Black Leaders Debate Election Compromise

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Leaders of black civil rights organizations met Wednesday night to consider a Pitt County Board of Commissioners offer to negotiate a settlement to a suit challenging the method of electing members of the board.

But the Rev. Alonzo Mills, spokesman for the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice, one of the plaintiffs in the suit, said this morning that no decision was reached. "We met with our lawyers" to discuss a county board proposal to compromise on the "House-passed 6-3 version," Mills said. "We have information they would reconsider the House bill that was passed, then rejected by the Senate."

But Mills said, "We have not made any decision as to what will be the outcome. We have to come together ourselves" before any decision is made. "We discussed the possibility of compromising, but everyone last night stuck with the 6-0 proposal eliminating at-large seats. Commissioners last year adopted, and the General Assembly enacted into law, a 6-3 plan under which six commissioners would be elected from residency districts and three would be elected at large. At present, the six members of the board are required to live in districts, but are voted on at-large.

Justice Department approved of the new election method. The Justice Department, however, in a letter dated Dec. 29, rejected the 6-3 proposal. "Pertinent to our review was consideration of the strong opposition of the black community to the election method selected and the board's rejection of possible compromises. For example, one such alternative ... passed by the state House of Representatives on May 27, appeared largely to meet the board's stated non-racial reasons for wanting to include three at-large seats," the letter said in part.

That House-passed compromise called for nominating primaries for the three at-large seats — with nominees selected from areas combining predominately black Districts 1 and 2, Districts 3 and 6, and Districts 4 and 5 — before voting on the nominees at-large in the general election. And according to Mills, it was the House-passed compromise, which was later replaced in the Senate with the Justice Department-rejected 6-3 plan, that commissioners have proposed as a compromise to settle the suit. But because a number of the black leaders are "holding out for a six-district plan with no at-large," Mills said, "we're going to have another meeting to see if we can come up with something workable ... agreeable." Mills said representatives of the civil rights groups may meet with the Board of Commissioners to discuss a compromise.

Another Record

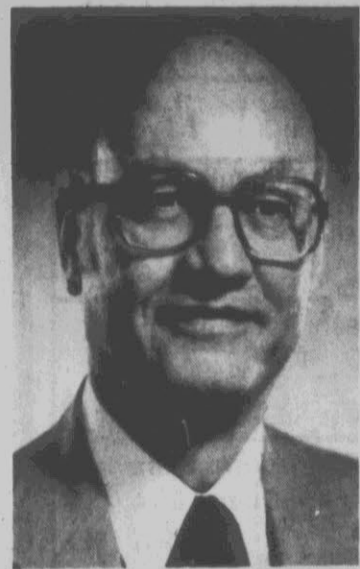

East Carolina University has a record spring semester enrollment of 14,075 students on campus, Registrar J. Gilbert Moore announced today. It marks the first time that spring semester enrollment has exceeded 14,000 students, Moore said. Last year's spring semester enrollment, which had been a record high, was 13,611. ECU's all-time record was for last fall when semester enrollment reached 14,882. Moore released spring registration figures showing an undergraduate enrollment of 10,316 and an undergraduate total including part-time students of 11,677. Graduate school totals were 2,398, Moore said. There are 6,092 male undergraduate students and 7,983 women undergraduates. In graduate school, there are 502 men and 1,128 women. ECU officials said the record spring semester enrollment was significant because it occurred at a time when college enrollments generally had been predicted to decline.

Meyer To Leave ECU In August

Dr. Elmer E. Meyer Jr., vice chancellor for student life at East Carolina University for almost nine years, has announced he will leave his post later this year. Meyer, 60, on Wednesday said he intends to retire effective Aug. 31. He said he plans to join his wife, Nancy, in the interior design business in Washington, D.C., and act as a freelance consultant. He was an assistant vice president for student and campus affairs and dean of students at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., for 11 years prior to becoming ECU's first vice chancellor for student life in August 1979. Meyer holds a doctorate in counseling and behavioral studies and higher education from the University of Wisconsin. "I have appreciated the opportunity to work with all the fine people at East Carolina University and I am proud of all the accomplishments and the fine efforts of the Division of Student Life staff over the years since the Division of Student Life was first organized in the summer of 1979," Meyer said in a letter to ECU Chancellor Richard R. Eakin. As student life vice chancellor, Meyer has administrative authority for student services, residence life and housing, public safety, student financial aid, student health services, intramural-recreational services, dining services, university unions, counseling center, career planning and placement and the program for hearing impaired. Under Meyer's leadership the Division of Student Life staff has grown to more than 1,000 employees including students in all departments. Record student enrollments have been established in each of the past 10 years. In an interview this morning, Meyer listed other accomplishments during his realm of leadership. "We improved student life and student services, air conditioned dorms (and) made additions to Mendenhall," the student center on campus. Renovations also were made on the student health center and dining facilities, he said. In addition, plans have been made for a new dining on the west campus in January 1989. "We tried to work very extensively with student groups and the student government and heeded to their advice" on various issues, he said. Meyer also applauded his staff and students for their support. "No vice chancellor can do it alone," he said. Dr. Richard Eakin, chancellor of the university, commended Meyer's service at ECU. "I have appreciated greatly the very able assistance that Dr. Meyer gave to me during my first few months at East Carolina," he said. "I look forward to working with Dr. Eakin said a formal agenda has not been set, with ECU officials preferring instead to conduct the breakfast over an unstructured, general discussion. A primary reason for the breakfast, according to the chancellor, is to provide an opportunity for Greenville's new mayor and city manager and other city department heads to develop a working relationship with college leaders. "We plan to share, with the city, the hopes and aspirations of the university as we look forward into the future," said Eakin, who's been the head of the university for approximately 10 months. Mayor Ed Carter said he is looking forward to the breakfast meeting. "I think it's an important beginning in developing regular communications with the college," Carter said. "I would like the city to develop a 'pro-active' relationship with ECU to identify and circumvent problems which might arise in the future." Carter said areas which might be addressed in current dialogue with the school include problems related to parking, the development of the downtown area, and joint city-college events, such as ECU student festivities on Halloween. A $25,000 check from state legislative funds to help pay for the Eugene West Amphitheater on the Town Common was presented to the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department Wednesday night.

State Sen. Tom Taft and state Rep. Ed Warren jointly presented the check to Recreation and Parks Commission Chairman Carl Wille and Jeannette Cox during the January meeting of the commission. Ms. Cox headed the public campaign last year to raise funds to construct the amphitheater.

Getting the money for the project, Taft said, "was really a fluke. Ed and I both attended the dedication of the amphitheater just a day before the end of the legislative session. In Raleigh the next day, it was discovered that there'd been some

East Carolina University will play host to Greenville's city staff, council members and mayor at a danish and coffee breakfast Friday. "It will give us the chance to get together and get to know each other," ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin said of the breakfast, which will be held at Mendenhall Student Center at 7:30 a.m. Eakin said a formal agenda has not

Jordan Stresses Differences With Martin

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who filed as a candidate for the Democratic nomination as governor in Raleigh Tuesday, told a gathering in Greenville Wednesday night that what "North Carolina needs for the next four years is not a governor who simply wants to occupy an office, but a governor who wants to do the job." During a speech at the American Legion building on St. Andrews Drive, Jordan said, "Yesterday I drove to Raleigh to file for governor carrying a load of lumber in a Jordan Lumber Company truck. It was fun, and this campaign is going to be a lot of fun." But Jordan said he drove the truck from his Mount Gilead home "because I want to make a point to you and to all the people of this state." "As we round the corner and head into the 1990s, North Carolina doesn't need a governor who just wants to be a passenger or a back-seat driver. It needs a governor who is in the driver's seat and has his hands on the steering wheel, his feet on the pedals and his eyes on the road ahead of us. "We don't need a sitting governor, we need a driving governor, and a working governor, and that is the kind of governor Bob Jordan is going to be," he said. According to Jordan, "I am running for governor ... because I believe that the people of this state want, expect and deserve a governor who will work as long and as hard for their future as they do. Democratic governors ... like Luther Hodges, Terry Sanford, Dan Moore, Bob Scott and Jim Hunt ... built a North Carolina that is recognized as an innovator and a leader among the states. "Our challenge," Jordan said, "is to see that we continue that tradition of vision and action and work that will not only maintain our position, but build an even greater tomorrow. "The difference between Governor Martin and me is that he believes the Hodges-Sanford-Hunt record is a record to sit on. I believe it is a record to build on." Jordan charged that "in every sense of the word, Jim Martin has been a sitting governor. In every sense of the word, Bob Jordan will be a working governor. "Yes, Jim Martin and I differ. When he opposed our basic education

"During a late Monday afternoon search, he was found in possession of marijuana. Cobb obviously panicked, ran from the office here while being questioned and climbed the fence to make his escape. This took place at about 6 p.m. Monday." The fence Cobb climbed over is a 10-foot fence topped with razor barb wire.

Cobb, according to Hardee, was found at about 1:30 a.m. this morning, asleep in a trailer in his home town of Pinetops. Israeli Errors

Not only has Israel contributed heavily to the current violence in the Gaza Strip, it has accomplished little with its response to the dissent.

Instead, its insistence on quieting protest with live ammunition and deporting incendiaries in occupied territories has further inflamed the unrest. These actions can only be termed oppressive.

Israel should recognize its responsibility in creating the current crisis. Its approach in occupation has been heavy-handed; its actions designed to create friction.

The current violence in the Gaza territory can be directly tied to a double standard policy of treatment of Arabs by Israelis. Israel has not only denied Arabs living in the country many rights accorded Jews, the Israelis have even afforded differing degrees of rights and treatment to Arabs.

For example, unrest inside Israel's pre-1967 borders is dealt with cautiously by police with mediation as the goal. Yet in the occupied territories, the Army uses live ammunition to quiet violence. Israel has committed a serious mistake by establishing this double standard, and the increased tension in Gaza and the West Bank in the past month is a by-product of the country's misjudgement.

Expelling agitators will not purge the country of its problems. Getting rid of outspoken critics seldom ends violence and rioting. Israel has too much experience to believe this simplistic approach will work and enough savvy to know the rest of the world can see through it. Both Arabs and Israelis feel they have a God-given right to the occupied territory the other doesn't have. That attitude and the conflicts it creates cannot be negated by forcing those who verbalize it to leave the country.

Ignoring the United Nations' disapproval of deportation was also a serious error. The move is clearly a violation of the Geneva Covenant — an agreement Israel is obligated to recognize.

Israel plays a special role in the Middle East — the role of a lone democracy in what otherwise is a region ruled by relative irrationality. As this oasis of reason, it bears the responsibility for democratic behavior and is expected to adhere to a higher-than-normal code of international behavior.

Expulsion of troublemakers is not consistent with these expectations and the proposal has only brought Israel global condemnation and an official reprimand from its most powerful friend, the United States.

Israel's actions in dealing with violence in occupied territories have been brutal, and the country's leaders can accept responsibility for the bloodshed in Gaza. The Israelis have taken too many excesses, and now are repressing dissent from the victims of these excesses.

At issue in the current Gaza violence is the reluctance on the part of Israel to move toward a dialogue to end the unrest. Logic and negotiation are the tools to ease the conflict, but Israel, on whose shoulders rests the primary responsibility for implementing this approach, appears unwilling to use them.

Wanted: Decorum

The signs of the times have arrived on the new U.S. 264 throughway from Farmville to Greenville.

