Bomb Blast Near Funeral Site Kills At Least 17

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

JALALABAD, Afghanistan (AP) — A bomb exploded in a bus during the funeral of Abdul Ghaffar Khan today, killing at least 17 people and injuring another 25, many of them mourners, witnesses said.

The witnesses said the bomb exploded on a bus parked about three miles from the garden of Ghaffar Khan's home, where the 98-year-old freedom fighter was buried.

Some of the witnesses said at least half the victims were Pakistanis who had accompanied his body in a 70-mile procession from Peshawar, Pakistan, where he died on Wednesday.

"The explosion was so powerful that I jumped out of my seat," said a man who was sitting in a car about 220 yards from the explosion.

The witnesses spoke on condition of anonymity. They said the injured were taken to hospital in military trucks. No group has claimed the bombing.

Afghan guerrilla groups had indicated Wednesday that they would allow the funeral to take place peacefully. The Moslem guerrillas are fighting the Marxist government in Kabul, which has been bolstered by Soviet troops since 1979.

Earlier, thousands of mourners accompanied a flower-decked red truck carrying the body of Ghaffar Khan, who helped free the Indian subcontinent from British rule. He died after suffering from a lung infection and strokes.

The Afghan leader Najib joined the mourners when the entourage of red-flagged vans, cars and trucks reached Jalalabad. He praised Ghaffar Khan as "the Afghan pride."

The mourners, accompanied by foreign correspondents, were the first people to be allowed legally into Afghanistan from Pakistan since 1979, when the frontier was closed.

Pakistan has been sheltering the Afghan guerrillas and about 4 million refugees of the war since 1979.

Organizers said there were about 20,000 mourners in the procession.

In Jalalabad, about 70 miles from the border, Ghaffar Khan's coffin was placed on a gun carriage and towed behind a military truck through the city to the garden of the two-story cement bungalow where he once lived.

The funeral service brought together envoys of all sides of the Afghan conflict.

Najib walked behind the coffin with Ghaffar Khan's younger son, Abdul Wali Khan. The older son, Abdul Ghani Khan, rode in a wheelchair.

After the coffin was lowered into the ground to a 21-gun salute, Najib praised Ghaffar Khan as "the Frontier Gandhi" and said he had allied himself with Najib and his Soviet-backed government.

"We are proud that Ghaffar Khan had chosen his eternal grave to be in Jalalabad," Najib said.

W. Germany, France Ink Pact Creating Joint Army Brigade

PARIS (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl and President Francois Mitterrand signed accords today to create a joint French-West Germany army brigade and to coordinate the defense and economic policies of the two former enemies.

The new step in cooperation between the two nations, who fought each other three times in 100 years, was the centerpiece marking the 25th anniversary of the French-West German friendship treaty of 1963.

West German Defense Minister Manfred Woerner, interviewed on French television, said the joint brigade was a step toward a merged army.

"I see the possibility that one day there would be a common army,"

Woerner said. "It's a very long perspective."

French Defense Minister Andre Giraud, interviewed at the same time, said he agreed, and added, "The first step is the hardest."

Brig. Gen. Jean-Pierre Sengeisen, a 52-year-old French officer who speaks German, is to be the first commander of the joint brigade.

The full text of the economic accord is to be made public next week. The two sides said in a statement that a joint economic council, made up of the finance ministers and central bank chiefs of the two nations, would keep an eye on the budgetary, monetary and economic policies of both sides, meeting four times each year.

Kohl, accompanied by about a dozen Cabinet ministers, was to leave Paris this evening after a day of meetings with Mitterrand and Premier Jacques Chirac.

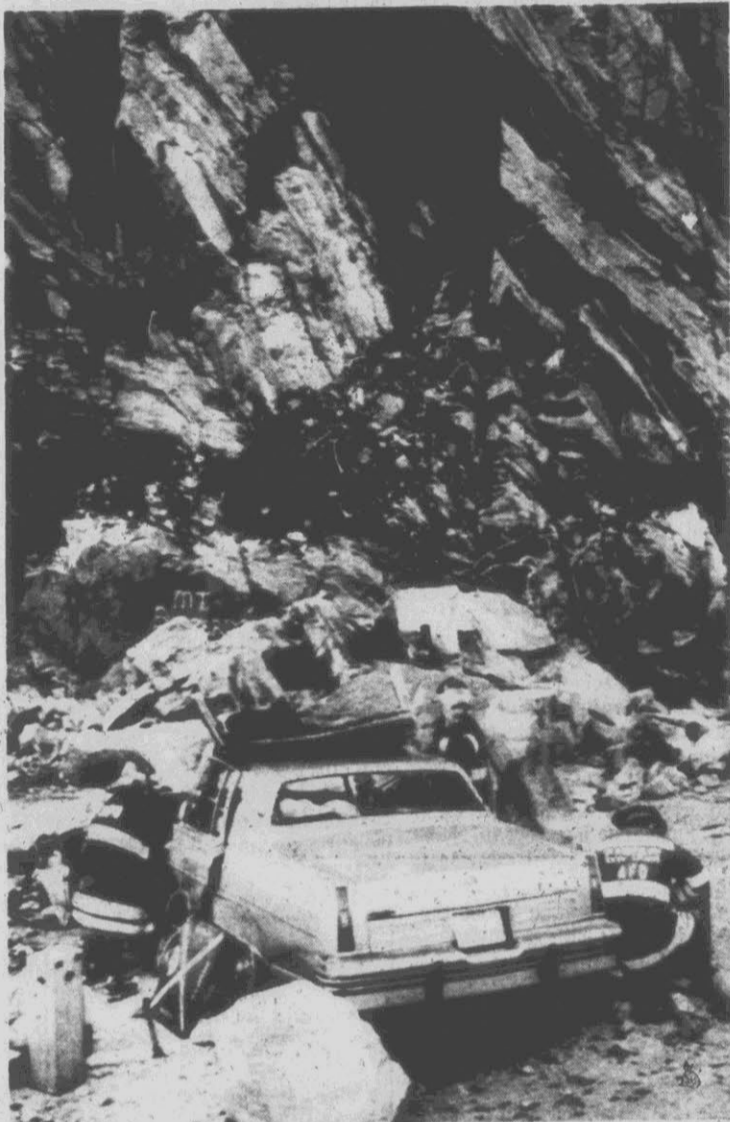

On Thursday, Woerner rejected new criticisms by some NATO allies of the planned French-German defense council.

"It is better to work together than to do nothing at all," Woerner told reporters, adding the new council will be "in the overall interests of the alliance."

Woerner takes over as secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization this year, the first German to hold the top post.

Elections Suit Talks Continuing

By STUART SAVAGE

A spokesman for the Pitt County Board of Commissioners said this morning negotiations are continuing in an effort to settle a suit brought by the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice seeking to invalidate the present method of electing members of the board.

Raleigh lawyer Mike Crowell, following an executive session of the board this morning, said "we are continuing to negotiate," and said "we hope to have something to announce shortly," possibly as early as sometime next week.

But Crowell declined to give any specifics on what was discussed in the meeting today.

However, D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said leaders of black organizations have met and proposed two alternatives to settle the suit.

Garrett said "our first choice" is a "6-0 plan" where only six commissioners would be elected from residency districts by the voters in the six districts.

"The second recommendation ... this is what we are calling the alternative plan ... would be to have one commissioner elected from each of the three collapsed districts; have these three commissioners elected in the collapsed districts during the general election by the same people who voted for them in the primaries, with no at-large vote across the county."

Commissioners, at the request of the NAACP, and in an effort to give blacks a better opportunity to elect representatives to the board, last year adopted a "6-3" plan under which six commissioners would be elected from residency districts and three members of the board would be elected at-large.

But the Concerned Citizens for Justice and several individuals filed suit in U.S. Eastern District Court asking that the present method of

The suspect, identified as Michael Shanley, 22, of Manhattan, was being held at the federal Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan this morning, according to an assignment officer who did not give his name.

A State Department spokeswoman said he was charged with attempted assault on the duchess and assault on a federal agent.

The man yelled "Murderers, murderers!" during the incident, WCBS Radio reported. Police said the flag the man carried was an Irish

Groups Disagree On Service Focus

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

While a group of pro-choice supporters gathered at the Pitt County Courthouse Thursday for a memorial service marking the 15th anniversary of the supreme court decision legalizing abortion, local Right to Life advocates said today the event should be a sad one.

"It should be a time of mourning; about 20 million children have been killed during these years, said Rachel Steinbeck Sturz of Greenville.

But Greenville members of the National Organization of Women, who sponsored the service and a candle-light vigil, said women must continue to defend reproductive freedom.

"Serious challenges continue to be posed to a woman's right to life, her right to control her reproductive life and, of course, her constitutional right to choose abortion and birth control," she said.

Approximately 20 people attended the two-hour service called to remember the 1973 Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court decision which legalized abortion. The court decided by a 7-2 vote the right of personal privacy includes abortion.

"I thought the service was a success," said Carolyn Steglich, the president of the Greenville chapter of NOW.

Steglich said the group is especially outraged by a recent court ruling which forced a cesarian section on a 27-year-old pregnant woman terminally ill with cancer.

"The operation was opposed by the woman, her family, and her physicians, and was listed as the cause of her death. How many more women will be sacrificed to so called 'fetal rights'?" she said.

Fireman Honored By Association

A 22-year-old Eastern Pines man has been named Pitt County Fireman of the Year by the Pitt County Firemen's Association.

W. Scott Alford was picked by the Eastern Pines Fire Department as its nominee for this honor and then was selected as top fireman from countywide nominees by a committee of citizens who are not firemen.

An employee of the Procter and Gamble Company, Alford has been a firefighter for 3½ years.

"In the past year, Scott has been involved in the work of our fire department 100 percent," according to Lyman Hardee, chief of the Eastern Pines department. "He has extended his duties as a firefighter to those of community relations, station and apparatus upkeep and repair, representation at all county and state association meetings and has worked through all stages of planning for the state convention.

In addition, Alford has "upheld the morals and standards expected of a volunteer and has given freely without a second thought," Hardee said.

Alford has been appointed to the Pitt County Hazardous Materials Commission, serves on the fire brigade at the Procter and Gamble plant, and has spoken to Scouting and public school classes on fire safety and fire prevention.

He has attended numerous schools on such topics as handling of hazardous materials and fireground management and took part in an initial company tactical operations school at the National Fire Academy in Maryland.

Amtrak Rerouting Proposal Drawing Fire From Cities

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Columbia Mayor T. Patton Adams is trying to generate enough political pressure to prevent Amtrak from cutting its service between Columbia and Raleigh, N.C.

At a news conference Thursday, Adams said CSX Transportation Inc. has asked Amtrak to stop serving Columbia and reroute its trains from New York to Florida as early as April.

Amtrak trains use CSX rail lines along the Eastern seaboard.

"We will not stand idly by and watch the ... service taken from the people who depend so heavily on it," Adams said.

Adams said he has contacted Sens. Strom Thurmond and Ernest F. Hollings, as well as officials in all the towns that would be affected by the route change.

The intent is to get the congressional delegations from North Carolina and South Carolina to bring pressure on CSX and Amtrak to keep the current route intact.

The change could cut service to several North Carolina cities — including Raleigh and Southern Pines — as well as the South Carolina towns of Camden, Columbia and Denmark.

"It is unthinkable that the capital cities of the two Carolinas would be without railroad passenger service," Adams said.

CSX spokesman R. Lindsay Leckie said the company wants to change the route because of the expense of maintaining the track for passenger use. CSX loses $4.5 million to $5 million a year on maintaining the line for passenger service. Freight-train lines used are allowed a lower standard of maintenance.

"We have very little local traffic on certain segments of that line," Leckie said.

"We haven't yet responded to the (CSX) request," said John Jacobson, director of public relations for Amtrak. "At this point, it should be understood, we don't make route changes lightly; we make them with great reluctance."

"There are some very strong markets along this route that are important to us, both for passenger service and financially."

Jacobson said Amtrak officials will discuss the situation with CSX.

"They have some legitimate problems," Jacobson said.

Amtrak's contract to use CSX lines runs through 1996, but Jacobson said the contract length might have little bearing on the negotiations.

Adams found out about the request on Tuesday, after CSX officials discovered the city was moving ahead with plans to relocate the Amtrak passenger station. The move is part of the city's massive effort to relocate tracks in the Congaree Vista and free up land for commercial and residential development.

"It concerns me that CSX submitted this request without informing us," Adams said.

"We bit the bullet on it when it became patently obvious that the possibility existed for moving the (passenger) station," Leckie said. "Rather than proceed in the dark, we felt it only right to notify the mayor and the other people in the area."

Nearly 38,000 passengers used the Columbia stop in 1987 and the figure has steadily increased in recent years, Adams said.

With 37,497 passengers boarding and disembarking last year, Raleigh was the 124th busiest station of Amtrak's 500 nationwide.

Raleigh Mayor Avery Upchurch said he would join the fight.

"I am simply astounded," Upchurch said after learning of the CSX plan from Adams. "It seems like no one hears the very real cry that we need mass transit in this nation. ... We can't afford to abandon these services."

Lottery Mistake

COLUMBIA, Ill. (AP) — A bartender won $10 million in the Illinois lottery after hitting the wrong button on a computer and dispensing $50 worth of unwanted tickets.

Sue Zera, 47, was working at Ollie's Tavern in this southern Illinois community Wednesday when a customer ordered $50 worth of tickets for the Saturday Lotto drawing.

She mistakenly pressed the button for Wednesday's Lotto 7 drawing and found herself with 50 lottery tickets the customer didn't want. She was forced to buy all 50 chances herself.

Although she later managed to sell 20 of the $1 tickets to friends, Ms. Zera said she felt she had lost $30 — until Thursday morning. Lottery officials called tavern owner Ollie Hoock to tell him the winning ticket had been sold in his bar, and Ms. Zera found she had won the $10 million jackpot.

"I broke down and cried," she said. "I said 'Ollie, come check these, I think I've got them.' I was crying so hard I couldn't see the numbers by then."

She declined to identify the customer who refused to buy the 50 Lotto 7 tickets.

