Edgy Wall Street Sees Stocks Bounce Up, Down

By JOHN C. GIVEN
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices bounced like yo-yos this morning in a market fearful of another Black Monday-style crash.
The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 140.58 points Friday to 1,911.31 for its third-largest point loss, rose about 27 points in the first few minutes then fell sharply to the 1,895 level for a 16-point deficit. By noon it stood at 1,926.89, up 15.58.
Broader market indices also turned lower after early increases, and losing issues outnumbered gainers on the New York Stock Exchange by more than 5 to 3. Many veteran traders remained reluctant to participate.

"I'm going to wait until later before I decide whether to commit money to this market," said Philip C. Puccio, manager of institutional trading at Dillon, Read & Co. in New York.
The active buying on Wall Street came after stocks and the dollar eased overseas in anticipation of another stiff loss in the U.S. financial markets because of a heavy selloff Friday.

In Tokyo, where the trading day begins, the dollar slipped about 1 yen in value to 128.50, while the closely watched Nikkei Stock Average of 225 selected issues lost 294.13 points, closing at 22,578.43.
Later in London, the dollar also eased until central banks intervened to buy the currency. On the London Stock Exchange, the Financial Times 100-share index lost about 48 points in early trading but recouped half the loss to the 1,751 level by late midafternoon British time.

Foreign investors remained nervous because of the large loss on Wall Street Friday, when the Dow Jones industrial average sustained its third-biggest point loss.
More than $144.7 billion in stock value was lost, or about 5.67 percent of the Wilshire Associates index of 5,000 stocks. On the New York Stock Exchange, more than seven stocks fell in price for every one that rose.
Market watchers noted that on Oct. 16 — the Friday before Black Monday — the indicator lost 108.35 points in what remains its fourth-largest loss ever. It went on to lose 508 points on the following Monday, Oct. 19.

Tension was heightened through the weekend as parallels were drawn between last October's scenario and Friday's decline. But observers found some solace in the reflection that the pre-Black Monday market was widely viewed to be overvalued with many investors weighed down by holdings they had used large amounts of credit to buy.
For the most part, those investors were out of the market when it tumbled Friday — leaving a much tougher core of traders, according to analysts.

In addition, they said, last week's market was due for a decline after a 113-point runup during the four previous sessions.
On NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," Sen. Nicholas F. Brady, R-N.J., who headed a presidential commission that studied the Black Monday crash, said Sunday he also did not expect "a repeat of the Friday-to-Monday kind

Freezing Rain Smashes Coastal Areas With New Wintry Blast

By The Associated Press
Freezing rain and sleet slashed in to North Carolina's Coastal Plain early today, turning highways into slippery, slushy corridors as the rest of the state was beginning to come out of a snowed-in weekend.
Students in many North Carolina counties got another day off today, but most parents were expected to be heading back to work.
Forecasters said the weather may turn cooperative by Tuesday, with high temperatures in the 40s and overnight lows that might stay above freezing. High temperatures Wednesday could reach into the 50s in some areas.
But in southeast North Carolina and as far north as Greenville today, freezing rain or sleet — with some light snow — was falling, making travel hazardous. The National Weather Service said that in coastal counties, ice was forming on bridges, overpasses, trees and utilities, but most roads were just wet.
But in the interior portions of southeast North Carolina, freezing rain and sleet was building up quickly on all exposed areas, the weather service said, adding that travel should be avoided if possible.

The NWS warned that limbs would likely break off trees under the weight of the ice, causing roads to be blocked and utility lines to fall.
The precipitation was expected to end this afternoon.
Majorie Potter, a dispatcher with the N.C. Highway Patrol in Wilmington, said "quite a few wrecks" had been reported in Pender and Onslow counties this morning. In New Hanover and Brunswick counties, road were in good shape, although there was some ice on bridges and overpasses, she said.

For the rest of the state, the forecast was sweet relief to emergency workers who have been on frantic schedules since Thursday, when a winter storm dumped up to 16 inches of snow on the Tar Heel state and claimed the lives of at least eight people.

Theresa Teachey, an office assistant for Raleigh's streets division, worked 12-hour days through the weekend helping coordinate the clearing of streets.
"We've been working around the

Local Roads In Safe Condition

Primary roads in Pitt and Martin County were generally in safe condition this morning, with some stretches still requiring careful driving because of ice patches and mud, highway officials reported.
Fred Edwards, highway maintenance supervisor for Pitt County, said, "All in all, the county's roads are in pretty good shape, with some icy places and ice on some bridges. The roads in the western part of the county, from Farmville along N.C. 121 (the Farmville-Bruce highway), are in the worst shape of any county roads."
"We are getting out this morning to check on secondary dirt roads and will be looking at them and making an effort to clean them off," Edwards said.
A spokesman for the Highway Patrol office in Williamston said Martin County roads, with the exception of dirt roads, were in good shape this morning.

Spokesmen in both counties cautioned drivers to drive with caution due to some remaining icy stretches.
Schools in Pitt County remain closed today due to weather and road conditions. In Martin County, all schools were scheduled to open one hour later than the regular opening hours.
At the Greenville Utilities water plant, temperature readings for Saturday ranged from a low of 19 degrees to a high of 33; on Sunday the low was 24 with a high of 34. The low reading early today was 22 degrees.
The water level of Tar River at 8 a.m. this morning measured 6 feet, a fall of more than a foot since Friday.

Schools Studying Make-Up Schedule

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer
Snow and ice hovering in Pitt County since Thursday has provided an unscheduled two-and-a-half day vacation for students in the Pitt County schools, and school administrators are pondering on when to make up those days.
"Technically, with the calendar, Jan. 28" would be the first day to make up snow days, Barry Gaskins, public information officer, said today. But "the politics of the matter is everybody who's got a pair of skis within a 20-mile radius is planning to go skiing" Jan. 28 and Jan. 29, which are designated teacher workdays.
Another consideration is the mid-term exams scheduled that week, Gaskins said. "There a lot of things we have to look at before we finalize what days we'll use to make them up."

Gaskins said aid in selecting make-up days would be requested from the Pitt County Board of Education tonight during its workshop meeting. Other make-up days are scheduled for April 6-8, which are annual leave days following Easter vacation, and April 29, a teacher workday.
The melting of snow and ice today should allow county schools to open Tuesday on a delayed schedule, he said.
In addition to the school calendar, the board also will consider bids for the planned H.B. Sugg drainage project and will be presented the executive management plan during its meeting tonight.

GIFT TO PUBLIC — The deed for the site of the Tar River Breastworks at Blue Banks on the Tar River was presented this morning to the Friends of North Carolina Archaeology, a non-profit organization that will be the steward of the site for the public. Shown are LaRue Evans, past president of the Pitt County Historical Society, who was instrumental in arranging the gift; Frank Van Leeuwen, president of the Pitt County Historical Society; Worth Dunn, donor of the 8.7 acres of land, and Patric Dorsey, secretary of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources. (Reflector Photo By Thomas Forrest)

Bombing Suspect Arrested

BERLIN (AP) — Police today arrested a West German woman suspected of planting a bomb in a West Berlin discotheque that killed two U.S. soldiers, prompting the United States to attack Libya.
The government said Christina Gabriele Endrigkeit, 27, who allegedly was working for two Palestinian terrorists in the April 5, 1986 bombing, was arrested along with an unidentified man in the northern port city of Luebeck.
The blast in the crowded La Belle club, which was popular with American soldiers, also killed a Turkish woman and injured 229 people.
Mrs. Endrigkeit disappeared after the bombing and was believed hiding with her 3-year-old son. On Sunday, Volker Kaehne, spokesman for the West Berlin Justice Department, released a photograph of her and told reporters she was being "urgently sought" as a key suspect in the case.
The arrest, first reported by Radio Schleswig-Holstein, was confirmed

Civil War Fort Given For History

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
The Tar River Breastworks at Blue Banks, a Civil War fort and earthworks known about only by a few in the past, will be preserved for future generations, it was announced during presentation ceremonies this morning at the Humber House in Greenville.
The never-used fort was constructed in 1862 on a high bluff overlooking the Tar River west of Greenville.
According to LaRue Evans, past president of the Pitt County Historical Society, the society learned about the fort more than a year ago from Pitt County resident David Cobb. Cobb took Historical Society members Mrs. Evans, Dr. Joseph Congleton, Frank Wooten and Dr. Keats Sparrow to the site at that time. The group became excited about seeing what could be done to preserve it and quickly brought the archaeological research staff of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History in to investigate the find.

Mrs. Evans said it was fortunate that the land was owned by Worth Dunn, a Greenville developer who, she said, sees value in historic preservation.

"I'm from Pitt County," Dunn said, "but when I lived here before I felt that historical preservation interest was missing here. Then I lived away. When I came back recently, I found that a real interest in saving historical sites had developed. I am delighted to give this land and see this preservation carried out."
Richard M. Myers, president of the Friends of North Carolina Archaeology, accepted the donation from Dunn. This donation, he said, begins a new phase of service for the relatively new organization — "the stewardship of historical evidence for future generations."

Patric Dorsey, state secretary of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources said, "Mr. Dunn's generous gift illustrates the creative partnership between government and the private sector to effectively conserve and protect North Carolina's heritage."
The 8.7-acre site will be preserved in its present condition to serve as evidence of engineering techniques

City Officials Hopeful New Shelter Will Ease Plight Of The Homeless

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

As volunteer workers finish preparing the Greenville Community Shelter for its opening at 9 p.m. tonight, city officials commented today on the plight of the homeless and the efforts made to open the night shelter on the corner of Manhattan Avenue and Myrtle Street.

"I'm real excited about the opening of the shelter for the homeless and I am extremely pleased that the Greenville City Council has seen fit to contribute significantly to this project," said Mayor Ed Carter.

In early December the shelter received a $24,567 Emergency Shelter Grant from the state which was requested on behalf of the council.

"It was just a while ago, while waiting for a council meeting, I witnessed an individual in the Greenville Police Department attempting to be arrested just so he could have some place warm to spend the night. He had been drinking and he failed in his attempt, but this incident just demonstrates to me the important need to have adequate facilities available for the homeless," he said.

The Greenville Community Shelter originated in May 1986, when Dick Welch, Sam Loy and the Rev. Dan Naugle began meeting with various churches and community organizations. They gained both financial and volunteer support for their envisioned project.

In 1987, the problems faced by homeless people were brought to the attention of the American public through national news coverage and magazine cover stories.

Locally, efforts to initiate a shelter program were well received by City Council.

"I believe elected officials should be sensitive to the needs of all the people of the community," said council-member Lorraine Shinn. "I feel strongly that we should provide assistance such as this."

"At night people go into abandoned structures and sleep. Now that we have a shelter, we need to educate the homeless that these facilities are now available," she said.

"I think this council was more sensitive to the needs of this community more so than other elected bodies in the county," Shinn said.

Carter also commented, "I regret this project could not be sponsored jointly by the city of Greenville and the County Commission."

Council-member Rufus Huggins said the shelter was an example of the city looking out for all its citizens.

"There's such a great amount of support for the shelter among people that I have talked to, that it gives me a great feeling," he said.

Huggins said that, due to the growth the city is experiencing, the problems of the homeless in this community will probably become even greater.

"It's a problem nationally, and dealing with it shows the type of leadership we have in this city," he said.

Applications Open

The Lutheran Church Nursery School will begin accepting applications for enrollment for the 1988-89 school term on the following dates:

Jan. 12, 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. — for church members and siblings of present and past students; Jan. 13, 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. — general registration.

The school is designed, Mary Muzzarelli, program director, said to provide learning enrichment for children between 3 and 5 years old. The 3-year-old class is held Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to noon. The 4-year-old class is from 9 a.m. to noon on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Ms. Muzzarelli said interested persons may visit the school on school days between 9 a.m. and 10 a.m. For further information, call 756-2058 between 9 a.m. and noon weekdays and 758-5621 after 1 p.m. The school is located at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, 1801 S. Elm St.

MS Support

The Multiple Sclerosis Downeast Support Group will meet at 2 p.m. Sunday at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, 1801 S. Elm St., Greenville.

A physician from East Carolina Neurological Associates will be the speaker.

For information, call 752-9864 or 758-2975.

Academic Honors

Seraph Flickinger has received honors for the fall term at Kent School in Kent, Conn.

He is a freshman at the school, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Flickinger of Greenville.

Missionary Service

A missionary service (platform service) will be held at Brown's Chapel Holiness Church today at 7:30 p.m. Mary V. Sheppard will be mistress of ceremonies. Special music will be presented.

Three Arrested

Greenville police arrested three men on armed robbery charges Sunday.

Detective J.E. Nichols identified the three as Carlton David Harris, 16, of 1925 Norcott Circle, James Earl Davis, 19, of 1921A Norcott Circle and Donnell A. Rogers, 17, of 608 Greenfield Blvd.

Nichols said the men were charged in connection with the theft — at gunpoint — of money from a Pizza Transit Authority delivery person that occurred about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday at 1922B Norcott Circle.

Man Charged

Mack Ray Little, 24, of 427 W. Third St., was arrested on possession of stolen property charges by Greenville police Saturday.

Officer M.A. Jordan said Little was charged after a car — reported taken from Cox Armature Works on Memorial Drive about 3:45 p.m. — was found in his possession at the intersection of Myrtle and Manhattan Avenues about 8:24 p.m.

In addition, Jordan said Little was charged with driving without a license.

Recital Canceled

The faculty recital by mezzo-soprano Donna Dease and pianist John O'Brien, originally scheduled for 8 p.m. tonight on the East Carolina University campus, has been canceled due to inclement weather.

Workshop Set

Ayden-Grifton High School will have a financial aid workshop at 7 p.m. today to brief parents and students on financial aid applications and programs.

PCC Classes

Pitt Community College will begin several classes this week.

Oil painting will meet in room W-215 Mondays from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. for 10 weeks, beginning today.

Advanced sewing will meet in room W-201 on Tuesdays from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., while sewing will meet in South Greenville Recreation Center Tuesdays from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Both classes begin Tuesday.

Creative Writing I and Poetry will meet in room VW-10 for 10 weeks, beginning Wednesday.

Also, sewing will meet at the South Greenville center on Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for 10 weeks, while Creative Writing II will meet in room VW-10 on Thursdays from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Both classes begin Thursday.

An adult basic education-adult high school class will begin Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Wellcome Middle School. The class is designed to improve reading, writing and math skills of those participating and to provide education for the general equivalency diploma (GED).

For more information, call 756-3130, extension 318.

State Opens Substance Abuse Unit

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 100-bed in-patient substance abuse treatment facility located at the Wyane Correctional Center in Goldsboro has opened on a limited basis, Corrections Secretary Aaron J. Johnson announced.

The facility, a major component of the Department of Correction's Substance Abuse Program, began Friday by providing treatment to eight inmates of the state's prison system. The number of inmates being served will increase to capacity as the hiring of staff and renovation of facilities is completed.

"If these men and women are to have a chance of succeeding when they are returned to society, then it is our responsibility to help them break the cycle of alcohol and drug dependency that set them upon the path to prison," Johnson said.

