Court Says Schools May Censor Student Papers

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today gave public school officials broad power to censor student newspapers and other forms of student expression. By a 5-3 vote, the justices ruled that a Hazelwood, Mo., high school principal did not violate students' free-speech rights by ordering two pages deleted from an issue of a student-produced newspaper. "A school need not tolerate student speech that is inconsistent with its basic educational mission even though the government could not censor similar speech outside the school," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court. White was joined by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices John Paul Stevens, Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia. Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun dissented. In an opinion for the three, Brennan said, "The young men and women of Hazelwood East expected a civics lesson, but not the one the court teaches them today." The controversy arose in the spring of 1983 when Robert Reynolds, principal of Hazelwood East High School, refused to permit publication of two articles in the Spectrum, a school-sponsored newspaper produced by journalism students. One of the articles dealt with teenage pregnancy, and consisted of personal accounts by three Hazelwood East students who became pregnant. Their names were changed in an attempt to keep their identities secret.

Each of the three accounts discussed the girl's reaction to her pregnancy, the reaction of her parents, her future plans and details of her sex life. The second article dealt with the effect of divorce on children, and quoted from interviews with students. School policy required that the principal review each issue of the Spectrum before publication. Reynolds objected to the two articles, and the pages on which they appeared were deleted.

Journalism students Kathy Kuhlmeier, Lee Ann Tippet-West and Leslie Smart sued Reynolds and other school officials, contending their freedom of speech had been violated. A federal trial judge ruled against the students but the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated the suit. It ruled that the Spectrum is a "public forum" because it was intended to be and operated as a conduit for student viewpoints. But White's opinion today said the Spectrum is not, and never was, a public forum. "School officials did not evince ... any intent to open the pages of Spectrum to indiscriminate use by its student reporters and editors, or by the student body generally," White said. "Instead, they reserved the forum for its intended purpose, as a supervised learning experience for journalism students. Accordingly, school officials were entitled to regulate the contents of Spectrum in any reasonable manner," White said. (See SCHOOLS, A-8)

Asbestos Inventory Contract Awarded

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Contracts for the appraisal of sewer easements in Brook Valley and Oakhurst subdivisions and for an inventory of asbestos in buildings at the old power plant site off West Third Street were approved by the Greenville Utilities Commission board Tuesday night. The contract for the sewer easement appraisals went to Collice C. Moore Associates for an amount not to exceed $19,900. The appraisals, scheduled to be completed within 90 days, are needed as part of a project to install sewer lines in the subdivisions. The contract to inventory asbestos in buildings at the old power plant was awarded to ELB Monitor at a cost not to exceed $2,025. The inventory, which should be completed within two weeks, is needed before specifications can be prepared and proposals to remove the asbestos from the buildings can be obtained, according to GUC's General Manager Malcolm Green. The board also awarded a contract for a sewer planning area study to Olsen Associates for a negotiated fee of $70,000. Wadie Lewis, GUC's director of water and sewer systems, who described the study as "a planning tool for the next 10-, 15-, 20-years," said the master plan will "include areas (previously) studied and areas

Gaskins Enters Pitt Board Race

Charles P. Gaskins, currently serving as chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, filed Tuesday as a candidate for re-election. A Greenville native, Gaskins has served as a county commissioner from Greenville Township since 1967. First appointed to the post in 1967 when the General Assembly expanded the board from five to six members, giving an additional seat and more equal representation to Greenville township, Gaskins is now completing his fifth regular four-year term. "Pitt County is one of the leading counties in North Carolina," Gaskins said. "It's at the center of the state's agricultural economy and has the diversity, the potential and the means to become the leader in the

Upset Stomach Leads Reagan To Pass Up Ex-Aide's Funeral

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan canceled his plans to attend the funeral of a former White House aide today after suffering an upset stomach in the early morning hours, the White House said. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan, 76, would go ahead with plans to greet Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita. Fitzwater said Reagan would be unable to attend funeral services for Edward Hickey, 52, formerly the head of the White House security office and more recently chairman of the Federal Maritime Commission, who died last week. "The president's schedule ... is being changed to reflect a mild episode of gastroenteritis experienced during the night," said a statement by Fitzwater. "Dr. John Hutton, the president's physician, examined the president this morning and found him to be in good health except for the stated complaint."

"Despite the discomfort during the night, including nausea and vomiting, the president this morning had no fever, and all vital signs were normal," the statement said. "No medication was prescribed. There were no findings to suggest anything other than gastroenteritis." "He doesn't have any suggestions as to why" Reagan got sick, Fitzwater said of Hutton. "There are several people on the staff who have hamular problems. We have had no specific diagnosis." Fitzwater said Reagan's advisers changed the president's morning schedule so that Reagan could sleep later than normal as he had been up during the night. "The president didn't feel it (the stomach problem) was serious enough to warrant (immediate) medical attention," the spokesman told reporters, saying that Reagan was examined by Hutton at 7 a.m. EST. Fitzwater said that Hutton said "there were no indications of anything other than an upset stomach." The spokesman said he could not say what caused Reagan's nausea, and said, "They may alter the lunch somewhat ... but no special diet or anything like that."

Israel Says Palestinians Deported

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Israel said it today deported four Palestinians for instigating unrest in the occupied territories, and a riot broke out in a Gaza Strip refugee camp during a visit by a top U.N. envoy. The decision to expel the Palestinians had been condemned by a United Nations Security Council resolution backed by the United States. An army official said the four expelled men, all natives of the West Bank, were secretly flown by helicopter to a mountain pass 1 1/2 miles north of Hasbaya in south Lebanon. The official spoke on condition of anonymity. Another five Palestinians also ordered expelled Jan. 3 are fighting deportation in court. Israel claimed the violence today at the Rafah refugee camp was provoked by the presence of U.N. undersecretary Marrack Goulding, who was accompanied by television crews. The envoy blamed the army for sending in soldiers who fought stone-throwing demonstrators with tear gas and rubber bullets.

Simmons Named 'Youth Of Year'

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer
The 1987 Pitt County Youth of the Year was named by the Boys Club of Pitt County Tuesday night, highlighting the organization's annual year-end banquet at the Boys Club facility at 502 W. Arlington Blvd. McKinley Simmons, 17, received the honor after six years of Boys Club participation. "I'm real proud the Boys Club of Pitt County has picked me to best represent them," he said. Twelve youth of the month winners at the club were considered for the award. Two finalists were chosen and interviewed Monday night for the final selection of the award. Winners are chosen by demonstrating club qualities including sportsmanship, friendliness, good attitude, cooperation, and exemplary academic performance. Eddie Aldridge, 1986 Pitt County Youth of the Year, said the winner is "the person who goes that extra mile and excels just a little bit more than the rest." A junior at J.H. Rose High School,

Simmons enjoys weightlifting and plays both soccer and basketball at the club. He is also a member of the Keystone Club. According to Chet Emerson, executive director of the Boys Club of Pitt County, Simmons is now eligible to compete with 25 other Boys Club Youth of the Year winners in statewide competition. If he should win that, he would be eligible to compete in a seven-state regional competition. Beyond that, the winners of the five separate regions compete for the national finals. Emerson said the Boys Club helps build a young man's self-esteem and helps him believe in himself. He said 750 boys belong to the Pitt County club, with a large waiting list. "It's very important that every youngster is given the opportunity to be successful at doing something," he said. "Every boy does something well, every person does something well, and at the Boys Club we try to find that something and build from there." Emerson said the quality of the

Winterville Boosts Price Of Burial Lots

WINTERVILLE — Prices for burial lots in the Winterville Cemetery will increase from $125 to $200 for town residents, the town Board of Aldermen has voted.

In addition, prices for non-residents will rise from $250 to $400. The increases, approved at the board's monthly meeting, are "due to the price of land and the cost of maintaining the cemeteries," according to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles. The adjustments are effectively immediately.

The board also approved the purchase of a $6,282 radio system for the Public Works Department. The system, to be purchased from Southern Communications in Goldsboro, consists of one 40-watts base station, four mobile units and one walkie-talkie.

John Demary, community development specialist with the Mid-East Commission, who will administrate the town's $600,000 Community Development Block Grant for street and house rehabilitation, met with the board to discuss plans for the project.

The board passed a resolution to expand the Fair Housing Plan — part of the CDBG grant — already in place. Demary reported a public hearing will be scheduled for town residents in the target area of the grant.

Meanwhile, the board agreed to circulate a petition for tiling and ditching property to house a proposed expansion to Winterville Machine Works.

A public hearing will be held Feb. 8, the board's next monthly meeting, to discuss erecting stop and yield signs in newly annexed areas.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Losing Sight Of Human Services

The overload the Pitt County Department of Social Services is experiencing is not unique and is a reflection of the failure of current national political trends to acknowledge and address the needs of society.

The need for more child support supervisors and an overwhelmed Aid to Families with Dependent Children program reported by the Pitt DSS in a recent meeting represent more than just pleas for more money to do the job. They are reminders that the problems of the nation's populace have not been addressed by the political administration of this decade.

In Pitt County, DSS appears to be dealing with two distinct problems. The first is a paperwork overload. The second is an outright increase in the number needing services in the face of no increase in staff and funding.

Paperwork, the cursed yet necessary evil of bureaucracy, is the more tangible of the two. Verification and documentation of the administration of public funds is essential. It cannot be suspended. It should, however, be minimized to reasonable levels. No human service agency should have to fill out forms until it loses sight of the people it serves. That sharply reduces the effectiveness of the program.

The second problem, a burgeoning of need, is more complex, and approaching it requires the attention of all segments of a community. It cannot be ignored because the implications are too serious. The trends experienced by DSS are symptoms of large societal problems: illiteracy, under-education, inadequate pay and rapidly changing economic base. Their increases are symptoms of a refusal to recognize these plights, blindness beginning in Washington in 1980 when Ronald Reagan stepped into office.

But ignoring these problems only worsens them — a fact the Reagan administration refuses to acknowledge.

For example, the Pitt County AFDC program caseload has increased an average of 156 cases since 1984. The large majority of families helped by this program are single-parent homes, most of them headed by a female. Single-parent homes, in turn, comprise 50 percent of households beneath the poverty level in North Carolina.

This number will likely increase steadily in Pitt County in the next decade. According to data compiled by a recent BB&T study on eastern North Carolina, the number of out-of-wedlock births recorded in the county increased from 21.6 percent of all births in 1970 to 29.9 percent of all births in 1980. The figures for the 1980s indicate the trend will continue. Out-of-wedlock births — babies born into potential single-parent households — could account for 30 percent of the county's births by the year 2000. Again, Pitt County is not unique, this trend is accurate across the state and nation.

Yet the Reagan administration has closed its eyes to sex education and birth control, turned its back on education funding that could prepare these single parents to earn higher salaries and turned a cold shoulder to child care programs for working mothers.

The AFDC need and the projections on out-of-wedlock births are merely one example of how the political agenda of the 1980s has bypassed real issues. The problems these issues create are quite visible in the communities they appear in, and only recognition and support by citizens and lawmakers can ease them.

This support must begin here and be reflected in the ballot box. In Washington, D.C., the visibility of important human service issues appears to be reduced to zero.

No Deals In Afghanistan

'In the complicated end game that, it is to be hoped, will end a decade-long tragedy for the Afghan people, the United States still has the capability of snatching defeat from the jaws of victory.'

The Soviets, it appears, are preparing to leave Afghanistan after eight years of bloody war. Such a conclusion would scarcely have been considered possible a year ago, when seasoned Soviet-watchers routinely dismissed Moscow's assertions that it had decided in principle to get out. But the prospect of an imminent withdrawal agreement was raised once again when Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze announced last week that Moscow was dropping its insistence on leaving behind a coalition government dominated by the Afghan communists.

Shevardnadze also revealed something considerably more disturbing — that Washington has agreed to "guarantee" the withdrawal accord by ending its military support for the Afghan freedom fighters, or mujahedeen, 60 days after the signing of an agreement. This U.S. concession, hinted at by Undersecretary of State Michael Armacost in Pakistan, was later denied by Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

In the complicated end game that, it is to be hoped, will end a decade-long tragedy for the Afghan people, the United States still has the capability of snatching defeat from the jaws of victory.

How did the Soviets arrive at such an impasse, where they are poised to leave Afghanistan under more humiliating conditions than the United States left Vietnam, without even the fig leaf of viable government by which they could claim the "Afghanization" of the war?

First and foremost has been a severe deterioration of the military situation. The United States and other sympathetic nations now funnel more than half a billion dollars worth of military equipment to the mujahedeen every year, including Stinger anti-aircraft missiles. The Afghan freedom fighters themselves, far from being co-opted or demoralized, have evolved into a well-organized and disciplined force whose sacrifices should make us consider what it means to truly value freedom.

It now looks as if the Soviets must significantly reinforce the "limited contingent of Soviet forces" (numbering about 110,000 men since 1980) merely to stay in place. The prospect of winning the war, which by some estimates has already claimed about 25,000 Soviet lives, is no longer a serious possibility. It seems that American observers have underestimated the effect of the war on Soviet society and its political leadership. The Soviet press now regularly reports the war's gruesome human cost, while the veterans of Afghanistan — Afghantsy — have become a distinct and troubled social class.

The second factor propelling the Soviets out is the almost total collapse of their Afghan communist allies, the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan.

The party, lacking legitimacy and riven with factional conflicts even before the takeover in 1978, was further demoralized when the Soviets replaced their former puppet, Babrak Karmal, with the party's secret police chief, Najibullah. The latter's appeals since last January to form a government of national reconciliation have gone unanswered, and the prospect of cobbling together some kind of coalition is all but dead.

Those who think that the publicly stated Soviet commitment to withdraw is merely propaganda should consider the effects of this reiterated pledge on Moscow's Afghan allies. To a man, they know that they would be marked for death in the event of a Soviet withdrawal, and they must be carefully considering the alternative of cutting a deal with the mujahedeen, as Najibullah's own brother has done. The more the Soviets insist that they are leaving, the more demoralized the cadres in the People's Democratic Party become and the more the Soviet pledge becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy.

Enter the United States. The temptation to ease the Soviets out through a last-minute accommodation must be powerful to U.S. policy-makers. There is, however, a big difference between offering Moscow a meaningless face-saving gesture and conceding an end to U.S. arms supplies at the start of a Soviet withdrawal. The Soviets have no good alternatives in Afghanistan other than the one that we might offer them — that they can pay for an unambiguous cutoff of U.S. aid with an ambiguous withdrawal that would allow them breathing space to deal with the mujahedeen.

We should recognize that our hand is sufficiently strong that we need not concede anything to secure a Soviet withdrawal. And we should remember that when we asked the Soviets for comparable assistance in getting out of Vietnam, their response was to turn up the arms tap to Hanoi. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev surely learned a useful lesson when he witnessed for himself in Washington last month the solid bipartisan support that aid to the Afghan freedom fighters receives in Congress, the White House and the press. It would be ironic indeed if eight years of such support is squandered at the last minute by diplomats anxious to cut a deal.

Nixon: His Own Worst Enemy Again

For more than 13 years, Richard Nixon has been confronting his final crisis: posterity's judgment of his reputation. He has campaigned ardently to shape his historical reputation in his own image. Nothing is more important to that end than to control the public use of his presidential papers. His struggle has made those papers all the more obvious and desirable a prize.

After four years of processing, and then another four contending with Nixon objections, the National Archives formally opened the first segments of the Nixon administration's papers last May. The Archives released them in stages, thirteen years after Congress passed the 1974 Presidential Recordings and Materials Preservation Act vesting control of the papers in the Archives.

The Archives' staff has done its review work well. Indeed, while the Reagan administration initially supported Nixon's assertion of control over the papers, it has now acquiesced in the Archive's recommendations thereby undercutting Nixon's continuing attempts to prevent implementation of the rules governing the release and use of his papers. Nixon's latest attempt came last April 7, when his lawyers filed 3,000 typewritten pages objecting to the release of approximately 10 percent of the material that the Archives had approved for release in May. The lawyers based their objections on various grounds such as private political association, invasion of privacy, and privileged information.

The Nixon lawyers presented their latest claims less than a month before the scheduled May 4 opening of the papers. The lawyers insisted that they made no claims against material that contained evidence of abuses of governmental power, "generically referred to as 'Watergate.'" Of course, if material, such as H.R. Haldeman's 1972 campaign notes, could be classified under the political association, privileged, or privacy categories, as the lawyers have done, that would conveniently eliminate some Watergate-related material.

The objections involve more than 150,000 documents of the so-called "Special Files." Nixon's lawyers included 226 pages of objections to the release of papers from his files, 175 pages to those of John Dean's papers, 49 pages to Alexander Haig's (Haig somehow managed to remove his most valuable papers from the White House and they now are under his personal seal at the Library of Congress, a classic example of the "privatization" of public records), 109 pages of objections for the likes of speechwriter Kenneth Khachigian, but only 44 and 14 pages for former "Plumbers" Egil Krogh and David Young.

One will look in vain in Krogh's and Young's papers for anything revealing or insightful on the Plumbers. Since their work touched on "national security" matters, the National Archives already had vetted the collection. Researchers can undertake a lengthy, tedious appellate route to overcome such closings if they wish to argue that present-day national security considerations are not imperiled.

Nixon's pages of objections list the nature of the document, giving us just enough hint that his research aides proceeded in a serendipitous, if not uninformed, manner. The Krogh exclusions included an agenda for a meeting with Attorney General John Mitchell, a memorandum on The Save the Seals Campaign, Billy Graham's interest in a law case, and an agenda for a meeting on Food, Nutrition, and Health.

The objections to the release of certain items in Nixon's own files also ranged from the tantalizing to the trivial. They included a copy of one of Pat Nixon's schedules, a commentary on Chief Justice Warren Burger's beliefs, some paper regarding Julie Nixon's trip to Asia, a comment on the Davis Cup team, the president's view on how hard he worked and a reminder of his ability to speak without notes (both comments pervade the release material), advice from Billy Graham on "how to present this whole thing," a strictly confidential memo from Murray Chotiner, a memo proposing support for what became the Newspaper Preservation Act in 1969 (suspending the anti-trust laws), a note to Henry Kissinger regarding the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. Thomas Moorer (who was receiving documents stolen by a yeoman on Kissinger's staff), some advice from Bebe Rebozo, memos on Frank Sinatra's White House appearances (other memos indicate Nixon didn't want him to entertain), a list of invitees for a Golda Meir dinner, and Jeanne Dixon's predictions regarding Fidel Castro. Altogether, a grab-bag.

The most notable and lengthy objections were to the Haldeman papers — 830 pages in total. These included all materials exchanged between Haldeman and his key aides, Larry Higby and Gordon Strachan, and the boxes of his notes relating to the Campaign of 1972. It is a reasonable assumption that those materials will demonstrate how Nixon and Haldeman micro-managed all aspects of the campaign.

Strength For Today

We are told there is a pressing need for more psychiatrists in the United States — more people to treat the insane and help borderline cases on the verge of being institutionalized.

We might wonder what has gone wrong with our nation. Here we are, the richest, the most resourceful society in the world, and yet half of our hospital beds are occupied by mental cases.

We can all think of reasons for this increase of mental problems. In addition to traumas arising from childhood, the fast pace of modern life and competitive pressures take their toll. Psychiatric treatment can help, but certainly will not solve these problems. A good dose of religion might be more effective therapy than most doctors think.

A Return To The Politics Of Realism, Not Resentment

WASHINGTON — Something is stirring on the political front, and it's about time. Until recently, it's been a phony war: posturing among presidential candidates, incessant media "horse race" polls detailing which candidate has what meaningless percentage lead over another, arcane analyses of which Machiavellian political campaign strategy seems likely to produce what results.

Now there are welcome signs that the politicians are revising their text, to the public's benefit. In political terms, they're starting to call a spade a spade instead of a blunt instrument for moving earth.

In Iowa, as Washington Post staff writer Paul Taylor reports, Democratic candidates are going on the attack. They're assailing the greed, privilege and self-interest that have characterized the 1980s and repeatedly elevated private interests over public ones.