Ms. Zera will get $500,000 a year for 20 years. After federal and state taxes, that should work out to $387,500 a year, lottery officials said.

Effects Of Acid Rain On House Paint Checked

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — While most attention on acid rain has concerned possible damage to fish and wildlife, a North Carolina State University study aims at something much closer to home — the effects of acid rain on house paint.

Researchers, under the direction of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, are subjecting thin pieces of painted wood to acid rain pollutants, then examining the paint for damage down to the microscopic level.

C. Maurice Balik, assistant professor of materials science and engineering, said the project is one facet of an EPA effort to determine whether industries producing acid rain should face restrictions.

"They want to find out if there is a problem, first of all," he said in a recent telephone interview. "If there is an incremental effect, they want to know how much it's costing people, in terms of dollars. If they decide that is an unacceptable figure, they have some hard information to impose tighter controls."

Raymond Fornes, professor of physics, and Richard Gilbert, professor of textile chemistry, are working with Balik to create a "damage function" to predict the effects of acid rain on coating materials.

"The damage function will be applied at various locations around the country, particularly the Northeastern United States," Balik said.

"One problem to be worked out is how to distinguish damage caused by sunlight and normal rainwater from that caused by acid rain."

"It is very difficult to determine what the cause of paint damage was after it has happened," Balik said. "Only by looking at very small, microscopic factors and seeing what each one does can we follow along and have a complete story. We hope to build a bridge between the harmful microscopic changes and the macroscopic ones — those such as cracking and peeling that we can all see."

Because the study is the first to examine the effects of acid rain on house paint, Balik said it was likely to receive careful scrutiny from paint manufacturers.

"We're not trying to build a better house paint. We're just trying to find out what happens to it," he said. "But the house paint industry, I'm sure, is very interested and this may help them design better paints."

The N.C. State study will be done in a laboratory, using a wide range of acid rain concentrations. But Balik said researchers elsewhere are leaving painted wood outside to be exposed to real acid rain.

Gilbert said the primary consideration is to determine whether acid rain makes it necessary to repaint structures more often.

North Carolina Church In Court On Child Labor Law Violations

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An experienced bricklayer at age 12, Travis McGee methodically placed another trowel of mortar on the brick wall he was constructing with three other youngsters.

Meanwhile, across the street in the federal courthouse, a Labor Department attorney was carefully building her case against Travis' father, Mike McGee, and other members of a North Carolina church accused of violating child labor laws.

"I feel like they should leave us alone," Travis said during a break from a demonstration of the Shiloh True Light Church of Christ's vocational education program Thursday. "We're doing the Lord's work."

The Labor Department has charged several church members and two businesses with violating federal laws against child labor. The two businesses — McGee Brothers Co. Inc. of Union County and Wendell's Woodwork Inc. of Mint Hill — are owned by church members.

The trial began Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Robert Potter and is expected to last at least through the weekend. Labor Department Attorney Patricia Craft has subpoenaed more than 50 witnesses, including some participants in the controversial program.

Church members freely admit they use their children — some as young as age 8 — at construction sites and in workshops, where they carry bricks, lay foundations, operate forklifts and operate power saws.

Pastor Rommie Purser said church elders were given permission by the owner of an abandoned bus depot across the street from the federal courthouse to set up an exhibit of work by youngsters in the program.

Purser said the exhibit would remain as long as the trial continues.

"We are asking people to come here and see what we do," he said. "We are not ashamed of it."

Besides demonstrations of bricklaying and cabinet-making, there's also examples of quilting, art, sewing and paper hanging. The program has been in existence for at least a century, Purser said, and the church has no intention of ending it.

"If you want to get into trouble, all you have to do is find a bed of bear cubs in the woods," the 72-year-old church elder said. "That's just what the Labor Department has done. These children were given to us by God. They weren't given to the Labor Department."

The dispute began in 1985 when the Labor Department received a complaint about the presence of minors working for McGee Brothers at construction sites. After an investigation, the department charged McGee Brothers with violating child-labor laws.

The 1,200-member church — which was founded around 1870 by a dissident Methodist — is based in Mint Hill, a small community outside Charlotte. Its leaders filed a civil suit against the Labor Department, contending the program was religious by nature and therefore protected by the First Amendment.

Potter subsequently dismissed the church's suit, saying "the right to practice religion freely does not include the right to jeopardize a child's health."

In October, Potter ordered that children can no longer work for the two defendant companies. Although the two companies agreed to comply, the training program was not shut down but was transferred to the church.

Meanwhile, the owners of McGee Brothers and Wendell's Woodwork continued to run the vocational program at the church's request. That caused the Labor Department to ask the court to find the companies and their owners in contempt of the order, with fines totaling more than $20,000 a day.

"We're not going to stop," said Jack Reynolds, a church member. "They can fine us and put us in jail and bankrupt us. But they're not going to stop our God-given right to do what we're doing."

The Labor Department also alleges violations of minimum wage, overtime and record-keeping provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act and says McGee Brothers owes nearly $100,000 in back wages.

"We believe the only issue left ... is whether there continues to be an employment relationship" between the defendant companies and underage children of church members, Ms. Craft said when the trial opened Tuesday.

Several participants in the program sat quietly in the courtroom Wednesday afternoon and again on Thursday as government attorneys went through piles of company records with Sam McGee, who administers the program for the church.

Economics Of Super Collider Weighed

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The superconducting super collider literally is a ring of high-energy magnets, but supporters say it's also a figurative magnet for up to $2.3 billion in annual spending in the state that wins it.

Michigan is one of seven states competing for the multibillion-dollar research center that is expected to produce insights into the nature of matter by studying collisions of subatomic particles.

Officials have proposed a site near Stockbridge, about 20 miles northeast of Jackson and halfway between the state's two largest educational institutions, the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor and Michigan State University in East Lansing.

John F. Haneski, executive director of the Michigan Superconducting Super Collider Commission, said the state would have to acquire about 8,000 acres of land for the project and move about 220 houses. But he said that investment of about $35 million would prove worthwhile.

The collider and an accompanying research center would provide jobs for janitors and nuclear physicists alike, even before the first atomic particle is split, Haneski said.

Construction would begin in 1989 with about 4,600 workers on the job, and service and support jobs would expand that number to about 6,700, said Mark P. Haas, chief economist for the Michigan Department of Commerce.

Employment would peak at 11,000 a year later and taper off as construction projects were completed. The facility would begin operating in 1995 with a full-time staff of about 3,000 scientists and support workers and a budget of $27 million a year.

"We feel between 1989 and 1995 ... this project would bring in about $2.3 billion annually to the Michigan economy," Haas said.

The super collider would be the largest public works project ever attempted, comprising an underground ring 10 feet in diameter and 53 miles in circumference. The ring would be lined with superconducting magnets that would accelerate protons to near the speed of light.

Its cost originally was estimated at $4.4 billion, but inflation and other factors have raised it to $6 billion or more.

Michigan was one of eight semifinalists seeking the facility, but New York dropped out of the running. The project would be financed by the U.S. Department of Energy.

The super collider, engaged in basic research, might not yield discoveries readily transferable to new products or manufacturing techniques. But Haneski said it still would create a "halo effect."

"It creates an environment that would be very attractive to other businesses that have a research agenda," he said. "Like enterprises seem to want to locate near like kinds of activities."

Governor Opens SBA Conference

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin opened a Small Business Administration conference on rural development today with some bragging about North Carolina.

Since he took office three years ago, he said personal income for North Carolinians has increased more than $77.5 billion — a gain of 13.7 percent.

"In three years we've totaled over $15 billion in investments by industry over the past three years," he said. "Teamwork and vision is what has given us a net gain of roughly 303,000 jobs since taking office in January 1985. And we're going to continue that."

Martin said projects to help farmers, attract new industry and improve highways are responsible for these successes.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Highway Corridor Program Necessary

North Carolina is very soon going to have to institute better policies for developing highway corridors to connect our state from the mountains to the sea.

The problem is the pork barrel nature of highway planning and construction whereby supporters of winning candidates, because of their loyalty, are privy to location and design of highways.

That system wasn't too bad in the days of Kerr Scott when secondary roads were being paved at a record rate. The funds available, after all, were going to be spent somewhere and it was just a question of who got them first. Even today the placement of primary roads or urban thoroughfare projects aren't badly done even though the pork barrel approach often prevails. The money is usually spent on needed projects, no matter what.

The real concern is that tremendously expensive highway corridors, which should follow a direct line from point A to point B, sometimes follow strange routes. That smacks of pork barrel.

Since such highways cost $7 to $8 million or more per mile to build, the potential show of gratitude is expensive, indeed. It is ludicrous to follow a philosophy that a loyal supporter of a winning candidate obtains the right to determine the design of a $100 million highway.

When the concept of the interstate highway system was born during the late President Eisenhower era, it was set out that these highways would be fully controlled access. The highways would follow established routes to take travelers north and south and east and west by the most direct routes. The states built the interstates largely with federal funds. While the states built and maintain them, they had little control over radically changing their locations. Hence the system works.

North Carolina is developing corridors, which are patterned after the interstates, connecting growth centers. The problem is the pork barrel system becomes involved and the roads don't always develop as they should be — that is as corridors to move the maximum amount of traffic safely and provide for area economic growth.

Elected officials are often worthless in protecting the public interest. In politics you don't rock the roads projects boat. Nevertheless such highways are too expensive — and too necessary — to be left to archaic political methods. Somehow North Carolina must develop a highway corridor program and provide adequate safeguards against local political interference. That will require the longest of long range planning, bipartisan support and iron clad regulations to establish that these essential highway corridors are constructed as they should be.

Campaign Slip

Sen. Albert Gore, Democratic candidate for the presidential nomination, found himself in trouble this week with North Carolina tobacco interests, even though he has already picked up the support of Sen. Terry Sanford and former Gov. Jim Hunt.

Gore was campaigning in far-off Iowa when he said during a public debate that he opposed public subsidies for the federal tobacco program and is an advocate of strong health warnings on cigarette packages and in advertising.

State supporters were horrified knowing that much of the nation's tobacco is grown in the east and cigarette manufacturing is a major state industry.

Damage control was immediate. Monday Gore said he was a strong supporter of the tobacco program, pointing out it is self supporting and requires no federal subsidies. As for the health issue he said most tobacco growers understand the need for the efforts aimed at public health.

Gore sees the necessity of building his campaign on southern states' support. Alienating the southern tobacco growing areas is not the way to go about gaining the broad base of southern support he needs.

Gore emphasized that he had grown up working in tobacco on the family farm in Carthage, Tenn. "I know everything about raising and selling tobacco," he said. "I did it for 20 years."

The candidate Gore may have worked out of this one. Tobacco growers do recognize that the health issue will not go away, even though tobacco may be partially a scape goat for some other pollution problems. What they do want to do is maintain the tobacco program which is so essential to the profitability of the tobacco growing industry. Gore's support of that program is clear — and that is what matters to the tobacco farmer.

The Meaningless Office Of VP

'The fact is that no vice president does more than operate within the constraints set down by the president or more probably by the secretary of state. You may arrange, but you do not really negotiate.'

When George Bush moves his lips these days, I hear the words of Vice President Hubert Humphrey running for president in 1968, and it pains me to recollect those difficult days.

Ten years ago this month, after a long and illustrious public career, Humphrey died a deservedly revered and honored man. He had spent more than 30 years in elected office as mayor of Minneapolis, senator from Minnesota and vice president of the United States, making our system work to the benefit of millions.

During many of those years, he talked of running for president, and in 1968, he finally got the Democratic nomination. Unfortunately, he ran as the incumbent vice president, struggling to perform an impossible act of staying close to President Johnson and far away at the same time. He lost to Richard Nixon, who had himself lost to John Kennedy in 1960, leaping toward temporary oblivion from the stepping stone of his eight years as Dwight Eisenhower's vice president.

As the 10th anniversary of Humphrey's death approaches, because I worked for or near him for a long time and edited his autobiography, reporters looking back on his career have called me, wanting to discuss his significant contributions to American society and law. When I have finished my litany of what he thought important, each reporter has remarked that all the landmark achievements I listed took place while Humphrey was in the Senate: civil rights legislation, the Peace Corps, Food for Peace, federal aid to education, Medicare, the 1963 Nuclear Test Ban Treaty.

Each reporter has then asked: "Wasn't there something as important accomplished while he was vice president?" I have paused to appear thoughtful, but I really don't need the time. The answer is simply, "No, there was nothing that came close during those four vice presidential years. The job just didn't permit it, no matter how hard Humphrey tried."

It pains me to say so, but a Spiro Agnew is as likely to do about as well as a Hubert Humphrey or a Walter Mondale or a George Bush, and a Nelson Rockefeller no better. The job of vice president prepares you to be president only in the sense that you are there in case the president dies. The rest is robotics.

It is a job of no consequence, of few real and many quite forgettable accomplishments and, more's the pity, of self-delusion that you are an irreplaceable player in important acts of state.

It begins with the Secret Service protection. Agents make you look like a president, all those men and women ready to die to protect you, all the cars and code names and walkie-talkies and guns and bulletproof vests. Air Force 2 and helicopters and agents awake outside your door while you are asleep feed the ego in wondrous ways.

And then there are the headlines and the game of "Pick Up Chips." You may be nothing in Washington, but when you attend a political fundraiser in Topeka or Tupelo or Tucson, you warrant eight-column headlines, front-page pictures and the undying gratitude of local political activists. You want to shout, "I am somebody."

The delusion continues with the national security briefings. You pretend they are just like the president's when they are really the same edited briefing material that a couple of dozen other anonymous folks at the State Department get.

"Almost the same" is how a Bush aide recently described Bush's briefings, a euphemism for "quite different, sanitized and incomplete." I once played the same charade.

Voodoo vice presidency often reaches its epiphany with the awesome statement that "I have talked to heads of state." I stood close by when Humphrey said it and thought it meant something. I heard Walter Mondale say it, and now George Bush proclaims it. It is an expression that drips with empty meaning.

Vice presidents frequently are sent to funerals of heads of state to represent our country. Their visits with living heads of state are only marginally more productive. Yet, vice presidents all brag about what those visits mean. "I can deal with a head of state, therefore, I myself can be a head of state." It is a kind of Cartesian proof of both existence and importance, but it is nonsense.