During fiscal year 1986-86, almost 2600 persons convicted of alcohol and drug-related offenses entered North Carolina prisons. Another 15,000 persons were on either probation or parole for similar crimes. Those figures do not reflect the untold number of persons who are convicted for criminal acts to which alcohol and drugs are linked, Johnson said.

According to Lattie Baker, assistant secretary for drug abuse, the focus of this facility will be alcoholic and drug addiction, recovery, relapse, education and support groups. Upon completion of a one-month inpatient treatment program, Baker said each inmate will be reassigned to existing substance abuse program at other Department of Corrections institutions.

The Department of Corrections Substance Abuse Program was formally launched Oct. 1. In addition to the intensive inpatient treatment program in Goldsboro, other alcohol and drug treatment services will be provided to inmates, probationers and parolees. The program will also include expanded assistance to the department's employees with substance abuse problems.

A nine-member Substance Abuse Advisory Council advises the department on the conduct of the program. The council's next meeting will be held Jan. 21 at 1 p.m. at the Wayne Correctional Center, Old Stevens Mill Road, Goldsboro.

William Smith, a professor of social work at East Carolina University and a Pitt County resident, is a member of the council.

West Virginia City Gets River Water Again As Oil Levels Fall

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — The city began depending on the Ohio River for all its water again today after levels of diesel fuel from a million-gallon spill fell to treatable levels, but authorities warned that business as usual could still drain reserves.

"We're just going to stay on top of it and keep working on it," said Lloyd Adams, the city engineer and public works director.

City Manager Mike Nau said reservoir levels were rising today as the river water began flowing.

Nau said the city's main reservoir, with a 3.5 million-gallon capacity, contained slightly more than 2 million gallons this morning. The tank was down to 500,000 gallons Sunday morning.

Despite the improvement, Nau said businesses have been asked to remain closed and residents have been asked to avoid baths and showers to only use water stockpiled before the slick reached Wheeling. Schools were open.

Adams said Wheeling's Ohio River water intakes were turned on fully overnight, but barges that had been pumping clean water will be kept on standby and will resume work if pollution levels in the river rise. Adams said the plant is running at 30 percent to 40 percent capacity.

"It will be a while until we get out of the woods," Adams said.

A makeshift system had kept drinking water flowing since the fuel reached Wheeling's water intakes Friday. Officials in the city of 43,000 resumed pumping water Sunday from the Ohio through sponge filters, then mixed it in a reservoir with water pumped from the barges.

Assistant City Manager Nancy Vagner and other officials used the word "critical" to describe the situation.

Wheeling was the focus of water concerns Sunday as the last Pennsylvania residents affected by the Jan. 2 spill had their tap water restored. A civil emergency in Steubenville, Ohio, was lifted Saturday, and river water was being treated and pumped to customers there.

The next town expected to be affected is Sistersville, about 50 miles downstream from Wheeling.

Court Denies Appeal In Suit Over Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to hold the government financially responsible for deaths and diseases allegedly caused by years of open-air atomic weapon tests in Nevada.

The court, without comment, turned away an appeal by some 1,200 people who themselves lived downwind from the test site or had relatives who lived in Nevada, Arizona and Utah.

The federal government, under the aegis of the Atomic Energy Commission, conducted over 100 atomic weapon tests between 1951 and 1962.

A 1979 lawsuit filed in Utah contended that the radioactive fallout from those tests caused numerous deaths and diseases, such as cancer and leukemia.

The suit charged that the government negligently failed to monitor test results and to warn about the fallout hazards.

A federal trial judge, after reviewing the claims of 24 of the plaintiffs, ruled that 10 of them could recover monetary damages. U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins said the government was liable for a negligent failure to follow the commission's public-safety guidelines.

The judge said the claims of the other plaintiffs could proceed under the Federal Tort Claims Act, a law that allows people to sue the otherwise legally immune federal government.

But the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Jenkins' ruling last April 20.

The appeals court said that the atomic testing program's public information plans could not be held liable under the FTCA because it amounted to a "discretionary function."

"These plans clearly fall within the discretionary function exception" to government liability, the appeals court said.

Thieves Get Cash, Clothing In Thefts

Investigators said 10 thefts, including an armed robbery at the Holiday Inn and the theft of several thousand dollars worth of clothes from a store, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer M.E. Hayes said a man, armed with a pistol and wearing a white handkerchief over his face, took an undetermined amount of money from a clerk at the Holiday Inn on Memorial Drive in a robbery incident which was reported at 6:50 p.m. Sunday, while Officer F.G. Pruitt said clothes valued at several thousand dollars were taken from Cannon's Men's Shop at Carolina East Center on Memorial Drive in a break-in reported at 9:42 a.m. Sunday.

Officer W.T. McCarter said several items were taken from Rose's at Stanton Square Shopping Center in an incident reported at 3 p.m. Saturday, while Officer M.E. Hayes said a television set, two gold chains and a bracelet, with a combined value of $1,006, were taken from 31D Stratford Arms Apartments in a break-in reported at 5:23 p.m. Saturday. Two hamsters, a hamster cage and $50 worth of food items were taken from 620 Ringgold Towers in a break-in reported at 4:35 p.m. Sunday.

Officer L.E. White said $65 in change was taken from coin-operated machines at the Speed Queen Laundry on West Fifth Street in a break-in reported at 7:58 a.m. Sunday, and said $20 in cash was taken from an office and 75-cents taken from a coin-operated machine at the West End Laundry in a break-in reported at 1:32 p.m., while Officer T.E. Evans said a bicycle was taken from 301A E. Dudley St. in an incident reported at 9:48 a.m. and a 1981 model car was taken from The Brotherhood Club on Pennsylvania Avenue in an incident reported at 10:53 a.m.

According to Officer R.G. Mendenhall, 90 cassette tapes and two tape cases with a combined value of $740 were taken from a vehicle parked in a lot at the intersection of Fifth and Reade streets in an incident reported at 6:18 p.m.

Views On Dental Health

Family & General Dentistry

PRESSURE AND PERIODONTAL DISEASE

There are other causes of periodontal disease (gum disease) besides poor oral hygiene and the build-up of calculus (tartar) around the necks of teeth. One of these is abnormal pressure on a tooth or a group of teeth.

How does this happen? For one thing, crooked teeth tend to cause such pressure. A tooth that is out of line in the dental arch is frequently subjected to abnormal pressures during chewing of food or grinding of teeth. This condition is called traumatic occlusion. Over a number of years the excessive burden may result in chronic inflammation, as well as loss of bone and supporting tissue.

FINE TUNE YOUR IMAGINATION!

Once you've decided to sell your home, take a moment to fine tune your imagination. Just for a moment, close your eyes and see the exterior of your home in your mind's eye. Now as you look at the exterior, give it a fresh coat of paint. That's not too difficult, is it?

But wait, we're not finished with this exercise. While you are imagining the fresh new exterior of your home, imagine that all the shrubbery has been neatly trimmed too, and the yard has been mowed. Now hold that picture in your mind while you go to the inside of your home. There, notice the newly installed carpeting, the fresh paint, the just waxed hardwood floors, and the sparkling clean window panes.

While it was relatively easy to picture the fresh coat of paint on the exterior of your home, this little exercise in imagination has now become too complex to continue.

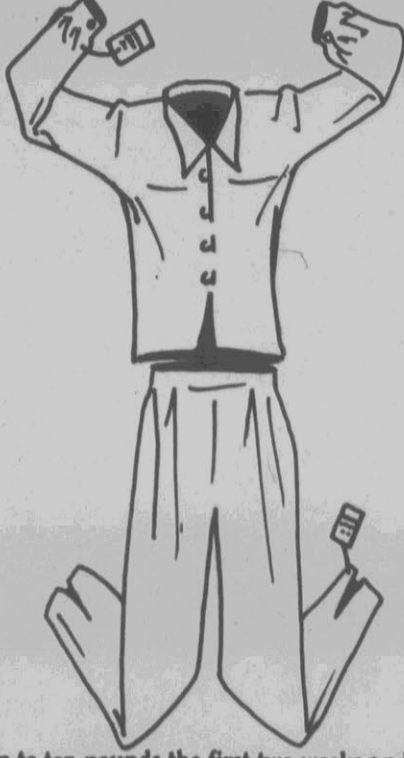

wouldn't you agree? Why? It is difficult to hold such a complex image in the mind.

Just imagine the difficulty a prospective buyer would have trying to imagine your home in the same way. On the other hand, if you make all necessary repairs, and put your house in model-home condition before the first showing takes place, you leave nothing to the imagination. A buyer sees a warm, comfortable, beautiful home ready for occupancy and says "YES!" Your home is SOLD!

U.N. Projects Unstable World Economy In '88

By CANDICE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The world economy will be precariously unstable this year and could experience a recession, the United Nations said today in a new forecast even gloomier than the one it issued before the stock market crash.

U.N. experts now expect the world economy to grow by only 3 percent instead of the 3.5 percent they predicted two weeks before the October crash.

The economists also said that world trade will grow by a sluggish 3 percent instead of the 4.3 percent they expected in early October.

"The international financial system and the global economy remain vulnerable to new shocks and to the possibility of a worldwide recession in the coming months," the report said.

The U.N. forecast is more pessimistic than some. An Associated Press survey of experts around the world found that many expect 1988 to be a fairly good year for the global economy.

Typical was the comment from Geoffrey Horton, chief economist in the London office of DRI Europe, a research and consulting firm.

"We're slightly on the gloomy side of normal, but it's certainly not tearing the hair out," he told the AP.

The U.N. report anticipates a bleak 1988.

It said governments face unusually difficult dilemmas in the coming year: they must find a way to cut debt and trade imbalances without causing a recession or rekindling inflation.

"Confidence and stability in the economy must be restored if a worldwide recession is to be averted next year," it said.

The best hope is concerted international action. U.N.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said in a message accompanying the new forecast.

Global economic problems "can be overcome if all countries make more determined efforts to address the weaknesses in their economic performance and to harmonize their respective policies."

The U.N. report said economic growth slowed worldwide in 1987 and is expected to slow even more in 1988, continuing a pattern of decline which began in the early 80s.

This means a struggling African farmer could have a harder time buying seed and fertilizer — and get less money for the crops he manages to grow.

It means the paycheck of a Western European factory worker would buy the same — or even less — than in 1987.

Looking back on the past year, U.N. economists said the gross national product of the developing countries, excluding China, grew by only 2.1 percent in 1987, down from 3.2 percent in 1986. They expect 3 percent growth in 1988.

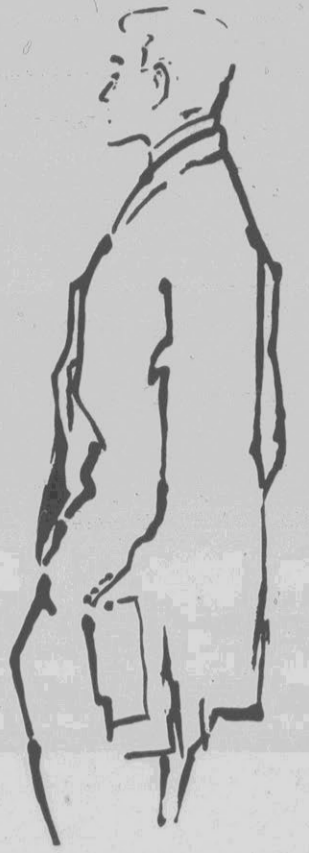

Growth in developed market economies, such as those of Japan and Western Europe, was 2.7 percent in 1987, about the same as in 1986. U.N. economists expect these economies to grow by about 2 percent in 1988.

In centrally planned economies, such as those in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, the report said the growth of net material product was 3.2 percent in 1987, down from 4.6 percent the year before.

China, the report said, will continue to be the world's fastest-growing economy. The Chinese economy expanded by 7.4 percent in 1986, 10 percent in 1987 and is expected to grow 8 percent in 1988.

The forecast said growth in south and east Asia is expected to continue in the 4.7 percent range, as it has since 1981.

11 days of SALE

Now Thru Saturday, Jan. 23

SALE- What does the word mean in today's world. At COFFMAN'S this is what it means:

1. No tricks or gimmicks.
2. A complete ONE TIME SUBSTANTIAL MARKDOWN that remains the same through our 12 day seasonal clearance.
3. We don't suggest unrealistic, original higher than normal prices so you think you are buying something that you're not.
4. We are not one price one day and another price five days later. Only the seller knows what his merchandise is worth and we don't subject you to a series of on-going fictitious sales events thru the year such as Anniversary Sale, Founders Day, Secret Sale, Harvest Sale, Pre-event and After-event Sale, etc. In the process of reading advertisements through the year, it appears that the customers in many instances are subjected to one continual fictitious sale rip-off.
5. We don't want to confuse you or mislead you.
6. OUR SALE MERCHANDISE ALWAYS REPRESENTS FIRST QUALITY ITEMS CHOSEN FROM OUR REGULAR INVENTORY. It does not come from manufacturer close-outs of items that they could not sell to start with, and we, and you, did not want.
7. We have a twice yearly quality sale for one reason only and that is to clear our inventory of discontinued styles; discontinued models, broken stocks and odd lots. All of this merchandise is regular top quality merchandise offered to you at substantial savings by our experienced and knowledgeable sales staff. At Coffman's you will not find a sale or promotion going on every other week where the words SALE mean nothing and the sale is a fictitious gimmick.
8. We have always maintained that a quality purchase is economy in its highest form. At Coffman's we will continue to stand for quality, market knowledge and value at a realistic price.

Pravda Says Pullout Could Be By May

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union could begin withdrawing its troops from Afghanistan by May 1 if U.N.-sponsored negotiations that resume next month end in agreement, Pravda said today.

The report in the Communist Party daily newspaper was the latest indication from the Soviet leadership that it is seeking to end its military presence in Afghanistan by the end of the year.

The Kremlin sent troops into its southern neighbor in December 1979 to help the pro-Moscow government battle a guerrilla insurgency. An estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers remain there.

Negotiations between Afghanistan and Pakistan, where most of the U.S.-backed Moslem guerrillas are based, are scheduled to resume in Geneva next month under United Nations auspices.

According to the Soviets, documents prepared for those talks require the Soviet Union to begin its withdrawal 60 days after a settlement is achieved. The United States, in turn, would be bound to cut off military aid to the insurgents.

"If the Geneva agreements are successfully signed by March 1 (and the Afghan side, judging by everything, intends to strive for this), then May 1 could become the starting date for the withdrawal," Pravda said.

The Afghan war is at a stalemate, and Soviet involvement in it has led to a worsening of Kremlin relations with other Moslem and non-aligned countries. It also has provoked some dissent at home.

On Friday, Anatoly F. Dobrynin, Communist Party foreign affairs secretary, told a U.S. delegation the Soviet withdrawal would begin this year, and that it would be completed in 12 months or less.

Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said last Wednesday during a visit to Kabul, the Afghan capital, that the Soviets want to end their military involvement in Afghanistan this year.

NASA Engineer Calls For Tiny Spaceships

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Dozens of tiny coffee can-sized spacecraft could be launched from a "Star Wars" anti-missile weapon to explore planets, comets and asteroids inexpensively, a NASA engineer says.

