Government Reports Jump In Consumer Prices

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, climbing at their fastest pace in six years, rose 4.4 percent in 1987, the government said today. At fault were rebounding energy costs, higher prices for services and the plunge in the value of the dollar.

Worse yet, last year's inflation was four times the 1.1 percent rate posted for 1986. Still, the gain in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was considered moderate by most economists and fell far below the double-digit inflation rates that ushered in the 1980s.

One piece of good news: Retail prices ended the year on a modest note, up just 0.1 percent in December, the smallest monthly gain since July 1986. The index, based on a hypothetical selection of goods and services, had risen 0.3 percent in November and 0.4 percent in October.

While the rate for 1986, the lowest in more than two decades, had been paced by the collapse in world oil prices, much of the 1987 increase reflected the partial rebound in energy costs.

Those prices rose 8.2 percent in 1987, regaining a portion of their 19.7 percent 1986 loss.

In December, energy costs fell 1.1 percent, including a 2.2 percent decline for gasoline, a 1.5 percent fall for heating oil and a 0.2 percent drop for natural gas and electricity.

For the year, gasoline prices were up 18.6 percent; heating oil costs gained 12.9 percent; natural gas and electricity charges were up 0.3 percent.

Food and beverage costs were up 3.5 percent for all of 1987. In December, they rose 0.5 percent, led by a record 72.4 percent in lettuce prices. Over the last two months, lettuce prices have doubled because of disease and bad weather in California and Arizona.

Minus the volatile food and energy categories, consumer prices rose 3.5 percent in 1987. This category was up 0.1 percent in December.

Overall, consumer prices last year showed the highest rate of inflation since 1981, when it was 8.9 percent. With the exception of last year's surprisingly low pace, inflation has ranged from 3.8 percent to 4.0 percent since 1981.

The companion Producer Price Index, released last week, showed that wholesale prices rose a more modest 2.2 percent in 1987.

The producer index is lower because it reflects only prices received by U.S. manufacturers and farmers for their products and does not include two of the fastest-rising categories in the CPI — services and imported goods.

The consumer index does include both services, like medical costs, and imported goods, reflected in categories such as apparel and new automobiles.

Service prices as a whole rose 4.6 percent in 1987, including a 5.8 percent rise in medical care and a 4.0 percent rise in entertainment costs. Medical care costs were up 0.4 percent in December and entertainment costs 0.3 percent.

The Labor Department gave these other details of price activity:

Tornadoes Kill 5 In Tennessee; Giant Storm Strikes Midwest

By MICHAEL HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

A huge storm system pushed into the Great Lakes today after unleashing a swarm of tornadoes that killed five people in the South and stranding hundreds of motorists in the Plains in snowdrifts up to 14 feet high.

"I don't see anything that can be salvaged — I mean, nothing at all," said Richard Cannon, whose two brothers-in-law were killed when a twister ripped away his house in Fayette County, Tenn.

"There might be a few shirts and pants down the hill that we can get up, but that's about it."

The storm system, which caused an estimated $72 million in damage to Southern California and Mexico, packed heavy snow that shut down schools, offices, airports and hundreds of miles of highways in the Plains on Tuesday.

At least 27 deaths have been blamed on bad weather this week, including 10 people killed in five plane crashes blamed on fog in Arkansas, California, Illinois, Missouri and Texas.

In Colorado, rescuers were hampered by 3 feet of snow today after a commuter airliner with 17 people aboard crashed in a mountainous area, authorities said. Eight people were killed in Tuesday night's crash.

Snow accumulations early today included 20 inches in Mullen, Neb., 16 inches in Goodland, Kan., 11 in North Platte, Neb., and 9 in Minneapolis and Green Bay, Wis.

"The only thing that's moving out here is snowplows and snowmobiles," said Carrie Rice of Lake Andes, S.D., where more than a foot of new snow fell.

The snow should extend today from southern Minnesota across Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan and northern Illinois, changing to rain over the remainder of the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley through southern New England, the National Weather Service said.

"It's part of the same weather

Needs Of The Chronically Mentally Ill Are Addressed

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The chronically mentally ill are underserved and their needs must be addressed, the North Carolina Mental Health Study Commission was told during a hearing in Greenville Tuesday.

Mary Carter of Salisbury, who said her son is diagnosed as psychotic, said community support for the severely mentally ill released from institutions and prisons must be better provided. She said case loads of social workers in both institutions and prisons are too large and these people are not adequately followed once they are released.

She also told those attending the conference there are discrepancies between the patient populations and fundings for various mental hospitals in the state. She said Broughton Hospital has a patient-doctor ratio of 50-to-one and a $22 million budget, while Dorothea Dix has a 21-to-one patient-doctor ratio and a $29 million.

Cathy Jessen of LOVE — the Local Organization of Volunteers for Epilepsy — said the state needs to give attention to helping its many citizens who have epilepsy lead productive lives.

Lois Batten, area director of the Halifax Mental Health Center, spoke on behalf of increased legislative support for the Child Mental Health Plan, which she said she sees as "a great hope" for the future mental health of the state's citizens.

Rose Will Seek N.C. House Seat

Ed Rose of Greenville has filed as a candidate in the May 3 Democratic primary for the 9th district seat in the North Carolina House of Representatives.

Rose says he supports legislation for a state lottery system and betterment of child care. "I am allowing my name to be placed on the ballot in order to encourage public debate on important issues concerning the status of the American family in present society," he said.

"While other states have applied lottery revenues to education, I want North Carolina to lead the nation by applying such revenues to improve the level of child care in this state," Rose said. "North Carolina is a family state and it is natural that such a state would want to set the model promoting good child care. I want special attention given to abused children and the adequacy of day care facilities in this state."

Commuter Crashes

By ELLEN HADDOW
Associated Press Writer

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — A commuter plane carrying 17 people crashed in a mountainous area near here, killing eight and forcing survivors, including one carrying a toddler, to wade through waist-deep snow to summon help.

The nine survivors of Tuesday night's crash were transported to Mercy Medical Center with injuries that ranged from lacerations, frostbite and hypothermia to head and internal injuries, hospital spokeswoman Jane Brown said today.

Two people, including a 23-month-old girl, were treated and released, five were in good condition, one was in serious condition and one was critically injured, she said.

Rescuers were led to the twin-engine, turboprop's wreckage by the footprints of one survivor who walked about 1 1/2 miles through snow measuring up to 4 feet before reaching a road, authorities said.

"It took us over an hour to even get personnel to them," La Plata Sheriff Bill Gardner said.

Snow tractors and a bulldozer were used to cut a trail through the scrub oak and brush along the rolling hills and hummocks.

Four people trapped inside the wreckage were alive when rescuers arrived, but two died as they were being brought out, said Keith Rousch, a member of the sheriff's volunteer search and rescue team. The other seven survivors walked from the plane.

He said rescuers talked to all four of those trapped. "I don't recall any discussion of the crash," Rousch said. "They were more cold and hurt ... But they managed to hang on under very difficult conditions."

Moratorium OK'd

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners Tuesday placed a 90-day moratorium on outdoor advertising signs along U.S. 264 to provide the county's planning board time to develop an ordinance regulating billboards along the four-lane route.

At present, placement of off-premises outdoor advertising signs are regulated by state Department of Transportation policy. Should the county adopt an ordinance more stringent than state regulations, County Manager Kramer Jackson told commissioners, the DOT would enforce the county's ordinance.

The board, which had discussed such an ordinance in the past, was spurred into action Tuesday by a letter from Charles Coble, dean of the school of education at East Carolina University, which said, "Many people have commented to me how much they enjoy driving to Greenville now that the new highway is open and they have also commented on the beauty of the countryside and the lack of outdoor advertising and clutter along the highway."

"Perhaps it would be a fitting recognition of the progressive state of the East if the highway were to re-

Rezoning, Annexation Issues Endorsed By Planning Board

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission OK'd three items Tuesday which, if approved by City Council, would affect the area near Cannons Crossroads.

The three issues the commission considered were a request to commercially rezone a corner of the White Road and Tar Road intersection, the annexation of a preliminary plat of Tar Road, and rezoning approximately 175 acres situated off White Road.

The first request, approved by a 6-2 vote, recommended City Council change the zoning of two tracts located on the northwest corner of Cannons Crossroads.

Tract 1, 4.36 acres situated on the corner, was recommended to be rezoned from RA-20 (residential/agricultural) to CN (neighborhood commercial) and the second tract, 3.93 acres situated west of the first and along White Road was recommended to be rezoned from RA-20 to O&I-II (office and institutional).

Approximately 20 people from Baywood, a nearby subdivision, and other residents living near the intersection, attended the meeting in opposition to the zoning recommendation.

Dorothy Hudson, a resident of the Evans Street Extension, spoke to the commission against the rezoning.

"We already have a traffic problem on Tar Road. Why do we need any more commercialization? I just can't see the need," she said.

Andy Whitlock, representing the attending members of the Baywood subdivision, said he was concerned about the amount of future commercialization in the area.

"How much commercialization are we going to take, where do we draw the line?" he asked the commission members.

"My overall concern is the stripping out of White Road," said Steve Blades, a commission member who voted against recommending the zoning change.

"We say we were going to restrict it to the corners, I'm afraid we won't. I don't want to see us build another Greenville Boulevard. I'm concerned once we establish a commercial area on one corner, we'll have a hard time saying no on the next stretch," he said.

Chuck Ziehr, who also voted against the recommendation, said he was not against the commercial rezoning of the corner but said he felt the tract with recommended CN zoning was too large.

"As the developer said, its quite likely that no one is going to want a home on that corner, it's just too busy an intersection, so it logically would be a commercial land use, but I just think it's too large a commercial land use," he said.

The commission also unanimously recommended the annexation of a preliminary subdivision plat situated along Tar Road approximately 1 mile from Cannons Crossroads.

The plat, South Hall, consists of 75 single family lots situated on 75.34 acres. The request was made by Greenville Properties.

In a third decision related to the Cannons Crossroads area, the com-

Theft Charges

Two people were arrested by Greenville police on theft charges in connection with separate incidents reported Tuesday.

Officer S.D. Hilliard said Boyd Madrey Paige, 23, of 618 Hudson St., was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of five cans of meat products from the Fresh Way Food Store on South Memorial Drive reported at 1:07 a.m.

Hilliard said Curtis Fields, 31, of 801A Colonial Ave., was charged with aiding and abetting larceny, possession of stolen property and forgery and uttering in connection with the same incident.

Officer W.E. Davis said Angela Marie Linder, 21, of Route 1, Kinston, was charged with shoplifting in connection with the theft of a sweater from Belk's at Carolina East Mall in an incident reported at 7:27 p.m.

Auto Larceny

Michael Jerome Smith, 24, of 1101A N. Washington St., was arrested by Greenville police Tuesday on auto larceny charges.

Sgt. T.V. Woolard said the charge was in connection with the theft of a 1981 Oldsmobile from Pennsylvania Avenue on Jan 10.

Three Arrested

Three Conetoe men were arrested by Greenville police on charges of breaking and entering and larceny from a motor vehicle Tuesday.

Detective G.W. Williams identified the men as Daniel Earl Joseph, 20, Douglas Charles Joseph, 16, and Sidney Maurice Douglas, 16.

Douglas Joseph and Daniel Earl Joseph were both charged in connection with an incident in which a purse containing $5 in cash and several items of jewelry was taken from a car parked in a lot at The Plaza mall reported Jan. 5.

All three men were charged in connection with another case in which items were taken from a car in December.

main in its present condition," so motorists can enjoy the woodlands and farm land "without the constant barrage of billboard advertising which blights so many of the highways in our state," Coble wrote.

The board asked county planner Jeff Ulna to meet with planning board members and get their recommendations on an ordinance to control outdoor advertising.

The board awarded a contract for renovations to the courthouse to create a new 1,600 square foot courtroom to Eastern Construction Co., which submitted a low bid of $73,400 for the project.

Other bids received for the work included $91,500 from Farrior & Sons, $102,000 from Boyd Associates and $106,454 from Ross-Markham.

Commissioners also adopted a resolution asking the General Assembly to refrain from enacting laws which infringe on the authority of county governments to set salaries and fringe benefits of county employees.

The action was spurred by laws passed by the General Assembly establishing special retirement programs — to be paid for by the counties — for law enforcement officers and registers of deeds.

The resolution adopted Monday is similar to a resolution on local government autonomy passed by the board of directors of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners in December.

The resolution suggests in part that, "it is not in the best interest of an effective and strong county government system for continued deterioration of home rule relating to county employees salaries and fringe benefits," to continue, and said, "The General Assembly is urged to refrain from additional restraints and restrictions so that the strong tradition of county government authority may continue to serve the citizens of North Carolina."

In other business Monday, the board named Camille P. Kroll of Greenville to the state's Challenge 87 project and designated Jan. 22 at National Activity Professional Day in Pitt County.

Payments

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The state's intermediate-level appeals court has rejected a Duluth woman's request that pop singer Daryl Hall pay her $10,000 a month for child support.

The Court of Appeals decision to be filed today affirmed St. Louis County District Judge John Oswald's order last March that Hall pay $1,000 a month.

Hall, the 38-year-old partner with John Oates in the "Hall and Oates" group, has acknowledged being the father of 24-year-old Andrea Zabloski's son, Darren. Hall, who lives in Millbrook, N.Y., is unmarried and has no other children.

GOOD SAMARITANS

Too often in today's world, we are confronted with the bad deeds of our fellow men. We seldom ever notice that our fellow man still performs good deeds. My wife and I were the recipients of such good deeds by two of Pitt County's own good Samaritans. This past Thursday evening, we were returning from a trip out of town on a very desolate stretch of the new 264 when a tire on our vehicle blew out. It was approximately 11:15 p.m., 15 degrees and traffic was very light. I am suffering from a lower back problem and my wife was faced with the virtually impossible task of changing the tire by herself. The very first vehicle that came along stopped to render assistance. Bobby Joyner, our Pitt County fire marshal, and Lyman Hardec, chief of the Eastern Pines Fire Department, were returning from a meeting out of town and were already late in rejoining their respective families. Yet, despite the temperature, the lateness of the hour and the potential danger to themselves from rendering aid to stranded motorists, these gentlemen helped us. Thank you for helping us acknowledge the good deeds of two of Pitt County's finest. Kenneth E. Haigler

Charges Dismissed

Speed competition charges against six men, brought after a fatal collision on the Farmville east throughfare Sept. 30, were dismissed in district court Tuesday by Judge H. Horton Rountree at the close of the state's evidence.

The men, Joshua Artis, 22, of Route 1, Snow Hill; Melvin Sutton, 24, of 112 Midget Lane, Greenville; Paul Streeter, 20, of 131 Catawba St., Greenville; Wheeler Davis, 18, of Grifton; Randy Earl Edwards, 21, of 206 Trey Drive, Greenville, and Terry Lavon Cannon, address unavailable, were arrested Oct. 13 on speed competition charges.

Highway Patrol Trooper Coy Taylor, who investigated the fatal wreck, said at the time the six were arrested they were allegedly involved in prearranged racing with Jeffrey Collins Johnson, 24, of Farmville, the driver of one of the cars involved in the collision. Johnson died Oct. 5 of injuries he received in the crash.

The Johnson car collided head-on with a car driven by Wesley Mitchell Taft, 52, of Matthews Trailer Park, near Farmville, who died at the scene of the 7:30 a.m. wreck.

Planning Board Endorses Petitions For Rezoning, Annexation

mission unanimously recommended the extension of the extraterritorial jurisdiction of the city south and parallel to White Road, east of the Treetops subdivision and west of the Geneva M. Jackson property along SR 1709.
A tract belonging to Harry M. Dudley has been recommended zoned RA-20 (residential/agricultural) and two other tracts, belonging to W.E. Dansey, Jr., and Wilton Evans, respectively, were recommended zoned R6-MH (mobile home). Commercial development already existing on the property would be allowed to continue as a nonconforming use, according to Bobby Roberson, director of planning and development.

In other action, the commission granted a special use permit to Greenville Properties for a planned unit development located south of Stantonsburg Road approximately two miles from Pitt Memorial Hospital.

According to City Attorney Mac McCarley, the special PUD ordinance required all persons speaking for or against the proposal at last night's meeting, including staff members and attorneys, to be sworn in, and the permit request needed approval by four fifths of the membership of the board to pass.
According to Roberson, the developer was required to present just a general land use plan to the commission.

"This gives you an opportunity to actually see on paper all the uses that are permitted and the planning commission has an opportunity for the first time to actually see the plans," he added.
"We've been pushing as a commission, the planned unit concept and this is the first one of the city," said Wallace Wooles, commission chairman.
"It's kind of exciting. I must congratulate the developers, it (The PUD) is in conformity with all the existing zoning out there. I think so far we're all following every step of the ordinance. Everybody is doing this in the right way and I'm kind of anxious to see what happens next," he said.
Wooles added that the success of this project could spur other developers to use PUDs also.

"We've worked very closely with the staff and we feel like its going to be a step forward for Greenville," said Tommie Little, a partner of Greenville Properties.
According to the PUD plans, the 100-acre tract is to be divided into seven separate sections providing for rental townhomes, duplexes, single family units, and non-residential open space.
The commission also recommended at the request of Methodist Retirement Homes, the closing of an unopened portion of Third Street stretching 925 feet, recommended the annexation of 2.61 acres located off the southwest portion of 264 Business and Grace Avenue, and unanimously recommended the satellite annexation of phases one and two of Plant-er's Walk, a 48.39 acre plat south of Quail Ridge and east of Tuckahoe.

Needs Addressed

Sallie Sheldon, executive director of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County, asked for a better continuum of care for the chronically mentally ill. She said more use of volunteers needs to be made. Sometimes a friend is what a chronically mentally ill person wants and needs more than anything else, she said.
Doris Jeter, speaking for the Alliance for the Mentally Ill, said discharge planning at the mental hospitals needs to be improved. She said one person being released from Dorothea Dix recently was provided no place to go other than a referral to the Raleigh homeless shelter for his first night out. She said that most of the members of the Alliance are aging parents of adult mentally ill children and the most frequent question heard among the group is "What will happen to my child when I'm gone?"
Gladys Fisher said her son was severely beaten by a staff member of a state mental hospital. She proposed that state hospitals involve families of the patients more in their care, provide more exercise equipment and supervision and see that the patients participate, encourage gardening and other outdoor activity, and share among themselves and with other mental health professionals in other states ideas that work for the good of the chronically mentally ill.

Larry Erle, president of the Chaps Recovery Program, said insurance reimbursement for treatment of mental illness and chemical dependency should be increased. "A person can smoke and eat badly for years, give himself a heart attack and get unlimited insurance coverage during his illness or for surgery," he said. "Yet people who become chemically dependent often have their benefits held as low as $3,000 per year. This is not an equitable situation."

U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., told local government and business leaders at a conference on communicating with elected officials to pick up the phone and call their lawmakers.
"The most important attention getter is a telephone call," Jones told the approximately 30 people who attended the congressional district-wide conference at the Sheraton Greenville Tuesday.
"Secondly is a single letter sent by a single person sending forth their conviction or their desires. I can assure you that I look at every letter that's sent to me from my elective district," he said.
According to Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the purpose of the conference was to strengthen the business Congressional Committee network in anticipation of votes on labor and other business-related issues in the 100th Congress.
Several guest speakers offered suggestions on how to organize and operate an effective chamber congressional action program, how to develop a corporate governmental affairs program and how to communicate with your congressman.

Jim Schell, legislative manager of the U.S. Chamber, reviewed congressional items of interest to business operators.
Among the issues are proposals to increase the minimum wage, federally mandated health-care benefits, and the controversy over comparable worth.
"There's a lot of issues that affect businesses in general," Schell said.
Jones said business leaders can be more effective in communicating with their elected officials by being specific about their concerns and interests in the legislature.
"Be specific, give a reason why you're for it or against it, I want to hear your comments, I want to know what you're thinking," Jones said.
Jones also said that having a lack of communication with constituents can spell defeat for elected officials.
"Within two days, every inquiry (to me), every telephone call is answered in some way or another," he said.
Jones added that the least effective method of communication is the petition, which often contains hundreds of names.

Audit Suggests Hospital's Finances In Good Shape

By CAROL TYER

The cash flow problem experienced in December by Pitt County Memorial Hospital has eased and the financial condition of the hospital is excellent, according to an audit presented to the hospital's board of trustees.
Norma Van Veld, chairman of the hospital's audit committee, told PCMH trustees Tuesday the Ernst and Whinney accounting firm recently gave the hospital an "unqualified" audit, showing it to be in excellent financial condition.
Cash on hand at present is enough for 17 operating days, the trustees were told. This amount is down from 37 days on hand in September. Part of the cash flow problem in December was paying $1.6 on the hospital's computer system, trustees were told.
A nominating committee to propose a slate of trustee officers at the February meeting was appointed. Norma Van Veld is chairman and Arlee Griffin and William Flowers will serve on the committee.
The Joint Committee on Accreditation of Hospitals will make an assessment visit to the hospital March 2-4, the board was told. Dr. Michael Weaver, chief of staff, said that the JCAH committee of the hospital has completed a self-assessment that hopefully has anticipated all or most of the issues that JCAH representatives will look into.

