Holbrook Named Winner Of Club's Service Award

Pediatric specialist and medical school professor Tate Holbrook III received the Greenville Jaycees' Distinguished Service Award for 1987 — the highest Jaycee honor — at the organization's annual awards banquet Wednesday.

The DSA is presented to a person of Jaycee age who exhibits the most meritorious service to their community, family, church, and nation.

Approximately 70 Jaycee, community, and government officials were present at the Distinguished Service Award and Bosses Night banquet as Holbrook received the award.

"To get this honor gives me the drive to press on," Holbrook said. "People like this make your volunteerism worth it because they support you in what you do and they're doing it too."

"I'm proud to work for a university that allows me time and supports my efforts," he added.

Holbrook, 38, is director of pediatric hematology/oncology and associate professor of pediatrics at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

A graduate of Davidson College and the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, Holbrook came to Greenville in 1979, accepting a position as assistant professor of pediatrics at the ECU Medical School.

He was the first pediatrician associated with the medical school who was specially trained to treat children with blood and cancer problems.

In 1984, Tate was promoted to associate professor of pediatrics and tenured with the school of medicine.

In addition to his responsibilities of direct, patient care, Holbrook's teaching responsibilities include lectures and presentations to other physicians, medical students, parents, and other medical personnel.

Recognizing the special needs that children with cancer and their families have, Holbrook developed a special summer camp, Camp Rainbow, designed to enable children with cancer and their siblings to participate in a normal camp experience.

From a one-day outing at a city park in 1982, Camp Rainbow has developed into a week-long summer event at Camp Don Lee in Arapahoe, N.C., conducted free of charge to participating children and their families.

Holbrook has also played a major role in the development of the Ronald McDonald House of Eastern North Carolina.

In conjunction with the McDonald's Corporation, the house opened in June of 1987, establishing a "home away from home" for children with chronic diseases.

Holbrook served on the N.C. Governor's Council on Sickle Cell Disease as a member for two years and also as chairman in 1984-1985. As

Controller Talks Budget

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Local education agencies are not financially independent, and they do not control the majority of their finances, the financial controller of the Pitt County schools told the Pitt County Board of Education Wednesday.

Dan Thomas discussed the budget-making process for the school system with board members during a workshop session at Farmville Middle School. Prior to the meeting, board members toured the facility.

State funds provided 67.2 percent of the system's budget during the 1985-86 fiscal year, Thomas said, while federal funds provided 10.3 percent and local funds, 22.5 percent.

State funds, historically, have been inflexible and categorical, Thomas said. For example, if $12 million in state funds is appropriated for 600 state-paid teachers' positions and the cost is $11,900,000, the balance of $100,000 went back to the state, he said. But, Pitt County is one of eight state school systems participating in a pilot project that "works toward some flexibility," Thomas said.

Under the State Pilot Finance Project, which Pitt County has been part of for four years, the school system could use the $100,000 balance for more teachers, utility bills or other needs, he said. It has benefitted in-school suspension programs and nighttime maintenance, and "it keeps us from having to have a tax increase" since money is allowed to roll back into the budget.

Fiscal year 1985-86 represents a 10- to 13-year trend where federal funds have declined and local funds have increased, Thomas said. For example, federal funds provided 19.3 percent of the system's budget in fiscal

Thornburg Claims He Kept Promises

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Lacy Thornburg, attorney general of North Carolina, used the Pitt County Superior Court Room Wednesday to make his Greenville area announcement that he is a candidate to succeed himself.

"We have made a lot of progress and I want to keep the momentum going," the Jackson County native said. He said he is interested in furthering long-term policy set during his first four-year tenure.

Thornburg said he has kept all of the campaign promises he made in 1984, and repeatedly acknowledged the North Carolina General Assembly for accepting the proposals he made.

A major victory, he said, was the enactment of a law protecting the rights of crime victims and establishing a victims' compensation fund.

He said his office has "worked successfully for strong consumer protection laws and we have protected North Carolina jobs by supporting and defending laws to stop the hostile takeovers of North Carolina corporation, most notably the Burlington matter."

He said "more, but not enough," State Bureau of Investigation agents have been added. Computerized fingerprinting to assist law enforcers throughout the state has put into use, along with a computerized record-keeping system.

Anti-pornography laws have been successfully defended, he said, and

Closing Of AT&T Plant Would Cost 3,300 Jobs

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. has dealt Winston-Salem its third corporate blow in a year by announcing it will close its manufacturing plant and eliminate 3,300 jobs in the next five years.

The company said Wednesday declining demand for its communications equipment and new manufacturing technology left it with too many plants and employees.

"After numerous proposals were analyzed, the painful conclusion that emerged was to phase out North Carolina Works and incorporate the product line into other AT&T locations," a somber Ken Raschke, manufacturing vice president at the plant, told reporters at an afternoon news conference.

Some workers will lose their jobs as early as June, he said. Severance pay, job training, job placement and relocation assistance will be provided to eligible employees, he said.

"I've never been so surprised in my life," said Eddie Hubbard, president of Local 3060 of the Communications Workers of America, which represents about 2,000 of N.C. Works' 2,480 hourly employees.

"We had many just literally in total shock," Hubbard said. "We had some that passed out and were carried to the medical department on a stretcher."

AT&T is the fourth largest employer in Winston-Salem and the seventh largest in the state, with 11,400 employees. The decision does not affect the 700 employees at AT&T's Winston-Salem documentation center or other AT&T operations in North Carolina.

The announcement rattled Winston-Salem officials and civic leaders who have been adding muscle to their economic development efforts in the wake of last year's one-two punch. RJR Nabisco Inc. announced last January that it was moving its corporate headquarters from Winston-Salem to Atlanta, and Winston-Salem-based Piedmont Aviation became a takeover target, only to be acquired months later by USAir Group.

"We've had too much bad news over here," said Thomas Hearn, president of Wake Forest University and president of Winston-Salem

Adoption Of Missile Ban Treaty Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan met today with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and urged the swift ratification of the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

Genscher, following the mid-morning meeting, said through a translator, "We consider this agreement to be an instrument ... to increase the security of Europe; we see it to be of advantage for the security of the West and the European partners of the Alliance."

More missiles have been deployed in West Germany than in the other alliance nations that hosted them — Italy, Belgium and Great Britain.

"We sincerely and fervently hope that the United States Congress will pass the ratification legislation for this agreement as soon as possible," the foreign minister added.

Genscher, who described his talks with Reagan as "very friendly," said the INF accord was "very warmly and explicitly welcomed in Europe."

Earlier, Genscher met with congressional leaders and urged them to move quickly on approving the agreement. He also emphasized that the United States must follow through on negotiations to halve the superpowers' long-range nuclear arsenals.

"We staunchly and strongly support this treaty," Genscher said following a breakfast meeting with key Senate supporters of the INF pact.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which begins ratification hearings on Monday, said he had told Genscher that "prospects for ratification are very good." He predicted there would be lengthy debate in the chamber but that the treaty will eventually be approved.

Genscher, who met earlier this week in Bonn with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, said "it would not be enough to just stand here" now that agreement has been reached on eliminating one class of nuclear arms.

"We're absolutely convinced the disarmament process must go on," he said.

Genscher, who arrived here Wednesday night for 24 hours, also meets with Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci.

Candidacies Pondered

Democrat Charles McLawhorn of Winterville and Republican W.E. "Bill" Dansey of Greenville said today they may enter the 9th state Senatorial District race next week.

Greenville lawyer Tom Taft, a Democrat, now holds the seat and has filed for re-election.

McLawhorn, a member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners since December 1982, said earlier this week he would announce his candidacy in a series of courthouse stops in Martin, Pitt and Beaufort counties on Monday. His stop in Martin County is scheduled for 10 a.m., while his Pitt County courthouse stop is scheduled for 12:15 p.m. and his Beaufort County appearance is set for 2 p.m.

A Pitt County native, McLawhorn is a graduate of Ayden High School and attended Oak Ridge Military Institute and N.C. State University.

Dansey, a developer, said today he is considering filing as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the seat.

"We're considering it. But we haven't made a final decision on it," Dansey, a member of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees and former Greenville City Council member, said.

Emergency Communication System Merits Weighed

The advantages and drawbacks of a 911 emergency communication system was the focus of discussion at a telecommunications technology conference held this week in Greenville.

Administrators from county and city governments, education, law enforcement and public safety, and hospital and health care services attended the conference. Pitt County is considering installing a 911 system.

Conference discussion was conducted by Behr Associates, Inc., telecommunications consultants. Hugh Fawcett, the firm's director of telecommunications, explained that the implementation of a 911 service does not take place immediately.

"Successful 911 systems are the result of cooperation between government agencies and telephone companies," Fawcett said. "The key ingredient in implementing 911 is planning. It is not unusual for 18 to 24 months to elapse during the planning and implementation stages of 911 service."

Factors in planning mentioned by Fawcett include creating a data base for the system, developing funding, combining dispatch services for multiple emergency services, public education about the use of the system, and standardizing building and location addressing schemes.

On costs and obsolescence of the 911 systems, Lawrence Behr said, "Once insignificant, telecommunications costs are now a major budget item, and will continue to increase. . . As a public . . . demands more and better services . . . these costs will mount."

"Obsolescence rates are staggering," Behr said. "Today, the life of many telecommunications products is under 18 months — and getting shorter."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Waste Disposal Needs Priority

Pitt County has taken its first step toward a sound, long-term approach to disposing of solid waste.

The Pitt County Commissioners, by establishing an experimental recycling project at the Bell's Fork container site, have demonstrated their willingness to deal with the growing issue of waste disposal. The board's decision to seek a new landfill site is also a forward-thinking move that can help the county avert a future garbage crisis.

The board should continue to prioritize waste disposal and advocate feasible, progressive solutions. It should also prepare to meet the cost of these solutions.

Solid waste disposal is a public responsibility increasing in volume and significance. The problems created by society's trash are becoming more visible, and solutions to these pressures are becoming increasingly complex. Concurrently, the impact of solid waste disposal methods on the environment and revenues will continue to escalate.

To stay ahead of the issue ecologically and financially requires an accurate understanding of the scope of the problem. In Pitt County, a look at the rate of increase for solid waste in the past decade and the consequent rise in cost can effectively provide this perspective.

In 1979, 601,000 cubic yards of waste were deposited in the Pitt County landfill at a cost of $550,000. By the end of the 1988 fiscal year, officials estimate just over one million cubic yards of waste will be buried in the landfill this year — between 175 and 200 tons each day. The cost has risen concurrently. Garbage output has doubled in the past nine years, and as the community expands, this trend will continue.

This dramatic burgeoning of waste cannot be overlooked and cannot be feasibly handled by traditional collection and disposal methods. Not only will Pitt County's current Allen Road landfill reach capacity in five years, the concept of disposing all waste in landfills will be obsolete also. In addition, state regulations effective in February will require all landfills to be lined by 1993. This new law will make landfilling a prohibitively expensive endeavor for many counties and municipalities if funding steps and disposal alternatives aren't investigated now. Recycling and compaction will become important — but costly — tools.

Pitt County is correct to experiment with recycling and to seek a new landfill site before an environmental crisis arises. The county should be equally prepared to bear the financial responsibility for sound disposal technology.

Solid waste disposal cannot be viewed as an option. It is an inescapable by-product of a technological society. In the interest of public health and resources, this by-product must be handled safely and effectively.

Appearances Count

Municipalities see the number of commissions proliferate as growth comes. Locally, a relatively new one which makes sense is the Greenville Appearance Commission.

The nine-member group's commitment is to making Greenville the cleanest city in eastern North Carolina — no easy task in a city where traffic rolls until the wee hours of the morning.

Nevertheless the effort is under way.

The Appearance Commission meets monthly on the first Wednesday. The discussion revolves around ways to make the city more attractive. The commission can initiate projects through the public works department. Its chairman, Tom Morgan, said projects carried out include the planting of flower beds, shrubs and crepe myrtles on a city wide basis.

The commission had its beginning eight years ago as an advocate of neighborhood clean-up and litter control. It has organized roadside and riverbank cleanups. More recently it has used private donations to purchase greenery which the public works department maintains in strategic locations. This year the group is looking at landscaping major traffic arteries leading into the city and within the city.

The commission gives citizens an opportunity to play an active role in affecting the city's image. Hands-on involvement is important in all aspects of public endeavor.

Mayo Allen, director of public works, said the commission has done much for beautification of the city — and he noted that the city's appearance will be important in "All-American City" competition.

All responsible citizens are concerned about our city putting forth the best appearance possible. The Greenville Appearance Commission is doing something about it. That is a deed we can all appreciate.

Attacks Prove Dole Is Chief Challenger

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is a measure of his standing as challenger-in-chief that when the Republican presidential candidates had enough of beating up on the front-runner, George Bush, they turned on Bob Dole.

The most conservative GOP candidates are readying themselves for Round Two of the Republican campaign, even as Round One's still unfolding.

Just in case Dole goes into New Hampshire with a victory in Iowa under his belt, Jack Kemp and Pete du Pont are brandishing their anti-Dole credentials.

At one point during banter with reporters after Saturday's Dartmouth debate, Kemp said: "It's now clear who wants to raise the cost of living in New Hampshire and who wants to cut it."

"Who?" he was asked. "There he is now," Kemp laughed as Dole approached. "Speak of the devil."

When Kemp said he thought Bush was "too sensitive," during the debate, that he "ought to ease up a little bit and relax," one of Bush's chief tormenters, former television evangelist Pat Robertson, rose to the vice president's defense.

'Of course the "theme" of the debate is that Dole — whose demeanor in these affairs has been reminiscent of comedian Lily Tomlin as a shy child in an oversize chair — took off maybe one glove and led the attack on Bush.'

"How could he have fun with five guys after him?" he asked. Dole interjected, "Kemp was after me today," and Kemp responded, "You just keep wanting to raise taxes."

In the spirit of the moment, someone asked du Pont if he had anything good to say about Dole. Dole jumped in to say, "He likes my wife," and du Pont grudgingly allowed, "He's got a wonderful wife."

Of course the "theme" of the debate is that Dole — whose demeanor in these affairs has been reminiscent of comedian Lily Tomlin as a shy child in an oversize chair — took off maybe one glove and led the attack on Bush.

Thus, setting up Round Two of the Republican campaign.

Round One is front-runner Bush vs. Dole, with Iowa as the battleground.

Round Two is the winner of Round One versus the survivor among the more conservative candidates: Kemp, du Pont and Robertson.

Try to appreciate how Ronald Reagan must feel. He's had a tough day at the hospital: a test here, a probe there, nurses and doctors hovering. Then a chopper helicopter ride up to Camp David. Finally he gets dinner Friday night and maybe tunes in the Democratic debate.

And what does he hear? He hears a stern lecture from Gary Hart on the exactitudes of "true immorality."

If Reagan actually watched the debate, he could easily have gone ballistic.

It unfolded like this ... Asked about the Donna Rice episode, about the inevitable questions of character and judgment and trust, Hart said:

"There is a difference between private morality and public morality; I've held myself to a very high standard in terms of both."

Not content to clear his own name, he went on the offensive.

"I'd like to say that there is another level of morality at stake here. That's the morality of an administration that is really bankrupt in terms of its commitment to public ethics. ... I can tell you as a public official, I would never lie to the Congress or the American people, would never shred documents, I would never sell arms to terrorists and I would never condone anyone in my administration who would breach the highest standards of the sacred trust of the public duty."

With the Ayatollah still taunting America, with former White House officials and Attorney General Edwin Meese embroiled in criminal investigations and trials, with John Poindexter and Ollie North facing possible indictment in connection with Iran-Contra, the Democrats will surely force the Republicans to address these ethical matters during the upcoming campaign.

Compassion Enters GOP Dialogue

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Someone standing at the back of the crowd in the local senior citizens center might have thought Ted Kennedy was back running for president.

"I don't want to be president of a nation where we have elderly people eating dog food because they can't afford meals," said the candidate.

"I don't want to be in charge of a nation where a senior citizen has got to go into bankruptcy in order to get adequate health care, long-term health care," he said. "I just won't tolerate that."

There he goes again, that Massachusetts liberal proposing a budget-busting health care program. What's the price tag? Where's the money going to come from? Will Kennedy never learn?

But, wait a minute. That accent is more Virginia than Massachusetts.

No, Kennedy hasn't jumped into the race. That liberal-sounding rhetoric is coming from Pat Robertson, the former television evangelist who hopes his church-based conservative following will propel him to an upset in the Republican precinct caucuses next month.

Suddenly, the rhetoric of compassion is being heard on the GOP campaign trail.

A couple of hours after Robertson spoke at the senior citizen center, Vice President George Bush was cautioning an audience of young business people that they must look beyond their own pocketbooks.

"As long as someone out there is hurting, as long as there is someone out there — some kid, no one knows his name, as long as there's some homeless somebody that can't take care of himself medically, we've got to care," said Bush.

At first glance, Robertson and Bush don't have much more in common than do Robertson and Kennedy. The vice president is a quintessential establishment figure with a two-foot-long government resume, while the former television evangelist is the 1988 campaign outsider.

While they share a fierce ambition to succeed Ronald Reagan as president, they are traveling far different paths in pursuit of that goal.

Still, Bush and Robertson have some remarkable similarities in their backgrounds. Both were sons of U.S. senators and had privileged upbringings. Bush got his undergraduate degree at Yale, while Robertson graduated from Yale Law School.

And in Iowa, both are running far behind in the polls to Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, who tells Iowans about his humble background including his grandparents' receipt of public assistance.

On Monday, Bush and Robertson tried to show a little compassion of their own.

It was Robertson who offered the most detailed program. As he usually does, he talked about the need for restoration of morality, local control of education, and urged cutting government waste and fraud. But then he moved on to make a plea for health care for the elderly. And he didn't stop with that:

"I don't want to be president of a nation in which senior citizens freeze to death in cold weather because they can't afford enough heat to heat their homes or their apartments.

"I don't want to be president of a nation where people are sleeping on city grates or on cardboard boxes in city streets because there isn't enough shelter for them.

"I want to be in charge of a nation that is compassionate and caring."

When he finished someone in the audience asked how he intended to pay for his plan.

His answer was that he would propose a "user fee" on cigarettes to cover the public cost of a program he said would combine private insurance with government aid.

It sounded like a program that would require a powerful lot of smoking to cover its cost. And it seemed somewhat ironic, coming from a candidate who has said something must be done to keep Social Security from running out of money when the baby boom generation hits retirement age.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Back when the Central American Peace Plan was proposed, the big test of Nicaraguan good faith was permitting the opposition paper "La Presna" to reopen. Done. The Catholic radio should be allowed to broadcast. Done.

Did the U.S. Administration applaud? "Cosmetic," they said.