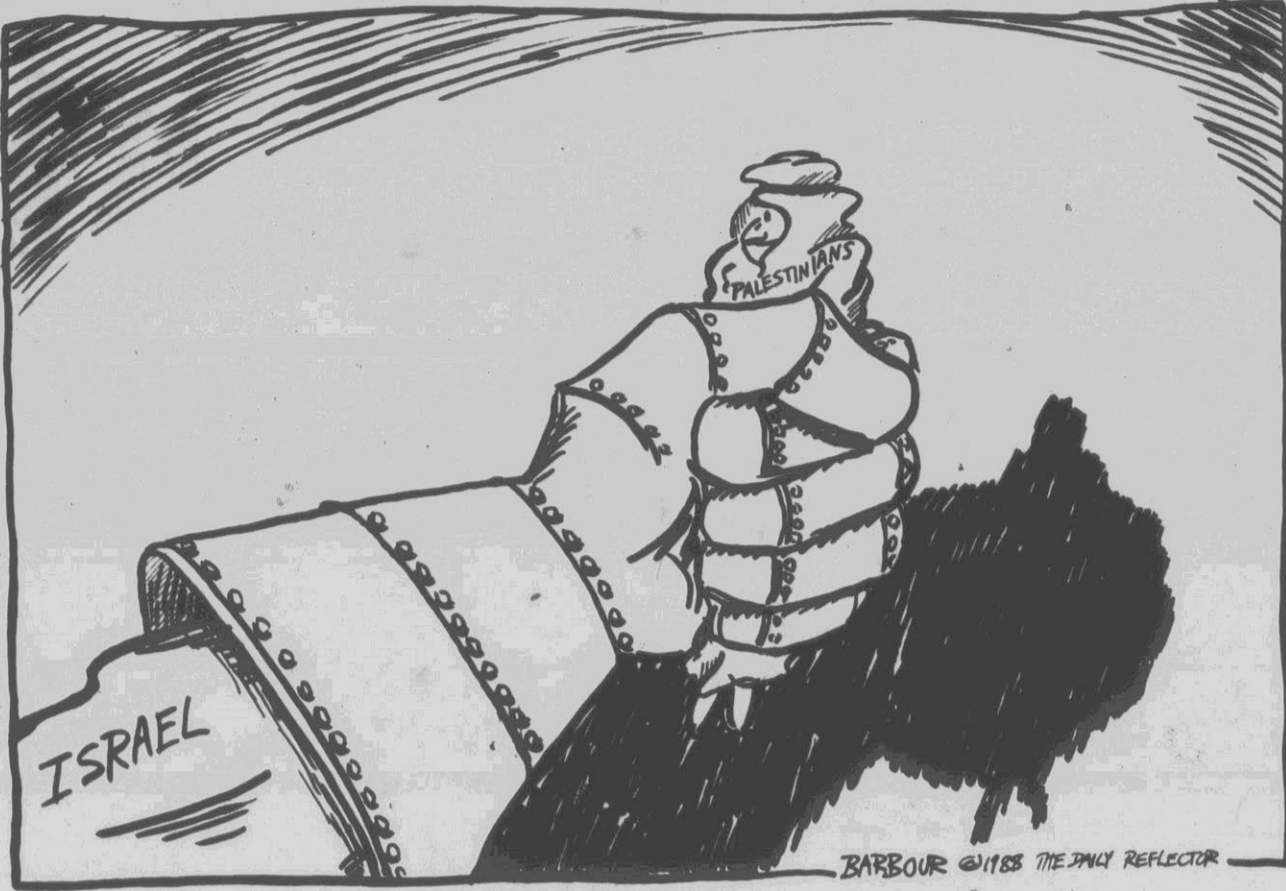

Even before the road was open, the steel supports for billboards were in place. By the time traffic was rolling, messages announcing space for rent went up. The speed with which the signs were erected was amazing. It's a real shame the roads the billboards adorn can't be built that quickly.

Watching the haste with which the signs went up on this particular stretch of roadway was a bit disturbing. The new U.S. 264 route, like many other recently-built four-lane highways, passes through attractive countryside, far from the urban clutter endemic to most roadways. Traveling these routes is pleasant, and it is regrettable these scenic drives are so quickly spoiled by structures.

It would be naive to suggest that billboards have no place on new roads. Information is essential to the traveler. Some form of decorum might be necessary, however. Perhaps it is time for the state and counties to start looking at protecting these rural corridors through which the state's new roadways pass. Simple but reasonable controls on road signs would be a good way to encourage orderly growth along the way.

Support by the county's citizens might encourage local officials to ask state lawmakers to investigate some form of protection for Pitt's new roads. That move might, in turn, create statewide interest in the issue.

Traveling these new rural corridors — new U.S. 264 and 64, for example, are appealing drives. With some foresight and restraint, they can remain that way.

Palestinian Nationalism Here To Stay

'Forty years of fallacious reasoning and futile efforts to bury the Palestine question have created the present impasse. A few well-informed and courageous Israelis now see that the Palestinian dream can no longer be deferred.'

In their rebellion against Israeli occupation, the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza are expressing a fervent nationalism that is proving difficult to suppress and that is unlikely to disappear.

The essence of that nationalism can be found in the Arabic word "sumud," which means steadfast resistance, firm determination, the will to persist. Resisting, even in the face of superior odds, means for Palestinians the right to determine their own destiny. What makes them so sure of themselves, so confident of the justice of their cause, so unwilling to back down?

In the world today, 4.7 million Palestinians carry the collective memory of a historic injustice committed against them in 1947-49. For 40 years their experiences have largely been ignored or dismissed as irrelevant. Only lately have Israeli historians, digging through recently declassified archives, revealed the truth of the Palestinian claim.

The research done by Benny Morris, Tom Segev, Simha Flapan and Yitzhak Levi explodes long-established and still currently held myths. It is no longer honest to say that the Arabs simply rejected the 1947 partition through which the state of Israel was established. It is historically untrue that the Arabs, unified in their opposition to Israel, sought the destruction of the new Jewish state while its hand was always extended in peace. It is now more accurate to say that the majority of Palestinians were driven out of their homes by direct Israeli military action. All this, and more, adds up to historic indictment and should completely alter the rhetoric about the conflict.

In exile the Palestinians clung to the hope of going back to reconstruct their shattered lives. The theme of return came to dominate their literature and folklore. They were also pragmatic enough to begin the process of rebuilding; they organized institutions to end their fragmentation, and invested heavily in their children's education — often to the point of major sacrifice. Quickly they became the new elite in the Middle East, with the highest rate of literacy and the greatest ratio of university graduates. This well-educated population, politically active and aware, finds the status quo, imposed by Israel as an immutable reality, totally unacceptable.

In June, 1967, Israel occupied the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, and a new cycle of Israeli oppression and Palestinian resistance began. For the 1.5 million who live under occupation, daily life is a litany of horrors. Ironically, the horrors are imposed by the Israeli army under the 1945 emergency regulations that the British put into place to curtail the activities of Jewish terrorists led by Yitzhak Shamir (the present prime minister) and Menachem Begin (a former prime minister).

Jewish settlers on the West Bank, living on land confiscated from Arabs, enjoy the protection of civilian law. The Arabs live under the rule of military occupation, which allows imprisonment without charges, torture and deportation, and the blowing up of homes; in the name of "administration" it means land confiscation, denial of water rights, and the forced closing of businesses and schools and universities — sometimes for months on end.

The injustice extends to economic matters. In a pattern resembling apartheid, Arab workers commute from the territories to jobs that Israelis consider beneath their dignity. The Palestinians are heavily taxed, but receive few benefits. For example, Israelis receive cost-of-living increases to accommodate inflation, but Palestinians do not.

This "iron fist" policy (as Israelis themselves call it) is designed to suppress, if not altogether eliminate, all manifestations of Palestinian nationalism and to make life so unbearable that many Palestinians will be forced to emigrate. Sumud under such conditions becomes a major accomplishment.

Meron Benvenisti, the former deputy mayor of Jerusalem who heads the West Bank Data Project, says that 500,000 out of a total population of 1.5 million in the occupied areas have spent some time in jail. The majority are high-school and college students. Most of those killed in the recent uprising were young men. The Palestinians feel that, having been robbed of the past, Israel is now trying to rob them of their future.

Israeli officials are convinced that they can solve the problem in the occupied areas while ignoring Palestinian national rights. Some even argue that Jordan is the Palestinian homeland. Palestinian nationalism, however, is separate and distinct.

No Palestinian wants to suffer the tutelage of Jordan or any other Arab government. In fact, although the current uprising is basically a reaction against Israeli occupation, it also represents frustration and anger with the Arab governments' refusal to assist the achievement of Palestinian self-determination.

Forty years of fallacious reasoning and futile efforts to bury the Palestine question have created the present impasse. A few well-informed and courageous Israelis now see that the Palestinian dream can no longer be deferred. Alarmed by the future, people like Yehoshafat Harkabi, Matti Peled and others are calling for peace with the Palestinians that is based on acceptance of the right to a state of their own, and negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization. The Palestinians also are anxious for peace; they are willing to accept a settlement on the basis of coexistence and equality.

Hart Supporters Focus On Issues

Ava Nell Specks has been following presidential politics for about 50 years, but nobody ever asked for her views until three weeks ago, when a national opinion survey called her at home in Leitchfield, Ky., to find out who she is backing in this year's election.

"I told them I'm for Gary Hart," the talkative, friendly grandmother related the other day. "I have admired that man. I like his ideas, what he's saying. I just think... he's smart, he would make a good president, he deserves a chance."

And as Ava Specks goes, opinion polls and in-depth interviews suggest, so goes about a quarter of the Democratic Party around the country.

While establishment politicians and political analysts have reached a consensus that Hart's reborn presidential campaign is a loser, the polls reveal that a lot of Democrats still like what he has to say — Donna Rice or no Donna Rice.

In short, the people who have given Hart first place in many local and national surveys seem to be saying that issues matter more than indiscretions.

These polls suggest that Hart has two assets more precious than gold for any political campaign: a coherent message and a broad national base of people who respond to it favorably. Those assets, in turn, have led some political analysts inside and outside Hart's camp to conclude that the reborn Hart campaign might even turn into a winner if a few cards fall right.

"There's a reason Hart emerged from the pack (in 1984)," said a senior Washington tactician now aligned with another Democratic hopeful. "He has something to say to people, and a lot of them like it enough to go along with him."

The negatives resulting from last year's personal and political disasters have made Hart the target of denunciation and ridicule from columnists, cartoonists and party professionals around the country. He has been compared to everybody from Harold Stassen to Don Giovanni.

But some political insiders propose another comparison — an analogy to another well-known candidate who was largely written off by the political establishment despite strong showings in the opinion polls.

"Can a man with negatives of huge proportions turn them around?" asked Carl Wagner, a veteran Democratic campaigner who once worked for Hart and for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "Can a guy who is completely rejected by the establishment of his party win? Can a guy who everybody in the other party would love to run against win the nomination?"

"Yes, he can. His name is Ronald Reagan, and he did it in 1980 even though he had negatives in January that were pretty close to what Hart has now. He won because he had an agenda people could buy."

One problem with this theory may be that Hart's negatives are different from the problems Reagan had to overcome. Reagan in 1980 never admitted he was too old or too conservative to be elected. Hart, in contrast, has conceded publicly that he is guilty of some of the moral and judgmental failings that have given him high negative ratings in opinion surveys. And it may be that American voters will never forgive Hart for the events of last spring.

But Wagner says the Democratic race is still too "wide open" to predict a victory for Hart or anyone else.

Like Wagner, Hart's campaign aides frequently cite the Reagan analogy. They say Reagan's 1980 experience demonstrates that winning a primary can cure almost any ill in American politics.

Hart's strategy centers on a strong showing or outright victory in one of the four early Democratic contests — Iowa, New Hampshire, South Dakota or Wyoming — three of which he won in 1984. "Gary's theory is that if we can win something," said a close friend of Hart who is working on the campaign, "then the personal stuff might be over and he can win it on the issues."

Hart is still talking about a "light infantry" campaign with no staff or headquarters and just enough money to let the candidate take his thoughts to the voters. In fact, his campaign has already grown to the size of a small platoon — a press secretary, a two-person field staff and a Washington coordinator signed on last week.

The campaign has so far met every state deadline for ballot and delegate filings. The field staff has rounded up hundreds of volunteers in key primary states. Hart has won victories in the federal courts and the Federal Election Commission that should provide him with about $1 million in spending money this month. Aides report a decent but not overwhelming response to the new campaign's first fund-raising appeal.

But Hart will probably never catch up with his Democratic rivals in these organizational areas. Instead, he will rely on his stand on issues or at least, the voters' sense that he has a firm stand on the issues-which seems to be the factor that has won him the lead in many polls.

Strength For Today

Most people live not in homes but in houses. Many individuals living under the same roof and related to each other are not families in the moral and emotional sense of the word but are enemies in all but name. The place many people call home is only a hotel where those who bear the same name come to eat and sleep and go their separate ways. Men and women who are indifferent to each other have not established a home but a residence. What does it take to make a home? The answer is simple — it takes love. We pay our way in the home and through life not by writing checks or handing our pay envelopes, but by thinking first of the people around us and putting ourselves aside that may be happy.

No Tears For These Market Victims

The stock market's plunge has hit one group of American workers especially hard. Its members made less money — a lot less — last year than the year before. But their story, even when it is known, will not move many people to tears or donations.

The group in question? The top managers of America's largest corporations. They stand to lose so much from the market's woes because so much of their compensation now comes in the form of stock options, stock appreciation rights, and other stock-price-related devices. What has happened to them tells us much about how — as well as how much — American executives are paid and, so the theory goes, motivated. It also suggests that some changes may be in order.

Let's start with how and how much. In most U.S. firms, the pay received by the management team is geared to the chief executive's compensation; as his or her pay package the options allow him or her to buy.

This kind of disparity can create serious problems of equity and morale. Older executives are typically the ones granted stock options at lower prices; younger managers are more likely to have received their options at higher prices. Those in the latter group, who represent the future of their firms, may feel unfairly treated with respect to what is, after all, probably a large portion of their potential compensation.

If the market's steep drop presages a longer-term decline or several years of flat prices, senior executives in many corporations will be divided for some time to come into two classes: those who made a bundle on their stock options during the glory

Analysis

First, stock-price-related plans have come to function increasingly not as mechanisms for giving executives long-term ownership positions, but as elements of short-term compensation. When executives exercise stock options and then immediately sell their shares, they build current income, not enduring equity. Stock-price-related plans were meant to generate lasting loyalties and commitments; practice has been departing from theory.

Second, the experience of the past five years suggests that in any event, the linkage between stock-price-related plans and the incentives for individual managers is much weaker than had been supposed. Between the summer of 1982 and the fall of 1987, the Dow-Jones Industrial Average rose from about 770 to over 2700. Over that same period, the price-earnings ratio of the stock market as a whole moved from six to 22; in other words, in 1987 the market was willing to pay an average of more than three times what it paid in 1982 for a dollar of earnings.