"It would be a good thing if resources being spent on the Strategic Defense Initiative could also be used for civilian purposes, especially for space exploration," said Ross M. Jones, a spacecraft systems engineer at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Jones, who normally works on the Mars Observer space probe planned for 1992 was to present his proposal today during the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics' aerospace sciences conference in Reno, Nev.

The "micro spacecraft" envisioned by Jones each would weigh about two or three pounds and would be about the size of a coffee can, NASA said in a news release. They would be launched from an electromagnetic launcher, commonly called a railgun, placed in orbit around Earth.

The Defense Department is developing railguns, which would launch projectiles to shoot down enemy missiles, as part of President Reagan's proposed Strategic Defense Initiative, nicknamed Star Wars.

While Jones' proposal might seem far-fetched, "the capability of launching smaller probes more often is very appealing because they can address a number of specific science objectives," said Ed Stone, project scientist for NASA's twin Voyager spacecraft explorations of the outer planets.

"I don't know the details (of Jones' idea), but it is in the direction we need to be thinking as a way to diversify our program," said Stone, who also is chairman of physics, mathematics and astronomy at the California Institute of Technology.

While the tiny probes couldn't carry many instruments, they might be outfitted with tiny cameras, radio equipment and power supplies, Jones said.

Stone said they also might carry gamma-ray detectors, and perhaps seismometers to measure quake activity on moons of the outer planets if a way could be devised for them to survive a landing.

"Instead of one large, expensive spacecraft launched every few years, NASA could launch many, perhaps 10 to 50 identical, small, relatively inexpensive spacecraft per year," Jones said, estimating the micro spacecraft would cost a fraction of the $300 million to $800 million for major space probes.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No Surprise

When the choices for 1987 are considered, it's no surprise Time magazine selected Mikhail Gorbachev as its Man of the Year.

After all, Oliver North certainly doesn't qualify for the title. Nor does Daniel Ortega or Augusto Pinochet or Pieter Botha or Oscar Arias, despite his Nobel prize-winning peace plan.

Gary Hart? No way. Ed Meese has spent too much time walking on the water of Wedtech to qualify. And Meese is a name which prompts the subject of the United States' own top executive, Ronald Reagan. No way does he qualify — shouting at the press over the whirl of helicopters, swearing ignorance of all Iran-Contra doings, pumping up the national debt with irresponsible defense spending — all signs of a White House out of control.

Although many conservatives insist the designation should be "Con Man of the Year," it is apparent Gorbachev, when the criteria and other nominees are examined, is the only choice. It's not that he's that praiseworthy, but he's effective and visible. The same can't be said for the rest of the leaders of 1987.

Like it or not, Gorbachev has interjected significant issues into global ideology. His attention to arms reduction and limitation — the first this decade — has won him worldwide heed. His proposal of Glasnost — a professed opening of the Soviet restrictions on cultural freedom — has focused attention on individual rights. His perestroika policy has raised the eyebrows of leaders from other communist countries, opening the door on the subject of economic reforms in these nations.

It should be noted, however, that Man-of-the-Year Gorbachev is also associated with continued abuses in Soviet-occupied Afghanistan. He faces a dilemma there similar to the one facing the United States in Vietnam.

In addition, Soviet influence in key global conflict areas such as the Middle East and Central America remains diametrically opposed to the United States position. In addition, The Soviet Union's record on personal freedoms remains far from acceptable and its motives in negotiating an arms agreement must be questioned.

Nevertheless, Gorbachev can fairly be termed a leader with considerable impact on global news events in 1987, and when his competition is considered, can be accurately characterized as Man of the Year.

Major Dividends

North Carolina's two airline hubs are paying major international dividends for the state.

Piedmont Airlines last year began direct service to London from its hub at Charlotte Douglas International Airport.

Last week American Airlines, which has established a hub at Raleigh-Durham Airport, announced that it hopes to begin service from Raleigh-Durham to Paris May 26.

In announcing the plan, Lowell Duncan, American Airline vice president for corporate communications, said Raleigh-Durham "has entered an exciting era of growth and opportunity. Some see it as regional, but at American, we take a larger, more global view."

It has to be termed dynamic when flights to Europe begin to develop from North Carolina airports. Particularly will these flights offer convenience to the Pitt County area because Pitt-Greenville has daily commuter flights to both Douglas and Raleigh-Durham Airports. That means Pitt Countians can make direct connections in the state to flights which will take them to Paris and London.

And if these flights are successful, more are likely to follow.

The ways North Carolina is changing are not always fully recognizable. Certainly it is more urban and more industrialized than it once was. While all that diversity creates problems, it also means new conveniences that can improve life. Direct air connections to major world cities will make North Carolina more marketable to tourists and more attractive to international businesses and industries. In addition, it can strengthen the position of overseas-based companies already located in the state.

The idea that a traveler can board a plane in Greenville and with just one stop, land in London or France, is an exciting proposition. It brings the community a giant step closer to global travel.

The institution of international flights at Charlotte and Raleigh-Durham certainly has to be viewed as a convenient new service not only for the Piedmont, but for the east through the connector commuter air service.

Gaza Violence Grave Challenge To Israel

JERUSALEM — Just when it was supposedly running out of steam, the wave of violence that has swept over Israel's occupied territories for the last month gained new momentum and a new rallying cry this past week. And it acquired in the process a new look of permanence that poses a grave challenge to the divided coalition government here.

Lines have hardened inside both the government and its Palestinian opposition and the narrow middle ground between them has been eroded further. Meanwhile, the rioting and the government's tough response are claiming a new victim — Israel's international standing, which had been rising steadily in recent years and now has begun to plunge again.

The state's response has been a return to the tough stance that marked the first weeks of the violence. Troops are directly confronting rioters and opening fire in heavily populated refugee camps in the Gaza Strip. Dozens of alleged ringleaders have been placed under administrative detention or, in the case of nine activists, marked for expulsion.

Soldiers are forcing merchants to open their shops and defy calls for a general strike. They frequently order journalists out of the camps during disorders in what looks increasingly like a de facto ban on press coverage.

So far none of this has seemed effective in stopping the rioters. The reason, critics contend, is because none of it speaks to the grievances that sparked the riots — the powerlessness, poverty and despair that pervade the occupied territories, especially Gaza. Those grievances, government officials conceded, ultimately can only be addressed through political negotiations.

But the coalition government, lurching fitfully toward elections in November, is deeply divided over whom to talk to, what to talk about and in what forum.

It also cannot agree on the nature of the problem. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin define the violence in pure law-and-order terms as a struggle between terrorists and the state and give repeated assurances that, as Shamir put it Thursday, "a situation like this cannot continue for a long time."

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, in contrast, talks about the urgent need for a political solution. But he has adopted a low profile until the rioting ceases for fear of being painted by his rivals as soft on lawbreakers. And so, lacking a coherent political strategy, the government has fallen back on military tactics.

The measures taken by the army to quell the violence "have become the only strategy," said Zeev Schiff, a respected author and commentator on defense issues here. "It's like giving aspirin to someone who suffers from cancer. You get about 20 minutes of relief and that's all."

A week ago things looked like they were coming under control. Palestinians were tired of the violence, military officials said, and the army began releasing some of the 1,900 persons arrested during the rioting and reducing the size of its forces in Gaza and the West Bank.

Then the government overplayed its hand. Last Sunday morning an Israeli soldier shot dead a Palestinian woman, a bystander, in an Arab suburb of Jerusalem. It was the first shooting death in nearly two weeks. That could be ascribed to bad luck, but an hour or so later the state announced it was expelling the nine activists. That move, critics said, was bad timing.

Suddenly Arab demonstrators had a new victim to mourn and new political martyrs to celebrate. By themselves, none of the nine activists boasts a territory-wide following, but the hometowns of each were hit by rioting.

In the Gaza Strip, home of four of the deportees, three of whom are associated with Islamic fundamentalist movements, hundreds of followers hit the streets each day, challenging the soldiers directly. By Saturday night, at least five more Gazans had been killed and 24 wounded by gunshots, bringing the casualties for a month of violence to at least 27 Palestinian dead and nearly 200 wounded.

Behind the Israeli decision to expel the activists, insiders said, was a combination of security and political motives. Israeli leaders, especially Rabin, reportedly believe that expulsions are an effective deterrent that frightens the local population because no one wants to face the prospect of permanent exile.

At the same time, however, Israel found itself trapped in a political game of expectations. Officials had threatened earlier to expel dozens of activists, statements that had impelled the United States to warn publicly that such measures would violate international law and the Fourth Geneva Convention.

The leadership then faced a dilemma. If the state backed down, it was argued, Palestinians would see the move as a sign of weakness and believe they could use U.S. pressure to defeat Israel. And so the government's Big Three — Shamir, Peres and Rabin — met last weekend and decided on what they thought was a compromise: to expel nine, a minimal number in their eyes, but enough to send the message to both Washington and Gaza that Israel was a sovereign state determined to protect its security as it saw best.

It did not work. Besides setting off a new round of violence, the expulsions refocused world attention on Israel and produced a new U.N. Security Council resolution condemning Israeli policy, one the United States felt compelled to vote in favor of. It was the first time the Reagan administration had endorsed a resolution attacking Israel since a 1982 vote condemning the Israeli siege of Beirut.

One of the great accomplishments of the Peres-Shamir government of national unity has been the upgrading of Israel's international image. Diplomatic relations have been forged with Spain and restored with several African states. Several East Bloc nations have exchanged interest sections and consulates with Israel.

Even at the United Nations, where attacking Israel was once a favorite pastime, the number of Security Council sessions devoted to Israel has dropped from a high of 50 in 1982 to only one last year, according to Benjamin Netanyahu, Israel's ambassador.

Now the tables may be turning again. U.S. and Israeli officials were quick to play down the significance of the American vote for Israel-American relations. But in the rest of the world, Israel's standing is beginning to decline again because it is using measures — live ammunition against rioters, expulsions, administrative detentions, summary military trials — that are not deemed acceptable for a nation that considers itself a Western-style democracy.

"We've seen this movie before and it may be a very long winter," said a senior Foreign Ministry official. "But we're in a trap. If we try to be nice and go soft, we'll have world approval but total chaos in Gaza. If we're tough, then we lose world support. Either way, we lose."

"I don't think Israel is holding Gaza any more," said social scientist Meron Benvenisti. "I think Gaza is holding Israel."

The Myth Of The Nuclear Cowboy

WASHINGTON — What a strange nuclear place Ronald Reagan has brought himself and the rest of us to. Just a few years ago the air was thick with denunciations of him as a nuclear cowboy, the mad bomber of the West, the relentless nuclear armer. The nuclear-freeze movement sprouted, the peace movement thrived.

Now he has in his hand one arms-control agreement, has in his sights a second much larger agreement, and is being denounced in formerly friendly quarters for a readiness to pronounce nuclear deterrence evil and to accept nuclear disarmament as a worthy goal. The freeze and peace movements have been rendered marginal.

The earlier Reagan was never as monstrous as people said. He came to be seen in nuclear matters as casual verging on careless, untutored even when inadvertently sensible, insensitive to the anxieties he aroused on several continents. His image sometimes victimized him: when he suggested in 1981 that a limited nuclear war might not escalate, the European journalists interviewing him presented this innocent observation as a confession that America would fiddle while Europe burned. He seemed convinced that the Kremlin had lost respect for American will, that deterrence as a nuclear strategy was dangerously flabby and that it was necessary to go over to the risks and rigors of "war-fighting."

But Reagan did not do crazy things and, with one exception, did not make major innovations in nuclear hardware or doctrine that were without roots in ostensibly more moderate administrations. So it looks to many of those he formerly drove up the wall, anyway. He did not get into any crisis with the aspect of a potential nuclear confrontation.

His erstwhile critics find it tempting now to attribute the president's passages of success or effectiveness to his luck in facing three geriatric cases and then the new-thinking Mikhail Gorbachev in the Kremlin. Actually, we may need a longer view to determine whether it was luck or was in part the credibility that accrued to him by virtue of his political style, his rearming program or even his maverick's reputation.

Reagan's major innovation was the Strategic Defense Initiative, an example of new thinking that Gorbachev, for one, still is not ready for, at least in Reagan's much-advertised foot-to-the-floor version. Nor are many others. But SDI sharpened the Kremlin's appetite for negotiation, and may yet help produce agreement — agreement that SDI doubters cheer — on dimensions surpassing their boldest aspirations.

Or there may be no such agreement, although my sense of it is that either in this administration or the next a way can be found both to reduce offensive arms and to keep work going on defense within shared bounds. Even if this does not happen on Reagan's watch, it will be the fruit of his policy — that is, of his extremism or vision, whatever you call it. No pain, no gain.

Experimentally, Reagan and Gorbachev have moved a small, comforting distance toward demonstrating that humans can control their nuclear destiny. Joint regulation of the size and shape of armories isn't everything. Each side's political and military care in handling nuclear arms in a crisis is more crucial to averting war. Still, the spectacle of politicians' inability to limit the producing of weapons of global destruction is plenty scary — scarier, because it is presumably easier but yet has not been done, than the thought of losing control in a crisis. It's not that the weapons, lying around or even being aimed, are dangerous in themselves, although they are dangerous. It's the syndrome of the sorcerer's apprentice:

governments ever more frantically performing a mad task that has gotten entirely out of hand.

Reagan cherishes a very personal vision of a nuclear-free world, a thoroughly safe, thoroughly inspected place protected everywhere by a made-in-America defensive shield. Many others, however, will be satisfied with a less perfect world and will prefer to hold on to enough offensive weapons to sober the other big players and to guard against wayward small crazies.

Strength For Today

Someone wrote the English author, John Galsworthy, asking him "to state his creed." In reply, Galsworthy quoted a verse which runs as follows:

Life is mostly froth and bubble, / Two things stand out like stone, / Kindness in another's trouble, / Courage in your own.

Anyone with a knowledge of Christian doctrine would hesitate to call this an adequate creed, but no one can deny that it is sound and robust advice for daily living. A person who makes the best of his or her troubles will have a deep understanding of the agony others experience when fortune serves them up a sorry lot of circumstances.

In the midst of life that often appears like froth and bubble, kindness and courage stand out like the eternal granite hills.

Medical Society, State Board Study Plan To Check Abuses By Doctors

GREENSBORO (AP) — The North Carolina Medical Society and the state Board of Medical Examiners are nearing an agreement to join in a full-time program that investigates doctors impaired by alcohol or other drugs.

The pact results from medical malpractice legislation enacted last summer that calls for a program to better detect and rehabilitate doctors who abuse drugs. The legislation protects officials carrying out the mandate from being sued by doctors under investigation.

The threat of a libel, slander or invasion-of-privacy lawsuit discourages some doctors from reporting impaired colleagues. Under the program, which may begin in late summer, doctors who in good faith report or investigate troubled colleagues are immune from these suits.

Dr. Julian F. Keith Jr. says investigators need all the help they can get. Keith, a former professor of family medicine at Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, recalls hiding his drinking problem — six or seven drinks most nights, sometimes two bottles during a weekend — by delegating work to avoid mistakes that might expose his impairment.

Keith, who is a recovering alcoholic, forgot to put patient orders in writing. He didn't ask pertinent questions for patient histories. In the end, he says, he took only the simplest cases, abandoned supervisory duties and locked himself in his office.