They demanded Cardinal Obando y Bravo as intermediary between the Nicaraguans and the Contras. The Nicaraguans objected that he was pro-Contra. The reaction of our government when they reluctantly accepted the cardinal? We demanded face-to-face negotiations. Under pressure to keep the peace plan alive, they agreed. Elliott Abrams told "Good Morning America" that there is a question of their good faith and unless we can be absolutely sure, we must go on funding the Contras.

Good faith is a two-way street. What reason do the Nicaraguans have to trust the good faith of the U.S.? The least we can do is to stop funding the contras.

Strength For Today

A doctor told recently of seeing in the bedroom of an invalid a present which struck him as highly original. It was a prism which, when laid in the sunlight on a windowsill, cast a rainbow above the invalid's bed. all day long while the sun was shining, the invalid could see the joyous colors of the rainbow on the ceiling.

For centuries the rainbow has been a symbol of hope.

Are we giving our friends when we met them the inestimable gift of new hope and courage? Flowers have their place in life, but rainbows are better than bouquets. If you want to be really kind and helpful to a friend, put something into his life which will make a rainbow over his bed, over his home, over his office — and above all, over his discouraged spirit in an hour of trial.

With Oil Income Slashed, Saudis Must Also Borrow

Analysis

What happens when a financial superpower starts to borrow? What happens when it finds itself beset by massive budget deficits and shattering changes in its balance of trade? How does it adapt — and how do its friends and allies react? These questions are naturally being asked about the U.S. government — but they also need to be asked about Saudi Arabia.

The oil-rich kingdom is no longer a financial superpower. In just six years, its income has shrunk to barely a sixth of its former level — not even taking inflation into account. To help bridge the anticipated deficit in its 1988 budget, the kingdom has taken the almost unprecedented decision to borrow $8 billion. And yet it has still not compromised on its major objectives. Saudi Arabia is still funding Iraq's war effort, while in 1987 it handed out a large subvention to Damascus, providing at least one major reason for Syria's current efforts to end the Persian Gulf war. The kingdom is a wounded giant, not a dead one.

It was severely wounded in its sustained campaigns to force the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to act coherently and to inject some degree of stability into the volatile oil market over the last two years. While the rest of OPEC generally benefitted substantially from increased revenues in 1987, the kingdom's oil income remained virtually static, and may have sustained a small decline. In both 1986 and 1987, the country's oil income totaled around $18 billion to $19 billion dollars, just one-sixth of the $113.2 billion earned during the record year of 1981.

The immediate cause of the failure to recover ground lost in the 1986 oil price crash was that several OPEC members, Iraq being the most prominent, either ignored the quota system governing oil production among the organization's 13 members or else cheated and overproduced when they thought Riyadh was not watching. But a deeper cause was the kingdom's inability to face financial realities and move decisively in the oil markets while it still had the time, and financial resources, to maneuver.

The Saudis forced the rest of OPEC to come to heel in August 1986, when Saudi oil production spurted above the 6 million barrels-per-day level, almost double the kingdom's average 1985 level. But the lesson administered on that occasion was not sustained. The Saudis cut back production, giving opportunity for other OPEC nations to cheat.

In 1986 the Saudis still had a substantial cushion of financial reserves accumulated in the late 1970s and early 1980s. But continuous payments to Iraq — the total now stands in excess of $30 billion — and sporadic payments to Egypt, Jordan and Syria have drained these reserves. One current estimate of the Kingdom's liquid financial reserves puts the total at no more than $31 billion, compared with estimates of around $60 billion to $70 billion two years ago and of about $155 billion in 1981, when Iraq began demanding financial assistance.

Saudi diplomacy and Saudi finances go hand in hand. It is an old — and in the region honorable — custom to pay gold for services requested or rendered. Iraq is seen as the bastion of the Arabs against Iran, so financing Iraq at a time when its oil outlets had been cut by Iran was a logical development. A subsidiary, though unspoken, assumption would also be that an Iraq, which was the recipient of substantial largess from Saudi Arabia and the other conservative Arab states of the gulf, would not seek to export its own brand of radicalism to those states.

To begin with, Riyadh had ample funds to pursue this kind of diplomacy. During the good years, until about 1982, the Saudis were able to amass huge trade surpluses. But in 1983 the Kingdom sustained an estimated $16.3 billion deficit in its balance of payments. By the end of 1986 the cumulative Saudi payments deficit for the four-year period totaled $73.3 billion.

There are some signs that Saudi Arabia is moving to put its financial affairs in order. Budgeted expenditure has been cut progressively from $91.4 billion in 1982-83 to $37.6 billion for 1988. But defense spending remains high — taking up 33.8 percent of the budget — and there are no indications as to how King Fahd plans to control the off-budget items, which account for considerable proportions of real Saudi expenditure; these include foreign aid, the royal family's expenses and various defense purchases, and could easily total $10 billion in 1988. This alone would double the officially stated 1988 budget deficit of $9.57 billion.

It might simply be regarded as a curiously ironic development that the country once regarded as the living symbol of wealth should now be reduced to borrowing $8 billion from its own people and attempting to raise further income from the introduction of income and corporate taxes on expatriate workers. But the issues carry serious implications for the United States in particular and the Western World in general.

The Saudis now run up a regular trade surplus with the United States, in contrast to the boom years, and such eminent Saudis as Prince Mohammad al Faisal, the son of the late King Faisal and the chairman of a leading Islamic financial institution, have warned bluntly that Saudi Arabia for the time being should be regarded as a dead market for most U.S. suppliers. (Indeed, the biggest Saudi export to the United States after oil is returned U.S. goods).

In the political sphere, the evaporation of the kingdom's oil revenues means a serious weakening of its ability to use financial inducements to secure more acceptable policies from Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization. For the United States, Saudi Arabia's loss of influence and of financial clout, could be costly. At the same time, the rest of the world will also pay a price. The Saudis have backed the establishment of international aid funds, and are expected to provide $500 million for the new $8-billion kitty being established by the International Monetary Fund to aid the world's poorest countries. The Saudis have also given generously to the Afghan mujahedeen.

In addition they have been the biggest — indeed some would say the only — cash purchaser of U.S. military equipment and services, paying more than $20 billion between 1981 and 1985. Saudi oil policies may be controversial to a superpower which itself is reluctantly coming to terms with its newfound status as a debtor nation, but the kingdom has been a source of stability in a troubled region, and its financial straits should be a source of concern to its friends and trading partners.

Center Director Says TV News Is More Subjective

In general, television news is more subjective than newspapers and whenever there is a bias, it is generally a liberal bias, Robert Lichter told a gathering of East Carolina University students Wednesday.

Lichter, co-director for the Center for Media and Public Affairs in Washington, had been scheduled to debate Duke University political science professor David Paletz on the question of bias among the American media and the impact of the media on politics.

The session was part of the first colloquium on "The Media and Politics," sponsored jointly by ECU's political science, English and theatre arts departments.

But Paletz was fog-bound at Raleigh-Durham Airport so Lichter, who spoke Tuesday night on "The Media Elite and Bias in National News Coverage," continued alone.

Lichter's Center for Media and Public Affairs is a nonpartisan, non-profit research and educational organization which scientifically analyzes how news and entertainment media treat social and political issues. It's primary research tool is content analysis.

In the early days, Lichter said, the nation's newspapers were highly subjective and outspoken supporters of one political party or another. But with the advent of the teletype and the first wire services, newspaper reports became "objective."

Television on the other hand, Lichter said, began with more objective coverage, and with the advent of new technologies and the civil rights movement in the 1960's, has become more subjective.

Now, "television makes up part of the event," Lichter suggested.

"It's not so much a problem of media bias," Lichter said, but rather a preceived bias. Because of the nature of the stories, "most reporters are in opposition to established authority." News reporters "tend to take for granted that people in authority are bad guys."

And when journalists "lose objectivity ... just the facts ..." they become part of the story. "No matter what you do, you have an impact. You influence the story."

"The media tend to be the loyal opposition. Journalism is not conservative," Lichter said. Instead, reporters tend to be liberal reformmists. "Journalists tend to be liberal."

In politics today, Lichter said "television is the campaign," with candidates purchasing paid advertisements and doing what they can to be included in the news.

"What candidates want is to get on the evening news," Lichter said, because news programs are more credible than commercials. "Television is the environment in which campaigns exist."

But according to research, Lichter said "commentators and experts," commenting on issues "have more credibility than politicians."

Judge Declares Surrogate Contracts Invalid

By KATHERINE RIZZO
Associated Press Writer
ITHACA, Mich. (AP) — A state judge ruled today that surrogate parent contracts are invalid and unenforceable in Michigan, clearing the way for a woman to continue her fight to keep the twins she bore for an Arkansas couple.

Gratiot County Circuit Judge

Timothy Green said the contracts were contrary to public policy. He said he will decide support and custody issues involving the 4½-month-old twins this spring during a trial on lawsuits over the agreement.

The surrogate mother, Laurie Yates, filed suit last year against Barry and Glinda Huber of Jonesboro, Ark., seeking to have her contract with them struck down and for custody of the twins, whom she had agreed to give up.

The case is similar to New Jersey's "Baby M" case, in which surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead changed her mind about giving up her baby. However, a judge ruled that the contract was valid and awarded custody to the father and his wife. That decision is under appeal. Michigan doesn't have any laws that apply specifically to surrogate parent arrangements.

During a hearing Wednesday, an attorney for Mrs. Yates and her husband, Richard, contended she was offered a "take it or leave it" contract and didn't understand what she was signing when she agreed to become pregnant for the Hubers.

Lawyer Robert MacAlpine tried to convince the court that Mrs. Yates was at a disadvantage in contract negotiations with surrogacy specialist Noel Keane, the middleman in the arrangement. "What we had here was an attorney, a sophisticated bargainer on one side ... and an uncounseled lay person on the other," said MacAlpine.

The lawyer appointed by the court to look after the interest of the twins, and the lawyer representing the babies' father both disputed that contention. They said Mrs. Yates chose the lawyer who reviewed the surrogacy contract and after going over the document bypassed the chance to ask questions about it.

Mrs. Yates had volunteered to become a surrogate after reading one of Keane's newspaper ads. Keane made the arrangements for her to bear a child for the Hubers. Mrs. Yates was to have been paid $10,000, but the money has remained in escrow because of the litigation.

The Ithaca woman gave birth to the twins, a girl and boy, on Sept. 4.

Since November, the families have spent equal time with the babies, two weeks at a time. Mrs. Yates, however, retained legal custody and the Hubers have been barred from taking the children out of Ithaca. They have rented a house in Ithaca, where they spend their two weeks and return to Arkansas between stays.

Budget Process Talked

year 1973-74 compared to the 85-86 figures of 10.3. Local funds accounted for 13.7 percent in 1973-74 compared to 22.5 in 1985-86.

And the local funds, provided by the county, have to go a long way, Thomas said. For example, local funds pay 50 percent of secretarial salaries, in addition to workman's compensations, book audits, liability and building insurance, utilities, telephone, custodial supplies and maintenance.

In 1986-87, the school system received about 60 percent of the county's ad valorem taxes and 34 percent of the county's overall revenue.

In assimilating these three revenue sources for the system's budget, it must be understood "a reverse relationship exists in the way North Carolina school systems are required to put fiscal year budget requests together," Thomas said.

"The local budget by law must be approved by the board of education and forwarded to the county commissioners by May 15. This is the budget that should add to state sources, and yet it comes before the state legislature appropriates its resources," he said. "The federal government operates on a later fiscal year and thus exact resource amounts are not known in May."

An interim budget resolution is submitted by July 1, while the final resolution is submitted on or about Oct. 1 when all resources are consolidated and are presented to the board of education.

Thomas also discussed fund accounting, the chart of accounts, the uniform budget format and a budget simulation with the board.

the elderly have been given protection with "a strong law to deal with patient abuse and neglect."

He said he feels his "war against drug traffickers continues unabated and we have taken strong steps now to attack the demand for illegal drugs." One measure, he said, is the passage of "a strong law which permits the state to seize the illegally gained assets of drug dealers so we can now take the profits out of crime and turn those resources back against the criminals who victimize our citizens."

He said that the DARE — Drug Abuse Resistance Education — program under way in elementary schools across the state in cooperation with local law enforcement agencies originated in his office.

He said that a case to determine if utility companies can have customers pay for abandoned plants is now being tested in the court, with his office supporting consumer interests.

Dansey said his decision on whether or not to enter the race may be announced "by the middle of next week sometime."

Officials Report Bad News On Red Tide Status

By DONNA GORDON
Associated Press Writer
Cold weather has not killed the toxic red tide, which appears to be getting worse and will probably wipe out North Carolina's entire shellfishing season, state officials say.

"Mother Nature brought it and Mother Nature will have to take care of it," Bob Benton, supervisor of the state Shellfish Sanitation Program said Wednesday. "Man has nothing to do with it."
"I feel that the chance is very slim that there would be an oyster season this year," he said, referring to the spring fishing season.

On Monday, state officials added 16 miles of coastal waters to the shellfishing ban that began in October. High counts of the poisonous algae were found in Corncake Inlet at the mouth of the Cape Fear River in Brunswick County. The total area now closed to shellfishing is 200 miles of shoreline.

The red tide is caused by a bloom of algae called Ptychodiscus brevis, which forms toxins that can cause nausea, diarrhea and other symptoms when eaten. The toxin concentrates in shellfish, making them dangerous to eat, but does not affect finfish, shrimp and crab.

Benton said scientists had hoped that the tide would wane by the beginning of 1988, but the algae is still living in 45 degree water and the wind is spreading it.

Fishermen put out of work when the red tide spread to Brunswick County moved to New Hanover County Wednesday to join a state program transferring oysters from permanently closed polluted beds.

The state pays $1 a bushel for the transplanted oysters, which will purge themselves once the red tide disappears and become edible.

Many of the men, driven from their home waters, said they had been in unfamiliar territory for months, slowed in the search for oyster beds by sandbars and winding creeks.
"We didn't know the area. We lost more than we could make," said Barry Davis as he wrestled chunks of oysters from the mud of Pages Creek with gloved hands. "These are beautiful oysters."

Greg Martin said he had been transferring oysters since the Pages Creek program started Saturday.

"I'm a commercial fisherman, but I had to find another trade, thanks to the red tide," he said. "I do a lot of net fishing. Every way there is to make a dollar, I do it."

"This time of year, really you can't do anything but oyster and clam," fellow fisherman Rodney Moore said. "All the fish are gone."

Rich Carpenter, district manager, said the Pages Creek transfer will continue "as long as we've got people that are willing to do it."

The scallop season usually begins in the first week of January and runs through May. The oyster season usually runs through April.

Empty nets are echoed in the empty kitchens in the homes of shellfishermen. Because they aren't spending money the effect of the tide is being felt in grocery stores, restaurants and fishing supply companies.

"It's affected our stores, our seafood plants and our restaurants, and we have some families that are in a bad way," said the Rev. Billy Webb, pastor of the Atlantic Missionary Baptist Church.

Webb's church and 37 others that make up the Atlantic Baptist Association have stepped in to help families that need groceries and money to pay rent and power bills.

The association sent three tractor-trailers to the Food Bank of North Carolina warehouse in Raleigh Tuesday to pick up 40,000 pounds of food to distribute to Carteret County families.

The 12,000 cans of soup, 3,000 pounds of pasta, soap, green beans and other staples were turned over to Martha's Mission Cupboard in Morehead City for distribution.

Keith Hamilton, director of missions for the Atlantic Baptist Association, said the Southern Baptist Convention donated $8,500 to pay for the food and for cash donations to families.

Hamilton said Martha's Mission handed out groceries to 683 families last month and helped 400 families in the first two weeks of January.

Ship Section Found

PAWLEYS ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — A 90-foot length of a ship's hull was uncovered by a construction crew at DeBordieu Colony last month and it's probably the remains of a wooden-hulled cargo ship.

Christopher Amer of the Institute of Archeology and Anthropology at the University of South Carolina said Wednesday the ship was probably a Down Easter of a type constructed in New England ports between 1870 and 1920.

Such ships commonly transported lumber from Southern ports to the Northeast, he said.

Amer said the vessel was probably about 200 feet long and, although it was sturdy, it was too light to be a military vessel.

The wreckage was uncovered last month as workers were driving pilings for a $12 million condominium project.

Bill Britton, the developer of the villas, said the crews found the section buried in the sand and "they didn't know if it was an old bridge, a ship, a fortress or what."

The developers then contacted experts at the University of North Carolina and the Institute of Archeology and Anthropology at the University of South Carolina.

"I wish I could tell you exactly what (the ship) was," said Amer. He said the ship was probably about 200 feet long.

He added that preliminary research failed to turn up a report of such a ship going down near Georgetown, but he added not all local records had been checked.

ASHEVILLE (AP) — An Asheville police officer who was stabbed with a hypodermic needle while making an arrest is nervously waiting for Friday, when she will be told whether the suspect had AIDS.

"At first I thought he had cut me, then I saw the syringe in his hand," officer Ronda Castlewitz said Wednesday. "I was first concerned about catching him because he took off on foot. I was worried that if I didn't catch him I would never know if he had AIDS. Then, after we caught him, I was extremely upset. The waiting is really taking its toll on me."

Ms. Castlewitz, who was hired by the police department in July, was tested for several sexually transmitted diseases — including AIDS — after being stabbed Sunday.

"I've been trying to stay busy," she said. "I've been trying not to think about it too much, but it's hard."

The suspect — who has been charged with driving while intoxicated, two counts of resisting arrest, assault on a law enforcement officer and assault on a law enforcement officer with a deadly weapon — told police that he has been an intravenous drug user for more than a year.

"That puts him in the high-risk group (to contract AIDS) — and me, too," Ms. Castlewitz said. "I'll know Friday. I've been reassured by doctors that I only have a one in 1,000 chance of getting AIDS if (the suspect) has it. They seem more concerned about me getting hepatitis (an inflammation of the liver). I've been tested for that, too. They say I have a one in 10 chance of catching it."

Doctors have already begun treating Ms. Castlewitz for hepatitis and she said she will undergo "follow-up therapy" for the next year — regardless of whether she even has hepatitis.

Ms. Castlewitz, 27, also will undergo blood tests every six weeks for the next year to be checked for AIDS in case it shows up later, she said.

Meanwhile, Ms. Castlewitz's colleagues say they sympathize with her predicament, but realize it could just as easily have been them.

"She's definitely not the first officer to go through this," said Capt. Mike Berry, her supervisor. "And she sure won't be the last. This just reaffirms that the problem is prevalent and will continue to be a problem."

Sgt. David Hazlett feared he had been exposed to AIDS several years ago when he provided medical assistance to a shooting victim who was a known drug addict.

"It was scary," he said. "What you're facing is a terminal illness and that causes high-level stress. We all know it can't be spread by casual contact, but when the unknown is there, you can't help but worry about it. When your kids lean over to kiss you, you worry. You sure don't want to take someone with you, especially someone you love."

Hazlett was lucky. The victim did not test positive for AIDS.

"There's no greater relief I've ever felt than when I learned he was clean," Hazlett said. "And, looking back, there is no way in the world that you can go through something like that and not worry."