Taylor calls this "the politics of resentment." Such an approach will likely strike sparks among the voters. There is much to be resentful about. For many months, voters I've interviewed around the country have expressed growing concern about national conditions. Increasingly, they seem in a mood for blunt talk, real emotion and evidence of action from their political leaders. The ebullient "it's morning in America again" message of President Reagan's re-election campaign four years ago has long since been relegated to the bin containing other half-remembered, and mistaken, political slogans.

Voters know that all's not well on several fronts. In fact, they repeatedly volunteer their fear that events at home and abroad seem dangerously out of control.

The new populist campaign rhetoric may intensify those concerns but perhaps compel more candid political debate about possible solutions. The danger, of course, is that it degenerates into demagoguery or produces another negative feeling among the electorate: an unwanted national downer, similar to the overwhelming public reaction to President Jimmy Carter's hang-dog, hand-wringing talk about a national malaise.

Voters are looking for something better than appeals to their fears and resentments. They're looking for straight talk and realism.

I've heard that theme expressed often in recent months, but no one put it better than a young farmer in Mason City, Iowa, shortly before Christmas.

Like many others, John E. Anderegg, 39, was nearly wiped out in the farm depression. He still struggles with heavy new debts. He voted for Reagan in 1980.

"When we had inflation," he said, "we thought we were well off. Very few people had a true concept of what they were really worth—the banks, ourselves. Everyone thought, well, each year just add another 10 percent. Great. The only good thing, I guess, that came out of the decline in farming is that the banks require a stronger cash flow, a little more responsibility in your accounting of what you've got out there. You realize, when you look back, that you never really did have control—in my case, at least, I didn't have as much control as I thought I had control. ...

"I liken it to a young person coming out of school and going into the stock market. If you looked down the road, there was no end to it. If you bought a stock for $10 today, it would be worth $11 tomorrow. You made 10 percent. If you bought land for $1,000, the next year it would be worth $1,200. Inflation was carrying it. Where was the real value of the stock? Although the $1,000 land is producing no more grain than it did the year before, you say, well, I'm better off.

"The same way with the stock. The stock that was $10 at the beginning of the year was $20 before last Oct. 1. But the earning potential of that stock was no greater than it was. Maybe it was even a little worse. Pretty soon, boom!—it hit.

"It hit the farming economy just like it hit the stock market. Overnight, it was gone. It wasn't a slow escalation. You'd go to the bank, and they'd say: 'This land that you say is worth $2,500 an acre—we're saying it's worth $900 an acre today.' And that happened. I can go through our balance sheet and show you. Same way with the stock. In the morning, they went to work, and it was $20. At the end of the night, it was $10. It was gone. But the same economy was being represented there, the same people have to make a living off of it.

"Reality, I guess, happened. We were living in an imaginary world. They were. We were. Now we're back down to a little bit of reality and the rest of the economy's coming down with us."

If this Iowa farmer is typical, and I think he is, voters in 1988 aren't looking for the politics of resentment. They're looking for the politics of realism.

U.S. Must Not Sit Still

Recent hints from the White House that President Reagan will journey to Europe this spring, six weeks before his Moscow summit with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, come as good news.

If realized, it would offer the best way to allay renewed concerns in the North Atlantic alliance about U.S. commitment to defend Western Europe and challenge the Soviet arms-control public-relations drive.

Yet, the presence of the U.S. leader in allied capitals will not do this job all by itself. If Reagan is to succeed, his trip must be preceded by intensive discussions between Washington and its friends about the future of defense arrangements as well as the common approach to arms control.

Problems that the United States now faces with its military bases in Spain should serve as a reminder that fragile consensus within NATO on a number of important issues is not likely to withstand future Soviet initiatives without a united Western approach to arms control in Europe. Unfortunately, this is happening at a time when the administration has to respond actively to other important Soviet moves in other areas of the world.

In his New Year's greetings to the American people, Gorbachev made it amply clear that he intends to remain as pushy as ever. Not only does he hope to sign a treaty with Reagan limiting strategic arms by 50 percent, but also would like—as he put it, "without delay"—to address the problem of cutting back "drastically" conventional forces and arms in Europe.

Asia got its share of Soviet New Year attention too. After his surprising visit to Afghanistan last week, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze declared that Moscow hopes to remove its troops by the end of this year. Shevardnadze also indicated that the withdrawal would not depend on the creation of an acceptable transitional government in Kabul. While several important issues still remain to be negotiated, the Kremlin seems to be talking real business this time.

came under a new law of self-financing that threatens bankruptcy to unprofitable losers. Nobody really knows what will come out of it.

"The Soviets, however, seem to be much more optimistic about the prospects of their foreign policy. It was especially apparent in a speech delivered by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Anatoly G. Kovalev at a conference of the secretaries of the Communist Party organizations of Soviet institutions abroad, published in the Foreign Ministry's digest, Vestnik.

Kovalev made it abundantly clear that the Soviet Union is intensively pursuing goals in other areas of the world that might eventually affect U.S. national interests. This is especially true in Europe and Asia where—by Kovalev's account—"for the first time the opportunity is being presented to merge the efforts of the states and peoples of the two continents ... into a single Eurasian process." The Kremlin obviously hopes that this vainly hidden theme of "Europe for the Europeans" and "Asia for the Asians" could gradually weaken U.S. influence and open for Moscow the doors to attractive technology and markets on the two continents.

Improved U.S.-Soviet relations are expected to accelerate this process and Gorbachev is ready to make use of this situation. He is working especially hard to lure West Europeans into a "common European home" with Soviet and East European communists. While the skeptics in the United States might have reasonable doubts, Moscow thinks otherwise.

Moscow is equally optimistic about the prospects of its policy in Asia. As Kovalev put it, the Soviet Union is now cutting through a "window to Asia and the Pacific Ocean" as it cut through a "window to Europe" at one time.

"Moscow's optimism about the future of its foreign policy is reinforced by newly acquired flexibility. Having recognized grave problems that their country faces, Kremlin leaders are now ready to let Gorbachev resort at times to substantial concessions from former Soviet hard-line positions. They expect that such an approach will either induce the West into productive negotiations or keep it off balance.

Milan Svec is a senior associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in Washington.

Gorbachev's political hyperactivity is fueled by these basic reasons:

- He needs successful foreign policy as an insurance against any unexpected turns in domestic developments. This year will be especially important for him. As of Jan. 1, 60 percent of all industrial enterprises in the Soviet Union

A Question Of Security

WASHINGTON — In case you hadn't heard, the 23rd convoy of U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers has passed safely through the Strait of Hormuz. The Pentagon statement read, "The transit was uneventful with no unusual Iranian air or surface activity reported." America can rest easy now. Or can it?

Despite recent polls that suggest Americans by-and-large support U.S. policy in the Gulf, the jury is still out on just how much security the presence of U.S. ships out there buys us. All the more reason to pay careful attention to current Pentagon talk of a reduction or "tailoring" of U.S. forces in and around the Persian Gulf.

First, what does a "tailoring" or "fine tuning" of our naval presence there mean? Well, it means that the USS Okinawa, a helicopter landing ship, and its six mine-sweeping helos will head for home shortly. That will surely make the sailors on the Okinawa and their families feel safe, but will it make America more or less "secure"? Also coming home is the battleship Iowa, which has been hovering outside the Gulf for months now, presumably prepared to fire its cruise missiles at Iran should Silkworm missiles come our way. Does the withdrawal of a battle group tip the delicate balance of American security—and which way?

The answers to these questions depend on your particular school of thought when it comes to the subject of U.S.-Iranian relations—and intentions. One theory holds that the Iranians of late have busied themselves with attacks on ships other than those under U.S. escort and hence, so the thinking goes, it may be time to reduce the U.S. forces. Score one for the Ayatollah for discretion.

On the other hand, you might be of the suspicious school of thought. Iran is gearing up for its annual January offensive, and we would just as soon watch from home. Why get further in harm's way than we may already be? And besides, with all these calls for an international arms embargo (even the Soviets and the Chinese may be getting on board), the Iranians may have to fold their tents and call it a day out there, and we would be left with no mission but to let Kuwait be Kuwait and go home. Might as well start practicing.

Last come the true Washington insider-cynics. They see this reduced presence as a matter of disguised budgeteering. This way the next time Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci goes before the House Armed Services Committee, he can rattle a few pennies in the Pentagon piggy bank and show how we saved a few on the Gulf.

It may be a while before we know which theory of security holds water, or it may be as soon as the passage of the 24th convoy through the Gulf.

Let's hope we don't learn the answer the hard way.

IN THE STATE

Indicted

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — An Alamance County tattoo parlor owner who admitted killing an alleged intruder that fled from his Burlington business has been indicted on a murder charge, authorities said.

An Alamance County Grand Jury last week indicted James David Strickland, 26, of Alamance on the charge, which resulted from the shooting death of Miles Carter, 35, of Burlington, on Dec. 5.

Officers said Carter was shot, according to Strickland, after Strickland found a man running from his business place.

Resignation

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — The Alamance County Board of Education has accepted the resignation of its superintendent — Leonard H. Simmons — to become effective June 30, 1988.

Simmons, 62, tendered his resignation in closed session this week. The superintendent, who has led the county system with more than 1,000 employees and 20 schools since July 1983, said it was in the best interest of the schools and himself that he retire.

Simmons cited the need to spend more time with family, church and community as the major reasons for his retirement.

Birthday Fatal

MEBANE, N.C. (AP) — A Chapel Hill man was killed on his birthday in a traffic accident Monday, becoming the fourth victim of traffic accidents in Alamance County as a result of last week's snowstorm, authorities said.

Ronald Douglas Mitchell Jr., 18, who was celebrating his birthday Monday, died instantly on N.C. 119 when he lost control of his car on a patch of ice and collided with a pickup truck, authorities said.

Task Force

RALEIGH (AP) — Fifteen people were appointed Tuesday to serve on the Supercomputer Task Force which will assist the North Carolina Commission to establish a governing body for the Supercomputer Center, Gov. Jim Martin said.

The group also will help in selecting the Supercomputer Centers' equipment, Martin said.

William F. Little, president of the Triangle Universities Center for Advanced Studies in the Research Triangle Park, was named task force chairman, Martin said.

Murder Charge

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — A Wake County man has been charged with murder in the 1986 death of a woman who officers think was killed over a drug deal, state Attorney General Lacy J. Thornburg said.

Roger Wayne Franklin, 25, of Wake Forest was charged Tuesday morning in Franklin County with first-degree murder in the death of Jean Marie Sherman. Franklin is serving a 30-year term at Odom Correction Institute in Northampton County for a drug conviction, officers with the Franklin County Sheriff's Department said.

Plane Mishap

WILMINGTON (AP) — A single-engine plane lost partial power as it lifted off Tuesday afternoon from a private airstrip south of Wilmington and coasted across a street, but the two people on the plane were not injured.

Landon Sloan, the pilot of the Cessna 150, brought the plane down about 1 p.m. at the end of the runway at Pilot's Ridge Airport, about 4 miles south of Wilmington.

The plane continued off the runway, which is perpendicular to Carolina Beach Road, through a drainage ditch in the highway median and spun around onto the opposite shoulder.

The plane received between $4,000 and $6,000 in damage, including a bent propeller, shorn landing gear and possible engine damage, Sloan said.

Pender Shooting

BURGAW, N.C. (AP) — A Pender County grand jury declined Tuesday to bring charges against a deputy in the fatal shooting in August of a 70-year-old Willard man.

Jim Coman, a special prosecutor with the state attorney general's office, had submitted the bill of indictment charging Deputy Kim Goodin with voluntary manslaughter. Voluntary manslaughter is an intentional killing without malice that carries a 10-year sentence.

Goodin, who has been suspended with pay since the incident, shot John Cromartie in the bedroom of the victim's home as Goodin and another deputy, Kevin Milliken, were attempting to serve an involuntary commitment order on the elderly man, according to the Pender Sheriff's Department.

Complaint

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has filed a complaint against a Greensboro trucking company, saying the firm practiced racial discrimination by assigning driving teams by race and firing a black man for complaining about the policy.

The EEOC filed its complaint last week against Thurston Motor Lines, now called Brown Transportation Corp., in U.S. District Court in Greensboro. Brown Transportation, which purchased Thurston Motor Lines, operates terminals in Greensboro and 95 other locations.

The lawsuit contends that Thurston fired Billy Hadley on Oct. 7, 1985, because of his race and in retaliation for Hadley's opposition to the practice of assigning two-man driving teams by race.

Smoke Bomb

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Western Carolina University student has been arrested by Pennsylvania postal inspectors in connection with a smoke bomb mailed from Cullowhee which exploded in a dormitory room at Penn State in November.

Thomas Lee Zarrilli, 19, of Broomall, Pa., pleaded innocent Jan. 6 in a federal court in Pennsylvania to criminal charges of mailing a U.S. military M-18 smoke grenade to two Penn State University students at State College, Pa., postal inspector James C. Conroy said Tuesday.

The grenade, rigged to detonate as the package was opened, filled the dormitory room and a hallway with smoke and did about $2,000 damage to McKean Hall on campus, Conroy said. No one was injured.

A trial date in U.S. District Court in Harrisburg, Penn., has been set for Feb. 8. If convicted, Zarrilli faces a fine of up to $1,000 and imprisonment for a year.

TRUCK-DRIVING MAN — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan is met by campaign aide Charles Moreland of Raleigh after Jordan drove a tractor-trailer loaded with lumber from his family mill in Mount Gilead to Raleigh on Tuesday. Jordan, who said he once drove trucks on a regular basis, paid his filing fee as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor. (AP Laserphoto)

Martin Says Tax Discount Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — A sales tax discount for merchants that was abolished last year to help finance a school construction program should be restored, Gov. Jim Martin said.

"If there's a need for additional revenue I'd look elsewhere," Martin said Tuesday in the sixth news conference he has held in six working days. "I think it's unfair to retail merchants to say they've got to bear the cost of collecting the sales tax and remitting that to the state."

Until last year, the state allowed merchants to keep 3 percent of the sales tax revenue they take in as compensation for the expense of collecting the money and delivering it to the Department of Revenue.

"It seems to me that it is a wise and prudent and fair to thing to do to restore that discount to merchants," Martin said. "I did not support the elimination of the merchants' discount in the first place."

Under Martin's plan, the discount would be restored on the first $60,000 in sales taxes collected by retailers each year, enabling businesses to recover up to $1,800 annually. He said this would fully restore the discount for 95 percent of all retailers.

The restoration would cost the state about $29.4 million next year, but Martin said the budget could absorb that amount without creating a deficit. He noted that the 1987 school finance law, which raised the corporate income tax from 6 percent to 7 percent, would generate about $292 million in tax revenue over the next 10 years that had not been earmarked.

Merchants grumbled last year when the discount was eliminated. But the North Carolina Retail Merchants Association supported the school package because it included repeal of the inventory tax, which the association had sought for years.

Martin said he did not know whether the association would endorse his plan because the group wanted complete restoration of the discount.

Jordan Takes Big Rig To Filing Rite

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said he was a little out of practice as he used a tractor-trailer to deliver a load of lumber and his $1,050 filing fee for the governor's race from Mount Gilead to Raleigh.

"As we round the corner and head into the 1990s, North Carolina doesn't need a governor who is content to be a passenger or a back-seat driver," Jordan said at a rally in front of the Capitol. "It needs a governor who is in the driver's seat with his hands on the wheel, his feet on the pedals and his eyes on the road ahead of us."

Jordan, a Democrat who announced his candidacy last week at his family lumber mill in Montgomery County, led a caravan of more than a dozen cars and two buses to the capital city.

"I have a good fallback job now," Jordan joked after climbing down from the truck loaded with 1,760 pine boards, which he parked beside the Department of Transportation building across the street from the Capitol.

Jordan said he had driven trucks regularly before getting into politics, but had to obtain a special driver's license for his latest trip.

A crowd of about 200 waded through snowdrifts to cheer Jordan, who intensified his attack on Martin as an ineffective leader. Martin was working in his Capitol office during the rally, an aide said, but stayed out of sight.

Jordan defended his plan, unveiled last week, to abolish the state Department of Commerce and establish a public-private partnership to coordinate the state's economic development programs. Martin described the proposal as "dumb and dangerous."

"I'll tell you what's dumb and dangerous," Jordan said. "It's dumb and dangerous to sit on the sidelines with your head in the sand and to criticize those who propose new ideas for the future of this state."

He also appeared to poke at Martin for the state's failure to land Sematech, a major microelectronics consortium whose planners last week chose to locate in Texas instead of North Carolina.

Jordan said was not blaming Martin for the Sematech loss and acknowledged the governor had worked hard to get the project.

But he noted that the Sematech board was working toward a decision at the same time Martin called a news conference to blast Jordan's proposal to create a North Carolina Economic Development Corp.

"It's not that North Carolina lost Sematech. It's that North Carolina must continue to do new things to attract jobs," Jordan told reporters. "And it was ironic that he was attacking a proposal that deals with the kind of things that the story of Sematech really shows up."

Jordan, who is portraying himself as a savvy businessman who would apply sound business principles to government, said new strategies were needed to prevent widening of the economic gap between rural and urban areas.

Robertson Plugs Leaf Phase-Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson has called for a 10-year phase-out of the tobacco industry — a proposal that North Carolina officials say could cost thousands of jobs.

Aides to Robertson, a former television evangelist, said that he only wants to wean farmers and others from tobacco before the entire industry becomes a casualty of the war on smoking.

In the January issue of the Conservative Digest, Robertson said that he favors a federal buyout of all tobacco crop allotments over seven to 10 years and a federal tax break for cigarette companies over five to six years, "or however long it might take them expeditiously to phase out their investment in tobacco."

"I can't begin to understand what kind of program they're talking about, but it doesn't make much sense," said Mark Fleming, a legislative aide to Helms, R-N.C. "He doesn't even know how the program runs if he's making such proposals."

"I'm distressed by this," state Agriculture Commission Jim Graham said. "It's unworkable."

John Parker, the assistant to the president of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation, said that a wholesale phase-out of tobacco on the farm and in the factory would cost North Carolina 115,000 to 125,000 jobs.

"We have been searching for an alternative crop to tobacco for a 10-year period," Parker said. "We have tried fruits, vegetables, grain crops, livestock and poultry. But none of these alternatives are comparable to tobacco in generating gross farm income."

Scott Hatch, a spokesman for Robertson's campaign, said that Robertson is not committed to the tobacco phase-out as a policy plank.

"The tobacco industry is a declining commodity," Hatch said. "Let's be concerned about these families and farmers. Let's give them an out, so that 10 or 15 or 20 years down the road they don't lose their shirts."

"If this trend continues, there is going to be a lot of tobacco rotting in the fields."

Cows Give Their Milk To Sound Of Music From Barn Carousel

ELON COLLEGE, N.C. (AP) — By the time George Jones and Waylon Jennings have belted out two of their biggest hits, 16 Holsteins have gotten their carousel ride and made contributions to the Franklin and George Teague huge milk tanks.

Suicide Book

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Two Chapel Hill residents have created what is thought to be the nation's first suicide prevention book, a step-by-step guide to talking someone through a suicide attempt.

Tim Williams and David Donlon, coordinators at the Orange-Person-Chatham Mental Health Center, said the book is a training tool to help counselors who work with those contemplating suicide.

The guide consists of a written manual and videotape.

Twice a day the anxious cows line up at the Reedy Fork Farm for a ride on the Teagues' new cow-milking carousel.

Although Franklin Teague, a dairyman since 1950, calls the new milking operation a carousel and merry-go-round, it is officially a Rotaflo Dairy System that was designed by a New Zealand man and is only beginning to catch on in the United States.

"Ours is the sixth in the United States," Franklin Teague said Monday, during a tour in which he pointed out that the 60-ton rotary milking parlor floats around on 6,000 gallons of water. "Its constant pace is maintained by a small electric motor."

The elder Teague and George Teague, his son and partner in the big dairying operation, said they are getting more sleep because of the new milking device.

"We used to have to start milking at about 3 o'clock each morning and between 2:30 and 3 o'clock in the afternoons, but now we can start about two hours later," explained the senior Teague.