For most executives, these massive shifts in market behavior meant that their stock options increased rapidly in value even without any special efforts on their part. Similarly, when the market dropped sharply, extraordinarily effective managers were hurt along with their less-productive colleagues.

In many large public companies, stock options granted executives over the last several decades have cumulated to more than 20 percent of currently outstanding shares. This means that the relative ownership position of outsiders holding stock days of the bull market and those who suffered when the boom was over. And if there are any doubts about whether this schism will create resentment, it should be noted that some of the bundles made were very large.

The five-year upward march of share prices led corporations to rely more heavily on stock-price-related compensation programs, in the apparent belief that large grants of stock options and stock appreciation rights would not cost much because the rising market would pay for them. Some firms were, frankly, profligate in awarding this sort of ostensibly cut-rate compensation. There is no question but that literally thousands of executives became millionaires during the market's climb — and many of these in companies that were not really performing well.

When stock-price-related plans came into currency in the late 1950s, they were intended to serve as incentives for executives to build, and manage well, the firms that employed them. The theory underlying these plans was that if executives were granted long-term ownership stakes in their companies, they would be especially assiduous in furthering shareholder interests. The end of the bull market forces us to face up to the fact that stock options, stock appreciation rights, and other stock-price-related devices are no longer doing the motivational job for which they were intended. This is so for two reasons.

has been eroded. But there is no credible evidence that the companies have benefited from better management.

During the stock market's remarkable five-year climb, stock-price-related devices were an enormous boon to executives — and no great bargain for the firms that employed them. Now, in the wake of the market's crash, is the time for companies to reconsider the role of these devices in the compensation of their managers.

moves up or, more rarely, down, so too does the compensation of other senior managers. So looking at the compensation of CEO's can give us a good indication of trends in compensation for senior managers as a group.

Stock-price-related compensation plans have become a near-standard feature of executive compensation in corporate America: About 90 percent of top management in the nation's largest firms participate in such plans. Moreover, the amounts involved are very substantial. While most executives don't take their profits in any given year, Forbes magazine's analysis of the 1986 compensation of 800 CEO's found that 32.5 percent reported realized profits from stock-price-related plans worth, on average, close to 75 percent of salary and bonus. (The executives received an average $750,000 in salary and bonus in 1986 and stock-price-related profits of $560,000; the corresponding figures in 1985 were $683,900 and $481,000.)

With so much money — and so high a proportion of their compensation — on the line, executives clearly had a lot to lose in the market's nosedive. What may not be so clear is how the combination of these two factors — the importance of stock-price-related devices in executive compensation and the recent drop in stock prices — threatens to distort pay patterns for, and create divisiveness in, the executive groups in many U.S. companies.

Executives at the same level in a firm — for example, two senior vice presidents with comparable responsibilities — may have received their stock options or stock appreciation rights at different times and different prices. Executive A, who was granted options years ago at relatively low prices, may still be in position to profit handsomely from those options even after the market crash. Executive B, whose options are of more recent vintage, may find his or her shares substantially underwater — that is, the stock price on the open market is below the price at which

Robertson Says Tobacco Stand Won't Scare Voters

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer
LITCHFIELD BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Republican presidential hopeful Pat Robertson, venturing into the South Carolina tobacco country, said he doesn't expect to lose any votes because of his controversial plan to phase out the state's most valuable cash crop.

"I think the people of the South like the truth. They know what the truth is. There's no way I'm going to hurt my campaign by telling it like it is," Robertson told reporters Wednesday during the last of three stops on a day-long swing through the state.

Robertson, citing the health costs of tobacco, has proposed the federal government buy up tobacco allotments of farmers over a decade and give tobacco companies a tax holiday of up to six years as they phase out their investment in tobacco.

Tobacco growers would be urged to diversify into other crops under the Robertson plan.

Tobacco is South Carolina's largest cash crop and brings in about $156 million annually. The state ranks fifth nationally in production of the leaf.

But Robertson said the national health bill for the thousands of people suffering tobacco-related illnesses amounts to far more than the income from tobacco.

"There's no way we can justify taking the lives of several hundred thousand people a year for profit," he said. "I'm not one who waffles around on key issues and tries to buy off special interests."

He called tobacco growers "fine people who are growing a product which medical science has indicated is harmful to human life. I know these farmers would like a way out of this dilemma."

Robertson then delivered a half-hour speech to about 200 people gathered at a shopping mall, but did not mention the tobacco plan. Litchfield Beach is located on the eastern edge of the state's main tobacco growing area.

Robertson's proposals were not well-received by state tobacco growers.

Joe King, a Florence County grower and head of the state's 300-member Tobacco Association, called the proposal "ludicrous and asinine."

King said tobacco-growers might have an interest in the plan if the buy-up was high enough. But plans to eliminate the tobacco industry would have enormous economic impact in South Carolina's tobacco-growing region.

"If you eliminated tobacco from the Pee Dee, it would be like an economic wasteland," he said.

State Sen. Thomas Smith, D-Florence, agreed with King's assessment of the plan, citing its potential cost.

"How's he going to do that and balance the federal budget?" Smith said. "The amount would be astronomical, to begin with."

"What he's suggested is a practical impossibility," Smith said.

Earlier, during an appearance in Columbia shortly after he filed for the state's March 5 GOP primary, Robertson said, "I'm not about to lose any votes on this. I'm on the side of the angels on this one."

He called South Carolina "the trigger of the Super Tuesday primary." The state's GOP primary comes three days before the Super Tuesday round of primaries in 20 predominantly Southern states.

The nation's three top tobacco producers — North Carolina, Kentucky and Tennessee hold primaries on Super Tuesday.

In Columbia, Robertson said he made the tobacco proposal several months ago during an appearance in Raleigh, N.C. He accused the campaign of Republican Jack Kemp of distributing recent remarks that appear in this month's Conservative Digest.

During the Litchfield appearance, Robertson was asked what would become of the thousands of growers and others who depend on tobacco for a living.

The candidate said his proposal would involve government payments for the allotments and growers "will have a lot of money in their pockets when it's over with."

"There'll be no economic danger to anybody," he said. "They'll have a lot more money in the tobacco states than they did before and at the same time we won't be spending the enormous amount of money we spend on health care."

Asked if he might later pursue a similar elimination of other potentially harmful products such as alcohol, Robertson said "No I don't think so. This is one that involves a large agricultural subsidy."

"The question I was first asked would I be in favor of continuing tobacco subsidies which amount to about $300 million a year. This is my alternative to that," he said.

Official Says 80 Percent Of State Inmates Hooked On Alcohol, Drugs

ASHEVILLE (AP) — As many as four out of five inmates in the state prison system have problems with alcohol or drugs, says a state official who is helping set up a new program to aid in their treatment.

"If you walk into a room of offenders and ask how many of them abuse substances or were under the influence when they committed their crime, from 60 to 80 percent would raise their hands," said Lattie Baker, Department of Correction assistant secretary for substance abuse services.

"If you look at the increasing numbers of people coming into prison because of DWI alone (driving while impaired), you see the overwhelming need to provide specialized services for these kinds of people," he said.

Many of the state's prisons offer or contract for substance abuse counseling, but the supply does not meet the demand, Baker said. DOC hopes to correct the situation by operating a 100-bed inpatient treatment facility at Wayne Correctional Center in Goldsboro.

Last year the General Assembly appropriated $334,638 to operate the treatment center in 1988, and already it is beginning to accept inmates, Baker told the Asheville Citizen.

The Goldsboro program, modeled after a successful program in Minnesota, will focus on recovery and

If the Goldsboro center works out, DOC will consider asking the Legislature to create other centers in the state, Baker said.

"If these men and women are to have a chance of succeeding when they are returned to society, then it is our responsibility to help them break the cycle of alcohol and drug dependency that set them upon the path to prison," said DOC Secretary Aaron Johnson.

During fiscal year 1986-1987, almost 2,600 people convicted of alcohol and drug-related offenses entered North Carolina prisons, according to DOC estimates. Another 15,000 people were on either probation or parole for similar crimes.

Those figures do not reflect the number of people who were convicted of criminal acts in which alcohol and drugs were involved, Baker said.

Schools Plan AIDS Data With English

GREENSBORO (AP) — Greensboro high school students soon will find a new kind of literature in their English classes — AIDS pamphlets.

In May, the Greensboro school system will begin teaching AIDS prevention to its 6,600 high school students. Administrators say they decided to teach the course during English classes because English is the only subject that all students must take every year.

The AIDS curriculum is written just for seventh-graders, but Greensboro will include grades 8-12 this first year to teach all students about AIDS prevention before they graduate.

However, the English teacher will not always be the AIDS instructor. Principals will decide which teachers to train for the curriculum.

The system's 3,000 seventh- and eighth-graders will be taught AIDS prevention in their regular health classes. Next year, only seventh-graders will get AIDS education.

The lessons, which will require at least two hours of instruction, will explain measures that will lessen the risk of contracting AIDS, including use of condoms during sexual activity.

But, Associate Superintendent Sammie Campbell said, the curriculum will give much greater emphasis to not engaging in sexual intercourse and not using drugs as the only sure way to avoid AIDS.

Campbell unveiled preliminary plans for the curriculum to the Greensboro Board of Education's curriculum committee Wednesday.

Check Conference

WINTON, N.C. (AP) — Investigators met Wednesday to sort out charges against a group believed responsible for passing more than $30,000 worth of forged checks across eastern North Carolina, authorities said.

The checks, forged on the accounts of Lewis Brothers and Union Sand and Gravel were cashed in Tarboro, Rocky Mount, Franklinton, Yadkinville, Raleigh, Murfreesboro, Ahoskie, Elizabeth City, Williamston and Rich Square, according to Hertford County detective Ernest Sharp.

At least 14 of the checks stolen in Edgecombe County also were cashed in Greenville, according to Greenville Police Department detective G.W. Wilson.

IN THE STATE

Hearing

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Environmentalists and supporters of Champion International Paper Corp.'s Canton mill squared off over the future of the Pigeon River at a hearing before federal regulators today.

The river starts south of Canton as a clear trout stream and flows north into Tennessee. North of the mill, the river is stained a dark coffee color.

The draft of a wastewater discharge permit from the Environmental Protection Agency would require Champion to reduce its discharge of waste wood pulp into the river to 50 color units, about the color of ginger ale.

Few at today's hearing were expected to agree with the EPA.

Champion officials say the standards in the EPA draft permit would force them to close the plant, western North Carolina's largest employer. Champion employs 2,200, roughly half of Canton's population.

Snow Melt

RALEIGH (AP) — A gradual warming trend across the state has helped ease potentially dangerous flooding that could have occurred if all of last week's snow had melted at once, a National Weather Service meteorologist says.

"There are no problems," said Jan Price, a meteorologist with the weather service in Raleigh. "The snow melt has been pretty slow. If it had melted all in one day, there could have been some serious problems."

Price also said that last week's snow, which amounted to more than a foot in some areas of the state, would help keep the soil moist for the upcoming crop planting season. A lack of moisture during the winter months the last two years have helped contribute to summer droughts, he said.

Profits Possible

NEW YORK (AP) — The clients of a 23-year-old investment adviser accused of spending $8 million of their money on his own lavish purchases, including art, jewelry, real estate and cars, could recover their money at a profit, his lawyer says.

"It is anticipated that these assets can be liquidated in an orderly manner and at a profit," Peter Morrison, lawyer for former Duke University student David Peter Bloom, said Wednesday.

Bloom's spending spree included $4.7 million for paintings, a $1.9 million beach house, an $830,000 condominium, $230,000 worth of automobiles and a $195,000 necklace, the Securities and Exchange Commission said in a civil action disclosed Tuesday.

Derailment

RIEGELWOOD, N.C. (AP) — A caboose with three crewmen aboard and six cars loaded with raw wood products derailed Wednesday night, spilling their contents and injuring the crewmen, a CSX Transportation spokesman said.

CSX spokesman Norm Going said the three unidentified men were transported to a Wilmington hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

Columbus County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Kenneth Squires said the derailment occurred between the Federal Paper Company woodyard and Riegelwood.

Chemical Spill

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Several drums of a chemical used as a disinfectant for purifying water leaked from drums at the Pittsboro Water Treatment Plant, but officials said Wednesday the spill did not pose environmental problems.

Bryson Jenkins, an N.C. Division of Environmental Management spokeswoman, said three 30-gallon drums of potassium manganate spilled Tuesday afternoon, but only five gallons of the substance leaked outside the building. She said her department was notified of the spill at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Ms. Jenkins said the spill had been cleaned up and posed no danger to the community.

Pond Accident

WAGRAM, N.C. (AP) — A Scotland County man was missing and another suffered from exposure Wednesday afternoon after they fell through ice while walking on a frozen private pond about three miles west of Wagram, authorities say.

The identity of the missing victim had not been released late Wednesday night.

Authorities searched for a body in the icy water for more than three hours, but called off the search about 9:10 p.m., according to Scotland County Sheriff Wayne Bryant. He said rescue workers would resume their search early today.