The fact is that no vice president does more than operate within the constraints set down by the president or more probably by the secretary of state. You may arrange, but you do not really negotiate. You may explain, you may request, but you do not innovate, deviate or spontaneously combust.

So set aside the "head of state" canard.

The other echo of times past comes when the vice president is asked to describe those occasions when he differed from the president on a variety of embarrassing policies. Bush on Iran-Contra questions or Humphrey on Vietnam, the ultimate defense is the same: "I have offered my points of view privately; I am loyal and I have aired my differences only to the president. I am not going to change that now that I am running for the presidency."

Norman Sherman was press secretary to Hubert Humphrey when he was vice president.

'Make-Or-Break Vote' Coming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two weeks remain before the House votes on renewed aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, but the political warfare between the opposing sides already has reached an extraordinary degree of intensity.

The only area of agreement between the two seemingly irreconcilable positions appears to be that the Feb. 3 vote in the House is so significant that all previous congressional tests on Contra aid pale by comparison.

If the House approves the request, the Senate will vote the following day. "This is a make-or-break vote," President Reagan said Wednesday. This, he added, is "the moment of truth."

Everyone agrees the vote will be extremely close. Much could depend upon what happens between now and when the vote occurs.

It is difficult to overstate the depth of the administration's commitment to the Contra cause. After the Central America peace agreement was signed last August, senior officials feared that it could turn the congressional tide against the Contras once and for all.

One official was sidelined for several weeks last summer with an illness that he attributed to stress over the fate of the Contras. Another official had an extended bout with insomnia during his vacation for the same reason.

In what critics chalk up to excessive pro-Contra zeal, former White House aide Oliver North was forced from office 14 months ago at least in part because of his behind-the-scenes — and possibly illegal — activities on behalf of the rebels.

The same fears felt by Reagan administration officials last summer when the peace agreement was signed continue to haunt them: that Nicaragua President Daniel Ortega is using the accord as a device not to create democracy but to end American backing for the Contras.

No decision has been made as yet on the amount to be requested although today's Washington Post quotes one administration official as predicting it will be "in the ballpark of $50 million."

But the principal significance of the Feb. 3 vote is that it will be the first one on a request for military aid since the peace agreement was signed. The Contras have lived off small appropriations of "non-lethal" aid and what is left from a 1986 appropriation of military aid.

The background of the debate was transformed markedly last weekend when Ortega made a number of concessions prescribed in the peace plan.

Among other measures, he lifted a six-year-old state of emergency and agreed for the first time to hold direct cease-fire talks with the rebels. They will begin next week in Costa Rica.

Congressional Democrats see Ortega's announcement as evidence the peace process is working and have criticized in vitriolic terms the administration's plan to seek additional funding for the Contras. They are questioning the administration's judgment as well as its motives, and administration officials have been responding in kind.

"The Democrats, Chris Dodd (a senator from Connecticut) and others, they want a surrender," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Wednesday. "They think surrender is the best way to achieve peace. We disagree."

Dodd replied: "These smear tactics are only further evidence of how desperate the people in the White House are to keep their failed policy alive."

Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., said the administration's goal is to "kill" the peace process. Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said more aid to the Contras means an "escalation of the war with results we could neither predict nor control."

The administration's view is that the democratic measures instituted by Ortega can be reversed at any time but that the Contras, if forced to disband, cannot be reconstituted.

And if either house votes down the aid request, the administration would be barred by congressional rules from seeking a new vote before the Sept. 30, 1988, end of the fiscal year.

"We're at a critical juncture," Reagan said Wednesday. "If Congress votes down aid this time, the decision may well be irrevocable, and if that happens it's my great fear that we will have abandoned all hope for democracy in Nicaragua and peace in Central America."

Strength For Today

The Bible has a great deal to say about wings. In Psalm 55 there is the statement, "Oh that I had wings like a dove, for then I would fly away and be at rest." In the fortieth chapter of Isaiah we find the declaration that those who wait upon the Lord shall mount up with the wings of eagles.

Here we see two divergent attitudes toward life and its problems. The psalmist wishes that he might have the wings of a dove in order to fly away from his troubles. Isaiah pictures the man of faith as one who rises above his troubles as if he were born upward on the wings of eagles.

They that wait upon the Lord do not seek the escape route. They rise up with wings as eagles, they run and are not weary, they walk and do not faint.

QUIET MOMENT — Arlie McDaniel, left, and Jim Bryant, members of the board of trustees at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, Wake Forest, take a moment to pray during a meeting Thursday involving board members, students, faculty members and alumni concerning the search for a new seminary president. The current president, Randall Lolley, has indicated plans to resign later this year because of fundamental differences with the board. (AP Laserphoto)

Groups Differ On Direction Seminary Chief Should Take

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — Conservative trustees say they want a new president who will lead a renaissance at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, but students and faculty members say they're not interested in change.

Robert Mullinax, the chairman of a 10-member advisory task force, told the seminary's presidential search committee Thursday the group wanted a president who would make no major changes in the school's direction.

"The Southeastern we know is the Southeastern we would like to continue to see," Mullinax, an alumnus, said. "It's too much to expect us to be able to embrace" fundamental changes. "That's not to say that it's perfect."

But the Rev. Robert Crowley, chairman of the trustee board and the search committee, drew a parallel between the historical Renaissance, which he called a time of "radical change," and a possible new period at Southeastern.

"There is still room for renaissance," he said. "There is still room for change. And to say that all change is bad or it's wicked or it's evil, I think, is the mindset the Middle Ages had."

Ed Sansbury, a member of the seminary library staff and the task force, sharply retorted that no need for radical change had been demonstrated.

"To come in and say 'what you've done for 37 years isn't worth a hill of beans' makes me mad," Sansbury said. "Change, yes. We need change." But he warned that the seminary community would "get fired up" if the board went too far.

The search committee, formed after W. Randall Lolley announced his resignation in the wake of conservatives' takeover of the board of trustees, met privately into the night after a sometimes acrimonious, public afternoon session.

The panel scheduled closed-door deliberations today. Crowley said he hoped the talks would produce a list of three to five finalists and that the selection would be made "as soon as possible."

"The sooner we can get a person ... I think the seminary and the (Southern Baptist) convention will be better off," Crowley, a Maryland pastor, said in an interview.

Students and faculty argued that more time should be taken. Richard Hester, president of the seminary chapter of the American Association of University Professors, noted that Lolley had planned to leave July 31 unless a successor were hired sooner and said conservatives apparently were getting impatient.

"They want him out," Hester said. The seminary has been embroiled in controversy since last October, when the board of trustees met for the first time since conservatives gained majority status.

Conservatives generally hold to an "inerrantist" view of Scripture — a belief that the Bible is literally true and its accounts of people and events are historically accurate. Moderate Baptists believe the Bible was divinely inspired but that some passages are symbolic.

The theological split has caused deep divisions within the Southern Baptist denomination. At the October meeting, conservatives seized control of board committees and declared their intention to hire more professors who hold the inerrantist view.

Most of the current faculty members are moderates but say they present all theological points of view to their students.

In a scathing statement, a group calling itself Southeastern Students for Academic Freedom accused conservatives on the search committee of paying lip service to student and faculty input.

The board "has created an atmosphere of authoritarian control, single-minded approach to theological and biblical studies devoid of open academic scholarly inquiry into truth, and patronistic paternalism requiring all individuals to be answerable to them in all matters," the statement said.

Nena L. Domingo, 34, a divinity student from Goose Creek, S.C., who read the statement, said Crowley had falsely accused Lolley of "fermenting unrest" on the campus.

Pigeon River Said Exception To N.C., Tenn. Cooperation

By KRISTI UMBREIT
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee and North Carolina have been good neighbors except where Champion Paper Co. is concerned, say East Tennessee residents and officials who are asking the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for help.

A Thursday public hearing before EPA officials drew an estimated 3,500 people concerned over a longtime dispute involving the Canton, N.C., paper mill and its pollution of the Pigeon River which flows into Cocke and Sevier counties in Tennessee.

"The state of Tennessee has a long history of working with the state of North Carolina to protect our environmental resources," said David McKinney, of the Tennessee Department of Health and Environment.

"The sole exception to this cooperative history is the Pigeon River. In fact, the Pigeon River remains grossly polluted," he said.

The majority of the people who filled the Knoxville Civic Auditorium arrived in Champion-chartered buses and sported yellow company caps and badges that read, "Don't Let Champion Fall."

Others in the audience wore red stickers reading "EPA, Let The Chips Fall and The Pigeon Live."

The EPA, which held a similar hearing last week in Asheville, N.C., is listening to public comments before deciding limits on the brown color churned from the Canton plant. In the meantime it issued a draft permit with stricter standards.

Tennesseans say the murky water has kept fish and other aquatic life from thriving and hurt the potential for recreation revenues in a region that constantly suffers from high unemployment.

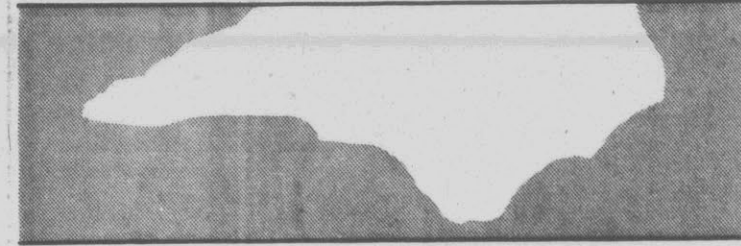

For years Champion has been operating in compliance with a North Carolina permit. However, Tennessee officials prodded the EPA to require the mill to adhere to newer, more strict federal cleanup rules.

Champion officials, who contend the new rules would put the mill out of business and eliminate 2,200 jobs, say the issue involves the discoloring of the river.

More recently, however, questions arose about whether dioxin chemicals also will be a consideration. EPA officials say they have just started taking dioxin samples from the 30-mile stretch of Pigeon River on the Tennessee side and results won't be available until spring.

Dioxin is associated with paper mills and has been linked to cancer.

IN THE STATE

Long's Decision

RALEIGH (AP) — A state Insurance Department attorney has asked Insurance Commissioner Jim Long to deny a 4.1 percent increase in auto insurance premiums, saying the industry does not need a guaranteed profit on sales.

"They are doing their duties to the stockholders," attorney Daniels Nelson said of the insurance industry. "They are trying to maximize their profits at the expense of the North Carolina public. And I don't think that is an appropriate thing to allow to happen."

Nelson's statement Thursday angered attorneys for the N.C. Rate Bureau, which filed the rate increase request on behalf of the industry.

Long, who presided over the eight-day hearing, must decide within 45 days whether to grant the increase. Consultants to the insurance department have recommended that rates be slashed between 3 percent and 6 percent.

Noise Problems

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Members of a Hickory task force say the city must take action to reduce noise at CCAir maintenance facility, which services commuter flights for Piedmont Airlines.

"Hickory has authority to do something — (CCAir) is violating the noise ordinance," said Cathie Rhyne, a member of the Noise Abatement Committee, as she held a copy of Hickory's noise ordinance in her hand.

Although committee members say they ideally would like to see the facility relocated, realistically, they said they would like to see CCAir comply with the noise ordinance or install noise buffers around the airport.

Infants Die In Fire

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Two children were killed when fire swept through their mobile home, and authorities said they believe the blaze was caused by candles being used because power had been cut off one day earlier.

Chiquita Santana Strain, 23 months, and Demarcus Frankie Strain, 7 months, were killed Thursday in a fire that broke out while they slept, said Monroe Public Safety Assistant Chief Wayne House.

The parents, Terry and Lori Strain, were able to save 3-year-old twins, Terry Lashawn Strain and Terrence Lamor Strain. Neither the parents nor the twins were injured.

Clogged Arteries

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University Medical Center has received federal approval to begin testing a new device for cutting plaque out of clogged arteries that doctors hope eventually will be able to help patients facing coronary bypass operations.

The device, known as an arterectomy catheter, "is quite a unique design that we hope will make a significant change in the way we treat this problem," said Dr. Richard Stack, director of the interventional cardiac catheterization laboratory.

The Food and Drug Administration granted Duke approval to test arteries in the legs of 20 patients. If those tests prove successful, the device will then be tested on clogged heart arteries.

Postal Statement

WILMINGTON (AP) — A federal judge must decide whether the former Kure Beach postmaster was talking to a work supervisor or a law enforcement official when she told a postal inspector she sometimes took lunch money from the till.

Faye Teague, charged with embezzling $12,000 from the U.S. Postal Service during seven years there, admitted in U.S. District Court Thursday that she occasionally took $5 or $10 from the till, but replaced it.

Mrs. Teague, who was fired Sept. 4, testified that she was shocked when Postal Inspector James Hash confronted her with the $12,000 discrepancy following a four-hour audit last August.

"He asked me if I took the money," Mrs. Teague said. She said she denied taking $12,000 but admitted the lunch money loans.

"To me, it sounds like things snowballed," Hash told the Wilmington Morning Star, saying he asked Mrs. Teague whether she always replaced all of the money she took out every time she took some.

The issue the court must settle, however, is whether Mrs. Teague's statements were properly elicited, whether she had been properly advised of her rights before she admitted taking any money.

Stricter Safety Rules Proposed

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is providing automakers with a blueprint for better protection of motorists in side-impact crashes, but the improvements are unlikely to be seen in many cars until the early 1990s.

The Transportation Department on Thursday proposed stricter automobile safety standards to protect occupants in crashes where the greatest force comes from the side. Such crashes claim more than 8,000 lives and cause about 23,000 serious injuries a year.

The proposed rules suggest improved test procedures and specifications for test dummies, and establish specific levels of protection that automobiles must provide in side-impact crashes. Industry experts have said automakers are likely to meet the new standards by putting padding and reinforcements into the doors and side panels of their vehicles.

But the proposal, known in bureaucratic terms as a "notice of proposed rulemaking," came under immediate criticism because it includes an unusually lengthy comment period of nine months before a final rule will even be considered and does not cover small trucks and minivans, both of which have become increasingly popular.