The carousel allows the herd to be milked at a rate of about 90 per hour, which is at least one-third faster than was possible under the old system, the dairymen said.

As a result of the efficiency of the carousel system, the Teagues say they will probably be able to increase the size of their herd from 150 to 210 cows.

The Teague's 85-acre dairy is located near the Alamance-Guilford County line.

The elder Teague, a native of Snow Camp, says they decided to replace the dairy's old milking system after George saw one at the World Dairy Expo in 1986. "He came home and that was all he could talk about. We checked into it further and it looked like the economical way to go.

Rise In Sea Levels To Be Unpredictable

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Many researchers agree that gradually warming global temperatures will mean a rise in sea level over the next century because of melting polar ice caps.

But delegates attending the annual meeting of the Coastal States Organization were told Tuesday that the rate of sea level rise is unpredictable and will vary from place to place.

"It's going to be hard to get everyone to agree on what needs to be done to approach the problem because it's different everywhere," said Jim Houston, a coastal researcher with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

He said the problem of rising ocean levels will probably have to be handled on the state and local level.

"The fact that sea level rise predictions cover such a wide band makes it difficult to convince anybody to do anything," he added.

Thomas Bigford of the National Marine Fisheries Service said estimates of sea level rise vary from 1½ feet to over 11 feet over the next century.

He said "there's tremendous disagreement on what sea level rise is going to be" but said "it's still safe to forecast a couple of feet over the next 40 to 50 years."

The implications of sea level rise were discussed on the final day of the Coastal States Organization's annual meeting. The group is made up of gubernatorial appointees from 35 coastal states and territories.

An Environmental Protection Agency report released four years ago predicted a sea level rise of up to 7 feet by the year 2075. The report estimated that such an increase would inundate Charleston's historic Battery and cost $1.25 billion in lost buildings and property in Charleston by that time.

Bigford said higher ocean levels would affect the fishing industry because the water would inundate marshes, affecting the food chain for many species of fish.

Some marshes will be lost completely, he said, because with widespread coastal development, there will be no place for the marsh to retreat in advance of the higher water.

Bigford noted that fish common to estuaries accounted for 66 percent of the nation's 1986 fish harvest.

However, the warming trend that may mean higher ocean levels will mean lower levels in the Great Lakes because of increased evaporation, said Mike Donahue, the executive director of the Great Lakes Commission.

The Great Lakes have 90 percent of the nation's surface fresh water and 10,000 miles of coastline. Implications of lower water levels are broad, he said, noting there could be water shortages elsewhere and increase demand for diversion from the lakes.

There would be a loss of hydroelectric capacity, increased dredging costs and a loss of marshland as the water retreats from the shore, he said.

Apartments Burn

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The residents of 25 apartments were left homeless Tuesday morning after a malfunctioning heater caused an apartment complex fire here, authorities said.

About 25 low-income housing apartments were destroyed by the blaze that occurred about 1:50 a.m., Washington Fire Chief Hugh Sterling Jr. said.

No one was injured in the fire, he said. Sterling said the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the National Guard Armory were working to find shelter for the homeless.

No estimate on damages was available, Sterling said. Sterling estimated the number of people left homeless in the fire at 100, while an apartment manager estimated the number as around 50.

THREE INJURED — Three persons were reported injured Tuesday afternoon near Grimesland in this two-vehicle accident. According to Trooper John Letchworth, a truck driven by Tony Lee Ezzel of Route 1, Pikeville, and headed east on N.C. 33 passed a line of vehicles and collided with an eastbound car turning left driven by Robert Lee Jenkins, of Route 2, Grimesland. Letchworth said Jenkins, his wife Linda Faye and one of their two children were injured. The trooper said Ezzel was charged with driving left of center and failure to wear a seat belt. Also charged was Jenkins and his wife for failure to wear a seat belt. The Jenkins car was a loss, while the truck received about $2,000 damage. Letchworth said. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Budget Items Top Council's Agenda

Four budget-related items top the list of issues to be addressed Thursday when the Greenville City Council meets at its regular monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the third-floor council chambers of City Hall.

The council will consider a request to amend the General Budget by appropriating $17,110 for the purchase of additional computer resources for the offices of the mayor and city council, city clerk, public works, city manager, finance-data processing and finance-accounting.

Included in the $17,110 request are plans to purchase five personal computers, four dot-matrix printers, various software packages and a graphics plotter, which produces charts and graphs.

Another budget ordinance amendment the council will decide upon is the transfer of $1,250 from the General Fund to the Sheppard Memorial Library.

The $1,250 would be appropriated to hire the architectural firm of Dudley, Shoe and Ellinwood to develop the preliminary plans necessary for the proposed expansion and renovation of the Carver Branch Library.

The other budget ordinance amendments include the establishment of a capital projects budgets for both the Community Shelter Grant and the Family Violence Center. The city acts as grant administrator for both the funds.

In other action on Thursday night, the council will consider approving an architectural contract for $3,000 with Dudley, Shoe, Ellinwood and Associates for a structural evaluation of Guy Smith Stadium.

According to Glen Whisler, interim director of engineering and inspections, the report will identify any structural deficiencies and if necessary, establish a program and budget for making the facility structurally sound.

Whisler said the stadium was built approximately 50 years ago.

Also under consideration will be the rezoning of 2.3 acres situated on 12th Street between Clark Street and the railroad track in the South Evans Redevelopment Project. The petitioner has requested the land be rezoned from R-6 (high-density residential) to IU (unoffensive Industry).

In other matters, council will consider a resolution requesting the Pitt County Commissioners appoint an extraterritorial representative to the Greenville Board of Adjustment and amend a previously passed ordinance designating the William H. Long House and grounds as historic property.

state's industrial and economic growth.

"I'm thankful to have played a part in its development and hope to continue. I believe I can contribute a great deal and will continue to serve the people of the county to the best of my ability," Gaskins said.

Gaskins is a veteran of World War II, having served in Iceland, England, France and Belgium. Following his discharge in 1945, he operated Greenville Feed Mills before becoming Pitt County Register of Deeds in 1947, a post he held for three years. He then entered the oil and gasoline distribution business, from which he retired in 1985. He is also a farmer.

In addition to serving as chairman of the Board of Commissioners several times, Gaskins has served as chairman of the Board of Health and is currently a member of the board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Gaskins is married to the former Jane Rowlett of Greenville, and is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He has been a member of Masonic bodies for over 40 years and is a member and past president of the Greenville Kiwanis Club.

Schools

"A school may in its capacity as publisher of a school newspaper or producer of a school play disassociate itself not only from speech that would substantially interfere with its work or impinge on the rights of other students but also from speech that is, for example, ungrammatical, poorly written, inadequately researched, biased or prejudiced, vulgar or profane, or unsuitable for immature audiences," he said.

White added: "Educators do not offend the First Amendment (which guarantees freedom of speech) by exercising control over the style and content of student speech in school-sponsored expressive activities so long as their actions are reasonably related to legitimate pedagogical concerns."

For such school-sponsored activities, the court used a less stringent standard than it did in a landmark 1969 decision involving the wearing of anti-war armbands by students.

In that decision, the court said public high schools may curtail students' free-speech rights only when the student expression is materially disruptive or invades the rights of others.

MASONIC NOTICE

Nationalist Leader Dies

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — President Chiang Ching-kuo, son of nationalist Chinese leader Chiang Kai-shek, died today and ended the dynasty that led the nationalists to victory and defeat in China and prosperity in Taiwan. He was 77.

Chiang, president since 1978, died of a heart attack at the Veterans General Hospital at 3:55 p.m. Vice President Lee Teng-hui was sworn in as president three hours later.

"We have lost a capable leader. ... Every one of us felt a deep sorrow. This was an unredeemable loss," Premier Yu Kuo-hwa, fighting back tears, said as he announced Chiang's death on national television at 9 p.m.

Lee urged all Nationalist Party members to "fulfill the mission Mr. Chiang was unable to finish." That mission was uniting Taiwan with mainland China under a nationalist government.

The Defense Ministry ordered all military personnel to cancel leaves and vacations and to reinforce the defense of this island of 19.5 million people. The Cabinet held an emergency meeting and banned demonstrations for a 30-day mourning period beginning Thursday.

The official mainland Chinese news agency Xinhua sent a one-sentence bulletin reporting Chiang's death about one hour after it was announced in Taiwan.

Chiang, a diabetic, used a wheelchair and wore a heart pacemaker in his later years. He had been expected to step down when his term ended in 1990, and had promised no relative would succeed him. He is survived by his wife Faina, three sons and a daughter.

Chiang Kai-shek, who came to power on the mainland in 1926, died in Taiwan in 1975. He led the nationalists when Japan was defeated in China in World War II but was forced to retreat to Taiwan in 1949 when his troops were defeated by Communist forces led by Mao Tse-tung. About 2 million Chinese followed him, settling on the island of Taiwan.

Chiang Ching-kuo spent much of his life in the shadow of his father. But he left his own legacies.

In 1987, during his second six-year presidential term, he ended 38 years of martial law on Taiwan and approved sentimental journeys to the Chinese mainland for Taiwanese for family reunions.

Society Announces Big Gift

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Geographic Society celebrated its 100th birthday today by announcing its centennial gift to the nation: $20 million to help teach kids about the planet Earth.

"Our kids don't know where they are. And if you don't know where you are, you're nowhere," said Gilbert M. Grosvenor, the society's president.

The money will go into a new foundation, and the society promised to kick in $20 million more if it can raise an equal amount in outside contributions for its cause of combating geographic illiteracy.

Grosvenor, interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" show, said the foundation will direct most of its resources toward training teachers. "We believe that the future of geography in the schools is through the teachers. We want to train these teachers to teach geography," he said.

"This foundation will form a basis for all of America to participate. We've not only put $20 million into this foundation, but we've also challenged the private sector and foundations to contribute another $20 million, which we will match."

The president of the 10.5 million-member society said in remarks prepared for a news conference later in the day that "there is no more fitting way to begin our second century than by providing a permanent base of support for our geography activities."

"The society's concern about the untenable consequences of geographic illiteracy compel us to take an even larger role in education, and we are in it for the long haul," said Grosvenor, the great-grandson of Alexander Graham Bell, the telephone inventor and the society's second president.

The society is best known for its yellow-bordered monthly magazine, National Geographic, with richly illustrated articles about explorations, adventures and exotic ports of call, as well as its widely watched television specials about nature and the environment.

Its dues-paying membership has boomed in recent decades, even while the study of geography has gone into eclipse in America's schools. According to one recent survey, 25 percent of high school students surveyed in Dallas could not name Mexico as the southern neighbor of the United States. Nearly half the college students in a California poll could not locate Japan.

The non-profit society, which has revenues of $350 million a year from its magazines, television specials and sales of its maps, books and other materials, launched a $4 million-a-year geography education program in 1985 to try to improve geography teaching in public schools.

Farm Crop Exports May Rise In '88

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm exports are riding an upward trend and should reach $32 billion in fiscal 1988, a full 15 percent above last year, the Agriculture Department says.

Increasing sales of wheat to China and Egypt, soybeans and cotton to Japan and the European Community, and soybeans, soybean meal and wheat to the Soviet Union should furnish more fuel for the trend, the department said in a report Tuesday.

It forecast a U.S. trade surplus in farm products of $11.5 billion for the 12 months that began Oct. 1, an increase of $4.3 billion from the previous year and the highest level since 1984.

The department placed the surplus in agricultural goods for October at $853 million, an increase of $96 million from September.

The department forecasts farm export volume this year to rise to 141 million tons, 12 million tons more than 1987.

The improvement reflected a drop in the dollar combined with weather problems for some foreign producers. Authorities also say costly subsidy programs enacted in 1985 are contributing to the upswing.

Improved sales mark a further turn away from the doldrums of the early 1980s when enormous farm surpluses accumulated and prices sank sharply.

PROCLAMATION PEN — President Reagan hands Coretta Scott King the pen he used to sign the Martin Luther King Jr. Day proclamation at the White House Tuesday. Witnessing the gesture is King's son, Dexter King. (AP Laserphoto)

Coretta King Disputes President's Comments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The widow of Martin Luther King Jr. says that if President Reagan is serious about honoring her husband's legacy, he should do something for the nation's poor.

Coretta Scott King's comments came Tuesday after a White House ceremony during which Reagan signed a proclamation honoring the 59th anniversary of the civil rights leader's birth.

Reagan declared that "the fight for genuine equality of opportunity goes on. It still continues for many Americans today. Yet let us not ignore the strides that have been made and the great strides that are being made toward ending discrimination and bigotry in our towns and communities, in our government, and most importantly, in our own hearts."

Mrs. King attended the ceremony and, afterward, she disputed Reagan's claim of "great strides."

Asked what the president could do in his last year as a tribute to her husband, she replied: "The least thing that he could do is call for the Congress and the private sector to provide some resources for the poor people of this country. ... We have too many poor people in this country, too many people who go to bed hungry at night, too many with no food and no place to sleep. This is really a disgrace."

Reagan, in his statement, had said that black employment "has risen 26 percent during our (economic) expansion. That's more than twice the rate of the job gain of whites. The unemployment rates of black youths has declined dramatically."

The ceremony was one of several events leading to Monday's observance of a federal holiday in King's honor. His birthday is Friday.

Earlier, Mrs. King, Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce and other officials attended a ceremony in which a 500-pound time capsule containing memorabilia relating to King's work was entombed in a Pennsylvania Avenue plaza two blocks east of the White House. By law, the capsule will be opened a century later.

"My husband said a people must know their history before they can know their direction or their destiny," she told a crowd of more than 1,000, including hundreds of schoolchildren. "These materials are not merely artifacts. They are a living testament to the power of love."

Among the items in the capsule are King's Bible, a robe, other personal items, taped tributes from world leaders, various books and speeches written by King, and a miniature Liberty Bell upon which the names of thousands of American admirers of the civil rights leader are inscribed.

"My fervent wish," said Pierce, "is that 100 years from now it will be opened by a society in which freedom, peace and brotherhood are commonplace."

The U.S. Marine Corps Band and a black spiritual choir alternated performances of patriotic music at the event. Then the crowd sang "We Shall Overcome," King's anthem, as the capsule was lowered into the earth.

Mrs. King and others also attended ceremonies at the Vietnam Veterans memorial, but she skirted a reception in King's honor at the Israeli Embassy, where a group of Arab-Americans marched in protest of the recent violence on the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip.

In a written statement, Mrs. King said "Not only do I deplore the violence that has taken the lives of 28 Palestinians in the Gaza Strip at the West Bank, I also deplore the human misery and hopelessness of the Palestinian people who live there. The Palestinian people have a right to protest for their full human and civil rights, just as the state of Israel has a right to protect its security."

Marijuana Clouds Marriage

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after I was married, I learned that my husband is a habitual marijuana smoker and has been for the last 20 years. I'm 25 and he's 41 — a product of the '60s. Had I known this beforehand, I never would have married him. Unfortunately, I didn't find out until after I became pregnant, and now that we have a 3-month-old son, it's not easy to leave.

I asked him why the subject of pot never came up while we were dating, and he said he knew that I was "straight" so he never smoked in front of me. Even now, he never smokes in front of me, but I can smell it on him quite often. He says he doesn't "need" it, but I don't believe him because every time I step out — even for 20 minutes — I'll come back to the smell of pot.

He's a good husband and father, but we argue about this constantly. More and more I notice that his eyes are constantly bloodshot and he seems drowsy and lethargic and has to be reminded several times to do something. I'm concerned.

Am I making a mountain out of a molehill? How serious is this? Could he really quit if he wanted to? Please help me. I love him, but I can't live this way. — TORN

DEAR TORN: If your husband smokes pot "every time you step out," he's hooked. A 20-year habit is no "molehill," and you are wise to be concerned. Marijuana affects different people in different ways, but a habitual user will usually suffer from impaired vision, inability to respond quickly in emergency situations, diminished memory and lack of motivation. He shouldn't drive, and you should refuse to allow him to drive you and the baby.

Dear Abby

Tell him that if he doesn't seek professional help to kick the habit, you are leaving. Contact the National Institute on Drug Abuse hot-line: (800) 662-HELP. They can put you in touch with drug-rehabilitation facilities in your area. Pot smokers don't just fade away — they go up in smoke!

DEAR ABBY: For "California Girl" whose Prince Charming has bad breath: There is a simple remedy to eliminate bad breath: Use a soft toothbrush and brush the tongue well. — TORONTO SUN READER

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Reluctant Gift Collector," the schoolteacher who resented receiving such "useless gimcracks" as mugs, plaques and pins that say "No. 1 Teacher."

She (and you) missed the point: It was not a "self-proclaiming" item, but an expression of love and respect for the teacher.

I have taught school for eight years and I drink my tea from a No. 1 Teacher cup, and I have a No. 1 Teacher pin in my jewelry box. — NANCY LAWRENCE

DEAR NANCY: I heard from hundreds of schoolteachers who wanted to teach "Reluctant Gift Collector" (and me) a lesson. They succeeded. Here's one from a teacher with a sense of humor:

DEAR ABBY: As a teacher in a major metropolitan area, I have a suggestion for "Reluctant Gift Collector." Be thankful for the gift, but next time suggest lottery tickets.

You have a better chance of winning the sweepstakes than having the school board give you a raise. — BROKE IN COLORADO

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." Woman Has Hunt Trophies

By BRUCE WHITMAN
The Harrisburg Patriot-News

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Barbara Nagurny was a typical teenager, interested in skiing, tennis and high school football games. Then she became Mrs. Jim McCarthy and entered into an entirely different lifestyle.

Today, Mrs. McCarthy ranks as one of just a handful of women who have hunted, and taken, the African Big Five.

Proudly displayed in the family big game trophy room are mounts of an elephant, rhino, cape buffalo, leopard and lion. She'll be honored for this Big Five collection at the Safari Club International convention early this year in Las Vegas.

"At one time I figured I'd get married and take care of a house," she said. "Then I met my husband and all that changed."

The McCarthys met when she was in the audience of a Red McCarthy radio show. Jim was working with his father in those days and doing DJ appearances on the side.

"Jim had just returned from a bear hunt," Mrs. McCarthy said. "We got talking about it and one thing led to another. I had always been interested in the outdoors and sports. At first we went small game hunting together after Jim taught me to handle firearms safely and to shoot. We took our first safari in 1975 and just fell in love with Africa."

The McCarthys have returned to Africa 11 times since that first trip. Over a period of eight years, Mrs. McCarthy collected her personal Big Five. The final lion came the past summer during a six-week combination business tour and safari in Zimbabwe.

"African hunts are strictly controlled by the governments there. The hunter takes only surplus animals and plays a key role in conservation and game management," she said. "Nothing goes to waste."

"For me, the biggest challenge of the Big Five was the elephant," Mrs. McCarthy said. "It's the most difficult and hardest of the African hunts. Because you're really after a nice bull as a trophy, you walk eight or 10 miles a day. You have to be physically fit."

"I've been very lucky in hunting the big cats. You don't go after them. You wait until they come to you. I've been on baits for hours when nothing was around and suddenly, a cat would appear out of nowhere."

The Middletown native has been a secretary with the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission for 23 years. Besides Africa, the McCarthys have hunted and taken photo trips to Australia, New Zealand, British Columbia, the Northwest Territory and several Western states.

"Jim and I have been able to travel extensively because we don't have children and other obligations," she said. "You don't see many women in big game hunting because of the traditional roles. I'm often questioned as to why I do this. People can't imagine how or even why I hunt."

"Barb is the fifth woman in the world to take the Big Five," said McCarthy. "I'm very proud of her. After all, I taught her how to hunt."

He is two steps behind his wife in his quest for the Big Five. He still needs an elephant and rhino to complete the series.

Pearl Culturing Is Achieved

NEW YORK (AP) — While pearls have been coveted for their beauty throughout history, it was only 80 short years ago that mankind's obsession to duplicate the production of this scarce treasure became possible, says Kae McCulloch, fashion consultant to the Jewelry Industry Council.