"I was losing my confidence. I had residents and interns to cover my tail. I shudder to think what would have happened had I been in private practice," Keith, 59, who stopped drinking in 1985, told the Greensboro News & Record.

Keith, who now directs an alcohol-drug treatment center in Jacksonville, said it was the student-doctors — the ones whom he was supposed to be watching — who caught his mistakes and omissions and kept him out of real trouble.

Other doctors knew about Keith's drinking problem. But they never confronted him. They covered for him.

"They were my enablers," Keith said. "Things I would drop, they would pick up."

By March 1985, Keith was considering suicide. Instead, he checked himself into a psychiatric hospital.

A recent spot check of public files at the Board of Medical Examiners shows that from January 1984 to May 1987, there were 24 disciplinary actions taken against doctors in which alcohol or drug abuse played some role.

Board members say that for every action they take in public, they probably 10 similar actions privately and informally.

Dr. Wilmer C. Betts of Raleigh, a psychiatrist and member of the Physicians Helath and Effectiveness Committee organized by the N.C. Medical Society in 1978, estimates that 12 percent of the state's doctors are impaired — about 1,200 — but says they cannot be helped until the profession acknowledges the problem.

Last May, for example, Dr. Michael Meksin, an anesthesiology resident at Duke Medical Center in Durham, died at the hospital from a cocaine overdose hours after assisting in the delivery of a baby. Autopsy results also showed traces of fentanyl, a potent hospital sedative.

Duke officials deny that the hospital has any problem with impaired residents and will not say if Meksin obtained drugs from the hospital.

In light of recent studies suggesting 12 percent of anesthesiologists abuse drugs, particularly fentanyl, Betts is skeptical that any hospital in the state is completely free of impaired workers.

The stance taken by Duke officials, he said, is much like the denial he hears from impaired doctors.

"And here's this doctor, dead as a doornail, a needle in his arm, in an on-call room," he said. "Nope, no problem here."

Expert Says Army Put Hatchet To ESP

DURHAM (AP) — A scientist who researches the practical use of extrasensory perception says a recent Army study of the military uses of ESP did a "hatchet job" on parapsychology.

The study by the National Research Council was commissioned by the Army to find out if ESP could be used to anticipate the actions of the enemy, to jam enemy radar and computers, or trigger nuclear weapons.

A committee of the research council gave the Army a mostly negative report, saying it found no scientific evidence to support the theory of parapsychology.

Those conclusions upset the president of the Durham-based Parapsychological Association, an international scientific organization for parapsychologists. Richard Broughton speculated in an interview that the review committee "might have been set up to do a hatchet job on parapsychology. That is not a very scientific way of doing things."

Broughton directs research activities at the Institute for Parapsychology in Durham, which was formed to try to make scientific sense out of phenomena that are often dismissed as hokum.

Parapsychology is the study of ESP, the ability to anticipate the future or witness events in distant places, and psychokinesis, using the power of thought to influence remote objects.

Broughton rebutted the report, saying a panel member and an academic who advised the panel about parapsychological research was a member of a group that is hostile to the scientific study of ESP.

But Daniel Druckman, a research council staff member who directed the study, defended its objectivity.

"Had someone who believed in parapsychology rather than a skeptic been on the committee, chances are that the product would not be much different," Druckman said in a telephone interview from Washington.

The committee's report evaluated parapsychology and eight other unconventional approaches to the possible powers of the mind, all of potential interest to the Army.

Of the nine, the report concluded that four approaches — learning while asleep, mentally rehearsing future physical tasks, mental bonding between group members to enhance performance and some types of accelerated learning — might be useful.

Williamston Driver Dies In Bertie

By The Associated Press

Five people have died in weekend traffic accidents in North Carolina, including a 60-year-old pedestrian who was hit by an unidentified vehicle in Craven County, the state Highway Patrol said Sunday.

Barbara Alston, 46, of Williamston, was killed at 9:13 a.m. Saturday on U.S. 13 in Bertie County when her car slid into the path of an oncoming vehicle. The Highway Patrol said the accident occurred just north of Williamston.

Theodore Tillman of New Bern was walking north on a rural paved road less than a mile south of New Bern when he was struck at about 6:30 p.m. Friday.

Ruby Foster Wall, 58, of Liberty, died at 11 a.m. Sunday while riding in a car that lost control on ice on N.C. 62, 1 mile south of Burlington in Alamance County, and hit an oncoming car.

William Henry Clemmons Jr., 21, of Jamesville, was killed at 9 p.m. Friday, on a rural paved road 7.9 miles north of Washington. The patrol said Clemmons lost control of his car on the ice, ran off the road and hit a ditch. The vehicle overturned and landed on top of him.

Richard Wayne Ruff, 29, of Carolina Beach, died at 12:01 a.m. Saturday on a rural paved road less than a mile south of Carolina Beach. He drove his car off the road, hit a utility pole and the vehicle overturned.

So far this year, 16 people have been killed in accidents on North Carolina roads, compared to 41 people killed at this time in 1987, according to the Highway Patrol.

State Has Fewer Highway Deaths Reported In 1987

By The Associated Press

Seat belt and drunken driving laws have helped make driving on North Carolina roads safer than ever, but authorities fear the new 65 mph speed limit may hinder their efforts in the future.

Fatalities were down last year from 1986, according to the Department of Motor Vehicles, which reports 1,645 people died in 1986 automobile accidents and the unofficial count for 1987 was 1,576 fatalities. Because the department considers all deaths up to 90 days after the accident in the count, the final figure won't be available until April.

At the same time the number of accidents have increased. The final figures for 1987 have not been released, but through October, the number of accidents was up about 8 percent, from 129,773 in 1986 to 140,348 in 1987.

The puzzle is why fatalities go down when accidents were increasing.

Donald W. Reinfurt, a researcher at the Safety Research Center in Chapel Hill, said the number of fatalities in 1986 was abnormally high, due mainly to chance. The odds were that fatalities would decrease this year rather than increase further, Reinfurt said.

But he said the state's new seat-belt law and enforcement of drunken driving regulations also had an effect on the numbers.

Troopers began handing out tickets under the new seat belt law on Jan. 1, 1987, after several months of issuing warnings. In 1987, the highway patrol gave out 37,624 tickets for seat-belt violations.

Reinfurt said the number of fatalities in the first six months of 1987 decreased 7.6 percent from predictions for the year. Serious injuries dropped 13.6 percent during the same period.

The Safe Roads Act, which took effect Oct. 1, 1983, made it easier to get drunken driving convictions and set minimum penalties for repeat offenders. The federal law to raise the drinking age to 21 in 1986 also had an impact.

Reinfurt said North Carolina ranks among the nation's leader in arrests for driving while intoxicated.

Parents Told Of UNC Standards

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The State Board of Education has adopted measures to send word to parents and students about the University of North Carolina's tougher standards, which go into effect in 1990.

The system's new standards will be attached or printed on registration forms for students in grades eight through 11 who will register in February and March for next year's classes.

The board also said brochures on the new admission requirements would be sent to students in grades six through 11, preferably with report cards this spring.

Also, three to five posters describing the new standards will be posted in schools with grades six and above.

"That will pretty well assure us that parents and students will all know what they need to have to get into the University of North Carolina system," Joseph B. Webb, assistant state superintendent for instructional services, said.

The UNC system, which is printing brochures and posters for schools to distribute, planned to require the standards this fall. But it postponed them in July after a study showed only half of the state's high school juniors would be able to meet them.

The new standards will require students to pass at least four English, three science, four math and two social studies courses to attend one of the 16 campuses in the UNC system. However, some campuses, such as UNC-Chapel Hill, have stricter admission standards.

Bomb Kills Libyan Diplomat

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — An unidentified man today threw a grenade at five people outside an embassy building in downtown Kampala, killing a Libyan diplomat and wounding a French diplomat, police said.

Three Ugandans also were injured in the blast, including the Libyan diplomat's secretary. Police later today took one person into custody for questioning about the attack.

A senior security officer said the grenade attack at a building housing four embassies killed Ayyd Abeid Mutus, who he identified as an administration officer at the Libyan Embassy. Officials said Mutus died on his way to the hospital.

French cultural attache Jean-Daniel Neveu was injured but not seriously in the explosion, diplomatic sources said. Initial reports said the Frenchman had lost a leg in the attack.

The names of the Ugandans were not released.

The bombing occurred about 8:30 a.m. outside Embassy House. The building, opposite Uganda's Parliament, houses the embassies of Libya, France, Sudan and West Germany.

Gorbachev Wants Summit With Top Chinese Leaders

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev called for a summit meeting between China and the Soviet Union in another indication the two communist giants are moving closer together after more than 25 years of tension.

In the first interview believed granted to Chinese journalists by a Soviet Communist Party leader, Gorbachev praised the state of Sino-Soviet relations and said they were improving.

His comments were published in this year's second edition of the weekly Chinese magazine Outlook. Soviet and Chinese news agencies on Sunday issued short accounts of the interview. The Soviet television news show, Vremya, also mentioned the interview in its lead item Sunday night.

The Chinese Xinhua News Agency quoted the Soviet leader as saying he takes a great interest in China's political and economic reforms and suggested the two nations, facing similar problems, could share their experiences.

"Mikhail Gorbachev expressed satisfaction with the accelerating Soviet-Chinese cooperation," the Soviet Tass news agency said in its commentary on the interview. "A political dialogue is established. We believe a Soviet-Chinese summit could be its logical extension. Going by everything, both sides feel an objective need for it."

The Chinese Foreign Ministry declined today to comment on the report. In the past, the Soviets have been more optimistic about improved ties than the Chinese.

Gorbachev was quoted in the Chinese article as praising last February's first round of Chinese-Soviet talks to resolve border disputes that led to hostilities in the 1960s. The two nations contest ownership of some islands in the Amur River, located between northeastern China and eastern Siberia.

Gorbachev said the agreement signed at the U.S.-Soviet summit in December to scrap all intermediate-range nuclear missiles has improved prospects for drastically reducing strategic, or long-range, nuclear arms, Xinhua said.

Gorbachev and President Reagan signed a treaty last month in Washington. It still must be approved by the U.S. Congress.

Gorbachev's proposed summit would mark the first meeting between Chinese and Soviet governmental leaders since 1969 when Prime Minister Alexei N. Kosygin met with Chinese Premier Chou Enlai. If the meeting includes communist party heads, the meeting would be the first since Mao Tse-tung held a cantankerous meeting with Soviet party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev in 1959.

The Soviet Union and China were allies in the 1950s but split in 1960s for a variety of reasons, including Chinese opposition to the Soviet model of development which stressed heavy industry and mechanization.

Their relations reached a low point during China's Cultural Revolution when frequent clashes occurred along their 3,000-mile border.

Israeli Civilians Open Fire On Rock-Throwing Arabs

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli civilians, reportedly Jewish settlers, today opened fire on rock-throwing Palestinians near the town of Ramallah in the occupied West Bank, killing one Arab and wounding one, army officials said.

The clash occurred when a civilian car was surrounded by demonstrators near Betin, an Arab village near the Jewish settlement of Ofra in the West Bank, 10 miles north of Jerusalem, an army official said on condition of anonymity.

Israel radio said the civilians were Jewish settlers, but there was no official confirmation. Many civilians, especially settlers, carry weapons when traveling through the West Bank.

The death raised to 29 the number of Arabs the military says have died as a result of Israeli gunfire since Dec. 8. About 1.5 million Palestinians live in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, which Israel captured from Egypt and Jordan in the 1967 Mideast war. The rioting there is the worst in 20 years.

Today's shooting came as underground Palestinian groups called for a three-day work stoppage and commercial strike to protest recent violence.

The army imposed a curfew on two West Bank refugee camps, while Palestinian protesters closed the streets of towns in the occupied Gaza Strip with barricades and burning tires for the third straight day.

Arabs threw stones at soldiers in scattered clashes reported throughout the West Bank, where the general strike closed stores in many areas.

On Sunday, one Arab was reportedly killed and nine were wounded as youths pelted soldiers with rocks and erected roadblocks of burning debris in the cities and towns of the Gaza Strip. There were scattered protests in the West Bank, and many merchants closed their shops there and in the Gaza Strip.

Also Sunday, the army confirmed a 65-year-old man died of gunshot wounds sustained in a riot in mid-December in Rafah, and hospital officials said Toukan Misbeh, a 30-year-old Palestinian activist, was shot to death in the Sajaiyeh quarter of Gaza City.

Today, Associated Press correspondent Mary Sedor said soldiers in the West Bank clashed with a group of about 20 Arab women waving black armbands and shouting slogans at a United Nations office in the Kalandia refugee camp.

She said soldiers used rifle butts to prod the women into the U.N. compound and away from the main road. She said tear gas was fired to disperse the demonstration.

The West Bank town of Ramallah was shuttered with stores closed and the streets empty.

In the Arab sector of east Jerusalem, police on horseback patrolled the deserted main shopping thoroughfare of Salah Al Din Street as a strike call was strictly observed.

Palestinian nationalist groups ordered the three-day strike in leaflets they distributed Sunday.

Opposition Rallies Against Sandinistas

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Thousands of people demanded an end to Sandinista rule and mourned the assassination of a newspaper publisher in the largest anti-government demonstration in more than eight years.

An estimated 10,000 people took part in the mile-long march Sunday to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the death of newspaper publisher Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, a supporter of the Sandinista revolution and one of the strongest critics of late strongman Anastasio Somoza.

"The people aren't afraid anymore," said Ramiro Gordian, one of the coalition's officers. "Pedro (Joaquin Chamorro) didn't want a Marxist-Leninist society. He wanted the people to have a better life."

Protesters chanted "Communists get out now!" A sign one marcher carried read, "Murderous Sandinista Communists, get out now!"

Wearing handkerchiefs over their faces to hide their identities, young men spray-painted walls with anti-government slogans.

No violence was reported during the march, organized by a coalition of opposition political parties and organizations.

In El Salvador, meanwhile, Roman Catholic Archbishop Arturo Rivera Damas said that steps taken under the Central American peace plan to end that country's civil war have not been successful. In addition, a written report by the independent Salvadoran Human Rights Commission said there was an "alarming increase" in human rights violations in that country. Few details of the paper were released.

Chamorro was killed Jan. 10, 1978, reportedly by people hired by those close to the Somoza dictatorship. His death was a major factor in consolidating support for the Sandinista National Liberation Front revolution, which ousted Somoza in July 1979, ending 42 years of rule by the family.

Iraq Hits Tankers Off Iran

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq today claimed its warplanes attacked two tankers off Iran during the night, and shipping sources confirmed that at least one Iranian tanker was hit and set on fire.

One of the shipping sources reported that Iraqi jets also attacked an Iranian island on Sunday night that is used as a base by the Iranian Revolutionary Guards, but the attack could not immediately be confirmed.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, are based in the Gulf.

The tanker attacks shattered a nine-day lull in the tanker war, a key part of the 7-year-old conflict between Iraq and Iran in the Persian Gulf.

The lull coincided with reports by Arab diplomatic sources that Syria, Iran's main Arab ally, had persuaded Tehran to open a dialogue with the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council on ways to end the Iran-Iraq war.