Ms. Castlewitz says despite the anxiety, she wouldn't give up her job.

"I love my job," she said. "It hasn't changed that, but it has impressed on me to be more cautious. My biggest concern used to be getting shot or stabbed, but I've realized that there are a lot of other dangers out there that you just don't think of — like being stabbed with a needle. I could never give up my job, though. I love it too much."

"...the most widespread life time disability in the nation."

Join us at the Plaza Mall Sunday afternoon January 24, for Radiothon events as we broadcast live on the air for United Cerebral Palsy. Please call WR2R 830-0944 or the local United Cerebral Palsy Center 756-6533 for more information. Thank you.

Who or What is Cerebral Palsy?

During the week of January 18-24, money is being raised nationally, state-wide and locally for United Cerebral Palsy, (UCP).

Who is United Cerebral Palsy? In North Carolina UCP operates 6 Developmental Centers for physically handicapped preschoolers, 2 centers for physically handicapped adults and is in the process of opening several group homes for physically handicapped adults.

What is Cerebral Palsy? Cerebral palsy is a disorder of movement and posture resulting from an injury to the brain that occurs before, during or in early childhood stages. "Cerebral" refers to the brain, while "palsy" describes lack of muscle control or coordination. Cerebral palsy is neither progressive nor communicable. Neither is cerebral palsy "curable" in the accepted sense, but considerable knowledge is at hand to assist in managing the condition and controlling some of its effects. It is the most widespread life time disability in the nation.

One of UCP of NC children's centers is located in Greenville.

At the present time the Greenville United Cerebral Palsy Center is serving 14 preschool children between the ages of 12 months and 5 years from Pitt and surrounding counties. The center is located at Hooker Memorial Christian Church, who has donated space and utilities for its operation for 16 years. The center is licensed by the Child Day Care Licensing Office of the North Carolina Department of Human Resources.

The children are divided into three classrooms for preschool activities and the staff to child ratio is

1 to 2 1/2. In addition to the teaching staff, the center also employs a physical therapist, a speech therapist, and contracts with another local agency for occupational therapy. The goal is to prepare each child for the least restrictive environment when he or she reaches age five and can enter public school. Each child who attends the United Cerebral Palsy center is developmentally different from the next and each must have very individual therapy and educational goals. Special activities like monthly field trips, swimming, summer camp and creative dance are also a part of the program.

Since January of 1986, United Cerebral Palsy and the Council of Developmental Disability have sponsored Early Intervention Specialized Services, (EISS). EISS is a home based therapeutic program primarily for infants and young children (birth to 3 years) living in Pitt and Lenoir Counties who are currently unserved, identified as: handicapped, demonstrating development delays or at risk for developmental delays.

Specialized programming is extremely costly. United Cerebral Palsy is a nonprofit organization that is funded in part by state and federal funds; however, the biggest portion of operating costs comes from private contributions. A gift of $15.00 could sponsor a session of speech therapy, $25.00 would sponsor a session of physical therapy and a gift of $100.00 would sponsor a full month of child's education.

Ruritan Chief Notes Recruiting Problems

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Service clubs are fighting an uphill battle to find new members, but civic-minded people are still available as recruits, the president of Ruritan National said today.

Robert A. Houck, who estimates that he has traveled 100,000 miles on official duties in his year as Ruritan president, said people who want to be active in community life will continue to join his organization and other service clubs.

"I don't see it changing. The people who want to get involved in their community will be involved," Houck said in an interview. "What we see here, quite frankly, is that the busy people are concerned and they're going to be involved."

Houck, 40, who has been a Ruritan member since he joined the Lignum, Va., club in 1973, said it has become more difficult in recent years to recruit new members. But his organization, which has 36,000 members in 1,330 clubs nationwide, still managed to add 49 new clubs and 415 members in 1987.

"For a 36,000-member organization, that's not bad," he said as the organization's 57th annual national convention got under way this morning.

The 60-year-old Ruritan organization began to admit women as members four years ago. Women now comprise about 10 percent of the membership, Houck said. Most club members live in rural areas.

Ruritan activities include sponsoring Boy Scout troops, providing transportation to elderly people, and joining with 4-H clubs in urging young people to reject the temptation of drug abuse, Houck said.

Houck, a Farm Credit Service employee from Culpeper, Va., ends his year as Ruritan president when the convention concludes Saturday night in Cincinnati. The 1,400 delegates expected at the convention will install Willis Overby of Danbury, N.C., as his successor, Houck said. Overby is a member of the Ruritan club in Lawsonville, N.C.

PTL-Documentary

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A PBS documentary that will be broadcast Tuesday charges three federal government agencies with failing for years to properly investigate possible wrongdoing at PTL under Jim and Tammy Bakker, a newspaper reports.

The documentary says the Federal Communications Commission watered down and delayed a potentially damaging report on PTL. The documentary notes that President Reagan "had courted fundamentalists generally and religious broadcasters in particular" in his 1980 election campaign, according to the Charlotte Observer.

"The fate of the report raises serious questions about the FCC's conduct but also about the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and the Department of Justice, both of whom received copies of this report," the documentary says. "Despite evidence of false solicitation, possible tax evasion and even fraud all three agencies failed to act and Bakker continued to raise millions with apparent impunity."

An FCC official also says on the program that Bakker made false statements under oath.

"The farmers won't be hurt," said Richard Auletta, a Perdue spokesman. "It was a mistake on Perdue's part, and they're going to cover the farmers on it. Most important, though, is that the consumers won't be affected because the birds that were affected were immediately taken away, and there'll be no effect on others from the salt."

He said it will cost Perdue $37,000 to pay for the dead birds and remove them from farms.

The tainted feed killed chickens on 32 farms in Randolph, Chatham, Montgomery and Richmond counties, Auletta said. None of the farmers "even came close to losing an entire flock," he said. Single flocks can contain 75,000 or more chickens.

Under Perdue's usual contracts, the company gives farmers baby chicks and all the feed needed to raise them, then buys back grown birds and processes them.

The farmers will be paid because the birds, in various stages of development, cannot be replaced, Auletta said. "We can't replace chicken for chicken; we don't have 5-month-old chickens hanging around," he said.

Farmers reached in Chatham and Randolph counties said they are pleased with the settlement offered by Perdue.

Financial Woes

WILMINGTON (AP) — The De Laurentis Enterprise Group Inc., which suffered a $36 million loss for the nine months ending Nov. 30, is trying to negotiate a new agreement with its creditors, but it is leaving open the option of selling the Wilmington movie studio, officials said.

DEG issued a statement Tuesday saying it was trying to reach an agreement that would keep the enterprise in operation.

Human Error

GREENSBORO (AP) — Human error caused the salted feed that killed about 50,000 birds being raised by chicken farmers in four North Carolina counties, officials with Perdue Farms Inc. said.

Perdue said Wednesday it will fully compensate farmers for their losses and that the incident will have no effect on market price or quality of Perdue's chickens.

Hart Faces Campaign Financing Allegations

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

LACONIA, N.H. (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Gary Hart said today he had no comment on new allegations that his 1984 and 1988 campaigns took advantage of supporters' financial aid to skirt federal limits on campaign contributions.

Aides traveling with the former Colorado senator said he was not familiar with the specifics of the new allegations, raised by The Associated Press, and that he might comment later.

On Wednesday, former Hart staffers, speaking on condition their names not be used, talked of campaign practices such as receiving non-cash donations that were not reported, and accepting services from businesses that then sent bills knowing they would not be paid.

Hart pledged on Wednesday to investigate one set of allegations — reports that video producer Stuart Karl may have improperly bankrolled Hart's two presidential campaigns.

"We will comply with all the laws and regulations and hopefully go beyond minimum requirements to meet our own very high standards," Hart told reporters at a campaign stop in Keene, N.H.

"I will hold myself responsible for whatever happened and not shift any blame to anyone else."

But, he added: "Obviously a candidate cannot know every detail."

The Democratic presidential hopeful said he knew nothing of the details of the arrangements with Karl — involving services at the 1984 Democratic National Convention and salary payments to Dennis Walto, who worked for Hart as an advance man at least since 1985.

The Miami Herald reported Wednesday that Karl chauffeured Hart in Lear jets and helicopters, paid a monthly salary of $3,000 to Walto when the aide was traveling with the candidate in 1986 and early 1987, and covered 1984 campaign expenses such as car rentals, printing and sign costs.

Federal law limits individuals to a maximum $1,000 contribution to a presidential campaign. Corporations are prohibited from making any such donations.

Hart campaign manager Susan Casey issued a statement late Wednesday in Denver giving details on the arrangements with Karl, saying they were thought to be proper and asking for a Federal Election Commission review.

Ms. Casey said Karl billed the Hart campaign for $96,000 in services, a debt that is under settlement review by the FEC for 10 cents on the dollar.

"However, the issue of impropriety goes beyond simply a legal question," the statement said. "Any contributions or any arrangements that appear to violate even the spirit of the law are unacceptable."

Former Hart campaign staffers told The Associated Press that the help from Karl was just one example of a variety of ways Hart's campaigns knowingly took advantage of financial aid from supporters that skirts the laws.

But both were quick to say that many campaigns do precisely what the Hart committees did, with the principal goal being to save campaign money, not just evade the laws.

"It's all true," said one former staffer, speaking of the Karl allegations, on the condition of anonymity.

"When we needed fliers printed or a chartered plane, Stuart managed to get it done" without the 1984 campaign paying for the services, the source said. "Stuart picked up the tab for a variety of other things."

The source said there was no doubt that people at the highest levels of the Hart campaign knew what was going on.

Karl, who amassed his fortune marketing Jane Fonda workouts and Playboy videos, did not return a reporter's telephone calls on Wednesday.

The source, who was in a position to deal with Karl, added that during 1986 and early 1987, "Walto was a full-time advance man for Hart and he was on Karl's payroll."

Walto was working for Hart's campaign as recently as Tuesday in North Carolina.

Another staffer who took part in Hart's 1984 campaign said that committee was often strapped for money and often tried "to get something for nothing."

This source, who also spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the campaign would often contract for services from supporters, such as car rental agencies, whose owners did not expect to be paid. The vendors would willingly provide the goods and services under such conditions because they wanted to help Hart, said this official.

Campaigning in New Hampshire, Hart was dogged with questions about the relationship with Karl. He first said he didn't know Walto's position with the campaign, then said he knew Walto was an advance man.

Hart acknowledged later Wednesday that Walto was on Karl's payroll but said, "The question is, was he doing work for the person who was paying him?"

In Des Moines, Walto said, "I had a job with Karl" and "I performed duties for" the video producer.

FEC spokesman Sharon Snyder said she could not disclose whether the agency is conducting an investigation into the matter.

The law also bars an employer from assigning an employee to work on a candidate's behalf for more than an hour a week unless that work is reported as a contribution in kind and subject to the same $1,000 limit.

The latest allegations are a blow to Hart's reborn campaign. Hart was forced from the race in May amid controversy over his relationship with a Miami model. That controversy was also kicked off by a story in the Miami Herald, detailing a weekend he spent with the woman.

Hart jumped back in the race in December and pledged a high standard of conduct for his campaign.

CAMPAIGN CHECKS — This Miami Herald photocopy showing checks signed by a Southern California video producer ran in Wednesday's edition of the Herald. The paper reported that Stuart Karl pumped thousands of dollars into the 1984 campaign of Gary Hart and secretly subsidized a key campaign aide early in the current campaign. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagan Stung By Old Familiar Travel Bug

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wanderlust seems to strike U.S. chief executives in their final year in office and President Reagan is proving no exception.

A peek at Ronald Reagan's dance card for 1988 reveals plans for two major summits, one in the Soviet Union, the other in Canada; a European conference with NATO leaders in the spring, and his annual get-together with the president of Mexico.

With Reagan's usual vacation plans thrown into the mix — and adding a touch of political travel once his party's nominee is chosen at the Republican convention in August — the president will be boarding Air Force One regularly for some highly touted travel in the coming year.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower, in his memoirs "White House Years: Waging Peace," supplied a good explanation for the travel bug that afflicts chief executives.

"As my second term of office was more than half over, I reflected on a fact in American history: a president's influence on domestic affairs normally wanes in the last days of his administration," Eisenhower wrote.

"The thought of marking time, waiting for Jan. 20, 1961, did not appeal to me. ... How, I wondered, could I make the best use of this remaining time for the benefit of the United States?" Eisenhower asked.

The war-time hero said he realized that he "enjoyed a measure of good will" overseas and that it should be put to use.

Making good on his own observations, Eisenhower instituted his famous "good will" visits. In the spring, he toured Puerto Rico, Brazil, Argentina, Chile and Uruguay, and hundreds of thousands turned out to greet him.

Several months later, he flew to the Far East for a second tour that included stops in the Philippines — where an estimated one million Filipinos cheered the president — as well as Formosa, South Korea, and Japan.

"Eisenhower set the precedent. He was very successful, and got tremendous publicity," said Samuel Kernell, a professor of political science at the University of California at San Diego.

Kernell, who has written extensively on how presidents communicate with the public, said such travel "is natural, if a president's health is good."

He noted that Eisenhower's rating with the public, which had suffered due to a recession in the late 1950s, shot upward and remained there following his good will tours.

International trips appear to be particularly enticing for end-of-term presidents "since it doesn't make much sense to push a legislative program when you won't be there to pursue it," Kernell said.

And, he noted, presidents who have their eye on the history books tend to look for such things as summits, treaties and peace-making diplomacy to make their mark on the international stage.

"They look for things they can do more independently," rather than being forced to respond to a possibly recalcitrant Congress, Kernell said.

But not all such trips turn out to be pluses for a lame-duck president.

Eisenhower's superpower summit in Paris fell apart — and with it, a planned trip to the Soviet Union — after Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev scuttled the session in the wake of the shootdown of the U.S. high-altitude spyplane known as the U-2.

But for others, travel helped a chief executive ignore a domestic storm.

Richard Nixon, hounded in his second term by Watergate, reveled in the adulation of the crowds of Egypt in the summer before he resigned, recalled David Barber, a presidential scholar at Duke University.

"No one wants to deal with a crusty Congress when you can traipse out to Andrews Air Force Base and have those Marines stand at attention — who wouldn't want to go overseas and be treated like the king of America?," Barber asked.

"It's a glorious way to go out," said Stephen Hess, a senior fellow in governmental studies at the Brookings Institution in Washington.

Hess said he believes such travel does not only a president good, but the nation as well. "People feel safer if they know that the president is talking to Gorbachev in Moscow or Gorbachev is talking to Reagan in Washington," he said.

"These things are largely symbolic, and that's what Reagan's done best," Hess said. "We need good will around the world."

Hess said Reagan will make a "superb good-will ambassador."

"As long as he can stay awake, he'll do real well," Hess added with a laugh.

NTSB: Braking Device Would Have Slowed Train

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The worst crash in Amtrak's history likely would have been avoided if a freight locomotive had automatic emergency brakes, a federal report concludes.

The National Transportation Safety Board, in a final report on the Jan. 4, 1987, accident, also said Wednesday that drug impairment caused the engineer of a Conrail freight locomotive to speed through several warning signals and into the path of the Amtrak train near Chase, Md., outside Baltimore.

The crash left 16 people dead and 175 injured.

The safety board blamed the Federal Railroad Administration and Amtrak, which owns the Northeast corridor track, for not requiring freight locomotives to have the automatic emergency brakes that would have slowed the train when the warning signals were missed.

Amtrak trains for years have had such devices, but freight trains have not, even though the NTSB first urged in 1978 that all trains have the equipment. The Federal Railroad Administration recently ordered freight railroads to begin installing the automatic brakes this year, but the railroads have until 1990 to finish the installation.

John Riley, the federal railroad administrator, conceded in an interview that federal agencies were wrong in not pushing for the automatic braking devices on freight trains years ago. But he maintained that the NTSB also shared some of the blame.

The safety board "ought to be candid enough to add itself to the agencies that mishandled this issue..." Riley said. "There's enough blame to go around." He noted that the NTSB urged that trains have the braking devices after an accident in 1978, but four years later withdrew the recommendation.

The NTSB said in the report that the engineer of the Conrail locomotive, Ricky Gates, was impaired by marijuana use and possibly alcohol. The presence of marijuana was found in blood and urine samples from both Gates and his brakeman, Edward Cromwell.

Gates faces trial next month on 16 manslaughter counts stemming from the accident. Cromwell was granted immunity from prosecution for his grand jury testimony.

The NTSB said the effects of the drug use caused Gates and Cromwell not to notice warning signals both inside the locomotive cab and over the tracks until it was too late to make a safe stop. The Conrail locomotive never went slower than 60 mph before Gates frantically applied the emergency brakes in the last seconds, investigators said.

While the NTSB probe focused on drug use by the two trainmen, the safety board did not include in its series of recommendations a call for increased drug testing of railroad employees, prompting a rebuke from Riley.

"It is not enough to simply talk about the impact marijuana use had on this accident. If we don't do something to prevent it from happening again — I mean authorized random testing — then the lives lost at Chase may well have been lost in vain," Riley said in a statement.

Previously disclosed test results showed that both Gates and Cromwell had amounts of marijuana in their system, but the question of impairment has been difficult to pin down.

NTSB board member Joseph Hall acknowledged that on the question of Gates' impairment "we are dealing with probabilities" based on a variety of evidence.

Baron Philippe De Rothschild Dies

PARIS (AP) — Baron Philippe de Rothschild, a bearer of one of Europe's most famous names who became in his own right one of the world's foremost winegrowers as well as a writer and a sportsman, died Wednesday at the age of 85.

Rothschild, of the famous banking family, was also a noted theater director and film producer.

The Baron Philippe, as he was commonly known, had been in declining health for some time and died at his home in Paris, where he spent winters. He preferred residing at his Bordeaux chateau.

1853, Bordeaux wines were in an economic crisis. The vineyard's buildings were dilapidated, with no electricity, running water or telephones.

He acquired a neighboring property, Mouton d'Armailhacq, in 1933, which became Mouton Baron Philippe.

He lived at the Bordeaux chateau, hired top people and worked hard himself.

He also decreed that his wines would be bottled at the chateau and labeled that way, a practice not common years ago although now routine for fine wines.

Rothschild made Mouton-Rothschild a wine accepted as a peer to the four Premier Grand Crus established since 1855: Lafite, Latour, Margaux and Brion. That meant there were five "Premier Grand Crus" and they could be priced accordingly.

He married Pauline Fairfax-Potter, daughter of a well-known Baltimore family, in 1954.

Boaters Rescued After Sea Ordeal

By JUDY FARAH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A couple whose sailboat was capsized in a storm that battered the Pacific Coast clung to the overturned vessel for more than 60 hours before being plucked from the sea Wednesday, the Coast Guard said.

The Coast Guard resumed its search for two other boats lost in the tempest, which was blamed for eight deaths and caused an estimated $72 million in damage in the United States and Mexico.