"Through the ages, pearls have served as a mark of prestige and affluence," she says, "so much so that some ancient countries passed laws permitting only the highest ranking nobility to wear them."

"In addition, folklore credited pearls with magical powers — extending life and guaranteeing health. Because Nature cannot supply the vast demand for pearls, many artisans looked in vain for ways to cultivate them."

As long ago as the 12th century, the Chinese were inserting small lead castings of Buddha into mollusks, producing cultured pearls of a sort as the images became coated with layers of nacre, the substance of pearls.

"It was Kokichi Mikimoto of Japan who eventually used a small mother-of-pearl bead that he implanted in an oyster," McCulloch relates. "Oysters so treated were then put in a basket and suspended in water. For three years he strived to develop this procedure until he finally succeeded."

On Feb. 12, 1908, he received a patent for his method of producing spherical pearls, and the cultured pearl industry was born.

At the time Mikimoto was perfecting his method of culturing pearls, other pioneers were reaching the same solution, McCulloch points out. But because of Mikimoto's lifelong commitment to developing and marketing pearls, as well as making them more affordable, he became known as the Pearl King, she says.

"When they were available back in the '40s, a graduated strand of Oriental pearls cost about $2,500," McCulloch says. "Today, a similar strand of graduated cultured pearls would cost between $500 and $700."

Women throughout the ages have been given pearls as a tribute to their beauty, from Mark Antony's gift to Cleopatra to Richard Burton's gift of La Peregrina (the Wanderer) to Elizabeth Taylor, she notes.

Said to be the most beautiful pearl ever, it was found 400 years ago in Panama by a slave who was given his freedom for it. Passed down from King Philip II of Spain to Mary I of England and Prince Louis Napoleon of France, it was sold to a British marquis to raise cash.

It then disappeared until it surfaced in 1969, when Burton bought it as a birthday gift for his wife. Over an inch and a half long, it weighs more than 27 carats.

The nation's first ladies have favored pearls, McCulloch reports — Eleanor Roosevelt with her pearl pin, Bess Truman with her pearl earrings, and Mamie Eisenhower, Jackie Kennedy, Pat Nixon, Betty Ford and Nancy Reagan with their single-strand pearl necklaces.

Popcorn Stitch Highlights Sweater

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Truly a sweater you will cherish for years, this designer cardigan's gorgeous lines and intriguing texture will convince you to knit it. Bands of popcorn and seed stitches make up the eye-catching pattern. Soft, lustrous, cotton yarn — wearable year-round — is used with a gauge of five stitches per inch. You may choose any grade worsted-weight yarn, from designer quality to economical, for this flexible pattern.

Easy-to-follow directions are given for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 39½, 42½, and 44 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Classic Perfection Cardigan, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-125187 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-125187 by sending a check or money order for $55.95 for small, $59.95 for medium or $63.95 for large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and designer-grade cotton yarn in versatile taupe.

Dear Pat: I have patterns for two Irish fisherman knits and each has instructions I am not sure about. In both, directions are given for right-side rows, but, to me, the instructions for the wrong-side rows are fuzzy. One reads: "Work the stitches as they appear." The other reads: "Purl over the knit stitches and knit over the purl stitches." Can you clarify this? — Helen M., Omaha, Neb.

Dear Helen: To work stitches as they appear, you will purl a stitch when the next stitch on the left needle shows as a "purl bump," and knit a stitch when the next one is a smooth knit stitch as it faces you.

For the other set of instructions, you would do just the opposite. That is, purl when a smooth stitch is on the left needle and knit when a purl bump appears. This will create a seed stitch pattern.

For your pattern stitch files: Random or planned groupings of popcorn stitches do a lot to add textured interest to almost any knit project. There is more than one way to work popcorns, but I particularly like the big, well-defined popcorns used in the sweater featured today.

At the point where you want a popcorn, work as follows on a right-side row: Work 4 times into the next stitch as follows: knit in front, knit in back, knit in front, knit in back; turn and knit 4 loosely; turn and purl 4 together.

If you are not sure just how this is done, perhaps this will make it clearer: 1) start a knit stitch by inserting needle into the front of the next stitch as usual; 2) wrap yarn around needle and pull to front, leaving the stitch on the needle; 3) insert needle into the back of the same stitch and repeat Step 2; 4) repeat Steps 1 and 2 once more; 5) repeat Step 3, but at the end, push the stitch off the left needle. You will now have 4 stitches worked from a single stitch.

Turn your work so that the wrong side is facing you and loosely knit the 4 stitches just created. Finally, turn back to right side and purl the 4 stitches together. Once you have worked a few popcorns in this way on a sample swatch, you will find them quite easy to do without having to refer to these lengthy instructions over and over.

You can plan the grouping and spacing of popcorns on a sheet of graph paper if you want to transform a simple stockinette stitch item into a beautifully patterned one.

Whether you plan to make the Classic Perfection sweater or not, you will find the instruction leaflet invaluable with its illustrated graph chart showing placement of seed and popcorn stitches. You will quickly see how you can make your own unique designs with such charts.

Dear Pat: When making pastel sweaters, I put the ball of yarn in a plastic sandwich bag, pulling the loose end through a hole made in the bottom of the bag. I close the open edge with a twist-tie or press the edges together, depending upon the type of bag. This way, the yarn stays clean and fresh. — Mrs. R.K.G., Chicago

Dear Mrs. G.: That's a good idea for any yarn, for even though dust doesn't show on darker yarns, it's there and it seems a shame for a garment to be soiled before it's ever worn. A word of warning, though: Don't store wools for any length of time in sealed plastic bags. Wool is a natural fiber that must "breathe," so plastic is a poor storage medium for it.

Dear Pat: I have a number of partial skeins of knitting worsted yarn and want to make a patterned yoke sweater calling for 2 to 3 ounces each of four colors. How can I be sure I will have enough in any of these leftover skeins? — Patricia F., Warren, Mich.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today amid persistent worries over the dollar and international trade.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 23.87 to 1,904.68 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by nearly 3 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 290 up, 816 down and 337 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 21.55 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The dollar weakened against leading foreign currencies in markets around the world today.

Analysts said some of its losses stemmed from a statement by Japan's finance minister that the Group of Seven industrialized nations have set no specific target range for the dollar against the yen.

Among actively traded blue chip and technology issues, International Business Machines fell 1 to 114 1/4; Digital Equipment 3/4 to 124; General Electric 1/2 to 43 1/2; American Telephone & Telegraph 1/2 to 27 3/8, and Exxon 1/4 to 39 1/8.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost 1.30 to 136.44. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.50 to 261.26.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 16.58 points to 1,928.55.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by almost 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 526 up, 991 down and 426 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 165.73 million shares, down from 158.98 million in the previous session.

as yet unstudied," in a wide belt around the city.

The study, to be completed in about six months, will identify ourfall routes, including pipe size, and the maximum area that can be served from GUC's existing gravity system.

Roger Jones, director of electric systems for the GUC, reported that load management operations during the month of December resulted in a savings totaling $148,840 in wholesale power costs.

The use of radio-controlled Beat-the-Peak switches on water heaters accounted for a savings of $80,871, Jones said, while savings from voltage adjustments amounted to $62,316. The use of generators at GUC's water plant and at Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co. resulted in savings totaling $5,653.

Green, GUC's general manager, reported that the formal closing of the purchase of several sections, totaling about 10 miles, of Bell Arthur Water Corp. lines west of Greenville was completed Dec. 31 at a cost of $252,152. And he said the 240 customers served by the lines — along Secondary Roads 1200, 1204, 1202, 1134, 1128 and 1131, and along N.C. 43 — have received letters welcoming them as Greenville Utilities customers.

In other business, board member Jo Ball was named commissioner to the N.C. Eastern Municipal Power Agency with Green as alternate commissioner, and Green was appointed commissioner of Electricities of North Carolina, with Mrs. Ball as alternate commissioner.

The board also awarded a contract for the purchase of 40,000 feet of cable from Tennessee Valley Electric Supply Co. for $28,090 and a contract for labor for the installation of a 12.5 kilovolt overhead distribution circuit to Weeks Construction Co. for $43,300.

TRAIN AND CAR COLLIDE — A train and car collided in the Littlefield community near the Ayden-Grifton High School Tuesday afternoon. Trooper John Letchworth said Ralph Ronald Nowell of Route 1, Ayden, reported he was headed east on rural paved road 1108 when he approached the train crossing and could not stop. The engineer of the southbound CSX train was listed as Paul Franklin Narron of Rocky Mount. The engine of the five-car train struck the left side of the car. Nowell and his son were reported slightly injured in the accident. Letchworth said Nowell was charged with failure to yield at a train crossing and failure to have a child wear a seat belt. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Young Pirates Are Fooling The Experts By Winning Games Despite Adversity

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

To paraphrase the words of Mark Twain in describing his own demise, reports of the death of the East Carolina basketball program may have been greatly exaggerated.

You can't really blame those who thought the Pirates would be lucky to win a single game during the 1987-88 season.

But the young Pirate team has ignored the prognosticators and forged a 5-7 record, despite a number of trying circumstances.

After all, the program has gone through a major upheaval since last season. It has a new coach in Mike Steele and he returned only two players with any playing experience.

The roster also includes five freshmen, two walkons, a junior college player and another returning player who was coming off major reconstructive knee surgery and had not been able to play his first two years on campus.

Ticket Office Opening Early

The Minges Athletic Ticket Office will be open for sales tonight earlier than usual as East Carolina's Pirates play host to the University of South Carolina.

The ticket office will be open at 5:30 p.m. and the gates will be opened at 6 p.m.

Tipoff is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

But there were more handicaps besides just inexperience.

ECU's tallest player stood only 6-6. In addition, the Pirates' best returning player, Blue Edwards, was suspended for the season due to a violation of the student code in connection with being charged, along with three former players, with breaking

Scott Leads Tech To Easy Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech's Dennis Scott, mired in a shooting slump, had hit only 15 of his previous 49 shots, but he found the answer to his prayers.

"I sat down before the game and prayed that I would get my shot back," Scott said Tuesday night. "I guess you could say my prayers were answered."

Scott hit eight of 10 3-point shots, scoring 28 points on 71 percent shooting as Tech beat Georgia State 111-82. He tied the school record for most 3-point shots made in a game set by Mark Price during the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament in 1983.

Scott, who made 10 of 14 shots, scored 20 points in the first half, including a 3-point jumper with 13:00 remaining that gave the Yellow Jackets the lead for good at 20-18. His shooting inspired his teammates.

"He really got us going tonight," said center-forward Tom Hammonds. "It really excited me. It really makes an incredible difference when you have a guy that hit those long bombs. It takes the pressure off you scoring every trip down the court."

Hammonds added 22 and Duane Ferrell 21 for Georgia Tech. Hammonds and James Munlyn each had seven rebounds.

"Dennis was really magnificent," Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said of his freshman swing player. "He got his shooting touch back."

"It was just a matter of being patient," Scott said. "Sometimes I want to do too much, too fast. I relaxed tonight and it just kept going."

Tech, 12-2, led by 11 at halftime, 50-39. But Cremins didn't breathe easy until the Jackets forced a number of turnovers early in the second half, going on a 14-4 run that opened up a 66-46 lead with 16:00 to go.

Georgia State, 3-8, was led by Keven Davis with 22 points and 14 rebounds. Lanard Copeland had 16 points, Willie Brown 15 and James Andrews 13 for the Crimson Panthers.

"I really liked the way we played the beginning of the second half. I told them at halftime that, if they didn't watch out, it could be like the Richmond game (which Tech lost)," Cremins said.

Georgia State Coach Bob Reinhart said his team played well at the start, but Tech's defense at the beginning of the second half made the difference.

"We played about as well as we can for 15 minutes," Reinhart said. "I think the real key is at the half we came out down 11. Then they had five or six steals in the first four or five minutes of the second half."

"They do an excellent job of trapping," he said. "They gamble but they don't cheat. I think the difference in the ball game was their defense in the first five minutes of the second half."

and entering and theft at an ECU dormitory in December of 1986.

Given all that, the preseason outlook was anything but positive.

"One of the hardest things I've done is when Oct. 15 (the first day of practice) came (was) to go home and talk about our team, because I didn't know if we were going to be able to beat anybody and I didn't know if I could handle that," Steele said.

Included in the Bucs' 5-7 mark is their first Colonial Athletic Association road win since the 1985-86 season (a 68-65 win over James Madison). Tonight, the Pirates take a breather from CAA play to take on South Carolina, 8-3, of the Metro Conference.

"I didn't know how we would do," Steele said. "I had never seen our competition. I did think that we could put together a group of guys that would work hard."

"I think the biggest thing is we have to get out of our heads that we've won five games and we've been successful. That's not being successful yet. We need to keep getting better and improving. At the end of the year, we can look back and see if we were as good as we can possibly be."

There are few familiar faces on the roster from last year's team. Five of the returning players off of last year's 12-16 squad were removed from the team before the school year even began for various disciplinary or academic reasons.

On Aug. 26, Edwards, the lone returning starter, was arrested in connection with the dorm break-ins.

"I didn't come in here with the idea that we were going to get rid of (players)," Steele said. "I just came in and said you are going to go to class, you are going to go to study hall and you are going to get along with everybody."

"Some guys could do that and others couldn't. If you can't do it, you don't need to be there. I might be naive, but I still think you can win with good people."

That was the initial message Steele delivered to his players.

"I noticed that right away in our first couple of conversations," said junior point guard Jeff Kelly. "He's just an intense competitor. Things are going to be done his way or you'll end up taking the highway. He was going to take total control because we had had some problems with discipline in the past with guys getting in trouble. Coach is not going to tolerate that at all. It doesn't matter how good you are, if you don't cut it academically, he doesn't want you in his program."

But it hasn't been easy for the Pirates, and the absence of Edwards, a 6-4 senior who averaged 14.4 points a game last season, has been especially tough.

"It's the most difficult thing I've had to deal with in regard to running

Willie Stargell Elected To Baseball Hall Of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — After spending 21 seasons hitting towering drives into the summer sky, Willie Stargell just wants to keep both feet on the ground.

Stargell, who guided the Pittsburgh Pirates to two World Series titles with his bat and leadership, on Tuesday became the 17th player to be elected to the baseball Hall of Fame in the first year of eligibility.

Stargell was named on 352 of 427 ballots (82.4 percent) returned to the Baseball Writers' Association of America. In order to be elected, a player must be named on 75 percent of the ballots, which this year was 321.

When he learned of his induction, Stargell's eyes filled with tears.

"I don't know where I'm at, I've lost that big ol' composure," he said. "To be in the same room as Babe, Hank and Ernie ... what a feeling. What an honor."

Stargell hit 475 homers with 1,540 runs batted in and a .282 batting average, all with the Pirates. He was equally regarded for his qualities as a leader on the field and in the clubhouse.

"I still try to keep both feet on the ground because my mama once told me to," the 47-year-old Stargell said.

For the other favorite on this year's ballot, Congressman Jim Bunning of Kentucky, the returns were not as favorable.

Bunning won 224 games, pitched a perfect game in 1964 and had 40 shutouts. In 17 seasons with Detroit, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Los Angeles, he struck out 2,855 batters. He was the second pitcher ever to win 100 games in both leagues and have a no-hitter in each. Cy Young was the only other man to achieve both.

After missing by 21 votes last year, Bunning fell four votes short with 317 (74.2 percent) in his 12th year of eligibility.

"I thought I had a shot," said Bunning, who was in Hawaii on Tuesday. He is still eligible for three more years. After that, he must wait three years before he can be considered by the veterans committee.

"I think I was right the first time," Bunning said. "If you don't make it right away, you should take your name off the ballot so you won't have to go through this every year."

"But I'll live. I'll get up in the morning and the sun will shine. It's great for Willie."

Bunning's near miss wasn't the closest in voting history. Former Chicago White Sox second baseman Nellie Fox missed by one vote in 1985, his last season of eligibility.

After Bunning, Tony Oliva was third in the voting with 202, followed by Orlando Cepeda 199 and the late Roger Maris with 184. It was Maris' 15th and last year of eligibility.

Induction ceremonies are scheduled for July 31 in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Reflecting the weak field, nine writers returned signed ballots without votes. Fourteen of the 45 players listed failed to receive a vote.

If those nine writers had not sent in their ballots, the total would have been 418, meaning 75 percent would have been 314 and Bunning would have made it.

Stargell totaled 2,232 hits and won the National League home run titles in 1971 when he hit 48, and 1973 when he finished with 44. He had 30 or more home runs six times and drove in 100 or more runs five times.

"All that hard work and sacrifice, I never thought it would feel like this," Stargell said. "I never thought I would have a day like this. I'm overwhelmed."

Stargell is the only batter to hit a ball out of Dodger Stadium — and he did it twice. He cleared the right-field roof at old Forbes Field seven times and hit four balls into the upper deck in right field at Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium.

"I thought winning was one of the greatest thrills, but (this) is really overwhelming," Stargell said. "My family, my friends all the people there in Pittsburgh, thank you."

Stargell, affectionately known as "Pops" to his teammates, was 38 in 1979 when he led the Pirates back from a 3-1 deficit in the World Series against Baltimore.

He was selected the Series MVP and shared the NL MVP with Keith Hernandez, then with St. Louis.

In the decisive seventh game at Baltimore, Stargell hit a two-run homer, two doubles and a single.

It was a strange repeat of history. In 1971, Stargell scored the winning run in the Pirates' seventh-game victory over the Orioles at Memorial Stadium.

"That (1971) was Roberto Clemente's series," Stargell said of the Pirates' Hall of Fame outfielder. "He was the greatest. It was Roberto who started the Pirate spirit."

Clemente, who batted .414 in dominating the 1971 World Series, died on Dec. 31, 1972, in the crash of a small plane on a mission of mercy to earthquake-shattered Nicaragua. It was Stargell who kept "The Family" together after Clemente's death.

In the 1979 Series, Stargell had 12 hits in 30 at-bats for a .400 average. He had a record seven extra base hits including three home runs, and his 25 total bases tied the Series record set by Reggie Jackson in 1977.

It was Stargell, with his ear-splitting discos, his hundreds of crocheted gold stars for meritorious performances and his constant banter that kept the clubhouse free of strain.

Currently, Stargell is a coach with the Atlanta Braves and has expressed an interest in managing in the majors.

The list of players who have made it the first time is impressive — Jackie Robinson, Bob Feller, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Sandy Koufax, Warren Spahn, Mickey Mantle, Ernie Banks, Willie Mays, Al Kaline, Bob Gibson, Hank Aaron, Frank Robinson, Brooks Robinson, Lou Brock, Willie McCovey and now Stargell.

But so is the list of those who didn't make it the first time around — Cy Young, Grover Alexander, Dizzy Dean, Lefty Grove, Robin Roberts, Mickey Cochrane, Joe Cronin, Willie Keeler, George Sisler, Mel Ott, Tris Speaker, Pie Traynor and Harmon Killebrew, to name a few.

Next year, Johnny Bench and Carl Yastrzemski are eligible for the first time and seem certain of making it 19 first-time entrants.

Maris, who hit 61 homers in 1961, and Don Larsen, the only pitcher to throw a perfect game in the World Series, fell short in their 15th and final appearance on the writers' ballot.

Luis Tiant and Sparky Lyle, the other first-year players on the ballot, received 132 and 56 votes, respectively.

Tubbs Unusual Among Coaches

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma was sailing along undefeated and averaging 115 points a game until a loss to Louisiana State Monday night. With Billy Tubbs at the helm, the Sooners won't be long getting back on their rather unusual course.

Tubbs talks the way most coaches wouldn't, even if their remarks are off the record. He uses "crush" as a verb, talks of games as war and players as soldiers, admits he loves records and points — lots of each — and lets you know how he would have lived 600 years ago.

"I love to do things no one else has ever done," Tubbs said. "If I was alive in the 1300s, I would have been on a ship trying to find the edge of the earth. I would have been one of the guys finding Australia or something. Your only limitation is your imagination."

Tubbs has few limitations in that area, given his approach to basketball.