The shipping sources said the 280,476-ton Iranian supertanker Khark 3 was hit Sunday night. Baghdad Radio, monitored in Nicosia, quoted an unidentified military spokesman as saying that Iraqi warplanes attacked two ships in raids occurring about two hours apart Sunday night.

The official radio said the fighter bombers hit two "large maritime targets," which usually means tankers, in "effective and accurate" raids.

The shipping sources said the Khark 3, loaded with Iranian oil, was set on fire in the Iraqi air strike south of Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal in the northern end of the waterway. The supertanker, owned by the National Iranian Tanker Co., was hit twice by Iraqi jets last February.

Israel Claims TV Distorting Protests

JERUSALEM (AP) — The government, whose crackdown on riots in the occupied lands has been criticized by the United States and the United Nations, said television news reports were distorting Israel's handling of the situation.

Moshe Arad, Israeli ambassador to Washington, wrote Foreign Minister Shimon Peres saying he was concerned about growing dissatisfaction among U.S. government officials and Jewish leaders, Israel television reported.

Avi Pazner, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's press adviser, said the government had launched a campaign to overcome the criticism. He said it was caused largely by television footage that did not tell the whole story.

He also denied charges by the foreign press that the army was restricting coverage of Palestinian unrest in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Arad told Peres the United States supported a recent U.N. Security Council resolution condemning Israel because it was angry at the Israeli government for ignoring its advice. The Security Council last week censured Israel for ordering the deportation of nine Palestinians alleged to be ringleaders of violent demonstrations of the past month.

The U.S. government also urged Israel not to use live ammunition in quelling the riots in the occupied territories nor deport the Palestinians.

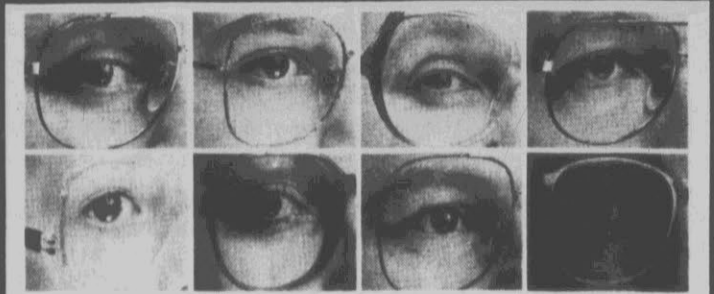

At least 28 Arabs have been killed by army gunfire since the disturbances began Dec. 8. About 1.5 million Palestinians live in the territories Israel captured from Egypt and Jordan during the 1967 Mideast war.

Her Schedule Combines Classes And Concerts

By SUSAN OKULA
Associated Press Writer
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — For cellist Shauna Rolston, music and academics have merged almost like a melody and its counterpoint.

When she's not on stage or in an airplane, the 20-year-old sophomore may be in a Yale University psychology or English class or in an art museum, looking for the subject of her next paper.

Her future engagements include being a soloist with the Toronto Symphony at the Winter Olympics in Calgary, and concerts in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv. She works out agreements with Yale over her absences so she can continue taking classes.

"It gets pretty hectic," says the Canadian musician, a recent recipient of the Alberta government's "Achievement Award for International Excellence."

Since she made her debut with the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra about eight years ago, Miss Rolston has performed throughout the world in recitals and with orchestras. She has also recorded four albums.

"She has one of the most phenomenal gifts for the cello that I have ever heard," says her Yale teacher, Aldo Parisot. "I have no doubts ... that she is going to be one of the big names eventually."

Miss Rolston's publicity shots show her in a black dress or in a tuxedo, but she was dressed in blue jeans, a sweater and boots during a recent interview in her Yale dormitory room. Her 1824 Chanot cello stood in a white traveling case by the room's fireplace.

Parisot says: "She is a very sweet person, a non-assuming kind of personality. She shows a great deal of respect for all of her colleagues."

Miss Rolston is the only child of Canadian musicians Thomas Rolston, a violinist, and Isobel Moore, a pianist. The couple gave her a specially made, miniature cello on her second birthday.

"It's always a natural thing I could play," she says of her instrument. "I don't ever remember struggling. It was made interesting and a game. There were not a lot of rules."

At age 12, Miss Rolston moved with her parents from Edmonton to Banff, a resort town in Alberta's Rocky Mountains. Her parents became music directors of the Banff Centre for Continuing Education, and Miss Rolston came to know the many renowned cello teachers who visited Banff throughout the year.

Her debut with the Edmonton Symphony "sparked some excitement," she said. And critics have continued to notice her.

In 1984, the Toronto Star called Miss Rolston "one of the finest Canadian musical talents of her generation."

"She seemingly enjoys nothing better than to entertain an audience with her forthright musicianship," wrote a reviewer for "The Strad" in England last summer.

Like her Banff High School schoolmates who were ski racers, Miss Rolston missed many hours in high school in order to perform. After graduating at 17, she performed for two years before coming to Yale as an undergraduate.

"I did not sit there at 12 and say, OK, I would be a cellist for the rest of my life," she says. "But I enjoyed it and kept doing more and more of it."

She says she chose Yale because it has a "nice atmosphere" and she wanted to be on the East Coast. "You can do a lot of growing here."

She says she is thinking about art history as a major.

This semester, Miss Rolston is missing five weeks of classes in order to perform. Next semester, she says, she will be absent even more often.

Her practice schedule is a bit erratic at school, but on the road Miss Rolston says she practices three to four hours a day.

"I'm lucky," she says. "There aren't a lot of people who have these opportunities. There are a lot of talented musicians out there. It gives you a feeling of self worth."

Man Struggles With Decision

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR SECRET: You are not alone. You have far more company than you (or anyone else) would ever imagine. I have a message for you — and for all the others who are in the same boat: to thine own self be true. You did not choose to be gay any more than I chose to be straight. (One may be able to choose one's actions — but not his "feelings.") And whether you act on your feelings or not, you are a homosexual. The tragedy is your unwillingness to accept yourself — and in an effort to "protect" yourself, you involved a woman in your life. She's unfulfilled and so are you.

You say divorce is "out of the question." Why? If your wife confronts you, tell her the truth, and free both of you from this hopeless sham.

DEAR ABBY: I am 27 and my husband is 38. We've been married for a year. It's my first marriage and "Ryan's" second. I fell head over heels in love with this man, and I know he loves me. He has two children by a previous marriage, living with their mother in another city. Our marriage is perfect — except for one thing. Ryan did not inform me before we were married that he had a vasectomy. Abby, I love children, and it saddens me to know that I will never bear a child. Ryan even saw an urologist hoping his vasectomy could be reversed, but he was told it couldn't be done.

I'm in counseling now to help me deal with this disappointment, but I still get spells of depression. Oh, Abby, tears are dropping on this letter as I write these words. Can you help me? — NO BABY OF MY OWN

DEAR NO BABY: Have you considered artificial insemination? If not, please do. Fertility specialists are performing near miracles these days. There is more than one route to motherhood. How about adoption?

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

IT'S AN OLD, OLD NAME

CLINTON, Ill. (AP) — Not many American firms can claim to be more than 200 years old.

One that can is Revere Ware, a cookware marketing company which traces its origins to 1783. Founder Paul Revere, the Revolutionary War hero, began selling copper bells and brass door hinges in Boston and then became a leading maker of copper products. His clients included the U.S. Navy and the U.S. Mint.

After several name changes, Revere Ware in 1939 introduced its line of copper clad stainless steel cookware. It says its newest product is a metal skillet that can be used safely in a microwave oven.

CareMaster Chat

FLOODED CARPET?

Here's the scene. It's 2:00 A.M. You keep hearing water running somewhere in your home. Finally you decide you'd better get up and check things out — and SPLASH—you step down into cold, soggy carpet which is now under three inches of water.

What happened?...Could be any of a number of things—burst pipe, washer or toilet over-flow, rising ground water, vandalism. The point is you now have a crisis on your hands and don't know what to do or to whom to turn for help.

It Gets Worse!

To make matters worse, if something isn't done quickly (within hours), your furniture may permanently stain your carpet; or the water from the carpet may cause your furniture or even your home's structural components to rust, discolor, swell or split. A little later, sour odors and mildew begin to develop; and by then, you have a genuine health hazard.

24-Hour Help

The solution? That's why we provide emergency response service. Believe it or not, even at 2:00 A.M. (weekends, holidays, too), you do have a friend to whom you can turn for help. Our 24-hour phone number will put you in touch with an expert in handling flood-damage restoration. He'll tell you what to do to preserve and protect your property; and, within a few minutes, he'll be on the scene with professional restoration equipment and services (including an EPA-registered disinfectant to eliminate health hazards). In most cases, your homeowner's policy will cover the costs involved.

Sure, it doesn't happen every day. But when you need help, remember, you have a 24-hour friend standing by!

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 71 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 44.73 cents. The market is higher and the live supply is adequate occasionally light for a good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 2,098,000, compared to 1,850,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices jumped around erratically in active, edgy trading today following Friday's sharp drop.
The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, up more than 25 points in the early going, was down 3.15 at 1,908.16 after the first half hour.
Losers outnumbered gainers by about 9 to 5 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 431 up, 796 down and 390 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 36.57 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.
Wall Streeters came to work braced for a volatile day after the selloff on Friday, which evoked vivid memories of the sequence of events that led up to the market crash on Black Monday Oct. 19.
The sudden drop Friday wiped out all the gains recorded in what had looked like a promising rally over the first four sessions of the new year.
Analysts said traders were upset by a jump in bond market interest rates and worries over the likely content of the monthly report due out this Friday on the nation's trade balance.

An added element of uncertainty, brokers said, was provided by a presidential task force report, issued late Friday, on the causes and consequences of the crash last fall.

Man Injured
A man injured in an accident on Ripley Road in Westhaven Subdivision remains in serious condition today, according to Greenville Patrolman P.W. Worthington.
Worthington said that contrary to some reports, it was not a hit-and-run accident. The police was called to the scene at 6:47 p.m. Sunday after a car skidded on ice on Ripley Street and hit the man walking along the street.
Worthington said identification of the victim could not be released until his next of kin, who live outside the state, could be contacted and notified.

Andrews
BETHEL — Mr. Willard E. Andrews, 86, died Sunday.

His funeral will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Bethel Baptist Church. Burial will be in the Bethel City Cemetery.

Mr. Andrews was a retired merchant who served 24 years as a Bethel town commissioner.

Surviving are his wife, Lucille Martin Andrews of the home; a brother, Herman Andrews of Bethel, and one grandson.

The family will receive friends at 213 Woolard St., Bethel. Arrangements are by Ayres-Gray Funeral Home of Bethel.

State Is Digging Out

clock since Thursday morning," Ms. Teachey said. "Right now I don't feel anymore. I'm just kind of numb."

At the state's Emergency Operations Center, in the basement of the Department of Administration Building, some seemed to lose track of time.

"I've been working such crazy hours I've forgotten when the snow started," said Bob Buchanan, assistant plans branch chief. "Was it Thursday? Yeah, it was Thursday."

Wet roads froze in parts of the state Saturday and Sunday night, making travel hazardous.

"We're still having some wrecks due to the runoff freezing," said G.H. Whitehouse, a highway patrol telecommunicator. "We have some slick spots on the main roads."

In Gaston County, a tractor-trailer carrying 3,000 gallons of milk overturned Saturday on Interstate 85, about 1,000 feet from the Catawba River bridge, said J.J. Gable, a telecommunicator with the N.C. Highway Patrol.

The milk leaked at the rate of about 20 to 25 gallons a minute until the tanker was righted, Gable said, adding that he did not know how long that took.

Gable said the 10:40 p.m. accident apparently was caused by icy conditions.

At least eight people have lost their lives in weather-related traffic accidents.

Ruby Foster Wall, 58, of Liberty, was killed at 11 a.m. Sunday while riding in a car that skidded on ice south of Burlington in Alamance County and hit an oncoming car.

James Turner Jr., 11, of Mebane, died in a wreck Friday afternoon on N.C. 49 just north of Haw River in Alamance County. His sister, 5-year-old Tomeka, died Saturday night at Duke Medical Center in Durham. Their parents, James Turner Sr., 38, and Ruby Turner, 35, were in serious but stable condition Sunday.

Weather-related traffic fatalities also were reported in Beaufort, Robeson, Nash and Bertie counties. And a Rutherford County man died Thursday after suffering a heart attack as walked from the post office to his home about a mile away.

The State Emergency Response Center reported the N.C. Highway Patrol had investigated 640 traffic accidents between 8 a.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Sunday.

The 101 National Guard armories that have been open as shelter for stranded motorists and those without power throughout the storm remained open Sunday night, Buchanan said.

He said 44 people stayed at the armories Saturday night. The Red Cross is no longer operating shelters, and Salvation Army reported 12 lodges with about 450 people spending the night.

The Cleveland County Emergency Management Agency reported that four teen-agers, two boys and two girls, were provided shelter in Shelby Saturday night after their vehicle ran off the road. Officials said they appeared to be very young and had no money. The girls' parents were contacted in Miami, and transportation was arranged for their return there.

Fish Ads Unveiled

RALEIGH (AP) — The Martin administration today unveiled a public relations campaign that proclaims North Carolina "first in fish" in an effort to persuade consumers that the red tide has not made seafood unsafe to eat.

"There's not a thing wrong with North Carolina seafood," Gov. Jim Martin said at a news conference with Commerce Secretary Claude Pope. "It's as good as ever and that's saying a lot."

The officials put on display several television and newspaper ads and played two radio commercials, all of which will begin appearing within a week.

The spots feature well-known North Carolinians enjoying seafood dishes and urging people to do likewise.

Among those appearing in the ads are stock car drivers Richard and Kyle Petty, former University of North Carolina President William Friday, country singer George Hamilton IV, basketball stars Tommy Burleson, Tommy Amaker and Phil Ford and gospel singer Shirley Caesar. The commercials were filmed last week at the UNC Center for Public Television studios.

Martin said only about 30 percent of the state's oyster and clam beds have been affected by the red tide, an algae that settled along the N.C. coast last year, poisoning some oyster and clam beds.

The governor said that while the rest of the state's seafood was safe, the red tide had had a "chilling effect" on seafood purchases.

Suspect

by Monika Stenkat, spokeswoman for the Schleswig-Holstein state Interior Ministry.

The United States blamed Libya for the La Belle attack and 10 days later bombed Tripoli and Benghazi in retaliation for it and other acts of terrorism it said Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi had aided. Western diplomats said at least 100 people were killed.

Authorities always have believed there was an Arab connection in the La Belle bombing, with Libya and Syria most suspect, West German security sources said today. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

One source said discussion of foreign involvement would have to wait for further investigation now that Mrs. Endrigkeit has been arrested.

Spokesman Robert Heath of the U.S. Embassy in Bonn today declined comment on whether new developments in the case would have any effect on the U.S. insistence Libya was behind the La Belle bombing.

U.S. authorities said after the bombing that they had intercepted radio messages from the Libyan embassy in East Berlin that implicated Gadhafi's agents in the attack. West German investigators have said they never were given any such evidence.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl and other West German officials also said shortly after the disco bombing that Libya was suspected of orchestrating the blast.

