big East rivals Syracuse and Villanova, and Big 10 rivals Indiana and Northwestern.

* The pros take over on Tuesday, Jan. 12, when TBS spotlights the Boston Celtics-Chicago Bulls game in Chicago. The heretofore almost unbeatable Celtics slid back into the pack during the first month of this season, when they lost three games at home and played below .500 on the road.

* That same night, ESPN carries on its double-header theme with its first-ever hockey two-fer. The first game features the New York Islanders at the Pittsburgh Penguins; later the Winnipeg Jets visit the Vancouver Canucks.

* On Wednesday, Jan. 13, ESPN offers another college basketball double-header: Georgetown playing Providence in a Big East battle; then an SEC battle featuring Kentucky at Alabama.

* On Thursday, Jan. 14, ESPN swings in with a college triple-header. A Philadelphia battle features LaSalle vs. Temple, followed by North Carolina vs. Maryland, and then comes USC playing UCLA.

* The pros get back in action on Friday, Jan. 15, with the Seattle Supersonics taking on the Utah Jazz on TBS.

* On Saturday, Jan. 16, we get a touch of sunlight as the pro golfers kick off the 1988 pro tour. ABC presents the $500,000 MONY Tournament of Champions from the La Costa Hotel and Spa in Carlsbad, Calif. Most of the top players, including 1987 PGA champion Larry Nelson, will be there.

* On Saturday, also, ESPN has wall-to wall roundball: DePaul at Notre Dame; North Carolina State vs. Georgia Tech; Maryland at Duke; Virginia at North Carolina; and Eastern Kentucky vs. Murray State. What kind of a header is that?

* And to wrap up the week, NBC airs football action: The Hula Bowl in Hawaii, where college all-star seniors will play for the edification of pro scouts.

Andersen® High-Performance windows help keep heat inside when you want it there, outside when you don't. The secret? A special transparent coating permanently bonded to the glass, reducing the amount of radiant heat that can pass through. That means less work for air conditioners and furnaces. And lower energy bills—whatever the climate. For the ultimate in energy efficiency, get the Andersen High-Performance window.

• ADDS UP! Our teacher friend intends to use the 10 digits 0 through 9 to form two fractions whose sum is exactly 1 (see right).

She has used six of the 10 digits to form one fraction, 148/296, and has asked students to use the remaining four digits to form the other fraction.

The second fraction is 35 over 70