"We get things going with defensive runs," Tubbs said, illustrating his philosophy with words that just don't seem to go together. "We create the runs with our defense. If you have the ball, I still think I'm on offense and I'm going to score. I don't have to have the ball to score."

"You never beat anybody, never crush anybody, by grinding it out with your offense, and that's true in basketball and football."

Football is the sport most people connect with Oklahoma and the local media thinks Tubbs treats them shabbily when the gridiron Sooners siphon attention from the basketball team.

"Think of the real crushers in football here at Oklahoma," Tubbs said. "They run back interceptions, block kicks, run back punts. They force fumbles and get it at the 20. It's a rare case you crush anybody by taking it on your 20 and grinding it out."

"Somewhere, when I was in college, I remember hearing the statement that the only way you really crush people is to do it with your defense, to force things to happen, and we've be doing that."

The third-ranked Sooners have scored over 100 points 11 times in 15 games and twice topped the 150-point mark — 152-84 over Centenary and 151-99 over Dayton.

Criticism about running up the score doesn't faze the man who has won at least 20 games in every season at Oklahoma except his first, 1981.

"One coach whined a little but I don't concern myself with it," Tubbs said. "My philosophy is that we're going to play hard every minute of the game and there's no compromise on that. I don't know how to coach any other way."

"You work so hard at practice to get guys to play to their maximum capability. What should you do, call a timeout and say, 'Hey, let's slack off guys?' Every player wants to impress you and the crowd. What should I say, 'Go in and screw the game up?'"

"Plus, it's my understanding it's wrong to pull points off the top. But everybody knows we're not going to take any prisoners. I just don't know any other way to play."

Neither do his players. "We go in with the crush attitude," said center Stacey King, using the team's favorite verb. "We play aggressively with that full-court pressure defense and that allows us to score a lot of points — and as long as we continue to do that, there's a possibility we might be able to score 100 the rest of the season."

100. That's Tubbs' magic number, really.

"We have to have 100," Tubbs said. "When I was a player and looked at the scoreboard, I thought you had to have 25 points every 10 minutes. If you get 25 every 10 minutes, you have the 100."

"I look at the clock and compute it out to what the score is going to be. With 10 minutes left in the first half, if I see 35 I know we have a good shot; if I see 20 I know we have to pick up the pace. We only had 45 at halftime against Virginia and we were off our pace."

Not for long. The Sooners scored the first 27 points of the second half to turn a nine-point lead into a 72-36 advantage.

"When people look at Oklahoma basketball, I want them to see a team that has respect for everybody they play," Tubbs said. "We're not out to embarrass anybody but we are out to make people look bad, because if we make ourselves look good by making them look bad, that's the name of the game. If that wasn't the rules of the game you'd be trying to play to get beat."

"We have respect and compassion, but when the game starts, it's war and we don't take prisoners. We start pressing and should end pressing. Sometimes we'll pull it off if we hit the numbers, but we shouldn't because the guys in there then have to learn the full-court defense. And the reason they're playing at that time is because they have problems playing it."

"It's all the full-court pressure," senior forward Dave Sieger offered as the key to success. "We just have so many people. If somebody gets tired, someone else comes in and the other team doesn't have that option. We come in with fresh guys and they have the same guys."

"Anytime you score a lot of points, people are going to say you're an offensive-structured team, and we are an offensive-structured team,"

Sieger said. "But the majority of our points are coming from our defense, the full-court pressure, things like that. But people kind of look past that and just look at the final score and see the other team in the 80s. But they still lost by 40, 50 points, so we can't be that bad of a defensive team."

Before the LSU game, which Oklahoma lost 84-77, the Sooners forced an average of 30 turnovers per game, many via the 222 steals credited to Oklahoma.

"When people pick up a paper and see we scored 150 points they think that, 'Wow, that's a great offensive machine.' But if you really watch us, we get a lot of points off our steals and that's forced by the defense," senior guard Ricky Grace said.

Junior guard Mookie Blaylock had 75 of the 222 steals, just 15 short of the school record for a season.

Grace and Blaylock played a year together at Midland Junior College, so "it wasn't any time to get adjusted to each other or anything."

Blaylock "puts a lot of pressure on the point guard and causes him a lot of trouble and that enables us to gamble a lot," Grace said.

Tubbs will be as happy as Blaylock when the steals record falls.

"I love records. I'm intrigued by them and I love to set records," Tubbs said. "One game this year we had 76 points in the first half and that's a Big Eight record. But of course all the records we break are our own records. But we tied that record in the second half."

Terra Ceia Claims 55-52 Upset Win

TERRA CEIA — Terra Ceia Academy put together what its coach called its best game of the season Tuesday night and defeated Trinity Christian School, 55-52, in basketball action.

Terra Ceia also won the girls' game, 60-21.

"We didn't play badly," Trinity coach Don Southerland said. "But when we had a pretty good lead, 30-18, in the first half and Michael Harrell was already on the bench with three fouls, Kirk Welch got his third too. That allowed them to cut the lead back to 30-23 at the half."

"Then, we stayed in foul trouble in the second half and that took away some of our effectiveness on defense," he added.

Trinity led, 18-14, after one quarter, but saw the big lead shrink back to 30-23 in the second frame. Terra Ceia then charged ahead with a 15-7 advantage in the third quarter, 38-37, and held off Trinity through the last quarter.

Todd Tinker led the Knights with 14 points. Kreston Welch led Trinity with 19 while Kirk Welch had 14.

In the girls' game, Terra Ceia raced out to a 15-3 lead in the first period and was never in trouble. The Lady Knights pushed their lead to 25-6 at halftime and led, 47-8, at the end of the third quarter. Both teams scored 13 points in the final period.

Charlene Van Staalding led Terra Ceia with 15 points while Robin Hubers had 12, Andrea Leys had 11 and Lara Boetje had 10. No one scored in double figures for Trinity.

Columbia's boys edged out into an 11-9 lead after the first eight minutes of the game. Then, in the second period, the Wildcats outthit the Bullets, 18-13, to boost their lead to 29-22 by halftime.

The third quarter saw Columbia pad its lead with an 18-11 margin, taking a 47-33 lead into the final frame. In that, Columbia allowed a 22-19 rally by Jamesville.

Dion Spencer led Columbia with 17 points while Perry Holloway had 15, Ryan Jones had 11 and Varian Holloway, 10. Ben James had 18, James Demery, 11, and Eric Sprill, 10, to pace Jamesville.

Young Pirates...

a basketball program," Steele said. "It was tough when the decision was made that he couldn't play. I had enough input (in the decision) that I thought it was in the best interest of everybody that he not play this year."

"When you look back on it, it would have been difficult for Blue to play and maintain his grades and be successful with the notoriety of what had happened. It still could be something that could be tremendously positive. There would be nothing that would please me more than to see Blue Edwards graduate next year, in fact be my first senior to graduate from East Carolina."

But in the meantime, the Pirates have been going with a starting lineup that consists of 6-5 freshman center Stanley Love, 6-3 junior walkon guard Kenny Murphy, 6-3 sophomore forward Gus Hill, 6-3 sophomore guard Reed Lose and 5-9 junior guard Jeff Kelly.

"It's been a tiring season for the players and for me," Steele said. "There is not a game we can walk on the floor and say that if we play bad, we're still going to win."

"We're sitting there at the Miami of Ohio game (which ECU won, 86-63) with a 27-point lead and I'm scared to death that the timer is not going to start the clock or that something bad is going to happen. Finally, it was like, God, it's over."

And with nowhere to go but up, the outlook is positive, according to guard Jimmy Hinton.

"We're at the base level right now," he said. "We're improving. We have a long way to go. He (Steele) is a firm believer in what is right and what is wrong. It'll help us in the future."

And while success hasn't been overwhelming, it has been encouraging, according to Steele.

"A lot of people in the conference thought, okay, there's East Carolina, there's two wins. That will be an easy trip," Steele said. "Now, hopefully that won't be the case. If we can be as good as we can be, we can beat some people."

In fact, the dismal preseason predictions may have been a motivating factor for ECU.

"When you see something in the paper like East Carolina will not win a major college basketball game this year, you want to prove everybody wrong," Murphy said.

"I know a lot of people had their doubts but I knew all along we were going to surprise some people."

Kelly agreed. "You come out, we lose a few players and (then) a few guys were sent home and everybody is saying East Carolina is going to be the worst team in the country," he said.

"I think it was Dick Vitale, or maybe the Sporting News, said we wouldn't even win a game."

"That's got to motivate guys. If you are not motivated to win a game, you shouldn't be out there at all. We've won five games so far and I think we're going to win a couple of more."

Bear Grass In Pair Of Wins

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass High School swept a pair of Tobacco Belt basketball games from Bath High School Tuesday night. The boys took an 86-62 win while the girls came away with a 39-33 victory.

The Bears inched out into an 18-14 lead in the first period of the game, then outhit the Pirates, 23-16, in the second quarter. That pushed Bear Grass into a 41-30 halftime lead.

In the third period, Bath had a small 18-16 rally, but still trailed by 57-48 going into the last frame. Bear Grass sped away, 29-14, to win going away.

Almer Riddick led Bear Grass with 20 points while Tyrone Bailey and Steve Cowan each had 11 and Steve Brown had 10. Tommy Warren had 19 and Melvin Smith, 18, for the Pirates.

Bath's girls held a 7-6 lead after one period, but the Lady Bears came back with a 10-8 second period margin to inch ahead, 16-15, at the half. In the third period, Bear Grass outhit Bath, 13-6, to push ahead, 29-21. Bath rallied, 12-10, in the final quarter, but it wasn't enough.

Stephanie Satchell led Bath with 15 points and was the game's only double figure scorer.

The Bears are now 5-3 in the TBC and 6-6 overall. The girls are also 5-3 in the league and 6-4 overall. Bear Grass travels to Belhaven on Thursday for its next action.

Cold Shooting 49ers Fall To WVU

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (AP) — West Virginia forward Tyrone Shaw scored 19 points and North Carolina-Charlotte went ice-cold from the field as the Mountaineers romped, 78-52, in college basketball Tuesday night.

The Mountaineers, 9-4, hit 55 percent of their shots compared to 33 percent for North Carolina-Charlotte, also 9-4. No 49ers player scored in double figures.

West Virginia took an 8-6 lead and never trailed the rest of the game. A 16-4 scoring spree put the Mountaineers up 22-10 with 9:07 left in the first half. The 49ers then outscored West Virginia 14-7 to cut the deficit to 29-24 with 3:29 left.

A 9-0 spurt gave the Mountaineers a 38-24 lead at intermission, and West Virginia led by as many as 33 points in the second half.

Chris Brooks scored 16 points and Herbie Brooks had 12 for the Mountaineers. Reggie Barnes led the 49ers with 9 points.

North Carolina-Charlotte coach Jeff Mullins called his team's effort "an embarrassment."

"I've been involved in games like this when you don't handle the ball or shoot it well, but I don't expect to get out-toughed," Mullins said of his team, which is atop the Sun Belt Conference.

"We felt this was a prestigious game for us," Mullins said. "It was not a good effort on our part, and I am embarrassed for our program."

"West Virginia is a strong team and just beat us in every way. We got the shots we wanted early, we just didn't hit any of them," he said.

"We got stuck on six points for a while. In the first 10 minutes we were cold in our shooting," Mullins said. "From there, they just played it out of us."

Mountaineers coach Gale Catlett said his team went into the game with the intention of stopping the 49ers' big man, Byron Dinkins, who entered the game averaging 24 points a game.

The Mountaineers held Dinkins to 6 points on the night.

"Dinkins is an excellent ballplayer and we had to take him out of his ballgame," Catlett said.

In addition, West Virginia was determined to dominate the 49ers inside, Catlett said.

"We looked at film of UNCC and we wanted to get the ball inside on them and take good shots," he said. "Things didn't go well for them, and they went really well for us. It was our night."

"The key to the game was that we took them out of their transition game. We stopped it by taking select key shots," he said.

Ruling Reinstates Prep Player

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — A national sports official says a high school basketball coach should decide who plays on his team, but a West Virginia county school board and the state's courts have decided to put a 5-foot-11 center back onto the hardwood against the wishes of his coach.

Coach Peter Corbett of Herbert Hoover High School and the Kanawha County Board of Education disagree on whether John Mick should play for the Huskies.

Mick averaged 2 points a game for Herbert Hoover last season on the way to a 1-19 record.

Corbett cut Mick after the first day of practice this season, but a month later the school board ordered him to put Mick back on the roster. Corbett appealed that decision to Kanawha County Circuit Court, where a judge upheld the board's action.

The state Supreme Court voted 4-0 Tuesday, with one justice absent, not to hear Corbett's appeal of the Kanawha County ruling.

Don Sparks, the assistant director of the National Federation of State High School Associations said he has never heard of such a thing.

"A coach and his staff have to have the prerogative to choose who plays. Otherwise, the whole community will be coaching," Sparks said from Kansas City, Mo.

"If the school board wants to fire the coach, that's one thing, but if they want to name the starting five, that's another."

The only thing keeping Mick off the team now, pending more appeals by Corbett within the school system, is a state rule requiring players to go through 14 practices before becoming eligible.

Mick has gone through eight practices since the school board reinstated him to the team and will become eligible Jan. 25.

Corbett is afraid that a precedent is being set. He said juniors on his team now joke that if they are cut next year, they'll make the team anyway with the school board's help.

"There's a place for everyone who wants to play basketball," Corbett said after Tuesday's Supreme Court hearing. "There's church leagues, intramurals, P.E. (physical education) classes."

"If I cut a kid and he says he still wants to play basketball, I say,

"Great. Don't lose that drive." He should drop out and go with a league where he can play three or four quarters a game and score 15 points. He'd be happier than sitting on the bench," Corbett said.

Corbett cut Mick on Nov. 16, but after meeting with Mick's parents and school officials, the coach gave the center a one-time shot at regaining his place on the Huskies' roster.

Pat Mick, John's mother, said her son waived the opportunity, believing Corbett would claim later that the one-time practice was a sufficient "second chance."

In a Dec. 2 letter to Herbert Hoover Principal Charles Burford, Jack McClanahan of the school board's secondary education division said Corbett had to give Mick a 10-day tryout. Mick again declined the chance.

On Dec. 18, after meetings between Mick and school board officials, the board decided Mick had to be put on the team permanently and protected from future cuts.

"In addition, the board emphasized that the boy should play on his merit and start on his merit," McClanahan said.

If Mick has to play based on merit, he shouldn't be playing, Corbett said. A report from the coach to Burford and the school board said Mick "was found to be deficient" in several of 13 skill areas checked during the first practice.

"John worked hard for him for two years. We still can't understand it," Pat Mick said.

Mick started 15 games and played in 69 of 80 quarters. His mother said it was OK for him not to score more than 2 points a game because that wasn't his role.

"We've been going to games. They don't have a specific center. It's whoever gets back there first," said Mrs. Mick, who played 6-on-6 girls' basketball when she was in high school.

"I'm not saying they would win with John in there, but I don't think teams would drive down the middle as much against them."

Corbett and Sparks said the decisions that affect Corbett's livelihood should be made by him. Corbett has a 1-26 career record at Herbert Hoover — the Huskies were 0-7 entering a Tuesday night game — and said his decisions are made to produce a winner.

Dooley Hires Former Player As Assistant

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Jim Webster, who played in college for Bill Dooley at North Carolina, has been named an assistant football coach on Dooley's staff at Wake Forest.

Webster, who started for three years at linebacker for Dooley, has 10 years of coaching experience at the collegiate level. He served on the coaching staffs at North Carolina, Florida, Kansas, Colorado and Northwestern, working primarily with linebackers and the defensive secondary.

Webster's appointment fills one of two vacancies on Dooley's staff. Quarterback coach Jeff Bower resigned in December to become offensive coordinator at Southern Mississippi. Defensive coordinator Gary Darnell recently accepted a similar position at Florida.

Jordan Leading All-Star Voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls continues to lead all Eastern Conference players in fan voting for the 1988 NBA All-Star Game.

Jordan, the league's leading scorer at 32.7 points per game, has received 542,728 votes. Isiah Thomas of Detroit is second among Eastern guards with 331,691 votes, while Glenn "Doc" Rivers of Atlanta is third with 264,474.

Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins and Boston's Larry Bird are the top vote-getters at forward. Wilkins leads with 362,646 votes, while Bird has 334,574. Philadelphia's Charles Barkley is third with 282,484.

Washington's Moses Malone leads at center with 305,876 votes. He is followed by Atlanta's Tree Rollins with 243,327 and Boston's Robert Parish with 169,819.

All-Star voting ends on Jan. 16. The game will be played Feb. 7 in Chicago.

Durham Suspends Anderson From Squad

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — University of Georgia basketball Coach Hugh Durham said Tuesday he has suspended starting guard Willie Anderson and said Anderson would not play Wednesday night against Auburn in Athens.

Durham said in a statement the 6-foot-7 senior was suspended for "conduct detrimental to our team," but declined to elaborate.

He said Anderson's status for Georgia's game Saturday against LSU would be re-evaluated later in the week.

Anderson is the team's second leading scorer at 15.5 points a game. He also averages 4.7 rebounds and 4.5 assists.

Earlier this season, Durham demoted Anderson to the second team for failing to return his uniform to the equipment manager on time. That demotion lasted one game, against North Carolina-Asheville Dec. 12.

Agent Misdealings Deal With Strongly

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The indictment of a former Atlanta sports agent and a state investigation of New York agent Norby Walters may help "send a message" to stop agent dealings that disqualify young athletes, the president of the NCAA said.

Wilford Bailey, president of the collegiate governing body and a professor at Auburn University, said he was "anxious for everything that can be done" to protect athletes from agents.

Sources said former Atlanta sports agent Jim Abernethy was indicted Monday by a state grand jury on misdemeanor trade and commerce charges for his dealings with Auburn football player Kevin Porter.

Porter was declared ineligible for the Jan. 1 Sugar Bowl following news reports that quoted Abernethy as saying he had paid Porter performance bonuses during the 1987 season.

Attorney General Don Siegelman said he could not release the name of the person indicted, but sources said the panel considered charges only against Abernethy and confirmed he was indicted.

The indictment apparently was the first involving a professional agent's dealings with a college athlete.

Siegelman said his office also is considering asking a Tuscaloosa County grand jury to probe Walters, whose dealings with Seattle SuperSonics player Derrick McKey cost the former Alabama basketball star his senior year of eligibility.

Abernethy called his indictment on misdemeanor counts of tampering with a sports event, violating the deceptive practices act and commercial bribery "unbelievable and absolutely amazing."

"It's incredible how the Alabama state attorney general can find whatever law he can to see fit that it protects his state universities," he told The Atlanta Constitution.

Alabama prosecutors said they expected the indictment would be served this week. Attempts to reach Abernethy by telephone for comment Tuesday were unsuccessful.

Abernethy could be sentenced to a maximum of one year in jail on each count if convicted.

Bailey, attending the NCAA annual convention in Nashville, Tenn., said in a telephone interview he could not comment specifically on the Abernethy case.

But, he said, "We hope (the indictment) would send a message to the agents to prevent them from taking any kind of actions that would result in the ineligibility of a college athlete."

Dick Schultz, executive director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, said, "I don't think there's much more we can do (about the agents) as far as making rules."

"We're going to need some outside help."

Vince Dooley, Georgia's football coach and athletic director, said he would prefer that charges be brought at the federal level, where extradition across state lines is not a problem. Abernethy, who lives in Georgia, could fight a return to Alabama to stand trial.

U.S. Attorney James E. Wilson of Montgomery, whose court district includes the Auburn area, could not be reached by telephone for comment on whether federal charges could be pursued in the case.

Chocowinity Gathers Up Pair Of Basketball Wins

CHOCOWINITY — Chocowinity's Indians rolled up a pair of basketball victories in the Tobacco Belt Conference Tuesday night, downing Mattamuskeet. The Indians topped the Lakers, 76-53, in the boys' game and took a 56-36 victory in the girls' game.

with 19 points while China Grice had 14 and Drusilla Crawford had 10. Mary Shaw had 18 and Michelle Harris had 12 for the Lady Lakers.