"A nine-month comment period is unheard of," snapped Clarence Ditlow, executive director for the Center for Auto Safety. During that time the automakers may attempt to roll back the provisions.

"The research and development work on this was done by 1980. We should have had a rule seven years ago," complained Ditlow, whose private consumer group petitioned the government in 1977 to develop better standards for protecting car occupants in side-impact crashes.

NHTSA officials acknowledged Thursday that no final rule is likely before 1989. Then the automakers will be given two years before they will have to begin meeting the new standards, first on 10 percent of the cars, then 40 percent the following year and finally all cars.

Under the three-year phase-in, a manufacturer's entire fleet probably would not be subject to the stricter standards until 1993, according to the timetable outlined by the federal highway safety agency.

Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., who has introduced several bills over the years calling for stricter side-impact standards for passenger vehicles, said the department's proposal falls short of what is needed because it does not cover small trucks and minivans and provides no assurance a final rule will be issued quickly.

The debate over improved safety standards to protect against side-impact crashes has been going on for more than a decade. In the late 1970s, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration began formally developing a tougher standard, but in 1982 the agency under new leadership in the Reagan administration ended the rulemaking.

Mother Gets 1-Year Sentence

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The attorney for a woman convicted of provoking her teen-age daughter's suicide by forcing the girl to work as a nude dancer says he was pleased with the leniency of her one-year jail sentence.

Broward Circuit Judge Arthur Franza "went below the (sentencing) guidelines, which was our main request," said Richard Lubin, who said he nonetheless will appeal Theresa Jackson's conviction.

Mrs. Jackson, 41, believed to be the only mother charged in a child's suicide, faced up to 25 years in prison for the three felony convictions in a widely publicized trial last October.

The defense attorney requested a bond hearing today to obtain Mrs. Jackson's release from Broward County Jail pending the appeal.

Franza, calling his decision a compromise, on Thursday sentenced Mrs. Jackson to 364 days in jail, two years of community control and three years of probation.

Prosecutor Kate Kearney had asked Franza to follow guidelines and sentence Mrs. Jackson to 3 years in prison followed by probation.

"Taking your daughter to a naked bar and watching her dance is not a proper thing for a mother to do — or acceptable," Franza told Mrs. Jackson. "You did procure a sexual performance by your own child."

All sentences were consecutive with the condition that Mrs. Jackson continue therapy at a mental health clinic as an out-patient.

"I feel good," Lubin said after sentencing. He had asked that his client be sentenced only to two years community control, under which she would be confined to her home except for work, therapy and volunteer work.

Lubin noted his client had no prior criminal record and contended that she was too emotionally fragile to handle imprisonment.

Tina Mancini went to work as a nude dancer three months before she put her mother's .357-caliber Magnum pistol in her mouth and pulled the trigger in March 1986. The prosecution argued that Mrs. Jackson forced her daughter into stripping and lived off her earnings.

The defense maintained Mrs. Jackson was a disturbed woman, herself a victim of child abuse, who could not control a headstrong teenager dreaming of fame and fortune.

Mrs. Jackson was one of five witnesses Lubin called during the 90-minute sentencing hearing in a courtroom packed with journalists and spectators.

She fought back tears as she told Franza she would always wonder what role she played in Ms. Mancini's suicide.

"I know I tried as hard as I could," she said of her parenting skills. "I realize I probably made a lot of mistakes."

"Are you still dealing with remorse?" Lubin asked.

"I'll always have to deal with it," Mrs. Jackson replied, her voice breaking. "What I'm saying is that I did not pull the trigger."

Ms. Kearney said Ms. Mancini should not be forgotten in the sentencing of her mother. "She was driven to a place where she had to expose her body to men for money," Ms. Kearney said.

Mrs. Jackson's forgery conviction resulted from her signing the name of her father, a notary public, to an altered birth certificate indicating Ms. Mancini was old enough to work at a strip joint.

Babies' Custody Unsettled After Judge Voids Contract

By KATHERINE RIZZO
Associated Press Writer

ITHACA, Mich. (AP) — A judge's decision to cancel a surrogate motherhood contract between a Michigan woman and an Arkansas man sets up another court fight over which parent would provide the best home for their infant twins.

Griati County Circuit Judge Timothy Green on Thursday voided the agreement between Laurie Yates of Ithaca and Barry Huber of Jonesboro, Ark., after Mrs. Yates decided during pregnancy to keep her babies.

A trial to determine which parent gets custody is scheduled to begin in April. In the meantime, the two families will continue to have equal time with 4½-month-old Stephanie and Anthony.

Although Michigan has no law specifically governing surrogate parent arrangements, the judge condemned the practice as clearly wrong.

"I think it goes without saying that surrogacy denigrates human dignity," the judge said. "Contracts of surrogacy are void as contrary to public policy and therefore are not enforceable."

Lisa Vogler, an attorney for the mother, said the ruling voiding the pregnancy-for-pay contract was a defeat for a lawyer who signed Mrs. Yates up as a surrogate.

Attorney Noel Keane of Dearborn specializes in matching infertile couples with women willing to undergo artificial inseminations and give up the babies at birth.

Since 1976 Keane has been responsible for arranging 199 births, including New Jersey's "Baby M." In that case, surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead also changed her mind about giving up her baby, but lost an attempt to win custody in court.

Another 47 babies conceived under Keane-arranged contracts are on the way, he said.

Keane downplayed the significance of the Michigan judge's ruling.

"It does not invalidate surrogate parent contracts in Michigan," he said. "I'll still be in business.... This is one judge in one county who has made a decision on how he feels on surrogate parent arrangements."

However, if the Michigan Court of Appeals eventually upholds Green's ruling, it would be binding throughout Michigan.

Kathleen Boyle, attorney for Huber and his wife Glinda, said a decision had not been made on whether to appeal.

A separate appeal pending in Mrs. Yates' behalf challenges the shared-time arrangement under which the twins live for two weeks at a time with each family, even though the mother has temporary legal custody.

Huber pays child support of $80 for each week the twins are with their mother.

Mrs. Yates was to have been paid $10,000, but the money has remained in an escrow account because of the litigation.

Mrs. Yates has said she volunteered to become a surrogate after reading one of Keane's newspaper ads. She underwent months of artificial inseminations and had one miscarriage before becoming pregnant with the twins.

In mid-pregnancy, the Bible led to her decision to keep her babies, she told reporters last year.

Keane said he hoped someone would file suit in federal court and trigger an examination of what he views as the main issue: "If there's a right of procreation, what is it and how well is it protected?"

Girl's Frostbitten Legs Removed

By THOMAS P. WYMAN
Associated Press Writer

GARY, Ind. (AP) — A 9-year-old girl whose frostbitten legs were amputated below the knee after she was locked and abandoned in a freezing house faces further surgery to determine whether infection remains in her limbs, her doctors said.

The legs of 9-year-old Darlwin Carlisle of Gary were removed Thursday about six inches below the knee, at about the level of a high-top gym shoe, doctors said.

"It wouldn't surprise me if she was the kind of kiddo who gets up right away," said Dr. Victoria Dvovich, the orthopedic surgeon who removed the girl's legs during a 90-minute operation at Chicago's Wyler Children's Hospital.

"Things look very good, much better than we expected," Dvovich said.

The girl will undergo surgery again Saturday, Dvovich said, but further amputation probably will not be necessary.

Benefactors moved by her courage sent dozens toys, brightly colored balloons and cash. Stuffed animals that piled up and extended the length of her hospital room. "She wanted to line them all up. She smiled when they reached end to end," said social worker Anna Feldman.

"She said she wanted to look at all of them one more time, and then she was going to give them all away to other children," said Jeff Griffin, the mortgage company services contractor who found her Sunday. "It was her idea."

Griffin heard the child's cry for help and found her locked in a room in the supposedly empty house when he and a co-worker began boarding up the unheated building.

Before the operation, she wrote a neatly written handwritten note to well-wishers:

"Thank you to all the wonderful people for their kind thoughts, gifts, cards and helping me through my time of need. Love, Darlwin Carlisle."

Dvovich said the girl bore no ill feelings toward her mother, Darlwin Britt, 24, of Gary, who was charged with felony neglect and ordered held in lieu of $50,000 bond. The charge carries a prison term of up to 20 years.

"She's concerned about her mother and what's happening to her," Dvovich said.

Three hours before the surgery, the girl telephoned her mother in the Lake County Jail at Crown Point. Authorities arranged the call because the child had been asking about her mother, said sheriff's department spokesman Mike Higgins.

"It was a brief, private call. We don't know what was said between them," Higgins said.

The girl had been exposed to severe cold three to five days, said Dvovich. Her room at the house was padlocked and barricaded by a refrigerator, police said. Ms. Britt had promised to bring her daughter some milk the day before she was found but did not return, according to court documents.

Physical rehabilitation will begin Monday, if all goes well, and she may leave the hospital the end of next week to begin long-term rehabilitation, Dvovich said.

Meningitis Vaccine

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials have recommended a new vaccine against meningitis for children over 18 months old, but researchers say a vaccine for younger infants is still needed.

The new vaccine protects against a bacterial infection called Haemophilus influenzae type B, which can cause complications including an estimated 10,000 to 12,000 cases of meningitis each year in children under 5.

Priests' Release A Priority

By MARGARET HABERMAN
 Associated Press Writer
 SIGNAL MOUNTAIN, Tenn. (AP)
 — In a spare bedroom at his parents' house, a young Protestant has worked for nearly five years to gain release of Roman Catholic priests imprisoned in China for their religious beliefs.
 John Davies, 29, first was spurred to start his non-profit, non-denominational "Free the Fathers" by a 1983 article in a local newspaper about the plight of four elderly Jesuits.

 "At the time, they were right about the same age as my late grandfather," he said. "It just sort of seemed horrible to me that priests could still be imprisoned. People talk about how open China is now, which it's not."
 Davies, a United Methodist, said some people find it unusual that the project is headed by someone who isn't Catholic.
 "I just feel kind of called to do this," he said. "We're all Christians and I'm sort of an ecumenical-type person."
 Bishop James Niedergeses of Nashville, one of several Catholic clergy on the group's 12-member advisory board, praised Davies and his work.
 "He's a very religious man and he respects our religious freedom," Niedergeses said. "We are Americans and that's what we stand for."
 Up to 100 priests are detained in China, many spending decades in prison, Davies said. "These people have really been forgotten. I tell people all the time that if nobody knows that these men are in prison, what possible incentive do the communists have to release them? None whatsoever."
 In operation, Free The Fathers is virtually a one-man crusade. Davies writes newsletters, solicits donations and enlists the aid of his family and a few friends to help with mailings and some of the other work.
 He has testified before the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee, met with State Department officials and participated in a protest across the street from the Chinese Embassy last summer. He also organized a bell-ringing project in the state, petition drives and letter-writing campaigns to both Chinese and American officials to seek the priests' release.
 Amnesty International, the human rights group, said in a report in June that many religious leaders have been jailed in China since the 1950s for exercising their right to freedom of religion.
 Arrests and harassment of Catholics, Protestants and Tibetan Buddhists involved in peaceful religious activities continue, the report said.
 Davies said the State Department could do more to help. A department officer, Bruce Donahue, said it is monitoring the situation and seeking release of religious prisoners through diplomatic channels.
 Zheng Wanzhen, press counselor for the Chinese Embassy, denied that the priests' arrests involve religion.

 He said China's constitution assures religious freedom through independent church organizations such as the Chinese Patriotic Catholic Association which has dioceses and bishops, but no ties to the pope.
 The four priests who originally caught Davies' attention had been arrested in the 1950s, released in the late 1970s, re-arrested in 1981 with some other priests and lay Catholics and sentenced in 1983 to additional terms.
 Three of the priests, Vincent Zhu Hongsheng, 73, Stephen Chen Caijun, 69, and Joseph Chen Yuntang, 78, remain jailed and are on Amnesty International's list of prisoners of conscience. The fourth priest, Stanislas Shen Baishun, 84, died in a prison hospital in 1985.
 The re-arrests stemmed from their refusal to cooperate with the government-sponsored patriotic organization and their continued loyalty to the Vatican, the Amnesty International report said.
 Davies also has taken up the cause of several other priests, including Bishop Peter Joseph Fan Xueyan, 79, and Bishop Ignatius Gong Pinmei, 87.

He keeps tabs on the priests via a network of information through people who are allowed to correspond with the prisoners, native Chinese priests in the United States, nuns in Southeast Asia and other avenues.

Children Get Warm Clothes

By STEPHANIE NANO
Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — When thousands of Cleveland area schoolchildren put on their shoes this winter, pull a knit cap over their ears or tug on a pair of mittens, they'll owe their warmth to a retired businessman.

They are the beneficiaries of a program begun 19 years ago by Morrie Sayre, who was distressed by the tattered condition of shoes on youngsters in the neighborhood of the downtown Central YMCA.

"I used to see these kids walking down the street, and I couldn't believe what I saw," said Sayre.

He contacted a friend, got on a radio program, and asked people to send in their used shoes. Some 4,000 pairs, or "four rooms of shoes," arrived at the YMCA, he said.

His "Shoes For Kids" program has grown over the years, switching from used to new shoes, and expanding to socks, mittens, gloves and knit caps.

"In a way 'Shoes for Kids' is a misnomer, but that's what we're known as," said Sayre's son, Donald, a professional fundraiser who returned home to Cleveland about six years ago to head the program.

This year the program distributed some 60,000 pairs of shoes and socks and about 40,000 knit caps and 40,000 pairs of mittens and gloves. The items were once distributed only through Cleveland Public Schools but the program now includes some suburban schools, parochial schools and hunger centers.

"We give these as a gift of love, not charity. We want the kids to know there are people out there that love them," said Morrie Sayre.

At East Madison Elementary

School in Cleveland, Sayre joined in the fray as a group of youngsters received their shoes recently. Teachers and school aides searched through shoe boxes looking for the right size for each child.

The youngsters helped, yanking off too-tight shoes for their classmates and proudly displaying their new shoes for news photographers.

"How's that? All set?" asked Sayre as he finished fitting a pair of shoes on a 4-year-old who said his name was "Dennis the Menace."