On Sunday, a security source said Mrs. Endrigkeit was believed to be in hiding with her 3-year-old son, Michael.

Stock Prices Flit

of action that we had on the 19th of October."

But New York Stock Exchange Chairman John Phelan said on the same program that "of course there is no guarantee," it would not happen again.

In addition to obliterating the gains of last Monday-Thursday, Friday's drop raised a shadow over hopes that the stock market had finally begun to recover from the thrashing it absorbed nearly three months ago.

The plunge began with a Labor Department report that civilian unemployment in December dropped to 5.8 percent, its lowest rate since July 1979.

On the bond market, interest rates soared because the report added to growing belief that the economy is much stronger than previously thought.

With a stronger economy, the Federal Reserve would have less incentive to push interest rates down, while higher interest rates could hurt corporate profits — in turn, hurting stocks.

Computerized program trading, a strategy whereby professionals use computers to profit on differences between stock index futures and their underlying baskets of stocks, also aggravated the decline, analysts said.

And traders were worried that November U.S. trade figures to be released Friday will be worse than thought, they said.

Some also said traders were disturbed by advance reports on recommendations by the commission headed by Brady.

The report, issued after the market closed, did not ask for price limits on stocks — as some had expected — but did recommend that one agency, preferably the Federal Reserve Board, coordinate the nation's financial markets.

The White House has reacted coolly to the report.

Redskins, Broncos Claim Wins

Defense Keys Washington Win

CHICAGO (AP) — The Washington Redskins took Chicago's four-degree temperature and minus-21 wind chill factor and used what has always been the Bears' best weapon — defense — to knock them from the NFL playoffs for the second straight season and end Walter Payton's record-breaking career on a down note.

Darrell Green's 52-yard punt return broke a 14-14 halftime tie after Doug Williams had rallied Washington from a 14-point deficit as the Redskins beat the Bears 21-17 Sunday to reach the NFC championship game for the second year in a row. They did it by sacking Jim McMahon five times — three by Charles Mann — and making three interceptions.

But unlike last season, when they lost 17-0 to the New York Giants in the gales of Giants Stadium, the Redskins will play for their trip to the Super Bowl at home against the wild-card Minnesota Vikings, who upset San Francisco 36-24 Saturday. The Redskins beat Minnesota 27-24 in overtime at Minneapolis three weeks ago.

Green's run, 3:40 into the third period, was the game-breaker. He took Tommy Barnhardt's punt on his 48, raced down the right sideline, then hurdled Cap Boso and cut back over the middle.

"Nobody hit me at all," said Green, who suffered a pulled rib muscle on the jump and never returned to his normal position at left cornerback.

"I did the same thing once in college. It was the same type of play. I plan to go out for the Olympic hurdles."

It didn't look at the start like the Redskins, who won the NFC East title with an 11-4 record, would get the chance to repeat last year's 27-13 win here that knocked the Bears from the playoffs.

With Payton, playing in his final NFL game, reverting to the form that has made him the league's career rushing leader and the defense looking like the one that led the Bears to a Super Bowl victory two years ago, Chicago took a 14-0 lead in the first 22 minutes.

Calvin Thomas ran two yards for one touchdown and Jim McMahon, playing his first game in the past month after suffering a pulled hamstring, threw 14 yards to Ron Morris for the other as Payton ran for 62 yards in 10 carries during that stretch.

Williams, who won the quarterback job from Jay Schroeder, suddenly brought the Redskins back, hitting Ricky Sanders for 32 yards on a drive capped by George Rogers' three-yard touchdown run. Then he hit Clint Didier with an 18-yard touchdown pass in the final minute, tying the score 14-14 at halftime.

Broncos Roll By Houston, 34-10

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Broncos, veterans of the NFL playoff wars, kept their heads, while all about them the fledgling Houston Oilers seemed to be losing theirs ... and the game.

Maturity was a primary ingredient in the Broncos' 34-10 rout of the Oilers in a divisional playoff game Sunday, a victory which propelled Denver into the AFC championship game for the second straight year. Denver will again play Cleveland, this time at Mile High Stadium, next Sunday. The Browns beat Indianapolis 38-21 on Saturday.

John Elway, the league's MVP, threw two touchdown passes to tight end Clarence Kay and ran for a third score as Denver, a playoff team four of the past five years, took command early and never let up.

The young Oilers, who hadn't been to the playoffs since 1980, suffered two key interceptions and a critical fumble on a lateral at their own 1-yard line, along with a slew of penalties.

"They (the Oilers) don't have that much experience in the playoffs, and it showed a little," Denver linebacker Karl Mecklenburg said.

"They're a young team playing on emotion, and they lost it," added safety Tony Lilly. "They got into sort of a panic situation. They didn't have the experience to pull out of it."

The Oilers came into Sunday's game talking big. Even their coach, Jerry Glanville, indicated Denver was just a way station on the road to the Super Bowl. The verbal barrage spilled over onto the field Sunday.

"They were talking a lot out there," Kay said. "I lost a lot of respect for them. They disappointed me. They were saying, 'You can't do this, you can't beat me.' They were running off at the mouth. I used to be like that when I came into the league."

"But they quieted down in the second quarter. It got real quiet out there."

The outcome may have been decided less than six minutes into the game after Mike Horan's punt went out of bounds at the Houston 5.

Alonzo Highsmith lost a yard on a running play and the Oilers, operating without a huddle, quickly ran another play — a lateral into the left flat to running back Mike Rozier. Rozier was behind the line of scrimmage, and when he dropped the ball, Denver's Steve Wilson recovered at the one. Gene Lang scored for Denver two plays later.

Houston then drove to the Broncos' 20, but Mecklenburg intercepted. Elway promptly drove the Broncos to their second score, hitting Kay, who had beaten safety Keith Bostic, on a 27-yarder.

After an exchange of field goals, Elway took Denver 80 yards in nine plays, highlighted by a 55-yard pass to a wide-open Vance Johnson, for a 24-3 lead. On the score, Elway rolled to his right and threw back across the middle to an open Kay.

The Oilers blew another scoring opportunity in the third period. Warren Moon completed six passes on a drive that reached Denver's 7, but cornerback Mark Haynes picked off a pass in the end zone and returned it 57 yards.

Houston got its lone touchdown with 8:22 left after an interception by cornerback Patrick Allen near mid-

Kenny Murphy had been tearing up the intramural basketball leagues at East Carolina for two years, and when new coach Mike Steele opened up two spots on the roster for walk-ons, Murphy jumped at the chance.

But the junior from Durham has done more than just make the team, he has earned a starting position as well as a scholarship.

After a cold start shooting, Murphy, who played at Northern Durham High School, has settled in as a steady player for a young 4-7 Pirate team.

"I decided (to come out) the spring after last season because I heard there was a new coach coming in," Murphy said in an interview last week.

"I said, well, 'this is my chance to play Division I college basketball.' After I returned (to school) in the fall, everybody was telling me they had a couple of spots open and that I could possibly step in and get some playing time."

Neal Helps Get Tech By Wake

ATLANTA (AP) — Heavily favored Georgia Tech was struggling until Craig Neal went to work midway through the second half.

Neal sparked a 10-0 burst over a three-minute span that saw Tech stretch its lead to 65-52 en route to a 78-66 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Wake Forest Sunday.

Neal had the second basket in the run, came up with a steal and also had a pair of assists on crisp passes to a wide open Duane Ferrell to put an end to the Deacons' last serious challenge in the contest.

"He's been around here five years and he's been a little wild at times, but he's really maturing and I'm proud of him," Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said of Neal. "He played great today. On the break he's got some freedom and he got loose on the break and made some great cross-court passes."

The Deacons had chopped a 9-point lead to 55-52 before the Tech run on a three-point play by Sam Ivy and a 3-point basket by David Carlyle.

Tech eventually stretched its lead to 17 points before the Deacons scored the last five points in the game.

Tom Hammonds led Tech with 19 points and Ferrell had 16. Brian Oliver added 14 points and Neal 13 for the Jackets, 11-2 overall and 1-0 in the ACC.

The Deacons, 4-7 and 0-2, got a career-high 19 points from sophomore Ralph Kitley, who also had 10 rebounds. Hammonds helped shut down Kitley in the second half, holding him scoreless in the final 11:36.

"I think the key to the game was the first 20 possession of the second half," Wake Forest Coach Bob Staak said. "According to our stats in those

He is averaging a modest 6.6 points a game, but still that's quite an accomplishment for a guy who has gone from playing everyday college students at Memorial Gymnasium on the ECU campus to Division I college basketball players.

Tonight, Murphy and his Pirate teammates take on James Madison in Harrisonburg, Va., in the second game of their initial Colonial Athletic Association road trip of the season.

Saturday, the Pirates dropped their CAA opener, 77-63, to James Madison. Murphy had six points on 3-4 shooting from the field in the loss.

JMU, though, took a 72-70 decision over UNC-Wilmington Saturday to run its record to 4-7.

In a season that hasn't had an overabundance of bright spots, Murphy's emergence has been a pleasant surprise for Steele and the rest of the Pirate coaching staff.

"Kenny Murphy, a walk-on, coming in and being able to contribute as much as he has, it's not only a pleasant surprise but a hell of a story," Steele said.

The adjustment, though, hasn't been all that easy, according to Murphy.

"It's been a learning experience because I've been out of organized basketball for about four years," he said. "All the coaches have been a big help. Now everything seems to be a day-to-day routine."

"I would say I approach it in businesslike manner. This is a whole lot different than intramurals. There is a whole lot more at stake. It's a whole lot more serious."

Before the season, forecasts for the Pirates were dim. They returned no starters and had only two players with any playing experience. But the grim predictions have served as a motivating factor for the team, according to Murphy.

"When you see something in the paper like East Carolina will not win a major college basketball game this year, you want to prove everybody wrong," he said. "I know a lot of people had their doubts, but I knew all along we were going to surprise some people."

"Now the team feels we're a good team and I think we can beat everybody in the conference. At the beginning of the season, we really didn't know how good we could be, but after we won a few games, we feel like we can (potentially) beat any team on our schedule."

Tonight's game starts at 7:30 and will be broadcast on WDLX 93 FM.

Newman Puts Himself With Legends

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Newman successfully shadowed Wilt Chamberlain and Larry Bird in the same week. Not bad for a virtually unknown NBA performer who is playing the wrong position.

Newman, fresh from a 19-for-19 shooting performance that tied him with Chamberlain for the second-longest perfect streak in NBA history — Chamberlain also has the longest with 35 straight — set his sights on Bird Saturday night in front of a sellout crowd at Madison Square Garden.

The three-time NBA Most Valuable Player for the Boston Celtics scored 41 points against Newman and the New York Knicks Wednesday night, and he had 11 in the first period Saturday.

But with Newman doing most of the defensive work, Bird was held to nine points in the final three periods and made only one of seven shots in the second half as the Knicks defeated the Celtics 106-98.

"I took it personally when he scored 41," Newman said. "My pride tells me that I don't want anyone to do that, not even Larry Bird."

Newman said he was determined to make Bird work harder for his shots after his strong first quarter Saturday.

"All you can do is be there as soon as he gets the ball and bother him a little," Newman said. "I try to make him rush his shots."

Newman wasn't doing any shot-rushing earlier in the week. After hitting his last attempt against the Los Angeles Clippers on Jan. 1, he made all five of his shots four days later against Phoenix.

Averaging only six points per game, Newman attracted some attention Wednesday night when he hit all 11 of his field-goal attempts while scoring a career-high 24 points in a losing cause against the Celtics.

Newman then made his first two shots Friday at New Jersey, giving him 19 straight. He finished 3-for-4 in the game, for a total of 20 field goals in 21 attempts, a spurt that raised his shooting percentage from .455 to .542.

"I wasn't aware of the streak until the Boston game when I went 11-for-11," Newman said Saturday.

"Actually, the streak should have kept going against New Jersey because I was fouled on my only miss," but no foul was called on the play.

The 7-foot-1 Chamberlain undoubtedly had some dunks in his long streak of baskets, and the 6-5 Newman also had his share.

Knicks Coach Rick Pitino estimated that 12 of Newman's 19 consecutive baskets were dunks or short shots after drives to the basket.

"That's the amazing thing about Johnny," Pitino said. "He's been going to the basket real strong."

Newman, a second-year pro from Richmond who played last season with the Cleveland Cavaliers, has started the last 13 games at small forward. But he believes he is much better suited for the shooting guard position.

"I like playing big guard," Newman said. "I feel I can do so many more things having the ball more. I'll continue to work at that position. Right now, I'm playing small forward, but that's no problem. I do what I have to do."

Hoyas Ease By Blue Demons, 74-64

CHICAGO (AP) — Perry McDonald scored 16 points and reserve guard Charles Smith added 15 as 14th-ranked Georgetown fought off a late DePaul rally Sunday and defeated the Blue Demons 74-64.

Ahead 64-61 with 1:40 left, Georgetown outscored DePaul 10-3 the rest of the way to improve its record to 11-1.

The Hoyas, who entered the second half with a 30-27 lead, pushed the margin to 54-44 after a basket by Dwayne Bryant at the 9:44 mark.

DePaul, now 8-3, then outscored Georgetown 10-2 to pull within two points with 4:36 remaining. The Hoyas got the next two baskets to go ahead 62-56 and held off the pesky Blue Demons the rest of the way.

Mark Tillmon scored 14 points for Georgetown and Jaren Jackson had 13. Kevin Edwards, who scored 17 points in the second half, led DePaul with 21 points, while Stanley Brundy had 16.

Georgetown never trailed in the first half and twice owned six-point leads.

Each time DuPaul appeared to gain momentum, Georgetown often answered with a 3-point basket.

The Hoyas made four shots from 3-point-range, including three by Tillmon. McDonald had 10 points in the first half.

Marist Probation Ruling Upheld

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The NCAA's order banning Marist College from postseason basketball play for two years has been upheld on appeal, it was announced Sunday.

The NCAA Infractions Committee announced in September that Marist's men's team would not be allowed to play past the regular season following this season and next. The penalties were imposed, the NCAA said, for "approximately 17 violations occurring from 1984 to 1986 related to the recruitment of foreign prospective student-athletes, the receipt of impermissible extra benefits after enrollment and false and misleading information reported during the investigation by an assistant coach and some team members."

The school appealed the penalty to the NCAA Division I Steering Committee.

"Following a hearing on the appeal, the steering committee voted to affirm the Committee on Infractions' position. Therefore, the college's probationary period will begin Jan. 9, 1988," said Al Witte, chairman of the Division I Steering Committee.

Little Offense In The Japan Bowl

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — The Japanese fans who turned out Sunday to watch American college all-stars play football saw a game of incomplete passes — 41 in all.

One that connected — a fourth-quarter 39-yard strike from Todd Santos of San Diego State to Guy Liggins of San Jose State — clinched the Japan Bowl for the West, 17-3, over the East.

At one point in the second quarter, the teams had seven consecutive incomplete passes.

Although both coaches had predicted their stars would produce a high-scoring game, the East's three points were the fewest for any team in 13 Japan Bowls. The previous low was 10.