Chocowinity's boys pushed out into a 15-10 led in the first period of the game, then added a 14-9 margin in the second frame. That left the Tribe in command, 29-19, at the half.

Chocowinity's boys are now 5-2 in league play and 6-3 overall. The girls are 6-1 both in the league and overall.

Chocowinity outscored the Lakers, 18-12, and boosted their lead to 47-31 by the end of the third period. They finished off Mattamuskeet, 29-22, in the final period.

Chocowinity travels to Jamesville on Friday for its next action.

Chocowinity's boys pushed out into a 15-10 led in the first period and increased their lead to 28-11 by the end of the half. They allowed Mattamuskeet to close the gap to 40-27 in the third quarter before taking a 16-9 margin in the final quarter.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Don Mattingly admits his "guarantee" that the New York Yankees will win the American League East title next season is uncharacteristic for him.

any top-line players. I really feel like we're the best team in our league right now."

"I admit, it is kind of uncharacteristic for me. I usually don't like to make predictions," Mattingly said at his Evansville restaurant a few hours after signing a three-year, $6.7-million contract. "But that's exactly how I feel."

Mattingly said he was optimistic about the acquisitions of pitchers Rich Dotson from the Chicago White Sox and Lee Guetterman from Seattle, catcher Don Slaught from Texas, shortstop Rafael Santana from the Mets, and last week, free agent slugger Jack Clark, formerly of the Cardinals.

Mattingly said his new contract, unlike previous agreements, has no clauses paying bonus money for batting titles or All-Star game appearances, although he could be paid extra for winning the

Laser Light Eradicates AIDS In Donated Blood

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of infectious agents including the deadly AIDS virus can be eradicated from donated blood by using laser light, according to research by medical researchers in Texas.

The findings, outlined Tuesday in the scientific journal "Transfusion," are based on small-scale laboratory experiments conducted over the past three years, said Dr. James L. "Les" Matthews, a researcher affiliated with the Baylor University Medical Center.

With proper follow-up work, Matthews said, it appears the procedure could be used to cleanse blood at a "flow rate" of about a pint every 15 minutes — sufficient to allow its use by blood banks.

That, in turn, could offer blood banks a virtual foolproof means of guaranteeing the safety of their donated supplies.

The work by Matthews and seven colleagues, financed in part by the Pentagon's Star Wars anti-missile program, was first disclosed by defense officials three months ago. At the time, however, Matthews declined to discuss the experiments pending publication of the paper in Transfusion, a journal of the American Association of Blood Banks.

The work to date has shown that the combination of a non-toxic dye and laser light can destroy a number of viruses in blood — including the AIDS virus — without harming the blood itself, Matthews said in a telephone interview.

The procedure so far has been tested on flowing blood containing the herpes simplex virus and on a flowing culture medium containing the AIDS virus. In those tests, measurements have been completed demonstrating the viral agents were completely destroyed.

Blood containing the AIDS virus also has been put through the system, but no measurements have been made after that type of experiment to confirm the AIDS virus was completely killed.

"But we are confident now the (laser) exposure system does kill the AIDS virus (in the growth culture) and also that the presence of blood doesn't interfere with the effectiveness of the system," Matthews said.

"However, we have additional tests to perform. We regard this as a model system that we propose to develop further. Our guess is that it will take at least three years, and maybe up to five years at the most, to refine."

The new procedure, under development since 1984, takes advantage of the act that tumors and certain viral cells absorb or retain dyes to a greater extent than surrounding tissue or cells.

If the dye-laden tumors or cells are then "irradiated" with laser light, a little-understood chemical process is set off that destroys the viral cells, the researcher said.

AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — is a fatal disease that cripples the body's ability to protect itself against infection. No cure has been found.

The disease can be transmitted through tainted blood donations and for that reason, the Red Cross and other blood-collection organizations now routinely screen all donated blood for the virus. Recent medical research indicates, however, it is possible for a donor to show no sign of the disease for some months after he is first exposed.

"The possibility that transfusionassociated AIDS may result from a blood unit ... that tested negative makes it imperative that a safe and effective means of viral killing be developed," Matthews' paper said.

"The system reported here offers promise as an effective approach to this problem."

Matthews said the Pentagon's Strategic Defense Initiative Organization is providing Baylor roughly $500,000 a year for work on the blood-cleansing study and several other projects involving the peaceful application of laser technologies that also are being explored for weapons.

The Star Wars funding will prove crucial in the effort to refine the new blood-cleansing system because it will allow the researchers to work with a device known as a free electron laser, Matthews said. Such a laser can be tuned to produce beams of concentrated light at different wavelengths and power, vastly simplifying experiments, he said.

QUINTS DEBUT — These "test-tube" quintuplets were born Monday afternoon to a suburban Detroit couple, Raymond and Michele L'Esperance, becoming the first set of quintts born in the United States as a result of in-vitro fertilization. All were doing well today, according to a hospital spokesman. The babies so far known only by initials, such as "Baby A." (AP Laserphoto)

Mother Elated Over Birth Of 'Test-Tube' Quintuplets

By ANGELA AHN
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The mother of babies believed to be the nation's first "test-tube" quintuplets says she's ecstatic about the five new additions to her family but "a nervous wreck" about raising eight children.

Michele L'Esperance, 34, delivered the babies by Caesarean section late Monday within four minutes. The four girls and one boy ranged in weight from 1 pound, 14.5 ounces to 3 pounds, 2.5 ounces, and were two months premature.

"They're beautiful," said Mrs. L'Esperance, who with her husband have three sons from previous marriages.

"I don't know that I can say anything and I don't know how I'm going to deal with it but we're going to take it a day at a time and see what happens. ... I'm excited. I'm a nervous wreck. I'm sore."

The quintts, believed to be the nation's first born through in vitro fertilization, were doing well, said Valerie Mahaczek, spokeswoman at William Beaumont Hospital in suburban Royal Oak.

A London woman gave birth to five test-tube babies in March 1986.

Mrs. L'Esperance was unable to conceive because her Fallopian tubes had been removed. Her eggs were fertilized in a culture dish with the father's sperm, and implanted in her womb.

Before the delivery, the parents instructed doctors not to consider aborting any of the fetuses to improve the chances of the others, Mahaczek said.

The babies were placed in the neonatal intensive care unit. Two required oxygen, and one, a girl, has been placed on a respirator, Mahaczek said.

"Her prognosis is still very good," Mahaczek said. "It's not unusual for premature babies to have lung problems, and she is stable."

The spokeswoman said specific medical conditions are not characterized for newborns because the conditions change too often.

Dr. Daniel Batton, a neonatologist, said the babies have a 90 to 95 percent chance of survival.

"We had no way of expecting them to do as well as they have," Mrs. L'Esperance's 27-year-old husband, Raymond, said Tuesday.

"I don't think that anybody can realize the relief that we felt," said L'Esperance, a corrections officer with the Macomb County Sheriff's Department. "It's the happiest moment of my life and my wife's. ... I'm ecstatic."

Mrs. L'Esperance, a former counselor for abused women, may be released from the hospital this weekend or early next week, Mahaczek said.

She said doctors have not estimated when the babies may go home.

The quintuplets weighed 3 pounds, 2.5 ounces; 2 pounds, 11.9 ounces; 1 pound, 14.5 ounces; 3 pounds, 1.4 ounces; and 2 pounds, 11 ounces. The parents have chosen the names Veronica, Erica, Alexandria, Danielle and Raymond, after his father.

The L'Esperances live in Clarkston with their sons, Brian, 2½, Christopher, 5 and Larry 7.

Growing Number Of Elderly Poses New Problems For World Society

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unprecedented rate of growth in the number of elderly people in the world will pose major questions for society in the future, the Census Bureau reported.

Today, 23 nations have more than 2 million residents aged 65 and over, and by the year 2025 that number is expected to grow to 50 nations, according to a Census study, "An Aging World," by Barbara Boyle Torrey, Kevin G. Kinsella and Cynthia M. Taeuber.

The growth of the number of elderly "is an extraordinary testimony to the improvement of our lives," the report said, noting that better health care has helped extend human lifespans. But, it added, "the growth of older populations poses a considerable challenge to public policy ..."

The number of people worldwide aged 65 and over is growing at 2.4 percent annually, much faster than the global population as a whole (an estimated 1.7 percent annually). The older group is expected to grow from 290 million people currently to 410 million by the year 2000, the study said.

In many nations, the study said, the elderly population is itself growing older, because of higher rates of increase of people aged 75 and over.

"The stunning growth of the elderly population has various economic implications for individuals, families and public policymakers and planners throughout the world, particularly in terms of meeting the relatively greater health needs of the older population," it observed.

Because of the greater number of elderly people, long-term, debilitating illness could become an acute problem in many developing nations where preventive health measures are less likely to occur, the study said.

While the study did not detail the elderly populations of every nation, it singled out several for mention, including:

— Sweden, with 17 percent of its population 65 and over in 1985, has the largest share of elderly of any major country. That is about the same proportion of elderly as in the population of Florida, a favorite retirement place.

— "The speed of Japan's aging is almost breathtaking." It will take only 26 years for Japan to double its proportion of elderly from 7 percent to 14 percent, compared with 66 years for the United States. Japan's life expectancy of 77 years is the highest of the world's developed nations.

— Women outlive men in virtually every nation, resulting in the prospect of ever more elderly widows in the world. In developed nations, as many as 70 percent of people aged 80 and over are female.

Solar Cells Can Help Trap The Light Fantastic

By IVARS PETERSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

With its streamlined profile and gleaming skin, the Sunrayer looks more like a giant, high-tech cockroach than a road vehicle. But this experimental car recently raced 1,950 miles across Australia to win what was billed as the world's first international, transcontinental road race for solar-powered vehicles.

Fueled only by sunlight, the Sunrayer averaged 43 miles per hour over five and a half days (including overnight stopovers) and finished more than two days ahead of its nearest rival. The win was not only a triumph for Detroit-based GM Hughes Electronics, which designed and built the car. It was a dramatic success for solar-cell technology, which many scientists believe is approaching the point of widespread practical use.

The Sunrayer is powered by an array of 7,200 solar cells similar to those used in communications satellites. The cells have an efficiency of 16.5 percent in converting sunlight to electricity among the highest of all commercially available units. (The cell powering a handheld calculator typically has an efficiency of less than 8 percent.) Each is about twice the size of a postage stamp and roughly the thickness of a business card. Covering 90 square feet of the vehicle's surface, they provide 150 volts at a peak power of 1,000 watts about the same as a hair dryer. The car, 19.7 feet long and 6.6 feet wide, weighs a mere 360 pounds. On a sunny day, it can go as fast as 45 miles per hour on solar energy alone. It also normally uses a battery of rechargeable silver-zinc cells to provide extra power for acceleration and climbing hills, allowing the car to reach 60 mph.

But don't expect to see it on the road in the near future. Solar cells must become much more efficient before they are cost-effective. Still, their time is coming, owing to recent innovations ranging from cells designed to operate in concentrated sunlight to units that work in the dark to others that imitate the solar-conversion process in green plants.

Several industrial and government laboratories are betting that solar-cell technology will grow into a billion-dollar industry by the year 2000, especially if oil prices rise again. Formally called a photovoltaic cell, a solar cell acts like a pump. Sunlight striking its surface releases an electrical charge, which is forced to move in a particular direction through a circuit. The push comes from electrical differences built into the cell's sandwich-like structure.

The most common type of solar cell is made from crystals of the semiconductor silicon and consists of several layers. Atop a glass or plastic base is a thin metallic strip which conducts electricity and acts as an electrical contact. On top of that go two layers of silicon. Traces of different impurities added to the silicon give each layer a different electrical property. The uppermost layer is a metallic grid.

When sunlight shines on the cell's surface, it frees electrons from silicon atoms in the exposed parts of the upper silicon layer. Because these loose electrons are repelled by the underlying silicon layer, they are forced to make their way through any path — in this case, a wire connecting the top grid to the lower contact — that bypasses the junction between the silicon layers. The current that flows along the wire can drive a motor or other electrical device.

The path from sunlight to electricity, however, is fraught with obstacles. Some sunlight is reflected off the cell's surface; and even when it is absorbed, materials like silicon take in only a fraction of the light available. Electrons, freed by the sunlight, sometimes bounce around randomly for a while instead of heading directly for the circuit.

Some electrons readily slip back into place among the silicon atoms where they started. All these losses lower the cell's efficiency. Researchers are looking now for new materials and structures that absorb light more effectively, and for ways to concentrate sunlight and reduce reflections.

The most efficient device yet produced — the point-contact photovoltaic cell, developed at Stanford University — has achieved an unprecedented 28.2 percent sunlight-to-electricity conversion efficiency in the laboratory.

power vehicles. It averaged 43 mph over nearly six days. (L.A. Times-Washington Post Photo)

Chicago Man Gives Up Shack For Home On New Mexico Range

NEW HOME — Harold Thomas talks with a New Mexico couple that has offered him a home and a job, enabling him to leave the shack he has called home in Chicago for the last nine months. (AP Laserphoto)

By ED WHITE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A homeless man who has lived in a shack for nine months has been offered a job in New Mexico, a bus ticket to get him there and two nights of free lodging at a posh lakeview hotel.

Harold Thomas, 35, has endured plenty of misfortune. Now, he's basking in acts of compassion.

"If he would like to lead a decent life, we'll give him one," said Ethel Gilman, 68, of Portales, N.M. "We were feeling so sorry for him in that cold. We're just common old ranch people who need help."

Last spring, Thomas and Tommy Ray, 37, built a crude home along the Chicago River: a shack made with rotted wood, sheet metal and canvas, just west of the downtown Loop.

The men, wearing layers of ill-fitting clothes, huddled around a fire last week to survive the below-zero temperatures that had numbed the Midwest.

Mrs. Gilman and her husband, Roy, 75, read about the men in a story by The Associated Press published Jan. 5 in the Portales News-Tribune. They called the AP's Chicago bureau to offer Thomas a job and a warm place to live, a few miles from the New Mexico-Texas border.

"We have a trailer house that he could stay in," Mrs. Gilman said. "We raise our own beef so we can keep his stomach full."

"If he wouldn't mind doing chores, I'm sure we can use him," she said. "My husband needs someone who doesn't mind doing things, like fixing a fence or branding a cow. He needs an all-around hand."

Radio station WGN is paying for Thomas' transportation. He'll leave Chicago on a bus Friday and arrive in New Mexico on Saturday. Before departing, he'll spend two nights free of charge at the Hyatt Regency Chicago.

"That's what we think WGN is all about — helping the people of Chicago," said the station's marketing manager, Betsy Riemenschneider. "We certainly can't help all of them, but we can one-by-one."

Thomas, a carpenter who said he hasn't been able to find full-time work in more than a year, came to the AP bureau last Friday to talk to the Gilmans by phone.

"Not in a million years did I think I'd be going to New Mexico," the Louisiana native said. "I'm willing to give it a shot. I talked to my friends, and they said, 'If you got the opportunity, take it.' Opportunities don't knock but once."

"The way I'm living right now is rough," he said.

Publicity also has helped Ray. He was picked up by relatives after a picture of the men was displayed in a Chicago newspaper, Thomas said.

"They didn't know where he had been," Thomas said. "They wanted him to come home."

Shelters have been jammed with many of the city's estimated 25,000 homeless since frigid blasts hit Chicago around New Year's Day.

But Thomas and Ray, wary of strangers in the shelters, pledged to stay in the open shack they built on a trash-strewn lot last spring. They often ate doughnuts or walked to the nearest soup kitchen for a meal. Water was stored in a plastic jug.

They said they were determined to find jobs and put a permanent roof over their heads.

Civilization Comes To Island Given Fame By Defoe

By WILLIAM R. LONG
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

ROBINSON CRUSOE ISLAND, Chile — In 1704, a Scottish seaman named Alexander Selkirk, who had quarreled with his captain, was put ashore on this remote Pacific island. Marooned for more than four years, Selkirk fought for survival in a classic contest of man against nature.

He ate the meat of wild goats, used their skins for shelter and clothing and trained them as pets. Two English ships rescued him, strong and healthy, in 1709.

Within three years, the two captains who found him, Woodes Rogers and Edward Cooke, had each published books that included accounts of his experiences. And seven years later came Daniel Defoe's "The Life and Strange Surprising Adventures of Robinson Crusoe, of York, Mariner."

Defoe never acknowledged directly that Selkirk was his model for Crusoe, but he insisted in a later edition that the novel related the real experiences of a well-known man. That man could only have been Selkirk, according to many historians and biographers.

Although Defoe changed many details — placing Crusoe's island off the Caribbean coast of South America, introducing a native companion called Friday and marooning his hero for 28 years — the parallels are unmistakable. Perhaps most notable are the outlandish goatskin hats and jackets made and worn by both fictional and real heroes in their lonely struggles to recreate the trappings of civilization.

Selkirk's goats are almost gone from this storybook island, which takes its name from Defoe's classic. Today it is the site of a Chilean fishing village with 580 people, and its trappings of civilization include airplanes, tourist inns and television.

New winds are stirring Robinson Crusoe Island, and some islanders are not entirely pleased with the changes they bring. Some say they could do without television, brought in mid-1986 by a big dish antenna that towers over the scrubby village plaza.

"There is no communication any more," complained Ariadne Chamorro, a young homemaker and mother. "You go out on the street now and no one is there. They are all hanging around the television."

But the winds of change keep blowing. Now the Chilean government has a development plan for the island. Although its full extent has not been announced, officials have talked about bringing in international tourist hotels, casino gambling and perhaps even offshore banks with secret, tax-free accounts.

All that has many local residents worried — afraid that the peaceful, easy-going ways of the island will be spoiled. One of them is Mario Contreras, a pilot who flies a small passenger plane between here and the Chilean mainland.

"The island will no longer be the way it is now," Contreras lamented. The way it is now, the village's pastel-colored houses and tall eucalyptus trees are spread over a narrow plain and foothills around Cumberland Bay, where small, wooden-hulled lobster boats bob at anchor on the tide. Children swim in clear, cool water by the village boat dock, and residents leave their doors unlocked at night.

Three modest inns accommodate between 500 and 1,000 visitors a year, mostly in the southern hemisphere summer between December and March.

The first public notice of the new development plan came last July when Gen. Augusto Pinochet, Chile's president, talked about it in an informal encounter with reporters. He said most of the development would be financed by private investors.

"Those who want to come in will have tax exemptions for 15, 30 or 40 years," Pinochet said. He predicted that the island "will be like a new Nassau," the capital of the Bahamas.

Geographically, the comparison is a long stretch. The Bahamas are within easy reach of Florida's prosperous southeast coast; Robinson Crusoe Island is 420 miles off the southwestern coast of South America.

A jagged uprising of volcanic palisades and peaks, it is the larger of the two main Juan Fernandez Islands, but only a small part of its 23,000 acres is flat enough for any kind of development.

Although most of the island is semi-arid, abundant rainfall on the steep upper slopes of the highest mountains nurtures a dense forest ecology, with many unique plant and bird varieties.

The fragile ecology has already suffered the ravages of human progress. Much of the natural forest has disappeared. The fragrant native sandalwood is extinct, and the chonta palm was endangered before a replanting project began a few years ago.

The island was uninhabited when Spanish navigator Juan Fernandez discovered it in the late 1500s on a voyage from Peru to Chile, the most remote of Spain's new American territories.

Before his trip, adverse coastal winds and currents caused ships to take several months to reach the Chilean port of Penco from Callao in Peru. By shifting his route far off the coast, Fernandez was able to make the trip in one month.

His early arrival was so astonishing that he was accused before the Inquisition in Lima, Peru, of witchcraft and of "navigating by diabolic art." The holy tribunal dismissed the charges after Fernandez explained the new route.

As part of an unsuccessful attempt to colonize his discovery, Fernandez

Former Judge And His Wife Devote Research To Shakespeare's Source

By JANET McCONAUGHEY
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ruth Loyd and Minos Miller turned minds trained in the law to historical research and say the evidence is clear: Shakespeare's plays and poems were written by the 17th earl of Oxford.