"I think (the program) is a good idea. It's great," said Mary Lloyd, a child development teacher at East Madison. "You can tell a difference when the weather gets bad. (The students) just don't have adequate clothing and shoes."

Donald Sayre said "Shoes For Kids" buys the shoes and other items with donations it receives. This year's goal is $250,000.

The program buys overruns from shoe and clothing manufacturers at below wholesale prices. Donald Sayre said they try to find "Cleveland-winter-type shoes" or sneakers to hand out. Most of the knitted goods are also purchased, but some are handknit by volunteers.

The program operated under auspices of the Central YMCA until it recently incorporated and received its own tax-exempt status.

The Cleveland school system donates storage space and a small supply of shoes is kept on hand all year to meet special requests.

Donald Sayre now wants to streamline the fund raising aspect with a computerized mailing list.

"I wish the need wasn't there, but every year we get more and more requests for help," he said.

Pets Need Proper Identification

DEAR ABBY: Please deliver this message to all your readers who own pets: If you love your pet, take the time to fit it with a comfortable collar and identification tag with the animal's name and telephone number. Even though you say your pet never leaves your yard, there is always that one time when it does get out, goes a little too far and gets lost. This is equally true for cats.

You could avoid the pain and anguish of running a "lost pet" ad, calling the pound, or putting up signs on telephone poles describing your lost pet.

Abby, our cat has a collar with his name, our name, address and phone number on his metal tag. If he ever gets lost, we're hoping that whoever finds him will care enough to call us.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

It is as hard on animal lovers who find lost pets with no identification as it is on those who lost them. — J.K., LONG BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR J.K.: Every animal lover who has ever lost (or found) a pet will realize the importance of your message. And I hope that those who haven't as yet found the time to get a collar and identification tag for Tuffy or Fluffy will be moved to do so.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two married daughters, "Linda" and "Carol." Linda just told me that Carol confided that she has been having an affair with another man while her husband is at work. Carol's husband is very jealous, and if he ever caught Carol with another guy, he would kill her — and the guy for sure.

Linda said she tried to talk some sense into Carol, but she wouldn't listen. I want to let Carol know that I know she is having an affair so I can get her to realize before she wrecks her marriage that she is playing with dynamite. But she'll ask me how I found out, and I can't tell her that Linda told me because she made Linda promise not to say anything. I also promised Linda I wouldn't tell Carol that she (Linda) told me.

What should I do? — STUMPED
DEAR STUMPED: Since Linda is the person in whom Carol confided, she would be the one to urge Carol to seek counseling before this affair gets her into serious trouble. Obviously something is seriously wrong with Carol's marriage. And if it's not too late, Mother, you might lend your daughter some support by trying to build a closer relationship with her.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy and how to handle the pain of growing up. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. MRS. OWENS

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday

The wedding ceremony of Wanda Gail Elks and Dennis Franklin Owens took place Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Grimsley Free Will Baptist Church.

The Rev. Donald Fader conducted the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Joseph Elks of Farmville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Clay Crawford of Maury.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was escorted by her father. She wore a formal gown made of satin and accented with chantilly lace and English net. The flowing skirt, which extended into a semi-length cathedral train, was edged with lace ruffles. She wore a hat accented with chantilly lace and pearls and designed with a side bow and a fingertip-length veil. Her bouquet consisted of yellow roses, carnations, lilies of the valley, narcissus and baby's breath.

Brenda Elks of Farmville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a deep lavender taffeta dress trimmed with lace. She carried a long-stemmed yellow rose accented with baby's breath, greenery, and yellow streamers.

Bridesmaids were Becky Dunn of Falkland, Sissy Rackley of Snow Hill, and Suzette Wilson of Farmville.

They wore light lavender dresses made of taffeta and lace and carried flowers identical to those of the maid of honor.

Kimberly Crawford of Maury, sister of the bridegroom, served as flower girl. Her dress was of the same fabric and color as that of the bridesmaids. A lace ruffle edged the bottom of the dress. She carried a basket with lavender ribbons.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Michael Elks, brother of the bride, of Castle Hayne and Keith Murphy of Snow Hill.

A program of organ music was provided by Mrs. W.C. Mercer. "One Hand, One Heart" and "Wedding Prayer" were sung by soloist Mrs. Bobby Harper.

A reception given by the bride's parents was held in the church fellowship hall.

The couple's residence will be in Maury.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended Farmville Central High School and Pitt Community College. The bride is employed by Revco Drug Stores and the bridegroom is an employee of Milton Elks Electric.

Bomb Blast Kills 17

He quoted Ghaffar Khan as having said, "Bury me in the free land, in a place where the call for peace and brotherhood has risen, that is, in Jalalabad, in the soil of Afghanistan."

Ghaffar Khan was a native of Pakistan's Peshawar district, which lies along the Afghan border, but he was more revered in India than in Pakistan. He considered Jalalabad his home because it lies in the heart of the Pathan region, now split by the Afghan-Pakistan border.

His last wish was to be buried in his garden.
Ghaffar Khan opposed the partition of British India in 1947 into the independent nations of India and Pakistan. He denounced the Pakistani government as a tool of the West.

He was an early disciple of Hindu pacifist Mohandas K. Gandhi's nonviolent form of protest and became one of the most prominent Moslem leaders to stand beside Gandhi and India's first prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru.
After partition, he went to Pakistan, where he was jailed for 15 years before being allowed to go to London for medical treatment. Afghanistan then granted him asylum.

Najib used the occasion of Ghaffar Khan's funeral to address the question of an end to the Soviet Union's eight-year military presence in Afghanistan.
He asserted that there were no Soviet troops in 15 of Afghanistan's 18 provinces and said "the withdrawal of Soviet forces is awaiting the results of the Geneva talks." The U.N.-sponsored talks between Afghanistan and Pakistan are scheduled for February.

Once inside Afghanistan, deep booms that sounded like surface-to-surface fire echoed in the distance.
"This is all outgoing fire," Afghan soldier Ramatollah told a reporter. "We are trying to protect you. We are trying to provide cover before they fire at us from across the border."

Ramatollah, who like Ghaffar Khan belongs to the Pathan tribe that lives in both Pakistan and Afghanistan, was referring to the Afghan guerrillas.
A gangly figure with a bulbous nose, Ghaffar Khan led an unsuccessful movement for the creation of autonomous "Pushistan" province in what is now northeast Afghanistan and northwest Pakistan.

His trademark was the color red, used by his political and social welfare organization, Servants of God.
Ghaffar Khan's death after a long illness drew a flood of condolences from as far away as Moscow. Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi rushed to Peshawar to offer sympathy to Ghaffar Khan's son, 72-year-old Wali Khan, leader of Pakistan's leftist Awami National Party.

In Afghanistan, the Kabul government declared four days of official mourning. India declared today a national holiday to honor Ghaffar Khan.
President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq of Pakistan and his prime minister, Mohammad Khan Junejo, visited Peshawar on Thursday to pray for Ghaffar Khan's soul.

Duchess Unharmed

Republican Army flag, but the IRA normally carries the green-white-gold tricolor of the Irish Republic. At earlier demonstrations Thursday, IRA supporters carried the Irish flag.

The duchess, the former Sarah Ferguson, arrived in New York City on Wednesday to attend a gala Broadway benefit performance Thursday night of "The Phantom of the Opera." She was due to depart for London today.

Francis Corniche, the British Embassy spokesman who was in New York with the duchess, said New York police "do a very fine job. ... They anticipate all sorts of things that, thank goodness, do not happen."
State Department press officer Nancy Beck released a statement later in the morning saying: "At 11:17 p.m., an assailant wielding a furled green flag attached to a six-foot solid wood pole about 2 inches in diameter charged at the visiting Duchess of York at she arrived at Waldorf-Astoria.

"Two security agents of the State Department's diplomatic security service grabbed the man before he reached the duchess. She was immediately rushed inside the hotel by other members of the department's protective detail. She was unharmed in the incident.

"According to Jacob Wohlman, special agent in charge of her protective detail, the suspect ... was pushed back through the line of accompanying press by agents ... (where) he was subdued and wrestled to the ground. ... He has been charged with attempted assault on the duchess and assault on a federal agent."

Earlier Thursday night, about 50 IRA supporters picketed outside the theater as Sarah pulled up in a Phantom V Rolls Royce.

Pact

Under the new agreement, the two nations are to form a 4,200-member joint military force, including infantry, armored and artillery battalions.

West Germany's chief government spokesman, Friedhelm Ost, said that on Oct. 1 about 60 officers from the two countries are to meet in Boeblingen, West Germany, to begin work on setting up the force.

Earlier Thursday, Italian Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti cautioned that the French-German defense council could be seen as diminishing the importance of the contributions of other NATO nations to the alliance.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has expressed similar reservations about the council.

Abortion

Steglich said the vigil presented an opportunity for people to discuss their opinions and exchange ideas.
"NOW is committed to action, to take action to bring women into full participation in American politics and culture...the key phrase is action," she said.

"This is an example of an action. We don't just sit around, we do something that makes an active statement. This is only one of the issues the group is concerned with," she added.

But other members of the community have different feelings regarding the anniversary of the court decision.
"NOW is very small in comparison to the rest of the woman who feel very much opposed to abortion," Mrs. Sturz. "I think it's such a shame that a woman has a right to kill her own child at her convenience," she said.

"Members of NOW don't seem to realize that these babies are future women that they're denying a right to life," she added.

Governor Arraigned

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham and his brother pleaded innocent today to criminal charges accusing them of lying about a $350,000 campaign loan.

A March 9 trial was scheduled for the embattled governor and his brother Willard, who was his 1986 campaign treasurer.

Mecham, also facing possible impeachment by the Arizona House and an almost certain recall election, pleaded "Not guilty," in a brief appearance in Maricopa County Superior Court before Commissioner Patrick O'Neil.

His brother's plea was entered in a separate arraignment by an attorney.
O'Neil said the Mechams' cases would be assigned to Judge John Seidel, with a pre-trial conference scheduled for Feb. 17.

Each defendant will remain free on their own recognizance. The governor cannot leave the state unless he receives court approval or the travel is in the "official performance of public office," O'Neil said.

When Mecham arrived at the courthouse this morning he was asked by reporters whether he was apprehensive. He replied, "When you have a clear conscience and you're innocent, why should you be apprehensive?"

A state grand jury indicted Mecham two weeks ago on six counts of fraud, perjury and filing false documents in the failure to report a $350,000 campaign loan. His brother was indicted on three similar counts and also was to be arraigned.

On Thursday, the governor acknowledged that he told a group of lawyers earlier this week he suspects someone might be using laser beams to spy on conversations at his Capitol office and his home.
The governor mentioned that he keeps a radio playing at all times to keep out laser beams, said Ernest Calderon, one of the lawyers.

electing the board — six members from residency districts elected by at-large vote — and the General Assembly-passed 6-3 plan be thrown out, even if the U.S. Justice Department gave its approval to the 6-3 plan.

Then a week later, the U.S. Justice Department, in a letter dated Dec. 29, rejected the 6-3 plan.
In an effort to settle the suit and come up with an acceptable election plan, commissioners then offered a compromise — have one member of the board elected from each of the six new districts called for in the 6-3 plan. The other three commissioners would be nominated from districts formed by combining predominately black Districts 1 and 2, Districts 4 and 5, and Districts 3 and 6, in the primary election, then elected by at-large vote in the General Assembly.

Garrett said that proposal was rejected by black leaders, who then, as an alternate to the preferred six district only plan, suggested that the "three" members of the board be both nominated and elected by voters from the combined districts.

In addition to the executive session, commissioners this morning gave approval for the construction — with county equipment — of a 300-foot long temporary access road to a speculative industrial building to be built between Ayden and Grifton.

The board also approved bids received for the county's banking business and designated Branch Banking and Trust Co. as the official depository for county funds for the next two years.

Devils Slip By Tar Heels, 70-69

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
CHAPEL HILL — It was a situation that seemed tailor-made for a typical North Carolina comeback, but Robert Brickey and his Duke teammates refused to let it happen. Brickey blocked Jeff Lebo's shot in the final seconds as Duke held off North Carolina, 70-69, Thursday night in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball action.

"I'm glad we won it defensively," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski. "That makes me feel even better."

The win was only the second by a visiting team at the Dean E. Smith Student Activities Center where the Tar Heels won 23 of 24 previous games since the building opened in 1986.

The Tar Heels trailed most of the game, but made one final charge in the final five minutes and were able to tie the score twice in the last two and a half minutes. But each time, Duke regained the lead.

Danny Ferry gave the Blue Devils a 70-69 lead with 52 seconds remaining when he canned one of two free throw attempts.

The Tar Heels had a chance to set up a possible game-winning shot following a turnover by Duke freshman Phil Henderson after a scramble for the ball with 16 seconds remaining but failed to convert as Lebo missed from the outside and Pete Chilcutt's tip-in attempt was also off the mark. The ball, though, went out of bounds off Duke with five seconds remaining, giving UNC one last chance.

UNC inbounded the ball and Lebo took a shot from the right baseline but Brickey, who had been guarding J.R. Reid, dropped off and blocked it to give the Blue Devils the win.

"We didn't get the shot like I diagrammed," UNC coach Dean Smith said of the Tar Heels' final play. "I wanted to get the ball to J.R. at the end. Chilcutt's tip should have gone."

Krzyzewski said Duke had a two-fold plan on the final play.

"On the last inbound play, I wanted Danny to cover whoever had the inbound just so they wouldn't get the lob and to watch Lebo and Ranzino Smith," he said. "We especially wanted to watch Lebo."

"Take away the lob and put pressure on the shot. It's going to be a shot, they don't even have time for a fake. Attack the shooter and Robert did. He got a piece of the ball."

Duke took control of the ballgame early, jumping out to a quick seven-point lead and gradually built it up to as many as 14 points on a jump hook by Danny Ferry with 6:58 remaining in the first half.

But the Tar Heels rallied back to pull within three.

Reid started things off with a free throw. Pete Chilcutt followed with a basket inside. Strickland was called for a charge at the other end.

Lebo then broke through for a three-point play in the paint to make it 29-22 with 6:06 to go.