The board was told the Joint Policy Committee of the hospital, medical school and the county has recently elected Dr. Edwin Monroe as its chairman. The committee meets quarterly.
Omniflight, supplier of the helicopters and pilot and maintenance crew for the hospital's air ambulance service, has recently hired a fourth pilot. If he is approved by hospital officials, he will be on duty by the end of this month, according to Charles Joyner, board representative to the hospital's transportation committee.

The first Saturday in April and the first Saturday in October were designated by the board as the auction days for the hospital's salvageable items.
Roy Selby of the medical school told the group that a public hearing on the need for six additional neonatal beds in Greenville will be held Feb. 11 at 2 p.m. in the hospital auditorium.

Payment Awarded
FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The Fayetteville City Council has authorized the payment of $1.46 million to a man who was left sterile after being kneed in the groin by a city police officer.
The council voted to pay Henry Z. Spell Tuesday night, just hours after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review Spell's police brutality suit.

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The pilot of a twin-engine plane was injured when he tried to land in heavy fog and crashed near Charlotte-Douglas International Airport.
The De Havilland DH6 plane went down in a wooded area near N.C. 160 south of the airport Tuesday, officials said.
The pilot, Steven G. Honermann, 37, of Newton, was being treated at Charlotte Memorial Hospital late Tuesday. Charlotte firefighters who treated him at the crash site said he suffered head injuries, two broken arms, and a possible back injury.
He was alert and talking in the emergency room as doctors checked for other injuries, The Charlotte Observer reported.
Honermann told rescue workers he was unable to see in the fog and came in short of the runway.
Charlotte firefighter Dennis McGinn was combing the woods on foot when he heard Honermann yell.
"I was about three-quarters of a mile into the woods when I heard him holler," McGinn said. "I thought it was another searcher. I couldn't see my hand in front of my face."
The plane belonged to Mountain Air Cargo Inc. in Little Mountain. A Mountain Air spokesman said Honermann was returning from Erie, Pa.

AVAir Procedure Raises Questions

The troubles of AVAir should not prevent American Airlines from continuing its commuter service to the airline's regional hub at Raleigh-Durham Airport.

The manner in which AVAir suspended American Eagle flights was inconvenient and unprofessional, and, if the interruption of air service persists, could tarnish the success of American's regional hub at Raleigh-Durham Airport. The move could also hurt the communities dependent upon American Eagle for air service.

Simply closing up shop abruptly with no explanation is questionable operating procedure, especially in an industry where dependability and consistency form the basis for service. It is understandable a firm filing for reorganization in bankruptcy court would cease operation at a reasonable point to avoid incurring more liabilities. But advance warning of closure is responsible when the business involves public convenience.

Customers were left with nothing but a toll-free number to call for assistance. The company's actions did not inspire the confidence necessary for an airline.

American Airlines bears part of the responsibility for this sequence of events. It is clear the organization should have been more actively involved in the commuter operation, and insisted on more accountability.

But American can, and should, maintain a quality commuter air service because it is essential to the success of its hub at RDU. In addition, Greenville should remain on the slate of cities served by the airline.

Operating a regional hub without a commuter service negates the impact of the concept. Without a commuter airline to feed it, a hub is ineffective. If an airline can't get passengers to its regional operations base from smaller communities, it can't make the hub work.

The commuter airline system is also important to small urban areas whose growth depends on good transportation links with larger metropolitan areas. Greenville is fortunate American Eagle is only one of two commuter lines serving its airport. The community will not totally lose service, but the loss of one airline can have a psychological impact.

AV Air's demise may not directly affect flight service at Pitt-Greenville Airport but it can be seen as a backwards step for the facility. Attracting a second airline was a significant event in the airport's growth. It moved PGV in the direction of a regional facility by offering an advantage other nearby airports can't — a second air service. The boom in passenger service supported this progression.

It is nearly certain the loss of American Eagle flights from PGV will be temporary. The community needs a flexible, convenient flight schedule provided by two airlines, and American Airlines is bound to provide a solid commuter service to its regional hub at RDU.

AVAir's role in this sequence of events is likely ended. American should quickly take the initiative to install a replacement service with a higher degree of responsiveness.

Simplification

The labor of tax listing is rapidly being simplified in this computer age.

The county commissioners recently decided to begin a permanent tax listing system for real estate beginning March 1. Property owners are currently listing their property on forms provided by the county. They have until Feb. 1 to do so without incurring a penalty.

After March 1, however, real property will be automatically listed under a system that will have the county tax assessor's office review all deeds.

The permanent listing of real property will do away with late listing penalties for real estate. Officials say it will save the county time and money.

Taxpayers will still have to do some listing, though. Personal property — vehicles, boats, mobile homes, aircraft, farm equipment and business personal property will have to be listed by the taxpayer. Nevertheless property tax assessment will become a little less complicated.

A simpler system can also mean fewer mistakes. More accuracy is a goal that could net the county more collections. There could be drawbacks to this system, however, for those citizens who have benefited from past errors.

There was a time when all property owners were required to visit a tax listing location during January to declare their properties. In recent years listing by mail has been accepted. Now the real property portion will also be done.

The tax listing system is improving, and it means more convenience for the public and more efficiency for local government.

To the editor:

A terrible plague swept the land. Many victims were young. In its path it left pain, fear, death and despair. The land was troubled.

And the leader of the people spoke out. He vowed that the plague would be vanquished. He began a great crusade. He persuaded millions of his countrymen to join. None ever had reason to doubt the depth of his dedication.

The crusade sought to solve the riddle of the plague and to soothe the suffering of its victims. Great healers and thinkers enlisted in the cause. When dollars were dear, coins sustained the fight.

And so it was that the great crippler of earlier generations — polio myelitis — was conquered by the "March of Dimes." The crusade begun in 1938 by President Franklin D. Roosevelt paid off in 1955 with the Salk polio vaccine, soon followed by the Sabin vaccine. In 1958, the organization changed its name and broadened its purpose, taking on another crippler of the young: birth defects.

In this year of 1988, chapters of the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation will mark its 50th anniversary. Coastal Plains Division is remembering with special fondness its volunteers who — since the Crusade in 1938 — have shared their leadership and participation "marching" the battlefronts of polio ... and now birth defects.

Our crusade continues. To reflect upon our history of conquering the plague of polio only gives us strength in the knowledge of our abilities to provide a healthy beginning for our children by also conquering birth defects. There is nothing more important than our children, our grandchildren and the children coming after that. They are our future.

During January, Mothers Marchers will be again knocking on doors. Please continue the tradition of 50 years by turning on your porch lights and opening your heart for our children.

Concerning your letter to the editor from Mike Strub, I'd like to thank him for his expert opinion. I am honored Greenville has not met his qualifications.

Of course, Greenville has a few miles ahead to go before it becomes truly metropolitan. We have to achieve certain quota like high crime rate, ridiculous prices, overcrowding, and let's not forget neighbors that you don't know and don't want to know.

I agree, until we get that image, we have not really become metropolitan. Oh well, we tried!

To the editor:

To comment on Carroll Webber's letter on his idea that the CIA should be abolished, I would like to start by quoting the next two paragraphs from a recent editorial in Diario Las Americas of Miami.

"There are many individuals in this country that go along with the enemies of the United States without realizing what they are doing and believing that it is something that adds prestige to our nation.

Although a high degree of civilization is a characteristic of this country, it must be noted that in what concerns foreign policy, the political knowledge and the cunning of the majority of this noble people is not in line with that high degree of civilization. As a result of this, any observer of the international scene quickly notices that the American people do not know their enemies, their tactics, and how they brainwash those whom they hate. Specifically the American people."

Although Mr. Webber starts his letter with a brief mention of the Soviet KGB, in the rest of his letter, we are the bad guys and refers us to a bibliography on how bad is our CIA.

But what about the KGB, the Cubans, the Bulgarians and so on. If we go along with his idea, will the Soviet Union dismantle its KGB? Will the Berlin Wall come down?

We all want peace in the world, but we are not the only evil. Can we name a single country that is dominated by the United States in the same way the Soviet Union does with its own people, Cuba, Angola, Poland, East Germany, Nicaragua, Hungary. Should I continue? ...

Our country is not perfect, but this is the land of the free and we should be proud of it.

Quality Or Quantity For Jewish State?

The events of the last six weeks in Israel's occupied territories have shed new light on the existential dilemma of the Jewish state, for Israel is at the same time more and less of a state than any ordinary nation in the world. It is more of a state because Israel, in spite of its present military superiority over its neighbors and diplomatic strength as the foremost ally of the United States in the region, considers itself to be, and largely is, in a pre-Renaissance situation, as existed before the emergence of mutually recognized nation-states. Most of its neighbors, with the notable exception of Egypt (and maybe Jordan), still question, at least in their hearts, Israel's very right to exist. Since emotions can never be fully controlled, the Arab states could revert to open hostility.

The latest clash is the product of Israeli fear and Palestinian despair. The demographic situation within the territories occupied by Israel is looking like a permanent time bomb that the passage of time is aggravating, not defusing.

Israel has been encouraged by the combination of weakness, division and rigidity within the Palestine Liberation Organization. Yet the Israelis are also lacking the inspiration of a great leader, which they badly need. It is the tragic irony of history that, when small, Israel had a great statesman, David Ben-Gurion, while the "great" Israel has had only politicians. A mixture of fear and lack of clear alternatives pushes the Israelis to resort to crude Realpolitik as a source of inspiration and to allow themselves to retreat in a Masada-like type of behavior when confronted with external criticism.

Israel also is more of a state in another sense: It is the repository and the custodian of an ancestral history and a religious tradition that have miraculously survived in spite (or because) of the earlier dramas of history.

If Israel is a state in the pre-

'The latest clash is the product of Israeli fear and Palestinian despair. The demographic situation within the territories occupied by Israel is looking like a permanent time bomb that the passage of time is aggravating, not defusing.'

Renaissance mode, however, reliance on a cold Machiavellianism is insufficient. It is neither as powerful as the Soviet Union nor as secure in its identity as China, nor as protected from the clouds of history as Australia — nor, of course, as populous as most of its nemeses.

Israel remains, in spite of its present relative superiority toward its neighbors, a strong but vulnerable appendage on the surface of the Earth. Its long-term survival depends on whether it is accepted as legitimate by its hostile neighbors. This can only be the product of diplomacy and strength, not strength alone.

Israelis resent the fact that the world applies to them moral criteria that are not imposed on any other state in the region. This may be a dubious honor and an unfair singularization, but it is the price to be paid by a democracy — especially given its status as the only one in its region. It is also a price to be paid when one has set initially for oneself the goal of being different — a state more moral than the others, particularly the traditional European countries, whose immorality had led, through two world wars, to the catastrophes of European history that extracted from the Jews a singularly higher price.

It has been the tragic irony of history that the creation of Israel, a fulfillment of an immemorial dream but more concretely the translation of the last nationalist wave of 19th-Century European history, materialized itself — accelerated by the emotional shock of Auschwitz — precisely at the moment when decolonization was starting in what was to be called the Third World. As Palestinian demonstrations and Israeli repressions accelerate, the situation will gradually appear to be (and be seen as) one of the last manifestations of decolonization. Israel's image, which had begun to recover from the excesses in Lebanon, leading to a mellowing of its diplomatic isolation, will tend to be tarnished again, probably with the same kind of emotional exaggeration.

Contrary to what has been said by some commentators, the latest developments cannot in themselves produce a new reading of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict — one that would make the Palestinians the gradual victor of the last 20 years. The respective inability of each side to come to terms with the other can lead only to tragedy for both. In the Middle East one can very well apply Albert Camus' observation, on the aftermath of the Hungarian uprising of 1956: "One is always too generous with the blood of others." But if one should not encourage extremism, can moderation be forced on others?

Ultimately Israel's existence depends on its recognition as legitimate within its regional environment. Such a recognition presupposes a territorial compromise. The status quo is a guarantee for disaster. Israel's essence as a democratic state and Israel's security will in time suffer from it. It might be said that the fateful choice before Israel is one between quantity (keeping the territories) and quality (preserving the essence of the Jewish state).

Security is not necessarily a matter of acres.

Strength For Today

Success is usually conceived in terms of wealth, power, and recognition. But to a small minority of people it means service.

This is the highest form of success, and often it can be attained only at the sacrifice of power and recognition. The missionary, the social worker, the unheralded, unobtrusive volunteer for community service — these are some, but certainly not all, of the people who devote their lives to others rather than to themselves and those nearest them.

And often these are the people who achieve the one thing which so often eludes the seekers after personal success — real happiness. The successful man in the eyes of the world often dies with a tragic sense of failure which the person who has devoted his life to service never feels.

Too Good To Last

MOSCOW — If any group of people on earth has good reason to be instinctively paranoid, it is the Soviet intelligentsia. There have been seven decades of Soviet power, and it has been open season on the intellectuals for five of them.

So there is every historical justification for the mounting chorus of gloom and imminent doom that I hear on every side in Moscow these days. "Glasnost" and reform may indeed be too good to last, and it could all end in tears. But there is a new and feverish pitch to the knee-jerk pessimism that one now hears.

"You realize, of course, that when they get (Soviet leader Mikhail) Gorbachev, it means war," said a Russian journalist friend who is doing very well indeed out of glasnost. "Just think of the kind of coalition they will have to build to overthrow Gorbachev. They will need the army, the KGB, the Stalinists, the old Brezhnev hacks, and the first thing they will do is purge everybody who supported Gorbachev. It will be like Stalin's time again."

"And that will be the end of detente with the West. So we will have a whole new tension with the Americans just as Eastern Europe erupts in protest. And then we send the tanks in to crush the Poles or the Czechs or Hungarians. It means war."

The logical fallacy in this gloomy scenario is that Gorbachev is going to be toppled. But the prospect is not the idle fancy of a gloomy Russian writer after vodka. It is almost commonplace in conversation, and even in print.

Take Novy Mir, the leading literary monthly, and official organ of the Union of Writers. This month's issue carries the first installment of Pasternak's "Dr. Zhivago," the first legal Russian publication after 30 years of banning. But everybody is talking of another article altogether, titled "Ideals or Interests," by Andrei Nuikin, ostensibly a series of musings on the press under glasnost.

The phrase that has caught public attention is his definition of Stalin's seizure of supreme power as "a counter-revolutionary state coup." We may be used to this kind of metaphor in the West. Here, it rings like a ricochet in Red Square. Think it through. If Stalin was a counter-revolutionary, where does that leave the revolutionary credentials of today's Soviet Union.

Nuikin then says that without Stalin's coup, the cause of Socialism would not have been so discredited in the 1930s that Fascism was able to rise. He puts it even more strongly, arguing that by wiping out the private sector, in trade and on the land, Stalin terrified the peasants everywhere and made it almost impossible to build anti-Fascist coalitions elsewhere in Europe.

But there is more. Nuikin goes on to say that until Stalin's coup, there was a state of "dual power" in the country, an uneasy and unresolved tension between two political factions. Fair enough, but this is the point at which Nuikin drags us back to the present day.

"For the second time in the 20th century, we are witnessing a kind of 'dual power' in Russia, when neither side is prepared to launch a decisive offensive, and awaits its hour, limiting its activities for the moment to particular operations for reconnaissance purposes," he concludes.

This is scary stuff. The Soviet Union's most prestigious literary magazine is running an article that suggests the country is today in a pre-coup situation, just as it was before Stalin took over.

The mood of Moscow is going to be made worse as copies of Michel Tatu's new study of Gorbachev start to arrive. Tatu, who was Le Monde's brilliant correspondent here during the Khrushchev period, was the man who invented modern Kremlinology. His book "Le Pouvoir au Kremlin" is a classic. It is not only a sustained feat of analysis, but also a groundbreaking piece of detective work, scouring the published sources for the hints and clues that revealed the real political process behind the monolithic facade.

That book was published 20 years ago. Tatu's new book on Gorbachev came out only last month in Paris. But word travels fast here. I must have had one of the first copies in Moscow, but already half a dozen people have button-holed me to ask if it's true that Tatu is predicting Gorbachev's assassination.

Up to a point, comrade. What Tatu says, in my rough translation, is this:

"Will they inflict a Khrushchev-style coup upon him, a brutal eviction from power? Given all that Gorbachev has done to get Western opinion to appreciate his efforts, the reaction abroad to such a development would be disastrous. Another solution which one should not rule out would be the unfortunate accident which would permit the burial of the reformer with full honors, and the proclamation loud and clear by his successor of the key words 'glasnost' and 'perestroika,' while giving to those a very different meaning. Between these extreme solutions, the guerrilla war looks like it will be going on for a long time. ..." ("Gorbachev: Is the USSR Going to Change?" by Michel Tatu, is published by Editions le Centurion, Paris.)

Tatu is a serious man, one of the outstanding journalists of our time. So this is not just idle speculation, but the considered view of one of the most respected Sovietologists in Europe. And it echoes the fears and inbred paranoia that many of my Soviet acquaintances began to voice during and after the Boris Yeltsin affair. This was seen by several sources as so damaging for Gorbachev that only his outstanding personal success at the Washington summit restored his position.

Gorbachev himself remains in good heart, giving a very cheery New Year pep-talk to his shock-troops of glasnost, the Soviet mass-media men. The reforms would continue, and the people were behind them, ran the thrust of his speech as reported in the press.

But according to people who were present, they were sobered by the way he kept stressing that the reform movement was all or nothing, do or die.

"If we stop now, it will be death, for we will not be able to get up a second time," he told them. And then he repeated it. "If we stop, it will be our death." This article is not an attempt to predict what is taking place inside the Kremlin, to say whether a coup is building. All my political instincts and sources say that Gorbachev's position is fundamentally secure. But I really do not know, and any Western observer who says different is talking through his hat.

Parks Helms, Thornburg File For State Races

By The Associated Press
 Attorney General Lacy Thornburg says he wants to serve a second term to continue the battle against drug trafficking.

"Our war against drug traffickers continues unabated, and we have taken strong steps now to attack the demand for illegal drugs," Thornburg said Tuesday as he hopped across the state to file for office.

"To better fight drug trafficking on the supply side, we now have more drug agents and better legal tools with which to work," he said. "We successfully fought for passage of a strong law which permits the state to seize the illegally gained assets of drug dealers, so we can now take the profits out of crime and turn those resources back against the criminals who victimize our citizens."

Thornburg started his announcement swing in Sylva and went to Raleigh and Charlotte.

Elsewhere in politics, former state legislator Parks Helms filed for the Democratic nomination as lieutenant governor and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan received an endorsement from Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, who once considered challenging him for the nomination.

In addition to state candidates, two presidential contenders flew into the state. Republican nominee-seeker Vice President George Bush attended a fund raiser and a Bush For President organization meeting in Winston-Salem. Democratic candidate Gary Hart campaigned in Fayetteville.

Helms said he would push for veto power for the governor, and cautioned state leaders to take a closer look at the environmental impact of the superconducting super collider.

He said veto power would create a better balance between the executive and legislative branches of government and make the governor part of the legislative process.

Helms, who was a state representative from 1974 to 1984, also promised to change what he called "politics as usual" in the state.

"This campaign will be about leadership and openness in public office. For the past year, I've talked and listened to the people across our state, and we've shared ideas for the future," he said.

Since July, he has traveled more than 23,000 miles across the state to meet with Democratic party activists and leaders.

He said the superconducting super collider needed a closer look before it is welcomed to the state.

"You have to ask if the environmental harm would be worth the risk," Helms said. "I think we need to look at it now and decide if in fact it is in the best interest of the people of North Carolina."

He said the financial benefit to the state may be blinding government officials to the other possible impacts of the super collider. Helms said he was especially concerned that the proposed site in North Carolina is near an important source of drinking water for Durham, Granville and Person counties.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's Democratic campaign for governor received the blessing Tuesday from a former Jordan foe - Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, who said he will support Jordan "to the hilt."

"I would like to say loud and clear that I do endorse Bob Jordan as governor of North Carolina," Watkins told a breakfast organized by Granville County school officials in Oxford. "I will do whatever I can, however I can and wherever I can see that he is governor of North Carolina."

Watkins, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, declared last summer he would seek the party's nomination. He went so far as to sponsor a rally at the State Fairgrounds in Raleigh, at which he appeared wearing cowboy garb and riding on a mule.

Jordan said he was relieved that Watkins was backing him instead of opposing him.

"If Billy and I had been running against each other in the primary, I can't tell you what that outcome would have been," Jordan said.

"But I know it would have been something that I would have rather not have gone through with. ... There is nothing more important than seeing that the people understand who I am and have the person that I have sometimes disagreed with in the past come up and say the bottom line is that the right things got done."

Watkins said Jordan was qualified to be governor because he had years of experience in state government as a key official and had a solid private business background.

Hart told students at Fayetteville Technical Community College they should not elect a president without knowing his plans for deficit reduction. Hart, in a lecture that included blackboard illustrations, proposed a tax on imported oil as well as higher taxes for the wealthy.