"The thing that impresses most lawyers and judges who have time to look into this question is that it's a matter of evidence as to who wrote the plays," says Minos Miller, a retired state judge from Jennings.

The question was debated at a mock trial in September, but the earl didn't get a really good shake, say Miller and his wife, an attorney and member of the Louisiana State University Board of Supervisors.

The three U.S. Supreme Court justices who presided over that hearing said that there was no clear and convincing evidence that the works were written by Edward de Vere, earl of Oxford during the reign of Queen Elizabeth I.

"The presiding judge, Justice

(William) Brennan, interrupted the argument extensively and hardly permitted the attorney, attorney (Peter A.) Jaszi, to argue," Miller said.

He noted that Jaszi was not an expert on the question but a law professor who had limited time to brief himself on a subject which people interested in history and literature have debated for centuries.

Furthermore, he said, the questions which Brennan asked Jaszi included many "old-time misrepresentations by the Stratfordians."

Stratfordians, for the uninitiated, are people who believe that the plays and poems attributed to Shakespeare really were written by William Shakespeare, son of a glover from Stratford-on-Avon.

The Millers make no claims to being the first to put forth the contention that Shakespeare was a pen name — that the man from Stratford was a country bumpkin who may have been illiterate and had no way to gather the dazzling knowledge shown in the plays.

Arguments that Sir Francis Bacon wrote Shakespeare were brought up in the 19th century. Christopher Marlowe also has had his adherents as author of the greatest body of plays and poetry ever written in English.

The Shakespeare Authorship Society, dedicated to proving that the plays were written by that long-dead earl of Oxford, was founded in the 1920s. The Millers joined in the late 1960s.

They became interested in the issue in 1958, when Miller read a law review article about it, but work and raising a family got in the way of research for nearly a decade.

When they started, the Millers learned that several of the books cited as major sources were out of print. So they decided to get them republished, putting their own money into the project.

Miller, who comes from a prominent Acadiana family, won't say how much they spent: "It's the kind of thing like when you go to buy a Rolls Royce. If you have to ask, you can't afford it."

Their edition of "Shakespeare Identified," a 1920 volume by J. Thomas Looney, is in two volumes, with extensive editorial notes by Ruth Loyd Miller — the historical researcher of the family.

Several articles by Mrs. Miller, who recently completed her master's

Filmmakers Find Spot On Potomac

By SANDRA SUGARWARA
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Former NBC news correspondent Peter Hackes was in Central Casting's office for only a few minutes last January when the owners of the Washington firm whisked him off to the Bristol Hotel for a motion picture audition.

A few weeks later, Hackes found himself nervously facing Jack Nicholson and making his acting debut in the hit movie "Broadcast News."

For Carol Ness, who co-founded Central Casting 18 years ago "when there wasn't any need" for a casting company in Washington, placing Hackes in the role of president of the movie's television network news department capped an extraordinary month. Her 10-person firm cast 65 speaking parts and 3,600 extras for "Broadcast News," adding $300,000 in gross revenue to Central Casting's coffers.

That undertaking was followed by "Suspect," which required Central Casting to cast 1,100 extras and 19 speaking parts. The two major movies helped push the company's revenue past $2.5 million last year, compared to $500,000 in 1980.

There's no doubt about it, according to Ness and others involved with filming in the Washington, Virginia and Maryland area: Hollywood has found the Potomac.

Long a scenic backdrop to countless movies, the Washington region now is taking a bigger role in the movie business. With movies like "Broadcast News" being filmed entirely on location in Washington, the region is growing in importance as a movie center, boosting related local businesses and bringing millions of dollars into the regional economy.

In addition to "Broadcast News" and "Suspect," among the movies filmed in or around the region in the past few years were "No Way Out," "Gardens of Stone" and "Dirty Dancing," parts of which were filmed at Mount Lake, a resort hotel near Roanoke, Va. A number of yet-to-be-released films also were made locally, including "Clara's Heart," starring Whoopi Goldberg; John Waters' "Hairspray;" "Li'l Rock and Roller," starring Justine Bateman; "Phoebe," starring Isabella Rossellini, and the NBC miniseries, "Lincoln."

Filming of "The Accidental Tourist," starring William Hurt, is about to begin in Baltimore, and Tri-Star Pictures is planning to film "Life After Life" in Washington this year.

Robert Conrad Turns New Series Into Project For His Entire Family

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert Conrad's eighth television series is "High Mountain Rangers" on CBS, but it could be subtitled "All in the Family."

Conrad stars in the midseason replacement as a retired and somewhat cantankerous ranger named Jesse Hawkes. His sons are played by Christian and Shane Conrad, the actor's real-life sons, probably the first time that's happened on TV since "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet," when Ricky and David Nelson played themselves.

But there's more. Conrad's daughter Joan is the executive producer. Another daughter, Nancy, and her husband, Norton Flynn, are the caterers. Conrad's 10-month-old daughter, Chelsea, made an appearance in the pilot last year. Conrad has eight children, and it's possible others might appear in the show.

Christian, 23, plays a ranger who uses high-tech methods in his work. Shane, 16, plays the son who still lives with Hawkes and has become something of a recluse. Most of the action revolves around rescues.

"No one gets shot, there are no car chases, no good cop-bad cop," said Conrad. "I think it's an alternative."

The show is filmed along the Sierra Nevada near Lake Tahoe, which isn't too far from Conrad's home in Bear Valley — except when it snows. Then it's easier to get to Los Angeles.

"We shot the movie pilot in Bear Valley, but it couldn't accommodate all the people we'd need for a series," said Conrad. "So we moved to Tahoe.

Good for them, bad for me, I have to lease a house."

Conrad has lived in Bear Valley full-time since 1980 and off-and-on since 1972. In 1972-74, when he was considering quitting the film business, he worked there as a deputy sheriff.

The idea for the series came to him, Conrad said, "When my drinking buddy and construction coordinator, Tom Hazlett, complained to me one day that there was nothing good to watch. I said, 'You watch "Cheers." And he said back to me, 'Why don't you do something again?'"

Later, Conrad said, on a walk from his home to the country store, he saw a new house and commented that it looked like a ranger station. "My friend Dick Olsen said it was a search-and-rescue station," he said. "As soon as I got to the store, I called Kim LeMasters at CBS on the phone and told him the idea for the show."

LeMasters, who has since been promoted to president of CBS Entertainment, asked Conrad to meet him that weekend. Steve Mills, head of CBS' movie department, was there, too, and Conrad got a go-ahead for a movie pilot.

Conrad's own company is making the series, and he has surrounded himself with friends and family. Roger Bacon, his long-time press agent, is producing.

Conrad has been in seven series, but his recent shows have not succeeded. Both "The Duke" in 1979 and "A Man Called Sloane" in 1979-80 came and went quickly. Several pilots, at least one using his sons, were not picked up by the networks.

IN THE FAMILY — Robert Conrad talks about his new series — his eighth — that features him as a retired ranger. It features his sons, Christian and Shane, and his daughter is the executive producer. Another daughter and her husband are the caterers to the show, making it a true family affair. (AP Laserphoto)

He said he had also turned down such series as "Dynasty," "Airwolf," "Casablanca" and "The A-Team."

Since "Baa Baa Black Sheep" in 1976-78, his last successful series, Conrad has worked mostly in television movies. In 1978 he played Pasquinel, the French-Canadian trapper in the miniseries "Centennial," undoubtedly the best performance of his career.

Last year, Conrad starred in "The Fifth Missile" in a role that played against his macho image. He played a naval officer who was secretly taking drugs for an illness so that he could stay on duty.

A mention of his image as a two-fisted tough guy drew a laugh.

"I established that macho image in 'Wild Wild West,'" he said. "I did all the dangerous stunts myself. The medium can perpetuate that image. I did a battery commercial that was a great put-on. And off camera I have been known to brawl occasionally."

"I've done some good, sensitive roles. 'The Confessions of a Married Man,' 'Centennial,' 'Will.' So, I think it's more image than reality. After 52 years I hope I have more substance than just an image."

'Three Men, A Baby' Tops Box Office List

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Three Men and a Baby" warmed the nation's moviegoers last weekend despite frigid weather by earning $8.1 million, tops for the week.

The take for Walt Disney Studios means the comedy about three bachelors raising a baby has earned nearly $95 million in its seven weeks. Despite foul weather Friday and Saturday through much of the country — or perhaps because of it — the top 10 films took in more than $35 million in a heavy weekend of moviegoing.

John Krier of Exhibitor Relations Co., which computes the box office tally, also suggested "People are picking up pictures they hadn't had a chance to see earlier."

Haven Becomes Home For Unwanted Wolves

By LISA LEVITT RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer
TENINO, Wash. (AP) — On Friday nights when the weather is warm, 200 humans gather around a fire, throw back their heads and howl at the moon. Thirty-five wolves howl back. Then everybody howls together.
No wolves have lived in the Washington wild for more than 50 years. When the forest echoes with wolf song, it can only mean Howl-In time at Wolf Haven America, one of the nation's largest private sanctuaries for an animal as revered and reviled as any on Earth.

"All the wolves that are here were virtually marked for death in one form or another, (except) those that were born here," said Wolf Haven founder and president Stephen Kuntz, standing in front of a pack of Eastern timber wolves sent to him after they were used in a University of Connecticut research project into wolf behavior. "No one else would take them."

Twelve years ago, Kuntz answered a newspaper ad offering wolf pups and bought himself more problem than pet. Within a few years, Blackfoot was eating the furniture and ripping up the rugs; Kuntz had to get him out of the house.
He hooked up with another wolf owner; within four years, their seven wolves had become 16. Kuntz and his wife, Linda, incorporated when the other owner left five years ago.
Now the non-profit Wolf Haven has 35 wolves, all subspecies of the gray wolf, as well as three foxes and three coyotes. Some of the Wolf Haven residents are extremely rare, like white Arctic wolves Lucan and Clementine. Others are extinct in the wild, such as Buffalo wolves Kathleen and Wind-song, whose ancestors roamed the Great Plains with the bison.

They live in 15 enclosures on 20 of the group's 60 acres about 80 miles south of Seattle, where guided tours are available on weekends year-round and Howl-Ins are held on summer Fridays.
New Role
LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS canceled her series, but Margaret Colin of the short-lived "Legwork" got a nice consolation prize — a guest spot on "Magnum, P.I.," which shoots in Hawaii.

"Some were family pets that people found didn't make very good pets," said Kuntz, adding that it is illegal for private citizens to keep wolves as pets or for any other purpose because they are an endangered species. "Some came from zoos that were overstocked. Some came from university projects. We took in these wolves and use them as educational tools for wolves in the wild."
What Kuntz and staff biologist Jack Laufer want people to know is that wolves are noble, shy, intelligent animals, intensely affectionate and loyal to their mates and pups and unfairly portrayed as savage and malicious. In fact, some of Wolf Haven's residents are downright friendly. Kathleen, the Buffalo wolf, leaps and licks like a happy puppy when Kuntz enters her enclosure.

"I see a lot of what we should be in them," Laufer said. "The family is much stronger for the wolf. There's no divorce, no welfare. They don't need wars. They live with what's there. We can't do that."
They say wolves generally run from man — the animals' No. 1 cause of death — and point out that there are no documented cases of wolves attacking humans in the wild.

"A lot of people come in here in the beginning (saying), 'Let's go see the vicious creature.' They leave with a whole new perspective," Kuntz said.
A little girl who'd had recurring nightmares for months about the evil wolves of fairy-tale fame received a therapeutic dose of reality at Wolf Haven.
"I took her on a personal tour and talked to her about the wolves," Kuntz said. "She said she was going home to throw away her Little Red Riding Hood book."

Island Sees Change

reportedly took two pairs of reddish-brown Pyrenees goats to the islands. Descendant goats, bearing a characteristic black cross on the shoulders, multiplied and flourished in the wild.

In the 1600s, English and French buccaneers used the Juan Fernandez Islands as a hideaway from which to raid Spanish settlements and ships. Later, English privateers on voyages of contraband and plunder stopped for rest, water, greens, goat meat and fish.

There are legends, still believed by some, of pirate treasures buried on the island. And there are documented histories of numerous marooned travelers, including five disgruntled crewmen left behind by pirate commander Edward Davis in 1687.

The island was then known as Mas a Tierra, or Closer to Land. The Spanish began to fortify it and use it as a prison colony in 1750.

In World War I, the German cruiser Dresden lost a brief battle to British warships within sight of Robinson Crusoe Island and sank after the crew abandoned ship. One crewman, Hugo Weber, stayed on the island until World War II and lived in a rustic cabin two miles from the village. Chileans dubbed him "The German Robinson."

In 1935, the Chilean government declared the islands a national park. In the late 1950s, Mas a Tierra was officially renamed Robinson Crusoe Island. The smaller and uninhabited Mas Afuera (Farther Out), 100 miles to the west, became Alexander Selkirk Island.

The national park service tries to enforce regulations against hunting the Pyrenees goats. Paredes said no more than 30 of the animals remain on Robinson Crusoe Island, while about 1,000 live on Alexander Selkirk Island, along with other breeds of wild goats.

The park service is also replanting chonta palms and other endangered native species. It recently imported more than 100 sandalwood plants from the Far East in an experimental project aimed at replacing the native variety.

Most island residents are less concerned about environmental problems than about village life under the administration of Navy Lt. Manuel Hernandez, the mayor. Also the captain of the port and the police magistrate, he acknowledged in an interview that he is unpopular in all three roles.

"I'm the bad guy in the movie," said Hernandez, 32, who has prematurely gray hair and wears white uniform shirts with black ties.

Most of the men on the island fish for a living, and they resent Hernandez's strict manner of enforcing a law against taking undersized lobsters. He also has irritated islanders by making them keep their cows off the streets and by poisoning dogs.

Let loose by their owners, dogs were overrunning the village, gathering in its shaded lanes and roaming in noisy packs. The mayor and some anonymous helpers started passing out pieces of meat laced with strychnine. By the mayor's count, 25 dogs have been killed, to the angry dismay of their owners.

Chorus Leader Tries To Keep Yiddish Music Alive

By ERICH SMITH
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After more than 45 years of work to keep Yiddish music alive, Morris Helzner is seeing a return of songs that once seemed to be fading away.

"Years ago, Yiddish culture was rejected," Helzner said. "Now, it's on the rise, especially among college students."

As director of the Workmen's Circle Chorus of Philadelphia, Helzner had an opportunity to track down dozens of songs over the years.

Thanks to a tip from a friend in New York, Helzner was outside a school in upper Manhattan several years ago when boxes of Yiddish music books were dragged out to be dumped in the trash.

"We saved it all," he said. The books were sent to the National Yiddish Book Center in Amherst, Mass.

"Many of these melodies have been with us for generations," Helzner said. He also has collected a special group of Yiddish music — songs written by victims of the Holocaust concentration camps.

"How could human beings subjected to dehumanizing conditions compose or produce a musical tone?" Helzner asked. "I think it is a sign of the indomitability of the human spirit."

For hundreds of years, Yiddish was the language of Jews in central and eastern Europe. It grew from German dialects of the Middle Ages and contained elements of Hebrew, Russian, Polish and the Romance languages. Its folklore is rich in songs, stories and proverbs.

Some of its most vivid expressions had enriched American speech: kibbitz (to meddle); mishmash (a confused mess); shnook (a dummy). But by the 1950s, Helzner said, Yiddish was in a long decline.

"The old concept of the melting pot was in power," he said. "Everybody was trying to become 'American.' Yiddish wasn't a fashionable thing."

What helped to end the melting pot myth, he believes, was the black consciousness movement of the '60s.

"As black people began pointing with pride to their heritage, other groups began to realize that they ought to pay attention to their history, too.

"Now, the accepted concept is the great American diversity. All kinds of groups have great pride in their accomplishments — not just blacks and Jews, but Poles, Armenians, Russians, and on and on."

One kind of Yiddish music that is on the return is Klezmer, which takes its name from itinerant musicians who once played at weddings and religious festivals.

The musicians worked with whatever instruments and materials were available as they presented the old folk tunes. Helzner played piano in one group.

"It was just the commonplace thing at the time," he said. "It didn't have the respectability that it has now."

Klezmer groups now have returned in Boston, New York and Los Angeles. Boston's Klezmer Conservancy Band even visited the Soviet Union in 1985, where they were expelled for meeting with dissidents. Helzner's Workmen's Circle

Chorus performs 10 to 15 dates a year, presenting songs of love and labor, folk music and adaptations of popular tunes, original material and songs from the Orthodox tradition. He takes pride in the young people who join the 50-member chorus.

"Some never spoke Yiddish before. To them, we explain the content of the songs. We must know what we are singing."

The Workmen's Circle was an organization for immigrants in large cities during the early part of the century. Helzner joined the Philadelphia group after graduating from college.

"I said I didn't know anything about the music, but they said they had a few books and I could learn. That's where it started." Helzner also gives about 30 lectures a year on the music — lectures that often include sing-alongs by the audience.

His search for music has taken him to two principal sources: the Yiddish theater which flourished in New York and eastern seaboard cities, and immigrants who carried folk songs with them to America.

"There is an inexhaustible supply," he said.

degree in English literature, were included in their edition of "Hidden Allusions in Shakespeare's Plays" by Eva Turner Clark.

The other volume they republished is "A Hundred Sundrie Flowres," a volume of poems published anonymously in 1573 and reprinted in 1575 as "Posies of George Gascoigne."

The book, say the Millers, was really written by Edward de Vere and pirated by Gascoigne while de Vere was out of the country.

"As soon as Oxford came back from Italy those books were taken off the market and confiscated by authorities," Miller said. "What I'm telling you is our research.... 'Posies' were confiscated. 'A Hundred Sundrie Flowres' was not."

Ruth Loyd Miller is thinking of going after a doctorate; her adviser, Albert Fields, said he is encouraging her to do so. She is a careful, thorough researcher and writes well, he said.

Has she convinced him that Oxford wrote the plays?

"I say I don't take sides in that I'm not involved with the research. I'm a teacher of the plays — you might say a scholarly researcher in the plays."

He said he isn't trying to prove either that Shakespeare or the earl of Oxford wrote the plays, and hasn't himself done the sort of research needed to challenge or defend either stand.

"If the evidence continues to cumulate it may be that more and more people will be convinced. I might be one of them. I don't know."

"But since I'm not a researcher in the area, I'm not going to say that I'm absolutely convinced. But I'm certainly not going to say... it's not honest scholarly research. Because it is." Mrs. Miller said that if she does go for a doctorate, she's already collected and written enough on the Shakespeare-Oxford debate to have a good start on her dissertation.

During her work toward her master's, she said, her professors often tried to steer her toward other topics.

"Some of my professors had twinkles in their eyes as they would assign research topics," she said. "One said, 'All right, Mrs. Miller, you're going to do this study for this paper — I think it was the one on Emily Dickinson — and there won't be any way to tie in Shakespeare.'"

"But, somewhere along the way, you can always find a way to tie in a paragraph or so."

 It is bad enough to be punished for your errors at the bridge table. But sometimes it seems that there is no justice—you might also get punished for an act that is beyond reproach.

No one can fault West's one heart opening bid. Once South responded to the double with one no trump, showing not only a stopper in the enemy suit but some 8-10 points, North wasted no time in reaching his optimum spot.

Since he had no sure re-entry, West made the perfectly reasonable lead of his fourth-best heart, and had he not opened the bidding, the contract would surely have been defeated. Declarer had only eight fast tricks, and with nothing to guide him, the obvious way to develop the ninth was via a club finesse. A winning hook or a 4-3 heart split would have assured the contract. Here, however, West could not have an opening bid without the club king and he was also marked with five hearts, so declarer had to engineer an end play to bring home his contract.

He won the heart lead in hand, then cashed four rounds of spades and the ace-king of diamonds, stripping all the cards he could from the West hand. He now needed some luck—West had to have started with no more than two diamonds.

With the groundwork laid, declarer could only hope for the best. He exited with a heart and sat back to see what would happen. West cashed his four heart tricks, and then, fortunately, he was down to nothing but clubs. He was forced to lead away from his king into declarer's combined tenace, allowing declarer to score two club tricks and his contract.