Two people clinging to an overturned trimaran were rescued after a distress signal led the Guard to their location 160 miles west-southwest of San Diego, Coast Guard Petty Officer Leo Kay said from Long Beach.

A jet located the disabled boat on its first flyover Wednesday, and a helicopter from the San Diego Coast Guard station plucked the two from the water, Kay said.

The couple, identified only as Joe and Jan DeJulius of Marin County, had spent more than 60 hours clinging to their boat before the rescue, Kay said. They were to be flown to a San Diego hospital.

Their boat overturned Sunday, the first day of the big storm, and the two survived by crawling into one of the boat's hulls to protect themselves from the storm, Kay said.

Two Navy airplanes with infrared gear searched through the night and the Coast Guard joined the search at dawn in the ocean 100 miles south of Ensenada, Mexico, for two overdue fishing boats and a man seen floating in the water. Four Coast Guard planes and one cutter were sent to the area.

The San Diego-based fishing boats were identified as the Cathryn, a 38-foot boat possibly carrying two people, and the 40-foot Kitty Lee, with one aboard, Kay said.

The floating man, who was wearing a life vest, was sighted by the cruise ship Tropical. But by the time the 670-foot ship turned around, the man couldn't be found, Kay said.

Mexican officials said Tuesday that 22 boats in Ensenada Harbor, most of them fishing vessels, were tossed against the rocky shore by the storm and four of them sank. Damage to the fleet was estimated at $40 million.

He remained a man of the land despite his wealth, his many awards and his active, many-faceted life. The enthusiasm for the outdoors began in 1922, when his father made him manager of the family's Bordeaux vineyards, Mouton-Rothschild.

He took the run-down operation at Pauillac, a few miles outside Bordeaux, and turned it into a great establishment that produced one of the world's finest wines and is visited by thousands of tourists each year.

His vineyard makes other wines, but it is Mouton-Rothschild Premier Grand Cru Bordeaux that is top of the line.

Rothschild was born in Paris on April 13, 1902, son of Baron Henri de Rothschild and the former Mathilde de Weisweiler.

His father sent him to Bordeaux for safety in 1918, the final year of World War I. He finished high school there and later received a doctorate in science at the University of Paris.

When he was put in charge of the vineyard, owned by the family since

Crash Survivor Said Passengers Had No Warning

By ELLEN HADDOW
Associated Press Writer
DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — The passengers on a commuter flight didn't even have time to scream as the plane snagged a wing on a snow-covered ridge, turned cartwheels and slid 200 feet, said a survivor of the crash that killed nine.

"The pilot told us we were 10 or 20 minutes outside of Durango," passenger Paul Schauer, who slogged 1½ miles through snow to get help, said Wednesday from his hospital bed.

"I looked down and could see the lights and thought we were awfully low for being that far out," said the 39-year-old Schauer. "The next thing it was like being at a carnival on a tilting cup."
"No one had time to scream."

Seventeen people, including two pilots, were aboard the Continental Express flight Tuesday night when the twin-engine turboprop Swearingen Metro III plane crashed.

The crew members and seven passengers were killed. By Wednesday night, only Schauer and two others remained hospitalized, and they were listed in good or fair condition at Mercy Medical Center.

The National Transportation Safety Board expects to release preliminary findings tonight on the crash, spokesman John Lauber said late Wednesday.

Schauer and six others who survived, including a mother carrying her 23-month-old daughter, walked 1½ miles through darkness, tangled brush and waist-deep snow in 20-degree temperatures to summon help, said La Plata County sheriff's Sgt. Dan Bender.

"Under normal conditions, nobody could walk through this," Bender said. "But the survivors were not under normal conditions. Adrenalin, shock, whatever, they did a superhuman feat."

Schauer, who went ahead of the others, said he climbed to the top of a hill and used lights in the distance to guide him.

"I would count 50 steps and then rest," said Schauer, a bus system consultant from Boonville, Mo. "I was hurt and it was exhausting. The snow was up to my waist, and I'm over 6 feet. At times, I hit some gullies and the snow went up to my shoulders."

Schauer reached a farmhouse, where Thelma Tate, 79, opened the door and saw him, then called the sheriff's office.

Officials said the plane, en route here from Denver, went down minutes after flight controllers cleared it to land at La Plata County Airport, about five miles from the crash site.

The crash, which occurred in thick brushland 10 miles east of this southwestern Colorado city, demolished the plane's nose, but spared passengers in the rear.

The plane, which seemed to be operating normally, caught its right wing on a hill and did a couple of cartwheels before skidding 200 feet to a halt upright, Schauer said.

Passenger Susie Welch, 34, of Durango, described the plane's movement as a "barrel roll."

"We hit the first time, and I thought it was a rough landing," she said. On the second impact, the lights in the cabin went off.

Lee Vollmer, 25, of Longmont survived the hours trapped in the wreck until rescuers took her to a hospital, but died Wednesday.

Two of the others killed died while rescuers worked to extricate them from the wreckage.

"They died right at the very end, trapped in the wreckage. Certainly the cold was a factor," said Keith Roush, a member of the sheriff's search management team.

Sheriff Bill Gardner said it took rescuers more than an hour to reach the site, guided by Schauer's trail down the hillside.

Abandoned Girl Boosted By Show Of Support

By THOMAS P. WYMAN
Associated Press Writer
GARY, Ind. (AP) — A 9-year-old found abandoned in an unheated house and facing amputation of her legs because of frostbite has been overwhelmed by an outpouring of sympathy and concern from around the country, officials say.
A dozen stuffed animals arrived at Wyler Children's Hospital in Chicago, where Darlwin Carlisle was listed in fair and stable condition as she awaited surgery today to remove her legs at midcalf.
The hospital switchboard also has received more than 100 calls of concern about the girl, said Gretchen Flock, spokeswoman for the University of Chicago hospitals, which includes the children's medical center.

"It has meant a lot to her," said Anna Feldman, a social worker at Wyler.
"I have never seen this kind of response," said Suzanne Banz, Wyler's administrative manager. "Everyday people are calling, simply appalled about what has occurred. People cried on the phone, they are so moved. They couldn't believe a mother would do this. They want to help."
The girl's mother, Darlwin Britt, 24, of Gary, was being held at Lake County Jail after surrendering Wednesday on preliminary charges of neglect of a dependent child and confinement.

County Prosecutor Jack F. Crawford will probably file formal charges today against Ms. Britt, said spokeswoman Diane Donovan.
If investigators determine that Ms. Britt locked up the child, "there could be child abuse, child abandonment or neglect charges filed against her," said Cpl. William Burns, a police spokesman. The mother refused to give police a statement, he said.
The child has been hospitalized since she was found Sunday wrapped in a thin blanket and huddled in the attic bedroom of a locked, abandoned and unheated house on the city's south side.
Jeff Griffin, one of two construction workers sent by a mortgage company to board up the foreclosed home, said he was nailing plywood over an attic window when he heard a voice say, "Please don't board me up."

The girl had been exposed to extreme cold for at least five days, doctors said. Severe frostbite stopped blood flow at midcalf and made amputation unavoidable.
"If there was something else for us to do to save her legs, we would have done it," said Dr. Lawrence Zachary, her surgeon.
"She cried when we told her but, but you would, too," said Dr. Wilton Bunch, who will take charge of her rehabilitation. "I think she took it very well."

The child told her rescuers she had gone without water for two days and was unable to move. "I think she really thought we'd give her water and leave, and she'd wait until her mother got home," Griffin said.
The child has been visited by her great-grandmother, grandfather, an aunt and Griffin.
"I brought her the glasses she wanted from the house and a Speak-and-Spell game she really liked," he said, referring to her eyeglasses, which she left behind.
Harold Barnwell, director of county Child Welfare Services, said his office has received calls offering help from around the country, including one from a Denver woman who offered to adopt the girl.

The youngster will be fitted with artificial limbs, but the speed of her recovery is hard to predict. "So much of it depends upon the mental and emotional buildup of the patient," said hospital spokeswoman Mary Fetsch. "She seems to be a strong little girl."
Addie Goudeaux, the principal at Daniel Webster School, where the girl attended third grade, said she was a classroom representative to the student council and an above average student.
The youngster attended school regularly, appeared clean and appropriately dressed, and healthy, she said. "There was no way you could look at this child and tell this child came out of that house," she said.
The Student Council of Webster School is setting up a fund for Darlwin.

"She feels overwhelmed by it all — much like any 9-year-old would," Ms. Feldman said.

Doctors Report New Blood Test Will Help Identify Alcoholics

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — A new blood test that can identify alcoholics even when they haven't had a drink for years may someday enable doctors to spot children likely to become afflicted with the disease, researchers said.
The test's developers say it could also help physicians identify alcoholics early so they can be treated before their disease causes permanent damage.

may be more profound. It may indicate individuals who have an inherent predisposition to have problems with alcohol.
Alcoholism is sometimes passed from generation to generation. Tabakoff has begun studying children of alcoholics to see if they are more likely to have the abnormalities measured by the blood test. If so, the test could be used to identify these children early so they could be taught to avoid alcohol.

The researchers said their test, which measures two blood chemicals, was about 75 percent accurate in distinguishing alcoholics from people who don't have drinking problems.
Tabakoff developed the test with colleagues from the University of Illinois at Chicago and the Westside Veterans Administration Medical Center in Chicago. A report on the work was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Between 8 percent and 10 percent of all men and 1 percent and 2 percent of all women in the United States are estimated to abuse alcohol. Alcohol contributed to about 69,000 deaths in 1980.
The new test measures the activity of two chemicals produced by platelets, the blood cells responsible for clotting. The substances are enzymes called monoamine oxidase and adenylate cyclase.

The Student Council of Webster School is setting up a fund for Darlwin.

"The study may simply provide a means for distinguishing individuals who drink a lot," said Dr. Boris Tabakoff, a researcher at the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. Meeting Recalled

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wedtech Corp. officials talked to Lyn C. Nofziger's White House staff in 1981 about efforts to get a defense contract, a witness said today at the former presidential aide's conflict-of-interest trial.
Edward J. Rollins, who succeeded Nofziger as White House political director in early 1982, testified that Wedtech Corp. officials met with him and another member of Nofziger's staff, Pier Talenti.
"I had a vague recollection of having met with Welbilt people; the meetings run together," Rollins said, referring to the company by its previous name, Welbilt Electronic Die Corp.
"Obviously, today, I can't tell you if it was one time, or two times or five times," Rollins told a U.S. District Court jury in the courtroom of Judge Thomas A. Flannery. One of the people Rollins said he met with was John Mariotta, the company's founder and former chairman.
Among other things, Nofziger, 63, is accused of improperly lobbying former White House colleagues on behalf of Wedtech within a year of leaving President Reagan's staff.
Nofziger and his partner, Mark A. Bragg, were later given Wedtech stock that they sold in 1986 for about $650,000, according to congressional testimony last year. Bragg is accused of aiding and abetting one of Nofziger's four allegedly improper lobbying contacts.
Rollins, now a private political consultant, testified that Talenti, who Nofziger hired as a volunteer for the White House political office, worked on helping Welbilt get the contract.
"It seemed to be a pretty big interest to him," Rollins said. Talenti met with Welbilt officials "on an on going basis."
Over Pentagon objections, Wedtech eventually won a $32 million contract to build small engines for the Army under a federal program for minority businesses.
That decision was made after then-presidential counselor Edwin Meese III ordered his staff in 1982 to ensure that Wedtech received a "fair hearing" for its proposal.
Meese, now attorney general, is expected to testify at the trial. His efforts to help Wedtech are the subject of a separate investigation.
Located in the South Bronx, Wedtech had been lauded by White House officials as a company helping to revitalize the economically distressed neighborhood of New York City.

Tinsmith Retires After 7 Decades

By DOUG THOMAS
The Sunday News
LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — They don't make 'em like Stan Graham anymore.

Wire-rimmed glasses, stiff white shirt, bow tie, brown leather boots and green trousers. At 74, he looks more like a 55-year-old who has stepped out of a portrait, vintage 1961.

Hard-working and built to last.

But the last of the old-time Lancaster tinsmiths is finally packing it in. After 68 years of working with metal, Graham may have finally done himself in.

"I don't know whether my iron was too good and it lasted too long for the people or not," he said, "but it don't pay to bother anymore to be in the business."

Up until December, Graham's tidy shop had taken in $267.85. The year before, he took in $1,920. While business had been bad for the past 10 years, Graham couldn't tear himself away.

"They tell me that if you sit around, you don't live long, so I figured I'm going to keep active," he said. "Then when I got close to 60, my mother-in-law suggested slowing down."

Graham's father started the tin business 76 years ago out of a chicken coop down the block from Graham's shop.

He estimated that he was 6 or 7 when he began working for his father.

"He put (me) on a box to reach up to the bench to rivet elbows on that mandrel back there," he said, pointing to the shop's rear.

His father, Robert L. Graham, built the shop Stanley now owns in 1925.

"Dad was the first sheet metal worker out at Armstrong when they first built the place," he recalled. "An executive out there suggested to him that he make heavy-gauge pans — I don't know what they used them for — and that started off the business."

"In the old days, he'd get piles of sheet iron — and I mean piles — and my brother and I used to carry it back to the shop," he said. "And I don't know if we got an ice cream cone or not for doing that, but we never got paid."

When his father died in 1952, Graham and his brother Robert became partners. In 1977, the brothers went their separate ways.

"Ever since Dad died, business just turned around," he said. "The material isn't made like it was 35 years ago and the (rain) spouting — now they're using a lot of aluminum. We wouldn't use aluminum."

"Your spouting would only last about eight years now and the spouting on this shop was on for 61 years and I just replaced it with copper last year — that's the last big job I done. That will last for 40 years, so I'm not going to worry."

In 1940, Graham married Miriam Wesley, a well-known local painter.

"I was making $10 a week working for my Dad and I married money," Graham chuckled. "My wife was earning $25."

Graham says he hopes to spend more time with his wife now that he's retired, and also wants to continue hunting down bargain antiques.

In his time, Graham installed countless coal-burning, cast-iron furnaces, stoves, roofs, spouting and ice refrigerators.

Work was hard and the hours were long.

"We did mostly tin roofing," he said. "If we put on a flat-seamed tin roof, you had to solder every seam and you were bending over for eight hours a day with a hot charcoal firepot beside you. The heat would come off the tin roof, the firepot was hot, your irons you were holding in your hand, they were hot."

"And you perspired," he said. "You didn't bother wiping it off. You shook your head."

Women Can't Share Kitchen Domain

There ought to be a sign in kitchens like there are in restaurants and elevators limiting the number of occupants at one time. If there were, most kitchens would hold an average of six diners and NEVER ... repeat NEVER ... more than one cook!

I cannot occupy a kitchen with my mother. The wonderful woman who gave me life, nurtured me, shared my ambitions, secrets and comforted me in my despair gives new meaning to the words, "Let me help."

Women are by nature territorial creatures. Early in life we stake out our domains and heaven help anyone who tries to trespass. To me, working in a kitchen is like giving birth. There are just some things you have to do by yourself.

Invariably, when I am at a bubbling stove up to my armpits in stress, my mother joins me. Sometimes she just stands at my elbow with her arms folded and a worried look on her face.

"Umm-mm, that looks good," she says. "No one makes potato salad better than you, dear. Your dish towels need bleaching. Can I help with anything?"

"Everything is under control," I say.

"Did you mean for these lumps to boil?" she asks.

"What lumps?"

"It's hard to tell. Is it gravy or your white sauce?"

"It's macaroni, Mother."

"What is this meal? A carbohydrate festival? How many starches can you have at one meal? You weren't raised that way."

"Mother, why don't you fix the relish plate?"

"If it will help you. You know your carrots would stay fresher if you left the tops on them. So, how do you cut your tomatoes?"

"Mother, they're not 'my' tomatoes and you've been cutting tomatoes for over 50 years."

"The last time I quartered them, you were very upset. You wanted them sliced."

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

"Whatever. What are you doing to the green onions?"

"Cutting the tops off. Who eats that part anyway?"

"It just makes them look nicer."

"I suppose that's why you took the chicken out of the bucket and arranged it on the platter. Where's your dill?"

"Don't start. It's in the spice rack somewhere."

"I put them in alphabetical order the last time I was here and now you've messed them up. You're not going to put a little pimento in your potato salad for color? Never mind, it's your dinner."

"I hate pimentos."

"You never said that when you lived at home."

"You never asked me. Could you put the pickles in a smaller dish? They're running all over the onions and the tomatoes."

"My feet are sticking to your floor and you talk about a little pickle juice on the tomatoes!"

It's nothing short of a miracle that for years, women have worked together side by side in the kitchens of America. I would have been willing to bet that, in an atmosphere of blunt instruments and sharp cutlery, not one of them would have been left alive.

Florida Village Proud Of Record

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
BISCAYNE PARK, Fla. (AP) — Posted at every entrance to this picturesque village is this sign: "Don't even THINK about speeding." Those warnings are for real.

It is that kind of discipline that has made Biscayne Park one of the safest communities in the United States.

"Someone described our village as 'an oasis in a desert of crime,'" said Police Chief Dan Marx, who has headed the city's seven-person police force for 12 years.

Pie-shaped and only .64 square miles in area, Biscayne Park is bordered on the north by North Miami, on the south by Miami Shores and unincorporated Dade County on the east and west perimeters.

"It's a bedroom community with a negative drug problem," said Marx of the 3,200 population. Serious crime is minimal and the last homicide, he recalled, occurred in 1974.

"A couple years ago, Biscayne Village was the fifth safest community in the United States," said patrolman Nick Ladas, born and raised in this village of manicured lawns, promenade street lighting and tree-lined medians.

There are no sidewalks or gutters, highrises or office buildings, and the 1,200 single-family homes here are provided valet garbage service.

"People don't put their trash out front," said Edward Burke, a retired plumbing-mechanical contractor and Biscayne Park's mayor for 22 years. "Three times a week our public works people go around to the back yards to pick up the trash."

"No business — nothing — is allowed here," emphasized Ladas, not even a doctor's or lawyer's shingle.

There is no school, and the only place of worship is the Church of the Resurrection-Episcopal.

"The toughest job is keeping it as it was," said Burke of repeated efforts by outside developers to encroach on the city's serenity and zoning restrictions. "We're hanging on with both hands to keep a piece of the past."

Incorporated in 1931 and chartered in 1933 by the late developer Arthur Griffing, Biscayne Park remains unchanged, in part by natural barriers — railroad tracks on the east and a canal on the west.

"Fifteen years ago, residents were predominantly older, but now about 30 percent are under 35," said Ladas. Children either attend Miami Country Day, a private school, or William Jennings Bryant, both outside city limits.

Local government, including the police department, is conducted from a log cabin made of Dade County pine. Biscayne Park operates on a $1 million annual budget, funds provided by state revenue sharing and ad valorem taxes of $4.66 per $1,000, explained Burke.