Poll Gives Edge To Bush, Hart, Jackson

BOSTON (AP)—A poll of voters in 13 Southern states suggests Vice President George Bush has a better than 2-1 lead over Republican rival Bob Dole, while Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson led the Democratic presidential field.

The Gallup poll indicated Hart had the support of 26 percent among Democrats, while Jackson had 21 percent and Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee had 17 percent.

The rest of the Democrats registered in single digits: 8 percent for Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt drew 6 percent, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon had 5 percent and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt had 2 percent. Fourteen percent were undecided.

The Democratic poll had a margin of error of plus or minus five percentage points.

On the Republican side, Bush led with 54 percent, trailed by Dole with 25 percent.

Pat Robertson had 7 percent; New York Rep. Jack Kemp, 5 percent, and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and Alexander Haig had 2 percent each. Five percent were undecided.

The Republican poll had a margin of error of plus or minus six percentage points.

States covered by the poll included North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, Virginia and South Carolina.

They are among the 20 states holding primaries or caucuses on March 8, dubbed Super Tuesday.

The poll of 1,201 voters was conducted January 15-17 for The Boston Globe, WEEI radio and WCVB-TV. It included 322 Republican voters and 370 Democrats.

PTL Pastor Testifies

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — After three hours testifying before a grand jury investigating PTL founder Jim Bakker, PTL pastor Sam Johnson said there were wrongdoings at the television ministry, but the jury must decide if they were crimes.

"What the future holds, they're determining," Johnson said Tuesday. "That's what they're trying to determine."

"There were wrongdoings. We've all felt that," the 48-year-old pastor of Heritage Village Church said as he left the federal courthouse in Charlotte.

Johnson refused to tell reporters about questions or his responses during his second appearance before the grand jury.

"That's confidential between me and the grand jury," he said.

Johnson first appeared before the grand jury in November — the same month federal investigators learned he had loaned $10,000 to former PTL President Richard Dortch.

Investigators are trying to find out whether Johnson's money was given to church secretary Jessica Hahn after she agreed to sign a statement denying her 1980 affair with Bakker in a Florida hotel room.

Federal prosecutors were expected to continue questioning Johnson about the $10,000 he loaned Dortch in 1984 and the $13,700 he was repaid. They also want to know where Johnson got the $10,000.

Johnson has said the money was his, that he has the documents to prove it and that he was repaid with PTL money.

Johnson also was apparently questioned Tuesday about the sale of lifetime partnerships and whether PTL leaders knew they were being oversold. The Charlotte Observer reported. Prosecutors also asked Johnson about PTL's efforts to have Bibles printed and distributed in China.

Dole Pledges His Support Of INF Treaty

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

AP Political Writer

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — GOP presidential contender Bob Dole, once prodded by Vice President George Bush to take a stand on the INF treaty, says he will be the lead-off witness in support of the arms control pact when Senate hearings open next week.

In a speech Tuesday night on the University of Iowa campus, the Senate Republican leader defended his reluctance to give the agreement an immediate endorsement, saying, "I have done my homework on this treaty."

Bush had called on all the Republican presidential candidates to back the treaty even before it was signed by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev at their Washington summit in December.

Dole insisted he wanted to read the agreement first, and eventually endorsed it.

"Because I have done my homework — and the Senate Republicans I lead know I have done my homework — I can make to you today the same pledge I made to President Reagan: I will lead the fight to win Senate approval of the INF treaty," he said.

The pact calls for the elimination of intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Bush, campaigning in North Carolina on Tuesday, praised the agreement. "It's a good treaty," he said. "I think we should build on it."

Meanwhile, Republican rival Jack Kemp stepped up his criticism of the treaty, accusing the Reagan administration Tuesday of giving Congress "inaccurate and incomplete" information about it.

The New York congressman, in a letter to Secretary of State George P. Shultz, complained about the administration's handling of a controversy over whether the Soviets provided accurate data about one of the missiles to be eliminated by the treaty.

Dole's speech to the Iowa City Foreign Relations Council was one of a series Dole plans to deliver to spell out his views on a range of issues.

Next in line is a speech on the economy and the budget.

The Kansas senator also used some of his strongest language to date to criticize the secret arms sales to Iran, an issue that is dogging Bush.

The vice president insists he has answered all questions about the affair except for what advice he gave the president. Bush says he will not disclose that private advice.

"There is just no excuse," said Dole "for the disastrous arms sales to the Ayatollah — or to anyone else in Iran. Those sales knocked into a cocked hat the credibility of the formal U.S. policy of no concessions to terrorists."

The Kansas senator also called on the nation's European allies to pay a greater share of the burden for defense of the continent.

"It is time for countries who owe their freedom to America's defense shield; who owe their prosperity to America's foreign aid and trade — it is time for them to realize that there is a 'deposit' window, as well as a 'withdrawal' window, at alliance banks," he said.

He suggested that in order to pay a fairer share, wealthy nations, including Japan, should help finance an alliance strategic oil reserve located outside the Middle East.

Runaway Bus Kills Three Pedestrians

By MARY McGRATH
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A bus sped out of control through an intersection and "just mowed people down" during a rush-hour crash that killed three pedestrians and injured 15, according to a witness and authorities.

Bodies were strewn in the downtown intersection and the injured sat dazed along the sidewalk after Tuesday evening's accident.

"I heard the screams and the crunch of bones," said Nyno Gutierrez, a 24-year-old office worker. "The next thing, I ran over and there was this blond lady dying. You could see right away her body was turned all over."

The accident occurred shortly after 5 p.m. when the bus slammed into a car and careened down Fremont Street, hitting several people crossing at the intersection with Mission Street near the financial district.

The San Mateo County Transit bus dragged the car and continued speeding down the side of the street for another half-block before ramming a tree, authorities said. The bus, which had 12 people aboard, knocked over a power line and several trees, parking meters and newspaper boxes before halting in front of the headquarters of Bechtel Group Inc.

Richard Puma, a chef at a restaurant across the street, said patrons gasped and jumped up as they heard the trees and utility poles snapping. "The bus was out of control," said Rick Greenwell. "It roared through the intersection and just mowed people down."

"I saw him run over one person," said Betty Torres of South San Francisco. "Everyone was screaming. Everyone was saying, 'Oh my God!' They were saying, 'It's the worst thing I've ever seen!'"

The bus driver, who was taken to a hospital but was not seriously injured, told investigators the accelerator pedal stuck before he collided with the car, said Police Chief Frank Jordan.

Jordan said the cause appeared to have been either a mechanical failure or driver error in properly handling the gas pedal. An investigation has ruled out alcohol and drugs.

Most of the injured were listed in either fair or stable condition at hospitals. The most seriously injured was a 39-year-old woman who was listed in critical condition at San Francisco General Hospital.

Neither the 11 bus passengers nor the driver of the car and a passenger were seriously injured, police said.

The bus line carries commuters to and from San Mateo County, south of San Francisco.

Polygamists Back Up Threats With Burst Of Gunfire

By LAURIE SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

MARION, Utah (AP) — Heavily armed police tightened the seal around a band of rebel polygamists today after shots rang out from the compound where they have been barricaded since bombing a church four days ago, authorities said.

Six to 10 shots were fired Tuesday afternoon as police brought in floodlights and low-flying aircraft to step up pressure on the clan, authorities said.

No one was injured and police did not return the fire.

"The gunfire only indicates to us that their threats are real," said Doug Bodrero, deputy state director of public safety.

Teams of officers in vehicles were stationed around the log house on the 2½-acre compound late Tuesday, Bodrero said.

"We not only want to make sure that no one comes out, we want to make sure no one goes in," he said.

At least 14 people have been holed up in the house since a Mormon Church chapel one-half mile away was bombed early Saturday.

Felony charges in the bombing have been filed against Vickie Singer, 44-year-old widow of polygamist John Singer, who was killed in a confrontation with police nine years ago Monday, and Addam Swapp, 27, who is married to two of Singer's daughters.

Bodrero said Swapp also is married to Vickie Singer, but a relative who has acted as a mediator during the siege has denied that.

Bodrero said it was unclear if the shots were aimed at police or the lights. He would not say whether the shots damaged the lights, but they came on after dark.

Vickie Singer said by telephone Saturday that the bombing was "symbolic of what is coming," and vowed there would be other deaths.

A son-in-law of Singer, Roger Bates, who visited the cabin Sunday and Monday nights to mediate, said the clan has vowed to hold out until Singer is "resurrected."

The clan leaders have refused since Saturday to talk with authorities. A televised plea was issued to them Tuesday night to communicate with police.

"If there's one thing we can do to get the message across, it's that they open the phone lines to us and let us work this out person to person," FBI Agent Cal Clegg said in the statement authorities believed would be viewed on the homestead's television.

In the final briefing of the night, Bodrero said the situation appeared to be in a lull.

Before the shots were fired, Swapp briefly re-connected the telephone line he had pulled out Monday, Clegg said. But when police on the other end asked him if he wanted to talk, he said "No" and hung up.

Swapp was "surprised the phone call was answered by our negotiators," Clegg said, adding police were encouraged by the call.

Authorities, who for three days had remained well back from the compound, changed their strategy Tuesday afternoon. A police car was positioned to block the gate, the lights were brought in and an Army helicopter and a light plane flew overhead.

"We've got to start letting them know we're here," FBI Agent Lou Bertram said.

Bodrero said police were "not trying to scare anybody."

"They are simply tactical moves that we are putting in place so we can better observe the situation and try to move forward with some type of resolution plan."

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan begins the final year of his presidency today with an appearance at a high school that uses the kind of "magnet" programs he favors as an alternative to forced busing.

Accompanied by Education Secretary William J. Bennett, Reagan planned to speak at a forum on educational standards at Suitland High School in a Maryland suburb near Washington.

Maryland Gov. William Donald Schaefer, a Democrat, planned to join Reagan and Bennett at the Prince George's County school, which enrolls 2,085 students. Reagan was expected to stress the argument that educational excellence depends on giving families more choice among academic institutions.

Suitland High School, which is 89 percent black, has been plagued for years by racial tension, poor test scores and other problems.

"It was a school having difficult times. It's turned around," said Leslye Arsh, a White House deputy press secretary.

With 103,000 students, the Prince George's system is the 16th largest public school district in the country. Education spending per pupil totaled $3,090 in the 1985-86 school year, compared with a national average of $3,752.

Beginning in 1985, the county instituted "magnet" programs, such as specialized college preparatory and performing arts programs.

Magnet programs, open to students across the county, are designed to improve racial integration without increasing mandatory busing by providing an incentive for white students to attend predominantly black schools.

Since 1985, there has been a steady increase at Suitland in test scores in citizenship, writing, reading and math.

The Education Department also credits John A. Murphy, the Prince George's County school superintendent, as being a major factor in improving Suitland and other schools.

While giving school principals more autonomy, he has warned them they could lose their jobs if test scores do not document academic progress.

Reagan's appearance will help set the stage for educational themes he will outline in his State of the Union address next week.

On Tuesday, Reagan spoke to the administration's top-level political appointees in an annual cheerleading session known as the "Executive Forum."

He urged the group to make the last year of his presidency "not one for the Gipper, but for Americans — and for all mankind."

"As they say in show biz, let's bring them to their feet with our closing act," said the one-time actor.

In his Hollywood days, Reagan portrayed George Gipp in the movie, "Knut Rockne, All American." In the film, the late Gipp's teammates were urged to "win one for the Gipper."

Reagan said that during his administration's final year, "we're not going to be on the defensive, shoring up problems and answering our critics. We are moving forward, and I have no doubt that when we look back, 1988 will be a year of great accomplishment toward our goals."

He said there is much more for the administration to do, such as placing his Supreme Court nominee Anthony Kennedy on the high court and winning ratification of the U.S.-Soviet treaty that bans intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Reagan reaffirmed his support for the Nicaraguan rebels battling the leftist Sandinistas, saying it is up to Congress in the coming weeks to "determine if we're to provide the democratic resistance ... what they need to survive."

The president spent much of the time defending his seven years in office.

He repeatedly cited such statistics as the drop in unemployment, the low inflation rate and a growing economy, but he made no mention of the recent turmoil in the stock market or the unstable dollar.

Reagan's only mention of the nation's billowing deficit, which has nearly doubled under his administration, was to cast responsibility upon Congress for bringing it under control.

"Congress ... needs to act to make good on the second year of its agreement to bring down federal deficit spending," the president said.

S&L Officials Fined

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — Three former directors of the First Maryland Savings & Loan have been fined $100 million each for mismanagement and fraud that contributed to the thrift's 1985 collapse.

A Montgomery County Circuit Court jury on Tuesday ordered the officials and other defendants to pay the state $387 million, an award which lawyers called the largest ever in Maryland. The award culminated a 4½-month civil trial.

Of the award, $322 million was in punitive damages against the three directors and other defendants, and $65 million was partial compensation to the depositors who lost money when the institution collapsed.

There were 22,000 depositors at First Maryland when it folded, and the state estimates that 7,000 accounts still are owed $100 million by First Maryland.

The state has similar lawsuits pending against other thrifts.

Police Vehicle Injures Palestinian Protester

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — A police jeep hit by stones ran over and seriously injured a Palestinian protester today, then struck a utility pole and overturned, injuring the two policemen inside, police and Israel radio said.

Police said Palestinian children had put up a barricade of burning tires in the Jerusalem Arab suburb of Issawiya and threw stones, hitting the jeep and making its driver lose control. There was no immediate word on the condition of the injured protester or policemen.

In northern Israel today, Israeli troops killed three Palestinian guerrillas who infiltrated from Lebanon by cutting a security fence, the military command said.

The Fatah guerrilla faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility and said several Israelis were wounded in the exchange of gunfire. The military command said one Israeli soldier was wounded.

In Gaza City in the occupied Gaza Strip, meanwhile, soldiers forced open stores shut in a commercial strike, and Arab doctors and nurses in two hospitals staged a sit-in, demanding entry to refugee camps to treat injured Palestinians. In Arab east Jerusalem, a commercial strike held strong today.

Israel radio reported today the United States is considering sending a special envoy to Israel to investigate the situation in the territories Israel occupied in the 1967

Middle East War. It did not elaborate.

In Washington on Tuesday, Yossi Beilin, a senior official from the Israeli Foreign Ministry, suggested a U.S. envoy be sent to promote Arab-Israeli peace talks.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Don C. Cofman in Tel Aviv confirmed that Michael Armacost, the undersecretary for political affairs, would visit in about two weeks. But Cofman said the visit was not related to the last six weeks of anti-Israeli protests, in which at least 36 Arabs have been killed by Israeli gunfire.

Soldiers today fired tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse Arab demonstrators in the West Bank town of Ramallah, 16 miles north of Jerusalem, according to the Palestine Press Service. A soldier was slightly injured when a stone struck him, the Arab-run news agency said.

It also reported protests in eight Arab villages near Ramallah. The army said it had no immediate comment.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Tuesday that Israeli soldiers were under orders to use beatings instead of gunfire to try to curb the protests. He also announced that Israel would ban foreign countries and organizations as well as private Israeli groups from shipping food to Palestinian refugee camps.

Israel television's Arabic-language service reported Tuesday night that the police ministry had decided to invoke emergency regulations in east Jerusalem, permitting curfews on Arab neighborhoods, in an effort to break the commercial strike.

The report was denied by the Israeli army, the office of Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek and police ministry spokesman Nachum Mendel. The imposition of curfews reportedly was rejected at a meeting with Kollek on Tuesday.

In the Gaza Strip, seven out of eight refugee camps remained under curfew today. Some of the camps have been under curfew for as long as 12 days.

Rabin, speaking on Israel radio today, denied Israel was trying to starve Palestinian refugees into submission. U.N. officials have reported food shortages in Gaza camps.

"There is no policy to deny food or water to residents who are under curfews in the camps," he said, adding that those who make such accusations are "using a crude propaganda weapon against the state of Israel."

U.N. relief officials reported shortages of basic foodstuffs and said some people were going hungry but no one was starving. U.N. supply trucks are allowed into the camps but usually have to wait hours for a break in the curfew.

Throughout Tuesday, women walked along the main Gaza highway waiting for supply trucks sent by private donors and charitable groups. At the checkpoint leading into Gaza, four trucks with food collected by an Arab-Jewish group were parked for the night, after the army barred their entry.

RACE FOR FOOD — Palestinian women residents of El Bureij Refugee Camp run to the main road to catch transportation to Gaza City for food-buying after a short curfew lift Tuesday where only women were permitted to leave the camp for quick purchase of supplies along the Israel-occupied Gaza Strip. Britain Prays For Envoy

By BEN DOBBIN
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Saying hostages in Lebanon never should be allowed to think they are forgotten, Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie led the nation in prayers today for his envoy Terry Waite, who vanished in Beirut a year ago.

"Let's allow his situation to stand for that of many others: for those who seek to bring peace and reconciliation to our world... for those who are held captive for no reason," the Church of England's spiritual leader said in a prayer service broadcast nationally on radio.

"Blessed are those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of Heaven," he added, quoting from Jesus' Sermon on the Mount.

Waite, the archbishop's personal envoy, disappeared Jan. 20, 1987, after leaving his West Beirut hotel for a rendezvous with the Shiite Moslem captors of two Americans. In the previous 17 months, he had helped to win freedom for three other American hostages.

No group has claimed responsibility for kidnapping him and no messages from him have been reported. Many church officials, including Runcie, have said they believe Waite is alive.

Prayer services also were held today in 45 other parishes throughout Britain, including the cathedral in Bristol, where Waite worked before going to Lambeth Palace, Runcie's official residence, in 1980 to become the archbishop's secretary for Anglican Communion affairs.

"For a hostage, every day is a very long day, and a year of captivity is a very long time," Runcie said in the service held in Lambeth Palace's medieval crypt. "We must never allow them to think they are abandoned or forgotten."

"We trust that he and the others will somehow sense that our prayers are with them and that their hope, and ours, is rooted in the God who is the source of all our hopefulness."

A candle has burned in the crypt for the 48-year-old emissary since he dropped out of sight.

In an earlier British Broadcasting Corp. World Service program broadcast in Lebanon, Runcie appealed to those who might be holding Waite captive.

"I hope that one day, and that it will be soon, you may realize Terry's burning desire for justice in the Middle East and peace," he said.

He said Waite's wife and four children and his relatives and friends looked ahead to "that tremendous celebration that will greet your return."

At All Saint's Church in Blackheath, Waite's parish church in southeast London, the vicar said Waite had left instructions forbidding any rescue attempt or ransom payment if he was kidnapped.

"It's a judgment I wouldn't like to make, but I think the family would be horrified by military action on Terry's behalf," said the Rev. Henry Burgin.

A few yards away, Waite's local chapter of the Church Army — an Anglican lay workers evangelistic organization in which Waite holds the rank of captain — remembered him with a prayer vigil and communion service.

Twenty other foreigners, including eight Americans, also are missing in Lebanon and presumed held captive, most of them by Shiite Moslem extremists allied with Iran.

Waite disappeared on his fifth mission to Lebanon while trying to make contact with Islamic Jihad, a pro-Iranian Shiite faction that in 1985 kidnapped Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, and Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut.

Waite had already helped to free the Rev. Benjamin Weir, the Rev. Lawrence Jenco and David Jacobsen, and was reported to be principally seeking freedom for their two countrymen.

His role as a mediator had been undermined by revelations in November 1986 that the United States had sold arms to Iran in an effort to free the U.S. captives.

Waite said he was never aware of the sales during his previous negotiations with the kidnapers, and he went on his last mission to Beirut insisting that his work was independent of any government.

Begun Arrives In Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Josef Begun, a soft-spoken, bespectacled Hebrew teacher who became a symbol of the Soviet Jewish emigration movement, arrived in Israel after being imprisoned and exiled in a 17-year wait for an exit visa.

"I feel like the happiest man in the world," the 56-year-old Begun told reporters as he stepped Tuesday night onto the tarmac at Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion airport, holding a small grandchild in his arms.

Begun, who wore a grey beret over a blue religious skullcap and a long trench coat, was greeted by old friends and supporters as well as several Cabinet ministers and fellow former dissident Natan Sharansky, who changed his name from Anatoly when he arrived in Israel in February 1986.

"We exchanged hugs and kisses, but we couldn't really talk," Sharansky said after greeting Begun. "He is in the same state I was in when I got here — in the clouds."

Begun left Moscow earlier Tuesday, flew to Bucharest, Romania, and continued to Israel. He was accompanied by his 52-year-old wife, her mother, Dvora, 79, his 23-year-old son Boris and his wife, and two grandchildren.

"Shalom, shalom," Begun's wife, Inna, told an interviewer as the proceedings were broadcast live by Israel television. "I'm very happy.

Pathan Leader Dead At 98

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Abdul Ghaffar Khan, renowned in India for helping to drive the British from the Indian subcontinent but reviled in his native Pakistan for opposing its independence, died today. He was 98.

Doctors at the British-built Lady Reading Hospital in Peshawar, 100 miles northwest of Islamabad, said Ghaffar Khan died at 6:35 a.m. local time.

He suffered a stroke last July and spent his last days "slipping in and out of consciousness," said Dr. Jamal Ahmad, a hospital administrator.