That Glorious Day In The Snow

By Julie Brew

As I stepped outside into the frigid air I witnessed a breath-taking view. The snow was not yet trodden across and the streets would not be filled with brown slush for another hour or so. I stood still on the iced-over driveway, almost afraid to step in my own front yard. But finally I took off and sprinted across the yard, falling every few steps. I loved feeling and hearing the crunch of fresh powder under my feet. Running back in the direction I came, I noticed that my best friend Robin had also come outside to romp in the snow. We built a few rather awkward-looking snowmen; and, before we knew it, our mothers were calling us in to lunch. Grudgingly I made my way in through the garage door and felt a welcome rush of warmth run through my chilly veins. Vegetable soup and a peanut-butter sandwich awaited me as momma helped to peel off each wet layer of clothing that clung to me. I stared out the kitchen window, hoping that the sun would not be able to penetrate the grayish clouds that hung overhead. As I returned to my haven of solitude I gazed into the sky and observed a flock of birds gliding silently across the dull expanse. I smelled instantly the woody fumes from the fireplaces of neighboring houses, the smoke from which drifted slowly above the trees. I, like most children, possessed the uncontrollable, burning desire to stomp through every iced-over puddle I could find. After participating in this ritual, I decided to build a fort. Robin had finished her lunch and, after hearing my idea, was more than happy to play my enemy. As we shot at each other with "stick" guns and snowballs I imagined that life could never be more fun and more exciting than this. As the day wore on I became increasingly aware that this playful day was coming to an end. I sat in the old rocker on the front porch and took in my surroundings. I noticed the trees, their branches heavy with snow. I noticed the pine needles on the Loblolly Pines that were covered in a cloak of ice. And, as I sat, I thought to myself concerning the snow's performance on this glorious day. The earth, to me, was the audience, applauding the snow with a silent, whispery wind that danced across the treetops. Just then I heard momma's sweet voice calling for me to come inside. My day was over as it seemed. As I walked toward the front door I felt a flake of snow land on my red nose. It had begun to snow. If only I could stay here forever-I would be so happy. But I heard momma's voice a second time and I knew that I must leave the snow to fall with no witness. Julie Brew, 17, a student at D.H. Conley High School wins this week's writing contest.

Enough Is Enough

By Bianca Murchison

It cost so much
The time has come
To stop such waste of chewing gum.

Because it's not your favorite cherry
But something called boysenberry.

And when you wake
Your gum's still there,
But mostly sticking in your hair.

You try a stick
And make a face
And you quickly spit it out
Someplace.

You take a piece to chew in bed,
But swiftly fall asleep instead;

Tar Heel Trivia

The Gatling Gun

In a North Carolina township located near the border of Virginia and the city of Murfreesboro, a doctor by the name of Richard Jordan Gatling developed a repeating gun which was later named in his honor. The Gatling gun was invented in 1862, but saw little use until after the Civil War when it served as a model for the machine gun. The Gatling gun was not the only invention created by the North Carolina native. He eventually became well known through the sale of numerous inventions designed for farmers.

SYRUPY TREATS — Maple syrup is a versatile, native American food that may be used in meats and in vegetables and desserts such as Maple Oatmeal

Cookies, Baked Acorn Squash and Corn Fritters. Try the accompanying recipes using syrup. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Syrup Can Add A Special Flavor To Food Choices

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

While syrup usually is synonymous with pancakes, it may be used to accent all foods, including meats, vegetables and desserts.

Pure maple syrup, a concentration of sap from the sugar maple or other various maples, is a versatile, native American food that may be traced from the turn of the century.

For example, the syrup gave the 1915 recipe of maple cookies a velvety taste with the combination of oats, cinnamon and other ingredients.

About 1922, Sweet Potato Pie became fashionable in America, and syrup enhanced the rich taste of the sweet potato, while 1959 found syrup complimenting ham with a sweet glaze.

Baked Acorn Squash and Maple Pecan Pie captured the scene in 1970, and corn fritters, a mainstay of the settlers, made a comeback in 1976. 1987 brought sophistication to the syrup in Glazed Stuff Onions, a fall and winter menu item.

Try these accompanying recipes using syrup.

MAPLE OATMEAL DROP COOKIES

- 1 3/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 cup shortening
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups uncooked old-fashioned oats
- 1 1/4 cups syrup
- 1 cup raisins
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts

Mix flour with baking powder, salt and cinnamon. Cream shortening. Add eggs one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. (Batter may appear curdled.) Add flour mixture and oats alternately with syrup, mixing well. Stir in raisins and nuts. Drop from teaspoon onto ungreased baking sheets. Bake at 375 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Makes about 5 dozen.

January A Great Month To Enjoy Nourishing Soup

January is National Soup Month ... for good reason! If kitchen faucets ran soup instead of water, it would take 20 years for a faucet running full force to release the amount of soup enjoyed in January! That's a lot of soup.

Celebrating National Soup Month can be as easy as heating up a quick bowl of canned soup. To make it even more special, here are a few simple serving suggestions. For example:

•Add chopped green chilies to a can of Home Cookin' country vegetable soup and top with crushed tortilla chips for a quick and easy soup with a South-of-the-Border flavor.

•Add an eight ounce can of chopped tomatoes and a touch of oregano to a can of chunky New England clam chowder. The result is a delightfully different chowder.

The following quick and easy recipes for hearty soups and side dishes also are excellent ways to celebrate National Soup Month and satisfy family and friends. Each combines exciting flavors with the great taste and convenience of soup.

CHEESY CHICKEN VEGETABLE SOUP
Cheesy Chicken Vegetable Soup is a quick, yet satisfying soup. Made with celery, zucchini, chicken and a generous dash of hot pepper sauce, Cheesy Chicken Vegetable Soup gets its wonderfully creamy and cheesy flavors from cheddar cheese and cream of potato soups.

Another quick and easy soup is Chili Mac. Broiled ground beef, chili powder, elbow macaroni, kidney beans and beef broth and zesty tomato soup/sauce are simmered and topped with sour cream to make this tasty soup.

Puree of Lettuce Soup, a cream-based soup made with creamy natural spinach soup, gets added flavor from green onion and sliced leaf lettuce.

A pouch of onion soup and recipe mix is all it takes to begin a warming Skillet Sausage 'n' Cheese Potato Pancake. This stove top dish can be served at brunch, lunch or dinner.

CHEESY CHICKEN VEGETABLE SOUP

- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 cups sliced zucchini
- 1 cup sliced carrots
- 1/2 cup sliced celery
- 1/2 cup chopped onions
- 1 large clove garlic, minced
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano leaves, crushed
- 1 can (11 ounces) condensed cheddar cheese soup
- 1 can (10-3/4 ounces) condensed cream of potato soup
- 1 soup can milk

- 1 soup can water
- 1-1/2 cups chopped cooked chicken
- Generous dash hot pepper sauce
- In 3-quart saucepan over medium heat, in hot butter, cook zucchini, carrots, celery, onions and garlic with oregano about 10 minutes or until tender, stirring occasionally.

Add soups, milk and water, stir until well blended. Stir in chicken and hot pepper sauce; heat through, stirring occasionally. Makes 8 cups or 6 servings.
Calories per serving: 263.
Sodium per serving: 872 milligrams.

- ### CHILI MAC
- 1-1/2 pounds ground beef
 - 2 medium cloves garlic, minced
 - 3 tablespoons chili powder
 - 1 can (10-1/2 ounces) condensed beef broth

Older Citizens Urged To Eat Their Veggies

By The Associated Press
Maintaining good nutrition gets harder, not easier, in later years, says a dietitian who advises older Americans to "eat all your veggies."

"Good nutrition for older people is not a matter of eating everything on your plate," says Janet Helm, of the American Dietetic Association, "but making sensible, informed choices about what you put on your plate."

Older adults face a number of obstacles to good nutrition, she says, from the possibility of poor teeth to a decline in the sense of taste and smell.

"When chewing is difficult, older people tend to select foods that are easy to eat, but lacking in essential nutrients," she says.

One solution, she says, is to increase consumption of foods rich in beta carotene, a source of vitamin A found in deep green and yellow fruits and vegetables.

Some choices: vegetables like romaine lettuce, spinach, carrots, broccoli and kale; fruits like peaches, cantaloupe, mangoes and apricots.

For those who have difficulty chewing or preparing vegetables, vegetable juices are a good substitute, she says.

HOT AND TASTY — Cheesy Chicken Vegetable Soup and Chili Mac are just two ideas for celebrating National Soup Month. Chase away the winter blues with a piping hot bowl of soup conveniently prepared by adding fresh ingredients to prepared soup.

Q. I read a news story that said "Warning! Potatoes can poison you." Is that article partially true, all true or all false? H.G., Medina, Ohio.

A. This question sounds like a multiple choice exam question, but like Ms. H.G., when I read a story about a food or nutrition in the newspaper or magazine I ask the same questions. I also test the information against my experience and knowledge. The article Ms. H.G. sent reports research done at Cornell University on glycoalkaloids found in potato skins. The report warned that you could get headaches, nausea, diarrhea or start vomiting after eating potato skins. As I read the article, I thought, it is true that many foods have naturally occurring toxins, substances that cause poison in them. But, this report of illness did not ring true with my experiences. I eat potato skins often. I enjoy the skin of baked potato, the skin on a boiled new potato and occasionally the appetizer of potato skins. I didn't recall having any of those illness symptoms after eating potato skins. So I decided that the article couldn't be "all true" for me. News reports are very brief compared to research reports. Sometimes a valuable piece of information is missing. I'm not sure, from reading the news clipping, if they were warning us about solanine or another compound.

Solanine is a substance in potatoes that gives it flavor. If you eat a lot of solanine, you could get a headache, fever, fatigue, cramps and diarrhea. That's not new information. We've known for a long time that potatoes damaged by bright light, extreme temperatures, bruising or aging can increase in the solanine content. A greenish tinge on the potato skin and/or sprouting are signs that solanine may be present in large amounts. For years home economists have taught us to cut away all the green areas and gouge out all sprouts before cooking potatoes with green tinge or sprouts. Also, try to buy unblemished potatoes and store in a cool, dark place. I have written to the Cornell researcher for a copy of his data report and will let you know what I find. In the meantime, if you get headaches, nausea or diarrhea after eating potato skins, stop eating them. As for me, I haven't eaten enough glycoalkaloids to get sick or I'm not sensitive to the amount that I eat. So, I'll keep eating those potato skins that provide some nutrients, dietary fibers and the taste I like.

This Chef Makes House Calls

By Tom Sietsema
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

His friends have long known that Mark Newville throws a good party. His boat picnics on the Potomac River have become something of a Fourth of July tradition, and at least a few close friends have been the grateful recipients of the chef's elaborate, multi-course rehearsal dinners for their wedding presents.

His at-home style of entertaining is no less original: Newville's idea of a cozy company meal might be to throw a few logs on the fire — followed by a whole fish, perhaps, or pork loin roast, or lamb — and serve dinner before the hearth.

Combining his knack for hosting with his culinary talents, Newville turned his free-time fun into a full-time job last spring, when he launched Visiting Chefs.

The fledgling operation, basically a one-man show, is described by its founder as "a chef service." Unlike a traditional caterer, Newville not only hand-selects all his meats, fish and produce, but prefers to cook in the homes of his clients — he even serves as the waiter for parties of 10 and less.

Although he prefers to cook for no more than 30 at a time, Newville can draw from a pool of free-lance waiters and chefs, including local Sicilian authority Mimmetta Lo Monte, for larger functions.

While he's partial to maintaining personalized menus and small guest lists, Newville wouldn't mind adding to his roster of chefs. In fact, the entrepreneur is just as interested in "promoting restaurants in a new way, not through wine dinners and tastings," but by hiring out professional restaurant chefs for a couple of evenings a month.

Working in a private home, the would-be agent explains, offers chefs

"a lot more direct feedback" than they might typically receive in a restaurant kitchen. Besides that, adds Newville, "it's less taxing" than cooking for the dining public.

The Visiting Chef brings to the table equal parts business experience (Newville managed Restaurant Nora and served as the manager of marketing and sales for Glorious Cafe before it closed last February) and culinary expertise. In addition to studying at the Culinary Institute of America, he served as head chef at New York's Lotos Club.

Chef Has Turned His Free-Time Fun Into A Full-Time Occupation

 And for Neville, the student's tour abroad consisted of biking through Normandy, Provence, and Brittany, a copy of the Gault-Millau guide in hand, and stopping in various restaurants not just to eat, but to work in the kitchens.
 As a result of the time spent in Europe, a lot of the young chef's menus emphasize French techniques. But the foods and wines of the Pacific Northwest have also been incorporated into his repertoire (he's particularly interested in seafood), as have the dishes of India (he considers his breads a specialty) and North Africa, where as a student Neville sampled the cuisines of Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia while conducting a research assignment.
 In the interests of health and nutrition, Neville cooks with little salt and butter, as evidenced in the following seafood recipe, teaming scallops with roasted red peppers.

 The dish is designed so that the bulk of the preparation can be done in advance, stored in the refrigerator if desired and popped into the oven for quick cooking at a moment's notice.
 Neville suggests serving the scallops with a side of wild rice and wild mushrooms, or saffron-tinged rice.
 Express-lane list: bell peppers, scallops, olive oil, cayenne pepper, garlic, fresh tarragon, balsamic vinegar
MARK NEVILLE'S BROCHETTE OF SCALLOPS AND ROASTED PEPPERS WITH RED PEPPER-TARRAGON RELISH
 (2 servings)
 2 red bell peppers
 1/2 pound scallops (quarter size)
 1 tablespoon olive oil

Salt and pepper to taste
 Cayenne pepper to taste
 3 cloves garlic, minced
 2 1/2 tablespoons fresh tarragon, minced, plus whole sprigs of fresh tarragon for garnish
 2 teaspoons balsamic vinegar
 Place peppers on a cookie sheet and roast beneath a broiler until charred on all sides, about 15 minutes. Remove to a deep bowl, cover with plastic wrap, and allow to cool. Remove skins and veins, leaving peppers in as large of pieces as possible.
 Cut half the peppers into 1-inch triangles; reserve the rest, including any juices, for the relish.
 Alternate pepper triangles with scallops on 5-inch wooden skewers. Place skewers in a shallow baking dish, drizzle with olive oil, some pepper juices, then season with salt, pepper, cayenne, 1 clove minced garlic and 1/2 tablespoon chopped tarragon.

 To make the relish, place remaining peppers, along with their juices, remaining garlic and tarragon in a blender or food processor and process till roughly chopped. Remove mixture to a serving dish, and stir in vinegar to taste.
 Note: All of the above may be done a day in advance.
 Just before serving, pre-heat the broiler, place skewers onto a lightly oiled broiler rack and cook until lightly browned on all sides, about 7 minutes.

 Spoon relish onto plates, remove scallops and peppers from the skewers directly on top of relish, and garnish with sprigs of fresh tarragon, if desired.

Life Can Still Be Sweet With Sugar-Free Foods

The current mood of the country is one of fitness and health. Modern hosts and hostesses should be considerate of guests' specific dietary preferences or requirements. Consider a best friend that's trying to lose those last five pounds, Uncle Harry who's recovering from a heart-related condition, a friend from the club who's sworn off sugar and salt and the diabetic who must carefully monitor food intake.

Most everyone these days would welcome a lighter, sugar-free version of tried and true favorites. That doesn't have to mean giving up desserts. To prove to family and friends that life can be sweet without sugar, why not have a sugar-free, guilt-free dessert buffet. It's an easy way to entertain and your family, friends and waistline will thank you for this updated sweets table.

Luscious, yet sugar-free, this dessert buffet is designed for the way we live today. It builds off old favorites but takes them one step further to remove sugar.

Experiment with time trusted recipes by using an artificial sweetener. Since it's a spoon-for-spoon replacement for sugar when used in recipes and since it can be used in baking, favorite recipes can now be sugar-free too. For a free recipe booklet of more sugar-free temptations write: Sugar-Free Dessert Buffet, Dept. STB, 2525 Armitage Ave., Melrose Park, IL 60160.

Fast-Food Chains Vie For Share Of Market

By ELAINE KURTENBACH
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — American-style roadside restaurants and fast-food shops, once an oddity in a nation of sushi, curry rice and noodle eaters, have staged a stunning invasion of Japan.

Some industries may complain that barriers keep them from penetrating the Japanese market. But the fast-food business offers a ray of hope for American trade-deficit watchers anxious for U.S. firms to get a foothold.

McDonald's Co. of Japan, by far the No. 1 fast-food purveyor in the nation, has opened 590 outlets that logged sales in 1986 of about $950 million. The 2,083 shops of its closest competitor, Japan's Daiei Group of western-style restaurants and coffee shops, earned about $780 million in food sales last year.

McDonald's, a 50-50 joint venture between the U.S. company and Japanese partners, has introduced playgrounds, drive-through restaurants and "Mac Call" — a public telephone for lonely diners — at some branches to attract still more customers.

The nearest competitor in the burger industry is Lotteria, a Japanese firm with 478 shops but less than half McDonald's total sales.

Industry experts say the $140 billion-a-year fast-food market is still growing, although slowly, and chain restaurants are fighting hard to boost sales to a fairly static customer base.

McDonald's began its charge into Japan in 1971, but it's no longer just a matter of burgers. There is a Kentucky Fried Chicken outlet, pizza joint or doughnut shop at virtually every major intersection in Tokyo.

Japanese are eating out more often and opting for hamburgers and pizza rather than traditional raw fish and rice meals that once dominated the market, says Kazutaka Kato of the Japan Food Service Industry Association.

The largest Japanese-food chain, Kozozushi Honbu's sushi shops, long the industry leader, had sales of $580 million in 1986, keeping its No. 8 industry position for the second straight year.

Changing, faster-paced lifestyles account for the fast-food boom, along with a growing number of working women without time to cook. Students, housewives and office workers are turning to convenient fast-foods and family restaurants.

Asked why she chose McDonald's, one young mother, balancing a toddler, a grocery bag and McDonald's bags in her arms, explained, "We're going out of town today, so we don't have time to stop and eat lunch. We'll eat in the car."

Kato said 25 cents of every food dollar spent in Japan goes to eating out, against 40 cents in the United States.

"In the next 10 years, as women continue to join the workforce and disposable income climbs, we expect that figure to climb to 40 cents here," Kato said.

The success of Denny's, No. 16 in the fast-food charts with $380 million in sales last year, attests to the growth of chain restaurants a cut above McDonald's in price. Mister Donut ranks 15th with $390 million in sales last year. American-chain pizza shops also are gaining, along with fancy ice-cream shops like Hobson's and Steve's.

The hamburger war has pitted McDonald's against look-alike Japanese rivals Mos Burger and Lotteria in a price-cutting battle.

McDonald's led the assault with its reduced-price $2.85 "Sankyu" (thank you) set, with a hamburger, fries and cola, and competitors followed suit by introducing similar sets — for $2.77.

All dollar figures are based on the exchange rate of 137 yen to the dollar prevailing early this past week.

Copycats have turned to loudspeakers in their battle to win the pocketbooks of fast-food aficionados in Tokyo. "Dee-licious food for less, compare, we're the cheapest," chirps one recorded message from a shop on an otherwise quiet Ginza streetcorner.

Many hole-in-the-wall shops have no tables. The price wars are most intense among curry, hamburger and coffee shops where diners stand while they eat — another manifestation of the fast pace of life in Japan.

But the battle is unlikely to drive prices down much further.

"Cutting costs is a major problem," sighed Tatsuki Kubo, public relations manager for McDonald's Japan. "Hamburger beef is expensive, so burgers that sell for one dollar in the United States cost about $2.10 in Japan."

Kubo said McDonald's could still make a profit with the $2.85 set, if it lures more customers, by cutting the more generous profits from fries and drinks and leaving the slimmer margin for burgers alone.

"Our competitors can't possibly be making money if they cut prices below $2.85" for the set, he said.

McDonald's deals in enormous volume. Last year it used 9,700 tons of beef, nearly a 10th of Japan's total 119,000 tons of beef imports.