Strickland missed at the other end and Lebo fed Chilcutt for another two points to make it 29-24.

Ferry countered for Duke to make it 31-24 but Scott Williams and Kevin Madden each scored to pull UNC back within 31-28 with 4:31 to go.

But that was as close as the Tar Heels would get. Duke regrouped and held off UNC for a 44-39 halftime advantage.

"I don't know if the beginning was more Duke or if I didn't have us ready to play," Smith said. "Duke did a good job defensively in the first half. Maybe it was because we are young or maybe it was that we were not really sharp. I think more of a factor was Duke's great play."

While pre-game attention focused on the matchup between Reid and Ferry, one of the key factors turned out to be 6-7 forward Billy King's defensive job on Lebo.

"I think that King's job on Lebo was one of the key factors in the game," Krzyzewski said. "I like Jeff Lebo. I think he's one of the best. It's the ultimate compliment that we put Billy King on him."

"We just thought it would be tough for him to shoot over a taller player."

As it was, Lebo shot two for 14 from the field, including one of seven from three-point range.

Reid had 10 quiet points in the first half but scored 17 in the second half.

including 12 in the final 12 minutes, when the Tar Heels rallied from an eight-point deficit.

"Both teams were so tired in the second half," Krzyzewski said. "That's why I was amazed at how fresh J.R. looked. What a player."

The Blue Devils alternated players on Reid as John Smith, Brickey and Ferry all took turns. For their efforts, Brickey and Smith both picked up four fouls apiece, but, more importantly, didn't foul out.

"We just have to tell them to play without fouling," Krzyzewski said. "That's defensive discipline."

And while Krzyzewski said he was happy with his team's defense on the 6-9 sophomore, he still wound up the game's leading scorer with 27 points.

"I moved a little quicker and got the ball (in the second half)," Reid said. "When it's crunch time, I wanted to get the ball and try to get a victory for my team. Nobody wants to come out in those situations."

The Tar Heels tied the game for the first time since the opening minutes when Williams slammed through a miss by Reid to make it 67-67 with 2:41 remaining.

Duke quickly regained the lead when Strickland nailed two free throws.

Reid scored inside with 1:24 to go to knot the score at 69-69 but that only set the Blue Devils up for last-second heroics.

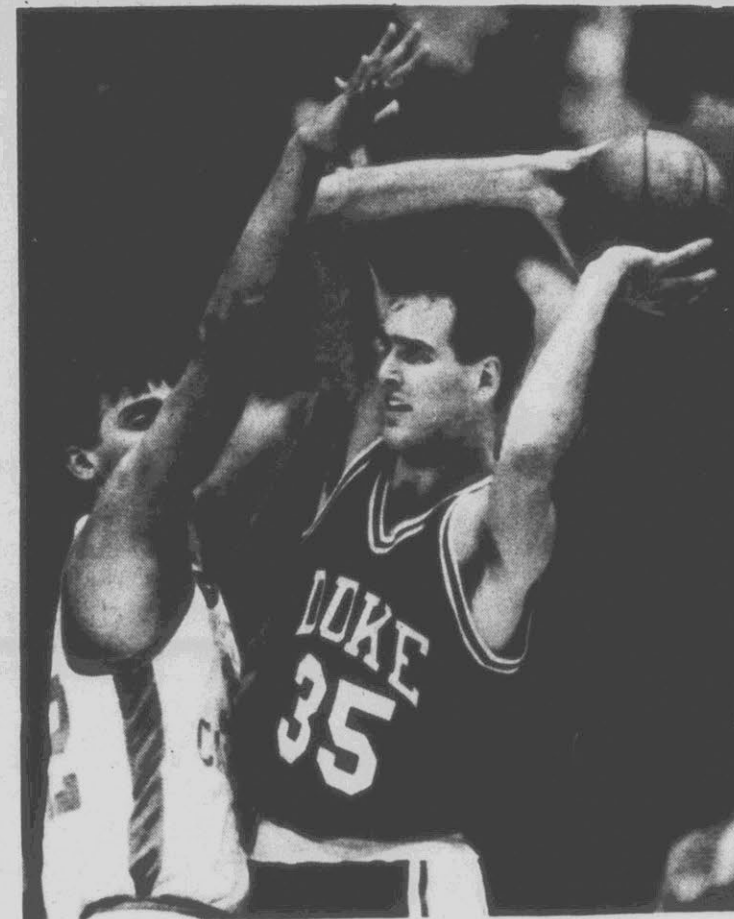

"We got into a position to win the game and that has to be credited to our defense," Smith said. "We had more turnovers in the first half and they had more in the second half."

Duke improves to 11-2 and 2-1 in the ACC while UNC drops to 13-2 and 2-1.

"Duke is a great team and they played great defense tonight," Reid said. "We built a hole for ourselves in the first half."

Strickland led Duke with 22 points, while Ferry added 19.

Under Pressure
Duke's Danny Ferry (35) looks for an open teammate to pass to as he is pressured by North Carolina's Pete Chilcutt (32) during the first half of play Thursday night in the Smith Center on the UNC campus. CHAPEL HILL — The only way the over-hyped match-up between North Carolina's J.R. Reid and Duke's Danny Ferry could have satisfied all the pre-game attention it received would have been if those two had been the only two players to step on to the floor at the Dean E. Smith Student Activities Center Thursday night.

"I guess you could have a half-court contest and say J.R. and Danny, go out and play," said UNC coach Dean Smith. "(But) you don't play one on one. Basketball is the type of game that is a team game."

And in this case, it was Ferry's Duke Blue Devils that came away the winners, defeating the Tar Heels, 70-69. It was only the second time since the Smith Center opened in 1986 that the visiting team had come away victorious.

As the respective leaders of their teams, though, Reid and Ferry were the focal point of pre-game discussion and analysis. After all, both players lead their team in scoring and both are front-court players in the 6-9 to 6-10 range.

But the similarities really begin and end there.

Reid, a 6-9 sophomore from Virginia Beach, Va., is a strong inside player whose game is a combination of power and quickness. He came into the game averaging 19.7 points per game, tops in the Atlantic Coast Conference. He also chips in with an average of 8.3 rebounds per contest.

Ferry, a 6-10 senior from Bowie, Md., is a finesse player who like to drift outside and shoot the 3-pointer as well as a wide variety of perimeter shots. Ferry came into Thursday night's contest with averages of 18.6 points and 7.5 rebounds per game, both team highs.

So how much did the two actually match up against each other? Ask Danny Ferry.

"Not very often," Ferry said. "I don't think he matched up on me very often (either). We wanted to have Robert Brickey or John Smith guard him, just trying to face guard him. I was on Scott Williams most of the game."

By game's end, Reid had accumulated 27 points while Ferry had 19. So what about the match-up?

"We didn't even check each other much in the game," Reid said. "I checked him for a span of about eight minutes. I don't think he checked me for more than two or three plays."

"We have good defensive players on the team who did a good job on Danny to try to make him earn the points he did get tonight."

So I guess what these guys are trying to say is that individual matchups are not as important as team matchups.

"There are five guys on a team," Ferry said. "No player is good on a basketball team unless he has good players around him."

Well put, because in the end, with the score 70-69, the ball ended up in the hands of another.

The Tar Heels' Jeff Lebo launched a shot in the waning seconds of regulation that could have won it, but Duke's Robert Brickey blocked it to preserve the win for the Blue Devils.

McCray Helps Akeem Celebrate

By The Associated Press
Rodney McCray was Houston's surprise gift for Akeem Olujuwon's 25th birthday.

McCray, averaging 11.4 points this season, scored 22 points and grabbed 10 rebounds before fouling out late in the game Thursday night as the Rockets defeating the Milwaukee Bucks 116-103.

"I was just trying to do the things that I've done for four years," McCray said. "I looked at a couple of films from last year. I was quicker and had more confidence last year."

"I haven't been aggressive enough at either end. Tonight was different."

In other NBA games, it was Atlanta 101, Cleveland 93, and Denver 115, Los Angeles Lakers 113.

"McCray did a great job tonight; it was a good team effort," Olujuwon said.

Of course Olujuwon had a celebration of his own, scoring 28 points and pulling down 12 rebounds.

The Rockets began the game with a 12-2 burst and led 33-28 at the end of the first period behind 14 points by McCray.

"The great start for them is a problem for us," Milwaukee Coach Del Harris said. "They had 18 points in the first six minutes. There was no question they were good tonight. They hit their shots and we didn't."

Randy Breuer led the Bucks with 25 points and Terry Cummings had 24.

Nuggets 115, Lakers 113

Michael Adams hit two free throws with two seconds left to give Denver the victory. It was the first time the Nuggets have beaten the defending NBA champions at home since Dec. 13, 1985.

Los Angeles had won 10 straight games, including playoffs, between the teams.

Denver led 104-96 when the Lakers went on a 9-1 run to tie the game at 105. Los Angeles took a 111-108 lead on a Kareem Abdul-Jabbar basket before a three-point play by Denver's Jay Vincent evened the score with 1:05 left. Baskets by Vincent and the Lakers' James Worthy kept the game deadlocked before Magic Johnson missed a long hook shot with the 24-second clock running out and Denver's Bill Hanzlik grabbed the rebound.

Adams was fouled as he drove to the basket, setting up the winning free throws.

"It's tough being there," Adams said of the game-deciding pressure. "I don't know if I'd like it every night. But obviously it's a challenge and you do the best you can."

Vincent led Denver with 23 points and had a season-high 12 rebounds. Worthy led the Lakers with 22 points.

Hawks 101, Cavaliers 93

Dominique Wilkins scored 28 points to lead Atlanta. Glenn Rivers added 15 points and 12 assists for the Hawks.

Wilkins scored 10 of his points in a 25-10 Atlanta spurt that put the Hawks ahead 57-44 at halftime as Atlanta went on to post its 12th victory in its last 15 games.

Brad Daugherty led Cleveland with 25 points.

East Carolina's Pirates, after their heart-breaking loss to American University, 75-69, in overtime on Monday, head out on the road for a meeting with the Richmond Spiders on Saturday.

Tipoff at the Robins Center on the Richmond campus is 7:30 p.m.

Meanwhile, East Carolina's Lady Pirates, still seeking their first Colonial Athletic Association win, plays host to Richmond on Saturday and William & Mary on Monday. Both games start at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Spiders come into the game following a stunning 58-54 upset at the hands of home-standing James Madison on Wednesday night. The loss was the first for the Spiders, who were an overwhelming choice to win the CAA's basketball championship this winter.

The Pirates, who had opened with a loss at George Mason, won its first CAA game of the year at James Madison and then downed Navy before their loss to American. In that game, the Pirates fought back from as far down as 10 points and went to the line with a one-and-one with one second left in the ball game.

Gus Hill, who had hit on 13 of 15 shots at the strip prior to the shot, missed, however, and American took control early in the overtime and went on to record the win.

"It's just a devastating loss," Pirate coach Mike Steele said. "We played just as hard as we possibly could, but we just didn't play very smart. To shoot only 41 percent for the game and be in a position for the win at the end is amazing, but we were there and did not capitalize."

The loss dropped the Pirates to 6-9 overall and to 2-2 in the CAA standings.

Richmond was 12-2 and 3-0 prior to traveling to James Madison on Wednesday night and suffering the upset loss.

Still, Steele feels that the Spiders are an outstanding team. "Richmond is certainly the class of our conference, and it will be a tough assignment for us to play them on the road. I'm not too concerned about our players' frame of mind because I think they'll bounce back. We've got a few days to get over the American game."

"My concern is Richmond because they have so many ways to beat you. (Peter) Woolfolk will give us trouble inside with our lack of size, as well as Steve Kratzer, and their guards are quick and very good."

Pirates Challenge Spiders; Women Host League Foes

And Steele thinks that Richmond's loss will have an effect on the game. "Obviously, good teams come back and play harder after a loss and Richmond will probably play one of its better games of the year. Our best chance could have been with them undefeated and, maybe, looking past us," Steele said. "But we can't be concerned with that; we just have to get ready to play ourselves."

Richmond holds a 29-21 lead in the series between the two teams, which saw a split last year. ECU won in Greenville, 78-70, but lost in Richmond, 62-60.

Prior to the loss to Madison, Richmond had lost only to #2 ranked North Carolina, 87-76, and to cross-town rival Virginia Commonwealth, 72-53. Among their wins is a 73-67 road win over Georgia Tech.

The Spiders are paced by Woolfolk, a 6-5 senior forward, with a 19.4 scoring and 8.8 rebounding average. Rodney Rice, a 6-3 senior guard, is next with a 15.6 scoring mark.

Scott Stapleton, a 6-4 sophomore forward, averages 8.8 points while 6-8 senior center Kratzer hits at an 8.4 pace. Point guard Ken Atkinson, a 6-4 sophomore who was the Rookie of the Year in the CAA last season, averages 7.6 points and 5.7 assists a game.

Gus Hill continues to lead the Pirates in scoring with a 17.6 average while Reed Lose in at 15.7.

East Carolina returns home following the game to host William & Mary on Wednesday.

Cheerleaders, Dancer Place In Competition

Two East Carolina University support groups for athletics — the Pure-Gold Dancers and the ECU varsity cheerleaders — recently performed in national competition for the NCAA Division I-A rankings.

The Pure-Gold Dancers, who perform at halftime of ECU's home basketball games, ranked 22nd out of more than 150 collegiate teams. The dance team is coached by Lynette Johnson.

The Pirate cheerleaders placed 13th among southern I-A finalists as more than 200 varsity teams competed for this title. ECU's cheerleaders are coached by Teresa Ward.

Memphis State University's dance team won the national competition, while the University of Illinois' cheerleaders were ranked tops in their category.

Bighouse Gaines Has His Priorities

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — With 779 career victories, Winston-Salem state Coach Clarence "Bighouse" Gaines ranks second behind Kentucky's Adolph Rupp on the all-time coaching list.

But Gaines says he is more interested in making an impact on life than catching up to Rupp.

"I want to be remembered as a person who ... was a member of the Boys' Club staff up here, a guy who worked on the board of the YMCA who fought for better salaries for those people, who helped with the integration of athletics in the state of North Carolina," Gaines said. "Not as some bloke who won a bunch of damn ball games. I never bounced a ball."