The ball was in the air even before the start. Three Japanese girls parachuted into Yokohama Stadium and presented the game ball to the referee.

The East started well. On its second play, Don McPherson of Syracuse passed 50 yards to Darren Flutie of Boston College at the West 12. But the East had to settle for a 28-yard field goal by Syracuse's Tim Vestling.

The East gained only 94 more yards passing in the game, while losing 14 rushing.

The West rushed for 81 yards and passed for 172, with Santos compiling the best numbers — 11-of-24 for 145 yards. Teammate Mike Perez of San Jose State hit 3-of-3 with one interception for 27 yards, while McPherson was 5-of-15 for 96 yards and Kerwin Bell of Florida was 5-of-18 with two interceptions for 48 yards.

"The difference was their ability to rush our passers," said East Coach Lou Holtz, whose Notre Dame team lost 35-10 in the Cotton Bowl 10 days earlier to West Coach Jackie Sherrill's Texas A&M team.

"We wanted it more than they did. They had more All-Americans. We had more of the little guys," said West lineman Neal Smith of Nebraska, who was named defensive star of the game.

"We knew we had to get to the quarterback so he couldn't throw to Tim Brown and the other receivers," Smith said.

Brown, the Heisman Trophy winner, caught only one pass, for seven yards, in the fourth quarter. Another half dozen passes intended for him were thrown out of his reach.

Santos' college coach, Denny Stoltz, was the West's offensive coordinator, "so I knew all the routes, and where the secondary receivers would be," he said. "That was a big plus."

The West took a 7-3 halftime lead thanks to Fresno State lineman Jethro Franklin's recovery of a fumble by McPherson on the East 29. On a fourth-and-one play, Santos plunged for a first down on the 1-yard line, and on the next play plunged for a touchdown.

Smith Keeping Russell Happy

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Sacramento rookie Kenny Smith is doing everything Coach Bill Russell hoped he would — and more.

Smith, the Kings' No. 1 draft pick last spring, scored 16 points and added 10 assists, including a behind-the-back pass that set up Otis Thorpe for what proved to be the winning basket, as the Kings edged the Seattle SuperSonics 109-108 Sunday night.

In Sunday's only other NBA game, Milwaukee beat New Jersey 105-87.

Russell, in his first season coaching the Kings, said Smith's value "goes beyond stats," and praised the way Smith ran the offense as Sacramento overcame a 17-point deficit.

Reggie Theus, who led the Kings with 25 points, said Smith made "three of four big inspirational plays down the stretch" that spurred the Kings' comeback.

"Kenny can do a lot of things and tonight he got us going," Theus said.

One of those key plays was an out-of-bounds save that Smith threw over his shoulder cross-court to Joe Kleine, who took it in for a layup.

"That is one of the things that made him a No. 1 draft pick," Russell said of the spectacular pass to Kleine. "I wish I could take credit for it, but I probably would have told him not to try it."

Smith, a college star at North Carolina, said forcing Seattle to make defensive decisions was the key to his success.

"When I would drive up the middle they would commit someone defensively to me and that opened up opportunities for me to pass down low," Smith said. "That is what happened on the dunk near the end of the game by Thorpe that really gave us the momentum."

Seattle coach Bernie Bickerstaff also praised Smith.

"Kenny Smith did a good job of running their offense, especially in the fourth quarter," Bickerstaff said.

Harold Pressley added 17 points for the Kings, while Dale Ellis topped Seattle with 30 and Tom Chambers added 27.

"They played well in the second half and had a nice little press that slowed us down," Chambers said. "Their guards drove to the hoop and dished off to their big men for a lot of easy inside baskets."

Seattle has now lost eight straight road games to the Kings, including all six played in Sacramento since the franchise moved from Kansas City in 1985.

"But all of those games have been either down to the last shots or overtime affairs," Bickerstaff said. "Believe me, their coaching staff does a great job. Sacramento is going to be going places."

"We missed some shots down the stretch and they made their shots," Bickerstaff added. "That made a big difference. When you get things going good for you your defense picks up the tempo and that helps your offense get going. They build on each other. Sacramento proved that tonight."

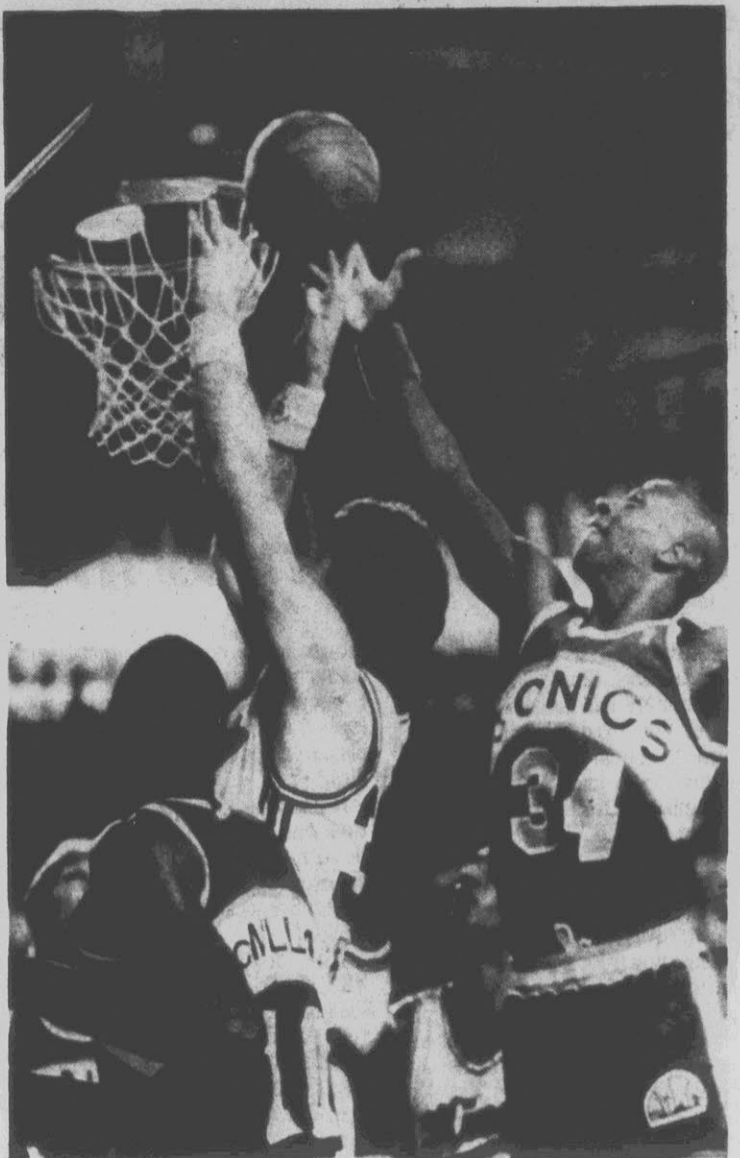

Seattle's biggest lead of 17 points, 70-53, came with 8:07 left in the third quarter. The Kings took the lead 101-100 when Smith scored on a layup with 3:05 left. The lead changed hands three times until Sacramento went ahead for good, 107-105, on a 10-foot shot by Pressley.

Thorpe's dunk with 36 seconds left gave Sacramento a 109-105 lead. Ellis hit a 3-pointer four seconds later to cut the Kings' lead to 109-108, but Xavier McDaniel missed a 14-foot baseline jumper at the buzzer.

Bucks 105, Nets 87 Milwaukee handed New Jersey its 13th consecutive road loss and 21st straight since last season.

Sidney Moncrief scored 17 points and Terry Cummings 16 for the Bucks, who lost three of their previous four home games.

Milwaukee hit 22 of 38 shots in the first half and used a 16-4 run to build a 49-29 lead with 2:46 left.

Green's Scoring Punt Return Helped Key Washington Win

CHICAGO (AP) — In the statistics, Darrell Green finished with one tackle, one punt return and one very big touchdown.

Green hurdled a Bear player and raced 52 yards with a punt for the winning touchdown Sunday to bail out Washington's much maligned speciality teams and vault the Redskins over the Chicago Bears 21-17 in the NFC semifinals.

"I want to go out for the Olympic hurdles competition," Green joked in the jubilant Redskins dressing room afterward.

"It wasn't all that spectacular," Green said of his third-quarter touchdown, breaking a 14-14 tie.

"It ignited us as much as anything," Redskins coach Joe Gibbs said of Green's return — the first touchdown of a punt return in his 5-year pro career.

"Our special teams got us a touchdown — finally," said Gibbs, whose kick squads had performed so poorly during the regular season that he had hired Paul Lanham as an assistant to specialty teams coach Chuck Banker.

Three minutes into the second half, the Bears' offense stalled on their own 7 yard line. Chicago's Tommy Barnhardt punted 44 yards to the Washington 48, where Green took caught the football on the fly.

Barnhardt "was kicking to one side of the field earlier. So we lined up to one side, knowing he was going to punt to one side and knowing I could get a good jump on it," said Green, the NFL's fastest man in network television-sponsored competition. "So I got a good jump on it. By me getting the ball real quick I guess helped the guys set it up."

Redskins Edge Bears...

Williams was sacked only once, while McMahon was continually harassed as the Bears lost for only the second time in his last 30 starts.

"I think the key was the offensive line," said Williams, who converted seven of 14 third-down plays. "They made up their mind to give me time."

The run by Green, who returned only five punts during the regular season, came after an exchange of interceptions at the start of the second half. Asked if he liked to return punts, Green replied: "Only when I'm not tackled."

Then Washington's defense took over, limiting Payton to 85 yards in 18 carries for the game and picking off three McMahon passes in the second half.

"It's been 13 years for me and a lot of happy moments," Payton said. "Overall, it's been a lot of fun. Take away the fun and it's time to leave."

"That's why it's hard for me to leave."

"Football has been good to me. It doesn't owe me a thing. The team and my teammates, I can't say enough for them. I've truly been blessed to play the game of football."

The only other Chicago score was Kevin Butler's 25-yard field goal with 4:47 left in the third quarter. The last real Chicago threat ended with 9:20 remaining in the game on Barry Wilburn's interception in the end zone after Chicago had reached the Redskins' 14.

"We were in a zone and I was reading McMahon the whole time," said Wilburn, who led the NFL in interceptions. "He threw the ball to me."

"We made some key changes at halftime," said Mann, who this year has overshadowed the more publicized Dexter Manley, who plays at the other end of the defensive line.

"They were hurting us on the run in the first half. But after we made the adjustments, we stopped them."

That was the way the Bears saw it, too.

"We had numerous opportunities," Chicago Coach Mike Ditka said. "It's tough. We had opportunities but we couldn't do what we had to do. To have it taken out of our backyard two years in a row, that's tough."

The loss was the fifth for Chicago in 16 games this season and only the second in the last 30 starts for the oft-injured McMahon, who finished with 15 completions in 29 attempts for 197 yards. Williams was 14-of-29 for 207 yards.

After Green's touchdown, the best the Bears could do after that was Kevin Butler's 25-yard field goal with 4:47 left in the third quarter.

As it has so often, the Chicago defense created the first touchdown of the game.

Washington started its second possession at the Bears 45. On the first play, Williams was sacked by Richard Dent and fumbled, the ball bounding to the Redskins 30, where Steve McMichael recovered.

Five running plays later, Thomas scored, giving the Bears a 7-0 lead with 6:23 left in the quarter. Payton carried for the first 22 yards.

The Chicago defense rose up again on the next series, when Washington drove to the Bears 32. But Mike Singletary stuffed George Rogers on a fourth-and-one, and the Bears took over.

Chicago faced an almost identical situation a few minutes later — fourth-and-two from the Washington 31. But the Bears converted, with McMahon hitting Boso, the backup tight end for six yards to the Washington 25.

That kept alive what turned out to be a 68-yard, 14-play drive capped by McMahon's touchdown pass to Morris, who beat Wilburn on a slant pattern, giving Chicago a 14-0 lead with 8:06 left in the half.

The Redskins cut it to 14-7 just 3:15 later, when Rogers scored, capping a 72-yard, seven-play drive on which rookie Timmy Smith ran three times

Payton Closes Out Storied Career

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — He was the last man to reach the losing Chicago locker room, arriving well after most of his teammates had stripped out of their uniforms and gone to the showers.

Walter Payton made his way to the corner locker, the one without the number over it. After 13 years, after 16,726 yards, after a Hall of Fame career, his locker needed no number.

Payton slumped in the corner, his helmet still on. He leaned back against the wall and closed his eyes for what seemed an eternity after Washington eliminated the Bears from the NFL playoffs, 21-17.

Perhaps he was replaying the last time he handled the football for the Bears. Trying for a miracle with no timeouts left and the clock evaporating, Chicago faced a fourth-down-and-8 at their own 36. Jim McMahon's swing pass to Payton picked up seven yards.

After rushing for more yards than any man in NFL history and gaining 85 yards Sunday to lead all runners in the NFC semifinal playoff against Washington, Payton had come up one yard short.

One yard.
Around him, players moved quietly. There was the usual shuffle of tape and pads, discarded at the end of the game. For Payton, however, this was the end of a career, the greatest running back career in NFL history. And he was in no hurry.

Finally, he opened his eyes and looked at his hands. He was still wearing gloves, and he clasped them and unclasped them. The only sound in his corner of the locker room was the Velcro as the palms pulled apart, clasped, and then pulled apart again.

Again, he closed his eyes and leaned his head back against the wall, his helmet tapping it softly. He opened his eyes slowly, as if the lids weighed tons. He leaned forward, hands on chin, looking like a living version of Rodin's sculpture, The Thinker.

Calvin Thomas, dressing nearby, noticed Payton still in full gear. He walked over. "You OK?" he said to the top ground-gainer in NFL history.

"I'm fine," Payton said. "I'm just taking my time. It's my last time taking it off."

Thomas smiled and shook Payton's hand.
Finally, the helmet came off and Payton began going through the ritual he had followed hundreds, perhaps thousands of times. Methodically, he stripped off the tools of this tough business of football.

When he came to the thigh pads, he hesitated for a moment. "I've worn these for 20 years," he said, handing them gently to the equipment man. "Three years in high school, four years in college, 13 years here."

It was as though he was saying goodbye to two old friends.

Another pal, Chicago newsman Bill Gleason, who has covered Payton since the runner was a rookie, slid over next to him.

"What I will remember about you is how much fun you were," Gleason said.

Payton smiled softly. "That was the main reason I was playing," he said.

Then he looked at Gleason.

"Will you miss me?" Payton asked.

"Absolutely," Gleason said. "Will you miss this?" the writer asked, motioning to the mass of media around his locker.

"No, not too badly."
Now Payton pulled the elastic bandage off his left knee and headed for the showers.

Matt Suhey, who blocked out of the backfield for Payton for the last several years, had his overcoat on. He came looking for his friend and followed him into the shower room for one last hug.

Now Payton was done showering and back at his locker. The bandage covering a scraped left elbow had come loose and needed replacing. That done, he slipped into civilian clothes, an outfit that seemed out of place for him. Black pants, aqua shirt, black sweater.

He looked at the media, picked up a bottle of cologne and did one last sweep, spraying it at them.

Sweetness, right to the end.