Jessie Todd Boyd was treated for exposure at Scotland Memorial Hospital in Laurinburg and released at 10:15 p.m. Wednesday.

UNC Grant

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation of Winston-Salem has awarded a $62,400 grant to the Center for Early Adolescence at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for its national campaign to fight adolescent illiteracy, school officials said.

The grant will help develop a UNC center project called "Middle Grades Assessment of Literacy," a program that schools can use to improve the teaching of reading and writing, Judy Davidson, project director of the Project on Adolescent Literacy, said Wednesday.

Police Assault

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Police have charged the owner and operator of a popular city newsstand Tuesday with assaulting two female undercover police officers as they investigated obscenity reports in his shop last fall.

Lincoln Banks Everhart Jr., 58, faces one charge each of assault, and assault and battery on a female. The alleged assaults involved B.C. McMasters and L.S. Lamb, and occurred last October in a back room of Everhart's business, Parker's News.

Martin Questions Funding Of Suit

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says it is possible that Democrats financed a lawsuit by three fired state employees to gain access to his administration's personnel records and private notes on personnel matters.

"And it makes you wonder just what's behind all of this," Martin said. "I've sometimes wondered if what they're trying to do is be able to identify holdover Democrats, the people we kept, who helped us identify some of the bad things that were going on. Because then if they ever got back into power, they would be able to settle up old scores," Martin said.

"There's no telling what all is behind this. We don't know who is paying for it. There's so much about it that is strange."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, Martin's likely opponent in this year's gubernatorial race, and state Democratic chairman Jim Van Hecke denied any involvement in the suit.

Martin brought up the matter on his own in response to a reporter's question about Jordan's allegation that Martin had not kept a promise to protect state employees from "political harassment and interference."

Jordan made the statement Tuesday in a campaign speech.

Martin said, "Anybody who really knows what's going on will tell you that this has been the cleanest administration ever with respect to respecting the rights of state employees."

Van Hecke said in a telephone interview, "We have no relationship whatsoever to that suit."

"It's really uncalled for for him (Martin) to suggest that Democrats were involved with it," Jordan said. "Those cases, as far as I know, were supported and brought by the parties involved."

The suit was filed by Bobby Stott, Joseph Register and Lonnie Michael Clayton, all mid-level state employees.

Martin said all three were dismissed "for cause," meaning they either had failed to support his administration's programs or had been involved in political intimidation of other employees before he took office.

Stott, Register and Clayton contend they were fired because they are Democrats.

Last month, U.S. District Judge Earl Britt agreed to add as many as 450 former state employees to the suit as potential beneficiaries.

That is the number of state employees exempted from the State Personnel Act who have been fired, demoted or transferred because of politics, according to Melinda Lawrence, a Raleigh lawyer representing Stott, Register and Clayton.

The state attorney general's office, representing Martin, disputes the figure.

Employees subject to the State Personnel Act are shielded from politically motivated dismissal. State law exempts some employees — largely policymakers — from the act's protections.

The suit is scheduled for trial in April.

Court Ruling On Censorship Draws Journalists' Protests

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's new ruling on censorship of public school students is drawing mixed reviews, along with conflicting predictions over how school officials will use their new-found control.

The court, in a 5-3 ruling Wednesday, gave public school officials broad authority to censor student newspapers and other forms of student expression.

In a case from Hazelwood, Mo., the court said judicial intervention to protect students' free-speech rights is warranted "only when the decision to censor a school-sponsored publication, theatrical production or other vehicle of student expression has no valid educational purpose."

"This decision cuts off the First Amendment legs of the student press," said Paul McMasters, national freedom of information chairman for the Society of Professional Journalists, SDX.

"At least five people on the Supreme Court seem to think it's all right for students to study about constitutional freedoms but they can't enjoy them until they graduate," McMasters said.

One of the three students who sued in 1983, Leslie Smart, now a senior majoring in political science at Washington University in St. Louis, said she thought the ruling would disillusion aspiring journalists.

"They won't even have a voice," Smart said. "Anytime you give someone complete control over free speech, no matter what age, you're making a bunch of robots."

But many educators predicted that school officials will practice restraint in curbing student expression.

Officials "generally appreciate the importance of the journalistic experience for students and will very likely try not to intervene unless they feel it is absolutely necessary," said Gary Marx, associate director of the American Association of School Administrators.

The Missouri school's principal, Robert Reynolds, said, "There needs to be someone at the helm to provide for continuity because every year you have a new journalism class and they come in just as green as could be. I don't think the newspaper here is a public forum. It's a lab exercise."

Reynolds said he did not order the stories deleted from the Spectrum, a school-sponsored newspaper produced by students in a journalism class, because of their subject matter but rather because he did not think they were well balanced or written in a responsible way.

One of the articles dealt with teenage pregnancy, and consisted of personal accounts by three Hazelwood East students who became pregnant. Their names were changed in an attempt to keep their identities secret.

The second article dealt with the effect of divorce on children, and quoted from interviews with students.

Wednesday's Supreme Court decision did not use the same standard of review used by the court in a landmark 1969 decision involving the wearing of anti-war armbands by high school students.

In that decision, the court said public schools may curtail students' free-speech rights only when the student expression is materially disruptive or invades the rights of others.

That 1969 standard, White said, "need not also be the standard for determining when a school may refuse to lend its name and resources to the dissemination of public expression."

He added: "A school must be able to take into account the emotional maturity of the intended audience in determining whether to disseminate student speech on potentially sensitive topics, which might range from the existence of Santa Claus in an elementary school setting to the particulars of teen-age sexual activity in a high school setting."

White noted that the court was not saying whether the same degree of judicial deference to educators' censorship decisions "is appropriate with respect to school-sponsored expressive activities at the college and university level."

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices John Paul Stevens, Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia joined White's opinion.

Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun dissented.

Writing for the three, Brennan said the court was giving too much deference to school officials.

"The public educator's task is weighty and delicate indeed," Brennan said. "We have not, however, hesitated to intervene where their decisions run afoul of the Constitution."

Brennan added, "Even in its capacity as educator the state may not assume Orwellian guardianship of the public mind. The mere fact of school sponsorship does not, as the court suggests, license such thought control in the high school."

In other decisions, the court: —Upheld by a 4-4 vote a New York City affirmative action plan designed to promote more blacks and Hispanics within the city's police department.

—Ruled unanimously in a case from Alabama that federal officials are not entitled to blanket immunity from being sued when accused of causing personal injuries.

—Upheld, 5-3, the death sentence of a convicted Louisiana murderer in a ruling that gives states more leeway in determining which murderers should be executed.

IRS Says Texaco Owes $6.5 Billion

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc., which recently agreed to hand over $3 billion to Pennzoil Co. to settle a takeover battle, says it has been told by the Internal Revenue Service it owes $6.5 billion in back taxes.

Other oil companies also may be facing huge bills from the IRS because it apparently is attempting to apply a recently developed theory on the way some taxes should have been paid between 1979 and 1981, Texaco said Wednesday.

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — This year's college freshmen are more concerned about striking it rich and less worried about developing a meaningful philosophy of life than any of their counterparts in the past 20 years, according to a survey.

The annual UCLA-American Council on Education survey of nearly 290,000 freshmen, released Wednesday, also found a record number planning to major in business (24.6 percent), a resurgence in interest in teaching, and a continuing slump in interest in engineering and computer careers.

Leaders of UCLA's Higher Education Research Institute and the council were holding a news conference today at the National Press Club to discuss the survey results.

The report is the 22nd annual survey on college freshmen's attitudes. Sponsors said the survey sample was adjusted statistically to give an indication of the views of all 1.6 million students who embarked on college careers last fall.

As usual, the freshmen at America's two- and four-year colleges and universities evince a curious melange of views on social and political issues and personal mores.

For instance, 53.1 percent said they supported "laws prohibiting homosexual relations." But 58.7 percent supported legal abortion, 73.8 percent opposed increased defense spending and 47.6 percent said colleges should not invest in companies that do business in South Africa.

The survey report, "The American Freshman: National Norms for Fall 1987," said that, "despite the widespread publicity about the threat of AIDS, the proportion of freshmen who agree that 'if two people really like each other it's all right for them to have sex even if they have known each other for only a short time' reached a new high of 51.9 percent in 1987."

That was up from 46.8 percent in 1984, the last time the question was asked.

An all-time high of 52.1 percent of the freshmen agreed "a couple should live together before marriage," and a new question on getting married found that 59.9 percent said that was a top goal.

The survey found that "being very well off financially" is one of the top goals of college freshmen.

"A record number (75.6 percent) identify this as an essential or very important life goal in 1987, up from 73.2 percent last year, 70.9 percent in 1985 and nearly double the level recorded in 1970 (39.1 percent)," the report said.

In contrast, only 39.4 percent listed "developing a meaningful philosophy of life" as a top goal. Twenty years earlier, 82.9 percent of the freshman survey in 1967 listed that as an essential goal.

"These trends over the past 20 years suggest a gradual but profound shift not only in students' values but also in the values of the larger society," the report said.

The concern over financial matters shows up in the students' intended majors, with a record 24.6 percent planning to major in business, up from 24.1 percent in 1986 and more than double the 1966 figure of 11.6 percent.

But interest in the generally lower-paying teaching field also has increased, "by more than two-thirds since 1982," according to the survey. "This year 8.1 percent of the students entering college plan to pursue careers as elementary or secondary school teachers, up from 7.3 percent last year and the low point of 4.7 percent in 1982."

But those figures are still far lower than those of a generation earlier. Back in 1968, 23.5 percent expressed interest in teaching.

The proportion of freshmen women interested in nursing careers has fallen by more than half since 1983:

from 8.4 percent then to 4 percent now.

"Career preference for medicine almost equals the interest in nursing among all freshmen women. And in four-year institutions, more women would prefer to become doctors than nurses," said Kenneth C. Green, associate director of the study.

Only 8.5 percent of the entering freshmen expressed interest in engineering, down from 9.7 percent in 1986 and 12 percent in 1982. Just 2.7 percent of the freshman said they were aiming to become computer programmers or systems analysts, down from 3.5 percent in 1986 and 8.8 percent in 1982.

There was little change in the political labels students chose for themselves. Fifty-six percent said they were middle-of-the-road; 22.2 percent liberal; 18.3 percent conservative; 2.3 percent far left, and 1.3 percent far right.

Six percent graduated from high school in 1986 or earlier. Seventy-two percent turned 18 in 1987; 3 percent were younger than that, the rest older. Eighty-six percent were white, 8.7 percent black and the rest other minorities.

Superpowers Resume Arms Talks

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. and Soviet arms control negotiators today opened a new round of talks aimed at concluding a treaty to cut intercontinental nuclear forces by 50 percent.

Such a treaty could be signed at a summit meeting in Moscow planned for later this year.

The first meeting was a lunch hosted by the Soviets for the top negotiators — Alexei Obukhov of the Soviet Union and Max Kampelman of the United States.

Obukhov, accompanied by negotiators Lem Masterkov and Yuri Kusnetsov, greeted the U.S. representatives in front of the Soviet mission, where the meeting was held.

Kampelman, wearing an overcoat in the near-freezing temperatures, was accompanied by S. Read Hammer, Masterkov's counterpart in the intercontinental forces talks (START), and Henry Cooper, Kusnetsov's counterpart in the talks on space and defense systems.

Obukhov said the agreements reached at the superpower summit in Washington last month were a "fine basis for our work here." He declined further comment.

The talks entered their ninth round following a 7½-week break.

Both Kampelman and Obukhov said in separate arrival statements that it would be possible for the two sides to complete a treaty in time for the summit. However, they noted the two sides remain far apart in some areas.

Kampelman said Wednesday that "there are serious remaining differences of importance which must be resolved."

The two sides have agreed on general areas such as reducing their intercontinental forces to 6,000 warheads and 1,600 delivery vehicles, and they are working on a joint draft treaty text.

The joint text, however, contains many bracketed passages reflecting the two sides' different positions. For example, they must still agree on a timetable for reductions and on anti-cheating, or verification measures.

Another potential obstacle is Soviet opposition to the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, which is being dealt by Cooper and Kusnetsov.

The Soviets have made clear that they oppose SDI, commonly called "Star Wars," saying it could lead to an arms race in space. The Soviets have linked a START agreement to resolution of the SDI question.

Kampelman on Wednesday reiterated the U.S. position that the two areas should not be linked.

The dispute focuses on the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty. Both sides have agreed to continue abiding by this treaty for a period of time to be worked out by the negotiators.

The Soviets have said the treaty precludes some planned tests of SDI. The United States has contended that it does not.

The United States and Soviet Union recently signed a treaty scrapping all intermediate-range nuclear missiles. The treaty must be approved by Congress.

Such missiles have a range of 600 to 3,400 miles, whereas intercontinental, or long-range missiles, have a range of more than 3,400 miles.

Army Faces Fight Over Church Site

Reagan, Takeshita Stressing Dollar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress says the Army isn't providing adequate religious facilities for workers at a remote weapons testing facility in Utah where Mormon Church officials were denied land to build a church.