Ahmad said Ghaffar Khan was suffering from strokes and a lung infection, but the doctor did not give an exact cause of death.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi today left India for Peshawar to pay tribute to Ghaffar Khan. An official at New Delhi's military airport said Gandhi postponed a scheduled visit to Sweden by a few hours to visit Peshawar.

"Mr. Gandhi will return after paying his last respect and then start for Sweden later today," said the official, who answered the telephone at the military section of the airport. He refused to give his name.

Ghaffar Khan, a Moslem, joined Mohandas K. (Mahatma) Gandhi, India's apostle of non-violence, and Jawaharlal Nehru, both Hindus, in leading India's struggle to win independence from Britain.

He spread Gandhi's message of passive resistance among his Pathan tribesmen in the North West Frontier province, in the mountains along what is now the Afghan-Pakistani border, and became known as the "Frontier Gandhi."

Ghaffar Khan opposed the partition of the subcontinent into predominantly Moslem Pakistan and mainly Hindu India when British rule ended in 1947.

Once it became clear India would be separate from Pakistan, he campaigned for a separate province of "Pushtunistan" to be part of Afghanistan in a region that would encompass what is now northwestern Pakistan and northeastern Afghanistan. The "Pushtun" name stems from the Pathans.

Ghaffar Khan was jailed by the British and later spent 15 years in Pakistani jails for refusing to cooperate with the Islamabad government. He was released in 1964 to travel to London for medical treatment. He later was granted political asylum in Afghanistan.

He never held public office in independent Pakistan, but the 6-foot-3 spiritual leader of the warrior Pathans was known by them as the king of khans.

Body's Cold Tolerance Studied

By KARREN MILLS
Associated Press Writer
DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Brian Cress hops into a large pool filled with fast-moving ice water in the basement of the University of Minnesota-Duluth Medical School whenever he gets the chance.

It's not that he loves being cold, he acknowledges. It's the money he gets for being a guinea pig in the school's Hypothermia Research Laboratory, which tests protective clothing and conducts basic scientific research on the body's reaction to cold.

"It's good pay. Also it helps with improving the suits, making sure people are going to survive in the suits," said Cress, a sophomore medical student who has been a test subject for nearly two years, getting $100 every time he spends from one to six hours in the frigid water coursing through the 2,500-gallon pool.

Cress also volunteers as a subject for cold air studies, for which he gets $25 for spending time in a walk-in freezer — sometimes in just shorts and sometimes in survival suits.

"I prefer the water studies," he said. "Cold air is incredibly uncomfortable. The fan blows the cold air across my chest and it feels like I'm iced down."

The laboratory, one of the few cold weather research centers in the world, got its start about eight years ago because there was no facility in the United States for testing the effectiveness of survival gear, said Dr. Robert Pozos, who heads the medical school's physiology department and is one of the lab's directors.

Tests are still conducted on survival suits such as those worn by oil workers in the Atlantic Ocean and North Sea, U.S. Coast Guard and Navy personnel and other seamen.

However, the laboratory also is doing basic research on such diverse topics as effects of cold water exercise on patients with multiple sclerosis, how water current affects the speed with which hypothermia sets in, why young children sometimes survive underwater for long periods, how shivering affects body heat, and effects of alcohol on body functions in cold temperatures.

Most water tests are done in a new constant-current $25,000 pool donated to the laboratory this summer by Swimex Systems Inc., of Warren, R.I., but some tests are still done in Lake Superior.

"I feel more comfortable doing testing in the pool for safety reasons. On the lake, you can't have equipment to monitor heart rate, temperature," said Larry Wittmers, a laboratory co-director.

"This is much colder than Lake Superior," Cress said of the laboratory pool. "But it's not too bad. You get your body psyched up. I have to prepare myself to do it."

Bryan Delage, a third-year medical student at the University of Minnesota Medical School in Minneapolis, recently traveled to Duluth for his ninth stint in the cold water to test a deck suit designed for workers on ocean oil rigs, ore carriers and Coast Guard vessels.

"Sometimes it's all right. Without the suit, those tests are a little more intense," Delage said as technicians attached wires to his skin to provide a constant computer readout of changes in his skin and body core temperatures and heart beat.

The experiment was being made to determine how much water current, simulated by a motorized, variable-speed paddle wheel, will increase heat loss, Pozos said.

"He'd have 30 minutes in this water (50 degrees Fahrenheit) without the suit before hypothermia would set in," Pozos said.

Delage said he'd prefer a suit with mitts. "If you get your hands wet it can be very painful," he noted as he lay shivering with his hands raised above the surface of the water.

After 28 minutes in the pool, Delage's skin temperature had dropped six degrees, but his core temperature hadn't fallen.

"He'd be in real trouble without that suit. It's doing exactly what it's designed to do," Pozos said.

Suits alone sometimes may not be enough to protect a person from hypothermia in a stressful situation, said psychologist Richard Hoffman, who also works with the laboratory.

Anxiety also may play a big part in hypothermia onset, he said.

"The heart rate goes up when subjects are tested in the lake. We feel anxiety probably drives temperature down," Hoffman said.

He also noted that people are very poor judges of how cold they are and said being in tremendous physical shape doesn't seem to help much in fighting off hypothermia.

Alcohol in the bloodstream also can have serious effects, even though recent research indicates drinking doesn't impair the body's cold defenses, Hoffman said.

"Alcohol did impair people's ability to think. People who were drunk and in the cold did worse than people in warm air who were drunk," he said. "I think this shows the biggest risk for people drinking who are in the cold is impaired judgment rather than drop in core temperature."

Researchers also have begun looking at the effect of cold core temperatures on memory.

"We're just starting this. One British study indicates people start to have trouble remembering at about core temperature 95 degrees Fahrenheit (normal body temperature is 98.6 degrees)," Hoffman said.

"This may be a real risk factor for divers, cross-country skiers, hikers. Are they going to have problems remembering how to get back? We know that if you take a person's core temperature down low enough they will start to get confused," he said.

Mountain Opry Preserves Bluegrass

By MARGARET HABERMAN
Associated Press Writer
WALDEN, Tenn. (AP) — Every Friday night in an old school auditorium tucked back in the southeast Tennessee mountains, a brand of bluegrass music in the tradition of the early days of the Grand Ole Opry takes center stage.

The informal gathering began in September 1979 among a few friends as a way to preserve old-time music. More than 400 shows later, it has grown to a homespun attraction that draws performers and audience from miles around.

Dubbed the Mountain Opry, the weekly show offers three hours or more of unadorned entertainment, often to the accompaniment of hands clapping, babies crying and toes tapping in cowboy boots to penny loafers.

"To me, I see the Mountain Opry as really a way to demonstrate a real important art form and that's music," said co-founder Ray Fox. "I see this as, to a great extent, music that is indigenous to this area."

"It's as natural as we see the streams in the mountains and the falling leaves," said Fox, dean of admissions and records at the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga, who plays bass in a six-member group called the Mountaineers.

The setting is the Walden's Ridge Civic League Community Building on Signal Mountain, a 1920 white frame auditorium of a long-gone grade school with rustic wooden floors, American flags lining the walls and about 250 fold-up seats.

No smoking or drinking is allowed, but homemade barbecue, coleslaw and other delicacies are available at a small concession stand in the back. Admission is free, though a grocery sack is passed around during the show for contributions.

Musicians typically trail in and out during the show, carrying their fiddles, guitars and other instruments. They warm up in rooms behind the stage, often forming impromptu groups.

There's usually no scheduled lineup of performers, except for about once a month when the Opry is broadcast on radio station WDOD in nearby Chattanooga. Crest Productions in Chattanooga also comes to videotape the show every few weeks for a weekend cable television show.

On a recent night, the performers ranged from 10-year-old banjo picker Michael Walker to 87-year-old fiddler Bob Douglas. The music included blazing bluegrass, mountain songs played on a kazoo, gospel tunes, yodeling and even an accordion-rendered polka.

Stephanie Barker, who plays in a band with two of her sisters, felt so at home at the Opry that she got married on the stage in August, walking down an aisle between rows of seats.

"I love it. Music is my life, I reckon. This is me right here. We play every weekend," she said. "I know everybody who plays. I know over half the audience."

People constantly wander on and off the stage as the music continues — partly to greet friends and partly to get to the bathrooms that are located off the stage. For a crowded show, people sit right on the stage.

So far, only a few nights have been missed through the years because of bad weather.

Faithful attendee Mattie McSpadden, sporting a Mountain Opry jacket, said she started coming to the shows about three years ago with a friend.

Eyelet Pattern Adorns Knit Top

With only four skeins of a soft, luscious blend of pure kid mohair and acrylic yarn and a little of your time, this breezy knit top can be yours. Fashionably oversized and loose-fitting with a softly ribbed scoop neckline, it features eyelet bands that appear to weave in and out of defining stockinette diamonds — a truly fascinating pattern stitch.

Easy-to-follow directions are given for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 36½ and 40 inches respectively with a gauge of five stitches to the inch.

Dear Pat: I have been following your column and knitting for years. I knit up a storm in the fall particularly, and usually end up with bursitis in my right elbow just at the holiday season when I need two arms to bake with! I knit continental style, holding the yarn in the left hand. Any ideas to help me?

Also, when judging gauge on an involved pattern stitch, do you test the gauge on the complicated pattern — one with a variety of cables, for example — or do you test with the basic stockinette stitch? — Eleanor B., Denver

Dear Eleanor: Sorry I can't help with the bursitis problem, but perhaps a reader who has an answer will write. If so, I will share the news at a later date. In listing gauge, design directions should advise what pattern stitch is used to test it. I realize that too many do not, however, so I can share your frustration. This problem seems to be more prevalent with imported patterns.

When I am designing a garment where more than one type of pattern stitch is used, I work out the mathematics of the overall design. I then make a swatch of stockinette stitch with the same needles and yarn I used for the garment in pattern stitch. In that way, I can give a stockinette stitch gauge to be used for the test swatch.

For a garment that uses only one or two pattern stitches, the designer may test the gauge on one of the pattern stitch panels and list that for the knitter to use.

But for you, as the knitter, if a gauge is listed without reference to the type of pattern stitch it is figured on, I can give you a couple of alternatives.

First, try making a swatch with the number of stitches used for the lower part of a sleeve. This will work a reasonable size swatch in the pattern stitch to see if it matches the gauge listed.

Another alternative is to buy an extra skein of the same yarn, and with the suggested needle sizes, make a cap to match your sweater. It is a coincidence that the number of stitches used for the back of a medium size sweater usually corresponds to the number needed for a cap. So, you can work a cap to the desired depth and have a large swatch to measure to see how it compares to the finished measurement of the back section.

When you have completed the measuring, slip the stitches off the needle and draw them up tightly for the top of your cap. That way, you have something to show for the "swatching" time.

Support Group Aids Victims Of Migraines

By KRIS LOWMAN
The Intelligencer-Journal
LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — There is a closet ailment so common that one in six adults suffers from some form of it.

Often misunderstood, it is frequently labeled psychosomatic. The afflicted may traipse from doctor to doctor, trying one prescription after another. For those with the chronic condition, the pain can make everyday tasks impossible to perform. This nightmarish illness, suffered by millions, is the migraine headache.

According to Carol Forinash, president of the Pennsylvania Migraine Foundation, these headaches are not to be confused with tension headaches: The migraine is one-sided and the head throbs severely.

Forinash speaks from experience. A chronic migraine sufferer herself, she tried 22 different medications and traveled extensively before finding a physician who could provide relief.

She said she's 95 percent cured of her headaches. A special diet and daily medication are integral to keeping her migraines from recurring. The anti-depressant drug which Forinash takes five times a day works as an antagonist to serotonin — a chemical which may be important in the causes of headaches. Side effects vary depending on the drug and its dosage.

Forinash says she is grateful for her good health and wants to lend support to fellow migraine sufferers. As a volunteer, she often puts in a 70-hour week at the foundation. She serves as fundraiser, events coordinator, secretary and support group leader. It's here, during support group meetings, that she witnesses migraine sufferers seeking help.

"All of a sudden," Forinash said of the group discussions, "someone will say, 'If I don't get help I'm going to kill myself.' These are extremely sick, desperate people and they are quite sincere."

"The suicide rate to my knowledge isn't that high, but it's there; the pain is indescribable," added Forinash, who said she has stopped five suicide attempts.

Migraines are a closet disease, Forinash explained, because many people are told it's psychosomatic. This leads to embarrassment for the afflicted, who fear that people will perceive them as being mentally ill.

"People tell me their doctors say it's emotional and there's nothing they can do — they'll just have to live with it," Forinash said. "That's just not true."

Lancaster neurologist Roderick Hines explained that migraines are a vascular problem. In the first phase, blood vessels in the scalp dilate, bringing on the throbbing pain.

He noted that people who suffer from migraines are often thought of as anxious people who can't handle stress. He refuted this, saying that they are usually suffering from change in levels of the natural levels in the blood stream. A sensitivity to a wide variety of things — sunlight, glare, loud noises and certain foods — can set off a chain of events that leads to this chemical imbalance.

Included in the list of possible migraine triggers are weather changes, perfume scents, flowers, natural gas and normal cooking odors.

The yeast in beer, pizza dough and breads can be a culprit, along with foods that have been aged, fermented, pickled or marinated. It is best to eat freshly prepared foods and stay away from additives.

The National Migraine Foundation, under the direction of Dr. Seymour Diamond, states that many physicians believe migraine sufferers are highly energetic, ambitious, orderly people who strive for perfection.

Migraine headaches appear to run in families, with 70 percent of patients reporting positive family histories.

Verbal Distraction Is Practiced

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the woman who complained about a dentist chatting with an assistant or someone else while working on a patient: Dentists and other medical professionals will often intentionally converse with their staff while they're working on a patient. In areas of high stress, a patient can have a panic attack if left in the silence of an intimidating office and staff, only to hear the whine of high-speed instruments and feel the drowning sensation of the water spray, as the dentist drills away.

The technique of verbal distraction is practiced with patients of all ages. Granted, the dentist should not carry on loud, extended conversations with persons in another room, but a quiet conversation with a person nearby — or a chairside assistant — is usually considered minor mental relief, if not entertainment, for a patient lying on his back for 30 minutes or more staring at an acoustical tile ceiling.

As for the crown costing $600 — an old saying comes to mind: Dentistry isn't expensive — neglect is! — C.T., D.D.S., CITRUS HEIGHTS, CALIF.

Dear Abby

injury occurring — sometimes with serious consequences.

"Unfortunately, many of these individuals neither want nor seek psychotherapy, but if they could be persuaded to try to understand the reason for their deviant need, they could be helped to modify or overcome it — which would be to their long-term advantage."

DEAR ABBY: In answer to "Still in Love at 78" — the woman who loves to have her husband along to help her grocery-shop: It's all fine and dandy to have a 24-hour relationship, but what are you going to do when one of the couple dies?

A casual friend lost her husband after 46 years of marriage. She was lost — and still is, six years later.

She has no club to go to, no special interests, no hobbies, no close women friends — in fact, she's a very boring person to be around. All she does is moan about her loss and watch TV.

I've tried to help her by suggesting she do volunteer work or take some courses, but she says it wouldn't help. She just sits. — R.M.C., CALIFORNIA

DEAR R.M.C.: I have often urged men to learn how to cook, keep house, sew, do the laundry, marketing and all the chores their wives routinely do. And I have urged women to learn how to drive and maintain an automobile, become conversant with banking, insurance, mortgage payments, investments and all those things their husbands handle — for the obvious reason that although they start out together, they rarely finish together.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for telling young people to wait until marriage for sex. My husband and I did 31 years ago, and we have never been sorry. Our sex life is marvelous, and neither one of us has ever been with anybody else.

We have raised three fine daughters. I used to tell them that when some guy would give them the old party line: "You don't know what you're missing," to tell them, "Oh, yes I do. I'll be missing VD, an unwanted pregnancy and a guilty conscience!" All of our daughters have told us that they will raise their children the same way they were raised.

Abby, please encourage parents to set a good example for their children and expect the best from them, and they won't be disappointed. — MRS. S. IN TEMPE, ARIZ.

DEAR MRS. S.: You can count on me. I couldn't have said it better myself.

DEAR ABBY: I just found out that my younger sister (in her 20s) is practicing sadomasochism. I know very little about the subject, and I am worried. Are people who are into S and M considered normal? My sister has a whip and assorted paraphernalia. Is there any real danger in this kind of thing? I don't want her to hurt herself. And how widespread is it? — WORRIED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR WORRIED: I asked my consultant, Dr. Judd Marmor, past president of the Academy of Psychoanalysis and past president of the American Psychiatric Association. Dr. Marmor said:

"S and M fantasies are very extensive in our culture, judging from the widespread popularity of S and M pornographic literature and films. A fairly large number of men and women practice S and M in private and within groups or clubs, yet carry on apparently normal lives otherwise."

"S and M cannot be considered normal behavior, however, because the need to inflict or suffer pain in the course of sexual relations is an obvious neurotic corruption of something that ought to be a tender and loving exchange. In addition, there is always the danger of actual physical

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Do not refreeze meats if they have warmed to room temperature.

Peak THERE'S MORE TO PART-TIME WORK THAN JUST SMALL CHANGE.

Earn $8 to $11 Per Hour Working Peak-time at First Citizens Bank.

First Citizens Bank proudly introduces a brand new concept in part-time opportunities: PEAK-TIME. With PEAK-TIME teller positions, you can work fewer hours and earn more. If you're looking for a challenge and big-time money for part-time work... First Citizens has it all.

PREMIUM PAY: The fewer hours you work, the more you earn per hour.

SCHEDULES: A variety of schedules available — all under 19 hours per week during regular banking hours.

CONVENIENT LOCATIONS: Opportunities available across Greenville.

Because these positions are designed for someone who wants strictly part-time work, they allow you time for your interests and commitments. The hourly rates are attractive ($8 to $11); however, these positions carry no fringe benefits. You must be available for a paid training program (3 weeks maximum), that makes use of your valuable interpersonal skills.

If you have what it takes to work during our busiest hours, we'll make it worth your while. At First Citizens, it pays to work PEAK-TIME. Call 756-2427 for an interview today.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today, weighed down by weakness in the dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 11.61 to 1,924.73 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 3 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 258 up, 829 down and 396 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 29.87 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The dollar lost ground today in foreign exchange markets around the world.

IBM stock, down 6 points Tuesday, lost another 1 1/2 to 110 1/4 in early trading today.

Among other actively traded technology issues, NCR fell 1 1/2 to 54 1/2; Hewlett-Packard 3/4 to 54 1/2; Motorola 1 1/2 to 44, and National Semiconductor 3/8 to 10 1/2. Digital Equipment was an exception, gaining 1 to 120 3/4.

In the economic news, the government reported a 0.1 percent increase in the consumer price index for December and an unexpectedly large 16.2 percent drop in housing starts for the same month.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .81 to 139.32. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.65 at 266.89.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 27.52 points to 1,936.34.

Advancing and declining issues were about even on the NYSE, with 762 up, 775 down and 440 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 153.55 million shares, against 135.10 million in the previous session.

Tornadoes Kill Five In Tenn.

system," said Lyle Alexander of the weather service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo. "A lot of moisture is being brought up from the Gulf of Mexico into the entire system."

Storm runoff flooded a Lake Michigan shoreline drive in Milwaukee, Wis., because frozen soil wouldn't absorb the rain, forcing police to halt traffic.

Three tornadoes roared through western Tennessee on Tuesday, killing at least five people, injuring dozens and causing widespread damage. Hardest hit was Fayette County, east of Memphis, where three died.

That tornado followed a 22-mile path as wide as three-quarters of a mile, said Chip Ragon of the county Emergency Management Agency. Up to 40 homes were heavily damaged or destroyed, he said.

Another twister cut a 10-mile swath through northern Alabama, injuring 26 people, including a child who was pinned under a house trailer. Gov. Guy Hunt ordered National Guardsmen to aid emergency workers and protect against looting in a subdivision where about 20 homes were destroyed.

Tornadoes also caused damage and injured at least one person in northern Mississippi, and high winds badly damaged about 30 homes and injured seven in Arkansas.

Thirty people were evacuated as flooding hit the section of West Memphis, Ark., that was inundated on Christmas.

In the Plains, 56 mph gusts piled snow in road-blocking drifts from Colorado across Nebraska and Kansas and a corner of Wyoming to South Dakota, where police closed 120 miles of I-90 west of Sioux Falls and about 80 miles of Interstate 29 north of the city.

Drifts 14 feet high were reported near Kimball, Neb., while the Kansas Highway Patrol said the blowing snow closed 250 miles of I-70.

Ten-foot drifts shut down schools, businesses and major highways across northeastern Colorado, South Dakota, Wyoming and Nebraska. In southeastern Wyoming, state employees were told to stay home Tuesday because of near-blizzard conditions.

"We are advised by the city and county that they didn't think they would be able to keep up with the tion Safety Board investigator, said it appeared the plane traveled a substantial distance from the point of impact to where it came to a rest. Feith, who was at the crash site before dawn, said it was hard to discern much about the crash because of darkness and snowfall, adding that he planned to return to the site later today.