No Miracles For Montana

By Scott Ostler
(c) 1988, Los Angeles Times
SAN FRANCISCO — Say it ain't so, Joe.

If October is Reggie Jackson's time, then the fourth quarter of any given lost cause is Joe Montana's time.

Isn't it so, Joe?
How many times — pro, college, high school, sandlot — did you mock the clock and sneer at the scoreboard and bring your team back from nowhere to everywhere?

You and St. Jude have been the co-patron saints of lost causes. You two should call the pregame coin-flip together.

Game is lost, season is shot, time is running out, who ya gonna call? Mon-tan-a.

But Saturday, in the gloom and drizzle of Candlestick Park, on a day for soggy peanuts and rain and tears in your beer, when the going got tough, the coach went to the bullpen.

Midway through the third quarter, Vikings leading your 49ers, 27-10, plenty of time for the customary Montana miracles, the coach sent in another quarterback, gave you the hook, like a bad comedian on the Gong Show.

Coach Bill Walsh looked you in the eye and said, "Joe, we're going with Steve."

Steve Young trotted onto your field, did a few very impressive things, but ran short of miracles. It was Montana Time, but as the clock was clicking down, you stood on the sideline, your socks drooping, your spirits drooping. In the closing seconds of the Vikings' 36-24 win, Walsh turned to you on the sideline and, out or respect and professional courtesy, tried to explain.

"We had to see if the chemistry could change," Walsh told you.

You nodded.
What the 49ers needed was not chemistry, but alchemy, and that was your major in college, and in post-grad study with the 49ers.

Twenty years from now, when the football freaks talk quarterbacks, they'll talk about Montana and his miracle comebacks. But there you were on the sideline. The Quarterback of the '80s, benched, wearing a warm-up jacket as the Team of the '80s was being '86'd in '88.

"You see what he (Walsh) was trying to do," you tell the reporters. "You have to stir things up."

But you were always San Francisco's swizzle stick, Joe, the guy with pencil legs and a mediocre arm and a knack for pulling touchdown rabbits out of football helmets.

You were having a lousy day Saturday, 12 for 26, for 109 yards. You threw a second-quarter interception that Reggie Rutland returned for a touchdown. It was a sideline pass that you wanted to call back once it left your hand.

"I just threw it behind," you say. "It was a bad throw."

You once threw a miracle pass to Dwight Clark on the way to a Super Bowl. In big games, under pressure, you were ice, you had some kind of scary composure that eludes most mortal men and even most pro athletes. Jerry West could probably relate, and Reggie Jax, a few freaks like that. The rest of us could only admire.

You played when a doctor said you were putting your spine on the line. You love the game.
And if ever there was Montana Time, it was in that third quarter, when Walsh turned the team over to Young.

"We really weren't out of the game," you said. "All we needed was a couple big plays."

Not that you were second-guessing Walsh, with whom you have developed an understanding and mutual respect, almost a father-son relationship. But Walsh seemed to be second-guessing himself.

"We knew Steve could run," Walsh said, discussing the switch. "We thought (before the game) about using him. But no, I think you go with the All-Pro quarterback as far as we did. Or further."
There's plenty of room for second-guessing. Why did Walsh go for the field goal on fourth-and-10 at the Minnesota 31 at the end of the third quarter. Ray Wershing, no long-ball kicker, barely reached the end zone. Why not punt, or go for the first?
But that's not your department. You're just the quarterback. You felt good all day. You went into the game with 97 pass plays in your game plan, about 20 of them brand new. You understand the system. But it was almost like the Vikings had stolen your game plan and studied it. They were ready. Everything they did was right.
After the game, in the locker room, you huddled with Steve Young, both of you sitting on stools, leaning close to each other and talking quietly.
You like the kid. He keeps telling everyone how you've made him a better quarterback, and you can't hold this game against him.
"It's quarterback talk," Young said, when asked about what you guys discussed.
You said, "We go through certain plays. Sometimes you question yourself, what you did ... maybe we were trying to comfort each other ... maybe he was trying to comfort me."
Wave after wave of press people ask you about getting the hook. You can't remember it happening before, ever, except for an injury.
Life goes on. The cable cars were still running up and down the hills Saturday night, but the grippers were ringing the bells without the usual zest. The foghorns on the Bay were the perfect background music.

Johnson Lifts Cavs To Win

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — John Johnson's savvy and composure in a pressure situation paid off handsomely for Virginia's Cavaliers Sunday.

Johnson, a senior guard, dribbled the length of the court and put in a layup at the buzzer to give the Cavaliers a 77-75 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Clemson.

"From a defensive standpoint the tough thing is that you know you can't foul," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said of the game's final play. "Johnson knew that and took the ball hard to the basket. He has had the ball so often in these situations and when the defense tries to cover other things he winds up with a lane to the basket."
The Cavaliers called timeout with 5 seconds remaining after Clemson's Jerry Pryor lost the ball out of bounds on the baseline with the score tied at 75-75.
When play resumed, Virginia's Kenny Turner rebounded to Johnson who raced down the right side of the court and split two Clemson defenders to put in the winning shot just before time elapsed.

Senior forward Mel Kennedy led Virginia, 8-7 overall and 1-1 in the conference, with a career-high 27 points. Johnson and Bill Batts each contributed 14 points for the Cavaliers.

Pryor finished with 19 points to lead Clemson, 7-5, 0-3. Ricky Jones added 16, Elden Campbell 14 and Donnell Bruce 11 for the Tigers. Campbell, the leading scorer in the ACC with a 19.7 average, fouled out with 2:51 to play.

Johnson tallied 7 points in the final 1:27 to rally Virginia from a 4-point deficit.
Johnson hit a baseline jumper at the 1:27 mark and was fouled by Bruce. He completed the 3-point play to pull the Cavaliers within one, 74-73.
Grayson Marshall hit the front end of a one-and-one with 58 seconds remaining to put Clemson up by two but his second attempt was short and Virginia's John Crotty rebounded.

Johnson penetrated the lane for a short one-hander with 37 seconds left to tie the score and was again fouled field. Moon hit Ernest Givins on a 19-yard pass for the TD.

After Denver recovered the ensuing on-side kick, Elway passed 25 yards to Gene Lang and then ran the final three yards for an insurance score.

Despite being under heavy pressure for much of the game, Elway deftly found single coverage and the open receiver in the Houston secondary time after time.

"They were coming at him all the time, but John still made some great throws," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said. "And Clarence did an excellent job. He had two great catches. He's become a complete football player."

"They played a lot of man-to-man, and we felt we could get our tight ends open. It worked out well for us."

"Clarence is three times the tight end he was when he came here," Elway said. "He's doing a good job of getting open and catching the ball, which makes him a big weapon for us."

Elway also credited Denver's defense, which, he said "took the wind out of their sails and made it easy for us."

Several Denver players questioned the strategy of the lateral play. "On the 1-yard line, I don't know if it made much sense," Lilly said.

"They tried to catch us off-guard, but it didn't work," Wilson said. "We saw that play on film."

But Glanville defended the ill-fated play.

"If he'd have caught the ball, it's a big play," Glanville said. "He had three big blockers in front of him."

Glanville said Elway is "truly one of the great quarterbacks in the game," and Houston cornerback Steve Brown agreed.

"You have to hand it to the guy," said Brown. "When it comes time to throw the perfect pass in the clutch, he does it."

From an injury standpoint, the game proved costly for Denver, which can scarcely afford to lose another player. Strong safety Mike Harden, who has played three different positions in the secondary this season and played them well, broke his right forearm on the first defensive play. Wide receiver Vance Johnson also didn't return after suffering a groin injury.

To compensate for Harden's absence, the Broncos probably will get safety Randy Robbins back against Cleveland.

"Cleveland has been talking revenge" after losing to Denver 23-20 in the title game last year, Kay said. "Now they've been given that opportunity."

"This is the one we've been looking forward to," Elway said. "It's going to be a barn-burner."

Trebek Molds TV 'Jeopardy' Show Into No. 2 Spot

By MARTIE ZAD

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Handsome and personable host of a most popular television quiz show who has a sign in his office that reads: "I've got all the right answers as long as you have all the right questions."

Who is Alex Trebek?

He has added humor and changed some rules, taking an old format and molding it into the second highest-rated show on syndicated television that's still gaining on No. 1 "Wheel of Fortune."

Who is Alex Trebek?

The fellow who so masterfully guides "Jeopardy" through its rounds — framing questions in the form of answers with contestants answering in the form of questions — is one of the country's top celebrities. Yet while chatting with would-be contestants or fans who recognize him in a hotel lobby or a reporter at lunch, he comes across as an easy-going friend who likes what he does and does what he likes.

Trebek's easy way with people makes him a personable show host. And his TV smarts have served the show well, too. Until recently, he was also a producer of this latest version of "Jeopardy," now triumphantly moving through its fourth season.

In the third quarter of last year, the number of stations carrying the show was up 10 percent over the same period a year earlier. Top-rated "Wheel of Fortune" was up only 2 percent. "Jeopardy" is now on 209 stations, up from 191 when this season began. With 99.104 percent coverage of the nation's television audience, it can be seen almost anywhere in the United States.

The current show is actually a revival of the original "Jeopardy," which ran from 1964 to 1975 on NBC and went into syndication in 1974. The show was brought back for the 1978-79 season, with minor revisions. Despite all of that previous exposure, the current rendition has been a hit on television.

Reasons for its success, said Trebek, are many. "First of all, it is syndicated and can be programmed where the station manager feels it works best. The old network show was on at noon Eastern time. Secondly, it's good now because of the success of the original show."

"We changed the rules. Contestants now cannot ring in until the entire clue has been read. This allows the home viewer to become more involved in the game. There is also a lot more humor involved. I stress this. I want it to be an entertaining half-hour, populist as possible. As a syndicated show, the station doesn't have to carry it, as was the case when it was on a network. We are informative and influential but must be entertaining, too."

In addition, Trebek said, all quiz and game shows are better packaged now thanks to computer-generated graphics.

The host also makes the distinction that "Jeopardy" is a quiz show and not a game show, making it something of a throwback to the quiz shows of the 1950s, which featured very bright people. "We don't think of ourselves as being better than those other shows," he said. "We use a different approach and we're perceived as being more difficult."

"We are trying to entertain the audience. We happen to do it by enlightening and educating them. We hope that a couple of the answers will stir kids a little so that they'll want to learn more about it, and maybe go to the library and take out a book and read it. We've heard that many teachers are using the 'Jeopardy' format as a learning tool. All of a sudden kids get interested. If it helps teachers teach and kids learn, that's fantastic."

Trebek believes that the function of the host is simply to make the show run smoothly, "in such a way that the contestants do their very best within the rules. Anything else he does that interferes with the contestants playing the game should be held against him. After all, the game is the thing."

Trebek has mastered the technique. He said that taping a half-hour show usually takes about a half hour. Flubs requiring re-takes are "very rare," the host noted with a satisfied smile. He has taped as many as 7½ shows in one day, although the regular schedule calls for five shows a day twice a week, for a total of 23 weeks, with a week off after every three weeks. This gives "Jeopardy" 46 weeks of new shows a year, up from 39 last year.

The other six weeks are reruns, usually tournaments — the tournament of champions, as well as the senior and teen tournaments, both innovations made by Trebek. He hopes eventually to add a celebrities tournament. Otherwise he feels the format "is pretty solid and we plan to stick with the winning combination, striving to do it as well as we can, rather than change."

After three years as the show's producer, Trebek this season relinquished that role to George Vasburgh. Trebek said he does miss the hands-on role of producing, although Vasburgh seeks his advice on a number of things. "We have brainstorming sessions and talk over many things about the show."

Cinemax Presents Ron Jr. In 'President's Son' Show

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wouldn't it be fun to sit in on some celebrity's high-priced therapy session?

If you have Cinemax, you can do just that this month, and the man on the couch is Ron Reagan, star of a Cinemax Comedy Experiment that begins airing this Friday, "Ron Reagan IS the President's Son."

Co-written by hip magician Penn Jillette of Penn & Teller and Eddie Gorodetsky, a former "Saturday Night Live" writer, the 30-minute takeoff of sorts on "The Prince and the Pauper" takes some swipes at Dad while Junior engages in what seems like an almost unhealthy amount of self-deprecation.

An opening graphic says the piece is a "docudrama" dedicated to Amy Carter.

The plot is basically this — Ron Reagan, nice but whiny guy, is consumed by self-doubt because nobody's interested in him for himself, even the producer of his puff pieces for the morning show "Up and At 'Em America." (The real Ron is a special correspondent for "Good Morning America.") When he comes into work, everybody greets him, "Good morning, President's Son," while he pleads, "My name is Ron!"

He even tries group therapy with such other celebrity offspring as Jesse Dylan, Mark Sedaka (who plays himself) and "the Elvis love triplets."

Meanwhile, a tough biker who bears a striking resemblance to Ron gets out of prison. Ron's associates become suspicious when "Ron" shows up in black leather acting like a macho man, but they like the biker better than the real Ron and don't say anything.

Dad even takes a shine to the criminal impostor, who comes back from a visit to Washington with pictures of the president on a Harley and tales of happy father-son activities. "Dad and I had a great time. We went fishing and golfing and swimming and everything. He says he's never had so much fun with me before!"

In the end, the real Ron is dragged off to prison.

"I don't know, Sam, I still feel weird, locking people up and throwing away the key," says one of the guards (Gorodetsky) as he tosses Ron into the cell.

"Yeah," says his partner (Jillette), "when the president of the United States asks you a personal favor, you just do it."

As the credits roll, the guards discuss some of the other famous "residents" of the prison — Jack and Bobby Kennedy, Marilyn Monroe and Jimmy Hoffa. It's creepy. Indeed, the satire is so cutting, it's almost uncomfortable. The piece is worthwhile as a curiosity.

These Comedy Experiments are very low-budget, to be sure, but Jillette's and Gorodetsky's storyline is muddled and Ron Reagan, though a likeable presence, is a so-so actor. Even when he gets a chance to show off in contrived dance sequences, they are edited as if someone's trying to hide his feet.

But we get the point that the first son has a sense of humor. Hopefully he feels better now. And with any luck, the White House doesn't get cable.

Liz Taylor Blames Abuse On Loneliness

NEW YORK (AP) — A trimmed-down Elizabeth Taylor says loneliness and low self-esteem led to the heavy drinking and overeating that destroyed her figure.

"The large amounts of food I ate were a substitute for everything I felt was lacking in my life," the 55-year old actress said in an excerpt from her autobiography "Elizabeth Takes Off" published in this week's People magazine.

Taylor, who shed nearly a third of her weight since peaking at 180 pounds in 1982, says overeating became a problem when she found too much idle time on her hands in the 1970s, during her marriage to U.S. Sen. John Warner of Virginia.

"But what was really starving was my self esteem, and all the food in the world couldn't bolster it," wrote Taylor, who got treatment for alcohol and drug abuse at the Betty Ford Center in 1982.

Taylor's fitness regimen included plenty of exercise and a diet limited to about 1,000 calories a day. Among her dieting tips: keep a picture of yourself on the refrigerator door.

A 1979 hurricane that battered the Bahamas left 640 persons dead.