Congress gave the Army until March 1 to complete a study and a plan at Dugway Proving Grounds after the Mormon Church asked Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, to intercede in its fight to build a new church house.

Originally, Garn had proposed legislation ordering the Army to turn over a 2.5-acre site to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, otherwise known as the Mormon Church, after the Army had refused to lease the site to the church.

Garn's proposal was subsequently modified. It was adopted by a House-Senate conference committee and put into the $600 billion catchall appropriations bill that Congress passed and President Reagan signed into law in December.

The measure directs the secretary of the Army to "report the findings of the study together with a plan for addressing the lack of educational facilities to the committees on appropriations no later than 1 March, 1988."

The provision has drawn fire from a lobbying group that monitors issues involving the separation of church and state.

The Mormons have put the Army in a tricky situation at Dugway.

On the one hand, base commanders are obligated to make sure the religious needs of the community are met. That means the Army has to provide the necessary space for church programs.

On the other hand, officials at Dugway say Army regulations prevent them from leasing land to Mormons because buildings must be non-denominational. Only Congress can change the rules, said Kathleen Whitaker, Dugway's spokeswoman.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and new Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita are using their first summit meeting to reassure nervous financial markets about the value of the U.S. dollar.

The leaders of the world's two largest economies disclosed in a joint statement Wednesday that their governments "have developed arrangements" for providing additional funds to support the battered currency.

The joint statement also said the Bank of Japan would make efforts to "accommodate declining short-term interest rates" in that country.

The Reagan administration has long urged Japan to lower its interest rates. That could help prop up the dollar without requiring the United States to raise its own interest rates — the usual prescription for supporting a currency but a move that could hasten a recession, given the fragility of the U.S. economy in the aftermath of the stock market collapse.

Takeshita was to face questions from reporters at a luncheon today at the National Press Club and to meet later in the day with Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. He leaves for Canada on Friday.

AMA Wants Boards To Hear Lawsuits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokesman for the American Medical Association said today its plan to take medical malpractice cases away from the courts would benefit patients and weed out bad doctors.

Dr. James S. Todd, AMA senior deputy vice president, said the proposal would open the way for any patient to file a claim against a negligent doctor. He said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" that state agencies envisioned under the plan would not be dominated by doctors.

The AMA and 34 groups representing medical specialists proposed the program Wednesday as a possible solution to spiraling malpractice insurance costs.

The proposal was criticized as soon as it was announced. Lawyers' groups said it threatened patients' rights and was probably unconstitutional. Doctors affiliated with a consumer advocacy group dubbed it "reckless and dangerous."

Both proponents and critics agreed it was a radical approach to a serious problem.

"We want anybody who has been injured as a result of negligence to be able to ... get fair and prompt compensation. We believe this ... can be done in an objective fashion rather than in the emotional adversary atmosphere of the courtroom," Todd said on ABC.

"We ought to try something different. ... We need to do something about those physicians that are practicing on the margin. This proposal does just that," he said.

The AMA, in a news conference Wednesday, said the program would increase the number but not the size of paid claims, eliminate windfall judgments, provide free attorneys, speed up malpractice awards and stabilize insurance rates.

The doctors' groups are not pushing for the plan to be adopted in every state but say they want one or two to try it, to see how it works as an alternative to the judicial process.

Metabolism As Some Couples Are Technology Junkies

Weight Factor Being Studied

By CARLA McCLAIN
The Tucson Citizen

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Scientists had long suspected but had been unable to prove that the potential for getting fat is linked to the body's metabolic rate — how fast calories are burned to produce energy.

Now, however, federally funded studies of one of the country's chronically overweight populations, the Pima Indians of southern Arizona, are confirming that fat people are likely to have a "slow" metabolism. Lean people are likely to have faster metabolism.

The same studies also found that how much a person "fidgets" — stays active while at rest — is linked to his metabolic rate and therefore his weight. Fidgeting probably is inherited.

"These results among the Pimas can be applied to the general population," said Clifton Bogardus, chief of clinical diabetic research at the National Institutes of Health facility in Phoenix.

The key to proving the link between metabolism and weight was the use of a specially designed, high-technology device known as a respiratory chamber, in which a person's metabolic activity can be measured over 24 hours.

Using that chamber to monitor several hundred Pimas, NIH scientists found that the risk of gaining extra weight is about 70 percent for those with low metabolic rates, compared to 10 percent to 30 percent for those with normal or high metabolic rates.

Metabolic rate is defined as how fast a body processes food, burns calories and creates and uses energy, Bogardus said.

"A low metabolic rate over a 24-hour period is a significant predictor of obesity," he said. "But it is not the only factor."

"No matter who you are or what your metabolic rate, the fact is if you eat too much you will get fat," said Bogardus. "Your metabolic rate is part of the problem (of being overweight), but it is not the only reason people get fat."

People with low metabolic rates "simply have to eat less" than those with higher rates, "or they have to find a way to increase their energy expenditure," he explained. "How much people need to eat varies greatly from individual to individual."

Although it would seem that a person with a slow metabolism would have lower energy demands and thus less of an appetite, the opposite may be true, said Bogardus.

It is Bogardus' use of the Swiss-designed respiratory chamber to monitor patients for 24 hours that is giving his results more validity than other studies, said Jil Feldhausen, nutrition and weight studies researcher at the University of Arizona.

While in the small sealed chamber for a 24-hour period, patients in Bogardus' study were monitored for the amount of oxygen they inhaled and the amount of carbon dioxide they produced. When that was calculated against the amount of food they ate and the amount of movement they made, the result was the patient's energy expenditure — a figure that indicates the body's actual metabolic rate.

"The problem in studies like this has always been how to determine energy expenditure, and that has usually been somewhat inexact," said Feldhausen. "There is a recent study that shows that obese women actually burn more calories per day than lean women, but that study used less reliable methods to calculate that. A study that measures the metabolic rate over 24 hours should offer much more reliable results."

Because activity levels were also measured in the respiratory chamber, Bogardus was able to document the fact that people varied widely in how much they moved — "fidgeted."

Fidgeting levels marked individual families — "supporting the idea that obesity is an inherited problem," said Bogardus.

Our friends Sandy and Ben are technology junkies.

They buy every new product that comes down the pike. Cordless phones, watches that measure their cardiovascular workouts, radar detectors for their car, and electric blankets that are smarter than Sandy.

Their digital alarm clock has a built-in flashlight and "his and her" alarms, and last week they bought an electronic mail detector so they don't have to keep making all those futile trips to the mailbox, which is a slot in their front door.

The Bombecks, on the other hand, tend to be a bit more conservative when it comes to new things. In 1984 we bought a smoke alarm which tells me when dinner is ready. I love it. Last week we broke down and bought a microwave oven. It was my husband's idea.

Every morning he would pull a two-quart saucepan off the rack, put a half cup of skim milk in it and set it on the stove to warm for his coffee. Sometimes he would forget about it and the milk would scorch or the pan would burn dry. It seemed reasonable that the solution to his problem was a 700-watt oven with five pages of precautions to avoid possible exposure to excessive microwave energy and 27 pages of operating instructions.

I think that is primarily what has kept us from joining the 21st Century band I thought they were two of the most courageous people I had ever met.

Having gotten milk to boil in 30 seconds is nothing short of a miracle to my husband. Now he wants to buy an answering machine so we can sit and listen to hear who's calling before we answer the phone. I told him, "First things first."

When I get a cute message to put on the machine, we'll think about it."

Calendar Highlights Black History Events

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Although most people know who Martin Luther King Jr., Booker T. Washington and Jackie Robinson were, they may not be so familiar with the names of Richard Allen, Elizabeth Evelyn Wright or Zora Neale Hurston.

The common thread that links these six people is that they all have been profiled in the Black History Calendar, which has been published annually since 1982 by Aetna Life and Casualty here.

The calendar documents many of black history's most significant political, educational, cultural and sports achievements. Valerie Canady and her staff work from March to October each year, compiling the 12 profiles and 365 other items in the calendar.

According to Canady, some lesser known black achievers are included in order to raise people's awareness of not so renowned, but significant, blacks. Among them: Richard Allen, founder and first bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church; Elizabeth Evelyn Wright, founder of Voorhees College in Denmark, S.C., and Zora Neale Hurston, author, folklorist and anthropologist.

The calendar contains information ranging from the birthdays of such famous individuals as Lena Horne, Jesse Jackson, Whitney M. Young Jr. and Willie Mays to such milestones as the first black admiral, Samuel L. Gravely Jr.; the first black U.S. Supreme Court justice, Thurgood Marshall; the first black woman federal judge, Constance Baker Motley, and the first black general in the Marine Corps, Frank E. Petersen Jr.

"Among the sources we refer to for material," Canady says, "are the Negro Almanac, the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture, the Smithsonian Institution, colleges, churches, old books and local libraries."

"Some information is obtained in a matter of minutes, while other items can take days and even weeks," she adds.

She says that for the 1988 calendar, her staff spent weeks digging up information for an item on the Tuskegee Airmen, which dealt with black aerial pioneers who broke the segregation barriers and served in the U.S. Army Air Force during World War II.

Men Are Bullish On Power Styles Seen On TV

By BETTIJANE LEVINE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Costume designer Ellen Mirojnick never expected her "Wall Street" wardrobe for Gordon Gekko, played by Michael Douglas, to cause a stir. But since the film's release, she says, people from money men to boxing promoters have phoned to ask where they can get "that Wall Street look."

She is not surprised. "Gekko is seductive, powerful. Elegant, with a tinge of flash. Men in his league — and there are plenty in real life — have individual style. They don't conform in order to be accepted. They're above all that," she says.

The almost palpable richness of Gekko's screen wardrobe — custom-tailored suits, colored shirts with crisp white collars and cuffs, wide suspenders and woven-silk ties — shocks some viewers unaccustomed to the aggressive elegance of made-to-order men's clothes.

Gekko's look is not the outsider's idea of how inside traders dress, and some wonder if it is simply a Hollywood designer's flashy fantasy of power dressing in New York. More sophisticated types assume that Gekko's impeccable, English-style outfits were made to order in London. Neither supposition is true.

Mirojnick lives and works in New York, did all her research for the film in Manhattan's financial district and studied the wardrobes of dozens of such real-life characters as Ivan Boesky "at his peak," T. Boone Pickens, Carl Icahn, Asher Edelman and Donald Trump.

In a phone interview from Canada, where she's working on Tom Cruise's next film, "Cocktail," Mirojnick said that Gekko's wardrobe was a composite of how such super-rich people look — even though no two dress alike because "when you get to that kind of position of power, you create your own style."

Gekko's suspenders, for example, are a bit wider than the ones Mirojnick said she saw in the real Wall Street world. His pinky ring with GG insignia, his gold Cartier cuff links and gold-link bracelet — even his slicked-back hair — are all personal touches that a real-life, up-from-nowhere tycoon would affect.

"Each one of these (super-rich) guys adds personal touches based on what he remembers from his past, touches that (spurn) the uptight world he has surpassed," she said.

What they have in common, however, are hand-tailored suits and shirts of luxurious, imported fabrics.

Part of that individuality, she explained, comes from the unusual mix of fabrics and patterns only possible, for example, when a man can select an English plaid for his suit and an equally luxurious French silk striping for the shirt to go with it.

The fabric and color selections are so vast in a good custom clothing shop, she said, that such men never see their outfits duplicated on anyone else. That, too, adds to the aura of power.

Mirojnick thought of Alan Flusser, a respected New York menswear designer with a small custom shop in Manhattan. His clothes have a classic, English orientation combined with American flair. "I walked in and one of the employees was wearing the exact pleated pants I'd dreamed of."

"They have perfect dimensions, with perfectly formed pleats, so they fall gracefully from the waist, glide easily over the hips and beautifully over the leg to exactly the right place at the top of the shoe," she said.

"There are buttons inside the waistband for suspenders — English pants always have buttons inside for suspenders — and little side-tabs at the hip. All these details to make the pants shape and drape exquisitely. ... It's the look I wanted. A combination of the Duke of Windsor, Cary Grant and Fred Astaire."

Flusser, in a phone interview from his New York shop, said that stock market scandals and crashes notwithstanding, there are still enough real-life Gekko types on both coasts to create a boom market for custom-tailored clothes.

Flusser's custom suits cost from $995 to $1,375. That includes three fittings, selection from an array of solid and patterned Italian and English fabrics, plus expert adjustments to compensate for narrow shoulders, too-padded hips or just plain lack of grace. The suits are made "almost completely by hand," Flusser said.

Gekko's look is simply a more dramatic, larger-than-life version of what Flusser himself wears.

"When I met Michael Douglas, I wore my typical, English-cut double-breasted, navy chalk-stripe suit," he said. It has a draped-front jacket and turn-back cuffs on the sleeves — a little English "bespokism" that I happened to like.

"I wore a horizontally striped white shirt with white collar and cuffs. It's an extremely eccentric, individual, yet powerful look."

Flusser said he made all Douglas' suits "in the context of Wall Street," with peaked lapels, pleated pants, shirts with white collars and cuffs. I made the collars a fraction higher than usual for the film, to give him more presence. It's all the typical English power broker's look. It all suggests opulence and quality."