A well-equipped recreation center with playing fields and equipment for the young is a popular gathering place for residents.

Ladas is in charge of the city's Crime Watch program, a community effort he says residents take seriously.

State Road 915, the north-south artery to Miami, is patrolled around the clock and its 30 mph speed limit is enforced. An average 200 traffic citations are issued a month.

The speed warning signs, explained Lee Court, who had seen something similar at a club in California.

"Everyone knows about those signs. They make a lasting impression," Marx said with a laugh.

"I love it here," said Ann Ellis, a former beauty queen and show girl who moved here in 1957. "I love the quietness and safety. I go to sleep at night and rest in peace."

"It's heaven on earth," was Burke's description. "You don't get hit with a wall of concrete or an ocean of paving. It's a place where you can come home at night and breathe freely."

Cowboy Hats Cause Controversy

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently moved from Michigan to Arizona, and we have gone "Western." Some Arizona friends who have remained "Eastern" are always kidding my husband about where and when he should wear his cowboy hat. One said, "Write to Abby — she wrote a whole column about it a couple of years ago."

If so, what did you say? — MRS. A. NOVAK, MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR MRS. NOVAK: I did, and this is it:

DEAR ABBY: I was taught that a gentleman always removes his hat when he is indoors. (The exception is the kind of hat worn for religious reasons.) However, I see the 10-gallon cowboy hat worn in restaurants and even in private homes here in Mesa, Ariz.

Have the rules of etiquette changed? Or is it still considered ill-mannered for a gentleman to wear his hat indoors? And are wearers of the cowboy hat exempt from that rule? — ROADRUNNER

DEAR ROADRUNNER: The rules haven't changed; gentlemen still remove their hats when they are indoors.

When I so stated some years ago, I heard from all of Texas, most of Arizona, and parts of New Mexico, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado advising me that the 10-gallon cowboy hat was not just an ordinary hat, it was part of the Western man's uniform — to be worn with pride and honor, remaining on his head as long as he had his boots on.

DEAR ABBY: On the subject of cowboys wearing their hats indoors: In more genteel times, restaurants had coatrooms, which had proper space for hats and someone to watch them and prevent their being pilfered.

Nowadays, if a restaurant has a coatroom at all, it is "at the customer's risk" and has no place even to hang a hat. Often not even a peg exists, necessitating either wearing the hat during meals or putting it on the seat of the adjacent chair, subject to being slopped on by careless waiters, or sat upon by incoming customers!

I sometimes hang my hat on any convenient projection from the wall, be it steer horns, false beams or a bookcase. In rowdier places, I have been known to take out a knife, stick it in a wall plank and hang my hat thereupon.

Lucky (and rare) is the home nowadays that has a hall closet, much less one with room for anything but a ski cap. Throwing the coats on the bed in the spare bedroom often results in coats landing atop a hat and crushing it — sometimes the coats even have people still in them! — WILLIAM D., DEER PARK, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Who said a cowboy never removes his hat? I just saw Gene Autry on the news. He was all dressed up in his spiffy Western clothes, including a beautiful 10-gallon hat, but when a lady approached him, I noticed that he took his hat off. Now, there's a gentleman for you!

Come to think of it, John Wayne always took his hat off in the presence of a lady, and so did Hopalong Cassidy, Gary Cooper and George Montgomery. — LOVES OLD WESTERNS

DEAR LOVES: True. All of the above had good manners. Also hair.

DEAR ABBY: Gentlemen cowboys remove their hats indoors and in the presence of ladies no matter where they are. Drugstore cowboys, who just wear Western clothes and hang out trying to look macho, never take their hats off.

If you recall the movie "Midnight Cowboy," that guy never took his hat off because he was no gentleman. — MOVIE BUFF

Motorcycle Riders Tour In Comfort

By JIM CONROY
The Scranton Times

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — "You can't really hear the radio, can you?" people always ask after they get over the shock of seeing an AM-FM cassette stereo on a motorcycle.

The ability to listen comfortably to Mozart, or Bruce Springsteen, over the sound of the wind rushing past on a busy interstate is only one of many advances made in two-wheeled technology over the past 10 years.

Today's state-of-the-art touring motorcycle is pretty much a luxury car without a roof, and it costs about as much.

The people who ride them also are a far cry from the stereotypical young bikers of the 1950s movies.

"We're like a family, all getting together, going for a Sunday ride or Saturday ride to a restaurant to sit down and talk over dinner," said Terry Sibio of Dunmore.

Miss Sibio's house serves as the unofficial headquarters of Chapter J of the Gold Wing Road Riders Association, which encompasses northeastern Pennsylvania.

The GWRRA is a worldwide organization of more than 36,000 owners of Honda Gold Wing touring motorcycles. Chapter J, organized in May, has 15 members scattered throughout Lackawanna and Luzerne counties.

It is remarkable, said chapter representative Ron Reagan, a Scranton policeman, how people from such diverse backgrounds and ages can enjoy one another's company so well.

The group includes the regional manager of a retail chain, an accountant, several truck drivers, a special-education teacher, a probation officer and a businessman.

They range in age from 17 to 53, but most are 35. More than half of the wives are regular passengers and associate members of the organization.

Miss Sibio, a nurse, has ridden more than 15,000 miles with Reagan in the past two years. Her daughter, Janine, shares a cycle with her boyfriend.

"A lot of women don't enjoy what their husbands and boyfriends are into — hunting and fishing," Miss Sibio said. "This is a chance to spend more time together, sharing something together."

Reagan attributes the success of Gold Wing clubs to the easygoing philosophy on which the organization is based: ride, relax and enjoy the scenery and one another's company.

The members pay no dues. There are no politics, no demands, no commitments — just the requirement of owning a Gold Wing.

"Riding a motorcycle gives you such a sense of freedom and adventure," Reagan said. "There's nothing like the tranquility of riding through open countryside. It's relaxation. It's time to think and enjoy what life's all about."

It must be relaxing, considering Tom Ashman, a truck driver, spends his leisure time riding a motorcycle. The 52-year-old Dickson City resident often spends his work week logging 7,000 miles in a tractor-trailer. Yet he spends the weekend riding 400 to 500 miles on his Gold Wing. "I've seen the country through a windshield, but you don't appreciate it like you do on a bike," he said.

Janine Sibio pointed to the heightened sense of awareness experienced on a motorcycle — the wind, the vastness of the sky, the smell of the countryside, or city, or ocean.

"It's always something new, even if you've traveled the same road five times," she said.

Traveling is what they do — often. The odometer on a Gold Wing goes up to a million miles. Although that may be a bit optimistic, it is not as unusual as it was a decade ago to find bikes with more than 100,000 miles on them.

Gold Wing riders usually have taken at least one long vacation trip of 2,000 miles or more. Most take day trips on weekends and shorter jaunts on weekday evenings.

Some use their bikes for basic transportation to work and for running errands. They also rack up mileage to and from GWRRA-sponsored state, regional and national rallies in various resort areas throughout the year.

The rallies are a cross between a county fair and a flea market with a two-wheeled twist. They offer camping, contests, food, vendors of cycle accessories and a chance to meet new and old friends.

Miss Sibio says she wonders how the stigma attached to motorcycling can persist, given the growing number of sober, responsible adults on two wheels.

"These people are very conscientious," she said. "They've spent a lot of money on these bikes. They ride with pride and they're very, very careful."

Statistics seem to bear her out. A number of insurance companies offer "preferred rider" status at discounted premiums to Gold Wing owners because they tend to be older and have fewer claims.

Plant Closing Would Cost Jobs

Business Inc., a private economic development group. "It's a disappointing and unsettling development. It's hard to do anything much except have real sympathy for people who have worked there a long time whose lives are going to be disrupted."

Gov. Jim Martin said he has pledged the help of state government to soften the blow of the lost jobs.

"AT&T's network systems division, which makes telephone equipment, is operating nationally at 55 percent of capacity," Martin said. "Their business has been flat, the competition has been stronger while the electronics devices they make have gotten smaller. So, consequently, they've had to close five plants elsewhere, three of them even larger than ours."

"A fourth of these workers will be offered early retirement and the others, I am told, will have priority for jobs that AT&T has in the Triad area where their business is growing in other operations," Martin said. "With this kind of five-year lead time, I am confident we can help replace these jobs and more."

Raschke, who has been with AT&T 35 years and in charge of the N.C. Works for nine years, said he first learned of the company's decision Tuesday.

"Working 35 years in AT&T, I knew there was planning going on," he said. "I was also conscious that the corporation has to position itself for the '90s."

The announcement Wednesday follows a string of job eliminations and offers of early retirement at the N.C. Works that began Jan. 1, 1984, when AT&T split off its seven regional Bell companies and kept its long-distance and manufacturing operations.

Foreign competition for equipment coupled with the company's efforts to replace human labor with machines eliminated more than 2,000 jobs from the N.C. Works payroll over the past four years.

"In my opinion, five to 10 years from now, AT&T will no longer exist in the United States because they will be doing all their work overseas," Hubbard predicted bitterly.

Burns Is 92

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — George Burns' philosophy upon reaching age 92: "So when you're 17 you become 18. When you're 91 you become 92. When you're 99 you become 100. I can't afford to die. I'd lose a fortune."

Burns made the crack and several others Wednesday night at the kind of birthday party he enjoys: at a fashionable restaurant surrounded by pretty girls and fellow comedians.

The media event was given at the Bistro Gardens by New World Pictures.

Holbrook Gets DSA Award

a result of his contribution, he received the "Order of the Long Leaf Pine," from Governor Martin in 1985 for "Outstanding Service to the State of North Carolina."

Chairman of one of the United Way Appropriations Committees, Holbrook also serves on the board of directors of the Pitt County Unit and State Division of the American Cancer Society, and also serves as chairman of the ACS State Childhood Cancer Committee.

In addition, he is a member of the advisory committee of the American Red Cross, and a member of the Pitt County Medical Society.

A member of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, Holbrook is a member of the Greenville Noon Rotary Club and the Sadie Sautler PTA.

Also recognized Wednesday night was former Greenville Mayor Les Garner, this year's recipient of the Jaycees' Boss of the Year Award.

Presented to a Jaycee-member employer who has given meritorious service to the Jaycees, church and community, the award to Garner was nominated by Jaycee member Tom Jenkins, shipping manager at Garner Wholesale Merchandisers.

"This is a complete surprise to me and a very pleasant one," Garner said. "I think the future of Greenville lies in your hands, the Jaycees here, and the young people of our country. This to me is the best award that I could ever receive and I want to thank you."

Garner serves as chairman of a Garner Wholesale Merchandiser's non-food products supplier to retail food outlets in an eight-state area.

Garner, who served as the previous mayor of the city, has been honored as the Citizen of the Year in Greenville in 1976, Tarheel of the Week in 1976, and received the Small Businessman of the Year Award, given by the Pitt County Chamber of Commerce in 1985.

An active member of the community, Garner has contributed to the efforts of several organizations including the Kiwanis, Masonry, Salvation Army, and the United Way.

Garner and his company have also contributed to the success of the Jaycees, contributing to the March of Dimes WalkAmerica project, supporting the Haunted House project, and by sponsoring the Jaycees' July 4th celebration for the last two years, according to Jaycees officials.

A member of St. James United Methodist Church, Garner has served on many committees and has been chairman of the administrative board.

Speaking at the awards banquet was Garner's son, Les Garner, Jr., president of North Carolina Wesleyan College.

A Harvard graduate, Garner spoke of the importance of contributing community service in an ever-changing society.

The organization also took advantage of the occasion to formally induct 19 new members into the ranks of the Greenville Jaycees.

According to Rick Cannon, 1987 Jaycee president, the Jaycees are the largest leadership training organization in the world.</

Deacs In Upset

Wake Forest Surprises State, 71-67; Virginia Defeats Maryland, 84-72

By The Associated Press
Wake Forest coach Bob Staak and Cal Boyd say the Demon Deacons finally put together 40 minutes of good basketball, but it was the last minute that gave Wake Forest its first Atlantic Coast Conference victory of the season.
"We haven't put together 40 minutes of basketball, but we did tonight," Staak said after his team defeated 20th-ranked North Carolina State 71-67.

"Every time we've played State in the past two years, we played them fairly well, and I thought we would play well tonight," Staak said. "I think they gave us their best shot, and we certainly had the best effort of the season."

In other ACC action Wednesday, Clemson defeated Furman 76-65 and Virginia defeated Maryland 84-72.

At 1:31, N.C. State held a 67-62 lead after two free throws by Vinny Del Negro, but the Demon Deacons started their comeback.

"I'm disappointed that we couldn't stand the prosperity of a five-point lead and the basketball with 1:09 to play," Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said.

Boyd hit a free throw at the 1:09 mark, and Sam Ivy hit two more with 57 seconds to go. After Chris Corchiani missed the first shot of a one-and-one, Boyd took a pass, dribbled to the left and fired up his 3-point shot that gave Wake Forest the lead.

"Antonio Johnson dribbled the ball down the court and my man doubled up on him," Boyd said. "That freed me and I came to the ball and just stepped up and hit the big shot. We were just trying to get the good shot, wherever it happened to be. It just happened to be a three-pointer tonight."

Trailing by a point, Del Negro missed a shot from the right side. After Shackleford and Chucky Brown failed to get control of the ball, Boyd came up with it in the scramble and raced up the floor. Del Negro fouled him and Boyd added two more free throws with four seconds left.

Tired Rampants Hold Off Gryphons For 60-55 Win

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose High School rebounded from its first Big East Conference basketball loss to take a 60-55 win over Rocky Mount Wednesday night.

The Rose girls, meanwhile, remained unbeaten with a 49-30 win over the Lady Gryphons.

Rose, somewhat flat after their heartbreaking 58-56 loss to Kingston on Tuesday night, struggled out to a 16-12 lead in the first quarter of the game with the Gryphons, but never trailed again after the end of the period.

In the second quarter, Rose continued to pull away, outscoring Rocky Mount, 17-12. That gave the Rampants a 33-24 lead to take into the dressing rooms.

The Rampants saw Rocky Mount put together a small rally in the third period, as the Gryphons outscored Rose, 14-10. That cut the lead back to 43-38. In the final quarter, both teams pushed through 17 points as the Rampants held on to capture the victory.

"The last part of the game, they hit a couple of 3-pointers after we started substituting," Rose coach Jim Brewington said. "That got it back close."

"It's tough playing games back-to-back. I think we were kind of dead after the Kingston game. We played well at times, but we got sloppy too. We shot the ball well at times, too. I think maybe (Rose) might have had Fike on their minds, too."

Fike, unbeaten in league play, will entertain Rose on Friday in the next outing for the Rampants.

Errol Wooten led Rose with 17 points while Keyford Langley added 16. Rocky Mount was paced by Shawn Ricks with 16 while Joseph Lineberger had 14.

Rose's girls had little trouble in their game after a sluggish first period. "We didn't play well early," Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "I guess they were kind of tired after Tuesday's game. Our second unit came in and played well and helped us out," he added.

The Rampettes held only a 7-6 lead after one period but followed that up with a 17-4 margin in the second quarter. That gave Rose a commanding 24-10 lead at the half.

Both teams scored 13 points in the third quarter as the score rose to 37-23. Then, in the final period, Rose outshot Rocky Mount, 12-7, to wrap up the win.

"After we got the lead, we kind of coasted from there. We didn't play especially well, but we won," Kuykendall said. "Tina Smith did a good job on the boards for us, getting 17 rebounds."

Lisa Leisten led Rose with 15 points while Smith added 11. Whitaker had 12 to lead Rocky Mount.

Rose's boys go to 9-2 on the year,

2-1 in Big East play. The girls are now 9-0, 3-0.

Marino Set For Surgery

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins quarterback Dan Marino hasn't missed a regular-season game because of injury in four seasons, but for the fourth time in five years he'll be forced to skip the Pro Bowl.

Marino said his ailing left knee will require arthroscopic surgery, and he'll be replaced in the Pro Bowl on Feb. 7 by Jim Kelly of Buffalo.

"I'm very disappointed," Marino said Wednesday. "I wanted to play in the game. I consider it an honor to be selected to play, especially with the balloting being done by the players."

Marino was to back up Denver quarterback John Elway for the AFC. He's been selected to the Pro Bowl each of his five years in the NFL, but because of problems with the knee, he's played only once.

The Dolphins expect Marino to recover quickly.
"He's referred to it in the past as an oil change," publicity director Eddie White said. "They go in and clean it out and check it out."

The surgery will be Feb. 8 or 9 or March 9 or 10 in the South Lake Tahoe, Nev., office of Dr. Richard Steadman, physician for the U.S. Olympic ski team. The date depends on the Steadman's schedule.

Marino had arthroscopic surgery on the same knee in April 1985. He first had knee surgery during his freshman season at Pittsburgh in 1979.

Marino is the NFL's all-time leading passer and finished fourth in the league this season. Despite the knee ailment, he's started 60 straight games, excluding three strike games this season.

Flores Retires From Coaching

Los Angeles Raider football coach Tom Flores talks with non-injury players during the NFL players' strike last September.

Flores announced Wednesday that he was retiring as coach following the team's 5-10 record, its worst in 25 years. (AP Laserphoto)

Flores Quits; Black Next Up?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders may soon have the first black head coach in the modern-day National Football League. And maybe they won't.

"I would say that with all our great records, one characteristic of the Raiders is that race, color, creed — and even sex — has never interfered," club owner Al Davis said Wednesday during a packed news conference called to announce the retirement of Coach Tom Flores.

"I'm going to choose the best person who can lead the Raiders." Flores, 50, retired after nine years as the Raiders' head coach, saying that although he wasn't burned out, he was tired and the timing was right for him to go in another direction.

The recently completed season no doubt took its toll. The Raiders had a 5-10 record, their worst in 25 years.

Even before Flores' decision was officially announced, speculation centered on his replacement and the possibility that the new coach might be black.

Among those considered possible successors are San Francisco assistant Dennis Green, Raiders assistants Charlie Sumner, Art Shell and Willie Brown, and Pittsburgh assistant Tony Dungy. Only Sumner is white.

"I would hope that the Raiders would have a new head coach by the league meetings in March," Davis said. "I haven't thought about it and I won't discuss it. The last time, it took about a month. It's a very big, a very tough decision."

"I would not hire a college coach who has no pro experience. Yes, I would (hire somebody outside the Raider organization). I have a strong loyalty, but I also realize that we want to win."

The Raiders had an 83-53 regular-season record and won three AFC West championships in Flores' nine years as coach. The team was 8-3 in postseason under Flores.

But the Raiders, who managed the only two Super Bowl wins by AFC teams in the 1980s, have lost 14 of their last 19 games. They were 8-4 in 1986 before losing their last four games to fall out of playoff contention.

"I've won. I think it's time to smell the roses. It's time for me to step aside," Flores said. "I have no regrets. I've experienced just about everything you can.