However, he said, the tail was relatively intact and the last six seats of the plane were in place.

Rose, a graduate student at East Carolina University, received bachelor's degrees in business administration from ECU and in sociology and liberal arts management at the University of the State of New York at Albany.

A Vietnam War veteran, Rose is a member of the Naval Reserve attached to the destroyer USS Stump, homeported in Norfolk, Va. He was appointed as a Navy counselor to enlisted personnel in 1986.

Correction

The Los Angeles Vocal Arts Ensemble set to perform Thursday night at Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University, will be comprised of six performers — not 10 as stated in an article in Sunday's Daily Reflector.

There will be four vocalists and two pianists in the ensemble coming to Greenville.

Consumer Prices Up

—Housing, up 3.6 percent for the year, up 0.2 percent in December.

—New automobiles, up 1.9 percent for the year, down 0.2 percent in December.

—Restaurant meals, up 3.6 percent for the year, up 0.4 percent in December; grocery store prices, up 3.5 percent for the year, up 0.6 percent in December.

—Fruit and vegetable prices rose 12.8 percent for the year; up 5.6 percent for December. Meat, poultry and fish prices for the year rose 1.0 percent as a whole while being down 1.5 percent for December.

—Apparel costs, up 4.8 percent for the year, down 1.2 percent last month.

December's overall increase left the price index at 345.7 percent of its 1967 base of 100. That means a selection of goods and services costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $34.57 last month, up from $33.11 for the same items in December 1986.

Starting with calculations for January, the Labor Department will switch to a 1982 base for calculating the index.

The overall index number, unlike other figures in the report, is not adjusted to remove the effects of predictable seasonal fluctuations.

If December's 0.1 percent inflation rate persisted for 12 straight months, the yearly inflation rate would be 1.4 percent.

On Shot With Two Seconds Left Vikings Nip Rose, 58-56

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Meme Moore scored on a driving layup with two seconds left in the game to give Kinston High School a 58-56 victory over Rose High School in a Big East Conference basketball game Tuesday night.

Rose's girls, however, remained unbeaten in the league with a 41-39 win over the Valkyries.

The loss was the first in Big East competition for the Rampants, who fall to 1-1 in the league and 8-2 overall. Kinston improves to 11-1 and 2-1.

Kinston led by as much as nine points in the first half, but Rose came out and slowly chopped away at the lead and finally took the lead for the first time at 51-50 on a 3-pointer by Errol Wooten not quite a minute and a half into the final period.

Kinston took it back on a fast break layup by Leo Lockhart, and Lockhart added two free throws just over two minutes later for a 54-51 lead.

Rose fought back and tied it once more at 56-56 on a 3-point basket by Keyford Langley with 1:53 showing.

Kinston called a time out and set up a play, but this time Moore took the ball in and missed a layup with 1:20 left. Rose got the rebound and called for time, working the ball until less than 20 seconds remaining.

"We had the play set up and it worked perfectly except that the pass was just off and the ball went out of bounds," Rose Coach Jim Brewington said. On the play, guard Brian Wille drove to the basket, but then dished off, but his pass was just a little low and went off the leg of his teammate and out of bounds with 16 seconds left.

Kinston then called time with 11 seconds to go after crossing mid-court.

"We had two options," Kinston coach Paul Jones said. "One was to look inside and if we couldn't get it inside, then drive and see if something opened up."

Rose did shut off the inside men so Moore just kept going and found the seam for the layup and the winning basket with two seconds showing.

Jones said that on the earlier possession, Kinston's plan had been virtually the same, but with as much time remaining, to keep resetting if the inside wasn't open. On that play, Moore went much too early, the coach said.

"I'm really surprised to come away from here with a win," Jones said. "They have such leapers and so much quickness. We were very, very fortunate to win here. We got some fortunate baskets and that helped us too."

One of those fortunate baskets was one that came when a cross-court pass was batted by Rose's Carlester Crumpler, and went off the backboard into the basket.

"We usually press right much, but their quickness was too great for us to do it and be effective," Jones added.

Brewington seemed happy to come so close. "Nobody expected us to be in there with them and we came within a hair of winning. We had our chance — both teams had the chance and threw the ball away. It just came down to one play."

Kinston took the initial lead, scoring the first six points of the game, two of them on baskets by J.J. Hudock. The Vikings stretched the lead out to nine at 15-6 on a driving layup by Lockhart with 2:15 left.

But Rose outhit the Vikings, 8-2, from there and cut the lead back to 17-14 at the end of the quarter.

Kinston eased its lead back out to seven — that coming on Crumpler's deflection that made it 27-20 with 2:38 left. Rose then trailed by nine again, 33-24 when the half ended.

Behind 3-point shooting by Wooten, the Rampants cut into the lead, finally trimming it to three, 41-38, before the Vikings inched back out to a 46-40 lead. But Rose hung close and two straight baskets by James Teel finally tied it at 48-48 with 45 seconds to go.

Ben Street, however, made the second of a two-shot foul opportunity to make it 49-48 at the horn.

Kevin Taylor then made a free throw to open the final period for a 50-48 lead before Wooten hit another 3-pointer to give Rose its first lead — a lead that would not stand up.

Lockhart led Kinston's balanced attack with 13 points while Taylor and Hudock each had 12 and Trey Martin had 11.

Rose was led by Wooten with 19 while Langley had 11.

Neither team shot that well — Kinston hit 45.1 percent while Rose made 40.7 percent. Rose rallied on the boards in the second half to hold a 36-35 advantage.

The first quarter of the girls' game was close with both teams holding 2-point leads early on. But Kinston broke away from an 8-8 deadlock and scored six unanswered points in the final 2:18 of the period to earn a 14-8 lead at the buzzer.

Rose scored the first seven of the second period, however, five of them by Lisa Leisten to move ahead, 15-14. Melvina Barnes, however, returned Kinston to the lead, 16-15 and the Valkyries held on until Leisten hit from the lane for a 20-18 Rose lead. She then added two free throws with 36 seconds left for a 22-18 edge.

Rose stretched its lead to 27-20 early in the second half on a 3-pointer by Leisten, but Kinston then outscored Rose, 8-1 to tie it at 28-28 before Tina Smith made two free throws, then tossed back another missed shot for a 32-28 left. Nicole Maxon made two free throws as time expired for a 34-28 lead going into the final quarter.

Amy Barr scored the opening basket of the period for a 36-28 lead, and later hit a free throw to inch it out to 39-30 before Kinston put on one last effort.

Conley Tops Havelock, 69-64

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — When Havelock threatened early in the fourth quarter, D.H. Conley coach Walter Claybrook took a time out and told his players it was put up or shut up time and the Vikings decided to choose the former rather than the latter.

Conley responded by scoring five unanswered points to move out to a 67-60 lead and held on from there for a 69-64 win over their Coastal Conference foe in a high school basketball game Tuesday night.

"We talked about that it's that time of the ballgame when you either do the things you need to do to win or you stand around and watch," Claybrook said. "It was time for everybody to pull together."

Conley led 61-60 at the time of the timeout with 3:01 remaining and when the Vikings put the ball back in play, Bronswell Patrick hit a 3-pointer to make it 64-60.

Havelock quickly pushed the ball down the floor but Derrick Borden misfired, one of the few times he would on the way to game-high 30 points.

The Vikings came up with the ball and Paul Merritt turned it into two points at the other end as he drew Anthony Robinson's fifth foul and calmly hit two free throws with 2:13 to go for a 67-60 lead.

From there, the Rams could pull no closer than four, on a follow shot by Borden that made it 68-64 with 44 seconds remaining.

James Smith helped hold off the Rams with two free throws in a one-and-one with 1:21 remaining while Merritt added a free throw with 13 seconds to go to provide the final margin.

"The 3-point shot Patrick hit, I thought that was a big key," Claybrook said.

It was Havelock's first loss of the year in the Coastal and left the Rams tied with the Vikings (7-5, 2-1) in the standings. The Rams stand at 10-2 and 2-1.

Phil Medlin was one of the catalysts for the Vikings, scoring 22 points and giving Conley the big basket when it needed it.

But perhaps the biggest plus for Conley was consistent guard play from James Smith and Sherwood Wilder.

"We went back with those two at the guards," Claybrook said. "I think that James Smith played his best game. He hit some pressure free throws and didn't turn the ball over there at the end. (Wilder) is a guy you have to hold back sometimes but one thing I'll give him, he's not going to drop back from any (tough) situations."

The two helped the Vikings handle the Rams' pressure all game and also spread the ball around underneath, feeding not only Medlin but also Paul Merritt, who chipped in 13 points.

Havelock coach Shelley Marsh said the Rams wanted to use pressure to force an up-tempo game, which is their style, but they didn't get the breaks.

"We were just try to keep pressure on them like we knew we had to," Marsh said. "I think that we got a couple of calls that could have gone either way and they went against us. Down there at the end, they got a couple of offensive boards that hurt us."

Conley led the whole game but appeared on the verge of self destruction late in the third quarter.

After leading by six at the half, 38-32, the Vikings came out and built up a 15-point lead in the third period, outsourcing the Rams 10-3 over the first four and half minutes of the quarter.

Phil Medlin opened the quarter with a jumper to make it 40-32 but Havelock came back behind a free throw and a basket by Borden to pull within 40-35.

But Terry Williams countered for Conley to make it 42-35. The Vikings then added two baskets by Paul Merritt sandwiched around a shot by James Smith to run out to a 48-35 win.

Mark George broke Havelock's cold string with a jumper at the 3:49 mark but Wilder then nailed a jumper for the Vikings to make it 50-37.

Borden knocked in a pair of free throws for the Rams to make it 50-39, but Conley came right back as Merritt broke the press and fed Medlin for a slam to make it 52-39.

The lead then reached 54-39 on a tip-in by Jonathan Bonner with just over two minutes to go in the quarter before Havelock rallied.

Borden hit two free throws and then nailed a 3-pointer to make it 54-43 with 1:17 remaining. Three straight Conley turnovers led to a pair of baskets by Issac Barrett and one by Ledel George to pull the Rams within 54-49.

Conley's Bershawn Thompson hit a free throw with five seconds remaining to close out the quarter's scoring and give Conley a 55-49 advantage.

"It was a good team effort," Claybrook said. "We talked about playing together. I was pleased that we came out and played hard after a disappointing loss (70-68 to North Lenoir on Friday)."

In the girls' game, Havelock's Laura Maxwell took control early and never let go as the Lady Rams cruised to a 67-42 victory.

Maxwell scored 39 points and helped the Lady Rams break the game open in the third quarter.

Havelock led 27-22 at the half, but outscored the Valkyries, 17-10, over the third period to take a 44-32 lead heading into the final quarter.

Maxwell led the way with seven points, including a string of five in a row near the end of the period.

From there, Conley could get no closer. Maxwell scored 14 fourth-quarter points as the Lady Rams cruised.

Ex-Trainers Are Dreading Fight

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Eddie Futch and Ray Arcel, masters at teaching boxing, wish Larry Holmes wouldn't get in the ring with Mike Tyson Friday night.

"I don't feel good about his fight," the 75-year-old Futch, who trained Holmes for 12 title bouts, said in a telephone interview from Las Vegas. "Tyson has the style and strength that could make it hard for Larry to avoid getting badly beaten and possibly hurt."

"At this point in his career, I hate to see him in there, that's all," said the 88-year-old Arcel, who helped Futch train Holmes for a 1982 knockout of Gerry Cooney.

"You don't belong in the ring, not with a 21-year-old guy who can punch," Arcel said by telephone from New York. "Even if he (Holmes) wins, he has to absorb punishment." Tyson, the unbeaten undisputed heavyweight champion, is an 8-1 favorite to win the scheduled 12-round fight at the Atlantic City Convention Center.

Holmes, the world's premier heavyweight for over seven years, turned 38 on Nov. 3 and hasn't fought since losing a 15-round split decision to Michael Spinks while trying to regain the International Boxing Federation title on April 19, 1986.

"Larry started showing signs of deterioration about three years ago," Futch said. "Tyson is getting better."

"The big question is, has Father Time taken too much away from Larry?" said Arcel, who is retired. "I don't think he can beat Tyson. Tyson is too young, too strong, too determined and he can set a hell of a pace. But Larry is Larry and he does what he thinks he should do."

Holmes, trained by Richie Giachetti, has been working out in seclusion for several weeks at his training center in his hometown of Easton, Pa.

Futch succeeded Giachetti as trainer following Holmes' 15-round unanimous decision victory over Trevor Berbick in defense of the World Boxing Council title. Giachetti and Futch were co-trainers for that April 11, 1981, fight.

Giachetti returned as trainer for the two Spinks fights when Futch stepped aside because he also trained Spinks.

The losses to Spinks are the only defeats for Holmes, who won his first 48 pro bouts, 34 by knockout. Tyson is 32-0 with 28 knockouts.

Milestone For Mechio

ASHEVILLE — Former D.H. Conley basketball star Mechio Kornegay has become the fourth woman to surpass 1,000 points in a career at UNC-Asheville.

Kornegay, a senior, moved her career total at the school to 1,014 in her last game. A three-year starter, Kornegay is the second leading scorer on the Asheville team this winter, hitting 13.7 points a game.

She is unlikely to move up, however, trailing the third-place scorer by more than 400 points, and over 1,400 points behind the all-time leader for UNCA.

Asheville is currently 6-5 on the season.

Jaguars Outlast North Pitt, 51-49

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central held off North Pitt in the closing minutes of the basketball game to capture a 51-49 Eastern Plains Conference victory Tuesday night.

North Pitt's girls rolled out to a 79-73 win in their game over the Lady Jaguars.

North Pitt's boys rushed out to a 16-9 lead in the opening quarter of play but couldn't hold on. Farmville came back with a 13-9 advantage in the second quarter and cut the lead back to 25-22 at intermission.

Farmville chipped another point off the lead in the third period and went into the last quarter with a 35-33 deficit. In the final eight minutes, Farmville outthit North Pitt, 18-14, forging a 5-point lead before a 3-pointer by North Pitt cut it back to two just before the end.

Jarvis Lang led Farmville with 23 points while Alexander Daniels contributed 17. Randy House led North Pitt with 14 while Reggie Daniels had 13.

Ruffin Helps C.B. Aycock Slip Past Greene Central

PIKEVILLE — Corey Ruffin led Charles B. Aycock High School in a fourth period rally that carried past Greene Central, 64-61, in Eastern Plains Conference basketball action Tuesday night.

Greene Central's girls held off Aycock, 41-39, behind the play of Felicia Albritton in their game.

Both Aycock and Greene Central scored 10 in the opening quarter of the boys' game. The Rams managed a 15-13 advantage in the second quarter, however, and took a 25-23 lead into the locker room.

The Rams continued to pull away in the third period, outthitting the Falcons, 20-14, to build up a 45-37 lead.

But in the final eight minutes, the Rams missed a dunk and two follow shots and Aycock suddenly caught fire. Behind 12 points by Ruffin in the quarter, the Falcons charged into and eight point lead and held off a rally by the Rams, who cut the lead to three with six seconds left on a technical foul. But a 3-point try by Anthony Jones missed and the Falcons preserved the win.

Ruffin finished with 24 points to lead the Falcons, while Corey Dickerson had 11. Greene Central was led by Jones with 17 and Tyrone Hardy with 13.

In the girls' contest, Greene Central eased out into a 7-5 first period lead. Aycock rallied, however, 13-9, and carried an 18-16 lead into intermission.

In the third period, Aycock outscored the Lady Rams, 13-7, and built its lead to 31-23. But Greene Central got 10 points from Albritton in the last period as the Lady Rams rallied, 18-8 and pulled out the victory.

Albritton finished with 12 points while Katina Powell had 18 and Crystal Kennedy had 15 for Aycock.

Greene Central is now 3-9 overall and 0-3 in league play. The girls are 6-6, 2-1. Greene Central plays host to North Pitt on Thursday.

Victory In Final Night's Match Gives Havelock A 39-24 Win

HAVELOCK — Havelock High School won the final match of the night and took a 39-24 wrestling victory over D.H. Conley Tuesday night.

Havelock won seven of the 13 weights and gained a draw in another, leaving Conley with only five wins. Five of Havelock's wins came on pins, while Conley had two.

The loss drops the Vikings to 11-2 on the year and 2-1 in Coastal Conference action.

The Vikings return to action on Friday, traveling to West Craven.

Peete Sets Comeback

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — At age 44, Calvin Peete begins a comeback attempt this week in the $1-million Bob Hope Classic.

"I'm looking forward to it. I'm excited about it. I'm ready to get back to playing golf," said Peete, who was among 128 players ready to tee off today for the first of five rounds in the 90-hole event.

A shoulder problem put Peete on the sidelines much of last year. He entered 20 tournaments and made money in only 12.

One of golf's more accomplished performers the six previous seasons, Peete finished in the top 10 only once last year and had a career-low finish of 140th on the money list.

"Last year was a bummer, a washout. I just want to put it out of my mind, not think about it," said Peete, who led the PGA Tour with 11 victories between 1982 and 1986.

"I just couldn't play last year. My shoulder wouldn't let me. From about the middle of the year on, I didn't play much at all. I probably could have, but I might have damaged the shoulder again.

"Finally, I just decided to write off the year, rest the shoulder and try to come back this year.

Conley...

Conley pulled within 10 midway through the final period, on a jumper by Stacey Gardner that made it 50-40, but two straight baskets by Maxwell made it 54-40.

Nikki Adams then pulled Conley within 12 at 54-42 but the Valkyries were outscored 13-0 the rest of the way to end the game.

Conley led after the first quarter, 13-12, but Havelock took the lead for good midway through the second quarter.

Londora Tyson led Conley with 14 points, while Charlene Davenport and Glenda Tyson added 10 apiece.

House, GCA Take Win Over Bethel

KINSTON — Robin House scored 33 points to lead undefeated Greenville Christian to a 81-68 win over Bethel Christian Academy Tuesday night in high school basketball.

GCA took an early 15-9 lead after the first quarter but couldn't pull away from Bethel in the first half, taking a 38-33 lead into intermission.

GCA though started to pull away in the third quarter, outscoring Bethel 19-13, to take a 57-46 lead after three quarters of play and Bethel could get no closer.

Clint Parker added 18 points for GCA while John May added 17.

Doug Moody led Bethel with 21 points while Jesse Harrison chipped in with 19 points and Jamie Hardison added 15.

The win leaves GCA at 12-0 on the year.

In the girl's game, GCA rolled to a 64-40 victory.

Kim Faulkner led GCA with 11 points while Sandy Johnston and Myra Locklear added 10 points apiece.

GCA built up a 30-17 halftime lead and never looked back.

The girls improve to 11-1 and return, along with the boys, to action Friday at Friendship Christian in Raleigh.

row, three by Barnes, to trim the lead to 39-37 with 2:10 left, but neither team could score again until Leisten made two free throws with 31 seconds to go to make it 41-37. Kinston then hit with 18 left to pull within two again, but Rose was able to run out the clock from there.

"I was impressed with both teams," Coach Bill Kuykendall of Rose said. "Both of them played hard. I thought (Tina) Smith and (Andrea) Rogers did a good job on the boards for us, especially since they were so much taller than we were. I thought Tina really kept (Sandra Darden) off the boards in the second half.

"Barnes and (Shonda) Hines are averaging about 14 to 16 points a game and I thought our guards did a good job on them," Kuykendall added. Barnes finished with five and Hines had eight."

Leisten led Rose with 17 points while Barr added 10. Sara Darden and Sandra Darden each had 12 points to lead Kinston.

Junior High Basketball Action

Chicod-Wellcome
CHICOD — Chicod and Wellcome split a pair of junior high basketball games Tuesday, with the Wellcome boys and the Chicod girls taking wins. In the boy's game, Wellcome defeated Chicod, 39-21. Wellcome was led by Sidney Boyd with 10 and Chris Shepard added nine. Chicod was led by Patrick Leary with nine points and Bobby Grogan with eight. In the girl's game, Chicod topped Wellcome, 35-22. Chicod was led by Angie Jones with 15. For Wellcome, Robin Clark had 15 points.
Bethel-A.G. Cox
BETHEL — A.G. Cox swept a pair of junior high school basketball games from Bethel Middle School Tuesday. Cox's boys rolled up a 47-25 victory in their game. Cox was led by Brian Smith and Maurice Anderson, each with 10 points. Cox's girls also won, 24-22. Bethel was led by Rochell Powell with 10 while V. Hall led Cox with 11.

Cox Takes Dixon In Wrestling Match

WINTERVILLE — A.G. Cox defeated Dixon Middle School, 50-30, in a junior high school wrestling match Tuesday night. Cox won nine of the weight classes including seven by pins. Dixon took three matches by forfeit and two others by pins. Recording pins for Cox were John Howery, Timmy Daniels, Kerry Stanley, K.D. Anderson, Ronnie Barnhill, Terry Turnage and Jamie Mitchell. Cox is now 7-1 on the year and will play host to McDonald of New Bern on Monday.