After 42 years of coaching, Gaines says he has other things on his mind.

For example, he is concerned that there will be fewer coaches willing to tough out the low pay and lack of recognition that is indigenous with Division II basketball. He is more cognizant of the times when he and other black coaches had to struggle for recognition.

"When we first started, they figured we didn't have as much sense as they did," Gaines said in an interview in his office at the building named for him on the WSSU campus. "Cal Ervin spoke at the NCAA convention out at Louisville one year and they gave him the subject, 'Our Basketball.'"

Gaines says skill levels dictate how teams play basketball and not the color of skin. He points to the Boston Celtics and their tradition of fast-break basketball, and specifically he refers to Larry Bird, who is white. He said the impression then was that only blacks can play run-and-gun basketball, which he said is an unfair assessment of black skills.

"You wouldn't call what Magic Johnson and the Lakers do 'our basketball.' You could call it our basketball because our people are playing it, but when you see Larry Bird and that crowd ... they have a skill," he said.

Most of the coaches in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, of which WSSU is a member, don't earn a great salary and "there are really no spoils," Gaines said.

And for his players, Gaines says, he still is teaching the importance of an education, both in the classroom and in the world at large. He points to his team's early season trip to Springfield, Mass., to participate in a tournament which they won.

Gaines said some of his players had never even been on an airplane before the trip. He wants to see more educational and cultural opportunities for blacks before they reach college.

"We need to provide them with a greater variety of experiences so that it will leave them hungry and that they will be desirous of seeking other experiences," Gaines said.

School Ends Two-Year Loss Streak

GREENSBORO (AP) — It took two years and 48 losses, but Southeast Guilford High School finally ended their frustrating losing streak this week, at least temporarily.

"I told the team afterward that the monkey was finally off their backs," coach Reggie Peace said after his team defeated Western Guilford High School 71-56.

As the crowd counted down the seconds Tuesday, the team embraced on the court, soon joined by moms and dads, students and others who hadn't seen a Southeast Guilford victory since December 1985.

Michael Artis, who had contributed eight points to the victory, decided that a postgame basket was in order. He roared down the court toward the goal.

"I just had to slam it," he said, using basketball lingo for the old-fashioned dunk shot.

"We knew our time would come," said Chad Flowers, who grabbed a few rebounds. "We're going to win some more, too."

Wednesday, team members walked the halls without running into the usual postgame wise guys.

"You had friends going up and down the hall telling you how sorry you are," said Rudy Artis, Michael's brother, who scored 12 points.

"It was nothing really nasty," Peace said, "but after awhile even kidding gets under your skin."

"I'm awfully glad for the students, awfully glad," said Principal George Frazier.

Fortunately for Southeast, the North Carolina High School Athletic Association doesn't have records on longest losing streaks.

"But it would be safe to say it was one of the longest in the state," Rick Strunk, the association's assistant director, said of the Southeast.

Peace said the team had overcome a psychological mountain.

"They had lost for so long they didn't know how to win," he said.

He remembers a game during the Christmas holidays. The team was leading going into the fourth quarter, "but I could look in the eyes of the players and tell they were waiting for something to happen."

It did.

The coach also discovered he had to deal with a hangup unique to modern-day basketball.

"White boys have been brainwashed into thinking they are slower," said Peace, who is black. Twelve of the team's 15 players are white.

Instead of an all-night celebration, the team went home and hit the books. Wednesday was the first day of exams, a factor that muted the excitement about the big "W" on Wednesday.

Free Throws Lift Greene C.

SNOW HILL — Greene Central scored two free throws with no time showing on the clock to earn a 40-38 Eastern Plains Conference basketball victory over North Pitt Thursday night.

The Lady Rams also came away with a close victory, taking the Pant-Hers, 54-51.

North Pitt pushed out into a 12-9 lead during the first period of the contest. The Panthers continued to hold onto the lead in the second period, outshooting the Rams, 13-12, to take a 25-21 lead into the intermission.

Greene Central began its comeback in the third period, cutting the lead back to 34-31 at the horn. Then, in the final quarter, the Rams came back and finally tied it up.

Greene Central got the ball back with about a minute to go and the score tied at 38-38. The Rams were then fouled with about 20 seconds to go, but missed and North Pitt captured the rebound. The Panthers, too, missed at a game-winning shot and Greene Central's Anthony Jones was fouled as he started back down court with the ball with the clock showing :00 but before the horn sounded.

Jones sank both ends of the one-and-one to give the Rams the win.

Jones finished with 13 points to lead the Rams, and was the only player in the game in double figures.

Greene Central's girls edged out to an 11-8 lead in the first period, but North Pitt came back with an 9-8 advantage in the second. That cut the Lady Ram lead back to 19-17 at the half.

In the third period, North Pitt pulled away, 19-13, and built up a 36-32 lead. But Greene Central rallied in the final quarter, outscoring North Pitt 22-15, to post the win.

Chanel Hooker and Carolyn Atkinson each had 15 to lead Greene Central while Felicia Albritton added 12. North Pitt was led by Keisha Pilgreen with 18 while Gwen Pilgreen had 15 and Amy Heath added 11.

The Rams climb to 4-9 overall and 1-3 in EPC action while the girls are now 7-6, 3-1. North Pitt drops to 4-9, 1-3 while the girls are 5-6, 3-1.

North Pitt plays host to Charles B. Aycock tonight. Greene Central is idle until next Friday when it travels to South Lenoir.

Tyson, Holmes Battle Tonight

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Put two men in a ring for a heavyweight championship fight and anything can happen.

Mike Tyson grew up believing that. He still does, with one exception: that if Mike Tyson is one of those men, Mike Tyson is going to win.

"I believe I am a good fighter and no one in the world can beat me," the youngest man ever to hold the heavyweight boxing championship said.

Tyson, 32-0 with 28 knockouts, will get a chance to back up those words tonight when he puts his undisputed heavyweight championship on the line in a 12-round fight against former champion Larry Holmes at the Atlantic City Convention Center.

"People have different opinions, but I deal with fact," the 21-year-old Tyson said. "My stats are beating everyone in the top 10."

Holmes is not in the top 10. The 38-year-old Easton, Pa., resident is coming out of retirement in an attempt to become the oldest man ever to win the heavyweight title — surpassing Jersey Joe Walcott, who won the title at 37 years, 5 months, 17 days in 1951 by defeating Ezzard Charles.

Holmes, 48-2 with 34 knockouts, hasn't fought in the 21 months since losing a second controversial decision to Michael Spinks in an International Boxing Federation title rematch. Holmes got this shot at the title under a World Boxing Council rule that allows "outstanding former champions" to seek a title fight, provided they can pass a stringent physical.

"They say my old legs will fade, but I'll beat Mike Tyson's butt before my old legs fade," Holmes said after arriving here Wednesday. "It's a 12-round fight. I can fight a good 10 rounds and I can hold for two. The question is, can I get it?"

The "it" is a decision. Holmes has contended the judges robbed him of the title he held for seven years in the first loss to Spinks, then again when they wouldn't give it back in the second fight.

Holmes weighed in Thursday at 225 1/2 pounds, the most he has ever weighed for any of his 21 title fights. His previous high had been 223 1/2 at a 1985 defense against David Bey.

Tyson was 10 pounds lighter than Holmes.

"I am not worried about weight," Richie Giachetti, Holmes' trainer, said. "Wait 'til he takes his jacket off and you see how trim he is. His body is more proportioned now than it has been in a long time. That's what I am looking at. I am not looking at the weight."

Holmes, who appeared to have a slight gut at the weigh-in, left the stage after the ceremony saying:

"I'll see you all tomorrow night, especially Mike Tyson."

Tyson will be waiting, and ironically, he finds himself in the same situation Holmes found himself in 1980 when he defended his title against former champion Muhammad Ali.

It's the young champion against a man who dominated the sport but was up in years for a boxer.

Holmes battered Ali to retain his title. Tyson said he will do what he has to do to retain his against Holmes.

"God forbid, if I lose to Holmes," Tyson, of Catskill, N.Y., said. "I would rather take the criticism for beating him than take the criticism for losing to him."

Tyson reportedly will make about $5 million for the fight which is being telecast live on the HBO cable network at 10 p.m. Friday. Holmes reportedly will make $3.1 million.

The two sides waived the three-knockdown rule at the rules meeting that was highlighted by Giachetti's insistence that Tyson be watched closely in the ring.

"The most important thing is that Tyson is a complete fouler," Giachetti said. "He hits with his head, his elbows, after the bell, below the belt, everything."

Tyson's trainer, Kevin Rooney, called the charges unfounded.

"These guys are blowing smoke about it," Rooney said. "Their mind is somewhere else. Ours is on the fight, what to do and how to do it."

The undercard will include one other title fight and five 10-rounders.

Champion Carlos De Leon of San Juan, Puerto Rico will defend his WBC cruiserweight title against Jose Flores of Uruguay in a 12-round bout.

Francesco Damiani of Italy will meet Dorcay Gaymon of Jacksonville, Fla.; Michael Dokes of Las Vegas, Nev. will fight Ken Lukasta of Edmonton, Alberta, and Mike "The Bounty" Hunter of Los Angeles will face Oliver McCall of Chicago in 10-round heavyweight fights. John "The Beast" Mugabi of Uganda will return from a 13-month layoff to take on Bryan Grant of Memphis, Tenn. and Davey Hilton of Rigaud, Quebec will face Hector Rosario of New York City in 10-round middleweight events.

Forsman Grabs Hope Golf Lead

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Now Dan Forsman has to try to forget his most unforgettable day in golf.

"It's like a guy at the dice tables in Las Vegas," he said. "He's winning and winning, and somebody comes up to him, claps him on the back and says, 'Great going.' Then," Forsman said with an imaginary dice toss, "craps."

All of Forsman's gambles, and there were several, paid off Thursday during a career-best round of 10-under-par 62 that gave him the lead after two rounds of the $1 million Bob Hope Classic.

"I've had it happen to me dozens of times," Forsman said of the good wishes he received Thursday. "You're playing good and people are congratulating you and it immediately goes bad."

"Now that I've got this under my belt, I've got to regroup and go on and play the best I can. I have to try to put this out of my mind."

And that won't be easy.

"Weird, strange, extraordinary, unbelievable, inventive," were some of the words Forsman used to describe the round, which gave him a two-round total of 130. 14 strokes under par for this five-day, 90-hole event.

He had nine birdies and an 18th-hole eagle against only one bogey during his round at Indian Wells, one of the four desert courses being used in this tournament.

Eight times Forsman had to contend with palm and eucalyptus trees. Once he was forced to extract himself from a problem with a decorative totem pole. He played from the wrong fairway on occasion, and once found that his only shot was down a footpath.

He said he would visualize how to execute each of the problem shots, and then do it.

"I felt like some sort of artist out there. I'd just throw my brush up there and the painting was perfect," Forsman said.

An example was his play on the 18th. His drive landed in the neighboring 17th fairway. His second shot, which he called "creative, inventive," was a 6-iron from under the fronds of some palms. He guided the ball through an opening in another grove and the ball then moved right and reached the green.

"The shot came off just the way I envisioned it," he said.

From Wire Reports
 Top ranked Arizona handed Southern California its worst loss ever, 92-48, in a Pacific-10 Conference game Thursday night.
 The previous worst loss for the Trojans came in the 1966 season when they suffered a 37-point defeat at the hands of UCLA.
 Five Wildcats scored in double figures, led by Tom Tolbert with 18 points. The victory was the most lopsided ever for Arizona in a Pacific-10 game.
 Arizona, 17-1 overall and 7-0 in the league, outscored Southern Cal 27-2, including 21 straight points, during the first 8:10 of the second half.
 "It was a blitz in every sense of the word," Tolbert said.
 Elsewhere, it was No. 3 Temple 72, Massachusetts 52; No. 7 Michigan 65,

Wisconsin 54; No. 8 Nevada-Las Vegas 95, San Jose State 83; No. 12 Brigham Young 81, No. 18 Texas-El Paso 71; No. 19 Iowa 93, No. 13 Illinois 79, and No. 17 Wyoming 81, Hawaii 61.
 No. 3 Temple 71, Massachusetts 52
 Howard Evans had 10 assists to become the all-time assist leader for the Owls, who remained unbeaten. Only Temple and Brigham Young have not lost among Division I teams.
 "I know that after my career, I will be able to look back and realize I was one of the top assist makers ever to play at Temple," Evans said.
 Tim Perry added 16 points, nine rebounds and five blocked shots for the Owls, 14-0 and 8-0 in the Atlantic 10. The 14 straight victories mark for the best start in Temple history.

Wilson 54; No. 8 Nevada-Las Vegas 95, San Jose State 83; No. 12 Brigham Young 81, No. 18 Texas-El Paso 71; No. 19 Iowa 93, No. 13 Illinois 79, and No. 17 Wyoming 81, Hawaii 61.
 Michigan, which led by 17 points early in the second half, stalled and Wisconsin got within 56-50 before the Wolverines put the game away.
 No. 8 UNLV 95, San Jose St. 83
 Gerald Paddio's 29 points and a tough man-to-man defense led by Jarvis Bannight was decisive. Paddio was 7-for-9 on 3-point attempts and scored 15 of his points in the second half.
 The Rebels, 6-1 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and 16-1 overall, were behind 39-38 at halftime before rallying to beat the Spartans for the 15th straight time.

Cash and French Open champion Lendl said he thought the Australian was tired in the fourth set, but was lifted by the cheering, chanting crowd.
 "The crowd gets behind him and I think he got pumped up in the fourth and fifth sets," Lendl said.
 The Czech-born resident of Greenwich, Conn., who never has won an Australian title, said he felt the tournament was an unlucky one for him.
 "It's upsetting and frustrating," he said.
 Cash's steely resolve saw him break Lendl in the latter's last two service games of the final set.
 The normally volcanic Aussie kept his emotions in check throughout the roller-coaster battle, but Lendl was given a code of conduct warning for racket abuse in the third set.
 He could face a fine for that offense.
 Both Cash and Lendl went into the match without having dropped a set in the tournament.
 Cash, who has a hardcourt in his garden, which is just five miles from the arena, served and volleyed brilliantly in spasms, while Lendl's form was equally up-and-down.
 "I was playing well, hitting the ball well, but it was always going to be tough to beat him on his favorite surface," Cash said.
 Cash lifted his record to 3-5 against Lendl, who had hoped to record a calendar year Grand Slam in 1988.
 Cash will try to become the first Australian since Mark Edmondson in 1976 to win the title.
 Wilander earlier took three hours, 19 minutes to wreck his fellow Swede's bid to become the first man since Roy Emerson 20 years ago to win the tournament three years in a row.