"I'm not burned out, I'm just tired. It's time to go on to another challenge. Obviously the nine years of the pressure cooker have worn me out a little bit, so I'm going to take a little rest."

Flores said he made the decision to retire last weekend.

"To be a head coach with the team I love the most, the Raiders, was very exciting. ... I have been with the club 23 of my 28 years in professional football. I have been with Al for 20 years. For that I want to thank him. My days as a Raider are not ending. I'm just moving over a little bit."

"No one asked Tom Flores to retire," Davis said. "This is what he wanted to do. Tom will continue to serve the Raiders as an advisor, special projects, and will always be a part of our organization."

"Tom ranks as one of the greatest head coaches. In 1979, I told him that no one could do it (coach) for more than 10 years. If this sounds like an enshrinement in the Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, it's not now, but it may be someday. He was, and is, a star among stars."

Flores, the NFL coach of the year in 1982, spent 13 seasons with the Raiders as a quarterback and assistant coach before replacing John Madden as head coach in 1979.

The Raiders won the Super Bowl following the 1980 and 1983 seasons, but went through hard times in recent years. They haven't won a playoff game since overpowering Washington 38-9 in the Super Bowl four years ago.

Would Flores consider coaching again?
"At this point, no," he said. "I've been a Raider so long, my coaching career has ended."

"In 1979, when I was given the job as head coach of the Oakland Raiders ... as Al mentioned, it was a 10-year commitment. Last year at this time, I sat down and discussed the future with Al. At that time, I had reached many of my goals. Because of the turn of events this past season, getting 100 wins (in 10 years) isn't possible."

"(But) don't put anything in granite. Right now, coaching is history. But you don't know what lies around the bend."

Warriors Win On Road

By The Associated Press

It was the biggest on-court celebration the Golden State Warriors have had all season.

Hugs, high-fives and smiles all around followed a short jumper at the buzzer by Steve Harris that gave the Warriors a 103-101 NBA victory over the New Jersey Nets on Wednesday night at East Rutherford, N.J.

Not only was it only their seventh victory in 34 games this season, it was the Warriors' first of the year on the road after 17 straight losses.

"We got the monkey off our back, but Terry Teague said it was a gorilla," Warriors Coach George Karl quipped.

With the score tied 101-101, Golden State's Ralph Sampson forced Dwayne Washington to alter his driving layup attempt with less than 10 seconds to play. Sampson rebounded the miss and got it to Harris, who missed one shot, got it back and made the second try.

"Ralph made a super defensive play and made a quick outlet pass down the side," Harris said. "I took a jumper, but (Orlando) Woolridge got the ball. I didn't know how much time was left, so I just tried to get it and shoot it again. It definitely beat the buzzer."

Referee Jess Thompson agreed with Harris. New Jersey Coach Bob MacKinnon and his players saw it differently.

"I thought the buzzer went off before the shot," MacKinnon said. "On our video (replay), it proves it was six-tenths of a second late." But the Nets' protests fell on deaf ears and they are now the only NBA team still winless on the road (0-14) this season.

Elsewhere, Boston beat Philadelphia 131-115, Washington topped Philadelphia 110-98, Detroit nipped Utah 120-117, the Los Angeles Clippers upended Indiana 104-97 and Seattle rolled past New York 108-96.

The Nets started the fourth quarter with an 85-75 lead, then were outscored 28-16 in the final period.

"We didn't take enough pride in holding the lead and they got enthusiasm and came back," New Jersey's John Bagley said. "You can't pin it on one person or play. It's all team effort."

Harris scored eight of his 18 points and rookie Tony White 10 of his season-high 24 during a 40-21 spurt in the last 15:29, wiping out a 17-point deficit.

Buck Williams finished with 21 points and 16 rebounds and Woolridge 22 points for the Nets.

Celtics 131, Suns 115

Larry Bird scored 23 points, Danny Ainge added 21 and Boston opened the third quarter with a 14-2 spurt that helped the Celtics to their fourth straight home victory by at least 16 points.

Bird gave the Celtics the lead for good with 4:51 left in the first quarter when he hit a 3-point basket that broke a 16-16 tie. Boston led 61-52 at halftime, quickly turned that into a 75-54 edge and never led by fewer than 15 points the rest of the way.

The victory was Boston's sixth straight and 16th in its last 18 games.

The Suns' losing streak reached three games as they dropped their ninth straight decision in Boston Garden since winning on March 14, 1979.

Phoenix was led by James Edwards with 28 points and Larry Nance with 20.

Bullets 110, 76ers 98

Moses Malone scored 22 and John Williams 20 as Washington used a fourth-quarter surge to get past Philadelphia. The Bullets trailed 74-73 going into the final period, but moved ahead to stay with a 14-2 spurt that made it 87-76 with 8:02 to play.

The 76ers, led by Maurice Cheeks' 20 points, twice slashed the Washington lead to five, the last at 93-88 with 3:08 remaining. But the Bullets went on a 17-10 run to put the game away.

Raleigh Set To Make Bid

RALEIGH (AP) — The Raleigh City Council unanimously selected a local group Tuesday to bring professional baseball to Raleigh, triggering an angry response from Durham Bulls' owner Miles Wolff, who had supported another operator's bid.

"I have no desire to work with the city of Raleigh anymore, and I will grant no waiver for professional baseball in Raleigh," Wolff said in an interview with The News and Observer after the council's decision. "It's inconceivable that they'd do this. ... They're just jerking me around."

The rules of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues say no team may locate within 35 miles of another without a waiver from the existing team's owner. Raleigh's stadium would be constructed within 35 miles of the Durham Athletic Park, home of the Bulls.

On the recommendation of City Manager Dempsey Benton Jr., the council selected Pro Sports Franchises Inc., led by Raleigh residents Barry Foote, a former catcher for the New York Yankees, and Steve Bryant, an advertising executive.

Pro Sports has a tentative agreement to purchase the Carolina League's team in Virginia. That sale would have to be approved by the league owners, which include Wolff and Revo.

Bryant also said Pro Sports had an agreement to buy a team in another league, if the deal with Peninsula owner Gilbert Granger fell through. He would not disclose the team or the league.

Charles Barkley scored 19 points and had 13 rebounds for Philadelphia, and Cheeks had six assists. Bernard King pulled down 11 rebounds for the Bullets.

Pistons 120, Jazz 117

Adrian Dantley and Isiah Thomas scored 28 points apiece, 24 between them in the fourth quarter, as Detroit downed Utah. Karl Malone led the Jazz with 39 points and Thurl Bailey added 20.

Utah led 87-84 going in the final period and increased the margin to 91-84 in the first minute. But the Pistons went on a 14-6 run, with Dantley scoring six points, and Detroit led 98-97 with 7:07 remaining.

Rick Mahorn scored six of his eight points in the final five minutes and Thomas scored 14 in the quarter as the Pistons held off the Jazz the rest of the way.

Kelly Tripucka cut the Detroit lead to 118-115 with a pair of free throws with 26 seconds remaining, but Thomas, who also had 12 assists, iced the game with a jumper with six seconds on the clock.

The 2½-hour game was slowed by 96 free throw attempts, with Detroit hitting 39 of 51 and Utah 35 of 45.

Clippers 104, Pacers 97

Mike Woodson scored 13 of his 22 points in the third quarter as the Clippers staved off a late rally by Indiana. The Clippers led by as many

Guthrie: NASCAR White Men's Club

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Race car driver Janet Guthrie says the NASCAR sanctioning body is an exclusive club for white males, according to a published report.

"Winston Cup racing is the only sport in this country that meets the standards of the Aryan nations," the Charlotte Observer quoted Guthrie, the first woman ever to drive in the Indianapolis 500, as saying in today's editions.

But stock cars — not Indy cars — were on her mind Wednesday during a panel discussion by women drivers on the Charlotte Motor Speedway media tour.

"It's exclusively white and male ... If you think the reason for this is a lack of talented women and blacks, you need to re-examine your thinking," the newspaper quoted her as saying.

Guthrie, who first entered a NASCAR event in the 1976 World 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway, said, "NASCAR took advantage of me through 1977."

Trans-Am circuit driver Debbie Gregg, another panel member, disagreed.

"If you choose to perceive they (NASCAR) are against you, that's what you're going to get," said Gregg, who also suggested that Guthrie "has a chip on her shoulder."

Guthrie posted four Top 10 Winston Cup finishes in 19 races in 1977, one Top 10 in seven 1978 events. Her best finish was sixth, 13 laps down, in the 1977 Volunteer 400 at Bristol (Tenn.) Raceway.

"There's no chance in hell that I'll ever get another Winston Cup ride as much as I might want it," said Guthrie, a physicist. She said she was speaking out because she has "nothing left to lose."

NASCAR president Bill France Jr. had participated in an earlier seminar on the tour, but had left before Guthrie spoke. He could not be reached for comment.

as 17 points with 7:30 to play before the Pacers mounted their final run.

The Pacers, losers of three in a row, hit Los Angeles with an 18-8 spurt, including four free throws at the end by Steve Stipanovich, bringing them within 102-95 with 1:19 left. The Indiana shooters turned cold thereafter, and didn't get any closer than six points.

Guard Vern Fleming had a triple double for the Pacers, with 13 points, 11 rebounds and 12 assists. Teammates Chuck Person and Stipanovich led Indiana with 18 points apiece.

Benoit Benjamin added 19 points for the Clippers.

SuperSonics 108, Knicks 96

Xavier McDaniel scored a career-high 41 points and pulled down 18 rebounds in leading Seattle to its 16th straight home victory and an NBA-best 17-1 home record.

Dale Ellis added 20 points for Seattle, which won its fifth straight game and tied its single-season franchise mark for home-court victories.

Johnny Newman topped the Knicks with a career-high 26 points and Patrick Ewing added 19. The victory snapped New York's two-game winning streak and dropped its road record to 1-16.

Trent Tucker's 3-point shot with 1:30 left cut the margin to 101-94, the closest the Knicks came after the first period. But Seattle pulled away again with free throws.

ACC Action...

David Carlyle sealed the victory with the first shot of a one-and-one with two seconds to play.

"We have played really well for a half, 30 minutes," Boyd said. "We finally put 40 minutes together and I think that's a big confidence booster for the whole team."

Virginia coach Terry Holland said his team was working for a consistent offense against Maryland.

Virginia shot a season-best 61.1 percent from the floor, only the second time in the last 10 games the Cavaliers have shot better than 50 percent.

"I think it's obvious that our guys really wanted to play tonight," Holland said. "For the most part, we played excellent basketball at both ends of the court."

Mel Kennedy scored a career-high 30 points and fellow senior John Johnson added a career-best 28 as Virginia improved its record to 9-8 overall and 2-2 in the ACC.

"Virginia played an outstanding ball game," Maryland Coach Bob Wade said. "They controlled the tempo, and John Johnson and Mel Kennedy both had excellent games."

Maryland shot 12 3-point goals, which Holland said was "really mind boggling."

"That's an awful lot of points for us to give up. Luckily, we were able to counter most of the time with a good 2-point goal at the other end."

Jerry Pryor scored 18 points and grabbed seven rebounds as Clemson pulled away in the final minutes to take its non-conference victory over Furman.

Clemson, 10-5, held an eight-point lead at the half, 35-27. But Furman cut the deficit to 42-40 in the first four minutes of the second half, and stayed close the rest of the way.

The Tigers, however, never lost the lead and led 61-58 with 5:42 to play.

Gators Bite Cats, 58-56

By The Associated Press
 Florida put No. 4 Kentucky in the no-win zone, and the result was another upset at Rupp Arena.
 Vernon Maxwell scored 19 points and Dwayne Schintzius 18 Wednesday night as the Gators took advantage of Kentucky's poor shooting and held on for a 58-56 Southeastern Conference victory.
 Florida's 2-1-2 zone defense limited the Wildcats to 16-for-57 shooting from the field. Richard Madison missed a 16-footer with five seconds left that could have tied the game and Ed Davender's three-quarter-court heave was no good at the buzzer.
 "When the game started I just decided to go to a zone," Florida Coach Norm Sloan said. "I had no idea we'd stay in it the whole game."
 Kentucky, beaten by Auburn at home earlier this season, made too many mistakes, Coach Eddie Sutton said.
 "You can't shoot (16 for 57) and expect to beat anyone," he said. "Just like that last play. Richard shot the ball, but he wasn't the one that was supposed to shoot."
 Some other Top Twenty teams also ran into trouble. St. John's beat No. 15 Georgetown 65-58 and Wake Forest defeated No. 20 North Carolina State 71-67.

 Elsewhere, No. 5 Purdue downed Michigan State 78-67, No. 10 Iowa State routed Nebraska 114-76 and No. 11 Oklahoma beat Colorado 96-76.
 Florida forced Kentucky into bad shots and then got in position for the rebounds. The Gators held a 40-33 edge in rebounds.
 "We felt like the key was to keep them off the offensive boards," Kentucky's Winston Bennett said. "The backbreaker was Capers."
 Chris Capers, starting in place of injured Livingston Chatman, scored eight points and had 12 rebounds. He got six points on tip-ins and follows.
 "I'm proud of the whole team," Sloan said. "But the guy I'm most proud of is Chris Capers. He just played his heart out. I have to go with Chris Capers as the man of the hour."
 Schintzius' dunk gave Florida a 58-51 lead with 3:24 remaining. Madison's basket and a three-point play by Bennett got Kentucky within 58-56.
 Maxwell missed a 3-pointer with 28 seconds to go, but Kentucky could not capitalize as Madison missed.
 "The ball came to me and I was supposed to get it over to Rex (Chapman)," Madison said. "If I felt good when it left my hand, I wouldn't have shot it if I didn't think it had a chance."

 Maxwell missed a free throw with three seconds left and Davender's long shot bounced off the backboard.
 Florida is 13-4 overall and 4-1 in the conference.
 Bennett scored 19 points for Kentucky, 12-2 and 2-2. Chapman added 14.
No. 5 Purdue 78, Michigan St. 67
 Todd Mitchell scored 21 points and Purdue won its 15th straight game by defeating visiting Michigan State in the Big Ten Conference.
 Melvin McCants added 17 points for the Boilermakers, 16-1. Mitchell scored nine points during a 14-4 run that started the second half and put Purdue ahead 56-40.
 Steve Smith scored 21 for the Spartans.
No. 10 Iowa St. 114, Nebraska 76
 Jeff Grayer scored 37 points and Iowa State recorded its biggest rout ever in a regular-season game.
 The Cyclones, 16-2, matched their record 38-point margin in the 1957 Big Eight Conference tournament.
 Lafester Rhodes, who did not start because he arrived late for the game, scored 23 points as Iowa State reached the 100-mark for the seventh time this season.

 Jeff Rekeweg and Pete Manning scored 14 points each for Nebraska, 9-8.
No. 11 Oklahoma 96, Colorado 76
 Harvey Grant scored 24 points and Stacey King had 21 as Oklahoma pulled away in the second half at Colorado.
 The game was tied at 60 with eight minutes left before the Sooners scored 12 straight points. Ricky Grace and Mookie Blaylock had 3-pointers as the Sooners took advantage of Colorado turnovers.
 The Sooners are 14-3 overall and 2-1 in the Big Eight Conference.
St. John's 65, No. 15 Georgetown 58
 Michael Porter scored 21 points and visiting St. John's dropped Georgetown into last place in the Big East Conference.
 Porter scored six points during an 11-2 burst in the second half that enabled the Redmen to stop a 13-0 streak by the Hoyas and overcome a 50-49 deficit. Shelton Jones had 16 points and 14 rebounds for St. John's, 11-3 overall and 2-2 in the conference.
 Georgetown, 11-4, is off to its worst-ever start in the Big East at 1-3. Charles Smith scored 20 points for the Hoyas.
 St. John's has won five of the last six games at Capital Centre, where Georgetown is 90-12 overall.
Wake Forest 71, No. 20 NCSU 67
 Cal Boyd made a 3-point shot and two free throws in the final 20 seconds as Wake Forest upset North Carolina State in the Atlantic Coast Conference.
 The Demon Deacons scored the final nine points of the game. Wake Forest made 12 of 14 foul shots in the final 6:37, and Boyd's go-ahead jump shot for a 68-67 lead was its only field goal during that stretch.
 Sam Ivy scored 25 points for Wake Forest, 6-8 overall and 1-3 in the ACC. Vinny Del Negro had 20 points for the Wolfpack, which had its seven-game winning streak end and fell to 10-3 and 2-1.
Other Games
 Detroit, which was 0-14, won its first game of the season, beating John Carroll 94-87. The Titans had lost 15 straight since defeating Evansville last Feb. 23. Archie Tullios scored 43 points for Detroit.

Owens Earns Reputation As Top Prepster Forward

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Billy Owens lives in the same picturesque central Pennsylvania community where the legendary Jim Thorpe once played. He's been called the best basketball player to come out of these parts since a towering talent named Wilt Chamberlain prepped at Philadelphia's Overbrook High 35 years ago.

Owens is 6-foot-9 and 210 pounds, but he runs the floor like a sprinter, completes passes few other players would attempt and shoots 3-pointers with the same free-spirited confidence he displays on his frequent slam-jam dunks.

If he's not the most talented high school player in the country, the recruiting services agree, the 17-year-old Owens is a close second to 6-10 Alonzo Mourning of Chesapeake, Va.

His statistics — 32 points and 12 rebounds per game, three state titles in three years and 2,600 career points — evoke comparisons to numerous great Pennsylvania players of the past. But, perhaps most of all, he resembles Magic Johnson: a fluid guard in a power forward's guise.

"Billy Owens does things on the basketball floor that big people are not supposed to do," scholastic superscout Howard Garfinkel said. "He is the best high school power forward of the 1980s."
 "He not only scores, rebounds, plays defense, passes and blocks shots, he sees the whole court," Carlisle High Coach Dave Lebo said. "A lot of talented kids are known as scorers. Billy plays the whole game."

Owens, who has signed with Syracuse, comes not only from an athletic family, but an athletic town. It is no coincidence the two have aided his success. His brother, Michael, a sophomore running back at Syracuse, is the No. 10 rusher in state history and was called Carlisle's best all-around athlete since Thorpe.

"Those boys were always playing ball," Cheryl Knight, an aunt, said. "Billy had a ball in his hands since he was 6 years old. Even when he was little, he'd watch games on TV and say, 'I want to do that.' Off to the playground he'd go and a little while later, he could do what he saw on TV."

Jeff Lebo, Dave's son and now a star guard at North Carolina, led Carlisle to the first of its three consecutive Pennsylvania Quad-A championships in 1985. Billy Owens, then a 6-3 freshman, averaged 12 points and eight rebounds a game.

He averaged 24.6 as a 6-5 sophomore and 29.7 as a 6-7 junior, when he scored 31 points in Carlisle's 48-47 title game victory over Meadville. Owens should break Lebo's career scoring record within a week, and probably will finish as the No. 3 scorer in Pennsylvania history.