Core Chairman Defends Greek's Comments

NEW YORK (AP) — Fired CBS Sports commentator Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder "spoke the truth" and was repeating statements made by black leaders when he made controversial racial remarks last week, the chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality says. CORE's national chairman, Roy Innis, is one of the few black leaders to defend Snyder, who has been widely criticized for making on-air racial remarks considered derogatory toward blacks. Among the remarks Snyder made during a televised interview Friday was a comment that blacks are better athletes than whites because of breeding techniques that originated during the Civil War. "During the slave period, the slave owner would breed his big black with his big woman so that he could have a big black kid — that's where it all started," Snyder said during the interview. Innis defended those statements as accurate during an awards dinner Monday honoring the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., and said black leaders, including Malcolm X, had made similar statements in the past. "Jimmy must have been reading Malcolm," he said. Speaking of the days of slavery, Innis said: "We were bred like cattle. It's wrong that they did that to us — but it's not wrong to talk about history." Innis said the meaning of equality between blacks and whites incorporates the idea that members of the two races should be able to exchange ideas "even when they're unpleasant." "Jimmy the Greek spoke the truth," said Innis, who referred to Snyder's firing as a tragedy.

UNC Officials Decline Comment On Fenner

Former North Carolina tailback Derrick Fenner says he has been readmitted to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, but UNC officials declined comment. Fenner said Monday he would be readmitted to school this spring. UNC vice chancellor Donald Boulton said the university could not comment on Fenner's academic status because of student confidentiality. Fenner left school last year after being charged with murder in a drug-related slaying in Maryland. The murder charges against Fenner were dropped in November, but he still faces cocaine and handgun possession charges in Maryland, and is scheduled to go to trial next week. Fenner spoke to the Durham Morning Herald from his parents' home in Oxon Hill, Md. He said he was taking six hours of correspondence courses and living in Chapel Hill. He said the courses were anthropology and sociology. UNC-CH Athletic Director John D. Swofford, who could not be reached for comment Monday, has said Fenner would sit out a season even if he were readmitted.

Cremins Says ACC Needed A Black Coach

Although he was sorry to see Charles "Lefty" Driesell ousted from behind the Maryland bench, Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said the "timing was right" last year to hire the Atlantic Coast Conference's first black head coach. Cremins, who has one black assistant on his staff, said Tuesday during a teleconference of ACC coaches that Maryland head coach Bob Wade had "paid the price" while winning at Baltimore Dunbar High School and should have gotten the chance to be a head coach in college. "He's done a great job," Cremins said of Maryland's second-year coach. "I was really proud that the ACC hired a black coach. I thought the timing was perfect."

ATLANTA (AP) — Brian Oliver keyed a 15-6 Georgia Tech run to open the second half Tuesday as the Yellow Jackets erased a 2-point halftime deficit on the way to a 84-72 victory over North Carolina A&T. Oliver scored 13 of his 15 points in the second half, including a three-point play two minutes into the half that gave Georgia Tech the lead for good at 40-38. Oliver, a sophomore, also had a career high 13 rebounds to lead the Yellow Jackets. Duane Ferrell had 27 points to top Georgia Tech, 13-3, and Tom Hammonds had 22. The Aggies, 10-2, placed five players in double figures, led by Claude Williams' 14 points, and Carlton Bechton, Corvin Davis and Thomas Griffith with 13 each and Lee Robinson with 12. Georgia Tech, of the Atlantic Coast Conference, built its biggest lead at 79-60 with four minutes left and

Coach Bobby Cremins began to clear the bench. The Aggies, leaders of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, then scored nine straight points to close to 79-69 with just over 2 minutes remaining before Cremins sent Hammonds and guard Craig Neal back in for the rest of the game. N.C. A&T ran out to a 23-9 lead in the first nine minutes of the game, but Georgia Tech went on an 18-4 run, led by 10 points from Hammonds, to tie the game at 27 with 4:41 left in the half. The Aggies led 36-34 at halftime. "It was a good win for us," Cremins said. "I thought we played well in the second half." Cremins said he warned his players not to overlook the Aggies, who have been to the NCAA tournament six straight years, "but you can talk all day about something like that. A&T is a fine team and they played their hearts out but I saw a spark in us in the first half. In the second half I liked the way we played." Aggie Coach Don Corbett said the key to the game was controlling Tech's running game. "We did a good job of that during the first 10 minutes of the game," he said. "I think as the game progressed, they did a better job on the boards and then Craig Neal did a helluva of a job pushing the ball up the floor. In the long run, that, and them making their free throws and us missing ours cost us the ball game."

North Carolina A&T hit just 13 of 24 foul shots compared to Tech's 20 of 31. "I think when the game got physical it was what took its toll on us," he said. "We played a real good ball game. I'm real proud of them. They never gave up."

North Edgecombe, Tribe Earn A Basketball Split

CHOCOWINITY — North Edgecombe and Chocowinity split a pair of Tobacco Belt Conference basketball games Tuesday night. North Edgecombe won the boys' game, 59-57, while Chocowinity captured the girls' game, 58-45. Chocowinity's boys pushed out to a 16-11 lead in the first period of play but the Warriors rallied in the second period, 16-14. That cut the Indian lead back to 30-27 at the half. In the third period, North Edgecombe again outthit the Tribe, 19-15, to take a 46-45 lead. In the last quarter, it went back and forth to the end when Derecke Belcher hit a jumper with four seconds left to give the Warriors the win.

Tim Condry and Greg Lewis each had 16 points to lead the Warriors. Curtis Myers had 15 and Greg Heggie had 11 for Chocowinity. Chocowinity's girls jumped off to a 16-4 lead in the opening period and were never in trouble. They stretched the lead to 33-13 by the end of the half and were up, 50-31 going into the last quarter. China Grice led Chocowinity with 21 points while Druscilla Crawford had 18. Shonika Hill led North Edgecombe with 18 while Tonya Lee had 15. Chocowinity's boys are now 7-4 overall and 6-3 in league play. The Chocowinity girls are now 8-1. The Tribe returns to action on Friday at Aurora.

Raiders Changing?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Raiders had their worst season of the Al Davis era in 1987, and there has been mounting speculation about what remedial steps Davis might take.

The NFL team called a news conference for today; heating up rumors that a coaching change might be in the offing.

One report was that Coach Tom Flores was resigning.

Some speculation was that team owner Davis might hire a black head coach, who would be the first in the modern-day NFL.

Davis, reached Tuesday evening, refused to confirm or deny a report by ESPN, the cable sports network, that Flores was resigning.

Davis also would not divulge the subject of the news conference, scheduled at a hotel near the Los Angeles airport.

The team said only that Davis would make a "significant announcement."

The Raiders finished 5-10 this season, their worst record in the 25 years since Davis first joined the organization as coach and general manager in 1963.

Flores, the Raiders' head coach for the past nine years, has taken the club to two Super Bowl victories and three AFC West titles.

But the Raiders, who last played in the Super Bowl after the 1983 season, slipped to 8-8 in 1986 before posting their poor record this past season, and have lost 14 of their last 19 games spanning the two campaigns.

The club's major weakness has been at quarterback. Jim Plunkett has grown older and been hampered by injury, and neither Marc Wilson nor Rusty Hilger has been able to provide any consistency at the position.

Should Davis in fact hire a black head coach, likely candidates would include Raider assistants Art Shell and Willie Brown, and Pittsburgh Steelers defensive coordinator Tony Dungy.

The New York Yankees have played in more World Series, 33, and won more, 22, than any other major league team.

Jones Trying To Fill UNLV's Void

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Keith James realizes he has a void to fill for Nevada-Las Vegas as long as Jarvis Basnight is sidelined.

"I felt that someone would have to step forward and accept the leadership, and I felt that I would be the guy," James said after scoring a season-high 21 points in the eighth-ranked Rebels' 87-83 victory over Utah State on Tuesday night.

Basnight, the nation's leading field-goal shooter, is out with a groin injury.

Cint Rossom hit four free throws in the final 17 seconds as UNLV moved into first place in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. The Rebels are now 15-1 overall and 5-1 in the conference.

"This was a great win for us to come here and win without Basnight," UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian said.

"And on top of that, I've been sicker than a dog. I didn't do anything on the bench tonight. I couldn't even move," Tarkanian said.

The game was the only one involving a ranked team. Tonight, it will be No. 4 Kentucky vs. Florida, No. 5 Purdue vs. Michigan State, No. 10 Iowa State vs. Nebraska, No. 11 Oklahoma at Colorado, No. 15 Georgetown vs. St. John's and No. 20

North Carolina State. vs. Wake Forest at Greensboro, N.C..

Jerusalem's Old City Retains Ancient Heritage

L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

JERUSALEM — The early morning sun slants through St. Stephen's Gate and casts exaggerated shadows along the Via Dolorosa.

Moslem Arab men in traditional kaffiyeh headdress enter and turn immediately to the left, up the Street of the Gate of the Tribes toward what they call Haram al Sharif, "the Noble Sanctuary," for morning prayers at the Al Aqsa Mosque.

A little farther on, a bearded Greek Orthodox priest in a long black cassock scurries past a tethered donkey toward the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, built over what is said to be the site of the Crucifixion and burial of Jesus.

Along Valley Street, merchants setting out their selections of olive-wood carvings and T-shirts pay scant notice to a group of Orthodox Jews, their sideburns dangling almost to the black and white prayer shawls draped over their shoulders, as they head toward the Western Wall, the last, hallowed remnant of the once-glorious Jewish Temples.

So begins another day within the walls of the historic Old City, the sometime materialistic, sometime mystical core of the much larger modern city of Jerusalem.

The Old City every year attracts more than a million foreign visitors, but there is another Old City behind the facades of the holy places and the souvenir shops. It is a labyrinthine jumble of stone where more than 26,000 people fight what is often a losing battle to lead normal lives in the tense and crowded showcase that fate or economics or ideological conviction has made their home.

"You really have to have a vocation to live here — it's tough," said Anna Grace Lind, the granddaughter of American Christians who moved to Jerusalem in the 19th century. She lives in a house abutting the Old City's northern wall where she was born more than 80 years ago.

Although the municipality has put about $40 million into improving the Old City's services over the past 11 years, many Arab residents still lack such amenities as running water and inside toilets. Driving is severely restricted, and parking space is almost non-existent.

Drugs are a growing problem, and in some areas so is theft. Even in the Jewish Quarter, completely rebuilt after Israel captured the walled city in the Arab-Israeli War of 1967, residents say they must put up with inconvenience, overcrowding and too many tourists.

Fran Alpert, an American-born Jew who immigrated nine years ago, exemplifies the conflict that so many residents seem to feel between the national and religious seduction of the Old City and the day-to-day problems of living here.

"You don't have to wear 'peyotes' (dangling sideburns) to be turned on by this," she said the other day as she showed visitors the panoramic view from a special platform atop her home in the Old City's Jewish Quarter. "The Talmud says God created the world right there," and she pointed to the spot, a few hundred yards away, where the First and Second Jewish temples had once stood, before the time of Jesus.

Alpert recently put her home up for sale in hopes of trading the view for a more traditional lifestyle outside the walls.

The Old City, which accounts for less than 1 percent of the municipality's land area but about 6 percent of its population, is separated into four distinct residential and commercial sections, according to the national and religious identity of the majority in each. And although some of the attractions and problems of living here are common to all, some are peculiar to the respective Moslem, Christian, Jewish and Armenian quarters.

In the Jewish Quarter, people like Fran Alpert are moving away because they are increasingly uncomfortable with the influx of more Orthodox families who adhere to a strict religious code of behavior that is alien to the secular or more liberal way of life.

In the poorer and heavily populated Moslem and Christian quarters, where the attraction for many is low-cost or even rent-free housing, provided by the religious institutions that own it, many of the predominantly Arab residents leave as soon as they can afford something better outside the walls.

Every year, in the Armenian Quarter, a steady trickle of families abandon what is the Old City's most cloistered life style to return to their national homeland south of the Caucasus Mountains, now a part of the Soviet Union, or, more often, to join relatives in the United States and other countries they see as offering more opportunity for themselves and their children.

These people are generally replaced by poorer and more religious newcomers. As a result, the Old City tends to get more divided even as it is united physically by a modernized network of services.

Until a little more than 100 years ago, there was no Jerusalem outside the walls, last rebuilt by Sultan Suleiman the Magnificent in the 16th century, except for a few nomads and wild animals. As Old City inhabitants see it, that is still pretty much the case. When they say "Jerusalem," they invariably refer to that part of the city within the walls. Everything beyond, as one of them put it, is "the suburbs."

The Old City, in what is now the predominantly Arab eastern half of the modern city, stands on the rubble of 27 previous cultures, laid down over a period of more than 3,000 years.

Only about a third of the Old City's residents had running water when Israeli troops moved in 20 years ago, said Yitzhak Yaacov, director general of the East Jerusalem Development Corp. Ltd., which is responsible for modernizing the Old City. Today only one person in 10 lacks running water.

The supply of electric power is three times what it was. The old, inadequate sewer and drainage system, parts of which dated from Roman times, has been largely replaced. The entire telephone network is being revamped, and television antennas have been removed and replaced by underground cables in the Jewish and Armenian quarters and most of the Christian Quarter.

But aside from those important improvements and the rebuilt Jewish Quarter, the Old City for the most part is not much different from what it must have been hundreds of years ago.

LIFE IN THE CITY — A Jewish woman carries her baby through the narrow streets of Jerusalem's Old City, which accounts for less than 1 percent of the municipality's land area but has about 6 percent of the population. Steeped in the traditions of hundreds of years, the Old City today is finding itself enveloped in the problems of the new world. (L.A. Times-Washington Post Photos)

Narrow alleys, unmarked entrance-ways and hidden stairways create a maze through centuries-old stone buildings. One building abuts the next. Small, communal courtyards, hidden from view from the street, often provide the only open space for blocks around.

"You always know when the neighbors are having for dinner, particularly in the summer," Nafez Assaily, a Moslem Arab resident, said with a laugh.

Homes like Assaily's often consist of two or three individual rooms with no connection between them except an outdoor walkway.

"During the night, you have to go outside to the bathroom," said Assaily, 31, a publicist. "This I dislike."

Many of the Old City's 1,800 shops, owned mostly by Arabs, are literally no more than holes in the wall. They are concentrated in sections of the Moslem and Christian quarters, and their colorful old names have little to do with their present activities — the Butchers' Market, Perfume Market, Leather Market, Olive Oil Market.

Today, most shops cater to tourists, and even those that serve the residents seem like relics of a bygone era. One Moslem-quarter tradesman, for example, still polishes brass and copper trays by spreading sand on them, covering them with a rag and then standing on them, pivoting on the balls of his feet as in some dance step of the 1950s.

Merchants such as Said Barq, proposed to be a Moslem Arab resident, said with a laugh.

Carolina Events

Film On Picasso To Be Shown Sunday

RALEIGH — The documentary film, "Mystery of Picasso," will be shown at the North Carolina Museum of Art, 2110 Blue Ridge Boulevard, Raleigh, on Sunday. Two screenings will take place, at 1 p.m. and at 3:35 p.m. Filmed in 1956 by French director Henri-Georges Clouzot, it shows the artist at work.

Paintings made by Picasso in the film were immediately destroyed, leaving the film as their only record. A second film, "Bearden Plays Bearden," will be shown at 3 p.m. between the screenings of the Picasso film. There is no admission charge for either of the films.

Historic Albemarle Tour Receives Grant

EDENTON — The North Carolina Humanities Council has awarded a $3,787 matching grant to the Historic Albemarle Tour Inc. to help sponsor a special historical and dramatic presentation, "Freedom or Tyranny — A Towne Meeting to Discuss Our Proposed Constitution."

The program will consist of a recreated town meeting in 1787 and will feature actors dressed as 18th century characters. The script is based on research conducted by the Historic Sites Section of the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources. The drama will be presented in five locations in northeastern North Carolina in the spring, with locations and dates to be announced later.

New Hanover Museum To Show Free Films

WILMINGTON — The New Hanover County Museum of the Lower Cape Fear will present four De Laurentis-produced films on Sunday at the museum, 814 Market St., Wilmington. There is no admission charge.

Times of screenings — both Saturday and Sunday — are: "La Strada," 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 p.m.; "Three Days of the Condor," 2:45 p.m. and 3:45 p.m.; "The Shootist," 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., and "Serpico," 7 p.m. Saturday. Dr. Terry Theodore of UNC-Wilmington's Art Department has researched the films and will give an overview of the films at the first show on each of the two dates.

Temporary Location For Green Hill Center

GREENSBORO — The Green Hill Center for North Carolina Art will soon move to temporary quarters in Greensborough Court, 327 S. Elm St., downtown Greensboro. The center's permanent facility at 200 N. Davie St. will undergo renovation and expansion, with work scheduled to be completed by the fall of 1989.

Green Hill will reopen in early, with the gallery to resume a regular schedule of exhibitions and programs on the visual arts of North Carolina. For more details, call 373-4515.

Music Fellowships Offered

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Arts Council is offering an unspecified number of fellowships in two categories of music. Application deadline for both is Feb. 1.

One category is for fellowships to professional North Carolina composers. Each is for a total of $5,000.

The other music fellowship is for jazz composers and creative jazz musicians, and is also $5,000.

For both categories of fellowships, the basic criteria is that the applicant must have been a resident of North Carolina for at least one year prior to the application date, and must have made contributions and achievements that enrich North Carolina's cultural climate.

For more information and for an application, write to: Raymond Williams, Music Director, N.C. Arts Council, Department of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N.C., 27611 or call 733-2821.

ECU Slide-Lecture Series Opening

The East Carolina University School of Art's spring semester slide-lecture series will open Thursday with a lecture by Gabrielle Yablonsky, who is teaching at the school of art this spring as a participant in the artist-in-residence program. The lecture will be in Jenkins Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. It is free and open to the public.

Alchemedians To Perform Saturday

RALEIGH — The Alchemedians, a group that uses crystal balls, metal wands and special lights in segments of juggling, comedy, dance and mime, will present an entertainment at 8 p.m. Saturday in Stewart Theater, N.C. State University, Raleigh.

For more details, call 737-3104 Monday-Friday between 10 a.m. and 5:45 p.m.

Israeli To Lead Frankfurt Opera

By JOAN FISCHER
Associated Press Writer
FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Israeli conductor Gary Bertini had hardly settled down into his new post as the Frankfurt Opera's general director when an arsonist's fire gutted the building.

"I was discouraged and very frustrated. ... But I've been raised as a fighter," the 58-year-old Bertini said in a recent interview.

The Russian-born conductor came to Frankfurt in September. On Nov. 12, an East German refugee set the fire for reasons unrelated to Bertini or the opera.

Bertini put on Mozart's "Così fan tutte" in a Frankfurt concert hall only two days after the blaze. The performance was acclaimed by critics, and public support ran high for the opera company's fighting spirit.

Coming to Frankfurt was an unexpected turn in his career. As an Israeli Jew, Bertini admits to having long had an "aversion" toward West Germany because of the country's Nazi past.

"I was invited to Germany to conduct in the 1960s, and had contract offers, but I never accepted," he said. "It took me 26 years until I accepted for the first time an engagement in Germany."

In 1971, 26 years after World War II, Bertini conducted the premiere of Israeli composer Josef Tal's opera "Ashmedai" in Hamburg.

"It's not a conscious process, or an intellectual one," Bertini said, describing his change of attitude. "The feelings were less strong in me, and I felt I could connect and communicate with people here, especially with the new generation."

The complete artistic potential of the position as general director made him decide on Frankfurt, Bertini said.

"The general director decides which operas are being played, when, how and with whom. As a musical conductor, you're dependent on so many elements — direction, acting, stage, singers — which are not in your hand at all," he said.

Bertini has conducted the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, Milan's La Scala orchestra and other prominent groups around the world, including orchestras in New York, Philadelphia, Tokyo, Paris and Vienna. He also was a musical adviser to the Detroit Symphony Orchestra in 1981-84.

Such a broad range of experience impressed Frankfurt's cultural administrators.

"The city orchestra, the Society for Opera and Museum Concerts, and several top critics voted unanimously for Bertini," Frankfurt cultural director Hilmar Hoffmann said.

Bertini, who has led the Cologne Radio Symphony Orchestra since 1983, was already well known in West Germany before the opera appointment.

Bertini studied conducting, musicology, and composition in Paris and Milan as well as Tel Aviv, and brought the knowledge he gained there back home.

He founded Tel Aviv's Rinat Chamber Choir in 1956 and the Israel Chamber Orchestra nine years later. He was leading conductor of the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra from 1978 to 1986.

Bertini has frequently introduced the works of Israeli composers to foreign audiences, and since 1975 has been a professor of musicology at Tel Aviv University.

So far, openness and versatility have marked Bertini's leadership in Frankfurt. This season's selection ranges from traditional operas such as Puccini's "La Bohème" to the premiere of the avant-garde "Europeras 1 and 2" by American composer John Cage.

"I don't intend to be labeled," Bertini said. "A city opera has a responsibility to offer all different sectors of the public something they like. But it must be music I believe in."

Film Of U2 Tour Documents Irish Group's Rise To Top

By WALTER BERRY
Associated Press Writer
TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — It was half past midnight and the main man behind Midnight Films Ltd. said his job was just getting started.