Flusser says that he has seen "a more daring, flamboyant trend in executive dressing in the past four years. The clothes in the film are what's happening now."

"We haven't created the look, it's where the market has gone and will continue to go. In the custom end of the trade, people with taste and money are using colors, stripes and patterns in interesting ways, so they don't see themselves coming and going. The whole thing — including such traditional paraphernalia as watch fobs, tie and collar pins, French cuffs and cuff links — is on the upswing. It's just a look that any successful business person who wants to look well-bred might adopt."

Wife Resents Former Girlfriend

DEAR ABBY: Before Jerry (not his real name) and I were married, he had a relationship with a girl named Karen, which is her real name. They went together for five years, then they broke up and Karen moved out of town.

My problem: Karen still remembers Jerry's birthday, sends cards, calls him and generally keeps in touch with him. (She's not married.)

When Jerry and I became engaged (last September), I asked him to please cease all communication with Karen; he said he would.

Well, Karen called him at home and he took the call and talked to her in a very friendly way. After that, I told him that he should tell her point-blank he isn't interested in maintaining any kind of contact with her. He says he doesn't want to be rude to her.

Yesterday we received a wedding gift from Karen. (We didn't send her an announcement.) Neither one of us wants the gift. Should we send it back and say "No thanks," or should we keep it and thank her for it? Should I write to her and tell her to stop keeping in touch with Jerry, or should we just ignore her and hope she'll go away? — SICK OF KAREN

DEAR SICK: Keep the wedding gift and write a proper thank-you. It's possible for Jerry to discourage communication with Karen without being rude, which is what he should do, knowing how much the situation irritates you. Stay out of it.

DEAR ABBY: I know you have never had a problem like this before. What does a person do when he or she doesn't have a thing in the world to do at work? I suppose you could say, "Sit quietly and keep your mouth shut," but that's easier said than done.

Dear Abby

Don't suggest that I help one of my co-workers because that is not allowed. Don't suggest that I read a book or magazines because that is not allowed either.

I suppose I could just shuffle my work around and try to "look" busy, but that would be dishonest. Don't get me wrong, Abby. I am grateful to have a job, but this is getting ridiculous. Out of eight hours in a day, we work only three hours — and the rest of the time we just sit around looking at each other until it's time to go home.

Work is sporadic, so we can't just pick up and go home. — BORED IN BIRMINGHAM
DEAR BORED: First, inform your boss that he's overstaffed. Since you're not allowed to read on the job, thoroughly comb the classified section of this newspaper when you get home. With luck, you will find a job that offers more stimulation and a chance to grow.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure there are a few problems in the world that are more important than slang terms for the military, but I couldn't resist chiming in. The recent exchange of letters in your column brought back fond memories of my World War II days when I was in Washington, D.C., surrounded by uniformed men. (I married one.)

The second lieutenants were called "shavetails." Why? Because at one time (before 1918) the U.S. Army and Cavalry relied heavily on mules for transportation. The tails of the untrained mules were shaved to indicate that they were untrained, possibly unpredictable and, therefore, unsafe. — MARIAN BARB, BERKELEY
DEAR MARIAN: The "shavetail" tale makes sense to me. (P.S.: If you're wrong, we'll both hear about it.)

DEAR ABBY: I wish men would dress like men, and women would dress like women. I don't care for this unisex business at all. Nowadays you can't tell a man from his wife — unless the wife is pregnant. — OLD-FASHIONED

Meyer during remainder of the academic year. He has made significant contributions to the student life area at East Carolina University, and I certainly join with others at East Carolina University in wishing him the very best in his retirement.

Eakin said the process to fill the vice chancellor post will begin with the next two to three weeks by establishing a search committee to work through the spring semester on finding someone. It is hoped the person named to the post will be able to begin on or about July 1, he said.

Meyer's early announcement of his plans allows the university to seek replacement at a primary time when people would seek to change employment, Eakin said.

relationships with key members and organizations of our city, and the university is certainly a major institution in our community," he said.

Councilman Bill Hadden said he is also looking forward to the breakfast. "I think it's an excellent idea to sit down face to face with university officials and see just where we are, and where we are going," Hadden said.

City Manager Greg Knowles said the breakfast will serve as an opportunity for city and university officials to meet socially, and become acquainted with each others' titles and responsibilities.

Knowles said he believes cooperation and mutuality between the two sovereign groups can lead to increased efficiency and better services for all in the community.

The city manager cited the use of the Greenville cable television system as an example of how combined university and city efforts could add to the community.

"The university could record and produce concerts, which in turn could be aired over the cable system on government or public access channels," he said.

"They could also produce cable-related projects and air them, or if they have a visiting professor, they might want to record his lecture and air it for all interested people who might not have been able to attend," he added.

Knowles said he looks forward to college officials meeting his staff. "Hopefully, a comfortable relationship will develop," he commented.

Approximately 25 city and university officials are scheduled to attend.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late Minnie Hardee would like to thank everyone for all acts of kindness shown during the illness and loss of their loved one. Especially many thanks to the Nurses and Staff of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

mistake in the appropriation bill so that it had to be redone before action to pass it. We asked if we could slip in a last-minute appropriation for Pitt County and were told yes, if it's not controversial."

"We were able to get it because we, along with (state Rep.) Walter Jones Jr. acted together quickly," Warren said. "Getting the unexpected funds for the amphitheater is a good thing, because it's a project that adds to the livability of Greenville and Pitt County, especially because of the Sunday in the Park program."

"Since the facility is one we were able to say is used by lots of people, all sectors of the Pitt County society, we had no problem getting the funds. I think we could have gotten $50,000 if we had asked," Taft said.

Details of a report, "Preparing for Open Spaces and Recreation in East Carolina Medical Park," prepared by Stephen H. Moler of the Recreation Consulting Services, Washington, N.C. was discussed by commissioners.

The department's executive director, Boyd Lee, said, "We've got to decide right away if we want to get involved in seeking possible recreation sites within the park. Momentum in planning for the area got under way a couple of months ago in a chamber of commerce meeting held in Williamsburg, Virginia. Chamber members expressed the thought that something should be done in the medical complex as far as recreation is concerned."

The Moler report states, "At present there are approximately 3,300 acres in vacant land and forest areas in the existing and proposed boundaries (of the park). However, none of the acres are reserved or dedicated to open space for public use."

In reference to the non-existence of reserved or dedicated space that might offer opportunities for recreational land, commissioner J.B. Surles stated "things are heppening so fast, land there is so expensive, that I feel whatever we decide is something we'll have to move fast on. It's my understanding that one area, for example, has been purchased for the construction of 500 homes quite recently, after the publication of this report. So it's evident that land in the site is being gobbled up fast."

Relative to the study, County Manager Kramer Jackson, in a Jan. 12 letter to City Manager Gregory Knowles, wrote that the county takes exception to a portion of the Moler report that states: "Pitt County does not recognize the need for open space and recreation within the district but wants to be involved in the planning and decisions that affect the district."

In the same section of the report, Moler indicated that the city of Greenville, the East Carolina University Medical School and Pitt County Memorial Hospital all recognize the need for open space and recreation areas.

plan in 1985, I fought to keep it going.

"When that very same year he sought to abolish the Board of Science and Technology and cut the Biotechnology Center, I fought to keep our state in the forefront of the modern economy. And last year when he opposed the phosphate detergent ban, I fought to keep our state's rivers and clean water supplies safe from pollution."

Now, Jordan said, the Republican Martin "is attacking my plan to make far-reaching changes in the way we create jobs and handle economic growth."

Saying the state "must grow jobs from within," not dependant on Wall Street and foreign investors, Jordan said "that's why I put forth my proposal last week to abolish the State Department of Commerce."

In its place, Jordan suggested "an aggressive, entrepreneurial public-private partnership — the North Carolina Economic Development Corporation — organized like a business, run like a business, and subject to the same bottom line accountability as a business.

According to Jordan, North Carolinians have built a great state, not because they feared the future, but because they embraced the future. What North Carolina needs for the next four years is not a governor who simply wants to occupy the office, but a governor who wants to do the job.

"This campaign is about you," Jordan told the gathering. "It is about families throughout this state who share the same hopes and dreams and aspirations for their children.

"We want to build a better future for those children, just as our parents and grandparents built a better future for us. We want to meet our responsibility to the next generation, just as our parents and grandparents met their responsibility to our generation.

"And we want to leave our children a North Carolina that is an even better place to live and work and raise a family, just like our parents and grandparents did for us.

"That is what this campaign is about," Jordan said, "and that is why I am running for governor."

Homecoming Happy One For Felton As Gamecocks Defeat Pirates, 78-51

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

George Felton came back to Minges Coliseum for the first time Saturday night since he served as an assistant coach under Dave Odom eight years ago. This time, however, he was the head coach of the University of South Carolina's basketball team.

And he brought a tall and talented group of players with him and cruised to a 78-51 victory over the outmanned Pirates.

"They played very good defense," Coach Mike Steele of the Pirates said. "They shot better than we had expected them to shoot. But the biggest thing was their defense. They took us out of our game."

Early on, however, the Pirates were in control before Terry Dozier and Brent Price (brother of ex-Georgia Tech star Mark) led the Gamecocks back to take the lead for good at 12-11 with 13:26 to go.

After that, the Gamecocks pulled steadily away, building up as much as a 15-point lead, that coming at the half, 36-21.

The Pirates closed it back to 11 several times in the early going of the second half, but then fatigue began to take its effect and it was downhill the rest of the way for the Pirates.

"For the first five or six minutes, we did okay," Steele said. "But then they shut down Reed (Lose) and we had trouble after that."

Lose, who still led the Pirates with 15 points, scored 11 of those in the first half, hitting his first five shots in a row, one of them a 3-pointer.

"But (Tony) Shaw is a good defensive player and he did what he was supposed to do (on Lose)," Steele said.

"They're really big, too, and that hurt us," the coach added. The Pirates, with Dominique Martin the tallest at 6-6, saw South Carolina start a combination of 6-9, 6-8 and 6-7 across the front, and come later with front court height up to 6-11. As a result, the Gamecocks outrebounded the Pirates, 38-22, with 6-9 John Hudson pulling eight of those to lead the way.

The Gamecocks also were as quick or quicker than the Pirates, forcing 22 turnovers while committing only 15.

The combination of the two gave South Carolina 14 more shots at the basket and they connected on 11 more than did the Pirates.

"We never cut into their lead. They were just too strong for us," Steele said.

Steele also thought that his team was tired for the game, coming off a four-day road trip and two games this past weekend. "They played like their legs were heavy. They didn't have a lot of bounce or enthusiasm."

The Pirates were also handicapped by the absence of back-up point guard Jimmy Hinton, absent to attend the funeral of his grandfather. Without him, the Pirates had to go with Jeff Kelly most of the way — 34 minutes — well above his average of 22.6. David Simmons, a walk-on, was pushed into the backup role against the much more talented Gamecocks who forced five turnovers from him in just eight minutes of play.

"You have to put it into perspective," Steele said. "It's no excuse, but we're using a number of freshmen and a couple of walk-ons against their athletes. If they shoot like they did tonight, they're going to beat a lot of people. Next to Duke, they may be the best team we've played."

"I don't think if it was that we were not very good tonight or South Carolina just made us look that way," Steele said.

Felton, who is in his second year at South Carolina after working with Bobby Cremins at Georgia Tech after leaving ECU, said that his players played hard throughout the game. "They came to play hard and they did."

Lose hit an 18-footer to put the Pirates on top in the first 30 seconds and added another a minute later to up the lead to 4-0. He canned a third shot before Gus Hill added a jumper with 17:23 left to give ECU an 8-2 lead.

Stanley Love hit a layup with 16:13 to make it 10-6, but that was start of the end right there.

After cutting it to 11-10, Dozier hit two straight layups for a 14-11 lead and Price canned a 3-pointer to up it to 17-11 with 13:11 to go.

Lose made a 3-pointer but Price hit a jumper and Shaw scored on a 3-point play to open the gap to 22-14.

From there on, it was a steady pull-away for the rest of the half, which ended with the Gamecocks up by 15.

Hill and Love both scored early to cut the lead back to 11, 39-27, but the Pirates were never able to come closer. From a 44-33 score, South Carolina scored 10 straight points to open the gap to 54-33 and it was all over.

Shaw and Price finished with 14 each to lead the Gamecocks while Dozier had 12 and Terry Gould had 10.

Lose led ECU with 15 while Hill had 11.

South Carolina climbs to 8-3 with the win, while ECU slumps to 5-8.