"All that is nice, but my satisfaction comes from playing the best in the big games," Owens said. "Sometimes players are great against good teams but they don't play as well in the big games. I want the ball to come to me. I love pressure."

Although it was anything but a pressure game, Owens put on a three-ring-circus show in Carlisle's runaway victory Tuesday over Central Dauphin East. He had 36 points, 10 rebounds, seven assists and six slam dunks in 23½ minutes.

In one breathtaking sequence, he dunked home a missed shot, stole the in-bounds pass and whipped a behind-the-back assist to a wide-open teammate.

The statistic that most impresses Dave Lebo is Carlisle's 94-9 record with Owens in the lineup. Carlisle was 0-7 in state playoff games until he arrived; the Herd is 15-0 since. This season, Carlisle is 14-0 and ranked No. 1 in the state and 18th nationally by USA Today.

"More than anything else, he is a winner," Lebo said. "With his talent, he could have been content to be a big duck in a little pond, but he's always wanted to be a big duck in a big pond. Now, everybody in the state measures their success against him, against Carlisle."

"I've always wanted my senior year to be my show ... not a one-man show, but a whole team show. I want to make all of our other players better," Owens said.

Just as Jeff Lebo made Owens better by pushing him, motivating him, being an extra big brother. Billy Owens picked Syracuse because his brother is there and he feels comfortable with the Orangemen players, but almost went to North Carolina because of Lebo.

"I think Coach (Dean) Smith's the best coach in the world. ... He told me I had the potential to be a No. 1 draft choice in the pros," Owens said. "But, most of all, I would have loved to play with Jeff Lebo again."

The only question about this roundball wunderkind is whether he can play at all next year. Despite a respectable academic record, he hasn't met NCAA Proposition 48 guidelines. He can take the SAT test three more times and the ACT once more.

"At one game, the fans chanted, 'S-A-T, S-A-T,'" Owens said. "But those tests don't tell you how you're going to do in college. My brother's doing pretty well at Syracuse, he has tutors to help with his work and he goes to study hall every night."

"But I will play next year. If I have to sit out a year, oh, man, that would be bad."

Holmes No-Show For Press Meet

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Don King stood on the dais and looked over his left shoulder to an empty space.

"Larry Holmes is sitting here," King said at a press conference for Friday night's undisputed heavyweight title fight between champion Mike Tyson and former champion Holmes. "He's invisible. You can't see him."

Holmes was a no-show for the press conference Wednesday. The former champion is avoiding the media like he did in his second unsuccessful title fight with Michael Spinks, some 21 months ago, the last time he fought.

So King was reduced to a fictitious interview with the man who is coming out of retirement and trying to become the oldest heavyweight champion at 38 years of age.

Jersey Joe Wolcott was 37 years, five months, 17 days old when he knocked out Ezzard Charles to win the heavyweight crown on July, 18, 1951.

"Larry, do you think you have any chance at all?" King said, addressing the empty space.

King then waited a few moments. "He says I am going to shock the world," King said. "I am going to show you in live and living color that I am going to be there. I am not coming to lay down."

More than a few people laughed and Tyson smiled, obviously not bothered by Holmes' absence.

"Perhaps in his mind he is very serious and he's putting in all the work he can," Tyson said. "I'm glad he is not here. Everyone knows that it's no secret that Larry Holmes sometimes speaks before his mind is in motion. Really, everyone doesn't have time to hear his bar room epithets."

There is a side of Tyson that respects Holmes, who reigned as champion for 7½ years while the teenaged Tyson trained under the late Cus D'Amato in the hills of Catskill, N.Y.

"I used to think about fighting Holmes running on those cold mountain roads," said Tyson, who called Holmes one of the best champions of all time. "When I fantasized about the fight, I didn't knock him out. I just beat him good."

That's a Tyson trademark. In 32 professional fights, he has posted 28 knockouts and become the youngest man ever to hold the heavyweight title.

Tyson unified the heavyweight crown on Aug. 1 by posting a 12-round decision over Tony Tucker and then made quick work in his first defense by stopping Olympic gold medalist Tyrell Biggs at Atlantic City on Oct. 16 in seven rounds.

Tyson had no prediction for Friday, other than he'll win.

Holmes, of Easton, Pa., has questioned that in interviews over the past three months, particularly whether Tyson can go the distance and take a punch.

"In the first four or five rounds, this boy is going to try to take me out," Holmes said earlier this month. "The first four or five rounds are going to be hard for me, but they are going to be hard for him, too. If he doesn't get me out of there, he is going to have his hands full."

Holmes points to his 10-inch-plus reach advantage and his left jab as his best weapons against Tyson, although some observers say the jab isn't what it once was.

A vast amount of experience also will be on Holmes' side. He is 48-2 with 34 knockouts and has won 21 championship fights in a career that started as a sparring mate for Muhammad Ali, Joe Frazier and Earnie Shavers.

Ironically, Tyson finds himself in the same position Holmes was in in 1980 when he fought an aging and over-the-hill Ali for the title.

Holmes stopped Ali in the 11th round, beating the former champion badly.

Tyson said he felt bad for Ali that night, but said he intends to do what he has to against the aging Holmes this time around.

"God forbid, if I lose to Holmes," Tyson said. "I would rather take the criticism for beating him than take the criticism for losing to him."

Tyson will reportedly make about $5 million for the fight, which is being telecast live on the HBO cable network at 10 p.m. EST. Holmes reportedly will make $3.1 million.

In the 1987 NFC championship game, the New York Giants and the Washington Redskins both made 12 first downs. But the Giants won the game, 17-0.

Deac Coach Sanchez Says He Has To Keep Up Pace

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) - Joe Sanchez just can't sit still, and that is partially why his Wake Forest women's basketball team has climbed into the latest top 20 poll.

"I can sit here right now, and this is the most relaxed I can get," Sanchez said in an interview the day after his team celebrated its debut in the poll with a 56-51 victory over North Carolina. "If I'm sitting behind my desk, maybe I'm not doing a job I need to do."

Sanchez decided that to get the team turned around, he would have to compress two years of work into one. He developed two recruiting classes into a good team that went 13-15 last year.

dominated by you - there are 10 freshmen and sophomores on the roster, and he has moved senior Amy Carter to a reserve role, to which she has responded with six points and four rebounds per game.

The team revolves around Lisa Dodd, a 6-foot-3 sophomore who gave Sanchez the height he missed last year, a factor he thinks kept him from being an ACC contender.

Dodd leads the team in scoring at 14.5 points per game and is averaging 8.8 rebounds.

"Last year, she had to take the beatings of the ACC," Sanchez says. "But I think through experience, she developed into a workhorse for us. Against Carolina, she pulled down 16 rebounds for us, and every one was crucial. So she's kind of used to the wars now and she's developing."

Cathy Wille, also a sophomore, is the floor leader, running the offense and averaging nine points a game. Junior Phyllis Edwards, a transfer from North Carolina-Wilmington is the other double-figure scorer for Wake Forest, averaging almost 14 points per game.

The youth had to grow up in a hurry for Sanchez, and last year's experience is paying off.

Mount Olive Eases Past Pitt

WINTERVILLE — Mount Olive College's junior varsity basketball team rallied to nip Pitt Community College, 64-61, in action Wednesday night at the A.G. Cox gymnasium.

Pitt, up by as much as five points, saw that lead evaporate in the final seven-plus minutes of the game as the Baby Trojans came back to capture the win.

Mount Olive inched out early, 5-2, and held the lead much of the first half, although the game was close throughout the period. By intermission, the Trojans held a 36-32 edge, despite a 58 percent shooting effort from the floor by the Paladins (14 of 24).

In the second half, Pitt rallied and took the lead at 38-36 on a 3-point play by Ricky Congleton with 16:17 left. Mount Olive tied it again at 42-42, but Pitt moved back into the lead 48-44.

With 7:43 left, Pitt scored to take a 52-47 lead, but from that point on the Paladins were outscored by Mount Olive, 17-9.

"We didn't shoot well in the second half (35 percent)," Coach Charles Coburn said of the Paladins. "And our defense sagged some in that we gave them too many easy baskets underneath. But we had only 14 turnovers and we shot 72.7 percent from the line. That was a big improvement in those areas. But we have to learn to play well in all areas if we expect to win."

Tim Mann led Mount Olive with 23 points while Chuck Jones had 12 and Cedric Sanders had 10. Congleton and Jesse Pratt each had 15 for Pitt while Mike Hathaway had 13 and Woodrow Wallace scored 10.

The loss drops Pitt to 6-13 overall. They are scheduled to play host to Denmark Tech on Saturday.

ECU To Continue Game Shuttle Buses

East Carolina University's athletic department has announced that it will continue to provide shuttle bus transportation for all remaining men's basketball games in Minges Coliseum this winter.

The shuttle buses will run from the Allied Health Building parking lot to Minges from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. and again from 8:45 to 9:45 p.m.

The next home game is Wednesday against William & Mary.

North Carolina Tops ECU Swimmers

The University of North Carolina dominated the diving events and swept past East Carolina's swimming and diving team, 118-96, in a meet held at Minges Natatorium Wednesday afternoon.

The Lady Tar Heels also came away with a win, downing the Lady Pirates, 134-76.

East Carolina outpointed the Tar Heels in the swimming competition in the meet, but suffered a 24-point turnaround in the diving, allowing the Tar Heels to capture the win.

"It was one of the finer meets we ever swum in the history of East Carolina," Coach Rick Kobe said. "I think it is a pat on the back for our program. We swam right with them and they are a very talented team. It also hurt that our best diver, Perry Smith, wasn't able to compete today."

Despite the margin of the score for the women, East Carolina had two double winners. Sherry Campbell took the two diving events, while Patti Walsh won the 200-yard freestyle and 100-butterfly.

"Patti Walsh had a very good day and just missed out on a couple of records," Kobe said.

The loss drops the men to 6-5 while the women at 7-3. North Carolina is now 7-0 while the women are 7-1.

East Carolina travels to Old Dominion on Saturday for its final dual meet of the season.

Farmville Downs Whitfield Cagers

GRIMESLAND — Farmville Middle School swept a pair of junior high school basketball games from G.R. Whitfield Wednesday.

Farmville won the boys' game, 59-33. Ryan Tyson led Farmville with 11 points while Mark Lofton added nine. Garrett Yarrell led Whitfield with 15 while Alkivan Thompson had six.

In the girls' game, Farmville rolled up a 42-6 win. Farmville was led by Crystal Reid with 20 and Frances Boone with 13. Whitfield's leading scorer were Christie Devensenzi with four.

Washington's Manning Second In Tourney

WASHINGTON — Paul Manning, a senior at Washington High School, placed second in the World Series of Junior Golf which was completed recently.

Manning, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Manning of Washington, competed in the two-day tournament, held at the Tournament Players Club at the Woodlands Resort near Houston, Tex. He placed second in a field of 89 players.

Manning, with a 78, was ninth after the first round of competition. But he came back with a one-under 71 on the second 18 to finish with a 149 total, good enough for second place.

Joon Lee of Fullerton, Calif., won the event with a 72-74-146.

Manning's will next compete in the fourth and final event of the junior national tour, at Amelia Island Plantation at Jacksonville, Fla., on Feb. 25-26.

Willhite Resigned To Bench

DENVER (AP) — Gerald Willhite has resigned himself to the fact that, despite a miraculous comeback from a serious leg injury, he won't be able to play in the Super Bowl for the Denver Broncos.

"I could play right now, but the doctors feel it would be too much of a risk," Willhite said Wednesday.

Willhite's leg tested out this week at 70 percent of its previous strength. "That's not nearly where it should be," Coach Dan Reeves said in dismissing Willhite's chance of playing against the Washington Redskins on Jan. 31 at San Diego.

A starting running back, a reliable receiver and a capable kick returner — Willhite is all that rolled into one. Or was, until his season came to an ugly end Oct. 26 when he was tackled from behind by Minnesota safety Joey Browner.

Willhite's right foot got caught in the Metrodome's artificial turf, and the force of Browner's tackle caused a multiple fracture of Willhite's lower leg as well as torn ankle ligaments and a bone chip.

He underwent surgery and was immediately ruled out for the remainder of the season. There was some speculation the injury could prove to be career-ending.

But before anyone realized it, Willhite was back on his feet, running and lifting weights.

"I've been running and cutting on it, and it feels good," Willhite said.

A recent conversation with former Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann, however, convinced Willhite to delay his return. Theismann's career was ended by a broken leg that rivaled Willhite's in stomach-wrenching severity.

"He said he thought it was crazy to come back and play this year," Willhite said.

So for now, Willhite plans to be the Broncos' "biggest cheerleader on the sidelines." To further his rehabilitation for the 1988 season, he will spend more time in Denver during the off-season, instead of in his native California.

With Willhite no longer even a possibility, Denver's main injury concern is with wide receiver Vance Johnson.

Johnson suffered a bruised groin in a playoff game Jan. 10 against Houston. Four days later he developed internal bleeding and was hospitalized, forcing him to miss the AFC championship game against Cleveland.

Released from the hospital on Monday, Johnson has been ordered to take it easy until doctors are satisfied the torn blood vessel has repaired itself.

Johnson, Denver's leading receiver, has been walking regularly and applying heat to the leg, but he hasn't been allowed to do any running.

Reeves indicated Johnson would be listed as "probable" for the Super Bowl.

The Broncos were to resume workouts today after a two-day layoff, but Johnson isn't expected back on the practice field until next week, when the team moves to San Diego.

The Broncos will be staying in La Jolla and will practice at nearby San Diego State University.

Redskins Plan To Stop John Elway

HERNDON, Va. (AP) — The Washington Redskins plan to take a few risks in their effort to contain Denver quarterback John Elway in the Super Bowl.

While the players took Wednesday off, the Washington coaching staff worked on a game plan for the Jan. 31 game against the Broncos at San Diego. The players were to be briefed on the strategy today before participating in their first practice of the week.

Redskins linebacker coach Larry Peccatiello said Wednesday that the "key feature" of the Washington game plan, not surprisingly, deals with stopping Elway. The focus, he said, is to keep the quarterback guessing.

"You've got to take chances sometimes, and other times you lay back," Peccatiello said. "But you've got to mix it up when you play against a guy of his caliber."

Elway threw for 285 yards and one touchdown and ran for another score in the last meeting of the teams, a 31-30 Denver victory in December 1986. To stop the elusive quarterback from pulling off an encore, the Redskins plan to "add a few wrinkles," according to defensive line coach LaVern Torgeson.

"You can't be conservative against him," Torgeson said. "He's one of the great ones."

He said Elway's scrambling ability is the major reason he is so difficult to defend. Now you have him, now you don't — and once Elway gets away from the rush, he becomes even more dangerous.

"He makes things happen by coming out of the pocket," Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs said. "He makes those impromptu plays — like that 80-yard pass against Cleveland — by running all over the place."

Elway's talents are so profound that they often influence the opposition's offense.

"We have to get a good job from our offense so we can keep their offense off the field," Gibbs said. "If we can control the ball, we can keep it away from Elway."

The last time the Redskins played the Broncos, linebacker Rich Milot had a team-high eight tackles. But the nine-year veteran was placed on the inactive list for the NFC title game against the Minnesota Vikings and his role on the team is no longer clearly defined.

The Redskins didn't know whether injured cornerback Darrell Green could play the entire game against Minnesota, so they activated Tim Morrison just in case. To make room for Morrison on the roster, they put down Milot.

"We were put in an unfortunate situation," Peccatiello said. "We needed four healthy cornerbacks, and if you bring up somebody, you have to put somebody down."

Other linebackers with less experience than Milot were kept on the active roster, mostly because of their roles on the specialty units.

"Special teams was definitely a big factor," said Peccatiello, who claimed Milot will likely return after his one-week absence.

"I don't see any reason why he wouldn't be back," Peccatiello said. "Nothing's definite, but I would say it would be an upset if he wasn't."

Richmond Seeks Ride

ATLANTA (AP) — Tim Richmond, looking fit and sounding confident, says he will trek to Daytona Beach, Fla., next month in search of a NASCAR Winston Cup ride.

Richmond, appearing on ESPN's "Motor Week Illustrated" program Wednesday night, said, "I don't believe I'm out of the stock car game."

The bearded driver led the Winston Cup series in victories in 1986, but came down with double pneumonia during the winter and missed most of last season.

He made a brief comeback with the Hendrick Motorsports team in the middle of the season, finishing third in The Winston and winning consecutive races at Riverside and Pocono.

Philippine Defense Chief Quits

By YASMIN ARQUIZA
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today announced she accepted the resignation of Defense Secretary Rafael Ilet, who said he quit because his plans to fight the growing communist insurgency were ignored.

The president named Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos as Ilet's successor, and Lt. Gen. Renato de Villa, vice chief of staff and chief of the Philippine Constabulary, to replace Ramos.

Lt. Anselmo Cabingan, a military spokesman, said Brig. Gen. Ramon Montano, Manila area commander, would succeed de Villa as chief of the constabulary, the government's internal security force.

A congressional committee must first approve all appointments. Mrs. Aquino made the announcement in a nationally televised broadcast hours after the 67-year-old Ilet spoke to reporters about why he quit the job he held for nearly 14 months.

The moves were expected to lead to a long-awaited reshuffling in the senior ranks of the 160,000-member armed forces. Military mutineers had complained that the presence of Ramos, 59, and other older officers in senior posts stymied chances for promotion.

Ramos was credited with blocking the numerous attempts by military dissidents to topple Mrs. Aquino's government. He also played a key role in the 1986 military revolt that ousted Ferdinand Marcos and brought her to power.

Critics have accused Ramos of indecisiveness, political ambition and of failing to instill a fighting spirit in an armed forces still trying to recover from the corruption and decay left by the Marcos regime.

In her television address, Mrs. Aquino praised Ilet's service and said she accepted his resignation with "much regret."

Ilet was named to the post when Mrs. Aquino fired Juan Ponce Enrile following what the government called a failed coup plot by Enrile's followers.

The soft-spoken Ilet, who has served as ambassador to Iran and Thailand, took a much lower public profile than his predecessor and was not considered among the most influential members of the Cabinet.

Ilet said he submitted his resignation last week but delayed the announcement because "I did not want to create any disturbance," presumably during Monday's regional elections.

Ilet's spokesman, Ed Pangilinan, said the defense secretary had submitted several proposals for reorganizing and improving the combat effectiveness of the armed forces but they had been ignored.

A 1943 West Point graduate and expert in counterinsurgency, Ilet had complained that the factious, politicized military was ineffective against the 24,000-member communist New People's Army insurgency, now in its 20th year.

In his letter of resignation, Ilet said he agreed to take the defense post in November 1986, because the country faced "an insurgency which has grown alarmingly strong because of a regime that had not addressed the welfare of its people," an apparent reference to Marcos.

"I felt that the insurgency is the major threat to the country and it should be dealt with effectively by a well-organized, revitalized armed forces," he added.