Phil Joanou, a 26-year-old protege of filmmaker Steven Spielberg, stepped gingerly around camera tripods and over rows of cardboard boxes containing the fruits of his latest project — a documentary on the Irish rock group U2 and its rocket ride to the top of the pop charts.

Joanou (pronounced zhoo-a-new) and 80 crew members were here to film U2 as the critically acclaimed quartet from Dublin ended its eight-month world tour with two sold-out concerts at 60,000-seat Sun Devil Stadium.

"It's all in these cans," said Joanou, pointing to some 500 silver containers on a red-carpeted, grip room floor behind the concert stage. "How much did we shoot? Try 200,000 feet of film in two nights. From this tour, we got 650,000 feet. That's 160 hours of raw footage."

"This whole thing will cost between $4 million and $4.5 million. It's a lot of money. Most movie directors can't afford to make their own films. U2 can."

The group grossed more than $26 million on the 1987 tour to promote its fifth studio album, "The Joshua Tree," which has sold more than 3 million copies worldwide and produced the band's first two No. 1 singles — "With Or Without You" and "I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For."

Joanou, who graduated from the University of Southern California's film school in 1984, said he's a longtime U2 fan and lucked into the directing job.

"I was at dinner with a movie studio friend of mine who told me that U2 was planning to make a movie and was interviewing people to direct it. I got interested right away. I paid my own way to fly from Los Angeles to Hartford, Conn., the next night to meet the band," recalled Joanou.

"The first thing (U2 lead singer) Bono asked me was, 'If you're going to make a movie about us, what would you make?' I asked the band, 'What kind of movie would YOU make?' I think that was the first time any of other directors had asked them that question.

"They immediately started launching into ideas. We talked until four o'clock in the morning."

They met through the summer in France, Scotland and London and made a deal. Joanou concentrated on behind-the-scenes shots for most of the tour with straight concert footage filmed here using 10 cameras — four on stage, three in front, one on a ramp extended into the crowd, one at the rear of the stadium and one in an airborne helicopter.

"There is no script; it's all spontaneous," he said. "I want to show U2 in a musical environment. I want to show their intensity. These guys have been a great inspiration for me. That have done it all and all on their own terms."

The documentary, with a working title of either "U2 in Concert" or "U2: Live in the Desert," will accompany a planned double-album soundtrack with up to three sides of live material. Both projects, plus another film on the making of the documentary, are scheduled for release early next fall.

Jimmy Iovine, who produced U2's live mini-LP "Under a Blood Red Sky" in 1983, is culling the film's soundtrack from 14 shows on the tour.

"What we're striving for is to make it feel like you're in the audience and that's the hardest thing to do," Iovine said. "And we want the sound different than what's in the theaters now, maybe something other than Dolby or quadraphonic sound. We want to make it a unique experience."

Joanou said the band and its representatives are negotiating with Paramount Pictures for distribution rights. He added that U2's near-flawless 22-song, 114-minute, five-encore show for the tour's finale may be released next year in its entirety as a home video.

Joanou directed two episodes of Spielberg's "Amazing Stories" TV series and the $6 million feature, "Three O'Clock High," which bombed last fall.

"It was a black comedy set in a high school," the director said. "The last thing I wanted to do was a high school film, but I dove into it head first. I'm proud of it. This, on the other hand, is a big reach for me. For your second film, to make a concert movie, it's a major risk. It's also a year and a half out of my life."

"Hey, I'm only 26 once in my life. For me, this experience is absolutely irreplaceable. It is the beginning of a new direction for me, where I wanted to go all along. But you got to remember that this is U2's movie as much as my movie."

French Farms Threaten To Become 'Green Desert'

By FIONA GLEIZES
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Farmers are leaving the land so fast in France that experts fear some corners of the picturesque rural landscape will become a "green desert."
The French have a great affection for the countryside and each city dweller is said to have some link with it — an old uncle who has a small herd of goats or a grandmother who makes delicious cheese.
But this may soon change.
Squeezed by rising costs and tough competition, many farmers are leaving field and pasture. Others march to Paris to demand government help, sometimes spilling imported farm products on roadsides or bringing their herds to the Arc de Triomphe to underscore their complaints.

"The word 'desertification' covers not just the abandonment of agricultural land but the whole rural environment," Anne-Marie Stasiak, director of an environmental education program, said in an interview.
Land taxes paid by farmers finance local amenities such as roads and schools and without this revenue whole villages have disappeared from the map. Cafes, general stores and gas stations have closed because customers have moved away.
In the Loire Valley, for example, the number of farmers fell from 185,000 in 1955 to 92,300 in 1985.

France still has an unusually high percentage of people on the land for an industrialized country: 8.2 percent of its work force was in agriculture in 1985, compared with 2.4 percent in Britain and 5.2 percent in West Germany, according to the latest European Economic Community statistics.
But the French Agriculture Ministry expects about one-fifth of the nation's farmland — 15 million acres — will have been taken out of production in the 1980s.
A study published in the newspaper Le Monde of Paris reported that farm prices had fallen 43 percent in the last 14 years and rural land prices are falling with them.
While good quality land for grain-growing in the Beauce region southwest of Paris still fetches an average of $2,200 an acre, grassland in less-favored regions is worth only about $730 an acre.
Not all French farmers are deserting their land, but regions such as the Massif Central, southern Normandy, the Ardennes in northeastern France and the Landes in southwestern France have been hit by "la friche" — the French term for abandonment of land.
"The land is being abandoned in regions that already have problems and the desertification only accentuates the problems," said Sylvain Cazes, assistant director of the National Federation of Farmers' Unions.
"The forest fires along the Mediterranean coast last year were directly connected with 'la friche,' because once farmers grazed animals on the land and this kept the vegetation down," he said. "Now there is a thick covering of dry brush which catches fire easily."
When one or two fields lie fallow, they become breeding grounds for pests which contaminate crops in neighboring fields. Country pathways and access routes often maintained by farmers disappear when they leave the land.
This rural exodus also is linked to the aging of the rural population. Half of France's farmers are more than 55 years old and likely to retire in the next 10 years. Half of them are not expected to be replaced.
"The young want a lifestyle that is not so difficult," Mrs. Stasiak said. "They are not prepared to live as their fathers did."
If a farmer's son or daughter is willing to take over the farm, he or she may find it difficult to get government grants intended to help young farmers buy equipment such as tractors.

But the grants rarely help the small farmer.
"If you want to buy large machinery, you'll need at least 80 hectares (nearly 200 acres)," Mrs. Stasiak said. "But the average French farm has only 30 hectares (74 acres)."
Farm overhead is high and returns low.
"Taxes, insurance, fuel, everything goes up but agricultural prices don't," said Auguste Bergere, who has retired as a farmer in the Berry region in central France.
Although the European Economic Community's agricultural policies protect farmers in many ways and keep some prices high, some policies have added to the farm problems.
EEC milk quotas, designed to cut down milk production and reduce the size of the surplus "milk lake," has hit the smaller dairy farmers hardest and may hasten the abandonment of some of the marginal farming land, officials said.

"On the mountain grasslands, there are few alternatives to dairy farming and the quota policy is having a devastating effect," said Eric Forget, a specialist in mountain farming at the Agriculture Ministry.
If France's countryside is not to become the green desert that some fear, then experts say farmers must look for alternatives — diversifying production and upgrading quality, rather than aiming simply for maximum production.
The European Economic Community has proposed setting aside, or "freezing" land — paying farmers to keep part of their holdings fallow — and thus maintain prices by cutting production. Not everyone is keen on the idea.

"It's completely idiotic because we couldn't live like that. We already have to fight for our living," said Bergere.
"The farmer is made for producing," said Forget. "The idea of freezing land put forward by (the EEC) is an affront to the dignity of man."
Cazes said farmers could help expand rural tourism. The idea of a camping at a farm, with a fresh supply of milk and eggs from the farmer's wife, is not new, but most French people still tend to rush to the seashore for their vacations.

Old City Finds New Problems

prietor of a tiny laundry equipped with only two dirty ironing boards and an old, belt-driven sewing machine, say life is much more difficult than it used to be. They usually date their troubles to the arrival of the Israelis in 1967.
But in many cases the real villain is economic progress, which coincided with Israel's conquest. Many Old City residents prefer to go outside the walls to shop in a modern supermarket rather than trudge from stall to stall as they used to do.
Yusef Terhi fondly recalled the days when he employed "baker boys" to collect dough from the residents and bring it to his Moslem-Quarter shop to be baked in an old stone oven.
"We lost that after 1967," he said, shrugging, "not because of the war or the occupation or the Israelis but because of development. People have stoves at home now, and it's less expensive to buy Israeli bread than to make the dough and have it baked here."
There is virtually no commercial entertainment in the Old City except for a few billiard parlors.
Intercommunal violence in the Old City is given broad coverage in the local and foreign press, but incidents of such violence are actually relatively rare. Nevertheless, most residents prefer to stay close to their own people.
"They were always separate, so why should you mix them?" one official said.
The separation is most pronounced in the Armenian Quarter, where life is centered around the St. James Armenian Orthodox Monastery. St. James, which predates the Crusaders, took in thousands of refugees during and immediately after World War I. About 600 descendants of these refugees, nearly half the residents of the smallest Old City quarter, still live within the gates.

"We call it the prison," a young Armenian woman said with a laugh. "You know, they lock the gate at 10 p.m."
When the government decided to rebuild the Jewish quarter, it offered property to Jewish families that had owned homes there before 1948 and had lost them when the Old City fell into Jordanian hands in the first Arab-Israeli War. Almost all turned the government down.
The modern Jewish Quarter, which has about 2,000 residents, is a mixture of chic tourist restaurants and shops, quarter-million-dollar apartments, and generously endowed Talmudic academies.
Originally, it was thought that the population would be about 50 percent secular and 50 percent religious. And 10 years ago, one resident said, there was an almost Bohemian element in the area. Now, however, it is increasingly an ultra-Orthodox neighborhood.
The Moslem Quarter is the largest and poorest in the Old City, with about 17,000 residents, or two-thirds of the total population, crowded into the northeast quadrant on about a third of the available space. The area is heavily patrolled by Israeli border guards, and younger residents particularly complain that they are frequently stopped for identity checks.
Residents and officials agree that the Old City's drug problem is at its worst in the Moslem Quarter. Last month the police arrested 18 drug sellers there in one night.
The 5,000 mostly Arab residents of the Christian Quarter share many of the problems of their Moslem neighbors. But they say they feel caught in the middle — distrusted by Jews and also by Moslems, who see them as bourgeois religious outcasts.

"I have more Israeli friends than Moslems," said Charles Asmar, 17, who lives in a rent-free building owned by the Latin Patriarchate and occupied by 40 Roman Catholic Arab families.
"Everything in the Old City is political," said Yaacovy, the modernizer of the area's services, who meets every other day with Jerusalem's chief archeologist.
"I'm probably the only director of a company in the world that works with a New Testament, an Old Testament, and a Koran in his hand," he said.

Octogenarian Retread Still Has Mileage Left

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
NORTH MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Call Elmer D. Smith a "retread" if you like, but don't call him "old." This lightweight octogenarian still can probably pack a pretty good punch.

"A retread is someone who served in World War I and World War II," explained Smith, a vibrant 87-year-old ex-Marine with almost total recall of an adventuresome life.

He vividly recalls his youth in Beverly, Mass., and his efforts to enlist at the start of World War I when he was underage.

"I tried everything — even messed up my birth certificate — but I was too young to go to France in 1918 and too old in 1942 to go overseas," he said.

On Oct. 12, 1918, Smith became a U.S. Marine. He trained at Parris Island, S.C., and Quantico, Va., before his unit was sent to the Dominican Republic.

"We went after the renegades in the jungle," he recalled, citing dates, names of long-lost buddies and details of his experiences almost 70 years ago.

In November 1919, Smith was discharged and worked on a railroad and then as a lumberjack until he re-enlisted in 1920.

As a Marine guard, he served in California before he was shipped to the Far East where he pulled duty in the Philippines. He later was transferred to the U.S. Legation at Peking, China, as a radio operator.

"That was when Chinese men wore pigtails and had long fingernails," he said.

In 1923, Smith was discharged in China. He went to Shanghai and became a professional fighter.

"I had no trainer, but I was good — not too good — but I was a raw fighter and liked by the colonials."

In China, he worked for the Universal Leaf Tobacco Co. of North Carolina until 1925 when he moved to Australia.

Recalling his fights, Smith forgets his age and goes into a boxer's crouch, fires two quick left jabs and crosses with the fight as he recounts one of his bloody ring battles. His fists are thick and his handshake like a vice.

The Depression came while Smith was in Australia and, in 1935, home-sick and broke, he got a job in the engine room of a Matson Steamship Co. vessel and ended up in San Francisco.

"I was broke and jumped freight trains across the United States. I can tell you plenty of stories about that," he said.

Staying with his parents in Boston, he sold door-to-door flowers his mother made at home.

In 1937, it was back in the merchant marine which took him around the world several times until the outbreak of World War II when he helped build "liberty ships" in Richmond, Calif.

In 1942, he returned to Boston and rejoined the Marines.

"I was too old to fight so they made me a recruiter," he said. He was stationed in Richmond, Va., until his discharge as a staff sergeant in 1945 when he became a civilian guard at a nearby army quartermaster depot.

In 1951, he moved to South Florida and became a security guard, retiring from the Fontainebleau Hotel on Miami Beach in 1965.

He married twice, survived both spouses and has no children.

He's a member of several veterans organizations, but is most proud of his membership in the Retreads.

"The Retreads were formed in 1945 in North Africa by three officers from the Marines, Army and Navy," he said. Smith is never without his red beret with the Retread emblem on its front.

Smith is also commander of the Veterans of World War I Barracks 837.

"We're going to have to fold this year," he said sadly, "because of age and lack of transportation."

He has a dwindling list of about 15 World War I buddies he tries to keep track of. "I call them or write them letters, but it's very difficult to keep the post together."

Each year, Smith is asked by community organizations to represent World War I veterans at local ceremonies.

On each occasion, he ends his brief speech with:

"In Flanders Field the poppies blow

Between the crosses row on row,

That mark our place; and in the sky

The larks, still bravely singing, fly Scarce heard amid the guns below."

Club Spreads Word About Peanut Butter

TIFTON, Ga. (AP) — Promoters of Georgia's top cash crop have organized a new club in England, complete with a newsletter and a goober character dressed in red, white and blue, to spread the word about peanut butter.

"It's growing fast," said Marilyn Moore, director of promotions and education for the Georgia Peanut Commission, who traveled to London recently to help organize the club.

A similar club in this country — the Peanut Butter Lovers Fan Club for Adults Only — has attracted 25,000 members since its founding in 1986. Members include such celebrities as Charlton Heston, rock star Madonna, television talk show host Larry King and author William Buckley.

The new club, kicked off in November by the National Peanut Council of America, signed up 1,000 members during its first month, Ms. Moore said.

Members receive a newsletter featuring recipes, games, stories, trivia and nutritional information, a membership certificate, a button proclaiming "I'm an American peanut butter lover" and a refrigerator magnet that says "The world's greatest peanut butter lover." Members also take part in contests that feature shirts and other items as prizes.

"We think this is going to really boost the consumption of peanut butter in the U.K. because it will make children and their parents more aware of the nutritional values of peanut butter," said Ms. Moore.

In recent years, several British companies have started making peanut butter, boosting annual per capita consumption to a half pound. Consumption in the United States is estimated to be 6 pounds per person each year.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Jan. 21

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): This is not a good day to begin any new ventures, but it is a fine time to improve your present situation. Be considerate to your mate.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you have made a promise which you cannot keep at this time, explain the situation clearly. Enjoy the company of friends tonight.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): An associate may want to revise an agreement you have made, but it's important that you keep to your schedule and get your work done.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Even though you may be busy at your job, you'll still have time to check out an opportunity for some added income.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Although you are anxious to have a good time, there are obligations you have to meet first, so get busy at them early and relax later.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't let some problems at home interfere with important dealings in the business world. Be more cooperative with your co-workers.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Stop running around aimlessly; sit down and work out a practical plan. Dealing fairly and squarely with others will bring you greater success.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): This is a good day to enjoy some recreation and put aside any monetary worries you may have. This will improve your mood.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Focus your energy on improving the conditions at home and establishing more harmony there. Postpone your personal desires.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Being direct and to-the-point will get you exactly what you want. If you want to enjoy a hobby, be sure to stay within your budget.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Study your assets and liabilities so you'll know exactly where you stand financially. Avoid a friend who is cranky and stubborn.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): A new opportunity can be very profitable if you keep away from an old problem which takes up too much of your valuable time.

covered by the nine and won by the jack. When the ace of diamonds dropped the king, declarer had at least nine tricks for the taking—three spades, five diamonds and the ace of hearts. But was that going to be enough to either tie or win the board? If the spade lead was normal, the declarer at the other table might come to 10 tricks by repeating the spade finesse.
 After finessing the ten of diamonds, cashing the queen and conceding a diamond, declarer was faced with a spade continuation by West. He chose to finesse he ten, and when East produced the queen declarer found himself with no entry to dummy. In the end, he could gather no more than seven tricks for down two.

I Walk

By Mike Bode

The following poem concerns the forced westward movement of the Cherokee Indians in 1838 and 1839. The Indians suffered from exposure to the cold winter, from a lack of food and from disease as they moved along the "Trail of Tears".

The trail is black,
Death looms on each side.
I hear a baby's cry.
I slowly watch a man die.

I walk along the trail,
The trail that has taken my wife's life.
I remember her body and the feeling

Of my heart coming through my throat.

But I have no energy to spare.
My mind clouds with hate
To the whites and this trail.

I still remember the village
With its ceremony and family.
I remember the whites coming and telling us.
I remember the village in rage and me crying.

My thoughts are disturbed
As I taste mist of rain hitting my lips.
I smell my sweat
And of corpses gone by.

I remember the forests and the mountains.
I remember my father's tomb and his father's tomb,
But these I shall see no more.
I remember; I remember.

Why did they do this, why?
We did no harm.
Why did they do this, why?
I hate the whites and this trail.

The trail is black,
Death looms on each side.
I hear a baby's cry,
I am soon to die.

Mike Bode, 13, a student at Aycock Junior High School wins this week's writing contest.

Her Dream For This Child

By Tonya Buck

Sweet was the smell of peace in the cool air,
For that long awaited cry was ringing;
From her eyes to her feet she was tingling.
No other miracles could compare.
From her sparkling face that pierced the eye

Streaming were the tears, and out came the cry
Of happiness that she wanted to share.
Laying down the babe on mother's warm chest;
Touching her child who had soft, wrinkled skin;
Gazing with love she caught her first true grin;

Wishing her child so much more than the best:
Her dreams for this child were filled with such love
That she prayed for strength from the man above.

Tonya Buck, 17, a student at D.H. Conley High School receives special mention.

Who saw the leaves fall from the tree?
I, said the fox and it scared me.

I, said the man because I cut it down.

I, said the owl and it was a big one.

Felecia Hopkins, 9, a student at Bethel Elementary School receives special mention.

When summer was here I knew winter was near.
The sun went in and the winds began.

True Love

Murmuring tender words, his voice sweet and low,
His nobleness wrapped around me and tightened like a bow,
We sit watching the last embers of daylight die,
We with mingled hands and glances cast from passion-dimmed eyes.

Feeding our hearts on childish fantasies.
For a moment we had stood on sands gray with twilight,
Then we danced upon level shores with footfall so light.

When I touched his shoulder and felt a fire about him,
His eyes twinkled with little stars within them.

The memory of his words and the consuming truth

Showed how love can tear reality like a tiger's tooth.

It's the love I've lived, not the dream I knew

Tar Heel Trivia

William Sydney Porter

William Sydney Porter may not be a name you recognize, but his pen name of O. Henry may be familiar to you. Probably his most famous writing is "The Gift of the Magi" which is often read in English classes.

Porter was born in Greensboro in 1862. His father was a doctor who did not always attend to his practice and his mother died when he was 3. He left school at the age of 15 and for 5 years worked in his uncle's drug store.

Porter moved to Texas where he worked on a ranch, in a bank and where he wrote short articles for a newspaper. He was accused of theft in the bank where he had worked, but rather than facing the charges he left the country. It was not until his wife was seriously ill that he returned to the United States. He was arrested and sentenced to 5 years in prison. He only served 3 and since he was a registered pharmacist he worked in the prison pharmacy. It was while in prison that he wrote under several pen names, but O. Henry seems to be the most often used.

After prison he moved to New York where he wrote for a newspaper and later wrote short stories. His works fill 14 volumes. Porter married a second time and lived part of his later life in Asheville, but he died in New York in 1910.

A Bowl Of Soup Takes The Edge Off Winter Chill

On a cold winter day nothing seems to warm you up as quickly as a delicious bowl of homemade soup right out of the pot. Often made from leftovers, soup is a good way to feed your family nutritiously as well as clean out the refrigerator.