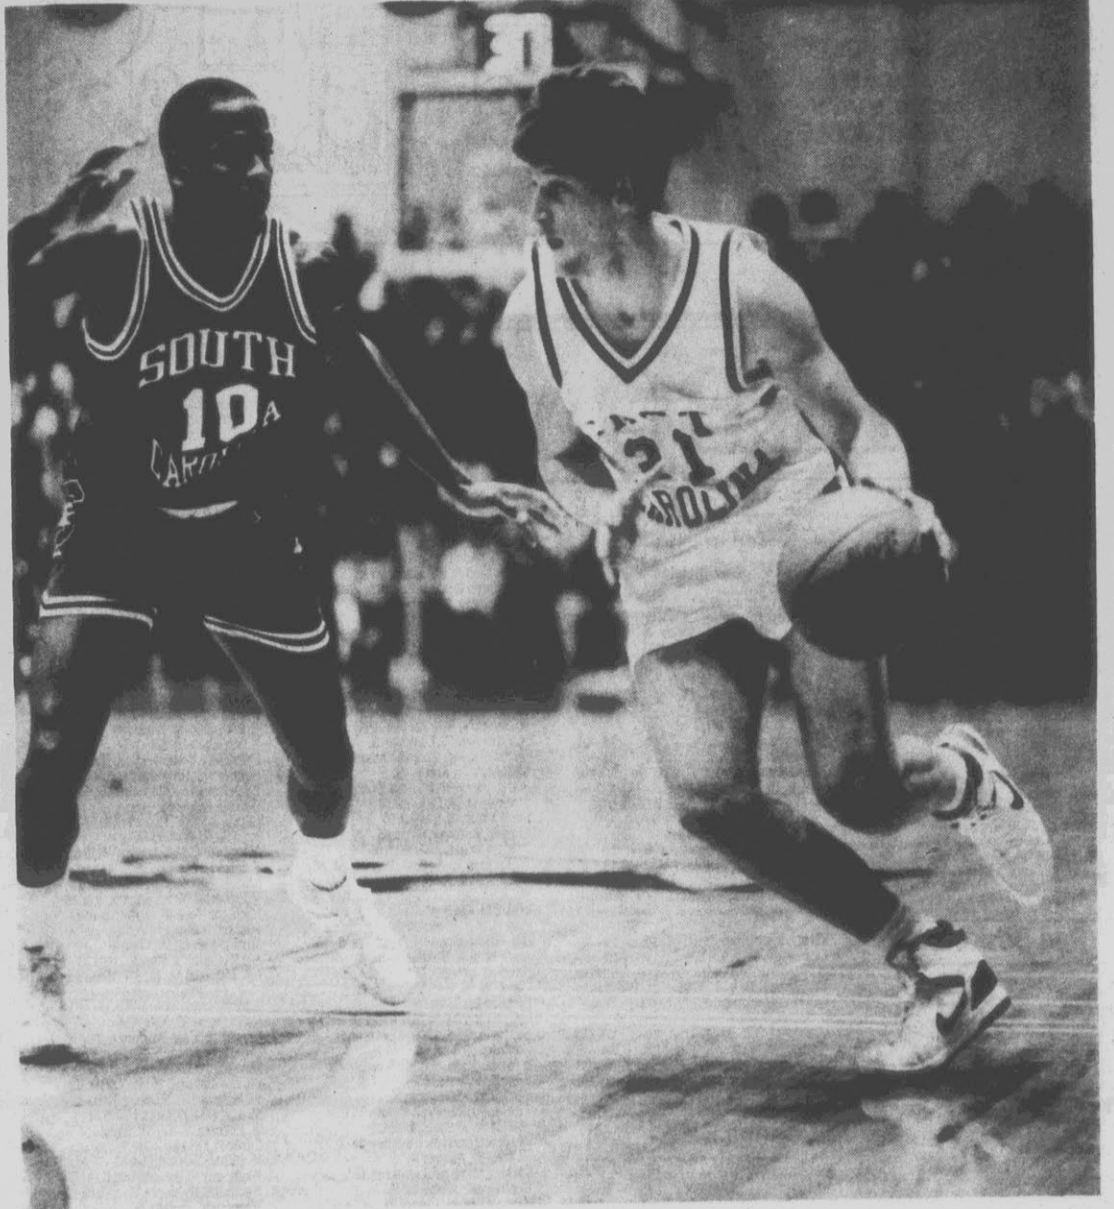

East Carolina returns to CAA action this weekend, entertaining Navy on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and American on Monday at 7:30 p.m. also.

Four Shots Equal Car

John Simpson, an East Carolina University sophomore from Madison, went home in style Wednesday night after attending the East Carolina-South Carolina basketball in Minges Coliseum.

Simpson canned four basketball shots from four areas of the floor in a halftime promotion and won a $20,000 automobile, donated by Bob Barbour Honda.

The Pi Kappa Phi fraternity member's ticket number was drawn for the promotional event and he was given 30 seconds to make a layup, free throw, 20-footer, and a shot from center court. Only his free throw wobbled before going through the nets. The others went straight in and the Minges crowd roared when the final shot sank.

"When I went out (on the court), I was just messing around. I figured there was no way I could make it," Simpson said. But when the final shot was on its way, "I thought it might have a chance."

"This just isn't really happening," he added.

The 19-year-old, who played high school basketball for Madison-Mayodan, said his next move would be to call home. "I think they'll be a little surprised," he said.

Lee Workman, director of marketing for ECU, said it was the first time a car had been won in the three years of the promotion.

The automobile company was insured against the loss according to Robert Ellis, a company spokesman who presented the keys to the car to Simpson. Lloyd's of London holds the policy for the insurance, Ellis said.

Hill Gets CAA Honor

RICHMOND — East Carolina's Gus Hill and Richmond's Rodney Rice were named as Co-Colonial Athletic Association Players Of The Week, the league office announced Wednesday.

Hill, a 6-3 sophomore forward from Fairfax, Va., became the second Pirate in as many weeks to win the honor. Last week, sophomore swingman Reed Lose won the honor.

Hill scored 48 points in two league games against George Mason (24 points in a 77-63 loss) and James Madison (24 points in a 68-65 victory). Both totals were game highs.

Hill, who came to ECU in 1984, is playing his first season with the Pirates after suffering a serious knee injury his freshman year. Hill leads the Pirates in scoring with an average of 17.8 points per game despite playing out of position at forward.

Rice, a 6-3 senior guard, scored 61 points while leading the Spiders to a 3-0 week with wins over VMI, Navy and LaSalle.

Conley Rally Eases Past Washington By 69-65

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley rediscovered the big play and as a result got back on the winning track in its first Coastal Conference game of the year.

The Vikings overcame a three-point deficit in the final minute and a half to take a 69-65 win over Washington Wednesday night.

Phil Medlin, a 6-7 senior center, scored two baskets in a row to give Conley a 67-65 lead and Jonathan Bonner and Terry Williams hit key free throws in the final 26 seconds to secure the win.

"The other night at Farmville (a 63-60 loss), we didn't get the big play," said Conley coach Walter Claybrook. "When you've got a big play man, you have to get him the ball. He (Medlin) made some big plays."

"Jonathan Bonner hit those critical free throws at the end which is good for him because he's a streak shooter and we need him to be on."

Bonner's two free throws with 10 seconds left turned a 67-65 lead into a 69-65 advantage and took away any threat of the Pam Pack tying on a 3-point goal.

Those shots climaxed a seesaw game in which Washington led at the half, only to have Conley regain the lead in the third quarter, give it back to the Pam Pack in the final minutes and then come back to take the win in the final minute.

Washington closed to within five at 55-50 but with 4:44 remaining, Washington's Franz Holscher attempted a 3-point goal from the left side but missed. He sneaked behind Medlin and grabbed the rebound, put it back in and drew the foul of Medlin. He hit the free throw and Washington was within two at 55-53.

Conley turned the ball over and Ryan Dixon nailed a follow shot with 4:07 left to tie the game at 55-55.

From there, the teams traded buckets until Dixon connected on a three-point play to give the Pam Pack a 65-62 lead with 1:40 remaining.

After Medlin hit the next two baskets, Washington turned the ball over two times in a row to foil any comeback attempts.

Williams hit a free throw with 26 seconds to go to make it 67-65, but Dixon missed a 3-point try at the other end. Albritton and Emerson Merritt scrambled for the loose ball but it went out of bounds to Conley, setting up Bonner's insurance free throws.

"We had a turnover (in the final minutes)," said Washington coach Dave Smith. "Then our guy steps out of bounds. We fouled them, they made the most of their attempts. That's the story of the game."

Claybrook, who has been looking for somebody to take charge in the backcourt all season, got a steady game out of his guards this time. Instead of one person, though, it was more of a backcourt by committee.

"The things they did (wrong) tonight are things you can work on and get better," Claybrook said. "Before, they weren't even doing those things. (Tonight) everybody tried to play within themselves."

Sherwood Wilder led the backcourt scoring as he came off the bench to score 11 points, including a 3-point goal.

The game was a make-up game from last Friday's scheduled contest, which was postponed due to snow. The layoff showed as both teams started off slow. Conley led 13-12 at the end of the first quarter but Washington came back to take a 26-25 halftime lead.

"Tonight was the first night since last Wednesday that we've even touched a ball," Claybrook said. "With that in itself, I'm pleased with the win. I thought the layoff for the snow really showed up."

The game turned up-tempo in the second half as both teams warmed up and got their running games in gear. Claybrook said the Vikings were okay with that style of play, as long as they kept it under control.

"Offensively if we can get down and take a quick shot, (we'll do it)," he said. "But we talked tonight (that) when they start putting the pressure on us and we hit that streak and start rushing things, then that's the kind of pace I don't want."

Medlin led Vikings, 6-4 and 1-0, with 21 points, while Paul Merritt added 13 off the bench.

Washington falls to 9-2.

In the girl's game, Washington overcame an early Conley lead to take a 41-34 win.

The Valkyries jumped out to an early 11-4 lead but Washington quickly came back to lead 16-15 at the half by holding Conley to just four second-quarter points.

Then in the third quarter, Washington outscored Conley, 12-7, to take control of the game.

Catherine Occhipinti opened the second half with a basket off the fast break following a Conley turnover to make it 18-15.

Twanna Spruill followed with a jumper to stretch the lead to 20-15, then Tonya Holley hit inside and the Lady Pam Pack led 22-15.

Chargers Pull Away, Down Rams

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton pulled away from Greene Central in the final period to record a 69-51 victory in the first Eastern Plains Conference basketball game of the year for the two Wednesday night.

Greene Central's girls took a 34-29 win over the Lady Chargers in their game.

Ayden-Grifton jumped off to an early lead, speeding out to a 19-9 lead in the opening quarter of the game. Greene Central came back with a 17-16 margin in the second period, but still trailed by 35-26 at intermission.

In the third period, the Rams continued to get back in the game, cutting it to four points at 47-43 on a basket by Tyrone Hardy, who was fouled, but missed on the attempted 3-point play.

The Chargers scored the final four points of the period for a 51-43 lead and they outthrew the Rams, 18-8, in the last period to put the game away.

Ronnell Peterson led Ayden-Grifton with 19 points while Eric Blount had 15 and Leon Dixon added 13. Anthony Jones led the Rams with 13 while Hardy had 11 and Maurice Streeter had 10.

Greene Central's boys fall to 3-7 overall while Ayden-Grifton improves to 6-4.

Greene Central's girls pushed out into an 11-4 lead in the first quarter and were never in trouble. They outthrew the Lady Chargers, 12-9, in the second frame to take a 23-13 lead into the dressing rooms.

Greene Central continued to pull away in the third quarter, building its lead to 33-16. The Lady Rams allowed Ayden-Grifton a 13-1 comeback in the final period, but it still fell well short.

Wake Forest Inches By Winthrop

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
Wake Forest beat Winthrop, but boy, was Coach Bob Staak upset. "First of all, I don't want to take anything away from Winthrop — they played hard and executed well,"

Staak said after the Demon Deacons held off the Eagles for a 60-56 victory. "But we just stunk. There is no other way to put it. We had no zip, no concentration and we weren't aggressive." David Carlyle's 3-point field goal with 2:27 left broke a tie, and his two free throws with one second remaining helped Wake Forest clinch the victory. But Carlyle's shooting did little to soothe Staak's anger. "We played against a team at home that, certainly from a size standpoint, we should have dominated inside, and we didn't," Staak said. "If people think that playing a team out of the ACC is going to be any easier, that is not the case."

The Demon Deacons led by 52-47 after Ralph Kitley's layup with 6:34 left, but the Eagles outscored Wake Forest 7-2 in the next 3½ minutes and tied the score on Greg Washington's 15-foot jumper with 2:52 left. Carlyle's basket from the left corner broke the tie, but Kenny Smith's layup at 1:46 got Winthrop within one.

Tony Black was fouled with eight seconds left and hit the front end of the one-and-one to give Wake Forest a 58-56 lead. Wake Forest and Winthrop each called a time-out, and after the Demon Deacons called a second timeout, the Eagles committed a violation while attempting the inbound pass.

Carlyle was fouled with one second remaining and hit both ends of the one-and-one.

Winthrop Coach Steve Vacendak was much more complimentary of the Demon Deacons, who climbed to 5-7.

"Wake played well when they had to down the stretch and they kept their composure," Vacendak said. "Wake held their composure and that was probably the difference."

Sam Ivy led Wake Forest with 20 points.

Clemson downed Rider 83-48 and North Carolina State ran away to a 103-54 victory over Morgan State.

Donnell Bruce scored 17 points and Elden Campbell and Tim Kincaid scored 16 each to help Clemson break a three-game losing streak and raise their record to 8-5. Rider is 2-10.