"It has been my distinct impression that the reorganization of the military has not proceeded as I had envisioned," he wrote. "And I fear that divisive elements and controversial issues within the military, if not checked promptly, will erode whatever gains we have achieved" since Marcos' ouster on Feb. 25, 1986.

In his letter, Ilet said "perhaps another man with another vision" could help the president "address this most urgent problem."

Mrs. Aquino said she shared Ilet's concern over the insurgency and professionalism within the armed forces.

"May I assure Gen. Ilet that there is only one vision of the armed forces, and it is that which we share and of which his distinguished career is the best example — total devotion to honor, duty and country."

In an interview last year with The Associated Press, Ilet said troops should be sent out on longer operations against the guerrillas, relying on small-unit tactics similar to those used by the rebels.

Communist rebels have vowed to step up operations this year to overthrow what they refer to as the "U.S.-Aquino regime."

After taking office in February 1986, the Aquino government and the rebel National Democratic Front negotiated a 60-day cease-fire and began talks on ending the rebellion.

Talks broke down in January 1987 because of wide differences between the two sides. Fighting resumed when the cease-fire lapsed the following month.

Ilet served with the U.S. Army in the Pacific in World War II and in 1950 organized the Scout Rangers, an elite anti-guerrilla force credited with helping crush the communist HUK guerrillas.

Report Says Cuban Air Strikes Aimed At S. African Posts

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Cuban warplanes launched strikes on South African positions in southeast Angola in a bid to halt a heavy bombardment of a town held by Cuban and Angolan troops, according to a report.

The report, filed Wednesday from the Angolan capital of Luanda by the Mozambican news agency AIM, suggested there was increasing likelihood of direct clashes between Cuban troops and the South African forces who are fighting in Angola in support of the UNITA rebel movement.

AIM, quoting an unidentified Cuban source in Luanda, said the air strikes were the first by Cuba's air force directed specifically at South African positions. The report said the strikes were launched last Friday after South African forces intensified the bombardment of Cuito Cuanavale, firing up to 200 shells a day at the town from long-range mobile cannon.

AIM said two of the 160 Cuban soldiers in the town had been killed by the shelling, and about 100 Angolan government troops were killed or wounded. It gave no details about the effects of the air strikes, other than to say the bombardment had stopped "for the time being."

Maj. Riaan Louw, a South African military spokesman, said he could neither confirm nor deny the details in the AIM report.

Louw reiterated South Africa's contention that recent combat reports emanating from Luanda are aimed at diverting attention from the successes of UNITA, which claims to have surrounded Cuito Cuanavale.

UNITA, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, has been fighting for 12 years to force Angola's Marxist government into negotiations.

South Africa and the United States have provided aid to the rebels, and South Africa announced in November that its combat troops had intervened to help UNITA repel a major government offensive.

Cuba, which says it has 40,000 soldiers in Angola backing the government, has said it is moving large numbers of troops into the southern war zone and is prepared to engage South African forces directly unless they withdraw.

South Africa has said its troops are in the process of withdrawing, but has issued no detailed military status report in recent weeks.

UNITA, meanwhile, has insisted that only its soldiers — not South Africans — are involved in the assault on Cuito Cuanavale.

U.S. and Angolan government officials are scheduled to begin a round of regional peace talks in Luanda on Jan. 28.

U.S. negotiators have met with Angolan and South African officials several times in recent years.

The talks were aimed at working out a peace plan to halt South African military incursions into Angola, Angolan support for Angola-based guerrillas of the Namibian independence movement SWAPO and a South African withdrawal from Namibia, or South-West Africa, for self-rule in the former German colony.

Part Of Marcos' Wealth Recovered

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government has recovered $56 million in two years of a worldwide search for wealth Ferdinand Marcos and his associates allegedly plundered during his 20 years in power, an official said today.

Ramon Diaz, chairman of the Presidential Commission of Good Government, told a civic club meeting his task force expects to recover an additional $174 million in bank deposits and properties in the continuing search.

In Honolulu, Hawaii, where Marcos has lived since his 1986 ouster, the former president denied stealing government funds and told a news conference Wednesday he was living off gifts and loans from supporters while in exile.

"We have borrowed for our legal fees as well as for our living expenses," Marcos said. "But right now we are almost penniless."

Diaz said the amount recovered was part of the proceeds from the sale of Philippine and U.S. properties surrendered by close associates of Marcos since the commission was created immediately after Corazon Aquino was catapulted to the presidency in a civilian-military revolt two years ago.

He said part of the money was from sale of Marcos properties in New Jersey and New York and from deposits Marcos or his agents made in Philippine banks.

Diaz also announced that the Philippine government is set to auction off some "knickknacks," including apartment buildings and paintings, owned by Marcos in New York by mid-February to raise another $1 million.

Diaz added they also recovered 3.94 million acres of choice Philippine lands, 81 expensive cars, 29 planes and helicopters and 13 yachts and ships.

Officials claim Marcos, his family and relatives allegedly stole between $5 billion and $10 billion during his 20 years in office.

Study Cites High Number Of Needless Pacemakers

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Physician ignorance, not greed, is to blame for the excessive number of needless or questionable pacemakers that are implanted in patients, according to a study published today.

"The results of our study suggest that a significant percentage of pacemakers were being put in for incorrect reasons," said Dr. Allan M. Greenspan. "Twenty percent of the implants that were done were not necessary, and another 36 percent were questionable."

The findings were based on a review of operations in Philadelphia five years ago. Greenspan said the situation probably has improved somewhat since then, because insurance companies have begun to demand proof that pacemakers are necessary before they pay for them.

The researchers blamed the overuse of pacemakers on lack of medical knowledge by physicians rather than financial motives because the doctors who made the decision to put in pacemakers did not actually perform the procedure, and thus didn't profit from it.

Greenspan, a cardiologist at Albert Einstein Medical Center in Philadelphia, conducted the study for the Philadelphia Professional Standards Review Organization. The results were published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Pacemakers are installed when the heart beats too slowly. They electrically stimulate the heart to work more quickly.

An estimated one in 500 Americans has a permanent pacemaker, and doctors put in 120,000 new ones each year. The device cost about $10,000 apiece, while doctors' fees are about $2,000.

The review found that among the unnecessary pacemakers were ones installed in people whose hearts beat more than 40 times a minute. The researchers maintained that pacemakers for these people are unnecessary.

Pacemakers also were sometimes given to people who suffered dizziness and other symptoms that can be caused by slow heartbeat but who didn't undergo the tests needed to make sure that their hearts actually caused the problems. Others got pacemakers when their slow heart beats were caused by unneeded drugs.

In the questionable category were patients who might actually have needed the pacemakers but whose records showed no evidence that doctors performed the tests to prove this.

The study found that heart specialists often were not involved in the decision to install pacemakers. Instead, internists or general practitioners sent patients directly to surgeons for the procedure.

In an editorial accompanying the study, Dr. John A. Kastor of the University of Maryland School of Medicine said the findings are not surprising.

He said the latest work and his own experience show that "not all physicians who prescribe pacemakers know as much about the subject as they should."

Although unnecessary pacemakers are rarely fatal, doctors note that they can cause difficulties such as infection or trigger abnormal heart rhythms. In addition, they may be bad psychologically if they make people think they are sick.

The study was based on a review of the records of 382 patients who received new pacemakers at 30 hospitals in Philadelphia during the first half of 1983.

Colon Cancer, Gene Loss Link Is Noted

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers today report new evidence that colon cancer may follow loss of several genes that normally protect against cancer.

The "anti-oncogenes," the opposite of cancer-causing oncogenes, may normally regulate cell growth, scientists say.

As a consequence, cancer may appear in a normal cell if it loses their influence, according to theory.

Genes are string-like sequences of chemicals that act as blueprints for the making of proteins within a cell. Genes lie along chromosomes, which are thread-like structures inherited in 23 pairs by every cell of the body.

To get evidence for protective genes, scientists study tumor cells to see if portions of chromosomes are missing. The tumor may have begun after the missing portion took a protective gene with it.

Each cell gets two copies of virtually every gene, but if one copy of a protective gene is defective, the loss of the other copy may help trigger cancer, the theory says.

Portions of chromosomes can be lost when cells reproduce themselves.

Past studies have found such evidence of anti-oncogenes for colon cancer chiefly on the chromosomes designated 5 and 17, and possibly some others.

In today's issue of the British journal Nature, Japanese scientists report portions missing from chromosomes 6, 12, 15 and 22, as well as chromosome 5.

They studied 38 tumors from 25 patients with familial polyposis coli, an inherited predisposition to colon cancer, and 20 colon cancers from 19 patients who did not have that condition.

Such studies are a first step in identifying the anti-oncogenes and determining how important each is in promoting colon cancer, said Bert Vogelstein, associate professor of oncology at the Johns Hopkins Oncology Center in Baltimore.

Colon cancer struck an estimated 102,000 Americans and killed 52,000 last year, the American Cancer Society estimates.

Costly Affair

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — An Air Force security officer has been sentenced to a year in military prison for an adulterous romance with an enlisted woman that officials said they tried to cover up.

The affair came to light when military police officers saw the two kissing in a parking lot near a coffee shop.

The Air Force said it was efforts by Capt. James Etheridge Jr. to cover up the affair with his female subordinate that earned him the tough sentence and ended his military 20-year career.

Vince Edwards Returning As Fiery Dr. Ben Casey

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vince Edwards says he has mellowed over 20 years, but "Ben Casey" is still full of fire in a new two-hour movie.

The syndicated movie, "The Return of Ben Casey," will air at various times across the country beginning Saturday. The stormy surgeon returns to County Hospital after a long absence to find that the medical facility is still packed with drama.

"When Jim Moser created the character he gave him a volatility because he saw some of that in me," said Edwards. "An antsiness that was part of the character and part of me at the time."

"But you get a little smarter, you learn to deal with people differently. You can still have a short fuse. The character hasn't mellowed, however. He can still read off those people."

Part of the popularity of "Ben Casey" when it ran on ABC from 1961-66 came from the explosive undercurrent that characterized both Ben Casey and Vince Edwards. Casey was one of television's first anti-heroes, whose arrogance went against the grain of such mild-mannered TV heroes as "Dr. Kildare," "Perry Mason" and Marshal Matt Dillon of "Gunsmoke."

Edwards said if the ratings are good enough the show will be offered as a series, first to the networks, then for syndication. "Or we could do like 'Perry Mason' and do three or four movies a year," he said.

"It was interesting going back. When I got into the hospital it was amazing how quickly you fall back into it. It's been 20 years, but the feeling was like I had never left. Especially when I worked with Harry Landers, who plays Dr. Ted Hoffman."

Edwards and Landers were the only original cast members to return. Sam Jaffe, who played Casey's mentor, Dr. David Zorba, died four years ago. Bettye Ackerman, who was married to Jaffe and played Dr. Maggie Graham, may return if it goes to series, Edwards said.

"This is a very contemporary Dr. Casey," said Edwards. "He still has the same fire. He's a little wiser, maybe. It's a good character, and there are few good characters on television. Perry Mason, Kojak, Mr. Spock and Captain Kirk on 'Star Trek,' Columbo."

"The old show was under the auspices of the American Medical Association," said Edwards. "Today, we can get into more things, like the ethics of medicine, unnecessary surgery, malpractice. Barry Oringer, who wrote many of the shows for the old series, wrote the movie. He's given Casey a good story for the past 20 years."

The story is that Casey went to Vietnam as a surgeon, married and divorced. Still the idealist, he's never made much money. He runs into Hoffman, who has become a multimillionaire entrepreneur.

"Hoffman has gone very commercial, and he wants Casey in the firm to rekindle some of the idealistic qualities he has lost," said Edwards. "He was one of those people who placed his idealism on the back burner in order to make money. He has great respect for Casey because he never chased the dollar."

Edwards had made 24 movies, including seven starring roles, before he interviewed for "Ben Casey."

"I had to read with a bunch of other guys," he said. "To me it was just another gig. A one-hour pilot. Fielder Cook directed. Everybody liked it and we went on the air. Our first couple of shows were filled with local station promos. Three weeks later we were the No. 1 show. My picture was on the cover of Look and Life magazines."

Trip Home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was a trip home for Bill Dana when he played Sophia's brother on an episode of NBC's "The Golden Girls" to be shown Feb. 6. Dana's own series, "The Bill Dana Show," was shot on the same soundstage in 1963-64.

Dana's first assistant director was Jay Sandrich, who directed the pilot of "The Golden Girls."

McCartney, Ross No Shows At Hall Of Fame Inductions

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Paul McCartney refused a ticket to ride and Diana Ross decided it wasn't a day to be together, giving the Beach Boys' Mike Love bad vibrations at a lively induction dinner for the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame.

Love delivered a speech calling McCartney's and Ross' absences "a bummer," boasting about the Beach Boys' numerous performances and criticizing several other rockers before he left the stage saying "love and harmony."

That elicited a tweak, in turn, from Bob Dylan, who along with the Beach Boys, the Beatles, the Supremes and the Drifters was inducted into the hall Wednesday night at its third annual ceremony.

"I want to thank Mike Love for not mentioning me. I play a lot of dates every year, too. Peace, love and harmony is greatly important, indeed. So is forgiveness," Dylan said in a speech that drew the loudest ovation.

Forgiveness, however, apparently wasn't on the mind of McCartney, who said through a spokesman that he wouldn't appear with fellow ex-Beatles Ringo Starr and George Harrison because "after 20 years, the Beatles still have some business differences."

"I would feel like a complete hypocrite waving and smiling with them at a fake reunion," McCartney said, according to spokesman Joe Dera. McCartney was in England making a record with Elvis Costello, Dera said.

Appearing with Starr and Harrison at the $300-a-plate ceremony at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel were John Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono, and his sons Julian and Sean.

Miss Ross, who split with the Supremes in the late 1960s, did not appear with Mary Wilson and the late Florence Ballard's daughter to acknowledge the group's induction.

Introducing Dylan, rock superstar Bruce Springsteen said, "He had the vision and talent to expand a pop song until it could contain the whole world. Speaking as a fan, when I was 15, I heard a guy sing 'Like a Rolling Stone.' The guy had the guts to take on the whole world and made me feel like I had them, too."

Three artists, Woody Guthrie, Leadbelly and Les Paul, and a nonperformer, Berry Gordy, who founded Motown Records in Detroit, also were inducted.

The nominees, limited to people who were recording at least 25 years earlier, are chosen on the basis of contributions to and influence on rock music. More than 150 record executives, producers, performers, broadcasters and writers voted.

Scott Hospitalized

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George C. Scott was in good condition at a hospital after being admitted for chest and stomach pains, said a spokeswoman for the Academy Award-winning actor.

"He was watching football on Sunday when he experienced chest and stomach pains," Maggie Begley said Wednesday. "He had had a complete physical just two weeks before, and had passed with flying colors, but his doctor told him ... to check in and get tested again."

Ms. Begley said she didn't know which hospital the 60-year-old actor was in. "The last report we had was he's doing OK, he's in good condition," she said.

Scott stars in the Fox television network show "Mr. President." Filming of its final episode had been set for Friday, but the producers decided to scrap that installment after Scott became ill, Ms. Begley said.

Scott, who has been nominated for five Emmys and three Academy Awards, won an Emmy in 1971 for "The Price" and a 1970 Academy Award for best actor for his portrayal of Gen. George S. Patton in the movie "Patton."

Ads Planned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Depp of Fox Broadcasting's "21 Jump Street" will film a series of public service AIDS announcements aimed at teen-agers. The spots will premiere Feb. 7, following a special AIDS episode of "21 Jump Street."

Guthrie, saying, "His songs are going to last forever. I can't help but think someday that 'This Land Is Your Land' is going to be sung on other planets."

The Rolling Stones' Mick Jagger also appeared to help induct the Beatles, while pop singer Billy Joel introduced the Drifters.

After much competition by cities, Cleveland was chosen to house the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame.

Earlier Wednesday, architect I.M. Pei revealed his plans, saying the dramatic "glass tent" and tower will "pack a wallop" when completed.

His plans, still preliminary, call for a 200-foot tower on the shore of the Cuyahoga River, with a large triangular glass lean-to or tent against one side.

The tower, with geometric forms jutting out from unexpected angles, would house theaters, and a free-standing mushroom-shaped structure would contain a 360-degree movie screen. An outdoor plaza could be used for concerts, architects said.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Jan. 22

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A private talk with your superior can clear up several problems now if you are tactful. Avoid a depressing individual this evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Go out with a good friend whom you haven't understood lately, and find out what the problem is. Don't do anything expensive tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Avoid a nagging business associate today. Doing something thoughtful for your mate would be a wonderful idea at this time.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Adopt a different attitude toward an associate and you will get more cooperation in the future. Be sure to drive carefully tonight.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): A co-worker can give you some great ideas on how to improve your efficiency. Cut down on your expenses tonight, but don't be stingy.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Remember to do something thoughtful for your mate, thus improving your relationship. Help put a family friend if you are asked.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Do anything at home which will bring a greater harmony there. Entertain some good friends whom your family are quite fond of tonight.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Bring one of your special talents to the attention of a superior and get excellent results. Set up a more sensible budget this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Get advice from an expert on how to improve your property, but be sure to get several estimates before signing any contracts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't allow a private worry to keep you from enjoying yourself with friends tonight. Use great care while driving or in motion.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Avoid an acquaintance who is in a disagreeable mood. An understanding woman you know can be most helpful to you at this time.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You can gain the support of others easily if you state your aims, especially where personal matters are concerned. Improve your health.

The bidding:
 North East South West
 Pass 1 NT Pass Pass

 Opening lead: Ten of ♣ There's an old saying at tournament bridge: "Never let the opponents play at the one-level." By and hand, the defenders would have had to win and lead the ace of hearts and another immediately, or else declarer would get home, losing only one heart, one club and three trumps. Perhaps declarer should have played for that, for down one doubled and vulnerable would certainly lose the board.

Instead, declarer led a heart. West won the ace and persevered with clubs. A diamond to the ace and a diamond ruff was followed by the king of hearts and a heart ruff as East stuffed a diamond. Another diamond ruff put declarer on the large, that's sensible. If the auction dies meekly at the one-level, it means that the balance of strength is just about even. Going one down competitively could net you an excellent score. However, we do impose limits on what we need to balance.

Reopening the bidding was taken to great lengths on this hand from the finals of the Reisinger. When Zia Mahmood and Jaggy Shivdani of the eventual winning team, who were using a weak no trump opening bid, did not proceed beyond the first bid, North reopened with two diamonds—a bid showing the major suits. Mahmood, West, was delighted to double two spades.

He was not quite as happy when he led the ten of clubs and dummy appeared, for it was obvious that every card lay right for declarer. East won the ace of clubs and returned the suit to declarer's king. Had declarer now led a trump from table for another heart lead. He needed only to score his queen of trumps for his contract. But East was alive to what was happening. He ruffed with the ace of trumps and led a trump, and the defense prevailed.