Soup could be called one of our very first convenience foods. Pioneer women often left a pot of stock simmering over the fireplace and added their leftover vegetables and meat at the end of the day to keep a "meal in minutes" ready at all times for whomever entered the door.

During winter in cooler areas of the country, soup was often hung in an outdoor shed. This was done by taking the large kettle full of soup outside to freeze. Before freezing, a large paddle with a hole in the handle was placed in the soup. Once frozen, the soup was removed from the kettle and hung up by the hole in the handle. Later when someone wanted soup, all they had to do was "chop a chunk" of the soap and heat for a filling meal.

If you find yourself among the numbers who have never made a pot of homemade soup, take heart. Unlike recipes for cakes or bread or candies, most soup recipes do not have to be followed precisely and are often easy to make. Usually, you can add a little more or a little less or something, substitute similar ingredients and end up with a tantalizing creation.

Below are some recipes from the Tarheel Kitchen, N.C. Department of Agriculture, Division of Marketing, to help you prepare for meals which

Fresh Tomatoes Enhance Tex-Mex Chicken Recipes

If you're someone who can't seem to get enough of fresh tomatoes, you're standing in the middle of a long line. Tomatoes' popularity continues to increase yearly, and it's a 12-month love affair.

Happily, tomatoes are grown in sunny Florida from late November through May, making them continuously available in our supermarkets. Keep in mind, however, that commercially grown tomatoes may need additional kitchen ripening to be at their best when you're ready to use them. When left at room temperature on your kitchen counter, they will continue the ripening process until they're completely red and nicely juicy. Just be sure you don't refrigerate them; cold kills their flavor and prevents them from ripening naturally.

Here, fully ripened Florida tomatoes are used in two chicken recipes with a Tex-Mex flavor. In the photo is a recipe for Chicken Fajitas with Fresh Tomatoes. Chicken chunks, onion and sweet peppers are marinated first in lime juice and peel, white wine and seasonings for 20 minutes. Then they're quickly broiled till golden with tomato wedges and wrapped in warm flour tortillas (readily available in your supermarket.)

Stir-fried tomatoes and chicken spiced with chili powder, garlic and cumin make a delicious filling for burritos in our second recipe. Spoon on sour cream before you take a bite.

CHICKEN FAJITAS WITH FRESH TOMATOES

- 1-1/4 pounds fresh Florida tomatoes (about 3 large)
- 1-1/4 pounds boned, skinned and halved chicken breasts (cutlets)
- 1/3 cup dry white wine
- 1/3 cup lime juice
- 1 teaspoon grated lime peel
- 1 teaspoon crushed garlic
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground red pepper
- 3/4 cup sliced onion
- 3/4 cup sliced sweet green pepper
- 3/4 cup sliced sweet yellow pepper
- 6 (7-inch) warm flour tortillas

Use tomatoes held at room temperature until fully ripe. Slice tomatoes into wedges (makes about 2 cups); set aside. Cut chicken into 1/

Creamed Egg Pot Pie Is A Homey Dish That's Very Easy To Prepare

The first American pot pies were made with leftover stew and cooked for hours over hot coals in large iron kettles. Creamed Egg Pot Pie is the country cook's skillet variation — a biscuit-topped, vegetable-laden white sauce enriched with golden nuggets of hard-cooked eggs. Quick and practically foolproof to prepare, it offers rib-sticking good eating in every bubbling bite!

This down-home dish contains foods from each of the major food categories including breads, vegetables and milk. And, because the eggs provide complete protein, they are classified in the meat category. Serve it with a fresh fruit salad and you have a sensible, well-balanced meal.

Creamed Egg Pot Pie makes great home cooking especially easy by utilizing modern time-savers such as frozen vegetables, packaged baking mix and hard-cooked eggs. In fact, take a trip from practical country meal-makers. The next time you're hard-cooking eggs, make an extra dozen to have in the refrigerator for snacks, sandwiches and homey entrees such as this one.

CREAMED EGG POT PIE

- 1/4 cup butter
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced onion
- 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 2/3 cups milk, divided
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard

- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen peas and carrots
- 8 hard-cooked eggs*, sliced
- 2 1/4 cups buttermilk baking mix

In 12-inch skillet with ovenproof handle over medium heat, cook celery and onion in butter until tender but not brown, about 5 minutes. Stir in flour, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is bubbly. Stir in 2 cups of the milk all at once. Cook and stir until mixture boils and is thickened. Stir in mustard, peas, and carrots and eggs. Continue cooking, stirring occasionally, just until mixture boils, about 10 minutes. Remove from heat.

In medium bowl, stir together baking mix and remaining 2/3 cup of the milk until dough forms. Beat 30 seconds. Drop by rounded table-spoonsful evenly over hot egg mixture. Bake in preheated 450 degrees F. oven until biscuits are golden brown, 13 to 15 minutes.

*To hard cook, put eggs in single layer in saucepan. Add enough tap water to come at least 1 inch above eggs. Cover and quickly bring just to boiling. Turn off heat. If necessary, remove pan from burner to prevent further boiling. Let eggs stand, covered, in the hot water 15 to 17 minutes for large eggs. (Adjust time up or down by about 3 minutes for each size larger or smaller.) Immediately run cold water over eggs or put them in ice water until completely cooled. To remove shell, crackle it by tapping gently all over.

Q. I would like you to write about the storage life of soft package (foil, plastic, vacuum) edible goods. S.D., Greenville.

A. Constant improvements in food packaging are made to bring us food of the highest quality, economically. You've seen more uses of foil, paper and plastics. For example, "long life milk" is milk, pasteurized at ultra high temperatures (UHT) and then packaged aseptically (in sterile material) in a unique blend of paper and foils. It needs no refrigeration until after opening. Pasteurization kills the microorganisms in the milk. Those changes in flavor and mouth feel are due to milk sugar changes at high temperatures. Juices, wine and tomato sauce also are packaged in aseptic boxes. I wrote about fresh "bagged meats" (7-15-87). These meats are trimmed of excess fat and vacuum packaged in a plastic bag under strict sanitation controls. Vacuum packaging extends shelf life of meat. These meats still need to be refrigerated or frozen. After opening, use the meat as usual.

Recently, fully cooked, oven roasted poultry is in our meat counters. All the major poultry producers use a similar method. The cooking removes moisture from the birds which are roasted to a integral temperature of 180 degrees to destroy bacteria. The birds are immediately put in flexible packaging and cooled. The processors tell us that the product is safe to eat without reheating. That is true if there is no abuse to the product as it is shipped, stored and carried to your table. But, I would feel more comfortable recommending reheating of these products before eating.

If you have seen new "Lunch Bucket" products or other shelf stable entrees, you have seen another innovation in packaging. The package itself is a five-layer plastic container. This allows you to use the microwave to cook it. It also can stand the heat processing needed to allow no refrigeration for two years. The container has a styrofoam outer layer which insulates it for safe handling right out of the microwave. The top is an easy open metal lid (pop top) with a plastic lid on top of it. The plastic lid has holes to vent steam while cooking in the microwave. Edible films are interesting. They are protective coatings added to some fruits and vegetables (like cucumbers) to slow their water loss. It's doubtful that edible films would ever replace non-edible, synthetic packaging. But, they improve overall food quality and economics of packaging.

There are other new packaging materials like the rigid PVC films used in luncheon meat packages and the paper cartons of orange juice is put in. Dual ovenable packaging — the packaging that allows food to be heated in a conventional oven or microwave — is made of crystallized polyethylene terephthalate. All of these packaging materials must meet the Food and Drug Administration's regulations of safety.

I encourage young people to think about careers in food and nutrition. Food packaging is one aspect that is a challenging field. Many colleges with food science departments, like North Carolina State, have food packaging courses. Michigan State University has an entire School of Packaging. These food packagers find ways to keep the food safe from deterioration. They also seek to find ways to have a package hold up to vibration, compression, dropping and other movements food products make on the journey to your table.

Tasty Stews Are Worth Waiting For

By Irene Sax
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Now winter arrives in earnest. Icy winds whip through our coats, blowing us home in the early darkness. Once the front door closes behind us, we're glad to be in the warm kitchen, glad to wait while a deep-flavored stew bubbles on the stove.

Stews are as far as you can get from summer's lean and speedy grills. They take hours, not minutes, to cook. They feature lumpy, non-trendy vegetables: not snow peas but potatoes, parsnips and turnips. The meat isn't fashionably rare but overcooked, falling-apart tender, and sits in gravy that gets some of its thickening and some of its flavor from fat.

But on a winter night, everyone loves a stew. They are among the world's oldest dishes. Man has been making them for centuries: At least 10,000 years, according to food scientist Harold McGee, who believes the first stews were invented along with the first clay pots.

Because they've been made for so long by so many cooks, they're nearly impossible to spoil. Anyone can ruin a fish fillet; but it's nearly impossible to go wrong with a pot full of meat and vegetables, covered with water and simmered together for two hours.

And although they do need a lot of time — you'd have trouble making stew after work for that night's dinner — they're also the quintessential do-ahead food, suffering no loss of quality from being frozen, and improving with every reheating. The microwave might have been invented just for defrosting and reheating stew. Make one on the weekend, freeze it in portion sizes, and you'll have several weekday meals in the freezer.

Stews are so full of flavor that it

HAM AND CORN CHOWDER

1/2 cup coarsely chopped onion
1/2 cup butter
1 (17 oz.) can cream-style corn
1/2 cup half-and-half
1 cup chopped cooked ham
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
Saute onion in butter in a Dutch oven until tender. Add remaining ingredients; cook over low heat until heated (do not boil). Yield: 4 cups.

CREOLE BEAN SOUP

2 cups navy beans
1 hambone
2 cups shredded carrots
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1 tsp. salt
2 cups canned tomatoes
Soak beans overnight in 6 cups water in large saucepan. Add remaining ingredients except tomatoes. Simmer for 2-1/2 hours or until beans are very tender. Remove hambone. Cut ham from bone and add to soup. Mash beans and stir in tomatoes. Simmer until hot.

SOUP CONTINENTAL

1/4 cup butter
1 cup chopped cooked turkey
2 tbsp. finely chopped onion
2 cups diced raw potatoes
1 cup diced celery
2 cups turkey broth
2-1/2 cups cream-style corn
1 (14 1/2-oz.) can evaporated milk
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. paprika
1/4 tsp. ground pepper
1/8 tsp. pepper
2 tsp. chopped parsley
Melt butter over low heat. Add turkey and onion. Cook until onion is transparent. Add potatoes, celery, and turkey broth. Add corn, milk, and seasonings. Heat thoroughly, stirring occasionally. Season to taste with additional salt and pepper. Serve hot. Yield: 2 quarts

SAVORY CHILI

4 stalks celery with leaves, chopped
3 green onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 large onion, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
1 tsp. vegetable oil
2 pounds ground beef
1 (15-oz.) can tomato sauce
1 (6-oz.) can tomato paste
2 cups water
1 (1-1/2 oz.) can chili powder

1 tsp. salt
Dash of pepper
1 (16-oz.) can kidney beans, undrained
Condiments (optional)

Saute first 5 ingredients in oil in a large Dutch oven until tender. Add ground beef, and brown, stirring to crumble meat. Drain well. Add tomato sauce and next 5 ingredients to beef mixture; stir well. Bring to a boil; reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 30 minutes or to desired consistency. Add beans the last 15 minutes.

Serve with the following condiments, if desired: shredded lettuce, shredded Cheddar cheese, diced onion, and tortilla chips. Yield: 10 cups.

Beef And Potato Bake

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

In this family-style main dish, sliced vegetables and meat loaf bake in the same dish at the same time.

BEEF AND POTATO BAKE

2 medium potatoes, peeled, halved, and thinly sliced (2 cups)
1 cup thinly sliced carrots
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons chopped green chili peppers
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
One 10 3/4-ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1/4 cup quick-cooking rolled oats
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 pound lean ground beef
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Snipped parsley

Combine potatoes, carrots, onion, chili peppers, 3/4 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Add about one-third of soup; mix well. Spoon into 10-by-6-by-2-inch baking dish. Combine another one-third of the soup with oats and remaining salt and pepper. Add meat; mix well. Form into loaf and place on top of vegetables. Bake, covered, in 350-degree oven for 1 1/4 hours. Meanwhile, combine remaining soup and mustard. Spread over meat; return to oven and bake, uncovered, 15 minutes more. Sprinkle with parsley. Makes 4 servings.

4-inch thick slices. In a shallow pan combine wine, lime juice and peel, garlic, salt and red pepper. Stir in chicken, onion, and green and yellow peppers; mix gently; let stand for 20 minutes. Preheat broiler to hot. Using a slotted spoon remove chicken and vegetables from marinade; place on a broiler pan in a single layer. Broil 3 to 4 inches from heat until chicken is opaque on 1 side, about 2 minutes. Using a spatula, turn chicken and vegetables; place reserved tomatoes on broiler pan. Broil until chicken is cooked through, about 2 minutes longer. Serve in tortillas with shredded Cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese, sour cream and avocado slices, if desired

CHICKEN AND TOMATO BURRITO

12 ounces fresh tomatoes (about 2 medium)
1 pound boned, skinned and halved chicken breasts (cutlets)
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 cup diced sweet green pepper
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 teaspoon crushed garlic
1 tablespoon chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
8 (7-inch) warm flour tortillas

Use tomatoes held at room temperature until fully ripe. Core and coarsely chop tomatoes (makes about 1-1/4 cups); set aside. Cut chicken into 1-inch cubes. In a large skillet heat oil until hot; add chicken; stir-fry until opaque, about 2 minutes. Remove with a slotted spoon; cover to keep warm. To skillet add green pepper, onion and garlic; stir-fry until almost tender, about 2 minutes. Add reserved tomatoes, chili powder, salt and cumin; stir-fry until hot, about 1 minute. Divide among tortillas; fold over sides to form packets; serve with sour cream, if desired. Yields: 4 portions.

Stews

seems they must be fattening, but that's not necessarily true. A serving of stew has less fatty meat, more carbohydrate-rich vegetables than the same size serving of roast meat. Add brown rice or noodles and a salad and you can feed eight or more hungry people with two pounds of meat. And because the cuts of meat used for stewing are reasonably inexpensive, so are the finished dishes.

They're also fashionable, showing up on restaurant menus — especially French restaurant menus — as part of the return to old-fashioned homey foods. The French make pale blanquettes, zesty ragouts, tender estouffades, matelotes, cassoulets and daubes. There are elegant veal and vegetable stews from Italy, mahogany-colored goulashes from Austria and Hungary, bland lamb stews from Ireland and Scotland. There are "red cooked" stewed meats in China and peppery stewed lamb in India.

"People are surprised to find long-simmered dishes in Indian restaurants," said cookbook writer Madhur Jaffrey, "and assume they come from the mountain regions in the north. But we make them all over India. Indians believe it's spices that make a dish warming or cooling, and make winter stew with cardamom, cinnamon and cloves and summer stew with cumin."

Although it's true that anyone can make a stew, attention to details will help you make a better one.

First buy your meat. Forget about tenderness, and choose a tough fore-quarter cut that won't dissolve in the long cooking needed to lend flavor to the gravy. Former butcher Jack Ubaldi, author of "Jack Ubaldi's Meat Book," suggests using beef from the eye of chuck or cross rib, pork from the Boston butt, veal from the shoulder, and lamb from the bony shoulder or from a boned and cubed leg.

"If you shop in a supermarket," said Ubaldi, "you get the little pieces of meat they cut up, and you don't know what they're giving you. I would suggest to buy a solid piece of meat, of chuck for example, and cut it into cubes yourself."

Pay attention to the cooking temperature. If you let the water boil, as you would for soup, the meat will shrink and toughen. But if you set the burner so the liquid simmers at 185 to 190 degrees, the meat will remain plump and juicy.

If you want a brown gravy, you'll have to pay attention at the beginning of the cooking. Liquid can't get hotter than 212 degrees, or boiling, which is not hot enough to brown the meat. To do that, put it under the broiler, then scrape the meat and juices into the pan, as James Beard did. But for the best color, saute the meat and onions in fat until they turn a rich mahogany. Help it along by drying the meat before you cook it, making sure it's not crowded in the pan and, if the taste is acceptable, by adding a tablespoon of sugar to the onions as you saute them.

Here are four recipes for warming stews from around the world. The Provencale beef stew is adapted from "French Regional Cooking" by Anne Willan; the goulash from "Theory and Practice of Good Cooking" by James Beard; the veal from "More Classic Italian Cooking" by Marcella Hazan, and the lamb and potato stew from Madhur Jaffrey's "Taste of India."

PROVENCALE BEEF STEW

- 2 pounds beef stew meat
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1 1/2 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup wine
- 1 cup beef broth or water
- salt and pepper
- for the sauce:
- 1 onion, chopped
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 4 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 16-ounce can tomatoes
- pinch of thyme
- bay leaf
- 3 red peppers, in strips
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup red wine
- 1 package frozen artichoke hearts
- 1/2 cup black olives

Stews

1. Brown the meat in oil, sprinkle with flour and cook for a few minutes. Add the wine and beef broth, cover and simmer.
2. Meanwhile, in a heavy saucepan, saute the onion and garlic in 2 tablespoons olive oil. Add the tomatoes, season with thyme and bay leaf and simmer.
3. In a frypan, heat the remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil. Saute the red pepper strips, sprinkle with flour and cook 2 minutes. Add the red wine slowly and stir until it thickens. Now add this to the tomato mixture. Cover loosely and cook for half an hour, then scrape into the pot with the meat. Cook together until the meat is tender, about 3 hours in all, adding the artichokes and olives for the last five minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

VEAL AND WILD MUSHROOM STEW

- 1 ounce dried wild mushrooms
- 1 1/2 cups warm water
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 pounds veal stew meat
- 1/2 cup white wine
- 2 anchovy fillets, mashed
- pinch of marjoram
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 tablespoon juniper berries, crushed

1. Cover the mushrooms with water and soak 30 minutes. Strain and reserve the liquid. Rinse the mushrooms, pat dry, slice and set aside.
2. Heat the butter and oil and brown the veal strips and mushrooms. Add the wine, mushroom liquid, anchovy, marjoram, bay leaf, juniper, salt and pepper. Simmer, covered loosely, for 1 1/2 hours. Remove bay leaf before serving. Makes 6 servings.

PORK GOULASH

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 6 onions, sliced
- 1/4 cup paprika
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 2 pounds pork stew meat
- 2 tablespoons tomato paste
- 1/4 cup water
- salt and pepper
- pinch of thyme
- 1 tablespoon caraway seeds
- zest of 1 lemon
- 2 cloves garlic

1. Melt the butter and oil and saute the onions for 5 to 10 minutes, until they turn a rich brown. Mix the paprika and vinegar, add to the pot and cook a few minutes. Stir in the pork cubes and stir over high heat until they lose their pink color. Add the tomato paste mixed with water and season with salt, pepper and thyme, cover and simmer for about 2 hours.
2. Just before serving, pound the caraway, lemon zest and garlic with a mortar and pestle or drop through the feed tube of a food processor while the metal blade spins. Add to the stew, cook 15 minutes and serve. Makes 6 servings.

INDIAN LAMB STEW

- 3 pounds lamb with bones
- 1 teaspoon ground turmeric
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 teaspoon ground coriander
- 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ground ginger
- 1 teaspoon minced garlic
- 4 onions, sliced
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 cup water
- 2 large potatoes, diced
- 1 10-ounce package frozen peas

1. Put the meat in a bowl with the spices, turn to coat well and let sit at least 2 hours.
2. Saute the onions and sugar in oil until they turn a rich brown. Add the meat and salt and cook until the meat loses its pink color. Add water, cover and simmer 1 hour. Add potatoes and peas and simmer 45 minutes more. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

SOURDOUGH BLUEBERRY PANCAKES

- 1 cup Sourdough Starter
- 2 cups warm water (90 degrees)
- 2 1/2 cups flour
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1/4 cup evaporated milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- Butter
- 1 to 1 1/4 cups blueberries
- Syrup

Combine Sourdough Starter, warm water and flour in large stainless steel bowl. Mixture will be thick and lumpy. Cover and set in warm place overnight.

Remove 1 cup batter and retain in ice chest for future use. Beat egg, oil and evaporated milk with remaining batter. Combine salt, baking soda and sugar. Sprinkle evenly over top of batter, then gently fold in.

Allow batter to rest 5 to 10 minutes. Using 2 tablespoons batter for each pancake, pour onto hot, lightly buttered griddle. Sprinkle 4 to 5 blueberries onto each pancake. Cook until outer edge dries slightly and underside is browned.

Turn and brown other side. Serve with butter and syrup. Makes about 36 small pancakes, 4 to 6 servings.

W/D PURE GROUND BEEF
THAN REQUIRED BY GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS

When you want great ground beef, well, it "takes bun to know one" and the one buns choose is WINN-DIXIE's 100 Percent Pure Ground Beef. That's because W-D Pure Ground Beef is 15 percent leaner than the government requires. And it comes in a convenient handpack, which makes it ready to freeze and easy to slice into great-tasting burgers. So pick up WINN-DIXIE's 100 Percent Pure Ground Beef. You'll love it as much as your buns do.