Rider jumped to a 10-4 lead after five minutes. But Clemson went on a 17-4 scoring run en route to a 33-25 halftime lead. The Tigers put the game away with a 20-4 start to the second half. Campbell scored 10 of his 16 points during that stretch.

"Tonight we didn't execute at first," Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis said. "The fans need to get the team into the game. This team is too young to get the fans into the game. Right now, we're waiting too much. Sooner or later, it's going to be too late."

Chucky Brown and Vinny Del Negro led a second-half charge and North Carolina State extended its winning streak to six games and its record to 9-2.

Del Negro and Brown scored eight points apiece during a run in which N.C. State hit 10 of its first 15 shots. From a 37-30 halftime lead, the Wolfpack went on a 25-7 run.

A Del Negro basket with 13 minutes left gave the Wolfpack a 62-37 lead.

Coach Jim Valvano gave Morgan State credit for putting up a tough fight in the first half after its six-hour bus ride from Baltimore on game day.

"They got here about an hour before the game. They get off the bus, come right out and play us even-steven for a half, so I've got great respect for them," Valvano said.

"In the second half we played much better both offensively and defensively," he said. "And we have to play better with the ACC season coming up next."

Havelock Sweeps Pair From Panthers

HAVELOCK — Havelock swept past North Pitt in a pair of high-scoring high school basketball games Wednesday night.

In the boys' game, the Rams took a 79-62 decision while the girls won by a score of 89-69.

North Pitt's boys actually jumped out to a 18-14 first-quarter lead but Havelock pulled within 32-31 by halftime.

Then in the third quarter, the Rams outscored the Panthers, 23-14, to take a 55-45 lead and they never looked back.

Derrick Borden led the way for Havelock with 27 points. Ledel George added 17 points.

North Pitt, 3-6, was led by Randy House and Calvin Hunter with 13 points apiece.

In the girls' game, the Pant-Hers gradually fell behind, trailing by four after the first quarter and by 10 at the half, 43-33.

The Lady Rams pushed their advantage to 62-49 by the end of the third quarter and then cruised through the final period.

Keisha Pilgreen led North Pitt with 25 points while Gwen Pilgree added 23.

North Pitt falls to 3-4 and returns to action Friday at home against Ayden-Grifton.

regroup but it didn't help. Spruill hit another outside shot. Glenda Hardy broke the ice for Conley with a jumper at the 4:55 mark to make it 24-17. Teammate Charlene Davenport then hit a 3-point shot to make it 24-20, but Holley worked free inside for two baskets in a row to make it 28-20.

Hardy hit one of two free throws in the final seconds of the period to pull the Valkyries back within 28-23, but that was as close as they would get.

Washington built up as much as a 41-25 lead before Conley closed it to the final margin in the final minutes. Conley falls to 5-4 while Washington moves to 8-1.

Louisburg Rocks PCC

LOUISBURG — Louisburg Junior College's basketball team is the Hurricanes, and Wednesday night, they left Pitt Community College's Paladins a disaster area.

The Hurricanes blew past Pitt, 104-59, as their winds left the Paladins with chilly hands both from the floor and the free throw line.

"We shot our worst percentages of the year," Paladin coach Charles Coburn said. "We hit only 33.8 percent of our shots from the floor, although we did take some good shots at times. And we hit only 39.3 percent (11-28) from the free throw line. We also had 24 turnovers."

"I'm not taking anything away from Louisburg — they played great defense — but we just have to start being more intense if we expect to have any success this year."

The game was close only briefly. Pitt tied it at 4-4 with just over 17 minutes to go, but Louisburg took control there and rolled out to a 50-29 halftime lead. They then outthit the Paladins, 54-30, in the second half to win handily.

Mickey Hinnant led Louisburg with 27 points while Eric Sykes had 23 and Jimmy Sharpe added 10. Jesse Pratt led Pitt with 21 while Ricky Congleton had 12 and Woodrow Wallace had 10.

Pitt falls to 4-12 overall and 0-8 in Region X play. The Paladins play host to Richard Bland College on Friday at 7:30 p.m. at A.G. Cox gym.

Fans Send Dye Ties

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse football fans figure Auburn football coach Pat Dye likes ties, so they're sending him more than 2,000 of the ugliest ones they could find.

"If he went for the tie, it means he likes ties," said Dennis Brogan, known more commonly around Syracuse as the Dome Ranger, the Orangemen's unofficial mascot.

"He'll be overjoyed. We have one special tie that's been embroidered with the Auburn war chicken," said Brogan, making fun of the Tiger's War Eagle rally cry in the wake of the 16-16 tie between Auburn and Syracuse in the Sugar Bowl.

In Auburn, the university's sports information director, David Housel, said Dye was out recruiting Wednesday. "We're looking to the future and not to the past," said Housel.

The Auburn spokesman, who often sports a sweaty towel around his neck when he works the press box during Auburn games, added with a laugh: "I personally look forward to seeing all the ties because I was getting ready to buy some."

"I imagine we'll probably wind up giving them to the Goodwill, which we at Auburn have for everybody," said Housel.

The ties-for-Dye effort was sponsored by a Syracuse radio station, although it started at Carrier Corp.

"A couple of us had the idea Monday morning after the Sugar Bowl was over," said John Hall, manager of human resources for Carrier Transicold, adding that he's still mad about Dye's decision to kick a field goal with four seconds remaining to blemish the Orangemen's otherwise perfect record.

"We take winning very seriously here and didn't really appreciate his going for the tie when he had nothing to win by it," said Hall, who contributed six ties to the effort.

"We thought it would be a great idea for our employees to collect ties in a box and send them to Pat Dye," said Hall. The workers then enlisted the support of radio station WYYY-FM.

'Dolly' Changing To Suit Parton's Personal Image

By JAMES ENDRST
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Dolly Parton says she prayed before she decided to do "Dolly," ABC's $40 million gamble to revive the variety show format.

"I felt like I'd come home when I started the show," Ms. Parton said in an recent interview here.

But Ms. Parton, 41, apparently takes a spiritual approach to her work and says, "I can always feel it when it ain't right."

"Dolly," which has moved to Saturday nights, has not felt right from the start, she says.

"I can fake sincerity better than anybody," she says, "but when it gets to be phony to me ... it shows; it's right there on my face. You can't fool the American public. I know because I am the American public."

Listening to Ms. Parton tell her tale of TV woe is like listening to a country-western ballad. Seems a bunch of city slickers got hold of her show and stole her dream.

"You hire people who are supposed to know, and you assume that with the money you pay them and with the reputation they have that they're supposed to know something," she says sincerely, adding, with some down-home wonder, "You'd be amazed at how little people know."

But Dolly knows what she wants, and sounds as if she is going to get it.

"We have some Southern writers now," says the popular country-music star and Tennessee native, "people from the South who understand my kind of humor, my kind of personality." Then, perhaps, not wanting to offend city folks, she says, "but then we've certainly got our batch of city people — you know, people who are clever."

"I don't mean to sound like I'm the only one who knows anything," she says. "I don't know all that much, but I do know me."

The idea of opening the show in a bubble bath each week, for example, was not something Ms. Parton was comfortable doing. Ditto the "Dolly's Date" segment, in which Ms. Parton has been seen stepping out with her guest stars, such as Bruce Willis.

"I kept on saying, 'You know, people are not going to like this because it's going to be like I'm cheatin' right on television,'" says Ms. Parton, who is, after all, a married woman.

She was bothered, too, by the notion that ABC was loath to call "Dolly" a country show.

"I said, 'How can you say it's not a country show when you've got me on it?'" Ms. Parton says.

But when she asked the producers to get some country music acts for the show, they went overboard "and signed everybody up in Nashville."

"I told 'em I'm just like Brylcreem," she jokes. "A little dab'll do ya."

So "Dolly" the show is changing to suit Dolly the person, rather than the other way around. The show, its star says, will try to strike a balance; about 60 percent music and 40 percent comedy and variety.

"Dolly" has been more of a critical disaster than a ratings bust; the show is 36th in its season-to-date average but has been slipping against its tough Sunday night competition on CBS. That competition resulted in the move to Saturday nights.

That change sits well with Ms. Parton, who thinks Saturday night is more of a show night and notes that she lost many a church-going viewer Sundays.

Ms. Parton, while not specific, said the changes would not come all at once. Expect a mini-soap-opera with a cliffhanger ending each week.

In the meantime, Ms. Parton has a growing wish list for new direction in the show. She wants to take the show outside of the studio, on special trips with the armed forces, for example.

One could not help wondering that if Ms. Parton was unhappy for so long, why hadn't she spoken up?

"If I had started out saying 'Absolutely no, absolutely no, absolutely no,' I still wouldn't be on the air," she says, noting that she has not felt the pressure "everybody else has."

"This show is going to be a hit, take my word for it," she concludes. "If I can't get it right, then I shouldn't be on TV."

'How To' Show For Women Debuts On ABC-TV Monday

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer Woody Fraser doesn't want anyone to think that ABC's new daytime show "Home" is just another magazine show.

The fact is, it's not a magazine show at all. "It's a how-to talk show for women," he said.

The half-hour show, which makes its debut Monday, will offer viewers down-to-earth advice on a variety of topics, from how to prepare salt-free meals to how to detect breast cancer to tips for packing for a move.

"We're not going to do something on cancer unless it's hopeful," said Fraser. "That positive approach will be at the core of everything we do. We're not going to scare people."

"The execution of the show is also very important. Most shows bring up a new subject, but don't show you how it works or how it will affect your life. That's going to be a very important part of what we do."

Each day will deal with only three topics so each can be explored at some depth.

Robb Weller and Sandy Hill will be hosts of the new show. Weller will continue as co-anchor of "Entertainment This Week." Fraser hired Hill as a co-host when he was putting together ABC's "Good Morning America." She stayed for five years.

The new show has the same name as one of television's pioneering shows, NBC's "Home." That show, starring Arlene Francis, ran from 1954 to 1959. It was considered a companion show to "Today."

Fraser said he is also on the look-out for ordinary people who are experts in certain fields. "We don't want ideas that come out of magazines," he said. "We want the ideas that come out of people's lives. That gives you a whole frame of reference that's entirely different. We've run into people who are experts at bulk buying. We found people who set up a 'blood-letting party' to give blood to a cancer victim."

"This will probably evolve. These experts will be people you've never heard of. The people experts."

"Home" is the result of a year's research in which ABC asked viewers what kind of a show they

First Child

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Demi Moore and her actor-husband, Bruce Willis, are expecting their first child this fall, a spokesman says.

Miss Moore, 25, and Willis, 32, co-star of the ABC-TV series "Moonlighting," were married Nov. 21 in a small ceremony in Las Vegas, Nev. They live in Malibu.

wanted to see. The network held several discussions with groups of women who were regular viewers of morning television.

"We found that women were looking for something that would be stimulating and that would be a productive use of their time," said Mary Alice Dwyer-Dobbin, ABC vice president, daytime programs, East Coast. "They were looking for something that would help them learn new skills."

The show will air at 11:30 a.m., just before the network begins its afternoon soap operas. Its competitors on CBS and NBC will be game shows.

Fraser, who has produced such programs as "The Mike Douglas Show," "The Dick Cavett Show," "The Steve Allen Show," "Good Morning America" and "That's Incredible!," was at the same time working on a similar idea.

"I was thinking about a show that would be motivational," he said. "I like things that are positive. I don't buy the argument that there are people sitting at home who don't know what to do. They're merely waiting for someone to light the fire."

The show's set is a replica of a Connecticut farm house, which will be used for demonstrating the various ideas brought in by the "people experts." In addition, the show will buy a home in a Los Angeles suburb and take the audience through all the steps of buying a house, redecorating, remodeling, maintaining and selling the house.

Town Rejects Statue

PACENTRO, Italy (AP) — A proposed 13-foot bronze statue of pop star Madonna has been rejected by officials of this little town where her grandparents grew up.

"They don't know what they are missing," said Gianni Volpe, sponsor of the project, after Mayor Raffaele Santini announced Wednesday that the statue was unwelcome.

A scale model by sculptor Walter

Pugni was unveiled last week, and Volpe said he plans to take it on a world tour.

Madonna's grandparents long ago emigrated from the central, mountainous region of Abruzzo to the United States, but the singer still has a few distant cousins in Italy.

 Even experts disagree about how to bid a hand with a long, strong suit. Some believe in entering the auction immediately and bidding slowly. Others favor bidding as much as possible at the first opportunity. And still others advocate lying in wait as long as possible in the hope of stealing the contract, doubled.

Obviously, South was a member of the latter school. While little about the auction appeals to us (everyone bid as if they were looking at an ace more than they held), the final outcome was gratifying for South, although he developed a few gray hairs until he got a glimpse of dummy.

East won the first trick with the ace of spades and shifted to a club. Declarer won and cashed the ace of trumps to find out about the 2-0 break. Leaving one trump outstanding, declarer cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond high, felling the queen. After entering dummy by overtaking the seven of trumps with the ten, declarer ruffed another diamond, this time dropping the king and setting up the jack.

It was time to lead the carefully preserved three of trumps to the table's four. That provided the entry for declarer to take two club discards on the queen of spades and jack of diamonds to make his slam.