 Third-seeded Wilander, winner of the tournament in 1983 and 1984, has now made the final in each of his last four appearances in the event. He did not play last year.
 Second-seeded Edberg found his first serve and volley deserted him for long periods.
 Backcourt counterpuncher Wilander was more consistent and threaded home some fine passing shots.
 Wilander, more aggressive these days and willing to come to the net, said he felt mentally stronger than Edberg.
 "He's not really there emotionally in the big moments these days," Wilander said.

Campaign Inquiries Irk Hart; Polls Note Gephardt Support

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

A published report today raised new questions about Gary Hart's campaign finances, while Hart contended he knew nothing about possible illegal contributions and reacted angrily to a question about infidelity.

Meanwhile, a pair of polls indicated the former Colorado senator was fading in Iowa, as Democratic presidential rival Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri enjoyed a surge of support. The surveys, by NBC and the Los Angeles Times, suggested the leading Democrats in the state were tightly clustered.

Republicans and Democrats alike used ever-sharpening language to stake out their differences as they claw their way through the final few weeks leading up to the Feb. 8 Iowa caucuses and the Feb. 16 New Hampshire primary.

Democratic Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois traded accusations with Gephardt in Iowa on Thursday, while Jesse Jackson took them both to task in a speech to the state's mayors. And Republican Rep. Jack Kemp of New York sparred with former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont in Manchester, N.H.

Vice President George Bush revived an issue he and chief GOP rival Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas have tangled over in the past — which of them has the best credentials.

"There's a big difference between presidential and congressional leadership," Bush said in Iowa Falls, alluding to Dole's decades in Congress.

Hart's troubles continued to mount, as The Washington Post reported in today's editions that the 1984 Hart campaign has failed to return or otherwise clear from the books nearly $60,000 in contributions that apparently exceeded limits set by federal election law.

The Post, citing Federal Election Commission records, also said the 1984 campaign received $30,000 from two fund-raisers in transactions generally prohibited under election law. It said $20,000 came from David Stein, a Southern California developer who was a major Hart contributor, and the other $10,000 was from Hollywood video producer Stuart Karl.

Allegations about Karl's bankrolling of the Hart campaign, which appeared in Wednesday's editions of the Miami Herald, kicked off the burgeoning campaign-finance controversy.

Also Wednesday, former Hart staffers told The Associated Press his campaigns routinely accepted unreported goods and services they did not intend to pay for — from firms that did not expect to be paid.

Hart, campaigning Thursday in New Hampshire, was asked about the former staffers' allegations.

"No, no, it's not true," he said.

Hart, who dropped out of the race in May over reports of his relationship with model Donna Rice and then re-entered the race in December, reacted testily to a question about his personal life.

A Boston University student asked Hart how people could expect him to honor the presidential oath of office when he didn't honor his marriage vows.

"My marriage vows are my business and not yours," he snapped, winning loud applause.

In other campaign developments: —One of two engines failed on a small plane carrying former television evangelist Pat Robertson as it prepared to take off from the Manchester, N.H. airport Thursday night, campaign officials said. No one was injured.

—Kemp, in New York, condemned those who have criticized Israel's handling of violent protests that began Dec. 8 in Israeli-occupied territories. Kemp called the unrest an "internal insurrection" and an "attack on Israel's legitimacy."

—Jackson will air the first television commercial of his 1988 campaign this weekend, but campaign manager Gerald Austin said due to budget considerations, they are being shown on cable TV, not network television.

Jackson, speaking to the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Washington, linked rivals Simon, Gephardt and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. to federal spending cuts he said have hurt the urban poor.

"We must put an end to ... Simon-Gephardt-Gore budgets," he said.

Gore, who has pulled his campaign out of Iowa, finished last in the field in Iowa surveys taken by NBC News and The Los Angeles Times — with both according him 1 percent support.

Both polls pointed to a close race among the leaders. Both suggested Gephardt was coming on strong in Iowa, while Hart was dropping back after the big splash he made when he re-entered the race.

The NBC poll, with a margin of error of 4 percentage points, indicated the Missouri congressman was supported by 19 percent of those interviewed; Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis by 18 percent; Simon by 15 percent and Hart 14 percent. The others were in single digits.

Gephardt's showing was the most improved. Two months ago, an NBC survey of the same Democrats had indicated 10 percent supported him.

Similar findings were reported by The Los Angeles Times, which said in today's editions that its survey found 23 percent supported Gephardt; 21 percent backed Simon; 15 percent for Dukakis; 12 percent supported Hart; 11 percent backed Babbitt and 8 percent for Jackson. The margin of error was 5 percentage points.

The Times said it surveyed 619 Democrats during a five-day period ending Wednesday. NBC's telephone interviews with 737 Democrats were conducted from Sunday to Tuesday of this week.

Candidates Argue Over Social Security

By WENDY MITMAN
Associated Press Writer

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Jack Kemp criticized Pete du Pont's alternative to Social Security as a scare tactic and a "shell game."

During a debate between the conservative Republican presidential rivals Thursday, du Pont outlined his plan to offer young people a choice between receiving benefits from individual financial security accounts or Social Security. Those who chose the individual accounts would get tax credits.

The former Delaware governor began his argument by asking for a show of hands of people who believe they'll receive their Social Security benefits at age 65. Three people out of about 80 raised their hands.

Social Security works now, du Pont said, because "77 million are paying into it and 34 million are taking out." It will not work starting around the turn of the century, he said, when baby-boomers will be drawing from it.

Kemp dismissed the argument as "gloom and doom," saying Social Security is healthy and would remain so under the strong economy his administration would create.

"The system is in balance. It is not going broke," the New York congressman said. "We shouldn't scare senior citizens in America and ... we need to recognize that young people do need a choice. That's why we should abolish the tax on retirement accounts up to $2,000 or $3,000, so that young married or individuals, working men and women, can expand their savings accounts."

Du Pont estimated that one-fifth of Americans would choose the financial security accounts, which he estimates would cost the government $20 billion a year. The choice for Americans, he said, is clear.

"Would you rather have $20 billion a year in added government spending, which you could make up by phasing out farm subsidies or replacing welfare with work or trimming military budgets or whatever — or would you rather have your Social Security taxes doubled or your Social Security benefits cut in half?" du Pont asked.

Kemp said du Pont's proposal is a shell game, because, despite getting a tax credit for paying into an IRA, people still would pay twice for retirement — once in Social Security taxes and once into their retirement accounts.

Bad Roll Call Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential campaign trail has taken a toll on Rep. Richard Gephardt's voting in Congress, causing him to miss more roll calls last year than any member of the House or Senate.

The St. Louis Democrat voted in 18 percent of 488 roll calls in the House, according to an analysis published in this week's issue of Congressional Quarterly, a respected Washington journal.

His voting participation dropped from 70 percent in 1986 and 91 percent in 1985.

Next to Gephardt, the lowest voting scores were for other campaigning congressmen: 28 percent for Democratic Rep. Buddy Roemer, who was elected governor of Louisiana in October, and 31 percent for Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., who is seeking the GOP presidential nomination.

Five members of Congress are campaigning for the 1988 Democratic or Republican presidential nominations. With the exception of Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., the lawmakers had lower than average voting scores in 1987, according to the study.

Dole voted on 95 percent of 420 Senate roll calls while Sen. Al Gore Jr., D-Tenn., voted on 43 percent and Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., 42 percent.

Overall, senators averaged 94 percent voting, Congressional Quarterly said, and House members averaged 93 percent.

Writer Defends Rivers Article

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The author of a magazine article that prompted comedian Joan Rivers to file a $50 million libel suit said his story repeated Miss Rivers' own jokes about her dead husband. Ben Stein acknowledged that he assumed the pseudonym Bert Hacker to write the Gentlemen's Quarterly piece in which Miss Rivers was said to have claimed her husband, Edgar Rosenberg, was driving her crazy before his suicide in August.

In announcing her suit last month, the comedian called the story a "total pack of evil, vicious, sick lies" and offered a $5,000 reward for the identity of the author. Stein's name was attached to the suit three days later when it was filed.

In an interview in Thursday's Los Angeles Times, Stein, 43, acknowledged he was "Hacker" and offered his first substantive comments on the dispute.

"You can say I wrote a draft of the story," Stein said. About the suit, Stein said: "Essentially what Joan Rivers is saying in this lawsuit is, 'Yes I am a famous comedian. Yes, I have been spending all my adult life saying to people, come look at me make jokes.

Yes, many of those jokes are about dead people. Yes, many of them are about my husband. And yes, I told a number of jokes about my husband after he was dead. But I didn't tell these specific jokes, because these specific ones went a little too far and I didn't tell these."

NBC Program Examines Homeless

By KATHRYN BAKER AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tonight's NBC documentary "Home Street Home" is more than a detached if poignant portrait of unfortunate ill people determined to live on the streets. It's a picture of people you might know, people you might even be.

With any luck, at least some "Miami Vice" viewers will hang around to watch.

Like ABC's fine documentary of last summer, "They Have Souls Too," or the independent documentary film "Streetwise," the NBC piece puts a human face on a problem often described only in terms of numbers.

ABC's documentary focused on the mentally ill who were turned out of the big institutions in the 1960s with nowhere to go.

NBC's program has less depth, but a wider scope. It does examine the problem of the mentally ill living on big-city streets. But it also finds teen-agers hooking in Hollywood, Vietnam veterans hiding in self-styled "jungles" in Florida, and Iowa farmers and Midwestern factory workers dispossessed by forces beyond their control.

The documentary opens with black-and-white footage of romanticized vagabonds of yesteryear, hopping freights and singing songs of faraway places.

Cut to New York's Port Authority bus terminal, which has become, says anchor Tom Brokaw, "kind of an unofficial asylum for the mentally ill."

Says one man, who indeed is perfectly normal-looking, "We're not all drunks or junkies. Most of us are just normal people who've had hard times."

For the mentally ill who were victimized in uncaring institutions, the streets represent a freedom they fear giving up. Joyce Brown, a New York woman, became a test case of Mayor Edward Koch's program to round up mentally ill homeless people. Although Brown successfully fought her way out of a hospital, her condition improved when she got help from social workers.

Brokaw went to Boston to talk to mothers of mentally ill people who have fled to the streets.

"We got to the point where the whole family was falling apart," says one. "We had to tell our son to leave. And it's very demoralizing and embarrassing to throw an ill person out on the streets."

It's clear, says Brokaw, that we need "a middle step" between an institution and the public street. But that means money, and that usually means higher taxes.

Lucky Severson reports from Hollywood, San Francisco and Florida on the thousands of kids who have run away from rejection or abuse at home. Sabrina was evicted from home when her mother caught her stealing money to buy drugs.

"It's just like every time I turn around, I got to pull a trick," a weeping Sabrina says, "either to support my drug habit or to get a place to stay or to eat." But when she's put into a program to help her kick her habit, she flees.

Severson also talks to traumatized Vietnam veterans who hide in woods or abandoned buildings. "My first confirmed kill was a kid, a 9-year-old boy. That really got into my head, you know?" says one, who ducks away from the camera, saying he can't talk anymore.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Jan. 23

- ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Try to put more excitement into your daily duties, and you'll enjoy them more. You and your mate must try to get out of that rut.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Try to impress the one you love by showing that you are modern and exciting. Avoid making any caustic remarks you may regret later.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Make arrangements to get together with a recent acquaintance for some recreation today. If you must do some marketing, do it early.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Discuss with an expert how you can add to your present abundance, and get good advice. Steer clear of a greedy associate.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Plan a trip with a friend to gather some important information you need. Take it easy and get plenty of rest tonight after such a busy day.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You may want to invest in some modern mechanisms to make your work more efficient and profitable, but get the advice of an expert.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Contact a clever acquaintance who can show you how to capitalize on your finest talent. Get out of that rut you've been in for so long.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Get your home in order so that you can entertain guests with confidence this evening. If you go out, drive very carefully.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A very new and unusual form of recreation will please you very much if you keep an open mind. Take your mate on a short trip.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You may have to spend a bit more money than you had planned to please your family, but, in the long run it will be well worth the cost.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Make it a point to see someone you have recently met, and to whom you have taken a fancy. This should be a memorable evening.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You have some fine ideas which seem to be promising, but you must put these into motion if you are going to profit at all by them.

 We've always enjoyed this story about the late Johnny Crawford. In a rubber bridge game, his partner had led a spade, a suit he did not like. Unfortunately, he held only two cards in the suit, and they were the eight and the nine. No matter which he played he was sure partner would read it as encouraging. So Crawford dropped a card on the floor and, as he bent to pick it up, he called out: "Low spade partner!"

The point of the foregoing is simply to tell you that you must always be alert. What looks like a high card in one circumstance can be a low card in another. South was aware of the spots on this hand; as might be expected, East was not alive to the position.

A routine auction got North-South to their three no trump contract. South's rebid showed a balanced 19-20 points, but North had no ambitions.

West carefully led his second-highest heart to show no real interest in the suit, and dummy won. Obviously, declarer needed to develop his club suit. However, in doing so he had to try to keep East off lead, for he did not want to have the king of diamonds under the gun. At trick two declarer led a club from the table, and East produced the eight. Reflex action would have been to rise with the ace or king, but declarer took careful note of the spots. The eight was the lowest outstanding club, so declarer ducked and West had to win. The rest was a mop-up operation. Declarer collected two spade tricks, three hearts and four clubs.

This story has a moral. While you prefer holding eights to deuces, don't forget that sometimes a deuce and an eight are equivalent.
